Effort to replace air traffic controllers begun

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration, saying it considers the air traffic controllers strike over, is looking for replacements for the thousands of controllers who continued picketing for a fifth day today.

The Federal Aviation Administration, which reported 75 percent of all regularly scheduled air traffic flying, continued the massive task of sending out dismissal notices to the strikers. Letters eventually will be sent to about 12,000 controllers, none of whom will work again for the government as long as President Reagan is in office, officials said.

"We see this as the first day in our effort to rebuild the traffic controller system in the country," Transportation Secretary Drew Lewis said Thursday night. The job, he acknowledged, might take two to three years and plans are being made to handle reduced air traffic for a year or more.

He said he considers the strike, which began at 7 a.m. Monday, over, although he acknowledged that striking controllers picketed as man airports and control centers around the country.

Deputy White House press secretary Larry Speakes said Reagan was "very encouraged by our ability to operate the system and the level at which we can operate."

Speakes said the White House also considers the confrontation with the controllers over and added that he knows "of no possibility there could be any change in our position."

FAA Administrator J. Lynn Helms said 75 percent of regularly scheduled commercial flights were operating, and he said he is freezing that level of operations until Sept. 8.

After that, a six-month flight schedule will be put in place aimed at increasing flights to 80 percent or 90 percent of normal volume toward the end of the year, he said.

But the controllers showed no signs of capitulating.

"We are more firm in our convictions and more determined in our resolve than we were when the strike started," union president Robert E. Poli declared as he visited a controller who had been jailed in nearby Virginia because of the strike.

"They can put our people in shackles and put them in jail. We will not go back to work," Poli said.

Administration officials said that option is no longer open to the strikers. They repeated there will be no amnesty and, as of 11 a.m. EDT Thursday, all striking controllers were considered subject for dismissal with no opportunity to return.

The air traffic system continued to be handled by about one-third of the 17,000 controllers who normally operate the centers and airport towers around the country.

Union members charged that the reduced staff — supervisors, nonstriking controllers and some military controllers — threatened safety.

The labor movement, meanwhile, began to rally behind the Professional Air Traffic Controllers Organization but stopped short of agreeing to a PATCO plea that other unions honor their picket lines.

AFL-CIO President Lane Kirkland said the 15-million-member federation supports the controllers but was leaving it to individual unions whether to honor the pickets.

Despite Reagan's 48-hour ultimatum early in the week to return to work or be fired, only about 1,000 of the controllers that walked out Monday are back on the job.

Geared for landings

Pilots report 'it's never been better'

By GAIL BURKE
Staff Writer

"It's never been smoother or safer than it is now."

That's what pilots who fly into Midland Regional Airport are saying about the situation in which supervisors are substituting for air traffic controllers.

Since Midland's 18 members of the Professional Air Traffic Controllers Organization left their jobs in an illegal walkout Monday, the public has been concerned about the safety of flying.

But Thursday afternoon, two American Airlines captains, Reo Rood and Frank Covi, based in Buffalo, N.Y., said Midland's airport "has never been better."

"We had excellent cooperation and handling from the tower when we came in," Covi said. "I'll tell you, there's a female controller up there today and she is proficient and professional. Things have never been better."

"There isn't the slightest question of safety, the situation is even better than before," Rood noted.

"Nobody should feel intimidated; we have no concerns with the safety conditions in the tower — it's safe," he added.

During the week, Midland striker-controllers have insisted that flying conditions at the airport have been unsafe.

However, Col. Wilson Banks, aviation director for the city, said Bill Hill, chief tower supervisor, would not take any risks. In fact, Banks said two non-union controllers from Lubbock came to Midland Thursday so the airport's controllers could be relieved.

And passengers are beginning to come back, according to spokesmen with the five airlines — American, Braniff, Continental, Southwest and Texas International. All of them reported passenger loads were increasing. And Texas International, who shut down Midland operations completely, resumed its daily flights.

Similarly, Continental, who had cut back originally to four flights a day, resumed its full service of six scheduled flights today. Braniff, however, has decided to continue with three flights instead of the original four. American and Southwest have been in full service since the strike began.

Jack McAdams of American Airlines said passenger loads had come up from Tuesday's 30 percent to a 70 percent passenger load Thursday night. Nationwide, American Airlines flights are up over 70 percent.

Although airline officials blamed the decrease in passenger loads early in the week on publicity, the managers agreed that Thursday's picket demonstration didn't affect business.

Fifteen of Midland's PATCO members came down from the union's Lubbock headquarters to walk a picket line at the airport, but were prohibited from picketing until they could first obtain a permit from the city.

They returned to Lubbock to resume discussion on the recent decision by President Reagan to fire all striking controllers who did not report to work by a Thursday morning deadline.

Although airline officials hoped all 18 controllers would be "officially fired on Thursday," Banks said Hill would issue notices of dismissal to the striking controllers this morning.

Unemployment rate defies predictions, falls to 7 percent

WASHINGTON (AP) — A large surge in jobs among adult men sent the nation's unemployment rate falling to 7 percent in July, the lowest level in 15 months, the government reported today.

Despite mounting signs that the economy is weakening, the jobless rate fell for a second month in a row, defying predictions of rising unemployment that had been made by most economic forecasters.

The jobless rate, which stood at 7.6 percent in May, ebbed to 7.3 percent in June. Until July, unemployment had not been as low as 7 percent since April 1980, when the economy plunged into a deep downturn.

The Labor Department said total employment in July rose 570,000, the largest monthly increase in more than three years. Most of the gains took place among adult men, particularly those between the ages of 20 through 24, the department said.

The number of unemployed people declined by 282,000, to 7.5 million, in July. The jobless rate declined for all major groups of workers except adult women. Unemployment among this group rose from 6.5 percent in June to 6.7 percent last month.

Overall, 99 million Americans held jobs in July out of a total civilian labor force of 106.5 million, the government reported.

While inflation has been dropping from the double-digit range in recent months, unemployment had remained stuck around 7.5 percent for more than a year and most economists in and out of government expect the jobless rate to rise because of the downturn that appears to have begun early this year. A few economists expect the rate to rise as high as 8 percent.

July's figures, however, provide no indication that those predictions will come to pass.

"The employment situation showed definite signs of strength in July and, except for the construction industry, the improvement was fairly widespread," said Janet L. Norwood, commissioner of the Bureau of Labor Statistics.

"This is good news in the labor market," she said.

Although reports indicated the economy was weakening in the second quarter, business executives were not reducing their payrolls in July, Ms. Norwood said.

She speculated this may mean the executives want to assess the impact of President Reagan's tax cut program, approved this week by Congress. They also may want to retain their employees in anticipation of a promised buildup of U.S. defense forces, she said.

Deborah Klein, an economist at the Labor Department, said the latest figures should not necessarily be viewed as the start of a lasting decline in unemployment, but so far, she said, the employment market is not bearing out indications of an economic downturn.

"It looks like employers are not letting people go," she said. "Either they don't feel the decline or they are waiting to see."

Over the last year, total employment has increased by 1.9 million, with all the rise accounted for by adult men and women, the government said.

Dallas black leaders endorse redistricting effort

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — A congressional redistricting plan that would deny Republicans any gains in the Texas delegation while drawing a minority district in Dallas has won the endorsement of a group of Dallas black leaders.

The plan was expected to get a final vote in the House redistricting committee today, which would set up floor action in the House on Saturday.

Meanwhile, the leader of the House Democratic Caucus sought a way to eliminate Congressman Martin Frost's objections to his proposed district and, thereby, gain the support of another senator for the loyalist Democrat redistricting plan.

Rep. Bob Bush, D-Sherman, spent most of the afternoon with Frost in the office of Sen. Oscar Mauzy, D-Dallas, whose district lies mostly within Frost's congressional district.

Bush said earlier that "15½ senators" had expressed support for the Democrat plan, with Mauzy obviously the one who was halfhearted because of Frost's objections.

Sixteen senators are a majority, and Bush hopes to gain leverage in the House by demonstrating Senate support for the loyalist Democrat remap.

Bush said Frost's problems were "minor" and involved only a couple of census tracts.

Texas will have 27 United States representatives in the next Congress, three more than now, because of population growth shown by the 1980 census.

The hardcore Democrats' plan probably would result in the election of 22 Democrats and five Republicans, the same number the GOP has now.

Gov. Bill Clements said Thursday he would veto the plan because it divides Dallas County among five districts and takes Ellis and Navarro counties from Congressman Phill Gramm and gives them to Frost.

He contended the diehard Democrats were "out to get" Gramm, a former Texas A&M professor who helped President Reagan win congressional approval of federal budget cuts.

Bush said the new district would not hurt Gramm's re-election chances.

He also indicated he was not convinced the governor would veto a pro-Democrat redistricting bill if one were passed by both houses and sent to his desk.

"We have a governor who, like many other politicians, changes his mind. I certainly hope so. The burden will be on him whether to change his mind," Bush said.

He's running to Dallas for epilepsy

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

While some people shudder at the very idea of driving from El Paso to Dallas, Richard Hackney runs the distance.

The roughest part is behind him, he says, even as he looks forward to the end.

"The only thing I really want at the finish line is a can of beer and an apple pie," the 27-year-old running Dallas truck driver said in the cool shade of an office building in Midland.

Both treats have been taboo in the days leading up to his nightly runs over six days and 600-plus miles.

His desire to master the feat is fueled by his will to set a Guinness world record in distance running, to impress and inspire his 8-year-old son, Billy, and to promote research into and education about epilepsy, which was fatal to a truck-driving friend of his.

"This (run) will bring about recognition to people who have epilepsy," Hackney said Thursday afternoon during a day's rest-up for a cool night run.

He's trying to average about 10 mph to break the record set in 1888 by Englishman George Littlewood who, Hackney says, ran 623¾ miles in six days over a closed track.

Hackney prefers the open road and shuns routine runs.

"It's hard (to run on a closed track)," he figures. "You lose your concentration. It's not fun. You see the same scenery; you get bored."

Hackney sidesteps boredom and the tedium of running by putting his yoga training into his stride.

"I go into a state of meditation while running," he says.

His enthusiasm and stamina are holding out as he drives onward.

"Everybody listens to a different drummer," he says philosophically. "I just happen to drum out a nine-minute (or more) mile."

Hackney, who has been in training for the feat since last November, has been running 50 to 125 miles per week. And he was prepared for what was termed the most grueling part of the run: the two-mile, 22 percent grade incline near Kent between the Sierra Diablo and the Guadalupe Mountain ranges.

"I was dead," he says. "That was just hard work."

The worst is past, though.

The desert and the mountains are to the distance west. And to the downward sloping east are some minor hills but, from Hackney's viewpoint, nothing really to worry about except, maybe, the eight blisters on his toes.

The asphalt and concrete "tear your feet up" despite the benefits of his running shoes. The farther east he runs, the more grass crops up along Interstate Highway 20, and the easier the run will be on his feet and self.

His needs along the way are satisfied in the comforts of a van which follows his path. His son, Billy, who, like the father, is primed for a marathon, is traveling in the van. His stops along the way are to drum up newspaper-radio-television coverage to raise funds for the Epilepsy Association of Texas.

Hackney, who is confident that he has the endurance level and stamina to out-run Boston Marathon champion Bill Rodgers in a six-day run, but certainly not in a marathon over 26 miles and 385 yards (42.2 kilometers), is confident that he'll finish the El Paso-to-Dallas run even if he ends up walking and crawling.

"As long as I don't over-exert myself and don't think I'm following Bill Rogers," Hackney reckons he will finish the race against time and himself.

Someday, though, he may enter the prestigious Boston Marathon.

"Being a truck driver, I don't have all the time to run (in marathons)."

But Hackney is swapping careers and then possibly may make the time to run more races. He's planning on returning to college to pick up a business degree and become a certified public accountant.

In the meantime, he'll continue to run as he can for enjoyment and health.

"The health benefits are just astronomical."

CAB approves takeover of Continental Airlines

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Continental Airlines officials said Thursday they were disappointed by a Civil Aeronautics Board decision allowing a takeover by Texas International Airlines but said a 60-day delay ordered by the CAB might yet save the company from a merger it does not want.

After Houston-based Texas International and its chairman Frank Lorenzo purchased 48.5 percent of Continental's shares last March, about 11,000 Continental employees developed an employee ownership plan, which involves their buying 15.4 million new shares of Continental stock.

"Our struggle continues, and we will ultimately win. We will take our case to President Reagan, who has the authority to overturn the CAB ruling," said employees association chairman Paul Eckel. "We will fight to overcome the regulatory hurdles Texas International has thrown in the path of our employee ownership plan.

"We are in a deadly serious race to save our jobs and airline. Texas International's position has been helped by the CAB. We take comfort, however, in the support we are receiving from the courts, the public and the nation's political leadership," Eckel said.

Thursday's CAB order must be approved by President Reagan, who has 60 days to consider it.

"The 60 days is very important to us," said Continental Employees Association adviser Chuck Cheeld, who is a pilot for Continental.

The California commissioner of corporations, Geraldine Green, has ruled a stockholder vote is necessary to implement the employee takeover. Cheeld said the 60 days might allow the group to get around the corporations commissioner.

"We'll never quit. We'll fight this thing to the very end," Cheeld said. "What happens if we lose? I'll tell you. What he (Lorenzo) has got to do is sell off assets, airplanes, in order to pay off the incredible debt that he's incurred in this whole thing — in effect, start liquidating the airline."

Woman's split personality revealed in murder trial

FORT MYERS, Fla. (AP) — When she first took the stand at her murder trial, soft-spoken Juanita Maxwell, who is believed to have a split personality, didn't remember much about the beating death of 73-year-old Inez Kelly.

But after undergoing a startling transformation with the coaxing of a social worker, Mrs. Maxwell became a giggling, boisterous "Wanda Weston" who was able to recall every detail of the crime and admitted beating the old woman to death with a lamp in a dispute over a borrowed pen.

Defense lawyers contended that Mrs. Maxwell, a 25-year-old mother of two, couldn't be held responsible for her actions because of her pyschological problem, and on Thursday a judge ruled her innocent by reason of insanity and committed her to a mental hospital.

Lee County Circuit Judge Hugh Starnes didn't specifically rule on whether she had a split personality, but he said he doubted whether a woman of limited intelligence, with less than a high school education, could have outwitted doctors through the battery of psychological tests that Mrs. Maxwell was given.

Mrs. Maxwell sobbed when the verdict was announced, embracing her husband, saying, "I love you" over and over. On the witness stand, as Wanda Weston, she had said she tried to kill him.

Mrs. Maxwell, who worked as a maid at a Fort Myers hotel, was charged with murdering Mrs. Kelly in 1979 at the motel, where the victim lived.

Mrs. Maxwell took the stand Wednesday and was questioned by clinical social worker Alan Klein, who worked with her at Florida State Hospital in Chattahoochee. Klein had brought her other personality to the surface about 25 times previously before the courtroom display.

Klein asked Mrs. Maxwell Wednesday whether she drank, smoked or used drugs.

"No, sir," she softly replied each time, speaking with her head bowed.

Klein asked her about the killing. She said she could recall little.

Then Klein asked to speak to Wanda.

Mrs. Maxwell closed her eyes. About 10 seconds later, she looked up and began giggling loudly. She seemed glad to see Klein, identified herself as Wanda Weston and said she was a childhood friend of Mrs. Maxwell.

Klein asked her what she liked to do.

"Party," she replied, laughing.

She then told Klein that she drinks and smokes, and "every now and then I smoke a little weed."

She said Juanita, who had worked at the motel less than a week, loaned Mrs. Kelly a pen and later went to get the pen back. Mrs. Kelly denied borrowing the pen and slammed the door, she said.

At that point, Wanda Weston surfaced, the defendant said, knocked on the door and went into Mrs. Kelly's room.

"She told me to get out of her room. So I picked up the lamp and beat her with it." The defendant said she didn't think death was harsh punishment for not returning the pen.

"People these days — you can't talk to them. You got to let them know where you're coming from," she said. "I don't judge it, I just do it."

Klein then called Juanita back. The woman bowed her head and closed her eyes. Seconds later, she raised her head. The smile had been replaced by a painful look, and Mrs. Maxwell rubbed her temples.

When doctors asked Mrs. Maxwell if she had committed the killing, she replied, "Well, they say I did, so I have to take their word for it."

Asked whether she knew Wanda, Mrs. Maxwell said, "Yeah, she causes me a lot of trouble.

While in her role as Wanda, Mrs. Maxwell told of trying to murder her husband, Sammy Maxwell, and of attacking him several times during their nine-year marriage.

Outside the courtroom, Maxwell said he wanted his wife "to remain in the hospital until she's better."

Cooler weather, rain in forecast

Midlanders can turn down thermostats on air conditioners for at least the next couple of days, and perhaps dig out their rain gear, if National Weather Service forecasts hold true.

Cooler conditions should result in a low tonight in the middle 60s and a high Saturday of only 90, compared to the 101-degree mark attained Thursday.

Furthermore, August's rainfall total of only a trace stands a chance of being increased, with a 30 per cent chance of showers set for tonight and a 20 per cent chance on Saturday, according to the NWS at Midland Regional Airport.

Although the mercury edged beyond the century mark Thursday, it failed to challenge the record 107 set in 1964, while the low of 76 was light years above the all-time low for the date of 61 set in 1936.

Winds are expected to be 5-10 mph through Saturday, according to the NWS.

Bake: eight hours a day for at least one month.

Serve: generously sprinkled in laughter and the desire to be entertained.

Result: A Pickwick Players production on stage in Theatre I at Theatre Midland, 2000 W. Wadley Ave.

For those unfamiliar with the Pickwicks a possible definition might read: A high energy zone created by talented youth who, whether behind the scenes or in front of the curtain, are always onstage, each electrically charged with more excess energy than most random samplings of any 10 adults. In short, the Youth Theatre at Midland Community Theatre.

The Pickwick's current production, Ed Graczyk's "Aesop's Falables," is a redo of not only "Aesop's Fables" but also of the original 1969 MCT Falables' production. It opened Thursday and runs through Saturday with performance times at 1 and 3 p.m.

The fables covered include "The Tortoise and The Hare," "The Country Mouse and The Pail of Milk" and "The Grasshopper and The Ant." However, all have been redone with a new and modern twist, intact with morals, which if not gleaned from watching the action, are told to the audience by a most effective Jack in the Box, played by Karen Price.

A Review

Jack, as we all know, has a big mouth, and often pops out of his box at the most inappropriate of occasions. That hasn't changed. Miss Price does the role well.

This particular Jack is quick to let the audience know that Wilfred M. Wolf, played by Andy Kimbrough, is full of it — lies that is. The audience knows he is trying to run a con, because we all know wolves can't be trusted, which is what his beef is all about. Both do a credible job.

The set is new, attractively done and quite creative. It works well. The costumes are also delightful. Together, they create a nice stage fantasy for the audience.

All of the characters, with the exception of John Dennett who plays the Boy and Jack in the Box, are animals. Most of the time the portrayals are effective, except the occasions when cast members seem to be acting the roles rather than being the character.

Jay Wells as Horace Hare, Cassandra Bell as Clarissa Crow, Laura Wolf as Amelia Eagle, and Jill McElligott as Mod Mouse (and is she ever mod) seem to be the most consistent in believing they are who they are.

The sheep, Kathryn Wolf, Verna Conn, Linsly Hunt and Mary Mark, are convincing as nosy little busybodies. In the one number they sing together, however, they need a little more volume.

This particular problem is not unusual in Pickwick performances and it happens on more than one occasion in this play. Some numbers are sung well together and in others there is not quite enough projection to carry into the audience effectively.

Other players include Cathy Harris as Nurse Stork, Gary Lyons as Mr. Grass Hopper, Ingrid Font and Dee Ann Jones as Mathilda Mouse, Verna Conn as Anna Ant and Miss Hunt as Miss Ant. All do a nice job, with the baby ant's walk and mannerisms being most effective.

Music for the performance is performed by Sharon White on the piano, Joe White on the drums and Paul Kowert on the lead guitar. The musical score was composed by Midlander Shirley Hanson. Director for the production is MCT's assistant director, Ted Strickland.

On a few occasions there seems to be too much activity onstage. This can confuse audiences and make the play difficult to follow.

Also, it would have been nice had eggs and baby storks been painted on both sides of the basket props. The picnic basket prop was done that way and it was more effective.

However, this audience, which was composed of children as well as adults, seemed to thoroughly enjoy the production and got what they came for — a good time.

Layton's attorneys lose bid for CIA files

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Attorneys for former Peoples Temple cultist Larry Layton, charged with conspiring to kill a congressman who died on a jungle airstrip, will have to defend their client without access to CIA files, a federal judge has ruled.

Layton's attorneys sought classified documents on the Peoples Temple cult and the mass murder-suicide that ended it in an attempt to determine whether the CIA was involved in Guyana and the Jonestown settlement there.

"This proceeding...is not an exercise in investigative journalism, but a criminal trial," U.S. District Judge Robert Peckham said Thursday. "It is not an exploration of all the causes and ramifications of the Peoples Temple tragedy.

Rendall won't seek opinion on Texas open meeting law

By RICHARD ORR
Staff Writer

County Attorney Robert Rendall has decided not to seek a state attorney general's opinion regarding the legality of governmental bodies going into executive session without specifying which particular topic will be discussed behind closed doors.

In a letter dated July 15, Rendall said: "I am of the opinion that Section 2 of Article 6252-17 (of the open meetings law) is so specific on this question, there is really no need to make a submission to the Attorney General's office."

Rendall had been asked by the Reporter-Telegram to seek the opinion because of a growing tendency among governing bodies to call for executive sessions without denoting the specific category of exemption to open meetings that the law provides for.

The school district, for instance, routinely states on their agendas: "An executive session pertaining to possible real estate, personnel and legal matters."

While the law plainly allows private discussion of those matters — as long as any formal action on them is taken in open session — it is vague as to whether or not the specific category has to be named. It also doesn't address the question of using the word "possible" in announcing an executive session.

Section 2, as noted by Rendall, is the portion of the law which allows for the three exceptions to open discussions, and the county attorney feels that as long as the section is identified prior to shutting out the public and press, the governing body is in compliance with the law.

"I have consulted with a member of the Attorney General's Opinion Staff," said Rendall, "and she concurs with me that as long as (the section is identified), the statute has been complied with properly."

Although Rendall's strict interpretation of the law may be correct, legal sources agree, executive sessions usually come at the end of often lengthy meetings and it's difficult for reporters to determine if they should remain for potential action on an item when they don't even know the nature of the item.

The school district, however, has indicated they will take steps to solve the problem themselves. Saying he sometimes doesn't know until the last minute if the board will need to go into executive session, school Superintendent Dr. James Mailey said today he's been using the word "possible" as a "place holder" in the event a matter came up unexpectedly.

But Mailey agreed that between the time an agenda is published and the time school trustees do go behind closed doors, they are aware of any particular items they'be discussing and will in the future announce their nature.

Reagan taking R&R in California

SANTA BARBARA, Calif. (AP) — A jovial President Reagan is back at his beloved ranch for his longest vacation since the inauguration and the longest by any president in more than a decade.

Reagan, on his fourth trip to the ranch since he took office, was expected to remain in California until Sept. 3. That would make his trip only two days shorter than President Nixon's Aug. 9-Sept. 8 "working vacation" in 1969.

After an uneventful five-hour flight from Washington, during which aides said Reagan cleared his briefcase, the president transferred to a Marine helicopter for the last leg of his journey to his mountaintop retreat.

About 20 striking air traffic controllers picketed the gate at Point Mugu Naval Air Station where the presidential jet landed Thursday night. They were not permitted on the bawe, and Reagan, who has ordered striking controllers fired, did not see them.

The Boeing 707 known as Air Force One when the president is aboard was guided through the flight, as usual, by civilian controllers at air traffic control centers along the route.

"The plane does have priority wherever it flies, strike or no strike," deputy White House press secretary Larry Speakes told reporters on the plane. Earlier, the head of White House military office, Edward V. Hickey Jr., had predicted a routine flight, despite the strike. "Therz's no impeding the travel of the commander-in-chief," he said.

Speakes said Reagan was "cracking jokes" during his helicopter ride from the White House to Andrews Air Force Base and talking about riding horses and chopping wood — his two favorite activities at his 688-acre ranch overlooking the Pacific Ocean.

In Santa Barbara, about 20 miles away, a contingent of aides set up what was called a "minature executive office of the president" at the Biltmore Hotel "just so the president can function as he would at the White House."

However, the president's White House routine will not be duplicated since just one staff aide, David Fisher, was expected to travel to the ranch daily. The others were staying behind in Santa Barbara to take care of paperwork, such as preparing prospective appointments and bills for signature.

Another group of aides — those who always remain with the president — will work in six temporary buildings whose construction at the ranch grounds was completed recently at an estimated cost of $770,000.

They include the president's doctor, the military aide who has custody of the "football" — the briefase containing codes for launching nuclear weapons — and communications aides.

Speakes said Reagan will be briefed on the latest developments on the air traffic controllers strike by deputy chief of staff Michael K. Deaver, who is in Santa Barbara, or by Transportation Secretary Drew Lewis in Washington.

Future of Panama

The death of Panamanian strongman Omar Torrijos cast a new light on future developments in Panama.

Torrijos, needless to say, did not enjoy a close and friendly relationship with the United States although his nation, due to the construction of the Panama Canal, does have close ties to and importance for the United States. His death leaves numerous questions unanswered for the immediate future.

The political leader of 13 years was killed in a plane crash Friday west of Panama City and it goes without saying that his death likely will have as much influence over the future policies of Panama as did his life. Much of Central and South America are now engulfed in political uncertainty with Marxists gambling for power in more than a few countries.

It all adds up to tension and more challenges for the Reagan administration, which now must assess not only where to go but also how much influence it can exert in the various areas. Those are delicate questions which not only need to be addressed but must be addressed if the peace and sovereignty of the Western Hemisphere is to be assured.

It remains to be seen the effect Torrijos' death will have upon the delicate relationship between Panama and the United States. The next few months, and the ultimate establishment of an undisputed leader for Panama, will have vast repercussions upon the future of the two nations.

Spirit of Camp David

Now that his congressional battles over budget and tax cuts are behind him, President Reagan is beginning to fulfill his campaign promise to restore what has come to be known as the "Spirit of Camp David." That is the spirit of good will, compromise and good faith that brought President Carter together with Egypt's President Sadat and Israel's Prime Minister Begin to seek peace in the Middle East.

The Sadat visits with Mr. Reagan in Washington this week will be followed by the arrival of Mr. Begin in September. The mission of the meetings is more to shake hands and get acquainted than to reach any final agreements.

Subjects certain to be discussed at least on an exploratory basis include relations with the Palestine Liberation Organization. Israeli settlements on the West Bank, which President Carter considered an obstacle to peace, are sure to be included in the talks, as will the return to Egypt of the final third of Sinai in April, 1982.

The best thing that could come out of these deliberations is that the two Middle Eastern statesmen find President Reagan compatible, and vice versa. Personal diplomacy has a lot to do with the course of foreign affairs, and starting with former Secretary of State Henry Kissinger it was responsible for getting the Israel-Egypt peace talks started.

If Mr. Reagan's hospitality leads to another three-way summit meeting, then the mood of Camp David will in truth have been revived, and the president's campaign pledge will have been kept.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today's highlight in history:

On Aug. 7, 1789, the U.S. War and Navy departments were established.

On this date:

In 1782, George Washington established the Order of the Purple Heart.

And in 1945, the Soviet Union declared war on Japan seven days before the Japanese surrendered.

Ten years ago: Three Apollo 15 astronauts made a safe splash-down in the Pacific following their landing on the moon.

Five years ago: It was announced that an agreement had been made for Iran to buy $10 billion worth of U.S. military equipment.

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

Analysis rates RDF effectiveness 'minimal'

WASHINGTON — The Middle East is once again at the explosion point, and President Reagan is using every possible diplomatic means to keep this vital oil region from blowing up. Backing up the diplomacy is the Rapid Deployment Force, which is ready to introduce U.S. military power into the equation.

Jack Anderson

But unfortunately, a top-secret Pentagon analysis suggests that the RDF wouldn't last long against a Soviet power play.

According to the military's own estimates, 46,000 of the emergency force's 100,000 troops would be killed or wounded in the first 60 days of combat against a Soviet thrust into the Middle East oilfields. Historically, few military units have retained their fighting effectiveness when the number of casualties exceeded 20 percent.

A casualty rate of 46 percent is hair-raising enough. What makes the estimate even worse is that many of the wounded would die, according to the secret analysis, because the armed forces don't have enough medical personnel to treat the thousands of casualties anticipated.

Expanding the RDF to a deployment strength of six-and-a-half divisions (130,000 men) would only compound the slaughter, the Pentagon analysts indicate: They postulate 86,000 casualties in the first 60 days with the bigger force — a horrifying 66 percent casualty rate.

Even assuming the armed services could suddenly enlist the necessary doctors, nurses and technicians, there is serious doubt that they could be put in position to do the RDF troops much good. With the macabre advance planning necessary for the military art, Pentagon experts estimate that the present RDF would require 10,000 hospital beds, and the expanded force more than 15,000.

But it takes 100 C-141 and 30 C-5 cargo aircraft round-trip sorties to deploy a single general hospital. This means that virtually the entire present U.S. aircraft capability would have to be committed just to transport the RDF's medical facilities.

Even with adequate treatment, the Pentagon planners aren't sure the United States could ever build a strike force capable of countering the Soviets in an area that is thousands of miles away by sea and air, yet only a few hundred miles from the Soviet border.

Most military planners, in fact, look upon the RDF as a "trip wire" or sacrificial lamb, like the hopelessly vulnerable garrison in West Berlin. If the Red Army overwhelmed the RDF, as it easily could, the United States would have no military option except to respond with nuclear weapons. Indeed, contingency plans are ready for just such an option.

In addition to the strategic and logistical problems of the Rapid Deployment Force, it is causing the United States political headaches as well. Several otherwise friendly Arab nations view the RDF as a potential threat to their oilfields. These fears were reinforced by the RDF's commander, Marine Corps Gen. P.X. Kelly, when he undiplomatically revealed that contingency plans included seizure of the Iranian oilfields.

Indeed, sources told my associate Ron McRae that there are some gung-ho types in the Pentagon who don't care whether the Arabs distrust the RDF concept. They argue that the so-called moderate Arab states are weak, feudal and generally unreliable, and recommend that the United States stop trying to win their cooperation.

Instead, these fire-breathers say we should rely on the threat of military force — with perhaps some help from Israel — to keep the Arab oil flowing.

GHOSTLY MISUNDERSTANDING: According to a Senate subcommittee's secret report on Teamsters Union corruption, the man who directed a Labor Department probe of the union's scandal-ridden Central States Pension Fund thought he was not allowed to pursue criminal prosecutions of suspect officials.

Senate investigators said Norman Perkins, head of Labor's Special Investigations Staff under President Jimmy Carter, "believed that there was a phantom agreement or some such understanding, as did other Department of Labor employees." Then-Labor Secretary Ray Marshall denied that any such agreement had been made.

The Senate report added: "Whether or not there was such an agreement is of less significance than what actually happened, which was that the Labor Department did, in fact, limit the scope of the investigation. The Department limited the inquiry to a few loans and investments."

Perkins reportedly told the Senate sleuths, "SIS has never done criminal work" and "had better not."

WATCH ON WASTE: To meet requirements of the Food and Agriculture Act of 1977, the Department of Agriculture had to install a computer system to keep track of the planting, production and marketing of peanuts. The computer also digests data on the nation's goober growers and handlers to determine how much they have sold here and abroad. The cost of the computer isn't peanuts, and the overruns gave General Accounting Office auditors something to chew on: Development of the system was supposed to cost $133,000; the actual price tag amounted to $332,000. Operating costs were even worse: The first year's running expense was estimated at $130,000; instead, it turned out to be a whopping $681,000. The peanut computer is performing well, but Agriculture officials declined to comment on the cost overruns.

INSIDE REPORT:

Neumann sacrificed in Reagan's quest for Mideast peace

WASHINGTON — Despite circumstantial evidence that Ambassador Robert Neumann was a victim of the pro-Israeli lobby when he was forced to resign as ambassador to Saudi Arabia, his ouster by President Reagan and Secretary of State Alexander Haig had a profound purpose: to avoid offending Prime Minister Begin on the eve of major Mideast peace moves.

Rowland Evans

Robert Novak

The experienced, respected Neumann, an early Reagan backer who ran the president-elect's State Department transition team, on July 20 privately attacked the secretary's performance on ABC's "Issues and Answers" the previous day as one that "made me want to vomit." What unsettled Neumann's stomach was Haig's studied refusal to criticize Israel's bloody air raid on Beirut.

To Al Haig, that was heresy: a subordinate floating a policy line critical of Israel and Menahem Begin that was totally out of phase with the soft Reagan-Haig line. It undercut the Reagan-Haig effort to minimize criticism of Begin so that a beleaguered Begin, believing himself unfairly treated, would not use his power even more irresponsibly, jeopardizing imminent Reagan peace moves.

Quickly informed of Neumann's criticism to at least one member of Congress, Haig summoned him July 23 and read the riot act. The next day Haig went to the Oval Office and emerged with the president's complete approval to demand Neumann's resignation.

This quick dispatch of an intimate ally of the president's national security assistant, Richard V. Allen, and a trusted Reaganite might have seemed on the harsh side except for another pro-Begin ploy by the Reagan high command during that same week.

Clearly motivated by the Reagan-Haig soft-on-Begin line, White House chief of staff James Baker III publicly chided two of the president's closest friends — Deputy Secretary of State William Clark and Secretary of Defense Caspar Weinberger — for their gently critical remarks about Begin after the Beirut raid. Baker's rebuke was mild compared to the terminal treatment of Neumann, but his theme was identical: Reagan will not tolerate criticism of the prime minister of Israel by anyone in his administration at this particularly sensitive moment of Reagan's first diplomatic move into the dangerously unstable Middle East.

Circumstantial evidence that Neumann fell afoul of the pro-Israel lobby, rather than tripping himself up in the Reagan-Haig policy of avoiding giving offense to Begin, goes back to early January. When the ambassador was named head of Reagan's transition team, he was the target of a three-day front-page attack in Ha'aretz, one of Israel's most respected newspapers.

Ha'aretz focused its attack on an article written by Neumann in the spring 1979, issue of Washington Quarterly, published by Georgetown University's Center for Strategic and International Studies. Neumann wrote: "A solution of the Palestinian problem ... means almost certainly, whether we want it or not, and few people really want it, involvement, directly or indirectly, of the PLO (Palestine Liberation Organization)."

That made Neumann a marked man in Israel. The attack by Ha'aretz, however, had not the slightest visible effect on the fledgling Reagan administration.

A more sinister attack on Neumann appeared in the July 17 issue of Middle East Policy Survey, a "confidential" pro-Israeli newsletter with a reputation for accuracy. Quoting from a secret cable Neumann recently sent the State Department describing a conversation he had with Crown Prince Fahd about the AWACS radar planes Reagan wants to sell Saudi Arabia, the Survey quoted an anonymous State Department official: "He (Neumann) would make up anything to help get the AWACS through" Congress.

Haig's closed-door demand for Neumann's resignation during a 3 p.m. meeting on July 25 in his office with the ambassador swept like wildfire through the pro-Israeli lobby. By Monday night a leading Israeli newspaper, Yidiat Aharonot, had the full story from its Washington correspondent, Wolf Blitzer, long before any announcement.

But joy over Neumann's demise among the friends of Israel is a mere offshoot to the real purpose of the president and his secretary of state. With the cease-fire in Lebanon hanging on a thread, they will use whatever political muscle is necessary to avoid giving Begin any pretext for breaking that thread and perhaps plunging the Middle East into full-scale war.

Despite condemnation of Israel's Baghdad raid and the continuing hold-up of F-16 fighter planes for Israel, Reagan is committed to placate Begin between now and his September state visit to Washington, following Egyptian President Anwar Sadat's visit this week. In the hopeful Reagan-Haig view, the time to talk turkey to Begin will be in September, when Reagan's diplomatic skills will get their toughest challenge to date: West Bank autonomy, an end to Jewish settlements, Mideast peace and an anti-Soviet "strategic consensus."

CHARLEY REESE

U.S. drops rug-pulling rights policy

President Reagan has finally dumped Jimmy Carter's stupid human rights policy. He has ordered the U.S. representatives at the World Bank to vote for loans to Uruguay, Argentina, Paraguay and Chile. He has said U.S. arms sales won't be predicated strictly on human rights.

Charley Reese

To hear the leftists scream, you would think Reagan has rejected Christianity. Actually, all he has done is return to the same United States policy which was practiced by all administrations from George Washington through Gerald Ford, namely to base our relationships with other nations on our national interests, not theirs.

Carter's human rights policy was hypocritical. It allowed the leftists in his regime to kick anti-Communists in the face and to undermine U.S. interests around the globe. There is no way you can explain punishing Chile and rewarding Red China on the basis of human rights. The only rational explanation of Carter's foreign policy was that it was consistently left and consistently anti-United States.

Like most old newspapermen, I'm surrounded by young idealists. People under 30 are genetically idealistic. They haven't learned of their own limitations so they think no one else has any either. They tend to see the world as made up of good guys (those who agree with them) and bad guys (those who don't).

It would be nice if every nation were led, as these youngsters believe, by a King John and every revolutionary were Robin Hood. We could then support Robin Hood and in the end, join the joyous celebration. Unfortunately, the world is more complex. The choice is often between a Shah and an Ayatollah, between a Batista and a Castro, between a Chiang Kai-shek and a Mao. In each of those instances, a less than perfect leader was replaced by a perfectly terrible tyrant.

The young idealists believe that we shouldn't be associated with corrupt or authoritarian governments because the people won't like us. That is a false premise. Most of the world's guerrillas these days are Marxists and Marxists by definition don't like us, for we are to a Marxist what the Devil is to a Baptist. We helped Fidel Castro. Not only did we allow him to freely come and go in the U.S., to raise funds, to buy arms, but in the end we pulled the rug out from under Batista. The day Castro opted for Communism, however, all of that was forgotten and we became the No. 1 S.O.B. Incredibly, we have repeated the sorry performance in Nicaragua. Who helped the Sandanistas more than the United States? We called for Somoza's ouster. We cut off all aid, both economic and military. We prevented other nations from supplying his troops. In the end, we — not the Sandanistas — forced Somoza out.

But the Sandanistas are Communist. They hate us. They hated us before and they hate us now. They are doing exactly what Fidel Castro advised them to do; go slow lest you wake up the stupid giant in Washington. It looks like they need not have worried.

You see, you cannot buy off enemies by betraying friends. In every instance where the liberals and the leftists in this country have cried for the scalp of an American ally and succeeded, we have lost an ally and gained an enemy. In every instance, the people of those countries are worse off now than they were under the old imperfect ally.

I hope President Reagan's new policy is based on strategy, and not on lobbying by the bankers and the defense industry for more business. It is in our national interests to form alliances with governments which share our dislike of Communism. It is not in our national interest to subjet them to a human rights test. We cannot govern other people's countries. We can set an example, and one example of human decency we ought to set is to honor our commitments to people who honor theirs to us. The shabby treatment we have given allies in the past has brought dishonor on this nation. The standing joke among Turkish military officers is, "It's dangerous to be an ally of the United States — you never know when it's going to decide to stab itself in the back."

Peace Corp leaving Ivory Coast

By SUSAN LINNEE
Associated Press Writer

ABIDJAN, Ivory Coast (AP) — The U.S. Peace Corps is closing down in the Ivory Coast after 18 years of service. The reasons: Reagan administration budget cuts, and the former French West African colony doesn't need it as much as other countries do.

With an annual per-capita income estimated by the World Bank at $1,060 — the second highest in Africa below the Sahara — the Ivory Coast is now considered a middle-income developing country. It is thought there are enough trained people to take over many of the jobs foreign volunteers have been doing.

"Cost was the consideration in cutting back the program," said a local Peace Corps official who asked not to be identified. "There was a question whether to cut back a little on all programs or phase some out altogether. Then there was also the problem of middle-income countries and the needs of the really underdeveloped."

The official said the Peace Corps hoped for a budget of about $105 million but got $90 million. The programs in South Korea and Colombia are also being phased out.

At one time there were as many as 125 Peace Corps volunteers in the Ivory Coast, a country of nearly 8 million people. By last April, there were 60, and all will be gone by the middle of the month.

The first group of U.S. Peace Corps members to serve anywhere arrived in Ghana in August 1961. In 1963, American volunteers were teaching 50 percent of the secondary school students in Somalia and Sierra Leone, two other African nations.

Several countries, among them Nigeria and Guinea, expelled volunteers for political reasons. Tanzania asked them to leave, then later requested a new program. There are now 16 volunteers in that East African nation.

As of July, there were 2,023 Peace Corps volunteers in 24 countries in sub-Saharan Africa. Kenya had the most with 222, Rwanda the fewest with eight. There were 40 in Benin, a tiny "Marxist-Leninist people's republic," and 38 in sparsely populated Gabon, whose oil revenues give it an annual per capita income of $3,280, the highest below the Sahara.

The local Peace Corps official said that on a cost-per-American basis, the Ivory Coast program was the most expensive in Africa. When the program started in 1963, most of the volunteers taught mathematics and English. In recent years, most of them worked in rural public health and development projects.

Although the Ivorian government has made no official comment on the Peace Corps departure, several officials said privately they were "surprised" by the decision.

The government has been trying to steer young people away from law and the humanities towards careers in such service-related fields as public health and technical education. But, as in many developing countries, it is often difficult to get local people to work in the most isolated, underdeveloped areas where foreign volunteers are usually sent.

The French have about 60 volunteers in the Ivory Coast, in addition to about 3,000 professional technical assistance personnel and teachers. Philippe Mermet, a representative of the Volontaires du Progres, said Frances is prepared to send more volunteers if the government asks for them.

But the Dutch government has phased out its small volunteer program, and the West Germans are planning to cut back drastically on theirs.

A representative of the German Volunteer Service said the organization intended to concentrate on aid to the least developed 25 countries in the world.

Peace Corps volunteers in the Ivory Coast earned the equivalent of $250 to $350 a month. Their French counterparts make around $500 with fringe benefits, and the Germans earn about $600.

ON THE ROAD

Safe driving demands visibility

By SUE ALFORD
Traffic Safety Planning
Midland College

Highway safety demands that we see clearly, efficiently, comfortably because 90 percent of our driving decisions are based on what we see — or fail to see.

According to the American Optometric Association (AOA), your eyes gather many types of information; how well they do the job depends on our ability to use certain visual skills. The AOA has outlined the visual skills needed for safe driving, as follows.

Visual Acuity: ability to focus and see clearly with both eyes, separately as well as together, particularly at a distance.

Peripheral Vision: ability to see over a large area without moving your eyes or head; "seeing out of the corner of your eye" increases your total field of vision.

Depth Perception: ability to judge relative distances between objects, or between an object and yourself, especially when both are moving.

Night Vision: ability to see under low illumination; also, to see in the presence of glare and quickly recover from its effect on vision.

Eye Coordination: ability to quickly, easily and automatically point both eyes at the same object; the eyes must work together as a team.

Accommodation: abilty to quickly and easily change the focus of your eyes from a distant object to a near object, and vice versa.

Color Perception: ability to immediately recognize various colors and distinguish them from others.

These are skills we need to understand so we will see others and make ourselves seen in the traffic mix. Good vision is affected by the driver, the highway system and the vehicles.

The driver must see a situation to react to it...watching for other motorists unaware of a dangerous situation, watching for other vehicles in his blind spot, spotting regulatory or warning signs. The sooner we "see" any of these things, the sooner we can react.

The vehicle can impede or assist your clear vision... we must make it work for us. Our headlights should be clean, properly adjusted and working. Other visual problems can originate with the car in the form of glare, distraction or distortion from chrome, dirty or cracked windshields, window stickers or gadgets hanging from mirrors. Take care of these problems.

Finally, the way we see as well as what we see is influenced by the high way system itself. It's many markers and visual clues can come to us only through vision..and that vision is taxed to the limit as speed increases. Why? Because significant visual changes occur as speed increases; all the visual skills listed earlier are greater reduced by speed.

Aside from checking your eyes regularly and taking care of them, the AOA list several common sense things we can do to insure the best vision possible while driving. To lessen eye fatigue on long trips, try blinking frequently or shifting you eyes periodically in quick continuous movement. To fight glare — especially when you find yourself tense and squinting, deliberately relax your face muscles and take several deep breaths. The etra oxygen will help you relax and increase the eye's ability to adapt to light conditions. To avoid road hypnosis, which can cause loss of control and thus accidents, don't stare at any single point of light or stream of traffic more than a few seconds; keep your eyes moving. Finally, alcohol causes "tunnel" vision, smoking caues eyestrain and dimmed vision...try to avoid these while driving.

JUST FOR FUN: The first speeding ticket was issued in 1902 to a driver going over 10 mph...he was fined $10.

Desegregation could've been worse

ALEXANDRIA, La. (AP) — When a federal judge's school desegregation order descended on Rapides Parish last year, there were parental protests, court battles and "white flight." Officials hope things go as well this fall.

They say it could have been much worse.

About 1,500 children fled the public schools. New private schools doubled in number, from four to eight.

Three white girls made national headlines when their parents steadfastly refused to obey an order that the girls no longer attend an all-white high school in Buckeye.

Parents in the mostly white community of Forest Hill attracted similar attention when they occupied an elementary school closed by the order and taught their own children.

Yet most of the parish's 25,000 schoolchildren rode the buses each day without incident, say school officials in this central Louisiana parish.

"We had a very good year, a very fine year," said James Cleveland, principal at Jones Street Junior High in Alexandria, a school often at the center of the desegregation furor.

Jones Street, with 750 students, saw more busing than any other school in the parish. It used to be almost all black, but U.S. District Judge Nauman Scott decided last year to send many of its children to rural, white schools outside the city.

At the same time, white children from towns like Pineville and Buckeye were bused as many as 25 miles to integrate Jones Street.

"A lot of people anticipated a lot of problems. We overcame that," Cleveland said. "For example, we had 79 kids who came out for football — 36 were white and 43 were black. They were the first white students ever to play on our team, and we won a championship."

Roughly 40 percent of the parish's schoolchildren are black. Proponents of desegregation said the black children attended inferior, often run-down schools while white children got better classes and teachers.

The integration plan was designed to get both races to mix and give blacks a better shot at a good education. But not everyone agrees it was successful — or should have been.

Joseph Page Jr., 10, was one of the black youngsters sent to Pineville Elementary to help integrate that school.

"I saw a change in his attitude, and it wasn't good," said his father, Joseph Sr., who said the boy was better off in his neighborhood school.

"The teachers and principal assumed from the start that the black kids were backward," Page said. "Most of them were shipped immediately into remedial classes, whether they needed them or not."

But many did need special help, said Gloria Hearne, a teacher who spent last year at Jones Street.

Her first visit to a predominately black parish school was six years ago.

"I nearly cried," she recalled. "The children were not reading in the first grade. They were so far behind it was pathetic."

Louis Berry, a civil rights lawyer who battled for more than a decade for an integration plan, said Page's experience was the exception.

"Black parents had some negligible complaints, but they centered mainly on the parent-teacher conflicts you find in any school," he said.

"Now, blacks sit with whites in the classroom, learn with them and compete with them in academics and sports. They're losing the feeling of inferiority.

"At the same time, it's purging white children of the notion that have been handed down by their parents that being white is, per se, superior."

Rapides Parish's largely rural character may have had much to do with residents' general willingness to comply with the desegration order.

People here are strong believers in law and order, and there was no violence even at the height of the Buckeye and Forest Hill protests. When the Ku Klux Klan tried to rally support with a cross-burning in Forest Hill, most of the spectators were reporters.

"Busing is here to stay," Berry said.

Buckeye High has 600 students. It used to have more than 700, but 106 were ordered to Jones Street.

"With all this instability, you can't settle down to education," Waites said. Students were given parish-wide proficiency tests for the first time last year, so officials can't yet say whether learning has improved or suffered.

If Waites is worried as a principal, he is angry as a father.

Last year, he pulled his 13-year-old son, Brad, out of public school rather than see him bused to Jones Street. Brad attended the Philadelphia Christian School in Buckeye — one of the new private schools.

"Brad'll go there again this year," Waites promised.

But Berry predicts white flight will decrease, not only because the desegregation plan is working but also because private schools cost money.

"Unemployment in Rapides Parish is the highest in the state," he said. "The per capita income is among the lowest in the state.

"Once people get over the emotional part of it, they have to get down to economic facts. They can't afford white flight."

Cigarettes still not completely safe

Dear Dr. Solomon: Is it safe to smoke filtered low-tar and low-nicotine cigarettes? — Mr. S.T.

Dear Mr. T.: Safer than the smoking of cigarettes of a generation ago, but there still is no completely safe cigarette.

Dear Dr. Solomon: My 16-year-old daughter experiences a good deal of pain during her menstrual period. Is this normal in a young girl, something she will outgrow? She has been taking aspirin to try to relieve the discomfort, but it doesn't seem to help. — Mrs. V.G.

Dear Mrs. G.: Pain is not a normal condition, and severe dysmenorrhea (painful menstruation) in an adolescent should not be ignored. I strongly suggest you arrange to have your daughter seen by a gynecologist for an evaluation of the problem.

Dysmenorrhea may be primary (that is, one for which there is no apparent cause) or it may be related to some organic condition. A study by Dr. Ronald Goldstein of Harvard University showed that about four percent of teen-age girls who complained of severe dysmenorrhea had some organic problem.

Regardless of the basis for the condition, whether primary or secondary, it should not be overlooked. It would be wonderful if we could get problems to disappear simply by ignoring them, but life just doesn't work that way.

Dear Dr. Solomon: When I was discharged from the hospital recently after giving birth, one of the volunteers there offered suggestions on the purchase of a car seat for the baby. Do you recommend use of a car seat? I wouldn't mind buying one if I thought it was advisable. — Mrs. C.P.

Dear Mrs. P.: The figures speak for themselves. Twenty-five percent of children's deaths are associated with automobiles, and as many as 80 percent of children who die in automobile accidents could have been saved if they had been strapped into proper car seats. Failure to use car seat has been cited as the leading preventable cause of death for children.

Dr. Kenneth Roberts, a pediatrician at Sinai Hospital in Baltimore, explains that children are particularly vulnerable in automobile accidents. In fact, they can sustain serious injuries even if a crash does not occur.

Knight appointed

Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Attorney General Mark White has named Ronald G. Knight, an Odessa native, as chief of the Consumer Protection Division of the Attorney General's Office.

Knight's appointment is effective immediately.

Knight was born in Odessa in 1947 and graduated from Permian High School there. He received a bachelor of arts degree in political science from the University of Texas at Austin in 1970, and graduated from the UT School of Law in 1973.

Knight was assistant criminal district attorney for Tarrant County and an associate attorney with the Fort Worth law firm of Shannon, Gracey, Ratliff and Miller prior to his appointment as an assistant attorney general in November 1979.

Knight previously was an attorney in the Attorney General's Energy Division and currently serves as chairman of the Computerized Legal Research Committee of the State Bar of Texas.

Knight is married to the former Marion Cowan of Houston.

'Guided missile' successful in fighting cancer

STANFORD, Calif. (AP) — A new kind of biological "guided missile" has been used with some success in fighting cancer, Stanford University researchers report.

It is believed to be the first time positive results have been shown with humans treated with monoclonal mouse antibodies.

Leukemia and lymphoma, cancers of the lymph tissue, were temporarily or partially controlled in six patients who did not respond to conventional forms of therapy, Drs. Richard Miller and Ronald Levy report in the current issue of the British journal Lancet.

The patients were injected with mouse-cell antibodies produced with genetic engineering techniques. The antibodies triggered the patients' own immune systems to fight their cancers.

All the patients improved somewhat, the researchers said, and three with lymphomas showed "significant improvement." Conventional treatments had failed.

Tissue from mouse immune systems is fused with mouse cancer cells to produce cells called hybridomas. These cells are like tiny factories — they produce specific, identical antibodies, virtually endlessly.

Antibodies fight disease by recognizing and binding to specific proteins on the surface of invading organisms or foreign tissue. But each disease requires a specific antibody to fight it, and the monoclonal antibodies produced to attack one disease won't affect others.

Miller and Levy cautioned the technique is still highly experimental.

Theoretically, said Levy, the method can be used against any cancer, but he added, "For the present, antibody therapy is no substitute for more traditional and proven methods of cancer treatment.

"However, we hope that antibodies will prove an additional modality of treatment that can be combined with current methods."

The production of monoclonal antibodies dates from 1975, when researchers in England found the antibody-producing cells of the mouse immune system, lymphocytes, can be fused with mouse tumor cells to make a bizarre combination called a hybridoma.

Last year, Drs. Henry Kaplan and Lennart Olsson, also of Stanford, announced they had produced pure human monoclonal antibodies for the first time.

Experiments suggest it should be possible to use pure human antibodies to fight infections ranging from the flu and hepatitis to malaria and also use them to diagnose some diseases.

New tool helps kidney transplants

BOSTON (AP) — Doctors say they may significantly increase the odds of performing successful kidney transplants and save lives by using a new biological tool that measures the level of drugs in patients' bodies.

The new aid, called a monoclonal antibody, monitors patients for early signs of transplant rejection and helps doctors treat them after rejection actually begins.

The tool was developed by doctors at Massachusetts General Hospital who tested it on patients who received kidneys from unrelated donors. These transplants are especially difficult because the body tends to attack the organs as foreign matter.

Nationally, the survival rate of these transplanted kidneys after one year is about 50 percent. But by using monoclonal antibodies, the doctors increased the survival rate to nearly 80 percent during nine months.

"We feel our monitoring with monoclonal antibodies may well have saved the lives of several of our patients because of the precise information it provided," said Dr. A. Benedict Cosimi, who directed the research.

The latest study, published in today's New England Journal of Medicine, was conducted on 50 patients.

Only three of them, or six percent, died. Three years ago at the hospital, the death rate among patients undergoing this operation was 15 percent in the first year.

Conventional drugs suppress the body's impulse to reject the transplanted kidney, but they also hinder its ability to fight infection. Monoclonal antibodies allow doctors to determine the suppression remaining at any time and to adjust the drug dosage.

The doctors make monoclonal antibodies by injecting mice with human T-lymphocytes, white blood cells that play a major role in the immune response. Cosimi said the monoclonal antibodies may also be useful in other kinds of operations, such as heart and liver transplants.

Stress: A factor in controllers' strike?

By PAUL RAEBURN
AP Science Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Do air traffic controllers work under as much pressure as they say, and does the job give them high blood pressure and heart disease?

Stress is among the main issues in the nationwide controllers' strike, in its fifth day today. But there are widely diverging views on who suffers from it most and why.

The controllers say directing air traffic is so stressful that they suffer from physical and mental problems, wrecked marriages and alcoholism. But top federal officials say controllers are under no more stress than police officers or firefighters.

The controllers are demanding that their work week be cut from 40 hours to 32 hours. A tentative contract overwhelmingly rejected by the Professional Air Traffic Controllers Organization would have provided 42 hours of pay for 40 hours of work.

Transportation Secretary Drew Lewis said Tuesday that a number of tests have been made, and "there's no more stress on this job than on a number of others. Firemen. Policemen. Just to name a few."

"I think maybe we've seen too many movies of pilots being brought in when someone has a heart attack or something like that," Lewis said in an interview with the Cable News Network.

John Leyden of the Federal Aviation Administration says, "There is stress, sure, but the people selected seem to be able to handle it."

But Robert Poli, PATCO president, said controllers "work under such stress many of them develop physical and mental problems, including social withdrawal, marital trouble or concealed alcoholism."

A 1978 study of more than 400 air traffic controllers found that they were twice as likely to drink after work as other people and two to four times as likely to develop high blood pressure.

"We have no good explanation why they have so much hypertension (high blood pressure)," said Boston University psychiatrist C. David Jenkins, the deputy director of the study. "They do have a lot more than one would expect.

"We looked at the workload, the number of planes they handled, their years with the (FAA), and there was no correlation," he said.

A University of Maryland psychologist contends that the study was improperly conducted.

James J. Lynch of the University of Maryland's medical school said the 1978 study wrongly compared the rates of hypertension in the controllers to a group that has an unusually low rate of hypertension, heart disease and stress.

The study compared traffic controllers at Boston's Logan International Airport with a group of residents of Framingham, Mass., who have been observed for years in one of the largest studies of heart disease ever conducted.

Lynch published a book in 1977 arguing that Framingham residents are not representative of the general population and that the incidence of hypertension in Framingham is far below the national average because of low divorce and crime rates and the tendency of residents not to move.

Jenkins disagreed with Lynch's claim and said controllers face many of the situations that are most likely to cause high blood pressure.

They handle life-and-death situations, constant vigilance is called for, and problems cannot be solved by escaping or fighting.

Jenkins said tests with animals and people show that those factors contribute to the likelihood of developing high blood pressure.

FAA spokesman Dennis Feldman said, however, that controllers never work more than two hours at the same control position, and they spend only 40 to 50 percent of their hours controlling.

The rest of the time, Feldman said, they are training on new equipment, controlling vehicles on the ground, training new people and performing similar less-demanding jobs.

Jenkins says a certain amount of stress "goes with the territory, and we all recognize it and it can't be eliminated."

"However, there's a great deal more stress than is necessary," he said.

Striker prepared to pull up stakes

By PAT MILTON
Associated Press Writer

BELLPORT, N.Y. (AP) — Striking air traffic controller Vincent Connelly says he will pull up stakes and ply his trade in Canada if he loses his job under President Reagan's orders.

"I don't feel good about breaking the law, but I feel I have no other alternative," he said of the illegal strike in its fourth day today. "I'm not concerned about the money. I'm looking for a shorter work week."

"I'm going to burn out working 40 hours a week. Then I won't have any future. I turn around and look at the guys I work with and see that no one retires here. They usually flunk their physical before they've worked the required 25 years on the job."

The 37-year-old said he does not want to leave, "but I love this job so much, I guess you get addicted to it."

Reagan ordered that striking controllers who did not report back to work be fired. Under law, the dismissals can be appealed to the Federal Aviation Administration and the Merit Systems Protection Board.

The tall, slim and intense man said that if he loses his job, he may try to join the ranks of Canadian controllers, who he said work a 34-hour week and have better sick-leave and vacation benefits. Connelly earned $42,000 last year, with 160 hours of overtime. He said he could earn that much in Canada.

Connelly learned his trade in the Navy. He has worked at the three busy airports in the New York area for 15 years, most recently at Kennedy International Airport.

He and his wife, Patricia, 32, recently bought a 1981 Buick stationwagon and a two-story ranch house in a middle-class neighborhood of Bellport on Long Island.

But the strike interrupted the good life. The couple say they are worried about supporting their 4-month-old baby and their other two children, aged 6 and 3. Mrs. Connelly said she's looking for work as a waitress.

"We have enough money in the bank to meet the mortgage payments for a couple of months, but the car will have to go," she said. "I guess we will be eating a lot of hot dogs and chicken."

Mrs. Connelly said she is behind her husband "100 percent." She added: "If I have to move to Canada, I will. Most families' lives revolve around their husbands' employment.

"There are many nights I worry until my husband gets home," Mrs. Connelly said. "If he is tired or if it's a foggy night, I worry that he could be involved with a 'near-miss' or with a collision. His is a job of inches, which could mean hundreds of lives."

Depression at top of U.S. health problems

By BARBARA HUSTON
Hearst Feature Service

Depression is the number one health problem in the United States, if suicide is used as the measuring rod.

The elderly are only 10 percent of the population but they commit 25 percent of the suicides.

The number of teenagers and young adults committing suicide has almost doubled in the last ten years.

The majority are women.

Too depressed to read on?

If so, you may have a problem, says Dr. Gary Emery, who provided those statistics. Being immobilized or depressed by the sorrows of others is one of many measurable signs of depression.

His Center of Cognitive Therapy, founded last year in Los Angeles, treats depressed patients at the world-renowned University of Southern California Andrus Gerontology Center.

Cognitive therapy is a fancy name for learning to think your way out of the brown paper bag that depression often feels like, he says. Other therapies treat the feeling of depression or prescribe drugs to make it go away.

But that's not very effective, Emery says. If you're depressed by someone else's sorrows, you're secretly, almost unknowingly, thinking that somehow you are responsible for it. Since women are raised to take responsibiity for others, they are particularly vulnerable.

Woman also learn early that helplessness is appealing to men and they often grow up believing they are helpless. Depression being basically a sense of helplessness to control one's life, women are sitting ducks for the illness, Emery says.

It's not news that women get depressed. But the grounds for depression are shifting and the treatment is changing, Emery says.

It was once believed that "being past the child-bearing, fulfilling years," was the culprit. This belief was based on studies of post-hysterectomy patients who showed three to four times as much depression as post-gallbladder operation patients, for example.

But further investigation showed a high number of women who had hysterectomies were depressed to begin with. Hysterectomy actually reduced depession in half the patients.

Another myth Emery disputes is the "hormone-based," postpartum depression that now appears to be a mood swing. But "unrealistic positive expectations," a thinking error depressed people fall into, can cause depression over a new baby who presents a new set of realities, instead of a set of dreams come true.

The rise of liberated. women in the 1970s was nice. But ironically it has demoted traditional homemakers, nurses, secretaries and teachers overnight. This group's real stresses, therefore, have risen, increasing an already present vulnerability to depression.

Mismanaging perfectly natural stress is one hallmark of depression patients, Emery says. He defines stress as "how you respond physically and psychologically when your demands outstrip your resources." Demands exceeding resources is a classic dilemma for young mothers. When you have small children you can bet that at any given time at least something will be unsolved and unresolved.

Another group whose depression is incredibly misunderstood, Emery says, is people 65 and older.

Since older depressed people don't cause much trouble their plight has been ignored and untreated by the mental health community, says Emery, who is 39.Most had been told by some health provider, "You're old. What do you expect but decline?"

Challenging this belief with the weapons of cognitive therapy proved very effective, Emery says. How the aging view aging is more important than any other factor, he notes.

He doesn't tell the listless, spiritless, hopeless person that life is really wonderful. "The Power of Positive Thinking" approach actually creates rather than cures depression, he says.

Gay ministers see no contradiction with faith

HOUSTON (AP) — Gay ministers gathering here for their 10th convention say there is no contradiction between Christianity and homosexuality.

But, among other issues on the six-day agenda of the Universal Fellowship of Metropolitan Community Churches, the ministers are trying to resolve a delicate semantic issue they have inherited from traditional Christianity: how to refer to the deity.

A task force assigned to the issue has recommended a change toward more "inclusive" language than such enduring references as "Lord and Master." Instead, the 3,000 delegates will consider more 'sexually balanced" terms such as "Nurturer" and even "the Breasted One."

Dr. Richard J. Follett of Hollywood, Calif., the church's media representative, conceded Tuesday the Old Testament book of Leviticus forbids sex between two men, "But it also said don't eat shrimp, don't eat lobster and women should not wear red.

"The only people who use that argument that I can respect are Orthodox Jewish rabbis," said Follett, noting Orthodox Jews observe the strictures of Leviticus.

The church, organized in 1968 to accept practicing homosexuals, claims more than 25,000 members in 170 congregations, including women and some heterosexuals. Some members also belong to other denominations. All members are consid3red "ministers," according to Follett, who is also executive director of the Samaritan Theological Institute in Hollywood.

Founder Troy Perry, 43, established the church 13 years ago after being excommunicated from the fundamentalist Church of God.

Perry, an evangelical preacher at age 15 in his hometown of Tallahassee, Fla., and the father of two sons from a heterosexual marriage, said at a news conference Tuesday his church believes its members should be ruled by conscience.

"We're very concerned with not whether people are married or not, but rather with the commitment," Perry said. He said his sect requires only "mental monogamy" of its members and that he doesn't believe love for one person necessarily precludes love for another.

"Indeed there is sinful homosexuality," Follett said. "The sin comes in worshipping the creature and not the Creator."

A gay church quickly learns about one thing common to many religious groups, Perry said.

"Persecution. We know what it is," he said. Since 1973, 13 of the group's churches have been set afire, Perry said.

The Fellowship plans to apply this year for membership in the National Council of churches, an interdenominational cooperative body that includes most Protestant and Eastern Orthodox churches in the United States.

Reagan won't negotiate with PLO

AP Laserphoto

President Reagan faces Egyptian President Anwar Sadat at the end of their White House meeting Thursday. Sadat met with the president and other government leaders on his state visit to Washington.

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan, rejecting a recommendation by Egyptian President Anwar Sadat, says U.S. negotiations with the Palestine Liberation Organization are out of the question until the PLO has a change of heart in its attitude toward Israel.

Reagan's comments, relayed to reporters Thursday by Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig Jr., came after Sadat "expressed his strong view" in a meeting between the two leaders that the PLO should be included in the dialogue for a Middle East peace.

Haig said Reagan explained to Sadat that the United States won't have direct contact with the PLO because it made a commitment to Israel that it would not negotiate with the organization until it recognizes Israel's right to exist and its right to secure borders.

Reagan also told Sadat that "American fidelity to all its commitments, whether to Israel or Egypt, or to the other friendly nations in the region are fundamental aspects in our hopes to achieve peace and stability in the area," Haig said.

He said Reagan voiced his response after Sadat "expressed his strong view ... (of) the importance of dealing with the Palestinians and urged the United States to establish contact with the PLO."

After his meeting with Reagan, the third in two days, Sadat appeared to qualify slightly his own public statements here advocating a role for the PLO.

Sadat also disclosed that he and Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin will meet in Alexandria, Egypt, sometime before Begin visits the United States.

Begin's trip, scheduled for Sept. 9-10, has the same basic purposes as Sadat's: to get to know Reagan personally and to explore ways to resume the stalled Egyptian-Israeli negotiations on autonomy for the 1.2 million Palestinians on the Israeli-occupied West Bank and Gaza Strip.

Sadat has said he favors eventual creation of a separate Palestinian state, which ISRAEL ADAMANTLY OPPOSES.

Speaking at a news conference at Blair House, Sadat repeated his view that the United States should build on the current cease-fire in Lebanon by establishing a dialogue with the Palestinian people.

"This is not the only option or only alternative," Sadat said. He said the PLO is "not the sole representative of the Palestinians" and that there are others with whom the United States should be in contact.

Sadat planned to go to New York later tmday. It was learned that former Secretary of State Henry Kissinger has accepted Sadat's invitation to accompany him on the flight.

Sadat is scheduled to receive an honorary degree at Georgetown University on Saturday and then go to Plains, Ga., for a private meeting and dinner with former President Carter on Sunday.

From all indications, Sadat and Reagan got along well, despite obvious differences on the role of the PLO, which Reagan has said he considers a terrorist organization.

"I think both leaders understood precisely the position of one another on this and accepted the position of each other," Haig told reporters at a news conference.

"We now have to hear how Mr. Begin would approach the problem," Haig said, referring the resumption of peace negotiations.

Haig said a summit meeting between Reagan, Sadat and Begin is a possibility, but not "until we know what precisely would be achieved by it."

Begin was quoted by Israeli radio Thursday as ruling out any dealings with the PLO, saying it is "not a liberation organization, but a bloody, murderous terrorist oganization in the most brutal sense of the term."

Haig was asked if the United States still felt that the PLO was a terrorist organization and remained opposed to a separate Palestinian state. He replied only that those were "old historic hookers."

Asked whether the United States considers the PLO to be a surrogate of the Soviet Union, Haig said, "I think there are certain elements in the PLO that would clearly fit under that mantle, but when you talk about the PLO you are talking about a diverse group and organization, some of the differences of which may be evident in the very recent past."

Sadat said he is optimistic that ways will be found to restore momentum to the search for a permanent peace, but added that he is willing to wait for Reagan to meet with other Middle East leaders before pressing the United States for results.

In a luncheon with the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, Sadat said he urged U.S. support for a "mutual and simultaneous recognition" of the PLO and Israel by one another as the next step in the search for peace.

"I'm not putting a question and needing an immediate answer," Sadat said of his proposals. "They have to study before they give their idea."

A State Department official, who did not want to be identified, said the mutual recognition plan might have appeal to the United States, although he doubted either the PLO or Israel would agree. But he said the United States would not take a position on anything involving peace negotiations until Reagan has consulted with Begin.

Former CIA spy chief's lawyer says loan was not improper

SHREWSBURY, N.J. (AP) — A lawyer representing former CIA spy chief Max Hugel has acknowledged his client loaned a large sum of money to two Wall Street brokers but denies the loan was improper, as the brokers alleged. The allegations prompted Hugel's resignation.

Lawyer Judah Best said in a copyright story Thursday in The Daily Register of Shrewsbury that Hugel quit the CIA because the charges by Thomas and Samuel McNell "would have impeded his performance" as the nation's top spy, not because Hugel did anything wrong.

According to the allegations, Hugel loaned money to the two brothers in the early 1070s so they could buy the stock of Hugel's import company and make it appear as though there was a demand for the stock. Demand usually pushes up the price of a stock.

Hugel quit as the CIA's head of clandestine operations after Thomas and Samuel McNell made the charges in an interview published July 14 in The Washington Post. They said the money was funneled to Thomas McNell's securities firm by Samuel McNell, who got the money from Hugel.

Best told the Register that Hugel loaned $380,000 to Samuel McNell, but Hugel "emphatically denies he ever gave money to Sam McNell for the purpose of funneling the money to McNell Securities."

Hugel said $280,000 was to be used by Samuel McNell for investment in his own company, and the rest was to be given Thomas McNell for his personal use, Best said.

Hugel considered the sums an insubstantial portion of his assets, Best added.

"The $100,00 was loaned basically because (Hugel) was a good guy," Best said. "He felt sorry for these guys. To this day, he doesn't know what was done with the money."

The company run by Hugel was Brother International Corp., which imported typewriters and other business machines from Japan.

Best said Hugel broke ties with the McNells in the fall of 1974, but the lawyer would not say why.

Reputed Mafia boss Carlos Marcello, right, leaves federal court in New Orleans with his attorney Henry Gonzales Thursday after arraignment on charges of attempting to bribe a federal judge in Los Angeles. Marcello was convicted three days ago of conspiracy in the government's Brilab case.

Bell: Education may be downgraded

WASHINGTON (AP) — Education Secretary T. H. Bell, carrying out a promise to President Reagan, wants his Cabinet-level department downgraded to a foundation, administration sources say.

If Congress goes along with such a change, Bell, the second secretary of education, would have to relinquish his seat in Reagan's Cabinet.

The sources, who asked not to be identified, said the White House is expected to decide what to do with the $14 billion department by the end of next month.

"We're not looking for a regulatory agency," one source said. "We're looking for something of more scholarship, of more research-orientation. That's the general focus."

During last year's presidential campaign, Reagan repeatedly attacked the department as a manifestation of growing federal regulatory intrusion into the affairs of schools and colleges, and he vowed to dismantle it.

Bell, a former U.S. commissioner of education, testified in favor of creating the department in 1979.

It opened its doors in May 1980, four years after former President Carter promised the National Education Association that he would seek to liberate education from the old Department of Health, Education and Welfare.

Reagan had difficulty finding someone to run the department, and Bell became the last of his Cabinet picks in January. He got the post after promising Reagan he would draw up alternatives to its Cabinet status.

Congress would have to approve any change in the 7,000-employee department's status.

Bob Harmon, the NEA's communications director, said the organization would fight any move to turn the agency into a foundation. "We think the department ought to be given a full chance to operate, and that it hasn't had that yet," he said.

The sources said Bell's recommendation was included in a list of five options sent to the White House on Tuesday. They were:

—Turning it into a foundation along the lines of the National Science Foundation, headed by a single director. It might have an outside advisory board of prominent Americans.

—Turning it into an independent agency, such as the Environmental Protection Agency.

—Merging it with one of three other departments, Health and Human Services (from whence it came) Commerce or Labor.

—Dispersing all its programs to other departments.

—Dispersing the programs while appointing a presidential adviser on education.

Bell had said repeatedly that he would not back a return to the HEW structure. As commissioner, he said, he felt "like the lowest form of animal life down in that place."

One source said that the distinction between an independent agency and the foundation was that the former would have "greater oversight powers and a greater inclination to look to regulate."

The source said that keeping the status quo was never considered, but that Education Department planners realized that some structure must be kept for the agency.

Marcello indicted on bribery charge

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Convicted conspirator Carlos Marcello is free and has until Wednesday to put up $50,000 bond while he awaits trial on his second Brilab indictment.

A California indictment accusing Marcello, a reputed organized-crime boss, of trying to bribe a federal judge was unsealed Wednesday in Los Angeles, and a federal court there recommended Marcello be required to post $50,000 bond.

U.S. Magistrate Kenneth Hughes said at a hearing Thursday he didn't think bond was necessary, but said he was "constrained to concur with the recommendation" of the California court.

The 71-year-old "Little Man" of New Orleans has until 5 p.m. Wednesday to meet the bond requirement. His fortune is estimated at $200 million.

The California conspiracy indictment charged him on three counts. The maximum punishment, if he is convicted, would be 15 years in prison and a $25,000 fine.

Marcello was convicted this week on a charge of conspiracy to bribe in a state insurance deal. The charge stemmed from his indictment in the 1979 undercover operation that the FBI code-named Brilab.

The new indictment, stemming from the Brilab probe, accuses Marcello and two others of conspiring in late 1979 and early 1980 to bribe Judge Harry Pregerson with money or an unspecified "art object."

Others named in the indictment were Samuel Orlando Sciortino of Palm Springs, Calif., and Phillip Rizzuto, a New Orleans cafe owner.

Abducted girl's clues lead to man's arrest

SAN JOSE, Calif. (AP) — A 12-year-old girl abducted five months ago and freed this week left secret clues to prove she was in the house of the man accused of kidnapping and molesting her, police said.

According an affidavit filed by the district attorney's office, Jeana Rodriguez tore the corner off a playing card and scrawled her initials and the word "kidnapped" on it and slipped it under a rug.

Miss Rodriguez, described by police as exceptionally bright, appeared at the front door of her home Wednesday. Hours later, police arrested George Dailey, 36, and charged him with kidnapping, child stealing, false imprisonment, lewd and lascivious conduct with a child, four counts of sodomy and three counts of oral copulation.

Dailey, who is being held on $1 million bail, was arraigned on the charges in Municipal Court Thursday, and Judge Mark Thomas ordered him to enter a plea next week.

"We are investigating whether there have been possible child molestations in the past," Police Lt. Tom Seck said.

Police said the girl told them Dailey abducted her when she got off a school bus near her home Feb. 27 and kept her for a time in a 5-foot-deep pit at the rear of his house. She said she also was kept tied up inside the house while Dailey went to his job at a sewage treatment plant.

Ten most beautiful women named by Harper's Bazaar magazine

Here are the ten beauties rated tops in ou land by Bazaar magazine. They are successful, hard-working women and have qualities that hinge as much on personality and strength as on diets and good skin care. But say the psychiatrists, beautiful women sometimes have hangups about their good looks and put themselves down. These women are no exceptions as some of their statements about themselves reveal in the August issue of Harper's Bazaar.

NEW YORK — Women of great beauty, say the psychiatrists, sometimes have anxieties about their good looks and at times put themselves down.

And that applies in varying degrees even to the ladies featured in the August issue of Harper Bazaar as America's ten most beautiful women.

Photographed by the famed Francesco Scavullo, their ages range from 16, Brooke Shields, to 64, Lena Horne. Here's what these ten "10s" told of their feelings about their looks.

Lena Horne: "It's not me, it's the makeup and hair people" She recalled that in the 1940s when she was first discovered, Hollywood was under a great deal of pressure to use blacks, but not in menial roles. "I made it because I looked like a brown edition of a white star. If I'd been there in the Sixties I'd never have gotten anywhere."

Brooke Shields' beauty is relentlessly discussed every time she appears anywhere. Doesn't she get plain tired of it? "You see," she protests. "it's everybody else who looks at me like that—as a beauty. To me, it's not such a big deal." With all her magnificent looks, she is critical of herself: "The one thing I might like to have instantly is perfect posture."

Jaclyn Smith will apear on ABC-TV this season as Jacqueline Bouvier Kennedy, one of the most admired, most photographed beauties in the world. Yet when Jaclyn catapulted to fame on "Charlie's Angels," the constant talk of her beauty came as quite a surprise to her. Confeses Jaclyn, "I never thought about being beautiful...I wear very little makeup when I'm not working...I don't feel like a professional beauty at all."

Victoria Principal of "Dallas" had doubts about her looks when she was a kid. "Growing up I always wished I were blonde and blue-eyed; now I don't want to look different." She's one among the ten who is well aware of her beauty and because the makeup she wears on the show is so "intense," she says, "I have my skin professionally cleansed every two weeks. I'm not really comfortable in heavy makeup."

When Lois Chiles, the stunning blue-eyed beauty from "The Great Gatsby" and "Death on the Nile," looks at you and tells you she's surprised you think she's pretty you're hard-put to believe her. Her real-life look is the well-scrubbed girl-next-door—jeans (non-designer), ankle-high boots, a pullover, no jewelry, no makeup. Lois doesn't think about whether or not she's pretty. "It's difficult to get too self-involved about something you didn't do anything for."

Cristina Ferrare's aristocratic, almost flawless features make her one of the most sought-after models and tv spokeswomen in America. But she's not one of those pencil-thin models many advertisers demand. Her weight fluctuates. "I've recently come to accept the fact that I'll always be three to ten pounds overweight. Right now for example, I'm in my middle-thin period—four pounds up." But as soon as she tops that she's off to the Golden Door "diet farm" for a week. "I practically live there," she jokes.

Susan Sarandon is an actress whose talent and beauty know no bounds. She's both disciplined and flexible about her looks. Though she swims a mile every day in a pool near her New York apartment, she is adamant about not adhering to a strict routine. "If I feel like jogging, I do. If I don't, I don't and I don't worry about it...I do spur-of-the-moment things like steam my face over spaghetti whenever I make it.

Dayle Haddon, model turned actress ("The Last Romantic Lover," "North Dallas Forty") feels this way about her looks: "I'd like to be known for what I am—not for what I look like...though how you look is profoundly affected by what you are." It's one of the reasons Dayle wants to avoid the "pretty-girl" or "girlfriend" roles that keep coming her way. "Those characters are just caricatures."

AT WIT'S END

How to win a war

By ERMA BOMBECK

A group of women were discussing the draft the other night and we decided if we were invited to a war, we could jolly well have the imagination to think of some way to terminate it.

I suggested the best way to stop a war was to ask the men directions on how to get there. We'd never find it.

As the suggestions flowed in, we decided to make a list.

1. Let Tim Conway make a series out of it and it would run only 13 weeks. 2. Put the war in the hands of the post office. It might not stop it, but it would certainly slow it down.

3. Assign children to war zones and tell them they have to clean their rooms before they can go.

4. Tell your husband it's something he has to dress up for.

5. Transport troops via Amtrak.

6. Have one-size-fits-all uniforms that are issued in little eggs.

7. Schedule it on the same night Alan Alda is speaking to your child study group.

8. Spread the rumor hair bleach will be in short supply until the war is over.

9. Tell them the other side is fighting with a cellulite germ that makes thighs inflate upon impact.

Probably the best suggestion came from Barb, whose son graduated from high school and left home for the first time to join the Marine Corps. When he came home on leave he wasn't in the house five minutes before he engaged in a knock-down-drag-out fight with his 15-year-old brother.

Barb grabbed a large wooden spoon, jumped between them, and gave them a look that would get her 30 years.

They separated and backed off. Barb figures the only way to end a war is to draft experienced mothers, arm them with wooden spoons and "the look" and send them into battle.

You haven't seen desertion until you've seen children running from their mothers' tongues. You think they can stand hearing, "What do you think you're doing? Don't you have anything more constructive to do? I'll give you something to do. Now, put that gun down before someone gets hurt!"

Ridiculous, you say? Not half as ridiculous as wars.

Your child's eyes may need exam

By PAT PHILLIPS
Copley News Service

If you've forgotten to have your child's eyes examined, you could be sending him-her off to school without one of the most valuable tools for successful learning — good vision.

In one optometric study of learning-disabled children, 90 percent had 20-20 vision, but all had some vision problem that hampered their ability to learn.

Although most of these children had at least average intelligence, their inability to learn at normal speed subjected them to teasing by classmates and pressure from parents and teachers resulting in frustrations that fostered delinquent behavior.

The approaching school term gives parents a new chance to spot children's vision problems by watching their youngsters' behavior and posture while doing homework, according to the American Optometric Association.

Symptoms to look for include: frequent clumsiness, difficulty reading or doing other close work, a short attention span for the child's age, frequent blinking, complaints of nausea, dizziness or headaches after reading or doing other close work, a tense position when looking at objects far away or close up, tilting the head noticeably to one side when reading, holding books up very close to the eyes and continued avoidance of reading and close work in favor of outside activities.

If your child exhibits any or all of these symptoms, an eye examination is in order. Keep in mind that the vision screening given in schools, most often with an outdated eye chart, has its flaws. For one thing, it's easy to cheat on the test. It dates back to 1862 and your child has probably seen it before. Also, the eye chart tells only one thing — whether the child has 20-20 vision. This means that the chances are good that other vision problems will pass unnoticed.

Your child's eyes must be able to change focus quickly, move accurately across a page, distinguish colors and relay accurate messages to the brain. An eye chart cannot evaluate these functions, so your child could end up leaving school tired, with headaches and irritable because of a vision problem.

A complete professional optometric examination takes from 30 to 60 minutes and includes a battery of tests.

While the specific tests given will vary with each patient's individual needs, all examinations should cover:

— A review of the patient's and family's general health and eye health history.

— Examination of the eye's exterior and interior for signs of eye disease or general health problems, such as high blood pressure or hardening of the arteries that may manifest themselves in the eyes.

— Tests of the current ability to see sharply and clearly at near and far distances.

— Tests to determine nearsightedness, farsightedness or astigmatism — all common problems that can blur vision or cause visual discomfort.

— A check of eye coordination and eye muscle function to be certain the eyes are working together as a team.

— A test of the ability to change focus easily from near to far and vice versa.

— A glaucoma test for patients over 35 or for those whose health history or other findings indicates a need.

A child's first vision examination, which the American Optometric Association suggests should be before age 3, should include all of the above tests plus the following:

— Tests of depth perception and color vision.

— Motor tests to check eye-hand-foot coordination.

— When a child's family or behavior history indicates a need, a series of tests to determine whether or not the development of the child's vision skills is normal. (These may include tests of size and shape awareness using building with blocks, tests of form perception involving copying forms on paper or visual memory testing by completing incomplete pictures drawn on paper.)

Optometrists recommend vision examination for a child at age 3, again before he-she starts school and periodically thereafter.

Not every optometric examination results in a lens prescription or changes in current lenses. When it does, you have a choice of taking a written prescription for eyeglasses to an optician for filling or of obtaining the glasses through the optometrist. Since optometric education includes a thorough backgrounding in the field of optics, nearly 87 percent of optometrists dispense eyeglasses.

If your child needs corrective lenses, you may have to encourage him-her to wear them.

You should let your child help pick out the frames to make sure that he or she is happy with the selection. Then, check the selection to ensure durability. Your child should be able to wear glasses safely for play without continually being cautioned to "be careful."

Don't underestimate the power of idols. Point out spectacle-wearing sports or entertainment stars. If you wear glasses, use yourself as an example with very young children, who often want to "be just like Mommy or Daddy." Also, look for television programs in which a young person gets or wears glasses.

If your child absolutely refuses to wear glasses, discuss the possibility of contact lenses with the optometrist. This is the answer for some but not all children and teen-agers.

Children with vision perception problems sometimes are greatly helped by vision therapy, a series of procedures and eye exercises used to modify and improve the way the eyes perform. Most younger children adjust easily to vision therapy. Older children may balk until they begin to see the results of improved vision.

Tale of two towns accents patriot era

By JANET SUTTER
Copley News Service

DEERFIELD, Mass. — It was a standard highway sign, black letters on a yellow background that read, "Thickly Settled."

For motorists entering an 18th century town, it seemed the right touch. Just a short turn off the paved highway and there it was — an exquisite mile known as Historic Deerfield.

It is a living town. Many of the homes on the "Street" are occupied by Deerfield Academy faculty, but there are many other houses open for visitors, so many that one could stay two days, if not three or four.

Settlers started defending this land long before the Revolutionary War. The area was settled in 1669, then there were devastating Indian attacks, the last in 1704. Hard to believe now, this was once the frontier.

Less than an hour's drive away, also in the Connecticut River Valley and just south of Springfield, the town of Longmeadow beckons with homes that are set back on lush lawns on either side of the longest village green in New England.

On about 70 houses — almost all private residences — small signs with a white star on a red background identify those built in the 1700s, white on blue for 1800s. Some houses have an additional sign with a tricorn hat, plus a star for each family member who fought with the militia in the 1770s.

For three centuries Longmeadow has sent men to war, their memory honored with plaques, in the middle of the green, that span from 1675 with the Colonial Wars through Vietnam.

This might be called a Tale of Two Towns — Deerfield and Longmeadow — as much Patriot Country as Lexington, Concord and Boston to the east. Deerfield is keen on tourism, Longmeadow is quieter, but both are impressive examples of the area's many historic villages.

"The Street is one measured mile, running North and South. ... There is a gate at each end of the Street and about 60 houses in better style, than in any of the Towns I saw." From the diary of the Rev. Wiliam Bentley, on a visit to Deerfield in 1782.

In a sense, things have changed very little since then. And to make sure they didn't, Helen Geier Flynt and her late husband, Henry N. Flynt, founded Historic Deerfield in 1952 to carry on the preservation of the village. Now, it maintains 12 houses as museums. Just a sampling of a few of these houses is rich stuff.

More than four might be hard to remember. Visitor headquarters is Hall Tavern, where the staff enthusiastically makes sure one sees as much as possible.

Each house-museum is set up for a 45-minute guided tour.

Inside the Silver Shop were the workroom and tools of a silversmith, gleaming in the next room, a bountiful array of American and English silver. Among the makers, Revere, his last name stamped boldy on his work. It was the custom for American silversmiths to put their "touch marks" on the outside. On a top shelf was a bowl similar to that received by thousands of brides, but this was a REAL Revere item, with the luster of age and Hanging from two wooden cranes over the open fireplace were dried flowers and dishcloths — and no doubt, laundry was once hung there to dry in winter. A long 17th century tavern table and ladder-back chairs were also in the room. The fireplace was back-to-back with another — summer and winter kitchens.

The house is paneled in pine, the floors are of wide planks. A collection of the first Chinese export porcelain to come to Deerfield graces a front parlor. The guide points out that the 18th century East Massachusetts walnut highboy has the original brass fittings. The next room contains a beautiful block front desk — made from one "block" of mahogany. A lacquered looking glass said to have once belonged to Peregrine White, the first child born after the Pilgrims landed in America, hangs on a wall in the hall.

A rope bed and an 18th century white nightgown that hangs nearby add a distinctive touch to each of the bedrooms upstairs — all of which display period furnishings placed as they would have been in the past.

This is but a brief sampling. Among others, the Allen House, built in 1720, now displays the Flynts' collection of Boston and Connecticut Valley furniture while the 1824 Wright House has Chippendale and Federal pieces.

In Longmeadow, about 20 Minutemen trained on "The Green" before they left to join the militia in Boston after the battle of Concord and Lexington. It was then a quiet little farming town. It's now an elegant suburb of Springfield.

A group of farmers settled on the "long meddowe" by the banks of the Connecticut River in 1644, but after several floods, the community was eventually moved up the hill. Today the original meadow is a favored spot of bird-watchers — part of the area is the Fannie Stebbins Wildlife Refuge.

Longmeadow was the first town in the state to be incorporated (in 1783) after the Revolutionary War. It still maintains the open "town meeting" form of government. The bell in the steeple of First Church of Christ, built in 1768, was cast by Paul Revere, rang out on the day of victory for independence, and still rings every Sunday.

The historic houses on the green are not open to visitors, but nonetheless one can appreciate the view and the architecture.

A handsome example of a Longmeadow home is the two-story blue-gray house with white trim built for Ebenezer Bliss in 1720. An American flag flies from the porch and a small sign reveals that three militiamen went from this house to fight.
two centuries of polishing.

Across the street and down a ways is the Sheldon-Hawks house, built in 1743. George Sheldon, Deerfield's historian, was born here in 1818. At age 98, completing his last book on the town, he announced to his wife he was going to die that day — and did.

The house displays both the more primitive New England furnishings and the more elegant. Entering through the kitchen, one's attention is immediately drawn to a rope bed tied upright against a wall. It was let down at night, a custom in many homes, for in winter the kitchen was the warmest room in the house.

DEAR ABBY

Quarrels cloud wedding

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: I am terriby confused about what to do. I am going to marry a wonderful young man and have some tough decisions to make.

First, my parents have been divorced for six years. It was a very unfriendly divorce. My father remarried soon after. My mother is still alone and very bitter. My father is very well-to-do. He paid child support, and wasn't cheap about it, either.

I've always wanted a big, beautiful church wedding, which my mother can't afford, but my father can. However, he says he will pay for any kind of wedding I want if he can walk me down the aisle and bring his present wife.

My mother says if my father brings his wife she will not attend, but if he comes alone, he can walk me down the aisle. And, if HE stands in the receiving line, she will not stand next to him. (Won't that look awfully peculiar?)

These problems are giving me a big headache. I'd almost be willing to settle for a little, tiny wedding, but my fiance's family knows that my father is rich, and they expect a big, splashy wedding. What should I do? — WEDDING BLUES

DEAR WEDDING BLUES: Look at the facts. Your father has agreed to give you a big, beautiful church wedding only if he can bring his present wife. Your mother says if the new wife comes, she will not attend. So assuming they both mean what they say, you will have to decide whether you want the big fancy wedding without your mother, or the tiny wedding within your mother's means with both parents.

If you choose the big church wedding, you won't have to worry about where your mother will stand in the receiving line because she won't be there.

I think you'd be much happier with both parents at a "little, tiny wedding."

DEAR ABBY: Lately at our family get-togethers, my children, who are themselves parents, use such foul language that it makes me ill. They never heard such language in our home.

Sometimes I feel I never again want to attend another family get-together, but since my husband's death two years ago, I need my children more than ever.

They all have college degrees and should know better. I am too embarrassed to ask my clergyman for advice.

Please, how can I stop the use of such foul language? — DISTRAUGHT MOTHER

DEAR MOTHER: You can let your children know that you are very much offended by foul language, then hope that out of respect for you, they will clean up their act — at least in your presence.

DEAR ABBY: Do you think it's wise to force a child to join something — like the Cub Scouts or Brownies?

I have been accused of allowing my children to rule me because I have given them a choice in such matters. It has been suggested that children are not always a good judge of what they will or will not enjoy, that after having been exposed to something they were initially negative about, they changed their minds. What do you think? — YOUNG MOTHER

DEAR MOTHER: I wouldn't force a child to join anything. But if I thought he would benefit from the experience, I would present it in the most attractive way possible.

HINTS FROM HELOISE

Budge your memory

DEAR HELOISE:

When I have something to remember, instead of tying a string around my finger, I tape the cut edges of the key I have to use before I leave home or work.

In case I forget what it is I should remember, I write a "key" word on the tape to re-remind myself.

By taping the key, I cannot unlock or lock a door or start the car until I get what I've forgotten.

Got that? — Ricki Driffill

I think so. Now, where's my key ring? — Heloise

HINTS FROM HIM

Dear Heloise: If a door has warped enough to scrap the floor, put a piece of coarse sandpaper underneath the dragging part and work the door back and forth.

This should sand off enough to make the door open easily. — John H. Gross

SOCK MONSTER

Dear Heloise: We have put our sock-eating monster on a diet.

My 14-year-old son placed a pile of tiny safety pins on the top of his bureau. Each night before tossing his socks in the hamper, he pins them together.

It's as simple as that! The socks stay mated through the washer and dryer.

Each morning he reverses the procedure, as he unpins fresh socks and puts the pin on top of his bureau.

Now, if I could only persuade his dad and younger brother to do the same, our sock-eater would starve! — Celia K. Brown

Playthings are educators

Copley News Service

As older brothers and sisters return to school this fall, a younger child's education begins at home with mom, dad and toys as his teachers. Just as books are important to secondary school learning, a child's playthings and his interaction with those who show, watch and praise will shape his mental and physical development.

Learning begins at birth. Physically, the child becomes an active participant in his life as he moves about unaided. Psychologically, he becomes aware of himself as a separate entity from mother —and develops feelings about himself. Intellectually he grows while investigating and trying to make sense of his environment.

No one toy alone can help a child grow physically, psychologically and intellectually. Parents should expose their children to different types of toys that will stimulate and facilitate the mastering of all developmental needs.

Kusan, a manufacturer of children's toys, offers the following suggestions.

Give children toys that let them control their environment. It's important for them to see that their involvement does bring about a change. Playing with a truck that can be made to perform certain tasks will not only provide hours of fun, but will help foster feelings of self-confidence and self-competence. When choosing a baby's first fleet, look for toys that move smoothly and are designed for manipulation by little hands.

Provide preschoolers with toys that will invite their curiosity, tantalize their intellect, promote independence and challenge physical strength.

Advance planning important for safe vacation

By RANDOLPH E. SCHMID
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — High gasoline prices notwithstanding, millions of Americans still take to the highways at vacation time and a little advance planning can help make that trip more safe and enjoyable.

The American Automobile Association recommends having your car checked over by a competent mechanic before setting off on a long trip.

The belts and hoses should be checked and replaced if needed, oil and filter changed and gasoline and air filters changed if necessary.

All fluid levels should be checked, as well as the air pressure in the tires, including the spare. And AAA urges checking the oil, battery and coolant levels frequently during your trip.

Pack large, infrequently used items in the bottom of the trunk, with things you'll need daily on top where they can be reached more easily.

Try not to clutter the passenger compartment. It makes you feel confined and may interfere with the driver's vision. And avoid placing loose articles on the dashboard or rear shelf where they could become dangerous flying objects in an emergency situation.

The AAA notes that one of the most important safety steps is to wear your safety belt while traveling. Infants should be secured in a child-restraint system. Other on-the-road tips from AAA include:

—Get an early start in the day when fresh and well-rested and stop by mid-afternoon to allow time for relaxation and sightseeing.

—Take a break every few hours to stretch your legs and break the monotony of driving.

—Don't drive too far or too long in one day. A reasonable traveling distance in one day is 350 to 400 miles.

—Listen to your car radio for road and weather conditions ahead.

—Keep luggage and valuables in the trunk and never leave your car unlocked.

METEOR SHOWER COMING — If you enjoy stargazing, look for the Perseid meteor shower, expected Aug. 12.

The U.S. Naval Observatory reports that Americans should be able to observe meteors, if skies are clear, by looking directly overhead in the hours after midnight that night. (Really, the very early morning of the 13th).

The nearly full moon may cause some visibility problems, but astronomers say that a better than average shower is a possibility because increased meteor numbers are often associated with comets and the Swift-Tuttle comet, last seen in 1862, is making a return.

NEED A JOB? — If you're looking for a job — or a different job — the Labor Department has a new book that may help.

"Matching Personnel and Job Characteristics," discusses the requirements of many types of work and can help you decide what you qualify for and might enjoy.

For example, there are openings across the country for people to repair automatic bowling machines, and you don't even need a high school diploma.

If you like to work outdoors a high school diploma and some technical training could land a surveyor's job. If you prefer indoor work and don't mind being isolated from other people, maybe becoming a movie projectionist is for you, and you can do that part time.

These are other jobs are discussed in the book, which costs $1.25 from the Consumer Information Center, Dept. 125J, Pueblo, Colo., 81009.

VETS QUERIES — Here are some questions often asked of the Veterans Administration, and the answers:

Q. My husband, a disabled veteran, has a serious drinking problem. Can the VA help him?

A. Yes, VA has alcohol treatment programs at many of its hospitals. Contact your nearest VA hospital for detals.

Q. I am planning to buy a home under the GI home loan guaranty program. Will VA guarantee that the home is free from defects?

A. No. VA cannot guarantee a home to be defect-free, nor can it compel a builder to remedy defects or otherwise force a builder to fulfill a contract.

Q. Is an incarcerated veteran eligible for VA benefits?

A. A veteran in prison or on parole may still be entitled to benefits. Detailed information is contained in the pamphlet "Veterans Benefits, Inside ... Outside," which is available at no charge from the Veterans Administration (27), 810 Vermont Ave. NW, Washington, D.C., 20420.

Americans tied to television

NEW YORK (AP) — Americans are more attuned to their television sets than to any other appliance in the household except perhaps stoves, according to a report on TV in the United States.

Today, the RCA study showed, there are more than 150 million TV sets playing in American homes — more than telephones, refrigerators, air conditioners, vacuum cleaners, and-or dishwashers.

Other statistics revealed by the report: some 98 percent of the nation's homes have at least one TV set, 85 percent have color and nearly 50 percent have two sets or more. Daily televiewing in American homes averages about 6½ hours.

Soap box shipment

AKRON, Ohio (AP) — Venezuelan youths ordered 250 race-car kits from the All-American Soap Box Derby to help their nation win the classic event this year.

A race official called it "the largest international shipment of kits in the 44-year history of the Soap Box Derby." The miniature cars weighed more than 15,000 pounds, according to Emery Air Freight, the company that delivered them.

Components were shipped in several stages from Akron to the YMCA in San Bernadino, Venezuela. They were distributed to youths 10 to 15 years old.

The fastest drivers in two age categories from Venezuela, Canada, West Germany and 35 states in this country will square off for the Derby finals in Akron Aug. 15.

Washington readers watch their falling Star

By MIKE FEINSILBER
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The legend under the nameplate on the front page of today's Washington Star said "129th year, No. 219." There will be no No. 220.

The Star said goodbye to its readers in an 80-page edition full of reminscence about the glorious days when it dominated journalism in Washington.

It is going out of business, leaving The Washington Post as the only daily newspaper here and making Washington the biggest one-paper city in America.

Time Inc., the Star's owner of the last 3½ of its 128-year history, says that in the last two weeks it talked to 60 potential buyers — and met with 11 of them — in an attempt to sell the newspaper.

But Time insisted that a buyer commit itself to spending at least $20 million and to keep the Star going at least a year, spokesman Donald M. Wilson said.

"We didn't want someone to come in and dispose of the paper's assets in three months and leave its employees high and dry" without the severance pay and pensions they will collect from Time, he said.

None of the potential buyers would make that commitment, he said.

The Star's final press run of 425,000 copies, 100,000 above the normal press run, began at 3 a.m. Above the masthead letters 1¾ inches deep proclaimed "Final Edition." Below was a letter from President Reagan.

"There is a great silence today in Washington," Reagan's letter said. "A fine newspaper is gone and a nobile tradition ended.... It is a setback for the cause of diversity in the press and for that precious but always fragile freedom — the right to print and publish freely. All of us are losing a strong, reliable friend."

Inside the paper, readers filled four pages with letters bemoaning the Star's demise. An advertising-public relations firm took out a full-page ad showing a blank front page blank except for the Star's masthead, the leged with a No. 220, and an admonition: "Silence is not golden."

"We hope the press concept nourished by the Star for 128 years of responsiblity for change and growth of the nation's capital will never end," Editor Murray J. Gart wrote in a final editorial. "Above all, we hope our journalistic successors will be fair. Farewell."

In a story about art imitating death as well as life, the Star quoted Gene Reynolds, executive producer of the television series "Lou Grant," as saying the final days of the Star will be the model for the final show in the series about newspapering when its ratings wane.

"It's a tough thing, all of these lives being reversed," Reynolds said. "It will make a hell of a last show for us."

At the Star on Thursday, the mood was "somber, approaching depression," said Philip Shandler, who wrote "The Federal Column" for government workers.

He started his last column this way: "So this is what it's like to be riffed...."

In governmentese, "RIF" means "reduction in force" and "riffed" means to be laid off.

"Actually," mused Shandler, "this is an EOF, not an RIF — elimination of force."

He said the Star was selling out its stock of Star memorabilia, includinm a blue silk necktie decorated with an off-white five-pointed star and a red starburst in the background. Staffers could buy the tie for $2 and "people are buying them by the dozens," Shandler said.

Most newspapers that close have no chance to print a full obituary. Time's move in keeping the Star alive for two weeks was unusual and gave the paper the chance to carry reports of the sometimes frantic community and employee efforts to find a new owner — none of which came to anything.

MC to graduate vocational nurses

Vocational nursing students at Midland College will be graduated in campus ceremonies next Thursday evening at 7:30 p.m. in the Allison Fine Arts Building recital hall.

Thirteen students are candidates to receive their vocational nursing pins and diplomas. The public is invited to attend the graduation ceremony.

Candidates for graduation include: Rosemary Carrillo, Helen Collett, Sharon Kay Fowler, Nila Joyce Hardin, Murry Lee Harris, Janet Kay Kuykendall, Robert Thomas Major, Lori Ann Munday, Cornelia Rudmann, Yvettia Russell, Linda Marie Sanders, Catherine Washington and Celia Gayle Yates.

Carol Cornelius, LVN and a graduate of the Midland College vocational nursing program, will play the processional and recessional music. The invocation and benediction will be given by Dorothy McGruder, LVN, a graduate of the Midland College vocation nursing program and the president of District 21, Licensed Vocational Nursing Association.

Welcome will be extended by Dr. Wayne Holcomb, chairman of the vocational studies division of Midland College. Dr. Charles Wakefield, dean of occupational studies at MC, will give the commencement address.

Patricia Myers, RN, director of the Midland College vocational nursing program, will present the graduates, and Virginia Land, RN, vocational nursing instructor, will present the school pins. Dr. Holcomb will give the students their certificates.

The vocational nursing program is a 12-month combination of classroom study, laboratory work and clinical obsevation and practice designed to prepare students for the state Licensed Vocational Nursing examination. The clinical work is done in cooperation with Midland Memorial Hospital.

Pre-registration begins with many signing up

Pre-registration for the 1981 fall semester at Midland College is off to a fast start. During the first three days of pre-registration, more than 1,040 students signed up for credit courses. This is almost the identical number who pre-registered during the same period last year.

"We are pleased with the number of persons who have come out this week to pre-enroll," noted registrar Dee Windsor. "All our publicity about the importance of pre-registration is paying off, we feel, and we encourage other people to pre-register as quickly as possible."

Pre-registration activities continue this week on Midland College's summer schedule. Persons wishing to receive early counseling and early registration assistance may do so from 7 a.m. until 8:30 p.m. Monday through Thursday. Pre-registration is handled in the Office of Student Services, which is located in the Administration Building.

Midland College continues pre-registration through August 25. Starting on Aug. 17, Midland College will be back on its regular five-day work schedule and early registration will be conducted on those days from 8 a.m. to 5:30 p.m.

Official registration is slated for Wednesday and Thursday, Aug. 26 and 27. Classes begin on Aug. 31.

Last fall, Midland College had an all-time record enrollment for credit course students of 2699. A comparable number is expected this year.

Florida fighting fruit fly outbreak, requests ban on California produce

TAMPA, Fla. (AP) — A six-block area surrounding a calamondin tree where three Mediterranean fruit flies were found was targeted for pesticide spraying as Florida officials mount an assault on the pests they say threaten their $4 billion produce industry.

State attorneys in Tallahassee, meanwhile, were going before U.S. District Judge William Stafford today with a request to let Florida resume banning shipments of produce from California. Officials believe the medflies found in Tampa were brought in from California.

"What we are asking for is a 16-day embargo, which we think gives an eminently reasonable time to take eradication measures and determine the extent of the infestation," said Florida Attorney General Jim Smith.

A federal judge in Panama City, Fla., last month lifted Florida's stringent quarantine against California fruit and vegetables.

No new medflies were found Thursday, but state officials said it was too early to tell the extent of the infestation. Spraying was to start today.

world in brief

Two French banks, Air France office in Beirut bombed; Demands listed

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Two French banks and the Air France office were targets of overnight bomb explosions in predominantly Moslem West Beirut. An anonymous caller told Lebanese newspapers the bombings would continue until France extradited ousted Iranian President Abolhassan Bani-Sadr.

The caller also was quoted by the newspapers today as demanding the extradition of Massoud Rajavi, the leader of Iran's Islamic-Marxist underground Mujahedeen Khalq organization, and Shapour Bakhtiar, the last prime minister of Iran before the February 1979 downfall of the monarchy.

France awaiting Monday release

PARIS (AP) — The French government is cooling its heels until Monday, waiting to see whether Iran will make good on its promise to begin allowing French citizens to leave the country.

"We are not worried at the moment, we have no reason to be," a Foreign Ministry spokesman said Thursday after Iran announced it would allow French nationals to leave on Iran Air flights Monday and Wednesday.

Earlier Thursday 62 French citizens, who had obtained exit visas Wednesday, were barred from leaving Tehran airport on an Air France jet sent to pick them up. A second French aircraft was not allowed to land.

Relatives of hunger striked ejected

DUBLIN, Ireland (AP) — Police ejected 14 relatives of Irish nationalist hunger strikers from the office of Prime Minister Garret FitzGerald. The relatives staged a sit-in after FitzGerald rejected their demands that he intervene to seek an end to the death fast in Northern Ireland.

The relatives, all from the British province, went to Dublin Thursday and met with FitzGerald, complaining that he was not doing enough to end the fast in which eight jailed guerrillas have died in the past three months.

Gambian rebels flee troops

BANJUL, Gambia (AP) — Gambian rebels fled their last stronghold shortly before Senegalese troops stormed the military camp and freed more than 100 people held hostage for a week.

"I thank God," President Dawda Jawara said Thursday after the hostages, including four of his children, were freed. One of his wives and four of his other children were rescued Wednesday by two Europeans.

Lt. Gen. Abdourahman N'Gom, commander of the 1,500 men from neighboring Senegal, said the rebels left the camp, seven miles from the capital, before his troops moved in Thursday with tanks, armored personnel carriers and commando forces.

Canadian postal contract pending

OTTAWA (AP) — Postal union leaders meet today to set the date for a ratification vote for a tentative two-year contract with the government. If accepted, mail would begin moving next week for the first time in more than a month.

Union sources said they won partial victories on maternity leave, vacations and shift premiums but lost a bid for a 12th annual paid holiday in the new accord, agreed upon Thursday.

Polish workers strike for four hours

By THOMAS W. NETTER
Associated Press Writer

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — As sirens wailed, coal miners and other workers in Poland's vital Silesian industrial belt struck for four hours today in support of the Solidarity labor federation's campaign for decisive government action to end the food crisis.

A union spokesman said miners remained at the pitheads of at least 60 coal mines and refused to go underground when the day shift started at 6 a.m. He said workers in most big factories in the region joined the protest.

"In some factories, local Solidarity officials had resolved not to strike, but had to buckle and give in under pressure from the workers," said union spokesman Ryszard Kuszleyko.

"People are positively angry," he said. "Many have called for an immediate prolongation of the stoppage."

Union officials in Katowice, the center of the Silesian region of south Poland, said between 800,000 and 900,000 of its 1.5 million members took part in the strike, which they called a "protest against the deepening economic catastrophe" in Poland.

"We cannot sit idly with folded arms and watch the country sink deeper and deeper into economic chaos," Kuszleyko said. He blamed the government for "torpedoing social initiatives."

In Moscow, meanwhile, the Communist Party newspaper Pravda attacked "union extremists" in a sharply worded article on Poland's latest round of labor unrest.

Only hard work and a return to Marxist-Leninist principles can prevent Polish trade union extremists from pushing their country into an abyss, Pravda said.

The Solidarity officials in Katowice said they would ask Solidarity's national leaders to set a deadline for a nationwide general strike within seven days. They said they would call their own general strike if the national leaders did not comply.

The independent labor union went ahead with the warning strike after talks between Solidarity and the government on the food crisis ended early today without agreement on steps to be taken to ease food shortages and increase the meat ration.

"There was some progress but not much," said the union's press spokesman, Janusz Onyszkiewicz, after Solidarity chief Lech Walesa and his associates met for 10 hours with Deputy Premier Mieczyslaw Rakowski.

"Solidarity is talking about bread and meat, and the government is talking about ideology," said Jan Tulewski, a radical member of the union team.

The union's national coordinating commission was to meet in Gdansk Monday to assess the talks. Union officials said the government was invited to send a representative to the meeting, which will be held the day before a meeting of the Communist Party Central Committee.

A goverment communique blamed Solidarity for the failure to reach agreement. It charged that the union sought "ill will and confrontation."

Walesa and his delegation demanded restoration of the one-pound cut in the monthly meat ration for August, submission of proposed increases in food prices to public approval and development of broad economic reforms giving greater autonomy to the workers.

The Solidarity press spokesman said Rakowski responded with 10 counter-proposals, including a ban on the street demonstrations that have been taking place almost daily across the country in the two weeks since the government cut the monthly meat ration from 7.7 to 6.6 pounds and announced plans to increase the price of staple foods as much as 400 percent.

Commentaries in the official newspapers this morning were particularly sharpas a result of the public protests.

"It is hard not to blush with shame," the hard-line army daily Zolnierz Wolnosci said. "Maybe some ears will bend more willingly to the truth written by foreign pens, which cannot be suspected of resentment toward the radical wing of the Solidarity union."

"Today we are facing an ever-more-evident, basic political conflict, mounting aggressiveness towards the party and state authority and a constantly expanding struggle for power," said the Communist Party daily Trybuna Ludu.

Catholic prelates due in Bolivia

LA PAZ, Bolivia (AP) — Roman Catholic prelates were expected to fly to southeast Bolivia today to try to mediate between army rebels there and the military junta in La Paz.

The junta, made up of the commanders of the three armed forces, announced Thursday night that the papal nuncio to Bolivia, Monsignor Alfio Rapisarda, and the president of the Bolivian Conference of Bishops, Monsignor Luis Rodriquez, agreed to its request to help end the four-day-old rebellion led by Gens. Lucio Anez Rivero and Alberto Natusch Busch.

A broadcast from Santa Cruz, the rebel headquarters and Colombia's second largest city, claimed that the insurgents controlled all of eastern Bolivia plus the provinces of Tarija and Potosi. It said the junta apparently had the support of the troops in La Paz, the capital, Cochabamba, the third largest city, and Oruro.

No fighting had been reported yet in the fourth flareup in three months ot a power struggle within the ruling military establishment. Sources in La Paz said they heard rebel broadcasts Thursday night reporting some paramilitary units from the capital had landed at dirt airstrips near Santa Cruz and might have engaged rebel forces in combat. But the reports could not be confirmed.

Diplomatic and private sector sources said the junta had ordered troops and armored vehicles toward the rebel headquarters.

"I don't believe there will be a clash. The problem may be settled today," an army commander who asked not to be identified told The Associated Press today.

Your horoscope

By JEANE DIXON

Saturday, August 8, 1981

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY: One of the all-time box office stars, Esther Williams, shares this birthday with you. Also born on this date: former vice presidential wife Joan Mondale, Dustin Hoffman and "CHiPs" star Larry Wilcox. Business partnerships will be especially rewarding this year, and you can count on the financial picture to brighten. Maximize your chances for attaining your goals by being more pragmatic and flexible. Your candid nature may occasionally interfere with romance but will not prevent you from having an exciting time. Let matters of the heart take their own direction rather than trying to steer them to a particular destination.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): A first-class day for catching up on family news, enjoying new experiences with loved ones. Romance dominates the thoughts of those who are single. You expand your circle of friends.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Check time schedules if planning to play tennis or golf or attend a sports event. Mate may make a special request. Avoid doing anything to hurt the ones you love.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): You and family member have lots of catching up to do, reminiscing about old times, planning new adventures. Keep your eyes and ears open for bargains while shopping.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): You are at your intellectual best today, ready to take on anyone in a battle of wits. Bring a change of clothes to work; you could spend the night at a friend's house.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Refusing to discuss or think about challenges will not make them disappear. Take loved ones into your confidence. A move to another city or state is a real possibility.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Unexpected developments could disrupt your plans today, so play things by ear. Move discreetly in matters that could arouse the fury of loved ones. Postpone financial discussions.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Discuss those things that are upsetting you. The "silent treatment" will only make mate or partner uneasy. The mail will bring welcome news. Plan a small celebration for tonight.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Entertaining at home holds greater appeal than going out. Include both the young and the not-so-young. Be sympathetic towards teen-ager's problems. Make suggestions only if asked.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Review family financial situation and look for ways to improve it. Mate has good ideas and will appreciate being consulted. Be patient with older people.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): An excellent day for pursuing romance and building happy personal relationships. Get out into the fresh air if you can, but postpone travel. You could be surprised by relative's confession.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Do not let complacency endanger an important relationship. If married, check with mate before accepting a social invitation. Child's request deserves priority over all others.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Some romantic hopes should be fulfilled this weekend. A stroke of good luck hands you a bonus. If small repair jobs need doing, take care of them early in the day.

The bidding:

North	East	South	West
1 ♠	1 ◇	1 ♡	Pass
2 ♡	Pass	4 ♡	Pass
Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Jack of ◇.

Some card combinations are hardly discussed in the textbooks. That is because you have to rely on bluff rather than technique in handling them. Here's a case.

North-South arrived at four hearts after a straightforward auction. South gave full value to his fit for partner's club suit when he chose to jump to game.

West led the jack of diamonds, covered by the queen and won by the ace. East continued with the king, and declarer ruffed. Declarer drew two rounds of trumps, ending in dummy, and was now faced with the prospect of holding his spade losers to two if he was going to make his game.

Those prospects were not bright. The fact that East did not shift to the king of spades at trick two, combined with the fact that West had not raised his partner's overcall or led a high spade, suggested that the spade honors were split. The only legitimate way for declarer to limit his losers in the suit to two is to find a defender with a doubleton spade honor and to guess which defender that is. For example, suppose that East had one fewer card in spades. Declarer leads a low spade to his queen, forcing out West's king. Next time he leads the suit, declarer plays low from dummy and East must win the ace "on air," establishing dummy's jack.

But declarer was aware that the chances of a 5-2 spade distribution were against the odds, especially since neither defender had tried for a ruff in the suit. He decided that he had a better chance relying on the human element. So he led the jack of spades from dummy, as if he were finessing! East played low and West won the king. Declarer ruffed the diamond continuation, crossed to dummy with a high club and led another spade toward his queen, thus establishing the lady as his tenth trick.

We will leave it up to the readers to decide whether East should be charged, but we will permit a peek at our crime sheet: East should have realized that the defenders would probably need three spade tricks to defeat the contract. Is there any holding where, if declarer has the king, the defenders can score enough tricks in the suit?

Blake Humphrey inspects his wheat field near Gardner, N.D., looking for a better yield than he got during last year's drought. Federal estimates on July 1 indiated North Dakota would lead the country in wheat production.

Wheat crops making dramatic comeback

GARDNER, N.D. (AP) — The farmers watched helplessly as their thirsty fields shriveled in the heat. Crop yields hit a 20-year low, and they tightened their belts to get through the winter. A few didn't make it.

That was last year. This spring brought rain and revival for both the qields and farmers' spirits. Planted acreage — 12 million — set a record, and although a July heat wave made some early yields disappointing, the comeback still looks dramatic.

The U.S. Department of Agriculture estimated on July 1 that North Dakota fields would yield a record 365 million bushels of wheat this year, an average of 31 bushels an acre, to lead the country in production.

If the estimates are correct, the state will produce 223 million bushels of hard red spring wheat, double last year's crop; 138 million bushels of durum wheat, used in making pasta products, an 89 percent increase; and 3.7 million bushels of winter wheat, more than three times the 1980 figure.

KANSAS, THE traditional wheat leader, is suffering from frost damage and is expected to drop to second this year with 305 million bushels.

Cautious North Dakota farmers warn that the crop isn't in the bin yet. But as harvest gets into full swing, there's a feeling of pride and relief as they look at the golden fields.

"I never like to see another farmer take a loss," Blake Humphrey said above the roar of the combine in his barley field. He bought his father's farm in 1948 after working in the shoe business. His 31-year-old son will farm the land after him.

Last year, Humphrey got roughly five bushels an acre from one 80-acre soybean field. It didn't even fill one truck. His 480 acres of wheat averaged 20 bushels an acre or less — about half the normal yield.

"I really don't think any business or farmer could have stood another year like that," said Humphrey, whose 1,280 acres lie near Gardner, about 40 miles from Fargo. "There's more farmers looking for a good crop this year than there have been for a long time.

"YOU KEEP SAYING, it's going to rain, it's got to rain. But last year it didn't. It never got better."

He had saved enough money and diversified his crops enough to make it through the winter. Some farmers in southwestern North Dakota weren't so lucky. Caught between drought and high interest rates, they had to sell.

The cities also felt the drought's pinch. In Fargo, Duane Mastel bought out his partner's share of their farm implement business and tried to cut expenses and management staff.

"The large-ticket item purchases are still somewhat slow, due to the high cost of interest, and farmers want that crop in the bin before they start buying those kinds of things," Mastel said this week. "But the small-ticket items, under $10,000, have picked up since May. Everybody's much more optimistic."

There's plenty of wheat around — the current crop is projected at a record 2.81 billion bushels and the country's stockpiles were already at 991 million bushels June 1 — and the market has been sluggish lately.

"WE DON'T HAVE the feeling the farmer is making a big plunge just because he's got a good crop out there," said Doug Larson, vice president of administration for the Production Credit Association in Fargo. "Unless there's some big change, I don't look for any wholesale buying (of equipment and supplies) like we've seen other years."

Indeed, farmers are worried that as the supply of wheat goes up, the prices they get might go down.

"With the heavy crop estimates and lack of much Soviet demand, we looked at things being pretty bleak as far as prices were concerned," Neal Fisher, marketing director for the state Wheat Commission, said.

'It's looking a little better right now. At least we're talking to the Soviets, and the Chinese are supposed to buy more. But looking at sheer supply and demand, there is very little room for optimism."

On Wednesday the United States and the Soviet Union agreed to extend their grain sales pact for a year. The extension provides for the same Soviet purchases of American corn and wheat as did the previous five-year pact, which was to expire Sept. 30 — 6 million metric tons minimum and 8 million metric tons maximum without further consultation.

THE MINNEAPOLIS price for hard red spring wheat hit a high of just over $5 per bushel last October, and has gone down since. Last week it was $4.40. Durum was $7.25 last July, $4.85 this summer.

Farmers also worry about heat damage and insects after days of 100-degree temperatures in July, and some parts of the state are still dry. The looks of the crop could be deceiving, they say.

"This is Democrat wheat," declared Humphrey, a staunch conservative, as he held it up. "It looks promising, but it doesn't produce anything."

He predicted his wheat would have 3 percent to 5 percent damage.

"I've really never seen the valley look better. I just don't believe it's quite as good as it looks."

Weather is the element he can't control, the risk he has to take.

But he says he loves this life. As his combine moved slowly through the golden rows, Humphrey looked happy. "To me," he said, "the best time of year is right now."

Vietnam veteran arrested in assault of young woman

NEW YORK (AP) — A Vietnam veteran, released two months ago from a mental hospital where he was confined for the 1977 rape and slaying of a Vietnamese neighbor here, has been arrested for allegedly trying to beat and choke a young woman he had been dating, authorities said.

Louis Kahan, 34, was arraigned in Queens Criminal Court on Thursday on charges he assaulted the former sister-in-law of Dr. Robert Damino, a psychiatrist who recommended Kahan be released because he was no longer dangerous.

Queens District Attorney John Santucci said Kahan allegedly punched, beat and tried to choke the 31-year-old woman, whose identity was withheld, at her Queens home Sunday.

Kahan, a decorated Marine, admitted in 1977 that he had raped and killed Le My Hanh, 16, a neighbor who had moved here from Vietnam in 1975. Psychiatrists argued at Kahan's non-jury trial that he killed the girl while under "delayed stress syndrome" — believing he still was in Vietnam.

Kahan was acquitted on a murder charge but was sent to the mental hospital. In February, he was transferred to another state hospital where Damino, a staff physician, was among the panel of doctors who recommended his release.

Psychiatrists at the first hospital contended he was still mentally ill and dangerous. Santucci said that since the attack, Damino has reversed himself and signed an affidavit saying he believes Kahan to be dangerous.

Martin labels split stupid

By ALEX SACHARE
AP Sports Writer

Leave it to Billy Martin to look a gift horse in the mouth.

"I think it's stupid," Martin said of baseball's split-season plan, even though its adoption meant his Oakland A's automatically qualified for the intra-divisional playoffs since they were the leaders of the American League West when the strike began June 12.

Under the split-season system, adopted by the club owners Thursday, the remainder of the season will be played as a separate entity, with the division winners facing the teams which led the divisions at the time of the strike to see who advances to the league championship series. If the same team wins both halves, it faces the club with the next-best record in its division.

THAT LAST point was what bothered Martin.

"If we win the second half, we win nothing," said the manager of the A's. "In other words I should root for Seattle to win — root for a team you can beat. I suppose it means every time we play Seattle or Toronto I should use my second-line pitchers and save my starters for teams I have to beat. That's what they're telling me, aren't they?

"I can see it now: 'Now playing in the World Series, the Chicago Cubs and the Seattle Mariners.' I guess they're taking care of the teams that didn't do well. The new rules help out the other clubs, not ours. But I guess this is going to sound like sour grapes, isn't it?"

Well, now that you mention it, yes. But while most players and managers liked the split-season concept, Martin wasn't the only one to find fault with it.

PAUL MOLITOR of the Milwaukee Brewers observed, "With a split season, you could end up with the best record and not get into the playoffs."

Indeed, a team could finish in second place by as little as one-half game in each section and have nothing to show for its near-misses, while a team that won one section would be in the playoffs even if it did miserably in the other.

Martin wasn't the only member of the division winners who wasn't satisfied. Members of the Los Angeles Dodgers and New York Yankees, who took the first half of the NL West and AL East, respectively, also voiced their displeasure.

"I'm in favor of the concept with the stipulation that if the first-half champion won the second half, it would draw a bye," said Dodgers first baseman Steve Garvey. "In essence what they could be doing is penalizing success."

INDEED, a situation could arise where it would be to the advantage of a team like the Dodgers, which won the first half, to lose some games late in the season in order to insure a supposedly weaker team winning the second half.

"I understand everything to the point where if a team wins both halves, it could still lose," said Los Angeles pitcher Jerry Reuss. "It's unusual to have won something and still be playing, but it's not going to hurt my motivation. What a player has to do is wipe such things from his mind."

"We've got enough incentive. His name is George," said Gossage, referring to the club's outspoken owner, George Steinbrenner.

The Yankees were pretty much split on the split-season idea, although nobody liked the idea of having to play in the extra tier of playoffs even after winning both halves of the season.

"THERE SHOULD be a bye," declared Manager Gene Michael. "If you win both halves you should be in the final playoffs. Then there would be no criticism of this thing. If we win both halves will we still be in the playoffs or will they have to vote again to include us?"

"I don't understand how a second-place team can be in the playoffs," questioned pitcher Rudy May. "I don't think that's fair. But you want me to figure it out for you? More games and more money."

Reggie Jackson took the opposite position. "I like the idea," he said. "I think the game is hurting as a result of the strike. The fans are scarred, the game is scarred and I think the game will benefit."

Manager Dallas Green of Philadelphia, the other first-half division winner, said he favored the split season plan all along. "Selfishly, I could say I favored it because we've already won

Midland Miss wins National archery title

By DORIAN MARTIN
Staff Writer

Midlanders have a female William Tell in their midst.

Trina Whitefield, 13, recently won the Youth Freestyle Limited Competition, a week-long national meet which drew over 800 participants.

Trina won the tournament handily. "My highest (score) at this one was 449 (out of a total 560 points)," explained the teen-ager. The difference between first and second place, she remembered, was about 81 points.

She won by "shooting with fingers as opposed to a release." Trina hasmastered the finger technique, considered the harder of the two. The highest she has ever scored using this method is 499.

The petite blond has been drawing a bow for about six years along with her sister, Holly. "We started out in Indian Princess with the YMCA," Trina remembered. "They started us out with little plastic stick bows."

WHEN THEIR father became interested in archery, the two girls were soon joining him to shoot at targets, both moving and stationary.

Today, archery has become a part of their lives. She noted, "I practice every chance I get," which amounts to just about every day. Trina, a student at Goddard Junior High School, continued, "In the school year, it's harder because of the homework."

The family has a make-shift archery range in their backyard, which spans 25 yards. For longer distances, they go to a range on the outskirts of town.

Trina began competing four years ago in the Texas Field Archery Association Championships. She's been competing (and winning) ever since.

How many meets has she entered? "Oh, gosh, you really couldn't count 'em." And, how many has she done well in? "All of 'em."

TRAVELING AROUND the state and the nation has become a part of life for the family because "there's really not that much competition in West Texas," Holly explained.

Both girls have done well in state competition. Trina has won this meet for four years in a row while Holly captured her first.

National competition is the highest the girls have competed in, but they are already setting their sights higher. "We're planning to get into the Olympics in seven years."

What for Trina is the appeal of archery? "I enjoy competing," she said, "And you set your personal goals to what you can get. It makes you feel real good when you make those personal goals."

By TERRY WILLIAMSON
Sports Writer

The San Antonio Dodgers and Midland Cubs are clawing and scratching each other's eyes out with loaded guns at Cubs Stadium as the two teams battle for the Texas League's second half West Division title, but the Dodgers are currently winning the war after the first three games of the five game series.

The Dodgers pulled out the heavy artillery Thursday for an 11-10 victory to take over first place by percentage points over the Cubs. The Dodgers poled four homers to turn the trick while the Cubs produced another ninth inning rally to keep the Dodgers looking over their shoulders with anxious glances.

IT HAS been a brutal series with San Antonio winning two of the first three games. In the three games, the two teams have scored a total of 57 runs, making both pitching staffs qualified for the disabled list.

And they have to go at it again tonight and Saturday in 7:30 p.m. games before an expected throng for back-to-back two-bit beer nights.

Thursday the Dodgers won it in the eighth inning with a six-run uprising off three Cub pitchers, but only two of the runs were earned, which showed how a mistake afield can be magnified in a key series like this one.

LEO HERNANDEZ and Greg Brock chased Cub starter Mike Thompson in the eighth by opening the frame with singles. Mike Zouras greeted Rob Blyth with a two-run double and Tom Byers chased Blyth with another single. Phil Nastu then took the mound for the Cubs with runners at the corners. He got Myron White on a pop-up to second, but Russ Jones followed with a grounder to Dave Pagel at short. Pagel booted the ball while trying to nail Zouras at the plate and San Antonio had tied the game at 8-8. Nastu then got Greg Schultz on a fly to left, but Dale Holman delivered his 11th homer of the year over the fence in left center to give the Dodgers an 11-8 lead. The error proved to be a big one for the Cubs at that point.

Holman's blast off Nastu proved to be the game winner and made a loser of Rob Blyth, who faced only two batters in the game. "I either got hold of a fast ball or a slider that didn't break," Holman said. "I have been having my troubles against leftys this year and I was just trying to go to the opposite field with an inside-out swing. I made pretty good contact.

"But the Cubs come back and score two in the ninth to make it close. It seems like everybody is playing like this was the World Series. Sometimes you start dragging in August, but a series like this perks everyone up. It's a great series."

THE CUBS got their two runs in the ninth when Javier Fierro singled with one out and Mel Hall followed with his 21st homer of the year to left. However, Charlie Jones, who came on in relief in the sixth to get his sixth win of the year, got Jack Upton on strikes and forced Carmello Martinez to fly to left to end the game.

It was a see-saw battle all the way. The Dodgers took a 1-0 lead in the second on a two-out RBI single by Ross Jones. Midland then came back for a 3-1 lead in the bottom of the inning when Fritz Connally produced a two-run double and Mike Diaz delivered a run scoring single with two outs.

The Dodgers cut the margin to 3-2 in the third when Holman, the star of the game, doubled to left center, moved to third on a grounder and scored on Leo Hernandez' sacrifice fly.

Then the Dodgers started its homerun barrage as Mike Zouras hit a leadoff homer off Thompson in the fourth to tie the game at three. Zouras really belted that one out of the park and got to stand at home plate and watch it sail. "You don't get too many when you can stand and watch it go out, but I knew that one was gone," Zouras said.

Thompson then gave up back-to-back solo shots to Hernandez and Brock as the Dodgers took a 5-3 lead.

Midland appeared to put the game in their hip pocket in the sixth when they scored five unearned

TED BATTLES
BATTLE SCENE

The subject of hats came up on the way to the beach, prompted by the movie Raiders of the Lost Ark. The hero never lost his hat, no matter what the calamity. It was ridiculous totally unbelievable.

It was like those old Saturday afternoon western epics in which Tom Mix, Roy Rogers, Johnny Mack Brown and Gene Autry never lost those oversized 10-gallons, no matter what the test, be it a bucking bronco or barroom (where they'd gone for a refreshing saspirilla) brawl, or a tumble off a careening stagecoach.

In Raiders of the Ark, it was only when the hero, relaxing comfortably on a divan in the lady's boudoir, allowed the broad to remove his hat that he got into difficulties that threatened to engulf him.

It was a strange conversation in view of the fact that we were going sailing at Moorhead City, N.C. First time ever, as a matter of fact.

THERE WAS an annoying 45-minute delay. The folks who had rented the 15-footer before had to be towed in when they lost the wind in their sail trying to tack into it on the return up the channel.

We'd never sailed before, but glared in open hostility as they sheepishly disembarked, uttering embarrassed apologies. "I was doing fine and all of a sudden I lost the wind and that was it. We couldn't move."

It was hard to imagine that anyone would risk their boat to someone so incompetent. It was disgusting and we had no sympathy for the either the raw boot sailors or the people that had loaned them the craft.

BUT THE momentary irritation quickly passed as the captain ordered the crew into the boat. True, me and the Mrs. had never sailed before, but No. 1 son assured that he knew all there was to know about handling the craft. After all, he had learned on the Banks of the Severn at Annapolis and experienced the spray as he sailed the Cheasapeake Bay. Bougue Sound off Atlantic Beach certainly would be no challenge.

We had a little trouble launching the vessel and it was mentioned to the Mrs. that "This feels like something out of a Dick Van Dyke show."

The Mrs. wanted to turn around when the Cap'n cautioned the crew to

The tournament will get underway tonight with a pair of 8 p.m. games and will continue on Saturday at 8 a.m. and Sunday at 9 a.m.

On Sunday, the final day of play, the survivor of the losers bracket will face the survivor of the winners bracket. In either bracket, any team must have two losses before being eliminated.

Big question hangs over baseball's return

By ROBERT BRUNDAGE
Sports Writer

For the past 56 days, fans of Major League baseball have been without their beloved sport. Tonight marks the return of the players to the ball diamonds for exhibition games, but it's a return marred by a big question. Did the player strike hurt baseball for the season?

At the Midland Cubs-San Antonio Dodgers baseball game Wednesday night at Cubs Stadium, fans in the stands had varied reactions to the question. Some felt that the season was hurt, but not seriously, while others felt that things will continue on a normal basis. And there were those who thought it was useless to continue.

"For me, I'm glad it's over because I look forward to every one of the games they put on TV and we have, in the past, gone to Houston and Ft. Worth to see games," said Dean Narrell. "I think if you're really a baseball fan, you'll just be ready to see them play.

"I DON'T think so," said John Barganier in response to the same question. "It's just something that had to be worked out and hopefully both sides can work smoothly from now on.

"Baseball, it's entertainment," he continued. "I go to all the Cubs games, but Minor League baseball ends on Labor Day and I like my entertainment to last longer than that. I think they'll see big crowds at major league games for the rest of the season."

While these were two reactions siding with a season going on in a normal way, there were those who feel it has changed baseball for the season.

"I THINK it hurt baseball, but I don't believe it is a permanent hurt. But it left a bad taste in the mouths of the fans," said former Midland mayor Ernest Angelo. "It proved what a lot of fans were beginning to think, that players and owners are more concerned with money than with the game of baseball."

"I kind of feel that it won't make for a good season, it'll take too long for the players to get back in condition," said Ty Bowling. "The All-Star game, it's hard to say who should be there because the season was reduced. They'll have to pick the players on a greatly reduced season.

"The World Series will be based on a shortened season and I think the strike ruined the whole season, but I have to agree with the players on the strike."

When Bob Monaghan was asked about the season, whether it was finished or not, he replied, "For me it is. I think they should call the rest of the season off. If they don't care about the fans who put them where they are, helped them get the money they make, I don't care about seeing any more this year. I had a lot of faith and now I feel disappointed, let down.

"I feel both sides were at fault," he continued, "it was greed for money. The players were more at fault though. They were used by the union organization which doesn't give a damn about the game itself."

And then, there was the opinion of Ed Armstrong who offered his solution to the whole problem.

"I THINK they should have fired everyone of them (striking players) and brought up these kids here (referring to minor leaguers).

Lee shoulders full blame

Disqualified for failing to sign PGA scorecard

DULUTH, Ga. (AP) — Lee Trevino refused to blame anyone but himself after he was disqualified Thursday from the the 63rd PGA Championship for failing to sign his scorecard.

Trevino was sipping a cool drink in the clubhouse shortly after firing a 74, four over par over the tough 7,070-yard Atlanta Country Club layout when he was notified of the disqualification.

"It was nobody's fault but mine," said Trevino, one of golf's superstars who has won more than $2.5 million and 25 tournaments.

"It was my fault. No bid deal but I gave you guys a hell of a story.

"I don't mind not signing my card but my wife is going to give me a whipping I'm not going to forget," quipped Trevino.

The mistake was noticed, according to Bill Clarke, chairman of the PGA Rules Committee, after Tom Weiskopf, also a member of the threesome along with Lanny Watkins, said he "was confused about signing a card" that had Trevino's score but not his signature. Weiskopf's signature was in the space where Trevino's should have been.

Clarke said it was clearly an "innocent mistake" by Trevino, who said it was the first time in his career he had made such an error.

Trevino said "I looked at my card and saw two signatures. Unfortunately one was not mine. It's my fault," said Trevino.

"I feel terrible because I signed his card. I feel like if I didn't sign it, this wouldn't have happened," said Weiskopf.

Trevino said it also was the first time his caddie didn't look over his shoulder and check his card. "He also feels bad," he said.

Trevino said Weiskopf appealed the disqualification to the PGA Rules Committee on the basis that "there was confusion" in the tent but "it's still my responsibility to look at it and sign it. I didn't do it. I checked it and didn't sign it because I saw two signatures."

Trevino also failed to blame the official scorer.

"He gave me a second chance. He actually totalled my score 35-39—74 and put the scorecard in front of my face. It's certainly not his fault. It's no one's fault but my own," said Trevino.

Before his disqualification, Trevino spoke in admiration of the course, which favors the long, straight hitter. "This is the longest course I have ever played. "It's a little too long for me," said the 41-year-old who captured the PGA title in 1974.

"Boy what a mean golf course," said Trevino, "But it's a good one."

Trevino was even par through 15 holes before bogeying the next two and finishing with a double bogey for his 74.

I can't complain though," said Trevino. "I was hitting the ball well. I hit it good and couldn't do better than a 74.

"I'd have to cheat to break 74," he said.

keep heads low since he was going to swing the mainsail to the left..."Heh, heh, you mean portside," the old Navy salt corrected. The cap'n responded "What's that?"

That's when we first began to feel uneasy and began the explanation of nautical jargon for left and right to the Mrs. She said didn't care about starboard, shé wanted to go back to port, the one we'd just come from.

"He probably didn't hear what I said," we tried to ease her fears. "At least, he didn't say Gee and Haw".

OUT IN the sound the crew quickly learned to duck while manning the f'c'sl and jamming the jib on the spinnaker whilst shouting "Avast ye swabby."

Every time the 15-footer came about and listed precariously on the brink of a dip, the Mrs. suggested it was time to go back. "We're just getting good at it," I dismissed her anxiety.

The wind had come up, almost unnoticed, as we came about for the last time before attacking the wind and the channel back and the waves were a bit choppy. Somehow the entire crew wound up on one side of the boat and that's when the wind caught the sails full.

We capsized.

AS I thrashed about in the water, keeping one hand on the boat, I could see my camera bag sliding slowly out of the shell...it was out of reach and I watched helplessly as it slipped away into Davy Jones' locker 20 or 30 fathoms below while the captain, apparently not realizing the seriousness of the situation, shouted, "Grab the bag." It was too late. It was gone, two cameras, extra lenses, eye glasses, tape recorder...who knows what else. I hoped it didn't attract the sharks.

Unbelievably, the Mrs. was still perched on the seat, like a barnacle. We were capsized, dumped unceremoniously into the angry sea and she was still hanging on to the boat at a 45-degree angle in outright defiance of gravity.

"What shall I do?" she asked. The captain, keeping his voice calm, suggested she slide into the water. She did on top of her husband. That was as close as I came to drowning.

Coughing and sputtering from the saltwater swallowed, we were still trying to keep afloat. "Stay with the boat," the captained commanded.

That's when the Mrs. made a horrible discovery, at least from my camera bag's standpoint, "I'm standing. It's only five feet deep." There was no mistaking the relief.

IT WASN'T long before the motor-driven Tracy Lou, operated by a crew from Wake Forest, arrived. After rescuing the Mrs. The sailboat was righted. The Cap'n was on it, but there was no wind in the sails and it was drifting away.

Someone ordered the lone remaining soul in the sea to look for the camera bag. Meanwhile, the fishing smack took off after the sailboat while we searched for the sunken treasure, but we had drifted away from the spot. It was gone in five feet of water.

When we looked up the sailboat and fishing boat were a couple of 100 yards away. We wondered if we'd have to swim the "five" miles to shore. Luckily, the Mrs. realized something was missing and alerted the four people on the fishing boat that she'd lost a husband somewhere back there.

As the fishing skiff towed the sailboat back to port, it felt like the time we went fishing and got stuck in a Vermont cow pasture down by Waterbury Dam. We had to send one of the boys off to fetch a farmer to pull us out. When he lamped the license plates we could knew he was snickering about "Those rubes from Texas."

AS THE sailboat was cut loose to drift to shore, the proprietor of the boating establishment came out and asked if the boat was okay. Assured it was he had another thought, "What happened to that girl you had with you?" "She's in the fishing boat," was the reply. Never asked about the other crew member.

It was the kind of thing you laugh about later because you don't want to think about what could have happened if the circumstances had been a little different.

And as we sat in the fishing boat, mourning the loss of the camera bag, on the trip back, we suddenly were realized that we were still wearing sun glasses and despite the dunking and subsequent turmoil in the sound, that was still a hat perched up there on my head, undisturbed by it all. Sorry for doubting you, Johnny Mack, Tom, Gene, Roy.

AAA Dukes humble LA

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Three minor league pitchers limited Los Angeles to two hits and Don Crow drove in the only run with a fifth-inning sacrifice fly as the Pacific Coast League Albuquerque Dukes defeated the National League West first-half champion Dodgers 1-0 in an exhibition baseball game.

A crowd estimated at 45,000 watched the game Thursday night at 56,012-seat Dodger Stadium. It was the only exhibition contest the Dodgers will play before they return to regular-season action against the Cincinnati Reds Monday night. Admission was free and the game was also televised locally.

The Dukes, a Los Angeles farm club, scored their run off Burt Hooton, who was 7-3 when the players' strike began June 12 and is one of the nine NL pitchers selected for Sunday night's All-Star Game.

Albuquerque starter Brian Holton pitched three innings and retired all nine batters he faced. Ricky Wright set down the first five batters he faced before Pedro Guerrero beat out a high-bouncer behind second base for the first Los Angeles hit.

Wright allowed only one other baserunner in his four innings of work, a walk to Hooton in the sixth, and struck out four.

Alejandro Pena finished up for Albuquerque and allowed the Dodgers' other hit, a clean single by Steve Yeager in the eighth.

Jerry Reuss pitched the first four innings for the Dodgers and allowed one hit, a bloop single by Ron Roenicke in the first. Reuss walked none and struck out two. Hooton went three innings and allowed three hits. He walked one and struck out one.

Tom Niedenfuer, called up from San Antonio of the Texas League, blanked the Dukes over the final two innings.

Arkansas tops Shreveport, 2-0

By The Associated Press

Ralph Citarella pitched a three-hit shutout Thursday night as the Arkansas Travelers took a 2-0 Texas League baseball victory over the Shreveport Captains.

San Antonio edged Midland, 11-10, in the only other game played. The other scheduled games, Jackson at Tulsa and El Paso at Amarillo, were postponed because of rain.

Citarella gave up only three hits and struck out seven as he boosted his season record to 8-6.

Back-to-back doubles in the third inning by Rafael Santana and Gotay Mills drove in one Arkansas run and the other came on a sacrifice fly by Jim Adduci in the seventh inning.

Ed Biles modest after first victory

HOUSTON (AP) — Rookie head coach Ed Biles went to great pains to be modest after his Houston Oilers won the first game since former coach Bum Phillips was fired last winter.

"It was good to win the first game, but I really didn't think that much about this being the first win for me personally," said Biles, whose Oilers beat the Philadelphia Eagles 13-10 in a National Football League exhibition game Thursday night.

"This is not Ed Biles' football team. This is the Houston Oilers and there were over 60 guys out there playing hard to win," he said.

He also praised new quarterback Gifford Nielson, who was pressed into services as the club's No. 1 quarterback after veteran Kenny Stabler surprised team officials and announced his retirement after summer training camp had opened.

But it was a couple of old hands — Earl Campbell and Tony Fritsch — who scored most of the the points for Houston.

Campbell, who sat out the second half, scored a touchdown from four yards out on the Oilers' first possession, and Fritsch kicked a 41-yard field goal in the third quarter that broke a 10-10 tie and put the Oilers out front to stay.

Philadelphia unveiled a new shotgun formation which produced the Eagles' only touchdown, a 10-yard pass from Ron Jaworski to Alvin Hooks near the end of the first half.

The two teams earlier traded field goals — a 35-yard kick by Bill Capece of Houston and a 33-yard boot by Tony Franklin of the Eagles.

The Eagles' new shotgun was slow to get on track. Jaworski threw four incomplete passes and got sacked once in his first six tries.

But on the next two plays he scrambled 33 yards and threw the touchdown pass.

Bob Murphy's 66 paces first round of PGA

DULUTH, Ga. (AP) — Bob Murphy has sensed that winning attitude was rebuilding, but he didn't expect it to blossom this week in the 63rd PGA national championship.

Certainly not after he had been forced out of the Canadian Open last week following a freak accident.

Murphy was surprisingly shocked when he shot an opening 66 — 4-under par over the testing Atlanta Athletc Club course for a one-stroke lead over non-winners Mark Lye and Bob Eastwood.

"I can't say I was mentally prepared for this, but I was relaxed," he said Thursday, referring to a week at home nursing a thumb injury.

"I've been playing well enough to win," said the 38-year-old veteran, winless since his fourth Tour victory in 1975. "I felt it coming for the last three or four months. And it's a good feeling when you do it under the gun, too."

The fourth and last of this year's major championships opened in unusual, if not bizarre, fashion. Consider:

—Defending champion Jack Nicklaus went 4-over par in his first eight holes in a bid for a record sixth PGA and 18th major professional title.

Archery also exercises the pocketbook. "It's a pretty expensive sport," Trina said. A good bow can cost about $200 while arrows are $2 apiece. Plus there are a lot of accessories that rank as necessities for the competitive archer.

Trina and Holly are currently competing as amateurs and hope to earn a college scholarship for their skills, but their archery careers may not end there. Trina exclaimed, "I want to go pro and make it my job." Becoming a professional would mean still shooting at tournaments, but Trina would be representing a bow company. The best part about it, besides the shooting: "You get paid for doing it."

Pros still waiting for next Casper

By SCOTT PAPILLON

MANKATO, Minn. (AP) — When Ken MacAfee graduated from Notre Dame in 1978 after earning All-American honors, he was touted as another Dave Casper, the next great tight end in the National Football League.

"That's what they said," admitted MacAfee.

But so far, things haven't worked out in the NFL and MacAfee, who sat out last season to attend dental school at the University of Pennsylvania, is simply trying to catch on with the Minnesota Vikings after being released by both San Francisco and Buffalo.

"I FEEL like I'm a rookie all over again," says the 6-foot-4, 228-pound native of Brockton, Mass. "I feel like I have something to prove to myself and to others. I'm back to square one, but I want to show that what happened at San Francisco was not the real Ken MacAfee."

What happened at San Francisco was not pleasant for MacAfee. According to him, the 49ers were in a constant state of confusion and never threw the ball to him or to anyone else.

"I caught 24 passes my second year and I think I was second on the team," he says. "Here, if you catch 70, you are about third on the list."

MacAFEE says that coming to the Vikings, who have won 11 division championships in the last 13 years, may help rejuvenate his once promising career.

"This is what I perceive professional football to be," he said at the Vikings training camp at Mankato State University. "Pro football is not the San Francisco 49ers.

'In Sa Francisco, tey had a evolving doorpolicy. Yu never knewfrom weekto week who your teammates were. I remember one time we lined up for the National Anthem. I turned to my left and didn't even know the guy standing next to me.

the first half, but starting fresh will give more teams a chance," said Green.

Will it be hard to play the second half since the Phils have already won the first half?

"It could be a problem," Green conceded. "I'm going to lean on their professionalism. We're not going out there to lose. But there may come a time when I'll manage a little differently. I might rest a player now and then."

AS COULD be expected, managers of teams which did poorly before the strike welcomed the split-season idea, since it wipes their slates clean.

"It creates some excitement for the players and also for the fans," said Atlanta Manager Bobby Cox. "It's about the fairest way they could handle it."

"I'm happy because we're all starting out with same with equal opportunity," said Pittsburgh Manager Chuck Tanner. "Everybody will have it going down the stretch, so it's a good idea."

"It gives us a new life," said San Diego Manager Frank Howard. "We've got a public relations gap to fill and this is one of the ways to do it."

Baseball returns

They're not worth what they're getting paid anyway. All people want is a hero to identify with and he doesn't have to be highly paid.

But Armstrong didn't feel the season should be called off.

"Unfortunately, it destroyed the season as you normally see it, but the strike didn't go on long enough to permanently injure the season," he said. "If it would have gone on into the football season, they would have played hell getting the fans back, except for the die hards. Football players would become the heroes. The baseball strike ended just in time so as not to seriously injure baseball as an institution."

Cowboys' opener crucial to hopes of rookies

THOUSAND OAKS, Calif. (AP) — Saturday night's preseason opener against the Green Bay Packers will be a crucial game for many of the rookies still with the Dallas Cowboys, coach Tom Landry says.

"We'll start our starters, but we'll skip over our backup veterans to look at rookies in this game," Landry said. It's not that the rookies are better than the backup veterans, it's just that we've got to look at them."

"It's a very crucial game for the rookies because, after this one, it's just harder and harder to get people into games. There are too many veterans who need the work," Landry said.

Offensively, Landry said he and his staff will be looking very closely at tackle Howard Richards, the No. 1 draft choice, guard Glen Titensor, the No. 2 draft pick, free agent tackle Steve Wright and wide receivers Mike Wilson and Nate Lundy, the No. 9 and No. 12 draft picks, respectively.

No. 2 pick Doug Donley, a wide receiver who made the strongest impression early in camp, will not play because of a groin pull.

On defense Landry will be looking at even more rookies. He said he will be watching free agent defensive end Ron Spears, middle linebacker and No. 5 draft pick Danny Spradlin, outside linebacker and No. 4 pick Scott Pelluer and free agent outside linebacker Angelo King.

At cornerback, Landry wants to see free agent Everson Walls plus draftees Ron Fellows and Ken Miller, both 7th-round picks. Free agent safety Mike Downs also bears close watching, Landry said.

Of the returning starters, only wide receiver Tony Hill (hamstring), fullback Robert Newhouse (hamstring) and center John Fitzgerald (thigh) will not open against the Packers.

Landry said Hill and Newhouse could play, but they will be replaced by Butch Johnson, Ron Springs and Robert Shaw.

Landry said quarterback Danny White will split the game with backup Glen Cerano, but said he was not sure if he would alternate them by halves or quarters.

The Cowboys had a team meeting Thursday morning and an afternoon practice. The team leaves for Dallas Friday morning and will hold a brief workout at Texas Stadium Friday evening.

Midland girls advance to Softball semifinals

HOBBS, N.M.—Midland barged into the semifinals of the United Girls Softball Tournament here Thursday with a 9-5 victory over Denison, Texas, as Tonya Burton pitched the win and went 3-for-3 at the plate with an rbi.

Susan McGaha hit a homer for the Midland team while Karen Kuykendall went 2-for-3 and knocked in a run against losing pitcher Trina Cobb.

Midlanders in tourney

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M.—Sandra and Jill Bramlett of Midland, Texas, will play in the Mother-Daughter division of the Southwestern States Equitable Family Tennis challenge Saturday and Sunday. Sectional winners will advance to the national championship playoffs at the U.S. Open Sept. 9-13.

Oil Bowl gusher?

WICHITA FALLS, Texas (AP) — One of the coaches of the Texas high school all-stars is predicting Friday night's Oil Bowl game will be a high-scoring affair.

Dub Largin of Wichita Falls Hirschi said the Texas squad will be using an offense installed by Highland Park Coach Frank Bevers.

"I can tell you it won't be three yards and a cloud of dust," Largin said. "With this offense there is room for errors, but there is also room for explosiveness."

Texas, which won last year 7-3 and holds a 27-7-1 series advantage over its Oklahoma counterparts, will have quarterback Rob Moerschell of Highland Park at the controls.

In the backfield with Moerschell will be fullback Greg Birdsall of Plano and running back Robert Lewis of Greenville.

Oklahoma will counter with Salisaw's Craig Benson at quarterback and Eddie Goodlow of Altus and Fox's Qlease Tuner at the halfback's in a veer attack.

Clinton's Dave Meadows, one of three Oklahoma coaches, thought he had a defensive advantage before injuries cut down two safeties.

"But we've lost two that we thought we'd have," Meadows said. "Now if we have an advantage, it has to be in conditioning late in the game."

Tulsa Memorial's Steve Siles will miss the Oil Bowl clash due to a knee injury suffered in last week's Oklahoma All-State Game at Norman.

(Compiled from R-T wires)

Pirates' pitcher Rick Rhoden, whose 6-1 record one of the NL's best, is mad because he wasn't picked on the All-Star team. Star Manager Dallas Green said Rhoden was a victim of numbers. "That's an asinine remark," Rhoden responded. Of nine pitchers, Rhoden has more wins than four of them and fewer losses than six of them. "I wanted to be on that All-Star team. I felt I deserved to be on the team. There are three or four pitchers on the team who don't have better records than I do. Not nine by any means," he said...

Former Dallas Cowboy assistant Dan Reeves will unveil his multiple offense when Denver host the New York Jets Friday night. Reeves plans to make extensive use of shifting and varied formations, including the shotgun in passing situations, an attack similar to that of the Cowboys.

Delvin Miller, Hall of Fame driver-trainer who has taken part in a record 26 Hambletonians, says a lack of standout trotters is the reason for the large field for Saturday's $838,000 Hambletonian at the Meadowlands. Twenty-six 3-year-olds — split into two divisions — are set to compete on the mile track for the richest Hambletonian since it was first run in 1926. "There are some horses that shouldn't be here, but it's a prestige thing to be in the Hambletonian. This is harness racing' Kentucky Derby. But we just don't have the standout four or five trotters that would have kept a lot of them out."...

Braves owner Ted Turner says he has no hard feelings about the baseball strike. "I'm just glad it is over. The average owner and player didn't have much to do with it. If this strike thing had been left up to individual teams, if the negotiations had been between (player representative) Phil Niekro and me, we could have worked it out much quicker." Before settlement, Turner was quoted as saying that the players should be drowned, and then the game could start anew...

Pat Bradley and JoAnne Carner lead a field that is conspicuous by the absence of seven of the top 10 money winners into today's West Virginia LPGA Classic. Only about half of the top 40 money winners will be competing at the mountainous course, which is considered one of the most physically demanding on the LPGA tour. "Some of the girls are tired right now and they want to take a break," said Carner, the fourth-leading money winner...

The idea of covering Olympic Stadium with a retractable roof envisioned by French architect Roger Taillibert for the centrepiece of the 1976 Summer Games was all but ruled out as the provincial Olympic Installations Board annnounced it may even recommend that the $600-million stadium be left uncovered when it hands in a final report on the question in October...Although the New Hampshire threat has subsided, state and city leaders are still urging Massachusetts to erect a $57 million 16,000-seat sports arena next to the aging Boston Garden, financed by a statewide hike in the hotel room tax. Supporters said cities such as Birmingham, Ala., Fort Worth, Texas, and Cincinnati have better arenas, and 32 other cities plan new or expanded facilities...

Julio "Diablito" Valdez, 20-5-1, brings an eight-bout winstreak to Madison Square Garden tonight against Victory Acosta, 12-2, on a card that also offers Rafael Solis, 11-2-2, against Antonio Cruz, 25-6-3...Claman Parker, 28, scheduled for one of the prelims, will replace Jody Ballard as WBC heavyweight champion John Tate's opponent at Knoxville Saturday after Parker was injured when a bicycle he was riding was hit by a car...

Former Yankee outfielder Roy White drove in three runs with three hits Thursday, leading the Yomiuri Giants to a 6-3 win over the Chunichi Dragons while Jim Lyttle's doubled paced Hiroshima Toyo Carp over Yakult, 4-3, in Japanese baseball... Wang Yao-Hsin hurled a perfect game to spur Taiwan to a 7-0 victory over South Korea and the title in the Little League Far East baseball tournament... Sale of the Chicago Cubs was unanimously approved the the American League and National League owners Thursday....

The father of Heisman Trophy winner George Rogers was charged Thursday with two counts of vehicular homicide in Lawrenceville, Ga. Police did not immmediately arrest Rogers because he remained in serious condition at Gwinnett Community Hospital after a crash Friday which claimed the lives of a Lawrenceville man and his 16-year-old daughter. Blood tests indicated the elder Rogers was intoxicated at the time of the crash...

SPORTS IN BRIEF

Owners OK split season

By The Associated Press

BASEBALL— Major league owners voted to ratify the agreement with the players, reached last week in New York, that ended the 50-day baseball strike.

The owners also voted 21-3, with two abstentions, to adopt a split-season format when the regular season resumes Monday. Under the plan, the four teams leading their divisions when the strike halted play June 12 were declared first-half champions. They will meet the second-half winners in a five-game series to determine the Division Champions. If a first-half winner repeats as second-half champion, it will play the divisional rival with the next-best overall record in the first round of the playoffs...

Others named as backups by manager Jim Frey included outfielders Dwight Evans of Boston, Fred Lynn of California, Tony Armas of Oakland, Al Oliver of Texas and Tom Paciorek of Seattle. Frey also added catchers Bo Diaz of Cleveland and Ted Simmons of Milwaukee and infielders Frank White of Kansas City, Eddie Murray of Baltimore, Rick Burleson of California and Buddy Bell of Texas...

First baseman Steve Garvey, a non-starter for the first time in eight years, headed a list of 13 National League reserves for the All-Star game.

Manager Dallas Green also picked two other Dodgers, Pedro Guerrero and Dusty Baker, and three Pittsburgh Pirates, infielders Bill Madlock and Phil Garner and outfielder Mike Easler. The other reserves include catchers Terry Kennedy of San Diego and Bruce Benedict of Atlanta, infielders Bill Buckner of Chicago, Manny Trillo of Philadelphia and Ozzie Smith of San Diego and outfielders Joel Youngblood of the New York Mets and Tim Raines of Montreal.

runs. Again mistakes in the field were magnified. Martinez walked to open the inning against starter Michael Glinatsis. Connally then hit what looked like a sure double play ball, but Connally was safe at second when second baseman Greg Schultz threw the relay away. Schultz then booted a grounder by Joe Carter and the gates were open for the Cubs. Randy LaVigne singled in one run, Dave Pagel brought home three more with his first homer of the year, a towering shot to left, and Fierro connected to chase Glinatsis with his fourth homer. Jones then came on to give up a single to Mel Hall, but Hall was caught for the second time trying to steal second base.

The Cubs looked to be in good shape until the roof fell in the eighth.

CUB PAWS: Despite his two errors in the sixth, Schultz saved a run in the second with the infield in when he stopped a LaVigne grounder from going into center with a diving stop. Connally, Hall and Pagel also turned in defensive gems for the Cubs with some deft fielding...Henry Mack (3-3) will go against San Antonio's Rusty McDonald (4-4) tonight and a big pitching matchup is set for Saturday when Craig Lefferts (11-9), who is on a four-game winning streak with two shutouts in that span, goes against Rich Rodas (12-3), the ace of the Dodger staff...Both games tonight and Saturday are two-bit beer affairs and sky divers from Crane are expected to deliver the game ball at 7:15 p.m. Saturday by "air mail"...

Chi still Toddlin' Town

But Rich Reuschel is a Yankee now

By HERSCHEL NISSENSON

NEW YORK (AP) — He plies his trade in the Big Apple now, but Chicago is still that toddlin' town to Rick Reuschel.

Reuschel, a 32-year-old pitcher, has been a member of the New York Yankees since they acquired him from the Chicago Cubs June 12 in exchange for pitcher Doug Bird, a player to be named later (pitcher Mike Griffin was named on Wednesday) and cash.

But June 12 just happened to be the day the major league players went on strike and Reuschel has been a man in limbo ever since.

"I FELT like a Cub until I got over here last weekend and put on a Yankee uniform," says Reuschel, who has won 133 games since joining Chicago in 1972. The Cubs had only two first-division finishes in that span.

Reuschel will move right into the Yankees' starting rotation, with his first appearance scheduled for next Wednesday. Perhaps by then he will really feel like a Yankee.

REUSCHEL has come to think of Chicago as home and his ties to Illinois go even deeper. He is a native of Quincy, some 300 miles from Chicago; attended Western Illinois University in Macomb, Ill., and lives in the Chicago suburb of Arlington Heights.

"I found out about the trade at Wrigley Field about two hours before the strike," Reuschel said. "The Cubs were supposed to play San Diego, and Herman Franks, the general manager, informed me. I really don't remember my first reaction. I guess I was disappointed to be leaving a town I'd lived in for so long."

Most players would be overjoyed coming from the also-ran Cubs to the contending Yankees.

"The disappointment hasn't worn off yet," Reuschel said. "I'm looking forward to playing here with the bunch of guys they have here. But it's a big adjustment, not only for me, but for my family (wife Jill and two children). From my own standpoint, it's not really that tough.

"I'VE ALWAYS thought of New York as a good town to come into for a few days.

Auto production down

DETROIT (AP) — Car production in the slumping domestic auto industry has dropped for the second straight week as many assembly plants remain closed for model changeover. However, production remains ahead of last year's slow pace.

The industry journal Ward's Automotive Reports said Thursday production was expected to reach 79,899 assemblies this week, down 15 percent from last week's 94,102, but 30 percent ahead of the 61,440 made in the comparable 1980 week.

Meanwhile, temporary layoffs at the five major domestic automakers fell to 77,750 from last week's 90,680.

AP Laserphoto

Actor Charles Haid doesn't think he's making any wrong turns in his career going from producing and directing to acting recently in Los Angeles. The 35-year-old sandy-haired actor has parlayed a guest appearance on the pilot for television's Hill Street Blues into a regular slot as the hot-headed officer Renko.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — When the Screen Actors Guild announced a benefit during its strike last year and introduced Charles Haid as the producer, reporters smiled at him politely then fell all over themselves to interview Alan Alda, Henry Winkler and other, more famous union members.

Haid's face may have been familiar to some — he'd been guest starring on TV shows for years and even had

Two things have happened this year to change that. First, Haid had a major supporting role as a Harvard professor from West Virginia in the mind-blowing film "Altered States."

And he's parlayed a guest appearance on the pilot for "Hill Street Blues" into a regular slot as the hot-headed Officer Renko on what became last season's most critically acclaimed new series.

Haid has long been a fixture of the film and television scene, but not always as an actor. The barrel-chested, rusty-haired 35-year-old studied directing at Carnegie Tech in Pittsburgh with the goal of becoming a producer and director.

"People are always running around in this business saying 'They won't hire me, they don't understand me, they don't see my talent.' Well, I decided very early on that I was 'they,'" says Haid, in town to do some public relations chores before heading off for some summer fishing.

Haid has built up an impressive list of off-camera credits, notably as associate producer for the musical "Godspell" and co-producer with longtime friend Winkler of the 1979 Emmy and Oscar-winning documentary "Who are the DeBolts and Where Did They Get 19 Kids?"

However he had acted sporadically — was even teaching it — and so when he found himself at loose ends during the mid-1970s he took his agent's advice and began actively seeking television and film roles. Almost immediately Haid landed a role as a priest in the series "Kate McShane."

It didn't last long, but the guest spots rolled in steadily. Haid quickly proved himself to be a versatile actor — his southern accents in "Hill Street Blues" and "Altered States" are so natural that it's hard to believe he grew up in San Francisco.

Haid is delighted to be a part of "Hill Street Blues," which has earned the admiration not only of critics but police officers who like its unique comedy-drama approach to their work.

Renko had promised to be a one-shot character: He didn't even have a first name, and in the pilot, he and his partner were gunned down in a tenement hallway.

In fact an early version of the pilot ended with their captain, series star Dan Travanti, learning that one of the two officers — which one isn't made clear — has died. But audiences who saw test screenings liked the team and so the pilot that was broadcast left them both in critical condition.

"I had no idea that it was going to turn out as well as it did," Haid says.

Sidney Poitier is directing the film for Columbia Pictures. He also directed Wilder and Richard Pryor in "Stir Crazy." The original screenplay was written by Melville Tucker, Henry Rosebaum and David Taylor.

Taylor family sings benefit concert for ships

NEW YORK (AP) — James Taylor; his sister, Kate, and brothers Alex, Livingston and Hugh, sang a "save our ships" benefit concert for nearly three hours on Pier 16.

The lights of Wall Street skyscrapers were in front of them Wednesday night, the East River and Brooklyn Bridge behind them.

About 5,000 buyers of $10 tickets sat on blankets or chairs they'd carried to the pier. Some listened from aboard the 1911 four-masted bark, Peking, at one side of the pier. The Taylors' dressing rooms were on the 1907 Ambrose Lightship at the other side of the pier.

The concert drew the most interest of any organized by the South Street Seaport Museum this summer, in its Mobil-sponsored free jazz series, its bluegrass series or its "save our ships" series.

That was because singer-song writer James Taylor, who has sung with his wife, Carly Simon, had not previously appeared with all his singing siblings.

The Taylor family seemed to having a happy, congenial time and sounded fine; the audience seemed to enjoy itself; the weather was mild; the ships can use the money.

The South Street Seaport Museum is an 11-block historic district of 18th and 19th century buildings, piers and six old ships. In the constant upkeep needed on the ships, the Peking recently had its deck replanked, and the Wavertree, the last full-rigged merchantship berthed on the East Coast, received a new bowsprit.

Jimmy Pullis and Mark Friedman, trying to organize 10 "save our ships" benefit concerts, suggested to the Taylors that one evening be their first "family" concert. It was something James Taylor has frequently mentioned he'd like to be part of.

All five have homes on Martha's Vineyard. They did much "hemming and hawing," Livington Taylor said before the concert, then agreed to do it. They did three concerts on Martha's Vineyard for preparation. He missed one. The Taylor who tours the most, he was performing in Wallingford, Conn., that night.

The oldest, Alex, 34, who has the deepest and most southern voice and is the only one not pencil thin, and youngest, Hugh, 29, who says he isn't sure he's a musician but is a carpenter and fire chief in one Vineyard community, have spent some time during the past year singing with their sister and her band, Skin Tight. Kate Taylor Witham and her husband visited their hotel between the sound check and the concert to feed their 4-month-old baby.

James is a successful recording artist. But all Taylors deny sibling rivalry, and all say they'd like to perform together again.

"Being very close," Livingston says, "in rehearsal, we'd generally all get an idea of how something should be and proceed from there. We don't need to appoint a chairman. If there is conflict, it generally gets felt and gets miraculously resolved. We tend to bend and sway in whatever way we need to, to be able to play."

They even agree who has the best voice, Livingston says. "It's Hugh. Of course."

ABC's 'Krypton Factor' a bomb

By FRED ROTHENBERG
AP Television Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — "The Krypton Factor," premiering on ABC tonight, is a fabricated competition with pretentious space-age overtones. It's an outgrowth of the reality programs in vogue today, and, in reality, it's a bomb.

The concept, according to an ABC release, is that four average Americans from "all walks of life pit their mental and physical prowess against each other." This involves such ludicrous events as video games, concentration exercises and a futuristic obstacle course.

The host is Dick Clark, who has shed his teen-age image by wearing a tuxedo and saying that the contestants "will be challenged to their very limits." Give us back "American Bandstand." This show doesn't have a good beat, and you can't dance to it. We'll give it a 2.

The serious, space-shot tone of the show is apparent in the opening. The four competitors — a chemistry student, a female administrative assistant, a principal and a plumbing dispatcher — are seen in astronaut-type jumpsuits running in slow motion. This distorts their faces and gives the impression they are being taxed to their limits, when they are merely jogging on a beach.

All of this is set to the kind of music available in a planetarium while the competitors' identities are flashed on the screen through computerized graphics. Like we said, pretentious.

Film director worries about 'Endless Love'

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — "Please, I beg of you," Franco Zeffirelli told the interviewer prayerfully, his hands clasped like a supplicant, "treat my film with dignity."

The Italian film director continued: "It is not 'The Blue Lagoon' — though I mean no criticism of that picture. I am so afraid that all the publicity will attract the wrong audience for the wrong reasons. It is not an exploitive film. It is simply about love."

It is "Endless Love," Universal-Polygram Pictures' summer release starring Brooke Shields, who seems to attract controversy wherever she goes. Last month a brouhaha erupted when word leaked out that the Classification and Rating Administration had slapped an X on "Endless Love."

Horrors! Major film companies simply won't release X-rated movies anymore. So Zeffirelli made cuts in the love scenes between Brooke Shields and young Martin Hewitt. Revised versions of "Endless Love" returned to the Ratings Board five times before receiving an R.

In his office at Warner Hollywood Studio (formerly Goldwyn), Zeffirelli seemed abashed by the whole business.

"If the love scenes had been between two adults, there would never have been a question of getting an X," he said. "Because they are two young people, there is concern, and I can understand that.

"The scenes are merely simulated sex. Brooke is never naked — there are some glimpses of a double to give an impression of nudity. The boy was never exposed."

Zeffirelli's films have ranged from "Taming of the Shrew" (Burton-Taylor) to the TV epic "Jesus of Nazareth." He made a successful move to the American idiom with "The Champ" and chose to follow with the love story of a 15-year-old girl and a 17-year-old boy.

"I was overwhelmed by the (Scott Spencer) book," he said. "It has dozens of extremely passionate scenes that sometimes hurt in the reading — so much so that I had to put the book down."

"I am always attracted by any love story, whether it's about old people, young people, animals, saints, or God. I am especially attracted by young love, and when I read the book I decided, 'This is something I have to do.' But how to compress such a gigantic story into a movie? Judy Rascoe was the perfect solution as a writer."

The film, which also stars Shirley Knight, Don Murray, Richard Kiley, Penelope Milford and Beatrice Straight, was shot late last year in New York and Chicago.

Zeffirelli said he was aiming "very much toward the tradition of romantic sagas of the past, like 'East of Eden' and 'Splendor in the Grass.'" Striving for a loyalty to the novel, he purposely overshot, expecting to compress the story in the editing room.

AP Laserphoto

Italian film director Franco Zeffirelli directs Brooke Shields recently through a scene for his latest film, "Endless Love." Zeffirelli, who says he's always attracted by any love story, is hoping audiences will be drawn to the movie on merit alone and not because Brooke Shields is shown in bed with a boy.

'NBC Magazine' on move

NEW YORK (AP) — It started out in 1974 as "Weekend," a once-a-month replacement for "Saturday Night Live." Then it had a short life on Sunday nights before becoming "Prime Time Saturday" with Tom Snyder, or was it "Prime Time Sunday?" Maybe it was both.

The show now is called "NBC Magazine with David Brinkley," and it too has been in search of a night, a time slot and, most importantly, an audience.

Last season, it occupied the graveyard shift opposite "Dallas" on Friday nights and finished 97th out of 97 shows. It found a better home this summer on Thursdays, improving its ratings by 42 percent. Still, it was tentatively scheduled for oblivion in the fall on Saturday nights, when TV viewing is down, and ABC's lonely heart's programming ("Love Boat"-"Fantasy Island") rules the roost anyway.

Meanwhile, CBS' "60 Minutes" was providing high-quality and high-ranked programming. ABC's late entry into the magazine business, "20-20," No. 2 in the ratings last week, was doing well against entertainment competition with a good mix of investigative reports and glittery profiles.

In comparison, NBC's magazine show was stodgy and, according to NBC insiders, stocked with some field producers who were merely playing out the string. Too often, the hour was filled with paunchy profiles, unfocused investigative pieces and less-than-scintillating subjects.

Is it worth keeping?

'Hill Street Blues' sweeps nominations

By JERRY BUCK
AP Television Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The police show "Hill Street Blues" has swept the Emmy nominations, but "Lou Grant" and the two miniseries "Shogun" and "Masada" were not far behind.

"Hill Street Blues," which airs on NBC, received 21 nominations, believed to be a record number for a regular dramatic series. Only "Roots," with 33, got more, the Academy of Television Arts and Sciences announced Thursday.

"Shogun," also on NBC, had 14 nominations, and ABC's "Masada" and CBS's "Lou Grant" tied at 13 each.

Two comedy series, ABC's "Taxi" and CBS's "M-A-S-H" each got nine.

Other multiple nominations went to CBS's "Playing for Time" and "Dallas" and PBS's "Dance in America," six each; NBC's "Barbara Mandrell and the Mandrell Sisters," CBS's "WKRP in Cincinnati" and PBS's "Cosmos" and "National Geographic Specials," five each.

CBS led in nominations with 104. NBC was second with 92, and ABC was third with 79. PBS got 32, and seven went to syndicated shows.

Nominations are for programs telecast between July 1, 1980 and June 30, 1981.

The prime-time Emmy Awards will be pr3sented Sunday Sept. 13 at the Pasadena Civic Auditorium. CBS will carry it live.

"Hill Street Blues" was nominated as best dramatic series, and seven members of the cast were selected. Daniel Travanti was nominated for best actor in a dramatic series, and regular Veronica Hamel and guest star Barbara Babcock were nominated as best actresses. Supporting nominations went to Michael Conrad, Charles Haid, Bruce Weitz, Barbara Bosson and Betty Thomas.

"Shogun," in which Richard Chamberlain played a shipwrecked English sailor who became a samurai and Toshiro Mikfune was a Japanese warlord, was nominated for best limited series. They were nominated as best lead actors, Yoko Shimada was nominated as best lead actress, and supporting pominations went to Yuki Meguro and John Rhys-Davies.

"Masada," the tale of the epic struggle between the Romans and Jewish zealots, also was nominated as best limited series. Peter O'Toole, as the Roman general, and Peter Strauss, as the Jewish leader who personified the struggle, were nominated for best lead actors in a limited series. David Warner and Anthony Quayle were nominated as best supporting actors.

"Lou Grant," which dominated last year's nominations, was selected for best dramatic series. Other nominations went to Edward Asner as best lead actor and to Mason Adams, Robert Walden, Linda Kelsey and Nancy Marchand for their supporting roles.

"Taxi" and "M-A-S-H" were nominated as best comedy series. Alan Alda was nominated as best actor in w comedy for "M-A-S-H" and Judd Hirsch for "Taxi." Guest star Eileen Brennan was nominated for best lead actress for an episode of "Taxi." Minister cancels television boycott

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — A Tennessee minister says he is calling off his boycott of television shows sponsored by General Foods Corp. and American Home Products.

The Rev. John M. Hurt, pastor of the Joelton Church of Christ, said Thursday both companies made significant changes in the kinds of shows they sponsor after the "Clean Up TV" campaign began last year.

"We are, therefore, asking the thousands of churches and individuals participating in the campaign to end the current boycotts against these two companies effective immediately," Hurt said.

Warner-Lambert Co. had been a target of the campaign but quit advertising on some of the shows considered offensive.

Working from the small church in Joelton, a Nashville suburb, participants in the campaign surveyed several hundred Church of Christ members throughout the nation to compile a list of TV shows considered offensive.

Heading the list were NBC's "Saturday Night Live," CBS' "Dallas" and ABC's "Soap," "Three's Company" and "Charlie's Angels."

Caution recommended in misconduct probes

WASHINGTON (AP) — Federal Communications Commission officials, citing a new federal law, are recommending a more cautious approach to investigations of alleged misconduct by broadcasters.

By a unanimous vote earlier this week, the FCC issued for public comment rules designed to implement the Equal Access to Justice Act, which, as of Oct. 1., gives small businesses the right to recover their expenses for a successful defense against certain federal regulations.

The law specifies that if a small business wins a case brought by a federal agency and can show there was never "substantial justification" for the case in the first place, it is entitled to reimbursement for all legal fees and expenses stemming from the action.

The proposed rules were issued the same day the commission launched a much broader inquiry to determine what type of misconduct reflects so poorly on a broadcaster's character that he should lose his license.

Stephen A. Sharp, the FCC's general counsel, said the Equal Access to Justice Act was passed last year with such agencies as the Occupational Safety and Health Administration in mind, "but it applies to everybody."

And in the case of the FCC, Sharp added, the law is forcing the agency to reconsider the circumstances under which it orders a hearing to revoke a broadcaster's license.

"You might call this the 'We Better Be Right Act,'" observed FCC Chairman Mark S. Fowler.

"The bottom line is very simple," Sharp said in an interview. "In the past the commission has been willing to order a hearing to see what the truth is. Now, we have to be very careful. We have to make sure the case is there; that everything is essentially nailed down before we begin."

.Ringo still facing 'palimony' suit

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Actor and musician Ringo Starr has lost a bid to have a "palimony" suit thrown out of court on grounds he was never served with the legal papers, an attorney says.

Lawyer Marvin Mitchelson, representing Nancy Andrews, said the California Supreme Court refused to hear Starr's challenge to the lawsuit. Miss Andrews, 32, lived with the 40-year-old former Beatles' drummer before his recent marriage to actress Barbara Bach.

According to Mitchelson, Starr claimed he never saw the legal papers informing him he had been sued.

Starr was not available for comment.

The lawsuit accuses Starr of breaching an oral contract in which he allegedly promised to provide for Miss Andrews' financial needs for the rest of her life if she gave up her career and devoted herself to him.

Miss Andrews is seeking $5 million plus half of the property jointly owned by her and Starr, Mitchelson said. Miss Andrews and Starr lived together from 1974 to April 1980, the lawyer said.

The red-haired comedian was summoned to her window at 10:30 a.m. Thursday to hear a dozen members of a gospel choir sing "Mother" and "Happy Birthday to You."

"They were cute," said Miss Ball's husband, producer Gary Morton.

"She flung open her bedroom window and said, 'Oh, my, isn't this marvelous, thank ou so much,'" said Dolores Friedmah, co-manager of the Los Angeles office of Renta Yenta, which put together the serenade. The event was on behalf of Miss Ball's daughter, actress Lucie Arnaz; her husband, actor Laurence Luckinbill; and their 8-month-old son, Sinon.

Miss Ball retired from weekly television in 1974 after 23 years in "I Love Lucy" and then "Here's Lucy."

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — Andrea McArdle, who became a Broadway star at 13 with her portrayal of the orphan in "Annie," says she'd like to play an athlete in a movie and have to train for something.

"I didn't really want to do the 'Annie' movie anyway," Miss McArdle said in an interview with the Louisville Courier-Journal. "They changed everything around so much."

She is currently part of a March of Dimes benefit tour, which started in New York City and ends in Los Angeles.

PLAINS, Ga. (AP) — Former President Jimmy Carter plans "a good Georgia welcome" for Egyptian President Anwar Sadat when he visits Carter's home here this weekend, aides say.

An open invitation has been issued to the public, and free cold drinks will be served during welcoming ceremonies Sunday for Sadat and his wife, Jihan. The Egyptian president arrived in the United States earlier this week and met with President Reagan in Washington.

Welcoming ceremonies are scheduled for late Sunday afternoon at the Plains softball field, where both men are expected to speak.

State senate votes down tax break for oil men

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Senators voted Thursday to wipe out a proposal that one said might allow an oil operator to avoid paying property taxes on a rig because it was among "tools of the trade."

The Senate debated proposed changes in the 1979 Property Tax Code for 1½ hours, then broke late for lunch.

The tax code — or "Peveto Bill" — requires property taxes to be levied on full market value of real estate and income-producing personal property, as determined by countywide appraisal districts after Jan. 1, 1982.

The bill by Rep. Wayne Peveto, D-Orange, cleared the House 121-20 on Monday, but numerous Senate amendments would require the House to take another vote on the measure.

One amendment guarantees the right of voters to bypass governing bodies in setting taxes and levels of spending and restricting tax hikes.

Sen. Ray Farabee, D-Wichita Falls, said the "tools of the trade" amendment in the House-approved bill "could narrow the tax base, and homeowners would end up with the whole burden."

The bill offered two options for delay.

Governing bodies of two-thirds of the taxing units in a county could postpone the start of the single-appraisal system for a year or phase it in over a three-year period ending in 1985.

A change in the 1979 law raises from five to 20 acres the amount of land on which a person may claim a homestead exemption.

The bill reduces the voter turnout requirement in elections to stop property tax increases from 25 percent to 15 percent.

It says elderly and disabled taxpayers need apply only once, instead of each year, for special homestead exemptions. The Senate removed from the bill a 10 percent penalty for applying late for the exemption.

The Senate rejected a proposed amendment that would have extended the authority of appraisal district boards to hire extra personnel to handle appeals of appraisals past 1983.

Other amendments approved by the Senate would:

— Subject to taxation state income-producing property that is not used for public purposes. The provision would go into effect in 1984.

— Require local tax units to advertise future property tax increases in the newspaper only if they would exceed 3 percent.

Companies get property tax break

Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Oil companies will get a break on property taxes levied on oil and other petroleum products imported into Texas under provisions of a property tax reform bill passed Thursday by the Texas Senate.

The Senate voted 17-11 to add an admendment to House Bill 30 that will allow oil companies to keep oil ad petroleum products imported from other states in Texas for up to six months without being subject to property taxes.

HB 30 is the measure that overhauls the property tax reform bill of 1979.

The amendment, sponsored by Sen. Tati Santiesteban, D-El Paso, would allow oil companies to keep the out-of-state oil in Texas for up to 175 days before having to pay property taxes. County tax assesor would decide whether oil conpanies are entitled to the exemptions.

Santiesteban argued that the amendment puts oil and petroleum products on an equal footing with other goods brought into the state temporarily, but opponents of the amendment charged that it could be severly impact school districts.

Watt reluctant to limit Canadian investor's rights

WASHINGTON (AP) — Interior Secretary James G. Watt expressed reluctance Thursday concerning proposals that he revoke the right of Canadians to own stock in corporations that have mineral leases on federal lands in the United States.

"It would be inconsistent with U.S. investment policy and send a signal to other countries that the U.S. acknowledges investment limits as a legitimate foreign policy tool," Watt told a House Energy subcommittee.

"This country supports an open international investment policy in which governments do not inhibit the efficient allocation of capital resources," Watt said. "Our policy recognizes the fact that increasing levels of global investment are essential to all nations' economic well-being."

But Watt said he was reserving judgment on whether Canada should continue to be granted reciprocal status with the United States under this nation's Mineral Lands Leasing Act. If Canada loses it position as a reciprocal country, the U.S. government can seek cancellation of leases held by corporations that have Canadian investors.

Dingell, D-Mich., the subcommittee chairman, whoaccused the administration of stalling in making a decision on Canada.

"The delay in addressing this is intolerable from a policy standpoint," Dingell said. "Are you going to proceed expeditiously and vigorously?"

Watt responded that those words are subject to "different interpretation."

Dingell remarked, "you have a reputation as a vigorous administrator."

He noted that members of Congress, troubled by Canadian investment and economic policies, have proposed placing a nine-month moratorium on the purchase of more than 5 percent of the stock of Amerlean energy corporations by Canadians.

The Interior Department urged the Dingell subcommittee in May to hold off on any moratorium pending a review by the agency.

But Dingell said Watt is not moving quickly enough to resolve the issue.

"I don't think the national interest will tolerate the kind of delay" that Watt's review might entail, Dingell said.

It could leave the question unsettled for the rest of this administration and the next "under the long and tedious process you are contemplating," Dingell told Watt.

Watt testified that "due process" required him to move carefully to protect "the rights of all interested parties."

Dingell insisted that due process rights could be considered after Watt decides to revoke Canada's reciprocal status and then moves to cancel individual leases of federal lands in which Canadians have an interest.

The subcommittee's concern was heightened by the attempt of Seagram, a Canadian liquor company, to acquire Conoco Inc., America's ninth largest oil company.

The DuPont chemical company won a vigorous bidding war for Conoco on Thursday, but not before Seagram had made a tender offer and began to purchase shares of the oil firm.

"The speed with which such tenders are made and completed and the long-range consequences of the results underscore he necessityof a coherent policy response on the part of the United States," Dingell said.

Members of Congress have also expressed concern over the Trudeau administration's proposed economic policies that may discourage energy investment in Canada and therefore spur Canadian investment in natural resources in the United States.

Watt said the policies may be self-defeating to Canada and a benefit to the United States.

He added, however, that the proposals "could discriminate against foreign investment" in Canada and also "have the effect of devaluing American and other foreign energy assets in Canada."

Synfuel loan guaranteed by President Reagan

WASHINGTON (AP) — It isn't what Jimmy Carter envisioned when he proclaimed it "the keystone of our national energy policy," but after 13 months the country's synthetic fuels program is finally underway.

President Reagan, stepping in to resolve a bitter debate in his administration, Wednesday approved $3.1 billion in loan guarantees for two giant plants in Colorado and North Dakota.

That action followed the approval last week for up to $400 million in price supports for another plant in Colorado.

The two Colorado plants will produce oil from oil shale rock, while the Beulah, N.D., plant will convert coal into synthetic gas.

The three projects are the first to receive up to $20 billion the government has to hand out in the form of loan guarantees and price supports to spur development of the fledgling industry.

Carter made synfuels a key plank in his energy program, saying it was vital for the country to gain its independence from foreign oil imports.

But Reagan has been much cooler to the whole idea, questioning the need for big government subsidies to private industry.

His budget director, David A. Stockman, argued forcefully against making any of the three awards, but Energy Secretary James Edwards said support for the three plants was the least the country could do to demonstrate its commitment to developing domestic energy supplies.

Edwards, in announcing Reagan's action, said it served as "a strong signal that America's synfuels industry is off the drawing boards and into commercial reality."

The debate between Edwards and Stockman was at times bitter, with Edwards especially unhappy over the support Stockman gave to a House subcommittee that tried to hold Edwards in contempt of Congress. That issue was resolved when Reagan approved the Union Oil Co. oil shale project last week, allowing Edwards to turn over internal DOE documents on the action.

While Edwards won on the three contract awards, there are not likely to be any more awards for quite some time.

Edward Noble, Reagan's choice to head the U.S. Synthetic Fuels Corp., has made it clear the administration plans to move more slowly and cautiously on synfuels than many had expected.

Where the Carter administration set a goal of producing 500,000 barrels of synfuels daily by 1987 and 2 million barrels by 1992, Noble has said he doubts those production goals will be met by the government-supported projects.

The corporation, which now takes over from DOE handing out synfuels money, is not expected to make any awards for many months as it continues to organize and review 63 requests for funds.

The projects approved generally were conceded to be the farthest along with all expected to begin production in 1985.

The Beulah, N.D., plant, sponsored by four pipeline companies headed by American Natural Resources, will produce natural gas with the energy equivalent of 20,000 barrels of oil daily. It received a $2.02 billion government loan guarantee.

The Union plant, in Garfield County, Colo., will produce 10,000 barrels of diesel and jet fuel daily, which will be purchased by the Defense Department with the goverment guaranteeing a price of at least $42.50 a barrel and increases for inflation.

The other oil shale project, sponsored by Tosco and Exxon corporations, will produce 48,000 barrels of oil daily. The government guarantee of $1.1 billion will support Tosco's share of the project. Exxon, the world's largest oil company, did not seek government subsidies.

TMI supervisor fired for cheating

KING OF PRUSSIA, Pa. (AP) — A shift supervisor at the Three Mile Island nuclear power plant has been fired and another's status is under review after the two admitted cheating on operating licensing tests, the Nuclear Regulatory Commission reported.

The NRC said the two shift supervisors, identified only as "long-term" employees, had marked similarities [illegible] answer sheets during the April tests. All 36 operators who took the reactor operator and senior reactor operator license tests were reassigned after General Public Utilities, Inc., which owns TMI, confirmed reports of the cheating July 28.

The two supervisors who admitted cheating were on duty during the several days in March 1979 when TMI's Unit 2 was involved in the nation's worst commercial accident.

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan's Cabinet wants him to ask Congress to immediately decontrol newly discovered natural gas and phase out all price controls on other categories of natural gas over the next three years.

The Cabinet council chaired by Interior Secretary James Watt reached its decision at a meeting last week and the recommendation was made to Reagan on Wednesday, an administration official who asked not to be named said Thursday.

Energy Action, a consumer group which often criticizes oil companies, said the plan would mean a price increase of 63 percent next year for the average homeowner who heats with natural gas.

Under decontrol as it is now working, prices are rising gradually and will be totally lifted on new gas beginning Jan. 1, 1985. However, price controls on gas already in production would remain in place. Estimates place the amount of gas that would remain under price controls at around 40 percent.

White House spokesman David Gergen said Reagan has asked for further information and is reviewing the appropriateness of decontrolling existing natural gas and what the pricing mechanism ought to be for new gas.
