G. L. Pfifer Gets First Okla. Bale

RANDLETT FARMER BRINGS IN FIRST 1939 COTTON

G. L. Pfifer, who resides 3 miles east of Randlett, Okla., brought the first bale of 1939 cotton to Burk Burnett last Friday afternoon. The bale weighed 480 pounds, and was from 2000 pounds of snap bollies. The bale was ginned by the Farmers Cooperative gin and was purchased by B. W. Wiley, of Wichita Falls. According to Mr. Holman, manager of the gin, the bale was wrapped in bottom bagging. He predicted that most of the cotton this year will be wrapped in cotton bagging instead of jute as heretofore. He and Mr. Duvall, manager of the Burk Burnett gin, predict that this year's crop will equal if not exceed last year's crop when over two thousand bales were ginned.

Festival Head Asks For Displays Women's Dept.

Mrs. J. J. Blackstone, chairman of the committee for arrangements of the exhibits for the Women's department of the Harvest Festival, has asked that all women in this trade area who plan to enter canned fruit and vegetables, baking, or handwork, have their exhibits at the Barrow-Grace showrooms before nine o'clock Friday morning, September 15th.

Judges have already been selected and all exhibits will be judged promptly at nine o'clock. Mrs. Blackstone states that according to advance information, there will be an unusually effective display in the Women's department this year. She is especially anxious for every woman in this area who has anything which she might display to contact her. Catalogs are being mailed out this week.

After holding the Oil Belt league lead since the Electra Oilers withdrew the State Hospital Mules suffered a 4-2 upset at the hands of the Burk Burnett Dogies Sunday afternoon at Spudder park and found themselves in a tie with Iowa Park as the regular season ended.

The playoffs are scheduled to start next Sunday but some method of breaking the tie will have to be determined first. The leaders are to play the fourth-place Wichita Falls Cats, with the second place team playing third-place Burk Burnett.

Dave Gruntley's six-hit pitching and four unearned Burk Burnett runs spoiled the Mules off their pinacle. The Mules were coming from behind in the late stages of the game as Brantley began weakening, but Skipper Zink rushed in to save the contest. With three bases full and none out, he retired the next three men in order.

The Dogies bunched four of their seven hits with four of the five State Hospital errors to score four times in the fifth and sixth.

Finance Committee Adds Punch To The Terrapin Race

Oscar Kemp of the finance committee of the Harvest Festival announces that they have decided on a new way to conduct the Terrapin Race which gives more people an opportunity to participate in it and will be more interesting from the spectator viewpoint, too.

Arrangements are being made to hold the race on the athletic field at the high school. A large circle, 100 feet in diameter, will be laid off and the circumference will be staked off in spaces just wide enough for the terrapins to crawl through. Each space is numbered and tickets are to be sold on the spaces at $1.00 each. The spaces will be numbered from one to six hundred. The terrapins are released in the center of the circle and prizes will go to the holders of tickets on the first three spaces through which they crawl.

Mr. Kemp states that the finance committee believes that more people will be able to witness the race, since the circle is to be so much larger this year. The tickets will be sold to business houses or to individuals, and there is no limit set on the number you may buy. The money from the sale of tickets will be used to finance the Harvest Festival. They will be on sale within the next few days.

The finance committee is composed of J. V. Brookshier, chairman; Oscar Kemp, R. P. (Buck) Zimmerman, and Paul Browning.

Orange Shirts Arrive

The shirts to be worn by the business men on their booster trip to the surrounding towns on Sept. 7, have arrived and are real pretty. They are deep orange trimmed in black and are to be worn with a black tie and a big hat trimmed in black, and of course pants, etc. that go to make up your wearing apparel. It is rumored that a large bull pen is to be erected and every business man who does not wear an orange shirt during the Harvest Festival will be put in the bull pen and made stay there until he sends for a shirt. These shirts can be bought from your local dry goods merchants.

Never argue with a woman whose shoes are killing her.

We understand that it is a married woman who is keeping Mike Begun's finger nails polished with a bright red finger nail polish, and several waitresses are beginning to get jealous.

We understand that several dignified Lion's faces were very red during the program last Tuesday night when a torch singer sang several red hot numbers. We are reliably informed that Howard Bentley and Blanche Butler spent one whole night making the rounds of the night clubs to get this program.

A certain prominent business man told his wife that he was going fishing and went home and changed to his fishing clothes and later to a certain tailor shop and changed again and spent the night in Wichita Falls.

We don't understand Gov. O'Daniel's continued exclusion of himself from the group he is so fond of terming "professional politicians." He's getting paid for what he does, isn't he? And we always thought if you took pay for what you do, you lose your amateur standing.

Did you see one of the members of the local law enforcement agency enter a beer parlor last Saturday and partake of a portion of the intoxicant with one who had already imbibed too freely? It appears to this reporter that that law's duty should have been to hang the inebriate by his toes until he was drained of the influence of the drink; but instead he aided and abetted the person, whose steps had become too unsteady and his speech not quite so steady, to become more inebriated by his invitation to drink.

Must Be Getting Ready For Festival

A man walked into the Famous Wednesday and while the clerks were busy tried on a pair of boots and calmly walked out the back door. He must be preparing for the rodeo during the harvest festival.

During the last four years, the Bureau of Industrial Chemistry at the University of Texas has developed a process for the manufacture of a new structural building material from gypsum and sugar cane bagasse.

Beauty Operator Gets Patent On Hair Roller

J. D. Jones, who with his wife are operating the beauty shop at the Allison Barber Shop, has invented and patented a hair roller for curling hair, which according to reports will make him wealthy. The new gadget is patented under the name of Master Curler, and according to information received this week he has a contract to serve a large chain store corporation, who operate 2600 stores in the United States, with 18 dozen for each store, at a contract price of several dollars per dozen.

It is also reported that he turned down an offer of $10,000 for one-tenth interest in the sales of this new invention. Mr. and Mrs. Lewis came to Burk Burnett several months ago and opened the Allison Beauty Shop and it was while here that he conceived the idea of this new hair curler.

A complete musical program has been arranged for that time which will feature seven numbers by the orchestra. The local women were recently chosen as members of the orchestra by the director, Arthur Davis.

Kenneth Tucker, proprietor of the Tucker Gulf Service Station, announces this week that he is offering the entire line of Goodrich Tires at a great reduction from now until Labor Day at midnight.

Mr. Tucker invites his many friends and customers to come in and see him between now and then and re-tire your car with new Goodrich tires. THE PETROLEUM PROBLEM

H. C. Weiss, president of the Humble Oil & Refining Company, has called attention to a fact which should be known to every Texan who is concerned about the shut-down of 87,000 oil wells in Texas. "In our opinion," he says, "the flood of oil from Illinois and Louisiana, most of which is being produced wastefully, in violation of conservation principles, is primarily responsible for market conditions which necessitated price reductions."

The shut-down order by the Texas Railroad Commission, effective August 15th, was speedily followed by a similar action in five of the midcontinent states, the five governors of five states cooperating.

Certainly the turn of events was not expected when Sinclair first cut the price of crude, and it is unfortunate that multiplied thousands of Texas oil field workers, service station operators and others in every walk and work of life in Texas are to suffer from the shut-down action. But it will ultimately result in just that and further raise the question in which John Public is concerned, "Will it raise the price of Crude?" The chances are it will, and thus again Texas Railroad Commission's blunder will be apparent to the innocent onlooker. Another outcome to be deplored in Texas is that the loss to the State and Federal government in taxes, effecting perhaps a hundred million barrels of crude, places the state nearer control of Texas oil fields and other natural resources by the Federal government. The shut-down order strikes a fatal blow at many small independents who were already on a shoe string basis.

It was a problem, of course, and the solution should have been constructive rather than destructive. An order for a shut-down of oil wells is as unreasonable as "sit down strikes" or as sinful as plowing up cotton and killing cattle in a world of rags and hunger.

LABOR'S INSPIRATION

Since the observance in 1884 of the first Labor Day as a holiday for all the millions of Americans who live by the sweat of their brow, a little more than half a century has elapsed. Fifty years is a long time measured by the age of men and women, but it but a breath in comparison with the ages during which Labor beat with bleeding hands against the bulwarks of special privilege and favoritism in an endeavor to enjoy the fruits of honorable toil, to reap where it had sown.

The Labor movement in this country has been a most powerful agency in causing the people of this country to realize more fully the unity of creation, the brotherhood of man. If we ruthlessly disregard the rights and welfare of those who have woven their very lives into the cause of labor and its attendant development of industry in the interest of a greater diffusion of the fruits of progress, the consequences will be such as to cause some of those who sneeringly suggest such a course to whine and howl most loudly. Make no mistake, we cannot disregard the welfare of any principles of our people without harming the whole of society. The principles of justice require the greatest consideration for every toiler in the land. Justice is the aim of labor. Justice is the aim of democracy and that democracy is a brotherhood. In order to have civilization at all, each man must regard the welfare of all others as his own welfare. We must demonstrate the futility of dependence on tooth and claw for existence.

Burkburnett History

As revealed by the files of The Star 10 years ago.

The Burk Junior Band of 25 pieces will enter the State-wide Band contest at the Dallas Fair on October 18th.

According to a report from the local gins Thursday evening the cotton crop for this and surrounding communities is about half gathered. The total amount of cotton ginned to date is 2623 bales and is 95 per cent bolls but grades middling. The price ranges from 16 to 17 cents.

The Burkburnett Bulldog grid-ders will play their first conference game of the season with Chillicothe today, October 11.

Fourteen negroes and three white men were arrested in a space in a large open field near Burkburnett at about three o'clock Sunday morning when members of the sheriff's department surprised a group who are alleged to have been gambling with cards and dice.

Robert Laney has returned to his home from Ft. Worth where he underwent an operation on his leg which was injured last spring in an automobile accident.

The Tidal Oil Corporation, through generosity of the main office at Tulsa, enjoyed a company picnic at Prescott farm last Saturday. There were about one hundred and fifty people present.

Those Ditches Again

By T. C. RICHARDSON, Assoc. Editor, Farm and Ranch Breeder-Feeder Association

Some of our readers already have trench silos, some others are perhaps tired of hearing about these "ditches" to bury feed in; and still others are just waiting until a "more convenient season" for trying out the idea. Those who are already using trench silos, or any other kind, need no convincing, and our apology for continually harping on the subject is that there are still too many "unconverted" who are missing the benefits to be had from feed stored in this manner.

There can't be anything seriously wrong with the trench silo idea when it has been adopted by thousands of farmers and ranchmen throughout the Southwest within a very few years, and we have yet to hear of one who would go back to the old way after using ensilage a season or two. Texas alone had 260 miles of these "ditches" in use the first of this year, and thousands more were dug to store the early feed crops during the past summer.

There's more truth than poetry in the jingle sent out last year by the Dallas office of F.S.A.

Farmer Jim's nobody's fool. And though he didn't go to school he learned a thing or two. The neighbors came for miles around.

To see Jim's silo in the ground—And now they've got 'em too!

There's no mystery and no complex "figurin'" about a trench silo. Here is in the a-b-c's, from the F.S.A. circular:

"Fix width and depth according to the number of livestock to be fed—length to suit the feeding period. Each cow needs four square feet of cross section area from which a six-inch slice is cut daily. For six head make a trench six feet deep averaging four feet wide, with properly sloped walls. Slope is needed to help settling and prevent caving. For 120 days feeding, the length should be sixty feet. Trench four feet by six feet by sixty feet will hold about twenty-five tons."

There is still a great deal of late feed which will be worth more in the silo than in any other form. Even lightly for-bitten grain sorghum can still be saved by cutting it promptly and ensiling it. If the trench is not already dug, cut the feed the day after frost and let it lie on the ground while the trench is being prepared. Then use plenty of water with the ensilage, whether cut or ensiled in whole bundles, pack closely, cover with about a foot of dirt and forget it until the ensilage is needed.

In the old days the silo was a sky-scraper and filling it was both laborious and expensive. It was so costly that few farmers could afford one. Now many of those expensive, sky-scraper structures stand empty while their owners use the trench silo. It is so cheap that anyone can have it. It is less laborious and expensive to fill, and the ensilage can be fed out with less labor and time.

If an ensilage cutter is available use it, and pack the cut ensilage thoroughly. Cut ensilage is less wasteful, and takes less time and trouble to feed out. If no ensilage cutter is available, store whole stalks, lengthwise of the trench, lapping them shingle-fashion and reversing the heads and butts with each layer to keep level. If well watered and packed it will be just as good ensilage as if the stalks were cut, but it will have to be "cut out" from day to day with an axe or a special heavy tool made for the purpose. Ensilage is the best substitute

The Eyes Have It

Because the eyes are so expressive of a person's temperament and character, our language is replete with reference to the eyes, points out M. J. Julian, president of the Better Vision Institute.

"When we speak of a girl as saucer-eyed, everyone knows that she is a doll-like creature who is an interested listener. But a 'fish-eyed' man, continues Mr. Julian, 'is dull and stupid. A man with steel eyes will look you squarely in the face and will keep his promises, whereas the man with shifty or sneaky eyes advertises his untrustworthiness. 'When we are happy, our eyes twinkle; when we are sad, our eyes droop. If we take a wee drop too much we become bleary-eyed, even cock-eyed. Men carry on summer flirtations with two magic words, 'Bright Eyes.' But women envious of the conquests of coquette are called cat-eyed. 'In the morning men find spirit in an eye-opener. In a dice game

Big Rabbit Creek

August 27, 1939
I. W. Hardin, better known in the Big Rabbit Creek neighborhood and elsewhere as Tobe, Mrs. Martha Nails, and her son, Charlie, all arrived back home on Wednesday afternoon from their three weeks' visiting relatives and friends back in Eastern Oklahoma around Pauls Valley and Milburn and Stringtown, Oklahoma. They all report having just a wonderful time. While Brother Tobe was back east in those mountains he caught over fifty pounds of fish with hook and line and killed over fifty squirrels. Brother Tobe is a real fisherman and hunter.

This neck of the woods was visited Sunday morning about 7 o'clock with one of those Jack county, Texas, rains. About twenty drops of rain fell. Still, this part of the country don't need any rain just at the present.

The sad news came to the Big Rabbit Creek neighborhood Saturday morning of the passing of Mr. Will Lynsky's mother, who was 78 years old. She lived over by the Thornberry neighborhood. She was sick just a few days. Hawkeye was advised that she passed away caused by a clot of blood on her brain. The entire Rabbit Creek community sends out their heartfelt sympathy to the sons and daughters and other relatives of the passing of this noble mother.

Dewey Austin, one of the Big Rabbit Creek's prosperous farmers, the first of last week rented from a Mr. Grow the old Tom Lee Indian lease and will farm three 160 acre farms in 1940.

Hawkeye accompanied his friend and neighbor, Howard Anderson over to the Friendly Little City Saturday morning. While they were in the city, they attended the big trades day event.

Several of the Big Rabbit Creek farmers who have bought shares in the electric power line and who have already hooked up to the high line, attended the big barbecue and speaking that was given in Walters Saturday night celebrating the turning on of the juice for 109 miles of line. They all got home at a late hour.

Sunday morning with full tumes and all reported having a fine time.

Lee Rose finished up late Saturday evening baling 200 bales of fine cane hay for Mrs. Ed Owens who is farming the O. H. Darter farm.

Mrs. O. H. Darter, her daughter, also her son, Mr. and Mrs. Harold Darter, also the youngest son, all motored down to the O. H. Darter farm and spent several hours Thursday visiting with the Owens family.

Clarence LeBarre, the Big Rabbit Creek watermelon king, has already sent three big truck loads of melons up into Kansas, 300 miles distant, getting $45.00 from each truck load. Tom Watson is the variety that Brother Clarence raised. Lots of those fine melons weighed around 80 pounds. Clarence has one of the best Red River bottom farms in Cotton county.

Mr. Rutherford and his father-in-law, Mr. Balkrun, who lives three miles south of Taylor store motored down to the O. H. Darter farm Sunday morning and visited awhile with the Owens family.

Mr. and Mrs. Fletcher Babers and their two sons attended the big trades day event over in Our Friendly Little City Saturday.

Listen, folks, to Hawkeye: any time you are in Our Friendly Little City shopping or on business, and after you are all through and tired, and before leaving the city for your homes; just drop around to the Palace or Tex playhouses, get your tickets, and step in and see for one and a half or two hours one of the best pictures that you have seen for many moons. After the show is over you are rested up and ready to go home to tell Hannah and the kids what a fine show you seen at the Tex or Palace. Hawkeye knows, as he spent two hours Saturday afternoon in the Tex and saw one of the best pictures he had seen for many months.

Brother Tobe Hardin advised Hawkeye Saturday that he and Mrs. Martha Nails and her son, Charlie, will leave out again for Knox City Sunday week to pull and to pick cotton and will re-

TEXAS OUT-O'-DOORS

A 15,000 to 20,000-acre tract of land in East Texas is being sought by the Texas Game, Fish and Oyster Commission to be used in an effort to preserve the pure strain of eastern wild turkey, of which there are not more than 150 birds remaining in the Lone Star State and probably not many additional from Texas to the Atlantic seaboard. The game refuge, if obtained, will also be used for projects tending to restore deer, turkey, quail, doves and fur-bearing animals. The game management project is one of those being considered if the use of federal funds made available under the Pittman-Robertson Act is restored to the game department.

Many of the wild turkey in Texas, as well as in other states have become mixed with the domestic turkey, but game department biologists have found approximately 150 eastern wild turkey of a pure strain in south-east Texas. The unmixed wild turkey is a richer dark brown than the birds which are inbred with domestic turkeys. The bars on the tail are very faint.

Landowners asking too high prices for their land either on sale or lease basis have kept the department from going ahead with its plans for saving the eastern wild turkey, a truly game bird, which it is believed, could be brought back in large numbers in eastern Texas.

White quail are extremely rare although found occasionally in turn home about the 15th or 20th of December.

John Ashton and his better half and their daughters were shopping in Our Friendly Little City Saturday afternoon. They also attended the big trades day event.

Regardless of being 106 in the shade Saturday afternoon from 12:45 p. m. to 4:45 p. m., there were over 6,000 people on the streets in the big grocery stores and dry goods stores of Our Friendly Little City.

Texas Farmers Improving Herds

The Texas farmer and dairyman are going earnestly about the business of improving blood lines and production records on the one and a half million cows in the State.

This is being accomplished by the organization of herd testing associations and the introduction of new and better sires. The farmers are coming to realize that acreage withdrawn from cotton must be replaced with a money crop if spending power is not to be curtailed.

The matter of feed supply is also receiving major attention as the number of trench silos on Texas farms increases by the thousands.

It would seem that the days of the "town bull" and dry bundle fodder are over in the Lone Star State.

Texas. One was seen recently on the ranch of Mrs. Hal Peck, game commission member, south of Odessa.

Damage done to wildlife by motor cars was emphasized recently when State Game Warden Tom T. Waddell of Eagle Lake reported fifteen birds and animals found dead on a highway during a sixty-three mile drive. They included two doves, three skunks, two opossums, two cottontail rabbits, one jackrabbit, an English sparrow, one female quail, a night hawk and a water moccasin.

Harold Barrow and Ernest Porter of Oak Grove Community in northeast Texas, are warning fishermen to wear sneakers, boots or some other form of footwear when wading while fishing. Barrow, while walking in Sulphur River recently, was grabbed by a large turtle. The turtle's lower beak cut a large gash in the bottom of Barrow's foot. The top of his beak went completely over the foot and smashed it. An x-ray examination later revealed a broken bone.

Porter, seeing Barrow being dragged under the water, went to his rescue. The turtle turned loose of Barrow's foot and grabbed Porter's foot in exactly the same way, cutting a large gash in the bottom of it, it is reported by State Game Warden H. R. Morell of Mount Pleasant, where the men were brought for treatment by Dr. A. Grissom.

How fast can mourning doves fly? Their greatest speed has probably not been clocked, but you hunters will know why those delectable little birds are so hard to hit when you learn that a pair of mourning doves were clocked at exactly seventy miles an hour for more than 300 yards recently by Charles E. Friley, Jr., regional game manager for the game department.

Not all predators of wildlife are blood-hungry creatures of the wild, and with a new crop of game birds in the field, Will J. Tucker, executive secretary of the Game department, this week requested every Texan to look after his so-called domesticated animals which are allowed to run loose.

That you cannot blame a good rabbit or bird dog for hunting when he gets a chance and that the damage done to wildlife might well be charged to owners of the animals is the opinion of game experts. Hunting dogs can do almost as much damage as semi-wild house cats. They can hardly be expected to know when the legal hunting season ends and they naturally will continue the pursuit for which their masters praised them at other times.

The number of loose running dogs can, however, in on way compare with a large number of semi-wild cats which range the woods and fields, especially near the urban centers, and unless citizens stop dumping unwanted cats and kittens along highways, return of wildlife to Texas fields and woodlands will be appreciably hindered.

Library Receives Rosicrucian Book

Readers in Burkburnett will now have access to the Rosicrucian book in the public library, John A. Barnes, Route 1, a member of the Rosicrucian Order (AMORC), has just received official notification from the organization headquarters in San Jose, California, that the following book has been donated to the library by the Order: "Rosicrucian Questions and Answers and the Complete History of the Order" by H. Spencer Lewis.

John Barnes states that the Rosicrucian Grand Secretary informs him that the donation to the library is the result of several requests from the local readers that the book be made available to the public. A yearly appropriation is made by the Rosicrucian Order, says Mr. Barnes, to provide the educational, philosophical, non-religious works of the organization to such public institutions as libraries and hospitals. It is said the number of Rosicrucian books at the local library will be increased as the public interest creates a demand for them.

I Give You Texas

By Boyce House

How the bazooka was invented and how it received its name were narrated to this chronicler by Bob Burns, a few days ago. It was while he was in Ft. Worth to appear before two huge crowds for one night at Casa Manana.

"We members of the Van Bur-en Cornet Band were practicing in Haymon's Plumbing shop," he drawled, "when I picked up a piece of gas pipe and stuck a roll of music in it and actually blew a few notes."

Later, he changed the instrument so that it was made of two pieces of gas pipe, and a whiskey funnel—"and it makes just the kind of music you could expect two pieces of gas pipe and a whiskey funnel to make," he added.

When a fellow did a lot of talking about himself, folks used to say that he "blew his bazoo," so Bob just took the word, changed it a little and called the instrument a Russian bazooka. Soon afterward, a minstrel show came to town and he joined it. After a few weeks, it folded—"only about two folds were necessary, anyhow," Bob amplified but by that time he definitely was an "actor."

Burns has a great friendship for Irvin S. Cobb, the Kentucky short story writer.

"When we were making 'The Arkansas Traveler,' it was a wonder any scenes were ever made," Bob said "because Irvin and I sat around swapping stories. While I'd be telling one, he'd be twiddling his fingers impatiently on his knee for me to finish so he could tell one, and I'd do the same while he was talking."

Afterward, Cobb wrote to Burns.

"I've been using your stories and they get lots of laughs; it must be the way I tell 'em." Cobb added, "I always give you credit at the end but I speak your name in such a low and reverent tone that I doubt if anybody hears it."

The Kentuckian invited the big raw-boned Arkansas lawyer to visit the Cobb home, explaining: "My wife has a morbid desire to meet you."

Incidentally, back in 1909 when Burns was riding around over the country on freights, he landed in Ft. Worth and went on south and helped to build the railroad into Menard. So the other night N. H. Pierce, editor of the Menard News, prize-winning paper at the recent West Texas Press Association convention) went back stage at Casa Manana and interviewed Burns.

The fact that the Humble Oil & Refining company has taken the lead in attempting to reduce the income of Texas by $100,000,000 a year (which would throw many people out of work and injure all lines of business) likely will be heard about next summer in the political campaigns, particularly in the races of officials who were reportedly backed by the Humble last year. Land Commissioner Bascom Giles, for example.

More about that day in the tropics of Mexico: As our cars rolled into the little town of Fortin, native girls came forward with sections of banana stalks, hollowed out as containers for beautiful gardenias and orchids, which grow wild in that region. One could buy a whole "box" for fifty centavos (a dime, American money.)

The small, new hotel was a jewel in a perfect setting. Its cool corridors surrounded a patio with grass of an unbelievably deep green—a green that looked as though someone had been using buckets of paint to touch it up. Bright flowers were blooming. The air was bland. Back of the hotel was its beautiful private swimming pool and, in the distance, was the haze of mountains. A peon slept in the shade of a tropical tree.

As we awaited the call to a leisurely dinner, Mrs. Adolfo Dominguez (wife of the Dallas Mexican consul) seated herself at the piano and her marvelous voice rendered songs of her native land in soft Spanish. Simple and plaintive, the melodies were; and, in those surroundings, the singing gave the touch of perfection to the end of our journey. Because it was the end, for here we turned back toward Mexico City and Texas.

More than 16,000 theatres in the United States show sound films. The country with the next highest figure, has only 5,271 theatres of this type, and many of these are dependent on American films.

A well-rounded schedule of football games is on the menu during the time of the State Fair of Texas, October 7 to 22. Outstanding event will be the annual clash between the Universities of Texas and Oklahoma on October 14th.

More than 50 Texas beauties will compete in a pageant opening day of the State Fair of Texas, October 7. The winner will be crowned "Queen of Queens" in a free ceremony and will be given screen tests in Hollywood.

A pound of coffee costing 23 cents in the United States would cost $1.25 in Germany and about 12 dollars in Russia.

Y. C. PASCHALL TELLS OF WONDERS OF YELLOWSTONE

(EDITOR'S NOTE.—Y. C. Paschall, superintendent of Fairview school, delivered a very interesting talk on Yellowstone Park at the Rotary club last week and was asked to contribute an article to the Star on the same subject, as follows:)

"Yellowstone National Park is fast becoming the nation's greatest vacation ground. To it go more than a half million people annually, and they come there from all over the world. It was Yellowstone that first caused the nation to initiate the national park idea, and from it dozens of other areas have been set aside as national park areas, or as national monuments. Yellowstone had its beginning as a national park in 1872, when by an act of Congress it was designated as the world's first national park. And in that area today stand the nation's greatest collection of natural phenomena and wild life refuge.

"The natural phenomena include more than 3,000 hot springs, hot lakes and pools, and geysers. These hot formations are caused by surface water, or underground water from near the surface, seeping down some two or three hundred feet where it comes in contact with hot volcanic rock. Consequently a pressure is built up by steam thus created and the water collecting in the vertical tubes is thrown out at more or less regular intervals. The largest geysers erupt at less frequent intervals, but they play for a longer period, and throw the volume of water to a higher altitude. The most famous of them all is Old Faithful, which plays every 65 minutes reaching a height of 150 feet. The duration of the play is about three to five minutes, during which time some 50,000 gallons of water is erupted to run away in small streams to the nearby Firehole River. It is estimated, that during the tourist season that an average of four hundred tourists see Old Faithful erupt and for at least one illuminated eruption at night, that there are on an average of one hundred and four cameras taking its picture each time, and that each camera makes an average of two exposures during the play.

"There are four other geysers greater than Old Faithful, but they are not so renowned. The older cones are estimated by geologists to be more than 100,000 years old.

"Besides the hot spots the Yellowstone Canyon would be worthy to be set aside as a national park. It is some thirty miles long, nearly 1,000 feet deep, and about 1,500 feet wide. And in its walls are sculptured fantastic forms bearing every color of the spectrum. At the head of the canyon the beautiful Yellowstone river drops its waters first over a fall 112 feet, races about a half-mile and then drops straight down a sheer 308 feet fall. No artist has ever been able to put the full beauty of this fall and its canyon on canvas.

"The beautiful Yellowstone Lake with its 100-mile shoreline, nestling as it does among the peaks of the Absaroka mountains is the largest lake at so high an elevation in the United States. Its waters teem with millions of native spotted trout that may be taken, even by amateurs, on worm, spinner or artificial fly. This fact makes it the most desirable spot for the tent-camper and trailerite. For more than fifty miles an oiled-surface road borders its margin, leading from camp to camp.

"In addition to Yellowstone Lake, there are many other smaller lakes and streams that abound in trout and Montana grayling. Many of them lie along the roadways and many may be reached by way of mountain trails either on foot or by horseback. Each stream has its own variety of trout, and the angler only has to know in which stream or lake his favorite species is found and what spinner or trout fly to use in order to have fish for dinner.

"Among the larger wild animals of Yellowstone there are approximately 1000 head of buffalo, 2000 mule deer, 1000 moose, 20,000 elk, 300 antelope and 200 Rocky Mountain sheep. Of the bear there are only two varieties, the blacks and the grizzlies. The grizzlies, of which there are some 300, are never seen along the roadsides and seldom in the camping area. To see them the tourists go to Canyon late in the afternoon where the bears are fed in a small open, grass-covered valley, merely for the purpose of coaxing them out of the hills for the tourists to see. It is not unusual to see as many as sixty grizzlies on the feeding ground at one time. The tourists are placed in a wire enclosure and the bears are asked to come down out of the hills and pose for the tourists to look at and take pictures. I have seen as many as 2000 tourists in the pen at one time.

The black bears are different. It is they who raid the camp grub boxes, tear up tents, turn over garbage cans, or eat out of your hand right up to your elbow when you try to hand him some dainty morsel such as a side of bacon or a loaf of bread. Up until August 1, this summer just 13 different people had been injured in Yellowstone by black bears. And in every case the persons injured were either trying to feed the bear that committed the offense, trying to pet him or take his picture at too close range. Either deed is strictly unlawful and may result in the person bitten or scratched being fined and the offending bear being killed by the rangers. But to go to Yellowstone without seeing and dealing with one or more of the 500 black bears who live there would be as unusual as it would be disappointing to the tourist.

"To a person who loves nature, and who loves color and beauty in nature, Yellowstone is the "end of the rainbow." There the sky and the waters of the lakes are bluer, the pines and the hills are a little greener, the snow is whiter and the flowers are brighter. Color, color everywhere! The canyon walls shade from white to purple, the water of the hot springs and pools are brilliant with blues, greens, opals and crimsons; yellow, various shades of yellow, are found in the canyon on the cliffs, in the hot springs formations. It was from this predominating color of yellow in the canyon walls that caused the Indians to name the area "Yellowstone." Here are to be found more than 3500 square miles of color. Enough to satisfy anyone who is not color-blind.

"Year after year you will see the same tourists returning as I have done for seven years to enjoy the camping days around the campfires of Yellowstone. To again fish the trout-laden streams, to again drink deep into ones soul the beauties of the Great Creator, to again hear the crash of fast moving waters of stream or waterfall, and to again watch the playful antics of black bear cubs, or the tiny speckled chipmunk, these are the desires and dreams of every lover of nature who goes there once and remains long enough to learn Yellowstone as it really is."

"Man" is the subject of the Lesson-Sermon which will be read in all Churches of Christ, Scientist, on Sunday, September 3.

The Golden Text is: "God created man in his own image, in the image of God created he him" (Genesis 1:27).

Among the citations which comprise the Lesson-Sermon is the following from the Bible: "But unto every one grace according to the gift of Christ come in the unity of the knowledge of God, unto a perfect measure of the fullness of Christ (Eph. 4:7, 13). The Lesson-Sermon includes the following: "Science and Health" by Eddy; "The eternal what mortals seem to come from error, and existence as a child to light" (page 228).

HAD ATTENDED AUCTION SALE HERE TUESDAY

E. K. Miller, 60, prominent cattle buyer, was killed instantly late Tuesday afternoon by an accidental blast from a 16-gauge shot-gun. Climbing from a truck with the gun in his hand in front of his home in Electra, Miller received the full charge in his left side.

Neighbors E. E. Lewis, Mrs. D. R. Preston and Mrs. Bill Smith heard the shot and went to aid Miller. Justice of the Peace I. T. Gibson returned a verdict of death by accidental discharge of a shot-gun.

Christian Church Welcomes Minister

Rev. Pearce J. Burns will preach his first sermon here as pastor of First Christian church on Sunday morning. Rev. Burns who comes to Burkburnett from Grandfield, Oklahoma, is the first resident minister the local church has had in six years.

Rev. Burns comes to Burkburnett with a four-year record of service at Grandfield. In addition to being minister of the Federated churches there, he was a leader of the Boy Scout troop, an active member of the Lions club, and a member of the Chamber of Commerce. He received his college training at Texas Christian University and, previous to his coming to Grandfield, he held the ministry of a church in Snyder, Oklahoma. Rev. Burns is a native of Texas, having been born near Dallas, is married and the father of two children.

A reception-picnic is to be held in honor of new minister and his family at Water Works tonight. All members and friends of the Christian church are asked to meet at the church at 7:30 this evening and go from there to the picnic.

Everyone is also invited to hear Rev. Burns' first sermon Sunday morning, as well as all those thereafter, and to attend the mid-week evening services which will be held regularly.
