Reagan refuses advice to replace Regan, Casey

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan brushed aside advice from GOP lawmakers on Friday to replace Chief of Staff Donald T. Regan and CIA Director William Casey, while congressional investigators leveled fresh charges about the diversion of U.S. funds to provide military aid for Contra rebels.

In the most serious crisis of the Reagan presidency, a special panel of federal judges reviewed the administration's petition for an independent counsel to probe arms sales to Iran and subsequent funneling of profits to the Contras.

At the White House, spokesman Larry Speakes said he had "not found anyone who has a recollection of the president approving" in advance an Israeli shipment of arms to Iran. Speakes declined to say which officials he had talked with, or whether the president was among them.

Speakes' comments contradicted testimony that former national security adviser Robert C. McFarlane's gave the Senate Intelligence Committee in secret on Monday. One source said McFarlane told the panel that Reagan gave advance approval to the 1985 sale of U.S. arms to Iran by Israel.

Attorney General Edwin Meese III said last week the president had been told generally about the shipments after they were made in September of 1985. But the source said McFarlane told the panel the president sent word to Israel that the United States would replace any weapons the Jewish state sold to Iran.

Speakes also disputed a report that Lt. Col. Oliver North, the ousted National Security Council aide who oversaw the operation, met frequently with Reagan.

Reagan has said he knew nothing of the transfer of funds to the Contra forces battling the Nicaraguan gvernment, which occurred at a time when federal law prohibited military aid to the rebels. He says he ordered the secret sale of arms to so-called "moderates" in Iran in an attempt to re-establish ties with the Persian Gulf nation.

In the meantime, the Senate Intelligence Committee heard its fifth straight day of testimony.

More than 2,000 miles away, its vice chairman said the panel has made substantial progress.

Sen. Patrick Leahy, D-Vt., in Las Vegas to address a group of milk producers, also said the committee will not consider granting immunity to compel testimony from witnesses who have invoked their Fifth Amendment rights to remain silent, including North and former National Security Adviser John Poindexter. "We can do it without them," Leahy said.

The Intelligence Committee itself came under fire, as Sen. Ted Stevens, R-Alaska, said, "holding secret sessions on an issue like this, an issue that ought to be discussed in public, in my judgment, is wrong."

Republicans also mounted a two-pronged attack against Democratic Sen. Ernest Hollings, D-S.C., a committee member who earlier this week said that he was "positive" the president knew about the Iran-Contra link, even though other members of the panel have said that was not reflected in any testimony.

Sen. Strom Thurmond, R-S.C., in an unusual personal criticism of a colleague, said his fellow South Carolinian was trying to "run roughshod" over Reagan's rights. Thurmond also suggested that Hollings be removed from the Intelligence Committee probe for his comments.

Hollings spokesman Mike Fernandez said the senator would have no immediate comment on Thurmond's accusations.

Republican congressional leaders made their third visit of the week to the White House, and said afterwards that some lawmakers had urged the president to make personnel changes.

Sen. John Chafee, R-R.I., said some of the talk "obliquely referred to Mr. Regan," while Sen. Pete V. Domenici, R-N.M., added, "Casey's name came up. The CIA came up."

Chafee said Reagan took the position that neither Casey nor Regan had done anything wrong and "they would stay there and help him." He added, "The president took the view that he didn't want to throw anybody to the wolves without adequate cause."

LBB recommends 1988-89 budget

By STEVE LEVINE
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — The Legislative Budget Board staff Friday recommended a $27.3 billion general revenue budget for 1988-1989, $4.6 billion more than currently anticipated state revenues.

Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby, budget board chairman, and House Speaker Gib Lewis, vice chairman, speculated that increased taxes would have to make up at least some of the projected deficit. The LBB delayed a vote on the proposal until its Dec. 22 meeting, but Hobby pointed out that the staff prepared the draft budget following suggestions from the 10-man board of top legislative officials.

"We're just working out a blueprint to follow," Lewis said. "We'll be making adjustments when we go into the session."

The Senate Finance and House Appropriations committees use the LBB proposal as a starting point for their budget deliberations. The 70th Texas Legislature convenes in Austin Jan. 13. The proposed budget would cover Sept. 1, 1987 through Aug. 31, 1989.

Gov.-elect Bill Clements, who early in his campaign pledged to "veto any and all tax or fee increases," remains adamantly opposed to higher taxes. Rep. Mike Toomey, R-Houston and chairman of Clements' transitional task force on the budget, said that group will propose "a major restructuring of the state budget...in a manner that would produce some significant reductions."

"The raising of taxes are a last resort and not the first step," Toomey said. "I believe that more (cuts) can be made."

House Ways and Means Committee Chairman Stan Schlueter, D-Salado, said he is waiting for Clements' suggestions before deciding what specific tax legislation he will pursue. Schlueter told a gathering of new and returning lawmakers that budget writers have run out of tricks and must face some hard choices.

"There's not going to be anything left to go to after we broaden the sales tax base," Schlueter said. "You're down to a personal income tax and a corporate profits tax."

Agencies ordered to provide 'smoke-free' environment

WASHINGTON (AP) — The federal government told its agency heads Friday they must provide a "reasonably smoke-free environment" on the job.

While not a ban on smoking, the directive from the General Services Administration nonetheless represents a major shift from present policy.

An anti-smoking activist who hailed the move said it covers more people than any other similar action. The GSA is in charge of 7,500 buildings covering almost the entire civilian work force of 2.3 million people.

The new policy follows a National Academy of Sciences report last month which concluded that exposure to smoking in the home appears to double the chance of respiratory disease in children.

There have been many reports — disputed by the tobacco industry — that such exposure increases the chance of lung cancer among non-smokers. Some Environmental Protection Agency scientists have estimated that as many as 5,000 of the 130,000 lung cancer fatalities each year could be caused by what is called "passive smoking" — being around smokers.

About 30 percent of the government's employees are smokers, roughly the same as the population as a whole, GSA officials said.

The new building regulations, effective Feb. 8, require local agency chiefs to divide their space into smoking and non-smoking areas.

Generally, open offices must be designated non-smoking areas. Office space can be designated for smoking only if it can be "configured so as to limit the involuntary exposure of non-smokers to second-hand smoke," according to the regulation.

This means "the office space involved must be large enough and sufficiently ventilated to provide separate smoking and non-smoking sections which protect the non-smokers against involuntary exposure to smoke."

Auditoriums, classrooms, conference rooms, elevators, corridors, lobbies, restrooms, stairways, clinics and libraries generally may not be designated smoking areas.

Currently, eating areas such as cafeterias must have designated non-smoking areas. This will change to require that smoking areas be set aside and marked.

In a significant easing of draft regulations published in May, GSA told its federal tenants they may designate lobbies, corridors and restrooms as smoking areas if they cannot find enough suitable space in office areas.

Carol Bonosaro, president of the Senior Executives Association and a two-packs-a-day smoker, said quitting was "the last thing I think of every night and the first thing I think of every morning" and that the advent of the new policy might make her bite the bullet.

Kenneth Blalock, a self-described "avid smoker" who heads the American Federation of Government Employees, praised the move as a "milestone," in part because of requirements that federal managers consult unions in putting the new policy into effect.

Terence C. Golden, head of the GSA, said he believed productivity would not be affected one way or another. Any losses by workers taking smoke breaks would be offset by gains among non-smokers and by reduced absenteeism, he said.

In the long run, he said, the government expects reduced health care costs because the regulations would lead more smokers to quit.

Merchants going after Boeing workers' bonuses

SEATTLE (AP) — Christmas will come 10 days early for Seattle retailers and car dealers, as 80,000 Boeing Co. employees receive bonus checks worth an estimated $200 million and merchants vie for a piece of the action.

As part of new contracts negotiated this fall, Boeing workers will receive lump-sum bonuses ranging from 9 to 12 percent of gross pay. For a machinist earning $25,000 a year, that comes to a tidy $3,000; for a $60,000-a-year engineer, a tidier $5,400.

"I don't know how much money it's going to dump in the Seattle area, but it's probably good news for retailers, car dealers and big screen TV dealers," said Boeing spokesman Fred Kelley.

Boeing has 115,000 workers companywide and about 80,000 in the Seattle-Everett area.

All but administrative employees, who will have to wait until February, get their bonuses Dec. 15. But Seattle newspapers Friday were dotted with car advertisements pleading with Boeing workers to part with some of the money.

"A lot of car dealerships will be going after their business," said Bill Cooper, executive director of R&W Chevrolet in Seattle. Cooper says his company, which also is a Nissan dealer, has been running radio spots asking Boeing employees to bring in their bonuses this weekend and make a deal.

He said he hopes to attract 100 to 125 serious shoppers this weekend, and "probably 20 to 25 percent of the cars we sell this weekend will be to Boeing employees."

Youths take fantasy trip to North Pole

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — The Eastern Airlines jet only taxied from one end of the airport terminal to the other, but for 16 young cancer patients it was a fantasy trip to the North Pole to meet the jolly man in the red suit.

"I've been waiting to see you," Emily Polkinghone yelled excitedly to Mr. and Mrs. Santa Claus after her arrival Thursday. "I wanted to tell you I'm going to be 9 years old tomorrow."

Emily and the other children, ages 2 through 9, as well as their parents and relatives rode the mock flight at the Minneapolis-St. Paul International Airport courtesy of the airline, a group of its retired flight attendants, McDonald's and an anonymous donor who contributed $1,000 to buy toys.

When they got off the plane, Santa had lots of gifts and toys for them.

Emily's mother, Ingrid Polkinghorne of Minneapolis, said her daughter has a brain tumor that was diagnosed when she was 8 months old.

"Emily does believe in Santa Claus," her mother said. "She's been excited about this trip ever since she got the invitation."

State insurance board OKs increase in workers' compensation premiums

By JIM WARREN
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Saying the rate increase would still leave the insurance industry short of what it needs, State Board of Insurance members Friday approved a $400 million increase in workers' compensation premiums.

In a hearing clouded by politics, the board granted the staff-proposed 17.7-percent increase — about half of what insurance companies wanted and much more than Attorney General Jim Mattox said is warranted.

Board members and insurance representatives agreed that the Legislature should revamp the workers' compensation system so workers, employers and insurance companies are treated more fairly.

Mattox has said the increase amounts to a guaranteed 25-percent profit for insurance companies, although Board Chairman Lyndon Olson said companies will actually lose money on workers' compensation policies.

"We're saying to the workers' compensation industry in this state that we not only cannot guarantee a return on their investment, but in this finding we are guaranteeing a negative profit," Olson said before the three-member panel unanimously approved the rate increase.

Olson challenged Mattox to come before the board and testify as to why the increase is not necessary. Mattox was out of town Friday, but a spokesman said the attorney general's office asked the board to keep the hearing open for Mattox to file additional evidence "so the board could make an intellegent decision."

"Olson and the board apparently think they don't need input from anyone but the insurance industry to make a decision," said Ron Dusek, a Mattox spokesman.

In recent years, Olson said, insurance companies have made less money on their investments because of lower interest rates. At the same time, the number of claims filed against those companies has increased, he said, forcing companies to request rate increases to stay afloat.

But Mattox and consumer groups have said that insurance companies hide their earnings to justify rate increases every year while they reap large profits. In a press conference last week, Mattox characterized the insurance industry as "rapists" and "thieves."

Dick Geiger, a Dallas attorney who represents the National Council of Compensation Insurance, said that although companies needed a larger rate increase, the 17.7-percent boost will help.

"I want to commend the board for their courage for making a decision in the face of political pressure that's been applied by the attorney general's office," Geiger said after the board's ruling. "I think the attorney general has shown a degree of irresponsibility that I haven't seen before on the part of a public official.

"The characterization of the industry as rapists and thieves, I think that's despicable on his (Mattox') part."

Mattox will ask the board to reconsider the rate increase, Dusek said, "and if that doesn't work, we'll seriously consider taking it to court."

Insurance representatives said they will consider requesting a rehearing to ask for a larger increase.

Education committee begins revising draft of policy document

By DAVID PLESA
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — The Select Committee on Higher Education Friday began the tedious, line-by-line process of revising a draft of the Texas Charter for Public Higher Education, a blueprint by which state officials will mold the future of education in Texas.

The 34-page statewide policy document is aimed at ensuring the state's economic future by providing a guideline for quality higher education. The committee has been drafting the policy for more than a year.

"Texans face a future of rapid economic, technological and social change," the charter says. "To thrive in such a world will require Texans to be trained for vocations and professions and educated to understand the cultural, scientific and social environment in which they will live, work and compete."

The document, which does not attempt to outline specific educational proposals and programs, "sets forth some expectations for higher education by the people of Texas," said Victor Arnold, executive director of the committee. Those expectations include:

— Excellence in teaching, research and public service.

"University research must contribute to our economic growth through the education of young scholars and scientists and through the discovery of new products and production processes," the charter says.

— Access to higher education for all Texans who qualify for admission.

"Financial status must not be a barrier to participation in higher education," the document says. "Financial aid must be available to all who require assistance."

— A broad range of educational opportunities.

"Vocational and technical training, liberal arts and sciences education, and graduate and professional education are equally important," the draft says.

— Efficient management of higher education.

The committee said the charter will provide an organizational and funding structure to meet higher education challenges of the 21st century.

The committee will vote on portions of the charter beginning Thursday.

Among its early members were the only doctor in Midland, founders of the First Presbyterian and First Baptist churches, and the town's first postmaster. Like the original Thirteen Colonies that were the genesis for this country, there were 13 Master Masons who founded Masonic Lodge Number 623 a century ago Dec. 16.

The Lodge, which now has 665 members, will celebrate its centennial this month with a "called communication" of the lodge and a banquet.

According to the "One Hundred Years of History in Midland," by Sam E. Hilburn, which has been published for the centennial, early lodge members met in several places during its early years, including landmark sites like the Connell Bros. and Scharbauer Building at the corner of Wall and Main Streets, which later became the old First National Bank of Midland.

After that building, and the adjacent Llano Hotel were destroyed in a 1909 fire, the lodge met at the county courthouse until a new building was built at 215 W. Wall St.

The current Masonic temple, at 1600 West Wall, was occupied in 1953.

The Midland Lodge has produced two Grand Masters of the Grand Lodge of Texas: Ed R. Bryan in 1926, and Sam E. Hilburn in 1980.

To commemorate the centennial, medals in silver and copper were struck. Copper medals are still available at the lodge.

The capping celebration of the 100th anniversary celebration will be held 6 p.m. Tuesday, Dec. 16, at the Masonic Temple. Bob G. Reddin, current Master of the Midland lodge, will welcome the Grand Master of the Grand Lodge of Texas, John E. "Jack" Kelly of San Antonio, as well as other officers from the Grand Lodge.

The banquet, which is open to all Masons, their friends, and families, will be 7 p.m. Tuesday, Dec. 16 at the Holiday Inn Country Villa. Tickets are $10 per person, and should be purchased prior to Dec. 9.

Laredo paper has new publisher

NEW YORK — William B. Green has been named publisher of the Laredo (Texas) Morning Times. John B. Levesque will succeed him as publisher of the Edwardsville (Illinois) Intelligencer.

The announcement was made jointly Friday by Frank A. Bennack Jr., president and chief executive officer of the Hearst Corporation, and Robert J. Danzig, vice president of Hearst and general manager of Hearst Newspapers.

Both appointments are effective immediately.

Green began his newspaper career at the Washington Star in 1963. He joined Hearst Newspapers in 1971 at the San Antonio Light, where he served in a number of positions. He was named publisher of the Edwardsville Intelligencer in 1985.

Levesque has been editor of the Edwardsville Intelligencer since 1983. Prior to that position, he served as news editor at that paper.

He began his newspaper career in 1972 with the Hartford (Conn.) Times.

Former bank teller charged with embezzling funds

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

A former teller at Texas American Bank in Midland has been charged by information in federal court here with embezzling and misapplying approximately $18,000 of the bank's money.

Inanother case, an Odessa man who was convicted of transporting a hazardous and volatile chemical in a commercial airliner has been indicted for contempt of court, failure to appear, and receiving and possessing firearms.

The ex-teller, Rickey Dean Campbell, who now lives in Athens, is accused of taking the funds between October 1982 and January 1986.

The Odessa man, Wayne Ross Brunson, whom U.S. District Court Judge Lucius D. Bunton had sentenced to five years in prison last September for transporting the hazardous liquid, acetic anhydride, on an American Airlines flight last March 15, has been charged under a five-count indictment.

Brunson, 26, was indicted for:

— Contempt of Court. The grand jury charged Brunson with failing to obey U.S. Magistrate Darrell F. Smith's order not to violate federal laws. Brunson is charged with possessing a controlled or simulated controlled substance on Nov. 22 and, as a felon, of possessing two firearms, a .223-caliber Colt AR-15 rifle and Rohm handgun.

— Failure to appear. The grand jury cited Brunson for not reporting to the U.S. deputy marshal on Sept. 22 as ordered by Bunton on Sept. 4.

— Possession of a firearm by a convicted felon and receiving the weapons through interstate commerce. Brunson is charged with possessing and receiving the firearms on Nov. 22.

Brunson could be sentenced to life in prison if he is convicted on the contempt count, two years for failure to appear, two years for possessing the rifle and handgun, and five years on each of the other firearms counts.

The Federal Bureau of Investigation had arrested Brunson at Midland Regional Airport on March 15 after the bottle of the hazardous chemical, which Brunson stored in a black canvas bag, had broken.

BUDGET

With a recommended $443 million, 3.2-percent increase, state education programs would get the lion's share of the $1.3 million in new spending the LBB staff proposed Friday. More than 95 percent of the education increase goes to public schools, with the remainder spread among medical and dental schools, junior colleges and new research programs.

"We have the obligation to build the base for a new economic future for the state of Texas," said Senate Finance Committee Chairman Grant Jones, D-Abilene. "That base will come from education."

Primarily because of an anticipated 2.6-percent drop in enrollment, the LBB staff proposed a $3.4 million — 0.2-percent — reduction in general revenue appropriations for the state's 36 senior colleges and universities. Chief higher education budget examiner Wayne Roberts said changes in individual schools' budgets represent "an equitable redistribution" of state monies.

Proposed 1988-1989 general revenue appropriations for the University of Texas of the Permian Basin total $11.2 million, down 15.6 percent from current levels. Midland College would lose 0.02 percent, $2,500 over two years, under the LBB staff plan; Odessa College would lose 3.1 percent and Howard County Junior College would gain 2.3 percent. Overall, the 49 junior colleges across Texas would receive a 1-percent increase.

Other big winners are the Department of Human Services, up $570 million, and the Texas Department of Corrections, up $265 million. More than half of the DHS increase comes in replacing saved funds used to offset proposed cuts during this summer's special legislative sessions.

BOEING

Ken Lowe, sales manager at Michael's Buick-Toyota, said his dealership and a number of others are offering a special three-day sale this weekend to Boeing Credit Union members, offering cars at fleet discounts or better.

"We expect to sell between 65 to 85 cars," Lowe said. "An average weekend for us in December would be 19 to 25 units. This should triple our production."

Lowe said the bonuses are part of the rationale for the sale, but dealers also are pointing out that state sales tax for big-ticket items such as cars can no longer be deducted after this year under the new tax law.

Spokesman for some other retailers were unsure what effect the bonuses would have on their trade beyond the expected Christmas rush.

Most downtown merchants are not planning any special advertising aimed at Boeing workers, said Michael Hamilton, marketing director for the Downtown Seattle Association. But he said part of the bonus money undoubtedly will end up there.

"I'm sure if they have some extra money they probably will find a place to spend it," he said.

Boeing has had record sales of commercial aircraft the past two years, with orders for 1986 expected to top $20 billion. In contract negotiations, union members demanded to share the wealth.

Kelley said he had no total figure for the bonuses, but noted that in 1985, Boeing paid nearly $3.5 billion in wages to about 98,700 workers.

Using a rough estimate of $4 billion total wages this year, and taking the lower 9 percent figure, Boeing would be paying out approximately $360 million in all bonuses, and roughly $250 million in Washington state. But that figure actually would be higher, since 40,000 Boeing workers — the machinists — get a 12 percent bonus.

FANTASY

Luke Anderson, 4, who received a toy robot from Santa, thought the trip was "just fine." His grandfather, John Anderson, watched the celebration with a smile, pointing out that it was good to see so many happy faces.

"You know, these kids go through a terrible time," Anderson said. "Those chemotherapy treatments make them so ill. My grandson has leukemia. It was diagnosed about eight months ago, but he is doing well now."

Sheila Palm, director of the Child Life Department of the Minneapolis Children's Medical Center, which selected the children for the fantasy trip, emphasized that point.

"Some of these children will win their battle," she said. "You don't want to give them a death sentence right away. You want to give them hope and there is hope."

Dr. Larry Singher, director of the cancer program at the hospital, said that, since the hospital opened in 1973, about 68 percent of the children treated are still alive. He said 50 percent of children with leukemia and 80 percent of those with tumor of the kidney are cured.

Singher thought the mock flight was good for the youngsters because it allowed them to do something special and it allowed people to do something special for them.

"It also allowed people to see that these kids are normal kids," he said. "They don't have to wonder what children with cancer look like."

Similar mock flights to the North Pole have been scheduled throughout December across the country by 21 other chapters of Silverliners, the group of retired Eastern flight attendants.

Uncle Louie's greens are signature on each growing season

By CAROL RUST

BEAUMONT (AP) — Anytime you get ready, just bring yourself over a sack and Uncle Louie will fill it with mustard greens.

He's got them growing out back of his whitewashed garage next to the turnips, just like a well-kept secret.

The folks he likes, he'll lean over with a grin that sneaks out the corner of his mouth and tell, "Bring yourself over a sack," and they know what he means.

The folks he doesn't like, he doesn't waste time on, mostly. Fact is, he takes his hearing aid out when they're around.

He's been busy this morning, his sweaty T-shirt tells you. He put up eight bags of greens, he says, and they're tender-r-r-r. He lets the last syllable linger on his tongue to emphasize their tenderness.

"Go on around back and get you some," he urges, but always he leads the way himself. "I got to come along and make sure you're going to get enough for a decent mess."

Uncle Louie's greens are his signature on each growing season — and have been most of his 86 years. Long after most folks have plowed their gardens over and are pulling butterbeans out of the deep freeze to cook, you can find Uncle Louie bending over the rows of greens out back, talking about how tender they are.

And a mess of greens just wouldn't taste right without a nice hunk of salt pork. But just like most things these days, you got to do it yourself if you're going to get it right. That's why he salts down slices of pork shoulder himself in a big crock in his back room.

The only places Uncle Louie's last name appears anymore is on the mail and prescription medicine he gets. "Louis Palombo" sounds too formal to anyone who's known him very long, and so the nickname his next-door neighbors gave him 50 years ago is still around today.

So is the metal table in the back of his yard where many a shrimp has lost its head and fish stripped of its scales. The weathered table leans a little to the side, just like Uncle Louie does.

"You got to be careful with this thing," he says, picking up a meat cleaver, its handle wrapped with twine. "If you know how to use it, that fish head won't stay on long; if you don't, your finger won't stay on too long, either."

He likes to cook fish with the heads on, but he'll chop them off if a friend's staying for supper. It doesn't take long for him to clean the bag of fish a friend brought by this morning, but then he's been cleaning fish ever since he was a boy in Abbeyville, La.

Other fishermen used to look to him for advice, when he broadcast a outdoors sports show on radio.

Auctioneer has sold everything from A to Z

By RICK SMITH

LADONIA (AP) — H.A. Shelby shook his head and admitted he should know better.

After all, hasn't he worked as an auctioneer for 22 years?

And hasn't he auctioned off everything from pre-owned pantyhose to Lear jets to caskets and body shrouds?

"But I can go to another auctioneer's sale and get stuck just as bad as anybody," Shelby admitted.

"If there's something I want, price doesn't make any difference. After I get home, I see that I paid too much. But, by then, it's bought."

Excitement and competition lure people to auctions as much as the hope of a bargain.

Shelby knows that. And he doesn't discourage a little healthy bidding between buyers.

"Say I'm at an auction and I don't like John Henry, and John Henry is bidding on the same tractor I want.

"I'll bid more for it then, just to keep him from getting it."

Shelby, 55, traveled to a special school in Iowa years ago to learn the fine art of auctioneering.

He took his first lesson by correspondence, falling asleep at night to recordings of auctioneers and reciting their chants at work the next day.

He was transportation supervisor for a bakery in Paris and, when one of his drivers didn't show, Shelby would make the run to Sherman or Greenville or DeQueen, Ark.

"As I drove, I'd practice. I'd sell every armadillo, every rabbit that ran across the highway.

"I got so good that I could drive down the road, fast talking, and the cows would jump the fence, worrying that they must be in a sale barn."

Shelby has been in the business so long that nothing surprises him.

"You run into everything. I'm not kiddin' you.

"I've had husbands and wives split up in the crowd and not know they're bidding against each other."

One problem Shelby never had is a man waving at a friend and accidentally buying, say, a $4,000 bull.

"Well, I know when they're bidding and when they're just waving. And I'll call their attention to it, too. I'll say, 'Now, if you keep waving, you're fixing to buy something.' It's funny and the crowd will laugh. Kind of breaks up doing the same old thing."

Shelby and his Denison partner, Fred Gray, have worked sales across north Texas and south Oklahoma.

"Sherman, Denison, Whitesboro, Gainesville, Gunter. We covered all that area up in there."

Shelby lives in Paris and operates his own auction company on a five-acre lot here.

Some types of sales are more difficult than others, Shelby said, especially farm foreclosures, estate sales and divorce settlements.

"I hate to sell out a good farmer who's been farming 30 or 40 years and done lost it.

"Some auctioneers are smart alecks, but I've got a different feeling. I just can't go out to a man's farm and act smart. More or less, I go out there with a tender heart and try to soothe his pain while I'm getting the sale ready."

With estate settlements, Shelby must go into homes to prepare the possessions of deceased residents for sale.

"You'll go into the house to get things ready. Everything's just right, just the way the lady left it. Makes you feel funny."

Divorce settlements are a problem, Shelby said, because both the ex-husband and ex-wife crowd into his tiny trailer office to confirm sale prices.

"You sit the woman down over there, sit the man down over here. They're both mad at each other. I had one man who brought his girlfriend in with him.

"I had to calm them down. I did some fast talkin' that day."

But that's all in a day's work, Shelby said.

"A good auctioneer's got to be everything: Lawyer, referee, peacemaker."

His rhymthmic, rapid-fire chant isn't for show. The fast talking allows Shelby to sell one item a minute.

"I've been doing this so long, nothing or nobody can stump me," Shelby said in a slow drawl.

"There's nothing I couldn't sell. Nobody I couldn't sell to. Heck, I could sell to Reagan himself."

An auctioneer prides himself on bringing top dollar for sale items, and if someone says something sold too high, Shelby is philosophical.

Doctor: AIDS victims improving with experimental drug

DALLAS (AP) — AIDS patients taking the experimental drug AZT at Parkland Memorial Hospital have shown improvement, but that hasn't convinced many of the victims that the drug will better their lives, a doctor says.

The drug has been administered at the hospital's AIDS clinic since Oct. 24, when the U.S. Food and Drug Administration approved the use of AZT under a special program that allows for more widespread use than under its previous designation as an experimental drug.

Of the 34 patients originally given the drug, 22 are doing better, two have died, four had to be taken off the drug because of side effects and six have maintained the same condition, said Dr. Daniel Barbaro, director of the clinic.

Patients and hospital staff members said the improvement hasn't convinced patients that AZT, or azidothymidine, will make their lives better, although some hope it will keep them alive until new treatment is found.

"What you have to remember is that these people have been told they have a terminal disease, and they have seen a lot of ups and downs," said Tom Emanuele, a nurse at the clinic.

"What we have seen is that people who start out relatively healthy are doing well with the drug," Barbaro said. "They are gaining weight; they are feeling better; their energy levels are up. We have some people who are actively exercising now, who went back to work, who feel real good."

A 26-year-old Dallas man, one of the first acquired immune deficiency syndrome patients at the Parkland clinic to receive the drug, said the mood among most of the patients is still cautious.

"At first I was real scared because I didn't know if it would work; it is experimental you know. I mean we are basically guinea pigs," he said. "But now I feel much better, my blood count is perfect, I feel like it is working."

He said he does not want his life merely sustained by a drug, but hopes AZT will keep him alive until a cure is found.

"I don't think AZT can restore me to the way I was," he said.

A 27-year-old AIDS patient said that after 18 months of struggling with the disease, he is not optimistic.

"You can be in for a letdown if you get overzealous," he said.

Barbaro said it is too early to predict the long-term benefits of the drug.

More than 2,000 patients across the nation are receiving AZT and about 40 patients are added daily, said Kathy Bartlett, a spokeswoman for Burroughs Wellcome Co., which makes the drug.

Ms. Bartlett said it may be several months before all data on these patients are evaluated to determine the effectiveness of the drug.

AIDS researchers stress that AZT is not a cure. The drug stops the AIDS virus from replicating, which allows the damaged immune system to restore itself at least in part, Barbaro said.

"I think it (AZT) is something that has been positive for a number of our patients," he said.

Authorities trying to figure out what to do with uprooted house

SAN DIEGO (AP) — A house abandoned along the side of a South Texas highway was moved Friday to a site near an attorney's office as authorities tried to figure out what to do with it.

The house, which was uprooted from Corpus Christi, sat on blocks along a highway near Benavides until Friday morning when it was moved.

"It's a mess," said Duval County sheriff's dispatcher Cenaida Montemayor. "It's unbelievable but true."

The small beige house was reported stolen by a Corpus Christi woman Wednesday. Constable Ramiro Perez chased down the structure, rolling along Highway 59 about 10 miles west of Benavides, she said.

Perez said he remembered the house because he had just escorted its movers through the city.

But the movers told authorities they had not stolen the house. Instead, they were reclaiming it because of a bad debt, she said. They said a woman had not paid them for the house after they moved it from Laredo, Ms. Montemayor said.

The movers said they were returning to Laredo with the house and were about halfway there when they were pulled over, she said.

A day later a deal was struck with the help of an area attorney, county officials said. No charges would be filed and the structure would be moved back to Corpus Christi on Thursday, Ms. Montemayor said.

However, before the house could be returned, a man took the tires off the truck carrying the house, she said. The man claimed the movers had not paid him for the tires.

The house was abandoned on the highway until Friday morning, when it was moved to the offices of a San Diego attorney, said Duval County sheriff's dispatcher Ruben Trevino.

"It's finally arrived where it's supposed to be going," Trevino said. "It's off the highway."

Gonzalez says he hit man because integrity attacked

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — U.S. Rep. Henry B. Gonzalez says he confronted a man in a local restaurant because he felt his integrity had been attacked when the man called him a communist.

"If a man calls me a crook or a communist, those are fighting words," Gonzalez said. "It's kind of an assault on my integrity."

The man, Bill Allen, 40, of San Antonio, filed a police report after the incident Thursday, but had not signed a complaint against Gonzalez by mid-afternoon Friday, said San Antonio Police Department spokesman Paul Buske.

Buske said police had not contacted Gonzalez.

The incident took place at about 9:30 a.m. Thursday at a 24-hour restaurant.

"His exact words, and he spoke them three times to my face, were, 'There's Henry B. Gonzalez, our number one biggest communist,' " Gonzalez said.

Gonzalez, 70, said he responded by half hitting and half shoving Allen.

"He didn't lose his balance, and he stayed in his chair," he said. "He didn't make any movement, so I left."

Allen told police that Gonzalez and two other men left the restaurant after hearing the comment and then Gonzalez returned and asked who had called him a communist, Buske said.

"In a quiet voice I expressed my low opinion of him," Allen said. "He asked, 'Did someone call me a communist?'

"I said, 'Yeah. I did.' The he took a swing and got me in the left eye."

Allen said he was treated for a bruised eye at a local clinic, but was not seriously hurt.

"I could not believe it," Allen said. "This is a congressman and a grown man who decried sending aid to freedom fighters in Nicaragua taking a swing at someone sitting down eating breakfast."

Gonzalez is 5-foot-11, weighing about 175 pounds, spokeswoman Gail Beagle said. Allen is about 5-9 and weighs about 130 pounds.

Authorities probing whether failing grade prompted shootings

LEWISTOWN, Mont. (AP) — Authorities in this central Montana town tried to determine Friday whether a failing grade in French provoked a high school freshman into a shooting spree that left a teacher dead and three people wounded.

Classes resumed Friday at Fergus High School, with counselors, clergy and psychologists on hand to help students deal with the trauma of Thursday's bloodshed, and authorities said they would decide within a week whether to charge the boy arrested in the case as an adult.

Kristofor Hans, 14, who was arrested Thursday after officers surrounded his house, appeared before District Judge Peter L. Rapkoch on Friday in a closed hearing at the Montana Youth Treatment Center in Billings.

He was charged in youth court with being a delinquent for reasons of deliberate homicide and attempted deliberate homicide, said county attorney Craig Buehler.

Hans' court-appointed attorney, Bradley Parrish, entered pleas of "not true" to the delinquency petitions. His next scheduled hearing is Dec. 16.

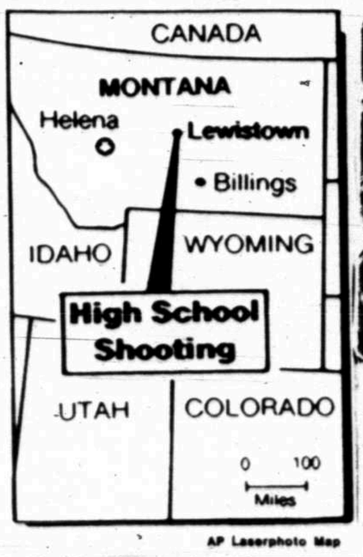
Henrietta Smith, a 40-year-old substitute French teacher, was fatally shot in the face Thursday when she answered the door of her classroom, officials said. Vice Principal John Moffatt was shot in the hall, and two students were slightly wounded by ricocheting bullets.

Students said Hans had threatened to kill the regular French teacher, LaVonne Simonfy.

"He told people...'I'm gonna blow Simonfy's head off because she gave me an 'F' last quarter,'" said Trevor Weinheimer, 16.

Authorities were looking into whether there were threats, Buehler said. Assistant Police Chief Tom Killham said officers also were looking into the youth's academic performance, but "at this point, we're not ready to release a motive."

The shooting shocked the quiet community of 7,000, where the state Class A girls' high school basketball tournament opened a few minutes before the gunfire broke out in another part of the building.



AP Laserphoto Map

Mrs. Smith, a mother of two from nearby Moore, "was nice. Everybody liked her," said Tonya Tuss, 18, a senior. "She was here a lot. She subbed for everybody — government, language, English."

Hans was described by Weinheimer and sophomore Tim Severson as quiet and a fan of the fantasy board game Dungeons & Dragons.

"He had a few friends," said Weinheimer. "Nobody associates with them. They're kind of scared to. They're different from everybody else. They play D&D all the time. They do drugs."

Asked if Hans used drugs, Weinheimer said, "I don't know if he did, but I know some of the others do."

Killham, Buehler and Principal Bob Raver said there was no evidence of drugs being involved.

A friend, Shannon Foucher, said Hans first threatened to kill his French teacher on Wednesday, and repeated the threat Thursday. She thought he was joking.

"Some of the kids laughed at him and said they didn't believe he'd do it," said freshman Rachel Stein, 14.

Raver said he had not been informed about any threats by Hans. He also said he would not discuss Hans' records.

Denver man allegedly committed burglary to help sick daughter

DENVER (AP) — Prosecutors will decide Monday whether to charge a man who says he committed a burglary so that he could pay medical expenses for his terminally ill, 3-year-old daughter.

Published reports of Robert Jaramillo's case have impelled dozens of people to offer donations totaling $3,000.

"I appreciate everything," Jaramillo said. "But I don't want people to give on account of what I did, but because of her."

The Jaramillos say their daughter, Rechelle, has Batten's disease, a rare, fatal condition that breaks down the nerve cells in the brain.

Jaramillo, 29, of Denver, was arrested inside the Brunson Instrument Co. about 5 a.m. Wednesday. Police said they found about $500 worth of items taken from the business' shelves stacked by the door, which had been pried open. Other items taken from the business were found in Jaramillo's car nearby, police said.

Assistant District Attorney Chuck Lepley said he discussed the case Friday with Jaramillo, who he says has a previous burglary-related arrest on his record. A decision on whether to charge Jaramillo will be made Monday, he said.

Jaramillo, who earns $6 an hour making kitchen counter tops, said he was desperate for money to pay for travel costs to and from Oregon for his daughter's medical treatments.

The family has been taking the child to Oregon for treatment by a naturopath who attempts to cure illnesses by using natural agents like air, water and sunshine.

> "I appreciate everything. But I don't want people to give on account of what I did, but because of her (terminally ill 3-year-old daughter)."
> — Robert Jaramillo

Jaramillo said he was arrested after he had gone back to Brunson Instrument to return the stolen items. "My conscience got the best of me," Jaramillo said.

Lepley said records show Jaramillo received a deferred judgment for attempted burglary in Denver in 1985. In that case, Jaramillo was arrested on the roof of a building prosecutors said he intended to burglarize, according to Lepley.

"We're looking now at whether to go through the diversion program or to file charges. If in fact it is filed, it would be a case for deferred judgment," Lepley said.

The diversion program enables prosecutors not to bring charges, but to monitor a suspect's behavior until the crime's statute of limitations expires. For burglary, that would be three years, Lepley said.

Survivors to commemorate bombing of Pearl Harbor

HONOLULU (AP) — On Dec. 7, 1941, Harlan C. Christensen was standing on the quarter-deck of the USS Arizona, waiting for his brother.

"We were going to take pictures to send back home," Christensen recalled Friday. "He hollered at me that he forgot something and was going back to his forward quarters to get it."

Christensen never saw his brother again. Moments later, Japanese warplanes bombed Pearl Harbor and the huge battleship quickly sank.

"When the attack began, I went to my station at the No. 4 powder magazine," Christensen said. "When the ship sank I was able to get out through the No. 3 gun turret. We couldn't swim because fuel was burning all around us in the water. Finally, the captain's boat picked us up and took us to Ford Island."

Christensen, who retired last year as chief of police in Columbus, Kan., is one of 11 Arizona survivors who will participate in a special ceremony Sunday on the 45th anniversary of the attack.

"Coming back here has a lot of special meaning," Christensen said. "My mother and father were never able to come here, so everything I do here is for my parents."

Three services are scheduled aboard the USS Arizona Memorial to commemorate the attack and pay tribute to the victims, including the 1,107 still entombed in the Arizona's sunken hull.

The Navy's annual tribute will include a moment of silence throughout the Pearl Harbor Naval Base at 7:55 a.m., the time the attack began. Later in the day, the Arizona survivors will hold a service, and the Pearl Harbor Survivors Association will hold an annual sunset service.

Employee allegedly counterfeits bills on newspaper's small press

FRAMINGHAM, Mass. (AP) — A production worker at a daily newspaper pleaded innocent Friday to charges of counterfeiting $20 bills on a small press at the paper.

Charles M. Pickett, 24, of Brockton, was ordered held on $2,000 bail following his arrest during the overnight shift while workers prepared Friday's edition of the Middlesex News.

Pickett, 24, pleaded innocent to one count of making, altering or forging counterfeit bills and one count of possession of tools and materials for making counterfeit bills, said court clerk Anthony Colonna.

The first charge carries a sentence up to life imprisonment while the charge regarding tools carries a sentence of up to 10 years.

Pickett, who worked at the newspaper since June, also could face federal charges, said Stewart J. Henry, spokesman for the Boston office of the U.S. Secret Service.

A pretrial conference was scheduled for Dec. 12.

Friday's edition of the Middlesex News, reported that a negative and printing plate with $20 bill images on them were thrown into a waste basket in clear view of other employees.

"Anyone who would use a newspaper press of any kind, even a small one like this, which is a glorified mimeograph machine, is not too swift," editor Kenneth Hartnett said.

"You'd think someone like that would want to be a little clandestine about it," he said. "To me, it's either a joke or amateur hour."

The Secret Service was examining high-grade bond paper with $20 bill images on it, Henry said. The paper, which he said was similar to that sold by stationers, was sent to a laboratory in Washington for analysis.

Henry said he believed that none of the money went into circulation.

Early this week, a newspaper employee discovered that the press, which is used for small jobs such as handbills, had apparently been operated during the Thanksgiving weekend to print counterfeit currency, said publisher James W. Hopson.

Drugs manufactured in U.S. pose 'deadly threat,' DEA official says

Copley News Service

SAN DIEGO — Illicit drugs manufactured in the United States pose a more deadly threat than narcotics smuggled into the country, the nation's top drug enforcement official said here this week.

"More than half the drug-related deaths in the country last year were caused by drugs made in the U.S.A.," John C. Lawn, administrator for the Drug Enforcement Administration, told the San Diego Crime Commisssion Thursday night at its third annual banquet.

"Even if we were able to put our military shoulder to shoulder surrounding our borders — eliminating the cocaine, heroin and marijuana coming into the country from without — we still would have a substantial substance-abuse problem," Lawn said. "We are the most drug-abusing nation on earth and until that changes we are going to have a deadly problem."

Lawn said much of the burgeoning drug manufacturing problem is centered in the Southern California area.

"A task force in San Diego is seizing an average of eight clandestine drug laboratories a month," Lawn said. "Twenty-five percent of all drug labs seized last year were in this area."

Lawn said the labs are mainly producing methamphetamines — called "crank" and "crystal"— made with explosive chemicals that are legal to purchase.

Lawn also said a recent profile of the nation's cocaine users show that 75 percent use cocaine at sometime on the job; 25 percent use it daily at work, and 45 percent weekly at work. "We have 1,200 people using it every day, 365 days a year.

"Drug abuse impacts directly on industry and everything we do," he said. "It contributes to shoddy work in the defense industry."

Lawn said the "ultimate answer to drug abuse is education and prevention," with schools, churches and community groups leading the way.

He cited a program started two years ago in which 500,000 high school athletes and coaches have been involved in a drug education program. "It is working. Peer pressure on fellow athletes and students is getting results."

He said law enforcement can't win the war alone and suggested that programs that use millions of dollars in people and equipment to interdict drugs at the borders are "overemphasized."

GAO studying records in new Boesky probe

WASHINGTON (AP) — A dozen investigators are poring over Securities and Exchange Commission and New York Stock Exchange records as part of a new inquiry into the Ivan Boesky insider trading scandal, the General Accounting Office confirmed Friday.

Craig A. Simmons, the GAO's senior associate director and head of the new investigation, confirmed reports that the congressional watchdog agency has launched its own probe of government regulation of insider trading.

The investigation was ordered by Rep. John Dingell, D-Mich., chairman of the House Energy and Commerce Committee. It began late last week and likely will take three to four months to complete, Simmons said.

The GAO's study also will cover whether the New York Stock Exchange's sophisticated computer monitoring program, designed to spot suspicious stock activity hinting of insider trading, is an effective enforcement weapon.

Simmons noted that while the computer can reveal suspect trading patterns, "that's not sufficient evidence to show that they were trading on inside information."

Simmons said the GAO should be able to report to Dingell's investigations subcommittee next week on the general issue of insider trading and what kind of evidence is needed to make a case. While not specifically targeting the Boesky case, he said, the testimony "may shed some light" on how the SEC approaches such cases.

Other witnesses are expected from the SEC, the New York Stock Exchange, the National Association of Securities Dealers and the investment houses of Merrill Lynch, Pierce, Fenner and Smith and First Boston.

The GAO's insider trading investigation comes on top of a series of ongoing and recently completed studies critical of budget and staff constraints limiting the securities agency.

In August, Dingell released two GAO studies that he said showed the SEC could not effectively implement and enforce securities laws because of budget restraints.

The GAO said there was a large and growing inventory of unprocessed financial reports attrubuted to "lack of staff resources."

More than 15,500 form 10-K annual disclosure reports were unprocessed 90 days after filing during one six-month period, although they are a principal source of market information for many investors and analysts, the GAO said.

The GAO also said that over a seven-year period from 1978 to 1985, SEC enforcement and sanction actions declined in virtually every category.

Dingell and his supporters have argued for many years that the SEC needs more money and manpower to properly do its job. SEC Chairman John Shad has argued that the SEC has the resources to do the job.

Communications satellite speeds toward outpost

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — A new military communications satellite "is doing just fine" as it speeds toward a stationary outpost 22,300 miles above the globe, a spokeswoman for its builder said Friday.

"The engineers are very pleased," Montye Male said of the $125 million Fleet Communications Satellite launched Thursday night by an Atlas-Centaur rocket.

Tonight, an onboard motor is to fire briefly to arrest the spacecraft in stationary orbit above the equator west of Equador. At that altitude, its speed will match that of the rotation of the Earth, and it will remain over one point of the globe at all times.

After several weeks, the new satellite will become a replacement for one of four aging similar satellites.

The spacecraft links American land, sea and air forces around the world with the Joint Chiefs of Staff, the National Command Authority and the president.

Camp receives donations

GLACIER, Wash. (AP) — A caretaker at a Mount Baker Bible camp that temporarily housed 300 stranded skiers says $2,900 has been donated to help pay the cost of their stay.

Rain on Nov. 23 washed out a portion of the main road linking the Mount Baker ski slopes to Bellingham, the nearest city. About 1,000 skiers were isolated, and 300 sought refuge at Mount Baker Baptist Conference Center.

Bill and Donna Jean Norton, who operate the center, used their summer camp food supply to feed the skiers, who left when the road reopened two days later.

Norton said he asked the skiers for donations to help defray the $3,000 cost of their stay. At first, money trickled in, but by Thursday, Norton said he had received about $2,900.

"About 75 percent of what we're getting is from people who weren't here," he said. "I'm flabbergasted, yes I am."

Blind man's coat stolen

HAUGHTON, La. (AP) — A blind Salvation Army bell ringer says his Christmas cheer wasn't dampened by the thief who made off with his jacket while he was manning a kettle for donations.

"God bless him. I hope he's warm," said William "Tommy" Beason, 49.

Beason, who is blind in one eye and legally blind in the other, said he had left the jacket behind the kettle Monday night and didn't notice the theft.

One man offered to replace the coat, but Beason told him to put his cash in the pot to help the needy.

"People don't have to steal. If you're cold you can go to the Salvation Army and they'll give you a coat," said Beason, a 15-year volunteer.

Despite diabetes, a heart attack last September and a stroke four years ago, Beason said he plans to keep on ringing.

Unexpected baby arrives

MADISON, Wis. (AP) — A 23-year-old woman says she thought her abdominal pains were caused by a cyst, but she learned otherwise when she gave birth in her living room.

The Madison woman, who spoke by telephone from her hospital bed on the condition she remain anonymous, said she had seen a doctor twice in the past five months, complaining of irregular periods and abdominal pains. A cyst was diagnosed.

"I had gained some weight. But the doctor said the cyst would cause me to gain some weight," the woman said.

She said she began having intense pains early Thursday and delivered a 5-pound, 10-ounce boy at home. Fire Department paramedics arrived a short time later and took the baby and his parents to the hospital.

Study: 80 percent of men at risk of heart attacks from cholesterol

CHICAGO (AP) — A study of more than 350,000 middle-age men suggests that 80 percent risk dying from heart attacks because of excessive cholesterol, and a pharmaceutical company says it has developed a drug that can drastically reduce the fatty deposits.

The study of American males, the largest of its kind to date and published in today's Journal of the American Medical Association, followed 356,222 men between ages 35 and 57 from 1973 to 1979.

Although it found that four of every five men in the group had excessive amounts of cholesterol, the findings were an improvement over levels recorded 20 years ago.

The researchers, led by Dr. Jeremiah Stamler, said the typical cholesterol level was 180 milligrams per deciliter of blood, far above 167 milligrams, the level generally considered safe.

Cholesterol levels above that amount were accompanied by rising risks of fatal heart attacks in a way that was "continuous, graded, marked and strong," said Stamler, a heart and preventive medicine expert at Northwestern University Medical School.

"Eighty percent of American men are above optimal risk, even though the situation is better than it was 20 years ago," Stamler said.

Subjects ages 35 to 39 who had maximum cholesterol levels of 181 milligrams per deciliter died of heart disease at a rate of 0.59 per thousand, compared with 4.57 per thousand for the same age group with levels of at least 245 milligrams.

In the 55- to 57-year-old range, the same cholesterol levels were associated with death rates of 8.31 per thousand and 15.78 per thousand, respectively.

In the separate study of the new drug lovastatin, Merck Sharp & Dohme researchers reported that 101 patients who took the drug for 18 weeks reduced their blood cholesterol by an average 32 percent.

Previous research indicates that every 1 percent reduction in blood cholesterol produces a 2 percent reduction in the risk of fatal heart attack.

The new finding is "very exciting," said Basil Rifkind, a cholesterol expert at the National Heart, Lung and Blood Institute in Bethesda, Md.

"No really satisfactory drug" is marketed for reducing with high cholesterol, said Rifkind.

Although lovastatin is probably two years from being marketed, it appears to have few unwanted side effects and could help millions of people, said Dr. Marvin E. Jaffe, vice president for clinical research for the West Point, Pa.-based company.

He said Merck applied for U.S. Food and Drug Administration approval of the drug Nov. 14.

Eating less fat is still the first step most Americans should take to reduce cholesterol, the Merck researchers said in the study also published in the journal.

"In theory, as many as 10 percent of the U.S. population could be treatable (with a drug like lovastatin), if they didn't have their cholesterol levels reduced by diet," Jaffe said.

AIDS fight goes worldwide

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — The World Health Organization is inaugurating a worldwide program to fight AIDS, which it said could claim up to 3 million victims in the next five years.

"It is hard to imagine a worse health problem in this century," said Halfdan Mahler of Denmark, director-general of the organization.

He told a news conference WHO is gearing up to fight acquired immune deficiency syndrome, which he said presents a "health disaster of the magnitude of smallpox." It took 10 years to eradicate smallpox under a WHO campaign.

Dr. Jonathan Mann, an American who will head the campaign against AIDS at WHO headquarters in Geneva, said there are now about 100,000 known cases worldwide.

He said a million people are affected by AIDS-related symptoms and 5 million to 10 million people have been exposed to an AIDS virus, most of them in the United States and Africa.

"But AIDS is lurking unpleasantly at the door of Asia," Mahler said.

He said a potential "explosive development" of AIDS could lead to "a reasonable estimate in four to five years of 500,000 to 3 million AIDS cases."

In that time, Mahler said, the number of people carrying an AIDS virus could increase to 100 million.

In the United States, AIDS has been diagnosed in 27,519 people and claimed 15,445 lives, according to the Centers for Disease Control in Atlanta. The CDC estimates that the disease will strike 270,000 people and kill 179,000 by the end of 1991.

AIDS, or Acquired Immune Deficiency Syndrome, destroys the bodies immune system, undermining its ability to fight disease. There is no known cure.

Fog, drizzle in forecast

From Staff and Wire Reports

Fog and drizzle may greet early-risers today.

Later in the day after the fog dissipates, the temperature is to rise into the lower 50s, according to the weatherman at the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Airport. Winds are to be southerly at 5 to 15 mph.

For tonight, the weatherman is predicting a 30 percent chance of rain and a low temperature reading in the upper 30s.

The probability of rainfall is to drop to 20 percent Sunday. The cloudy skies will help hold the peak temperature to near 50 degrees.

Friday's peak temperature was 50 degrees, and the record high temperature for a Dec. 5 is 79 degrees in 1951. The overnight low was 43 degrees. The record low for a Dec. 6 is 8 degrees in 1950.

STATE

Wind flowing around a high pressure system northeast of Texas swept moisture from the Gulf of Mexico into the state Friday, and low level clouds blanketed the south and west.

Higher level clouds spread over the rest of the state, and fog lingered in parts of the South Plains in the afternoon, the National Weather Service said.

Colder temperatures moving into the western portion of the state Saturday could bring snow to the Panhandle and South Plains on Sunday, the weather service said.

Southeast winds flowed across South Texas while south winds prevailed across the rest of the state. Wind speeds were from 5 to 15 mph in the afternoon.

The forecast called for mostly cloudy skies through Sunday, with a chance of light rain in the south and west and thunderstorms spreading east over North Texas Saturday night.

NATION

Snow fell from Michigan to New York and in parts of the Northwest on Friday.

Snowshowers were scattered over lower Michigan, northern Indiana, Ohio, West Virginia, western Pennsylvania and much of the northwest two-thirds of New York State.

Snow also extended from northwest Montana across the Idaho Panhandle, western and southern Washington, and higher elevations in Oregon and California. Rain reached over the lower elevations of the northern Pacific states and northern California.

Today's forecast called for snowshowers over Michigan, northeast Illinois and western Wisconsin. Rainshowers should reach across the central Mississippi Valley, and be scattered over the central Plains. Rainshowers should also extend across the Rockies.

New UT head coach David McWilliams and wife Cindy.

'Horns hire McWilliams from Tech

AUSTIN (AP) — David McWilliams, who coached Texas Tech to this year's Independence Bowl in his first season, Friday was named head football coach at the University of Texas.

McWilliams previously served as an assistant under Darrell Royal, who built the Longhorns into a national power, and under Fred Akers, who was fired last Saturday after Texas wrapped up its worst season in 30 years with a 5-6 record.

Texas Athletic Director DeLoss Dodds said McWilliams, a captain on Royal's 1963 national championship team, was his first choice for the $91,600-a-year job.

Dodds called McWilliams a coach who "could walk that thin line between being a friend, a confidant and, at the same time, a disciplinarian to the players."

McWilliams, 44, drew a standing ovation from Longhorn players and supporters when he entered the Lyndon B. Johnson Auditorium on the UT campus for the announcement.

"It's just a dream come true for me," said McWilliams, who was a Texas assistant from 1970 through 1985.

SMU accepts Collins, Hitch resignations

DALLAS (AP) — Southern Methodist head football coach Bobby Collins and Athletic Director Bob Hitch resigned Friday following new allegations of recruiting violations in the Mustang football program.

Dr. William B. Stallcup Jr., the university's interim president, said in a statement that the resignations were effective immediately.

"During their years of service, SMU sports teams have enjoyed marked success," Stallcup said. "Under the prevailing circumstances, however, it is my judgment that Mr. Hitch's and Mr. Collins' resignations are in the best interest of the university."

Terms of the resignations, including whether or not Hitch and Collins will be paid for the remaining years of their contracts, will not be revealed, Stallcup said.

Stallcup said the SMU athletic department will be managed by Dudley Parker, associate director of athletics, until an acting director is appointed. A search for successors to Hitch and Collins will begin in "due course," he said.

Pardee adds three Gambler assistants

HOUSTON (AP) — University of Houston Coach Jack Pardee named three assistants, all former members of his staff with the now-defunct Houston Gamblers.

Bruce Davis was appointed linebacker coach, Pat Thomas, secondary coach and John Jenkins offensive coordinator on Thursday.

Jim Eddy, former Gamblers defensive coordinator, will talk with Pardee and likely will be hired, the new coach said.

Davis coordinated films and scouted for the Gamblers. Thomas, a former defensive back at Texas A&M, played seven years in the Los Angeles Rams' secondary and joined the Gamblers' staff in 1983.

Jenkins coached at Arkansas and Mississippi State before becoming offensive coordinator for the Gamblers in 1984.

Pardee said he probaby will keep one or more of the current assistants but didn't know how many.

Lee stuns 4A power Lamesa, 73-69

Lady Rebs off to best start ever

By TERRY WILLIAMSON
Assistant Sports Editor

Watching basketball at Chaparral Center Friday night was like going to the ice cream parlor for a triple scoop as three Tall City teams came through with three creamy victories.

The Midland Lee boys took the most impressive victory with a 73-69 verdict over Class 4A state power Lamesa while the Lee girls belted Andrews by a 74-44 margin and the Midland High girls swarmed over Class 3A Seminole 58-29 in a real mismatch.

It was the finale that put the pins and needles into the fans' hip pockets before the night was over.

The Lee boys, now 3-5 on the season, exploded in the third quarter, outscoring the Golden Tornadoes by a 21-9 margin and once led by 20 points in the third quarter before hanging on for victory as Lamesa's Cedric Mason put on a furious shooting display to bring the Tors close, but short.

Lee's Jeff Burchard keyed the upset over the 5-2 Tors with 10 of his 16 points in the second half. But still, the Rebs had trouble with the Lamesa press while trying to hang onto a lead, something the Rebels aren't used to this year as Mason scored 12 of his game high 23 points in the fourth period.

NATURALLY, LEE coach Paul Stueckler was elated with the upset.

"We beat a good, quick team, one of the best in West Texas and probably the state and I'm awfully proud of these guys," said Stueckler. "We changed defenses on them a lot and I think that helped throw them off."

But Stueckler didn't like the way his Rebs handled the fourth quarter when they tried to slow down the tempo of the game and run time off the clock.

Stueckler joked with his team afterwards, "We're going to have a short workout tomorrow and all we're going to work on is holding the lead. I know we haven't worked much on that because I didn't know if we would ever have one or not."

Anthony Pertile also had a good game with 13 points and Bruce Marczynski had 10, eight in the first half. Nicky Sanchez and Wes Watson each dumped in nine points and did a good job on defense as Mark Van Cott and Mike Courtney both fouled out in the third period to leave the Rebels outmanned underneath the basket.

In addition to Mason, Lamesa got 12 points from Carl Pennington and 13 from Jimmy Scott, all good players.

IT WAS a rare loss for Lamesa coach Wayne Roberts, who dropped just his 23rd loss in 133 games since he became head coach at Lamesa five years ago.

The first half was physical war with the scored tied on seven different occasions while Lee led six times and Lamesa four.

The Rebels once held an eight-point lead in the first half as Sanchez and Pertile connected with unanswered points toward the end of the half, but for the most part, there wasn't a thin dime's worth of difference.

Lee might have come out of the half with more than a 36-32 lead if the Rebels hadn't been called for 16 fouls. Lamesa was tagged with only nine and the Tors outscored Lee by a 14-8 margin at the charity line in the first half.

THE LADY Rebels, off to the best start in their high school basketball history with a perfect 7-0 mark, scored its 30-point victory over the Andrews Mustangs with a ball-hawking press that produced turnovers in a tossed salad.

LaVette Wallace led the way with a 25-point outing, one of her best efforts of the year. Lee also got 12 points from Roz Eaden, who had eight points before she broke her glasses and four more with only two eyes.

Defensively, Wallace, Eaden, Regina Calicutt and Collette Dooley had good outings.

"We've never gotten off to this kind of start before," noted Lee coach Shirley Stephenson, who has coached every Lee girls team. "But the good thing is that we saw some improvement tonight and that's exciting.

"We missed a lot of shots, but produced a lot of turnovers, played good defense and made some good passes."

Mustangs pick on hapless 'Dogs

From Staff Reports

LUBBOCK — The Midland High boys' basketball team ran its losing streak to seven games here Friday night in a 66-46 loss to Lubbock Coronado, a team that is looking more impressive every day.

Coronado is now 7-1 on the year with its only loss coming in the Tall City Invitational tournament last weekend. MHS is now 1-7 after winning its season opener against Brownfield.

Jonny Grusing, Coronado's leading scorer this year, led the Mustang charge with 20 points while Browning Wood added 13.

The Bulldogs got no scoring help from big guns as Kyle Lusby led the meager 46-point attack with just 10 points. No other Bulldog was in double figures.

Coronado took a 22-14 first quarter lead, but put the game away in the second quarter, outscoring the Bulldogs by a 21-5 margin. MHS scored only 13 points in the middle two periods and a 19-10 advantage over Coronado in the fourth period wasn't near enough to erase the huge deficit created by the middle period doldrums.

Things may not get much better for the Bulldogs since they face Hobbs, N.M., next Friday at the MHS gym in their next outing. The Bulldogs have already lost to Hobbs on the road, 96-66.

Reagan County stuns Goldthwaite, 17-14

By ERIC SCHURER
Sports Writer

SAN ANGELO — With the game on the line, Reagan County coach Ronnie Reeger has gone to Scott Lipsey all season.

In the state Class 2A quarterfinals here Friday, the game was on the line and the Owls went to Lipsey and the junior quarterback came through with a 17-14 win over Goldthwaite.

The Owls, now 13-0-1, will play the winner of today's Eastland-Martin game next week for a chance to play in the state finals.

But for some fourth quarter heroics, the Owls would have called it a season against the previous unbeaten Eagles.

Trailing 14-10 with 1:15 to go, it was fourth down and a seemingly hopeless 13 yards to the goal for the Owls. But Lipsey rolled left and fired a strike to receiver Mike Townsend to propel Reagan County into next week's semifinal.

"We needed to get over that hump and Scott provides us with that spark," Reeger said. "He's the one we rally around."

Lipsey, who had been sacked for a minus-22 yards through three quarters, exploded in this final quarter for 70 net rushing yards and a winning TD pass.

"That was the most nervousness I've ever felt," Lipsey said of the fourth down play. "I just threw it hard and hoped. I thought it might bounce off his pads I threw it so hard, but I just hoped and prayed."

Owl fans must have been doing a lot of that after three quarters against Goldthwaite. Both teams were hampered by penalties, fumbles and bad breaks, but the Eagles had an 11-point lead to show for it.

Led by Douglas Holtzclaw's 172 yards, the Eagles looked to be on their way to their 30th straight game without a defeat. Instead, Goldth-

Thomas tames 'The Beast'

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — Duane Thomas, a 4½-1 underdog, stopped John "The Beast" Mugabi with a barrage of punches in the third round and won the vacant World Boxing Council super welterweight title Friday night at Caesars Palace.

Mugabi had hurt Thomas with an overhand right to the head in the second round and had landed a hard left hook to Thomas' head early in the third.

Suddenly, Thomas crashed a left hook to the body and one to the head and Mugabi almost went down. The Ugandan righted himself and was driven into the ropes by Thomas.

Mugabi turned and faced the crowd, grabbing the ropes, as Thomas continued to hit him from behind.

Referee Carlos Padilla then wrapped his arms around Mugabi and stopped the scheduled 12-round fight at 56 seconds of the third round.

It was the second upset of the night.

In an earlier fight, Greg Haugen, a 4-1 underdog, scored a 15-round majority decision over Jimmy Paul, Thomas' stablemate from the Kronk gym in Detroit, and won the International Boxing Federation lightweight title.

John 'The Beast' Mugabi covers up while leaning on the ropes after being hit by Duane Thomas in the third round of their title fight Friday.

"I thought it was awful close," Haugen said. "Anytime it's that close it usually goes in the champion's favor.

A vast majority of the writers at ringside felt Paul deserved the decision.

It was Mugabi's second defeat in a bid for a championship this year. Last March 10, he challenged Marvelous Marvin hagler for the undisputed middleweight title here and was knocked out in the 11th round.

The super welterweight title became vacant when Thomas Hearns, another Kronk fighter, relinquished it. Hearns will challenge Dennis Andries of Great Britian for the WBC light heavyweight title in February.

Hearns was at ringside, as was Sugar Ray Leonard, who will challenge Hagler here on April 6.

The loss was Mugabi's second straight by knockout after he won his first 26 pro fights by knockout.

Army has shot at Commander-in-Chief trophy

College Football

Associated Press

PHILADELPHIA — The Army and Navy football teams meet for the 87th time Saturday in a battle for bragging rights but no bowl bids.

Army, 5-5, is favored over the 3-7 Midshipmen, but favorites mean little in this nationally televised confrontation.

"The old cliche about throwing the record out is right," said Navy Coach Gary Tranquill, whose team has lost seven straight games. "Whoever is more ready to play is going to win."

Army's offensive charge is led by explosive junior quarterback Tory Crawford, who directs the Cadets' wishbone. Crawford is Army's leading rusher with 984 yards and 14 touchdowns, and the Cadets have won each of the five games in which he has rushed for more than 100 yards.

"He's capable with his athletic ability to make something out of nothing," Tranquill said.

ARMY-NAVY is one of three games on tap Saturday as the regular college season comes to a close. The others find fourth-ranked Michigan at Hawaii and Brigham Young at Air Force, with the winner to meet UCLA in the Freedom Bowl.

Navy's only edge over Army may be the battleship-sized bulk of its offensive line which outweighs Army's defensive front by more than 30 pounds per man, 260-230.

The Midshipmen have been plagued by injuries. Navy's leading rusher, junior tailback Chuck Smith, will play only part of the game because of a recurring hamstring pull. Tony Hollinger, a converted flanker, will try to replace Smith, who has 918 yards rushing and 10 touchdowns.

Tranquill said Navy will try to keep possession of the ball as long as possible.

"We feel we have to control the ball. However, I don't know how we're going to do it," he said.

Army Coach Jim Young said the Cadets' biggest test will be their size disadvantage.

"It'll be a great challenge for us," he said. "They'll try to do exactly what they did last year — control the ball and move it inside."

Last year, Navy ran over Army 17-11 behind tailback Napoleon McCallum. The victory stretched Navy's lead in the series to 41-38-7.

Because Army beat Air Force 21-11 earlier this season, a victory over Navy would give the Cadets the Commander-in-Chief's Trophy. Navy lost to Air Force 40-6.

BRIGHAM YOUNG had its string of 10 consecutive Western Athletic Conference titles snapped in last week's loss to San Diego State, but the Cougars can still earn their ninth straight bowl appearance with a victory over Air Force.

"It's nice that we still have something to shoot for," Coach LaVell Edwards said.

BYU will be without three starters who were suspended from the team this week after being charged with altering drug prescriptions — linebackers Ladd Akeo and J.C. VonColin and tight end Trevor Molini.

BYU, known for its passing attack, has had trouble recently, losing two of its last three games, and sophomore quarterback Bob Jensen will start over senior Steve Lindsley.

"We hope he'll give us a spark," Edwards said. "It wasn't all Steve's fault. Unfortunately, when your offense is not going well the quarterback draws a good deal of the blame. He also gets more than his share of the credit when things go well. We've had several problems on offense — our line has had some injuries and has never solidified, and we've been plagued by turnovers.

"We just haven't progressed offensively like we have in other years. Quarterback is part of the problem, but not all of it."

Air Force Coach Fisher DeBerry won't turn down the Freedom Bowl but would have preferred to win the WAC crown.

FIGHTS—

Mugabi, 153½, which is a half-pound under the class limit, came out winging in the first round, but missed with several big swings. Thomas, 152¼, didn't do much, but he did land a couple of jabs and one right hand.

The 26-year-old Mugabi, who lives in Tampa, Fla., wobbled Thomas with a right hand to the head one minute into the second round. The 25-year-old Thomas escaped, but took another good right before the round was over.

Mugabi, with knockout on his mind, came out gunning in the third round, then came the sudden and surprising ending.

Thomas, who earned $100,000, boosted his record to 29-2 with 21 knockouts. Mugabi's purse was $175,000.

A crowd of about 3,500 watched the two upsets in the 4,322-seat Sports Pavilion. Both fights were televised by Showtime.

Haugen, who once competed in tough man contests in bars in Alaska for $50, was busy and aggressive throughout. But Paul seemed to score the sharper puncches and appeared to be in command over the last five rounds.

However, all three judges had Haugen ahead after 10 rounds and after 15, judges Robert Levine and Art Lurie each favored Haugen. Levine saw it 144-141 and Lurie 143-142. Robert Cox called it 143-143.

The AP favored Paul 145-140.

There were no knockdowns, but both fighters were marked. Paul, 135, of Detroit, making his foirth title defense, was cut on the lower lip in the fifth round.

UT women beat Notre Dame

AUSTIN (AP) — The No. 1-ranked Texas women, sparked by 23 points and 11 rebounds from Clarissa Davis, took an easy 84-59 college basketball victory over Notre Dame Friday night in the first round of the Dr Pepper Texas Classic.

The Lady Longhorns, now 4-0, extended their winning streak to 38 games and will face No. 15 Ohio State, an 87-64 winner over Colorado earlier Friday, in Saturday's championship game.

Notre Dame, which dropped to 0-2, was led by Heidi Bunek's 14 points, followed by Diondra Toney with 12.

Five Longhorns joined Davis in double-figure scoring — Doreatha Conwell and Susan Anderson with 13 apiece, and Andrea Lloyd, Beverly Williams and Yulanda Wimbish with 11 each.

Andrews was led by Holly Luck with 14 points while Kathleen Johnson added 11. But the Mustangs fell behind 21-10 in the first quarter and could never really get into the game.

Andrews fell to 4-6 for the season and two of those losses has been to Midland teams. They also were coming off a victory over Midland High.

THE 5-2 Midland High girls had no trouble with the 2-5 Class 3A Maidens of Seminole. The Bulldogs surged to a 14-0 lead at the start of the game and held a commanding 36-15 lead at the half in a no contest match.

Brenda Rodriquez led all scorers with 22 points while Amy Cumings added 19. They alone were enough to defeat the Maidens.

In fact, Rodriquez (18) and Cumings (12) had 30 of the Bulldogs' 36 points in the first half. After that MHS coach Jane Young used her bench liberally.

"Brenda and Amy obviously had excellent outings, but Terri Cecil also played very well for us," noted Young, whose team was coming off a three-point loss to Andrews, a team they defeated by 30 points a couple of weeks ago.

"We hadn't scouted Seminole and the first thing I saw was how tall they were. I'm sure they had more rebounds than us, but our press was very effective. Overall, we did a decent job and a win is a win is a win.

Comeback athletes honored at luncheon

TAMPA, Fla. (AP) — Hurdler Edwin Moses and sprinter Evelyn Ashford, who staged dramatic comebacks this year, along with distance runner Mark Nenow, heptathlete Jackie Joyner-Kersee and jumper Mike Conley were among the winners Friday at The Athletics Congress awards luncheon.

Moses, the two-time Olympic champion and world record holder in the 400-meter intermediate hurdles, received the Harrison Dillard Award as the nation's top men's performer in the sprints and hurdles category.

Moses, sidelined with injuries throughout 1985,' came back this year to win nine straight races, extending his nine-year unbeaten streak to 118, including 103 in finals.

Ashford, who sat out nearly all of 1985 after giving birth to a daughter, was given the C.C. Jackson Award for the third time in the past eight years as the outstanding woman in running events.

During the year, Ashford had the fastest time in the world in the women's 100 meters (10.88 seconds), the fastest by an American and the second-fastest in the world in the 200 (21.97), and won the 100 in the Goodwill Games at Moscow and in the U.S. Olympic Festival at Houston.

Nenow, who broke the American record in the 10,000 meters during the summer with a clocking of 27:20.56, the fastest in the world this year, was the only double recipient at the luncheon.

He received the Glenn Cunningham Award and the Robert DeCelle Award, both presented to the nation's top distance runer.

Joyner-Kersee got the other half of the C.C. Jackson Award for the third consecutive year as the nation's top woman field events performer. During the year, Joyner-Kersee twice broke the world record in the heptathlon, becoming the first woman to reach 7,000 points. She collected 7,148 points in the Goodwill Games at Moscow and 7,161 in the Olympic Festival at Houston.

In addition, she set four American records in her four 1986 heptathlons, set the outdoor American record in the long jump (23 feet, 5½ inches), had the top hurdles time by an American (12.84) and was one of the nation's top high jumpers.

Conley, the indoor national long jump and triple jump champion in 1986, won the Jim Thorpe Award as the nation's best men's field events performer. Conley also won the triple jump in the Goodwill Games.

Rice rolls past UTSA, 84-63

HOUSTON (AP) — Greg Hines scored 17 of his game-high 32 points during a 12-minute stretch at the middle of the game as Rice outscored the University of Texas at San Antonio 37-6 and went on to take an 84-63 win in the Rice Invitational Tournament Friday night.

In the opening game of the tournament, Jimmy McCrimon led all scorers with 22 points and George Jones scored 16 points and got nine rebounds to lead the Northwestern Lousiana to a 79-70 win over the Texas Southern.

The Owls (1-3) will play Northwestern Louisiana in the championship game Saturday night.

waite finishes at 13-1. Not a bad followup to a Class A state championship in 1985.

The Eagles, leading 7-3 at the half, took control when they stopped the Owls' first possession of the second half on fourth and goal from the five-yard-line.

Goldthwaite marched 95 yards in seven plays for an imposing 14-3 margin.

It remained that way until Lipsey spun through a pair of tacklers on his way to an 11-yard touchdown run.

Instead of going for two points to pull within a tying field goal, Reagan County kicked the point after.

"I wanted to go for two, but my dad calls the plays, so I didn't argue," said Lipsey, whose father is assistant coach Charles Lipsey.

"We never second quessed it," said Reeger. "We thought we would need the points because we thought they had a good chance to score."

But three downs and a punt for Goldthwaite, Lipsey took control 75 yards from the goal line with five minutes left on the clock.

Lipsey rushed three times for 39 yards on that drive, each time picking up crucial first downs.

Roland Saldibar piled up 98 yards rushing while Junior Romero added 71 for Reagan County.

Rams' Ekern views foes like a scholar

ANAHEIM, Calif. (AP) — He spends hours and hours watching movies, taking voluminous notes like a scholar preparing for an exam.

And linebacker Carl Ekern of the Los Angeles Rams hopes his homework pays off when he looks over the line of scrimmage at the Dallas Cowboys' offense Sunday night at Anaheim Stadium.

"We get end-zone copies of film," Ekern, the Rams' defensive signal-caller, said of the opponents' game films he studies each week.

"That gives me a real chance to see what the offense is doing and, if I'm watching a team playing a 3-4 defense (like the Rams'), I can put myself in my position and read the plays.

"Actually, I think it almost might be better than practice because you're actually watching the guy you're going to be playing and watching how things develop.

"It gives you that initial read, and that's what I like to have," Ekern explained. "You do that visualization, whether you're aware of it or not. I'm aware of doing it. I try to do it."

"He does a huge amount of studying," Rams defensive coordinator Fritz Shurmur said of Ekern.

"And he's a great note-taker. He fills volumes of notebooks with every word that every coach ever says to him.

"He's a real student of the game."

SHURMER THINKS Ekern, a 6-foot-3, 222-pounder in his 10th NFL season, is an outstanding on-the-field coordinator.

"Most people would describe him as a limited athlete," Shurmur said. "He's not as fast as some, hen's not as big and strong as some.

"As a result, I think they put the knock on him (saying) he can't play as well as the rest of them.

"But that's far from the truth. Since we've been here, he's played in the neighborhood of 60 games, and I don't think you can take any linebacker in the league — All-Pro or not — and say they've played better than this guy over the long haul.

"We've won some games without him," said Shurmur, referring to Ekern's missing some games with injuries. "But I don't think there's any question that we all go into a game with a different comfort level knowing he's there than we have when he's not."

Ekern and the rest of his defensive teammates seem to get little acclaim, although Los Angeles ranks as one of the NFL's better defensive teams.

"We haven't gottten a lot of individual glory, perhaps, but our defense really isn't designed to spotlight or have people stand out like that," Ekern said.

"We've got a bunch of guys who are good football players and do a darned good job of doing their jobs."

ONE PLAYER Ekern and his teammates will be aware of Sunday night is Dallas running back Herschel Walker, who has been quoted as saying the contest might be one of the last ones he'll play.

"I might retire," the 24-year-old Walker told the Dallas Times Herald on Thursday. "I have enjoyed this season more than I thought I would. But I just know that I won't be doing this much longer. I'm serious. There is a chance I won't be back."

Team President Tex Schramm said he wasn't concerned and compared Walker to the Cowboys' head coach.

"I think he's a lot like Tom Landry. He is a Christian-thinking kind of person," Schramm said. "He believes that he will do what the Lord has planned for him.

"He's not saying this from the standpoint that he's threatening to quit," Schramm said. "I'm sure this is no threat at all."

Walker signed a five-year contract worth about $5 million with the Cowboys on Aug. 13.

Birdless Celtics win 47th straight at home

Associated Press

BOSTON — Robert Parish scored 32 points, Dennis Johnson 27 and Kevin McHale 22 Friday night as the Boston Celtics edged the Philadelphia 76ers 108-106 for their 47th consecutive Boston Garden victory.

With superstar Larry Bird watching from the bench with a strained right Achilles tendon, the Celtics outdueled Philadelphia down the stretch to take undisputed possession of the Atlantic Division lead from the 76ers.

With four minutes left, McHale broke the fourth tie of the fourth quarter, 96-96, with a turnaround jumper and followed with a running right-hander.

That put Boston ahead 100-96, and the Celtics held on although the 76ers closed the gap to 104-103 on a three-point shot by Julius Erving with just under two minutes remaining.

Nuggets 113, Nets 100

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. — Alex English scored 36 points and Bill Hanzlik came off the bench for 20 more as the Denver Nuggets snapped a four-game losing streak.

Denver had lost all eight of its previous road games this season, while the Nets share the worst record in the league with the Los Angeles Clippers at 3-14.

The Nets, who trailed by as many as 14 points in the first half, scored six straight points at the end of the third and start of the fourth periods to pull within 89-85. The last two came when Dwayne Washington hit a jumper to open the last quarter.

But Denver scored 10 of the next 14 points, including four by English, who scored 12 points in the fourth period, to open a 99-89 advantage.

Pacers 119, Hawks 113

INDIANAPOLIS — John Long scored 14 of his 24 points in the fourth quarter in a game that was disrupted twice by unruly fans.

NBA Roundup

With the game tied at 105-105 with 4:20 to play, Indiana scored five consecutive points, including three by rookie Walker Russell, for a five-point lead with 2:42 remaining.

The Hawks then began an 8-4 spurt, led by Glenn Rivers with six points, to get within 114-113 with 41 seconds to play.

Bucks 91, Bullets 87

LANDOVER, Md. — Craig Hodges converted a three-point play with 1:05 remaining to give Milwaukee the lead and Rickey Pierce added three foul shots in the final 21 seconds.

The score was tied 85-85 when Dudley Bradley stole the ball near mid-court to set up a field goal by Hodges on an assist from Terry Cummings. Fouled on the play by Terry Catledge, Hodges added the free throw.

The Bullets, who lost for only their second time in nine home games, pulled within 88-87 on two free throws by Jeff Malone before Pierce converted three of four attempts from the foul line.

Pierce scored 19 points to lead Milwaukee, which is unbeaten in eight games at home but 5-7 on the road. Cummings and Randy Breuer had 18 points each, and it was a season-high for Breuer.

Jazz 123, Knicks 96

SALT LAKE CITY — Darrell Griffith's 19 points led seven Utah players in double figures.

Karl Malone added 17 for Utah and Thurl Bailey 15, while Pat Cummings led the Knicks with 18 points and 17 rebounds and Gerald Wilkins added 16 points for New York.

Cummings and Bill Cartwright combined for 15 points in the first quarter as New York grabbed a 31-23 advantage. But Utah roared back in the second period.

The Jazz ran off 11 straight points at one point and eight in a row later in the period as Bailey, Griffith and John Stockton combined for 23 points in the quarter.

Suns 114, Bulls 112

PHOENIX, Ariz. — Walter Davis scored nine of his 31 points in the fourth quarter, including a jumper with seven seconds remaining.

Michael Jordan, the NBA's leading scorer with a 38.1-point average, scored 43 for Chicago, the fifth straight game he has scored at least 40 points. The loss was Chicago's 14th in a row at the Arizona Veterans Memorial Coliseum, dating back to March 1977.

The Bulls, down 112-108 with 1:34 to play, rallied to tie the game at 112-112 on Jordan's jumper with 1:20 left and Charles Oakley's tap-in of a miss by Jordan with 27 seconds remaining.

After Davis sank his decisive baseline jumper, Jordan's jumper was blocked out of bounds.

Gretzky assists Oilers, 4-2

Associated Press

PITTSBURGH — Wayne Gretzky set up second-period goals by Glenn Anderson and Esa Tikkanen to lead the Edmonton Oilers to a 4-2 victory over the Pittsburgh Penguins Friday night.

With three assists, Gretzky extended his scoring streak to 11 games and raised his league-leading point total to 64 in 27 games.

Anderson broke a 1-1 tie at 17:04 of the second period, taking Gretzky's pass and stuffing a backhander past Gilles Meloche for his 15th.

Tikkanen made it 3-1 at 19:09 off a two-on-one break with Gretzky. Gretzky drew Meloche out of position, then slid the puck to Tikkanen, who hit the open net for his 17th.

Canadiens 3, Red Wings 3

DETROIT — Adam Oates, who snapped a 19-game scoring drought Tuesday night, netted two — including the game-tying goal in the third period — as the Detroit Red Wings and Montreal Canadiens skated to a tie.

Montreal threatened throughout the five-minute overtime, but Detroit held on to preserve the tie.

After Stephane Richer scored his 11th goal of the year late in the second period to give Montreal a 3-2 lead, Oates picked up the puck behind the Canadiens net, circled the cage and flipped a shot past surprised Canadiens netminder Brian Hayward 6:25 into the final period to force the tie.

Rangers 6, Jets 3

WINNIPEG — Walt Poddubny scored three goals as the New York Rangers posted a victory over the Winnipeg Jets for Coach Tom Webster's first victory.

Webster, who took over for the fired Ted Sator last month, had a loss and two ties in three previous games.

TEXAS

Asked about his game-plan philosophy, he said, "I personally like to throw the ball a good bit."

Dodds called McWilliams "one of the top, young defensive coaches in the country."

But for Texas Tech officials and supporters, it was something of a nightmare. Tech Athletic Director T Jones, a former associate athletic director at Texas, made it clear this week that he didn't appreciate the Longhorns' raid on the Red Raiders' coach.

McWilliams said the decision to leave Lubbock after only one year, during which his Red Raiders were 7-4, was difficult.

"Unfortunately, when you have two loyalties and you choose one of the loyalties, unfortunately sometimes you are labelled as disloyal rather than being labelled loyal," McWilliams said.

He had four years remaining on his Tech contract, which paid him $75,000 annually. McWilliams said he would stay on as the Red Raiders' coach through their Dec. 20 bowl game against Mississippi.

Dodds said he felt no had done nothing wrong in recruiting McWilliams away from Tech.

"This is a tough time for T, and certainly a tough decision on our part to cause him to have a tough time," Dodds said.

But he added, "I've been in this conference for 5½ years, and I'm not aware of a gentlemen's agreement between conference institutions relative to recruiting coaches."

McWilliams is the first Southwest Conference head football coach to move directly to another SWC coach since W.M. "Matty" Bell switched from Texas Christian to Texas A&M in 1928.

Dodds and McWilliams predicted Tech's football program would continue to improve.

"I know that Texas Tech, knowing T Jones, will come out of this standing on their feet and they'll have a great football program, and David's one year stay there will have been a benefit to them," Dodds said.

McWilliams said it was Jones, not himself, who has led Tech's football turnaround.

The new Longhorn coach said he notified Tech players and officials Thursday that the Independence Bowl game would be his last as their coach.

"It's always difficult to leave a group of athletes because as a coach the athletes are the No. 1 important thing to you," McWilliams said.

In addition to the $91,600-a-year for the five-year contract, Dodds said McWilliams gets "a country club membership, two cars and all the love of the Texas Exes."

Jones said Tech defensive coordinator Spike Dykes was a leading candidate to replace McWilliams.

"There's one coach on the staff that we're going to interview just internally and then go on from there," he said, adding that others were interested.

"We've had a minimum of 10 calls on my desk. I'm sorry I can't tell you who they are," Jones said.

He said it was still unknown what would happen with McWilliams' assistants, such as John Mize and Jack Kaiser, who followed McWilliams to Lubbock from Austin a year ago.

"I am sure we would like to keep some and there are some I'm sure that David would like to take with him," Jones said.

During a news conference, Collins said he was not asked to resign and decided to quit after talking it over with his wife. He said that recruiting would have been difficult under the circumstances.

"My plans are to continue coaching," Collins said. He said he had met with his players just before the news conference and told them, "Tough times don't last. Tough people do."

In five years at SMU, Collins posted a 43-14-1 record, including a 6-5 mark in 1986. The Mustangs were 2-1 in bowl games under Collins, including a victory in the 1983 Cotton Bowl.

Hitch, who also said he was not asked to resign, was asked if the resignations could be interpreted as an admission of guilt regarding possible NCAA rules violations.

"It's not what we had in mind, but there's still something to look forward to," said DeBerry, whose team has lost three of its last four games. "We'll be playing on national television with a chance to go to a postseason game. It's a fitting climax to the end of the season."

MEANWHILE, THE NCAA Divisions I-AA, II and III playoffs continue.

The quarterfinals of the Division I-AA tournament find Arkansas State, 10-1-1, at Delaware, 9-3; Nicholls State, 10-2, at defending champion Georgia Southern, 10-2; Tennessee State, 10-1-1, at Nevada-Reno, 12-0; and Eastern Kentucky, 9-2-1, at Eastern Illinois, 11-1.

From Wire Reports

SPRINGFIELD, Ill. — Chicago's hopes of keeping the White Sox got a boost Friday when the Illinois House made a sudden turnabout and gave final approval to a $120 million plan for a new 45,000-seat baseball stadium in the city.

The House initially rejected the measure, falling six votes short of the 60 votes needed for passage. But on a second vote 90 minutes later, the bill mustered 64 "yes" votes against 33 voting "no."

Hours earlier the plan, hashed out by Gov. James R. Thompson and Chicago Mayor Harold Washington, squeaked through the Senate with 30 "yes" votes — the minimum needed for passage.

The AL team's owners had suggested they might move to another city or state if Chicago didn't find a replacement for 76-year-old Comiskey Park, the oldest stadium in the major leagues.

Principal owners Eddie Einhorn and Jerry Reinsdorf contend Comiskey Park is too expensive to operate and maintain. They had explored the possibility of building a new stadium in the Chicago suburb of Addison, but met with a lukewarm response from residents.

Current plans call for construction of an open-air stadium in a parking lot adjacent to Comiskey Park on Chicago's South Side. The stadium itself is expected to cost between $80 million and $85 million, with additional money going for land and other related expenses...

Howser was expected to be hospitalized for four or five days before returning to Kansas City...

BOSTON — Shares in the Boston Celtics traded heavily on the New York and Boston exchanges in the stock's first day in the marketplace.

All 2.6 million shares offered by the championship basketball team were sold out after the Securities and Exchange Commission gave the go-ahead for the sale Thursday.

About 806,900 shares, or nearly one-third of the total, changed hands in late trading Thursday on the NYSE and the stock closed at 18⅜, down from the initial sale price of 18½ a share...

Gomez edges Noah in Masters' semis

NEW YORK (AP) — Ecuador's Andres Gomez edged Yannick Noah 7-6, 7-6 Friday night, boosting Sweden's Stefan Edberg into the semifinals of the $500,000 Masters tennis tournament.

Edberg, despite losing Friday, joined top-seeded Ivan Lendl of Czechoslovakia, West Germany's Boris Becker and Sweden's Mats Wilander in the "Final Four" of this season-ending event. Thus, Sunday's semifinals will feature the top four ranked players in the world.

Earlier Friday, Becker cooled off a blazing Henri Leconte of France 0-6, 6-1, 6-1, and Lendl stopped Edberg 6-3, 6-4.

Lendl, Becker and Wilander have 2-0 records in the round-robin portion of the eight-man event, while Edberg is 2-1. Until Gomez's victory, Noah had a mathematical chance of gaining a semifinal spot.

The round-robin will be completed Saturday night when Leconte plays Joakim Nystrom, Lendl faces Noah and Becker meets Wilander.

The title will be decided Monday night, with the champion earning $100,000.

Each of the eight players received $10,000 for qualifying for the event, with $20,000 going to the winner of each round-robin match. The winning semifinalists will receive $40,000 each.

Gomez won both tiebreakers by 7-4 scores, although Noah had his chances. The left-hander from Ecuador fought off four set points in the 10th game and two in the 12th to send the second set into the tiebreaker.

Noah was leading 5-2 in the second set when he became ill and had to be attended to at the side of the court.

"I had a bad cheeseburger," he later said.

After that, Noah was able to win only one more game, and that after Gomez had pulled even.

The Lendl-Edberg match had a strange ending. Although Lendl had two service breaks in wrapping up the first set, the second set was battled on even terms until the 10th and final game.

Then, with Edberg leading 30-15 on his own serve, Lendl pulled even when Edberg hit a forehand volley long. The Swede then committed his first double-fault of the night, putting Lendl one point away from victory.

Edberg double-faulted again to close out the 75-minute match played on the Supreme Court at Madison Square Garden.

"That's not the way you'd like to end the match," Edberg said. "On the first one I didn't concentrate, and on the second I was just a little too long."

Leconte was perfection in the first 22 minutes of his match against Becker. That's how long it took for the French left-hander to zap through the first six games, hitting winners from all over the court.

He also was aided by the fact Becker couldn't find the court with his volleys. Nine times the second-seeded teen-ager came to the net. Eight times he misfired, including one easy overhead that he buried in to the bottom of the net.

SUN CITY, South Africa (AP) — West German Bernhard Langer birdied the 18th hole to gain a share of the second-round lead Friday with Britain's Howard Clark at the halfway point in the Sun City Million Dollar Golf Challenge.

Langer, who carded a four-under-par 68, and Clark, who shot a 69, stood six under at 138 in the battle for the $300,000 first prize.

Langer, the 1985 Masters champion, took the lead with a 13-foot putt.

Inkster, Purtzer match mark to take JCP lead

LARGO, Fla. (AP) — Juli Inkster and Tom Purtzer birdied the final hole Friday to finish with a 3-under-par 69 and take a one-stroke lead over Val Skinner and Mike Hulbert after two rounds of the $650,000 J.C. Penney Classic.

The leaders, who equaled a tournament record on Thursday when they shot a 61, started the day with a four-shot lead over Skinner-Hulbert and three other teams.

They struggled early on the front nine of the 6,957-yard North course at Bardmoor Country Club, however, and needed Inkster's 12-foot putt on the par 5, 573-yard No. 18 to regain sole possession of first place.

Inkster-Purzter, playing together here for the fourth straight year, came on strong after an eagle on the par 5, 527-yard eighth hole enabled the team to overcome a bogey on No. 4.

The tandem added three birdies on the back nine and finished the day with a 36-hole total of 14-under-par 130.

Skinner and Hulbert moved into contention with a second-round 66 that featured six birdies, an eagle and two bogeys and left them with a 13-under 131 total. Lori Garbacz and Craig Stadler, who have finished second in the 72-hole event the past two years, shot a 9-under 63 to take third at 132.

Debbie Massey-Mark McCumber followed at 133, three strokes behind the leaders, and 1980 J.C. Penney champs Nancy Lopez and Curtis Strange were among four teams four shots back at 134.

"It's real tough to come back after a round like we had Thursday because realistically you know you're not going to play as well again," Purtzer said.

"We tightened up the race a little bit, but I really feel like we hit the ball as well as we did the day before," he added. "That was a big test for us."

Chilly temperatures and tricky morning winds affected the leaders early in the round. A bad chip by Inkster led to the bogey on No. 4, but she made up for the mistake when she dropped a 12-foot putt for the eagle on No. 8.

Inkster-Purtzer picked up another stroke with a birdie on No. 10, but lost it when the team three-putted from 40 feet for bogey on No. 12. Undaunted, Inkster tapped in a 3-footer for birdie on the next hole to regain a share of the lead with five holes left.

"We had a lot of tough putts, but we had a lot of makeable putts too," said Inkster, winner of four LPGA tournaments this season. "The difference was they weren't falling.

Davis guides Miners to easy win over HSU

EL PASO (AP) — Antonio Davis led six Texas-El Paso players in double figures with 15 points as the Miners defeated Hardin-Simmons University 80-65 Friday night in the opening game of the Metro Mobile basketball tournament.

Appalachian State and Pan American met later, with the winner scheduled to play UTEP for the tournament championship on Saturday and the loser meeting HSU for consolation.

Texas-El Paso improved to 3-1 with the victory, and HSU fell to 1-1.

UTEP guard Tim Hardaway scored seven points in the first 10 minutes to pace his team to a 21-10 lead. By halftime, the lead had widened to 37-24.

In a holdover from the Old West, cowboys round up cattle from the Inyo National Forest in the Sierra Nevada and drive them to low-lying grasslands before winter snows set in. Here, a herd beats a dusty trail across Templeton Meadow.

Head 'em up...

BROWN COW CAMP, CALIF. — It was still dark as a dozen cowboys rode out of the forest and across the frosty meadow. Ice-bright stars glinted in the black sky and coyotes yapped and howled from a nearby ridge, signaling that dawn was not far off.

Fall was quickly turning to winter in the southern Sierra Nevada and the riders — cold faces tucked deep into the folds of their winter coats — were in a hurry. They had to be in Ramshaw Meadows by daylight to gather the Double Circle L cattle for the drive out of the mountains.

With the summer grazing season in the Inyo National Forest at an end, cattleman John Lacey's crew had to get hundreds of cows and their fat calves safely out of the high country and into the low-lying grasslands of the Owens Valley before snowstorms trapped them.

The 30-mile, four day cattle drive — oldest, largest and longest in the state, according to the California Cattlemen's Association — is a holdover from the Old west. It starts in the large meadows of the Golden Trout Wilderness at the north end of the Kern Plateau, passes over the Sierra crest and winds down through precipitous canyons, ending at the Lacey ranch near the town of Olacha, nearly 200 miles north of Los Angeles.

Because the summer range that Lacey leases from the government is in the wilderness, there are no roads. Helicopters, trucks or other modern equipment are prohibited and the Lacey cowboys, among them volunteers who jump at the chance to ride long hours, drink whiskey and tell tall tales, punch cows the old-fashioned way, on horseback. The two cow camps — log cabins and pole corrals in Brown and Templeton Meadows — are supplied by mule trains just as they were in the 1880's

Up here cowboys still wear pistols, chew tobacco and drink whiskey early and late. They roll out of their bedrolls long before daylight and put in long hours gathering and herding cattle over timbered mountains and through icy streams, just as Lacey cowhands have done for 100 years.

John Lacey's grandfather began running cattle in the Sierra in the 1880's. This past summer John's son, Mark, 21, spent the summer working on the high public ranges leased by his father before returning to his senior year at California Polytechnic State University, San Luis Obispo. The fourth-generation Lacey on this range, Mark, one day will take over from his 49-year-old father.

But Mark Lacey may not always be able to range the family's herds in the high country. That right could be canceled as a result of a controversy over how best to protect golden trout, the small, colorful fish for which this wilderness was named. Goldens — the official California state fish — are found naturally only on the north end of the Kern Plateau. Preliminary studies indicate that the cattle grazing in the meadows and watering in the streams may be damaging the stream-side ecosystems and the fish's habitat, according to biologists from the California Department of Fish and Game and U.S. Forest Service range managers. If further studies prove this to be true, cattle may no longer be allowed to graze in this 300,000-acre wilderness, they say.

Five ranches have forest allotments to graze a total of 2,100 cows on the Kern Plateau. For this right they pay $1.35 a month per cow; the calves running at their mothers' side are not counted or charged. The Lacey permit is for 627 cows, largest on the plateau, and his 48,000-acre ranch allotment is the most critical because it lies all within the wilderness boundaries.

Talk of the government studies angers Lacey. As for stream-side damage, he snaps, "Nonsense...I've been in here since I was 9 year old, there's not a damn bit of difference now. ...Those banks are sandy, they've been caving off for a hundred years."

Watching Lacey work on horseback, there is no way to tell that this lean, rawhide tough cowman lost his right leg in a 1969 accident and wears an articial limb. Nothing seems to slow him down, not even bitter cold.

On the first morning of the drive, a thermometer outside the log cabin registered 14 degrees as the cowboys awoke at 4:10 a.m. to the sounds of the cook rattling around the wood stove whipping up a huge breakfast of scrambled eggs, bacon, potatoes, biscuits and gravy.

Before first light, breakfast was over, the horses were saddled and the crew was on the trail to Ramshaw Meadows, 11 freezing miles distant. Two hours later, just as the first warming rays of the sun peeked through the trees, Lacey jumped his horse across Strawberry Creek and reined in.

Two by two he sent his riders up into the side canyons and timbered ridges. "Gather everything you see and head it down this way; we'll meet over there," he said, pointing across the wide meadow to a rocky nob. For the next several hours cowboys combed the country, starting the cattle out of the brush into the meadow.

Slowly the big herd took shape and the sound of 1,200 lowing cows and bawling calves filled their air. Cowpunchers yelled and whistled. Popping ropes on their leather chaps, shoving the herd along, moving it south toward Templeton Mountain five miles away.

By mid-afternoon the cattle trailed across Templeton Meadow and into a large, fenced holding field for the night. Tired and hungry, the crew headed back to Brown Meadow and the cow camp, an hour's ride away. The cook had the coffee pot on and hot soup and sandwiches were ready. While some wolfed down their belated lunch, others lined up around the big outdoor fire pit, sipping bourbon and spinning yarns while they waited their turn for a hot shower.

As the men stood by the fire, a horse in the pasture squealed and kicked at another horse. There was the sound of a heavy hoof striking bone. A buckskin mare named Annie, one of Lacey's favorite mounts, tried to limp out of the fray but couldn't move because the long bone in her right rear leg has been snapped.

"Her leg's broke!" yelled Harold (Brud) Eade, a cattle buyer and Fresno County rancher, Eade, grabbed a a .22 caliber pistol and headed into the pasture, followed by Lacey. It took four shots to put the animal out of its misery and the suddenness of what had happened cast gloom over the camp.

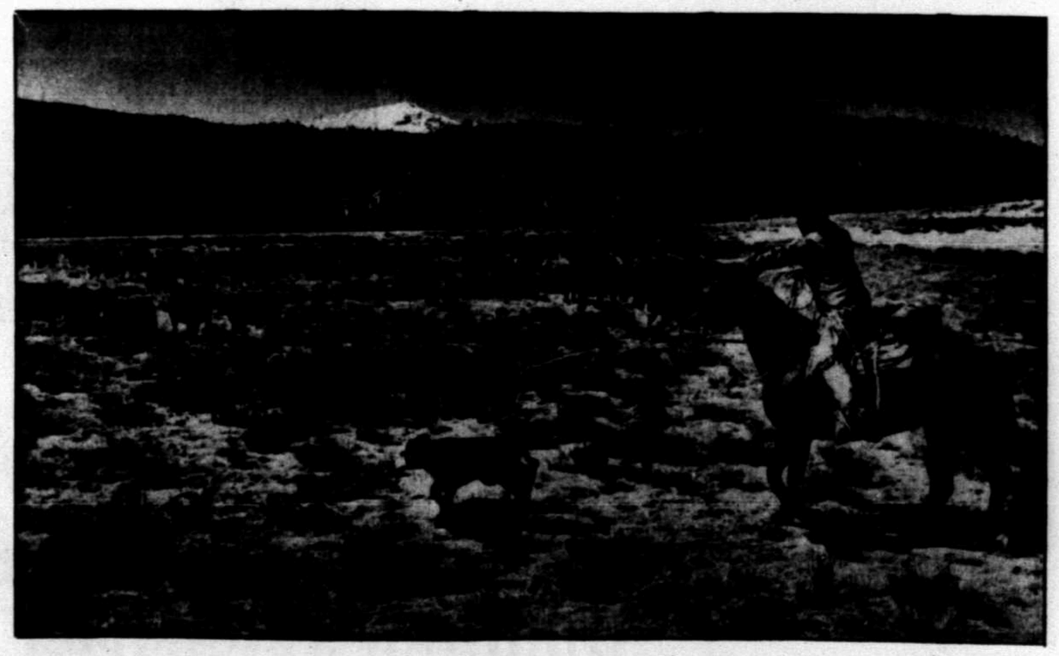
On the second day of the drive, as the weather remained clear and cold, the cattle were moved from Templeton to Brown Meadow and turned into a 40-acre field. Back in camp, all the hands kept an eye on the weather.

This was to be the last night at the Brown Cow Camp. Lacey and two of his men packed up all of the extra gear and hauled it by mule seven miles over the ridge to another cabin where the crew was to stay the next night. Before they got back to Brown Meadow it was snowing hard.

On the third day, the herd, well trained to travel now, skirted the shoulder of Brown Mountain and dropped into Menache Meadow, then was turned east up through the canyons to Summit Meadow just short of Olacha Pass. It snowed most of the day and, even bundled in down coats and yellow slickers, the cowboys were cold. Even fleece-lined stirrup covers couldn't keep their toes warm.

The final day of the drive — up over 9,300-foot Olancha Pass and down into the steep, rocky canyons — is always the most dangerous. A horse or cow can stumble and fall hundreds of feet. Once the cattle start down the canyon, there is no way to stop them. All the cowboys could do on this day was keep them from "running out" over the canyon sides and escaping into another canyon.

By 5 p.m. Friday, Oct.3, the long line of cows and calves reached Olacha and were turned into the big fields across U.S. 395. The drive was over.



Cattleman John Lacey, above, surveys his herd as cowboys drive the cattle through Templeton Meadow. In a cattle drive in the southern Sierra Nevada in California, foreman Danny Torres, left, ropes a calf that was unable to keep up. He later puts the calf on his saddle and gives it a ride.

NCAA slaps penalties on Ole Miss football

OXFORD, Miss. (AP) — The University of Mississippi football program was hit Friday with a one-year suspension from postseason play and television and a pair of Rebel players were declared ineligible by the NCAA.

In addition, the university was ordered to cut its scholarships by 10 athletes during the period. Ole Miss will be allowed to offer only 20 rather than the usual 30.

Ole Miss also will not be allowed to conduct its own football camp next summer or in 1988.

The sanctions were announced at a campus news conference by Ole Miss Chancellor Gerald Turner, who said he school would not appeal the sanctions against the program.

"I'm embarrassed for what has happened and apologize to all," said Athletic Director Warner Alford. "This institution has never been on probation before and we are going to work to see that we are never on probation again."

Suspended were standout wide receiver J.R Ambrose and reserve running back Johnny Boatman. If the suspensions stand, they would be ineligible to play in the Rebels Dec. 20 Independence Bowl game against Texas Tech.

Turner said the suspensions of the players would be appealed.

Under the sanctions, Ole Miss will be barred from television during the 1987 season and would be ineligble for post-season play.

The NCAA actually had imposed a two-year penaltiy but suspended one year, saying the school did not have a history of violations and had cooperated in uncovering the infractions.

Denton State School clothed by hand of special volunteer

By LUANN STAFFORD

DENTON (AP)— Sue Burt holds up her left hand to demonstrate how it closes only halfway. "I don't have grip in my hand," she explains in rapid, broken English. Her fingers, drawn downward, don't quite touch her palm.

The hand she holds aloft is scarred, the result of a bad burn. The skin on top wrinkles like a delicate morning glory that has shut itself against the sun's heat.

In a way, her hand is symbolic of her heart: It is never closed to those who need it most.

And to Sue Burt, the most needy are the clients of the Denton State School, to whom she donates thousands of dollars worth of clothing and countless hours of her time as a volunteer every year.

Since 1980, Mrs. Burt has given between $8,000 and $16,000 of brand-new clothing annually to the school. She buys the clothes herself, usually when she goes to market to buy for her Denton stores, Sue's Alterations & Factory Outlet and Sue's Formal Wear.

A former Denton State School employee, Mrs. Burt knows the school's needs.

"I work there for 14 and a half years. I know what they need. You can't know how pitiful it is — they need help. Sometimes I cry. Some of them have no clothing."

The school received a van-load of clothes — mostly blue jeans and even a few formals — worth close to $16,000 last month. The clothes will be distributed to the school's residents.

One of the stipulations Mrs. Burt puts on the clothes is that they not be resold at the school's token store. "I keep a record of how many I give," she said. "I give whatever I can afford."

Mrs. Burt came to the United States from Tokyo about 27 years ago. Her first job was at the state school, where, she said, she preferred to work with the "wild ones."

"No one wants them, but I do. I can handle them. They know who loves them," she said.

She remembered asking the doctors to give her three months to help a client who refused to eat or walk. "I cried and I prayed. I told the doctors I want to help this child."

In less than three months, she said, her client was eating and walking. "I teased her (to get her to walk and eat)," she said.

Although she no longer works directly with the clients, Mrs. Burt still helps the school by volunteering to do any sewing or alterations that are needed. She has been a seamstress for 35 years.

Her devotion to the school and its clients is evident when she talks about them. After describing her work there or talking about a particular client, she would often end by saying, "I love working there. I just love them." And she added once, "And they're crazy about me, too."

Described as a dynamo by her friends, Mrs. Burt almost lost her ability to work, or do much of anything, after she was caught in a fire that destroyed her home several years ago. She spent more than a year in the hospital and has returned many times since for skin grafts and treatment.

But even that couldn't topple her indomitable spirit and drive to help others. Says her friend and neighbor, Ruth Tompkins, who is a member of the volunteer council at the school, "She functions on the love in her heart."

A wealthy Easterner, wanting to oudo his Texas cousin in sending a gift to his grandmother, purchased a Zirkah bird. He paid $25,000 for the bird that could speak five languages and sin three aria. With great excitment he called her the day after Christmas. "How did you like the Zirkah bird?" he asked. "It was delicious," she responded. How often our gifts are misunderstood!

Don't misunderstand the greatest gift ever given. Worship with us this Christmas season.

TRANQUIL MINDS

There may be a tendency to confuse tranquility with the popular tranquilizers. There is, of course, a great difference.

Tranquilizers are sometimes prescribed to soothe a troubled mind or body, but tranquility of the mind comes through the calm peace that is realized when one's life is so attuned to God's will that there is neither time nor space to allow frustration and confusion to invade the inner spirit of the soul.

A tranquil mind is not an inactive one, and it is never a closed door, but rather an open door to more abundant blessings with an ever faithful assurance that God has even more blessings in store for us.

When we are at peace with our maker, we are capable of inviting tranquility to enter and live within us; we seek His will quietly with the knowledge that He never fails us.

Your church or synagogue offers an opportunity for this serenity.

Pope John Paul II gives the ring of office to Cardinal John O'Connor during a pentecostal mass in Rome in May, 1985. O'Connor heads the fourth-largest diocese in the United States.

'Hot water' keeps Cardinal O'Connor clean

EDITOR'S NOTE — Few outside the Roman Catholic Church knew much about John J. O'Connor until he moved from Scranton, Pa., to New York to take over the nation's fourth-largest diocese and become a cardinal. Since that time he has been much in the public eye as an outspoken traditionalist and a churchman on the same wavelength with the pope.

RELIGION

By HUGH A. MULLIGAN

NEW YORK (AP) — In the city that never sleeps, the voice of the cardinal is heard at 6:25 a.m. on WMCA radio, delivering a one-minute moral wake-up call that always begins:

"Good morning, good people."

But in "The Power House," the archbishop's residence on Madison Avenue where he has restored much of the old clout, at least for making headlines, John J. O'Connor has been awake for several hours. Dawn had not yet filtered through the stained-glass windows of his cluttered third floor study when he poured himself another cup of instant coffee from the hot plate in the corner. Between spoonfuls of raisin bran, he began studying a pile of reports for a Vatican commission meeting in Rome and quickly skimmed the early edition of the New York papers to see if he was in hot water anywhere on the political burner.

"Our John," one of his seminary classmates confides, "is like one of his favorite authors, G.K. Chesterton. He doesn't mind being in hot water; it keeps him clean."

Since arriving from Scranton, Pa., less than three years ago with a "Right to Life" rosette in his left lapel and an "I Love New York" button in the other, the former Navy chaplain who thought he left combat behind in Vietnam has been involved in some memorable and still smoldering battles on a wide moral front, while captivating New Yorkers with his high visibility, often in crazy hats, his easy humor, and a formidable work schedule that always includes a visit to some hospital ward or dropping by a police precinct unannounced just to say hello and flash that shy Bing Crosby smile right out of "Going My Way."

To insure that the flock is going his way on traditional Catholic teachings, this shepherd of the country's fourth largest diocese has clashed with Mayor Ed Koch over gay rights, with Gov. Mario Cuomo and Democratic vice presidential candidate Geraldine Ferraro over the duties of a Catholic politician on the abortion issue, with Cuomo and other public figures over a diocesan directive barring from parish events speakers in public disagreement with church teachings.

"J.J.," as he is familiarly referred to by staff associates who still haven't grown used to the incoming flak after the placid years under low-profile Cardinal Terence Cooke, stirred other headline furors by comparing "the killing of 4,000 unborn babies a day in the United States to the Holocaust," by standing up for S.R.O., Manhattan's single room occupancy hotels, against the onslaught of co-op gentrification; by urging President Reagan, with whom he is often in outspoken agreement on traditional values, not to visit the cemetery with the S.S. graves at Bitburg, West Germany, and writing a consoling letter to a Jewish family trying to explain why some of his priest colleagues had helped post bail for a former altar boy accused of the Central Park sex murder of their daughter.

And the new red hat on Madison Avenue shocked old-line pastors by wondering out loud if there might be a better way than bingo to keep the parochial schools running.

His willingness to speak the church's mind, clearly and without the tut-tut approach of clerics more eager to please than proclaim, has made him a favorite with the pope, with whom he now rates the private two-hour lunch and the affectionate greeting, "I welcome the archbishop of the capital of the world."

At a time when the Vatican is under fire from liberal American Catholics for removing theologian Charles Curran from Catholic University and stripping Seattle archbishop Raymond Hunthausen of much of his authority, O'Connor's unswerving orthodoxy and firmness toward dissent fall like manna on St. Peter's Square.

Besides being on the same wavelength with the pontiff in striving to restore clarity to church teachings after the confusion and liturgical upheavals that followed Vatican II, John O'Connor seems to be cut from the same clerical cloth: A charming, dynamic, conservative in theology but liberal on social concerns, at ease with the media, ready to take unpopular stands, blue-eyed and handsome with an athletic build that belies at least by a decade his approaching 67th birthday (Jan.15).

His get-acquainted trips through an archdiocese that extends 165 miles upstate and covers 10 counties took on the aura of papal pilgrimages. For the Staten Island visit, the faithful chartered a ferryboat and cheering crowds lined the route of his motorcade. Like the pope, he is fond of music and jokes, popular with young people, and is a tireless jet-set missionary who in his 27 years in the Navy already had seen the world from Korea to the South Pole. But since coming to New York he has worn out his entourage and the press corps on trips to Northern Ireland, Haiti, Ethiopia, Nicaragua and Lebanon.

"He's on the go from 6 a.m. to midnight, surrounded by unshaven priests," says CBS radio correspondent Rich Lamb, a regular on the O'Connor beat. "He's a real insomniac. In the middle of the night, you find him sitting at a table with a bowl of cereal, reading or writing."

The cardinal, who can preach and hear confessions in French, German and Italian, set out to cram Spanish under his miter with a five-week crash course and an 11-day total immersion program in Puerto Rico to reach out to New York's large Hispanic population.

Normally the cardinal celebrates Mass and preaches at 8 a.m. on weekday mornings at St. Patrick's Cathedral, and at 10:15 on Sundays, with cable TV coverage to the hospitals and nursing homes. But today he is keeping a promise made months ago to visit the Bedford Hills Correctional Facility, the state's maximum security prison for women.

As the Rev. Chris Maloney, his secretary, wheeled around the potholes and past the rusting carcasses of cars abandoned along the parkway, the burnt-out tenements of Harlem and the South Bronx gave way to the high-rise apartments and condominum developments of lower Westchester. The cardinal was reminded of another lingering difference of opinion with City Hall.

"Every time a home or apartment is demolished and ordinary people are driven out," he says with an eye on the changing skyline, "this not only leaves some of our parishes desolate but impacts on our school system. You're not going to find families with a half-dozen kids buying condominiums in Trump Towers."

'Loving parental communication' can counter seduction of cults

By MALCOLM RITTER

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Happy and loving communication from parents can counter the seductive "love bombing" of cults and encourage sons or daughters to leave such groups, a psychiatrist says.

"The most important thing is for the family to retain contact with the cult member," said Dr. David Halperin, psychiatric supervisor for a cult hot line and clinic run by the Jewish Board of Family and Children's Services in New York.

Efforts to improve family relationships, such as through family therapy, also may encourage the cult member to leave the group or to reduce its influence on his or her life, Halperin said.

He spoke in an interview Sunday after discussing cults at the annual meeting of the American Academy of Psychiatry and the Law.

Cult members often come from families that give few expressions of unqualified love, Halperin said. In contrast, cults can lure members with "love bombing," an unqualified approval that can be "enormously seductive," he said.

To counter that, families can get together with the cult member and express their love with no strings attached, he said. "I think for many people this becomes decisive" about one's future with the cult, Halperin said.

Keeping contact with a cult member can be difficult if the group discourages it, or the person responds to virtually any conversation with slogans or catch phrases, Halperin said.

In the face of such obstacles, the family often "finally says forget it...and just simply walks away from the situation," he said.

But if the family does that, it leaves the person with only the cult as a contact, he said.

Rather than giving up, the family should try to understand the person's concerns and why he or she joined the cult, then try to discuss that, he said.

For example, if the cult member joined in response to pressure to achieve something, such as reaching medical school, the parents' message should be that goals can be reconsidered and "we are willing to respect you and to love you," he said.

Family communication also should "focus on the positive aspects of the past, and the positive aspects of the family," he said. This is the time to talk about a fun holiday, not a family illness or business troubles, he said.

In the face of such positive messages, cult members "may feel they don't need the group in the sense of a refuge as much," he said.

Cult members often will agree to family therapy if the focus is on improving family relationships, Halperin said. But he said he is skeptical about deprogramming, in which cult members are forced into sessions of intense psychological pressure to leave the group.

Apart from violating individual freedom through involuntary sequestering, Halperin said, "if it doesn't work, you in effect have blown everything in one shot.

"I personally think that most people who would leave (a cult) after that would have left anyway."

Drama series wins awards

ST. LOUIS, MO. — Two episodes of "This is the Life," a religious drama series produced by Lutheran Television, have won top awards recently.

On Nov. 6, an episode titled "How Then Shall We Live?" won the top prize in the drama and public affairs category at the 6th annual Prized Pieces international film and video competition. On Nov. 15, an episode titled "Reprise for the Lord" won the Gold Award (first place) in the religious television category at the 29th annual International Film and Television Festival of New York.

"How Then Shall We Live" focuses on problems that arise when a white family moves into a black neighborhood. It was written by Lawrence Holben and produced by Sharon Miller.

"Reprise for the Lord," written by Shirley Hartmann, is about a gospel singer whose faith is strengthened by the testimony of a little girl whose mother died of cancer. This program was also directed by Ms. Miller.

Lutheran Television is the television ministry of the International Lutheran Laymen's League, an approximately 130,000 member volunteer organization with headquarters in St. Louis, Mo. The League also sponsors a worldwide radio ministry, "The Lutheran Hour."

Handbell concert scheduled

A.D. Players make international name for themselves

By JULIA DUIN

HOUSTON (AP) — Caught between the two worlds of Christianity and theater, the A.D. Players opened its 20th season this fall occupying a space midway between the two.

By now, the group has made an international name for itself as a Christian theater troupe. There is more than enough available taken from the ranks of eager Christian artists. But funding is hard to get, as are good scripts.

And hardest of all to acquire is recognition from the non-Chrisitan world.

A.D. Players founder Jeanette Clift George mixes the Gospel with whimsy and comes up with a piquant brew. One recent production, "Galley Proof," includes such improbabilities as a Moses with a sand bucket, a Pharoah's daughter with a Southern accent — "It's nawt much fu-un being the daw-tuh of a Pharoah," she complains — and Moses' brother, Aaron, who quotes Scripture and platitudes ad nauseum.

Ms. George says that comedy is often the only way to get a serious point across. The theater company's Christmas season, which opens Dec. 5, includes three short comedies.

"We're a theater, not a pulpit," she explained. "I feel that theater can communicate specific principles-...more easily with humor. When we laugh, we're vulnerable and very available for instruction."

A.D.'s first performance was a humorous occasion. As 12 volunteer members with no assets other than Ms. George's plays, the troupe took its first booking before a Chinese congregation that couldn't understand English. The actors nicknames themselves "A.D." for "after dinner," because they hoped to be fed prior to their performances.

Two decades and thousands of performances later, the Christian theater group operates off a $500,000 budget; employs 22 people full time; carries 680 season ticket holders; just completed its third European tour; and averages 70 percent capacity during performances in its 212-seat Grace Theater in Houston.

To make the budget stretch, each company member takes part in acting, management and production. All are professing Christians, Ms. George says, although "many weren't Christians when they came here." However, they had to maintain a lifestyle "not destructive to our programming," she adds, and attend a weekly Bible study which Ms. George teaches. Many of the company's actors and actresses say they feel called to a career in Christian — not secular — theater.

"I was going for a Broadway career and do a cattle-call routine," said actor Marion Kirby, who plays Aaron in "Galley Proof." "Then I said, 'Lord, I know this (Christian theater) is your call on my life."

"What is tender of the Lord is how he supplied all my needs...I wanted to put myself in the limelight. Now that I've put God in the limelight, I've gotten a full-time job in the theater," he said.

Full-time acting jobs are prized possessions in the theater world, and Ms. George is proud that she can offer 22 of them — a generous staff for any community theater — with six people on a waiting list for openings.

Were she to do anything differently in the theater's 20-year evolution, it would have been to organize a theater structure earlier than 1976, when she hired her first full-time staff members. In 1979, the company bought the former Grace Bible Church and saved enough money to renovate it into Grace Theater three years later.

"I'm a perfomer, so I wanted to get people up on stage," she said, "but now I see that to be a theater company of permanent residents. I should've defined our structure more specificaly: Set a five-year plan, set goals and put in a training program.

"But at the time, I didn't intend all this to come about," she added, surveying her blue-carpeted office. "The A.D. Players were to have been like a graduate degree program for Houston Baptist University," where Ms. George once taught drama.

The A.D. Players now has a board of directors, an international touring company, an internship program and a "prayer family" — a group of 200 volunteers who pray for the company. The company's support runs the gamut of Catholic and Protestant churches, and Ms. George's pastor, the Rev. H. Edwin Young of Second Baptist Church, attended "Galley Proof's" opening night.

One year, a high school offered an evening at Grace Theater, watching the A.D. Players, as an alternative to its senior prom. Still, some churches cannot wed the concepts of Christianity and entertainment in their minds, she says.

"A lot of churches are a little doubtful of the propriety of entertainment," Ms. George said. "A lot of the church community doesn't understand how an evening at the theater can be entertaining and edifying. They're ill at ease."

Theater traditionaly hasn't been a forum for evangelical Christianity, although there's no reason why it shouldn't be, she says.

"If people are concerned evangelicals, they should realize this is a good place to bring people who don't know the Lord," the actress said. "There's probably more dialogue in our lobby (during intermissions) than there is in most church halls."

On the other hand, the A.D. Players has gotten flack from the non-religious theatergoers.

"We've had people walk out because we're a Christian theater," she said. "They've even threatened suit on the grounds of moral entrapment, because we didn't state clearly that we were a Christian theater."

Ministers feel 'ill-prepared' to counsel church members

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Although church members rely heavily on counseling from their ministers when they have a problem, many pastors do not feel free to seek counseling themselves, according to a United Methodist survey.

The survey also found that many ministers are uncomfortable about counseling church members and feel ill-prepared for the task.

About 1,900 pastors responded to the survey, which was mailed to 3,000 of the 32,000 ministers in the 9.4 million-member denomination, said the Rev. James Townsend, head of the Division of Chaplains.

Of the respondents, 46 percent said they do not feel free to seek counseling, Townsend said. Only 5 percent said they would turn to their bishop. Most of the others fear such an overture would be a sign a weakness to their superiors.

Some ministers seek friendship with clergy of other denominations to "exchange gripes, unload burdens and make confessions" despite efforts by some state Methodist conferences to keep professional counselors on call for them, said the Rev. James Sewell, a Nashville minister.

Townsend said the survey calls to question whether pastors are getting the support they need from within the denomination.

"For bishops and senior clergy to say, 'We're pastors of pastors,' doesn't mean anything," said Townsend.

The survey indicated that many people turn to their pastor first for feedback "when they are not sure whether they have a problem or not," he said. "But we have very few clergypersons in our system who are trained counselors able to bring the faith dimension to the counseling experience."

The survey showed that counseling and administration create the most discomfort for clergy, who feel most prepared to preach and educate.

Study shows baby boomers back in church

New York Times News Service

NEW YORK — As they take on more traditional family roles and values, the once-rebellious older members of the "baby boom" generation are returning to churches and synagogues, a new study shows.

"We are witnessing a resurgence of religious involvement as many of the prodigal sons and daughters of the 1960s return to more active participation," said David A. Roozen, associate director of Hartford Seminary's Center for Social and Religious Research, who directed the study.

The study found that 43 percent of people born from 1945 to 1954, now ranging in age from 31 to 42, reported attending worship services three or more times a month. Polls taken among people representing the same group in the early 1970s found that only 34 percent reported attending church that frequently.

The study did not focus on the younger members of the "baby boom" group born in the 20 years that followed World War II because they were not yet 18 in the early 1970s and were not counted in the polls on which the study was based.

The study compared data from annual polls taken by the National Opinion Research Center of Chicago from 1972 to 1974 and from 1982 to 1984. The number of adults surveyed varied from 1,015 in the early 1970s to 1,124 in the early 1980s. The margin of sampling error was plus or minus four percentage points.

Roozen said in an interview Monday that the two principal reasons for the dramatic rise in religious involvement by an age group that gained an image in the 1960s as rebels against convention was the growing numbers who had become parents and a growing political and economic conservatism.

He said that many older baby boomers looked to churches and synagogues to provide their children with religious training.

"As people move into later stages of their life," he said, "they're looking to more stable, more lasting kinds of values, and they find the church supportive of that."

"Back in the 1960s, they were single, footloose and many of them were on college campuses," he continued. "Today they're married, have children, are in dual career families and the immediate realities of life they confront are totally different. They have to go to work in the morning and come home to the kids at night and that's different than having time to go on a protest march or sit around in coffee shops and talk politics. This generation is looking back with deeper appreciation for some of the things that didn't seem as relevant or jazzy during the 1960s."

The percentage of older members of this age group who never married declined from 39 percent to 16 percent over the decade and the percentage with children rose to 56 percent from 40 percent. The percentage regarding themselves as liberal fell from 44 percent to 35 percent while those regarding themselves as conservative climbed to 28 percent from 17 percent.

How to influence an 18-year-old.

MUSIC. Discuss current trends with your son as his stereo blasts away at full power. Drop the following names: "The Boss," New Edition, Rush. The rest of the time just mumble.

SPORTS CAR. So what if he can't pronounce Porsche? Give in and buy him a sports car. That will get his attention.

SPORTS. Gain his undying love by repairing the garage basketball backboard and adding overhead lighting for night games.

NEW THREADS. You've heard of "Dress for Success?" Well, today it's "Dress to Excess." Close your eyes and buy him a new wardrobe.

POST OFFICE. The post office isn't really an influence, it's a destination—within a month of every male's 18th birthday. Here he must register with Selective Service. However, some young men put off registering, and a few decide not to register at all. That's why we're making this direct appeal to you. We need you to help influence your son to register—and to do so on time. You see, registration is the law. In addition to prosecution, non-registration could mean your son is disqualifying himself for federal student loans, federal employment and job training benefits. Don't let a young man you know miss out on any federal or state benefits. Make sure he knows about registering with Selective Service. A complete registration list saves our country six vital weeks in mobilizing our manpower in a national emergency.

Selective Service Registration.

Thatcher calls on allies to back U.S. during arms deal crisis

Thatcher

LONDON (AP) — Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher called on America's European allies Friday to support the United States as it goes through a period of domestic troubles over the sale of arms to Iran, a British source said.

The British prime minister also told her 11 colleagues gathered at a summit conference of the European Community that they must demonstrate their unity during the crisis.

The source quoted Mrs. Thatcher as saying: "It is very important that at this time Europe should be seen to be working together, united, stable and constructive, given the problems that exist in the United States."

The source, who spoke on condition of anonymity, said Mrs. Thatcher was referring to "domestic difficulties" following the disclosure that the United States had sold arms to Iran and that some of the funds had gone to support the Contra rebels fighting the Marxist government in Nicaragua.

Mrs. Thatcher told the summit conference that Europe should be "supportive" of the United States, but she made no specific mention of President Reagan, the source said.

The source, who was briefing reporters, said that the remarks by Mrs. Thatcher, chairman of the conference, were "well received."

Europe's leaders have not commented publicly on the Iran crisis.

Earlier Friday, the leaders agreed to stimulate economic growth, while emphasizing their long-standing goal of removing national barriers to free trade, officials said.

A British diplomat said the leaders reached "a broad measure of agreement" to stimulate economic growth through job creation schemes, especially in small and mid-sized companies.

The EC leaders, and their foreign ministers, were due to have political discussions later at separate dinners.

Officials said the topics likely to be reviewed, include the Middle East, Afghanistan, Central America, South Africa and East-West relations.

The two-day summit began Friday with Queen Elizabeth II inviting the leaders to a lunch at Buckingham Palace. Later Mrs. Thatcher, French President Francois Mitterrand, Italian Premier Bettino Craxi, West German Chancellor Helmut Kohl and the other leaders discussed the economic issues.

The British official said they agreed on the need to stimulate economic growth and job creation by cutting red tape and taxes on companies to help reduce the ranks of the Community's 16 million jobless. The EC's average unemployment rate is about 12 percent and no significant reduction is forecast for 1987.

The leaders also agreed to move quickly to harmonize national standards to ease free trade within the EC. The EC faces a Dec. 31, 1992 deadline to complete this "internal market" project for which its member states must adopt some 300 regulations. This program is running far behind schedule.

Today, the EC leaders are scheduled to discuss joint efforts to combat terrorism, drug abuse and the spread of AIDS, or acquired immune deficiency syndrome.

Diplomatic sources said they expected the summit to reach an agreement on greater exchange of information about AIDS.

Concrete casing completed around Chernobyl reactor

MOSCOW (AP) — Tass reported Friday that the casing of reinforced concrete around the No. 4 Chernobyl nuclear reactor has been completed, a covering which scientists hope will seal off the ruined reactor "forever."

The official news agency quoted physicist Valery Legasov, among those working on the Chernobyl cleanup, as saying the work was finished, but it did not give the completion date.

Construction began in the weeks after the April 26 disaster, which blew open the reactor and released a cloud of radiation detected around the world.

"The source of radioactive danger has been sealed off forever," Tass said.

Tass indicated the system enclosing the reactor depended on a "complex engineering structure" that includes monitoring systems and a heat-exchange and ventilation mechanism.

The ruined nuclear core is radioactive and giving off heat and radiation. The cooling and monitoring systems are intended to keep track of temperature and radiation levels.

The Soviets said earlier that the basic work had been done to entomb the reactor, but that installation of the monitoring and other mechanical equipment was continuing.

Most of the power station itself has been decontaminated, Tass said, and officials are working on finishing the cleanup elsewhere in the evacuation zone, from which more than 120,000 people were removed following the accident.

No. 4 was one of four reactors at Chernobyl. Unit No. 1 is working at full capacity after being put back in operation in October, and unit No. 2 is working at 50 percent capacity, Tass said Friday.

It did not update the status of the No. 3 reactor, adjacent to No. 4. Previous reports said No. 3 was not damaged but experts were conducting tests to see if it could be put back into operation.

By official count, 31 people died as a result of the disaster, which forced evacuation of an 18-mile zone in the northern Ukraine and southern Byelorussia and caused at least $1.5 billion in damage.

The accident was blamed on plant workers who shut down safety systems to conduct an experiment that got out of control and caused a chemical explosion.

Big Ben skips beat

LONDON (AP) — Big Ben missed a chime Friday, and for Londoners it was like skipping a heartbeat.

At 6:45 a.m., when the famous clock above the Houses of Parliament should have been pealing out a melodious ding-dong-ding-dong, it left out the second ding.

Alarmed clock doctors hurried to the belfry and found that a 128-year-old rod had snapped on the bell that plays the note E in the sequence of G sharp, F sharp, E and C.

The rod was fixed with a temporary bolt, and at 9:30 a.m. Big Ben was back to normal.

Big Ben originally was the nickname given to the large, deep-toned bell that rings on the hour, but most Londoners have come to know the whole clock, with its bells and four faces, collectively as Big Ben.

"It certainly was a shock," said Adam Linford, a spokesman for the agency in charge of Big Ben.

Israeli troops kill Palestinian teen in refugee camp

JERUSALEM (AP) — Israeli troops fired on Palestinians in a refugee camp Friday, killing a 14-year-old youth and raising to three the death toll in two days of violence in the Israeli-occupied West Bank, an army spokesman said.

The spokesman, who demanded anonymity, said an army patrol fired at youths hurling rocks in the Balata refugee camp on the outskirts of Nablus, 30 miles north of Jerusalem, after the youngsters disobeyed orders to halt. The soldiers fired first in the air and then at the legs of fleeing youths, he said.

The Palestine Press Service, which monitors events in the West Bank, said the shooting came during a demonstration at the camp over the killing of two Bir Zeit university students by Israeli troops on Thursday.

The two were killed and more than 20 students were injured by gunfire and tear gas during clashes between students and soldiers on the campus of the Palestinian university, 15 miles north of Jerusalem, and at a nearby hospital in the mainly Christian town of Ramallah.

The press service identified Friday's victim as Majed Abu Dir'a, a resident of the refugee camp which houses 12,000 Palestinians.

Soldiers set up roadblocks and closed the road into the camp but allowed free movement to and from Nablus, the largest Palestinian city in the West Bank with a population of 100,000.

Israel Radio said troops later searched the camp for the stone-throwers.

Israel captured the West Bank during the 1967 Middle East war. About 800,000 Palestinians and 50,000 Jewish settlers now live there.

Israeli legislators from both left and right have demanded an investigation into the Bir Zeit shootings.

Uzi Landau, a legislator representing the right-wing Likud bloc, described Bir Zeit as "incorrigible" and asked that it be closed permanently.

The university has 2,000 students and is funded mainly by neighboring Arab countries. Israeli officials claim it is a stronghold of Palestinian nationalism.

Israeli newspapers said Thursday that Bir Zeit students were aroused by the heavy fighting now raging in Lebanon between Palestine Liberation Organization guerrillas and Amal Moslem Shiite militiamen.

Soviets say they will abide by SALT II even though U.S. has not

MOSCOW (AP) — The Kremlin said Friday it will continue to abide by SALT II treaty limits on nuclear weapons despite Washington's decision to exceed them, but it warned that the United States was making a big mistake.

The statement, carried by the official news agency Tass, also accused Washington of abandoning SALT II to help clear the way for a major U.S. arms buildup.

On Nov. 28, the United States deliberately exceeded the limits set by the treaty when it deployed a B-52 bomber capable of carrying nuclear-tipped cruise missiles, while the Navy failed to retire a missile-firing submarine.

The Kremlin called the decision a major provocation and said it violated tentative arms reduction agreements reached at the Iceland summit.

"Washington is making a big mistake," the statement said. "The exceeding of the limits set by the SALT II treaty will not strengthen U.S. security."

The Kremlin said that although the Soviet Union now has grounds to consider itself free of the treaty, it is not ready to scrap it.

"Taking into account the immense universal importance of the issue and the need to preserve the key constraint on the strategic arms race, the USSR refrains for the time being from abandoning the limitations under SALT I and SALT II," it said.

Soviet media and Foreign Ministry spokesman Gennady Gerasimov already have criticized the U.S. decision to abandon SALT II, but Friday's statement was the first official Kremlin reaction.

SALT II was signed in 1979 by former President Jimmy Carter and then-Soviet leader Leonid Brezhnev. Although Congress never ratified the treaty, both superpowers agreed to abide by its limits.

But President Reagan indicated repeatedly he did not think the treaty was in the national interest of the United States and eventually would be abrogated.

Washington has accused the Soviets of violating the treaty by developing a new intercontinental ballistic missile. The Soviets contend that the missile is merely an upgraded version of an existing weapon.

U.S. Defense Secretary Caspar W. Weinberger on Friday called the treaty a "wholly irrelevant and useless yardstick."

Weinberger, who was in Belgium to attend a NATO defense ministers meeting, said some European allies expressed regret over the U.S. decision, while others openly accused the Soviet Union of violations.

The Kremlin rejected charges of Soviet cheating and accused Washington of numerous violations.

"The decision to beef up the U.S. arsenal of strategic systems and violate the SALT II treaty has been dictated by nothing other than a desire by Washington to upset the military balance between the USSR and the United States and assure itself of military superiority," the statement said.

"These actions are fraught with serious consequences for international security," it said.

The Kremlin also charged that the U.S. now planned to scrap the 1972 Anti-Ballistic Missile treaty, or ABM, so that it can pursue its Strategic Defense Initiative, a space-based missile defense system also known as "Star Wars."

The superpowers repeatedly have accused each other of violating the ABM treaty and disagree over what kind of research and development of space-based defenses it permits.

"By means of the Star Wars program the United States wants to extend the spiral of the arms race over to outer space and to convert outer space into a military citadel and staging area for the establishment of U.S. hegemony," the statement said.

Workers search for Germans still missing after World War II

By MARK HEINRICH

LUEBECK, West Germany (AP) — Fingering through faded index cards, workers at a church-run center here are still trying to find out what happened to tens of thousands of ethnic Germans driven from Eastern Europe at the end of World War II.

About 16.6 million Germans fled or were expelled in 1945-47 by nationalist or Soviet-backed communist forces exacting retribution for years of Nazi occupation.

During that upheaval, the Heimatortskartei (Home Town Register) was set up in the Western-occupied zone of postwar Germany as a joint Protestant-Roman Catholic search service for refugees cut off from family or friends.

People asking the organization for help in tracking lost family or friends usually are trying to settle insurance claims, prove German citizenship, organize a reunion or unearth family information needed for a marriage license.

Since 1945, Heimatortskartei, or HOK, offices in seven West German cities have probed some 11 million cases of Germans believed missing or dead in Eastern Europe.

About 3 million cases remain unsolved. The HOK branch in Luebeck logged more then 80,000 requests for searches last year.

HOK files, dating to Sept. 1, 1939, list the names, original and subsequent addresses, and fate, if known, of virtually all Germans who lived in prewar Germany's eastern provinces, all now part of Poland or the Soviet Union.

Also covered are the large pre-1945 German communities in East European states such as Czechoslovakia.

Many cases remain outstanding because the Eastern lands where Germans had lived for hundreds of years have become closed societies that complicate or prevent person-to-person contacts initiated by residents of the West.

"No other people experienced this scale of expulsion, and then the Iron Curtain came down and ripped entire families apart," said Hans-Theo Christophersen, 55-year-old chief of the HOK division in this Baltic port.

"Our job is a consequence of the war tragedy. The past is still living for us — we are always confronted with the exiles," Christophersen said in an interview.

"In having to flee their homelands without advance warning, many people were unable to save the documents proving whatever they're seeking to prove today," he said.

Most HOK cases are resolved with the discovery that the person sought is dead.

The HOK was formed in 1945, Christophersen said, because church parishes were able to preserve local population records through the war.

The branch in Luebeck handles cases originating in the old German eastern provinces of Danzig-West Prussia, East Prussia and Pomerania as well as the Baltic states of Lithuania, Latvia and Estonia, which are not part of the Soviet Union. Danzig today is the Polish city of Gdansk, where the Solidarity free trade union was founded.

Christophersen recalled a typical recent inquiry from a middle-aged woman in Leverkusen, West Germany:

"She wrote, 'I just learned of your address. Is it possible for you to help me find out the fate of my two sisters? I lost track of both in 1946.'

"Our checking showed one sister living in Bavaria and the other in the GDR (East Germany).

"Another woman wrote from Wittenberg in the GDR, saying she was born in Pomerania in 1944, one of 11 children.

"She was separated from her family at a refugee camp in Berlin in 1945, and was adopted by a couple in Wittenberg. She'd had no contacts with her siblings since.

"We found six of them living in West Germany, another had emigrated to Australia," said Christophersen.

The Luebeck office's index card files, spread through about 10 rooms and connecting corridors, include a section on German prisoners-of-war in the Soviet Union.

The card catalog is supplemented by old municipal address books, one dating from 1897.

The issue of expelled Germans remains a politically volatile issue today in West Germany. Exile associations hold annual remembrance ceremonies and often attract prominent conservative speakers, including Chancellor Helmut Kohl.

An employee combs through worn, yellowing index cards of the Heimatortskartei (home-town register) in Luebeck Northern Germany.

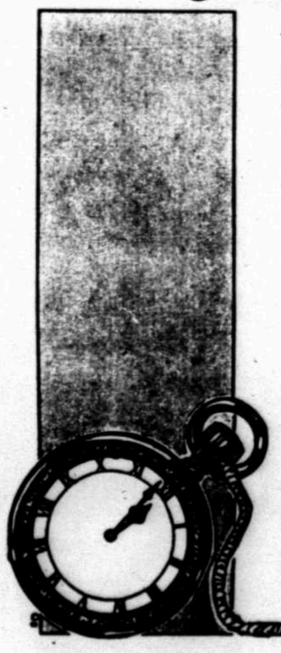
WATCHES



Mr. Sears and Mr. Roebuck got together because of a classified ad!

In the late 1800's, Richard W. Sears had a pretty good business going selling watches and needed someone to handle his watch repairs. He placed a classified ad in the newspaper and Alvah C. Roebuck got the job. That's how the nation's biggest retailer got started... through a classified ad!

If you need a good helper, try advertising in our classifieds. Who knows? You may spark the beginning of something big!

Iglesias' pets in the dog house

Iglesias

INDIAN CREEK VILLAGE, Fla. (AP) — Pop singer Julio Iglesias' dogs are, well, going to the dogs, the Village Council says.

Upset by residents' complaints that Iglesias' four Belgian pointers were getting loose and messing up their property and the country club's golf course, the council decided Wednesday to send Iglesias a warning letter.

Anna T. Gary told the council that the dogs dug in her flower beds and did "unmentionable" things in her yard. Other residents of the posh island community north of Miami Beach complained about dog holes in sand traps at the country club.

Fernan Martinez, Iglesias' news manager in Miami, apologized for the behavior of the dogs, named Natalie, Me Va, Hey and Bamboo after some of Iglesias' songs.

Iglesias will do his best to keep his dogs out of trouble, Martinez promised. The council decided further mischief will be referred to Dade County's animal control department.

Grant

TEXARKANA, Texas (AP) — Ronald Reagan could have been one of Hollywood's top leading men if it hadn't been for Errol Flynn, Cary Grant said in an interview a month before his death.

Grant, 82, who died of a stroke Nov. 29, was interviewed by the Texarkana Gazette in October while in town for his one-man show, "A Conversation with Cary Grant." A column recalling the interview was published in the newspaper on Friday.

Grant had been at the White House before his performance in Texarkana. When asked about the Reagans, he said, "We're fond of those lovely people and we visit them regularly. I was on the board of the Screen Actor's Guild when he was president of the Guild. There were negotiations with lawyers and the stage crafts, and he got a crash education in politics.

"We know him to be a very decent man who carries a heavy load on his head as president of the country. He was a very good actor, too," Grant said. "If Errol Flynn hadn't been a big star at the same studio, Reagan would have been the top leading man there."

Grant also said he wished he could die as his 95-year-old mother did: slipping into unconsciousness while drinking a cup of tea. He weakened after a rehearsal of his show in Davenport, Iowa, and died within hours.

Rogers

BOSTON (AP) — Country music star Kenny Rogers spent three hours aboard a lobster boat to film a segment for his television special "Kenny Rogers' Working America."

Decked out in blue jeans, a gray down jacket and a burgundy knit cap, Rogers did a stint Thursday on the Patti M as a stiff northeast wind swept across Boston Harbor.

Filming for the special has been done at many of Rogers' stops on his current tour, said producer Ken Yates. Rogers has concert dates in Worcester and Providence, R.I.

The lobster boat captained by 16-year fisherman Tom Morrell was picked when a researcher for the special called the Massachusetts Lobstermen's Association to ask about a ride for Rogers on a working vessel.

• • •

NEW YORK (AP) — British ice dancers Christopher Dean and Jayne Torvill had to cancel the rest of their 60-city U.S. tour because of Dean's broken wrist, but the Olympic gold medallists promised Friday to return.

Dean, 28, told reporters he tripped while leaving the ice in a Portland, Maine, rink Saturday. He said he had posed for photographers and was walking to a changing room when he fell, breaking a bone in his right wrist.

The two had performed in 10 of the 60 cities on their itinerary since beginning the tour Nov. 8. They were scheduled to complete the tour March 1.

Dean said he would rest for at least three months at home in Nottingham, England, to allow the wrist to heal before resuming skating.

Ms. Torvill, 29, said the couple had not decided whether to proceed with tentative plans to tour Europe next year but would like to do so as well as return to the United States.

Marvin

TUCSON, Ariz. (AP) — Actor Lee Marvin was in good condition Friday following intestinal surgery four days earlier, and doctors expect him to be released from the hospital next week.

After suffering abdominal pains, Marvin, 62, who has a ranch near here, was admitted to Tucson Medical Center on Nov. 18, press agent Paul Wasserman said.

Marvin underwent surgery Monday for inflammation of the colon, and Wasserman said no malignancy was found.

"The surgery was successful and he is doing well," hospital spokesman Tom Reavis said. "This is a benign condition."

The actor at first requested that his hospitalization not be disclosed but decided to release information after receiving several inquiries from reporters, Reavis said.

Marvin, who won an Oscar for his performance in "Cat Ballou" in 1962, most recently performed in "Delta Force."

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The seven children of the late actor John Wayne are suing artist Andy Warhol, alleging he illegally used Wayne's likeness in a portfolio of 10 Western images.

Named in the suit filed Wednesday in Los Angeles Superior Court are Warhol, his New York publisher and two art galleries selling the portfolio.

At issue is the inclusion of Wayne's likeness in a new 250-edition Warhol print portfolio that the artist began selling this year. One of the defendants, Fred Dorfman of the Fred Dorfman Gallery in New York, said the portfolio sells for about $15,000.

Wayne's children seek a preliminary injunction stopping further use of their father's image and name, unspecified damages and the profits the defendants have made from use of Wayne's image.

The suit was filed by Wayne Enterprises of Beverly Hills, a limited partnership headed by Michael Wayne.

NEW YORK (AP) — Christa McAuliffe, the teacher who died in the space shuttle explosion, was among four recipients of the 1986 Women of Conscience Awards presented by the National Council of Women of the United States.

Others honored in ceremonies at the United Nations on Thursday were Anne Morrow Lindbergh, writer and widow of aviator Charles Lindbergh; Daisy George, U.N. representative of the National Association of Negro Business and Professional Women; and Mildred Leet, head of the Trickle-Up Program, which provides aid to African countries.
