Gramm expects natural gas use hike

By JULIE HILLRICHS
Staff Writer

U.S. Sen. Phil Gramm declared Friday that Texas' oil-based economy is due for a major comeback if natural gas production lives up to its expectations.

In Midland at the invitation of the Permian Basin Petroluem Pioneers Association, Gramm told an audience of "old-timers" that he expects a growing demand for natural gas because of the environmental issue.

"I believe that if given a free choice, we're going to see a lot more natural gas burned. And since we're going to be producing it, Texas is going to be the big beneficiary," the Texas Republican said.

Gramm's remarks were in reference to an estimated $18 billion legislative package calling for a 10-million ton reduction in sulphur dioxide emissions and a phase-in of alternative fuels for automobiles.

"The Clean Air Act will probably become law next year," he said.

Gramm, a former economics professor at Texas A&M University, also briefed the group on the federal decontrol of natural gas prices which President Bush signed into law last July.

The senator said the legislation, which removed the limits on how much producers may charge on about a third of the nation's annual output of some 16 trillion cubic feet of gas, was long overdue.

But he added, "It's the first positive action that has happened to the petroleum industry since Jimmy Carter vilified the oil business and blamed us for all of the nation's and the world's problems."

Gramm said Bush's proposal to cut the acid rain and smog plaguing the nation is expected to be far-reaching, significantly impacting many states. West Virginia and Kentucky — two high-sulphur coal producing states — have reason for concern.

The senator said most of the criticism to the Bush plan has come from Sen. Robert Byrd, D-W.Va., who has said that any acid rain provision in the Clean Air Act would unfairly penalize his state. Byrd wants to prevent fuel switching.

Ortega ending ceasefire with Contra rebels

SAN JOSE, Costa Rica (AP) — President Bush sat down with Latin American leaders on Friday for a celebration of democracy, but the occasion was marred by Nicaraguan President Daniel Ortega's decision to end a 20-month ceasefire with the Contra rebels.

Earlier, Bush and Ortega had exchanged a "friendly" handshake before joining the other leaders gathered to celebrate a century of democracy in Costa Rica.

And Secretary of State James A. Baker said Nicaragua's leftist leader made no mention of his plans during lengthy talks with heads of 16 North and South American countries that focused on drugs, Latin American debt and eagerness to see Panama's Manuel Antonio Noriega removed from power.

"Maybe if he does intend to do that, he was too ashamed to bring it up with the other heads of state in attendance," Baker said. "But certainly it would be a step backward in the peace process."

But in between the closed-door diplomatic sessions and the dinner with fellow leaders, Ortega told a college audience that Contras had committed "savage attacks" against peasants earlier this month in a move to disrupt upcoming elections. He said he had concluded, "the cease fire could not be maintained...we have to guarantee the safety of the Nicaraguan people and the electoral process, which means we have to organize the army better and means it is unacceptable for us to disarm ourselves."

Salvadoran president Alfredo Cristiani said Ortega's decision was a "serious blow to the Central American peace plan; we should all understand that the solution isn't easy."

Word of Ortega's decision spread throughout the delegations as the leaders turned their attention from closed-door diplomacy to an evening of dining and soclializing. The two-day Costa Rican conference ends today with the dedication of a plaza marking a century of democratic government.

Host President Oscar Arias said that three hours of private talks at a resort outside town gave his Latin guests a chance to express "their preoccupations, their worries, their frustrations at their inability to give our people more prosperity, because of debt, because of war, because of an unjust international commercial system."

Baker said the talk turned to the possibility of a drug summit, Panama's Noriega — not in attendance — and foreign debt.

Councilman, firefighter bicker about proposed pay increase

By BRIAN PEARSON
Staff Writer

Midland city councilman J.D. Faircloth and fireman Brian Loose stood behind a lectern Friday and bickered about a proposed raise for police officers and firefighters.

The Midland Jaycees luncheon in Midland Center was over, but Faircloth and Loose could not resist unleashing verbal salvos at each other regarding the heated pay issue.

Rick Benton, a Midland police detective and member of the Fraternal Order of Police, also spoke at the event. But even after the three presented their views to about 40 people at the luncheon, the Jaycees apparently still were swimming in a gray area somewhere in the middle.

"It sounds like a bunch of kids up there pissed off at each other," Richard Reeve, a Jaycee and petroleum engineer, told the speakers. "The voters who were uninformed are now instead being misinformed by the statistics."

The voters will decide Nov. 7 whether police officers and firefighters get their requested 10 percent pay hike.

Jaycee Larry Montgomery, a Midland insurance agent, said it has become difficult to make a choice on the upcoming referendum.

Both sides have presented vastly different statistics comparing police and fire pay with that of departments of other cities, Montgomery said.

"I feel the City Council has dropped the ball on this one," he said. "The issue should have never gotten this far.

Suspect robs pizza restaurant

From Staff Reports

Police were just 60 seconds behind a man who robbed a restaurant late Friday of a stack of $20 bills.

The man walked into the Pizza Hut, 427 Andrews Highway, just before 9:30 p.m. and approached the counter, police Sgt. David Garcia said at the scene.

In a "low voice," the man demanded an employee give him money from the cash register. When the employee asked the man if he was kidding, "he threatened to shoot her," Garcia said.

The man left the restaurant and was last seen running away from Andrews Highway, police said. K-9 officers were called to the scene and searched the area near the restaurant, Garcia said.

Bakker will serve sentence at Minnesota prison

ROCHESTER, Minn. (AP) — Disgraced television evangelist Jim Bakker will be moved to the Federal Medical Center here to serve out his 45-year sentence for fraud and conspiracy, officials said Friday.

Bakker, who met his wife, Tammy Faye Bakker, in Minnesota, will be moved from a prison in Alabama to the prison in this southeastern Minnesota city of 60,000, center spokesman John Chreno said.

The Bakkers met while they were students at North Central Bible College in Minneapolis during the early 1960s. Mrs. Bakker grew up in International Falls on the Canadian border.

Bakker, 49, the founder of the PTL ministry, will be on the medium-security facility's work crew, but no specific assignment has been made, Chreno said.

His transfer to Rochester is permanent, although he could be transferred again, Chreno said. Bakker will serve his sentence as a member of the medical center's general population, meaning he is not being assigned to Rochester as a patient for treatment of any mental or physical illness, he said. Bakker had a breakdown during his trial.

Among the criminals at the prison are those convicted of federal crimes who need medical or psychiatric care.

Lyndon LaRouche, the political extremist and former fringe presidential candidate, is serving a 15-year sentence at the facility on mail fraud and conspiracy charges.

Bakker was convicted Oct. 5 on all 24 fraud and conspiracy counts he faced and was sentenced in Charlotte, N.C., on Tuesday, when he also was fined $500,000. He was charged with diverting $3.7 million from PTL to his personal use.

Man will be repaid for time spent in prison

ST. PAUL, Minn. (AP) — Bobby McLaughlin is about to get his due for the 6½ years he spent in "the gladiator school" and other prisons for a murder he didn't commit.

McLaughlin

But the $1.9 million award made last week by New York Court of Claims Judge Adolph Orlando will barely begin to soothe the pain.

"People think I'm winning the lottery or something," the former New York resident said from his St. Paul apartment. "Well, they owe me. If they had given me a choice, I wouldn't have gone through all this for $50 million."

Orlando awarded McLaughlin $1.5 million for "loss of liberty, mental stress, anguish and loss of reputation." The judge also ordered payment for lost wages and $225,000 in medical expenses for treatment of McLaughlin's addiction to cocaine and other drugs that stemmed from his prison experience.

"It's unlikely that he will ever survive the devastating trauma resulting from incarceration for a crime he did not commit," the judge said.

Coast Guard sleuths trace source of spills

By MARK SEAVY

GROTON, CONN. (AP) — When millions of gallons of oil blackened Alaska's Prince William Sound, the whole world knew where it came from — a jagged rip in the hull of the grounded Exxon Valdez.

But when a fisherman finds his fishing grounds befouled or a beachcomber's favorite stretch of sand is soaked with oil, it's often a mystery.

That's where the super sleuths of oil-spill investigations come in: The U.S. Coast Guard Oil Identification Laboratory.

The laboratory, often working with dissipated evidence and few clues, has helped track down those responsible for hundreds of oil spills nationwide, from one or two gallons to hundreds of thousands.

The laboratory uses sophisticated tests to identify the type of oil and pinpoint its source, a task complicated by the fact that even oils of the same weight have different chemical "fingerprints," depending on where the original crude was pumped out of the ground and how it was stored.

"It's like crime-solving in which all of the pieces of evidence have to fit together," said Martha S. Hendrick, the chief chemist and the only civilian in a lab that employs nine other marine-science technicians.

The Coast Guard was given jurisdiction for determining liability for oil spills by the Federal Water Pollution Control Act of 1972, which created a $6 million to $7 million revolving fund to cover the costs of cleanups. Additional money is collected from those found responsible for the spills.

The lab opened at the University of Connecticut's Avery Point campus in 1978, moved to Washington in 1980, and returned to the campus in 1986.

In that time, the laboratory, which has an annual budget of about $440,000, has helped investigate more than 3,000 oil spills and seen its case load grow each year amid heightened concern about the environment.

Recent spills it investigated include the 11-million-gallon spill from the Exxon tanker in March; a 288,000-gallon spill by the Greek tanker World Prodigy off Newport, R.I., on June 23; and the 306,000-gallon spill from the Uruguayan tanker Presidente off Claymont, Del., on June 24.

The lab can also help exonerate those being blamed for a spill.

Two technicians who assisted in the Alaska investigation helped save Exxon $97 million in cleanup costs when they found that several thousand gallons in haddock- and salmon-fishing grounds didn't come from the Exxon Valdez.

"We have been very busy since the Exxon Valdez incident because everyone has become much more aware of pollution by petroleum products," said Cmdr. Larry H. Gibson, 40, who has headed the laboratory for two years.

Most investigations into oil spills, however, have far fewer clues than the Exxon Valdez disaster.

In 1987, a 50- to 75-gallon spill fouled the Willamette River near Portland, Ore., leaving Coast Guard officials with a slick, but no suspects. A year later, the lab linked the spill to oil found near an intake valve on the underside of a tanker that was in dry dock for repairs. The tanker's owner agreed to pay for the cleanup.

"A lot of people are very surprised when they learn that the oil did come from their vessel or their facility and they immediately cooperate once they're shown the evidence," Gibson said. "Some other people fight it tooth and nail."

Field investigators take 4-ounce samples from the spill, along with samples from possible sources in the area.

Back at the lab, six to eight tablespoon-sized batches are tested: gas chromatography, thin-layer chromatography, fluorescence spectroscopy, infrared spectroscopy and high-performance liquid spectroscopy.

The combination of tests allows scientists to cross-check their results.

The gas chromatograph, for example, separates the chemicals that make up the oil based on their different boiling points, which in turn helps scientists determine the oil's "fingerprints," Gibson said.

"We compare the intrinsic chemical traits of the spilled oil against all of the suspects to pick out the source of the spill," he said.

Spills can consist of dozens of kinds of oil, from the lighter kerosene and jet fuels to the thick No. 6 oil used in heavy industry.

Fans let out whooping cheer as World Series resumes

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Fans stood for a moment of silence, then let out a whooping cheer Friday as the World Series resumed 10 days after a devastating earthquake.

Rescue workers threw out the first ball and the crowd joined in singing the 1936 song "San Francisco" in opening ceremonies that began with a moment of silence for those killed and injured in the quake.

"We've had enough time for mourning. Now it's time to celebrate life," said Jean Alvers, 62, who wore a yellow hard hat. "This series needs to be played. If they canceled it it would have been a lot harder to do other things."

"It was OK to be excited," said Donna Verhorst of Oakland.

The Oakland Athletics defeated the San Francisco Giants 13-7, giving the Athletics a 3-0 advantage in the best of seven series.

The first cheer went up when the scoreboard lit up with, "Welcome Back to Game 3" — and the stadium shook again, not from the quake but the roar of the fans.

Some less fortunate fans watched the game from Red Cross shelters where televisions were set up for the thousands of people left homeless.

"It takes your mind off the earthquake, and that's good for the nerves," said Winston Presley, 54, as he sat with a cluster of A's fans in the gymnasium of Oakland's Lowell Middle School.

For many, the resumption of the Bay Bridge World Series, its symbol now fractured by the quake, was a kind of therapy in the wake of the deadly tremor.

"Time heals all wounds," said Ray Torres, another fan. He and a friend, Alphonso Castaneda, had seats two rows from the top of the stadium, and Castaneda had made a banner that read, "Upper deck parachute rental."

As fans filed in, the public address system periodically said, "In the event of an aftershock, don't panic ..."

"I think it's my attempt to conquer my own fears," said Steven Walch of his decision to attend the game. Having seen Candlestick shudder and crack, he added, "I want to be at the World Series, and I don't think it's more unsafe ... than any other place. And I want to get back to my normal life."

The organizers of the game tried to help. Throwing out the first balls were 12 representatives of Bay area agencies who assisted in relief efforts.

"We've realized we need all this. Baseball can be part of this area's mental therapy," said Giants manager Roger Craig.

"Baseball is the most resilient of all American institutions," said Commissioner Fay Vincent, who announced a $1.4 million gift from baseball to earthquake relief.

Mail Vincent received from around the country after the quake urged that the series be called off, he said Friday, adding that he understood the feelings. "But I don't think there is any disrespect in going on with the World Series," he said.

Dave Stewart, starting pitcher for the Oakland Athletics, said the players have had difficulty preparing for the game.

"We've all been through a national tragedy. I'm sure I'm not alone, but the earthquake had a deep psychological effect on me," Stewart said.

San Francisco Giants outfielder Brett Butler said the game gave 62,000 fans "a chance to let out all that frustration and hurt and trauma. This is America's game. It's going to bring all of us in this area back together again."

San Francisco Mayor Art Agnos agreed. "We all need a respite," he said. "We can enjoy the World Series and still remember those we lost and those who are still affected by this tragedy."

Six people remained unaccounted for, authorities said, and the death toll rose Friday to 64, including an 88-year-old San Mateo woman who was pronounced dead of a heart attack shortly after the quake but who had not previously been listed among the dead.

Thirty-nine of those killed were in the collapse of double-decked Interstate 880 in Oakland. As demolition there continued, the search for more bodies was delayed because the road was too shaky.

In other quake developments:

■ Dockworker Buck Helm, rescued after four days in the rubble of I-880, remained in serious condition in Oakland's Highland General Hospital. He was said to be conscious most of the time.

■ Julio Berumen, the 6-year-old whose leg was amputated during rescue from the I-880 rubble, was listed in good condition and improving at Children's Hospital in Oakland. His sister Cathy, 8, was in serious but stable condition following surgery Wednesday. They lost their mother in the freeway collapse. About $48,000 has been donated to a fund for them.

■ In Santa Cruz on Friday, a wrecker's ball crashed into the imposing Cooper House, a downtown landmark and centerpiece of the heavily damaged Pacific Garden Mall. Some who watched the demolition dabbed at tears.

WEATHER SUMMARY

Skies to be partly cloudy

From Staff and Wire Reports

Skies will be partly cloudy with a chance of afternoon thunderstorms today, according to National Weather Service forecasters at Midland International Airport.

Saturday will be cloudy in the morning, becoming partly cloudy with a 20 percent chance of afternoon thunderstorms. The high will be in the upper 70s. Winds will be from the south 10 to 20 mph and gusty.

Tonight will be partly cloudy with a low in the mid-50s.

Sunday will be partly cloudy with a high in the upper 70s.

Friday's high of 69 was more than 20 degrees cooler than the record high of 90, which was set last year. The record low of 34, which was set in 1980, was 18 degrees cooler than Friday's low of 52.

STATE

Mostly cloudy skies are predicted for west and central Texas, with a chance of showers and thundershowers Saturday. Partly cloudy skies are expected elsewhere, according to the National Weather Service.

Highs Saturday will range from the 70s in north Texas and will probably reach the 80s in western and southern parts of the state.

South to southeasterly winds will likely blow at speeds between 10 to 15 mph with some gusts exceeding 30 mph over parts of northwest Texas.

Friday afternoon showers and thunderstorms swept across parts of Central and West Texas ahead of a stationary front that extended from the Panhandle to near the Big Bend area.

Temperatures were mostly in the 70s to lower 80s with some 60s reported in rain cooled areas of the Permian Basin. Extremes at 3 p.m. ranged from 63 degrees at Midland to 88 degrees at McAllen.

NATION

Snow fell across the mountains of the Northwest on Friday while most of the East continued to bask in unseasonably warm weather.

In Idaho, 3 inches of snow fell during the morning in the mountains east of Grangeville, and an inch of new snow covered the ground at Sun Valley and Stanley.

Winter storm warnings were posted into the night for the mountains of east central and northern Idaho. As much as 10 inches were expected at higher elevations, along with strong winds with colder temperatures.

A winter storm watch was posted for Friday night for the northwest mountains of Wyoming, where up to a foot of snow was expected. Advisories for rain and some snow were posted for the Wasatch Mountains of Utah.

Rain fell over the lower Gulf Coast of Texas and over north central Texas, southwest Oklahoma, western Montana, the lower elevations of western Idaho, and southwest Oregon. Showers and occasional thunderstorms were over southeast Minnesota, central Iowa, western Missouri, eastern Kansas, northeast Oklahoma, southwest Texas and southeast New Mexico.

PIZZA

Officer Charles Chapman said he was watching a nearby convenience store that had been experiencing a number of beer thefts when the robbery call came in at 9:30 p.m. He was at the restaurant by 9:31, he said.

The clerk was not injured in the incident, officers said.

The man was described as white, 5 feet 6 inches tall, and of average height. He was wearing an orange baseball cap and dark clothing, according to police.

Late Friday Garcia said police had a possible suspect.

BAKKER

His attorney, Harold Bender of Charlotte, has challenged a decision to keep Bakker in custody while his appeals are pending. A bail hearing for Bakker was scheduled Monday at the 4th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in Richmond, Va.

If his appeals fail, Bakker will serve at least 10 years in prison before being eligible for parole.

He was taken Tuesday night to the medium-security Federal Correctional Institution at Talladega, Ala., often a first stop for federal prisoners. Chreno said the transfer was likely to occur within the next week to 10 days.

Unlike most federal prisons, the Rochester facility concentrates security on the perimeter and allows inmates relative freedom inside the fences. There are no bars on windows and inmates do not need passes to move about. Guards do not carry weapons.

The transfer announcement by Federal Bureau of Prisons Director J. Michael Quinlan gave no specific reason, but said that the facility's level of security meets requirements for Bakker.

ORTEGA

Rodrigo Borja, president of Ecuador, said the leaders discussed the deline in coffee prices that has affected his country, Brazil, Colombia, El Salvador and Costa Rica, among others.

But whatever diplomacy there was, the attention was on Bush and Ortega — one the head of a government that has spent millions trying to unhorse the other.

"I'm not going to miss this," said Venezualan President Carlos Andres Perez, leaning in to catch the small talk that Bush and Ortega exchanged when they shook hands before the first session.

"I told President Bush that my government supports the electoral process and that we are working for peace in Nicaragua," Ortega told reporters afterwards.

Bush arrived in this capital to cheers when he declared, "I believe we can create here in the Americas the world's first completely democratic hemisphere."

An extraordinary security force — 4,000 strong — was deployed to protect the leaders at the two-day "celebration of democracy" arranged by Costa Rica's President Oscar Arias.

The Secret Service imported a two-inch-thick, 75-foot long sheet of bulletproof glass in front of the National Museum for today's inauguration of Democracy Plaza to protect Bush, Colombian President Virgilio Barco and the others. Barco's life has been threatened by drug barons in his country.

"We must do away with all the dictatorships in America because there will be no peace among us while even one of them remains," Arias said in welcoming his guests.

Bush and Ortega traded barbed comments from afar before the face-to-face meeting, and the president made a point of giving Nicaraguan opposition candidate Violeta Chamorro a kiss when they met. She was an invited guest at Arias' diplomatic conference, and Bush was holding a coffee for her and Panamanian political figure Guillermo Endara today to underscore his opposition to the two governments they are battling.

The White House issued a brief statement saying the two men met "momentarily" and "shook hands in a friendly manner."

Bush began his journey saying, "Today there are only a few lonely holdouts against the sweep of democracy through this hemisphere."

Bush said he was offering a "a new partnership of mutual respect and mutual responsibility," and urged the other nations to join the United States to "defeat the new slayers of the democratic dream, the narco traffickers who poison our children, murder elected officials and wage war on civil society."

He arrived to a bear hug from Arias, and officials announced a tentative agreement that will allow Costa Rica to reduce its $4.5 billion foreign debt burden by $1 billion.

It's again time to change clocks

WASHINGTON (AP) — Folks who have been a bit tired all summer will finally get back that lost hour of sleep this weekend, with the return of standard time.

The time change occurs officially at 2 a.m. local time Sunday, the moment when clocks should be set back an hour.

That switch provides the extra hour for sleep, carousing, toil or whatever, that was lost last spring when the clocks were moved ahead.

The International Association of Fire Chiefs is trying to get Americans to use a bit of the extra time for the potentially life-saving act of replacing batteries in smoke detectors in their homes.

The change to standard time moves an hour of daylight from the evening to the morning.

That means it will get dark earlier at night, but there will be more light in the mornings.

The earlier darkness is also a safety consideration for parents whose children will be going out on Halloween night, and for anyone driving in the dim light.

The date of the change is set by Congress, and while it's become a tradition for most of the nation, the notion of standard time is only just over a century old.

Before that, every local city and town had its own time, setting the town clock according to the sun and expecting residents to coordinate their watches and clocks with that standard.

The result was thousands of different times across the nation, a situation that bothered few people until railroad transportation became common and the timetables became impossible to coordinate because of the different clocks.

PAY

"We have city government and city managers. Why have them if we have to go to the voters to decide these things?"

Faircloth admitted that the pay disagreement has surpassed the limits of being reasonable, and the city deserves its share of the blame.

The after-luncheon exchange between Faircloth and Loose erupted when the fireman questioned the councilman's comment that the city had attempted to make a pay offer of 4.5 percent. The departments only got a 2 percent raise this year.

Faircloth made the informal offer to a representative from a committee of police and fire officials.

If the committee wanted to accept a 4.5 percent raise, it would have had to formally present the proposal to councilmen, who then could officially consider the raise. Faircloth's offer was rejected.

"They thought they were going to get the 10 percent," he added.

However, Loose complained to Faircloth that only an official offer would have been considered.

"How can you call that negotiating?" Loose asked the councilman. "You call that an offer? Talking to one person?"

Benton said police and fire officials were open to negotiations but only if more city representatives took part.

Faircloth told the Jaycees that residents could expect nothing less than tax hikes and cuts in city services if the referendum passes, costing the City of Midland about $913,000.

Because other departments would expect similar salary increases, city council members next year would have to consider a 25 percent tax hike to support $1.9 million in raises, he said. The tax rate is 58 cents per $100 valuation.

Increases in fees for city services, such as water and sewer, also could be expected, he said.

Faircloth said city councilmen should have initially considered a 4.5 percent pay increase rather than the 2 percent.

"We're really disappointed that it's come down to this," he said of the referendum. "But leave this matter in the hands of the people you elected."

Loose, a member of the Midland Firefighters Association, claimed that with a wife and three children, his salary qualifies his children for the free lunch program at school.

Benton said an auditor in Oklahoma hired by the FOP found that the city had $50 million in reserves to support the raises.

The detective also said Midland officers are leaving the city to take jobs in larger urban areas such as Dallas.

WRONG

McLaughlin, 30, was convicted in 1979 in the New York borough of Brooklyn for taking part in an armed robbery in which one person was killed. McLaughlin received a 15-year sentence.

McLaughlin said he was drinking with friends at a bar in his neighborhood the night of the killing. He was arrested several days later because the primary suspect was reputed to associate with a Robert W. McLaughlin. Detectives mistook that man for Bobby, whose middle initial is 'K.'

McLaughlin was picked out of a police lineup by a 15-year-old witness who had been told by police that McLaughlin was a friend of the other suspect.

"I kept telling myself it would end but it never did," McLaughlin said. "I hated the system for not believing me. It just seemed like they were God — like they could do whatever they liked with my life."

The conviction was overturned in 1986 after McLaughlin's foster father, Jarold Hohne, persuaded civil rights lawyer Richard Emery and a police sergeant to reopen the case. After four years of relentless work, the only witness who identified Mclaughlin acknowledged he was wrong.

"It's been a nightmare for Bobby from beginning to end," Emery said. "He faced it down and he survived like one has to, but he's lost the critical years from 20 to 26½."

That's how old McLaughlin was during his prison stays at Rikers Island, Sing Sing, Elmira and Comstock. The last of those was known as "the gladiator school" because there were so many fights, McLaughlin said.

"They prey on the weak and your body is your weapon," he added.

Going into prison, McLaughlin weighed about 150 pounds. He emerged after six years of bodybuilding tipping the scales at 200 pounds — a physique he still maintains.

He said he kept a bucket of water next to his bunk to defend against inmates known to start gasoline fires in enemy cells. He guarded against early morning attacks by waking each day before his cell doors opened. Late sleepers were often attacked, he said.

When McLaughlin returned to his Brooklyn apartment he sometimes slept in the cellar because he feared police would knock on his door and return him to prison, said Thomas Duffy, the police sergeant who reopened the investigation.

GRAMM

But Gramm is determined not to allow Congress to impose environmental restrictions on industry by forcing it to use that "dirty coal" from the Midwest and the Northeast, and forbidding the use of that "clean, cheap-burning" natural gas from Texas.

"Natural gas is the cleanest and cheapest domestic fuel. Our policies in the past have limited its use ... They've hurt the economy, they've hurt the environment.

"Now that we've repealed the Fuel Use Act ... I think we're going to see vast expansion in the demand for natural gas ... We're going to see natural gas used as boiler fuel once again, and we're going to see it used in conjunction with coal to lower coal emissions.

"I believe that the future for natural gas, which now is in the midst of a production bubble, looks very bright indeed," he said.

In other remarks, Gramm said the future is less bright for oil producers, but had one word of optimism.

Repeal of the Windfall Profits Tax, he said, will bring forth an effort to expand domestic oil production should prices increase in the future.

However, Gramm added that flat oil prices continue to be a "godsend" for the vast majority of American people who don't think about the impact it has on production.

The senator also committed himself to having a voice in the development of a National Energy Policy aimed at encouraging the production of domestic energy.

He said the Bush administration is still in a discovery process regarding energy matters and that a plan should be completed by the end of this year.

Anderson's friends pray for end to his 'special cruelty'

WASHINGTON (AP) — Journalist Terry Anderson's friends and colleagues prayed for an end to the "special cruelty" of his captivity Friday and vowed not to forget him at a "Mass of Hope" on his 42nd birthday, his fifth while being held in Lebanon.

Anderson's relatives, professional colleagues and diplomats filled a chapel at Georgetown University for an hour-long ceremony on a day that President Bush and Congress proclaimed "National Hostage Awareness Day."

The celebrants prayed, listened to psalms and received communion at a Mass officiated by the Rev. Lawrence Madden.

"As long as he is a hostage, we are not free," said Tom Brokaw, the NBC anchorman who said he was "haunted by Terry's plight."

He implored the radical Moslem Shiites holding Anderson and seven other Americans to "reclaim your place in civilization" by releasing the hostages. "No God would sanction such an act," he said.

Anderson, the chief Middle East correspondent of The Associated Press, has spent 1,686 days in captivity, the longest of any American hostage. Anderson's father and and brother have died and his daughter was born since his imprisonment.

Former hostages who spent time with Anderson said he gained strength from his Roman Catholicism. He prayed often and made rosary beads from fibers on a mat.

Peggy Say, Anderson's sister and a staunch campaigner for his freedom since he was seized March 16, 1985, said the theme of hope was appropriate because it sustains both the hostages and those living without their loved ones.

"Despite years of crushed expectations, false signs and broken dreams, who among us is not ready to believe that today could be the day our miracle happens?" Mrs. Say said.

Calling for warring factions in the Middle East to find peace, Mrs. Say said, "It is my deepest hope that our hostages will not have suffered so much for so long, in vain, and for nothing."

After the ceremony, Mrs. Say, accompanied by the wives of hostages Robert Polhill, Frank Reed and Alann Steen, all from Beirut, met with State Department officials to find out what the Bush administration is doing to free the hostages.

Department spokesman Richard Boucher called for the release of the hostages.

"Our hearts and our thoughts are with the families of these innocent victims still held hostage in Lebanon. All hostages should be immediately released and returned to their families as quickly as possible," he said.

"Nothing can be gained by the taking and holding of hostages," he said. "We will not rest until all of our fellow citizens illegally imprisoned in Lebanon are free."

The three Americans who have died in captivity — Marine Lt. Col. William Higgins, William Buckley and Peter Kilborn — deserve a special honor, he said.

Generally, administration officials have tried to play down the hostage issue in an effort to avoid the kind of scandal that tainted the Reagan administration in the Iran-Contra affair.

Despite a ban on weapons sales, President Reagan sold arms to Iran in an unsuccessful attempt to free the hostages. Reagan's aides diverted the proceeds of the weapons sales to the Nicaraguan Contras.

Meantime, Sen. Charles Grassley, R-Iowa, said that he has asked two congressional committees to investigate whether the Reagan administration ignored leads about the hostages in the years 1986-1988.

"I studied three separate cases and watched them as they developed, in which the government, when either presented with hard and reliable information or with overtures from credible sources, said not only no, but heck no," Grassley said in a speech on the Senate floor.

Grassley refused to discuss specifics, but he said he found it "frustrating to learn that information about the hostages in Lebanon was being ignored. ..."

At the Anderson ceremony, Benjamin C. Bradlee, executive editor of The Washington Post, said all journalists feel an outrage at Anderson's captivity. It is "way past the time for the cruel and unusual treatment of Terry Anderson" to end, he said.

Others at the ceremony were former diplomat Bruce Laingen, once a hostage in Iran; and journalists Walter R. Mears, vice president of The AP; Jonathan Wolman, AP Washington bureau chief; Peter S. Prichard, editor of USA Today; Peter Arnett, a Cable News Network correspondent; R.W. Apple, deputy Washington editor of The New York Times; and David Aikman, a foreign correspondent for Time magazine.

Among those attending were representatives of the embassies of Lebanon, Algeria and Syria, and State Department officials including John McCarthy, the ambassador to Lebanon. The United States has evacuated all Americans from the embassy because of fighting in Lebanon.

The ceremony was organized by No Greater Love, a humanitarian organization which promotes peace and helps victims of war.

Judge rules Briton murdered, not killed by animals in Kenya park

WORLD

NAIROBI, Kenya (AP) — A British tourist whose charred bones were found in a game park was murdered, a court ruled Friday, vindicating her father's yearlong battle against state investigators who claimed wild animals had killed her.

The death of Julie Ward remains unsolved, however, with no one arrested and the judge saying he saw no need for further investigation. Ms. Ward's father has charged there was an official cover-up to protect Kenya's lucrative tourism industry.

Ms. Ward's partly charred lower left leg and lower jaw were found on Sept. 13, 1988, in the sprawling Masai Mara Game Reserve, a week after she reportedly left the world-renowned park while on a wildlife photography expedition.

The state claimed the 28-year-old woman was eaten by carnivores after abandoning her vehicle mired in mud. The Masai Mara is home to lions, vultures, hyenas and leopards among other meat eaters.

Her father, John Ward, a hotelier from Suffolk, England, contended she was murdered, hacked up and burned with gasoline. He pleaded with the state to order an inquest and spent tens of thousands of dollars and hundreds of hours in a private investigation of her death.

"There is ample and substantial evidence that Julie Ward died of foul play by a person or persons unknown," Chief Magistrate Joseph Mango said at the conclusion of his inquiry, which began in mid-August and heard 38 witnesses before ending Oct. 6.

In rejecting the state's contention that Ms. Ward had been killed by animals, Mango said: "I think the animals are innocent. If they are guilty at all, it is in eating what they found."

However, he said he "saw no reason" to investigate her death further and rejected claims by her family that the state had engaged in a cover-up to protect her killer or Kenya's $360 million annual tourist trade.

"There has been a strong attack on the quality of the investigations ... and allegations of a cover-up," Mango said. "Of course the state does not admit this."

He further denied that Simon Makallah, the Masai Mara's chief game warden, is or was a principal suspect in Ms. Ward's murder.

During the inquest, Ward's attorney, Byron Georgiadis, had tried to build a case that Ms. Ward was killed by someone who knew the game park well, had freedom of movement there and could have ordered or inspired a cover-up of the circumstances surrounding her disappeareance.

He pointed to Makallah as a chief suspect, contending the game warden was able to find the young woman's remains hours after her vehicle was located six miles away, only because he already knew where they were.

Mango, however, said there had been no evidence to suggest Makallah and Ms. Ward ever met before her death and the fact that he found her remains "does not cast suspicion on Makallah."

Instead, he said investigators should have considered as prime suspects two men Ms. Ward spent time with in the game park, neither of whom appeared as witnesses at the inquest.

After the ruling, Ward said he was surprised at the outcome and that he had had "very serious doubts" Mango would rule in his favor.

"At the end of the day, he came up with the verdict that was required," Ward said.

But asked if he was pleased with the ruling, he said: "How can you be pleased to have it confirmed that your daughter has been murdered? But, yes, I suppose I am pleased."

Ward repeated his belief there had been a cover-up and referred to a British pathologist's report accepted by Mango as accurate that proved his daughter had been hacked to pieces by a sharp instrument and not torn apart by animals.

A state pathologist's report said her remains had been cleanly cut, but was later altered by a superior to say they had been cracked and torn — injuries more indicative of an animal's mauling.

The British report was presented to Kenya's police commissioner "months ago and he chose to ignore it," Ward said.

Police have admitted several blunders in the case, including failing to interview people in the area. In addition, a park gate keeper admitted forging Ms. Ward's signature on a visitor's book to show she had left the preserve.

1990 Lincoln Town Car an exciting, quiet ride

Bill Stella, left, and Bob Dodson of Village Lincoln Mercury Dodge, are pictured in front of, from left, Town Cars from 1989, 1990 and 1978.

The new 1990 Lincoln Town Car, available at Village Lincoln Mercury Dodge, features a softer, more modern appearance, an assortment of major functional improvements and traditional full-size luxury, roominess and ride. In fact, the new model is ready to show the world what a 1990s luxury car should be.

"The new design is a big improvement in aerodynamics, with increased gas mileage," assessed Bill Stella, Village general manager. "Also, the new aerodynamic design and body makes it one of the most quiet cars built in the world, according to the car's designer."

"Also, it includes anti-lock brakes and driver and front seat passenger airbag restraint systems as standard equipment for increased safety and possibly lower insurance rates."

"Once you've seen and driven the Town Car," added Ross H. Roberts, Ford Motor Company vice president and Lincoln-Mercury Division general manager, "it's easy to understand why we're so excited about it for 1990."

"Town Car offers a unique blend of all-new sheet metal, and improved functional features with traditional luxury cues of size, luggage capacity and ride," Roberts said. "Along with improved handling characteristics, the 1990 Town Car should substantially strengthen our position in the highly competitive luxury car market."

Slightly longer and maintaining the same overall width, the car has an air-drag coefficient of 0.36 compared with 0.46 on the previous model. This reduces wind noise by allowing a quieter air flow over the car, improving fuel economy.

Interior room is improved as well. Front and rear shoulder room is increased by 1.3 inches to 62 inches and rear knee room is increased to 43 inches.

The 1990 Town Car features changes in the body sheet metal construction and design through use of unitized construction on a body-on-frame car. These changes provide for greater tautness to Town Car's body, eliminating the traditional shake and jiggle common in large body-on-frame cars.

Other exterior changes include aircraft-type doors and flush glass, bright bumpers, and wide bright molding above the fluted lower bodyside.

Town Car, once again available in standard, Signature or Cartier Designer Series, also has an all new interior — and maintains the largest trunk in its class at 22 cubic feet.

Also offered is all-new seat trim, an electronic instrument cluster and easy-to-use message center, rear lap and shoulder belts for outboard passengers, power driver and passenger reclining seats with memory, and power lumbar support added to the Cartier Designer Series.

The rear-drive-platform features many standard functional improvements, including speed-sensitive, variable-assist power steering, rear air-spring load-leveling, functional drip rails and an automatic power antenna.

Some of the exciting options available on the 1990 Town Car are a four-wheel anti-lock brake system, "Insta-Clear" heated windshield, electrochromic automatic dimming rearview mirror, and electronic AM/FM stereo with compact disc player.

Seven new exterior paint colors are available on the car for 1990, including crystal blue pearlescent and champagne pearlescent. These paints use the same basic basecoat/clearcoat process as metallic paint.

The basecoat contains a special pigment — micronized titanium dioxide — that creates what Ford engineers call a "frost" effect.

Is Brazil's government bypassing constitution?

By KEN SILVERSTEIN

RIO DE JANEIRO, Brazil (AP) — Human rights activists and some labor groups charge that authorities are ignoring, subverting, perverting and bypassing the constitution that replaced one drawn up by Brazil's old military government.

The new charter became law Oct. 5, 1988, as a "people's constitution." It was Brazil's eighth constitution in 167 years of independence from Portugal.

Among the biggest problems is that 259 constitutional clauses can take effect only after Congress passes "complementary legislation" to implement them.

So far, Congress has implemented only 29.

Some critics say a complicating factor is that President Jose Sarney, a civilian who took office when the military stepped down in 1985, has ignored constitutional changes that seek to check the traditional power of the Brazilian executive branch.

The constitution outlaws "decree laws," widely used during 21 years of military government, which took effect immediately and became law unless Congress vetoed them within 60 days.

The new charter created "provisional measures," designed to be used in emergencies. They also take effect immediately but are nullified in 30 days if not specifically approved by Congress.

Sarney swamped Congress with 101 provisional measures in the past year. A number of those were resubmitted with only slight modifications after Congress killed the original measures by simply not calling them up for a vote.

"Sarney has ruled by decree, just like the generals," charged Emanuel Vieira, a political scientist at the Brazilian Institute for Analysis and Statistics.

Sarney, who is due to step down in March following Brazil's first direct presidential election in 29 years on Nov. 15, says the new constitution has tied his hands because it gives Congress too much say in governing.

"I've encountered almost insurmountable problems trying to govern the country with the hybrid system created by the constitution," the president said in a recent interview.

Black groups in this mixed-race nation of 145 million people charge that by vetoing several important articles, Sarney undermined a constitutional law making racism a crime punishable by up to five years in prison.

Among the articles Sarney vetoed were those denying bail to those arrested on racism charges and making a prison term mandatory for those convicted. Sarney explained his vetoes by saying the provisions contradicted Brazil's "the greater law."

"The penal code, for its part, gives everyone the right to free movement during legal proceedings," he said.

But Rep. Carlos Alberto Cao, the law's sponsor, contended, "Sarney has no interest in fighting racism."

Human rights activists claim the constitution's guarantee that "no one will be submitted to torture nor to inhuman or degrading treatment" is routinely ignored.

"Inside precinct houses, detention centers and penitentiaries, common criminals are beaten and tortured almost daily," Paulo Sergio Pinheiro, the head of the Human Rights Commission of the Brazilian Bar Association, charged in an interview.

He pointed to a Feb. 5 incident in which 18 inmates in the 42nd Precinct in Sao Paulo died of asphyxiation after being stripped, beaten and locked in a 3-by 9-foot windowless punishment cell after an escape attempt.

Labor groups have mixed views of the constitution.

Decio Guimaraes, a lawyer with the leftist Central Workers Union, representing some 12 million laborers, maintains that Congress sharply weakened the constitution's right-to-strike guarantee, which he called "the most important gain for labor contained in the new charter."

The constitution granted the right to strike but says workers in "essential services" had to stay on the job.

In April, Congress classified as "essential" such services as water, gas, electricity, health, transport, air traffic, sewage and trash collection.

"The only workers not covered were samba school dancers," said Guimaraes.

But labor applauds such improvements as a 44-hour work week in place of one of 48, increased maternity leave of 120 days and 50 percent extra pay for overtime work.

Another is the guarantee that housemaids receive the minimum wage, which is the equivalent of about $80 a month, as well as social security and almost all benefits given other workers.

Crystals add facet to Arkansas business

By SCOTT CHARTON

MOUNT IDA, Ark. (AP) — A national craze for crystals is keeping Sonny Stanley busy — and a little amused.

A fourth-generation miner of quartz from the Ouachita National Forest, Stanley says the area yields the world's finest examples of the gleaming, ancient formations, credited by some enthusiasts with containing curative powers and comforting vibes.

"That's how we promote it: 'The Quartz Crystal Capital of the World,'" Stanley says of the Ouachitas, while surveying rows of long tables outside his shop stacked with thousands of crystals.

Arkansas crystal, which took millions of years to evolve from silicate minerals imbedded deep in the Ouachitas, has been in such demand that federal authorities recently began taking competitive bids on quartz-rich national park acreage. The first round of contracts, covering about 75 parcels, brought in more than $18,000, half of which is to be returned to the state.

"This is really a business for these people," says John Nichols, Hot Springs-based federal geologist for the Ouachitas. "We did have a lot of unauthorized activity out there, but the people who want to do it within the law have participated in bidding."

Stanley, whose family has worked its current mining claim for 30 years, smiles at serious questions about the publicized power of crystals. He says some visitors wear triangular, pointed headgear while touching the gleaming rocks — the better to soak up whatever is radiated, they tell him.

"Some of them say it makes them feel better," Stanley says. "Of course, I've never laughed out loud at them because I'm trying to sell them the crystal. But I've seen them sit down in circles and talk to the crystal. One woman laid right down by one. This one guy came in and stuck his head into a piece.

"You do get amused at a lot of them," he says.

His late father, veteran miner Ocus Stanley, claimed to absorb soothing warmth when his rheumatism-stiffened fingers grasped a couple of favored crystals. "But I don't hold that they'll cure anything," Ocus, who died recently, said in an interview this summer.

One woman told Ocus Stanley she took a bag of his crystals to one of the Great Pyramids in Egypt to "treat" the formations, and one couple insisted on getting married at the family mine.

"Some of them, I tell them they ought to have their heads examined," Ocus said.

At The Crystal Academy of Advanced Healing Arts in Taos, N.M., where clients are taught that light and energy from quartz helps the mind and body, administrator Stephanie Nemett endorses Arkansas crystal as "some of the finest in the world."

"Although some people prefer Brazilian crystal over Arkansas crystal, the crystal from Arkansas has set the standard," she says.

At Amigo's Food Co-op in Taos, owner Lynn Sweet sold her last 100 pounds of Arkansas quartz to a man bound for Singapore to open a metaphysical bookstore. "I'd say that the Arkansas crystal had the highest quality I've seen," says Ms. Sweet, whose weekly quartz sales peaked at $1,500.

"Some people really think it can cure about all the world's problems. I don't know about that," she says. "But I will tell you: when we were on top of the mountain in Arkansas to mine the crystal, it did feel like a real special spot. Everyone seemed so contented."

The Stanley family, too, is content — with the income from crystal sales, which averages about $1,000 a day during the summer. Their prices range from $10 for a milk-carton full of crystals to some beauties bringing up to $300 a pound. The shop also buys crystal from smaller miners, creating a quartz-powered economy.

"Of course, if I had my way, I wouldn't sell any," says Ocus' widow, Irene, whose grandfather and father were crystal miners.

"I'd keep all of them. Look around and see — I've got rocks all over the place," she says. "It's just what you believe, I guess. But they are calming, these crystals. I love to be around them all day."

Socialist leader trys for unprecedented third term, polls say

By SUSAN LINNEE

MADRID, Spain (AP) — Prime Minister Felipe Gonzalez, the Socialist who has eased Westerns concerns about where he would lead Spain after his unexpected landslide victory seven years ago, is heading for what polls indicate will be an unprecedented third term in elections Sunday.

Gonzalez, a 47-year-old former labor lawyer, has since led the country into an economic boom with policies that upset some of his own Socialists, labor particularly.

He also has brought Spain into the European Economic Community and reaffirmed its membership in the North Atlantic Treaty Organization.

So far it has been a successful road for Gonzalez, who once had to slip into Spain from France in the trunk of a car because his party was outlawed by the authoritarian regime of Gen. Francisco Franco.

According to private and government polls, the Socialists are expected to win at least 40 percent of the vote from the country's 29.5 million registered voters for their third absolute majority in the 350-seat lower house of Parliament. They now hold 183 seats.

Polls also indicate little on the right or left can block the Spanish Socialist Workers Party, the official name of Gonzalez's party.

The main opposition group, the conservative Popular Party, is in disarray, having struggled in the past two years for coherence under three different leaders.

Its current leader and candidate to replace Gonzalez is 36-year-old Jose Maria Aznar. He took the reins of the party less than two months before Gonzalez, on Aug. 25, issued the call for this election. The conservatives now hold 91 lower house seats and are campaigning on a platform calling for privatization of state industry, sharp cuts in public spending and lower taxes.

Former Prime Minister Adolfo Suarez of the Social Democratic Center Party is repeating his 1986 attempt to recapture the office, mainly with a call for the abolition of the 12-month obligatory military service. His party now holds 28 seats in the lower house.

In 1977, two years after Franco's death, the 58-year-old Suarez formed Spain's first democratically elected government in 41 years.

The Socialists' response to Suarez on the military service issue is that they reduced the obligatory service time to the current 12 from the 18 months that existed during his administration. The Socialists also ask how Suarez plans to pay for an all-volunteer army.

The United Left coalition under Julio Anguita, the 48-year-old Communist and former mayor of Cordoba, is expected to gain up to five seats more than its current seven by picking up the votes of Socialists disillusioned with the Gonzalez government, which they perceive as having shifted towards the center-right.

Their slogan, "We Are the Alternative," is aimed at members of the General Workers Union, the country's largest and historically Socialist labor movement. The union has not called on its rank and file to vote Socialist this time, claiming that the Gonzalez government has failed to promote an equitable distribution of Spain's new wealth.

According to the Organization for Economic Cooperation and Development, Spain's per capita gross domestic product rose from $4,192 in 1984 to $7,449 in 1987, the year after Spain joined the EEC and confirmed its membership NATO.

Its annual growth rate of 5 percent is Europe's highest.

In the 1982 campaign, when Gonzalez ran in his first successful campaign, his anti-NATO stance and populist style made Western leaders nervous.

In this campaign, Gonzalez and other Socialist leaders maintain that opposition parties have failed to come up with serious platforms and alternatives.

"Their exaggerated negativism is a reflection of their frustration," Gonzalez has said. "They would be better off if they tried to come up with alternatives that would appeal to voters."

Another issue that has upset the opposition is Gonzalez's wife, Carmen, who is running for Parliament on the Socialist ticket in Cadiz.

Opposition parties have compared her to Eva Peron, who had an exceeding influential role in Argentina as the wife of populist dictator Juan D. Peron, and to Imelda Marcos, the wife of former President Ferdinand E. Marcos of the Philippines.

Gonzalez's only response to those who make the comparisons is that they lack "democratic sentiment."

Candidacy of prime minister's wife stirs queries

MADRID, Spain (AP) — When word got out that the Socialist Party was running Maria del Carmen Romero Lopez, a 42-year-old former schoolteacher, for Parliament, the opposition cried foul and likened her to Eva Peron and Imelda Marcos.

Carmen Romero happens to be Mrs. Felipe Gonzalez, wife of Spain's two-time prime minister who is running for re-election.

Mrs. Romero, who uses her maiden name, was given the No. 3 spot on her party's list for Cadiz, where seven of the current nine deputies from the southern province are Socialists.

Because of the system of proportioning parliamentary seats to parties on the basis of their provincial votes, she is certain to be elected.

Mrs. Romero, mother of children aged 17, 16 and 10, has shunned the limelight during her husband's seven years in office and rarely accompanies him on official trips. She has not adopted any causes or become involved in charitable work. She says Spain has only one first lady, Queen Sofia, wife of King Juan Carlos.

At the Socialist Party congress last year, she tossed red roses at the Executive Committee that had just approved a 25 percent minimum quota for women in party and government positions.

Gonzalez has been noticably neutral about his wife's candidacy, limiting himself to remarks about the "lack of democratic sentiment" on the part of those who liken her to the wife of the late Argentine leader Juan D. Peron. Although she never ran for office, Eva Peron, also known as Evita, played a dominant political role in Argentina in the 1940s until her death in 1952.

Emelda Marcos also had an influential role in the Philippines before her husband, the late Ferdinand E. Marcos, was ousted in 1986.

Mrs. Romero says that as a member of Parliament she would concentrate on issues related to women, education and youth unemployment.

Press response to her first campaign appearance Oct. 1 in the town of Chiciana was less than enthusiastic.

Jose Luis Guitierrez, a commentator for Diario 16, called her political discourse "outdated" and her speaking voice "not exactly good."

In spite of her party's decision to promote women, Gutierrez wrote, "Carmen Romero is not just another woman and, for obvious reasons, does not have the same rights and duties as other Spanish women."

Gotham City costumes hard to find

DALLAS (AP) — Holy shortage, Batman!

Managers of some Dallas-area costume stores say they are having problems meeting the demand for Batman and Joker Halloween getups following this summer's blockbuster movie.

"The problem is, he (Batman) doesn't exist," said Howard Hale, manager of Magicland. "The supplier has hasn't been able to keep up with the demand."

His store was lucky to get three adult Batman costumes during the summer, Hale said. He sold one and the two others are reserved for Halloween by two men who had the foresight to put dibs on the costumes in July and August, Hale said.

The store has some black, almost-Batman capes for children and adults that sell for $13 and $20, but Hale concedes they are just not the same.

"Most of the kids know that cowl down to the square inch. And if you don't have it, they really give their moms a hard time." he said.

Queen of Hearts, a costume shop in Plano, scored a coup with two adult-sized Joker costumes. But they already are reserved.

"We get about 25 or 30 calls a day," said Chris Jennings, a sales clerk.

Dusty Thompson, owner of Costumes by Dusty in Arlington, said he knew early on that everyone would be into the superhero craze this Halloween. His may be one of the few costume stores that still have Batman and Joker costumes available.

He said, Batman, The Joker and even Superman have beat out his more imaginative costumes such as giant broccoli and hot dogs.

Leg-lengthening spurs controversy among dwarfs

By LEE SIEGEL
AP Science Writer

LOS ANGELES — Brian Luna doesn't mind that doctors broke his legs and put him in a wheelchair for 10 months. And the 14-year-old dwarf says he will let them do it again because the surgery will make him a foot taller.

"It's worth it. It's like being on stilts," said Brian, who went from 3-foot-11 to 4-foot-5 during the first stage of the leg-lengthening procedure.

"I can help my mom make breakfast. I can turn on light switches. I can turn on the radio and reach the top shelf on my book case. It's real neat. Most little people have extensions in their car to reach the pedals. I won't have that problem."

Brian, of Covina, is one of four teen-age dwarfs undergoing the process, which costs $40,000 to $50,000, at Cedars-Sinai Medical Center.

DOCTORS CAREFULLY broke Brian's shin bones in November 1988, then used telescoping metal rods to help 6 inches of new bone grow in each gap. They will do the same to his thigh bones early next year, increasing Brian's height to 4-foot-11.

The procedure is drawing criticism from some members of Little People of America, who believe dwarfs should accept their physical characteristics. They say teen-agers under 18 are too young to decide if they want the surgery, and that parents may pressure them into it.

"Most little people can do anything they want to accomplish, and their height is not a barrier," said Daniel Margulies, the group's immediate past president. "The fact you're short doesn't mean there's anything wrong with you. If you're going to do something as drastic as surgery, you have to take the position that short height is something that has to be corrected."

Brian replied: "If they say I don't need to do this, it's not any of their business. I'm pleasing myself. I'm not doing this for everybody. You really want to have this operation to go through all this inconvenience."

The procedure was developed in Spain a decade ago, but modified at Cedars-Sinai to reduce pain and hospitalization.

"It does an awful lot for their self-image and outlook on life," said Dr. David Rimoin, director of pediatrics and the hospital's medical genetics-birth defects center. "It allows them to drive cars, reach lights and elevator buttons — to live in society without the aid that somebody dwarfed in stature requires."

The surgery by Drs. Joseph Isaacson and William Oppenheim is done in two stages: breaking the tibias, or shin bones, and lengthening them 6 inches, then doing the same thing to the femurs, or thigh bones. The fibulas — the lower leg bones next to the tibias — are bowed in dwarfs, so they are straightened and trimmed a bit when the tibias are extended.

Before each shin or thigh bone is broken, four screws are implanted, two on each side of the planned break. They extend at a right angle to the bone, pointing inward toward the other leg. After the bones are broken and placed in casts, hollow telescoping rods are attached to screws, parallel to the leg. A knob allows the rods to be extended one-twenty-fifth of an inch daily, until the gap between each end of the broken bone reaches 6 inches.

Because the membrane sheath around each bone is left intact when the bones are broken with a small chisel and hammer, new bone grows in the proper place to fill the gap, Rimoin said.

LEG-LENGTHENING, first developed for people with legs of unequal length, involves long hospital stays in Italy and the Soviet Union, where patients are made to walk sooner after surgery, causing greater pain, he said.

Cedars-Sinai's patients remain in casts and a wheelchair for at least eight months: five to lengthen the bone and three for the gap to fill and heal. They spend only four or five days in the hospital after each set of bones is broken.

"These kids are in and out of the hospital quickly, and after the post-operative period of a few days, they are pain-free," Rimoin said. "I call it lengthening with a smile."

Patients receive frequent physical therapy to maintain muscle tone while their legs are being lengthened. Rimoin monitors patients for impaired blood flow or nerve damage, but so far hasn't seen serious complications.

Brian had the screws and telescoping rods removed from his shins in June and got out of his wheelchair and onto crutches in August.

When his thigh bones are broken in a few months, doctors also will cut his groin muscles to straighten his back, Rimoin said. The entire procedure lasts about two years.

RIMOIN SAID it also will be used to lengthen dwarfs' arms, although Brian doesn't want that surgery.

Brian and others undergoing leg-lengthening at Cedars-Sinai are achondroplastic dwarfs. The inherited birth defect is the most common form of dwarfism, characterized by short limbs, a normal trunk, small hands, a large head, prominent buttocks and curvature of the spine.

As he grew up, Brian said, people "would make fun. It would hurt. They'd call me shorty, stuff like that." He also received impolite stares, wasn't allowed on amusement park rides, needed specially tailored pants and had to use stools to reach bathroom sinks or to help in the kitchen.

Rimoin said the surgery is best done between ages 16 and 20, and that he approves it only for dwarfs old enough to consider the consequences carefully — Brian made a list of pros and cons and received psychological evaluation.

"It isn't something he did on a whim," said Brian's mother, Barbara Luna, a divorcee who works for a defense contractor.

Margulies fears the surgery is done because doctors and parents view dwarfism as a "defect that has to be corrected" rather than "a characteristic such as blue eyes or red hair."

"Most little people, if they wait until they're about 20 and are fairly well-adjusted, would not want the surgery," Margulies said. "Once they get through the teen-age years, which are traumatic for anybody — especially if you're different — the desire to have the surgery is no longer there."

Brian is happy with his taller stature, but said, "I'll always be a little person in my genes, and I'll have smaller hands. It is changing my physical appearance, but I'm always going to be a little person."

Libya no 'promised land' for Egyptian workers

By NEJLA SAMMAKIA

BENGHAZI, Libya (AP) — Abdou Mohammed sold a cow in his Egyptian village to to buy a bus ticket to Libya where he hoped to make his fortune as a farmer.

Today, squatting beside the sidewalk stand where he sells plastic water bottles and combs, he laments his decision.

"I can't find any work," he said. "All I want is just to ... go back home."

Mohammed is among thousands of Egyptians who in the last four months have poured across the border in search of prosperity in Libya, formerly Egypt's bitterest enemy. Their enticements are warmer official relations between the two countries and bleak prospects in Egypt with its faltering economy.

Wealth eludes most of them in Libya, however. They compete with thousands of workers from South Korea, Poland, Romania, Sudan and Ghana for fewer jobs as reduced oil revenues force Libya to abandon grandiose construction schemes.

Many Egyptians now arrive with "Made in Egypt" aluminum pots, plastic mats and chocolate bars, all Libyan favorites.

But those like Mohammed and his friend, Rabi'a Ahmed, brought only their visions of careers as farmers, expecting to earn much more money than back home in Sohag, 245 miles south of Cairo, Egypt's capital.

"There are no jobs, so I've had to buy these from other Egyptians," said Mohammed, waving a hand over his wares lined up on the sidewalk of an old covered bazaar. Nearby, other Egyptians were selling similar items arrayed on similar cardboard sheets.

"I sold my cow for 2,000 pounds ($780)," Mohammed said.

That's gone, and "now all I want is just to make enough for a return ticket and go back home," he said.

However, Rabi'a Ahmed, who sold land to finance his move to Libya, said things could be worse than hawking Egyptian paraphernalia to Libyans.

...Col. Moammar Gadhafi...came across hundreds of homeless Egyptians in (a park)...

"I might continue the business," he said.

Life is not plush for Egyptians newly arrived in Benghazi, the first major stop for buses on the routes across the border opened last summer for the first time in more than a decade.

Scenes from Cairo's poor and squalid quarters have been transported to this Mediterranean city. Egyptian women carrying babies roam among cars at traffic lights to beg. Others wipe windshields in hopes of earning a few dinars or sell plastic lanterns.

In September, Col. Moammar Gadhafi, the Libyan leader, came across hundreds of homeless Egyptians in one of Benghazi's main parks. Shortly afterwards, they were moved to an unfinished concrete-and-steel school building.

All an Egyptian needs to travel to Libya is a 75-pound ($30) work permit or an invitation.

When borders were reopened, thousands of Egyptians poured into Libya, many of them merchants. Along with them came skilled workers and farmers, riding 20 buses and 250 private cars or taxis a day.

At Salloum, a border crossing on the Egyptian side, the few passport control and customs officers were unprepared for the traffic load one recent day.

It took seven hours for a bus with 53 passengers to pass through.

During the wait, a passport officer said: "An average 1,500 Egyptians go through every day by bus and car. There were a lot more a month ago. Many have come back, without jobs and in tears."

Bulldogs crown Bobcats, 14-9

By TERRY WILLIAMSON
Sports Editor

Homecoming and some good second half defense was all Midland High needed to end a five-game losing streak at Memorial Stadium Friday night as the Bulldogs erased a 9-0 San Angelo lead to take a 14-9 victory.

Midland High climbed out of the District 4-5A cellar with the victory and now stands at 1-3 in the loop race and 2-6 on the year. San Angelo fell to 1-7 and 1-3.

But this one didn't have the right start for the Bulldogs. After driving to the San Angelo 21 on the Pack's first possession of the night without scoring, the Bobcats put nine points in lights, dimming the prospects of the Bulldogs ending that frustrating streak of losses.

The Bobcats marched 79 yards in eight plays to take a 6-0 lead with J.W. Orr getting the last three yards in the first period and then came back to start the second quarter with a nice drive that ended in a 34-yard field goal by Drew Marsh.

From there it was the luck of the Bulldogs. J.T. Herd stopped another San Angelo scoring bid by intercepting a Shea Morenz pass at the three-yard line and MHS marched 97 yards, the longest of the year, to cut the margin to 9-7 and James Lee scored from four yards out and Shane Barden added the extra point.

It took the Bulldogs until the fourth quarter to win the game, however, as San Angelo led at the half, 9-7, for the first time this year. MHS got another four-yard TD run from Lee early in the fourth period to win the game.

But it took some unexpected heroes to turn the trick.

First, Lee came off the bench to record his first 100-yard day, gaining 110 while adding two touchdowns. But it didn't surprise him.

"I expected to have a big night even though I didn't start," said Lee. "I just had some hard running to get the 100."

Red Devils prove worthy of Top 10 rankin'

By BILL GRIMES
Sports Writer

GARDEN CITY — Between them, Rankin running backs Terry McCravey, Brian McCravey and Francisco Gonzales weigh about as much as William "The Refrigerator" Perry.

But they can take a hit!

The McCraveys, 124-pound senior twins, and the 124-pound Gonzales took the best the Garden City Bearkats had to offer in a 35-15 win for their Red Devils here Friday. Terry McCravey led the trio with 100 yards on 10 carries, while Gonzales added 92 yards on 13 trips and Brian McCravey — the team's "inside" threat — chipped in with 72 yards on 15 carries.

Rankin now has the inside track on the District 8-A championship. The Red Devils dealt Garden City their only district loss last season.

Together, the three made it easier for Rankin quarterback Kirk Kennedy to operate the Red Devils' veer offense. Kennedy rushed for a game-high 120 yards and three touchdowns on 18 carries.

Terry McCravey and Gonzales added the other two Red Devil scores.

The Devils, ranked sixth in The Associated Press Class A poll, ran around the slower Bearkats for 384 yards in only 55 trips — an average of almost seven yards a pop.

"They have so much talent," Garden City coach Sam Scott said. "If you're off station at all, they can burn you."

Rankin started its arson job from the get-go after the hosts failed to get anything going on their first possession. The Red Devils mixed alternating runs by the McCravey twins with one of only two completed passes in a seven-play, 52-yard drive that Kennedy capped by eluding Bearkat defenders on a 17-yard TD run around right end with 7:20 left in the first quarter.

Garden City struck back on its next possession with a 10-play, 65-yard drive that tailback James Soles capped by leaping over the line from the one-yard line with four minutes left in the period. Soles rushed for a team-high 106 yards on 17 carries to boost his season total to 1,161 yards.

But Soles' score was Garden City's last offensive gasp while the outcome was still in doubt. The Bearkats finished with only 209 total yards, while turning the ball over four times.

Scott was disappointed with the hosts' offensive showing.

"We didn't move the ball as well as I thought we could," the coach said.

Still, the Bearkats stayed in the hunt with outstanding clutch defense in the second period.

Four times the Red Devils had the ball in Garden City territory during the second 12 minutes, and four times the Bearkats stopped Rankin short of the goal line.

Despite the frustration of falling short, Rankin coach Troy Kennedy was hopeful going into the second half, as was Scott.

"We weren't worried in the first half," coach Kennedy said. "We were moving the ball well."

Meanwhile, Garden City was encouraged by its second-quarter showing.

"We played as good on defense as we could play then," Scott said. "I felt like we were in great shape at halftime, but..."

Rankin stalled on its first possession of the second half, and Garden City got a quick first down on a 14-yard pass from Hoelscher to tight end Wesley Glass.

Bay Bashers are back

Athletics smash five homers in 13-7 rout

By BEN WALKER

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Baseball is back in the Bay area, and it's like the Oakland Athletics never left.

The A's returned from an 11-day earthquake layoff stronger than ever, tying a World Series record with five home runs, including two by Dave Henderson and even one by slumping Jose Canseco, and routing San Francisco 13-7 Friday night for an all-but-invincible 3-0 lead.

No team has ever rallied from such a deficit and the Giants show no signs of being able to do it, either. They had hoped the break might stall Oakland's momentum, but instead they got bashed again.

Dave Stewart did not get a shutout, as he did in Game 1, but he didn't need one. He outpitched Scott Garrelts for the second time this series and is now 4-0 in the postseason.

From the start, the crowd of 62,038 was ready for baseball and so were the A's. They stood respectfully, but anxiously, during a moment of silence at precisely 5:04 p.m. PDT — the time the earthquake struck — and a tribute to victims, rescuers and survivors.

Then it was time to play ball. And Oakland did, just like all during the delays. The Athletics, unlike the Giants, spent the break playing simulated games and even went to their spring-training site in Phoenix for a practice game against their instructional league team.

If pitchers are supposed to be ahead of hitters after a layoff, it didn't show.

Dave Henderson hit a two-run double in the first inning and he and Tony Phillips each homered in fourth — just as they had in Thursday's practice in Arizona.

Canseco and Henderson connected in the fifth and Carney Lansford's shot in the sixth made it 9-3 and gave Oakland its season-high for home runs. The Athletics outhit San Francisco 14-10 and Canseco ended his 0-for-23 World Series slump by going 3-for-5.

Lansford also got three hits and tied a series record by scoring four times.

Not even the absence of designated hitter Dave Parker, who had a home run and double in the first two games, hurt Oakland. Forced to bat because the game was played in the National League park, Stewart went 0-for-3. American League pitchers are now hitless in 70 at-bats in the World Series since 1979.

The Giants, held to one run on nine hits in the first two games — the worst series start since Philadelphia did the same in 1950 — did a little better this time.

Tricky Longhorns treating faithful fans with hope

Appropriately enough, Halloween is almost here and all of a sudden Texas Longhorn fans are seeping out of the woodwork; awakening and coming out of the casket so to speak.

Price

Not since the days of little Freddie Akers' first season as UT (or TU, as Texas A&M and Texas Tech fans refer to it) head coach have Texas Exes been so thoroughly obnoxious.

But the 1989 'Horn football team, leading the Southwest Conference with a 4-2 overall record and a 3-0 loop mark, has given former, present and wannabe Austinites reason to gloat. After consecutive wins over rivals Oklahoma (Penn State?) and Arkansas, Texas cracked the Associated Press Top 25 for the first time of the season this week.

Now don't get me wrong, I have never really disliked the Longhorns. As a matter of fact, in my youth and long lost innocence I tended to bleed burnt orange. I mean, what native Texan football fan would not pull for the 1969 national title team that sported names like Happy Feller, James Street, Steve Worster and Cotton Speyrer (remember Worster-Speyrer sauce?).

That team played under the tutelage of one Darrell Royal, renowned throughout the world of sports journalism for his country quips and wishbone offense. Royal lived up to his regal name by providing Longhorn fans with plenty to cheer about for a couple of decades (1957-76), with 11 SWC titles and two mythical national championships.

Of course, that was in the days of unrestricted scholarships, when coaches would gobble up high school stars who might not ever play a down at the football factory. That way, those players would not be scoring, blocking or tackling against the coaches' own teams.

That was also at a time when under-the-table payoffs to players from alumni were considered by coaches to be more a good deed, rather than a heinous act that only the state's governor would endorse.

Then upon Royal's retirement from coaching (he stayed on as athletic director for a few years before succumbing to the urge to golf almost daily with Willie Nelson or some other country singer), Akers came from Wyoming to take over the Steers' reins. (Do the UT fanatical really understand the literal definition of the word steer?)

Despite a winning percentage in the neighborhood of .800 over 10 years, Akers was deemed unacceptable by alums and administration alike. So university officials went out and raided Tech a couple of years ago, claiming former Longhorn player and assistant coach David McWilliams. After a successful season by Tech standards (7-5 in 1986 with an Independence Bowl appearance), McWilliams was ready to jump ship and went back to the Forty Acres.

Anyway, after a season-opening disgrace at the hands of Colorado and lackluster performances in wins over SMU and Rice, McWilliams seems to have the 'Horns on a roll with a few freshmen in the offensive backfield.

So now Texas faithful have taken to expounding on the genius of McWilliams and anybody else associated with the university. It wasn't enough that Tom Penders had to come in and finally make UT men's basketball half way respectable. With both programs competitive, we may never hear the end of UT alumni ramblings.

So, safe in the knowledge that they won't heed it, I offer this parcel of advice to UT fans (note tongue placed firmly in cheek): After Texas returns from its open date this week, and when the urge to rant about the Longhorns hits, please try to remember what goes around comes around. As Dallas Cowboy fans are so painfully aware, no team can stay on top forever.

DISTRICT 4-5A

Comer returns as Permian bamboozles Cooper, 56-0

By BILL PRICE
Sports Writer

ODESSA — All Midland Lee had to do to get a seventh consecutive trip to the Class 5A football playoffs Friday was sit in the stands and watch as Odessa Permian took Abilene Cooper apart 56-0.

And the most respect Cooper received Friday at Ratliff Stadium was when the partisan Odessa Permian crowd gave the Cougar band, nearly 500 members strong, a standing ovation at half time.

While Cooper was busy laying down for ole' Mojo by a 56-0 final score, Permian and Midland Lee, which was idle Friday, both earned postseason bids with the Panther win and a 14-9 Midland High victory over San Angelo.

Cooper certainly did not earn any accolades on the football field, because by the the time the bands took the artificial surface midway through the game, Mojo had piled up a 42-0 lead. Permian's offense had never even touched the ball and the Panthers still took a 7-0 lead on senior receiver Lloyd Hill's 52-yard punt return after the Cougars were held in check on their opening possession. That was an omen of things to come for Cooper and set the stage for the band.

The Permian second and third teams scored a pair of touchdowns in the third period, then Mojo coasted and began pondering what will take place next Friday when it comes to Memorial Stadium for the annual slugfest with Lee.

Lee, 6-1 overall, and 7-0 Permian are tied for the 4-5A lead with identical 4-0 records in District 4-5A. Cooper fell to 4-4 and 2-3, while San Angelo dropped from playoff contention with a 1-3 loop mark. The Panthers claimed their third consecutive postseason appearance and their ninth in the 1980s with the win.

All that now needs to be determined in the district race is who gets to be the No. 1 playoff seed, and who will take the No. 2 spot.

For Lee followers, one of the more more interesting aspects of the Panther-Cougar tilt was the return of star Permian running back Chris Comer, a 195-pound senior. Comer, who was sidelined with a knee injury against Midland High four weeks ago, made a triumphant return to the gridiron with a 59-yard, two-touchdown performance before sitting with the rest of Mojo's first team offense after the second quarter.

Bulldog Michael Morse (42) rejoices after sacking San Angelo quarterback Shea Morenz.

BULLDOGS

But the key of the game may have come from a defensive mistake from MHS linebacker Rey Leyba. Leyba ended the third period when he intercepted a Morenz pass and returned it from the MHS 40 to the San Angelo 15-yard line. That set up the short winning drive and Lee's final TD run.

"Actually, that wasn't supposed to be my play," said Leyba. "I was supposed to be lined up on the other side of the field, but two of us linebackers got crossed up and were in the wrong position. But the ball came to me and I got it. If I had a little more speed, I would have scored."

It may have been a mistake, but first year head coach Davis Corley was glad to see it.

"Well, we needed some good things to happen to our defense," said Corley. "We've been hurt by mistakes like that all year, but we made a couple tonight that put us in just the right position to make the play. I'll take it. I don't know how long it's been since we've had a decent return on an interception, but this one sure came at a good time."

But it was good enough and that play seemed to inspire the MHS defense for the final surge.

Defensive lineman Joe Fleming intercepted a Bobcat pass on San Angelo's next series after San Angelo had marched for two first downs.

Then the defense turned in another big play when Mark Guajardo sacked Morenz and Matt Wyatt recovered to stop the Bobcats again and the MHS offense then ran out the clock for the victory.

Corley was elated with the team's defensive play.

"We finally had a great game in the secondary. Herd's interception was a big one in the first half and I thought both Jason Stone and Patrick Mowles played well in the secondary.

"It was a great win and I'm proud of our kids. I still thought we could win the game when we got down 9-0 because our offense was moving the ball. We were just stopping ourselves. It was the best defensive game, by far, we've had this year."

It was the first time in a month that MHS had played at home, but the Bulldogs return to the road next week to take on third place Odessa High at Ratliff Stadium, the site of a 51-0 loss to Odessa Permian.

And not many people will notice when the Bulldogs leave town since the Odessa Permian-Midland Lee game will be staged before a packed Memorial Stadium and national TV audience. Should the Bulldogs be able to work a big upset next week, it may go almost unnoticed. But, for once, the Pack would love to keep this streak going.

Crane drops bomb on Greenwood

By DANNY BOBBITT
MRT Correspondent

GREENWOOD — There are big plays and then there are "BIG" plays. The Crane Golden Cranes rushed for only 38 yards the entire first half, but as they trotted off the field at intermission the scoreboard read Crane 34, Greenwood 7. The Golden Cranes explosive first half paved the way to a 41-13 demolition of the Greenwood Rangers Friday night.

The Rangers were riding a three-game home win streak and were still in the hunt for the 4-AAA District crown.

"We knew how tough they were here at home", said Crane head coach Johnny Burleson. "This puts us at 3-0 with only Alpine and Kermit remaining. Alpine has been very good at times and Kermit looks to have a fine club."

Crane quarterback Mark Sanchez supplied most of the first-half fireworks in only his second offensive start of the year. Sanchez hit on all eight of his pass attempts for 200 yards and three touchdowns. He also added 75 yards in punt returns and scored a touchdown on a 48-yard fumble recovery he snatched in mid-air early in the second quarter.

Sanchez found split end Coury Jones behind the Ranger secondary for a 65-yard scoring play with 6:05 left in the first quarter. Jones added the point after attempt to put the Cranes up 7-0.

Greenwood answered with a four-yard scoring pass from Cody Mebane to Justin Bain that capped a 55-yard drive that took nine plays. Chris Engler added the PAT that knotted the score, 7-7, with 2:04 left in the first.

Crane put together a five-play, 68-yard drive to take a 14-7 lead with :17 left in the initial stanza. The score came when Sanchez hit Jon Tidmore with a 54-yard touchdown strike.

Greenwood started the second quarter moving the ball, but the freak fumble grabbed in mid-air by Sanchez and returned for a score gave Crane a 20-7 lead with 9:17 left until halftime.

Crane running back Ricardo Garza added two more scores before the break on a 27-yard sweep and a 13-yard reception from Sanchez. Jason Pettit burst into the end zone for a two-point conversion that provided the Golden Cranes their 34-7 halftime lead.The final Crane talley came late in the third quarter on a 38-yard gallop by Tidmore. Jones' PAT moved the Crane lead to 41-7.

Greenwood put the final points on the board when Mebane hit Randy Marquez with a 15-yard touchdown toss.

In a game hard to find bright spots, two performances stood out for the Rangers. Fullback Brian Aylor rushed for 102 yards on 23 carries and Marquez has 66 yards on the ground and 99 yards in kick off returns.

Crane improves to 5-3 on the season, while Greenwood drops to 3-5. The Rangers travel to Kermit next week before facing Clint on the road for their final regular season contest.

Buffs stampede past Van Horn

By GEORGE BRZEZINSKI
MRT Correspondent

STANTON — The Stanton Buffaloes upped their record to 6-2 and kept their District 5-2A mark perfect at 3-0 with a 42-7 pounding of the Van Horn Eagles here Friday. The Buffaloes' offense seemed to score at will while the defense held Van Horn to one first down and only 36 total yards in the first half.

Stanton's opening drive almost proved fatal. After marching to within six inches of the Van Horn end zone, a goal line stand and a five yard penalty set up a third and long for the Buffs. But Randy Navarez found a wide open Chris Carder to put Stanton on the board, 6-0.

The Eagles' first possesion ended in a blocked punt which gave the Buffs great field position. Navarez could not pick up the first, however, and a 32 yard field goal attempt was blocked.

After trading possesions, Navarez hit Kenny (Slick) McCalister, who stole the ball from two frustrated Eagle defenders thirty yards out, and took it in for the score and a 14-0 lead.

While the Buffalo defense stymied the Van Horn offense, Navarrez showed he can run, too. Late in the second quarter, he scrambled right and broke several tackles en route to his 65 yard TD run.

After the intermission, Van Horn coach Jose Martinez felt he needed to get lucky. Thats exactly what he did, inserting junior quarterback Lucky Mendez, who promptly completed Van Horn's first pass of the game, a 58 yard gain to Eleno Mendez. Lucky's luck did not last as his very next pass was picked off by Mike Graham.

Van Horn's only score was the hightlight of the game. With the ball on Stanton's 5 yard line, Manuel Carrillo left the huddle early and lined up wide right. The old hidden player trick worked to perfection and Van Horn was on the board.

The Buffaloes showed they don't like being embarrassed and took the ensuing kickoff 68 yards on 4 plays to increase their lead, 28-7.

Early in the fourth quarter McCalister made another incredible catch with three defenders hanging on him. And with the second team on the field, Stanton senior Brian Cain scratched out another six, highlighted by his 43 yard pickup which set up the 1 yard dive.

Stanton Coach Dale Ruth was excited about his team's performance.

"We got a great effort from our younger players, the juniors and sophmores, and any coach likes to see that."

Ruth knows that next week's matchup with Iraan is crucial and thinks his team is ready.

"That game will decide the district, no question," he said.

Midland Christian back Jay Dallas, left, looks for running room as lineman John Martinez (30) hunts for someone to block.

Midland Christian clinches district championship

From Staff Reports

This one got so carried away they called it at the half.

Midland Christian rocked and rolled over Victory Christian, 61-12 Friday afternoon, and in the process clinched the North Texas Christian Football Conference district championship; the Mustangs close out the season next week at non-conference Bethel Christian.

The Mustangs had 253 yards rushing in the first half, which, again, turned out to be the whole game.

With 61 points talleyed, one would think that there was one major star. Such was not necessarily the case — points-wise — for Midland Christian. Scoring was spread evenly across the board.

Joe White, Sammy Cox and Aaron Autrey each had two touchdowns apiece for the 'Stangs and Clint Hall, Kevin Johnson and John Martinez had one apiece.

The 'Stangs final score was a 60 yard kickoff return by Autrey, just moments after Victory Christian's Jason Williams had raced 70 yards on a kickoff return. Oddly enough, just prior to Williams' return, Autry had run a punt back 25 yards. It can even be taken one step further back — as on the Mustangs' possession prior to the punt return, Martinez' score came on a 25 yard interception return.

A total of only seven passes were thrown in the high scoring affair. And oddly enough, Midland Christian led in turnovers, 2-1.

But fullback Eric Seidenberger fumbled on the next play and Terry McCravey recovered for Rankin at the Bearkat 46. Seven plays later, Kennedy took it around end again from six yards out for the touchdown that effectively put the game away with 2:06 left in the third period.

The Rankin signal-caller said his offensive line helped get him and his diminutive backfield mates loose.

"The line blocked excellent — better than they have been all season," Kirk Kennedy said. "They really impressed us."

Kennedy ran primarily behind right tackle Gabe Hyatt and right guard Randy Braden. "We ran that way quite a bit because we were able to get outside their ends," the QB said.

Kennedy scored his third touchdown on an 11-yard run early in the fourth period after Brian McCravey and Gonzales alternated carries on a nine-play 73-yard drive. Coach Kennedy said the running backs' success helped set up his son near the goal.

"We got great second effort from our backs to open up Kirk on the outside," the Devil mentor said.

Rankin, 6-1 overall and 2-0 in 8-A play, hosts Sterling City next Friday. Garden City, 5-2, 1-1, will try to lick its wounds with a home game against Water Valley.

From Staff Reports

PECOS — The Big Spring Steers remained in first place in District 4-4A with a 28-0 win over the Pecos Eagles here Friday night and can now almost start thinking about the state playoffs.

Fullback Jermaine Miller scored three touchdowns on short runs to pace the victory and Neal Mayfield rounded out the scoring with a 55-yard run in the first quarter.

The Steers dominated the contest with 346 yards rushing while Pecos was held to a meager nine on the ground. Steer quarterback Rance Thompson also passed for 87 yards.

'Stangs break from doldrums to down San Angelo Lake View

From Staff Reports

SAN ANGELO — The Andrews Mustangs have had some trouble putting big points on the boards this year, but that wasn't the case here Friday night as Andrews bombed San Angelo Lake View 41-14.

The Mustangs are now 3-4 on the year and 2-2 in District 4-4A play, but have the task of meeting league leading Big Spring next week at home.

However, the point outburst must have gotten the attention of Big Spring as they churned out an amazing 576 yards rushing and got three touchdown runs from Robert Morris.

Andrews had over 600 yards of total offense as they also put up 43 air yards.

Lake View fell to 1-6 and 1-3.

Matt Carroll, Kelly Cornejo and Chris Garrett all had TDs for the Mustangs. Garrett's came from 46 yards out.

SERIES

Matt Williams hit a solo homer and Terry Kennedy had a two-run single in the fourth to pull San Francisco within 4-3. Stewart then toughened and allowed just one more hit. When he left after seven innings, he had given up five hits

When Bill Bathe hit a three-run homer in his first World Series at-bat in the bottom of the ninth, it set a record for most homers — seven — in a series game. Teams had combined for six in three previous games, the last in Game 6 of the Cincinnati-Boston series in 1975, the game that Carlton Fisk won with a 12th-inning homer.

Oakland's five homers matched the mark set by Babe Ruth, Lou Gehrig and the New York Yankees in 1928.

Oakland has outhomered the Giants 8-2 in the series. San Francisco hit 141 home runs during the regular season while the Athletics, baseball's winningest team, hit 127.

After Bathe's homer, a bank of lights in right-center went out, as well as portions of light banks in other locations around Candlestick Park. As the lights darkened, fans who had come to the park carrying flashlights, just in case, flicked them on and off.

Bathe's homer cut the A's lead to 13-6. After Candy Maldonado struck out, Donell Nixon singled and Greg Litton doubled him home.

The hitters did just fine all evening and so did the fielders. Only the Giants pitchers had trouble as the layoff did not seem to diminish the quality of play. There were three errors, all by the Giants, but also several nice plays on both sides.

There were no tremors this time, although the scoreboard did post instructions on what to do in case of an aftershock. There was, however, almost a rumble in the first inning.

With one out and one on, Garrelts threw high-and-tight to Canseco. Garrelts then came back with a 91 mph fastball even closer to Canseco's head, and the 6-foot-5 slugger took a couple of steps toward the mound.

Kennedy, the catcher, tried to intervene and instead got shoved by Canseco as players from both dugouts started onto the field. The umpires quickly restored order, and Canseco followed with a single.

Garrelts, the NL earned run average champion at 2.28, lasted just 3 1-3 innings and gave up four runs on six hits. In the opener, he was tagged for five runs on seven hits in four innings.

Canseco had been approaching the series record for the longest slump, 0-for-31 by Detroit's Marvin Owen in the 1930s. Owen is now 83 and lives in nearby Santa Clara.

Henderson, a postseason hero wherever he goes, put Oakland ahead 2-0 with a double off the top of the right-field fence. The ball got caught in the wind and seemed to fool Pat Sheridan, who was making his first start in the series.

Henderson homered to open the fourth, giving him six homers in 97 postseason at-bats, and Phillips' one-out blow finished Garrelts.

Reliever Kelly Downs put himself in trouble by walking Rickey Henderson and Lansford to start the fifth. After two close pickoff plays on Henderson at second base, Canseco hit a line drive over the left-center field fence and made sure he tipped his cap to the booing fans.

Henderson stole two bases, giving him a postseason-record 11, breaking Davey Lopes' mark of 10. Henderson has been caught only once.

Henderson also has drawn eight leadoff walks in the postseason, scoring after six of them.

MHS netters fall at regional tourney

From Staff Reports

ABILENE — El Paso Coronado came from out of nowhere to upset the 11th ranked Midland High Bulldog tennis team at regional action Friday, sending the 'Dogs home until individual play begins in February.

Coronado, unranked and virtually unheard of outside of El Paso, downed MHS 10-5.

Coronado at one point held a five-matches-to-one edge; the 'Dogs came back to a 5-9 deficit before surrendering the final match.

Midland High's No. 4 singles player Lanny Temple defeated Rod Stogner, 6-3, 7-6 for the 'Dogs only win on the boys' side.

No. 1 seed Harper Essex fell, 7-6, 6-3, and No. 2 Leo Oei fell, 6-4, 3-6, 5-0.

The top 3 girls' players, Elizabeth Ameel, Susan Johnson and Tracey Hopkins all won and the No. 2 doubles pair of Ameel-Whelan represented the 'Dogs other victories.

"I felt like we went into the match with Coronado knowing full well that they were going to be tough," head tennis coach Steve Hoover said. "Even though they weren't seeded, from the information I got in the seeding meeting I knew they were going to be tough."

"Elizabeth, Susan and Tracey put in a very good effort. The girls came through for us with the wins.

"All we have to do now is gather ourselves and get ready for some hard work and get after them in the spring when we start with individual play."

Hoover said despite being unranked he expects El Paso Coronado — if it can beat the state's top ranked team, Lubbock Coronado, will win the regional match and head to the state tournament next weekend.

Waiting for the Series: Does anybody care?

By JOHN NELSON
AP Sports Writer

The playoffs were over on Oct. 9, for crying out loud. That was three weeks ago. There's already snow in the hills and ice on the pond.

The San Francisco Giants and Oakland Athletics played the second game of the World Series way back on Oct. 15, three days after Columbus Day.

Halloween is just a couple of days off, and there are only 56 more shopping days 'til Christmas. How could anyone still care about the World Series?

"There's only one national pastime," said Nelson D. Ross, an Atlanta office worker and obviously one of baseball's faithful. "There's only one sport for thinking Americans."

Sadly, by Ross' standards, unthinking Americans abound. The World Series was delayed so long by the earthquake that even Jose Canseco had time to break out of a slump. In the meantime, a lot of fans got the baseball blahs.

"I don't think they do care," said James Deady, bartender at Pastrami & Things, fine purveyor of New York deli meats and sports baloney. "It's amazing. I have to be interested, though. I'm holding the World Series pool money."

"It's very unfortunate," Deady's barmate, Bobby Corsi, said, "because I think the most exciting time of the year is the World Series."

Dr. Thomas Tutke, sports psychologist and professor at San Jose State University, about eight miles from the earthquake's epicenter, says he thinks there already was "a laissez faire attitude about the World Series. It was like people were saying, 'How many games before the A's win?'"

"Couple that with the long delay and an all-West Coast Series," Tutko said, "and I think there is less interest, unless you're a true baseballholic."

At Cannon's, a sports crazy tavern on Manhattan's upper West Side, they've got all sorts of "holics." The baseball variety aren't especially interested in the World Series unless the Yankees are in it, but now it's even worse.

"I think a lot of people figured they'd just cancel it," Cannon's day bartender, Marty Whalen, said. "I bet on the Giants, and I was hoping they would cancel it."

The NFL regular season is half over, and scouts for the bowls already are in the seats at big college games. With fistsfull of football betting slips, haven't sports nuts already moved on to the gridiron?

"I know we're midway into the football season, and we've got a lot of big football fans here that have forgotten about baseball," said Mike Allegra, general manager of Valentine's Sports Gallery in Milford, Conn. "But baseball fans are still baseball fans, and they want to see the World Series."

It needn't even be a World Series. Baseball fans will watch any kind of baseball. That's an oft-proven axiom of the couch potato set.

"We've got a lot of diehard baseball fans who'll watch whether it's Paducah or Toledo playing," said Bill Street, assistant manager at Nick's English Hut on the Indiana University Campus, but "some of the fever has died off because of the long delays."

Even some of those diehard baseball fans have mixed feelings about cheering on a World Series in the aftermath of an earthquake.

"It's so screwed up," said Mark Kochan of East Detroit. "You're ready for the game, and a catastrophe like this happens. The players themselves can't cope with it. They'll never be comfortable. The fans aren't going to be comfortable. I'm not going to say, 'Who cares,' but ... we'll never know who the real champs will be."

Before Game 3, baseball writer Moss Klein, who keeps track of such things for the Newark Star-Ledger in New Jersey, wrote: "Research shows that the A's are holding a two-games-to-none lead. ..."

What records that man must keep!

Speaking of which: What was Canseco's slump, anyway? 0-23? Or 1-900?

"I think the guys at Cannon's do remember that," Whalen said. "I don't think anybody from New York will be calling Canseco's 900 number anymore."

Then again, they've only got three televisions at Cannon's, so what do they know? At The Anchor in Charleston, W.Va., they've got 16 TV's, and they haven't given up on baseball ... entirely.

Bartender Tom Tucker says interest might actually be higher because of the earthquake. "People are going to want to see how the players play after a week and a half off," he said.

Unfortunately, interest in an all-West Series wasn't very high to begin with, he said. That's why Tucker expected more football watchers than baseball watchers over the weekend.

"But we'll have both games on the TV," he said. "People can see whatever they want here."

If the rest of the country is baseball blase, people in the Bay area aren't, Tutko said. They really want fans everywhere to see their World Series.

"There are several things at work here for the people," Tutko said.

"If you look at research done in other areas of trauma, in death and dying for example, one of the first stages of recovery is denial," he said. "Baseball, and sports in general, is an excellent diversion."

Then, there's pride in survival. Tutko recently met with his San Jose State class of 600 for the first time since the earthquake.

"The thing we were all impressed with was the coolness, calmness and supportiveness of the people," he said. "People were jumping out of cars and directing traffic, helping the injured. It defies the picture of the egotistical, crazy Westerner. ...

"You see all the horror, the crushed cars, that picture of a woman being taken out of a store with her leg mangled. Here's a recovery story second to none, and the World Series is our proof we made it."

Quake not a first

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Apparently there's a precedent for Oakland and San Francisco playing baseball 11 days after an earthquake. It happened long before the Giants and Athletics met Friday in Game 3 of the World Series.

On April 29, 1906, exactly 11 days after the Bay area was flattened by an earthquake and fire, the San Francisco Seals beat the Oakland Oaks 7-3 in a minor-league game for the recovery effort.

The top ticket for that benefit cost 50 cents and the game raised $1,000.

Kite takes lead at PGA Nabisco

By GORDON S. WHITE Jr.
NY Times News Service

HILTON HEAD ISLAND, S.C. — Winds came off the Atlantic Ocean strong enough to be to Tom Kite's liking on Friday: 25 to 30 miles an hour, and swirling through the big trees lining the Harbour Town Golf Links.

Not many of his 29 opponents were as pleased with the conditions as was the 39-year-old Texan, who chose his clubs well, executed deadly iron play and shot a six-under-par 66 on a course that is difficult even on a calm day.

The score moved Kite into a four-shot lead halfway through the third annual Nabisco championship, which is limited to the 30 top money winners on the year's PGA Tour.

Kite, No. 2 on that money list, was at eight-under 134 after 36 holes on the 6,657-yard, par-71 links.

"I don't think anybody anticipated there would be any scores that low in this wind," Kite said about his 66.

"I lucked out on some club selections."

Donnie Hammond, riding a hot streak this month, finally had a round over par.

He shot a 73 and fell from the lead and into a tie for second with Mark O'Meara.

Hammond's round was his first over par in 10 rounds.

Kite won the Player's championship last March 19, a day on which strong winds whipped over the Tournament Players Club in Ponte Vedra, Fla.

Three months later, on a calm but soggy day, Kite, who has yet to win one of the four majors, squandered a two-shot lead in the final round of the U.S. Open. Curtis Strange went on to win.

"Anyone who follows the tour knows that I love the wind," Kite said.

"And I hope the wind blows the next two days. I don't anticipate another score like this, but I do hope the wind blows to my liking."

The Southwest Conference rises from the dead

By DENNE H. FREEMAN

DALLAS (AP) — You don't hear jokes about the Southwest Conference much anymore.

Oh, there are still some one-liners when the weekly slaughter of the Southern Methodist Mustangs is announced. Slippery Rock and SMU. Two automatic laughs for a stadium announcer.

Until the reborn Mustangs show signs of running on four strong legs, there will be a public fascination about their failures.

But SMU is the only SWC team you can beat like a borrowed horse these days.

Ask LSU, Arizona State, Oklahoma, Oklahoma State, Kansas, Air Force, and Arizona if the SWC is as much fun to schedule as it used to be.

Rice and TCU are showing signs of life. When TCU upset 19th-ranked Air Force last Saturday, it alerted a lot of people to the league's depth.

Certainly voters in The Associated Press poll are taking notice. Four SWC teams (Houston, Arkansas, Texas A&M and Texas) were listed in the nation's Top 25 on games through Oct. 21.

This is a big compliment, considering the national black eye the SWC has sported most of the 1980s because of recruiting scandals. NCAA penalties prompted a mass defection to other schools of the homegrown talent that had made the SWC one of the most respected and feared leagues in the land.

The SWC has had only one team, Texas A&M, ranked in the Top 10 since 1985. There were none in 1988, Texas A&M was 10th in 1987, and none in 1986. Texas A&M finished sixth after the 1985 season.

The last time the SWC had four teams ranked nationally in the same week was Oct. 1, 1985.

The SWC is 15-8-1 against outside competition, a big improvement over a 1988 season that saw the league drop to 17-18, including bowl games.

And the conference talent appears to be well spread around, which is leading to one of the most interesting races of the decade.

Almost halfway through the season, only the Texas Longhorns were unbeaten in league play, and they still had games left against Texas A&M, Houston, Baylor and Texas Tech.

At Texas Christian, it's freshman quarterback Leon Clay and his touchdown passes against the Air Force.

At Texas Tech, they're buzzing about running back James Gray and the sparkling job of quarterback Jamie Gill.

At Arkansas, there's anticipation over redshirt running back E.D. Jackson.

At Texas A&M, they're admiring the linebacking of William Thomas.

At Texas, there's wonderment over redshirt freshman quarterback Peter Gardere.

At Rice, there's applause over the performances of quarterback Donald Hollas.

At Baylor, there are handslaps over the work of linebacker James Francis.

At Houston, there's awe over the feats of quarterback Andre Ware.

At SMU, there's appreciation for the courage of quarterback Mike Romo and the gumption of the Mustangs.

Although the Cotton Bowl would have preferred an unbeaten SWC champion (much easier to sell to a highly ranked guest team) there has been a marvelous what's-going-to-happen-next quality about games this fall.

And don't forget, the Mustangs provided one of the most exciting moments of the year when they upset Connecticut after trailing most of the game.

There has been a lot memorable football this SWC season, and November still remains. It's fun again to go back to SWC stadiums.

Jim Bakker's attorney referees for relaxation

By KELLY P. KISSEL

HUNTINGTON, W.Va. (AP) — The attorney for jailed television evangelist Jim Bakker will be wearing stripes of his own on Saturday.

Harold Bender, a Southern Conference referee, will lead the officiating crew at the Virginia Military-Marshall game.

"I do not like the notoriety on the football field," Bender said. "I'd rather no one know me. If I can work a football game and people leave the game talking about the game and not even knowing the officials were there, that's the best thing that could happen."

The game will be Bender's first since Bakker was sentenced to 45 years in prison earlier this week.

"It's going to be a real treat trying to get back to normal," Bender said.

For six weeks beginning Aug. 21, Bender argued the evangelist's case in federal court in Charlotte, N.C. On Saturdays, Bender relaxed with a game of football and occasionally argued with coaches who didn't like his calls.

"It is total relaxation, but not to the point that you're not mentally alert," Bender said. "You concentrate on what's going on at the time and you block out Monday through Friday."

One time this season, it was a little more difficult to separate the religious from the secular.

Bender refereed a game between James Madison and Liberty University, whose president is the Rev. Jerry Falwell, who took temporary control of Bakker's PTL empire after a sex-and-money scandal.

"I was up at James Madison last Saturday talking to a coach and he said, 'I know that guy from somewhere,'" said Tom Hunnicutt, the conference's supervisor of officials. "I told him, 'You've probably been seeing him on the TV every afternoon.'"

Bakker, who Bender said was not a football fan, was sentenced to 45 years in prison and fined $500,000 for fraud. Bender has filed a notice of appeal with the 4th U.S. Court of Appeals, citing pretrial publicity and evidentiary errors.

Bender has been officiating for 21 years — 12 in the Southern Conference. Hunnicutt said that while Bender is dedicated to following the rules, he will bend them if they're best for the game and its players.

For an example, he described a Presbyterian-Citadel game in which Presbyterian returned a late kickoff for a touchdown, narrowing the score to 27-14.

"A new rule stated that of the kicking team, only one person could be more than 10 yards behind the ball. The umpire said there were two men back," Hunnicutt said. "It was a dead-ball foul, meaning the ball should not have been kicked and there shouldn't have been a return.

"Harold wouldn't let them call it. The ball game had been decided."

Bender remembers the game, and the look on the umpire's face when he realized the officiating crew was about to take the touchdown away.

"By rule, you're not given any leeway, but there comes a time when you have to do what's right," Bender said. "I think what we did in that case was right.

"By rule, the umpire was wrong. He said, 'Oh, my gosh!' I said, 'I know what you did but we're not going to take that out on the kid.'"

Bender, 47, took Bakker's case in December and nearly dropped football when the trial was set for late summer.

"I thought about calling Tom and taking a leave of absense, but the more I thought about it, and having officiated the number of years I have, I knew that most judges understand my avocation and will allow me to leave," he said. "I've had judges even adjourn court early on a Friday. They want out early, too, and they can blame it on me."

Survey shows Ryan could win agriculture race

DALLAS (AP) — The Texas Farm Bureau and two other agricultural groups say they have a poll that shows Texas Rangers pitcher Nolan Ryan could defeat Agriculture Commissioner Jim Hightower in the 1990 elections.

Ryan, the major league's strikeout king, has not decided whether he'll seek the GOP nomination for Hightower's job next year.

The poll, conducted for the Farm Bureau, the Texas Cattle Feeders Association and the Texas and Southwestern Cattle Raisers, indicates that 40 percent of those surveyed would vote for Hightower, 29 percent would vote for Ryan and 31 percent were undecided.

According to the survey, Ryan has a 48 percent positive rating and only a 10 percent negative rating. Forty-two percent had no opinion of Ryan.

By comparison, 34 percent of those asked had a favorable opinion or Hightower, compared with 36 percent with an unfavorable opinion and 30 percent with no opinion.

Fifty-three percent said it would not matter whether Ryan conducted his political campaign next year while he continues to play professional baseball.

Pollster Bryan Eppstein of Fort Worth said Hightower's almost one-to-one positive-negative ratio means that he is vulnerable to a challenge by the popular Ryan or other potential candidates.

Andy Welch, a spokesman for Hightower, dismissed the poll.

"This thing has more holes in it than a doughnut shop," said Welch. "I think they would have gotten the same figures if they would have made mention of Akeem Olajuwon or Martina Navratilova."

The three organizations that sponsored the poll tried during the legislative session earlier this year to eliminate Hightower's position. The agriculture commissioner said his political enemies were upset about his strong enforcement of pesticide regulations.

The statewide survey of 800 randomly selected registered voters was conducted by the Eppstein Group between Sept. 26 and 29. It had a margin of error of plus or minus three percentage points.

A BALANCED EDUCATION

Whether we agree or disagree with the Supreme Court's Prayer Decision, on one thing everybody can agree: If you want your children to have a balanced education then the religious aspects of the education must be provided in the church or synagogue and in the home.

How important is this balance? Certainly as important as the quality of education itself. There are dangers in providing a person with knowledge if you do not give them a sense of responsibility in the use of their knowledge. There can be tragedy when skills are acquired without conviction. Oppression and destruction have come upon mankind whenever discipline has been placed in the hands of those who cannot discipline themselves.

Religious education should begin in early childhood and should be fostered by earnest example in the home. Never has there been a day when the spiritual destiny of a nation rested so squarely on each family's decision.

Worship with your children this week!

Proposed liturgical texts take gender out of Trinity

NEW YORK (AP) — The Episcopal Church is exploring the frontier of de-sexed liturgical language with proposed text changes that will cheer some churchgoers but may upset others in the pews.

Among the changes included in the alternative texts under study is substituting "God who creates, redeems and inspires" for "Father, Son and Holy Spirit."

The Supplemental Liturgical Texts, now being experimented with in a few hundred parishes, also offer other alternatives to referring to God and Jesus in masculine terms such as "Lord" and add prayers that highlight the role of women in religion.

"We are trying to answer the need of people throughout the country who feel left out, women in particular who feel the liturgy is male-oriented," said Bishop Vincent Pettit, chairman of the church's Standing Liturgical Commission.

But while some church leaders welcome the new texts as offering a broader vision of God, others predict the radical changes in church services will unsettle many of the denomination's 2.5 million members.

"Are you going to provide flak vests with the book?" Bishop Robert Witcher of the Diocese of Long Island in New York asked the commission when the texts were recently presented to the House of Bishops.

The church's General Convention of 1985 required the liturgical commission to develop inclusive language liturgies — liturgies that do not refer to God in exclusively masculine terms.

In 1988, the General Convention voted that the supplemental services be made available for testing in parishes no later than this Advent following a year of consultation between the liturgical commission and the House of Bishops' Theology Committee.

The Rev. Sarah Motley, coordinator of the liturgical commission's committee on inclusive language in the liturgy, estimates that 200 to 800 of the church's approximately 7,400 parishes would experiment with the services in "Prayer Book Studies 30-Supplemental Liturgical Texts."

After the texts are evaluated in the parishes, the commission will propose supplemental liturgical texts to the 1991 Diocesan Convention.

The change Ms. Motley refers to as "in many ways the most difficult frontier" is the proposed alternative language for the traditional terms for the three divine persons in one God that make up the Christian Trinity — the Father, the Son and the Holy Spirit.

For example, in The Book of Common Prayer, the "Gloria Patri" recited in Morning Prayer is: "Glory to the Father, and to the Son, and to the Holy Spirit: as it was in the beginning, is now, and will be forever." The alternative offered by the supplemental texts is: "Honor and Glory to the holy and undivided Trinity, God who creates, redeems and inspires: One in Three and Three in One, for ever and ever."

Other options offered by the supplemental texts include several instances where phrases in the prayer book are altered to provide gender-neutral terms for Jesus and God. In one part of the Holy Eucharist, for example, the supplemental texts offer the prayer "Blessed is the one who comes in the name of our God" as an alternative to "Blessed is he that cometh in the name of the Lord."

The supplemental texts are "long overdue," said Marjorie Christie, head of the Episcopal Women's Caucus. "The ability to obliterate the totally masculine words from our worship time is a way we are able to broaden our vision of God," she said.

Pettit said it is helpful for churchgoers to pray to a personal God, but they have to be careful not to take masculine terms literally.

"God is not male or female," he said.

While the supplemental texts do not advocate deleting all masculine references to God, they also offer feminine imagery not in the current prayer book.

Instead of ending the evening worship service asking for the blessing of the "Lord," the supplemental texts offer the following alternative: "May the blessing of the God of Abraham and Sarah, and of Jesus Christ born of our sister Mary, and of the Holy Spirit, who broods over the world as a mother over her children, be upon you and remain with you always."

The texts already have drawn criticism.

"I think the result is going to be catastrophic," said the Rev. Jerome Politzer, president of the Prayer Book Society in America, a group of conservative Episcopalians who are opposed to the 1979 revisions to the 1928 Book of Common Prayer.

Politzer said there is nothing "universal, aesthetic or religious" about the changes in the supplemental texts and charged they amount to a new prayer book.

"This is heresy, and should be rejected," Politzer said.

Pettit said even if the 1991 General Convention approved the supplemental texts for use in parishes as an option in addition to the prayer book, they would not be allowed to be published within the Book of Common Prayer.

But advocates for inclusive language hope one day the prayer book will be revised to reflect their concerns.

"Yes, it will be uncomfortable, because explorations are uncomfortable, but it may bring us closer to the God who calls us," said Ms. Motley. "It's the old question: Do people go to church to be comforted, or to be challenged?"

World Community Day to be Friday

World Community Day, sponsored by Church Women United (CWU) on Friday, is designed to bring Protestant, Roman Catholic and Orthodox women together to focus on issues of the wider global community and to heighten awareness of the whole human family.

In Midland, World Community Day services will be at St. Mark's United Methodist Church, 1701 North Main. The executive meeting will be held at 9:30 a.m., the program at 10:30 a.m. and a covered dish luncheon will follow at 11:30 a.m.

By seeking to raise consciousness through prayer, World Community Day challenges churchwomen in the United States to make the critical connections between faith and prayer, politics and action to bring about justice and peace in the world.

This year's worship service, entitled, "To Pray Is To Risk," was prepared by a group of Korean-American women who have lived as immigrants in the United States and suffered poverty and discrimination here. They reflect both their own and the feelings of their sisters in Korea who have been grievously oppressed by the dictatorial government there.

"The World Community Day observance also undergirds Church Women United's Imperative, Assignment: Poverty of Women — a national, unified effort to eliminate the root causes of the poverty of women and children — as it seeks to create a climate of solidarity with those in need and identifies Christian prayer as the act of seeking liberation and doing justice which, in today's world, is risk taking," said a release from CWU.

CWU is the national ecumenical movement that brings Protestant, Roman Catholic, Orthodox and other Christian women together into one community of prayer, advocacy and service.

It represents a broad spectrum of religious tradition, race, age, economic status and ethnic background and functions through a national unit, 52 state units, (including Washington, D.C., and Puerto Rico) and 1,750 local units throughout the United States.

Pierce says he wasn't guilty of any 'wrongful acts'

WASHINGTON (AP) — Former HUD Secretary Samuel R. Pierce Jr. declared Friday he was guilty of "no illegal or wrongful acts" but refused again to testify about scandals at his department, invoking his constitutional right against self-incrimination.

Pierce

Democratic congressmen called for the Justice Department to appoint a special prosecutor to take over the investigation.

The chairman of the House panel investigating allegations of fraud, mismanagement and influence peddling, Rep. Tom Lantos, D-Calif., excused Pierce from a subpoena requiring still another appearance next week and said his panel would soon end its inquiry.

He said the subcommittee had "demonstrated a colossal scandal" existed at the Department of Housing and Urban Development during the Reagan administration. And he said the panel did not plan to offer immunity from prosecution to Pierce or his former aides as a way of compelling them to testify.

"I have high hopes the Justice Department will do its duty," Lantos said.

Asked about Lantos' request for a special prosecutor, Justice Department spokesman Daniel Eramian said: "The Department of Justice is conducting investigations into HUD matters almost on a nationwide basis."

Eramian said the department is conducting 700 investigations "into criminal matters" involving the operation of HUD programs. The department is also "closely reviewing congressional testimony dealing with HUD matters."

Much of the work is being coordinated by the Justice Department's fraud section. But Eramian said the department's public integrity section "is also involved in this effort." That unit of the criminal division investigates allegations of bribery or other improper conduct involving public officials.

Pierce said he was declining to testify because he believed he had been made a target of the subcommittee's investigation and "unfairly accused of alleged lies and dishonesty."

He testified voluntarily before the panel last May. But he refused to testify last month when the panel subpoenaed him to answer questions about what members say are inconsistencies and contradictions between his and other witnesses' testimony.

Following Pierce's latest refusal, two Democrats on the House Judiciary Committee said they would ask it to formally ask the Justice Department to name a special prosecutor to investigate Pierce.

"Now it's clear that Sam Pierce is stonewalling," said Rep. Charles Schumer, D-N.Y. "Our only choice now is to take the process from the legislative arena and move it into the arena of an independent counsel."

"I think it's clear from these hearings ... that there is criminal activity at HUD in the area of defrauding of the federal government, conspiracy to defraud the government, and we may well have perjury," said Rep. Bruce Morrison, D-Conn.

Lantos, meanwhile, disclosed that Pierce had asked HUD to pay his legal expenses stemming from the congressional probe — and that HUD Secretary Jack Kemp had rejected the request.

Pierce read a statement to the panel saying he hoped to give his version of events some day.

"Although people may disagree with policies of the Reagan administration, or with my personal management style while secretary of HUD, I believe that I committed no illegal or wrongful acts," Pierce said.

"I look forward to the time when innuendoes and rumors to the contrary are put to rest," he said. "I look forward to the time when I can tell my story, and I can assure you I do have a story to tell."

The House Government Operations subcommittee on employment and housing has heard scores of developers and consultants testify of political favoritism and mismanagement at HUD during Pierce's tenure.

When he was asked about one former HUD official's contradiction of the former secretary's testimony that he did not influence the selection of HUD subsidy awards, Pierce called the question "unfair" and refused to answer.

Rep. Christopher Shays, R-Conn., said Pierce's earlier testimony on that point "could be perjury" and told Pierce it was "in your best interest" to answer.

Pierce said in September that his refusal to testify was in part because his attorneys had not had time to prepare. He said his attorneys still do not have all the documents they need, but that he was now concerned about "accusatory statements" by panel members.

"An atmosphere has been created in which I have become a target of these hearings and have been unfairly accused of alleged lies and dishonesty," he said.

Prison riot ends with hostages freed

CAMP HILL, Pa. (AP) — A two-night rampage at a state prison ended Friday with a guard and two inmates seriously injured, five hostages freed and much of the overcrowded institution destroyed or damaged by fire, authorities said.

It also left Pennsylvania corrections officials scrambling to find cells for prisoners from Camp Hill, which was 45 percent over its capacity at 2,600 inmates, according to Attorney General Ernie Preate.

The state prison system as a whole is 48 percent over capacity.

There were no deaths and no escapes, officials said. More than 100 people were injured, two hospitalized in critical condition, in the battle to take back the medium-security prison.

"It was a lot of waiting, but when we do it, we do it," said one state trooper, who declined to give his name.

Five staff members taken hostage were either released by inmates or rescued by police, Corrections Department spokesman Ken Robinson said.

Police stormed a kitchen building with guns firing, wounding one inmate as they began taking back control of the prison Friday morning after fires spewed eye-burning smoke into the early morning darkness, officials said. The officers also used tear gas.

Robinson announced at 9:35 a.m. that officials were "again in control of the institution," nearly 15 hours after inmates somehow freed themselves during a lockdown imposed because of a seven-hour riot Wednesday.

State police in riot gear and wielding shotguns pushed surrendering or captured prisoners to the ground, holding them face-down in the grass of a prison courtyard.

"At one point, all inmates were out of all the cellblocks," Robinson said.

Gov. Robert P. Casey said officials would move some prisoners, but Corrections Department spokeswoman Sherri Cadeaux said the destinations and number of inmate transfers would be kept secret.

Fourteen of 31 buildings were gutted by fire, Robinson said, including eight modular housing units.

A Pennsylvania State Police helicopter hovers near a guard's tower as smoke rises from the furniture factory that caught fire at the Camp Hill, Pa., Correctional Institute Friday following a two-day riot by inmates.

Although officials initally believed eight hostages were taken, the number turned out to be five, Robinson said.

None of the hostages suffered life-threatening injuries, officials said.

Robinson said more than 100 people were injured during the two nights. They included firefighters, police and inmates, officials said, though no specific breakdown was immediately available.

An 18-year-old inmate was in critical condition with a gunshot wound to the upper torso, said Marianne Benjamin, a spokeswoman for Polyclinic Medical Center in Harrisburg.

A 24-year-old inmate was listed in serious condition after at least three hours of surgery for a small-caliber gunshot wound to the abdomen, Milton S. Hershey Medical Center spokesman Steve Bortner said.

A 41-year-old guard was listed in critical condition at the medical center with multiple stab wounds to the back, the spokesman said.

Only four hours before violence broke out a second time, Superintendent Robert M. Freeman had said the first night's problems might have been linked to a decision to prohibit families from bringing food to inmates during extended visits. He also said inmates were upset by a change in the way they received medical care.

"You always expect something like this could happen," said Mattie Humphrey, a prison volunteer whose son, Milton, is an inmate serving 10 to 20 years on a weapons offense. "I think the change in the rule that denied family members to bring prisoners home-prepared food was one of the reasons for the rioting."

A state trooper, who said he was on duty all night and had been inside the prison, described the complex as "totally trashed."

"The cellblocks I was in, two cellblocks, are completely demolished," said the trooper, who refused to give his name.

Shortly after dawn, a state police helicopter swooped over the prison, and a trooper using a loudspeaker urged any inmate who wanted to surrender to lie on the ground. One inmate was seen waving a white bed sheet at a window inside and a short time later three more white "flags" were seen in more windows.

Jets to bombard mosquitoes bred by hurricane, rain

CHARLESTON, S.C. (AP) — Mosquitoes are the latest scourge to follow in the wake of Hurricane Hugo, but the Air Force Reserve is coming to the rescue with an aerial bombardment on the pests this weekend.

The Air Force will use C-130 airplanes to swoop down at 150 feet to douse the first of 10 counties with a pesticide to combat the burgeoning mosquito population.

The targeted areas are where high water from the hurricane and several inches of rain the following week left standing water that creates a perfect breeding haven for mosquitoes.

A total of 807,000 acres in the state will be sprayed with the chemical Dibrom, which Maj. Terry Biery of the U.S. Air Force Reserve called the safest chemical for the project. The spray kills living mosquitoes but has no effect on mosquito larvae.

The swarms of mosquitoes are presenting problems for residents "and the mosquitoes were so numerous it was hard for some of the (cleanup) work to be done," said Pat Wright, of the state Department of Health and Environmental Control.

"We also had our people out taking what we call landing rate counts," Ms. Wright said. "It's a warm body who goes out where mosquitoes are breeding and stands for a minute counting the number of mosquitoes that land on them."

But, she said, most of the reports came back that the mosquitoes were "too numerous to count."

The spraying that begins this weekend should be completed in eight to nine days, depending on weather conditions. The $500,000 tab will be picked up by the Federal Emergency Disaster Agency with Hugo disaster funds.

It will be an unusual sight because a C-130 airplane, with a wingspan of 137 feet, seldom flies so close to the ground.

The colorless, odorless spray poses no danger to humans or pets although it can kill bees, officials said.

"This is one of the safest (chemicals) we could put out at one of the lowest doses we could put out," Biery said.

After the hurricane struck Sept. 21, the state health department asked the Centers for Disease Control to check for mosquito-borne viruses, Ms. Wright said.

No viruses were found, but local officials reported the mosquito population was much greater than normal.

The areas that will be sprayed in Charleston County include hard-hit Sullivans Island, the Isle of Palms and McClellanville.

FBI doesn't think Iowa blast purposely triggered

WASHINGTON (AP) — The FBI said Friday its laboratory studies of the USS Iowa disaster found no evidence that any device was deliberately used to detonate the blast that killed 47 sailors.

"We didn't find anything that would lead us to conclude that a device was used to prematurely detonate the charge," FBI spokesman Mike Kortan said.

"That's not to say something wasn't there. Our findings were inconclusive," he said.

But the chairman of the House Armed Services investigations subcommittee said he reads the FBI's laboratory report as undermining the Navy's findings of evidence suggesting a detonating device caused the blast.

"The FBI's lab report has been described as inconclusive," Rep. Nicholas Mavroules, D-Mass., said in a letter. "I do not see it that way."

"It clearly says that they did not find elements that the Navy technicians said they found," Mavroules wrote in a letter to Rep. Mary Rose Oakar, D-Ohio.

Oakar had requested an investigation of the Navy's findings that a former constituent, Gunner's Mate Clayton Hartwig, was most likely responsible for detonating the blast.

Mavroules assured Oakar that his subcommittee staff would "aggressively pursue" its investigation of the Navy's findings.

"I seriously question the conclusion that it was a wrongful intentional act; even if so, is there adequate evidence linking Clayton Hartwig to the cause of the explosion?" Mavroules wrote.

"We are also looking at the quality of the NIS investigation and, more disturbing, why was a report released before all investigative efforts were concluded," Mavroules wrote.

Also on Capitol Hill, Sen. Sam Nunn, D-Ga., chairman of the Senate Armed Services Committee, said he has asked the General Accounting Office "to inquire more thoroughly into the adequacy of the investigative effort and to validate the conclusions of the investigation."

In a letter to Comptroller General Charles A. Bowsher, who heads the GAO, Nunn repeated his plans to hold hearings on the Navy's investigation of the Iowa blast after the Senate and House complete work on the fiscal 1990 defense authorization bill.

Nunn said he was concerned "with certain issues which arose during the Navy's investigation, but which were not pursued since they were not considered to be immediately relevant to the specific task at hand."

Specifically, the senator cited the cause of the April 19 explosion once equipment malfunction and accident had been ruled out.

The Navy, meanwhile, continued to defend its finding that a chemically ignited explosive device "most probably" was placed in the breech of one of the battleship's 16-inch guns to detonate the blast, which killed 47 sailors April 19.

The Navy "is convinced that foreign material" was found in a band of the projectile of the gun, said Cmdr. Mark Baker, a Navy spokesman.

"We are confident about the sophistication of our equipment and the expertise of our technical personnel" that conducted thousands of tests, Baker said.

The FBI's tests were conducted as a result of a request from the Navy to conduct a metallurgical analysis of residue found in the gun and on the barrel of the projectile, Kortan said.

The bureau was asked by the Navy to conduct "an independent examination of the materials they gave us in an attempt to determine if there was some evidence of a device.'"

"We looked at them and we can't draw that conclusion," Kortan said.

Rescuers continue search at Phillips

PASADENA (AP) — Rescue crews continued their around-the-clock search through the rubble at the Phillips Petroleum Co. plastics plant Friday, while company and community leaders organized memorial services for the 22 people believed killed in Monday's blast.

Workers believed they had found an eighth body Friday, but Phillips spokesman Jere Smith said officials determined after a further examination that it was partial remains from a body already counted.

The 15 missing workers are presumed dead.

"It's just a long, slow meticulous process," said Phillips spokesman Dick Robinson four days after the massive blast leveled the huge plant, which accounts for nearly 20 percent of the nation's production of plastic pellets used in the manufacture of milk jugs and grocery bags.

"The work continues," Robinson said. "The number one priority is to get the bodies out and we will continue until it's done."

Two bodies were recovered late Thursday, three on Wednesday and one each on Monday and Tuesday. Only two victims have been identified positively, Smith said.

Identifications have been slowed because the victims were burned beyond recognition and medical examiners have been forced to use dental records in their grim search, Smith said.

Sheryl Tumis of the Harris County Medical Examiner's office said the bodies of two Phillips employees have been identified: James H. Campbell, 30, of Baytown, and Jeffrey L. Harrison, 36, of Houston. The office also identified the bodies of two Fish Construction Co. employees, who were doing contract work at the plant: Jose Gonzales, 38, of Galena Park, and William Scott Martin, 28, of Dayton, Texas.

Ms. Tumis, medical secretary for the office, said the remaining three victims have not been identified.

The first two memorial services for missing employees were conducted Thursday and Friday. Family and friends of Jesse Oscar Trevino, 33, met at St. Helen's Catholic Church near Pearland Thursday, while relatives of Ciprano Rodriguez Jr., 42, of Pasadena met at the Pasadena Funeral Chapel Friday afternoon.

Phillips, the City of Pasadena and the Oil, Chemical and Atomic Workers Local 4-227 scheduled a memorial service for all 22 workers believed killed in the blast for 7:30 p.m. Monday at the Pasadena Convention Center.

A series of explosions Monday afternoon ripped through the Pasadena plastics plant, injuring 124 people and trapping another 22 inside the plant.

The search for victims was halted temporarily Thursday when officials discovered a hydrocarbon leak at the plant. Work was halted for about five hours so other workers equipped with monitors could determine if the level of vapor was dangerous.

Phillips also announced Thursday night that the company will continue to pay regular workers affected by the disaster through Dec. 31. But Lavele L. Frantz, Phillips vice president of Human Resources and Services, also said the company has not yet decided long-term business plans for the facility.

The OCAW's contract with the plant runs out Jan. 31, union officials said.

The company believes flammable hydrocarbon vapor from ethylene and isobutane gases escaped from a leaking chemical reactor, triggering Monday's blast. But Phillips officials have said they don't know how the gases were ignited.

The plant daily produced 4.5 million pounds of polyethylene pellets.

Groups plan service for vet who died alone

HOUSTON (AP) — Veterans groups are planning a memorial service for a Vietnam veteran found dead in a vacant lot and buried in Houston National Cemetery with only two old friends on hand.

John Paul Kolosowski, 36, had been a Marine "tunnel rat," a nickname for smaller soldiers who explored the underground caverns dug by the Viet Cong. Inside, the enemy soldiers kept weapons and explosives and even housed whole hospitals and companies of men.

"We called him 'Ski' back then. Every company had what they called their 'house mouse,' who was usually the smallest guy in the bunch, and Ski was ours," said Johnny Bacot, a former Marine sniper who trained and served with Kolosowski.

"Not that he was any kind of weakling. He was the meanest little guy I ever saw," he said.

But something happened to Kolosowski after he left the service in 1973. By the time of his death Oct. 14, Kolosowski had sunk to the point where he was eating out of dumpsters and living in a burned out building.

"He was as nice as a guy as you'd ever hope to meet most of the time, but when he was messed up drunk, he'd get crazy and start talkin' like he was back in Vietnam," said James "Jimbo" Tullis, who was sleeping in an abandoned garage apartment near the building where Kolosowski stayed and saw him the night before he died.

"He wasn't making any sense ...," Tullis said. "If I'd known he was really sick, I'd have gotten him to the hospital."

Kolosowski was found Oct. 14, apparently dead of pneumonia in the vacant lot. He was carrying a dog-eared card from the Brotherhood of Vietnam Veterans and no other identification.

He remained unidentified for several days until it was learned that he had listed brotherhood directors Gary Thomas and Sibley Cooley as next of kin.

They claimed his body, but because he had not died in a veterans' hospital and was not an outpatient of one, the Veterans Administration would not pay for his burial. Thomas and Cooley had to raise the money.

When he was buried Friday of last week, only Thomas and Cooley, a funeral home employee and a reporter were present.

"Ski was one of those who did a job in Vietnam. He did a job that I wouldn't have wanted, that I don't think anyone would have wanted," Bacot said.

"And I don't care what he became later, because, whatever he became, that wasn't what he was when he was crawling into those tunnels," he said. "They owed him more than that."

Publicity about his death, however, prompted at least 10 veterans' groups to band together to provide a graveside memorial service for Kolosowski today at 10 a.m.

"I would have been there when he was buried, if I had known," said Ben Saenz, president of the L-Z Airborne Association and the man designated to play taps for Kolosowski. "We all would have."

Linda Green, spokeswoman for the Texas Association of Vietnam Veterans and the Houston Foundation for Vietnam Veterans, said the public is invited to the ceremony.

"There will be a service by a chaplain who served in Vietnam, a color guard, a 21-gun salute, musical groups and a lot of donated flowers, everything he should have had," she said.

Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev talks with townspeople in front of the city hall in Oulu, Finland, Friday during his three-day visit to the Scandanavian country.

Gorbachev wants to imitate Finnish research facilities

OULU, Finland (AP) — Mikhail S. Gorbachev visited Finland's version of the Silicon Valley on Friday and told his hosts he wants to build similar high-tech research facilities in the Soviet Union.

"We have done good work here," Gorbachev said before boarding his plane at the end of a three-day state visit, during which he announced a plan to decommission four older model submarines of the Soviet nuclear-armed fleet in the Baltic Sea.

U.S. Defense Secretary Dick Cheney dismissed the gesture as insignificant.

Speaking in Bonn, West Germany, Cheney said the Soviet nuclear capability in the Baltic "frankly wasn't all that great." Experts have described the four Golf II-class Soviet subs as dated and virtually useless.

The proposal also received a lukewarm reaction from neighboring Sweden, which supports a ban on nuclear weapons in Northern Europe.

Gorbachev's proposal was interesting but "should be studied closely before drawing conclusions," said Sten Andersson, foreign minister of the neutral nation.

Swedish opposition leader Carl Bildt said the Golf II-class vessels were "the oldest, rustiest and most scraggly subs in the world."

Gorbachev departed for home Friday after a four-hour tour of Oulu, a remote Baltic Sea city of 100,000 people about 400 miles north of Helsinki.

Thousands of Finns lined the streets to cheer and applaud the Soviet president, who visibly reveled in the attention.

"What a lot of people!" Raisa Gorbachev said of the crowd, which was larger than any that greeted the couple in Helsinki during the first two days of the visit.

Gorbachev waved, shook hands with residents and clasped his hands above his head in victory.

The Kremlin leader, who has admitted his strategy to restructure the economy is in trouble, visited a technological village where 80 science-based companies work on the latest advances in computer hardware, laser equipment and telecommunications.

Gorbachev viewed an exhibit by about 30 companies, displaying curiosity and knowledge in the application of some of the wares, said Pertti Huuskonen, the director of the village.

Huuskonen described the village to Gorbachev as Finland's version of Silicon Valley, a center of high-technology activities in California. He quoted the Soviet leader as saying he wanted the Finns to help set up similar projects in his country.

Gorbachev was presented with an electronic pulse monitor used by athletes and even racehorses that was invented at the technology village, associated with the 8,500-student Oulu University. "Many joggers in Finland don't go out without it," Huuskonen said.

Soviet businessmen operating in Finland have said they have access to technology that is denied them in the Soviet Union by Western export limitations.

In Bonn, Cheney said he supports retention of the limits on technology transfers because he said the Soviet arms capability remains a danger to the West.

Court upholds Aquino had right to ban Marcos' burial

MANILA, Philippines (NYT) — The Supreme Court on Friday narrowly upheld President Corazon C. Aquino's right to ban the return here of the body of her predecessor, Ferdinand E. Marcos.

Chief Justice Marcelo Fernan said the court had ruled, 8 to 7, to reject a petition for reconsideration filed by Marcos supporters asking the court to overrule the president's ban.

The intent of the petition was to allow the return of Marcos for burial, accompanied by his immediate family, from exile in Hawaii.

Marcos died there on Sept. 28.

On Sept. 15, by the same margin, the court upheld Mrs. Aquino's ban on Marcos's return.

Her solicitor general, Francisco Chavez, argued then that the dying Marcos would present a risk to national security, and that Mrs. Aquino was within her rights to prevent his return.

After Marcos's death, the second petition was filed, arguing that his death had removed any threat. Mrs. Aquino had promised to abide by the court's decision.

The opinion cited recent statements by Marcos's widow, Imelda, who faces racketeering charges in the United States, that Mrs. Aquino was not the legitimate president of the Philippines.

In a dissenting opinion, the minority said that any threat posed by the Marcoses was founded in "conjecture, speculation, and imagination."

There was an initial wave of popular sympathy for the right of Marcos to be buried in his homeland, and Mrs. Aquino was accused of vindictiveness.

But the topic is no longer a major one here, and a long-delayed march to Manila by Marcos supporters from his home province, Ilocos Norte, has attracted only 250 people. On Friday, the marchers had reached La Union, 150 miles north of Manila.

Marcos was entombed in Hawaii on Oct. 15 in what his family said was only a temporary burial until the day he would be allowed to return home.

Colleagues mark Anderson's birthday

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Terry A. Anderson, a journalist who was 37 years old when pro-Iranian kidnappers shoved him into a car and sped away, became 42 on Friday — still in captivity, still with no prospect of freedom.

Staff members of the Associated Press bureau in Beirut, where Anderson was chief Middle East correspondent, held a sad but resolute birthday party, as they do each year.

Lebanese newspapers published letters to him from family, friends and colleagues. Television stations broadcast a videotape of his 4-year-old daughter, Sulome, born three months after he was kidnapped March 16, 1985.

The three-minute tape showed Sulome singing "Happy birthday to Daddy," blowing out candles on a birthday cake and reading a letter she wrote telling the father she has never seen that she loves him.

Likewise in the AP office, staffers sang to their boss, "Happy Birthday, dear Terry!" Thirty journalists invited for the occasion joined in.

The party, complete with a cake and candles, was held in Anderson's office, which his colleagues call "Terry's room."

It remains as he left it, as if he might walk in at any time, except for one wall covered with the 14 photographs of Anderson released by Islamic Jihad, the group that holds him, and a few of Sulome.

A small color photograph of his elder daughter, Gabriel, playing with her dog rests on his metal desk. She was 10 when her father was abducted.

The Arabic-language An-Nahar and As-Safir and the French-language L'Orient Le Jour published the letters to Anderson in English, in hopes his captors would allow him to read them. Released hostages say Anderson — the longest-held of the 18 Western hostages in Lebanon — has been given occasional access to newspapers and television.

"In honor of your birthday on Friday, we will be in Washington with other hostage families to mark another sad year in which you have been denied your freedom," his sister, Peggy Say, wrote to him.

"We do our very best for you, Terry, but we come together on another birthday with feelings of frustration and defeat.

"We simply don't know what to do anymore. Our ceremony in Washington is called a Mass of Hope, and we will all pray together that a solution will be found soon to end the terrible ordeal."

She told her younger brother: "A resolution has been passed by the House and Senate making October 27 National Hostage Awarness day. Church bells will toll all over the United States at noon on that day, a message of caring and spiritual support."

Mrs. Say assured Anderson he has not been "abandoned or forgotten."

"Thousands still pray for you every day and your family and friends continue to work for your freedom," she wrote.

The Journalists' Committee to Free Terry Anderson said: "Please believe that not a day passes when we do not think of you and pray for you. We realize that a simple wish of happy birthday today is painfully inadequate.

"On this day, we and millions of Americans are joining together to believe that your next birthday, your 43rd, will be celebrated in the light and the love of your family and friends.

"As always, our thoughts and prayers are with you, and we wish you and the others Godspeed home."

From the Foreign Correspondents Club of Japan, to which Anderson belonged in 1979-81, came a 33-foot birthday scroll signed by 59 journalists, including former colleagues in Tokyo.

On Thursday, the club's press freedom committee issued a statement saying it had sent a message to President Bush, President Hashemi Rafsanjani of Iran and leaders of Lebanon, Syria and the Palestine Liberation Organization requesting greater efforts to get him released.

"The international press community in Japan is particularly saddened and concerned that the nightmare continues daily for our colleague, a respected and conscientious journalist," the message said.

"We appeal to you to accelerate and intensify negotiations to free Terry and other hostages being held in Lebanon."

Mob riots during squid giveaway

LISBON, Portugal (AP) — A seafood promotion sank like a cherrystone Friday when thousands of people mobbed a stand passing out free samples of frozen squid, then chased a truck as it fled with tons of the coveted calamari.

An estimated 3,500 people rampaged through Lisbon's central Rossio square trying to get their samples of the tentacled mollusk, overturning flower stalls that fill the picturesque plaza.

Police were called in to quell the melee. No arrests or injuries were reported.

The frozen squid giveaway was part of a promotional campaign by the Portuguese Institute for Fisheries, which announced Thursday it would hand out 20 tons of squid around the country in an effort to boost sales of frozen seafood.

By 8 a.m., long lines of bargain-hungry citizens surrounded the flimsy wooden stall where the squid samples were to be given out. The truck carrying eight tons of squid showed up at 10 a.m. and the lines collapsed as thousands mobbed the stall.

The truck sped away only two minutes after the distribution began. The crowd chased the truck across the square, overturning stalls and circling a large ornamental fountain.

Komosol membership drops by 4 million

MOSCOW (AP) — Membership in the Communist Youth League, or Komsomol, has dropped by 4 million this year, Tass reported Friday.

"Young people's withdrawal from the Komsomol is one of the signs of the crisis this social-political organization of Soviet youth is undergoing," the official news agency said.

Chairman Victor Mironenko told a Komsomol congress at its Friday opening that the organization has 32 million members but is lagging far behind the political reforms occuring in other parts of Soviet society. For that reason, Mironenko said, members were deserting Komsomol for less official groups.

Komsomol, founded in 1918 by the Communist Party, caters to the 14- to 28-year age group. It works closely with the party, providing most of its recruits and sponsoring educational, recreational and political activities.

Fog cancels flights at some Italian airports

MILAN, Italy (AP) — Thick fog enveloped central and northern Italy for a sixth straight day Friday, forcing the cancellation of dozens of flights and temporarily closing airports.

Road traffic also was slowed by the fog, and several accidents were reported. One man was killed and 14 people injured when a Polish tour bus plunged off a bridge early Friday.

Gunman kills leader of Colombia assembly

BOGOTA, Colombia (AP) — A man walked into a government building in Medellin Friday, whipped out a submachine gun and killed a leftist leader of the Antioquia state assembly before being slain by guards, police said.

The victim, Gabriel Jaime Santamaria, was state leader of the leftist Patriotic Union, whose ranks have been decimated the last four years by death squads believed to be operated by drug traffickers.

The slaying came less than 24 hours after the Patriotic Union refused to support a proposal by drug traffickers to negotiate an end to the violence that has plagued Colombia since mid-August.

The leftist party said it could never condone amnesty for traffickers implicated in the murders of hundreds of its members, including its president, Jaime Pardo Leal, in 1987.

Earlier Friday, hundreds of policemen and soldiers with automatic weapons had manned checkpoints in major cities after a bomb killed five policemen and injured 16 others in the cocaine center of Medellin.

Three other bombs exploded in Bogota late Thursday and early Friday, injuring one person, and two bombs were deactivated in Bogota and Barranquilla, the police said.

Santamaria was sitting at his desk in the Apuajara government building in the heart of Medellin when he was killed at 3:30 p.m., the Medellin police said in a telephone interview. Medellin, 150 miles north of this capital, is the hub of the most powerful Colombian cocaine cartel.

The gunman, believed to be about 20 years old, was killed in a hail of gunfire from guards who belong to Colombia's secret police, a spokesman for the Medellin police told The Associated Press.

Three persons believed to be accompanying the gunman were arrested, he said.

Santamaria was the 737th member of the Patriotic Union to be killed since the party was organized in 1975 as part of an attempt by the federal government to reach a truce with leftist guerrillas.

The traffickers are believed to have set up the death squads after leftist guerrillas kidnapped the sister of three Medellin cartel leaders and were paid $10 million for her return.

A survey by a Colombian polling company showed that Colombians heavily favor the government starting talks with drug traffickers to end the violence. President Virgilio Barco has rejected such talks.

The bomb in Medellin exploded Thursday night as a police bus carried patrolmen to their posts in Medellin.

The driver and four other policemen were killed as chunks of shrapnel tore through the bus, said the Medellin police chief, Col. Humberto Camero.

Afterward, the most rigid security measures seen since the government declared war on drug traffickers Aug. 19 were put into force in Colombia's five largest cities — Bogota, Medellin, Cali, Barranquilla and Cartagena.

An AP reporter on his way to work Friday in Bogota was stopped at three checkpoints by soldiers and police searching cars for explosives and guns.

McMahon to share daughter's custody, pay $50,000 monthly

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Ed McMahon will share custody of his 3-year-old daughter with his estranged wife and provide child and spousal support worth $50,000 a month, an attorney said.

The agreement was reached Thursday in a court hearing, but the couple's divorce will not be final until at least January 1991 because they agreed to file income taxes jointly this year, said attorney Robert Kaufman, who represents Victoria McMahon.

McMahon

McMahon, Johnny Carson's sidekick on "The Tonight Show," filed for divorce July 25.

"It's a painful situation I'm living through," he said. "I'm an old Marine and I handle battle well."

Ms. McMahon said she was "very pleased" with the agreement. Of the divorce, she said: "It's unfortunate, but I feel fine."

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. (AP) — Malcolm Forbes responded to a Harvard Lampoon parody of his magazine with his usual zeal — he roared up to Lampoon headquarters on a motorcycle and autographed dollar bills.

The multimillionaire publisher of Forbes magazine arrived Thursday at Harvard in a helicopter. He toured the campus, signed students' money and led a pack of 50 motorcyclists to the Lampoon offices.

"It's illegal to deface currency," Forbes said, so "it's very flattering when someone gives you a buck and implies he's not going to spend it."

The Harvard Lampoon, the humor magazine published by Harvard students, specializes in parodies of more serious publications. The latest is a version of Forbes magazine that pokes fun at Forbes' annual list of the country's 400 wealthiest people.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Ford Motor Co. is off the hook in singer-actress Bette Midler's $10 million lawsuit over a TV car commercial that used an imitation of her singing voice.

U.S. District Judge A. Wallace Tashima ruled Thursday there was insufficient evidence to proceed against Ford, but allowed the lawsuit to stand against an advertising agency, Young & Rubicam Inc.

Midler

"We were pleased by the decision and it was a decision we anticipated based on Ms. Midler's failure to present any evidence to prove her case against Ford," said Howard J. Privett, attorney for the automobile manufacturer.

Miss Midler's lawyers would not comment on the ruling.

"I don't do commercials," she testified Wednesday. "I don't believe in it. I resent people looking at that commercial and thinking that's me. They think I sold out. It doesn't matter if I win or lose this trial. The damage is done."

BALTIMORE (AP) — For the second time in as many weeks, the production crew on Barry Levinson's latest movie is apologizing to residents — this time for rushing Mother Nature.

The director needed a winter look for filming Wednesday in warm, summery weather, so a crew member stripped leaves from young sycamores.

Members of a neighborhood association that has protected the trees from drought and vandalism complained.

Mike Malone, the movie's location manager, apologized.

"We're sorry. We're sorry," he said. "We don't want to be called insensitive tree-killers."

Last week, Levinson's production company apologized for shooting off fireworks one night until 3 a.m. in another neighborhood.

The unnamed film stars Aidan Quinn of "Desperately Seeking Susan" and Elizabeth Perkins of "Big."

TOWSON, Md. (AP) — Egyptian Vice President Rifa'at El-Mahgoub is recuperating from eye surgery at a hospital in suburban Baltimore, a hospital official said.

Dr. Bert M. Glaser, who heads the retina center at St. Joseph's Hospital, said El-Mahgoub had "very serious" retina problems, but he would not discuss details of the surgery performed this week, The Evening Sun in Baltimore reported Thursday.

"In fairness to him, we need to honor his privacy at this time," Glaser said.

VICKSBURG, Miss. (AP) — Author Alex Haley urged high school students to be selfish when planning their futures.

Haley spent part of Thursday talking to students at two high schools.

"What I recommend is that you be a little selfish. Think not of the group, but give some thought for a while about yourself," he told about 1,000 students at Vicksburg High School.

"The truth is, what you do now is going to dictate what you're doing at 30 or 40," he said.

Haley won a Pulitzer Price in 1977 for his book, "Roots: The Story of an American Family."

LONDON (AP) — The son of Australian turkey farmers landed the starring role in the most eagerly awaited stage show in London — Stephen Sondheim's "Sunday in the Park with George."

Actor Philip Quast, 32, will play French painter Georges Seurat in the British version of the musical by Sondheim and James Lapine. In New York, the show ran for 540 performances and won the 1985 Pulitzer Prize for drama.

The musical opens in London on March 15. Maria Friedman will co-star as Dot, a part originated by Bernadette Peters on Broadway.

Quast, who comes from the Australian town of Tamworth, 250 miles northwest of Sydney, said he would have been a fisherman if his acting career hadn't panned out.

"They're both quite solitary things," he said.

AUSTIN (AP) — Dr. Darwin Klingman, a pioneer in various computer procedures that have adopted by more than 100 governmental agencies and companies, died Friday of cancer.

Klingman, 45, was professor of management science and information systems at the University of Texas at Austin.

Word arrived from Computerworld magazine the day of Klingman's death that the information science program he designed at UT-Austin has been ranked No. 8 in the nation.

STATE in brief

New lawmaker sworn in office

AUSTIN (AP) — Democrat Layton Black of Goldthwaite was sworn in by Speaker Gib Lewis on Friday to fill the House seat vacated by former Rep. Stan Schlueter, D-Killeen.

Black

"We've got some of the best people in the world in the 54th District. We have many of you right here with me today," Black told a crowd of well-wishers in the House chamber, with his wife, Thresa, by his side.

"It's a very touching time for me. It affirms to me that the system works," he said after taking the oath of office.

Black captured 44 percent of the vote in the Central Texas district to lead a field of six candidates in an Oct. 21 special election, which was called after Schlueter resigned.

Because he did not get 50 percent of the vote, he would have faced a runoff with Tom Joseph of Hamilton, a Republican who came in second. However, Joseph dropped out of the race.

Black, 49, will hold the seat until it comes up for re-election in 1991.

He serves on the board of directors of the First National Bank of Goldthwaite and is its vice president. He also raises livestock in Mills County.

When Schlueter resigned, he was chairman of the powerful Calendars Committee, which sets legislation for floor debate in the House.

Books moved to TWU

AUSTIN (AP) — A quarter of a million books and journals were moved across Denton this week from the University of North Texas to Texas Woman's University.

The shift, which began Monday and was to be completed Friday, provides space in the North Texas library system by using the vacant Bralley Hall at TWU.

Materials stored at TWU are primarily older books, journals and papers in low demand, said Donald Gross, North Texas director of libraries. North Texas researchers who need materials from Bralley Hall can get them at their own campus in a day.

"Use of the TWU buildings by North Texas is logical; the arrangement provides badly needed space for the University of North Texas while maximizing the use of facilities at TWU," said Fred Pole, North Texas vice president for administrative affairs.

North Texas buys about 40,000 volumes annually, and older works will be transferred regularly to Bralley Hall.

Doctoral program OK'd

EL PASO (AP) — The University of Texas at El Paso received final approval for a doctoral program in engineering and students probably will begin work in the program in Jaunary.

"It's wonderful news," said Stephen Riter, interim dean of the School of Engineering. "We expect to begin recruiting students today."

The Texas Higher Education Coordinating Board unanimously approved the program at its latest meeting, and finally approved on a required second vote on Thursday.

UTEP has previously offered only one doctoral degree, in geological sciences, as well as 38 master's degree programs.

'Main Street Cities' named

AUSTIN (AP) — The Texas Historical Commission on Friday named six communities as "Main Street Cities" for 1990.

The commission, meeting in Jefferson, selected Athens, El Campo, Elgin and Jasper in the under-50,000 population category, according to a spokeswoman for the commission.

Tyler and Denton were named as Urban Main Street Cities.

The designations by the historical commission means that technical assistance will be made available to revitalize the cities' downtown areas.

The assistance includes the training of a Main Street manager and free building design.

UT enrollment 50,245

AUSTIN (AP) — Official enrollment at the University of Texas at Austin for the fall semester is 50,245, an increase of 138 over last fall's total, according to UT's Office of Institutional Studies.

First-time freshmen enrollment, however, declined by 281, the office said Friday.

UT-Austin President William Cunningham said "there is no question that the university would be an easier institution to manage if its student population were between 45,000 and 46,000 students."

But he said the university "now has the necessary tools at its disposal to maintain its enrollment in the range of 50,000 students."

Jerry damage estimated

AUSTIN (AP) — Insured property damage caused by Hurricane Jerry earlier this month is estimated at $35 million, the American Insurance Services Group said Friday.

The hurricane, accompanied by tornadoes and flooding, blew ashore at Galveston in mid-October and that was the area of heaviest damage, said C.E. Hermanson, vice president of the industry group's property claim service division.

Child rapist, murderer sentenced to 297 years

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — A convicted child rapist and killer has been ordered to serve to 297 years in prison by a judge who described the defendant as an animal.

Antonio Ramirez Gonzales was sentenced Thursday. A jury found the 42-year-old guilty Wednesday of sexually assaulting his then 10-year-old stepdaughter.

The assault occurred the same day his younger stepdaughter was beaten to death with a shovel in a motel room bathroom. Gonzales also was convicted of that crime.

State District Judge Mike Machado issued the sentence Thursday and stacked a third 99-year sentence on top of two other consecutive 99-year sentences Gonzales had received in July 1988.

In the previous case, Gonzales was sentenced for the Aug. 29, 1987, murder of his 5-year-old stepdaughter Yvette R. Moreno and the sexual assault earlier that month of his stepson, who was then 7.

The third 99-year sentence results in a 297-year total sentence.

With consecutive sentences he must serve each separately. It is estimated Gonzales must serve at least 37 years before becoming eligible for parole.

Before the judge assessed punishment, Gonzales stood up and said he was "a family man."

"I'd like to say I've been violated, all my rights," Gonzales said.

When the jurors convicted Gonzales Wednesday they knew only of the daughter, now 12, who testified before them. His other two convictions were not admissible.

However, after the verdict Machado revealed to the jury the history of the case.

"He starved her to death and raped her," Machado said of Yvette's death. "He starved her and kept her in a shower stall."

The judge, who presided over Gonzales' previous trials, told the jury: "He's just an animal. Here is a man 6 feet, 250 pounds. And he starved and raped her."

Gonzales' attorney, Norman Nelson, said he intends to appeal the conviction on constitutional grounds, saying he believed closed-circuit testimony deprived Gonzales of his constitutional right to face his accuser in the courtroom.

The other two cases also are on appeal.

Woman's trial reset because skirt too short

HOUSTON (AP) — A Houston judge rescheduled a 52-year-old woman's drunken driving case because he thought her skirt was too short to be worn in court.

"I think next time I'll have her wear one below her ankles," the woman's attorney, Victor Blaine, said. "Twenty years ago stuff like this happened, but this surprised me. Even the female prosecutors in the court were stunned."

Blaine said he and his client, Allene Shoemaker, were getting up to approach the bench Wednesday when Harris County Criminal Court-at-Law Judge Shelly Hancock stopped them.

"She can't come up here — she's got shorts on," Hancock said, according to Blaine.

"I thought I'd missed something," Blaine said. He looked at Ms. Shoemaker, saw no shorts, looked back at the judge and said, "No, judge."

Then Hancock stood up and peered down Ms. Shoemaker, who was wearing a white skirt that ended about 3 inches above her knees.

"She can't come up here dressed like this," Blaine said the judge insisted.

Blaine said he told the judge, "I've seen lawyers with shorter skirts than this," and the judge responded, "No, you haven't."

Hancock reset the case for Nov. 27.

Kathy Aubin, president of the Houston chapter of the National Organization for Women, called the judge's behavior "absolutely ridiculous."

"My goodness, I thought we got over all that years ago. I remember back in the early 1970s there used to be judges who would throw women out of the courtroom because they had on pants," she said.

Hancock, 49, says he throws a person out of court about once every two months for inappropriate dress, and most of them are men.

"Men dress inappropriately in court more often than women do," said the 49-year-old judge.

"There are places where some clothes just don't fit, and shorts, body shirts or skirts that are too short just have no place in a courtroom."

Hancock noted that, while judges are presumably unaffected by such things, a defendant's attire can sway jurors' opinions.

The presiding county court-at-law judge, Mark Atkinson, said the Texas Code of Judicial Conduct requires judges to maintain order and decorum but mostly leaves the interpretation up to them.

BUICK LESABRE. THE MOST TROUBLE-FREE CAR BUILT IN AMERICA.

Until now, this kind of quality was known to only an elite group, Le Sabre owners

Great Selection of New 1990 fully loaded LeSabres in stock now!

Prices starting at $16,395*

(List Price $18,949, Stock #L1049)

* Price includes discount & rebates)

The latest J.D. Power and Associates Initial Quality Survey* states something Buick LeSabre owners can be proud to know and something all new-car buyers should know. The fact that Buick LeSabre is the most trouble free full-size car sold in America. Import or domestic.

The Initial Quality Survey, which measures things gone wrong with new vehicles during the first 90 days of ownership, marks an improvement in Buick quality for the third year in a row. And today, the Buick nameplate ranks as the most trouble free American brand. Higher than Lincoln. Higher than other prestige cars costing thousands more.

To our way of thinking, it all means that if you're looking for quality, you should just look down the Great American Road for the Buick tri-shield. The new symbol for quality. The sign of your Buick dealer.

*J.D. Power & Associates 1989 Initial Quality Survey covering November and December 1988 Buicks upon owner-related problems during the first 90 days of ownership.
