Guard evacuating Kerrville area

By the Associated Press

Police said "hundreds of kids" at summer camps along the rampaging Guadalupe River near Kerrville were being evacuated this morning as heavy rains continued to inundate the stricken Hill Country area.

National Guard units were mobilized and at least six Army and Department of Public Safety helicopters were launched to aid with air-to-ground rescue efforts.

A spokesman at the Kendall County sheriff's office in Boerne between Kerrville and San Antonio said all of the camps were safely evacuated by about 10 a.m. except Camp Capers at Kerrville.

"They can't get to them by land so it looks like they're going to have to pull them out by chopper," said the spokesman. He added that the small town of Comfort appeared to be virtually cut off and that "300 to 400 people" were in need of evacuation.

"All we are getting is on our radio," he said. "There is no other way to communicate with those people now. It looks pretty bad."

At the request of the DPS, Gov. Dolph Briscoe this morning mobilized National Guard units in Fredericksburg and Kerrville to help with the evacuation.

At 6:30 a.m., a Department of Public Safety spokesman said the Kerrville DPS office put out the call to the National Guard to help evacuate residents, some of whom were reported standing on the roofs of their submerged homes. Briscoe responded, ordering 15 men and six trucks from the guard unit at Fredericksburg to the scene.

An hour later, Fort Sam Houston dispatched four Army helicopters for air-to-ground rescues. Two DPS helicopters from Corpus Christi and Austin were also summoned and other police helicopters from Austin were placed on emergency standby.

Despite the widespread alarm, no deaths or missing persons had been reported by mid-morning.

Official reports from the stricken area said saturated bottom land near the south fork of the river had received 12 inches of rain by 11 p.m. Tuesday. The rain was still coming down at the rate of two inches an hour this morning.

At the Hill County town of Hunt, flood waters were reported two feet over Texas highway 39. The river's main stream at Ingram was reported four feet over the dam. Police said the river at Center Point was roaring past at 21 feet above normal.

Forecasters said the situation along Guadalupe River and along all its tributaries was "critical" and said the situation along the Sabinal and its tributaries was "serious."

The warnings issued by the NWS were blunt. "Please get away from the Guadalupe River at once," forecasters said in the warning issued at San Antonio.

There were no reports of injuries, but some communications facilities were damaged by lightning accompanied by the heavy, rain-soaked thunderstorms.

A Texas Department of Public Safety spokesman at San Antonio said the DPS reported that about 12 inches of rain fell at the headwaters of the Guadalupe River between 11 p.m. Tuesday and 5:30 a.m. today. He said rainfall rates in the same area were continuing at about two inches per hour.

At Hunt, roaring brown flood water was two feet deep across Texas 39, the DPS said. At Ingram, water from the Guadalupe River was running four feet over a dam. At Center Point, the Guadalupe was running about 21 feet above normal, the spokesman reported.

There were no reports of evacuations in the area, but telephone and power lines were downed in heavy thunderstorms and reports from the area were sketchy.

Lightning damaged some communications equipment at the DPS office at Kerrville, the spokesman said.

Forecasters warned all persons to stay away from both the Guadalupe River and the Sabinal River.

Some urban flooding was reported during the night in San Antonio as heavy amounts of rainfall were reported across a wide area of South Central Texas and in the Hill Country.

Skies were cloudy early today over most of Central and Southeast Texas. The low cloudiness associated with the warm, moist air blowing in from the Gulf of Mexico was expected to move northward into North Central Texas today, taking with it some of the heavy rainfall activity.

Speaker Clayton produces compromise tax legislation

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Scraping to salvage the special legislative session on tax relief, Speaker Bill Clayton today produced a compromise he hopes will attract the required 100 votes in the House.

The compromise involves major changes in a proposed tax relief constitutional amendment and a move to nail down precisely the amount of money it would cost.

The speaker planned to engineer a quick meeting of the House Ways and Means Committee to approve a bill specifying that the constitutional change would involve $450 million in state reimbursement to school districts for the money they would lose because of two provisions.

Replacement revenue would cover the revenue lost because of homestead exemptions from school taxes and taxation of rural land on its productive value rather than market value.

Tower will be here Saturday to endorse Fisher for Congress

The Big Spring Republican Women will sponsor a political rally at the Old Settlers Pavilion in Comanche Trail Park, scheduled for noon to 2:30 p.m., Saturday.

People of all political stripes are being urged to attend the rally and listen to U.S. Senator John Tower and U.S. Congressional candidate Bill Fisher, who will contest Democrat Charles Stenholm in the General Election in November for the 17th District seat now occupied by Omar Burleson.

Tower has indicated that he will officially endorse Fisher at the Big Spring rally. Tower and Fisher will appear in Stephenville the previous evening and will fly here for the rally.

Billy Mac Sheppard will introduce Fisher to the crowd. Fisher will make a brief speech before introducing Tower.

The Republican Women will prepare bags of food for those attending, selling them for $1 each. The bag will include two sandwiches and two bags of potato chips.

After Tower speaks, an appeal for funds to help the Fisher campaign will be undertaken.

Rep. Wayne Peveto, D-Orange, admitted defeat once again in his effort to pass a comprehensive property tax code embodying the principles of the Bryant-Jackson substitute.

Senators had killed their version, 18-9, Monday. Peveto's cosponsor, Rep. Leroy Wieting, D-Portland, got no objection when he moved Tuesday to lay the House version on the table.

"This is a dead issue in this session," Wieting said.

Jackson told reporters Tuesday he felt broad constitutional language with the thrust but not the detail of the Peveto bill would have a chance of Senate acceptance.

Burning roof collapse kills six firemen

NEW YORK (AP) — The roof of a burning Brooklyn supermarket collapsed today, plunging a dozen firemen into an inferno and killing six of them, authorities said.

At least seven firemen fighting the blaze were injured.

Authorities said the six deaths were the greatest loss of life in the New York fire department in single fire in 12 years.

Squads of grim-faced firemen, some with tears streaming from their cheeks, battled the fire at the Walden's supermarket as it burned out of control for more than three hours. The market, which was being renovated but was open for business, is located in the Sheepshead Bay section of Brooklyn, bordering Coney Island and about 12 miles from mid-Manhattan.

About 150 firemen from 30 companies rushed to the fire that escalated to a four-alarm in a short time.

Three of the seven injured firemen were admitted to Coney Island Hospital, which reported none of them was "in any life-threatening situations." They had suffered smoke inhalation and minor burns, a hospital spokesman said.

An undetermined number of firemen also were treated at the scene for smoke inhalation.

The fire appeared to have started in a section of the building undergoing renovation, said Margaret Truduen, who lives nearby. She said she could see heavy smoke coming from the building.

It was the greatest loss of life the department has suffered since 12 firefighters died in a fire that destroyed three buildings in Manhattan's Madison Square on Oct. 17, 1966.

Judge won't block ratification vote

WASHINGTON (AP) — A federal judge refused today to block the nation's largest postal union from proceeding with a rank-and-file contract ratification vote, saying balloting increases the chances for averting a mail strike.

U.S. District Judge Barrington Parker denied a request by a dissident local union leader to stop the vote by 300,000 postal workers on the grounds that the vote would be illegal and could lead to more labor strife.

"The public interest in having the mail undisturbed is obvious," Parker said. But he said it is preferable to hold a ratification vote "sooner rather than later."

Acceptance by the rank and file "increases chances for labor peace," he added.

The American Postal Workers Union said after the decision that the union would begin mailing ballots today. The union estimates it will take about three weeks to complete the ratification process.

The suit for an injunction was brought by John Richards, president of the APWU's Pittsburgh-area local. Richards contended in the suit that union leaders should renegotiate the beleaguered contract with the U.S. Postal Service rather than seek rank-and-file approval.

But the Postal Service has indicated it would be unwilling to return to the bargaining table despite mounting calls by local union leaders for rejection of the pact.

Richards' attorney said he would appeal the decision by Thursday.

Threats of a mail strike have continued since a tentative accord was reached on July 21 because of strong opposition within union ranks.

The three-year agreement has come under increasing attack from local leaders of the APWU and the National Association of Letter Carriers, which together represent 482,000 of 570,000 unionized postal workers.

Last week, APWU members staged wildcat walkouts at postal centers in New Jersey and California to protest the settlement.

On Monday, leaders of the APWU's 23,000-member New York Area Postal Union called for the contract's rejection while delegates to the letter carriers' national convention in Chicago rejected the pact in a non-binding voice vote.

APWU President Emmet Andrews said the main objection to the pact centers on a proposed 19.5 percent wage increase, spread over three years, which dissidents say is not high enough. The typical postal worker now makes about $16,000 a year.

But Andrews said Tuesday that despite opposition to the contract from local leaders, he was receiving favorable mail indicating that the agreement would be ratified by his members.

City offers $200 reward

The city of Big Spring is offering a $200 reward for information leading to the arrest and conviction of vandals who threw rocks through two windows of the Figure Seven Tennis Center Pro Shop around 11:15 p.m. Tuesday, according to Jerry Foresyth, assistant city manager.

Damage to the windows will cost the city some $200. The broken windows were spotted by the city park policeman Tuesday evening.

According to Foresyth, the reward offering is a common practice of the city in an effort to reduce acts of vandalism on city property and serve as a deterrent to others inclined to commit acts of criminal mischief.

Focalpoint

Action/reaction: Farmers rig roads?

Q. Why doesn't the County Commissioners Court do something to prevent a large number of farmers from tearing up the county's roads? All over the county the paved roads are torn up by farmers making their turning rows on paved roads. Taxpayers should drive out and see for themselves.

A. Unless you want the commissioners out in unmarked cars, there's little they can do. According to the Highway Patrol, it is legal for farmers to make their turns on the roads. It is illegal for them to drop dirt or damage the road. The Sheriff's department has asked for cooperation from the farmers, and will hopefully get it. In the meantime, as long as cotton farming is big in the county, you're just going to have to live with farmers and tractors.

Calendar: Public hearing booked

Offbeat: Termite-like fans

This is the time of the year when Dallas Cowboy fans pile out of the woodwork like fanatical termites dressed in blue and white.

No one knows this better than Jim Lancaster of Big Spring Cable TV and the Herald Sports Department. After receiving numerous inquiries concerning the broadcast of the Cowboys' first pre-season game this Saturday against the San Francisco 49ers, Lancaster called Dallas to find out if the game would be televised.

"Channel 8 told me that the NBC affiliate in Dallas would carry the game. That's channel 5," said Lancaster. "Since our cable service doesn't carry that particular station, I called channel 2 in Midland, our NBC station. They said they would broadcast the game at 8:26 o'clock Saturday night."

Caveat Emptor! Poke fans, your worries are over. Roger Staubach, Tony Dorsett, Harvey Martin, et. al. will be on the boob tube this Saturday. Enjoy yourselves.

Tops on TV: 'The conversation'

As rerun season wears on, the old standards like "Charlie's Angels" and "Starsky and Hutch" just don't make the grade. So watch four-star "The Conversation" starring Gene Hackman on CBS at 8 p.m. or at the same time tune in Great Performances "Out of Our Father's House" on PBS. "The Conversation" traces the sudden trauma of a bugging expert when he learns one of his tapes may be used for murder, while Great Performances traces the emergence of six women from male-dominated worlds.

TOTIE FIELDS

Totie Fields dies today

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — Comedienne Totie Fields died today, an official at Sunrise Hospital said. She was 48.

Miss Fields, who had suffered various ailments for more than two years, was dead when brought to the hospital by private ambulance, according to Rena Lees, a spokeswoman at the hospital.

"The coroner hasn't been here yet, so I can't really say the cause of death," Miss Lees said.

Two years ago, Miss Fields entered St. Joseph Hospital in Stamford, Conn., for minor surgery.

While there, she developed phlebitis in her left leg and was taken to Columbia Presbyterian Hospital in New York for vascular surgery in April 1976. The surgery to remove the blood clot was unsuccessful, and her left leg was amputated above the knee on April 21, 1976.

She returned to Los Angeles for therapy, and then to her home in Las Vegas. While in a hospital here, she suffered two heart attacks.

Industrial Committee backs 'Jobs for Texans' amendment

Members of the Industrial Committee of the Big Spring Area Chamber of Commerce gathered Tuesday to hear an endorsement of a constitutional amendment which would authorize industrial revenue bonds.

The Chamber had already gone on record endorsing and supporting the passage of Amendment 2 to the Texas

Constitution authorizing such bonds.

The proposed amendment, which will appear on the ballot Nov. 7, will permit both cities and counties to issue revenue bonds in order to create jobs.

At the present, Texas is one of four states now allowing the sale of industrial revenue bonds.

This seminar will be of interest to all persons working with substance abusers and to those interested in learning more about this universal problem. We are fortunate to have a well-known consultant for this workshop: Melvin Sikes, Ph.D., director, Center for Improvement of Interpersonal Relations, from the University of Texas at Austin, Austin.

The next seminar will be conducted at the Big Spring State Hospital Oct. 13.

Detroit workers strike

DETROIT (AP) — Despite a court order and threats they would lose their jobs unless they returned to work, striking employees of the nation's sixth-largest city stuck to their picket lines today. Tuesday's wildest walkout by 3,500 sanitation workers, garage mechanics and clerks halted bus transportation, garbage collection and local preparations for next week's state primary election.

Some pressure removed

BOSTON (AP) — One big pressure has been removed from Sen. Edward Brooke with the announcement that Suffolk County will not charge him with perjury. But the Republican, who is running for a third term, faces two more investigations. Suffolk County District Attorney Garrett Byrne issued a report Tuesday saying he would not institute any proceedings against Brooke, who admitted making false statements in sworn divorce papers.

Dollar makes recovery

LONDON (AP) — The U.S. dollar made a modest recovery on European money markets today after hitting a new low in Tokyo for the eighth consecutive trading day. The price of gold eased but was still above $200 an ounce.

The dollar finished the day in Tokyo at 184.65 yen, down from 187.95 at the close of trading Tuesday. The drop was equal to about 1.75 cents, a greater rate of decline than Tuesday's 1.5 cent drop.

Carter aide resigns

WASHINGTON (AP) — After 18 months as an outsider among the inner circle, Margaret "Midge" Costanza is resigning as a top aide to President Carter. The controversial firebrand, who had witnessed a steady erosion of her power, hand-delivered a letter of resignation on Monday, just days after she "had words" with President Carter.

The amendment would clear the way for cities or counties to approve such bonds for the development of industrial areas to alleviate unemployment by the promotion of industrial development, according to the guidelines.

Those advocating passage of the legislation refer to it as the "Jobs for Texans" amendment.

The bill has certain restrictions considered important. Bonds would be issued by the city council or the county commissioner's court on a local option basis. Although title of facilities rests with the issuing political subdivision, the occupant must pay ad valorem taxes. Bonds cannot be used to move a plant from one place in Texas to another.

The Attorney General, the State Securities Commission and the Texas Industrial Commission must approve the bonds.

The bonds must meet all state laws now in existence for their issuance and cannot be issued to purchase a facility and release it to the same occupant.

Other safeguards include a restriction of the Federal Government that a bond issue cannot exceed $5 million.

A supporter of the amendment said that in the last five years Texas has lost 52 industries to other sunbelt states, mainly New Mexico and Arizona. Company representatives indicated the reason for choosing another state was because of the industrial revenue bonds. No tax can be used to pay off the bonds, it was emphasized. Such taxes are strictly prohibited. Too, ad valorem taxes can still be collected by the city and county, as if the leasee owned the land.

A Texas Political Action Committee is being organized to support and make the public more aware of the proposed amendment.

The chamber's resolution supporting the amendment was signed by Ray Don Williams, president, and W.L. (Bill) Albright, executive vice president.

Marine Private First Class Robert Delgado Jr., son of Margarita M. Corrales of Big Spring, recently participated in exercise "Varsity Cleanex" off the Southern California coast.

He is assigned to the 1st Battalion, Eleventh Marines, based at Camp Pendleton, Calif.

More than 17,000 Navy and Marine Corps personnel participated in the 11-day exercise which included 24 ships and approximately 250 aircraft. "Varsity Cleanex" was designed to provide Marine Corporal Larry D. Johnson, son of Ivy C. and Ola M. Johnson of Route 3, Box 100, and 520 E. Ninth St., respectively, Colorado City, recently participated in exercise "Palm Tree 6-78" in the California desert.

He is assigned to the 2nd Division Support Group at Camp Lejeune, N.C.

Conducted at Marine Corps Air-Ground Combat Training Center, Twenty-nine Palm, Calif., "Palm Tree 6-78" tested the capability of a battalion landing team to deploy by strategic airlift and to provide realistic live-fire training. The exercise stressed coordinated air and artillery fire support for infantry units.

Burglars loot mobile home

Howard County deputies are investigating the burglary of a mobile home Tuesday which resulted in a $1,000 loss for owner C.J. Sanders.

Located near Pats and Tubbs roads, the back door of the trailer had apparently been left unlocked while Sanders was working at the Big Spring Herald during the day. The thieves entered and scooped up tools, a 12-gauge Columbia shotgun, and a 22-caliber bolt-action Sears rifle.

The burglary was reported by Sanders at 7:05 p.m. Tuesday.

Ezzell rates star on 'Speaker's list'

Krueger's campaign chief in spotlight

AUSTIN — Administrative aides and campaign workers should be neither seen nor heard, at least for the record.

That's an unwritten policy in most governmental and political circles. It's the boss who needs and wants public exposure.

But two aides entered into the public spotlight recently, one intentionally and the other unintentionally.

Garry Mauro, U.S. Rep. Bob Krueger's campaign manager, is taking a public role in the Democrat's effort to unseat Republican U.S. Sen. John Tower.

This once prompted a Tower news release asking, "Who is Garry Mauro? Is he running for office or something?"

A release from Krueger last Monday again quoted Mauro in an attack on Tower.

Using Mauro's name is strange because Krueger ranks behind Tower in name recognition.

The unintentional publicity went to Jack Gullahorn, executive assistant to House Speaker Billy Clayton.

Gullahorn drew criticism after a "Speaker's List" was circulated in the House.

The list showed which representatives went with Clayton on seven votes.

Anti-Tower members attacked Gullahorn as source of the list. They said House rules prevent House employees from compiling vote lists.

Clayton played it cool, saying he took care of the matter and didn't want to get

FTC rule will enable consumers to shop around more for glasses

Consumers who have their eyes examined now must receive a copy of their prescription when corrective lenses are called for. This, in the view of the Federal Trade Commission (FTC), will enable consumers to shop around more effectively for eyeglasses and contact lenses.

Last month, the FTC adopted a rule concerning the selling of eyeglasses and contact lenses. The rule, which carries the force of law, removed virtually all public and private restraints on the advertising of price and availability of eye examinations and prescription lenses.

The rule was temporarily delayed beyond the effective date of July 3 by Chief Justice Warren Burger pending consideration of a stay application filed by the American Optometric Association, but on July 13 the Chief Justice lifted the stay and the rule is now in effect.

Police beat $650 ring stolen from automobile

Alberto's Barbecue and Steak House, 4800 W. Hwy 80, was one of a number of businesses on the west end of town which have been burglarized in the past several days. The Alberto's burglary, reported Tuesday, apparently occurred sometime late Sunday or early Monday morning. A cigarette machine was damaged and the coin box taken, as well as pennies stolen from the cash register. The exact value of the damages, which included a window broken in the entry to the building, is unknown.

Scott Winn, 4203 Dixon, reported that a CB radio was stolen sometime between 7 p.m. Monday and 8 a.m. Tuesday. The radio, valued at $70, was in Winn's pickup parked in front of his residence.

She was the driver of one vehicle, while the driver of the other vehicle, Gary Cecil Wyatt, 2401 Marcy, was uninjured.

thought Jones would wait another day before bringing out the issue for a vote. The vote, 9 for an 18 against, indicates 24 hours wouldn't have made any difference. Probably Jones felt the same way.

How is it possible for the lieutenant governor not to have a position on a matter as prominent as the tax reform bill?

That's what Carole Kneeland, reporter for WFFA-TV in Dallas, asked Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby after the bill's defeat. Hobby replied that it was possible because he didn't have a position. It's that simple.

Another simple fact is that by staying neutral, Hobby helped defeat the proposal.

Woman using BB gun to protect property

KITTERY, Maine (AP) — A feisty, 65-year-old woman who vowed to use a BB gun to protect her farmhouse from a wrecking crew has been offered money, a new home and more BBs from sympathizers across the nation.

But Mary Kozlowski is still angry over the loss of her ramshackle home to an arsonist.

"The hell with being a star," she said Tuesday. "I want my house."

Miss Kozlowski, who supplements her Social Security income by picking blueberries, was in the national limelight earlier this year when she vowed to fight a state Department of Transportation decision to demolish her house to make way for a new highway bridge.

On June 19, the day the bulldozers were to arrive, Miss Kozlowski told reporters she would use a BB gun to defend the 80-year-old, two-story farmhouse where she was born and lived with her parents until they died.

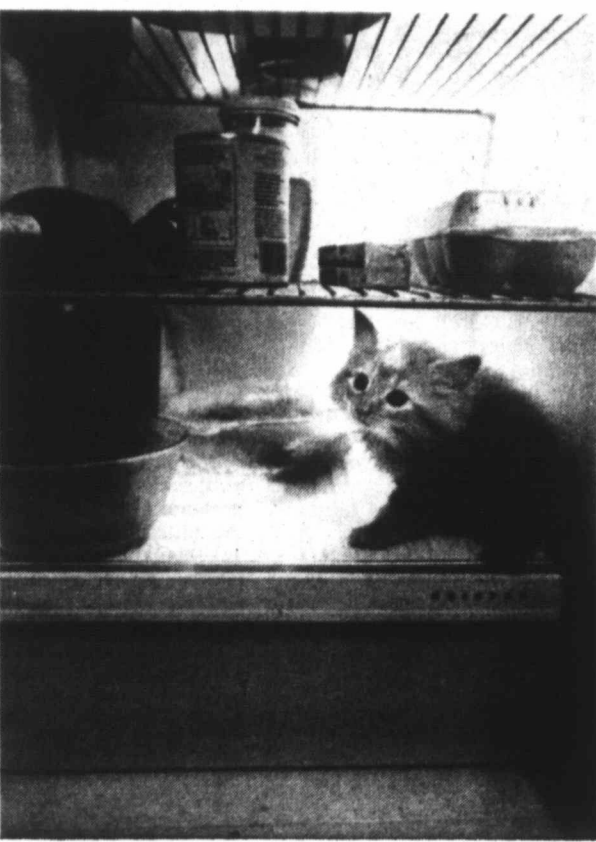

Seven months ago, the state gave her and her 67-year-old brother new trailers to live in and money for the house and their blueberry field.

But Miss Kozlowski claimed the trailer was cold and dangerous. She asked the state to move her house across the road to a field.

Transportation department commissioner Roger Mallar says the woman has known for a decade that the state had the right of way to build a new Cutts Road bridge on her land, but did not react until June 19.

Then, on June 21, at the height of the dispute, the dilapidated building burned down.

District attorney indicted

BROWNSVILLE, Texas (AP) — Federal grand jurors here charge that Hidalgo County District Attorney Oscar McInnis lied to them in June when he said he knew nothing of an alleged kidnap and murder plot.

McInnis, 61, was indicted here Tuesday on six counts of perjury, Patricia Parada, his alleged co-conspirator, was named in one perjury count.

The pair was indicted in June for allegedly plotting to have Miss Parada's ex-husband kidnapped and killed. Both have pleaded innocent to those charges.

A spokesman at the U.S. attorney's office in Brownsville said today that McInnis and Miss Parada will be arraigned here Aug. 11.

The spokesman also said bonds posted in June by the pair will be carried forward to the new indictment. Those bonds had been set at $500,000 for Miss Parada and $100,000 for McInnis.

He was freed after posting a $25,000 cashier's check and she was released after posting $15,000 in checks and property deeds.

"I never had any discussion...about murdering Noe Villanueva or anybody else, as far as that's concerned," McInnis told the grand jury in June, according to Tuesday's indictment.

Prosecutors, armed with tape recordings they say were made when McInnis plotted with a county jail inmate, have claimed Villanueva was to be killed in Reynosa, Mexico. McInnis allegedly met with Daniel Rodriguez, a convicted murderer being held on drug charges in Hidalgo County jail, to discuss the plot.

However, investigators say Rodriguez told law enforcement officers of the meetings and further discussions between the two were recorded.

The perjury indictment claims McInnis lied about meeting with Rodriguez and Miss Parada concerning the disposal of Villanueva's identification papers.

Investigators said they allowed the alleged plot to continue as if Villanueva had been killed, including the delivery of his identification papers to McInnis.

The perjury indictment includes quotes from McInnis' answers to prosecutors' questions in June.

editors, and the White House press office issued a three-page "fact sheet" on the issue.

Tuesday he appealed personally to a group of congressmen who are Vietnam veterans.

Next Thursday evening he has planned, in hopes of attracting television coverage, a roundtable discussion at a high school in the Washington suburb of Fairfax, Va. — an area heavily populated with federal employees affected by the plan.

Since unveiling the package last March, Carter has missed few openings to tell reporters, congressmen and anyone else who would listen that he considers passage among his top legislative priorities, and absolutely crucial to fulfilling his campaign promise to make the federal government more efficient and responsive to the public.

Tuesday, six representatives from small business organizations, including the National Association of Women Business Owners and the National Small Business Association, were summoned to the Executive Office Building, next to the White House. Jordan aide Stephen Selig asked them to mobilize in support of the Carter plan.

But victory is far from assured. The president's plan has run into trouble in the House, where the civil service committee loaded it down with concessions to federal labor unions, souring much Republican support for the measure.

Originally intended to make federal hiring and firing more efficient and to peg executive pay closer to performance, the House version of the measure also would legalize partisan political activity by federal employees, and would give wider bargaining power to labor unions representing federal employees. It even contains, as an amendment, a union-sought bill previously vetoed by Carter to shorten the workweek of federal firefighters.

Chilean government says Three under house arrest

SANTIAGO, Chile (AP) — The Chilean government says it has ordered house arrest for its former security police chief and two of his men charged in the United States with plotting the assassination of Orlando Letelier. But their extradition is not expected.

Retired Brig. Gen. Juan Manuel Contreras Sepulveda, Col. Pedro Espinosa Bravo and Capt. Armando Fernandez Larios have been placed under preventive military arrest for a maximum period of two months pending the outcome of legal proceedings, the Interior Ministry said Tuesday night.

Contreras and Espinosa are at their homes and Fernandez is in a military hospital, "all under military custody and guard," an army communiqué said. It did not say why Fernandez was hospitalized.

The request for their detention, was made by the United States, which said it would send formal extradition requests "in a matter of weeks." Observers said chances are slight the men will be extradited but a local trial is possible.

Cuban exiles and four anti-Castro Cubans in the United States were indicted by a federal grand jury in Washington Tuesday for the bomb-assassination of Letelier as his car moved through Washington's Embassy Row on Sept. 21, 1976. A young woman associate in the car, Ronni K. Moffitt, also was killed, and her husband, Michael, was wounded.

Letelier was ambassador to the United States, foreign minister and interior minister under the late President Salvador Allende, the Marxist overthrown by the military in September 1973. He was arrested and exiled after the coup and became an outspoken foe of President Augusto Pinochet's military government.

Contreras headed the Chilean junta's security police, the DINA, from its organization in early 1974 until its dissolution a year ago. The Washington indictment said he "initiated the action which began the conspiracy and...ordered the assassination of Orlando Letelier." Espinosa, director of operations for DINA, was accused of conveying the assassination order to Capt. Fernandez and an American DINA agent, Michael Townley. The indictment said Fernandez then went to the United States and shadowed Letelier to determine his habits.

"I don't think that there is anyone who seriously believes that General Pinochet will voluntarily give up people who could trace the murder of Mr. Letelier and my wife directly to his doorstep," Michael Moffitt said in Washington. "Sources very close to the investigation tell me the chances are probably less than 10 percent that we'll get an extradition."

Although the Chilean government acted swiftly in detaining its three indicted nationals, it said their arrest did not signify guilt and was taken "exclusively under provisions of the existing extradition treaty between both countries."

That 1902 treaty provides that each country will extradite people charged with crimes in the other country but that neither country is bound to hand over its own citizens. Under a 1933 pact, Chile agreed to try its own citizens if it does not extradite them.

Townley, who was deported by the Chilean government last April and cooperated in the U.S. investigation, was named a co-conspirator in the indictment but was not indicted. Prosecutors in Washington said he agreed to plead guilty to a single count of conspiracy to murder in the next few days.

The four Cubans indicted for participation in the alleged murder plot were Guillermo Novo Sampedo, Alvin Ross Diaz, Virgilio Paz Romero and Jose Dionisio Suarez Esquivel, all of Union City, N.J.

Paz and Suarez are fugitives while Novo and Ross are in jail in New York City.

A fifth Cuban exile, Guillermo Novo's brother Ignacio, was indicted on the lesser charges of lying under oath and concealing knowledge of a felony. He is in jail in the District of Columbia.

The indictment said Paz and Townley, who is an electronics technician, bought the materials for the assassination bomb at a Sears Roebuck store; Paz, Suarez and Townley built the bomb; and Townley put it under the front seat of Letelier's car.

It's high time society took action

Etta Hulme, editorial page cartoonist for the Fort Worth Star-Telegram, in a recent sketch focused attention on the problems schools today are facing from the three Vs — Viciousness, Violence and Vandalism. In the drawing, three children depicted as the three Rs (Reading, Writing and 'Rithmetic) were seated in a sea of destruction. While Violence was forcing one of the moppets to telephone for help, the other toughs, Viciousness and Vandalism, were completing the job of destroying the school.

ENTIRE COMMUNITIES should identify with the message, since viciousness, violence and vandalism aren't being confined to schools. An unprecedented wave of vandalism has taken place here in recent weeks.

The rationale of vandals is difficult to understand. They sweep across the city, shattering windshields and show windows, shooting out street lights and puncturing automobile tires at will. On occasions, they descend upon public playgrounds and systematically dismantle costly playground equipment, break up concrete picnic tables, tear down fences and write obscenities on walls.

One line of reasoning here holds to the theory that the less said about such behavior the better, that the miscreants will become bored if there is no reaction in the media to the outrages. If that kind of reasoning had been used in the 1930s, World War II could have been averted had the news media ignored Adolf Hitler.

The vandals, for the most part, are right people. Invariably, they function when responsible people are looking the other way. For that reason, they are rarely caught. On those rare occasions when they are made to account for their sins, they all too often get off with an admonition or a slapping of the wrist.

THEY HAVE COME to expect the courts to understand and commiserate because they were (1) bored, (2) under the influence of demon spirits, (3) frustrated or (4) all three.

Society is not doing a very good job of coping with the problem, perhaps because it hasn't lent enough attention to the seriousness of the matter.

Ancient civilizations might have approached the problem by first trapping the polluters (and indeed that is what they are) and then assigning them to a community where growth or their demise depended solely upon them. The society which exiled them would not be expected to replace what they willfully destroyed in their new environment. Once without the necessities they had yielded in fits of destruction, they could expect to lead an even more Spartan existence. Only if they built rather than banded, would they be given credit toward regaining a respected place within the community.

One thing is for sure. Unless and until society lends full attention to the problem and sets about to correct it, the situation will not improve and likely will deteriorate even more. The fault lies not in the laws we have written to control the condition but in how we apply them.

Misunderstanding

William F. Buckley Jr.

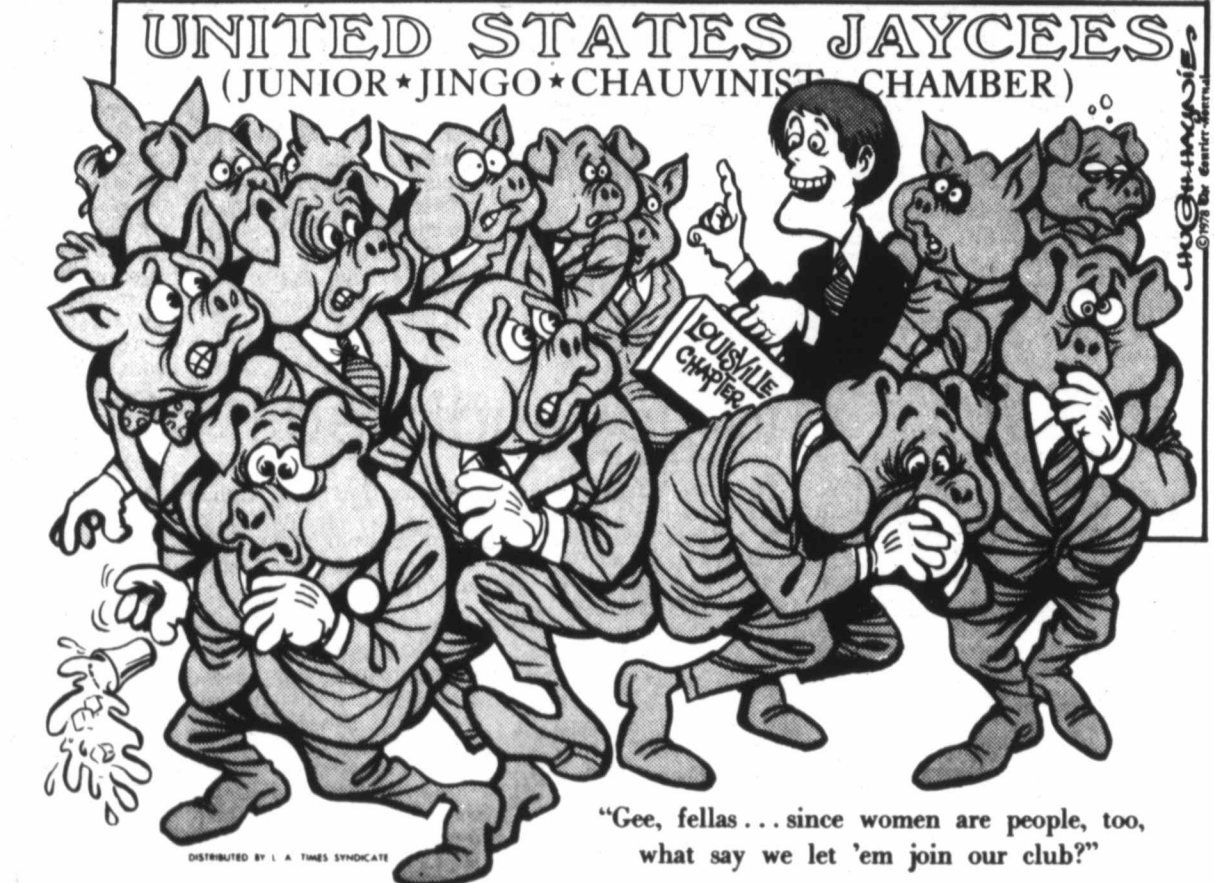

What is happening to Carter is uncanny. He went to Bonn for the purpose of shoring up the dollar, pronounced himself well satisfied with the results, came home, and promptly the dollar resumed its slide. For the graph-minded, try out this correlation: the strength of the dollar reduces pari passu with Jimmy Carter's reputation. To recall that it was Jimmy Carter who promised to balance the budget and reduce inflation is an exercise in memory on the order of trying to remember who won the Wars of the Roses. Carter's maladroitness in foreign and domestic affairs is at least the analogue of Jerry Ford's traditional difficulty of getting in and out of airplanes without hitting himself on the head.

Providence appears to have no mercy on Carter. No sooner did he denounce the Soviet Union on the human rights issue than the Communists retaliated by pulling out the nearest Jew, staging a public trial, and packing him off to Gulag. Carter began his administration by stressing his closeness to the people, promenading with the crowds up Pennsylvania Avenue to the White House. It is the closest he ever got to the people. Every time he removes a presidential bauble from his throne, his popularity diminishes. His original mission — what made them swoon in New Hampshire — was not a divestiture of the presidential uniform, but the divestiture of government bureaucratic power. If there is to be any relief from the oppressions of government, it will be done over a presidential veto.

What's going on? They used to say during the primary that Carter was dangerous because he was so religious. This animadversion on religion was widely (by me included) resented. I cannot see how any man who is guided by the principles of Christianity can be a worse leader than someone guided by the fleshpots of Mammon. But the trouble with Carter is that he invests theological zeal in secularist analysis and proceeds to subsidize secular superstitions. In so doing he not only does grave damage to the country by his ineptitude, he is setting back religion, which happens to be my favorite thing in life. At the rate things are going the national political conventions will bar born-again Christians at the gate.

Carter tends to view questions of economic policy in terms of good and evil. It is evil for men who have property to fret over laws that require them to give that property to the government. In international affairs, it is wrong to side with Rhodesia against neighboring black African despotisms because the government of Rhodesia is only three-quarters black, instead of entirely black. Human rights are to be acclaimed, but apparently some people are fated to suffer, for instance the 800 million Chinese who for a generation we were told we could not ignore, so we sent Nixon to China to cease ignoring them, and then proceeded to ignore their plight. Thus Carter, who lies awake at night worrying over the absence of human rights in Chile, has yet to utter a word of commiseration for the Chinese, who by this time do not know what a human right is.

As one reflects on Carter, his profile emerges. He is the last surviving ritualistic liberal, although I suppose it is fair to say he shares the honor with George McGovern. Liberalism during mid-century America was founded on a bedrock of superstitions. The first of these, we all now acknowledge, was that anything disagreeable resulting from Providential inattention or the vicissitudes of nature or the weakness of man could be amended by writing laws, appropriating money, and setting up an agency of government.

New kind of doctor's aid popular

Dr. G. C. Thosteson

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I have no complaint about your doctor, who has treated us well over the years. My question is about a new person he has in his office called a "doctor's assistant." It is a young woman who takes care of patients when the doctor is not in. She gives out medicine, shots, does EKG's, and even removed moles from my back. My husband asked if she was a nurse. She said, no, she is a "doctor's assistant." Is this legal? I have no complaint, just wondering about this. — M. L. P.

The young woman is a "P.A.," a "physician's assistant," and it is quite legal. This is a new kind of medical professional, one who has undergone extensive college-level training in medicine. P.A.s are intended to be extensions of the doctor's professional skills. When one does depends on the individual physician's trust in his P.A. I am told that P.A.s are snatched up by physicians as quickly as they become available. The duties this young lady performs are not unusual. Many are also used for such tasks as history taking and explaining details of the patients' disease and treatment. Some make house calls. This frees the physician for the important business of actually seeing patients for diagnosis and more difficult treatment than the P.A. can perform.

From reports, physicians are pleased with the P.A. system. The candidates for the P.A. degree are screened carefully and understand their limits, which vary with the wishes of the individual doctor employer. It's a field many health care-oriented young men and women would do well to investigate.

Most physicians who employ P.A.s distribute printed information describing the program and his individual P.A.'s relationship to himself and the patients. P.A.s must be certified in each state in which they work, just as must nurses and doctors. Not all states have the program, but it is growing.

The head of one of the nation's leading P.A. college training schools tells me the program is approved in 45 states and that there are about 7,000 P.A.s currently active in hospitals and doctors' offices across the country.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: Does hair grow faster in summer than winter? My hair (blond) is thin and I can't use the popular styles (I look like a drowned rat). I am 16 years old. How long before my hair starts growing in thick? My mother's is thick and black. — Miss P. V.

There's little you can do to alter hair growth. A few facts might interest you, though. Hair does grow faster in summer than winter. It also has a "growing season" in one's lifetime, tending to thicken gradually to age 25. So you have some years left. By that time styles may have changed and you may wish for thinner hair.

Hair growth is related to hormone activity and one usually inherits such characteristics. At your age the die has been pretty definitely cast. You might look to some of the gradual thickening I mentioned in years ahead. Could be you missed your mother's genes for hair, but got a grandmother's or a great-grandmother's — or great-grandfather's.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: Please write something about zinc. I am taking 10 milligrams a day in pills. Is this enough? What does it do? Can it be harmful? — M. Y.

We know little about the role of zinc in the body. If you are getting enough protein in your diet you are getting enough zinc. The average diet supplies from 10 to 15 milligrams a day. That is more than enough since the body uses only about 10 per cent of it. Persons on a totally vegetarian diet might be deficient, since that is a poor protein source of zinc. A person who has no demonstrated deficiency of zinc should not be taking supplements, although supplements have been tried in treatment of taste and smell — with uncertain effects.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: Can an obstetrician-gynecologist tell on examination if a person masturbates? — K. B.

Probably not. Do you have problem hair? Dr.

Thosteson's new booklet, "Good Health for Your Hair," shows how proper treatment can result in healthier, more attractive hair. To get a copy, write Dr. Thosteson in care of the Big Spring Herald, enclosing a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope and 35 cents.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: What would be the cause of a baby's aversion to breast milk? I tried breastfeeding my baby and she wouldn't have anything to do with it. She would suck for about a minute, then pull away and cry. This happened for two weeks, so I decided to give up and put her on a bottle. She seemed to like the bottle very much. — M. J.

You'd prefer the bottle, too, if you knew you'd get all the milk you wanted, right away, and for as long as you wanted it. You needed some advice on breastfeeding. Babies do not have aversion to breast milk. Their taste buds are not developed sufficiently to have such likes and dislikes.

If you want to breastfeed in the future contact a chapter of the La Leche League, Inc., which can help you.

You can lose weight if you really want to! Dr. Thosteson's booklet, "Lost Secrets of Reducing," tells you how — naturally and without gimmicks — to the level best suited to your individual needs. For a copy write to him in care of the Big Spring Herald, enclosing a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope and 50 cents.

Dr. Thosteson welcomes reader mail but regrets that, due to the tremendous volume received daily, he is unable to answer individual letters. Readers' questions are incorporated in his column whenever possible.

My answer

Billy Graham

DEAR DR. GRAHAM: I would like to give up drinking, but I enjoy it too much. I am only 19, but I think I may be an alcoholic. Is this possible? — B. C. N.

DEAR B. C. N.: Yes, it is, and you are in a very dangerous position because you could easily get trapped by this difficult problem. You need to face this problem head-on, before it gets completely out of control. Alcohol can wreck your life. You say you enjoy it, but the time may come when you will find out what a miserable life alcoholism brings.

It would be good for you to turn to people who can help you, such as an organization that is dedicated to dealing with alcoholism. You also should seek out a pastor who can help you. Many alcoholics find they cannot lick the problem on their own. It is a humbling thing to admit you have a problem, but it is the first step in getting away from the clutches of alcohol.

You need to ask yourself why you enjoy drinking so much, when you know it is hurting you in the long run. Most people turn to alcohol as a means of escaping from the responsibilities or problems they face. Perhaps down inside you are a rather insecure person, uncertain about your ability to handle things. Alcohol, you think, helps you escape from your problems.

But that is an illusion. Alcohol is not really an escape — instead it brings greater problems. The Bible says, "Wine is a mocker, strong drink is raging; and whosoever is deceived thereby is not wise" (Proverbs 20:1). The Bible also warns: "Who hath woe? who hath sorrow? who hath contentions? who hath babbling? who hath wounds without cause? who hath redness of eyes? They that tarry long at the wine... it biteth like a serpent, and stingeth like an adder" (Proverbs 23:29-30, 32).

Jesus Christ is the answer to your problem. He can give you the power to resist the temptations you face. He can answer your needs and help you solve the problems you are seeking to escape. I urge you to come to Him by faith and let Him be Lord of your life.

JUST TALKING to Bob was an experience in itself. He started dominoes as a hobby, and recently set a world record by toppling 97,500 of them in New York for the Hemophilia Foundation. He has appeared on the Johnny Carson show twice, and one of the shows in which he appeared was so popular that the network re-ran it as part of the best of the series. After watching him Saturday night, it was easy to see why his segment of the Carson show was popular. His act is amazing, and the patience and expertise that he puts into the intricate designs are evident. Bob set up 20,000 dominos for toppling Saturday night, and I've never seen an act like it.

Bob spent parts of two days setting up the dominos for the Saturday show. I managed to watch him several times during the day. When he sets up the dominos, he's pure dedication. After a few minutes of watching him place the dominoes in ever changing patterns on the floor, my nerves were shot, but he continued placing each one carefully and quickly on the gym floor with gentle expertise.

Bob has an exuberant personality and enjoys many topics. He will be a senior this fall at the University of Pennsylvania, where he is an astronomy major. He also has a deep interest in swimming. He enjoys the sport and manages to stay in shape despite his frequent road trips.

HE ALSO has a wide interest in music. His interests covered selections from Bach to modern-day Kansas. His interest in modern music was reflected in the fact that he seemed to enjoy discos and clubs. He said he had been in a New York disco, Studio 54, but showed great enthusiasm for the lighted dance floor at Big Spring Bogart's. He was equally enthusiastic about the Brass Nail, where he and several members of the Herald staff went following his performance Saturday.

Bob answered questions all weekend about Studio 54, Johnny Carson and the Tonight Show, people like Olivia Newton-John and Elton John whom he has had the opportunity to meet, his family and other interests. But the weekend went too quickly and Sunday he left from Midland for Portland, Ore., where he had a performance slated at a fair.

Bob has a knack for making conversation and for making people relax. I for one am going to be watching out for him in the future, because I think his unique act and his personality will carry him far. I'm glad I got the opportunity to meet him while he was here.

Best friend

Jack Anderson

WASHINGTON — After enduring the gaffes and goofs of Dr. Peter Bourne, Andrew Young, Bert Lance and pugnacious brother Billy, Jimmy Carter is discovering that a fellow's best friend is his mother.

The troubled president found some welcome reading in a confidential State Department cable reporting on the success of his 82-year-old mother's visit to Italy.

Ambassador to Italy Richard Gardner was rapturous in his confidential account of Lillian Carter's meeting with Italian President Alessandro Pertini, himself an octogenarian and curmudgeon.

CABLED THE ambassador: "Mrs. Carter's call on Pertini couldn't have come at a better time. Pertini, elected less than two weeks before the meeting, can be highly irascible and in the past has been quite critical of American foreign policy."

"It is clear that Pertini was completely won over by Mrs. Carter's personal manner and by the purpose of her trip. The call almost surely has done much to soften his earlier critical attitude and to put his relationship to the American government on a friendly footing."

The confidential dispatch contained this eyewitness account of the session between the two senior citizens in the Quirinale Palace:

To break the ice, Pertini asked the mother of the American president if she had any advice for him as he began his seven-year term as titular head of a sorely beset Italy. Mrs. Carter, who was known to have spanked the president as a boy, responded: "Just do what you have been doing all your life — fighting for human rights and helping the poor."

Then she asked whether the veteran socialist had any advice for her son. Pertini counseled that Carter "should follow the example of his mother in her concern to alleviate hunger and hardship."

Warming up to each other, the two acknowledged their ages. Miss Lillian joked that "life begins at 80," and Pertini, a few months younger than his visitor, laughingly observed that "some persons are born old, some are born young and stay young all their life — like you and me."

Miss Lillian offered the Italian leader a pipe as a token gift and bantered about his famed collection of 200 rare pipes. She smilingly admonished that her own pipe was for smoking, not display.

AMBASSADOR Gardner reported that the simple directness of Mrs. Carter, who enlisted in the Peace Corps in her 60s, "had a great appeal" for Pertini. At one point, he told her: "You are like me — you say what is on your mind and in your heart."

SECRET CONFESSIONS: Secret congressional files contain confessions by at least 25 of the nation's most prestigious corporations that they've been chiseling the federal government out of tax payments.

Under the federal internal revenue code, companies can deduct direct lobbying expenses as part of the normal cost of doing business. But "grass roots" lobbying expenditures to influence voters on elections or referendums are emphatically non-deductible.

Even the recent Supreme Court ruling that corporations are entitled to lobby at the local level does not allow grass roots costs to be written off as deductible.

INVESTIGATORS FOR a House subcommittee headed by Rep. Ben Rosenthal, D-N.Y., dug into the handling of lobbying expenditures by corporations and found flagrant, admitted violations. At least 20 of the 500 top moneybag firms listed by Fortune magazine acknowledged improper deductions. Perhaps another 50 lesser giants may also be guilty of cheating the government.

Culled from the subcommittee files are these examples:

— The Cleveland-based Warner and Swasey Company improperly deducted $11,750 for expenses incurred supporting various local tax limitations and the cost of a letter to shareholders about legislative matters. The corporation blamed the improper 1975-76 deductions on "an oversight."

— Allied Chemical donated $5,000 in 1975 to a movement called New Jersey Economic Recovery Bonds. In its correspondence with the subcommittee, Allied Chemical acknowledged that "the contributions for N.J. Recovery Bonds were deducted... an oversight which will be corrected on audit."

Dear Editor:

WRR IS BACK! James Lancaster, executive vice president of Big Spring Cable TV, told me Tuesday morning that he would restore WRR-FM to the cable service for us in Big Spring. I wish to thank him publicly for his responsiveness to the concerns of some of his subscribers in this matter.

If there should be some citizens who are now aware that they have a choice of listening to classical and semi-classical music on their FM radios who did not previously know it was available, then I know they will want to contact Big Spring Cable TV about making the necessary connections for FM radio service.

I appreciate the efforts of the Rev. Bill Henning, who took an active interest and helped keep the ball rolling when it might have faltered. With his help and that of six good friends we were able to take to Lancaster the names of 171 interested citizens who felt that this musical choice was important for our community. We got this list in one week of part-time effort. I am sure there are other interested citizens whom we did not contact but to those who put their names on the line I give special thanks. With people like that around, apathy has no chance!

It must not go unnoticed that without the medium of a community newspaper, concerns like this could not be brought to public notice and resolved. It reminds me that I'm glad to live in a country where a newspaper like the Big Spring Herald can exist and can provide a forum whereby citizens can make their concerns known to their fellow citizens. Hooray for the fourth estate! Thanks, Herald.

Dear Editor:

I for one, am fed up with taxes. There is state tax, city tax, county tax, school tax, sales tax, federal tax and etc. Where does taxation end? What can we do about it?

Special committee Chamber recognizes beauty

In hopes of inspiring all local property owners, the Beautification Committee of the Big Spring Area Chamber of Commerce has announced a system of recognizing individuals who contribute to the town's beauty.

According to Bob Hurt, president of the committee, each month two awards, one residential and one nonresidential, will be presented to local "beauty spots". The program will be in operation from April to October of each year.

The beautified properties will be recognized with signs and the owners will be awarded certificates for framing by the committee. The residences and businesses to be honored will be selected by the committee on the merit of how attractive they are.

Hurt and Linda Williams, chairman of the project, were on hand to congratulate owners of the first two beauty spots Monday morning.

The August Nonresidential Beauty Spot of the Month is the renovated house at 708 Main, now a business location for attorneys John Burgess and Bob Moore.

Selected as the Residential Beauty Spot of August was the home of Mr. and Mrs. Clyde McMahon Sr., 908 Mountain Park.

Quigley's host Lion's club

Members and wives of the Downtown Lions Club were Saturday evening guests of Mr. and Mrs. John Quigley, 609 Washington Blvd.

Homemade ice cream and conversation on the lawn were enjoyed by the 27 who attended.

For the lowest new-car price, buy in August — before the new models come out, advises Claudia Kerbel, consumer information specialist with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, The Texas A&M University System.

Blends available

Most men's read-to-wear dress shirts available are a blend of 65 per cent polyester and 35 per cent cotton or 60 per cent polyester and 40 per cent cotton, reports Becky Culp, clothing specialist with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, The Texas A&M University System.

One-sided decisions

When only one spouse makes all the budget and money decision, studies indicate it leads to an unhappy, resentment-ridden family situation, warns Dorothy Taylor, family resource management specialist with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, The Texas A&M University System.

Girl dates guy on sly

By Robert Wallace, Ed. D

Dr. Wallace: I'm 16 and I've got a problem. I'm white and I'm involved with a black guy. I see nothing wrong with it but my mother does. She said that as long as I am living in her house that I cannot date a black guy.

She said I like black guys because I'm in a state of rebellion. This is not the case. We really like each other and I have disobeyed my mother to see him.

Now the time has come to tell Mother what I'm doing. I'm tired of sneaking. How should I tell her? — Dana, Torrance, Calif.

Dana: Space is too limited to debate the pros and cons of interracial dating. All I can tell you is to be open and honest, but don't expect Mother to accept the fact you have disobeyed her. She is going to come down on you hard.

Daughter of tycoon

Onassis weds soviet communist

MOSCOW (AP) — Christina Onassis, one of the world's richest women, took an out-of-work Russian Communist for her third husband in seven years Monday. They rode to the ceremony in a battered, borrowed yellow Chevrolet.

The 27-year-old daughter of the late Aristotle Onassis became the wife of 37-year-old Sergei Kauzov in a 10-minute civil marriage ceremony attended by 11 invited guests and a group of Soviet photographers. It was the bridegroom's second marriage.

The nuptials took place in Moscow's Central Palace of Marriages, a huge ornate green mansion that once belonged to Czarist nobility. His mother, with whom the couple will live in a two-room apartment, was present, but his 9-year-old daughter by his first marriage was not.

While policemen held back a crowd of about 300 spectators and Western journalists who were barred from the ceremony, the couple pulled up to the building in an old car loaned them by the Greek Embassy. She wore a long purple chiffon dress and carried red and white roses. He wore a dark gray business suit.

Inside the palace, the couple exchanged "das" and signed the register.

"Is your decision to marry sincere and free, and can you ensure the full happiness of you and your future family?" the presiding official asked. After they answered affirmatively, he declared: "According to the law of the Russian Republic, you are man and wife."

No members of her family were present.

The couple emerged smiling from the building after 25 minutes, and she told reporters who mobbed them, "I feel fine, very good." They climbed into Kauzov's gray Volga sedan, but he had trouble starting it, and a nervous look replaced her smile.

A wedding reception and a news conference were to be held at the Intourist Hotel, where Christina has been staying in a $200-a-day suite for the last six weeks.

The newlyweds leave Thursday for a honeymoon at Lake Baikal, in Siberia, a favorite Soviet holiday spot. On their return they are to live in the two-room Moscow apartment he has shared with his mother since his divorce earlier this year.

Kauzov met Christina in Paris in 1976, the year after she inherited control of the Onassis shipping empire as her father's only surviving child. He was head of the Paris office of Sovfrakht, the Soviet freight firm.

She arrived in Moscow in June, maintaining that she had come on business and that there was no romance. But meanwhile he had divorced his wife and quit his $235-a-week job. After her arrival, he was her constant companion, but she repeatedly denied she planned to marry until last week.

Christina inherited control of a fortune estimated at more than $500 million, and friends of the Onassis family say her relatives are upset over her latest choice. They fear that she will try to bring him into the shipping empire or that the Soviet government will try to get control of it.

Though the balding, boyish-looking Kauzov denies he will join the Onassis shipping business, sources close to the situation say Christina intends to make him head of an office she plans to open in Moscow within several weeks.

She has said they plan to live in Moscow and she wants to raise a family. But she also has said she will leave the management of her interests to associates in London, Monte Carlo and New York.

Hugs Secretary, Steams His Wife

DEAR ABBY: Why can't women be as broad-minded as men? We've been married 15 years, and my wife is doing a super job with our home and children, but she's letting a small incident she happened to witness make a difference in our lives.

Now, you're a business woman, Abby, and you know how hard it is to keep a good secretary. Mine has been with me for five years and she does a great job. She's always on time, she's efficient, and the price is right.

Well, last week my wife dropped in at the office, and she happened to see me hug my secretary. I've made friendly gestures like this for some time to show I appreciate her, but now my wife is steamed, and she's giving me a hard time.

Abby, will you please say something in your column about how hard it is to find a good secretary?

JULIUS

DEAR JULIUS: A good plumber is also hard to find! I mean one who comes immediately when you call him, has all the parts he needs with him and does the job at a price that's right. How would you like to come home and find your wife "showing her appreciation" by hugging him?

The next time you want to show your "appreciation," try money.

DEAR ABBY: You told a reader that you took Catholic instruction to better understand Catholicism—"to learn, not turn." What a beautiful idea! I'm Catholic and regularly read publications of other religions.

Our small parish in Lockport, N.Y., has conducted a weekly series where ministers and pastors are invited to tell us about their beliefs and show us their churches (unfortunately, there is no synagogue nearby).

I hope your example prompts others among your millions of readers to become more curious and understanding, and less prejudiced and blindly accusative.

A.M., JR.

DEAR A.M.: So do I. Prejudice is based on ignorance. I can't stress strongly enough the importance of learning about religions that differ from our own. Where there is knowledge and compassion there cannot be hate or prejudice.

CONFIDENTIAL TO HEARTBROKEN AUNT IN ANOKA: Don't be so quick to judge. Sometimes it takes more love to give away a child than to keep it.

Do you wish you had more friends? For the secret of popularity, get Abby's new booklet: "How To Be Popular: You're Never Too Young or Too Old." Send $1 with a long, self-addressed, stamped (28 cents) envelope to Abby, 132 Lasky Drive, Beverly Hills, Calif. 90212.

AP survey shows

Prices rise in July

The second half of 1978 started out just like the first half for supermarket shoppers, as an Associated Press marketbasket survey showed a fresh round of price increases during July.

Consumers planning summer barbecues were out of luck; prices for hamburgers and hot dogs went up again.

Families who cut back on meat and turned to eggs as an alternative source of protein found themselves equally squeezed; egg prices rose sharply last month after declining steadily since January.

About the only people who could find something to cheer about at the grocery store were coffee drinkers; the price of the brew went down and helped keep the marketbasket bill from rising even more than it did.

The AP drew up a random list of 15 commonly purchased food and non-food items, checked the price at one supermarket in each of 13 cities on March 1, 1973, and has rechecked on or about the start of each succeeding month.

Here are some of the results of the latest check:

—The marketbasket bill went up during July at the checklist store in seven cities and down in six. On an overall basis, the bill was one-half of 1 percent higher at the start of August than it was a month earlier.

—Comparing today's prices with those at the start of the year, the AP found the marketbasket bill at the checklist store had risen by an overall average of 6.3 percent in the first seven months of 1978.

—Declining coffee prices have taken some of the sting out of the increase. The marketbasket totals without coffee showed an average rise of 1.3 percent last month and 11.6 percent so far this year.

—The price of a pound of chopped chuck increased last month at the checklist store in six cities. The average price at the start of August was $1.46 a pound, 5 percent higher than it was a month earlier and 42 percent higher than it was at the start of the year. Frankfurters, meanwhile, went up in price last month in five cities.

No attempt was made to weight the AP survey results according to population density or in terms of what percentage of a family's actual grocery outlay each item represents.

The AP did not attempt to compare actual prices from city to city — to say, for example, that eggs cost more in one area than another. The only comparisons were made in terms of percentages of increase or decrease — saying a particular item went up 10 percent in one city and 6 percent in another.

The items on the AP checklist are chopped chuck, center cut pork chops, frozen orange juice concentrate, coffee, paper towels, butter, Grade-A medium white eggs, creamy peanut butter, laundry detergent, fabric softener, tomato sauce, milk, frankfurters and granulated sugar.

The cities checked are Albuquerque, N.M., Atlanta, Boston, Chicago, Dallas, Detroit, Los Angeles, Miami, New York, Philadelphia, Providence, R.I., Salt Lake City and Seattle.

Gold mystique pushes price to record highs recently

"Cursed lust for gold.
"To what dost thou not drive the hearts of men!"
"The Aeneid." Virgil. 70-19 B.C.

Gold. The dream at the end of the rainbow. The ring that ties two people together. The symbol of man's hope and of man's greed.

It is neither the rarest metal in the world nor the most expensive. But gold has a mystique that has lasted through the ages and has helped push its price to record highs in recent days.

What's so special about gold?
"It's a historic thing," said William Buttermann of the Bureau of Mines. "It has a very ancient reputation ... It's very durable in a chemical and physical sense ... It's quite rare and was even more so in ancient times."

James Jolley, Buttermann's colleague at the bureau, had another explanation. "There's a lot of charisma about it," he said.

Jolley is an expert on platinum, which is both rarer and more costly than gold. Worldwide platinum production in 1977 is estimated at just under 3 million troy ounces, compared to 38.5 million troy ounces of gold and 318.4 million troy ounces of silver. A troy ounce equals 1.097 regular ounces.

Platinum is selling at almost $250 an ounce, while gold — even after its sharp rise — is just over $200.

Platinum, however, doesn't have the same appeal. "It's just a white metal," said Jolley, adding that gold's yellow color is unique among natural metals.

Gold is easy to shape and polish; it doesn't rust, tarnish or corrode. Because of its relative scarcity, it is prized as one of the few things which, in a time of soaring inflation and currency fluctuations, will always be worth having.

Most newly mined gold goes for jewelry and dental purposes. The rest of it is bought and sold, then bought and sold again, and again, by investors who swap paper certificates rather than actual gold bars.

The drawing power of gold goes back before the birth of Christ and it seems just as strong now as it was then. The Egyptian King Tutankhamen was buried in a solid-gold coffin more than 3,300 years ago; today, thousands of Americans are flocking to exhibitions of articles from his tomb.

Gold was, in part, responsible for the exploration of the Americas.

"Get gold," was the message Spain's King Ferdinand gave his conquistadors when he sent them to the New World in 1511.

From 1492 to 1600, more than 8 million troy ounces of gold — much of it mined by slaves or stolen from temples — came from South America. The Soviet Union and South Africa are today's biggest gold miners, but during the 17th and 18th centuries, South America mines produced up to 80 percent of the world's supply.

The discovery of gold in California and Australia in the mid-19th century marked another expansion in production. More of the precious metal was mined in the 25 years from 1850 to 1875 than had been mined in the preceding 350 years.

Exploration and modern technology have boosted production, but gold remains a rare commodity. The amount mined in 1977 throughout the entire world is the equivalent of just under 2,000 tons. In contrast, the United States alone produced more than 600 million tons of coal in the same year.

The United States holds more gold than any other country — 277 million troy ounces, or 8,460.6 tons. About half of it is kept in Fort Knox; most of the rest is in mints in Denver and Philadelphia and government assay offices in New York and San Francisco.

In 1917, Great Britain became the first country in the world to link its currency directly to gold; other nations followed through the years until all of the world's money was tied to the gold standard.

In 1933, to prevent bank depositors from withdrawing money in gold, President Franklin D. Roosevelt imposed a ban on private ownership of the metal by U.S. citizens. The ban was incorporated in the Gold Reserve Act of 1934. That act, in conjunction with a separate world agreement, also fixed the price of gold at $35 an ounce.

In 1968, the world's central banks agreed to let the price of gold on the free market fluctuate. Three years later, after a series of complex financial developments, including a drop in the value of U.S. currency, President Richard Nixon cut the link between gold and the dollar. The world monetary system was off the gold standard.

The move set off sharp increases in the price of gold on the free market, but the prohibition on American ownership of gold remained until December 1974 when Congress lifted the ban. There were predictions of a new gold rush, but the surge of demand failed to materialize. The price edged steadily up, but stopped just short of $200 an ounce. That barrier was not broken until last Friday when speculators looking for an alternative to the shrinking dollar pushed the price to a record of just over $201 an ounce. By Tuesday, gold had risen still further to more than $205 an ounce.

Tax cut bill won't help most Americans

WASHINGTON (AP) —

Even if a proposed $16.2 billion tax cut becomes law, the federal tax bite for all but a few Americans will go up next year because of inflation and a higher Social Security tab, according to new congressional figures.

The figures, compiled by staff economists for the Joint Committee on Taxation, show only people in the $15,000 tax bracket would end 1979 with a lower tax bill — and the reduction would be only $2 to $3.

The reason is that although federal income taxes will go down, the reduction will be more than offset by inflation, pushing taxpayers into higher brackets, and by increases in the Social Security payroll taxes approved last December.

While economists' calculations were based on a projected inflation rate of 7 percent, the latest Carter administration prediction is for an overall inflation rate of 7.2 percent this year.

There have been efforts in this election year to roll back the Social Security tax increases, but those moves died in mid-May when the House Ways and Means Committee rejected the ideas.

The same committee last week approved the $16.2 billion tax cut. Although the legislation is not what President Carter had wanted, House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill said Tuesday he expects it to be approved by the full House.

The tax cut bill — if examined without considering other factors — would provide for a tax break of from $105 to $213 for single people earning from $20,000 to $30,000 a year. The reduction would be from $146 to $304 for a family of four in the same income range.

Peter Davis, an economist for the joint committee, said

Tuesday night that when inflation and the higher Social Security payroll taxes are taken into account, however, the tax picture appears quite different.

Under those circumstances, according to figures compiled by Davis, that same middle-income taxpayer would be paying anywhere from $83 to $261 more in taxes in 1979 than he paid this year.

Rose's long stem

EDITOR'S NOTE: This column was written shortly before Pete Rose went after number 45 Tuesday night. His streak was broken by Atlanta Tuesday night, and that fact should be taken into consideration when this barely out-of-date column is read.)

Pete Rose's consecutive game hitting-streak is more amazing than you think.

Joe DiMaggio was 26 when he set the all-time record of 56. George Sisler was 29 when he hit in 41 consecutive games and Ty Cobb was 25 when he roped 40 in a row. Tommy Holmes and Wee Willie Keeler were in their mid-20's as well when they made the record books.

Good of Pete is 37 years old. The Cincinnati Reds' third baseman explained the simple reason for his streak in a recent interview with Earl Lawson. "I wanted to get my 3,000th hit as quick as possible. That was one thing," he said. "Then, I've got the new contract coming up. And I want to prove that even though I'm 37, I'm not slowing down any."

Pete's 44th hit on Monday night baseball this week was a close one. Some observers contend it was a gift. "The second baseman over-ran it on purpose," says "Photo Lab Danny" Valdes, one-time professional baseball player himself.

"You ask anybody," Valdes explained. "You know he's trying to set a record, so you don't want to hurt nobody."

"Who's it going to hurt if Pete Rose gets a hit? There's going to be another game tomorrow and he's bringing in 20,000 people...I'd help him out," said Valdes.

Rose finds the question pertaining to people "helping" him an amusing one.

"One guy," Rose said, "asked me if the pitchers were giving me any 'cookies' to hit during the streak. Heck, during the streak I've seen more breaking pitches on 3-0 and 2-1 pitches than I did before it began."

But Valdes thinks Phil Niekro backed off of his curve ball, and Bob Gilbreath overran the grounder on purpose in that Monday night game.

"I remember when Joe Bauman from Roswell was going for a home run record," Valdes said, thinking back to his days in the minor leagues. "We wanted him to get it in Big Spring, and our team pitched him great big watermelons, but he didn't hit anything."

"He hit me one here, and the ball is still in orbit," remembers Valdes, "I don't know if it's coming back. He was unbelievable, but he couldn't hit that homer."

"I think Rose is getting help. I don't think he's going to get the record, but he's getting help."

When City Editor Walt Finley offered, "I bet it (the streak) ends tonight (Tuesday). Wee Willie's mother and I want his record to stand," Valdes said "No?" (Note: Walt Finley and Wee Willie's mother were born in the same year, 1907.)

"There's too much money involved," Valdes continued. "But I'd wish they'd show the replays of his hits every night, so we could watch him get help. If they really wanted to stop it, they could walk him if he doesn't get a hit the first time up. That's legal. But all they'll pitch him is the straight ball."

Sometimes, Valdes sees gremlins everywhere. But I imagine he's basically on the right track. Sure, baseball, with a capital "B," is going to help Rose, as opposed to hurting him. I doubt if anyone would intentionally walk him throughout the entire game just to end his streak, but on the other glove, I doubt if every pitcher he's faced has thrown him great big lumbering watermelons, slowly down the pipe.

Sure the attendance is up. And everyone loves it. But the fans wouldn't tolerate overt assistance to Rose. Deliberate boots and wimpy pitches are too hard to spot. He'll work for it.

Giant-killing Astros streak

HOUSTON (AP) — Houston Astros pitcher J.R. Richard was either stunning or stumbling Tuesday night and needed a little help from his friends before he finally subdued the San Francisco Giants 4-2 to extend the Astros' home win streak to 11 straight.

Richard either overwhelmed the hesitant Giants batters or walked them in giving up four hits and running his record to 11-9. Richard walked nine Giants to give him 102 for the year and struck out 11 to run that league-leading total to 202.

The 6-8 Richard, with one of the fastest fastballs in the majors, needed Sambito to retire the last batter in the game, and a few friendly barbs from third baseman Enos Cabell to get him through his 182-pitch performance.

"I talk about him like a dog," laughed Cabell, who delivered a two-run single in the fifth inning for the game-winner. "I make him mad and he starts concentrating again. He gets so into the game that he forgets who he's pitching to."

"You never can relax," Astros Manager Bill Virdon said. "It was the same the last time he pitched. He doesn't give up many hits but there's always people on base."

Astros pitching coach Mel Wright counted Richard's 182-pitch total and said it was by far the most pitches he's thrown in a game this season.

"I talked to him the last two innings," Wright said. "He said he was feeling good and wanted to go back."

Nonetheless, when Richard put two runners on base in the ninth inning, Virdon called for Sambito, who retired Darrell Evans to end the game.

"That's his decision," Richard said of Virdon's move. "If it had been my decision, I would have stayed in and got the man out. But he runs the club and I just work here so I came out."

Richard said he felt strong but did not have his rhythm against the Giants. "It's all a matter of concentration," he said. "The main thing I do wrong is start thinking about what I'm doing wrong. That breaks my concentration."

The Astros took a 2-0 lead in the second inning off starter Bob Knepper, 11-8, on Jose Cruz' sacrifice fly and a single by Richard.

San Francisco, struggling to hold onto its National League West lead, tied it in the third when Richard walked the first two batters, who scored on Jack Clark's sacrifice fly and a single by Darrell Evans.

PETE ROSE
Bound for Glory

The party's over (HECK!)

ATLANTA (AP) — Pete Rose's dramatic chase of Joe DiMaggio's all-time record of hitting in 56 straight games has ended at 44.

"I would have liked to see what would have happened if I had gotten up in the 50's," Rose said Tuesday night after failing to hit for the first time since mid-June. He was 0-for-4 with a walk against rookie left-hander Larry McWilliams and veteran reliever Gene Garber of the Atlanta Braves.

"But 44 is not bad," said the scrappy 37-year-old captain of the Cincinnati Reds. "I'm not really disgusted because I hit the ball well. I'll come back tomorrow and get a hit."

It was a sensational catch by McWilliams in the second inning that prevented Rose from moving out of a tie for the all-time National League record set by Willie Keeler in 1897 when he hit safely in the first 44 games that season.

Rose, who had walked on a full-count pitch to open the game, drilled a vicious liner through the middle on his first pitch from McWilliams in the second. The lanky 6-foot-5 McWilliams, appearing in only his fourth major league game, reached back and speared the shot about waist high.

Rose later grounded out to shortstop Jerry Royster in the fifth inning and lined into a double play to rookie third baseman Bob Horner in his first trip against Garber in the seventh, setting the stage for the final drama.

It came in the ninth after Garber had fanned the first two Reds he faced. The crowd of 31,159 gave Rose a half-minute ovation as he strolled to the plate.

"Garber was pitching like it was the seventh game of the World Series," Rose said. "He had a 16-4 lead."

Asked if he were saying the Braves' right-hander should have laid one in for him to hit, Rose replied: "No, I don't mean that."

"But I hope I get to see him (Garber) again tomorrow in a one-run game," he added. "I hope I hit a frozen rope right up the middle."

Garber, who recorded his 13th save since coming to the Braves in a trade with Philadelphia earlier this year, was undaunted.

"I don't know how I'm supposed to pitch in the seventh game of a World Series," he said.

'Juice' will likely miss Poke game

THOUSAND OAKS, Calif. (AP) — The lineup for Saturday's pre-season opener between the San Francisco 49ers and the Dallas Cowboys was to have included four Heisman Trophy winners, but word filtered into the Cowboys' camp here Tuesday that the marquee would have to be shortened by the elimination of O.J. Simpson's name.

In a telephone interview with the Dallas Times Herald Tuesday, the San Francisco running back said he probably would not play in the annual Salesmanship Club charity game due to a slight knee injury.

Cowboy officials had hoped Simpson's first appearance in a 49ers uniform would add special appeal to the contest that already boasted three Heisman Trophy winners — Dallas's Tony Dorsett and Roger Staubach and San Francisco's Jim Plunkett.

Dorsett suffered a knee bruise in practice Monday but was back in pads during Tuesday's afternoon session and is probable for Saturday night.

Meanwhile, linebacker Mike Hagman was sidelined Tuesday with a sore lower back that has plagued him for several days. His availability for Saturday was unknown Tuesday night.

Larry Eidson, a second-year tackle, was taken to a hospital Tuesday for treatment of a neck injury suffered in blocking drills against No. 1 draft choice Larry Bethea. Team doctors said he suffered a jammed neck and will miss Saturday's game.

Fullback Larry Brinson was also injured Monday with a strained groin.

Series, because I never had done that," he said. "I have an idea if I was pitching like it was the seventh game of the World Series, he probably was hitting like it was the ninth inning of the seventh game of the World Series."

"I wanted his streak to continue, but I wanted to get him out, too," Garber added. "That's what I get paid to do."

It has been a season of two major accomplishments for Rose, who broke into the major leagues in 1963 with the nickname "Charlie Hustle" for the extraordinary effort he put forth in games.

He started the year — his 16th in the majors — needing only 34 hits to become the 13th player in history with 3,000 career hits, and he attained that goal on May 5 with a single off Steve Rogers of the Montreal

Expos. Asked if that had presented more pressure than the hitting streak, Rose said, "No. I couldn't visualize a 34-for-600 season."

Rose was asked if he thought he might have another long streak in him. "I don't know if I'm too old to have another streak like that or not," he said. "There are only, what, about 56 more games left. I don't want to do that again and go crazy all winter. But I'll be trying to start another streak tomorrow night."

Rose had equalled the 5-foot-4 Keeler's NL record with a sixth-inning single off a rare fastball from Atlanta knuckleballer Phil Niekro Monday night before a crowd of 45,007, lured by the greatest run ever made at DiMaggio's mark.

The Yankee Clipper began his streak on May 15, 1941 — only one month and one day after Peter Edward Rose was born in Cincinnati.

When DiMaggio's streak reached 44 games, he had recorded 66 hits in 174 at bats for a .379 average. Rose went 70 for 182 with a .385 average during his 44-game streak that started on June 14 before taking the 0-for-4 collar Tuesday night. He had lifted his season batting average from .267 to .316 during the streak.

Stars out for 'the' PGA

OAKMONT, Pa. (AP) — Jack Nicklaus is back on top, and two fallen stars may have omens going for them in this week's PGA Championship — the golfing prize that may forever elude Arnold Palmer.

Play starts Thursday at the Oakmont Country Club, where Nicklaus was a chubby 22-year-old when he won his first pro title by edging Palmer in the 1963 U.S. Open.

Recently, Nicklaus won the British Open with 72 holes he called "the best major championship I've ever played."

He hadn't won a major tournament in nearly three years, but that raised his career total to 17: three British Opens, five Masters, four PGAs, three U.S. Opens and two U.S. Amateurs.

"If I continue to work at it, I'll win several more," Nicklaus predicted.

But there may not be any more for Johnny Miller, who won the 1973 U.S. Open here with a record final-round 63.

Golf's top money-winner in 1974 with $353,021, Miller ranks 102nd among the pros this year with winnings of $16,090.

After a practice round this week, he reported soreness in his neck in the same spot where he developed pain before taking the 1973 U.S. Open.

Is Miller counting on that as a sign of impending success this time?

"No, I'm not superstitious," said Miller. "Maybe Oakmont just has an allergy for necks."

Another young player here welcomed a little superstitious support. That was Lanny Wadkins, the defending PGA champion.

Last year, Wadkins missed the cut in a tournament that preceded the PGA. He missed the cut last week at the Hartford Open.

"Maybe," he suggested, "the same thing could happen again."

Maybe, but Wadkins has yet to win a tournament this year and he's missed the cut eight times in 20 events.

"It was a lot more fun when I was playing well," he said. "The way I'm going now, winning any tournament would be special."

Winning the PGA would be special for Palmer, too. It's the only major title he's never won despite 20 tries. His best finishes have been three ties for second place.

"I'm concentrating," Palmer said after Tuesday's practice round.

"I haven't won a PGA, and I do want to win a PGA — very badly," he said.

Though he is a member of the Oakmont Country Club, the 48-year-old Palmer has also never won a major tournament here. Three times he played in the U.S. Open here. He missed the cut in 1953, lost to Nicklaus in 1962, and was out-charged by Miller in 1973.

"I hope I play well this time. Yeah, I hope I play well," said Palmer, who's made time for a half-dozen practice rounds here in recent weeks.

Palmer has also been a consultant on a few changes made at Oakmont.

'Professor' in Africa

EDMONTON, Alberta (AP) — Since the Montreal Olympics, smooth talking Tom Johnson has graduated from the role of father confessor — for the likes of Leon Spinks — to boxing professor.

The man who coached the 1976 Olympic boxing team — five gold medal winners who are now professionals, including Spinks — has turned his attention to Africa. "They call me professor over there," said Johnson, a 47-year-old ex-fighter who is coaching the Kenyan boxing team here as the Commonwealth Games near their opening ceremonies.

"I got 12 or 14 African countries asking the U.S. State Department to send me over to develop a lot of raw talent. I teach them training schedules and technique. Boxing is a discipline and it's my business."

With the State Department paying Johnson's way, the Indianapolis resident has spent the last six months touring Africa, giving boxing clinics and molding a stunning array of Kenyan boxing talent.

In effect, American taxpayers are subsidizing the enterprise, considered a goodwill program for the United States.

Johnson was a well-known boxing mentor before the 1976 Olympics. His tours of foreign countries for the United States began four years ago. But it was the American success in Montreal that really rocketed Johnson to prominence.

The U.S. team included Leon and Michael Spinks, Sugar Ray Leonard, Howard Davis and Leo Randolph. Leon Spinks, shocked Muhammad Ali for the world heavyweight title, and the others, especially Leonard, are rising in the pro ranks.

If Shue fits, Diego'll wear it

SAN DIEGO (AP) — San Diego's new National Basketball Association club has hired former Philadelphia and Baltimore Coach Gene Shue, who told victory-starved fans of the team that they can expect a winner.

Shue is the NBA's winningest active head coach with a 448-434 career record. But in the league's Pacific Division, San Diego finds itself in a bracket in which every team — Los Angeles, Phoenix, Golden State, Seattle and Portland — had winning seasons last year.

"That's the major problem — the unbelievable competition," Shue told a news conference Tuesday after San Diego owner Irvin Levin announced his appointment as coach.

"We will play a style of basketball that fans are anxious to enjoy," he said.

The 46-year-old Shue was fired last Nov. 3 at Philadelphia and replaced by Billy Cunningham. Shue coached the 76ers for four seasons and led them to one Eastern Division crown.

His record at Philadelphia, where the 76ers made it to the NBA championship round in 1977-78 only to be demolished by Portland, was 157-177. But "Gene is the winningest head coach active today in professional basketball," noted a confident Levin.

Shue said he signed a two-year contract with a "mutual option" for a third year.

The new NBA club was moved from Buffalo by Levin after he traded the Boston Celtics to Braves owner John Y. Brown.

Shue's lineup tentatively is expected to include 6-foot-11 Sven Nater at center, 6-9 forwards Kermit Washington and Sidney Wicks and Randy Smith and rookie Freeman Williams at guard. Kevin Kunnert, a towering 7-footer, is expected to share time at center.

Shue said that "a lot depends on Wicks — if he can revert back to his form in Portland."

Also, he said, Smith and Williams probably "will need some help" in the backcourt.

Levin said he and Shue would decide about Wicks after the former UCLA star meets this week or next with Shue.

Shue said he plans to keep up with the best teams in the division and that the Trail Blazers, without question, are the club to beat.

Rose wilted, business as usual

AP Sports Writer

The boom is off the Rose.

Pete Rose's news-making hitting streak came to an end at 44 games Tuesday night when the Cincinnati Reds' star was shut out by two pitchers in a 16-4 loss to the Atlanta Braves.

"I'm not relieved," said Rose, somewhat distressed. "I'm more teed off. But I guess it is a load off my shoulders."

Rose went hitless in four official trips and walked once. He was retired twice by rookie left-hander Larry McWilliams, who walked the Cincinnati third baseman in the first inning, and the final two times by reliever Gene Garber.

"Garber was pitching like it was the seventh game of the World Series," Rose said.

Later appraised of Rose's remark, Garber retorted: "I had an idea he was hitting like it was the ninth inning of the seventh game of the World Series."

In the other National League games, the Houston Astros whipped the San Francisco Giants 4-2; the San Diego Padres edged the Los Angeles Dodgers 1-0; the Montreal Expos nipped the Pittsburgh Pirates 4-3; the New York Mets turned back the Philadelphia Phillies 5-1 and the Chicago Cubs stopped the St. Louis Cardinals 4-2.

McWilliams, 3-0, was lifted for a pinch-hitter in the fifth, when the Braves came from behind with a five-run rally, sparked by a three-run homer by Horner and a solo blast by Dale Murphy.

The Braves also scored five runs in the eighth with the help of three Cincinnati errors.

Padres 1, Dodgers 0

Derrel Thomas' one-out, bases-loaded single in the ninth inning broke a scoreless tie as San Diego nipped Los Angeles. Randy Jones, 9-9, pitched a seven-hitter for the Padres' first shutout over the Dodgers in the team's 10-year history.

Boston Red Sox unraveling fast

FRANK BROWN

AP Sports Writer

The Boston Red Sox are losing confidence and losing ground.

Most of all, they're losing games — 11 of the last 14. The team some thought unstoppable has stopped hitting and stopped smiling.

"In the first half of the season, every time we took the field, we felt as though we would win," said Boston captain Carl Yastrzemski.

"Now, I don't know. We have to grind it out. We shouldn't think about losing."

But the standings serve as a constant reminder. A 10-game lead that had seemed so comfortable now stands an uneasy 4½ after a 5-2 loss to the Chicago White Sox Tuesday night. The Red Sox have seen their winning percentage drop in proportion to the team batting average: Jim Rice is 3-for-27 and George Scott is 1-for-28.

The Red Sox fell to Chicago rookie Mike Proly Tuesday night. The 27-year-old right-hander held Boston to six hits and got offensive support when Lamar Johnson and Bob Molinaro cracked home runs in consecutive Luis Tiant pitches in the three-run fourth inning.

In the other AL games, the Yankees bombed Texas 8-1, Oakland blanked California 1-0, Seattle blasted Minnesota 13-6, Cleveland edged Kansas City 2-1 and Detroit bested Toronto 3-2.

Mariners 13, Twins 6

Bob Stinson drove in five runs with a grand slam and a sacrifice fly, and teammate Leon Roberts delivered four with a three-run double and a sacrifice fly to help Seattle overpower Minnesota.

A's 1, Angels 0

Rick Langford pitched a three-hitter and struck out 11 Angels, helping Oakland beat California to pull into a second-place tie with them, four games behind leading Kansas City.

The Oakland run scored in the second when Mario

Guerrero walked, Taylor Duncan singled and Miguel Dilone hit a run-scoring single.

Indians 2, Royals 1

Buddy Bell's pinch single in the seventh scored Rick Manning from third base and handed Kansas City its second consecutive loss for the first time in a month. The Royals, who have lost only four of their last 18, took a 1-0 lead in the second when David Clyde's balk allowed Amos Otis to score from third.

Tigers 3, Blue Jays 2

Phil Mankowski doubled home the first Detroit run in the second inning and later scored on a wild pitch to lift the Tigers over the Blue Jays.

Rangers fanned again

NEW YORK (AP) — Jim "Catfish" Hunter appears to be back in the groove and the New York Yankees are back in something even more important — a pennant race.

Hunter, knocked out in his last outing after facing six batters and giving up six runs, combined with Sparky Lyle on a four-hitter Tuesday night as the Yankees routed the Texas Rangers 8-1.

"I think after all the rest I got after my last outing my arm felt a lot stronger," Hunter said after pitching eight scoreless innings — his longest outing this season. "This is the most encouraged I've felt about my arm in a long time."

Hunter, 4-4, had reason to be encouraged. He held Texas hitless for 4 1-3 innings before Juan Beniquez doubled in the fifth. The veteran right hander allowed just two other hits — a sixth-inning single to Al Oliver and an eighth-inning double to Mike Hargrove — while striking out six and walking three.

Lyle pitched the ninth, surrendering a home run to Bobby Bonds, his 20th, but by then the Yankees were back in the pennant race.

"The guys are hitting and playing well," Hunter said. "Now we're getting guys back in the lineup. Heck, we can catch Boston."

Hunter wasn't the only Yankee talking about the Red Sox and how their 14-game lead over New York has slipped to 6½ in the American League East.

"We didn't think we'd make up so much ground on the Red Sox so fast," said Graig Nettles, who drove in New York's fifth run with a double in the third.

Chris Chambliss, who drove in the Yankees first run with a single in the second, agreed: "We're going to make a run at Boston."

Fem swimmers out for blood

THE WOODLANDS, Texas (AP) — Former U.S. Olympic swimmer Shirley Babashoff watched in amazement with the rest of the world at the performances of the American men and the East German women in the 1976 Olympics.

Now she thinks it's the U.S. women's turn to startle the swimming world.

The East German women dominated the women's swimming events and the U.S. men won 13 gold medals.

"I think they (U.S. women) are out for blood this time around," said Babashoff, here to watch the top American swimmers perform in the Amateur Athletic Union's Long Course Championships.

"Most of them are younger and they are definitely stronger."

The AAU meet, which begins a five-day run at The Woodlands' Swim and Athletic Center today, will serve as a qualifier for the World Championships scheduled Aug. 20-28 at Berlin, Germany.

Babashoff, who won eight medals during the 1972 and 1976 Olympics, says the American women are closing the gap that existed with the East German swimmers in 1976.

"We have better coaches and better training methods now," Babashoff said.

Astronauts selected for space shuttle

HOUSTON (AP) — National Aeronautics and Space Administration officials have selected scientist-astronauts Owen K. Garriott and Robert A. Parker as mission specialists for the shuttle program's first laboratory flight.

NASA officials Tuesday announced the selection of Garriott, 43, of Enid, Okla., and Parker, 44, of New York City. Garriott was a crew member on the 59-day flight of Skylab 2, but Parker has not made a space flight.

The seven-day laboratory mission will be performed in the early 1980s and will be preceded by six test flights and four operational shuttle flights.

The 15 by 60 foot laboratory, being developed and financed by 10 European nations under agreement with the European Space Agency, is to be carried in the cargo bay of the shuttle orbiter spacecraft.

Farm Home gardening has new vigor

WASHINGTON (AP) — The 1973 consumer boycott of beef may be one of the most bitter memories of many farmers from that topsy-turvy year for the agricultural economy.

But new research by the Agriculture Department indicates that another consumer phenomenon that got new vigor that year is having a significant impact on farmers' markets without so much as a mild curse across the fence.

That's home gardening. Last year, about 6 million acres were devoted to home gardens in cities, suburbs and rural areas, a survey by the Consumer and Food Economic Institute found.

That's "about the same used for growing the principal commercial fruits and vegetables" by fulltime farmers, said the agency's Evelyn Kaitz in a recent article.

True, she noted, "the commercial acreage is utilized more extensively. In all probability, some ornamental flowers were included in the home gardening space as borders or as aids in pest control."

But that acreage represents big money — an estimated $14 billion in produce, according to a survey for Gardens for All Inc. done by the Gallup organization.

The figure is based on average supermarket prices and an average garden size of 770 square feet for 32 million home gardens. It compares to $10 billion in 1976.

The $14 billion would be equal to 8 percent of what consumers spent on domestically produced foods last year.

Ms. Kaitz said that available information indicates that 11 percent of the processed fruits and vegetables consumed last year by Americans came out of home gardens.

Her surveys showed that an average household froze 81 pounds of fruit and vegetables from gardens last year and canned an additional 132 pounds.

Other department statistics show that, not counting potatoes and sweet potatoes, consumption of fresh, canned and frozen vegetables grown by farmers went from 157.7 pounds in 1973 to 155.8 pounds last year — a drop of 1.2 percent.

Fresh-vegetable consumption had picked up in 1974, 1975 and 1976 before resuming a long-term decline, however.

Consumption of fresh fruit, which had dropped from 90 pounds per person per year in 1960, went from 74 pounds to 82.1 pounds between 1973 and 1977.

Patience nets hefty gobbler

RICHMOND, Va. (AP) — school tennis star, "I must have gone hunting 30 times." This year, in his second trip, he bagged a gobbler tipping the scales at a robust 20 pounds and 8 ounces. "Last year I only saw one turkey, so I thought maybe I didn't know how to call them properly," he said.

He had no luck last year. "My friends thought I was crazy, and I'll admit I almost went broke hunting," said Jones, a former local high school tennis star.

J. Lee Jones, Jr. son of Mary C. Jones, Colorado City historian, recently gave the Colorado City Record a copy of the history of the newspaper written sometime during the 1930s by A.L. Whipkey.

Since Bob Whipkey came to Big Spring to serve as publisher of the Big Spring Herald, I think the story is also interesting here. "In December 1905, Whipkey Bros., F.B. and A.L. came to Colorado looking for a location for a newspaper and printing plant. "They were from McLennan County, where they had been publishing a paper 12 years, but having sold out, they were looking for a new field. "They came to Colorado through the influence of Rev. Holmes Nichols, who was pastor of the Baptist Church and had known them in West. "At that time, there were two weekly papers in Colorado. The Clipper, run by Tom Cooper and the Record, owned by Mr. and Mrs. Kindred who had just started the little paper in the previous October."

The story goes on to tell of them purchasing that paper and said, "They were very much discouraged by some of the businessmen of the town, telling them that they could not succeed, as a dozen or more papers had been started and died a lingering and painful death. Even the men from whom they bought the machinery, told them that Colorado was a newspaper graveyard. No one seemed to trust newspaper people, so they paid six months rent in advance, on the office building and could get no residences at all. They had to board until Gus Berner could build houses for them."

Final order issued today on rate hike
AUSTIN, Texas (AP). — Southwestern Bell Telephone Co. customers could pay as much as $1.36 more in monthly service charges under the company's $214.3 million rate hike request. The Texas Public Utility Commission issues a final order at 2 p.m. today in the case, delayed last month when Bell learned one of its former employees was under criminal investigation. The rate request is Bell's second before the regulatory agency, which earlier ordered new rates at $173 million less than requested. The first rate case was upheld last week in the Texas Supreme Court. Bell officials shaved $174,160 from the current request after the U.S. attorney reported the amount had been linked to alleged improper equipment leases and purchases. Commission chairman George Cowden said last week he would be "very surprised" if Bell's request to delete the questionable funds were not granted. A rate increase of $105 million has been recommended by the utility commission staff, while the Texas Municipal League says the company should receive $127 million more annually.

THE WOLD WHIPKEY PRINTING CO. at Colorado City

They fought for civic improvement including incorporation and pavement and lights and other betterments. In 1908, they installed the best linotype machine between Fort Worth and El Paso.

For over 40 years, the business management by F.B. Whipkey and the mechanical department under A.L. Whipkey never changed. Through the years they had four competitors, none of whom survived over a year.

In 1926, A.L. Whipkey sold his interest to W.W. Whipkey, his nephew and son of F.B. Whipkey, who took full charge of the plant as owner and manager.

Robert W. Whipkey was A.L. Whipkey's son, he worked in that plant as a printer's devil when a boy. He went to Hardin-Simmons and edited the college paper there, working in Abilene from 1929 to 1935. He came to Big Spring in 1935 to accept temporary employment as The Herald's managing editor. He stayed here the rest of his life retiring in 1971.

and dying here suddenly in 1973. His wife, Ruby, still resides in Big Spring. The history of the Colorado City paper and the Big Spring Herald run together with two generations of the Whipkey family. So I thought some of you might enjoy hearing that little bit of Cee City history that eventually affected us here — out where I ride fence.
