Berri: U.S. must pull ships before hostages' release

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Nabih Berri, a leader of the Shitte Moslems holding 40 American hostages in Beirut, said today the captives will not be released until the United States pulls its warships back from the eastern Mediterranean.

Berri's demand added a new condition for the release of the Americans, now in their 11th day of captivity. Until now, Shiites have only demanded that Israel free more than 700 Lebanese prisoners.

Earlier today, Israel released 31 Lebanese from Atlit prison near Haifa.

Speaking to small group of reporters at his home in West Beirut, Berri dismissed the release as a "political zigzag."

He insisted the Shiites will not free the 40 Americans seized June 14 aboard a hijacked TWA jet until 735 other Lebanese behind bars in Israel have been released.

Berri, who is also Lebanon's justice minister, said U.S. Ambassador Reginald Bartholomew telephoned him today to reiterate that Washington would not publicly pressure Israel to free the prisoners, who are mostly Shiites.

Berri said: "The advance of the 6th Fleet towards our shores forces us to add one more condition — this time for the Amal movement — and that is the withdrawal of the 6th Fleet from our coast."

In Washington, Deputy Press Secretary Robert Sims said Berri's latest demand will not change U.S. policy, which he said is not to deal with terrorists.

Asked if the new demand was a troubling development, Sims said: "It's troubling that they're continuing to hold these innocent people...It's complicated enough already."

The Pentagon has confirmed that a U.S. flotilla led by the aircraft carrier USS Nimitz is in the eastern Mediterranean. It was dispatched after the TWA Boeing 727 was hijacked by Shiite extremists on a flight from Athens, Greece, to Rome.

The warships are reported about 25 miles off Lebanon's coast.

On Saturday, Berri accused the United States of planning a "military operation" in Lebanon. He made the charge after F-14 fighters from the Nimitz were reported to have flown over Beirut, a charge the Defense Department denied.

The 31 prisoners freed by the Israelis were turned over today to representatives of the International Red Cross at Ras el Biyada, five miles north of the Israeli border.

Officials in Israel said release of the prisoners was not intended as part of a deal with the sky pirates. But Israeli sources said it was aimed at providing an opening to end the impasse, which began with the hijacking of a TWA jet with 153 people aboard.

In an interview today on ABC-TV's "Good Morning America," Israeli Foreign Minister Yitzhak Shamir said the rest of the Lebanese prisoners "will be released when the situation in the southern part of Lebanon improves."

Bodies examined for clues to crash

CORK, Ireland (AP) — Helicopters and rescue ships pulled scores of bodies from the cold North Atlantic and forensic experts began examining them today for clues to what caused the crash of an Air-India jumbo jet carrying 329 people off Ireland.

Officials said saboteurs may have set off an explosion on the flight, which originated in Toronto, Canada. All those aboard were feared dead.

The airline's offices in London and New York said the flight carried 307 passengers and 22 crew members. The airline said 278 Canadians were aboard, almost all of Indian descent.

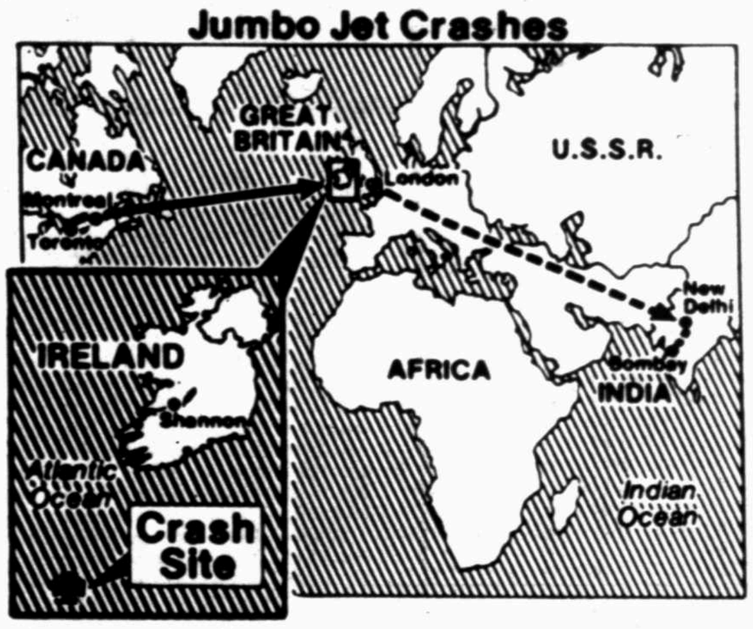
Also on board were at least 28 American residents, including seven U.S. citizens.

Authorities said 130 bodies were found in a massive sea and air search Sunday and today. Earlier, authorities had reported the recovery of 131 bodies, apparently because one had been counted twice.

"The examination of the bodies involves extensive tests because the possibility of crime cannot be ruled out," said Joe Jennings, director of the Irish Government Information Service.

A British Royal Navy doctor, Lt. Richard Cribb, said bodies he saw were "badly shattered and broken but all in one piece. Deaths were very swift, if not instantaneous."

Helicopters ran a grisly airlift from the crash site to the southern Irish city of Cork. There, burned and broken bodies were carried through pelting rain to a temporary morgue in an airport building.



The Boeing 747, traveling from Montreal to London's Heathrow Airport, plunged into the ocean 120 miles southwest of the Irish coast.

Top Indian aviation experts arrived in Cork today to lead an investigation in which British, American, Irish and Canadian experts will take part.

Air-India officials were flown over the crash site by an Irish air force plane, said Brian Considine, a spokesman for the Marine Rescue Coordination Center at Shannon, Ireland.

Indian Civil Aviation Minister Ashok Gehlot said Sunday the crash appeared the result of an explosion. He noted that wreckage was scattered over a five-mile radius.

"Sabotage is a distinct possibility," he said.

A Spanish radio station serving fishermen today said it overheard the captain of a Panamanian container ship reporting he had seen an aircraft explode in the sky.

Jesus Ferreiro, director of the Onda Pesquera station, told The Associated Press in Madrid that a radio employee had overheard the conversation between captain Esteban Fraile and the ship's London agents.

"He heard Fraile say that he saw an explosion in the rear of an aircraft which then turned two somersaults and fell into the sea," Ferreiro said, adding Fraile was heard saying: "We are now en route toward the point where I think the plane went down."

He said the radio operators did not speak with Fraile, and did not know the name of the ship or its agents.

Salman Haidar, a spokesman for India's Foreign Ministry, told reporters in New Delhi the government was aware of anonymous claims made to news organizations in the United States and Canada in the name of the Kashmir Liberation Army, the All-India Sikh Students Federation and the Sikh 10 Regiment, believed to be the same group as the Punjab-based "Deshmesh Regiment."

Freed Lebanese praise God for their release

RAS EL BIYADA, Lebanon (AP) — Thirty-one Lebanese prisoners freed by Israel today knelt on a beach and praised God for their release. They said they had not heard of the hijacking of a TWA flight and the holding of 40 American hostages.

Shiite Moslem leaders have said that the American captives now held in Beirut will not be freed until Israel liberates all the Lebanese it holds. The Israeli Cabinet agreed Sunday to free the 31, leaving 735 still behind bars.

Israel insisted its decision to free the 31 was not linked to the hijackers' demands, and was simply part of the ongoing process of freeing Lebanese taken across the border before the end of Israel's three-year occupation of Lebanon.

The prisoners, wearing red-striped track suits, were handed over to International Red Cross officials at 1 p.m. at Ras el Biyada, the northernmost checkpoint in Israel's "security zone" in south Lebanon.

They were then transported in a hired yellow school bus flying a Red Cross banner nine miles north to the port of Tyre, where the prisoners jubilantly knelt on the beach and prayed.

The Lebanese later left the bus in Tyre shouting "Allah Akbar," meaning "God is great," and gleefully displaying freshly untied white plastic wrist ropes.

Fight for 'color blind society' not yet over

DALLAS (AP) — The fight for equality and a truly "color blind society" for their children is not over for blacks, NAACP Executive Director Benjamin L. Hooks said.

In a keynote address to the NAACP convention Sunday night before several thousand people overflowing a Dallas Convention Center ballroom, Hooks urged blacks to oppose a "hostile" administration in Washington and help make a better life for themselves and their children.

"We have not ever received full justice, full equality, full parity," he said. "How can anybody say we've made it? We still have a long way to go."

As in the past, Hooks lashed out at the Reagan administration for "turning back the civil rights clock." Cuts in social programs and attacks on affirmative action have given "aid to the enemies of civil rights," he said.

But he also told blacks they have problems of their own to solve.

"We must address the problem of our young people being able to recite the lyrics of everything that Michael Jackson and Prince sing, but not what's in their schoolbooks."

We must train students for the computer age, he said, but first teach them to read and write in English.

We must address teen-age pregnancy, he said, which keeps blacks "mired in poverty."

"Unless we act to deal with this dilemma, our entire race will bear its effects through the 21st Century," Hooks said. "They must understand that having babies when you're a teen-ager is simply not cool."

Discovery's international crew guides shuttle to perfect landing

EDWARDS AIR FORCE BASE, Calif. (AP) — Discovery's international crew swooped out of orbit today and guided the space plane to a perfect dawn landing on a desert runway to conclude a flight hailed as one of the most successful of the 18 shuttle missions.

As the shuttle rolled to a stop, it dug a six-inch-deep trough in the sand, indicating a repetition of the brake problem that has rerouted the landing site of the shuttle from Florida to this desert base.

Five Americans, a French test pilot and a Saudi Arabian prince touched down at 6:12 a.m. PDT, after a weeklong, 2.9-million-mile journey during which they launched a record four satellites and their ship served as a laser target in the first "Star Wars" space shuttle test.

"We are very proud of those accomplishments," commander Dan Brandenstein said earlier. No other shuttle crew had launched more than three satellites.

Jesse W. Moore, shuttle project director, told reporters "this was one of the most successful missions of the shuttle program...It was a fantastic flight. All of our objectives on this flight were achieved. The crew successfully launched three communications satellites, and the Spartan satellite should give astronomers a lot of scientific information.

"It was outstanding, and Discovery continues to prove that it is a magnificent flying machine," he added.

Two loud sonic booms cracked the air as Discovery descended into Edwards, its fuselage glistening in the morning sun as it circled overhead and made its approach.

"Nice job, Dan, welcome home," Mission Control radioed as the shuttle rolled to a dusty stop.

The shuttle kicked up a rooster tail of dust as it rolled down the runway and the main landing wheels gouged a trench six inches deep as they braked to a stop. Moore said the digging in might have resulted from soft, wet sand or once again a landing gear brake may have locked up.

Because brakes locked up on a Discovery during an April landing on the concrete runway at Florida's Kennedy Space Center, NASA is returning all shuttles to the softer wideopen Edwards lakebed until the brakes have been redesigned.

Moore said that if the brake had locked up, "I would be concerned about it. If we had not been on the soft lakebed... At Kennedy, we may have drug a tire...and blown a tire."

Thirty-eight minutes after touchdown, the astronauts, smiling and waving, departed the cabin. They made a brief inspection of the spaceship and then departed by van to a nearby facility for showers, a change of clothes and physical examinations.

On hand to meet the shuttle were 10 Saudi Arabian princes, including four brothers of Prince Sultan Salman Al-Saud, who was one of two foreign passengers in the seven-member crew. The other is Patrick Baudry, a French Air Force pilot.

The astronauts spent most of Sunday stowing gear for the return trip and sightseeing. They got so far ahead of schedule in tidying up the cabin that Mission Control granted their request for an extra hour's sleep today.

Haidar said the reports "are under investigation" but refused to elaborate.

In the Sikh holy city of Amritsar, a Sikh extremist leader called the anonymous telephone statements "vicious lies."

"The 10 Sikh gurus have taught us not to kill the innocent and the weak...These are allegations intended to defame the Sikh sect," the 74-year-old Joginder Singh told a reporter.

Nearly an hour before the Air-India plane went down, a bomb concealed in baggage from the Canadian Pacific flight from Vancouver killed two baggage handlers at Tokyo's Narita Airport. Canadian officials said the device was a bomb and the plane probably escaped disaster because it landed 15 minutes earlier than scheduled.

"There may be linkage between the two" events, Gehlot said. Canadian officials said the possibility was being investigated.

The Toronto Globe and Mail reported today that Indian officials suspected both incidents were the work of two Sikh fugitives wanted by the FBI in connection with an alleged plot to assassinate Indian Prime Minister Rajiv Gandhi.

The newspaper quoted unidentified Indian government officials as saying one of the fugitives had a ticket for the Tokyo-bound Canadian Pacific flight. They said he did not board the flight but his baggage apparently was loaded.

It said the other fugitive arrived in Toronto before the Air-India plane took off from there for Montreal.

Air-India's Montreal manager, Derek Menezes, said 29 people on the flight had boarded the plane there from Vancouver.

The plane was scheduled to refuel in London, then fly to New Delhi and Bombay. It was delayed leaving Montreal by air traffic control problems and was scheduled to have been in London's Heathrow Airport at the time of the crash.

Air-India's managing director, Capt. D. Bose, said today in New Delhi the airline would offer to fly relatives of those killed to Ireland to help identify the remains. Earlier, an Air-India spokesman in Bombay said bodies of victims would be flown there Tuesday morning.

The first group of relatives of Air-India passengers arrived in London today on their way to Cork.

Aviation, public have 'pretty bad week'

NEW YORK (AP) — Airline officials say the string of hijackings and bombings this month capped by the mysterious plunge into the Atlantic of Air-India Flight 182 is one of the most extraordinary in aviation history.

"The world has had a pretty bad week," summed up Daniel Henken, a spokesman for the Air Transport Association in Washington, which represents scheduled airlines in the United States.

Jerry Cosley, spokesman for Trans World Airlines, whose Flight 847 was hijacked more than a week ago, said Sunday, "I don't recall a period of time of 6 to 9 days where we've had this number of diverse...events occur. It's extraordinary."

In Europe, Dr. Hans Krakauer, senior vice president of the 105,000-member International Airline Passenger Association based in Rotterdam, Holland, said, "I think we are facing a serious threat (to aviation) and I don't think we are out of it. There may be more to come."

The International Air Transport Association called an emergency security meeting in Montreal this week, IATA spokesman David Kyd said Sunday.

"We will be looking at the number of very tragic incidents over the past few weeks and try to determine where security needs to be strengthened even further," he said.

The IATA said Flight 182 was the first commercial jet to crash on the trans-Atlantic route. Air-India in New York and London said there were 307 passengers and 22 crewmembers aboard. Several were American residents, including a family of five from Detroit. No survivors have been found.

The string of airline incidents began June 12 when Shiite Moslems hijacked a Jordanian airliner in Beirut, and continued the next day when a Palestinian commandered a Middle East Airlines jet in retaliation. No one was injured in either of those incidents, but the cockpit of the Jordanian airliner was ripped apart by a bomb blast after the hostages were released.

On June 14, the TWA jet carrying 145 passengers and a crew of eight was hijacked on a flight from Athens, Greece, to Rome.

After shuttle flights between Lebanon and Algeria, and more than a week of drama, 40 Americans remain captive in Beirut, held by Shiite Moslem terrorists who have demanded that Israel release 766 prisoners.

Wednesday, at Frankfurt airport in West Germany, two children and an adult were killed when a powerful explosion ripped through a busy passenger departure hall. A radical ecological group opposed to airport expansion claimed responsibility.

On Friday, a Norwegian domestic flight was hijacked on a flight from Trondheim to Oslo. The hijacker gave up after releasing all 115 passengers in exchange for beer.

Then came Sunday's double dose of airline tragedy.

The Air-India Boeing 747 jumbo jet plunged into the Atlantic off Ireland, with all on board apparently dead. Meanwhile, baggage on another flight also originating in Canada exploded at Tokyo's Narita International Airport, killing two luggage handlers and injuring four others.

Belachheb remorseful '24 hours a day'

HUNTSVILLE (AP) — Abdelkrim Belachheb says he cannot remember firing his gun on six people in a Dallas restaurant last year, but he feels remorse for the incident "24 hours a day."

Belachheb, a 40-year-old Moroccan national, is serving six life sentences in the Texas Department of Corrections Ellis II unit for the June 29, 1984, killings.

"They say I don't have remorse, but I punish myself every day," he told The Dallas Morning News.

A prison official said Belachheb is "just like every other prisoner, except he seems to go on a hunger strike fairly often." The inmate is in the fourth week of his third hunger strike since he started serving his term.

He appears to have aged 20 years and lost 20 pounds since he began serving his term, The News reported Sunday. A guard had to bring him in a wheelchair recently when a reporter interviewed him at the unit.

Belachheb was convicted in the slayings of six people at Ianni's, a north Dallas nightspot. He was sentenced to six consecutive life terms plus 20 years and says he feels remorse "24 hours a day."

Prison Col. D.D. Sanders said Belachheb is "having difficulty adjusting" to prison life.

"Sometimes he interprets an officer doing his job as harassment. He takes the pat searches as an insult," Sanders said.

He spends most of his time sitting alone in his 8-foot-by-10-foot cell. He says he reads historical and political books when he feels well enough, and prays to Allah, who he is not sure is listening.

Reagan's political fortunes improving

By EVANS WITT
AP Political Writer

An Analysis

WASHINGTON — In the ebb and flow of political fortunes, the tide on Capitol Hill may be swinging back a bit in President Reagan's direction.

Following a string of losses and retreats early this year, Reagan has won victories in fights he cares deeply about: aid to the Contra rebels in Nicaragua, funds for production of new chemical weapons and money for the "Star Wars" defense program.

To be sure, there are legislative hurdles still ahead on each of these matters. But Reagan turned around a big loss earlier this year on Contra aid, winning approval in the House two weeks ago for even more money than had been rejected the first time.

And the House, which rejected any money for new nerve gas weapons in each of the last three years, turned around last week and voted funds for the binary gas weapons. Limited and restricted money, yes, but approval nonetheless. Those restrictions may well be dropped in the conference with the Senate on the nerve gas money.

In addition, the Senate turned back any and all efforts to cut money for the Star Wars space weapons plans, and the House agreed to major spending for the program.

These victories are a relief for an administration that has seen its proposal for more MX missiles cut again and again, that was forced to retreat repeatedly on its defense spending request, that saw the GOP-led Senate reject its budget and work out a new one and that was forced to veto a farm bill it tried unsuccessfully to stop.

On Contra aid and on nerve gas, Reagan pushed hard.

"I've got President Reagan's tire tracks down my back," said Rep. John Porter, R-Ill., a longtime opponent of the nerve gas production.

It is easy to make too much of Reagan's recent victories. It was also easy to make too much of his defeats earlier this year.

Strategists from both parties talked of the rise and fall of the president's fortunes on the Hill, fluctuations that may be difficult to tie to any one factor or complex of factors.

But the dance of legislation this year has been different from the years of Reagan's first term, even with the past few weeks.

For example, Reagan's push for higher defense spending stalled on the Hill this year. Following tales of $600 Navy ashtrays and worse, the Republicans in the Senate led the way in whittling down Reagan's budget request for the Pentagon for fiscal 1986 from nearly 6 percent in real growth all the way down to no real growth.

Of course, the political tides that sweep the nation's capital are neither inevitable nor irreversible.

External events — such as the Beirut hostage crisis — can have a profound impact on congressional action. And the internal dynamics of the Congress itself can shift and turn for reasons totally within the walls of the Capitol.

But, for now, President Reagan is enjoying more success with the Congress than he has all year.

ISRAEL

Once the men arrived at Tyre's Red Cross headquarters on a beach near the ruins of the ancient port, they rushed out, knelt on the white sand and began traditional Islamic prayers.

"I didn't believe that I was going out," said Karim Sakmani, 20.

He, like others questioned by reporters, said he did not know about the June 14 hijacking of the TWA plane now in Beirut.

"We didn't know about the hijacking or any other kidnapping," he said. "We haven't read newspapers since two weeks."

"We didn't know we were being released until 7 a.m. this morning. Yesterday we were in cells."

The prisoners were mostly bearded with their hair clipped in prison haircuts.

Those freed today included 25 Shiites and six Sunni Moslems, according to an Israeli government official who spoke on condition of anonymity. Before the release, 766 prisoners were held in northern Israel at Atlit jail, of which 570 were Shiites, 147 were Palestinians and the rest were Druse, Christians and Sunni Moslems, the source said.

All were rounded up by the Israelis during their occupation of south Lebanon. The prisoners were taken into Israel when the Israelis closed down their detention camp at Ansar in south Lebanon.

Abdul-Majid Saleh, a Politburo member of the Shiite Amal movement, welcomed the homecoming prisoners to "the land of south, the land of the honest who defeated Israel and forced its withdrawal."

"We will not accept that this is going to be the last batch released," Saleh said. "All our men must be released so the Americans will be freed."

He added: "We have treated the 40 Americans as guests. Amal is a mediator for humanitarian reasons in the case of the Americans."

Prime Minister Shimon Peres and Defense Minister Yitzhak Rabin, in separate interviews on American television programs Sunday, maintained that today's prisoner release was not a capitulation to the hijackers.

The military command in Tel Aviv announced that some of the prisoners were freed after completion of questioning by Israeli security forces and others according to an appeals board decision. The army communique also said Israel would "continue its policy of freeing detainees according to the security situation in the area as was announced when the detainees were moved" to Israel last April.

Israeli sources who spoke on condition they were not identified said the decision to free 31 of the prisoners was a "test case" to see whether Lebanese Shiite leader Nabih Berri has the power to make the Shiite hijackers free any of their American hostages.

Publicly, Israel has said the resolution of the hijacking is an American problem. This view was put forth again today by Police Minister Haim Bar-Lev.

"The ball isn't in Israel's hands," Bar-Lev told The Associated Press in an interview in Jerusalem. "The plane is American. The passengers are American. We are definitely worried like the rest of the Western world, and we are ready to help the United States in any way we can, but the United States has to say in what way it wants us to help."

Bar-Lev said Israel had no legal basis to continue holding the 31, because investigations had showed there was no grounds for indicting them. But he said he would not object to their release being seen as a goodwill gesture.

"Whoever wants to see it as a gesture can see it as a gesture," he said. "The fact is that these are people who were held in Israel without any legal reason."

Berri's militia holds some of the 40 American hostages, but others were believed to be held by more extreme Shiite factions.

Berri said Sunday the hostages would not be freed until Israel releases all of its Arab prisoners.

"Sometimes you feel the entire world looks on Israel as though by its very existence it's guilty of things that happen to other people," Rabin said at a charity gala for soldiers in Tel Aviv on Sunday night. He added that "everyone also expects Israel to do something" about many events with which it has no connection. His remarks were aired on Israel Radio.

The decision to release the 31 prisoners was made amid increasing calls in Israel for the government to make some response to the hostage crisis.

"It's a legal process, but it doesn't have a plan or a timing. We have to see how it proceeds," Shamir said.

Those freed today included 25 Shiites and six Sunni Moslems, according to an Israeli government official who spoke on condition of anonymity.

Before the release, 766 prisoners were held in northern Israel at Atlit jail, of which 570 were Shiites, 147 were Palestinians and the rest were Druse, Christians and Sunni Moslems, the source said.

Akef Haidar, Politburo chief of the Shiite Amal militia, told reporters today's prisoner release was not enough to break the deadlock.

Haidar, asked how many prisoners Israel would have to free before some of the hostages were released, said: "It's not like buying a house on credit.

"The hostages are not in danger. But this (situation) should not last for too long," Haidar said.

Israeli officials claim the Lebanese prisoners planned or carried out attacks on Israeli soldiers in south Lebanon, and have said they will be released as part of Israel's disengagement from Lebanon.

Israel has withdrawn all but about 100 of its troops from its northern neighbor.

At the Beirut airport, gunmen aboard the TWA jetliner demanded a doctor to attend one of the three American crewmen who was suffering stomach pains.

"Tell the doctor to keep his mouth shut. He should not talk to the press," a gunman in the cockpit told the control tower. "Otherwise we'll cut his tongue out. I'll make his wife a widow."

The airport physician, Dr. Albert Zbouni, boarded the plane escorted by Amal officials. He came out 10 minutes later, but did not speak to reporters.

Zbouni had examined the three TWA crew members on the plane Sunday. An airport official who requested anonymity later quoted Zbouni as saying the three hostages were "OK."

"The only thing physically bothering them is mosquito bites. They have plenty of scars," Zbouni reportedly said.

NAACP

Black unemployment is still double that for white workers, he said, and almost 50 percent of black youths are out of work.

The median income for black families is only 56 percent that of whites, he said.

Less than 2 percent of all lawyers and doctors are black, he said.

But although he described times as "gloomy" because discrimination has kept minorities out of economic parity with whites and from positions of power in private business and government, Hooks said the NAACP is strong enough to overcome.

"We have three times as many people here as the last convention (in Dallas in 1954). We have young people from 290 cities here — over 1,000 young people participating in the convention," Hooks said.

"The national press won't report that. They say we're struggling to attract the young," he said.

More than 10,000 visitors are expected in Dallas for the five-day convention, the 76th annual meeting of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People.

Sharpened on the often-violent struggles against public discrimination and violation of civil rights in the 1950s and 1960s, the NAACP now hopes to defeat today's more hidden racism.

Critics have charged that fluctuations in NAACP membership and an inability to attract youthful professionals have damaged the organization.

Pilot tried to warn of impending crash

STATE

TEMPLE (AP) — A pilot tried in vain to warn two small planes that they were dangerously close to colliding moments before the single-engine Cessnas crashed in mid-air, killing one man and injuring two others, authorities said.

The accident occurred as both planes were making a final approach to the runway at Draughon-Miller Municipal Airport about 4:20 p.m., said patrolman Terry Kelley of the Temple Police Department, who was investigating the crash.

"The airport has no tower and pilots are responsible for letting each other know their positions," said Kelley.

Authorities identified the dead pilot as Steven L. Morris, 34, of Killeen. His passenger, Gregory A. Arzola, 30, of Fort Hood, and the other pilot, Shannon A. Schunicht, 23, of Killeen, were critically injured. Officials at Scott and White Hospital at Temple said Arzola and Schunicht were in critical condition early today in the intensive care unit of the hospital.

Kelley said that according to witnesses the two single-engine Cessnas were making a final approach to the landing strip and one plane was flying slightly above the other.

The pilot of a third plane noticed the two aircraft were flying too close together and tried to radio them but received no response, Kelley said.

As the planes neared the ground, "their wings touched and they both went down," Kelley said.

"We don't know why they got so close. They might have been on each other's blind side," said Steve Klempa, Temple deputy police chief.

Morris and passenger Arzola were on board the Cessna 150, and the second aircraft, a Cessna 152, contained only the pilot, Kelley said.

Morris was pronounced dead at 5:30 p.m. at Scott and White Memorial Hospital in Temple, said hospital spokesman Donald Nelson.

The crash occurred 150 to 200 feet north of the airport runway, the officer said. He said officials had not determined the altitude of the planes at the time of the collision.

DFW, American Airlines beef up airport security

GRAPEVINE (AP) — The Dallas-Fort Worth International Airport and American Airlines have instituted extra security measures in the wake of the hijacking of TWA Flight 847.

Armed guards are now posted at two American terminals that serve nearly 60 percent of the airport's passenger traffic. In addition, American has placed a 24-hour hold on all business freight coming from Frankfurt, Germany, and Paris, and a two-day delay on personal freight.

Although no hijackings have originated at D-FW, airport officials said the current hostage drama has increased vigilance among employees who screen an average of 88,000 passengers daily.

"The airport is mindful of the events that have occurred overseas...and is committed to providing a safe environment for the traveling public," airport spokesman Joe Dealey Jr. said.

The entry once monitored by an intercom system and now watched by armed security guards is at terminals 2E and 3E.

American killed in Guadelajara buried today

FORT WORTH (AP) — A funeral service was scheduled today for Alberto Radelat, one of two young Americans police believe were killed after they walked into a restaurant in Guadalajara, Mexico, where a reputed drug lord was giving a party.

Radelat, 32, was reported missing Jan. 31 after he failed to make a flight from Guadalajara to Dallas-Fort Worth. Ten days later, his parents began an exhausting search that ended in sorrow last week in a stuffy, fly-infested morgue in the Mexican city.

There, the bodies of Radelat, and his 36-year-old companion, John Walker, of Minneapolis, were identified. Authorities said they had been tortured before they were killed.

Officials told Radelat's parents — Dr. Felipe Radelat and his wife, Ana — that the men were victims of reputed Mexican drug figures who believed the men were informants because of their dark coloring and North American accents.

Radelat had been relaxing in Mexico after earning enough money to finish dental school. He had been spending his time with Walker, a disabled Vietnam veteran who was living in Mexico so he could afford to finish his first novel — a murder mystery.

The elder Radelat said of the state judicial police and the state attorney general in Guadalajara, "They were just giving us the runaround. We were three weeks (in Guadalajara) and we went to every jail and every hospital, and the attorney general kept saying, 'Oh, he will show up.'"

After nine days in Mexico, the Radelats were told by police that Walker's car had been found in Plaza del Sol, a busy tourist and shopping area.

Radelat said at that time, the U.S. consulate wasn't much help, as officials were busy with the kidnapping of U.S. Drug Enforcement Administration agent Enrique Camarena Salazar and his pilot.

In mid-May, the couple flew to Washington to meet with officials in the State Department and the DEA.

"That was what pushed the people in Washington to put more pressure on the Mexican authorities," he said.

On June 6, the U.S. Embassy announced that Rafael Caro Quintero, the reputed drug kingpin charged with Camarena's kidnapping, had been charged with killing Walker and Radelat.

On June 9, police arrested Francisco Tejeda Jaramillo, one of Caro Quintero's bodyguards. Both later confessed to killing the two Americans.

Milton awaits death for liquor-store shooting

Associated Press

Eight years ago, Menaree Denton was shot and killed as she and her husband struggled with a gunman who ordered them to empty the cash register at their Fort Worth liquor store.

Today — exactly eight years to the day of the shooting — the man convicted of capital murder in her death, Charles Milton, is scheduled to be moved to a small cell at the Texas Department of Corrections Walls Unit in Huntsville to await the carrying out of his sentence — death by injection.

"It's been a long time," says Leonard Denton, who also was wounded in the 1977 incident that took his wife's life. 'These delays, I don't appreciate them at all."

Milton, 34, from Fort Worth, would be the fourth Texas prison inmate to be executed this year and the eighth since the state resumed executions in 1983.

The early Tuesday execution date is the third for Milton, who has been on Death Row for more than six years. His case has gone through the appeals process twice.

"Eight years and before the U.S. Supreme Court twice ought to be enough," says State District Court Judge Tom Cave.

Fort Worth police: Arrested man not suspect in missing women cases

FORT WORTH (AP) — Authorities in Fort Worth say they're "convinced" that a man arrested last week in connection with one of several women who have disappeared or been murdered in the last nine months was not involved in more than one killing.

Michael Wayne Goodin, 19, was arrested last Wednesday and charged in connection with the death of Lisa Lynn Griffin, 20.

Miss Griffin's body was found Jan. 9 by railroad workers in southwest Tarrant County. She had been shot in the head.

Tarrant County Sheriff Don Carpenter said Saturday that Goodin gave authorities a one-page statement about Miss Griffin's killing and led them to the exact spot where her body was discovered.

Miss Griffin is one of several women whose deaths or disappearances are being investigated by a Fort Worth police task force.

ANSWERS TO WEEKLY BRIDGE QUIZ

Q.1 — As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠A6 ♡K4 ◇K5 ♣AKQ9873
The bidding has proceeded:

North	East	South
Pass	1 ♠	?

What do you bid now?
A. — In light of the auction, we would give up all thoughts of slam. Indeed, even 11 tricks at five clubs might be out of reach. We think that your best chance for game lies at three no trump. An ace in partner's hand, or even a second spade stopper, would give you nine tricks off the top. Bid three no trump.

Q.2 — East-West vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠AK6 ♡K10854 ◇K ♣AK65
The bidding has proceeded:

South	West	North	East
1 ♡	Pass	2 ♡	Pass
3 ♣	Pass	3 NT	Pass

What would you bid now?
A. — If you simply bid four hearts, we won't fault you — the point of the question is that, despite your powerful hand and partner's positive rebid, you must give up all thoughts of slam. Why? Because it sounds to us that partner's values are in diamonds and spades, and that he has three low hearts. The choice now is between games, and we would choose three no trump — nine tricks might prove easier than 10.

Q.3 — Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠762 ◇A8542 ♣AK963
The bidding has proceeded:

South	West	North	East
1 ◇	Pass	1 ♠	Pass
2 ♣	Pass	2 NT	Pass

What do you bid now?
A. — Obviously, you don't like no trump, but you shouldn't take a preference to a suit that partner has not rebid when you hold only three low cards in that suit. Tell partner that you have at least 10 cards in the minor suits by rebidding three clubs.

Q.4 — Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠J ♡AQ10652 ◇AJ63 ♣83
The bidding has proceeded:

North	East	South	West
1 NT	Pass	3 ♡	Pass
4 ♡	Pass	?

What action do you take?
A. — Even though partner has shown a minimum no trump opening with trump support (with a maximum he would have made a cue-bid rather than raise to four hearts), you could easily make a slam if you don't have two fast losers in clubs. Your distributional values are worth one move. Cue-bid five diamonds. If partner cannot accept the invitation, you have done your duty.

Q.5 — As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠QJ54 ♡AK8532 ◇95 ♣6
The bidding has proceeded:

South	West	North	East
1 ♡	Pass	1 ♠	Pass

What do you bid now?
A. — Obviously, you have two problems here: Do you rebid hearts or support spades? If the latter, is a simple raise sufficient? We don't feel you can afford to suppress good four-card support, so we would certainly raise spades. At the same time, we don't think you are strong enough in high cards to do more than raise to two spades. While that might risk missing a game, a jump to three spades could easily propel the auction to an uncomfortable level.

Q.6 — Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠AK102 ♡5 ◇KQ83 ♣AJ105
Your right-hand opponent opens the bidding with one spade. What action do you take?
A. — You have no safe action. A double would probably elicit a heart response from partner, and it is too risky to overcall at the two-level on a four-card suit. Pass and see how the auction develops — you might be able to double profitably later if the opponents become incautious.

Madonna to wed 'true love' Penn

NEW YORK (AP) — Singer Madonna, of rock music, movie and bellybutton fame, has a new engagement — not to appear in concert again, but to marry actor Sean Penn, columnist Suzy reported today.

Madonna, 24, will tie the knot in August with her beau of many months, Suzy said in today's editions of the New York Daily News.

The pair can't wed any sooner because Penn, who starred in the film "Fast Times at Ridgemont High," will be in Atlanta until August filming his new movie, "At Close Range," while his bride-to-be waits for him in Los Angeles, Suzy said.

Madonna, whose full — and real — name is Madonna Louise Ciccone, has told her friends this is true love and she's thrilled about it, Suzy said.

The hot new star, who set a record for fastest sellout of concert tickets — it took all of 30 minutes — at Radio City Music Hall, entered the movie business with favorable reviews in the title role of "Desperately Seeking Susan."

Suzy also said Madonna and Penn have plans, unannounced as yet, to star together in a movie called "Pipeline," set in the Alaskan oil fields.

Madonna, who has inspired a fashion trend among her female fans of lace, corsets — worn as outerwear — and midriff-bearing tops, has sold nine million copies of her two albums.

BURBANK, Calif. (AP) — Mark Lindsay, a bricklaying British actor unknown to American audiences, and Japanese-American actress Kim Miyori, who was Dr. Wendy Armstrong on "St. Elsewhere," will star as John Lennon and Yoko Ono in a new NBC-TV movie.

"Imagine: The Story of John and Yoko" goes into production July 8, John J. McMahon, executive producer for Carson Productions, said in a release Sunday. It will be broadcast in November.

Lindsay, currently working in London as a bricklayer, has appeared in several British television productions and in English regional theaters.

The three-hour story of Lennon, the former Beatle who was shot to death in December 1980, and his artist wife will be filmed in New York and London, McMahon said.

SOMERVILLE, N.J. (AP) — Former automaker John Z. De Lorean is expected back in court Wednesday, to make a legal claim that New Jersey is his home.

If the judge agrees with him, the question of the property settlement from his divorce from Cristina Ferrare will be settled in this state, where an ex-spouse can receive anything from half a share to nothing.

Ms. Ferarre, 35, wants the case settled in California, where the community property law would guarantee her half the assets acquired during their 11-year marriage.

At stake in the dispute are a 430-acre estate in the New Jersey community of Bedminster, a Fifth Avenue co-op apartment in New York and property in California, with a total value estimated at more than $10 million.

De Lorean, 60, who was acquitted last year of cocaine-dealing charges, says he lived in Los Angeles only temporarily while he was on trial there.

BUZZARDS BAY, Mass. (AP) — Jacques Cousteau says pollution is still destroying the oceans and people must take action before it is too late.

"As a whole, one can say that things are still deteriorating, but the speed at which they are deteriorating has slightly slowed down," the French explorer told 188 graduates Saturday at Massachusetts Maritime Academy.

Cousteau, 75, said deterioration of sea life stems mainly from pollution from land. Most people are aware of the damaging effects of toxic chemicals on the sea but do not understand that pollution in the land makes its way to the sea, he said.

Bumper snicker

In a society in which the automobile is the primary means of transportation, it's understandable that a novelty such as the bumper sticker will become virtually a means of communication. That certainly is the case in the United States where bumper stickers now proclaim nearly — nearly — everything and in so doing are becoming a bit of a hazard!

In fact, it's hard these days to find a car that doesn't have a bumper sticker pasted on it. Our highways have become flooded with moving billboards, and instead of watching the road, some drivers are straining their necks trying to read the messages. Come on, admit it; haven't you done that a time or two?

Time was that the back portion of a car was reserved for the license plate and car registration. Occasionally a faded bumper sticker from a past election might sneak by.

But now motorists proudly advertise their favorite passions, restaurants, religions, sporting teams and odd expressions. There is a bumper sticker for everyone — and every cause!

Bumper stickers have really multiplied in recent years and, in many instances, they're localized, such as "Welcome to California, Now Go Home." Here in Texas a favorite from a few years back read "Native Texan" and in Midland no small number of vehicles boast "America: Love Her or Leave Her" and "The sky's the limit in Midland, Texas."

Radio commentator Paul Harvey even capitalized on the bumper sticker phenomenon by adding his own featured anecdote which he bemusedly titled "bumper snicker."

With all this reading material now gracing city streets and highways, perhaps yet a new sticker — "I Brake For Bumper Stickers" — is needed on bumpers to help prevent rear-end collisions.

Athens question

Greece has often been called the cradle of democracy, a claim that no less an authority on political history than the late U.S. Secretary of State Dean Acheson once dismissed as pure hogwash. Except for supplying the root word for the term, Greece in all its long history has never made a significant contribution to democracy as it is experienced in the United States and Great Britain.

Still, the current Greek government and its apologists in this country continue to fall back on this spurious legend in defending the operation of the Athens airport where armed hijackers boarded TWA flight 847. With an air of aggrieved sanctity they brand as over-reaction any questions raised by the Reagan administration regarding security at Athens' airport.

The United States does not stand alone in pressing these questions and in warning travelers of the risks of landing in Athens. Pilots from airlines all over the world are demanding that Athens be stricken from their itineraries until its airport improves security measures.

Considering the overt hostility of Greek Prime Minister Papandreou to this country and his consorting with the Palestine Liberation Organization, the United States, moreover, would be justified in inquiring if the seizure of TWA flight 847 was facilitated by collusion between Athens airport officials and the murderous thugs. That is a question to which the free world demands an answer.

Another View:

Drug war's 'recruit'

The rule in our society — a fundamental and distinctive feature of our system — is that the military should not be used to enforce the law. That limiting tradition is as important to the military as to citizens concerned with civil liberties. The few familiar exceptions come in times of great duress: to patrol after natural disasters, to put down riots, the occasional use of troops in the 1950s and 1960s to enforce civil rights.

Now there is talk of a new exception: expanded use of the military to block drug traffic into the country, particularly from Latin America. Adm. James D. Watkins, chief of naval operations, reports that the Joint Chiefs of Staff have unanimously recommended it. If the producing countries were willing, the services would help them train teams and lend or sell them equipment to suppress production. U.S. planes and ships would also step up surveillance — the services already do some, as adjuncts to the Coast Guard — to block the shipment of drugs. "It could be a rallying point for this hemisphere," the admiral said.

It is a tempting idea. Drugs are a curse, and our law-enforcement agencies lack the resources to do much more than nick the trade. It would help enormously to have the military — and foreign governments — actively on their side. The dollar cost to the military would be relatively low. The surveillance would be good exercise; presumably it would not be allowed to detract from other military missions.

The problem would be to keep it that simple. Drug interdiction should not be intertwined with other issues. Adm. Watkins suggested the drug trade was helping to finance leftist insurgencies in the hemisphere, making the trade "a national security problem" and so a legitimate target for the military. There is no need for that kind of coloring; the drug trade is bad enough on its own. Whatever the military is asked to do about drugs ought to be kept separate from what it is asked to do in other areas.

A second complication involves what the military would do. The chiefs would have the military act only as a kind of spotter for law-enforcement agencies. Others think the Navy should actually stop, search and seize; a pending amendment to the defense bill in the House would empower it to do so. That, too, is tempting, but the proposal has not been thought through. Against whom would the military use force, under what rules, in what places, on what legal grounds? Good answers are needed before Congress votes. The reason the amendment is attractive is that the military is so powerful. That is also precisely the reason why the military is so sparingly used in this country.

Friend maintaining anonymity

WASHINGTON — The United States has a staunch Middle Eastern friend who is unknown to most Americans.

Jack Anderson

Sultan Qabus bin Said, the 42-year-old absolute ruler of Oman, the Kansas-sized desert nation at the eastern end of the Arabian peninsula, doesn't proclaim his pro-American sentiments from the palace rooftop in Muscat. But he is on the U.S. side when it counts.

Oman was one of two Arab states that gave public support to the 1979 Camp David accords between Israel and Egypt. And in 1980, the sultan agreed to let the United States stash military equipment at strategically located bases, which can be used for intelligence gathering, communications and as staging areas for U.S. rapid-deployment forces in the event of a Persian Gulf crisis.

The sultan's friendship with America has cost him more than Arab resentment. We have learned that more than a year ago the Saudis, evidentally jealous of their perceived status as No. 1 U.S. ally in the Arab world, offered Oman $2 billion if the sultan would put a little distance between his country and the United States. The highly secret bribe offer was rejected.

Qabus is the very model of a modern enlightened Arab leader. Educated at Sandhurst, the British military college, he brought back some Western ideas that were too progressive for his isolationist father, Sultan Taimur bin Said. The old man, a fundamentalist fanatic, kept his son under virtual house arrest for more than a year. Finally, with the help of the British and particularly of an old Sandhurst buddy, Timothy Landon, Qabus overthrew his father and began laboriously bringing his 900,000 countrymen into the 20th century.

When Qabus seized the throne in 1970, Oman had just 5 miles of paved road, three schools and no health facilities worth mentioning. There are now more than 2,000 miles of paved highway, another 8,000 miles of graded roads and more than 460 schools attended by both sexes. The country has six major hospitals and 230 other health centers.

The young sultan also extinguished a guerrilla movement in the southern province of Dhofar that was supported by the Soviets and their satellite, South Yemen. The British played a crucial role in this as well, along with some help from the shah of Iran.

The Saudis were not pleased with Oman's progressive and independent course. They consider themselves a sort of Big Brother to the smaller Persian Gulf states, maintaining their dominance by the judicious expenditure of petrodollars. Oman, whose oil reserves are piddling compared to its more fortunately situated neighbors, seemed a likely prospect for such dollar diplomacy.

According to a top secret CIA report, the Saudis kept promising Oman development funds, but tied their largess to the removal of Iranian troops from Dhofar province. The shah's closeness to the Americans had always worried the Saudis, and they apparently didn't want their little Omani neighbor following the shah into the CIA's pocket.

Qabus was eager for the Saudi development money, and the deal was "all but signed," the CIA noted. But the Saudis were "playing a game with Qabus — withholding assistance until the Omani sultan (saw) the light and (sent) the Iranian troops" home.

The arrangement fell through, leaving the sultan professing "to be mystified by Riyadh's handling of the matter."

Our sources say it was Landon, the sultan's Sandhurst pal, who was largely responsible for the 1980 agreement that allows the U.S. bases in Oman. He also pressed for further cooperation on a visit to Washington in the first weeks of the Reagan administration.

But we have learned that Landon has been relinquishing his role as Omani-U.S. mediator recently. Sources say he had nothing to do with behind-the-scenes shenanigans to give a British firm the lucrative caretaking contract to operate three U.S.-financed bases in Oman.

WHAT'S IN A NAME?: Since 1959, Regina H. Meredith has compiled a .500 win-loss record in 10 political campaigns for various offices in New Jersey. Things looked a little grim this year, however, when she failed to get the Republican organization endorsement for Mercer County representative on the state GOP committee. Yet she beat her opponent by a 3-to-1 margin. Meredith attributed her triumph to being better known, and to the coin toss that put her name higher on the ballot. Others point out that for the first time Meredith included on the ballot her maiden name: Haig — as in Alexander Haig Jr., her kid brother.

RUSSELL BAKER

To fuss or not to fuss

NEW YORK — Dr. Harold J. Liverworth, world's foremost authority, has comforting news for fussy men. In his new book, "Fuss Without Fear," the doctor urges such men to "fuss to their hearts' content" and ignore "so-called scientific studies" suggesting that fussiness shortens life expectancy, spoils outdoor picnics and reduces the amount of time spent watching television.

Russell Baker

"Nonsense" is Liverworth's reply to these gloomy findings of the Fuss Research Institute Foundation, for whose scientists the doctor clearly has little respect.

All their data, he notes, come from experiments on laboratory mice. And fussiness in mice, he maintains, is so different from fussiness in men that data about a fussy mouse's behavior at a laboratory outdoor picnic can tell us nothing useful about how a fussy man might behave.

Liverworth's book deals only with fussy men. "As a friend of the feminist movement," he writes, "I was reluctant to study fussy women without permission from Carla Calzone, founder of the Fussy Women's Liberation Caucus and author of the best-selling 'I Fuss When I Please.' Ms. Calzone withheld that permission, but assured me that if I left fussy women to her she would not attempt to beat me into print with a best seller on fussy men."

Ms. Calzone's kindness meant that Dr. Liverworth did not have to do a hasty, slapdash piece of research to race a competitor for the best-seller-buying audience. As a result, we have a thorough, scholarly study as splendid as any of the 124 books the doctor has produced in the last 13 years, including "Taming the Adolescent Male with Pants Suspenders," "Auto Transmissions: Metaphor for Modernity," and "How High-Carbohydrate Eating Affects the Mood of Expense-Account Auditors."

One always hesitates to quarrel with the doctor, and fortunately "Fuss Without Fear" contains very little that needs to be challenged. However — and let us hope the doctor will take this in good spirit and not be provoked to write another book like "Hack Journalists: Causes of the Rot In America's Moral Fiber," as he was when my review of "Auto Transmissions" criticized him severely for not examining what the loss of the automobile running board had done to America.

... however, as I was saying, though generally sound this time, Liverworth is talking through his hat when he says President Reagan is "proof that a fussy man needn't alienate friends and family, but may indeed be loved by millions."

By what standard does the doctor classify Reagan as "fussy"? Well, says the doctor, he is "extremely fussy about presenting a dynamic but cheerful impression in the presence of cameras."

So what? The Fuss Foundation's mice experiments showed that even mice — all mice, unfussy as well as fussy mice — became intensely fussy about creating a good impression when cameras appeared.

Very well, Liverworth sneers at the Fuss Foundation's mice studies, so let's discard the nevertheless valid comparison of mice and president and cite human cases.

Specifically, the case of my friend Vanikker, widely known on both coasts, the Riviera and in Illinois as a man so unfussy that he will have two martinis before dinner, then waste a great Bordeaux by pouring it across his anesthetized palate.

An unfussy man, obviously. But draw a camera on him and, lo!, "Not 'til I comb my hair!" he cries. I once saw Vanikker panic when a snapshot fiend caught him wearing a short-sleeve shirt with button-down collar open at the throat, without necktie.

"Wait," he shouted, "until I find out what the right kind of people do about the button-down collar when the necktie is off."

Did they button it, or leave it unbuttoned for an effect of Ivy League insouciance? How did I know? Why should I, though a fussy man myself, care about something so trifling?

Vanikker did. He absolutely refused to let the shutter click until he had called the Princeton Club, long distance, for a consultation. Opinion there was divided. The result? Vanikker changed into a different shirt.

I cite the case only to prove that Liverworth errs in supposing that fussiness in the presence of cameras makes President Reagan a fussy man. All men are fussy when the camera aims their way, for what the camera produces can be kept as evidence, and who among us wants the evidence to tell the truth about us?

What's more, no truly fussy man, on becoming president, would ever mistake one of his Cabinet secretaries for a visiting mayor.

LETTERS

Flag routine not covered

What a disappointment in the coverage given to the Flag Ceremony conducted at a local nursing home June 14th — Flag Day.

An American Legion Auxiliary member was called on Thursday and asked if they could have a flag ceremony for the residents the next day. (I might mention that it was the efforts of a 13-year-old that made the initial call as well as arranging for news media to cover the event). The auxiliary arranged to have four Boy Scouts come out and do the actual flag raising but the auxiliary member talked with approximately 55 residents and employees of the nursing home regarding the origin of the flag, what the letters F L A G stand for and how Flag Day itself came about.

Neither the TV nor the newspaper made any mention of the American Legion Auxiliary's participation. In effect, it appeared the Boy Scouts were the only ones present.

Just what does it take to get the media out to let the public know what the veteran organizations are doing in the community? What does the Garden Club or Bridge Club do for the community or the veteran and his family?

Why is it we cannot get the media out when we take time from our jobs to present a program to an entire school and donate 24 flags to the school? Where do you think the flags that stand in the courtrooms come from? No wonder no one shows up on Memorial Day for services at the cemetery. The only coverage mentioned was what was going on around the country. Who do you think puts out 1,300 flags on veterans' graves at dawn and picks them up after the services? They invested in our country, do we dare do less?

I realize we can't have a reporter come out every time we make a donation but do feel we are entitled to some coverage when we do something special.

Let trained help animals

In response to June Dotson's letter of June 18th, I heartily agree that we should accept the responsibility of injured animals, but I disagree on her recommendations. Approaching a fear- and pain-crazed bundle of teeth and claws is not a good idea, no matter the reasoning. Neither is moving an injured animal without the training to determine the extent of its injuries (just as it is not wise to move an injured person). The Animal Control people are trained and should be called.

Our primary responsibility to animals is preventative. Have your animal spayed or neutered to control the population of unwanted animals. Keep your animal under control so that its natural instinct to wander does not take him into the path of disaster, and to protect other animals, people and property. And, for heaven's sake, and the animals, don't leave your pet in a car in the heat to suffocate!

And a word for those people who can't bear the thought of taking a pet to the Animal Shelter when it is unwanted, and instead turn it loose in the country or other neighborhood: Abandoned animals probably do more damage to wildlife than their natural predators. Stray cats would rather eat bird eggs and baby birds (quail and dove) than chase mice and rats. Dogs will raid chicken coops and trash barrels rather than chase a jackrabbit until it drops. And a pack of dogs will bring down a small deer or young calf if hungry enough. At least at the shelter, the pet has a chance for a new home.

Thanks, Midland, for your responsible concern.

Senate to consider easing gun control

NATION

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House will be plowing through a huge Pentagon spending bill again this week as Congress prepares to wrap up business and head home for a Fourth of July recess.

The Senate will debate the always-hot issue of gun control before it breaks for the recess, tentatively set to begin Friday.

The House still has two major areas of controversy — military procurement reform and anti-satellite weapons — before it finishes the huge bill authorizing the Pentagon to spend $292 billion in the fiscal year starting Oct. 1.

That Democratic-proposed budget is $10 billion less than the defense spending plan approved by the Republican-controlled Senate and the two versions will have to be reconciled by a conference committee.

Meanwhile, the major item on the Senate's calendar will be a proposal by Sen. James McClure, R-Idaho, to slash the federal limits on firearms and gun dealers imposed by the 1968 Gun Control Act.

That law, passed after the assassination of Sen. Robert F. Kennedy, put strict limits on interstate sales of guns and requires that extensive records be kept by gun dealers.

McClure, in sponsoring the changes, said, "the ones who bear the brunt of this law are not necessarily the most dangerous criminals. The ones who have been harassed by the enforcement of this act are often innocent men and women who have bungled their paperwork."

A chief opponent is Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., who has lost two brothers to assassinations by gunfire. Kennedy has opposed similar legislation in past years.

But Jerry Tinker, a Kennedy aide, says the two sides are working toward a compromise over items such as lifting of regulations on guns used for sport, such as rifles and handguns, while keeping the limits on handguns.

Meanwhile, the House-Senate conference committee on the budget was resuming work today to find a compromise on a 1986 budget resolution that will satisfy both houses on the hot issues of defense spending and Social Security.

Four injured as jet dives to avoid crash

GRAND RAPIDS, Mich. (AP) — A twin-engine plane disappeared after it nearly collided with an American Airlines jetliner over Lake Michigan, officials of the Federal Aviation Administration said today.

The oncoming propeller-driven aircraft forced the sudden dive of Flight 803 from Chicago's O'Hare Airport Sunday evening, injuring four of the 70 people aboard, said Dan White, an American Airlines spokesman.

The Boeing 727 was able to land safely at its planned destination at Kent County International Airport, White said. However, the whereabouts of the second plane remain a mystery, according to Mort Edelstein, a spokesman for the Federal Aviation Administration in Chicago.

"There is no information on the second aircraft at this time," he said. "We just don't know."

FAA spokesman Bob Handschiegel in Chicago said an investigation has begun on the near-collision "based on the information the FAA has."

FAA officials were unable to determine the origin and owner of the smaller plane.

NATION IN BRIEF

NEA: Teachers need tests to 'face reality'

WASHINGTON (AP) — The president of the nation's largest teachers union, saying it is time to "face reality," is seeking support for a plan that would require all new teachers to pass a certification test.

Mary Hatwood Futrell says she will press the 7,000 delegates to the National Education Association's annual convention, which opens this week, for a clear endorsement of such a test.

In the 1970s, the 1.7-million-member union opposed standardized tests for students and teachers alike, claiming the tests were biased and blocked equal opportunity. The NEA has gradually backed off on that hard-line stance.

Sakharov may be ill

BOSTON (AP) — Soviet dissident Andrei Sakharov suffered what might have been a stroke during a hunger strike last year and was told by doctors he would become an invalid, his wife has told relatives in a letter.

The letter was written in November by Sakharov's wife, Yelena Bonner, but did not reach her son and daughter until last week at a human rights conference in Ottawa, said her son, Alexey Semyonov, of suburban Newton.

Physicist and Mobel Peace Prize winner Sakharov and his wife have been under house arrest since 1980 in the city of Gorky, which is closed to foreigners.

Sirhan admits regrets

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Seventeen years after killing Robert F. Kennedy, Sirhan Bishara Sirhan says he still can't recall pulling the trigger but accepts sole blame and, for the first time, acknowledges "great sorrow" over it.

But he also says there is a lack of balance in a system that frees Dan White, the killer of San Francisco Mayor George Moscone and Supervisor Harvey Milk, and keeps the Jordanian immigrant behind bars.

He called on the state Board of Prison Terms to give him back a parole date revoked three years ago.

Whiteside nails down dramatic WT title

By TED BATTLES
Sports Editor

Not only was it the longest playoff in West Texas Men's Amateur annals, those who witnessed the Ranchland Hills Country Club drama unfold concur it probably was the most dramatic in the 57-year history of the event.

It was more than six hours after they had started and there was no end in sight as Steve Whiteside and Bob Estes lined up their putts on the sixth extra hole, the day's 24th after they had finished at 278 in regulation.

Estes was on in three and maybe eight feet from the cup. Whiteside had arrived on the green by way of Outer Mongolia in three, too, but was 40 feet away.

He nonchalantly rammed in the impossible putt, as he had been doing the last nine holes and everybody prepared to move on to the seventh extra hole.

But Estes' putt, a 'gimme' the way these two were playing, slid past the cup and almost unbelievably it was over.

Whiteside, the ex-Midland Lee and Texas Aggie golfer, had brought the WT Men's championship back to Midland for the first time since Dr. Dean Strack, who was in the gallery, did it back in 1960 at Odessa Country Club.

Whiteside, who didn't pull even with Estes until the 15th hole despite a final round 69 in regulation, came from one stroke back at the day's start to extract the tension fraught victory in his second WT Men's overtime.

WHITESIDE, 30, lost in the first extra hole at Pampa in 1974 when Dick Weston scored a birdie. "This win was especially pleasing. After I lost in 1974, I never thought I'd get that close again. This was my fourth time to play and if I hadn't won today, I might not have tried again. And because of Dean Strack, he'd been the last Midlander to do it."

In view of the obstacles he overcame Sunday at Ranchland Hills Country Club, it seems unlikely he wouldn't have given up on his grail that easily. And now there's no question, "I'm looking forward to Lubbock (Lubbock CC) next year" where he will have an opportunity to win back-to-back titles for the first time since Bill Holstead did it in 1978-79.

Arnold Salinas, Dallas, who made up seven strokes with a 66 Saturday to share first place with Estes going into the final 18 Sunday, squandered his opportunity to repeat before the foursome of leaders reached the nine-hole turn. Salinas bogeyed one, two, four, seven and double bogeyed eight to make the turn at five over.

Estes was even, Whiteside one over and Kyle Coody, who started the day at 215, seven strokes out, was two over and was never really a factor.

So going into the backside, Estes and Whiteside were head to head and Steve was beginning to wonder if the University of Texas golfer from Abilene would ever make a costly mistake. "Do you realize he put together 24 straight pars today."

WHITESIDE, once he pulled even, scrambled back from one brewing disaster after another to stay alive with miraculous recovery shots and spectacular putts.

Every hole was a goal line stand, a home run off Bruce Sutter in extra innings, a winning shot at the buzzer. The match was 22-20 tennis before the tie-breaker rules were adopted.

"I've putted as well before, like the Ernie Nelson Partnership this spring, but never under these conditions."

"I guess my worst predicament was on No. 5 (the fifth extra hole, a par three water hole)," Whiteside reviewed.

The ball was short of the green and lodged against a piling dike of 4x4's that keeps the lake from intruding on the green. There was no shot or even room to stand. Estes was high on the green, two putts from the hole.

Whiteside was really too far to putt on to the green, but that's what he took out of his bag. He placed his feet apart on the pilings so that he was facing the pin and to hit the ball, he would lean over sideways. It was windy and if the wind had been coming from the east, he'd have been blown over backward into the drink.

"The putter was my only hope. I had to be careful not to ground it, or that would have cost me a stroke. I was just trying to chop down on the ball and get it up on the green. And I did almost fall into the water."

IT WORKED, but from the looks of his putt, he had only momentarily prolonged the match. Estes putted to within two feet. Whiteside dropped his 15-foot downhiller. "I was really fortunate to make that putt. The green was real slick."

On the next hole, it was Estes' turn to stave off disaster. Putting his driver back in the bag for a three wood to avoid the fairway traps, Estes smacked his tee shot into the sand, just to prove it could be done. His out was tentative and he was still, as far away from the hole as Whiteside was on his drive, but he chipped on and one putted while Whiteside's 20-footer was two feet short and the crowd began to get restless. Most are already late for the awards party. But then so were the two guys they couldn't start without.

When Whiteside drove into the No. 5 fairway, things again looked bad. It was a scramble to make the green in three, but he did and then out came the putter and it was all over.

ESTES' two stroke lead for the overall tournament looked secure enough until Whiteside finessed a 12-foot downhill putt into the cup on 14 for a birdie.

Grand slam sinks Midland Angels

From Staff Reports

BEAUMONT — Vincent-Beck Stadium isn't known as a homerun haven in the Texas League, but the Midland Angels continue to be plagued by the long ball here.

The Angels dropped a 7-6 decision to the Gators here Sunday night and it was the second straight loss that can be attributed to Gator long balls.

This time it was a grand slam shot to left off the bat of Beaumont designated hitter Tom Brassel that turned the trick in a four-run third inning. Brassel's slam was the first at Vincent-Beck Stadium in two years of Texas League play.

Only nine homeruns have been hit here this year, but this was the seventh in the last 11 days. The Gators have found the range in their home park.

Brassel's blast finished starter Brian Price, who left while trailing 5-2. He took his fourth loss in six decisions.

Midland outhit the Gators by a 12-9 margin, but could not overcome the Beaumont lead. The Gators climbed to a 7-3 lead in the fourth when Brassel had another RBI single in a two-run frame.

The Angels fought back into the game with two runs off Beaumont starter Jimmy Jones (6-3) as Doug Davis and Mark McLemore each drove home runs, but it was in the seventh where the Angels lost a golden opportunity to either tie or take the lead.

Randle ledoff the inning with a double and scored with one out on a single by Reggie Montgomery. However, Montgomery was left stranded at second and the Angels could get nothing else off reliever Pete Kutsukos, who picked up his sixth save of the year.

The two teams meet again tonight as Beaumont sends Joe Bicker to the mound against Scott Suehr. Bicker will be making his second Texas League appearance. Beaumont leads the series by a 1-3 margin.

Joey Meyer's two-run homer in the bottom of the 10th inning gave the El Paso Diablos a 6-5 victory over the San Antonio Dodgers in the only other Texas League game Sunday.

Nat Sferrazza was aboard on a bunt single at the time Meyers slugged the game winning homer. It was his 21st homer of the season.

San Antonio had taken a 5-4 lead in the top of the 10th inning on an RBI single by Dave Newsom.

Larry See had a solo homer for San Antonio in the eighth inning to tie the game at 3-3. Both teams scored in the ninth to send the game into extra innings tied at 4-4.

Billy Joe Robidoux was 3-4 for El Paso and Jose Gonzalez was 5-5 for San Antonio.

Ed Myers, 5-5, was the winning pitcher. The loser was Dave Eichhorn, 1-2.

Arnold Palmer waves to the crowd Sunday after an 11-stroke, 14-under-par, victory, the biggest margin ever on the Senior Tour.

Rosberg tames Detroit's streets

DETROIT (AP) — Keke Rosberg had to overcome balky brakes, rough roads and litterbugs to win the Detroit Grand Prix. And he did it in record time.

The 1982 world champion from Finland says he really doesn't know why he has such a mastery on the handful of temporary street circuits that the Formula One drivers visit.

But, Sunday, he added a victory in the streets of downtown Detroit to previous Grand Prix triumphs at Dallas and Monaco. And he did it impressively, taking the lead for good just eight laps into the 63-lap event.

In winning the fourth annual Detroit Grand Prix, Rosberg set a record for the event in his Honda-powered Williams racer, averaging 81.702 mph (131.486 kph), breaking the year-old mark of Brazilian Nelson Piquet, who drove a Brabham-BMW to an average of 81.679 (131.449).

"MY MAIN problem was brakes," said Rosberg. "But everybody has problems with brakes on a circuit like this."

His point was well taken by the two Ferrari drivers, Stefan Johansson of Sweden and Michele Alboreto of Italy, who finished second and third, respectively.

Johansson didn't appear to be catching Rosberg in the latter stages of the race, but he was running only about four seconds behind two laps from the end when a disc brake exploded and he did a half spin. The Swede, finishing second for the second consecutive week, wound up crossing the finish line a distant 57.549 seconds behind.

Alboreto, who increased his world championship point lead by virtue of his third-place finish, said, "I had a clutch problem at the start, then after 10 laps I had only front brakes."

Still, the four points Alboreto earned gave him a seven-point (31-24) edge over Italian driver Elio de Angelis, who finished fifth in his Lotus-Renault, just behind the Tyrrell of Stefan Bellof of West Germany.

The only other driver in the points Sunday was Piquet, the two-time world champion who finally earned his first championship point of the season in the sixth race. He finished a lap behind the leaders.

Finland's Keke Rosberg

Rosberg, who threw up sparks when he bottomed out in certain places on virtually every lap, also had to tiptoe around two or three of the 20 turns on the snaking circuit because the surface was breaking up.

"The skid pads on the rear of the car were hitting hard on every lap, but that was no problem because skid pads don't break," Rosberg said. "But you had to be very careful, very precise to stay in your own line in those (broken up) turns, because if you got into the marbles, the car would just go right into a (tire) barrier."

That's exactly what happened to several drivers, including Ayrton Senna of Brazil, Rosberg's Williams teammate Nigel Mansell of England, and Frenchman Alain Prost of McLaren, who remained third in the season standings with 22 points despite crashing early.

Senna, who wound up making two stops for tire changes, was running faster than anyone and had moved all the way back to fourth when he slid into the tire barrier, ending his day.

On the previous lap, the young Brazilian, who started on the pole for the fourth time this season, had set a Detroit race-lap record of 1 minute, 45.612 seconds, which translates to 85.217 mph (137.144 kph). That broke Piquet's 1984 mark of 1:46.221, 84.790 (136.358).

Rosberg built leads up to 38 seconds through the midway portion of the race, but he was ahead of Johansson by only a little over 24 seconds when he surprised nearly everyone by pitting just 14 laps from the end.

His crew changed all four tires in just 10 seconds, but, more important, they cleaned the paper litter, picked up from the road course, off his radiator.

"There was rubbish from the track covering the radiator and the car was overheating. I could not turn up the boost (turbocharger power) under those circumstances," Rosberg explained. "I had 25 seconds on Stefan, so I felt it was very safe to pit.

"But if he starts pushing me, I can turn up more power. But I couldn't do that if the car is overheating."

There were no injuries reported in the 157.5-mile (253.45-kilometer) event, and the only multi-car crash was a tangle between the RAM of Frenchman Philippe Alliot and the Tyrrell of Englishman Martin Brundle, who was running fifth at the time.

Palmer tees up record

BEACHWOOD, Ohio (AP) — Defending champion Arnold Palmer didn't try to hide his pleasure after gaining a record-setting 11-stroke victory in the Senior Tournament Players Championship Sunday.

"I feel like I hit the ball for four days as well as I have for some time," Palmer said after shooting a 14-under-par 274 at the Canterbury Golf Club. "I felt I had control of the ball. I didn't hit more than a few bad shots and I feel very pleased about that."

The 11-stroke margin eclipses the previous Senior record set by Rod Funseth in the 1983 Hall of Fame Classic, when he won by nine shots. Palmer's biggest victory margin ever was by 12 shots in the 1962 Phoenix Open.

Palmer, 55, now has captured nine Senior Tour victories besides 61 regular Professional Golfers Association events. His 72-hole score was the best this year on the Senior Tour, which includes players at least 50 years old, and his $36,000 prize money pushes his total career earnings to $2,429,908.

Gene Littler, Lee Elder, Miller Barber and Charles Owens finished in a four-way tie for second place at 285, 3-under-par. Barber started the round in second at 5-under, five strokes behind Palmer.

Palmer, who led after every round with scores of 67, 71, 68 and 68, said: "The last two rounds, the big difference was my putting, and my iron play was very gratifying to me."

Colleges tackle 'integrity crisis'

By HAL BOCK
AP Sports Writer

Sports Analysis

Nearly 200 college presidents, an impressive show of force, interrupted their other administrative duties to attend last week's special NCAA meeting in New Orleans.

This was more than unusual. It was revolutionary. NCAA meetings usually are dominated by athletic directors and faculty reps, but this time a bunch of their bosses showed up to express growing concern with what they describe as "an integrity crisis" in college sports.

What could they have in mind?

Just because recruiting abuses have deteriorated into a national disgrace?

Just because schools cavalierly pass off and on probation almost routinely?

Just because drug scandals and admission violations pock-mark the college landscape?

Just because winning has become an obsession, an end to be achieved without a whole lot of concern for the means?

Is that a crisis?

Most assuredly, the presidents said. Enough chicanery, enough ignoring of standards, enough breaking of rules. From now on, we get tough.

Only a cynic would wonder where the presidents have been until now. Finally, however, they have made a gallant attempt to reclaim their programs, passing stiff, new penalties that will make the rules-breakers pay dearly for their indiscretions.

The cornerstone of the legislation is the "death penalty" — a mandatory suspension of up to two years for schools committing two major violations over a five-year period. Major infractions are those that would give a school a competitive or recruiting advantage such as altering academic records of student-athletes to assure eligibility or offering bribes to attend a school.

All this isn't quite as tough as the presidents would have you believe, though. There are windows here which were not slammed as tightly as they might have been.

The New Orleans legislation requires a minimum penalty. Maximum is two years, but minimum could be something substantially less than that.

An institution's first violation remains punishable by probation, which has hardly proved a substantial deterrent until now.

A real get-tough policy would have called for two-year suspensions right then and there, on the spot, the first time around. One strike and you're out.

Why give law-breakers a second chance before pounding them? If you're going to get tough, then get tough.

In fact, the presidents did take such a get-tough stance, but only against a few schools, and it was on this point where the unanimity of the convention was tested. It was agreed to make this new legislation retroactive to Sept. 1, 1980, which means that 20 to 25 NCAA institutions guilty of major infractions since that date have already had one chance. The next violation would mean suspension.

Suspension means shutting down a program — no television, no revenue, no recruiting, no program.

Suspension is basketball at San Francisco for the last couple of years after that school got disgusted with recruiting abuses.

Suspension is basketball at Tulane for the foreseeable future after the depressing point-shaving scandal of last season.

Suspension is serious stuff, much more serious punishment than probation, which has eroded over the years into little more than a wrist-slapping that the rules-breakers seem more than willing to risk.

Only twice in the 79-year history of the NCAA has a member school had an athletic program suspended. The sentences were handed out to basketball programs — at Kentucky after the 1951 point-shaving scandal and at the University of Southwestern Louisiana in 1973 for a variety of violations following a period on probation.

The presidents now appear to be saying that if you want compliance with the rules, you must make the penalties for breaking those rules so painful that it would be foolish to take the chance. Suspension fits that description.

Dr. John W. Ryan, president of Indiana University and chairman of the NCAA Presidents' Commission, which designed the new legislation, called the measures "important beginnings."

"The ... presidents and chancellors are going to determine the direction and major policies of college athletics and ... we are not going to condone any failure to comply with these policies."

Clearly the presidents aren't about to walk away from this repair job.

Texas Ranger Pete O'Brien is greeted by Gary Ward at home plate after O'Brien hit his eighth homer of the year, which proved to be the game winning hit Sunday against Minnesota.

Tanana wins for Tigers

New uniform proves potent key

Associated Press

His family was at Tiger Stadium. His friends were there. And, after 11 years and stops in California, Boston and Texas, Frank Tanana was finally there — dressed in the navy-and-white of the Detroit Tigers.

"I've wanted to wear this uniform ever since I was a kid," Tanana said after he made an impressive debut with his new team Sunday, pitching seven shutout innings as the Tigers trimmed the New York Yankees 3-1.

Tanana, 31, starred as a schoolboy at Detroit Catholic Central High School. But in the 1971 draft, the Tigers passed him over and instead took Tom Veryzer.

He began this season with Texas and won only two of his first nine decisions. On Thursday, the Rangers traded him back home for a minor league pitcher.

"I was waiting to see what kind of emotional roller coaster I'd be on," said Tanana, who scattered eight hits, walked one and struck out two. "This was an exciting day for me. It's good stuff."

Chet Lemon, making his first start since pulling a thigh muscle June 15, hit a two-run homer in the fifth to break a scoreless game in Detroit. Darrell Evans doubled and scored on a single by Tom Brookens in the seventh for the Tigers' other run.

Willie Hernandez relieved Tanana and gave up a run in the eighth on a triple by Rickey Henderson and a sacrifice fly by Ken Griffey. But Hernandez preserved the lead in recording his 15th save.

"We swung at a lot of bad pitches," New York Manager Billy Martin said. "But he (Tanana) pitched a good game. You can't take that away from him."

Bob Shirley, 2-2, took the loss. He worked 8⅓ innings and yielded five hits, including Lemon's third homer.

"I've never had a good game here — going back to exhibition games when I was with Cincinnati," Shirley said. "I like to pitch here, too. That's the funny thing."

Blue Jays 8, Red Sox 1

Ernie Whitt hit the first grand-slam home run of his career and Rance Mulliniks added a two-run shot as Toronto beat up Boston in a brawl-interrupted game.

Mulliniks homered off Bruce Kison to give the host Blue Jays a 2-0 lead in the third.

Then, in the fourth, Kison threw a high-and-tight pitch that hit a ducking George Bell in the arm. Bell charged the mound and kicked Kison in the groin area as both benches emptied. When order was restored nine minutes later, home plate umpire Derryl Cousins ejected Bell and Kison remained in the game.

Kison got himself in trouble in the sixth by loading the bases with three walks and Whitt hit a grand slam for his eighth homer of the season.

"The blood was boiling pretty good," said Whitt, who yelled at Kison all around the bases after his slam.

Dave Stieb (7-6) gave up five hits over eight innings for the victory. He lowered his AL-leading ERA to 2.09.

AL Roundup

Angels 11, White Sox 1

Ruppert Jones capped a four-run first inning with a bases-empty homer and Rob Wilfong and Mike Brown later homered as California pounded out 17 hits in Chicago.

Gary Pettis had three hits, Rod Carew drove in three runs with two hits and Reggie Jackson added a two-run double.

The victory gave the Angels a three-game sweep of the White Sox and a 3½-game lead over Chicago in the AL West.

Mike Witt, 8-foot-6, who has been victimized by poor offensive support several times, gave up six hits and struck out eight in seven innings.

"If they get me four runs, I should win," Witt said. "The way I saw it, it was over in the first inning."

Rangers 3, Twins 1

If Glen Cook was nervous, it didn't show. Cook, making his major-league debut in the Metrodome while his pregnant wife was four days overdue in Oklahoma, pitched 6 1-3 shutout innings to lead Texas over the Twins.

Cook was recalled from Class AAA Oklahoma City on Thursday when the Rangers traded Frank Tanana to Detroit. He allowed just five hits, walked none and struck out two, and retired 15 of 16 batters before Mike Stenhouse doubled with one out in the seventh.

Greg Harris relieved and got his sixth save, giving up a sacrifice fly to Roy Smalley in the ninth.

"I definitely was nervous," Cook said. "But if you're not nervous, you're not human."

The Rangers scored twice in the ninth, one on Pete O'Brien's 450-foot home run. The loss was the first in three games for new Minnesota Manager Ray Miller.

Orioles 6, Brewers 3

Larry Sheets climaxed a four-run rally against Milwaukee reliever Rollie Fingers in the eighth inning with a three-run homer to pace Baltimore.

Fred Lynn's solo homer pulled the Orioles within 3-2 in the seventh, and Jim Dwyer led off the eighth by drawing a walk from Fingers. One out later, Dwyer scored when Murray doubled and then took third on right fielder Ben Oglivie's error.

Lynn was intentionally walked before Sheets hit a full-count pitch for his ninth homer.

"Any shortman needs work," Fingers said. "If you're not sharp, you can't come into a situation like that when you've worked only two innings in two weeks."

Baltimore Manager Earl Weaver countered, "He looked like Fingers to me. Why not give our guy some credit for hitting a good pitch?"

Paul Molitor hit a two-run homer for the host Brewers.

Mariners 8, Royals 2

Bob Kearney and Spike Owen homered and Mike Moore teamed with Ed Vande Berg on a four-hitter as Seattle completed a three-game sweep in Kansas City.

The visiting Mariners rapped 12 hits, including six doubles, and also drew eight walks. Jim Presley and Ivan Calderon each had two doubles.

Kearney got Seattle going with a leadoff homer in the third. The Mariners scored three more runs in the inning off Bud Black, 5-7.

Moore, 5-4, making his first appearance since being sidelined with a pulled muscle June 4, gave up three hits over 6 1-3 innings. Vande Berg gave up Steve Balboni's 13th homer with two outs in the ninth.

A's 9, Indians 3

Carney Lansford hit a two-run home run and Mike Heath tripled, doubled and singled as Oakland cruised past struggling Cleveland.

Heath's RBI single in the fourth inning off Neal Heaton, 4-8, drove in the game's first run. Heath had a run-scoring triple in the sixth and came home on a sacrifice fly by Alfredo Griffin, while Lansford hit his 11th homer in the sixth.

Chris Codiroli, 8-3, got the victory. Joe Carter homered for the visiting Indians.

Dodgers win, Cubs lose

Twelve magic number for both

Associated Press

It's an even dozen for both Pedro Guerrero and the Chicago Cubs.

Twelve was a magic number Sunday for Guerrero, who hit his 12th home run this month to tie a Los Angeles club record and lead the Dodgers to a 6-2 victory over the Houston Astros.

Twelve was also a miserable number for the Cubs, who lost their 12th straight game in a 7-0 decision to the St. Louis Cardinals.

"What can I say?" Chicago Manager Jim Frey said as the Cubs moved within one game of tying the record for the longest losing streak in club history. "We're not going to panic."

Dodgers 6, Astros 2

Guerrero's two-run homer in the third inning off Ron Mathis, 3-2, gave the Dodgers a 2-0 lead and tied Frank Howard's record for most homers in a month by a Los Angeles Dodger. Howard hit 12 in July of 1962.

Guerrero has hit seven home runs this season against Houston, including six in the last six games against the Astros, and has 16 overall to rank one behind Atlanta's Dale Murphy in the NL home run standings.

The blow started Rick Honeycutt on his fifth victory in 11 decisions. Honeycutt and Tom Niedenfuer combined on a five-hitter as the Dodgers won their fourth straight game and their seventh in a row over Houston.

"I'm swinging the bat and the long ball is coming," said Guerrero. "Hitting coach Manny Mota told me to drop my hands, and it's working."

Cardinals 7, Cubs 0

John Tudor pitched a two-hitter, scored two runs and drove in one as the Cardinals defeated slump-stricken Chicago and extended the Cubs' losing streak to the longest since they dropped 13 in June, 1982.

"I don't care what their record is," said Tudor of the Cubs. "That's a good baseball team. We know that when it gets to be August or September, they'll be there."

The Cardinals, incidentally, won their fourth straight and 13th of their last 16 while surging to the top of the NL East.

"I don't think anybody wants to play us right now," said Cardinal first baseman Jack Clark. "We know we've got a lot of home games coming up and we want to make the most of it."

St. Louis will be home for 14 of the next 19 games before the All-Star break.

Expos 5, Mets 1

Vance Law hit a two-run homer and Tim Raines drove in two runs to back the seven-hit pitching of Montreal's Bryn Smith. Law's homer, his fourth of the season and third against the Mets, came in the fifth inning after Raines hit a one-out single.

Smith, 8-3, pitched his second complete game of the season, striking out two and walking none. Ed Lynch, 4-4, who pitched five innings and allowed all five runs, was the loser. The Mets were guilty of three errors, all in the third inning when the Expos jumped to a 3-0 lead with the help of Raines' triple.

"We're right in the race," said Smith, whose second-place Expos trail the Cardinals by a half-game. "But we're not getting carried away by it. We're not ranting or raving or acting like we're the team to beat yet. We're just having fun and playing hard. It just so happens we're winning, too."

Phillies 3, Pirates 2

Juan Samuel scored on a throwing error in the ninth as Philadelphia beat Pittsburgh. Samuel was hit by a pitch from Pirate reliever Jim Winn, 2-3, leading off the ninth and moved to second when Winn balked. Rick Schu then bunted past Winn and third baseman Jim Morrison barehanded the ball and threw wildly to first, allowing Samuel to score.

The Phillies managed only three hits in the game, including home runs by Mike Schmidt and Derrel Thomas. Ironically, it was Thomas who also allowed the Pirates to tie the score 2-2 in the eighth with an error at short.

Don Carman, 2-1, the fourth Phillies' pitcher, worked the ninth inning for the victory, his second in two days and his only two major-league victories.

Braves 2, Reds 1

Steve Bedrosian and two relievers teamed up on a four-hitter to lead Atlanta over Cincinnati. Bedrosian, 4-6, blanked the Reds on one hit over six innings, yielding to Rick Camp in the seventh after giving up a pair of one-out singles. Camp pitched out of that trouble, and Bruce Sutter came on to give up a unearned run in the eighth to earn his 11th save.

The Braves took a 1-0 lead in the third off Frank Pastore, 2-1, on a sacrifice fly by Dale Murphy, then made it 2-0 in the fourth when Glenn Hubbard walked and came home on Larry Owen's double that eluded Gary Redus in the left-field corner.

Padres 6, Giants 1

Kurt Bevacqua belted his second grand slam of the year in the fifth inning and Dave Dravecky scattered nine hits as San Diego won its fourth consecutive game.

Dravecky, 7-4, struck out a career-high nine batters while only walking one, giving up the Giants' only run on a two-out, ninth-inning homer by Rick Adams.

Two innings before Bevacqua hit his grand slam, he had struck out in a similar situation off Atlee Hammaker, 3-7.

"It was the same pitch he threw me before," Bevacqua said of the Hammaker fastball he clubbed into the left-field seats.

Indiana cagers win as Alford scores 32

TORONTO (AP) — Steve Alford scored 32 points to lead Indiana University to an 82-75 exhibition basketball victory over Canada's national team Sunday night. Canada was led by Jay Triano's 22 points.

Triano scored a three-point shot with 3:19 remaining that lifted Canada to a 70-69 lead, before Alford led a late surge.

Tony Simms of Toronto added 11 points and Byron Tokarchuk of Saskatoon nine for Canada.

The same two teams meet again Monday in Hamilton, Ontario. Indiana Coach Bob Knight did not make the trip.

Levi survives Pate playoff

ATLANTA (AP) — It was a veteran against a rookie and experience proved to be the difference, but not in a way most would expect.

Wayne Levi needed two holes of a sudden-death playoff to oust rookie Steve Pate Sunday and capture the $500,000 Georgia-Pacific Atlanta Golf Classic.

Levi won his eighth tour title with a 12-foot birdie putt on the second extra hole, but he thought the experience factor came into play late in regulation — and had nothing to do with Pate.

Levi, holding a one-shot lead, placed his approach to No. 15 in the bunker and took a bogey 5, losing his lead to Pate, who sank a 12-foot birdie putt on the hole.

"After I bogeyed 15 and lost the lead, I said 'don't let that bother you,'" Levi said.

He recalled the 1982 Atlanta event when he had a quadruple bogey 8 on the hole and failed by one shot of going into a playoff.

Levi, who earned $90,000 for the victory, got even with an eight-foot birdie putt on the 17th and both playoff competitors birdied the 18th — Pate from 12 feet and Levi from 15.

Each parred the first extra hole before Levi's 12-foot birdie on the 17th green ended it.

Levi said his winning putt became "much easier" when Pate chipped six feet past the hole from the fringe "because I knew I would still be tied if I missed."

Both finished regulation in 273, 15 under par on the hilly, 7,008-yard Atlanta Country Club course. Levi had a last-round 67 and Pate, the second-round leader, a 69.

"I played real well," said Pate, who earned $64,000 for second place. He had won only $5,461 in his previous 13 pro events, with a tie for 53rd serving as his best finish before Sunday.

"I don't have to worry about keeping my card this year," he said. "It was strange for me playing before the big crowds and on TV, but it didn't make any difference."

"It's great to win," Levi said. "It's what I've practiced all my life to do. When you play the last few holes when the pressure's on you, that's what it's all about."

Raymond Floyd, a two-time PGA champion, could have made it a three-way playoff by sinking a 30-foot eagle putt on the final green. But he barely missed and settled for a birdie that finished a round of 70 to finish alone in third at 274.

Mac O'Grady shot a 69 and third round co-leader David Frost, a PGA rookie from South Africa, a 74 to share fourth at 276.

Danny Edwards, the part-time race car driver, skied to a 75, blowing a two-shot lead after 10 holes with two double bogeys.

Edwards, who shared the lead with Frost on Saturday, had a 277 total and was tied with Scott Simpson, who shot 71.

Levi said he definitely was surprised that Pate didn't get rattled, as one might expect a rookie to do.

Gamblers key to playoff look

Associated Press

The final pieces of the United States Football League's playoff puzzle will fall into place only after the regular season's last game.

The Oakland Invaders play the Gamblers tonight in Houston. The Invaders are already the Western Conference champions. The Gamblers have clinched a post-season spot. But all four first-round playoff matchups depend on tonight's game.

If the Gamblers win, they visit the Memphis Showboats, who finished 11-7. If they lose, they must play in Birmingham against the 13-5 Stallions.

The Invaders can finish with the USFL's best record by winning. They will then host the 10-8 Tampa Bay Bandits. If they lose, they must host the defending champion Baltimore Stars, who are 10-7-1 but have won five of their last six games.

Win or lose, the Gamblers could be playing their last game in the Astrodome. Reports have circulated that the club will move to Chicago for the planned 1986 fall season, but a formal announcement has not yet been made.

"I really don't know what the future holds for us," Houston Coach Jack Pardee said. "But our players aren't naive. They know we haven't had good attendance this year. I tell them just to worry about the things they have control of and let the owners worry about the other things."

The Gamblers drew an average attendance of only 19,536 this season. Attendance hit a record low of 11,780 last week and is expected to be even lower tonight.

"I don't know if there is any bitterness, but there is a lot of disappointment," said Gamblers center Billy Kidd. "There are over 2 million people in Houston and it doesn't take that many to come out one day a week and see us play."

The Gamblers will once again play without injured quarterback Jim Kelly. Todd Dillon will start for Houston.

On Sunday in the USFL, Birmingham downed New Jersey 14-6, Baltimore defeated Tampa Bay 38-10, Jacksonville romped over Denver 42-6 and San Antonio tipped Portland 21-13.

USFL Roundup

Cliff Stoudt tossed a third-quarter touchdown pass and Ted Walton scored on a 46-yard interception return as the Stallions captured the Eastern Conference title.

The Birmingham victory snapped the Generals 13-game winning streak at home and the Stallions defense ended Herschel Walker's string of rushing for at least 100 yards at 11 straight games by limiting the star running back to 73 yards. New Jersey finished the regular season at 11-7.

"We're just a team from down there in little old Birmingham, Alabama and everybody tends to forget about us," said Stoudt. "We've only won as many games as anybody in this league and the Southern Division last year, and we haven't impressed anybody."

"Our team got up for it," said Birmingham Coach Rollie Dotsch. "Herschel's a great back. Our defensive line filled the cracks in and funneled him to the outside to stop him. If you let him get through the opening in the middle, he can hurt you."

Walker never did and the Generals turned out to be their own worst enemy, turning the ball over four times.

Kelvin Bryant and Allen Harvin each scored twice to lead Baltimore. "We're playing better than we have all year," said Stars Coach Jim Mora. "If we are peaking, we couldn't do it at a better time."

The Gold came back from a 31-0 loss to Memphis last week. Mike Rozier scored four touchdowns and Ed Luther passed for 370 yards as Jacksonville posted its largest margin of victory in the Bulls' two-year history and closed out a 9-9 season.

Denver Coach Darrel "Mouse" Davis observed, "Primarily we did nothing well, and we were fairly inept in most areas."

Running back Don Roberts caught a touchdown pass and ran for another score as the Gunslingers won for only the second time in 10 games. San Antonio finished the season at 5-13; Portland dropped to 6-12.

NBA considers new draft rule

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — The National Basketball Association decided Sunday to consider two alternatives to its controversial new draft lottery system.

As it stands, the lottery includes the teams with the seven worst records. The New York Knicks won this year's first lottery and drafted center Patrick Ewing. The Golden State Warriors, who shared the worst record in the league, came out the big loser in the lottery and drafted seventh in the first round, picking Chris Mullin.

Jerry Colangelo, chairman of the competition and rules committee, said one proposed change would have five teams drafting in inverse order after two names are drawn.

The other change would set up a weighted lottery in which the worst team would have seven slips in the drum; the sixth team would have six slips, and so on, with the team with the seventh's worst record having one slip.

At least 18 of the 23 teams would have to approve a change in the lottery bylaw.

The Boston Celtics, who lost in the championship finals to the Los Angeles Lakers, proposed a change in the playoff format but failed to get enough support.

Alice Miller will now watch Cubs after LPGA victory

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Alice Miller can afford to take a week off. She doesn't need the money.

Miller decided to put away her clubs and treat herself to some Chicago Cubs baseball after becoming women's golf single-season money leader. She fired a steady 70 on Sunday for a six-stroke victory in the $250,000 Mayflower Classic.

"What a day, what a week, what a year," Miller said after her fourth Ladies Professional Golf Association victory of the season. It boosted her earnings to $318,250, surpassing the old one-season record of $310,399 set in 1982 by JoAnne Carner.

"I was having a hard time fighting off not thinking about breaking the money record and what winning this tournament would mean to me, as opposed to keeping my mind on my game," Miller said. "That was kind of a constant struggle on the back nine."

But Miller coasted to victory, taking the lead on the first hole and pulling away as one by one her challengers fell into a sea of bogeys. She finished at 8-under-par 280.

Jane Blalock, Mary Beth Zimmerman and Beth Solomon shared second at 286. Blalock finished with a 70, Zimmerman a 72 and Solomon a 73 for her best tournament finish since 1981.

MEN'S WT

Then on 15, Estes' drive wound up in the tall grass by a tree. Saturday on the same hole he had gone into the lake in front of the green on a fairway chip. This time he cleared the lake to keep par within reach. Whiteside chipped on and then rammed home a a 25-foot birdie and it was tied.

That, as it turned out, was only the overture to the high drama in store.

On the par three 16th, Whiteside had to salvage par with a 12-foot putt, "That was one of the big putts I made."

On 17, Whiteside's drive lodged behind a tree 100 yards from the green. There was no room to swing, but he somehow got to the green. On 18, he found an evergreen tree along the rightside of the fairway that no one else saw and recovered. On 19, his drive strayed to the 18th fairway.

At last, on 21, it was Estes' turn to come out of a greenside sandtrap and prolong the match with a superb recovery.

Finally they reached 24 and as Steve lined up the putt, "My one thought was not to leave it short. I thought Bob would make his putt, but I had the same location earlier in the day and missed, so it wasn't a complete surprise."

Salinas finally settled for a 72—285 and Coody was third with a 73—288. Mark Ingrebritgsen, finishing with a 68-71—289 was fifth.

Richard Giffhorn took first in the President's flight with a 73-81—154 to beat out Jim Cauthen 79-76—155 and Jim Ferrell 79-76—155 while Randle Lee, 75-81—156, and Jamie Piper, 79-77—156, were next, followed by Don Buchanan, 74-83—157, and Sam Baker 79-79—158.

In the final round of first flight play, Dwayne Adams, Fort Worth, and Woody McGhee, Odessa, shot 73s with Adams winning the playoff. Next were Cody Woodfin, Odessa, 79; and Rip Helton, Denton, 81. In consolation, Don Thompson, RHCC, won with 77 and Kirk French was next with 72. In the second flight, Haney Atyia, RHCC, beat Tommy Johnson, Odessa, 77 to 79 with Leonard Busby, RHCC, at 81 and Richard Harvey, RHCC, at 83. In consolation, Paul Varner, RHCC, took first with 80 and Melvin McEwen had an 86.

Fred Lawson, MCC, won the Seniors Flight with a 229 with Bill Reed, Fort Worth at 230, Bill St. Clair, Muleshoe, 231; Bob Riek, RHCC, 233.

Gene Beggs is a world-class aerobatic pilot who has refined a classic procedure for a flier safely to pull out of a dreaded spin — the aviator's nightmare.

It's a situation no safe pilot wants to get in. But if he does, he would be wise to know how to bail himself and his aircraft out of trouble. And Beggs is eager to teach the techniques of getting out of spins — to help the pilot avoid that uncontrolled downward spiral that forever may end his flight.

"If you fly aerobatics or if you fly an airplane that is capable of spinning, you should know this life-saving method of spin recovery," said Beggs, a 41-year-old aerobatic champion and member of the 1984 United States World Championship Aerobatic Team.

This is Beggs' basic formula for spin recovery:

— 1. Cut the throttle.
— 2. Take your hand off the stick.
— 3. Kick full opposite rudder until the spin stops.
— 4. Neutralize rudder and pull out of the dive.

"This method of recovery will enable you to quickly and easily recover from any spin that can be encountered in any of the (aerobatic and non-aerobatic) airplanes that I have used in the spin tests conducted during the past two years," he said. "The rudder is the most effective control for spin recovery."

Beggs noted that he has no patent on spin recovery and makes no claim the technique will prove effective on all aircraft; it has worked on the types of aircraft with which he has tried the procedure. He formulated his "simple and foolproof" method of recovery after studying and experimenting with spin-recovery techniques. His intense investigation into spin recovery was inspired by the death of a close friend in an aircraft that had "spun in" and by an article on spins by Swiss aerobatic competitor Eric Mueller in Sport Aerobatics magazine.

"I HAVE ALWAYS been an advocate of spin training for all pilots," Beggs said, "but it was after the loss of a very dear friend in the summer of 1981 that I became terribly concerned about getting to the bottom of this spin thing once and for all."

His friend was Kale Webster, commander of the West Texas Wing of the Confederate Air Force. Webster died when his World War II advanced trainer, a North American AT-6 Texan, crashed after the aircraft slipped into an inverted spin while he was performing air-combat maneuvers.

Inmate stabbed in argument

HUNTSVILLE (AP) — A Texas Department of Corrections inmate underwent surgery to remove two metal shanks lodged in his throat and head during an argument with another prisoner, a TDC spokesmans said.

Doctors at the TDC hospital in Galveston operated Sunday to remove the metal pieces from Louis Savant, 25, serving eight years for an Orange County burglary, spokesman Charles Brown said.

A prison officer rushed to Savant's cell at the Coffield Unit in Tennessee Colony about 11 p.m. Saturday after hearing calls for help and found Savant under his bunk, Brown said.

The victim's cellmate, a 25-year-old inmate serving six years for forgery and theft convictions, told the officer he thought he had killed Savant.

The assault brings to 125 the number of nonfatal stabbings in TDC facilities so far this year. Thirteen inmates have been killed in Texas prisons since Jan. 1.

The Mighty Michu, who at 33 inches reportedly is the smallest man in the world, rekindles the spirit of P.T. Barnum's Gen. Tom Thumb in "America Loves the Circus," the Grand Spectacular of Ringling Bros. and Barnum & Bailey Circus. The circus comes to Midland this week with two shows each on Tuesday and Wednesday at Chaparral Center. Tickets are available at the Chaparral Center box office.

Circus here Tuesday, Wednesday

From Staff Reports

Ringling Bros. and Barnum & Bailey Circus opens here this week with four performances slated, two each on Tuesday and Wednesday. All shows will be at Chaparral Center.

This year's all-new edition features many circus performers including:

— Miguel Vasquez, the only person ever to complete the quadruple somersault on the flying trapeze;

— Wade Burck, an American newcomer who faces the rare white tigers;

— The Survivors, one of the most daring aerial quartets in the world;

— The King Charles Troupe, unicycling basketball wizards celebrating 17 years with "The Greatest Show on Earth;"

— A host of clowns and dancers.

The action begins when hundreds of lavishly-costumed circus artists welcome the crowd to their life under the Big Top in "Those Wonderful Days of the Circus." In this foot-stomping celebration, audiences are transported to the early days of Ringling Bros. and Barnum & Bailey Circus and introduced to their host for the day's events, the Mighty Michu who portrays Gen. Tom Thumb.

The popular Grand Spectacular celebrates the highlights of a century of the Ringling Bros. Circus.

Twentieth century audiences are invited to meet firsthand the greats of past circus days, including the five Ringling brothers, James A. Bailey, and the legendary forefather of today's circus, Phineas Taylor Barnum.

The extravaganza climaxes with a salute to the United States in a rousing flag-waving finale.

The Axel Gautier family is featured in this year's elephant production entitled, "Elephants — Country Style."

The grand finale, "Make Way for Tomorrow," bids a heartwarming adieu to circus fans as Captain Christopher is blasted into the circus stratosphere bringing to a close this year's edition.

Tickets for all four Midland performances are available at the Chaparral Center box office.

AEROBATICS

The method of recovery "from any spin" can be accomplished without the pilot knowing "what type of spin he was in" or even his knowing a great deal about aerodynamics.

BEGGS, WHO HAS won 30 awards for his precison flying and logged more than 15,000 hours since he started flying in 1968, competes in the unlimited — the ultimate and most challenging — categor in the International Aerobatic Club (IAC) competition. A tribute to his craftsmanship and attention to detail came in 1981 when his home-built Pitts S-1S biplane won the Wright Brothers' Trophy for the best built Pitts at the Dayton (Ohio) Air Fair.

The effectiveness of Beggs's spin recovery was hailed by George H. Meyers III, an engineering flight test pilot for the Federal Aviation Administration's Denver Aircraft Certificate Office.

"Gene introduced me to his emergency spin recovery procedure, which is 'throttle idle, release the stick, and rudder opposite the rotation,'" Meyers commented. "I was impressed with the ease of recovery from any spin, inverted or upright, and the lack of confusion as to what type of control input was required to recover.

"I endorse wholeheartedly Gene's recovery procedure in the Pitts-type aircraft. I am sure it has applicability in other types of airplanes, as Gene has demonstrated to himself," Meyers said. "I would, however, be reluctant to say it will work in all airplanes without first seeing it demonstrated at the most adverse weight and c.g. (center of gravity) location in each of these airplanes just as they are tested during certification."

Beggs is concerned that "most pilots have not received adequate spin training and probably would be ineffective in coping with an inadvertent spin," Meyers noted. Beggs's "simple emergency spin recovery method would provide an added chance of survival."

"I WOULD RANK the spin training I received from Gene with the best aviation training I have ever received," said Meyers. "After my exposure to Gene's technique, I have complete confidence that I can recover from any recoverable spin."

Frank Christensen, manufacturer of the Christen Eagle aerobatic biplane kits and type-certificated Pitts Special, also has endorsed Beggs's aerobatic and spin-recovery course.

James N. Patton Jr., head of the National Aeronautics and Space Administration's Aircraft Operations Branch at Hampton, Va., also endorsed Beggs' work in "advocating and teaching a simplified emergency spin recovery procedure" in aerobatic aircraft.

Beggs's emergency-spin recovery procedure "has already saved lives," Patton said of testimonials.

Aviation writer Peter Garrison was the 82nd pilot to have taken Beggs' aerobatic course. Beggs, a flight instructor who has instrument and airline-transport pilot ratings, is based at Midland Regional Airport.

"I came away wildly enthusiastic about it," Garrison wrote in the March 1985 issue of Flying magazine. "I had experienced gyrations I didn't even know any airplane could manage. I had been in every kind of spin I had ever heard of and a couple I hadn't, and in every case I had been able to recover instantly, cleanly and unhesitatingly."

Though Beggs's spin-recovery technique is "nonstandard," it "works so astonishingly easy and well and can be acquired so readily," Garrison wrote. To date, more than 100 pilots have completed Beggs' aerobatic course.

HOWEVER, GARRISON noted that the spin recovery developed by Beggs was used by chance in 1912 by a Lt. Parke in a British Royal Navy Avro biplane in the first recorded recovery from a spin. Parke unintentionally had spun the airplane, vainly tried to recover, gave up, let go of the stick, pressed "opposite rudder," and braced himself for the impending crash. The airplane recovered, and he survived.

Garrison noted that spins had become an "accepted part of every pilot's repertoire" by the late 1930s.

Today, Beggs is intent on persuading the FAA and airframe manufacturers to adopt the "power-off, hands-off, opposite-rudder" method of spin recovery and to let the natural aerodynamics of the airplane help return the spinning craft to straight-and-level flying.

"The sensation of being able to recover without difficulty from spins that you didn't initiate and couldn't even recognize is electrifying," Garrison wrote. "You come away from Beggs's course feeling that you can handle any spin in any airplane."

While Beggs is campaigning for his spin-recovery method, he is in training and competing for a place on the 1986 U.S. world aerobatic team. He'll be flying aerobatics in in July at the Canadian Open Aerobatics at Calgary, Alberta, Canada, and in August in the International Aerobatic Club championship at Fond du Lac, Wis.

"I love to fly, and aerobatics is the ultimate form of flight. It is without doubt the most complex challenge from both the mental and physical standpoints...And unlimited aerobatics is the ultimate form of flying," Beggs said.

"Flying aerobatics gives me a sense of freedom not experienced in other types of flying," he said, "and provides an outlet for my competitive nature and creative spirit."

Two-year-old boy lucky to be alive after poisoning

Copley News Service

VISTA, Calif. — Eric Gangnath looked at his mother for approval, then turned and addressed the visitors in his home. The 2-year-old boy had something he wanted to say, and his saucer-shaped, sky-blue eyes expressed that desire.

Slowly, the words came. In a low, raspy voice, he summed up his life story in two simple sentences.

"I was in the hospital," Eric said. "I was sooooo ... sick."

Eric looked at his visitors, measured their reaction, and in an instant the serious look on his face turned into a mischievous grin. Eric let out a loud cackle in the same low voice. The laughter was contagious, and it was almost as if Eric seemed to be saying that everybody else was taking his medical history much more serious than Eric himself did.

But everyone involved in the case — doctors, nurses, poison control experts, friends and family — still say the same thing.

Eric is lucky to be alive.

However much luck played a part in the remarkable story of this resilient little boy's survival is open to speculation. But there seems to be no doubt that the support he received from his parents and determined doctors and the medical technology that kept him alive were the biggest factors.

IT'S BEEN a year now since Eric underwent the most trying ordeal of his very young life. His story is somewhat different in that his plight became an item of almost nationwide concern touching on a situation every parent has nightmares about.

Eric's comeback made the story even more dramatic. The concerned wanted to know not only how Eric was doing, but how he ever survived.

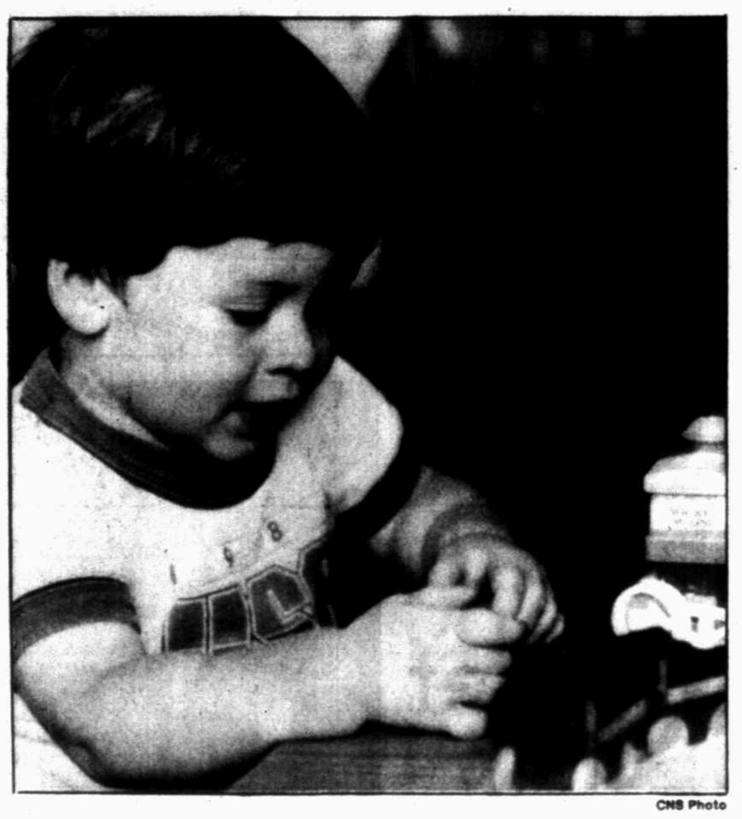
Dr. Nick Anas, who was in charge of Eric's case along with partner Dr. Ron Perkin, tried to answer that question last year when it first appeared Eric was somehow going to make it.

"We're surprised that he survived," Anas said. "The fact that he did is a tremendous tribute to the nurses, the respiratory staff and Eric's parents. The parental contribution to this child's recovery is no small doing."

On May 13, 1984, Eric ingested the gasoline from a milk carton that had been left in the house for less than two minutes. Eric's dad, Bruce, had been mowing the lawn when he was called inside. In that short two minutes, Eric, who was barely able to walk yet, toddled from his bedroom into the other room and found the carton of gasoline.

AFTER FIRST being taken to a local hospital, Eric was transported to the Pediatric Intensive Care Unit at the University of California at San Diego Medical Center in La Jolla. Eric's lung disease was extensive. He was diagnosed as having acute chemical reactions to the gasoline, causing swelling and inflammation.

For the next three months, Eric stayed in the hospital. His condition fluctuated between gradual improvement and the brink of death. On the fifth day of his hospitalization, Eric's heart literally stopped working. It was massaged and again began to function. From that point it was a matter of working to get Eric off the breathing machine — an experimental piece of equipment called an oscillating ventilator. Some of the doctors involved believe the ventilator might have been the key to Eric's survival.



CNS Photo

One year after swallowing gasoline, Eric Gangnath, 2, is able to play at home.

When Eric was finally released in August, he took home with him a room full of medical equipment, including respirators and heart monitors. By the end of September, Eric didn't need the equipment and a four-month nightmare for Eric and his parents finally ended. On a very surprising note, Eric was alive.

Eric appears to be very much a normal, active 2-year-old. He plays with toys, watches video movies on television and is fascinated by the changing world around him.

Eric has gained back the weight he lost last summer. The lung damage will probably be permanent, although greatly decreased from what was originally feared. The tracheotomy tube that was part of Eric's existence for much of last year is long gone. He still has a small hole in his throat where the tube was. The scar tissue around the inside of his throat causes the raspy voice, but Eric's mother, Maureen, said doctors are hoping they can remedy that when more time passes.

ERIC BEGAN making complete sentences around October and hasn't stopped since. Maureen said doctors are still confounded by Eric's strong ability to speak. As for the trauma of his ordeal, Eric shows few signs of remembering.

"I don't think Eric really knows about dying or that he was that close," Maureen said. "But I think he senses that what he went through was real bad."

While things are much smoother at the Gangnath home now, Maureen remembers when Eric first came home. The worries were still intense.

"Bruce would sleep by his crib to keep an eye on the equipment," Maureen remembered. "Bruce was always the optimistic one. Even when things were at their worst, he was always the positive one.

"I was the nervous one. In fact, at first I was a basket case. I would always keep thinking the worst, even when things seemed safe. The strangest things happened. I would get flashbacks. I would be up teaching in the middle of class and suddenly I would get tears in my eyes. I started to think I had gone nuts. There was no reason to be sad anymore. Finally, I'm to the point now where I don't worry so much if Eric gets a cold or is sick."

WORRIES ABOUT the tremendous financial burden Eric's hospitalization placed on the family have been eased somewhat, as well. The bill for the hospital stay, which at one time was close to $400,000, has been knocked down by help from Medicare and the steady influx of funds into a trust fund established by a local bank. Eric is covered by insurance now that also helps pay for checkups.

A series of ironies concerning Eric's improvement has always been quite apparent to Eric's family. Eric came off the ventilator in the hospital on Maureen's birthday. He moved from intensive to intermediate care around July 23, Bruce's birthday. Eric came home from the hospital on his parent's wedding anniversary.

Cyclamate's role in cancer examined

WASHINGTON (AP) — Cyclamate, the artificial sweetener removed from diet soft drinks and other products in 1969 because it appeared to cause bladder cancer in rats, is not a cancer-causing agent, according to a comprehensive study of the substance.

However, the National Academy of Sciences, in a report released earlier this month, said cyclamate may play a secondary role in the formation of cancer that should be examined more closely.

The study by the academy's National Research Council concluded "that the weight of experimental and epidemiological (human lifestyle) evidence does not indicate that cyclamate by itself is carcinogenic."

But the group told the Food and Drug Administration, which requested the study, that there is "suggestive evidence" cyclamate might act as a promoter or co-carcinogen.

A co-carcinogen is an agent that augments or boosts the initial cancer response caused by a true carcinogen. A promoter is a substance administered later that enhances the tumor growth started earlier by an actual carcinogen.

The committee, headed by Dr. Richard J. Havel of the University of California-San Francisco Medical School, said studies suggesting cyclamate may be a promoter or a co-carcinogen were done in animals and cell cultures.

Questions remain about interpreting these results to predict human health effects, the panel said, and some past studies should be repeated using more modern technology to help clarify these issues.

"Cyclamate cannot be given a clean bill of health with respect to cancer," Havel said in a telephone interview. "The cancer enhancement question must be looked at in more detail. We now know that cancer is likely to be a multi-step process, so promotion aspects become more important."

Most previous human-use studies examined the relationship between using cyclamate-saccharin mixtures and bladder cancer, the committee said. But, data from these studies have not shown a clear increased risk of bladder cancer in most categories of users, it said.

Animals given high doses of cyclamate also showed evidence of some genetic damage and testicle shrinkage.

Vegetables contain calcium

Solomon

Dear Dr. Solomon: Are there any foods besides milk or milk products that can provide a person with calcium? Usually, when someone speaks of calcium, they always seem to be referring to some form of milk. — Ms. J.K., Tulsa, Okla.

Dear Ms. K.: Leafy vegetables are a source of calcium.

Dear Dr. Solomon: Can you give me some idea about the amount of calcium in the human body? Since bones are heavy, I assume there must be a great deal. — Lou, N.Y.

Dear Lou: The adult human body contains about three pounds of calcium. About 99 percent of this amount provides hardness for the bones and teeth. About one percent of the calcium is contained in body fluids.

Dear Dr. Solomon: I understand that there is no hard evidence that vitamins A and C can help prevent cancer, but I would like to increase my intake of these vitamins without taking pills. Can you list some of the foods that contain vitamins A and C, and how much of these kinds of foods should a person have each day? — Mrs. B.O., Lowell, Mass.

Dear Mrs. O.: Vitamins A and C can be obtained from dark green vegetables, yellow-orange vegetables, and yellow-orange fruits. Some of the foods that contain vitamin A include broccoli, kale, spinach, sweet potatoes, pumpkin, cantaloupe and apricots. Vitamin C is found in oranges, grapefruit, green pepper, brussel sprouts and collards.

All the vitamins A and C the body can use can be obtained from two helpings of these foods each day.

Dear Dr. Solomon: I would like to ask a question that I know is not practical, but I think that it would help me better understand the place of salt in the average person's diet. What I would like to know is if salt is so bad, has anyone ever suggested that a law be pased preventing it from being used? — Anthony, Falls Church, Va.

Dear Anthony: Your suggestion, which you agree is not practical, would be a drastic solution to a problem that affects only a relatively small portion of the population. Only about five to 10 percent of individuals are salt-sensitive. In addition, salt is important as a preservative and for curing meats. And finally, foods such as meat, milk and grain are high in sodium, and people who stopped eating these foods might experience dietary deficiencies.

There isn't the slightest chance that a law restricting the use of salt could be enacted, but if it were, it would cause many more problems than it solved.

For Lucas, Youngstown, Ohio: The Recommended Dietary Allowances (RDAs) for some nutrients are divided into two age categories — one for people 51 to 75 years of age, and the other for those 76 years of age and older. For other nutrients, the RDAs apply to all people 51 years of age and older. Your physician should be able to be more precise in advising you about your nutritional needs.

DEAR ABBY

Older students return to school

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: My son, who has a wife and two children, just received his law degree at the age of 31. Our whole family is tremendously proud of him, and we have you to thank for it. He said a letter he read in your column inspired him to return to college and become a lawyer. He shared that letter with us, and I had it framed and presented it to him at his graduation.

Please run it again, Abby. It may inspire others who think it's too late to realize that it's not too late at all.

With love ... A FRIEND IN SAN FRANCISCO

DEAR FRIEND: What an upper your letter was! Here is the piece, with special congratulations to your son, the lawyer:

DEAR ABBY: I am a 36-year-old college dropout whose lifelong ambition was to be a physician. I have a very good job selling pharmaceutical supplies, but my heart is still in the practice of medicine. I do volunteer work at the local hospital on my time off, and people tell me I would have made a wonderful doctor.

If I go back to college and get my degree, then go to medical school, do my internship and finally get into the actual practice of medicine, it will take me seven years! But, Abby, in seven years I will be 43 years old. What do you think? — UNFULFILLED IN PHILLY

DEAR UNFULFILLED: And how old will you be in seven years if you DON'T do it?

DEAR ABBY: We have an only child — a grown daughter we dearly love — and when we pass on, we want to leave her our entire estate, which is considerable.

The thing that troubles us is this: Our daughter is married to a very unworthy character. For years he has taken advantage of her sweet, forgiving, generous nature because he knows she worships him. We are sure that whatever we leave our daughter will be spent on this dirty dog.

How can we prevent this from happening? — BEWILDERED

DEAR BEWILDERED: There is no way you can control the way your daughter spends her inheritance. But feeling as you do about her husband, please consider leaving a nice sum to your local animal shelter. That way you can be sure that some four-legged dogs will also benefit.

DEAR ABBY: Both of our sons have been married for about 15 years. Their wives were of normal weight when they married our sons, but one daughter-in-law weighs about 300 pounds and the other weighs about 225. Their ages are 35 and 37. Both our sons are good-looking, and neither is fat.

Our daughters-in-law seem to have no pride in their appearance, which upsets everyone in the family, except themselves. They are fat, they know it and they don't care! When they first began to put on weight, they tried various diets, pills, doctors, etc., but they both gave up and decided to "accept" themselves as they are.

They wear the wrong kind of clothes (shorts and blue jeans) without any apologies.

Our problem (my husband's and mine) is how do we cope with this? We are ashamed to be around them. Our sons have accepted the situation, but we seem unable to.

Perhaps we need more help than the girls. Any suggestions? — UPSET IN FLORIDA

DEAR UPSET: I am glad you suggested that perhaps the problem is yours, because it is. It's your privilege to avoid uncomfortable situations, but it's their right to dress and look as they please.

I urge you to look into counseling in order to help you accept that which you cannot change. You seem to be an intelligent woman. I hope for the sake of your sons' happiness and your own peace of mind that you learn to live and let live without being judgmental.

Heroin still major problem

Hearst News Service

In the century since its discovery, heroin has moved from medicinal pain-killing to illegal euphoric use. The opiate is produced from poppies grown commercially in the "golden crescent" of Iran, Afghanistan and Pakistan.

In Northern California, it is now the No. 1 priority target of the U.S. Drug Enforcement Agency.

"Cocaine was No. 1 for several years," said Robert Cox at the agency's San Francisco office. "But we shifted priority this year because we see a little more heroin, and a little better quality coming in."

The latest price in the Bay Area, he said, is $5,000 to $6,000 an ounce, or $150 to $350 a gram. "But those are wholesale prices."

An addict uses one/half gram or less at a time. Starting with one $25 bag, he will rapidly need more, at a cost of $100 up per day.

A government-sponsored study by the Research Triangle Institute reported total drug abuse is costing the nation nearly $60 billion each year in health care, crime and productivity loss.

Poppies monitored

Legitimate opium-poppy production is monitored by a United Nations treaty signed by 116 countries, which acknowledges the plant's medicinal properties while requiring the elimination of illicit poppy production. India, the largest legal opium producer, harvested 997 metric tons in 1983. The largest grower of illicit poppies is Burma.

Dollar mixed

LONDON (AP) — The dollar was mixed in thin European trading early today amid conflicting commercial transactions. Gold prices were a shade lower.

Dealers said the dollar was bid up in Far East trading and early morning dealings in London by several large commercial orders — from companies needing dollars to complete business transactions.

But several sell orders from firms needing other currencies wiped out much of the dollar's gains, they said.

In Tokyo, where trading ends before Europe's business day begins, the dollar rose to a closing 249.06 yen from Friday's 248.32. Later, in London, it was quoted at 248.75 yen.

Other dollar rates at midmorning, compared with late Friday:

—3.0790 West German marks, down from 3.0820.

—2.5678 Swiss francs, up from 2.5635.

—9.3645 French francs, down from 9.3850.

—3.4740 Dutch guilders, up from 3.4585.

Gold opened in London at a bid price of $313.25 an ounce, compared with late Friday's $314.25. At midmorning today, the city's five major bullion dealers fixed a recommended price of $314.10.

In Zurich, the noon bid price was $313.90, down from $314.50 late Friday.

Trading on the Hong Kong bullion market was suspended because of reports of a typhoon. The storm disrupted travel, but caused little damage.

Silver was quoted in London at a bid price of $6.09 an ounce, down from Friday's $6.14.

ARCO president to retire; board selects new chief

LOS ANGELES — William F. Kieschnick, Atlantic Richfield's president, chief executive and architect of the company's restructuring effort, will resign effective Oct. 15, the Los Angeles-based company announced Sunday after a board meeting in Anchorage, Alaska. The board chose Lodwrick M. Cook, 57, chief of Arco's products division, as Kieschnick's successor.

It had been rumored for about six weeks that Kieschnick, who is 62, would resign. Kieschnick denied those rumors in an interview with the Los Angeles Times a month ago, saying he had no plans to retire soon. "But that doesn't mean I'll wait to the last minute of the last hour," he said in the interview.

The Arco board was scheduled to meet Monday at the headquarters of Arco Alaska in Anchorage, but the meeting was moved up a day because of its importance to the company, an Arco spokesman said. None of Arco's executives or directors were available for comment Sunday.

Oil industry analysts expressed surprise at Kieschnick's resignation. "I don't think you can read anything into it other than what you see on the surface — that Kieschnick apparently wanted to resign," said Todd Bergman, an analyst with Goldman, Sachs & Co. in New York.

M. Craig Schwerdt, an oil analyst with Morgan, Olmstead, Kennedy & Gardner in Los Angeles, said it appeared that Kieschnick's motives may have been financial. Schwerdt said Kieschnick probably wouldn't receive a bigger pension if he remained until age 65. And, as an outside director of the company, he would be paid, Schwerdt said.

Others doubted that Arco's early retirement package, which adds five years to the age and service of an employee who resigns as of June 30, was a major factor in Kieschnick's decision. By adding five years to Kieschnick's service, he would be eligible for an additional $60,000 or so annually in pension, according to figures in Arco's proxy statement. Under the early retirement package, Kieschnick's pension would be about $480,000 a year. That's more than Kieschnick would probably receive if he waited more than two years and retired at 65, with 37 years of service. Kieschnick, who spent his entire career at Arco, earns $825,000 in salary and incentive payments, according to the company's most recent proxy statement.

The early retirement program is part of a vast, companywide reorganization announced eight weeks ago. Arco is closing or selling 2,000 East Coast gas stations, reducing its exploration efforts and repurchasing $4 billion worth of stock. The company has agreed to sell 400 of those stations to Shell Oil.

Officials say conspirators pocketed duties

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Conspirators illegally pocketed millions of dollars in unpaid export duties by claiming to sell sugar in foreign ports while they actually were dumping it on the domestic market, federal prosecutors say.

So far, a nationwide investigation has resulted in four multi-count indictments against more than 20 individuals or corporations, U.S. Attorney John Volz said.

Trading companies in Louisiana, New Jersey, Florida, Puerto Rico and the British Virgin Islands were alleged to have taken part in the scam, which involved sugar moved — or not moved — through Louisiana ports.

Federal officials said a tip led them to a check of falsified bills of lading. In the bills, the schemers claimed they were shipping sugar in non-existent ships in amounts far too great in fact for any one port to handle.

Importers brought cheap foreign sugar into the United States, paid the duty of between $12 and $15 a hundred pounds, and had it refined. Then, they claimed on documents filed with the government that they were shipping the refined sugar to foreign ports. If the foreign sugar is going back out of the country, the government refunds 99 percent of the duty paid.

But, after pocketing the refunded duty, the brokers put the sugar on the domestic market. They not only got back the duty they paid, they could also sell the sugar on the domestic market cheaper than domestic producers.

So far, there is no hard evidence that the refineries knew what was going on, Volz said.

Oil industry's guru relishes status

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Somewhat by default, Dan Lundberg has become the guru of the gasoline industry.

His family-run company, Lundberg Survey Inc., supplies the industry with the most complete and authoritative price and share-of-market surveys.

On its face, that does not sound too scintillating, and Lundberg operated his business for the first 20 years in relative obscurity, little known outside the oil industry that purchased his findings.

That ended abruptly in 1974 when the Arab oil embargo sent gasoline prices soaring and left motorists waiting in long lines to buy fuel.

The public's interest was focused on the gasoline industry, and the media began turning regularly to Lundberg for analysis and predictions. That's when he began publishing some of his information in weekly surveys that were snapped up by the media.

The white-haired, goateed Lundberg, who looks not unlike Harlan Sanders of fried-chicken fame, is fiercely independent about his operation.

"We don't carry a sword for anyone," the 72-year-old Lundberg said. "Hence, we're not vulnerable like advertising agencies, and that's why the industry respects us as independent, objective and critical."

"You'd have to go pretty far in the petroleum industry to find someone who doesn't buy something from us," Lundberg added, sitting in a high-backed chair in his modest office.

The building is not particularly easy to find.

From the front, it is a non-descript, single-story stucco in the San Fernando Valley suburb of North Hollywood. There is no sign on the building except the street address.

But inside, the 10,000-square-foot building, which once housed 30 medical offices, is abuzz with workers collecting, compiling and analyzing statistics on the retail gasoline business.

Much of the maze of offices is devoted to library storage.

"History is what lets you put the present in perspective," said Lundberg's daughter, Trilby, 35, who edits the newsletter and is, according to her father, "half the brains of this outfit."

"Actually," Lundberg said with a smile, "I must confess to nepotism."

His wife of 37 years, Mesa, a journalist-turned-lawyer, is the company's chief counsel. One son, Jan, 32, is client relations manager, and another son, Darius, 26, is communications director.

No one has a secretary.

The company, with revenues of about $4 million a year, has a full-time staff of about 40 writers, editors and statisticians. It also employs about 250 part-timers who make weekly checks of 17,500 gas stations scattered throughout the 50 states.

"I don't want you to think I'm bragging," Lundberg told his interviewer, but he clearly relishes the status and the forum that his role provides him.

For the past 3½ years, Lundberg has been doing semi-weekly, two-minute commentaries for the Public Broadcasting Service's "Nightly Business Report." Other regular commentators, he points out, include economists Arthur Laffer, Lester Thurow, Alan Greenspan and Walter Heller.

This year, Lundberg was one of two recipients of the National Energy Resources Organization's public education award. The other was Wanda Jablonski of Petroleum Intelligence Weekly, a newsletter that focuses on international crude oil markets.

A persistent theme to which Lundberg keeps returning is the vital role of the petroleum industry in keeping the nation running — and the responsibility the industry has to protect the public's needs.

Analyst says gas prices up 10 cents a gallon

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Despite a decline in international crude oil costs, the average pump price of gasoline rose a quarter-cent in the last two weeks, oil industry analyst Dan Lundberg says.

The boost continued a climb that began in February, the publisher of the oil-oriented Lundberg Letter said Sunday.

"This latest two-week increase has occurred in spite of widely reported declines in the international and domestic price postings for crude oil," he said in a telephone interview.

Motorists are paying almost $1.24 for an average gallon of gas this week, nearly 10 cents more than they were paying in February when the average price was just about $1.14 a gallon, said Lundberg, who surveys 17,000 service stations in 50 states every two weeks.

In Lundberg's latest survey, the average price of a gallon of regular leaded gasoline at self-serve pumps was nearly $1.12, regular unleaded was almost $1.20 a gallon and premium unleaded was almost $1.32 a gallon. About 75 percent of all gasoline sales are at self-serve pumps.

He said the price of crude oil has fallen by an average of $1.70 a barrel in the last several weeks, which normally might lead to a reduction of 2 cents to 3 cents a gallon in retail prices.

If international prices fall no further, Lundberg said he expects prices to continue rising, for several reasons:

—Refiners are trying to recoup first-quarter losses.

—Late winter inventories have been depleted, and refiners had to spend money rebuilding stocks in the face of an unseasonal increase in gasoline consumption.

—Refiners had to reduce the amount of lead in gasoline to meet a July 1 deadline set by the Environmental Protection Agency, when an average gallon of leaded gasoline may contain only half a gram of lead. The limit nationally has been 1.1 grams of lead per gallon.

Analyst says GNP 'flash' shows life in expansion

By LEONARD SILK
New York Times News Service

NEW YORK — The just-released "flash" report of the gross national product, showing that the economy has moved up at a 3.1 percent annual rate in the second quarter, said to the markets that there is life in the expansion yet.

"The surprise in the new figures," said Robert Ortner, chief economist of the Commerce Department, "was on the upside." Most market analysts and economists had been expecting real GNP to come in at a rate closer to that of the first quarter, which the Commerce Department revised downward to a mere 0.3 percent — next to nothing.

The flash report is really a projection for the quarter as a whole, based on preliminary data for April and part of May, and will undergo three later revisions. On balance, however, Ortner finds the first GNP report "reasonable."

Not all economists were surprised by the report. The University of Michigan's Research Seminar in Quantitative Economics had it right on the nose two weeks ago. "For the current quarter," it said in a June 7 report, "we expect to see real GNP rebound to a growth rate of about 3¼ percent, and we are forecasting an average growth rate of 3.6 percent from mid-'85 through the end of 1986. Thus, in our forecast, recession is averted."

ANALYSIS

The key to the Michigan forecast of renewed growth at a moderate rate was the belief that congressional progress in reducing the budget deficit would permit the Federal Reserve to hold to a more expansionary monetary policy, implying lower interest rates, a lower dollar, an ultimate improvement in the U.S. net export position and a stronger domestic economy.

The Michigan forecasters are not the only optimists. Albert M. Wojnilower, chief economist of the First Boston Corp., sometimes known as "Dr. Doom" for his bearish forecasts, said, the day before the new GNP figure was released, "Viewed as a whole, the economy continues to perform well and the outlook is good." He found employment growing "at an extraordinary pace" and the automotive, construction and military industries thriving. He said the business climate was soft because new and small firms had been providing most of the gain in sales and employment while many large companies had fared poorly.

It is increasingly evident that the United States has become a "two-tiered economy," in which one tier, the service sector and "knowledge" industries, is moving ahead while the second tier, including manufacturing, mining and farming, is declining. "The second tier is dying," George Perry of the Brookings Institution said Thursday.

Although that view may be too strong, the pains in the second tier have had a major impact on the business mood and public policy, including at the Fed. The high-priced dollar, combined with excess capacity, has put heavy pressure on American producers, restraining prices, wages and profit margins. The price index used by the Commerce Department to adjust GNP for inflation rose at an annual rate of only 3.2 percent in the second quarter, down from 5.4 percent in the first quarter.

Uncertainty has been fed by concern about the soundness of credit and of lending institutions. Henry Kaufman, executive director and chief economist of Salomon Brothers, who sometimes plays the role of "Dr. Gloom" to Wojnilower's "Dr. Doom," recently warned a congressional committee that "the integrity of credit is being chipped away by a financial revolution that is contributing to the lowering of credit standards."

Because, as Wojnilower puts it, the Federal Reserve is now basing its monetary policy largely on GNP rather than monetary targets, the stronger second-quarter GNP figure raises questions about where the Fed goes from here. Until the new report, the prime rate cut at major banks to 9½ from 10 percent had increased expectations that the Fed would soon cut the discount rate once more. Those expectations are now shaken.

"There may be just enough growth," Perry says, "to make the Fed nervous about pushing the economy any harder." He adds, "The Fed would have been smarter to do it sooner."

In a meeting with a small group of reporters Wednesday, Preston Martin, a Reagan appointee who is vice chairman of the Fed, said the central bank had been "quite accommodative so far, without rekindling inflation." But, he cautioned, the Fed must not "overdo it." If the budget deficit were not brought down by congressional action, he said, the Fed would be "greatly inhibited, so as not to monetize deficits and lead to inflation."

The new GNP report raises concerns whether interest rates will keep moving down — not only because the market quickly began to mark up interest rates but because, in Martin's words, "the Fed reinforces the market's actions."

Officials investigate linkage between incidents

TORONTO (AP) — Canadian and Indian officials are investigating the possibility of a link between the crash of an Air-India jumbo jet out of Toronto and an explosion in luggage from a Vancouver-to-Tokyo flight.

A Toronto newspaper today quoted unidentified Indian officials as saying two Sikh fugitives were suspects in both disasters Sunday.

A Canadian official, meanwhile, said his government was investigating an anonymous caller's claim that a Sikh student group placed a bomb on the Air-India jet.

Militants of India's Sikh community, a religious minority of 13 million among a predominately Hindu population of 730 million, have been agitating for autonomy or independence. Sikhs have been accused of assassinating the late Prime Minister Indira Gandhi.

Indian Civil Aviation Minister Ashok Gehlot said "there may be a linkage between the two" incidents.

"Certainly people are looking at the possibility of a connection between the two incidents," said Sean Brady, spokesman for Foreign Secretary Joe Clark. He said the government was "definitely looking at" the anonymous claim on behalf of the Sikhs.

Canadian Press quoted an unidentified senior government official as saying Sunday that "there are a number of little things starting to come up suggesting very strongly that these incidents are linked. There are a number of very interesting leads right now that people are following."

No survivors have been found from Air-India Flight 182, which was carrying 329 when it apparently exploded and crashed in the North Atlantic 120 miles southwest of the Irish coast. The airline said 278 Canadians were aboard, almost all of Indian descent.

Two Japanese baggage handlers were killed when luggage from Canadian Pacific Air Flight 003 exploded while being unloaded at Narita Airport outside Tokyo.

Foreign Secretary Joe Clark called the luggage explosion a "terrorist bombing." Gehlot said an explosion caused by sabotage was a "distinct" possibility for the Air-India crash.

A young male called The New York Times and said the Air-India crash was caused by a bomb set by the All-India Sikh Student Federation.

The student group was outlawed year for allegedly recruiting a guerrilla-type army to fight for independence for India's 13 million Sikhs, members of a warrior sect that broke away from Hinduism. The ban was lifted recently.

A former leader of the Sikh Student Federation in Vancouver told Canadian Press that the group no longer existed and said the claim was "baloney."

The Toronto Globe and Mail reported today that Indian government officials, whom it did not name, suspected both incidents were the work of two Sikhs wanted by the FBI in connection with an alleged plot to assassinate Indian Prime Minister Rajiv Gandhi.

Sikh separatists assassinated Gandhi's mother, the late Prime Minister Indira Gandhi, last year.

Asked about the newspaper report, FBI duty officer Lane Bonner said in Washington, "I have no information on that at all."

The newspaper quoted the Indian officials as saying one of the fugitives had a ticket for the Vancouver-to-Tokyo flight. The newspaper said he did not board the plane but his luggage apparently was loaded.

The other fugitive flew to Toronto on Saturday, where the Air-India flight originated. The Boeing 747 flew to Montreal and was scheduled to be refueled in London, then proceed to New Delhi and Bombay.

A second anonymous caller told the Canadian Broadcasting Corp. that the Kashmir Liberation Army was responsible for the Air-India crash. The liberation army is a terrorist group that seeks independence for Kashmir, India's northernmost state. Kashmiris, who also live in adjoining Pakistan, form a Moslem, Urdu-speaking minority in mostly Hindu India.

In New Delhi, Home Ministry spokesman M.S. Krishnarao said his government was investigating the conflicting claims and would take "proper steps" when "substantial information" is gained.

Meanwhile, Transportation Minister Don Mazankowski ordered stricter security at all Canadian airports, including inspection of all luggage on international flights by X-ray or trained dogs. He said all international cargo would be held at least 24 hours before a flight.

"I am sure all passengers appreciate the seriousness of this matter and will understand any inconvenience or delay," Mazankowski said.

Brady said Indian officials asked for additional security for Indian diplomats and Air-India flights about a month ago, without explaining why.

"The Indian government did request increased protection and did receive it," Brady said.

A memorial service for victims of the crash was set for Saturday at Toronto City Hall.

The National Association of Canadians of Origin in India set up hotlines to help grieving relatives, said Shankar Rao, regional vice president in Montreal.

Indians' trip to greet relatives ends in tragedy

NEW DELHI, India (AP) — For many Indians, a long trip from the countryside in anticipation of greeting relatives from abroad ended in tragedy with the stunning news that all 329 passengers aboard Air-India Flight 182 were dead.

Satyawati Bajaj traveled all day Sunday by bus from her home in Sharanpur, 180 miles northeast of New Delhi, to pick up her daughter Anju, 21. The young woman was returning from Canada to be married.

It was not until Mrs. Bajaj, 65, arrived Sunday night at New Delhi airport that she learned that the plane carrying her daughter and 328 other people had plunged into the Atlantic Ocean off the Irish coast. Indian officials said the plane may have exploded.

There were no survivors, a soft-spoken airline official told her.

Wailing, Mrs. Bajaj sank to the floor of the arrival hall, clutching a basket of fruit she had brought for her daughter.

Harbhajan Singh Saran, a Sikh from Patiala in Punjab, stood in silence when he heard the news that his 22-year-old daughter, Paramjit Kaur, had also perished.

His two sons, who had made the 120-mile trip with their father, broke down and sobbed.

"We had planned a great reception for her at home and had driven all the way here only to drive her back to Patiala for a quick family reunion," Sarna told reporters.

Because so many people had traveled long distances to meet their loved ones in New Delhi and in Bombay, many did not received the shocking news until nearly eight hours after the crash.

Those traveling without radios had no way of knowing of the disaster until they arrived at the airport a few hours before the plane would have arrived.

Air-India, the country's international flag carrier, set up special offices in New Delhi and Bombay, which was to have been the final destination of Flight 182, to answer inquiries.

All-India Radio and the national television network broadcast telephone numbers of the centers for those unable or unwilling to make the trip to the airports.

"God, it was sad to see the look on their faces when they found the names they were looking for," said one airline official in Bombay who asked not to be identified.

"One lady just broke down reading the list. She wouldn't tell us whom she had lost," the official said.

For one airline official, the duty of notifying families carried special pain. The victims included the sister-in-law and nephew of S.V.B. Rao, assistant sales manager of Air-India.

Airline officials said the plane was packed with families, including about 80 children. Many of the victims resided in Canada but had roots in India. New Delhi newspapers said at least eight young women were returning to their ancestral homeland to marry.

The plane's 22-member crew included Pursuer J. Dinshaw and his flight attendant wife P. Dinshaw. Also on it was a flight engineer, D.D. Dumasia, who was scheduled to retire from the airline in October.

Five American families thought to be among dead

Associated Press

Five entire American families of Indian origin were believed to have been among the dead as an Air-India Boeing 747 jumbo jet carrying 329 people plunged into the Atlantic off Ireland, scattering debris and bodies over five miles of ocean.

Of at least 28 American residents reported aboard, seven were known to have been U.S. citizens, and others were Indian citizens who had immigrated to the United States.

Those believed killed include 18 from Michigan, including at least four families from metropolitan Detroit, three groups from Buffalo, N.Y., and the Rajeshwar Gupta family from suburban Cincinnati.

Harlal Choudhury, a Gupta family friend, said Sunday, "Like all Indian people, they felt close to their family, and they took pride in visiting family and relatives back home."

"They were very, very excited," he added. "They were very much looking forward to the vacation because it was their first trip back home since coming to the United States."

Believed dead were Gupta, 45; his wife Swatantar, 38; daughter, Vandana, 15, and son, Shaffi, 12, of the Cincinnati suburb of Anderson Township.

Irish officials said Air-India Flight 182, flying from Toronto and Montreal to a fueling stop in London, then to India, vanished from their radar screens without a distress call. Search aircraft and boats rushed to the crash site and began recovering bodies.

Air-India officials could not immediately confirm the full names and hometowns of all passengers aboard.

The other American residents believed aboard included seven U.S. citizens: a suburban Detroit family of five, and a woman and her daughter from suburban Buffalo, N.Y.

Other American residents included three other suburban Detroit families and two women and two children from suburban Buffalo.

Pulivelil K. Jacob, his wife and three children, of Canton Township in suburban Detroit, boarded the plane in Toronto, said Jacob Mathews, who described the family as his close friends and American citizens. They were bound for a visit with relatives in southern India, said Mathews, of Dearborn Heights.

He identified the family as Jacob, about 43; his wife, Aleykutty, about 42; and their three children, Jessey, 13, Jhansy, 11, and Jestin, 8.

Air-India's passenger list contains the names of P. Jacob and four other Jacobs without first initials.

Aleykutty Job, 42, of Tonawanda, a Buffalo suburb, also was believed to have been aboard the flight. She was flying with her daughter, Teena, 14, said her cousin Joseph Madathil of Rochester, N.Y.

Ms. Job and her daughter were American citizens, Madathil said, and were on their way to India to visit the girl's grandparents.

Air-India's initial list included two Jobs, one with a first initial "A."

Prabha Reddy, 35, of North Tonawanda, N.Y., boarded the plane in Toronto to visit relatives in India, said her husband, Molakala Reddy.

Reddy, an assistant professor and researcher of oral biology at the State University of New York at Buffalo's school of dental medicine, said the family had been in the United States for the past seven years.

The name Reddy was not included on the passenger list, but a Prabha Molakala was among the names provided by Air-India.

Sundar Swaminathan, of Sterling Heights, Mich., said his wife Indira, 38; and their children Anand, 15, Padma, 8, and Ramya, 5, were aboard the plane. Three Swaminathans were on Air-India's list.

Dr. Ruth Asirwatham and her two daughters, Sunita, 14, and Anita, 11, all of Cheektowaga, also in suburban Buffalo, were also on the flight, the woman's husband, Dr. John Asirwatham, said.

The name Ruth Ashirvatham and the last name of Ashirvatham were on the list provided by Air-India.

Sudhir Gupta, of Farmington Hills, Mich., said his wife, Shashi, daughter, Arti, 9, and son, Amit, 6, were on the plane.

G.K. Subramanian, 43, a Detroit Edison engineer; his wife, Jaya, 38; their son, Murali, 13; and daughter, Sumita, 3, all of Ypsilanti, Mich., were on the flight, a man identifying himself as N. Bali and a friend of the family told station WXYZ-TV in Detroit.

Air-India listed five people with that surname on the passenger list but did not provide first names.

Ramchandar Kumar, 34, and his wife, Chitra, 30, of Ann Arbor, also were believed to have been aboard the plane, said neighbor Chris Tschan. He said Kumar "fixed computers for a living."

Mathews said he and his wife visited the Jacobs Saturday before they left for Toronto to catch the flight.

"Yesterday morning, in fact when they were going, me and my wife went to their house just to see them off and we had a bit of prayer with them," Mathews said.

Radical Moslems guarding hostages; Amal 'observers'

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Gunmen from the radical Islamic Hezbollah group are guarding 40 American hostages in different locations around Beirut while Shiite Moslem Amal militiamen acted as "observers," says a high-ranking Amal official.

Amal took charge of negotiations for the release of the captives June 16. Their principal demand is the freedom of 766 Lebanese prisoners captured by the Israeli army during its three-year occupation of south Lebanon.

The official, who spoke Sunday on condition he not be identified, gave this account of the militia's part in the hostage drama.

Two days after the Boeing 727 was seized on an Athens-to-Rome flight by two members of the Hezbollah — Arabic for Party of God — the dominant Amal militia said it wanted to transfer the remaining 37 passenges to secret locations in Moslem west Beirut, the official said.

When the Hezbollah protested, saying it wanted to maintain control of the hostages, the Amal agreed to form joint teams to guard them.

The three-member American crew remained aboard the plane with the hijackers and several of their Hezbollah comrades, he said.

"Our offer was to keep them secure. We have some unarmed people from Amal with the kidnappers," the official said. "There are Amal (men) on the plane as observers to make sure they (the three hostage crew members) are safe and they are treated properly."

The official said the more moderate Amal militiamen sometimes had problems with the Hezbollah. "For instance, when we asked them to release a sick man — Robert Peel — we had a hard time to make them accept. They said if we let one go, then others would want to go too," the Amal official said.

Peel was released and flown home last week.

The official said there are 17 different Hezbollah groups, some of them financed and directed by Libya and others by the Palestine Liberation Organization, and that they receive their money through the Iranian Embassy in Damascus, Syria.

But he said it was unclear which group hijacked the TWA plane.

The official said Amal had nothing to do with the hijacking and had no prior knowledge of it. "We are against kidnappings," he said.

He described the hijackers as becoming desperate while flying between Beirut and Algiers, Algeria, the day after hijacking the jet.

"They felt really pessimistic. They did not want to give up," the Amal man said.

"We tried to mediate as Amal, to help the hostages and the kidnappers and make all their lives safe. Our first demand was that the lives of the crew and the hostages be secure. We asked them, 'What are your demands?'

"They said they were three. Firstly the freeing of prisoners in Atlit in Israel; secondly, freeing of the two prisoners in Spain...; and thirdly, freeing the people jailed in Kuwait."

U.S. 'glad' if Shiites' release helps break hostage deadlock

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration, while holding firm to its position that it will not negotiate with terrorists, acknowledges it would be "glad" if Israel's decision to release 31 Shiite Moslem prisoners helps break the deadlock that keeps the U.S. hostages in Beirut.

President Reagan, meanwhile, says he has ruled out a military option to gain freedom for the 40 Americans held captive by Shiite militiamen.

Both Reagan and Secretary of State George P. Shultz, apparently attempting to downplay speculation that a swap of Arab prisoners for U.S. hostages would follow the Israeli action set for today, denied Sunday there was any "link" between Israel's decision and a final solution to the dilemma.

The Americans were taken hostage 10 days ago after Moslem hijackers commandered a TWA Athens-to-Rome flight and killed one passenger. The hijackers demanded the release of more than 700 prisoners held by the Israelis as a condition for letting the Americans go.

Israel announced Sunday it planned to release 31 Lebanese prisoners today, but emphasized that the move was not meant as part of a deal to gain the release of the Americans.

Even so, Nabih Berri, the Shiite leader who says the Americans are his responsibility, discounted the Israeli announcement and said it did not go far enough to help the Americans. Berri said the entire group of Arab prisoners must be freed.

Reagan, speaking with reporters as he returned from Camp David, Md., said Berri "seems to be the only one" making a connection between the Israeli decision and Americans. "It has nothing to do with our hostages. I don't believe there is any linkage," Reagan said.

When asked if he had ruled out a military response to the hijack crisis, Reagan replied, "Yes."

Shultz, on ABC's "This Week With David Brinkley, said: "Israel will have to do for itself what it wishes to do about those prisoners; that's not connected with the problem in Beirut.

"That problem is the problem of taking people and holding them, by terrorists," the secretary said. "But obviously, if they release one American, we'll be glad to have one American."

Shultz refused to comment on whether the Israeli announcement was an effort to help gain the hostages' release. But he conceded, "Many people will probably say there is a connection."

Throughout the hijack crisis, the Reagan administration has refused to publicly acknowledge it would negotiate a Shiite-for-American swap. Officials say they do not want to give in to terrorism and thereby encourage future strikes against American targets.

"We don't want to get into a position to invite people who have a grievance to grab some Americans," to force the United States to take some action, Shultz said. "We certainly don't want to invite that pattern of behavior."

The State Department, meanwhile, denied as "a fabrication" a Beirut newspaper report that a trade was being worked out under the auspices of the Swiss, Austrian and International Red Cross.

The president did say, however, that "a number of countries" have volunteerd to be of help, and that he was grateful for the offer. But he refused to elaborate.
