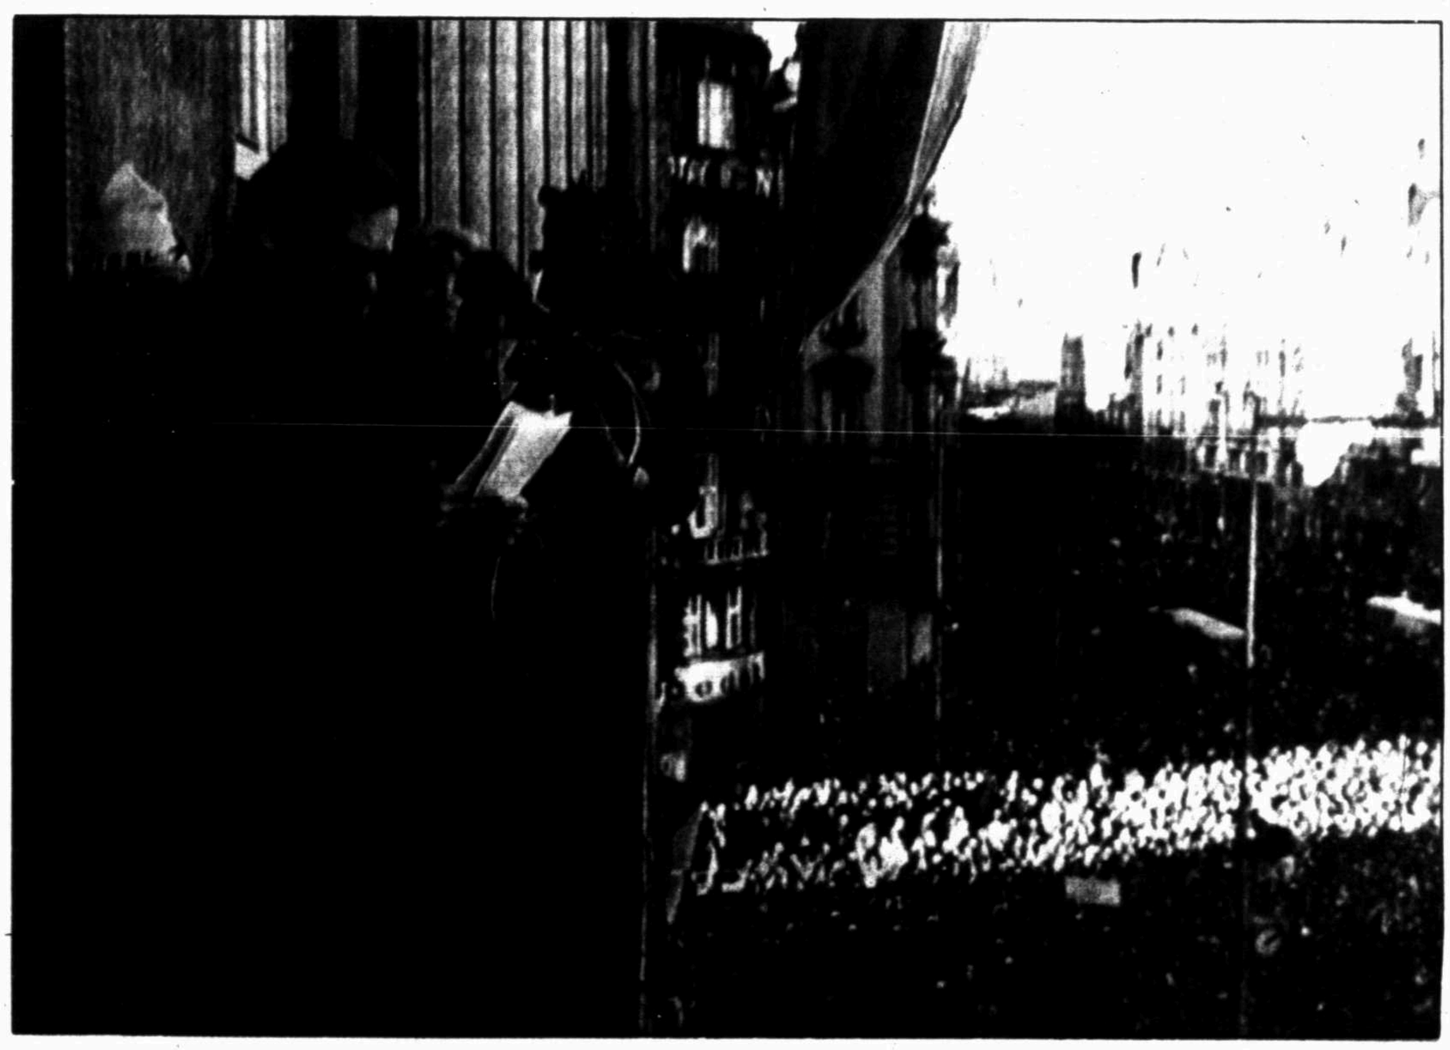
Czech Communist domination ends



AP Laserphoto

Vaclav Havel, nominated for the presidency in Czechoslovakia, reads out the names of Czechoslovakia's first non-Communist government since 1948. Thousands of people gathered in Prague's infamous Wenceslas Square Sunday to witness the success of their peaceful revolution.

PRAGUE, Czechoslovakia (AP) — Sirens wailed, horns honked and bells pealed at noon today in Prague and other cities to mark a dramatic opposition victory that ended the Communists' 41-year domination of the government.

Also today, army units began pulling down the Iron Curtain border with neutral Austria and Prague radio reported that Pacem Im Terris, the state-controlled organization of Roman Catholic clergy, will shut down.

The organization was viewed by indepedendent priests and bishops as a tool of the Communists, and Pope John Paul II declared it illegal several years ago. Several ranking figures in Pacem im Terris were dismissed last week after being accused of cooperating with the secret police.

On Sunday, in his last act as president, Gustav Husak swore in a Cabinet whose members include people he had jailed or stripped of all but the most menial jobs. The new Cabinet gave the country its first government dominated by non-Communists since 1948.

Today's three-minute demonstration took the place of a general strike called off Sunday by opposition leaders after their historic success in overturning Communist domination of the government.

Around Prague's Wenceslas Square, the site of huge pro-democracy protests the last three weeks, thousands of Christmas shoppers and workers on lunch break joined in the three-minute demonstration of support, ringing tiny bells or shaking sets of keys.

On nearby Old Town Square, the deep gong of the bells from Tyn Church echoed off the ancient buildings. Above a large Christmas tree, young people leaned out of a third-floor window as the bells and sirens sounded.

"This is the end of communism," said Jana Navara, a 27-year-old actress, ringing a brass chime in Old Town Square.

Czechoslovak army units began pulling down barbed wire fencing along a 20-mile stretch of its border with Austria. After the first stretch of the frence was cut away and rolled up, officials from both countries met on the open border near the Austrian town of Wullowitz to shake hands.

The radio said some Communist Party cells at state enterprises charged with indoctrination and other political work had disbanded, although not formally required to do so.

In Brno, opposition leaders said today's noontime demonstration was to show support for opposition leader Vaclav Havel, who is considered a favorite to succeed Husak. Posters plastered throughout central Prague showed a smiling Havel with the caption, "Havel to the Castle," a reference to the seat of the presidency.

On Sunday, the 53-year-old playwright told a cheering crowd of 100,000 in Prague that the new government was "a great success."

"This peaceful revolution was ... against violence, dirt, mafias, privileges, persecutions," the once-banned playwright said in the nationally televised speech. "Let us preserve its purity, peacefulness, love and merry, friendly flair."

The new "government of national understanding" contains 10 Communists, two of whom enjoy opposition support, seven non-party members and two members each from the small Socialist and People's parties, which recently broke with the Communists.

It includes two men who just weeks ago were persecuted as dissidents.

In a key compromise, the Interior Ministry, which runs the nation's hated secret and uniformed police, will be run jointly by a former dissident, the new Communist premier and a Communist Party member proposed by the opposition.

Allies call for boosting Berlin's role

WEST BERLIN (AP) — The Soviet Union today expressed "favorable interest" in a Western plan to boost the international role of Berlin, according to a statement from the World War II Allies after a meeting in West Berlin.

The statement was distributed at the end of a 2½-hour conference of the ambassadors of the United States, the Soviet Union, Britain and France. It was the first such meeting here since 1971.

Earlier, West German Chancellor Helmut Kohl insisted German reunification will come one day but acknowledged such a step remains a "vision."

The meeting was held at Allied headquarters in West Berlin, 100 miles inside East German territory.

At the 1971 meeting, an agreement was drawn up establishing the rights of the four countries in the city, which has been divided into four sectors since World War II.

"The Western ambassadors set out their proposals under the Berlin initiative. The Soviet ambassador expressed favorable interest," the Allies' statement said.

The initiative, outlined by then-President Reagan in 1987, calls for improving air traffic to Berlin, making the city the site of youth exchanges and international conferences. It also calls for holding the Olympic Games in the city in the future.

"During the meeting there was a common understanding of the importance of stability, and confidence was expressed that the United States, United Kingdom, France and Soviet Union could contribute to that on the basis of the quadripartite agreement of 1971," the statement said. It added that further meetings may take place.

Those attending the meeting, Vernon Walters, Christopher Mallaby and Serge Boidevaix — the U.S., British and French ambassadors to West Germany — and Vyacheslav Kochemasov, the Soviet ambassador to East Germany, made no comment to reporters.

Kohl, attending a meeting of his Christian Democratic party in West Berlin, said: "We do not know when the day will come when this vision (of reunification) will become reality, but I am convinced that it will come."

The West German chancellor was due to meet U.S. Secretary of States James A. Baker III later today. The meeting had been planned for Bonn, but U.S. officials said the two would meet in West Berlin. Baker was flying to Berlin later in the day.

At the last Four Power conference in 1971, the Soviets agreed to allow unhindered air, rail and automobile traffic between West Germany and West Berlin. The agreement also cleared the way for closer ties between West Germany and West Berlin.

Pygmy porkers latest trend in house pets

ROCKVILLE, Md. (AP) — "Sparky" may be the trendy new house pet of the '90s.

He won't bite the mailman or howl at the moon. He's bigger than a cat but smaller than a Doberman.

He doesn't shed, smell or claw the furniture, and prefers a tidy litterbox to the living room rug. He'll walk on a leash, swim, fetch or just sit and watch TV.

And the worst thing you can say about him? Well, he's a pig. A Vietnamese potbellied pig.

These pygmy porkers have become popular pets in the last couple of years, despite hefty prices, ranging from about $1,500 for a neutered male to $35,000 for a pregnant female.

Pig owners boast their pets learn quickly and have sunny dispositions. They don't get really big — full-grown, they weigh between 20 and 150 pounds (as compared to hogs, which can weigh half a ton). But right now, just about the only way to acquire a Vietnamese potbelly is to get plugged into the nationwide breeders network.

That's where Sparky's owner, Kris Bryant, comes in.

Bryant breeds and sells Vietnamese potbellied pigs through her company, Paradise Pigs, and keeps her customers updated on pig care and feeding through a homey newsletter.

(From a recent issue: "It has been brought to my attention that some of you are unsure of how much to feed your piggies, and some are even letting them 'pig out' (pun intended).")

Bryant is also about to launch Pet Pig Update, which she bills as "the first magazine devoted to miniature pet pigs!" And she was recently elected to the board of the newly formed North American Potbellied Pig Association, with headquarters in Columbia, Mo.

As one of a handful of Vietnamese potbellied pig breeders, Bryant is particularly concerned about keeping the animals' bloodlines pure while not inbreeding them.

Amount of back pay owed local firefighters becomes legal issue

By BRIAN PEARSON
Staff Writer

How much retroactive pay the city grants to Midland firefighters who saw their salaries cut four years ago may end up in a legal battle, a firefighter representative said today.

City and firefighter officials met Saturday to discuss back wages relating to a 2.61 percent salary cut made in 1985, when City Council opted to cut salaries rather than hours. The cut was in response to federal law.

But recent federal law and court decisions forced councilmen to reinstate the wages at a meeting last Tuesday. A question arose over how much retroactive pay the city owed.

City officials offered a year of back pay Saturday, pointing out that recent court decisions granted only a year, Councilman John Castro said.

A federal statute of limitations allows a maximum of two years back pay for the fire officials, Castro said.

Firefighters are expected to either accept or reject the offer by Wednesday, he said.

Brian Loose, Midland Firefighters Association representative, would not specify what firefighters will decide.

Agreement reached on workers' comp

AUSTIN (AP) — The legislative session that ended Friday in chaos over workers' compensation reform resumed today with an agreement at hand.

On Friday, the Legislature was thrown into procedural limbo after House Speaker Gib Lewis angrily adjourned his chamber for the rest of the session, which ends Wednesday.

The Senate, equally angry in rejecting the House bill, sent it back to a legislative conference committee.

But today, both chambers will return to work.

After intense weekend negotiations, key lawmakers forged an accord, which could signal the end of the yearlong legislative battle that has forced two special sessions.

Under the agreement, legislative leaders will accept seven Senate amendments to a business-backed workers' comp proposal passed by the House.

In return, the authors of those amendments, Sens. Judith Zaffirini, D-Laredo, Chet Brooks, D-Pasadena, and Chet Edwards, D-Duncanville, signed a pledge to support the bill.

That vote swing could reverse earlier rejections of the House bill by the Senate.

Despite the developments, critics of the reform legislation say they will continue to fight.

Sen. Carl Parker, whose workers' comp proposal is favored by labor and trial lawyers, described the amendments as cosmetic changes.

But he declined to say whether he would attempt to filibuster the bill in the closing days of the session.

"I'm going to be in the Senate a while. I may save a filibuster for a time that may be more appropriate for those three senators," said Parker, D-Port Arthur.

WEATHER SUMMARY

Snow in tonight's forecast

From Staff and Wire Reports

A 30 percent chance of light snow is in the forecast for tonight with skies becoming partly cloudy by early morning, according to the National Weather Service at Midland International Airport. The low will be near 15 and winds will continue from the north at 5-10 mph.

Tuesday is expected to be mostly sunny with the high near 35 and winds shifting slightly to the northwest-west at 10-20 mph.

Sunday's high of 79 was three degrees cooler than the record high of 82 set for that date in 1933. The overnight low of 28 was eight degrees warmer than the record low of 20 set for this date in 1932.

STATE

Arctic air spread across Texas today behind a cold front that reached the southern part of the state.

This frontal system stretched from near Lufkin in the piney woods of East Texas to Laredo on the Rio Grande Plains. A cold ridge of high pressure was building into Texas behind this cold front.

Light snow was falling over parts of the Panhandle and South Plains as an upper level storm system approached from the west.

Temperatures dropped into the 20s over the Panhandle and South Plains while most of South Texas had readings in the 50s. Temperatures in the 30s and 40s were the rule over the rest of the state.

The early morning extremes ranged from 19 degrees at Amarillo to 64 degrees at Corpus Christi and Brownsville.

Windy and colder over the state today with a chance of light snow over parts of North and West Texas. A chance of light rain mainly over southeast and extreme South Texas today with rain possibly mixed with sleet over the northern part of South Texas tonight.

Light snow spreading into the central and eastern parts of North Texas with a possible accumulation of 1 inch or less tonight.

Skies will be clearing from the west tonight and Tuesday.

NATION

Snow and cold temperatures combined to make the Rockies' roads slick early today, causing numerous road pile-ups in Utah. Elsewhere, snow fell over much of the Midwest.

A winter storm warning was posted for locally heavy snow along with gusty winds and cold temperatures over a portion of Colorado including the southern foothills and the Sangre de Cristo mountains.

In northern Utah, slippery roads were blamed for accidents involving more than 20 cars near Salt Lake International Airport on Sunday night. Numerous minor injuries were reported.

Much of the country's northern tier, the northern Rockies and Iowa and Nebraska registered temperatures in the single digits this morning.

Snow was reported early today from Denver to Albany, N.Y. Cities blanketed with snow included St. Louis, Cleveland, Detroit, Chicago and North Platte, Neb.

The cold reached down into the panhandle of Texas, where snow was possible today. A winter storm watch for snow and freezing rain also was forecast for tonight and Tuesday over northern Mississippi.

Out West, high winds were expected today across Southern California, where gusts up to 70 mph were possible in the mountains.

In North Carolina, the first wintry storm of the season was blamed for the deaths of seven motorists. The storm knocked out power to thousands of households and toppled two television towers before moving out to sea Sunday.

Towers for WPTF-TV and WRAL-TV, both Raleigh stations, collapsed Sunday within a half-hour of each other, spokesmen for the stations said. The towers stand side-by-side in Auburn just south of Raleigh.

The entire nation, however, wasn't under a wintry grip.

Lenin statue removed from Polish town

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — Authorities in the southern steel town of Nowa Huta have quietly removed a statue of Vladimir I. Lenin that youthful demonstrators have repeatedly defaced and tried to destroy.

The removal was ordered Friday after demonstrations the past two Wednesdays in which youths who threw paint and flammable liquids on the monument clashed with police, who used water cannon and tear gas to disperse them.

The state PAP news agency said the 30-foot statue was emoved from its base and "in perfect condition transported to the locality of Wroblowice ... For necessary conservation works."

Its future will be decided by the municipal and district councils, PAP said, but it is unlikely that anyone in Nowa Huta will want it back.

The monument to the founder of the Soviet state, placed on a central square, had been the centerpiece of the city built around a huge steel mill outside Krakow in the 1950s as a model socialist community.

For residents of Nowa Huta, a Solidarity stronghold, it has long been a despised symbol of Poland's past forced dependence on the Soviet Union.

The attacks by the youthful demonstrators had created a delicate problem for the non-Communist government of Prime Minister Taduesz Mazowiecki.

The Solidarity-led government is trying to maintain good relations with the Soviet Union and said it would not tolerate more violence. Mediators had called on the local government to move quickly to remove the monument.

The statue has suffered several ignoble attacks over the years. In 1979 it was dynamited by activists and had to be rebuilt by Communist authorities.

Workers lower a statue of Lenin onto a flatbed truck in the Polish city of Nowa Huta near Cracow Sunday after removing it from its prominent location in the city's square. City officials decided to relocate the 30-foot monument after it recently became the focus of violent anti-Soviet demonstrations.

A spokesman for Communist President Wojciech Jaruzelski said the "acts of vandalism ... met with his highest condemnation."

"He believes these acts are manifestations of exceptional rampant fury. They do harm to the good name of Poland worldwide, not only to the good relations with the Soviet Union," said the spokesman, Wlodzimierz Losinski.

The cultural commission of the Krakow city council on Saturday also closed the city's Lenin Museum and another cultural institution bearing his name, the pro-Solidarity Gazeta Wyborcza newspaper reported today.

PIGS

Virtually all the Vietnamese potbellies in the United States are descended from a group of 18 brought in through Canada in 1983 by Keith Connell.

There are several pig registries nationwide which certify how closely related the animals are to the original group. But Bryant says some breeders — anxious to cash in on the growing market — cross their Vietnamese potbellies with other strains. The resulting pigs are not as small or good-tempered or healthy as the real thing, she says.

Bryant got interested in the pint-sized pigs by accident; she had been trying to get a skunk to keep her cat company and applied for several exotic animal permits.

"Once I got all the permits, I was on mailing lists and I started getting ads for zebras and giraffes and things," she said in a recent interview. "I just was watching the pigs in those trade magazines. And I really liked the idea because, well, pigs just make really great pets but they're also a pet that anybody can have. Most of the pets that are unusual you can't have unless you have a farm. The pigs you can have in an apartment."

Bryant speaks from experience. Until recently, she had been breeding pigs in a two-bedroom condo in suburban Rockville, and at one point had 23 of them. But she and her husband, Jeb, are moving to Durango, Colo., where they will raise pigs and other exotic animals on a farm. Their breeding pigs are already there.

In the meantime, the Bryants and Sparky are sharing quarters with a ferret, a tabby cat, a tank of goldfish, and, oddly, a bathtub filled with more fish outside on the balcony.

During a visit, 4-month-old Sparky trundled around the living room and grunted softly before hopping on the couch to snuggle up. He weighs about 15 pounds and feels like a bristly, wiggly football with a warm, rubbery snout.

Bryant can't say enough good things about her pigs, but she confessed they have two weaknesses: food and telephones.

Pigs will overeat, so Bryant recommends a strict diet of mini pig chow. They also like treats like peanuts, raisins and fruits.

As for the telephone, Bryant said, "They like to knock it off the hook and push the buttons. It's cute but it's annoying."

Bryant has a U.S. Department of Agriculture permit to breed the pigs but she said no special permission was needed in Montgomery County to keep them as pets. However, some localities classify all pigs as livestock, so it's important for would-be owners to make sure they can keep pigs as pets.

COMP

Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby wrote a letter to senators, saying, "I would urge you to agree to them (the amendments) in hopes of getting a very good bill passed by this session of the Legislature."

Mike Toomey, Gov. Bill Clements' chief of staff, declined to say whether the governor would sign the bill into law, but added, "For passage of the bill, chances have been significantly enhanced."

House workers' comp sponsor, Richard Smith, R-Bryan, said, "I believe a resolution to this issue is within reach."

State Rep. Bruce Gibson emerged as one of the main negotiators in gaining the support of Ms. Zaffirini, Brooks and Edwards, according to Mike Millsap, Lewis' chief of staff. Gibson, D-Godley, flew to Laredo early Sunday morning and met with Ms. Zaffirini to seal the agreement.

The Legislature has been deadlocked since January over fixing the system of compensating workers injured on-the-job.

The battle has pitted business groups against labor and trial lawyers.

A slim majority in the Senate has consistently rejected plans by Hobby and the House, saying it would reduce benefits to most injured workers and place employees at a disadvantage when going to court in disputed claims.

The agreement is "probably a doable deal," said Sen. Bob Glasgow, D-Stephenville, but the amendments represent a major concession by the House and Hobby on how disputed comp cases are resolved.

Under current law, the award for an injured worker set by the Industrial Accident Board is not allowed to be considered in a jury trial.

The House and business lobbyists sought to prevent juries from considering whether the award was adequate. They wanted juries to only decide whether the administrative panel had followed the law.

Under the amendment, the administrative panel's decision could be considered by the jury, but attorneys could contest whether the award was adequate.

Glasgow said the amendment returned the jury trial provision to current law, but said he would accept it because of other provisions, including an impairment schedule which would essentially set awards for specific injuries.

"It takes the guesswork out. The objective impairment schedule is worth more than anything else in this bill," Glasgow said.

PAY

"It wasn't a firm offer," Loose said. "This is most likely going to be a legal issue, so I really have no comment on it at this time. I don't want to talk about this thing because it's a legal issue."

The U.S. Supreme Court in February 1985 applied the Fair Labor Standards Act to city and state governments. The decision meant that firefighters must be paid overtime after 53 hours of work per week.

Midland firefighters were working 56 hours. Rather than cut hours, city officials decided to cut pay by 2.61 percent and pay three hours of overtime.

With reduced hourly wages and the overtime, firefighters brought home about the same pay as they did before the cuts. The firefighters accepted the proposal.

However, following a U.S. Congress amendment to the labor act in 1987, federal courts have ruled in favor of firefighters who challenged city governments that cut pay to comply with the 1985 act.

The cities include Plainview, Greenville, Corpus Christi, Longview, Pensacola, Fla., and Murfreesboro, Tenn. Similar cases are pending in Paris and Wichita Falls.

Castro said raising Midland's firefighter wages will cost the city between $85,000 and $90,000 a year. The retroactive wages would also cost the city about that much per year, he said.

"Most courts have settled for a year of back pay," Castro said. "We felt that if we would go to court, we would spend from $90,000 to $100,000."

The added wages and back pay will put a strain on the city's budget, he said.

"We didn't plan on this happening," Castro said. "We may have to make some modifications of our budget, or it could be immediately taken out of our reserves."

City Manager Fred Poe has said the money may come from a $900,000 capital projects account, not from tax hikes or job layoffs.

However, projects such as the animal shelter, senior citizens center, street improvements and drainage rights of way may be put on hold, he has said.

CZECH

The new government was sworn in by Husak, 76, the man responsible for the 21 years of repression after a Soviet-led invasion crushed the "Prague Spring" reforms of 1968. Husak, who presided over the jailing and firing of hundreds of thousands of people as Communist Party chief, then resigned.

In addition to Havel, 'Prague Spring' reform leader Alexander Dubcek has been named as a candidate for president, to be chosen by Parliament this month. Dubcek, 68, had been replaced as Communist Party chief by Husak.

The new Czechoslovak government marks a triumph of the persecuted over their persecutors. The new foreign minister, Jiri Dienstbier, was jailed with Havel from 1979 to 1982 for battling for human rights. A new first deputy premier, Jan Carnogursky, is a Slovak lawyer and Roman Catholic activist freed from jail just two weeks ago.

Gen. Miroslav Vacek, a Communist, remained defense minister, but the Interior Ministry will be run by the new premier, Marian Calfa; First Vice Premier Valtr Komarek, a Communist Party member proposed by the opposition; and Carnogursky. Havel said Carnogursky will oversee the secret police, who once hounded him.

Parliament, which meets Tuesday, has two weeks to choose a new president. The opposition coalition Civic Forum and its Slovak counterpart, Public Against Violence, were formed Nov. 19.

Correction

A 19-year-old Midland man jailed on an aggravated robbery charge was not released from state prison in September on another aggravated robbery charge, as was reported Dec. 4 in the Reporter-Telegram.

Tommy Wayne Aycock began serving an 8-year sentence on June 28 for carrying a prohibited weapon on a licensed premises and bond jumping, and was paroled Sept. 26, according to Texas Department of Corrections records.

Aycock is being held in the Midland County Jail in lieu of $40,000 bond, according to jail records. He was charged with aggravated robbery in connection with the Dec. 4 robbery of the 7-Eleven store at 5408 Thomason Dr., according to police.

The Reporter-Telegram regrets the error.

BERLIN

Berlin has been in a turmoil since the Communists who led East Germany for all its 40 years bowed to massive public pressure and decided Nov. 9 to allow free travel to the West.

The Berlin Wall and East Germany's other borders, closed since 1961 to end mass defections, were suddenly open.

In the month that followed, peaceful popular revolutions have ousted old Communist regimes from power in East Germany and Czechoslovakia, with free elections promised next year.

Kohl has proposed a confederation with East Germany that would lead to eventual reunification of the two Germanys. East Germany's leaders have resisted calls for unity but say they back close cooperation with Bonn.

In the tumult, the Four Powers have been largely ignored.

At least on paper, the three Western Allies have final say in many significant issues concerning West Berlin.

Many West Berliners want that to change, and the leaders of the West German city-state have called for a revision of its status.

Few Soviets answer Sakharov's call for general strike

MOSCOW (AP) — Few Soviets walked off the job today despite a call by human rights activist Andrei Sakharov for a two-hour general strike to demand an end to Communist Party domination, according to reports reaching Moscow.

President Mikhail S. Gorbachev, also facing pressure from hard-line Communists, angrily offered to resign as party leader after criticism of his overtures to the West, said a member of the party's policy-making Central Committee who spoke on condition of anonymity.

Sakharov and several other parliamentarians on Sunday urged the national strike to pressure the Congress of People's Deputies to vote on rescinding Article 6 of the Soviet Constitution, which guarantees the Communists the "leading and guiding role" in society. They also want the Congress, which opens Tuesday, to act on several key reform laws.

Sakharov's group failed to win the support of 400 progressive parliamentarians. The InterRegional Group voted Sunday to favor the goal of rescinding Communist supremacy but did not back the strike. Members said the public mood was too explosive.

Strikes have ravaged the struggling Soviet economy since last summer. Consumers are angry over shortages of food and consumer goods, and officials now warn that city-supplied steam heat could be affected by a coal strike in the depths of an already bitter Russian winter.

On the streets of the capital today it was business as usual. Stores and transport operated and no pickets were in evidence.

However, 214 of the 500 researchers at the Academy of Sciences' geography institute in Moscow stopped their scientific studies for two hours, said Galina Koslovsky, an interpreter for the institute. They spent the time writing a resolution supporting the deputies' call for a vote on Article 6 and critical economic reforms, then sent the text to the Kremlin before returning to work.

In Latvia, some store clerks and transport workers heeded the Latvian Popular Front's call to show solidarity with Sakharov's call through a work stoppage of 15 minutes, said Maris Melans of Atmoda, the Popular Front newspaper.

The Soviet Communist Party is facing unprecedented challenges to its monopoly on power. The Lithuanian legislature voted last week to eliminate the party's constitutional guarantee of supremacy in that republic.

Estonians and Latvians voted for new city and regional council members in elections viewed as a referendum on the Communist Party and the independence of the two republics from Moscow. Communist officials faced overwhelming defeat.

All three Baltic republics were annexed by the Kremlin in 1940.

The elections Sunday were the first in the Soviet Union to include candidates from de facto alternative political parties. First results were not expected until later today at the earliest.

In Moscow on Sunday, 5,000 people marched in sub-zero temperatures in support of reformist lawmakers. Police did not stop that protest, but they pushed several hundred others off Pushkin Square after speakers ripped up photographs of Gorbachev and Soviet founder Vladimir Lenin.

Demonstrators chanted, "Freedom! Freedom!" as the helmeted riot police punched, shoved and kicked them. Tass said 20 people were detained.

Boris Yeltsin, an unorthodox member of the 250-member Central Committee, told fellow reformers that Saturday's committee meeting was dominated by conservatives complaining about Gorbachev's changes.

A conservative Central Committee member, speaking Sunday on condition of anonymity, said Gorbachev offered to resign after Kemerevo party chief Alexander Melnikov "really let himself get carried away and said something like this: 'Is it proper to go bowing to the capitalists, to go asking a blessing from the pope?' "

The source, who attended the meeting, said Gorbachev was irked by the criticism of his moves to make peace with the West, and offered to step down if the full committee agreed with Melnikov.

Other members immediately voiced support for Gorbachev and Melnikov apologized, the source said.

Gorbachev warned that the situation in the Soviet Union is "unbelievably crucial," according to the transcript of his speech carried by Tass.

"The Soviet people do not want to put up with the fact that at a time when the normal rhythm of life has been broken, their local and national leaders are often doing nothing," he said.

Gorbachev cited the nation's serious economic troubles in arguing that the second session of the Congress of People's Deputies, which begins Tuesday, must concentrate on economic reforms and not veer off into a discussion of constitutional issues.

Bulgarians hold silent vigil outside Communist Party headquarters

SOFIA, Bulgaria (AP) — About 5,000 people held a silent vigil outside Communist Party headquarters today as the policy-setting Central Committee prepared to meet.

The one-hour vigil during the morning's working hours was a further sign of growing popular pressure on the leadership of party chief Petar Mladenov to carry out reform.

On Sunday, more than 50,000 people chanted "Democracy!" and applauded demands for the Communist leadership to quit. It was the biggest rally of its kind since the party consolidated power 43 years ago.

Many people held candles in the bright sunshine at today's vigil, and a white, red and green Bulgarian flag waved on a platform set up behind the Central Committee building.

Police set up barriers to keep the gathering from disrupting morning traffic, and a few officers stood at a distance around the crowd. After one hour, the crowd dispersed quietly.

Organizers said similar vigils would be held in the afternoon and on Tuesday to show the Communist leadership the people were watching their work.

The Central Committee was to meet in the afternoon in a session expected to last at least two days, to plan policy in the face of growing grass-roots demands for the kind of democratic reforms that have swept Poland, Hungary, East Germany and Czechoslovakia.

The Central Committee also met Friday in a session that was not announced, and 22 people were removed from the Committee and four from the ruling Politburo.

If the Committee were to resign, a new one would have to be elected at a party congress.

The Communist Party daily Rabotnichesko Delo today carried a guest commentary in which the author urged an extraordinary congress to be held as soon as posible and suggested the end of February as a possible date.

The paper said it had received more than 4,000 letters and telephone calls from people demanding reforms since Nov. 10, when Mladenov replaced Todor Zhivkov, who was Communist Party chief for 35 years.

A poll conducted by a Central Committee polling group indicated that only 23 percent of those questioned had a lot of trust in the party, the newspaper reported.

It said 1,513 people from 127 work collectives were questioned in the poll, conducted Nov. 28.

The newspaper said only 32 percent showed general trust in any political organizations.

The crowd whistled and cheered speakers who read a call for the Central Committee to resign.

Dalai Lama accepts Nobel Peace Prize

OSLO, Norway (AP) — The Dalai Lama accepted the Nobel Peace Prize "on behalf of the oppressed everywhere" and said he remained committed to non-violence in his quest to end China's 40-year-old occupation of his Himalayan homeland.

Dailai Lama

China today lodged a protest with Norway over Sunday's presentation of the award to the Tibetan spiritual leader, and said the official Norwegian participation would "greatly impair" relations.

At the white-tie ceremony attended by Norwegian King Olav V and other government officials in Stockholm, Sweden, the Buddhist monk said China's rejection of his 1987 peace plan was forcing him to rethink his approach and that he might withdraw his proposal.

But, he added: "Our struggle must remain non-violent and free of hatred."

Sweden's king, Carl XVI Gustaf, awarded gold Nobel medallions to nine laureates who won the prizes for literature, chemistry, physics, medicine and economic sciences. Six were Americans.

"I accept the prize with profound gratitude on behalf of the oppressed everywhere and for all those who struggle for freedom and work for world peace," he said.

The Dalai Lama, 54, was chosen at age 5 as the reincarnation of Tibet's god-king, making him religious and political head of the isolated mountain nation. He fled into exile in India after a failed uprising in 1959.

He has called for Tibetan autonomy over domestic matters, with China retaining control over military and diplomatic affairs. Beijing has rejected the formula.

The Dalai Lama said the Chinese had "become even more repressive" since the announcement in October that he was receiving the award. He said several Tibetans were sentenced to up to 19 years in prison last week, "possibly ... to intimidate the population before today's event."

"China cannot escape the impact of this spirit of freedom sweeping many parts of the world," the Dalai Lama said, citing the changes in Eastern Europe.

In Beijing, the official Xinhua News Agency said an unidentified official of the Foreign Ministry lodged the protest in a meeting with Norway's Ambassador to China, Jan Tore Holvik.

The official said the presence of Norwegian leaders at the award ceremonies in Oslo on Sunday "constituted an open support to the Dalai clique's activities aimed at splitting China and a gross interference in China's internal affairs."

The Delai Lama was the 70th recipient since the first peace prizes were awarded in 1901.

Spanish writer Camilo Jose Cela received the prize for literature.

Americans J. Michael Bishop and Harold E. Varmus won the Nobel Prize for medicine; Americans Norman F. Ramsey and Hans G. Dehmelt and Wolfgang Paul of West Germany for physics; Americans Sidney Altman and Thomas R. Cech for chemistry, and Trygve Haavelmo of Norway for economics.

Cela is the author of the 1942 novel "The Family of Pascual Duarte." He said he accepted the prize on behalf of "those who have the glorious Spanish language for their own."

Varmus, of the University of California at San Francisco, cited the 8th century English poem Beowulf in his remarks about scientific challenges.

"We recognize that, unlike Beowulf, we have not slaughtered the cancer cell, we have only seen our enemy more clearly," he said.

Varmus and Bishop shared the prize for their work with oncogenes, dealing with how some tumors develop.

Altman of Yale University, also speaking for fellow laureate Cech of the University of Colorado, said he hoped scientists and intellectuals around the world would gain the freedom of thought enjoyed in the United States.

They received the prize for discovering catalytic properties in the genetic material RNA.

Ramsey was honored as a developer of the atomic clock and the other physics winners, Paul and Dehmelt, were named for developing tools to trap and study single atoms or ions.

Haavelmo accepted the economics prize for developing theories of econometrics.

India's leader proving he's in control

By SHARON HERBAUGH

NEW DELHI, India (AP) — V.P. Singh, the man who reluctantly agreed to become prime minister of India, has set out to prove he's in control.

As head of India's first minority government, Singh doesn't have a blank check to launch the revolutionary economic and social reforms that could allow India to join the ranks of the great powers in the next century.

But political observers and associates say the 58-year-old prime minister has two things working in his favor — a clean slate and a clean name.

Within a week of taking the oath of office, Singh had reassured two embittered religious minorities they indeed have an important place in officially secular, predominantly Hindu India.

He appointed influential colleagues to lower-ranking Cabinet posts, thereby denying them new power bases. The more powerful posts went to men with the experience to push through change and the reputations for incorruptibility.

Singh's five-party National Front coalition denied Prime Minister Rajiv Gandhi's Congress Party a majority in the Nov. 22-26 elections and brought down the Nehru family dynasty that dominated Indian politics since the country became independent from Britain 42 years ago.

But Singh needs the continuing allegiance of both the Hindu fundamentalists and the Communists for his middle-of-the-road alliance to muster a majority in Parliament.

Given the fragilility of this alliance, many political observers are skeptical of the new government's ability to enact any major changes in the world's largest democracy, a country of 880 million people skewed between abject poverty and space-age achievements.

The problems Singh inherited are enormous, but the mild-mannered, introverted politician who reluctantly agreed to head India's newest government has not been shy about what he intends to accomplish.

He lists his missions thus: to eliminate poverty, halt rising food prices that have doubled in the past year, decentralize federal power, reduce bureaucratic regulations and political meddling, open the economy to Western investors eager to do business with India and patch up differences with neighboring Pakistan, Nepal and Sri Lanka.

Foreign policy is a low priority for change.

Singh has said he will not deviate from the course India has already charted between the world's superpowers. India, he said, will remain non-aligned and continue to build on its friendly relations with Moscow and Washington.

The first major test of Singh's government — provided it survives a confidence vote in Parliament later this month — will come during legislative elections in nine states in March and April. All but two of the states now are dominated by Gandhi's Congress Party.

"If Congress loses, it will split and the National Front alliance will become stronger. If Congress defends its territory, it will give renewed confidence to Gandhi and his party and weaken our coalition. Then any constructive cooperation between us and the opposition will end," said one National Front member, speaking on condition of anonymity.

But analysts say Singh's most immediate problems stem from factional disputes within his own Janata Dal, or People's Party, the largest group in the five-party National Front. Those differences surfaced again recently during wrangling for Cabinet posts.

Singh appointed a Moslem as head of the powerful Home Ministry, a move seen as an attempt to span the growing rifts between the majority Hindus and the minority Moslems that erupted into riots in which at 300 people were killed this fall.

Later, he visited the northern state of Punjab, the hotbed of the Sikh separatist movement, and offered prayers at the Sikhs' holiest shrine, the Golden Temple. The visit by Singh, a Hindu, was the first by an Indian prime minister in more than five years and an effort to end the bloody secessionist campaign that has claimed more than 12,000 lives since 1982.

"A nation is not a map on a piece of paper," Singh later said. "It lives in the hearts of the people, and if the hearts are divided, the nation stands divided. We will not allow this to happen."

Despite speculation that Singh would keep the finance portfolio, which he held for two years under Gandhi, he gave it to a veteran lawmaker who is expected to continue, if not speed up, the reforms Singh sees as needed to make India a competitor in the world markets.

Instead, Singh kept the defense portfolio, a signal that he will wield considerable power since defense spending has received the biggest chunk of the national budget.

The move prompted speculation Singh would be directly involved in investigation into controversial arms deals during the Gandhi administration.

Government corruption was the linchpin in the National Front's campaign against Gandhi and the Congress Party and earned Singh the nickname, "The New Mr. Clean," a reference to similar promises that Gandhi made to clean up India's bureacracy.

Gandhi was buffeted by accusations that highly placed Indians received up to $50 million in kickbacks from the Swedish arms firm AB Bofors, winner of a 1986 contract to sell $1.4 billion worth of howitzers to the Indian government.

WORLD IN BRIEF

Pemex closes offices in 2 cities

NUEVO LAREDO, Mexico (AP) — The offices of the Mexican government-owned oil monopoly in this city and in Laredo, Texas, have been closed following the arrests of four employees on embezzlement charges.

Pemex officials said the closings were temporary. Letters given to employees attributed the closures to a "significant reduction in the volume of work."

According to the Mexican Attorney General's office, the men arrested are accused of embezzling more than 90 million pesos — about $33,834 in U.S. currency.

They were identified as Edmundo Genaro Lozano Rendon, former manager of the Pemex customs forwarding office in Laredo; Jorge Sanchez Calderon, current manager; Arturo Garza Guerra, cashier; and Edgardo Mendoza de Leon, who was in charge of receiving.

Rendon had been with Pemex until six months ago.

The four are being held at the Nuevo Laredo jail without bond, police said.

Belgian cleric canonized

VATICAN CITY (AP) — Pope John Paul II on Sunday canonized a Belgian cleric and teacher who died early in the 20th century, hailing him for his obedience and humility.

The ceremony elevating Brother Mutien Marie Wiaux to sainthood took place during a Mass at St. Peter's Basilica attended by 10,000 pilgrims, including Belgian Prime Minister Wilfried Martens.

Wiaux was born in 1841 in Mellet and entered the Brothers of the Christian Schools at Gosselies at age 15. He taught design and music to children for 58 years in the school at Malonne.

Wiaux died in January 1917.

Club to allow women

MANCHESTER, England (AP) — Lancashire County Cricket Club has voted to allow women members, ending a ban that endured since the club's foundation in 1864.

The club announced Saturday at its headquarters in Manchester that the men had voted 2,046-961 for the change which will allow women to watch matches beside them in the pavilion and play an equal role at meetings.

"Most men want to bring their wives to matches and watch the game with them," said Robin Monks, a member who voted for the change.

Before the vote, women were only allowed to be subscribers, denied voting rights and access to the spectators' pavilion.

The vote leaves only one other British cricket club, Middlesex, that does not permit women members.

Bush course wise in Filipino clash

President George Bush reacted wisely and with measured precision in responding to a request recently from Philippines President Corazon Aquino to use U.S. Air Force jets to show support for her government while not actually battling the rebel aircraft.

By utilizing the U.S. jets in that way, Bush obviously was telling the rebels that this country was continuing to support Mrs. Aquino's government, but was unwilling to actually become involved in propping up her regime.

It was a visual indication of the U.S. presence on the Philippines without using this country's "muscle" to keep Mrs. Aquino afloat. Bush's decision likely was based on at least three factors:

■ Although Mrs. Aquino's government is on friendly terms with this country and that relationship is important to U.S. interests, her government has been suffering some loss of support in the Philippines recently. But it's up to the Filipino people, not the Americans, to resolve problems in that country.

■ Uncle Sam has already suffered a bloody nose several times over in recent years — in Iran and elsewhere — because of reluctance to back away from a regime that had fallen out of popular support with the involved nation's people. While that doesn't appear to be the situation in the Philippines currently, Mrs. Aquino should be made aware that it's up to her to determine if she continues to get the support of the United States.

■ Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev appears to be bending over backwards to keep a "hands-off" policy going in the Soviet Union in regard to the struggles of nations in Eastern Europe. If he sees that Bush is going to respond in a like manner in this nation's dealings with friendly governments suffering internal strife, he will be more encouraged to continue his policy.

There is no question that in some future scenario, the United States could be placed in the position of having to determine how far it will go in propping up friendly but troubled governments. Until that time, however, it should determine the appropriate course on a case-by-case basis.

Another View:

Future doubtful

The continued safety of citizens of Hong Kong after China takes over the colony in 1997 remains in doubt.

So does the validity of Chinese communist promises to preserve Hong Kong's economic status quo.

Some commentators are optimistic about the changeover, maintaining that China would be deterred from repression by world opinion and the potential flight of essential people.

However, Chinese communist leaders demonstrated no such concerns last June when they brutually mowed down peaceful protesters in Tiananmen Square, killing, wounding or imprisoning thousands of their best and brightest, the students and intellectuals who have been called China's future.

And if British politicians are unable to come forth with satisfactory solutions to the problem of how to guarantee the safety and survival of Hong Kong residents, why should the matter be of pressing concern to China's tough, hard-line, cold-blooded leaders?

The leading Chinese financial and commercial families in Hong Kong are not gambling their futures on the imaginary good will of the Chinese communists. They have invested heavily in West Coast real estate and business and established U.S. and Canadian branches, headed by extremely wealthy, shrewd and energetic leaders with strong ties to U.S. business and political circles.

If necessary, they could pull out of Hong Kong and headquarter all of their operations in the United States. Such a move would be costly, but less so than massive confiscations by the Chinese government.

The security of less affluent Chinese business people, civil servants and "little people" is another matter. They are far more numerous than the tycoons. The population of Hong Kong is more than 5 million. What would happen to the middle classes and "little people" if the Chinese communists lowered the boom is anyone's guess.

The future of Hong Kong is highly uncertain and at present more fruitful of questions than answers.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Monday, Dec. 11, the 345th day of 1989. There are 20 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On Dec. 11, 1936, Britain's King Edward VIII abdicated in order to marry American divorcee Wallis Warfield Simpson. In a radio address, Edward said he "would have found it impossible" to carry out his duties as king "without the help and support of the woman I love."

On this date:

In 1719, the first recorded sighting of the Aurora Borealis took place in New England.

In 1792, France's King Louis XVI went on trial, accused of treason. (Convicted and condemned, Louis was sent to the guillotine the following January.)

In 1816, Indiana became the 19th state of the union.

In 1872, America's first black governor took office as Pinckney Benton Stewart Pinchback became acting governor of Louisiana.

In 1882, Boston's Bijou Theatre, the first American playhouse to be lighted exclusively by electricity, gave its first performance, of Gilbert and Sullivan's "Iolanthe."

In 1928, police in Buenos Aires thwarted an attempt on the life of President-elect Herbert Hoover.

In 1937, Italy withdrew from the League of Nations.

In 1941, Germany and Italy declared war on the United States.

In 1946, the United Nations International Children's Emergency Fund, UNICEF, was established.

In 1961, a U.S. aircraft carrier carrying Army helicopters arrived in Saigon — the first direct American military support for South Vietnam's battle against Communist guerrillas.

In 1981, the UN Security Council chose Javier Perez de Cuellar of Peru to be the fifth UN secretary-general.

In 1983, Pope John Paul II visited a Lutheran church in Rome, the first visit by a Roman Catholic pontiff to a Protestant church in his own diocese.

Ten years ago: A federal judge ruled against the Justice Department's special immigration review of Iranian students in the wake of the Iran hostage crisis, calling it "discriminatory." (The review was upheld by an appeals court and the Supreme Court.)

Five years ago: Two days after the end of the hijacking of a Kuwaiti jetliner, the United States accused Iran of encouraging "extreme behavior" by the hijackers, who killed two Americans during the five-day siege.

One year ago: A Soviet military transport plane crashed, killing nearly 80 people involved in Armenian earthquake relief efforts. Sixty-two people were killed when tons of illegal fireworks exploded in a Mexico City marketplace.

Today's Birthdays: Producer Carlo Ponti is 76. Nobel Prize-winning author Alexander Solzhenitsyn is 71. Actress Betsy Blair is 66. Actor Jean-Louis Trintignant is 59. Actress Rita Moreno is 58. Actor Ron Carey is 54. California state

Lawmakers often ignore customs duties

WASHINGTON — Dozens of members of Congress will soon be winging homeward from official trips overseas, their luggage bulging with Christmas presents for the folks back home. Many of them will slip through customs without declaring a single knick-knack or paying the import fees that customs charges ordinary citizens.

Jack Anderson

When hotel magnate Leona Helmsley said taxes were for the "little people," she was expessing a sentiment common to nouveau royalty. Apparently some members of Congress feel the same way about customs duties.

Smuggling is de rigueur for congressional scofflaws, according to an Army sergeant who worked as a military escort on congressional overseas shopping sprees.

Sgt. Cloyed Riddle has told Army investigators looking into the escort assignments that some members of Congress and their spouses slip foreign goods into the country without so much as a mention to the customs agents

Escorts like Riddle should know. They act as a sort of congressional moving company during the trips. In addition to lugging baggage and boxes from one stop to the next, they are in charge of wrapping the more fragile booty in plastic bubble wrap so it won't be broken.

When the big military jetliners bring these congressional delegations back to Andrews Air Force Base near Washington, D.C., customs agents collect the same forms that all Americans must fill out to declare foreign-made goods. Riddle told Army investigators that some lawmakers and their spouses declare nothing, even though they bought plenty.

For anything costing more than $400, returning American travelers are supposed to pay a 10 percent duty. Even if they bring back less than $400 worth of souvenirs, they are supposed to declare them. "They are breaking the law no matter how you look at it if they are not declaring it," a customs official told us.

The only way to catch congressional smugglers would be to search their luggage. But customs agents are understandably reluctant to shake down a member of Congress, especially when the standard procedure is to search bags only if the traveler fits a smugglers' "profile."

The Army inspector general was officially investigating not Congress, but the Army office that escorts congressional travelers. But the more interesting parts of the probe obtained by our associate Stewart Harris reflect badly on the lawmakers and their spouses, not on the poor escorts.

Those people joined the Army to see the world and ended up seeing it as congressional lackeys. While lawmakers are meeting with whatever foreign dignitaries can be rounded up to justify these "official" trips, their spouses are bused to shopping bazaars, several escorts told Army investigators in sworn depositions.

The shopping tours are arranged by staffers from the American embassy. The red carpet treatment may include a van, a driver and an embassy officer. One State Department official told us that the salaries and transportation costs for these shopping sprees probably run about $50 an hour.

In Paris, a gift shop has been built inside the embassy. It ties up valuable floor space, but it could be worth the sacrifice. More than one foreign service officer has speculated that the shop was installed so lawmakers and their spouses could shop without dragging diplomats all over the city.

NEWT THE CHAMELEON — House Minority Whip Newt Gingrich, R-Ga., is changing his colors to save himself from political extinction. Democrats are itching to nail Gingrich on an ethics violation because of a book deal he entered with political supporters. Gingrich has been able to turn the Democratic fervor to his advantage, painting himself as the victim of vengeful liberals who blame him for the downfall of former House Speaker Jim Wright. Gingrich has suddenly started talking about the Republicans as humanitarians and has himself embraced the cause of the little guys. Specifically, Gingrich has sided with striking Eastern Airline pilots even though he has traditionally favored management over labor. Sources say Gingrich is becoming softer out of political necessity, not ideology.

MINI-EDITORIAL — The federal government is about to spend $25 million of your money to breed mice. Medical researchers need mice and the biggest producer of them, a lab in Maine, burned down last May. The federal money will build a new lab. We have no doubt that these will be exceptional mice, but $25 million seems pretty steep to build a honeymoon hotel for rodents when Americans are already spending millions to kill them.

CHARLEY REESE

Americans should stay out of foreign affairs

If Jennifer Jean Casolo, an American pacifist, is guilty of storing arms for the communist guerrillas in El Salvador, no one should complain if she is imprisoned or shot. Probably, though, the government intends to do nothing more than expel her.

Charley Reese

Americans, however, should recognize that if they go into a foreign country and enlist on one side of a civil war, they are making themselves enemies of the other side and are therefore subject to become casualties or prisoners.

If you provide funds, food, medical supplies, safe houses, or act as a courier, you are a combatant just the same as if you were wearing a uniform and carrying a rifle. Armies do not consist of riflemen alone; they also have supply, communications, intelligence, and medical personnel.

Nor should leftwingers or rightwingers think they can hide behind the garb of religion and thus receive a free pass.

When churches elect to play in the secular arena, then they play by secular rules. Religious people may feel a religious obligation to violate secular laws but there is no corresponding obligation on the part of the secular state not to enforce its laws and prosecute violators whatever their motivation.

Private American citizens ought to stay out of the internal affairs of foreign countries. When you go to a foreign country, you are no longer subject to the laws of the U.S. or to the protection of those laws. You are subject to the laws of the country you are in and you have the same obligation to obey those laws as any native of that country.

If you choose to go either as a mercenary or as an ideological ally of one side of a conflict, then don't crybaby it if the other side nails you. Too many Americans seem to think they have some special right to interfere in other people's business and for some unexplained reason receive a grant of immunity from any consequences. American politicians encourage this and they shouldn't. They should discourage private intervention in the internal affairs of foreign countries.

I had no problem with the Nicaraguan government imprisoning Eugene Hasenfus for carrying supplies to the Contras. I would have had no problem if they had shot him, although I am glad they didn't, just as I hope the Salvadoran government will show some mercy to the Casolo woman. But it is mercy, not justice, that is the factor involved here.

I don't know anything about the woman, except what I read in the newspapers, but that outfit she worked for, Christian Education Seminars, is obviously no neutral outfit as it has publicly opposed U.S. policy in regard to El Salvador.

Americans, of course, are free to oppose U.S. policy in El Salvador or anywhere else. But the place to do that is in America, not in the foreign country. The war in El Salvador is only a theoretical problem to Americans. It is a bitter, bloody, life and death matter to the Salvadorans. When people have suffered keenly, lost loved ones, they are not apt to treat foreign war tourists kindly.

Nor can you be truly neutral in a civil war. The minute you have contact with a guerrilla and fail to report that contact to the government, you are, whether you intend it or not, aiding the guerrilla and thwarting the government.

The relationship with El Salvador is a relationship between our government and their government. Whether we private citizens approve of that or don't approve of it, we have no right, either moral or legal, to meddle in the affairs of El Salvador.

Our government ought to encourage the Salvadoran government to expel all foreigners who don't have an essential reason for being there. The Salvadorans have enough to do fighting a war without nursemaiding do-gooders.

'Frank exchange of ideas' not so frank

"Mr. President, it is so nice of you to host me and our summit on this impressive naval vessel of yours."

"Thank you, Mr. Chairman. We pride ourselves in our Navy. Well, lately, we at least pride ourselves on the career Roger Staubach had with the Cowboys."

Lewis Grizzard

"The 'Cowboys,' Mr. President?"

"It's a long story, Mr. Chairman. But I do hope you are comfortable."

"Quite, except for this one thing. Why must we wear these life jackets while we carry on our frank exchange of ideas?"

"Just a precaution, Mr. Chairman. In the unlikely event, say, we run into an iceberg, a fishing vessel, an Exxon oil tanker, or the nearest coastline, we want to have as much protection as we can."

"I understand, Mr. President. Now, on the matter of... Excuse me, Mr. President, did you hear that noise?"

"What noise, Mr. Chairman?"

"It sounded like an explosion, Mr. President."

"Well, Mr. Chairman, it could have been one of the gun turrets exploding, a fighter crashing into the bridge, or the sound a commercial 747 makes when it's been hit by a missile. Please continue. I'm sure it's nothing that would concern us in our frank exchange of ideas."

"Fine, Mr. President, and let us indeed be frank with one another. I really feel you're all wet about..."

"Mr. Chairman, I hate to interrupt you — and I want to get on with this frank exchange of ideas as much as you do — but as long as we're here with the Navy, I'd prefer you not use such terms as 'all wet.'"

"And why, Mr. President?"

"Just a silly superstition I've developed in the past several months."

"Are there any other terms I shouldn't use?"

"Well, Mr. Chairman, as long as you've asked, I'd prefer you didn't use such phrases as, 'This proposal will sink like a rock back in the Kremlin,' or 'Let's hold our breath on the situation in Lebanon,' or 'I don't think we should go overboard on the reduction of conventional weapons in Europe.'"

"Certainly, Mr. President, if that's what you want. But it's just that we've been involved in this titanic struggle for so long and... "

"That's out too, Mr. Chairman."

"What, Mr. President?"

"The T word."

"As you wish, Mr. President. Now let us see if we can get on with a frank exchange of ideas. I think... Mr. President, have you noticed there appears to be some water on the floor here?"

"See any fish, Mr. Chairman?"

"No."

"It's probably nothing, but I think I should point out to you your seat cushion may be used for flotation."

"You Americans think of everything. Now, as I was saying... Mr. President, the water seems to be getting deeper."

"I believe it is, Mr. Chairman."

"Look, Mr. President, seaweed. What do you think we should do?"

"Do you want me to be frank, Mr. Chairman?"

"Please."

"Get the hell off this crate. I think she's going down."

"I agree, Mr. President. Let's paddle out together. It'll look like our frank exchange of ideas was a success."

Federal lab develops devices to track down 'killer bees'

By DUNCAN MANSFIELD

OAK RIDGE, Tenn. (AP) — Behind the security gates at Oak Ridge National Laboratory, researchers are quietly preparing for an invasion. They've come up with one device to tell friend from foe and another to track the enemy.

The invaders began their advance about 40 years ago and now are massing in Mexico for a final assault expected some time next year.

No need to hustle down to the gun shop — these invaders are aggressive Africanized bees, sometimes known as "killer bees" because they have killed animals and people. They've also disrupted honeybee colonies.

Researchers at the federal laboratory here have developed a handheld sensor that can distinguish between the tamer domestic honeybees and their more aggressive cousins, and a prototype of a device to track the Africanized bees using a solar-powered, infared-pulsating, microchip bee backpack.

Neither device falls directly into the work done by the nuclear engineers and electronics specialists at the U.S. Department of Energy lab. But they were intrigued by parallels with their work in connection with radiation monitoring.

The $339 noise sensor, dubbed a "Buzz Buster," is ready for market, said engineer Howard Kerr, who developed it largely in his spare time. "I've been to Venezuela twice and Mexico once with this thing and it works like a top."

Kerr, an amateur beekeeper, got started a few years ago when told by a federal agricultural official that for some unexplained reason the Africanized bees that were released from a Brazilian lab make a louder sound in flight.

The resulting Buzz Buster allows monitoring of a bee colony from a distance to determine whether there are any Africanized bees buzzing inside.

While working on the Buzz Buster, Ker called in Chip Taylor, a University of Kansas bee expert, who said what researchers needed was a way to track bees, particularly during mating. That sparked the idea for the microchip backpack.

After a year of research and $100,000 in seed money from the lab, Gary Alley's team has developed a transmitter about one-fourth the size of a postage stamp that sends an infrared beam more than a 1 kilometer. An 8-inch telescope with a special sensor detects the beam, which can't be seen by the naked eye.

Alley allows that the transmitter, at about 65 milligrams, is still 15 milligrams too heavy for a bee to carry, and work on a computerized tracking system hasn't even begun. But "I think we have proven the concept," he said. "There are certainly some refinements that need to be made. But I think the concept is feasible.

"Today, I couldn't give you a field demonstration of putting one on a bee. But several major hurdles have been crossed."

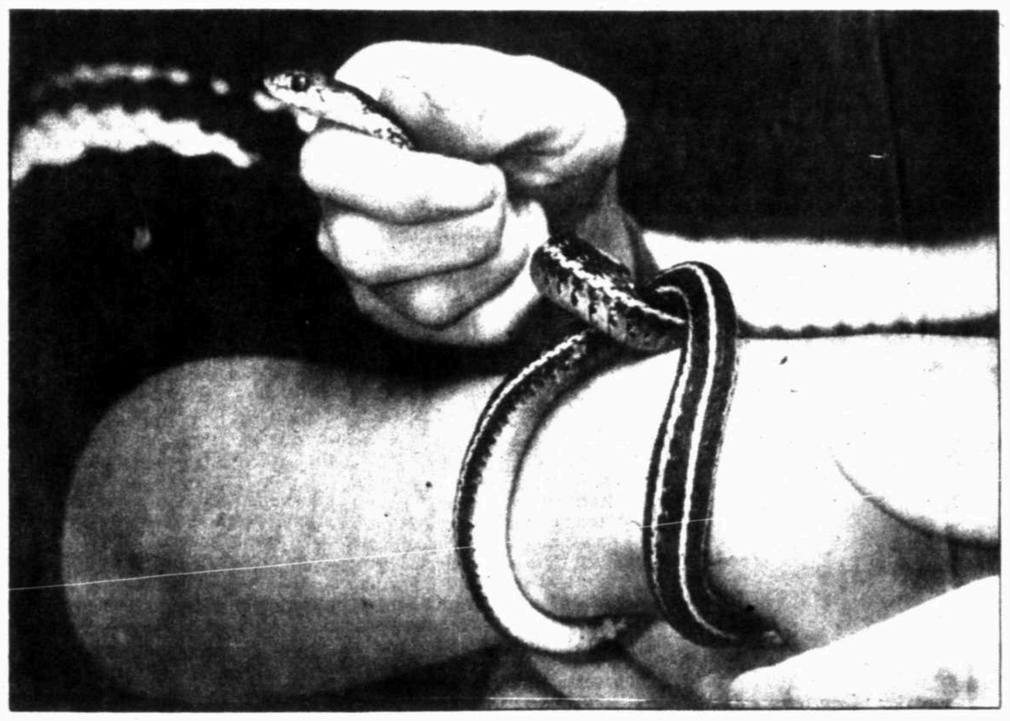
ANIMAL ATTRACTION



Far right, Slither the garter snake wraps around the arms of his handlers.

Right, Crystal Alvey, 11, watches as Butterscotch the guinea pig gets a friendly tap from a classmate.

Living creatures stir the minds of Carver pupils

Eric Walraven's mother doesn't like snakes, but that doesn't stop her son from spending quality time with the creepy serpents.

Eric, 10, even has his teachers' blessings as he handles the wriggling reptiles in his Carver Center science class.

Walraven is an elementary pupil in Midland Independent School District's Gifted Education in Midland (GEM) program at the center.

Pupils in the program's science classes do more than eyeball pictures of animals in books or pet the center's wide variety of critters. They are responsible for caring for the animals as well.

The garter, bull and grass snakes Eric handles are among Carver's less exotic animals.

The students share classroom space with turtles, sea urchins, a moray eel, freshwater and saltwater fish, iguanas, spiders, sea horses, shrimp, cockatiels, Siberian hamsters, parakeets, finches, a sea anemone and "Chi Chi" the chinchilla.

The Carver menagerie has even included two octopuses, but they died.

The programs goal is to allow the children a chance to observe and study animals firsthand and to teach the children responsibility as they feed and care for the animals.

Once pupils are assigned to look after an animal, they must not only feed it but clean cages and maintain proper salt and temperature levels in fish tanks.

Some of the animals' needs vary widely. The birds require only a daily sprinkle of birdseed, but the eel and sea anemone feast on live goldfish, and the bull snake dines on baby rats.

Since the animals' needs, of course, continue during school vacations, Carver pupils also can take animals home during Christmas, spring break and summer vacations.

The childrens' selections, of course, must have parental approval.

"My mom said 'no' to the snakes," Eric said. "So I'll take an iguana."

For Janice Chapman, 11, the animals of choice are the Siberian hamsters.

"They're small and fury," Janice said. She's also points out, however, that she has to wear gloves whenever she handles them because the diminutive rodents can clamp down and hold onto flesh with their sharp, tiny teeth.

Ashley Wells, 12, is in charge of a gray cockatiel. She said she likes the bird because he's easy to clean up after, although he also is a notorious biter.

Occassionally, the birds and snakes sometimes provide spontaneous entertainment when they escape from their cages.

"Whenever we have a snake get loose, I get a little nervous," fourth-grade teacher Ellabeth Jeffreys said.

Loose finches are also a problem. The darting birds flutter around so quickly that sixth-grade teacher Julia Jackson once had to catch one of the wayward birds by improvising a net.

"We finally just had to throw a kid's jacket over it," she said.

The birds even serve as unwitting aids in helping maintain order in Jackson's class.

Herring died Friday evening at a local hospital.

Pallbearers were Harold P. Herring, Rance Herring, Russell Herring, Larron Herring, Zane Herring and Wade Cherry.

Robert Webb

Robert Webb, 49, of Midland died Sunday at a local hospital.

Services are pending with Jackson-Baker Funeral Home.

Grand jury clears Austinite in slaying

DALLAS (AP) — Two grand juries have declined to indict an Austin man in the murder of an Addison man, but Addison police say their investigation wasn't faulty.

"Our investigation was as thorough as you can get with what we had go to on," said Addison police Capt. Tommie Buchanan. "It wasn't like we just picked someone out of the phone book ... although we didn't have any real hard evidence."

But Rodney Root told The Dallas Morning News that being a police-picked suspect in the slaying of businessman Daniel Earnest III has cost him $35,000 money in legal fees, bail money and other costs.

And Root, a 46-year-old stagehand, said he fears being accused of the March 14 bludgeoning death of Earnest again.

Root's attorney, Renie McClellan of Dallas, said Addison police botched the investigation.

The only witness to the crime was Hannah Herrington, Earnest's girlfriend, who called police. She said she was sleeping downstairs on his sofa when she went to check on strange noises and walked in on the attack.

Ms. Herrington said she was struck and escaped to a neighbor's home, where she called police and got a glimpse of the attacker as he fled by car.

Addison police traced Earnest's final days and came upon Root, who had sold a motorcycle to Earnest three days before the killing.

On April 18, police went to Austin to question Root, who mentioned that a $2,000 check used to pay for the motorcycle had bounced. Police questioned him and took his photograph, which Ms. Herrington picked out from a lineup.

While in Austin, Addison police learned that Root owned a silver Mustang, matching Ms. Herrington's description of the getaway car.

But, Ms. McClellan said there are many inconsistencies in the evidence, including bank records, which showed that the check didn't bounce until after Earnest was killed. In addition, the engine had been removed from Root's Mustang months before the slaying and the car still is not operational.

A technical flaw in the original indictment of Root led one Dallas County grand jury to drop the charges.

The original indictment said Earnest had been killed with a firearm instead of a blunt object.

On Sept. 25, five months after his arrest, a second grand jury declined to indict Root and the charge again was dropped.

Ms. McClellan said Root should never have been a suspect.

"They had no one else, so they pinned it on him," she said.

Ms. McClellan said the killer's trail is now cold because so much time was spent pinning the crime on Root.

To pay legal debts, Root sold one of his two houses. Other real estate he owns in Austin also is on the market. Root also said he believes colleagues secretly don't trust him and are reluctant to work with him.

Leland's replacement discusses re-election

HOUSTON (AP) — State Sen. Craig Washington, moments into his first congressional term, was already talking about being re-elected.

Washington, who was elected Saturday to fill the unexpired term of the late U.S. Rep. Mickey Leland, said he will file today for the full term as congressman of the 18th District.

Washington, 48, said he wants his name added to March's Democratic primary ballot for the congressional seat, which was left vacant when Leland was killed in a plane crash while on an Ethiopian famine relief mission last August.

His opponent in Saturday's runoff election, City Councilman Anthony Hall, said he is unsure whether he will contest the race.

"I haven't even thought about it," said Hall, 45. "I'll think about it in the next week or so."

Washington beat 56.6 percent to 43.4 percent in a special runoff election, garnering 24,120 votes to Hall's 18,473.

The two Democrats emerged as the top two vote-getters from a field of 11 candidates in the Nov. 7 special election.

Despite his interest in retaining his new post, Washington said more important matters remain to be solved in the Legislature before he accepts his new office.

Washington has been a key vote in the Senate on the workers' compensation issue now before lawmakers in a second special session that expires at midnight Wednesday. Gov. Bill Clements has said he will extend the session if an agreement is not reached by Wednesday.

According to Kim Murphy, 11, Ms. Jackson uses the birds' chirping to gauge when her pupils' chattering is getting out of hand. "Whenever we get louder than the birds, we know we have to be quiet," Murphy said.

Carver teacher Jan Fischer recently was awarded a $29,573 grant that only 81 educators nationwide received.

U.S. Secretary of Education Lauro Cavazos selected Ms. Fischer, a Midland Independent School District instructor for 12 years, to receive the Christa McAuliffe Fellows in September.

Ms. Fischer said she plans to use the money to buy library books, computer equipment, microscopes and even a human skeleton amongh other devices to make learning more fun for children.

Battleship restoration costing more money

AUSTIN (AP) — The restoration of the Battleship Texas is taking longer to complete and its cost is growing, according to state documents.

The Texas Parks and Wildlife Department, amid charges of shoddy workmanship and overpricing from their own inspectors, has approved some $2 million in additions to the $4.3 million contract to Todd Shipyard, which is restoring the ship in Galveston.

In approving the additional expenditures, the parks department has relied on advice of a naval architect who has counted Todd Shipyard as one of his major clients for 20 years, the Austin American-Statesman reported Sunday.

The total cost of the project has grow to about $14 million, including work to the ship's home slip at San Jacinto Battleground State Park, the newspaper said.

The shipyard work is seven months behind. The ship is expected to be towed to another berth in the next 10 days for additional work.

Parks and Wildlife Department officials say much of the delay and added cost resulted from the ship's hull being far more deteriorated and containing more oil and sea water than anticipated.

"I've been involved in this project since 1984, and it's given me a few gray hairs," said Wilson E. "Bill" Dolman, director of the agency's division that has overseen the work. "There have been many tense moments, but I think we've accomplished something pretty amazing."

The parks department restoration project began in 1984 with the hiring of Ed Phillips, a Dickinson naval architect who examined the ship and drew up the restoration plan. The Parks and Wildlife Commission, armed with a $5 million grant from the U.S. Navy and $200,000 raised by Texas schoolchildren, began the project with a budget of $5.1 million for the shipyard work, plus a $1 million contingency fund.

Phillips, who has worked for Todd previously, played a key role in analyzing Todd's proposed costs for changes in the project.

Although the final decision rests with project management, "there's no question the naval architect does carry a lot of weight. He's recognized as the pricing expert," said Bill Von Rosenberg, the current project manager and the state's chief of the inspection branch.

"It doesn't bother me to walk around the (negotiating) table, and the yard respects this," Phillips said. "Yes, some people could read a conflict into this."

Phillips told the American-Statesman he found no problem with Todd's higher rates for the additional work because "a common ploy of shipyards is to bid at cost or under and try to make their profit, if any, on the extras."

Man shot during hunting squabble

WILLOW CITY (AP) — A Gillespie County man says the two men who held a hunting lease on his ranch near Willow City were good friends and he is shocked that one is suspecting of killing the other in a weekend argument over hunting strategy.

"They were good boys as far as I know," said Willow City rancher Leon Welgehausen. "I didn't think anything like this would every happen."

Authorities say Terry Leggett, 29, of Fort Worth, was arrested Saturday at the ranch after seeking help for the other man.

Randy Lee Nix, 30 of Walnut Springs, died of a gunshot to the chest, officials said.

Gillespie County Sheriff Milton Jung said Leggett, who has been charged with murder, told him the two had argued about the use of corn to lure deer close for hunting.

"The victim was going to feed some corn to the deer to try and attract them," the sheriff said. "But the suspect didn't want him to. I guess he was afraid it would scare all the deer away rather than attract them."

An argument ensued, Jung said, and Leggett allegedly used a .45-caliber pistol to shoot Nix at about 5:30 a.m. Saturday, Jung said.

After Nix was shot, Leggett went to summon help from nearby residents.

"He didn't tell them who had done the shooting," Jung said. "He just went back to the ranch and waited for us to arrive."

Leggett was released from the Gillespie County jail Sunday after posting $30,000 bail.

The ranch where the shooting occurred is about 13 miles north of Fredericksburg.

Jung said both men worked for General Dynamics, a large defense contractor in Fort Worth that manufactures fighter planes for the U.S. government.

Jung said the case will be taken before a Gillespie County grand jury his week. The results of an autopsy on Nix's body by the Bexar County medical examiner's office will be complete Monday.

High number of air mishaps investigated

HOUSTON (AP) — Two jets carrying hundreds of passengers came within 480 feet of each other near Intercontinental Airport in March because of mistakes by a pilot and traffic controller.

The mistake is one of 42 operating incidents through Nov. 15 at the Houston Air Route Traffic Control Center, the Houston Chronicle reported Sunday.

That total, nearly twice the number of the Fort Worth center, accounts for about one-third of the 129 mistakes at Federal Aviation Administration traffic centers this year.

The planes missed colliding after both pilots made evasive turns. The controller was handling 14 planes when the incident occurred.

Three weeks later, mistakes by Houston controllers brought two planes dangerously close together in stormy skies over San Antonio.

The National Transportation Safety Board, which normally focuses on crashes, considered both incidents serious enough to investigate.

Last year, Houston Intercontinental controllers made 10 errors, the largest number reported to the FAA by a terminal facility. San Antonio airport controllers, in mid-November, were leading the nation's terminal facilities with 10 errors this year.

An operational error is defined as one that allows planes to get closer than five miles horizontally or 1,000 feet vertically. A three-mile separation is required around most airports.

The FAA has found no underlying deficiency linking the Texas controllers' mistakes.

But controllers, government critics and even some FAA managers say traffic control operations in Texas and across the country are troubled by inconsistent performance, potentially dangerous staffing problems and flawed top-level direction.

"The system could be safer, that's for sure," said Rich Phillips, a 29-year-old controller at the Houston center. "It's safe because the controllers themselves make up for the inadequacies of the system. But it's not an ultimate safety net because there are too many factors that could sway the equation one way or another."

Critics say the FAA has been ineffectual in rebuilding the system since President Reagan fired 11,400 striking controllers in 1981. They say the federal agency hasn't provided sufficient manpower and modernized equipment to properly cope with the exploding growth that deregulation has brought to air traffic.

Second Houston officer killed in two days

HOUSTON (AP) — An off-duty police officer and a 26-year-old woman were shot to death in a Houston apartment, marking the second fatal shooting of a Houston officer in two days.

Officer John Mendell, 43, and Mary Heather Ballard, age unknown, were killed Sunday night at the woman's apartment. Mendell was a 17-year veteran of the force.

About an hour after the shootings, a man who apparently was a former roommate of Mendell and who had once dated Ms. Ballard, turned himself into the Bellarie Police Department in connection with the slayings, said Sgt. David Preece of the Houston Police Department's homicide division. Bellaire is a Houston suburb.

Charges were pending today against the man, who now is in the custody of the Houston Police Department, Preece said. The man's name was not released.

Authorities believe the shootings stemmed from the two men's involvement with Ms. Ballard, Preece said. But police did not have any specifics about the motive, and the man in custody had not talked about the case, he added.

On Saturday, officer James Charles Boswell, 29, was shot and killed by a man who approached him during a traffic stop.

The man charged with capital murder in the shooting, Craig Neal Ogan, was a federal drug informant in St. Louis but was not involved in any narcotics investigation in Houston, said Houston DEA spokesman John Bott said.

"I do know for a fact that he was working for us up there (in St. Louis). As far as what he was doing up there, I don't know," Bott said.

Ogan, shot by Boswell's partner during the incident, was in fair condition today at Ben Taub under guard by Harris County sheriff's deputies.

He recently moved from St. Louis to Houston because he "had lived here before," said homicide Sgt. Wayne Wendel.

"I believe it (the move) was voluntary," Ogan's father, 62-year-old Henry Ogan, told the Houston Post from his home in St. Louis.

Craig Ogan, 35, was "not involved in drugs to my knowledge," said his father, who declined an extensive interview, saying his heart problems were being aggravated by the allegations.

"All I can say is, when he grew up here he was a dang nice kid," he said.

A clerk at the Astro Motor Inn said Ogan phoned someone in St. Louis from a motel room at about 9:30 p.m. Ogan had been checked in about four hours when he complained to a motel clerk of inadequate heat and poor telephone service.

Police said that, after threatening the clerk, Ogan walked across the street to Boswell's police patrol car, where the shooting occurred.

Funeral services for the Boswell, a four-year police veteran, are scheduled for Tuesday morning.

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: Everything will come up roses if you concentrate on one or two key goals. Be especially careful not to scatter your forces in February. Family members should take steps to reduce spending in the spring. Keeping expenses down at work could earn you a bonus. Be more aggressive. If a leadership position opens up, make higher-ups aware of your interest. Romantic partner wants to know if you two have a real future together in September. Be sure of your heart.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: superstar Frank Sinatra, TV host Bob Barker, singer Dionne Warwick, actor Edward G. Robinson, tennis star Tracy Austin.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): You will receive strong support from many quarters today. Go ahead and speak out! A financial venture brings a better return than you anticipated. Take steps to protect your valuables. Build savings.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Follow your intuition — even if you must defy convention. You are a survivor! Working hard now will mean fewer financial pressures in the future. Retirees can look ahead to brighter days.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): You have better luck juggling your financial responsibilities now. Romance intensifies. Someone who is steady will make you a good partner. You ponder making a commitment. Do nothing in haste.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Harboring a grudge will drag you down. Accept an apology and get on with your life. A romantic separation ends. You could meet someone at lunch who will be helpful to your career.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Complete an assignment early and you can pick up some extra cash. Those who work in broadcasting, retailing and the arts enjoy especially good luck. Romantic partner may be getting ready to bow out.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): It is important to follow your instincts now. Do not give in to peer pressure. Be independent without being abrasive. Students get a happy surprise. A financial crisis can be easily averted.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Someone wants to test your mettle. You emerge in a much stronger position. Translate your hard work into a better post or more generous contract. A risky job deserves extra pay.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Join your neighbors in organizing a response to a proposal that will affect your community. New alliances bring surprising developments. Write down your ideas so as not to forget them.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): You profit from someone else's mistake. A member of the opposite sex is trying to confuse you. Change is in the wind. Keep expenses down. You adapt quickly to new surroundings.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Do not let minor upsets cause you to lose momentum. Your ambitions are fired by a phone call from a former employer or colleague. Go after a once-in-a-lifetime opportunity. Romance blossoms.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Duck phone calls until you have more answers. Your financial security is enhanced by a loved one's actions. A friendship could suddenly turn romantic. Both of you are surprised.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Personality counts more than training when applying for a job today. Educators receive grants and other support. You learn from observing those around you. Expand your social circle by joining new groups.

ANSWERS TO WEEKLY BRIDGE QUIZ

Q.1—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠A10 ♡AKJ1052 ◇6 ♣Q974
Partner opens the bidding with one club. What do you respond?
A.—This hand meets both criteria for a jump shift: a self-sustaining suit of its own, and a fit for partner's suit. So even though the high-card count is only 14, we would jump to two hearts.

Q.2—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠Q753 ♡Q865 ◇QJ62 ♣7
The bidding has proceeded:

North	East	South	West
1 ♠	Pass	1 ◇	Pass
2 NT	Pass	?

What action do you take?
A.—Although textbooks proclaim that you need 25-26 points to make game at no trump, most forget to mention one added provision: both hands have to have a fair share of high cards. When the points are distributed 19-20 and 7, high cards alone are not enough, especially when there is no fit. Pass.

Q 3—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠AK73 ♡J97 ◇J873 ♣92
Partner opens the bidding with one heart. What do you respond?
A.—The trouble with responding one spade is you will be in an awkward position should partner rebid one no trump or two clubs—two hearts is an underbid and three hearts a distinct stretch. You can avoid that problem by raising to two hearts immediately.

Q.4—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠8 ♡K4 ◇96542 ♣J9765
Partner opens the bidding with one spade. What action do you take?
A.—It is quite likely that you have a better spot, but how do you propose getting there? Even if you play one no trump as forcing, that action is fraught with danger. Since you do not have the values for an immediate response, pass.

Q.5—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠J2 ♡Q764 ◇K932 ♣A107
Partner opens the bidding with one diamond. What do you respond?
A.—Don't bypass a four-card major in favor of raising partner's minor, especially these days when partner might be bidding a three-card suit. Respond one heart.

Q.6—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠87632 ♡AKJ54 ◇8 ♣63
Partner opens the bidding with one diamond. What do you respond?
A.—With two four-card suits, you respond as cheaply as possible to partner's minor-suit opening bid. With two five-card suits, however, bid the higher-ranking first, regardless of suit quality. Therefore, bid one spade.

Connery named 'Sexiest Man Alive'

NEW YORK (AP) — From People magazine with love, soon-to-be-sexagenarian Sean Connery is the "Sexiest Man Alive, 1989."

Connery

"For once, I'm speechless," Connery said after being informed of the honor. "It'll all be downhill from here."

He joins the ranks of John F. Kennedy Jr., 1988; Harry Hamlin, 1987; Mark Harmon, 1986; and Mel Gibson, 1985.

"He was sexy at 26, and at 60 even more so," actress Shelley Winters said of Connery, whom she dated during the 1950s.

"He makes a woman feel sexual chemistry. To be his leading lady, I'd lose 50 pounds and get my face lifted. As a matter of fact, I'd get everything lifted."

Connery's movie roles include James Bond. More recently, he starred in "The Untouchables," for which he won an Oscar, and in the new movie "Family Business."

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Bill Cosby, America's favorite television father and author of the book "Fatherhood," says he's estranged from his real-life daughter Erinn, whom he calls irresponsible and untrustworthy.

Cosby

"She's 23 now. She's never held down a job, never kept an apartment for more than six months. She uses her boyfriends. She wants the finer things but she can't stand anybody else's dirt," Cosby said in an interview published in Sunday's Los Angeles Times.

"The problem isn't alcohol or drugs — at the rehab center her urine showed up negative. It's behavioral. She's very stubborn."

Miss Cosby checked out of a drug rehabilitation center in September after acknowledging cocaine, marijuana and alcohol abuse.

"Looking back, I can't believe how dad managed to go on with his show every week, portraying America's favorite father, while having a daughter like me causing so much pain," she was quoted as saying in the National Enquirer's Oct. 10th edition.

Her dad, whose best seller "Fatherhood" is about raising his five children, has said that "tough love" — letting Erinn work it out on her own — was the only way to allow her to deal with her problems.

"It's going to take her hitting rock bottom, where she's totally exhausted and at that point where she can't fight anymore. Right now we're estranged. She can't come here. She's not a person you can trust," Cosby said.

"You think you're not a good parent because you don't answer the call. But you can't let the kid use you."

STATELINE, Nev. (AP) — Two benefit performances by comedian Bill Cosby have raised $100,000 for Northern California earthquake relief.

Cosby presented a check for that amount to the American Red Cross after two sellout performances this weekend at Harrah's Tahoe casino.

"Generations and generations of Northern California people have been coming up to Harrah's to play, to see," Cosby said. "They've kept the lights on. This is a donation to help keep their lights on."

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif. (AP) — ABC-TV's "Roseanne" may be popular, but its star, Roseanne Barr, has gone from Golden Apple to Sour Apple in just one year, according to the Hollywood Women's Press Club.

Miss Barr was singled out Saturday at the organization's 49th annual presentations.

The Sour Apple token is deposited into the hands of "the individual deemed the least newsworthy and-or most taken with his or her own publicity."

Last year, she received a Golden Apple as female discovery of the year.

This year's winners included Candice Bergen, female star of the year; young Fred Savage, male discovery of the year; Billy Crystal, male star of the year; and Pauline Collins and Meg Ryan, who tied for female discovery of the year.

Angela Lansbury received the Louella O. Parsons Award, named after the organization's founder. The award goes to "the individual who presents the best image of the entertainment industry to the world."

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Entertainer Sammy Davis Jr., recuperating from throat cancer, whispered his thanks after being honored at the 22nd Annual NAACP Image Awards.

Davis received a Hall of Fame award for a career of accomplishment.

Oprah Winfrey won the most honors at Saturday night's ceremonies, which NBC-TV will broadcast on Jan. 6.

She won four — entertainer of the year; acting in and producing the TV movie "The Women of Brewster Place"; and for journalism for a "Prime Time Oprah" special "No One Dies Alone."

Others honored for black achievement included jazz trumpeter Miles Davis, singers Lou Rawls and Stephanie Mills, and actors Howard Rollins and Jasmine Guy.

Joining Davis in the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People's Hall of Fame this year were actors Ossie Davis and Ruby Dee.

SILER CITY, N.C. (AP) — Two dozen townspeople bade a final farewell Sunday to actress Frances Bavier at a private memorial service for the woman American television viewers knew as "Aunt Bee."

The ceremony for Ms. Bavier, 86, who died in her sleep Wednesday, lasted less than 10 minutes at an ice-covered cemetery on the edge of the town she had called home for the last 20 years.

Her ashes were placed in an urn at the gravesite. None of the original cast members of "The Andy Griffith Show" attended the service, although Griffith sent an arrangement adorned with a moss-covered cross.

"I'm sure she would have liked to have had the cast here, but she knew they were all tied up or busy. But she wanted each of them contacted," said Sam Williams, Ms. Bavier's attorney.

Williams said most people will remember Ms. Bavier as she appeared most often to them — the matronly aunt who took care of Mayberry Sheriff Andy Taylor and his son, Opie, and who occasionally provided meals for the few felons who frequented the local jail. She continued that role in the short-lived series, "Mayberry RFD."

"Everybody who knew her, liked her," Williams said. "She had her ways. She came from New York, then Los Angeles to Siler City. That would be an adaptation for anybody. She liked it, and they liked her back ..."

Ms. Bavier also did stints in vaudeville and had more than 20 years of stage experience, appearing on Broadway in "Kiss and Tell," "Point of No Return" and "The Lady Says No."

She was a recluse, rarely stepping out of her home. Even when she was admitted to Chatham Memorial Hospital on Thanksgiving, word of her condition was kept secret until her release from the hospital Monday.

After the service, fans drove into Oakwood Cemetery to view the gravesite. Some admitted they had hoped to see some of the show's cast.

AIDS, abortion protest halts Mass

NEW YORK (AP) — Thousands of abortion-rights and AIDS activists converged on St. Patrick's Cathedral, forcing Cardinal John J. O'Connor to temporarily halt Mass as police carried out dozens of protesters on stretchers.

More than 100 people were arrested and three police officers sustained minor injuries, authorities said.

Inside, where 43 were arrested, demonstrators chained themselves to pews and lay in the center aisle.

Outside, about 4,500 people marched along Fifth Avenue, with some holding signs such as "Curb Your Dogma" and "Pope John Paul for Ayatollah." Others chanted "Teach safe sex," and "Just say no is not enough."

O'Connor asked the congregation Sunday to stand and join him in reciting prayers. He was forced to skip his sermon, handing out copies instead.

Then, as dozens of police hauled protesters away on bright orange stretchers, O'Connor resumed the Mass.

Gay activists have staged several demonstrations at St. Patrick's since 1987, when O'Connor barred a homosexual Roman Catholic group, Dignity, from using church buildings.

Those arrested were charged with disorderly conduct and trespassing, said Sgt. Peter Sweeney, a police spokesman.

The protest was organized by the AIDS Coalition to Unleash Power (ACT UP) and Women's Health Action and Mobilization (WHAM!).

"We demand to bring our issues to the cardinal directly and that's what we did," said organizer Victor Mendolia.

A statement by the groups said they "do not challenge anyone's right to worship as they choose." However, they criticized O'Connor for his opposition to abortion and his vocal support of Operation Rescue, which has blockaded abortion clinics; for lobbying against education about safer sex and condoms, especially in schools; and for his opposition to gay rights legislation.

"They are not moral issues. They are political issues," Mendolia said.

Church officials, anticipating the well-publicized demonstration, cleared the church after the 9 a.m. Mass, then searched the bags of everyone coming in for the 10:15 a.m. Mass.

The cathedral doors were locked a few minutes after Mass started, said Joe Zwilling, an archdiocese spokesman. Police were stationed throughout the massive cathedral, even at the altar rail.

After the Mass, O'Connor said the protest left him anguished.

"The archbishop of New York must of course always preach what the church preaches, teach what the church teaches," O'Connor said. "I cannot believe that anyone, even those who hate what the church teaches, would respect me for a moment if I taught anything else."

Baker defends administration move to reestablish China ties

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Bush administration says its surprise move to rekindle ties with China's hard-line rulers comes because further isolation of China could compound the tragedy of Tiananmen Square.

But Democrats in Congress questioned the weekend mission to Beijing by National Security Adviser Brent Scowcroft and Deputy Secretary of State Lawrence Eagleburger, saying China has not let up the repression that began with the June 3 massacre of pro-democracy demonstrators.

President Bush had no comment Sunday on why he dispatched Scowcroft to Beijing, except to say as he left church, "We'll have more to say about that later."

Scowcroft and Eagleburger were due back in Washington later today.

Bush was expected to field questions today at a meeting with editorial page editors from around the country.

Secretary of State James A. Baker III on Sunday defended the mission, ostensibly taken to brief the Chinese leaders on Bush's Malta meeting with Soviet President Mikhail S. Gorbachev. Scowcroft and Eagleburger also stopped in Tokyo on their way home for a similar briefing.

Baker, who himself met on two earlier occasions with China's foreign minister, said the United States will still press China to improve its citizens' rights before relations can return to normal.

"The president ... deplores the tragedy of Tiananmen Square," said Baker on ABC-TV's "This Week with David Brinkley."

"But he's of the view that we shouldn't run the risk of compounding that tragedy by trying to isolate China from the international community," said Baker.

"It is our judgment ... that's what might happen if we seek to isolate China from the rest of the international community," said Baker.

"This is a very important relationship in terms of its geopolitical and geostrategic importance to the United States, and ... we wanted to try and find ways to preserve it," said the secretary of state.

But Rep. Stephen Solarz, D-N.Y., chairman of the House Foreign Affairs subcommittee on Asia, called the mission "kowtowing" to the Chinese and said it sent the message that the United States was ready "to engage in business as usual."

Sen. Claiborne Pell, D-R.I., chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, questioned Bush's timing.

"At the very time that freedom is sweeping through Eastern Europe, we should be sure the United States stands for freedom and democracy in Asia as well," Pell said through a spokesman.

Pell said Bush should have waited "until basic human rights were on the way to return in China — for students, for Tibetans, for all the people."

Baker said "a host of differences" still stand between the two governments, and trade sanctions remain in place.

He said he was certain Scowcroft and Eagleburger raised human rights concerns with the Chinese.

The Chinese are "going to have to help us if we're going to preserve this relationship and be able to move it in the direction whence it came," Baker said.

Administration considering new fees on generic drugs

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Bush administration plans to propose that generic drug companies pay "user fees" to help beef up government regulation of an industry reeling from a bribery and fraud scandal, sources say.

The plan drafted by the Food and Drug Administration would impose registration fees on generic drug makers and charge them another fee for each application they file, said a source who spoke on the condition of anonymity.

The fees would raise about $18 million as part of a $144 million package of FDA fees the administration plans to propose in its fiscal 1991 budget, the source said.

The Bush administration, like the Reagan administration, favors user fees because they raise money without raising taxes. Plans to extend these fees to the drug industry have been proposed before, only to be axed by opponents on Capitol Hill.

But this time, a plan directed at the generic drug industry is believed to have better chances, largely because of disclosures this year that some generic drug makers have bribed FDA officials, cheated on safety tests and otherwise sidestepped FDA regulations.

"There has been some Hill concern about the ability of the FDA to do its job," said one source at the Department of Health and Human Services, which includes FDA. "I think you'll find they're more receptive to talking about FDA user fees than talking about user fees in general."

Rep. John Dingell, D-Mich., chairman of the House Energy and Commerce investigations subcommittee, demonstrates some evidence of a shift in opinion. His panel uncovered the problems that have led to the bribery convictions of several generic drug company executives and FDA employees and the recall of more than 80 generic drugs.

Dingell, who has opposed user fees, "is increasingly coming to favor them" for the generic drug industry, as long as the money raised is used exclusively to strengthen the generic drug approval system, said an aide to the congressman who spoke on the condition he not be identified by name.

The generic drug industry opposes the plan, which would hit generic companies only — not brand name drug makers — with a registration fee of about $6,000 on each company and another charge of about $17,000 for each generic drug application they submit for FDA review.

"It's like putting a tax on one side of the industry because of a couple of wrongdoers," said Dee Fensterer, president of the Generic Pharmaceutical Industry Association.

Congress steps up questions on Iowa explosion

WASHINGTON (AP) — Congress is hoping to resolve the unanswered questions surrounding the Navy's inquiry and subsequent finding that a troubled sailor apparently caused the fatal explosion aboard the USS Iowa.

The Senate Armed Services Committee was to receive testimony today from Capt. Fred P. Moosally, the battleship's skipper, and several FBI analysts, as the panel resumes its hearings on the April 19 blast that killed 47 sailors.

Shortly after the USS Iowa returned home to Norfolk, Va., on Thursday, Moosally told reporters he believes the Navy's report on the explosion closes the book on the matter.

But skeptical lawmakers do not see it the same way.

"We want a resolution to the problems. We want to get to the bottom of it once and for all," said Rep. Nicholas Mavroules, D-Mass., chairman of the House Armed Services subcommittee on investigations.

That panel has scheduled hearings on the Iowa explosion on Tuesday and Wednesday.

Among the witnesses scheduled to appear under oath before Mavroules' subcommittee are Moosally; Rear Adm. Richard Milligan, who oversaw the technical and criminal study; and Kendall Truitt, a sailor on the ship when an explosion ripped through the lowest level of the No. 2 gun turret.

Several analysts from the FBI and the Naval Investigative Service as well as outside experts will be questioned.

Lawmakers have raised doubts about the Navy's conclusion that gunner's mate Clayton Hartwig "most likely" caused the explosion by inserting some type of detonator between bags of gunpowder in one of the ship's 16-inch guns.

Navy officials acknowledged their evidence was circumstantial because all the witnesses, including Hartwig, were killed in the blast.

In announcing his committee's hearings, Mavroules said the panel has been reviewing "several aspects of the Navy investigation — especially its technical competence and psychological analysis."

The Massachusetts Democrat expressed concern about a "question of interpretation" of the evidence.

In October, Mavroules said he "seriously questioned" the Navy's report, and cited an FBI report that said its laboratory investigation on the incident was inconclusive.

"We didn't find anything that would lead us to conclude that a device was used to prematurely detonate the charge," the FBI said in October. "That's not to say something wasn't there. Our findings were inconclusive."

In a Nov. 21 memorandum to members of the subcommittee, Mavroules questioned why the report was described as inconclusive.

"I do not see it that way. It clearly says they did not find elements that the Navy technicians said they found. Why is there this discrepancy?" he wrote.

Mavroules also criticized the use of the FBI psychological profile of the sailors which "was intended to produce leads; instead, it was used as a key document supporting the investigation."

Despite the skepticism, the Navy defended its findings in testimony before the Senate Armed Services Committee last month.

Milligan said additional technical tests conducted since he issued his report found "unique foreign material" on the projectile from the exploding gun barrel that would not have been present during a normal firing.

The new tests identified the material as iron wires coated with calcium, chlorine and oxygen, which would be produced by "some types of non-electronic explosive devices," Milligan said.

Arafat asks for own envoys in talks

WASHINGTON (AP) — Palestinians should be able to choose their own representatives at U.S.-backed talks between Israel and Palestinians on the Middle East peace process, says PLO Chairman Yasser Arafat.

Israel has said it will refuse to negotiate with anyone connected with Arafat's Palestine Liberation Organization, which the Israelis consider a terrorist group.

The PLO has criticized the U.S.-backed plan for a dialogue in Cairo that could lead to elections in the occupied West Bank and Gaza Strip.

Asked about Israel's refusal to negotiate with the PLO, Arafat said, "With whom they are going to make peace? With ghosts?"

Arafat was speaking by satellite from Baghdad, Iraq, on NBC-TV's "Meet the Press," which was taped Saturday and aired Sunday.

Asked if he could assure Israel that a Palestinian state would pose no threat to the Jewish state, Arafat replied, "We want to live in peace with all our neighbors, including the Israelis."

"We are looking for a brave man, a brave leader among the Israeli leadership, to accept, to start the peace processes, to implement real peace in the land of peace," he said.

Infant undergoes surgery

CHICAGO (AP) — The infant who received the nation's first living-donor liver transplant underwent an operation to stop bleeding on the surface of the liver, a condition doctors called common and controllable.

Alyssa Smith, who is 22 months old, was in critical but stable condition late Sunday after the four-hour operation at the University of Chicago Medical Center, said spokesman John Easton. It was the second such operation for the girl in two days.

"The surgeon said the liver looked fine," Easton said.

The bleeding was controlled, said Dr. Christoph Broelsch, who led the transplant and the later operations.

Doctors first detected the bleeding Saturday afternoon when they noticed the child's abdomen had swelled, said hospital spokeswoman Mary Fetsch.

Doctors reattach scalp

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. (AP) — Doctors reattached the scalp of a woman after it was ripped off when her hair got tangled in a machine at a yarn mill.

Sheila Mobbs, 33, was in satisfactory condition Sunday, and was moved out of an intensive care unit at University Hospitals, said a nursing supervisor who would only give her name as Kay.

The accident occurred Friday at the Leesburg Yarn Mill in northeastern Alabama, where Mrs. Mobbs works.

Mrs. Mobbs' husband, Jimmy, said his wife didn't know how the accident occurred, but she fell and her ponytail became entwined in the spinning machine.

The Gaylesville woman was taken to Birmingham along with her scalp, which was transported in a sealed container.

Man ordered to find job

DECATUR, Ga. (AP) — A man accused of torturing and killing at least 77 cats is out of jail, but a judge ordered him to find a job, begin intense psychotherapy, and spend his nights at home while awaiting trial.

Mitchell M. Munoz, a 34-year-old unemployed Emory Law School graduate, was released Friday after Judge Wayne Purdom reduced his bond from $75,000 to $25,000 while imposing the restrictions.

Munoz was arrested in October after a photo processor notified police that film dropped off by Munoz showed cats that had been tortured.

This Christmas, hundreds of hungry people could be eating dinner from one of these cans.

It's up to you which one.

Your contribution to our Holiday Food Drive could make Christmas dinner a lot more appetizing for someone a lot less fortunate.

In addition to canned goods, we'll be accepting turkeys, hams and other perishable items. Just about anything, in fact, except home-canned food.

Bring your donation to the 2200 West Illinois entrance of Midland Memorial Hospital, between 3 and 8 p.m. on Tuesday, December 12th. We'll see that it gets to the Permian Basin Food Bank.

People who are hungry will do what they have to. Let's make sure that this Christmas, they won't have to.

Emotion grips Cunningham after win over Cowboys

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Randall Cunningham's arm was sharp and his legs felt light. But his heart was heavy.

Cunningham had lost a friend he couldn't replace.

After leading the Eagles to a 20-10 victory over the Dallas Cowboys Sunday, Cunningham let loose the emotion he felt when he learned Saturday that Eagles' quarterback coach Doug Scovil suffered a fatal heart attack in the locker room.

"Doug was like a father, a brother to me," Cunningham said, the words coming slow.

Scovil came to the Eagles in 1986, as an assistant to new head coach Buddy Ryan. Cunningham was a second year player, a raw talent out of Nevada Las Vegas.

"My first year I threw eight interceptions and one touchdown," Cunningham said, recalling 1985.

"In came Scovil who changed my whole release. He changed my whole physical ability."

Cunningham is quick to admit that Scovil played a major role in making him a quarterback capable of going to the Pro Bowl and being voted the game's MVP last season.

On Sunday Cunningham ran for 47 yards and completed 17 of 31 passes for 170 yards and one touchdown.

The Eagles took a 17-3 halftime lead and went on to boost their record to 10-4 in the NFC East. They opened their lead to 20-3 in the third quarter and held on for the win.

Philadelphia remained deadlocked with the New York Giants for first place with two games left in the regular season. The Giants (10-4) beat Denver Sunday.

Aikman connected on 17 of 30 for 152 yards and one TD and rushed for 60. He was sacked five times.

Eagles' defensive end Reggie White said of the roughly played game, "There was no talk of bounties during the game. That's a bunch of bull. I'm tired of talking about it.

"People started throwing snowballs and guys on both side of the ball got frustrated."

Aikman said he didn't notice any cheap shots during the game. "That (hard hitting) is football. If you can't cope with that you shouldn't be playing the game," he said.

Asked if he thought the bounty controversy was settled, Ryan said, "I don't know. You'll have to ask the people who started it. I don't even know what a bounty is."

Johnson commended the Eagles on their victory.

"They have an extremely talented team. We gave a good effort under some extreme conditions to try and win. ..."

How about the penalties?

"Well, that's the way it is. When you're in our situation you get the penalties. When you're a playoff team it's different," Johnson said.

The Eagles opened the scoring on Cunningham's 4-yard pass to Cris Carter in the end zone for a 7-0 lead 58 seconds into the second quarter. The Eagles started the 75-yard, 14-play drive after taking over at their 25 following a missed Dallas field goal.

Philadelphia boosted it to 14-0 with eight minutes left in the second on a 13-yard touchdown pass from holder Matt Cavanaugh to Carter on a fake field goal.

Dallas cut it to 14-3 with 2:32 left in the half on a 47-yard field goal by Zendejas. The kick was set up when Bernard Ford returned a blocked Eagles' field goal attempt 51 yards to the Philadelphia 25.

Tagliabue finds no signs of 'bounty hunting', just snowballs, penalties

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — NFL Commissioner Paul Tagliabue sat in on the Cowboys-Eagles game looking for signs of "bounty hunting," but what he saw was an old-fashioned rough game and a snowball fight.

Tagliabue and Art McNally, supervisor of officials for the league, watched a 20-10 Philadelphia victory over Dallas Sunday, a game that included 21 penalties for 187 yards. Officials also handed out five offsetting penalties for unnecessary roughness.

The commissioner noticed the intensity on the field and the rowdiness in the stands.

"It was a hard-fought game with a lot of hustling on both sides — and a lot of snow," he said.

Snowballs peppered the end of the field whenever the Cowboys were inside the 20-yard line, even though Eagles players tried to wave off the fans. Fans sitting near the Dallas bench had to move because of snow and ice balls landing short of their targets.

Tagliabue said he'd seen worse snow throwing by fans, but Eagles owner Norman Braman was outraged.

"Its an embarrassment to our players," Braman said. "If it was season ticket holders that were throwing the snowballs, I'd just as soon they not buy season tickets any more."

Feelings have been running high in Philadelphia since Dallas coach Jimmy Johnson charged that Philadelphia's Buddy Ryan posted "bounties" of $200 on placekicker Luis Zendejas and $500 on quarterback Troy Aikman to knock them out of the teams' Thanksgiving Day game.

One controvery involved Jesse Small's tackle of Zendejas on a kickoff. Zendejas said he had tape-recorded a conversation with Philadelphia special teams coach Al Roberts, warning him of the price on his head. He hasn't played the tape for league officials.

The league announced Friday that Tagliabue had concluded there was no proof of any bounties nor any evidence of any intent to injure any player.

Tagliabue, interviewed before the game, said the investigation was thorough.

"We listened to everybody who had anything to say. We looked very carefully at the films of the play. There was no indication on the films that Jesse Small was in any way playing outside the rules."

Zendejas hurt his case by not producing any tape, Tagliabue said.

And if the Dallas kicker does play the tape now?

"If someone comes up with some new evidence, we would have to take a look at it," the commissioner said.

In the Dallas locker room, Zendejas said the tape may yet be played.

"Yeah, as soon as my lawyers find the right way to do it," he said.

Roberts has threatened to sue Zendejas if he plays any tape of their telephone conversation.

Bears not 'big', just bad

Vikings take over lead in NFC Central

Associated Press

The big, bad Chicago Bears are no longer big — just bad.

The Bears' bid for a sixth straight NFC Central Division title ended Sunday, when the Detroit Lions beat them 27-17 behind rookie Barry Sanders' 120 yards rushing and two touchdowns against the NFC's top-rated rushing defense. Chicago (6-8), which had won 10 straight from Detroit, dropped from contention with its first four-game losing streak since 1981.

"It took this to let us know that the Bears aren't invincible," Lions safety Bennie Blades said. "You just have to go out there and play their type of physical football."

Chicago coach Mike Ditka apparently has become resigned to the Bears' shortcomings.

"I take the blame for it. It was my fault, and that's it," Ditka said. "It's not the end of the world. We're going to keep trying, hustle, work, practice and try to work this thing out."

Meanwhile, the Minnesota Vikings took a one-game lead in the NFC Central by hammering Atlanta 43-17 while the Green Bay Packers lost to Kansas City 21-3. In the NFC East, Philadelphia and New York remained tied after the Eagles beat Dallas 20-10 and the Giants held off Denver 14-7.

In the AFC East, Miami climbed into a first-place tie with Buffalo by trouncing New England 31-10 while the Bills were upset by New Orleans 22-19.

San Francisco can clinch the NFC West tonight with a victory over the Los Angeles Rams, which can clinch a playoff berth with a victory. The 49ers are assured at least a wild-card spot.

Detroit's Sanders won a duel against Chicago's Neal Anderson, who entered the game as the NFC's second-leading rusher, 15 yards behind Sanders. Anderson had 42 yards on 12 carries, including a 1-yard touchdown. Sanders' 26 rushes included scoring runs of 18 and three yards and he also returned a kickoff 43 yards to set up the first of Eddie Murray's two field goals.

"(Sanders) made some great runs on a very heavy, thick field," Detroit coach Wayne Fontes said. "He has great quickness and vision and he's very unselfish. I told the players it's about time we got the Bears off our backs."

"You deal with it," Chicago linebacker Mike Singletary said. "You try to hold your head up and try to do the best you can. Any time you lose four in a row, it's tough. When you are doing great things like we have in the past years, you don't think about rebuilding."

Vikings 43, Falcons 17

Minnesota moved within one victory or Packers' defeat of its first NFC Central title since 1980. Chris Doleman forced a pair of third-quarter fumbles and Keith Millard and Tim Newton returned them for touchdowns.

"We control our own destiny," Doleman said. "That's all we want."

Should the Vikings and Packers tie for the title, Minnesota holds the edge with a better division record.

The Vikings led 20-10 at halftime but Chris Miller's 17-yard pass to Shawn Collins pulled the Falcons within three. The Falcons then intercepted Wade Wilson before Doleman and the Vikings' league-leading defense took over.

Oilers use quick start to nip Bucs

HOUSTON (AP) — Tampa Bay coach Ray Perkins picks Houston for the Super Bowl but Oilers quarterback Warren Moon says it will take better second half play to get them there.

Moon threw two first half touchdown passes and the Oilers defense made big plays in the second half for Houston's 20-17 victory over the Buccaneers Sunday.

"Losing is tough, but they're one of the most talented teams in the league," Perkins said. "I think they'll be the AFC representative in the Super Bowl."

The Oilers took a 20-3 halftime lead on Moon's passes of 12 yards to Drew Hill and 16 yards to Curtis Duncan and field goals of 30 and 27 yards by Tony Zendejas.

But Vinny Testaverde threw touchdown passes of six yards to Willie Drewrey and 24 yards to Ron Hall to bring the Bucs back in the second half.

"We didn't attack them aggressively in the second half," Moon said. "We didn't capitalize on our third down opportunities, we just didn't sustain any drives."

Donald Igwebuike kicked a 21-yard field goal for the Bucs in the first quarter.

Houston improved to 9-5, in position to win its first outright divisional title ever. The Bucs dropped to 5-9.

Moon hit 13 of 18 passes in the first half and was one of five in the second half. He completed 14 of 23 for the game for 149 yards.

The Houston defense picked up, though.

In the second quarter, Johnny Meads blocked a punt to set up a field goal and Cris Dishman returned an interception 31 yards to set up a touchdown.

Linebacker Eugene Seale deflected a third quarter punt and safety Bubba McDowell made the final key defensive play with 1:18 to go when he recovered James Wilders' fumble at the Oiler 21.

"When you get a punt blocked, you are supposed to lose," Perkins said. "When you get two blocked you're not even supposed to be in the same stadium with them."

But the Oilers couldn't stop wide receiver Mark Carrier, who caught a Bucs team record-tying 10 passes for 134 yards.

"The record is good but I was so wrapped up ain trying to win the game I didn't even realize it," Carrier said. "I've been playing with a whole lot of confidence this season."

Testaverde completed 31 of 48 pases for 328 yards.

"I've got a lot more respect now than before the game for him, not that I took him for granted," defensive end William Fuller said.

Testaverde also picked the Oilers to reach the Super Bowl.

"I personally think they will make it to the Super Bowl," Testaverde said. "I hope they do."

The Oilers close out their regular season at Cincinnati on Sunday and they host Cleveland in the Astrodome Dec. 23.

Oiler starting defensive end Ray Childress broke a non-weight bearing bone in his right leg but could play Sunday against Cincinnati. His status was listed as week-to-week.

"We're in the stretch drive now and every game is important," Oilers coach Jerry Glanville said. "This is what we point to every year, the stretch. I'm not worried about them being ready."

Ogrin, Schulz win team title

WELLINGTON, Fla. (AP) — David Ogrin and Ted Schulz, teaming together for the first time, rallied from a four-stroke deficit after five holes Sunday to win the $600,000 Chrysler PGA team championship.

Ogrin sank a 35-foot birdie putt on the 18th hole at the Palm Beach Polo and Country Club to clinch the best-ball victory that earned a winning team check of $100,000.

Schulz had four birdies on the front nine of the 7,116-yard Cypress course as he and Ogrin shot 32-33-65 for a 72-hole 31-under-par 257.

They finished two strokes ahead of Blaine McCallister and Charlie Epps.

McCallister-Epps shot 32-33-65 for a 29-under-par 259, one stroke ahead of Mike Hulbert and Bob Tway.

Hulbert-Tway, winners in 1987 and second in both 1986 and 1988, had a two-shot lead starting the day, increasing it with birdies on the first and fourth holes. But they finished with a par-72 and a 28-under 260.

"Ted (Schulz) is a power player and I go point-to-point," said Ogrin, who is 59th on the 1989 money list with $234,196, but has not won official event. "I knew we were in it after 14 holes. My job from holes 15 to 18 was to make pars."

"We only had two bogeys, both Saturday," said Schulz, who finished this year's tour No. 30 with $391,854.

McCallister, 15th on the money list with $523,891, birdied the par-5 17th hole with an eight-iron approach and a 12-foot putt to pull within a stroke of Ogrin-Schulz.

Epps' bid for a birdie on the last hole just missed when his 15-foot putt edged away from the rim.

The Tway-Hulbert team seemed enroute to a runaway win until they started to miss birdie putts and suffered consecutive bogeys on the 13th and 14th holes.

"We didn't take anything for granted. We just started missing and then started pressing and all of a sudden we were behind," said Hulbert.

Rick Fehr and Kent Kluba, second to Hulbert-Tway by two strokes starting the day, fell to a 72 and finished in a four-way tie at 262, one stroke behind fourth-place finishers Mark Brooks and Scott Verplank, whose 64 gave them a 261.

Fred Funk, playing with Mike Miles, aced the 197-yard sixth hole with a two-iron. The team finished with 265.

Odessan takes all-around title

LAS VEGAS (AP) — For Odessa's Ty Murray and Butch Myers, rodeo is a family affair.

Murray, a 20-year-old in only his second year on the rodeo circuit, battled his veteran uncle Sunday to win the all-around title as the nation's top cowboy at the National Finals Rodeo.

He then turned around and credited the 44-year-old Myers for the win.

"He's been a great inspiration to me ever since I was little," said Murray. "He's a great cowboy."

Murray was a little better this year, however capping his sophomore season with $58,030 in NFR winnings to win the overall title with earnings of $134,806.

Myers, a steer wrestler and calf roper, finished third overall out of 114 cowboys with total winnings of $116,390.

"I'm numb," said Murray, last year's rookie of the year from Odessa. "I've dreamed about this ever since I can remember. It's the greatest feeling in the world."

Murray didn't place in Sunday's competition, but managed to stay on his horses in both the bareback and saddle bronc events to win enough overall money to make him the year-long champion.

Five of the seven defending champions also won their respective events as the $2.3 million event ended the rodeo season after 10 go-arounds.

Roper Clay O'Brien Cooper, of Gilbert, Ariz., earned $34,390 in the rodeo to finish second overall at $117,489.

Murray clinched the overall title by scoring a 78 on his last bareback ride, a score that didn't earn him any money for the day but tied him for second for the entire rodeo and paid $15,628.

"I was just going to try as hard on the last go-around as I did on the first," the youthful cowboy said. "That's what I've done all year. I wasn't going to change now."

It was the first NFR for Murray, who failed to qualify for the prestigious rodeo in his first season last year despite winning $45,977 and capturing rookie of the year honors.

It's Magic, Lakers tumble

Milwaukee snaps four game losing streak

NBA Roundup

Associated Press

Playoff teams don't scare the Orlando Magic. The expansion team hasn't been in the NBA long enough to know better.

The Magic, down 14 points midway through the fourth quarter, rallied to beat the Los Angeles Lakers 108-103 Sunday night with a game plan a lot of clubs wouldn't have tried, let alone expect to give them a chance to win.

Orlando wanted to run with Los Angeles, and for 3¼ quarters the strategy failed. Poor shooting eventually undermined the Lakers, though, and the Magic swept past the team with the NBA's best record (14-5) with a 23-4 spurt in the final 6:28.

"We had 42 minutes of very good basketball, and then we just totally collapsed," Los Angeles coach Pat Riley said. "It's totally unlike us to do this. This is one of the worst collapses I have ever seen. You've got to learn to close out games in this league. You have to have a killer instinct."

The victory was the fifth for Orlando against a playoff team from last year. The Lakers, who led 85-73 after three quarters and 99-85 before the Magic made its move, hit only six of 22 field goals in the last quarter and shot 39.3 percent (35 of 89) for the game.

Terry Catledge had 26 points and 12 rebounds to lead Orlando (8-11), which snapped a four-game losing streak and set an NBA record for the fastest start by a first-year team after 19 games.

In Sunday's only other NBA game, Milwaukee edged Portland 107-104.

The Lakers, two games into an eight-game, 12-day East Coast road trip, lost for the second straight night. The Washington Bullets beat Los Angeles 103-101 Saturday.

"Teams are always up for us," Lakers forward A.C. Green said. "It's a measuring stick for them to see how far along they are."

Sam Vincent scored 11 of his 21 points during the game-ending run that saw the Magic hold the Lakers to baskets by James Worthy and Mychal Thompson, the latter giving Los Angeles a 103-97 lead with 2:46 left.

"The big thing is we were down by 14 points to a championship team and didn't let up," said Vincent, who hit a a jump shot to tie the game and sank a pair of free throws to provide the final margin of victory.

"The level of intensity of our defense picked up in the fourth quarter and it allowed us to get a break going and created some easy shots," Vincent added. "When you work hard, good things can happen."

James Worthy led the Lakers with 31 points. Byron Scott added 17 points and Magic Johnson had 14, but neither scored in the fourth quarter as Orlando held Los Angeles to 18 points.

"This loss is my loss," said Johnson, who sat out part of the third quarter after taking an elbow in the left eye.

"We lost last night in almost the same way. I should have known better," added Johnson, who had eight assists and seven rebounds but made only three of 16 shots and had six turnovers.

"I definitely have to make sure it doesn't happen again ... We lost because I didn't get the job done," he said said. "I let us lose this game. I'm taking it on my shoulders."

Bucks 107, Trail Blazers 104

Milwaukee snapped a four-game losing streak as Jack Sikma scored 16 of his season-high 30 points in the fourth quarter and the Bucks got important performances from Mike Dunleavy and Frank Kornet against Portland.

Sikma scored 10 of his 16 points in the fourth quarter on free throws as the Bucks made all 13 of their free throw attempts in the final 4:49.

Dunleavy, a Bucks assistant coach activated as a player on Sunday, and Kornet, a rookie averaging 3.3 points, scored nine points each in the final period.

Clyde Drexler scored a season-high 36 points and Terry Porter added 25, including two 3-pointers in the final quarter, for the Trail Blazers.

Trailing 70-65 entering the fourth quarter, the Bucks took the lead for good with a 13-2 run.

Chiefs 21, Packers 3

Kansas City scored all its points in the second period and kept its playoff hopes alive. Steve DeBerg passed 11 yards to Jonathan Hayes and 12 to Emile Harry for touchdowns around Christian Okoye's 3-yard TD run. Kansas City sacked Green Bay's Don Majkowski four times, intercepted him once and held Green Bay to four second-half first downs.

Giants 14, Broncos 7

Dave Meggett ran 57 yards through the snow with a screen pass and the Giants' defense made a 14-0 halftime lead stand up over Denver, which already had clinched the AFC West.

Meggett's run came midway through the second quarter and gave New York a 14-0 lead. Ottis Anderson scored from 3 yards out on New York's first possession. New York's defense then beat back every Denver threat but one, a 32-yard TD pass from John Elway to Michael Young.

Dolphins 31, Patriots 10

Sammie Smith scored on three short runs, tying a club record, and Dan Marino passed for 300 yards while the Dolphins' defense, third worst in the NFL against the rush, limited New England's John Stephens to 20 yards in 10 carries.

Buffalo has beaten Miami twice, the first tie-breaker. But the Dolphins moved into a front-runner's position in the race for the AFC's two wild-card berths. If they win their final two games, they're in the playoffs.

Saints 22, Bills 19

John Fourcade made his first NFL start, aside from strike games, and threw two touchdown passes for New Orleans, which was eliminated from playoff contention by Philadelphia's victory. Fourcade replaced the benched Bobby Hebert and threw for 302 yards, including TDs of 12 yards to John Tice and 54 to Dalton Hilliard, both in the first period.

Steelers 13, Jets 0

Pittsburgh's defense, led by linebacker Greg Lloyd, got its first shutout since Sept. 22, 1985. Tim Worley scored on a 35-yard run on the opening drive, then the Steelers turned to defense. Lloyd intercepted a pass and had one sack.

Seahawks 24, Bengals 17

Dave Krieg lobbed a one-yard touchdown pass to Curt Warner with 3:51 to play for the winning touchdown. Krieg's second touchdown pass followed a disputed call. Seattle appeared to be stopped when Warner failed on third-and-goal from the 1. But the play was blown dead for illegal motion, giving Seattle another chance, even though the referee later decided there was no motion on the play.

Seattle's Steve Largent caught his 100th career touchdown pass, breaking the 44-year-old mark of Hall-of-Famer Don Hutson. Largent also extended his record to 175 consecutive games with a reception.

Redskins 26, Chargers 21

Mark Rypien threw two touchdown passes and Chip Lohmiller kicked four field goals as Washington rallied from a 14-0 deficit and gave Joe Gibbs his 100th victory as a head coach. The go-ahead score came on a fourth-and-3 play when Rypien threw a 33-yard touchdown pass to Gary Clark with 7:27 left, giving Washington a 23-21 lead.

Raiders 16, Cardinals 14

Marcus Allen scored on a 1-yard dive with 40 seconds left, keeping Los Angeles solidly entrenched in the playoff race. The Cardinals led 14-9 on a 2-yard touchdown pass from Gary Hogeboom to Jay Novacek with 5:10 remaining.

Colts 23, Browns 17

Mike Prior intercepted Bernie Kosar's pass and returned it 58 yards for a touchdown at 10:54 of overtime to give Indianapolis the victory. Cleveland placekicker Matt Bahr missed a 39-yarder with 25 seconds left in regulation and a 35-yarder with 6:05 left in overtime.

Indianapolis got into overtime after Keith Taylor's 77-yard interception return set up the tying touchdown — a 1-yard pass from Tom Ramsey to Pat Beach —with 1:56 remaining in regulation. Despite the interceptions, Kosar passed for a season-high 353 yards.

Clements sets new passing mark

By BOB SONDEREGGER
The Huntsville Item

HUNTSVILLE (AP) — Steve Clements, the Huntsville quarterback, was tabbed for greatness at the start of the 1989 season and disappointed few.

He was called the best quarterback prospect in Texas at the start of the season. He was the Class 5A coverboy for Texas Football Magazine.

And in Saturday's 21-8 loss to Marshall in the Class 5A quarterfinals, he became the most prolific passer in Texas high school history. His first pass of the game, a 25-yard completion to Lewis Jenkins, broke the record of 8,005 career passing yards set by Ty Detmer of San Antonio Southwest.

Albeit in a losing cause, Clements completed 16 of 35 passes for 204 yards against Marshall, establishing a new mark of 8,203 yards passing.

"He has lived up to every one of his press clippings," said Weldon Willig of Conroe McCullough, one of the opposing coaches who saw Clements in action this year.

In 14 games this season, Clements completed 246 of 422 passes for 3,711 yards and 35 touchdowns.

At the end of the regular season, Clements led state 5A passers with 2,583 yards passing on 177 completions in 293 tries and 26 TDs. It was in the final game of the regular season that Clements set the career record for 5A passers, breaking the mark of 6,917 set by Lupe Rodriquez of Mission.

In that final game against New Caney, Clements departed with 247 passing yards, completing five touchdown passes, in less than 14 minutes against the winless 5A team.

Weekend before last, Clements passed for 431 yards and four touchdowns, capping off his performance with a scrambling 25-yard touchdown pass to Farenza McGowan with 15 seconds left to give the Hornets a 36-33 playoff victory victory over Lake Highlands.

In was also during that game that Clements tossed an 85-yard pass to Lunsford Bledsoe to break a school record set by his father 36 seasons ago.

Football runs in the Clements' family. Steve's younger brother Chuck has been the backup quarterback this year and is considered a solid future talent.

Himself a high school star at Huntsville, Joe Clements quarterbacked the Hornets to the Class 2A state championship in 1953. In 1980, as a coach, he guided Huntsville to a Class 4A state title.

Largent snares 100th TD reception

CINCINNATI (AP) — Steve Largent says his 100th touchdown reception was something special ... but only because it got Seattle headed towards victory.

Largent caught a 10-yard touchdown pass from Dave Krieg to get Seattle's offense rolling Sunday in a 24-17 victory over the Cincinnati Bengals.

The catch just before halftime made Largent the NFL's all-time leader in touchdown catches, ahead of Don Hutson. It also cut Cincinnati's lead to 10-7 and gave the Seahawks momentum for the second-half comeback.

"I'm sitting here right now, and I'm more excited about winning the football game than about breaking the record," Largent said.

Largent, 35, missed time earlier this season with an injured elbow and had just two touchdown catches, tying Hutson's career record of 99. Largent wasn't worried about ending the season — and his career — in a tie, but he was glad to get the catch with some time to spare.

"I'm glad it didn't come down to the last game of the season," Largent said. "I think that might have been more pressure than I could handle. I'm glad Dave's the guy that threw it. The real bonus is that we won the game in the process."

Largent's five receptions Sunday for 68 yards extended his NFL-record streak to 175 consecutive games with a catch, padded his NFL record to 816 catches, and made him the first receiver to go over 13,000 career yards.

The touchdown catch was on a second-down play. Krieg scanned the Bengals' zone defense and spotted Largent, who found an opening at the back of the end zone. Krieg lobbed the ball, and Largent caught it cleanly before falling out of the end zone.

Virginia romps over SWC's Coogs by 18

CHARLOTTESVILLE, Va. (AP) — Virginia sophomore Bryant Stith celebrated his 19th birthday Sunday by scoring 26 points and grabbing seven rebounds, and the Cavaliers pulled away in the second half for a 72-54 triumph over Houston.

Stith connected on six of 13 field-goal attempts and converted 13 of 15 free throws. The Cavaliers (6-1), who outscored the Cougars 42-22 in the final period, also got a career-high 14 points from sophomore Anthony Oliver and 12 points and five assists from point guard John Crotty.

Houston, which fell to 4-2 and saw its three-game winning streak snapped, got 13 points each from Byron Smith and Carl Herrera.

U.S. draws Italy in Cup

NEW YORK (AP) — Now that the U.S. soccer team is at the World Cup party, it doesn't just want to party.

"I hope our guys are not satisfied with just being invited to the dance," U.S. coach Bob Gansler said after Saturday's draw for the 1990 World Cup. "I feel we have to come with the conviction that we can get to the next round. It's silly for us to have worked for a year to qualify for this prestigious tournament and say we're happy with what we have done."

Qualify for the next round? The rest of the world doesn't think the Americans have a chance.

"Our main concern will be not to underestimate our opponents," said Italian coach Azeglio Vicini, whose team plays the United States in Rome's Olympic Stadium on June 14. "If we do that, we should easily qualify for the second round."

The United States is in Group A with Italy, the 5-2 favorite, Austria and Czechoslovakia. The Americans open against the Czechs at Florence on June 10 and play Austria at Florence on June 19. The top two teams in each of the six groups advance to the second round, along with the four best third-place teams.

"I don't think we will be taken lightly and I think if we are, it's a mistake," U.S. captain Mike Windischmann said. "All of us want to make the second round. We're not going just to be there."

That's Gansler's biggest fear: that the players may believe they accomplished their goal with the 1-0 victory at Trinidad and Tobago that put the United States into the World Cup for the first time since 1950.

Gansler said his job was to tell the players "not to sell themselves short by getting into a tourist-kind of mode, because I don't think that's appropriate."

Job prospects gloomy for graduates

EAST LANSING, Mich. (AP) — College graduates this spring will make more money, but find fewer job opportunities, according to a survey of nearly 500 U.S. employers.

Hires will be down 13.3 percent compared to last year, according to the 19th annual survey by Michigan State University's Career Development and Placement Services office.

The average starting salary for a graduate with a bachelor's degree will be $25,256, up 3.3 percent from a year ago. The expected starting salary for master's of business administration graduates will be $39,840, a 3.1 percent increase; $33,740 for master's degree graduates, up 3.3 percent; and $37,111 for graduates with doctoral degrees, a 2.4 percent increase.

As in recent years, engineering majors will get the highest starting salaries for new college graduates, with chemical engineering leading the way at $33,380. Mechanical engineering ranks second at $32,256, while electrical engineering is at $32,107; computer science $31,389, and industrial engineering $30,557.

The lowest starting salaries will be for graduates in human ecology-home economics, $18,157; journalism, $18,255; natural resources, $18,840; retailing, $18,909, and advertising, $19,662.

The survey released Sunday was based on responses from 479 employers in business, industry, government, and educational institutions.

Patrick Scheetz, who directed the study, said reasons for the drop in planned hiring included limited growth in new business; mergers and buyouts; increased global competition; and slow turnover of current employees.

Employers expected to have large hiring increases include: public utilities, up 29.4 percent; metal products, up 24.2 percent; petroleum, 22.1 percent; construction and building materials manufacturing, 19.3 percent; printing, publishing and informational services, 13.7 percent.

Those expected to have decreases included automotive and mechanical equipment, down 58 percent; electronics, 24.5 percent; government administration, 20.9 percent; aerospace, 20 percent; the military, 16.8 percent; and diversified conglomerates, 13.7 percent.

The survey also found:

- The greatest job opportunities are in the Southwest. Next best is the Northeast, followed by the Southeast, North-Central, South-Central, and Northwest states.
- Employers requiring drug testing of new college graduates rose to 47 percent of those surveyed, up from 32 percent last year and 27 percent the year before. Testing for alcohol was required by 25 percent of those surveyed, up from 14 percent. Testing for AIDS was required by 4 percent of employers, a slight increase of 3 percent for the 1988-89 graduates.

Strikers see gloomy Christmas

By MARC RICE
AP Business Writer

ATLANTA (AP) — A paper route and occasional freelance photography jobs have hardly helped Adolfo Collazo cover the loss of his Eastern Airlines paycheck during the 9-month-old Machinists strike, a fact that has hit like a winter storm with the holiday season approaching.

"This Christmas — very sad," the father of three sons said. "They know it. I told them, one toy each."

Collazo, a ramp service worker with 14 years at Eastern, spoke about his financial ordeal as he walked the picket line at Hartsfield Atlanta International Airport. "I'm still trying to catch up with my bills," he said.

Money is tight, and tempers sometimes are too, for many of the Machinists union members who struck Eastern March 4.

"If you hadn't worked in nine months, how would you be getting along?," J.D. Filey snapped from within the small rectangle, bordered by yellow tape, that Hartsfield allows for picketing on the Eastern concourse.

Some, such as Filey and Collazo, occasionally have found part-time work to supplement the $100 a week the union pays for walking the picket line. Others have working spouses or a decent savings account balance to help them get by. Some have left to take jobs elsewhere. Some say they are just broke.

But the pickets, who have become fixtures this year at airports served by Eastern, say they are determined to continue their strike, even though the airline's pilots and flight attendants have abandoned their sympathy strikes and little hope for a settlement exists.

"We didn't think we'd be out this long," said Katie Cantrell, who was a hangar maintenance worker with Eastern 16 years until the strike. "Now, I think I'll be in this box this time next year."

Ms. Cantrell and Filey, a 21-year ramp service worker, said they've had trouble finding work to help them make ends meet. Employment agencies aren't much help.

"Once you put down you work for Eastern, no one will hire you on a permanent basis," said Ms. Cantrell, who has relied on her husband's salary since the strike began.

"They say, 'You're going back to work soon.' Here it is, nine months. That's soon?" said Filey.

The strikers' anger toward Frank Lorenzo, chairman of Eastern's parent Texas Air Corp., seems to have turned to frustration at the federal government and court system, which they say favor airline management. Eastern sought bankruptcy court protection from creditors five days after the strike.

"The supposed government has done nothing, and after I voted for Bush," said Collazo.

Boeing unit, union agree on contract

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Boeing Helicopters and 3,000 union members have reached agreement on a three-year contract that parallels one that ended a 48-day strike by Machinists at parent Boeing Co.

The agreement is retroactive to Oct. 5, when the old contract would have expired without a day-to-day extension.

A Boeing Helicopters announcement did not provide results of the ratification vote Sunday.

The new Boeing Helicopters contract parallels the package accepted three weeks ago by the International Association of Machinists and Aerospace Workers.

The contract includes a three-year series of wage increases, lump sum payments and quarterly cost-of-living adjustments, the company said.

The wage increases of 4 percent, 3 percent and 3 percent are retroactive to Oct. 5. Three lump sum payments of 10 percent, 5 percent and 4 percent are to be paid on Dec. 15 of 1989, 1990 and 1991.

Experts offer solutions to IBM woes

By JOHN MARKOFF
N.Y. Times News Service

By nearly all accounts, the International Business Machines Corp. is in trouble.

Drastic measures are now in order if it is to keep its dominance in computers.

Some would even argue that the time has finally arrived for it to drop its stubborn preoccupation with the mainframe, perhaps even spin off its minicomputers.

Its ailing condition has become an obsession on Wall Street.

IBM's earnings have been sliding for several years now, falling to $5.8 billion last year, from $6.58 billion in 1984.

The stock, once the darling of Wall Street and long a symbol of stability, has never recovered from the stock market crash of 1987.

It closed Friday at 96⅞, down from a high of 175⅞ just before the crash.

The company's efforts to reverse its fortunes results have been greeted unenthusiastically.

Just last week, IBM's chairman, John F. Akers, told a group of analysts that the company planned to induce 10,000 workers to leave the company, would take a $2.3 billion special charge to improve the company's finances and would spend up to $4 billion to buy back its stock.

"We are fully prepared to take further actions if dictated by economic or business conditions," he said, suggesting that things could get worse.

When one IBM watcher pointedly asked Akers if the company's senior management was not the real culprit for its financial malaise, the chief executive bristled.

"I believe that a management team is measured by its ability to deal with the problems, and I believe we are identifying the problems and dealing with them," he shot back.

Many financial analysts called for far more draconian measures: staff cuts of 30,000, or even 50,000 employees and other severe cost reduction moves.

AT&T to cut 8,500 jobs

NEW YORK (AP) — American Telephone & Telegraph Co. plans to trim an additional 8,500 jobs from its work force in 1990 after cutting about 25,000 this year, the company confirmed today.

AT&T spokesman Walter G. Murphy said the company has been planning next year's reductions for some time and already has notified employees.

The Wall Street Journal reported on the cuts in today's editions and quoted unidentified sources as saying that they could be part of a wider work force reduction campaign in 1990.

Oil futures prices show no change

From Staff Reports

Crude oil futures rose 19 cents per barrel this morning on the New York Mercantile Exchange, following no changes from Thursday to Friday.

At mid-morning, the January contract for crude oil was $20.67.

The price of West Texas Intermediate Crude, the benchmark grade of crude oil closed on Friday at $20.50 per barrel, the same price at Thursday's closing. One year ago, the price of January contract was $15.84 per barrel.

However, on Friday, the price of crude oil futures had declined 22 cents per barrel at mid morning, to wind up with no change from Thursday.

On Thursday, the price of WTI rose 5 cents per gallon from Wednesday's close.

The No. 2 heating oil contract for January delivery rose nearly 2 cents on Friday from Thursday's close. Friday's price was 67.10 cents, compared Thursday's contract of 65.60 cents per gallon.

Energy analysts said cold weather as wells as strength in Europe's gasoil market continued to make U.S. heating oil attractive to buyers. Heating oil's strength gave the overall market a lift, they said.

Among other refined products traded on the exchange, wholesale unleaded gasoline for January delivery declined 0.25 cent, to close on Friday at 51.25 cents a gallong.

Dollar falls against most currencies

LONDON (AP) — The dollar fell today against all major foreign currencies, except the Japanese yen and the Canadian dollar, in light European trading.

Gold prices rose in quiet trading.

Traders said fundamentals have changed little from last week with the West German mark still strong against all currencies.

Trading will remain uneventful, dealers predicted, as the market winds down before the Christmas holiday season.

"I don't think much will happen anymore before Christmas, although the trend line shows it (the dollar) could move a little bit lower," said a trader at a large Frankfurt bank.

In Tokyo, the dollar rose even though traders said the Bank of Japan sold dollars to check the American currency's rise. The Bank of Japan, the nation's central bank, does not comment on its market activities.

The dollar rose 0.38 yen in Tokyo to a closing 144.65 yen. Later, in London, it was quoted at a lower rate of 144.57 yen.

In London, the dollar fell against the British pound. It cost $1.5835 to buy one pound, compared with $1.5793 late Friday.

Gold opened in London at a bid price of $412.90 a troy ounce, up from $411.55 bid late Friday. At midmorning, the city's five major bullion dealers fixed a recommended price of $414.00.

In Zurich, the bid price was $413.90, up from $409.25 bid late Friday.

Gold in Hong Kong rose 11 cents to close at a bid $412.26.

Silver rose in London to a bid price of $5.66 a troy ounce, up from Friday's $5.64.

Market chalks up moderate gain

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market chalked up a moderate gain Friday, aided by falling interest rates and new signs of sluggish economic growth.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials rose 10.66 to 2,731.44, winding up the week with a net loss of 16.21 points.

Advancing issues outnumbered declines by about 5 to 4 in nationwide trading of New York Stock Exchange-listed stocks, with 813 up, 646 down and 525 unchanged.

The Labor Department reported Friday morning that the civilian unemployment rate increased 0.1 percentage point to 5.4 percent in November.

The figures showed a gain of 210,000 in nonfarm payroll employment, after an October increase in jobs that was revised sharply downward to 93,000.

Analysts said that painted a picture of continued softness in some major sectors of the economy, apparently improving the chances for further moves by the Federal Reserve to relax its credit policy in the weeks ahead.

In the credit markets, prices of long-term government bonds rose about $5 for each $1,000 in face value, lowering their yields to the 7.87 percent-7.91 percent range.

BUSINESS IN BRIEF

Bush may relax technology import ban

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Bush administration is considering significant relaxation of a U.S. ban on high technology exports to Eastern Europe, Commerce Secretary Robert Mosbacher says.

Mosbacher indicated that Hungary and Poland could be two of the main beneficiaries of such a change. He said in a television interview that those two countries were discussing with U.S. officials how to prevent the transfer of militarily strategic items to neighboring Communist-bloc countries.

A change in U.S. restrictions would be designed to encourage the political liberalization in Eastern Europe and to deal with heavy pressure from U.S. allies seeking an easing of export controls to the Soviet bloc.

Government incorrectly cuts off benefits

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government incorrectly cut off cash benefits to some of the most vulnerable of America's poor — the elderly, blind and disabled — in more than half the cases reviewed in a study, the Social Security Administration said.

The findings suggest more than 10,000 recipients of Supplemental Security Income may have their benefits suspended each year "despite being unable to act or unlikely to understand" what they must do to continue receiving benefits, an agency report released Friday said.

European Community agrees to join forces

STRASBOURG, France (AP) — Leaders of the 12-nation European Community, closing ranks amid upheaval in Eastern Europe, agreed to press ahead with an economic and monetary union despite British opposition.

The decision Friday, on the opening day of a two-day summit, means the EC will convene a special conference in December 1990 to start negotiations for the adoption of a single currency and to set up a system of central banks.

The benefits of learning to use DOS

By PAUL H. PAUSE'

Pause'

I'm frequently asked "Do I need to learn DOS?" Or "My boss (co-worker, brother-in-law) says I don't need to worry about that stuff." Or, frankly, "DOS? Who needs it?" Well, frankly, you do.

DOS should be the very first thing you learn about your computer. Why, indeed? Because DOS makes your computer work. Period. The more you understand about how and why things work, the better off you are using ALL your programs. You can avoid a lot of questions and problems by knowing why things work the way they do.

When someone's been told it's a waste of time to learn DOS, the person giving the advice is usually a "power user" — the company computer guru. This is ironic, because this person already knows DOS very well — knows it so well, in fact, that he knows its shortcomings and has "graduated" to more sophisticated and powerful utilities to manage his computer.

I think the experts lose sight of a couple of things. First, they forget that knowing DOS is one of the things that makes it so easy for them to learn the ins-and-outs of the other programs.

Secondly, it's quite possible that learning and using some of the alternatives to DOS really isn't all that much easier for the "average" user than just learning DOS in the first place.

Finally, everyone has a copy of DOS — why spend money duplicating functions just to get a fancier package?

I find, too, that there are sometimes ulterior motives for not wanting someone else to learn DOS. Knowledge is power, and some people are reluctant to give up or share their ability to manage the computer with others. This attitude is a carry-over from the old days when a company's computer was a mainframe carefully insulated from the people who used it, and jealously guarded by white-coated programmers who protected their turf at all costs.

Times have changed, guys. Individual workstations NEED to be managed by the people using them (although there is also a need, of course, especially in very large, networked situations, for data base managers and MIS managers to coordinate efforts).

You may have been getting along without "using" DOS, so you're inclined to wonder "Why bother?" Actually, you use DOS every time you turn on your computer — it wouldn't work without it.

DOS is an acronym for Disk Operating System. An operating system is the master set of programs that controls the most basic operations of your computer.

DOS also provides us with a necessary set of utilities that allows us to manage our disks and files more efficiently. DOS determines how we can organize our files, how many files we can fit on a disk, even how large our disks can be.

DOS is the middle-man between the computer and our other programs. Most of those other programs wouldn't work at all if not for DOS (a few programs, mostly games, access the computer directly and bypass the operating system). It only makes sense that the more we know about something so vital and intimate to the workings of our computer and other software, the better off we are.

Many people seem to have a mental block against DOS or consider it something mysterious and unfathomable. Phooey.

DOS is just a program like any of our others. But instead of being designed to create spreadsheets or process your words, DOS's goal in life is to handle all the chores of directing information between you, your other programs, and various parts of the computer — i.e. your disk drives, the keyboard, memory, printers, etc. Like any other program, you just have to learn how to use it to take full advantage of the features it offers.

NOTES

If you use the same program every day, and it always comes up on the screen whenever you turn the computer on, you may think "This is all I ever do — why do I need DOS?" Well, whether you know it or not, someone used DOS to set up your computer so it WOULD load your word processor or accounting program (or whatever) every time. That program itself uses DOS every time you edit and/or save a file.

What if you ever do want to change the way you work with your computer? You'll need DOS to do it. What if you upgrade to a new version of the software you're using? I guarantee you, you'll use DOS to remove the old program files and install the new ones.

You say you don't need DOS because you just bought a fancy integrated program that does everything you'll ever want to do and that's all you need? Well, okay, let's open that new package. Hmmmm. The first thing it says is "back up these program disks and use the copies to install on your hard drive." Sounds like DOS to me. Oh, well, never mind that, what's next: "Create a subdirectory on your C: drive called 'niftynew,' make that your current directory, log on to your A: drive and copy all the program files to your subdirectory." Uh, DOS again? Riiiiight. The next thing it tells you is to "view the file called readme.doc on the main program disk for last minute changes to the program, or print a hard copy for permanent reference." Yep — DOS again.

I've seen manual after manual that refer you to DOS operations several times in the first few pages just to correctly backup and install the program. Why should you have to rely on someone else to do it for you? What if the company guru is on vacation for 3 weeks just when you need to backup some files or install a new program?

And then there's the day the boss comes in, and she wants copies of several account files to review on her own system. You put a floppy in the drive and get the dreaded "General error reading drive A — Abort, Retry, Fail?" message. Then you remember something about having to prepare new disks to hold data. Oh, yes, you have to FORMAT a disk first. Of course, this is a DOS operation.

What's the best way to learn DOS? There are several alternatives. Which one is best for you depends on your temperament and preferences.

There are LOTS of books on DOS, all available at a local bookstore, or at the library, if you prefer the "do it yourself method." One of the best is "Running MS-DOS" by Van Wolverton. This is published by Microsoft Press, the folks who write MS-DOS itself.

Many of the PC magazines include helpful columns and/or full articles on various aspects of using DOS. MIDA and Abacus computer stores offer DOS classes, and so does Midland College and the Permian Basin Graduate Center. Check around for fees, schedules, qualifications of instructors, etc.

Admittedly, DOS is not the easiest, most intuitive program to learn, and it does have its shortcomings. I'd be interested in hearing some of your experiences (good or bad) with DOS. Drop me a line at the paper with your DOS questions or comments.

Paul H. Pause' is a consultant and president of the Permian Basin Graduate Center in Midland. Questions for Computer Notes can be addressed in care of the Business/Oil Department, Midland Reporter-Telegram, P.O. Box 1650, Midland Texas 79702.

"The unity is still here because of the way the politicians have treated us," said Ms. Cantrell. "Everyone's been bought. That judge (U.S. Bankruptcy Judge Burton) Lifland, everything's gone their way. That's amazing to me. They won't even give us a spark of hope."

Their base of operations is now a dilapidated white wood-frame house about two miles from Hartsfield. It's been the Machinists' strike headquarters since a Nov. 26 rock-throwing fracas that resulted in the expulsion of a union "tent city" from airport grounds. There's no sign of progress in the strike.

"We're still out. We're gonna stay out," said mechanic Wayne Macie, who was at the small house decorated with anti-Lorenzo signs, a large U.S. flag and a 5-foot-tall Santa Claus poster. "The good part is, the guys are hanging together."

Macie said it was difficult to explain what has sustained the strikers through the lengthy walkout.

Indian business empire ready for power shift

N.Y. Times News Service

BOMBAY, India — In the 50 years that J.R.D. Tata has led the sprawling industrial giant that bears his name, he has molded it into India's most diverse and respected industrial empire under the slogan "growth with ethics."

These days, Tata, a small, sprightly, dapper 85-year-old, is gracefully stepping aside for a younger generation that includes more professional managers and fewer members of the founding family.

But he remains concerned about his corporation's public image and its financial well-being, developed over three decades in which Tata has dominated Indian industry and influenced political leaders by the force of his convictions and his insistence on quality and professionalism.

"He has led the field without a breath of scandal touching him in any way," said Russi Lala, secretary for a prominent Tata charitable trust who has written extensively about the family and the corporation. "What sets him apart is his sense of social ethics."

Tata has been honored by the Indian government and other organizations in India and abroad, most recently receiving the Daniel Guggenheim Medal in Seattle, honoring his contributions to international aviation. Tata founded, virtually single-handedly, Air-India 50 years ago.

A skilled pilot, Tata flew a Tiger Moth — a one-seat, single-engine turboprop plane — from Karachi to Bombay in 1932 in the first commercial flight across the subcontinent. Fifty years later, at age 78, he repeated the feat in the same plane.

Tata also supervised the expansion of his iron plant, doubling steel production and began a truck-manufacturing unit in collaboration with Mercedes-Benz, which builds 80 percent of India's commercial vehicles. He developed industries like chemicals, electricity generation and the farming, processing and distribution of tea.

Nowadays, Tata's products are varied, ranging from computers and tea to fertilizers, steel, cars, salt and soap.

Its holdings include some of the most highly regarded hotels in India as well as the Lexington Hotel in New York and the St. James in London.

One of its subsidiaries is collaborating with Pepsico Inc. to introduce its soft drinks and snack foods to India.

Tata's stock is considered the strongest on the Bombay Stock Exchange, the country's premier exchange.

The $2.7 billion empire has 41 major companies with operations in Singapore and Malaysia and consultancy and trading firms in London and New York. Tata's annual sales total about $4 billion, and it employs about 240,000 people.

The Indian Hotels Co., a Tata subsidiary that owns and runs the Taj group of hotels, is among the largest Indian multinationals operating in the West, with assets of about $470 million.

The company now plans to acquire a 380-room hotel in Los Angeles, buy a 100-room hotel in Paris, and acquire a majority stake in a Portuguese hotel company.

Some of Tata's profits are donated to cancer hospitals and laboratories for medical and other research. Tata's personal interests include birth control — he supports a research organization that advises the government on population problems — and fighting illiteracy.

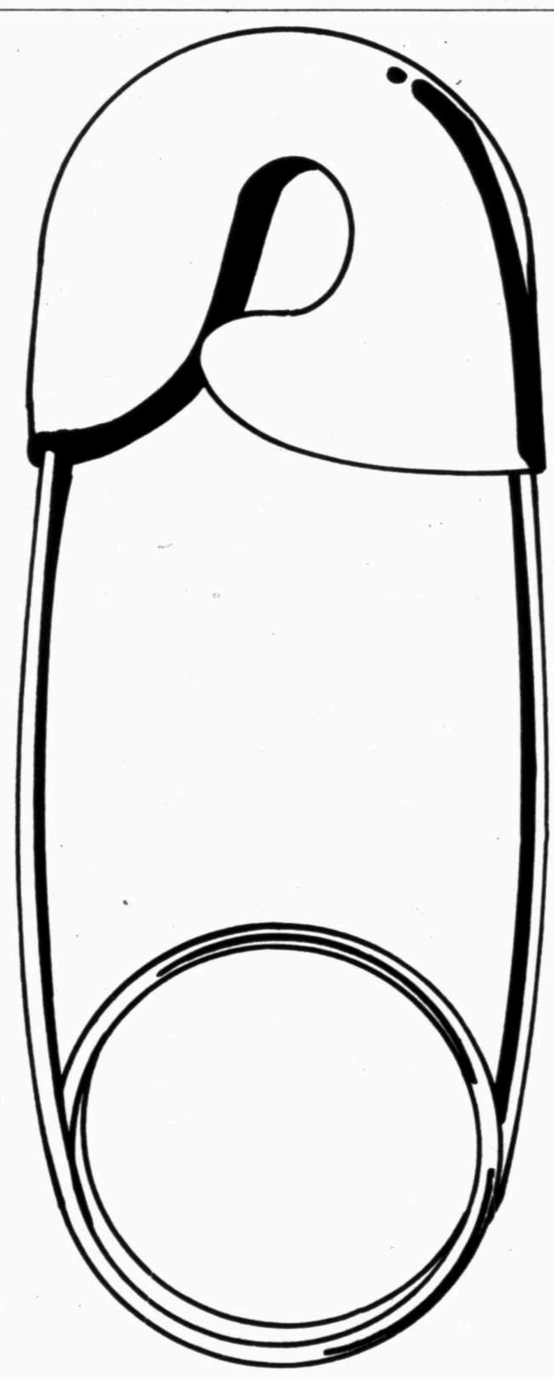
One recent afternoon, in his elegantly furnished office suite in the sprawling Tata headquarters in downtown Bombay, Tata reflected quietly on his life and work and looked at the future.

"My leadership was developed by consensus," he said. "When you deal with strong men, then you have to learn to work on the basis of consensus."

He no longer directs the daily affairs of his corporation, but "I see to it that they consult me" on important issues, he said.

The current managers include a nephew, Ratan Tata, who is deputy chief of Tata Sons, the conglomerate's main holding company, and the heir-apparent.

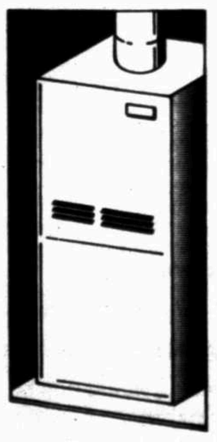
"Our major strength is our name," said N.A. Sonoowala, a director at Tata Sons and an architect of Tata's financial strategy for the future. Another strength, he said, is the loose federation of companies within the Tata group, "with a lot of independence given to professional managers."



Two of Mankind's Greatest Inventions.

We've relied on this fastenating little device since we were in diapers. But nobody's been sharp enough to invent anything better to keep us from falling apart at the wrong time.

Nobody's invented anything better than a gas furnace, either. Like all the great inventions, it's simple, reliable, and has stood the test of time.



A gas furnace quietly and efficiently does the job it was designed to do ... year after comfortable year.

The point is, no new gadget can do a better job of heating your home. For comfort and efficiency, the most effective invention ever made is a natural gas furnace. Period.

Touting clean air

AUSTIN (AP) — An expert on alternative fuels said Friday that cleaning up the air depends on the increased use of natural gas.

Enoch Durbin, a professor at Princeton University, praised Texas' new law that requires 90 percent of all transit fleets, bus fleets in large school districts and most state vehicles to be converted to natural gas by 1998.

"With supporters like Dr. Durbin, who have impeccable national and international credentials, I'm confident that the principles of the Texas clean air legislation will ultimately be included in the federal Clean Air Act," said Land Commissioner Garry Mauro.

'Country corporations' bring growth problems to hamlet

N.Y. Times News Service

SOMERS, N.Y. — This northern Westchester town, its hills still flecked with silos and old stone walls, is starting to realize the price it has paid for financial security.

Now that the IBM and Pepsi-Cola complexes are built, together representing more than 1.5 million square feet of office space, taxes are going down.

But traffic now clogs country roads. Land erosion causes flooding when it rains. Sometimes at night, the corporate lighting creates an eerie orange haze, or "sky glow." And during the day, the IBM complex is visible for miles.

"When you come up Interstate 684, you don't feel like you're in the country anymore because you see these four monstrosities on top of the hill," said William C. Harding, the town supervisor of Somers, referring to the lofty pyramids that crown the IBM complex, itself perched on a hill. "That has a devastating psychological impact."

The tensions in Somers have reverberated in recent years in many communities on the fringes of the New York metropolitan region. The heart of the issue is whether municipalities can achieve a balance between fostering economic growth and protecting their precious rural character.

At the start of the decade, while its neighbors clung to the countryside by barring development drawn by the construction of I-684 in the late 1960s, Somers acted instead to capitalize on that development.

And it went all out to attract Pepsi-Cola and IBM by rezoning almost 1,000 acres from resi dential to commercial use.

But now Somers has turned itself around on development, and town officials, residents, builders and environmentalists at tribute it to the impact of IBM, and to a lesser extent, Pepsi-Cola.

In electing Harding as supervisor in 1987, the town replaced the three-term Republican incumbent, Wayne Van Tassell, who had invited the two companies to town, with someone who had no government experience but was strongly anti-development and pro-environment.

Harding, a Republican, was re-elected last month, and the town board, whose majority had supported measures for growth for as long as anyone in Somers can remember, is now unanimously in favor of "slow growth" and protecting the environment.

Recently proposed environmental ordinances for the town would, if passed, be so tough on future builders that they have even been criticized by the Westchester County Planning Department as excessive.

But many in Somers, a town of 18,000, believe they have no choice.

"Somers burned its hand on the stove, and people asked whether we were really doing the right thing," said Harding, a 37-year-old biologist, who says his mission now is to stop developers from "attempting to pave every square inch" of the 33-square-mile town.

There is no question that residents are reaping the benefits of the town's expanded tax base, made larger because the self-contained office complexes do not drain police, fire or educational services.

One indicator is that despite a school budget rise of 21 percent over the last two years, school taxes, which make up two-thirds of the total prop erty tax bill, decreased by one-quarter of 1 percent in the same period.

This school year, 25 percent of the $19 million in school taxes was paid by the two companies.

"The fact that IBM and Pepsi-Cola are totally on the tax rolls is an overall boon to the school district," said Joseph Sabatella, an assistant superintendent. "We were able to put in new programs on all levels. Before you were seeing school tax increases of 7, 8, 9 percent a year."

In addition, the town tax will not rise at all next year, compared to the 5 to 6 percent increases seen earlier in the 1980s, but Harding credits the cuts he has made in town spending more than the new corporate taxpayers.

Some large property owners and builders accuse Somers of being elitist and selfish in its new hard-line stance toward development. They argue that after taking its money and running, the town is now frustrating smaller build ers who want to work there and young families who want to move there.

Others praise IBM and Pepsi-Cola for building on only a fraction of the nearly 1,000 acres in the two com plexes.

"A quarter of a century from now, the town of Somers will still look semirural, and one of the reasons, shockingly, is IBM and Pepsi-Cola be cause they have created so much green belt," said Jerry Billingsley, who owns a real-estate concern in Somers.

Many other residents, as well as town officials, have regrets, especially about IBM. But Pepsi-Cola has been a model member of the community, said Harding, with an intelligent, environmentally sensitive site plan and frequent contributions to the town, including a fireworks display last Fourth of July.

A nine-story building is used by 1,500 employees of the Pepsi-Cola Worldwide Beverage Corp. a division of Pepsico. Employee traffic enters and exits directly onto I-684, avoiding tie-ups in town, and the pink-granite complex is inconspicuously built into a hillside.

But the 1.2 million-square-foot complex housing the 2,200 employees of IBM's manufacturing and development headquarters is, according to the Somers Planning Director, Edward Burroughs, a "disaster," with problems of soil erosion, traffic and light pollution.

He added that mud and rain-borne oil from the 2,500 cars using the IBM parking lot have cascaded into the Muscoot Reservoir, which feeds New York City's water supply.

Asians replacing Western managers

By BETH HUGHES
Hearst News Service

SAN FRANCISCO — The days of the Western manager running a multinational firm's Asian office are waning. The new trend is the Asian expatriate.

Several international headhunters and human resources executives, speaking at a recent meeting of the Asian Business League in San Francisco, say that Asians are replacing Western executives at the Pacific Rim offices of multinational firms.

For example, the experts said that many middle managers and other professionals are fleeing Hong Kong because they are uncertain what will happen in 1997 when the colony reverts to China.

Singapore has provided safe haven, and is using some of that Hong Kong expertise to develop its financial markets. Sinaporeans see the vacancies created in Hong Kong as a chance to gain experience and the financial rewards that often come with working abroad.

Overall, the Asian expatriates fit a common profile, said William Whitney, executive director of Russell Reynolds Associates, an international executive recruiting firm.

Usually but not always born in Asia, they are fluent in an Asian language, have an undergraduate degree and an MBA from a top U.S. school and have five years management experience. They also tend to be sensitive to local issues, have an ability to relate to the local culture and are fluent in English, Asia's unifying commercial language.

Last year, in Russell Reynolds Hong Kong offices, "eight out of 10 of our successful candidates were of Asian origin, both expatriates and Hong Kong Chinese," Whitney said. "Five years ago, those same positions would have been filled by Western executives."

The most sought after Asian executives have expertise in finance, human resources, high technology and engineering. They are wanted in Thailand, Singapore and Malaysia, all countries undergoing rapid domestic expansion marked by the opening of multinational's local or regional offices.

There are several reasons for the growing demand for Asian expatriates, the experts said. One is that they are often cheaper to hire than their Western equivalents.

Whitney says they are also perceived as "less ethnocentric (than Westerners) about who's best for the job."

And they adjust faster than Western executives to their new surroundings. While there are cultural and religious differences, there is a similarity in the decision-making process.

But Asian expatriates face their own set of problems, said Anna Han, an attorney with McCutchen, Doyle, Brown and Enersen, who is fluent in four Chinese dialects and speaks some Japanese.

She established the firm's Shanghai office and confounded people unfamiliar with executive women by employing a British man as a secretary. As if that weren't enough, she discovered that as a representative of a foreign firm, she was expected to look foreign. But she doesn't. She looks Chinese, which is no big deal in China.

"The expectation is that you do speak the language," she said. The cultural expectation is similarly treacherous, especially for Asians who grew up outside Asia and are accustomed to American management and communication styles.

The flip side is, as an Asian, "having the ability to pick up what is not being said," Han said, which is often just as important as what is being said.

Search Exploration organized at Dallas

DALLAS (SWN) — Search Exploration, Inc. has announced that 33 limited partnerships and a publicly held company have voted their full approval to consolidate with Search to form a new SEC-registered oil and gas company in an exchange of stock valued at $25 million.

Joseph F. (Chip) Langston, President, said new shares of Search Exploration will be distributed to the participants in January 1990, and application will be made at that time for listing of Search's common stock on the American Stock Exchange.

An offer to exchange Search common stock for interests in the limited partnerships and for the common stock of Plano Petroleum Corporation (OTC) was successfully completed as of November 30, 1989. Exchange rates for the partnership interests were based on independent engineering estimates of reserves, prepared on SEC standards. Shareholders of Plano Petroleum voted to exchange 49 of their shares for one share of Search Exploration. Each share of Search Exploration was valued at $5.06 for purposes of the exchange.

As a result of the exchange offer's successful completion, Search now has approximately 5.04 million shares of common stock outstanding, held by approximately 3,000 shareholders. Consolidated revenues for the most recent 12 months were $5.0 million, of which oil and gas sales were $4.8 million. Total assets are $19.5 million, and shareholders' equity is $18.8 million.

Search consummated a three-year joint venture agreement in July 1989 with Houston-based Yuma Petroleum Company. The joint venture will develop a large number of potentially high reserve, Gulf Coast drilling prospects to be drilled in joint ventures with major oil companies and large independents.

Persons 'hooked on holidays' just heartbeats away from stress

By JOHN ENGSTROM
Hearst News Service

If you're not ready for the holidays, then stress, the season's personal nutcracker, will wrap it's pincers around you and squeeeeeeeze.

And you'll do like always — stand there, eyes-in-the-headlights frozen, get crushed and crawl into January a couple of heartbeats short of road kill.

But it's all in the name of joy and love, and we do love it — some of us maybe too much, like addicts.

At least one stress expert believes many people are so hooked on the holidays that this article and its companion tips will pass them by without inflicting a scratch.

"I can guarantee you, what you print in the paper they already know," said Dr. Gil Levitt, a surgeon for Seattle's Group Health Cooperative who teaches stress management classes on the side.

"It's like telling people to stop smoking cigarettes."

But, hey, what better season to rely on a little hope.

Levitt and other stress managers say there are some basics that will help.

First, knock off trying to do it all.

"In your childhood, you may have done a lot of different holiday things during the years," said Sharon LeVan, a program manager with Group Health's Center for Health Promotion. "But when you think about them, they get rolled into one and you try to do them all in the same year."

Whoa! Big mistake.

"We're such busy people," warned Rosemary MacGregor, a nurse who specializes in stress management and biofeedback. "Given the age that we live in, the spouse increasingly working, and more hours required at work, something needs to change."

NO BIG SECRET here. Sit down, talk to family or friends, figure out the few essentials that make the holidays special — maybe let each person pick just one — and set a simple agenda.

Then make a huge list of everything else that you normally do and throw it in the garbage. You'll feel better.

The next thing: Get some help.

Say you want to cut back on gift-giving or card-sending. Tough to do on your own. A lot easier if the parties on the other end join the plan.

"Look at how people make changes and stick with them," said LeVan. "The single most important thing is support. ... Most of us need help from other people. Few of us can do it by ourselves.

"The problem is, people don't feel comfortable asking for help."

So offer help to someone else. That way, they don't have to ask. But don't be the Saint of the Meaningless Gesture — "Gee, I'd like to help. Just let me know what I can do."

Sure. Like anybody really comes back and tells you.

Instead, offer specifics. "How about if I come over the day before the dinner and help clean house?"

Or if that embarrasses the host, "How about if I figure out the beverages, buy everything, set up a table and serve the drinks all day?"

Or, "You got the cooking? Well, we'll do the dishes, all of 'em. Stay away from the sink."

Levitt said it's best to focus special efforts and giving on a one-to-one level, tempered with understanding.

"If each family could just sit down quietly and think of a person or a situation, just one, that they could personally reach out to, someone in their own environment, and not make it a big deal," he suggested.

BUT HE ALSO warned, "Your offer of help might stress the other person. For example, my wife would be offended if someone offered to help clean her house. You have to realize that people may say no for their own needs."

It's not easy to approach someone and suggest a change in the usual order. But you may be pleasantly surprised at the reception.

"I have a friend who finally called his brother and said, 'We're not coming to the Christmas party this year,'" recalled MacGregor. "And his brother said, 'I'm so relieved that someone in this family finally had the guts not to show up. I think I'll go down and serve the poor that night. I'd much rather be doing that.'

"My own experience," added MacGregor, "has been one of never doing the same thing at Christmas. It's difficult to go back and repeat something. I evaluate each year who's going to be there, who isn't. I've learned to be very flexible about the season and make any changes necessary."

Finally, drop the martyr mask and take care of yourself. Nobody else will.

Sit is the operative word here. Early on, and periodically throughout the season, find a comfortable chair, plop down and start breathing slowly, deeply, from the diaphragm. You'll be surprised how quickly you begin to relax.

NOW START thinking, slowly and clearly, about what, exactly, you want out of the holidays. No frills. Just basic, real stuff. And how to get there. Then do it.

Who knows? You might even be able to call them "happy holidays" and mean it.

What a concept.

Here's a list of tips for avoiding holiday stress:

■ REMEMBER WHAT IS IMPORTANT. List three essential things that will make your holiday season special or fun. Concentrate your energy on them.

Ask children or other family members if they could have only one thing for Christmas, what would it be? Focus on those few things.

Give to those who need, rather than those who have so much.

■ AVOID OVEREATING and overdrinking.

Before going to a party, visualize the amount of eating and drinking that is comfortable for you. At the party, keep this picture in mind and ration yourself over the entire evening.

Eat regular, balanced meals throughout the season. Don't skip meals so you can eat sweets. If you bake, cut back your planned sweets by at least one-quarter.

Eat something nutritious before a party. Alcohol on an empty stomach, fed only with chips and dip, can be dangerous.

Set just one day at the office when everyone can bring sweets and high-calorie holiday snacks.

■ GET PLENTY OF REST and exercise.

Continue a regular exercise program, even if an alternative format is necessary. Rest and keep your regular sleeping hours as much as possible.

IF YOU GET rushed, stop and breathe deeply and slowly, from down in the diaphragm. You'll start to relax almost immediately.

■ REMAIN TUNED IN to your emotions.

Remember that you are in control of how you choose to feel.

Know that there will be delays, frustrations and disappointments despite, and sometimes because of, the holiday season.

Give yourself permission not to be with family if they're not nurturing. Or if your family is difficult, invite an outsider to keep emotions less volatile.

Share feelings of sadness, and discuss how to make the holiday season less painful.

■ PAY ATTENTION TO YOURSELF.

Spend time alone. Indulge yourself (in a non-food-oriented manner). Take time for meditation or relaxation.

Spend time with friends in normal settings.

Make appointments now for hair, cleaners, rentals, etc.

If you're the female in the family, don't expect to do everything for the holiday dinner. Ask everyone in the family what they'd like to be in charge of, then let them do it, and allow them to fail if that's how it works out.

If you feel depressed despite planning and precaution, talk to a clergyman or counselor.

Campus club offers mood, music, mocktails

Associated Press

MANSFIELD, Pa. — On weekend nights at the small state university here, students are drawn to a campus club — not by kegs of beer, but by music, dancing and socializing.

No alcohol is served at Zanzibar, as the chalet-like club at Mansfield University is called.

"It's a good place to meet guys that aren't drunk," says Joann Macaluso, a junior from Wilkes-Barre. Above the pulsing beat from a 120-watt stereo, she adds, "I love to dance."

Zanzibar, which is 2½ years old, is one of dozens of non-alcoholic clubs with bar-like atmospheres springing up at colleges and universities nationwide.

College administrators credit the trend to state laws that have raised the drinking age to 21, stricter rules about alcohol on campuses, changing student attitudes and the schools' recognition of alcohol abuse on campus.

Unlike the traditional campus snack bar or coffeehouse, many of the new clubs are outfitted with expensive sound systems, large-screen videos, neon, and other glitzy accouterments.

Many serve snack foods and "mocktails," alcohol-free cousins of strawberry daiquiris, pina coladas and frozen margaritas, in addition to sodas and seltzers.

Mary K. Ryan, associate director of university centers at the University of Wisconsin-Eau Claire, says these dry bars have to have the look and feel of the wet ones.

"The alternative has to be just as appealing as the real thing," says Ryan, the faculty adviser to Sneakers, the school's non-alcoholic dance club opened in 1986 at the request of students.

Creating a dance club can be expensive.

Gettysburg College spent about $300,000 to convert six bowling lanes below the swimming pool into The Dive, which opened in March with a glass-topped bar and plenty of blue neon, says B.J. Davisson, director of the college's Union Building.

Richard Blackburn, executive director for the Association of College Unions International, says these clubs face a daunting challenge in trying to keep students on campus and away from alcohol.

"It's difficult, and everyone realizes it," he says. "Some places have had some success with it. Some places have felt it's not been a very successful program."

Theodore's Nightclub at the University of Notre Dame tries to lure students with disc jockeys, comedians and novelty acts such as magicians, says Karen Leonard, adviser to the 4-year-old, alcohol-free nightspot.

Debbie Anderson, assistant director for program services at Purdue University, says schools need to provide alcohol-free outlets where students can shed their stress. Purdue opened B n G's last year after students approached administrators with the idea.

None of the administrators interviewed expects business at bars near campuses to go on the rocks a result of non-alcoholic clubs. But Ryan, at Wisconsin-Eau Claire, says these dry clubs provide a valuable education for students.

"Students are shown that socializing can take place without alcohol," she says, "and it can be every bit as much fun."

Collectible ornaments serve as keepsakes

By GLENDA WINDERS
Copley News Service

Tradition is what the holidays are all about. Trends come and go — a silver foil tree one year, all blue wrapping paper the next — but when families gather for the holidays, most want things to be the same time after time.

The Christmas tree is the hub of yuletide merriment, and the thrill of anticipation when the boxes of decorations come down from the attic never dims, no matter how many times we've seen them before. And whether your ornaments are elegant antiques or inexpensive satin balls from a discount store, to your family they are priceless.

If what you have now is a random ornament assortment that you haven't given much thought to, now is the time to begin collecting the treasures that will delight your family in the years to come.

CNS Photo

VINTAGE BAUBLES

According to Irena Chalmers in "The Great American Christmas Almanac" (Viking Studio Books), the earliest commercially produced ornaments appeared in the 1870s. Produced by German toymakers, diamonds, crosses and stars were fashioned from lead.

The first blown-glass ornaments were the result of glassmakers entertaining themselves by competing to blow the biggest ball. These were followed by embossed three-dimensional cardboard ornaments in the shapes of animals and cotton-batting figures of angels and Santas.

In 1892 the invention of Christmas-tree hooks revolutionized tree decorating, and shortly thereafter Sears began advertising ornaments in its catalog.

Prior to World War I most decorations were imported from Germany, but a wartime embargo created a market for American-made pieces. Corning was the first company to produce machine-made glass balls, turning out more in one minute than glass-blowers could in a day.

During World War II, however, Corning was unable to obtain the silvering used in its manufacturing process; thus clear glass balls were all that were available during this period.

MODERN ELEGANCE

Today the variety of "store-bought" possibilities is limitless. Lenox China, long famous for its holly-patterned Christmas dinnerware, now offers china adornments for the tree — a holiday ball, lovebirds for a newly married couple, a rocking horse for a child's first Christmas, a picture frame.

Lenox's crystal ornaments include an icicle, keepsake commemorative ornaments and bells topped with frosted glass angels, partridges and Santas.

The Lladro company, famous for graceful porcelain figurines, began a series of Christmas bells a few years back to the delight of collectors. At Neiman-Marcus you'll find a lead crystal snowman etched with the year by Baccarat and Lalique's frosted blue crystal displaying a relief of mistletoe boughs.

Also at Neiman-Marcus are ornaments to give. Present a hostess with a pierced glass apple that you have filled with potpourri. She can hang it in her closet after the holidays and have pleasant thoughts of you throughout the new year. Children will enjoy gold foil-wrapped chocolate Santas to be eaten when the tree comes down — if they can wait.

Perhaps the most popular and affordable of the Christmas collectibles, however, are the Hallmark series, created by the same people who produce all of those holiday cards. They have managed to create ornaments that capture the things and feelings we hold most dear.

THE HALLMARK collection premiered in 1973 with designs that featured the lovable Betsey Clark. Following that series came teddy bears, Victorian hearts, yarn dolls, trains, Raggedy Ann and Raggedy Andy, winter scenes from Currier and Ives, the Peanuts gang, Disney characters, stained glass, stockings, thimbles, rainbows, butterflies, needlepoint, forest animals and tiny buildings.

Each year new series are introduced and additional pieces are added. Last year saw the debut of the keepsake miniature series with tiny figures to collect and display. This year look for a German addition to the "Windows of the World" series, more charming shops to add to the "Old English Village," a tiny hanging creche and "Kittens in Toyland."

Hallmark has just come out with the fourth edition of its "Keepsakes Ornaments: A Collector's Guide." This is a must for people who take ornament-collecting seriously.

The book also includes a section on displaying ornaments in ways other than hanging them on the tree. Some of their suggestions: Use ornaments to decorate a wreath, bookshelf or mantel. Let them serve as place cards that dinner guests can take home. Create a festive centerpiece or decorate packages with miniature ornaments that serve as a second gift.

WHERE TO SHOP

Be creative in your quest for unusual ornaments. Haunt antique stores, museum gift shops, flea markets and garage sales. Most cities now have Christmas boutiques where you can shop year-round instead of just when the holiday press is on.

Commemorate special events with an ornament that will bring back memories in years to come. Specialty shops can help here with ornaments that reflect a marriage, the birth of a child or moving to a new house.

This year artisans are celebrating our renewed friendship with the Soviet Union by offering replicas of the exquisite Faberge eggs.

DEAR ABBY

Staying home for holidays cures family's travel blues

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: This is a belated thank-you. Several years ago, I wrote to you as the mother of three small children. My problem was that because of our parents' divorces and remarriages, my husband and I were on the road keeping everybody happy (except ourselves) from Thanksgiving through Easter. Christmas was horrible! One year, we were in three different states and drove 1,500 miles in eight days.

You told me that children need traditions and my husband and I should start our own — in our own home. That's exactly what we did. Thank you!

We still spend Thanksgiving with either his parents or mine, but Christmas is ours. The old train is under the tree, we open presents in our pajamas and enjoy each other and our children.

My husband travels much of the year, so being home and having few demands is doubly special. Keep up the great work! — KRIS PAIGE, YARDLEY, PA.

DEAR KRIS: Thank you for the thank-you. Several others wrote to say that they had decided to break the tradition of going to Grandma's for Thanksgiving and Christmas and celebrate the holidays at home. Were their parents disappointed or hurt? One Wisconsin grandmother wrote: "Thank God my daughter is having Dad and me at her house for the holidays this year. Now I can relax!"

DEAR ABBY: For almost 25 years of marriage, my husband has sulked off and on. Sometimes he's sulked for just a few hours, but there have been times when he would sulk for days and even weeks! When I'd ask him what was wrong, he usually didn't answer me, and when he did, I never got a civil answer.

Many times I've apologized without even knowing what he was mad at. I've even tried sulking myself to give him a taste of his own medicine. That didn't work either.

I told him he needed counseling, but he said I was the one who needed it, so I went. My therapist was very supportive, but stated that my husband needed counseling.

The only reason I've stayed in this marriage for so long is that between his sulking episodes, he's a wonderful, caring person.

I doubt if you can solve this problem, but maybe if he sees it in print, he will realize how much hurt he has caused me, not to mention the loss of happiness for both of us.

Our friends think I'm the luckiest woman in the world, but they have never seen this side of him. — SULKER'S WIFE

DEAR WIFE: Before you fault him, make sure there's no physical reason for your husband's periodic sulking episodes. If he hasn't shared this with his physician, he should. His periodic silent depressions may be caused by a chemical imbalance. It's worth exploring.

If there's no physical reason for his sulking, tell this "wonderful, caring" man that for your 25th wedding anniversary gift, you'd like him to see a counselor. (Sulking is a subtle form of abuse. He may be punishing you for something he's angry at himself about.)

Life is too short to waste precious time in long, unexplained silences. Please, take my advice and let me know what happens. I care.

CONFIDENTIAL TO S.S. IN INDIANAPOLIS: When a woman loves a man, she doesn't try to make him jealous. She tries to make him happy. Change strategies, or you're likely to make him disappear.

"How to Be Popular" is for everyone who feels left out and wants an improved social life. It's an excellent guide to becoming a better conversationalist and a more attractive person. To order, send your name and address, plus check or money order for $2.89 ($3.39 in Canada) to: Dear Abby, Popularity Booklet, P.O. Box 447, Mount Morris, Ill. 61054.

Christmas caroling combines worldly values with spiritual

Associated Press

Originally a ring dance celebrating winter solstice, the carol has a lusty, pagan exuberance that, according to Traditional Home magazine, caused early Christian clerics to label the songs "slings of the devil."

Carol lyrics, charged the clerics, were "worldly or worse." Feasting on boars' heads and drinking wassail and ale are recurring themes of early carols and the church lost no time in banning such songs. But the seasonal ritual of singing, not to mention the beautiful carol melodies and hearty refrains, refused to die.

In the spirit of joining what one can't suppress, St. Francis of Assisi adopted carols for use in a Christmas Eve midnight Mass early in the 13th century — after replacing bawdy lyrics with sacred revisions and inventions. And so pagan mirth was mixed, for the first time, with Christian devotion. The result has created some of the most memorable music of all time.

There is another story of the genesis of the carol. According to Christian legend, angels burst into song while proclaiming the Nativity to shepherds, thus spontaneously composing and performing the first Christmas carol: "Gloria in Excelsis."

This favorite tune is still occasionally referred to as "The Angel's Song."

Intermixed in the sacred canon of carols about angels from the realms of glory, shepherds watching flocks, and the star of wonder are songs of wassailers demanding brown ale, barley wine and cider from the householders they serenade.

Carols are more popular now than ever, their mixture of the spiritual and the worldly as appealing to modern sophisticates as it was to princes and peasants of old. It is, some scholars suggest, the carol's naive, uninhibited affirmation of both the sacred and the profane aspects of life that makes them so well loved.

President and Mrs. Bush talks to children dressed as elves while taping "Christmas in Washington" Sunday at the National Building Museum in Washington.

President calls Christmas '89 'moment to be remembered'

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Bush says new openings for democracy and peace around the world make this Christmas "a moment to be remembered."

"For 40 years the world has known only a grim and joyless peace, hard and cold," the president said Sunday. "But now, everywhere, you see signs of a warmer, more hopeful peace, like a candle which flickers in the distance. It beckons, encourages, casts a bright glow in the world's darkest corners."

Bush spoke on stage at the end of the taping of an NBC television special, "Christmas in Washington," that will air Dec. 18.

Flutist James Galway, singers Diahann Carroll and Olivia Newton-John, the U.S. Naval Academy glee club and the local Eastern High School choir provided the entertainment at the National Building Museum.

The show kicked off two weeks of parties and celebrations leading up to Christmas.

"Christmas in 1989 will be a moment to be remembered, a moment of new faith and freedom, new hope for peace," said the president, sporting a red and green tie.

"Change comes and challenges us. Freedom comes and lights a candle that must never be put out," said Bush.

"Let every candle we light, every hymn we offer, symbolize the hope of a new century, hope of mankind that there will indeed be peace on earth, goodwill, and the blessings of freedom for all people."

The event benefited the Children's Hospital National Medical Center of Washington. The show included taped footage of Mrs. Bush reading to children at the hospital's Christmas party last Wednesday.

The Bushes are hosting a congressional ball at the White House tonight, kicking off a nearly nightly series of holiday parties from now until Christmas, which the Bushes will spend at Camp David, Md.

Bush will light the national Christmas tree on the Ellipse this Thursday night, continuing a tradition that President Calvin Coolidge began in 1923.

Bush will also host a Hanukkah celebration at the White House on Dec. 21.
