Reagan knew hostages at stake

WASHINGTON (AP) — Despite President Reagan's assertions he did not swap arms for hostages, the administration dispatched weapons to Iran last year with the understanding that kidnapped Americans would be freed, according to published reports.

The arms shipments were approved by Reagan last January with the understanding that either all the hostages held by Shiite Moslem militants in Lebanon would be released or the U.S. arms shipments would be halted, NBC News said Thursday.

The reasoning on the arms shipments was contained in a background paper prepared for the president at the time he authorized the sales, The Washington Post and Los Angeles Times reported in today's editions. It appears Reagan was never given the paper, but was briefed on it orally, administration sources told the newspapers.

Citing an unpublished Senate Intelligence Committee staff report, NBC said CIA Director William Casey warned at one point that revelations of the Iranian arms sales could be very damaging and that if the sales were disclosed publicly they should be portrayed as a political attempt to reach out to moderates in Iran. As it turned out, that was the tact adopted by the administration.

The committee uncovered no evidence that Reagan knew about the alleged diversion of millions of dollars in profits from the Iranian arms sales to Nicaragua's Contra rebels, according to NBC.

The staff report only said Reagan appeared surprised when told money had been diverted to the Contras, NBC said.

But Casey, now suffering from the aftereffects of surgery to remove a cancerous brain tumor, did know about the diversion plan as early as Oct. 7, 1986, several days earlier than he has acknowleged, NBC said.

The report, based only on interviews conducted so far, included many elements of the controversy that previously had been revealed by individual legislators or in news reports. It contained no startling new revelations.

The network said the committee never learned how much — if any — money was actually diverted from the arms sales to the Contras or whether Lt. Col. Oliver North, the White House aide who was fired for his alleged involvement in the diversion, was acting alone or with orders from higher authority.

But the report portrayed North and former National Security Adviser Vice Adm. John M. Poindexter as ignoring or misleading their White House superiors.

Heavy fog dims Midland air service

By JULIE HILLRICHS
Staff Writer

Aviation officials say they can't remember the last time weather conditions wreaked so much havoc at Midland Regional Airport, canceling dozens of flights and stranding thousands of passengers.

But the string of events that followed Thursday's shutdown in flight schedules no doubt will clear up their foggy memories.

Airport Director Victor M. White said only two flights were able to land before fog rolled in to the area early Thursday morning.

Afterward, all airport activity was at a standstill.

"We didn't have a single arrival all day long. This is turn meant we only had a couple of departures," White said.

An airport operations spokeswoman estimated as many 2,000 area passengers were affected by the shutdown in flight schedules.

A total of 23 inbound and 21 outbound flights were canceled during the last 24 hours, she said.

"The terminal was full," she said, as hundreds of passengers waited in line at ticket counters to make changes in their flight schedules.

"There couldn't have been anybody stranded out here because there weren't any planes coming in.

I don't think we had any passengers changing planes. If they were, they came in the night before," she added.

Persons who were stranded either returned to motels or went home, White said.

Airline officials reported Southwest, American and United Express flights landed safely at the airport before dawn. A Southwest flight arrived about 9 p.m. as the fog began to lift from the area.

A National Weather Service spokesman explained that the fog was the result of a cool front which moved across the region and became stationary south of the Midland-Odessa area.

The warmer air condensed with the cooler air and created dense fog and drizzle, reducing visibility to an eighth of a mile, he said.

Please see FOG, Page 8A

Jerry Mennenga/Reporter-Telegram

Dense fog Thursday didn't prevent this crew from working at a construction site near Fielder Street. The fog, however, was responsible for the cancellation of dozens of flights at Midland Regional Airport. As many as 2,000 passengers reportedly were stranded, officials said.

Basin residents respond to needs of abused child

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

The publicized severe abuse of a 2½-year-old Odessa child has has sparked an outpouring of response from the public to the girl's plight as well as hope that the case will generate public concern for the problem of child abuse in general.

The case has evoked loving tenderness in many Midland-Odessa area citizens toward abused and neglected children.

"I would love to take her in," Louisa Sanchez said of the 2½-year-old girl who was sexually and physically abused. "I know that there is a special place for her in heaven."

The girl's injuries were evidenced by about 200 scars, including a deep burn caused by cigarette. She had been repeatedly raped, and suffered bruises, cuts, broken nose and blackened eye, officials said. The father, Genovevo Dominguez, 28, was charged with aggravated sexual assault of a child, injury to a child and failure to report child abuse. The mother, Guadalupe Dominguez, 22, was charged with injury to a child and failure to report child abuse. Both are in the Ector County Jail in lieu of posting bond.

"I hate to say this," said Mrs. Sanchez, who is the mother of two children, "but I almost wish she had gone to heaven rather than through the abuse."

Mrs. Sanchez was among the flood of Midland and Odessa people who volunteered to adopt the girl, to welcome her into their homes as a foster child or to donate food, clothing, teddy bears and other items to her.

Many mothers have volunteered to help the girl.

"Our hearts just go out to the poor little child," Mrs. Sanchez said.

The girl already has been placed in a foster home and has received medical attention, according to Bruce Carter, program director for the Texas Department of Human Resources (TDHR) in Odessa. The girl's four brothers, who did not suffer the abuse, also were placed in a shelter.

Mrs. Sanchez, whose children are 7 and 5 years old, said that "just the thought (of an abused child) is pathetic."

The girl, who has the body of a 1-year-old child due to lack of proper nutrition, is "still withdrawn and in a shell," said Investigator Troy Davis of the Ector County Sheriff's Department Child Abuse Division.

Sheriff's deputies and TDHR workers uncovered the case on New Year's Eve, Dec. 31, at the parents' home.

"She was a female, and unfortunately was singled out," Davis said. Her brothers, who range in age from 7 years to eight months, apparently were not abused and appeared well nourished, he said.

"She stood in one spot and never moved or even blinked," Davis said of the girl when she was found at home by the sheriff's deputies and TDHR workers. The child apparently feared that any movement would result in her being harmed, he said.

"She showed no emotion," Davis said. "We just hope that there is no brain damage."

Boy's painful leg surgery 'worth it'

NEWARK, N.J. (AP) — Doctors broke 10-year-old Anthony Tarabocchia Jr.'s legs in two places, then fitted them with harnesses and lengthened them a millimeter a day for eight months with excruciatingly painful turns of a screw.

The procedure enabled the boy born a dwarf to grow 7 inches last year, and other kids don't call him "shrimp" or "midget" any more.

"We did this because we felt we wanted to give Anthony the best chance to live a normal life in society," his mother, Mary, said in a recent interview.

"For him to come home (from school) he was always tired. These little legs had to carry his whole torso. We wanted to improve what he had."

Tony's parents took him to a hospital outside Rome in October 1985 after American doctors refused to perform the experimental leg-lengthening procedure, saying it was too risky. On Thanskgiving, after five operations, he returned to his home in the New York suburb of Moonachie.

Doctors broke the boy's shinbones in two places, passed nine wires through, connected them to metal bands and attached screws to the bands. Every day they turned the screws a millimeter, calcium built up in the gaps and by the end of eight months, Tony was 4-foot-3. He was 3-foot-8 when the procedure began.

A similar procedure will be performed in Italy on Tony's thighs in a year, adding 4 more inches, and with natural growth, he could reach 5-foot-4, 6 inches more than expected.

"How exciting it is for him not to have to jump to turn the light on," his mother said.

Local museum opens its new wing

By GEORGIA TEMPLE
Staff Writer

A constant flow of museum members and guests passed through the Museum of the Southwest Thursday night during the grand opening of its new wing.

For Jim Cox, president of the museum's board of trustees and acting director since June, the reception meant that "a dream has come true."

The 15,600 square-foot wing, built at a cost of $1,500,000, connects to the Turner House, which houses the museum's main gallery space, gift shop, storage and offices, at the Thomas Gallery.

In addition to providing 4,000 additional square feet of gallery space, the wing houses badly needed storage space for the museum's collections, a multi-purpose room and classroom joined by a projection room, an outside ramp and loading dock where art collections may be brought into and taken out of the museum, graphics and woodworking workshops and curatorial offices.

Total square footage for the museum, which includes the Stables Gallery, the new wing, the Turner House, and linkage between the two, is 30,000 square feet.

For Ed Vogler, a member of the board of trustees and chairman of the architectural review committee, opening the new wing felt "fantastic.

Comptrollers office estimates state deficit

AUSTIN (AP) — The comptroller's office is estimating that the state government budget deficit will total $5.8 billion for the 1988-89 fiscal years unless more spending cuts are made or more revenue is raised, it was reported today.

The Houston Chronicle said a preliminary estimate from Comptroller Bob Bullock's office had been given to some top state officials this week.

The newspaper said Bullock's estimate shows that Texas tax collections will decline during 1988-89 for the first time in 30 years.

Bullock is required by law to present the Legislature, which convenes Tuesday for its 70th regular session, with an official estimate of state revenues that will be available for spending in the 1988-89 fiscal years.

The Chronicle reported that the $5.8 billion deficit forecast is based on:

— An estimated $1 billion deficit remaining in the current budget year, which ends Aug. 31.

— A proposal by the Legislative Budget Board staff to maintain most state services and programs at current levels, except for agencies with "obvious and demonstrable needs," such as the prison system.

— A proposal to increase state funding for colleges and universities by $667 million.

Earlier forecasts by the comptroller had put the 1988-89 budget shortfall in the range of $4.6 billion to $4.9 billion.

But the comptroller's latest estimate said, "The revision upward in the projected shortfall comes totally from increases in spending estimates by the LBB ... and not from any downward revision in our revenue estimates."

WORLD IN BRIEF

Cold wave hits Europe

Associated Press

Swedes donned longjohns on the advice of arctic survival experts, waist-deep snow isolated more than 200 Greek mountain villages, and a freezing fog forced the cancellation of scores of flights at London's Heathrow Airport.

Severe winter weather on Thursday beset much of northern Europe, the Soviet Union and northern Greece, creating road conditions that caused numerous traffic accidents, injuries and some deaths.

In Warsaw, where temperatures fell to minus 24 Thursday, salesladies in the main Centrum department stores downtown bundled up in heavy overcoats and fur hats because the room temperature was only 23 above due to heating problems, a Polish television news report said.

A freezing fog covered much of southeast and central England on Thursday, forcing Heathrow Airport officials to cancel more than 60 arrivals and departures and delay 70 other flights for one to five hours, including 15 to the United States.

Air traffic controllers reported less than 490 feet of visibility at Heathrow and Gatwick, London's two busiest airports, where movements were restricted to planes with automatic takeoff and landing systems. Other incoming planes were diverted to Luton, Stansted and Manchester, the Royal Air Force station at Northolt and to Brussels and Paris.

Air traffic apparently was back to normal this morning.

Israeli raid reported

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Israeli warplanes today rocketed Palestinian guerrilla positions in hills overlooking the southern port city of Sidon, and police said three guerrillas were killed and a fourth was missing.

It was Israel's second raid in south Lebanon in a week. At least three people were wounded in an Israeli raid Sunday on guerrilla targets in villages in U.N.-policed southern Lebanon.

Police said six Israeli jets targeted the bluffs around the Christian town of Maghdousheh, 3 miles southeast of Sidon. They said the jets fired 36 rockets in three sorties, beginning at 9:20 a.m. and continuing for 10 minutes.

The guerrillas fired several SA-7 ground-to-air missiles at the planes but they all missed, police said.

African students boycott

PEKING (AP) — African students protesting a racist letter boycotted classes today, and student representatives met with Chinese education officials to demand a public apology and guarantee of their safety.

The student representatives met this morning with State Education Commission officials, but information on the meeting was not immediately available.

The students also planned a meeting with All-China Students Federation officials, said student sources.

The class boycott was announced Thursday after about 200 students, mostly Africans, marched 12 miles to the Moroccan Embassy to protest the letter, circulated among foreign students and some African embassies. Moroccan Ambassador Abderrahim Harkett is dean of the African diplomatic corps.

Shamir seeking summit

TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) — Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir appealed to King Hussein of Jordan for a summit meeting after he was briefed by U.S. envoy Richard Murphy, who met with the king in Amman.

Murphy, who talked with Shamir on Thursday, met today with Israeli Defense Minister Yitzhak Rabin and then left for Egypt. The assistant U.S. secretary of state is on a two-week tour of the region in an effort to revitalize the Middle East peace process.

Details of Murphy's meeting with Rabin were not disclosed.

ANC ad printed; Correspondent ousted

WORLD

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — A Johannesburg newspaper today printed an ad for the outlawed African National Congress hours after the government banned such actions. The New York Times correspondent said he was ordered to leave the country by Saturday.

Alan Cowell, who has been The New York Times bureau chief in South Africa since 1983, said the Ministry of Home Affairs gave him the expulsion order Dec. 23 when it notified him it had rejected his work permit renewal application.

The ministry also refused to grant an entry visa to Cowell's designated successor, Serge Schmemann, and gave no reason for either action, said Cowell.

Cowell, 39, of Lancaster, England, is scheduled to become the Times' correspondent in Athens next month. Schmemann, formerly Times' Moscow bureau chief, was to have replaced Cowell in a routine personnel change on Jan. 1.

The government repeatedly has complained that foreign news media distort the social conflict in South Africa following the outbreak in September 1984 of widespread black protests against apartheid.

In a separate move, the government at midnight issued new rules banning newspapers and magazines from carrying advertisements or reports calculated to improve the reputation of outlawed organizations, or to explain policies of such groups.

The restrictions, decreed under the state of emergency imposed June 12, were contained in a three-page proclamation in the latest government gazette and were issued hours after the ANC marked its 75th anniversary with full-page advertisements in 22 South African newspapers.

The ads said "Unban the ANC," in bold type 1½ inches high and appeared in some morning and afternoon newspapers in all major cities, including Johannesburg, Pretoria, Durban, Cape Town and Port Elizabeth.

The text accused the government-run South African Broadcasting Corp. and the government Bureau for Information of bombarding the public with distortions and untruths about the ANC and said: "Let the ANC speak for itself."

Under the new rules, such ads are illegal. Other banned groups include the country's Communist Party and the Pan-Africanist Congress, a black nationalist movement.

Both before and after the ad ban was issued, police met with several newspaper editors and confiscated documents, apparently as a basis for possible prosecutions.

The South African Broadcasting Corp. quoted the deputy information minister, Stoffel van der Merwe, as saying lawyers were "examining the possibility of taking action against certain newspapers regarding an ANC advertisement."

Among the newspapers visited by police were the Cape Times in Cape Town, the Daily News in Durban and the Pretoria News.

City Press, a Johannesburg semi-weekly for black readers, carried the banned advertisement today. But assistant editor Z.B. Molefe said the newspaper's print deadlines did not permit it to stop the ad.

The report also said that for the first time since the 1950s, state tax collections will drop. The decline is estimated at 2.9 percent from the current two-year budget period.

Bullock's report said tax collections would be "dragged down by the combination of weak economic growth, a tax system that leans heavily on the oil and gas industries and the expiration of temporary tax hikes set to expire Aug. 31."

The Legislature, in two special sessions last summer, raised the state sales tax rate from 4⅛ percent to 5¼ percent beginning Jan. 1. However, that $850 million increase also was scheduled to expire on Aug. 31.

Former hostages 'blamed' for scandal

By PEGGY ROBERSON
Hearst Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON — Former U.S. hostages in Lebanon are discovering to their surprise and dismay that many Americans blame them — the victims — for the Iranian arms scandal and President Reagan's political troubles.

At least 90 percent of the callers to a recent Akron, Ohio, radio program featuring former hostage Jeremy Levin and his wife Lucille were hostile to the hostages, the Levins reported. He was Cable News Network bureau chief in Beirut in March 1984, when he was kidnapped off the street near his home.

"People are angry at the hostages for getting their beloved president into this situation," said Mrs. Levin.

On a Cleveland television talk show in November, the Levins appeared with another guest who startled them when he described the hostages as "traitors" because, he said, they were helping terrorists just by being in Lebanon.

"Do you mean missionaries and journalists are traitors?" Mrs. Levin asked him. "If so, that is truly a revolutionary idea."

The Levins' experience has been shared by other hostages or hostage relatives. Peggy Say, sister of hostage Terry Anderson, bureau chief for the Associated Press in Beirut, said half the callers on a recent New York radio call-in program were "vicious," adding that "even the announcer was shocked."

In a telephone interview from her home in Batavia, N.Y., Say commented that the public attitude is "disturbing. The hostages weren't responsible for what was done on their behalf."

She said she and her relatives fear the controversy over the arms sale could prevent the administration from trying new initiatives to free her brother and the others.

Kit Sutherland, daughter of hostage Thomas Sutherland, dean of agriculture at the American University in Beirut, said in a phone interview from Ft. Collins, Colo., that she has heard people say the hostages deserved what they got because they chose to live and work in that Middle East trouble spot.

"It really hurts," she said. "Dad took incredible precautions, but they weren't enough."

Not all the reaction has been negative. Say and the Levins reported most of their mail has been supportive.

Most of the former hostages and families of those still being held say they have bonded together as a kind of national family. They talk frequently by telephone, with the veterans helping the families of recently captured hostages learn to cope with the anxiety, frustration and publicity.

The Levins, along with freed hostages, the Revs. Martin Jenco and Benjamin Weir, gave lists of perhaps 5,000 names of friends and acquaintances who had written or called them to the Yellow Ribbon Society, formed by the Westmoreland United Church of Christ in Washington. Late last month the society sent letters urging people to study the Middle East situation and act to shape "an effective foreign policy for peace."

In June 1985, after remaining silent for months over the hostages' plight — at the request of the State Department and White House — Say and other hostage relatives went public with their complaints. They spoke out in frustration after 39 passengers on an airliner hijacked in Beirut by the Islamic Jihad were freed, and their loved ones were not.

Since 1984, 10 American residents of Beirut have been captured. As some were freed, others were kidnapped. Five remain as hostages. Some White House officals have contended they were under enormous pressure to free the hostages, citing pleas from the relatives.

Last November, after a political storm broke over arms sales to Iran, White House Chief of Staff Donald Regan pleaded for understanding. "What is a human life worth?" he demanded of reporters at a press luncheon. "The president is a man of compassion. He's sitting there (and) you have Peggy Say, you have everyone in the family saying, 'Please, Mr. President, you've got to do something.'"

Several former hostages have been openly critical of the arms sale. But one recently released hostage, David P. Jacobsen, former director of the American University Hospital in Beirut, contended the sale saved his life.

IRAN

The intelligence panel could neither prove nor disprove whether Poindexter or North ever told the president the Contras were being supported with profits from Iran arms sales, according to NBC's account.

It said at a time when other officials were becoming skeptical of the sales, North argued to save the operation, contending that "if the program is terminated, then the hostages will die."

The report says Iranian arms broker Manucher Ghorbanifar suggested to his CIA contact in March 1986 that money from the arms sales be diverted to the Contras.

NBC said the report describes an April 4, 1986, memo written by North and found in his White House safe describing a plan for diverting $12 million to the Contras.

Poindexter, who is portrayed in the report as more than a passive bystander, could have seen the memo but there was no evidence that he did, the network reported.

On Oct. 1, a senior CIA official, Charles Allen, became suspicious about the money diversion and told Robert Gates, then the CIA deputy director, according to the report. On Oct. 7, the two men briefed Casey, and two days later Casey and Gates asked North about it, it said.

The report said North denied any diversion of funds, but did mention a Swiss bank account.

And, on Nov. 16, Casey suggested that Poindexter get the White House counsel to investigate the Contra money, but Poindexter replied that he could not trust the counsel's office to keep things quiet, the network said.

The report, according to NBC, underscores Secretary of State George P. Shultz's lack of knowledge of the arms sales. When Shultz learned in April 1986 that an arms sale might be in the works, he asked Poindexter about it and was told there was no such plan, the report said.

Reagan back in White House after surgery

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan, intent on resuming his cherished horseback riding "pretty soon," was to spend his first full day at the White House after surgery, out of the public eye and under doctors' orders to avoid strenuous work.

Reagan, who told reporters, "I feel great," as he left Bethesda Naval Hospital on Thursday, was to remain in the residential quarters of the White House today.

During his four-day stay at the hospital, Reagan's physicians said no evidence of cancer was found and they called his recovery from Monday's prostate surgery "excellent in every respect."

White House spokesman Larry Speakes said Reagan was to have his daily session with chief of staff Donald T. Regan and get a briefing from National Security Adviser Frank Carlucci in the private quarters, which comprise the upper floors of the main White House building.

Speakes said Reagan's doctors had advised him to avoid heavy lifting, wood chopping, horseback riding or other strenuous exercise during a six-week recovery period. He said he did not know whether the president would make his usual February trip to his ranch near Santa Barbara, Calif., where he often chops wood and rides.

Reagan, who beamed in response to cheers from dozens of aides greeting his return to the White House, was asked when he expected to get back to riding horses, one of his favorite pastimes.

AP Laserphoto

Sharing a laugh with his wife Nancy upon his return Thursday to the White House is U.S. President Ronald Reagan.

"Pretty soon," he answered. "It's got to get a little warmer."

"What do you do for an encore?" a reporter called out.

"An appendectomy," the grinning president replied.

When reporters said later that Reagan appeared to them to be walking stiffly, Speakes grinned and said: "He generally walks that way anyway. It comes from the Western movies. That's the way they walk down Main Street."

The president and his wife Nancy planned to forgo their usual weekend trip to the presidential retreat at Camp David, Md., and spend a quiet weekend at the White House.

Reagan is scheduled to deliver his weekly radio address Saturday, but he will only have to go to one of the rooms in the lower floors of the residence to deliver it, Speakes said. Normally, when in Washington, Reagan gives his radio address from the Oval Office.

At Bethesda, where he had been a patient since Sunday, Reagan walked along a row of uniformed Navy men and women and shook hands before boarding his helicopter in crisp, sunny weather.

"I feel great," he told a group of reporters observing his departure.

Asked whether he was ready to go back to work, the president, who met with advisers while in the hospital, said: "Of course. I haven't stopped."

GROWING

Tony said he was happy with the operation.

"I can reach stuff," the fifth-grader said, adding that kids don't make fun of him anymore.

"They said I had a big head, and I was small for my age. They called me shrimp, midget and all kinds of other names."

During agonizing moments in the hospital, "I would say, 'Anthony, are you sorry?'" Mrs. Tarabocchia said. "He would always say, 'Mommy, it hurts, but look at my legs, they're growing!'"

These days, the pain is less. The wire structure remains in Tony's legs, and he walks with crutches. Mrs. Tarabocchia said that after extensive therapy and rehabilitation, it is hoped her son will be able to walk on his own.

MUSEUM

"We now have a facility not only to work in, but one that we can also exhibit part of our own permanent art collection and our archeological collections," Vogler says.

The new wing was paid for with private contributions and a matching grant from the Mabee Foundation in the amount of $168,000. Architect for the project was Ford, Powell and Carson, and the builder was Dave Leonard Construction. The new wing and its galleries have not been named at this time.

Another reason for Cox's happiness Thursday was the recent hiring by the museum's board of trustees of a permanent director for the museum.

Tulsa, Okla. resident Jean Cassels Hagman, former vice president and chairman of education at the Philbrook Art Center, will fill the position at the end of this month.

Cox has been acting director since Sue Devine, who was serving as acting director, moved to Dallas in June.

The museum has been without a permanent director since April of 1984.

The opening exhibit for the new wing is the Fred T. and Novadeen Hogan Collection, a collection of paintings of the Taos Founders Society of the Taos Society of Artists given to the museum in 1980. The collection, which will be on view through Feb. 6, includes works by Joseph Henry Sharp, Ernest L. Blumenschein, Bert G. Phillips, Oscar E. Berninghaus, E. Irving Couse, W. Herbert Dunton, Walter Ufer, Victor Higgins, E. Martin Hennings and Blanche Grant.

Also on exhibit is a Norman Rockwell oil, "Spring Song," donated by the Hogans. And, included in the collection is the Hogans' most recent gift, Couse's "Flower of the Prison," given in memory of Fredda Turner Durham.

"This picture ('Flower of the Prison') adds a magnificant jewel to the Fred T. and Novadeen Hogan Collection of the Taos Society of Artists paintings that form the core of our permanent collection," Cox says.

"We wouldn't be half the museum we are without the generosity, through the years, of Mr. and Mrs. Hogan," Cox says. He adds that the same could be said of Mrs. Durham, who died this fall.

In December 1985, Mrs. Durham made a gift to the museum to build a children's facility. Tentative groundbreaking for the Fredda Turner Durham Children's Museum is set for December 1987.

"The purpose of a museum is more than just affording a person the opportunity to go and 'view' paintings," Vogler says. "The new wing enables us to offer an educational process relevant to the museum, and that is why the board of trustees of the museum has undertaken the challenge to build the Fredda Turner Durham Children's Museum — not only as a memorial to her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Turner, but also to acquaint the children of the Permian Basin with the history and artistic aspect of the area around them and, by so doing, instill in them an appreciation of the artistic world in which we live."

CHILD

Davis said that the parents denied that the girl had been abused and explained that she had been injured in a fall.

Davis said he feared that the child's physical and emotional abuse would affect her for a lifetime.

"She is a shell, like a third-world child. She is completely withdrawn."

A trust fund has been set up for the girl, who was born in June 1984, at the First State Bank of Odessa, P.O. Box 634, Odessa, Texas 79760. The trust fund is entitled Dominguez Abused Child Fund, account number 233-5156.

Patty Phillips, supervisor at the Ector County Children's Services at TDHR, said that it was "wonderful" that the community responded to the needs of the girl.

"It's unfortunate that they don't understand that we have other kids with needs as great," Ms. Phillips said. TDHR caseworker Margaret Pena said that the TDHR offices were "so overwhelmed with phone calls and the generosity of people."

In both Midland and Odessa, foster homes are state-certified for the temporary care of abused and neglected children.

"We can't place a child in someone's home just because they call," said Jeannie Hunt, foster-home recruiter for the TDHR in Midland. "We have to check them out and be sure they understand what fostering is all about. You wouldn't leave your child with a stranger."

And less than 10 percent of children in foster homes become legally free for adoption, said Nancy Miller, adoption worker in Odessa.

Last year in Ector County, 184 cases of sexual abuse and 338 cases of physical abuse were reported, Mrs. Hunt said.

In Midland County, 275 cases of physical abuse, 94 cases sexual abuse and 361 neglect cases were reported, she said.

"In this job," Mrs. Hunt said, "I've seen neglected and abused children of all ages, all races, all economic levels.

As a result of legal action, a child may stay in a foster home overnight, a week, a month, six months or longer.

"We either return the child to the home (after counseling with the parent or parents), go back to court, or try to terminate parental rights," Ms. Hunt said.

In the main, the TDHR strives "to return kids to their homes whenever possible," Ms. Hunt said. "Kids belong to their families when possible." The legal system is designed so that it's "not easy for the state to take kids away. You want it to be a process."

The people who are openly concerned about the abused Odessa girl have "their hearts in the right place," Ms. Hunt said. "They are caring people, and their motivation is sweet.

"But we need foster homes for the next child and the next child, but the public won't know hear about it. They will be taken care of," she said.

"Our only plea is that people realize that this particular child represents abused children everywhere," Ms. Hunt said. "We need foster homes and resources for these other forgotten children who may be abused tomorrow or next month."

Movie with message

We often hear complaints, and sometimes with good reason, about today's movie fare and the fact that box office hits so often are the films that include a heavy dose of sex, enough profanity and vulgarism to make even a sailor blush or violence and sometimes all three.

But what about those films that are spiritually and emotionally uplifting, that bring a message that is wholesome, even inspiring? Is attendance at such movies sufficient to send today's film producers a message that more of the same should be offered?

That's one of the reasons Dr. Daniel Vestal, pastor of Midland's First Baptist Church, invited a group of civic and religious leaders to a special preview showing Tuesday of "The Mission," a film lauded by critics and among this year's top award winners at the Cannes Film Festival.

The movie has some basically good credentials: Actors Robert De Niro and Jeremy Irons, producer David Puttnam ("Chariots of Fire") and writer Robert Bolt ("A Man for All Seasons"). But beyond that it is a powerful film based on historical events that sparks a variety of emotions.

Although focusing on the missionary efforts of the Jesuit Order of the Roman Catholic Church in the South American jungles in the mid-1700s, "The Mission" is not a "Catholic film." It depicts missionaries who give their own lives to protect those who some quarters of civilized society of the period had not even come to accept as human beings. Forces involved in the events that unfold include state and church clashes over gaining or holding temporal power but the real message lies not in who is to blame for what but in the commitment mankind can and has made for doing good in the world. We don't hear or see much about that nowadays.

In order that a message of approval can be better sent to those who produce today's films, the distribution division of Warner Brothers, in cooperation with local theaters and church leaders, are offering discount tickets to churches, schools, study groups, families and individuals in the U.S. and Canada. Each use of those tickets will help send the message that there is an audience for movies of similar quality.

For more information about the project, interested persons should call Nellivee Clark at First Baptist Church, 682-1646.

"The Mission" opens here on Jan. 16 at North Park Cinema. We recommend it.

Return of emigres

Homesick, disenchanted and unable to get used to the American way of living, 50 Soviet emigres have flown back to Moscow.

"What does it mean?" some Americans will be asking. "Where did we go wrong?"

To some New Yorkers and Chicagoans it will mean a few extra seats on the subway.

To devotees of the cult that looks upon our country as the source of most if not all the evil in the world, it will be further substantiation of their creed.

To Americans who can't stand New York and Chicago it will be additional proof that living in those cities is impossible.

For the emigres themselves, going home may be a shock. Time with its mellowing qualities may have blurred some of the less pleasant aspects of life in the Soviet Union — KGB surveillance, internal travel visas, long queues at stores, consumer good shortages, a state-controlled press, radio and television, and absence or restrictions of freedoms that are taken for granted in Western countries.

For some hard-core members of the American intelligentsia who cannot stand the United States and think the grass is greener in all other fields, the return of the Soviet emigres may signal the beginning of the end of the country they cannot bring themselves to like.

A number of think-pieces to that effect may appear. For numerous intellectuals, downgrading America has been a profitable cottage industry for many years.

Soviet authorities said the departure of the 50 is only the beginning of a big wave of migration from America to the Soviet Union. If so, perhaps the wave will include people who have an abiding hunger for life in a communist society. Who knows? It could happen. That might reduce the pressure those people apply toward their goal of establishing a communist society here. We shall see.

If the return of the emigres of the USSR sets off a new series of prophecies of America's decline and fall, it should be kept in mind that only 50 are going back.

Let's not lose our perspective. More than 50 million people came to our shores during the peak years of immigration, and most of them, or their descendants, are staying.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Friday, Jan. 9, the ninth day of 1987. There are 356 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On Jan. 9, 1793, what is generally regarded as the first successful balloon flight in the United States took place as Frenchman Jean Pierre Blanchard traveled between Philadelphia and Woodbury, N.J.

On this date:

In 1788, Connecticut became the fifth state to ratify the U.S. Constitution.

In 1861, Mississippi seceded from the Union.

In 1942, the U.S. Joint Chiefs of Staff was created.

In 1945, American soldiers led by Gen. Douglas MacArthur invaded Luzon in the Philippines during World War II.

In 1964, anti-U.S. rioting broke out in the Panama Canal Zone.

In 1968, Surveyor 7 made a soft landing on the moon, ending the American series of unmanned explorations of the lunar surface.

In 1972, reclusive billionaire Howard Hughes, speaking by telephone from the Bahamas to reporters in Hollywood, said a purported biography of him by Clifford Irving was a fake.

Ten years ago: The Oakland Raiders defeated the Minnesota Vikings, 32-14, in Super Bowl XI, played in Pasadena, Calif.

Five years ago: Poland's martial law leader, Gen. Wojciech Jaruzelski, met with Roman Catholic Archbishop Jozef Glemp almost a month after martial law had been declared.

One year ago: Libyan leader Moammar Gadhafi, accused by the United States of supporting terrorism, told reporters the U.S. was a "stinking, rotten crusader" threatening Mediterranean security.

Today's birthdays: Former President Richard M. Nixon is 74. Football hall-of-famer Bart Starr is 53. Actor Bob Denver is 52. Folk singer Joan Baez is 46. Actress Susannah York is 46. Singer Crystal Gayle is 36.

Thought for today: "Reason has never failed men. Only force and oppression have made the wrecks of the world." — William Allen White, American writer (1868-1944).

Grace group helping save billions

WASHINGTON — When the federal cash is counted at the end of this fiscal year, there will be a projected savings of $41.7 billion from squeezing waste out of government programs. This enormous amount will be saved every year, in fact, because the waste has been permanently eliminated.

Jack Anderson

But it would be premature for taxpayers to start shouting hosannas. The bad news is that another $100 billion disappears down the government drain year after year.

Meanwhile, the extravagance of Congress and the laws of economics have been pushing the public debt relentlessly up, up, up, impervious to the gravitational pull of economic reality. Federal spending has ascended to heights that economists regard as unconscionable; they fear the public debt could soar beyond all economic control.

The government's spending habits have to be reversed to avoid a smashup. Yet the congressmen who appropriate all the money are nonchalant about the forbidding consequences. Since no single member can be held accountable for what the whole Congress does, each can afford, if he wishes, to be irresponsible.

The onrushing crisis is unlikely to affect the convivial, collusive atmosphere on Capitol Hill. All too many congressmen are expected to continue indulging in the same old flummery, bargaining selfishly for patronage and pork, putting parochial interests ahead of the national welfare. They look forward to the political pleasures of spending unprecedented amounts of money before the roof falls in.

These congressmen have learned to swim in the wake of the widening deficit. If the hullaballoo over the deficit starts to resemble a crisis, they won't abandon their extravagance; they'll merely howl for more taxes. For an unspoken alliance exists between the appropriators and the spenders against the taxpayers.

Yet glimpses of sunlight can be seen through the clouds. Many conscientious congressmen are responding to the danger signs and are signing up in the Grace Caucus, named for that caustic crusader against government waste, J. Peter Grace.

Last year they voted for billions in savings that could begin the prodigious adjustment to a balanced budget. The Grace Coalition, which runs the national campaign to stamp out waste in government, has called for 2,478 reforms that would reduce federal waste, inefficiency and mismanagement. The implementation of these recommendations would save an estimated $141.5 billion every year.

In a report to co-chairmen Grace and Jack Anderson, executive director George Goldberger projected $41.7 billion in savings from the reforms that have already been adopted. This is one-third of the possible savings — a respectable amount, but which still leaves $99.8 billion in continuing waste that should be eliminated.

Of the 2,478 proposals, President Reagan has accepted 1,741. Of these, 596 have been implemented, 819 are in the process of implementation and 326 are proposed for implementation in the 1987 budget. The president has done about all he can do to achieve the recommended savings; it is now largely up to Congress to eliminate the waste.

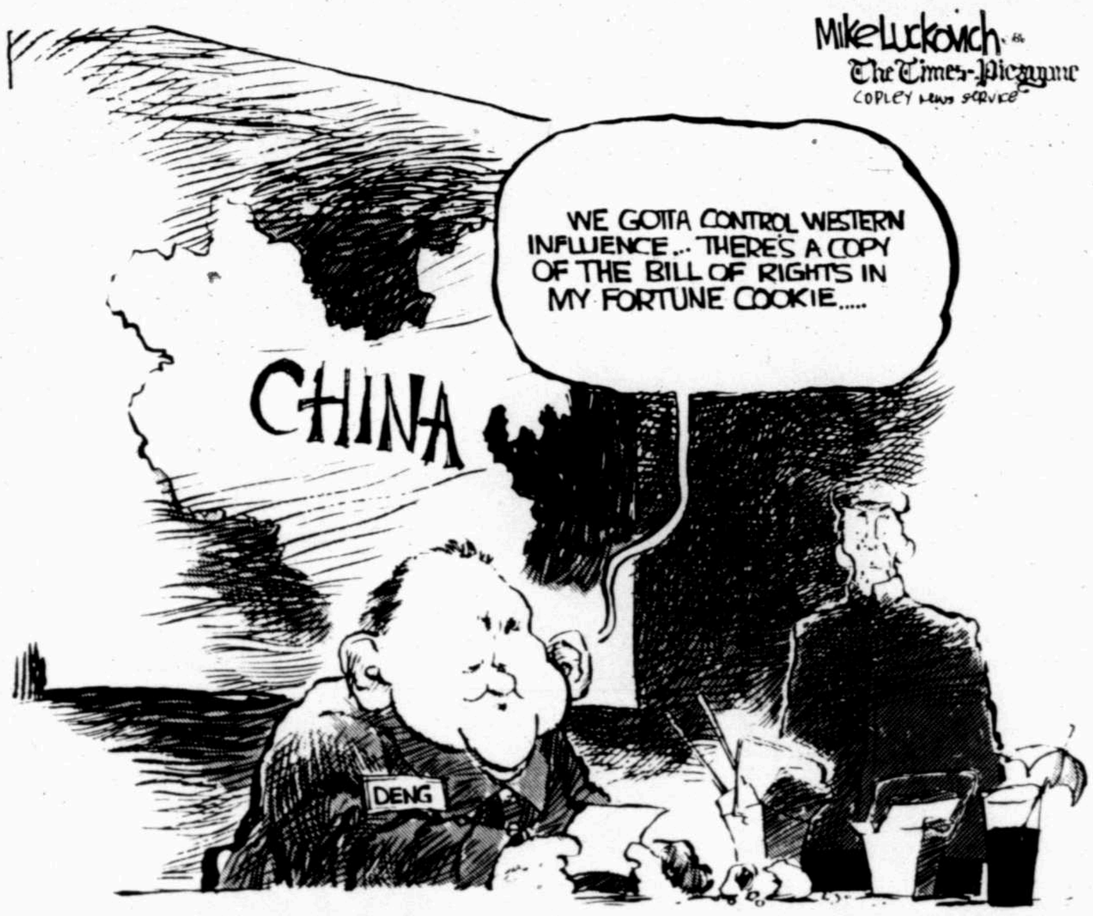

The big spenders, of course, would rather raise taxes to reduce the deficit so they can continue their prodigal ways. But if Congress will simply eliminate the waste, it won't be necessary to increase taxes. The taxpayers can find out who's on their side by asking their congressmen whether they belong to the Grace Caucus.

Footnote: Goldberger's figures are based upon the findings of the White House Office of Management and Budget and the Congressional Budget Office.

BEIRUT BLUES: There was a time — long ago — when Beirut was known as the Paris of the Middle East, and was a highly prized assignment for swinging singles in the Foreign Service. Now Beirut is a certified hardship post and the greatest single preoccupation of personnel assigned there is survival. To help in this worthy endeavor, Foggy Bottom briefs its Beirut-bound diplomats on ways to thwart terrorists and kidnappers. And husband-wife teams are favored; presumably they're more likely to stay home at night, not go looking for adventure, and they won't be as lonely as singles.

EVANS & NOVAK

Campaign ills sending GOP to sidelines

WASHINGTON — Five weeks before it became known that staffers of the Senate Republican Campaign Committee received fat bonuses in the wake of their losing 1986 election loss, veteran LaSalle County Chairman Ed Thornton of Ottawa, Ill., was hopping mad.

Rowland Evans

Robert Novak

He had received a post-election computerized "Dear Edmond" fund-raising letter from Sen. John Heinz of Pennsylvania, the campaign committee chairman. To join the committee's Inner Circle, Thornton had contributed a minimum of $1,000. But Heinz wanted more — "a special contribution of $250, $500 or the most you can afford today" — to pay off a $2.1 million emergency loan taken out during the campaign.

In a response typifying grass-roots Republican loyalists nationwide, Thornton said no. Calling Heinz's operation "an unmitigated disaster," he asserted "somebody had better be taking a good, hard look" at a campaign that outspent Democrats but lost eight Senate seats "before you start asking for more money."

Thornton, an old-fashioned Midwestern conservative, had put his finger on the Republican campaign sickness: money supplanting ideas, expensive gimmickry replacing individual effort. Those substitutions resulted in Democratic triumphs in 1986 and can be counted to produce more of the same in the future.

Since Thornton's response contained not money but advice, it went unanswered. The next he heard about the Senate campaign committee was the news report that while burdened officially with $2.2 million in debt, it had quietly distributed $225,000 in bonuses to staffers, including $50,000 to executive director Tom Griscom. Thornton told us that was "most inappropriate at this time, when they didn't do a hell of a good job."

The disastrous, themeless Republican Senate campaign of 1986 was based wholly on money. Heinz is no Reaganaut and, in fact, is best known in the Senate as a member of the bipartisan "Gang of Four" battling the president on arms control. He nosed out true-blue conservative Sen. Malcolm Wallop of Wyoming for campaign chairman following the 1984 Reagan re-election landslide not because of what he thinks but because of his past record of ferocious fund-raising.

Ferocious it was. The Ed Thorntons across America were dunned so often they were ready to rebel by the time they received the Nov. 20 computerized appeal.

Claiming they were "running behind in as many as 12 (Senate) races" (contradicting information given reporters by Griscom), Heinz disclosed he had borrowed $2.1 million. While no Republican had even dreamed of an eight-seat loss, he contended "the Democrats would have captured even more seats if we hadn't spent this extra money."

Thornton's unanswered letter of Nov. 24 encapsuled the feeling at the GOP grass roots: "There was no coordinated national campaign issue used to weld together our Republican Senate candidates. They went skittering off on their own, grasping at local and state issues and throwing a lot of money at their Democratic opponents in what must be considered to be one of the most inefficient and costly Republican campaigns in recent history."

White House political director Mitch Daniels, Griscom's predecessor at the campaign committee, is surprisingly blunt in echoing Thornton's accusation. "I think we have to question many of the ways in which money was spent" in the 1986 campaign. With "too great a substitution of technology" for "getting volunteers, getting citizens more involved," said Daniels, "many of our candidates became convinced that it was really possible to win re-election without casting issues before the public."

The quarter of a million in bonuses came as Ed Thornton was urging Heinz to "really clean house" and the chairman was trying to raise $2 million. Campaign committee staffers said Heinz insisted Griscom and others receive the bonuses. Whoever is responsible, Daniels told us he was "shocked" and that it "does not bear any resemblance to past practice there."

Reports that several campaign committee staffers received record six-figure salaries coincide with the determination of Reagan Cabinet members to raise their own annual pay to $164,000. The Republican campaign sickness, extended into managing the government, suggests a party that may well be ready for a spell on the sidelines.

CHARLEY REESE

United States needs better foreign policy

One of the advantages the Soviet Union has is a lot of proxies and a lot of opportunities to cause us trouble without directly involving itself.

Take North Korea, for example. North Korea has a formidable 600,000 man army with very good basic equipment. It can roll over the 40,000 Americans in its path anytime it wishes. And, if the North Koreans suddenly decide to kill and capture 40,000 Americans, the United States would be stuck in another war on the Asian continent.

Charley Reese

Or take Syria. The Syrian army, thanks to Soviet assistance, is approaching par with the Israelis in high tech weaponry and of course has always far exceeded the Israelis in manpower.

What is the United States going to do if the Syrians launch an attack against Israel that includes high-casualty missile attacks on Israeli cities and air bases?

What is the United States going to do if the Vietnamese decide to launch an attack against Thailand or, for that matter, when the Chinese communists decide to take Taiwan?

Our basic problem is that we have adopted an interventionist foreign policy but have not been willing to pay for it. This bad state of affairs is supported in part by the persistent myth of strategic bombing. Strategic nuclear bombing may work, but strategic conventional bombing is more overrated than Alan Alda's acting. It didn't work in World War II, Korea, or Vietnam and it's not ever going to work.

The only way you win a war is when you stand on the ground with a rifle and say, "This is my ground." Anybody who thinks the United States can sit offshore and project its power with airplanes hasn't read any military history. The name of the game is still occupation. If after the shooting stops, you're there and the enemy isn't, you know you won. If he's there and you aren't, you lost.

To support the interventionist policy the civilian gurus in Washington have adopted would require a military draft, a much larger standing army, huge inventories of ammunition and spare parts, and a vastly enlarged, better trained and better equipped reserve force.

Since obviously we are not going to pay for all that, then we at least should insist that we change our policy. We should tell all our so-called allies from Europe to the Far East that we have gone out of the conventional war business on foreign turf. We should close our foreign bases and bring the troops home. If they are attacked by conventional forces, they are on their own.

To those countries willing to allow nuclear weapons on their soil, and thus become a nuclear target, we could extend them nuclear protection against a nuclear attack or nuclear blackmail. To those countries who wish to occupy a nuclear-free zone, we tell them to kiss off. If the Soviets decide to nuke them, then they can pray, surrender or die.

Just to keep the Soviets and their proxies from becoming complacent, we could adopt a policy of supplying small arms to any guerrillas who wish to fight communist governments — small arms, ammunition, and training — but no troops. Rifles, mines, ammunition, machine guns, and shoulder-fired missiles are relatively cheap and we should adopt the same policy the Soviet Union has — make them generously available to anybody who wants to kill people who are not friendly toward us.

Americans need to realize that most U.S. intervention has historically been done for the economic benefit of a few large corporations. Our official attitude toward foreign governments should be based on a strict reciprocity. As long as they are friendly toward us, we're friendly toward them, whether they have a communist, socialist or capitalist economy and regardless of how they treat their own citizens or foreign bankers and corporations.

That way we would at least eliminate the hypocrisy of worrying about Chile's human rights record while playing kissy-face with Chinese and Soviet butchers for the benefit of the greedy.

Economy 'battering' state funds

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sluggish economies are forcing more than a third of the states to cut spending, with deficits threatening to wipe out money that many put aside for hard times, a survey shows.

The findings of the National Association of State Budget Officers reflect the large regional differences in the economy across the country, with states on the East and West coasts generally faring well while heartland states cope with budget shortfalls and bleak forecasts for more of the same.

"The economy is not just producing rainy days," said Gerald Miller, executive director of the group. "It is battering states' budgets with hurricane force."

The study said 21 states already have cut or announced plans to cut budgets for the 1987 fiscal year since the spending plans were enacted. For most states, the current fiscal year began last July.

States dependent on oil and gas for revenues are the hardest hit, with Alaska officials predicting a state budget deficit of nearly $900 million. Farm states have also been cutting spending because revenues haven't met expectations.

On the other hand, no state in the Northeast has had to cut its budget, and in the Southeast, only South Carolina and Alabama have had to do so. On the West Coast, only California has cut spending — by less than 1 percent.

"The situation is not as bad as it was in the depths of the recession in fiscal 1983, when 39 states were forced to slash budgets," Miller said. "But it is clearly worse than it was in the past year or two."

Many of the states are also among the more than 30 that anticipate receiving windfalls because of the effects of federal tax changes on their state income tax laws.

But even for states that plan to keep the windfalls, rather than returning them to taxpayers, the revenue won't come in time to cover shortfalls in the current fiscal year, said Karen Benker, an analyst with the association.

States' $20 billion clean water bill in Reagan hands

NATION

WASHINGTON (AP) — The White House is not saying whether President Reagan will again veto what it believes is a budget-busting $20 billion clean water bill the Democratic-controlled Congress is working quickly to send to his desk.

After the House on Thursday overwhelmingly passed the bill to reauthorize and strengthen the Clean Water Act, White House spokesman Albert R. Brashear declined to say how Reagan might react to the bipartisan congressional defiance.

"We'll wait and see," he said. "This is a spending matter pure and simple." Congress, he said, "cannot continue to raise concerns about high deficits while continuing to pass budget-busting bills."

Brashear said the president's compromise offer to Congress still stands: $12 billion in aid to the states to help build sewage and wastewater treatment plants, compared with the $18 billion Congress wants as part of the bill which includes an additional $2 billion for administrative costs.

The offer, however, was not considered by the House, which approved the bill 406-8 and sent it to the Senate, where 75 of the 100 members are co-sponsoring an identical measure slated for floor action next week.

The eight "nay" votes came from Republicans, none of whom issued any loud calls to support the president. Voting for the bill were the House's two top GOP leaders, Robert Michel of Illinois and Trent Lott of Mississippi.

"This is not a partisan attempt to embarrass anybody," said the floor manager, Rep. James Howard, D-N.J., chairman of the Public Works and Transportation Committee.

"The president unfortunately made a mistake in vetoeing the bill, and it's up to us to give him a second chance," Howard said.

The committee's ranking Republican, John Paul Hammerschmidt of Arkansas, also urged approval. "The bill's funding levels are both environmentally responsive and fiscally responsible. We simply do not feel that further reductions are warranted."

Reps. Robert Walker, R-Pa., and William Dannemeyer, R-Calif., complained that the measure was brought to the floor under a rule that prevented consideration of Reagan's $12 billion offer. But neither defended the veto.

The House margin and the level of Senate support are sufficient to override any veto. Congress passed last year's bill unanimously but was unable to take override votes because Reagan vetoed it after lawmakers had left town for the year.

Congressional leaders say $18 billion is already a compromise amount and the minimum Congress can provide for anti-pollution facilities that are part of a 14-year-old program credited with making major strides in improving the nation's water quality.

They point out that Reagan already has won one major point: The legislation ends the federal aid in 1994, leaving states far short of the $108 billion the administration has estimated needs to be spent on facilities by 2000.

NATION in brief

PAC solicitation could be changed by ruling

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Federal Election Commission says political action committees could solicit money by promising matching donations to the givers' favorite charities.

The ruling, announced Thursday, involved Detroit Edison's political action committee, which is looking for new incentives to attract donations in light of the new tax law dropping the tax credit for political contributions.

Under the plan, Detroit Edison would give a matching contribution to the charity of the PAC donor's choice when the individual gives to the PAC, which by law must operate as a separate entity from the utility itself.

The FEC, on a 6-0 vote, signed off on the proposal as a unique but legal approach, opening the door for Detroit Edison's top management to consider implementing it.

Nuclear plant to go on

WASHINGTON (AP) — Supreme Court Justice Antonin Scalia has again refused to block the full-power operation of an Ohio nuclear power plant pending a formal appeal to the full court.

Without comment, Scalia rejected on Thursday an emergency request by Ohio Citizens for Responsible Energy seeking to prevent the full-power operation of the Perry Nuclear Power Plant.

Scalia turned down a similar request by the citizens group on Dec. 31.

The plant, run by Cleveland Electric Illuminating Co. and located on the Erie River about 35 miles northeast of Cleveland, is expected to reach full power by April or May.

The citizens group, which wants to limit the plant to 5 percent of its operating capacity for now, said there may be a threat from earthquakes that has not been examined by the Nuclear Regulatory Commission.

Battleship Iowa to cruise

WASHINGTON (AP) — The battleship Iowa, equipped for the first time with pilotless drone aircraft, will leave today for a show-the-flag mission off the coast of Central America, the Pentagon says.

The Iowa will be accompanied by the guided-missile cruiser Yorktown and the destroyer Deyo and will conduct routine operations off the east coast of Central America, Pentagon spokesman Robert Sims said Thursday.

In announcing the deployment, Sims disclosed that the Iowa had become the first U.S. Navy ship to be equipped with pilotless drone aircraft.

The drone can carry sensors, radars and TV cameras and is designed to provide Navy surface ships with the ability to conduct reconnaissance missions or direct fire at targets without calling on manned airplanes from land or aircraft carriers.

Officials to contest sewage plant penalty

By JANE MARLER DEES
Staff Writer

Although one of the city's sewage treatment plants is operating efficiently again, local officials still must go to Austin in February to contest a $3,900 Texas Water Commission penalty levied in early December.

"We're not arguing the fact the violations occurred. We will argue the equities of the situation," City Attorney David Reagan said.

The violations at the city's sewage treatment plant at Midland Regional Airport — committed in September, October and December of 1985 and February and September of 1986 — happened after a chain broke on the "primary clarifyer," one of the components of the plant's machinery, Reagan said.

The part of the equipment, Reagan said, serves to regulate the amount of oxygen left in the water after treatment.

In the case of the plant at the airport, too much oxygen was being released with the water, which is in violation of the city's permit, Reagan said.

"If we were discharging into a lake or river, it could be detrimental to plant or fish life," Reagan said.

In this particular case however, the discharge was going into a dry draw. This is the first arm of Reagan's "equities" defense.

Secondly, Reagan said it was an unavoidable breakdown.

The city is required to report breakdowns to the TWC.

The negative reports came during the five to six month period in which the city was looking for a manufactuer that could replace the chain on the antiquated machinery that was built sometime during World War II or the 1950s, Reagan said.

"The equities of the situation call for maybe the TWC to waive the penalty or make some other arrangements," Reagan said.

"The executive director just feels the City of Midland needs to pay a little bit more attention to getting that plant fixed," TWC spokesman Bill Colbert said.

The part has been replaced and the treatment plant, which serves the airport and businesses located in the airport area, is operating efficiently and handling the flow of sewage, Reagan said.

"We've begun plans to divert the water to go to the main plant...on the southeast side of the city," Reagan said and added that when that day came, the airport plant would be shut down.

Legislators hear cities' 'wish list'

By RICK BROWN
Staff Writer

A wish list of legislation to help West Texas cities and counties is what area legislators heard Thursday at a lunchtime meeting sponsored by the Permian Basin Regional Planning Commission.

The PBPRC legislative luncheon — at which state senators and representatives met with city councilmembers, county commissioners and representatives of other West Texas taxing bodies, like water districts — is a regular event prior to the opening of a state legislative session in Austin.

Under the current schedule, the Legislature will open it's 1987 session Jan. 13.

Craddick

Sims

"I think when you get your local people to tell you what their needs are, it affects legislation," said Rep. Tom Craddick, R-Midland, during the luncheon. "This is the first step. Then you have to see what the legislation is before you decide if you're going to support it or not."

In addition to Craddick, other legislators attending the session included State Sen. Bill Sims, D-San Angelo, and State Sen. John Montford, D-Lubbock.

Among the most likely reforms sought by cities to come up for debate during the coming legislative session is an overhaul of state liabilty insurance laws, or "tort reform" as the issue has come to be known.

Police Roundup

From Staff Reports

No arrests have been made this morning in Thursday evening's armed robbery of a liquor store, the sheriff's department reported today.

According to sheriff's reports, a male about age 25 entered Manuel's Liquor Store, 3707 Rankin Highway, around 8 p.m. Thursday.

The man looked around the store for a minute and then held a gun on the woman clerk and demanded money, a sheriff's report said.

The clerk put $265 in a bag and the man took a liter of Jack Daniels, leaving the store at south Highway 349 and County Road 125 west, on foot, sheriff's officials said.

In other law enforcement reports, almost $3,000 worth of items were taken from a rural Midland residence, sheriff officials said.

Guy and Marlene Leonard told sheriff officials that their home at Rt. 10, Box 10107, was entered by the back door sometime between 8:30 a.m. and 3:10 p.m. Thursday.

Items taken include a $1,200 color television, a receiver, compact disc player, cassette players and albums worth $1,395, a $200 VHS, two speakers worth $125 and a $20 clock-timer.

Agency to focus on volunteerism

Human Relations Council changes name

By RAMONA NYE
Staff Writer

With a new name and a new program, the former Human Relations Council is going strong despite the withdrawal of $25,000 from its budget by the city last year, said Executive Director Bob Jones.

Now known as the Commission on Volunteer and Community Relations, the agency will be focusing on its new volunteer referral program this year, Jones said.

The referral program will match volunteers and their skills with citywide agencies, said Conrad Coleman, director of the referral service.

While Midland has traditionally had a high level of volunteers, minorities have not been encouraged enough to participate, Jones said.

"We want to include minority volunteers. In Midland they need to know their services are needed just as much as anybody's," Jones said.

Coleman said, "We need to touch the non-traditional volunteers — minorities who have the time and energy and don't know where to go."

Last fall, the City Council took $25,000, which made up 25 percent of the Human Relations Council's budget, and gave it to the Hispanic Chamber of Commerce.

Jones said he is optimistic the City Council will begin funding the commission during its next budget.

"The city needs to feel this organization is doing its job and if they see the progress, my optimism is the city sooner or later will support us," he said.

Increased funding from private sources and foundations have made up the gap left by the city giving the commission a budget of about $65,000 this year — up from their $50,000 budget last year, Jones said.

Also, the commission is planning on applying for several federal grants, he said.

Meanwhile along with running Community Development Block Grant programs involving housing rehabilitation and a lock and security program on the eastside, the commission will be recruiting volunteers for its referral service.

"These are hard times for everyone and the more participation we have the better it's going to be for everybody," Jones said.

With many social service agencies being cut back, volunteers are needed now more than ever, the two men said.

Volunteering also can help the unemployed by raising their self-esteem, helping them acquire new skills and putting them in touch with potential employers, Coleman said.

To register with the volunteer referral service call 684-5866.

Top aide to sheriff Painter denies charges he's racist

By PATRICK CRIMMINS
Staff Writer

A top assistant to Midland County Sheriff Gary Painter late Thursday denied charges from several ex-employees and a current employee that he is a racist, and has blocked at least one promotion because the applicant was black.

Richard Sexton, the department's special services captain, was accused of blocking the promotion of Ted Macklin, 33, a six-year veteran of the department, and fomenting a racial climate that seemed "out of the late fifties or early sixties."

"Ridiculous," Sexton said of the charges. "If I was a racist, my (adopted) son wouldn't be half-Spanish."

Macklin, who is an investigator in the Criminal Investigation Division, was one of four men who made the charges Thursday. The others were John Hudson, 26, and Juan V. Silva, 32. Another ex-employee, who said he resigned in the face of firing, asked to remain anonymous.

Silva said the four men decided to make the accusations public after a story appeared in Wednesday's Reporter-Telegram about a memo condemning racial slurs at the Midland Police Department.

Hudson said he resigned Oct. 6 after being told he would be fired because he had had so many accidents in county vehicles he couldn't be covered by insurance. Silva resigned Dec. 31 "99 percent sure" he would be offered a job in the U.S. Marshal's office.

All four men claimed Sexton, who has been with the department for nine years, made racist remarks. They also claim as a member of the interview board he blocked Macklin's promotion in August by removing a black officer from the board just before Macklin's interview.

"AS FAR as I'm concerned I should have had the sergeant's position in warrants (division)," Macklin said. "I should have got that slot. And the bad part of it was I had to train (the officer who was promoted). And they knew he was leaving in eight months. What does that tell you? That they don't want a black."

Painter said Tim Rogers, a black investigator who was assigned to the board was removed prior to Macklin's interview, but he blamed that on an administrative mixup.

Sexton said Macklin was a "superior officer" but said he was denied promotion because he lacked leadership ability.

"I guarantee you I'm one of the fairest persons in those interview boards," Sexton said.

Chief Deputy Jim Chancellor said the makeup of the interview board made undue influence unlikely, and he defended Sexton.

"A lot of people give Richard Sexton credit for having more authority than he has," Chancellor said. "Neither the sheriff, nor myself, nor Richard Sexton, look at anyone in this agency as anything but an individual. We don't look at race and we don't look at color."

But the three ex-employees said racist remarks among department employees were an "every day occurrence."

"IT WAS almost on a daily basis that someone would approach me with some kind of racial joke," Hudson said. "It was demeaning."

Hudson said a list of racist jokes written by a county jail inmate was circulated among whites in the department and referred to by them periodically for laughs.

"It was shown around the whole department," he said, "instead of being thrown away. It was kept in a desk in the jail.

"I'm very proud to be black," Hudson said. "It really belittled me to think most of these folks could find amusement in it. But most of the employees enjoyed reading that — it pleased them in some sort of sadistic way."

Painter said he had "absolutely no knowledge" of the list, but he said he would investigate, and such a list if existent would be destroyed.

Silva also produced a copy of a letter, dated Nov. 3, that he wrote to Painter alleging discrimination and asking for an investigation of Sexton's conduct. Silva complained about Painter's inaction on the request.

Painter acknowledged he had been slow to respond to the letter, but he said he would, as soon as possible, get the parties together for a discussion. The sheriff was vehement, however, in his denial of racism in the sheriff's department.

"THERE ARE certain individuals that you have talked to who were instigators," Painter said. "There's not much that someone on the outside can do with a person's negative attitude. It has to start with desire from that individual; a negative attitude breeds negative results."

But as a working environment for blacks and Hispanics, the ex-employees described the department as "very bad...it was very difficult to work there."

"They made you feel like a second-class citizen," Silva said.

All four who made the accusations described the department as treating blacks and Hispanics "like something you'd see in the late fifties or early sixties."

Tim Rogers, along with Macklin the only other black officer in the department, defended Painter's administration, and said he did not sign the letter Silva referred to because he disagreed with parts of it.

"I can't say that I've been exposed to the kind of crap that you are talking about," Rogers said. "I'm not going to be subjected to any (slurs) from somebody who thinks it's funny."

Rogers said he thinks Macklin deserves a chance at another promotion, but he said "I don't think John Hudson was fired because he was black — he was fired because he had those wrecks."

SEXTON SAID all officers in the department were treated alike, whether white, black, or Hispanic.

"The so-called minority officers in this agency don't get treated any differently...and if in a setting, in camaraderie, a joke was made, in jest, I don't think a joke made about a black person should be any different than a joke made about an Italian or an Aggie," he said.

Equestrian show proceeds to benefit Paralysis Foundation

Plan proposed to lower electric rates

AUSTIN (AP) — Austin officials have proposed a two-year plan for lowering electric rates for state-owned buildings to head off possible action by the Legislature to switch to the Lower Colorado River Authority.

The proposal, which would create a separate rate class for the Capitol complex, could save the state an estimated $1.2 million the first year and $3 million the second year.

In last summer's special session there were recommendations that the state could save $4 million annually by buying power from LCRA instead of the city-owned power plant. Action on the measure was delayed while a special task force studied the issue.

The city's new proposal will be discussed Monday at a meeting of the task force.

Sen. Gonzalo Barrientos, D-Austin, ssid Thursday if the differences cannot be settled by the task force, then the issue will be before the Legislature again in the new session starting Jan. 13.

Attendance changes backed by board

By KEN HERMAN

AUSTIN (AP) — The State Board of Education has voted to recommend that lawmakers stop forcing school districts to fail students who have more than five unexcused absences.

The absences rule is part of HB72, the 1984 public school reform act, and requires the failing grade even if students pass exams.

By a 7-5 preliminary vote, the board decided Thursday that the absences rule is not needed. If the board votes final approval to the proposal Saturday, it will go to the Legislature that convenes Tuesday.

The board, meeting as a committee Thursday, approved a long list of proposed changes in state law.

The absences rule, considered a key part of HB72 when it was added, was included to cut down on students missing classes for so-called "co-curricular activities" such as livestock shows.

But board member John Mack Prescott of College Station said the mandatory failing grade is too severe and rigid.

"It is academically unfair to deny credit to a student who has mastered the essential elements and proven it by examination," he said.

Board member William McBride of San Antonio backed the current absences rule. He said the state should encourage good attendance.

"We want to teach them some values while we teach pure academic items. One of the greatest values we can teach our children is self-discipline," McBride said, adding that dropping the rule would give an unfair advantage to brighter students who could miss class but still pass tests.

If the rule is killed by lawmakers, local school districts could set their own rules on whether automatic failing grades would be issued to students with more than a set number of absences.

Board Chairman Jon Brumley of Fort Worth said he expects to see legislative battles concerning the career ladder for teachers and the no pass, no play rule. He said he hopes to see no major changes.

TDC inmate's mistaken release ironic

DALLAS (AP) — A Dallas man serving a life sentence for armed robbery might have been mistakenly released from prison last year under circumstances similar to the way his father left prison prematurely, officials said.

Texas Department of Corrections officials said they are investigating to see whether Ricky Ladon Woods, 33, gained freedom on the basis of forged documents.

His father, 48-year-old Willie Wood, went free for seven months last year until authorities discovered documents supporting his release and reducing his life sentence to 22 years bore the forged signature of a Dallas judge.

Officials confirmed the two are father and son, although their surnames are spelled differently, explaining that it is not uncommon for prisoners to be booked under aliases that closely resemble their true names.

The younger convict, however, remains free and is not required to report to a parole officer officials said, because an early-release prisoner who committed his crime before August 1977 is not required to report to a parole officer after his discharge.

WISH

The issue will be the "second-most controversial and the second-most significant thing we'll do," during the upcoming session, said Rep. Mike Toomey, R-Houston, according to Associated Press reports. The most controversial actions of the Legislature probably will come in response to the state budget crisis, the report said.

Toomey is co-chairman with Sen. Grant Jones, D-Abilene, of a special committee investigating the so-called liability insurance crisis. Their committee is studying proposed changes in laws on liability insurance and torts, wrongful acts that can be the subject of a civil suit.

Toomey estimates there may be as many as 30 legislative measures concerning tort reform and another 20 seeking liability insurance reform.

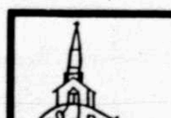

Midland City Council member Katie Heck, a member of the PBRPC Board of Directors, said after Thursday's luncheon that "the reform is long overdue."

Unlike county governments, whose liability in most cases is limited to $100,000 in property damage or personal injury cases, suits against cities can lead to unlimited cash awards, she said.

Because of high insurance premium payments that resulted, the problem led the council in October to establish its own insurance fund instead of contracting with an outside insurance carrier.

Of hopes for the coming legislative session coming from county government representatives, Midland County Judge Bill Ahders, another PBRPC director, said that "We need more money — that's the main thrust."

Figures presented at the luncheon projected a statewide average 8.47 percent increase in county property taxes because of the demise of federal revenue sharing funds this year. The collapse of oil property values also has hit county pocketbooks hard across the state.

4-H: Busy shaping young adults

Kiker

4-H is a distinctively American, non-formal educational, character and skills building youth program conducted by the Texas Agricultural Extension Service.

4-H is keyed to the development of individual boys and girls so that they may become productive, contributing citizens.

Further, the purpose of 4-H is to develop young people through the involvement of parents, other adults and volunteers who organize and conduct learning experiences in a community setting. the focus is on human interaction designed to develop skills, abilities and understandings in youth and adults as participating and influential members of their community. The central aim is for youth to acquire a set of skills for perceiving and responding to life's significant events.

Through 4-H, boys and girls discover an active method of turning their time into productive projects, identify with others their own age and other ages, acquire an interest and understanding of the private enterprise system, participate in meaningful and often physical work, and build strong family relationships.

4-H is effective because its educational services relate to youth's needs. Through informal, practical, learning-by-doing programs, 4-H helps boys and girls establish real-life goals and skills and become competent, productive citizens. The home, local club and community are the training grounds in which 4-H participants develop knowledge, skills and attitudes.

4-H, as an ever-renewing movement, has taken pride in its contributions to American society for more than 75 years. It is not easy for a youngster to develop a realistic sense of his own individuality and yet have an awareness of his social role and responsibilities.

Youth who are participate in 4-H will develop some capacity to function as generalists, no matter how they may later choose to specialize. A pattern of success built upon hard work spawns inner resources which permit young people to cope with unforeseen challenges and to survive as versatile, capable individuals in an unpredictable world. Youth so educated will assure the neccessary flexibility, adaptability and innovation for society.

Participation in the 4-H program is voluntary and open to all interested boys and girls, regardless of race, color, creed, national origin or handicap, who are between the ages of 9 (or in the third grade at school) and 19. To join 4-H in Midland, or for further information call the County Extension Office, 687-1351.

Federal meat inspectors get pay raises

WASHINGTON (AP) — Federal meat inspectors who are asked to perform overtime work are getting a pay raise, says the Agriculture Department.

On Jan. 4, the hourly overtime rate for meat and poultry inspection changed to $22.84 per hour, up from $21.72.

Other rates for voluntary inspection and certification services also are being increased, according to Donald L. Houston, head of the department's Food Safety and Inspection Service.

"The rate increase was necessary to cover the added costs of providing overtime inspection, identification, certification and laboratory services in fiscal year 1987," Houston said. "The salary increase for federal employees and other costs such as travel and benefits made the rate change necessary."

Under federal law, USDA must assume all inspection costs during routine work hours in plants producing meat and poultry products for interstate and foreign commerce.

Public urged to take larger hand in '87 on dietary, health issues

AGRICULTURE

By DON KENDALL

WASHINGTON (AP) — A consumer group, Public Voice for Food and Health Policy, says this is the year for "do-it-yourself nutrition education" and that the public should take a larger hand in determining national dietary and health policies.

Public Voice Executive Director Ellen Haas said the group's fourth annual New Year's resolutions for consumers highlights some of the areas in which Americans should become more active.

"The Congress, the federal agencies, supermarkets, restaurants and other institutions and organizations know they can do better to improve consumers' access to better nutrition," Ms. Haas said. "This is the time for consumers themselves to push for positive change."

According to Public Voice, which says its interests are directed to consumer research education and advocacy, here are some of the 1987 actions consumers should consider:

— Write members of Congress asking for mandatory federal fish inspection. Currently, only 13 percent of fish consumed by Americans has been inspected, and congressional action could change that.

— Write Agriculture Secretary Richard Lyng urging his department to change the name of the leaner federal beef grade, Good, to Select to help stop discrimination against lean beef. The Agriculture Department is now considering this proposal.

— Write to the commissioner of the Food and Drug Administration urging the agency to adopt improved cholesterol labeling, including information on the percentage of calories from fat.

— Ask your supermarket manager or food retailer if the store is selling apples and apple products that are free of Alar, a "dangerous chemical" pesticide.

— Be aware of food advertisements or product claims about nutrition that you find misleading or confusing. Report these to your local Better Business Bureau or to the Federal Trade Commission.

— When you eat out, check the restaurant menu for low-salt, low-fat, high-fiber food offerings. Does the restaurant offer items like skim milk, margarine and whole wheat breads on request? Tell your restaurateur you want these options.

— At fast-food restaurants, pay special attention to fat and salt, usually present in large quantities in their trademark items. Do they offer ingredient information? Do they cook french fries and other items in unsaturated oils? Some fast-food chains are making these changes. You should let your restaurant know you want them.

Public Voice said further that copies of the U.S. Dietary Guidelines for Americans, published by USDA and the Department of Health and Human Services, are available from: Superintendent of Documents, U.S. Government Printing Office, Washington, D.C. 20402.

"Contact your local chapter of the American Heart Association, American Cancer Society or consumer group and get involved in nutrition policymaking in your community," the group said.

Wheat growers unhappy with Reagan

WASHINGTON (AP) — The National Association of Wheat Growers has little good to say about President Reagan's budget proposal for operating the Agriculture Department, particularly its plan to reduce target prices.

Bud Leuthold, association president, said Tuesday the administration's plan would cut deeply into the income of wheat producers and "wreck agriculture's financial structure."

Leuthold also criticized Reagan for proposing cuts in some export programs that many farmers say are needed to help them regain a fair share of the world market.

"It's insulting to have the White House say that its proposals will solve farm program problems once and for all," Leuthold said. "Our farm problems are rooted in the global economy and will hardly be solved by shifting support away from our farmers."

The Reagan proposal would reduce target prices on wheat, feed grains, cotton and rice by 10 percent a year. The targets are bookkeeping figures used to compute "deficiency" payments to farmers when market prices are low.

Leuthold said the "income protection" of the wheat target price has been frozen at $4.38 per bushel since 1984, despite annual inflation increases. If Congress allows the Reagan plan to proceed, the target price would be cut 44 cents per bushel in 1988 and by $1.19 over the next three years.

"The farm economy is now burdened with over $200 billion of debt which, because of low prices, increasing numbers of farmers may be unable to repay," Leuthold said in a statement.

Leuthold, a Billings, Mont., wheat farmer, said the Reagan budget plan would cause more repayment problems and farm foreclosures, all of which would jeopardize the rural economy and the banking system.

The USDA says legislation is being developed to reduce target prices but that no fixed formula has yet been adopted. However, cutbacks are expected to result in massive savings in commodity program costs over the next few years.

In the fiscal year that ended last Sept. 30, those outlays rose to a record of more than $25.8 billion and are expected to be $25.3 billion this year, second-highest on record.

But if Congress goes along with the Reagan proposals, costs of operating USDA's commodity programs could decline to about $21.3 billion in the 1988 fiscal year that will begin on Oct. 1 and annually thereafter. Other measures would include a tighter lid on payments to individual farmers and "decoupling" those payments from crop production.

If adopted, the USDA predicts that total costs of commodity programs could be reduced to $10.5 billion in 1992.

However, Leuthold said the administration "has failed to recognize that it shouldn't tamper with farm income during a crisis" and that it "should accelerate, not back off, on export initiatives."

Leuthold referred to a Reagan budget proposal to cut funding for some USDA export programs. Levels of those would decline by $2.1 billion next fiscal year, including cuts for export credit guarantees to finance sales of wheat and other commodities.

"With U.S. farmers facing a reduced share of a shrinking world grain market, the administration's plan to cut export program funding amounts to economic suicide," Leuthold said. "Increasing competition from the state treasuries of other countries should prompt a strong, well-considered, well-financed response from our government."

National Grange wants IRS attention

WASHINGTON (AP) — As the Internal Revenue Service writes all the technical regulations needed to carry out the massive tax overhaul ordered by Congress last year, the National Grange wants the agency to pay particular attention to some farmland conservation matters.

National Grange master Edward Andersen has urged Treasury Secretary James A. Baker III to be strict in the new rules which will eliminate incentives to convert non-cultivated land to crop production.

"A generous tax code and farm subsidies have been responsible for a tremendous amount of land brought into production which should not have been," Andersen told Baker.

The Food Security Act of 1985, which included so-called sodbuster and swampbuster provisions against certain kinds of conversion to crops, was a step toward correcting the problem, Andersen said. Now it's time for IRS to do its share.

At the same time, he said, there is a need to continue deductions allowed farmers for carrying out suitable soil and water conservation practices.

"Expenditures for soil and water conservation generate long-term social benefits for which farmers and ranchers should receive compensation," Andersen said, adding that the Soil Conservation Service in the Agriculture Department should serve as a referee.

"If there is a dispute about an expense between the IRS and the farmer, then the SCS would make the final decision," Andersen said.

The Grange leader also urged consideration for the drainage of wetlands, within the intent of the law.

"If productive farmland has a drainage system which is upgraded or if there are maintenance costs to the existing system, those costs should be deductible and not considered in violation of drainage regulations," he said.

Springtails seek moisture sources

Minzenmayer

Springtails are very small, white or light-colored insects, about one-sixteenth of an inch long. They have a distinctive head with long antennae. The rest of the body has a somewhat "hump-backed" appearance. Springtails get their name from a forked appendage attached to the end of the abdoman. It can be bent under the body and when released helps the insect to "spring" forward, much like a flea.

Springtails are always found in highly humid situations. There are 19 different species of these insects that have been found to invade homes or buildings. They do so when their living area becomes too dry and they need to seek a moisture source. They often are found in sinks or basins but also may be found living in floor drains, around sweating pipes, in most basements or crawl spaces, on moldy furniture or in the soil of potted plants. These insects feed on decaying organic matter, algae and fungi.

One species, Entomobrya nivalis (L.) has been associated with itching skin of people who work in areas where large numbers of this springtail are found. Many times this dermatitus is blamed on fleas because of the way that springtails hop about.

The best control for springtails is to eliminate the source of humidity that sustains them. Drying out the insect's surroundings will eliminate the pest. Sanitation is also important to remove particles of food and concentrations of dust and lint that may serve as a food source.

Insecticide sprays or dusts may be necessary in areas where large numbers of insects have concentrated and modification of the environmental conditions is not practical. Diazinon and malathion can be used to control these pests.

Universities to plead for cut reversals

AUSTIN (AP) — Texas' universities and colleges will ask the 1987 Legislature next week to reverse the budget cuts made in the 1986 special session to save the institutions from a "slow and painful demise."

Officials of the Association of Texas Colleges and Universities said Thursday that a "higher education summit" will be held Tuesday, just two hours before the 70th Legislature begins.

"If we continue drifting along the path of reducing the level of funding accorded our institutions of learning, we will experience the inevitable results of slashing our wrists with a dull knife — a vey slow and painful demise," Wales Madden of Amarillo said Thursday.

Madden is a member of the select committee that is making recommendations to the Legislature after two years' study.

"Higher education simply cannot sustain the kinds of financial losses it experienced in recent years and meet its obligations," said Dr. Bill Franklin, president of Lamar University-Beaumont and coordinator for the summit.

"This summit is designed to focus attention on higher education at the beginning of what we all know will be a very difficult legislative session," Franklin said Thursday.

Hans Mark, chancellor of the University of Texas system, said that the 37 units in the UT system would ask that state appropriations be returned to the 1985 level, plus improvements in faculty salaries.

Mark said UT appropriations had been cut from $875 million to $730 million in the last three years.

He said Jess Hay, chairman of UT System regents, would ask on Tuesday that UT faculty salaries be increased 9 percent in 1988 and 1989 to meet national competition.

Other speakers at the summit on the UT campus will be San Antonio Mayor Henry Cisneros, a Texas A&M University regent; Larry Temple, chairman of the Select Committee on Higher Education; and Madden.

Temple said that if the gap between faculty salaries in Texas and other states is not rectified by the 1987 legislative session, the state could face "a decade of trying to get caught up."

Mark told the news conference that Hays would not recommend any specific means of raising the $5 billion needed to solve the state's expected deficit and provide adequate funding for higher education.

However, Mark said he personally felt the Legislature would be justified in retaining the current "temporary" increase in state sales and gasoline taxes for about $2.5 billion and broadening the application of the sales tax to get another $2.5 billion.

State faces millions in fines if TDC doesn't follow orders

By JIM WARREN
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

DALLAS — Top state leaders, offering to spend hundreds of millions of dollars to improve the state's prisons, said Thursday they will give U.S. District Judge William Wayne Justice a plan today to get Texas out of a festering inmate lawsuit.

Gov.-elect Bill Clements, Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby, House Speaker Gib Lewis, Attorney General Jim Mattox and others met for slightly more than two hours here at the Sedco Building, Clements' corporate headquarters, to talk prisons on the eve of Clements' unprecedented meeting with Justice in Tyler.

Clements said he would tell Justice that the state would make "a strong, absolute commitment of good faith."

On Monday, Justice found the Texas Department of Corrections in contempt of court for failing to comply with court-ordered reforms, which include more appropriate classifications of inmates serving time for different crimes, improved medical care and more guards. The state faces up to $24 million a month in fines starting April 1, if TDC doesn't comply with Justice's orders and a 15-year-old lawsuit filed by inmates seeking better conditions.

After the meeting, Clements, who campaigned on a no-new-taxes platform, said TDC will need at least $400 million in extra appropriations during the next several years to bring the prison system into compliance. He would not be specific on the exact number of years.

"We have some conceptual ideas about where we are going to get the money," said Clements, the only Republican at the meeting. "But that is not in our jurisdiction to sit down in the basement of the Sedco Building and decide where we are going to get the money for the penal system."

The officials would not elaborate on what Clements and Mattox will tell Justice today, but they said they hoped to avoid at least most of the fines.

"We'll do a lot of listening, listening to Justice," Clements said. "He wants us to operate in an area of integrity and good faith and in a timely fashion. And timely fashion means that 14 years is too long and we need to get on with it and we need to make the corrections that are necessary and bring ourselves into compliance with the court order."

Without being specific, Hobby and Mattox said land sales and private prisons are possible ways to pay for TDC improvements. Sen. Kent Caperton, D-Bryan, who attended the private meeting, said taxes were not discussed.

Clements said the state definitely will build new prisons during his tenure as governor, which begins Jan. 20.

On today's meeting with Justice, Mattox said, "We hope that we can lay out a plan that will ultimately bring this penitentiary problem to a close."

He also said he would inform Justice that the state plans to appeal part of his Monday ruling. He said the state is proceeding under the assumption that any fines collected by Justice would go to TDC.

Gov. Mark White, who was not at the meeting, made an impromptu visit to two prison units in Huntsville Tuesday when, among other things, he shot basketball with inmates.

STATE in brief

Tax puts state with others on highway user fees

AUSTIN (AP) — Texas' 5-cent increase in gasoline taxes to a total of 15 cents puts the state on par with most other states in highway user fees, the State Highway and Public Transportation Commission chairman said Thursday.

Bob Lanier says the new tax rate makes Texas 20th of the 50 states and the District of Columbia, and three other states are tied for that ranking.

"Other computations have ignored the sales tax many states charge on gasoline," said Lanier. "In some states, this amounts to more than the direct gasoline tax."

Lanier said an average of all state gasoline taxes must be considered to get the full picture.

"If you average the latest figures from the Highway Users Federation and add any state sales taxes, the national gasoline tax average is 13.76 cents a gallon, compared to 15 cents in Texas.

Aquifer taxing restricted

AUSTIN (AP) — Sen. Gonzalo Barrientos, D-Austin, has pre-filed a legislative bill that would approve creation of the Barton Springs-Edwards Aquifer District but restrict its taxing ability.

The Senate bill would affirm action of the Texas Water Commission in approving the district, subject to voter approval, within the 155-mile square-mile area in Southern Travis and northern Hays counties.

One provision would set the maximum property tax rate to pay for the district's operations at 5 cents for each $100 of assessed valuation.

Under the Texas Water Code a district currently can levy taxes up to 50 cents on each $100 valuation.

Banker wants no meeting

AUSTIN (AP) — A New York investment banker has asked a temporary restraining order against Scientific Measurement Systems of Austin to stop plans for the annual stockholders meeting.

In the petition, SMS director Hyman Federman said he wants the meeting halted until claims that the company violated state and federal securities laws can be investigated.

According to the lawsuit filed this week, shortly before the public offering in 1986, some directors loaned the company $600,000 at a higher than normal interest rate and received all of SMS's visible assets as collateral.

The suit says the action occurred without authority of SMS stockholders.

James Kay, SMS vice president, denied the charges in a prepared statement, saying the suit was without merit.

COPING WITH JOB LOSS

'Self-help' groups aid unemployed

By JIM MAY

May

DEAR COPING: Why aren't there any "self-help" groups for the unemployed here in Midland? I know that there are a lot of professionals like myself who are out of work, but there is no place for us to go and help each other. I have heard that other cities have organized groups like this to deal with local recessions. Why hasn't Midland? Are there some that I don't know about? — PB

DEAR PB: There have been some attempts to start such groups here in Midland. I am aware of an effort at Holy Trinity Episcopal Church that ran for a number of weeks but was discontinued as participation dropped off.

However, you make a good point about such groups being successful in other cities. The groups typically focus on such issues as providing a clearing house for potential jobs, supporting each other, bringing in outside experts to conduct seminars and workshops on finding jobs, teaching stress management techniques, educating the public as to the present situation and helping members identify where and how to seek governmental assistance when necessary (primarily medical and financial). Since most people currently experiencing unemployment are new to the process, such a group should be especially helpful.

If you are interested and willing to participate, and if others in our community are interested, I will be happy to help organize such a group. Readers, if you are interested in such a group, please drop me a line at the column mailing address, or by contacting me at the Center, 687-0151.

DEAR COPING: We had a great Christmas in terms of gifts, but I couldn't enjoy it thinking about how we are going to pay for them. My husband just told me not to worry, that he would take care of it. I could tell by the way he said it that I had better not ask again. I still don't know how we are going to pay for all those gifts and I am very worried. — MRS. G.

DEAR MRS. G.: You know how we males are about money. We are socialized to be "the provider" as one of our roles, and when someone questions our ability to fulfill that role we typically do not respond very well.

Perhaps you could begin such a discussion by describing your need for a family budget. The discussions associated with budget preparation often provide a nice framework within which to discuss your financial concerns.

If you will send me a self-addressed, stamped envelope, I will mail you a copy of a form that I have found to be helpful in preparing a family budget.

DEAR COPING: For the first time in my life I am facing a new year without a job. My unemployment is degrading and very worrisome to me. This has been a very sobering and traumatic period in my life. I have decided that loyalty to the company, any company, and extra hard work really don't get you anything. My wife says that i shouldn't feel this way, but I do. — DISGUSTED

DEAR DISGUSTED: It would be easier on you if you did not feel the way you do, but it would also be quite unusual.

It is very normal to feel resentment and anger toward your employer when you are let go through no fault of your own. It is especially difficult when you have worked hard only to discover that there is no "security."

One of the saddest observations research notes is that those who are workaholics and die a premature death are initially very missed by their employer, but then are often replaced by a more "laid-back" personality.

The workaholic is not missed for very long by his family as he has prepared them all along for his leaving by never being available to them when he was alive.

I am not sure what all of that means to you, but perhaps you and your wife might disucss her feelings about your past work habits in preparation for your new job search. It may be that you may want to consider a position that will have remuneration but that will afford more time for you and your family.

CONFIDENTIAL TO RS: Please contact me so that I may refer you to appropriate professionals to help you deal with the depression. Your situation is a very difficult one, but there is help available.

AT WIT'S END

Children's short attention spans favor classic 'toys'

By ERMA BOMBECK

Bombeck

Knowing the interest span of a child, the dolls that smiled under the Christmas tree two weeks ago are naked and living among dust balls under the bed.

Masters of the Universe have not fought a battle in days. Puzzles have been sucked up by the sweeper never to be seen again, and toy tanks and ships have gone to that big mothball fleet in the closet.

The cry has gone out, "There's nothing to do."

Too bad. Every year you try to tell parents to stick by the classics ... the toys that are timeless and never fall out of favor with a child. They endure forever.

There's "CARTON-A-GO-GO" (ages 1-10). This is a big brown cardboard box (any size) that you see stacked behind any supermarket. Kids are fascinated by them. They put wheels on them and turn them into cars, paint windows in them and they become clubhouses, climb into them and pull the flaps in and pretend they're going to the moon. Easy to assemble.

"RISKY BUSINESS" is not a game for the weak-hearted. It requires a made bed and one or more children. When the children think no one is around they jump up and down on the bed with their shoes on, seeing who can touch the ceiling first. At the first sound of human life, the players must make the bed, replace the lamps and have a good story as to how heel marks got on the ceiling. (Ages 6-12)

A favorite among preschoolers is "MUD." Mud is easy and safe for children. You just add water and let their imaginations go wild. You can spread it on your hands and answer the phone, touch all the walls in the house, splatter it all over the sinks and put it on your shoes and make baby steps into every room. You'll have to beg them to put it away.

Year after year, hard-to-buy-for teen-agers ask for "HOT DESIRE-COLD CARS." It's a wonderful little stocking stuffer. Just buy a new car and park it in the garage. Kids who are not old enough to drive love to sit in the seat, adjust the mirrors, put the key in the starter, turn the motor over and play the radio. Batteries extra.

Or how about "SILENT TEDDY." It's a family dog who doesn't have a key or a programmed disk of cute sayings in his back. He doesn't turn his head, roll over, wag his tail, do back flips or balance anything on his nose. He just sits there year in and year out and lets you put party hats on him, tennis shoes, lipstick or Halloween masks. (Ages 3 to 55)

You just have to anticipate a child's boredom. When my teenagers used to whine, "There's nothing to do," I just said, "Why don't you take a shower and play empty the water heater?" Kept 'em busy for hours.

DEAR ABBY

Old arrest record haunts man's life

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I was raised by adoptive parents, born in the 1890s with old-fashioned ideas. Sex was a dirty word in our household, and as a result, at the age of 21 I was arrested on a morals charge. I spent three or four days in jail, then was put on six months probation and the charge was filed with the FBI. I have not been in any trouble since, but this happened 38 years ago in the state of Ohio. Don't you think that after 38 years this charge should be taken off the FBI records? I have lost a good many jobs — good jobs — over it, and I think that I have been punished enough because of this one mistake.

I have been happily married for 31 years and am desperately hoping you can help me accomplish this. — DESPERATE

DEAR DESPERATE: Under the Freedom of Information Act, you are entitled to know if your "morals charge" record is still on file with the FBI. Send a notarized letter listing your full name, date and place of birth, and current address to the Federal Bureau of Investigation, J. Edgar Hoover Building, Washington, D.C. 20535. Mark on the envelope: Attention: F.O.I.A. You also must include a photocopy of your driver's license or some other form of current identification. You will be advised of your "record," if it is still in existence.

DEAR ABBY: I am an executive secretary for a department head of an oil company. Two years ago, when I started working for "Mr. John Jones," I asked him how he preferred to be addressed because I have had bosses who preferred to be addressed by their first names. He said his preference was "Mr. Jones." I had no problem with that as I am from the generation of secretaries who are accustomed to more formality in the office than is now generally the custom.

My problem is with the boss's wife — who until two weeks ago I had never met personally. (We still have not been formally introduced.) When calling the office, she would always say, "Mary, this is Mrs. Jones. Is Mr. Jones there?"

Two weeks ago my boss returned from lunch. His wife was with him. They both passed my desk on their way to his office. She said, "Hello," but he didn't introduce us. I was immediately called in for dictation. They both sat there. (Still no introduction.) When she left his office, she acknowledged me with a nod.

When she phones the office, she continues to call me "Mary," while referring to herself as "Mrs. Jones." How can I deal with this on a daily basis? I've checked out volumes of etiquette books from the library and none addresses this issue. — STEAMING IN TEXAS

DEAR STEAMING: Your boss is insensitive and rude, and so is his wife. Common sense and sensitivity are not to be found in any etiquette book. If you like your job, and the benefits outweigh the drawbacks, adjust to the situation. Don't complain to your boss. It would only cause problems for yourself.

Study reveals difficulties in comprehension

United Press International

WEST LAFAYETTE, Ind. — Bilingual consumers may seem to be as proficient in their second language as in their native tongue, but when bombarded by details, they have difficulty processing information received in their second language, a new study reveals.

"We process information differently in our native language than in our second language," said Richard Feinberg, a professor at Purdue University's Department of Consumer Sciences and Retailing.

Feinberg and his team of researchers designed a study to measure how people who are equally fluent in two languages reach "information overload" — the condition in which the more information consumers receive, the less able they are to make good decisions.

When consumers were told four different facts about a hypothetical house purchase, language did not make a difference. However, when they received 16 different facts, those who recieved the information in their second language were as likely as those who received the information in their native language to choose the "correct" answer.

The "correct" answer had been predetermined by a questionnaire given to 80 people regarding what consumers want from a house.

The results of the study were the same for Americans whose second language was Spanish and for Hispanic Americans whose second language was English.

Feinberg believes that the results are particularly significant for Hispanics, the largest ethnic minority in the United States.

He added that the study clearly shows that it is in the best interests of retailers and advertisers to present advertisements in the minorities' native langauage.

Foot care begins with shoes

Associated Press

Good foot care begins with shoe selection.

It's important to choose the proper shoe for your exercise activity. Running shoes, for example, are not flexible enough for aerobics. Inappropriate footwear can aggravate the natural imbalances that exist in any feet.

Proper fit is especially important for running shoes. Before you buy, try on as many pairs as possible. Test their flexibility at the ball of your foot. Be sure the pair you want is long enough; there should be a ¼-inch gap between your big toe and the end of the shoe. If your feet are different sizes, always buy shoes to fit the larger foot. Shoe models change from year to year. If you find a shoe that fits particularly well, purchase several pairs. Even when buying the same model and size shoe, try on each pair.

Break in athletic shoes gradually. Wear them around the house for an hour or so each day before putting them to work in your exercise.

Physical conditioning is as important for your feet as for the rest of your body. If you are overweight, remember extra pounds add stress. Consider what your feet's intricate framework has to support even when your body is in tip-top shape.

One of the most common foot ailments active people develop is athlete's foot: itchy, whitish, peeling skin between the toes and on the underside of the foot. It is caused by the fungi and bacteria that can grow in the warm, moist environment of shower rooms.

To prevent athlete's foot, towel-dry your feet thoroughly after showering and apply one of the many products designed to dry the skin.

Another painful problem, particularly with new athletic shoes, is blistering. To avoid blisters, apply a thick coat of petroleum jelly to the soles and sides of your feet or rub hand soap inside your socks. Your feet will then slide with less friction inside the socks.

Midland takes on Odessa as 4-5A resumes play

By TERRY WILLIAMSON
Assistant Sports Editor

Leadership of the District 4-5A basketball race will be trimmed by at least one team tonight when Midland Lee hosts Odessa High at Chaparral Center.

Lee won its district opener Tuesday with a 10-point win over cross-town rival Midland High and OHS took a two-point win over Abilene Cooper. They share the lead with defending league champion Odessa Permian, who won a two-point overtime victory over Abilene High.

But that three-way triangle can't stand up tonight as Lee and OHS go in a head-to-head confrontation that will send one of those teams down in the standings.

Midland High faces a real challenge in getting back into the title hunt since the Bulldogs travel to Permian where MHS has had a tough history of winning in the Permian gym.

In the other 4-5A contest, San Angelo will play its first league game by hosting Abilene High. Cooper will lick its wounds with the open date.

If Lee wants to keep its front running status, the Rebels will have to find a way to stop the Bronchos' Victor Dancer, who will be the only player on the floor averaging in double figures this season. Dancer owns a 16.1 scoring average and is coming off a game high 19-point effort against Cooper.

OHS also features Tracy Blaylock, who is averaging 9.1 points per game and who is coming off a 14-point effort. The Bronchos also have Edward Rheams (8.9) and John Powell (8.7).

Lee doesn't have a player averaging in double digits, but the scoring is balanced with Mark Van Cott and Danny Allen leading the way with 9.9 averages. Nicky Sanchez is averaging 8.9 and Mike Courtney 8.1. Courtney is coming off a 15-point effort against MHS while Sanchez had 12, Allen 11 and Van Cott 10.

The Bulldogs, however, may have a rougher time than Lee tonight. The Bulldogs must deal with the high scoring Lance Watkins of Permian, who is averaging 20.2 points per game. If that's all the Bulldogs had to stop, their worries wouldn't be as great, but Todd Evans is averaging 14.5 before falling off to the 7.3 average of Parker Hager.

The Bulldogs will try to get Michael Ball's 12.8 average untracked and David Lujan is averaging 10.7. Craig Crawford follows at 7.4. Lujan led MHS with 11 points against Lee, but Ball was held to a meager five-point outing.

The girls of 4-5A also hit the hardwood tonight with the MHS Lady Bulldogs looking to put some distance between them and the field. MHS is alone in first place with a 3-0 loop record and will host 0-2 Permian at the MHS gym in a game the Bulldogs should win.

Amy Cumings (17.1), Brenda Rodriquez (15.7) and Sebrenia Finch (12.5) give the Bulldogs their highest scoring threesome in the school's history. Cumings had only 12 points in a low scoring game against Lee Monday while Finch had 11. Rodriquez was held to seven points as all three were below average pace.

The Lee girls, who started district play with a sparkling 11-1 record before hitting injury problems, will travel to 0-2 Odessa High in an effort to even the league mark at 2-2.

The ankle bothered LaVette Wallace leads the Lady Rebs at 12.1 while Roz Eaden has a 10.4 average. Melissa Hart is near double figures at 9.3. Wallace and Eaden each had 10-point outings against MHS Monday, making both local girls teams wanting to get the offensive machines back in gear.

In the other 4-5A girls game, 2-0 San Angelo will hope to stay on the heels of the Bulldogs when they travel to 2-1 Abilene High in a game that is the feature of the night.

Mackovic's NFL playoff reward: 'You're fired'

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — Eleven days after the Kansas City Chiefs made their first trip to the NFL playoffs since 1971, owner Lamar Hunt made the surprise announcement that Coach John Mackovic had been fired.

Hunt, who has now fired five head coaches since 1974, said at a hastily called news conference at Arrowhead Stadium Thursday night that Mackovic was "a very fine man" but that the club lacked the right chemistry.

"There is no perfect formula for becoming the best in football," Hunt said. "We'd all like to think we have the right answers. In this case, I have to make a judgment, and I have reluctantly concluded that a head coaching change is necessary at this time."

Hunt said there would be no immediate decision on Mackovic's replacement.

However, there was speculation that Frank Gansz, the Chiefs' popular special-teams coach who resigned Wednesday, and longtime defensive coordinator Walt Corey would be considered for the job.

After reading a statement, Hunt declined to answer questions from reporters.

Mackovic was told late Thursday

Chiefs' John Mackovic
...playoffs not good enough

afternoon during a meeting with Hunt, team President Jack Steadman and General Manager Jim Schaaf that he was fired.

The firing apparently came as a shock to Mackovic. He had appeared relaxed and confident after meeting with Hunt, Steadman and Schaaf for two hours Wednesday to discuss Gansz' departure and Mackovic's plans for the Chiefs.

A woman who answered the telephone at Mackovic's home Thursday night said he would have no comment. A club spokesman said Mackovic would probably hold a news conference in the next few days.

Ironically, Mackovic was thought to have saved his job when the Chiefs won their last three regular-season games and made the playoffs with a 10-6 record. They were defeated by the New York Jets 35-15 in the AFC wild-card game Dec. 28.

Mackovic, 43, compiled a 30-34 regular-season record in four seasons at Kansas City. He had one year remaining on his contract "which will be honored as he considers his future career plans," Hunt said.

The play of the special teams and the defense made up for the league's worst offense — for which Mackovic had sole responsibility — and carried the Chiefs to their first playoff appearance in 15 years.

Kicker Nick Lowery said the players were very upset with Gansz' resignation and several met with club officials at Lowery's home Thursday afternoon to express their displeasure.

All-Pro safety Deron Cherry said when the two-hour meeting ended, speculation was that Mackovic would actually gain a two-year extension on his contract.

"After we left the meeting, I thought things were pretty positive," Cherry said. "The players expressed the view that we didn't want to have a total overhaul of the coaching staff. ... We were more concerned to get Frank back and leave it up to them to find a way to get him back."

The highly motivated coach's special teams blocked five punts and three field goals and deflected two punts in 1986. The special teams scored all the touchdowns in the Chiefs' 24-19 victory over Pittsburgh that put them in the playoffs.

Gansz stressed that his resignation was not due to any differences with Mackovic but that he needed to become an offensive coordinator if he wanted to be seriously considered for a head coaching job in the future.

Quarterback Bill Kenney, who was benched by Mackovic at the start of the season in favor of Todd Blackledge but returned to lead the club to the playoffs, said the offense's poor showing was a factor in Mackovic's firing.

"Any time a team goes 10-6 and makes the playoffs for the first time in 15 years, you never think the head coach will be fired," he said. "But then you look at the way we won, and the way the season ended, and it wasn't very positive."

Players to test free agent market

NEW YORK (AP) — Now we find out how free the free agent market really is.

Tim Raines, Lance Parrish, Andre Dawson, Bob Horner, Rich Gedman and five others ventured into the unknown early today, taking paths no other free agents have traveled.

By not re-signing with their teams by midnight Thursday, they became ineligible to rejoin their clubs before May 1. Ron Guidry, Bob Boone, Doyle Alexander, Toby Harrah and Gary Roenicke also took the route of no immediate return.

The free agents who chose to remain with their teams were Brian Downing and Doug DeCinces with California, Willie Randolph and Tommy John with the New York Yankees and Ernie Whitt with Toronto.

LAST YEAR, faced with a similar situation, all free agents reached agreement with their clubs. The players who faced the midnight deadline this time each had rejected offers of salary arbitration.

"Now, we wait," Montreal vice president Bill Stoneman said after his team lost All-Star outfielders Raines and Dawson. "Unfortunately, nobody knows what lies ahead."

Last year, the players' union filed a grievance against owners, claiming they were colluding to restrict free-agent movement and salaries. The matter is being heard by an arbitrator.

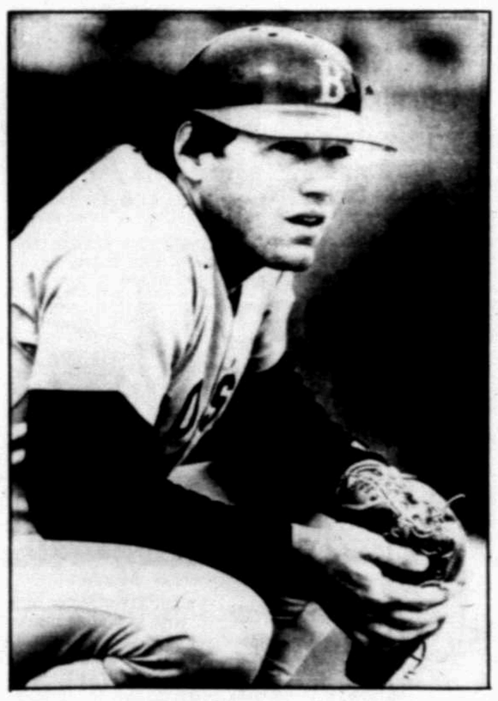

Last month, free agent Jack Morris, the winningest pitcher in the 1980s, sought to leave Detroit but was rejected by the Yankees, Minnesota, Philadelphia and California. He later accepted the Tigers' offer of salary arbitration.

"No one has ever gone past Jan. 8. This is uncharted and untested territory," Bucky Woy, Horner's agent, said after failing to reach agreement with Atlanta. "We are talking about some good players this time. I hope they (owners) are not going to make a travesty of free agency."

Parrish, Raines and Dawson all had announced they did not intend to re-sign with their teams. The Philadelphia Phillies, needing catching help, have already expressed an interest in Parrish.

"I do believe there are going to be pockets of interest," Tom Reich, Parrish's agent, said. "We plan to pursue that in the very near future."

The Tigers offered Parrish, 30, a two-year contract at $1.2 million per season.

Boston catcher Rich Gedman
...floating in free agent water

"They did not want to negotiate," Tigers General Manager Bill Lajoie. "We certainly have interest in signing him May 1 if he's still available."

Reich also represents Raines, 27, who made $1.5 million last season when he batted .334 and stole 70 bases. He was offered a three-year contract at $1.6 million per season.

Dawson, 32, hit .284 with 20 home runs and 78 RBI. The Expos proposed a two-year contract at $1 million per season, about what he made last season.

"To me, it didn't make any sense that either one could walk away from those offers," Stoneman said.

Horner also rejected a million-dollar deal, while Gedman and Guidry spurned contracts approaching seven figures.

Horner, 29, made $1.8 million last season in hitting .273 with 27 homers and 87 RBI. The Braves offered a three-year contract at about $4.5 million per year.

"About 10:40 p.m. was the last conversation we had," Woy said. "We wished each other well and that was it."

The Red Sox offered Gedman a three-year package worth $2.65 million. The 27-year-old All-Star catcher, who hit .258 with 16 homers and 65 RBI, sought a one-year contract for $1.1 million.

Guidry, 36, and the Yankees could not reach agreement despite some last-minute negotiating. The Yankee co-captain, who went 9-12 with a 3.98 ERA last season, wanted $2.5 million for two seasons. The team offered a two-year deal that guaranteed $1.675 million, plus incentives worth another $250,000.

The Angels worked throughout the night and wound up keeping Downing and DeCinces while losing Boone.

Downing, 36, batted .267 with 20 home runs and 95 runs batted in last season as the Angels' left fielder. DeCinces, 35, hit .256 with 26 homers and 96 RBI as the team's third baseman.

Downing signed a two-year contract at $900,000 per season with an option year at $850,000, a slight raise. DeCinces signed for two years, one of the guaranteed.

BOONE SAID he was "extremely disappointed" with the way the night turned out.

"It's absurd the way it came down in the time frame," he said.

Boone, 39, who batted .222, said he was offered a one-year contract at the same salary he made in 1986, $800,000, and no option for an additional year.

Whitt, the Blue Jays catcher, handled negotiations for himself and reached agreement about an hour after the deadline, after being allowed an extension.

John, 43, signed a one-year contract for a guaranteed $300,000 with an additional $50,000 if he makes the team.

Arkansas stuns Texas Longhorns

SWC Roundup

Associated Press

The Arkansas Razorbacks have been working on their defense and the Texas Longhorns found out that the work has paid off.

The Razorbacks, playing without head coach Nolan Richardson on the bench, rolled to a 79-62 victory over Texas in the only Southwest Conference basketball game played Thursday night.

All SWC teams will be idle tonight and a full schedule is on tap Saturday. Houston will be across town at Rice and Texas A&M visits Texas Christian in Saturday afternoon games. In evening games, Texas will be at Baylor and Arkansas visits Texas Tech.

Richardson was with his daughter, Yvonne, in the University of Minnesota hospital where is battling leukemia.

Arkansas Sports Information Director Rick Schaeffer said Thursday he did not know if Richardson would return for Saturday's game in Lubbock because the situation at the hospital became complicated Wednesday.

Assistant Coach Andy Stoglin handled the coaching chores for Arkansas.

"We have dedicated the season to ourselves and Coach Richardson," said freshman Ron Huery, who scored 19 points to lead the Razorbacks to victory Thursday night. "There's really no difference in the way Coach Richardson and Coach Stoglin coach."

"Coach Stoglin has been a head coach before, so he knows what to do," said Shawn Baker, who scored 12 points for Arkansas. "We were well prepared."

Arkansas' defense concentrated on stopping Patrick Fairs, who came into the game averaging 18 points, and Raynard Davis, who averaged 15.9 prior to the game. They limited Fairs to 14 and held Davis, who scored three on free throws, without a basket from the floor.

"We've been working hard on our defense since the Hawaii trip," Stoglin said. "In looking at Texas' stat sheet we knew Fairs and Davis were taking 50 percent of their shots. That made it a little easier to defend against them."

Travis Mays came off the bench to lead Texas with 17 points.

NCAA cuts football scholarships

SAN DIEGO (AP) — One day after calling a special convention to examine cost-cutting measures, the Presidents Commission got a message that other interested parties wanted a voice in the future of college athletics.

A number of cut-back measures which the Presidents Commission wanted withdrawn were instead acted upon during Thursday's opening business session of the NCAA Convention.

But the very thing the presidents say they want done in the June meeting — cutbacks — were delivered by convention delegates, who moved to place reductions on college football and basketball.

"I think it sends a message that there is a great deal of strength in what the Presidents Commission plans to do in June ... that we are ready to make appropriate cuts in costs," NCAA President Jack Davis said.

Delegates banned boosters from any participation in recruiting and cut football scholarship limits from 30 per year to 25. Later, Division I schools voted to reduce from 15 to 13 the maximum number of scholarships in men's and women's basketball.

In a further reduction in basketball, Division I schools voted to limit to two the number of volunteer and-or graduate assistant coaches.

"I think this sends a message to the presidents," Georgia Tech Athletic Director Homer Rice said. "They need to listen to us, the athletic directors, before they set up the agenda for for the special convention."

Davis was most pleased with the convention's vote to eliminate boosters from recruiting.

"It's an attempt by the major conferences to avoid some of the abuses that have occurred in recruiting," he said. "It sends a message out to most institutions or booster clubs or alumni associations that they should stay out of recruiting and leave it up to the professionals."

The measure to ban boosters entirely from the recruiting process was passed virtually without opposition. The legislation bans supporters of college athletic teams from even telephoning or writing to a high school prospect beginning Aug. 1, 1987.

"It will enable us to tell our recruiting interests they can do absolutely nothing," Georgia football Coach Vince Dooley said of the new rule.

Actions by over-zealous boosters in bestowing gifts and cash as a way of luring top prospects have resulted in several schools being placed on probation by the NCAA.

The NCAA delegates dealt with a full agenda Thursday and were hoping to conclude all their business late this afternoon.

In another major action, Division II schools voted 93-70 to adopt the same freshman academic requirements under Proposition 48 that Division I schools put into effect last August. After much debate, an amendment was defeated to remove the rule's most controversial component, standarized test scores.

In order to be eligible to practice or play Division II sports, freshmen will have to have a core curriculum of college prepatory courses, a 2.00 high school grade point and minimum scores on the ACT and SAT college entrance exams.

Black educators have charged the tests are racially biased.

The new rules take effect Aug. 1, 1988.

Thursday's move to gain inclusion into deciding what the Presidents Commission plans to act upon in June coincides with a plan that would allow for just such outside input that began in October.

Davis said a process has been in the works that would give "the Coaches Associations and the Athletic Directors Association will have direct input into the process of developing legislation."

But the athletic directors, led by Rice, challenged the move to withdraw on the first item, the football scholarship cuts. Significantly, it was the first time the powerful Presidents Commission has failed to have its way on policy or convention items since being created in 1984.

Lions, NBC have Fiesta

Associated Press

The Fiesta Bowl national championship game produced two clear-cut winners, Penn State and NBC. The Nittany Lions beat Miami on the field and NBC's telecast of the game clobbered its competition over the airwaves.

Last Friday night's game was watched in more American homes — 21.9 million —than any college football game in history.

"We're happy and I'm sure so are the advertisers, the Sunkist Fiesta Bowl people and (Penn State Coach) Joe Paterno," NBC spokesman Tom Merritt said.

The game easily beat non-sports programming on the other networks. NBC's telecast received a 25.1 rating, compared with 18 for CBS and 11.8 for ABC.

Ric LaCivita, CBS's coordinating producer for college football, had questioned NBC's pregame projection of a record Fiesta Bowl audience.

"I admit it, I was shocked by the numbers," he said. "I thought people would be a little tired of football after all the New Year's games. I guess you can never underestimate people's appetite for a major sporting event like a national championship game."

The previous viewing record was 21.8 million homes for the 1980 Rose Bowl between Ohio State and Southern California. That game had a higher rating (28.6) than this year's Fiesta Bowl, but was watched in fewer homes because there are more television sets today.

NBC had estimated that 70 million people would watch all or part of the Fiesta Bowl. Merritt stuck with the prediction after the ratings were released Monday, but the exact audience won't be known until the network receives more detailed information in several weeks.

SMU tightens grid admission standards

DALLAS (AP) — New, stricter admissions guidelines for Southern Methodist University football players won't harm recruitment, officials say.

A committee studying the role of athletics at SMU will review and possibly amend the guidelines, which tighten basic admission standards for football players only.

A football player under the new regulations is considered a marginal applicant if he scores between 800 and 900 on the SAT admissions exam. University officials expect such a student to have ranked in the middle of his high school graduating class and have completed at least 13 high school academic credits.

In the past, SMU has admitted football players based on the NCAA standards of a 700 combined score on the SAT and 11 credits.

The mean SAT score of this year's 1,200-member freshman class is 1,100, according to SMU officials.

"I think there are enough good football players who would fall into the 800 or above category," said Dudley Parker, acting athletic director.

Kosar advises Testaverde to sit out

VERO BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Heisman Trophy winner Vinny Testaverde is making a mistake by participating in any college all-star game, Cleveland Browns quarterback Bernie Kosar said Thursday.

"He doesn't have anything to gain," said Kosar, who preceded Testaverde as the starting quarterback at the University of Miami.

Kosar said Testaverde is a shoo-in to be the top pick in the 1987 NFL draft, and a post-season game only presents the risk of injury.

Testaverde plans to play Saturday in the Japan Bowl.

Kosar, 23, who is 13 days younger than Testaverde, said he was disappointed by Miami's loss to Penn State in the Fiesta Bowl, which cost the Hurricanes a national championship. Miami won the national title in the 1983 season with Kosar at quarterback.

"I felt bad for Vinny and some of the guys I played with on the team," Kosar said. "This was my senior class."

If he had so chosen, Kosar could have still been at Miami this year. He graduated in June of 1985 but still had two years of college eligibility left.

He and the Browns finished three days of workouts at the Los Angeles Dodgers' spring training complex Thursday in preparation for Sunday's AFC championship game against the Denver Broncos. The Browns were returning to Cleveland on Thursday night and planned to hold workouts at their suburban Cleveland practice field Friday and Saturday.

Underdog Rick Fehr
...leading golf's best

Confident Fehr pounds on stars

CARLSBAD, Calif. (AP) — Rick Fehr is a rookie in this elite tournament that brings together only the winners of PGA Tour titles from the past 12 months.

He's won once in his life.

After two rounds of the Tournament of Champions, the soft-spoken 24-year-old found himself two strokes ahead of the field.

Immediately behind him, however, is a starry group that includes some of the finest players in the world: Greg Norman, Ray Floyd, Bob Tway and John Mahaffey. And it doesn't bother Fehr a bit.

"Taking nothing away from those players or their accomplishments — and they're some of the best — it doesn't bother me," Fehr said Wednesday after a scrambly 67 had put his name atop the leaderboard. "I've found my place out here. I feel I can compete out here. I know I've got the best behind me, but I feel that when I'm on my game I can compete with anyone."

PGA

Fehr didn't make a bogey in the 5-under-par effort that put him in front, but three times turned potential disaster into what he called "unlikely" birdies.

"Three times I drove into the trees, and all three times I made birdie," Fehr said. The last of that trio came on the 16th hole, where he chipped a wobbling, mud-encrusted ball into the hole.

"It was a day when all the right things happened," he said.

In the separate competition for Senior Tour winners, Butch Baird had "one of those good days you hope for," shot 68 and took the lead at 138.

Don January was one back at 72-139 and Gene Littler was the only other senior under par at 72-142.

Richmond rallies to upset Navy

Associated Press

The Richmond Spiders seem to have David Robinson's number — and it's a single digit.

After scoring in double figures for 76 consecutive games, Navy's 7-foot-1 David Robinson got caught in the Spiders' web again Thursday night and was held to eight points as the 15th-ranked Midshipmen blew an 11-point lead in the final seven minutes and were upset by Richmond 64-62.

The last time Robinson failed to hit double figures was an eight-point effort against Richmond on March 9, 1984.

The loss was Navy's first in 17 Colonial Athletic Association games dating back to a 67-61 loss to Richmond last January and it also was the Mids' first home setback in almost two years.

Top Ten

No. 1 UNLV 89, San Jose State 77

At Las Vegas, Freddie Banks and Armon Gilliam each scored 28 points as Nevada-Las Vegas ran its record to 13-0.

No. 3 N. Carolina 98, Maryland 65

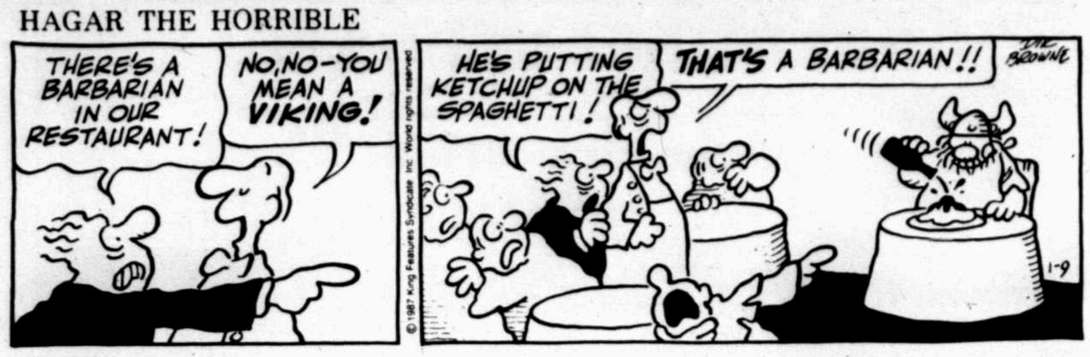

J.R. Reid scored 19 points and Kenny Smith had 18 as North Carolina ran its winning streak to 10 games in its Atlantic Coast Conference opener.

SPOT THE LOSER

Neither vulnerable. South deals.

	NORTH ♠ A 4 2 ♡ 8 6 4 ◇ J 5 ♣ A K 6 4 2
WEST ♠ 8 7 3 ♡ J 9 3 ◇ Q 10 6 ♣ Q 10 9 8		EAST ♠ 6 ♡ Q 10 7 5 ◇ K 9 8 4 3 2 ♣ J 5
	SOUTH ♠ K Q J 10 9 5 ♡ A K 2 ◇ A 7 ♣ 7 3

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 ♠	Pass	2 ♠	Pass
3 ♠	Pass	4 ♠	Pass
4 NT	Pass	5 ♡	Pass
6 ♠	Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Three of ♠

Here's another hand where the key is the knowledge that six missing cards will break 4-2 more often than they will 3-3. How would you plan the play in six spades after a trump lead?

The bidding is straightforward. Had you landed in a grand slam, you would have had no alternative but to hope for an even club split, so that you could get two discards on long clubs. Fortunately, you are only in a small slam so one discard will suffice. And you are lucky the opponents did not lead a diamond, which would have left you with no recourse other than a 3-3 club split.

Even with a trump lead, you need to time the hand delicately. Unfortunately, the spade spots are such that, even if the enemy trumps divide evenly, you could not get more than one entry to dummy from the suit.

Suppose you win the first trick, cash the ace-king of clubs and ruff a club. When the suit breaks 4-2 you still have an entry to dummy for the club ruff to establish the fifth club, but you have no way to get back to the table to enjoy it.

The solution to your problem is to use the club suit itself as the means of transportation! Win the opening lead in hand and immediately duck a club. Let's suppose East wins and shifts to a diamond. Grab the ace, cash a high trump just as an extra precaution should they be 2-2, then cross to the king of clubs and ruff a club high. That sets up the suit, and you can get back to the board with the ace of trumps, in the process drawing West's last fang, to take two discards on the ace of clubs and the long card in the suit. Well done.

Winwood

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif. (AP) — Steve Winwood and Paul Simon, music-makers who advanced beyond their 1960s roots, and avant-garde rocker Peter Gabriel are the top nominees for the 29th annual Grammy Awards.

Winwood received five nominations, while Gabriel and Simon got four each.

The nominations by the National Academy for Recording Arts and Sciences also had a few surprises Thursday, including nominations for such non-mainstream groups as Timbuk 3 and the Chicago Bears.

Jazzman Wynton Marsalis received four nominations, while Barbra Streisand and Janet Jackson, sister of Michael, were among those receiving three nominations each, along with Robert Palmer and Dionne Warwick.

The albums by Simon, Gabriel and Winwood reflect influences of Third World rhythms and musicians.

Nominated for best new artist were Glass Tiger, Bruce Hornsby and the Range, Nu Shooz, Simply Red and Timbuk 3.

Trumpeter Marsalis' four nominations include two in jazz: one as an instrumentalist, the other as a group leader. He also received nominations as a classical trumpeter and as a composer.

Miss Jackson's nominations were for album, best female rhythm and blues performance and songwriter for "What Have You Done For Me Lately?"

Miss Streisand, who has won seven Grammys since 1963, was nominated for album of the year for "The Broadway Album," as co-producer, for best female pop vocal performance and for best instrumental arrangement accompanying vocals.

Miss Warwick, whose performance on "That's What Friends Are For" reunited with songwriter Burt Bacharach, was nominated for record of the year.

She also was nominated for best pop performance by a duo or group and best pop female vocal, for her "Friends" album.

Palmer's "Addicted to Love" won him nominations for record and song of the year and for top male rock vocal.

The most surprising nomination may have been the Chicago Bears. Their Shufflin' Crew was nominated for group rhythm and blues vocal for "The Super Bowl Shuffle," a boastful rap rendition that successfully predicted their victory in the 1986 Super Bowl.

The 5,000 voting members of the academy considered 210 albums and 211 singles eligible, and balloting was for nominations in 68 categories. The awards will be presented Feb. 24.

Simon

WASHINGTON (AP) — Singer-songwriter Paul Simon, just after learning of the four Grammy nominations for his "Graceland" album, walked into a heated session with Howard University students critical of the way he used South African music on the LP.

One student, who would not give his name but said he was from the Bedford-Stuyvesant section of New York, accused Simon of "stealing" African music and trying unsuccessfully to "diffuse" it into white culture.

Another suggested that the video for the "Homeless" cut on the LP could allow people to ignore the violence in South Africa because it shows smiling Africans dancing and singing with Simon.

Nearly all the students who took the microphone at the predominantly black university during the nearly three-hour session said they didn't think Simon really understood the problem, though several praised his effort.

"I don't expect that I can fully capture a culture, and that was not the extent of my thinking," the songwriter told his audience of about 40 students. "I'm just a person who fell in love with South African music and made a record that became a hit.

"I am a beginning for people who know nothing about this subject."

Howard, established as a black college in 1867, has a reputation for political activism and has been protesting apartheid since the 1960s. It attracts many South African students, including Mpho Tutu, the daughter of anti-apartheid leader Desmond Tutu. She was in Simon's audience.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Actors Cybill Shepherd and James Garner are ready to air their beefs.

The pair will plug beef in a $30 million series of television and magazine ads with the slogan: "Beef. Real food for real people." The campaign is scheduled to begin Monday.

In the ads, the performers point out that 3-ounce cuts of beef have fewer than 200 calories, says Robert Rebholtz, an Idaho cattle grower and promotion chairman for the Chicago-based Beef Industry Council. The California Beef Council also helped create the campaign.

In her commercial, Miss Shepherd prepares a hamburger. Garner whips up a beef kabob.

Dollar stabilized

LONDON (AP) — Massive Japanese bank intervention left the U.S. dollar little changed against European currencies and the Japanese yen today. Gold was mixed.

Tokyo dealers said the Japanese central bank spent more than $2 billion to bring the U.S. currency up 0.15 yen to a closing 158.35. Banking officials said it was the biggest-ever intervention by the central bank in a single session.

Central banks never comment on their interventions, but Japanese Finance Minister Kiichi Miyazawa said today his government would respond "with power" to speculative moves on the currency yen. He said of the yen's latest rise that Japan "will respond without sparing money. In short, it will intervene."

Other dollar rates at midmorning, compared with late Thursday:

—1.6143 Swiss francs, up from 1.6130

—6.4035 French francs, down from 6.4055

—1.3695 Canadian dollars, down from 1.3714

In London, the British pound was quoted at $1.4727, compared with $1.4720 Thursday.

Gold opened in London at a bid price of $401.90 a troy ounce, compared with late Thursday's $401.50. At mid-morning, the city's five major bullion dealers fixed a recommended price of $402.25.

In Zurich, the bid price was $402.60, down from $403.00 late Thursday.

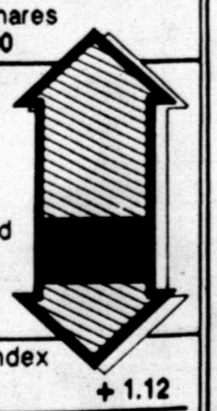

Earlier, in Hong Kong, gold rose $1.07 to close at a bid $402.65.

Silver was quoted in London today at a bid price of $5.39 a troy ounce, down from Thursday's $5.42.

Dow crosses 2,000 barrier

New York Times News Service

NEW YORK — Carried aloft by the stock market's stunning New Year rally, the Dow Jones industrial average closed above 2,000 on Thursday for the first time ever.

The 30-stock Dow average is now up 5 percent in just five trading days of this year, and much broader market indicators have done even better.

"Two thousand, we have two thousand," one trader yelled across the room of his midtown brokerage firm on Thursday a few minutes before 3 p.m., when the average first pierced the coveted mark.

The Dow — the oldest and most closely followed of all the market gauges, tabulating 30 of America's best-known companies — gained a modest 8.30 points, to finish just over 2,000, at 2,002.25.

For most of the session on Thursday, stock prices were shaky, with investors who had earned a tidy sum over the previous four sessions generally willing to take profits as the Dow nervously moved toward the 2,000 level. But a firm bond market, renewed interest in American stocks by foreign investors, and the momentum of the market itself made for a strong final 60 minutes.

Many of the professionals working on Wall Street contended that the 2,000-point Dow was really nothing special. They also said that they were happy that the hoopla surrounding the accomplishment would soon be over.

"I don't see a lot of hootin' and hollerin'," said Anthony Woodruff, co-director of equity trading at Kidder, Peabody & Co., as the market closed at 4 p.m.

But, he said, the accomplishment may help the stock market, which already has a perfect 5-for-5 record in 1987. "We've never been there before," Woodruff said. "It ought to bring new confidence into the market."

The continuation of a powerful bull market at a time when many economists are predicting slack economic growth seems, at first, incongruous. But not so to many experts who note that a sluggish economy may keep a lid on inflation and interest rates — and that prospect buoys the confidence of stock investors.

Wall Street has cheered each new conquest for the Dow, but the cheers have grown softer over the last few years as the index mounted each successive landmark wih relative ease.

The Dow, for instance, stood at just 1,000 on Nov. 14, 1972. It took more than 10 years, or until Feb. 24, 1983, for it go the next hundred points.

Wall Street professionals of late seem to have adjusted their thinking, and their celebrating. "As long as it keeps going, we're all happy; we don't have to cheer," said Rodney Berens, a managing director at Morgan Stanley & Co., who, upon looking around the firm's trading room, reported that he heard "not a peep" of celebration about the 2,000 level.

The New York Stock Exchange index rose 1.12, to 147.55, Thursday, and the Standard & Poor's 500-stock index jumped 1.95 points, to 257.28.

December brings retailers profitable season

The Associated Press

Last-minute Christmas shoppers spared the nation's retailers a disastrous December sales performance.

"They've salvaged the season," said Joanne Legomsky, a retail industry analyst with Standard & Poor's Corp. She pronounced the retailers "pretty satisfied" with December sales figures announced Thursday.

Retail sales were down the first three weeks of December, and analysts had warned that storeowners were in trouble. Retailers depend on Christmas sales for more than half their annual profits.

But the last spurt of buying brought the retailers "pretty much close to plan," Ms. Legomsky said.

"There was enough incremental volume generated in that final week to help offset the shortfall that occurred up to this point," said Jeffrey Edelman, an analyst with the investment firm of Drexel Burnham Lambert.

One retailer reporting a slow season through the middle of December was K mart Corp.

But when the sales figures for the five weeks ending Dec. 31 were in, K mart had an 8.7 percent increase over the same period a year earlier. The Troy, Mich., chain said its 2,100 stores reported sales of $3.9 billion against 1985's $3.59 billion.

Wal-Mart stores, based in Bentonville, Ark., said it had a 36 percent increase in December, with sales of $1.69 billion compared with $1.24 billion in 1985. Wal-Mart has more than 1,000 discount stores in 23 states in the Midwest, Southeast and Southwest.

The nation's largest retailer, Sears, Roebuck & Co., which said its pre-Christmas sales were reasonably good, reported a sales increase of 4.8 percent for the five weeks ending Jan. 3. Sears said it had sales of $3.92 billion compared with $3.74 billion in the same period a year ago.

Figures released Thursday are from large stores selling general merchandise, including apparel and specialty retailers and department stores.

"We believe that general merchandise sales will have increased by about 6.5 to 7 percent during the Christmas selling period, while retail industry profits increased an estimated 10 percent," said Jeffrey Feiner, an analyst with Merrill Lynch & Co., who called the results "relatively favorable."

Leaner inventories and retailers' resistance to pre-Christmas markdowns helped their profit margins.

The analysts predicted 1987 would see a slow start for the retailers but that sales would pick up in the second half of the year after consumers reap the benefits of lower taxes.

Here are results of other retailers for the five weeks ending Jan. 3:

—J.C. Penney Co. said it had a 1.4 percent increase. The New York-based retailer said sales totaled $2.32 billion, up from $2.29 billion a year earlier.

—May Department Stores Co. reported sales of $1.81 billion, up 10.2 percent over sales of $1.64 billion a year earlier. The St. Louis, Mo.-based May owns 180 Caldor and Venture discount stores, and nearly 2,600 specialty and department stores, including Lord & Taylor, May Co., Robinson's and Hecht's.

—Chicago-based Montgomery Ward & Co. said sales increased 7.8 percent. The company reported sales of $706 million, compared with $655 million a year ago.

—Dayton-Hudson Corp. had an increase of 15.6 percent. The Minneapolis-based company, whose divisions include B. Dalton Bookseller, Dayton-Hudson Department Store Co., Lechmere, Mervyn's and Target, reported $1.67 billion in sales, up from $1.44 billion a year ago.

—Federated Department Stores, Inc., whose approximately 625 stores include Filene's, Bloomingdale's, Burdines, Bullock's-Wilshire, Rich's and Sanger-Harris, reported sales were up 7.5 percent. Federated said it took in $1.83 billion, compared with $1.7 billion a year earlier.

—F.W. Woolworth Co., based in New York, said sales rose 12 percent to $1.04 billion from $927 million in the comparable period a year earlier. The company's divisions include Woolworth, Kinney's Foot Locker and Lady Foot Locker.

Ohio governor Richard Celeste, left, beams a smile after talking with Naboru Okamura, chairman of Honda Motor Co. of Japan at a Thursday night news conference.

Honda expanding plant at cost of $450 million

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Honda of America Mfg. Inc. will spend $450 million to expand its engine plant in Ohio to build engine and drive train components for its U.S-made Accord and Civic cars, company officials said Thursday night.

Manufacture of the engine and transmission in Ohio means major components for the Accord and Civic four-door sedans will be made in the U.S.

Expansion of Honda's engine plant near Anna in western Ohio, about 40 miles from the company's auto and motorcycle plants in Marysville, is expected to create 800 jobs at full production. That would bring total employment at the Anna plant to about 1,000.

Honda said some new engine components will be produced by late 1988, with full-scale engine production expected to reach 360,000 units annually in 1990.

Details were released simultaneously in Columbus and in Tokyo.

"These assemblies represent another major step in Honda's endeavors to make the cars built in Marysville truly American products," Noboru Okamura, chairman of Honda Motor Co., said at a news conference in Columbus.

Gov. Richard Celeste called the project a significant event for Ohio.

"It is part of a future we talked about three years ago at the original announcement of Honda's engine plant, to expand engine manufacturing and bring full-scale production of high-value components to Ohio," Celeste said in prepared remarks.

"I look forward to the day when Ohio-made cars are sold all over the world, as Honda began doing this month in Taiwan," he said.

Honda, the first Japanese automaker to build cars in the United States, employs 4,377 people at auto, motorcycle and engine plants in Ohio which represent a total capital investment of $720 million. The new construction would boost Honda's investment in Ohio to $1.2 billion.

Appraisers install new officers

Midlander Keith Barlow was installed as president of the Texas Plains Chapter No. 58 of the American Institute of Real Estate Appraisers Thursday night.

Other officers include Tommy Foster of Abilene, vice president, and Clyde Cantrell of Boerne, secretary-treasurer.

New directors of the local chapter are Jimmy Goddard of Lubbock, Bill Noble of Brownfield, and Ken Wheeler and Tom Passmore, both of Midland.

Special guest was Richard C. Wolcott, international president of the AIREA. The banquet culminated an eight-hour seminar on standards of professional practice held at the Holiday Inn Country Villa. The update seminar or the entire standards course is required for re-certification once ever re-certification period.

Texas bank first failure of 1987

BOWIE, Texas (AP) — Bowie National Bank has been declared insolvent, and will reopen today under new management as Bowie State Bank, federal officials say.

It was one of two bank failures reported Thursday, the first to occur within the national banking system this year.

The Bowie bank was declared insolvent by the U.S. Comptroller of the Currency Thursday afternoon.

Federal Deposit Insurance Corp. spokeswoman Julie Amberson said the FDIC's board of directors Thursday approved the assumption of the deposits and liabilities of the bank by Bowie State Bank, a newly chartered subsidiary of Montague Bancshares Inc. of Weatherford.

The FDIC was appointed receiver, said Frank Vance, spokesman for the Comptroller of the Currency.

Bowie is located about 60 miles northwest of Fort Worth. Its economy is dependent on agriculture, oil and gas, officials said.

The failed bank's depositors automatically will become depositors of the assuming bank subject to approval by the appropriate court, Ms. Amberson said.

Bowie State Bank will assume about $12.6 million in 2,900 deposit accounts and has agreed to pay the FDIC a purchase premium of $205,000. It also will purchase certain of the failed bank's loans and other assets for $11.5 million, said Ms. Amberson of the FDIC's Washington office.

To facilitate the transaction the FDIC will advance $886,000 to the assuming bank and will retain assets of the failed bank with a book value of about $1.1 million.

This is the first insured bank to fail in the nation this year, Ms. Amberson said. It was declared insolvent at about 3 p.m., two hours before the Security National Bank & Trust Co. of Norman, Okla., was closed by the U.S. Comptroller of the Currency.

The comptroller said the Oklahoma bank suffered from a depressed economy, poor management supervision and lax loan collections.

FDIC spokesman Bill Olcheski in Washington said the failed Oklahoma bank will reopen today as Security National Bank & Trust Co. under ownership of two Arkansas bank holding companies.

Vance said the Texas bank had assets of $13,106,000, deposits of $13,150,000 and primary capital of $28,000 on Sept. 30, 1986. The bank was chartered on April 10, 1963.

"Over the past several years, the bank experienced significant deterioration of its loan portfolio due to poor supervision by the board of directors, prior management and adverse conoditions in the local economy," Vance said in a prepared statement.

"The bank was unable to remedy its problems and losses finally exhausted the bank's capital funds, resulting in its insolvency," said Vance.

Unemployment drops at year's end

WASHINGTON (AP) — The nation's job market ended 1986 with a long-awaited rally as civilian unemployment fell to 6.7 percent last month — the year's low mark, the government reported today. The number of out-of-work Americans dipped below 8 million for the first time since January.

The Labor Department said its monthly household survey showed the economy created 205,000 jobs last month, raising total employment to a record 110,637,000. That is an increase of nearly 2.5 million jobs since December 1985.

The department, meanwhile, revised both the October and November unemployment rates from 7.0 percent to 6.9 percent. December's 0.2 percentage point drop reflected a decline of 294,000 in the number of jobless Americans, from 8.24 million to 7.95 million.

The commissoner of labor statistics, Janet L. Norwood, said the downward revisions were the result of year-end refinements in the seasonal-adjustment process.

"The revised rates do show more clearly than the previously published data that a slight decline in the jobless rate occurred in the second half of 1986," she said.

But that drop was not enough to send the average unemployment rate for all of 1986 to below 7.0 percent. The decline did send the fourth quarter rate to 6.9 percent, just 0.1 percentage point above what the Reagan administration had predicted a year ago.

The department said three-fifths of the 185 industries it surveys registered employment growth for the second month in a row.

Business and hospital services accounted for most of the job gains with 140,000 new jobs. Those two industries were responsible for 44 percent of the 2.4 million jobs created in 1986.

Manufacturing jobs rose by 41,000 in December, the third straight monthly increase. Since September, such employment has risen by 85,000.

Texas jobless rate stable

DALLAS (AP) — Unemployment in Texas remained relatively unchanged through December, ending the year with a 9.6 percent rate that reflects continued sluggishness in the economy, the Labor Department reported today.

December's figure compared with a 9.5 percent jobless rate in November and 7 percent unemployment one year ago, officials said. Nationally, civilian unemployertunities that can, we will see a continuation of relatively high unemployment in Texas," said Richey.

He said about 155,000 jobs were lost over 1986 in the five sectors. Currently, there are 796,000 out-of-work Texans in a labor force of about 8.3 million.

Wholesale prices fall during 1986

WASHINGTON (AP) — Wholesale prices fell 2.5 percent in 1986 — the best inflation performance in 37 years — as civilian unemployment fell to a yearly low of 6.7 percent in December, the government reported today.

It was the first time prices at the wholesale level had fallen for a year since 1963 and it was the second biggest decline on record, topped only by a 4.6 percent plunge in 1949.

For December, the Labor Department said in its inflation report, prices held steady as a modest increase in energy costs was offset by a decline in food prices.

Last year's decline in inflation was attributed almost entirely to falling energy costs. Without a record 39.1 percent drop in energy prices, the overall index would have risen 2.7 percent.

The 2.5 percent price decline in 1986 followed modest increases of 1.8 percent in 1985, 1.7 percent in 1984 and 0.6 percent in 1983 and was a dramatic turnaround from the double-digit rates suffered in 1979 and 1980 when oil prices soared.

Many analysts are predicting prices next year at the wholesale level will rise between 2 percent and 3 percent, with consumer prices rising at an even faster 4 percent clip.

The zero change in wholesale prices in December followed modest gains of 0.2 percent in November and 0.3 percent in October.

Energy prices edged up 0.2 percent in December led by a 4.4 percent jump in gasoline costs, which will be reflected in rising pump prices in coming months. Wholesale prices for heating oil also climbed sharply, rising 6.7 percent while natural gas prices posted a 6.8 percent decline.

Food costs fell 0.4 percent in December, led by declines of 8.3 percent in vegetable prices, 4.9 percent in poultry costs and a 2.1 percent drop in beef prices.

Union Texas boosts domestic gas production by 26 percent

HOUSTON (SWN) Union Texas Petroleum reported that it has initiated natural gas production from the company's new platform complex at Vermilion Block 237, located 60 miles offshore Louisiana in the central Gulf of Mexico. Coupled with the recent startup of production at its Vermilion 109 field, Union Texas has boosted its net domestic gas production capacity by approximately 26 percent to 265 million cubic feet daily.

Combined gross production capacity from Vermilion 237 and 109 totals 100 million cubic feet of gas daily, 50 million cubic feet net to Union Texas. Production from both blocks is transported via two major offshore pipelines to central marketing hubs in southern Louisiana and is sold primarily to utilities and local distribution companies in the Northeast and Midwest.

Union Texas has a 50 percent working interest in the Vermilion 237 and 109 blocks, which were acquired at a federal offshore lease sale in 1984.

Drilling slump aids seismic research

HOUSTON (UPI) — The depressed offshore drilling industry could prove a boom for scientific research of the continental shelf because researchers can hire seismic ships at low rates.

Architects of a fledgling program called Edge have proposed to study the continental margins of the United States by seismic sounding, the technique also used to locate geologic formations most apt to hold hydrocardons.

Seismic ship contracts normally are expensive, but the slump in offshore drilling has left the ships with free time between jobs and lowered day rates to one-third to one-half of their 1982 peak.

Researchers hope to tap the underworked contractors to gather data that might otherwise be too costly to acquire under an academic budget.

"The downturn in commercial exploration activity makes possible the use of state-of-the-art technology at a favorable price," the group said in one of its first reports.

Manik Talwani, director of the Houston Area Research Center's Geotechnology Research Institute, which is managing the project, calls the principle the "ship of opportunity."

HARC is a consortium of four universities: The University of Texas, the University of Houston, Texas A&M and Rice University, where Talwani is a professor.

Under this arrangement, geophysical contractors would be given a list of the precise offshore locations to be surveyed. A contractor between jobs near one of the locations might negotiate an arrangement to do the seismic work at below-market rates.

The researchers would not assume any costs of mobilizing or demobilizing the vessel. Some contractors, indlucing Western Geophysical, GSI, GECO and Teledyne have been involved in the early planning.

The theory has been tested once, with Houston-based Digicon. The geophysical firm was doing seismic work for Pacific Gas & Electric offshore California when the researchers asked if the company would be willing to put up a boat below standard rates.

"I was interested from a scientific point of view," said Peter Duncan, Digicon's chiefgeophysicist for North America. "And we were in between prospects."

The ship worked for eight days, acquiring 300 linear miles worth of data at a price sources estimated to be as low as 25 percent of market rates.

Digicon, like other geophysical firms, used air guns to send shock waves to the sea floor below. As the wave traveled into the earth and was reflected back to the surface by the layers of rock, a detector captured these reflections and recorded them on magnetic tape. This data is being processed by HARC.

The Edge program was launched in March 1986 at an organizational meeting at The Woodlands. Participants included representatives of 20 universities, 11 energy and exploration companies and federal and state geological surveys.

The scientists want to better understand the structure and movement of the continental plates, partly to resolve purely scientific questions. Practical applications include the detection of deep fault lines to help determine the likelihood of earthquakes.

Edge has applied for a $25 million, five-year grant from the National Science Foundation to conduct the seismic work but has not yet received an answer on its request.

Funding for the interim Digicon work was provided by Rice University and HARC.

Duncan of Digicon said a $25 million grant divided among several contractors is no small amount considering the low commerical demand for seismic services. "Three million a year is not bad considering it might be the only game in town."
