Agents tie Unabomb manifesto to suspect

■ Federal officials find what they believe is original copy of Unabomber's 35,000-word manuscript in Theodore Kaczynski's cabin.

N.Y. Times News Service

WASHINGTON — Federal law-enforcement officials said Friday that agents searching Theodore John Kaczynski's Montana cabin had found the original typewritten manuscript of the Unabomber's 35,000-word manifesto, a powerful piece of evidence that has convinced the authorities that they have the long-sought serial terrorist.

Elated officials said the recent discovery of the manuscript in the cabin capped a weeklong search of the remote mountain cabin, in Lincoln, Mont., that has so far yielded a trove of physical evidence that prosecutors hope will provide them with an incontrovertible case against Kaczynski.

"If we lose this one," one law-enforcement official said, "we'd better close up and go home."

The officials said the manuscript left little room for doubt that Kaczynski was the Unabomber.

The officials said they believed that the manuscript found at the cabin was a master copy. From it, the Unabomber laboriously typed the copies of the manifesto that he sent to The New York Times and The Washington Post in June 1995, they said.

Moreover, the officials said that along with the manifesto had been found an original of a letter sent by the Unabomber to The New York Times last year. The bomber sent several letters to the newspaper over the years, and it was not clear which of his letters had been found at the cabin, although the letter appeared to relate to the Unabomber's demand that the newspapers publish the manuscript.

Near the manuscript in the loft of the tiny one-room cabin, agents found a third manual typewriter. The first two typewriters found did not match the typewriting on the manuscripts sent to the newspapers, and officials said Friday that they were relieved that

A.M. BRIEFING

Tall tale

Which is the tallest of them all? The Sears Tower in Chicago or the new Petronas Towers in Malaysia will secure a spot in the record books once experts determine whether spires and antennas count.

The tall issue

CHICAGO — Is too. Is not. Is too! Is NOT! So goes the discussion over the world's tallest building. Is it in Chicago, home of the 1,450-foot Sears Tower (antennas not included)? Or is it in Malaysia, where the upstart Petronas Towers are nearing completion? Without spires, the Petronas complex is 209 feet shorter than the Sears Tower. With spires, it's 33 feet taller. If Sears' antennas are allowed, which the experts don't want, it will remain the ranking behemoth. And if Petronas' spires are included, why aren't Sears' antennas? The Council on Tall Buildings and Urban Habitat (yes, there really is such an organization) has never considered antennas or TV and radio towers essential to a structure. Members met in Chicago on Friday to revisit the issue.

Record-seeking pressure

Pressure of publicity, schedule could have contributed to crash

WASHINGTON (AP) — When little Jessica Dubroff's plane lifted off into that Wyoming rainstorm the decision to make the flight was legally in the hands of instructor Joe Reid. Some are questioning whether pressure to keep to a highly publicized schedule contributed to a fatal error.

"They had plenty of time, but when you have set a schedule, when you have crowds waiting for you, there is a terrible pressure to continue a flight," aviation consultant James E. Burnett Jr. reflected Friday. He is a former member of the National Transportation Safety Board.

Drew Steketee of the Aircraft Owners and Pilots Association said his group opposes such record-seeking flights "because of the external pressure that routinely occurs on publicity flights ... that does not exist in a normal flight."

And Sen. Larry Pressler, R-S.D., complained of "media-driven record chasing."

Jessica was striving to become the youngest person to complete a flight across the United States, even though the National Aeronautic Association no longer recognizes such feats. The Guinness Book of Records also dropped the youngest pilot category in order to avoid encouraging dangerous competition.

"When I heard about this proposed adventure I winced," Burnett said of Jessica's effort to outdo cross-country pilots aged 8 and 9 who made the flight in the past two years. "It's clear that if you keep dropping a year in every attempt, eventually you would have a failure to complete the flight and it could be catastrophic."

In an ordinary flight, delays can occur because of weather, fatigue, mechanical problems or other reasons. But in a publicity flight pressure to keep on schedule can affect decisions on whether to fly.

Bus driver refuses to take 9th-graders home, students say

By Myra Lee Salcedo
Staff Writer

Some ninth-graders said they were left to walk home from Lee Freshman High School or beg a ride Friday when the bus driver of Bus No. 43 refused to let students onto his bus. Students said the late bus arrives about 15 minutes after the other buses have left.

The bus driver refused to take LFHS students home because of an incident that occurred Thursday, students said.

According to students, someone sitting near the back of the bus tossed an empty plastic soda pop bottle forward and it struck the windshield. The bus driver promptly turned the bus around and headed back to the school campus. Students said the bus had about 15-20 passengers and those sitting near the front didn't know who threw the bottle.

'He came to the campus with students from Alamo Junior High School, let them off, then didn't let any Lee Freshman kids on. He just shut his doors and drove off.'

When the bus arrived back at LFHS, a security guard reportedly boarded it and told students that if the perpetrator didn't come forward, they would no longer have a late bus to ride home from school.

"Some of us were able to arrange for rides home for Friday with other people, since our parents work. But other students were out of luck," one female student said.

On Friday, students said the bus driver spoke briefly to a couple of students before shutting his doors and leaving the campus with an empty bus.

"He came to the campus with students from Alamo Junior High School, let them off, then didn't let any Lee Freshman kids on. He just shut his doors and drove off," a student said.

Clinton names Trade Representative Kantor as new commerce secretary

WASHINGTON (AP) — Two days after Ron Brown's burial, President Clinton named Trade Representative Mickey Kantor his new commerce secretary Friday in an emotional conclusion to a "profoundly moving and difficult week."

Shuffling his economic team, Clinton also promoted Kantor's deputy to be acting trade representative and picked an executive at the housing agency Fannie Mae as budget director, replacing Alice Rivlin who is joining the Federal Reserve Board.

With a bear hug in an East Room ceremony, Clinton and Kantor sealed the surprise move and paid yet another tribute to their mutual friend who died in an April 3 plane crash in Croatia.

"Ron would have loved this moment," said Kantor, known for a tough-as-nails negotiating style and nearly two dozen trade deals with Japan.

Like Brown, Kantor is a staunch Clinton ally and experienced political organizer. He was Clinton's 1992 campaign manager; Brown helped spearhead the 1992 campaign as leader of the Democratic National Committee.

Rebels hold control of Monrovian streets

MONROVIA, Liberia (AP) — Rebels ruled the streets for a seventh straight day Friday, shooting and looting and forcing the United Nations, Red Cross and other international agencies to pull out of Liberia.

Terrified Liberians held little hope for a peaceful resolution.

"There's no future for any young person in this country anymore," said Martha Buoh, the mother of two teen-age boys and whose gas station went up in flames.

"All of what I have worked for has been destroyed," said Thomas Toure, who owns a mini-market and said he'll move to neighboring Sierra Leone or Guinea, where he has relatives.

On the heels of an evacuation of 157 Americans and nearly 900 other foreigners, the United Nations and Red Cross announced they were pulling out, leaving what U.N. authorities said were an estimated 60,000 homeless people roaming the seaside capital looking for food and shelter.

Government troops resumed shelling of the military barracks where thousands of supporters of warlord Roosevelt Johnson are holed up. At least 30 African peacekeepers were being held captive at the barracks, where people were surviving on boiled rice.

Witnesses said two children were killed and 17 people were wounded by mortar fire at the barracks Friday morning. Shelling the night before killed seven people in a barracks church, the witnesses said.

Government troops — many of whom are former rebels brought into the military when a peace accord was reached last year — were reported ransacking and taking over houses.

"Nowhere is safe, not even your bathroom," said Martha Sebwe, a nurse who fled to the upscale Mamba Point Hotel where 500 people are holed up.

U.N. agencies reported "absolute anarchy" throughout Liberia's capital, said its New York spokesman, Sylvana Foa, with bodies in the streets and "wanton looting" of U.N. offices, stores and private homes.

Red Cross spokesman Rolin Wavre said vandals damaged its headquarters, stole a car and office equipment and made it impossible "to continue our work in the city. ... There is continuous looting. People getting more and more drunk and on drugs, so it's pretty much out of control," he said.

A spokeswoman for the U.N. High Commissioner for Refugees, Ruth Marshall, spoke of "wanton carnage" while the international Red Cross said it decided to leave Monrovia because of "the total anarchy reigning in the center of the city."

The ICRC said there was "no longer any authority that has the power or will" to curb the violence that erupted when government troops tried to arrest a rebel leader Saturday. It said the Red Cross "fears the worst for the civilian population."

Food and medicine was reported in dangerously short supply.

Somali warlord's son lost to sniper

MOGADISHU, Somalia (AP) — Somali warlord Osman Hassan Ali Atto's 18-year-old son was fatally shot as he watched a fight for control of southern Mogadishu from atop a building, his family said Friday.

A sniper in a nearby high-rise used a powerful, precision rifle to shoot Abdisalaan Osman Hassan Ali Atto in the head as he watched a gun battle Thursday between supporters of his father and Gen. Mohammed Farrah Aidid.

The young man was unarmed and was not a member of his father's militia, relatives said.

All of the Somali faction leaders except Atto have sent their children abroad. Five of Atto's 20 sons stay in their father's southern Mogadishu stronghold with their militia friends.

Aidid, the self-proclaimed president of Somalia, returned to Mogadishu last week from Baidoa, 125 miles northwest of the capital, reportedly to regroup his forces in an attempt to reestablish control over southern Mogadishu.

Since the overthrow of dictator Siad Barre in 1991, Somalia has been without an effective government, and clan leaders have carved out areas of influence.

Israel continues assault on Lebanese targets; residents flee for safety

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Israeli missiles slammed into a Syrian military post in Beirut on Friday, and thousands of panic-stricken villagers streamed out of southern Lebanon to escape Israeli air, artillery and tank assaults.

Police said 12 people were killed and at least 40 were wounded in the second day of Israel's offensive against Hezbollah, an Iranian-backed group that has battled for years to try to drive Israeli troops from a strip of land they hold in southern Lebanon.

Syria, which has 40,000 troops stationed in Lebanon, said a Syrian soldier was killed and seven were wounded when their anti-aircraft unit near Beirut's international airport was hit by missiles fired from an Israeli helicopter gunship. Beirut hospital officials said four other Syrians were slightly hurt.

Israeli officials insisted that the Syrians were inadvertently attacked, but Syria sounded unconvinced. The incident provoked fears that Syria, Lebanon's main powerbroker, might be drawn into the escalating confrontation between Israel and Hezbollah.

"We are targeting neither the Lebanese army nor the Syrian army," Israeli government spokesman Uri Dromi said. "Unfortunately, the Syrian army is all over the place."

A Syrian communique said, without elaboration, that Syrian troops were targeted after Syrian anti-aircraft fire drove off Israeli gunships.

Israel's military intelligence chief, Maj. Gen. Moshe Yaalon, told a Tel Aviv news conference: "We can't ask the identity of ... any weapon firing at our planes. We simply return fire."

The Israeli army's declared targets in Beirut were the command centers of Hezbollah, which had fired rockets into northern Israel earlier in the day. The rocket assault was meant to avenge Israeli air strikes Thursday on the capital and on guerrilla strongholds in eastern and southern Lebanon.

Four people in the Israeli border town of Kiryat Shemona were wounded in the Hezbollah rocket attacks Friday, one seriously. Before Israeli aircraft took off for Beirut, Israeli troops bombarded suspected guerrilla bases in southern Lebanon.

On Friday morning, the Israeli army warned residents of 44 villages in southern Lebanon to leave their homes because the villages would be attacked for allegedly helping Hezbollah in its war against Israel.

Thousands of terrified people began streaming northward, their cars bulging with mattresses, blankets and bundles of clothes.

At least 2,500 fleeing villagers sought shelter with U.N. peacekeeping forces in the region.

"People are trying to leave but they can't because the shelling continues, so they are trying to take refuge at U.N. positions," U.N. spokesman Timor Goksel said.

At sundown, the Israeli bombardments began.

Israeli tanks and 155-mm howitzer batteries hammered several villages clustered along the Syrian army's forward lines in the Bekaa Valley of eastern Lebanon, killing nine people and wounding five, security sources reported. The other casualties apparently were in southern villages.

Friday's casualties raised the overall toll to 19 dead and at least 70 wounded on both sides since the latest round of violence was triggered by a landmine explosion in southern Lebanon on Tuesday night.

Israeli gunboats patrolled a 50-mile stretch of Lebanon's coastline from Beirut to Tyre all day, intermittently firing machine guns at the shore, Lebanese security sources said.

Fighter jets and Apache helicopter gunships carried out dozens of strikes on villages near the Israeli-held enclave Friday and also hit the Palestinian refugee camp of Rashidiyeh outside the southern port of Tyre.

U.S. fighters reach Jordan

AZRAQ, Jordan (AP) — U.S. warplanes landed at an air base outside the oasis town of Azraq on Friday and prepared to patrol Iraq's southern skies to enforce a "no-fly zone."

They are the first U.S. combat jets to be based in the Hashemite kingdom to fly missions over Iraq.

Their deployment underlined Jordan's increasing military links with the Clinton administration and its new role in the international campaign against Baghdad, its one-time ally.

Sources said the 30 Air Force F-15s and F-16s, along with four KC-135 tanker aircraft, arrived at the air base near Azraq — 75 miles southeast of the capital Amman — in batches after flying from the United States.

The F-15s and F-16s will begin patrolling Saturday, flying through Saudi Arabian airspace to monitor the air exclusion zone in southern Iraq below the 32nd parallel.

The Pentagon said March 7 that the warplanes would be stationed in Jordan for two months while the U.S. Navy carrier group usually deployed in the Gulf region is absent.

The carrier's jets form part of the U.S. air contingent in the region that patrols the no-fly zone in southern Iraq, which the United Nations imposed in August 1992.

WEATHER WATCH

Today, sunny, breezy, mid-80s

Staff Report

Today's forecast calls for mostly sunny skies and breezy with a high between 85 and 90. Winds from the southwest to west at 15-25 mph and gusty, according to the National Weather Service.

Tonight's forecast calls for clear skies with a low in the mid- to upper 40s.

Sunday is expected to be sunny and cooler with a high in the mid- to upper 70s.

The high for Friday was 77, compared to the record high for that date of 97, set in 1972. Friday's low was 56. The record low is 28, set in 1957.

STATE

This afternoon a dry line bisected Texas from the Red River Valley to the Rio Grande near Laredo. Showers and thunderstorms occurred along this boundary of drier air to the west and moist unstable air to the east.

In North Texas, clouds and scattered thunderstorms dominated ahead of the dry line. At 4 p.m. a cold front stretched from south of Wichita Falls to south of Lubbock. The combination of these features triggered strong to severe thunderstorms across western sections of North Texas that moved northeast by late in the afternoon.

No tornadoes were confirmed, but hail ranging from marble-size in The Woodlands, near Houston, to baseball-size in Montague County pelted scattered parts of the state.

Planes were delayed up to an hour at Dallas-Fort Worth International Airport because of a combination of weather and air traffic control equipment problems. Fort Worth's Main St. Arts Festival was interrupted around 5 p.m. and resumed once the storm passed.

South Texas saw showers mostly in its central and eastern sections. Otherwise skies were partly to mostly cloudy. High temperatures ranged from the upper 80s and lower 90s in the Valley to the lower 70s on the upper coast.

Behind the dry line, in West Texas, a weak cold front was nearly stationary and skies mostly sunny. Temperatures at 3 p.m. ranged from 65 degrees at Dalhart 83 degrees at San Angelo and Sanderson. The wind was generally northwest to north at 10 to 20 mph over the Panhandle and South Plains.

The North Texas forecast for today called for partly cloudy skies with a chance of thunderstorms in the east. Highs were expected at 81 in the northeast and 92 in the southwest. There was a chance of evening thunderstorms in the eastern section.

Today was expected to bring mostly sunny skies with temperatures around 90 in most parts of South Texas.

NATION

It was back to snow and cold today for parts of the northern Plains where it was like summer just two days ago.

Elsewhere, rain dampened the Pacific Northwest, it was windy across much of the Midwest and clouds obscured the sky in the East.

Four inches of snow fell in Rapid City, S.D., Thursday, and it was still snowing early today. In the higher elevations of the Black Hills, a foot or more fell. The snow followed a record high temperature of 87 degrees in Rapid City on Wednesday.

Overnight, a light mix of snow and freezing rain was reported in Pierre, S.D., and Marquette, Mich.

Earlier today, it was raining in Oregon and Washington. Lake Cushman, Wash., and Brookings, Ore., picked up more than 1 inch of rain Thursday night.

Windy conditions continued in much of the nation's midsection, and in Southern California, where a high wind warning was issued. Winds of 40 mph contributed to a prairie fire in Illinois on Thursday that destroyed 17 homes around Hopkins Park, roughly 50 miles south of Chicago.

Temperatures earlier today ranged from a high of 73 degrees at Brownsville, Texas, to a low of 22 degrees at Roseau, Minn.

NEW: Clinton names commerce secretary profoundly moving and difficult week for all of us in our political family," Clinton said.

He also named:

■ Kantor's deputy, Charlene Barshefsky, as acting trade representative. She has received widespread praise in the past three years for her high-profile negotiating of trade deals with Japan and China.

■ Franklin Raines, vice chairman of the Federal National Mortgage Association, or Fannie Mae, as the new head of the Office and Management and Budget, filling the slot Rivlin will leave.

Republicans quickly praised Kantor, who was sworn in by Vice President Al Gore.

Campaigning in Texas, Clinton presidential rival Bob Dole said, "He probably will be widely supported on the Republican side. I've worked with him, found him to be very fair and a good person to work with."

While he praised Kantor's selection, Dole let it be known he would challenge Clinton's trade policies in the fall campaign.

Commenting on an administration report Friday on last year's U.S.-Japan auto agreement, Dole said, "President Clinton's declaration of victory on automobile trade with Japan is sad and unfortunate. The claimed increases in U.S. auto exports to Japan are incredibly small."

A spokesman for Sen. Larry Pressler, R-S.D., chairman of the Senate Commerce Committee, praised Kantor for his negotiating skills.But detractors say Kantor's trade deals have cost millions of American jobs by opening U.S. borders to competition from low-wage foreign companies. In 1992, some campaign aides accused him of being arrogant and too eager for a top White House post.

The appointment of Raines, and Barshefsky shows Clinton's commitment "to having a rainbow Cabinet," the Rev. Jesse Jackson said in a telephone interview.

Clinton timed the announcement to coincide with an event promoting a 37 percent increase in American auto exports to Japan. It was a fitting showcase for the scrappy California lawyer whose work has become a centerpiece of Clinton's foreign and domestic policies.

He was the point man on the North American Free Trade Agreement, the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade and the Asian accords — all of which are part of Clinton's global strategy to welcome foreign competition in open markets and make trade an integral part of foreign policy.

Commerce is traditionally a lower-key post, but Kantor is expected to follow on Brown's promise to elevate it. Brown was a fixture in economic, domestic policy and political discussions at the White House.

Brown and Kantor worked in tandem to open doors to American goods abroad.

"Mickey was the bad cop," Clinton joked. "Ron was the good cop. I thought we ought to give (Kantor) a chance to be a good cop for a change."

Clinton said Kantor's appointment promises stability in his economic team.

"I don't want to miss a beat," Clinton said. "I am determined that we will continue on the work that Ron Brown was engaged in the last day of his life."

Kantor had hoped to be Clinton's chief of staff after the 1992 election, but he took the trade job after losing an internal power struggle. His name had been circulated more recently for commerce secretary, as Brown's financial dealing came under scrutiny.

He also was considered a candidate to head the 1996 re-election campaign but had made it clear he did not want an official campaign role. Like Brown, who was part of a small circle of aides at Clinton-chaired political meetings every Wednesday, Kantor is expected to play a major advisory role this year.

The appointment may not technically require Senate confirmation because it was made while Congress is on recess, but the White House promised to subject Kantor to the process beginning next week.

LINK: Agents think they have original manifesto preliminary tests had confirmed that the type on the third machine matched the typewriting of the manuscripts.

The officials said agents also had found handwritten notations that might refer to some of the bomber's victims in a loose-leaf notebook found in Kaczynski's cabin. The notations mentioned geneticists, airlines and computer technology. The officials said the notes did not explain why Kaczynski was interested in such subjects.

Some of the bomber's victims were drawn from those fields. A Unabomber device injured Percy A. Wood in June 1980; he was then the president of United Airlines. Another bomb injured 12 people when it exploded aboard an American Airlines 727 leaving Chicago in November 1979.

The Unabomber also targeted victims who worked with computers or on genetic research. In December 1985 one of his bombs killed Hugh C. Scrutton, the owner of a computer store, and in June 1993, another badly injured David J. Gelernter, a computer science professor at Yale. A package bomb mailed in June 1993 injured Charles J. Epstein, a geneticist at the University of California.

The officials said the discovery of the manuscript in the cabin was a legally significant find in a search that has already yielded much physical evidence. The manuscript is the kind of powerful supporting evidence against Kaczynski that prosecutors want to use in what is emerging as an overwhelming circumstantial case against Kaczynski, a Harvard-educated mathematician who taught at the University of California at Berkeley.

The manuscript, a closely reasoned scholarly tract that railed at dehumanizing influences in postindustrial society, was mailed in June 1995 to The New York Times and The Washington Post. In September, The New York Times and The Washington Post jointly financed publication of the manifesto; later, it was reprinted and circulated on the country's computer networks.

Kaczynski has been charged only with the illegal possession of explosives, a charge not specifically tied to the Unabomber. Officials said they expected to accuse Kaczynski of Unabom crimes in several jurisdictions after evidence against him is presented to a grand jury.

On Thursday, Justice Department officials announced that Robert J. Cleary, an assistant U.S. attorney in Newark, N.J., would lead a six-member team to prosecute the cases. The probable top priorities for prosecution are the two most recent fatal bomb attacks, against Thomas Mosser, an advertising executive, who was killed at his home in North Caldwell, N.J., in December 1994, and against Gilbert Murray, a forestry association official who was killed in Sacramento, Calif., in April 1995.

Investigators have been pursuing the Unabomber for 17 years, following the long trail of bombings that killed three people and wounded 23. They knew him only as the man in an FBI sketch who peered out from a hooded sweatshirt and wore aviator sunglasses.

The sketch was a composite drawing taken from a fleeting glimpse of a suspect by a witness in February 1987 at the scene of a bombing in Salt Lake City. The investigators had chased thousands of clues and raked vast data bases looking for a man they thought was responsible for the crimes.

But their efforts to catch him had stalled in a maze of dead ends until he issued his manifesto. Some investigators speculated that after the bombing of the Alfred P. Murrah Federal Building in Oklahoma City on April 19, 1995, the Unabomber felt upstaged. They theorized that he hoped to use his writings to regain his position as the country's most infamous bomber.

But allowing a wider audience to examine his thoughts was a huge risk. In October 1995, Kaczynski's brother, David, who had been contending with the gnawing feeling that Kaczynski could be the Unabomber, sought out a copy of the manuscript. David Kaczynski's lawyer, Anthony P. Bisceglie, said the suspect's younger brother had read the document in an effort to rule out his brother as a suspect. Instead, the lawyer said, reading the manuscript left David Kaczynski more deeply anguished since it convinced him that his brother could be the Unabomber.

After David Kaczynski conducted his own investigation, using a private investigator and a former behavioral profiler at the Federal Bureau of Investigation, he and his lawyer took their suspicions to federal law-enforcement officials. After months of negotiations, David Kaczynski identified his brother to authorities. After weeks of surveillance at the Montana cabin, agents arrested Kaczynski and began their search, which they say has brought the baffling case to a close.

In another development, the suspect's brother and mother, David Kaczynski and Wanda Dombek Kaczynski, visited the federal public defender's office here Friday, people following the case said. The purpose of the visit was not clear, but it is likely that they might be assisting in some way in the defense of Kaczynski, who is being represented by a public defender in Montana.

stop the plane from taking off in bad weather?

"The decision is not made by somebody on the ground; it is made by the pilot in command," Steketee said.

"Air traffic controllers have a big responsibility and making the decisions that pilots are supposed to make is not one of them," added Burnett.

Flight instructor Reid died in the crash along with Jessica and her father. Jessica was too young to get a pilot's license — the minimum age is 16 for a student certificate — So Reid was legally the pilot in charge.

Nonetheless, he had announced that Jessica would do the flying on the planned cross-country trip. There is no minimum age for someone to be allowed to take the controls as long as a flight instructor is in command.

"Pilot in command is not a rhetorical thing," Steketee said. "It has very firm legal meaning in aviation. The pilot in command has sole and final responsibility for the safety of the flight. The pilot in command is the one who decides whether he takes off or not."

The air traffic controller does advise pilots of weather conditions and commercial passenger flights can be held up in bad weather. But takeoffs by private planes are left up to the pilot.

It was raining when Jessica took off early Thursday but conditions were changing rapidly.

Some aviators defend the practice of allowing young people to fly when accompanied by a flight instructor, pointing out that handling the controls in most conditions is relatively easy.

Steketee called reports misleading that claim in severe conditions it could take up to 60 pounds of force to move some controls.

"Control of the aircraft in the air is surprisingly easy," he said. "This is not like driving a car, you do not have phone poles and opposing traffic, you have a lot of room to maneuver up there."

The plane had dual controls, which would have allowed Reid to step in if wind or harsh weather caused problems.

Bob Warner of the Experimental Aircraft Association in Oshkosh, Wis., said he has taken 50 or more young people aged 8 to 18 on flights, often allowing them to take the controls.

"There are mature seven-year-olds and immature 9-year-olds," he reflected. "Can they manipulate the controls? Are they capable of doing that? ... Manipulating the controls is the easy part."

The knowledge of flight rules and dealing with various conditions is what makes the difference, he said. "That's why we go through training and a certification process by the government."

RIDE: Students say driver wouldn't take them home the bus, but the bus driver told him he had to have a "legitimate reason" to ride Bus 43. The student said the driver told him the definition of a legitimate reason was "D-hall (after-school detention)."

(From 1A)

Students who had other after-school activities were left to find their own transportation, they said.

Wes Washam, transportation director for Midland Independent School District, said three other buses were available for students to ride home. Students however, said those buses were full, and had already left the campus.

MISD spokeswoman Susan Webb said Washam sent a backup bus to the campus shortly after Bus 43 left.

Washam said only the campus principal, not the bus driver, has the authority to decide if students can no longer ride a bus. When LFHS was contacted, a receptionist said Principal B. Dan Green was on another telephone line and would return a call to the Reporter-Telegram. Later his secretary said he had left campus.

Ms. Webb said details of the events involving Bus 43 were unclear but that only two boys were known to have used the telephone in the LFHS office to call their parents for rides home.

She said there will be plenty of buses at LFHS for students to take home on Monday.

Two residents visit in the shell-shocked neighborhood of Grbavica in Sarajevo Friday.

BRUSSELS, Belgium (AP) — Countries assembling $1.2 billion to reconstruct war-ravaged Bosnia sought ways Friday to help the Bosnian Serb people, yet isolate their hard-line leaders who boycotted the gathering.

Officials from 55 nations and two dozen finance agencies began making pledges to cover the 1996 reconstruction needs.

Several nations said they expected donations to at least approach the target before the two-day session ends Saturday.

The restoration of civil society in Bosnia is considered a vital complement to the NATO-led military effort to enforce the Balkan peace accord reached last fall in Dayton, Ohio.

The Bosnian Serbs refused to attend the meeting unless they were allowed to send their own delegation, independent of the Bosnian government.

The boycott probably would not disqualify Serb areas of Bosnia from receiving aid, officials said, but it would reduce their ability to lobby for specific projects.

Bosnian Serbs have clashed with Western governments over a number of issues, including their reluctance to hand over war-crimes suspects and oust wartime leaders from power.

Some officials worried that aid to Serb areas could indirectly help Serb leader Radovan Karadzic, who has been indicted for war crimes by the international tribunal at The Hague, Netherlands.

"People don't want to help indicted war criminals stay in power," said William Montgomery, special advisor on Bosnia to the U.S. administration. "That is the dilemma."

"We want to reach out to the ordinary people. They are not guilty of war crimes but their leaders are," said Carl Bildt, the U.N. official in charge of the civilian aspects of the Balkan peace accord.

He said conferees were devising programs to reach ordinary Serbs. But it was not clear how donornations could sidestep the Bosnian Serb leadership to get the reconstruction aid through.

Some nations were reluctant to earmark any funds for the Bosnian Serb region as long as its current leadership remained in power.

Montgomery said the United States was not providing any money for the area. "It's their loss," he said.

After pledging $600 million last December to get reconstruction going over the winter, the donornations were now seeking $1.2 billion to complete the 1996 target of $1.8 billion.

Priority aid projects include reconstruction of Bosnia's roads, schools, telecommunications networks, water systems and electric grids. This week's meeting was specifically soliciting funds for education, health and mine-clearing.

The World Bank was also hoping to find ways to get Bosnians back to work, especially the 250,000 Bosnian soldiers due to be demobilized in the next six months.

Molester's former boss recalls 'filth' letters

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — As a school bus driver, child molester Larry Don McQuay wrote dirty letters to a high school student, his former supervisor has told the San Antonio Express-News.

"It was just filth," said Doug Van Buren, McQuay's direct supervisor at the North East School District in 1988. Van Buren said he couldn't recall exactly what McQuay wrote in the letters.

Van Buren said he told his bosses they should fire McQuay, the Express-News reported in a copyright story Friday. McQuay soon left the job, but Van Buren said he didn't know whether he was fired or resigned.

The district repeatedly has said McQuay resigned for personal reasons and that no one there recalled any questionable incidents involving him.

However, school district officials said Thursday they discovered "documents" that may have a bearing on an investigation being conducted by the San Antonio Police Department into McQuay's activities before his arrest six years ago.

District spokesman Victor J. Garcia confirmed the "documents" were letters and had been turned over to police investigators. He wouldn't reveal the contents of the letters or who wrote them.

Nixon's estate hands over famous recordings

WASHINGTON (AP) — Richard Nixon's estate gave up a 21-year fight to keep his White House tapes secret Friday, agreeing to the release of all but the most private of 3,700 hours of recordings.

The tapes promise new insights into the former president's struggle to stave off impeachment for the crimes of Watergate.

From Aug. 9, 1974, the day he resigned, until he died on April 22, 1994, Nixon battled in the courts so diligently that only 63 hours were made available for public hearing. About half of those were played for the jury at the cover-up trial that sent three of Nixon's top lieutenants to prison.

The taping system worked silently. Secretly and automatically, every sound made — the rattle of coffee cups, lawn mowers outside — was picked up by hidden microphones in three White House offices used by the president.

Nixon's daughters, Julie Nixon Eisenhower and Tricia Nixon Cox, supported the decision to give up their father's fight.

The tapes will not become fodder for radio or television, at least not until later in the 21st century.

But by this November, visitors to the National Archives will be able to put on earphones and listen to Nixon and his aides plot what officials say were "abuses of governmental power." Except for archivists, no one has ever heard the tapes.

The first release will cover 201 hours.

Bickering to the end, the four parties in a federal lawsuit delayed a news conference for half an hour Friday as they argued the wording of a news release announcing the agreement.

"I think we won a great victory today," said Stanley I. Kutler, a University of Wisconsin historian who sued the National Archives and executors of the Nixon estate.

"Richard Nixon could have lived another 100 years, and Richard Nixon would have fought to his dying breath the release of any of this material," Kutler said.

John H. Taylor, director of the Nixon Library and Birthplace and co-executor of the estate, said the Nixon daughters took the lead in the decision.

"Not only because they believe in disclosure," Taylor said in an interview, "but also (because) historians will be apt to conclude that the achievements far outweigh the tragedy."

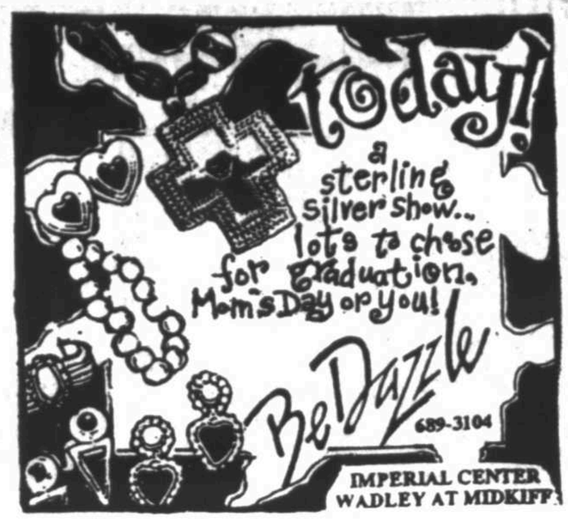

Among 2,700 hours of nonprivate, non-Watergate conversations will be discussions of momentous events of the Nixon years. Historians will have a feast: peace talks with North Vietnam, detente with the Soviet Union, resumption of relations with China.

Taylor, Nixon's post-resignation assistant for years, said Nixon's fight was to protect not the secrets of Watergate but to the privacy of his conversations. "He realized he had already lost that (Watergate) battle after all," Taylor said.

The agreement is filled with legal details that could further delay the release. Nixon's attorneys retain the right to object to the release of some material, but they pledged to let a panel of archivists instead of the courts mediate disputes over recordings covering abuse of power.

The second release, expected no later than April 1998, is of tapes made of Nixon in the White House cabinet room. The 278 hours will undergo possible deletions for national security and other exceptions laid down in a 1974 law. The remaining 2,338 hours will then be made public in five segments over the next several years.

About half the earlier tape releases were accompanied by transcripts made for Watergate prosecutors. With the new ones, the archives will supply 27,000 pages of detailed tape logs and other research aids for historians.

Perot open to Dole's request for 'shared interest' meeting

WASHINGTON (AP) — Why doesn't he just call?

Trying to squash any chance of Reform Party rebel Ross Perot entering the presidential race, Republican candidate Bob Dole has publicly asked to meet with the Texas billionaire and convince him of their shared interest in ousting President Clinton.

But in a television interview to be broadcast this weekend, Perot says he's never heard from Dole and doubts the Senate majority leader's sincerity.

"I'm happy to meet with anybody anytime ... but if anybody's serious about meeting with me you'd think they'd give me a call, we'd set up a meeting, we'd have a quiet meeting," Perot told CNN's "Inside Politics Weekend," which was taped Friday for broadcast Saturday evening.

"We'll do it one of these days," Dole said Friday, when told about Perot's remarks.

Perot also turned the tables on Dole's suggestion that Reform Party members join forces with him, saying Dole could "join us in the Reform party if he wants to, we'd love to have him."

Dole, campaigning in Texas, acknowledged Thursday night that he had not spoken with Perot because of the busy GOP primary season and a flurry of activity in the Senate, but added "I hope to fairly soon."

And while Dole continued to insist that Republicans share the Reform Party's agenda for a balanced budget and political reform, Perot had nothing good to say about the performance of the GOP Congress on those issues.

"We've got a balanced-budget amendment lying over there in the Senate like a whale on the beach," Perot complained. "Let's get it done."

He also scoffed at the line-item veto, which Clinton signed into law this week to both Republican and Democratic delight. Calling it "sham reform," Perot said the measure will do nothing to reduce the federal deficit because "virtually all the social programs had been excluded and that's two-thirds of the budget."

"No one believes the line-item veto is a cure-all for the budget deficit," White House spokeswoman Kathy McKiernan said in response to Perot's remarks. She said it would provide "added discipline by ensuring that as tight budgets increasingly squeeze available resources, we will put public funds to the best possible use."

She noted that the veto applies to discretionary spending, and not to the entitlement programs that constitute the bulk of the budget.

On abortion, Perot refused to weigh in on Clinton's veto this week of a ban on certain late-term abortions, calling it an "ancillary issue" that allows Washington to duck "real issues."

"If you had a patient in the emergency room who had broken fingers and toes and whose heart had stopped beating, I think you'd expect the doctors to work on the heart," Perot said in classic Perot style.

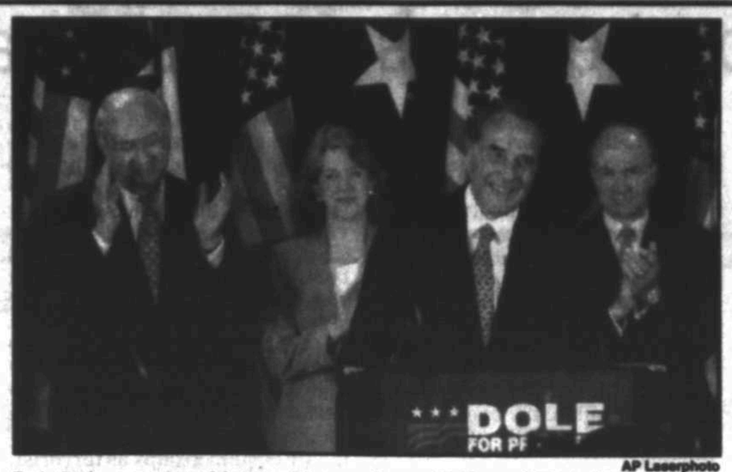

"The heart that has stopped beating in our country is our financial situation," he added.

Supporters of Perot, whose independent bid in 1992 was blamed for siphoning Republican votes and helping Clinton to the White House, are not only seeking to get his party on the ballot but, in some states, are putting his name on as a "stand-in" candidate.

Perot sighed when asked Friday if that drive — and his recently stepped-up public schedule — are signals he'll run.

"I've answered this probably 3,000 times. It is not about me, it's about creating a party for the American people. They will select their presidential candidate" at the Reform convention in August, he said.

The interview is scheduled to be broadcast on CNN at 7:30 p.m. EDT Saturday.

Package bomb explodes in Florida

PLANTATION, Fla. (AP) — A package bomb left on a doorstep exploded Friday just after a neighborhood boy brought it into the house, killing a woman and injuring three children home from school on Easter break.

"The next-door neighbor saw the package and, as a good neighbor, picked it up and brought it inside," said Sgt. Mike Price.

The bomb exploded in the back of the house but was powerful enough to blow the front doors open and knock window screens off-kilter. The blast happened on a quiet, curving street in the Jacaranda Lakes subdivision, which has lush hedges and towering royal palms.

"It sounded like a loud crash, like a car crashing," said 13-year-old John Vietz, who lives a half-block away.

Orlando Blanco, a spokesman for the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobbaco and Firearms, said the motive for the attack was unknown. Agents from ATF, the FBI and the Postal Service were investigating.

The victims' identities were not immediately released.

The 7-year-old neighborhood boy handed the package to a girl, who gave it to her mother. The woman put it on the kitchen table, opened it and was killed instantly by the explosion, police said. Her 13-year-old son, his 10-year-old sister and the neighbor were injured.

The girl, with a wound to her lower back, and her brother, with a cut on one hand, were hospitalized in good condition. The neighbor was treated at the scene by paramedics.

Study shows young Americans reading

WASHINGTON (AP) — A study sponsored by the newspaper industry says 42 percent of young adults read newspapers daily or almost every day.

"This study shows that the 'MTV Generation' didn't give up reading newspapers in exchange for watching television and illustrates that young people rely on newspapers for unique information other media can't provide," said John F. Sturm, president of the Newspaper Association of America. The NAA cosponsored the research with the American Society of Newspaper Editors.

Among 38 million Americans age 16 to 29 — "Generation X" — 24 percent of those asked said they read a newspaper every day, 18 percent said almost every day, 21 percent said two or three times a week and 11 percent said only on Sundays. Twenty-one percent said seldom, 4 percent never.

In comparison, the "Baby Boomers" — Americans age 30 to 49, born in the post-World War II years — read papers somewhat more consistently, the study found.

Republicans put final touches on sought after anti-terrorism legislation

WASHINGTON (AP) — Majority Republicans are wrapping up work on long-stalled anti-terrorism legislation, officials said Friday, and hope to clear it for President Clinton's signature by next week's anniversary of the bombing of the federal building in Oklahoma City.

In addition to taking steps to combat terrorism, the measure would curtail protracted appeals by death row inmates and other convicts and require criminals to pay restitution to their victims.

In a retreat for the House, Republican officials, speaking on condition of anonymity, said the emerging compromise is expected to contain provisions designed to bar fund raising in this country by representatives of terrorist groups.

Congressional aides have been working against an informal deadline to reconcile differences between bills passed last year by the Senate and last month by the House. With lawmakers returning to the Capitol next week after a two-week break, current, tentative plans call for a formal announcement of a compromise on Monday. Senate passage would come on Tuesday and House concurrence two days later.

Congressional officials, speaking on condition of anonymity, cautioned that last-minute hitches were still possible. Nor was it clear whether minority Democrats would support the measure. Senior Republican aides said the administration had been involved in the negotiations and they were hopeful Clinton would sign the measure.

Clinton asked Congress to approve anti-terrorism legislation shortly after the Oklahoma City bombing on April 19, 1995, which killed 168 people. But in the House, in particular, deep differences among Republicans over several provisions stalled work for months.

In two days of debate last month, the GOP-controlled House stripped out many provisions that an unlikely coalition of groups, including the National Rifle Association, said would have handed too much power to the federal government at the expense of individual liberties.

Speaker Newt Gingrich pledged before final passage that at least some of the provisions would be restored. Officials said the proposal designed to bar fund raising for terrorist groups was one of them.

The final bill is expected to give the government authority to designate certain groups as terrorist, subject to review by the courts and Congress itself, these officials said. Fund raising by their representatives could be banned.

Rep. Bob Barr, R-Ga., who led the fight to restrict the scope of the measure in the House, could not be reached for comment.

Also restored would be a provision easing deportation of foreigners with suspected terrorist links.

A Senate-passed provision making it easier to obtain "multipoint" wiretaps on an individual suspected in terrorism cases is not expected to be included in the measure, officials said.

Clinton signaled support for the original Senate bill, angering some liberals in his own party when he agreed to "habeus corpus" changes designed to curtail federal court appeals in state cases. These appeals are often used by death row inmates.

Skyscrapers battle for brag rights on tallest building

CHICAGO (AP) — Is too. Is not. Is too! Is NOT!

So goes the discussion over the world's tallest building.

Is it in Chicago, home of the 1,450-foot Sears Tower (antennas not included)? Or is it in Malaysia, where the upstart Petronas Towers are nearing completion? Without spires, the Petronas complex is 209 feet shorter than the Sears Tower. With spires, it's 33 feet taller.

If Sears' antennas are allowed, which the experts don't want, it will remain the ranking behemoth. And if Petronas' spires are included, why aren't Sears' antennas?

The Council on Tall Buildings and Urban Habitat (yes, there really is such an organization) has never considered antennas or TV and radio towers essential to a structure. Members met in Chicago on Friday to revisit the issue.

How important is the Sears Tower to Chicago? How does the phrase "Chicago, Home of the World's Second-Largest Building" strike you?

"People may think 'Well, we don't really need a key chain from the Sears Tower. It's not tallest anymore,'" said John Rice, spokesman for the Chicago Architecture Foundation.

Gerald Johnson, chairman of the Chicago Committee on High Rise Buildings, said the issue is a matter of ego and politics.

"Everybody wants to be tall — the biggest, the best," Johnson said.

But, he said, having the tallest building won't make tourists choose Kuala Lumpur over Chicago.

"I don't think anybody has not gone to New York in the last 25 years because the Empire State Building is the second- or third-tallest building," he said.

No matter what the ruling, Chicago will take its accolades where it can.

"While there still is a dispute over what qualifies as the tallest building in the world, there is no disputing the fact that Chicago would still have the highest observation deck in the world," said Noelle Gaffney, spokeswoman for Mayor Richard Daley.

About 1.5 million people visit the Sears Tower's top floor each year. Since it opened in 1974, it's seen about 31.5 million visitors, said Phil Domenico, the building's manager.

The Council on Tall Buildings and Urban Habitat, based at Lehigh University in Pennsylvania, is devoted to high-rise design and construction. Members voted Friday, but the official tally probably won't be in for a month.

Celebrations Poll

Over 330 BasinLink users responded to last week's poll concerning "Celebrations," the controversial social studies curriculum supplement offered in Midland elementary schools.

One-hundred fifty-three respondents said they supported the teaching of the curriculum supplement in Midland schools, while 89 said they did not.

When asked which portions of the curriculum supplement they preferred NOT to have their children exposed to, respondents, who could select as many cultures and religious practices as they wanted, named the following:

Hanukkah	19
Kwanzaa	50
Day of the Dead	46
Hinduism	49
Muslim	51
Jehovah's Witness	59
Buddhism	49
American Indian customs	26
All of the Above	50
None of the Above ("I want my child to learn about all cultures")	165

Fifty-seven percent of 293 respondents said they would support the teaching of Christianity in public schools, while 65 indicated their support for prayer in public schools.

Complete results can be found in the Polls area of BasinLink. A selection of comments from BasinLink subscribers can be accessed in the Forums area under the "Celebrations" category. Debate is welcome.

Anatomy of a hacker

Mike and Terry's Dreadful Adventure

By Elizabeth Weise
AP Cyberspace Writer

SACRAMENTO, Calif. — Terry Ewing was late. His plane left in an hour and he was cutting it close. But he couldn't tear himself away from his computer and the hole he'd hacked into the security network of Tower Records.

He kept poking around, looking for something interesting to take to the hackers' convention he was going to. Finally, five minutes before the airport shuttle beeped in front of his apartment, he downloaded a file containing 1,700 credit card numbers.

"I thought, 'I'll grab this database and see what's on it that I can use, as sort of a leverage at this hacker convention' — to actually be somebody instead of just spouting off a lot of garbage," Ewing remembers.

"We didn't expect anyone was watching," he said seven months later — through an inch of Plexiglas at the Sacramento County Jail.

Looking back on it now, with 21 months in federal custody stretching before him, the 21-year-old manages a wry grin and says, "Idle hands, I guess."

Idle hands and a ethic that says, "If your security can't keep me out, it's your own fault if I break in." Overwhelmingly male, often young and generally whipsmart, hackers are bright when it comes to technology.

But they can be dumb when it comes to reality. They imagine themselves to be invincible, invisible and smarter than the people on the other side of the screen.

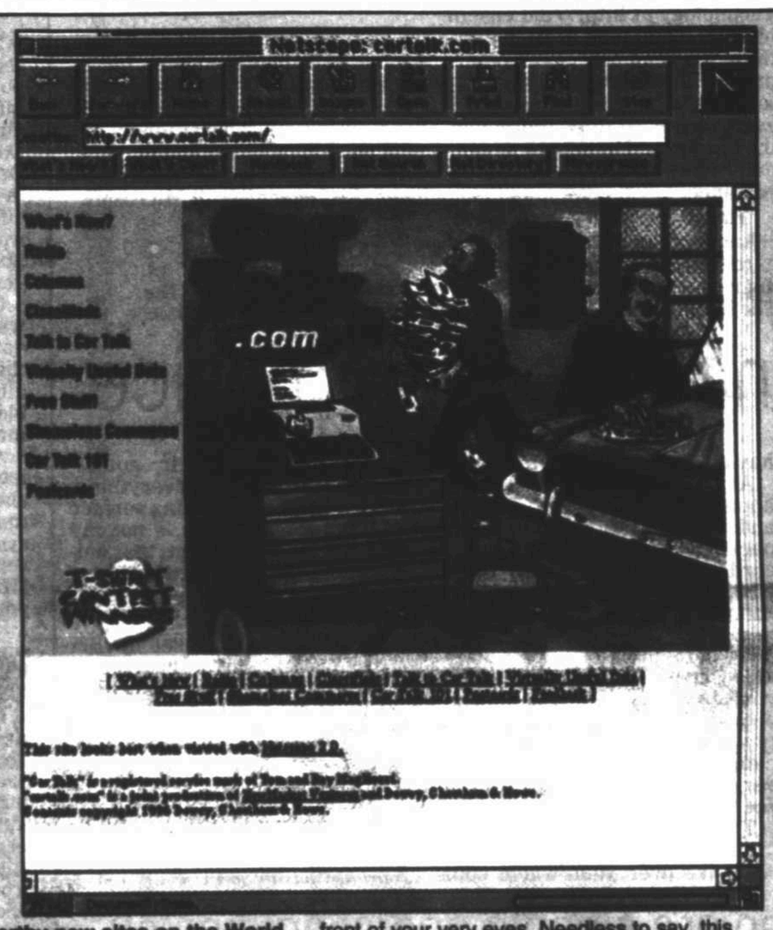

The truth is, most hackers who steal get caught, most intrusions are noticed and the authorities on the other side of that screen are becoming more and more

Offshore drilling now possible via satellite; implications abound

By Agis Salpukis
N.Y. Times News Service

Like many a deep-sea fisherman, Richard A. Morneau obsesses about the ones that got away. Take, for example, the whopper off the Angolan coast three years ago — a big deep water oilfield that Morneau, a geophysicist for Chevron Corp., still suspects was down there.

But months had elapsed by the time the ship's seismic readings could be processed by a supercomputer back on land, yielding clues on where to probe further for petroleum. And only then were errors discovered in the original navigational data. The company could not relocate that promising fishing hole.

"Had we known right away," Morneau recalled, still wistful, "we could have made a correction."

But now, thanks to a communications technology breakthrough with implications that go far beyond the petroleum industry, oil hunters like Morneau may soon be able to receive billions of bytes of offshore seismic data and process it back on land in "real time." That would enable them to instruct the ship gathering the data to go back quickly for another sweep over a tantalizing spot.

The technology is based on a high-speed satellite system born of a collaboration between the government and industry. And it promises not only to put a powerful new tool in the hands of the oil industry, but may also have applications for doctors in remote sites or emergency workers coping with disasters in isolated locales.

During a recent demonstration, Morneau and several colleagues sat excitedly in front of computer screens in a Washington office perusing supercomputer analysis of data gathered minutes earlier from a ship 1,500 miles away.

The vessel, the M/V Geco Diamond, towed a set of steel cable "streamers" with hundreds of hydrophones that measured sound waves being bounced off rock and salt formations thousands of feet below the azure surface of the Gulf of Mexico.

Using the satellite's return link, the scientists in Washington communicated by voice, video and text with experts aboard the

TurboTax still the software of choice for harried filers

By Jack Warner
N.Y. Times Service

If there are people who've been standing around waiting for me to tell them what income tax program to use this year, the answer is the same as usual — TurboTax.

As usual, it's available in a regular floppy edition and the deluxe CD-ROM version ($40 and $45 at discount).

If you wait another week or so, you might find them at half-price somewhere. On the other hand, your taxes would probably run you a little more than usual, too.

The folks at Intuit seem to be refining this tax program in a very intelligent way; they add more and more to the program, but it gets easier and easier to do your taxes.

Books, magazines can't keep up with developments; WWW can, does

If you've been around computing for longer than a month or two, you know how fast things can change.

Books on computing rapidly become antiques. New computers and software are introduced almost monthly, making the information in even the newest book outdated on the day it's published. Even printed magazines, with a lead time of several months in some cases, often stay two steps behind the news.

That's why the Internet and its World Wide Web have become one of the best ways to keep up with this fast-changing technology. Whether you're interested in computers because you're a hobbyist or because they're an important part of your job, you'll find the information you need on the Web.

Intra-office network server often best solution

By Stephan Lazaroff

Small, medium and large offices all suffer from one common affliction: inefficient data storage and retrieval methods that result in lost productivity, and often, lost files. With multiple computers in the office, files can be moved about on disks with a small degree of danger from improper handling. However, even this small degree of danger may be more than you want to gamble with, since, after all, the data being moved about is valuable to your business efforts.

A far more logical solution to data sharing is to keep those valuable files on one computer and allow access only to those who need it. NetWare 4.1, a very high-end, sophisticated networking program for Novell, meets all the needs of nearly any office from as few as two computers to as many as thousands. Because of its many features and security schemes, this software is very complex. Make no mistake, software has a proportional learning curve, and Novell NetWare's curve is nearly vertical.

Installation requires a dedicated server, which, in laymen's terms, means a single computer that will act as the overall system core. Assuming of course that your office only requires one server! Once you've dedicated a machine to be a network server, you must be sure to prepare that system to accept its new role in the office. This means partitioning the hard drive and formating it. Only when this is done can you begin to install the network software. However, this isn't a game you're installing so be sure to read the on-screen text carefully before proceeding from one step to the next. After the network is installed and configured it's extremely difficult to alter the directory structure.

Be sure the server is a powerful machine with a large hard drive. In fact, the larger the better, since this hard drive will contain the bulk of your company's records and files. One of the advantages of Novell NetWare 4.1 is that it includes a special feature earlier versions lacked: Net Admin for Windows 3.x. This graphical interface runs from within Windows and from it you can administrate the network as if you were actually working from within the network shell. Nearly all phases of system administration can be performed from this Windows application, and your tasks are made that much simpler due to the more friendly, familiar Windows environment.

Bridging the Mac-Windows gap: An affront or convenience?

By Peter H. Lewis
N.Y. Times News Service

The human race has functioned fairly well for thousands of years despite a large number of operating system incompatibilities. There are different standards for sex, language, race, religion, politics and personal computers.

With its new program Soft Windows 95 for Power Macintosh, Insignia Solutions Inc. has done little to resolve the battle of the sexes or the 1996 election, but it has succeeded fairly well in forging a closer relationship between the Macintosh and Windows cultures. Soft Windows 95, with an estimated retail price of $350, effectively converts a fast Macintosh into a slow 486-based PC that is capable of using Windows software.

Normally, most Macintosh users would not view this as a particularly desirable achievement, and Macintosh supremacists might view it as an affront. However, the growing reality is that many Macintosh owners live in environments where Windows users are the majority, particularly in offices. The ability to run Windows programs on a Mac can foster closer communications, bridge cultural differences and thus make the world a better place.

Other Macintosh owners have reported envy when they see colleagues sneak in a game of Windows solitaire on the laptop at a business meeting. Windows definitely has more cool games than the Mac.

And finally, there are some Macintosh owners who fear that Apple may stop making Macs and cede the market to Windows machines.

In any event, some Mac users need to use Windows programs from time to time. The obvious solution, buying a separate PC, has the disadvantages of costing a lot, taking up lots of valuable desk space and betraying the "Apple Forever" cause.

There are other solutions. Later this month, Apple is expected to introduce two new plug-in cards for Power Macintoshes that will allow them to use either Mac or Windows software. One contains an actual 486-level microprocessor and the other a Pentium chip. Apple declined to comment, but the cards are expected to cost $700 to $1,000. Similar Pentium-based plug-in cards are also expected in the near future from the Reply Corp. of San Jose, Calif., and Orange Micro Inc. of Anaheim, Calif., two companies that have made DOS-compatibility cards for earlier Macintoshes. Or, one can wait until the end of the year for a new Macintosh desktop system that will, in theory, run any operating system the user chooses.

But for now, Soft Windows 95 is the least expensive and most practical solution, with a few big asterisks.

- It requires a Power PC microprocessor.
- It requires at least 16 megabytes of vacant system memory, and 24 megabytes are recommended.
- The software commandeers 130 megabytes of hard disk space.
- It requires a CD-ROM drive.

These are not trivial requirements, and it is unclear how many Macintosh owners have such resources. Only one of the three Macs in my office was brawny enough for the challenge, a Power Macintosh 7100/80 with 40 megabytes of RAM and a gigabyte of hard disk space.

Until Soft Windows 95 came along, I never thought this machine would ever run out of RAM or disk space. But then, I was convinced I would never be able to fill my first 10-megabyte hard disk, either.

Installation was simple, relatively quick and, when I saw how much of my system it sucked up, breathtaking. Within 15 minutes the Mac's speakers played the swooshing Windows 95 opening music, which I imagine to be the sound money makes when it magically flows from my wallet to Bill Gates's bank account, and the Windows 95 battle flag flapped in a window on my screen.

Speaking of sound, Soft Windows 95 has better support for Soundblaster and MIDI sounds than earlier versions of Soft Windows, which is important for those who intend to use Windows multimedia software. It works well with external PC storage devices that use the Macintosh's SCSI connection system.

Although I did not test it, Insignia Solutions asserts that Soft Windows 95 makes the Mac a good citizen on office computer networks based on Novell Netware and Microsoft LAN Manager protocols.

Eventually the Windows 95 desktop appeared; it is sort of like a Macintosh desktop, only upside down and backwards. But first, the Windows Solitaire test. Yes, it worked, and it was fairly snappy.

magazines have a strong presence on the Web. In fact, if you visit the PC Magazine site, you'd wonder why anyone with an Internet connection would bother to subscribe to the on- paper version. The home page at http: //www.zdnet.com/pcmag/ has almost every article subscribers get, plus some extras that don't come with the printed magazine. For instance, at the click of a mouse button you'll be able to get copies of the shareware programs mentioned in the magazine.

One of the best sources for computer and technology news is c/net online: The Computer Network at http: //www.cnet.com/. Beyond excellent articles, there are some unique features that make c/net stand out. It includes links for reviews of CD- ROM programs, another for software reviews and bulletin boards where you can leave comments. Another helpful feature is a glossary of definitions of computer terms.

Home pages maintained by almost all the major computer and software companies are an excellent source of information. Just keep the built-in bias in mind when you browse these pages. An excellent compilation of links to these companies is maintained at NetUsa1 at http: //web.netusa1.net/comp.html. You'll find another collection of links on the Computer Hardware Page at http: //www.modicon.com/comp.html.

Hobbyists will enjoy The Computer Post, which calls itself the newspaper for smart computer users. The home page at http: //www.cpost.mb.ca/ is both attractive and fun to read. You'll also be able to download both Macintosh and IBM-compatible shareware from the page. Since the newspaper is based in Winnipeg, Manitoba, there's a bit of a Canadian slant to the articles, but most of what you read here will apply wherever you live.

But if you're not a hobbyist and instead follow computer news because you're an investor or in a computer-related business, you'll want to keep up with the Investor's Business Daily electronic edition, Computers & Technology at http: //ibd.ensemble.com/comptech.html. Everything you read here, even new product information, is slanted toward the investor. However, even a hobbyist may appreciate the hard-nosed approach to computer news stripped of all romance.

HARD NEWS

Another site offering excellent hard news coverage of computing issues is Educom-EduPage. The home page at http: //www.educom.edu/web/edupage.html will let you choose between viewing the current issue or recent back issues.

If you want to see what the daily press is saying about computers, you'll enjoy the New York Times Syndicate page at http: //nytsyn.com/live/Latest_columns/. You'll find computer columns from newspapers across the nation, including The Atlanta Journal- Constitution.

You may not recognize all the columnists displayed here, but one is almost certain to be familiar. You'll be able to read the computing column written by the wealthiest columnist in America, Bill Gates, founder and chief executive of Microsoft.

TAX: Program easily understood for novice

(From 1B)

This year there's even more hand-holding for the novice tax preparers — but those of us who've been coughing up our savings this time of year for a long time can avoid a lot of that and just get on with it.

There are nearly 100 talking-head video clips with advice, warnings and suggestions at various points, and more emphasis on planning for next year. In addition to more than two dozen IRS publications, there's the text of the Money magazine tax handbook and "How to Pay Zero Taxes" by Jeff Schnepper.

As far as I can determine, Schnepper is still at large, and a brief perusal of his screed indicates the title is hyperbole and not an attempt to prove that you and I, unlike vast corporations and their leaders, can go untaxed.

'MAGIC' A LETDOWN

After doing my own taxes, I needed some kind of emotional boost, and it was — as usual — raining. So I opened up something called "Magic: The Gathering — Desktop Themes" for Windows 95 (about $50 list).

MicroProse has been laboring for over a year now to produce a computer version of this new fantasy game which, as I understand it, involves things like playing cards, although it's nothing like any traditional card game.

At any rate, producing the game apparently is proving difficult, and in the meantime the company packaged up a lot of art from the cards, along with some sound effects, fancy cursors and so forth and put it out as computer decoration.

It's something of a disappointment. There are about 50 pictures you can use for Windows 95 wallpaper; all but a handful are pretty weak. They might get by in a comic book, but unless you're very young you wouldn't want to see them often.

The thing is set up in a set of five "themes" which, if you allow, will take over your whole computer, applying their colors, sounds and cursors to everything. Since a pea-green writing surface in Word for Windows is not my idea of an improvement, that didn't get far, either. The sounds — at least the ones I heard — are pretty pedestrian.

I went ahead and set up the "blue" theme on my computer just to wash away the remembrance of tax time, but I dumped it after a few hours. That, probably, is the best thing about "Desktop Themes" — one click and everything's back the way you had it.

TECHTALK: Constant attention to server's smooth operation a must although they are tricky to set up and connect, the effort is well worth taking. You can determine who has access to each printer on the system in the same way you control files, record and program access. Regardless of the number of computers on your network you can control them all from the Windows application, as well as from the NetWare software, assigning passwords, length of time users may be in a specific application and much, much more. Novell's NetWare 4.1 offers greater flexibility than other networks and even excels over older versions of NetWare. However all these great advantages come at a price: constant vigilance must be paid to the network to keep it up and running smoothly. Also, power should be considered, but that's for another column.

OIL: Breakthrough is timely for industry

(From 1B)

Geco Diamond, 120 miles offshore from Galveston, Texas, directing them to adjust their course to focus on particularly promising formations.

"This compresses into seconds what often can take a year," Morneau said, scanning the data.

The breakthrough comes at a time when the oil industry is using ever-more sophisticated seismic analysis to venture into ever-deeper waters to find oilfields — like the giant Mars site that Shell Oil Co. is now developing in 2,940 feet of water in the Gulf of Mexico.

Charles DiBona, president of the American Petroleum Institute, in whose Washington headquarters the demonstration occurred, said the new satellite capabilities will help the industry's deep-water efforts. "This cuts the cycle time," DiBona said. "We're talking about producing a lot more oil."

Or maybe even saving lives. As part of the demonstration, Dr. Michael DeBakey, the well-known heart surgeon, sat at a computer terminal at the Institute of Biosciences and Technology in the Texas Medical Center in Houston.

As an audience of doctors and communications experts looked on, DeBakey studied a cardiogram simulating the heart attack of a crewman in the infirmary aboard the Geco Diamond. He also used video and audio links to observe the crewman's symptoms.

Thus informed, DeBakey advised the infirmary staff on the steps to take to stabilize the crewman and prepare him for helicopter transport back to shore.

Satellite data transmissions are nothing new, of course. But even today, when one can communicate from almost anywhere, it has been difficult to dispatch vast amounts of data at high speeds from offshore vessels or from remote hospitals or isolated weather stations.

The breakthrough is made possible by a NASA satellite called ACTS. It sends and receives data through powerful, highly concentrated spot beams that can focus on nearly any place in North America and its surrounding waters.

Thus with only two small racks of satellite and telecommunications equipment and a 16-inch antenna, the crew of the Geco Diamond was able to beam up two million bits of seismic data a second to the ACTS satellite 22,300 miles above the Equator.

With a second spot beam, temporarily focused on a receiver antenna at the Jet Propulsion Laboratory in Pasadena, Calif., the spacecraft bounced the data back to earth, where it was relayed to Minneapolis for processing by a Cray Research supercomputer.

Within about 15 minutes of the raw data's capture by the Geco Diamond, the supercomputer's analysis was forwarded to the Petroleum Institute and to the Houston research centers of major companies involved in oil exploration that included Amoco, Schlumberger and Shell.

The Sites: Buying a new computer

By Steven Brier
N.Y. Times News Service

So your favorite Uncle Sam has left you some money this year. Maybe, just maybe, it is time to upgrade your 1984 computer. After all, there have been a few changes in the last 12 years, and even your children use better computers than you use.

The first thing you need to do is figure out what to buy. A quick search of the World Wide Web pops up several places with information on buying a computer. One of them is Ben Davies, "The Computer Guy." Davies lays out what to look for in buying a computer. His specific references are to hardware for the Windows platform, but his basic points would help you buy a Macintosh too.

Once you have an idea of what you want to buy, you can do some comparison shopping through the Web, although actually ordering is nearly impossible, at least from the major manufacturers.

Apple, Compaq and IBM all have Web sites, but comparison shopping is hard, pricing information is sketchy at best and the system specifications read like repackaged product literature. IBM does provide a number you can call to get updated information faxed back to you, something that seems quite odd for a Web site.

Dell's site, on the other hand, is quite good and now contains the "Dell Configurator." If you have an idea of the computer specifications you want — 32 megabytes of random access memory, for instance, or a particularly fancy sound card — choose the appropriate items from the drop-down lists and click on the "add it up" button.

The price will appear, as well as phone numbers to place an order. This is great if you have a price limit and want to play the sort of "what if" game that tends to annoy the average salesperson.

Gateway 2000, whose spotted-cow theme is dotted all over its site, also has a configuration and price utility. Choose the basic computer you want and you will get a list of options to add to (or remove from) that configuration. Gateway's prices and features appear to be updated often, so check here and play the what-if game to get the current list.

The prices are quite good and the ability to fiddle, both here and at Dell, makes it easier to stay within a budget. As with Dell, you need to pick up the phone to place an order.

If you do not want a Dell or Gateway and still want to use the Web to shop, turn to the mail-order catalog companies. Most of them have Web sites, although you may need to call the company or look at a catalog to get the address.

Computer Discount Warehouse allows you to order items across the Net and allows for a minimum of comparison shopping. As with many companies doing Internet commerce, orders are confirmed with a return phone call and payment information is handled by phone.

Insight uses a secure server and assigns a customer number. The company, like many on-line shopping services, uses a shopping-basket metaphor, allowing you to add items to or remove them from the basket before submitting the order.

The really adventurous can build a machine by going through Maxsol, which takes you through each part in the computer, ranging from "Pentium PCI MB,Triton CS.,256k Cache+EIDEIO-ASUS" to "101-Key Tactile Enhanced Keyboard W/Calculator-Focus." If you understand all that, it might be for you.

technically astute — and they're serious about prosecuting computer crime. Despite dreams of glory, most hackers don't get media attention, just jail time.

Smart, likable and funny, Ewing and his best friend, Michael Kim, are a case in point. They figured if Tower caught them, they'd get some kind of warning, they'd stop and everything would be fine.

That's how it might have gone down in the old days. The hacker community grew up in the 1960s and '70s, when the Internet was first being built. In the old days, there really wasn't much of anything there.

"If you dial the clock back a long way, to the '70s, there were systems at MIT that had no access control at all. Anyone would walk up, log in and poke around," said Noel Chiappa, one of scientists involved to the Internet's development.

It was the golden age of the network, when what are called hackers today were known somewhat affectionately as "tourists."

Times, however, have changed.

"You've got the older hackers justifying what they've always done, giving these kids a false sense of what the situation is — and it's not the same situation," said Bill Benton, a Secret Service agent in the agency's financial crimes division in Washington, D.C.

Business has come online in a major way in the past three years. The stakes are higher, and the old days of getting nasty e-mail from a system administrator for breaking in are long gone.

"It's not fun and games. It's not cowboys and Indians. There's too much commerce happening online to allow these cases to go unprosecuted," said William Portanova, the assistant U.S. district attorney in Sacramento who prosecuted Ewing and Kim.

Ewing had had second thoughts about taking the Tower Records file with him on July 31, so he left it on his hard drive while he and Kim hit DefCon, the biggest of the West Coast hacker gatherings, for a weekend of bragging, hanging out and messing around.

"We never guessed they were onto us. Their security was so weak it really blew," the 20-year-old Kim says by phone from the sixth floor of the same jail that held his friend. He is facing an 18-month sentence.

"We actually went and took a tour of their corporate offices. We saw where the guy who runs their computer sits, in a little itty-bitty cubicle, and we thought 'This guy doesn't know anything.'

"But then," he adds, "we really weren't all that bright either."

Indeed not. According to Kelli O'Neill, an investigator with the Yolo County District Attorney's office, Tower officials knew they were under siege the first time the hackers entered the system.

The computer operators Kim had thought so clueless actually rigged it so that every time the duo logged in, beepers alerted Tower to the intrusion. They also set up a program to monitor the hackers' every keystroke.

Tower went to the police, who convinced them not to close the security holes but instead wait to see what the hackers would do next.

As the case progressed, the police called in the Secret Service, who convinced O'Neill to bump the case to the federal level. It was the first big hacker incident the eastern district of the U.S. Department of Justice had seen, and officials there were eager to make an example of it.

"We wanted to get the word out as far as we could. It seems incomprehensible that sitting in your bedroom pushing little bits of light around on your monitor is going to land you in federal prison — well, here's proof it can happen," Portanova said.

Seventy miles to the southwest, the duo had no idea there was a spider in their net.

They'd rented a small room in a shared apartment in Berkeley. Kim, who was from Los Angeles, was waiting to find out if his applications to the University of California at Berkeley computer science program had been accepted. Ewing, from Pocatello, Idaho, was waiting to establish his California residency so he was eligible for in-state tuition.

Both were proficient hackers, but neither viewed himself as a criminal: It was a game.

"We didn't know we'd get in," Ewing said of the Tower computer, which controls information for the chain's book, video and record stores worldwide. "We just got caught in a big 'can we do it?' game and it snowballed."

Not quite crime kingpins, the first thing the duo used their computing powers for was to open an account at the Tower video store just up the road — which they promptly erased after they rented some movies, to escape the fees.

But to set up the account, Kim used their real address. And when Ewing downloaded the file containing the credit cards, that bit of honesty came back to haunt them.

"Somebody remembered that a couple of weeks previous, one of the kids had set up an account for themselves. ... The (Tower employee) printed out the screen, thinking it might be important later," Portanova said.

It was. Because a month later, the hackers finally did something worth looking into: The programmers watched as someone in Berkeley issued a command to sort the credit card numbers by expiration date, then created a separate file containing only those cards with dates at least a year off.

This was no hacker trophy to be shown off: It was clear criminal intent.

"What they were doing up to that point was illegal, but they hadn't really risen to a level justifying federal involvement," Portanova said.

So while Ewing and Kim were hanging out in Las Vegas, agents were busting into their apartment.

Under federal law, each "access device," as credit cards are known in legal parlance, is worth $100. The few commands Ewing had typed had resulted in a theft worth $17,000 in the eyes of the law — a felony offense.

Even though the two never had a chance to do anything with the cards, they still were guilty, despite a hacker myth that says if you don't actually use the numbers you can't be prosecuted.

Ewing and Kim turned themselves in and admitted guilt as part of a plea bargain.

"The whole time, we were thinking, 'If we just plead guilty, we'll get six months' house arrest' — but it didn't work," said Kim, a slight young man with wire-framed glasses who looks closer to 17.

Both were charged with conspiracy to commit fraud and possession of credit card information, and have now been sent to separate federal facilities to serve their time. They are under court order to have no contact with each other and, after they are released, cannot hold jobs where they might have access to credit cards.

Reading through the court documents, it's clear Ewing and Kim aren't anybody's idea of angels. Both have fairly long histories of run-ins with authorities dating back to their early teens.

Ewing got busted for a false ID, and also ran into trouble when he tried a little chemistry experiment he'd read would make a vending machine give up its soda cans.

Kim, raised in an upscale Los Angeles suburb, looks too clean-cut to have charges for car theft on his record. But there they are.

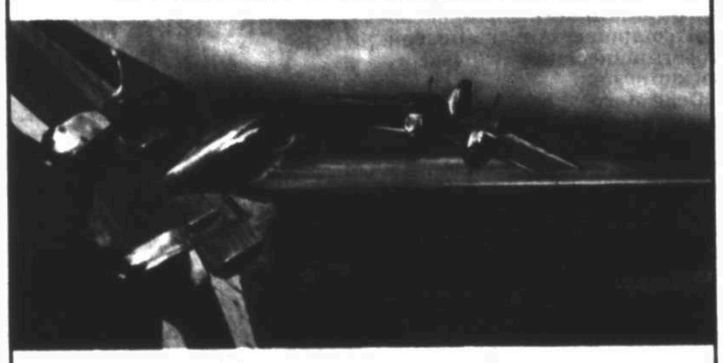

"Hopefully, we've gotten their attention," Portanova said. "We've put the word out. Hacking is bad. Hacking will get you in trouble. Hacking will send you up in jail."

Citizens-only rodeo scholarship policy won't change for this year

HOUSTON (AP) — Despite outrage from minority leaders who promised to "play hardball," the Houston Livestock Show and Rodeo said Friday it will not change a policy restricting its scholarship program to U.S. citizens.

A long-simmering debate over the citizens-only scholarship policy erupted this week when the rodeo's executive committee voted to rescind a Vietnamese-born student's $10,000 award.

The 18-year-old student, a Houston Independent School District senior who asked the rodeo not to release her name, was told of the official decision Wednesday.

Rodeo spokesman Leroy Shafer said the student's non-citizenship apparently slipped by a screening committee but was noticed a day after the February award. The student was immediately told about her likely disqualification, he said.

Shafer defended the executive committee's vote, saying the panel was simply enforcing a policy enacted when the group awarded its first scholarship in 1957. This year, the rodeo will give out $2,741,000 in direct college awards.

"We feel we are a Texas organization and association and an American organization and association," he said, adding that there are 10 times more scholarship applicants than awards. "We want to give preference to citizens who are U.S. citizens."

But the decision — and the policy — evoked strong criticism from Hispanic and Asian communities that comprise a sizeable portion of the area's roughly 4 million residents.

"It's the same thing as 'Irish need not apply,' " said Vanlan Tran, a member of the Vietnamese-American Community of Houston and Vicinity. "That's a thing of the past. We should do something about that."

Other critics, noting that all 15 executive committee members are white, were more direct.

"We can have our own damn rodeo," said Johnny Mata, local director of the League of United Latin American Citizens. "If it comes to hardball, we're ready. We're ready to go to the people. We're ready to go to the sponsors."

Mata and Glenda Joe, a spokeswoman for the Council of Asian American Organizations, threatened to unite Houston's minority communities against the annual rodeo and livestock show if the policy is not changed.

'It's the same thing as 'Irish need not apply...' That's a thing of the past. We should do something about that.'

— Vanlan Tranr, Vietnamese-American Community of Houston

Rodeo officials made it clear Friday that will not happen.

"I can absolutely tell you that it is the firm resolve of the exective committee .... that it will never change its citizenship requirement," Shafer said.

The citizens-only policy has been criticized for several years as excluding thousands of Texas residents who have no intention of leaving the country and plan to become citizens.

Half of the 202,000 students in Houston public schools are Hispanic and 2.7 percent are of Asian descent. School officials are barred by law from keeping records on citizenship.

Critics also argue that since applicants for citizenship must be 18 years old, most foreign-born scholarship candidates still in high school are automatically disqualified.

Shafer said he didn't know how many rodeo scholarships go to minorities, but it was probably "in the 50-50 range."

He said 100 Hispanic students get $3,000 scholarships each year through the rodeo's Go Tejano program, and $10,000 awards go to students in all of the 65 public high schools in Houston.

"It's not about racism," Shafer said.

Ms. Joe said enforcement of the policy might not be motivated by race, but it certainly appears directed toward immigrants.

"We can't figure out that it can be anything else," she said. "All I can think is that they've caved in to the national rhetoric on immigrant bashing."

Community groups were considering an effort to find an alterative scholarship for the Vietnamese student if they could learn her identity. The student and her family apparently are embarrassed about the flap and wary of media attention, Ms. Joe said.

Although they will not consider changing the policy, Shafer said the executive committee has tinkered with the idea of offering scholarships to non-citizens on the condition that they promise to apply for citizenship.

But for this year, at least, non-citizens are out.

Air traffic woes continue at DF-W

DALLAS (AP) — Air traffic controllers were using a backup computer and flights were delayed Friday afternoon as a storm and equipment glitches again disrupted service at Dallas-Fort Worth International Airport.

It was the 14th time in the past two years that the Fort Worth air traffic control center has had an equipment failure.

FAA spokesman Steve Gallegos said the problem apparently was caused about 3:30 p.m. by a software glitch in the main flight control computer. Air traffic controllers immediately switched to a backup system.

Doug Murphy, FAA regional air traffic division manager, said "there was a little bit of chaos but in no way was safety compromised."

The situation was intensified as a severe storm moved through the Dallas-Fort Worth area about 5 p.m.

Several arriving planes were ordered out of the Dallas-Fort Worth area as the storm moved through. Dozens of other planes remained on the ground. Departing flights were delayed about two hours.

Last month, the computer handling air traffic departures went down for about four hours because of glitch in the computer software.

Federal officials said in January that air travelers should brace for late planes and canceled flights as workers began replacing aging computers that control the busy skies over several large cities.

Much of the equipment directing air travel across the country is so old that spare parts no longer are available and the only technicians who can maintain them are retiring.

The Federal Aviation Administration has earmarked millions of dollars to replace radar and communications equipment at air traffic control centers in New York and at other cities including, Washington, Chicago, Cleveland and Dallas-Fort Worth.

The FAA says the new computers will not be up and running for 18 months or more.

Government to put $625 million toward summer jobs for disadvantaged youth

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Clinton administration is making available $625 million to provide summer jobs for 539,500 disadvantaged young people.

Labor Secretary Robert Reich said Friday the funds will be released immediately to allow cities and suburban and rural communities to find the necessary schools, teachers, supervisors, work sites and jobs and to recruit applicants.

But he acknowledged that cities and states still will have to "work double time" to get their programs in place in time.

Texas will get $49.951 million to fund 43,151 jobs.

The government usually is able to advise cities and states well in advance of summer how much money is available. However, funding was up in the air during recent budget negotiations between the administration and Congress.

Congressional Republicans now have agreed to permit the administration to fund the program at 75 percent of last year's level, the Labor Department said. The money still must be appropriated.

The program provides public-sector jobs for low-income youths between the ages of 14 and 21, who live in communities with high unemployment. Participants can earn $1,100 to $1,400 during the summer.

Jobs include clerical positions, maintenance work, park and recreation activities, hospital employment, aiding the elderly and tutoring and assisting at day-care centers.

What do your children have in common with Beatrix Potter?

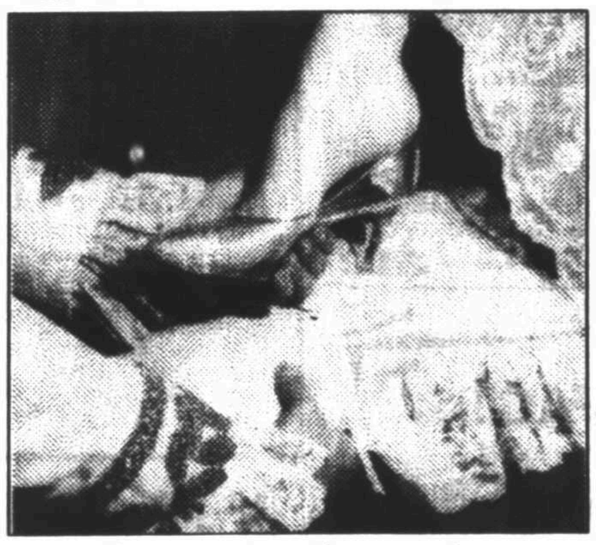

A lot - if your children have a free and independent spirit. A lot - if you want your children to explore many religious paths to truth, not just one. A lot - if you're the kind of parent who wants your children to grow up knowing a richly diverse group of people.

Children learn to respect themselves and the uniqueness that is each person - and to celebrate all humanity because of it. Today, the faith of Ralph Waldo Emerson, Susan B. Anthony, Louisa May Alcott, Dr. Albert Schweitzer, Dr. Linus Pauling and people down the street from you is practiced by congregations across America. It's a faith with a tradition of hope and purpose. Perhaps this is the kind of religious education you want for your children.

Think about it. If you would like to visit a Unitarian Universalist congregation this week, welcome!

Catholic diocese in Indiana issues new rules to ban secular music from wedding ceremony

FORT WAYNE, Ind. (AP) — The Catholic Diocese of Fort Wayne-South Bend issued new guidelines recently instructing priests and parish music directors to keep secular music out of wedding ceremonies.

"Marriage really is a sacrament of the church," said Sister Agnes Marie Regan from the diocesan office. "It is not something people can change around."

Pop music, Broadway tunes and other sentimental secular songs should be planned for the rehearsal dinner and wedding reception — not the service, Regan said.

Couples who already have worked with a church to plan a wedding ceremony probably will not have to change their music, Regan said, but that decision rests with their priest and church music director.

Some couples say the guidelines probably won't cause drastic change.

"I don't think it will make any difference to us," said Dan Thompson, who will be married this June at St. Vincent Catholic Church. "I think we are going to use classical anyway."

"To me, the church you get married in is more important than the music," said Kelly Harings of Indianapolis, who just planned the music for her July wedding at the Cathedral of the Immaculate Conception.

Judy Throm, music director for the diocese and at the Cathedral of the Immaculate Conception, said she and other musicians sometimes face pressure from bridal couples or families to play certain secular songs.

Throm said she occasionally appeased couples by playing a song request during the time family and friends enter the church. Now she won't have to retreat, and she will have guidelines approved by Bishop John M. D'Arcy to back her up.

Angels pull out 3-2 win with 10th-inning rally

By Terry Williamson
Sports Editor

Diablos 2
Angels 3

Midland pitcher Geoff Edsell was a Cadillac. Shortstop Keith Luuloa got smart. And reserve infielder, turned outfielder, Freddie Diaz turned into a 10th-inning hero.

That was the major part of the formula for the Angels' 3-2, 10-inning Texas League victory over the El Paso Diablos at Christensen Stadium Friday night.

Midland, off to a 7-2 start to the TL season, avoided losing in the ninth inning when Luuloa doubled in a run with two outs to tie the game at 2-2. Diaz, who had been inserted into the lineup as a pinch runner for Greg Shockey, who had to leave the game after a pinch hit double to lead off the ninth, then delivered a two-out hit in the bottom of the 10th to produce the game winner.

Luuloa had previously been robbed twice of base hits by El Paso second baseman Ronnie Belliard. Luuloa then changed directions with a double down the third base line to plate Diaz to tie the game in the ninth in a last gasp effort to keep the Angels out of the loss column.

"You have to give Belliard credit," said Luuloa. "He made a couple of great plays on me. I was thinking in the ninth that I had to hit the ball somewhere else. At least, it counts. I was watching Bo's (Ortiz) at-bat against Sean Maloney and he struck him out with split fingers. I thought I would look for a split finger pitch up and I got it. I was just glad it didn't go to second base again."

Diaz, an infielder by trade, had to play one inning in right field, a position he had never played. But he took the chance to get to the plate and made a winner of the Angels and Midland reliever Mike Freehill (1-0) with a single to the gap in right center to score Tony Moeder, who had singled with one out in the 10th.

"I had never played right field," Diaz admitted. "I didn't know what I was doing out there. I just thank God that no one hit a ball out there.

"It was a situation where they had to use me since Shockey went out. Once you get the call, you've got to perform. It just happened that it was a good situation for me and I got something done. I was struggling prior to that, so I just wanted to get wood on the ball."

Edsell, Midland's starting pitcher, didn't figure in the decision, but it would have been a crime if he had lost the game. Edsell pitched eighth innings, giving up a meager three hits while striking out a career high 11 batters. He faced just four batters over the minimum for eight innings. Still, he was trailing 2-1 when he

THE 1996 MASTERS

Faldo goes Shark hunting

■ Nick Faldo makes a run at the first-round leader, but Greg Norman proves up to the challenge and leads The Masters at the halfway point.

By Ron Sirak
Associated Press

AUGUSTA, Ga. — Birdie by birdie, Nick Faldo chipped away at Greg Norman's lead. Time and again Norman responded like maybe this will be the Masters he finally wins.

Faldo shot a relentless 67 on the wind-whipped, wickedly fast Augusta National Golf Club in Friday's second round. But Norman responded with a 69 for a 36-hole total of 12-under-par 132 and a four-stroke lead over Faldo going into the third round.

That set up a Saturday showdown between the two old rivals who last faced off in a major championship in the third round of the British Open at St. Andrews in 1990, a memorable matchup in which Faldo shot a 67 to Norman's 76 and went on to win.

"I'm very relaxed, very comfortable within myself," Norman said. "I'm looking forward to tomorrow."

Norman, the game's greatest money-winner known more for the major championships he hasn't won than for the two British Opens he has, was not as dominating as he was with his first-round

MHS stopped by Cougars in 4-5A tennis

By Stewart Doreen
Sports Writer

ODESSA — The Midland High tennis team had its moments Friday at the District 4-5A tennis championships held at Odessa College Tennis Center, but in the end, its best chances to get to the regional round were snatched by the state champion Abilene Cooper tennis team.

"They are the three-time defending state champions," said MHS tennis coach Tom Heiting. "We were beat by all good teams and strong players. I feel disappointed for Nathan (Lawrence). He almost had that one big win."

■ 4-5A Tennis

Lawrence, a junior, reached the semifinals of the boys singles with two wins in the morning session. That put the boys' fourth seed up against the tournament's second seed, Cooper's Mark Parkland.

The afternoon showdown quickly went in Lawrence's favor as he broke Parkland and went up 5-2 and 40-0 in the set's eighth game. That's when Parkland caught fire, took advantage of a questionable call at 40-30 in the that eighth game, and went toe to toe with Lawrence to capture the first set. It was quite a momentum switch.

"I got up so quickly and then my momentum stopped," said Lawrence. "I thought I had the first set. It kept going down from there."

Parkland kept firing winners well into the second set, taking a 4-0 lead at one point. By the time Lawrence settled down and started to play his opponent and not react to him, the match was in hand and Parkland won, 7-6, 6-3.

"He went on a streak and just kept going," said Lawrence, who will face freshman Mitch Aston of AHS today at 9 a.m. for third place. "I beat Cooper's No. 2 player (Chuck Haddox) in the fall and I would have like to beat him (Parkland) now."

Cooper also took out MHS' top boys and girls doubles teams. In the quarterfinals

Lady Bulldogs take 4-5A softball crown

■ Midland High's 15-8 win over San Angelo Central gives the Lady Bulldogs the outright District 4-5A championship.

Staff Report

SAN ANGELO — It wasn't pretty or one for the books, but Midland High's 15-8 victory over San Angelo Central Friday gave the Lady Bulldogs sole possession of their first District 4-5A softball title.

"I think it was a big deal for the kids," said MHS coach Ricci Woodard. "They worked hard for it and they earned it. It is something we talked about from day one.

"We said we just don't want to make the playoffs but we want to be champions."

MHS, 23-8 for the season, finished the season at 10-2 in 4-5A to give them a one-game advantage over Midland Lee and Abilene Cooper (9-3). It was a thrill for Woodard, who is her first season as the coach of Midland High.

"There is no doubt that this is a tough district when it comes down to the last game," said Woodard. "I came to a program that was started on the right foot. Our next goal is to win the state tournament."

Midland High's championship will make sure the title will stay in the Tall City. Last season, Midland Lee won the first-ever district title.

Midland track is back for another 4-5A shot

By Amy Wolfenbarger

4-5A Meet

Last year was not the best in Midland track and field history. Don't expect the same results this year as both Midland High and Midland Lee converge on Odessa's Ratliff Stadium today for the District 4-5A Track and Field Championships.

Only eight individuals from both boys and girls teams at Midland High and Midland Lee finished in the top two at the District 4-5A meet last year, qualifying them for the Region I Championships.

But this year there could be up to twice that number if things go well for the Bulldogs and Rebels.

The meet begins at 10 a.m. with the 3,200-meter finals and various field events. The running preliminaries start at 1:30 p.m. while the finals begin at 6:30 p.m. The final event, the 1,600 relay, is scheduled to start at 8:40 p.m.

Lee boys coach Kelvin Ratliff summed things up pretty succintly for all the coaches going into the meet:

"The kids have worked hard all year long and they feel like they can do good," Ratliff said. "But the competition is going to be stiff.

"I'll tell you what, about 90 percent of my kids have never run at a district meet before," Smith said. "But they're going to do fine."

They should be with sophomore sensation Toya Clater to lead them. Clater is ranked first in the district in the long jump and anchors both the 400 and 800 relays that should challenge for the silver medal behind favorite MHS.

LaToya Strambler and Marisa Beck should also have good chances to qualify to regionals. Strambler has the second-best time in the 400 (1:00.1) while Beck has the best time in the 1,600 (5:39.6) and the third-best in the 3,200.

Junior Kendra Albus has the second-best time in the 800 (2:38.1) and is also entered in the 1,600.

Lee's 1,600 relay should also be strong as Smith moved Amanda Douglas into the event for the first time this year, hoping the sprinter will give the Lady Rebels some catch-up speed.

Senior Fernando Juarez, hampered all season with a stress fracture in his lower leg, should be Midland High's best chance at regionals, coach Monty Stumbaugh said.

"This will really be his first meet because our meet got rained out and that was going to be his first race this year," Stumbaugh said. "I don't know what kind of shape he's going to be in but you never know what's going to happen."

Juarez competes in the jumps and in the hurdles and could see action on the mile relay. Hurdler Craig Noland and discus thrower Michael Brandt could also have a shot in their events.

But unlike the rest of the local teams, Stumbaugh's squad has yet to run at Ratliff this season.

"Saturday we'll go down there early, walk around the track to see what it's like and show them their relay marks," Stumbaugh said. "It's close to home so that's good. But a track's a track."

The top two qualifiers in each event, including relays, will advance to compete in the Region I Track and Field Championships April 26-27 at Texas Tech.

SEATTLE (AP) — Lawyers for Seattle Seahawks owner Ken Behring and King County have agreed to keep in effect a court order that bars moving the franchise pending trial on Behring's attempt to relocate to the Los Angeles area.

The agreement maintains the conditions imposed Feb. 2, when Behring first announced his plan to take the club south. One condition was added — any party that buys the team must also accept the Kingdome lease, which runs through 2005.

Behring's lawyers said they agreed to extend the King County Superior Court order rather than fight it to save time while preparing for trial May 28.

Meanwhile, he is barred from selling to an out-of-state buyer or from committing the Seahawks to play home games anywhere other than the Kingdome.

Behring has claimed the 20-year-old concrete stadium is no longer a first-class football facility as required by the lease and also says it could collapse in a major earthquake.

Time getting short in 4-5A baseball race

By Sean Wallace
Sports Writer

With only four games left in the season, time has become the eighth member of the District 4-5A baseball race.

Both Midland Lee and Midland High go into today's games against the Odessa schools with some ground to make up.

"It's been a tough week for us," said MHS coach Lew Kennedy, who watched as his Bulldogs dropped district games to Lee and Abilene Cooper earlier this week. "We didn't show up against Lee but we played a little better against Cooper. Everything is magnified in close games and it doesn't take that much to win or lose one."

The Bulldogs (14-9 overall, 3-5 in 4-5A) take on Permian (16-8, 3-4) today in a 10 a.m. game at Christensen Stadium which could be a do-or-die game for them.

Midland High has lost its last two games but is heading into a three-game stretch against Permian, Odessa High and Abilene High which saw them put together a three-game winning streak earlier in the district season, and then end the season at San Angelo Central.

Lee's road to the playoffs is a little less daunting. The Rebels (13-11-1, 5-3) are tied for third with Abilene High (14-8, 5-3) and go into today's game at Odessa High (7-14, 0-8) with a chance to solidify its position.

The way things are going, you don't know what's going to happen," Kennedy said. "We've got to take care of our own business and we feel like we can win them all."

Permian started the 4-5A race by losing four its first five, but the Panthers have rebounded — They have winning two of their last three — and scored an average of 12 runs in their wins.

"We've always thought Permian had the talent," Kennedy said. "They got their swings in against Odessa (a 14-8 win) and they're going to be hard to beat."

Senior Keith Lant tossed a no-hitter in the team's first district meeting but Kennedy said today's starter will be a game-time decisison. The Bulldogs' top two pitchers, Lant and Junior Russell Dunlavy, are nursing nagging injuries which might force Kennedy to use a patch-work staff.

"Keith hurt his back in the Lubbock tournament and it still bothers him a little and Russell's arm is a little sore when he fell on it," Kennedy said. "I don't know the direction we're going to go, but we've got a number of guys who are capable of pitching and will be up to the task."

Pitching has been a big plus for the Rebels this season, and a win today over last-place Odessa would put Lee is a position to make the playoffs for sixth straight year.

"They played us tough up here and we're not going to take them lightly," Lee coach Jesse Benavidez said. "They're going to beat somebody and I hope its not us."

The hard-luck Bronchos led 2-0 in their first meeting before the Rebels came back for an 8-2 win. Odessa came close to upsetting second-place Central Thursday but the Bobcats scored twice in the bottom of the seventh on four walks and one Odessa error to escape with a 4-3 win.

The Rebels have won two straight and four of six as senior Jesse Ramos (3-3, 3.91 ERA) takes the hill for Lee.

out some tension. The Lady Bobcats, 8-18 and 1-11, tied the game at 8-8 in the bottom of the fifth inning. The Lady Bulldogs seemed to wake up afterwards, scoring seven runs and allowing only two hits.

"It wasn't a great game, we let them tie it up in the fifth inning," said Woodard. "We held them to two hits in the last two innings to put it away."

Katrina Kelley, 3-0 for the season, picked up the win for MHS. Michelle Quintela, who started the game inside the pitching circle, hammered a double and triple. Jessica Moss also had a triple while Shelton and Jeni Neatherlin contributed to MHS' 21 hits with doubles.

District 4-5A Notes: Midland High will meet the winner of District 1's second seed (El Paso Andress or Irvin) and District 2's third seed (El Paso Bel Air or Ysleta). The first-ever MHS game will take place the weekend of April 27.

Abilene Cooper defeated Odessa Permian 15-4 Friday at the UTPB Softball Complex. Cooper ties Midland Lee for second place in the district. The teams will have a playoff for the second and third seeds in the upcoming playoff. The time and date has not been determined.

TENNIS: Lawrence to play for third of the boys doubles, MHS' Blade Van Stavern and Terrell McDonald fell to Cooper's Chris Caceres and David Galloway, 6-3 and 7-5. In that game, MHS, which defeated the fourth-seeded Lee team of Conner Austin and Cassio Garcez in the previous round, just couldn't get those few big points that might have changed the outcome of the match.

The same could be said of the girls doubles team of Carrie Geltemeyer and Marci Holland. The pair fell to Cooper's Lacy Johnson and Andi Wildner 6-0, 5-7, 6-3. Geltemeyer and Holland fought to force the third set, but had to play come-from-behind once they got there. One big reason for the Lady Bulldogs' fall was unforced errors. MHS made twice as many as the Cooper team.

In all three matches, winning the big point was paramount. Big points translate to wins and that seems to be the last hump for MHS to overcome before it takes its place with the top schools in the district.

"Everybody was in the match scorewise and eventually, we had our chances to take control," said Heiting. "Those one or two big points were the difference. I feel we just need one big win."

For Midland Lee, getting experience for the future might have been what to look at today. The Rebels had only two entries make it past the first round. Both of those came in the boys singles where Glen Abrams lost to the tournament's No. 1 seed Charlie Roberson and Lee's West Hunt met up with Parkland.

The latter match on paper should not have been close, but the Lee sophomore gave Parkland all he could handle and extended him for three sets. Especially in the second set, Hunt's confidence was growing while Parkland's frustration was very visible.

"Knowing I could play with this guy made my confidence go up," said Hunt. My volleying helped me a lot even though I didn't hit my ground strokes.

"He hit the ball weird and knocked shots out of play that most would say don't do that unless you are on Cooper."

Hunt fell 6-3, 3-6, 6-3 but the experience of playing in this setting can do nothing but help him in future district competitions.

"It will give me confidence, " said Hunt. "It will make me better."

Roberson will mee Parkland in today's 9 a.m. finals. Roberson, who lost to Cooper's Ryan Hughes last year, does want some revenge.

"I have to play my game and if he wants to win it, he will have to go win it," said Roberson. "It was kind of a bummer after losing it last year. I broke the streak of Central players (that won the title)."

In the girls final, Permian's Melissa Hodges will play Meiling Parks. In the boys doubles, Abilene High's Dusty Oglesby and Adam Knight will face Cooper's Hughes and Haddox. In the girls all-Cooper doubles final, Lacy Johnson and Andi Wildner will go up against Kathryn Scott and Heather Gibson.

"You hate to lose anytime, but the wins will come if we keep getting the pitching and hitting like we have been doing."

63, but he didn't have to be.

"I knew it would be a course you would play more conservatively," Norman said about the whipping wind that confused club selection and further dried the already slick greens.

"I think I played a little better today than I did yesterday," he said. "I kept my game going the way I had done the day before."

Faldo applied enough pressure to crack anyone — making four birdies on the back nine — but Norman was every bit the match, answering Faldo's 32 on the back with a 33.

"I haven't been in a major in a while," said Faldo, who won the last of his five major championships in 1992. "I'm in there again, which is good."

The last time Faldo started with two rounds in the 60s at Augusta was in 1990 and 1989, both years he won.

Norman, who winced, grimaced and muttered to himself continually throughout the round, dearly covets the two green jackets of the Masters champion that Faldo owns. Seven times Norman has finished in the top six in the Masters and twice he has been second.

But he has never won, just has he has never managed to add either of the other two major championships played on American soil — the U.S. Open and the PGA Championship — to the two British Opens he has won.

In all, Norman has been runnerup eight times in major championships.

"The guys on the leader board now are guys playing good golf, irrespective of who they are or what they've done in the past," Norman said. "But you don't worry about that. You've got to get the job done yourself."

Asked how he will handle the matchup, Faldo said, "Head down, blinkers on. Everything."

Phil Mickelson and David Frost were six strokes behind at 138. Lee Janzen and Bob Tway were at 139 with Scott McCarron, Vijay Singh and Scott Hoch at 140. Not making it to the weekend rounds was defending champion Ben Crenshaw, whose 151 missed the cut along with the 150 by amateur Tiger Woods.

Mickelson, who started the day two strokes behind Norman, was wild off the tee all day and managed a 73 only because of his magnificent short game. Frost got into contention with a 68.

"He's going to be tough to catch," Janzen said about Norman. "No one's invincible. I know he wants to win this badly. The good thing is that everyone else wants to win it badly, too."

Faldo, playing three groups in front of Norman, bogeyed No. 1 but got that back with a birdie on the next hole. He started his back nine rush with a very delicate 20-foot birdie putt on No. 10.

"That putt was mega-quick," Faldo said.

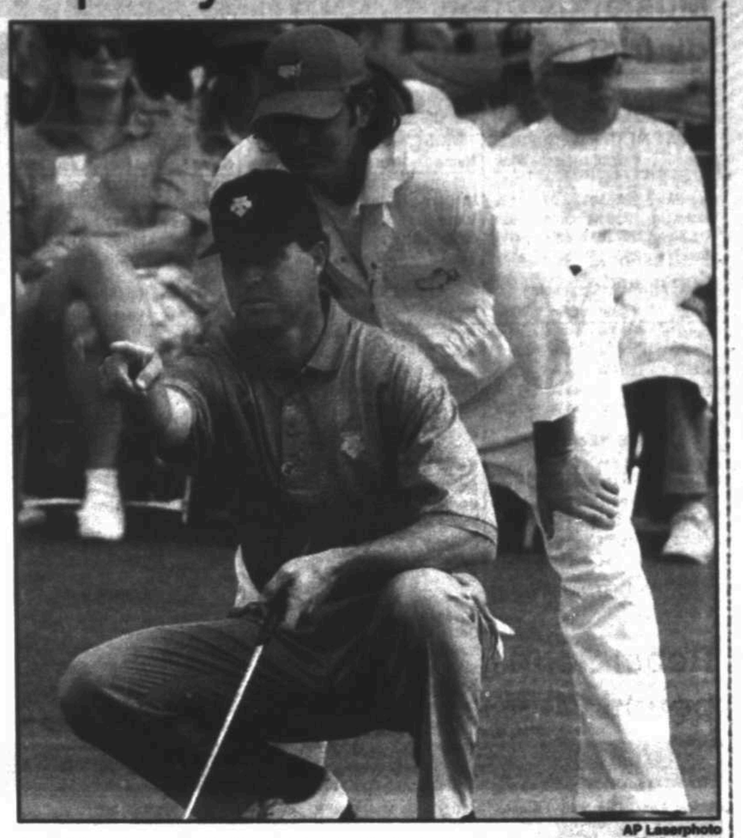

Like Norman, Faldo birdied both of the par-5s on the back nine, then closed the round with a 12-footer for birdie on No. 18.

Norman responded to every challenge. He showed his human side with bogeys at Nos. 3 and 4 and again when he missed a 3-foot birdie putt at No. 11, leaving a 6-footer coming back, which he made.

His big break came on No. 12 when his 7-iron hit short of the green and rolled back to within a foot of the water, one of the few balls all day that landed there and didn't get wet.

"That was in the lap of the gods there," Norman said about why the ball didn't roll into Rae's Creek. "If it went in the water, I would have panicked."

He took advantage of the break by saving par. He made a great birdie on No. 15 when he curled in a putt that broke about 6 feet on its way to the hole and closed his round with a birdie on No. 18, passing his first gut-check.

Defending champ Crenshaw misses cut with 7-over golf

By Paul Newberry
Associated Press

AUGUSTA, Ga. — As his ball caught a gust of wind and sailed into the creek at No. 12, Ben Crenshaw tossed his 7-iron in an uncharacteristic burst of frustration.

It was that kind of Masters for the defending champion.

Crenshaw was perhaps the biggest name to miss the cut at Augusta National on Friday, shooting a 74 in the second round to finish with a 7-over-par 151 during the two days.

"It's frustrating, really frustrating," said Crenshaw, a two-time Masters winner who was equally as gracious in defeat as he was last year during his emotional victory. "To not play my best golf after winning last year hurts a little bit, but I've been more fortunate here than a lot of people."

Among the others who figured to be going home, even while there were still golfers on the course, were amateur phenom Tiger Woods and PGA champion Steve Elkington. Woods, who made the cut last year in his first Masters, finished two rounds with a 6-over 150; Elkington was at 11-over 155.

Crenshaw, who shot a 77 on Thursday, had hopes of making the cut when he made the turn at 2-under for the round. But the par-3 No. 12, the toughest hole on Friday, doomed his chances.

His tee shot got caught in the swirling winds that bedeviled the field all day, sailed to the left, caught the edge of the bank and rolled back into the water.

Crenshaw took a drop (and a penalty shot) about 60 yards from the hole and pulled out his wedge to reach the green. But the shot landed short and rolled back into the water for another one-shot penalty, while Crenshaw put his hands on his head in disgust.

Woods, the two-time U.S. Amateur champion who already has been anointed the next great American golfer, got a dose of reality in his second Masters.

"I'm disappointed about missing the cut, but I thought I played a lot better than I did last year," he said. "The conditions are 10 times tougher than they were last year."

Woods was heading back to Stanford, where he has an economics paper due on Wednesday. Crenshaw, meanwhile, will stay on at Augusta through the rest of the weekend.

"Even though I can't play, I'm sure I'll enjoy it," he said. "I get to put the green jacket on the new champion. That's a nice thing to stick around for."

NEW YORK STOCK EXCHANGE

STOCKQUOTE HOTLINE

Cityline 560-2400

WHAT IS STOCKQUOTE HOTLINE?

Stockquote Hotline gives you the latest stock prices direct from the wires of the Associated Press. Over 9,000 stocks are listed from NYSE, AmEx, and OTC sources; all available 24 hours a day. You can receive up to 10 quotes with one easy phone call.

HOW TO USE STOCKQUOTE HOTLINE:

1) Call the Stockquote Hotline at 560-2400; enter the category number which is 9988.

2) You will be asked to enter your stock ticker symbol. These are based on industry-standard symbols, which can be found in a Standard & Poor's Ticker guide, or by calling your local stock broker.

3) Once you've entered the numerical code for the ticker symbol, press the Star Key (*) and you will hear the current price and net change from the last Associated Press update; which is a few minutes behind market activity.

4) After the stock is quoted, you will be asked to enter another ticker symbol. You now have 2 options:
* You may request a quote for another stock by repeating steps 2 & 3.
* You may request additional information on the stock just quoted by once more pressing the Star Key (*).
Now the volume, high and low will be given and then you will be asked to enter another ticker code.
* You may enter up to 10 ticker symbols per call.

5) To exit Stockquote Hotline, simply hang up the phone.

YOUR HOROSCOPE

SATURDAY, APRIL 13, 1996

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: The success of a major project will make you more confident and less self-contained. A fulfilling romance brings you out of your shell. Although several employment offers are extended to you next fall, you may decide to stay put a little longer. If so, be more assertive about securing the financial rewards you deserve. Too much modesty is the only real problem you face professionally. Admiring loved ones will applaud your taking a more forceful approach.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DAY: Declaration of Independence author Thomas Jefferson, singer Peabo Bryson, singer Al Green, atheist lobbyist Madalyn Murray O'Hair.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): An influential person's behavior may be difficult to figure out. Why try? Hidden motives will soon be revealed, giving you the upper hand. Keep romance on the back burner.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Compromise is the key to success in your personal and business dealings. A contract you made today could help you branch out professionally or widen your circle of friends.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Postpone making financial investments until more information is available. Unforeseen expenses could develop in connection with your loved ones. If you do any business entertaining at home, keep it informal and relaxed.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): People in high places are helpful today. Do not be overly sensitive to criticism. Take well-intentioned advice in the same spirit in which it is given.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): An early start will help you accomplish great things. Do your shopping this morning. The social tempo picks up later today. Devote any spare time to hobbies that could help you earn extra income.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): See what you can do for your friends, especially if you enjoy advantages they lack. Top off a busy day with a relaxing evening with your friends. Romance will flourish if you take the initiative.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Even if your views differ from your neighbor's, do not let them become the source of recriminations. Learn from past mistakes, but do not brood over them.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Loved ones may expect more than you want to deliver. Plan a fun outing for children. Avoid driving if you drink. Follow your intuition where romance is concerned.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Use this morning to take care of household and personal chores. Get your wardrobe ready for the upcoming week. Unexpected visitors may interfere with certain family plans.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Correct a bad habit which has impeded your progress. It is foolish to worry in silence. Talking with your mate or partner could produce an immediate solution.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): A financial windfall gives you reason to celebrate. Play your cards close to your chest where a new business deal is concerned. You will enjoy seeing an old flame again.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): A social contact could turn out to be a source of funding. Romance takes on a new dimension. Loved ones urge you to spend more time mixing and mingling.

Turner performs at secret birthday party for sultan of Brunei's niece

SINGAPORE — Tina Turner lived up to the name of her album "Private Dancer," giving a secret performance for the family of the sultan of Brunei.

The 57-year-old star sang for an audience of 300 in Brunei this week at a party to celebrate the 19th birthday of the niece of Sultan Hassanal Bolkiah, the world's richest man. Guests included celebrities flown in from around the world.

Tina Turner gives secret performance for sultan's family.

Turner's manager Roger Davies refused to say anything more about the event. The oil-rich sultan lets little news of royal activities emerge from his 1,778-room palace.

"We have actually signed a form saying we haven't seen a thing," Turner's sound engineer Rory Madden said. "We haven't seen anything except decadence beyond belief. There were gold doors, gold everything and 10,000 roses flown in from London for the party."

Turner came to Singapore for a concert Saturday that launches a 1 1/2-year world tour to promote her latest album, "Wildest Dreams."

PHILADELPHIA — Debbie Allen, who played a high school dance teacher on TV's "Fame," is turning her attention to real-life aspiring artists.

The dancer and actress joined singer James Ingram and a group of entertainment and investment executives Friday in launching the American Foundation for the Arts, aimed at making up for cutbacks in government funding.

The Philadelphia-based organization intends to qualify for charity status and raise an initial $10 million for college scholarships.

"I'm thrilled that this has gone from being a wonderful idea to a reality," said Allen, star of NBC's "In the House" and chairwoman of the new foundation.

TRAVERSE CITY, Mich. — What will it take to keep David Letterman's "home office" in Michigan?

A letter from Gov. John Engler? Nah. Cherry hamburgers? Just maybe.

Earlier this week, Letterman announced a competition to determine whether his fictional "home office" would remain in Grand Rapids or move to Wahoo, Neb. Whichever city sent him the most payola by week's end would win.

Wahoo already had sent him some nifty frozen enchiladas. But all he had from Michigan was a letter from Engler's office. Seeking a more fruitful appeal, Engler staffers got butcher Ray Pleva to send Letterman several pounds of Plevalean, his mixture of cherries and ground beef, and a pound of cherry-pepperoni snacks.

David Letterman to decide whether to move his "home office".

Traverse City calls itself the cherry capital of the world.

Lettermen, who turned 49 on Friday, also was sent a polka exercise tape and a birthday cake, and Engler promised to proclaim 1996 "The Year of Dave" if Grand Rapids wins.

NASSAU, Bahamas — O.J. Simpson took a break from his legal troubles to play in a celebrity charity golf tournament and found himself smothered in kisses.

"I've never had so much sugar in all my life," said Simpson, laughing. "I've got lipstick all over me." He was quoted Thursday in The Tribune, a Nassau daily, after locals and tourists thronged him when he arrived Wednesday.

The former football star expressed confidence he would win the wrongful-death lawsuit filed by the families of Nicole Brown Simpson and Ronald Goldman.

"My mother told me that the truth will set you free — it has thus far, and I think it will see me through all the rest of this," Simpson said later from a golf course on Paradise Island.

Former "Cosby" kid Malcolm Jamal Warner and Buffalo Bills defensive end Bruce Smith are also playing in the tournament that began Thursday.

NASHVILLE, Tenn. — Bill Monroe, the father of bluegrass music, is in the hospital undergoing tests for circulatory problems.

Monroe, 84, has been in Baptist Hospital for about three weeks. He is not receiving visitors, said Tony Conway, his manager.

Monroe last performed at the Grand Ole Opry on March 22.
