Woman injured

A woman identifed as Carol Marshall sustained apparent head injuries in this two-vehicle accident at 9:41 p.m. Friday in the 3100 block of N. Midland Drive. She was the sole occupant of a two-door automobile which collided with a flatbed truck. She was taken by ambulance to Midland Memorial Hospital, where she was still in the emergency room at prestime.

MMH board hears little at tax hearing

By LANA CUNNINGHAM
Staff Writer

Only two persons showed up Friday afternoon at Midland Memorial Hospital's board of directors meeting to voice concern over the proposed tax rate and use of money.

The special board meeting at the hospital was a public hearing to take comments from citizens on the seven cents per $100 valuation tax rate. The board will vote on the tax rate during a public meeting at 3:30 p.m. Thursday in the board room.

Dr. Henrie Mast, chairman of the board of directors, related the various figures on tax roll, revenues, rates and changes in income prepared by the Midland County Tax Appraisal District. The tax rate of 7 cents per $100 valuation last year produced $2,253,822 in revenue for the hospital district, he said.

But because of a larger tax base this year, the same tax rate would produce $2,355,570. This is more than 3 percent above the revenues last year. And according to state law, if the revenues produced are more than 3 percent above the previous year, a public hearing must be held.

To bring in the same revenue as last year, the hospital district's tax rate would be .06457 cents per $100. But since the board decided at its last meeting on Aug. 10 that it would need an increase in revenue, the directors went with the seven-cent rate.

"At seven cents, we would be increasing taxes by a bit over 8 percent," said Mast.

Questioning that tax rate figure in relation to how the revenues are used by the hospital were John T. Atchison and his wife.

"I would like to ask why the administration or the board worked so hard for the drug hospital when there was private hospitals who wanted it and we wouldn't have to pay the taxes for it," said Atchison in referring to the approved application to add beds for a drug and-or alcohol abuse treatment center. "I'm sure people here on the administration and on the board have more money than some of us. A tax increase won't mean much to them."

Mast explained that taxes for the hospital district won't go up. "You'll be paying the same amount as last year."

"Then why are you having a hearing," questioned Atchison.

"It's been confusing to all of us," replied the hospital district's attorney, Ted Kerr.

MMH President Ray Branson, to explain the increase in revenues with the same tax rate, put 1981 and 1982 figures on a board.

"Taxes do three things," said Branson, writing them on a large white board as he verbally listed each one.

Part of the tax revenue goes to retire the $10 million debt from the last building program, he said. The revenue also goes to cover the cost of indigent care and capital expenditures, such as a large piece of equipment.

"If you think it's going to pay these salaries you read about, it's not so. In fact," Branson said, "most of the tax money is going for indigent care."

Taking over the explanation for the drug abuse treatment center was Roy Campbell, president of the MMH board of trustees.

"A private hospital has to charge more for the service to make a profit," he said. "They have to charge more than we do to provide the same service. We feel we can provide that service better. It's not that taxpayers are being burdened with this than they are being benefitted."

"I feel some of these other hospitals are doing it just as cheap," continued Atchison.

"It's hard to determine if a private hospital charges more or less than a community hospital," Campbell said. "You have to look at the whole package of costs and not just room rates."

Campbell added that profits made by a private hospital don't stay in the community but are sent on to the corporation's headquarters with some of the money going to Washington, D.C. "If we have any profit, it stays right here," he added.

Nor was Atchison contented with where money had been directed in the past, and targeted the Allison Permian

Polish protests 'stonewalled'

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — A six-foot wall went up Friday around Victory Square on orders of martial law authorities, blocking off the plaza that has become the focal point of anti-government protests in Poland's capital.

The government warned anew meanwhile that it would not tolerate further public shows of support for the suspended Solidarity union.

"Every effort of sowing unrest must be met with resistance by the forces of order," declared the official government organ, Rzeczpospolita.

The warning was repeated in a communique from the Polish United Workers Party, the Communists, that was read by an announcer on Warsaw Television.

The military regime "cannot and will not remain indifferent in the face of a wave of unrest, especially at the turn of August and September," the communique said.

Underground Solidarity leaders have called for massive nationwide protests on Aug. 31, the second anniversary of the founding of the labor movement.

The streets of Warsaw were quiet Friday and uniformed police patrolled Victory Square inside the metal-reinforced wooden fence. Only occasional passersby paused to watch as some three dozen workers built the barrier in a narrow trench in the grass perimeter of the football-field-sized plaza.

Poland's military regime said early this month that it would repair the cracked and uneven flagstones in Victory Square. The din of jackhammers heard from behind the barricade Friday indicated the work had begun. But, given the disturbances of this week, there was little doubt that the timing of the work was politically inspired.

After breaking up two protests by firing water cannon into the crowds of singing Poles, police began barring Warsaw residents from the square Thursday.

About 300 protesters moved to nearby Castle Square that night, singing hymns and nationalist songs until about 50 riot police appeared with another water cannon. The crowd ran from the threat, and the police made at least four arrests.

On Friday, the wall went up.

The protests in Victory Square centered around a 40-foot-long cross made of flowers laid on the ground to mark the spot where Cardinal Stefan Wyszynski's coffin stood during his funeral in May, 1981. The cross often bore pictures of Lech Walesa, the interned head of Solidarity.

Each night, police dismantled the monument to the cardinal, who played a key role as mediator between the union and the Communist government.

PLO prepares for long-awaited evacuation

By The Associated Press

In a scene of joy and sorrow, the PLO turned over two Israeli captives and the bodies of nine soldiers at the port of Beirut Friday, then began detonating land mines to clear their west Beirut enclave for evacuation Saturday after a 2½-month siege.

President Reagan confirmed 800 U.S. Marines will take part in the multinational force overseeing the pullout of more than 7,000 guerrillas, but said if any Americans are shot at they will be removed immediately. He said they would play a "carefully limited noncombatant role. In no case will our troops stay longer than 30 days."

The Israelis withdrew from the Beirut port at sundown to clear the way for the deployment of a Lebanese army unit at the harbor before the arrival of an advance contingent of 298 French paratroopers to oversee the first stage of guerrilla evacuation, Lebanese television said.

Lebanese radio stations said telephone lines also went dead between east and west Beirut and that the Israeli army closed the international highway in northern and eastern Lebanon, sharpening fears of an Israeli-Syrian confrontation before the gradual PLO evacuation is completed.

"The plan is to start the evacuation tomorrow morning, and tomorrow we'll be wiser," said Maj. Gen. Amir Drory, commander of Israeli forces in Lebanon, who watched the Red Cross turn over the captive Israeli soldier and pilot and the coffins near the northern end of the Green Line frontier dividing Beirut into Moslem west and Christian east.

"Getting back our prisoners and the bodies of our soldiers was a condition from the outset for starting the process of evacuating the terrorists from Beirut. This prime condition has been met," Drory said.

The turnover took place at 5:15 p.m. (11:15 a.m. EDT), and the freed men and coffins were flown shortly afterward to a military airport outside Tel Aviv. Pilot Aharon Ahiaz, a captive since June 6, the first day of the invasion, was greeted by his wife and son with a bouquet of flowers. The other released prisoner, soldier Ron Harush, captured Wednesday, was welcomed by his mother.

"I'm glad to be back," Ahiaz said earlier at the Beirut port as soldiers clapped delightedly. "Now please let me get back to my family and I'll talk to you later." Harush said little, but both men appeared to be in good health.

The coffins were borne to Beirut's port in a gray, wooden-slatted truck from the Palestine Liberation Organization's Gaza Hospital. The truck was preceded by a Red Cross van carrying Ahiaz and Harush.

The convoy entered a warehouse at the port and went out the other side, but Israeli soldiers stopped reporters and photographers at the entrance. The journalists could only watch the truck, with its Red Cross flags, enter Israeli-held territory in east Beirut.

Israel radio, in a live report from the Beirut harbor, described the scene as a curious mixture of rejoicing at the release of the prisoners and mournfulness in the presence of nine coffins.

Military chaplains opened the coffins and inspected them. They hurried with the approach of dusk and the Jewish Sabbath, during which it is considered sinful to have contact with the dead.

"We will bury you in our holy earth," intoned Israel's chief military chaplain, Maj. Gen. Gad Navon, who recited Kaddish, the Jewish prayer for the dead.

Before the transfer, Ahiaz and Harush both appeared at a hastily arranged news conference at the PLO's information office in west Beirut's Fakhani neighborhood.

Ahiaz said with a slight smile that he was "treated well" during his 75-day captivity. Harush answered inaudibly when reporters tried to question him. Neither man showed any sign of injuries.

Lebanese Prime Minister Shafik Wazzan announced the transfer an hour before it took place ad said U.S. presidential envoy Philip C. Habib handed him a written guarantee that the Reagan administration would seek the release of Lebanese and Palestinian prisoners held by Israel.

No figures were given and there was no immediate comment from U.S. officials, but in the past Israel has refused to discuss freeing PLO fighters it holds, claiming they are terrorists held on criminal charges rather than prisoners of war.

About 800 U.S. Marines and about 530 Italian troops are to be deployed four or five days after the evacuation begins Saturday, several hours after the arrival of 350 French paratroopers.

Playing the numbers

Democratic gubernatorial candidate Mark White and Republican Secretary of State David Dean staged a battle of the news conferences on Friday at which they accused each other of doing little to pump up the number of registered voters in Texas.

'Nibble' due soon; Tax bite slated for January

WASHINGTON (AP) — In less than two weeks, taxpayers will begin feeling the first little nibble of a tax increase that could fuel federal coffers by more than $100 billion over the next three years, the largest revenue-raising measure in peactime history.

But most of the bite will start next January.

On Sept. 1, the 5-percent federal tax on airline tickets will rise to 8 percent. Passengers leaving for foreign destinations will pay an additional $3. Air freight shipments will be taxed at 5 percent, and private pilots will start paying more for fuel.

The aviation taxes will account for only $2.9 billion of the estimated $100.4 billion that the tax bill is expected to produce during the three-year budget period that begins on Oct. 1. Actually, the Congress put the figure at $98.3 billion, but that doesn't include a $2.1-billion boost in taxes on unemployment benefits.

The remainder will come from individuals and businesses as higher taxes on cigarettes and telephone service; reduced deductions for medical expense and casualty losses; tougher laws to stop tax cheating, and reduction or elimination of several corporate tax breaks.

President Reagan called for the tax increase and a package of spending cuts to reduce the federal government's borrowing. The goal is to lower interest rates and revitalize the economy.

Reagan is expected to sign the bill into law during his California vacation. That could happen as early as Wednesday, White House officials said.

The House and Senate approved the compromise bill late Thursday. A majority of both parties endorsed the measure in the House but dozens of the young, conservative Republicans who have been the backbone of Reagan's support rejected the tax increase as abandonment of the philosophy on which the president was elected.

In the Senate, 43 of the 54 Republican senators joined nine liberal Democrats to pass the bill. Those Democrats were attracted by provisions cutting corporate tax breaks and authorizing up to 10 weeks of temporary unemployment compensation benefits for jobless workers in every state.

Many of the 36 Democratic senators who opposed the bill conceded it had much to recommend it but complained that it still left too many inequities from the big tax cut that was enacted last year at Reagan's urging.

Texas congressman questions constitutionality of tax hike bill

HOUSTON (AP) — U.S. Rep. Ron Paul, R-Texas, claiming a $98.3 billion tax increase bill originated in the U.S. Senate instead of the House of Representatives, filed suit in federal court Friday to have to bill declared unconstitutional.

Paul said the bill contained a House number but was completely written by the Senate and therefore violates the constitutional requirement that all bills for raising revenues begin in the House of Representatives.

"The objective of the suit is to protect the constitution," Paul said. "In the mean time, the secondary purpose of the suit will be to defeat the tax bill."

The tax measure, supported by President Reagan, passed the House by a 226-207 vote and was approved in the Senate, 52-47.

"This bill that was passed, every word except the number originated in the Senate," Paul said.

Paul said the House was not allowed to offer amendments to the Senate approved bill when it came out of conference committee.

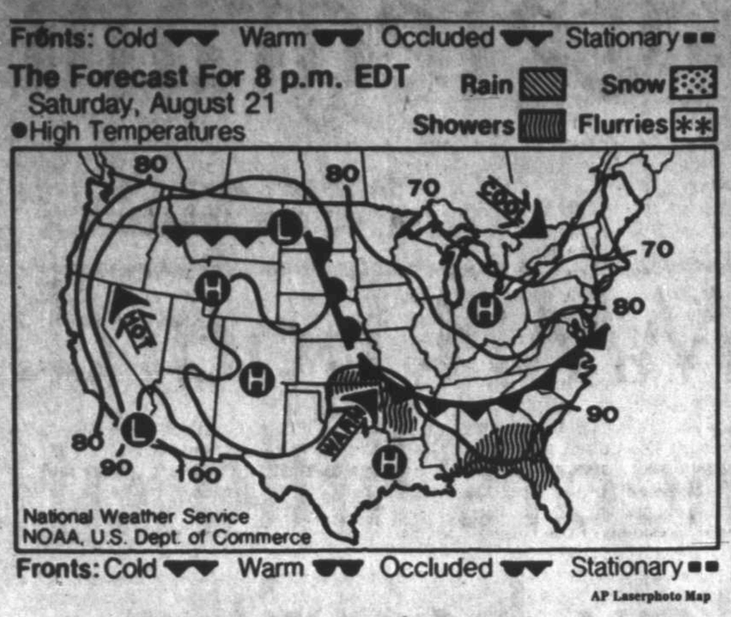
"The House never worked on the Senate bill before it went to conference," Paul said. "It went to the Senate and they wrote 700 pages. It goes to conference and the work out a deal and it comes to the House floor.

"In probably the strictest rule ever written, absolutely no amendments, no debate, nothing (was allowed). Here the House is supposed to write the bill and it was stricken from offering amendments. It was a very deliberate attempt to keep the House from writing it."

Paul joins 18 conservative congressmen, including Reps. Henson Moore, R-La., and Philip M. Craine, R-Ill., who last week filed separate suits in the same court.

Paul, who supported Reagan for election, said he was more concerned about protecting the constitution than pleasing President Reagan.

WEATHER SUMMARY



AP Laserphoto Map

Showers are expected for today in the southern Plains states and for much of the Gulf Coast region from Mississippi to central Florida, according to the National Weather Service.

Slight chance for thunderstorms noted

A slight chance of thunderstorms is forecast for today and tonight, though the National Weather Service says the probability of such is less than 20 percent.

Rainfall total for the month is 0.66 inch and for the year, 10.18 inches.

Otherwise, partly cloudy conditions should rule as temperatures edge into the mid-90s in the afternoons.

Winds should be light and variable today.

Friday's high of 96 was well off the record for the date of 105 in 1964, while the low of 72 was 18 degrees above the record set in 1947.

Don McCartney, left, Midland High School choir director, seems to implore his students to reach just one note higher during a two-week choir camp for the all-city elementary performance choir. At right, four of the 50 boys concentrate in unison.

Choir has 'higher' goal

Although it has been two weeks of intense practice, it isn't over yet for over 100 Midland elementary-aged singers. Even though choir camp finally ended its 9 to 11 a.m. sessions Friday, the youngsters will have two practices a month for the rest of the year.

Selected for the Elementary Performance Choir, the students, grades four through six, represent the city's public and private schools.

Individual choir teachers nominated them to audition for the honors choir before a panel of judges in May.

The students, directed by Lee High School's choir director Marilyn Jones and Midland High School's choir director Don McCartney, will perform for the public throughout the year.

'Angry customer' kills eight persons

MIAMI (AP) — An angry customer blasting away with a shotgun killed eight people and wounded three Friday at a Miami machine shop, then was killed when a car rammed his bicycle as he fled, police said.

"He came in and just went nuts," police spokesman Ken Christopher said.

Three employees at Bob Moore's Welding & Machine Service Inc. in northwest Miami were wounded in the fusillade. One person was treated and released from Hialeah Hospital where the other two were listed in stable condition.

Investigators found the gunman, identified as Carl Brown, 51, of Hialeah, dead a few blocks away, tossed face-up into a patch of weeds alongside busy LeJeune Road near Miami International Airport. His straw hat lay at his feet, and his bicycle leaned crazily against a utility pole.

Christopher said the Moore shop had done some welding, possibly on a motorcycle part, for the attacker on Thursday and there was a dispute over the bill or the quality of the work.

"Apparently he was disgruntled over some work he had had done," Christopher said.

Rufus Nelson, who works at a scrap metal yard across the street, told investigators the gunman walked into a back door of the machine shop late Friday morning and that he heard several shots.

Then, Nelson said, "He came out and got on his bicycle and rode on down the road," his shotgun slung over one shoulder by a strap.

Ernest Hammett, a co-worker of Nelson's at General Metals, and Mark Kram, the owner of a nearby business, said they grabbed a few handguns, hopped into a company car, and chased the cyclist as someone else called police.

"When we got up to him, I fired a warning shot," said Kram, owner of All Florida Scrap Metals. "As he looked at me, he reached for a shotgun. Then I pinned him against a concrete light pole" with the car.

One police officer, identified only as A. Juliachs, said it wasn't likely the motorist would be charged in that death.

"I came in and everybody was dead," said Armando Valdes, a truck driver for Moore's. He called off the names of the dead to another man, who broke into sobs.

A body, surrounded by huge metal lathes and other equipment, could be seen sprawled on the concrete in an open bay of the light green building near the Miami River.

Five more bodies were found inside the two-story shop and adjacent offices, and two victims died later at Jackson Memorial Hospital, according to police spokesman Tim Davis.

The victims, all shop employees, were identified as: Lonie Jeffries, 53, of Miramar; Martha Steelman, 29, of Hialeah; Pedro Vasques, 44, of South Miami; Nelson Barrios, 46, of Opa-Locka, and Ernestine Moore, 67; Magnum Moore, 78, Carl Lee, 47, and Juan Tres-Palacios, all of Miami. Mrs. Moore was the shop owner's mother; Moore was his uncle.

About 50 people pushed up against the police ropes as officers searched for evidence and questioned possible witnesses.

From time to time, a friend or relative of one of the victims arrived, got the news and wailed, often clutching officers for support. Each was led away by other friends.

"It is the largest mass slaying in Dade County," Davis said at the murder scene. "To the best of our knowledge, it is the first time eight people have been slain by a lone gunman."

C.L. Conroy of Hialeah Hospital said Carlos Vazquez Jr., 17, had been admitted with gunshot wounds in both feet. Eduardo Lima, shot in the arm, was in stable condition, and Carlos Vazquez Sr., 42, was discharged, Ms. Conroy said.

Police in the Miami area, which led the nation in per-capita homicides the past two years, had investigated other multiple murders — four men killed in one incident and three women in another — in the last three weeks.

Both of those cases were believed to be drug-related, as were the 1981 slayings of six members of a Colombian family in suburban Kendall. Six people were fatally shot and two wounded in a 1977 robbery in the northwestern Miami suburb of Carol City.

DEATHS

Sadie Stewart

DALLAS — Sadie "Mama Sadie" Stewart, 87, of Dallas and formerly of Midland, died Friday in Dallas after a lengthy illness.

Services will be Tuesday in David's Chapel Missionary Baptist Church here. Burial will be in Richards, directed by Lott's Mortuary.

She had lived in Midland from 1946 to 1954 and was a member of the Macedonia Baptist Church in Midland.

Survivors include a daughter, Mae Ola Roberts of Dallas; five stepdaughters, Ever Jean Coleman of Dallas, Louise Blaylock of Midland, Thomasene Bledsoe of San Antonio, Flora Mae Sparkman of Vernon and Frankie Lee Lawson of Lorenzo; a stepson, Arthur Lee Stewart of Lubbock; three grandchildren, five grandsons, 55 stepgrandchildren, three great-grandchildren and four great-stepgrandchildren.

Heiser of Kermit; three sisters, Emelie Simpson of Clovis, N.M., Mrs. Frieda Young of Odessa and Mrs. Gertrude Johnson of Midland; two brothers, Frank Heiser and T.B. "Bud" Heiser, both of Crane; 11 grandchildren and seven great-grandchildren.

Discrepancies in polls point out risks

NEW YORK (AP) — In the past few weeks, two major public opinion polls gave substantially different readings of Americans' views on the recently passed tax increase bill.

The contrast between the results of the Associated Press-NBC News poll and the Washington Post-ABC News survey highlight some of the potential problems of public opinion surveys and the risks of comparing the results of two different polls.

The AP-NBC News survey taken Aug. 9-10, said the public was narrowly split on the tax bill, with many people still unfamiliar with the legislation.

The Post-ABC poll taken a week later — the night after President Reagan appealed for public support for the tax bill — said a majority of Americans opposed the measure.

Do the results mean Reagan's nationally televised speech had the paradoxical effect of turning the public against the bill he was supporting?

Not necessarily.

The two polls used completely different questions that emphasized different aspects of the complex tax bill, which was approved by Congress on Thursday and sent to President Reagan for his certain signature.

The AP-NBC News poll mentioned the bill's role in cutting the federal deficit and outlined briefly its major provisions. A series of questions in the Post-ABC poll emphasized Reagan's support for the bill, raised the question of the fairness of the measure and probed whether the bill would cut the deficit.

Often, differences in question wording make substantial differences in the poll results. Research has found that people do listen to the poll questions and try to respond to the precise question asked. The order of questions can also have an impact on the results.

In addition, the AP-NBC News poll determined first whether people had heard of the tax bill before asking their opinion on the issue, a technique called "screening."

The polls were taken a week apart. In the intervening days, the Reagan administration stepped up its public and private pressure on Congress to win votes for the tax bill. And Reagan made the nationally televised speech.

The question in the AP-NBC News poll, asked by telephone of 1,594 adults nationwide Aug. 9 and 10, was:

"Have you heard or read about the new tax law being debated by Congress — a proposal designed to lower federal deficits by increasing some taxes on business and also increasing taxes on things like cigaretts, telephone calls and airline tickets?

If yes, then ask: "Do you generally approve or disapprove of this new tax proposal?"

With this question, the responses totaled:

— 37 percent approved;
— 32 percent disapproved;
— 6 percent were not sure; and
— 25 percent had not heard or read of the bill.

The Post-ABC News poll, based on telephone interviews with 913 people on Aug. 17, used a series of questions on the tax bill.

"As you may know, Reagan called for public support of a tax bill now being considered by Congress. Reagan said it is more a tax reform bill than a tax increase bill. Would you say the bill is more tax reform or more tax increase, or don't you have an opinion on that?

"Just your best guess: do you think the tax increase bill would make the federal tax system fairer for all Americans or not?

"Supporters of the tax bill say its needed to reduce coming federal budget deficits. If the tax bill is passed by Congress, do you think it will reduce federal deficits — a great deal, a fair amount, very little or not at all?"

And then the key question:

"Would you say you approve or disapprove of the tax bill?"

With this question, the responses were:

— 35 percent approved;
— 54 percent disapproved; and
— 11 percent expressed no opinion.

As is often the case in polling, none of the poll questions was "right" or "wrong." They were different questions, focusing on different aspects of a complex matter.

Jeffrey Alderman, director of polling for ABC News, said he saw two reasons for the differences:

"One, different question wording; and two, time had passed. During that period, a lot more attention was focused on the bill and we polled right after (Reagan's speech).

"It is difficult to tell which is more important, but I would say the more attention focused on the bill is probably the more important factor."

U.S. troops will aid in evacuation, withdraw if attacked, Reagan says

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan announced on Friday he has approved sending U.S. troops to help evacuate Palestinian guerrillas from west Beirut, but declared they will be withdrawn if attacked.

About 800 U.S. Marines will begin taking up positions in the war-torn city on Wednesday as part of a 2,100-member peacekeeping force that will supervise the withdrawal of Palestine Liberation Organization forces and other guerrilla fighters.

The Americans will be joined by 800 French and 500 Italian troops. The first 350 French troops will arrive in Beirut on Saturday when the PLO evacuation will begin.

Reagan said the Americans will be engaged in a "carefully limited noncombatant role" and will not stay longer than 30 days. While he said he has received "assurances on the safety of our forces, he answered "yes" when asked if they would be withdrawn immediately if fired upon.

"Our purpose will be to assist the Lebanese armed forces in carrying out their responsibility for ensuring the departure of PLO leaders, officers and combatants in Beirut from the Lebanese territory under safe and orderly conditions," Reagan said.

He also said the Americans' presence "will facilitate the restoration of the sovereignty and authority of the Lebanese government over the Beirut area."

In a Rose Garden announcement before leaving for a West Coast vacation, Reagan praised the "magnificent work" of his special Mideast peace envoy, Philip Habib, who negotiated the Palestinian withdrawal agreement and a cease-fire between Israeli and Palestinian forces.

The negotiations were marred by repeated outbreaks of fighting and violations of the cease-fire, often while Habib was in Beirut conducting the negotiations.

"Phil never lost hope, and in the end his spirit and determination carried the day, and we all owe him a debt of gratitude," Reagan said.

Secretary of State George P. Shultz, addressing his first news conference since taking office a month ago, said the dispersal of the Palestine Liberation Organization provides greater opportunities for achieving a comprehensive settlement in the Middle East.

Shultz said the United States wants Lebanon "free of foreign forces" but made clear he doesn't expect a rapid withdrawal of either Israeli or Syrian troops. "There is no doubt about the fact it will be complicated and difficult," he said.

Resumption of the Palestinian autonomy talks will not be easy partly because of the profound hostility in the Arab world to the Israeli invasion of Lebanon, the secretary said.

Shultz said the "legitimate rights of the Palestinian people" must be addressed and that the denial of those rights constituted "the center" of the Middle East turmoil.

Shultz said he disagrees with those who believe that the pressure for achieving a solution to the Palestinian question has eased now that the PLO has been weakened politically and militarily.

"My attitude would be exactly the opposite," Shultz said. "If the opportunity is greater, you should move in harder and faster and try to take advantage of it."

Elaborating on a statement made earlier by President Reagan, the secretary said American forces in Beirut would not be withdrawn if "some kook" fires an isolated shot at them.

Shultz said the Americans would remain as long as the withdrawal was taking place and "as long as the basic conditions envisaged for our forces remain in effect."

Commenting on the status of U.S. ties with Israel, Shultz said the invasion imposed "some strains" on the relationship and that Washington felt some of Israel's military actions were excessive.

But on balance, he said the relationship remains "a strong one."

Sen. Charles Percy, R-Ill., said after being briefed by Reagan on the agreement that Habib should receive the Nobel Peace Prize for his efforts.

Reagan called for "meticulous adherence" to the cease-fire worked out by Habib, declaring that "violations by any party would imperil the plan and bring renewed bloodshed and tragedy to the people of Beirut."

Felony charges against 14 dropped in Trident blockade

SEATTLE (AP) — Felony charges have been dropped against the 14 people arrested in an attempted blockade of the first Trident submarine to enter Washington waters, the U.S. Attorney's office announced Friday.

"As a result of the successful action taken by the Coast Guard in terminating the unsafe voyages of the protesters, the cases simply do not present circumstances aggravated enough to merit felony prosecutions," said U.S. Attorney Gene S. Anderson in Seattle.

The Coast Guard agreed with the decision to drop charges, said Rear Admiral C.F. DeWolf, commander of the 13th Coast Guard district.

Steve Hirsh, a spokesman for the anti-Trident demonstrators, said, "I think that it became as clear to the prosecution as it's been all along to us that they have no case against us. I'm not surprised at all."

The Coast Guard used dozens of vessels Aug. 13 to keep would-be blockaders in about 20 12-foot rowboats from getting near the 560-foot USS Ohio as it cruised toward its new home port at Bangor on Hood Canal.

Five were charged with violating a Coast Guard restricted zone and the nine were charged with disobeying Coast Guard orders.

Basin Cancer Therapy Center. After being informed that the money for that facility came from private donations, Atchison said there were other cancer clinics in the area. "I understand it didn't cost me anything. But maybe the money could have gone to something else," he said.

At the end of the session, Director Pat Estes told the Atchisons, "This is the first time we've had anyone come and say anything. I appreciate your conservative attitude."

Job loss can lead to grief, depression, divorce, suicide

Copley News Service

A suicide note lying near a pair of shoes and some cigarettes on the G Street Pier led police to a grim discovery.

They soon recovered from the bay the body of a 52-year-old man. He had weighted his right ankle with tire chains.

"Life is all in vain," his note began. He wrote that he was unable to find work, had repeatedly been discriminated against because of his age, and was heavily in debt.

Financial worries had cost him his marriage. That day in May two years ago, they also cost him his life.

Specialists who counsel the unemployed agree that losing a job creates a grief as intense as losing a parent or spouse.

Feelings of security, support and stability disappear, replaced with loneliness and vulnerability. It can lead to self-destruction.

Or renewal.

In another case, Mary Smith (not her real name), with her four children, was abandoned by her husband after 16 years of marriage.

She worked for a year as a receptionist for a plumbing company, but was laid off. With children to support in a failing economy, she wondered how to survive.

"I LOOKED IN THE MIRROR and said, 'Mary, get hold of yourself. What is it you do best?' Well, for 16 years, I had cleaned house. That was my longest work experience. Being a homemaker.

"And I enjoyed it. So I got together a group of friends and started a cleaning business. We did all the work ourselves and split the profits. The business grew very successful."

One of the houses she regularly cleaned belonged to a wealthy La Mesa businessman who had never married. In a fairy tale ending, they fell in love and married.

"Do you realize," she said, looking around her elegant living room, "that I used to clean this house?"

People cope differently with unemployment, say specialists, based on their self-image, past experiences, how much they value life, how much they believe they control their own fates, and the extent of their support systems — including churches, family, friends or business contacts.

—"TRULY CARING PEOPLE can make a huge difference. But if you are talking about a very rigid person, even the most caring people can't always make a difference. Some people are much more vulnerable, particularly if they have few outside interests, little family support, and a temperament that married them to their work." — Psychologist Paul Strauss, who has spent years counseling people suffering job-related stress.

—"Sometimes a company provides a person's main life-support system. Job loss can be death dealing." — B. Noel Phelan, president of a counseling and consulting center, which offers business seminars on stress and how to handle layoffs.

People who define their worth through their work and material possessions fare worse than people who believe in their inner worth.

"When people discover that their real asset is themselves, not a job or material possessions, that's when healing can occur," Phelan said. "So many people feel that it's their job that's important, not themselves."

—"HOPE IS A VERY IMPORTANT factor. The person who sees the world as controlling him may not have a lot of hope." — Clinical Psychologist Mitchell Luftig, who specializes in domestic violence cases and stress-related disorders. Luftig said people who believe they control their own destinies fare better than those who feel they are at the mercy of others.

National labor statistics reveal that as of July 1982, there are 1.5 million "discouraged workers" — people who have given up looking. That is the highest figure yet since the Bureau of Labor Statistics began compiling that statistic 15 years ago.

Behavioral scientist M. Harvey Brenner of John Hopkins University released a study in 1976 that maintained that sickness, death and crime statistics increase as unemployment increases.

Brenner concluded that for every one percent increase in unemployment, 4 percent more people enter state prisons, 5.7 percent more are murdered, 4.3 percent more men and 2.3 percent more women enter mental institutions and 4.1 percent more people commit suicide than might otherwise be expected.

DURING THE ECONOMIC SLUMP of 1970, for instance, Brenner deduced that the 1.4 percent increase in unemployment resulted in 51,570 more accident, suicide and illness-related deaths in the United States.

His controversial study, after he presented it to the Joint Congressional Economic Committee, sparked a national awareness of the correlation between joblessness and personal tragedy. In addition to deaths from heart disease and alcohol-related diseases, accidents, suicides, domestic beatings and arrests rise.

"Unemployment isn't just a temporary inconvenience," noted Thomas J. Vandeveld, president of the United Food and Commercial Workers, Local 1222 AFL-CIO. "It can be a fatal disease."

Counseling specialists say unemployed people are limited only by their lack of imagination. Yesterday's lifestyle doesn't have to be tomorrow's.

"Get busy," Strauss advised. "If someone sits around and feels sorry for himself, it gets much worse."

Collector converts trash

FOREST CITY, N.C. (AP)—Buddy Farnan has built a hobby around the old saw "one man's trash is another's treasure" and now finds that he, and his collection, are in vogue.

Farnan is a collector of what is now known as folk art, although when he first started picking up pieces it was generally seen as junk.

"In the beginning," said Farnan at a display of his works at the Arts Council in Forest City, "I was buying things that everybody thought was junk — and I'm not saying it's not junk — but beauty is in the eye of the beholder, and eventually I found others who thought it wasn't junk."

And then it caught on in New York and "suddenly it was in vogue, and I was in the middle of it," he said with a grin.

That also makes it valuable, although he insists he's not into it for the money. Some of his pieces have been valued at upwards of $15,000, Farnan said, but "I have never sold, or even traded anything so far."

And he has been busily acquiring for the past three years. He started with antique bicycles, of which he has one of the best collections in the country, then moved into old toys, Victorian dollhouses, and now folk art.

Farnan's collection is a wild cross-section of America: from intricately designed and pieced quilts to amateurish cigar-store Indians.

"Look at that," said Farnan, pointing to a garishly painted, grinning wooden Indian. "Isn't that the dumbest thing you ever saw?"

Tuberculosis cases start leveling off

ATLANTA (AP) — The number of tuberculosis cases in the United States has changed little in the past three years, the national Centers for Disease Control says.

The number of cases dropped by an average of 1.4 percent per year from 1979 to 1981, the CDC said earlier this week in its Morbidity and Mortality Weekly Report.

Last year, 27,373 cases of tuberculosis were reported, a rate of 11 cases per 100,000 people and a decrease of 1.35 percent over the 27,749 cases reported in 1980, CDC figures show. From 1968 to 1978, the number fell by an average of 5.6 percent per year.

For 1981, tuberculosis case rates ranged from 20.1 per 100,000 people in Alaska to 1.1 per 100,000 in Idaho, the CDC said. Twenty-one states reported an equivalent or higher rate in 1981 than in 1980. Twenty-nine states and the District of Columbia reported lower case rates.

The rate of TB was higher in the South and in major cities. Miami had a rate of 87 cases per 100,000 in 1981, the highest rate for a major city since 1977, the CDC said.

Cases among newly arrived Indochinese refugees largely accounted for the leveling off of the decline in TB cases during 1979 and 1980, the CDC said.

Ronald and Nancy Reagan leave the Davis family home in Phoneix Griday, en route to memorial services for Mrs. Reagan's father, Dr. Loyal Davis. Reagan, who had been in Washington working on tax legislation, joined the family Friday. Mrs. Reagan was at her father's bedside at the time of his death.

President flies to Phoenix for funeral of wife's father

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) — President Reagan, "the most rewarding" week of his presidency tempered by the sadness of a death in the family, joined wife Nancy at a memorial service for her late father Friday.

Dr. Loyal Davis, a noted brain surgeon, died Thursday of heart failure at age 86 with Mrs. Reagan, his adopted daughter, at his bedside in Scottsdale, Ariz.

The president and Mrs. Reagan were spending Friday night in Phoenix before flying on to California Saturday for a two-week vacation at their mountain ranch.

After Air Force One landed at Sky Harbor Airport, the president was driven directly to the home of Edith Davis, the first lady's mother.

Despite the solemnity of the occasion, deputy White House press secretary Larry Speakes said Reagan was "flying high" after winning his intensely fought battle for congressional passage of a $98.3 billion tax increase over three years.

Speaking to reporters aboard Air Force One in flight to Arizona, Speakes said Reagan believed last week was "the most rewarding or fulfilling week" of his presidency because of the victory on the tax legislation, the settlement of the crisis in Lebanon, the signs of economic recovery and the joint U.S.-China communique that limits future arms sales to Taiwan.

"So I think the president leaves for a well-deserved rest flying high," Speakes said.

Reagan also was acting to repair the rift his support of the tax hike legislation caused with some of his conservative supporters. Speakes said several congressmen who opposed the legislation, including Rep. Jack Kemp, R-N.Y., had telephoned the White House to set up a call with the president.

"There will be some conversation between the president and those who opposed us," Speakes said.

Before leaving Washington, Reagan announced that U.S. Marines will be sent to Beirut as part of an international peacekeeping force to help oversee evacuation of the Palestine Liberation Organization.

The president delayed his California vacation for 10 days while he conducted an intensive lobbying campaign that paid off with passage of the tax increase Thursday.

In Phoenix, Reagan was joining his wife and other mourners at a service at Greenwood Cemetery. The White House announced Thursday that Davis' remains will be cremated in accordance with his wishes.

While Reagan lobbied for the tax bill he insisted was necessary to reduce the deficit and interest rates, Mrs. Reagan had been shuttling between her father's bedside at Scottsdale Memorial Hospital and Los Angeles since Aug. 11.

The first lady's mother, former actress Edith Luckett Davis, has been ill and was unable to travel to the hospital from her home in nearby Phoenix.

Mrs. Reagan's natural father, now dead, left her mother right after the first lady was born. Her mother married Davis when Mrs. Reagan was 6 and Davis adopted Mrs. Reagan when she was 14.

"In my mind, he is my father. I have no father except Loyal Davis," Mrs. Reagan has said.

As a young girl, the first lady lived apart from her mother, who was pursuing her acting career. It was only after she married Davis and gave up her career that Mrs. Reagan was reunited with her mother full-time.

Many cry at Davis funeral

PHOENIX (AP) — President Reagan accompanied his wife, Nancy, and other family members here Friday at a private memorial service for the first lady's father, noted surgeon Dr. Loyal Davis.

"There were quiet tears from a lot of people," Mrs. Reagan's press secretary, Sheila Tate, said after the 20-minute service attended by 60 friends and relatives.

She said Mrs. Reagan was among those who wept.

The first lady had sent a small bouquet of white flowers with a ribbon that read, "I love you."

Davis, 86, a retired neurosurgeon, author and educator, died Thursday of congestive heart failure at a hospital in suburban Scottsdale. Mrs. Reagan, his adopted daughter, was at his bedside.

The memorial service at Greenwood Memorial Park was closed except to family and close friends. Temperatures were 112 degrees, a record for the day in Phoenix.

Some 200 people gathered on the sidewalk outside the cemetery and saw the Reagan limousine enter and leave. The president bent forward in his seat and waved to the crowd each time.

Reagan flew here from Washington at midday and was to leave Saturday morning for California.

Mrs. Reagan's plan were not definite, said her press secretary. Her mother is confined to a wheelchair and did not attend the service.

Ms. Tate said Thursday that the the first lady "is grieving but holding up well."

Following Davis' death, Mrs. Reagan telephoned the president, then went to see her mother. Edith Davis, 86, has been seriously ill and confined to the family home here.

The Rev. John Patrick Doran, pastor of St. Maria Goretti Catholic Church in Scottsdale and a friend of the Davises since 1950, said Mrs. Davis handled the news of her husband's death well.

"She started speaking of him in the past tense, which is a good indication she was understanding things well," he said.

The Reagans' son, Ron, and his wife, Doria, were in Phoenix and arrived at the hospital a short time after Davis' death. The Reagans' daughter, Patti, had returned to Los Angeles from Phoenix early Thursday after visiting Davis the night before. She was told of his death in a phone call from her mother.

Davis, who had suffered a heart attack in 1978, had been ill for several months and had taken a turn for the worse this month, Mrs. Tate said. Mrs. Reagan had been shuttling between Scottsdale and Los Angeles since Aug. 11, when Davis' hospitalization was made public.

Davis married Mrs. Reagan's mother in 1929, when Mrs. Reagan was 6, and adopted Mrs. Reagan when she was 14.

Mrs. Reagan's natural father, Kenneth Robbins, died in the 1960s, the White House said.

The Davises moved to Phoenix in 1963 after Davis retired as head of the surgery department at the medical school of Northwestern University in Chicago.

Davis also was an author whose books included "A Surgeon's Odyssey," "The Fellowship of Surgeons" and "Go in Peace."

Abductors free abortionist, his wife

EDWARDSVILLE, Ill. (AP) — A kidnapped abortion clinic operator and his wife were freed Friday unharmed but exhausted, the FBI said, as the search for their mysterious abductors continued.

Dr. Hector Zevallos, 53, and his wife, Rosalie Jean, 45, reportedly were kidnapped by an anti-abortion group calling itself the "Army of God." The couple disappeared abruptly from their home nine days ago.

They were released in before dawn about a mile and a half from their house, south of Edwardsville, said Special Agent Glenn L. Young of the FBI's office in St. Louis .

At a news conference on the couple's front lawn, Young said the FBI had pursued leads all over the country but had no suspects in the case.

"There has been no further contact with the abductors, but we have no information saying it's anything but a kidnapping," he said.

"To our best information at this time, the couple was not physically harmed, but obviously anyone who has been abducted has undergone emotional stress," he said.

Young said the kidnapping appeared to be related to the doctor's activities as operator of the abortion clinic, but he declined to elaborate.

Zevallos is the operator of the Hope Clinic for Women Ltd. in Granite City, Ill., which has been the target of anti-abortion protests in the past.

FBI agent Joseph Ondrula said the couple was resting after a "preliminary debriefing." He said discussions would continue with them over the next two to three days.

Neighbors who greeted the Zevalloses at the couple's home early Friday said Peruvian-born doctor and his wife told them nothing about where they had been for the last week.

"They just came walking into the house about 5:30 this morning," said Wanda Hanselman, who visited the couple about two hours later. "It was so strange. They looked amazingly well ... We just embraced, and they expressed how glad they were to be home."

A steady stream of neighbors stopped in at the Zevallos home, bringing flowers, cakes and words of welcome. Cars lined both sides of the street and reporters camped out on the front lawn waiting for the couple to appear.

At mid-afternoon, they emerged, looking tense and drawn, for a brief session with photographers. As the shutters clicked, Mrs. Zevallos nervously clenched her husband's hand. Asked if they were glad to be home, the doctor smiled and said, "Yes, very much so." They refused to comment further.

The doctor's son, Miguel, 22, and his daughter, Lisa, 21, attended the news conference. They posed for photographers but declined to talk with reporters.

A neighbor, Dorothy Anderson, said she talked with Mrs. Zevallos. She said the woman looked well but appeared to have lost weight.

"She's just exhausted. You can see it," Mrs. Anderson said. "I said we were glad to see her back, and she just nodded her head."

Sheriff's deputies, alerted when Zevallos did not report to work last Friday, went to the couple's home and found the lights and television set on, the back doors unlocked, and their two Mercedes-Benz cars still in the garage. There were no signs of a struggle.

The FBI earlier revealed that a letter, purportedly from the abductors, had been received.

Defeated, depressed Argentina now 'a nation of Kelpers'

By DOUGLAS GRANT MINE
Associated Press Writer

BUENOS AIRES, Argentina — Defeated in the Falkland Islands war and buffeted by its worst economic crisis in a half-century, Argentina appears immersed in a sort of national emotional depression that a promised return to civilian rule has done little to alleviate.

The cover of the current edition of "Gente" (People), the nation's largest-circulation weekly newsmagazine, shows a typical, middle class family of four standing in a giant garbage can.

"We're all Kelpers — second-class citizens," it says in large yellow letters.

The British-descended residents of the Falklands call themselves "Kelpers," taking the name from the seaweed that grows around their shores. Argentina, which claims the islands were stolen from it by Britain in 1833, contends Britain has always neglected the islanders and denied them the rights of full-fledged Britons.

Jorge Luis Borges, Argentina's perennial candidate for the Nobel Prize for Literature and the continent's most renowned living writer, said in an interview published here this week, "I see no solution for this country and I believe we are a country without hope."

Writing in the magazine "El Portino," sociologist Heriberto Mauro commented: "Military defeats always leave a toll of disheartenment, pain and confusion along with mutilated soldiers and mourning relatives. More so in our case, because we were feeling these things before April 2 (the day of the Argentine invasion of the islands) and we thought the war would be able to free us from their burden."

The June 14th surrender of Argentine troops to British forces in the Falklands was an enormous letdown for a populace that had been misled by the military government to believe Argentina was winning the war until only a few days before it was lost. Adding to the despair are the highest unemployment rate in the past 10 years, skyrocketing prices and rising crime.

More than a million people — of a workforce of about 10 million — are without jobs and there is no unemployment insurance to ease their plight.

Consumer prices rose 16 percent in July alone, and Argentina is an odds-on favorite to repeat as the world inflation champion this year with a rate near 200 percent.

Crime — still at a low rate compared with many cities in the United States — is up 10 percent over last year, according to federal police officials.

Another sociologist, Manuel Mora y Araujo, cited polls showing a drastic nationwide increase in pessimism.

"Some things follow cycles," he said. "For instance, there has always been here a certain level of hostility toward the United States. It reached a peak during the (Falklands) conflict and is now like it was before. But what has not returned to its previous level and can be considered a trend, is people's confidence in the country's future.... Now there is a certainty that the country is mired down and the...war — not so much the defeat but the way in which it was managed — provoked a skepticism that is without precedent." The United States supported Britain in the Falklands war.

Soldiers who returned from the islands told of going hungry during the campaign and of inadequate clothing and weapons. There were accusations of black-marketeering on the part of officers. All three armed forces branches have established commissions to investigate performance.

There was no heroes' welcomes for the soldiers returned by Britain after the surrender, and the military parade that is traditionally the highlight of Independence Day every July 9 was canceled this year amid the armed forces' rapidly declining prestige.

When the military ousted President Isabel Peron six years ago it promised to transform the nation — through a "Process of National Reorganization" — from one prone to populist demogoguery into "a strong, stable, modern democracy."

Police fire kills Sikh hijacker

NEW DELHI, India (AP) — A Sikh hijacker, panicked by screaming passengers in the Indian Airlines jetliner he commandeered, leaned out of a door and was shot dead by police officers hiding under the plane's fuselage, an airline official said.

All of the 63 passengers and six crew members were freed and the only hostage injured was an airline hostess hurt in the onboard melee preceding the hijacker's death, said airline public relations chief Ajit Gopal. Her condition and the nature of her injuries were not known.

The air pirate, who gave his name as Museebad Singh and said he was a member of India's Sikh religious minority, commandeered the jet following an intermediate stop en route from Bombay to New Delhi and ordered it flown to Lahore, Pakistan.

But, after the plane reportedly circled for 1½ hours, Pakistani officials refused it landing permission and the Boeing 737 flew to Amritsar, the Sikhs' holy city about 250 miles northeast of New Delhi.

The hijacker, who Gopal said was armed with a pistol and a hand grenade, held all 69 passengers and crew members hostage, demanding a ransom and the release of other Sikh militants.

After a few hours, he released an ailing woman, identified as Parveen Sathe, and her infant daughter, Madhri, but the others were forced to stay on board.

At one point, Gopal said, the cockpit crew turned off the plane's interior lights and air conditioning, and it grew very hot inside the aircraft.

"There was a lot of commotion," he said. "Passengers screamed. One air hostess was hurt in the melee. The passengers started yelling and moving up and down" the cabin.

Gopal said Singh panicked and told the crew to open the door of the airplane. He leaned out, fired three shots into the air with a pistol "and shouted at the passengers to keep quiet," Gopal said.

Airport police who had been hiding underneath the twin-engine jet then "came out and opened fire," killing Singh, Gopal said.

The passengers and crew freed in Amritsar would be returned to New Delhi on a special relief plane, officials said.

The airline released a flight manifest which listed 10 people with non-Indian sounding names, but their nationalities could not be determined immediately.

Singh made several demands, including payment of the equivalent of $85,000, to be made in West German marks. He also asked that Prime Minister Indira Gandhi come to Amritsar for negotiations.

Soviets watch another docking

MOSCOW (AP) — Three Soviet cosmonauts — including the second woman in space — began preparations Friday to dock their craft with the orbiting Salyut-7 space station, Tass says.

The three, Leonid Popov, Alexander Serebrov and Svetlana Savitskaya, were to link their Soyuz T-7 capsule with the space station at 10 p.m. local time (2 p.m. EDT), the official Soviet news agency said.

Ms. Savitskaya, a record-holding 34-year-old test pilot, is to conduct experiments for which "a woman's hands would be greatly opportune," according to Gen. Georgy Beregovoy, head of the cosmonaut training program, as quoted by Tass.

Her most important contribution, Beregovoy was quoted as saying, is to exert "an ennobling effect on the micro-climate of the small group."

Radio Moscow said "all is well" aboard the spaceship, which blasted off Thursday night.

The latest Soviet space crew will be joining cosmonauts Anatoly Berezovoy and Valentin Lebedev, who have been aboard the orbiting scientific laboratory since May 14. In June, they were visited by a crew that included a Soviet cosmonaut and the first Frenchman to fly in space, Jean-Loup Chretien.

Ms. Savitskaya, daughter of Yevgeny Savitsky, a Soviet air force marshal and wartime flying ace, is married to a pilot.

The first woman in orbit, Valentina Tereshkova, spent three days aloft in June 1963 — at the age of 26 — and is a Soviet national hero. She is a member of the policy-making Central Committee of the Soviet Communist Party in 1971, is chairman of the Soviet women's committee, and plays a visible role in the anti-nuclear campaign.

Ms. Savitskaya is designated a researcher aboard the Soyuz T-7 mission, her first flight in space, Tass said. Serebrov, 38, is also making his orbital debut, as flight engineer. Commanding the capsule is Popov, a 36-year-old space veteran who set an endurance record in 1980 by spending 185 days in orbit. He flew last year with a Romanian cosmonaut.

Beregovoy, head of the Yuri Gagarin Cosmonaut Training Center, said Ms. Savitskaya's flight "signifies the beginning of a new stage in Soviet cosmonautics," Tass reported.

"Specialists point to the high efficiency of all three cosmonauts, and we believe that it is to a certain extent the result of the fact that a woman is working on the crew with men," Beregovoy said.

Additionally, Beregovoy said, "scientists drew up a whole number of experiments and a woman's hands would be greatly opportune in carrying them out."

"It is no secret that women are accurate and painstaking, particularly in carrying out experiments which call for delicate and exact work. And here a woman cosmonaut may show herself in the most advantageous light," he said.

Ms. Savitskaya, a graduate of the Moscow Institute of Aviation Technology, was reported by Tass to have set 18 women's world aviation records.

Trudeau's train egged in failing Ontario town

SUDBURY, Ont. (AP) — Angry demonstrators pelted Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau's railroad car with rocks, eggs and tomatoes when it stopped in this failing company town as he returned home from a Rocky Mountain vacation.

Many in the crowd of an estimated 500 people ran toward the prime minister's train car late Thursday night shouting, "Trudeau must go!" and "Go home!"

Trudeau stayed inside his compartment during the brief stop in Sudbury, which has 40 percent unemployment — the highest jobless rate in metropolitan Canada.

Sudbury police said the train, in mint condition when it pulled into the station at 11:25 p.m. EDT Thursday, had two broken windows when it departed 15 minutes later for Toronto.

They said none of the protesters were arrested and the prime minister was unharmed.

Trudeau's railroad car also was hit by eggs and tomatoes at several stops in western Canada earlier this week, but the Thursday night protest was the first in which rocks have been thrown.

Among the more militant protesters was a man who provided demonstrators with eggs embellished with stamps of a rude hand gesture, similar to the one Trudeau flashed to an angry crowd at Salmon Arm, B.C., last week.

Nutrient-enriched waste water from a nearby brewery is sprayed over a turf nursery near Jacksonville, Fla., in a process making efficient use of by-products of the brewing process. This effluent is piped directly from the brewery and held on tap in tanks at the nursery. The process is a joint land application project by Anheuser-Busch and Southern Turf Nurseries.

Middle Ages linger in Czech town

CESKY KRUMLOV, Czechoslovakia (AP) — If you want to step back into the European Middle Ages, this is one place to do it.

Cesky Krumlov is a small city of 15,000 nestled in a hollow and twirled around a loop in the Vlotava River. It is barely 20 miles from the triangle where Czechoslovakia meets West Germany and Austria, but its Renaissance buildings, narrow cobbled streets and splendid castle — the second largest in Czechoslovakia — are worlds removed from bustling modern life in either East or West.

The town rose as a result of the prominence of the Rosenberg family, south Bohemian lords who crowned their supremacy with the gray stone castle, rising sheer from the banks of the river and begun in the second half of the 13th century.

In the afternoon hush of the town's regional museum, a historian showed a model of the town in 1800, crafted by local ceramics artists over the past four years and as yet unfinished. The houses and palaces, with their washed-out colored walls and red roofs, are still instantly recognizable today.

Time seems to have passed by Cesky Krumlov. But only by careful effort. Almost deserted as the Germans retreated at the end of World War II, Cesky Krumlov fell even deeper into decay until it was declared a national monument in 1966.

Since 1970, according to the town's chief administrator, Vladislav Hoda, the Czechoslovak government has poured an average $1 million a year into restoring the city.

Much remains to be done. Cesky Krumlov is not an East bloc showcase like the Estonian capital of Tallinn (formerly Reval), where the Soviets staged the boating events in the 1980 Olympics and created a polished monument to Baltic and European history.

Across from Hoda's office in the medieval town hall, for example, two facades await renovation. Empty air gapes behind them. Hoda explained that this is because a supermarket will be built in on the ground floor, with modern apartments above.

"One of the factors limiting renovation," he said, "is that it has been decided that this should not be turned into a museum but should be a town leading a normal, pulsating life."

Pulsating, to a city Westerner, it certainly isn't. Bored teen-agers linger listlessly around the newest attraction in the square, a French-made car.

The slow pace of renovation is also un-Western. While cities like Munich or Hamburg rose quickly from the ashes left by World War II bombs, restoration and renovation take longer in the East bloc.

This is partly due to the scarcity of funds and craftsmen. East European countries boast skilled craftsmen whose talents are in demand in the West and stand on show in the restored old quarters of Warsaw or Gdansk, or the still-continuing renovation of the opera house in Dresden, Eastern Germany.

Unlike Prague, the outskirts of Cesky Krumlov — and most of the Czech countryside — are cluttered with slogans extolling the state and exhorting workers to ever greater achievements.

Iacocca proud of 'new' Chrysler

EDITOR'S NOTE — "Our house is in order now." Lee Iacocca says that now, just three years after his Chrysler Corp. was forced to ask the federal government for money. Some economic analysts still question the company's stability and even Iacocca knows there are economic influences out of his control, but here he talks about how he has turned things around.

By JOHN BARBOUR
Associated Press Writer

Looking back on the broken empire he inherited, Lee Iacocca's voice is low and incredulous.

He sees the Michigan State Fairgrounds jammed with thousands of unsold, dusty, rusting Chryslers, Dodges, Plymouths. He sees foreign operations sucking life from Chrysler like a lamprey on a lake trout. He sees a new car manufacturer caught in a used car business, a parade of returned fleet cars competing with his own new models.

Lee Iacocca

He sees decrepit plants, like the Dodge Main in Hamtramck, Mich., a gray invalid more decayed than the neighborhood it was set in. He sees thousands of men and women on assembly lines where quality took a backseat to the tempo of production and cars that needed last minute corrections, a rap with a bung hammer to make doors close.

And he sees himself, coming to government, as with a sick baby, asking for help. That was in 1979.

BUT LOOK at the 1982 model Iacocca. He is beaming, ebullient, elated, expansive, proud. He has more than a billion dollars in the bank as working capital. He has cleared up all of Chrysler's old bank debt. He has six months earnings of $256.8 million, more than a half-billion turnaround from the first six months of 1981. And he has just come through what he unabashedly calls "three years of hell."

Still, stock market analysts are divided on whether he is really out of the woods yet. They wonder at his arrangements with Mitsubishi and Peugot which Chrysler has stock in. They ask about the possibility of merger, a possibility Iacocca once brought up. His answer, "I don't think you'll see much merger talk, even if we're making a billion dollars a year."

WHEN HE WALKED IN, "it was bad. It was fat, but so was all of Detroit. In my last years at Ford we made $1.8 billion after taxes each year...But those were the fat days. They were paying guys like me a million a year. We became arrogant and we lost the target."

Now, when he talks about the company he inherited, he uses the pronoun "they." But when he talks about the new Chrysler he has trimmed and streamlined, the pronoun becomes "we."

"Let's not argue about lousy management or bad strategy. Fifty percent of their problems were management mistakes. For instance, they put so much of their assets into overseas companies to add a global look. They certainly didn't have styling that was accepted on the market. But more important, they cut corners. They didn't have quality products. They had cars that rusted. They had declining resale values."

Bespectacled, tanned and trim at over 6-feet, Iacocca is more at home in shirt sleeves. His language is earthy, lapsing often into business shorthand where billions of dollars become cryptic one-point-twos or one-point-nines.

WHEN HE TALKS about Congress, the administration, the Federal Reserve Board (especially the Federal Reserve Board) his voice rises and the words rattle out in frustration, very unlike the other Iacocca, the chairman of the board, the executive officer who writes his own television sales pitch, "If you can find a better car, buy it." The advertising people didn't like that one, but it is pure Iacocca.

"It was not only Chrysler," he says thinking back to those days, so near yet so far. "This country was about to embark on its greatest recession in 50 years. Had I known it, I would have quit. I say thank the Lord He only lets you see one day at a time. If you could look ahead two years, you'd go crazy."

Looking back at the Detroit he grew up in as a businessman (32 years at Ford), Iacocca remembers better days. Detroit has only 20 percent of the world vehicle market today, against 48 percent in 1950.

"Note that the great General Motors Corp. is having all the diseases we had, but their fever hasn't busted yet...Their breakeven is still pretty high and ours is down to 1.2 million cars. That's why we made money this last quarter."

IACOCCA FIRST trimmed the wasteful operations. "The demise of the foreign empire was easy because when I arrived they had already talked Peugot into buying it. Peugot regrets it to this day. We had already sold off what was left of South American operations to Volkswagen, and they took a bath on that."

In one year he wrote off a $100 million loss on the accumulated used cars the company was obligated to take back from fleets like Avis.

Then there was the sales bank. Chrysler kept an inventory of completed cars from which dealers could order what they wanted. "They built cars and piled them in yards, 60,000, 70,000 at a clip, and they aged and fell apart."

The dealer could always call and order five two-doors in brown from the Fairgrounds pool. "It used to take $125 just to clean them up. And with the cost of money going up, to carry that inventory of a couple of hundred million dollars was just crazy. We finally killed that snake. I just got rid of them."

IACOCCA CLOSED or consolidated a score of obsolete plants and modernized the remaining 21. He convinced the union to take $17.50 an hour, instead of $20. Executives took a 10 percent pay cut. He reduced his own salary to a dollar a year. The company saved $1.2 billion in wages and benefits.

He cut the white collar staff in half to 20,000. Blue collar layoffs were 54,000 for an indefinite period, bringing the hourly force to 46,700.

Not without pain. "The personal anguish. I guess that's what compassion is all about. You can worry about bottom lines all you want, but a guy gets laid off with 10 years seniority and he's worked hard all his life. He's got kids in college. He's got a mortgage and they're going to foreclose, and he has to yank a kid out of school. And he says, but why? What did I have to do with it?"

He asked for and got federal loan guarantees of $1.2 billion, which, he pointed out to Congress, was cheaper than paying out at least $2.7 billion in unemployment, more in pensions, and letting 600,000 people dependent on Chrysler go broke.

HE REDUCED FIXED costs by about $2 billion a year. He reduced the breakeven point. In 1979, Chrysler had to sell 2.4 million units to reach that magic mark. Today it is half that.

He brought in people from Ford, Volkswagen and GM. Chrysler's financial control was a mess and Iacocca couldn't find out if a given plant was losing money or a given product was making it. Today, half his management are old-line Chrysler people, ignored by previous management, and half are outsiders.

He had the industry gasping, by asking United Auto Workers President Doug Fraser to join the board of directors. "It's folklore that it was part of the union negotiations. That had nothing to do with it. I asked him because I happen to be one of those screwballs who believes that if you don't get government, labor and management together, the Japanese are going to have us for lunch anyway...What's wrong with having a guy who is the purveyor of my labor (and it's a monopoly) on my board?

"I ASKED HIM because I'd have him on any team I had. He's that good. He could be good in government, good as a manager, the best negotiator. I've got a good man."

NOTICE TO PARENTS OF ELEMENTARY PUPILS

The majority to minority pupil transfer policy provision is an important part of the desegregation plan of Midland elementary schools. This transfer policy allows eligible young children to attend the same school as older brothers and sisters in grades 4,5, and 6. The majority to minority transfer policy states:

> A primary level pupil (grades 1,2, or 3) may transfer from a school in which the pupil's race or ethnic background is the majority to another school in the assigned elementary school cluster, serving the residence, in which the pupil's race is the minority. Transportation is provided by regularly scheduled bus routes which transport intermediate level pupils (grades 4,5, and 6) within the elementary cluster.

Pupils in grades 1,2, and 3 may transfer to another school in the elementary cluster when their race or ethnic background is a majority in the home school. Also, the race or ethnic background must be in a minority in the receiving school. Transportation is provided by regularly scheduled bus routes within the elementary cluster.

You may receive more information by contacting the principal of any elementary school. Application forms are available from any elementary school principal or may be obtained at the central administration office at 702 North "N" Street.

A veterinarian, Dr. Deke Beusse, protected by a piece of PVC pipe, carefully places his hand into the jaws of a sand tiger shark at Sea World, located near Orlando, Fla. The foot-wide jaws of the shark have been propped open to remove a hook caught inside. The 9½-foot long shark was awake and alert throughout the operation, and both the shark and the veterinarian survived the encounter intact.

Narcotics may cause fever's depression

BOSTON (AP) — People feel bad when they have a fever. Now doctors think they may know why.

Researchers at Harvard Medical School propose that the sluggishness and depression that go with a temperature are caused by high levels of natural narcotics in the brain.

In a study on sheep, they found that these substances, call endorphins, pour through the system during a fever.

"Anybody who has had a cold knows that he feels a little off and depressed. He doesn't have his usual motivation," said Dr. Daniel B. Carr, who directed the study. "While most of us take this for granted, it's possible to ask: What is the link between having an infection and feeling differently?"

The study, conducted by doctors from Harvard, Massachusetts General Hospital and Beth Israel Hospital, was published in Friday's issue of the journal Science.

Most people associate narcotics with feelings of pleasure. But Carr said the natural substances may produce a more complicated range of sensations.

"The repertoire of behavior that can result from altered brain metabolism of these compounds is extremely complex," he said. "There's more to this than just feeling good or bad."

The researchers are not sure why the body steps up its productions of endorphins during a fever, but it is probably no biological accident.

"They must serve some useful purpose," Carr says, "because they are released so dramatically."

Carr notes that people with fevers often want to go to bed and forget about their cares. This mood may be a way of inducing the sick to withdraw from ordinary stresses while they recover.

South American potential unfulfilled

SANTIAGO, Chile (AP) — Despite vast resources and potential, South America remains a promise unfulfilled for the 245 million people who live on the poverty-stricken continent known more for its shortcomings than for what has been achieved.

Six of the 10 countries rooted in the Iberian Peninsula of Europe are governed by the military. Only Colombia, Ecuador, Peru and Venezuela have elected civilian governments.

Even in those countries politicians tread warily around armies they can only hope to control.

Terrorism from both ends of the political spectrum has scarred all 10 of the nations, sometimes polarizing their people and often eroding hopes democracy might flourish.

The region is rife with impoverished masses and the myriad of accompanying afflictions: illiteracy, high infant death rate, poor nutrition and health care and shortened life spans.

THE WHEELS OF MODERN industry spin in cities like Sao Paulo in Brazil, but a few thousand miles away in Amazon jungles and Andes villages, Indians still live as their ancestors did centuries ago.

All South American nations depend heavily on mineral or crop exports. The current recession in the West has shrunken markets and deflated prices for their exports, leaving economies in shambles with unemployment climbing and foreign debts soaring.

As if this weren't enough, almost all South American countries have border disputes, a few of which threaten to erupt into armed conflict.

South Americans are not without hope, however. Many believe their nations will one day be world leaders and Argentina's bold bid to recapture the Falklands rekindled the desire to give the industrialized world a run for its money in all fields.

Early on in the Falklands war, when Argentine pilots were bombing and rocketing British warships, it seemed to many that South America's challenge to the industrialized world had begun.

THERE ARE LESS violent and more encouraging glimmers of accomplishment:

—Nuclear power plants are on line in Argentina and Brazil.

—Brazil has plans to enter the space age by the end of this century, sending its own home-built satellites into orbit on its own home-built rockets.

—The world's largest hydroelectric project is going up on the Paraguay River between Brazil and Paraguay.

—South America has produced some of the world's leading novelists, and the current United Nations secretary-general, Javier Perez de Cuellar, is a Peruvian.

—On what once was a flat wasteland, the capital city of Brasilia thrives as one of the modern world's architectural wonders.

BRAZIL (Pop. 125 million)

This Portuguese-speaking and Portuguese-founded nation, largest on the continent, has been under military rule since 1964 and is currently struggling with a $60 billion foreign debt and inflation rate that hit 120 percent last year.

It is the world's largest producer of coffee and sugar, but the growing list of manufactured goods includes computers, aircraft and military tanks. Brazilian planners see the nation as a future world power.

President Joao Figueiredo, 64, a retired army general, took office in 1979 for a six-year term — the fifth general to rule Brazil since the military took power from a civilian government.

ARGENTINA (Pop. 28 million)

Gen. Reynaldo Bignone, the fourth military president in six years, was sworn in July 1 to replace Gen. Leopoldo Galtieri, forced out after the Falklands failure. Bignone, called back from retirement, has agreed to restore civilian rule by March 1984.

Argentina, a major beef and grain producer, is in the midst of its worst recession in half a century, with unemployment a major problem. Bignone says he plans to stimulate industry and end the recession by taxing imports and easing credit — a policy unlikely to ease the pain of inflation which hit 130 percent last year.

COLOMBIA (Pop. 28 million)

On Aug. 7, Belisario Betancur, a 59-year-old lawyer, is to replace Julio Cesar Turbay Ayala as elected president. Leftist guerrillas and poverty-sricken masses have been Turbay Ayala's main headaches but possibilities for alleviating both are in sight. The M-19 organization, the major guerrilla group, has offered to discuss surrender with Betancur.

Mystery of missing Tiffany window from Twain's house still unsolved

HARTFORD, Conn. (AP)—Whenever a tour goes through Mark Twain's house on Farmington Avenue, the guide pauses near an empty space over the front hall fireplace.

The guide then describes what used to be in the approximately 3-by-5-foot hole that affords a peek into the adjoining drawing room—a stained glass Tiffany window entitled "Autumn," possibly featuring a woman surrounded by fruit and flowers.

There is an expectant pause. Most of the time, no one speaks. Perhaps two or three times a year, a visitor will remark that the description sounds familiar, that perhaps he or she has seen the missing window.

So far, however, they have been mistaken, and "Autumn" remains lost to the remarkably restored Victorian structure that was the home of Samuel L. Clemens — better known to millions as the author Mark Twain — from 1874 to 1889.

FINDING THE WINDOW may seem like a long shot, but the director of the Mark Twain House says it may come home again.

"Lightning strikes twice," Wynn Lee asserted recently, referring to the almost miraculous find of another fixture from the Twain household.

In the mid-1950s, another visitor, Lawrence Banks of Redding, heard the description of a mammoth carved Scottish mantel which Twain had removed when he sold the house in 1903. Banks was looking at a less extravagant mantel which the author of such well-known books as "Huckleberry Finn" and "Connecticut Yankee in King Arthur's Court" had installed when the Richard Bissell family took possession of the 19-room mansion.

AS THE GUIDE began talking of the hopes of the Mark Twain Memorial to reproduce the earlier mantel, Banks began asking detailed questions. He was asked if he had read about the mantel, or had seen pictures of it.

"No, I think it's in my barn," Lee quoted Banks as replying.

Members of the Twain Memorial thought it had been destroyed when the author's home in Redding, known as Stormfield, burned after he sold it in 1910.

Instead, they discovered that Banks' father, who had done some work for Stormfield's new owners, had rescued the mantel after those owners had it removed.

The Twain Memorial purchased, restored and reinstalled the mantel in 1958, 35 years after it was assumed lost in the Stormfield fire.

"THERE IS SO MUCH of serendipity in the way the rest (of the house's restoration) came together," said Lee, his face lighting up. "So many of the (original house) objects came back."

The furnishings had been scattered throughout the country by the mid-1950s, when the Memorial decided to restore the dwelling to its 1880s period. Louis C. Tiffany and his firm, Associated Artists, had decorated most of the first floor and the second- and third-floor halls in ornate splendor for Clemens, his wife and their three daughters.

The Bissells extensively redid the house before they rented it in 1917 to the Kingswood School, a boys' preparatory school. In 1921, the house was sold to the City Coal Co.

In 1928, when there was a danger that the house would be sold to a businessman who was planning to raze it for an auto dealership, Katherine Day, who lived nearby in the house of her great-aunt, Harriet Beecher Stowe, formed the Mark Twain Memorial and Library Commission to purchase the dwelling.

THE RESTORATION effort had started in earnest by 1955, led by Mary Shipman. By 1974, the painstakingly researched restoration was largely completed, although Lee said work still goes on today.

No one is quite sure what happened to the window, Lee said. Bissell purchased the mansion for $28,000 in a transaction which must have been painful to Clemens, who had invested more than $250,000 in the property.

Your horoscope

By JEANE DIXON

Sunday, Aug. 22, 1982

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY: Science fiction writer Ray Bradbury shares this birthday with you. Also born on this date: actress Valerie Harper and actor Rene Enriquez ("Hill Street Blues"). You are now approaching one of the most important decisions of your life. Look forward to the birth of a profitable business partnership. Travel will play a key role in your success. Other people are drawn to you and offer support for your projects. Exciting changes mark your personal life. Romance begins to move in a more positive direction. Let loved ones know how important their happiness is to you.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Your loved ones should be feeling more affectionate now. Steer clear of any neighbors or friends who gamble. You delight in being the center of attention at a family get-together.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Joint endeavors can give you great pleasure today. A new understanding between romantic partners makes the future look rosier. Differences of opinion evaporate.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Get rid of unnecessary clutter by giving any "white elephants" to charity. A talent for writing could lead to a larger income. Take loved ones into your confidence.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Short visits and trips produce great satisfaction. Family reunions bring back pleasant memories. A relative's recollections could trigger a desire to write a family history.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Use your creative or artistic talents today. Outdoor activities restore your good humor and give you an opportunity to meet new people and pets.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): An excellent day for sports and other physical pursuits. Keep others guessing, especially where romance is concerned. A peculiar dream could prove somewhat prophetic.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct .22): Get outdoors as much as possible today. Athletic events appeal to people of all ages. Postpone signing contracts, leases. Some real estate advice you receive could be faulty.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Breaking a bad habit deserves top priority. Patch up a misunderstanding with loved one. A phone call or small token of your affection should do the trick!

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): You enjoy competing in a contest. Others appreciate your sense of fair play. Keep expenses down. Domestic problems diminish following a heart-to-heart talk.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Seize an opportunity to increase your take-home pay. Unexpected good news puts you in a happy frame of mind. Your evening plans get the green light from mate or date.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Relatives may be touchy today. Keep your distance. Peer pressure can be a real dilemma for teen-agers. Do everything you can to help young person deal with it.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Attending church fills you with new hope. A pleasant stranger shows interest. Go slow until you know him/her better. A son or daughter has pangs about leaving home for college.

Dean, White both 'playing numbers'

Mark White

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Democratic gubernatorial candidate Mark White and Republican Secretary of State David Dean staged a battle of the news conferences on Friday at which they accused each other of doing little to pump up the number of registered voters in Texas.

White started the latest word skirmish between the two officials with his statement that Dean's and Gov. Bill Clements' "much-ballyhooed" voter registration drive "is virtually nonexistant."

"Today we are seeing Mexican-Americans and blacks throughout Texas being dropped from the rolls and I think this once again demonstrates (Clements') insensitivity to the problems associated with minority voting in Texas," said White.

The attorney general said about 400,000 Texans have been "purged" from the voter rolls. State law requires the striking of names of voters who have moved to a different county and have not reregistered or voted since Jan. 1.

White said there could be one million voters removed from the lists by the November general election. He offered no specific figures, but said many of those would be blacks and Mexican-Americans.

"An inordinate number of those probably will be Mexican-Americans and blacks because it appears their likelihood of moving more frequently is greater," he said.

"We've never seen a Republican yet to ever do anything more than just talk about voter registration," said White.

The Democratic candidate said Dean has done little to publicize the current voter registration effort, but Dean said he has contacted civic groups, labor organizations, trade associations, educators and grocery stores.

Dean called his own news conference within an hour of White's after reporters gathered in his office for a response. The secretary of state — a Clements appointee — showed up with a League of United Latin-American Citizens certificate (pulled from a frame on his wall) given him for his work "as an advocate of voter registration in the Texas Hispanic community."

"I understand Pinocchio was at it again this morning," Dean said of White. "For some reason or other ... the truth seems to escape him at every possible instance."

Dean, a constant critic of White, said, "Apparently Mr. White must have seen some new poll results showing him trailing badly in the Mexican-American black areas in Texas. That's symptomatic of the fact that he is, in fact, the candidate in the race for governor who is insensitive."

Dean said the wobers show his voter registration effort was a success, resulting in the addition of 208,000 "new Texans" to the voter rolls during a spring drive. He said that didn't include reports from 36 counties.

He said White, while secretary of state from January 1973 through October 1977, did little to boost voter registration. Dean said there were 5,212,000 registered voters when White took office and 5,924,000 when he left.

Current reports show 850,000 voters who have moved have been purged, according to Dean. That number has not been subtracted from the 6,885,338 voters registered as of May 1, he said.

Changes sought in homestead law

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Homeowners are being burdened instead of protected by a constitutional provision that exempts homes from foreclosure, a joint legislative committee was told Friday.

The Texas Consumer Finance Association, which represents lenders, is seeking to change the law which they argue keeps homeowners from taking advantage of the equity they build up in their property.

The homestead exemption became part of the Texas Constitution in 1845. Homesteads can only be sold by creditors to pay off the purchase loan, home improvement mortgages or delinquent taxes.

Once again next session, the Legislature will consider allowing homes to be put up as collateral for other types of loans.

Richardson businessman Frank Farrell told members of House committees on constitutional amendments and on banking institutions "times have changed."

"People should have freedom of choice," said Farrell, who labeled himself as "high middle-income." Farrell said his home is worth $160,000 and his mortgage balance is only $24,000, but he can't take advantage of his sizable equity.

"I should have the right to re-mortgage my property," Farrell said. He said medical bills and funeral expenses in his family recently forced him to borrow money at interest rates higher than 20 percent.

He said many of his neighbors have uprooted several times and sold their houses — the only way they could use their equity.

University of Texas finance Professor Charles Wertzebach, who is a paid consultant for TCFA, said Texans are at a disadvantage because their equity does not help their credit since it is untouchable except for home improvement loans.

He advocated allowing homeowners to waive the homestead foreclosure exemption.

"We're not suggesting repeal of the Texas homestead exemption," he said, "but that homeowners, given certain safeguards, should have access to their home equities under certain situations."

But Rep. Stan Schlueter, D-Killeen, was concerned that lenders would quickly turn the option to waive the exemption into a requirement for getting a loan.

Sponsors of legislation that would open up the law have suggested a $2,500 floor on such loans and even specifying for what purposes the loans must be used, such as college tuition or medical expenses.

At a news conference before the hearing, Rebecca Lightsey of the Texas Consumer Association said in other states homeowners put up property as collateral for car loans and credit card accounts and that many lenders require that the home be put up.

"In just one county, Orange County, California, 100 to 120 families a day are losing their homes from second and third mortgage foreclosures," she said, warning that the same thing could happen in Texas.

Clarence Johnson of the Poverty Education and Research Center said small loan-high interest lenders are the ones seeking the change in the law.

"These lenders prey upon the most unsophisticated and the most desperate borrowers," he said. "Now they want to be able to gain an interest in these borrowers' homes."

The consumer groups argued that even slight broadening of the homestead restrictions would lead to further dilution of the law later.

FBI investigates Hunt County judge

GREENVILLE, Texas (AP) — A Hunt County judge is the subject of investigations by FBI agents and a federal grand jury that he has received payments in exchange for leniency in misdemeanor cases.

The Dallas-based grand jury is looking into allegations that County Court-at-Law Judge Phil Fugitt threatened to sentence former business associate Danny Watson to prison on a drunken driving charge if he didn't repay a debt the judge claimed he owed him.

Another allegation is that Fugitt has dropped charges in other cases against Watson, an area farmer who has since fallen out with the judge, the Dallas Times Herald reported.

Fugitt confirmed the grand jury and federal agents are investigating him but declined to discuss the case.

"I feel that since there is an investigation going on I should not comment," he said Friday.

The FBI began its probe in June after the Texas Rangers turned over Watson's allegations that the judge had demanded payments from him, the newspaper said.

FBI agents secretly recorded a conversation between Watson and Fugitt in which the judge discussed dismissing or postponing the drunken driving charge if Watson would make periodic installments on the alleged debt, investigators told the newspaper.

The debt in part stemmed from a 1977 country music concert on Watson's farm, the newspaper reported. Fugitt invested $6,000 in the concert and would have received a portion of the event's profits but it lost money, according to sources involved in arranging the concert.

Fugitt dismissed a speeding ticket issued Watson in 1978 "for want of prosecution," when Watson appealed it to Fugitt's court, according to court records.

In 1981, Hunt County Attorney Fred Shelton plea bargained with Watson on four misdemeanor charges, agreeing to dismiss all but a drunken driving charge, county attorney investigator Bob Huckabee said.

Fugitt rejected the arrangement in June 1981, however, and privately told Watson to repay the alleged debt or else be sentenced to two years in prison, Watson told the FBI.

Watson was not prosecuted and sources told the newspaper that investigators have copies of at least four canceled $150 checks written by Watson, payable to Fugitt.

Huckabee told the newspaper he was aware of a "personal vendetta" between Fugitt and Watson, but Shelton said Friday that Huckabee was misquoted.

"Our office has no personal knowledge of a "personal vendetta" between Fugitt and Watson," the county attorney said.

Tyler city manager to submit resignation

TYLER, Texas (AP) — The controversial city manager who secretly taped a judge during a scandal-ridden 1979 drug investigation will announce his resignation Monday.

Mayor Pro Tem Charles Halstead confirmed Friday that Ed Wagoner is leaving the city post effective Oct. 1 to become general manager of a small power cooperative.

Wagoner was unavailable for comment but his wife confirmed that he is resigning.

A group of Tyler residents tried to force Wagoner from office this summer with a petition drive that gathered 1,200 names and alleged Wagoner had mismanaged the city.

City councilmen, however, rejected the petition.

Wagoner became embroiled in a series of controversies following the drug investigation in which 121 people were indicted and 97 arrested, 81 of those pleading guilty.

During a court hearing for one of the defendants, Ken Bora, testimony was presented implicating Wagoner, then Tyler Police Chief Willie Hardy, and a prominent Tyler lawyer, Charles Clark, of secretly taping a conversation with State District Judge Galloway Calhoun.

Mexico's creditors agree to delays

By ROBERT BURNS
AP Business Writer

NEW YORK — Mexico unable to meet the payment schedule on the Third World's largest foreign debt, reached agreement with its creditors Friday to delay repayment of $10 billion in loans for up to six months.

Jesus Silva Herzog, the Minister of Finance, faced officers from 115 international banks and won their approval of a 90-day extension on repayment of principal on all short- and medium-term credit falling due in the next 90 days.

In essence, Mexico was given a reprieve of between three and six months, although it will continue to make interest payments on all outstanding loans.

Nearly all the bankers leaving the closed-door meeting at the Federal Reserve Bank of New York declined to discuss the plan with reporters. But Silva said the agreement, reached after one hour and 45 minutes of discussion, amounted to "a vote of confidence in Mexico."

Mexico's financial problems have grown more acute this year, in part because of a drop in export revenue due to the U.S. recession and a steady decline throughout the industrialized world for oil, Mexico's prize money-maker. Mexico's currency was devalued on Aug. 6, and the free market exchange rate for the peso has dropped sharply.

A default by Mexico could have serious effects on the U.S. banking system and on banks throughout the world. American banks are estimated to have from $18 billion to $34 billion on laon to Mexico.

Mexico's total international debt, both public and private, is an estimated $80 billion.

In addition to the extended credit, Mexico expects to receive between $500 million and $1 billion in additional loans from a group of international banks, perhaps as early as next week, Silva said. That loan will be organized by a committee of 14 banks representing the United States, Japan, Europe and Mexico, he said.

The finance minister also said Mexico was near agreement with the Bank for International Settlements on $1.5 billion in new credit. That organization is comprised of central banks from around the world. In Washington, Deputy Treasury Secretary R.T. McNamar said the $1.5 billion could be made available next week.

Silva said Mexico also is in the final stages of arranging $4.5 billion in credit over three years from the International Monetary Fund.

The U.S. government aided Mexico through advance payment of $1 billion for Mexican crude oil destined for the U.S. strategy petroleum reserve, and by extending $1 billion in loans from the Commodity Credit Corp.

"We have been facing a liquidity problem, a cash problem," Silva told reporters. He added quickly, however, that Mexico was "not at all" in danger falling into default on any of its estimated $80 billion in foreign debt.

"Once we come out of this liquidity problem, we can look with confidence ...to the future of the Mexican economy," Silva said.

Silva added that he will meet again with the bankers in mid-September to keep them abreast of progress in easing Mexico's financial crisis. In the meantime, Mexico will present to the banks a plan for refinancing some of its public debt.

Struggling peso stronger; Exchange business slower

EL PASO, Texas (AP) — Mexico's struggling peso strengthened slightly along the border Friday, and bankers who had been swamped by customers wanting the currency say the exchange business had slowed.

"The lines have gotten down to almost nothing now," said Don Shuffstall, international banking officer at State National Bank here. "The trading's trailed off considerably.

"A lot of people who have come in were hoping to get better rates. People come in and see 80 to the dollar and then turn around and walk out," he added.

On Thursday, crowds of customers packed into lines at teller windows in El Paso's two largest banks to get pesos at rates as high as 130 to the dollar.

State National and El Paso National Bank were selling pesos for 80 to the dollar and buying them at 100 to the dollar Friday.

"It's been changing constantly," said Tom Martinez, international loan officer at El Paso National. "The rate depends on the market. We don't want to hold a lot of pesos because we could lose if there was another sudden drop."

The strengthening of the peso occurred after it was announced that bankers from the United States and other countries had agreed to delay repayment of $10 billion in loans owed by Mexico.

Mexican finance minister Jesus Silva Herzog said the agreement calls for Mexico to continue paying interest on the loans, but to delay payment on the principal for up to six months.

Shuffstall said the announcement caused the peso to gain on markets in Mexico City, leading to corresponding changes along the border. Banks in Mexican border cities were exchanging pesos at an average rate of about 102 to the dollar, he said.

Some border banks, however, continued to stay out of the peso trading business Friday because Mexican banks were not giving out dollars in exchange for pesos.

The dollar has remained essentially frozen in Mexico since a week after the Aug. 5 devaluation because the government wants the more stable U.S. currency to bolster its treasury.

"We're not trading at all because we have no place to sell them," said Irma Garcia, an international banking officer at Texas Commerce Bank in McAllen. "We just have to be patient and wait."

A growing number of businesses on the American side of the border are refusing to accept the peso because of its instability, Martinez said.

"We're telling them they shouldn't accept pesos right now because we can't exchange them for dollars at the Mexican banks," he said.

The dollar freeze has hurt businessmen on the Mexican side of the border because they need dollars to import goods from their neighboring cities and to pay off loans on the American side, said Martinez.

"Right now, we don't have much of a problem (collecting on loans) because most of the loans were up to date," he said. "But if they keep the dollar frozen, then we might have problems in the near future."

Texas' economy still good

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — When the recession ends, Texas' economy will continue to outperform the U.S. economy and the economies of most other large industrial states, says the Bureau of Business Research.

"The first sign of accelerated growth will appear in retail sales, with renewed growth in industrial production, employment and personal income following,' said a study made by Dr. Thomas Plant.

"Renewed national economic growth may bring some increase in in-migration into Texas, but Texas' employment growth will increase more than labor force growth, so the unemployment rate will begin falling."

Young Kennedy facing lawsuit over ownership of thoroughbred

CHARLOTTESVILLE, Va. (AP) — Robert F. Kennedy Jr., no stranger to lawsuits as a New York City prosecutor, is being sued himself over the rights to a thoroughbred horse he purchased last year.

Jody Ann Jacobson, a University of Virginia graduate student, is claiming co-ownership rights to Killarney, a 5-year-old bay gelding. Her suit, filed Aug. 9 in Albemarle General District Court, alleges that Kennedy bought the horse for $2,500 while he was a student at the University of Virginia Law School and that she later paid him $1,250 for co-ownership rights.

Kennedy, who wed a fellow lawyer, Emily Ruth Black, in April and graduated in May, rented a cottage at Robin Hill Farm in nearby Ivy from Ms. Jacobson's mother.

"They have tried to come to some sort of agreement for some time now," Ms. Jacobson's attorney, Lindsay R. Barnes, said Thursday.

Albemarle County Circuit Judge Herbert A. Pickford granted an injunction Wednesday to Ms. Jacobson which bars Kennedy from taking the horse out of the county until the case is heard Sept. 2.

Kennedy, a lawyer in the Manhattan district attorney's office, was unavailable for comment, an office spokesman said. He is the son of the late Sen. Robert F. Kennedy and his widow, Ethel.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A man who once sang with the Beatles and his manager have filed a $1.35 billion suit against the rock group and about two dozen record companies, alleging the singer's material was credited to the famed British quartet.

The lawsuit contends that at least 18 songs performed by Tony Sheridan, who sang with the Beatles during their early days, were licensed and sold under the name of the Beatles "even though the Beatles did not appear on such records."

In the suit, filed Thursday, Sheridan and his manager, Dirk Summers, seek damages for lost income of at least $100 million, plus $250 million for damages to Sheridan's career and punitive damages of $1 billion.

Sheridan alleges in his suit that the plaintiffs, Polydor International GBH, Phillips-Seaman Corp. and about 20 other record, licensing and distribution firms, knowingly released, licensed and sold the songs.

William L. Warren, Polydor attorney in New York, said Friday, "At the present time we can't comment because we haven't seen the papers. We'll have to see what the complaints are before we can evaluate the case."

Former Beatles George Harrison, Paul McCartney, Ringo Starr and the estate of John Lennon also were named in the suit, but no money was sought because "they weren't even paid" for the Sheridan records allegedly sold as Beatles' discs, said Howard Abeles, attorney for Sheridan and Summers. They were named in the suit "for identification purposes," he said.

Among the songs listed in the federal lawsuit are "Skinny Minnie," "Whole Lot of Shakin' Going On," "Let's Twist Again," "What d'd I Say," and "Let's Dance."

DETROIT (AP) — Sheik Mohammad Al-Fassi, an oil billionaire known for his flamboyant lifestyle, plans to donate $40,000 to the Motor City.

Currently on an eight-city goodwill tour, the sheik, a member of the Saudi royal family, said Thursday that he is giving $20,000 to the city for beautification projects and another $20,000 for youth programs.

"I am very happy to be here," the 27-year-old sheik said, adding that he hoped to invest in business in Detroit, but did not know which business or how much money.

Al-Fassi's largesse already has benefited several U.S. cities, including Miramar, Fla., where he gave away $40,000, and St. Louis, where he gave $25,000. He reportedly decided to stiff Phoenix, Ariz., however, because he was offended by the lack of an airport welcoming party.

But his image has suffered because of a bitter divorce contest with estranged wife, Sheika Dena Al-Fassi, and a dispute with a Florida hotel over his temporary failure to pay a $1.5 million bill.

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — Dick Howser, manager of the Kansas City Royals, and Royals hitting coach Rocky Colavito were arrested following an altercation over a traffic accident, police said.

Sgt. Dave Burns said Howser and Colavito were charged with hindering and interfering with a police officer and Colavito was cited for a traffic violation. Both men were released on bond.

There were no injuries in the accident, which occurred late Thursday after the Chicago White Sox-Royals baseball game at Royals Stadium.

Burns said Colavito's car was struck while making an illegal left turn from a stadium exit around 11 p.m. "Mr. Colavito and Mr. Howser became involved in a disturbance with the driver of the other vehicle," he said.

The driver of the second vehicle, identified as David L. Roach, 19, of Kansas City, was also arrested, Burns said. He was charged with driving while intoxicated.

WATERLOO, Iowa (AP) — Robert Walden, who portrayed reporter Joe Rossi to Ed Asner's Lou Grant on the long-running television series, is following the real-life footsteps of his "city editor."

Walden came to Iowa on Thursday to campaign for Democratic congressional candidate Lynn Cutler, and he had harsh words for the Reagan administration and the "new right," which he said was "very far wrong."

"It was not my plan to support any candidates," Walden said prior to the fund-raising pig roast. But after seeing "a lot of terrible things happen," such as the senatorial defeats of Indiana's Birch Bayh and Idaho's Frank Church, he said he decided to get involved.

Sporting a beard he did not have on the TV series, Walden was the guest at the fund-raiser attended by 450 people. On Friday, he was to chair a forum on how federal budget cuts affect the arts.

LONG BEACH, Calif. (AP) — An instructor at California State University-Long Beach, suspended in June after some students claimed she encouraged lesbianism, will be back in the classroom this fall.

University attorney Jaffe Dickerson said Betty Brooks, 52, will resume teaching the course "Women and Their Bodies." He said that decision came after Ms. Brooks has agreed to attend counseling sessions with a departmental dean concerning her teaching methods.

Ms. Brooks is a part-time instructor in the university's Women's Studies Program, which has been under fire since last spring from various conservative and fundamentalist Christian groups as being "anti-family."

Pieces out of place, but jigsaw contestants arriving

ATHENS, Ohio (AP) — All the pieces are out of place for the start of this weekend's first annual National Jigsaw Puzzle Championships, a contest which has drawn more than 250 entrants from Connecticut to California.

The contestants beginning Saturday will work against the clock and each other to assemble puzzles of 500 and 1,000 pieces for top prizes of $1,000.

A total of 1,175 new puzzles were created for the event and stored in a bank vault to guard their secret designs.

Sherry Coon of the Athens Chamber of Commerce, one of the contest sponsors, said more than 1,000 people inquired about entering the contest and 252 showed up.

"I guess there are a lot of puzzle people out there," she said.

The contestants have come from 19 states to try to make ends meet in the two days of competition.

Some entrants went into intense training after entering the contest weeks ago.

Among them was Shelly Melton of Midland, Texas, who said she "hibernated" in a Colorado cabin with 46 puzzles the past week to practice.

Hallmark Cards Inc. of Kansas City commissioned its jigsaw puzzle expert, John Robrock, to design dies for the puzzles that contestants hope to piece together in four hours or less. He produced six new designs for the special batch of contest puzzles.

There even was a contest to select pictures reproduced on the face of the puzzles.

Pieces of those scenes will start falling into place Saturday when the puzzleteers sit down to singles and doubles competition.

There will be singles and doubles competition for $1,000 first prizes, $500 second prizes and $250 third prizes. Singles entrants will attempt to put together 500-piece puzzles, while doubles teams will face 1,000-piece puzzles.

Sponsors say the 15 fastest contestants in each category on Saturday will advance to Sunday's finals.

Ms. Coon said the sponsors — Hallmark, the Chamber of Commerce and the Southeast Ohio Cultural Arts Center Inc. — believe this is the first national jigsaw puzzle championship. If it produces enough local revenue, they say they will do it again next year.

Beauty queen cleared of drug charges

MIAMI (AP) — A former Miss Black America was acquitted Friday of smuggling cocaine into the United States from Colombia.

"What can I say about how I feel, except, 'I'm happy,'" said Sharon Elizabeth Wright, 26, the 1980 winner and now a model and aspiring television actress.

Ms. Wright had been arrested at Miami International Airport June 5, 1981. Customs inspectors said they found almost a half-pound of cocaine hidden behind a framed picture she was carrying following her arrival from Cartagena, Colombia.

She testified that a friend had given her the picture in Cartagena and asked her to bring it in to the United States.

A North Little Rock, Ark. resident, Eugene Brown, teases an unhappy opossum that was roused by an early-morning fire earlier this week. Firefighters hosing down the burning building found the animal hiding in the weeds in an attempt to dry out before trying to find another home.

Ground Zero is home land to Floridian

HOMESTEAD, Fla. (AP) — After the Big One blows away his neighbors, Wally Keirstead plans to rekindle Western civilization with the Bible, the "Rubaiyat" of Omar Khayyam and a 12-gauge shotgun.

For 20 years, the 74-year-old building contractor has lived on Ground Zero — close enough to Homestead Air Force Base to fear being incinerated by an atomic blast.

"It's been enough to give you white knuckles at times," he booms in a Connecticut Yankee voice.

Although fear of nuclear holocaust has recently re-emerged as a national issue, it has never been far from those residents of South Florida who lived through the 1962 Cuban missile crisis.

For Keirstead and 25,000 others in this city chopped out of the sawgrass and avocado fields of south Dade County, life in the shadow of a possible mushroom cloud is nothing new.

Federal disaster officials say the air base would be a top Soviet priority in a war between the superpowers.

A hit or near-miss on the base would ignite a fireball that would blitz Keirstead's one-story, cement-block home and quiet middle-class neighborhood.

Homestead's first spasm of nuclear missile madness came in the early 1960s. About 120 miles to the south, Cuban President Fidel Castro allowed the Soviet Union to install medium-range ICBMs on the island, 90 miles from Florida.

For months, Homestead lived in anticipation and fear. A war room was set up at Homestead, and an estimated 25,000 military personnel were billeted throughout the southern part of the state.

Mayor Irving Peskoe was there — not in a suit and tie, but wearing khakis as a counsel in the Air Force's Judge Advocate-General's division.

"The fields around Homestead were bristling with anti-missile missiles," says the 62-year-old Peskoe. "At night, you could hear the military convoys rolling down the road to Key West."

'Modulated' engine aids cars' fuel efficiencies

DETROIT (AP) — A new engine that is 14 percent more fuel-efficient than those now being used in mid-size cars is being tested in Italy with promising results, says an engineer for Alfa Romeo's U.S. operations.

Robert Francioni, the engineer, says the new system uses computers to automatically stop fuel from entering two of four cylinders in the engine once the car reaches a steady speed. All four cylinders receive fuel during acceleration.

Alfa Romeo is using the "modulated" system in a two-liter engine it has tested for eight months and 180,000 miles of driving in 10 taxicabs in Milan, Italy. Francioni admits there were some problems with the test but says all but one driver rated the cars very good.

"THE SYSTEM is only one step above what normal electronic fuel injection is today," Francioni says.

"It would be about 14 percent more fuel efficient" in a mid-size car than a regular engine, he adds, but he does not have specific mileage figures for the United States.

Domestic automakers have had problems trying to develop modulated engines.

Currently, the only car made and sold in the United States with a similar modulated engine is a seven- to eight-passenger limousine marketed by General Motors Corp.'s Cadillac division.

It has a V-8, six-liter engine that cuts to six, then four, cylinders. While the Alfa Romeo engine halts only fuel feed, the GM engine also stops air flow into the cylinders, reducing friction as the cylinders continue moving up and down.

THE GM ENGINE was offered for the first time in 1981 models of several Cadillac luxury cars and 166,875 were sold, Cadillac spokesman J. Bruce McCristal says.

Robert J. Templin, chief engineer for Cadillac, says the cars' Environmental Protection Agency mileage improved to about 15 miles per gallon on the highway from 13.5 mpg with a traditional V-8.

Only 1,000 of the engines are expected to be sold in the limousines this year, however, and they no longer are available in other models, McCristal says.

Several customers have filed suit against the No. 1 U.S. automaker, claiming design defects, jerky rides and unreliability. Last summer, GM gave owners of the cars a five-year, 50,000-mile warranty on the engine.

BUT EVEN GM says the modulated engines are the wave of the future.

"There's no question; it's one of the real live things available to us to improve fuel economy," Templin says. "The microprocessor (in the electronic fuel injection) has extra capability. We already have the microprocessors on the cars, so we're just giving it an additional task to do."

Ford Motor Co. is less optimistic about modulated engines. Ford's only try, a 1977 test of a six-cylinder engine that cut to three cylinders in the company's own light-duty truck fleet, found it was not worthwhile, spokesman Robert Harner says.

"IT WAS SCRUBBED after that because the trucks were always so loaded it (the engine shift to three cylinders) didn't get used enough," he says. "And there were little surges and lags that you could feel, and we weren't sure our customers would like that."

Chrysler Corp. spokesman Doug Nicoll says his company is not conducting research on modulated engines.

The modulated engine is not new. GM's Templin says one was produced around World War I and allowed a driver to pull out a rod to disable three of six cylinders.

Home Savings applies for unit

Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Home Savings Association, Midland, has applied to the Texas Savings and Loan Department to establish and operate a remote service unit.

The unit would be established in the lobby of Air Terminal Station in Midland.

Persons wishing to protest the application must do so by Aug. 17. If no protests are received, Savings and Loan Commissioner Alvis Vandygriff may dispense with a hearing on the matter.

Knoxville, Tenn., real estate developer Bill Mullins decided to celebrate his 50th birthday in style — so he threw himself a bash and invited a few friends. Mullins, who's also a tobacco dealer, invited The Charlie Daniels Band, The Oakridge Boys and Willie Nelson to perform — and they all did. Likewise, the hundreds on his guest list responded in kind, filling several acres set aside for the festivities.

Maryland witness barks out objections to judge

TOWSON, Md. (AP) — The star witness in a burglary case had to be removed from court after he barked an objection into the record.

The Baltimore County Court Clerk's office said Sky, an affectionate male collie, was the first dog in county history to receive a formally typed subpoena to appear in court.

The case involved allegations that the dog had been taken by force from its new owners.

The leashed dog trotted into the courtroom Thursday, nuzzling and licking anyone within reach. But as Circuit Judge Frank Cicone began to read the defendants their rights, Sky started barking.

"Is that an objection?" Cicone asked.

To spectators' chuckles, the judge ordered the dog removed from the courtroom and the proceedings continued.

Sky was the basis for charges against Fredericko and Martha Ceresini.

Hotel's business booms thanks to war

PESHAWAR, Pakistan (AP) — Dean's Hotel, a run-down, turn-of-the-century boarding house, is doing a booming business these days, thanks to the war in nearby Afghanistan.

Its clientele ranges from the occasional tourist seeking cheap lodgings to French medical teams biding their time until they cross the border to journalists pursuing stories.

A former army barracks, the hotel is a throwback to the days when British officers swilled ice-cooled gin and tonics under the midday sun or played a gentlemanly game of croquet on the well-manicured expanse of lawn.

Today, that patch of grass serves as an outdoor barbecue: and in the Islamic Republic of Pakistan cocktails have been replaced by tall lime sodas propped up with chunks of ice.

Aside from a few minor modifications, like running hot water, little else has changed since British subalterns occupied those rooms decades before.

Despite rock-hard beds, mosquitoes and ceiling fans that, because of their constant din turn all but the hardiest into insomniacs, a pleasant ambience prevails in this seedy reminder of Pakistan's not-so-distant past.

Undoubtedly, there are better hotels in this dusty, provincial capital 30 miles from the Afghan border, but none offer the "bonhommie" that binds many of the 45 occupants to be found at Dean's on a given day.

In short, Dean's Hotel is the first stop for anybody interested in the goings-on inside Afghanistan, where Moslem guerrillas are fighting Communist government forces and an estimated 85,000 Soviet troops.

For 145 rupees (nearly $15) a night, guests are escorted by an elderly footman to their rooms, which consist of study, spacious sleeping quarters and bathroom. It surely is one of the last great bargains.

A visitor to Dean's first is required to sign the hotel register, volunteering such vital information as religion, passport number and eventual destination.

Crop dusting plane solves beet troubles

TEMPE, Ariz. (AP) — Air Force jets slice the sky above. Sugar beet fields sprawl below. In between sputters an Ag Cat biplane — a crop-duster.

Steven Sanders sits behind the control stick. After passing over a row of utility lines, Sanders' plane dips down abruptly and levels out just as the wheels touch the tops of beets.

Then he releases a whitish trail of sulfur dust.

Just like the old days. These days crops are rarely dusted, the 33-year-old Sanders says. They are sprayed with liquid pesticides.

But sugar beets present a special problem. They sometimes contract a fungus that best can be controlled by sulfur.

After his first half-dozen passes, Sanders lands his Ag Cat at a nearby airstrip. Here, Jeff Hazlett and Russell Kortsen wait to dump more sulfur into the holding tank.

Sanders, like his plane, is covered with a film of sulfur dust.

It has worked its way under his goggles and into his eyes.

Sanders Aviation sits on a county island, just south of the Town of Guadalupe. The Tempe city limits surround the airfield.

The Sanders complex resembles an air museum: Two Ag Cats are flanked by 1940s-vintage Navy biplanes, modified into crop-dusters, though the Navy planes are rarely used for spraying anymore.

Disaster introduction course will be offered

The Midland County Chapter of the American Red Cross, a United Way agency, will offer "Introduction to Disaster Services," a prerequisite course for all Red Cross training courses.

The class will meet from 7 to 10 p.m. at the Red Cross building, 2306 Elizabeth St., Aug. 30.

Learning objectives for participants include the following: what a disaster is and how it affects people and the community; the responsibility of the Red Cross and governmental and non-governmental agencies in alleviating the effects of a disaster; knowing Red Cross authority, policies and regulations applicable to disaster relief; knowledge of disaster assistance available to disaster victims and how Red Cross provides that assistance; and knowing the importance and fundamentals of chapter disaster preparedness planning.

Persons interested in becoming Red Cross disaster volunteers or enrolling in the course may call 684-6161 or drop by the Red Cross building.

Midland Red Cross offers first aid, CPR courses

The Midland County Chapter of the American Red Cross, a United Way agency, will be offering courses in multimedia first aid and cardio-pulmonary resuscitation (CPR) during the months of September and October.

Sessions are scheduled during the day and evening. Interested persons should contact the Red Cross at 684-6161, weekdays between 8:30 a.m. and 4:30 p.m. for further information.

Carole Scott, a 1982 honor graduate of Lee High School, is the recipient of the Orgena Scholarship, made possible by the annual fashion show sponsored by the Orgena Club. Miss Scott was honored at a reception in the home of Mr. and Mrs. David Shearod. She plans to attend Angelo State University where she will major in medical sciences.

Roger Lee, son of Mr. and Mrs. Albert E. Lee Jr. of 1300 Cottonflat Road, is the recipient of a $500 scholarship from Junior Achievement of Midland. Lee, a third-year achiever, was president of his company and has attended the national conference for the past two years. He is one of two scholarship recipients out of 300 members. He plans to attend Midland College where he will major in geology.

Midlander wins award for West German study

Sheri Lea Sellmeyer, 23, is the recipient of a graduate fellowship from the Rotary Foundation of Rotary International for the 1982-83 academic year. The daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ralph L. Sellmeyer of 4519 Crenshaw, Ms. Sellmeyer will study economics at the University of Bonn in West Germany.

She is one of more than 1,200 men and women worldwide who recently received Rotary Foundation scholarships totaling over $18 million. The scholarship includes full cost of study abroad, tuition, books, laboratory fees, lodging, food and travel, and if necessary, language in the study country.

A 1977 graduate of Monterey High School in Lubbock, Ms. Sellmeyer graduated from Baylor University with a degree in journalism and German. She worked with the San Angelo Standard-Times as a news reporter until June.

Recipients of scholarships have the opportunity to speak to Rotary clubs and other groups in both their study and home countries. Ms. Sellmeyer will speak to a number of Rotary clubs in and near Bonn during the coming academic year and will speak to Rotary clubs of West Texas upon her return to the United States.

The purpose of the Rotary scholarship is to promote understanding and friendly relations between peoples of two different nations. There are over 19,000 clubs in 156 countries and geographic regions throughout the world.

Sheri Lea Sellmeyer

Men and women interested in applying for a scholarship for the 1984-85 academic year should submit applications before March 1, 1983.

Frills will be absent in new office building

WASHINGTON (AP) — After eight years of construction, the $137 million Hart Senate Office building will open this fall with its marble floors and skywalks but minus a rooftop restaurant and gymnasium.

While the nine-story building will still be one of the most expensive government structures ever, a variety of frills will be absent, including wood paneling and dimmer light switches initially proposed for senators' offices.

"We still think it will be an exciting building to work in," said George White, the Architect of the Capitol, as he led a group of reporters through completed portions of the spacious marble and glass structure on Thursday.

The building, with a million square feet of space and office suites for 50 senators and their staffs, will be ready for occupancy on Nov.1, White said.

White calls the building "a contemporary design based on classical proportions...We didn't want another Greek temple."

"This is like a major corporate headquarters building. But we put a little more quality into it," he said. "Buildings here on Capitol Hill are built to last 100 years."

Each of the 50 Senate suites in the new building has 16-foot ceilings in the inner offices, a private balcony and an internal stairwell leading to an upper level of staff offices.

Senators' offices in the new building are about twice as spacious, on the average, as ones in the older Russell and Dirksen Senate Office Buildings.

The offices will be parceled out after the November elections, with room choice depending upon seniority.

White conceded that many senior senators might opt to keep their old offices, some of which have the wood paneling senators decided to forgo in the new building.

"But I think that, from the response we've had so far, there will be a strong urge to move over here," he said.

The proposed rooftop restaurant and $736,400 gymnasium, however, will remain unfinished because of cost-cutting actions by the Senate, White said.

Wayne Reid

LHS graduate is semifinalist

Wayne Reid, a recent graduate of Lee High School, was announced as a national semifinalist in the Public Speaking contest during the 39th National Junior Achievers Conference held on the campus of Indiana University in Bloomington, Ind., Aug. 8-13.

As a semifinalist, Reid is ranked in the top 16 speakers in the nation. Over 125 persons competed in the contest.

Reid was the highest individual winner from Midland in the last five years.

President of his Junior Achievement Company, Petro Dynamics, sponsored by The Ortloff Corp., Reid was a third-year achiever.

Fourteen other achievers represented Midland in various other contests and workshops.

Sign language popularity increasing

BINGHAMTON, N.Y. (AP) — American Sign Language, usually reserved for communication with the hearing-impaired, is becoming an increasingly popular course on college campuses, says an instructor in sign language at State University of New York at Binghamton.

Carol Carpenter says courses on signing fill rapidly on her campus, where she and colleague Sue Rakow teach an average of 90 students in Sign I and II. Both are former teachers of the deaf and have collaborated on a workbook of sign language exercises, "Say It In Sign," to be published next spring by Charles C. Thomas Publishers, Springfield, Ill.

"It's like learning a foreign language," Mrs. Carpenter says, "and many students are intrigued by signing even though they have no contact with deaf persons or ever expect to."

Evening adult education classes in sign language also fill quickly and the technique is even taught in some residence halls on campus where students knowledgeable in the language are holding informal classes.

"To be honest," Mrs. Carpenter says, "many students want to learn the language so they can communicate 'privately' with friends who already know and use signing."

But what may start as a fad quickly becomes a more serious undertaking, she adds. "Not only is signing a graceful and expressive language," she says, "but we find that learning it brings an intensified awareness of the problems of the deaf in society and the barriers they face."

Baker, Byrd entertain capital with back-and-forth humor

If the Senate ever does go on radio and television, viewers and listeners may discover the "Howard Baker and Robert Byrd show" as an almost regular morning feature.

A recent exchange:

When Baker's 26-year-old daughter, Cissy, captured the GOP nomination in her House race in Tennessee's 4th District last week, Baker wanted colleagues to know he was one proud parent.

"She is still the apple of my eye," dad said.

Minority Leader Robert C. Byrd, D-W.Va., was ready to provide counterpoint, as he usually does given any encouragement.

Volunteered Byrd: "Cornelia lived several hundred years before Christ. She was the mother of Gracchi. She had 12 sons and daughters. She lost all of her children except three.

"One day a neighbor came by and proudly displayed their jewelry, according to Cornelia. Whereupon, she haughtily turned to Cornelia and asked if she had any jewelry. Cornelia, the great Roman woman that she was, turned to her three remaining children and said, 'these are my jewels.' "

Baker thanked Byrd for his kind words.

It wasn't one of Sen. Pete Domenici's sunniest days.

Domenici, R-N.M, chairman of the Senate Budget Committee, expressed open irritation with the way Sen. Donald Riegle, D-Mich., was questioning the panel's witness, Treasury Secretary Donald Regan.

"He's answering, he's answering...You're badgering him," fumed Domenici.

"You don't look badgered. Do you feel badgered?" Riegle asked Regan. "I'll refrain from answering that," the Cabinet officer responded.

Sen. Joseph R. Biden, D-Del., then told Domenici: "Did you have a good morning, Mr. Chairman? You used to be a good guy...Now you're getting mean."

Domenici glowered.

"Obviously there's no place for humor this morning...," Biden said.

Bentsen pleased

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Lloyd Bentsen expressed pleasure Thursday at Congress' approval of his legislation to reduce fraud and abuse in military spending by establishing an independent inspector general to examine defense department activities.

The Texas Democrat called the move "one of the most responsible and cost-efficient steps Congress can take."

TAKE THE LONG VIEW

Who doesn't dream, sometimes? Who doesn't stand gazing into the future, picturing that new house, that graduation day, that wedding ceremony, that new car . . . the thousand and one dreams that man holds in his heart?

We realize that a worthwhile life must contain more than just material satisfactions. Without a confident frame of mind, our future will be nothing but tension and uncertainty. Where can we find this inner feeling of courage that will make things easier for us every hour of every day?

Millions of people find it in the Christian faith. The apostle Paul said that he was strengthened in everything he did by faith in Christ . . . and this truth is constantly being rediscovered by men and women urgently in need of something they can trust.

Faith is the key to peace of mind. With faith, you will be able to move mountains of frustration.

Indian guru Bhagwan Shree Rajneesh maneuvers his Rolls Royce down a dirt road lined with his followers during a five-day celebration on their ranch in central Oregon last month. He is the reason for a big multi-million-dollar center which is being developed in central Oregon.

Guru moves from India to Oregon

RAJNEESHPURAM, Ore. (AP) — His followers each wear a "mala," a 108-bead necklace from which dangles a portrait of their spiritual mentor and focus of their devotions, Bhagwan Shree Rajneesh.

He is the votive hub of a big, multi-million-dollar center being developed in central Oregon as headquarters for a movement that claims 250,000 followers worldwide, thousands of them in the United States.

Rajneesh, 50, who gained his first disciple about a decade ago in Bombay, India, moved his headquarters last year from Poona, India, to a 100-square-mile communal ranch purchased in Oregon for $6 million.

About 2,000 acres are being incorporated as a new city called "Rajneeshpuram."

It was the site on the Fourth of July weekend for an international festival of about 7,000 people. Nearly 1,000 new followers took "sannyas," vows for becoming disciples of Rajneesh, who didn't speak a word publicly.

"SANNYASINS" — the disciples — promise to love "Bhagwan," as he is called, wear red or orange clothing along with the "malas" and take new names, often Hindu in origin.

Besides about 100 meditation centers that have sprung up in major cities of the United States and Canada, the movement also reports extensive followings and meditation centers in West Germany, Britain, Australia, New Zealand, Switzerland, France and Japan.

Followers say Rajneesh used to deliver daily discourses at the Poona center he led from 1974 to 1981, when it closed for the move to America, but he ceased speaking publicly in March that year.

However, his previous discourses have been transcribed into more than 300 books, mostly in English, followers say. They accept his claim to be "enlightened" — a term even his disciples find difficult to define.

SOME DESCRIBE it as being able to separate body, mind and soul. Whatever it is, followers say Rajneesh was enlighted at the age of 21.

"If you have never been out of the cave, how do you describe it?" asks Swami Krishna Deva, who as David Knapp was a California psychologist before he became a sannyasin four years ago.

"I have a feeling for it, but I don't know," he says.

Krishna Deva has been a leader in the planning effort to establish this new city and is part of the five-member Rajneeshpuram City Council.

Earlier this year, commune members had a lengthy legal battle with the community of Antelope, 18 miles away, which tried to vote itself out of existence rather than face takeover by newly arrived voters from the ranch.

That effort was beaten back by some of the disciples, who lived and voted in Antelope. The Antelope City Council agreed in July to stop fighting the Rajneesh after the Rajneesh convinced them that their members would not drive out the old-time residents and waived a $19,000 judgment against the village.

THE KEY TO the movement is surrendering to the love of Rajneesh.

"Some people view surrender as being synonomous with slavery — but it's not," Krishna Deva says.

Rajneesh teaches that Jesus, Buddha, Tao and other religious leaders were enlightened men, such as himself, who taught valuable lessons.

"They were all at the same peak, although they may have come up a different trail," says Krishna Deva.

Rajneesh teaches that God, Nirvana, or whatever one wishes to call it, is attainable within the perfected individual through loss of ego or psychological blocks.

St. Paul's to use fellowship center

St. Paul's United Methodist Church, 4501 Thomason Drive, will use its new fellowship center for the first time Sunday.

Church bonds were sold in May of 1981 to finance the construction. Construction of the 7,106-square-foot structure began in January of 1982. The building cost is slightly in excess of $350,000.

Some 300 people can be seated around tables in the dining room. Sunday, the youth of the church are sponsoring a barbecue for a fellowship meal. Construction personnel are invited to attend.

The new construction is located west of the present buildings and is joined to the old by a glass-fronted hallway which allows people to go from the fellowship center to the sanctuary without going outside. Surfaced parking spaces for 130 cars was also included in the building project.

Unitarian minister attends workshop

The Unitarian Universalist Church of Midland was recently represented at its Southwest District Unitarian Universalist Summer Institute by its minister, the Rev. Daniel Budd and his wife, Cynthia Lehman-Budd.

Budd led a four-part workshop, "The Imagined Journey," conducted one of the morning worship services and participated in an evening panel discussion on "The New Ministry."

The institute, attended by 400 members from Texas, Oklahoma, Arkansas and Louisiana, was held the second week of August at Lake Texoma Lodge at Kingston, Okla.

The theme of the institute was "Youth-Growth," with guest speaker the Rev. Joan Goodwin, extension director from the UU Association at Boston.

Mexican mission trip slides to be shown

The Rev. Pete Adcock will show a slide presentation of his recent mission trip to Creel, Mexico, at 7 p.m. Sunday at the Midland Foursquare Church, 415 W. Alta St.

Adcock, his wife, Ana, and Susan Grigory spent last week distributing 10,000 pounds of corn and beans, 100 blankets and baby layettes along with several hundred pounds of clothing at Creel. Creel is on the edge of the Copper Canyon in Mexico. The Indians there live in hillside caves.

The public is invited to the slide presentation and talk.

Pew Rally to be held at Hollowell

A Pew Rally will be held at Hollowell United Methodist Church, 400 S. Marshall St., at 3 p.m. Sunday. The rally will be conduted by the church's youth group and its minister, the Rev. Hadley R. Edwards.

The public is invited to attend.

Methodist says Russians long for peace

LAKE JUNALUSKA, N.C. (AP) — Back from a two-week trip to the Soviet Union, a World Methodist Council executive says he found the people there yearning for peace.

The Rev. Joe Hale, the council's secretary, says "they wanted me as a Westerner to assure them we have the same objective and not a desire for war."

Hale, who preached six times to various congregations, says people would come to him after the services, saying "'We pray for peace...We pray the thought of peace will be in the mind of President Reagan.'"

Hale commended evangelist Billy Graham's recent visit there as a "very positive thing," and said more personal contacts are needed between the two countries.

Rev. W.O. Johnson

Midland Methodist minister appointed district elder

The Rev. W.O. Johnson, for three years pastor of Greater St. Luke A.M.E. Church, has been appointed presiding elder of the Northwest Texas District.

As presiding elder, Johnson will oversee 21 A.M.E. churches, including the one in Midland. The churches are located in an area which includes Amarillo, El Paso, Ft. Stockton and Brownwood.

The appointment was announced at the A.M.E.'s annual conference held earlier this month.

The Rev. C.L. Boyd will be the new pastor at Greater St. Luke's A.M.E. Church.

Hundreds of Chicagoans wait for hours to get free food

CHICAGO (AP) — Some were elderly, others unemployed. They began arriving as early as 4 a.m., and by the time the food giveaway began at 9:30 a.m., the line stretched for blocks.

When the doors opened at the three-story building next to the Mount Pisgah Missionary Baptist Church, a thousand people were waiting patiently for a free bag of groceries.

"Right now I haven't got a thing in my house to eat," said Cardell Murdock, who said she bought food with $70 a month in food stamps. "I don't know what steak is. I went to bed hungry last night."

About 35,000 shopping bags of food have been given away since the church began the program May 30, said the Rev. Joseph Wells, pastor of the church. Wells also is the director of the Mount Pisgah Food for the Hungry Foundation, a non-profit organization that took over the program in July.

The program distributes food every other Thursday, he said.

Next time, waiting in line won't be enough, Wells said. Food recipients will have to present a small document to get food — a voter registration card.

"We want them to register and vote to help themselves with their vote," Wells, 67, said. Casting a vote is "what we call pulling yourself up by your own bootstraps," he said.

As people entered the building to get their shopping bags stuffed with potatoes, onions, cabbage, spaghetti and other goods, a representative of the Chicago Urban League handed them voter registration forms.

"We need to help our country," Wells told them.

By the time the day's supply of food ran out Thursday, more than 5,000 shopping bags full had been handed out in the predominantly black area of the city's South Side.

"We are living in a depression," said John W. Hardin, 54, who said he had come at 4 a.m. to begin waiting. "Why do you think everybody is pushing to get something to eat?"

William E. Irby, 77, a pensioner, blamed President Reagan, saying, "I don't understand why he is putting so many people out of work...and people have to go to the bread line."

Rev. Israel Leon

Rev. Israel Leon of Mexico to speak at Tent Revival

The Rev. Israel Leon of Tabasco, Mexico, will be the revival speaker at the Tent Revival Tuesday through Aug. 29 at the corner of Terrell Street and Florida Avenue.

Leon has preached in 84 countries around the world in tents, churches, civic centers and arenas. Leon, a member of the Full Gospel Business Men's Association, is a minister of the Assemblies of God Churches.

The public is invited to attend.

Rev. Don Harms

Pastor Don Harms to lead Baptist revival

The Rev. Don Harms, pastor of the First Baptist Church of Monahans, will be the evangelist for the revival services at Bellview Baptist Church, 1710 N. Big Spring St., Sunday through Thursday.

Harms has been very active in the area of evangelism and has served as director of evangelism in the Northern Plains Baptist Convention. He has preached in over 100 revivals and crusades in 15 states and Canada.

A graduate of Hardin-Simmons University at Abilene, Harms has a bachelor of science in Bible and religion. He has also attended Southwestern Baptist Theological Seminary at Fort Worth.

Churches he pastored prior to his arrival at Monahans include Calvary Baptist Church at Stamford, Belvue Baptist Church at Hobbs, N.M., Hillcrest Baptist Church at Carlsbad, N.M., and Southwest Park Baptist Church at Abilene.

Revival services Sunday include the 10:50 service, a 5:30 p.m. showing of a film from the film series "Focus on the Family," and a 6:40 p.m. service.

Weekday services are scheduled for 10 a.m. and 7:30 p.m. A nursery will be provided for each service.

The public is invited to attend.

Baptist church to save Belize

TYLER, Texas (AP) — A single Southern Baptist congregation, Tyler's Green Acres Baptist Church, says it aims to evangelize the entire nation of Belize, a country of 150,000 just south of Mexico.

The church plans to start a center there to train national pastors and over the next five years build 20 church buildings and distribute more than 25,000 Scriptures.

The Rev. Paul W. Powell, pastor of the 4,300-member Tyler congregation, which is noted for its missions undertakings, says the evangelizing plan for Belize is a "faith commitment."

He estimates new church buildings in rural Belize will cost $12,000 to $15,000 each and buildings in Belize City about twice that much. Retired building contractor Joe Barentie is to spend five years in Belize to direct construction.

Abandoned mine turned into giant filing cabinet

EDITOR'S NOTE: Sometimes, there's no place to go but down. Underground. A number of groups, from government agencies to business corporations, are digging deep into the depths of Pennsylvania to store their records and files, in the hope they'll be protected there from theft and natural disaster.

BOYERS, Pa. (AP) — Secreted deep under a wooded western Pennsylvania hillside are millions of documents and miles of computer tape detailing the vital records of citizens and corporations alike.

The data are stored for safekeeping in a cavernous limestone mine about 55 miles north of Pittsburgh. The labyrinth of roadways and vaults carved from rock was abandoned in 1952 by a steel company and taken over by National Underground Storage, Inc. (NUS).

Today, more than 960 clients — from the First National Bank of Slippery Rock, Pa., to several federal agencies that prefer anonymity — have turned the old mine into a gigantic underground filing cabinet.

"I DIDN'T know there was this much paper in the whole world until I got here," says NUS president Arthur Black.

Standing in the aisle of a 1,500-square-foot room, Black is dwarfed by row upon row of gray metal shelves, filled from floor to ceiling with neatly stacked cardboard boxes.

"There are 50,000 boxes in here. And each box holds 3,000 documents, 8½-by-11 inches. That's 150 million documents in this one room, and we can find any one of them within five minutes," he says.

Much of what's deposited in the mine 220 feet down is mundane — canceled checks, tax papers, personnel files, birth and death records, duplicate computer tapes and the like. But there are also plans for nuclear power plants, grades for Ohio State University students and videotapes of all of Mike Douglas' television talk shows.

NUS will not, however, store items of intrinsic value like art works or gold bullion. "That changes the nature of the security here," Black says.

Security, of course, is the prime reason that records are shipped here from all 50 states.

BACK IN the Cold War days of the 1950s, the fear of nuclear fallout prompted clients to go underground with their vital papers and tapes. In fact, NUS' first advertising brochure featured a mushroom cloud from an atomic blast on the cover.

"Today, companies are protecting their records against such things as fire, flood, earthquakes, hurricanes, dissident employees, terrorists and that sort of thing," Black says.

"Also, if a company loses its computer and doesn't have a backup, it can be fatal."

With its limited accessibility, the mine is an "impregnable fortress," according to the company's advertising.

Its rural location is so unobtrusive that it's difficult to find even with a map.

A tunnel leads into the complex, but visitors must first stop their cars at a barrier several hundred feet away from the portal and announce their business into a remote microphone-speaker.

THE NEXT stop is at the portal itself, where a three-ton steel gate bars the entrance. An armed guard checks identification, notes the visitor's destination and issues passes.

Inside, the rough-hewn walls are spray painted silver to reflect light and seal the limestone. It makes the place look like the set of a marooned-in-space science fiction movie.

A musty draft blows constantly at the portal. It is created by two huge fans that circulate 200,000 cubic feet of air per minute in the 80-acre mine, of which 15 acres are developed.

The 56-degree temperature is constant in the tunnels, but at more comfortable levels in the rooms where work is being done. The mine's natural humidity of 95 percent is lowered to about 35 percent in the storage areas.

Electric carts and an occasional truck or car rumble through the honeycombed passages, each clearly marked with signs and protected at various points with firefighting alarms and equipment.

About 650 people work in the mine, most of them federal government employees. In an emergency, Black says everyone can be evacuated in eight minutes.

IN ALL, there are 35 records centers in the mine, some of which are operated privately with NUS acting simply as the landlord.

But the company also operates a records center where clients can store their records in private vaults or have NUS do all the handling, including reference, retrieval, duplicating, storage, transmission and destruction at the end of a specified time.

Just a step away from the gloomy atmosphere of the tunnels, the NUS office is a bright cheery place.Except there are no windows.

"At first I thought working underground would bother me," says Marcia Hailes, sitting at a microfilm viewer scanning canceled checks for a bank that had its records subpoenaed.

"It took a while to get used to it, but now I don't even notice it," she says.

Converting the mine into a records center was a brainstorm conceived by Larry Yont, a former records manager for U.S. Steel Corp. When the company decided to abandon the limestone mine, Yont persuaded the steelmaker to store its documents there and suggested that other space be leased commercially.

U.S. STEEL didn't want to do that, so Yont and a group of investors bought the mine and the land above. U.S. Steel continues to maintain its own records center in an adjoining mine.

Sikorsky Jr. not thrilled by dad's works

HARTFORD, Conn. (AP) — The name of Igor Sikorsky used to open doors to defense contracts at the Pentagon. Now the name is linked with defending the civil rights of war protesters, mistreated prison inmates and victims of discrimination.

Igor Sikorsky, father and son, were alike in their mysticism, but followed different paths toward their visions.

Although the younger Sikorsky, 52, says he did not rebel against his father, he says he was partly driven to become a sympathizer with the protester, the underprivileged and the abused because of the elder Sikorsky's lifelong connection with war machines.

The father of the helicopter, Igor I. Sikorsky, died in 1972.

"I think I did react against my father's name and did grow up seeking an independent life," said the son in a recent interview.

"I started doing volunteer work in the prisons," he said. "I saw that the system wasn't always fair, was biased and based on money, based on class, based on race and a whole wide spectrum of the haves and the have-nots within the system."

Thus, concluded the Yale-educated resident of Hartford, who practices law here, the United States should never have gotten involved in the Vietnam War.

"It was that 'white-is-right' syndrome," he said, adding that he continues to fight for the side he sees as oppressed by representing, for example, older workers who are fired by corporations because of their age.

His father, whose plant in Stratford has supplied airplane parts and helicopters to the nation's defense for decades, indirectly limited his son's anti-war activism.

Sikorsky said that while he often marched in anti-Vietam War demonstrations, he tried to restrict his activism to providing counsel for other protesters. "Given my background," he said, "that was sort of necessary."

His father was an immigrant from Kiev, Russia, who built the first four-engine, clipper-type flying boat and developed the helicopter into its key role today in commercial and military fields. He left home at 19 to study aeronautics at a Paris air show and returned to Russia to build aircraft under the czar.

After settling in the United States, he made his home in Trumbull, Conn., where he and his wife brought up four sons and a daughter.

"We really didn't know (that our father was well known) at the time," the son says.

The children, none of whom is employed by Sikorsky Aircraft, received no pressure from their father to follow in his footsteps, according to Sikorsky. But he recalls that their father, whom he considered at the time an "absentee parent," devoted his life almost entirely to flying, science and astrophysics.

"I think he had a vision that he would build a helicopter. He talked about his vision of the future. He used to tell us as kids, 'You will see people on the moon.' That was in 1938. 'I won't — I won't make it.' But he was still alive — his eyesight was failing — but he saw a man on the moon," the son recalls.

Sikorsky says he doesn't feel a close tie to his heritage, although he has visited the Soviet Union twice and speaks Russian. While serving in the U.S. Air Force during the Korean War, Sikorsky used his second language to debrief Soviet defectors in Austria.

Today, he is a divorced father of three, including a son, Igor, who studies at Dartmouth.

Like his father, who was a deeply religious man, Sikorsky reads and studies about many faiths. He has written a book, unpublished, about an early American hypnotist who used his powers to heal. Sikorsky also practices EST, or Erhard Seminars Training, and asks that his law partners practice it.

A former member of the Connecticut Alcohol and Drug Abuse Council and a state human rights commissioner, he has remained active in public life. He has run twice, unsuccessfully each time, for public office.

For Colorado's Needles, specter of less water looms large, near

By The Los Angeles Times-Washington Post News Service

NEEDLES, Calif. — Down by the Colorado River some of the local citizens are lazing away a torrid summer afternoon, much as they have since this town was founded in the 19th century. A few stand waist-deep in the water, blinking away the heat, or tuck themselves into inner tubes. For Needles, a workingman's town planted deep in the Mojave Desert, life without the river is hard to imagine.

Ever since Needles was established as a way station for the Southern Pacific railroad, the people here have not only swum in the river, they have watered their lawns with it, filled their bathtubs with it, and drunk it. Driving through his town, Bill Claypool says the river has been such a constant in the life of Needles that if townspeople were collared on the sidewalk and told what was coming, they would not believe it.

Claypool, a member of the city's utility board, motions toward the group of bathers whose images shimmer in an afternoon that is pushing 118 degrees. "The river is right there, where it's always been," he says. "How can you tell people that someone hundreds of miles away now owns their water, and three years from now they won't have enough to survive?"

NEEDLES, POPULATION 4,120, is in big trouble. The source of its problems lies in the grim and continuing struggle over ownership of rights to the Colorado, the principal source of water for most of the Southwest. For 50 years the Southwestern states and the huge water agencies that represent them have waged legal war on each other for those rights; somewhere in that time, Needles became an orphan of the war.

It is a measure of the complexity of events that almost no one agrees now on just when that took place, but the result is clear: In 1985 Needles' allotment of water from the Colorado will be cut by more than half. The water lost to Needles will go instead to distant cities in Arizona and California.

For the huge water agencies and the cities they serve, the gain amounts to a pittance. Needles will sacrifice roughly 2,500 acre feet of water from the 3,500 it now takes. An acre foot is the amount of water required to cover one acre to a depth of one foot, or about the amount of water used by a family of four in a year.

The Metropolitan Water District of Southern California, on the other hand, will have rights to about half a million acre feet on the Colorado; the Central Arizona Project, due to come on line in 1985, will have rights to 1.2 million acre feet.

For Needles, the lost water amounts to a death threat. Needles has never grown much and currently is the only city in California with a population smaller than its pre-World War II level. Known chiefly for its summer heat and as the fictional home of Snoopy's erstwhile brother, Spike, its demands remain at a modest level. Even so, with less than half its water supply left, the people of the town probably would have sufficient water to do little more than drink and bathe.

In his more jocular moments Claypool says he has calculated that the city, if it uses water normally, will have enough water to last until May 5 of each year after 1985. The obvious solution, he says, is for Needles to close down on May 5 and open up again the next January, when the city can begin pumping again.

OTHERWISE THE scenario would run something like this: Water would be rationed to drinking and minimal bathing; lawn watering and car washing would be prohibited; no commercial or residential growth could occur; no swimming pools would be allowed; the city's golf course and parks would be shut down and returned to sagebrush and mesquite.

All of this has left the city fathers of Needles in a state of extreme upset. In June the city's mayor, David B. Daniel, wrote to the federal Bureau of Reclamation saying the city would refuse to sign contracts sanctioning the division of water rights.

After all, he noted, Needles was one of the oldest settlements along the Colorado and was doing nicely long before the huge dam projects came along with their pipelines to Los Angeles and Phoenix. All the city wanted, he added, was to continue as before.

From the standpoint of Needles' officials, their city is on the way to becoming another Owens Valley, Calif., the historic symbol of an isolated region that lost control of its future through the workings of water agencies in distant cities.

Needles' principal ire has been directed at the Metropolitan Water District and the state attorney general's office, both of which, Claypool says, worked to deprive the town of its historical water rights over the past decades.

"It began in the 1920s when all these state officials came through Needles trying to sell the idea of Boulder Dam (now Hoover Dam). They told us that Needles had ample water rights, it didn't have to worry. I guess we believed them," Claypool says.

IN FACT, THE construction of Boulder Dam changed things forever in the lower Colorado. With its huge storage capacity guaranteeing a year-round flow, the dam project allowed the Metropolitan Water District and others to build pipelines from the river to feed their growing populations. In the process, the water agencies were forced to settle the question of who owned the water in the river and how much each agency could draw out.

Those questions eventually were settled among the agencies but somehow Needles was forgotten. Sanguine in the reassurances given the city by state officials and without substantial resources to hire attorneys, Needles did not participate in the negotiations.

Still, almost no one suspected the eventual repercussions for Needles until 1963, when the U.S. Supreme Court ruled that other states, principally Arizona, had substantial water rights to the Colorado. California was forced to surrender a large share of its Colorado supply by the decision. With only so much water left — about 4.4 million acre feet for the state as a whole — the various California agencies once again sat down to decide who would get what.

What Needles got was 950 acre feet per year. This figure was produced after several years of review by the attorney general's office and was based roughly on Needles' use in 1929, the year other agencies were negotiating their rights far into the future.

Six convicted in area paroled by Clements

Austin Bureau

For a five-year-old fisherman, Frank Hickman, left, has a large amount of luck. Hickman and his eight-year-old cousin, Jason, landed this 32-pound snapping turtle earlier this week while casting into a lake at a Toledo, Ohio park. Frank's father, Brad, said the snapper was too big for the family bathtub, so it was returned to the water in the Ottawa River near their home.

Would 'grit' help paper's troubles?

WILLIAMSPORT, Pa. (AP) — Grit turned a troubled 100 last month, beset by declining circulation and rising costs that could spell bad news for the country's biggest little "good news" newspaper.

Largely unknown in the nation's big cities, the tabloid-sized weekly newspaper offers a smorgasbord of family features with such titles as "Twins: Twice the Fun for Mom and Dad," "Old Grape Juice Provokes Barnyard Uproar" and "Indiana Cop Uses Puppets to Solve Crimes," mixed among recipes, dress patterns and ads for mail order products, farm equipment and health aids.

Its contents remain relatively unchanged since Dietrick Lamade, a 23-year-old German-born printer, took over the paper in 1884, two years after it was first published.

No one's sure where Grit got its name, says President James Crossley. "We think it comes from the old American 'stick-to-it' fortitude," he said. "It means 'true grit.' "

GRIT'S BREAD-AND-BUTTER readers have been people from rural areas, particularly the South and Midwest. But its audience has aged and new, younger readers have not picked up the paper loved and revered by an older generation.

Huge postal and newsprint increases severely pinched revenues and forced Lamade's grandchildren to sell the weekly in March 1981 to ADVO-System Inc., a direct-mail printer and distributor based in Hartford, Conn.

"We were running out of steam," said James Lamade, a grandson and former Grit vice president. "It came to the point where we didn't have the wherewithal to continue it as a viable publication."

With a new owner came change. Long-time editors, born and raised here, were replaced and Edwin Goodpaster, a veteran editor with Time and the Washington Post, was hired as president and publisher.

Luring new and younger readers was a high priority for Goodpaster, an avid outdoorsman who once edited a string of rural papers. Hired in November, he jumped into the job with a zest that impressed the Grit news staff.

For the first time, copies of the paper, marked with praise or criticism, came down to the newsroom from the front office.

The national edition, which in 1978 was dressed up with a picture coverpage to attract newsstand and supermarket sales, was steered on a course closer to America's rural heart.

A network of stringers was revitalized; editorials were turned over to reader-written essays; and columnists focusing on family or rural life were added.

ONE LETTER-WRITER, Corrine Pollak of Hartwick, N.Y., so impressed Goodpaster that he hired her to write a weekly column chronicling day-to-day events as seen from the restaurant she and her husband own.

But Goodpaster left abruptly in June. His departure reportedly stemmed from differences over spending priorities, but neither he nor Crossley would comment.

Then the new owners announced a layoff that trimmed 10 percent of Grit's workforce and cut the editorial staff from 25 to 15, sparking rumors the paper was about to fold.

The paper's problems are reflected in its circulation figures. From a peak of 1.5 million in 1962, Grit steadily lost readers until last year, when its circulation sank to about 650,000.

Grit also lost many of its biggest boosters, a sales force of boys and girls which at one time numbered 35,000. They hawked the paper in return for $3 to $5 in weekly profits or prizes. That figure has now fallen to 12,000.

Over the years, Grit has counted John Glenn, Gene Autry, Tommy Dorsey, Burl Ives and Loretta Lynn among its sales crew. Today they sell the paper at 45 cents per copy; on the newsstand it costs 50 cents.

Changing and more affluent lifestyles have dried up that delivery system.

Survival's most important in this game

EDITOR'S NOTE: AP Writer Elizabeth Noyes recently took part in a new game, an adult fantasy played out with air guns and paint.

By ELIZABETH NOYES
Associated Press Writer

SUTTON, N.H. — The convoy of subcompact cars winds down a country lane, onto dirt and gravel, and into the green glow of the forest. When it can't go any farther, the test begins.

It's the National Survival Game, a contest pitting two teams of players wearing camouflage and face paint and carrying air guns in a grown-up version of "Capture the Flag."

The object is to snag the opposing team's flag and bring it back to your team's flag station. Each team works out its own strategy. Players roam the 30-acre area, picking each other off with paint guns which are accurate to about 30 yards. If you're hit, you're out.

VETERANS AGREE there is honor in lasting the full two hours without shooting or being shot. Getting the flag is gravy.

As you leave the highway, you wonder what it will be like. Then you wonder why accountants, executives and female body builders pay $145 apiece to sneak through the woods and shoot paint pellets at each other.

Some who hear of these goings-on in the New Hampshire outback are scornful and a little unsettled. When I tell a friend about my assignment, he narrows his eyes and snorts, "You're not actually going to play this game..."

But those who come to be shocked by neofacist, paramilitary escapades or looking for macho action will be disappointed. The experience is simpler and subtler than that. Many players come away knowing more about themselves and with an unexpected feeling of affection for fellow players, a sense of the tribe.

Among the 24 people who reconnoiter from near and far on this sweltering Saturday, some with wife and kids in tow, are three accountants; a real estate manager for AT&T; a high-school graduate about to go to college; a reporter who came to cover the sport months ago and can't quit; and an oil company manager.

"I COME FROM the other jungle, the city. But here, there are rules. And I have a gun," says Michelle Adler, a delicate New York marketing consultant and amateur body-builder who grew up on Army bases.

"I think it's going to be fun," she says brightly as she smears tri-color makeup on my skeptical face. "If you start to think about it too much, you put other things into it." We are the only women taking part today.

The game's three founders are a writer and woodsman, Charles Gaines; a New York stock trader, Hayes Noel; and a former ski-shop owner, Bob Gurnsey. About a year ago, they started arguing about transferring survival skills from the business world to the bush. Noel said he could tough it out, be king of either jungle. They came up with the game as a way to test the theory.

"I don't think you have to get philosophical about it. I mean, it's fun just to get dirty and run around"

A professional forester won the first match. The day I played, the stock trader captured the enemy flag. Gaines says the debate is still open.

Word of the game, which has all the trappings of a military exercise, got around and the curious descended. The partners packaged a game kit — $145 for gun, holster, pellets, goggles and 38-page rule book — and business boomed.

MOST PLAYERS SAY the gun is incidental, a piece of equipment like a tennis racket. "It's a way of tagging someone for middle-aged men who are too fat and lazy to run around that much," says Bob Curtiss of New Jersey, the AT&T man.

Before the game begins, Curtiss already sports a mask of sweat over his face paint. "It's more than the heat. I'm geared up for the game."

Curtiss is a Vietnam veteran. "Don't make a big deal out of that," he says quietly. "People are bound to misinterpret that. I can tell you, this bears no resemblance to anything there."

The games follow no regular schedule, but have been played every few weeks this summer, each session attracting reporters. This day a French film crew tags along, a fellow from National Public Radio and yours truly.

Teams are assigned. The good guys wear red armbands and shoot yellow paint pellets. We meet at our flag station to devise a strategy. Our choice is to concentrate on the element of surprise.

Two will stay to guard the flag, two will watch the open field for enemy players on the offensive, and the rest of us — in a departure from common strategy — will make a beeline about half a mile to the yellow-team flag.

THIRTY MINUTES INTO the game, I've collapsed in a grove of small pines after running blindly through the woods, falling down three times and losing my new camouflage hat. I'm concentrating on breathing through my nose again. I need to go to the bathroom and my goggles are steaming up. Then I hear something more than the blood marching in my ears.

There: an arm with the enemy's yellow insignia. I freeze, feeling smug and sneaky. The big guy with the beret in my sights.

Bang! He jumps. But there's no paint.

It would take me five minutes to cock the gun and drop another pellet from the holding chamber into the barrel. He's going to blow me away. I curl up in a ball and wait to be shot.

"Good stalking," he says, gently breaking a paint pellet on my back with his hand to spare me the sting of a shot at close range. A wave of humiliation and relief passes over me.

My executioner, trying to be nice, explains the loaded pellet can fall out of the barrel if you run with your gun pointing down.

Gerard Hoar, a young certified public accountant, has just joined the defunct players on the other side of the orange plastic ribbon that separates the playing field from real life. He's sitting on the bumper of a car looking a little dazed.

"I don't think you have to get philosophical about it. I mean, it's fun just to get dirty and run around," he says, smiling weakly and mopping the green-stained sweat from his forehead.

DURING A CATERED picnic lunch after, the high-school graduate says he was scared. "It was a weird feeling, don't you think?" asks Leon LaVande, his eyes wide and ringed with the marks left by his safety goggles.

"But it was fun, a challenge," he adds. "I didn't want to shoot anybody. I'd rather go unseen and unheard.

"War is gross," he says. "But this isn't war. It's fun and games. It's definitely an intense game. But I think that's how games should be played, intensely. Otherwise, they don't really work."

Gaines, a gun-control advocate, says he understands why some people think the game is bizarre. "It combines an innocence and a little-boy quality with the use of guns. I feel ambivalent myself. But they're guns only in the semantic sense."

"On the other hand," he says, "it would lose some of its appeal if we ran around throwing tomatoes or balloons filled with paint at each other. There's a lot of metaphorical freight put into the game by the guns. And your personality becomes manifest in the way you play. To date, we haven't had one gun freak or certified nut turn up to play. Maybe it's a question of time; I hope our luck holds.

"Some people believe we've all got to be facist, weird, cruel or crazy. But really, the game has a kind of sweetness to it, strange as that sounds."

Scott Smith, a gas station owner, travels from Cambridge, N.Y., every time he hears a game is on.

LURKING NEAR HIS flag station, Smith spots an enemy player making off with his team's flag. They chase each other through the knee-high tangle of weeds and brambles. Near 100 degrees in the shade, swathed in camouflage shirts and head-nets, they run around and around, more and more slowly.

"I heard a pfffft, which usually means his CO-2 is out, so I charge," says Smith. "But he's pointing right at me. We shoot at each other and then stop and check each other over for any paint.

"We couldn't find any, so I ask him if his gun is loaded. He says no. So I say, 'Well, mine is. And I don't want to shoot you, so why don't you give me the flag.' He did. We were both relieved."

'Wood lot' receives new name

ALBANY, N.Y. (AP) — In the old days, folks who wanted a steady supply of wood for the stove planted some trees and called it a wood lot. No more.

The wood lot now is a "biomass energy plantation," according to the state's Enery Research and Development Authority.

The authority announced Thursday that "New York's first biomass energy plantation" will be dedicated at the Reynolds Metals plant in Massena on Aug. 26.

The Reynolds Metals Company, which has a big aluminum plant at Massena, planted about 600 acres worth of fast-growing, hybrid poplars. The trees will be used to produce wood chips, which will be used to fuel heaters for the plant.

Mexican teen-ager charged in shooting

SAN ANGELO, Texas (AP) — A Mexican youth has been charged with assault in the shooting of a U.S. Border Patrol officer near Redford, 16 miles southeast of Presidio.

Authorities said the youth, about 17, gave them a name and date of birth, but both were believed to be false. He told officers he lives in Ojiniga, Mexico.

The youth was charged Thursday with shooting Border Patrol agent Paul Conover during a shootout Tuesday night along the Rio Grande, eight miles down river from Redford.

Conover was listed in serious but stable condition at an El Paso hospital, where he underwent surgery Wednesday for gunshot wounds in the lower legs and buttocks.

The youth was in serious but stable condition at an Odessa hospital, where he was being treated for shotgun wounds in the legs.

Conover and another Border Patrol agent observed two people, believed to be undocumented Mexicans, crossing the Rio Grande late Tuesday, authorities said. The officers tracked the two and were attempting to arrest them when the shooting occurred.

Machine gun developed in London

In a London gun factory in 1884-85 an American, Hiram Maxim, invented the machine gun, which fired 11 shots a second from a single barrel.

Political quacks dupe public on Social Security

By DONALD C. BAUDER

Robert Vesco. IOS Ltd. 1972.

Stanley Goldblum. Equity Funding. 1973.

American politicians. Social Security. 1982.

Keep these rogues in mind; they have a lot in common. Their game is hoodwinking the public. And it now appears that, in the Social Security imbroglio in the election of 1982, the political mountebanks will out-Vesco Vesco on the subject of Social Security and its solvency.

The Democrats charge the Republicans want to cut Social Seccurity benefits. The Republicans want to wait to comment until after the election.

And that's idiotic. President Reagan, and Ted Kennedy, and every politician with an IQ above 100 — and that admittedly is not many — knows that Social Security is utterly, hopelessly insolvent. The government has said it won't be able to pay Social Security checks next year. The crisis could come sooner.

AS A MATTER of fact, if Social Security were operated in the private sector, it would have been declared insolvent 10 years ago, and the perpetrators would have been sent to prison. Instead, in 1972, benefits were raised 20 percent and were indexed to inflation. During that decade, the maximum annual benefit jumped 200 percent.

Some political ads point out that Franklin Delano Roosevelt launched Social Security with noble ideals. That may be true, but even FDR did not envision Social Security as a guarantee of a pleasant retirement. It was a stopgap measure against old-age poverty for some people.

A. Haeworth Robertson, who once championed Social Security, and now is in the reform vanguard, points out that the government has been misleading the public on Social Security for years. The bureaucrats, dishonestly talking about "contributions" paid to a "trust fund" under an "insurance" program, led Americans to believe that their Social Security benefits represent a return, with interest, on the money they have paid into the system.

That is, of course, a total lie. As Time Magazine pointed out (somewhat sheepishly) recently, "The aged have been misled for two generations into believing that Social Security payments constitute no more than a return to them of the payroll taxes they have paid during their working years. This is dramatically untrue. The average retired person today can expect to collect lifetime benefits five times as great as the total taxes he or she once paid, plus interest."

J. Peter Grace, chairman of New York's W.R. Grace & Co., has figured it another way: "In only 9.7 to 13.3 months, a 65-year old retiree gets back his entire 45 years of Social Security contributions."

ALTHOUGH THEY get their full pay-ins back in 10 to 14 months, "A retired couple can expect to live 173 months, or 13 to 17.8 times the time needed to recoup total contributions. It is no wonder the Social Security System is heading for financial disaster," said Grace.

In its early days, there were more than 40 working Americans for every retired one. Now we're down to less than 3-to-1 and inexorably dropping to 2-to-1.

Result: The trust funds, or "reserves" for Social Security, are about used up. "Serious depletion of trust funds has occurred four times in the past decade — in 1973, 1977, 1980 and now in 1982," noted Joseph McAlinden of Wall Street's Argus Research Corp.

But, he warned, "In the past, Congress has averted debilitating depletions by raising payroll taxes, permitting inter-fund borrowing (among the Old Age, Disability and Hospital Insurance funds) and making relatively minor changes in benefit formulas. Today, no single one of these options would be sufficient to stave off a financial crisis before the end of next year."

Indeed, Business Week Magazine pointed out that Medicare is headed for insolvency by the late 1980s; if Social Security borrows from Medicare, it will just hasten Medicare's demise.

Gail Naylor is among the scientists trying to save the wilderness-based peregrine falcons from extinction by introducing them to a new urban habitat in Los Angeles.

Falcons adapt to urban habitat

Washington Post News Service

LOS ANGELES — Cruising above a downtown freeway, 10 or 15 miles per hour faster than the legal speed limit, a year-old male peregrine falcon scans the landscape below, looking for lunch. The two huge, striking black eyes that seem to overwhelm his face constantly register in his brain visual signals that have a sharpness and depth of focus so sophisticated humans may never know exactly what it is like.

It is today — or any day — about noon. In the sky 1,800 feet above the congestion of downtown Los Angeles, the falcon has leveled out of an easy climb that has brought him to hunting altitude from his roost on one of twin office towers.

The day's menu flies by below — a flock of ordinary city pigeons. By evolution, they are not the peregrine's natural diet. That should be shore birds, swallows or wild sparrows. But the peregrine is nothing if it is not a survivor.

AND TO SURVIVE, with the help of scientists unwilling to let the peregrine succumb to the modern dangers of DDT and other human-wrought perils, the peregrine has become very, very fond of pigeons.

The young falcon, flying more than 1,000 feet above the flock, picks out the pigeon he wants. Almost casually, the peregrine starts to beat his wings — they have a span of about 30 inches — and turns nose down into a steep, nearly vertical dive. Gravity and the flapping quickly accelerate the bird. Still watching the target pigeon attentively, the peregrine begins to drop out of the sky more quickly than a rock could if dropped from an airplane. His speed: something on the order of 180 to 200 miles per hour. No other bird can go faster.

After flapping to gain as much extra speed as possible, the peregrine folds its wings and continues to drop — a perfectly aerodynamic teardop-shaped missile, hurtling at the prey below. The slower, stupider pigeon attempts an evasive maneuver, but the peregrine has the upper hand.

IT FOLDS ITS TALONED feet as if it were making a pair of fists, tucking inside each fist claws as sharp and strong as a house cat's.

In a split second, the falcon is on the pigeon. With the two talon fists, it punches the pigeon with a ferocity that Gerry Cooney came to understand in his recent encounter with Larry Holmes. The pigeon, stunned, starts to fall from the sky. The peregrine redeploys its wings, turns over on its back in the air and catches the pigeon with its feet.

Still in mid-flight, the peregrine grabs the pigeon in its beak, using a specially evolved notch to break the prey's neck. Then, still flying, the peregrine tucks the pigeon under its tailfeathers, to maintain the falcon's aerodynamic shape, and flaps off to find a quiet place to eat.

In this case, the noontime picnic spot is a ledge near the 35th floor of a towering bank building. All of this has happened in less than 30 seconds. The crowds of humans below didn't even know it had occurred.

THIS IS NOT SOME sort of academic hypothesis. Bird experts who are fighting to help the peregrine save itself are delighted to report that exactly what has been described here is occurring in Los Angeles right now.

This is all the result of the first attempt in Los Ageles, made last year at about this time, to introduce — reintroduce, actually, to be accurate historically — the peregrine into the urban evironment.

Three peregrines were set free on the roof of a high-rise building in the western part of the city last year. Two of them are known to have survived their first and most crucial year in the skies of Los Angeles. One is thought to have died.

Encouraged by this success, peregrine biologists set three more falcons free in the same area recently, followed by three others at a spot near Boney Ridge in the wilderness of the Santa Monica Mountains a day later.

OTHER RELEASES from Washington state to San Diego will put a total of 50 young peregrines into urban and wild skies — a number of new birds equal to about half the entire peregrine population thought to be living in California now. Natural mortality rates for young peregrines run as high as 50 percent.

Without fanfare, in a car filled with cardboard boxes originally made for packing oranges, the new batch of birds for western Los Angeles arrived five weeks after they hatched as part of a unique program run by the Santa Cruz Predatory Bird Research Group at the University of California, Santa Cruz, and the Western Foundation of Vertebrate Zoology.

On the roof of the high-rise directly above the bandstand of a prominent local restaurant, the new peregrines sat, waiting for their wings to mature and for a woman named Gail Naylor, who will watch over their movements intently for the next six weeks; to set them free.

YOUNG PEREGRINE falcons survived a harrowing, potentially fatal fall from the roof of a skyscraper. The incident confirms, biologists believe, that the endangered bird will have no problem adapting to the urban environment of Los Angeles.

The incident, described by one peregrine expert as "downright scary," occurred when one of the three chicks put in the rooftop roost there was blown off the building by a gust of wind.

The 6-week-old male falcon had never flown before, though peregrine experts believe it would have attempted a test flight on its own later in the day. The wind gust, however, tossed the one-pound chick over the side of the building as a half dozen human observers looked on helpless, through binoculars from the roofs of surrounding high-rises.

The young falcon, said Lloyd Kiff, curator of the Western Foundation of Vertebrate Zoology, plummeted halfway down the skyscraper. At about the building's 10th floor, Kiff said, the young falcon finally deployed its untested wings and managed to slow the plunge.

Birmingham, Ala., no longer ruled by Vulcan

Washington Post News Service

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. — From his perch atop Red Mountain, Vulcan the Iron Man, named for the Roman god of the forge, still watches over the city he has symbolized for generations. But the Birmingham he stands for is vanishing.

Until recently, Vulcan was Birmingham. Iron and steel, furnace and foundry, pipe and rail, all were the essence of life here, the foundation of the vast industrial community that earned Birmingham its title of Pittsburgh of the South.

Then, at the end of June, United States Steel Corp., the giant of the industry, linchpin of Birmingham's economy for much of this century, closed the last production facility at its mammoth Fairfield works. Big Steel, which once employed about 25,000 workers here, sent home the last 3,000 and shut down the furnaces that once blackened the sky for miles around.

Birmingham, like the nation itself, is going through a rite of passage that is transforming the community.

Just beneath the surface of American society, two powerful, growing currents are on the move, tearing down, rebuilding and utterly changing the world of work.

FROM ONE DIRECTION, computers, industrial robots, office automation and other products of a technological explosion are transforming the nature of jobs.

Lunch-bucket, factory America is disappearing rapidly, giving way to an economy increasingly dominated by high-technology and service jobs. Not since industry supplanted agriculture more than a century ago has there been such a change in the work place.

At the same time, massive shifts in the makeup of the working population are occurring. The baby boom generation, born in the 20 years after World War II, is almost entirely in the work force. Now the number of young people reaching working age is declining sharply.

The work force is becoming older, more female, less urban and less Northern. Minority groups with traditionally high unemployment rates will comprise a disproportionately large part of new job seekers.

If the experts' worst fears come true, these two forces will produce painful mismatches in the kinds of skills that large numbers of Americans bring to the economy and the kinds of skills the economy requires, swelling the numbers of the unemployed and the underemployed.

IN BIRMINGHAM, with each passing month, fewer and fewer people are earning their living in the steel and iron mills that built the city. More and more are employed in education, services, transportation, electronics and the new industries that are supplanting the grimy, gritty blue-collar factories of the past.

The Birmingham metropolitan area, which has a population of 850,000, lost 10,000 maufacturing jobs in the 1970s, most of them in the blast furnaces of a declining steel industry.

In the first two years of this decade, more manufacturing jobs have vanished as U.S. Steel shut down and the Pullman-Standard rail car plant in Bessemer was closed. But in the same period the area has added more than 100,000 non-manufacturing jobs.

These new jobs are in insurance, government, retail trade, transportation and medical research and education. The University of Alabama in Birmingham and its medical school are now the area's biggest employer.

The shutdown of U.S. Steel, which once would have bankrupted and demoralized all of Birmingham, caused hardly a ripple in the handsome new "office parks" and orderly, planned communities that have sprung up to the city's south and east.

ACROSS THE NATION, jobs in services and finance now outnumber those in the production of goods, such as manufacturing, mining and agriculture.

"We are probably in the midst of a work revolution that will equal the great change that moved us from a primarily agricultural society to a primarily production-based society," said Richard Balzer of the polling firm Yankelovich, Skelly & Wright. "More and more, working with one's head is replacing working with one's hands."

Today, Westinghouse Corp., a diversified manufacturer, describes half of its employees as "white collar," a ratio that is true of the nation's entire work force.

Birmingham reflects that trend. Manufacturing and mining employed 30.5 percent of the work force in 1970, and 21.6 percent last year, according to the Alabama Department of Industrial Relations. With the closing of U.S. Steel and inevitable impact on local suppliers that is soon to follow, the change is likely to accelerate, business and labor leaders here say.

AS A RESULT, unemployment and despair are running high in the western end of Birmingham and the neighboring communities of Fairfield and Bessemer.

But at the university campus, at the hospitals and in the new commercial and retail centers at the other end of the county, the job market is growing for those with the skills to move into it.

"The raw materials needed by services are not the same as those needed by steel," said J. Dudley Pewitt, vice president for administration of the University of Alabama in Birmingham (UAB).

"When you came over that mountain 25 years ago, the sky was dark. The white collars on schoolgirls' dresses were dirty before they got to school. Now we're strong in insurance and engineering. ..."

Pewitt's institution, a sprawling campus that covers 62 blocks near downtown Birmingham, now has 8,400 full-time workers, many of them professionals in medicine and engineering who hold jobs for which displaced steel workers could never qualify.

Pewitt is president-elect of the Birmingham Area Chamber of Commerce, voice of the economic power structure here, reflecting UAB's dominant position.

Man pedals bike throughout world

Washington Post News Service

In the 25 years he spent driving trucks from coast to coast, 70-year-old Art Krug figures, he rolled up more than 2 million miles — "like four trips to the moon and back."

"I still can't stop," he said the other day as he rested at the top of a steep grade overlooking the mouth of the Russian River in Northern California. "Only now I'm getting a closer look at the countryside."

Krug said he has ridden his bike all over North America and, in fact, the world.

He said he has pedaled through Hawaii, Mexico, New Zealand, Australia, Canada, Alaska, the Near East and all over Europe on both sides of the Iron Curtain. He is planning a bike trip through China.

"This has been my home for the last two years," said Krug, giving the seat of his bicycle an affectionate pat.

Attached to the bike were what he called "all my worldly possessions." Four plastic trash cans held his food, cooking utensils, clothing, radio, books, magazines, letters and personal papers. Strapped front and rear were his sleeping bag and rain gear.

Confiscated turtle eggs hatch in California

Washington Post News Service

BURLINGAME, Calif. — The illegal aphrodisiac trade that is contributing to the demise of the endangered Olive Ridley sea turtle is now being used to help increase the species.

Each year more than 2,000 fertile sea turtle eggs, believed by some to have aphrodisiac effects, are confiscated from smugglers by federal officers.

Last January, Ken McCloud, Fish and Wildlife inspector for the port of San Francisco, and his secretary, Rose Blundell, took 11 of those eggs and placed them in an incubator.

About two months later, eight of the eggs, each about the size of a Ping-Pong ball, produced a half-dollar-size turtle.

The rare turtles, now with six-inch shells, are being raised in eight tanks in Blundell's bedroom.

"The turtles demand a lot of attention and tender loving care, and my husband, our three daughters and son agreed to help me in this project," Blundell said.

McCloud and Blundell plan to fly to Costa Rica this fall, charter a boat and release the eight turtles 10 miles out in the Pacific.

Eight Olive Ridleys certainly are not going to make a major contribution to the continuation of the endangered species," McCloud said, "but it's a first step."

Next, the two hope to expand the project, financing the effort out of their own pockets.

The experiment in hatching the sea turtles has gone so well that McCloud and Blundell hope to hatch 300 to 500 sea turtles a year from confiscated eggs.

All U.S. entry ports will ship the sea turtle eggs they recover to the U.S. Fish and Wildlife office in Burlingame, a San Francisco suburb.

"Eating the eggs as an aphrodisiac is a cultural tradition in Mexico, Central and South America," McCloud said, and the eggs command a high price on the U.S. black market among those who believe in their benefits.

Cowboys face Chargers in national TV contest

SAN DIEGO (AP) — The San Diego Chargers and the Dallas Cowboys, both defending champions of their respective conferences, put their highly touted offenses on display Saturday night in a nationally televised exhibition game.

The Cowboys, who opened the preseason with a 14-10 loss to Buffalo, have 20 of their 22 starters returning from last season when Dallas got as far the conference championship, losing that game to San Francisco, 28-27.

Linebacker D.D. Lewis, a 13-year veteran with the Cowboys has retired. He has been replaced by Guy Brown. Defensive Back Charlie Waters also retired and Benny Barnes will be taking over his position.

"WE'RE PRETTY well set," Coach Tom Landry said. "We'll go with our regulars for about the first quarter or about 30 plays on Saturday night. We're still trying to find backups for our starters."

"We're not sure what to expect from San Diego," Landry added. He said San Diego stuck with fairly basic plays in their last game, but that they may open up the offense more when they play the Cowboys.

San Diego coach Don Coryell, whose team beat Chicago, 28-27, in their preseason opener, plans to give his starters a little more playing time.

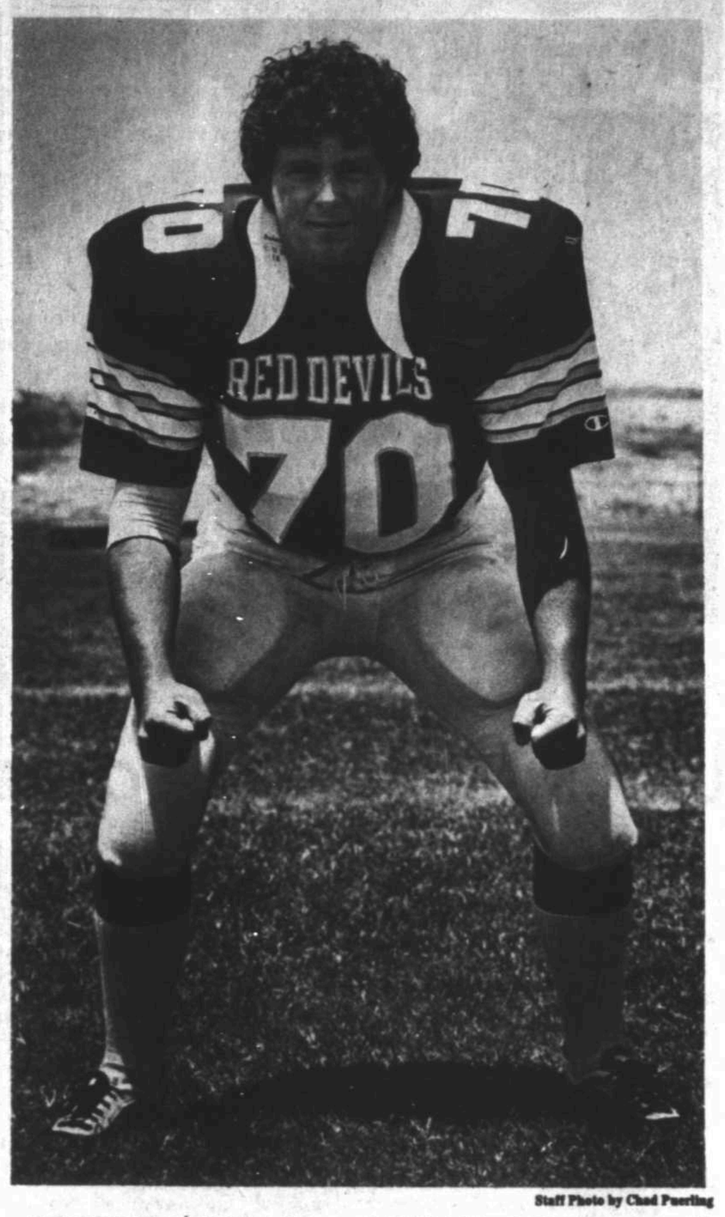
"(Quarterback) Dan Fouts will play the first quarter and very likely start the second half," Coryell said. "We want to give Ed Luther as much work as we possibly can. Our first line will probably play two quarters."

Gary Hogeboom, backup quarterback for the Cowboys, will miss Saturday's game because of a hyper extended elbow, Landry said, and starting guard Kurt Petersen is questionable with a strained shoulder. Linebacker Anthony Dickerson and safety Dextor Clinkscale are out with groin pulls.

Running back Chuck Muncie, who gained 1,144 yards rushing last year, will also not be in a Chargers uniform.

Green Bay wins

Rich Campbell's third-quarter TD passes of nine yards to Gary Lewis and 11 to Wamon Buggs boosted Green Bay to a 41-27 victory over Cincinnati in Friday night.



Staff Photo by Chad Puerling

Todd Ratcliff, an All-West Texas and All-District selection last year, will return to his offensive tackle and middle linebacker positions for Rankin High. The 5-10, 188-pound senior averaged 14 tackles per game last year for the Red Devils.

Cubs slam way into first place

By TERRY WILLIAMSON
Assistant Sports Editor

The Midland Cubs moved into first place in the Texas League West at Cubs Stadium Friday night before 2,072 vocal fans behind the booming bats of Carlos Lezcano, Javier Fierro and Mike Diaz.

The 13-5 Cub victory over Amarillo, coupled with an 8-1 loss by the El Paso Diablos to the San Antonio Dodgers, gives Midland a one-game advantage with only two weeks left to play. Needless to say, it left the Cubs in a jubilant clubhouse mood.

"I don't know how it feels to be in first place. It hasn't dawned on me yet. It's not over yet. What other cliches can I use?" said a smirky Cubs manager Brian Murphy, who had a smile wider than the Texas League itself.

IT WAS the seventh victory in a row for the Cubs, extending their longest winning streak of the year. The Cubs have also won 10 of their last 12 games. To say the least, the Cubs are on a roll, but joyous enthusiasm must be tempered by the fact that the Cubs have only two more home games and 10 more on the road, where they have been just short of awful this year.

But at home, the Cubs are something else when things get tuned up. Lezcano, Fierro and Diaz were finely tuned Friday. Lezcano hit his third grand slam of the year in the fifth inning to give the Cubs a 10-4 lead. Fierro connected for his eighth homer in the fourth with two men on base to erase a 4-2 Gold Sox lead. And Diaz polished it all off with a three-run shot, his 20th of the year, in the sixth. It was an explosive display.

Lezcano's slam in the fifth netted him $249 from the grateful crowd, setting an unofficial record for one homer. It was the real game buster. Joe Carter opened the inning with a walk while Fritz Connally and Diaz followed with singles before Lezcano connected off Sox reliever John White.

"I wasn't really trying for a homer, but I was looking for a fastball," noted Lezcano, who drove in five runs. "I knew he had to throw strikes in that situation and I got the fastball and got good wood on it. My other two grand slams have come against El Paso — one there and one here. But this one is for first place, man."

FIERRO DROVE in four runs with a grounder and his three-run knock in the fourth off starter Neil Bryant. "I got a fastball up and in, but I was just looking for a base hit," said Fierro.

Diaz' 20th homer came when things were already in the hip pocket for the Cubs. "When a game is out of hand like that, you just look for the base hits in that situation. But I got a changeup that was left up high and I just got good wood on the ball."

Of all the homers belted out by the Cubs, Mike Kelley's RBI groundout in the fourth proved to be the game winning RBI. He grounded to first as Dave Owen scored from third with the Cubs sixth run of the night.

Carlos Gil, surviving a shaky start, got his third straight victory to move his record to 7-6. He had two innings of runless relief help from Rob Blyth as the Cub bullpen continues to amaze in the late going of the season.

Gil gave up four runs in the first three innings of work and another in the seventh. In between, he once retired nine men in a row. A two-out single by Jeff Ronk hurt Gil in the first and a two-out, two-run double by Randy Kaczmarski got Gil in the second. Kevin McReynolds hit a solo shot off Gil in the third to give the Sox a 4-2 margin, but Fierro's homer in the fourth ended all that and the route was on.

The two teams meet again today at 7:30 p.m. and again Sunday at 6 p.m. That will end the home season for the Cubs as they hit the road for San Antonio and El Paso to end the season.

Jaworski's TD passes pace Eagles' victory

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Quarterback Ron Jaworski threw touchdown passes of 26 yards to Harold Carmichael and 14 yards to top draft pick Mike Quick as the Philadelphia Eagles defeated the New England Patriots 14-7 Friday night for their first preseason victory.

The Eagles lost their opener last week to Tampa Bay. It was the second defeat for New England, which lost its first 1982 exhibition contest to the Pittsburgh Steelers.

The Eagles took a 7-0 lead in the first period after failing to score on a 73-yard, game-opening drive. The Eagles turned the ball over when they fell just short of the end zone after four running plays.

But Philadelphia got the ball back on a punt and moved 58 yards on seven plays, capped by Jaworski's scoring toss to Carmichael in the end zone.

Rankin popular pick in District 6-A

By CHAD PUERLING
Sports Writer

District 6-A should be one of the most competitive races in West Texas and you can bet the Rankin Red Devils will be in the thick of the title drive.

Depending on what periodical you read Rankin should win the whole shooting match.

"The Harris Poll picked us to win it all, but Texas Football had us third behind Iraan and Wink," explained head coach Dwayne Turner.

Turner is beginning his 12th year as the brain trust of the Devils. In that time he has compiled an overall record of 97-31-1 and won six district titles including one trip to the state finals.

Even in what appears to be Rankin's worst years, Turner has molded teams that no one looks foward to playing.

WITH THOSE kind of credentials many are surprised Turner hasn't left for a larger school.

"Oh, I've had my opportunities to go to bigger schools but I have no desire to leave Rankin," he said. "I like the tradition that the kids, their parents and this town has built."

So what does the 50-year-old have in store for the Rankin fatefull this season?

One good place to start is with senior Todd Ratliff. Ratliff was an All-District selection last year on both offense, as a center, and defense, as a middle linebacker. His 14 tackles per game last year elevated the 5-foot-10, 188 pounder to a spot on the All-West Texas football team.

JOINING RATLIFF in the offensive line will be another All-District pick, Jesse Hernandez. Last year Hernandez played offensive tackle but he will probably see action at tight end this year. Defensively he will remain at tackle.

The third All-District selection that will return for the Devils is defensive back Dennis Black. And despite his exploits on defense, Turner is looking to Black to be the main offensive source for the Red Devils.

"He will play fullback again this year and will see some action at quarterback," Turner said. "It depends on us finding the right backfield combination."

LAST YEAR Black rushed for 1,172 yards in 185 carries, for an impressive 6.34 average. The fleet-footed Black had an additional 120 yards on five receptions. Despite his 5-foot-8, 155-pound frame, all of Blacks rushing yardage came with him running from the fullback position.

Turner said he will carry only 18 on the varsity squad which means several players will have to play on both sides of the line.

"We might have all 11 starters going both ways," Turner said. "We'll just play our best and toughest."

The main reason for such frugality is the number of kids that came to tryouts.

"THIS YEAR we had the fewest number of kids tryout, 34, since I've been here." Turner said. "I hope to pick up five or six more when school begins."

Turner thinks the line play will be Rankins strongest asset, with the running game close behind.

"The line could be as good as '81," Turner said, "but the backfield is not as strong. Our problem will be throwing the football."

Since joining class A two years ago Rankin has compliled a 21-2-1 record including last year's 8-1-1 season. With the new district alignment, 1982 doesn't look like it will be as sucessfull a year for Rankin, but you can bet opposing coaches fear the Red Devils none the less.

NFL talks scheduled to resume Wednesday

NEW YORK (AP) — Contract negotiations between the National Football League Players' Association and the NFL Management Council, which haven't been held since July 15, are tentatively set to resume Wednesday morning in Washington.

The management council requested to resume the talks by telex Thursday to the players' union office in Washington.

"We have no new proposal," the message said. "We are expecting a counter-proposal to our July 13 proposal. Let us know what players you want off (to attend the meeting). We will make every effort to have them excused (from preseason camps).

Both sides have refused to meet since last meeting in Washington because of a dispute over a meeting site. The NFLMC has insisted on alternating between New York and Washington while the union has wanted to hold them at training camps so more players could attend.

The latest proposal by the Management Council appears to be a compromise on allowing player representatives to participate in the negotiations.

"We expect to meet 8-10 hours a day if necessary, through the weekend, in order to, hopefully, reach an agreement," according Ed Garvey, the union's executive director.

Are some parks really made for home runs?

What makes ball go bye bye?

By BILL SHIRLEY
The Washington Post
and Los Angeles Times

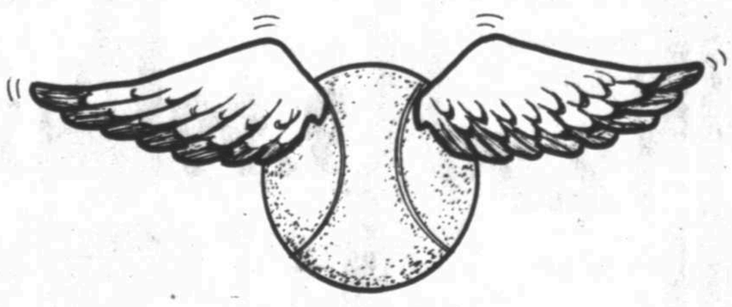
Does a baseball carry farther in some major-league stadiums than others — even when the wind is not blowing? Most hitters say it does. In the argot of the dugout, they say of some parks, "It gets out of there fast."

But do the players know what they're talking about?

Does a ball really "pop out" of Atlanta Stadium as the Braves' Dale Murphy says? Or "jumt out" of Philadelphia's Veterans Stadium, as Cincinnati's Johnny Bench claims?

Did warm air account for nine home runs in two nights at Seattle's Kingdome, an air-conditioned indoor arena, as the Mariners' Bruce Bochte and Rene Lachemann said? Do open doors and the size of the crowd affect the flight of a baseball in Minnesota's Metrodome, as Twins' Manager Billy Gardner claimed?"

Is the Phillies' Mike Schmidt right when he says a baseball can be caught because it just seemed to hang there."



There is no doubt that when a solid body such as a baseball is projected at an angle to the earth's surface by a bat and encounters resistance from air molecules, some funny things happen aerodynamically, although there is no record of one actually hanging in the air.

THE COMPANY that makes all the baseballs for the major leagues has been unable to obtain scientific proof that its product can be hit farther in some parks than others, because no such studies or experiments have been made by physicists or aerodynamicists.$But baseball players have some theories, and while they all might not be scientifically sound, there is evidence that in some stadiums on some da s, a ball will go farther, just as they claim.

The ideal day, scientists and engineers say, would be hot and humid. The ideal place: Denver, because of its altitude of more than 5,000 feet. Then, for a ball to reach maximum distance for the velocity generated by the smack of a bat, it would first have to be stored in low humidity and then hit with a backspin at a 45-degree angle.

"Let's get really ridiculous," said Richard Glover, director of research and development for Rawlings Sports Goods Co. "In Juneau, Alaska, in January, you could not hit a ball as far as you could at Denver in August."

The reason: Air density, which can slow a bullet or cannon ball, would be lower in Denver, reduced by the high altitude, humidity and temperature.

"A ball will go farther in warmer, more humid air," said Robert Watts, a professor of mechanical engineering at Tulane University.

A common belief is that humid air is heavy but Watts said, "The more water vapor there is in the air, the lighter it is." And heat helps a fatter because, Glover said, "the lower the temperature, the higher the density of the air. That comes straight out of your high school chemistry book."

HOW MUCH difference can air density make? As much as 6 percent to 7 percent, Watts said. "A 6 percent smaller density means that the drag will be 6 percent smaller and the ball will go 6 percent farther." So, if Mike Schmidt or Reggie Jackson hit a ball 400 feet, it would travel 424 if the drag was 6 percent less. "That's substantiel," Watts said.

So Schmidt was right when he said it was harder to hit a ball out of Candlestick Park on a cold night. So wes the Dodger's Dusty Baker, who said, "It is better to hit at Dodger Stadium in the daytime when it's hot, than at night when it's cold."

And Bochte and Lachemann, who said that a ball carries farther in Seattle in the summertime, had the right theory but the wrong ballpark. Air conditioning keeps the temperature in the Kingdome at 68 degrees to 72 degrees.

THERE IS nothing to support Schmidt's contention that the ball does not carry well in Houston's Astrodome, where the temperature is a constant 72. But he said, "I hit three shots once off Nolan Ryan that would have been home runs in any ballpark in the world, but only one ball went out." He offered no scientific reason for such a phenomenon.

Based on favorable air density, the ideal park in the major leagues is Atlanta Stadium, altitude 1,050 feet, highest in both leagues, and weather that is often hot and humid. So it follows that most players, when asked to name a park in which the ball goes farther, name Atlanta's first.

The worst stadium, by air density standards: San Diego's, which is at sea level and seldom humid.

It is not known how much barometric pressure, air temperature and altitude affect the flight of a baseball in Atlanta and San Diego, or any other stadium for that matter. Scientists need to know the velocity and angle of the ball coming off a bat to determine the distance it travels. To obtain accurate measurements in every park would be virtually impossible.

The truth is, more and fewer home runs are hit in parks other than Atlanta's and San Diego's. More are hit in Atlanta than San Diego, but the gap varies markedly from season to seawon, leading to the suspicion that factors other than inertial effects, aerodynamics, humidity, the coefficient of restitution, elastic collisions and the Coriolis force are at work.

Better hitters, longer distances to the fences, lower walls, lousy pitching and the prevailing wind account for more home runs than favorable air.

MIKE SCHMIDT suggests that few home runs are hit in the Astrodome because a ball doesn't carry well there, but Johnny Bench probably is closer to the truth when he says, "The Dome is too big."

Strange 69 good for Buick Open 1st

GRAND BLANC, Mich. (AP) — Curtis Strange shot a 3-under-par 69 Friday to grab the second-round lead at 9-under-par 135 in the $350,000 Buick Open.

Strange, who ranks 12th on the PGA Tour money list this year with $181,578, has not won a tournament since 1980. A triumph here would earn him $63,000.

The 27-year-old native of Norfolk, whose wife, Sarah, is home in Virginia expecting their first child almost any day now, started the day tied with Lanny Wadkins at 66, one stroke behind first-round leader John Cook.

However, Cook fired an even-par 72 over the 7,001-yard layout at Warwick Hills Gof and Country Club on Friday to fall into a second-place tie with a fivesome that included Wadkins, Fred Couples, Payne Stewart and Masters champion Craig Stadler.

"I didn't play well at all," Strange said. "But, I scored well and I guess that's the name of the game. But I really struggled.

"If I play like this the rest of the way, I might finish good, but I won't win. I have to play better to win. Very bluntly, I can't play tomorrow like I played today and shoot another 69."

Couples started the second round at 1-under 71 and bogeyed the first hole to fall back to even par. Then he caught fire, carding nine birdies and two more bogeys the rest of the way for a second-round 66.

Stewart fired a 3-under 69 Friday in a round that included four birdies and one bogey.

Cook, 24, who has not won on the tour since the 1981 Bing Crosby National Pro-Am, felt like he played better Friday than in Thursday's opening round, but it didn't show on his scorecard. Cook was even-par 72 Friday in a round that included three birdies and three bogeys.

Stadler, who also has won the Tucson Open and the Kemper Open this year to rank No. 2 on the money list with $324,601, carded an eagle three on the 491-yard 13th Friday on his way to a 68.

Carner birdies into PGA lead

CLEVELAND (AP) — JoAnne Carner, bearing down on a spot in the LPGA Hall of Fame, used three straight birdies on the back nine for a 2-under-par 70 Friday and the second-round lead in the $150,000 Chevrolet World Championship of Women's Golf.

The 43-year-old veteran, who needs one victory to qualify for the sport's shrine, built a one-shot lead over Amy Alcott in the battle for the first prize of $50,000, the richest ever in women's golf.

Alcott used the best round of the misty, overcast day, a 3-under-par 69, to move into second place with a 143 total.

Ayako Okamoto of Japan, playing in only her second American pro tournament, matched par of 72 and was alone in third place with a 145 total.

Spain's Marta Figueras-Dotti, the only amateur in this select international field of 12 golfers, shot a 71 and moved into a fourth-place tie with veteran Sandra Haynie, Jan Stephenson of Australia and first-round co-leader Hollis Stacy, all at 146. Stephenson carded a 70, Figueras-Dotti and Haynie matched 71s, while Stacy, tied with Carner after the opening round, slipped to a 74.

Beth Daniel, who won this tournament in its first two years, struggled to the highest round of the day, a 78 that left her tied for last place with Sally Little of South Africa, currently the No. 1 money-winner on the LPGA tour. Little had a 76. They owned totals of 154.

Nancy Lopez was next at 151, shooting a 77.

Charles regains putting touch

FULFORD, England (AP) -Bob Charles, 46-year-old New Zealand golf veteran, recovered his old-time putting touch Friday and tied for the lead in the $170,000 Benson and Hedges International Tournament.

Charles, who won the British Open in 1963, shot a three-under-par 69 for a two-round total of 140 to tie him with Ian Mosey of Britain at the halfway stage.

British Ryder Cupper Ken Brown and Australia's Graham Marsh were one stroke behind on 141.

Inkster, Goggin win again

COLORADO SPRINGS, Colo. (AP) — Juli Inkster and Lindy Goggin moved a step closer to another showdown, while Lisa Kluver upset Curtis Cup team member Amy Benz in the quarterfinals Friday of the 82nd U.S. Women's Amateur golf championship.

Inkster, seeking to become the first player to win three successive U.S. Women's Amateur titles since Virginia Van Wie in 1932-33-34, birdied the 15th and 16th holes with long putts to eliminate medalist Penny Hammel of Decatur, Ill., 2 and 1.

Goggin, runner-up to Inkster in last year's amateur final, got past Nancy Tomich of Upper St. Clair, Pa., 2 and 1.

Kluver, a 22-year-old Arizona State player, scored an impressive upset over Benz, beating the SMU standout 2 up.

Beth and brother form kicking team

In Kentucky prep football

WILLIAMSBURG, Ky. (AP) — Marjorie Beth Bates has the distinction of being the first, and only, girl on a Kentucky high school football team.

With her brother, Hunter Bates, 14, holding the ball for her, the 16-year-old second stringer for Williamsburg High School attempted a point-after-touchdown kick on Saturday in a preseason game in Williamsburg.

Beth's kick was blocked in much the same manner that some Kentucky football coaches and officials are trying to block girls' participation in contact sports.

"We have had some (girls) go out for teams," said Tom Mills, executive director of the Kentucky High School Athletic Association, "but as far as playing in a game, I don't recall any other girls playing high school football."

At Williamsburg High, everyone is enthusiastic about "Super Shoe," as Beth is called by her teammates.

"Just wearing the uniform, being out there with all the guys on the field is different," she said. "Being the only girl...it's mental, I know."

Everyone has been supportive, she said, but it is obvious she is not treated like one of the boys.

Beth waits until they are finished practicing before beginning a private kicking practice of her own. She dresses for games at home and travels to away games with the coach's wife.

"Beth is not our best kicker, but she's been pretty consistent in practice," said Williamsburg Coach Bob Rose. "I think she'll help us or I wouldn't put her out there. And if she'll stay out and work at it, she'll be the best."

So far, Rose said he has received more flak than publicity for the decision to allow Beth to play.

"I'm not trying to promote a world change here," Rose said. "I'm just trying to get along."

Beth also said she isn't trying to make a fuss.

"I'm not out here to make any hassles for anyone," she said. "If it causes any trouble for the team, I'll quit."

Mills said he wouldn't comment about his personal reaction to the girl kicker.

"I simply say we don't have any rules to prevent the girl from playing football if she wants to," he said.

Lions, Raiders game matches offenses

By The Associated Press

It will be a battle of new offenses — one by design, the other by necessity — when the Detroit Lions host the Los Angeles Raiders in a National Football League exhibition game Saturday night.

The Raiders, long known for their gambling, big-play style, are changing their passing game this season to combat more sophisticated defenses.

The patterns will have to be shorter and less complicated, says Raiders Coach Tom Flores. Instead of 20-yard patterns, we're talking more like 10-12 yards. We're working with the quarterbacks on taking a little shorter drop, too.

ONCE AGAIN, Jim Plunkett will guide the Raiders' attack. Plunkett, the Most Valuable Player in the Raiders' Super Bowl win two seasons ago, slumped somewhat last year. But Raiders veterans say Plunkett — who tossed a 57-yard scoring pass to Cliff Branch in last week's 17-14 win over San Francisco — is looking sharp.

Jim is the big difference in this training camp, says wide receiver Bob Chandler. "He looks better now than he did two years ago.

Detroit's offense last year, meanwhile, relied on running back Billy Sims, who holds the Lions' single-season rushing record. Sims, though, is involved in a contract dispute with the team and has not reported to camp.

I'M JUST about to the point where I think we're going to have to plan on getting along without Billy, says Detroit Coach Monte Clark. It's just too frustrating to hold out hope day after day and not have him here.

The Lions, who handed the Raiders themr first shutout in 15 seasons last year, lost 17-16 to Cleveland in last week's exhibition opener.

Cincinnati faced Green Bay and New England played Philadelphia in Friday night games.

Other preseason games Saturday include Seattle at Minnesota in the first football game in the new Hubert H. Humphrey Metrodome, Chicago at Buffalo, Dallas at San Diego, Kansas City at New Orleans, Miami at Denver, Pittsburgh at the New York Giants, St. Louis at San Francisco, Washington at Tampa Bay and Atlanta vs. Baltimore in Tempe, Ariz.

THE NEW York Jets play in Houston against the Oilers on Sunday afternoon.

On Thursday night, Cleveland's Matt Bahr kicked a 34-yard field goal with three seconds left to give the Browns a 26-23 victory over the Los Angeles Rams.

In San Francisco, the St. Louis Cardinals will be trying to get on the scoreboard for the first time this season following a 14-0 loss to Seattle last week. Despite the shutout, St. Louis Coach Jim Hanifan likes his depth at quarterback, where second-year pro Neil Lomax is the starter and 17-year veteran Jim Hart is the backup.

Rebels, Bulldogs waiting to meet Strangers in the Night

TERRY WILLIAMSON

One week is down and one week to go before it's time to see some "strangers".

At least, that's the way Midland Lee coach Spike Dykes always refers to the first football scrimmage of the year. Lee and Midland High take to the road Friday to face the first "strangers" since last fall.

"You never really know what you have until you meet some strangers," says Dykes. "You go through spring and the first couple of weeks of practice by lining up against your own people. You find out a few things that are important, but you don't ever know how the kids will react when they face some strangers."

Dykes will take his Rebels to face the strangers at Andrews Friday night while MHS boss Pat Culpepper takes his 'Dawgs to Abilene to face Dallas South Oak Cliff.

ANDREWS ISN'T really a stranger since Lee scrimmages the Mustangs annually, but with no returning starters coming back, Dykes points out that everyone on both sides are strangers.

SOC and MHS have never met on the gridiron and the SOC team doesn't get to West Texas very often. So what are you in for, Pat?

"We hear that they have a lot of offensive players back, but they have one guy on defense that weighs something like 330 pounds," notes Culpepper.

Here's hoping that Bulldog center John David Munn is ready for the scrimmage. The scrimmage for Munn amounts to 150 pounds of determination against 330 pounds of ???

"Munn is already taking a ribbing in the Field House. I think he already has gotten some letters about the scrimmage," says Culpepper. "Munn is going to see nothing but feet though, because that's where he's going to be firing."

Dykes' Rebels seem to have an abundance of talented wide receivers, but after seeing the spring scrimmage, one wonders if the Rebs have anyone who can get the ball to them.

Luther Johnson promised me he would catch a TD pass in the spring scrimmage, but he didn't. His excuse? "No one could get the ball to me."

Johnson has now bet me 50 hundred dollars he goes for at least one deep six this season. And what has changed his attitude from the spring? "All the quarterbacks worked all summer and they're throwing better now."

DAMON POLK and Carlton Johnson have also joined the deep six bet, but I told them that Nate Magazine would be the first to strike. I'm willing to extend the offer to Mike Mercurio, Paul Cox and Teddy Joe Strambler. After all, they're the ones who have to throw it. I'll think of a suitable reward, but 50 hundred dollars is too steep for my blood.

The MHS practice field looks like a pro camp these days with the new coaching tower and "The Beast" in place. "The Beast" is a new kicking-passing machine that can shoot footballs (end-over-end or spiral — take you're pick) out of sight.

"We got to practice 129 punt return catches in 20 minutes the other day," mused Culpepper. "We would have to wear out 14 punters to do that before and all of the machine's punts are perfect."

Assistant Bulldog coach Milt Fitts runs the machine, but if you're wondering, "The Beast" will not be given a number this year. Fitts has already checked that out. "You gotta breathe to get a number and that's the only thing this machine can't do."

Now if we can only get John Hibbitts and Rick Madrid to learn to catch a punt, the Bulldogs will be in business.

The heat has been brutal at times in both camps, but Gil Bartosh, Midland athletic director, says this is really the time of year you want hot days. "I've had teams before that started out with cool August weather, but it turned hot again in September and they wilted in the games. This is the time to get the legs in good shape and you don't have anything to worry about with the heat as long as you keep a lot of liquid in those strong, young bodies."

I JUST wish Bartosh would take all that talk to Lee assistant Eddie Wolski. The heat is about to kill him, but he hasn't missed a day at work — as of this writing.

Dykes says this time of year is your basic 1-2-3. "You don't have a lot of contact without pads, but it's a good teaching time. You just hope that by the time they get the pads, they're ready to go."

With one week left, both schools are short of selling the amount of season tickets they sold last year. MHS has around 800 sold and Lee about 1,200. Season tickets will be on sale at Memorial Stadium until next Friday.

"I think both teams still have a shot at reaching the same number of season tickets as last year. Neither school is a disaster in season ticket sales and with the influx of people in Midland, we expect larger single game sales than last year," noted Bartosh.

Officials this year will have to keep a record of penetrations, first downs and total yards in all district games because all tie games will be decided by this method as far as playoff possibilities are concerned.

And by the way, our league will be District 4-5A this season, not 5-5A. It seems that the fingers still want to punch the fives regardless of what the UIL does in realignment every two years.

Bizarre kidnapping try for $2 million foiled

ATHERTON, Calif. (AP) — The bizarre kidnapping of the wife and 12-year-old daughter of a North American Soccer League team owner for a $2 million ransom was foiled when the three abductors, dressed as police, fled on foot after their getaway car became mired in mud.

Police said Mary Berg, wife of San Jose Earthquakes part-owner and real-estate magnate Carl Berg, was locked in the trunk of her silver Lincoln Continental along with her daughter for several hours after they were taken from her home Thursday morning.

Mrs. Berg later was handcuffed to the steering wheel of the car after it got stuck on a hilly area of San Jose. When the abductors ran away, she managed to start the car and drive for help. She and her daughter, who was still locked in the trunk, were unharmed.

Authorities issued an all-points bulletin for three men, described as being in their 20s and wearing ski masks, after a search in South San Jose failed to locate them. Two of the assailants were said to be armed with semi-automatic handguns.

Rolle said the men dressed as police and brandished automatic handguns when they knocked on the front door of Mrs. Berg's home in Atherton and then barged in at about 7 a.m. PDT.

The men handcuffed the woman and made the first of a series of telephone ransom demands to her husband's office. Rolle did not disclose the amount of the ransom, which was never paid, but the San Jose Mercury News said sources put the figure at $2 million.

The mother and daughter were held in their home for about an hour before they were stuffed into the trunk of their car and driven around what is believed to have been the San Jose area.

Mercury's lawyer explains coke

(Compiled from R-T wires)

FOOTBALL—Rod Strauss, attorney for Eugene "Mercury" Morris, the former Miami Dolphins back facing drug charges, claims that Morris used cocaine for several years to lessen the "excrutiating" pain of a football neck injury, noting Morris "was not a habitual user. He was not dealing cocaine. The quantities were minor, for his own use." Morris was released Thursday on $150,000 surety bond. He was jailed Wednesday night after police raided his South Miami home. Cocaine, marijuana plants, more than $124,000 cash and assorted fmrearms were seized in the raid, police said...

Kraemer Diel, 39, a dentist employed by the LSU athletic department has been arrested and booked with possession of cocaine with intent to distribute it. Diel was arrested with Glenn D'Spain, 20, as they sat in a parked car outside the lounge in which D'Spain worked, said police spokeswoman Pauline Ory. Detectives confiscated 10 grams of cocaine — a little better than a third of an ounce — as they made the arrest, she said. Street value of cocaine is about $100 per gram...

Kansas City Chiefs have asked 22-year-old tight end Marvin Harvey to retire from professional football because of a congenital neck condition. But Harvey has decided to seek additional medical opinions and has asked the Chiefs to place him on waivers. "We have a surgeon who is flying in tomorrow morning," Harvey's wife, Benita Harvey. "Based on what we told him, he thinks they (the Chiefs) are overreacting."...

BASEBALL—Baltimore's Scott McGregor, shelled from the mound after making only 12 pitches in a game at Minneapolis Thursday, returned to Baltimore Friday for a shoulder examination. "I've had a little tendinitis in the shoulder and I just never got loose. I didn't have anything." The first five Minnesota batters connected safely off McGregor, including home runs by Tom Brunansky and Gary Ward, and the Twins led 5-0 when McGregor departed...

Kansas City Royals Manager Dick Howser and batting coach Rocky Colavito were arrested following a traffic accident and disturbance near Royals Stadium Thursday night. Both were charged with hindering and interfering with a police officer and Colavito was cited for a traffic violation when the car Colavito was driving was struck while making an illegal left turn from a stadium exit about 11 p.m. Colavito and Howser got involved in a argument with the driver of the other car, David Roach, 19, of Kansas City, who was arrested and charged with driving while intoxicated...

BOXING— Middleweight champ Marvin Hagler's scheduled defense against Fulgencio Obelmejias could be delayed until late October after was injured recently when a sparring partner knocked him in the ribs. If the fight is moved to late October, the site could change from San Remo, Italy, to Reno, Nev., or Atlantic City, N.J...

TROTTING—Mystic Park, who set a track record last week, is the favorite for tonight's $100,000 American Trotting Championship at Roosevelt Raceway. Mystic Park became the first 3-year-old ever to break the 2-minute barrier at Roosevelt last week when he won in 1:59 3-5. Mystic Park is the 2-1 favorite...

CYCLING— Former world motorcycling champion Barry Sheene vowed to return to competitive racing. Sheene, who broke both legs and an arm in a practice crash at Silverstone Eng., three weeks ago, was discharged from hospital Friday with his legs held together by metal plates and 27 screws.
The 31-year-old Briton, two-time world 500cc champion, blamed Silverstone for his 160 mph accident. "They did not have enough marshals and they were running all classes of bikes at once."...

HOCKEY—The Washington Capitals failed to meet Friday's deadline to satisfy prospective investors, but it appears the NHL franchise will stay put for at least another season. Last month, Caps' owner Abe Pollin said four conditions would have to be met within 30 days to insure the continued operation of the franchise. If the conditions were not met, insuring an infusion of new money into the operation, Pollin said the team would be sold and moved, merged and moved, or disbanded. So far, two of the conditions have been met, with area businesses and chambers of commerce guaranteeing sellouts of the first 10 home games and the Capital Centre lowering the hockey team's rent from 15 to 10 percent of the net after taxes.

Two more obstacles remain: the lowering of the county amusement tax from 10 percent to one-half of 1 percent and the sale of 7,500 season tickets...

Astros defeat Montreal

HOUSTON (AP) — Alan Knicely's RBI single to center with one out in the 10th inning gave the Houston Astros a 4-3 win over the Montreal Expos in their third straight extra-inning game Friday night.

With one out in the 10th, Art Howe drew a base on balls from loser Jeff Reardon, 5-3, and went to second on Tony Scott's single to center. Knicely's single to center scored Howe to end the game.

The third Astro pitcher, Bert Roberge, 1-1, pitched the final inning to earn the victory.

Al Oliver put the Expos up 1-0 in the fourth inning with a solo home run off Don Sutton. It was Oliver's 19th homer of the year, but only his first since July 30.

With two outs in the fourth, Tim Wallach singled and Chris Speier doubled, both scoring on Doug Flynn's single to make it 3-0.

Houston tied the score with the aid of three unearned runs off Montreal starter Steve Rogers.

Dickie Thon and Denny Walling singled with two out in the fifth, and Ray Knight had made the apparent third out when he lofted a fly to right but center fielder Andre Dawson, right fielder Joel Youngblood and second baseman Flynn converged and the ball dropped, allowing two runs to score. Dawson, who bumped Youngblood, was charged with an error.

With two outs in the seventh, Thon reached on an error by Oliver at first and went to third on Walling's single to right. Knight singled to left to score Thon and tie the game.

Giants 8, Cardinals 7

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Darrell Evans tripled to lead off the eighth inning and scored one out later on Milt May's grounder, capping a late comeback that lifted the San Francisco Giants to an 8-7 victory over the St. Louis Cardinals Friday night.

Evans' hit came off St. Louis relief star Bruce Sutter, 8-6, giving Gary Lavelle, 8-5, the victory. It climaxed a San Francisco surge highlighted by a seven-run uprising in the seventh inning.

The Giants, giving St. Louis only its third setback in 11 games, sent 13 batters to the plate against five Cardinal pitchers in their big inning, with nine of them delivering base hits.

St. Louis starter Steve Mura protected a 7-0 lead on a four-hitter until Max Venable, Joe Morgan, and Jack Clark singled to open the San Francisco seventh.

Clark's hit scored Venable, chasing Mura, and Dave Bergman greeted Jim Kaat with an RBI double. One out later, Jeff Leonard belted a three-run homer to make it 7-5. Afterward, Milt May doubled off Kaat and Jim Wohlford singled off Jeff Lahti to score May. John Martin yielded an infield single to Venable before Morgan's bloop double off Sutter, the fifth pitcher of the inning, produced a 7-7 tie.

Phillies pound Reds, 9-2

CINCINNATI (AP) — Bo Diaz and George Vukovich each collected four hits and knocked in two runs Friday night and Dick Ruthven pitched his seventh complete game as the Philadelphia Phillies pounded the Cincinnati Reds 9-2 in a game delayed four times by rain.

Ruthven, 9-10, weathered nearly three hours of rain delays to pick up his first victory since July 21 and move the Phillies within one game of first-place St. Louis in the National League East. The right-hander snapped Cincinnati's four-game winning streak.

After a 12-minute delay at the outset, Diaz singled home Gary Matthews with the Phillies' first run in the top of the first. Garry Maddox followed with an RBI single.

Delays of 1:16 and 41 minutes held up the Phillies' second inning.

Diaz and Maddox singled off starter Greg Harris, 2-4, with one out in the third. Vukovich doubled to score Diaz and Maddox came home on a wild pitch.

The Phillies added three runs in the fifth, started with singles by Mike Schmidt and Diaz. Vukovich rapped an RBI single, Ivan DeJesus doubled for another run, and Vukovich scored on Ruthven's groundout.

Diaz doubled to score Matthews in the eighth and give the Phillies an 8-2 lead.

Atlanta 2, NY Mets 1

Pat Zachry walked Dale Murphy with the bases loaded and two outs in the 10th inning to give the Atlanta Braves a 2-1 victory over the New York Mets. A throwing error by Hubie Brooks, also with two out, allowed pinch-runner Matt Sinatro to score the tying run earlier in the inning and offset Brian Giles's first major-league homer that had given the Mets a 1-0 lead in the top of the 10th.

Cubs 3, Padres 2

Bill Buckner and Leon Durham delivered sacrifice flies and Jody Davis singled in Chicago's other run, helping Randy Martz and the Cubs to a 3-2 victory over the San Diego Padres.

TBS gets okay for college TV

ATLANTA (AP) — A Superior Court judge Friday cleared the way for cable television and sports magnate Ted Turner to broadcast 19 college football games this fall over his "SuperStation", WTBS-TV.

But the order by Judge Frank M. Eldridge prohibits WTBS from broadcasting any National Collegiate Athletic Association games during the 1983, 1984 or 1985 football season until further court heerings are held on the issue.

The ruling came in a lawsuit filed by ABC, ABC Sports and Cox Broadcasting Corp. against WTBS and the NCAA. The suit contended that contracts ABC and CBS have with the NCAA to televise college football games prevent anyone else from televising college football free over the air.

Turner and the NCAA reached agreement earlier this year on a $17.6 million contract for Turner to broadcast 19 college football games in each of the next two years over WTBS, which is transmitted by satellite to 20 million cable customers nationwide. More than 1 million Atlanta households also receive the WTBS signal free.

ABC and Cox Broadcasting Corp., owner of WSB-TV, the ABC affiliate in Atlanta, had asked Eldridge to prohibit Turner from broadcasting the games free to the Atlanta area because it could harm WSB's business.

Eldridge acknowledged that WSB "will suffer unique damages in the Atlanta market" because of the NCAA's agreement which WTBS, which Eldridge said violated the association's agreement with ABC.

But the judge said WTBS and the NCAA would suffer greater harm if WTBS was not allowed to televise the games than ABC and WSB would suffer if the games were televised.

To compensate WSB for the damage to its market, Eldridge ruled that WSB can broadcast two University of Georgia football games and two Georgia Tech games during the 1982 season.

Virdon to chat with Expos

HOUSTON (AP) — Bill Virdon, the two-time Manager of the Year recently fired by the Houston Astros, and the Montreal Expos will talk at a later date about a possible position, the ex-skipper said Friday.

Astros spokesman Rick Rivers also confirmed that Montreal President John McHale had asked and gotten permission from Houston to talk to Virdon, fired Aug. 10 after nearly seven years with the team.

McHale, a good friend of Virdon's, accompanied the Expos to Houston for a weekend series with the Astros.

Paschal to call it a career

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Doug Paschal decided to walk away from the Minnesota Vikings and professional football because he feared the day might come when he'd have trouble walking at all.

Paschal, 24, the ninth-leading career rusher in University of North Carolina history, announced his retirement last month because of a leg injury which occured during the final 1981 preseason game.

McRae paces Royal win

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — Hal McRae clubbed a three-run homer, jumping his league-leading RBI count to 105, and Chicago infielders committed three errors to help Kansas City score five runs in the fifth inning as the Royals pounded out a 13-5 victory Friday night, handing the White Sox their fourth straight loss.

Chicago Manager Tony LaRussa was ejected in the sixth inning of the long, eventful game that included 24 hits.

McRae's 22nd homer, his career high, scored Greg Pryor and U.L. Washington in the sixth and bade a rude welcome to Jim Siwy, making his major league debut.

After McRae's homer, a helmet was thrown from the White Sox dugout and plate umpire Dale Ford kicked it back. LaRussa then came out and was ejected.

In another oddity, Willie Aikens, Kansas City's first baseman, victimized Siwy with his first triple in 1,717 regular season at-bats.

In the five-run fifth, third baseman Aurelio Rodriguez, shortstop Vance Law and second baseman Tony Bernazard all made errors that led to an 8-3 Royals lead.

Yankees nudge Blue Jays, 4-2

NEW YORK (AP) — Dave Winfield, Ken Griffey and Roy Smalley hit solo homers to lift the New York Yankees to a 4-2 victory over the Toronto Blue Jays Friday night.

Shane Rawley, 7-8, a loser in his previous three starts, allowed eight hits in seven innings to earn the victory. Rich Gossage worked the final two innings for his 26th save of the season, putting him within one of American League leaders Rollie Fingers and Dan Quisenberry.

Griffey broke a 2-2 tie with two outs in the sixth with his sixth homer of the year and his first since July 16. Winfield added his 23rd homer in the eighth to complete the scoring.

The Yankees took a 1-0 lead in the second inning off starter Dave Stieb, 13-12, on a single by Winfield, right fielder Jesse Barfield's two-base error and a single by Griffey, his fourth straight hit over a two-game span.

Toronto tied the score 1-1 in the third on Garth Iorg's RBI single, but the Yankees went up 2-1 in the fourth on Smalley's 12th homer of the season.

Toronto fought back to tie the game again on singles by Barry Bonnell, Barfield and Wayne Nordhagen in the sixth.

Damaso Garcia collected two hits and has now hit in 19 consecutive games, tying a Blue Jays record.

Birds 4, Rangers 2

ARLINGTON, Texas (AP) — Run-scoring singles by Rick Dempsey and Al Bumbry with two outs in the top of the 12th inning Friday night gave the Baltimore Orioles a 4-2 victory over the Texas Rangers.

The Orioles jumped on reliever Steve Comer, 0-4, in the 12th after starter John Butcher went 11 innings and allowed only five hits.

John Lowenstein led off the Baltimore rally with a single, moved to second on a sacrifice and came home on Dempsey's single to left field. Dempsey took second on the throw home and scored on Bumbry's single after Rangers catcher Don Werner dropped the throw from right fielder Larry Parrish.

Tippy Martinez gained the victory in relief, his eighth in 14 decisions. Dennis Martinez started and went 10 innings, permitting only seven hits.

The Rangers took a 1-0 lead off Martinez in the first inning. Parrish led off with a single, moved to second on a passed ball, took third on a wild pitch and scored on catcher Jim Sundberg's single.

Wind, humidity, altitude HR factors

And if more home runs are hit in the Kingdome than the Astrodome, it is due more to short "power alleys," the gaps between center and left and right fields, than warm air. You need not be a physicist or engineer to understand that it is easier to hit a ball 357 feet than 390. More home runs were hit in the Kingdome than any other park in the major leagues in 1980 and 1981.

Wind has a far greater effect on a baseball than air density, Glover said. Pitchers throwing into a 20-to 25-mph breeze blowing out from home plate at Chicago's Wrigley Field will not argue with that. Under those conditions, even .200 hitters become home-run threats.

Rick Monday of the Dodgers, who played five years for the Cubs: "When the wind blows in at Wrigley, the 368-foot power alleys might as well be 468 feet. And when it blows out, they might as well be 268."

Rawlings, the St. Louis-based company that makes baseballs for the major leagues, has had little success getting reasons for the behavior of its product.

THE EFFECT of humidity on a ball is about the only thing Rawlings has been able to pin down, Glover said. If stored in high humidity a ball gains weight, becomes softer and will not go as far. "A dry ball is more lively than a wet one," Glover said. So is a warm one. Once, Vin Scully recalled, teams sought an edge by putting balls in the clubhouse ice box before games.

A baseball has a cork center cushioned by two layers of rubber and wound in three separate operations with wool yarn and a finishing winding of cotton. It is then coated with an adhesive, covered with cowhide and sewn with cotton yarn in a double-locked stitch. It weighs 5 to 5 1-4 ounces and measures 9 to 9 1-4 inches in circumference. But cowhide? "we couldn't get enough horses, so we switched to cowhide," Glover said.

To determine how lively a ball is, Rawlings engineers at Licking, Mo., fire it from an air cannon into a four-inch plate of white northern ash (the kind used for bats) mounted on a steel-reinforced concrete column. The velocity of the ball is measured immediately before and after impact and this "bounce factor" is known as the coefficient of restitution.

IF HIT too hard, a baseball will splatter, but Rawlings engineers have shot balls into steel and concrete at 140 mph without deforming them.

Hitters favor other parks besides Atlanta's and Seattle's. The Dodgers' Baker likes Philadelphia's Veterans Stadium and Cincinnati's Riverfront. "The Vet" also is favored by the Dodgers' Ron Cey, Steve Garvey and Rick Monday. Interestingly, Baker said the ball doesn't carry well at Riverfront "straightaway" and Monday said "The Vet" is best "down the line."

Baker and Dodgers coach Danny Ozark believe that heat bouncing off the artificial surfaces in Philadelphia and Cincinnati makes a ball carry farther. And to Baker, even the bats and balls make a difference. "The wood is better in some bats and some balls are softer than others," he said.

Monday, a pilot who talks knowledgeably about molecules flowing over airplane wings and the ground speed necessary for lift-off in hot air, said balls carry farther in parks below ground level, "such as Atlanta's."

Former Pittsburgh star Ralph Kiner remembers that the ball did not carry well in Cincinnati's old park, Crosley Field, until some buildings were cleared from the area for a freeway. "That opened it up," Kiner said. In fact, Crosley Field did become a notorious hitter's park, home-run production reaching a high of 219 there. Atlanta's record: 211.

IN THE American League, players say the ball "gets out faster" in Boston's Fenway Park and Detroit's Tiger Stadium but, oddly, more home runs have been hit in Cleveland's park (236 in 1970).

The major-league record for home runs in one park is 248, set in 1961 at Wrigley Field. But it was Los Angeles' Wrigley Field, not Chicago's, and science had less to do with it than short fences and the pitching staffs of two expansion franchises. The 10 teams hit 1,534 home runs that season, also a record.

Other than a short right-field fence — 327 down the line and 367 in right center — there is no apparent reason for baseballs flying out of the major league's newest park, the Metrodome, at almost e three-a-game pace. Through the first 55 games there, 143 home runs were hit and amateur scientists have been trying to explain why.

Oddly, home-run production decreased 50 percent recently when the doors to the stadium were left open to cool it. The temperature the other night inside was the same as it was outside, 73.

"There is a difference when the doors are open," the Twins' Gardner said. "And the bigger the crowd the better the ball carries."

When a pitcher throws an overhand fastball, he applies backspin to make it go faster. A hitter whose bat causes a similar spin will drive it farther, Glover said. In fact, he said, if a ball has enough such spin coming off the bat, lift is created that causes the ball to drop at a slower rate. "If it drops slower that you expect it to, the ball appears to hang in the air."

SO A BALL can appear to Vin Scully to hang. "Part of it is our perspective from upstairs," he said. "When a ball is hit in the gap, I watch the fielders and try to gauge whether it's catchable. The velocity of some balls seems to die and you can see that a fielder will catch them. The balls just seem to run out of gas and sit there."

The other day at Dodger Stadium, the Dodgers' center fielder Ken Landreaux signaled that he would catch a ball as soon as it was hit by the Giants' Bob Brenly. He caught it all right but he was so badly fooled by the distance the ball carried, he had to leap above the fence to get it. All the scientists playing in the major leagues understood. It was a hot afternoon, and although they may not know much about air molecules or the coefficient of restitution, they know a baseball will go farther when it's hot.

The ultimate park for a hitter would be a vacuum. With nothing in the air to hold it back a ball would go, well. . . "It would go as far as it would go," Glover said.

Allen wins in Travers

SARATOGA SPRINGS, N.Y. (AP) — Top-seeded Louise Allen of Winston-Salem, N.C., and second-seeded Terry Phelps of Larchmont, N.Y., were winners Friday in the semifinal round of the $10,000 Stewart's-Travers Women's Tennis Classic at Skidmore College here.

The two were to face each other in the championship match Saturday.

Allen, a 20-year-old undergraduate at Trinity University in San Antonio, Texas, defeated Laura Bernstein of Hollywood, Fla., 6-1, 6-4.

Bucs' Jimmy Giles longs for more recognition

TAMPA, Fla. (AP) — His peers have voted him the best tight end in the National Football Conference each of the past two years, but Jimmie Giles of the Tampa Bay Buccaneers longs for much more recognition.

Unlike his AFC counterpart, Kellen Winslow, whose picture this summer graces the cover of several football publications that hail the San Diego Chargers' star as perhaps the league's most gifted all-around athlete, Giles feels he never has received the national exposure his performance warrants.

"I don't like to dwell on it, but I would like the exposure. It's very satisfying to be recognized by your peers who vote for the Pro Bowl, but by the same token, it would be nice to be voted All-Pro by the media," said Giles.

Obtained from Houston in a 1978 trade that gave the Oilers the draft choice Bum Phillips used to grab Earl Campbell, Giles' statistics have improved steadily during four seasons with Tampa Bay.

The 6-foot-3, 245-pounder, who went to Alcorn State on a baseball scholarship and was lured into football during his junior year by the prospect of playing in the Louisiana Superdome, caught 45 passes for 786 yards and six touchdowns last year.

"I was ready to try a baseball career," says Giles, who was drafted by the Los Angeles Dodgers and played a season for Bellingham, Wash., of the Class A Northwest League. "But I always thought I could make it in football."

Connors, Lendl reach ATP semis; Gerulaitis upset

MASON, Ohio (AP) — Second-seeded Jimmy Connors and No. 3 Ivan Lendl took different routes Friday to move into the semifinals of the $300,000 ATP Tennis Championships, while No. 11 Steve Denton advanced by upsetting fifth-seeded Vitas Gerulaitis.

In a night match, John McEnroe, the world's No. 1 player and defending champion of this hard court tournament, met 17-year-old Guy Forget of France.

Connors defeated No. 15 Brian Gottfried 6-2, 6-4 and Denton shocked Gerulaitis 6-4, 6-4.

Lendl, who will meet Connors in one of Saturday's semifinals, advanced when fifth-seeded Gene Mayer was forced to default with a partial muscle tear.

Mayer, who has a history of injuries, pulled the muscle in his right thigh in Thursday's match, officials said. He was examined by a doctor Friday morning and it was determined he had suffered torn fibers in the muscle.

Denton, a University of Texas graduate who now lives in Driscoll, Texas, broke Gerulaitis at 30 in the fifth game of the opening set and took a quick 2-0 lead in the second set, breaking the New Yovker in the first game. Gerulaitis evened the match in the sixth game, but Denton immediately broke back as Gerulaitis double-faulted twice.

Alexander upset at Stowe

STOWE, Vt. (AP) — Jay Lapidus, a former all-American from Princeton University, advanced to the semifinals of the $75,000 Stowe Grand Prix tennis tournament Friday by upsetting fifth seed John Alexander 6-2, 6-4.

Lapidus, who is ranked 103rd in the world, had never gotten past the quarterfinals of a Grand Prix tournament during his short career as a pro.

Lapidus will face Tom Gullikson, a 7-6, 7-6 winner over 1980 NCAA champion Robert Van't Hof, in Saturday's semifinals.

The victor will move into Sunday's finals against the winner of the match between Terry Moor and Eric Fromm, with a chance to earn the $15,000 first prize. Moor and Fromm advanced with victories Thursday.

In doubles action, South Africans Skalke Van Der Merwe and Freddie Sauer defeated the second-seeded brothers team of Tony and Sammy Giammalva 6-3, 6-3.

Sauer and Van Der Merwe will face Mike Fishbach and Fromm, who were 7-5, 7-6 winners over Tim Mayotte and Fritz Buehning in the semifinals of the doubles competition.

Mandlikova adowns Ruzici

MONTREAL (AP) — Hana Mandlikova advanced to the semifinals of the $200,000 Player's Challenge women's tennis tournament with a 6-2, 6-4 victory over Virginia Ruzici of Romania Friday.

Mandlikova will play her semifinal match Saturday against the winner of Friday night's match between Martina Navratilova and unseeded Iva Budarova of Czechoslovakia.

Earlier, third-seeded Andrea Jaeger moved into the semifinals with a 6-2, 6-3 victory over Helena Sukova of Czechoslovakia. She faces Italy's Sabina Simmonds in the other semifinal. Simmonds advanced with a 7-5, 6-2 victory over Eva Pfaff of West Germany.

University must show financial record to city

SYRACUSE, N.Y. (AP) — City officials have gained the right to take a look into Syracuse University's financial records in their battle for $1 million in taxes from the school's Carrier Dome.

The dispute goes back to the university's refusal to reimburse city expenses for police, fire and traffic protection during major events such as last year's Sugar Ray Leonard world championship fight and two Rolling Stones rock concerts.

City officials contend that they have the right to tax the domed stadium since it is used for noneducational events such as political fund-raisers, rock concerts and boxing matches. University officials contend that since the private school is a nonprofit institution it should not pay taxes.

In January, city officials sent the university a tax bill totaling nearly $1 million for 1982 based on an assessment of $6.2 million on the 50,000-seat domed stadium and surrounding parking lots.

The university balked at paying the bill, and the dispute moved into the courts.

University officials contend state lawmakers had confirmed the dome's tax-exempt status in 1980 legislation. University officials accused the city of "governmental harassment."

On Wednesday, state Supreme Court Justice Thomas J. Murphy gave the city the right to look at the university's records. University officials say they will appeal.

Feller belongs up there with Lincoln, Warren Court

The Washington Post
and Los Angeles Times

When you talk about the giants of civil rights in this country, you begin with Lincoln and Jefferson, Harriet Beecher Stowe, Dred Scott and John Brown's body and F.D.R. and the Warren Court — and, of course, Dizzy Dean and Bob Feller.

Dizzy Dean and Bob Feller?

Not the Bob Feller who got in those shouting matches with Jackie Robinson, who said of Robinson he was, "If Robinson were white, I doubt if they would consider him Big League material?" Not THAT Feller?"

Yes, even that Feller.

YOU HAVE to understand what the climate was in this country when Bob Feller first became "Rapid Robert' Feller, the plowboy who began striking out major league hitters in groups of 18 per game.

Baseball, in those days, was as Jim Crow as an Alabama restroom. It had to preserve the fiction that lily-white baseball was the finest in the land. In baseball, you didn't even get the back of the bus. You walked. It forced black players to congregate in something called the "Negro" leagues or to barnstorm with bearded freaks like the House of David. Black ballplayers, it conceded, were "flashy." But they said it as if to imply so were ladies of the evening. That it was the red light district of the sport.

Bob Feller changed all that. He didn't set out to do it. Bob Feller set out to make a buck. As usual. He had a high instinct for that.

YOU SEE, before Feller, baseball had not been integrated anywhere much. In the early '30s, a troop of white major leaguers took on black "minor" leaguers in an exhibition game or two. But, the powers that be frowned on that. They particularly feared a comparison between their "big leaguers" and a "bush" leaguer like Satchel Paige or Josh Gibson.

Dizzy Dean got bored with that. Diz was making, probably, $3,500 for winning 30 games a year for the Cardinals. Dizzy didn't care what color the other pitcher was so long as they filled a barnstorm ballpark.

Bob Feller felt the same way. Secure in their own talent and confidence, Dean and Feller willingly stacked their reputations against Paige, Gibson and others.

Feller and Paige campaigned through corn-fed America matching inshoots against each other and local talent for pass-the-hat money for years. Satchel usually out-pitched Rapid Robert, who was on his way to the Hall of Fame at the time. Feller didn't mind.

BOB FELLER pitched three no-hitters and 12 one-hitters in the major leagues, but some of his greatest pitching duels were in the winter in Sun Belt minor league towns against a superannuated, gangly black who had to wear four pairs of socks so his legs would be visible at all and had to grip a baseball with spidery fingers and skinny wrists no bigger than a rubber band. Feller didn't feel threatened. Baseball did. They tried to stop him. Satchel Paige was to write: "I told some baseball writers in Pittsburgh, 'You write that I'll take a team from the Negro Leagues and we'll play the all-stars from the major leagues, and we'll play them right across the country anywhere, any time. You write we'll beat 'em so bad, they won't play us ever again anymore.'"

After the war, Bob Feller chartered two planes and took Satchel Paige at his word and flew Satch and the Negro Leagues' best and a big league team of its best and went off on "the best organized, most successful barnstorming tour ever held," as Feller was to tell me at an Oldtimers' game in Dodger Stadium recently. "I had to pay writers in some towns under the table to write up the contest and make it controversial," Feller confessed. "We couldn't raise the inflammable race, black-white issue in the advertising, but they sure could bring it out in their columns. And we filled every ballpark we went into with that. I had Stan Musial, Bob Lemon, Rollie Helmsley, Micky Vernon and others. Stan Musial made more money with me than he had gotten for his cut for winning the World Series that year. I paid up to $6,000 a game to some players. Satch was rolling in dough."

BETTER THAN the money for Satch was the media reaction. In town after town, the local press boxers would blast major league baseball for not having a pitcher the caliber of Satchel Paige in it. Since the games were mostly on the West Coast, however, it took a while for that to leak back East. You see, sports dogma was supposed to come the other way.

Feller didn't do it out of any hot-eyed zeal for reform. But, didn't Lincoln himself say, "If I could save the Union without freeing any slave, I would do it; and if I could do it by freeing all the slaves, I would do it; and if I could do it by freeing some and leaving others, I would do that, too." Did Branch Rickey sign black ballplayers because he came from a long line of abolitionists — or because it was the last remaining pool of untapped talent in the hemisphere?

Bob Feller had no rose-strewn path to glory himself in baseball. He was in the service for four full seasons in his prime; yet, he managed to win 262 games. He never got in a World Series until he was in his dotage; yet, he pitched a two-hitter and lost it to an umpire's wrong call. He never made more than $80,000 in one season, even with his three no-hitters and dozen one-hitters. Some .500 pitchers make that in a week now.

WHEN FELLER signed as a highschooler, the Cleveland Indians hid him by assigning him to a minor league contract (Fargo, N.D.). These shenanigans later caught the eye of Commissioner Kenesaw Landis who would rule Feller a free agent. The Red Sox's Tom Yawkey, Feller told me, offered $250,000 to him, an unheard-of sum in those depression days. "But, Cleveland had paid all the medical bills for my father who had had an operation for cancer then, and I would not sign with any other team," Feller said.

Oddly enough, Feller's prickly relationship with Jackie Robinson sprang from differences which began when Jackie was taken along on one of Feller's touring troupes, picking up not only pocket money, but probably more than he made regularly.

Feller is an unlikely candidate for a role in history as an emancipator. No one is going to suggest him for inclusion on Mt. Rushmore. But, Bob Feller's contribution to the game, no matter whether it's due to his own ego or greed, is a lot more considerable than 262 victories, 46 shutouts, 2,581 strikeouts, or his record of 36 complete games out of 42 started in one year. When Feller set the major league strikeout record in 1946, he still told the world Satchel Paige was a far greater pitcher than he was — and then he let Satchel prove it — he did as much to break down hypocritical barriers as anyone.

Fritz Crisler leaves enviable grid mark

ANN ARBOR, Mich. (AP) — Herbert Orin "Fritz" Crisler of the University of Michigan, one of the most successful football coaches and athletic directors in intercollegiate sports history, is dead at the age of 83, authorities reported today.

Crisler died Thursday night following several recent illnesses, said U-M sports information director Bruce Madej. Crisler had been hospitalized at least twice in recent months, once reportedly suffering from pneumonia, said Madej.

Crisler came to the University of Michigan in 1938 as head football coach. He added the duties of athletic director three years later and held the AD's job until his retirement in 1968.

His career as a football coach climaxed in 1948 when his Michigan Wolverines won the national championship with a 14-game winning streak capped with a 49-0 defeat of Southern California in the Rose Bowl. In the 10-year span before he left coaching following the 1948 season, Crisler compiled a 71-16-3 record and won the Western Conference championship twice, in 1943 and 1947.

He was an innovator as well as a winning coach. It was Crisler who is generally credited with founding the now universally used platoon system of separate offensive and defense teams in football. Before Crisler switched to the two-team concept, players handled both offensive and defensive duties with only occasional substitutions.

During his decade of coaching, Crisler's squads outscored his opponents 2,234 to 732 and his Wolverines gained 26,598 yards while giving up 17,321.

His teams finished second in the Western Conference six times and third and fourth on two other occasions.

Crisler left his mark at the university in many ways. He decided he wanted to dress up the plain black football helmet that U-M players had used for years, so he created a distinctive winged-helmet that is still worn by Michigan teams today.

Before coming to Michigan, Crisler served as head football coach at Minnestoa in 1930-31 and at Princeton from 1932-37. His Minnesota teams went 10-7-1 and his Princeton squads registered a 35-9-5 mark while going undefeated in two seasons.

BOWLING BEAT

Hopkins' rolls 10 strike 280 game

BY RANDY ISENBERG

Darrell Hopkins strung together 10 strikes in a row to finish with a 280 game while bowling in the Dellwood Sunday night scratch league at Dellwood Lanes. He finished with a 607 series. In the same league Mike Valasco (233-618), Ruben Urias (277-621) and Karen Jordan (202-576) rolled well.

Russ Driever, with a 643 series, Jim Foster, With a 640 series were tops for the men while Janice Moore's 595 series was tops for the women. She also had a 245 game.

John Reagan, 238-574, a rapidly improving bowler; Van Temple, 242-628, and juan Bustillos, 225-602, in the Early Mixers League; Gene Henslee, 263, in the Mid Week Break Mixed; Ray Williams, 225-607, Dana Shank, 244-593, in the Tuesday Aces; Russ Driever, 232-643, and Janice Moore, 245-593 in the Alley Cats; In the Texas Instruments League Neil Gould had his personal best game and his first 600 series, 235-615; Cindy Wilson, 234-529 in the Tuesday Trio Ladies League; and Jimmy Foster, 267-640, in the Merry Mixers League.

This weekend Dellwood Lanes will be hosting local qualifying for the Texas All-Star Bowling Championship Tournament. This is a scratch event with the first place winners in both men's and women's events winning entry fees to the state tournament to be held in Fort Worth over the Labor Day weekend.

The Southwest Amateur Bowling Association will be holding tournaments at the Oakwood Lanes in Lubbock on August 21, and in Midland at Dellwood Lanes on August 28.

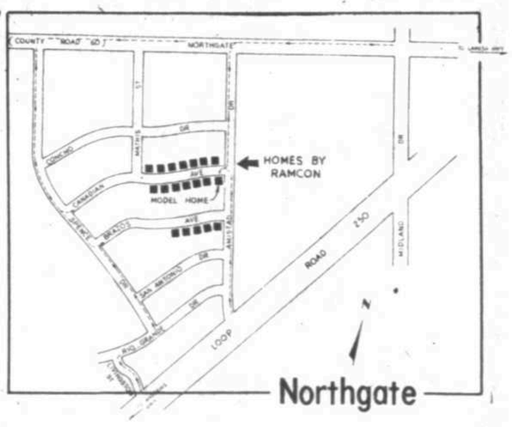
$673.30 Per Month



You can't afford NOT to buy any longer!

Total move in costs of $5250 is based on 5% down or $3800 plus $1450 limited closing costs based on 15 days prepaid interest. The first year's payment of $673.30 (principal and interest only) is based on a loan amount of $71,400. The first year's payment and buyer qualification will be calculated equivos tent to a rate of 10 7/8% for 95% loan-to-value. Interest will be charged at a rate of 15 7/8% for the first 6 months of the loan. After the first 6 months interest will be changed at the most recent 6 months Treasury Bill plus 4.25%. Payments on these mortgages are graduated so as to increase the principal and interest payments 7.50% each year for the next 4 years. At the end of the first 5 year period, the graduation in payments will cease. A new payment schedule will be computed using a variable rate mortgage to amortize the remaining balance over the remaining 25 years of the mortgage bases upon the then current Treasury Bill rate plus 4.25%. The 7 1/2% maximum increase can be more if the original loan principal exceeds 125%. At each 5 year anniversary date, the payment may be adjusted to allow the remaining payments to fully amortize the loan. Annual percentage rate approximately 16.575%.
