U.S. farmers send hay to heat victims

Associated Press

Farmers coast to coast are donating tons of hay to the seared South, where a drought has caused more than $1.5 billion in damage, and cattlemen in Georgia waited more than 16 hours for feed for their starving livestock.

Scattered thunderstorms that dropped more than 4½ inches of rain on Cornelia, Ga., within 70 minutes Thursday afternoon and kept temperatures below 100 degrees for the third straight day provided some relief from the drought and heat wave, which has been blamed for 43 deaths.

Georgia's governor has proclaimed Sunday a day of prayer for rain, and the mayor of Chattanooga, Tenn., proclaimed "Cool It Week" and urged residents to dress casually to keep cool.

President Reagan provided moral support during a barnstorming visit to Columbia, S.C., praising farmers for their mettle and promising "everything that our farm program will allow us to do."

Officials at the Atlanta Farmers Market were to begin distributing 100 tons of hay this morning. Farmers started arriving Thursday, 16 hours before the distribution was to start, and by 2:30 a.m. today, about 45 were in line.

"We've got a lot of hay coming in, which is great," said Tommy Irvin, Georgia's Agriculture Commissioner. "The calls we're getting now have picked up tempo, from coast to coast. That's the spirit of America showing now."

About 40 tons of hay donated by farmers in Illinois was distributed at the market Wednesday, but many farmers were turned away.

Hobby rejects House cuts, calls for major tax hike

By STEVE LEVINE
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — A probable August 6 philosophical collision between the House and Senate gained momentum Thursday when Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby rejected House-proposed budget cuts and called for a major tax increase.

Speaking to reporters after a late-afternoon meeting with 50 to 60 of the state's top business and civic leaders, Hobby proposed increasing state sales, gasoline and franchise taxes and offered $650 million in acceptable spending reductions. Hobby, president of the Senate, said the business leaders "generally accepted" his plan to solve the state's $3.53 billion budget shortfall.

House Speaker Gib Lewis held firm in his support for the short-term spending cuts his Appropriations Committee has been considering since Sunday. "I believe the majority of Texans feel we are taking the right approach and will not tolerate an increase in their existing tax burden given the depressed nature of our present economy," Lewis said.

Hobby's meeting and press conference Thursday come as an introduction to a seven-city tour beginning next week to drum up support for his proposals. He called the deficit "the greatest financial crisis the state has faced in several decades, not to mention a generation or two."

The lieutenant governor's tax plan includes:

— Increasing the state sales tax from the current 4.125 percent to 5 percent.

— Expanding the sales tax base to include "all transactions other than those related to food and medicine."

— Possible increases in the state's 10-cent-a-gallon gasoline tax, with the procedes dedicated to highway construction and education.

— Possible increases in the corporate franchise tax, "and no doubt others."

Hobby's list of $650 million in spending cuts includes elimination of a 3-percent state employee pay raise scheduled to take effect in September as well as a pay cut to take back the 3-percent raise that began last September. He called some massive cuts the House Appropriations Committee is studying "a breach of trust" with Texans who depend on services such as highways and public education.

The House Appropriations Committee Thursday ended a five-day study of the 1987 budget with a whimper. Committee Chairman Jim Rudd, D-Brownfield, called the close examination of budget reductions ranging up to $4 billion a necessary and useful prelude to the special session even though the committee took no vote on any of the proposed cuts.

"We made a start and we're going to let the leadership take over," Rudd told the 29-member panel as it wound up its deliberation. "We have identified these (cuts) We say, 'This is a potential.' We're not agreeing with everyone of them."

Rudd said he generally prefers an option that would cut about $2.3 billion from the fiscal 1987 budget and could force the state to layoff about 1,700 employees. That plan, he said, would allow the state to pay its bills for several months and give his committee a chance to undertake an in-depth study of all state finances.

"The people are not ready for taxes, and they're ready for cuts in services," he told reporters.

Asked if his committee would support cuts of that magnitude, Rudd said, "The votes are here."

Panel 'cleans up' washer-dryer issue

Residents solicited for 50 vacancies at Langtry Village

From Staff Reports

The Housing Authority Commission has mailed letters to some local agencies, trying to publicize its needs for more residents at Langtry Village.

Langtry Village, a recently opened 85-unit retirement complex, has 50 vacancies, said Fred Kester, the authority's executive director.

"We just wanted to send a few letters to guide some of the people our way," Kester said.

Kester also said he may make personal visits to senior citizens' groups, advertising the openings.

The letters have been sent to the Department of Human Services and other agencies, Kester said.

Tenants do not have to be Midland residents, but they must be 62 years or older unless they are handicapped. Handicapped people only need to be 18 or older.

Residents, whose incomes must be less than $22,000 per year for couples and $19,250 for a single person, pay about 30 percent of their income for rent.

Rent ranges from $50 to $275 monthly.

The $2.8 million village, located on North Pecos Street, was opened May 31. It was financed by a Housing and Urban Development loan.

The project was spurred due to the long waiting lines for Hillcrest Manor, another retirement complex run by the authority.

Kester said some 250 people were on the list at one time for Hillcrest, making officials see the need for a second complex.

"When we opened Langtry, about 50 of those were still on the list," Kester said. "Some of them were not ready yet."

He said most of the 50 who were still waiting moved into Langtry.

"We just want to make people aware," Kester said.

By DOUG DRUMMOND
Assistant City Editor

The Midland Housing Authority Commission made sure Thursday no dirty laundry was going to pile up at Hillcrest Manor.

The authority approved a deal which would allow a company to change the way it collects money from the complex's washers and dryers.

The company earlier had threatened to take some of the washers and dryers from the retirement village.

The decision was one of several made Thursday at the regular Housing Authority meeting in City Hall.

"We don't want to affect morale," said Authority Chairman Doug Henson. "This does not require the spending of out-of-pocket dollars."

The rift surfaced when the private firm which owns the eight washers and four dryers claimed it was not making enough money.

Hillcrest Manor has laundry facilities on each floor.

"They said each machine needed to gross about $70 a month," said Fred Kester, the authority's executive director. "We were averaging about $22.88 a month."

Kester told the board the company threatened to yank its machines if a new deal was not struck.

That likely would have caused problems as Kester said the complex needed all the machines.

The firm wanted a bigger share of the money from the machines.

Under the old set-up, the company and complex split the profits 50-50.

The new proposal would give the company 10 percent of the first $20 deposited in each machine and 60 percent of any additional revenue.

The board members approved the arrangement, saying they were pleased with the maintenance and upkeep of the washers and dryers.

The authority also approved a proposed contract for a $10,820 fire and liability insurance policy for Hillcrest Manor.

The policy cost four times more than last year for the same coverage, Kester said.

Some of the money for the policy was not budgeted, but there are surplus funds available, Kester said.

Kester told the commission he mailed letters to some 14 insurance companies, asking for bids. Only two responded.

"Many insurance companies will just not write housing authority insurance," Kester said. "These authorities with thousands of units have had bad experiences with fire."

Former Navy radioman Jerry Whitworth is escorted from San Francisco's Federal Building after his conviction Thursday of conspiring to sell military codes to the Soviet Union.

Whitworth verdict pleases Navy leader

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Former Navy radioman Jerry Whitworth is likely to spend at least 35 years in prison for his conviction as "the most significant player" in John Walker's Soviet-run spy ring, a prosecutor says.

Whitworth sat expressionlessly Thursday as a U.S. District Court jury convicted him of seven espionage-related charges in what authorities have said was the worst breach of U.S. military secrets since World War II.

"I am pleased with the verdict handed down today," Navy Secretary John F. Lehman Jr. said. "His treason did grievous harm to this nation. Fortunately for this country, it did not happen during a global war."

Lehman has said it will take years and perhaps $100 million to repair the damage done by the Walker family spy ring.

Jurors who deliberated 52 hours over 10 days found Whitworth guilty of selling vital code and communications secrets for $332,000 to the spy ring run by Walker, his longtime friend. He also was convicted of four counts of evading taxes and one of conspiring with Walker to hide the money from the government by using cash and cashier's checks.

The jury deadlocked on an eighth espionage-related charge, of stealing and copying a secret document found at Whitworth's home, a minor portion of a Navy contingency plan for the Mideast. The defense said Whitworth accidentally took the document home and never intended to give it to Walker.

Whitworth, 46, of Davis, was the last member of the Walker spy ring to be tried. Navy officials said the ring gave the Soviets invaluable information on codes, decoding equipment and satellite communications.

Lebanese teens meet on state's 'neutral ground'

AUSTIN (AP) — Lebanese teenagers who represent three factions in their war-torn homeland have found six weeks of peace in an Austin home.

"We're seeing how people in the United States can live together in society with no religious and no social pressures," said May Aboue Alway, a 15-year-old Lebanese Druse Moslem. "We want people in our country to be able to live that way."

May's roommate for the Austin visit to the home of Sam and Sandy Moses is Gladiss Elias Tannoury, a Maronite Catholic who had never met a Moslem before coming to Texas.

"I was nervous about meeting her," Gladiss said. "I didn't know what to do or say. Now I can say she is beautiful and good. I hope I can see her every day when we go back home."

The four teen-agers came to Austin through the auspices of the Children's Committee 10 of California, a volunteer organization working to bring together youngsters of different faiths. The group also brings together Catholic and Protestant children from Northern Ireland.

Gladiss and May arrived this month along with Ibrahim Fouad Zayat, 18, a Maronite Catholic, and Nizar Irani, 17, a Shiite Moslem.

In Austin, the teen-agers have visited the Capitol, the University of Texas, shopping malls, supermarkets and Barton Springs, a popular local swimming and sunbathing spot.

They say they found the visits pleasant, in part because they don't have to worry about car bombings or rooftop snipers — regular occurrences in Lebanon.

"We have forgotten the meaning of liberty in our country," said Gladiss, who wants to be a fashion designer.

"People in America are lucky," she said. "They can go anywhere without fear of being killed."

None of the teens knew much about America before arriving in Austin. May and Gladiss had to convince their parents to let them come to America. Nizar said he based his knowledge about America on television and movies that often portrayed Americans as violent and uncaring.

"Then I get to America and I see people are friendly and help each other," said Nizar. "I found out it's a normal country."

Howe still seeking South African 'solution'

Monitoring group says 8,400 activists detained

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — About 8,400 activists have been detained for varying periods since a state of emergency was imposed six weeks ago — more than were held during the entire seven months of a previous state of emergency, a monitoring group said.

The newly formed Community Research Group, a team of academics, said in a report Thursday it knew the names of about 3,400 people who have been detained without charge since the nationwide state of emergency began June 12.

The monitoring group said it "has knowledge of another estimated 5,000" who have been held.

The group, based at the University of the Witwatersrand in Johannesburg, the nation's leading English-language college, said it did not know how many people still were in custody but added "Relatively few releases have come to our attention."

Today was the deadline, meanwhile, for black students who have boycotted classes during the past two weeks to re-register. The government said those who fail to do so will be permanently expelled.

No figures were immediately available on how many students were heeding the ultimatum and registering for classes.

More than 80 percent of the nation's 1.7 million black students have registered since schools opened July 14 after holidays, but an estimated 300,000 students have refused to return to classes.

During the state of emergency imposed in selected parts of the country from July 21, 1985, until March 7, a total of 7,999 anti-government activists were detained, according to government figures. All of those detainees were identified by police.

This time, the government has refused to disclose the number of detainees, and regulations forbid publication of the names of those held. Other media regulations imposed with the state of emergency ban the reporting of what the government considers subversive statements and prohibit reports on the activities of security forces.

The Community Research Group said detentions were continuing at the rate of about 190 per day, including about 20 per day in the Johannesburg area.

South Africa's prisons are overcrowded, the group said, adding that welfare organizations worry the new detainees will be denied their rights to "adequate space, exercise and ablution facilities."

In a separate report, the Labor Monitoring Group, an academic team at the University of the Witwatersrand, said it knew of 321 trade union officials in detention.

GABORONE, Botswana (AP) — British Foreign Secretary Sir Geoffrey Howe said today Zambian President Kenneth Kaunda's stinging public rebuke would not prompt him to abandon the search for peaceful solutions to the racial conflict in South Africa.

After arriving in Gaborone from Lusaka, Zambia, Howe said Kaunda was much less curt in private than in his public remarks Thursday night.

Howe, touring southern Africa on behalf of the 12-nation Common Market, said Kaunda expressed willingness to take part in a dialogue on starting negotiations between blacks and whites in South Africa.

"I'm in no way tempted to give up the mission," the British foreign secretary said.

Howe planned to see President Quett Masire of Botswana before returning to South Africa today.

Kaunda on Thursday accused the U.S. and British governments of conspiring to support South Africa's government in maintaining apartheid and resisting social change.

He told Howe the Western allies had sent "a clear signal to the racists to carry on with that system...that they have nothing to fear by way of sanctions."

Under apartheid, South Africa's 5 million whites dominate the nation's 24 million voteless blacks, and foes of the racial segregation system have called for international economic pressure on South Africa to force its abolition.

The Zambian leader, whose country is a former British colony and a member of the Commonwealth, said Howe was welcome in Zambia as a human being, but not as a representative of Britain.

Howe, asked whether he had considered walking out on Kaunda, said he didn't think that would have been right because "it's easier to do than walking back in."

He compared the situation to blacks and whites being on opposite sides of a mountain, and said someone had to bring them to the top.

"It might be my job to sort of lead them halfway up," he said.

Kaunda also criticized President Reagan's speech on South Africa on Tuesday, in which Reagan opposed economic sanctions as a means of fostering change.

"If the West is serious in bringing change in South Africa with less bloodshed, Mr. Reagan should not have broadcast his speech," Kaunda said. "Really, Sir Geoffrey, you people will not be forgiven by history."

Howe, visibly shocked by Kaunda's remarks, told the president that there was "no foundation whatsoever for your suggestion" that he was part of a plan to support Botha's government.

Zambia's capital, Lusaka, is home to the headquarters-in-exile of the African National Congress, the main guerrilla group seeking the overthrow of the South African government. The ANC is outlawed in South Africa.

Zambia, like Botswana, is governed by blacks. The economies of both nations depend on neighboring South Africa.

Howe began his tour in South Africa on Wednesday, when he conferred with President P.W. Botha. The British diplomat said he hoped to encourage the South African government to make rapid and peaceful changes.

Reagan seeks unified South African action by allies

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan, facing growing congressional criticism over his South Africa policy, is seeking some unified action by U.S. allies against the white-ruled Pretoria government, possibly including the denial of visas to white leaders seeking to visit the United States or European countries, his spokesman said today.

Presidential spokesman Larry Speakes confirmed the White House is studying unspecified sanctions aimed at the South African government, and said, "Whatever steps that we might decide to take unilaterally would be much more effective if they could be done in relation with what other allies do.

"Unilateral steps would pale in relation to what we could do in concert with our allies, and that's what we intend to do," Speakes added.

Speakes today also formally announced that Assistant Secretary of State Chester A. Crocker, the administration's top African affairs specialist, would visit London next week for consultations with leaders of the European Community on South Africa policy.

"This is a critical point in time, and it is important for us to meet and consult with allies on the issues that face southern Africa," Speakes said.

He refused to discuss specific actions that are under consideration but said, "We want to target the sanctions against those who are in the decision-making process."

He had seemed to indicate on Thursday that denial of landing rights to South African airliners is among the steps that might be taken, but the spokesman today discouraged reporters from suggesting that the administration is actively considering that particular action.

A senior White House official, speaking on condition he not be identified, said the arbitrary nature of a government's decision to grant an individual a visa would make it possible for the administration of exclude white South African leaders and defenders of apartheid while permitting visits by South African blacks.

Farmers heard encouraging words

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan, after garnering more than $2 million for Republican candidates in three Southern states, says his administration will "do everything our farm program will allow us to do" to aid farmers languishing in the Southeast's scorching drought.

At Columbia, S.C., his final stop on a trip that also took him to Texas and Florida, Reagan watched as bales of hay donated by Illinois farmers were unloaded by forklift from an Air Force C-141 cargo plane for starving cattle.

"Even when times are tough, you show your mettle," Reagan said at a $150-a-person fund-raising luncheon for Rep. Carroll Campbell, a Republican locked in a close race for governor against Democratic Lt. Gov. Mike Daniel.

"Today, South Carolina's farmers are suffering from drought as are farmers throughout the Southeast. The drought is reaching tragic proportions, one of the worst of the century and I want you to know that our administration stands ready to help," Reagan said.

"Everything that our farm program will allow us to do, we're going to try to do," the president said.

Last week, the president directed the Air Force to help ferry bales of hay from the Midwest to the South. About 370 tons of hay have arrived in South Carolina, where crop losses are estimated at $100 million. Losses throughout the Southeast are estimated as high as $1.5 billion.

Reagan's comments evoked cheers and applause from the audience of 1,200 in Columbia, S.C., that had paid $150-per-person to support Campbell's campaign. Earlier, Reagan chatted with several hundred supporters at a private, $2,000-per-couple reception to benefit GOP state candidates.

Reagan, noting that he had met with two farmers earlier, said they had displayed "what dignity, what determination to stick it out until better days."

On Thursday, Sen. Ernest Hollings, D-S.C., accused the White House of "playing politics with our disaster relief."

Hollings said he had arranged to have 30 tons of hay shipped from Massachusetts but that the White House refused to airlift it, even though it had carried similar airlifts for Republican members of South Carolina's congressional delegation.

Responding to the charge, presidential spokesman Larry Speakes said, "There is quite a bit of hay coming into South Carolina. I'm sure that as time goes by it certainly will be enough to feed the cows."

Speakes said that the emergency airlift was a stop-gap measure that would aid farmers until 2,000 tons of hay arrives by train early next week.

In an interview this morning on NBC-TV's "Today" show, Agriculture Secretary Richard E. Lyng also denied Hollings' charges.

HAY

Hay also has been gathered for the South in Iowa, Indiana, Ohio, Kentucky, Michigan, Missouri, Connecticut, New York, Vermont, Oklahoma, Minnesota, and Wisconsin, with deliveries planned from as far as Washington state.

"One farmer always helps his neighbor if he can," said Richard Eymann, who is president of the Oregon-Washington Farmers Union and hopes to gather 200 tons that will be transported by train. "We see on TV pickup trucks in long lines owned by farmers taking animals to slaughter because they have no feed for them. We see animals jumping and fighting for food when they get feed thrown at them. So naturally, your heart goes out to the situation."

Reagan arrived in Columbia in time to watch a forklift operator transfer bales of hay from a cargo plane to a flatbed truck.

Also, the USDA today was to begin operating a toll-free hotline to help farmers contact officials for answers to their problems. Lyng also said a fact-finding team will visit drought areas of Virginia, Maryland and Delaware next week.

The USDA hotline is 1-800-433-0703 and will be staffed between 8 a.m. and 6 p.m. EDT, Monday through Friday.

SPY

U.S. District Judge John Vukasin scheduled sentencing Aug. 28. The espionage and conspiracy charges are punishable by up to life in prison. The tax charges carry a total maximum penalty of 17 years.

A person sentenced to life is eligible for parole in 10 years, but U.S. Attorney Joseph Russoniello said Whitworth had no realistic chance of parole for at least 35 years. He said the case was "the most serious espionage case brought in the United States since World War II" and Whitworth was "by far the most significant player."

But defense lawye James Larson said the wrong person had been on trial.

"There was no public accounting for what he (Walker) did," Larson said. "Jerry is, at least in part, another one of Walker's victims."

Larson would not say if an appeal was planned.

Whitworth's lawyers acknowledged that he sold secrets to Walker but contended he thought he was working for Israel and was unaware of the Soviets' involvement until nearly the end.

Walker, the prosecution's chief witness, said Whitworth was his main source of secrets from 1976 to 1983, when Whitworth retired from the Navy.

Walker, 48, of Norfolk, Va., pleaded guilty in October to spying for the Soviet Union for 17 years. He is to be sentenced to life in prison next month; his plea-bargain involved a reduced 25-year term for his son, Michael, a Navy enlisted man, who also pleaded guilty. John Walker's brother Arthur was convicted of spying and sentenced to life in prison.

Walker testified that he met Whitworth about 1970 at the Navy radio school in San Diego, where both were radio instructors, and recruited him as a spy four years later after "probing for the larceny in his heart."

For nearly the next decade, Whitworth — a petty officer with a spotless record in 25 years in the Navy, 18 as a radioman — was a supervisor at message centers on two aircraft carriers, a supply ship and a shore relay station, with virtually unlimited access to codes and messages.

Walker testified that Whitworth photographed, with a Soviet-supplied miniature camera, code keys, diagrams of decoding equipment, and broadcasting channels that military experts said would allow the reading of secret messages to ship and shore stations.

BUDGET

"I'll believe it when I see it," responded Rep. Juan Hinojosa, D-McAllen, leader of the pro-tax forces on the committee. Hobby's plan, he said, "makes a lot more sense than the cut, cut, cut mentality."

Rep. Mark Stiles, D-Beaumont, said he supports cuts "in the $1.3 billion to $1.8 billion range," as long as highway funding and public education dollars are spared. "Too much blood was shed two years ago and too many oathes of dedication were taken," Stiles said, referring to the tax bill passed in 1984 to pay for public school reforms and increased highway construction.

Stiles believes "wholesale changes" in state finance, including a possible tax bill, will come during the regular legislative session that begins in January. He joins many other House members in fearing that the Texas economy remains too unpredictable for a long-range solution to come during the special session.

Hobby said that short-term, Band Aid plan would "not be the responsible thing to do." If the Legislature leaves town without addressing the entire deficit, he said, "The credit of the state would be seriously damaged."

The possible new spending cuts unveiled during Thursday's committee meeting include a plan to force colleges and universities to use one third of an estimated $780 million they have in funds outside the state Treasury in place of state appropriations. That plan, coupled with proposed 13-percent reductions in state aide, could force great hardships on public universities, said Oscar Baxley, vice chancellor for finance at Lamar University in Beaumont.

Baby-sitter crushed while trying to stop rolling van

LAKE ORION, Mich. (AP) — A 19-year-old baby sitter was crushed to death when she threw herself in front of a van with three children inside to stop it from rolling into a lake, police said.

Rachel Snyder of Orion Township momentarily left the children in the van, and when she returned, she saw it rolling toward Lake Orion, said Police Chief James Leach.

"It looks like she thought, 'I've got to do something,' and just got in front of the van," he said.

The van came to a stop on top of her, Leach said, and her body was discovered under the left wheel by a boy who was fishing nearby, the chief said.

"She was baby-sitting while the children's father visited his wife in the hospital," Leach said. "She apparently ran into the house for a second to get a stroller and saw the van moving toward the lake when she returned."

Leach said the children, ages 1, 2, and 4 months, were unharmed in Wednesday's accident in this town just north of Pontiac.

The van probably would have been stopped by a tree and not gone into the lake, Leach added.

Some 2,000 inmates to be housed in approved 'trusty camps'

STATE

AUSTIN (AP) — Ten "trusty camps" approved by the prison board will be the least secure units ever built by the Texas Department of Corrections, a system that long believed in maximum security for all inmates.

About 2,000 inmates will be housed in the camps that will be built outside the walls at existing prison sites. There will be no fences.

"These are our best prisoners. We trust them enough to, in many cases, get in a truck and drive all over the state of Texas picking up meat and moving it around all day long and drive back and forth in the truck," said prison board chairman Alfred Hughes of Austin. "I don't see why we'd be worried about them leaving at night."

The prison board Thursday voted 6-0 to approve the trusty camps, which will be built on a lease-purchase basis.

Hughes and TDC director O.L. McCotter said they would prefer fencing the camps if the money was available.

"If we had unlimited funding, I would tell you I would like to have it," McCotter said. "However, I feel very strongly that we can operate the camps in line with what the scope calls for. I think we can do it properly and in a safe manner and defend the public safety within the state of Texas."

Fences and additional lights for security would cost $194,000 per camp. It would cost another $140,000 a year to man the fences at each unit, according to TDC projections.

"It would be nice to have them. But they're not absolutely necessary at this time," Hughes said, adding that fences could be added later if needed.

TDC is under a federal court order to reduce the inmate population by 2,000 by September. The trusty camps will cost a total of $17.9 million. A lease-purchase plan will be used to build them.

A similar trusty camp, housing 81 inmates, has been in partial use for several months at the Ellis Unit near Huntsville. TDC officials say there have been no problems there.

The board Thursday also voted unanimously to look at proposals for privately run pre-release centers near big cities. The 1987 Legislature will be asked to appropriate funds for the centers, which Hughes views as essential in helping inmates make the transition back to society.

Hughes envisions four centers, each holding 500 inmates.

Delegation 'confused' after space program reorganization meeting

By KATHRYN BAKER

WASHINGTON (AP) — Members of the Texas congressional delegation were alternately dismayed or encouraged after meeting with NASA Administrator James C. Fletcher about proposed reorganization of the space station program and how it would affect the Johnson Space Center.

Fletcher said after the Thursday meeting he would visit the facility today to "make sure that the Johnson people feel they are part of the NASA team."

Rep. Jack Brooks, D-Beaumont, who left Thursday's meeting after 10 minutes, said he thought NASA would "decorate the mahogany with a few jobs" but move the heart of research on the project to the Marshall Space Flight Center in Huntsville, Ala.

Fletcher said part of the habitation module research would be moved to Marshall, but the details were not final.

Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, D-Texas, said he thought the delegation had forced NASA to "back off" a decision to cut jobs at Johnson.

"I really think they have been quite surprised at the firestorm they have stirred up," Bentsen said.

"I think what we've done is arrested what they were doing in the way of a transfer of emphasis for the space station from Houston to Marshall," he said. "At least at the moment, we have them reassessing what they should do."

Fletcher told reporters after the closed meeting that he wanted to clear up "confusion."

NASA administrator James Fletcher talks to reporters after meeting with members of Congress on Capitol Hill Thursday.

He said the JSC stands to gain as many as 2,400 jobs under proposed reorganization of the space station program — not lose 1,900 as previously estimated. In decisions made thus far, Fletcher said, Johnson will lose 300 management jobs to space agency headquarters in Washington.

"There's a lot of furor over 300 jobs," Fletcher said, adding that current space agency projections show the Johnson staff level rising from 12,600 to an average of 14,000 from 1987 to 1993, the years the space station is to be developed. Another 1,000 could also be added at Johnson, he said.

Rep. Mike Andrews, D-Houston, said the Johnson Space Center itself provided the estimate of a 1,900-job loss at the facility, largely due to transfer of research to the Marshall Space Flight Center in Huntsville, Ala.

"I think a lot of bad numbers were released before people were ready," Fletcher said. "Johnson, believe me, is still the center of excellence for manned systems and I imagine for the foreseeable (future) will be."

Besides specific job numbers, the congressmen were concerned that moving research on the habitation module for the proposed space station to Marshall would damage the perception of Johnson as the center of manned space flight research.

Houston's unemployment has soared to 12 percent because of the slump in the oil industry, and local business leaders have said the Johnson Space Center is key to their campaign to draw new industries.

Other members of the Texas delegation who attended the meeting were Sen. Phil Gramm, R-Texas; Reps. Bill Archer, R-Houston; Tom DeLay, R-Sugar Land; Joe Barton, R-Ennis; Mickey Leland, D-Houston; Jack Fields, R-Houston; and Jim Chapman, D-Sulphur Springs.

Panel considers drug screening policy encompassing drama, music students

AUSTIN (AP) — A panel of school leaders and parents is considering a drug screening policy that would cover students who participate in drama, music and other activities, as well as sports.

The policy would be similar to a plan proposed Wednesday for football players by the McCallum High School principal.

"Our task is to come up with a draft of a drug policy," said Dr. Gonzalo Garza, associate superintendent and member of a committee made up of high school and junior high staff members and parents from PTA chapters.

The group, which met for the first time this week, eventually will draft a policy for consideration by Superintendent John Ellis. He is expected to make his recommendations to the Austin school board in September.

"We're looking at a positive and reasonable policy that will state what we need to do to protect the health and safety of our youngsters," Garza said. "We're trying to save lives."

Garza said the district's discipline policy sets penalties for drug possession or use in schools, but the district has no overall policy on drug education and testing.

On Wednesday, the principal and head football coach of McCallum High School suggested starting a voluntary, random drug testing program for football players. The coach, Bob Lewis, is also a member of the drug policy committee.

Garza said the legality of a drug testing program "might come into question if we have singled out one group, like football. What about baseball and track and choirs and one-act plays?

"There might be a question of legality. Even those who are 'clean' might have some objections (to testing)," Garza said. "I haven't checked with our attorney."

Gara LaMarche, state director of the Texas Civil Liberties Union, said the national organization has stopped two school districts from enforcing a drug testing policy and would consider a lawsuit against a similar plan if adopted by the Austin Independent School District.

"Our position would be to oppose it whether it was applied randomly or to everybody," LaMarche said.

"The assumption is that if you subject everybody to these demeaning tests, you'll catch the guilty few. It turns probable cause on its head," LaMarche said.

Combat infantryman finally honored for WWII scout duty of enemy territory

DENISON (AP) — R.L. Franks waited more than 40 years, but the World War II combat infantryman has finally collected a Bronze Star earned as a scout of enemy territory.

"Well, the government is sometimes slow about a lot of things," Franks said. "You know how the government works. About the only thing I know they're fast at is when you try to beat them out of income taxes.

"I'm just proud it did come."

The Bronze Star arrived in June.

Franks, 65, volunteered for the military in September 1942. He found himself a year later in England assigned to Company I of the 18th Infantry Division. He spent more than two years in Europe, serving in England, France, Germany, Czechoslovakia and Holland before the war ended.

"You know, war — it's hard to talk to anybody about war unless they were really involved in it, because people don't understand," he said.

Franks survived a train derailment in 1961. A railroad worker since pre-war days, Franks was riding with another man in the caboose of a train bound for Fort Worth. The train derailed, killing the other man and leaving Franks too injured to resume railroad work.

Franks' part-time real estate work became his full-time job. He made the first contribution toward the construction of Texoma Medical Center — an unsolicited $25 donation made shortly after the train wreck.

Although he recently turned 65, Franks has no immediate retirement plans.

"You've got to do something," he says. "You can't die on a vine. You've got to keep active."

Austin mayor apologizes for use of word at meeting

AUSTIN (AP) — Austin Mayor Frank Cooksey says there's no truth to an allegation by black leaders that he showed racism in remarks made last week during a zoning hearing.

Cooksey apologized for using the word "colored" during the discussion.

"If anyone was offended by the use of the term, I apologize. Anyone who knows me knows I do not have an ounce of racism in my body," Cooksey said.

At last Thursday's City Council meeting, discussion centered on a zoning change to allow liquor sales for a proposed nightclub. A valid petition against the club had been signed by neighbors.

Just before the vote, Cooksey said he didn't believe neighborhood opposition to the zoning was racially motivated.

"The neighborhood is making a protest against someone who is not the least bit colored or Hispanic or any other thing. I want you to know these people in the neighborhood have a right to be concerned," Cooksey said.

On Wednesday, officials of the National Council of Negro Women, the Delta Sigma Theta sorority for black professional women and the Black Citizens Task Force objected to Cooksey's use of the word "colored."

"We are appalled to hear the racist attitude of our present mayor," said Latrica Rayfield-Mcarn, spokeswoman for the groups.

Cooksey's resume shows that as a federal attorney in the civil rights division of the U.S. Justice Department, he helped supervise compliance with the 1964 Civil Rights Act in the South.

Consumers to get refund

AUSTIN (AP) — The Public Utility Commission has revised rules to make sure residential utility customers get what officials called "a quick refund" of overpayments due to fuel prices.

"Under the provisions of the new rule, it is doubtful that any residential customer will have overpaid by as much as $10 before a refund is required," PUC Chairwoman Peggy Rosson said Thursday.

The PUC's fuel rule — adopted temporarily last February — requires utilities to request PUC permission to lower or raise rates when adjustments are necessary because of changes in the price they pay for fuel.

Fuel prices have fallen in recent months, prompting utilities to ask permission to make refunds.

Under revisions adopted this week, electric utilities will make refunds whenever they have an overrecovery of 4 percent or $40 million, whichever is less, said PUC spokesman Bo Byers.

Vineyard strikers picket UT

AUSTIN (AP) — Striking workers at the St. Genevieve vineyard near Fort Stockton say they have come to Austin to picket the winery's local headquarters and demonstrate at the University of Texas.

"Students need to be educated about the kind of exploitation the university's involved in," said Jesus Moya, director of the International Union of Agricultural and Industrial Workers.

The UT system leases the West Texas vineyard land to the SGRC consortium, which in turn hires contractors to pick the grapes to make the wine, which is bottled under the name St. Genevieve.

UT system officials say they have no jurisdiction to hear complaints about labor or production practices because the system doesn't directly manage the land. The system does receive an 8 percent profit on sales of the wine, officials said.

The striking workers are asking for more input on hiring and firing practices, a wage increase to $4.50 per hour and improved working conditions.

Man charged in five counts

DOWNS, Kan. (AP) — A Texas man has been charged in Osborne County District Court with five felony counts, including aggravated kidnapping and aggravated battery, in connection with a knifing incident at an abandoned farmstead in north-central Kansas.

David Browning, 28, of Tomball, Texas, was being held in the Osborne County Jail on $100,000 bond. A preliminary hearing for Browning was scheduled for Aug. 4, Osborne County Attorney Vernon Steerman said.

Browning also was charged Thursday with auto theft, criminal damage to property and making a terroristic threat, Steerman said.

Neither Steerman nor Sheriff Robert Burch would discuss details of the incident. Steerman said a 47-year-old Downs man was involved.

White-winged doves back

AUSTIN (AP) — The four-day special white-winged dove season will be back in Texas this year, the Texas Parks and Wildlife commission voted unanimously Thursday.

The special season was cancelled last year because the 1983 freeze which severely reduced nesting habitat in the Rio Grande Valley.

The white-wing season will begin Sept. 6-7 and continue on Sept. 13-14 in the area designated previously as the white-winged dove hunting area.

Officials: Weed killer bad

AUSTIN (AP) — The Department of Agriculture says some Texas farmers are being sold a weed killer that actually makes Johnson grass grow better and faster than before.

"This definitely is a buyer beware situation," said Richard Lowerre, assistant TDA commissioner, "and we are urging all farmers to contact us if they have any question about a product being sold."

Lowerre said farmers usually get a telephone call between 5:30 and 7 a.m. offering them a herbicide that is just as good but costs much less than proven products used to kill Johnson grass and other weeks.

Lowerre said one Williamson County farmer recently called him and said the inferior product made his Johnson grass look sick for about one-half day, and then it took off and grew faster than ever.

Lowerre said the product is not registered for use in Texas and therefore is against the law to sell.

Cabarrus County farmer Squibb Williams shows some 25-pound pigs on his farm near Midland, N.C.

Farmers fear drought may dry up next year's loans

NATION

MIDLAND, N.C. (AP) — One hundred forty piglets squeal in terror and bolt in their cages as Squibb Williams opens the barn, letting in a wave of steamy air.

"It's pretty cool in there now, but if that fan quits, 10 minutes later they're all dead," said Williams, 60. "That's what scares me. As long as the air's moving, they're OK."

Next door, day-old piglets squeak and squirm as they feed on a row of 20 grunting sows. Williams dips his hand into one sow's feed bin and drops handfuls on the floor as the sows shudder.

"She's not eating. She's too hot," he said. "They're just like you — you don't want to eat a lot of steaks either when it gets too hot."

Eating less means the piglets get less milk and it takes at least three weeks longer for hogs to grow to marketable size, he said. And the heat wave accompanying the South's record drought tends to make hogs lazy and liable to roll over on their young.

But that's not the major problem. Williams and other farmers in this Cabarrus County farming community about 10 miles east of Charlotte say they expect few losses among hogs this year.

The real problem hits next year, when they'll have to buy feed to make up for crops that just wouldn't come up through parched fields this season. That may add enough financial stress on already troubled farmers to drive many out of business.

"The drought is just adding a bigger nail to the coffin," said Williams' neighbor John Chaney, who has 120 sows and produces about 1,200 hogs a year.

"Next year, lending agencies are going to look at agriculture real hard — even harder than they are already. To them, it's a losing proposition. Our future depends on what happens this year."

Normally, Williams and Chaney would grow most of the feed they need on the 500 acres each farms. Last year, Williams grew about 30,000 bushels of feed for his 120 sows and 2,000 hogs — feeding them about 12 tons a week.

This year, Cabarrus County is a patchwork of pastureland as brown as desert and fields of knee-high corn that should be six feet tall by now. Milo and soybeans normally waist-high by summer lie stunted less than a foot tall in the dust, if they have come up at all. Some farmers are cutting down the corn to sell as hay, but Williams is afraid of doing that.

"It's sucked up so much nitrogen it's poisonous," he said.

Federal response 'outrages' state commissioner

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Agriculture Department will adjust some of its programs to help Southeastern farmers staggered by the drought, but plans no dramatic new initiatives to ease their plight, the chief of the agency says.

Agriculture Secretary Richard E. Lyng announced the administration's drought aid program Thursday, but said no massive federal haylift or infusion of money are forthcoming.

"I am outraged," North Carolina Agriculture Commissioner Jim Graham said of Lyng's steps. "The measures he announced today fall far short of the assistance we need."

The punishing weather has captured the attention of President Reagan, who told a South Carolina audience of Republican fund-raisers that "the drought is reaching tragic proportions, one of the worst of the century and I want you to know that our administration stands ready to help."

With losses already estimated as high as $1.5 billion, much of the parched land of Alabama, Georgia and the Carolinas is producing shriveled crops and dusty pastures.

"The drought is painfully severe in several Southeastern states," Lyng told a news conference. "We intend to respond as rapidly as we can to ease that pain."

Lyng acknowledged there have been complaints of foot-dragging by USDA in mobilizing help for the Southeast, but he said it has taken time to comply with regulations dealing with emergency declarations.

"I think I would be misleading people if I suggested that the federal government is going to be able to come in and save all these farmers," Lyng said. "But we're going to do the best we can to minimize as much as we possibly can in a compassionate way."

Although no huge new initiatives or financial aid were announced, Lyng said several existing Agriculture Department programs will be tailored to help farmers in the drought area.

Designations of specific counties eligible for other aid programs, including emergency loans by the Farmers Home Administration, will begin within days, he said.

The main responsibility will fall on a newly created USDA task force headed by James Boillot, deputy assistant secretary for governmental and public affairs.

Beginning today, Lyng said, USDA will operate a toll-free hotline so callers can ask about their problems. The number will be 1-800-433-0703 and will be staffed between 8 a.m. and 6 p.m. EDT, Monday through Friday.

In addition, Lyng said a fact-finding team will visit drought areas of Virginia, Maryland and Delaware next week. A team led by Assistant Secretary George Dunlop visited some farms earlier this week in Alabama, Georgia, and North and South Carolina.

Lyng said farmers in the drought areas, subject to decisions by USDA state offices, may be allowed to gather hay and graze livestock on all crop acreage taken from production under the various commodity acreage programs for 1986, including cotton.

Other actions that could bring some immediate relief include permission to plant acres designated for conservation use under the 1986 commodity programs into winter pasture or small-grain crops for grazing, if soil moisture conditions warrant.

Lyng said farmers will be permitted to harvest stunted crops for livestock forage and still be eligible for federal deficiency payments. Those are subsidies paid to farmers when crop prices are depressed. Farmers must report the acreage harvested to local ASCS offices.

But Graham of North Carolina said: "Programs such as haying and grazing of diverted acres when those acres have been devastated by drought are a joke. Emergency loans are not the answer when our farmer are debt-heavy now."

Farmers in the afflicted area have received private help, including donations of hay by Midwestern producers. Asked about the possibility of donating government-owned feed grains to the region, Lyng said, "We're taking a look at that," but refused to be more specific.

Lyng said the government has no intention of reimbursing Midwest farmers for hay donated to Southeastern livestock producers, or to buy hay and give it to them.

"We, at the present time, have no authority to buy the hay, and I don't think any of them (donors) expected to be reimbursed," he said.

The secretary said the loss of crop production in the Southeast will not have much effect nationally, particularly for the main field crops of wheat, corn and soybeans.

Need to diversify

Three front-page stories in the Tuesday edition of the Reporter-Telegram explained in a nutshell both the problem now plaguing the Permian Basin and what would amount to a partial solution. The problem: Record high unemployment. The solution: Diversification of the economy.

One of the stories detailed information on unemployment. Midland's unemployment level now stands at 14.2%. Odessa's is 19.6%. Those levels of unemployment add up to one thing for this area: Misery.

Another story indicated that the price of oil was continuing to fluctuate, reverberating the pain being felt in the domestic oil industry.

The third was Gov. Mark White's call for economic diversification. Midland and Odessa clearly are the oil industry and proud of the fact, but at this moment it's difficult to smile through the misery.

Of course, the governor's "solution" to the economic woes Midland and Odessa — and a large part of the rest of Texas — are suffering literally is easier said than done. But that doesn't mean that it wasn't worth saying. It was and the governor was correct in reminding local residents that the push for economic diversification should not be ignored in good times or bad.

Economic diversification, of course, would not be a placebo. Rather, it would help the Permian Basin withstand the economic fluctuations peculiar to the oil industry.

The reason is elementary. A community or a region or a state that relies not upon a single industry but on many diversified industries isn't as subject to the economic fluctuations in that one industry. That's particularly important when the industry in question can be manipulated by the whims of a foreign cartel. Thus, a diversified economy can survive a downturn in much better fashion than one tied as close to a particular industry as Midland and Odessa are to oil.

The solution, although simple to state, isn't that easy to achieve. To diversify the economy of the Permian Basin will take time and effort and energy. And even with the expenditure of all three, there's no guarantee of immediate success.

Altering a region's economic base never occurs quickly or easily. Regardless how successful the diversification effort, there will always be a large segment of the Midland-Odessa population tied to the oil industry. That's a fact of life in this area because of the geology.

That fact makes the governor's comments earlier this week all the more crucial. To not attempt to achieve diversification would be absurd. Attempting it won't necessarily guarantee success, but any diversification that results will be beneficial in times like the present.

No Russian roulette

Popular support for the French Communist Party, among the most autocratic and pro-Soviet in Europe, plunged from 25 percent of the electorate in 1972 to less than 10 percent today.

The party has had one leader for 34 years, Maurice Thorez. Under a rigidly disciplined hierarchy, it tried to rid itself of its revolutionary image in the 1970s by co-existing with Charles de Gaulle, and later with President Francois Mitterrand's Socialists. In 1984, claiming that cooperation with Mitterrand's administration harmed the party, his four Communist ministers resigned from his Cabinet.

A recent ad printed in the newspaper Le Monde and signed by 150 communist intellectuals appealed for convening an extraordinary party congress to discuss causes of the party's decline. It accused the leadership of "leading the party to its downfall."

One reason for the precipitous decline in party fortunes is the emergence of high-technology industries, whose employees disdain the Marxist message of class struggle, and the resultant erosion of traditional blue-collar industrial zones.

In 1981 the leadership expelled Henri Fiszbin as head of the party's Paris Federation. Disillusionment over the U.S.S.R.'s failure to develop into a democracy is a key element in the French party's decline, according to Fiszbin.

"The leadership's unwillingness to distance itself from the Soviet Union, to renew itself along democratic lines, its rigidity and power obsession have played a role," he says.

Those, like Fiszbin and the 150 ad signatories, who want the government to own the means of production but still long for individual liberty are blind to the fact that these two concepts are mutually exclusive.

When men and women have no right to own a business, by that very fact alone they lack the liberty to pursue individual happiness. On the other hand, the minute people can begin their own businesses, the communist state collapses. That's why no communist government does, or can, grant individual liberty. Governments do not willingly commit suicide.

Lawyer Cohn treated for deadly AIDS

WASHINGTON — Roy Cohn, the 59-year-old jet-set lawyer recently disbarred in New York, is one of several hundred patients who have been treated for AIDS at the National Institutes of Health in Bethesda, Md.

Jack Anderson

NIH is running tests on a new experimental drug that holds some hope for AIDS patients, and Cohn has received the drug.

Cohn first gained fame as a young prosecutor of Julius and Ethel Rosenberg, who were executed for passing nuclear secrets to the Soviet Union. He then served as chief counsel to Sen. Joseph McCarthy during the Wisconsin Republican's red-hunting heyday in the early 1950s. It was a time when homosexuals as well as suspected communist sympathizers were being fired from government jobs as security risks.

Cohn has denied he has AIDS (Acquired Immune Deficiency Syndrome), which has killed more than 12,000 Americans, including actor Rock Hudson. Some 73 percent of adult AIDS victims have been homosexuals or bisexuals.

Confidential medical records of the National Institutes of Health show that Cohn was admitted last Nov. 4 to its Clinical Center, and was released Nov. 23. He was re-admitted last June 2 to determine his reactions to an experimental drug used exclusively for AIDS patients; he was released June 4.

Thomas Bolan, a law partner of Cohn, denied emphatically that Cohn has AIDS. "If he has AIDS, it's a surprise to me," Bolan said. "He's diagnosed as having cancer and that's what he's being treated for."

Cohn himself has publicly denied he has AIDS, saying he suffers from liver cancer. One of his doctors testified last October that Cohn had only two to 12 months to live.

AIDS is not directly a fatal disease, but by destroying the body's natural immune system, it renders the victim helpless against other infections or diseases — like pneumonia or cancer — that do the actual killing. The AIDS virus is transmitted through an exchange of bodily fluids, as in sexual intercourse, blood transfusions or intravenous drug use. It is not passed by casual contact.

According to the medical records, Cohn was admitted to the NIH Clinical Center, Building 10, at 12:42 p.m. on Nov. 4. The admitting diagnosis was "sarcoma" and the attending physician was Dr. Robert C. Young, chief of the National Cancer Institute's medicine branch. Young said he was not Cohn's specific doctor, but explained that "very frequently people downstairs will put my name down (with) anyone who's admitted to either the 12th or 13th floor."

An institute brochure titled "Current Clinical Studies" lists Young as the overseer of one of the AIDS programs. "Patients who develop Kaposi's sarcoma in the context of AIDS may be admitted for experimental therapy," the brochure states. Kaposi's sarcoma is a common cancer among AIDS victims. It can attack any organ, including the liver, an NIH expert told us.

During Cohn's November stay, he was described in the medical records as "alert," but "not always oriented." He "mixes up details," had "hand tremors" and "does tire easily," the medical records state.

The record includes a note by a nurse that on Nov. 21, at 1 p.m., Cohn "asked for information on sexual practices." The nurse's report continued: "I stated that the safest sex was none, but that if he wanted to have sex he would need to use a condom and especially inform his partner that he had AIDS. I did stress that he should abstain from sex with this disease and on this (program of treatment)."

The record of Cohn's release on Nov. 23 includes a "nursing diagnosis" that lists as a "problem" the fact that the "patient stated (he is) somewhat reluctant to become celibate."

Within a month of his release, Cohn was a guest at the White House. There, according to an account in The Washington Post, "well-wishers rush(ed) to embrace him at a Christmas party for the Cabinet and White House staff."

Cohn was re-admitted to the National Cancer Institute's AIDS program at 4:45 p.m. last June 2. The records show that he had been taking the drug "BWA509U" at home, and was being brought in to determine the effects of the medication on his system. BWA509U is a Burroughs Wellcome Co.'s designation for Azidothymidine, or AZT, an experimental drug that has been approved only for use on AIDS patients.

The drug has created hope in the medical community's urgent battle against AIDS because it has shown promise of increasing patients' immunological defenses. The Cancer Institute's latest test results — on 19 patients in conjunction with Duke University and Burroughs Wellcome — were published in the March 15 issue of Lancet, a respected medical journal. During his brief stay at the Cancer Institute last month, Cohn received 20-milligram doses of AZT each morning, according to the medical records.

Sadly, he had already deteriorated markedly. He was "not self-reliant," was "quite lethargic" and had to be helped to shower and shave, according to the June records. He received at least four units of blood during his four-day stay. His lower lip was cracked and bleeding, and medical personnel were warned that a "rubber glove must be used for application" of medication to the lip.

Cohn's "Discharge Planning Summary" on June 6 said he "should be given ample time for processing of information," adding: "Client to be given one command at a time."

Kemp's presidential hopes hurt by mailing

WASHINGTON — While Rep. Jack Kemp's political brain trust lofts alibis for a probable third-place finish in Michigan's Aug. 5 primary, his operatives there have sent out thousands of fliers that make it appear as though his precinct delegates are backed by or even representing Ronald Reagan.

Rowland Evans

Robert Novak

"President Reagan Needs You to Keep the Cause Alive," says the mailing for delegates backed by the pro-Kemp Michigan Opportunity Society (MOS). Nowhere is Kemp's name mentioned. Not surprisingly, the president's men in Washington inquired whether the fliers might be withdrawn — if they had not already been mailed. Too late. The U.S. mails had sped them on their way.

The incident suggests Kemp is caught in the oozing quagmire of Republican presidential politics: Michigan's complex and grotesquely-early delegate selection process. While stealing a march last summer on George Bush's slow-to-organize forces there, Kemp's volunteers have proved no match for the vice president's money and muscle. They now figure to run third behind the Rev. Pat Robertson's Freedom Council.

Kemp's long-range goal in Michigan is to coalesce with Robertson's delegates and deal the front-running Bush a devastating defeat when the state's national convention delegates actually are selected in January 1988. But 17 months earlier, the election of delegates to the state convention figures to come across in the news media as a Kemp shellacking that will not help his fragile presidential credibility.

Consequently, Kemp insiders are quietly copping out of the Aug. 5 primary on technical grounds. Both Bush and Robertson have established presidential "exploratory" committees that enable overt appeals for their precinct delegates. Kemp cannot until his congressional re-election campaign in Buffalo is completed. This, says the Kemp camp, so heavily weights the primary that it no longer is a fair test.

For Kemp's name to be used in behalf of delegates, says press secretary John Buckley, would "be breaking the law." That sounds like nonsense. Indeed, according to MOS operatives, it is nonsense. Voters could be told that a vote for Delegate X supports the ideals of Jack Kemp. A draft version of the flier did use pictures of Kemp, Reagan, Rep. Trent Lott of Mississippi and Rep. Newt Gingrich of Georgia.

In the mailed version, however, MOS used only Reagan's picture. Thus, Republican voters in Precinct No. 03, Niles Township, Berrien County, last week received this appeal from delegate candidate Eugene J. Flock: "Dear Neighbor, Let's keep the Reagan Revolution alive!"

A detachable card to be carried into the polling booth says, "Mr. President (meaning Ronald Reagan), I Supported Eugene J. Flock." If anybody missed the message, the flip side shows a picture of the president above a Reagan quotation: "Let us go forward and build an American Opportunity Society."

When outraged Bush backers rushed a copy of the flier to the White House, the president's men wondered whether they had missed the repeal of the 22nd Amendment barring a third term. Mitch Daniels, chief White House political aide, has declined public comment. But in fact, he wanted the flier modified or, better still, pulled from circulation.

Daniels telephoned Dave Hoppe, Kemp's chief of staff, who replied — in all candor — that he didn't know anything about it. Hoppe later told us he assumed that the fliers would not be mailed until closer to primary time. He assumed wrong. They were mailed last week. In any event, Hoppe said they were the business of MOS, not the Kemp campaign.

The MOS is led by Clark Durant, a young Detroit lawyer who has preached that the ideals and values put forth by Kemp could compete with Bush's sinewy organization. But what comes through is the appearance of Kemp grabbing a piggyback ride on the president as his only escape from the Michigan quagmire.

Political operatives of Sen. Robert J. Dole are chortling that he stayed out of that swamp and will have his powder dry for Iowa and New Hampshire. Kemp might have been better served to do the same.

But the broader lesson is that retail politics — especially, merchandising political fliers that elicit complaints from the White House — never will enable Jack Kemp to rise out of single-digit polling figures to compete with Bush. His game plan must be based on wholesale politics. That calls not for cute tricks in the backfield but for a long straight pass carrying a clear and open message: "Vote Jack Kemp and keep the Reagan Revolution alive."

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Friday, July 25, the 206th day of 1986. There are 159 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

Thirty years ago, on July 25, 1956, the Italian liner Andrea Doria sank after it collided with the Swedish ship Stockholm south of Nantucket Island off the New England coast. The two ships carried a total of more than 1,600 passengers, but because of rescuers' efforts, only 51 lives were lost.

On this date:

In 1593, France's King Henry IV, a Protestant, converted to Roman Catholicism.

In 1866, Ulysses S. Grant was named General of the Army, the first officer to hold the rank.

In 1909, French aviator Louis Bleriot flew across the English Channel in a monoplane, traveling from Calais to Dover in 37 minutes.

In 1943, Benito Mussolini was dismissed as premier of Italy during World War II.

In 1952, Puerto Rico became a self-governing commonwealth of the United States.

In 1963, the United States, the Soviet Union and Britain signed a treaty prohibiting nuclear weapons testing in the atmosphere, in space or underwater.

In 1978, the world's first test tube baby, Louise Brown, was born in Lancashire, England.

In 1984, Soviet cosmonaut Svetlana Savitskaya became the first woman to walk in space as she stepped from a Soyuz T-12 space capsule.

Ten years ago: On the surface of Mars, Viking I's robot arm, which had balked in an earlier test, was found ready to begin picking up soil samples.

Five years ago: Senate Minority Leader Robert C. Byrd predicted President Reagan would overcome Democratic opposition and win congressional passage of a three-year tax-cut plan.

One year ago: A spokeswoman for Rock Hudson confirmed that the actor, hospitalized in Paris, was suffering from deadly acquired immune deficiency syndrome, or AIDS.

Today's birthdays: Actor Jack Gilford is 79. Singer Donna Theodore is 41.

Thought for today: "The foolish and the dead alone never change their opinion." — James Russell Lowell, American poet and critic (1819-1891).

BIBLE VERSE

If we say that we have no sin, we deceive ourselves, and the truth is not in us. I John 1:8

CHARLEY REESE

Country must invest in civilian production

A lot of people still think that when they buy shares of General Motors, they are helping to finance General Motors. That's not the way it works.

Charley Reese

When General Motors decides to issue stock, the stock is purchased by an investment bank or group of investment banks. Their money goes to General Motors. The investment banks in turn sell the stock to other people. Other people sell it to still other people. None of these subsequent sales, however, has anything to do with the operations of General Motors. The money just changes hands from one owner of the paper to the next owner of the paper, less commissions for the broker who handles the sale.

Theoretically, the price of a stock should have some relationship to the economic performance of the corporation which issued it, but in fact, stock prices are mainly determined by buyers and sellers. The stock market is mainly an arena of speculation, which is why it is affected by opinions, hunches, rumors and insider manipulations.

The stock market, the monetary system, and the economy are not the same thing. They are related and they interact but they are not the same thing. Lumping them together causes a lot of confusion.

The easiest definition of the economy is the production and distribution of goods and services. Our monetary system is a combination of currency and bank credit. The stock market is just a place where stock in public corporations is bought and sold.

Money was developed because it makes economic transactions more convenient than barter. A barter system, in which people swap actual goods or services, makes division of labor very difficult, if not impossible.

Money can be anything people agree to use as money. Its three basic functions are to act as a medium of exchange, a measuring device, and a store of value.

The Constitution grants Congress the power to coin money and regulate its value, but Congress, in 1913, delegated this power to the Federal Reserve System, a central banking system. The board of governors is appointed by the president but the banks themselves are private corporations owned by their member commercial banks.

The money is injected into the economy by commercial banks making loans at interest and taken out when the loans are repaid.

The thing to remember is that while stock sales are a convenient way to finance very large operations and while money is a convenient device, it is the production and distribution of goods and services which make the other two possible.

It doesn't matter how much money you have if there is nothing to buy with it. It doesn't do you any good to own shares in General Motors if General Motors isn't making and selling cars. If the production and distribution of goods and services declines, then the stock and monetary empires, which are just paper, will collapse.

I think we tend to forget that because the elite, which includes most of the government and the press, tend to be people who speculate in the stock market and invest in debt paper. They are interested in interest rates and in the Dow-Jones average.

What people should do, however, is invest in the production of goods and services. That not only creates goods and services but it provides employment and only employment can sustain a demand for more goods and services.

Right now, our economy is relying too heavily on transfer payments and government defense expenditures. That is like sticking a tube in your left arm and connecting it with your right to give yourself a blood transfusion. The government takes money from people who are working and gives it to people who are retired, disabled, sick, on welfare, or making tanks and missiles. It all goes to consumption or to production of non-productive goods.

Unless we reinvest in civilian production in this country, we'll be in big trouble.

Police investigate deaths of former South Vietnamese diplomat, wife

WASHINGTON (AP) — Police are investigating the deaths of an elderly couple who played a major role in the old South Vietnamese government and whose daughter was Madame Ngo Dinh Nhu, the "Dragon Lady" of Vietnam.

The bodies of Tran Van Chuong, 88, and his wife Nam-Tran Chuong, 75, bearing no visible wounds, were found Thursday in the same room of their northwest Washington home, District of Columbia homicide detective Dave Forbes said.

He would not give a cause of death but said an autopsy was scheduled for today.

Chuong was Vietnamese ambassador to the United States from 1954 to 1963, a period that saw growing American involvement in Southeast Asia as a prelude to the Vietnam War.

Tran Van Chuong — Nam-Tran Chuong

But he opposed the actions of President Ngo Dinh Diem's government and resigned over the treatment of Buddhists in his country.

Madame Chuong was South Vietnam's permanent observer to the United Nations in the early 1960s.

Both resigned Aug. 22, 1963, a day after South Vietnamese troops seized holy pagodas and placed thousands of Buddhists in detention camps.

"I cannot go on representing a government which ignores my advice (in seeking a reconciliation with the Buddhists) and of which I disapprove," Chuong said in his cable to Saigon announcing his resignation.

Buddhist clergymen were at the forefront of protests against the Diem government, which was cracking down on a communist insurgency. Protests became increasingly violent with several Buddhist priests immolating themselves on South Vietnamese streets as a condemnation of the government.

Chuong was the descendent of an old Mandarin family and his wife was a member of Vietnam's former royal family.

Congressional Democrats still pressing for Contra documents

WASHINGTON (AP) — Congressional Democrats say they will keep pressing the White House for documents on its alleged management of a private network that helped Nicaraguan rebels militarily during a ban on U.S. government aid.

Rep. Michael Barnes, D-Md., chairman of a House Foreign Affairs subcommittee on Latin America, said Thursday that White House refusal to release the documents amounts to "stonewalling."

"Already committed to waging a war without public support, the administration has now decided to hide the war policy from public view," added Rep. David E. Bonior, D-Mich., chairman of the House leadership task force on Nicaragua. "The American people have a right to know. It is their future that the president pledges with his Contra war."

In letters to three House committee chairmen, President Reagan's national security adviser, John M. Poindexter, said, "The administration strongly opposes enactment" of a resolution of inquiry, introduced a month ago, seeking the documents.

"I hope this matter can finally be put to rest," Poindexter said in one of the letters dated Monday.

A month ago, The Associated Press and other news organizations reported that the White House, working through outside intermediaries, managed a private network in 1984-85 that helped the rebels with arms purchases, fund raising and enlistment of military trainers.

Lt. Col. Oliver L. North, the National Security Council's deputy director for political-military affairs, oversaw the work of the intermediaries, who included conservative activist Robert W. Owen and retired Army Maj. Gen. John K. Singlaub, according to sources in the administration, rebel movement and private aid network.

The secret aid program reportedly enabled the White House to circumvent the Boland amendment, which was in force from October 1984 through September 1985. U.S. military aid to the Contras is still barred, although the House last month approved Reagan's request for $100 million in mostly military aid for the Contras — a proposal now before the Senate.

Poindexter said his predecessor, Robert C. McFarlane, provided information on the alleged NSC actions to Congress last fall.

"This information made it clear that the actions of the National Security Council staff were in compliance with both the spirit and letter of the law," Poindexter said.

Negotiators 'headed toward' tax bill

WASHINGTON (AP) — Congressional negotiators are gingerly making progress toward a final draft of tax-overhaul legislation after receiving new estimates showing the Senate-passed version of the bill gives more relief to middle-income taxpayers than first expected.

Sen. Bill Bradley, D-N.J., said the 22 House and Senate tax writers are "headed toward a bill."

"I'm sure we'll see some progress" today, said Rep. Dan Rostenkowski, D-Ill., chairman of the conference.

"I hope that in the next day or two we will be sketching at least the broad outlines" of the final bill, said Sen. John C. Danforth, R-Mo.

The bargainers, trying to write a compromise version of the legislation passed by each chamber, were continuing private talks today that they began Thursday. In addition, there were plans for the group to meet during the weekend to try to wrap up the work in time for a three-week congressional recess due to begin Aug. 15.

Despite the optimistic signals, there is still much hard bargaining ahead as the conferees try to resolve the hundreds of differences between the two bills.

During Thursday's closed session the legislators received estimates from congressional tax experts that the Senate's version of the legislation would produce greater tax cuts than first thought for people with incomes between $20,000 and $50,000.

However, the figures from the Joint Committee on Taxation also projected the Senate bill would bring in $21 billion less revenue over the next five years than earlier estimated.

Senate bargainers were due to meet by themselves today before getting back together with their House counterparts to discuss how to make up that shortage.

Rostenkowski indicated the conferees would be using the Senate version of the bill as the basis for the talks as they continue. Nonetheless, he stopped short of saying the House negotiators would accept the tax rates in the Senate package.

Rep. Richard Gephardt, D-Mo., one of the House conferees, called the new figures "good news, but not enough to alter the goal of redesigning the bill to deliver real reform and relief to middle-income taxpayers."

The estimates changed primarily because the original projections were based on predictions of inflation made in February.

'Super-rich' get even richer in last 20 years

WASHINGTON (AP) — America's "super-rich" have increased their grip on the nation's wealth over the past 20 years, giving them their biggest slice ever of the economic pie, according to a study by the Democrats.

The nation's wealthiest 420,000 households — the top one-half of one percent of the population — saw their share of the wealth grow by 38 percent between 1963 and 1983, said the study by the congressional Joint Economic Committee.

That elite bracket of Americans controlled 35 percent of the country's wealth, said the study, which is based on surveys by the Federal Reserve System. In 1963, the same group held slightly more than 25 percent.

The 1983 level of concentration exceeded the previous high level, which occurred in 1929 just before the Depression, said Rep. David Obey, D-Wis., the committee chairman. The level then was 32 percent.

"This study is proof that the rich get richer," Obey said. It "makes sheer mincemeat of the notion that this country needs more incentives for rich folks."

Obey charged that Reagan administration initiatives to lower tax rates and provide tax incentives for financial activities limited mostly to the wealthy will perpetuate the trend toward increased concentration of wealth.

A continuation of that trend erodes the basic confidence of the American public in our entire system, he said. It increases cynicism and adds to the us-versus-them attitude about all institutions, economic and governmental.

Each of the richest households which the study dubbed the super rich, held at least $2.5 million in assets, and the average was $8.9 million. The next one-half of one percent, the very rich, held assets averaging $1.7 million. The next nine percent of households averaged $419,000 in assets, and everyone else — the other 90 percent of Americans — averaged just under $40,000.

Soviets still may be listening to channels, secretary says

WASHINGTON (AP) — The damage caused by the Walker family spy ring to the Navy's internal communications network was so extensive that the service believes the Soviets still may be successfully monitoring certain lower-priority channels, Navy Secretary John F. Lehman says.

Fixing the damage will take years, despite the completion of the prosecution of one of the country's biggest espionage scandals with the conviction Thursday in San Francisco of former Navy Petty Officer Jerry Whitworth on espionage charges.

The Navy expects to spend roughly $100 million just to re-secure its radio and communication channels, Lehman said in an interview granted while the Whitworth jury was deliberating.

Even when that process is completed, however, "We don't want to kid ourselves that we've solved all those problems and closed it all off," he said.

The Navy believes it has sealed off its most sensitive internal communications systems from Soviet scrutiny, Lehman said.

Lockheed admits laxness

WASHINGTON (AP) — The chairman of Lockheed Corp. is promising to end the carelessness he admits characterized the giant defense contractor's handling of classified documents that congressional investigators say are missing.

"We have not maintained proper administrative control over classified documents" at the Burbank, Calif., plant, Lawrence O. Kitchen told a House subcommittee Thursday.

Kitchen's testimony to the Energy and Commerce investigations subcommittee was part of the panel's continuing investigation into how defense contractors handle secret documents. The two-year-old probe has spotlighted a series of problems.

Kitchen's statement was the first time Lockheed admitted the problem. When Rep. John Dingell, D-Mich., chairman of the panel, charged a month ago that classified documents had been mishandled, Lockheed officials said their own investigations had not found any improper actions.

Neither Kitchen nor any lawmakers would say what program the documents involved. But sources speaking on condition of anonymity have pinpointed it as the F-19, a program so secret that the Pentagon and Lockheed won't even acknowledge its existence.

The F-19 is a "stealth" fighter, the sources said, constructed in new shapes and exotic materials to cloak it from enemy radar. The Air Force has admitted the existence of a stealth bomber.

GAO cites Pentagon

WASHINGTON (AP) — Defense Secretary Caspar W. Weinberger is ordering an expedited investigation of allegations that top Pentagon officials have used "emergency and extraordinary" budget accounts for improper entertainment.

The General Accounting Office, which made the allegations Thursday in an 11-page audit, said the violations ranged from a $33 bill incurred by Army Secretary John O. Marsh for a bathrobe to pay off a football bet, to a $2,400 bill rung up by then-Chief of Naval Operations Adm. James D. Watkins for a hospitality tent at the Army-Navy football game.

Hot weekend anticipated

From Staff and Wire Reports

Midlanders are in store for a hot weekend with highs near 100, according to the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Airport.

Tonight will be fair with a low near 70. Winds will be southerly at 5 to 10 mph.

Saturday will be sunny and continued hot with a high near 100. Winds will be south at 5 to 10 mph.

Thursday's high of 99 degrees was only 4 degrees cooler than the record high of 103 degrees set in 1958. The overnight low of 69 degrees was 7 degrees warmer than the record low of 62 degrees set in 1976.

STATE

High pressure in the upper levels of the atmosphere was the dominant feature affecting Texas weather this morning, the National Weather Service reported.

As a result, fair skies were observed statewide as pre-dawn temperatures were mainly in the 70s. Cooler readings in the 50s and 60s were confined to the higher elevations of southwest Texas.

The 4 a.m. state temperature extremes ranged from 59 degrees at Marfa to 83 degrees at Dallas.

A south wind of 5 to 10 mph was common, although a west wind blew across the high plains in response to a surface trough of low pressure over the area.

North Texas was forecast to be sunny and hot Saturday with some isolated thunderstorms and highs ranging from the upper 90s to 104. Lows should be in the mid 70s.

The weather service predicted West Texas would be mostly sunny and hot with highs in the upper 90s to near 100 and lows ranging from the upper 60s to lower 70s.

South Texas should see clear to partly cloudy skies with widely scattered thunderstorms and highs from near 90 to 100 and 105, with lows from the 70s to near 80.

NATION

Rain spread from the nation's midsection into the West today amid forecasts that showers and thunderstorms would again provide some relief to the heat-plagued South.

Showers and thunderstorms ranged from southwest Wyoming across northeastern Arizona, and from southwest Michigan across southern Minnesota, Iowa, southern Nebraska, northern Kansas and eastern Colorado.

Rain and thunderstorms also fell across northern Alabama.

Scattered thunderstorms kept temperatures in the Southeast below 100 degrees for the third straight day Thursday, providing some relief from the heat wave that began early this month.

Buick Open

GRAND BLANC, Mich. — Davis Love III and Billy Pierot, Tour rookies, each shot 7-under-par 65s to share the lead in the $500,000 Buick Open. Alone at 6-under, one stroke behind the leaders was Ed Fiori who birdied the last six holes for a 66. Jim Colbert, who aced the third hole, was one of five players at 5-under. The others were J.C. Snead, Howard Twitty, Brad Faxon, Tom Byrum and Jim Rutledge.

Love, a 6-3, 175-pound three-time All-American at the University of North Carolina, put together nines of 31-34 for his 65. Love, whose father is a teaching pro, has won $78,662 in 21 tournaments this year, No. 67 on the official money list.

du Maurier Classic

WOODBRIDGE, Ontario — Chris Johnson's 5-under-67 was good for a two-stroke lead over Joanne Carner in the LPGA du Maurier Classic, last of the four Grand Slam events. Johnson, who is winless this season, sank a four-foot putt for an eagle on the 450-yard, par-5 fourth hole to go along with five birdies and two bogeys.

At two-under 70 were Cathy Sheehan, Cathy Morse, Nancy Scranton and Cathy Johnston. Nancy White is the leading Canadian with a 71. She's in a large group that included Jan Stephenson, Sandra Palmer, Juli Inkster and Laura Baugh.

UVA drug bust

CHARLOTTESVILLE, Va. — Former University of Virginia tailback Barry Word, a New Orleans Saints' third-round draft pick, and Cavalier running back Howard Petty were charged in an extensive cocaine investigation, federal prosecutors said. They, along with former placekicker Kenny Stadlin, were charged with conspiring to distribute less than one ounce of cocaine. If convicted, they could be fined $250,000 and sentenced to up to 16 years in prison.

University President Robert M. O'Neil said athletes facing charges such as that against Petty must be suspended from the team until the case is resolved...

Oil Can ready

WRENTHAM, Mass. — Suspended Boston pitcher Dennis "Oil Can" Boyd said all his drug tests were negative and he wants to go back to work."I have been given medical clearance to return to baseball and I am eager to rejoin my teammates as soon as possible. I feel good and hope that I can get back on the mound very soon.

"I have tremendous support from my wife and family as well as those looking after my needs. I will make no further comment relative to my hospital stay, the assault and disorderly conduct charges with the Chelsea police, or my financial status."

USFL vs NFL

NEW YORK — A jury of five women and a man, which has spent 11 weeks listening to the war between the leagues, began deliberating the USFL's $1.69 billion antitrust suit against the NFL. The jury, none of its members football fans, must wade through nine charges brought by the 4-year-old USFL — six under the Sherman Antitrust Act and three that are known as "common law" charges. They contain a multitude of allegations that all add up to one basic charge — that the NFL, through a variety of actions, caused many of the problems.

Expensive view of the Cowboys

N.Y. Times News Service

A certain luxury box for the Dallas Cowboys' games at Texas Stadium in Irving, Texas, has a few features that can make watching a highly pleasurable experience. Overlooking the 45-yard line, it accommodates a dozen people who can watch the field or one of two color television sets while enjoying air-conditioned temperatures and perhaps making use of the well-stocked bar's beverages and snacks.

That box, the property of Clint Murchison Jr., the original owner of the Cowboys, who sold the team in 1984, was purchased at auction on Sunday for $920,000, a record for Texas Stadium. It was sold to Jim Francis, an executive officer of the Texas Stadium Corp., who was representing H.R. (Bum) Bright, the corporation chairman and present owner of the Cowboys.

The box, which adjoins a double-sized owner's suite that Bright obtained when he purchased the Cowboys, will be used "for entertaining a number of customers of Bright and Company," according to Francis, who added that the box will remain the property of Bright through the life of the Cowboys' stadium lease, which expires in 2008.

"The only other auction I took part in was 14 years ago when I got a baby grand piano for $250," Francis said. "This was a good deal more nerve-racking."

THE GIANTS' rookies and free agents have been in training camp in Pleasantville, N.Y., for a week, and their first four draft choices are still unsigned and absent. Coach Bill Parcells says he feels sorry for them.

The four are defensive players — Eric Dorsey, chosen in the first round, and Mark Collins, Erik Howard and Thomas (Pepper) Johnson, all taken in the second round. In each case, the players' agents are asking for more money than the Giants have offered.

"They have no idea of the intensity of training camp," said Parcells. "They have no idea of the stamina needed. Plus they've got to learn the system. So they've got three big adjustments to make, and they have to perform well enough to beat out an established player.

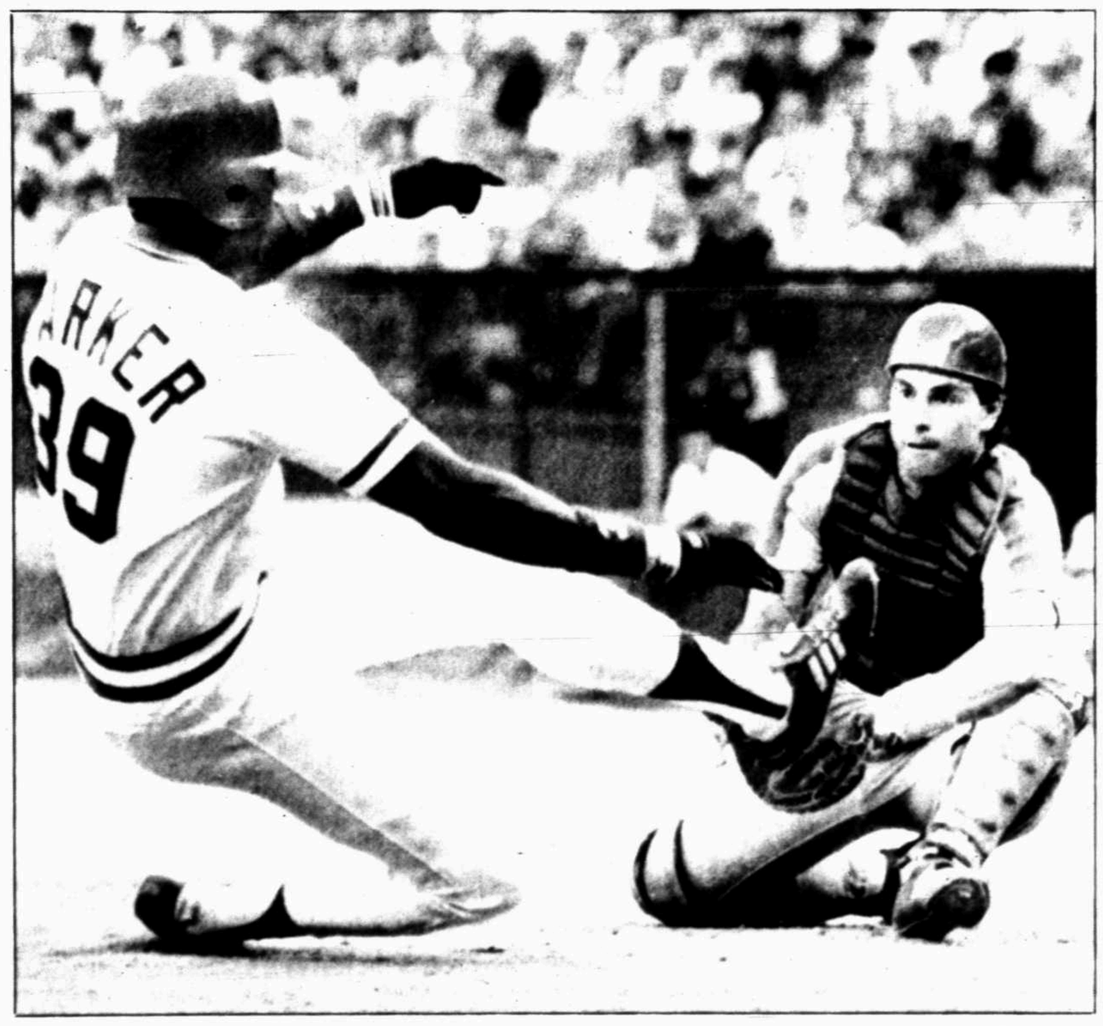

"I don't blame the players. They're just listening to someone. But they're going to be the recipients of all this. It's their job to show me what they can do. It's not my job to create jobs for them. So I'm not frustrated. I feel sorry for them."

FOR ALL the formal rules that define the game, the broader world of baseball has always reflected a certain informality, one which makes it all but inevitable that a Ronald will become a Ron or a Timothy a Tim.

As Ron Darling and Tim Teufel of the Mets have been discovering since their arrests in Houston over the weekend, for all the formality of Texas justice, it, too, has its informal side, at least when it comes to names.

Thus when Darling and Teufel made their first court appearance on Sunday, the Harris County assistant district attorney assigned to the case at the time was Bill Taylor and the judge was Doug Shaver. To avoid being at a disadvantage in such a good old boy atmosphere, the players engaged a Houston lawyer who goes by the name of Dick DeGuerin. (A former law partner of the legendary criminal lawyer Percy Foreman, DeGuerin is not to be confused with Foreman's current law partner, DeGuerin's brother, Mike DeGeurin, who spells his surname differently.)

When DeGuerin and his clients go to court again Thursday, the Texas monicker informality will be further illustrated by the prosecutor assigned to the case, Chuck Neeley, and, at first blush, by the presiding judge, Joe Kegans. According to a court aide, however, Kegans is one of the few people involved with the case who uses the name she was born with. She was named for her daddy.

Captains make life miserable for Angels

From Staff Reports

SHREVEPORT — Shreveport's Captains continued to make life miserable for the Midland Angels, posting an 8-4 victory Thursday night to sew up the series between the Texas League rivals.

Shreveport leads here 3-1 in games played and has clinched the season's series 7-2 with only tonight's game left between the teams.

Jeff Brantley, 6-7, struck out 17 and pitched a no-hitter until the ninth inning when he gave up a three-run homer by Midland's Brian Brady.

Offensively, Shreveport's Mike Rubel had three home runs and six RBIs to end the night 3-for-3 with a walk in the 8-4 Shreveport win.

The Captains took the lead in the first inning with Rubel's three-run homer. He followed it with a solo home run in the sixth and a two-run homer in the eighth.

Doug Banning, 4-5, took the loss for Midland.

STEVE Stanicek and Alan Cartwright helped the Diablos squeeze out a 6-5 win over the Jackson Mets in Texas League play in Jackson, Miss.

The Diablos scored four runs in the first and another in the second inning off Mets starter and loser Wray Bergendahl, 3-6. Dan Scarpetta, 11-5, pitched five innings for the win.

The Mets rallied from a 5-0 deficit. Third baseman Rick Lockwood homered in the sixth inning to put the Mets within one run of the Diablos.

The Thursday night win boosted El Paso, first place in the Western Division, to 19-12 for the second half while the Mets, ranked last in the Eastern Division, fell to 13-20.

Texas League

IN OTHER Texas League games Thursday, San Antonio knocked off the Tulsa Drillers 9-2 and Beaumont downed Arkansas 4-2.

In San Antonio, the Dodgers won their seventh straight in a 9-2 win over the Tulsa Drillers that featured a bench-clearing brawl in the fourth inning.

The Dodgers took advantage of Tulsa starter Rick Knapp, 5-11, to put the game away early. San Antonio starter Bill Brennan, 7-6, picked up the win and didn't allow a Tulsa hit until the fourth inning.

The brawl started when Knapp hit Tracy Woodson in the left side with his first pitch, prompting the Dodger third baseman to charge the mound. As he reached Knapp, both benches cleared, but order was restored in five minutes. Woodson was ejected.

In Beaumont, the Golden Gators used a nine-hit attack to pin the loss on Arkansas' Matt Young, 10-3. They scored twice in the first inning on Randell Byers' double, a wild pitch on Shane Mack's strikeout and RBI singles by Frank Castro and Tom Brassil.

That offset a game-opening run by the Arkansas Travelers on singles by Tim Jones and Mark Dougherty and Dave Kable's fielder's choice. Dougherty was a perfect 4-for-4 in the Arkansas offense.

Beaumont's Mark Poston pitched his way through seven innings, encountered some turbulence in the eighth and Rusty Ford took over, retiring five Arkansas batters in a 4-2 Golden Gator win.

Wall-to-wall football

By BRIAN TRUSDELL
Associated Press

If the college football fanatic is not satiated by the flood of games that will be televised every Saturday in the fall, he probably never will.

"My God, it's wall-to-wall football," said Donn Bernstein, ABC's director of college sports. "We've beaten it to death. We think it's overexposed now. In some markets, you can watch eight to 10 games every Saturday."

Ever since deregulation of college football, ordered by U.S. District Court Judge Juan Burciaga in September 1982 when he struck down ABC's exclusive contract with the NCAA, networks, cable, pay television and syndicators have the sport available from noon to midnight on Saturday.

"There's nowhere to go," Bernstein said. "There's only one day for it, and every hour is taken, every conference is taken, every team is taken."

PRIOR to the 1982 season, ABC was the only outlet that had the rights to televise college football during the regular season. But the antitrust suit filed by the University's of Oklahoma and Georgia changed that.

CBS joined the NCAA's television family in 1982 under the old TV plan, but deregulation opened up the sport in 1984. Whereas ABC's 15 games every fall were the limit for college football, this autumn ESPN will televise 17 games and Turner Broadcasting another 37 in addition to ABC's 15 and CBS' 20-22. Those figures are about the same as last year and do not include any of the pay TV services or local syndicators.

Despite the dramatic increased availability of football in the last two seasons, broadcasters say interest has not declined.

"There's no question on its vitality that the public has an appetite for it," said Peter Tortorici, vice president of program planning for CBS. "Things have changed so radically and in so many directions, the question now is what is it's relative market value."

RATINGS for ABC and CBS have dropped dramatically since deregulation, from ABC's 9.9 and CBS' 9.6 in 1983 to CBS' 7.2 and ABC's 6.9 last season. But total aggregate ratings for college football have not declined.

"I've been here 11 years, and the best we ever did by ourselves was a 14," Bernstein said. "If you total ours and CBS' we're getting that for a season — and that doesn't include any of the others."

'College kid' helps end Ranger drought

Mike Schmidt has seen a lot of pitches in his career. But none of them compared with what Mike Scott threw.

"He threw a pitch to Mike Schmidt that Schmidt said was the best pitch he had ever seen," Philadelphia Manager John Felske said Thursday night after Scott and the Houston Astros beat the Phillies, 9-3.

Scott, leading the major leagues in strikeouts, fanned a career-high 13 in just seven innings. Kevin Bass went 5-for-5, including a two-run single during an eight-run third inning as Houston won its seventh straight game.

"It was like a forkball only faster," Schmidt said. "The bottom just fell right out."

Scott, 10-6, raised his strikeout total to 187. He gave up two runs on five hits in ending host Philadelphia's four-game winning streak.

"I had a good split-fingered pitch and a good fastball," Scott said. "The eight-run inning sure helped. You can challenge people when you have a big lead."

Alan Ashby sparked Houston's biggest inning of the season by leading off the third with a home run. Scott then doubled with one out and Bill Doran walked. With two outs, Shane Rawley, 11-7, walked Davey Lopes and Glenn Davis, forcing home a run.

Bass' single made it 4-0 and Phil Garner followed with a two-run double. Ashby walked and Rawley was replaced by Tom Hume, who threw a wild pitch that set up Dickie Thon's two-run double.

Houston added its final run in the seventh on Ashby's RBI single.

Expos 6, Reds 5

Tim Raines opened the 14th inning with a single and scored on Mitch Webster's double as Montreal ended its four-game losing streak by winning in Cincinnati. The Reds' loss was their fifth straight.

Dodgers 9, Pirates 2

Franklin Stubbs hit his 18th and 19th home runs and Bill Madlock and Jeff Hamilton also homered as Los Angeles completed a three-game sweep in Pittsburgh.

Fernando Valenzuela, 13-6, held the Pirates to five hits over seven innings. He won his straight third decision and become the NL's first 13-game winner.

AMERICAN LEAGUE

Rangers 7, Indians 3

Mike Loynd's confidence, control and good curveball helped him tie the NCAA record for victories in a season earlier this year. Those same assets also contributed to a successful major-league debut Thursday night.

"I wasn't expecting to go out there and get killed. As a matter of fact, I expected to go out there and take it to somebody," Loynd said after pitching Texas to a 7-3 triumph over the Cleveland Indians, ending the Rangers' seven-game losing streak.

Loynd took a three-hitter and 6-1 lead into the seventh inning, but left after a pair of leadoff singles. Both runners eventually scored and Loynd's final line read: six innings, five hits, three runs, six strikeouts and one walk.

Loynd went 20-3 at Florida State this spring and then joined Texas' Class AA team in Tulsa. The right-hander was called up when pitcher Mike Mason was placed on the 15-day disabled list.

"Who knows? I might be back in the minors next week," Loynd said. "But I'm a confident person, and I believe I know how to pitch."

The host Rangers gave Loynd an early lead, jumping on 47-year-old knuckleballer Phil Niekro, 7-7, for three runs in the second inning, two of them on Curtis Wilkerson's triple.

One of the hits off Loynd was Joe Carter's double in the fourth, which extended his hitting streak to 10 straight games. Texas' Scott Fletcher went hitless in three at-bats and saw his 19-game hitting streak snapped.

Royals 1, Tigers 0

Lonnie Smith's eighth-inning homer produced the only run at Tiger Stadium as Kansas City beat Detroit.

Orioles 12, White Sox 6

Rick Dempsey's three-run homer capped a seven-run first inning and Jim Dwyer, Lee Lacy and Jim Traber also homered to power Baltimore over visiting Chicago.

If only bootlegger Collier could pass

THOUSAND OAKS, Calif. (AP) — Reggie Collier fakes a handoff to a halfback sweeping left then bootlegs five yards to the right for a touchdown.

It's what Collier does best in the daily scrimmages at Thousand Oaks training camp and the Dallas Cowboys hope some day his passing prowess matches the 4.45 speed of his legs.

"He's got a year to show us what he can do at quarterback," said Dallas Coach Tom Landry. "He would have to show by next summer that he could be a championship quarterback."

Collier, who is shooting for the third quarterback job on the Dallas roster, said he went to the USFL in 1984 out of Southern Mississippi instead of the NFL because he wanted a shot at calling the signals.

"The money didn't matter," Collier says. "I wanted to play quarterback. I was willing to put money aside. The NFL told me I should be a wide receiver. That's why a gave the new league a try. I'm a quarterback."

In 1985, Collier hit 229 passes for 2,578 yards and 13 touchdowns. He also threw 16 interceptions for the Orlando Renegades.

Collier scrambled for 606 yards, including runs of 63 and 71 yards for a touchdowns.

Against Jacksonville, Collier ran for 171 yards and four touchdowns. No professional quarterback has ever done better over land.

"They know I can run but I've got to prove to them I can throw the ball," Collier said. "I believe I can move a team. I moved teams down to the goal line before."

In three years in the USFL, Collier averaged almost seven yards every time he carried the ball.

The Cowboys drafted Collier in the sixth round as a future in 1983.

"I think he could be a tremendous receiver," said Dallas' director of college scouting, Gil Brandt. "He has good hands and long strides. At 6-feet, 2-inches, Collier would make a great target."

Collier has all but won the third string job behind Danny White and Steve Pelluer although Landry is keeping mum.

Collier has outdistanced sixth round draft choice Stan Gelbaugh of Maryland in early training camp workouts.

"Reggie has had his moments but there is still a lot he needs to learn," said offensive coordinator Paul Hackett.

Collier has a tremendously strong arm but had been having trouble with his delivery until Hackett worked with him in Dallas this spring.

"I want to be a quarterback in the NFL and I appreciate the chance I'm being given by Dallas," Collier said. "I think my work in Dallas got me a good head start toward making this team."

This Day in Baseball

July 25

1918 — Walter Johnson of the Washington Senators pitched a four-hitter over 15 innings before winning 1-0 against the St. Louis Browns. The only hit off him in the first 11 innings was a triple by George Sisler.

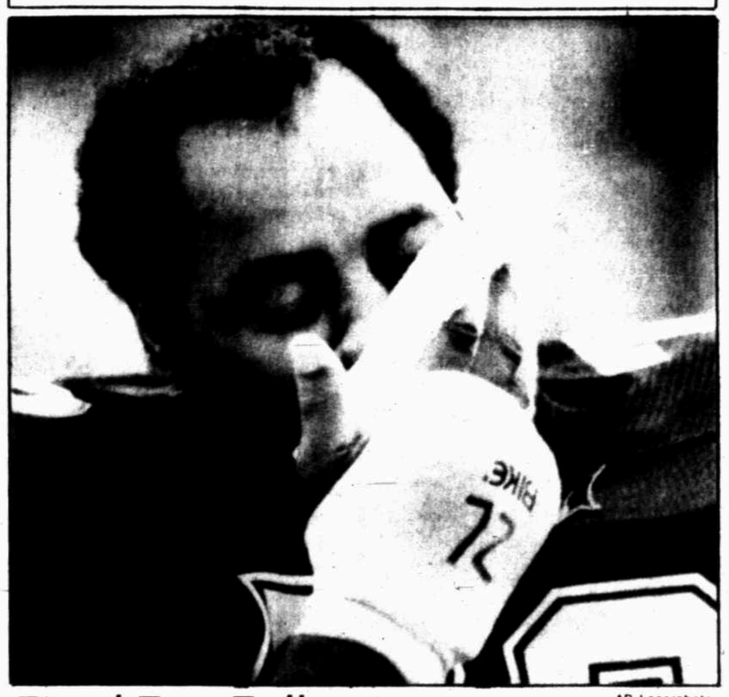

1930 — The Philadelphia Athletics executed a triple steal in the first inning and again in the fourth against the Cleveland Indians.

1941 — Lefty Grove of the Boston Red Sox won his 300th and last game, beating the Cleveland Indians, 10-6.

1949 — Stan Musial hit for the cycle as the St. Louis Cardinals beat the Brooklyn Dodgers, 14-1.

1961 — En route to his 61 home run season, Roger Maris of the New York Yankees hit four off the Chicago White Sox in a doubleheader to give him 40 for the year.

1978 — Pete Rose of the Cincinnati Reds singled to left off New York Met Craig Swan in the third inning to set a National League record of hitting safely in 38 consecutive games. The Mets won the game, 9-2.

Thornton says Indians not home free, yet

By CHUCK MELVIN

CLEVELAND (AP) — Those who suggest the Cleveland Indians are in a pennant race have not looked at the schedule closely enough, says Andre Thornton.

"Things are going to get awfully sticky over the next month," the Indians' veteran designated hitter said. "Sure, we're five or six games out of first now, but we haven't really begun to fight in our own division yet. If this was the end of August, it'd be a different situation."

The Indians' 7-2 victory over the Chicago White Sox on Wednesday night was their fifth in six games and pulled them within five games of first-place Boston in the AL East. It also put Cleveland 10 games over .500 for the first time since 1974.

The mid-season success, however, has come against the weak AL West. The Indians have played 41 straight games against Western Division teams, registering a 27-14 mark.

After four games at Texas this weekend, Cleveland must play 42 straight games against the tougher AL East, which has six of seven teams playing above .500.

"If, at the end of August, we're still in this position, then we can say we're in a pennant race," Thornton said. "I just hope we don't start looking at it more than one game at a time."

Thornton stops short of ruling out any possibility of contention for the Indians.

"This is the best assemblage of players I've ever been with in terms of potential," the 12-year veteran said. "The exciting thing is that you cannot gauge what they might be able to do. They haven't had the chance to set standards of production year in and year out.

"From that standpoint — because we are a young ballclub — this (winning) might be contagious. These guys are ambitious. They want to show people they're good. They want the money. They want the stardom."

The Indians have been getting decent pitching and surprisingly consistent hitting from young players pieced together mostly through trades.

Third baseman Brook Jacoby (.274, 11 homers, 53 RBI) and center fielder Brett Butler (56 runs scored) came from Atlanta for Len Barker in 1983, and outfielders Joe Carter (.313, 16 homers, 64 RBI) and Mel Hall (.295, 17 homers, 57 RBI) came from the Cubs for Rick Sutcliffe in 1984.

They helped the Indians put together a 10-game winning streak in April and May that boosted the team's confidence, but the streak was followed by nine losses in the next 10 games.

Manager Pat Corrales thinks that sudden turnabout helped mature the team.

"They'd gotten a taste of losing a lot over the last two years," Corrales said. "Then they got a taste of winning early this year. They thought they were going to win 135 straight. And then they got deflated. Now, they realize you've got to keep an even keel.

"It seems like now, they'll carry one win over to the next day, but they won't carry a loss into the next day."

Maness' past blurs Oiler receiver's future

SAN ANGELO (AP) — James Maness is discovering that a player with a past often has a hard time securing a future in the NFL.

After an outstanding track and football career at Texas Christian, Maness was a third round selection of the Chicago Bears in 1985.

Maness played sparingly last season and then tested positive for drug usage after the season and was released, although he said he had just completed a drug rehabilitation program.

Maness had almost given up on the idea of playing football this season when the Houston Oilers offered him a chance.

He signed a contract Thursday and participated in both Oiler workouts.

But Maness, signed by General Manager Ladd Herzeg, must now satisfy the critical eye of Oiler Coach Jerry Glanville.

"LADD tries to furnish us with every possible weapon available and if we don't like the weapon, we get rid of it in a hurry," Glanville said.

Glanville said the fact that Maness had just been signed and had not had a chance to participate in the team's off-season program would hamper his chances of making the team.

"He got in the huddle twice today and had no idea what to do," Glanville said. "It's hard for a person to come off the street and play for us because we'd already put in our offense before we even got here."

Maness' 97 career receptions at TCU ranks seventh on the Southwest Conference list and he anchored TCU's 800-meter relay team to a 1:20.84, the world's fourth fastest time ever.

But Maness realizes that having had his name associated with drug usage could end his chance for an NFL career.

"Hopefully, it won't but only time can tell that," Maness said. "It's something that happened that is in the past and I can't do anything about it.

"It will always haunt me but from now on, I can only try to do my best."

MANESS said he wanted a second chance with the world champion Bears after coming out of rehabilitation, but doesn't think the Bears wanted him.

"They said I tested positive but they wouldn't show me the test results," Maness said. "I didn't contest it because I didn't want my name in the paper about it."

Instead, Maness tried to get a second chance with other teams. Only the Atlanta Falcons and Oilers seemed interested.

"I'm about 90 percent of what I was but the speed is still there," Maness said. "It will be back in three or four days."

Oiler wide receiver Drew Hill, who gave the Oilers a deep threat last season, has failed to report to camp and reportedly wants to renegotiate his contract.

The Oilers also have signed former all-pro John Jefferson to add punch to the receiving corps that already includes running back Butch Woolfolk, who led the team with 80 catches; Tim Smith with 46 catches and tight end Jamie Williams with 39 receptions.

Maness hopes his 4.3 speed in the 40-yard dash will be helpful to the Oilers.

"I had some regrets two or three months ago but I have none now," Maness said. "I'm just glad to have a chance with an NFL team."

Four-time all-pro gets ax from San Francisco

Associated Press

Some, like Billy Sims, leave voluntarily. Others, like Fred Dean, suffer the indignity of being waived.

Dean, a four-time Pro Bowl selection, was released by the San Francisco 49ers Thursday after refusing the club's request to retire. Sims, the Detroit Lions' all-time rushing leader, retired Wednesday after not playing in a game since 1984 because of a knee injury.

Dean, a 34-year-old defensive end, had been the subject of trade talks with Los Angeles Raiders owner Al Davis, who watched Dean work out Wednesday at the Raiders' camp in Oxnard. Davis had expressed concern about Dean's condition, particularly since Dean underwent arthroscopic surgery on his left knee a year ago.

Trade talks reportedly were hindered by Dean's hefty pay — $125,000 for reporting and a $290,000 salary.

Eagles

Fullback Anthony Toney, Philadelphia's second-round draft choice, agreed to terms over a four-year contract estimated in excess of $900,000.

Bears

Chicago offensive lineman Stefan Humphries has broken his toe and will be out for about four weeks. The team should should get one starter back in defensive lineman Dan Hampton. After a day of traction for recurring pain from a previous neck injury, Hampton was released from the hospital and is expected to make the club's trip to London for the Aug. 3 exhibition game. He is not expected to play.

Giants

Coach Bill Parcells said the Giants again will keep three quarterbacks (vets Phil Simms and Jeff Rutledge and Jeff Hostetlerlon their roster during the season.

Raiders

Fifteen players, including veterans Jim Smith, Bob Nelson and Cle Montgomery, were released Thursday by the Raiders.

Steelers

The sudden retirement of David Woodley and the Steelers' inability to sign third-round draft choice Bubby Brister has left Mark Malone and Scott Campbell as the only quarterbacks in the team's training camp.

Rams

Quarterback Hugh Millen, a third-round draft choice from the University of Washington, completed eight of 17 passes for 84 yards and was 4-for-5 for 65 yards during a passing drill Thursday.

Rookie running back Lynn Williams led the Rams during the scrimmage, gaining 91 yards on nine carries. He had a run of 51 yards.

Seahawks

The Seahawks have the first 300-pound player in their 11-year history — 302-pound Ron Mattes, an offensive tackle. Mattes, Seattle's 1985 seventh-round draft choice from Virginia, has a chance to make a major contribution this season, the Seahawks' coaches say.

"For a guy who weighs 300 pounds, he dances around pretty good," said Kent Stephenson, the Seahawks' offensive line coach.

St. Louis

There were five injuries during practice Thursday. Guard Joe Bostic suffered a slight hamstring pull; fourth-round draft pick Carl Carter, a cornerback, broke his nose; free agent running back Don Goodman strained a knee; ninth-round draft choice Kent Kafentzis, a safety, suffered a thigh contusion; and 10th-round draft pick Vai Sikahema, a fullback, sustained a mild concussion.

Earl eyes '10,000'

HAMMOND, La. (AP) — Earl Campbell says its not the money that's driving him to try another season in the NFL. It's the chance to break the 10,000 yard rushing mark, and maybe get rid of the bitter taste left in his mouth by his last season.

"I would have to say that is something that's very important to me," Campbell said Thursday when asked about the 10,000 yard goal. "Not only that, I think it would be important to the guys that would help me get it."

Campbell, a Heisman trophy winner who joined the National Football League in 1978, has 9,407 career yards. But more than 8,000 of those yards came during his glory days with the Houston Oilers.

Bum Phillips had coached Campbell during some of the best of those days. But after Phillips came to New Orleans and traded away a first round draft pick for Campbell in the fall of 1984, some said it was a mistake. And Campbell hasn't covered himself with glory, his fumbles often overshadowed his runs since coming to New Orleans.

Still even if he only matches his 1985 season — 643 yards on 158 carries — he can break the 10,000 mark.

The decision to stick it out for another year, he said, came at the end of last season, after his mentor, Phillips had resigned but well before new coach Jim Mora was on the scene.

"On my way back after the last game last year — and of course I wasn't happy with the way my season turned out ... I just made up my mind that I wanted to play some football some more and I wanted to do it in New Orleans because the people here have came out and supported the football team," Campbell said.

"So what I did was I just went and got myself in great shape — took no diet pills or nothing — just running, lifting weights and stuff like that. Now I feel better and I move a lot better."

TV

TBS pulled a 2.7 and ESPN a 4.0 for its college games last season.

Ratings reflect a percentage of homes watching a particular program at any one time.

Part of deregulation included the elimination of the NCAA's requirement for ABC and CBS to televise a certain number of Division I-AA, Division II and III games and the loosening of limitations on schools' national television appearances outside of bowl games.

THE COLLEGE Football Association emerged as the bargaining unit for the Division I powers, thus putting more major schools on telvision than ever before.

"All we got from ABC for 20 years was Notre Dame-USC, Michigan-Ohio State, Pitt-Penn State," said Michael Lardner, TBS Sports' coordinating producer for college football. "Now we've got the Clemsons and Brigham Youngs. Those games were always good, we just never saw them. And the fan is the obvious winner. He has such a wide selection."

The CFA has contracts with ABC and ESPN, the Pac 10, Big 10 and the Atlantic Coast Conference have deals with TBS and CBS and the Southeast Conference also has a package with TBS. Most independants are linked with one of the four, like Miami, Fla., with CBS, or one of many pay TV or syndication services.

When the television contracts come up for renegotiations in the next year, it is possible some of the local syndicators will be shoved out of the picture.

"Nobody can watch that many games," Tortorici said. "And if there are that many choices, a fan is not going to sit in the cold when he can watch it on TV.

"I'm not sure where the supply is going to get limited, but it will probably be with who pays the least amount of money for the rights — and that's the local syndicators," Tortorici continued. "The schools are going to have to protect their ticket base."

Howser finds plenty of support

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — Kansas City Royals Manager Dick Howser has a lot of people pulling for him as he continues to recover from brain surgery.

Dean Vogelaar, the Royals' vice president for public relations, said Thursday that Howser is getting about 500 cards and 10 to 15 telegrams every day.

According to Vogelaar, Howser is resting comfortably in a private room at St. Luke's Hospital as he continues his recuperation. "He's very, very alert. He's visiting his wife, Nancy, and a few immediate family members and friends. He's very positive and upbeat," said Vogelaar.

Kerry O'Connor, a hospital spokeswoman, said Thursday that Howser's condition remained fair.

During a three-hour operation on Tuesday, doctors found a cancerous tumor in the left frontal lobe of Howser's brain. They removed only part of it for fear of damaging healthy brain tissue, and are awaiting results of further pathological studies before making a decision on treatment.

Vogelaar said the team hoped to have further word from the doctors before the weekend.

JEANE DIXON'S your horoscope

© 1986, Los Angeles Times Syndicate

By Jeane Dixon
Saturday, July 26, 1986

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY: Success will come to those who do not get involved in fanciful financial schemes and who keep their feet firmly planted on the ground. Long-distance travel is possible. Concentration can be improved by a good night's sleep. October should be a favorable time for romance and accumulating fresh resources.

CELEBRITY BIRTHDATES: Popular "Hill Street Blues" actor Kiel Martin, Mick Jagger, producer-director Stanley Kubrick, comedienne Gracie Allen, producer Blake Edwards, skating star Dorothy Hamill, tennis' Vitas Gerulaitas, Irish playwright George Bernard Shaw.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Stay out of the public eye this weekend and enjoy doing things for yourself. Loved ones will support your weekend objectives. Love takes a wonderfully rewarding turn.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Your savings account is starting to grow. Do not spoil it by spending money that you do not really have. Work at getting your weight down.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Do not let a neighbor bore you with stories you have already heard. You will find innovative ways to put more pizzazz into a family weekend.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Make a purchase that is useful but will also be a pleasant surprise for a child. Good judgment leads you to the right family decision. The possibility of a journey excites you.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): A partnership situation comes under favorable influences this weekend. Do not lock horns with a friend who has been through a difficult week. Expand your social horizons.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Expect an offer you will not be able to refuse. Seek out bargains and look for time-saving appliances that will make cooking and leisure-time activities more appealing.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Put the pressures of the past week behind you. Let others tell you how they really feel today. Reading an exciting, new novel picks you up. Children deserve more of your attention.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Try to be less intense: you will increase your own pleasures as well as make communication easier. Do not live in the past; what is ahead is what is important.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Deal with a money problem early. Settle finances and tensions will disappear quickly. A romantic trip to the country will revive your spirits and pave the way to a successful relationship.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Defer to a good friend and he will protect your best interests. You could find the key to a daring financial coup in the quiet hours.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Try to untangle financial affairs. You need to know where you stand. You may have to reach an independent decision about the family budget and travel plans.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Take this day one step at a time. You find motivation in an unexpected discovery. You learn from new experiences. Emotions can be deceptive. Child care activities hold special appeal.

Opening lead: Nine of ♡

We are reluctant to throw away anything of value. In the home, that can lead to a lot of clutter; at the bridge table, it can be a false economy.

North had as little as the law will allow for his jump raise of partner's suit. South could not use Blackwood because of his two fast losers in diamonds, so he launched a cue-bidding sequence. When his partner showed a diamond control, South asked for aces and settled in a small slam when he learned that one was missing.

West led a trump. Declarer drew a second round and, when the suit split 2-2, he wasted no time in adopting the wrong line of play. He played five rounds of clubs, discarding two diamonds from hand, then led a spade from the table. We would like to report that he guessed correctly and put in the jack. In fact, he went up with the king and lost two spade tricks for down one.

The sad part of the whole affair is that declarer did not need to guess the spade position to fulfill his slam. Instead of sluffing two diamonds on the clubs, he should have forced himself to get rid of both of his spade honors. Now there is no way the contract can be defeated. All declarer has to do is concede a diamond trick, and then he can ruff his last diamond on the table. South traded in a sure thing for false economy.

Heart's lead guitarist Nancy Wilson now one critic's choice for marriage

Wilson

SEATTLE (AP) — Nancy Wilson, lead guitarist and singer for the rock group Heart, is the critic's choice — for marriage.

Miss Wilson is planning to tie the knot Sunday with rock critic Cameron Crowe at a private ceremony here, said manager Trudy Green. "We're keeping very, very, very private about this. It's their wedding. Nancy's very closest friends haven't been invited."

Heart made its debut in 1976 with the release of the album "Dreamboat Annie." The group went on to produce a string of platinum albums before its popularity waned in the early 1980s.

But the group rebounded in December when its "Heart" album soared to No. 1 on the popular charts. Four of the album's singles have reached the "Top 10," and the album garnered a Grammy nomination this year.

Crowe, author of the 1981 novel "Fast Times At Ridgemont High," which was later turned into a 1982 movie in which Nancy had a minor role, also has written articles for Rolling Stone, Playboy and the Los Angeles Times.

He recently completed a 36-page booklet accompanying "Biograph," Bob Dylan's 1985 five-record release.

CHICAGO (AP) — Gov. James R. Thompson's wife, Jayne, was in good condition after undergoing a hysterectomy, and is expected to remain hospitalized up to a week, hospital officials said.

Thursday's operation at Northwestern Memorial Hospital was prompted by the discovery of fibrous tumors and a possible cyst on her reproductive organs. Pat Miller, a hospital spokeswoman, said no further details were being released at the family's request.

Gregory

NEW YORK (AP) — Prima ballerina Cynthia Gregory, who celebrated 20 years with American Ballet Theater at a gala in her honor here last summer, has signed to become a permanent guest artist with the Cleveland Ballet.

Miss Gregory has signed a two-year agreement and will dance on opening night in "Gaite Parisienne" this fall, according to press representative Susan Schulman. She will perform with the Cleveland Ballet in each season and in two of the three seasons of its partner city company, San Jose Cleveland Ballet, for a total of 20 performances.

"Cynthia is one of the greatest ballerinas the 20th century has produced," said artistic director Dennis Nahat.

SANTA FE, N.M. (AP) — The possibility has arisen that the state may become a party to the legal dispute surrounding the last will of famed painter Georgia O'Keeffe.

Members of the Museum of New Mexico board of regents met in executive session Thursday in Santa Fe, apparently to discuss their possible involvement in the legal process concerning probate of Miss O'Keeffe's will.

The board met in private with Santa Fe attorney Daniel H. Friedman, who has been designated by Attorney General Paul Bardacke as an assistant attorney general. Bardacke said Friedman "will be assisting us in representing the board of regents."

Bardacke said Thursday the discussions involved litigation brought by June O'Keeffe Sebring, a niece of Miss O'Keeffe, who is challenging the 1979 will and two later codicils that have been filed for probate in district court in Santa Fe. Miss O'Keeffe died in Santa Fe March 6 at the age of 98.

Attorneys for Mrs. Sebring are seeking information about an agreement reached in mid-April between state officials and the executor of Miss O'Keeffe's estate by which the state will receive O'Keeffe paintings.

"The issue involves various board decisions and legal matters that may eventually lead to the state becoming a party to the litigation," Bardacke said. "I have given them legal advice on this issue but I can't discuss it."

Last week a subpoena was issued by the district court directing Anita Horton, secretary of the museum board of regents, to give a deposition on July 31 to attorneys for Mrs. Sebring. The deposition would concern information provided to the board during negotiations which culminated in an agreement reached on April 21 among Gov. Toney Anaya, Bardacke, the museum regents, the University of New Mexico regents and John Bruce "Juan" Hamilton, the executor of Miss O'Keeffe's estate.

The agreement provides for the Museum of New Mexico and the University of New Mexico to receive paintings valued at $1.5 million from Miss O'Keeffe's estate. The state agrees in exchange for the paintings that it will waive any rights it might have to the estate's assets based on various amendments to the will.

Mrs. Sebring, who is represented by the Santa Fe law firm of Jones, Gallegos, Snead & Wertheim, has challenged the 1979 will and two codicils (amendments) dated Nov. 2, 1983, and Aug. 8, 1984. She claims that Hamilton, a companion and protege of Miss O'Keeffe during the last years of her life, exerted undue influence over Miss O'Keeffe when the will and codicils were executed.

In the 1979 will she named Hamilton as executor of her estate and gave him the discretion and duty to distribute one or more of her works of art to UNM and the New Mexico Fine Arts Museum. The 1984 codicil revoked that provision of the will.

NEW YORK (AP) — A "wrap party" turned into a champagne celebration when workers at CBS' "West 57th" news magazine were told their precarious program had been given new life as a midseason replacement series.

The struggling series, given last rites by many within CBS entertainment division last spring, displayed its remarkable resiliency Thursday with the renewal announcement by CBS Broadcast Group President Gene Jankowski.

"West 57th" has clearly earned its place," Jankowski said. "It is editorially sound, has a vibrant style all its own and has built audience steadily in its just-completed 13-week run.

The run ended, as scheduled, with Wednesday night's broadcast. But the program will return during the 1986-87 season, when and where depending on CBS replacement needs, the network said. Sources at CBS News, who asked not to be identified, said the program had received a 26-week commitment, not the short-order 13 and six of its past incarnations.

"It's gratifying to be a real TV show," said senior producer Tom Yellin.

The enlarged commitment included assurances that the show would get a fifth correspondent and additional producers, news sources said.

CBS said Jane Wallace, John Ferrugia, Meredith Vieira and Bob Sirott will return as correspondents. CBS News had been considering Ms. Wallace as co-anchor of its revamped "CBS Morning News," but that won't happen, news sources said.

Good hunting this fall

AUSTIN — Texas Parks and Wildlife Department experts predict "outstanding" hunting for most major species this fall, officials said Wednesday.

"The upcoming seasons are somewhat unusual because prospects are good in so many areas," said Bobby Alexander, acting director of the TPWD's wildlife division. "We often see a year when the deer or quail situation looks bood, for instance, but its not often that the overall picture is this bright."

Timely rains over much of the state during the spring reproductive season is the main reason native animals and birds have posted gains, officials said.

Quail program leader Don Wilson said bobwhite quail may have benefitted most from the weather, as rains during May over much of the the state allowed a good hatch of birds in areas that saw drastic reductions in populations two years ago. He said this year's production probably will not mean a bumper year, but should allow populations to return to the long-term average.

White-tailed deer should be in excellent shape this fall, according to Horace Gore, program leader. "I think the spring rains came early enough to help antler development, and populations remain high in most of Texas," Gore said.

Hunters may have good success if the weather remains fairly dry through late summer and early fall, causing the deer to move more during daylight hours, he said.

Gore said Texas had the most whitetails of any state, almost 4 million. Last year's harvest of approximately 383,000 deer was by far the largest in the nation. Gore said he hope hunters would take advantage of high populations by taking more antlerless deer.

Wild turkey populations are reported strong because of an aoutstanading production year in 1985, but the success of this year's hatch has yet to be determined.

'Birders' not like most folks think

EMPORIA, Kan. (AP) — It's called birding.

Birders are probably as diverse as the birds they covet. Bird watchers have been stereotyped as rather eccentric people who wear funny clothes and look at the sky most of the time, but birder Marvin Schwilling said the stereotype is false.

"Birders span the whole gamut of society," he said. "A lot of professional people watch birds."

And some people make a profession out of birding.

"There are drifters ... they live on a shoestring and travel the country to see birds," he said.

The image of the spinster who spends her days bird watching is not totally wrong, he said. The state ornithological organization has some members "who have never married," Schwilling said. "Their whole life is tied to bird watching."

Bird watchers keep what is called a life list. The life list catalogs how many and what kinds of birds the birder has seen. John Parrish, who teaches ornithology — or the study of birds — at Emporia State University, said there are about 600 species of birds in the United States.

"My life list is not very long — about 400," he said.

Schwilling, who said that he has been interested in birds all his life, has a life list of more than 700 birds, including some he has spotted in other countries.

Fanatics will keep life lists for individual states, Parrish said, adding that Kansas is a good state for bird watching because it has birds from the eastern leafy forests as well as from the western mountains. Trees planted in Kansas that are not native to the state have attracted birds that were not native.

Pine trees have attracted many varieties of birds over the years, he said.

"They introduced pine trees in the cemeteries," Parrish said. "Some of the oldest pines in the state are in cemeteries. Most birders in the state can tell you where the better cemeteries are."

Bird watchers look to specific types of areas to seek out various types of birds.

For warblers and other colorful birds, wooded areas near rivers are good. Bluejays and cardinals can be found in yards, and bluebirds can be found in fields. Lakes and marshes are the best places to find shore birds.

Dollar rises

LONDON (AP) — The U.S. dollar rose against all major currencies except the Canadian dollar in light European trading early today. Gold bullion rose 50 cents in Europe to $349.

Currency traders said the market, already thin at the height of the European vacation season, was further constricted by the usual pre-weekend slowdown in activity.

They said the dollar was being underpinnned by this week's better-than-expected U.S. economic statistics and U.S. Federal Reserve Chairman Paul A. Volcker's comment that changes in exchange rates should not be overestimated as a way to remedy imbalances in the world economy.

Midmorning dollar rates compared with levels in Europe late Thursday:

— 2.1418 West German marks, up from 2.1362.

— 1.7330 Swiss francs, up from 1.7235.

— 6.9445 French francs, up from 6.8925.

— 2.4125 Dutch guilders, up from 2.4065.

— 1,470.50 Italian lire, up from 1,464.

— 1.3870 Canadian dollars, down from 1.38875.

The British pound fell to $1.48875 from $1.4910.

In Tokyo, the dollar edged up to 157.10 Japanese yen from 156.55 yen.

London's five biggest bullion houses fixed a recommended gold price of $349 a troy ounce, up from $348.50 late Thursday. A London dealer attributed the rise to "little pockets of professional buying."

In Zurich, gold also rose 50 cents to a bid of $349.

Earlier, in Hong Kong, gold rose 51 cents to close at a bid of $348.27.

Silver bullion was quoted in London at a bid of $5.02 an ounce, down 3 cents from late Thursday.

Major oil companies report sharply lower income

By VIVIAN MARINO
AP Business Writer

Three of the nation's largest oil companies — Texaco Inc., Shell Oil Co. and Phillips Petroleum Co. — on Thursday reported sharply lower second-quarter earnings, while Standard Oil Co. said it suffered a huge loss.

Pennzoil Corp., meanwhile, said its profit was down more than 50 percent from a year ago.

All five blamed the poor quarterly performance on slumping worldwide oil prices.

Texaco, the nation's third-largest oil company, said it netted $185 million, or 77 cents per share, on revenue of $7.9 billion. In the second quarter of 1985, it earned $305 million, or $1.28 a share, on $11.7 billion in revenue.

Shell, ranked seventh, said second-quarter net earnings were $219 million on revenue of $4.09 billion, compared to $317 million on revenue of $5.07 billion in the comparable period last year. The Houston-based company is wholly owned by the Royal Dutch-Shell Group of Companies, which is based in both London and the Hague, the Netherlands.

No. 8 Phillips said its second-quarter net income was $8 million, or 1 cent a share, compared with restated net income of $117 million, or 52 cents a share. Revenue totaled $2.34 billion, down from $3.98 billion in 1985.

The Bartlesville, Okla.-based company said it also incurred a $54 million after-tax charge for a special employee-reduction program.

No. 12 Standard Oil, based in Cleveland, said it lost $681 million, after a special charge of $804 million, on revenue of $2.6 billion. That compared with second-quarter 1985 earnings of $390 million, or $1.66 a share, on $3.49 billion in revenue.

Pennzoil, based in Houston, said it netted $25.2 million, or 51 cents a share, in the second quarter, down 52 percent from $52.6 million, or $1.12 per share, in 1985. Second-quarter sales totaled $480 million, compared to $565 million last year.

Texaco Chairman John K. McKinley said, "extremely low crude oil prices in the United States and abroad have adversely affected" quarterly results.

"The petroleum industry continues to be confronted by a large surplus supply in relation to demand," he said. "As long as the excess crude oil supply continues, the outlook for product prices will remain uncertain and under downward pressure."

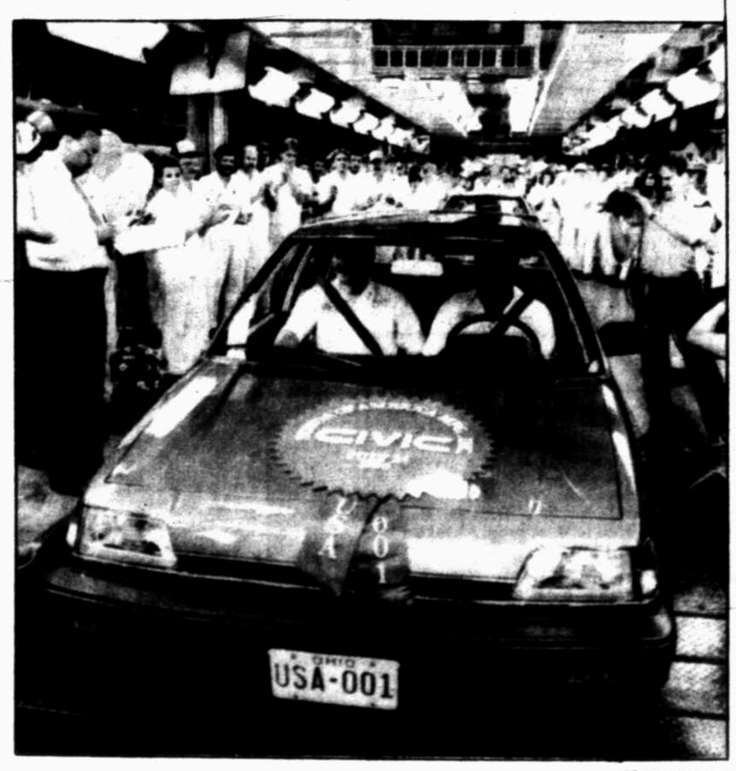

His remarks were echoed in reports by top executives of Shell, Phillips Petroleum, Standard Oil and Pennzoil, all of whom blamed the volatile oil market on declining earnings for all of this year. The price of crude oil, which was as high as $32 a barrel last fall, currently is hovering between $10 and $12 a barrel, amid increased production.

For the first six months of 1986, White Plains, N.Y.-based Texaco earned $513 million, or $2.14 per share, compared to $625 million, or $2.56, in 1985. Texaco's six-month performance in 1986 included a first quarter after-tax charge of $20 million for an accounting adjustment.

Shell said it earned $495 million in the first half of the year, down from $633 million in 1985. Revenues during the period totaled $8.83 billion, versus $9.84 billion.

For the six months ended June 30, Phillips had net income of $104 million, or 39 cents a share, on total revenues of $5.45 billion. In the same period in 1985, restated net income was $230 million, or 68 cents a share, on total revenues of $7.94 billion.

For the first half of 1986, Standard Oil said it incurred a net loss of $428 million, compared with earnings of $733 million, or $3.12 a share, in the first six months of 1985.

Pepsi buys Kentucky Fried Chicken

NEW YORK (AP) — The planned combination of Pepsico Inc. — which operates Pizza Hut and Taco Bell restaurants — with Kentucky Fried Chicken Corp. would create the world's largest restaurant group with 14,000 outlets.

But its annual sales of almost $7 billion still would fall way behind those of McDonald's Corp., which totaled $11.01 billion last year.

Industry analysts said they were not surprised at Pepsico's announcement Thursday that it reached an agreement in principle to acquire Kentucky Fried Chicken from RJR Nabisco Inc. for about $850 million.

The analysts also said they believed such a merger would not raise significant antitrust objections from the government.

"This doesn't squeeze out the other chicken palaces of America," said Stanley Fishman, an analyst with the investment firm Fahnestock & Co. "There are so many chicken restaurants in America."

Kentucky Fried Chicken is the world's second largest restaurant chain with 6,500 outlets, but its $3.5 billion in sales rank third behind Burger King Corp.

The other major players in the chicken segment are Church's, Popeye's and Bojangles, as well as many regional chicken restaurants. The number of those restaurants and their sales were not immediately available.

Pepsico operates 7,500 Pizza Hut and Taco Bell restaurants that have sales of about $3.3 billion. The company is also the nation's No. 2 soft drink maker, behind Coca-Cola Co., and makes Frito-Lay snack foods.

Earlier this month, Pepsico announced that it had acquired the international operations of Seven-Up Co. from Philip Morris Cos. for $246 million in cash. That announcement came after the Federal Trade Commission objected on antitrust grounds to Pepsico's earlier deal to acquire Seven-Up's domestic and international divisions.

RJR Nabisco's stock rose $3.12½ to close at $52.50 in composite trading Thursday on the New York Stock Exchange. Pepsico's stock rose $1.12½ to close at $33.

The Kentucky Fried Chicken deal is subject to the negotiation of a definitive agreement, review by government agencies and final approval by the boards of directors of both companies, Pepsico said.

Jim Griffith, a spokesman at Pepsico's Purchase, N.Y., headquarters said the company expected to complete the purchase in a couple of months.

About 1,000 of the Kentucky Fried Chicken restaurants now offer Pepsi-Cola beverages and the rest offer Coca-Cola and other brands.

"We would hope to convert them and will work hard to do so," Griffith said. "There's obviously contractual considerations you have to keep in mind. That was frankly not a consideration in our purchase."

Mexico ties loan needs to oil prices

New York Times News Service

NEW YORK — Mexico has told creditor banks that it expects oil markets to remain badly depressed through 1987, with the price of its oil averaging $9 a barrel in the current quarter and output in the period dropping to 1.2 million barrels a day, well below capacity.

Mexico has also informed the banks that it expects to ask them to make hundreds of millions of dollars in new loans as part of the country's new $12 billion lending package. The additional lending would mean that such institutions as Citibank, the Bank of America, the Manufacturers Hanover Trust Co. and the Chase Manhattan Bank, among others, would add to their existing multibillion-dollar loan exposure in Mexico.

Of Mexico's $97 billion in foreign debt, about $25 billion is held by U.S. banks — three-fourths of it by money-center institutions and the rest by regional banks. Mexico's top five lenders in this country are Citibank, Bank of America, Manufacturers, Chase and Chemical Bank.

Although bankers have generally been encouraged by the progress in recent days on the Mexican debt, they still refused Thursday to make any firm lending commitments. They said they wanted time to analyze Mexico's economic projections, and several aspects of a bank lending package must be negotiated.

Bankers said they had received a personal plea from Jacques de Larosiere, the managing director of the International Monetary Fund, in which he came extremely close to saying that the IMF would not disburse its money to Mexico without assurance that the banks were cooperating as well. The 18-month aid package calls for $1.6 billion from the IMF, $6 billion from commercial banks worldwide and $4.4 billion from other official sources.

"He indicated that his program, to be effective, had to have the support of the banks," said one top Mexican lender who attended a private dinner with Larosiere on Wednesday in New York. "He didn't threaten us, but he made clear that the package does not work without us."

At the same dinner, top Mexican officials led by Gustavo Petricioli, the finance minister, and Angel Gurria, the director of public credit, had their first opportunity since signing the $1.6 billion IMF funding accord Tuesday to describe what they expect from banks in terms of new loans.

Essentially, according to people who attended, the Mexicans propose that the banks disburse $2.5 billion beyond their $6 billion should oil remain below $9 for an extended period. If oil prices hovered between $9 and $14, the Mexicans would be required to make certain changes inside their economy. Oil prices above $14 would lead to accelerated repayment of principal on certain Mexican loans.

Polaroid reaches agreement with Fuji

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. (AP) — Polaroid Corp., whose lawsuit pushed Eastman Kodak Co. out of the instant photography market, won't sue Fuji Film Co. to stop it from selling instant film, in return for some of the Japanese firm's secrets.

The agreement announced Thursday followed a Japanese Patent Office ruling that Fuji infringed on Polaroid's Japanese patent for integral instant film.

Polaroid has "given up the potential of winning a few million dollars on a suit for a few million dollars worth of technology," said Charles Ryan, an analyst with Merrill Lynch & Co.

Under the agreement with Fuji Photo Film Co. Ltd., Polaroid pledged not to sue Fuji for patent infringement.

In return, Fuji agreed not to appeal the patent office decision; will give Cambridge-based Polaroid some Fuji technology; and sell Polaroid commercial products on favorable terms and conditions, Polaroid said.

Fuji sells Polaroid videotapes and certain photo transparencies for marketing in the United States. Analysts said the companies' good business relationship may partly explain why Polaroid did not sue.

"It's less emotionally charged and there are smaller stakes in any case," said William Reylea of Eberstadt Fleming Inc.

Fuji, which sells primarily in the Far East, was not in direct competition with Polaroid, which never used the specific patent in question to manufacture and sell instant film in Japan, analysts said.

The Fuji technology Polaroid is interested in acquiring includes electronic imaging and magnetic recording with videotapes and floppy disc systems, said Eugene Glazer of Dean Witter Reynolds Inc.

Polaroid had filed for the Japanese patent, similar to two U.S. patents, in May 1969 but had manufactured film under other patents, said Polaroid spokesman Harold Johnson.

Last April, a federal appeals court in Washington, D.C., upheld a lower court ruling that Kodak violated Polaroid instant photography patents. The ruling had forced Rochester, N.Y.-based Kodak from the instant photography business in January at an estimated $494 million cost.

Kodak has appealed that ruling to the U.S. Supreme Court, company spokesman Hank Kaska said.

Congress hears testimony regarding insider trading

WASHINGTON (AP) — The heads of three major stock exchanges told Congress on Wednesday that tough surveillance systems have been put in operation to detect insider trading and stock manipulation.

New York Stock Exchange chairman John J. Phelan Jr. also told a House panel that he does not favor doing away with prohibitions against insider trading because that would only condone freedom to cheat.

He said insider trading can hurt all market participants and the Big Board executives consider it imperative to continue their pursuit of state-of-the-art surveillance equipment to aid in detecting abuses in trades.

Several surveillance computer systems used by the New York and American stock exchanges as well as the National Associaton of Securities Dealers Inc. (NASDAQ) were demonstrated at the hearing on insider trading.

Stock Watch, which monitors trading on the NYSE as it happens, gives a warning of unusual trading activity. In general, the American Stock Exchange and NASDAQ use similar surveillance techniques. Analysts not only track unusual price movements but also review news announcements, corporate releases and earnings reports sent over news wire services.

Arthur Levitt Jr., American Stock Exchange president, said the internationalization of the securities markets presents a "growing and a difficult challenge" in trying to control insider trading.

LTV allowed to pay some suppliers

NEW YORK (AP) — The LTV Corp., whose bankruptcy filing froze its assets, was given court permission to pay some of its suppliers after government lawyers argued that crucial defense programs could otherwise be disrupted.

Bankruptcy Judge Burton R. Lifland ruled Thursday that LTV could pay $128.5 million to suppliers on the so-called "Star Wars" defense project, the B-1 bomber and other contracts.

It was the first major court action since LTV filed for protection under Chapter 11 of the federal bankruptcy law on July 17.

The payments amount to a tiny fraction of the more than $6 billion LTV listed as debts.

LTV has been working on anti-satellite weapons and other elements of the Reagan administration's strategic defense initiative, popularly known as "Star Wars."

Under federal rules LTV cannot receive payment in the future for military or other government work unless it can certify that it has paid all its prior debts to subcontractors, so it was forced to seek Lifland's permission to make the payments.

The nation's second-largest steel producer, LTV said it was financially crippled by a long-term downturn in that industry as well as by the sharp falloff in energy exploration due to falling oil prices.

But the company's aerospace business, which accounted for more than $2 billion of the corporation's $8 billion in sales last year, has remained profitable and is likely to be the core of a reorganized LTV when bankruptcy proceedings end, company lawyer Herbert Edelman told Lifland.

There was no opposition to the company's request. Lifland said he intended to sign a formal order approving the payments as soon as lawyers in the case finished drafting it.

The payments affect about 400 government contracts held by two LTV subsidiaries, Edelman said. All are profitable except for an agreement to produce the "Hummer," the vehicle slated by the Pentagon to replace its venerable jeep. And even the Hummer might become profitable if enough foreign governments buy it, Edelman said.

He added that LTV officials still have not decided whether to abide in the future by the terms of hundreds, or perhaps thousands, of agreements with subcontractors on government projects. It could otherwise choose to reject those contracts.

Lone Star has second quarter loss

DALLAS (AP) — Lone Star Technologies Inc., formerly Lone Star Steel Co., reported a second quarter net loss of $20.7 million or $1.04 per share for the second quarter, company officials said.

Second quarter results announced Wednesday compare with a net loss of $9.7 million or 49 cents per share for the same quarter last year.

Officials said the second-quarter loss was due primarily to a $6.6 million reduction in tax benefits as well as the weakening U.S. oil industry.

Lone Star, a tubular goods manufacturer and supplier to the oil and gas industry customers, reported sales declined to $32.5 million in the second quarter compared with $80 million for the same period last year.

The company reported a second-quarter operating loss of $22.7 million, compared to an operating loss of $19 million for the same quarter in 1985.

Pogo completes three exploratory wells

Gipson said that three onshore exploratory wells were completed during the quarter just ended. The Pogo Shirk No. 5, a step-out wildcat in the King Mountain field, Upton County, Texas, potentialed for 341 barrels of crude oil and 495 Mcf of natural gas per day from the Bend Limestone. Pogo's working interest is 66.67 percent in the area in which additional drilling may occur next year, Gipson said.

Earlier during the quarter, Gipson said the No. 1 Morley in Loving County, was completed for 254 barrels of oil and 270 Mcf of natural gas daily. Pogo owns a 100 percent working interest in the well and the surrounding 2,656 gross leasehold acres.

Last month, the No. 1 Edith Winn Jefferson Davis Parish, Louisiana, flowed natural gas at a rate of 5.055 MMcfd. The calculated absolute open flow potential on the well was 45 MMcfgd. Pogo's working interest is 32.75 percent in the well, Gipson said.

Union Texas reports Pakistan gas find

HOUSTON (SWN) —Union Texas Petroleum announced a natural gas discovery in the Badin area of Southeast Pakistan. Union Texas is operator of a group which includes Occidental Petroleum Corp. and Oil and Gas Development Corp., a Pakistani government-owned company.

Located approximately 100 miles southeast of Karachi, the Jabo No. 1 well was tested at a rate of 16.4 million cubic feet of gas and 257 barrels of condensate daily on a 56/64-inch choke with 1,650 pounds-per-square-inch flowing tubing pressure from a zone in the Lower Goru formation. Four intervals between 6,535 feet and 6,610 feet were perforated.

The new find brings the Union Texas group's total discoveries in the Badin concession to 14 fields since 1981. Union Texas has a 30 percent interest in the Pakistani finds. The remaining interest is held by Oil and Gas Development Corporation with 40 percent and Occidental Petroleum Corporation with 30 percent.

Conoco, Texas International find oil in Egypt

OKLAHOMA CITY (SWN) — Affiliates of Texas International Co. and Conoco have discovered two additional oil fields in Egypt's western desert. Conoco is a subsidiary of the Du Pont Co.

The new fields, named Hayat and Safir, are near the Khalda and Salam fields, which are being developed in a previously announced $150 million project. Production from this project is expected later this year.

Tests from three intervals of the Hayat discovery well flowed at a maximum cumulative rate of more than 5,000 barrels of oil per day through choke sizes ranging from 5/8-inch to 24/64- inch. The API gravity of the oil ranged from 36 to 43.3 degrees. The Hayat well is about six miles southwest of the Salam field.

A test from the Safir discovery well flowed more than 2,000 barrels per day of 43-degree API gravity oil through a 5/8-inch choke. Safir is about 10 miles southwest of the Salam field.

Mobil tests Norwegian well for 2.3 MMcfd

NEW YORK (UPI) — Mobil Oil Corp. announced a discovery in the Norwegian sector of the North Sea that tested oil at a maximum rate of 8,165 barrels a day and natural gas at 2.3 million cubic feet a day.

Mobil Exploration Norway Inc., a Mobil affiliate, has an 8 percent interest in the well in the Norwegian Oseberg Block 30-6.

Two additional tests of the well flowed oil at rates of 5,560 barrels and 3,111 barrels a day.

The 30-6-19 well, drilled to a total depth of 10,830 feet, was temporarily plugged and abandoned on June 12 pending extended production tests.

Snyder to purchase oil properties from Aetna

FORT WORTH (SWN) — Snyder Oil Partners ("SOI") announced that it has entered into an agreement to purchase certain oil and gas interests held by AE Investments, Inc., an affiliate of Aetna Life and Casualty Co., for a total consideration of approximately $10.5 million. Payment will be made entirely in newly issued units of SOI. The purchase agreement includes provision for a working capital adjustment and the issuance of up to an additional 70,000 units at June 30, 1987 in certain circumstances. Closing of the transaction, which is expected within 30 days, is subject to final due diligence by SOI, mutually satisfactory documentation and certain other conditions.

The interests to be purchased include participations in drilling programs formed by Huffco Petroleum Corporation, Stone Petroleum Corporation and Sandefer Oil & Gas, Inc. The properties include interests in 121 producing wells located primarily in Texas, Louisiana and Oklahoma and in the waters of the Gulf of Mexico offshore Louisiana. Preliminary estimates indicate that the interests had proved reserves at June 30, 1986 aggregating 11.4 Bcf of natural gas and 480,000 barrels of oil.

Exxon earnings up 49 percent

NEW YORK — Exxon Corp., the world's largest oil company, reported its second-quarter earnings rose 49 percent above year-earlier levels.

Exxon earned $1.11 billion, or $1.55 a share, in the April-June quarter, up from $745 million, or $.99 a share, in the same quarter last year.

The 1985 quarter included a provision of $545 million, or $.71 a share, to cover the court ruling against Exxon for overpricing crude from the Hawkins field in Texas.

Second-quarter revenues slipped 21 percent to $17.98 billion from $22.97 billion in the year-earlier period.

Analysts said Exxon's second-quarter earnings reflected a modest rise in European and U.S. demand for petroleum products in face of the crude oil price collapse.

"Petroleum product and chemicals prices have fallen less rapidly than crude costs," said Exxon chairman C. C. Garvin Jr. "This fact, combined with the weakening of the dollar, has had a significant positive impact on margins in refining, marketing and chemicals."

Garvin said the improved profit margins "cushioned the negative earnings impact of lower crude oil prices."

Oil rebounds despite price-war warning

United Press International

Oil prices rebounded somewhat on world markets despite a statement by OPEC President Rilwanu Lukman that the 13-nation cartel will pursue its pricing war against outside oil producers.

Analysts said Thursday's price bounce was largely technical as traders tried to position themselves before OPEC's 13 oil ministers meet in Geneva July 28 in their fourth attempt this year to curb production an halt the price collapse.

"We're getting little technical moves here and there in the oil market, but the fundamental outlook is still very bleak," said Sanford Margoshes, analyst at Shearson Lehman Brothers Inc. in New York.

Lukman, who is also the Nigeria's oil minister, told the Kuwaiti newspaper al-Watan: "I do not know whether a price war is the best policy we can adopt, but we have already started on this road and we shall continue on it until the market stabilizes."

On the European spot market, where oil is sold to the highest bidder, Britain's Brent crude rose by 40 cents to $8.90 a barrel. The benchmark North Sea crude plunged to an all-time low of $8.50 a barrel Wednesday.

Britain, the key independent producer, is the prime target of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries' high-stakes campaign to flood the already glutted market in a bid to recapture what the cartel considers its "fair share" from non-OPEC members.

On the New York Mercantile Exchange, West Texas intermediate — the principal U.S. crude for September delivery — inched up 20 cents to $11.05 a barrel barrel. The crude dropped 41 cents a barrel Wednesday.

But unleaded gasoline for immediate delivery on the Merc edged down 0.60 cent to 32.20 cents a gallon, leaded gasoline eased 0.1 cent to 33.79 cents, and home-heating oil slipped 0.19 cent to 32.53 cents.

West Texas intermediate slipped further on the U.S. Gulf Coast spot market Thursday, falling 40 cents to $11.10 a barrel Thursday. Mobil Corp., the second largest U.S. oil company, lowered the price it will pay for West Texas intermediate by 50 cents to $11.75 a barrel.

"We have two options," the OPEC president told the Kuwaiti newspaper. "Namely, to continue reducing our production each time the others increase theirs or pursue a policy aimed at retaking our share of the market."

Oil prices have fallen by about 60 percent from an average $30 a barrel in December, when OPEC abandoned production and price controls in a calculated gamble to force outsiders to rein in output.

OPEC production has surged to a 4 ½-year high of around 19.5 million barrels a day this month. Saudi Arabia, the cartel's largest producer, has turned up its taps to maximize pressure on fellow OPEC members to adopt new national output quotas and to win production cutbacks from outsiders.

Oil minister defends OPEC oil price war

KUWAIT (AP) — OPEC has no alternative but an oil-price war until rival producers agree to reduce output, the United Arab Emirates petroleum minister said in an inverview published today.

Mana Saeed Oteiba also was quoted as saying by the Kuwaiti newspaper Al-Watan that the 13-nation Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries must grant the United Arab Emirates a higher production quota when the cartel convenes an emergency meeting in Geneva next week. The Persian Gulf nation's current quota is 950,000 barrels a day.

"OPEC has no choice but to continue the current policy of capturing a fair share of the market until non-OPEC producers discern the importance of cooperating with OPEC," Oteiba was quoted as saying.

He also was quoted as exhorting other OPEC members "not to behave like children, who become desperate after the first step. We have to continue this approach until we realize what we seek."

Oteiba heads the OPEC market monitoring committee which is scheduled to meet in advance of the full meeting on Monday.

The world's oil industry is focusing on the OPEC meeting because of its potential significance in reversing the slide in prices, which have fallen from $30 a barrel late last year to the $10-$12 range. The decline has benefited consumers but caused major problems in countries that rely on oil exports to sustain their economies.

Oteiba was quoted as saying the OPEC ministers will attempt to devise a new formula for production, pricing and cooperating between producers and consumers.

"But these issues cannot be solved in a single meeting or during a week," he was quoted as saying.

Kuwait's oil minister, Sheik Ali Khalifa Al-Sabah, who left for Geneva on Thursday, also expressed the view that the Geneva meeting would not be conclusive.

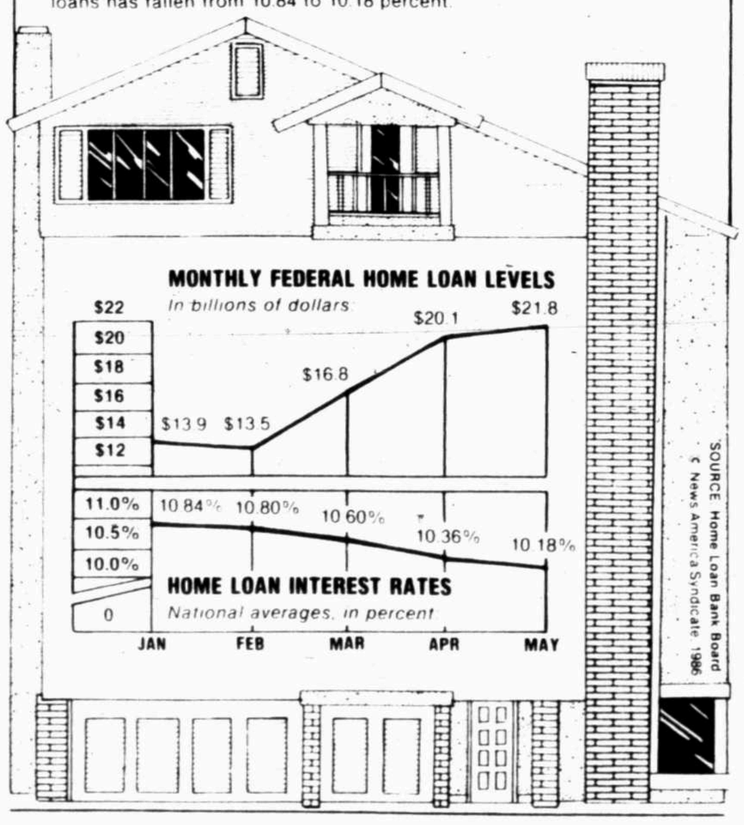

With producers failing to cooperate in curbing output, a free-for-all production policy has developed among all OPEC members, including the largest oil exporter Saudi Arabia.

OPEC's combined production ceiling is now about 20 million barrels per day instead of the official 16 million ceiling, and prices have tumbled to about a third of the abandoned benchmark price of $28 per barrel.

At a meeting last month in Brioni, Yugoslavia, OPEC ministers informally devised a new production ceiling of 17.6 million barrels per day, aiming to push prices up to $17-$19 a barrel, but they have failed to abide by it.

Federal home loans up

Federally insured savings and loan companies processed home loans valued at $21.8 billion for the month of May, up $7.9 billion from January. Lower interest rates may be one reason for increased home buying. Since the beginning of 1986, the average interest rate on home loans has fallen from 10.84 to 10.18 percent.

Panhandle Eastern blames pipeline for losses

HOUSTON (AP) — Panhandle Eastern Corp. officials Thursday blamed a $460 million settlement over an Algerian natural gas dispute for the largest loss in the 56-year-old firm's history, a company spokesman said.

The diversified energy firm lost $516 million or $10.93 per share in the second quarter, a $532.6 million decline from the $16.6 million net income (38 cents per share)in the same period last year, according to a company statement.

"It's a one-time event, thank goodness," spokesman S.A. Wallace said. "It's never to be repeated, we hope. Our cash flow remains strong."

No workers will be laid off as the company will use cash and loans to pay for the settlement, he added.

His firm also reported Thursday that its board of directors is considering setting up Anadarko Petroleum Corp., a wholly owned subsidiary, as an independent firm with stocks traded over the New York Stock Exchange.

The large deficit caused the company to post a loss of $477.7 million or $10.37 a share for the first half of this year as compared with net income of $67.4 million or $1.54 in 1985's first half, another spokesman, J.M. Price, said.

He blamed the steep deficit on a settlement of $335 million in cash and $125 million in stock to two U.S. companies and an Algerian firm after they alleged that Panhandle Eastern breached agreements for purchase and transportation of the Algerian liquefied natural gas.

The settlement is pending Algerian approval for its wholly owned Sonatrach oil and gas company, Price said. General Dynamics Corp. and Moore McCormack Resources Inc. are also involved.

ICC rejects Santa Fe Southern Pacific merger

New York Times News Service

WASHINGTON — The Interstate Commerce Commission, breaking with a 20-year history of approving major railroad mergers, on Thursday rejected by a vote of 4-to-1 the proposed merger of the Southern Pacific Railroad into the Santa Fe Railway.

The commissioners, all appointees of President Reagan and ardent supporters of his posture that the government should not intefere with the affairs of business, held in their surprise vote that the railroad combination could reduce competition in some parts of the West and Southwest. Because of this, they found, the adverse effects of the merger outweighed its benefits to the public.

The Santa Fe Southern Pacific Corp., which runs the Santa Fe directly and the Southern Pacific through a separate trust, now has two years to divest itself of the Southern Pacific Railroad or propose an alternative plan for responding to Thursday's order.

After the written opinion is released, expected by this fall, Santa Fe could ask the commission to reconsider the decision. If the commission refused, or refused to reverse itself, Santa Fe could take its case to a federal appeals court.

"It's unfortunate," the panel's chairman, Heather J. Gradison, said of the majority vote. "We now watch the Southern Pacific go bankrupt," she added, referring to arguments that the Santa Fe made during earlier hearings that bankruptcy was a possibility for the Southern Pacific if the merger was not approved.

The vote caught analysts off guard and spurred a scramble to uncover some previously unnoticed political explanation. Although there has been rivalry among some members, those questioned ruled out a personality vote in this case.

The decision casts new uncertainty over the extent to which the Reagan administration's broad philosophy of letting business alone will be applied by regulatory agencies. Just last month, the Federal Trade Commission voted to oppose two soft drink mergers, and the Justice Department and the Department of Transportation have had differences over pending airline mergers.

The decisive vote came less than 15 minutes after the panel gathered in a crowded ICC hearing room to begin considering more than 100 separate items related to the proposed merger.

Gradison was the only panel member to vote in favor of the proposed merger, which had been recommended for approval by the commission's staff. The staff had asserted that the public would realize savings of about $200 million a year in shipping and related costs, while the combined railroad companies would realize a one-time cost savings of half a billion dollars by being able to reduce spending on equipment and facilities.

BUSINESS BRIEFS

Freeport to bail out troubled Petro-Lewis

DENVER (UPI) — Freeport-McMoRan, Inc., (FMI) a New Orleans conglomerate, has agreed to buy Petro-Lewis, once the nation's No. 1 seller of publicly offered oil and gas income funds, and Houston-based American Royalty Trust in a deal valued at $750 million.

FMI was formed by the merger in 1981 of Freeport Minerals Inc., a New York concern that mined metals and agricultural minerals, and McMoRan Exploration Co., a Louisianca oil and gas company.

The announcement that a letter of intent had been signed by the companies came as the financially strapped Denver company faced a Thursday deadline — already extended seven times — to exchange nine issues of new debt securities. If the exchange offers failed, Petro-Lewis said it might file for reorganization or liquidation under bankruptcy laws.

American Royalty, created in December 1984 from oil and gas properties held by Petro-Lewis limited partnerships, will be acquired by FMI and another investor to be designated by FMI, and a new entity owned by employees of Petro-Lewis and its management.

American Airlines adds additional flights

DALLAS (UPI) — American Airlines announced the introduction of daily nonstop services between Chicago and both Akron-Canton, Ohio, and Louisville, Ky., effective Sept. 18.

American said Thursday it will serve the Akron-Canton and Louisville markets with three 727 flights a day to and from its hub at Chicago's O'Hare International Airport.

Southeastern farmers to receive federal aid

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration will cut red tape and help smooth the way for federal aid to drought-stricken farmers in the Southeast, Agriculture Secretary Richard E. Lyng said.

But the administration has no immediate plans for a massive haylift or the use of government-owned surplus grain to feed hungry livestock, Lyng said Thursday.

With losses already estimated as high as $1.5 billion, much of the parched land in the Southeast is producing shriveled crops and dusty pastures.

USX says tear gas shipment unauthorized

GARY, Ind. (AP) — USX Corp. confirmed union claims that security offices at Gary Works received a shipment of tear gas grenades and tear gas launchers a week before the steel company's labor contract expires.

But USX spokesman Thomas R. Ferrall said Thursday that the order was unauthorized and would be returned to the manufacturer.

Contract talks between the company and the United Steelworkers of America have been ongoing since early June. Union members voted overwhelmingly to authorize a strike if necessary.

Amalagamated Sugar sells Sea-Land stock

DALLAS (UPI) — CSX Corp. announced that an unidentified affiliate bought $218 million worth of stock in Sea-Land Corp. from Amalgamated Sugar Co., and $36 million from LLC Corp.

The sale by Amalgamated Sugar involved 7.9 million shares of Sea-Land common stock, while the LLC sale covered 1.3 million shares.

The sale was made pursuant to a call option agreement entered by the companies in April.

PSE to build California cogeneration facility

HOUSTON (UPI) — PSE Inc. announced plans to build a $42 million cogeneration facility at an LOF Glass Inc. plant near Stockton, Calif.

The company said it has signed a letter of intent to sell processed steam to the LOF Glass plant and approximately 42 megawatts to the electric utility grid under two seperate long-term agreements.

PSE expects to own 50 percent of the project which is to begin construction in 1987. The plant is to begin production in 1988.

The long-term agreement with LOF Glass is subject to final approval of LOF, completion of an electrical transmission line into the Stockton area and obtaining air permits and other necessary approvals.

The project is being developed in partnership with American Cogen Technology Inc. of Salt Lake City, which obtained a long-term power contract from Pacific Gas and Electric last year.

American Petrofina income drops 75 percent

DALLAS (AP) — American Petrofina Inc. reported a drop of almost 75 percent in net income for the second quarter, with the energy slump cutting it $4.43 million from $16.03 million in the same quarter last year, the company said.

In an earnings statement released Wednesday, the company blamed the decrease on inventory write-downs due to the continued decline of crude oil and product prices.

Local oil producer, gas firm sue companies

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

Midland oil-and-gas operator-producer James L. Lamb Jr., and Crockett County Gas Co. of Midland, have filed in federal court in Midland, a $5- to $57-million breach-of-contract suit against El Paso Hydrocarbons Co. and El Paso Natural Gas Co.

Lamb alleged that the defendants "conspired to restrain trade" among producers and purchasers of natural gas in the Farmer Field area of Crockett County, favoring another Midland gas operator-contractor, J.L. Davis, and biting into Lamb's profits.

In February 1984, said the Lamb lawsuit petition, Lamb entered into a gas-purchase contract with El Paso Hydrocarbons Co. "to take all of the natural gas" from certain properties for at least 10 years. The Lamb contract provided that El Paso Hydrocarbons Co. would pay Lamb "the highest application NGAP (Natural Gas Price Act) price" for delivered gas. The price would be subject to six-month adjustments.

A year earlier, Crockett County Gas Co. entered into a similar agreement with El Paso Hydrocarbons Co., said the petition.

Under both contracts, the seller "had the right" to deliver for sale to El Paso Hydrocarbons Co. up to 5-million cubic feet of natural gas per day.

El Paso Natural Gas Co. operates an interstate natural gas pipeline system, and El Paso Hydrocarbons Co. operates an intrastate pipeline system, which runs through the Farmer Field area of Crockett County. Crockett County is about 100 miles south of Midland.

Lamb and Crockett County Gas Co. claimed that their "chief competitor" in the Farmer Field area was J.L. Davis, or a corporation controlled by him. Davis purchased and purchases gas from producers in the Farmer Field area and delivers the gas to El Paso Natural Gas Co. The Davis-El Paso Natural Gas Co. contract is to expire early in 1987, said the petition.

In brief, Lamb and Crockett County Gas Co. alleged that El Paso Hydrocarbons Co. and El Paso Natural Gas Co. "conspired and agreed to reduce the price they would pay" them to a price "far below" that paid to Davis.

El Paso Hydrocarbons Co. in April 1986 had told Lamb and Crockett County Gas Co. that it was "unilaterally deciding to change" the price payable under the Lamb and Crockett contracts to $1.50 per thousand British Thermal Units (MMBTUs) effective May 1, 1986.

That reduced price would drop the Lamb and Crockett income "below the cost of operating their gas systems" and would preclude their competing with Davis for acquisition of new gas supplies.

"The prices which Davis, Lamb and Crockett County Gas Co. Inc. could offer to such producers in each instance (are) entirely dependent upon the prices actually received by them for the party to whom they resold that gas," said the petition.

The price-drop to Lamb and Crockett resulted in a "restraint of trade or commerce" by preventing Lamb and Crockett from competing with Davis for acquisition of gas supply in the Farmer Field area.

The motive behind the alleged "conspiracy" by the defendants is "to prevent large volumes of gas from being committed" to the Lamb and Crockett systems for the remainder of the 10-year contract and instead force the gas to be delivered under terms of the Davis contract, which "may be" terminated on Jan. 1, 1987, by El Paso Natural Gas Co., said the petition.

Lamb and Crockett claimed that El Paso Natural Gas Co.'s ultimate intent is to "reduce overall gas supplies" in interstate commerce and to "drive up the price of gas."

Lamb and Crockett said that actions of El Paso Natural Gas Co. and El Paso Hydrocarbons Co. have precluded their contracting with third parties for the resale of approximately 5,660,000 cubic feet of gas per day to El Paso Hydrocarbons Co. from March 1986 through the duration of the 10-year contracts. Lamb and Crockett claimed that damages amount to $5.06-million. In addition, they claimed that El Paso Hydrocarbons Co. breached its contracts with them by underpaying them $189,522.44 from Jan. 1, 1985, through May 31, 1986.

On top of their alleged combined actual damages of $5.2-million, Lamb and Crockett are seeking exemplary damages of $52 million — 10 times the alleged actual damages.

Insurance board proposes raising home coverage

By JIM WARREN
Reporter Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Damage from high winds, tornadoes and hail should cause homeowner insurance rates in North and Northeast Texas to increase more than in other areas of the state.

The State Board of Insurance staff has recommended allowing insurance companies to raise rates for Midland-area homeowners 11.2 percent, compared to a recommended 7.8-percent hike for the coastal region and 8.7 percent for Central Texas.

The Texas Insurance Advisory Association, a group of industry representatives that offers rate-making suggestions to the state board, proposes higher rate increases than the state's staff.

Under the TIAA proposal, homeowner rates would jump 22.5 percent, again higher than rates in other parts of the state.

Tenant rates — premiums paid by people who don't own their home but insure its belongings — would decline 19.2 percent under the state board staff's proposal. TIAA recommended lowering tenant rates in Midland 25 percent.

For all lines and classes of property insurance combined, the staff recommended a 5.3-percent increase, compared to an overall 16.9-percent rise proposed by TIAA. The differences stem mainly from TIAA's request to include a greater percentage for a built-in allowance for projected profit. The two sides also differ in the way they project future trends and payouts.

The insurance board met Thursday to take testimony but decided to wait to issue a final ruling.

"The primary factor affecting the need for a rate increase is the catastrophe loss record in the state of Texas over the last three years."

— Rick Gentry

Rick Gentry, TIAA spokesman, said dollar losses in Texas ranked second in the nation during 1985. "The primary factor affecting the need for a rate increase is the catastrophe loss record in the state of Texas over the last three years," Gentry said. "Property rates must necessarily respond to these types of losses."

"Specifically," he said, "the effect of Hurricane Alicia in August 1983, the severe winter weather of Decemeber 1983 and the record number of weather-related catastrophes that Texas suffered in 1985" has led insurance companies to reassess projected trends and ask for rate increases.

Evidence presented to the board showed insurance companies paid $237 million in property claims in 1985, when Texas had 10 catastrophes that caused at least $5 million each.

Insurance companies want a greater rate increase for north and northwest Texas because of the high number of claims from wind, hail and tornadoes.

Crane makes stronger effort to organize city in hard times

CRANE (AP) — With unemployment figures climbing into double digits as energy industry fortunes plummet, civic cheerleading must try harder than ever.

The effect on Crane has not differed from that on any other small town with an economy based primarily on oilfield service and production.

Several small businesses have closed in the town of 3,500. Dozens of jobless residents are moving out. What little oilfield service business is left goes to Midland-Odessa companies.

"Everywhere you go — at coffee shops, on street corners, in offices — all you hear is how bad things are and how much worse they're going to get," said Gene Clack, president of the Crane County Chamber of Commerce board of directors.

To fight back, the chamber has hung a new shingle on its door. No longer just cheerleaders, chamber leaders are using psychology to turn the town around.

It's called the United for Crane campaign. A letter to the editor in the Crane newspaper described it as an effort to organize businesses and individuals to help one another during difficult economic times.

"I hope there will be several things accomplished, the main one being to make some sort of mental adjustment in people's attitude about where Crane is headed," Clack said.

Thus far, the most specific plans are to host a countywide rally on Aug. 21, to print weekly, "What's so good about Crane" columns in the newspaper, and to encourage major oil companies to hire Crane oilfield service companies.

Major business operators tend to use Midland-Odessa companies because they underbid small town companies, said Jincy Burks, chamber secretary-manager.

Burks said city and county governments will be asked to pass resolutions to support Crane businesses.

"It's mostly to build up morale and remind people that the town is not dying and remind them of why we're living in Crane," Burks said.

Clack said representatives from major and independent oil companies will be invited to the rally as well as merchants and social and service organizations.

Although the purpose is to adjust the town's attitude, Clack believes the goal is supported by physical evidence.

"I realize things are tough, but they're not impossible," Clack said.

Some small retail businesses have opened recently and nine new houses are under construction, he said.

"I'll bet that's more than in Odessa," Clack said.

Bond denied in drug arrest

From Staff Reports

Bond was denied for a Midland man and $50,000 bond set for his wife after the two were arrested Thursday by Midland County Sheriff's officers and charged with possession of a controlled substance.

Bond for Benjamin Rodriguez, 27, of 1112 E. Spruce St. was denied by Judge Judy Massingill. He was arrested about 1:20 p.m. at the Clusters Apartments, 4415 North Crest Drive.

Officers there obtained consent and searched his car thoroughly for narcotics, but found nothing.

"We knew about the location here," Midland County Sheriff Gary Painter said at the scene. "We knew this was one of his hangouts." Painter said Rodriguez was not a tenant at the apartment where he was arrested. He said he did not know who lived there.

Painter said Rodriguez was arrested about a month ago for possession of cocaine, but was free on bond.

Earlier, his wife, Olga Rodriguez, 23, was arrested at the residence on Spruce Street. Painter said approximately four to six grams of cocaine was found in a plastic flashlight in a metal shed.

Painter said officers had been watching Rodriguez for some time. He said an arrest warrant was obtained Thursday morning.

Loyalists flock to statue

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Believers in the miracle-working power of the Virgin Mary are expected to flock by the thousands to a small San Antonio church to see a replica of the statue of the Virgen de San Juan de Los Lagos.

For the third straight summer, San Juan de Los Lagos Catholic Church on the city's West Side will sponsor the display of the traveling statue that was credited with bringing a dead girl back to life in 1623.

The replica, made in 1629, arrived at the church Thursday.

EL PASO (AP) — As it did for millions of others, World War II changed Laura Blackmon's life.

She always had planned to teach. She even earned a degree at West Texas State Teachers College and a job teaching that paid $67 a month.

It was a meager salary, she said, but, it still was the Depression, and Mrs. Blackmon was happy to be able to pay her debts. Then came the war and a better-paying job as a clerk-typist at the Amarillo Army Air Field. Not an exicting job, the young woman thought.

Mrs. Blackmon, now crowding 70, remembers sitting in an office and thinking to herself that she would remain a quiet shadow in some typing pool the rest of her life.

Suddenly her supervisor appeared at the door of the room with a young lieutenant in tow.

"Have any of you had any art training?" the lieutenant asked the women who filled the room.

Mrs. Blackmon said she remembers her head jutting upwards. She looked about the room and thought, "Well, I guess they're talking to me." She said her hand went up and they motioned her into the hall.

"I didn't know a T-square from a triangle. But the lieutenant told me he thought he could make a draftsman of me, and so we drove in a staff car to the post warehouse district. We went into a tremendous warehouse with some offices to one side and one lone drafting table."

The lieutenant picked up an instrument, waved it in her face, and told Mrs. Blackmon, "This is a T-square."

Mrs. Blackmon said she watched the young man intently as he began taking her through procedures and equipment used in engineering drawing.

" 'You know what? I said to myself, 'I like this. I'm gonna go to school.' I found some night courses and have a certificate for engineering drawing from a branch of Texas Tech."

Within two years, Mrs. Blackmon, still in her early 20s, had earned recognition for her inventions and received several top awards. She remembers two well: a printing process and a safety device used in repairing tires on the B-17 bombers.

The bomber tires "were awful," Mrs. Blackmon said. "They would blow up on the servicemen."

She later was offered a job with another division where she became head of the drafting deparment.

After marriage and the birth of two sons, Mrs. Blackmon's inventiveness turned homeward. She continued painting and won numerous awards. But as she carried around her suitcase with paints, she became disgruntled with its clumsiness.

"It opened wrong. Everything spilled out."

So she began using her technical training to design an artist's case and in 1969 received a patent for her work. Although it was marketed and Mrs. Blackmon began receiving royalty checks, she said the wrong material and advertising strategies were used.

Instead of something light, the manufacturer made the case out of aluminum. It cost nearly $90. Since a patent is good for 17 years, Mrs. Blackmon decided to renew hers, except that this time she labeled the design a "multisectioned storage case." She received that patent in 1984 and plans to market it in lightweight plastic for $20. The mold alone will cost $60,000.

Meanwhile, she designed a desk for herself that would allow her to pursue both her art and inventions.

"I had it measured just so," Mrs. Blackmon said. "I took it to a carpenter who insisted I didn't want the specifications I had drawn."

When it came, the drawers were too shallow and she she sent it back and told him to redo it. The desk has a folding easel on one side and a folding cork bulletin board on the other. The painter's side is lighted by natural light from a picture window behind it.

Cartoonist helps children think, draw

By LINDA BURKE

NORTH RICHLAND HILLS (AP) — Cartoons may not be just for kids, but artist and cartoonist Richard Hlad thinks today's children could be tomorrow's cartoon and comic strip geniuses.

Hlad, an assistant art professor at Tarrant County Junior College's Northeast Campus, has taught a summer cartooning class for 8- to 11-year-olds for four years.

"Sometimes getting them to think and draw is like extracting teeth," he said.

Hlad attributes the popularity of cartoons to people's appreciation of a good joke and said everyone grows up on cartoons.

"Even some of the children in the class have said they have seen their parents sneak in the living room to watch cartoons on TV," he said.

A good cartoonist has a sense of humor and an ability to see a twisted side and something funny in everything, Hlad said.

"You don't have to be a profound artist to be a good cartoonist," he said. "Sometimes the simpler works better than the more complex."

Many famous cartoon and comic-strip characters, he said, are drawn from simple numbers or shapes like triangles and circles.

Hlad has introduced the children to all types of cartoon drawings including caricatures, editorial cartoons, and single panel and multi-panel comic strips.

"However, today's kids are more visual with all the cartoons and comic strips," he said.

Hlad's background is in painting and printmaking. He refers to cartooning as his "kid side."

"Cartooning is an avenue or a way of expressing oneself," he said.

The summer cartooning class is great for the youngsters, Hlad said, because it gives them some positive exposure to art.

"Since budgetary cutbacks by the legislature for education, many schools have been forced to scale down or eliminate their fine arts programs," he said.

Colby Collins, 9, of Fort Worth, said he joined the class because he wants to become a professional cartoonist.

"I like it because you can make people uglier, wilder, funnier and bigger than they really are," he said.

Eight-year-old Kristi Kossler of Colleyville signed up for the cartooning class to sharpen her drawing skills.

"I like to draw, and was one of the best drawers in my second-grade class," she said.

If the children can't come up with their own ideas, Hlad provides idea cards of animals, people, places and situations for them to use. The cards are shuffled and one is picked from each category. Hlad said they can provide for some truly comical combinations.

Nine-year-old Jeremiah Johnson, who was working diligently on his comic strip of a hippo climbing up a skyscraper to meet a bus driver at the zoo, said his favorite comic strips are Beetle Bailey and Garfield.

"I like to draw, but cartooning is just a hobby for me," said Johnson, who's from North Richland Hills.

Exhibition of quilts on display in mall

From Staff Reports

A Midland woman is among several West Texans displaying antique quilts in the Midland Park Mall.

The exhibiton of 51 quilts began Thursday and will run until August 3.

They are among 101 quilts — representing the period of 1836-1936 — that are a part of a tour of Texas. They were part of a year-long contest in which the winners opened the exhibit in April in the Rotunda of the Texas Capital Building in Austin.

The quilts are over 100 years old, according to Judy Dixon, marketing director of the Midland Park Mall.

"We are displaying the ones that originated closest to our area," she said.

Midlander Karen Sikes Collins' quilt was made by a person of the fifth generation and is called "Flying X Quilt." It symbolizes the past and present plight of immigrants in Texas.

Some of the other quilts on display are owned by people in San Angelo, Lamesa, Lubbock, Monahans, Senora and Fort Stockton.

Members of the Midland Quilters Guild assisted the opening and will show their own quilts and demonstrate quilting techniques on Saturday.

The exhibition is sponsored by the Texas Sesquicentennial Quilt Association, Rouse Co. and the Melvin Simon Association of which the mall is associated.

This display is free of charge to the public, but Ms. Dixon requested that no one touch the quilts or take pictures with a flash.

"This could destroy the quilts," she said.

Keva Harmonson of Midland looks over an antique quilt which is being exhibited in the Midland Park Mall. There are 51 antique quilts being displayed and the exhibition will continue through August 3.

Christian Voice to target congressional, legislative races

By JIM WARREN
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Targeted Texas politicians will face a Christian version of the no-pass no-play rule from a Religious Right organization ready to issue "report cards" on candidates.

The Washington-based Christian Voice issued the report cards in 1984, evaluating national candidates' positions on issues ranging from abortion and prayer in school to a balanced budget amendment and the equal rights amendment.

Now Christian Voice has opened a Texas office here as its newest addition to the organization's 14-office operation. The group plans to target about 12 congressional and 12 legislative races as well as the governor, lieutenant governor and attorney general contests.

Christian Voice's Texas director, Tommy Garrett, said the organization hasn't decided yet which races to concentrate on, but said Democratic House Speaker Gib Lewis' re-election effort against Fort Worth developer K. Wayne Lee is one of them.

Garrett said Christian Voice probably will send out its "Biblical Scorecards" for the races of the six Texas GOP Congressmen elected in 1984. Garrett also predicted the lieutenant governor and attorney general races "will provide a pretty clear picture as to where the candidates stand on Christian issues."

Previous report cards stated the "Christian position" on an array of issues. For instance, the Christian Voice says Christians support the military buildup, freedom fighters in Nicaragua, Afghanistan and Angola and tax credits for Christian schools. Christians oppose, according to the organization, a nuclear freeze, "homosexuality as an alternative lifestyle," abortion on demand and "secular humanism."

Mike Hudson, head of People for the American Way's Texas chapter, said his group will try to "counteract" Christian Voice by informing voters on "the real issues." Hudson has long expected them to open an office here, and said, "they've clearly targeted Texas."

"We try to tell them (voters) that these groups don't represent any Christian or absolutionist postion but just the views of one extremist group," Hudson said. Whether or not Christian Voice's work violates separation of church and state laws, "it really violates the spirit of what America stands for," he said.

Garrett said the upcoming special election in East Texas for retiring state Sen. Ed Howard's seat will be the group's first test in a state race. Between September and the Nov. 4 general election, Garrett expects Christian Voice to send out 2 to 3 million report cards and Biblical Scorecards for a variety of races.

Some of the state issues the group will "rate" candidates on include balancing the budget, taxation, private and church-run schools and sodomy.

Ector County home celebrates birthday

From Staff Reports

ODESSA — The grounds of the White-Pool House, 112 E. Murphy, are the site of a birthday party at 3 p.m. Sunday.

The newly restored windmill and cistern will be dedicated. Ice cream and cake will be served. Tours of the house will begin immediately after the dedication ceremonies and continue until 6 p.m. A donation of 50 cents for adults and 25 cents for children will be accepted for tours of the house. Ice cream and cake will be sold for 50 cents per serving.

The White-Pool House is the oldest remaining structure in Ector County. Construction of the house was begun in July of 1887, by Charles and Lucy White, with the help of their two sons.

The house was donated to Ector County in 1977 by Oso Pool and has been restored under the supervision of the Ector County Historical Commission. The restoration features rooms interpreting two periods of Ector County history — the ranching frontier of the 1880s and 1890s and the oil boom of the 1920s and 1930s.

The White-Pool House opened to the public in 1984. Since that time, over 3,000 people have toured the historic site. The house is open every Sunday from 3 to 6 p.m. and at other times by special arrangement.

The house is available for small receptions, meetings and other functions. A nominal fee is charged.

Trade council member: Region should market 'know-how'

By FRANK TROMBLEY
Staff Writer

ODESSA — A member of the Texas World Trade Council told those attending the monthly meeting of the Permian Basin International Trade Forum Thursday noon that people in this region need to concentrate on exporting technological know-how.

L. Don Anderson of Lubbock, only recently appointed to the state trade council by Gov. Mark White, said, "There is one thing you people here in the Permian Basin have a pretty good corner on and that's know-how." However, he said, "We may be selling that know-how at a lesser price than what we should. It's going to take some very intelligent thinking to set a dollar value on that technological know-how," he stated.

Anderson said people in the Permian Basin should be paying close attention too, even involve themselves in, the GATT (General Agreement on Trade and Tariffs) meetings now taking place because licensing and patents are a very important part of discussions that will take place. There is a push to get agreements with major nations to recognize patents and licenses.

Anderson is a graduate of Texas Tech, owner and president of Agricultural Investment Consultants Inc. and also owns and operates the Texas Cotton Manufacturing Corp. He is a co-founder of Cotton Hybrids Inc. and has a ranching operation with both cattle and cotton.

Introducing Anderson, PBITF President Bill Gruer observed that he brings a great deal of experience in international trade to his new position on the Texas World Trade Council. Noting the council has only met twice since formation, Gruer expressed the hope council members might be persuaded to hold a meeting in the Permian Basin area.

Anderson said he believes "there is a major focus beginning to develop, not only in Texas, but the entire United States, on what to do about developing world trade."

"I can sense a wave building," he said, "and I think this is extremely important because as an old Greek philosopher once said, 'He who climbs on the crest of the wave can often ride all the way to shore,'" said Anderson.

Concerning the problems facing those in agriculture today, Anderson related a story told to him about a Lamesa farmer who had received a million dollar bonus from an oil company on some land he had leased.

Anderson said the Lamesa man was asked if he'd figured out what he was going to do with that million dollars. The man replied he given it a lot of thought and had decided to just keep on farming until the money ran out.

"That's not a very good joke when you think about it," Anderson said. "But I think it does point out some of the problems we've got in agriculture."

Mail carriers' crede never included dive-bombing birds

BIG SPRING (AP) — Rain and sleet may not stop the valiant postal carrier, but in parts of Big Spring, dive-bombing birds can.

Postmaster Frank Hardesty recently told his workers they don't have to deliver the mail if the Mississippi Kites are present and threaten them. Hardesty said it is not worth a carrier getting hurt.

Mississippi Kites are shaped like falcons, with gray-black and white feathers.

In the protection of their young, they dive toward anyone who comes too close to the nests, Hardesty said.

Up to 300 east Big Spring residents face late mail because of the month-old bird problem.

Several hundred Mississippi Kites migrated here to hatch their young. Bird expert Bebe McCasland of Big Spring says the creatures are very protective of their offspring.

McCasland expects the birds to be around until the fall.

MHMR doesn't want special master

AUSTIN (AP) — Dr. Gary Miller, commissioner of the Department of Mental Health and Mental Retardation, said Thursday the department opposes a federal court plan for a special master to oversee service to the mentally retarded.

Miller commented in reply to the appointment by U.S. District Judge Barefoot Sanders of Dallas of Linda O'Neall of Tallahassee, Fla., to be a special master in a lawsuit settlement before Sanders' court.

The original lawsuit was filed in 1974 on behalf of mentally retarded people who were placed in state schools for the mentally ill.

"The department is disappointed that the court has decided to appoint Dr. O'Neall as a special master to formulate and recommend a plan of implementation in the Lelez vs Kavanagh case," Miller said.

"The department believes that its plan should be implemented and that no special master is needed on this issue."

Officials say Boeing 727 landed safely in Dallas

From Staff Reports

Four fire department units responded to the Midland Regional Airport when an American Airlines plane reported an "unsafe landing gear" Thursday night.

The Boeing 727, containing 98 passengers and seven crew members, landed safely around 6:30 p.m. Thursday at the airport.

A nosegear warning light went on as the plane was landing, said an American Airlines spokesman in Dallas.

The nosegear was checked and found to be fine, the spokesman said.

As the plane approached the Dallas-Fort Worth airport for landing at 8:24 p.m. Thursday, the light went on again, he said.

The malfunctioning light was repaired in Dallas, he said.

The spokesman did not know the plane's flight number or origin.

In other law enforcement reports, Livingston Contractors, Rt. 9, Box 9726, reported the theft of a $1,037 generator from its yard. The business is located on County Road 1213.

Man says Miss USA 'got cheated'

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — The man who groomed Miss USA, Christy Fichtner, for the Miss Universe Pageant says she was cheated out of the top title earlier this week.

Richard Guy, who runs the Miss Texas-USA Pageant, said the crowd at the pageant in Panama was with Ms. Fichtner and she should have won.

"We got cheated," Guy said after returning to San Antonio.

Ms. Fichtner finished first runner-up, while Miss Venezuela, Barbara Palacios, won the title.

"This girl (Ms. Palacios) had pock marks on her face. This girl had nothing," Guy said.

Ms. Fichtner was named Miss Texas-USA last July and went on to win the Miss USA title in February.

Man previously arrested in area charged with Arizona murders

UKIAH, Calif. (AP) — A Superior Court jury began deliberations Thursday in the murder trial of Robert Wayne Danielson, who is charged in the slayings of an elderly Arizona couple.

Danielson was arrested last year in Odessa, where he was working in a carnival under an assumed name.

Jurors are considering seven counts against Danielson, 40. The charges include two counts of first-degree murder, two counts of kidnapping, two counts of robbery and one count of burglary. The prosecution is seeking the death penalty.

Danielson is accused of kidnapping Benjamin Schaeffer, 69, and his wife, Edith, 62, while the Yuma couple was vacationing on the Mendocino coast in 1982.

Lenora Hart, Danielson's former girlfriend and traveling companion, testified he drove the couple's camper to a remote spot, tied them up and then shot them. She said she and Danielson used the couple's credit cards and traveled in their camper for some time after the slayings.

Hart, who was 15 when she traveled with Danielson, told authorities of the crime and led them to the couple's bodies after she was arrested on another charge 1½ years later in Oregon.

Danielson still faces murder charges in Oregon in a separate slaying and charges of attempted murder in Arizona for allegedly trying to poison a couple who survived the attempt, the district attorney's office said.

Thin, weak turf encourages common weed invasion

One of the best means for controlling weeds in a home lawn is to maintain a dense, vigorous growing stand of turfgrass through proper fertilization, irrigation and mowing. Thin, weak turf encourages the invasion of weeds. However, even the best kept lawns will have some weeds. To effectively control "problem" weeds in a lawn, herbicides can be used.

Effective use of chemicals (herbicides or weed killers) to control weeds in a lawn depends upon: proper weed identification, selecting the right herbicide, treating weeds when they are immature and actively growing, applying herbicides at proper rates, and observing labels for proper precautions. It is very important that only specific herbicides labeled for use on home lawns be used to control weeds in lawns. Some herbicides come in many trade names, and not all trade names carry a label for home lawn use. Indiscriminate use of industrial strength weed killers often results in tree and shrub damage or death.

Herbicides used to control weeds in lawns can be grouped into three categories: nonselective contact sprays, selective postemergent sprays or granules and selective sprays and granules.

Glyphosate herbicides are an example of nonselective contact spray vegetation killers. Round Up, Doomsday and Kleenup contain varying amounts of the active ingredient glyphosate. These herbicides are slow acting and require patience on the applicators' part. Two to three weeks may be required to root kill some stubborn perennials. Hoeing or mowing top portions of the weed after applying glyphosate will negate the effectiveness of the product. Ironic as it may seem, the healthier the target weed the better the kill from glyphosate. Complete root kill also depends on the material being applied to healthy leaves for translocation to the root zone.

Postemergent selective materials are applied shortly after the weeds are visible and when used according to the label will not damage turf. Weeds such as henbit, chickweed, dandelion, wild onion and garlic, and plaintain can be controlled by post emerge treatment with 2, 4-D, MCPP, dicamba or a combination of these herbicides. Remember, for best results treat only when weeds are immature and/or actively growing. Do not use 2, 4-D, MCPP or dicamba on St. Augustine in hot weather (above 85 degrees fahrenheit). Dicamba should not be sprayed next to shrubs or under the drip line of trees. Some caution should also be used when using these chemicals on hybrid bermudagrass such as Tifgreen and Tifdwarf.

Rescuegrass (incorrectly called wild rye), goosegrass, dallisgrass and sandbur can be controlled in lawns with post emergent treatment of MSMA or DSMA. Spray when weeds are young and actively growing. Repeat applications may be needed at 7 to 10 day intervals if regrowth occurs. Do not use MSMA or DSMA on St. Augustine or on Centipedegrass. MSMA will also kill seedling goatheads or puncture vine as some people call it.

The annual grassy weeds also can be effectively controlled by preemergent treatment with Balan, Dacthal or Betesan. Check labels for specific weeds controlled by the herbicides. It is very important that these chemicals be applied prior to germination of the weed seed. September and February applications may be necessary. If you plan to do any reseeding of the lawn, do not use preemergent herbicides 90 to 120 days prior to seeding.

Most broaleaf weeds and annual grassy weeds in St. Augustine lawns can be controlled with Simazine or Atrazine. However, only certain weed and feed formulations containing these chemicals have a label for use in home lawns. In general, weed and feed formulations with Simazine or Atrazine have caused more damage to desirable vegetation in West Texas than all other herbicides combined. Our low soil organic matter makes the successful use of Simazine or Atrazine difficult. Never use weed and feed combinations to fertilize trees, shrubs or vegetable gardens.

Weed control herbicides can be helpful when used properly. They can be devastating when used improperly.

Agricultural Department offers leaflets on how diets affect health

By DON KENDALL-

WASHINGTON (AP) — Consumers concerned about how diets may affect health can get seven new leaflets prepared by the Agriculture Department to help them eat the varied, balanced diets recommended by government nutrition experts.

The pamphlets, ranging from four to 12 pages each, cost $4.50 for a set of seven. Consumers are offered supplemental information to help them follow the seven basic dietary guidelines issued in 1980 and updated last year by the departments of Agriculture and Health and Human Services.

Rodney E. Leonard of the Community Nutrition Institute, a private, non-profit consumer group in Washington, applauded the USDA's new information kits.

"They're very good," Leonard said. "It's the sort of education support that's needed to encourage the wider use of the dietary guidelines. If we had done it sooner, we would have been better off, but it's good to have them now."

Asked about the $4.50 price for "minibulletins," as USDA called the pamphlets, Leonard laughed, "It's like everything else — we've got the product, now we can haggle over the price."

Each of the pamphlets deals with one of the seven basic guidelines, which are:

— Eat a variety of foods.
— Maintain desirable weight.
— Avoid too much fat, saturated fat and cholesterol.
— Avoid too much sugar.
— Avoid too much sodium.
— If you drink alcoholic beverages, do so in moderation.
— Eat foods adequate in starch and fiber.

Carole Davis, chief of guidance and education research in the department's Human Nutrition Information Service, said the minibulletins provide information on food composition, food labeling, modifying recipes and menus, and practical ways to follow the guidelines in planning, purchasing and preparing foods.

Each pamphlet also includes a self-assessment quiz or activity to involve readers with the information and encourage them to apply it to their own food practices, she said.

"The tips and recipes in each minibulletin consider all of the guidelines, so you won't find yourself neglecting one to follow another," Davis said. "The guidelines all work together for a healthful diet."

The pamphlets include more than two dozen recipes that provide ways to follow all of the dietary guidelines, she said. Developed by USDA nutritionists, these recipes range from dips to entrees to desserts. Nutrition information accompanies each recipe.

A second set of pamphlets will be issued next year and will provide further ways to follow the dietary guidelines. The second set will cover shopping, menu planning, food preparation, eating out, bag lunches, desserts and snacks and meals in minutes.

The first set can be ordered for $4.50 each from: Superintendent of Documents, U.S. Government Printing Office, Washington, D.C. 20250, or from S. Woods, Department 187P, Consumer Information Center, Pueblo, Colo. 81009. Refer to stock number 001-000-04467-2. For telephone orders from GPO, which accepts VISA or MasterCard, call 202-783-3238.

A wild relative of corn called eastern gamagrass has undergone a sex change that an Agriculture Department scientist says could one day mean a new grain crop for farmers.

In one of the changed grasses, male flowers have turned female and started producing seed, the department's Agricultural Research Service said this week. Gamagrass grows in the southeastern states and Mexico.

Chester L. Dewald, an agronomist with the agency's Southern Plains Research Station, Woodward, Okla., said, "Our research shows that with both the male and female parts producing seed, production on each seed head has increased by about 2,500 percent."

Dewald said that because eastern gamagrass seeds have a protein content even higher than corn, it could become a nutritious grain crop for livestock and people.

"We have a long way to go before we finish breeding the grass to benefit humans and animals, but it can definitely be done," he said.

The variant gamagrass, which has a stalk and leaves resembling corn, originally showed up in a nursery at USDA's plant materials center operated by the Soil Conservation Service.

Hot daytime temperatures hasten maturity of southern cotton, corn

COLLEGE STATION (AP) — Daytime temperatures soared into the high 90s, and above the century mark in many areas, and stressed pastures, ranges, field crops and livestock in much of Texas this week, while hastening maturity of southern cotton, corn and sorghum crops.

The extremely hot temperatures that are scorching ranges have increased the number of range and grass fires in many areas, including the West Central (San Angelo) area and Rolling Plains (Vernon) area, said Dr. Zerle L. Carpenter, director of the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, The Texas A&M University System.

The high temperatures and lack of rain also have caused some city officials, including those in Austin, to impose mandatory water conservation measures.

Many agricultural producers, and particularly peanut growers in counties around Stephenville and in Atascosa, Frio and Wilson counties near San Antonio, are actively irrigating their crops, while dryland peanuts are starting to suffer from lack of rainfall, Carpenter said.

The hot weather has speeded the maturity of early crops and accelerated harvesting activities in the southern half of the state. The sorghum harvest is 99 percent complete in the South District around Weslaco and is nearing completion in the Coastal Bend area around Corpus Christi, where yields are down from last year, noted Carpenter.

In the Rio Grande Valley, the cotton crop is 5 percent harvested and defoliation is increasing in preparation for rapid harvesting activity. The corn crop there is 20 percent harvested and sugarcane is making moderate growth. Citrus trees, with a good fruit crop in prospect, are being treated for insect and weed control, Carpenter added.

Soybean harvesting also is in full swing in Southwest Texas, along with harvesting of seed corn. The commercial corn harvest is under way in southern counties of the district, and the first hay cutting is about over, with some excellent yields reported. The sorghum harvest is moving forward rapidly along the Upper Coast, parts of South Central and Central Texas as well.

Cicadas probably most intriguing of U.S. insects

Probably no other insect in the United States has caused as much curiosity and wonder as cicadas. American Indians once thought these creatures had some evil significance, while today their appearance in large numbers arouses fear of crop destruction. Cicadas can damage or destroy trees and shrubs, particularly young, newly transplanted ones. The noise created by their song can become nerve-wracking, creating a nuisance in urban areas.

Adult cicadas are stocky insects with prominent eyes and large, semi-transparent wings which fold, tent-like against the body. Most of the adult cicadas are about 1¾ inches long and one half inch wide, although a few are much smaller. Their bodies are dark brown to black, but their wing veins are bright reddish-orange.

Periodical cicadas, commonly misnamed as 17-year locusts, are widely distributed throughout the United States. There are six or more closely related species. Three of them occur mainly in the northern United States and complete their life cycle in 17 years; three or more species occur in the south of Texas and complete their cycle in 13 years. This should not be interpreted to mean that the insect is seen only at 17- or 13-year intervals. The various populations are known as broods and different broods emerge each year.

Common or dog-day cicadas are closely related and similar in appearance. These cicadas are generally larger, appear later in the summer and have life cycles of one to five years.

Female cicadas, using a curved, saw-like egg-laying apparatus, puncture the bark of twigs or small branches to make a pocket into which 24-48 eggs are deposited. A single female may make as many as 20 pockets and lay 400-600 eggs.

Eggs hatch in six to seven weeks. The resulting ant-like nymphs drop to the ground and burrow through the soil to find roots from which they suck juices. Nymphs may be found from two to 24 or more inches below the soil's surface.

Female cicadas do not sing. Only the males sing or drum. Sound is produced by means of two shell-like inflated drums in the sides of the abdomen being vibrated by a special muscle. Cicada singing may become incessant, loud, causing nervousness, irritability and auditory fatigue among humans.

Products containing carbaryl (Sevin®) can be used to protect ornamental plants, shade trees and those fruit and nut trees listed on the label. Applications just prior to egg-laying should provide about five to eight days protection. Subsequent treatments may be necessary where heavy infestations occur.

Always read and carefully follow the label's directions.

Successful Farming Index indicates farms turned in strong financial records in '85

Associated Press

Many farms turned in a surprisingly strong financial performance in 1985, according to the second annual Successful Farming Index.

The "Index" is a study which analyzed the records of almost 500 farms in five states.

"Despite the agricultural depression, these farms from five different states improved what we call 'total operating benefit' by 42 percent from 1984," said Richard Krumme, editor of Successful Farming.

"Every group of farms analyzed, except those with sales under $100,000, made a profit before payment of debt was made. This is important," said Krumme, "because it shows there is profit in agriculture, but it is often eaten up by debt. For instance, last year's study showed that for each $3 of recent debt acquired by farmers, only $1 in additional sales were generated. Clearly, the debt was not being put to productive use."

That is slowly changing now. The farmers' records from 1985 showed current debt dropped 11 percent and liquidity (ability to pay current debts) improved.

Despite the improvement, this year's study reaffirms that poor use of capital is still a major problem in agriculture. Three of the 13 categories of farmers studied by sales and enterprise were clearly able to repay principal on long-term debt from after-tax cash flow.

It appears from the study that large farmers are able to use debt more productively than small farmers. For instance, large farmers with sales of $400,000 to $500,000 had only 32 percent equity yet were the most profitable group measured. Farms with sales of under $100,000 had a strong 56 percent equity yet turned in the poorest profit performance.

"Many lenders and economists are telling farmers that if they don't have 40 to 50 percent equity in their business they are in trouble. That's obviously not true of the large farms we studied," said Krumme.

The farms in the index are not a randomly selected sample of all farms. They are commercial farms located in Alabama, Colorado, Kentucky, Missouri and Nebraska which participate in extensive record keeping programs.

"We believe following their financial progress gives an accurate reflection of change in agriculture," said Krumme.

Mothers wear combat boots — literally

DENVER (UPI) — Down range exercises were hell for Spec. 4 K. Anderson.

The simulated combat maneuvers were two weeks of eating in the rain, hiking over rocky hills, sweltering under a hot sun, toting a 30-pound pack and rifle, sleeping on the ground with a pistol for a pillow.

But all that was easy for the Fort Carson, Colo., soldier. It was when the division returned to the Army base, dirty and exhausted, that Ms. Anderson sat down and cried.

Her 1-year-old daughter didn't recognize her.

"She was calling my babysitter 'mom,'" said Ms. Anderson, 26, a petite, soft-spoken woman with long brown hair who has never been married. It was last summer but her large brown eyes still fill with tears when she thinks about it.

Now, she is stationed at an Army medical center and no longer has to leave her daughter for weeks at a time.

"I think my daughter's more independent now," said Ms. Anderson, smiling sweetly, trying to find something positive in the experience. "She knows mommy's going to leave, but she also knows I'm going to come back."

Despite the disadvantages, Ms. Anderson likes her soldier-mother lifestyle and now is nursing another daughter born four months ago.

She is one of a growing number of soldiers who keep the war machine oiled and rear children at the same time. She also represents a growing number of single mothers in the military who must support their children without help from the father.

Uncle Sam helps with about 25 percent of the cost of day care for all military parents, but soldiers like Ms. Anderson still find it hard to make ends meet.

"Half of your paycheck goes to babysitters," said Ms. Anderson, a medical specialist at Fitzsimmons Army Medical Center in Denver. "I work a lot at night and there is no day care on the base after 5 p.m. I wrote some letters to the commanding general, but so far they haven't extended the hours."

Another drawback to making a home for her daughters is the nomadic nature of Army life. Ms. Anderson has been transferred five times in the past 4 ½ years and faces another move this summer.

She would prefer working at a military medical clinic with regular hours and nights and weekends free to spend with her daughters. But she said one of the first things a soldier learns is to play by the Army's rules. New mothers may get out of the service if they wish, but if they choose to stay, they must be back at work in four weeks and expect no special treatment.

"With my first child, I was pressured to leave," said Ms. Anderson. "They kept asking me, 'Are you sure you can handle this.' But now they don't say anything."

She is determined to stay because the military is a secure place to work.

"You know they can't just fire you," she said.

And by living on base, she pays no rent. With a family to support, that is important.

"I guess I can't complain," said Ms. Anderson.

Ms. Anderson and other soldier-mothers say there is no irony in practicing motherhood while being part of America's war machine. They say Army life has positive influences on their children.

"You learn self-discipline in the military," said Warrant Officer Maxine Bond. "You learn to control yourself better and you project that to your children."

Ms. Bond, 27, works in supply at Fort Carson. She helps make sure the 3rd Brigade of the 4th Infantry Division has the tools of war it needs and she goes wherever it goes.

Computer print-out lists of tanks, gas masks and rifles are stacked atop her gray metal Army desk next to several framed pictures of her 3-year-old daughter, Bridget.

Ms. Bond is married and lives off-base. She says soldiers never take weapons home with them and her job is one she usually can leave at the post.

"The time I spend with Bridget is quality time," she says.

Though there isn't as much of it as she'd like. In one recent week she worked two 24-hour shifts.

Ms. Bond admits such separations are hard and says it would be difficult to leave her daughter if the 3rd Brigade was called into action. That is a change from when she enlisted.

"I was 17 then, and it felt like, 'take me, I'm ready to go (to war).' But if I heard her on the phone saying, 'Mommy, come home...' well, I don't know."

"But," she sighed, "when you wear a uniform, there are certain obligations you have, and you make a commitment."

Soldier-mothers change military

COLORADO SPRINGS, Colo. (UPI) — The look is much like that of the traditional soldier with the jungle green hat and spit-polished black combat boots.

But between head and feet the traditional profile differs: camouflage pants can't hide the fact that this soldier is five months pregnant.

The Armed Forces used to require a woman to leave the service if she became pregnant. But that policy changed in October, 1970, and the number of women combining military service and motherhood is growing.

Last year almost 7.5 percent of the Army's 79,061 women soldiers became pregnant — 5,802 of them, Army records show. The actual number probably is higher because the Army tracks only those births and abortions occurring at military facilities.

Air Force and Navy figures are comparable.

At Fort Carson Army Base south of Colorado Springs, 120 of the post's 1,224 female soldiers — almost 10 percent — delivered babies last year.

The rising number of soldiers who choose to have babies is affecting the austere appearance of the military base. It now is common to see a soldier in a maternity uniform or a soldier carrying her child to the base day-care center.

And it is affecting the way the Department of Defense spends money — including a record $101 million last year to improve child care facilities. The Army provides maternity uniforms for all ranks and morning calisthenics include special exercises for the pregnant soldier.

Expectant soldiers may choose four weeks of maternity leave or take an honorable discharge. Despite growing acceptance of mothers in uniform, pregnancies and childbirth prompted 2,037 women last year to return to civilian life.

Many who remain say they like what the Army offers them as unmarried mothers.

"The military has come to the conclusion that there is no point in doing anything but welcoming these soldiers because many are good workers," said Ralph Yoder, a civilian spokesman at Fitzsimons Army Medical Center in Denver.

COPING WITH JOB LOSS

Communication failure starts vicious cycle

By JIM MAY and MARTI VERMILLION

May

Vermillion

DEAR COPING: I've been laid off from my last job for almost six months now and I've lost more than my job if you know what I mean. My wife is generally sympathetic, but claims I haven't been a husband to her in months. What can I do to help? — Anonymous

DEAR ANONYMOUS: Assuming that you are describing a sexual dysfunction problem, we would offer several thoughts for you and your wife to consider.

As we continue to emphasize, the loss of a job is a significant stress. While researchers writing on sexual dysfunction tend to use several theoretical models, the loss of a job and its accompanying stress and loss of self-esteem can create a self-sustaining cycle. The loss of a job creates a temporary sexual dysfunction, which generates performance concerns and, because of the highly personal nature of the subject, this fosters a lack of communication between the spouses, which in turn creates more concerns about performance, which causes more problems in communicating, and so on. What we see then is a system that is locked into a "vicious cycle" of failure, then fear of failure producing failure by preventing sexual arousal.

We feel that sexual dysfunction is a shared disorder and that both spouses are somehow both responsible for creating and maintaining the dysfunction. Regardless of the cause, which seems to be the loss of your job, both you and your wife are responsible for the future change that will solve your problems.

Masters and Johnson indicate that anxiety over sexual performance is the single most important immediate cause of sexual dysfunction as it can turn a single failure into a chronic problem such as you have described.

In response to your question about what you can do, the cycle can be altered at different points dependent on many factors. Space does not permit us to share those in sufficient detail with you. If you would write us and give us a return address, we could discuss the options in more detail. We would want to leave you with one final thought — it is not uncommon for those in stressful positions to share your experience. Please discuss your feelings directly with your wife (it is not uncommon to find that wives often interpret such problems as a sign that their husbands no longer love them). Let us hear from you.

DEAR COPING: I just wanted to share an experience with you and your readers. I am a geologist. I was laid off and actively looked for a job for eight months. Our funds were running very low and so we decided after much soul-searching that I should seek a nonprofessional job outside of my direct area of expertise.

To make a long story short, I took a job in a local department store and constantly dreaded the day that one of my former fellow workers might come into the store. When it finally happened I sucked-up my courage and waited on him.

During the conversation, he never acted any differently toward me than he had at the office and told me when we were through how much he missed having me around. I really appreciated that and I thought others might too. — C.V.

DEAR C.V.: Thank you so much for sharing your experience with us. We are constantly asked in our seminars: "What do you say to a friend who has lost a job?"

We counsel saying what you would say to a person who had just lost a loved one. For example, you would not say to a person who had just lost a child, "Well, you can have another one." That's not very comforting, so do not say to a friend who has just lost a job, "Well, you can find another job."

Instead acknowledge the depth of their loss, by being a good friend and listening. In our society we do not listen well; it seems to be a lost art form for us. Make your self available, that's what counts. Thanks again for sharing part of your self with us.

If any of you, our readers, have thoughts and and experiences that you have found to be helpful, please write us and we will share your good fortune with many others.

Stress management helps reduced illness

WASHINGTON (UPI) — To reduce workers' illness — and health care costs — and improve productivity, employers and unions across the country are offering on-the-job stress management programs.

A report, "Stress Management in the Workplace," released by the Washington Business Group on Health, explains how stress relates to both health and business and describes numerous measures to reduce stress in the work place.

Employee stress has been linked to such illnesses as back pains, heart disease and diabetes and with behavioral problems, such as depression, excessive drinking and smoking and accident proneness, all of which can lower productivity.

The report details ongoing stress management programs at AT&T Communications in Basking Ridge, N.J., Equitable Life Assurance Society in New York, Farmers Home Administration in Washington, Honeywell in Minneapolis and IBM in San Francisco, among others.

The industrial programs use such techniques as individual health risk assessment, lessons in coping skills, exercise and smoking cessation classes and weekend health retreats.

Copies of "Stress Management in the Workplace" can be obtained for $10 from the Washington Business Group on Health, 229½ Pennsylvania Avenue S.E., Washington, D.C. 20003.

Office air can be hazardous to health

Copley News Service

Some days, going to work can be hazardous to your health.

Literally.

Smog-toughened Americans may find hard to believe an American Lung Association finding that air in a nice, cool air-conditioned office may be more irritating and more sickening to workers than the air outside.

But if the person at the next desk is irritable; complains of headaches, nausea and fatigue; coughs, sneezes and has difficulty breathing, it may not be the job. It may be the place where the job is done.

Sources of irritation are many. The situation holds its problems for the owner of unrentable or unusable office space, or for the employer finding absenteeism boosted by unidentified and unmeasurable causes. And the potential costs of such situations are magnified by the threat of litigation.

Although the phenomenon is barely a decade old, clues do exist. In new offices, likely sources of indoor air pollution are chemical, and include the materials of which a modern office is made.

Formaldehyde fumes escape from furniture, upholstery, wood paneling, drapery or carpet fabrics. Solvents and adhesives emit fumes. Copying machines and other photochemical reactions produce ozone. And people breathe, releasing carbon dioxide and water vapor.

In old offices, likely sources of irritation include dust; mildew; old tobacco smoke; flaking paint and asbestos-based insulation; flooring or roofing materials, and again those microorganisms from people, animals and plants.

THE PROBLEM is a product of the energy crisis of the early 1970s and some of the solutions proposed, according to health and engineering specialists. Rising costs of energy focused attention on building operations, including the heating, ventilating and air-conditioning systems. Up to one-third of the energy cost of operating a building goes toward heating or cooling the air inside and moving it around.

Standard procedure had been to exhaust some of the interior air and replace it in the system with fresh air drawn from outside and warmed or cooled. Then engineers found heating or cooling bills could be cut by recirculating air within a building, leaving less to be treated and added to the system.

So they added insulation and closed up air leaks. Energy costs fell, and building owners and employers were pleased.

CNS Graphic

But the result, health authorities have concluded, is an unhealthy office environment: the "tight building syndrome." However, because the energy crisis and this particular solution are only about a decade old, conclusive evidence is sketchy. But suspicious circumstances abound:

A total of 67 telephone company workers in San Diego complaining of eye irritation, nausea and respiratory discomfort are sent home or to hospitals in three separate incidents in late March and early April 1984. The one-story office building is evacuated on two of the occasions. A consultant's report suggests the problem may be the combination of outside air with nonhazardous odors in the building.

PACIFIC BELL spokesman Tom McNaghten said no cost was assigned to the incidents, although "there were two evacuations and no one was in the building part of the time." Lost time costs, he said, "involved up to 120 operators for parts of four or five days." No changes were made in the building and no additional problems have surfaced, he said.

California state employees move in 1981 into the newly completed Bateson Building in downtown Sacramento, heralded as a model of energy efficiency. Soon, many complain of nausea, breathing problems and other ailments. A survey of workers on the fourth floor, where many of the reports seemed concentrated found 120 of them with health-related complaints. The director of general services said comprehensive air tests of the building environment failed to show toxic levels, but said the tests found "dust and cigarette smoke that could be the result of a lack of ventilation." The Bateson building is in use today.

A 35-story building in Atlanta, Ga., is left standing empty because the design ventilation system lacked the capacity to carry away pollutants which followed occupants into the building.

Some 2,000 workers in a newly-remodeled Southern California accounting office report feeling ill. The problems are attributed to "off-gassing" from new ceiling tile, new wall covering, carpeting and the paper used in the accounting procedures, all of which contained formaldehyde.

A consulting health engineer, Kenneth S. Cohen of El Cajon, Calif., said he has found, "in the absence of occupational chemical contamination, the normal building environment will not produce a problem."

In an office environment, complaints are most likely to result from inadequate ventilation or follow the use of new building materials. Such problems can be solved by increasing the outdoor air intake and "housekeeping" measures such as making sure ventilating equipment is opeartng properly and that filters are clean, consultants say.

BUT THAT may not be simple. Cohen, who works with employers nationwide, described an attempt to "blow the building clean" by running the ventilation system at full capacity.

"It took 24 hours a day, seven days a week for six months and cost $100,000 to reduce measureable contaminants to acceptable levels," he said. "But when the contaminant levels disappeared, so did the symptoms."

Employees may be asked to record symptoms, time of the work day and area of the building to assist in locating the source of the problem.

Cohen said "economizer packages," which superseded design ventilation systems during the energy crunch, "essentially stifle" fresh air makeup. "This is a recent phenomenon," he said. "It didn't exist 10 years ago."

Giving advice on indoor air quality is complicated by the lack of standards. Occupational Safety and Health Administration standards apply to industrial and manufacturing situations, but Cohen and others call for more stringent rules for offices.

Cohen described as "a milestone," the adoption by the American Society of Heating, Refrigerating and Air Conditioning Engineers its standard 62-1981, "Ventilation for Acceptable Indoor Air Quality."

The standard first lists ambient air quality guidelines for a long list of materials, from carbon monoxide and lead to chemicals likely to be the byproduct of manufacturing processes — acetone, formaldehyde, methyl alcohol, vanadium and zinc.

Then it says, "Indoor air quality shall be considered acceptable if the required rates of acceptable outdoor air are provided for the occupied space and no unusual indoor air contaminants are present."

THE ASHRAE standard also provides that while a ventilation rate of five cubic feet of air per minute per occupant is acceptable in nonsmoking areas, the rate is to be 20 cubic feet per minute per occupant in smoking areas. Cigarette smoke is considered an obvious contaminant by all authorities.

Even with its short history, however, indoor air quality management has apocryphal stories:

An office full of ailing people, victims of a ventilation system which had absorbed fumes from material used in re-roofing a nearby building.

Building electricians who suffered skin rashes, headaches and fatigue, all attributed to contact with PCB, outlawed as a coolant in electrical transformers since 1976, but present in older transformers still in use.

Workers in high-rise office buildings experiencing discomfort eventually attributed to photochemical reaction as direct sunlight strikes various synthetic materials used in the offices.

Employer liability in dealing with the issue of indoor air quality has not been met squarely, according to Robert Bergstrom, assistant regional counsel with the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency.

Indeed, because of the difficulty in defining the source of indoor air pollutants, employer costs so far seem to arise from lost time of employees and the costs of correcting building ventilation deficiencies.

DEAR ABBY

Sailors salute you

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: This is from a sailor aboard the USS Biddle. Last May you asked your readers to write to some lonely sailors who were out at sea for months at a time and starved for mail. Well, after that ran, we were swamped! All the guys read letters, letters and more letters, then we swapped with each other and read some more! Our youngest correspondent was 8 and the oldest was 92 with fond memories of World Wars I and II!

Believe me, it did more for our morale than you will ever know. I personally feel more positive being on the front lines of defense for the citizens of the U.S. of A. My chest sticks out a little farther knowing how much you folks really care.

I hope those of you who wrote and don't get an answer will realize how much we appreciated your letters, but there were so many thousands of letters I don't know how we can answer all of them.

Thank you, Dear Abby, for what you did. When you get this, the USS Biddle will have pulled into home port in Norfolk, Va., and most of us will already have been united with our families. We want you to know we will all serve a little prouder knowing how much you Americans care. — CHRISTOPHER ROMIE, U.S. NAVY

DEAR CHRISTOPHER: Thanks for a great letter. What a shame that Clark Stephens, the shipmate who wrote to me requesting mail, wasn't able to share in all the excitement. His father became seriously ill, and Clark was airlifted off the Biddle and flown home to help care for his ailing father. Thanks to you, Clark, and I'm praying for your father.

DEAR ABBY: This is in response to "Call Me Nothing" — whose daughter-in-law never called her anything.

Twenty-nine years ago when I was a bride, I never called my mother-in-law anything either. Although I loved her very much, I just couldn't bring myself to call her "Mother" or "Mom" and I couldn't address her by her first name.

Then one day she said to me, "I think it's time you called me something. You know, even a dog has a name."

I said, "Yes, I know. May I call you 'Fido'?"

Having no sense of humor, she said, "No, you may not — just call me Marjorie." So I called her Marjorie.

I have three married children now, and their spouses all were told to call me anything they felt comfortable with. One calls me "Mom," one calls me "Eleanor," and the third one doesn't call me anything yet. He's only been in the family since June, so I'll give him a little more time, and if he doesn't call me something, I'll suggest "Fido." — ELEANOR C. IN OMAHA

DEAR ELEANOR: If that doesn't work, how about if he whistled?

DEAR ABBY: I've been going with a wonderful girl for over three years. The problem is that when we go out to dine (two or three times a week), she purposely orders more than she can consume during that meal with me. She then takes a "doggie bag" in order to supplement her meals at a later date when she is not with me — either at home or at work.

She is not poor. I feel that she should order only what she wants to eat while dining with me. If food remains, then, of course, she may take a "doggie bag." I have told her about my feelings, to no avail.

What can I do? I don't want to lose her. — CHICAGO SCHLEMIEL FROM SHERIDAN ROAD

DEAR SCHLEMIEL: Don't be such a schlemiel. If you don't want to lose her, she must have some redeeming features to offset this rather petty practice. There is no free lunch (or dinner), so either tolerate it or let her go, lover, and try to find a less acquisitive girlfriend.

ASK DR. RUTH

Friend asks favor

By DR. RUTH WESTHEIMER

Q. My best friend wants my husband's sperm so she can have a baby on her own, as a single parent. Can you tell me how sperm banks operate?

A. I am the wrong one to ask because hundreds of people know more about the workings of sperm banks than I do. You do know, I suppose, that the woman recipient does not have intercourse with the donor and usually doesn't know who he is. And I am the wrong one to ask if you want me to say the idea is OK, because I am dead set against it.

As far as I am concerned, he is your husband and his sperm does not belong in her uterus. I suspect her motives in asking for this friendly favor, like borrowing sugar. Is she crazy about your man and hoping to get him that way? Ask yourself this: What if this best friend isn't my friend in a year, but still is giving birth to my husband's child?

I say we are old-fashioned at heart, and can be jealous of not only the man but of his sperm. Furthermore, that child of your husband's should have two parents. Two are still better than one. Say nix to this proposition.

Q. I'm bisexual and a while back I had a relationship with another guy and we drifted apart. Later, a year ago, I got involved with a girl who had been involved with him. Next, Old Home Week — we're all in a thing together. Can something like that last?

A. You sound wistful, like nothing sticks. You and he split, he and she split, so is this threesome the answer? I have no statistics. The way you three float on air, I get no feeling of permanence. The threesomes I have observed sometimes lasted a season or two. Most people — straight, gay or bi — want very much, either secretly or openly, a one-on-one commitment. Three people make a triangle, the natural home of jealousy, resentment, estrangement and impermanence. You just have to see how it goes.

Q. Lately I have been forgetting to use my diaphragm. I can't understand it. I don't want to get pregnant — really. But I forget. I'm 27. Do I really want to get pregnant, subconsciously?

A. It is likely at 27 that you are wondering if you are fertile, if you can get pregnant when you want too, because you hear that biological clock ticking. Now, if you don't want to see a psychotherapist or counselor about that, then you really must at least think about it seriously, and about how you seem to be sabotaging your own plans to avoid pregnancy until the right time.

You should tell your lover about this, because probably he doesn't want you impregnated either. Tell him it is up to him to remind you or to take charge of the contraception himself, because you can't be counted on to remember.

Q. I have had 12 different boyfriends and it seems I can attract 'em, not keep 'em. Is it because I have sex with them too soon, like my sis tells me? It really hurts deep inside that they leave me like that.

A. Your sister is right. If you go to bed with them on the first date or sooner, they will think, "She does that with everybody." Maybe they will think you are great for that, pretty, sexy, fun to do it with, but not a girl for a real relationship.

Ask your sister how you tell a guy no, you don't want to go to bed with him. This may be hard for you to do because you want to be liked. Find out just what your sister says and rehearse it until the words come out of your mouth easily. Really practice, in front of a mirror, until you know you can say it. Keep saying no to the guys and look for one you really like. When you find him, don't jump into bed. Let that relationship develop.

AT WIT'S END

Prodigal children return

(NOTE TO EDITOR: Erma Bombeck is on vacation. She left behind some of her favorite columns.)

By ERMA BOMBECK

Bombeck

All of you know there is no one in this wide world who has more affection for her children than I do.

I also have affection for Miss Piggy, but I don't want to pick up her wet towels off the bed for the next 30 years.

Parents of grown children tell me their children don't need door keys anymore ... they need a revolving door. They're in when they're out of work, out of money, out of socks, out of food and in debt.

They're out when they're in love, in the bucks, in transit, in school and have outgrown their need for milk.

When I launched all my children, I rewarded myself with celery-green carpet in the spare bedroom. It was my Olympic gold medal, my Oscar, my Emmy, my Reader's Digest sweepstakes. I had done it and this was my reward.

Three months later, one of my children moved back with, among other things, a set of drums that leaked oil. My celery-green carpet looked like a leftover.

When he left, we had it cleaned and began again. The next prodigal son brought a dog that had a sofa wish, a car that was not garage trained and leaked oil, and he used towels like they were nose tissues that popped up automatically in a box to be disposed of.

The next one to return let me use my own phone but kept hours like a fireman.

One night my husband and I sat down and tried to figure out what the attraction of living at home is — other than free laundry, free rent, free toiletries, security, love, a permanent address for mail, unlimited storage, financing and loans, convention rooms for private parties and entertaining, and guest privileges. I snapped my fingers. "I've got it! It's the refrigerator that beckons and calls them home. Without it, nothing else would keep them here."

We decided to stop treating the kids as guests and go back to eating the way we wanted to eat. We stocked the refrigerator with cottage cheese, fresh green vegetables, plain yogurt, unsalted butter and blue milk. We bought bran cereal, wheat germ, dietary fruit and did away with the sugar bowl.

As the last one left, we heard him mumble, "I'm going anywhere, just so long as they don't refrigerate their bread!"

We haven't seen them since.

PAN party candidate for governor of Chihuahua, Francisco Barrio Terrazas, addresses supporters during takeover of the Bridge of the Americas.

Bridge blockaded to protest election

CIUDAD JUAREZ, Mexico (AP) — About 5,000 people, mostly supporters of Mexico's main opposition party, blocked a bridge linking Texas and Mexico today to demand the annulment of an election they said was marred by fraud.

The blockade of the Bridge of the Americas began at 10:30 p.m. EDT Thursday and was expected to end 24 hours later. The bridge links El Paso, Texas, and Ciudad Juarez, the largest city in the state of Chihuahua.

On the Mexican side, a helicopter briefly hovered over the bridge. On the American side, more than 60 U.S. Border Patrol agents, double the usual number, were posted.

At issue is the July 6 state election in Chihuahua, Mexico's largest state.

The governing Institutional Revolutionary Party, or PRI, was declared the winner in the governor's race, in all 14 state legislative elections and 65 of 67 mayoral races. The party never lost a major election in its 57-year-history.

The National Action Party, or PAN, alleged that the election was marred by massive, government-instituted fraud.

The demonstrators had walked to the bridge from a rally at nearby Chamizal Park where 150 PAN women ended a 48-hour fast.

Francisco Barrio, PAN's gubernatorial candidate, said at the rally that the national government was stalling and not taking the party's demands for new elections seriously.

Barrio who resigned as mayor of Juarez to be able to run for governor said he met with government officials in Mexico City on Tuesday. He said they were not convinced there was enough proof of electoral fraud.

"If during the discussions all the proof we showed was not enough, then we are going to take measures of political pressure to defend our rights with the utmost energy," Barrio said.

Among those blocking the bridge were Barrio; his wife Hortensia who participated in the women's fast; Gustavo Elizondo, who ran for mayor of Juarez; and his wife Lourdes, who also fasted with the PAN women.

Sometime before midnight, about 500 additional people arrived at the bridge with a message of support from two men who have been on a three-week fast at another city park, also protesting alleged electoral fraud.

The new arrivals were met at the bridge with by cheering applause and the waving of thousands of flags bearing the party logo.

Brazilian bankers say measures don't deal with nation's deficit

SAO PAULO, Brazil (AP) — Bankers and businessmen said the new economic plan announced this week by President Jose Sarney is needed to offset a consumer spending spree, but fails to deal with Brazil's soaring multibillion-dollar deficit.

According to the latest government figures, Brazil's federal deficit for 1986 is un fficially estimated at 4 percent of ti e gross national product, or a minimum of $250 billion.

On Wednesday, Sarney issued a presidential decree aimed at reining in the spending that includes 28 percent taxes on luxury goods such as cars and foreign airfares.

Commenting on the presidential decree, an American banker on Thursday said it appeared the government was "hesitating in dealing with the federal deficit, and until it does, the success of the Cruzado plan will be in doubt."

The Cruzado plan was an economic stablization program Sarney introduced Feb. 28 to curb a runaway inflation that neared 500 percent annually.

That plan included a wage and price freeze, elimination of cost-of-living adjustments and creation of a new currency, the cruzado.

Since then, inflation has totaled only 3.38 percent. But the government felt the program was being undermined by increased consumption. Brazilians, taking advantage of the price freeze, bought cars, home appliances and started traveling abroad in record numbers.

The American banker, speaking condition of anonymity, said the government "still has not taken steps to reduce spending, which must be done to lick inflation once and for all."

Ercole Carpentiere, executive vice-president of the American Chamber of Commerce, said the new measures were necessary to control the increased consumption which threatened to rekindle inflation.

"But what still remains unclear is how the measures will...help solve the federal deficit problem," he said.

Carpentiere also criticized the use of a presidential decree to introduce the new measures.

Opposition scoffs at Duarte's debate plan

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (AP) — Opposition leaders are scoffing at an offer by President Jose Napoleon Duarte to debate El Salvador's guerrillas in Nicaragua at the office of the closed opposition newspaper La Prensa.

Roberto Viera, a government spokesman, said Thursday that Duarte's plan was a counterproposal to the rebels' request for a public debate in El Salvador before the two sides resume peace talks that stalled in 1984.

The talks are aimed at ending a war in Central America's smallest but most densely populated country that has claimed 61,000 lives since it started 6½ years ago.

Duarte has said he wants any debate to cover the themes of peace and democracy in Central America.

He also wants the debate broadcast throughout the region and published in Nicaragua's daily newspaper La Prensa, Viera said. Nicaragua's Sandinista government closed the newspaper last month, accusing it of being a mouthpiece for the Reagan administration, which supports the anti-government rebels.

Duarte also called for Nicaragua's Archbishop Miguel Obando y Bravo to moderate the debate. The Roman Catholic Church represents the strongest opposition to the Nicaraguan government.

There was no immediate response to Duarte's plan from the leftist rebels

Heart surgery casts doubt on second term with U.N.

Perez de Cuellar

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — With the election for U.N. secretary-general only months away, Javier Perez de Cellar's sudden heart surgery raises serious questions about his availability for a second term.

Until his quadruple coronary bypass operation on Thursday, the 66-year-old United Nations chief had been viewed as likely to succeed himself — despite his own disclaimers of having second-term ambitions.

"Just about all the Western countries have told him they'd like to see him stay on," a Western diplomatic source said. "There is no visible alternative."

The Soviet bloc also was expected to support the low-keyed Peruvian diplomat, who has tread cautiously between the two superpowers and avoided controversial stands.

Perez de Cuellar's first five-year term expires Dec. 31 and the election process for secretary-general will begin sometime in the fall.

A key U.N. aide said any speculation on the secretary-general's future was premature. "It will depend on what the physicians tell him."

U.N. spokesman Francois Giuliani said Perez de Cuellar was expected back on the job in a few weeks and "should lead a completely normal life," after his four-hour operation at New York's Mount Sinai Medical Center.

As of early today, the hospital reported he was listed in "good" condition.

Perez de Cuellar, the oldest of the five men to serve in the top U.N. post, had been pursuing a grueling travel schedule.

Seemingly peaceful Pauley thrives on career

By FRED ROTHENBERG

Jane Pauley

NEW YORK (AP) — Wednesday, she covered the royal wedding for the "Today" show. Next week, she'll cavort with her 2½-year-old twins and prepare for the late-August arrival of her third child. Jane Pauley, seemingly at peace with herself, says she thrives on career and family, not one or the other.

Pauley is set to begin an 11-week maternity leave. When she returns to the flowery "Today" set in early October, she'll celebrate her 10th anniversary on NBC's top-rated, wake-up program.

"It's a miracle I was given 10 years on this job," said Pauley, 35, who has a new contract that runs into 1991.

These morning jobs can be killers. If crazy hours don't do it, fickle ratings will. Just look at the musical chairs on the "CBS Morning News" for 30 years. But Pauley has been beating the sun up for a decade because she has the right emotional make-up.

"One of my strong points is that I appear to be pretty together," Pauley said, swaying contentedly in her rocking chair during a recent interview. "I don't wear my neuroses on my sleeve. I'm a pretty straightforward person who doesn't mind taking a few shots at herself. I don't mind admitting that I'm perfectly normal and completely insecure from time to time."

In previous years, she'd wake up some mornings and fret — "'Jane Pauley on the 'Today' show, who are you kidding?' — but it's been several years since I've had that kind of flutter of panic," she said. Confidence in herself, co-anchor Bryant Gumbel, the "Today" staff and the broadcast changed that.

"You know if you blow an interview there's always another, and there's always tomorrow," she said.

Pauley and Gumbel were named 1985's co-broadcasters of the year by the International Radio and Television Society, something unimaginable 10 years ago when one critic said the new "Today" woman had the intelligence of a canteloupe; another called her a "hood ornament."

"It really is quite profound validation, not vindication. I didn't long to get back at anybody," Pauley said. "But I did crave validation and acceptance by my peers. The award said that I had it and, by implication, that I've had it for some time."

NBC executives believe Pauley returned from her last maternity leave in 1984 a more relaxed, more assured broadcaster, "one who was willing to risk the threes for the 10s and not willing to settle for just fivess," said "Today" executive producer Steve Friedman.

Friedman contends that Pauley's family life with the twins and her husband, "Doonesbury" cartoonist Garry Trudeau, gave her a release from the job, and at the same time, confirmed that she wasn't cut out for full-time motherhood.

"I'm just not that good at staying home," she said. "I admire some friends who have made that choice and do it really well. I wouldn't be bad. I'd be mediocre at best."

But Pauley maintains that her on-air improvement pre-dates her maternity leave. The publicity surrounding her twins and comeback merely spurred another look from viewers and colleagues.

"Those same people may not have noticed Jane Pauley since she was 25," she said.

In 1972, Pauley, an Indiana native, started as a reporter at an Indianapolis TV station. Three years later, she became anchor at NBC's Chicago station, before winning the "Today" job in 1976, replacing Barbara Walters. Despite Pauley's youth, she had more on-air studio experience than most of the other candidates.

"That wouldn't be true anymore. Women have had chances to anchor," Pauley said. "There's now a great reservoir of mature women, talented women. To hire a 25-year-old now would be laughable."

Times have changed. In 1960, when Florence Henderson was on "Today," NBC hid her pregnancy behind clotheslines and parasols and wouldn't let her mention it on the air. Pauley's pregnancy has come up casually on the show, and she hasn't missed any work because of it.

"When I had the so-called morning sickness, it didn't bother me much in the morning," said Pauley. "I literally felt best when I was on the air. The real difficulty is at home keeping up with twin 2-year-olds."

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — "Aliens" scared "The Karate Kid, Part II" out of first place in the nation's theaters, earning $10 million its first weekend in release.

"Aliens," a sequel to the 1979 science fiction-horror hit "Alien," again features Sigourney Weaver, and the 20th Century Fox offering has been boosted by generally favorable reviews.

In third place was "Ruthless People," a comedy from Disney's Touchstone unit, with a weekend take of $4.5 million.

Another comedy, Rodney Dangerfield's "Back to School," dropped a notch from third to fourth, with $4.25 in weekend ticket sales.

ENTERTAINMENT

Many top names refuse to sell what they've been paid to make

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — To hype or not to hype? That is the question.

Whether or not a star promotes a film can often mean a profit or loss for a movie. But many of today's top names refuse to help sell the product they've been paid handsomely to make. They find publicity bothersome or beneath them.

"Legal Eagles" is an example. Universal Pictures reportedly invested $33 million in the Ivan Reitman comedy-adventure. Even though Robert Redford probably received his regular salary of $5 million and Debra Winger her $2 million, both have long-standing policies not to give interviews. The studio had allocated $1 million for promotion.

Sometimes a lack of star sell can be overcome with rave reviews.

The verdict on "Legal Eagles," though, has been sharply divided. New York reviews ranged from "thrill-packed humdinger" to "delightfully giddy romantic thriller." Westerners called the film "murder in the worst degree" and "the Spruce Goose of comedies."

Universal faced a similar situation last year with "Out of Africa," for which neither Meryl Streep nor Redford would do interviews. But the film drew excellent reviews plus an Academy Award for best picture and managed an $85 million domestic gross.

In the big-studio era, all Hollywood stars except Greta Garbo took part in the publicity whirl.

Many of today's stars find publicity bothersome or demeaning and refuse to talk to the press. Some behave rudely and others even try physical violence.

Burt Reynolds has said that he's virtually abandoned interviews because of the reporting of National Inquirer, People magazine and others. Sean Penn was sued recently by a freelance photographer in Nashville, Tenn., who alleged he was beaten by Penn. Another suit was threatened in Hong Kong by a journalist who claimed he was assaulted when he tried to photograph Penn and his wife, rock star Madonna.

Other stars will permit limited publicity for pet projects, such as Barbra Streisand with "Yentl," Dustin Hoffman with "Death of a Salesman," Meryl Streep with "Plenty" and Katharine Hepburn with "Grace Quigley."

How important is a star's participation in the selling of a film?

"I think it's imperative," says Dick Delson, independent publicist formerly with Disney. "My theory of publicity is that it's like blitzkrieg warfare. Just as the Germans crowded the roads during the invasion of Czechoslovakia, I try to crowd the media with awareness of a movie."

Delson did just that for "Rambo: First Blood II," exposing Sylvester Stallone on virtually every major media.

"An advertisement is only a billboard, it provides no real reason to see a picture unless people have heard something about it," he said. "That's why publicity is essential. And you get it for nothing. When you get a five-part interview on 'The Today Show' and three parts on 'Good Morning America,' as Sly did for 'Rambo,' that's something money can't buy. Not when advertising costs $40,000 a minute."

Arkansas' Fouke Monster a hoax?

FOUKE, Ark. (AP) — Fifteen summers have drifted by since giant footprints generated international publicity about a hairy, pigpen-smelling critter with eyes of fire.

Despite the offer of a $10,000 reward, the Fouke Monster was neither trapped nor photographed. The reported sightings captured the imaginations of students, who had monster drawing contests, and one teacher who said the creature should be protected as an endangered species.

Descriptions were imprecise. Depending on the source, the red-eyed monster was a howling ape, a swamp man or a country cousin of the Abominable Snowman.

Frank Schambagh, an archaeologist at Southern Arkansas University in Magnolia, has been debunking the monster since the three-toed tracks were found in June 1971 on the edge of a soybean field. "There's never been any question in my mind that it was always a hoax," he said in a recent interview.

The reported encounters were fleeting in the town, which is about 10 miles from Texas and about 20 miles from Louisiana. A carload of Texarkana residents said the monster dashed across U.S. 71 one late spring evening. A deer hunter said she spotted the creature in heavy timber. One man moved his family to another town after what he described as a terrifying encounter with the monster that sent him screaming through a closed door.

Supposedly, a town wit pointed to a liquor bottle when asked where he had spotted the monster.

When size 14EE tracks were found by a farmer among the sprouting beans, Fouke Monster fever became an epidemic.

VIRGIL ROBERTS, mayor of the town of 509, says the monster was a hyped hoax. "I'm convinced beyond any reasonable doubt that was a man-made track," Roberts said as he sipped a soda at City Hall.

The monster-generated dollars were real.

Roberts' wife made a plaster cast of the footprint and turned out more than 5,000 miniatures, complete with handpainted "Greetings From Boggy Creek." Roberts says she sold them to a distributor for 50 cents each.

A low-budget movie entitled "The Legend Of Boggy Creek" made a tidy profit and launched the career of director Charles B. Pierce. The movie starred Fouke residents. Recent efforts to contact Pierce were unsuccesful. The Arkansas Motion Picture office and the Directors Guild of America had no current address or telephone number for Pierce.

A resident who became disgruntled with the production company, J.E. "Smokey" Crabtree, filed suit against Pierce and the movie's financial backers. Crabtree published a book about his experiences in 1974. It's still sold at a hamburger stand in town. Crabtree, asked recently by telephone about the monster, said his book would answer questions and declined further comment. The book says Crabtree's son fired at the monster in 1965 but the creature kept coming and the youth retreated.

The paperback book and the Boggy Creek Legend pizza on the menu of the Fouke Family restaurant are about the only monster references to be found in the Miller County community these days.

Roberts says the tracks were a publicity stunt. "I feel like somebody walked out in there with stilts on. When I was a boy, we called them tomwalkers. I think they were trying to get attention here. Maybe they thought they could make a little money on it, I don't know...I suspect there was several involved. I won't call their names because some people have passed on," he said.

ROBERTS SAID it's natural for a prankster to boast, but that hasn't happened in Fouke. "I'm kind of puzzled about it," Roberts said. "I try to downplay it everywhere I go. It's kind of embarassing, a little bit, when I go off to a meeting like the Arkansas Municipal League and they'll ask about the monster."

There have been no sightings in at least three years, Roberts said. "I won't say all was intoxicated when they saw it, but some did see something that, well, they saw more than actually was there," he said. "I never did believe it from the day I heard it. I've lived here 65 years and traveled just-about every spot in south Miller County. I've never seen anything."

Chief Deputy H.L. Phillips of the Miller County Sheriff's Department said he hasn't taken a monster call in years. "I don't even recall the last one I got," he said. "We don't even keep a file anymore. A few years ago, someone called and said they'd found a cave along the Sulphur River where the monster was supposedly living. Nothing there. I don't believe in it. But I'd say you don't argue with people who say they've seen it. Many were respectable and responsible folks."

"There are no higher primates, other than man, in the Americas," Schambagh said. "Scientific evidence is totally against it. It's just mass hysteria. I don't think that many people actually believed in it. People see things when their imaginations are excited. They see things, coincidences come together. People see flying saucers."

Former Fouke Mayor James D. Larey was one of three townspeople named to verify the capture of any monster by a reward-seeker. "There's always joking about it from time to time, you know. Somebody will mention it and somebody will laugh. I don't think the people believed there was a monster as such, but there's always a few people who believe. For a while, there was lots of people talking. I had a bundle of 700 or 800 letters at one time, they were wanting to bring dogs and guns and everything to find it."

Most people who have claimed to see the monster, Larey said, "have quieted down, some have passed away, faded out. There's no advertising or anything anymore."

It was 15 summers ago that plaster casts were made of three-toed, size 14EE footprints purported to be those of the mysterious Fouke Monster. No monster was ever captured or photographed, and there have been no reported sightings of the creature in recent years.

Southwest's clean air turning brown, dirty

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) — Like many before them, Janice and Dennis Hall packed their lives into a U-Haul and, on doctors' advice, headed from Ohio to the desert Southwest seeking clean air and a fresh start for their asthmatic son.

But when the Halls topped the mountains that surround Phoenix, they saw a yellow-brown cloud of pollutants hanging over the city they had thought was pure.

"It was devastating," Mrs. Hall recalled. "My husband didn't even have a job and I thought, 'This is what we've come to? Look at this place.'"

Smog is something Los Angeles and Northern industrial cities have long battled. Now, after decades of lax regulation and unbridled growth, many Sunbelt cities are waking to the noxious hangover of pollution.

Phoenix now has the worst carbon monoxide pollution in the nation, according to the Environmental Protection Agency. In the winter, the "Valley of the Sun" often lies beneath the ugly shadow of desert dust, engine exhaust, ozone and other harmful pollutants.

"We still have people moving to this area believing it is a better area (environmentally). It's the Southwest, wide open space, and they assume it's got to be a healthy place to live. That is not the case," said Jay Schied, president of the Arizona Lung Association in Phoenix.

Other areas along the nation's southwestern tier, places as diverse as Arizona's tranquil desert and Louisiana's murky bayous, are also grappling with pollution troubles — smelters, waste pits, sewage systems, toxic dumps, wood smoke and clogged freeways.

Those public sores and blemishes not only threaten the environment, experts say, but also undermine selling points such as the region's image of robust health and its relaxed low-regulation, pro-business attitude.

"There are now types of pollution in all the major Western cities," said Larry Gordon, the Albuquerque, N.M., health director. "That's what happens when you get several hundred thousand people together doing their things."

The problems in the nation's new pollution belt are as varied as the geography:

— In Arizona, carbon monoxide in excess of federal standards has brought a threat to cut $500 million in highway funds. This spring the state approved a tougher auto emissions testing program. But a copper smelter with no pollution control equipment spews tons of sulphur dioxide into the desert. To close the plant would cost jobs.

— In New Mexico, the EPA has withheld $320,000 in anti-pollution funds because of Albuquerque's poor air quality. The city has resisted federal pressure for an auto emissions program.

— In Texas, rapid urban growth has stretched sewage treatment plants beyond capacity. Raw sewage is sometimes dumped into rivers; fines are sometimes assessed.

— In Oklahoma and Arkansas, authorities are struggling to clean up chemical waste sites, some of which have been leaking for years.

— And in Louisiana, decades of unregulated oil and chemical industry activities have left hundreds of hazardous waste sites and numerous polluting plants. The sites, state officials say, are threatening the groundwater, but their expensive cleanups must wait because of a state budget crisis.

Ben Hall, 6, looks up from coloring while receiving treatment on his portable breathing aid machine at his Phoenix, Ariz., home earlier this month.

"I don't think we've even seen the tip of the iceberg on environmental cleanup in Louisiana," said Patricia Norton, secretary of the Louisiana Department of Environmental Quality. "I don't think it's too late yet, but in a few more years, we'll be past the point of no return."

It was the reputation for clean air that drew the Halls, and thousands before them, to Phoenix. But the explosive growth of the last 15 years, coupled with inadequate highway and mass transit systems, has tainted the city's air.

Phoenix has carbon monoxide, dust and ozone pollution that's often more than double the healthy level established under 1977 amendments to the 1970 Clean Air Act, officials said. EPA data show Phoenix has the nation's most carbon monoxide violations, with Los Angeles and Denver ranked second and third, said Imants Krese, the EPA district program manager in San Francisco.

Carbon monoxide comes primarily from vehicle exhausts and can threaten people who have heart disease by inhibiting the blood's ability to carry oxygen. The EPA allows cities only one violation per year; in 1984, one "hot spot" monitor located near a busy Phoenix intersection peaked above the federal standard 119 times.

Hindu passengers slain

AMRITSAR, India (AP) — Masked Sikhs halted an intercity bus in Punjab state today, pulled off all the Hindu passengers and killed at least 13 of them in a hail of automatic gunfire, state police said.

Seven passengers were wounded and listed in critical condition at a hospital in Muktsar, a town 96 miles southwest of the Sikh holy city of Amritsar, police said.

The Sikh passengers aboard the bus were not harmed, police said.

According to police, the attack occurred at dawn at a railroad crossing outside Muktsar. The bus was en route to the state capital of Chandigarh, 140 miles away.

Survivors described the assailants as young men with traditional Sikh turbans and beards, their faces partially covered by mufflers.

16 injured by grenade

TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) — A grenade thrown from a rootop Thursday in the occupied West Bank town of Jericho wounded 12 Israelis and four Palestinians, military sources said. Two Syrian-backed Palestinian terrorist groups claimed responsibility for the attack.

The head of the emergency ward at Jerusalem's Hadassah Hospital, Dr. Chaim Granot, said three of the Israelis were wounded seriously.

A Palestinian resident of Jericho was hospitalized with light wounds, and the three other Palestinian victims were sent home after receiving first aid, said the military sources, who spoke on condition of anonymity.

Security forces set up roadblocks throughout and around the Biblical town 22 miles east of Tel Aviv.

The Israeli victims were among a group of 25 teenagers from northern Israel on vacation in the Jordan River valley. The attack came as they were returning rented bicycles to a shop in Jericho after a tour of the town.

Jericho, believed to be the about 9,000 years old, is a popular tourist attraction.

Jet crashes after show

HAVERFORDWEST, Wales (AP) — A U.S. Air Force Phantom jet crashed into the sea after taking part in an air show Thursday, killing the two crewmen. A witness said it narrowly missed crowded Newgale Beach on the Welsh coast.

An Air Force spokesman said the plane, from the American base at Alconbury in Cambridgeshire, north of London, was returning to base after an aerial display. It plunged into St. Bride's Bay off the Brawdy Royal Air Force base near this town in southwestern Wales.

Lt. Col. Bob Brus identified the pilot as Capt. Mark S. Makowski of Wilmington, Del., but the second officer's identity was withheld pending notification of his family. Both bodies were recovered.

Brus said the accident's cause was unknown and an investigation was being conducted.

Witnesses said the jet was making a tight turn when there appeared to be an explosion near the tail section.

"The plane was turning, banking almost vertically, no more than 50 to 100 feet above the sea," one said, "then there was a vivid flash from its tail and it dipped towards the water."

Chilean burning detailed

SANTIAGO, Chile (AP) — A lawyer insisted Thursday that soldiers not only set a young couple on fire earlier this month, but beat them with their rifle butts to keep them from extinguishing the flames.

Hector Salazar, who represents the victims' families, issued a five-page statement with a dramatic account of the July 2 incident. On Wednesday, a judge ruled in favor of the government's version, that the couple started the fire.

Rodrigo Rojas de Negri, a 19-year-old photographer living in Washington, D.C., who was visiting his native Chile, died four days later of his burns. A female companion, Carmen Gloria Quintana, 18, remains in serious condition at a Santiago hospital.

The incident occurred in a Santiago slum during the first of two days of a national strike called to protest the 13-year rule of military strongman President Augusto Pinochet.

German firm bombed

FRIEDRICHSHAFEN, West Germany (AP) — A car bomb exploded early today in front of an administrative building of the Dornier aeronautics company, shattering scores of windows but causing no injuries, police said.

A spokesman for the chief federal prosecutor's office in Karlsruhe, Karl-Heinz Foerster, said "militant supporters" of the leftist Red Army Faction terrorist group were suspected in the blast.

The bomb exploded at 4:51 a.m. in a parking lot in front of Dornier's five-story building in Immenstaad, a western suburb of Friedrichshafen near the Swiss border. Police said the blast broke about 250 windows.

Officials had no details about the explosives or the car used for the attack.

Foerster said a letter left at the scene was signed "fighting unit" and bore a red star.

The Red Army Faction symbol is a red star with a machine gun in the middle.

Israel's Reform Jews find treatment less than 'kosher'

By MARY SEDOR

JERUSALEM (AP) — Reform Jews in Israel complain of religious discrimination they say can lead to problems in such matters as marriage or burial.

Orthodox Jews control all matters of personal status in Israel. Reform rabbis are not permitted to perform marriages or conversions and can rarely officiate at funerals.

"Jews living in the diaspora (other places) have more religious freedom than Jews living in Israel," said Rabbi Hank Skirball, an American immigrant and one of a very few Reform rabbis in Israel. "Non-Jews living in Israel have more freedom."

As an example, he cited instances in which Jews unable or unwilling to have Orthodox weddings must go abroad for civil ceremonies.

Of Israel's 3.5 million Jews, only about 5,000 are Reform Jews. The United States has more than 1.5 million Reform Jews and hundreds of thousands more live in other parts of the world.

Reform Judaism originated in 19th-century Germany in reaction to perceived excesses of the Orthodox establishment and as a way of integrating the Jewish community more fully into European society of that time.

Most Orthodox today still recognize the Reformists as Jews, but contend they have cut themselves off from the historical religion by ignoring Jewish law and tradition, such as Sabbath observance and kosher food.

One major point of contention is conversion.

"Reform leads to assimilation in terrible dimensions, to mixed marriages (in which) the ceremony is performed by a Reform rabbi and a Christian priest," said Menachem Weinstock, an aide to Yosef Burg, religious affairs minister.

"Those who hold onto Reform will one day find themselves or their children outside the Jewish framework," Weinstock maintained. He added that, to the Orthodox, religion is not just a framework for prayer but a set of obligations to a way of life.

Menachem Porush, a member of the ultra-Orthodox Agudat Yisrael Party in Israel's parliament, the Knesset, was even more forceful.

"They are not Jews at all and they themselves declare that they do not conduct themselves according to Halakha (Jewish law). Sabbath with them isn't Sabbath, kosher isn't kosher, and they are ready to recognize as a Jew a person with only a Jewish father," he said in an interview. He was referring to Jewish law that says Jewish identity is passed through the maternal line.

Summit nets few results

By RUTH SINAI

TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) — Prime Minister Shimon Peres returned from his Moroccan summit with few, if any, concrete results, a victim of the political constraints imposed on him by his coalition agreement with the right-wing Likud bloc.

The Labor Party leader is also hamstrung by his scheduled October job switch with Likud leader Yitzhak Shamir, now foreign minister. The change is mandated by the power-sharing agreement forged in 1984 after an election stalemate between Labor and Likud.

Peres' efforts during 21 months in office have failed to yield any significant peace moves in indirect contacts with Jordan, and his sole open meeting with an Arab leader, Morocco's King Hassan II, may have come too late to result in any progress.

"Now that Peres and his party are about to lose even more of their influence on government policy, it is hard to see how they can bring about any revolutions," the weekly Koteret Rashit said in an editorial.

A noncommital joint statement issued in Rabat, Morocco and Jerusalem at the end of two days of talks reflected the fact that Peres was not at liberty to bargain on his own.

It said the two leaders held in-depth discussions, with Hassan viewing the so-called Fez plan as the basis for future negotiations and Peres clarifying his position on the proposal.

The Fez plan, adopted in 1982 by an Arab League summit held in the Moroccan city of the same name, calls for the creation of a Palestinian state and for Israeli withdrawal from all territories it captured in the 1967 war with Egypt, Jordan and Syria.

Peres told reporters upon returning to Israel that he "tried to speak within the framework of our government policy," which calls for peace talks with Arab states without preconditions.

Hassan, in a televised speech to his nation, said Peres had been unwilling to make concessions and the talks did not yield solid progress toward peace.

Peres' left-leaning Labor Party is on record as being willing to relinquish some territory in return for peace, but it views predominantly Palestinian East Jerusalem, which the Fez document says Israel should give up, as an integral part of the Jewish state.

Likud, which was in power in 1982 and rejected the Fez plan, opposes all territorial compromise. As Peres was holding his first round of talks with Hassan, Shamir was in the occupied West Bank urging the creation of more Jewish settlements. Some 55,000 Jewish settlers live in the West Bank among 800,000 Palestinians.

Under the Likud-Labor agreement, Peres cannot pursue territorial concessions without reference to the Cabinet, which effectively bars the move without Likud support.

Likud leaders reacted to Peres' trip with measured praise, reluctant to completely endorse it yet unwilling to criticize the premier's initiative.

"Every overt trip by an Israeli prime minister to an Arab nation is welcome," said Likud's Housing Minister David Levy. The Moroccan-born minister warned, however, that "we must not develop illusions, and must read Hassan's words for what they are."
