Weekend update

Unemployment Rate Rising

WASHINGTON (AP) — The nation's unemployment rate, dipping unexpectedly to 7 percent in July, could approach 8 percent by the end of 1981, some economists say.

"The unemployment rate on balance will be going up. It's not going to go down as it happened to go down in July," predicted Thomas D. Thomson, senior vice president and chief economist of Crocker National Bank in San Francisco.

"We're still looking for some increase ahead," said Sandra Shaber, senior economist at Chase Econometrics in Bala Cynwyd, Pa.

Robert Dederick, the Commerce Department's assistant secretary for economic affairs, said the sharply lower unemployment figure for July, reported Friday by the Labor Department, probably would not be repeated in the next few months.

Stowaway Caught

ATLANTA (AP) — A woman who allegedly hid in a trunk on a passenger plane to steal valuable cargo has been given a one-year suspended sentence and fined $1,000 by a federal magistrate.

Katharine Louise Hargan, 20, of Royal Oak, Mich., had pleaded guilty in U.S. District Court to a misdemeanor charge of unlawfully boarding an airliner.

U.S. Magistrate Joel Feldman on Friday gave Miss Hargan a one-year suspended sentence, fined her $1,000 and placed her on four years probation.

Jet Fighters Grounded

WASHINGTON (AP) — Two days after the most recent crash, the Air Force has grounded all 269 of its F-16 Falcon jet fighters because of problems with the plane's flight control computer.

Israel and four European nations also have "voluntarily restricted their F-16s from flight" after being told of the problem, the Air Force said in announcing the action Friday.

The F-16, which started equipping squadrons in the mid-1970s, is designed to complement the heavier F-15. Together, the two planes are intended to be the Air Force's front-line fighters for the rest of the century.

Hunger Striker Dies

BELFAST, Northern Ireland (AP) — Jailed Irish nationalist Thomas McIlwee died today on the 62nd day of his hunger strike at the Maze prison, Britain's Northern Ireland Office announced. He became the ninth Maze faster to die.

Foreign Controllers Give Support

LONDON (AP) — The union representing 45 percent of France's air traffic controllers urged its members today to deny takeoff authority to all U.S.-bound flights in solidarity with striking controllers in the United States.

Jacques Fournier, spokesman for the National Union of Air Traffic Controllers, said in Paris controllers also would refuse permission for U.S.-bound jets from other points to enter French air space.

He said the decision probably would go into effect later in the day.

The protests began Friday with some controllers refusing to handle U.S.-bound planes. Others warned pilots U.S. airspace was unsafe.

Controller groups in France, Italy, Norway, Sweden and Finland took varying protest actions, and controllers in Britain, the Netherlands, Denmark and Switzerland are contemplating future protests.

Airports in Amsterdam, Brussels, Frankfurt and Rome reported some delays across the Atlantic Friday. The Dutch national carrier, KLM, reported delays of up to eight hours on some U.S.-bound flights.

Flights to and from the United States were about 2½ hours behind schedule today in the Netherlands and inbound flights to Sweden were backed up two hours officials said.

But London's Heathrow Airport, the busiest international gateway in Europe, reported no problems as of early today on flights to and from the United States.

British aviation magnate Sir Freddie Laker, whose Skytrain pioneered cheap trans-Atlantic travel, denied a claim by a British controllers' union official that it no longer is safe to fly to the United States.

Laker said he crossed the Atlantic twice since the strike began Monday, and observed at first hand that the quality of U.S. air traffic control was "as good as it has ever been."

Britain's state-run British Airways and the independent British Caledonian line also denied any risk. A British Caledonian spokesman said the American system is being closely monitored and no deviations from normal practice have been experienced.

Clifford Crook, chairman of a committee of 10 unions within the British Civil Aviation Authority, claimed there were 25 "near misses" over U.S. air space since the strike began.

FAA officials in Washington denied Crook's charge.

Crook said he got his information from the striking Professional Air Traffic Controllers' Organization. He said PATCO officials told him traffic is handled by unqualified civilians and military personnel, inexperienced management, retirees and people with physical problems.

In Washington, Federal Aviation Administration spokesman Fred Farrar said international flights by U.S. carriers were delayed up to 1½ hours Friday. He denied reports of delays of up to eight hours.

U.S. military personnel, supervisors and non-strikers have taken over for the 12,000 controllers who struck in a dispute over wages and working hours. The Reagan administration has begun firing the federally-employed strikers for violating no-strike pledges.

Cowboys, Cowgirls Set For Nat'l Finals

Scores of young cowboys and cowgirls were headed into Snyder this weekend as they prepared to battle for honors in the American Junior Rodeo Association's National Finals.

The five-day show will begin Tuesday night at 8 p. m. in the Scurry County Coliseum, the site of the annual event for the sixth year in a row. Performances will continue nightly at the same hour through Saturday.

Well over 300---possibly as many as 350---young competitors are due to be on hand for the competition. They have qualified for the national finals by winning events in AJRA-sanctioned rodeos held throughout the country during the past year.
This year's crop of young riders is expected to put on a lively show each evening.

Advance tickets have been on sale for several days at the Snyder Chamber of Commerce office. Box seat tickets are $5 each, while general admission tickets for adults are priced at $3.50 each, and for children $2.50 each.

Bob Tallman...rodeo announcer

Another headline attraction has been added to the AJRA National Finals program this year.

Bob Tallman, who has come to be known as rodeo's "King of the Air Waves," will be on hand to handle the announcing chores.

Tallman works some 220 to 250 rodeo performances a year and was the youngest man ever to announce the national finals of the Professional Rodeo Cowboy's Association in Oklahoma City two consecutive years, and he has since been the anchor play-by-play network announcer for the live Hesston telecasts.

A preliminary event, team roping finals, has been set for 1 p. m. Monday in the coliseum. It will be free to the public.

Miss AJRA of 1981 will be crowned during Friday night's performance, and several awards will be presented.

The AJRA World Champion awards, along with several special awards, will be presented Saturday night.

Candidates for Miss AJRA are Sande Miller of Odessa, Jinita Williams of Lovington, N. M., Kelley Jones of Midland, Sissy Doss of Big Spring, Gayla Newton of Gail and Lisa Pugh of Crawford.

Miss AJRA will be elected at a business meeting of the organization.

Ask Us

Q.—Why have tragic deaths been included in the Looking Back column?

A.—The Looking Back column's purpose is to recall some local history as recorded in the SDN files. Although they are unpleasant, tragedies are a part of history, and it is felt that some must be included to maintain perspective.

SDN Receives Press Awards

LUBBOCK—The Snyder Daily News placed high in four categories of competition at the annual summer convention of the West Texas Press Association.

Awards were presented at a breakfast session Saturday.

The Snyder Daily News, competing in the WTPA Daily Newspaper Division, placed second in general excellence, second in advertising composition, second in pictures and third in editorial writing.

The Daily News was represented at the convention by Publisher Roy McQueen.

The SDN Column

"I tell you, politics is a lot like Southwest Conference football," said the old-timer who obviously had seen a lot of campaigns come and go at the ballot box and on the gridiron.

"Now you just think back a ways. If you can't remember back then, check the records.

"There used to be a few streaks going, like D. X. Bible's teams at Texas A&M winning several years in a row and the Republicans taking over after Woodrow Wilson and holding the White House for a little streak of their own.

"Then, the Southwest Conference started to pass the titles around, with people like Dutch Meyer, Madison Bell, Fred Thomsen, Jimmy Kitts, Jess Neely, and even Bowden Wyatt, winning a few.

"Meanwhile, the Democrats had started the biggest streak ever by putting Franklin D. Roosevelt in the White House. There were people who said the Republicans would never recover, that their party was dead, especially when Harry Truman won in '48.

But then, along came Eisenhower and the resurrection."

"The string was finally broken in the political field, but one was about to begin on the football field. Darrell Royal arrived on the scene and started a streak of his own. He had trouble, mostly out of a fellow named Frank Broyles at Arkansas, but none out of private and church schools. In fact, there were those who said the non-state schools couldn't cut it any more, that they were dead as far as major college fooball was concerned. They got a little argument out of Hayden Fry one year, but mostly Royal and Broyles were competing against each other.

"It looked like the non-state schools were goners for sure. But then along came Grant Teaff.

"While all this was going on, the Democrats had recovered with Kennedy and Johnson, and it appeared that they were going to establish a new streak. But about that time, up popped George McGovern to show you what over-confidence can do for you. Since then, there haven't been any cinches on either front till Reagan came along. He looks like another Royal, or Dana X. Bible, or even a Roosevelt. But don't write anybody off as dead. Good recruiting can bring any program back to life."

Between Texas Truckers, DPS...

Hit And Miss Situation Exists

By LOIS GLEASON

Truckers face stiff fines in most states if they carry too much weight or if they don't comply with the numerous federal and state regulations. But some companies feel they can make some extra money by quietly breaking a few laws.

Texas is no exception, but truckers feel they have it a little easier because there are no ports of entry with truck weigh scales here. And because there are only 142 license and weighing men in the entire state that actively weigh trucks with portable scales.

License and weighing men have portable scales in their cars but they're dangerous and time consuming to use. "It's dangerous because the old boy driving the truck might just decide to take off while your hands are underneath the wheel," explains Danny Rhea, Snyder "weight man."

The scales must be hand-placed in front of each wheel before the driver can pull onto them, and the process must be repeated for each set of wheels.

Officers are selective in who they stop. They're reluctant to waste time checking a marginal case, someone who may or may not be overloaded.

With the time spent watching trucks, they say they can usually tell by looking if one is overloaded quite a bit. They look for clues such as bulging tires when deciding who to stop.

"You get to know who some of your heavy trucks are simply by the name on the door," says Rhea. "Some companies have a reputation for hauling heavy."

Officers also have the use of public scales. But again, it consumes a lot of time and means a lot of trucks get by. Truckers tend to get a little agitated at going to public scales because it takes their time too.

For the past year, "weight men" with the Department of Public Safety have had the use of "Eldec" scales, scales which can be transported to different locations then set up as temporary weighing stations.

There are only 12 such scales in the state though, so the Snyder area doesn't have the use of them often. Thursday, they were set up in Scurry County for the second time in six months and two men from other areas came down to give Trooper Rhea a hand.

The scales were set up 10 miles southeast of Snyder on U.S. Highway 84 Thursday morning, but it was a slow day they say, netting only nine tickets, and only one of those was for weight.

The troopers say that as soon as they began setting up the scales word went out on the C.B.'s they were there. Many truckers just detoured around them.

"Most people think license and weight troopers work strictly weight alone," says Rhea. "But less than 50% of our tickets are weight tickets."

The stationary scales also give the men a chance to check all the other things they have the authority to enforce — and that's just about everything.

"It's a highly productive deal," Rhea states. "We check everything while we have them stopped here. Normally, if their weight looks legal, you don't know anything else is wrong so you wouldn't stop them.

Besides weight, troopers check registration, inspection stickers, equipment, hazardous materials, motor carrier laws, the lease law, and all other laws of the state of Texas.

Troopers say the laws are so complex that sometimes they're not even sure about how to handle something.

"Nine times out of 10," says Rhea, "the truck drivers know the law as well as, if not better than we do. If you run into an uncertain part, just let them do the talking. They can usually tell you what they're doing."

Then again, Trooper Ronald Hill of Sweetwater jokes, "Some of these truckers are graduates of 'Truck Stop Tech.'"

He explains some truckers think they know the law and try telling the troopers what their rights are — but they're wrong.

Again, the reason there is often uncertainty about what the laws are is because trucking regulations are extremely complicated. And, says Rhea, "They take a lot of years and a lot of school to understand."

Responsible For Conviction...

'Hero' Detective Solves Bizarre Murder Cases

HOUSTON (AP) — Johnny Bonds, 33, grew up a "country kid" in Kemp, Texas, the son of a farmer. "I've worked at some kind of job since I was 10 or 11 years old," he says.

Markham Duff-Smith, 34, was raised in Houston's fashionable River Oaks neighborhood. He moved from job to job and fancied himself an investor.

In 1979, the two men's lives became entwined. As a result, one became a hero. The other was sentenced to die, accused of arranging the murders of four people — including a baby — so he could inherit his family's money.

Police Detective Bonds' two years of tracking Duff-Smith ended last week with the death sentence, but he still gets worked up when he reflects on the celebrated murder case.

His digging overturned two mistaken rulings of suicide, one of them more than four years old.

"One thing about this case is I was mad," Bonds says. "I was mad at Duff-Smith. I was mad at the medical examiners. To think that somebody could do something this horrible and get away with it!

"I resent anybody that feels like everything ought to be given to them," he says. "I detested him."

Bonds' and Duff-Smith's paths first crossed on July 6, 1979.

Bonds had been sent out on a homicide investigation. Three bodies had been found in a home in the fashionable Memorial area of Houston. They were Diana Wanstrath, 36, her 35-year-old husband and their 14-month-old son, Kevin.

Each victim had been shot in the head. John Wanstrath was slumped in his chair. Diana lay in front of the fireplace. Kevin was face-down in his crib, next to his teddy bear.

Bonds said he had seen many bodies during his seven years as a homicide detective, but he could not forget Kevin Wanstrath, and says he vowed to find the baby's killer.

He says he is not bitter, but he still does not understand why the Harris County medical examiner ruled the slayings a murder-homicide. The case was closed after the examiner ruled that Diana Wanstrath shot her husband and infant son, then herself.

There was one fact that especially troubled Bonds — there was no gun at the scene. Medical examiners said perhaps it had been removed by someone trying to save the family embarrassment.

Bonds did not buy that. "When they came down with that ruling, I thought, 'Well, why do I do this job?'"

Despite the ruling, which officially closed the case, Bonds continued to investigate. He was encouraged by phone calls from friends of Diana Wanstrath who said they did not believe she could be a murderer.

Because the Wanstraths left a sizable estate, he said, he considered all heirs possible suspects.

The one who got the lion's share of the money was Diana's adopted brother, Markham Duff-Smith. Bonds was suspicious when he met the brother the night after the bodies were discovered.

"He didn't show any emotion at all — very businesslike," Bonds said. "As soon as he left, we thought, 'there's something wrong. This guy doesn't react right.'

"We confronted the whole family after the funeral and told them, 'Look, all of y'all are making money off of this, and just about every one of you is a suspect.' And we asked them all to take polygraphs. By confronting all of them together, nobody could say no.

"So everybody comes in to take the polygraph, and Duff-Smith's the last one, and he's the only one that shows up with an attorney," Bonds says. "He blew it. He was the only one who had a problem with the polygraph."

Bonds said he was then certain he was on the right track. He played a hunch and got the file on another unusual death in Duff-Smith's family — the 1975 strangulation "suicide" of Duff-Smith's mother, Trudy Zabolio.

"By about July 24th (1979), I was convinced the Zabolio case had been murder, too," Bonds said.

The breakthrough came when an anonymous caller who said he had read about the case in the newspaper told Bonds that Duff-Smith arranged Mrs. Zabolio's death. But all the anonymous caller knew was that there was a "middleman" who was a "realtor and coin collector."

Bonds says he was skeptical, but having nothing better to go on, began questioning Duff-Smith's business associates, asking each one if he collected coins. The long shot paid off when Bonds asked the question of Walter Waldhauser Jr.

"He said, 'Yeah, how'd you know?'"

But Bonds still did not have any link to a "hit man." As a last resort, he dug through trash in back of Waldhauser's house. He found what he was looking for — letters to Waldhauser from a prison inmate — Allen Wayne Janecka.

"Then things started falling into place," Bonds says.

Janecka confessed to being the hit man in both the Wanstrath and Zabolio slayings and said he was hired by Waldhauser. Waldhauser, confronted with this, plea-bargained with the district attorney's office and agreed to testify against Duff-Smith.

The Harris County Medical Examiner's office changed the rulings in both cases from suicide to murder.

In April, Janecka received the death penalty for killing Kevin Wanstrath, and Duff-Smith was arrested in the Zabolio slaying. He was tried last week.

Prosecutors were confident when the jury began deliberating, but Bonds left the courtroom.

"In '75, I waited a jury out," he says. "I thought we had an airtight case. It took the jury three hours to find that woman not guilty. I haven't waited a jury out since. It's just a superstition."

But in the Duff-Smith case, it took jurors 40 minutes to return a guilty verdict.

Prosecutors used the punishment phase to show Duff-Smith's involvement in the Wanstrath slayings, and jurors deliberated only 15 minutes before recommending the death sentence.

Prosecutors hailed Bonds as a hero. "This is a proud day for the Houston Police Department," Assistant District Attorney Mack Arnold said.

Bonds has been transferred to the Internal Affairs division and says he won't go back to homicide.

"I worked up there for a long time, and I didn't realize the job was eating me up," he says. "You have so many cases where you know who did it and you can't do anything about it. Oh, it's bad.

"I'll tell you something else," he says, "My kid is not going to be a cop. One in the family's enough."

Baseball Fans Still Waiting

NEW YORK (AP) — The baseball fan has waited two months for baseball; let him wait another day. That's the attitude of ABC and the commissioner's office as far as local baseball broadcasts tonight are concerned.

During the strike, Commissioner Bowie Kuhn issued a statement saying the issue dividing players and owners was really "fan compensation." Well tonight you'll see what baseball really thinks about the fan when you try to tune in your team's second Opening Day game and get a movie or some retread situation comedy.

The situation is this. ABC's "Monday Night Baseball" contract requires exclusivity, meaning no games can be televised to compete with the network's games. This is normally a legitimate desire to achieve the highest possible ratings. ABC pays nearly $25 million a year to baseball and feels it has a right to recoup its investment under normal circumstances.

But tonight is very extraordinary; it's the return of the national pastime, not just Cincinnati-Los Angeles or St. Louis-Philadelphia on ABC, but California-Seattle, Kansas City-Baltimore and nine other games.

Opening Day is always special, and the fan who doesn't go to the ballpark should have a chance to see it. ABC should have considered the fan and not just the bottom line. ABC should have waived exclusivity for one night.

"The fans can go to the ballpark," said Jim Spence, senior vice president of ABC Sports. "We think we're providing two quality games to the American public, with the added touch of live inserts on Pete Rose.

Reasonable changes are made all the time in contracts. ABC didn't get its game the past seven Monday nights, and baseball will have to make some concessions. Baseball should have sought some concessions for the fan tonight.

Substitute Teachers Apply Now

Persons interested in substitute teaching in Snyder Public Schools during the 1981-82 school year who have not received an application form should call the school administration office at 573-5401 and request an interview.

Requirements for placement on the substitute list for those who have not previously substituted in Snyder are a minimum of 60 college hours and to be at least 21 years of age. A college transcript is to be presented at each interview.

Austin Couple Weds In Fast Food Restaurant

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — The groom's parents showed up, but beefed about the whole thing.

The bride's parents didn't even know about the unusual fast-food wedding. They were fit to be fried about the marriage.

Nevertheless, it was love at first bite for Clayton Collins, 17, and Carri Crowder, 19, who got married Wednesday night in a formal ceremony at Arby's Roast Beef restaurant, where she works.

"This is definitely different," said Terri Crowder, the bride's older sister. "Nobody in Austin has ever gotten married at an Arby's before."

The nervous bride wore a flowing white gown with a long train. The groom wore a tuxedo. Many of the guests, seated at plastic orange tables, wore jeans.

A brass candelabra sat next to the electronic cash register. A portable arch, adorned with flowers, stood in front of the menu board.

Joe Thompson, the manager, was on hand. Thompson, a Church of Christ preacher, performed the ceremony.

"I've had some interesting weddings before — on a ski slope and in a park — but never in an Arby's," said the preacher-manager.

The bride, who has worked at the restaurant for six months, said the idea for the Arby's wedding came up about a week ago. She is not a member of any church and didn't know where to have the ceremony.

"Originally we were planning to wait until next summer to get married. But we changed our minds," she said. "The assistant manager here suggested we have it here after the restaurant closed. It just sort of happened."

Clayton and Lydia Collins, the groom's parents, were not thrilled with the fast-food atmosphere.

"It's not what we wanted," said Mrs. Collins.

The bride's parents didn't show up. They weren't invited.

"My parents aren't for this," said the bride. "They don't think we should get married at all. He is still in school and they just don't want me to get married yet.

"They don't even know about the wedding because we didn't tell them about it. I guess they can find out when they read it in the newspaper," she said. "They haven't been very nice about the whole thing."

Bullard Is On Honor Roll

ABILENE—Sheri Bullard, 1977 Snyder High School graduate, is one of 587 students named to the dean's honor roll at Abilene Christian University for the spring semester. A student must make a 3.5 grade point average on a minimum course load of 12 semester hours to make the honor roll.

A senior education major, Miss Bullard is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J.C. Bullard of Jakarta, Indonesia, formerly of Snyder.

Gold Coats Set Tournament

The Snyder Gold Coats have announced plans for a "Shoot-Out" Golf Tournament here this fall.

Plans for the tournament were mapped out Friday at a luncheon meeting.

Golfers may shoot qualifying rounds any time during the month of September on either the Country Club or Western Texas College courses. There will be a qualifying fee of $5 and qualifying scores will be recorded in the respecitve pro shops.

The top 19 qualifiers will assemble on Oct. 10 for the finals, with all 19 teeing off together. The highest scorer will be dropped at each hole, which will leave a champion after 18 holes have been played.

In other business at their luncheon meeting Friday, the Gold Coats agreed to co-sponsor a saddle as one of the prizes in the American Junior Rodeo Association's National Finals Rodeo, which opens Tuesday night in the Scurry County Coliseum.

Ernest Sears, vice-president of the Gold Coats, presided over the session.

Television Reporter Really Does Get Involved

HOUSTON (AP) — A year after television reporter Marvin Zindler's coverage forced Fayette County Sheriff Jim Flournoy to close the famous "Chicken Ranch" brothel in La Grange, Texas, 6-foot-5 "Big Jim" was still mad.

So mad, in fact, that when KTRK-TV's consumer affairs reporter showed up again, Flournoy, then 71, threw Zindler's toupee into the mud, broke two of his ribs and told him to "get the hell out of town."

The two eventually settled out of court for an undisclosed amount, but to this day lots of folks in La Grange, 90 miles west of here, resent the big city newsman whose expose did in the 120-year-old institution which inspired Larry King's play "The Best Little Whorehouse in Texas."

For that matter, there are people right here in Zindler's hometown who don't care much for him. But he is nevertheless the most recognized local television celebrity in Houston, and many regard him as an angel of mercy.

Either way, no one accuses him of being conventional.

His singsong signoff — "M-A-A-A-R-V-I-N ZINDLER, E-Y-Y-Y-E-WITNESS NEWS!" — at the end of each night's broadcast could drown out a jet whine. It is the loudest part of what may be the noisiest two minutes on any evening news show.

His voice is not the only thing that's loud. Beneath Zindler's white toupee are a white suit, a white shirt, a white tie, white socks, white shoes — and purple tinted glasses.

Zindler isn't used to being cast as the villain, as he was in King's play. The formula for his stories always involves victims and villains, says Dave Davis, producer of the station's 10 p.m. news. And Davis says KTRK takes pains to ensure that Zindler is always on the right side in consumer disputes.

"We take the victim first, then waste no time in getting to the guy in the black hat," says Davis. "When we do, there's usually not much he can say. The best thing he can do is say that he appreciates Marvin's calling the problem to his attention and that he'll do his best to correct it."

The formula also calls for lots of indignation.

On a recent show Zindler was furious because an elderly woman (the Victim) was starving. She had been unable to get an appointment through the Harris County Hospital Board (the Villain) to be fitted with dentures.

The next night he reached the same level of rage because a teen-ager (the Victim) has yet to receive payment ($1,282.50) for a calf he sold to the owner of a yard maintenance service (the Villain) at a Future Farmers of America auction.

"An inequity is an inequity," he says.

The mail supplies Zindler with stories. His secretary, Betty Berry, reads more than 50,000 letters a year and gleans from them about a dozen candidates a day for Zindler to choose from.

Though she is in large part responsible for Zindler's success, Mrs. Berry says she would not trade places with him.

"You have to really like the ego trip, and I wouldn't," she says.

Zindler himself supplies the anger that goes into his broadcasts. It's no act, Davis says.

"If he weren't 100 percent convinced that he's right, he couldn't get on the air and yell and scream," Davis says.

In private today he rails repeatedly about the man who failed to pay the boy for the calf.

"He should have paid that money to them the day he took that calf, the SECOND he took that calf," he yells, slapping his leg harder and harder as he rides with his cameraman and his producer to his next appointment.

All of this has made Zindler — with the possible exception of Earl Campbell — the most widely recognized man in Houston. He draws a crowd every time he gets out of his car. Kids shout his name and imitate his signoff.

In some circles, Zindler may also be the most respected man in town. A score of people gather around him at a low-income housing project, hoping to touch him, some, daring to shake his hand. Others stand with their eyes upturned as if to receive a blessing.

"Mr. Zindler, what's the chances of getting some security guards out here?" pleads an elderly man walking a dog. "It's terrible. You can't even walk outside at night."

"I know," Zindler says, his eyes full of compassion. "Maybe we can get some of those Guardian Angels out here," referring to a New York-based volunteer citizen force organizing in Houston.

"That'd sure be good," the man says, his face suffused in happiness, although he does not look certain he knows what a Guardian Angel is.

"I can relate to the Guardian Angels because I used to ride with the police back when I was a kid," Zindler says later.

Davis says that's a key to Zindler's style.

"He sees the world as being made up of good guys and bad guys," Davis says.

Zindler agrees.

"I do the same thing now with a camera as I used to do with a badge," he says, recalling his days as head of the Harris County Sheriff's Department consumer affairs division.

Whatever he does, it works. Davis says KTRK's news shows lead the ratings.

"Marvin is what we call a hook," Davis says. "It takes something like a Marvin to get people off the couch to change the channel at 10 o'clock."

Davis pulls no punches in talking about the real Zindler.

"He's a jerk in person," Davis says. "But I knew there was enough good in him that I could work with him."

July Deliveries Have Increased

Hot and dry July hardly compared with July of 1980, yet water deliveries by the Colorado River Municipal Water District exceeded July a year ago.

The district pumped 2,273,014,463 gallons of water to its customers during the month, the second highest July on record. Cities took 2,070,275,000 gallons of this, some 43,000,000 less than a year ago, while oil and industrial customers took 202,739,463 gallons, up 53,000,000 from July of last year.

The peak July was in 1974 when 2,508,299,414 gallons were pumped.

Had the cities used water all month at the rate of the last 10 days of July, the month easily would have eclipsed the 2,113,902,600 in July of 1980.

Through the first seven months of 1981, CRMWD delivered 10,179,181,879 gallons of water, up some 217 million gallons, or 2.18 percent. Municipal deliveries for the period were 8,776,084,500 gallons, some 120 million gallons less, or down 1.35 percent. Industrial and mining delivers of 1,403,097,379 gallons were 338 million gallons ahead of the first seven months of 1980, a 31.66 percent gain. Biggest increase came from SACROC with an additional 41 million gallons, Monsanto seven million gallons more and Sharon Ridge Unit 10 million gallons more. All are tied to the restoration of deliveries from Lake J. B. Thomas.

In July, Snyder used 151,904,000 gallons, down 11.6 percent from 1980; Big Spring used 352,124,000 gallons, down 15 percent; Odessa used 1,024,738,000, down 4.66 percent; Midland used 424,239,000 gallons, down .39 percent; Stanton used 15,190,000 gallons, down 8.38 percent.

Odessa's total marked the second time that any one city had exceeded a billion gallons in one month.

Annual Polar Event Slated

The annual Polar Homecoming and old-time singing has been scheduled for Saturday and Sunday, Aug. 15-16 at the Polar Tabernacle.

The singing will begin at 7:30 p. m. Saturday night, and the homcoming will be held on Sunday.

There will be electrical hookups, but no water or plumbing, for those who wish to come in their campers.

Everyone is invited to come and bring lunch to the homecoming.

Ernest Lee Newsom of Carlton and Othel Cumbie of Odessa are the officers in charge of the singing.

Those in charge of the homecoming are Bessie Randolph, Ernest Ford, Cecil Randolph and Mary Nell Ford.

3 Employees Finish Course

SAN MARCOS—Three Snyder School employees completed the classroom control, and discipline course sponsored by the Texas Center for Juvenile Delinquency Prevention at Southwest Texas State University.

The three employees---Francene Allen, Peggy Kennedy and Wayne Kennedy, all from Snyder---were among the 36 educators, counselors and police probation officers from around the state to participate in the 40-hour course.

Highlights of the course covered the assertive discipline, reality therapy, preventive discipline and the legal issues of classroom control.

Guest speakers included humorist Dr. W. C. Newberry whose topic was "Making a Difference;" Dr. William Bechtol of the SWTSU Education Department; John Clay, Region II Education Service Center; and Jon Bible of the Texas Attorney General's office, who discussed the legal issues.

STRONG TEETH

Lack of calcium in the diet is responsible for jawbone erosion and its resultant loss of teeth, report Cornell Univ scientists. A pilot study with added calcium in the diet produced significant increases in density of jawbone. "Because of decreasing consumption of milk," they report, "the U.S. diet does not provide sufficient calcium to maintain healthy bone structure and teeth." Over Government Corn Sales...

Grain Farmers Theaten To Sue

By JOE STROOP
Associated Press Writer

Many Texas High Plains farmers will be forced into bankruptcy this year by capricious federal agency plans to dump surplus corn into an already tight market, the grain growers complain.

"I think it is going to break an awful lot of farmers this year," says Merwyn Igo of Halfway, a corn farmer.

"This is the most unfair thing the USDA (U.S. Department of Agriculture) has ever done to a regional market in our opinion and we think it's illegal," chimes in Elbert Harp of Abernathy, executive director of the Grain Sorghum Producers Association, which plans to sue the government.

"I don't agree that we're a villain," counters Herb Cast with the commodity office of the USDA's Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service in Kansas City. Of the proposed lawsuit, Cast said, "We've been sued before — he's getting no virgin there."

The subject of the brouhaha is a large supply — 45.3 million bushels — of excess corn the government bought in the Midwest last year and shipped to Texas for storage. It is to be used as "feed grain," meaning livestock feed rather than human consumption.

"In 1979 farmers across the U.S. were asked to plant fence-to-fence to supply the world market, especially Russian demand that developed for feed grains," Harp said. "We did this, and then came last year's Russian grain embargo."

That January 1980 stroke by President Carter stuck producers with a lot of extra corn, particularly in the high-production states of Iowa, Wisconsin and Minnesota. The government agreed to buy corn grown for the Soviet Union and store it in midwestern warehouses and elevators — for a while.

But within months those warehousemen told the government to get its grain out of their storage space to make room for the upcoming crop.

"It has been longstanding policy (in that circumstance) ... that we do our level best to move inventory, and we had plenty of storage offered to us in West Texas," Cast said.

In fact, he said, West Texas warehousemen were crying for business, so the government shipped them a large share of the surplus.

"About 60 percent of it was stored in Plainview," said Harp.

And there it sits today, with tempers flaring over plans for its disposition.

The Carter administration, Harp said, hinted that the corn would not be dumped on the local market, but no guarantees or decisions were made. After the election, Ronald Reagan's budget director, David Stockman, was outraged to discover the government owned so much surplus grain and ordered it sold.

"On June 19 we were informed that they were going to sell from this stock for unrestricted use," said Harp, and he began a campaign to collect a legal defense fund from association members. More than 600 farmers from Brownsville, Texas, to Lincoln, Neb., chipped in and a law firm has been retained, Harp said.

"We hope to meet with the USDA again, sometime in the next couple of weeks, and discuss the problem," he said. "After that, we will make the final determination when and how to proceed. We hope we will not be forced into the legal action."

Harp says the grain was grown for export and that is where it should be sold, especially since there is too much of it for Texas feedlots to absorb.

"That grain that they dumped in our laps would fatten 1.1 million cattle," he said. "If it were all put in one train, the cars would stretch 250 miles."

"I don't think we've been dumping it," said Cast. "We have been selling some of that grain but we don't have any 'fire sale' under way. We sell no more than 170,000 bushels a week and that's a small part of the total used in the Texas feedlots in a week.

"We're doing our level best to get the market price out of our inventory and selling it strictly in accordance with the law — so I don't really agree that we're a villain," he continued. "That's where we get to cross-purposes with Mr. Harp. He's got a point, I guess, and he's got an appealing kind of argument when you just look at it from a farmer's point of view."

And what is the farmer's point of view?

"We make about 8,000 to 9,000 pounds of corn an acre," Igo said. "If the market price drops 50 cents a hundred (pounds), that's $45 an acre, if everything else is normal. If you're renting land, you might make $50 or $60 an acre off corn, so that 50-cent fall cuts your margin as low as $5 an acre.

"With any kind of bad luck at all — a repair bill to your equipment or anything — you are absolutely going to go broke. And that's what will happen here if they (USDA) go ahead with this deal."

"Grain consultants have been telling their elevator customers not to buy farmer-owned grain ... because if and when the government starts selling, it will hurt them," said Harp.

"Part of his argument," USDA's Cast said, "is the mere fact that it's there has a dampening effect on local sales. Well, I wonder about that. I don't really know how to prove it one way or the other.

"Besides, there still is plenty of empty warehouse space in Texas," he said. "Nobody hollered when we were helping out the warehousemen — they were desperate for this corn, begging us for it, it was really a distressed area from the warehouse point of view."

But Harp and the farmers stand firm in opposing the government policy.

"It's going to put the banks, elevators and the farmers in a terrible situation," said Igo.

"We feel like we're being done unjustly," said Harp. "If we can't get the USDA to change their minds, we'll file suit."

Many Evacuated After Derailment

BRIDGMAN, Mich. (AP) — Thousands of people waited to return home today in this southwestern Michigan town that was enveloped in a leaden cloud of toxic fumes from a derailed train tanker. There were no explosions and no serious injuries were reported.

The cloud "has lightened up a lot," Sgt. Jeff Wallis of the Michigan State Police said late Friday. Earlier, he said, "you couldn't see for a whole city block."

The cloud was gone by early today, but none of the 2,600 evacuees would be allowed to return home until after daybreak, officials said. State health officials in Lansing, the capital, wanted to test the air before allowing them to return, Berrien County Sheriff Forrest Jewel said.

The fumes billowed from a 1½-inch valve on a tanker carrying 10,000 gallons of fluorosulfonic acid, police said. The valve broke during the crash.

A temporary plug was installed on the leaking tanker about five hours after the early morning accident and it was replaced with a permanent one about an hour later, said spokesman Jerry Meyer of Du Pont Co. The chemical, manufactured at a Du Pont plant in East Chicago, Ind., is used in making rubber and synthetic fibers.

Puddles of the chemical that had settled under the fallen cars were drained into a clay-lined pit where the chemical was neutralized with lye, officials said. The tanker was righted early today, but was not taken away immediately because of damage to the tracks.

"We could see the cloud from the Sawyer (Mich.) truckstop six miles away," said Evelyn Hyerdall, who fled in her motor home.

Chessie System railroad officials said 14 of 77 cars derailed as the freighter moved through Bridgman.

Dear Abby

Productivity of Son's 'Partnership' Worries Parents

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1981 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: Our 26-year-old son (I'll call him Tom) came waltzing into our home one evening with his girlfriend (Gloria) on his arm, announcing to us that Gloria is three months' pregnant. They've known each other barely six months.

First of all, Tom is going to college full time and works only part time, while Gloria has a full-time job as a waitress. He can't even support himself, much less a family.

What floors us is they say they have no plans to get married, now or after the baby comes! Gloria has been married twice before and isn't even fully divorced from her last husband. She refers to our son as her "pal," her "buddy" and her "best friend." No mention of love. They refer to their relationship as a "partnership."

They are trying to come up with a nice name for the baby — first and last! Gloria doesn't want it to have her husband's last name, and Tom said he doesn't want the baby to have his last name either, so they will pick a name they both like. Have you ever heard of anything so crazy?

Abby, we brought this boy up right, and his attitude is beyond us. We are able to help him financially, but he says he will not accept any kind of help from us.

Is this a new trend among young people or what?

GRANDMOTHER-TO-BE

DEAR GRANDMOTHER: If this is a new trend, I'm behind the times. If your son refuses any kind of help from you (at the moment), there is nothing you can do. Write again in seven months and let me know if he has had a change of heart. I'm betting he will.

DEAR ABBY: I am a 30-year-old college-educated man with a good position, living alone and normal in every way. I would like to marry and have a family, but so far I haven't met anyone with the same standards and values I was raised with. To explain: I believe that sex is sacred and should be saved for marriage, but I wouldn't rule out a girl because she wasn't a virgin. (We all make mistakes.)

When I date a girl, I treat her with respect. I'm no goody-goody, and I'm not hung up. I'm affectionate and outgoing and enjoy hugs and kisses as much as the next guy, but that's as far as it goes.

The problem is that after the second date, if I don't make a move on a girl to get her into bed, she asks me if I am gay or impotent.

So, what's a decent guy who wants a decent girl supposed to do? It's just not my style to have sex with a girl I hardly know just to prove there's nothing wrong with me.

I'M OK

DEAR OK: My mail tells me that there are plenty of young women out there who would consider you an answer to their prayers. Keep looking. Skip the singles bars. They're not there. You'll find decent people in decent places doing healthy, worthwhile things like volunteer work. And don't laugh, but when were you in church last?

* * *

DEAR ABBY: I'm being married soon at a formal wedding. All the plans are going well, but there is one problem I need help with.

My fiance's mother is a nice lady, but she smokes those long, thin, brown cigarettes that look like cigars, and I can't imagine her sitting at the bridal table puffing away on those things. It looks so masculine.

Since she's my fiance's mother, I think he should tell her to do away with them for one day and smoke regular cigarettes if she has to smoke at all.

He says I should tell her because he doesn't have the nerve. Abby, if I tell her, I'm afraid it will start our marriage on a sour note. How should we handle this situation?

TROUBLED BRIDE

DEAR BRIDE: I would let the lady smoke whatever she's accustomed to smoking. Those who know her will not be shocked, and let those who don't know her draw their own conclusions. Please enjoy your wedding day. It's a time for joy and merrymaking, not a show for the public.

WGA Talks Over Upcoming Action

Snyder Women's Golf Association held its monthly meeting and luncheon last Tuesday to discuss upcoming tournaments and present past winners.

Plans were discussed for the Club Championship Tournament which will be held Sept. 1-3 and the Raggedy Ann and Andy Tournament to be held Aug. 21-23.

New members introduced were Jane Hinton, Martha Fagin and Evelyn Gallagher.

Play for Tuesday will be Cryer's Tournament to be played at Western Texas College. Ladies are asked to be at the pro shop at the college by 8:30 a.m. to sign up.

Pairings will be listed each week in the Sunday edition of The Snyder Daily News. Please disregard the pairings in the yearbook.

Golf balls were presented to last month's winners. They are as follows:

July 7 Throw Out One Hole: 1st- (tie) Suzy Reed 26, Susan Mack 26; 2nd- Delores Key 27.5; 3rd- Rhylene Stoker 28; 4th- Esther Guelker 28.5; 5th- Joycelyn Holder 29.

July 21 at WTC, Two-Man Scramble: (tie) LaNell Hogan and Sandy Phillips, and Joycelyn Holder and Jo Sterling, 73.

July 28 Low Gross-Low Net-Low Putts: Low Gross: 1st- (tie) Finnie Seale 82, Betty Hildreth 82; Low Net: (tie) Delores Key 64, Betty Hildreth 64; Low Putts: 1st- (tie) Opal Williams 28, Betty Hildreth 26.

Leads By One After First Round...

Stacy Ahead At 'Fun' Wheeling Classic

WHEELING, W.Va. (AP) - Experience can be a valuable asset when you're playing a difficult golf course.

A smile doesn't hurt, either.

A couple of LPGA veterans - Hollis Stacy and Kathy Postlewait - found that out Friday during the first round of the $125,000 West Virginia LPGA Classic. The second round of the 54-hole tournament was scheduled Saturday on the 6,200-yard Speidel golf course.

Stacy, a two-time U.S. Open champion, patched together a round of five birdies and one bogey for a 4-under-par 68, one shot better than Postlewait's 69. They were just in front of a pack of 12 golfers, including former Wheeling champions Susie McAllister and Debbie Massey, who all shot 2-under-par 70s.

This is the eighth straight year that the LPGA tour has visited the hilly terrain of northern West Virginia, and Stacy and Postlewait are among just four pros who have played in the tournament all eight years. And both Stacy and Postlewait credited their past Wheeling experience with helping them to their first round success.

Stacy said that when you're playing a course like Speidel, a hilly course with undulating greens, it's best to play with a smile on your face - and a firm grip on your putter.

"This course is fun," said Stacy, a statement that a lot of the 97-golfer field might dispute. "You've got to have a sense of humor on a few holes. There's a few you have to stand on your nose to play."

Stacy, the runnerup in Wheeling in 1977 to Debbie Austin, said "It's nice to mature with this tournament. I like playing Wheeling."

Stacy came close - very close - to recording the first ever hole-in-one in the Wheeling tournament. Her tee shot on the 155-yard, par-3 11th hole came to rest just six inches away from the cup, and Stacy had an easy tap-in for a birdie. It was one-of three birdies she collected on the back nine, which is generally considered the more difficult of the two Wheeling nines.

"The hilly course doesn't bother me, but the back nine's a little tighter and shorter," said M.J. Smith, one of the 12 golfers who shot 70.

Postlewait said she relied on the memories of Wheeling tournaments past to help her with her putting.

"I've played her for eight years. It's one of my favorites," said Postlewait. "It's fun to play a course you really like. It's a little bit of experience, having played her so often."

Defending champion Sandra Post got off to a shaky start, shooting a 2-over-par 74. Two-time winner Jane Blalock, the 1976 and 1978 champion, was among nine golfers at 1-over 73. She was just behind a group of 13 golfers who shot even par 72.

Murphy Leads Rainy PGA National Event

DULUTH, Ga. (AP) - Bob Murphy is fat, happy and the midway leader of the weather-delayed 63rd PGA national golf championship.

The rotund Floridian turned a 1-under-par 69 Friday into a 36-hole total of 135, five shots under par for a single stroke lead.

"I'm a happy leader. I'd sure rather be leading by one than trailing by two," Murphy said of his position with two rounds left in this, the last of the annual Big Four golfing tests.

Murphy's lead heading into today's third round was shaky, at best.

Nine players, including defending champion Jack Nicklaus, were within four shots of him, all solving par of 140 for two trips over the long, wet, difficult Atlanta Athletic Club layout.

Not among them, however, was Tom Watson. This sport's most dominant player in the last 4½ seasons missed the cut with 73-148.

"No excuses," said Watson, the game's leading money-winner this year. "I just didn't do anything well. I scored about as high as I could. I just couldn't make anything happen."

The 36-hole cut wasn't known until Saturday when 23 players returned to the course to complete their second rounds, cut short by the day's second storm and fourth delay in two rounds. Players with scores of 148 or higher definitely were out, however.

Larry Nelson, fighting year-long difficlties with his back and irons, fired the steamy day's best round, a 4-under 66.

That moved Nelson into a share of second place with two non-winners, Bob Eastwood and tour driving champion Dan Pohl. Pohl, sacrificing distance for accuracy by teeing off with a 4 wood, posted 67. Eastwood took 69. The trio stood at 136.

Andy North, the 1978 U.S. Open champion who has been second in his last two starts, shot 69 for fifth place at 137.

Straight-hitting Tom Kite, seventh or better in 10 of his last 11 tournaments, former Masters champion Fuzzy Zoeller and non-winner Vance Heafner were next at 138. Kite had 67, Zoeller 68 and Heafner 70.

Nicklaus, searching for an unprecedented sixth PGA and 18th major professional championship, kept his driving under control, shot 68 and was menacing at 139.

Jerry Pate, who won his 1976 U.S. Open crown on this course, and Gil Morgan matched Nicklaus' total. Pate shooting 68 and Morgan 69.

Jets Dump Denver, While...

'Skins Hold Off Chiefs

WASHINGTON (AP) - It was the type of game George Allen would have loved, but new Washington Redskins Coach Joe Gibbs liked it just as much.

The Redskins reverted to a combination of defense and field goals to beat the Kansas City Chiefs 16-10 Friday night in the National Football League exhibition opener for both teams.

In another exhibition game Friday, the New York Jets crushed Denver 33-7.

Saturday, the NFL preseason was to have Detroit at Buffalo, Cincinnati at Tampa Bay, the New York Giants at Chicago, Pittsburgh at Cleveland, Baltimore at New Orleans, St. Louis at San Diego, Green Bay at Dallas, Miami at Minnesota and Atlanta at Oakland. The New England Patriots will be at the Los Angeles Rams Monday night.

The Redskin fans, over 32,000, came to Robert F. Kennedy to catch the first look at Gibbs wide open offense. What they saw was three Mark Moseley field goals - 39, 36 and 28 yards - and a defense that limited the Chiefs to 60 yards in the first half. For the game the Chiefs gained 305 most coming in the waning moments of the game against the Redskin reserves.

The key play in the game was a third period interception by Redskin linebacker Monte Coleman.

Coleman stepped in front of a Bill Kenney pass and ran it back 28 yards for the score and a 10-3 Washington lead.

"We were in a man-to-man defense and the ball just came to me," Coleman said.

"We kept waiting for something to happen. Monte's interception is what did it," Gibbs said, who replaced Jack Pardee, who replaced Allen in 1978.

Kansas City coach Marv Levy took the loss and his team's mistakes - 10 penalties, six fumbles, four sacks and an interception in stride.

"There were a lot of mistakes and a lot of nervous people out there," said Levy. "There certainly wasn't much polish but that's why you play these exhibition games."

Levy was more worried about starting quarterback Steve Fuller, injured while trying to avoid 290-pound Redskin lineman Wilbur Young.

Before he was forced to leave, Fuller had completed 4-of-7 passes for 34 yards and had one interception.

In relief, Kenney was 7-of-19 for 120 yards.

Elsewhere, quarterback Richard Todd fired a 31-yard scoring pass to Johnny "Lam" Jones and Pat Leahy kicked four field goals to lead New York over Denver, spoiling the head coaching debut of the Broncos' Dan Reeves.

Denver scored its only TD in the third quarter, a 68-yard bomb from rookie quarterback Mark Herrmann to wide receiver Larry Brunson. It was Herrmann's first pass as a professional.

Texas Tops Okies In Oil Bowl Tilt

WICHITA FALLS (AP) - Highland Parks' Rob Moerschell threw touchdown passes of 14 and 48 yards to Dallas White's Dirk Davis to lead Texas to a 27-3 victory over Oklahoma Friday night in the 44th annual Oil Bowl charity football game.

Moerschell, who rushed for 117 yards on 19 carries and threw for 124 yards, was named the outstanding offensive player of the game. North Garland's Bill Heathcock was named the top defensive player.

After Moerschell's first touchdown pass gave Texas a 7-0 first quarter lead, Oklahoma tallied its only points on a 26-yard field goal by Sallisaw's Craig Benson just minutes before the first half ended.

Texas broke it open with three touchdowns in the final period.

Greenville's Robert Lewis scored on a 3-yard run, Moerschell connected with Davis for their second touchdown and Paris' Ricky Dirks ended the scoring on a 3-yard run with 15 seconds left in the game.

McKinney's Mike Sessoms kicked three extra points for Texas.

Leading defensive players for Texas were Heathcock and Plano's Kenneth Shead.

Oklahoma's defense was led by Putnam City West's Phil Wilson and Muskogee's Jeff Lee.

Texas now leads the all-star classic 28-7.

The proceeds from the annual charity event benefit crippled children in a two-state area.

Kuhn Needs More Power, Says Yank Owner Steinbrenner

NEW YORK (AP) - New York Yankees owner George Steinbrenner rapped his fellow club owners Friday night and said they should give Baseball Commissioner Bowie Kuhn more power.

"Football has a commissioner and baseball should have a commissioner," Steinbrenner said. "It wasn't his (Kuhn's) fault for the recent strike. He had no power. He had no license to do anything. I think he stood up admirably with all the criticism that went his way.

"Some owners who claim to be his friend should have backed him. A camel is a horse created by a committee and I don't want baseball to be run by little pockets of power. A ship cannot run without a captain.

"I'm tired of him (Kuhn) taking a beating and I want this printed even if I get into trouble. This is not a knock against Ray Grebey, but the trouble was created by the Player Relations Committee, which voted for the bylaws we now operate under. The commissioner simply has to be the commissioner. I don't blame Bowie at all - we're so stupid we stripped him of all his power."

Steinbrenner was quick to point out that the owners have to change the system.

"We've got to undo the problems made self-evident during the strike. The commissioner performed admirably during the strike and stood up well, maybe because he had no license to do anything. And we damn well better get that situation changed."

Astros Stump Rangers Again Friday Night, 5-1

HOUSTON (AP) - The Houston Astros recorded their second straight triumph over the Texas Rangers Friday as they slipped past their intrastate rivals, 5-1.

Both teams displayed more offense than in the Astros 2-1 win Thursday in Arlington.

"Our timing is better, hitting-wise," Houston Astros Manager Bill Virdon said. "When we'll get it all back depends on how good the pitching is. It's hard to say."

Despite allowing 12 hits, the Astros were able to hold Texas to one run, thanks to sparkling defensive plays. "I thought we threw strikes well," Virdon said. "I was more concerned with that than with anything else."

Jose Cruz drew a walk off loser Doc Medich with two outs in the fourth inning, and scored quickly when Cesar Cedeno ripped a triple down the right-field line to make it 1-0. Gary Woods' RBI-single in the sixth scored Tony Scott to make it 2-0.

After Texas cut the Astros' advantage to 2-1, Houston exploded for three runs off Steve Comer to ice the game in the eighth. Harry Spilman's double to right-center highlighted the inning by bringing in two runs.

The Rangers ripped the Astros' Bobby Sprowl for four hits in the seventh, but only managed one run. Billy Sample and Larry Cox led off the seventh with singles, but Sample was nailed by Denny Walling's peg when he tried to go to third base on Cox's hit.

Mike Mendoza's double to right put runners on second and third, and pinch-hitter John Ellis plated Cox with a ground-out to third.

Mickey Rivers lined a single to center field but Mendoza was thrown out at the plate by Woods.

Vern Ruhle, the second of five Astros hurlers, was credited with the pitching victory.

Duran 'Comeback' Slated To Begin Sunday Afternoon

CLEVELAND (AP) - "He's the little guy in the white hat," the barmaid said, seeing Roberto Duran through a window.

There he was, a snow white hat covering some of the mop of coal-black hair - Roberto Duran, the fighter whose image color was always villain black until that night in New Orleans.

The 5-foot-7½ Duran, with the blazing eyes and the attacking style, was Hands of Stone, El Animal. Then last Nov. 25 in the Superdome he quit in the eighth round and lost the World Boxing Council welterweight championship to Sugar Ray Leonard.

He said he was sick to his stomach. He said he would never fight again.

Sunday, Duran fights again in a scheduled 10-round junior middleweight bout with 22-year-old Nino Gonzalez. His purse - $75,000 tax free and more than 100 times smaller than his paycheck in New Orleans. His purpose - to obtain a rematch with Leonard, something Leonard has said will never happen.

The 30-year-old Panamanian's comeback will be televised live by CBS from the 9,000-seat Public Auditorium between 4:30 p.m.-4:45 p.m. EDT, about four hours before the major league baseball All-Star Game at Cleveland Stadium.

"I didn't lose any respect for him as a fighter," the 22-year-old Gonzalez, of Bayonne, N.J., said of Duran's quitting in New Orleans. "Maybe he had a reason. Maybe he did have cramps."

But by his actions, Gonzalez has illustrated the change in Duran's image.

He turned down a $40,000 title bid against Wilfred Benitz, the WBC super welterweight champion, to fight Duran for $50,000. That is a show of confidence against a man who was once one of the most feared fighters in the game; a show of confidence by a young fighter who admitted he was nervous when he sparred three rounds with Duran last year.

Duran says he doesn't feel he has to prove himself, but in a display of temper, Gonzalez hit at the heart of the matter that almost certainly has haunted Duran into a comeback.

At a news conference earlier in the week, Duran made slurs about Puerto Ricans to Gonzalez, who is of Puerto Rican descent.

Gonzalez snapped back at Duran in Spanish: "A Puerto Rican may go down, but he doesn't quit."

Cleveland Ready For Weekend

CLEVELAND (AP) - Scores of downtown restaurants, many of them closed on ordinary Sundays, plan to keep their doors open this weekend - for this will be no ordinary Sunday.

Officials expect a crowd of more than 70,000 people to welcome the return of major league baseball at Sunday night's All-Star Game.

The downtown population will swell by several thousand more earlier in the day, when junior middleweight Nino Gonzalez welcomes former welterweight boxing champion Roberto Duran back to the ring.

The 50-day baseball players' strike, however, left some question as to whether a new All-Star Game attendance record would be recorded this year.

Most of Municipal Stadium's 76,685 seats had been sold for the original July 14 date.

But thousands of ticket-holders demanded refunds when the game was rescheduled, according to Jerry Waring, ticket director for the host Cleveland Indians.

"We put the grandstand tickets on sale on May 4, and they all sold within a few days," Waring said. "At the time of the strike, we still had about 500 (of-9,000) bleacher seats open."

Many of the returned tickets have been resold, but thousands remain, and it is no longer certain the 1935 All-Star attendance mark of 69,831 will fall.

The second-best mark, 68,751, was set in Cleveland in 1954.

"I can't say exactly how many refunds there have been, but it's substantial," Waring said. "The office has been busy. The refunds so far are outpacing the demand for tickets. Some of the people coming in for refunds have been disappointed and disgusted with the strike, but that's understandable.

"Right now, we have from 6,000 to 7,000 tickets available. We're accepting refunds up until 4 o'clock on Saturday."

"In a lot of cases, vacation plans or travel problems are keeping people who bought tickets for the July 14 game from coming to the game," said Indians spokesman Bob DiBiasio.

The tickets cost $20 for a box seat, $15 for reserved seating and $8 for a bleacher seat.

All-Star Game planners, meanwhile, kept a close watch on weekend weather reports.

The stadium was to host a National Football League exhibition game between the Cleveland Browns and Pittsburgh Steelers Saturday, and stadium groundskeeper Marshall Bossard feared rain before or during that game would make it virtually impossible to put the field in shape for the baseball game the next night.

Locals Qualify For Tourney

Volleyball Action Slated Monday

Workouts, square one of a season which will hopefully end in a second consecutive state volleyball championship, will begin Aug. 10, reports Coach Joyce Elrod.

Varsity volleyball workouts will be held from 8 until 11 a.m. and from 4 through 6 p.m. Monday.

Junior Varsity workouts will be held from 8 until 11 and from 2 until 4.

First freshman workouts will be held Aug. 17 from 6-9 p.m.

ALL-TOURNAMENT -- Bunny Roe, Nancy Wood and Von Dale Henry were named to the regional all-tournament team from Division IV this year. Roe, 17, has made all-star for five years at Snyder, while Wood, 18, has made all-star eight years. Henry, 17, has made all-star three years at Snyder and two years at Sweetwater. Snyder's division IV team suffered two losses to be eliminated from the regional tournament this year, but won the Sportsmanship Trophy.

Checklist For GI Students

For veterans planning to school this fall under the checklist to keep VA enroll in, or return to GI Bill, here is a useful education benefits coming regularly, says E. H. (Dan) Dever Jr., Veterans' Outreach Coordinator at Western Texas College.

First, file for your GI benefits as early as possible. Dever's office in the WTC Administration Building is a good place to begin this project.

Register early. VA and your school need time to process your registration so that checks can be started promptly.

Submit transcripts to the college admissions and records office immediately after application is made. This will speed up the school's certification to the Veterans Administration.

Double check your choice of courses to be certain that they will count toward your educational objective.

Avoid dropping classes after registration.

If you have to interrupt your education, notify VA promptly and advise the date you expect to return to classes.

If you change addresses, notify VA promptly. You need to notify the school and post office as well.

Dever's office is open each weekday and persons wishing to make appointments are invited to call 573-8511, extension 212. Offices at WTC are closed on Fridays during the summer, but will resume Friday hours on Aug. 21. Fall semester registration at WTC will be held Aug. 24-25.

Turnbow Says Guilty Plea

William Wayne Turnbow pleaded guilty to unauthorized use of a motor vehicle in 132nd District Court Friday and was sentenced to two years in the Texas Department of Corrections.

David Vera Medrano was sentenced to 18 months in the penitentiary for a second conviction of driving while intoxicated.

Judge Wayland G. Holt presided.

HATS GALORE—Hats and accessories will be seen in this new display in the Scurry County Museum at Western Texas College. The model wears a chapeau of black straw with a slate blue dress given to the museum's costume collection by the late Esther Boren. Next door to the hat shop will be a doctor's office, while a saddle display is being arranged just around the corner.

EARLY KITCHEN—Visitors to the Scurry County Museum in times past picked a pioneer kitchen as one of the favorite displays. The kitchen has been returned to the box and strip room as part of a changing look in the permanent gallery. Nelda Bills, a member of the museum's board of directors and a volunteer workers there, is shown in the kitchen.

break the laws and intentionally dodge the weight men, sometimes try to show phony papers.

But if a trooper suspects papers are false but isn't able to prove it at the scene, the trucking company could be hit with a full investigation — something else weight men are authorized to do.

Some companies honestly don't understand the law, Rhea admits. But he says that's why he's here. "If any of the companies have questions, I get calls at the office and at home. We'd rather have them call us than call someone that can't help them."

He adds that most ordinary lawyers don't even understand all the transportation regulations.

"A company in Abilene went to a regular old lawyer. He messed them completely up and Stan Walton, Abilene weight man, had to file on them for several expensive violations. Had they just let a weight man talk to them, they wouldn't have had that problem."

During Thursday's "weigh-in" near Snyder, the officers didn't have any problems with unruly truckers, but they have at other times.

"Most local people are good as gold," says Rhea. "Most of the attitude problems we have are from out of state people."

"We have some hardheads in Texas," Hill adds. "But not that many."

But Walton advises, "We treat them with the same respect we'd want to be treated with and it usually works out alright."

Local Police Probe Breakin

A 23 year-old man was arrested at 7:30 this morning and charged with criminal trespass and possession of marijuana after he allegedly broke into a home at 1011 24th St.

Police received a call at 7:25 a.m. from Peggy Fletcher who said someone was breaking through her window. Officer Robert Harbin responded to the call and found the man walking away from the house.

In other activity, a dog at 208 Elm was taken to a veterinarian for observation Friday morning after it allegedly bit an 11 month old boy on the leg.

Rene Arnold, 2301 Ave. Z, told police someone had broken a window out of her house. The window was valued at $30.

Terry Rannefeld, Snyder Heating and Air Conditioning, reported several items had turned up missing off his truck over the past two or three weeks. Missing are refrigerator gauges, aluminum stepladder, gas can and a turbo torch. The items are valued at $215.

A minor accident occurred at 30th and College at 5:05 p.m. Involved was a 1978 Kenworth with a tank transport driven by Ronald Shultz of Big Spring, and a 1969 Ford driven by Margaret Easterwood of Snyder. There was no damage reported to the truck.

At 7:32 p.m., Haskell Franks, at Hack's Grocery, reported the theft of gas and transmission oil. An older model Cadillac occupied by two men was spotted leaving the scene.

At 10:38 p.m., an employee at Furr's Supermarket told police someone in a black and gray Corvette left after taking two bags of ice valued at $1.50.

Billingsley To Retire

The State Department of Highways and Public Transportation has announced the retirement of Nathan A. Billingsley, district administrative engineer and resident engineer for Taylor County. His retirement became effective July 31.

Billingsley, a Texas Tech graduate, began his career with the department in 1950 at the resident engineer's office in Snyder. He moved to Abilene in 1957, where he assumed the duties of district laboratory engineer. In 1970, he was appointed district design engineer where he served until 1973, at which time he returned to Snyder as resident engineer in charge of three counties.

In 1975, Billingsley again returned to Abilene as district administrative engineer. Along with those duties, he was also placed in charge of the resident engineer's office in Abilene in 1977 and was still serving in that capacity at his retirement.

Billingsley served in the U. S. Air Force as a pilot from 1943-46. He was born at Dunn in Scurry County and attended public school there. He graduated from Texas Tech with an engineering degree in 1950.

Billingsley is married to the former Margaret Cary. They reside at 1501 Mimosa in Abilene. They have two children, a son, Cary of Denver, Colo. and a daughter, Kathie, of Abilene.

Rice Resigns School Post

Jerry Rice has resigned his position on the board of trustees of Snyder Independent School District.

In a letter of resignation submitted to Supt. Bill J. Hood, Rice said that he and his wife had been transferred to Abilene and would be moving out of the local school district.

Rice has served four years on the board.

His letter of resignation is included in the agenda for a meeting of the board set for Tuesday night.

"It is with much regret that I must submit to you my resignation from this board, effective Aug. 15, 1981," Rice said in his letter.

"I have enjoyed serving on this board very much and hope I have been an asset to the schools, the children and the community in some way for these past four years."

The board is due to discuss procedure for filling the vacancy. Under present policy, the board could appoint a member to serve until the next election, which is set for the first Saturday next April.

Rules Adopted

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — The Public Utility Commission has adopted rules requiring telephone, electric and water utilities to offer deferred payment plans to their customers.

It also approved a rule enabling seriously ill people to avoid cut-off of electric service for 40 days by providing a doctor's statement as proof they are sick.

College To Offer Tech Course Soon

A graduate level course in general public school administration, (EDAD 5300) will be offered by Texas Tech University in the fall semester at Western Texas College.

Registration will be held at 6 p.m. Sept. 8 in the WTC administration building. Further information about the course may be obtained by calling the office of Dr. Ben Brock, WTC vice president.

Tempest Brews

HAUPPAUGE, N.Y. (AP) — A tempest has been brewing in the bean of Suffolk County Comptroller Joseph Caputo for a long time, and he finally has let off the steam by pulling the plug on the office coffee pot.

Lawrence E. Lamb, M.D.

Effects of weight gain

By Lawrence Lamb, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB — I am a 52-year-old active woman, 5 feet 6 and weigh 124 pounds. I had a physical exam last year and at the time I weighed 132. My triglycerides were 210 and my cholesterol was 259.

I went on a non-fat diet and lost 13 pounds. My cholesterol went down to 190 and my triglycerides to 103. It was hard to stop losing weight so I started eating normally. In four months I gained five pounds and my cholesterol was 212 and triglycerides 174. If my weight stays the same will my tests stay the same? Or will my tests go up every time I gain a pound or two?

DEAR READER — Your story certainly emphasizes the value of a diet in people who have elevated cholesterol and triglyceride levels. It also points out why I recommend that you should individualize, not generalize. What works for one will not work for another. It is important to do whatever is necessary to induce the desired improvement in each individual.

High on the list is eliminating any excess body fat that may be present. In my experience if a person stays overweight the other dietary manipulations are not nearly as helpful — if they help at all. So step one is to get rid of excess body fat. Not just part of it but as much as you need to in order to obtain the desired improvement.

You can get some general guidelines about the diet you should follow from The Health Letter number 15-4, Diet to Prevent Heart Attacks and Strokes, which I am sending you.

Others who want this issue can send 75 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it to me, in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019.

Now, your values are not all that bad. But we do know that within reason the lower the cholesterol levels the less likely you are to have fatty-cholesterol changes in your arteries. And tests fluctuate some just from the procedure and other factors unrelated to weight gain.

Nevertheless, I think you would be wise to stabilize your weight at an optimal level and adjust your diet and exercise to keep it there. A small weight gain can have rather significant effects on cholesterol, triglycerides and even blood pressure.

DEAR DR. LAMB — Would you please straighten me out on some ideas expressed by a "Health Food" store owner? He claims that frozen orange juice contains no potassium and that cheese purchased from a regular grocery store is made with lard. I disagree. Which of us is correct? What is your opinion of food purchased in regular grocery stores versus "Health Food" stores?

DEAR READER — Frozen orange juice contains almost the same amount of potassium as natural fresh orange juice, according to the U.S. Department of Agriculture Handbook number 8. And cheese found in grocery stores is made with milk and milk products, not lard.

There are some very good products that can be obtained from a number of "Health Food" stores. There are also a lot of terrible products that are misrepresented to the public by some stores. This includes natural coconut oil that is loaded with saturated fats. Most grocery stores carry good food products that are healthy. So-called health food stores are often a very poor place to get health or medical information, as your experience indicates.

WAITING TO WEIGH— Trooper Stan Walton talks to one of the truckers as they begin lining up. Usually they say the trucks are lined up quite a distance, but Thursday was slow. (SDN Staff Photo)

LEGAL WEIGHT— The digital weight read-out on this White's Testers Truck can be seen through the window of the van. The weight was legal but there was a registration problem on this one. (SDN Staff Photo)

Truckers

break the laws and intentionally dodge the weight men, sometimes try to show phony papers.

But if a trooper suspects papers are false but isn't able to prove it at the scene, the trucking company could be hit with a full investigation — something else weight men are authorized to do.

Some companies honestly don't understand the law, Rhea admits. But he says that's why he's here. "If any of the companies have questions, I get calls at the office and at home. We'd rather have them call us than call someone that can't help them.

He adds that most ordinary lawyers don't even understand all the transportation regulations.

"A company in Abilene went to a regular old lawyer. He messed them completely up and Stan (Walton, Abilene weight man) had to file on them for several expensive violations. Had they just let a weight man talk to them, they wouldn't have had that problem.

During Thursday's "weigh-in" near Snyder, the officers didn't have any problems with unruly truckers, but they have at other times.

"Most local people are good as gold," says Rhea. "Most of the attitude problems we have are from out of state people."

"We have some hardheads in Texas," Hill adds. "But not that many."

But Walton advises, "We treat them with the same respect we'd want to be treated with and it usually works out alright."

Local Police Probe Breakin

A 23 year-old man was arrested at 7:30 this morning and charged with criminal trespass and possession of marijuana after he allegedly broke into a home at 1011 24th St.

Police received a call at 7:25 a.m. from Peggy Fletcher who said someone was breaking through her window. Officer Robert Harbin responded to the call and found the man walking away from the house.

In other activity, a dog at 208 Elm was taken to a veterinarian for observation Friday morning after it allegedly bit an 11 month old boy on the leg.

Rene Arnold, 2301 Ave. Z, told police someone had broken a window out of her house. The window was valued at $30.

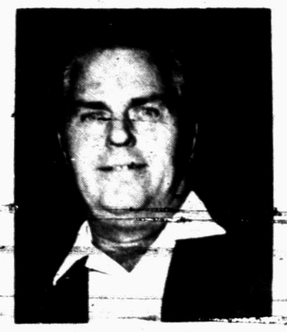

Terry Rannefeld, Snyder Heating and Air Conditioning, reported several items had turned up missing off his truck over the past two or three weeks. Missing are refrigerator gauges, aluminum stepladder, gas can and a turbo torch. The items are valued at $215.

A minor accident occurred at 30th and College at 5:05 p.m. Involved was a 1978 Kenworth with a tank transport driven by Ronald Shultz of Big Spring, and a 1969 Ford driven by Margaret Easterwood of Snyder. There was no damage reported to the truck.

At 7:32 p.m., Haskell Franks, at Hack's Grocery, reported the theft of gas and transmission oil. An older model Cadillac occupied by two men was spotted leaving the scene.

At 10:38 p.m., an employee at Furr's Supermarket told police someone in a black and gray Corvette left after taking two bags of ice valued at $1.00.

Billingsley To Retire

The State Department of Highways and Public Transportation has announced the retirement of Nathan A. Billinsley, district administrative engineer and resident engineer for Taylor County. His retirement became effective July 31.

Billingsley, a Texas Tech graduate, began his career with the department in 1950 at the resident engineer's office in Snyder. He moved to Abilene in 1957, where he assumed the duties of district laboratory engineer. In 1970, he was appointed district design engineer where he served until 1973, at which time he returned to Snyder as resident engineer in charge of three counties.

In 1975, Billingsley again returned to Abilene as district administrative engineer. Along with those duties, he was also placed in charge of the resident engineer's office in Abilene in 1977 and was still serving in that capacity at his retirement.

Billinglsey served in the U. S. Air Force as a pilot from 1943-46. He was born at Dunn in Scurry County and attended public school there. He graduated from Texas Tech with an engineering degree in 1950.

Billingsley is married to the former Margaret Cary. They reside at 1501 Mimosa in Abilene. They have two children, a son, Cary of Denver, Colo. and a daughter, Kathie, of Abilene.

Rice Resigns School Post

Jerry Rice has resigned his position on the board of trustees of Snyder Independent School District.

In a letter of resignation submitted to Supt. Bill J. Hood, Rice said that he and his wife had been transferred to Abilene and would be moving out of the local school distrit.

Rice has served four years on the board.

His letter of resignation is included in the agenda for a meeting of the board set for Tuesday night.

"It is with much regret that I must submit to you my resignaion from this board, effective Aug. 15, 1981," Rice said in his letter.

"I have enjoyed serving on this board very much and hope I have been an asset to the schools, the children and the community in some way for these past four years."

The board is due to discuss procedure for filling the vacancy. Under present policy, the board could appoint a member to serve until the next election, which is set for the first Saturday next April.

Rules Adopted

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — The Public Utility Commission has adopted rules requiring telephone, electric and water utilities to offer deferred payment plans to their customers.

It also approved a rule enabling seriously ill people to avoid cut-off of electric service for 40 days by providing a doctor's statement as proof they are sick.

College To Offer Tech Course Soon

A graduate level course in general public school administration, (EDAD 5300) will be offered by Texas Tech University in the fall semester at Western Texas College.

Registration will be held at 6 p. m. Sept. 3 in the WTC administration building. Further information about the course may be obtained by calling the office of Dr. Ben Brock, WTC vice president.

Tempest Brews

HAUPPAUGE, N.Y. (AP) — A tempest has been brewing in the bean of Suffolk County Comptroller Joseph Caputo for a long time, and he finally has let off the steam by pulling the plug on the office coffee pot.

MR. AND DENNIS FOY WESTMORELAND
(Ted Bigham Photography)

Marriage Vows Said By Hatfield, Westmoreland

Shari Faye Hatfield became the bride of Dennis Foy Westmoreland June 26 at 7:30 in the evening at Faith Baptist Church. Rev. L. W. Hatfield, father of the bride, officiated the double ring ceremony.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. L. W. Hatfield, 3101 Cherry. Mr. and Mrs. Foy Westmoreland, 403 32nd Street, are parents of the groom.

They stood before two brass candelbra with white candles and an arch decorated with white lilies of the valley. Ms. Marie White presented organ music for the ceremony.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a gown of white organza over taffeta. It featured a round neckline edged in lace and pearls, lace applique on the bodice and skirt and long sleeves with wide lace cuffs. The white tulle veil was edged in lace and pearls. She wore a pearl necklace borrowed from Mrs. Ricky Starnes.

The bride carried a bouquet of white and blue silk flowers edged in white lace with white streamers.

The bride's mother wore a floor length dress of blue chiffon featuring a pleated skirt and cape. She wore a white silk corsage.

The groom's mother was dressed in a floor length dress of seafoam green knit featuring a draped waistline and long sleeves. She also wore a white silk corsage.

Miss Rissa Head was maid of honor. She wore a sky blue floor length dress with a gathered skirt and attached cape. Blue and white silk flowers with blue streamers made up her bouquet. Bridesmaids were Miss Tracey Westmoreland, sister of the groom, and Miss Carrie Crenwelge. Their gowns were identical to the one worn by the maid of honor.

Best man was Perry Westmoreland, brother of the groom. Kevin Hall of Lovington, N.M. and Stanley Burgess were groomsmen. Ushers were Bobby Hatfield, brother of the bride, Ricky Starnes and Scott Marlar.

A reception was held in the fellowship hall of the church following the ceremony.

The bride's table featured a white lace cloth over blue with crystal and silver appointments. The three-tiered cake was decorated with blue roses and silver leaves. A fountain flowing with blue water surrounded by silver swans supported the cake. Silver-tipped blue carnations made up the centerpiece. Ms. Kellye Starnes and Mrs. Roxanna Hatfield, sister-in-law of the bride, presided at the table.

The groom's table featured a royal blue cloth and silver coffee service. A double ring chocolate cake was served by Ms. Jacque Burgess.

Jackie Wadkins registerd guests in the bride's book.

After a wedding trip to Denver and Bueno Vista, Colorado, the couple will be at home in Snyder.

East's one notrump was the so-called "comic notrump." The comedian ran to two diamonds although he would have done better to pass and take an 1100-point penalty. Anyway, North and South got to seven hearts after a long series of unusual bids.

The hand as reported in "International Popular Bridge" was supposed to have been played in Morocco by a Polish pair. We think someone kidded the reporter or else the reporter kidded the magazine.

South has a rather elementary way to come to 13 tricks. He takes king and ace of diamonds, leads a trump and finesses dummy's 10, comes back to his hand with a spade and leads his last diamond. He ruffs or overruffs in dummy depending on whether or not West ruffs first, comes to his hand with a club, draws trumps and claims.

However, South came up with a super-complicated play. He started the same way. When it came time to ruff his last diamond he played the king of spades, led to dummy's ace, ruffed a spade, led to dummy's ace of clubs, ruffed another spade, cashed the queen and king of clubs, ruffed his last diamond with the queen of trumps and made the last two tricks with the ace and king of trumps.

Both plays required that West hold two diamonds. The complicated play also required that West follow suit enough times in spades and clubs.

Courtyard Rites Unite Couple

Shana Renae Holmesley became the bride of Craig Alan Randolph on July 25 at eleven in the morning in a courtyard ceremony at the Roby Courthouse. Jay Jennings, longtime friend of the groom, officiated the double ring ceremony.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Leroy Thrower of Snyder.

Mr. and Mrs. Lynn Randolph of Roby are parents of the groom.

A reception was held immediately following the ceremony, hosted by the couple's parents.

The bride's table was covered with a mauve cloth and an off-white crocheted overcloth. Mrs. T. M. Randolph Sr., grandmother of the groom, made the overcloth. A fresh flower arrangement, made by the groom's mother, adorned the table. Also the bride's bouquet, which was made of silk flowers and streamers in colors of mauve and off-white.

The cake was two-tiered, decorated with mauve roses and wedding bells accenting the botton layer. Appointments were in crystal and silver.

Presiding at the table were Peggy Womack of Snyder and Elaine Field, sister of the groom, of Roby.

Following a wedding trip to Dallas, the couple will reside in Brownfield where the groom is employed by The Western Company.

MRS. JOHN WAYNE JONES

Porter, Jones Wed In Double Ring Ceremony

Tonya Marie Porter and John Wayne Jones were joined in marriage on July 16 at 6:30 in the evening in the Crossroads Baptist Church of Rotan. Rev. Mike O'Neill officiated the double ring ceremony.

The bride is the daughter of Mr.and Mrs. Mike D. Porter of Hobbs Community near Rotan. The groom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Bobby Wright of Hobbs Community and Mr. and Mrs. John C. Jones of Anson.

The altar was decorated with two seven branch white candelbra with greenery and red satin ribbons. Large brass planters filled with greenery were placed beside each candelbrum.

The musical program was presented by Mrs. Glenn Copeland, organist, Laura Gruben, pianist, and Lynn Hyer and Karen Rasco, soloists. Mrs. Copeland played the traditional processional, "Bridal Chorus" by Wagner, and recessional, "Wedding March" by Mendelshon, and various other musical selections. Miss Hyer, cousin of the bride, sang "You Light Up My Life" immediately preceding the processional, and Miss Rasco sang "Looking Through the Eyes of Love" during the ceremony.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride was radiant in a gown designed by Alfred Angelo, fashioned in white organza enhanced with Peau D'Ange lace. It was made with an empire bodice and featured a Queen Anne neckline enriched with pearls. There was a repeat of lace on shadow sleeves and lace trimmed the ruffled tiers on the hemline of the skirt and chapel train. The bride wore a mantilla edged with Peau D'Ange lace and pearls. Lace motifs were scattered on the walking length veil.

The bridal bouquet was a cascade of baby's breath, white daisies and red sweetheart roses.

In keeping with tradition, something new for the bride was her dress. Something borrowed, old and blue was an antique pin owned by her maternal grandmother, Mrs. Marie Phillips. The bride also wore her mother's diamond pendant necklace.

Miss Debra Teel of the Hobbs Community served as maid of honor. Bridesmaids were Rhonda Reynolds of Crosbyton and Linda Wright of Sweetwater. Each wore a softly draped, red floor length crepe gown, gathered at the shoulders and accented with a tie belt. They each carried a single long-stemmed white rose with streamers and wore a single white rose as a hair ornament.

The flower girl was Patricia Lee Porter, sister of the bride. She wore a long red crepe dress with puffed sleeves, accented with a satin ribbon tie belt. Baby's breath adorned her hair and she carried a white basket of red rose petals.

The bride's mother wore a street length dress of peach colored knit with a flare skirt and tucked detailing across the shoulders and down the sleeves. Accessories were bone. Her corsage was of white daisies and red sweetheart roses.

The mother of the groom wore a street length dress of ivory knit. Accessories were white. She also had a corsage of white daisies centered with red roses.

The groom's stepmother, Mrs. Jon Jones, wore a street length ivory and red dress with a corsage of white daisies and red sweetheart roses.

The groom wore a white cutaway tuxedo with a white ruffled shirt and white tie. He had a red rose boutonniere.

Best man was David Etheredge of the Hobbs Community. Groomsmen were Charles Wright of Snyder and David Jones of Cedar Hills, both brothers of the groom. Ushers were Terry and Michael Porter of Hobbs, both brothers of the bride. All wore identical black tuxedos with white ruffled shirts and black ties. They had red carnations as boutonnieres.

The ringbearer was Casey Jones, brother of the groom. He was dressed identically to the groomsmen and carried a white satin pillow upon which both rings were fastened.

The reception was held at the fellowship hall of the church, hosted by the bride's parents.

The bride's table was laid with a red satin cloth, covered with a white lace tablecloth, gathered along each corner and caught up with a red satin ribbon. The cloth was fahioned by Marie Phillips, grandmother of the bride. The table was centered with a beautiful arrangement of red and white carnations, greenery and baby's breath. The three-tiered wedding cake was decorated with tiny red roses topped with the traditional bride and groom. Appointments were of milkglass and silver. Presiding over the table were Mrs. Mark Bump of Snyder, sister of the groom, and Mrs. Terry Porter of Hobbs, sister-in-law of the bride.

Georgie Wright, the groom's sister, and Aaron Porter, the bride's brother, handed out white rice bags tied with dainty red satin ribbons. Mrs. Mark Anderle, cousin of the bride, registered guests in the bride's book.

Following a wedding trip to San Antonio, the couple is at home in Snyder.

The bride is a graduate of Hobbs High School and a 1981 graduate of Western Texas College, with an Associate of Arts degree in history.

The groom graduated from Hobbs High School and is employed by Mayfield Construction Company of Snyder.

The groom's parents hosted the rehearsal dinner the evening before the wedding at the Hobbs School Cafeteria.

Special guests were grandmothers of the bride, Mrs. Marie Phillips of Hobbs and Mrs. Peggy Porter of Rotan. Also her great-grandmothers, Mrs. J. P. Phillips of Hobbs and Mrs. J. W. Porter of Rotan. Maternal grandfather of the groom, Mr. Andy New of Anson, and paternal grandfather of the bride, Mr. Dave Porter were also in attendance.

Out of town guests were from Anson, Snyder, Cedar Hills, Robert Lee, Crosbyton, Sweetwater, and Hereford.

The bride was honored with a gift tea by friends at the WTC Baptist Center and a surprise shower by friends at the WTC administrative offices. She was also honored with a gift coffee at the home of Mrs. Odell Rains of Hobbs before the wedding.

For going away, the bride wore a soft crepe peach colored sundress with spaghetti straps and a matching jacket with accessories of bone. Her corsage was peach colored carnations.

Tune Touches Tender Cord

CHATTANOOGA, Tenn. (AP) — There are no limits to what this town can do to return a favor.

Johnny Cash's new tune, "Chattanooga City Limits," touched a tender chord here. So Paul Clark, the public works commissioner, is meeting Cash today in Nashville to give him a city limits sign and a sketch of the singer published recently in The Chattanooga Times.

Clark said the metal sign is inscribed on the back: "Thanks, Johnny. We love you. The city of Chattanooga, 1981."

Riot police seized the embattled University of Rome in 1968 from 2,000 rebellious students who had held the campus for three days.

PRALINE YAM

Simple recipe that produces a delightful result.

1 large (8 ounces) yam
1 tablespoon butter
Salt to taste
2 tablespoons maple syrup, preferably Grade B
2 tablespoons coarsely chopped pecans

Peel yam; quarter and steam until very soft — 20 to 30 minutes; drain. Mash with butter and salt — there should be about 1 cup. Turn into a shallow, 1½ cup broiler-proof baking dish. Pour syrup over top. Broil 6 to 8 inches from high heat until hot through and bubbly — about 4 minutes. Sprinkle with pecans and continue broiling until they brown — another minute. Makes 2 servings.

FIX-IT-FAST

Removing Wallpaper

You can rent a steamer to remove old wallpaper. You will be given instructions on how to use. The reason for steaming is to soften the paste between the wallpaper and the wall.

You will need a wallpaper steamer, a short stepladder, a wide-bladed scraper and a puncturing roller. It will take about two hours, depending on the size of the area to be steamed and the age of the wallpaper.

1. Hold the steam applicator in one hand. Begin at top of wall and hold applicator to paper. You should attempt to remove one strip of paper, from top to bottom, at a time.

2. As you apply applicator to paper, work scraper under edge of paper.

3. Working downward, use steamer to soften paste. and scraper to lift paper from wall.

4. When all paper has been removed, mix a solution of TSP (trisodium phosphate) and water, according to maufacturer's directions on TSP package. Wash the surface or the wall with this solution, then rinse thoroughly with cold water. Allow to dry completely.

If you are removing a vinyl or vinyl-coated paper, you must puncture the paper with a number of small holes so that steam can reach the paste. Your wallpaper dealer has a puncturing roller to do this job.

6. Electrical Note: For safety reasons, unscrew fuses or trip circuit breakers to OFF for all wall outlets in the room. If switches and outlets are allowed to stay on, steam or rinse water may accidentally get into them, causing you severe electrical shock and serious injury.

Charles And Di Won't Buy Condo

NEW YORK (AP) — The British Information Service says there is no truth to published reports that Prince Charles and Princess Diana plan to buy fashionable digs on Fifth Avenue.

The New York Post ran a story quoting sources as saying the prince would buy a $5 million, 21-room condominium here, but spokesman David Wiggs of the service said Monday, "There is no truth at all in this story."

Chandler, Kruger Wed In Chapel Rites

MR. AND MRS. RICHARD PAUL KRUGER
(Photo by Harley Bynum)

Melissa Jan Chandler became the bride of Richard Paul Kruger July 27 at 7 p.m. in the chapel of First Baptist Church. Rev. Ken Brannam officiated the double ring ceremony.

Parents of the bride are Mr. and Mrs. M. L. Chandler of 3709 23rd Street. The grooms parents are Hazel Nichols, 208 34th Street, and the late Glen Kruger.

The altar was decorated with a brass arch covered in silk lilies-of-the-valley flanked by candle trees holding 20 burning tapers. A seven branch candelabrum was centered behind the arch.

Miss Tammy Farmer played traditional wedding music on the piano. Julie Roemisch sang "Through the Eyes of Love" as the candles were lit, and "We've Only Just Begun."

John Nichols, brother of the groom, and Jodi Dunk lit the candles.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore an all-over Chantilly type lace dress trimmed with ruffled lace and double rows of satin ribbon. It featured a high ruffled neck accented with a V to the wasitline of ruffled lace and double rows of satin ribbon, bishop sleeves, and a bell skirt sweeping into a cathedral length train. The matching headpiece was of Chantilly type lace and the fingertip length veil was of illusion with a border of double rows of satin ribbon and the ruffled lace.

The bride carried a cascade bouquet of white sweetheart roses and frenched white carnations and baby's breath with white satin streamers.

Matron of honor was Mrs. Terri Beights of Colorado City. Miss Monica Chandler, sister of the bride, and Miss Sibrina Nichols, sister of the groom, served as bridesmaids. They wore matching dresses of peach colored eyelet with a ruffle around the bodice and spaghetti straps. They wore combs trimmed with peach ribbon and yellow forget-me-nots in their hair and carried a nosegay of peach silk camellias surrounded by yellow blossoms and beige azaleas, accented with peach and yellow forget-me-nots, white lacebacks, a peach bow and streamers.

Miss Kam Ramage and Miss Betsy Myers, both of Colorado City, were flower girls. They wore yellow eyelet dresses styled to match the honor attendants'. They carried baskets accented with yellow tulle, peach and yellow forget-me-nots and peach bows and wore barretts of yellow and peach forget-me-nots in their hair.

Hoy Hamilton served as best man. Ricky Beights of Colorado City and Jimmy Robbins of Denison were groomsmen. Ushers were John Nichols, brother of the groom, and Michael Bowlin.

The reception was held in the garden room of the church.

The bride's table featured a bouquet of peach and yellow carnations, white daisies and baby's breath arranged in a crystal bowl which sat in a silver footed container. The cake was three tiered with six smaller cakes surrounding the bottom layer. It was decorated with peach and yellow flowers and topped with a miniature bride and groom. Presiding at the table were Ms. Carol Trulock and Miss Sharon Strickland.

A wooden flower arrangement adorned the grooms table. It was in the shape of Texas featuring a saddle sitting on a barbed-wire fence and a small cactus plant arranged near the saddle. Ms. Reva Wright, cousin of the groom, and Ms. Carol McDaniel served the horseshoe-shaped chocolate cake.

Ms. Stacy Dunk registered guests in the bride's book.

The couple will live in Ozona after a wedding trip to Durango, Colorado.

The bride is a graduate of Snyder High School and will be employed by Ozona National Bank in Ozona.

The groom attended Angelo State University, Western Texas College and Texas Tech University. He is employed by Hughes Tool Company in Ozona.

Out of town guests were from Abilene, Houston, Denison, Electra, Odessa, Midland, Talco, Bowie, Hermleigh, and Colorado City. Special guests were Mr. and Mrs. Don Palmer of Houston, aunt and uncle of the bride, and Mariam Carroll of Talco, great-grandmother of the groom.

Step-families make up between 10 and 15 percent of all households, with 8-10 million children, says Diane Welch, a family life education specialist.

Mrs. Welch is on the home economics staff of the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, The Texas A&M University System.

Multi-Style Trends For Back-To-School

By FRANCIS DE SANTIS

NEW YORK (NEA)—This year, children's designers are wooing dollar-conscious mothers with multiple-style trends for back-to-school. The leading choices reflect the new ideas appearing in adult fashion.

Pants, for example, now come in adaptations of new adult styles, such as Ruth Scharf's marine blue suspendered knickers worn with a red, white and blue reindeer-patterned sweater. She also does the jodhpur in red bandanna print. More classic, culottes and shorts bid to replace the still-popular baggy jeans and Western pants.

Folkloric themes come next, taken from the Tyrol, Scandinavia, the Orient and Mexico and generalized peasant dressing. This influence pleases Florence Eiseman, who has long used Tyrolean themes. She tailors a classic Tyrolean jacket and well-cut long pants, side-stripes the pants and edges the jacket in forest green and adds Tyrolean tulip-trim to the frog closing. Another version puts together a Tyrolean jacket with sleeve appliques and a navy pleated skirt.

Orientalism is often expressed in side-closed blouses, as with the purple plaid two-piece at Yves St. Laurent For Girls. But Luv-It stripes the blouse, ruffles the side closing and pairs it with laced-leg jodhpur pants.

As in adult fashions, sweater dressing is a big trend, in both classics and novel fashions. Scenic patterns, argyles, figuratives, feminine embroideries and amusing appliques turn school sweatering into something more than classic. At Little World, the classic front-pleat skirt in wine is paired with a heathered camel pullover jacquard-banded in a wine motif and delicately accented with a scalloped neckline yoke through which a drawstring tie is threaded.

Florence Eiseman includes not only sweaters but jumpers and dresses in her knit collection. She likes them simple, such as her navy princess-cut dress with ribbed crew neck and cuffs, puff-top sleeves and buttoned shoulder. Some designers go two-piece, as in knit tartan plaid kilt and hooded red sweater at Izod For Girls. Ruth Originals also knits a plaid skirt, but the sweater top, with its white bertha collar and red print bow has a blouse feeling.

Sweaters, of course, like shirts, mix well with classic skirts, the new pants styles, and even with many flokloric pieces. Children's designers are ephasizing separates, both for economy and convenience. But many add a bit of sugar and spice in the form of dresses and two-piece dress looks. They call them "little girl" looks.

Victorian froth and lace is still favored, but now comes the French schoolgirl dress, pleated and demurely collared.

PREPARING FOR GARAGE SALE—Ralphene Canon, left, and Janet Brown are preparing for the annual Martha Ann Woman's Club garage sale to be held Saturday, August 15 from 8 a.m. to 3 p.m. at 2700 32nd Street. Other than the Musical Coterie, represented by Mmes. Canon and Brown, there will be 12 other clubs participating. Proceeds will be used toward the maintenance and upkeep of the clubhouse located south of Cogdell Hospital.

Barnard Dean Receives Award

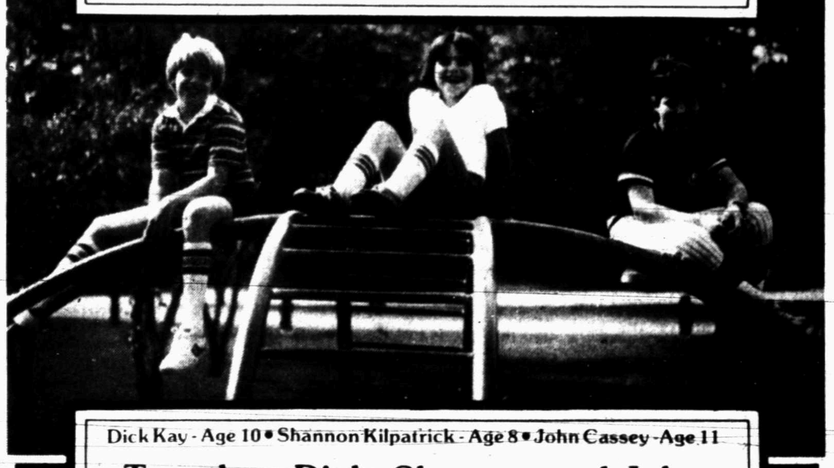

NEW YORK (AP)—Julie V. Marsteller, dean for disabled students and assistant dean of studies at Barnard College, has been named Handicapped Professional Woman of the Year by Pilot Club International, a women's service organization.

Ms. Marsteller, who has muscular distrophy and uses an electric wheelchair, plans to donate the cash prize of $1,500 to Barnard to encourage programs for disabled students.

welcome ajra visitors

This is the beginning of AJRA Week in Snyder, an event that has been a fixture on the calendar for six seasons in a row.

It means that Snyder is playing host for a full week to hundreds of young cowboys and cowgirls who represent the cream of the crop of junior rodeos held throughout the country during the past year. It is an honor that Snyder appreciates, and well it should.

The AJRA National Finals Rodeo ranks up there with the July 4th celebration among the biggest events of the year. Indeed, the AJRA brings more visitors into town for a longer period than any other event.

Frankly, nobody dreamed six years ago when the AJRA selected Snyder as the site for its national finals that it would still be going on at the same site in 1981. But somehow, The AJRA and Snyder seemed to be compatible from the start. This may be attributed to a great extent to the local AJRA committee headed by Ralph Miller. They have become experts in planning and putting on junior rodeos. And the young cowboys and cowgirls, their parents and friends, have been and continue to be congenial visitors.

They are arriving now to begin competition Tuesday night to determine 1981 champions, and it is our privilege to extend a hearty welcome.

romance in peking

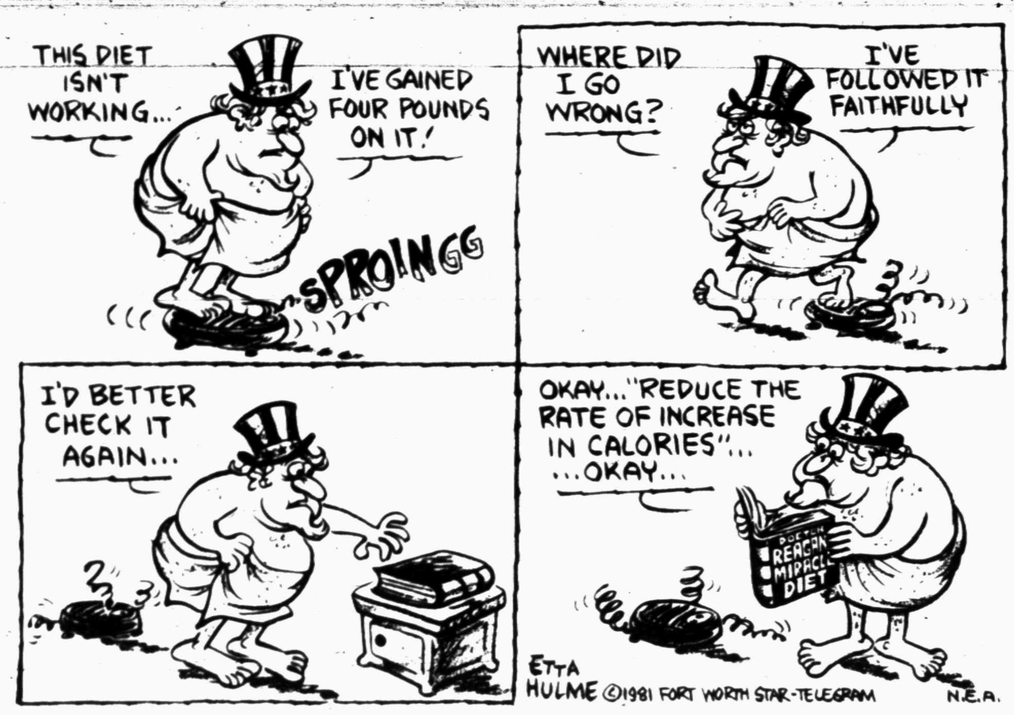

The subject is romance but the dateline, for a big change these days, is not London.

It's Peking and the story concerns the concern of authroities there that a sexual revolution may be undermining the political one the nation is supposed to be devoting its full energies to building.

A wire dispatch reports that the Peking Daily, official publication of the capital's municipal authorities, recently felt called upon to reprimand the younger generation for a "nonchalant attitude" toward affairs of the heart that violates Marxist-Lennist doctrine on the subject. The editorialist was disturbed by a trend among engaged couples to open the "sluice gates of passion" before marriage.

Worse, he revealed, "Some even use love as the pretext to dally with the opposite sex."

And Kipling said the twain would never meet.

The feller on Deep Creek says, "Middle age is when you finally know your way around but you're too tired to go."

Now that President Reagan and conservatives have been successful in a three-year tax cut plan, we hope that this is only the beginning.

It seems that such a major victory could be a spring board to obtaining major cuts in government spending. The tax bill, of course, calls for certain reductions, but we still contend that literally billions could be sliced from the federal budget.

Once again, we have to tip our hat to some Texas Democrats who helped the president achieve his tax cut victory. Our own Charles Stenholm of Stamford started the ball rolling during his first term by helping organize and becoming president of the Conservative Democratic Caucus.

Rep. Phil Gramm put his name on the house bill and Rep. Kent Hance of Lubbock had his name on the final package.

Democratic leaders like Tip O'Neill and Jim Wright have cried foul, but these independent Democrats listened to the folks who elected them.

We find that refreshing. Having a representative in Washington that votes the thoughts of his district has been rare in recent years. The title representative takes on what we suspect was the word's original meaning.

In recent years, the trend has been for elected representatives to be more responsive to party leadership than to the home district. With people like O'Neill and Wright in leadership roles, it is understandable why this country got in such an economic mess.

Frankly, we can almost excuse O'Neill when you consider he represents a traditionally liberal state. However, Jim Wright of Fort Worth has absolutely no excuse. Some call him a moderate, but we call him an outright liberal. Of course, he's brought enough federal, pet projects to Fort Worth, that he is difficult to unseat.

The Wall Street Journal reports that Wright is standing in the wings, waiting for the retirement of Speaker O'Neill. However, in recent weeks, Wright has talked retirement, expressing bitter disappointment over his inability to stop the tax-cut defections in his own party.

Retirement sounds like a good idea. The next best thing would be for the air traffic controllers to remain on strike, and the entire congress not be able to return to Washington.

It's been said that everything worthwhile begins with an idea. Sometimes those ideas leave the listener cold, and sometimes that can be a mistake.

For example, an irate banker demanded that Alexander Graham Bell remove "that toy" from his office. That toy was the telephone.

A Hollywood producer scrawled a curt rejection note on a manuscript that became "Gone With the Wind."

Henry Ford's largest original investor sold all his stock in 1906. Roebuck sold out to Sears for $25,000 in 1895. Today Sears may sell $25,000 worth of goods in 16 seconds.

Beware, cold ideas have a way of warming up.

To The Daily News:

As we all know, the Blue Law is overlooked in many, many towns in Texas. It is not fair to the people of Snyder for the merchants to tell us when, where and what we can buy with our hard-earned money. If a merchant wants to close, that's fine, but leave the ones that want to stay open on Sunday and serve the public alone. Snyder is growing daily and to enforce this law is to hold back progress. Who wants to live where they are told when and what they can buy?

Is the complaint coming to Mr. Greene's office coming from the closed-on-Sunday merchants? Is this fair to Snyder? I appreciate the stores that stay open on Sunday to serve the public and these stores are where I spend my money the other six days of the week.

Linda Dixon

EDITOR'S NOTE—It is not the merchants that are telling you when you may buy certain items. It is a state law and no matter how people feel about it, the law will endure until the legislature repeals it. Enforcement appears to be more vigorous in major cities, such as Dallas, where a court case went all the way to the U. S. Supreme Court which upheld the Texas Blue Law last year. So, it is the law, and any citizen may demand that it be enforced.

To The Daily News:

I would like the help of your paper and your readers. For several years, I have worked on the family names Deaton and Prescott. I find that several lines seem to have moved to West Texas and then no trace. If any of your readers know anything on these names or can provide addresses to get in touch with either Deaton, Prescott, or descendants, I will appreciate it.

The Deaton name seems to have been first in the U. S. in Virginia in 1641. The Prescott name seems to have been in Massachusetts and New England area even before that.

Let me assure everyone that all I seek is information, not any sales or request for money. I will be glad to share what information I have.

We would like to take this opportunity to say that there are many kind and helpful people here in Snyder.

Recently, a dear member of our family collapsed in the front yard. This was very sudden and unexpected.

To Nancy and Pat Alexander, we owe a very special thanks. They were very helpful through his illness in March and were with us during this difficult time.

Dr. Mike Dunham not only left his dental office full of patients to help us, but went back and brought emergency equipment.

Jack Greene, Truett Bryan and G. W. Kichens were some of the many people who offered assistance.

There were a number of other pickups and cars that stopped and we are sorry we can't name each of you. If you were at 2018 37th St. about 2 p. m. July 14, we as a family thank each and everyone of you.

We are sure things turned out the way they were, meant to be, but we want everyone to know how much we appreciate your help.

We wish to thank you all for the food, flowers, calls amnd offers of help.

at wits end

by erma bombeck.

A couple in England who wanted to adopt a child were turned down because they were too happy and officals said, "The child would not be exposed to the negative aspects of life."

Boy, that's something we all fight every day, isn't it?

With a houseful of kids dancing around, spilling sugar, destroying furniture, clogging up the toilet, borrowing your car, and changing clothes every three hours, it's really hard not to "go with the flow" and succumb to terminal happiness.

That's why, early in motherhood, I made up my mind that my kids were going to get all the advantages of being exposed to the "negative aspects of life" if I had to sit up nights.

It was a rotten job, but someone had to do it.

My children have never told me to my face, but I hear from other people they have declared me the best bluebird of misery to ever come down the pike.

I try. "Negative aspects" are more effective when a child is happy.

Example: You have just told your child he can go with you on an airplane to visit your sister in Pennsylvania. He jumps up and down with ecstasy and you say, "You keep bobbing up and down like that and you're going to hit your head on the cupboard, and end up in the hospital with a concussion and you can just stay home."

Prom nights can also be made depressing if you try. "You look wonderful, but if you're not home at curfew, we're going to be waiting up for you and you'll regret this night for the rest of your life."

Even the occasion of a new bicycle is fertile ground for negativism. "Happy birthday! And remember, if you so much as leave this bike unlocked, just once...it's gone. They never find them and you'll be back to pedaling your feet!"

Frankly, it's hard for me to imagine a home where parents never point out life's pitfalls. They never know hostility. They never know anger. What do they talk about?

Sometimes, I feel I spoil my children with so many advantages.

ASTRO-GRAPH

Bernice Bede Osol

August 9, 1981

You will assume a more adventurous personality in the year ahead. Greater courage and daring will replace your previous reserve and reticence.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) You're a natural-born leader to begin with. Today, these qualities will be even more enhanced, especially when dealing with friends socially. Romance, travel, luck, resources, possible pitfalls and career for the coming months are all discussed in your Astro-Graph which begins with your birthday. Mail $1 for each to Astro-Graph, Box 489, Radio City Station, N.Y. 10019. Be sure to specify birth date.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) You could be quite lucky materially today, not so much from your own efforts but by being in the right place at the right time with the right people.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Someone who could prove important to your present plans will be listening very carefully today to what you have to say, and will be suitably impressed.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) You're in a favorable cycle for achieving important goals. Don't be afraid to aim high. You have a number of extra things going for you. One of them is luck.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Transactions you have today with persons who have clout should work out to be extremely beneficial for all concerned.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) You have the ability today to guide things from behind the scenes without making those you are trying to help feel they are being manipulated.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Because of your ability today to separate the good from the bad in suggestions of others, you'll be instrumental in helping a friend solve a complex problem.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Even though this may normally be a day of rest for you, something may develop to place you smack in the middle of a promising enterprise. Pick up your tools and go.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Spend time today with companions who inspire you or those from whom you can learn something. Being bright and enthusiastic types brings out the best in you.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) You're very capable today at managing important matters for others. Without your expert assistance the tasks might not be accomplished.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) You might find yourself playing the matchmaker role today when you spot two people who are well suited for one another, and bring them together.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Before calling in a specialist to repair or make something for your home, take a crack at doing the job yourself. You might save a sizable sum.

Your Birthday

August 10, 1981

This coming year conditions could develop which would free you for greater opportunities to become more social. Several casual relationships might now grow into deep friendships.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) It isn't necessary to try to keep up with the Joneses, because today you already are the star attraction with your peers. You don't need a decoration of wealth. Find out more of what lies ahead for you in the year following your birthday by sending for your copy of Astro-Graph. Mail $1 for each to Astro-Graph, Box 489, Radio City Station, N.Y. 10019. Be sure to specify birth date.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) You'll be proven wrong if you think no one cares about you. Circumstances will develop today to show you how much everyone is on your side.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) You are a charmer. Everybody you come in contact with today will welcome your company. Their visible approval will smother any withdrawal symptoms you may suffer.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Be alert today for opportunities from behind-the-scene sources. One could pertain to bettering your financial picture, the other to the advancement of your career.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Although you may not be aware of the impact of your words, you are able today to say things to others that have an uplifting effect.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) You may not get the understanding you seek from everyone, but no matter. Those in a position to make things easier for you are the ones you will reach.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Don't be too locked-in on plans for the future which you may have already made. A revision to meet present conditions will assure you of success.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) What you do today, you do quite well. Even when confronted with a challenge from one who's not on your side, you're able to put forth your best efforts.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) You're always innovative and full of ideas, but today you seem to need a social atmosphere to bring out the best in you. You become productive in this environment.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) This is an excellent day to accomplish all those tasks crying to get done. Your no-nonsense approach makes the job appear easy.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Not only are you a fast thinker who possesses excellent judgment today, you're also a person who knows how to implement your ideas.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Those ideas to make or save you money which you come up with today are clever. Don't lack faith in your abilities, however, or you may not do anything with them.

WHY TREES DIE

Every summer trees die in our communities. They die beeause they just get old, or they get hit by lightning, or they are attacked by root rot disease, and sometimes pollutants, but in many instances, trees die because of the influence of man.

This influence is felt each time we build a road, put up a subdivision or in any way alter the tree's environment. Subtle changes such as drainage patterns, water tables, in addition to the more drastic and obvious changes like cutting roots, knocking bark off tree trunks, suffocating the roots with excess fill dirt, all combine to either kill the trees or predispose them to a greater risk of infection from diseases or insect attack.

If this weren't enough, there are other influences that occur after the homes are built---things like putting in sprinkler systems which have severely damaged many feeder roots, applying weed and feed fertilizers containing chemicals like atrazine or dicamba, over-watering and even planting a competitive St. Agustine lawn are problems that continue to plague trees.

Often when a large tree becomes ill, the homeowner is amazed that his tree is sick. We have a conception that big means strong and tough, but in reality, the smaller, more vigorous trees are better able to stand changes in the environment and usually have a better chance of surviving.

"To begin with, many trees, probably should be cut down from the start. If they are close to the sidewalk, street, foundations, or the roots have been cut by trenching, there's a good chance they won't live and it could be very expensive to have them removed later. Trees that have had fill dirt placed over the roots in excess of six inches are really in bad shape because, by the time damage is noticed, usually the second or third summer, it may be too late to save the tree. Severe pruning and some system to get oxygen back to the original soil level, either by removing soil or aeriating it, will be necessary to give these trees even a chance. Since the roots are often damaged by many of these activities, pruning the top back to compensate can take a load off the root system.

Good management practices of watering, fertilizing, pruning, if needed, will aid in prolonging the life of trees. But even using the best known management practices we are still going to lose some trees.

Innocent By Reason Of Insanity

FORT MYERS, Fla. (AP) — When she first took the stand at her murder trial, soft-spoken Juanita Maxwell, who is believed to have a split personality, didn't remember much about the beating death of 73-year-old Inez Kelly.

But after undergoing a startling transformation with the coaxing of a social worker, Mrs. Maxwell became a giggling, boisterous "Wanda Weston" who was able to recall every detail of the crime and admitted beating the old woman to death with a lamp in a dispute over a borrowed pen.

Defense lawyers contended that Mrs. Maxwell, a 25-year-old mother of two, couldn't be held responsible for her actions because of her pyschological problem, and on Thursday a judge ruled her innocent by reason of insanity and committed her to a mental hospital.

Lee County Circuit Judge Hugh Starnes didn't specifically rule on whether she had a split personality, but he said he doubted whether a woman of limited intelligence, with less than a high school education, could have outwitted doctors through the battery of psychological tests that Mrs. Maxwell was given.

Mrs. Maxwell sobbed when the verdict was announced, embracing her husband, saying, "I love you" over and over. On the witness stand, as Wanda Weston, she had said she tried to kill him.

From Tax Court Ruling...

Hints For Potential Borrowers

WASHINGTON (AP) — Those who borrow money — and want to get an income tax deduction for the interest on it — could pick up a couple of tips from a tax court ruling handed down this week in a case concerning a Dallas man.

First, if you borrow money, don't let the lender deduct the interest charges from the principal.

Second, if you borrow money to pay for the interest on a previous loan, get the second loan at a different place.

In a ruling made public Thursday, the U.S. Tax Court said money has to be under a person's "unrestricted control" before he can argue that he "paid" the interest to a lender.

If the amount of the interest is simply withheld from the principal at the time a loan is granted; or if a loan is granted in such a way that the lender never loses control of his funds, the IRS can rightfully conclude that interest charges were never "paid," the tax court ruled.

The decision was announced in an appeal brought by H.L. Franklin of Dallas, who retired in December 1979 as chief executive officer of Lone Star Co., a wholesale alcoholic beverage company with branches in several Texas cities.

Franklin took out loans totaling $337,000 in 1973 and 1974 to pay the interest on a $2.2 million loan he obtained in 1972 to comply with a divorce settlement.

But when he claimed a deduction of $120,124.99 on his 1973 income tax return and a deduction of $217,491.27 on his 1974 return, the IRS disagreed and increased his taxable income by that amount for the two years.

Franklin took out his loan of $2,225,000 on March 9, 1972, from Capitol National Bank of Austin, Texas, putting up as collateral, 8,000 shares of Lone Star Co., valued at $3,144,400 or $393.05 per share.

After he deposited the money in an account at the bank, he wrote a check for $1,869,289.67 to his wife, Camille Fryar Franklin, in compliance with the property settlement agreed to in their divorce, to be granted the following day.

Franklin renewed the $2.2 million loan on March 9, 1973 and March 9, 1974, each time taking out other loans at the bank to pay the exact amount of interest due.

In 1973, the bank gave Franklin $120,124.99 and he turned around and wrote a check to the bank for that amount. In 1974, no money was exchanged at all, with the bank merely granting him a loan for $217,491.27 and applying it to the interest due.

The court said the 1973 interest transaction falls within a principle established in the Rubnitz vs. Commissioner, supra case, which said:

"It has been consistently held that a cash basis borrower has not paid interest when the loan transaction is structured so that a loan fee is 'withheld' by the lender from what is called the principal amount of the loan and only the supposed principal amount minus the loan fee is actually made available for the borrowing taxpayer's use."

The court held that in taking out subsequent loans at the same bank, and using the funds to pay interest on the earlier note, Franklin never had the unrestricted control over his funds needed to satisfy the requirements for a cash "payment" needed to get a tax deduction.

"The payment required to secure a deduction is the payment of cash, or its equivalent. The giving of a taxpayers' note is not the equivalent of cash, but only a promise to pay," the tax court said.

"When a taxpayer borrows money from a lender to pay interest due to that same lender, deductibility turns on whether the taxpayer exercises unrestricted control over the borrowed money."

On the other hand, the court said, "interest paid to one lender by a cash basis taxpayer with funds borrowed from a separate lender is deductible," the tax court said.

On March 10, 1975, Franklin borrowed $2,850,000 from the Mercantile National Bank at Dallas on a 91-day note and used the money to pay the $2,847,052.59 — including $259,481.33 in interest — then due Capitol National Bank.

Franklin was able to claim the interest as a deduction in 1975 but not for the earlier years instead.

After giving Franklin the original loan, Capitol National Bank sold portions of it to other Texas banks. Franklin later argued that since portions of his second and third loans were disbursed to those other banks, the interest that went to them should be considered deductible.

The tax court disagreed, saying whatever transactions the bank had with other banks was its own concern and not a matter at issue in his case.

welcome ajra visitors

This is the beginning of AJRA Week in Snyder, an event that has been a fixture on the calendar for six seasons in a row.

It means that Snyder is playing host for a full week to hundreds of young cowboys and cowgirls who represent the cream of the crop of junior rodeos held throughout the country during the past year. It is an honor that Snyder appreciates, and well it should.

The AJRA National Finals Rodeo ranks up there with the July 4th celebration among the biggest events of the year. Indeed, the AJRA brings more visitors into town for a longer period than any other event.

Frankly, nobody dreamed six years ago when the AJRA selected Snyder as the site for its national finals that it would still be going on at the same site in 1981. But somehow, The AJRA and Snyder seemed to be compatible from the start. This may be attributed to a great extent to the local AJRA committee headed by Ralph Miller. They have become experts in planning and putting on junior rodeos. And the young cowboys and cowgirls, their parents and friends, have been and continue to be congenial visitors.

They are arriving now to begin competition Tuesday night to determine 1981 champions, and it is our privilege to extend a hearty welcome.

romance in peking

The subject is romance but the dateline, for a big change these days, is not London.

It's Peking and the story concerns the concern of authroities there that a sexual revolution may be undermining the political one the nation is supposed to be devoting its full energies to building.

A wire dispatch reports that the Peking Daily, official publication of the capital's municipal authorities, recently felt called upon to reprimand the younger generation for a "nonchalant attitude" toward affairs of the heart that violates Marxist-Lennist doctrine on the subject. The editorialist was disturbed by a trend among engaged couples to open the "sluice gates of passion" before marriage.

Worse, he revealed, "Some even use love as the pretext to dally with the opposite sex."

And Kipling said the twain would never meet.

25 YEARS AGO

Snyder's Pony League all-stars lost to Abilene and its Little League all-stars lost to Lubbock by identical 6-4 scores in playoff games.

Police Chief Travis Steele annouced plans for a police school to be conducted here by the engineering extension service of Texas A&M Collge.

A delegation representing the two Snyder Little Leagues asked county commissioners for use of a field in Towle Memorial Park beginning in 1957.

Ralph Yarborough, candidate for governor, brought his campaign to Snyder and made a bid for support by voters who had backed W. Lee O'Daniel and J. Evetts Haley in the first primary.

30 YEARS AGO

Hot-topping began on the first unit of a 200-block paving project in the city.

A heat wave and drought intensified in the Snyder area, with the thermometer hitting a high of 107 degrees.

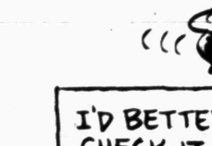

J. D. Scott was appointed to succeed F. W. Berry as city tax assessor-collector and Ray Keenan was named chief of police.

The Ranch House Motel at 1309 Ave. S was gutted by fire.

The feller on Deep Creek says, "Middle age is when you finally know your way around but you're too tired to go."

Now that President Reagan and conservatives have been successful in a three-year tax cut plan, we hope that this is only the beginning.

It seems that such a major victory could be a spring board to obtaining major cuts in government spending. The tax bill, of course, calls for certain reductions, but we still contend that literally billions could be sliced from the federal budget.

Once again, we have to tip our hat to some Texas Democrats who helped the president achieve his tax cut victory. Our own Charles Stenholm of Stamford started the ball rolling during his first term by helping organize and becoming president of the Conservative Democratic Caucus.

Rep. Phil Gramm put his name on the house bill and Rep. Kent Hance of Lubbock had his name on the final package.

Democratic leaders like Tip O'Neill and Jim Wright have cried foul, but these independent Democrats listened to the folks who elected them.

We find that refreshing. Having a representative in Washington that votes the thoughts of his district has been rare in recent years. The title representative takes on what we suspect was the word's original meaning.

In recent years, the trend has been for elected representatives to be more responsive to party leadership than to the home district. With people like O'Neill and Wright in leadership roles, it is understandable why this country got in such an economic mess.

Frankly, we can almost excuse O'Neill when you consider he represents a traditionally liberal state. However, Jim Wright of Fort Worth has absolutely no excuse. Some call him a moderate, but we call him an outright liberal. Of course, he's brought enough federal, pet projects to Fort Worth, that he is difficult to unseat.

The Wall Street Journal reports that Wright is standing in the wings, waiting for the retirement of Speaker O'Neill. However, in recent weeks, Wright has talked retirement, expressing bitter disappointment over his inability to stop the tax-cut defections in his own party.

Retirement sounds like a good idea. The next best thing would be for the air traffic controllers to remain on strike, and the entire congress not be able to return to Washington.

It's been said that everything worthwhile begins with an idea. Sometimes those ideas leave the listener cold, and sometimes that can be a mistake.

For example, an irate banker demanded that Alexander Graham Bell remove "that toy" from his office. That toy was the telephone.

A Hollywood producer scrawled a curt rejection note on a manuscript that became "Gone With the Wind."

Henry Ford's largest original investor sold all his stock in 1906. Roebuck sold out to Sears for $25,000 in 1895. Today Sears may sell $25,000 worth of goods in 16 seconds.

Beware, cold ideas have a way of warming up.

To The Daily News:

As we all know, the Blue Law is overlooked in many, many towns in Texas. It is not fair to the people of Snyder for the merchants to tell us when, where and what we can buy with our hard-earned money. If a merchant wants to close, that's fine, but leave the ones that want to stay open on Sunday and serve the public alone. Snyder is growing daily and to enforce this law is to hold back progress. Who wants to live where they are told when and what they can buy?

Is the complaint coming to Mr. Greene's office coming from the closed-on-Sunday merchants? Is this fair to Snyder? I appreciate the stores that stay open on Sunday to serve the public and these stores are where I spend my money the other six days of the week.

Linda Dixon

EDITOR'S NOTE—It is not the merchants that are telling you when you may buy certain items. It is a state law and no matter how people feel about it, the law will endure until the legislature repeals it. Enforcement appears to be more vigorous in major cities, such as Dallas, where a court case went all the way to the U. S. Supreme Court which upheld the Texas Blue Law last year. So, it is the law, and any citizen may demand that it be enforced.

To The Daily News:

I would like the help of your paper and your readers. For several years, I have worked on the family names Deaton and Prescott. I find that several lines seem to have moved to West Texas and then no trace. If any of your readers know anything on these names or can provide addresses to get in touch with either Deaton, Prescott, or descendants, I will appreciate it.

The Deaton name seems to have been first in the U. S. in Virginia in 1641. The Prescott name seems to have been in Massachusetts and New England area even before that.

Let me assure everyone that all I seek is information, not any sales or request for money. I will be glad to share what information I have.

We would like to take this opportunity to say that there are many kind and helpful people here in Snyder.

Recently, a dear member of our family collapsed in the front yard. This was very sudden and unexpected.

To Nancy and Pat Alexander, we owe a very special thanks. They were very helpful through his illness in March and were with us during this difficult time.

Dr. Mike Dunham not only left his dental office full of patients to help us, but went back and brought emergency equipment.

Jack Greene, Truett Bryan and G. W. Kichens were some of the many people who offered assistance.

There were a number of other pickups and cars that stopped and we are sorry we can't name each of you. If you were at 2018 37th St. about 2 p. m. July 14, we as a family thank each and everyone of you.

We are sure things turned out the way they were, meant to be, but we want everyone to know how much we appreciate your help.

We wish to thank you all for the food, flowers, calls amnd offers of help.

at wits end

by erma bombeck

A couple in England who wanted to adopt a child were turned down because they were too happy and officals said, "The child would not be exposed to the negative aspects of life."

Boy, that's something we all fight every day, isn't it?

With a houseful of kids dancing around, spilling sugar, destroying furniture, clogging up the toilet, borrowing your car, and changing clothes every three hours, it's really hard not to "go with the flow" and succumb to terminal happiness.

That's why, early in motherhood, I made up my mind that my kids were going to get all the advantages of being exposed to the "negative aspects of life" if I had to sit up nights.

It was a rotten job, but someone had to do it.

My children have never told me to my face, but I hear from other people they have declared me the best bluebird of misery to ever come down the pike.

I try. "Negative aspects" are more effective when a child is happy.

Example: You have just told your child he can go with you on an airplane to visit your sister in Pennsylvania. He jumps up and down with ecstasy and you say, "You keep bobbing up and down like that and you're going to hit your head on the cupboard, and end up in the hospital with a concussion and you can just stay home."

Prom nights can also be made depressing if you try. "You look wonderful, but if you're not home at curfew, we're going to be waiting up for you and you'll regret this night for the rest of your life."

Even the occasion of a new bicycle is fertile ground for negativism. "Happy birthday! And remember, if you so much as leave this bike unlocked, just once...it's gone. They never find them and you'll be back to pedaling your feet!"

Frankly, it's hard for me to imagine a home where parents never point out life's pitfalls. They never know hostility. They never know anger. What do they talk about?

Sometimes, I feel I spoil my children with so many advantages.

ASTRO-GRAPH

Bernice Bede Osol

August 9, 1981

You will assume a more adventurous personality in the year ahead. Greater courage and daring will replace your previous reserve and reticence.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) You're a natural-born leader to begin with. Today, these qualities will be even more enhanced, especially when dealing with friends socially. Romance, travel, luck, resources, possible pitfalls and career for the coming months are all discussed in your Astro-Graph which begins with your birthday. Mail $1 for each to Astro-Graph, Box 489, Radio City Station, N.Y. 10019. Be sure to specify birth date.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) You could be quite lucky materially today, not so much from your own efforts but by being in the right place at the right time with the right people.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Someone who could prove important to your present plans will be listening very carefully today to what you have to say, and will be suitably impressed.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) You're in a favorable cycle for achieving important goals. Don't be afraid to aim high. You have a number of extra things going for you. One of them is luck.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Transactions you have today with persons who have clout should work out to be extremely beneficial for all concerned.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) You have the ability today to guide things from behind the scenes without making those you are trying to help feel they are being manipulated.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Because of your ability today to separate the good from the bad in suggestions of others, you'll be instrumental in helping a friend solve a complex problem.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Even though this may normally be a day of rest for you, something may develop to place you smack in the middle of a promising enterprise. Pick up your tools and go.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Spend time today with companions who inspire you or those from whom you can learn something. Being bright and enthusiastic types brings out the best in you.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) You're very capable today at managing important matters for others. Without your expert assistance the tasks might not be accomplished.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) You might find yourself playing the matchmaker role today when you spot two people who are well suited for one another, and bring them together.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Before calling in a specialist to repair or make something for your home, take a crack at doing the job yourself. You might save a sizable sum.

Your Birthday

August 10, 1981

This coming year conditions could develop which would free you for greater opportunities to become more social. Several casual relationships might now grow into deep friendships.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) It isn't necessary to try to keep up with the Joneses, because today you already are the star attraction with your peers. You don't need a decoration of wealth. Find out more of what lies ahead for you in the year following your birthday by sending for your copy of Astro-Graph. Mail $1 for each to Astro-Graph, Box 489, Radio City Station, N.Y. 10019. Be sure to specify birth date.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) You'll be proven wrong if you think no one cares about you. Circumstances will develop today to show you how much everyone is on your side.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) You are a charmer. Everybody you come in contact with today will welcome your company. Their visible approval will smother any withdrawal symptoms you may suffer.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Be alert today for opportunities from behind-the-scene sources. One could pertain to bettering your financial picture, the other to the advancement of your career.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Although you may not be aware of the impact of your words, you are able today to say things to others that have an uplifting effect.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) You may not get the understanding you seek from everyone, but no matter. Those in a position to make things easier for you are the ones you will reach.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Don't be too locked-in on plans for the future which you may have already made. A revision to meet present conditions will assure you of success.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) What you do today, you do quite well. Even when confronted with a challenge from one who's not on your side, you're able to put forth your best efforts.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) You're always innovative and full of ideas, but today you seem to need a social atmosphere to bring out the best in you. You become productive in this environment.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) This is an excellent day to [illegible] tasks crying to get done. Your no-nonsense approach makes the job appear easy.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Not only are you a fast thinker who possesses excellent judgment today, you're also a person who knows how to implement your ideas.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Those ideas to make or save you money which you come up with today are clever. Don't lack faith in your abilities, however, or you may not do anything with them.

WHY TREES DIE

Every summer trees die in our communities. They die because they just get old, or they get hit by lightning, or they are attacked by root rot disease, and sometimes pollutants, but in many instances, trees die because of the influence of man.

This influence is felt each time we build a road, put up a subdivision or in any way alter the tree's environment. Subtle changes such as drainage patterns, water tables, in addition to the more drastic and obvious changes like cutting roots, knocking bark off tree trunks, suffocating the roots with excess fill dirt, all combine to either kill the trees or predispose them to a greater risk of infection from diseases or insect attack.

If this weren't enough, there are other influences that occur after the homes are built---things like putting in sprinkler systems which have severely damaged many feeder roots, applying weed and feed fertilizers containing chemicals like atrazine or dicamba, over-watering and even planting a competitive St. Agustine lawn are problems that continue to plague trees.

Often when a large tree becomes ill, the homeowner is amazed that his tree is sick. We have a conception that big means strong and tough, but in reality, the smaller, more vigorous trees are better able to stand changes in the environment and usually have a better chance of surviving.

To begin with, many trees probably should be cut down from the start. If they are close to the sidewalk, street, foundations, or the roots have been cut by trenching, there's a good chance they won't live and it could be very expensive to have them removed later. Trees that have had fill dirt placed over the roots in excess of six inches are really in bad shape because, by the time damage is noticed, usually the second or third summer, it may be too late to save the tree. Severe pruning and some system to get oxygen back to the original soil level, either by removing soil or aeriating it, will be necessary to give these trees even a chance. Since the roots are often damaged by many of these activities, pruning the top back to compensate can take a load off the root system.

Good management practices of watering, fertilizing, pruning, if needed, will aid in prolonging the life of trees. But even using the best known management practices we are still going to lose some trees.

Innocent By Reason Of Insanity

FORT MYERS, Fla. (AP) — When she first took the stand at her murder trial, soft-spoken Juanita Maxwell, who is believed to have a split personality, didn't remember much about the beating death of 73-year-old Inez Kelly.

But after undergoing a startling transformation with the coaxing of a social worker, Mrs. Maxwell became a giggling, boisterous "Wanda Weston" who was able to recall every detail of the crime and admitted beating the old woman to death with a lamp in a dispute over a borrowed pen.

Defense lawyers contended that Mrs. Maxwell, a 25-year-old mother of two, couldn't be held responsible for her actions because of her pyschological problem, and on Thursday a judge ruled her innocent by reason of insanity and committed her to a mental hospital.

Lee County Circuit Judge Hugh Starnes didn't specifically rule on whether she had a split personality, but he said he doubted whether a woman of limited intelligence, with less than a high school education, could have outwitted doctors through the battery of psychological tests that Mrs. Maxwell was given.

Mrs. Maxwell sobbed when the verdict was announced, embracing her husband, saying, "I love you" over and over. On the witness stand, as Wanda Weston, she had said she tried to kill him.

From Tax Court Ruling...

Hints For Potential Borrowers

WASHINGTON (AP) — Those who borrow money and want to get an income tax deduction for the interest on it — could pick up a couple of tips from a tax court ruling handed down this week in a case concerning a Dallas man.

First, if you borrow money, don't let the lender deduct the interest charges from the principal.

Second, if you borrow money to pay for the interest on a previous loan, get the second loan at a different place.

In a ruling made public Thursday, the U.S. Tax Court said money has to be under a person's "unrestricted control" before he can argue that he "paid" the interest to a lender.

If the amount of the interest is simply withheld from the principal at the time a loan is granted; or if a loan is granted in such a way that the lender never loses control of his funds; the IRS can rightfully conclude that interest charges were never "paid," the tax court ruled.

The decision was announced in an appeal brought by H.L. Franklin of Dallas, who retired in December 1979 as chief executive officer of Lone Star Co., a wholesale alcoholic beverage company with branches in several Texas cities.

Franklin took out loans totaling $337,000 in 1973 and 1974 to pay the interest on a $2.2 million loan he obtained in 1972 to comply with a divorce settlement.

But when he claimed a deduction of $120,124.99 on his 1973 income tax return and a deduction of $217,491.27 on his 1974 return, the IRS disagreed and increased his taxable income by that amount for the two years.

Franklin took out his loan of $2,225,000 on March 9, 1972, from Capitol National Bank of Austin, Texas, putting up as collateral, 8,000 shares of Lone Star Co., valued at $3,144,400 or $393.05 per share.

After he deposited the money in an account at the bank, he wrote a check for $1,869,289.67 to his wife, Camille Fryar Franklin, in compliance with the property settlement agreed to in their divorce, to be granted the following day.

Franklin renewed the $2.2 million loan on March 9, 1973 and March 9, 1974, each time taking out other loans at the bank to pay the exact amount of interest due.

In 1973, the bank gave Franklin $120,124.99 and he turned around and wrote a check to the bank for that amount. In 1974, no money was exchanged at all, with the bank merely granting him a loan for $217,491.27 and applying it to the interest due.

The court said the 1973 interest transaction falls within a principle established in the Rubnitz vs. Commissioner, supra case, which said:

"It has been consistently held that a cash basis borrower has not paid interest when the loan transaction is structured so that a loan fee is 'withheld' by the lender from what is called the principal amount of the loan and only the supposed principal amount minus the loan fee is actually made available for the borrowing taxpayer's use."

The court held that in taking out subsequent loans at the same bank, and using the funds to pay interest on the earlier note, Franklin never had the unrestricted control over his funds needed to satisfy the requirements for a cash "payment" needed to get a tax deduction.

"The payment required to secure a deduction is the payment of cash or its equivalent. The giving of a taxpayers' note is not the equivalent of cash, but only a promise to pay," the tax court said.

"When a taxpayer borrows money from a lender to pay interest due to that same lender, deductibility turns on whether the taxpayer exercises unrestricted control over the borrowed money."

On the other hand, the court said, "interest paid to one lender by a cash basis taxpayer with funds borrowed from a separate lender is deductible," the tax court said.

On March 10, 1975, Franklin borrowed $2,850,000 from the Mercantile National Bank at Dallas on a 91-day note and used the money to pay the $2,847,052.59 — including $259,481.33 in interest then due Capitol National Bank.

Franklin was able to claim the interest as a deduction in 1975 but not for the earlier years instead.

After giving Franklin the original loan, Capitol National Bank sold portions of it to other Texas banks. Franklin later argued that since portions of his second and third loans were disbursed to those other banks, the interest that went to them should be considered deductible.

The tax court disagreed, saying whatever transactions the bank had with other banks was its own concern and not a matter at issue in his case.

Oil Activity Continues In Scurry Co.

Par Producing Co. of Snyder will drill the No. 1 Bech Unit as a location west stepout to the reopener and lone producer in the Towle (Canyon) field of Scurry County, three miles northeast of Snyder.

Location is 1,400 feet from the south and 100 feet from the east lines of Section 119, Block 3, H&GN survey. Contract depth is 7,300 feet.

The re-opener, the firm's No. 1 Bech, was finaled Oct. 20, 1980 to pump 60 barrels of 41 gravity oil, with gas-oil ratio of 100-1, from open hole at 7,158-68 feet.

The Diamond M multipay field of Scurry County gained its current fourth Wichita-Albany producer and a location south extension to that pay with completion of Monsanto Co. No. 77-1 McLaughlin, 12 miles southwest of Snyder, to pump 52 barrels of 31 gravity oil, plus 285 barrels of water, with gas-oil ratio of 480-1.

Production was through perforations at 3,674-829 feet, which had been acidized with 2,500 gallons.

Location is 1,650 feet from the south and 30 feet from the east lines of Section 197, Block 97, H&TC survey.

The Myrtle, North (Strawn and Wolfcamp) field of Borden County gained its sixth Strawn oil producer and a four-mile south extension to that pay with completion of Texas Oil & Gas Corp. of Midland No. 1 Miller U, ⅝ mile south-southwest of the opener and lone producer of the Lucy, Northeast (Strawn oil) field and 15 miles east of Gail, to pump 60 barrels of 44.8 gravity oil, plus 50 barrels of water.

Production was through perforations at 7,648-732 feet in the Ellenburger, with 4½-inch casing set at 8,294 feet, and plugged back to 7,764 feet.

Location is 467 feet from the north and 2,300 feet from the west lines of Section 353, Block 97, H&TC survey.

John H. Hendrix Corp. of Midland will drill the No. 1 Sterling Williams, a 10,200-foot wildcat in Borden County, 10 miles northwest of Gail.

Site is one-location east of the depleted Ellenburger and later Mississippian opener and lone producer from those pays and surrounded by Spraberry production in the Borden field.

Location is 1,980 feet from the north and 660 feet from the east lines of Section 45, Block 32-6n, EL&RR survey.

The dual opener, Sinclair Oil & Gas Co. (now Atlantic Richfield Co.) No. 1 Sterling Williams, was finaled June 3, 1949, for 663.5 barrels of 42.8 gravity oil, with gas-oil ratio of 660-1, through Ellenburger perforations at 9,903-33 feet. It was recompleted July 7, 1952 to pump 99 barrels of 39.9 gravity oil with gas-oil ratio of 440-1, through Mississippian perforations at 9,815-70 feet.

Hinkle Exploration Ltd, of Houston will drill the No. 1 H. L. Reed, an 8,100 foot wildcat in Garza County, one mile west of Justiceburg.

The project is 1⅝ miles northeest of the Tobe multipay field, separated by a depleted producer and 2⅜ miles south and slightly west of the Artbow (Strawn andEllenburger) field, separated by and ½ mile south of an 8,100-foot Ellenburger falure.

Location is 1,527 feet from the north and 100 feet from the east lines of Section 32, Block 6, H&GN survey.

The Tobe field has one Wolfcamp well producing at 4,660 feet, one Mississippian well at 7,726 feet; and currently two Strawn wells, producing at 7,451 feet.

The failure, Miller Exploration Co. No. 1 W. T. Parchman Estate, was abandoned May 12, 1978.

Defense Budget Sets Record

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Pentagon, in a new record five-year budget plan, wants to spend $4 a day for every man, women and child in the country to maintain the nation's military security.

The $1.6 trillion total sought for fiscal years 1983 through 1987 works out to $876 million per day, or $608,500 per minute.

Stretching the Reagan administration's push to "re-arm America" to include another year, the plan represents a $200 billion increase over the Reagan administration's 1982-86 program as outlined to Congress last March.

The huge boosts are being driven by costly administration aims to develop and produce a fleet of advanced strategic bombers, increase the size of the Navy by 150 ships, install a new intercontinental missile system and add about 200,000 more men and women to the uniformed forces.

The services have submitted the proposals in line with top-level Pentagon instructions to stay within the administration's goal of sustaining 7 percent a year in "real growth" after allowing for inflation.

Senior Pentagon officials are about to start detailed reviews of these proposals, with particular emphasis on the detailed fiscal 1983 budget which will go to Congress in January, along with a new five-year projection.

Pentagon spokesman Ben Welles predicted "there will have to be chopping and paring" of some programs.

John R. Thompson Operating Inc. of Abilene will drill the No. 1 Alpha Hamlin, a 3,900-foot wildcat in Kent County, ⅝-mile east-southeat of the Wallace Ranch, Northeast Noodle Creek fiel and seven miles south of Jayton.

Location is 467 feet from the north and west lines of Section 418, Block 2, H&TC survey.

The Wallace Ranch, Northeast field, produces from 3,841 feet.

Stringer Oil & Gas of San Antonio, will drill the No. 1 A. C. Cairns, a 7,800 foot wildcat in Kent County, five miles southwest of Clairemont.

The venture is ⅝-mile south of a 7,475 failure, 1½ miles south-southeast of the depleted one-well Clairemont, West (Strawn oil) field.

Location is 1,000 feet from the north and 980 feet from the east lines of Section 52, Block G, W&NW Survey.

The failure, Guest Energy Corp. No. 1 O'Donnell-Jones, was abandoned Aug. 3, 1980.

Energy Reserves Group Inc. will drill the No. 1 Harris, a 4,550-foot wildcat in Kent County, one mile east of Girard.

The project is ¾-mile north-northeastof a 4,294-foot failure, five miles north-northeast of the current one-well Hobert (Strawn) field.

Location is 1,320 feet from the south and east lines of Section 86, Block 1, H&GN survey. The failure, Atlantic Refining Co. No. 1 Hastings, was abandoned Oct. 25, 1963.

The Boomerang (Pennsylvanian reef) field of Kent County gained its current eigth producer and a ½-mile south extension with completion of Ike Lovelady Inc., Midland, No. 1 CRM, seven miles northwest of Jayton.

It was finaled to pump 52 barrels of 39.5 gravity oil, plus 75 barrels of water, with gas-oil ratio of 1,153-1.

Production was through perforations at 6,636-96 feet, which had ben acidized with 250 gallons.

Earlier it had been tested through perforations at 6,731-39 feet. Location is 2,173 feet from the south and 893 feet from the east lines of Section 2, Block 2, H&GN survey.

Financial & tax planning

Don't Ignore the IRS

All members of the taxpaying public are subject to receiving various notices from the Internal Revenue Service. All such notices should be taken to your tax return preparer immediately upon receipt.

Many of these notices are routine correspondence concerning your file. Others may concern the examination of part or all of your tax return for a specific year. Delaying your reponse to notices or ignoring them completely will complicate an otherwise simple matter.

If the IRS is requestion substantiatin for various deductions claimed on your return they may disallow all such deductions and "assess" taxes in the absence of a response to repeated requests for information.

Once an IRS examination has gone from the investigative (audit) stage to the assessment (billing stage, the IRS can require that you pay the assessed taxes and sue the government for a refund. Timely correspondence will prevent an assessment before you have "presented your side." If you are entitled to most of the deductions on your tax return as filed, you do not want an assessment which is determined by a full disallowance of those deductions.

IRS agents should be looking only for the facts. If the facts they find are the same as those you reported, you will not be assessed additional tax.

Correspondence from the IRS is an invonvenience and an irritation to all taxpayers who file their returns in a prudent manner. IRS examinations seem to be a necessary part of what makes our "voluntary" tax system function.

Officers Picked At SCD Meeting

Officers were elected and experimental vineyards were toured at a meeting of the West Texas Association of Soil and Water Conservation District directors held at Bakersfield.

Representing the Upper Colorado SWCD were Carl Williams, Walter Stirl, Leon Sterling and W. L. Wilson Jr., directors, and Erwin A. Pavlik, district conservationist for the Snyder Feld Office, Soil Conservation Service.

Also attending was Mrs. Nell Wilon.

Jimmy Harrison of Mitchell SWCD is the new president of the association. Johnny Weatherby of Middle Concho SWCD, was named president-elect, and Otto Gott Schalk, Runnels SWCD, as elected secretary-treasurer.

The Escondido Vineyard Development program is to determine the feasibility of commercial grape and wine industries in Texas.

In 1974, the University Lands-Surface Leasing Office, under the direction of Bill Carr, decided to find better ways to utilize some of its land that possessed renewable underground water supplies and to find better ways to utilize this water.

They began their vineyard operation in 1975 with a 10-acre "valley" vineyard and a two-acre "hillside" vineyard in Culberson County.

The vineyard operation has grown slowly, and in 1980, the board of regents of the University of Texas approved the beginning of a major commercial grape industry on university land. This program is called the Escondido Vineyard Development and consists of a step-wise development of some 960 acres over four years. Last February, some 160 acres were planted, making this the largest single grape planting in Texas.

Scar Is Badge Of Honor...

Camp Established For Young Heart Patients

GREAT BARRINGTON, Mass. (AP) — Snuggled in the Berkshires is an idyllic summer camp, a place where children hike and swim, fish and laugh.

They take nature walks in the morning, skipping across still dewy grass, and gobble peanut butter and jelly sandwiches at noon. When their weary counselors put them to bed at night, they are still bubbling with energy.

No one pays money to come here — there is a steeper price. The Madden Open Hearts Farm is limited to children who have had open heart surgery.

"The only thing you need is a scar to get in," said Keith Taub, 14, a Levittown, N.Y., boy.

"Some of the children come here shy. They don't want to show their scars to anybody at first," said Sue Coulon, the camp director. "But here, everybody has a scar and nobody tries to hide it. They're just like anybody else."

The camp was founded in 1960 by the late Edward Madden, operator of a New York blood bank and a heart surgery patient himself. Its joy, say those who come here, is that it provides an escape from a life where classmates, friends and even family treat them differently because of their surgery.

"When it gets hot, I like to take off my shirt and not have people say, 'Oh, you have a weird scar,'" said Danny Seplow of Newton, N.J., a 13-year-old who has had three operations for a weak heart valve. "I'd rather have an ugly scar than be dead."

"Nobody tries to stop you from doing anything here," said Christine Zawacki, a 14-year-old from Port Jefferson, N.Y., who enjoys hiking in the mountains that encircle the 400-acre farm.

Elizabeth Fields, 14, went to regular summer camp once. She didn't go back.

"The other kids looked at me like there was something wrong with me," she recalled. "They wouldn't let me in any games, and I was always the last one chosen for the softball team. In school, your teachers think you're a slower learner.

"Before I came here," she added, "I thought I was the only kid who had had open heart surgery."

The farm accommodates fewer children than most summer camps — 22 for each two-week session — and those who attend are given close attention. The camp accepts no children who require elaborate medical care.

A hospital with a heart specialist is just five miles away, but his services have never been required, Mrs. Coulon said.

Even with such careful supervision, the concept Madden envisioned 21 years ago survives.

"The Maddens wanted to get the children out in the country so they could run around and build up their strength," said Mrs. Coulon.

"Most summer camps are very large and the children are constantly on the move. We're more like one big family here," she said. "If a child can't participate in something or tires easily, we let them sit it out."

Most of the children required surgery to correct conditions such as birth defects or damage from diseases like rheumatic fever or staph infections. Several have had more than one operation, and some have come to the camp as soon as three months after surgery.

Many come from the metropolitan New York area, where Madden recruited his first campers at Long Island's St. Francis Hospital, one of the few hospitals in the United States then performing heart surgery on children.

More children are operated on today, but Mrs. Coulon says the camp, funded through an endowment in Madden's will, still has trouble finding enough to fill the almost 90 openings each summer.

"Kids just have not heard about it," said Mrs. Coulon. The camp has no formal advertising program and depends mostly on word-of-mouth to reach its campers.

The camp is officially limited to children aged 7 to 12, but older campers can attend because of the vacancies. Some have been to the farm for seven years running.

Some overprotective parents are hesitant to send their children.

"One mother who was thinking about sending her daughter told me, 'She's ready, but I'm not,'" Mrs. Coulon recalled.

The Madden campers do not hesitate to discuss their heart problems, and resent those who view their surgery as a handicap.

"People think we can't do that much," said Fred Cipriani, a perky, 13-year-old boy with a crewcut who has had two operations in nine years. "The other kids think they're in better shape, but we could leave them in the dust. We play baseball better and we're better swimmers, too."

Not surprisingly, some children are envious of those who attend the Madden camp.

"My sister wants to paint a scar on herself so she can come," Christine said. "My friends are jealous. They think I'm lucky."

"Lucky?" Fred replied. "We're lucky to be alive."

Workers Begin Fla. Spraying

TAMPA, Fla. (AP) — A six-block area surrounding a calamondin tree where three Mediterranean fruit flies were found was targeted for pesticide spraying as Florida officials mount an assault on the pests they say threaten their $4 billion produce industry.

State attorneys in Tallahassee, meanwhile, were going before U.S. District Judge William Stafford today with a request to let Florida resume banning shipments of produce from California. Officials believe the medflies found in Tampa were brought in from California.

"What we are asking for is a 16-day embargo, which we think gives an eminently reasonable time to take eradication measures and determine the extent of the infestation," said Florida Attorney General Jim Smith.

A federal judge in Panama City, Fla., last month lifted Florida's stringent quarantine against California fruit and vegetables.

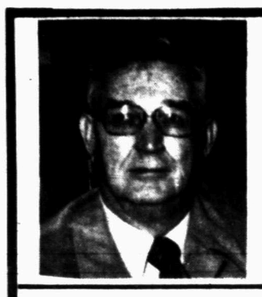

No new medflies were found Thursday, but state officials said it was too early to tell the extent of the infestation. Spraying was to start today.

Meanwhile, in California's Santa Clara Valley, where aerial spraying against the fruit flies has been under way since July 14, a fertile fruit fly was discovered outside the 267-square-mile spray zone — a development officials there termed "serious."

It was the second discovery of a fertile fly in two days, medfly project officials said in Los Gatos, Calif. The fly was found in a citrus tree in San Martin about 11 miles south of the spray area.

AT SUL ROSS ORIENTATION—Richard Reed and Cathey Cypert of Snyder were among students attending freshman orientation at Sul Ross State University. Seventy-nine incoming freshmen spent the weekend on the campus meeting university officials, visiting with faculty members and touring the campus. They also participated in career and educational planning sessions.

Insurance FACTS

by Tom Deffebach

Once the insured and his agent have determined the total amount of insurance to be carried on a home, there is a question as to the value of detached buildings and structures on the property. The burden of decision concerning the amounts of insurance for which to arrance, for most kinds of property are automatically determined. Detached garages and other outbuildings are protected for specific percentages of the amount guarding the house. Additional living expense insurance, designed to cover the added cost of living away while a building is unlivable, can be incorporated at a percentage of the coverage on the dwelling.

The amount of insurance on your home should be updated periodically in these days of inflation. Come in and let us at THE DEFFEBACH AGENCY help you determine the total amount of coverage needed. We're here at 1810 27th, 573-5611 to provide you with any assistance you require. Hours: 9a.m-5p.m. Mon. thru Fri.
