Teachers try to get a lock on violence

By Myra Lee Salcedo

School violence won't be stemmed by bringing drug-sniffing dogs onto campus or through installing metal detectors.

"Child advocacy is the solution to our problems," said national consultant Ron Garrison of California. He spoke of a teen-age girl bringing a knife with a 7½-inch blade on campus in California because she was threatened by rape.

"How does a metal detector address that?" Garrison asked a roomful of area educators attending his two-day workshop "Violence Prevention and School Safety."

Court backs state school-funds law

Associated Press

AUSTIN — The Texas Supreme Court on Monday upheld the state's latest share-the-wealth school finance law, which had been challenged by both property-rich and poor school districts.

Three previous school funding laws were thrown out by the Supreme Court, beginning in 1989.

"We conclude that Senate Bill 7 (the school funding law) is constitutional in all respects," said the 5-4 decision written by Justice John Cornyn.

"Children who live in property-poor districts and children who live in property-rich districts now have substantially equal access to the funds necessary for a general diffusion of knowledge," he wrote.

The ruling brought sighs of relief from legislators, who have struggled with the issue since the high court first ordered them to even out funding available to school districts with varying property wealth. The Supreme Court also overturned school

O.J. defense offers golf alibi, plants frame-up seeds

Ito rebukes Simpson's team for tactics, allows prosecution to reopen

LOS ANGELES — O.J. Simpson's lawyer outlined an elaborate alibi for the murder defendant Monday, tracking his moves minute by minute and alleging he was practicing his golf swing at home when his ex-wife was slain.

Judge Ito shows his displeasure with the defense team.

Moving past a stinging rebuke from the judge for violating evidence discovery laws, Johnnie Cochran Jr. also set the stage for claiming a frame-up by investigators eager to nab a celebrity.

He told jurors that some of Simpson's blood, given to police a day after the killings, is missing, and the blood of his dead ex-wife appeared to have been smeared on a pair of Simpson's socks months after the murders.

Cochran declared his client was "entitled to an acquittal."

Simpson walked out of his house at 10:10 p.m. on June 12, crossed his driveway to his parked Bronco and called his girlfriend from the cellular phone inside, Cochran said. Walking back to the mansion, Cochran said, Simpson picked up some golf clubs that he kept "all over the place" and took some swings. Cochran said it was Simpson's practice to chip balls into his children's sandbox.

Last week, however, Cochran told jurors Simpson could not even shuffle a deck of cards the afternoon before the murders due to severe arthritis in his wrists aggravated by a morning round of golf.

Before the opening statement, Superior Court Judge Lance Ito reprimanded Cochran for hiding witnesses and ad-

City bookstores report 'brisk' sales of Simpson's new book

Midlanders apparently are as interested in the O.J. Simpson murder case as other Americans, with brisk sales reported locally for his new book, "I Want to Tell You."

The controversial book by Simpson was dictated in jail to journalist Lawrence Schiller, and in the book the man accused of a double homicide repeatedly states that he is not guilty of the grisly killings.

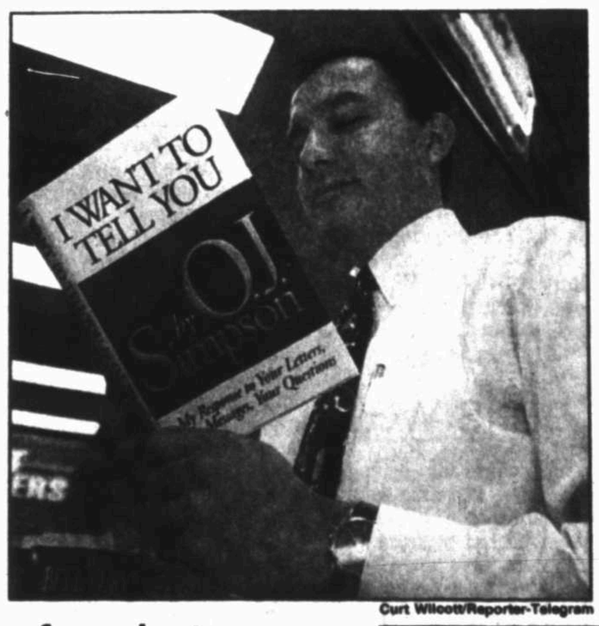

Simpson, 47, is on trial in the slayings of his 35-year-old ex-wife and her friend Ronald Goldman, 25, on June 12 outside Nicole Simpson's Brentwood, Calif., condominium.

The book went on sale last week and an employee of B Dalton Bookseller in the Midland Park Mall said initial sales were so strong that its first shipment already has sold out.

1 in 10 Americans feeds on food stamps

Editor's note: In a series on welfare reform, the Hearst News Service discusses the top programs. Part 2 deals with food stamps.

By Vic Ostrowidzki

WASHINGTON — Thousands of Americans bear daily witness to their own misfortune at grocery store checkout counters.

Instead of cash, they hand the clerk a bunch of stamps issued by the federal government to cover part of their food bill.

A record 27.4 million people — roughly one in 10 Americans — receive food stamps or live with someone who does, at a cost of $26.3 billion a year to the federal government.

This makes the food stamp program the second most expensive welfare program, behind Medicaid.

"Visible hunger is something Americans won't tolerate," says Robert Fersh, executive director of the Food Research & Action Center (FRAC), a welfare advocacy group. "I would hate to think where we would be without" the food stamp program, he said.

Hey, high might return to 70

Staff Report

Today's forecast calls for sunny skies with a high near 70 and southwest winds at 5-15 mph. Tonight should be mostly clear with a low in the mid-30s, according to the National Weather Service in Midland.

Wednesday should be mostly sunny with a high in the mid-70s.

After an overnight low of 25, Monday's high reached 55, compared to the record high for that date of 80 set in 1971. The record low was eight set in 1951.

STATE

A high-pressure system began to exert a warming influence on Texas Monday, with mostly clear skies and low humidity the rule.

High temperatures rose into the 50s in most of West and North Texas. They climbed into the high 50s in the Hill Country and 60s in South Texas.

The exception to the trend was Guadalupe Pass, with 42 degrees.

Winds were mainly westerly to northwesterly at 5 to 15 mph, except for 25 to 30 mph and gusts to 35 mph in the mountains of far West Texas.

The warming trend was expected to continue through the week's end, with clear nights and sunny to mostly sunny days through Wednesday afternoon.

NATION

Snow and freezing rain slickened roads in parts of Virginia, Kentucky and North Carolina and another storm blew into California on Monday.

One to 3 inches of snow fell across western and central Virginia and northern North Carolina, beginning late Sunday and continuing through Monday.

Georgia, Florida and the Carolina coast received light rain.

The Associated Press contributed to this report.

young show-and-tell-age — because they are fearful, or they are running drugs."

The consultant said, "Public education has become big business and we have forgotten who our clients are."

He said teachers and parents failing to establish strong relationships with children has also contributed to a lack of discipline.

"Children have become the canaries in the coal mines," he said, speaking of the old practice of vacating mines when caged canaries died from escaping lethal gases. "Our kids are telling us about the dangers in our communities, and if we don't solve the problems of our kids, we will become the victims. What is happening to them today will happen to us tomorrow, if we don't turn the tide."

Garrison said people seldom experience a real sense of community. He said that when he was growing up in Northern California, neighbors sat out on front porches in the evening to talk about politics and raising children. "We didn't have air conditioning and we didn't have television."

What he did have was a lot of neighbors keeping an eye on him. "I heard my father tell the other neighbors: 'If you see my Ronnie doing anything he shouldn't, you have my permission to pin his ears back.'"

While Garrison's story garnered laughter from the educators, he said that his father's words were enforced. "The neighbors had my parents' permission to do something. . . . I knew, in that neighborhood, there would be consequences. Adults were in control. Children were not in control."

The consultant said it's too easy to blame all of society's ills on the breakdown of the family. "But you can blame the breakdown of the neighborhood," he said, noting relationships between parents and teachers are also lacking.

Like real estate agents living by the words "location, location, location," Garrison said teachers should swear by the words, "relationships, relationships, relationships."

He said schools cannot enforce discipline unilaterally. "Unilateral decisions — like dress codes and corporal punishment — don't work. Those type of decisions should be community decisions. If the schools are the only ones enforcing these decisions, with no support, they won't work."

He said if corporal punishment was a community standard, police officers would take a paddle and swat adolescents for being out late at night, retail store managers would swat youngsters for shoplifting and Sunday School teachers would swat their charges for misbehavior.

"Educators put themselves at personal risk for lawsuits when they engage in unilateral actions," Garrison said.

The consultant advocated making parents accountable for the actions of their offspring, and applauded Florida for charging students — and their parents — with felonies when the student brings a gun to school. He said some other states charge students and their parents with misdemeanors when the students carry guns on campus.

"The vast majority of guns come from homes. Why is it dad will put the chainsaw up high so no one gets hurt, but he puts a loaded gun in a bedroom drawer?" Garrison asked. "More than 3,000 kids each year choose to pick up a gun and blow their heads off."

In order to create a safe school environment, Garrison said teachers, parents and school counselors should all be consistent in enforcing a discipline plan. He suggested that cafeterias and hallways be monitored. He said teachers should be visible and circulate amongst students and use positive reinforcement tactics when possible.

Garrison also gave teachers materials describing the stages of physical confrontations and tips on defusing crisis situations.

Today the workshop will continue with Garrison speaking on managing safe inclusion of special populations into regular classrooms.

WELFARE: Stamp program costs 2nd most verse groups of people as long as they meet the economic eligibility test.

The program is designed to enable low-income people to buy enough food to maintain a low-cost, nutritional diet.

Families eligible for Aid to Families with Dependent Children (AFDC), the main welfare program, automatically are eligible for food stamps. Otherwise, applicants for food stamps must show that their household income is below $588 a month for one person, $965 for a family of three and $1,361 for a family of five. Also, household savings cannot exceed $2,000.

The average monthly income of a food-stamp household is $472, or $5,664 annually.

Food-stamp benefits are issued in the form of booklets of coupons. The smallest coupon denomination is $1. Typically, participating households use their stamps in approved grocery stores to buy food items for home preparation and consumption.

Food stamps can't be used to buy tobacco, alcoholic beverages, hot food ready to eat, vitamins or medicines, pet foods, or any non-food items, except seeds and plants to grow food.

The program provides an average benefit of 75 cents per person for each meal.

According to the Agriculture Department, the average size of a food-stamp household is 2.6 persons, 52.2 percent of all program participants are children, and 7.1 percent are elderly.

About 4.6 percent of participants are employed full-time, 19.8 percent of households have earned income, another 29 percent are unemployed, while others are disabled or responsible for the care of a child or an incapacitated person.

President Clinton wants to expand the program by an additional $7.5 billion over five years and exempt recipients from the two-year limit on AFDC benefits.

Republican leaders have called for a consolidation of all federally funded nutrition programs — including food stamps — into one discretionary block grant to the states, and a 5 percent cut in funding.

However, they would require states to devote at least 12 percent of the block grant funds for food assistance and nutrition education to low-income pregnant women, infants and children; set aside 20 percent of the grant for meals served to low-income children in schools; and use the rest of the funds at the state's discretion on other food assistance program.

They also would deny food stamps to non-citizens.

finance laws in 1991 and 1992.

"It's quite a relief," said Sen. Bill Ratliff, R-Mount Pleasant, chairman of the Senate Education Committee. "It really was a tremendous relief to know that we're not going to be facing that bloody battle again."

Lt. Gov. Bob Bullock called the ruling good news for all Texans.

"For years, I have said that it is time to get education out of the courtroom and into the classroom where it belongs. The time is now at hand," Bullock said.

But lawyers for both rich and poor schools disagreed with the ruling.

"We are very disappointed that the court doesn't agree with us that the school funding is still inequitable and that a lot of children in poor districts are being denied opportunities," said Al Kauffman of the Mexican American Legal Defense and Educational Fund.

Dallas lawyer Schuyler Marshall, representing wealthy districts, said, "Unbelievable. . . . Most people expected it to be reversed."

Cornyn, a Republican, was joined by Chief Justice Tom Phillips, also a Republican, and three Democrats: Justices Raul Gonzalez, Jack Hightower and Bob Gammage. This is the first Republican-controlled Supreme Court since Reconstruction.

In his majority opinion, Cornyn wrote, "Our judgment in this case should not be interpreted as a signal that the school finance crisis in Texas has ended."

However, he added, "This court's role under our Constitution's separation of powers provision should be one of restraint. We do not dictate to the Legislature how to discharge its duty."

Republican Justices Nathan Hecht, Craig Enoch and Priscilla Owen all said they would have thrown out the law. They said it amounts to an unconstitutional state property tax.

Democratic Justice Rose Spector wrote a harsh dissent, saying that the "inescapable truth is that poor districts will now be much worse off than rich districts."

The ruling, Ms. Spector wrote, "is based on the previously-rejected premise that the state's constitutional responsibility is satisfied by providing most school children with the very least, and the favored few with the best money can buy."

The court earlier rule that some school districts could continue to have some more revenue available than others in a constitutional system.

The current law narrows the property wealth gap between the richest and poorest school districts from 700-to-1 during the first trial in the case to 28-to-1, Cornyn wrote, and state aid further narrows the gap.

The Legislature "envisions that all students will have access to a high quality education," Cornyn wrote.

The high court also threw out a lower court order requiring lawmakers to find a way to equitably fund school construction needs by Sept. 1.

The majority of justices said school districts challenging the law didn't prove that it hadn't done enough to provide for school facilities.

With the school funding system now blessed by the Supreme Court, lawmakers have more leeway to concentrate on other education reforms.

However, school finance will remain an issue.

ALIBI: Judge rebukes defense-team tactics

monished jurors to ignore much of what he said last week as violations of law.

In a highly unusual move, Ito also said he would allow the prosecution to reopen its opening statement for 10 minutes today to address the defense transgressions. Deputy District Attorney Marcia Clark may discuss alleged inconsistencies in statements by defense witness Mary Anne Gerchas, who purportedly saw four men fleeing an area near the murder scene that night.

Clark also may show four minutes of outtakes from Simpson's recent exercise video, which was previewed in court. The tape showed the ex-running back in shorts, stretching, marching, complaining about his knees and later doing pushups. The prosecution presumably wants to counter defense arguments that Simpson's football injuries would have prohibited him from killing Nicole Brown Simpson and Ronald Goldman.

The judge, however, barred a video segment in which Clark claims Simpson is joking about wife beating. His comment about "working out with the wife" is muffled and incomplete.

Ito also refused to let Clark counter Cochran's statement that blood found under Ms. Simpson's fingernails didn't match hers, Goldman's or Simpson's.

In impassioned remarks, Clark told the judge the defense misled the jury by leaving out part of an expert's statement about the blood.

The report indicated that a type B protein was found in blood under Ms. Simpson's nails and on her thigh. Clark told the judge that Ms. Simpson's protein type, called BA, can become a B when degraded.

She said that because of national news coverage of the trial, "the whole country has been misled as to the truth."

When he resumed his opening statement Monday, Cochran turned his focus from the reports of witnesses to what he termed the sloppy work of inept investigators who polluted evidence so badly it made DNA testing meaningless.

"The evidence will be shown to be contaminated, compromised and corrupted," Cochran said. "The gathering of evidence was a complete disaster."

Cochran presented a recreation of Simpson's movements that night with the aid of a hi-tech video display system. Prosecutors have said they believe Ms. Simpson and Goldman were murdered about 10:15 p.m., but Cochran insisted Simpson never left his estate until he departed for the airport after 11 p.m.

"He did not, would not, could not, in the time frame, commit these particular killings," Cochran said.

By offering such a specific alibi, with no eyewitnesses, the defense increased the probability Simpson will have to testify, legal analysts said.

"It's hard to imagine how all of this information will be presented without him taking the stand," said Myrna Raeder, a law professor at Southwestern University.

Hammering away at the handling of evidence, Cochran said the lead investigator carried a vial of Simpson's blood in his pocket for hours, taking it from police headquarters to Simpson's estate about 20 miles away rather than refrigerating it at the crime lab.

Now, Cochran asserted, not all of the blood withdrawn from Simpson's arm the day after his ex-wife's slaying can be accounted for.

He also accused authorities of bloodying a pair of socks months after technicians reported seeing no blood on those items found at the foot of Simpson's bed.

As evidence, he cited a TV news report in late September that said DNA results showed Ms. Simpson's blood was on a sock found in Simpson's bedroom. The socks had not yet been tested at that date, Cochran said, but the actual results on Nov. 17 confirmed the TV report.

"So, we think this will be a hotly contested item as to whether or not these socks were consciously, intentionally tampered with, in an effort, in a rush to judgment, to get evidence on Mr. Simpson," Cochran said.

Cochran said the amount of DNA found on the socks was "equal to all the rest of the blood found in this particular case," which he suggested was particularly interesting "where you have the results predicted before the socks are ever sent out to the lab."

"In this case," Cochran said, "God knows what happened on June 12, 1994. We hope after you hear all the evidence, you, too, will know what happened, and you will know — the evidence will show — that O.J. Simpson didn't kill his wife, did not kill Ron Goldman and is entitled to an acquittal."

Outside jurors' presence, Ito issued a strong reprimand to the Simpson defense team, ruling they had purposely hidden the identity of several witnesses "for the purpose of gaining an unfair tactical advantage."

Ito forbade defense attorneys from calling as witnesses any of the six people mentioned to jurors, as well as eight others named in separate defense reports, until the end of their case.

He refused to grant prosecutors a 30-day delay to study the new evidence, but told Clark he felt his sanctions against the defense were "as harsh a finding as the court can make under these circumstances."

Prosecutors devoted half their opening remarks last week to a "trail of blood" from the bodies to Simpson's Bronco to the socks at the foot of his bed; they said sophisticated DNA analysis linked Simpson and both victims to many of the samples.

But Cochran called the tests "garbage in, garbage out" because of botched collection methods by careless, poorly trained employees.

He displayed a blowup photo that showed the feet of a woman standing near Goldman's slashed body. The woman's high-heeled pumps were not covered with the protective booties normally worn by crime scene workers, and she was standing on a blood-stained sheet beside the body.

ing. When MISD approached wealthier Andrews Independent School District officials, they declined to participate in the finance plan with their Tall City neighbors.

"By definition MISD is a poor district, below average in wealth," said Art Martin, MISD executive director of business services. "We share in state funding to a larger degree than a wealthier district who would have above-average property values."

Martin said MISD officials are more concerned with the outcome of the Legislative session, which will include decisions on fully funding Senate Bill 7 to the tune of $2 billion dollars.

"Legislators have said it's going to be funded. We just are not sure how that will impact MISD," Martin said.

an who took great care to look around, apparently for people who might know her, before picking up the book, she said.

"It's been interesting," she said.

Sales from the new book also appear to have sparked renewed interest in the recently published book about the life of Nicole Brown Simpson, the Hastings employee said.

An employee of Waldenbooks at the Midland Park Mall said sales of the new volume have been "very brisk," with only a few copies remaining of the initial shipment.

Jim Blischke of Pages & Prints Bookstore in the Plaza Oaks Shopping Center said he and his wife chose not to stock the book and have had little call for the work at their store. Pages & Prints carries a great many children's books, professional works and regional books, but do not sell a great many trendy works that can be purchased elsewhere, Blischke said.

Blischke said some bookstore owners have refused to stock the book, and others have even been renting the work with rental proceeds being donated to battered women's shelters or to a fund for the Simpson children.

A saleswoman at the Daily Planet News said store owners initially chose not to puchase the Simpson book, but have received numerous requests for the work. "We have had three people look for it today," she said.

In the 208-page book, Simpson reportedly features numerous letters he has received while in jail. His responses to these letters have been characterized by many as "self-pitying," according to Associated Press reports.

He reportedly was paid $1 million for the book, but the publisher, Little, Brown & Company would not confirm the amount of their advance.

Bush pushes for peso aid

New governor makes case for financial help to Mexico

N.Y. Times News Service

WASHINGTON — During his first visit to Washington as Texas governor, George W. Bush has capitalized on his name recognition to push forcefully for U.S. help in propping up the Mexican peso.

Bush, son of former President George Bush, has been making his debut appearance with the National Governors' Association, which has been holding its winter meeting in Washington. The meeting began Saturday and ends Tuesday.

Bush, who took office Jan. 17, said Monday that the sharp devaluation of the Mexican currency is also a problem for Texas. He warned that the neighboring country's financial crisis could lead to an increase of illegal immigration into the United States and hurt cross-border trade.

"If the peso devalues to the point where Mexico collapses, the immigration problem of the state of Texas will become a lot worse than it is today, and that is a problem for Texas," Bush told a group of Texas reporters.

"I believe it is important that the U.S. provide the well-collateralized source of credit to help Mexico over a short-term financial problem."

The Clinton administration is seeking congressional approval of a rescue plan that would provide $40 billion in loan guarantees to make it cheaper for Mexico to borrow to prop up the weakened peso.

But the plan — which amounts to the United States serving as co-signer of Mexico's loans, with Mexican oil revenues pledged as collateral — has been losing support on Capitol Hill.

The executive committee of the governors' association, with a boost from Bush, on Monday approved a resolution in favor of a rescue plan. The governors are to vote on it Tuesday.

Bush, a Republican, accused the Democrats and indirectly President Clinton for failing to generate support for the rescue effort.

"The White House has yet to get the Democratic leadership in line," he said.

Democrats, especially liberals who worry that cheap labor in Mexico could mean a loss of U.S. jobs, have been reluctant to sign on to the deal.

Asked about Clinton's plea to congressional leaders on Monday to act on the rescue package, Bush said, "I suspect President Bush might have had a talk with him, president to president."

The younger Bush and his father on Saturday night attended a gala dinner during which the former president spoke with Clinton. The dinner was an annual event of the Alfalfa Club, an elite group of current and former politicians who spend the evening lampooning each other.

During his Washington visit, the Texas governor also took on the issue of welfare reform, which has divided governors during their meeting.

"I'm for as much freedom as could possibly be granted on the governing side," Bush said.

The Clinton administration has insisted that federal standards be attached to programs, even if some responsibility is returned to the states in the form of block grants.

"The best safeguard for children's programs is to have a governor that cares about children," Bush said.

"It's somehow part of the Washington thought process that if we de-control states, irrational things will happen to children. It's part of the old style of thinking."

Bush said that during his Washington visit he had been able to speak with President Clinton several times, as well as with the leaders of the GOP-controlled 104th Congress — House Speaker Newt Gingrich of Georgia and Senate Majority Leader Robert Dole of Kansas.

The governor returned to the White House Sunday night for the first time since his father was president to attend a black-tie dinner for the governors.

Passengers evacuated after smoke reported

NASHVILLE, Tenn. — A jet engine started smoking after the plane landed at the airport Monday, forcing the evacuation of 116 passengers.

The passengers slid down the emergency chute, one suffered a minor ankle injury, airport spokeswoman Carole Martin said.

The pilot of Delta Flight 1149 from Atlanta reported seeing smoke coming from the plane's tail, but no fire was found, airport spokeswoman Sherre Bishop said.

"Smoke coming from the tail is not necessarily fire coming from the tail," said Arlene Salac, a spokeswoman for the Federal Aviation Administration.

The plane is an MD-80, a twin-engine with the jets at the rear of the plane.

Delta spokeswoman, Jackie Pate, said airline officials were trying to find the cause of the smoke. No warning lights went off in cockpit, she said.

Salac said the smoke alarm in the plane's lavatory went off.

YOUR HOROSCOPE

By Jeane Dixon

TUESDAY, JANUARY 31, 1995

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: Your energy and enthusiasm will be contagious. Strive to improve communication at work and home. You will find the variety you enjoy in a constantly-changing romantic relationship. Use an imaginative promotional campaign to introduce a new product. A coveted executive position will open up next fall. However, running your own business may prove even more attractive

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: pitching great Nolan Ryan, novelist Norman Mailer, actress Suzanne Pleshette, actress Jean Simmons.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Play it smart today. Avoid compromising or unsettling situations. A schedule revision should allow for both a love life and career commitments. Strive to eliminate competition in a close relationship.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Take care of routine matters early in the day. Your ingenuity will help make up for a cash shortage. Recycling an old project boosts profits. An older person offers you excellent advice; follow it.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): You could receive several interesting offers today. Now the question is which one to accept! Weigh the pros and cons carefully. Your romantic partner could offer wonderful insights.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Study your financial situation if you feel a pinch. Sticking to a budget will make money worries a thing of the past. A golden opportunity will entail some sacrifices.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Hold yourself in check when you feel the urge to sound off. Move ahead with changes, correcting any errors that you spot. A new admirer may show appreciation in an unusual way. Be candid.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Trying too hard to anticipate someone's moves could boomerang. Listen carefully and file your observations away for further thought. Avoid making too many demands on loved ones. Resentment will grow if you act pushy.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Your Achilles' heal could be overdependence on that special someone. Guard against becoming a clinging vine. Letting go of a defeatist attitude will make you a winner. Live in the present, not the past.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Too much of a good thing can be destructive. Stick to your priorities. Delegate routine work whenever practical. Avoid people who are too forward; easy-going, tolerant types will probably wear better.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Moderation is essential now. Resist an urge to throw caution to the wind. You find yourself more romantically inclined than usual tonight. Dine at an intimate, candlelit restaurant. Mate will applaud a sentimental gesture.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Substantial progress can be made if you continue to forge ahead in a steady fashion. Take things one step at a time for optimum results. A calm manner is vital when dealing with important people.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Conversations with bankers or lawyers will be helpful. Maintain a low profile in your personal relationships. If feeling stressed out, pamper yourself with extra rest. Spending the evening with upbeat friends will buoy your spirits.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Unexpected support from higher-ups or associates allows you to go forward with a creative project. Strive to keep the atmosphere at home cheerful. Bringing up controversial subjects would not be smart.

The bidding:

SOUTH	WEST	NORTH	EAST
1♠	Pass	2♠	Pass
3♡	Pass	4♠	Pass
Pass	Pass

Opening lead: King of ◇

Follow the bidding and play of this hand. Decide who, if anyone blundered, and what the error was.

We are not sure whether South should have made a game try in hearts or clubs, a suit where South desperately needed help in covering losers. However, that is immaterial, since North would have accepted any invitation, no matter in which suit it was made. With eight points in high cards, four trumps and a ruffing value, failure by responder to bid the same responder to bid the game would have been craven indeed.

West led the king of diamonds, taken by the table's ace. Since the hand could be claimed if trumps were 2-2, declarer cashed the king and ace of spades, to learn that West had a trump trick. The ace and king of hearts were cashed and a heart was ruffed in dummy. Declarer returned to hand with a diamond ruff and led the remaining heart.

Since it would not have helped to ruff, West discarded a diamond. Declarer ruffed on the board and came to hand with a diamond ruff for the ninth trick, but that was that. When declarer exited with a club, West rose with the king, drew declarer's last trump and the defenders took the last two tricks with a diamond and the ace of clubs — down one.

Declarer made a subtle but catastrophic error in timing. After winning the first trick with the ace of diamonds, declarer should immediately ruff a diamond, then proceed as above. That gives declarer two trump tricks, two heart tricks, a diamond, two heart ruffs in dummy and three ruffs in hand for a total of 10 tricks — all that were contracted for. Note that West cannot discard the queen of diamonds during the crossruff because that sets up the jack as a trick.

Harvard 1995 brass pudding pots go to Michelle Pfeiffer, Tom Hanks

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. — The latest acting awards going to Michelle Pfeiffer and Tom Hanks are not golden Oscar statues but brass pudding pots.

Harvard's Hasty Pudding theater club has named them its 1995 woman and man of the year.

Pfeiffer will lead a parade through Harvard Square and receive the traditional pot on Feb. 13. Hanks will receive his pot and a roast on Feb. 21.

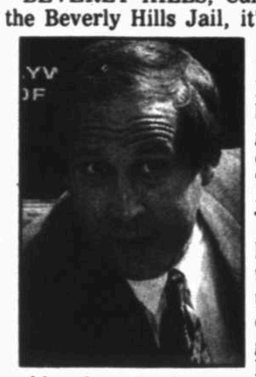

Harvard's acting award goes to Michelle Pfeiffer.

Previous recipients include Tom Cruise, Meg Ryan, Whoopi Goldberg, Lucille Ball, Elizabeth Taylor, Katharine Hepburn, Jodie Foster, Chevy Chase, Clint Eastwood, Robin Williams and Paul Newman.

The award for women was established in 1951. The men followed in 1963.

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif. — Live, from the Beverly Hills Jail, it's Chevy Chase.

Live, from the Beverly Hills Jail, it's Chevy Chase.

The former "Saturday Night Live" star was booked for investigation of drunken driving and spent Thursday night in jail.

Officers spotted him driving at up to 70 mph, making unsafe lane changes and tailgating, police Lt. Frank Salcido said.

Chase had a blood-alcohol level more than twice the legal limit, Salcido said.

Chase's publicist did not immediately return a call Monday.

In 1986, Chase spent 2½ weeks at the Betty Ford Center for treatment for an addiction to prescription painkillers.

NEW YORK — Princess Diana is back in the colonies, inspiring more playful speculation she might move her royal residence to the Big Apple.

The estranged wife of the heir to the British throne returned Monday to Harlem Hospital, where six years ago she hugged AIDS children on her first visit to the city.

She spent more than an hour with children in the same ward, then left without talking to reporters.

"She's genuinely concerned and interested in children with AIDS," said Dr. Margaret Heagarty, director of pediatrics. "She's come back to see if they've made any progress."

New York magazine — while admitting that common sense argues against the princess moving to New York — gave its cover over to a guessing game on where in the city she might live, shop and get her hair done.

About the time of her last U.S. visit, in October, Buckingham Palace dismissed as "absolute rubbish" a report that she was seeking to buy a $3.5 million apartment here.

KNOXVILLE, Tenn. — Vice President Al Gore doesn't get any sympathy from one former political opponent, who lost to Gore in a bid for the Senate.

"I can assure you that I am enjoying my job a whole lot more than being in the United States Senate," said Mayor Victor Ashe, a Republican defeated by Gore in the 1984 Senate race.

"I'd also like to point out that I'm now president and he is just a vice president," said Ashe, president of the U.S. Conference of Mayors.

Ashe commented as he welcomed Gore to a mayors' meeting last week in Washington.

Gore said that in spite of their political differences, he and Ashe are friends.

Ads that ran in national newspapers last week for the forthcoming movie "Jefferson in Paris" used images of the Constitution of the United States.

Then it was learned at Walt Disney Co., where the film and ad were created, that neither Thomas Jefferson nor Nick Nolte, who plays him in the movie, had written the Constitution.

"We all walked in Monday morning and said, 'Oh, it should have been the Declaration of Independence,' " an unnamed Disney executive told Newsweek.

The magazine notes that Disney is the company that planned to build a Virginia theme park to celebrate American history.

Speaker of the House Newt Gingrich, R-Ga., who has been battling to keep frequent-flier miles accruing to people flying on government-paid tickets, seems to be partial to flying first class.

A source told New York magazine that in the year and a half before assuming the speakership, Gingrich flew back and forth between Atlanta and Washington 125 times, traveling first class nearly half of the time. When accompanied by reporters and Delta chairman Ron Allen on a recent flight, says the magazine, he flew economy, boasting that he always travels that way.

Clinton support cites funding need

Even before the State of the Union address last week in which President Clinton tacitly bowed to the "conservative mandate" issued by voters in November, he had already begun moving more to the center of the political spectrum. One indication of that movement was his announced proposal to seek a major increase in the budget for enforcing immigration laws and labor standards.

Clinton's announcement drew the anticipated responses from Republicans, noting that the GOP would likely propose even bigger increases in spending for immigration enforcement, expansion of the Border Patrol, and inspections at factories and other work sites. The political reality, as administration officials have conceded, is that in moving against illegal immigration, Clinton hoped to beat Republicans to the punch on a topic of concern to moderate voters who deserted Democrats at the polls in November.

There's no question that Clinton needs to regain the support of those Americans if he ever hopes to stand a chance at the polls in 1996. But the political benefit of controlling America's borders is only one of the concerns that needs to be addressed in regard to illegal immigration.

Controlling the nation's borders is a hot topic with working Americans who, despite the fact that illegal immigrants may be taking menial jobs no average American would accept, feel it's wrong to permit thousands of undocumented immigrants to enter the country when others who try to come here legally are turned away for no good reason. Most Americans still feel that this nation is a "land of opportunity," but many are concerned that opportunity is being diminished by the federal government's lack of will on the illegal immigration problem.

Clinton certainly does not bear all the blame for the inadequate funding of immigration programs. Congress contributed to that problem by appropriating less money than requested in recent years for particular enforcement activities. Obviously, Congress now can address the immigration funding issue if it will.

There now seems to be added impetus for just such a funding push. In calling for an increase in funding for immigration enforcement programs, Clinton has given Congress the perfect opening for following through on an issue that middle America truly embraces.

NAFTA lets bankers recoup their losses

The pro-NAFTA people ought to be really proud of their decision to go against the wishes of the electorate. Especially since an "economic crisis" in Mexico is about to trick the United States taxpayer into yet another Mexican bailout. In fact, we are again being asked to save the morons who run the banking industry. We did it when the S&L fiasco surfaced and we will more than likely do it for the international bankers who lent Mexico more than they could afford to lose.

The pro-NAFTA elitists excuse this debacle on poor management of the Mexican economy. News flash! This was not an unknown factor when the arguments about the merits of entering into NAFTA were being made. Wake up! We are shipping jobs out of the country at a dizzying pace. The import/export ratio with Mexico has not changed in our favor. To the contrary. Our imports have risen at a much faster rate than our exports. The simple fact remains; people earning a dollar an hour cannot afford to purchase any product manufactured by a person making $10 per hour. If you can be convinced otherwise, don your dunce cap and go sit in the corner. NAFTA is nothing more than an effort by the big bankers to recoup their losses. Losses incurred through arrogance and impudence. I say we let them pull themselves out of the quagmire they created for themselves. This country will survive it. So will Mexico. Maybe the Mexican government will, at long last, realize that its people are their biggest asset and start treating them with some degree of respect and fairness.

Switzer not to blame for Dallas loss to SF

I would like to reply to a letter written by Jack Goodwin in which he criticized Jerry Jones and Barry Switzer for failing to beat San Francisco.

I'm at a loss to understand how Goodwin can say Barry had trouble winning the "Big One" in the Orange Bowl when he was a college coach. How can you win three National Championships without winning the "Big One?" Also, he won it in the least amount of time it has ever taken a coach, and OU was on probation when Barry took over. If he had trouble winning, why was he the winningest coach in football when he resigned from OU?

No matter how you feel about Coach Switzer, you can't deny his place in football. He ranks among the best of college coaches. The 15-yard penalty wasn't what hurt us. What hurt was when Deion Sanders put his left arm in Michael Irvin's face with no call from the referee. Also, remember that other Cowboys came on the field besides Barry. What you are doing is saying that Barry is to blame for everything.

Remember, the misuse of time before the half was from the offensive coordinator and I don't suppose he can control Boniol's kicking leg. You asked the Cowboys to do what no other team has done and then criticized them when they didn't do it. Nothing but a well-coached team could have fought back like they did. Let's not be so greedy.

WILLIAM MURCHISON

We must make Congress do right thing

All this technical stuff about balancing the budget — should we have three-fifths of Congress raise taxes or a majority of those present and voting, who would enforce the blasted thing, and would the amendment, come to think of it, even work? All this stuff, I say, is beside the point — even the point about feasibility.

Murchison

And what is the point? It is: Do we want to balance the budget? Do we want to cut federal spending? If we do, we'll support the amendment — as President Clinton doesn't, when you get down to it.

"The American people," Clinton said coyly in his State of the Union message, "have a right to know what you're going to cut, what taxes you're going to raise, how it's going to affect them." Uh-huh. The implication is plain enough: The balanced budget amendment brings nothing but pain and heartache. The president throws enough cold water to float a battleship.

Do we want a constitutional amendment that forces Congress to do the right thing? Clearly not. We'd rather rely, as we used to, on Congress' instincts.

The trouble is, we've little choice. Congress' instincts are too impure. We have to grab our representatives by the collar, saying, "Look here, balance that budget! Do what you're supposed to!" Otherwise, it won't happen.

The term-limitation movement has a similar origin — that is to say, in Congress' refusal to do what it's supposed to do. Our congressmen — not enough of them, anyway — don't even have the good grace to treat their jobs as public service, which they're meant to be. They treat their jobs like careers and gravy trains, which they weren't meant to be. Too many members of Congress stay too long. So the people have to intervene through law or amendment.

In like manner, we used not to worry much if Congress exempted itself from the laws it passed. But in our own time, Congress passed so many laws regulating behavior — laws from which, customarily, it exempted itself — that once again the sovereign people had to step in. If our representatives weren't going to use taste and good judgment, we'd make them.

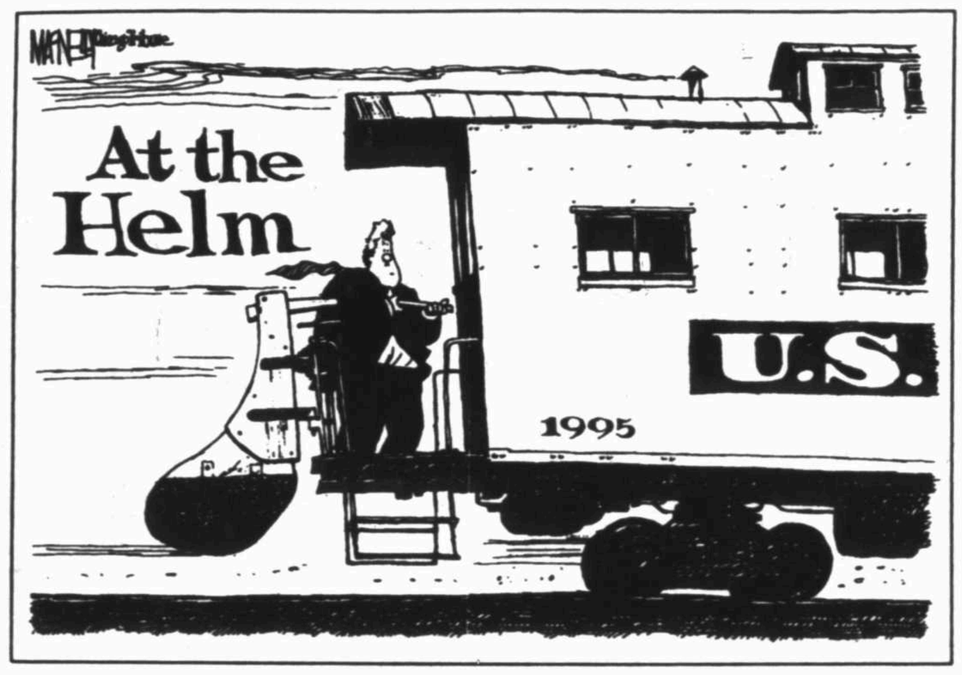

Onward the assault is pressed today. So the dirty bums won't do things voluntarily? Then we the people, exercising our sovereign power, will make them live up to their sworn duties and obligations.

There is a heavy quotient of "make 'em" in the Contract with America. It's a different political theory — but, oh, so necessary.

Too bad we have to put all this stuff in the laws, not to mention the Constitution, but there is no choice. We can't trust Congress any longer to do the right thing. It's as simple, and as awful, as that. The states mostly have amendments requiring that the budget be balanced. It is hardly a matter of principle. What it's a matter of is, as I say, desire. Do you want lower spending or not? Lawmakers mostly don't, which is why the federal budget has increased from not-quite $100 billion in Lyndon Johnson's first year, before he cooked up the Great Society, to something approaching $2 trillion.

Yes, a balanced budget amendment to the Constitution is a serious thing, and, yes, there is ample question about how to do it. But we wouldn't have even the prospect of one if Congress did what it was supposed to do — namely, balance the budget every once in a while.

CHARLEY REESE

U.S. shouldn't have position on Chechnya

What should the U.S. position be in regard to Chechnya? There shouldn't be a U.S. position. It is none of our business.

Reese

Chechnya, which most Americans never heard of, is a province of Russia. Its current leader wanted to secede. The Russian government tried several nonmilitary means to dissuade the people of Chechnya, both overt and covert. They all failed.

Russian President Boris Yeltsin then found himself in the same position as Abraham Lincoln: Part of the country was seceding and refused any compromise. Yeltsin, like Lincoln, had two choices: let it go or send in the army.

He sent the army, and like Lincoln's army, it has suffered some embarrassing setbacks. But like Lincoln's army and for the exact same reason — it's so much bigger than Chechnya's — it will prevail. Chechnya will not be allowed to secede.

Even though this is entirely an internal affair of Russia, some Americans cannot keep their mouths shut, and some, by opening them, have removed all doubts that they are fools.

The most foolish criticism has been about the brutality of the fighting. I would like to know, and I'm sure every soldier in the world would like to know, how one takes a city defended by fierce fighters in a nonbrutal way? I hate to disillusion folks who live in these dream worlds, but war is an act of brutality. One fights a war by killing people and by destroying their property.

I'm sure the Russians would have loved to have taken the Chechen capital without firing a shot, but the Chechen fighters wouldn't cooperate. Once in battle, there is no way for either side to practice moderation. Americans can't do it. The Russians can't do it. The Chechens can't do it. Neither could Ulysses S. Grant or Robert E. Lee.

And, as any professional soldier will tell you, there is absolutely no worse place to fight than in a city. Thousands of windows and hundreds of corners provide fortified positions for defenders. Tanks are extremely vulnerable inside a city, and ultimately, as is now happening, the infantry has to take the city street by street, block by block, house by house. It is always ugly, always brutal, always deadly to civilians who can't get out of the way.

For American politicians and commentators to act as if there is something unusually brutal going on is pure bull. There is not. It is just the same hard, bloody fighting American GIs experienced in World War II when they had to take an occupied city.

What's really going on in America, aside from those speaking from ignorance and naivete, is that the internationalists, including the Heritage Foundation, which many mistakenly think is a conservative think tank, are using this as an excuse to push their internationalist agenda.

Russia, they say, must not be allowed to attend to its internal affairs. Instead, Russia must submit to international groups tending to its internal affairs. Well, if that's so, then the United States must do likewise.

I'm not, and most Americans are not. To defend our sovereignty and independence we must respect the sovereignty and independence of other nations, including Russia. To agree that Russia's sovereignty and independence can be compromised by international organizations is to agree to an encroachment on our own sovereignty and independence.

The line is clear. People who love their country, whom internationalists will sneeringly call nationalists, must support like-minded people everywhere. In the case of Russia, our support need only consist of telling the Clinton administration, the Heritage Foundation and the internationalists in both parties to shut up and butt out of Russia's affairs.

MIKE ROYKO

Chances are good that O.J. will go free

After hearing the opening statements, my bets would be on O.J. Simpson walking out a free man.

Royko

It isn't that the prosecution doesn't have an arsenal of persuasive evidence — trails of blood, DNA samples and a portrait of Simpson as a jealous and violent stalker.

And it's possible that when all the testimony is over, the majority of people watching TV will be persuaded that he is guilty.

But it won't matter what you or I and all the other spectators think. We're just part of the world's biggest gapers' block.

It will take only one person — a member of that California jury — to dig in his or her heels and say: "I don't believe it." And hold to that view. If that happens, it's a hung jury, and the prosecutors will have to decide whether to go through the whole thing again.

Something in Johnnie Cochran's opening pitch makes me believe that he and the defense team will be able to plant enough doubt in at least one juror's mind to prevent a guilty finding.

That something is Mark Fuhrman, the eager-beaver detective who was involved in so much of the early Simpson investigation and seemed to have an uncanny knack for coming across important clues and evidence.

He was also in on one of those past domestic squabbles between O.J. and Nicole.

But most important, the defense believes it has evidence that Fuhrman said things in the past that indicate he is a racist.

If he is, that shouldn't be much of a shock. Many cops are racists. So are many other Americans in other jobs.

But Fuhrman isn't just any cop or any American. And that's why Cochran made a point of mentioning Fuhrman in his opening remarks.

It's a safe guess that Cochran is going to try to put Fuhrman on trial. The goal will be to try to establish that he is a racist cop who didn't like seeing a black man become a big success and marry a gorgeous white woman.

And that Fuhrman's dislike of Simpson was nasty enough to prompt him and possibly others to plant evidence — the bloody glove, for example — to hang Simpson for crimes someone else committed.

Does that sound implausible or even farfetched? It depends on your background.

If you have lived most of your life in a friendly small town or a quiet comfortable suburb, yes, it might be unthinkable that your nice Officer Friendly would try to railroad an innocent person.

But if you are a black person, you might say: "So what else is new?"

Few blacks, especially in big cities like L.A., would be shocked by the suggestion that a white cop might find it in his heart to try to frame or railroad a black person.

And there are valid reasons for their feeling that way. Blacks have indeed been framed by racist cops and prosecutors. If not framed, then pushed around and deprived of a fair shake. There's nothing new in that. It is part of our legal heritage.

I doubt if there are many adult blacks who haven't had bad experiences with cops. And few who can't talk about someone they knew being given a bad deal in a courtroom or a police station.

We don't know a lot about the 12 Simpson jurors. But we do know that eight are black, and all but one of the others are Hispanic or Native American.

Yes, all of those jurors promised that they have open minds and would consider only the evidence and testimony. That's what jurors always say.

But no lawyer believes that. To the contrary, a good trial lawyer is looking for jurors who will lean in the direction of his client, whatever the evidence shows. If they wanted someone impartial and influenced only by the evidence, testimony and law, they'd ask for a bench trial and take their chances with the judge.

So Cochran will try to show that there was a bad cop — maybe more than one — out there, trying to nail an innocent man. Such things have happened.

And all it will take is for one juror to believe that it is happening again. Don't bet against it.

The World in brief

■ Author, naturalist Gerald Durrell dies

ST. HELIER, Jersey — Naturalist and wildlife writer Gerald Durrell died Monday on the Channel Island of Jersey, where he founded a zoo dedicated to preserving endangered species. He was 70.

Durrell, author of "My Family and Other Animals" and "The Overloaded Ark," had a liver transplant last year and never really recovered, said Simon Hicks, secretary of the Jersey Wildlife Preservation Trust.

The author died at Jersey General Hospital with his wife, Dr. Lee McGeorge Durrell, at his side.

Durrell's engaging humor made him one of the most popular authors of animal stories. He made 12 television series and produced films of his expeditions.

■ Heavy flooding hits northwest Europe

BERLIN — Scores of communities across northwestern Europe were under water on Monday as floods continued to inundate the region after days of driving rain. Dozens of people were reported to have drowned or been killed in flood-related accidents, and tens of thousands fled their homes.

Factories and schools were closed, roads were swamped, and utility services disrupted. The governments of Germany, France, Belgium, and the Netherlands declared states of emergency in flooded regions and sent thousands of police officers and soldiers to reinforce local relief workers.

Environmentalists said the floods had been worsened by the melting of snow because of unseasonably high temperatures and the decay of many forests where soil no longer absorbs as much water as it once did.

■ Peru: Ecuadoreans downed copter

LIMA, Peru — Peru admitted Monday that one of its army helicopters was downed by an Ecuadorean missile, killing five crewmen, in a border clash with Ecuador over a 50-mile stretch of mineral-rich jungle.

Ecuador, meanwhile, announced an emergency tax on state workers to pay for the conflict, a revival of a half-century-old dispute over the border for the Cenepa River region. The heavily forested area is at the far western edge of the Amazon River basin.

The government ordered state employees to turn over two days of wages so Ecuadorean forces would have "adequate funds to allow it to confront the current emergency."

Peso tumbles on fears that U.S. will deny aid

N.Y. Times News Service

MEXICO CITY — The battered Mexican peso plummeted Monday to its lowest point yet in the current crisis, driven down by mounting doubts that the U.S. Congress would approve the $40 billion in loan guarantees for Mexico proposed by the Clinton administration.

The Mexican currency closed at 6.35 pesos to the dollar, down nearly 10 percent from Friday's close of 5.735. Its continuing decline disrupted financial markets and provided ammunition for officials in Mexico City and in Washington who have warned that Mexico needs a rescue package to keep its economic crisis from deteriorating into a financial debacle that could affect the rest of the world.

Scrambling to win support for his $40 billion loan guarantee package for Mexico, President Clinton asked the nation's governors to endorse it and issued a bipartisan list of past presidents and Treasury secretaries who back the plan. But House Speaker Newt Gingrich said he was not sure when a bill could be introduced in Congress.

In the six weeks since the peso was devalued and allowed to float against the dollar, it has lost 45 percent of its value, pummeling the buying power of most Mexicans and devastating Mexican companies in which many Americans invested.

The peso, which was worth nearly 29 cents before its devaluation on Dec. 20, is now worth less than 16 cents. But the dollar itself was dragged down Monday against some other currencies, hitting a three-week low against the mark. And the peso's plunge sent American bond and stock prices falling, with the Dow Jones industrial average down 25.91 points.

During the dark days of Mexico's worst economic crisis in a decade, neither reassuring telephone calls to key investors by Mexican officials, nor the statements of Clinton and other Washington heavyweights have been enough to stop the peso's slide.

Opposition to the package, which would authorize $40 billion in loan guarantees but not loans themselves, has increased steadily on Capitol Hill.

Still, a senior Mexican official with knowledge of the negotiations described the Mexican government as being "prudently optimistic," that the package would soon be approved. "The perception here is that a major effort is on in Washington," the official said, "and it is likely that things will go well."

Opposition to the loan guarantee package has grown in Mexico as well. Surveys in Mexico City have shown that an overwhelming majority of Mexicans oppose accepting such assistance from the United States, feeling that it compromises their nation's sovereignty.

President Ernesto Zedillo Ponce de Leon has sent his finance officials to Washington and New York on several occasions to participate in negotiations. Mexican officials said that there was now complete agreement with Washington on the fundamental contents.

Soviet atomic nightmare continues in Ural Mountains village

MUSLIUMOVO, Russia (AP) — The shallow creek runs beneath an abandoned mill. Cows wander knee-deep in the water. In the summer, it is where the village's children swim.

This pastoral scene is deceptive, however. The Techa River is radioactive and has been for almost half a century.

The nearby Mayak nuclear complex, also known as Chelyabinsk-65, began dumping raw nuclear waste into the Ural Mountains river in 1949, when it built the Soviet Union's first reactor to produce plutonium for atomic bombs.

By the mid-1950s, radiation at the top-secret plant affected 124,000 people living along the Techa, which flows through a pretty forest and lake region.

About 20 villages around Musliumovo, with their 8,000 to 9,000 residents, were evacuated because radiation levels were considered too dangerous.

Musliumovo was not, even though radiation in the village often exceeded that at the evacuated sites. Many villagers suspect they were left behind as human guinea pigs.

"For 40 years, they've been checking how a living being can survive in a radiation zone," said Valentina Kaidaneyeva, a teacher.

"A lot of professors studying us must be dead by now, but we are still alive," she told a visiting group of foreign scientists, politicians and reporters this fall.

Officials are at a loss to explain why Musliumovo, 930 miles east of Moscow, was not relocated. A senior scientist said he saw the evacuation order with his own eyes.

"I don't think it was done on purpose, but probably because the village was too big and too expensive to evacuate," said Mira Kosenko, an expert on radiation medicine.

Car bomb in central Algiers kills at least 38, wounds more than 250

ALGIERS, Algeria (AP) — In the worst bombing of a 3-year Muslim insurgency, an explosives-packed car blew up Monday along a street bustling with people preparing for a religious holiday. At least 38 people were killed and 256 wounded, state TV said.

The bomb went off across the street from police headquarters, near the main post office and train station. Downtown businesses were particularly crowded in anticipation of the monthlong Ramadan holiday.

The car, containing more than 220 pounds of explosives, was driven by a "volunteer of death," who perished in the blast, security forces said.

There was no claim of responsibility. The security forces blamed "criminals" — the official term for fundamentalist guerrillas seeking to topple the army-backed government and install an Islamic state.

More than 15,000 people — including about 80 foreigners — have been killed in fighting between the militants and security forces since January 1992. Nine people died in a bombing at Algiers airport in August 1992, but nothing in the central part of the capital has approached the devastation of Monday's attack.

The powerful bomb incinerated numerous cars, shattered windows in buildings several blocks away, and blew a crater in the sidewalk nearly two yards wide and more than 20 inches deep.

It exploded at 3:20 p.m. in front of a bank office. People with faces and hands bloodied by flying glass ran frantically through the street, and ambulances rushed to the scene.

State radio instructed all doctors to report to work and appealed for volunteer blood donors.

The car that contained the bomb was reduced to a heap of twisted metal. The radio said it was a white Fiat stolen earlier in the day in the Algiers suburb of Larbaa, a Muslim fundamentalist stronghold.

Policemen clutching automatic rifles and backed by armored vehicles cordoned off the area, pushing and sometimes kicking away would-be onlookers.

Sporadic automatic gunfire was heard shortly after the explosion, possibly from nervous officers firing into the air. But by evening shops in the area were closed, sidewalks almost deserted and the district eerily quiet.

Bombs have been used increasingly in the past year of the conflict, a guerrilla-style struggle that had been mainly confined to gun and knife attacks. There have been about six previous car-bombings, some claimed by the armed militants, but none killed more than five people.

The attack followed an exhortation by the Islamic Salvation Army for its followers to intensify attacks during the Muslim holy month of Ramadan. A newsletter issued over the weekend urged followers to "fight the heathens and their supporters."

Ramadan starts Wednesday in Algeria. During the holy month, Muslims fast from dawn to dusk and many businesses close or alter their hours. The nights are a time of feasting.

Algeria's conflict began in January 1992, when the army canceled parliamentary elections expected to be won by the fundamentalist Islamic Salvation Front.

Victims' struggle to get by eclipse emperor's visit

NISHINOMIYA, Japan (AP) — Two weeks after the devastating earthquake in western Japan, Emperor Akihito is coming to visit victims. But Chieko Komura would rather have a warm place to stay — one that doesn't have to be shared with 1,100 people.

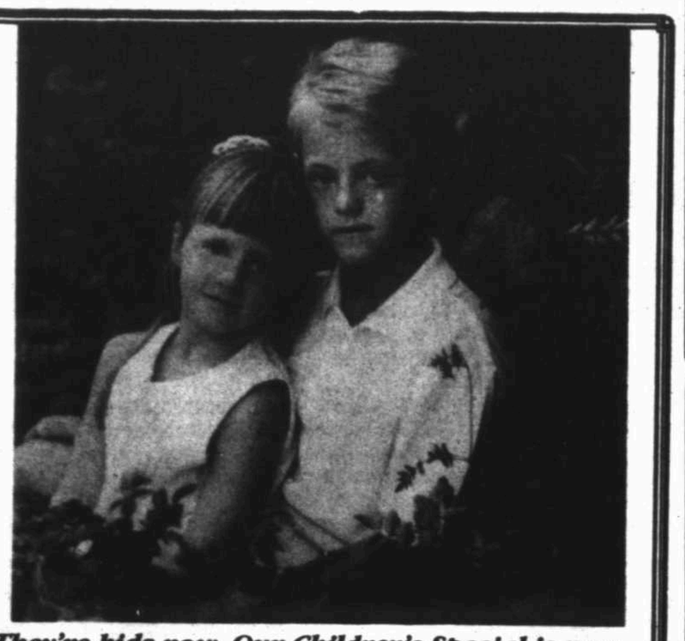

"It may make some people here happy, but I'm too busy just getting by day to day," a shivering Komura said, bundled against the bitter cold that moved into this region Monday.

The Nishinomiya City Gymnasium, where Komura and 1,100 other refugees from the Jan. 17 quake are staying, will be one of Akihito's first stops when he visits quake victims Tuesday.

The gym has neither heat nor hot water, but Akihito will hardly be seeing the worst. It offers things other evacuation centers don't: three meals daily, running water, fruit and some used clothes.

"It isn't as good as this everywhere," said Isao Sakamoto, the city official responsible for the shelter. "We have gotten a lot of media attention, so people tend to send contributions to us."

As of Monday, the death toll from Japan's worst earthquake in 70 years stood at 5,096. Most of the dead were from the port city of Kobe and suburbs such as Nishinomiya.

TUESDAY DAY WATCH

But officer ...

AUSTIN — State troopers will give motorists with expired January registrations a 15-day grace period as the Legislature considers suspending auto emissions tests now required for the tags, an official said Monday. But the Texas Department of Public Safety said it cannot guarantee that other law enforcement agencies won't issue tickets to motorists whose auto registrations are not renewed. The House last week endorsed a 90-day suspension of the federally required testing, following the addition of a proposal to compensate the companies running the program. Lt. Gov. Bob Bullock said he expected the Senate to approve the measure Tuesday. Gov. George W. Bush has indicated he will sign the bill, meaning the delay could take effect later this week.

1 ticket unclaimed

AUSTIN — Robert Dunlap Sr. went to a Fort Worth convenience store to buy a $1 lotto ticket for his son and came back with a winner worth $13 million.

Robert Dunlap Jr. 25, of Everman, said Monday he hadn't yet decided how to spend his fortune.

"We want to put it somewhere safe and then let this all calm down to where we won't make any rash decisions," he said. Winnings are paid out over 20 years.

Dunlap's ticket was one of two winners in Saturday's drawing for a $26 million jackpot. The other ticket, purchased in Sansom Park in North Texas, has not yet been redeemed.

Midlander gears up for success cycle

Midland's Doyle Snow is pushing his new invention — an automatic gear-shifting bicycle — toward completion.

Joe D. Williams/ Reporter-Telegram

By Ed Todd
Staff Writer

Though he surely is not a competitive bicyclist, Midlander Doyle Snow definitely is trying to wedge into the competitive bicycle market with his automatic gear-shifting bicycle.

Snow, who has built 10 prototypes of the patented continuously variable transmission (CVT) mechanism, is exploring the outdoor-fitness market for his product.

The CVT is in the research-refinement stages.

Additionally, Snow views the CVT bicycle as a potential training bicycle for racers who compete on the multi-geared, derailleur system, which is stock equipment on many touring, racing, and mountain bicycles.

"There has been a long search for many years for a better system than the bicycle derailleur," said Snow, a 47-year Midland landman, who acquired the patent on the CVT several years from Jim Reswick, a former Massachusetts Institute of Technology (MIT) and California Institute of Technology (CalTech) science professor, who invented

Craddick named chairman

■ Texas House speaker Pete Laney appoints Midland representative to head state's Ways and Means Committee.

Staff Report

AUSTIN — State Rep. Tom Craddick, R-Midland, Monday was appointed chairman of the House Ways and Means Committee, according to Speaker Pete Laney, who made the appointment. Craddick also will serve on the Calendars and State Affairs committees.

Craddick

"I believe Rep. Craddick's skills and expertise will be very useful in these committee positions," Laney said. "I know he will be working long hours to represent constituents' views in the legislative process. He will be a very valuable member of these committees."

The committee process allows House members to closely study legislation before sending it to the full House for a vote. The committee system also lets the public get involved with legislation through testimony on bills and direct contact with lawmakers as they turn concepts into specific proposals.

The 11-member House Committee on Ways and Means has jurisdiction over all bills and meansures proposing to raise revenue and levy taxes. Its oversight authority includes the State Comptroller of Public Accounts.

The 11-member Calendars Committee places bills and resolutions on the appropriate calendars for House consideration.

The 15-member Committee on State Affairs has jurisdiction over all matters pertaining to questions of state policy and administration of state government.

'Chunnel' lacks in scenery

■ Midland train enthusiast Mack Thomas' ride on the London-to-Paris Tunnel Channel in December was a trip that lacked in scenery but was historic nonetheless.

By Myra Lee Salcedo
Staff Writer

A connoisseur of luxury trains, Midlander Mack Thomas listened in vain for the familiar "clickety click" of train wheels rolling over tracks when he rode the sleek new Eurostar in December.

One of the first groups of people in the world to board the Eurostar in its inaugural run across the English Channel, Thomas said there was no indication that the train was traveling at the mind-boggling speed of 187 miles per hour. Neither was there any sense that his environment changed when the high-speed train traveled some 300 feet below the seabed.

"There was no sensation of moving fast or 'swoosh,'" said the well-traveled local interior designer.

He said entering the Channel Tunnel (billed "Chunnel") was also lacking in drama. "There was the view outside the window of green grass, beautifully manicured, and sheep grazing," he said. "Then I looked up and it was suddenly black outside the window."

While there was no sudden change in air pressure or astonishing view, Thomas said, "I was aware that history was rolling before our eyes."

And certainly it was. For the first time since the Ice Age, Europeans are bragging that there is a dry-land route between Great Britain and the Continent. The $16 billion Chunnel trains race between London and Paris in three

Lawmakers propose teacher pay boost

By Peggy Fikac
Associated Press Writer

AUSTIN — A state lawmaker on Monday proposed an estimated $1.24 billion pay raise for Texas teachers over the next two years to lift their salaries closer to the national average.

Under the bill by Rep. Christine Hernandez, the state would pay $742 million and local school districts the remainder of the increase for Texas' 265,000 educators.

In addition, the state would chip in another $96.6 million in pension-related costs.

"Teachers deserve a raise. Let's do it this session," said Ms. Hernandez, D-San Antonio. She said her goal is for Texas teachers' pay to be at the national average in four years.

Texas ranks 35th nationally, with an average of $30,519 for a 10-month contract. The national average is $35,958.

Legislative leaders said state government can't afford its share of Ms. Hernandez's proposal, which would give teachers raises of $500 to $6,000 and require future increases as education spending rises.

"I'm for a teacher pay raise ... but finding $800 million for any project right now, we simply don't have" the money, said Rep. Robert Junell, D-San Angelo. He is chairman of the budget-writing House Appropriations Committee.

Lt. Gov. Bob Bullock, who heads the Senate, said, "I don't think anybody has been more sympathetic to teachers than I have and the Texas senators have. By the same token, at this time I don't know where $800 million would come from."

Bullock said a teacher pay raise is a possibility, "but I don't see it of that magnitude."

Ms. Hernandez and Richard Kouri, president of the Texas State Teachers Association, said it's a matter of setting priorities to attract and keep the "best and brightest" teachers in the classroom.

"I believe the money is available this session," Kouri said. "It's simply a question of where the priorities are going to get set in this budget."

Junell said, "I would have hoped some of these literally billions of dollars that we've infused into the public school system has gone to teacher pay raises."

He said he also was concerned about the Legislature passing costs of a pay raise on to local school districts.

State and local spending on public education totals about $16.5 billion, with the state picking up 45 percent of the total. Ms. Hernandez's proposal would require the state to pick up 60 percent of the salary increase.

Texas hasn't changed the minimum salary scale in six years, leaving raises to local school districts' discretion, according to TSTA.

A TSTA survey of the 976 Texas school districts that teach kindergarten through grade 12 showed 42 had cut local supplements and 433 had not improved their teacher pay scales during the six years.

CYCLE: Oil bust prompts Snow's knack for inventions

the CVT system expressly for improving the efficiency of electric-powered wheelchairs.

Snow's interest in the CVT was whetted in a "Wall Street Journal" CVT advertisement at a time "when things started going south in the oil business."

And he was open to diversification.

While Snow has offered the CVT to Schwinn Bicycle Company and has explored other manufacturing avenues, he has yet to put the CVT bicycle into production.

He is still refining the system and its 26 moving parts.

"It's really smooth," Snow said of the CVT's automatic action. "It is a great idea."

The CVT has a similar gear ratio to the derailleur but without the manual shifting.

"It's very durable," he said. "There's nothing to go wrong. I've ridden it through water, and there is no slippage."

Of the CVT's design, "I think it is really ingenious," Snow said. The CVT uses a segmented-pulley mechanism that is driven by the main chain from the pedal-cranking chainwheel to the CVT at the rear axle, and a metal chain and a V-belt in the CVT. The mechanism's expandable arms, which are similar to the opening-closing action of a camera's lens shutter when gearing is changed, are made from hardened aircraft-quality aluminum.

Under its current design, the CVT doesn't have the instant response of the derailleur; there is a lag in acceleration. And there is not in his prototypes the higher gears which racers and tourists, especially racers, may need for speed.

The multi-gear derailleur system, as long as it remains on track, is more responsive to gear changes from low to high.

"As long as the chain is in a straight angle to the sprocket in the rear, there's probably not anything more efficient," Snow said of the derailleur. "On the other hand, when it is out of alignment, it does reduce the efficiency, and frequently they are. When the chain falls off or comes off, you've lost all of your efficiency."

Snow said that Reswick had rated the direct-chain derailleur-geared bicycle at about 99 percent efficiency and the CVT at 96 percent efficiency.

"So we are going to lose something just in the process of having to spin on this axle."

Snow is particularly keen on the CVT's potential in the outdoor fitness market.

"As you're pedaling 90 revolutions per minute, because of wind resistance, you always are going to be somewhere in the range of the bicycle's transmission," Snow said. "Unless you are going downhill or something, you are going to be putting about a quarter horsepower into your machine. With a very simple computer, I can tell someone what they need to do to get in better shape riding the bike."

Snow said that he can maintain a speed of 18 to 20 miles per hour while pedaling 85 to 90 revolutions per minute.

The CVT is not designed for the race market.

"It won't be a race bike," he said. "It will be a different frame design, a large seat, upright handle bars. When someone trains on something like this, and they focus on keeping their pedal cadence constant, they will improve their pedaling ability on an ordinary bicycle." As a result, the CVT "would be a great trainer.

"I think when the engineering is done and the thing is in its final stages, it will compete with the derailleur. It would not compete with it now. (But) to start with, I think our best niche is an outdoor fitness bike."

CHUNNEL: Enthusiast big fan of Orient Express hours.

"It's going to open up the world and bring about a resurgence of trains," Thomas said. "You can leave Paris in the morning and shop and have dinner in London."

The passenger train zips nonstop from Gare du Nord Station in Paris to Waterloo Station in downtown London. Her Majesty Queen Elizabeth II and French President Francois Mitterrand were the first official passengers to ride the Eurostar in May. However, the train didn't open for the public until later.

"This is an exciting time for the world," Thomas said, noting that he enjoys the slower, luxury trains as much as the high-speed or bullet trains.

"The Orient Express is the height of luxury. It's like being in a fine home. There are crisp linens, elegant stemware, marble and gorgeous, exotic inlaid woods," Thomas said.

He was so enthralled with the decor of the Orient Express in fact, he painstakingly recreated the interior of the train in a mobile home/guest house in Cloudcroft, N.M. He replicated art, fixtures and fabric in the mobile home.

Along with operating an interior design business, being a luxury train enthusiast and a great observer of their design, Thomas also is a consummate storyteller. He collects historical tidbits and can describe in fascinating detail the famous — and sometimes scandalous — events that transpired aboard the Orient Express.

"I have another story to tell. And if you have a story to tell me, I bet I can top it," Thomas is wont to say, with a broad grin.

And in order not to let any historical moments-in-the-making pass him by, Thomas usually walks the entire length of the train "to see who's there."

"But on the Eurostar, there were 18 cars, so I didn't do that," he said.

However, even on the sleek Eurostar, which has yet to develop its own mystique or history like the Orient Express, Thomas found things to his liking. "It's sparkling clean, high-tech and futuristic. And I had an English breakfast, just to experience all the amenities."

However, Thomas said it will be a long time before he takes on another restoration project, recreating the interior of a train car in his home.

He admits much of the appeal of riding luxury trains — fast or slow — is their appeal to the senses. "Trains are a romantic way to travel. They are a wonderful convenience linking parts of the world. I enjoy everything about them, and being a designer, I look at every detail."

BURGLARIES: Police think same party responsible for all incidents forced entry and vandalism, the vending machines at the dealership were also burglarized.

The incident at Performance Honda was called in to police at 3:30 a.m. Garcia said an undetermined amount of cash was taken from a filing cabinet at the dealership and damage was done to the inside of the building.

The last incident was called in from Rogers Ford at 10:59 a.m. The dealership had been broken into and damage had been done to the inside of the building.

Garcia said police believe that the same person or persons committed all three burglaries and are probably also responsible for three other auto dealership burglaries that happened about two weeks ago.

"Jack Sherman was also hit two weeks ago," Garcia said. "In addition, Britt Motors and the Nissan dealership were burglarized. Given what was taken and that the safes were targeted, we believe that we are looking at the same subject in all the burglaries."

Are you seeing the light?

Imagine being able to brighten the interior of your home without all the bother of installing traditional skylights. Normally, these 'windows' on your roof, are expensive, difficult to install and pose several problems once they are in place.

Sola*Tube is a revolutionary new idea that brings diffused natural light into your home - without all of the hassle of traditional methods.

It works in a very simple way: A 10" clear acrylic dome sits on the roof. Inside the dome, a reflector gathers light and beams it down via a mirror-finish pipe to a ceiling diffuser.

Looking much like any other ceiling fixture, the Sola*Tube is extraordinary because it provides all of the light but eliminates all of the problems associated with normal skylights.

Because the Sola*Tube is only 10" in diameter, it doesn't require complex installation: no building permits, no heat gain or loss and it is completely water tight.

Other added benefits include the fact that the Sola*Tube is completely burglar proof (because it is so small) and because the light is diffused, there is little or no chance of furniture and carpets fading.

Professionally installed by Sola*Tube, or easily installed in a few hours by an average home handyman, the Sola*Tube will evenly illuminate a 100 square foot area. This makes it ideal for a whole variety of applications, whether a living room or bathroom.

One of the real pluses of the system is that light can be piped into virtually any area. The reflective pipes can be bent to fit the roof (they effectively snake between the rafters and joists) and they can be up to 10 feet long.

Tough enough to withstand all kinds of weather, the system is extremely versatile, allowing daylight into virtually any room in the house.

Designed to fit any kind of roof, the Sola*Tube is made and patented in the USA. The system is completely maintenance free, sealed and waterproof and is protected by a comprehensive 10-year warranty.

Jane Finch, owner of B.G.F. Enterprises L.C, is the authorized distributor for Sola*Tube. For more information call 699-0637.

A demonstration model of Sola*Tube is available for viewing at Craft Bazaar, 3712 West Wall.

Billy and Jane Finch, of B.G.F. Enterprises L.C, are the Sola*Tube authorized distributors for the West Texas area and for more information, they can be contacted at 699-0637.

Neil Letkeman, the owner of Lifetime Siding and Window Co. is offering considerable 'slow-time' savings. Local customer, Patricia Brabham, saved $600 on her lowest estimate by using Lifetime. (Letkeman is standing in front of Brabham's house.) For more information, call Letkeman at 689-0307.

Lifetime Siding:

The last estimate you'll need

Have you recently received an estimate for siding or storm windows that you thought was too high?

Just one more estimate might make you change your mind. Neil Letkeman, owner of Lifetime Siding and Window Company, offers savings on maintenance-free siding and storm windows -- thanks to smaller overhead costs.

"We offer the same materials to our customers that the bigger companies have" Letkeman said. "But at up to half the cost of those national companies."

Call Lifetime Siding today at 689-0307 for a free estimate on steel and vinyl siding. You won't have to be convinced about the affordability of new siding and windows. The dollars and sense of an estimate by Letkeman speaks for itself.

"Patricia Brabham, a local customer, recently saved $600 off her lowest estimate through us," Letkeman said. "She took advantage of our 'slow-time/winter' rate."

If you own a brick home, you may not be aware that you too can benefit from steel or vinyl siding. If you have any placers on your home's exterior which require constant painting and maintenance, (such as eaves and overhangs) then siding is the answer for you.

In fact, with maintenance-free siding, you will never have to paint again.

Lifetime Siding and Window Company uses screws and rivets on all critical areas when installing siding, instead of nails and staples. These superior installation methods, combined with Lifetime's warrantied siding, give a virtually permanent solution to maintenance problems. Call Lifetime at 689-0307.

To help reduce heating and cooling costs, noise and dust, Letkeman recommends adding storm windows and doors to your property. Double glass Thermobreak windows and doors are available with tinted windows and they are real energy savers.

For more information about Lifetime Siding and Window's wide range of products and services, call at 689-0307.

DEAR ABBY

Parents' lack of discipline may keep children's grandparents away

Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: This is an open letter to "Disappointed in Cincinnati," the mother of two small boys who complains because her parents and in-laws don't spend enough time with her children.

Are these children part of the new breed I see tearing up stores and restaurants while their mother looks the other way?

Do the children answer the phone with, "What do you want?" in a surly manner? Are they impolite to grandparents who are not permitted to reprimand them? Prior to their visit, must the house be cleared of every precious object, lest it be thrown across the room? (Why does a 2-year-old have to pick up a crystal bowl or a clock to examine it, while the mother coos, "Be careful, honey"?)

Why do 2- and 3-year-olds have to eat a bite, run outside, return to the dinner table, take a bite, and run back outside — repeating this exercise throughout the meal?

At family celebrations in restaurants, why does a mother (or father) have to remove a screaming 4-year-old and walk him around the block while I, the host of the dinner, must spend good money for a child's meal that is hardly touched?

I have eight grandchildren, only three of whom I can stand for more than 30 minutes. The others are ill-mannered, rude, demanding whiners — all under the age of 9.

My husband, the most laid-back guy in the universe, recently returned from a four-day visit with our daughter and her three small children. His two-word comment was stunning: "Never again!" — WEARY IN WASHINGTON

DEAR WEARY: I know the feeling. And I think I've seen the kids.

DEAR ABBY: I am one of those smokers who smoked two packs a day, and I've heard all those lectures about the evils of smoking.

Many have a "holier than thou" attitude, but some were from people who were genuinely concerned about my health.

My response has always been, "I'll quit when I'm ready!"

Well, after reading the letter in your column from Howard Singer — the ex-smoker who claimed to have single-handedly been responsible for getting 100 smokers to quit — you can sign me . . . "101"

P.S. My name is Ken Shafer.

DEAR KEN: A great big congratulations! Several other readers are also singing Singer's praises. This should make Howard Singer's day!

DEAR ABBY: I had to respond to the letter regarding some of the stupid questions parents are asked concerning their adopted children.

Our son, Joshua, is a very dark-skinned African American whom we adopted when he was an infant. My husband and I are both Caucasian.

When Joshua was about 4, we attended a pool party at our townhouse complex. I got into a conversation with a lady who was very curious about Josh — how old was he when we got him, and where was he from. She looked confused when I answered, "Milwaukee" — as I'm sure she expected a more exotic locale such as South Africa or Somalia. I almost lost my cool, however, when she asked me in all seriousness, "Are you going to tell him he is adopted?" — SHARON LEONARD, MAPLE GROVE, MINN.

CONFIDENTIAL TO MY CHINESE READERS: Gung Hay Fat Choy! (Happy New Year!) This is the year of the hog. And my resolution is not to boar you with any jokes about this being an ideal time to begin my new diet.

For an excellent guide to becoming a better conversationalist and a more attractive person, order "How to Be Popular." Wright defends himself against agent's attacks

N.Y. Times News Service

WASHINGTON — Former House Speaker Jim Wright angrily defended himself Monday in a letter to The Wall Street Journal after the newspaper ran an article critical of the publication and sale of a 1984 book by the Fort Worth Democrat.

The letter, released by Wright's Fort Worth office, was in response to a Jan. 25 article written by Lynn Chu, literary agent for House Speaker Newt Gingrich, who arranged a controversial $4.5 million, two-book deal for the Georgia Republican.

In the article, Chu contrasted the Gingrich contract with Wright's controversial 1984 book, Reflections of a Public Man, which figured in the ethics allegations against Wright.

"Mr. Gingrich's book deal bears no resemblance whatsoever to former Speaker Jim Wright's," Chu wrote in the Jan. 25 Journal. "Mr. Wright never landed a real publishing contract; instead he had a vanity press print up a book written by congressional staff, which was then sold in bulk at Mr. Wright's speeches to political supporters."

Wright responded: "It is unfortunate that Gingrich's agent seems to think it necessary, in defense of her client, to denigrate my personal reputation with half truths and untruths."

The former speaker said he had written five published books. "The book to which she refers, as with the others I've written, was my own work," he wrote.

Wright also vigorously denied that his book marketing had violated House rules. However, the allegations that Wright circumvented House rules on outside income by arranging bulk purchases of his book were at the heart of the ethics violations outlined by special counsel Richard Phelan.

The issue was unresolved because Wright left Congress in 1989 rather than to press his case.

In his letter, Wright defended his 50 percent royalty — 15 percent is the industry norm for authors — as being "not uncommon" among small printers and disputed the "vanity press" characterization. Fort Worth printer Carlos Moore printed the book for Wright.

Wright added, "It is true that some of those books were bought in bulk and given as gifts. Some were bought by trade associations and given to audiences to whom I made speeches. To have permitted this may well be a reflection upon my judgment, but it was not dishonorable."

Chu said in her article that Wright's book was "designed to evade the congressional rule" limiting outside income from speaking fees.

In Phelan's report to the House ethics committee, the special counsel said of the book, "We discovered that the production and marketing of the book resulted in repeated violations of numerous House rules. Specifically, we discovered that Wright accepted income which exceeded the limit imposed on outside earned income ..."

Smithsonian limits exhibit as critics keep on offensive

WASHINGTON (AP) — Yielding to critics, the Smithsonian Institution abandoned plans Monday for a major exhibit of the bombing of Hiroshima and the 50 years of controversy it evoked. Instead, the display will show only the fuselage of the B-29 that dropped the bomb, without commentary.

But the exhibit's opponents — on both sides — were not satisfied. The American Legion pressed for congressional investigations to "scrutinize, very closely, the decisions that led up to this exhibit" while an anti-nuclear group accused the Smithsonian of surrendering to "right-wing congressional and veterans' pressure."

"We made an error," Smithsonian Secretary I. Michael Heyman said at a crowded news conference. He said the controversy had been "consuming me and the institution."

The lesson, Heyman said, was that it is not possible in a single exhibit to both honor the crew that flew the Enola Gay over Hiroshima on Aug. 6, 1945, and also take note of 50 years of nuclear tensions wrought by that event.

"Veterans and their families were expecting, and rightly so, that the nation would honor and commemorate their valor and sacrifice," he said.

"They were not looking for analysis, and, frankly, we did not give enough thought to the intense feelings such an analysis would evoke."

The double purpose of the exhibit was a "fundamental flaw," Heyman said. "No amount of rebalancing could change the confusing nature of the exhibit."

The White House, silent while the dispute raged, accepted the solution while trying to support both sides.

Press secretary Mike McCurry said President Clinton and Vice President Al Gore, "while believing firmly that academic freedom has its place," also felt the concerns of veterans' groups "had merit."

For over a year, veterans' groups had complained that the plans had been influenced by "revisionist historians," giving a slanted, anti-American view of the raid that brought Japan's surrender in World War II.

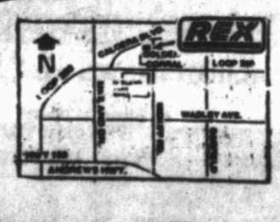

Rep. Peter Blute, R-Mass., one of the exhibit's sharpest congressional critics, said the National Air and Space Museum wanted to turn the exhibit into "a politically correct diatribe on the nuclear age."

Blute and 80 other lawmakers called last week for firing Martin Harwit, director of the museum, where the exhibit was to have opened in May.

For his part, Heyman gave Harwit no vote of confidence.

Hawks spill Chaps twice

■ Howard goes on 21-0 run to hand Chaps first conference loss of season, 78-69.

By Bill Petitt
Staff Writer

BIG SPRING — Midland College coach Pat Rafferty walked out the Chaps' locker room with a soft drink in hand.

He must have been suffering from dehydration after two, long scoring droughts, including a 21-0 run at the end of the first half and the start of the second, gave Howard a 78-69 win over Midland at the Dorothy Garrett Coliseum Monday night.

The win keeps Howard (13-8 overall, 3-3 in Western Junior College Athletic Conference) in the hunt for one of four spots needed to go to the Region V Tournament in Waco the first week of March.

Midland suffers its first conference loss of the season and now must travel to Frank Phillips, who shocked 16th-ranked Odessa College 90-87 in Borger.

The Chaps jumped out to early lead and built that lead to 11, 26-15, after two D'Juan Baker free throws with 6:08 to

By Stewart Doreen

BIG SPRING — Everything was on the line Monday at the Dorothy Garrett Coliseum Monday as the Midland College women's team, winner of five straight, fought for sole possession of first place in the Western Junior College Athletic Conference.

The fight would not be enough as the Lady Chaps dropped one to 5th-ranked Howard College 76-59, falling one game back of the Lady Hawks and tying MC with Frank Phillips for second place at the conference's halfway mark.

"We have to forget about this game and go to Frank Phillips Thursday," Midland College women's coach Ron Jones said.

Midland College, 19-5 overall and 4-2 in conference, came out of the half trailing by one point (34-33) to Howard, a team fresh off an upset loss to Odessa College last Friday.

49ers savor Super victory

■ Questions quickly turn to San Francisco future after huge Super Bowl win.

By Dave Goldberg
AP Football Writer

MIAMI — Super Bowl winners rarely get a chance to savor victory.

So Steve Young and George Seifert, whose San Francisco 49ers put on a dazzling offensive show Sunday, spent Monday playing defense.

They responded to questions such as:

— What will they do if offensive and defensive coordinators Mike Shanahan and Ray Rhodes leave for head-coaching jobs?

— What will they do if Ricky Watters and Deion Sanders sign lucrative free-agent contracts with someone else, or if Jerry Rice should actually decide to retire?

— How will they avoid the inevitable post-victory letdown?

Some postmortem.

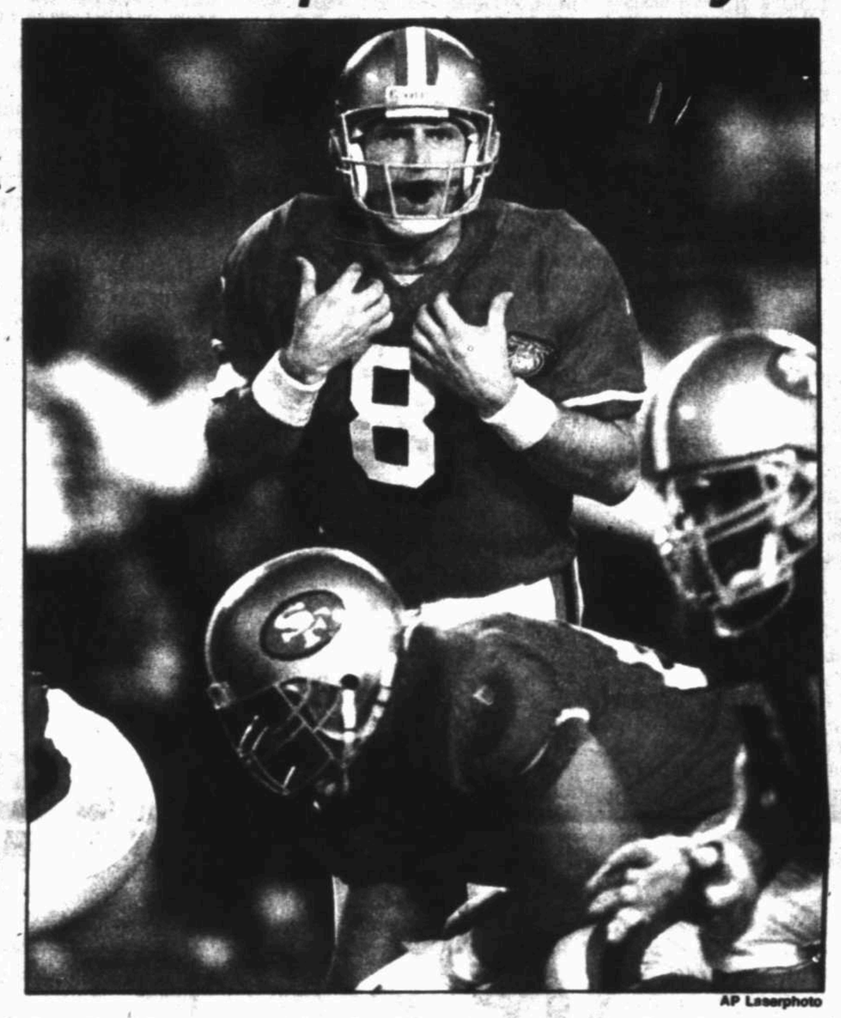

They just went through a pressure-filled season that ended it in the only way acceptable to them — with a Super Bowl victory. As Carmen Policy, the team's president, said a couple of weeks ago of owner Eddie DeBartolo's philosophy:

"If you win, it's hugs and kisses and champagne. If you lose, it's death."

Well, it wasn't death.

But if the Niners hadn't beaten the San Diego Chargers on Sunday by the NFC team's now traditional 23-point margin, who knows what

MHS girls can claim 4-5A title

By Amy Wolfenbarger
Staff Writer

It's down to crunch time in District 4-5A basketball and tonight's batch of games could prove especially big for both the Midland High and Midland Lee girls teams.

The Midland High girls (22-3 overall, 9-1 in district play) could clinch their third straight district championship with a win at Odessa Permian tonight at 6:15 p.m. The Lady Rebels (6-3, 15-9), who have stumbled in their last two games at home, could get back on track with a win over Odessa High at 6:15 p.m. at Chaparral Center.

The boys teams are also down to the nitty gritty, but despite Abilene Cooper's win over Midland High Friday to take the district lead, coaches from Lee and Midland are hardly ready to give up the fight for a league title. Lee (11-14, 5-3) hosts Odessa High at Chap Center while the Bulldogs (20-5, 6-2) take the stage at Permian. Both boys games follow the girls with tipoff at 8 p.m.

"We're real close to a district championship," said MHS girls coach Jim Raughton. "All we've got to do is win one of our next two games and we'll have our third district championship in a row."

A three-peat for the Lady Dawgs, who have already clinched a playoff spot, would be the first in the district since 1984, when the Lady Rebels finished up a four-year run in which they either won the district title outright or finished in a tie.

UT's Ludvigova, Pace form a natural net rivalry

■ Former Midland College standout Lucie Ludvigova's top rival is teammate Kelly Pace.

By Darryl Richards
The Dallas Morning News

DALLAS — Although they lived in different parts of the world, the Chris Evert-Martina Navratilova rivalry was a natural source of inspiration for University of Texas tennis stars Kelly Pace and Lucie Ludvigova.

The greatest rivalry in women's tennis shaped their development as players. It also served as a reminder of the different political ideologies they were raised under.

Pace is the nation's No. 1 player heading into this week's Rolex National Intercollegiate Indoor Tennis Championships at Brookhaven Country Club in Dallas. Ludvigova, ranked No. 4, won the Rolex championship last year and was a former star at Midland College.

Pace, who grew up in Huntsville, Ala., was convinced her destiny was in tennis after watching a match between Evert and Navratilova when she was about 11. She sweet-talked her father into buying a wooden racket and would emulate Evert's baseline game and steely demeanor.

"I just loved the way she was able to focus," Pace said. "She never gave her opponents anything. You had to beat her; she wasn't going to beat herself."

Ludvigova grew up in Liberec, Czechoslovakia, idolizing Navratilova, the Czech native who would become the all-time money leader in women's tennis.

But she rarely got a chance to see Navratilova play. Ludvigova couldn't even say her name for fear of reprisal from the then-communist nation.

"We never read about what she did in Wimbledon," Ludvigova said of Navratilova, who defected from Czechoslovakia in 1975. "She was never mentioned in the official newspaper. We only knew about what she did by listening to Voice of America radio broadcasts."

Much has changed since Pace and Ludvigova tried to follow their idols. Evert and Navratilova have retired from competitive tennis, and the Cold War has come to an end.

On the courts of the Penick-Allison Tennis Center, the two seniors are able to truly pursue happiness — an education and their desire to be the top collegiate player in the country and eventually play professionally.

The Dallas tournament is the third leg of the collegiate Grand Slam, among the toughest events in the nation. Over 5,000 collegians from Division I programs and smaller colleges attempted to qualify by playing

TCU's Thomas on fire

By Jaime Aron
AP Sports Writer

FORT WORTH — Texas Christian's Kurt Thomas always knew he could score. It was his rebounding that he wanted to improve this year.

The 6-foot-9 senior center has done such a good job with both this year that he could become just the third person in NCAA history to lead the nation in each category.

Thomas entered the weekend leading in both and as of Monday he was averaging 28.5 points and 13.4 rebounds per game.

Not bad for a guy who didn't even start until last year.

"Basically, I came into this year focused," said Thomas, who's vying to join the double-leader feat of Loyola-Marymount's Hank Gathers in 1988-89 and Xavier McDaniel of Wichita State in 1984-85. "I didn't expect to do what I'm doing. That's just a positive, showing that I'm working hard."

Thomas has been pushed to succeed by first-year coach Billy Tubbs, who has TCU off to a 13-5 start after the Horned Frogs won a total of 13 games the last two years.

"He's an ideal fit for our system. He's what our offense needs," Tubbs said. "I see improvement every day. I think he legitimately wants to do the right things."

Although seemingly undersized at center, Thomas is a sleek, strong 225 pounds. He's also quick and has long arms that help him shoot over taller defenders and has made him TCU's career leader in blocked shots.

"I'm more mobile than most centers and I don't need to stay inside. I'm able to step outside and hit the 15-foot shot," said Thomas, who wears a soft cast on his left hand while playing, and a gold hoop earring in each ear and a double-strand choker chain off the court.

Using a decent blend of inside and outside scoring, Thomas has had games of 41, 43 and 45 points. Five more times he's scored in the 30s.

He's also improved his free throw, going from 64.5 percent last year to 73.4 this year with games of 16-of-16 and 10-of-10 from the line.

As for his rebounding, Thomas has grabbed 10 or more in all but three games this year. He's had 16 or more five times, with highs of 20 and 21.

But all this success has come late in Thomas' career.

He played sparingly in 28 games as a freshman and saw a little more time as a sophomore until an injury ended his season after 21 games. Then he missed a year with a broken leg.

Seattle maintains win streak

Associated Press

PHILADELPHIA — Sam Perkins scored a season-high 31 points as the Seattle Supersonics won their seventh straight road game with a come-from-behind 109-104 victory over the Philadelphia 76ers Monday night.

■ NBA Roundup

It was the fourth straight game that the 76ers, losers of 15 of their last 17, lost a game in the final minute.

The Sonics, who trailed by 15 with 8:28 left, rallied to tie the game 102-102 on Perkins' 3-pointer with 52.3 seconds to play.

Seattle took the lead for good after Scott Williams, who had 14 points and 13 rebounds for the 76ers, missed a layup with 36.5 seconds to play. Gary Payton's driving layup five seconds later put the Sonics up 104-102.

A turnover by Dana Barros, who finished with 19 points, led to a foul. Detlef Schrempf, who had 23 points, hit both free throws to make it 105-102 with 27.2 seconds left.

Nets 99, Trail Blazers 98

PORTLAND, Ore. — Chris Morris' 18-foot turnaround jumper with 4.7 seconds left lifted New Jersey over Portland.

Morris, at 6-foot-8, posted up 6-2 James Robinson and spun to his right, nailing the jumper to give the Nets a 99-97 lead. Morris tied the game 97-97 with a free throw with 42 seconds left.

Portland's Rod Strickland, who had a team-high 24 points, had a chance to tie it again with 1.6 seconds left when he drove to the basket and was fouled by Chris Childs.

Strickland made the first but the second went went off the front rim, and Morris rebounded the miss.

Jazz 115, Timberwolves 80

SALT LAKE CITY — John Stockton had 14 assists, leaving him 11 shy of Magic Johnson's career NBA assists mark, as the Utah Jazz stretched their winning streak to 13 games with a rout of Minnesota.

The Jazz, who have won 22 of their last 24, finished January with a 14-1 mark and a 6½ game lead over San Antonio in the Midwest Division.

Karl Malone led the Jazz with 25 points. Isaiah Rider paced Minnesota with 19 points as the Timberwolves lost for the seventh time in their last 11 games.

Stockton, who scored 11 points, had 12 assists in the first half and could have come closer to Johnson's record mark of 9,921 assists had he played more of the second half.

Stockton, who has 9,911 assists, sat out all but two minutes of the fourth quarter.

Pistons 102, Clippers 95

AUBURN HILLS, Mich. — Joe Dumars scored 26 points and matched a career-high with 14 assists to lead Detroit over the Los Angeles Clippers.

The win gave Detroit its first two-game winning streak since Nov. 15-17.

The Clippers played the second half under the guidance of assistant coach Jim Brewer after Bill Fitch was ejected with 3:25 left in the second quarter.

Los Angeles got within three points with four minutes left, but Mark West tipped in a missed shot and the Pistons pulled away for the victory.

Grant Hill led Detroit with 27, one short of his career best, while Dumars had 26 and Rafael Addison and West had 16 each.

The Clippers' Loy Vaught equalled his career high of 30 points and added 12 rebounds.

Detroit led 48-44 at the half, and five points from Addison keyed a 11-2 run that put the Pistons ahead by 69-57.

They expanded the lead to 75-61 late in the quarter, but Pooh Richardson had seven points and an assist in a 12-2 run that got Los Angeles within four.

Suns 89, Cavaliers 82

CLEVELAND — Charles Barkley scored 20 points, including the clinching basket with just over a minute left, as Phoenix beat Cleveland.

The Suns finished off a 4-1 road trip and won for the 13th time in 15 games. One of their two losses during that span came at home against the Cavaliers.

Phoenix, which lost Sunday in New York, has not lost consecutive games all season.

Neither team built a double-digit lead at any point in the game, which featured six technical fouls on the Suns and two on the Cavs — all for illegal defenses.

Phoenix never trailed in the fourth quarter, although Cleveland tied it at 72 on Tyrone Hill's layup with 9:21 to play. A layup by Joe Kleine and a 3-pointer by Danny Ainge put the Suns back ahead 77-72, and they stretched the advantage to eight points on A.C. Green's tip with 4:05 left.

Hawks 95, Heat 92

MIAMI — Former Heat guard Steve Smith hit a 3-pointer with 30.6 seconds remaining to give Atlanta a victory over Miami.

Making his first start in 20 games, Smith scored 19 of his 23 points in the fourth quarter.

Grant Long, who was traded along with Smith from Miami to Atlanta for Kevin Willis in November, came off the bench and scored 20 points on 9-for-11 shooting.

Miami's seldom-used forward Keith Askins scored a career-high 19 points and had eight rebounds, and center Matt Geiger added 17.

Rebel squads face Bobcats

By Mike Butts
Staff Writer

Three weeks into the season and you can color District 5-5A soccer Midland Lee maroon.

The Lee boys have fired back from a 5-0 loss to Midland High in their 5-5A opener to win two games by 8-1 combined scores. They now sit in a three-way tie for second in the league at 2-1 (4-3 overall). Lee hosts San Angelo (0-2, 3-5) today at 4:30 p.m.

The Lady Rebels are alone in first place in the league at 3-0 (6-1 overall) with a one-half game lead over Odessa Permian and Abilene Cooper. They have outscored league opponents 12-2 and play at San Angelo (1-1, 5-2) at 5:30 p.m. Midand High's boys and girls teams are open today.

Rebels coach John McCulloch was impressed with San Angelo, a playoff team last year, in the Denton Tournament this season. "They got second place in Denton and there were some really good teams there," McCulloch said. "From what I saw in Denton they were better than Odessa High (4-1 losers to Lee Saturday)."

■ District 5-5A Soccer Roundup

The Bobcats have lost their first two district games to Odessa High (in a shootout) and Abilene High.

The Rebels will be without leading scorer Henrik Madsen. The senior forward got his third yellow card of the season Saturday, putting him out of that game and the next game. McCulloch said he will probably move Adrian Castresana or Brandon Doty to Madsen's striker spot.

"I think we can get through (without Madsen)," McCulloch said. "We had two goals Saturday from Tim Tipton and we know Adrian and Roger (Baliziare) can score."

The Lady Rebels try to stay in first place against the Lady Bobcats, who lost to Abilene High 5-2 Saturday. Lee's girls beat Abilene High in a shootout Jan. 24 2-1. Lee is led by senior forward Jamie Welch with six goals and six assists.

Lee's girls split their two games with San Angelo last season.

Mass extends win streak to 15

Associated Press

AMHERST, Mass. — Derek Kellogg hit two 3-pointers in a 10-0 run early in the second half as No. 1 Massachusetts extended the nation's longest winning streak to 15 games with a 79-62 win over St. Bonaventure on Monday night.

With the Minutemen ahead 33-31, Kellogg's 3-pointer began the surge with 16:48 left in the game. He ended it with another 3-pointer, making the score 43-31 with 15:14 to go.

Massachusetts led by at least nine points the rest of the way. The Minutemen (16-1, 8-0 Atlantic 10) were led by Lou Roe's 21 points. Kellogg and Mike Williams each added 15.

St. Bonaventure (11-8, 3-4) was paced by David Vanterpool with 21 and Shandue McNeill with 12.

UMass increased the nation's longest on-campus winning streak to 40 games and set a school record with 15 consecutive victories in one season.

The quest for that record was threatened at St. Bonaventure on Jan. 10 when the Minutemen overcame a four-point overtime deficit and won 81-76. The Bonnies had won all five of their games since then.

Massachusetts had to come from much farther back last Friday night, erasing an 18-point deficit in the last 4:48 of regulation and winning 97-94 in overtime at West Virginia.

The Minutemen never trailed Monday, but led only 30-26 at halftime. Roe hit a short jumper to start the second half, but Vanterpool followed with a three-point play, cutting the deficit to 32-29.

No. 10 Syracuse 76, No. 13 Georgetown 75

LANDOVER, Md. — Lawrence Moten scored 19 points, John Wallace added 17 points and nine rebounds and No. 10 Syracuse took advantage of horrible free throw shooting by No. 13 Georgetown.

The Orangemen (16-2, 9-1 Big East) were just the opposite at the foul line, going 18-for-24 compared to the 9-for-26 effort of the Hoyas (14-4, 7-3).

Syracuse evened the series between the schools at 28-28 and gave coach Jim Boeheim his 450th victory against 142 losses.

The Orangemen took the lead for good at 68-67 on a rebound basket by Wallace with 2:15 left to play. It was the first of three big rebounds for the 6-foot-8 junior forward.

After Jerome Williams made one of two free throws for Georgetown, Wallace made two free throws when he was fouled after grabbing an offensive rebound.

Freshman Allen Iverson, who led Georgetown with 25 points, missed a drive on the next trip and it was Wallace who grabbed the rebound that led to a layup by Lucious Jackson and a 72-67 Syracuse lead.

No. 18 Missouri 80, No. 11 Iowa St. 71

AMES, Iowa — No. 18 Missouri contained Iowa State's Loren Meyer in the second half and got key 3-point baskets from Jason Sutherland and Kendrick Moore in beating the No. 11 Cyclones.

The shots by Sutherland and Kendrick capped a 14-2 run that gave Missouri (15-3 overall, 4-2 Big Eight) an eight-point lead and control of the game with seven minutes left.

Fred Hoiberg made a school-record eight 3-pointers and scored 29 points, but he couldn't keep Iowa State (17-3, 3-2) from losing at home for the first time this season. The Cyclones now play three straight road games, including a Feb. 8 rematch with Missouri.

Hoiberg's sixth 3-pointer gave Iowa State a 55-50 lead with 12:27 left, but he didn't make another until getting two in the final minute, when the game was out of reach. Iowa State led 57-53 when Missouri began its decisive run.

Julian Winfield's basket inside and Sammie Haley's dunk gave the Tigers a 61-57 lead with 9:09 remaining and they never trailed again.

Meyer, who scored 16 points in the first half, cut Missouri's lead to 61-59 with his only basket of the second half. But Sutherland hit a 3-pointer from the right of the key and Moore followed with another from almost the same spot, making it 67-59 with 7:03 left.

49ERS: Changes to dictate repeat

(From 1C)

the volatile and emotional DeBartolo might have done?

He might have kicked Seifert upstairs, plucked Shanahan off the plane to Denver and made him the head coach. He might have traded with Kansas City for a quarterback named Joe something; he might have ...

Instead, Young and Seifert, weary from the all-night celebration, basked in the glory for a minute or two.

Then they were asked less about the past than the future, or about the place in history of a franchise whose five victories in the past 14 years give them the most Super Bowls in the 29-year history of the game.

The fact is, the 49ers are in pretty good shape.

Even with all the free agents they signed this year, the 49ers ranked only 16th of 28 teams in salary-cap expenditures. Only $1.6 million in bonus money — $838,000 to Rickey Jackson, $750,000 to Sanders and $10,000 to Toi Cook — will count against next season's cap.

DeBartolo and Policy acknowledge it will be hard to re-sign Sanders, and who knows how many veterans may have to be cut to satisfy Watters? But San Francisco has become players' heaven, because the 49ers are always a good bet to get to the Super Bowl and because they have a well-deserved reputation as a first-class organization.

"People will be surprised how positive our situation is with the cap," Seifert said.

Young's six touchdown passes in the 49-26 victory broke the record set by Joe Montana, whose shadow he worked so hard to escape. So Young spent the morning answering the inevitable question about his "arrival" at age 33 into the "Hall of Fame" category among quarterbacks following a career that included:

— A stint with the Los Angeles Express of the USFL, a team that ran out of money so quickly that a bus driver once pulled off the road en route to a game at a junior college stadium and refused to drive until he was paid.

— The starting quarterback's job with the hopeless Tampa Bay Bucs, capped by a game in Green Bay where he was smashed so hard into the snow that the ice had to be immediately cleared from his helmet so he could breathe.

— A trade to the 49ers in 1987 to make way for Vinny Testaverde, of all people. After two frustrating seasons backing up Montana, Young's agent, Leigh Steinberg, urged him to go elswhere.

— A frustrating three seasons as Joe's successor. Montana was injured and then traded to Kansas City. In the first season, the Niners missed the playoffs — Young missed six games with a knee injury — and in the next two they lost to Dallas in the NFC title game. That earning Young the label of a quarterback who "can't win the big one."

But Young didn't regret his long and winding road to the top.

"If someone told me I'd have to go through all that and end up where I am today, I'd do it again," he said.

The big question: Can the 49ers do it again?

The answer: Who knows?

Shanahan will likely go to the Broncos, and Rhodes could go to the Eagles or Rams, leaving Seifert with big holes on the coaching staff. The 49ers have solved that problem before — losing the likes of Sam Wyche and Mike Holmgren to head-coaching jobs. So, there's no reason they can do it again.

But a lot of funny things can happen before the kickoff of the next Super Bowl, next Jan. 28 at Tempe, Ariz.

MHS tennis splits in Lubbock duals

LUBBOCK — The Midland High tennis team started off the spring season here over the weekend with a 10-8 win over Lubbock Coronado, avenging a loss to the Mustangs early last fall.

MHS then dropped a 11-6 match with Lubbock Monterey as the Monterey girls won seven of nine matches.

"We had quite a few close matches in both duals and the quality of play was pretty strong for all three teams," said MHS coach Tom Heiting. "I just asked the kids to give a good fight and work on their games. The responded and I was extremely proud of their efforts."

MVP has strong tournament show

LUBBOCK — The Midland Volleyball Program competed in the Lubbock "Friendship" tournament over the weekend and went into rally play tied for first place with Amarillo.

Amarillo won the title with a 11-10, 7-11, 17-15 victory over Midland.

Midland's team is comprised of girls from the MHS, Lee and Greenwood school districts. Midland will host a "Friendship" tournament on Feb. 11 and a region tournament in March.

Midland Team: Stacy Allen, Karen Gasch, Kyleigh Griffin, Alicia Kirk, Shawn Nishi, Leslie McCrary, Michelle Primeaux, Katy Walker and Susan York. Coaches were Amy Hayes and Courtney McHugh.

San Jacinto 7th takes soccer win

San Jacinto's seventh grade girls soccer team opened the 1995 soccer season recently with a 3-1 victory over Alamo.

Kathleen Coleman scored two goals while Jessica Salgado got the final goal of the game.

Mustangs sweep

Midland Christian defeated Trinity in both boys seventh and eighth grade basketball action Monday.

Midland Christian seventh grade nipped Trinity 34-30 as Cole Young had 10 points. MC is now 4-9.

In the eighth grade game, MC beat Trinity 38-34 as J.G. Stokes and Trent Lee each scored 11. to climb to 9-11. MC will host Stanton Monday.

Lady 'Dogs take JV soccer victory

The Midland High girls junior varsity soccer team defeated Odessa Permian, 3-1, over the weekend to climb to 1-1-1 for the year.

Becky Salgado scored two of the MHS goals and Bridgett Walker had the other.

Abell girls grab win in 7th grade

Abell Blue got 10 points from Courtney Creswell to beat Alamo White 29-19 in seventh grade girls basketball action Monday. Alamo was led by Lupita Castellon with seven points. Jade Hatley had nine rebounds for Abell.

Goddard Black climbed to 4-1, beating 0-4 San Jacinto White 16-11. Lindsey Leaverton was the only player in the game with double figures at 10 points.

Alamo Gray dropped Abell Maroon to 2-2 with a 20-19 victory. Alamo was led by six points from Jennifer Paris while Poppy Goodin had 10 points for Abell.

Abell White beat San Jacinto Gold 25-11. Julie Jay had eight points for Abell. White is now 5-1.

Lee sophs beat Bronchos, 75-53

Midland Lee's sophomore basketball team beat Odessa High Monday night, 75-53 to climb to 16-7 on the year and 7-2 in District 4-5A play.

Sergio Muchaca had a game-high 23 points while Heath Huff, Bob Blackburn and Dreyfus Andrews all had 10 points. David Ferrell had 19 points for OHS while Jesse Waters had 11.

Lee JV captures share of 4-5A title

The Midland Lee junior varsity basketball team clinched a tie for the District 4-5A JV title Monday night with an 83-73 win over Odessa High.

Lee is now 18-8 for the season and 9-0 in district while OHS fell all but out of the title run at 7-2.

Lee's Matt Johnson hit 28 points for the second time this season while John Norman added 17, Antwan Alexander 13 and Matt Meyer 10. OHS got 20 points from Bobby Danson.

4-5A: Local teams 8-0 against Odessa teams

(From 1C)

The Lady Rebels have three crucial games coming up, but if they can beat the Lady Bronchos (5-4) for a second time and if Midland High beats Permian (5-4) it would guarantee Lee at least a tie for third-place.

"I know we have to win the rest of them," said Lee coach Elise Kail. "They're (Odessa) a good ball club. They're a lot better than their record shows. It just depends on which team is ready to play."

Lee hosts San Angelo Central on Friday for their last home game and then travel to Permian next week for a game that will probably have major playoff implications.

The Midland boys seem to have the best chance at catching Cooper (7-1), which is trying for its second straight league title. But at this time of the year, making the playoffs is the first priority.

"If that happens and we have an opportunity to play for the district championship, that's well and good," said MHS coach Jack Stephenson. "But if we don't, we don't. Right now, we're just focusing on playing Permian."

Midland's Jumon Hailey continues to have a strong district season and in the losing effort against Cooper on Friday, tying Herb Johnson's team record for most points scored in a single game with 38. Johnson had 38 points twice against Permian and Fort Stockton in 1980.

The Lee boys are trying to make the playoffs for a third straight season, a feat which coach Jon House is proud of. But the Rebels, in third place, are the 4-5A hunted.

"There's still a lot of basketball left and (winning the league title) could happen. Cooper could go down," House said.

"We're in a must-win situation every night," he said. "And I'm sure all those coaches are telling their kids that we're the team to catch. But our goal is to make it in. We don't care how. If we just take care of business, we'll be alright."

Tonight's game also starts the second round of the Midland vs. Odessa boy-girl doubleheader series. In the eight games which have been staged between the Midland and Odessa teams, the Tall City teams broke ahead of the league standings with an 8-0 sweep. After tonight, the neighboring cities will meet once more next Tuesday.

Clinton's baseball plea doesn't budge parties

WASHINGTON (AP) — One week before President Clinton's deadline for progress toward settling the baseball strike, neither owners nor players appeared willing to budge much.

Owners began arriving Monday night and management's negotiating committee was scheduled to meet Tuesday. The union's negotiating committee met for about six hours Monday and about 60 players were expected for an executive board meeting Tuesday, the day before talks resume.

"We'll see what they've got to offer," Detroit's Cecil Fielder said. "If they don't have anything to offer, then we're just going to be talking about the same old things. What they have on the table isn't anything worth considering."

Talks broke off Dec. 22, a day before owners implemented their salary caps. When negotiations collapsed, management was insisting on a luxury tax plan designed to eventually reduce the percentage of revenue going to players from 58 percent to 50 percent. The union's last tax plan was designed to ensure the discrepancy in payrolls between large and small markets didn't get any larger.

Chuck O'Connor, management's chief lawyer, said there wouldn't be any "major changes" in the new proposal owners intend to make Wednesday.

"We're going to talk about it with our committee tomorrow," he said. "We're going to put a menu before them."

If that's the case, mediator W.J. Usery will have a difficult time producing a breakthrough that would end the strike, which began last Aug. 12.

"If we get a proposal from them that is not significantly different from the last one, our response will not be significantly different from our last one," union head Donald Fehr said.

Last Thursday, Clinton ordered talks to resume and set a Feb. 6 for progress toward a deal. If there isn't any, the president said he will ask Usery to formulate his own proposal for a solution.

While Clinton can't force a settlement, he can lobby for one. He also could ask Congress to enact one as law.

On Capitol Hill, Rep. John LaFalce introduced a bill to establish a seven-member National Commission on Professional Baseball. The panel would have power to impose a settlement and to settle all disputes among major league owners.

UNLV loses another basketball coach

LAS VEGAS (AP) — You'll pardon the UNLV Runnin' Rebels if they can't tell their coach without a scorecard

They began the school year with Rollie Massimino, then came Tim Grgurich, then Howie Landa and now Cle Edwards.

Once a national powerhouse, the Rebel program is now down to its last two assistant coaches.

Amazingly, the 7-7 Rebels have gone 5-2 in the past four weeks amid a confusing scenario that has left players, fans and administration officials asking what could happen next.

The latest jolt came over the weekend when Landa announced he was stepping down as acting coach. Landa has been subbing for Grgurich, who left the team Jan. 6 and entered a California hospital, complaining of medical problems related to exhaustion.

Grgurich returned to Las Vegas a week later and told a news conference on Jan. 18 that he would likely be out at least six weeks. He has attended some practices, but has shunned all games, saying doctors want him to rest and avoid stress.

Landa, Grgurich's assistant, took over the team and directed them to a 5-2 mark before announcing he was stepping down.

Interim UNLV president Kenny Guinn met with Landa on Saturday and said he felt the pressure had been building since the assistant took over the team for Grgurich.

"We don't want somebody under pressure or trying to do too much," Guinn said of Landa's decision. "I think it needed to be done. He (Landa) had indicated the pressure was building."

Landa, 63, said he would move to an administrative position with the team.

Edwards will serve as the new acting coach, assisted by David Rice, until Grgurich returns.

Edwards and Rice said they knew little about Landa's decision.

"It caught us by surprise; it shocked us," Edwards said. "But it hasn't bothered us. We've just got to go on."

Landa did not make the trip to Long Beach State for Monday night's game.

Landa told a booster's group last Tuesday that he was quitting at the end of the season. But he retracted the statement later in the day when Grgurich told him he was returning to coach the team.

Grgurich later said he had decided he would just coach the team in practices and would remain absent from the games.

Grgurich told a news conference two weeks ago that his doctors had suggested he take at least six weeks off before returning to coaching.

Guinn said he hopes to have a definite answer from Grgurich about his future within six weeks.

RIVALRY: Former MC tennis star ranked No. 4

(From 1C)

in qualifying tournaments across the country.

Pace automatically qualified by winning one of the Grand Slam tournaments, the Riviera All-American championships in October in Santa Monica, Calif. Ludvigova, ranked fourth in the nation, automatically qualified by winning last year's Rolex tournament. Ludvigova was No. 1 for most of last season, when she became the first player to reach the finals of three collegiate Grand Slams — the Clay Court Championships, the All-American and the Rolex Indoors. The only Grand Slam final she missed was the NCAA Tournament.

"I guess you can say we have the best 1-2 punch in the country," Texas tennis coach Jeff Moore said.

The arrival of Pace and Ludvigova in Austin was shaped as much by revolution and the pursuit of happiness as the countless hours they have spent refining their skills.

Pace, 21, was the beneficiary of the 1970s and '80s, when women demanded and took a more active role in athletics and showed it was OK to sweat, be aggressive, succeed and even fail.

She was a tomboy with pigtails who felt comfortable playing any sport she desired. Pace was the shortstop on her Little League team, and although she was the only girl on her pee-wee football team, she started at quarterback.

"It was a lot of fun," Pace said. "It really wasn't football; it was more like jump on the player with the ball. We were 11 and 12 years old, and we were all about the same size. Nobody got hurt."

Ludvigova, 22, arrived at Texas via the Czech Revolution in 1989. Ludvigova only knew of the American way of freedom from afar. Her brother Jan Ludvig (in traditional Czech society, women add the suffix "ova" to their last name) was a talented hockey player who defected to Canada and then the United States in 1981 to play in the NHL with the New Jersey Devils and Buffalo Sabres.

It wasn't easy to defect. Ludvig had to cross the border and stay in an Austrian refugee camp before crossing the ocean.

Ludvigova says her family wasn't subject to abuse by the Czech government, but her brother's actions made government officials wary of her family. Ludvigova said her older sister Hana was forced out of tennis coaching because the government thought she would be a bad influence on students.

"We were able to speak to him, but we always knew we had to be careful," Ludvigova said. "We knew the government was listening. They were afraid I would defect too, but that was never on my mind. I just wanted to travel and play tennis like the other good players in my country."

Ludvigova got into sports at age 6 through the want ads in her native Czechoslovakia, now known as the Czech Republic. The local newspaper in Liberec, which is near the Czech, German and Polish borders, had advertisements seeking athletic children who could be molded into tennis players.

In a setting that sounds more like an NFL scouting combine, Ludvigova and other hopefuls showed their talents by running, tumbling and skipping rope. The best 50 athletes were kept; the other girls went home. The government then put the girls through training with tennis rackets, and the top 20 were put on a track for tennis stardom.

Ludvigova said she was allowed to play in tournaments in Russia and Poland but was not allowed to travel to Western Europe to play.

It wasn't until 1991, after the Cold War came to an end in Czechoslovakia, that Ludvigova was free to travel to the West. Ludvigova joined her brother in Canada, who took her to tennis tournaments throughout North America.

Ludvigova landed at Midland College where she won the national junior college title in 1992. After Midland dropped its program, she transferred to Grand Canyon University in Phoenix, where she won the NCAA Division II title in 1993. By then, her English and test scores had improved enough to gain admission to Texas.

If anybody at Texas understands the pressures of being the nation's top player, it's Ludvigova.

Ludvigova's performance in the collegiate Grand Slams, and her 3-0 record against eventual 1994 NCAA champion Angela Lettiere of Georgia made her a marked woman in collegiate tennis last year.

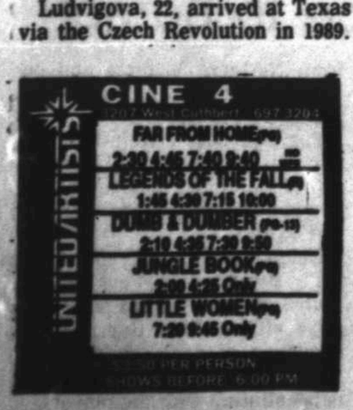

The collegiate schedule is sometimes brutal, particularly in February and March when there can be back-to-back dual matches. It was a very different pace for Ludvigova, who held up for most of the spring before being upset by Syracuse's Jana Strnadova in the first round of the NCAA Tournament.

"I didn't realize what a big deal it was to be No. 1 until everybody started talking about being No. 1," Ludvigova said.

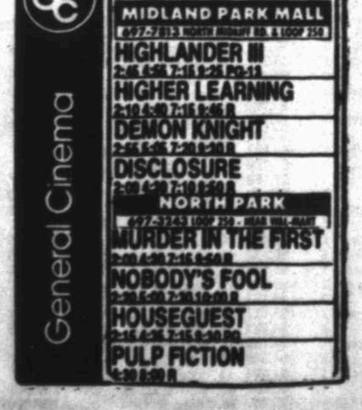

Pace will try not to make the same mistake. She has spent four years at Texas trying to become the top player in the nation. Pace has rounded out her game to become more than a great returner. The victory in the All-American gave her the confidence she could be No. 1.

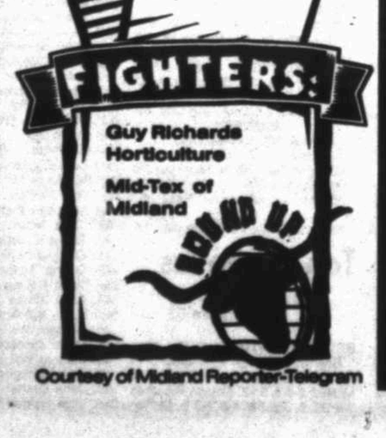

But her perspective is it is more important to be No. 1 in May at the NCAA Tournament than in February.

Rate increase looms, analysts say

■ Move would drive up borrowing costs for millions of Americans.

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — With Alan Greenspan calling economic growth "torrid," the Federal Reserve is widely expected to boost interest rates this week for the seventh time in a year. That would drive up borrowing costs for millions of Americans.

Many analysts are predicting the central bank, which Greenspan chairs, will increase two key interest rates by one-half percentage point, triggering a similar increase in banks' prime lending rate. The prime is the benchmark rate for many business and consumer loans.

"They are going to raise rates again. There is just not enough evidence yet that the economy is slowing down," said David Wyss, an economist at DRI-McGraw Hill, an economic consulting firm in Lexington, Mass.

The Clinton administration also appears resigned to further credit tightening. Asked if the White House was braced for another Fed rate increase this week, presidential spokesman Mike McCurry said, "It seems it would be wise to do that."

The speculation centers around the Tuesday-Wednesday meeting of the Federal Open Market Committee, the 12-member group that sets interest rate policy for the central bank.

The widespread expectation is that at the close of deliberations, the panel will announce the central bank has decided to increase both its federal-funds rate and discount rate.

The last changes in both rates occurred on Nov. 15 when they were increased by three-fourths of a percentage point, the biggest increase in 13 years.

That left the funds rate at 5.5 percent, 2.5 percentage points higher than it stood when the central bank started increasing rates on Feb. 4, 1994.

The Fed's stated aim is to engineer a soft landing in which growth slows enough to keep inflation from getting out of hand but not so much that the country is toppled into a recession.

Inflation last year remained exceptionally well-behaved with consumer prices rising by just 2.7 percent and the core rate — which excludes food and energy — increasing just 2.6 percent, the smallest gain in 29 years.

Such figures have prompted critics to attack the Fed's string of rate increases as overkill. But Greenspan, testifying before Congress last week, was unmoved by the attacks, insisting as he has in the past that if the Fed waits to tighten until inflation shows up at the consumer level, it will have waited too long.

Greenspan said 1994 ended on a "very torrid rate" of economic growth. But he added that "we are no longer flat out," indicating he believed signs of an economic slowdown to moderate growth levels would soon appear.

Because of those comments, some analysts said they believed the Fed will be content to leave interest rates unchanged for a time after the February increase.

"I think after the next rate hike the Fed will pause, perhaps for a considerable length of time," said economist David Jones, author of "The Buck Starts Here."

Prices recover

NEW YORK — Oil futures prices rose slightly Monday on lackluster technical trading as players continued to speculate on the demand for gasoline.

West Texas Intermediate for delivery in March settled at $18.09 per barrel, up 14 cents at the New York Mercantile Exchange.

March natural gas prices settled at $1.378 per 1,000 cubic feet, down 1.3 cents. Analysts said recent increases in natural gas prices tied to forecasts of colder weather have run their course.

Whirlpool moves

NEW YORK — Whirlpool Corp. will introduce about 800 new appliance models in North America alone this year as part of aggressive global expansion efforts, executives said.

The Benton Harbor, Mich.-based company's top executives met with Wall Street analysts and business reporters Monday to argue that Whirlpool's stock is undervalued considering its recent performance and prospects for continued growth.

Dollar tumbles

NEW YORK — The dollar plummeted to nearly a three-month low against the German mark and declined against other currencies Monday as worries intensified that U.S. lawmakers won't approve a $40 billion Mexico rescue plan.

In late New York trading, the dollar fell to 1.5045 German marks from 1.5153 marks late Friday.

The dollar also traded at 98.35 yen, down from 99.25 yen late Friday.

Meanwhile, the peso fell to a record low of 6.30 to the dollar, down from 5.72 to the dollar on Friday.

Other late dollar rates in New York, compared with late Friday: 1.2670 Swiss francs, down from 1.2750; 5.2225 French francs, down from 5.2630; 1,593 Italian lire, down from 1,602; and 1.4193, Canadian dollars, up from 1.4142.

The British pound was quoted at $1.5945, up from $1.5900 Friday.

Stocks sink

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market wilted Monday as wary investors awaited the outcome of an interest rate policy meeting and worried about the consequences of Mexico's financial crisis.

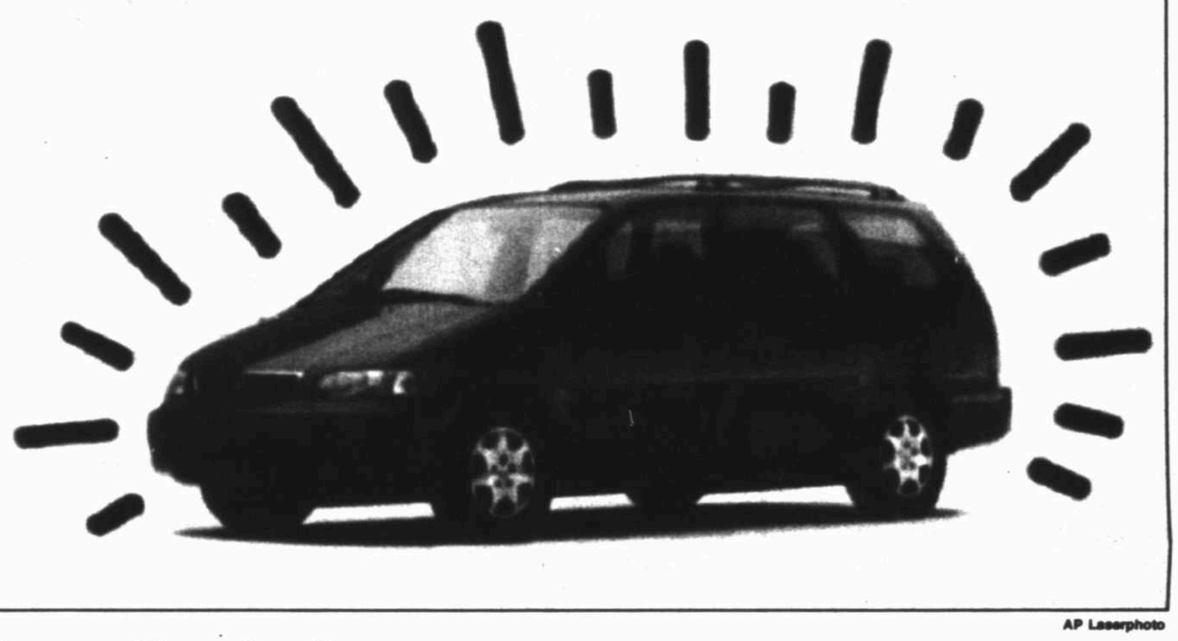

Weakness in the dollar, incited largely by Mexico's precarious condition, contributed to Wall Street's setback.

The Dow Jones industrial average managed a partial recovery in late trading and closed well above its worst reading of the day at 3,832.08, off 25.91. It had been down more than 40 points.

Broader market indicators also declined. The New York Stock Exchange composite index dropped 0.98 to 254.91 and Standard & Poor's 500 stock index fell 1.88 to 468.51.

Income growth spurts higher than spending

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Americans' income is growing more rapidly than spending, leaving analysts to wonder how soon an anticipated economic slowdown will materialize.

The Commerce Department reported Monday that personal income rose a healthy 0.8 percent in December to $5.89 trillion, after a rare drop the previous month. Earnings for 1994 were up 6.1 percent, the biggest gain in four years.

Meanwhile, spending climbed 0.3 percent to $4.75 trillion last month. It rose 5.7 percent last year, compared with 5.8 percent increase in 1993, and was the smallest advance since a 3.8 percent rise in 1991.

The figures "tell us what we already know," said economist Paul Getman of Regional Financial Associates, a forecasting service in West Chester, Pa. "This economy has real momentum. It's hot and getting hotter."

But others said they see signs the rate of growth is slowing, and that interest rate increases soon will begin to have a bigger effect on consumer spending.

There are "hints that consumers have turned more cautious in spending on big-ticket" items, said economist David Jones of Aubrey G. Lanston & Co., a government securities dealer in New York City. "It looks like consumers have tightened up on their purse strings with regard to spending on autos."

Consumer spending represents two-thirds of the nation's economic activity and has propelled the economy's four-year-old recovery.

The government reported last week that the economy surged 4.5 percent in the last three months of 1994 and grew 4 percent for the year, the strongest growth in a decade.

Analysts predict the Federal Reserve, seeking to restrain growth and check inflation, will boost interest rates for the seventh time in a year during a two-day meeting beginning Tuesday.

Monday's income figures compare favorably to inflation, rising more than twice as rapidly as the 2.7 percent increase in the Consumer Price Index last year.

Housing industry forecasts include low-cost, 1-roomer

N.Y. Times News Service

HOUSTON — Forecasters at the National Association of Home Builders convention here dusted off their crystal balls and predicted housing trends for 1995 and beyond.

Predictions included the development of a one-room dwelling with a $10,000 price tag, the phase-out of the cathedral ceiling and a big demand for the home office.

Builders at the convention, which ended Monday, also offered more expected predictions: Home prices will rise in 1995, and rising mortgage interest rates will cause problems for the industry.

Architect Barry Berkus of Berkus Design Studios in Santa Barbara, Calif., said he has developed prototypes of a one-room, 8-foot by 12-foot dwelling that could be shipped in after natural disasters to assist those who have lost homes. It could also be used to house the homeless and provide low-cost dwellings for low-income single people, said Berkus, who christened one version of the home the "Mod-Pod."

The pods, built of steel or fiberglass, include a bath, a kitchen, a bed and a living area.

In more conventional houses, expect to see more storage space, said Britten Perkins of EDI Architecture in Houston. Builders are beginning to search for small nooks of unused space that can be used for storage, even if the space is only big enough for a half-dozen suitcases.

High, flat ceilings of 9 feet or 10 feet will still be popular in homes constructed by U.S. builders in the next few years, but pitched or cathedral-type ceilings won't be considered efficient by many home buyers, said architect Phil Hove of Irving, Calif. That trend is already making its way into the marketplace.

Homes built with offices will flourish across the nation in the coming years, said builder Randall Lewis of Lewis Homes of Upland, Calif.

"It's growing, and it's growing really fast," Lewis said of home offices. The ability to work at home on computers is causing the rise in demand.

The home office boom raises questions for builders and designers, Lewis said.

INVESTORS' GUIDE

IRA withdrawals made by one of two methods

By Bill Doyle

Q: I am 69 years old, and my wife is 63. I am getting ready to start withdrawing from my individual retirement account by the time I reach 70½. I understand there are two ways of doing this — take out a fixed amount until the money is exhausted, or recalculate how much must be taken out each year based on my age and my wife's age.

Doyle

I need an explanation of what's going on here and your advice on which withdrawal method I should use.

A: Basically, you have a choice of taking out a minimum amount every year based on your life expectancy or taking payments based on the life expectancy of both you and your wife.

The dual life expectancy choice would mean you would be getting less money every year — which, in turn, means you would be paying less tax each year.

Recalculating your life expectancies every year would have the effect of reducing the minimum payout and, therefore, reducing the tax.

But, when one spouse dies, the payments would then have to be made over the survivor's life expectancy — which would involve a higher minimum amount and a higher tax.

There's no "right" answer. If both of you are healthy and think you both will live until a ripe old age, then you might want to use the dual life expectancy tables recalculated every year.

If one of you is not in very good health, or has a family history of health problems, then you might want to choose a fixed amount to be taken out every year until the money is gone.

Q: I am 65 years old and would like to tap into my IRA. Do I need life-expectancy forms from the Internal Revenue Service that tell you how much you should withdraw every month?

A: Until you reach age 70½, you don't need any special forms. Right now, you can withdraw as little or as much as you want.

People who take money out of their IRAs before age 59½ might have to pay a penalty unless they set up a special, monthly withdrawal schedule.

When you withdraw money from your IRA between the ages of 59½ and 70½, you list it as ordinary income on your 1040 tax return.

Around the time you reach age 69, call your IRA trustee, who can send you the life-expectancy tables and forms you need to calculate the minimum amount you must withdraw every year to avoid a penalty.

Q: I am self-employed, and my 9-year-old son helps me with my work. He earns around $250 a year. Is there any way I can open an IRA for him?

A: Most mutual fund companies and banks will accept as little as $250 to get started with an IRA investment. You and your son should consider a mutual fund with a portfolio made up of blue-chip stocks. Over the long haul, stocks should provide the best return.

Just for fun, let's calculate how much money your son might accumulate if he starts an IRA investment program now and keeps it going until he is 39 years old.

Let's say he continues to put $250 every year into a mutual fund that earns around 10 percent annually — the average for blue-chip stocks over the years — until he is 19. At that time, he would have around $4,000 in his account.

Then, let's say he starts putting in $1,000 a year until he's 29. He would have around $26,000.

Then, because he is older and earning more, he starts contributing $2,000 a year — the maximum for an IRA — until he reaches age 39. He would have amassed a grand total of $100,000.

As his father, if you could arrange it so your son put in the maximum $2,000 a year from age 9 to 39, he would have a grand total of $330,000.

It is important to start saving and investing in an IRA or other tax-deferred account at an early age, and to stick to it for as many years as you can.

NOTICE AFFORDING AN OPPORTUNITY FOR A PUBLIC HEARING
SH 349
FROM: THE MARTIN COUNTY LINE
TO: 2.8 MILES SOUTH MIDLAND COUNTY

The Texas Department of Transportation (TxDOT) is planning the improvement of SH 349 from the Martin County Line to 2.8 miles south.

The proposed project, located in the City of Midland and Midland County, will consist of four 12-foot travel lanes, a 16-foot left-turn lane and concrete curb and gutter for an 85-foot overall roadway width. The existing right of way width is 120 feet an no additional right of way will be required to construct this project.

Maps and other drawings showing the proposed location and design, environmental studies and any other information about the proposed project are on file an available for inspection and copying at the TxDOT Area Engineering Office or the TxDOT District Office Headquarters, located at 3901 E. Hwy 80 in Odessa, Texas 79761.

Information about the State Relocation Assistance Program, the benefits and services for displaces and information concerning the relocation assistance oifice can be obtained from the TxDOT District Office Headquarters in Odessa, Texas, (915) 332–0501. Information about tentative schedules for construction can also be obtained at the Area Engineering Office or the District Office Headquarters in Odessa, Texas.

Any interested citizen may request that a Public Hearing be held covering the social, economic and environmental effects of the proposed location and design for this highway project by delivering a written request to the TxDOT Area Engineering Office of the TxDOT District Office Headquarters located at 3901 E. Hwy 80, Odessa Texas 79761 on or before March 1, 1995.

Persons with disabilities who plan to attend this meeting and who may need auxiliary aids or services such as interpreters for persons who are deaf or hearing impaired, reads large print or braille are requested to contact Glen Larum at (915) 333-/246 at least two (2) work days prior to the meeting so that appropriate arrangements can be made.
