Lady Rebels win

Just when it looked like Midland Lee might bleed to death in the first inning of its Class 5A region quarterfinal softball game with District 4-5A rival Odessa Permian, the Lady Rebels turned a double play. The game was never the same after that. Lee clubbed 15 hits on the way to an 8-2 victory over Lady Mojo./1C

Arco employees introduce 6th-grade students to corporate world

By Mella McEwen

A number of Arco Permian employees found that their shadows didn't quite fit Tuesday. They seemed to be a little shorter and some were male, others female.

The shadows were actually sixth-graders from De Zavala Elementary, who were participating in the fourth annual "Job Shadowing Event" at Arco and at the Hilton Midland and Towers.

"We want to expose the students to the corporate world, give them a birds-eye view and show them all the opportunities that are available. We want to tell them they have choices in life," said Sue Roseberry, a land analyst in Arco's land department for 18 years.

To qualify for the event, students participated in a five-week program where they filled out applications, corporate volunteers interviewed them and counselors helped them with presentation skills and other facets of the cor-

MISD's teacher recruiting effort picks up speed

■ Board's approval of starting teacher pay raise "turned a ho-hum recruiting season into a great one."

By Daniel Arp
Staff Writer

This time last month, Tom Holland, executive director of human resource services for Midland Independent School District, was sweating whether he'd be able to get enough teachers to fill Midland classrooms next fall — never mind the quality of those teachers.

But this week, Holland seems able to relax a little as he watches recruitment hit something of a stride for the first time in years.

The difference? $1,300, to be exact.

"The last two weeks, we've just hit home runs. We've got some really quality people," Holland said.

That was not the case before April 13, when the school board approved raising next year's starting teacher salaries from $26,700 to $28,000. Since then, the number has been posted — big and bold — above the MISD table at job fairs.

Holland has a sign quoting the figure on his office door, which he plans to carry with him on his next recruitment trip.

"That action by the board turned a ho-hum recruiting season into a great one," Holland said. "We were the first out of the gate (deciding starting teacher salaries for next year), as far as the West Texas districts are concerned."

Nevertheless, competition continues to be stiff, especially with school districts east of the I-35 corridor setting next year's starting salaries at $30,000 or $31,000.

And with what Holland describes as a "teacher shortage" and teachers' unions as a "silent strike" of certified Texas teachers, recruiters have had to grow wings as well as teeth to keep a competitive edge.

On Monday, for the first time in 14 years, Holland sent a three-person team to Minneapolis to tap into the surplus of teachers in Minnesota. Recruiters had yet to return Tuesday afternoon and Holland had not been updated on their progress.

"We thought it might be wise to try one time," said Holland, who planned the visit in advance of the pay raise.

The only other remote location recruiters have traveled to recently has been Illinois earlier this recruitment season — before the raise.

"That one was not very productive. We are not going back next year," Holland said.

There are 88 vacancies in Midland public schools. Holland said the district has 25 replacements under contract.

"For this time of year, it's about on track," Holland said.

Some, however, warn the district against directing all its energies toward recruitment.

"It's been very discouraging, because we put so much effort into recruiting new teachers; now we have to put that same effort into retaining teachers," said Steve Buck, president of the Midland Federation of Teachers.

The board did not adopt a pay schedule for experienced teachers at its April 13 meeting, because of uncertainties about how much the Legislature will put toward teacher salaries this session.

Buck said he expects the Legislature will give teachers something, but he warned, "You haven't seen anything from the Leg-

Midland Red Cross plans to send volunteers to tornado-torn areas

By Jeff Stevens
Staff Writer

"We are big time in the disaster business right now," said Donna Rounsaville, executive director of American Red Cross of Southwest Texas.

Ms. Rounsaville was commenting on her office's involvement in several area disasters and anticipated action in Oklahoma City.

An F-5 classification tornado ripped through Oklahoma Monday destroying more than 2,000 homes leaving at least 43 dead.

"Without question, we'll be sending people (to Oklahoma)," she said, adding that she doesn't know how many volunteers may come from this area and won't know for 48 hours.

The Red Cross in Oklahoma has imposed a moratorium for 48 hours.

"It gives them time to set up shelters

Analysts: Bull market back but do not expect it to last

By Mella McEwen
Staff Writer

"Welcome to the resumption of the bull market in crude oil," Odessa financial analyst Dennis Elam told those attending the Energy Appreciation Week luncheon sponsored by the Permian Basin Petroleum Association.

"We have clearly come back from the downturn in a smart and rapid fashion," he continued, basing his statement on what he sees as a 10-year cycle.

He predicted that prices may rise as high as $20 this week and continue near that level until August, when a three-step correction to the $14 level would begin, followed by a multi-step rebound to the $25 to $28 range this winter.

The stronger prices "will be both a blessing and a

Popularity of Internet e-mail humor phenomenal

By Jimmy Patterson
Staff Writer

What's funny (sometimes), has 35 CCs, an occasional attachment and lands in hundreds of thousands of mailboxes a day?

Give up?

Internet e-mail jokes.

Get it? Internet e-mail jokes?

The popularity of jokes sent from person to person via e-mail has grown at a stunning rate. With the exception of advertisements sent via e-mail, perhaps nothing moves in greater volume than humor.

Is it beneficial? Or does it bog down an already overloaded communication system?

Pam McClure, a Midland teacher, said finding jokes in her mailbox brightens her day.

"In our busy and stressful times, humor in any form never hurts," Ms. McClure said. "The ability to laugh at ourselves and with others is a gift we all need to exercise more."

Linda Taylor said she doesn't think the new way of disseminating humor has revolutionized the comedy industry, and the advent of e-mail humor has served to allow users "to tell jokes faster and to more people."

Nobody seems overly concerned about the Internet being clogged up by the massive doses of funny stuff being sent. Some people just don't care for that form of expression.

"My wife gets them and I get them. The thing I don't like is, it's just typed words," said Bill Engvall, a comedian who has enjoyed a wide following with his Texas-flavored humor. "There's no inflection. No story-

NATO shoots down Yugoslav MiG jet over Serbia; refugees allege killings

BELGRADE, Yugoslavia (AP) — A MiG-29 fighter jet, the finest in Yugoslavia's air force, was shot down by NATO in a dogfight over Serbia on Tuesday. As NATO claimed its most successful attacks, the alliance's top general acknowledged the airstrikes have failed to stem the ethnic cleansing campaign in Kosovo.

Gen. Klaus Naumann, a German four-star general and retiring head of NATO's military arm, said the air operation "has slowed down the efforts of Yugoslav President Slobodan Milosevic's instruments for ethnic cleansing" but "we cannot stop such a thing entirely."

He said, "Milosevic's mass deportation campaign appears achievable," adding that while the Yugoslav cannot defeat NATO, he might be able to "completely force ethnic Albanians out."

The briefing was Naumann's last before he completes his three-year tour as chairman of the NATO Military Committee.

Milosevic on Tuesday praised top army commanders for defying NATO, "the biggest aggressor in the world." The Yugoslav leader met with several top army commanders on Tuesday, praising them for defying NATO and saying the rebel Kosovo Liberation Army had been "fully defeated."

In a statement read on state television, Milosevic said "the next task" of his security forces is "the persistent defense" of Yugoslavia from NATO.

Meanwhile, President Clinton headed to alliance headquarters in Brussels, Belgium, before traveling to Germany to meet with U.S. troops and some of the 675,000 refugees forced out of Kosovo since the NATO airstrikes began on March 24.

Diplomatic efforts to end the conflict continued, with Russian envoy Viktor Chernomyrdin meeting with U.N. Secretary-General Kofi Annan for the second time in a week. However, no diplomatic solution appeared imminent.

British defense officials said more than 50 targets were hit over the previous 24 hours in relentless attacks focusing on Yugoslav forces in Kosovo, including strikes against tanks, artillery and military vehicles.

Briefing reporters in Brussels, Maj. Gen. Walter Jertz said NATO's operations over the past day were the most successful to date against field forces in Kosovo.

He also said an allied aircraft intercepted and shot down a Yugoslav aircraft about 13,000 feet over Serbia. Pentagon officials said a U.S. Air Force F-16 shot down the MiG in aerial combat near the Bosnian-Serb border.

NATO said its planes also bombed a MiG-29 parked at an airfield.

While Yugoslav aircraft have been struck on the ground at various Serbian and Montenegrin airports — even seen hiding under the tails of large commercial airplanes — the Yugoslav air force has avoided confrontations with NATO warplanes for much of the air war.

On the third day of the conflict — March 26 — American F-15C jets shot down two Yugoslav MiG-29s after they entered Bosnia-Herzegovina airspace.

After striking a military airfield and destroying a TV station overnight, NATO jets on Tuesday also reportedly made their first daytime strike on a factory in central Serbia, the Tanjug news agency said. NATO claims ammunition is manufactured at the hydraulics complex in Valjevo, largely destroyed in previous strikes during the 6-week-old campaign.

On Monday, Yugoslav media reported a NATO missile hit a bus, killing 20 people in western Kosovo. But NATO spokesman Jamie Shea said its commanders had checked all gun cameras from planes operating in the area and interviewed all pilots.

"We can find no evidence of any NATO involvement in this incident," Shea insisted.

"It's classic ambush country," Shea said of the Pec area where Serb forces and rebels had had heavy skirmishes, adding that the bus did not "seem to have been hit by a missile or a bomb from an aircraft."

Serb forces were responsible for the attack, the rebel ethnic Albanian news agency said.

Girl's diary asks question for Kosovo displaced: 'What will happen?'

By Brian Murphy
Associated Press

SKOPJE, Macedonia — School let out early in Pristina two days before the NATO bombings began. The teachers said goodbye. Some were crying.

"See you all soon," Adelina Imeri told her instructors and classmates at the Hassan Pristina high school in Kosovo's provincial capital.

"Yes, see you soon," most replied.

No one dared suggest the life they knew was drawing to a close. They didn't want to say it because maybe it would come true, Adelina recalled. But superstition couldn't freeze events. Everyone, including 15-year-old Adelina coming home from school, felt it, breathed it — this stifling dread among the ethnic Albanians.

She stopped at a kiosk and picked out a green leather notebook for 2 German marks ($1.10). On March 22, she began her diary — what became a sampling of the fear, hopelessness and hunger suffered by Adelina, her family and her friends when their lives were shattered.

"The fear is increasing," she wrote. "What will happen?"

Adelina's journal, written in Albanian in her slightly tilted script, is direct. The observations are sharp and emotions often muted. This is also how she carries herself: simple, unadorned chestnut hair. She may occasionally wear a light shade of lipstick, but that's rare. Adelina, whose father wouldn't allow her to be photographed by a journalist, speaks in clipped sentences, never rambling on. She wants to study medicine, perhaps become a pediatrician.

March 23, the day before the NATO attacks began, she wrote: "They are giving only 2 liters of milk to each customer ... Even the vegetable market is being emptied out. I met (friends) Arjeta and Arlinda at noon. They were going to Skopje to an uncle's place. I was asked: 'Where are you going?' I've got nowhere to go ... The older people are whispering something between them. What are they saying?"

The opening NATO bombardment shook their entire building, a 15-story apartment tower near the Fountain of Ulpiana, a favorite meeting place for teen-agers. Adelina's family huddled together in their living room on the seventh floor. At 8:10 p.m. they heard the first blast. A half-hour later the power went out. Adelina counted a dozen explosions, two of them so close the window's rattled and the building swayed. She eventually fell asleep at dawn.

March 25: "Tired from previous night ... Dad bought groceries. I'm wondering whether to go to the fountain or not. Few people are on the streets. Some relatives of ours told us that robbing and burning of the houses and shops has started ... Dad is trying to calm us down, telling us NATO will not hit civilians areas ... This seems unreal."

Adelina heard that one of her friends left for Montenegro. People on her block were packing their cars and heading south toward the Macedonian border. She began spending more time playing with her 8-year-old brother, Arzenin. At least it helped distract her. The news reported the slayings of ethnic Albanian human rights lawyer Bajram Kelmendi and his two sons. Adelina curled up in bed with her clothes on.

They left the apartment the next morning. Adelina's father, a construction foreman who couldn't get a job with Serbian contractors, found room for the family in a friend's home in a neighborhood called Bregu i Diellit, or Sunny Hills. Surprisingly, the phone worked. Adelina tried to call friends. Many had already left Pristina. She watched people trudging toward the train station 5 miles from the center. But they were turned back by police for some reason. They felt safer on the first floor of the home. The basement — even safer still — was allotted to a Serb family in a government welfare program.

March 29: "I ran into two of my friends. They looked very pale and scared. They told me how they spent the terrible nights in the high-rises. I pass the time looking for food ... We are more scared hour by hour ... We can see the glowing explosions. They are like mushrooms of fire. We are scared the police or military will come for us."

Yugoslav authorities claim most of the more than half million Kosovo refugees fled NATO bombing raids and not reprisals from Serb police and paramilitary units. Adelina's family packed up because of both. They heard Serb police were clearing out nearby neighborhoods and moving in their direction. But the bombings, too, had them on edge from stress and lack of sleep. On the last day of March, Adelina, her parents and two brothers joined 17 others walking to the train station. Adelina's family was too fearful of Serb police to return to their apartment. They took only two changes of clothes each, a sack of bread and apples and about 450 German marks ($250). Adelina left behind everything but her diary.

Adelina's family descended into a pit of misery along a swampy no-man's land along the border. More than 35,000 ethnic Albanians were stranded there as Macedonian authorities balked at opening up their nation to the refugee tide. Adelina's family scavenged a bit of nylon sheeting and fashioned a tent. And there they waited.

April 1-3: "The rain is falling. It seems fitting after what we've been through. We are trying to get some sleep leaning against each others' backs. An aid group has started giving bread to people. It's amazing to see all the hands reaching for bread."

On April 4, they were allowed out and scrambled aboard a bus. Friends of Adelina's father took them in at their three-room apartment in Skopje. That night she wrote: "All we wanted was hot water to wash and a bed to sleep. I wish to forget Blace if that's possible."

April 6: "It was strange to see shops full of things ... I thought I was dreaming after what I experienced in Pristina. It's like we're on a different planet. We see people and teen-agers my age not being afraid of the police or being tortured."

The next days were spent basking in common pleasures. Adelina registered for school and took long walks with Arbana, the 12-year-old daughter of their hosts. They ate ice cream. "Delicious," raved Adelina in her diary. Adelina's father spared some money so she could see a movie.

April 12: "First day at school. They were very nice to us. I still could not wait to finish. It was like something grabbed me around the throat and was strangling me. I could not follow the teaching ... I came back home depressed. Everyone understood that. I missed my friends."

"I'm depressed again," she wrote April 15. "I had some terrible dreams with people dressed in military uniforms with long beards and masks on their faces. They were trying to catch me. What does this dream say?"

April 19: "I can't stop thinking of my old friends. I miss them terribly. Where are they?"

Adelina received a surprise present April 20 from her father: a new dress. It was her first new item of clothing since leaving Kosovo. "I was extremely happy!" she wrote.

Five days later, Adelina got another gift. In Skopje, she ran into four former classmates who had just been allowed to leave one of the refugee camps outside the city. They arranged to meet the following day.

April 26: "We walked and walked. We talked about the days we had in Pristina."

SHADOW: Students have to meet rules for event

porate world.

Ms. Roseberry was to be assisted by Destinee Bushman, who said she was interested in the careers of an attorney, landman and maitre d'.

"I'll give her a little exposure to what a landman does, we'll look at maps and go online to look up leases. We work with the attorneys quite a bit," Ms. Roseberry said.

Destinee said she hoped the day would help her "find out more about what I want to do when I get older."

Next door, Executive Assistant Sue Blair was reunited with two students she had worked with when they were third-graders.

Sally Marez said she was interested in the career of an attorney and Elizabeth Sandoval said she was interested in being an administrative assistant because "I like working with computers and paper."

Ms. Blair said that "We'll work with computers, make copies; right now we're writing a business letter. And even though we're in the land department, we work closely with the attorneys."

Sally and Elizabeth both said they hoped the day would help them "learn things we never knew," as Sally put it.

Wesley Matlock was shadowing Jo Rich, who has worked for Arco 18 years and is a joint interest contact, coordinating production with Arco's partners.

Wesley said he's interested in geology.

"I like science," he said.

Ms. Rich said she has participated in the event all four years.

"I like it. The neat thing is the students have to meet rules to come here. Not everyone gets to come."

She added that as a volunteer, "I try to show them how many jobs there are here and how we all have to work together. Everyone has a piece of the puzzle and we all have to put the pieces together to see the picture."

Wesley said of his visit, "There are more jobs here than I thought," to which Ms. Rich responded, "and we haven't even touched on the field workers like the pumpers, those who check the oil and make sure it's fit to sell, those who operate the pipeline."

Across the hall, Arco Landman John Cox was explaining his job to Juan Rodriguez and Johnny Ramos.

"We've been busy talking with the geologists and the geophysicists," Cox said. "Now I'm explaining my part of the puzzle."

Both boys said they like spending time outdoors, and Cox said he did too. "Sometimes we have to go see the land owners, the ranchers, settle damages. We need to understand what they do so we can cooperate better. But, we spend a lot of time here in the office."

Both boys also said they liked to study science and Juan said he was especially interested in participating "because my mom does something like this at Midland Geophysical."

Cox said he enjoys volunteering for the event because "I had the opportunity to do this as a youngster and I think it's important for students to come to the business world and see that it's not as mysterious as it seems."

OIL: Analyst warns not to expect permanent high prices

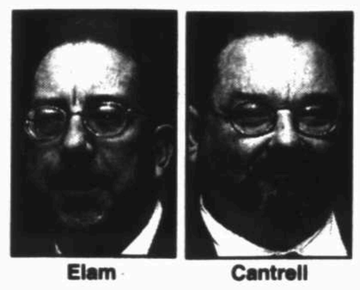
curse," he said. "It will allow you to make some money and it will be possible for you to hedge forward for months ahead."

Mike Cantrell, an independent oil producer from Ada, Okla. and president of Save Domestic Oil, said that the higher prices will not impact his organization's plans to file an action with the U.S. Department of Commerce against Venezuela, Mexico, Iraq and possibly Kuwait for dumping crude oil on U.S. markets at below cost.

"The 1930 Tariff Act says products can't be sold at below the cost of production or below the price charged in other countries," he said. "Every commodity, from steel to tomatoes, has enforced that law but we haven't, mainly because we hadn't had a year like 1998."

He said that to make its case, it must have the support of at least 25 percent of the industry and that all the major oil industry trade associations, including the PBPA, have indicated their support. The action will be shown to the Commerce Department by May 28, he said, and the group will have 30 days make corrections before it is officially filed by June 30.

If the Commerce Department finds there has been dumping of crude, it could mean billions against the countries named in the action. "There's already heavy pressure from Venezuela," he said. "But we believe we have to do this for our future as oil and gas producers. How many more downturns can we go through? I'm afraid if this happens again, there won't enough of us left to put up a fight. This is taking control of our own destiny."



Elam Cantrell

Elam said Cantrell made a good point.

"We can go through only so many downturns and survive as an industry," he said.

He said that with the current downturn, workers have left the industry and vowed never to return and drilling and workover rigs are being stacked or sold as scrap metal.

"The lack of infrastructure is one thing driving prices," Elam said. "When it comes time to work on your well, the help and the equipment won't be there."

As the industry comes into the 10-year cycle of high prices, he warned "Do not expect the condition to be permanent. Make sure your production is hedged as far forward as possible, if you're going to liquidate properties, consider doing it next year and remember our legislative bodies are not the oilman's friend.

The good news is, the bull market is back. But don't expect it to last more than 18 months."

HUMOR: E-mail jokes good for punch-line challenged

telling. Some people can type in the inflection, but it still won't ever replace the old-fashioned joke."

Perhaps for Engvall, the worst aspect of e-mail humor is the large amount of suggested jokes he gets from people hoping he'll use something in his stage act. So far, Engvall hasn't done that.

William McVeigh, of Petaluma, Calif., runs an Internet humor site (www.emailjoke.com). His mailing list is 14,250 and growing at a rate of 250 per day. He reports that his Web site has an average of 4,000 hits per day and since its creation in February 1998, 260,000 have visited the Joke of the Day Archive.

"People don't have to be able to tell a joke or remember the punch line in order to be able to send a good e-mail joke," McVeigh said. "E-mail humor makes it easy to pass on good (and bad) jokes to friends instantly. It will never replace hearing a good joke from someone who can tell it really well."

Engvall said e-mail humor does accomplish one thing.

"It's good for the joke impaired," Engvall quipped. "It's a way amateurs can dabble in it. But to me it's like putting out a house fire versus putting out a bush fire. The real guys go for the house fire. People do send some funny jokes, but within two lines, you can usually tell what the punch lines are gonna be."

Jan Hibler, who regularly sends and receives e-mail humor, would be the first to admit Engvall's assertion that e-mail humor is good for the punch line-challenged.

"For me it's a chance to tell a joke to people without messing up the sequence, forgetting the punch line or leaving out an important detail that blows the whole joke," she said. "I usually forget jokes that other people verbally tell me before I have a chance to share them with others."

Chris Laufer said though laughter is good, sometimes e-mail humor is impersonal — as well as a cause for concern.

"I love to hear from people, so getting something is good, yet getting jokes/e-mail pass-alongs is sort of like getting a holiday card from a friend you've not heard from in years and all they do is sign their name at the bottom of the card.

"What does concern me are the jokes that make their way to my children. I've seen some off-color jokes — ones that I'd feel uncomfortable repeating — show up in my daughters' e-mail. I don't spy, but we all use the same computer in my room, and I occasionally will look over their shoulders and see what's what. My 13-year-old happened to wander into a chat room on AOL and just a few minutes later we started receiving a bucket load of slime on my e-mail address. We have parental blocks on everything, but the bottom feeders still manage to sneak their way into my e-mail periodically."

Alison Montgomery compares e-mail humor to coupons. "You hate to throw away the good ones in case someone could use them," Ms. Montgomery said. "But I always delete the ones that instruct 'DON'T DELETE — PASS THIS ON.' I'm not gong to put up with someone bossing me over my own e-mail. But basically, I enjoy e-mail humor. I have always been more of a visual learner: I have to see it to remember it. So e-mail jokes are the only way I can tell a joke well ... or I can at least forward it on. Furthermore, everybody needs a lift now and then. There's nothing like a quick joke to do the job."

And within e-mail forwarding lists that enable users to send en masse, there are even subgroups that exist. Reputations are apparently being built within the e-mail humor world.

"I have several people who I look forward to hearing from because their humor is always the cream of the crop," Susan Sexton said. "I enjoy sifting through them at the end of my day, so it's a bright spot. It's a great way to clear your mind."

Or in the words of Linda Simpson, of Abilene, "It's nice to know people are thinking of me, even if I am just a name on a list."

HELP: Red Cross has open cases from Midland tornado

and assess what the needs are. My guess is we'll be sending some specialized disaster action team volunteers after the moratorium."

The devastation in Oklahoma comes just three weeks after Midland had its own bout with tumultuous weather. Damage to Midland homes was estimated at $8 million to $9 million but less than 20 homes here were destroyed.

Damage estimates in Oklahoma have not been released but President Clinton has declared 11 Oklahoma counties and one Kansas county as federal disaster areas.

The mass destruction of the Oklahoma tornados and the rarity of Midland's — the first confirmed in Midland since National Weather Service began tracking tornadoes — might raise questions of adverse atmospheric conditions.

Chief Forecaster for the NWS in Midland Brian Curran said that's not the case.

"It's springtime and occasionally these things will happen in the spring," he said.

He added that the Oklahoma tornado was particularly devastating because it touched down in a heavily populated area.

"Most tornadoes occur over open country," he said.

Oklahoma City has been struck more than 40 times in the last 100 years, but "They haven't had a violent tornado of this magnitude for some time.

"The last F-5 intensity tornado in Oklahoma was in 1998."

He admitted, however, that very little is known about what happens to make a tornado form.

"We can predict the conditions favorable for tornadic activity but the exact process of tornadic development remains a mystery."

Tornadoes are possible when winter-type storms meet with moist warm air coming up from the Gulf of Mexico.

"As for the short answer of why the recent tornadoes, it's spring," Curran said.

Curran did say that some benefit may have come from the Oklahoma tornado. A research group was able to take samples from the storm and, "They think that information may help in determining exactly what causes a tornado."

Of course, the victims might see less benefit in science and more from relief efforts.

Local Red Cross efforts in Oklahoma, though, will have to compete for resources with local disasters. The Red Cross still has several open cases from Midland's tornado. "It's winding down but we still have several families that we're working with," Ms. Rounsaville said.

The group also has 43 open cases in Seminole, which remained waterlogged Tuesday after receiving 7.5 inches of rain over the weekend.

Ms. Rounsaville said anyone wanting to help relief efforts in Midland, Seminole or Oklahoma can contact the local Red Cross office or send donations to the Red Cross.

"Donations can be identified for Midland, Seminole or Oklahoma and they'll be applied to that disaster fund."

EFFORT: Quality of recruits bright spot

islature yet, so you don't know what's going to happen. Hopefully our board will wake up and realize our experienced teachers are needed."

One bright spot, according to Holland, is the quality of the recruits this year.

"We signed 12 from Texas Tech recently who are the best (new talent) I've seen in 10 years," Holland said.

"The only things I'm worried about (getting recruits for) are bilingual and the higher order math and sciences," he said, both of which are areas where it is hard to find qualified teachers. Most of the district's needs, Holland added, are at the secondary level.

Meanwhile, in Odessa, recruitment waters seem choppier for now. No starting salary for next year has yet been adopted by the board, though a committee has been formed to address that issue, said Wendell Sollis, director of human resources for Ector County Independent School District.

"I do have a concern that we are graduating from the colleges the quality and number of teachers to fill the positions we need," Sollis said.

NATO strikes leave Belgrade residents in the dark

BELGRADE, Yugoslavia (AP) — No light, no water. NATO says its latest strikes on Yugoslavia's electrical system are meant to cripple the army. But civilians say they are once again being hurt most.

Panic-stricken, 8-year-old Stefan Jankovic grabbed a lighter when the lights went out in his family's basement shelter and held it aloft, ignoring the growing pain from the heat until his father finally lit a precious candle.

Eighty-year-old Tatjana Paranovski, frail and increasingly immobile, worries about the food stocks in her freezer. What if the blackouts that began in Belgrade on Sunday grow more serious, she wonders? Who will feed her, once what she has is spoiled?

And, while major hospitals have emergency generators, they're all running short of diesel fuel, the result of weeks of NATO attacks on fuel storage and refinery facilities. If the power crisis grows, deaths are sure to follow, Belgrade's deputy mayor, Milan Bozic, warns.

Work crews struggled Tuesday to restore electricity across Serbia two days after NATO strikes on major power grids left Belgrade and other cities in the dark — and often without running water, which depends on electric pumps.

Still, with 70 percent of power lost, authorities urged residents not to use electric appliances because of possible circuit overloads. In neighboring Croatia, state television said Croatian government officials had refused a Yugoslav request for urgent electricity supplies after consultation with Washington and NATO.

Residents in the northern city of Novi Sad reported they had power back on by Tuesday afternoon. But, with the city's three bridges over the Danube River destroyed by NATO attacks weeks ago, some hardened residents shrugged off the blackouts as a relatively minor inconvenience.

"Why would I care?" said Simo Jokic, 70, a refugee from neighboring Balkan wars. "I only have two light bulbs and a TV set."

Belgrade, too, showed signs of recovery Tuesday after a night marked by widespread blackouts. Lights were on in many stores, and traffic signals in the downtown core were again functioning.

Still, many residents in the capital were worried. Many seemed aware of NATO spokesman Jamie Shea's warning that the alliance can "shut off the power system whenever we want" — and were traumatized by the prospect of lengthy periods without power.

"Your life stops completely without light or running water," says Vesna Jankovic, as she tried to control Stefan and his 4-year-old sister, Masa, on Belgrade's main square. "Everything collapses when they are missing."

She lists the problems — difficulties in cooking, washing and cleaning. But worse, she says, are the "crippling psychological effects" of darkness on children who already are grappling with the anxieties left by six weeks of NATO airstrikes.

"I try to tell my kids the power will come back on," says the 40-year-old kindergarten teacher, describing the long hours spent in dark basement shelters. "I tell them fairy tales, we play word games, but still their fear is strong."

Stefan, pudgy cheeks shaking as he tells his story, says he's OK during the day. But, he admits to being a "little bit" frightened in the dark.

"I felt a boom, it was very close, and it was suddenly very dark," he says of that first plunge into darkness. "Then dad lit a candle, and it was better."

Nearby, Paranovski sits with a woman friend at an outdoor cafe table, her cane hooked over the back of her chair. To "take my mind off the horrible things happening to us here," she says she is waiting for the daily anti-NATO rock concert — which other residents now joke should be called "Unplugged."

"For us older people, with meager food supplies, the prospects of no electricity are frightening," she says of the possibility of what she has spoiling without electricity.

Bozic, the deputy mayor, says there are greater concerns. Dialysis patients and premature infants in incubators are most at risk of death due to a lack of power and a scarcity of diesel to keep emergency generators going.

Prisoner for a month, Army forgets how to spell soldier's name

LANDSTUHL, Germany (AP) — After being held prisoner for a month, you'd think the least the Army could do is spell your name right.

But the name patch on the uniform worn by Spec. Steven Gonzales, one of three soldiers released Sunday by Yugoslavia and brought to a U.S. military hospital in Germany, reads "Gonzalez" with a "z" instead of an "s" at the end.

"We're aware of it, but we don't know how it happened," said Sgt. Josh Youngblood, a spokesman at the Landstuhl Regional Medical Center. "We've all been so busy we haven't had time to try to find out."

He said he didn't know if the clothing belonged to Gonzales — meaning the mistake was made long ago — or if someone had rustled up the outfit after his release and spelled the name wrong.

Gonzales himself, a 22-year-old from Huntsville, Texas, hasn't complained, he said.

Furor over rich kids with guns in India party circles

NEW DELHI, India (AP) — The cold-blooded murder of a bartender at New Delhi's latest "in" spot, allegedly by a prominent politician's son, has raised a furor about rich kids with guns and flouting of laws by the privileged.

Newspapers that were full of the school shootings in Colorado are now suddenly reporting about New Delhi's hard-drinking, all-night-partying, gun-toting rich kids.

Jessica Lal, 34, a former model on the fringes of New Delhi's party world of politicians, fashion designers and rich industrialists, tended bar at the Tamarind Court Cafe. Her friends told newspapers after she was slain last Friday that she did it more for the exposure than the $36 she was paid each night.

Witnesses said a young man shot her in the head when she refused him a drink.

The restaurant, owned by a socialite, was serving liquor without a license and flouting midnight closing rules. A district police commissioner had been there, but left before the shooting.

Through witnesses and the getaway car's registration number, police identified the alleged gunman as Manu Sharma, 24, the son of a politician and hotel chain owner, Vinod Sharma. He is a former Cabinet minister related through marriage to former President Shankar Dayal Sharma.

Congress party president Sonia Gandhi, whose children were tutored by the victim's mother, demanded Vinod Sharma's resignation as a regional party chief. His son, who fled the scene after the shooting, remains at large.

The slaying is just the latest in which the children of the well-heeled have been implicated.

In January, three rich young men were charged with barreling down a New Delhi street in their BMW and hitting three policemen and three laborers while driving home from an all-night party. The case has yet to go to trial.

Also this year, two youths shot a restaurant guard to death and wounded another when they were denied drinks. Police have not identified the suspects, leading to media speculation that their parents are influential.

On the same day as Miss Lal's murder, a 13-year-old student fatally shot his classmate.

"It's getting dangerous and I am afraid," said New Delhi Police Chief V.N. Singh. "Influential parents do not have time to properly supervise their children, who have it in the back of their minds they can get away with a crime because their parents are well connected."

"The power elites ... refuse to accept that they are bound by any rule of law," the Times of India said in an editorial on Tuesday.

Although gun licenses are tightly controlled in India, nearly anyone of means can secure one, through influence or the argument that their status makes them a target.

Manu Sharma had a reputation for whipping out his gun when he was provoked, according to acquaintances quoted in New Delhi newspapers.

Like many relatives of the wealthy, he was protected until two weeks before the shooting by round-the-clock police guards. The bodyguards were withdrawn by Kiran Bedi, the new police chief in his hometown of Chandigarh, who argued in an interview with The Asian Age newspaper that "the unnecessary deployment of private security officers and free access to weapons has been the major contributor to delinquency among children of ... VIPs."

Privilege was also connected to the Tamarind Court Cafe's liquor sales. Only 77 restaurants in the capital of 12 million people have liquor licenses, and the law sets closing time at midnight. Yet posh joints remain open, and liquor flows into the wee hours.

When the liquor ran out about 1:30 a.m. last Friday, Miss Lal joined the daughter of owner Bina Ramani for a drink while waiting to be paid. Two or three men demanded drinks and were refused.

One pulled a gun, fired a bullet into the air and another into Miss Lal's forehead.

Then he walked out of the restaurant, as fashion designers, boutique owners and models called police and ambulance numbers on their cellphones.

No help came. Miss Lal bled to death on the way to a hospital in Mrs. Ramani's chauffeur-driven limousine.

Cinco de Mayo stokes Mexican nationalist spirit

MEXICO CITY (AP) — Janos Rodriguez gets misty-eyed when he holds the rifle his grandfather carried during recreations of the Cinco de Mayo battle — the 1862 rout of French invaders in the nearby city of Puebla that is one of Mexico's most celebrated victories.

"Cinco de Mayo lies deep in my heart," said Rodriguez, a 23-year old car shop owner. "My grandfather led the celebration for 43 years. It means so much to my family."

Mexicans regard Cinco de Mayo as perhaps the proudest day in their nation's history, despite the fact that, a year later, the French invaders had defeated the Mexican army, forced the government to flee and occupied all of southern Mexico.

To many Mexicans, the holiday stirs up feelings of nationalistic pride — and suspicion that, like the French more than a century ago, foreigners still have designs on their country.

Mexico was shaped largely by foreign occupations: the bloody Spanish conquest in the 1500s, the 1846 war with the United States in which it lost half its territory, and the humiliating French occupation of the 1860s.

A recent proposal by President Ernesto Zedillo to privatize the state-owned electricity sector drew widespread criticism — much of it caused by the prospect of investment by foreign companies.

Despair and defiance mark passage of once hoped-for statehood day

GAZA CITY, Gaza Strip (AP) — What Palestinians once hoped would be their Independence Day began like any other for laborer Abdel Kareem Abu Najim: Waiting in the pre-dawn darkness at a dusty border crossing for permission to go to his $25-a-day construction job in Israel.

Tuesday, the end of a five-year autonomy agreement with Israel, was once touted by Yasser Arafat as the day a Palestinian state could finally be declared. It became instead a melancholy milestone for Palestinians, the latest in a long line of hopes deferred.

A few Palestinians reacted with shows of defiance — some clearly meant to underscore the threat of violence if the deadlock with Israel continues. In the West Bank town of Hebron, masked men fired rifles into the air while hundreds of marchers chanted, "Statehood is our right!"

A group of marchers broke away and hurled stones at Israeli troops who fired rubber-coated steel pellets in response. Three Palestinians and an Israeli TV cameramen were injured. A clash in the town of Beitunia left one demonstrator injured.

But such demonstrations were small and scattered. Throughout the Palestinian lands, the overriding sentiment was one of quiet disappointment.

"It's just like any day — all I can think about is getting work," said Abu Najim, a 36-year-old father of six who lives in Gaza's Nusseirat refugee camp, stepping momentarily out of the long line of Palestinian workers passing through the Erez checkpoint between the Gaza Strip and Israel.

Trained as an accountant, he works instead as a day laborer and was headed Tuesday for a construction site outside Tel Aviv. The $20 to $30 he makes there each day is more than he would be paid in Gaza — even if he could find a job, which he cannot.

"I leave my house at 3 a.m. ... I'm so exhausted, and I never see my children," said Abu Najim, rubbing red-rimmed eyes. "That's what statehood would mean to me, having a job in my field, being able to have time with my family."

Few here argue with Arafat's decision to delay a declaration of statehood, despite the long-held Palestinian view that they had the right to become independent upon Tuesday's expiration of the Oslo interim peace accords.

Such a declaration now, in the absence of a negotiated statehood agreement with Israel, would likely have brought a sweeping Israeli crackdown — and ignited Israelis' fears over national security, thus boosting re-election prospects for hard-line Israeli Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu in voting only 13 days away.

Even with an almost universal sense among Palestinians that holding off on statehood was the smart tactical move, seeing the day come and go brought a palpable sense of letdown.

A cartoon in the leading daily newspaper Al-Quds had three panels, the first showing a calendar page marked May 3 and the last showing May 5. In the middle, where the May 4 Tuesday date would normally be, was a page with the notation: "Forget it."

Arafat, perhaps wishing to disassociate himself from the day's unhappy associations — and from any potential unrest — spent the day outside the country, visiting Ireland and Algeria.

In Jerusalem, Netanyahu claimed it was his unyielding stance toward the Palestinians that had staved off a declaration of independence.

"It's the fourth of May and there is no declaration of Palestinian statehood," the prime minister told reporters. "It's an important achievement for the state of Israel and the government of Israel."

The Netanyahu government has frozen compliance with the U.S.-brokered land-for-peace accords negotiated last September, saying the Palestinians have not lived up to their commitments.

The prime minister said if he were re-elected, his government would work toward a new accord that would "give the Palestinians the freedom to manage their own affairs," while safeguarding Israel's interests. Netanyahu opposes Palestinian independence.

But the notion that Israel could indefinitely prevent a statehood declaration drew derisive laughter from Palestinians in the Khan Younis refugee camp, living in some of the worst conditions in Gaza. The smell of sewage hangs in the warm air, and debris litters the sandy streets.

Assured isolation bill vote due in Texas House

State Rep. Warren Chisum's "assured isolation" bill is scheduled for a vote in the Texas House on Thursday and indications are that if it passes there and in the Senate and then is signed into law by Gov. George W. Bush, the facility for holding radioactive waste that it entails would be located somewhere in the Permian Basin.

Disposal of radioactive waste is one of those 'hot button' issues that tends to get John Q. Public "up in arms" in a hurry — as it should!

That is a concern for the people of the Midland-Odessa area because it would involve radioactive waste being transported through the two cities either by rail or trucks with all the potential for disaster that holds.

On March 20 a forum was held at the Center for Energy and Economic Diversification (CEED) between Midland and Odessa regarding disposal of radioactive waste, and that forum brought together a number of state officials, opponents and proponents of radioactive waste disposal and concerned citizens to discuss various methods of waste disposal and disposal sites. A lot of information was presented and a number of questions were asked, but it was quite obvious that the fears of the general public about radioactive waste disposal were not completely alleviated by the discussion.

The one point that is clear from the experience both in Andrews County and Hudspeth County, both of which had been pinpointed as potential sites for radioactive waste disposal, is that the State of Texas should not locate a waste disposal site without first discussing the matter in detail with the residents in that particular area. Disposal of radioactive waste is one of those "hot button" issues that tends to get John Q. Public "up in arms" in a hurry — as it should!

As Diane D'Arrigo, radioactive waste project director for Nuclear Information Resource Service (NIRS) in Washington, D.C. noted, "Instead of opening their arms to the deadly radioactive waste from atomic weapons and power plants from across the country, Texas legislators should be protecting Texans' health, money and environment...It will all end up in the hands of the state. Either taxpayers will be paying for the problem or the community will have to deal with it."

Are we listening, legislators?

Exotic animal bill should be enacted

Several years ago, the Texas Parks and Wildlife Department complained it did not have the manpower to monitor dangerous and exotic animals that some Texans keep as pets or prey for hunters.

So the Texas Legislature last session took that chore aw ay from the department. But lawmakers did not give it to a nother agency.

So your neighbor could keep a lion or a gorilla that might be eyeing your dog, your chickens or your child.

In many municipalities such as San Antonio, city councils prohibit residents from keeping lions, tigers or other wild animals as pets. However, in unincorporated areas , where county governments have no ordinance-making power, exotic animals are regulated only by the people who own them.

There are numerous incidents every year of people bein g attacked by these wild things. This month, a tiger at a wil dlife refuge near Tyler attacked a woman.

Many states outlaw ownership of these animals. That pr obably would not fly in Texas, but there should be some me chanism to regulate and register wild animals.

State Rep. Toby Goodman, R-Arlington, has introduced legislation that would require owners of such beasts, in areas where there is no ordinance, to register them with authorities; to carry sufficient liability insurance; and to p rovide safe, humane confinement.

House Bill 2259 is sitting on a legislative back burner. It is so commonsensical, though, that it demands to be brought forward.

Smugglers bring countless immigrants over border

Over the last two months, nearly 500 Chinese citizens seeking political asylum have arrived near the shores of Guam, the tiny U.S. colony 1,500 miles off the coast of China.

The asylum seekers have quickly filled the island's prisons, forcing the Coast Guard to divert several hundred to nearby islands.

Anderson

Senior government officials tell us that an organized criminal syndicate is masterminding the flood of would-be immigrants from China's Fujian province, filling them with false hope and charging them up to $10,000 for the two-week trip.

If granted asylum, the migrants will be part of a fortunate minority: They will be eligible for residency and, eventually, citizenship. In 1997, the United States admitted nearly 800,000 immigrants. But each year, many more enter illegally.

The Immigration and Naturalization Service estimates that 5 million undocumented immigrants live in the United States. More than half are from Mexico. Federal immigration officials tell us that a tougher and more sophisticated border patrol has forced illegal immigrants to turn to smuggling operations like the one headed by the "Snake Heads" — the Chinese slave traders sending boats to Guam.

"It's no longer jump in the boat and try to get there," said Lt. Cmdr. Pat Philbin, a spokesman for the Coast Guard. "There are sophisticated operations at work here. They're having to pay smugglers (large amounts) of money to get them here."

International immigration experts put the number of people trafficked around the world annually by smugglers at 4 million, with the largest portion going to the United States. Though federal officials have been aware of the problem for some time, the size and complexity of the operations are proving alarming.

Last year, one investigation dubbed "Seek and Keep" revealed a smuggling network that had been bringing Indian nationals, Pakistanis, Afghanis and Syrians to the United States for least 10 years. Smugglers brought the would-be immigrants through Moscow, to Havana, to the Bahamas and finally to South America before transporting them to the United States.

Federal officials estimated that during the final three years of the operation, the smugglers brought as many as 300 aliens per month into the country, collecting approximately $20,000 for each person.

A second investigation, "Over the Rainbow II," revealed that "Snake Heads" were moving between 100 and 150 Chinese nationals per month. The majority of those smuggled were from the Fujian province. Smugglers moved them to Canada, through an Indian reservation and into New York City, where the immigrants began working to pay back nearly $50,000 in smuggling fees. Investigators estimated that smugglers could have collected as much as $170 million from the operation.

Most are placed in virtual servitude until they pay back the cost of their passage. While the most egregious abuses often go undetected, what's known is revealing. A 1997 report from the Department of Labor found that 63 percent of garment companies in New York City paid less than minimum wage. A 1996 Los Angeles survey found a comparable 61 percent out of compliance. The New York workers had average back-wages of $7,000, compared to $3,200 for those in Los Angeles.

Though the majority of illegal migrants end up in sweat shops, a growing number of women and young girls are coming to work in the sex trade.

Many are fleeing economic hardship. As many as 400,000 women under 30 have left Ukraine in the past decade. The Thai Embassy in Ukraine receives nearly 1,000 visa applications a day, most of them from women. In a 1997 study by the International Organization for Migration reported that as many as 500,000 women are annually trafficked into Western Europe alone.

Last year, as part of an investigation of the sex trade, Mickael Platzer, head of operations for the United Nations' Center for International Crime Prevention told the New York Times that "This (Ukrainian sex trade) is happening wherever you look now. The mafia is not stupid. There is less law enforcement since the Soviet Union fell apart and more freedom of movement. The earnings are incredible. The overhead is low — and you don't have to buy cars and guns. Drugs you sell once and they are gone. Women can earn money for a long time."

UPDATE — Several months ago, we reported that under the Department of Agriculture's new food safety inspection system, slaughterhouses could fail three complete salmonella "test periods" — spanning almost a year — before being disciplined.

The glitch allowed plants that had already exceeded allowable levels of contamination to continue operating until the end of the test period. But after taking considerable criticism, federal regulators have decided to put consumers ahead of producers. Last week, USDA quietly announced that it will shut down plants completing their third test period immediately upon failure.

A new kind of espionage — via e-mail

The recent spy scandal concerning a Chinese nuclear scientist at Los Alamos, who pilfered all our atomic secrets, changed the spook profession forever — not only in nonfiction, but fiction as well.

Buchwald

In the past, the main character would be a retired British agent named Willow, who was living with his former secretary, Blondie. While making tea, Willow is visited by M, the head of S-1. "We believe a foreign power has infiltrated our nuclear laboratories at Blemish. You have to come in from the cold before they destroy the world."

Willow, who is looking for any excuse to get away from Blondie, puts on his dirty raincoat and goes out to find his quarry.

He first goes to see Chang Chang, the owner of the China Doll restaurant. He asks Chang if he has seen anyone in the restaurant with atomic secrets.

Chang says, "I saw Wei Chow this morning. He was microfilming mathematical formulas in wonton soup and asked me when the last mail pickup was."

Willow goes to Wei Chow's house, and just before Wei mails the microfilm to an acupuncturist in Shanghai, Willow shoots the spy dead.

Now that's the old version of the story. The modern version is M sends an e-mail to Willow on the Internet that says, "Someone is stealing all our secrets."

Willow, by computer, replies, "I read you. As soon as we can figure out his password we'll put a virus in his hard disk and make him crash."

Willow goes through the files that have been transmitted from Oxford to Beijing. He discovers a pattern. All the messages sent out are labeled "Atomic Secrets — Choose One From Each Column."

Willow stays at his computer for a month. He is certain that his man is Wei Cheng, who lost his Rhodes scholarship for flunking chemistry.

Willow sends a fax to M, who raids Wei Cheng's apartment, where he takes an ax and destroys the computer before Wei Cheng can blow up the world.

At the end, looking wistfully at his trench coat, Willow says to Blondie, "The spying business isn't as much fun as it used to be."

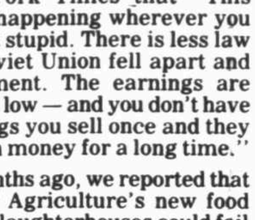
Congress of two minds on Clinton's war in Kosovo

WASHINGTON — Congress is not only ambivalent about buying into "Clinton's War," it is also of two minds about being ambivalent.

That is because the war to make Kosovo safe for Kosovars is a war without an entrance strategy. By its unwillingness to enter Serbian territory to stop the killing at the start, NATO conceded defeat. The bombing is simply intended to coerce the Serbian leader to give up at the negotiating table all he has won on the killing field. He won't.



Safire

He will make a deal. By urging that Russia be the broker, Clinton knows he can do no better than compromise with criminality. That means we are not fighting to win but are merely punishing to settle.

Small wonder that no majority has formed in Congress to adopt the McCain-Biden resolution giving the president authority to use "all necessary force" to achieve a clear victory. Few want to go out on a limb for Clinton knowing that he is preparing to saw that limb off behind them.

Clinton has so few followers in Congress because he is himself the world's leading follower. He steers not by the compass but by the telltale, driven by polls that dictate both how far he can go and how little he can get away with.

The real debate, then, is not intervention vs. isolation, not sanctity of borders vs. self-determination of nations, not Munich vs. Vietnam, not NATO credibility vs. America the globocop. The central question is: Do we trust this president to use all force necessary to establish the principle that no nation can drive out an unwanted people?

The answer is no. The distrust is palpable. Give him the tools and he will not finish the job.

Proof that such distrust is well founded is in the erosion of NATO's key goal: muscular protection of refugees trusting enough to return to Kosovo.

At first, that was to be done by "a NATO force," rather than U.N. peacekeepers. The fallback was to "a NATO-led force," including Russians. Now the formulation is "ready to lead," if anybody asks, or "a force with NATO at its core," which means Serb-favoring Russians, Ukrainians and Argentinians, with Hungarians and Czechs to give the illusion of "a NATO core."

If you were an ethnic-Albanian woman whose husband had been massacred, sister raped, children scattered and house burned down on orders from Belgrade — would you go back home under such featherweight protection?

Only a fool would trust an observer group so rotten to its "core." And yet that is the concession NATO has made even before formal negotiations begin.

What can we expect next? After a few more weeks of feckless bombing while Milosevic completes his dirty work in Kosovo, Victor Chernomyrdin or Jimmy Carter or somebody will intercede to arrange a cease-fire. Film will be shot of Serb tanks (only 30 were hit in a month of really smart bombing) rolling back from Kosovo as bombardment halts and the embargo is lifted.

Sergei Rogov, the Moscow Arbatovnik, laid out the Russian deal in Sunday's Washington Post: (1) autonomy for Kosovo but no independence or partition; (2) Milosevic troops out but Serb "border guards" to remain in Kosovo, (3) and peace "enforcers" under not NATO but U.N. and Helsinki Pact bureaucrats. As a grand concession, NATO would be allowed to care for refugees in Albania and Macedonia.

That, of course, would be a triumph for mass murderers everywhere, and Clinton will insist on face-savers: war-crimes trials for sergeants and below, a Brit and a Frenchman in command of a NATO platoon of Pomeranian grenadiers, no wearing of blue helmets and absolutely no reparations to Serbia to rebuild bridges in the first year.

Perhaps Britain's Tony Blair will prod Clinton to do better, and all Serb troops and paramilitary thugs will be invited out of Kosovo. But the returning KLA will find mass graves and will likely lash out at Serbs; after an indecent interval Belgrade will assert sovereignty with troops in police uniforms.

Rash of tornadoes in Olkahoma and Kansas kill more than 43

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — Rescue crews looking for signs of life picked through shattered homes, twisted trees and mangled cars Tuesday after a swarm of astonishingly powerful tornadoes chewed up entire neighborhoods in Oklahoma and Kansas and killed at least 43 people.

Even in an area accustomed to twisters and strong thunderstorms — this is, after all, the region known as Tornado Alley, and springtime is an especially dangerous time of year — the twisters' wrath was extraordinary.

One monstrous funnel cloud skipped across the ground for four hours and was classified F-5, the most powerful tornado there is, with winds of more than 260 mph. It cut a path one mile wide, and along with the other twisters tore up 60 miles of the flat countryside.

"This is crazy," said Eric Peterson of Haysville, Kan., a suburb of Wichita, after a twister pushed a tree into his bedroom. "I have been in typhoons in the South Pacific and in hurricanes, but this tops it."

The death toll was 38 in Oklahoma and five in Kansas, including a month-old baby in Haysville, Kan., making this the nation's deadliest tornado outbreak since 42 people were killed last year in Florida. It was also the deadliest such tragedy to hit Oklahoma since 1947, when a twister killed 113 people in Woodward.

Hundreds were injured, including 500 in Oklahoma City and more than 100 in Wichita, Kan. At least 1,500 businesses and homes were destroyed or heavily damaged.

Cars were tossed across highways and crushed like soda cans. Houses were smashed into piles of splintered timbers and brick. The ground was scoured bare in places, stripped of trees. The air smelled like sawdust. Baby pictures floated down the streets in storm water.

Jon Hansen, an assistant fire chief in Oklahoma City, likened the scene to that of the Oklahoma bombing in 1995: "It looks like the Murrah Building, but instead of nine stories tall, it's spread out over a large area."

Officials said the death toll could have been worse if people had not heeded warnings to take cover underground. Local TV stations went live with coverage of the developing storm at least two hours before it hit the heavily populated Oklahoma City area.

Oklahoma Gov. Frank Keating estimated that hundreds of millions of dollars of damage was done. He mobilized the National Guard to help with the rescue, and tanks joined police and fire vehicles in blocking streets where the heaviest destruction occurred.

Rescuers conducted two preliminary searches for victims, then brought in bulldozers to clear away heavy debris in a third search during the afternoon. At least one woman was found alive in a trailer park.

"There may be someone, somewhere, still out there, under the clutter," said John Vears, one of the hundreds of volunteer searchers and emergency workers.

Most homes in Oklahoma are built on concrete slabs and don't have cellars where people can take shelter. When a tornado draws near, people are urged to take shelter in a structurally sound, centrally located space in the house, such as a bathroom, a closet or under a staircase.

Still, Dennis McCarthy, chief meteorologist for the National Weather Service in Norman, said some deaths may have been unavoidable. "With a storm of this intensity and this magnitude, sometimes even if you do the right things, sometime you just don't have enough shelter," McCarthy said.

Wendy Knapp, a Red Cross volunteer at an evacuation shelter in Newcastle, said she was taking her son to T-ball practice when she turned around and the funnel cloud came into view.

"I've been in several of them in my lifetime. But this was a big one," she said. "This did more damage than I've ever seen in my life. There are dead cattle in people's yard, trees, debris. Grass was ripped up. At some homes, the foundations were ripped up."

Christy Smith was visiting her grandparents when a tornado tore through her neighborhood in Midwest City, just outside Oklahoma City. She spent Tuesday rummaging through the remains of what once was her home.

"When we got here, I could only tell it was our house because of the bushes," she said.

Lisa Poahty was still in shock as she looked at her neighbor's car, which had been hurled into her living room. Her son's mattress was in a tree and the family car was 100 yards away in a neighbor's yard.

She was able to salvage something, however: She found a small black bag on the floor, opened it and pulled out a glass bottle. "My perfume survived," she said. "It was my favorite."

Officials estimated the tornadoes traveled as much as 80 miles after forming 45 miles south of Oklahoma City on Monday afternoon. Over the next 20 hours, as many as four dozen tornadoes developed. The same system spawned the Kansas tornado, which struck about 8:30 p.m. Monday. It cut a path 12 miles long and three miles wide.

In southern Wichita, about 270 homes and businesses were damaged, including about 100 homes in two lakeside trailer parks. At least 150 houses and 27 businesses were damaged or destroyed in Haysville.

Darrell Zehr, 44, figured he would be safe inside the cinderblock warehouse where he was working when the tornado struck Haysville. Then he was lifted 4 feet in the air and dropped back down.

"All of a sudden I couldn't breathe," he said. "The wind was knocked out of me. The roof fell on me. The wall fell on me." He marveled at how he survived with merely a bruised finger.

President Clinton declared disaster areas in 11 Oklahoma counties and one Kansas county and plans to tour the devastation this weekend.

Among the surreal images in the aftermath of the storm:

- In a high school parking lot next to a row of flattened houses, a dead gray horse lay between cars after being been blown in from the surrounding countryside.
- Officials reported that part of a wing apparently snapped off a small plane parked at a rural airport and drifted for 40 miles.

Dear Albertsons-

Recently I stopped by Albertson's to pick up groceries for our hamburger dinner that night. Later, as I started preparing dinner, I realized I had forgotten the hamburger and didn't have time to go back. A repairman was due at that moment or I would have gone right back to your store. I was quite embarrassed, but called your store with my dilemma. Even though you don't deliver, your store director, Carlos Hernandez, who was just about to go home offered to bring the meat to my house. Needless to say, you saved the day!

Thanks, Michelle Tackitt Sacramento, CA

Tornado witnesses, survivors recall night of terror

'I've been in several of them in my lifetime. But this was a big one. This did more damage than I've ever seen in my life. There are dead cattle in people's yards, trees, debris. Grass was ripped up. At some homes, the foundations were ripped up. It looks like a war zone. It looks like the Murrah bombing.'

— Wendy Knapp, a Red Cross volunteer at an evacuation shelter in Newcastle

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — The churning charcoal-gray clouds bunching on the southwestern Oklahoma horizon don't look that ominous to Don McGee as he wraps up his day at the Lawton Police Department and heads for his part-time security shift.

"You could see the wall cloud to the north with little tails hanging out of it," McGee says. "Cars stopped to watch it. It caused a little traffic jam."

But what was kicking up as a typical afternoon thunderstorm was about to explode into a series of vicious tornadoes, some with funnels half a mile wide, that would chop a path of death and indescribable destruction 60 miles long.

"It's the worst in anyone's memory," Oklahoma City Mayor Kirk Humphreys says while surveying blocks of destroyed homes in the south end of the city Tuesday. "I've never been afraid of a tornado until last night."

FORECASTER CHERYL SHARP is on a team of National Weather Service forecasters and meteorologists in Norman, Okla., that's tracking the monster storm system as it emerges from a springtime collision of cold air from the north and warm, moist air from the south.

The first storms show up on radar near Lawton about 4 p.m., Ms. Sharp says. The weather service puts out its first thunderstorm warning — covering Comanche County in southwestern Oklahoma — 15 minutes later.

But the winds swiftly rise to howls, and fierce clouds whirl high over Comanche and Grady counties. Barely half an hour later, at 4:47 p.m., the service issues the day's first tornado warning.

"From then on, there was just chaos," Ms. Sharp says. "It was very busy."

Over the next 20 hours, the weather service issues 174 warnings covering dozens of Oklahoma counties. They trace a diagonal line straight toward the state's northeastern corner. The enormous system eventually spits out as many as four dozen tornadoes before it spends itself.

OKLAHOMA CITY television stations go live as soon as the twisters form and, using helicopters, ground spotters and sophisticated radar, follow their ferocious dance across the state.

The main storm forms near Chickasha, about 45 miles to the southwest. It skips across the flat Oklahoma countryside, toppling trees, power lines, outbuildings and cars until it rips into south Oklahoma City.

"I was at home," says Chickasha police Capt. Lynn Williams. "It started moving toward this direction. It looked like it was going to miss town. But I took the family over to the shelter."

The funnel is spotted about 5:30 p.m. and hits the municipal airport on the edge of town 15 minutes later.

"The first two hangars are damaged pretty bad," Williams says. As many as 20 light aircraft are mangled.

But the tornado stays several miles west and northwest of the most populated part of town, Williams says.

"It kind of bypassed us," he says. "We got extremely lucky."

Even so, 11 die in Bridge Creek, a tiny community 20 miles to the northeast.

JUST SOUTH of the capital, at 6:40 p.m., Wendy Knapp is getting her son ready for T-ball practice. She doesn't know the National Weather Service is tracking a huge twister lumbering northwest and has just sent a tornado warning for McClain and Cleveland counties.

She and other parents have just arrived at the coach's home when the funnel cloud comes into view. She turns around.

"I had an eerie feeling that I should go home," says Ms. Knapp, a Red Cross volunteer at an evacuation shelter in Newcastle. "They made fun of me, but I was right.

"I've been in several of them in my lifetime. But this was a big one. This did more damage than I've ever seen in my life. There are dead cattle in people's yards, trees, debris. Grass was ripped up. At some homes, the foundations were ripped up.

"It looks like a war zone. It looks like the Murrah bombing."

AT 6:51, the National Weather Service issues a severe thunderstorm warning for Oklahoma City environs. It upgrades to a tornado warning — minutes before the twister hits.

"We're just standing there watching the weather on TV" when the forecasters predict a direct hit on suburban Moore, says Lee Ann Richardson. With heavy rain pounding her house, she rushes her family and pets into the storm cellar.

After a few minutes, they hear only silence.

"We opened up and everything was gone," she says.

A block away, the storm blows over Les Miller's house at 7:20. He emerges to unimaginable devastation almost everywhere he can see. Splintered beams and siding, shredded books and photo albums, children's toys, roofing tiles, kitchen pots and pans, remnants of belongings no longer recognizable.

"It's gone," Miller says.

"It just destroyed the whole town," says Ralph Reed, who was rescued from the wreckage of his house in Moore. "I mean it's just completely gone."

A few blocks further east, Terry Tamadge, a teacher at Westmoore High School, recounts Tuesday how he and his wife, Mimi, and their young daughter huddled together.

"We got under the stairwell and listened to the house leave," Tamadge says.

A clock still fixed to a wall is stopped at 7:21. The roof is gone; everything inside is wet and muddy.

"We're lucky," Tamadge says. "We've still got walls standing."

NYPD officers charged in alleged sexual torture case

NEW YORK (AP) — Five white police officers went on trial on civil rights charges Tuesday in the case of Abner Louima, a Haitian immigrant investigators say was sexually brutalized in a station-house bathroom.

The 1997 case, along with this year's police shooting of an unarmed African immigrant, has strained relations between the Police Department and the black community.

In opening statements, federal prosecutor Kenneth Thompson described in graphic detail how the defendants supposedly battered a handcuffed Louima inside a patrol car and then sodomized him in a bloody assault in a precinct bathroom in Brooklyn.

A defense attorney countered that Louima had "150 million reasons" to lie about the incident — a $150 million lawsuit against the city. Louima is represented by O.J. Simpson lawyers Johnnie Cochran Jr. and Barry Scheck in the lawsuit.

Officer Justin Volpe, 27, and three other officers are charged with assaulting Louima outside the precinct. And Volpe and Officer Charles Schwarz are charged in the attack inside the precinct bathroom, where Volpe allegedly stuck a broomstick into Louima's rectum and then jammed it into his mouth. A fifth officer is charged with covering up the attack.

Louima was hospitalized with severe internal injuries that included a ruptured bladder and colon, prompting widespread demonstrations against police brutality in the city. He has recovered and is expected to be the government's star witness.

"Inside that bathroom, Abner Louima suffered more than a beating," Thompson told the jury of eight whites, three Hispanics and one black. "Ladies and gentlemen, Abner Louima was tortured inside that bathroom."

According to Thompson, Volpe at one point warned Louima: "If you make any noise, we kill you."

The prosecutor said that Louima was picked up in a case of mistaken identity: Police wanted Louima's cousin, who had actually struck Volpe during a melee outside a Brooklyn nightclub.

"When someone hurts Justin Volpe, he believes in hurting back," Thompson said. "He was furious, and he wanted revenge."

Marvyn Kornberg, Volpe's lawyer, said the lawsuit gave Louima $150 million in incentives to "cut the truth, to modify the truth, to in fact lie." He suggested another explanation for Louima's internal injuries.

Those injuries were "not consistent with a nonconsensual insertion of an object into his rectum," Kornberg said. Also, he said, there was evidence of another man's DNA mixed in with some of Louima's feces found in the bathroom.

Thompson acknowledged to the jury that Louima lied initially when he claimed that the assaulting officers had taunted him by saying, "It's Giuliani time." Mayor Rudolph Giuliani has made his reputation as a law-and-order politician who made the city's streets safer.

"That lie," Kornberg responded, "was told to create divisiveness in the city of New York."

Volpe, Schwarz, 33, Thomas Bruder, 33, and Thomas Wiese, 35, are charged with violating Louima's civil rights by beating him after his arrest outside the nightclub. Prosecutors also allege that Schwarz held Louima down while Volpe rammed the stick into Louima's rectum and mouth.

The officers' supervisor, Sgt. Michael Bellomo, 37, is charged with helping cover up the attack. If convicted, Bellomo, Bruder and Wiese face up to 10 years in prison; Volpe and Schwarz could get life in prison without parole.

The latter two face longer sentences because of the sexual nature of the bathroom attack.

Man crashes car into school yard killing 2 children

COSTA MESA, Calif. (AP) — A man who told police he wanted to "execute" innocent children plowed through a day care center playground with his car, killing two toddlers and injuring five people, authorities say.

When the big Cadillac finally came to a stop, pinning several children underneath, he calmly sat behind the wheel until police arrested him Monday.

"Why he picked yesterday, why he picked this school, why he picked these kids, we don't know," Lt. Ron Smith said Tuesday.

Steven Allen Abrams, 39, of Santa Ana was arrested for investigation of murder and assault with a deadly weapon after driving his car into the Southcoast Early Childhood Learning Center schoolyard. He was held without bail pending his arraignment Wednesday.

"I was going to execute these children because they were innocent," Abrams told detectives, according to Smith.

Abrams didn't know anyone in the school but was familiar with the neighborhood, where he lived five years ago before a split with his girlfriend, Smith said. He was eventually convicted of stalking the woman.

"In his mind he associated the school with the neighborhood he used to live in," Smith said.

Sierra Soto, 4, and Brandon Wiener, 3, were killed. Nicholas McHardy, 2, and Victoria Sherman, 5, were in critical condition with head injuries. Danielle Knecht, a 24-year-old teacher's aide, was in fair condition with a broken leg.

Two other children, ages 2 and 3, were treated for scrapes and bruises and released.

"I've been a cop for 20 years and have never seen anything where someone deliberately drove a car into a playground and killed children. It's unfathomable to me," Smith said.

Forty-five minutes before the schoolyard killings, he rammed his car into another vehicle that cut him off on a freeway, Smith said.

At the day care center, an angry crowd of neighbors, parents and workers from a nearby church jeered as he was led away in handcuffs.

There was no sign Abrams was under the influence of drugs or alcohol, police said.

Meanwhile, the school was closed indefinitely Tuesday, and a memorial service was scheduled for Wednesday night at the church across the street.

A shrine formed at the school — a mount of bouquets, balloons, stuffed animals and cards. A cross erected in the playground read, "Dear God, please protect our children."

Willey testifies about 'very forceful' sexual advance by Clinton

ALEXANDRIA, Va. (AP) — Kathleen Willey testified in court Tuesday that she confided to her friend, Julie Hiatt Steele, about President Clinton's "very forceful" sexual advance in the White House.

But in a new disclosure, Mrs. Willey said she was so upset by the events of that day in 1993, the same day her husband committed suicide, that Ms. Steele had to remind her later of their conversation on the alleged sexual advance by the president.

It's a crucial point in the obstruction trial of Ms. Steele, who is charged with lying to Kenneth Starr's investigators when she denied that Mrs. Willey had told her about the incident hours after it allegedly happened.

Ms. Steele says Mrs. Willey first told her about the experience with Clinton in 1997, asking her to lie about it to a Newsweek reporter.

Earlier Tuesday, a friend who worked with her in the White House social office testified that Mrs. Willey confided Clinton's alleged sexual advance to her shortly after it happened.

In a barely audible voice, Ruthie Eisen said that, according to Mrs. Willey's account, the president "kissed her and hugged her" and "touched her chest."

"She said that the president had gotten aroused and said he had wanted to do that for a long time or wanted to do that since he saw her," Ms. Eisen said.

Ms. Eisen said Mrs. Willey told her she was "caught offguard" by the president's advance. Ms. Eisen said she assumed Mrs. Willey revealed the incident in confidence. Ms. Eisen said she didn't tell anyone about it until she was questioned by Starr's investigators.

Asked if Mrs. Willey ever asked her to lie or fabricate anything, Ms. Eisen replied, "absolutely not."

Linda Tripp is the only other White House staffer to have said that Mrs. Willey confided the alleged incident.

In her testimony on the trial's second day, Mrs. Willey said she relayed the account of the advance after coming to Ms. Steele's house outside Richmond, Va. Immediately before visiting Ms. Steele, Mrs. Willey said she had been frantically looking for her husband, whose body was found the next day.

"I recall being there (at the house) because Julie told me I was there," Mrs. Willey testified. "She reminded me that I was there, that I had told her briefly what happened with the president."

Clinton has denied under oath making any such advance on Mrs. Willey. Jim Kennedy, spokesman for the White House counsel's office, said there would be no comment Tuesday on Willey's accusations.

Taking the witness stand on the trial's second day, Mrs. Willey recounted her meeting with the president in the Oval Office. A White House volunteer, she had come to ask Clinton for a paying job to help relieve her family's financial problems.

"I told him we were having a crisis," Mrs. Willey said, and that she was desperate for a job.

As they talked, he led her to a small galley kitchen adjacent to the Oval Office, she said.

She said Clinton "hugged me and told me he was very sorry." Then Clinton began to kiss her. "He was very forceful. His hands were all over me," Mrs. Willey testified. She said he touched her breasts and put his hands up her dress. "I told him I needed to get out of there," she testified.

Did she try to resist? a prosecutor asked. "Yes," she said.

In the aftermath of her husband's suicide, Ms. Steele took her to the hospital because she was so emotionally upset, Mrs. Willey testified.

Two white supremacists convicted of murderous plot

LITTLE ROCK, Ark. (AP) — Two white supremacists were convicted Tuesday of engaging in a murderous scheme to set up a whites-only republic in the Pacific Northwest.

Chevie Kehoe and Daniel Lee, both 26, could get the death penalty for killing an Arkansas gun dealer, his wife and her daughter in 1996. Kehoe and Lee were convicted of all murder, conspiracy and racketeering charges against them.

The jury will return Thursday to begin hearing testimony in the sentencing phase.

Federal prosecutors said the men pursued their dream of an all-white republic by stockpiling military-style weapons, robbing several people and suffocating gun dealer William Mueller, his wife, Nancy, and her 8-year-old daughter, Sarah Powell, before throwing their bodies into a river.

Chevie and brother Cheyne Kehoe first entered the public eye in 1997, following a videotaped shootout with police in Ohio.

Cheyne Kehoe later helped authorities find his brother. Cheyne Kehoe and their mother, Gloria Kehoe, also testified against Chevie, saying he described how he and Lee committed the murders.

BASIN BRIEFING

City's future

BIG SPRING — Big Spring residents, businessmen and members of city and county government gathered earlier this week to share lunch, and maybe a touch of the mythical success that King Arthur's "Round Table" enjoyed ages ago. The gathering, sponsored by the Big Spring Area Chamber of Commerce, allowed those who are concerned about the direction and future of Big Spring to provide input.

SIP grants

The Midland College club Students in Philanthropy (SIP) awarded $16,152.39 in grants to 13 local non-profit organizations in a recent ceremony. The SIP program has two phases: fund-raising and grant-making. SIP students earned $1,152.39 in fund-raisers during the fall and winter, and the Abell-Hanger Foundation, which sponsors the club, added another $15,000.

Bad day for Bush

AUSTIN — Republican Gov. George W. Bush had a tough day Tuesday.

His office got sued; his support dropped in a new poll of GOP presidential candidates; and a published report suggested that his plans for a summer campaign tour could be jeopardized by a special session of the Legislature.

"We do seem to be the center of a lot of attention," Bush spokeswoman Karen Hughes observed.

A USA Today/CNN/Gallup poll conducted nationally over the weekend put Bush's support at 42 percent, down from 53 percent in mid-April.

Despite the drop, Bush handily led all other Republican presidential prospects. Elizabeth Dole was second, at 24 percent, while the remaining candidates were in single digits. The poll of 1,014 adults had a margin of error of plus or minus three percentage points.

"Right now, the governor is devoting his attention to the Texas legislative session and isn't out campaigning," said Mindy Tucker, spokeswoman for Bush's presidential exploratory committee.

"It's encouraging that he's still leading the polls. But he knows he's got a lot of work to do, and he looks forward to getting out around the country when the legislative session is over," she said.

Bush, who has vowed to stay in Texas until the Legislature adjourns May 31, tentatively is scheduled to travel to Iowa and New Hampshire in early June.

Cops to crack down on gas thieves

By Rick López
Staff Writer

Next time you notice a price hike in convenience store merchandise, don't take it out on the clerk.

Instead, you can exact your revenge by putting a shoplifter in jail.

Midland Crime Stoppers spokesman Sgt. Jim Crouse announced Tuesday that local convenience stores will help authorities crack down on gas thefts and "beer runs" by releasing their surveillance videos for broadcast.

Still-frame pictures of the suspects will be taken from the videos and aired on KMID during its Crime Stoppers' segment, Crouse said.

Each month, gas and beer thefts account for $1,500 in losses for 19 7-Eleven stores in Midland, said Ron Stewart, director of operations.

A representative of Town and Country Convenience Store said their location at 2106 W. Front St. had 67 gas thefts in the last two months.

John Murphy, a former 7-Eleven clerk, remembers how frustrating it was for him to deal with pilsner pilferers.

"They would pick up the beer, smile at you and say 'See you'. It's aggravating," said Murphy, who now supervises a group of 7-Elevens. "Hopefully, people will help us do something about it."

John Smith, deputy chief of the Midland Police Department, said the problem is widespread.

"It's causing problems not only for 7-Eleven, but for other convenience stores," Smith said. "We all pay higher prices for these thefts."

Police and the Midland County Sheriff's Office have vowed to prosecute these cases fiercely, despite the work load that awaits them.

"It certainly is a big case load, but we're relying on help from the stores and the public," Smith said. "Everyone's going to have to work together to get these cases solved."

Les Riek, manager of a northside Kent Kwik, said there's only one alternative to prosecution that gas stations could take: selling gas on a prepay basis.

"We're a customer service. We operate based on what the people want," Riek said. "There's a very small group of people that refuse to pay for their gas. Why should we punish others who don't want to go through the agony of waiting for the pumps to turn on and go inside to pay?"

The Texas Alcoholic Beverage Commission is also joining the crusade. Sgt. Scott Armstrong of the Midland office said undercover officers will boost the arrest effort by posing as cashiers or customers.

"They don't know who's going to be behind the counter, so they're taking a big chance if they try stealing," Armstrong said.

Odessa Crime Stoppers launched an identical program two years ago.

Since then, convenience stores in that city have seen a 50 percent decrease in thefts, spokeswoman Susan Rogers said.

"So far, we've had someone call in a tip on each

Let's get physical

Physics circus provides fun and valuable lessons

Flames rising from an exploded helium balloon. Frozen bananas and racquet balls shattering on the ground. A concrete block chopped in half over a student lying on a bed of nails.

It's all physics — in a circus atmosphere — that is the idea behind the fifth annual physics circus held Tuesday night at Midland High School and open to the public.

A small group of parents and children of all ages gathered in the MHS gymnasium to watch — and often participate in — the show.

"The purpose of these is not to explain the science," said Chuck Bell, an MHS physics teacher whose students worked on each of the acts. "It's kind of a show and tell without a lot of tell. We're just telling the kids, 'Here's something neat, and when you get to high school, you'll learn how it works."

"We bait the audience quite a bit," he said.

MHS student Caleb Brown baited the audience quite literally.

"Who wants some money?" he asked the audience, holding up a dollar bill. A number of eager volunteers raised their hands.

Brown explained the rules: to get the money, the volunteer had to jump over it from a standing position on a skateboard. Brown and an assistant caught each

Officials assure Midlanders Y2K bugs won't bite

■ Airport director says Midland International Airport has taken every step necessary to comply.

By Jeff Stevens

According to Ken Day, director of Midland airports, air travelers have little to fear from Y2K bugs.

"I'll be flying," he said, adding that the industry has taken every step to ensure that passengers have no fears about Y2K compliance.

"The various federal agencies are heavily involved in identifying the things that would have a potential impact on travel."

Walt Mossberg, technology columnist for the Wall Street Journal, isn't comforted by the industry's assurances. He recently spoke on the topic in San Antonio. Though Mossberg didn't feel the year 2000 would cause any major glitches in American life, he said, "You won't catch me in the air on New Year's Eve or New Year's Day."

Local traveler Grant Billingsley said, "I'm not worried about it right now, but I'll be paying closer attention as the end of the year comes up." He said he doesn't currently have plans to fly over the Thursday, civic leaders in towns and cities across America will again mark the day of prayer, the 48th such day and the 11th since the 100th Congress passed a bill and President Ronald Reagan signed a law designating it an official observance.

Dentists, Casa de Amigos bridge gap for kids with financial needs

By Jennifer Cherry

Tuesday and Thursday evenings dentists and oral hygienists join forces at Casa de Amigos in Midland to ensure children have healthy teeth. More than 20 dentists in Midland participate in the dental service program that is offered to school children who are referred to Casa by school nurses.

This year, Casa received a $39,838 grant to bridge funding toward the dental service program for economically disadvantaged children.

"We are so fortunate that Meadows gave. Without them, we would have to find other means of money," said Dinah Doggett, volunteer coordinator at Casa de Amigos.

Casa also accepted a challenge grant from the Meadows Foundation for a grant up to $13,028 for the year 2000 as a $1: 1 match for contributions received between March 11, 1999 and Jan. 1, 2000, Mrs. Doggett said.

The clinic costs $30,000 yearly to operate, she said. If the costs of the dentists and the hygienists were added

Kaczynski didn't need the media or the Internet to make bombs

I'm not a politician and not a policeman — just someone who wants our children to grow up in a world where fear doesn't rule.

López

And since the April 20 massacre in Littleton, Colo., there's a lot of anxiety sprawling across the nation. There's even a hint of it in Midland County.

While listening to the police scanner Sunday, I heard a couple of calls from people — who I suspect — who live in terror of the Trenchcoat Mafia:

■ A woman called police and told them she found something "suspicious" in her trash can. Police arrived, looked at the object and assured the woman it was a piece of metal from a broken lawn sprinkler.

■ Another woman called authorities and told them five unknown teen-agers — all wearing black clothing — were poking around her neighborhood. The caller said she'd never seen them in that area before, but an officer who went to the scene confirmed that one of the teens lives just a few houses away.

And that's probably just the beginning.

There's probably many more people who hesitate picking up anything on their lawn because it might be a pipe bomb in disguise. There's probably many Marilyn Mansons who get cold stares at school — even though they were wearing black lipstick before the Colorado slayings.

A Big Spring sergeant told me he's spent many hours last week tracking down rumors that some teen-agers were making explosives. He knew that more than likely, it was just some kid mouthing off to his friends, but his detectives couldn't take chances, he said.

It's not fair for society to live under this cloud of uncertainty, but who's to blame for all this tension? Is it the copycats who have been detained in six Texas cities for making explosives? Or it is the news media?

One Midland officer claims a certain young man got his bomb instructions from media reports. If the police department's theory is correct, then how do they explain Theodore Kaczynski, Terry Nichols, Eric Rudolph and Ahmed Yousef? Their attacks came long before reporters could read bomb recipes off the Internet.

If nothing else, the news media — and authorities — have tried to make these copycats think twice before making Midland County another Oklahoma City, Jonesboro, Ark. or Pearl, Miss.

Many other criminals have been down this path of violence, but accomplished nothing. A classic example: Munich, Germany, 1972.

Palestinian terrorists thought the kidnapping of Israeli athletes would help them regain their homeland. It ended in death for them and 11 innocent people.

And it didn't bring them an inch closer to their goal.

The same applies to other atrocities — whether they happened at the Atlanta Olympic games or a Kentucky public school.

It's time to end this madness. You can't go back and erase the events of the last two weeks, but you can keep it from happening again.

To any copycats reading this: Allow innocent people to continue the path that God, not you, chose for them. If you're seeking power, then consider the power you have to spare lives.

COMPLY: City's radio dispatch console did not pass tests

(From 1B)

New Year's holiday. Billingsley travels by commercial plane 2 to 3 times a month.

Day said, however, that Midland International Airport has taken every step to ensure Y2K compliance isn't a problem here.

"What's made us very unique is the new terminal building (opened Jan. 23) covered a lot of the categories required to be Y2K compliant."

After a year of researching the airport's compliance, only one area was identified as needing to be upgraded.

"We've been working with the FAA, the Air Transport Association and representatives of the airlines. Over the past year, we were required to identify all areas of the airfield that weren't Y2K compliant."

Areas ranging from baggage handling systems to flight information data were assessed. Only one "airfield critical" area was identified, the Runway Surface Scan System (RSSS).

"Airfield critical items indicate a potential impact on air carrier operations on Jan. 1," Day said.

Midland's RSSS was installed in the late 1980s and according to Day helps the airport determine when to apply chemicals for de-icing the runway.

"It's a tool that assists us in maintaining runway systems during severe weather conditions," Day said.

Total cost to update the system is $85,000, most of which will be funded by the federal government. The city's share of the project amounts to $8,500. The remaining $76,500 will come from a federal grant. The City Council authorized the city to apply for the grant at its last meeting.

Tommy Hudson with the city manager's office said the city has, "verbal confirmation that the grant will be approved."

The deadline for updating the RSSS is June 30, 1999.

"That's the date the FAA has come to in order to validate and complete all testing," Day said, adding that would provide ample time to correct any problems should they occur. Day also said that Midland Airpark will be compliant simply because it doesn't have any systems that are date sensitive.

According to Hudson, who is in charge of a committee to ensure the city's Y2K preparedness, the airport's compliance is indicative of most other city programs.

"We're 90 percent Y2K ready," Hudson said. He was hesitant to use the word compliant because he can't vouch for vendors that supply services to the city.

Hudson did, however, say that there would be no interruption of those services identified by the city as "mission critical," utilities, traffic, finance, public safety, communications and airports.

"All systems have been tested and retested with no interruptions," said Hudson.

The only city service that did not pass its tests is the city's radio dispatch console, which handles dispatching for police and fire as well as Midland College and MISD.

The city will have to spend an estimated $750,000 to make the equipment compliant.

"We anticipate the equipment being updated by 2000," he said, adding that even if it isn't, "there will be no interruption of service."

The city has contingency plans to address every possibility of a Y2K breakdown. In the instance of the radio console, computer glitches only would affect internal functions, "The public would not notice any difference," Hudson said, adding that 9-1-1 has been tested and validated as Y2K ready.

The city also has more than 20 million gallons of water stockpiled, in case of water quality problems and has contingencies to keep city services running even if electric power is down.

From a personal standpoint, Hudson said he isn't concerned about any Armageddon scenarios ignited by the end of 1999.

"Personally, I think there may be some interruptions. But I don't think it will be any different than we see on a daily basis.

The city has established a Y2K hotline and website to answer common questions. Y2K questions can be voiced at 685-7544 or at the website, Y2KINFO@basinlink.com.

Concerned citizens, government officials meet to discuss Big Spring's future

T.E. Jenkins
Big Spring Correspondent

BIG SPRING — Big Spring residents, businessmen and members of city and county government gathered earlier this week to share lunch, and maybe a touch of the mythical success that King Arthur's "Round Table" enjoyed ages ago.

The gathering, sponsored by the Big Spring Area Chamber of Commerce, allowed those who are concerned about the direction and future of Big Spring to provide input.

"This is just a chance for us to get to know one another, and find out some more about what is going on in our city," said chamber Executive Vice President Terri Newton. "This way, we can stay in better touch with one another, and help with the projects that are making Big Spring a better place to live."

The seating arrangements may not have been round, but that didn't stop each person in attendance from letting everyone know how they see Big Spring.

"I'm just a normal citizen, here to observe," said Big Spring resident and business man Scott McLaughlin, who lost to Charles Stenholm in last year's state representative race. "I'm just proud to be here, and proud to see the things that are going on in Big Spring."

Representatives from Energas, KBST, Big Spring City Council, the City Manager's office, Howard College, Western Container, the Federal Bureau of Prisons and the Big Spring State Hospital were among those present. And as each person stood to speak, the effect of the work being put into Big Spring became obvious.

Tommy Churchwell of Churchwell Insurance was on hand to represent the Friends of the Settles, a local group dedicated to the restoration of the landmark Settles Hotel.

Churchwell said the group has come farther than they ever dreamed and the success can be attributed to Big Spring residents.

"We've come a long way since we started this project," Churchwell said. "People are already asking me when we are going to start putting businesses in the first floor of the building.

"None of this would have been possible without the people of Big Spring. It is their money and their time that has gotten us as far as we are."

Churchwell said almost all of the windows are installed and the group is looking at putting commercial type glass doors in the hotel's entry ways.

"We looked at the possibility of refurbishing the wooden doors that are still there, but they are just too far gone," he said.

Philanthropy club awards $16,000 to area agencies

From Staff Reports

The Midland College club Students in Philanthropy (SIP) awarded $16,152.39 in grants to 13 local non-profit organizations in a recent ceremony.

The student group selected the following agencies as grant recipients: American Airpower Heritage Museum ($1,000), American Red Cross ($1,311), Casa de Amigos ($1,672.39), Centers for Children and Families ($1,000), Christmas in April ($1,500), Midland Community Theatre ($1,200) and Midland County Library ($1,000).

Also receiving awards: Midland Odessa Symphony and Chorale ($1,000), Permian Basin Community Centers ($1,200), Permian Basin Girl Scouts ($2,000), Petroleum Museum ($450), Prevent Blindness Texas ($1,836) and Visual Aids Newsmobile ($983).

The SIP program has two phases: fund-raising and grant-making. SIP students earned $1,152.39 in fund-raisers during the fall and winter, and the Abell-Hanger Foundation, which sponsors the club, added another $15,000.

In March, SIP sent out grant request applications to 80 non-profit agencies. Twenty-six agencies applied for grants, and SIP students chose to fund requests from 13 of those agencies.

The grants were awarded after students made "on-site" visits to various non-profit agencies. The group also learned first-hand about the role of the board of directors and other executive responsibilities in a philanthropy group.

The SIP program is an outgrowth of a long relationship between Midland College and the Abell-Hanger Foundation that has emphasized the connection between scholarship and community service.

SIP was set up by the Abell-Hanger Foundation in partnership with Midland College in hopes of teaching young people the benefits of philanthropy.

The 21 members of SIP were awarded scholarship moneys in return for a year-long commitment to the club.

volunteer as they leapt in place and sent the skateboard rolling backwards.

"Now the reason I still have my billfold is because of Newton's third law — for every action there is an equal and opposite reaction," said Brown.

In another demonstration, Ryan Myers and Trey Moore showed how "just because you can't see something doesn't mean it doesn't exist," as Moore put it.

The pair took turns demonstrating what they called an "air cannon" — really a garbage can with the open top duct-taped shut and a donut-sized hole cut out of the bottom. The two held the can sideways and beat on the duct-taped surface like a drum, sending bursts of air that toppled Styrofoam cups and blew perfect-circle smoke rings.

And for the final act, seniors Seth Fishman and Michael Amiet came out dressed as Ninjas and armed with plastic swords. After an elaborate fighting scene from which Fishman emerged victorious, he decided to take a nap on a bed of nails — and under a blanket of nails.

Then Amiet stood up, placing a concrete block atop the nail blanket and — over Fishman's feigned protests — breaking the block in two with a hammer.

Afterwards, Fishman stood, unscratched, and explained "the physics part:" because his weight was distributed evenly over so many nails, no single nail had enough pressure on it to puncture him.

Fishman's mother, Sherry Fishman-Carroll, looked on from the audience, laughing at all the antics. She said she felt that the show — which has been touring elementary schools for weeks — was most beneficial for the younger children.

"They really enjoy it because they can see ... that it's not just about the numbers and the hard science," she said. "Making any of this experiential is an important part of the learning."

Bell said the show has been so popular this year he has had to turn some elementary schools down due to lack of available time.

"This has been the best year as far as number of times we've been called out and student response," said Bell.

The Stars Show the Kind of Day You'll have: 5-Dymanic; 4-Positive; 3-Average; 2-So-so; 1-Difficult

HAPPY BIRTHDAY for Wednesday, May 5, 1999:

You could be unusually serious this year; avoid getting bogged down, and keep the big picture in mind. Travel, music and writing all prove to be excellent escape valves, and they help you maintain a perspective. You often find your energy wasted because you aren't as directed as you could be, or you may sabotage yourself. Be willing to make changes! If you are single, you might be harder on a prospective partner than you realize. If attached, a vacation together proves to be a mind-opener. Discuss frustrations with your mate — he cares about how you feel. CAPRICORN provides insights.

ARIES (March 21-April 19)
★★★★ You might need to do something all over again, as much as you won't want to. New beginnings are possible, but it will take work. You easily reach a professional agreement. Make sure you trust your chosen partner. An associate might need your expectations to be spelled out. Tonight: In the limelight.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20)
★★★★★ Your strength comes from being able to take an overview and come to a new understanding with those close to you. You might find that another missed a step at work — if not today, very soon. Be prepared to fill in the gaps or to backtrack. Others appreciate your willingness. Tonight: Go where the music is.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20)
★★★★ You could be feeling depressed. A discussion with a key partner might be important. He simply doesn't understand where you're coming from. A loved one or child might decide to go on the warpath in the near future. Don't ignore his feelings. Your sensitivity will pay off. Tonight: Make nice.

CANCER (June 21-July 22)
★★★★★ Others clearly know what they want. Emphasis is on goals and a key friendship. A family member needs your caring, attention and support. Know what you want, and don't hesitate to go for it. Don't settle for less. Tonight: Join a friend for dinner.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22)
★★★★ Plug into work and get the job done. Your ability to zero in on a problem is powerful, but dealing with others proves to be frustrating. Don't lose your temper. Stay mellow and express what you think. Take your time; you could be accident-prone right now. Tonight: Soak away stress in the tub.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22)
★★★★★ Allow your creativity free reign, but don't commit any funds right now. Financial investments could fritter away. More information will come forth. Sometimes a conservative approach brings positive results. A child acts up; understand what is going on with him. Tonight: Indulge a loved one.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22)
★★★ Mars enters your sign, and if there is anything left unsaid, you will certainly say it. Discussions with family are inevitable and difficult. A partner tries to stabilize a situation but doesn't have the right answer. Stay grounded, listen and observe. Tonight: Home is your castle.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21)
★★★★ Sometimes it is difficult to understand others, much less yourself. Communication is active. A stern partner finally expresses his feelings. Think about your needs and your long-term direction. Anger could bubble forth when you least expect it. Discuss feelings before they build. Tonight: Out and about.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21)
★★★ Money matters come to the forefront. Question how much growing room you have in your present job. Could a change be in order? You might start seeing this situation differently. A friend pushes your buttons, but he couldn't do that unless there was a grain of truth there. Tonight: Reflect before taking action.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19)
★★★★★ An unreasonable associate pressures you at work. You have gone through this before; maybe this time you need to speak up. A loved one or child makes demands as well. Create more out of your ideas. Don't sit back. Tonight: Let a loved one know how you feel.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18)
★★★ You might feel that another simply doesn't understand your position. Quietly take your time, right now. If feeling depressed, do some thinking about how to break patterns. Are you ready for a change in your home life? Tonight: Pamper yourself.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20)
★★★★★ Say what you mean, even if it is hard for another to hear. Your ability to communicate could be a bit stifled. Does a partner have reason to feel put out? Be honest with yourself. His dissatisfaction could dominate the scenario over the next few months. Tonight: Join friends for a midweek break.

PLAY OR DEFEND?

Both vulnerable. South deals.

| SOUTH | WEST | NORTH | EAST |
|---|---|---|---|
| 1♠ | Pass | 2♠ | 3♡ |
| 4♠ | Pass | Pass | Pass |

Opening lead: Queen of ♡

Treat this hand as a double dummy problem and look at all four hands. After East overtakes partner's opening lead of the queen of hearts with the king and continues with the ace of hearts, declarer ruffing, would you rather play or defend four spades?

Since a bid of three spades over the three-heart overcall might sound as simply competitive, South elected to jump to four spades. The overcall made it likely that all of North's points would be working.

Suppose you elect to declare. The danger is that you will lose two clubs in addition to one trick in each major. If you try for a club ruff in dummy, by leading a club to the queen (cashing just one high trump first), East wins with the ace and plays a third heart, and the defenders will come to two spade tricks. Try it.

Better is to cash two rounds of spades, ending in dummy, and then lead a low club. If East rises with the ace, you are home. However, East can play the jack, win the club continuation and cash the queen of spades, and you have to lose another club.

But do not be in too much of a hurry to switch to the defense. Consider this line. After ruffing the second heart, cash the ace and king of spades and lead a low club from dummy. East must duck, so the king wins. Now switch tactics. Cross to the ten of diamonds and ruff another heart, then go back to the queen of diamonds and ruff the last heart with your remaining trump. Continue with diamonds, and the defenders are helpless. In all, you lose a trick in each suit except diamonds. Well done!

DeLorean has another car in the works

SAN DIEGO — John DeLorean has another sports car in the works.

DeLorean once made a stainless steel car with signature gull-wing doors, but he fell from prominence after legal entanglements in the 1980s, including bankruptcy, divorce and an acquittal on cocaine smuggling charges.

"I don't look back at all," said DeLorean, whose latest project is a 1,450-pound sports car built from structural plastic that can go from zero to 60 miles per hour in 3.2 seconds.

The starting price would be about $18,000.

"Cars are in my blood," he said. "They're really the only thing I've ever worked at."

DeLorean, 74, once spent a lot of time at his 48-acre citrus and avocado ranch in San Diego County, but he gave it to his attorneys to pay legal fees. He now splits his time between Bedminster, N.J., and New York City.

DALLAS — The Dixie Chicks' brood is a little bigger.

Emily Erwin of the Texas-born country music group married fellow Texan and musician Charlie Robison on Saturday at a ranch.

They made the wedding a Texas family-and-friends event rather than a Nashville extravaganza and did the planning themselves, said Martie Seidel, Ms. Erwin's sister and fellow Dixie Chick.

"Emily's such a perfectionist," Ms. Seidel said. "It was out in this big courtyard. It was beautiful."

The group's members sang "Cowboy, Take Me Away" at the wedding.

For their honeymoon, the newlyweds will make a few side trips from the Dixie Chicks' upcoming European tour.

LAS VEGAS — Sophia Loren christened the city's latest huge resort, which replicates landmarks and themes of Venice, Italy.

"I was flabbergasted with what I saw," the Italian star told reporters after a tour of The Venetian. "It is just miraculous what you have done. I think the people of Venice would like to come here to see what you have done."

Ms. Loren broke a bottle of champagne across the bow of one of several gondolas in a lagoon in front of the 3,036-room resort.

The $1.5 billion resort, owned by Sheldon Adelson, is on the site of the old Sands Hotel, made famous by The Rat Pack — Frank Sinatra, Sammy Davis Jr., Dean Martin, Joey Bishop and Peter Lawford.

NEW YORK — The drama "Wit," about a college professor dying of ovarian cancer, was named best play and "Parade" was chosen best musical Tuesday by the New York Drama Critics' Circle.

"Parade" is based on the real-life story of a murder and lynching in Georgia in 1915. "Closer," about love and sex in England at the end of the century, was picked as best foreign play.

A special citation was awarded to playwright David Hare, author of "Amy's View," "Via Dolorosa" and "The Blue Room," for "his contributions to the 1998-1999 theater season."

All three plays were presented on Broadway this season.

NEW YORK — Julia Roberts plays a superstar actress besieged by the press in the upcoming art-imitates-life film "Notting Hill," but she says it's not so bad being famous.

"It's an excellent life. I'm rich. I'm happy. I have a great job," she told Vanity Fair in the June issue. "I travel hither and yon to fabulous places. I'm surrounded by wonderful, interesting people. I live a privileged life — hugely privileged. ... It would be absurd to pretend that it's anything different."

Roberts, 31, a perennial tabloid target, warns moviegoers not to read too much into the plot of "Notting Hill," in which she co-stars with Hugh Grant.

"I was struggling with playing a person who really only shares an occupation and a height and a weight and a status with me."

The movie is due out May 28. Roberts reunites with "Pretty Woman" co-star Richard Gere in "Runaway Bride," due out in July.

MIAMI BEACH, Fla. — Heard the buzz about Rosie O'Donnell's dream house?

With her deal to buy Madonna's South Florida mansion now collapsed, the talk show host has settled for other digs that authorities say once housed a commune for a 70-ton marijuana smuggling ring.

O'Donnell spent $6.75 million for the five-bedroom home on Star Island, which is also home to Gloria and Emilio Estefan and German developer Thomas Kramer. Built in 1923, it has a guest cottage, maid's quarters and pool.

This is the same house from which the now defunct Zion Coptic Church ran a massive marijuana trafficking ring in the 1970s. In a 1979 trial, church members showed up in crimson robes and green-and-gold uniforms.

Prosecutors contended the colorful church was a cover for a huge smuggling operation and members smoked marijuana as a sacrament.

PRAYER: Forty-two concerns top agenda for Thurday's event

light of recent crises, such as the Littleton, Colo., school shooting and the devastating storms this week in Oklahoma.

"This year it's especially important," said Ann Quest, Texas state coordinator for NDP. "We all recognize that (with the Littleton school shootings) the enemy came to kill and destroy, and that's what he's been trying to do with our youth and our leaders. The theme of 'Light the Nation with Prayer' (taken from the book of Matthew) is especially appropriate because we need to surround these families in Colorado and those families devastated by the storms and anybody anywhere else who has gone through struggles and is having grief at this time."

Ms. Quest said the National Day of Prayer four years ago held just after the Oklahoma City bombing "sensitizes you to what is going on around you when sometimes you may be desensitized. This is an opportunity for us to be a light of the world."

Locally, the event is being coordinated again by Mark Ballard, pastor of Living Way Church. The prayer day services begin at 11:45 a.m. at Centennial Plaza

"In the sense of the quality and dimension of prayer, it has its own significance regardless of what's been going in nationally," Ballard said. "In conjunction with what's been going on, we'll address national concerns. We'll pray over, certainly, the recent events in Littleton and the killer tornadoes in Oklahoma and Kansas. Those prayers will be expressed for those who have unfortunately come across these tragedies. And what does this all mean on National Day of Prayer? Pray more. National Day of Prayer says that, at the heart of it all, we believe in a supreme being and we're calling on his help in behalf of our country."

Forty-two prayer concerns will be prayed over Thursday.

"We hope there will be 3- to 4-million people will be involved in some way nationally," said Quest. "A lot of the prayer events will be done in churches, but most of it is done outside the church."

In addition to Ballard, those who will offer prayers include Roy Smith, Truelight Christian Fellowship; Curt Bezinque, Midland Christian Fellowship; Robert Kirk, St. Paul United Methodist; Vergil Schmidt, Fellowship Community Church; Dr. Jerry Hilton, First Presbyterian; Jon Stasney, St. Nicholas; K.C. Blackketter, Shepherd Ministries; Robert Walter, Our Savior Lutheran; Alan Williams, chaplain, Memorial Hospital and Medical Center; Albert Villafuerte, Salvation Army; Sharae Buskirk, Word of Hope Ministry; Dick Spencer, Cornerstone Christian Fellowship; Gary Dyer, First Baptist Church, and Jerry Berry, Kelview Heights Baptist.

"Our prayers can change the course of history," said Shirley Dobson, chairman of the NDP "If people of faith will join together on Thursday, I'm convinced our prayers will have a powerful impact on our country."

Big Spring officials hope event quells violence

By T.E. Jenkins
Big Spring Correspondent

BIG SPRING — Could it be divine intervention?

Many Big Spring residents believe that is exactly what is needed to keep the current plague of violence that most recently surfaced in Littleton, Colo., out of small West Texas towns.

Following what could almost be considered a recent trend with the "Prayer at the Pole" meeting in memory of those slain in the Colorado shootings, as well as recent prayer rallies for rainfall in the Permian Basin, Big Spring residents will once again join hands Thursday at the Municipal Auditorium for the National Day of Prayer.

Big Spring City Council Member Greg Biddison, who has helped to coordinate the event, said recent events all over the world have led up to the sudden resurgence of public prayer gatherings.

"With everything that has been going on, I don't see how you can say it hasn't," said Biddison. "Over the past few years, there have just been so many shootings and tragedies like what happened in Littleton, people are turning to prayer.

"Like someone said the other day, the events that happened in Colorado are just a wake-up call from God. We have to humble ourselves and pray, follow His ways, and His teachings. It's just been building steam all of this time."

Biddison said the prayer meeting will start at noon, with a solo performance by local resident Homer Wilkerson. Big Spring Police Department Chief Lonnie Smith will lead those in attendance through the pledge of allegiance, and a personal welcome from Mayor Tim Blackshear.

Biddison said he expects a large turnout from city and county government and employees as well, with unconfirmed reports that Howard County Judge Ben Lockhart, District Attorney Hardy Wilkerson, and Big Spring Area Chamber of Commerce President Chuck Williams will be in attendance.

"We will be holding the prayer meeting at the Municipal Auditorium, but we will also be having one that evening at 6 p.m. for the youth," said Biddison. "It will be held at the Comanche Trail Amphitheater, and is being organized by a group of students from Big Spring High School."

Biddison said it's important to include the Big Spring youth in the prayer "celebration," and he hopes these types of events can help prevent violence.

"We as parents have to do everything we can for our kids," said Biddison. "I think things like this can have a really big impact on the youth. It shows them that they latch on to something like faith in God, and don't have to be ashamed of it."

Biddison said preventing youth violence starts at home.

"Parents can't be afraid to tell their children no," Biddison said. "They have to be willing to stand up for what they believe in, and not give in everytime their children want to do something they feel is wrong. There is a mentality these days that we ask our how they 'feel' about two plus two, and is four all right with them. There just isn't any moral absolutes."

Biddison said it's a hard call to make sometimes, but it is one that definitely has to be made.

"A lot of people are looking at whether or not television and movie violence were a contributing factor in what happened in Littleton," Biddison said. "We have to make sure that we talk to our children about what they see on TV, and remind them that it isn't real. That they don't always show the consequences, or the end result."

THIEVES: Crime Stopper calls resulted in 20 arrests last year

video we run," Ms. Rogers said. "We even had a parent call in their own kid. The kid thought he was in the clear, because he hadn't been caught in six months."

Odessa Crime Stoppers airs its still frames on KOSA.

Last year, 20 arrests were made after viewers called Crime Stoppers and identified the offenders. One of the arrested suspects bilked the same store twice in one week. In another case, a group of men hit three stores in 30 minutes, Ms. Rogers said.

Most offenders are charged with misdemeanor theft. Teens involved in beer runs are charged with minor in possession of alcohol. If a clerk is threatened or assaulted during a theft, the suspect is charged with robbery, Ms. Rogers said.

Some incidents caught on tape can be shocking, she said.

"Sometimes, they throw something at the clerk's face or almost run over a kid," Ms. Rogers said. "It's stupid thing to do just for $3 of beer."

Prayer integral part of lives of local community leaders

By Jimmy Patterson
Staff writer

Sheriff Gary Painter admits that if there was more of it, there would be fewer inmates in his jail facility.

Mayor Bobby Burns said he has been known to pull his car over for a few minutes and bow his head.

Assistant District Attorney Robin Sams keeps a prayer journal, and newly-elected Midland School board member George Lara says prayer is an integral part of his family life.

In observance of the 48th annual National Day of Prayer Thursday, people around the country will spend time in prayer. Millions will pray for their concerns, for themselves, their families and likely for the victims of recent tragedies in Littleton, Colo.; Oklahoma City, and in New Mexico, where a church bus accident killed six children and one adult Sunday. Prayers will be said for local, state and national leaders; for the strife in Yugoslavia and for the safety of school children everywhere.

Midland's local observance begins at 11:45 a.m., Thursday at Centennial Plaza. Fifteen local ministers will offer prayers for a variety of concerns.

By and large, though, prayer is a personal observance. Words spoken from the heart in a conversation with God. Many people choose to keep their thoughts on prayer to themselves, but others are comfortable talking about prayer and its meaning in their lives — and how much they feel it would help if only more people would hit their knees a few times every day.

"It's how you start and end the day," said Gary Painter, Sheriff of Midland County. "People need to pray throughout the day for things that help them get through, and for the decisions they have to make. I don't think I could go a day without prayer. I don't think anyone should."

Painter said he prays when the stress levels rise at the county jail, or "when people are less cooperative than they are at other times.

"You just have to find a moment of quiet time and take a deep breath and talk to the Lord and ask him for strength.

"I would have much more space at my jail if more people prayed more."

Mayor Bobby Burns said prayer in his life is a necessity.

"Leading the community is an amazing challenge," he said. "I can't imagine doing it without spending time in prayer. Quite often, I spend an exorbitant amount of time in prayer. It's very important for me to know that I'm spiritually in God's will. To get a sense of peace on how to run the city or the council, I need to spend a lot of time in prayer. And for that reason I also encourage people to pray for me, for the city council and for our civic leaders. We need God's presence in our life. It's a critical piece to what we do. If I didn't have the opportunity for prayer, I wouldn't want to do the job."

Burns said that he knows that sometimes, the answer to prayer is no, sometimes answers that may seem bad at first but turn out to be fine in the end.

"A lot of times, I want to be told no, but I get a yes instead," he said. "You want to avoid problems in politics, and in prayer you have to go headlong into trouble. Through prayer, sometimes you look for an escape route, but God doesn't always give you that."

Prayers regarding politics, Burns said, involve avoiding political flare ups or praying to avoid tough issues. Recent issues, such as development along Loop 250, the stadium issue, and the new airport, are more easily handled if time is spent in prayer prior to and during when a particular issue is in the news.

"If you're moving where God wants you to move, you're on the right road," Burns said.

George Lara, who last weekend ousted incumbent Adela Marmolejo for the District 2 seat on the Midland Independent School District, said prayer is an integral part of his family's daily routine.

My personal beliefs and moral values make prayer very much a part of my life," Lara said. "And prayer is very much a part of my family's life. As a family, we say grace before every meal, and during personal time, we pray at least twice a day."

Lara said prayer can "completely turn around a person. When you find the Lord," Lara said, "you see the world from a different perspective. You see people with love and sincerity. You treat people with dignity and respect."

More prayer, Lara said, would bring fewer incidents like the Littleton tragedy and would lead "to a definite rise in the moral value of the country."

Robin Sams, assistant district attorney for Midland County, said keeping a prayer journal has helped her keep track of concerns.

"It's not a fancy book," she said. "It's just a spiral notebook. The things I write are sometimes in sentences, sometimes in lists, sometimes in cryptic abbreviations. I pray for personal concerns, for friends and acquaintances and for public concerns.

"One of the reasons I keep a prayer journal is during challenging times; when I've made a mistake or bad things have occurred or a decision has to be made, I can look back to other challenges I have faced. Seeing how God answered my prayers prior to and during challenges increases my faith."

Just in Time for Mother's Day!
Cross My Heart, I Love You
$35.00 Sterling Silver Pendant
A child's promise of friendship, a parent's vow of devotion, an adult's pledge of love, The Father's eternal commitment—Cross My Heart, I Love You is a powerful symbol of unconditional love.
With thoughts of sacrifice and selfless love, Anita designed this for her mother's birthday. "The more I thought about my mother and the sacrifices she had made raising six children, the more I began to the sacrifice and commitment of my heavenly Father."
This piece communicates the power of love in almost any situation. "People have given this design to people they love in an amazing variety of situations. Graduations, weddings, anniversaries, funerals, births, friends moving. Almost every week someone tells me of a new way they have used it to to say 'I love you'."

NEEDS: More than 20 dentists, hygienists volunteer

to that, it would be almost $100,000. According to her, the local match dollars are the key to the clinic's operation in the future.

According to Casa, the program assists nearly 100 children a year.

"Our main concern is getting the children out of pain," Mrs. Doggett said.

The Junior League of Midland began the program in 1954 out of the Midland Memorial Hospital basement. In 1984, the Junior League signed a 10-year lease agreement with Casa de Amigos to move the clinic to Casa's renovated facility. When Casa expanded again in 1990, the Junior League initiated a transition to give responsibility for the clinic to Casa.

Casa took full responsibility for the clinic at the beginning of the 1998-99 school year. The program runs through out the school year. Currently more than 20 dentists, hygienists and assistants volunteer for the clinic.

All schools in the Midland Independent School District participate in the program. School nurses see the kids daily. They perform preliminary checks on students at school who complain about toothaches.

Appointments for students are made after the school nurse refers a student to Casa. The school nurse also notifies the student's family about the child's problem and about the program. If a student's family does not have health insurance, and is not receiving assistance from Medicaid, that child is eligible for the dental assistance program, Mrs. Doggett said.

"My son had an infection that was getting pretty bad," Rosa Galindo, parent, said.

Mrs. Galindo's son, Ruben, is a second grader at South Elementary School. She said that Ruben was supposed to go to the doctor, but to do the work he needed would have costs $2,300- $2,500, and that was too much.

Ruben's school nurse informed Mrs. Galindo about the dental program at Casa.

"It's a slow process, but it works," she said.

Each patient visits the clinic five to six times before all work is complete. Ruben has visited the dentists at Casa three different times.

During the initial exam, the dentist checks the patient's mouth to see what needs to be done, Grace Haussecker, local dental assistant, said. X-rays are performed, if they are needed, and a treatment plan is set up for the child.

The treatment plan gives doctors guidelines about what work the child needs done in his/her mouth.

"It also gets the kids used to the doctor," Mrs. Haussecker said.

Dr. Andrew Kauffman, the dentist serving Tuesday evening, began work on Ruben's teeth (which was putting a "cap" on to prevent further decay of a tooth) the third time he visited.

"The doctors are good, they explain to the kids what is going on," Mrs. Galindo said.

Dentists take turns working at the clinic, Mrs. Doggett said. Each dentist serves at least one time during the school year. Children do not see the same dentist every visit. Ruben said that he had visited three different dentists.

None of the dentists or their assistants are paid for their time at Casa, Mrs. Doggett said. It is all possible because of the "loving and giving hearts of the dentists."

"I figure if others can donate time and come up here, I can too," Mrs. Haussecker said. "These kids need someone to help with their teeth. They are too young to do it on their own."

Race fatalities

CONCORD, N.C. — Investigators examined a fan's videotape that shows a wheel flying into the grandstand where three people were killed and eight others injured during last weekend's race.

"It doesn't show it from start to finish, but it's still better than anything we've gotten up to this point," track spokesman Jerry Gappens said Tuesday.

Gappens said the camcorder videotape was shot by a spectator who was sitting in the terrace boxes atop the grandstands in the fourth turn during Saturday night's Pep Boys Indy Racing League event.

The spectator turned the tape over to Lowe's Motor Speedway on the condition his identity not be revealed.

Investigators hope to find a videotape that will show them how the wheel snapped off one of the cars in the three-car wreck.

They also want to determine how much clearance there was between the wheel and the top of a safety fence that reaches 15 feet above the track surface.

The information would help them determine if any safety changes could be made to the cars and how much the height of the fence should be increased.

The spectator's videotape that was turned over to speedway officials Monday night shows neither the wreck itself nor the wheel going over the fence.

"You see it after it clears the fence and before it hit. It was already on its way down and it was coming in high," Gappens said. "But at least we see the object coming into the stands. It's the first time we've seen that."

The race was carried by Speedvision, a small cable network that was broadcasting an IRL race for the first time. Speedvision's cameras did not capture the start of the wreck or any debris flying into the stands.

"Television video usually helps quite a bit," Gappens said.

'Hounds open series with rout

By Lee Passmore

Be it at home or away, the Midland RockHounds can't avoid these slugfests.

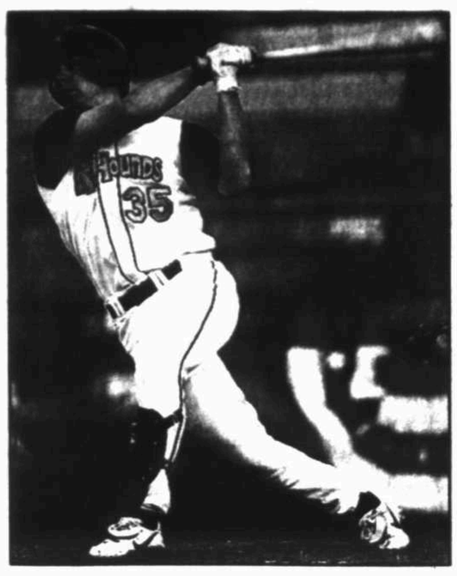
The 'Hounds made a brief return home to start a five-game series with the San Antonio Missions one night after being involved in a wild game with the El Paso Diablos. Things looked as if they might be the same for Midland after a rough 12-run loss at El Paso Monday when in Tuesday's series opener against the Missions, the RockHounds fell behind by seven runs.

But the 'Hounds roared back with a vengeance, scoring 14 unanswered runs to rout San Antonio 15-8 and win their third game in their last four tries. T.R. Marcinczyk's grand slam in the third inning got the RockHounds back in the game and permanently shifted the momentum back to Midland.

All told, it was a rotten night to be a baseball at Christensen Stadium and almost as bad to be a pitcher. The two teams combined for a total of 33 hits and all but one starter had at least one hit. At that, the one player who went hitless, RockHound catcher Willie Morales, still managed to walk and score a run.

Oddly, Midland got on the board in the bottom of the first by manufacturing a run. After that, though, it was pretty much meat and potatoes baseball.

The Missions scored four runs in both the second and third innings to take an 8-1 lead. Luke Allen tripled and scored in both innings for San Antonio, and after his triple in the third and a walk to Mike Warner, Midland starter Luis Vizcaino exited the game.



Midland 's Jeff DaVanon takes a mighty rip during the RockHounds' 15-8 win over San Antonio Tuesday.

Reliever Benito Baez entered the game and promptly uncorked a wild pitch which brought home Allen and subsequently gave up RBI singles to Casey Snow and Mike Metcalfe. Since the 'Hounds had been forced to use catcher David Skeels in relief in Monday's 20-8 loss to El Paso, Baez seemed like he was destined to stay in the game as a punching bag.

After the third, though, Baez was

Lady Rebels knock out Mojo

■ Double play helps Lee softball team cure case of nerves, beat Odessa Permian.

By Terry Williamson
Sports Editor

ODESSA — Just when it looked like Midland Lee might bleed to death in the first inning of its Class 5A region quarterfinal softball game with District 4-5A rival Odessa Permian, the Lady Rebels turned a double play. The game was never the same after that.

LEE

| Softball Playoffs | |
|---|---|
| Od. Permian | 2 |

Lee clubbed 15 hits on the way to an 8-2 victory over Lady Mojo at the Ratliff Softball Complex, beating Permian for the third time this season, and ended Permian's most successful softball year ever. Permian had never played in the state's third round and they didn't make it to the fourth.

However, Lee started this game playing like a drunken sailor on shore leave. Permian took a 1-0 lead in the first without the aid of a base hit as Lee committed three errors in the inning.

But, with the wind howling in gusts up to 40 mph, Lee stopped the bleeding with the double play. Permian's Lori Haltom laid down a suicide squeeze and Jessica Clifton scored from third base just beating the tag of Lee catcher Shandi Neatherlin. But Haltom tried to take second base and Neatherlin threw her out. Melonie Jarrett then tried to score from second, but was nailed by a Neatherlin tag. Lee got out of the inning without further damage, and even though trailing 1-0, the worm had turned. Total disaster had been avoided.

"I was so nervous for this game, I couldn't walk," Neatherlin, a sophomore said. "I think we were all nervous because this was against Permian and we sure didn't want to lose this one. Then we got that double play after a horrible start and it really helped us get it together."

Midland Lee catcher Shandi Neatherlin tags out Permian's Melonie Jarrett for the second out of a game-turning double play. The Lady Rebels defeated Permian, 8-2, in a regional quarterfinal playoff game Tuesday at Ratliff Softball Complex in Odessa.

Lee coach Wes Overton couldn't hide his smile after this win.

"This was a good win," Overton said. "To say that this was an emotional game would just be an understatement. We were playing before a very hostile crowd and did a wonderful job.

"I think we were extremely nervous in that first inning. Crista Hargrove (shortstop) made two errors in that first inning and she never does anything like that. The double play got us going."

Hargrove overcame the two errors in the first by getting two hits, including a double, and she scored Lee's first run in the third inning to tie the game.

"I guess I was nervous when the game started because Permian talked a lot of stuff that they couldn't back up all week and we knew we had to win this one," Hargrove said.

Neatherlin, who went 3-for-4 at the plate, drove in another run in the third to give Lee a 2-1 lead, one they never surrendered.

"I'm glad I had a good game because this was against Permian," Neatherlin said. "This is where you want to have a good game."

Lee kept adding to its lead the rest of the game as seven of the nine Lady Reb starters had two or more hits. In two previous games with Lady Mojo, Lee had taken two one-run wins.

"I'm totally excited about this win," said junior centerfielder Yvette Bass, who had two hits and an RBI in the three-run seventh. "Permian was saying

Mystics choose Holdsclaw before ex-ABL players

By Melissa Murphy
Associated Press Writer

NEW YORK — In Chamique Holdsclaw, the WNBA just might have its version of Michael Jordan.

Holdsclaw, a four-time All-American who led Tennessee to three consecutive national titles, was the No. 1 pick by the Washington Mystics in Tuesday's WNBA draft.

"She's the player of the present and the player of the future for our league," WNBA president Val Ackerman said. "Her eventual appeal could rival what Michael Jordan was able to do over his long career.

"She'll have an appeal that players in our league haven't quite had yet in terms of reaching a new group of fans."

Holdsclaw, a two-time national player of the year, was selected first even though pro players from the defunct American Basketball League were also included in the draft. Holdsclaw was the only college player drafted in the first round.

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — An Olympic gold medalist and members of two national collegiate champions were among the players chosen by the Charlotte Sting in Tuesday's WNBA draft.

Dawn Staley, the former Virginia star who was part of the U.S. women's gold-medal basketball team in the 1996 Olympic Games, was the team's first-round pick and ninth overall pick in the league's third draft.

Also chosen by Charlotte Tuesday were Stephanie White-McCarty, who helped lead Purdue to the 1999 NCAA women's title; Charlotte Smith, the ex-North Carolina standout whose basket at the buzzer gave the Tar Heels the 1994 NCAA crown; and Angie Braziel the Big 12 Player of the Year in 1999..

Staley played for the Philadelphia Rage of the now-defunct American Basketball League.

"Dawn fills so many needs on our team," Charlotte coach Marynell Meadors said. "She's a tremendous passer, she can score by cutting to the basket or from 3-point range. And she's as experienced a point guard as there was in the draft."

Staley averaged 13.2 points per game in her second ABL season. She hit 38.9 percent of her 3-pointers and was an 83.7-percent free-throw shooter.

When she was done at Virginia, Staley was the school's all-time

Chaps sign impressive frosh class

By Oscar LeRoy
Sports Writer

Midland College men's basketball coach Pat Rafferty has announced the signing of probably his best freshman class to date.

Rafferty announced Tuesday the signing of four players who are expected to contribute immediately and help improve on last season's 17-14 record.

■ MC Banquet/4C

"I don't think from top to bottom there's been a better group of freshmen coming into the program," said Rafferty, who will be entering his sixth season at the college. "We've had some good players in the past coming such as D'Juan Baker, Milton Palacio and Ceedric Goodwyn, but I don't think we've had the depth that this one does."

Quannos White is a 6-foot-1, 175-pound point guard from St. Augustine High School in New Orleans. White is from the same school which produced current Chaparral guards Eugene Costello and Armon Whitaker. White averaged 15.5 points, six steals, four assists and six rebounds per game for the 25-3 Louisiana Athletic League Association Class 5A state champions. White was on the 1999 All-Metro New Orleans team and an All-District 9-5A selection.

"Q comes from a winning and disciplined program," Rafferty said. "He is a good defender and adds a little more size and athleticism to the guard position. He is also athletic enough to play some two (guard)."

Armon Tillman is a 6-4, 205-pound guard from Houston's Willowridge High School who averaged 17 points and six rebounds for a team which went 32-4 and ranked No. 1 in Class 5A for much of the year. Tillman also shot 51 percent from the floor, 45 percent from 3-point range and 77 percent from the free-throw line. He was first team All-District 20-5A and was second team on the All-Greater Houston team.

"Tillman is just a warrior at the guard spot," Rafferty said. "His numbers may be a little deceiving because he played on a team that had five guys average in double figures."

Miami clinches top playoff seed in Conference

Associated Press

MIAMI — With smothering playoff-caliber defense, the Miami Heat beat the Atlanta Hawks 93-79 Tuesday night to clinch the No. 1 seed in the Eastern Conference.

The Heat, who also won their third consecutive Atlantic Division title, are assured of the home-court advantage through the Eastern Conference finals. Miami's first-round opponent remains undecided, with the New York Knicks the most likely foe.

Atlanta was eliminated from contention for the Central Division title and was swept in the three-game season series.

Jamal Mashburn scored 18 points and P.J. Brown 16 to lead Miami's offense, but it was the defense that made the difference.

Miami clamped down after Atlanta jumped to a 21-10 lead. The Hawks shot just 27 percent in the final three quarters, and the Heat forced six turnovers in the pivotal third period when they took the lead for good.

Steve Smith scored 21 points for Atlanta but missed 11 of 18 shots.

Miami's Alonzo Mourning, wearing newly designed wrap-around glasses to protect his recently injured right eye, took just one shot in the first half and finished with 10 points in 32 minutes. But the enthusiastic sellout crowd chanted "M-V-P, M-V-P" when he shot free throws in the fourth period.

Tim Hardaway sank three baskets, including a pair of 3-pointers, to spark a 14-3 surge that put Miami ahead to stay, 61-52. Duane Causwell, who had scored just 32 points all season, spelled Mourning midway through the second half, and his thunderous dunk off a rebound prompted the biggest cheer of the night and made the score 74-61.

■ NBA Roundup

Pacers 100, Cavaliers 78

INDIANAPOLIS — Reggie Miller scored 24 points despite sitting out the entire fourth quarter as Indiana clinched the Central Division.

Indiana closed the season with four consecutive victories, and 12 Pacers scored. Reserve Jalen Rose had 16 points and Rik Smits scored 14 for Indiana, which will not learn its playoff opponent until Wednesday night.

Cleveland, which had only nine players dressed with Shawn Kemp and Derek Anderson among the missing, trailed by double digits for most of the game.

Bucks 99, Raptors 86

MILWAUKEE — After being rebuffed in another attempt to sign Kevin Johnson, injury-ravaged Milwaukee used a makeshift starting lineup to beat Toronto.

Ray Allen scored 19 points, Gilliam had 14 and Sam Cassell 13 as the Bucks overcame a sluggish start on a day when they learned that Vinny Del Negro would miss the postseason.

Del Negro, who severely sprained his left ankle in practice Monday, was placed in a cast before the game. Glenn Robinson (knee) and Dell Curry (back) are also hurting.

HOUSTON — Rookie Michael Dickerson scored a career-high 31 points, including 16 in a rugged third quarter, to lead Houston.

The victory snapped a three-game winning streak for the Timberwolves and pulled the Rockets (30-19) even with the Lakers for the No. 4 playoff spot in the Western Conference.

Hornets 117, 76ers 110, OT

CHARLOTTE, N.C. — The Hornets got 28 points from Eddie Jones and defeated playoff-bound Philadelphia in overtime.

Jones added five of Charlotte's 17 steals and four blocks as the Hornets won for the 13th time in 17 games and assured themselves of finishing with at least a .500 mark for the seventh straight year.

Mustangs rip Reicher

Staff Report

WACO — The Midland Christian baseball team is again enjoying postseason success.

The Mustangs, who qualified for the playoffs for the seventh straight season under coach Gordon Awtry, routed Waco Reicher 10-4 in Texas Association of Private and Parochial Schools Class 4A bi-district play Tuesday.

The Mustangs got big efforts on this day to improve to 18-9 overall. Pitcher Trent Lee improved to 4-0 on the mound while also helping the team out at the plate. Lee carried a big stick, hitting a home run during a 3-for-5 performance.

Other big hitters for the Mustangs, which pounded 10 hits, included Seth Denson (2-for-4 with two doubles). Also, Ryan Hellums and Jamie Beeghley both had doubles.

The Mustangs are looking for a return visit to the state tournament. Last year, the Mustangs made their second appearance in four years in the state tournament only to fall to Concordia Lutheran 17-6.

MC's opponent in the next round has not been determined due to poor weather conditions in the Metroplex. It should be noted that Denton Liberty Christian, who has split playoff games with MC in the last two seasons, and powerhouse Dallas Christian (22-7) are among the teams in MC's bracket.

more than steady. He pitched four innings, surrendering only an infield single the rest of the way and retired the last 10 batters he faced to earn his first win of the season and even his record at 1-1.

In the bottom of the third, it was San Antonio starter Robbie Beckett's turn to take a beating. After back-to-back walks to Josue Espada and Adam Piatt loaded the bases, Marcinczyk blasted a 1-1 pitch well over the left field fence to clear the bases for his third homer of the season, cutting the margin to 8-5.

Beckett then gave up a run-scoring triple by Jeff DaVanon for the inning's final run, and after walking Morales and Dionys Cesar to start the fourth he was pulled. Espada greeted reliever Hal Garrett (3-2) with a two-run double to tie the game, then scored on a two-out error by second baseman Hiram Bocachica to give the 'Hounds a 9-8 lead they never relinquished.

After Midland scored another run in the seventh to make it 10-8, the Missions threatened off 'Hounds reliever Jeff D'Amico in the eighth. D'Amico walked Metcalfe and gave up a double to Tony Mota to put runners on second and third with two outs. However, closer Chad Harville came in to strike out cleanup hitter Juan Diaz and end the inning.

WNBA: Ten ABL vets follow Vol

(From 1C)

While the 6-foot-2 star goes to a team that won just three of 30 games last season, she is expected to immediately turn around the Mystics.

Holdsclaw averaged 21.3 points and 8.1 rebounds last season for the Lady Vols, who were upset by Duke in the NCAA regional finals in March. She is Tennessee's career scoring leader, surpassing Allan Houston, with 3,025 points.

Former ABL player Yolanda Griffith was the No. 2 pick, going to the Sacramento Monarchs.

Utah then chose center Natalie Williams, the ABL's player of the year in '98 who averaged 21 points and 11.6 rebounds per game. Los Angeles picked forward Delisha Milton of Portland, a member of the 1998 World Championship team.

Former San Jose Laser guard Jennifer Azzi went to Detroit with the fifth picks and forward Crystal Robinson of the Colorado Xplosion was chosen by the New York Liberty.

The WNBA drafted 50 players in the four-round draft — 35 from the ABL, 12 from college and three from international teams.

With the influx of the ABL players, many of them Olympians or All-Americans, Ackerman called it the "deepest draft in modern-day sports."

The draft was postponed a week because of a labor dispute between the players and league.

The league and players union agreed to allow three ABL players on each of the 10 established teams and five each on the expansion teams in Minnesota and Orlando.

The 12-team WNBA begins its third 10-week season on June 10.

Holdsclaw will join a Washington team that finished at the bottom of the league last season and be paired with former Lady Vol Nikki McCray.

"On the women's side, people most compare her to Cheryl Miller, who had an all-around game as Chamique does," Ackerman said. "On the men's game, I hear her compared to Scottie Pippen. She's very agile, a good defensive player who can score, pass, has great court sense and is incredibly competitive."

Holdsclaw will be coached by Nancy Darsch, a former Tennessee assistant in the mid-1980s. Darsch was fired after two seasons with the New York Liberty.

"Coach (Pat) Summitt really wanted me to play for Nancy," said Holdsclaw, a New Yorker. "Washington is where my grandmother wanted me to play. I'm kind of glad I didn't go to New York because I don't know if I could handle all the pressure and friends and fans."

leader in scoring and assists.

White-McCarty was a first-team All-American last season, and ended her career at Purdue averaging 17.2 points per game. She was the 21st pick in the draft.

Smith played for three teams in two-plus seasons in the ABL. The 33rd pick in the draft, Smith was named most valuable player in the Italian League All-Star Game in the 1995-96 season.

"She'll be able to run the floor with us, and she's a solid rebounder," Meadors said. "She can create her own shot and score on stick-backs."

Braziel, a product of Texas Tech and Odessa Permian, was taken with Charlotte's fourth pick, the 45th selection overall. Braziel was the Big 12 Player of the Year for 1999 and the league MVP in the Big 12 Conference tournament.

Each WNBA team could select three former ABL players in the 1999 draft. Staley was not considered a former ABL player because she had signed to play in the WNBA before the start of the ABL's last season.

Midland College athletes toast successful seasons at banquet

By Oscar LeRoy
Sports Writer

From the established programs to the much newer ones, Midland College had a banner year in athletics as evidenced in Tuesday night's Athletic Awards Banquet at the Midland Hilton.

As sports took center stage, so did academics, as Midland College athletics had its most successful year in the classroom. Taking the top academics award were Lauren Wallace of the softball team as she won the Outstanding Freshman award, while Amie Kane of the women's basketball team took Outstanding Sophomore honors.

The women's basketball team in just its fifth year of existence went 34-3 under coach Ron Jones and placed third in the NJCAA National Tournament as well as capturing its third straight Western Junior College Athletic Conference title and first ever Region V crown. Leading the way this year for the Lady Chaparrals was Kane, who was probably the heart and soul of the team, although she never did get much of the accolades as her many of her teammates. Kane took the Lady Chap Award as well as being named Most Valuable Player.

Jhudy Gonzalez, a freshman who was named All-Conference, All-Region and is the first Lady Chap ever to be named as an Honorable Mention All-American, won the Top Offensive Player award. A big reason for the success of this year's Lady Chap team was the play of its defense and sophomore Natalie Goodall had a lot to do with that as she was named Top Defensive Player. Showing the most improvement this season were sophomores Autumn Johnson and Fatimah Holiday.

The men's basketball team went through a roller coaster season but ended up with a 17-14 season and a trip to the Region V tournament. Sophomore Mike Cummings led the Chaps in rebounding and scoring to get the MVP award. Fellow sophomore Ivan Gatto proved hard to defend as he was awarded the Top Offensive Player honor. Leading the Chaps on the floor as point guard as well as defense was freshman Eugene Costello, who went home with the Top Defensive Award.

Showing the most improvement and someone who coach Pat Rafferty is hopeful will be a key part to next year's squad is freshman Mike Stewart. The Fighting Chaparral Award went to freshman guard Alvin Brooks.

One of the newer programs at Midland College was the softball team which went 44-18 this year and showed that it was a team to contend with in just its first year. Leading the charge were Wallace and Big Spring's Melissa Martinez, who both hit over .480 and both captured the Top Offensive Player awards. J.R. Chavira was solid on the mound, compilingd an 18-9 record to go with five saves to earn Top Defensive Player.

The Most Improved Player award went to Lee product Andrea Rodriguez. The Fight Chaparral Award was another split honor as both Laura Martinez and Andrews' Jackie Ortega were honored. Taking MVP for the softball team was a player who played multiple positions and hit over .450, Jessica Cobos from Big Spring.

A fellow newcomer to the Midland College athletics program is the women's golf team which is looking to win a national championship later this month at the National Invitational Tournament in McHenry, Md., as shown by winning eight out of the 11 tournaments it has participated in this season. Sharing time at the top of the medalists standings were the Scottish duo of Pam Mackay and Linzi Morton, who shared the Most Outstanding Golfer award. Taking MVP honors were both Lisa Ball and Lee graduate Krystal Mehaffey.

The Fighting Chaparral Award for the women's golf team went to Rene Gonzalez from Fort Stockton. The Most Improved honor went to another Lee product in Vanessa Cody, who improved her scores from the 90s to the lower to mid 70s, according to MC women's golf coach and athletic director Joe Williams.

Delnor Poss' men's golf team should know about success as year in and year out the Chaparrals are at the top of the national rankings. This season is no exception as the Chaps have won 15 medalists honors in 15 tournaments. They have also captured the WJCAC, Region V, and state championships. They will also be looking to capture and third national championship later this month in Dothan, Ala.

Six different individuals have won medalist awards for the Chaps, led by sophomore and returning All-American Kenneth Ferrie, who took home the Outstanding Player award. MVP proved to be a tough choice as Ben Clark, Kevin Hoffer and Ernie Rose all walked away with the award. The Fighting Chaparral Award went to Graham Gordon, while the coach's award went to both Scott Rundell and Andy Spencer.

Also, receiving a special award was the Green & Gold Club for its support to Midland College Athletics.

SOFTBALL: Lady Rebels advance

things like the third time is a charm and we just kept quiet all week and ended up taking care of business."

Sophomore Mandy Hacker, now 14-3 on the season, went the distance to get the win, allowing only one earned run. She struck out Permian's Allison Savedra to end the nightmarish first when the defense behind her put the Lady Rebs in a major jam.

Hacker, however, wouldn't take shots at the defense behind her.

"It was frustrating in the first inning when we had all those errors," Hacker said. "We came in too nervous and up tight, but I can't get down on them because they are the only ones you have to back you up.

"The double play, I think, woke us up and showed us we were going to have to work to get this win."

Hacker helped her own cause at the plate with two hits and two RBIs on the day. On the mound, she struck out four and allowed only four hits. Permian did have some ill-advised running mistakes on the base paths as Neatherlin threw out three runners and Lady Mojo ended up leaving only two runners stranded on the base paths.

Lee, now 28-5-1 on the year, advances to the region semifinals against the winner between Richland Hills and Lewisville, probably on Friday. The Richland Hills-Lewisville game was rained out Tuesday and they are scheduled to play today.

"If we play Richland Hills, it will be at 7:30 p.m. Friday in Abilene," Overton said. "We haven't worked out details yet with Lewisville. We are trying to get the diamond where Abilene High plays its games, but we really don't have a field yet in Abilene."

The victory also ensures that Lee softball tradition has been maintained. The Lady Rebels have gained at least region semifinal status in all five years they have been in the state playoffs. They are at that point now. They have gone past the region semifinals twice, making the state semifinals in 1995 and the region finals in 1997.

SOFTBALL PLAYOFF NOTES: Lee is now the only team left in the state playoffs from District 4-5A. Three 4-5A squads were alive at the start of Tuesday's play. Lee eliminated Permian and Abilene High fell to El Paso Bel Air, 8-7. That game was also played at the Ratliff Softball Complex about 25 yards from the Lee-Permian game. AHS scored four runs in the top of the seventh to take a 7-6 lead over Bel Air, but the Lady Highlanders scored two runs in the bottom of the seventh to take the win back. Bel Air will play the winner of the Haltom-Flower Mound Marcus game, which was also rescheduled for today because of rain in the Metroplex area. Permian won its first two playoff games in school history before falling to Lee.

Abell scored 146.50 points, more than double the total of second-place San Jacinto, which scored 63.50 points. Goddard made it a Midland sweep of the top three spots.

Abell won the meet with relay wins and numbers, winning two relays and just one individual event.

In the eighth grade division, Ector won the team race with 122 points. Abell (88), San Jacinto (73.5) and Goddard (48) took the next three team spots.

CHAPS: Rafferty recruits 4 good freshmen

(From 1C)

Houston Clear Creek who averaged 15 points and seven rebounds per contest for a team which went 30-4 last season. Rucker was first team All-District 24-5A and made the second team of the TABC All-State squad.

"Hamilton adds some size and can crash the boards on the inside. He is also a guy that can shoot from the outside," Rafferty said.

Jerome Beasley is another player who adds size to the Chaps' post position with a 6-9, 225-pound frame. Beasley is from Moreno Valley, Calif., who averaged 13 points and eight rebounds per game for a 20-8 team that lost in the California Southern sectional semifinals. Beasley made All-League and was honorable mention All-County.

"Jerome has got a wealth of talent. He is physical and can shoot the ball," Rafferty said. "He sometimes has so much talent he doesn't know what to do with it."

The goal for Rafferty coming into this recruiting period was to get bigger and stronger. He feels he's accomplished that with these four players heading the 1999 class.

"I think all of them can potentially come in, have an impact and potentially start," Rafferty said. "I think all of them are going to be good players. They're all good prospects. I'm really pleased with what we got."

Rafferty added that along with the six players coming back from last season's team, the Chaps should be in pretty good shape for next season. Expected to return from last season's Chap team are guards Whitaker, Costello and Alvin Brooks, forwards Teohn Conner and Mike Stewart and forward Ricky Duff, who is expected to get his academics back in order after sitting out the second half of the season. Recruiting for Rafferty and assistant coach Junsie Cotten, however, is not finished as they expect to fill 15 spots on the roster.

"With these guys being signed, now we can pick and choose and be selective of who we recruit instead of just going for the best available players," Rafferty said.

Houston's Hampton beats Mets with arm, sparks rally with triple

Associated Press

NEW YORK — Mike Hampton isn't just doing well on the mound these days, he's also sizzling at the plate.

Hampton allowed just two hits in seven innings and sparked a three-run rally in the seventh with a two-out triple, leading the Houston Astros over New York 6-1 Tuesday night.

"He's a pretty good hitter and he can run real fast, but he gets paid for pitching, and he did that pretty good," Astros manager Larry Dierker said.

With the score 1-all, Hampton (3-1) hit a 1-0 pitch off Al Leiter (1-3) far over the head of center fielder Brian McRae, who was playing shallow, and scored one pitch later on Craig Biggio's double.

It was the second triple in 236 career at-bats for Hampton, who hit a two-run double against Arizona in his previous start.

"I certainly wasn't giving in to him, and I didn't take him lightly because he's a pitcher," Leiter said. "I just put the ball over the plate and he hit the ball farther than I thought."

Going into the season, Hampton was a career .191 hitter with 13 RBIs. His previous triple came off Orel Hershiser, and he got a game-tying single against Atlanta in the playoffs two years ago.

"I got lucky, as usual," Hampton said. "I think our whole staff takes pride in swinging the bat. We take a lot of batting practice. The little things help."

So does his pitching.

Hampton (3-1), who has won three consecutive decisions, struck out five and walked three. Following a loss to Chicago in his opener, Houston is unbeaten in Hampton's last five starts.

Last year, he started 5-0 and didn't lose until May 8, then slumped to an 11-7 overall record.

"I got hurt toward the All-Star break last year, and it sidetracked me for a while," he said.

Before Mike Piazza's game-tying single in the seventh, the only New York hit was a fourth-inning smash to third by Edgardo Alfonzo that Ken Caminiti threw in the dirt.

Biggio's double was his team-record 344th, one more than Cesar Cedeno had from 1970-81. Derek Bell, who had three of Houston's 13 hits, followed with his fifth homer of the season.

Tony Eusebio's RBI single chased Leiter in the eighth, and Tim Bogar doubled in a run off Josias Manzanillo later in the inning.

Leiter struggled all night with his control, and wound up allowing all six runs and a season-high 11 hits in seven-plus innings.

He has given up six runs twice in six starts after allowing no more than five in all 28 starts last year. Leiter also has allowed four home runs in 40 innings after giving up eight in 193 innings last season.

"I feel like I want to pitch a shutout every time out there," Leiter said. "I felt pretty good tonight until the seventh inning."

Mets shortstop Rey Ordonez made the most spectacular play of the night, throwing out Richard Hidalgo in the second inning on a grounder that bounced off the mound to the second-base side of the bag. Ordonez cut in front of Alfonzo, tumbled over completely and from a nearly sitting position threw out the runner by a half-step.

Scott Elarton followed Hampton and finished with one-hit relief, completing the three-hitter.

Houston, which has won five of six, got its first run in the fourth, largely because of Bobby Bonilla's immobility in right. Jeff Bagwell blooped an easily catchable ball that fell in front of Bonilla for a single, took third on Caminiti's single and scored on Hidalgo's double.

Bonilla, bothered by an inflamed right knee, was making his first start since April 24 and went 0-for-4 with five putouts. He once again was the object of profane chants.

"Looks like he's making some good plays out there," Mets manager Bobby Valentine said. "He doesn't have blinding speed, and I'm not sure he's 100 percent healthy. ... It's got to be pretty frustrating for him if he's not 100 percent healthy."

■ NL Roundup

Cardinals 9, Braves 1

ATLANTA — Mark McGwire hit his first homer since April 18 — a second-inning grand slam against four-time Cy Young winner Greg Maddux — and the St. Louis Cardinals went on to rout Atlanta, ending the Braves' six-game winning streak.

After blooping a double to left in his first at-bat, McGwire came up in the second with two outs and the bases loaded. The Cardinals already had scored two runs against Maddux (4-1), but Big Mac put the game out of reach.

He lined a 1-0 pitch into Atlanta's right-field bullpen for his sixth homer of the season, giving the Cardinals a 6-0 lead and breaking a streak of 41 at-bats without a homer. It was the 12th grand slam of McGwire's career.

Maddux gave up 12 hits and eight runs in 4 1-3 innings. The runs matched the most Maddux has ever given up in a game for his career.

Cubs 13, Rockies 12

CHICAGO — Mickey Morandini's shallow ninth-inning fly fell in for a game-winning single as the Chicago Cubs blew a six-run lead and then rallied twice to beat the Colorado Rockies.

The Cubs hit five homers but trailed 12-11 entering the bottom of the ninth after Colorado's Darryl Hamilton hit an RBI single in the top of the inning off Rod Beck (2-2).

Jose Hernandez walked off Jerry DiPoto (0-1) to start the ninth and scored on Tyler Houston's RBI double to right center. After Lance Johnson grounded out, moving Houston to third, Morandini's shallow fly fell in front of Larry Walker to give the Cubs the victory.

Expos 2, Dodgers 1

MONTREAL — Carl Pavano allowed four hits in 7 1-3 innings and Vladimir Guerrero hit his fifth homer as the Montreal Expos won for only the second time in 12 games.

Todd Hundley homered off Pavano (1-4) with two outs in the seventh. Pavano also gave up a triple to Adrian Beltre in the third, a single to Gary Sheffield in the fourth and a single to Devon White in the eighth.

Phillies 3, Padres 0

PHILADELPHIA — Carlton Loewer pitched a five-hitter for his first career shutout and Marlon Anderson drove in two runs as Philadelphia blanked San Diego.

Loewer (2-2) needed 129 pitchers to throw his second complete game of the season and third of his career. Tony Gwynn had two of the five hits, giving him 2,968 for his career.

Reds 6, Diamondbacks 4

CINCINNATI — Barry Larkin scored three times and hit a tiebreaking two-run homer for Cincinnati.

The come-from-behind win gave Jack McKeon his 600th victory as a major league manager, one night after former Reds manager Davey Johnson got victory No. 1,000 with Los Angeles.

Larkin's homer off Omar Daal (2-3) broke a 4-4 tie in the sixth inning and sent the Diamondbacks to their third straight loss.

Brewers 8, Marlins 1

MIAMI — Cal Eldred allowed one unearned run in eight innings to win for the first time since June 30.

Making just his second start of the season since being activated from the disabled list, Eldred (1-1) allowed six hits, two walks and struck out four as Milwaukee improved to 11-0 against the Marlins since moving to the National League last season.

Giants 7, Pirates 4

PITTSBURGH — Rich Aurilia had three hits and two RBIs, and winning pitcher Russ Ortiz helped himself with a run-scoring single.

The Giants shook off the after-effects of the Pirates' winning four-run ninth inning rally Monday and an early 2-1 Pittsburgh lead to stop a four-game losing streak, their longest this season.

Rangers stand atop AL West despite not playing very well

By Jaime Aron
AP Sports Writer

ARLINGTON — Their winningest pitcher went to spring training just hoping to make the roster. Their most consistent hitter is playing every day because two other guys are hurt.

That's not exactly a formula for success, but so far it's working for the Texas Rangers.

Texas has been alone atop the AL West the last 16 days, even though the Rangers have yet to be more than three games over .500 the first month of the season. They're 14-12 heading into Wednesday night's game at Boston.

Texas is coming off a 3-4 homestand against New York and Cleveland. That's not a terrible record considering the caliber of the opponents, but it dropped the Rangers to 6-8 at The Ballpark.

"We've played all right at home, but not as well as we should," second baseman Mark McLemore said.

The Rangers have yet to get on any sort of a roll. They haven't strung together many good starts — even one in a row has been tough — and their top hitters seem to be streaking at different times.

"We'll have one or two guys hot here and one or two guys hot there, but we haven't had a stretch of five or six days where everybody was going at the same time," manager Johnny Oates said. "They haven't all been clicking yet."

Leadoff hitter Tom Goodwin leads the league in steals, but he's been inconsistent at the plate. Rusty Greer has been up-and-down, while Juan Gonzalez was mostly down before a good Cleveland series. Rafael Palmeiro also heated up over the last week.

Lee Stevens, who usually hits seventh, has been Texas' most productive hitter. His .337 average is tops among regulars and he leads the team with eight homers. His 17 RBIs are tied for third on the club.

Stevens and Mike Simms were supposed to split time this season at designated hitter, or take turns giving Palmeiro the day off at first base. But knee problems have limited Palmeiro to DH duty and Simms has been on the DL all season, giving Stevens lots of at-bats.

"I've been fortunate to stay focused on what I'm doing and to stay consistent," said Stevens, who hit eight homers in April for the second straight season, tying the club record. "Now I've got to keep it up for the next five months."

Pitching has been the team's biggest problem. Other than Aaron Sele (3-2, 4.45 ERA), the starting rotation has been a mess.

Rick Helling (2-3, 7.18 ERA) hasn't looked like a guy who won 20 games last year and Mark Clark (2-2, 7.36) has looked like a guy who lost 14 times in 1998.

John Burkett was 0-2 with a 12.00 ERA before going on the disabled list and Esteban Loaiza was so bad in long relief that he blew his chance to be the fifth starter. Mike Morgan, who was invited to spring training without being guaranteed a job, seized the opportunity and became the first four-game winner in the majors before losing his last two starts.

The irony behind Texas starters' 10-11 record and 6.41 ERA is the fact they've actually been doing a good job of following orders.

Because none of the starters have dominating stuff, pitching coach Dick Bosman wants them to concentrate on throwing strikes. Their 38 walks in 26 games proves they are doing that, but the 32 homers they've allowed shows that the pitches are a bit too good.

Twins' rookie defeats Yankees

Associated Press

MINNEAPOLIS — Mike Lincoln got his first major league victory — retiring 14 straight Yankees at one point — as the Minnesota Twins defeated New York 8-5 Tuesday night.

Lincoln (1-4), who entered the game with a 4.81 ERA in four career starts and one relief appearance, allowed two runs and four hits in six-plus innings.

Ron Coomer was 3-for-5 with an RBI, and Doug Mientkiewicz and Terry Steinbach each drove in two runs for the Twins, who won their third straight over the Yankees dating back to 1998.

Orioles 9, White Sox 5, 10 innings

BALTIMORE — Harold Baines hit a grand slam in the bottom of the 10th inning as Baltimore rallied from a four-run deficit to beat bungling Chicago.

Baines hit a tainted RBI triple and scored the tying run in the bottom of the ninth to help the Orioles win a second straight game for the first time this season.

■ AL Roundup

Jeff Conine hit two solo homers and drove in three runs for Baltimore, which trailed 5-1 in the fifth before coming back, thanks in part to a Chicago defense that committed three errors and allowed three unearned runs.

Lenny Webster and Mike Bordick opened the 10th by drawing walks off David Lundquist (1-1). After a sacrifice, Brady Anderson was hit by a pitch to load the bases. Baines then drove a 2-2 pitch over the wall in center.

Mike Timlin (1-1) worked two perfect innings to earn his first win with Baltimore.

Tigers 3, Angels 1

DETROIT — Dean Palmer hit a tiebreaking, two-run homer in the eighth inning to give Detroit the win.

Bobby Higginson opened the inning with a single off Mike Holtz (1-1), who had taken over for Angels starter Ken Hill. Mark Petkovsek relieved and Palmer greeted him with his fourth homer, into the second deck in right.

Royals 5, Devil Rays 3

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla. — Carlos Beltran tripled with the bases-loaded to lead a five-run, ninth inning rally that gave Kansas City the win.

Athletics 13, Blue Jays 4

TORONTO — Olmedo Saenz drove in four runs and Ben Grieve, Jason Giambi and Miguel Tejada homered to lead Oakland.

Saenz, who signed with Oakland as a minor league free agent after spending eight seasons in the minors with the Chicago White Sox, went 2-for-3.

Rookie Roy Halladay (2-2) allowed five earned runs on seven hits and five walks in six innings against Oakland.

Costilla announces $100 million d

By John Paul Pitts

Under the terms of the letter of intent, ONEOK will invest $100 million

"Encourage your children to read a newspaper every day. Someone asked the other day, " Why is reading important ? " As I thought, what would the world be like, if there were no books? The darkness and emptiness would prevail. Life would be bland and meaningless. I am glad, that's not the way it is...

Reading is the KEY to a life long journey of knowledge, adventure, excitement hope and fulfillment. We can explore our world by reading, feel the excitement of learning of diverse places, people, and cultures through reading. By reading we can know of the hopes others have had in the past, the present, and hopes in the future. Many of our desires are accomplished and the exercise of our imagination from the depth of the oceans to the heights of the heavens are realized through reading.

Reading is important because the journey into the whole world begins with reading to our children at an early age.. Pick up a newspaper, magazine, or book and let the journey begin...."

UConn star Hamilton to jump to NBA

By John McElhenny
Associated Press Writer

STORRS, Conn. — All-American Richard Hamilton, who helped the University of Connecticut men's team to its first national championship, will skip his senior season and enter the NBA draft.

Hamilton, who averaged a team-leading 21.5 points per game this season, announced his decision Tuesday, just short of a month after teammate Khalid El-Amin said he would return next season.

Hamilton was voted the outstanding player in the Final Four, averaging 26 points and six rebounds per game as Connecticut upset Duke 77-74 for the NCAA tournament championship.

A 6-foot-6 forward, Hamilton was the third player in the Big East's 20-year history to win the player of the year at least twice. Chris Mullin of St. John's won in 1983, '84 and '85; Patrick Ewing of Georgetown shared the award in '84 and '85.

Hamilton won the award in 1998 and shared it this year with Miami forward Tim James.

Hamilton helped UConn to a 25-2 record this year and the school's fifth Big East Conference title in the last six regular seasons. The Huskies were ranked No. 1 for 10 weeks.

Hamilton, 21, contemplated turning professional after his sophomore year, but stayed in school in hopes of winning a national title. He said winning the title was a key factor in his decision to leave.

"If we hadn't won the national championship, to be honest with you, I might have come back," he said.

UConn Coach Jim Calhoun said he supported Hamilton's decision.

"I look at it as a graduation date for Rip; he graduated from our basketball program," said Calhoun, using Hamilton's nickname.

Calhoun, who came to Connecticut from Northeastern in 1986, said Hamilton was the best scorer he had ever coached.

Hamilton said he would try to continue his studies in order to earn his college degree.

Ten UConn players have been drafted or played in the NBA in the last 10 years. Hamilton is the third to leave school early to play professionally.

Hamilton is considered a lottery pick in the NBA draft, probably among the first 10 players to be chosen, because of his ability to score off the drive and play defense.

Hamilton leaves UConn as the school's second-highest all time scorer, with 2,036 points. Chris Smith scored 2,145 from 1988-92.

Hamilton's 19.8 points per game is third in school history, behind Wes Bialosuknia (1965-67, 23.6 ppg) and Walt Dropo (1942-47, 20.7), who went on to play major league baseball with the Boston Red Sox.

Monterey's legendary Moegle wins his final game as coach

By Chris Newton
Associated Press Writer

LUBBOCK — Only West Texas could produce a coach as tough as Bobby Moegle.

One time he made his team practice in a dust storm after an outfielder complained that a gust of wind made him miss a catch. In 1966, after losing to Amarillo High, he stopped the team bus 1 1/2 miles from the hotel and made them run — with their equipment.

But Moegle's toughness has bred success. At age 65, Moegle is the second winningest coach in high school baseball history, according to the National Federation of State High School Associations' records.

On Tuesday, he hung up his cap for good. His record: 1,114-266.

"Oh, I don't have any feelings about it, up or down," said Moegle, who has coached at Monterey High School for more than 40 seasons. "It's been a long road and if you come out a little ahead of where you were when you started down it, you've done OK."

Moegle's career ended Tuesday with a 13-2 victory over Amarillo Tascosa. The game was Monterey's season finale.

Locally, Moegle is considered THE most winningest coach in high school baseball history. The front-runner for the Federation of State High School Associations' — Gene Schultz in Lansing, Iowa — acknowledges that many of his 1,156 victories recorded through 1997 were against teams not associated with a high school.

"During the summers, for many years we would play teams from surrounding areas including American Legion-sponsored teams," Schultz said. "That's how the game count got so high."

Bruce Howard, a spokesman for the National Federation of State High School Associations, said he was unaware that some of Schultz's victories came during non-high school games.

"We are under the impression that all of those victories came during high school games, but if Schultz says otherwise we will definitely look into it," Howard said after learning about Schultz's remarks.

But whether Moegle takes the spot as the winningest coach or not, his career is legendary.

When Moegle showed up on Monterey's doorstep in 1959, he had not coached a single game and the team was the district's rag doll, never having won an area title.

Having spent two years in the Army, he put faith in discipline to be the force that could change the school's fortunes.

Moegle doesn't deny a single one of the tales of his muscle that have become legend among his players.

"I've always been a strong disciplinarian," Moegle said. "It's been successful for me. I've got a good side and a tough side. Nobody likes a strong discipline in their life. But later they've always realized what I'm trying to do for them. I try to make these kids better people. Teach them a little about life. Life isn't always going to be a welfare situation where you can expect someone else to bail you out."

Moegle's style has forged generations of grateful players.

"I learned a lot about mental toughness and self-discipline and work ethic and how to battle through adversity," said Steve Coleman, who started for Moegle's state championship team in 1981 and now coaches at Hardin-Simmons University. "Those are things I cherish and make a part of my philosophy today in my coaching style."

There have been sad moments. The only one of his players to reach the major leagues, California Angels pitcher Donnie Moore, allowed the tying home run to the Boston Red Sox's Dave Henderson during the 1986 AL Championship Series. Boston won the game and the series.

Moore committed suicide in 1989. Friends say the game contributed to his depression.

"That just about broke my heart," Moegle said. "It took me a long time to accept that he made that choice."

Coaches across the state should breathe a sigh of relief at the news of Moegle's departure. During his career, Moegle racked up four state titles and 10 state runner-up titles.

That's an average of a state championship appearance every three years he coached.

Moegle said his most special moment came when his team took a state championship away from perennial powerhouse Houston Bellaire, which currently is ranked No. 1 in Texas.

"We beat Houston Bellaire, 2-1. They had beat us the year before in the championship but we came back and beat them in '72," Moegle said. "I've had a lot of great moments but that would have to be the one. I can step aside and know that I have nothing left to accomplish on the field."

Williams sisters win in Italy

Associated Press

ROME — Venus Williams wasn't at her best Tuesday but still advanced to the third round at the Italian Open, beating a Spanish opponent who came apart on the court, cursing and throwing her racket.

The third-seeded Williams defeated Gala Leon Garcia 7-5, 4-6, 6-4 in a 2-hour, 20-minute match on the Foro Italico's center court.

Serena Williams had an easier time than her older sister, powering into the third round by beating Tatiana Panova 6-2, 6-1 under the lights at night. The siblings from California could face each other in the semifinals here.

Venus Williams came to Rome for a second straight clay court tournament as she prepares for the French Open. On Sunday, she won the first clay court title of her career with a two-set rout of Mary Pierce at Hamburg.

Little looked easy, however, against the left-handed Leon Garcia, a classic baseliner whose cross-court forehand drives kept pace against the more athletic Williams.

The American came back from a 1-5 hole to win the first set, after fighting off seven set points. But Leon Garcia — who, at 5-foot-4, is nine inches shorter than Williams — refused to fold.

"I don't think I played so well today," Williams acknowledged. "You can't play well every day."

She took it stoically, however, refusing to show emotion during the ups and downs of the match against an opponent ranked No. 50.

In contrast, Leon Garcia slammed her racket on the court, received a warning for shouting an obscenity and hit a ball into the stands after an unforced error gave Williams the first set.

"There were moments when she was too lucky, especially in the first set," an angry Leon Garcia said. "Next time, I'll beat Venus."

The 18-year-old Williams is preparing seriously for the French Open, the only Grand Slam played on clay. She added Hamburg to her schedule this year after playing only in Rome before going to Paris last year. She lost to Martina Hingis in a three-set final here.

■ Tennis Roundup

Gimelstob defeats Korda in Citrix championships

DELRAY BEACH, Fla. — Eighth-seeded Justin Gimselstob easily defeated former Australian Open champion Petr Korda 6-4, 6-2 Tuesday in a first-round match of the Citrix Tennis Championships.

"I can't see the future any more," Korda said after the 72-minute match.

A year ago, Korda won his first Grand Slam tournament title and was ranked No. 2 in the world. But his career began a downward spiral with a positive test for steroids at Wimbledon, his ranking plummeting to No. 121.

Adamant that he never took any illegal substances, Korda says he doesn't know how they got it in his system. But the scandal that's surrounded him has clearly had a negative impact on his tennis. Tuesday marked the fifth consecutive tournament that Korda has been ousted in the first round.

"It's killed the tennis," Korda said. "I'm not having the enjoyment."

It could kill his career as well. This summer a Swiss arbitration court will decide whether the 31-year-old left-hander Korda will be banned from playing for a year.

"If I leave the game, I'm not going to leave on my own terms — that's the bottom line," Korda said. "I do have two years left in me."

Gimelstob, 22, is at the opposite end of the spectrum. He'll face Hernan Gumy of Argentina in the next round.

Rusedski, Ivanisevic ousted from German Open

HAMBURG, Germany — Greg Rusedski and Goran Ivanisevic were among five seeded players bounced Tuesday from the $2.45 million German Open.

Felix Mantilla, Thomas Johansson and Cedric Pioline also were beaten and gone before the second round had been completed.

Rusedski, seeded fifth, is not much of a threat on clay with his serve-and-volley game and that was evident against Alberto Berasategui of Spain, who prefers clay to any other surface. The Spanish player won the second-round match 6-4, 7-5.

Arnauld di Pasquale, a French qualifier ousted seventh-seeded Mantilla 6-4, 4-6, 6-0 to reach the third round. Mantilla, another Spaniard who won won the Spanish Open last month, had a first-round bye, as did Rusedski.

In first-round action, Ivanisevic, the ninth-seeded Croatian, was sent out in less than an hour, losing 6-1, 6-3 to Germany's Rainer Schuettler in less than an hour.

Fernando Meligeni of Brazil ousted the 10th-seeded Johansson 7-5, 6-1.

Fabrice Santoro rallied to upset the 14th-seeded Pioline 3-6, 6-2, 6-3 in an all-French showdown. Pioline had won seven of their previous nine matches.

Francisco Clavet of Spain, No. 12, beat Dominik Hrbaty, who won the Czech Open last week, 6-0, 6-4.

Stewards to hold hearing about Valhol

LITTLE ROCK, Ark. (AP) — Jockey Billy Patin is expected to testify Wednesday when the state racing stewards conduct a hearing into allegations that the rider carried an illegal electrical device when he rode Arkansas Derby winner Valhol.

"I would be very surprised if he didn't testify," said Byron Freeland, attorney for the state Racing Commission. "This is a civil matter. If you don't defend yourself, that could be used against you."

Valhol scored the first victory of his career when he won the Arkansas Derby by 4 1/2 lengths on April 10.

Five days later, Oaklawn Park President Charles J. Cella said the track had evidence that Patin "may have been in possession of an electrical device during the race." He said officials first learned about the possibility shortly after the race became official.

The state Racing Commission ordered the track to suspend distribution of the purse and arranged for an investigation. Eventually, Valhol's owner James D. Jackson went to court and a judge released the $300,000 first-place money. That check enabled Valhol to secure a spot in Saturday's Kentucky Derb in which the gelding finished 15th in the 19-horse field.

Freeland said Jackson and trainer Dallas Keen had been sent notices about Wednesday's hearing. At the least, he said, they will be represented by attorneys.

Jim Simpson, an attorney for Oaklawn, will present the evidence against Patin. J. Minos Simon of Lafayette, La., represents Patin.

"My perception is that Simon has lots of arguments," Freeland said.

Simon previously raised the question about whether racing officials who ban an electrical device could be interfering with a rider's right to make a living.

Miata 'Trail Drive'

Staff Reports

Midland will be the host city for the Western "Trail Drive" as caravans of over 450 Mazda Miata owners head to Dallas for the 10th anniversary birthday bash for the Miata. The celebration will be Thursday through Sunday at the DFW/Harvey Hotel and Texas Motor Speedway.

The caravan will arrive this evening and Thursday Jack Sherman Mazda and the West Texas chapter, Miata Club of America, will host a continental breakfast at 8 a.m. for drivers from California, Arizona, Utah and Nevada. Six local MCA members will then join the drivers on the drive to Dallas for the birthday bash.

The celebration includes hot-laps at Texas Motor Speedway, a Funcanna driving event, tours and an Autocross.

The Guinness Book of World Records will be on hand Sunday and the event is expected to be covered nationally by CNN, ABC and NBC.

Dollar rises

NEW YORK — The dollar rose against the yen Tuesday amid worries the Japanese government won't expand efforts to revive Japan's ailing economy.

The dollar fell against the euro in muted trading after the new currency recovered from troubling remarks by the European Union's chief central banker.

In late New York trading, the dollar was quoted at 120.85 Japanese yen, up from 120.31 yen late Monday. The euro rose against the dollar, trading at $1.0617, up from $1.0567.

Traders bought dollars and sold yen after Japanese Prime Minister Keizo Obuchi, during a state visit in Washington on Monday, said that he saw no need for further programs to jump start his country's recessionary economy.

Without more help, analysts said, Japanese financial institutions might fail to recover despite government steps such as authorizing funds for yen-starved banks that undertake certain reforms.

"That's what caused the dollar to break" higher into 120 yen territory, rising during trading as high as 121.28 yen, said Thomas Arnold, chief foreign exchange dealer at Dai-Ichi Kangyo Bank Ltd.

Stocks retreat

NEW YORK — Stocks ended sharply lower Tuesday as a runup in interest rates prompted investors to reverse a buying spree on Monday that sent the Dow industrials above 11,000 for the first time.

The Dow Jones industrial average fell 128.58 to 10,886.11.

Broader stock indicators gave ground after a mixed morning. The Standard & Poor's 500 ended down 22.63 at 1,332.00, while the Nasdaq composite index fell 50.46 to 2,485.12.

Tuesday's loss in the Dow shaved off more than half of Monday's 225-point gain to a record 11,014.69, though many traders had expected a retreat after the leap from 10,000 past 11,000. Having taken just 24 trading days, that advance represented the fastest rise ever between 1,000-point milestones.

But as interest rates continued to rise in the bond market, pushing the yield on the 30-year Treasury bond up to 5.71 percent from 5.65 percent late Monday, investors became more concerned about the possible effect on corporate earnings.

Expo '99 showcases local businesses

By Mella McEwen
Staff Writer

From high-technology communications businesses to service companies that help business project a more professional image, Business Expo '99 will showcase 75 local businesses and services.

"May honors small businesses across America, and we feel Midland is the best place for small businesses," said Paul Rea, vice chairman of the Midland Chamber of Commerce Membership and Communications Committee.

The annual Business Expo will open at 10 a.m. today at Midland Center and will be open until 6:30 p.m., with an after-hours mixer from 4:30 to 6:30 p.m.

Among those with a booth is Grainger Industrial Supply, participating in its first Business Expo.

"We've done the Permian Basin Oil Show and we're trying to do more with the chamber," said Michael Worrell, branch manager, as he and co-workers finished putting their booth together.

"We want more exposure and new customers," he said. "We work with commercial accounts, industrial, retail and contractors. We have thousands of products, from lighting to janitorial products."

Another first-time participant, Joan Love-Davis, owner of Paperwerks, said she is participating because "we've been home-based for nine years and business has spread by word-of-mouth. Something like this spreads the word even faster."

She just moved her business, which specializes in three areas: income tax preparation, database design and medical billing, to 2500 N. Big Spring and said she felt now was the time to let people know about her business.

As she finished setting up her company's booth, Diane Riggs with Moore Document Solutions said her boss, Jamie Moore, wanted to let Midlanders know their dollars spent with her stay local.

"We're an agent of Xerox, but the agent-owner is here and we wanted to let people know that we're selling the Xerox name and standard but customers are spending their money here. When people think of Xerox, they think of a corporation, but we're an agent and we're locally owned."

Bruce Partain, director of communications and membership for the chamber, said that promoting themselves to Midlanders is not the only benefit of the Expo: networking with other businesses is another benefit.

"In any economy, up or down, businesses want to maximize their profits. This is about interacting with others, seeing how they do things and seeing if you can adapt their good ideas to your business."

Three free seminars will be offered during the day, two by Midland College and the Small Business Development Center at the University of Texas of the Permian Basin: "Starting Your Business" from 10:30 to 11:55 a.m. and "Marketing Your Business" from 12:05 to 1:30 p.m. Don Bell of Trailblazers Consulting will present "Million Dollar Networking" from 1:35 to 2:30 p.m.

Gas prices are going up as OPEC keeps its word

CHICAGO (AP) — World oil producers who have traditionally offered only lip service about cutting output are putting their words into action — and that probably means more price increases at the gasoline pump for Americans.

An eagerly awaited report from the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries this week or next is expected to show that OPEC members are abiding by their recent pledge to trim production. Analysts said Tuesday that could help push crude oil above $20 a barrel, nearly twice what it was in December.

As a result, higher gasoline prices will be with us for the forseeable future.

"We probably won't see any huge increases like the spike we had for the six-week period from mid-March through April," American Automobile Association spokesman Jerry Cheske said Tuesday. "The way things are now, prices might rise another nickel a gallon or may even have peaked, but they're not going to go down again soon."

Gasoline now averages about $1.23 per gallon around the country, up from 99 cents in February.

OPEC and other key producers agreed in March to cut their combined daily production by 2.7 percent, or 2.1 million barrels, beginning in April.

The oil ministry in Saudi Arabia, the world's largest producer, said Tuesday that a report due in the next few days will show countries participating in the latest round of cuts reached nearly 80 percent of that goal in April, with 100 percent compliance likely to come later this month. Most of the major producers already have said in separate reports that they've reached their targets.

Prices for crude have jumped since March as anecdotal confirmation of the latest round of cuts began to come in.

Besides OPEC cutbacks, other factors have contributed to the oil price increases.

For one, Americans took to the roads for an early start to the peak driving season. And, several refineries experienced production problems in California, one of the largest consumer states. Demand in the Far East, which fell sharply last year, also is on the rise.

Altogether, it means the glory days of prices below $1 a gallon for regular unleaded gasoline are probably over.

Callaway considers lawsuit

By Doug Ferguson
AP Golf Writer

Callaway Golf's battlefield seems to be moving from the fairways to the courtroom.

■ Golf Notes

Four months after he filed a lawsuit against Orlimar alleging patent infringement and unfair trade practices, founder and chairman Ely Callaway is thinking about taking another case to the Federal Trade Commission.

Behind this complaint is what is — and isn't — in the bag.

Without naming names, Callaway referred to Ted Tryba carrying an Orlimar bag during the Nissan Open, where he shot a 61 in the third round, and Dudley Hart carrying an Adams bag and wearing the cap in the Greater Greensboro Classic, where he tied for fourth.

According to the Darrell Survey, neither player had a single club from the respective company in the bag that week.

"We know there's been a lot of hanky-panky going on for years, but I've never seen anything quite this blatant," Callaway said.

"It is our current thinking that probably the only way to eliminate these types of deceptive and misleading advertising and promotional practices by a few of our competitors is to bring our complaint directly to the Federal Trade Commission."

Go ahead, said the founder of Adams Golf.

"Ely is just trying to protect his franchise," Barney Adams said. "This is much ado about nothing."

Adams said Hart carries the Tight Lies 4-wood, but when he got to Greensboro and saw the fast conditions decided to use a 3-wood that week. Adams didn't have one ready with his specifications.

Callaway also accused Adams of using Nick Faldo in its infomercial for the SC Series driver, but not using one in the MCI Classic. Adams said Faldo wanted to change his specs on the driver that week, but noted that Faldo used the Adams driver the week before (the Masters) and after (the Spanish Open).

"What Ely has chosen to do in this case is pick and choose," Adams said. "As a result, he's guilty of being as deceptive as he's accusing us of being."

Orlimar co-chairman Rich Oldenburg says Tryba is not one of its staff players and "is free to carry any bag he chooses."

"We're not paying him an endorsement and we're not using him in our advertisements," Oldenburg said, although he added that Tryba is working with some of the clubs.

Callaway says all but one of its 45 staff players carry at least 10 clubs. The exception is Paul Azinger, who carries only the fairway metals and has a logo that says just that on the bag.

Ping requires its professionals to carry at least 12 clubs, including the putter. If a player uses the Ping ISI driver, he only has to carry 11 clubs plus the putter.

"If Ely wants to change the tour to 10-club contracts, my answer is don't talk to me," Adams said. "Go talk to guys like IMG. They're the ones who set the deals."

LOVE HURTS: Davis Love III had a strong stretch the last few months, getting into contention in the Bay Hill Invitational and The Players Championship and finishing second in the Masters.

But it has taken a toll. Love withdrew from the MCI Classic with back problems, then decided against going to Japan to defend his title in the Chunichi Crowns.

The next question is how soon he will recover. Love has pulled out of this week's Compaq Classic in New Orleans.

STROKE START: The American Stroke Challenge got off to a rousing start in New York's Central Park when Nancy Lopez holed a 20-yard chip worth $50,000 and Corey Pavin made one worth $10,000.

In addition to their birdies during the Monday exhibition, they raised $93,500 for the American Stroke Association.

The rest of it will come from tournaments in the month of May. Bayer Aspirin will donate $1,500 for every birdie they make on tour. The goal is to raise $250,000 by the end of the month.

OPEN ENTRIES: A record 7,889 people have entered qualifying for the U.S. Open at Pinehurst, an increase of 772 from 1998. More than 2,500 arrived on the last three days before the April 28 deadline, and 404 were turned down because they either had a poor record in past qualifiers or had a handicap index higher than 1.4.

HAPPY THE SECOND: Se Ri Pak is looking for a little peace and quiet in her life, which was bad news for the beagle she got last year and named "Happy."

During a preview of the U.S. Women's Open at Old Waverly Golf Club in Mississippi, the defending champion introduced her new best friend — a 7-month old miniature schnauzer.

"At first, I had a beagle, but she was too rough. Tear everything up," Pak said. "She didn't want to sleep when time to sleep. I needed a quiet dog."

The name of the new dog? Happy, of course.

DIVOTS: According to the Darrell Survey, more players used Softspikes than metal spikes in the Greater Greensboro Classic, the first time that's happened in PGA Tour history.

2001 Match Play tournament may have trouble drawing Americans to Australia

By Doug Ferguson

West Texas Sports/3D

It took nearly five months for the five PGA Tours of the world to select Metropolitan Golf Club in Melbourne, Australia, as host of the 2001 Match Play Championship. That may turn out to be the easy part.

The real challenge will be persuading the top Americans to show up.

"You think I'm going to go? I mean, really," David Duval said recently.

Getting the top 64 players in the world for the inaugural Match Play Championship at La Costa Resort in Southern California was no problem. The lone holdout was Jumbo Ozaki, who rarely leaves Japan and would be on the Senior Tour if he did.

Getting them to Australia the first week of 2001 is another story.

While $1 million in official money awaits the player who can win six matches in five days, a mere $25,000 is there for the 32 players who don't get past the first round. Most can easily make that much at a one-day corporate outing in their hometowns.

And as La Costa proved, even the best players in the world aren't guaranteed more than one round when it comes to match play.

"I can't see myself going to Australia and potentially playing one round of golf — two, counting practice rounds," said Mark Calcavecchia, himself a first-round loser in February. "As that type of event goes all over the planet, eventually I think you'll see less and less players from the top 64, because of the potential one-and-out factor."

With a $5 million purse, the World Golf Championships will never be confused for the Quad Cities Classic or the Qatar Masters. In terms of prestige, they should be one notch below The Players Championship and the four majors, and well ahead of everything else.

Still, there is no guarantee the WGC will completely fulfill the mission of bringing together the best players in the world — at least not all of them.

The eligibility for Match Play is the top 64 players available from the world ranking. If Duval or anyone else decides not to go, that's good news for the players ranked 65th and down.

But should Americans bail out en masse whenever a WGC event is staged somewhere beyond their shores, their message will be clear — a world tour is a great idea, as long as we don't have to go all over the world.

And that message will reek of the spoiled Americans syndrome.

Shigeki Maruyama came to the Match Play from Japan. Stephen Leaney traveled from Australia. Colin Montgomerie and Lee Westwood spent more time on the plane from Britain than they did between the ropes at La Costa.

Why should Americans balk at playing in someone else's back yard?

And it's not just Australia, which is still too far down the road for Duval or anyone else to make a concrete commitment.

Already there are rumblings that not everyone who is eligible for the Stroke Play Championship in November will go straight from the Tour Championship in Houston to the southern coast of Spain.

Granted, there are valid reasons for wanting to skip Australia. The 2001 Match Play will start Jan. 3, the first tournament of the year after a two-month break from official events.

Because it takes two days to get there and two days to recover, that means leaving home right after Christmas, spending New Year's Eve in another hemisphere and playing for a $5 million purse with a game that may be more suited for a shotgun scramble that early in the season.

Even Lee Westwood of England is having second thoughts about Australia.

"It's not all about the money, is it?" he said. "You want to win majors, and those are in the middle of the year. You need time off, and that time off is January for me."

Even if it were about the money, Duval considered the prospect of 40 hours in the air for a possible $25,000 and couldn't make it add up.

"They take 40 percent out for the country tax. Now you're at $15,000," Duval said. "Two airline tickets are $20,000, so now you're $5,000 in the hole. It wrecks the week before and the week after, so it's really like a three-week trip.

"I'm not going to tell you I'm going for sure."

Eight non-PGA Tour members checked out in the first round at La Costa, and six of nine Europeans were beaten.

"I don't think they're at a disadvantage here," Craig Stadler said after his win over Montgomerie. "They got beat. And they've got a long flight home."

Is it too much for Americans to take that same risk?

PGA's appeal: Walking is essential to golf

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — PGA Tour lawyers tried to overturn Casey Martin's golf cart ruling Tuesday, saying the decision allowing the disabled pro to ride is as fundamental a change to the game as taking the dribble out of basketball.

"The walking rule is a substantial rule, expressly designed to inject stress and fatigue, and impact the outcome of the game," PGA Tour attorney Andrew Hurwitz told a three-judge panel of the 9th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals. "In an elite athletic competition, certain rules must apply equally to everyone."

Hurwitz added that walking in golfing "determines how players must go from shot to shot, just as the dribbling rule determines how basketball players must go down the court."

Martin, who has a circulatory disorder in his right leg that makes it painful for him to walk long distances, won the right last year to ride on tour under the Americans with Disabilities Act, which bars discrimination against the disabled in the workplace, public accommodations and services.

Martin's attorney contended that the PGA, whether it likes it or not, is subject to the ADA and he scoffed at the suggestion that walking is a necessary part of playing golf.

"Casey Martin doesn't want to be judged by a lesser skill level than anyone else in competition, but just don't come up with this walking rule, which was born out of tradition," attorney Roy Reardon said.

Reardon maintained that riding over the course gives Martin no advantage over his competitors.

"Stress is what causes golfers to wear down, not walking up and down hills," he told the panel.

Where's the crunch?

By Linda Anderson

A few weeks ago we got in the mail not one but two press releases from Vlasic concerning the company's new giant pickle slices for hamburgers. Officially called "Hamburger Stackers," they were named "the giant pickle" by those of us who were curious about them. Seemed clear enough.

The letter that came with the press release was actually kind of amusing. Seems a man named Frank Meczkowski is credited with developing the kind of extremely large cucumber that goes into making these pickle slices. The last paragraph of the letter goes like this: "Frank's got quite a unique story to share with Dave and your audience about his search for the world's largest pickle. We'll follow up with you in a few days to discuss your interest in booking him as a guest on your show. ..." We still don't know who Dave is or what show they are talking about. But the giant pickle did get our attention and that, after all, was the point.

The idea behind the giant pickle is that, when they have hamburgers, pickle lovers can cover the entire patty with one slice of pickle and have no pickle-less bites. "New Vlasic Hamburger Stackers provide pickle taste and crunch with every hamburger bite," declared the press release.

One 24-ounce jar containing somewhere between 12 and 15 giant pickle slices costs $2.99, which isn't exactly cheap when you consider you're only going to have enough for 12 to 15 hamburgers. That's maybe one cookout.

The press release went a little further: "With fun ridges" (what does that mean?) "and great taste, Hamburger Stackers are the best pickle for a burger because they won't slip or fall off like smaller pickle chips. They feature all-natural cucumbers that are 16 inches long and 3.5 inches in diameter with a small seed cavity for extra crunch and taste. The cucumbers are hand-grown in secret locations throughout North America the old-fashioned way, like in a home garden."

So now we have cucumbers being grown in secret locations? Doesn't that sound a little too — what's the word? — goofy to you?

The taste test was interesting, to say the least. All the tasters agreed: While they have a nice pickle taste (and Vlasic does have good pickles), the giant pickles are not exactly crunchy.

"They're mooshy," said the office expert (who is also an expert in menudo, dried tomatoes and strawberry cake).

"They're mooshy," said the editor who likes pickles.

"Yuck! They're mooshy!" said the teen-ager as she spit out her taste.

The verdict? Pickles they are; crispy and crunchy they are not. You heard it here first.

Price listed is from a local supermarket. Price at other locations may vary.

We were all set to be impressed by Vlasic's new giant pickles. Called Hamburger Stackers, each pickle slice covers an entire hamburger bun. Our excitement waned when we discovered you can't take a fork and get a whole slice out of the jar without it tearing into pieces. (Using a spatula might work.) Then the taste test got a thumbs down when it was discovered the texture is mushy. Expecting a crisp, crunchy pickle texture, several taste testers were disappointed.

Staff Reports

Just because mom typically doesn't have to cook on Mother's Day doesn't mean that the family has to resort to a eating out for the celebration. Instead, a lucious spring tart that can be made as easy as pie.

"You don't have to wait in line at a busy restaurant for a fantastic Mother's Day brunch," said Nancy Siler, consumer affairs director of Wilton Enterprises and a home-entertaining expert. "Taking the time to make a home-cooked meal for Mom can be a very special experience and it doesn't have to be difficult."

Ms. Siler says that even the most inexperienced cook can prepare a show-stopping Mothers Day brunch by following a few simple steps:

Use the oven for most of your cooking. "Baking is probably the easiest method of cooking," she said. "You don't have to watch the pot or stir as things cook. As long as you choose a straightforward recipe and follow the instructions you should be all right."

She suggests serving a tart as an entree that celebrates the freshness of spring by combining a mixture of young greens like spinach and endive with fresh herbs and lemon. Wrapped in phyllo dough, it is a light and delicious change of pace from heavier brunch fare.

Top the meal off with a rich strawberry shortcake in a sauce made from fresh strawberries,

This variation of shortcake is made extra decadent and delicious by adding whipping cream to the mixture instead of buttermilk. Although the cake looks much like an ordinary biscuit, the inclusion of cream in the mixture adds extra flavor and flair to this delightful component. Combined with a simple sauce made from fresh strawberries, this strawberry shortcake is sure to be an elegant and appealing accompaniment to any spring or summertime meal.

Although you won't find this dessert on any diet plan it's nice to know that strawberries are naturally nutritious and low in calories. Eight medium strawberries contain only 50 calories and less than one gram of fat. Strawberries are also high in vitamin C, folate and are a good source of fiber.

SPRING GREEN TART

1 pound curly endive or other young green (dandelion, baby mustard or baby beet or a combination), rinsed
3 pounds fresh bulk spinach, washed and large stems removed, or five 10-ounce packages frozen chopped spinach, defrosted and drained
3 cups chopped green onions, about 4 bunches, both tops and bottoms
4 cloves garlic, chopped
3 tablespoons olive oil
Zest of 3 lemons, coarsely chopped
3 tablespoons lemon juice
1-1/2 cups finely chopped fresh dill
1/2 cup chopped fresh mint
1/2 cup chopped flat parsley
Salt and pepper to taste
Vegetable pan spray
6 sheets phyllo dough (defrosted if frozen)
2 tablespoons butter, melted
1 tablespoon rice, uncooked

Preheat oven to 375 degrees. In a large pan, steam spinach and endive together. Turn leaves occasionally so they wilt evenly. Drain in colander, squeeze by hand to remove as much liquid as possible. Chop the spinach and endive.

Saute green onions and garlic in 2 tablespoons olive oil, until barely soft, and remove from heat. Toss the cooked greens, green onions and garlic with lemon zest, lemon juice, dill, mint, parsley, salt, pepper and remaining olive oil.

Lightly spray with vegetable pan spray a 9-inch diameter, 3-inch high springform pan. Butter and stack 4 sheets of phyllo and line springform, letting ends hang over the edge.

Place springform pan on cookie sheet in case there is any leaking or dripping. Sprinkle dry rice on bottom of tart. Fill with greens mixture. Butter and stack remaining 2 sheets of phyllo dough. Using pan bottom as a cutting guide, cut a circle for the top; place on tart. Cut a 1/2-inch overhang to bottom phyllo and fold over phyllo top. Brush with remaining butter.

Bake 45 to 50 minutes or until browned. Cool 15 minutes, release side and turn out on serving plate.

STRAWBERRY SHORTCAKE WITH FRESH STRAWBERRY SAUCE

2 cups all-purpose flour
1/4 cup sugar
1 tablespoon baking powder
1 teaspoon salt
1-1/2 cups cold whipping cream

FRESH STRAWBERRY SAUCE

1 pint basket (12 ounces) California strawberries (stemmed and halved)
Sugar, to taste
1-1/2 cups whipping cream, whipped and sweetened with sugar, to taste
Mint sprigs for garnish

Heat oven to 350 degrees. To make shortcakes, in bowl, mix flour, sugar, baking powder and salt. Gently stirring with fork, gradually mix in cream until just combined.

Mixture should barely hold together. With hands, form dough into six balls; place 3 inches apart on parchment-lined baking sheet. Bake in center of oven 25-30 minutes until light golden brown; cool on baking sheet. Meanwhile, to make strawberry sauce, in blender container, puree strawberries until smooth.

Sweeten to taste with sugar; cover and set aside. Split shortcakes horizontally. Divide sauce among six dessert plates; top each with a shortcake bottom, 1/4 cup sliced strawberries and 1/4 cup whipped cream. Cover with shortcake tops. Spoon remaining strawberries and whipped cream over shortcakes, dividing equally. Garnish with mint sprigs.

Makes six servings.

DEAR ABBY

Boys' bratty behavior makes relatives reluctant to meet

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I'm at my wit's end. My brother-in-law and his wife, "Ethel," have two boys; one is 6 and the other is 3. I love them and would do anything for them, but there are times when the thought of seeing them makes my skin crawl. Their parents seem to believe that disciplining them is too much trouble, and would rather blame their bad behavior on "boys will be boys."

Van Buren

I have a 2-1/2-year-old daughter, "Pam." Since she could utter her first words, my husband and I have insisted she say "please" and "thank you." As she grows, we expect more manners and correct behavior from her, just as we were taught.

We are not tyrants, but we believe there is a time and a place for everything. The dinner table in a restaurant (or anywhere else) is not the time or place to go running at full speed yelling at the top of their lungs.

The boys' grandmother and step-grandfather think the boys' behavior is acceptable and can't understand why we're so "strict" with Pam. It has reached the point where everyone else in the family avoids any contact with Ethel and her family, and plans things secretly.

I enjoy Ethel's company and want Pam to have a relationship with her entire family, but it's hard to explain to a 2-1/2-year-old why her cousins can jump on furniture, throw things in the house and eat ice cream for breakfast while she cannot.

They also seem to think that tormenting Pam is OK, and they do it quite often. In fact, they have tried to run her over with a big wheel and have hit her with their toys.

I don't want Pam to pick up on this inappropriate behavior.

When I try to intervene, their mother, father and grandmother pick them up, cradle them, then look at me and tell me the boys are just "playing" with her. I have voiced my opinion to no avail. Help me, please. — HAD IT IN SAN DIEGO

DEAR HAD IT: Your brother-in-law and his wife have a responsibility to teach their boys what is appropriate behavior and what is not. The blame is entirely theirs. Discipline takes work, but the parents appear to be too lazy to put forth the effort. Imagine the headache when the 6-year-old must be in a structured environment — such as school.

I don't blame the rest of the family for avoiding contact with these relatives. One out-of-control brat is hard to tolerate; two of them are too much to endure.

Since Pam is too small to adequately defend herself against her unruly cousins, curtail her exposure to them.

DEAR ABBY: I wrote you recently regarding a dear friend with whom I have been corresponding for many years. After several years of receiving mail from her on little scraps of paper, I wrote to you and was advised to mail her a lovely box of stationery saying, "When I saw this, it reminded me of you and our many wonderful years of friendship, so I wanted you to have it."

I just received a letter from my friend, written on the lovely stationery I sent her, glowing with love and thanks. Thanks to you, Abby, I am ... NO LONGER SICK OF SCRAPS

DEAR NO LONGER SICK OF SCRAPS: No, no, dear lady, thank YOU. It's letters like yours that make writing this column so rewarding.

IOC clears Korean Kim

LAUSANNE, Switzerland (AP) — Olympic leaders closed the case Tuesday against the highest-ranking official caught in the Salt Lake City bribery scandal.

The International Olympic Committee's executive board said it had "no new element" of evidence to justify further action against Kim Un-yong, a board member and international sports power-broker.

But the board said there was enough new information to extend its investigation of a second leading member, Australia's Phil Coles, who like Kim had received a severe warning from an earlier inquiry.

It appointed a three-member panel to report its latest findings by June 13.

"I think and I hope this case will be settled" by the IOC's June session in Seoul, IOC president Juan Antonio Samaranch said. Coles could face expulsion from the IOC if the investigation finds he violated more rules.
