By Dan Coleman
Staff Writer

Still grubbing through their rubble, devastated tornado victims and their neighbors stood in pouring rain Tuesday and flinched with each flash of lightning, rumble of thunder and gust of wind.

Mud-whipped walls bled and ran as the rain washed the city's ugly face.

In thousands of homes and buildings — most destroyed and many damaged — what the tornado had not ruined, the gushing rainstorm did. Broken roofs leaked like sieves.

Clothes that were safe, now were soaked. Beds and bedding became great sponges. Family mementos and photo albums became blurred pages sandwiched between sticky covers.

Sagging roofs gave up the ghost and collapsed all over the city's scarred south side. Many occupants of the Shadowood Apartments trudged out into the night after their precarious protection against the weather failed. The weather won a vindictive victory there after barely missing the spot a week before.

More refugees were added to the homeless throng.

Hundreds of thousands of dollars more damage was added to the millions in ruination wreaked by the tornado of just one week earlier.

Many ignored the pouring rain and nailed up tarpaper and plastic in futile attempts to protect what little personal property they had left. One Tuesday's weather disaster roared; the other trickled and dripped quietly through the exposed guts of what had been safe and sturdy homes barely a week before.

Only one of the whims of the weather was deadly but both were destructive beyond estimate.

Thousands of pairs of anxious eyes glanced up nervously Tuesday from neighborhoods resembling war zones. Hundreds watched the ominous sky from lines extending from two crowded disaster centers where the government was trying to cope with and care for survivors of the previous Tuesday's whim of nature's anger.

Victim believed dead 6 days

By Marty Sabota
Staff Writer

Law enforcement agencies are stepping up their investigations into the bizarre death of a Wichita Falls man which was overshadowed by the April 10 tornado.

Sgt. Ed Urias of Wichita Falls Police Department said today possible pieces of the puzzling apparent murder of Jerry W. Lamb are beginning to fit.

Lamb of 1605 Fillmore was found Friday in a field southwest of Olney by lawmen acting on a tip, the sergeant said. The body was found lying on the ground near a pond, a car hood covering it.

Urias said Lamb had been stabbed three times in the back and had been dead about six days.

Police theorized that the motive for the alleged murder of the 34-year-old lifetime resident of Wichita Falls was robbery.

Two Wichita Falls men — James Moore, 24, and Nobel Mays Jr., 25, — were charged with murder in connection with the stabbing death. Bond was denied and they remained in city jail today.

Urias said he has reason to believe Lamb was killed in Wichita Falls on April 7 (Saturday), not April 10 as first reports indicated. Officers are investigating the possibility that Lamb was robbed and killed Saturday in a field beside Anchor Road, near Fairway and Kell. His body reportedly was hidden under a divan until it was moved to a field off Texas 114 early April 10.

Investigating officers said Lamb had been reported missing by his wife April 9, one day before the tornado struck Wichita Falls. Mrs. Lamb told police her husband, who was manager of Sheppard Air Force Base Officers' Club, was last seen about noon April 7.

Urias said WFPD began to suspect foul play when the Dallas Police Department notified them of a possible auto theft Thursday. Two men had been stopped by police in a car registered to Lamb and were being held on suspicion of theft.

Urias said details revealed the missing body may have been hidden near Olney. Texas Rangers, Wichita Falls

Supreme Court ruling major defeat for media

By Riichard Carelli
AP Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court, voting 6 to 3, ruled today that public figures suing for libel may inquire into a journalist's "state of mind" and the editorial process behind the allegedly libelous statement.

Handing the news media a major legal defeat, the justices ruled that reporters and editors enjoy no constitutional protection from having to answer such questions in libel cases.

"We have concluded that the (2nd U.S. Circuit) Court of Appeals misconstrued the First and 14th Amendments and accordingly reverse its judgment," Justice Byron R. White wrote for the court.

The decision is a big victory for former Army Lt. Col. Anthony Herbert, who is suing CBS and others in a $44.7 million libel action.

The decision means lawyers for Herbert will be able to ask at least some of the questions they previously were barred from asking in pre-trial proceedings.

"According an absolute privilege to the editorial process of a media defendant in a libel case is not required, authorized or presaged by our prior cases," White wrote.

He said that to give journalists such an absolute privilege "would substantially enhance the burden of proving actual malice, contrary to the expectations of (past libel rulings)."

Jack Landau, director of the Reporters Committee for Freedom of the Press, said the decision was "a major defeat for the First Amendment" and, taken with other recent court rulings, means "the press will soon have lost the last constitutional shred of its editorial privacy and independence from the government."

Christians form a 'Free Lebanon'

By The AP

Right-wing Christian militamen in southern Lebanon declared themselves under "self rule" today and gave their territory the name "Free Lebanon," Israel Radio reported.

The radio said the commander of the Israeli-backed Lebanese Christian forces, Maj. Saad Haddad, made the announcement at a news conference in the northern Israeli town of Metulla.

It was not immediately clear whether the declaration was intended to proclaim a fully independent state.

The action followed Haddad's declaration Tuesday that he would proclaim a republic if Lebanese troops moved into the U.N.-policed area in southern Lebanon.

Most insurance plans include extra benefits

By Leon Hooten
Business Editor

Many property owners who sustained losses in the tornado April 10 probably have more insurance coverage than they are aware of and should contact their insurance agent or read their policy.

Persons who have "A," "B," and "C" homeowner policies probably have additional insurance coverage for additional living expense and coverage for "outbuildings" not considered part of the primary dwelling, that's the word from insurance executives in Wichita Falls.

Homeowners with these type policies also have insurance of property not on the premises and most reputable companies are extending this coverage to include almost total value, not the limitation imposed by existing policies.

This coverage applies to persons who have moved salvagable property from damaged buildings and placed them in storage in one more places throughout the city or county, according to DeValse Cox, president of Williams-Dwyer Co.

Some persons who have standard fire and extended coverage may have the additional living expense and outbuilding coverage but probably will not have coverage on off premise property. A call to your agent or an examination of the policy will determine the extent of the coverage.

"And don't dig through the rubble of your ruins trying to find a copy of your policy, your insurance agent has a copy and the company has one locked in a safe place," Cox advised.

And what do you do before the adjuster arrives, or even after that, this word of advice was offered. "Act like you don't have any insurance coverage at all and make decisions based on that

Michelle awarded $104,000

By Linda Deutsch

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Michelle Triola Marvin was awarded $104,000 today in her lawsuit against actor Lee Marvin.

Superior Court Judge Arthur Marshall said the award was intended "for rehabilitation purposes so that she may have the economic means to re-educate herself and to learn new, employable skills."

The judge said he was concerned that Miss Marvin be able to "return from her status as companion of a motion picture star to a separate, independent but perhaps more prosaic existence."

The award was considerably less than the $1.8 million that Miss Marvin, 46, sought as compensation for the six years she lived as homemaker, companion and cook to the 55-year-old tough-guy actor.

Marvin's attorney, A. David Kagon, called the ruling a "total victory" for the actor. Marvin said: "I think it's sensational ... We won on all counts..."

Miss Marvin said: "I'm very happy that I won something. I'm proud to have paved the way for people in relationships such as mine."

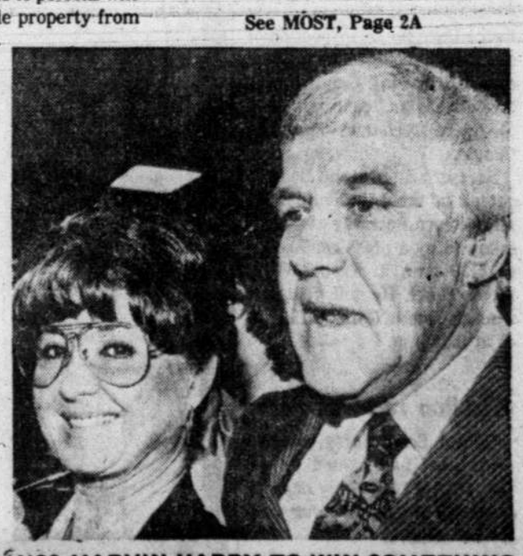

In his 33-page decision, the judge found that the actor and the former showgirl had neither an express nor implied contract to share property. However, the judge cited a California Supreme Court decision which allows a judge to find "additional equitable remedies" to protect the rights of unmarried people living together.

He said he based his decision on the fact that Marvin's income during the affair with Miss Marvin exceeded $1 million and that Miss Marvin — who filed the suit seven years ago — was forced to go on unemployment to support herself when they separated. He said the amount of the award was linked to the maximum she earned while a singer — $1,000 a week over a two-year period. Miss Marvin had sought an estimated half of the fortune Marvin made during their relationship.

The judge made it clear that his decision does not mean that all unmarried persons living together are automatically entitled to the property and earnings of a non-marital partner. He said that would be tantamount to restoring common-law marriage which does not exist in California.

He commented at length on various por-

over the city, most in light showers but some in periodic downpours.

Already crippled and on a half-day schedule, Rider High School canceled classes as water poured in through its broken roof and around its boarded-up windows.

Faculty and staff of McNiel and Rider schools should meet at 8 a.m. Thursday at Rider to plan curriculum. Rider students who attend the technical centers should continue to do so this week.

Students of flattened McNiel Junior High and Rider High School, though most of their families were homeless, were sent home — at least to temporary homes.

With Wednesday's forecast implying more of the same, the cancellation was extended through the remainder of the week.

Pessimism reigned.

Wichita Falls Clinic at 501 Midwestern Parkway, decapitated April 10 as the mammoth tornado fled screaming from the stricken city, was evacuated and closed its doors.

Those in need of care and their caretakers trudged out of the new but now roofless structure as rain drenched it through to the bottom floor.

Administrator Jim Missler said, "We've been operating on a limited basis since (the storm), but this rain has been just too much. We're soaked from bottom to top.

He said the structure is sound, scotching rumors that the walls were damaged. He said there is no problem with the walls, only the roof.

No physicians or other staff members will be on duty at the facility until the roof is repaired.

He said the best thing for patients of physicians who practice at the clinic is to contact their doctors at home, through the physicians' answering service or call Wichita General or Bethania hospitals.

Workers were trying to install a temporary roof Tuesday as the rain poured down on and all around them. From their high vantage point, they surveyed a scene of incredible devastation — all of it wet.

The National Weather Service in Wichita Falls reported 1.25 inches of rainfall at 8 p.m. Tuesday as light showers and darkness fell upon the still-sorrowing city.

In area towns the rain was more welcome.

Other rainfall amounts in the North Texas Southern Oklahoma region included: Altus, Okla., 0.30 inches; Antelope, 1.26 inches; Archer City, Tex., 1.50 inches; Burkburnett, 0.85 inches; and Electra, 1.60 inches.

Also, Frederick, Okla., 0.58 inches; Graham, 1.65 inches; Henrietta, 0.90 inches; Jacksboro, 1.55 inches; Newport, Tex., 1.25 inches; and Olney, 1.50 inches of rain.

Other towns reporting rainfall included Scotland, 1.18 inches; Seymour 0.96 inches; Walters, Okla., 0.78 inches; and Waurika, Okla., 0.63 inches.

Forecast Wednesday morning was for cloudy, windy and warm this afternoon through Thursday. Thunderstorms more likely on Thursday. High this afternoon in the upper 70s, low tonight in the mid 60s. High on Thursday in the low 80s. Winds should be southeasterly 10-20 mph.

Chances of rain were put at 20 percent this afternoon, 30 percent tonight and 60 percent on Thursday.

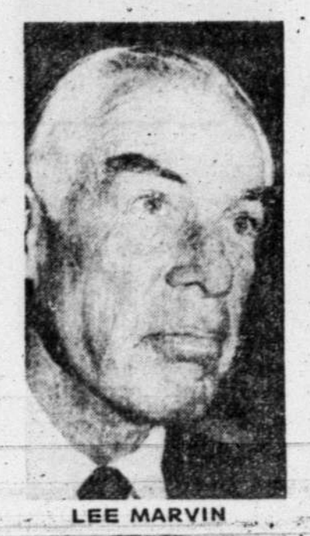

Widespread thunderstorm activity was forecast for much of the rest of Texas following the night of thunderstorms, including some heavy storms in South and West Texas.

Midland reported 1.62 inches of rain although most reporting stations across Texas noted less than .25 of an inch of rain.

The state forecast predicted widespread thunderstorm activity. High were to be mostly in the 70s and 80s with a few readings in South and Southwest Texas expected to reach the lower 90s.

Fog cut visibility early today in some areas of the state but it was not dense enough to cause serious problems.

LEE MARVIN

JUDGE MARSHALL

tions of evidence including the testimony of Richard Doughty, a young actor who claimed he had sexual relations with Miss Marvin while she was still living with Marvin.

The judge, evaluating three months of testimony at the trial, pointed out that Miss Marvin's testimony in her own behalf had been inconsistent many times. He particularly cited a conflict between her story and one told by screen star Gene Kelly who took the stand to refute Miss Marvin's claim that he had recommended her for a role in the show, "Flower Drum Song."

The judge supported Marvin's contention that promises made during the early days of the love affair were casual comments which could not have been taken seriously.

"A review of the extensive testimony clearly leads this court to the conclusion that no express contract was negotiated between the parties," the judge said.

Citing an alleged comment by Marvin that, "What I have is yours and what you have is mine," the judge said: "Considering the circumstances from which it allegedly sprung, the lack of intent to make a contract is immediately apparent.

"...He had repeatedly informed plaintiff that he did not believe in marriage because of the property rights which a wife thereby acquires. Plaintiff could not have understood that phrase to accord the same rights to one who was not defendant's wife."

The case already has set a precedent on appeal. The California Supreme Court in 1976 upheld the right of unmarried persons to sue for property division when a live-in relationship ends.

Today's ruling becomes part of California law, but its effect outside the state is unknown. The outcome of Marvin vs. Marvin may be cited as a precedent in similar cases anywhere, but the weight that will be given the ruling is pure speculation, lawyers have said.

Depending on how Marshall ruled, attorneys close to the Marvin case have said, an estimated 100 similar suits could be filed in California alone.

Other entertainment figures currently being sued by former live-in lovers are singer Alice Cooper, comedian Flip Wilson and actors Rod Steiger and Nick Nolte.

On Tuesday, another such suit — filed against rock star Peter Frampton by former companion Penelope McCall — was dismissed by New York Supreme Court Judge Joseph Gagliardi because their living arrangement had involved adultery, a crime in New York.

The judge's decision was the final act of a courtroom drama that exposed Hollywood private lives to public scrutiny and provided enough details for a soap opera.

There were bitter accusations between the former lovers involving alleged infidelities, abortions and alcoholism.

On the witness stand, they both tried to resurrect memories of a love affair that began 15 years ago on the set of the movie "Ship of Fools" and died six years later on the beach at Malibu.

"I loved Lee," Miss Marvin said tearfully.

"I never loved her," Marvin growled through clenched teeth.

She said she became pregnant by Marvin three times during their affair but had abortions because "he didn't want more children."

As a result of the abortions, she said in gulping sobs, "I have scars and I can't bear children."

Marvin, who won the 1965 best actor Oscar for "Cat Ballou," depicted the love affair as casual.

He made love to her in his dressing room, he said, and soon had moved into her apartment.

This means that a homeowner should take all steps necessary to protect property from additional damage, such as boarding up windows, patching leaky roofs and any other emergency provisions to "prevent additional loss."

Insurance will pay for all materials used for such repairs and, as Cox quipped, "It will make your insurance company damn happy."

An invoice should be kept on all materials purchased and these should be turned over to the agent or adjuster for repayment.

In fact, insurance officials said this is a requirement of about all policies, that "all steps be taken to reduce additional loss."

And students at Midwestern State University who lost all or part of their belongings from the storm but didn't have insurance coverage here may be covered by their parent's homeowner policy in the city or town where they live.

This is covered under policies that have "off premise coverage." Students who lost possession should send a list of their losses to their parents, if they are considered a "member of the parent's household," and the parents should contact their insurance agent.

As an example, if the parent has a policy for $50,000 on their home, whether it be in Dallas or San Antonio or elsewhere, normally the policy has a provision for $20,000 on the contents. Then the student could be covered for $2,000, minus the standard deductable which is 1 percent, or minus $500. That's 1 percent of the $50,000 basic policy.

But back to the Wichita Falls area and its tornado victims.

Most reputable insurance companies are providing victims with an "advance payment check" to tide them over until final determination of loss and settlement has been accomplished.

And lawyers and insurance agents all agree that even though you accept a check for "final settlement" with the company, this does not mean that if additional losses are discovered, another claim can't be filed and additional money obtained, of course to the limit of the basic coverage.

Any so-called release signed by a homeowner does not prevent a later claim, the release is for damages known and evaluated at the time of settlement, according to attorney Ed McIntosh.

And McIntosh and insurance company officials said that if a homeowner isn't satisifed with figures provided by an adjuster, called "storm troopers" in the insurance industry, the homeowner should contact his local agent.

Free legal advice is available to storm victims at disaster relief centers provided by Wichita County Young Lawyers Association.

Additional living expenses will cover up to 10 percent of a basic "A" policy and up to 20 percent of "B" and "C" policies. This includes meals that had to be eaten out and housing or room rental caused by loss of home.

"Persons incurring this type of expense should keep copies of restaurant tickets, motel bills and all other expenses. If they haven't been keeping this, then they should start at once and their agents can reconstruct expenses where details weren't mainained," Cox added.

This coverage even includes having a telephone hooked up to a temporary home, it won't cover the bill itself because that would have been there before the home was destryed or damaged, but it will cover the hook up fee, officials said.

Again based on a $50,000 homeowners policy, buildings on the property that aren't the main home are covered up to an additional 10 percent, for a maxiumum of $5,000. This applies to a building or group of buildings and in case the structure was just "blown away" leaving no trace of its existence, the homeowner can sign an affidavit that it existed, before the storm hit.

So storm victims with the three basic policies have an additional $10,000 to $20,000 in insurance.

Coverage on the home contents not only covers basic items such as furniture, dishes and pot and pans but also covers "unscheduled items" such as cameras, silver services and jewelry up to a limit with a deduuctable, generally about $500. All of this is property not attached to the house.

If the property was insured for 80 percent or more of the replacement value, most reputable companies will pay for full damage, total or partial, with no depreciation taken into account.

"It's like replacing a new building for an old, up to the face value of the policy," an official added.

Also, storm victims with vechiles "totaled" or damaged can check with their agents and go by one of the drive-by settlement stations and will "for the most part get a check on the spot."

"Probably the single most important bit of advice a lawyer should give someone who has sustained property damage is to be certain to choose a building contractor who is permananet and has an established reputation — and verify this reputation with our Board of Commerce and Industry," McIntosh warned.

"DO NOT prepay for work not yet done or for materials not installed," he cautioned.

But in all cases, storm victims should read their policy, talk with their insurance agents and report all damage as soon as possible, regardless of how small.

Adjusters and agents have set priorities so that the homeless get service first, those with marginal living quarters next and so on down the priority list, officials said.

"If you have minor damage and have made an initial report to the agent or company, be patient, you will be contacted in order of priority," insurance officials said.

Missing 4 days

Plane found near Crowell

CROWELL, Texas (Special) — Authorities called in special equipment today to try to raise a small airplane out of a stock pond where it apparently crashed with two ranchers aboard five days ago.

Searchers located the missing aircraft Tuesday when a helicopter flying over the tank saw a cap and the wheel of a broken landing gear floating in the water. However, efforts to raise it out of the water to check for the bodies of the two ranchers were postponed because of darkness, rain and mud, said Neil Trout of the Department of Public Safety.

More divers are being brought in from Lubbock, Texas, and an attempt to raise the plane was planned for this afternoon.

A diver entered the water Tuesday evening and said the plane appeared to be lying in the water upside down and he thought one victim might still be in the plane.

Trout said the plane was the same one that disappeared Friday with Glyndon Johnson, 44, and Billy Johnson, 46, aboard. The two men are not related.

The tank is located near the Shamberger Ranch, which has a short dirt landing strip. Some searchers think the plane may have been attempting to reach this emergency landing area when it crashed.

"The site is 10 to 12 miles northwest of Crowell," Trout said. "They're going to bring in some special equipment from Lubbock and get the plane out of the tank."

Officers and volunteers, including many on horseback, had searched for four days for the missing men and their airplane.

They were last seen about 6:30 p.m. Friday when they took off in a green and white Bellanca to check on cattle.

Five Army helicopters from Fort Sill were dispatched to the rugged ranch country to help in the search and were aided by a DPS chopper and two Civil Air Patrol planes.

Insurance time limit waiver asked

State Sen. Ray Farabee said Tuesday he has asked the State Board of Insurance to waive time limits on coverage of tornado victims' household goods that are being moved from a damaged residence.

Depending on the type of policy, coverage on personal property usually is limited to either five or 30 days from removal unless it is moved to another residence. Many people do not have another residence to move the property to and must store it wherever they can, Farabee said.

"It is my understanding that the State Board of Insurance will ask the insurance companies to waive those time limits in favor of a 180-day coverage," Farabee said.

The senator said a bulletin was expected Tuesday from the board of the companies that would waive the time limit.

Farabee introduced a bill Tuesday which would allow the state comptroller to grant an extension on filing state tax returns for victims of natural disasters and to provide assistance to those victims in reconstructing their tax records.

In addition, Farabee is working with the Department of Human Resources to provide funds for disaster relief. He also met Monday with Deputy Commissioner Raymon Bynum of the Texas Education Agency concerning provisions for relieving the economic impact of the destroyed property tax base in the area, he said.

police and Wichita County District Attorney's office began searching the area Friday.

The search party found Lamb's body Friday, Urias said.

The two suspects being held in Dallas were transferred to Wichita County the followiing day.

Urias said earlier reports that officials were searching for two other victims were unfounded.

At least $1 million lost in tax revenues

By JIM MILLER
Staff Writer

While gouging an eight-mile swath of destruction across this city's south side, last week's killer twister ripped a million-dollar hole in the city's tax revenues.

The long-range economic impact of such a loss is not clear at this time. However, officials at all levels of government are beginning to study the situation as immediate relief needs continue to be met.

City Manager Gerald Fox agreed that 20 percent of the city's tax base, roughly some $150 million in largely real property damage, was a fair estimate of the economic destruction inflicted last week.

At the present tax rate of $1.04, the loss comes to approximately $1.5 million in tax revenues on real property, Fox said. That is just under .01 percent of the city's $22 million budget for last year.

However, those figures do not take into account losses in revenues from personal property taxes, sales tax and sewer and water revenues. Fox said no estimates have been made at this time on the amount of those losses.

Asked about federal economic recovery aid, Fox said he knows of no programs to cover loss of tax revenues.

Other long-range and immediate aid programs do exist, such as rebuilding public buildings that were lost, and work is progressing in those areas, Joe D. Winkle, federal coordinating officer with the Federal Disaster Assistance Administration, said.

Concerning long-range recovery aid, Winkle said city and state officials have asked for information on what is available.

"It has surfaced, and we recognize the need for it," Winkle said.

At the present time, Winkle added, federal officials are still involved with meeting immediate needs, but he expects to have a preliminary report on long-range recovery ready in possibly two or three days.

Looming over the recovery question is a cloud of potentially large-scale commercialization of areas that were formerly residential. In short, the city has apparently been caught with its zoning down.

Wichita Falls architect Charles Harper told the city council Tuesday that commercial interests are in the devestated areas in force with cash in hand to buy whatever property they can.

Without any zoning or land use ordinances, the only thing to prevent commercialization at this time appears to be deed restrictions, and those concerned do not agree on just how effective such restrictions will be.

"The deed restrictions in Faith Village are just about gone," Harper told the Times Tuesday. "What's not gone has been badly bent and can be broken by anybody."

Asked if deed restrictions are strong enough to prevent commercialization, City Planning Director Roger McKinney said, "That depends on how well they're written and how well they're enforced."

Deed restrictions have been broken in this city before, McKinney said.

"If you look the other way on one thing," he added, "then try to enforce it on something else, you can't do that."

On the other hand, Wichita County Clerk Jerry Padgett said commercial interest cannot violate deed restrictions without a court battle.

"As far as commercial interests buying up properties," Padgett said, "it could be done. There is no state law requiring a deed transfer be recorded immediately."

However, he added that a lawsuit seeking to the change existing deed or platt restrictions would have to be filed and won before a developer could commercialize the area.

"It would be up to the people in the neighborhood to fight that kind of suit."

Asked what the impact in terms of tax dollars of such large-scale commercialization would be, Fox said, "I wouldn't want to speculate on that."

Fox said commercialization could possibly hamper surrounding residential areas which would be a net loss. On the other hand, the tax return could be higher, depending on the amount and type of commercialization.

Asked if the possibility of commercialization in formerly residential areas did not point out the need for some type of zoning ordinance, Fox replied, "With or without a tornado, it has always been my feeling that this city should consider some form of land use control.

"This justs points up the need."

Kirk facing grand jury

By PHIL RINGMAN
Staff Writer

Former District Judge Stanley Kirk, flanked by three attorneys, returned to the Wichita County Courthouse today to present to the grand jury his version of an incident that led to his resignation and an aggravated perjury indictment.

The indictment, alleging the former 78th District Court judge made false statements to the State Commission on Judicial Conduct, was dismissed last week on a technicality but the grand jury was meeting again today to consider reindictment.

No action had been taken either against a Wichita Falls police officer who shot and killed a fleeing curfew violator early Monday morning.

The officer, Jay L. Wright, was placed on "limited duty" by Police Chief Curtis Harrelson after the officer shot a man believed to be an illegal Mexican alien who may not have understood English.

The victim reportedly fled on foot after a routine traffic stop downtown but then stopped and appeared to be reaching into his pocket for a weapon, according to police reports.

No weapon was found in the area.

FBI agent Lee Hale said today the FBI would be looking into the matter at the request of the U.S. attorney's office. The U.S. attorney's office was asked to investigate the shooting by leaders of the American GI Forum, a Mexican American organization.

Kirk's attorneys had complained that Kirk had not been given a chance to testify in front of the grand jury before it indicted him in March and claimed he would not have been indicted if he could have done so.

District Attorney Tim Eyssen said earlier, though, that Kirk and his attorneys were given two opportunities to testify before the grand jury.

Disaster fund total mounting

The amounts are occasionally large. More often, though, they are in sums of $20 or $25. Some of the smaller ones come with letters explaining the sender would liked to have sent more but is on a fixed income.

In the past few days, Wichita Falls officials have received more than $1,500 in private donations for Wichita Falls disaster relief fund, the city's finance department said.

These funds are in addition to some $115,961 collected through American Red Cross' Wichita Falls headquarters. Numerous checks also have been channeled through the Salvation Army, another relief agency.

Contributions to aid tornado-stricken North Texas residents may be sent to the American Red Cross, 1809 Fifth, P.O. Box 5166, Wichita Falls, 76307.

Ray Clymer has been named chairman of the Wichita Falls Falls fund drive, which is supported by United Way and city and county officials.

"Although the American Red Cross has been designated as the principal receiver of aid to the City of Wichita Falls," Mayor Kenneth Hill said today, "this is in no way intended to discredit the Salvation Army or Menonnites organizations.

"Purpose of the fund appeal is to make the people of our area aware of the kinds of services the Red Cross can and will provide," Clymer said.

Money coming into City Manager Gerald Fox's office is largely from individuals and much of it is from outside the state.

Gas price gouging: the rest of the story

By JODY COX
Staff Writer

While reports of price gouging in the wake of last week's tornado fill the media and inflame the public, the federal Department of Energy has cited but two Wichita Falls service stations for such practices after an investigation by its Economic Regulatory Administration.

Gene Campbell of DoE's Dallas office identified the two stations as Moore's Exxon at Central Expressway and Seymour Highway and H&B Texaco at Seymour Highway and Kemp Blvd.

"They are accused of exceeding the maximum retail gasoline sticker price," Campbell said. "They have 30 days to respond as to whether this citation is accurate. The DoE then will make a determination as to whether they're right or we're right."

Campbell said if the DoE rules against the service stations, their owners are liable to a fine of up to $2,500 for each 24-hour period and a possible price rollback to refund customers.

The owners and operators of both stations, however, feel they were not in the wrong for what they did.

"I can look you right in the eye and say I didn't do anything wrong," said Mike Moore, manager of the Exxon station. "We're in business to make money, but that particular day we didn't come close to breaking even."

Seymour Hampton, owner of the Texaco station, is of the same mind as Moore. "We weren't trying to rip anybody off," he said. "If I were trying to price gouge, I'd certainly make it worth my while."

When power was knocked out by the storm, both stations, as almost every other station in Wichita Falls, were unable to pump gas with their electric powered pumps.

Hampton said a number of emergency vehicles stopped at his station soon after the tornado struck seeking gas. He and his employees finally were able to rig up an electrical pump powered by a gas generator to pump fuel.

They funnelled the gas into five-gallon cans, which they toted out to the waiting emergency vehicles. Hampton said the drivers of those vehicles asked him how much he wanted for the gas.

Hampton said he hedged on what to charge, but that several of the emergency vehicle drivers suggested $5 a can. He said since then he has decided not to charge anything for the gas he dispensed to emergency vehicles.

Hampton said soon after he began selling to the emergency vehicles, it got out over citizens band radio that his station had gas available. A long line began forming at his station and when he finally cut off service early in the morning, he had sold more than 600 gallons.

"What are you going to do when you got a lot of people out there just begging for gas?" Hampton said. "We had no way of telling how much we put in those cans — one man told me there probably was as much as six gallons in some of them."

At Moore's station, it was much the same. Moore and his wife, upon hearing of the disaster late Tuesday night, drove back from Dallas, where they were on vacation. They arrived in Wichita Falls about 2 a.m. Wednesday and Moore learned his brother Lonnie, who co-owns the station, was out in the stricken areas helping with relief efforts efforts.

Moore said when he arrived at his station, a Gold Cross ambulance already was there with its fuel tanks almost empty. Moore said he siphoned some gas out of a car he had at the station and gave it to the ambulance.

"I had gas in the tanks, but I didn't know how to get it out," he said.

When morning came, Moore said he and an employee went to a service station supply and bought a pump, gas cans and plastic pipe for about $250. Like Hampton, they rigged a way to pump gas out of the tanks by hooking the pump up to a gas-powered generator.

Moore said he sold gas at 10 cents above his regular price because of the extra labor and overhead costs incurred by the jury-rigged operation. Later in the day, he said, Exxon officials set up an electrical generator in the station to power the pumps and the cash register.

Moore said he then went back to the correct price.

"We weren' trying to get rich," he said, "we never have been rich. My brother and I have reputations here in town — we've got to live here, too."

Hampton said he has had phone calls threatening his life. Others, he said, have threatened to bomb his station. He thinks he was a victim of circums' ce.

"I just figure the best thing to do is to try to live it down," he said.

Area towns have housing shortage

By LEE ANDERSON
Regional Editor

A survey of area towns indicates that there is a critical shortage of rent houses for Wichitans attempting to temporarily relocate in nearby towns.

Most towns within a 50-mile radius of Wichita Falls are without rent property or apartments, although a few new homes and trailer spaces are available for last week's tornado victims.

Margie Swenson, manager of Electra Chamber of Commerce, Wednesday explained, "We are desperate for rent houses in Electra. We had a problem before the tornado. We housed a few people from Wichita Falls last week, but the chamber doesn't have any listings now."

Norma Graham, a representative of Best Realty in Electra, who has combed the town for needed housing, said, "I only know of two houses right now and they are not too good, but they are liveable. I also know of one at Punkin Center."

"There are about 22 older homes that probably could be made available. And there are a few new homes for sale. Most are in the medium price range and are two and three bedroom homes. All are in and around Electra," she added.

Mrs. Swenson noted that Electra does have several spaces available for persons with trailers," she noted.

Jan Bruendl, secretary of the chamber of commerce at Burkburnett, said, "There is nothing available in Burkburnett. Everything is just about gone (rent houses) and most of the new homes have been sold."

"We only have one apartment complex in Burkburnett and I understand it stays full. We had a rental problem already and there's not much at all," the chamber secretary said.

Margaret Ford, real estate broker at Pioneer Realty in Burkburnett, pointed out, "We have been flooded with telephone calls. I don't know of any rentals at this time. But we have a few new and older homes for sale."

The response by chamber of commerce officials in Henrietta was similar to the other towns in the immediate area.

"We don't have a thing in the world that I know of," Edd Williams, Henrietta Chamber of Commerce manager, said. "There is nothing listed here at the chamber. There are no rent homes or anything else that I know about."

Longtime Bowie realtor Alvin Roberts added, "I don't think there is a rent house in Bowie. I am pretty sure there are vacant houses in town for sale and there are three or four homes for sale in Nocona."

"The apartments are pretty well loaded. In fact, I don't think are are any available. We do have trailer spaces for rent in Bowie, but there is a waiting list for trailer houses," Roberts explained.

"We have exhausted our list of rent homes," Majil Pittman, manager of Iowa Park Chamber of Commerce said today. "We don't have any homes for rent and all of the apartments are full."

Mrs. Pittman said water meters were turned on at 20 new locations last week and many were for storm victims from Wichita Falls.

"We have helped quite a few people so far. Some people have offered rooms in the homes and Iowa Park churches are offering cooking facilities and transportation. The chamber is compiling a list of availabilities. We also have been checking on the availability of trailer spaces. We have some right now and if there is a need, we will make more available. Also, we are trying to find owners of vacant houses in Iowa Park and see if we can make them available.

Levi employees to meet tonight

Employees of Levi Strauss & Co. will meet at 7 p.m. today in Memorial Auditorium and company officials will tell of production schedules.

Frank Dulaney, western region production manager for Levi Strauss, said the Wichita Falls plant had total damage of about $1 million from last week's tornado.

Dulaney said the plant's operating capacity will be at 50 to 60 percent in six weeks and full production is expected in four to six months.

Center in Vernon may be shut down

A slow down in the number of tornado victims being served has prompted federal officials to anticipate closing the disaster assistance center in Vernon, Texas, a Federal Disaster Assistance Administration spokesman said today.

The spokesman said officials plan to close the FDAA center at Wilbarger Auditorium as of 7 p.m. Saturday. Victims who are not able to get to the center before it closes may come to either of the two centers in Wichita Falls.

Furniture rental bids being taken

Federal officials are now taking bids from furniture rental companies to furnish apartments and other existing dwellings for tornado victims, a Federal Disaster Assistance Administration spokesman announced today.

Bids should be made to the FDAA headquarters located at Ave. G and Third Street on Sheppard Air Force Base no later than 5 p.m. Thursday, the spokesman said.

Rental center out of listings

Wichita Board of Realtors President Bobby Hall said Tuesday night the rental coordination center has no more listings available for Wichitans left homeless by the April 10 tornado.

"We really ran out of listings Monday," Hall said. "There were no single-family listings and only a few apartment listings, and most of those needed repair work."

Rebuilding group will meet today

The Wichita Falls Reconstruction and Redevelopment Commission will hold an organizational meeting at 4 p.m. today in the Conference Room of Memorial Auditorium.

The 19-member panel was named Tuesday by Wichita Falls City Council to advise the council on matters pertaining to rebuilding areas of the city damaged by last week's tornado.

MURDER-ROBBERY SUSPECT NABBED

Suspect in robbery-slaying was well liked by neighbors

WATERBURY, Conn. (AP) — Lawrence J. Pelletier Jr., accused with three others in the killings of three armed guards and the theft of $1.8 million in cash and valuables, was known to neighbors as a quiet, easy-going guy. He also was known to police.

Police said he had been in prison for a burglary conviction and has an armed robbery charge pending in connection with a drug store holdup in Cheshire last year.

The woman he lived with, Evelyn Vega, also known as Evelyn Pelletier, also was liked by neighbors. The couple lived in a single-story house with Ms. Vega's two young sons by a previous marriage.

"As far as I know they were nice. He never bothered me. He paid his rent on time," Pelletier's landlady said Tuesday. She lives next door in the working class neighborhood here and asked not to be identified.

Charged with first-degree robbery and three counts each of capital murder were Donald Couture, 26, and his wife Donna, 23; and Pelletier and Ms. Vega.

Persons convicted of capital murder may be punished by death in Connecticut if a judicial panel determines there were aggravating circumstances and no mitigating circumstances.

Pelletier was known around the neighborhood as a guy who would always handsomely tip the newspaper boy and would take time to toss a football with local kids.

Early Tuesday, less than 24 hours after three Purolator Security Inc. guards were ambushed, authorities arrested Pelletier, Ms. Vega and the other couple and recovered what they believed to be all of the $1.8 million in cash and valuables that was stolen.

Police, who refused to say what led them to the arrests, said the investigation was continuing but no additional suspects were being sought.

Superior Court Judge Norman Buzaid set bond at $750,000 for each, with an additional $5,000 each for Pelletier and Ms. Vega, who also were charged with possession of marijuana and sawed-off shotguns.

Dressed in jeans, the four suspects were led into court one by one and asked for and received public defenders. They stood motionless as charges against them were read. No pleas were entered. The four are to return to court April 25.

The recovered money and valuables were found in the cellar of the Couture's Wallingford home after Pelletier and Ms. Vega were arrested in Waterbury, police said. The Coutures have a 5-year-old son.

Authorities said more than a dozen rifle shots were sprayed into the Purolator garage in Waterbury shortly after an armored car pulled in and unloading began Monday morning. The bodies were found at 7:15 a.m. by an employee arriving for work.

"These poor guards — they never had a chance," Waterbury Police Superintendent Fred Sullivan said of the guards identified as William West, 52, of Cromwell; Leslie Clark, 36, of Plymouth; and Hartford policeman Edward Cody, 46, a Vernon resident working part-time for Purolator.

Unauthorized absences are expensive problem for American military forces

WASHINGTON (AP) — Absences without leave, the most prevalent crime in the nation's armed forces, cost the government an estimated $1.1 billion between 1973 and 1977, a new report says.

The nation's sailors, soldiers, airmen and marines went "over the hill" 608,000 times in those four years, according to the General Accounting Office study.

The study said the Marine Corps had the highest AWOL rate, the Air Force the lowest.

And the report by the congressional investigating agency said punishments given service men and women who went AWOL varied widely and were not likely to be more severe for repeat offenders than in first-time cases.

But the GAO said the cost impact of unauthorized absences is dwarfed by their potential impact on the nation's military effectiveness:

"Individual excellence and the overall quality of the service is determined by training, discipline, morale, and motivation," the report said.

"Collectively they establish combat capability — the ultimate measure of military effectiveness. AWOL seriously damages this capability by adversely affecting unit effectiveness and mission readiness."

Most of the estimated $1.1 billion cost to the government was "for recruitment and training lost," the report said.

The GAO said more than 70 percent of the 4,100 people who went AWOL during one 12-month period were eventually discharged as unfit for service.

Only one-fifth of those who went AWOL in their first two years of service were high school graduates, the study found.

That led the GAO to recommend greater efforts toward signing up high school graduates.

It also said, however, that without a draft the military is competing with civilian employers and noted that the Pentagon, in meeting its desired strength, may be forced to sign up more people not measuring up to its "definition of a quality recruit."

But the GAO said, "Combat capability could actually be hurt by bringing in too many marginal performers in contrast to accepting some shortfall in troop population."

The Defense Department, in its response, called the AWOL cost figures misleading. It said a comparison should have been made between the draft and all-volunteer eras. The GAO said it did indeed omit draftees. The draft ended in 1973.

The Pentagon said disciplinary rates have improved in the all-volunteer force and that costs associated with AWOL cases have gone down.

From 1975 through 1977, the AWOL rates declined for all services except the Navy, the study said. It suggested the drop was due to the recruitment of more qualified people and to "aggressive action" to prevent "sub-standard personnel" from enlisting.

The GAO said the military justice system authorizes severe punishment for going AWOL but provides no guidance on specific penalties that can be assessed.

"As a result, it is not surprising that we found wide differences in punishment imposed for AWOLs of similar length," the study said. For example, the GAO said, in 42 percent of the cases it examined, servicemen got an administrative discharge in lieu of court-martial for being gone for more than 30 days, the most serious AWOL. In the remaining cases, it was dealt with as a minor offense as often as a serious offense.

There was also a variation among the services. The Marine Corps most often imposed a bad conduct discharge, confinement or both, the study said. The other three services more often used reduction in grade, which sometimes was combined with lesser forms of punishment.

And the study found that persons who had prior convictions for AWOL did not suffer much greater punishments than first-time offenders.

"Thus, instead of being relatively sure that the most serious AWOL offense will result in severe punishment, military members can discern from the services' practices that the likelihood of severe punishment is low, and the chances for an administrative discharge are rather high," the study said.

Transfer order signed

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — A state court judge has signed a formal order to have Roger Dale Stafford, the man police say killed nine persons in Oklahoma last summer, returned here from a mental hospital.

Sheriff Gene Wells said he would not reveal when he would have deputies bring Stafford back from Eastern State Hospita at Vinita "for security reasons."

Bomb blasts movie theater

ISTANBUL, Turkey (AP) — A bomb exploded in a motion picture theater in Istanbul, injuring at least 12 persons, police sources said today.

They said the charge was hidden in a bag placed in a central row of the theater on a plush avenue of Kadikoy, on the Asian side of the city.

An estimated 200 spectators fled in panic after the Tuesday night blast ripped rows of seats, police said.

Nugent raps coal-hauling railroads

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — Texas electric consumers are "captive" to coal-hauling railroads, which are using their monopoly power to finance other traffic and generate a "bonanza" for their own stockholders, says a member of the Texas Railroad Commission.

Jim Nugent, one of three commissioners who regulate oil, natural gas and railroads in Texas, told a congressional subcommittee here Tuesday that Texas utilities might not be able to continue their conversion from more scarce natural gas to coal if railroads continue to increase their rates for hauling western coal.

The U.S. House Subcommittee on Oversight and Investigations, chaired by U.S. Rep. Bob Eckhardt of Houston, conducted hearings Monday in Houston and Tuesday in San Antonio.

Nugent displayed a graph for the committee that showed Texas supplies 48 percent of the natural gas used by American utilities to generate electricity.

Because of this, he added, the state will have a "pivotal role" in the nation's efforts to convert to coal as a prime energy source.

The Interstate Commerce Commission recently raised the rate Burlington Northern Railroad charges for hauling coal from Wyoming to San Antonio from $7.?8 per ton to $17.01 per ton. That increase will cost San Antonio consumers an estimated $11 million this year, officials have said.

JIM NUGENT ...criticizes railroads

Eckhardt pointed to that increase in opening the hearing and said the freight rates have soared because "captive markets permit a monopoly of transportation."

"I do not believe anyone will dispute the nation's need for a healthy rail system. However, we must ask which railroads are financially depressed and which are profitable," he said.

But Frank H. Coyne, Burlington Northern's chief financial officer, told the subcommittee that the coal-hauling rates must reflect railroad expenses.

Because of the coal-hauling business, Coyne said Burlington Northern made approximately $326 million in roadway capital improvements from 1974 to 1978. During that same period, he said, the railroad acquired $339.2 million worth of rolling stock for coal service.

To handle maximum projected coal traffic for the five-year period fro 1979 through 1983, the railroad estimates it will have roadway expenditures of $807.6 million and will acquire another $728.6 million in additional rolling stock.

"Cost of capital is as unavoidable a cost as wages or fuel costs. If a company fails to pay labor, nobody will work for it," said Coyne. "If a company fails to pay capital, the market will not provide the funds necessary for replacement, maintenance and improvements of plant and equipment."

Coyne said Burlington Northern's return on its railway investment in 1978 was only 1.58 percent, while its after-tax cost of capital was 12 to 13 percent.

"The increases which Burlington Northern presently seeks to establish, or has established, probably reflect the single sharpest percentage increase in coal rates we will experience," he said.

Nugent said he had been assured Australian coal of higher quality could be transported to Texas at a lower price than Wyoming coal.

Voters back pot

BERKELEY, Calif. (AP) — Voters in this city made famous by campus protest have told police to all but ignore marijuana smokers and have approved a measure prohibiting the use of city funds to support South Africa's apartheid government.

Both measures were endorsed overwhelmingly by voters Tuesday in an election marked by lower-than-normal turnout.

The city is the home of the University of California's largest and most prestigious campus, the scene of violent activism in the 1960s.

Marines to get new chief

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter announced today he will nominate Gen. Robert H. Barrow, a three-war veteran who cracked down on training abuses, to become the 27th commandant of the Marine Corps.

Barrow, holder of the Navy Cross and the Army Distinguished Service Cross for "extraordinary heroism" in the Korean and Vietnam wars, will replace Gen. Louis H. Wilson, who will retire June 30 after four years as head of the 187,000-member Corps.

The 57-year-old Barrow, a native of Baton Rouge, La., has been assistant Marine commandant for the past 13 months.

His nomination is subject to Senate confirmation, but this is normally automatic.

As Marine commandant, Barrow will sit as a member of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, the nation's top military body.

While Marine manpower chief in 1976, Barrow was instrumental in drafting reforms designed to end physical abuse and harassment of recruit trainees by drill instructors. Officials said the training reforms, which include closer supervision by officers, have worked well.

Barrow told reporters at the time that the Corps would not ease the tough physical conditioning that traditionally marks the training of Marine recruits. But he said there would be no more "excess stress" on recruits, including "nose-to-nose yelling" by drill sergeants.

Among other things, Barrow ordered the length of the training day at boot camp shortened from the old dawn-into-night schedule.

The changes followed the death of Marine Pvt. Lynn McClure of Lufkin, Texas.

Hart defense witnesses face charges

PRYOR, Okla. (AP) — A mother and her two sons who testified in the Gene Leroy Hart murder trial have been charged with perjury in Mayes County District Court.

The charges were filed against Joyce Ellen Paine and her sons, Owen Short and Larry Short.

Bond for Mrs. Paine was set st $20,000. The two sons have not been brought to court yet.

The three testified that they had given a flashlight to Bill Stevens, who is in a Kansas prison. The flashlight was found beside the bodies of three young Girl Scouts who were sexually assaulted and slain at a northeastern Oklahoma camp two years ago.

Hart was acquitted March 30 on charge of killing the girs.

Sheriff Glenn "Pete" Weaver presented evidence to the district attorney's office, and the arrest warrants were signed Tuesday by Associate District Judge William Thomas Jr.

Weaver had said Monday he was considering seeking perjury charges against "three or four persons" in connection with their testimony during the trial. At that time he named Allen Little, a former jailer who was a key defense witness, but declined to name the others.

Little testified that he saw crumpled photographs in Weaver's desk several years before the slayings. Investigators said the photographs were found at the site of Hart's boyhood home after the slayings.

Thomas said the "reserve felony" charges were filed by Assistant District Attorney Austin Webb. He said the "reserve" provision allows the names of those listed in the warrants to be withheld until after their arrest.

Measles outbreak in Houston worsens

HOUSTON (AP) — Houston-area health officials say a measles outbreak here is worsening quickly, and could become an epidemic unless a program to vaccinate all students is carried out.

"I'm getting newly verified and possible cases today faster than I can keep up," Dr. David Williams, chief of epidemiological services for Harris County, said Tuesday.

A total of 64 confirmed and 21 suspected cases of red measles or rubeola have been reported to city of Houston and county health officials during the past few weeks.

Police judgment not enough

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Law enforcement officers cannot rely solely on their own judgment in seizing allegedly obscene material without a warrant, the Texas Court of Criminal Appeals ruled today.

Gold sale amount cut

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government plans to halve the amount of gold for sale at its monthly public auctions starting in May, the Treasury Department announced today.

Evidence admissible

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate Ethics Committee refused today to bar evidence taken from the office of Sen. Herman Talmadge from being used in the panel's investigation of financial misconduct allegations against the Georgia Democrat.

Gunman hit in shootout

CLEVELAND (AP) — A 26-year-old man was wounded after he and police officers exchanged about 25 shots in a gun battle in the busy concourse of Cleveland Hopkins International Airport, police said.

No one else was wounded, officers said, although about 50 persons were in the area when the shooting started Tuesday night.

Police said they had no idea why the man, identified as Bruce Brightharp of Cleveland, started firing a .38-caliber revolver. Brightharp was hit by four bullets and was reported in fair condition at Southwest General Hospital today.

Face moisturizer recalled

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government today announced the recall of 4,000 jars of Revlon's Milk Plus 6 face moisturizer that it said may be contaminated with potentially dangerous bacteria.

The recall affects only lot no. 881, which is stamped on the bottom of the jar.

Convicted man may join suit

HUNTSVILLE, Ala. (AP) — A man convicted of manslaughter after the car he rear-ended burst into flames, killing its driver, has asked to join a $2.5 million damage suit against Ford Motor Co.

The suit was filed earlier this year by James Jennings, whose wife, Adelle Patricia, was killed last September when her parked Maverick was struck in the rear by a car driven by Robert Harbin.

The gasoline tank of the Maverick caught fire, police said. Harbin was convicted of second-degree manslaughter last week.

Harbin's attorney, Earl McNeil, said Harbin and Jennings had the same question of law — the negligence of Ford in designing the Maverick in which Mrs. Jennings was killed.

The motion to intervene was filed in federal court late Tuesday. Last week, Judge Enzor Wyatt threw out Ford's motion to dismiss the suit, saying the motion was without substance.

Chevette changes ordered

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Environmental Protection Agency has ordered General Motors Corp. to modify the pollution control system on some 1979 Chevrolet Chevettes or halt production, the agency announced today.

In addition, the EPA said, GM was ordered to recall 50,000 Chevettes manufactured earlier this year to repair the faulty emission control system.

Suspect renounces citizenship

TULSA, Okla. (AP) — A man charged with murder has renounced his American citizenship, delaying selection of a jury until District Court rules on his plea to the United Nations.

James Naum is charged withn second-degree murder in the strangulation of his wife Maria, a Brailian national, in January 1958. He has been in Tulsa County Jail since surrendering May 31.

"The government's effort to destroy my family life and reputation makes my U.S. citizenship academic," Naum said in court Tuesday after being allowed by District Judge Margaret Lamm to make a statement before jury selection began. "This is not the America I pledged allegiance to.

"It is with great reluctance but clear thought and heart that I do now make official only what the government has seen fit to do informally and in secret. I hereby renounce the hollow title citizen which I have been left with. I declare myself a political prisoner, a refugee, in the political sense.

"I request the United Nations to assist me in leaving this place as soon after my release as possible. This is not the home of the free and the land of the brave."

Lamm was expected to announce a decision on his statement today.

Naum also accused the FBI and CIA of conspiring against him, asked for the return of all money, with interest, he has paid into the Social Security system and requested the return of his personal effects, including two pipes made in jail out of tin foil and toilet paper.

Treaty documents exchange postponed

CAIRO, Egypt (AP) — Egypt and Israel have postponed for the second time their exchange of ratified peace treaty documents and have agreed on next Wednesday as a new date, the official Middle East News Agency said today.

The exchange initiates the time period set for the Israeli withdrawal from the Sinai.

The ceremony was first postponed because of the Passover holiday.

It was tentatively scheduled again for Sunday, but postponed again because it falls during the Egyptian Easter holidays, the Egyptian news agency said.

The ceremonies are to be held in the U.S. security station in the buffer zone separating Egyptian and Israeli troops in the Sinai.

Condemned man wins reversal of conviction

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Death Row inmate Joseph Stanley Faulder won reversal of his capital murder conviction today in the stabbing death of a 75-year-old Gladewater widow in her home.

The Texas Court of Criminal Appeals said Faulder's written confession should not have been used against him in court. A new trial was ordered.

Faulder was tried in Longview before State District Judge Marcus Vascocu. He was convicted in the July 8, 1975, slaying of Inez Phillips.

The defendant was arrested in Colorado in April 1977. After his return to Texas a week later, Faulder signed a statement confessing to the slaying, the appeals court said.

After a hearing, the statement was deemed both voluntary and admissible.

In the statement, Faulder said a woman companion told Mrs. Phillips their car had broken down. The widow admitted the woman, who pulled a gun and allowed Faulder to enter, the appeals court said.

The assailants knocked the woman unconscious and gagged her, according to the statement. Faulder said he noticed Mrs. Phillips was moaning and he stabbed her in the heart, the appeals court said.

Faulder's statement was made to Trooper Marvin T. McLeroy, Texas Ranger Glenn Elliott and Gregg County Sheriff's Deputy Bill Roach in Tyler, where the defendant was taken for a lie detector test. He refused the test, the appeals court said, and should have been returned to Longview.

"McLeroy continued to question the appellant throughout the afternoon on two different occasions during continued interrogation by other officers, and the appellant always refused to talk about the offense," the court said.

"The fact that appellant was not physically mistreated during his incarceration or interrogation does not remove the taint to the confession which was secured in violation of his federally guaranteed constitutional rights," the appeals court added.

"It took between three and four hours of interrogation by three officers, in a hidden room out of the county in which he was arrested, in the presence of a lie detector machine, to extract slowly the confession from the appellant," the court concluded.

Supreme Court decisions

WASHINGTON (AP) — By a one-vote margin, the Supreme Court ruled today that law enforcement officials do not need a separate warrant to break into private premises to install court-authorized wiretapping or bugging devices.

In a dissenting opinion, Justice William J. Brennan jr wrote that to permit break-ins without court approval "is particularly susceptible to abuse since it leaves naked to the hands and eyes of government agents items beyond the reach of simple eavesdropping."

In other cases the justices:

—Ruled private industries do not have automatic legal right to prevent the government from disclosing sensitive information about them.

—Struck down a tax New Mexico imposes on electricity generated within its borders but transmitted for out-of-state use on grounds the tax is pre-empted by federal law.

Five cities want Demos

Texas Supreme Court rules in medical malpractice suit

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — The husband of a woman who suffered permanent brain damage after taking a diuretic prescribed by her long-time physician won a $500,000 medical malpractice suit today in the Texas Supreme Court.

Ernest Cooper had sued Dr. Ernest Sears of Harris County for $2.5 million on behalf of his wife, Emma Jane, who was a 47-year-old cafeteria worker when she was stricken in 1972.

After suffering brain damage, Mrs. Cooper was institutionalized, and doctors said she would require constant care the rest of her life.

Court records show Mrs. Cooper went to Sears, her doctor for 20 years, on Oct. 12, 1972, complaining of not feeling well and "puffiness" in her face and hands.

Mrs. Cooper later called Sears' office and said the tablet had made her feel ill, and the nurse told her to stop the medicine until Sears returned to town on Oct. 20. On that day Mrs. Cooper saw Sears again and told him she was still not feeling well, she had nausea and the puffiness, or edema.

On Oct. 21, Mrs. Cooper called her husband home from work, and the next day, a Sunday, Cooper called the doctor. Sears told him to give his wife only liquids and bring her into the office on Monday.

Cooper gave his wife a glass of tea and shortly afterwards found her unconscious. He rushed her to Heights Hospital, where she was admitted in a coma.

Sears' final diagnosis was brain damage due to coma caused probably by a severe electrolyte imbalance.

Electrolytes, the Houston appeals court said, are such elements as sodium and potassium in the blood that are absolutely essential for life. An imbalance of electrolytes can cause death, the court said.

The jury found the doctor was negligent in telling Mrs. Cooper to resume taking the diuretic without first conducting an electrolyte test, which involved taking a blood sample.

Muniz disbarment upheld

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — The Texas Supreme Court today upheld the disbarment of Ramsey Muniz of Corpus Christi, twice the Raza Unida Party's candidate for governor and currently serving a five-year federal prison sentence.

He plead guilty in March 1977 to federal charges of conspiring to possess 1,100 pounds of marijuana with intent to distribute it, conspiring to import marijuana and jumping bail.

A city comes back

Wichita Falls is building back.

Executives of the Board of Commerce and Industry are spearheading the drive to relocate facilities damaged or destroyed by last week's tornado. An index to the spirit of Wichita Falls was supplied early this week by the receptionist at the BCI office. She was answering the telephone with the message that "Wichita Falls, coming back stronger."

Bo Berlin, manager of Sikes Senter, says plans to reopen the shopping center are under way. He says cleanup operations are proceeding as if some businesses at least would be open again within a few weeks. The owners of the shopping mall and architects are evaluating damage to the mall to determine what steps are required to reopen.

Ironically, space for some businesses to relocate is immediately available in the downtown area, vacated when some retail firms moved to the mall. Ikard Smith, president of Midtown Now, reports that a survey is being made to determine what space is available in the downtown area, so that owners of the property and businessmen needing a location can get together.

"Our main effort is going to be to find a roof for firms that have displaced so we can get people back to work," Smith explains.

Persons with available commercial, office or warehouse space are asked to contact the BCI so that information on what space is available for either the short term or the long term can be compiled.

With the positive attitude that has already been shown, Wichita Falls truly is on the way back!

Killer bee no killer

For a long time, people have been dreading the spread to the United States of the killer bee, an insect given to stinging, with serious consequences, every four-legged or two-legged creature it came upon.

Since the accidental escape from confinement of 27 queen bees in 1957, at least 200 Brazilians have been killed by the progeny of deadly bees brought to Brazil from Africa.

The killer bee is no longer a killer.

Generations of mating with Brazilian bees have bred out the dangerous characteristics, but not the trait of producing extraordinary quantities of honey. Brazilian beekeepers now are glad that their bees have some foreign ancestry. Any Brazilian bees that ultimately get this far north can be welcomed.

It is encouraging to see an entomological problem solved — and solved without resort to toxic chemicals, but by what are called "biological means."

This news justifies the tendency some of us have to hope that if one waits long enough some problems will go away.

Nuclear waste: who'll take it?

WASHINGTON—Believe me, South Carolina was not trying to embarrass anyone the other day, least of all President Carter. Still, the timing was lousy.

In the White House, the president had just stepped before reporters to name the new commission that will investigate the accident at Pennsylvania's Three Mile Island reactor. In South Carolina, about the same time, it was announced that the state would not accept the plant's nuclear garbage for burial.

"The commission will find out what happened at Three Mile Island," Carter told reporters. "It will assess how the accident could have been prevented. It will review how the government and others responded. And it will make recommendations to enable us to prevent any future nuclear accidents."

In South Carolina, state environmental chief Heyward Shealy told reporters the state's borders were sealed against two trucks carrying nuclear wastes from Three Mile Island until he gets "written confirmation" that the refuse does not contain highly radioactive material from reactor No. 2, the scary one. And Washington may be unable to give him that assurance. It suspects the trucks contain some of the "bad" stuff.

One truck was already in North Carolina when Shealy acted. The other was traveling on Virginia's highways, presumably under the 55-mile-an-hour speed limit. The drivers were instructed by radio to return to Harrisburg.

As of this writing, the trucks are there, under guard, awaiting further instructions.

I'm sure it was merely a coincidence that South Carolina got nervous about the same time that President Carter was trying to ease the nation's fears about the future safety of nuclear reactors. But the episode illustrates a national dilemma that has existed since Hiroshima. Breeder reactors, even safe power plants, disgorge contaminated wastes that must be disposed of. But how? And where?

The current "solution" is to bury pollutants deep in the earth, trusting that a) they will never reach the surface and b) their radioactivity is too low to cause permanent damage to living things.

One such depository is in Barnwell, S.C. Shealy says South Carolina already buries 80 percent of the nation's low-level nuclear wastes. The federal nuclear research center at Oak Ridge, Tenn., has two deep wells into which low-level radioactive waste is pumped. The hot stuff, mainly from the nation's weapons program, is buried in the southeastern part of the state of Washington, near Hanford. Shealy wants Three Mile Island's garbage to go there. He suspects it contains traces of plutonium.

Plutonium? Every existing reactor produces plutonium 239 as a by-product. Aside from the fact that it is the most convenient material from which to make a bomb, plutonium is possibly the most toxic material known to man. One milligram, an amount as small as a speck of dust, is considered enough to kill a person within hours. One microgram, 1000 times smaller, is said to be enough to cause lung cancer.

Plutonium also is eternal, at least in human terms. Scientists figure it retains its lethal toxicity for 50,000 years or more. Although many scientists consider deep burial to be safe for plutonium-tainted wastes, some others consider it a hazard to future life on Earth. Nobel Prize-winning biologist George Wald says present nuclear waste disposal methods are a fraud, "designed not to protect but to soothe the public—a national shell game of moving the accumulated wastes to 'interim' depositories."

The Nuclear Regulatory Commission concedes it is not really satisfied with present nuclear waste disposal methods, but it has no alternative to finding someplace to bury the refuse from Three Mile Island. If South Carolina won't take it, then some other place will have to. "We can't leave it on the island," says Harold Denton' NRC's director of reactor regulations.

While the president's blue-ribbon panel may come up with a clear diagnosis of what went wrong in reactor No. 2— and how such accidents can be prevented in the future—it will not be concerning itself with the long-range question of nuclear waste disposal. That is not part of the commission's assignment.

So for now, at any rate, our only recourse is to cross our fingers. We are reduced to trusting that the government and the nuclear industry know what they're doing, and that the deep burial of nuclear trash is not simply an example of "out of sight, out of mind."

Carter might win SALT game

WASHINGTON — No one is accusing Jimmy Carter of manipulating the timetable of the SALT negotiations with the Soviet Union for his own political advantage. But there is a growing realization among both the president's political allies and his critics that the delay in the long-anticipated strategic arms treaty with the Russians could be a political break for Carter in 1980.

The reason that the president is immune from cynical charges of bending the SALT schedule to suit his own convenience is that his desire for an agreement is so palpable that no one suspects for a moment that he would play games with this issue. If there is any embarrassment at all for Carter in the SALT timetable, it is that his repeated predictions of imminent final agreement are still unfulfilled.

But barring some disastrous turn in Soviet President Leonid Brezhnev's precarious health, U.S. officials seem confident that the remaining details will be worked out soon and that U.S. and Russian leaders will hold their long-anticipated meeting to sign the treaty.

But the process of Senate consideration will be almost as protracted as the treaty negotiations. The Washington Post's Robert G. Kaiser was reflecting the Senate consensus when he reported last week that there is now less than a 50-50 chance of a final ratification vote occurring before the 1980 presidential campaign year begins.

Whatever that delay may portend for the treaty itself — and opinions are mixed but mostly negative on that subject — Carter's political advisers are anything but unhappy about seeing SALT survive as a serious issue into the campaign season.

The reason, very simply, is that SALT may be the best available bait for enlisting activist liberal Democrats' help in renominating and re-electing the president.

The only other kind of symbolic battle that might match SALT for political appeal to this group would be a rousing Senate fight over confirmation of a liberal Carter appointee to the Supreme Court — particularly a woman or a black. But that is purely a theoretical possibility at this point.

Underlying the White House belief that a 1980 SALT fight would be good politics for Jimmy Carter is the implicit acknowledgement of the erosion of Carter's support among the Democratic party's liberal and activist constituencies. The liberal activists may not represent a big percentage of the whole population, but they work and vote in the primaries, and their energy is vital to a successful general election campaign.

The reasons for their disaffection are well-known. They range from Carter's unwillingness or inability to shout the kind fo rabble-rousing war-cries for new social programs that liberals love to hear, to his neo-conservative approach to budget-cutting, deregulation, inflation and energy. But on the highly emotional question of trying to limit the escalation of weapons of mass destruction, Carter's heart beats as one with the liberals.

A good, hot SALT fight will not help him with George Meany or the AFL-CIO; they will be arrayed against Carter on that issue, as on so many others.

But, as it happens, none of the Democratic opponents of SALT — Sen. Henry M. Jackson or Sen. Daniel Patrick Moynihan, for example — has much of an appetite to carry the battle into the presidential primaries.

Sen. Edward M. Kennedy is very much a Carter ally on the SALT issue. Some White House aides think that, if SALT is the top issue in public debate next fall and winter, it might inhibit Kennedy from challenging the president, and even bring him in actively as a Carter supporter.

As for the other intra-party rival, Gov. Jerry Brown, unless he flip-flops even more spectacularly than he did on Proposition 13, he will have to say "me, too" to Carter's fight for a SALT treaty.

SALT is obviously not a solution to the political problems stemming from double-digit inflation or a pervasive reputation for weakness of leadership.

But it is an issue which helps Carter build some vitally needed bridges to the activist liberal wing of his own party and enlist the energy of its disaffected members in an election which many of them otherwise might be inclined to sitout.

If a pro-SALT Jimmy Carter is facing an anti-SALT Republican in 1980, it would be hard for any liberal Democrat to say he was indifferent to the outcome.

Communist China has money problems

After all the red carpet treatment, after all the White House wining and dining, now it turns out the Communist Chinese aren't going to be a billion-dollar customer after all. Seems their eyes are bigger than their piggy banks.

Not that they've cashed in their grandiose dreams for that "great leap forward" to modern times. But they've been counting up their cash and they've discovered they have a bulldozer appetite and a wheelbarrow budget.

Translation: They can't pay for all the technology they need.

Deputy Prime Minister Deng Xiaoping hasn't exactly zipped up his checkbook, but he's listening longer these days to salesmen peddling equipment for light industry and agriculture.

Seems he's suddenly caught on to what his technicians have been telling him all along, that dragging Red China into the 20th century is going to take more than a proclamation. It's going to take contracts and loans and an export trade that brings in enough foreign money to finance heavy industrial equipment.

And that's what the Communists are short of at the moment. Their reserves of foreign exchange add up to around $2 billion, which isn't much for a giant country with 900 million people.

Tiny Taiwan, for instance, has a currency reserve of $8 billion and a credit rating that makes loan officers fall over themselves to lend it money.

So much for Deng's dreams of a billion-dollar buying binge in American markets. Not to mention the hopes of salesmen who've flocked to Peking from all over the world, selling themselves as "lao pengyou," or "old friends," with whom the Chinese prefer to do business.

So much, too, for President Carter's big excuse for dumping Taiwan in favor of mainland China: That we need to be "lao pengyou" with a country that will import $200 billion in goods between now and 1985.

No way, says a Commerce Department report. A little more than half that would be more likely. And even under "the most favorable circumstances," our share of China's total hard currency imports would come to only $12 or $15 billion in the next six years.

Some American firms made it. Coca-Cola got in early, and a construction group sponsored by the Chase Manhattan Bank has just wangled a contract to build a $300-million trade center in Peking. But Chase had to loan the Communists $30 million to get the project rolling.

Deng is also having second thoughts about those big hotels he was going to put up for tourists and businessmen. Seems he's decided that it's cheaper to fix up the old places than to get financing for new ones. But he's going to hire foreign companies to do the remodeling and help run them.

Another hitch in his modernization plan is the fact that he still hasn't talked the United States into granting China "most-favored-nation" status for future trading deals.

That's partly his own fault.

He flew into a snit last month when Congress passed a bill outlining official relations with Taiwan and expressing American concern for the welfare and security of its people.

In retaliation, Deng is stalling on his agreement to pay back $80 million to American companies, religious groups and individuals who lost property worth $197 million when the Communists took over in 1949.

Until the claims issue is settled, Washington isn't going to be doing much of anything to speed up action on a most-favored rating, which would let China pay lower tariffs on goods shipped to the United States and — even more important — let it get in line for loans from the Export-Import Bank to pay for American goodies.

And you can bet Jimmy Carter's hoping Deng will cool down and decide to pay up without demanding a veto on the Taiwan bill first. Jimmy's in enough trouble over recognizing China without having to make it worse by cutting off the Free Chinese completely.

Deng, too, is between a rock and a hard place. He was hoping to get rich quick on oil sales, but now it turns out that finding and drilling for China's oil is going to take a lot longer than he expected, that it will be a while before he will have billions of petrodollars to play with.

And that's why, as one disillusioned trade official puts it, the Bank of China has a bellyache. And those polite snickers you hear in the wind just might be floating across from Taipei, which expects to do $12 billion worth of business with the United States in the next two years, treaty or no treaty.

Food prices

To balance your budget, eat less beef

By LOUISE COOK
Associated Press Writer

(First of three columns)

Today's food budgets are being squeezed by cattlemen who have deliberately cut back the supply of beef and by inflation which is pushing up costs all the way from the farm to your table.

The shopper trying to balance spending and income is going to have to eat less beef until prices come down.

That shopper also is going to have to decide whether he or she is willing to pay the price for the increased amount of convenience we buy with our food — convenience that is fueled by inflation, now running at an annual rate of more than 10 percent.

Cattlemen are expected to produce 6 percent less beef this year than they did last year. The price you pay for a pound of beef is expected to average about 20 percent more than it was last year.

Red meat prices as a whole have been going up twice as fast as the over-all Consumer Price Index. Americans spend more on food than they spend on anything except housing and transportation. And one out of three dollars they spend on food goes for meat.

Food prices depend mainly on two things:

- The cost of the raw materials.
- The cost of turning the raw materials into the finished product and getting them into your shopping cart.

The cost of the raw materials is usually determined by supply and demand. The supply of meat has gone down; the demand has not. So the price has gone up.

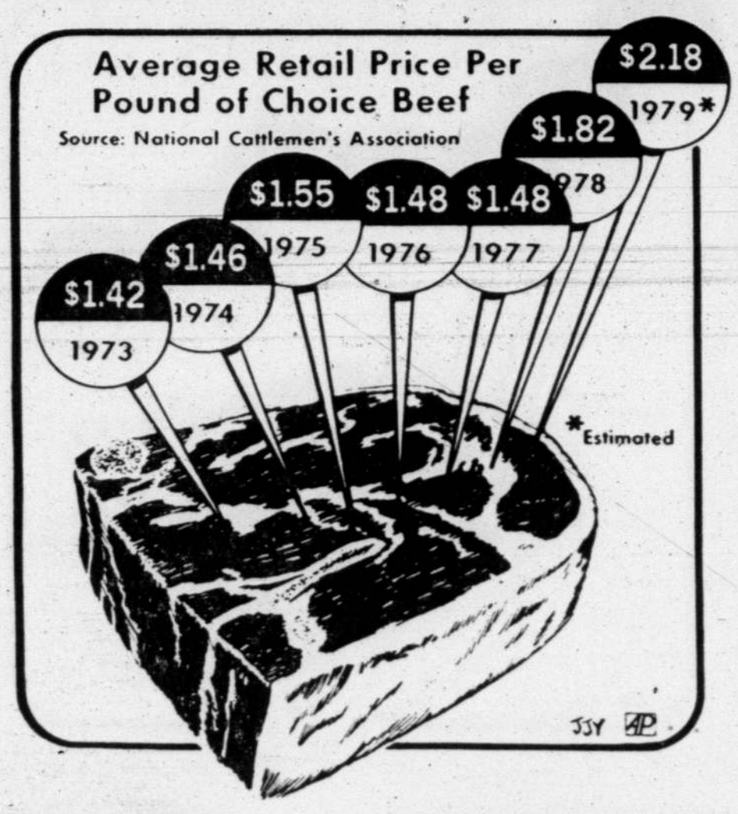

The cost of getting food to you depends on manufacturing and retailing costs — on labor, transportation, packaging, rent, taxes and profit.

Other factors affect prices to a lesser extent. Competition, for example. More competition means lower prices. But there are arguments about how much competition there really is.

Government actions also make food bills fluctuate. Subsidies, regulations and import quotas contribute to prices.

Supply and demand is particularly important in meat prices because the price of the live animal accounts for almost half of the price paid by the consumer.

Take a look at what's been happening. First, to beef production:

—1976: 25.7 billion pounds.
—1977: 25.0 billion pounds.
—1978: 24.0 billion pounds.
—1979 (estimated): 22.4 billion pounds.

—1976: 39 cents a pound.
—1977: 40 cents a pound.
—1978: 52 cents a pound.
—1979 (April): 70 cents a pound.

—1977: $1.48.

Cattlemen say the drop in beef is part of a normal cycle. Periods of high meat prices — like 1973 and 1974 — are followed by an increase in supplies as farmers boost production to take advantage of demand.

That brings prices down again. The cattlemen say that by 1975 the cost of raising a steer was higher than the price that was paid for it. They cut back. They sold calves and cows they normally would have kept for breeding. That had the temporary effect of increasing the supply — and decreasing the price — still further.

Last year, shoppers began to feel the impact of the cutback. Prices went up. Cattlemen say they are again making a profit. And as long as raising beef is profitable, they say, they will increase supplies.

Just as the decision to decrease supply caused a temporary increase, the decision to increase supply is causing a temporary decrease, as cattlemen keep animals for breeding instead of selling them for meat.

"The free market cycle dictates this kind of ups and downs," said Jack Maddux, a Wauneta, Neb., cattleman.

Supply and demand is only part of the overall food-price problem.

On the average, more than two-thirds of every dollar spent on U.S. farm-produced foods goes for marketing costs. That means that an increase in marketing costs has about twice as much influence on food prices as an increase in the farm value.

(Remember: The U.S. farm-produced foods category does not cover imports like coffee or non-farm foods like fish. It also does not include the non-food items, from detergent to panty hose, which account for up to 20 percent of supermarket sales.)

Since 1973, spending has gone up 53 percent — about the same as the Consumer Price Index as a whole. The farm value has increased by 31 percent. Marketing costs have risen 66 percent. Within the area of marketing costs, labor is up by 63 percent, packaging by 61 percent, transportation by 77 percent, before-tax profits by 76 percent and miscellaneous by 71 percent.

"You cannot expect to have a country that has inflation at a certain rate and expect its food not to go up in a comparable fashion," said George Koch, president of the Grocery Manufacturers of America Inc., whose members produce 20 percent of our groceries.

Koch said that in 1978, food processors made about four cents profit on every dollar of sales. Profits represented 13.8 percent of equity for food and drink manufacturers last year, compared to a 15.4 percent return for all industry.

Supermarket profits in 1978 represented 13 percent of equity. The industry is quick to point out that profit equals less than one percent of sales; take away profit completely, and you would save less than a penny of every dollar you spend.

This means that if you spend $75 a week at the supermarket, you would save less than 75 cents if the store's profit was eliminated.

William T. Boehm of the USDA said that just as the food industry is becoming more and more dependent on items outside its direct control, it is also becoming more concentrated. Fewer farmers, processors and suppliers. An increase in one area affects everyone.

"The more competitive the marketplace is, the better it is as far as price," said Esther Peterson, special assistant to the president for consumer affairs.

The trouble is, no one can agree if we have enough competition. The industry says yes. Consumer activists and some congressmen say no.

The Controller General's office says there may be a lack of competition in some areas. The Food Marketing Institute counters that chains account for only 47 percent of grocery sales.

Koch says: "You have 30,000 processors of food all competing with one another ... Every cereal company competes with every chicken ..." How? If cereal prices get too high, Koch explained, consumers can switch to something else — like eggs.

Cutbacks harmful

By SYLVIA PORTER
Field Syndicate

(Third of four columns)

Joseph Califano, now Secretary of Health, Education and Welfare, may still remember an event that took place on Columbus Day in 1966. He even may have accompanied his boss, President Lyndon Johnson, to an employee awards ceremony that day at Social Security headquarters just outside Baltimore.

On the platform with Johnson was Dave McNally, 23-year-old pitcher for the Baltimore Orioles who a few days earlier had pitched his team to victory in that year's World Series. McNally, a former Social Security beneficiary, was there to help Johnson make a point.

After the death of his father in World War II, SS survivors benefits were paid to the McNally family — his widow and children until age 18. Those benefits had helped young Dave to finish high school and to play ball for the American Legion.

The experience of the McNally family, President Johnson said, "was a prime example of how Social Security helps the young as well as the aged." And Johnson proudly added that, on his recommendation, Congress a year earlier had extended payment of Social Security benefits to full-time students 18 to 21 years of age, the children of workers who had died, become disabled, or retired.

Portfolio

Hundreds of thousands of young people have been helped to complete a college or vocational education by payment of students benefits since 165 — despite the loss of a working parent's income.

But coolly declaring it's "a new ball game," Califano, just before Christmas, persuaded President Carter that these student benefits should be phased out along with cutbacks in other benefits promised to workers in legislation enacted as far back as 40 years ago.

In return for these promises, it must be pointed out, we, the workers, have been paying higher and higher SS taxes. These higher taxes may account for some of the outraged reaction to the proposed benefit cutbacks. But an even more basic objection could be:

If we accept the Carter administration's implied thesis that the U.S. government has no obligation to fulfill its part of a compact created by the tax contributions of workers and employers, what protection do we have against a future administration forcing through even more drastic cuts in benefits?

In his proposed budget for the next fiscal year, Carter also has recommended ending the $255 lump sum death benefit. This one-time payment, designed to help with the extraordinary expenses connected with the last illness and death of a worker, has been part of the law since 1939. In cases where a worker dies before retirement and leaves no survivors potentially eligible for benefits, it may be the only payment made in return for years of Social Security tax payments.

The House Ways and Means Committee rejected this cutback and in so doing precluded any possibility of action by Congress in time for the next fiscal year. But the door is open for later consideration of the president's recommendations.

The Carter administration is the first ever to have proposed such a reduction in SS benefits, and it could be a dangerous precedent. Nelson Cruikshank, White House counselor on the aging, who was bypassed by Califano and James McIntyre, director of the Office of Management and Budget, when the benefit cutbacks were being drafted, campaigned within the White House to have them eliminated from the budget document. When that failed, he informed Carter he intended to oppose them publicly.

This Cruikshank did at a congressional hearing, and he warned this "breach of faith" could further erode our confidence in government.

Wilbur J. Cohen, a former HEW secretary and a main architect of the Social Security program, has formed a coalition of 115 organizations — ranging from religious to labor — to combat the cutbacks.

You may be sure there will be public hearings and time for you to tell your views about this insidious attack on the nation's most widely accepted and successful social program. Maybe before those hearings, Carter and Califano might find time to read a leaflet HEW distributed in January for enclosure in employee pay envelopes. Those paychecks reflected the new 1979 tax increases. Said the leaflet:

"Workers paying into the Social Security system are building lifetime protection for themselves and their families. In addition to monthly benefits in retirement, Social Security also provides disability and survivors insurance that protects you and your dependents throughout your working years."

Are these trustworthy pledges? Or empty promises?

All infants need lots of love

By Dr. KAREN BLAKER
NEA Writer

DEAR DR. BLAKER — Three months ago, I gave birth to a beautiful 9-pound girl. I couldn't be happier. Taking care of her is such a joy.

The only problem is that my husband doesn't approve of my child-rearing techniques. We get into terrible fights because he thinks I am spoiling our daughter by giving her too much love.

I do pick her up every time she cries, but I know from experience that she never makes a fuss unless she is wet or hungry.

Sometimes he gets very upset and says it will be all my fault if our daughter grows up with a weak character. That frightens me. I don't want to be a bad mother. I just feel my baby needs lots of love right now.

DEAR READER — Your instincts are correct.

A young baby does need unconditional love. The love you have for your daughter and the joy you feel while caring for her will go a long way toward preventing the very characteristics your husband fears.

How can early unconditional love immunize your child against growing up spoiled? By establishing a basic foundation of healthy self love.

If your daughter values herself as a person, she won't have to spend the rest of her life seeking that validation from others. She will not need a constant shower of attention. She will not act vain and conceited.

It is important to remember, however, that selfless mother love is only part of the answer.

In a few months, you will see the beginning of your daughter's independence. Unconditional love plus unconditional acceptance of her developing individuality are the basic ingredients for effective parenting.

Ultra-rightist party increases racial tensions among Britons

LONDON (AP) — The ultra-rightist National Front, which seeks to end all non-white immigration into Britain, is running 280 candidates in the general election and threatens to whip up simmering racial tensions.

It is the largest field the Front has mustered for a general election since it first competed for seats in the House of Commons with 10 candidates in the 1970 election. In the last election in October 1974, it ran 90 and got 3.12 percent of the vote.

Led by men with known fascist links, the Front has been involved in bloody street battles with leftists and non-white immigrants. None of its candidates has ever come close to getting elected despite an increase in racial tensions and opposition to non-white immigrants. But its slate of candidates running for election to the House of Commons May 3 is the fourth largest on the ballots, exceeded only by the "big three" Conservatives, Laborites and Liberals.

By having more than 50 candidates, the Front will get media exposure previously denied it.

It qualifies for a five-minute election broadcast on all TV channels April 26. It can also legitimately claim to participate with the three major parties in campaign TV and radio discussions.

The Front's national organizer, Martin Webster, said one of the reasons for running so many candidates was to beat what he called "the conspiracy of the media against us."

The Front, formed by a merger of the British National Party, the League of Empire Loyalists and other rightist groups, aims to restore Britain's lost imperial greatness, halt non-white immigration and repatriate the 3.2 million non-whites living in the country.

Its founder and chairman, 44-year-old John Tyndall, once paraded in Nazi-style uniform as one of the leaders of the British National Socialist party in the early 1960s.

The Front's support ebbs when the racial climate cools off and surges when it heats up. But Scotland Yard estimates it has 12,000 full-time members.

The major parties have condemned the Front for its racist campaign. Although the Conservatives have indicated they would like to restrict non-white immigration, Britain's smouldering racial problem has not become a campaign issue.

Instead, the major parties are leaning over backwards to woo the 1.2 million non-white voters. They could influence the result in at least 40 districts and could tip the balance in another dozen. But Webster said last week: "We're going to be fighting a very, very heavy racialist campaign."

The Front's strategists concentrate on white working-class areas, particularly in London's East End where unemployment is high, housing is bad, and non-white immigration is an increasingly touchy issue because of the competition from immigrants for jobs and housing.

"There's a strong tradition of nationalism and race consciousness in this part of London. People here fear the alien presence," said Tyndall, who is a candidate in South Hackney, a rundown Cockney district.

Bid to extradite Chilean cops fails

By SHIRLEY CHRISTIAN
Associated Press Writer

SANTIAGO, Chile (AP) — The U.S. government has lost the first round — and will probably lose the others — in its fight to get three former secret police officials tried for the murder of exiled Chilean Socialist Orlando Letelier.

Supreme Court prosecutor Gustavo Chamorro announced Tuesday that he has recommended against extradition of the three or their trial in Chile. He said the evidence submitted by the U.S. Justice Department is inadequate under Chilean law and the case is not affected by the U.S.-Chile extradition treaty.

His recommendation goes to the president of the Supreme Court for approval or rejection within five days, and the latter's decision then will be reviewed by a five-justice panel. But the court usually follows the prosecutor's opinion, which presumably means the three men will go free.

Ret. Gen. Juan Manuel Contreras, former head of the police unit known as DINA, Col. Pedro Espinoza and Capt. Armando Fernandez Larios were indicted for murder last August by the U.S. grand jury that investigated the bomb deaths of Letelier and an American associate, Ronni Moffitt, in Washington in 1976.

The United States requested their extradition, and the Chilean court has been investigating the charges ever since. Meanwhile, three Cuban exiles have been convicted in Washington.

Contreras is accused of ordering the killing of Letelier, one of Marxist President Salvador Allende's cabinet ministers and a leading opponent of the present Chilean military regime that overthrew Allende.

Michael Townley, an American who lived many years in Chile and who says he worked for DINA, has confessed to leading the murder mission. He said the orders for the killing were passed to him by Espinoza, DINA chief of operations, and he also implicated Fernandez Larios.

The Chilean government arrested Townley and turned him over to the U.S. Justice Department a year ago. He agreed to cooperate in return for a light sentence and was the government's star witness in the Cubans' trial in Washington.

Chamorro said the fact that Townley had given his information in a plea bargaining arrangement was one of the reasons for his recommendation against extradition.

Radar said undependable

MIAMI (AP) — Speed-monitoring equipment used by many police agencies can be distorted by such things as CB radios and can lead officers into mistakenly believing a car is speeding, says a radar technician.

Telephone paging signals, citizens band and two-way radios or even a faulty auto ignition can deceive a radar device, Andrew Soccio, operator of a radar maintenance service in Browns Mills, N.J., testified Tuesday.

Soccio testified as an expert witness in a Dade County court hearing where public defenders are challenging the reliability of radar readings as evidence in speeding cases.

Twenty-seven accused speeders are represented by county public defenders who seek to suppress the use of radar clockings as evidence.

Presiding Judge Alfred Nesbitt halted more than 900 traffic cases in the county after viewing films in February that appeared to show radar giving seriously flawed readings.

Soccio told the judge that seemingly innocent outside influences — someone whistling into a CB microphone, for example — can deceive a radar rig.

"I've seen the radar register 82 miles an hour on stationary equipment as a result of a long continuous whistle from a CB radio ... about 35 feet away," said Soccio.

He said a faulty ignition on an approaching car could cause a police officer to "pinpoint a car other than the one with the faulty ignition."

But under cross examination, Soccio admitted he had never personally seen that happen.

Welding irregularities found in reactor

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Welding irregularities were found in the containment vessel of the "twin sister" reactor at the Three Mile Island nuclear power plant, according to X-ray inspection reports cited by the Los Angeles Times.

The Times also reported that an unpublicized mishap at the "twin" reactor — involving a closed valve and instrument deficiency — occurred one week before the more serious accident at the Pennsylvania nuclear plant.

The "twin" reactor, known as Unit 1, has one of the best safety records in the nuclear industry. But these inspection reports, plus the minor accident, raise questions about its safety, according to the Times report, published Tuesday.

Metropolitan Edison Co., which operates the twin reactors at Three Mile Island, discovered problems last month with its subcontractor's inspection report on 63 welds in Unit 1.

Met Ed officials on Monday declined to discuss what irregularities were found in the routine inspections, pending a meeting with the subcontractor, Nuclear Energy Services Inc.

Officials of Nuclear Energy refused comment, the Times said.

A Met Ed official who declined to be identified said, "Maybe in the back of their minds (Met Ed employees) do suspect they were falsified."

New execution date for Evans scheduled

MONTGOMERY, Ala. (AP) — A new execution date of April 27 has been set for condemned killer John Louis Evans III, who now is cooperating in legal efforts to block his electrocution.

The state Supreme Court on Tuesday ordered Evans put to death on that date in the electric chair for the January 1977 slaying of Mobile pawn shop owner Edward Nassar.

The action came one day after Attorney General Charles Graddick asked that a new date be set.

Evans was scheduled to die April 6 after he refused to allow appeals of his death sentence to be filed in his behalf. But six hours before his scheduled execution, U.S. Supreme Court Justice William Rehnquist ordered it postponed.

Rehnquist's order came on a petition from Evans' mother, Betty Evans Dickson of Beaumont, Texas. She claimed her son was mentally incompetent to make his own decisions.

After Rehnquist blocked the execution, the full U.S. Supreme Court refused to intervene further in the case. But Evans changed his mind and agreed to cooperate in an appeal of his death sentence challenging the constitutionality of Alabama's death penalty law.

Passed in 1975, the state's capital punishment statute has been upheld by the Alabama Supreme Court but has not been tested in the federal courts.

Acting in behalf of Evans, John Carroll, legal director of the Montgomery-based Southern Poverty Law Center, filed the challenge of the death penalty law last week in U.S. District Court in Mobile.

El Paso shootout leaves two dead

EL PASO, Texas (AP) — Two persons were shot to death and two law enforcement officers and a man were wounded here late Tuesday night, El Paso police said today.

The dead men were identified as Armando Esparza, 31, and James Mason, no age available, according to deputy county medical examiner Jim Kingwell.

The other wounded man was identified as Charles Wayne Louis, 22, of El Paso.

Details concerning the shooting were not immediately available, but Lanahan said Castro, Volivia and police Sgt. Bill Pfiel were on an undercover assignment at the time.

Bridge falls with school bus

WILSON, Okla. (AP) — Ten children and a school bus driver were injured — none seriously — when a bridge collapsed and their bus plunged a short distance into a shallow creek today, authorities said.

One child was admitted to a hospital in nearby Healdton and the other nine children were taken to an Ardmore hospital for treatment, said Eddie Davenport, a Highway Patrol dispatcher. No other children were on the Wilson school bus.

The bus driver did not require treatement for cuts he suffered.

Davenport said the cause of the 7:30 a.m. bridge collapse three miles south of this south-central Oklahoma town was under investigation.

Brezhnev retains presidency

MOSCOW (AP) — Leonid I. Brezhnev was unanimously re-elected president of the Soviet Union today and called for support of liberation movements abroad in a brief acceptance speech to the Supreme Soviet.

The 72-year-old Soviet leader, sitting on the stage with other politburo members at a Kremlin meeting of the Supreme Soviet or parliament, voted for himself along with the 1,500 delegates.

Brezhnev was elected president for the first time June 16, 1977, replacing Nikolai V. Podgorny, who had been removed from the Politburo the month before in the first major Kremlin shakeup in 13 years.

Suicide ends shootings at Alaska capital city

JUNEAU, Alaska (AP) — A mail clerk who left work complaining of flu symptoms shot and killed two policemen and wounded a third before committing suicide, authorities say.

Police said Louis Sorensen, 50, took his own life Tuesday after firing a barrage of shots that panicked Alaska's capital city of 20,000, where rifle-carrying persons attract little more attention than a handbag-toting woman.

The governor was ordered by security personnel to remain in his office, which was then locked and guarded, staff and students at five schools near the scene were told to remain indoors and a residential neighborhood was sealed off.

Sorensen, a 10-year employee in the state revenue department mail room, "left abruptly" after complaining of a headache and runny nose, his supervisor, Phil Wall, said.

Cardiologist Henry Akiyama said he was backing his car out of the driveway after going home for lunch, when he saw a man walking toward him with a rifle.

"He had his rifle against his shoulder, looking down the sights at me and I thought, 'My God, what is he doing,'" Akiyama said. "In the flash of the moment, the thought was there, he was aiming at my head. What went through my mind was John Kennedy so I dove into the seat."

Police Chief Jim Barkley said four officers arrived shortly thereafter at Sorensen's home and two were killed instantly by gunfire. A third member of the city's 18-member force was wounded.

After the firing had stopped, other officers threw tear gas into the red, two-story frame house where Sorensen lived.

Barkley said Sorensen was found dead inside, apparently of his own doing.

One co-worker said Sorensen "was the ultimate quiet man" and Akiyama said that while he did not know his neighbor of about 10 years "we waved at each other."

He said Sorensen was a "loner" who took "beautiful care of his place.

"I don't think he had many people up there," Akiyama said.

After Entebbe raid

Reporters learn fate of woman left behind

KAMPALA, Uganda (AP) — Dora Bloch, the British-Israeli grandmother left behind in the 1976 Entebbe hijacking rescue, was pulled from her hospital room and executed in a forest the same day, a Kampalan told reporters in the aftermath of President Idi Amin's fall.

"It was Saturday afternoon and I was coming from my shopping when I heard about nine shots," said bookkeeper Victor Kato, who lives on the edge of Namanve Forest, used by Amin's secret police as a dumping ground for the bodies of their victims.

"I rushed to the main road and asked people what had happened. They said that two cars had turned into the forest with a white lady. On going there we found a body of an elderly woman. They shot her along with a white chicken.

"Maybe it was some sort of witchcraft, I don't know."

Mrs. Bloch, 74, was aboard an Air France airliner which a gang of Palestinians hijacked in 1976 and took to Uganda's international airport at Entebbe, 21 miles south of Kampala.

Suffering from a sore throat, she was taken to a Kampala hospital and was not at the airport when Israeli commandos rescued the rest of the passengers and crew members.

Kato said he realized the dead woman was Mrs. Bloch when he heard BBC reports that she had been left behind and her fate was unknown.

He said she was executed near a sandbank in a clearing about 200 yards from the main road in the national forest. He estimated the bodies of at least 6,000 people were left rotting there by Amin's State Research Bureau and others of his agents.

"They left her body there for some time," he said. "Then they came to collect it, probably to prevent journalists from seeing it."

One of the last people to see Mrs. Bloch alive at Mulago Hospital said she was in good spirits and awaiting her discharge when Amin's agents came for her.

"I had just completed the evening ward rounds and was standing on the fourth floor," said the medical superintendent, Dr. J.G.S. Makumbi. "I heard a scuffle on the sixth floor where Mrs. Bloch was staying in one of our VIP rooms.

Makumbi said Mrs. Bloch was pulled into a Mercedes sedan and driven away.

Troops still loyal to Amin reported on killing spree

KAMPALA, Uganda (AP) — Troops still loyal to Idi Amin are reported killing officials in eastern Uganda believed sympathetic to the new government in Kampala.

With the invasion force of Tanzanian troops and Ugandan exiles still preparing to extend the new government's authority to northern and eastern Uganda, the deposed president's forces were reported on a murderous rampage in the eastern city of Tororo, near the Kenyan border.

It was believed that pro-Amin Moslems were also killing members of Christian tribes in the area in retaliation for Christian murders of Moslems after the fall of Kampala to the invaders last weekend. That outbreak of killings was in retaliation for massacres of the Christians by Amin's Moslem supporters during his eight years in power.

The whereabouts of Amin remained a mystery. Various reports, none confirmed, put him in Libya, Sudan, Iraq, Zaire or still inside Uganda, possibly in the northwestern corner of the country where he was born.

Meanwhile, Tanzanian commandos made a dash some 50 miles to the east of Kampala to secure the the Owen Falls dam and power plant on the Nile River. The plant produces all of Uganda's electricity and 15 percent of the power used in Kenya, and there had been fears that Amin's men would blow it up.

The road from the Tanzanian front lines 13 miles east of Kampala to the dam was reported still unsafe, with bands of Amin troops harassing cars attempting to travel it. But the Tanzanians were reported preparing to follow up the raid in force.

Renata Scotto: mature and prepared

By ELLIE GROSSMAN
NEA Writer

RENATA SCOTTO
. .in costume for 'Luisa Miller'

NEW ROCHELLE, N.Y. (NEA) - "Yes, I'm satisfied with what she is doing now," Lorenzo Anselmi was saying in Italian overtones. "I sacrificed, but we do records together and now I am conducting ..."

The phone rang, near the piano along the wall with the huge painting of "Madama Butterfly," and he got up from the white couch to answer it. His wife, — mid-40s, petite Metropolitan Opera star — said, looking troubled, "He lost time because of me."

All those years in Milan he ignored the violin to coach her, the policeman's daughter from Savona who'd been singing since she was 3.

"I used to sing in front of my house and people gave me candy," she says, laughing. But an operatic voice must be educated.

Mostly it was Anselmi who did that, giving her a solid technique to sing, she says, all opera: bel canto and verismo, the later, more theatrical works of Puccini, etc. But not like they sang verismo 40 years ago, shrieking and flailing their arms. "Not need to go like this," she says, throwing her arms open. "Is better to have two or three big gestures in one evening than 100." Stage directors like John Dexter taught her that.

But her voice remains Anselmi's domain. "Every day he coaches me, maybe two hours, depending on time," she says; here, in their comfortable house in New Rochelle in Westchester; or in the apartment Ms. Scotto keeps in Manhattan 30 minutes away, near the Metropolitan where she debuted in 1965.

"And when he can, he come at the rehearsal with the orchestra and he listen and say, no! you have to change, or, that was right."

She relies on Anselmi and the audience, even when she disagrees with them (not so reviews, though she reads them all). And, she says soberly, "My husband is in charge to tell me when is time not to sing anymore. But now I feel mature and prepared and is the most wonderful moment." She beams.

The heartshaped, cherub's face, the voice are familiar to thousands who own her albums, who've seen her perform "Live From the Met" on TV. In "La Boheme," perhaps, in 1977. But she's a sylphlike Mimi now, because she saw herself, too, and decided to lose 40 pounds. "I change complete the way to eat. No more butter and marmalade for breakfast, no more big American steak with fat all around," she says, laughing. "And I feel much better and stronger."

Family

She needs that strength. People demand more from her now than when she debuted in Milan at 18. "You give the best and in the beginning you do a mistake, but never mind. Now, they expect perfection, is always, why, why, why? But you are a human being."

Ironically, it may have been easier for her at the Edinburgh Festival in 1957. Maria Callas suddenly refused to appear in "La Sonnambula," and with only four days to learn the role, Ms. Scotto substituted for her, and triumphed.

"I always have a lot of courage but at that moment I had more," she says. "La Scala was on tour and the most important people were there and that was the moment." She gestures grandly. "And," she looks heavenward, "I had something outside of this world which helped me."

Now, at the peak, she's either performing or preparing to. She sings perhaps six times a month at the Met, rehearsing in between for the next opera — weeks ahead, seven hours a day, six days a week. It's exhausting.

"The day I perform is complete rest," she says. "I vocalize 30 minutes before the performance but I don't sing much because performance is three hours or more singing. So during the day I keep my mouth shut," she says, laughing. "Is when I go shopping to forget the performance or, in the summer, I swim."

Later that night after, say, she's been poisoned in Verdi's "Luisa Miller," she drives to New Rochelle — "I have my own car, I'm independent!" — or stays in Manhattan if there's a rehearsal the next day.

Then she watches old movies on television or reads easy novels like "The Thorn Birds" to "learn my English." Anything about Napoleon, though, is read "always in Italian. Everything I find about him I buy, the different opinion. I must have 100 books on him. I like strong figures, the personality and what he did in the world."

There's little time for much else but, she insists, that doesn't mean she's cold offstage as one writer implied in a prestigious publication. "I love people," she says, troubled again. "I would love to always take them home but I'm here and there, I have performance and rehearsal and lot of singing." There are guest performances in April and May, record sessions in the summer. "And also I need rest."

And time, she says, her hand on her heart, for the children, Laura, 9, and Filippo, 6. In fact, on this gray Sunday afternoon she says, smiling, rising to shake hands warmly, "I'm taking them to see 'Superman.' "

Where you can help!

(Editor's Note: Many individuals are concerned with what they can do to help those who have been tornado victims with specific needs, such as doing laundry, transporting people to appointments or providing hot meals and supplies. To offer information on any small, individual aid that can be given, the following column will run daily in the Wichita Falls Times and Record News family pages.)

● Persons whose homes have been affected by the tornado and who have no laundry facilities may contact Mrs. William Jones at 691-0240, who says she will be glad to do some laundry.

● Mrs. Joe Patterson, wife of the pastor of First Baptist Church at Dean in Clay County, said that little community east of Wichita Falls has "more than enough food" in reponse to earlier requests.

"In fact we have so much we are sending some to residents on Hampstead Lane in Wichita Falls, those who were hit so hard."

"The churches have been sending women to help with serving the food, and they've been bringing food, also." Many homes were heavily damaged; some demolished; in the immediate Dean area.

● Neighbors also may volunteer their time to take a child (without transportation because of the tornado) to a music lesson.

● Other needs will be picking up clothes from the cleaners, providing a mattress or going to the grocery store for tornado victims.

● Peggy Darter of Community Council Voluntary Action Center, phone 723-4194, said that group needs registered volunteers to take children to the North Texas Easter Seal Rehabilitation Centr at 516 Denver.

"This is because regular volunteers whose homes were damaged have not been able to work. Also, the car that the Red Cross had supplied is being used in the disaster area," she said.

"We need volunteers to pick up children at 11 a.m. on Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday and at 9 a.m. on Thursday. Volunteers should drop by Voluntary Action Center, Seventh and Scott, in the Executive Building for instructions.

● There are still plenty of clothes for tornado victims at Floral Heights United Methodist Church.

Oklahoma State Ostomy conference scheduled

TULSA, Okla. (AP) — Most often it is a secret surgery, a last resort filled with emotional trauma, sometimes leaving both physical and psychological scars.

"Some patients say they'd rather die than have it," said Dr. H. William Allred, medical adviser to the Tulsa Ostomy Association.

An ostomy is an opening left in a patient's abdominal area after surgery to the intestines. An appliance is attached to the opening whereby waste products are removed.

On April 28, the Oklahoma State Ostomy Conference will hold a state meeting at Oral Roberts University.

Olivette McLure, who endured seven years of strength-sapping ulcerative colitis before undergoing the procedure, is conference chairman.

"It shocked me," Mrs. McLure said of her operation. "I wasn't quite ready for that."

Such surgery is performed on 110,000 Americans each year.

After the operation, there is therapy. And that includes a visitation program from others who have had ostomies and who have learned to accept it.

If you've seen Snuggles please let them know!

By HELEN BURDICK
Staff Writer

Susie Payne and her family, whose home at 4409 Tobago was damaged by the recent tornado, are looking for Snuggles - their cat.

Like many Wichita Falls families, they have lost their pet, and they have checked at the Animal Shelter, but they don't seem to be able to find him.

"Snuggles is a year old, male, black and white (black body with white face and four white paws) — he's very shy but loves to be snuggled," Mrs. Payne said.

They lost him Tuesday evening during the storm. .and he was last seen about 3 a.m. Wednesday.

"Our pet doesn't like to be 'outside,'" Mrs. Payne continued, and appealed to anyone who has seen him or given him a home, to call her by calling E.W. Moran Drilling Co., Seymour Hwy.

Any lost pet, returned to a family, can serve as a "stabilizer" for the many children, who are confused and bewildered about recent happenings.

And finding a pet like Snuggles brings some semblance of order back to families. . . it would also make Snuggles very happy!

Mrs. Dale Smith entertained with musical selections.

Mrs. Hyer discussed an article from "Policy Review," a quarterly journal of the Heritage Foundation.

Dear Abby

She may be able to call own plays

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN
Chicago Tribune

DEAR ABBY: Our daughter, Amy, is engaged to a fellow who is a sports nut. Jerry follows baseball, basketball, football, hockey — any sport. He's an authority. He knows the names and numbers of all the players, how much they earn, who was traded for whom, etc. Jerry would sit and watch TV replays and live games all day if he could. And when he's not watching sports, he's reading about it or talking about it. I worry that after they're married he'll make a poor husband and worse father because all he seems to live for is sports. I've tried to warn Amy, but she doesn't listen.

Amy doesn't enjoy sports as much as Jerry, but goes along with it just to please him.

Jerry is a nice enough fellow otherwise, but being sports crazy, what would you say their chances are for a successful marriage? — AMY'S POP

DEAR POP: Who knows? In spite of Jerry's preoccupation with sports and Amy's lack of enthusiasm for it, they could have a great marriage. You sound like a well-intentioned father who's running interference for his little girl who might well be able to call her own signals. Back off, Dad.

DEAR ABBY: My father's English is so poor it's embarrassing. He says, "He don't," "They was," "There ain't no," etc.

Although I'm only 14, I think it is never too late for a person to learn, and my father could learn if he wanted to. He's 35 and was born in this country, but sometimes he talks like a foreigner.

Sometimes I correct him in front of people because if I waited and corrected him later, he'd claim he never said what I said he said, and then we'd have a fight.

Don't you think adults should take criticism with a smile and appreciate it even though it's from a 14-year-old? — LENNY IN THE BRONX

DEAR LENNY: It's humiliating to be corrected in the presence of others. Your intentions may be good, but your timing is bad.

WEATHER FORECAST — Temperatures will be milder in the East and colder in the West in the forecast period, Wednesday until Thursday morning. Rain is forecast for Minnesota. (AP Photo)

Mississippi flood problems move south

JACKSON, Miss. (AP) — The bloated Pearl River was slowly receding today in crippled Jackson, but more evacuations were ordered downstream as the floodwaters surged southward.

The river, which crested at 43.3 feet in the Mississippi capital Tuesday — more than 25 feet above flood stage — had dropped back to 42.5 feet early today but thousands remained isolated from their homes.

And in Alabama, Civil Defense officials worried whether people will leave their homes in time to escape anticipated record flood crests expected to threaten the west-central section of the state.

"They learned their lesson from the '74 flood," Stuckey said. "People are being real good about it. They've been real cooperative."

Jackson officials said 17,000 persons remained homeless in the metropolitan area.

Officials say at least five deaths in Mississippi have been attributed directly to the flooding that began last week.

Stuckey said 20,000 sandbags were distributed Tuesday, mostly to persons wanting to protect their homes from the waters that are expected to reach flood levels Thursday.

"It looks like we'll be evacuating our entire town before the crest gets here," said Georgetown Mayor Beal Allbritton as mobile homes and loaded cars headed toward the only road leading out of the community of 420 about 40 miles south of Jackson.

"Mississippi is going to beat this thing just like it has everything in the past," said presidential aide Bill Simpson. Gov. Cliff Finch and federal officials met Tuesday to brief reporters on plans for providing disaster relief for flood victims. President Carter declared the state a disaster area Monday.

Officials warned that the level of the Pearl River in Jackson still might fluctuate, even as it begins to recede. But they said the water would not clear out of the Jackson area for a week or more, and some areas behind the levees, such as the flooded state fairgrounds, would have to be pumped dry.

In Alabama, Civil Defense Director Warren Rhoades said some 500 families in Selma have been evacuated by late Tuesday from the path of the Alabama River's floodwaters.

Although the rivers already have caused the worst flooding in the two cities since 1961, many residents were reluctant to leave.

Rhoades said many people were staying in houses with water already inside.

"We had to force people out of some places in 1961," he said: "But they'll move in a hurry when they have to start chasing snakes. I don't know what they're waiting for."

Most of the flooding has affected low-income neighborhoods, businesses and manufacturing plants at the river edges or low-lying areas. Business along the riverfronts were closed and barge traffic was halted.

Officials expected the latest evacuations to bring to some 5,000 the number forced from their homes across west and central Alabama since more than 12 inches of rain fell last Thursday and Friday.

In western Illinois, flood waters of the Mississippi and Illinois rivers continued to recede although 126 families remained homeless in Grafton and more than 30 families were kept from their homes in Kampsville in Calhoun County.

Bush to announce bid for presidency

Bush will formally announce his candidacy for the Republican presidential nomination here May 1, his office said Tuesday.

Bush's government career includes time as director of the Central Intelligence Agency, U.S. ambassador to the United Nations and envoy to the People's Republic of China. He also is a former national chairman of the Republican Party.

U.S. personal income showed increase in March

WASHINGTON (AP) — The personal income of Americans rose a full 1 percent in March after lackluster gains in the first two months of the year, the government said today.

But the increase of $19.2 billion in personal income last month to a seasonally adjusted annual rate of $1.85 trillion did not match the larger gains in the fourth quarter of 1978.

A Commerce Department analyst, who asked that his name not be used, said the personal income data, along with other recent government indicators, show some cooling of the economy.

In the past week, figures for industrial production, housing starts, factory capacity and retail sales all have shown March rebounds from winter-depressed January and February levels. But none has matched the rapid December rates.

"I think the economy is slowing," the Commerce analyst said. "That is what everyone seems to desire, what we should be doing."

A cooling of the economy could help take the upward pressure off consumer prices, which have been rising at an annual rate of 15.4 percent so far this year.

The 1 percent increase in personal income in March followed rises of 0.7 percent in February and 0.4 percent in January for a first-quarter rise of 2.1 percent, Commerce figures showed.

That compares with a 3.8 percent increase in the fourth quarter of 1978 and a 2.3 percent rise in the first quarter of 1978.

All categories except farm and dividend income showed March increases. Farm income declined from an annual rate of $30.5 billion in February to $30.3 billion in March.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) You could be judged egotistical and be put down if you attempt to dictate to others today. Do your own thing and let them do theirs.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Important details can not be ignored today. No matter how hard you try to push them into the background, they'll return to haunt you.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Be on guard today. There are some tricky conditions that could spell trouble in your financial dealings with others. Don't you be the cause.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) You're prone to be very indecisive today, and could put off something important until another time. It'll be a mistake.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Impatience could be your undoing today. You'll have to be especially careful when handling mechanical tools, or you could damage something.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Watch your social image today. Unintentionally, you could be too indifferent and/or too self-gratifying, which won't go over well with your friends.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Guard against boastfulness or exaggeration today. Such behavior works against you. It could even affect your close associations.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Tell the truth today, but phrase it very carefully or what you say might be misinterpreted. A friend or associate could be deeply hurt.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) You'd be wise to let someone else take over your purse strings. The one thing you are not good at is handling your financial affairs.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) The way you are doing things today could try the patience of even your most loyal friends. Watch out or you might get a piece of someone's mind.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) It won't become you if you try to be coy today, but of even more importance, you won't get what you're going after.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Your aims may not be in accord with those of your pals today. You'll have to be especially careful in any group endeavor, or pay the consequences.

Your Birthday

April 19, 1979

You will have many opportunities to improve your lot in life, as well as your social standing, this coming year. However, you shouldn't rely solely upon luck to do everything for you.

NRC investigator testifies

Silkwood said cooperative

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — A Nuclear Regulatory Commission investigator says Karen Silkwood was cooperative, intelligent, honest and open when he interviewed her about her contamination with plutonium in 1974.

Gerald Phillip, 54, of Glen Ellyn, Ill., said Miss Silkwood was concerned about her health on Nov. 8, 1974, and didn't appear to be hiding any information.

He elaborated Tuesday on his earlier testimony that it took "some delicate prodding" to get her employer, the Kerr-McGee Corp., to agree to pay the cost of sending her for specialized medical testing in Los Alamos, N.M.

"We (the AEC) were urging that she go ... " Phillip said. "I wanted to make damn sure she was going."

Miss Silkwood's survivors are suing Kerr-McGee for $11.5 million alleging negligence in connection with her contamination. The company contends she contaminated herself, possibly while spiking her urine samples. She died in a Nov. 13, 1974, auto crash.

Oklahoma

On direct examination, Phillip said Miss Silkwood could have easily smuggled plutonium out of the nuclear fuel plant where she was a lab technician. But on cross-examination, he said others may have been in the same position.

"There were scores of people at the plant who had the means to walk off with three ten-thousandths of a gram or 40 pounds of plutonium, isn't that true?" Silkwood lawyer Gerry Spence asked.

"Yes, sir," Phillip said.

He said his conclusions about the contamination of Miss Silkwood and her Edmond, Okla., apartment are strictly his personal opinion.

"The investigation did not reveal how the contamination occurred. That's the official AEC position, isn't it?" Silkwood lawyer Gerry Spence asked.

"Yes, sir," Phillips said.

14-YEAR-OLD DIES IN GUN BATTLE — An Oklahoma Highway Patrol trooper shot and killed a 14-year-old boy from Yale, Okla., after he pinned officers down with high-powered rifle fire in a pasture. The youth went on a shooting rampage, wounding one police officer, killing nine cows and hitting several police cars. Officers are shown approaching the body after the youth ran toward officers firing. (AP Photo)

Self-taught lawyer faces new obstacle

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — David Pitchford went looking for a state where he could take a bar examination without "wasting time" on law school, and discovered Arkansas.

After poring over scores of state codes, he ran across Title 25-101 of the Arkansas state law. He's also run up against the Arkansas Supreme Court.

"It was like an act of God," the Virginia native, who has done undergraduate work toward an English degree at William & Mary, said Tuesday of his find. "There it was in black and white, just what I was looking for."

The Arkansas law says every citizen at least 21 years old with good moral character and possessing the requisite qualification of learning and ability, may, upon application, take the bar exam.

"It doesn't mention law school anywhere," said Pitchford, 26.

But the Arkansas Supreme Court sees things differently. The state's highest court says a person must have a degree from an accredited law school to be qualified to take the bar exam.

It's that rule Pitchford will challenge Monday when he goes before the Arkansas jurists.

"They're saying a rule of court can supersede a law," he said. "I don't buy any part of that."

Pitchford moved from Virginia to Memphis in January so he could be closer to "the grounds of the war." He is working in the office of Southaven, Miss., lawyer Robert G. Gilder while he spars with the Arkansas court.

Pitchford said he has no doubts he can pass the bar exam, and he's even in favor of making the exams more difficult.

"I have learned law from my father since I was 8 and I've worked as a law clerk for several years," he said. "I have a very good understanding of the law.

"I don't think law schools are properly preparing graduates to practice law. A person goes to law school, crams for the last six weeks and takes the bar exam when he gets out. He remembers the law, but doesn't know law."

Pitchford said his father, Franklin Pitchford, passed the Virginia bar exam in 1933 without going to law school. The Virginia law has since been changed.

Vice president visits Denmark

COPENHAGEN, Denmark (AP) — Vice President Walter Mondale and his wife arrived in Denmark today for the third stop on a six-nation tour to reassure small European allies and neutrals of American interest and support.

The Mondales came from Norway, the home of his ancestors, and Iceland, and after Denmark they will visit Sweden, Finland and the Netherlands.

Danish sources said Prime Minister Anker Joergensen and Foreign Minister Henning Christophersen would emphasize to Mondale their government's worry increased military activities by the Soviet Union and its allies in the Baltic area and Danish concern about the modest role so far for European allies in the U.S.-Soviet arms limitation talks.

YOU GOTTA DRIVE IT.
YOU'RE GONNA LOVE IT.
THE SMALL CAR JUST GREW UP.

You get room because the engine's been moved forward. It sits sideways. It's a transverse-mounted 4-cylinder, or you have the option of the world's first transverse V6. Both are GM-built by various divisions, and your Olds Dealer has details on sources and availability.

Omega has front-wheel drive. And MacPherson strut suspension. And rack-and-pinion steering. Which help make Omega quick, agile and very smooth on the road.

Omega also has very good mileage for a car this size. With standard engine and transmission, the EPA estimate is (24) mpg. And the highway estimate is 38 mpg.

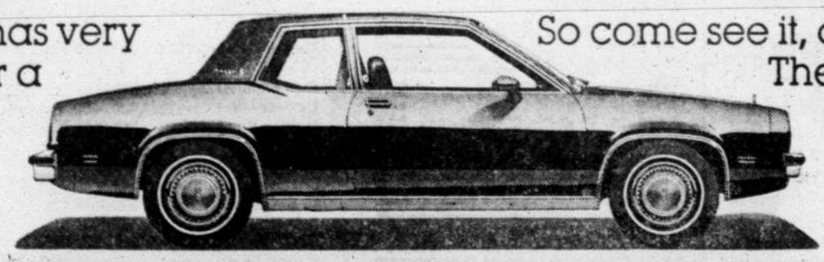

Remember, the circled EPA estimate is for comparisons to other cars. Your mileage depends on speed, weather and trip length; your actual highway mileage will probably be lower than the highway estimate.

Profiles ...smoking dispute

WASHINGTON (AP) — A Civil Aeronautics Board member who says she argued for 45 minutes with an Eastern Airlines flight attendant about her right to a "no-smoking" seat has gotten a personal apology from the company's chairman, former astronaut FRANK BORMAN.

CAB board member ELIZABETH BAILEY, a non-smoker, said the attendant also called her a "witch," asked the pilot to put her off the plane and announced over the aircraft's public address system: "We wish everyone a good trip except for one lady in the back."

Borman, whose television commercials tell us Eastern's employees "have to earn our wings every day," apologized in person the day after Ms. Bailey filed a formal complaint about the incident with the CAB's bureau of consumer protection. The board regulates the airline industry.

ELIZABETH BAILEY

HENRY FONDA

LOS ANGELES (AP) — HENRY FONDA was reported "up and walking" at Cedars-Sinai Medical Center, where he is being treated for inflammatory arthritis of his left hip.

A hospital spokeswoman said Tuesday the 73-year-old stage and screen star was "in excellent spirits."

Fonda was admitted to the hospital Sunday, the day after he was released from a Chicago hospital where he spent a week nursing the same ailment.

He hurt his hip during a performance of "First Monday in October" in Los Angeles, and was appearing in the same play in Chicago when he was hospitalized. The production was subsequently closed.

The Cedars-Sinai spokeswoman said it was not known how long Fonda would remain at the hospital.

OLIVIA NEWTON-JOHN

JOHN RIDEOUT

MALIBU, Calif. (AP) — Singer-actress OLIVIA NEWTON-JOHN is in her Malibu home today, recuperating after a week's hospital stay for treatment of "an acute viral illness," a spokesman said.

The spokesman said the 30-year-old Australian-born singer was released Tuesday from St. John's Hospital, where she was confined with a liver infection that caused her temperature to rise to 102.

She entered the hospital April 10, the day after performing the Oscar-hominated song "Hopelessly Devoted To You" from the movie "Grease" at the Academy Awards ceremony.

"She's doing very well," Dr. ELSIE GIORGI said. Of the singer's ailment, she added: "We still don't know exactly what it was. We'll be doing tests for another week."

Bloch said the three-time Grammy winner will recuperate at her home for the next 10 days or so.

MUHAMMAD ALI

VANESSA REDGRAVE

SALEM, Ore. (AP) — JOHN RIDEOUT will begin paying the state $50 a month in June to reimburse $1,322 in welfare funds received by his wife and child while the couple was separated.

Rideout and his wife GRETA have separated four times since their marriage Nov. 15, 1976. The third time came when she charged him with rape.

After a much publicized trial last December, Rideout was acquitted of rape and the couple reconciled. They have since split up again and divorce proceedings are scheduled later this month.

The state was seeking $4,256 from Rideout.

"The Support Enforcement Division agreed to what is considered a reasonable amount based on his salary," explained Marion County Circuit Judge ALBIN NORBLAD.

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — MUHAMMAD ALI has purchased a home in suburban Bala Cynwyd for $60,000, according to a lawyer who said he represented the former heavyweight boxing champion in the purchase.

JOHN COLEHOWER of Philadelphia confirmed that the house had been purchased by Ali on April 2. He declined comment on reports it would be occupied by Ali's second wife, BELINDA. They were divorced in 1977.

Security has been so tight that the man who sold the house, MICHAEL MCCARTHY, did not know who the purchaser was.

"Nobody told me anything," he said.

CHICAGO (AP) — JANE BYRNE, Chicago's first mayor, says the city has problems that go back several years into the regime of her late political mentor, RICHARD DALEY.

But Mrs. Byrne, on her first day in office Tuesday, still defended Daley as someone who "was really trying" to improve te city's neighborhoods.

Mrs. Byrne said she would like to have former Daley aid THOMAS KEANE on her staff. However, she conceded voters might look disfavorably on such an appointment. Keane recently was released from jail after serving a term for mail fraud.

LONDON (AP) — Actress VANESSA REDGRAVE has tossed her hat in the ring for the May. 3 parlimentary elections as a member of the tiny ultra-leftwing Workers Revolutionary Party.

Miss Redgrave, who is running for a labor-held seat in industrial Manchester, received only 394 votes out of a total 27,000 during the last general election 4½ years ago.

She said her party seeks nationalization of basic industry and withdrawl of all British troops from Northern Ireland.

Clowning around more than fun

"Everyone has a few comic characters inside," said Ms. Isaacson, who turned a dark warehouse in Berkeley into the first clown school on the West Coast. "It's all a matter of letting them out."

Her school is less formal and rigid than those run by Ringling Brothers and Barnum & Bailey in Florida and the Big Apple Circus in New York. It's geared to the average person.

"I'm interested in helping the person who wants to loosen up and play instead of watching TV," said the 32-year-old special education teacher-turned-gymnast and clown.

Her students range from disabled children to foreigners who can't speak English, from teachers to plumbers and electricians. Only a handful plan to enter the profession.

"The clown is the outsider, the pathos character everyone can relate to through their hearts," she said.

As Boo-lu the clown, Ms. Isaacson has opened for comedienne Lily Tomlin, performed with the San Francisco Make-a-Circus and appeared last year at the International Women's Year Conference in Houston.

The slender, dark-haired woman dons baggy red pants, orange sneakers, a red and white striped shirt with sleeves twice the length of her arms, a red top coat and tails. Two gold tear drops dot her rouged cheeks.

"Traditional clowning was open to men only," she said. "In the last five years, women have joined the ranks, bringing a new subtlety, sensitivity and sensibility to the art."

Ms. Isaacson describes her Boo-lu as "sympatico with the underdog, deeply sad, whose joy comes from tears.

Instant stardom peculiar experience

By EARL WISON
Field Syndicate

NEW YORK — Pam Dawber, the Mindy of "Mork and Mindy," who resembles Jane Fonda, was watching the Oscars, having made her singing debut on the Perry Como show just ahead, and she told me that sudden fame achieved from TV can be very peculiar.

"People have dogs named Mindy," she revealed. "I didn't know Mindy is a dog's name. All kinds of dogs.

"I heard three times that Robin Williams (Mork) and I were killed in auto accidents. I'm pretty sure that wasn't true.

"I have a log cabin and part of a mountain, about five acres, in the Catskills. There are some reporters who are sure I'm having an affair there with Christopher Reeve. Wouldn't I know it if I was having an affair with Superman? Christopher Reeve is a friend of Robin's and has a girlfriend, but not me."

Pam has her own guy she wouldn't mention.

Pam, a very successful model from Detroit and Pontiac, was once the darling of the auto shows. Now she doesn't say much about going back to Detroit because fans of "Mork and Mindy" won't give her time to see friends.

"Is Pam Dawber your real name?" I asked her.

She gave me a peculiar look. "Would anybody make up 'Pam Dawber'?"

Man still trying to make mark

ASH HOLLOW, Neb. (AP) — Ever since man first crossed the barren plains he's been trying to make his mark on them, said University of Nebraska-Lincoln folklorist Roger Welsch. The latest attempt is marking fence rows with old, worn-out cowboy boots, he said.

"They give a variety of reasons for the practice, from protecting the fragile ends of the posts to indicating how many coyotes they've killed on the land, but I don't believe any of that," Welsch said.

Dean residents down but not out

By JOE BROWN
Regional Staff

DEAN, Texas — This tiny corner of Clay County received a "killer" blow last week from the destructive tornado that began in Wichita Falls, but the residents of Dean refuse to go down for "the count".

Located on U.S. 79 that runs between Wichita Falls and Waurika, Okla., Red Cross officials said 67 homes were destroyed and a total of 239 were either damaged or destroyed.

Disaster headquarters here is in First Baptist Church and the mayor of Dean, Bob Reese, said there were no deaths in the area, but six victims are still hospitalized, some in critical condition.

The twister that dropped from the skies west of Wichita Falls last week stayed on the ground for more than 20 miles. After cutting completely across Wichita Falls, the storm continued through the rural areas of Clay County.

Reese said the bulk of the damage was done in the area around Homestead Lane, Tammen Road, U.S. 79 and FM 2393 that runs between Dean and Jolly, Texas.

"This has really brought the people of Clay County together," the mayor said. "We were feeding up to 350 people every meal for a while right after the storm, but these figures have gone down."

Now, he said, there are about 50 for breakfast and then 200 to 225 for lunch and about 175 to 200 for the evening meals.

"At first it was the women from this community who were serving and helping distribute the clothing and food, but people from all across the county have come in and helped and it has made us much closer," he said.

Reese also praised the Red Cross for its cooperation, saying there were two staffers taking disaster aid applications and a mobile unit was moving food to workers in other areas of the county suffering damage from the twister.

Since Dean First Baptist Church was headquarters, the pastor and his wife, the Rev. and Mrs. Joe Patterson, were active in directing activities in the center.

No deaths occurred in the area, but six were hospitalized and some still are listed as critical, said Reese.

Electricity and telephone service have been restored, he said, but house trailers for some elderly residents are badly needed and their applications are being processed by the disaster teams.

"If we had the trailers, we could be self-sufficient," the mayor said.

Mrs. Patterson said they had plenty of food and clothing donated for the residents, but they could use some new pillows and men's underwear.

From the roads it appeared that Dean residents were much further along in clearing debris from around their homes, but this could be because the homes were so distant from each other and thus easier to work.

A disaster fund to aid tornado victims in Clay County has been started at the First National Bank of Byers. Joe Davidson, vice president, said checks should be made out to "Clay County Disaster Fund" and mailed into the bank. The money will be used to aid residents of the area between Dean, Jolly and Petrolia.

National Guard still on scene

By JODY COX
Staff Writer

Though their numbers are decreasing slowly, military personnel continue to maintain a reassuring presence in tornado-stricken areas of Wichita Falls.

Operating on a 24-hour basis, "saturation patrols" of National Guardsmen are serving as security police to detect and deter looting. Though they cannot arrest suspected looters, the Guard can detain them until Department of Public Safety units arrive.

"They are serving as security," said Col. Bobby L. Myers, commander of the 49th Armored Division Artillery and of local National Guard troops on duty in Wichita Falls.

"By maintaining a constant presence, they get real familiar with their areas and can provide tornado victims with protection and reassurance," Myers said.

The 2nd Battalion of the 112th Armored from Fort Worth pulled out of town Sunday afternoon, its 235 men and women having served in disaster relief, security and traffic control roles since their arrival last Wednesday, the day after the tornado struck.

Some 150 members of the 2nd Battalion of the 131st Field Artillery of Wichita Falls, Bowie and Breckenridge remain on duty in Wichita Falls, and Myers said the National Guard probably would be kept on the job until Friday.

"We're working closely with the chief of police and the Department of Public Safety on this," Myers said, "but right now it appears that we will be pulling out by the end of the week. It appears that the city people are going much faster with their recovery operations than expected."

Some 250 people from Sheppard Air Force Base assisted with cleanup and traffic control during the last week, but they were pulled out Monday, Myers said.

There were around 430 National Guardsmen on duty in Wichita Falls at the height of the disaster relief and recovery efforts, Myers said, including a special communications unit from Austin which brought along its communications van center.

Myers had nothing but praise for the services military personnel provided during the days following the tornado. "All of them, the National Guard, the men and women from Sheppard and all the rest just did a fine job while they were here, he said.

Under state law, persons convicted can be fined up to $200 and spend not more than 60 days in jail for each conviction.

"There are numerous examples of people who have gone out of their way to help others. The people out to make a quick buck should be stopped," he said.

Schrandt said he had heard of at least 40 complaints, but no complaints have been filed.

If necessary, he said, a special county judge will be appointed to handle the gouging cases.

Lost: One 10-foot-diameter golf ball and an eight-foot tee. Time of loss: about 6 p.m. April 10. Possible vicinity of loss: anywhere between Southwest Parkway in Wichita Falls and Lawton, Okla.

The giant ball and tee may be the most unusual items lost by residents of Wichita Falls in last week's tornado. The ball, mounted on its tee, was located at the golf driving range on Southwest Parkway.

Charles and Jackie Spragins, owners of the driving range, said they have no idea where the storm may have driven their fiberglass ball. When they checked the driving range after the storm, everything except an overturned truck was destroyed but the ball and tee were not to be found.

"We found one piece of the golf ball so we think it may have shattered when the storm hit it," Mrs. Spragins said. There was no sign of the tee.

Many reports have surfaced as to the possible whereabouts of the golf ball, but none has been substantiated.

Mrs. Spragins said she has been told the ball is in Lawton, Okla. Another report was that half of the ball was in Dean, Texas, and the other half in Henrietta.

"I don't know where in the heck it is," she said. "But I'd like to find it."

Tuesday afternoon a caller to the newspaper said the ball was beside the Waurika, Okla., police station.

By PAT ZAJAC
Staff Writer

City and county officials Tuesday informally recommended that Wichita General Hospital seek to create a hospital district to finance hospital improvements and operations.

The hospital board and advisory commission, county commissioners and city council met for a work session to discuss a proposed $9.6 million expansion of the hospital and ways to finance the project.

No formal action was taken at the meeting by either the county commissioners or city council. The hospital board and advisory commission will wait for a formal recommendation from the city and county before taking the issue to the voters.

County Judge Tom Bacus said he would support a hospital district because it would give the hospital a reliable, stable source of revenue.

"We've reached the point in the financing of the hospital that the only way the hospital is going to make it is with some kind of tax-supported funding. Do you continue to do it through elected bodies, which are subject to change and flux?" he said.

"I'm in support of it," Mayor Kenneth Hill said. "I'm in complete sympathy when the hospital comes to us looking for money."

The proposed $9.6 million expansion of the hospital is Phase I of a master plan. It proposes to upgrade patient rooms, build a new obstetrics-gynecology facility, construct a separate cancer therapy facility, remodel and consolidate administrative areas in the old wing and build a new emergency room.

Construction would begin in about two years and be completed in five years, he said.

PAPER CLIPS FORM LINK TO BETTER JOB FOR HANDICAPPED

A paper clip is a mighty small item, but for about two dozen workers in Wichita Falls it's a "last chance or a stepping stone to a better job."

Dick Weber, executive director of IDC, said, "The paper clip operation employs about 18 vocationally handicapped persons, and for many it is a last chance at a job while for others it provides a stepping stone to a better paying job in private industry.

"The pay ranges from 65 cents an hour to almost $5 an hour — it's based on productivity, and the lesser wage should in no way be considered a penalty."

Weber gives credit to Sen. John Tower and Rep. Jack Hightower for the paper clip industry's being in Wichita Falls, and it's no small industry.

The plant here at 3401 Armory Road has produced about 700 million paper clips in its little more than a year of existence. Into this production has gone 2,500 tons of steel wire. Production is from 10 machines that turn out more than 800 clips a minute. These are packaged and shipped to 11 regional warehouses of the General Service Administration.

Weber has become a little more secretive about Wichita Falls' paper clip industry since it was televised nationally recently.

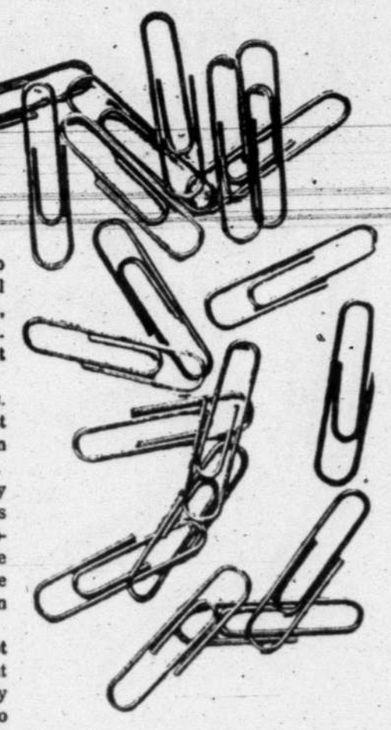

Since then he has received telephone calls from "as far away as Oregon from a broker" and from several companies that manufacture clips for commercial use.

So today, the Opportunity Workshop paper clip operation supplies all federal agencies worldwide with that small item, one that can be found in nearly every desk. The plant here turns out the government model of the paper clip.

It started with three slower machines. Since a faster machine was designed last fall, the plant can meet the production needs for the total government demand.

IDC has other operations that employ the vocationally handicapped. Its products include sub-electronic assemblies, shipping crates, bed frames and — for those who may be building a house — even those yellow-topped stakes used in construction and survey work.

IDC is proud of its accomplishments: not in items produced, but in human lives that are able to take on a new meaning, many for the first time, and for many who thought there would never be that first time.

Wichita, Clay counties' unemployment reported down through mid-February

By LEON HOOTEN
Business Editor

Unemployment rate in Wichita and Clay counties in mid-February was 3.6 percent, compared to 3.7 percent a month earlier and 4.3 percent in February 1978, according to E.R. Bearden, Texas Employment Commission office manager in Wichita Falls.

Civilian labor force at last reporting date was 60,090, compared to month-earlier total of 59,710 and 58,020 in February 1978.

Civilian labor force is the number of employed and unemployed workers residing in the two-county Wichita Falls area.

Total employment in mid-February was 57,930, compared to 57,490 a month earlier and 55,510 a year earlier.

The number of unemployed at last reporting date was pegged at 2,160, compared to 2,220 a month earlier and 2,510 a year earlier.

Compared to same period last year, wage and salary job numbers were up about 1,130. Manufacturing increased 390, or 4.4 percent, from the February 1978 level, while nonmanufacturing employment expanded 1.9 percent during the past year.

A rise of 50 was noted in transportation, communications and utilities, while new businesses aided in boosting trade employment by about 250, compared to February 1978.

Growth by financial institutions plus an active real estate market helped create an employment growth of 100 in that category.

Some shortages exist for nurses, stenographers, cooks, waiters and waitresses, automobile merchanics, machinists and combination welders, Bearden said. Information about these jobs may be obtained at the Wichita Falls TEC offices. Average weekly earnings in manufacturing in mid-February were $213.62, compared to $219.13 a month earlier and $196.96 a year earlier.

The average weekly earnings in durable goods manufacture were $223.86, compared to $228.28 a week earlier and $210.54 a year earlier.

The average in nondurable goods was $187.07, compared to $193.67 a week earlier and $159.46 a year earlier.

Average earnings include premium pay for overtime, holidays and late-shift work. It also includes only production workers.

Copelin's Corner

Tip your hat to the military

By CARROLL COPELIN
Staff Writer

Heroes were a dime a dozen in last week's tornado. Everywhere you went, there were stories of people ignoring their own needs and safety to help others, often total strangers.

But these heroes, like most, will never have their stories published. There are just too many of them. The Corner would like to give a special salute to several hundred National Guardsmen and an awful lot of personnel from Sheppard Air Force Base for the work they've done in the wake of this tragedy.

Bill James, a 28-year-old staff sergeant from Fort Worth, was typical of the guardsmen who came to help. James works for a Johnson & Johnson firm in Cowtown and has been in the guard eight years.

Talking to him late one chilly night at a busy checkpoint, he seemed resigned to his fate. "I'll go back home Sunday so it isn't all that bad," he said, adding that the hundred men and women with his group had been catching naps in the back end of the big trucks that brought them from Fort Worth.

Like the tornado victims, James said oral hygene — or the lack of it — was a major problem for him. "The rest isn't so bad. The health department says you only have to bathe every seven days so I'll be home in time to comply with that," he said with a grin.

For years, Wichita Falls has stressed close community relations with Sheppard Air Force Base, and those actions certainly paid fruit last week.

It began almost before the tornado had gone back into its dark cloud. Personnel from the School of Health Care Sciences headed for city hospitals immediately. Others began preparing to set up aid stations.

By Wednesday morning, hundreds of base personnel had volunteered to help out. Dozens manned roadblocks, went back to Sheppard for a meal, and then got in line again to come back.

Hundreds of young men and women from the base formed teams and went to damaged areas to help clear the debris. The small community of Dean, which was hard hit by the killer twister, awoke Saturday to find dozens of these cleanup teams climbing out of Air Force vehicles.

These teams did in a single day what would have taken many days for Dean residents to do by themselves, and the young airmen didn't even wait for a thank you before moving on to the next damaged home.

I know at one time or another, most of us have had a less-than-polite thought about someone in the military, but these young men and women have proven, beyond a thought, that they are top quality. They care about their country, and perhaps more important, they care about others.

I don't know about you, but personally, I'm glad to be able to call a few of them friends.

MIAMI (AP) — National Airlines has advised its stockholders to approve a merger offer from Pan American World Airways, but hasn't yet completely ruled out Miami-based rival Eastern Airlines.

In a proxy statement released Friday, National said it was still hoping that an auction would be held between Pan Am and Eastern, if Eastern agrees to extend its offer beyond May 1 and will wait until the Civil Aeronautics Board rules on which, if any, of the competing carriers can proceed with the complex merger battle.

Texas International, the small but ambitious company that started the merger race last summer, was described on first reference simply as "a third carrier seeking to acquire control of National."

In an introduction to the 160-page statement sent to the some 5,500 National stockholders, National Chairman L.B. Maytag said the board of directors "has concluded that the terms of the proposed merger with Pan American are fair and equitable..." and unanimously recommended a favorable vote at the annual meeting here May 16.

Texas International revealed in July that it was buying up National stock and then made an unspecific merger offer. Pan Am followed with stock purchases and a $41-per-share offer for National's outstanding shares.

National officials say Pan Am now owns 24.1 percent of National's stock, Texas International owns 24.5 percent and Eastern owns only "a nominal number of shares."

National had said it would recommend Pan Am's offer to its stockholders last fall, before Eastern jumped in with a $50-per-share offer. A series of offers and counteroffers followed, with National finally suggesting an auction between Pan Am and Eastern, assuming both got federal approval.

Buddy Bell big RBI man for Rangers

By MIKE HARRIS
AP Sports Writer

CLEVELAND (AP) — It may startle some Cleveland Indians fans, but Buddy Bell is hitting cleanup for the Texas Rangers.

The third baseman, who never had more than 64 runs batted in during seven seasons with the Indians, already has become a big RBI man for the Rangers.

The handsome blond, hitting fourth in the potent Texas lineup, drove in three runs Tuesday to help the Rangers keep their amazing mastery over the Indians with a 6-2 triumph.

That raised Bell's RBI total to eight, gave Texas a big boost toward its seventh victory in eight games this season and sent the Indians reeling to their 13th straight defeat at the hands of the Rangers.

In fact, Cleveland, 2-7 going into today's game with Texas, has not beaten the Rangers since April 17, 1978 when Rick Waits shut them out 6-0.

"I know how frustrating this thing (the losing string) is for them," Bell said. "I was there last year. But we're just playing good baseball right now. Everybody's playing with confidence."

The soft-spoken youngster broke out in a shy grin when asked about hitting fouth.

"This was the fifth game I've hit fourth," Bell explained. "He (Manager Pat Corrales) put me there because Richie (Zisk) was sick. I've had all eight RBI from the fourth spot.

"I know it's not really my spot and everybody here knows it's not my spot, but I've been successful hitting fourth. I'm not a big RBI guy, but I'm feeling comfortable hitting there. I'm just going to enjoy it."

It was Waits, 1-2, the Rangers picked on for their first four runs Tuesday. After dueling Texas starter Ferguson Jenkins, 3-0, to a 1-1 deadlock through five innings, Waits gave up three runs in the sixth.

Bump Wills and rookie Bill Sample reached base on infield hits and moved up a base on a sacrifice bunt. Bell, who also had a run-scoring double, then broke the tie with the first of two sacrifice flies.

A walk and singles by John Ellis and Jim Sundberg capped the rally and chased Waits. Meanwhile, Jenkins and reliever Jim Kern, another ex-Indians, stopped Cleveland on six hits and each struck out six Cleveland batters.

The only Cleveland runs came on Andre Thornton's leadoff homer in the fifth and a run-scoring single by Jim Norris with two out in the ninth.

"We just have not played the way we are capable of," said Cleveland Manager Jeff Torborg. "We'll come out of this, but I just wish we'd hurry up.

"I'm not planning on a lot of lineup changes right now. The guys who have to come out of a slump have to do it in the field. They can't do it from the bench."

KEEP AWAY — Los Angeles Dodgers' Davey Lopes, right, does all kinds of contortions trying to keep from getting tagged by Houston Astros' first baseman Bob Watson during third inning action Tuesday in Los Angeles. After numerous pickoff attempts on Lopes, he stole second and then advanced to third on a wild throw to second. LA won the game, 10-6. (AP Photo)

MSU baseball team wins one on field, two off

By DOUG BROWN
Staff Sports Writer

Midwestern State University's baseball team became the first city squad to try its luck on the field since last week's disaster, but before the Indians even took to the field they received a bit of good news from Texas Athletic Conference officials.

While the Indians were splitting a pair of contests Tuesday night in Sherman against Austin College, Texas Wesleyan was issuing some news that, when official, will make the rest of the Texas Athletic Conference jump for joy.

Ron Freeman and Jackie Davis, two players that have seen action as courtesy runner and pinch hitter, respectively, have been found ineligible by the Texas Wesleyan school officials and if the District 8 eligibility committee agrees, then the Rams may have to forfeit anywhere from six to 12 conference games, including two against Midwestern.

Before the Rams found out about the ineligible players, Texas Wesleyan led the TAC with a 10-2 mark, followed by Lubbock Christian at 7-5, Midwestern at 5-7 and Dallas Baptist at 2-10.

Since then, the Rams — obviously disheartened by the news — dropped three of four league games against Dallas Baptist over the weekend to slip further in the standings. According to a league spokesman, Texas Wesleyan will have to forfeit eight games, although other officials have varied reports of six to 12 games. Should the Rams forfeit eight games, the league standings would look like this: Lubbock Christian, 10-2; Midwestern, 7-5; Dallas Baptist, 5-7, and Texas Wesleyan, 2-14.

Midwestern, which had a four-game series with Lubbock Christian last week indefinitely postponed because of the tornado, may benefit from TWC's woes by gaining second place in the TAC standings and drawing the at-large berth in the District 8 four-team tournament. However, until the ineligibility of the two players is official, the TAC schools best not count their chickens before they're hatched.

"It is an unfortunate circumstance for Texas Wesleyan, but until it is made final by the district committee and the national eligibility chairman, Midwestern fans better not jump for joy," Dr. Gerald Stockton, MSU athletic director, said. "I have heard the news from the grapevine, but until an official report finds its way to my desk, I don't think we should worry about that."

Midwestern set a school record for most wins in a season Tuesday against Austin College when it picked up its 24th win of the season against only 10 losses (two of the previous losses become wins because of the TWC forfeits) when the Tribe defeated Austin 13-1 behind the pitching of Ricky Teakell and the 16-hit attack led by Rick Loesch.

Loesch powered his seventh home run of the season in the win over Austin and raised his runs batted in total to a club-record 42 in 34 games.

Midwestern also raised its stolen base mark to 80 as a team after 10 base thefts in the victory.

Prime representative for Uncle Sam

By WILL GRIMSLEY

NEW YORK (AP) — If you're an enterprising photographer wanting to pose a former heavyweight boxing champion with his fighting son, you have to get something different.

"No lap," snapped Smokin' Joe Frazier. Nobody argued.

It looked just as good to have father and son perched on the arm of a chair, comparing clinched fists.

Marvis Frazier, 18, Golden Gloves heavyweight boxing champion of the United States and aspirant to a gold medal in the 1980 Olympics in Moscow, beamed.

LIKE FATHER, LIKE SON

If his budding career follows its natural course, Marvis Frazier, eldest of the brood of seven Frazier kids, will be representing Uncle Sam in the ring just as his dad, the Philadelphia butcher, did in the 1964 Games in Tokyo.

"If he shows, I'll fight him," says Smokin' Joe's boy levelly.

Marvis has facial features like his famous dad, but there all resemblance ceases. At 6-foot-1½, he is two inches taller. He is a lean 205 pounds compared with Joe's present 234 and top fighting weight of 220.

Smokin' Joe was what his name implies — a swarmer, a veritable windmill of punching power featured by a deadly left hook. His style called for him to soften up a foe with body blows and then put him away with a hook that could come from anywhere.

"My dad had to fight that way because most of his opponents were taller," the youngster rationalized. "He had to adjust. I am taller than most of the people I fight. It's up to them to adjust."

Boxing two years, Marvis has piled up a 30-0 amateur record, with 17 kayoes. He recently won the National Golden Gloves title that qualifies him for the Pan Am Games in Puerto Rico in July.

Marvis was at ringside for all of his father's fights after the second Oscar Bonavena bout in December 1968, including the great battles with Muhammad Ali. He never dreamed some day he would be entering the ring himself.

"When I was a small kid all I wanted to be was a space man or a doctor," he said. "I didn't want my pretty face messed up. I went to a private prep school (Wyncote Academy in Philadelphia) which didn't have any kind of contact sports. Later I shifted to public high school. When I was 14, I would go over to pop's gym and work out.

"But all that time my dad was trying to discourage me from fighting. He made me go seven months before he would let me even spar. Once we were boxing each other and he caught me with a left. I started to fall, but he held me. It was just an accident."

"The boy's right — I was against it," said Joe. "Then I saw that he had the ability and desire. Lots of guys won't work at it. As for Marvis — I have to force him to take a day off. I tell him, 'You can't keep taking gas out of the tank without putting some more in.'"

"She tells me, 'My husband is one thing, but it's another for my baby. I don't want you hurt.'"

Marvis promises there will be no pro career. "If I can get that Olympic medal, that's it," he says. "I'm going to college and then get in business management."

Police won't cross lines

BOSTON (AP) — Boston police say they will refuse to cross major league umpires' picket lines to work special details for the Red Sox at Fenway Park.

"If the umpires picket Fenway at any time, we would be duty-bound to honor the picket line and our men would not cross it," said Chester Broderick on Tuesday.

Broderick, who heads the 2,000-member Boston Police Patrolmen's Association, said he was out of town Sunday, the last time the umpires picketed Fenway Park, and about 20 police officers crossed the lines to work.

Hawks even; Spurs two up

Sonics, Suns win in West semis

By BARRY WILNER
AP Sports Writer

The Atlanta Hawks and Philadelphia 76ers are heading home, one team having accomplished its short-range goal and the other hoping that home cooking will get it on the right track.

The surprising Hawks evened their best-of-seven Eastern Conference semifinal series Tuesday with a 107-99 victory over the defending National Basketball Association champion Washington Bullets. The series resumes Friday in Atlanta, where the Hawks have won 17 straight games.

The Sixers, reeling under a two-game deficit in their series with San Antonio after a 121-120 loss in Texas Tuesday, return to Philadelphia wondering if they can stop George Gervin.

The Western Conference semifinals got underway with Seattle besting Los Angeles 112-101 and Phoenix defeating Kansas City 102-99. The Sonics entertaing the Lakers again tonight while the Suns host the Kings again Friday.

"This victory gives us control of the series," said Hawks center Tree Rollins, who was scoreless in Atlanta's opening loss to the Bullets but had 13 points in Game 2. "If we win in Atlanta, we take the series."

"Remember, we have the best winning record in the league on the road," said Bullets forward Bobby Dandridge, a 36-point scorer Tuesday. "I wouldn't be surprised if we went down there and won two games.

"We still haven't played the way we did in the regular season when we were at our peak. That should come in Atlanta. Then they'll see the real Washington Bullets."

Spurs 121, 76ers 120

Philadelphia Coach Billy Cunningham will have to find someone to stop Gervin, the NBA scoring leader the past two seasons, if the Sixers hope to get past the Spurs, a team that hasn't won a playoff round since it was the Dallas Chaparrals of the American Basketball Association in 1968.

With 6-foot-6 All-Star guard Doug Collins injured, Cunningham has tried forwards Bobby Jones and Joe Bryant and guards Henry Bibby and Al Skinner on Gervin, the "Iceman." But the 6-7 Gervin has scored 31 and 29 points in the two Spur victories.

"For me to guard 'Ice,' we'll have to get more action on defense," said Jones. "You have to recover so quickly on defense because he can beat you."

"Jones was tougher but I've got to be ready to work no matter who they put on me," noted Gervin.

Larry Kenon scored 27 and James Silas had 25 for San Antonio. Philadelphia was led by Julius Erving with 25 points.

The Spurs needed free throws from Mike Gale and Allan Bristow in the final 12 seconds to nail down the victory.

"This was the biggest win in the history of the franchise," said Silas, one of two former Chaparrals remaining.

Sonics 112, Lakers 101

Seattle overcame a 17-pount first-half deficit, took the lead for good with 5:46 left in the third period and held off Los Angeles. Gus Williams was high for the Sonics with 27 points and Dennis Johnson had 26. Kareem Abdul-Jabbar paced the Lakers with 25.

"I still think the key is how well we play Gus Williams," said Lakers Coach Jerry West. "We didn't do good tonight. I thought we played well but our inability to stop Williams and Dennis Johnson hurt us."

Seattle Coach Lenny Wilkens said, "The most pleasing thing was that we won after the layoff (of one week after a first-round bye). At the start we were not in our natural rhythm. We felt that as long as we kept playing defense it would come around."

Suns 102, Kings 99

The Midwest Division champion Kings didn't look a bit rusty in the first half after their week off, assuming a 58-49 halftime advantage. But the Suns pecked away and took the lead for good with 1:44 left in the third period.

Paul Westphal had 25 points and Walter Davis 24 for Phoenix. The Kings were led by Otis Birdsong's 20 points.

"We stood around too much, didn't get good shots and they got back in the game," said Kings Coach Cotton Fitzsimmons. "We controlled the tempo of the game, then let it get away in the third period."

Highly-sought cager signs with Longhorns

CINCINNATI (AP) — LaSalle Thompson, one of the nation's more sought after scholastic basketball players, has signed a national letter of intent with the University of Texas, but he admits he might have stayed at home if it hadn't been so much trouble.

The 6-foot-10 center, who led Withrow High School to a No. 1 ranking in Ohio this year, said Tuesday he "most probably" would have attended the University of Cincinnati if he hadn't become involved in a recruiting violation involving the school.

The National Collegiate Athletic Association said "a representative of the university's athletic interests" had a hand in buying Thompson some clothes.

Thompson would be ineligible for post-season tournament competition if he decided to attend Cincinnati, the NCAA said.

"I just decided it was too much of a hassle to fight the NCAA," Thompson said.

The incident came to light during Cincinnati's in-house investigation into alleged NCAA violations.

So, Texas won out after Thompson had ruled out more than 300 other schools. Thompson said he had limited his choices to three schools — Texas, Kansas State and Hawaii — before making his final decision Monday night.

"They play a running game and I like that. I don't like a slow down game," Thompson said. "I feel I can fit right into their program."

Special Olympics needs volunteers

A meeting of any interested Special Olympics volunteers is scheduled for 7 p.m. Thursday night in Midwestern State's D.L. Ligon Coliseum.

The Special Olympics track meet will take place at 8 a.m. Saturday at Shepherd Air Force Base with more than 270 entrants expected. Jerry Johnson, meet director, said there is a need for 100 volunteers to sign up.

"Anyone interested of aiding this cause is asked to come to this meeting," Johnson said. "We are going through with the meet this weekend because there is no other time we could schedule it and still give these kids a chance to compete in the state meet in early May."

Mahaffey, who underwent surgery on his left hand that was damaged in the Bing Crosby National Pro-Am, has been out of action for almost three months.

He arrived in La Costa over the weekend to practice for this exclusive event that brings together only the winners of regular pro golf tour tournaments from the preceeding 12 months.

"He tried to play, but the hand became badly swollen and he had to quit," one tournament official said.

"He could have teed off and played a couple of holes and then pulled out and gotten last-place money ($3,400)," another official said, "but he said that wouldn't be right, wouldn't be fair to the people or the sponsors so he withdrew and went home."

Mahaffey, whose career has been plagued by injuries, last year won the Ben Hogan award for a comeback from another hand injury as well as elbow problems. That comeback was capped by his victory in the PGA National Championship.

He also won another American tour title in 1978, took the individual championship in the prestigious World Cup and then touched off the 1979 season by winning the first event, the Bob Hope Desert Classic.

With him out, nine multiple winners are left in the field that will be chasing a first prize of $54,000 over the 6,889-yard, par-72 La Costa Country Club course.

The most recent, of course, is newly crowned Masters champion Fuzzy Zoeller, who also won in nearby San Diego earlier this season. Zoeller said he's "still on Cloud 9" from his playoff victory in Augusta, Ga.

In addition to his Player of the Year titles the last two seasons and his position atop the year's money-winning list, Watson has finished second, first and second in his last three starts.

With his strong play and the sudden revival of Jack Nicklaus, who missed the Masters playoff by a single shot, another in the dramatic series of Watson-Nicklaus confrontations is a possibility.

AC's Jeff Ray named all-star

ARCHER CITY, Texas — Archer City senior Jeff Ray has been selected as one of two Class A players to compete for the North squad in the annual Coaches' All-Star game which will be held in Fort Worth this summer.

Ray, who was a three-year starter for the Wildcats, was named earlier this year to his All-District team and All-Regional squad. He has made All-District twice and All-Regional twice and this year was selected to second team of the All-State squad.

His high school career scoring average was 23.5 points per g: and he averaged seven assists per game. This past season, Ray averaged 22.8 points per game.

By SUSAN STOLER
AP Writer

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Starting today, the governor and legislators have a challenge to eat on $2.14 for each day the 1980-81 budget is debated.

"That's going to be interesting to find out how they react," Phil Strickland of the Texas Baptist Christian Life Commission said Tuesday.

Strickland told a news conference that legislators should be able to eat on twice what the state pays children on welfare.

Texas pays an average of $32.58 monthly to each child in the Aid to Families with Dependent Children program, he said.

"We urge this Legislature to do nothing less than raise the AFDC grant to $41.47, the amount we determined 10 years ago as necessary to meet the minimum need," he added.

The House scheduled debate today on a budget that would cut the monthly allowance to $32. Strickland said the small decrease would remove 13,758 families from the program by 1981 because a complicated federal formula would be affected.

Joining Strickland were representatives of the Texas Conference of Churches, Texas Catholic Conference, Texas United Community Services, Texas AFL-CIO, Texas Association of Social Workers, Child Care '76, League of Women Voters, Texas Impact and Levi Strauss clothing manufacturer.

The groups also mailed a letter to Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby, asking him to live on $2.14 a day.

Approximately 220,000 Texas children receive AFDC grants. Family income must be below the poverty level for eligibility. An able-bodied male cannot live in the household.

Texas ranks 48th in the amount given to welfare children. Only Mississippi and South Carolina pay less, he said.

Strickland said the coalition wants $87.3 million in state funds added to the 1980-81 budget for AFDC grants. That amount would be matched by $91.8 million in federal money. He wants to add the funds in a floor amendment to the House Appropriations Committee budget.

"We have to be politically realistic," Stickland said. "Given the atmosphere of this session, we felt that supporting the request from the Department of Human Resources would be probably all we could accomplish in this session."

Legislation permits teachers to eject 'incorrigible' pupils

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Teachers who complain that administrators won't get tough with disruptive students won a victory in the Texas House on Tuesday.

Representatives tentatively approved on voice vote a bill that would enable teachers to eject "incorrigible" pupils from their classes for up to a full term.

Passage is expected next week after the House finishes work on the general appropriation bill, which came up today on special order and will stay at the head of the calendar until passed.

The "incorrigible pupil" bill (HB8) is a priority measure of both the Texas State Teachers Association and the Texas Federation of Teachers, AFL-CIO. It has support from both liberal and conservative legislators.

Teachers contended in committee hearings that they need independent authority to eject "incorrigible" pupils because some principals are weak-kneed about discipline.

Principals and superintendents still will have a voice, but the thrust of the bill is more control for teachers over their classes.

A teacher could eject and recommend suspension of any pupil who assaults him or her or has a record of disrupting the teacher's ability to communicate with the class.

Documentation of repeated disruptions would be essential — part of the "due process" sponsors said was built into the bill.

The principal would have to hold a hearing within three school days and could suspend the student from school or the particular teacher's class for the rest of the school year.

If the principal returned the pupil to class under probation, and the student again was disruptive, the teacher could remove him or her from class permanently.

The student could appeal, but the teacher could be reversed only if the principal and the local superintendent both agreed to do so. On a third offense, it would take agreement by the principal, the superintendent and the local school board to send a student back to class.

Rep. Reby Cary, D-Fort Worth, was the only legislator to speak out against the bill. He said teachers might use such minor infractions as gum chewing to document a case of "incorrigibility."

"Minorities might be victims of arbitary action for behavior that is labeled incorrigible. It should be left in the hands of the school board," Cary said.

Rep. Carlisle Smith, D-Grand Prairie, the sponsor, said teachers wouldn't be able to get away with abusing the power he wants to give them.

Abuses, he said, would come to the school board's attention through the appeal process and probably would result in dismissal of the offending teachers.

"A teacher may be at fault, and we would be able to find that out in the process," agreed Rep. Ron Coleman, D-El Paso.

Bill takes live fetus away from parents

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Parents would lose custody of a fetus that miraculously survived an abortion under a bill sent to the Senate Tuesday.

Sen. Walter Mengden, R-Houston, said his bill would make the live fetus a ward of the state, except in two cases.

The exceptions would be where one parent did not know of the abortion or where the procedure was performed solely to save the mother's life.

"It is necessary to make clear when a legal abortion is to end and when a child's legal rights begin," Mengden told the Senate Jurisprudence Committee.

In a California case, Mengden said a fetus survived an abortion and was placed in a hospital intensive care unit. The physician who performed the abortion allegedly ordered everyone out of the unit and strangled the infant, Mengden said.

"He said he was simply finishing the act," Mengden said, adding a hung jury resulted in a mistrial.

Texas doctors and women's rights organizations opposed the bill.

"Our problem with the bill is that we don't know if it places additional duties on the physician," said Ace Pickens, attorney for the Texas Medical Association.

"The purpose of this bill is clearly to discourage abortions," said Sophie Weiss of the Texas Family Planning Association. Existing law would protect live fetuses in those "extremely rare circumstances," she added.

"This is an attempt to circumvent the 1973 U.S. Supreme Court decision of a women's right to freedom of choice," said Cathy Bonner of the Texas Women's Political Caucus.

EL PASO, Texas (AP) — Fire investigators say a cigarette probably started a fire in which a family of four perished in their one-story brick home Tuesday.

"It was most probably smoker's carelessness," said Fire Marshal Joe Wilson. "The family would be alive right inow if there had been smoke detectors in the home."

Wilson said the fire started in the den and smoldered a long time, creating toxic fumes, before breaking into flames. A neighbor heard crackling noises and spotted the flames about 2:20 a.m.

But by the time firemen arrived, it was too late.

Wilson said the victims all died of smoke inhalation, but there was evidence some of them realized what was happening too late and tried in vain to alert others and escape from the one-story brick home.

The dead were Larry Cole, 44, his wife Barbara, 42, their children, Jimmy, 13, and Laura, 10. Two family dogs also died in the blaze.

Mrs. Cole, public relations director for the Jewish Community Center, was found on the living room floor, and Wilson said she was apparently trying to get out when she collapsed from the smoke. Jimmy Cole was found in the hallway, and fire investigators believe he tried to warn his sister and then collapsed.

Just call for gasohol

By ALAN SAYRE
AP Writer

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Agriculture Commissioner Reagan Brown donned a service station uniform at an Austin self-serve filling station Tuesday to promote gasohol - a mixture of unleaded gasoline and alcohol.

But Governor Bill Clements' limousine had to wait in line while Brown pumped one gallon of the special fuel into Land Commissioner Bob Armstrong's motorcycle.

David Senter, a Burleson farmer representing the American Agriculture Movement, said, "We don't want to drink it. We just want to burn it."

The Texas Agriculture Department, Texas Oil Marketers Association and two private firms sponsored the test project.

Rep. Dan Kubiak, D-Rockdale, a co-sponsor of the proposed legislation, said Texas would become the 11th state to have full gasohol service should the bills pass this session. The pending bills exempt gasohol from state gasoline taxes until the new mixture — 10 percent alcohol to 90 percent gasoline — becomes competitive as a vehicle fuel.

Sen. Bob Price, R-Pampa, said the gasohol bills also include $20 million for pilot gasohol manufacturing projects and $20 million in state grants for other firms that enter the gasohol business.

A proposed gasohol plant, to be built by the Rio Grande Valley Sugar Growers Association and Midwest Solvents Inc., already has been guaranteed a $15 million federal loan, Kubiak said. The plant could produce 15 million gallons of alcohol annually for the production of 150 million gallons of gasohol.

After the rally, an experimental automobile which burns 100 percent pure alcohol was demonstrated by representatives of Texas A&M University. Dr. W.B. Harris, a chemical engineering professor, said the alcohol-to-gasoline ratio could be gradually increased so vehicles eventually run on almost-pure methanol.

Roloff allows staff to inspect 2 homes

By STEVE McGONIGLE
Austin Bureau

AUSTIN–Separate confrontations begat concessions Tuesday from evangelist Lester Roloff and House members who want to exempt his youth homes from state licensing.

In a surprise move, Roloff agreed to allow two members of Attorney General Mark White's staff to check the facilities for health and safety code violations.

The inspection will begin today and will include the Rebekah Home for Girls and Lighthouse for Boys near Corpus Christi and Anchor Home for Boys in Zapata.

At the same time Roloff agreed to some state scrutiny of the homes, the authors of two bills to exempt the facilities from regulation conceded their legislation is all but dead.

While no commitments were made by either side, White said the discussion opened the door for further talks on state attempts to license Roloff's facilities.

He declined to say whether those attempts would culminate in an order to force Roloff to obtain the licensing he has fought for six years.

Three times since 1973, Roloff has gone to jail rather than comply with the licensing law. He has continued to operate the homes in violation of the law despite a U.S. Supreme Court ruling that he has no grounds for exemption.

His decision to allow inspection marks the first time since the October, 1978 ruling by the high court that Roloff has modified his hardnosed, anti-regulation stance.

At Roloff's invitation, White and Gov. Bill Clements toured the Rebekah and Lighthouse homes last week. Afterward, both officials said they were impressed by the facilities.

White said the pleasant mood continued through Tuesday's meeting with Roloff attorneys Clyde and Jay Jackson of Corpus Christi, Charles Lowry of Houston and David Gibbs of Cleveland.

"I'm very pleased with their personal stance," White said, "and I think we've made some progress."

Roloff did not attend the meeting but was informed of the discussions with White by his attorneys. His consent to the inspection was relayed to White by Clyde Jackson.

Neither Roloff nor Jackson could be reached Tuesday night for comment on the tentative agreeement.

Texas

Meanwhile in the House, six members of the Health Services Committee say they won't give any ground on their opposition to exempting church-run childcare facilities from state licensing.

Rep. Arnold Gonzales of Corpus Christi predicted a majority of the nine-member panel will vote with him to send the licensing exemption bills by Reps. Don Rains of San Marcos and Clay Smothers of Dallas to a subcommittee to die.

Even the authors conceded their proposal s probably will go no farther than a hearing before the committee on Wednesday.

"Realistically, I'm going to catch hell passing the bill this (legislative) session," Smothers said.

Credit insurance bill OK'd

By JACK KEEVER
AP Writer

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Senators have tentatively approved a credit insurance bill touted as a money-saver during emergencies and criticized as a "special interest" piece of legislation.

Sen. Carl Parker's bill advanced Tuesday on a 24-7 vote, but another vote is needed to send the measure to the House.

The bill's main supporter has been Montgomery Ward Enterprises, which proposed new legislation after state insurance officials said current laws did not permit the package-type policy the company wanted to offer.

Sen. Lloyd Doggett, D-Austin, said the bill would provide coverage "most consumers do not want nor need. ... its only purpose is to fuel the flames of inflation."

Doggett indicated the only reason he was not filibustering the bill because Parker had aided him the past two weeks in protesting what Doggett said were anti-consumer bills.

Parker's bill would permit stores to sell one policy to cover all debt risks, including the loss of income as a result of illness, dismissal or a strike.

Parker, D-Port Arthur, has a high concentration of refinery workers in his southeast Texas district.

In addition, the catch-all policy could include credit-life insurance and cover damage or loss of the property or a customer's credit card.

Doggett complained that a customer would have to pay for all the coverage even if he or she wanted only one type, such as credit life.

"It will add to the cost of purchases," said Doggett.

The cost of the insurance would be 50 cents per $100 per month and would be calculated on the basis of declining balance.

Parker said the insurance would be optional with each customer, but Doggett suggested store clerks would present the insurance as a regular practice that each customer needed.

Panel approves bill to stop ticket scalpers

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — A Senate committee has approved a bill to stop ticket scalpers who are capitalizing on the increasing popularity of professional sports in Texas.

Sen. Chet Brooks proposed Tuesday that ticket scalpers be put in jail for up to six months, and the jurisprudence committee approved his proposal, 7-1.

Texas has not had a law against scalping — or selling tickets to events for more than the box office price — since Jan. 1, 1976.

Brooks said the comptroller felt the law could not be enforced, because "outlaws" would not buy licenses, and it was impossible to know who they were.

Brooks' bill would prohibit anyone from selling a ticket for more than $2 over its regular price. In addition to a jail sentence, a scalper could be fined up to $1,000.

In response to a question after hearing, Brooks said his bill would not limit the number of tickets a person could resell.

There was no discussion of how the bill would be enforced.

Brooks said the bill was aimed at those who buy blocks of tickets and resell them for two or three times what they are worth.

The "real problems," he said, have come with the increasing popularity of professional athletic teams in Texas, such as the Dallas Cowboys, Houston Oilers, Texas Rangers and Houston Astros.

Cuevas defense claims Estelle made agreement

By MICHAEL O'CONNOR
AP Writer

HOUSTON (AP) — The defense attorney for convict Ignacio Cuevas hopes to prove today that the state Corrections Department director agreed to let three inmates and eight hostages move unmolested to an armored car during a state prison siege in 1974.

Under questioning Tuesday from defense attorney Will Gray, TDC Director W.J. Estelle said he never told inmate Fred Carrasco "that any of his demands was acceptable."

Carrasco, Cuevas and Rudolpho Dominguez staged the longest siege in U.S. penal history at the state prison in Huntsville, a siege that ended in a bloody escape attempt in which two hostages, Carrasco and Dominguez were shot to death.

Gray asked Estelle about an alleged telephone call with Carrasco the defense attorney says was recorded on tape and witnessed by Ruben Montemayor, an attorney who carried messages between the negotiators during the siege.

He said the tape showed that Estelle authorized Montemayor to tell Carrasco that his plan to move from the prison library to an armored car with eight hostages, "without deviation," was acceptable.

"The tape also shows that the hostages all cheered when Estelle agreed to the demand," he said.

Gray said Estelle received the proposal from Mrs. Linda Woodman, a hostage who was released to bring the plan to the prison officials.

Estelle, his voice tight with anger, replied, "I can pret' near guarantee you that I never told Mr. Carrasco anything he asked was acceptable."

Gray then asked District Judge Miron Love to declare Estelle a "hostile witness" and allow the defense to cross-examine him and play the tape of the telephone conversation for the jury.

"His hostility to the defense is obvious, and there is no way we can examine him unless we can cross-examine him," Gray said. "The state supressed evidence by refusing to call this man as a witness to give us a chance to cross-examine him."

Prosecutor Bert Graham objected angrily to this charge and to Gray's request. Love sustained the objection, saying he had never heard this evidence before, and could not allow Gray to cross-examine his own witness until "proper proof" had been presented to support the allegation.

Cuevas was convicted in 1975 of causing the death of Mrs. Julia Standley during the escape attempt, in which another hostage, Elizabeth Beseda, also was killed.

Cuevas was sentenced to death, but won a reprieve when the state Court of Appeals granted him a new trial

No action taken on bill

AUSTIN — A bill that would create a county court at law in Wichita County was considered by a House committee late Tuesday, but no final action was taken.

Rep. Ron Bird, D-San Antonio, committee chairman, said that ordinarily, such a bill would be put an proposed omnibus proposal creating county courts at law in a number of Texas counties.

However, Rep. Dave Allred, D-Wichita Falls, who was presenting the bill to the committee, noted that the measure had already been approved by the Senate.

Allred argued that this put the proposal in a different category from the omnibus bill. Courts proposed in the omnibus bill have not been approved by either the House or the Senate, he said.

Bird said he wanted to do some research on that point, and left the Wichita County bill as pending business before the committee. A similar bill proposing a county court at law for Travis County, authored by Rep. Gonzalo Barrientos, D-Austin, also was left before the committee pending further action.

The Wichita County bill is sponsored by Allred and Rep. Charles Finnell, D-Holliday, in the House, and Sen. Ray Farraby in the Senate.

Despite last week's tornado, business went on as usual in U.S. District Court with a federal grand jury indicting a Vernon woman for mail fraud and two Wichitans for harboring a federal fugitive.

The grand jury, meeting in Abilene, indicted Marsha Ayers Longacre, an accounts payable clerk of the Stein Hall Co. guar bean plant, for allegedly creating fictitious accounts on the company's computer and having checks mailed to the accounts at addresses or post office boxes she set up.

Also indicted were Steve Bailey and his wife Linda Kay Colvin for allegedly harboring in their Wichita Falls home federal fugitive William Gregory Forbes, wanted in Missouri on a first-degree murder charge.

The three are scheduled to be arraigned Thursday before U.S. Magistrate Gene Richie.

Aid center to open

WAURIKA, Okla. (Special) — A disaster assistance center will be open from 9 a.m. until 6 p.m. Saturday at City Hall in Waurika, said Rodney Nichols, Jefferson County Extension Director.

He said residents of the county suffering damages from the April 10 tornado should come to the center for assistance. He said they should bring identification and if possible bills for repairs or other materials as proof of damage.

Nichols said the center will offer assistance with temporary housing, home and business loans, farm loans and grants, insurance aid and tax adjustments. There also will be help provided with agriculture assistance, Social Security benefits, veterans benefits and food stamps.

Sitcom handles adult idea in adolescent way

By PETER J. BOYER
AP Television Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The sitcom being TV's favorite form, and the liberation of women being one of everybody's favorite subjects, it figured that one of the networks would come up with something like "Miss Winslow & Son."

CBS newest sitcom is about an independent young woman who got pregnant but didn't love the child's father enough to marry him. She had a couple of options open at this point, but chose the only one that would support a sitcom — she has the baby and raises it alone.

No problem there, unless you're of the belief that such things as unwed motherhood don't belong on TV, in which case you probably have a very large library and know exactly what your kids look like.

The problem with "Miss Winslow" is that it's an adult sitcom idea rendered adolescent by its handling. We're asked to cheer for and laugh with a heroine who's bold enough to stand up for herself and assert her independence. What we're given, though, is a cutesy simperer (Darleen Carr) who seems a little embarrassed about what she did, and a whole lot of material that has been around the sitcom block a few times.

In tonight's episode, for example, Susan Winslow (who works in ambiguous but suitably with-it profession) goes on a date with one of her clients. She returns home and tells her mother she likes the guy but is afraid to get close to him because of ... well, you know, her special little problem.

Her mother, who would have preferred it had Susan gotten into the family business through the more conventional route, scolds:

About this time the doorbell rings and there stands none other than the charming, successful bachelor himself, who insists upon a dinner date. Susan is worried about little you-know-who back in the bedroom, and when the little bugger starts crying, she tells her prospective boyfriend that she's baby sitting for a friend.

Well, they make a date and Susan decides to tell the guy about her baby, despite her mother's warning that men don't make passes at girls with young lasses (or lads). Turns out, Mom is right. The guy's a jerk.

"What do I know about babies?" he asks after Susan spills the beans. "Except that one end drools and the other end drips. My head is not into kids."
