Americans home after voyage of piracy

NEWARK, N.J. (AP) — Americans who set out on a leisurely Mediterranean cruise and found their Italian ship hijacked by Palestinian gunmen returned home aboard a military jet Saturday, ending a voyage of piracy and murder.

Their flight home from Egypt was interrupted by a stop in Sicily to identify their former captors, whose Egyptian airliner was forced to land early Friday by four fighter jets that were scrambled from a U.S. Navy carrier.

"These people (hijackers) will be brought to justice and made to pay for the barbarous crime they committed," Vernon Walters, U.S. ambassador to the United Nations, said as he waited to greet the returnees.

The first off the plane was Marilyn Klinghoffer, whose wheelchair-bound, 69-year-old husband, Leon, was killed aboard the cruise ship Achille Lauro before the pirates surrendered Wednesday.

Dressed in black, she was escorted to a limousine while the other returning passengers walked to a bus.

At an airport hotel where the passengers' relatives waited, Mrs. Klinghoffer was escorted inside by companions supporting her on both sides. She stared straight ahead, never varying the look of despair on her face.

■ 'Original plan' described — Page 4A

As the other passengers entered the hotel, Neil Kantor, 62, of Metuchen, waved to reporters, and Frank Hodes, 66, of Springfield, smiled broadly.

"I feel fine," chimed in Seymour Meskin, 71, from Union.

The former hostages were reunited with relatives behind closed doors in a banquet room.

The Klinghoffers' two daughters and son-in-law had arrived at the airport hotel with a police escort to wait for their mother.

Arriving at the hotel, Carol Hodes, whose mother, aunt and uncle were among the hijacked passengers, said she felt "better than ever."

FBI agent John McGinley said there were "a lot of tears" during the reunion and that a debriefing by FBI and State Department officials — about just what happened aboard the Achille Lauro — would be kept brief because the returnees were tired.

Walters said several of the former hostages said they would be happy to go back and testify against the accused hijackers. He said he believes that the four former hostages who identified them were "100 percent" sure.

U.S. Embassy officials in Italy said Saturday it was unclear whether it would be necessary for the Americans to return to testify.

"I was amazed at the calmness of all of them, including Mrs. Klinghoffer. They identified the hijackers. That took real courage," said Walters.

U.S. Sen. Alphonse D'Amato, R-N.Y., who helped escort Mrs. Klinghoffer, quoted her as saying: "I hope we can bring them back to the U.S. But if they're not I'll go over to testify against them."

The Air Force plane had left Cairo, Egypt, on Friday, and landed at the U.S. Air Force Rhein-Main Air Base near Frankfurt Saturday.

Midland plans for growth

By RAMONA NYE
Staff Writer

The design and layout of cities and neighborhoods affect every resident in subtle and direct ways.

When a design is poorly planned it can result in many problems ranging from crowded traffic conditions to safety hazards.

The city planning commission will begin presenting its plan for Midland's growth through five public hearings within the next three weeks. The first hearing will be 7 p.m. Tuesday at the Lee High School Cafeteria, 3500 Neely.

After 18 months of research, the Dallas planning firm J.T. Dunkin and Associates has put together a Master Plan to guide city councilmen on how the city should develop and what should be done to improve existing neighborhoods.

"We need to have a pretty good idea of what kind of community we want to have," said Sam Listi, assistant director of planning.

Through the comprehensive plan, Listi said, "We have a great opportunity to influence growth."

The plan should guide the city in its growth through the end of the century, and will be reviewed by the planning committee every 2 or 3 years.

Councilmen making bi-weekly zoning and planning decisions sometimes lose sight of the overall effect these incremental decisions may have on the city, Listi said. The comprehensive plan guidelines, which have been followed for the past 8 years, are being written down to give the councilmen a working document, Listi said.

"It's nothing new, but its the first time ever it has been written down," he said.

Planning and Development Director Richard Hennessy said, "We've come through a very rapid growth period with no document, but we now have in print form the concepts of the community."

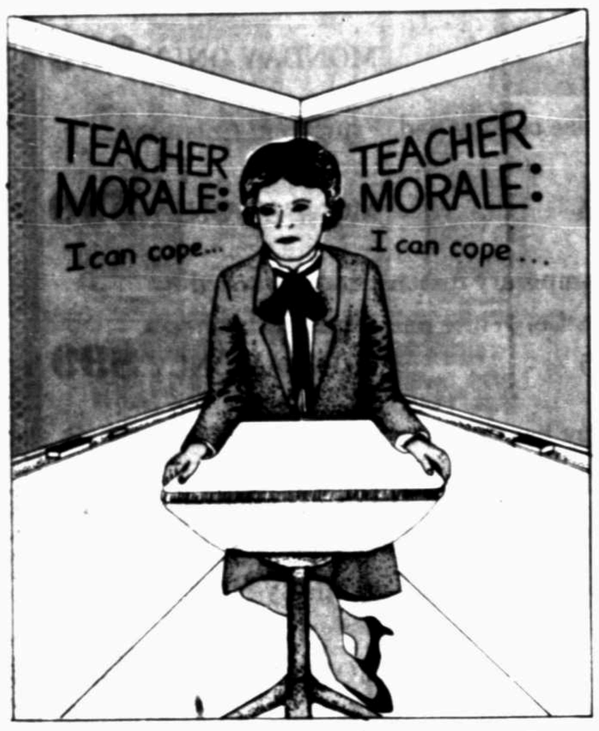

The two business strips, running the length of Andrews Highway and Big Spring, are poor design examples the commission hopes will be avoided in the future, they added.

"You just can't have businesses the whole length of the street. It totally impairs the capacity of arterial streets to carry traffic and there is no market for it," Listi said.

The comprehensive plan suggests that the businesses be located only at the intersections of major streets, with apartments and homes located along the sides of major streets.

Teacher morale becoming 'greatest concern'

Susan Condor/Reporter-Telegram

School administrators find they, too, have something to learn — how to help teachers cope with low morale.

By JULIE HILLRICHS
Staff Writer

The morale of many Texas teachers has plummeted deeper and deeper as the implementation of controversial public school reform — paperwork, no-pass no-play, career ladder and essential elements — goes on and on.

"The teaching profession has become less attractive in recent years," John Cole, president of the Texas Federation of Teachers, has said.

Even Commissioner of Education Dr. W.N. Kirby has said, "The greatest concern I have is low teacher morale."

For many school districts, the problem has now become not only one of implementing reforms, but trying to do so with teachers whose spirits are at an all-time low.

The Teacher Retirement System reported in July that it received 600 more requests for retirement benefits estimates than last year. By late August, TRS officials estimated that between 6,500 and 7,000 Texas educators would retire before the start 1985-86 school year — up from 5,700 who retired last year.

To prevent the signs of strain from spreading out of control, school districts are stopping just short of the old-fashioned pep rally to raise team and school spirit among teachers and other employees.

In Midland, school officials believe even the little things mean a lot as they honor teachers this week during Midland Public Schools Week.

Moslems say they've killed Buckley

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — A statement purported to be from Islamic Jihad said Saturday that the extremist Moslem organization had killed U.S. diplomat William Buckley and offered to exchange his body for 100 Palestinian prisoners held in Israel.

The leading independent newspaper An Nahar published a front page photograph said to be of the body and said it was among pictures received along with a statement alleging to be from Islamic Jihad, or Moslem holy war.

There was no immediate way to confirm that the body shown was that of Buckley, one of six kidnapped Americans Islamic Jihad has said it was holding.

Blurred Polaroid photos showed a man resembling Buckley wrapped in a white shroud and a brown blanket. The statement did not say when the photos were taken.

Envelopes containing the statement and photographs were found outside the offices of the newspaper and a Western news agency in Beirut.

The statement said Buckley's body would be turned over to U.N. Secretary General Javier Perez de Cuellar if Israel agrees to release 100 Palestinians from its jails. It did not give the prisoners' names or say where they were held.

"We will turn over the body of the American spy 24 hours before the day of the release. ... If we are betrayed, then Mr. de Cuellar will pay dearly," it said.

"The American administration, and particularly President Reagan will be responsible for any harm befalling the other hostages," the statement said.

In the photographs, both overexposed, only the man's face was uncovered. The eyes were shut, the mouth slightly open.

The man had a gray beard and a thin mustache, as Buckley did in a photo his kidnappers released more than a week ago when they announced they had killed him.

Fetuses found near hospital

ALVIN (AP) — Two "well-preserved" human fetuses were found buried behind a hospital emergency room by construction workers digging up a parking lot, but investigators say they don't suspect any foul play.

"At this point, we don't have any reason to suspect any criminal activity was involved, but we really don't know why they were here," Alvin Police Chief Michael Jez said.

The fetuses were were found Friday behind the Alvin Community Hospital emergency room by construction workers who are enlarging the hospital.

They were sent to the Galveston County medical examiner's office for autopsies. Investigators hope to determine the ages of the fetuses and when they were buried.

"We feel, after talking to the medical examiner's investigators, that they've been here for quite some time — that they weren't placed there recently," Jez said.

"We received a call from the hospital administration that the construction crews had unearthed what they thought was a fetus," Jez said. "We responded and in a cursory exam, we discovered a second one. Both fetuses appeared to have been well preserved and inside glass containers."

Authorities do not expect to find any more fetuses, but workers Saturday were digging on the site, a police spokeswoman said.

"We just want to make certain there are no others," Jez said.

Tommy Shapiro, executive director of the 86-bed hospital which opened in 1967, said he was uncertain how the hospital disposed of fetuses in past years.

He said current hospital policy gives families discretion in disposing of dead fetuses.

Shapiro said hospital administrators had no idea why the fetuses were buried behind the emergency room.

Migrants to get basic skills test

BROWNSVILLE (AP) — The State Board of Education, winding up its three-day working tour to South Texas, voted Saturday to give teachers a duty-free lunch and migrant students a day for the basic skills test.

Texas Education Agency Commissioner W.N. Kirby said board members were impressed with the way Brownsville administrators, teachers and students were handling the tougher academic standards brought by statewide school reforms.

The board traveled to the Rio Grande Valley to view the hardships of educating children in a poverty-stricken, bilingual area.

The board, which worked in committees Thursday and Friday, met Saturday morning and despite objections from state Sen. Jack Strong of Longview approved a third day for the Texas Educational Assessment of Minimum Skills test.

The test is scheduled to be given to high school juniors in October and May, but many migrant students are with their families harvesting crops in the north then.

The third test date in January will be for their benefit.

But Strong said the state would be spending too much money, perhaps $500,000, if it had to have a third test developed in order to avoid cheating.

Beets convicted of fifth husband's death

ATHENS (AP) — The son of a Dallas fireman says he is pleased because jurors in the trial of Betty Lou Beets have convicted her of capital murder in his father's death.

"I'm very happy with the verdict. Now I know my father can rest in peace," James Donald Beets told a reporter after the jury's decision on Friday.

An eight-woman, four man state district court jury, after a week-long trial and 5½ hours of deliberation, convicted Mrs. Beets, 48, in the slaying of her fifth husband, Dallas Fire Capt. Jimmy Don Beets.

The jury has been sequestered for the weekend by Judge Jack Holland and was scheduled to meet again Monday to begin the trial's punishment phase.

The defendant, a blonde ex-barmaid who faces a possible death sentence or life in prison, began to cry outside the courtroom following the verdict and one of her daughters also burst into tears. Two chidren who had testified against her were not present for the verdict.

South Africa's white opposition, black leaders hold talks

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — White opposition politicians seeking a solution to South Africa's racial conflict met Saturday with chiefs of the outlawed African National Congress black guerrilla group in neighboring Zambia.

In South Africa, four blacks were meanwhile reported killed in new anti-apartheid violence.

President P.W. Botha, who condemned a similar meeting last month by three prominent white businessmen, had no comment on Saturday's session between four legislators of the Progressive Federal Party and four ANC leaders.

The whites, headed by party leader Frederik Van Zyl Slabbert, traveled to Lusaka, Zambia's capital, for the meeting and were expected to return to South Africa on Sunday, ANC spokesman Tom Sebina said in a telephone interview.

Sebina said the delegations "exchanged views on possible solutions to the crisis created by the apartheid system," South Africa's policy of racial segregation under which 5 million whites deny the vote to 24 million blacks.

With van Zyl Slabbert were legislators Colin Eglin, Alex Boraine and Peter Gastrow.

Sebina said the ANC participants included the group's secretary general, Alfred Nzo; Thabo Mbeki, director of information; and Max Maharaj and Simon Makana, members of the national executive committee.

Gavin Relly, chairman of the giant Anglo American mining conglomerate who led the businessmen's delegation last month, said then he thought "more talks might lead to some fruitful conclusion."

That meeting was an unprecedented attempt by members of the white-minority establishment to directly involve the banned ANC, which claims the sympathy of most blacks, in talks for ending the country's racial conflict.

Botha said of the businessmen's meeting, "I do not know what they (the businessmen) are going to achieve, other than to show signs of weakness to the enemies of South Africa."

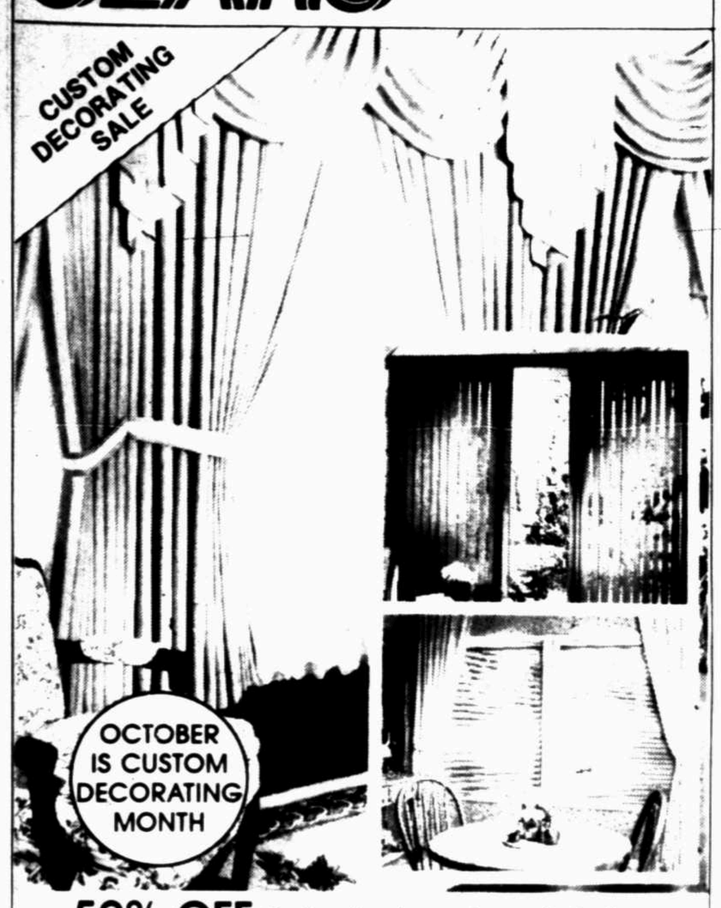

Botha's spokesman, Jack Viviers, said Sunday the president would make no comment on the legislators' visit.

"What he had to say about the whole subject, he said before," Viviers said, referring to the comment on the businessmen's trip. "He has nothing to add."

The Progressive Federal Party does not endorse black demands for a one-man, one-vote form of majority rule. But it opposes the governing National Party's racial segregation policies and long has sought to bring the ANC and other parties shunned by the government into negotiations.

"We have always favored talking with everybody, including the ANC," Progressive Federal Party legislator Helen Suzman said in Johannesburg. "This is part of Van Zyl Slabbert's attempt to get negotiations at least considered across the (political) spectrum."

BUCKLEY

In Washington, a spokesman for the State Department, Pete Martinez, said: "We do not regard the alleged photograph as convincing evidence that Mr. Buckley is no longer alive. We reiterate that the U.S. government holds the captors fully responsible for the safety of all the hostages."

In its Oct. 3 statement, Islamic Jihad said it killed Buckley, 57, to avenge 65 Tunisians and Palestinians killed in an Israeli air raid on the Palestine Liberation Organization headquarters in Tunisia two days earlier.

Islamic Jihad has been showing increasing support for Palestinians in recent statements.

In earlier statements, Islamic Jihad had only demanded that Kuwait free 17 convicted terrorist bombers in return for five American and four French captives they claim to hold.

Islamic Jihad is believed to consist of Shiite Moslem extremists who follow Iran's revolutionary patriarch, Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini.

In another development, the Soviet charge d'affaires, Yuri Souslikov, conferred with Sheikh Mohammed Hussein Fadlallah, a leading Shiite theologian, on the fate of three Soviet hostages.

"Sheikh Fadlallah reaffirmed to Mr. Souslikov that he is against all forms of kidnappings, particularly the kidnapping of Soviets, which are not in line with our Islamic beliefs," said a Fadlallah spokesman, who spoke on condition of anonymity.

Fadlallah has also condemned the abduction of Westerners, including the Americans, despite his public opposition to U.S. policy.

Four Soviets were kidnapped Sept. 30 in Beirut by the hitherto unknown Islamic Liberation Organization, believed to be a Sunni Moslem faction.

It said it would kill the Russians if Syria, Moscow's main Arab ally, did not halt an offensive by its leftist militia allies against Sunni fundamentalists in the port of Tripoli, 50 miles north of Beirut.

The bullet-riddled body of one captive, consular attache Arkady Katkov, was discovered two days later.

Fadlallah is backed by the Palestine Liberation Organization, which is also allied with the Sunni fundamentalists in Tripoli.

The Soviets evidently hoped he could persuade his PLO supporters to pressure the Islamic Liberation Organization to free the Russian hostages.

An Iranian-brokered cease-fire ended the Tripoli offensive nine days ago, but a later statement purporting to come from the Islamic Liberation Organization said the captives will not be freed.

It called on Islamic Jihad to hold the American hostages until Moscow and Washington agree to a formula to end Lebanon's decade-old civil war.

The five other Americans missing in Beirut are: the Rev. Lawrence Jenco, a Roman Catholic priest; Terry Anderson, chief Middle East correspondent for The Associated Press; Peter Kilburn, librarian at the American University of Beirut; David Jacobsen, director of the university hospital; and Thomas Sutherland, the dean of agriculture at the university.

Veteran announcer Olson dies

SANTA MONICA, Calif. (AP) — Johnny Olson, an announcer whose shout of "Come on down!" wooed contestants on "The Price Is Right" game show, died Saturday of a brain hemorrhage. He was 75.

Olson died at St. John's Hospital, where he was admitted Oct. 6, said nursing supervisor Maureen Freudider.

"He never missed a show in 14 years. And, in July, when they had the daytime Emmy awards, they saluted him for his 40 years in the business," said Olson's longtime friend, Marc Breslow, the Emmy-winning director of "The Price is Right."

Although never a host, Olson's rich voice was a fixture on television game shows for more than 20 years as he announced prizes, introduced contestants and performed other duties.

He was an announcer on "The Jackie Gleason Show" on CBS from 1962 to 1970, but was best known for his work on game shows such as "To Tell the Truth," "The Match Game" and "What's My Line?"

On "The Price is Right," he would announce contestants and urge them to "Come on down!" from the studio auditorium.

PLAN

Using heavily traveled streets as boundaries, planners recommend using the center of these areas for low density land uses, like parks, schools and single family homes. They recommend higher density uses, such as duplexes, apartments, businesses and public buildings for the outer areas of neighborhoods.

"We recognize all kinds of needs in the community that we need to balance," Listi said.

"There's an effort in the plan to provide a level of balance to the community, so as we grow, the city can keep up with that growth."

The comprehensive plan is neighborhood oriented, Hennessy said.

"We feel residential neighborhoods are the building blocks of a community," he added.

"If we feel like we can build a good neighborhood like that, the result can be a good community," Hennessy said.

The need for apartments is increasing, Hennessy said.

"Our neighborhoods are going to have to accommodate more apartments as a result. But we want a residential neighborhood image, not an apartment image. The plan is to disperse them around the perimeter, so they can be absorbed in the neighborhood."

Hennessy said Midland already has partial examples of model neighborhoods with Fairmont Park, Polo Park and the Wydewood area.

Dividing up a parcel of land in an orderly way also saves money, Hennessy says, by making the land more valuable and desirable to owners.

"There are costs of using a less desirable type of design. There are costs to the community at large," Hennessy said.

The comprehensive plan will tell developers how the city expects lots and streets to be spaced, divided and located, Listi said.

The plan also addresses uses for existing neighborhoods, with suggestions ranging from park space and school additions to total redevelopment.

Additional public hearings from 7 to 9 p.m. include:

— Thursday, Sam Jacinto School Auditorium, 1400 North N St.

— Oct. 21, Midland Freshman School Cafeteria, 100 E. Gist.

— Oct. 24, Bonham Elementary School Cafeteria, 909 Bonham.

— Oct. 29, Pease Elementary School Cafeteria, 1700 E. Magnolia Ave.

The planning commission encourages residents to attend the hearings.

"The staff is interested in the public's perceptions of what their needs are," Listi said.

"We can do a better job with feedback."

MORALE

Becky Ferguson, communications coordinator with the Midland Independent School District, reported teacher salaries are up an average 4.82 percent for the 1985-86 school year — an average of 24 percent above the state base. Total payroll costs are up nearly 8 percent due to additional teaching positions, increases in the MISD annuity contribution, health insurance, workmen's compensation, and unemployment insurance.

Fifty-seven new teaching positions were added in 1985-86 — some for the opening of Scharbauer Elementary School, but most to meet new state requirements including the maximum 22 students in kindergarten, first-, and second-grade classes, computer literacy and study skills courses for all eighth-grade students, and a freshman biology course.

Ms. Ferguson said MISD's professional growth opportunities program (inservice) is unique in its individualized approach to the teaching profession. Most professional employees may design inservice programs to meet specific and individual needs in both content and scheduling.

Each employee may select inservice workshops from a college-course-like catalog and may choose to take courses at night, on the weekends, or in the summer in lieu of participating in inservice on designated district-wide inservice days.

Graduate courses also are included as part of the employee's professional growth. Each professional employee must complete a minimum of 28 hours inservice. New employees must complete an additional seven hours during their first year of employment.

Ms. Ferguson said MISD provides at district expense, a health-medical insurance program for all full-time employees which includes life and dental coverage. The policy features a lifetime maximum benefit of $1 million, life, accidental death and dismemberment benefit of $10,000 and employee out-of-pocket expense limit of $1,800.

MISD employees also may purchase, at their own expense, additional group-rate insurance policies through payroll deduction.

In addition, State law created a state insurance program for retired teachers, giving districts the option of paying into the program or deducting contributions from employee paychecks. The MISD board opted for the district to pay $95,000 contribution, making it the only district in West Texas not to pass the cost on to employees, Ms. Ferguson said.

MISD also increased from 2.5 to 3 percent its contribution to the employee matching annuity program. All employees who work 21 or more hours per week are eligible.

The Teacher Communications Committee, comprised of teacher representatives for each campus, meets monthly with central administration officials and several times each year with members of the school board to discuss issues of mutual concern.

Membership in the Midland Teachers Credit Union is available to all MISD employees and their families for a $1 fee and $25 deposit into each share savings account. Members may make insured investments and apply for loans through the credit union.

Accused hijackers explain 'original plan'

SIRACUSA, Sicily (AP) — Americans who were held hostage on the Achille Lauro cruise liner stopped in Sicily on their way home and singled out their four former captors in a "lineup," officials reported.

The hijackers, who are being held at a fortress-like prison in Siracusa for trial in Italy, told investigators they took over the Italian cruise ship Monday only after a waiter discovered them cleaning their weapons, the ANSA news agency reported Saturday.

Quoting unidentified Italian magistrates questioning the pirates, the report said the hijackers originally planned to mount an attack in Ashdod, Israel, the ship's next port of call after Port Said, Egypt.

Francesco Meloni, chief prosecutor of Genoa, Italy, confirmed reports that "about 10" Americans from the luxury liner had been brought to Sicily to help investigators identify the hijackers, who face charges of murder in the death of a passenger from New York City. The former hostages were on their way from Egypt to the United States.

The Americans were able to identify the hijackers "immediately and singled them out" from others in groups that included sailors and other people from a local navy base, according to U.S. Embassy sources in Rome, who spoke on condition they not be identified.

The former hostages viewed four groups, each one containing one hijacker, the sources said.

In another development, the United States filed a note with Italy, protesting the Italian government's decision to let a Palestine Liberation Organization official, Mohammed Abbas, leave Rome and fly to Belgrade, Yugoslavia.

Abbas and an aide had helped in the negotiations that led the hijackers to surrender. Egypt then offered safe passage to the hijackers, but the Egyptian jetliner carrying the four along with Abbas and his aide was intercepted over the Mediterranean by U.S. Navy jets and forced to land at a NATO base in Sicily.

The hijackers were jailed in Sicily but Abbas, his aide, and 17 Egyptian security personnel and crew on the jetliner remained aboard when it flew to Rome Friday. The United States sent an arrest warrant to Rome, accusing Abbas of involvement in the hijacking, but the Italian Foreign Ministry said there were no legal grounds to hold him, and he and his aide flew to Belgrade late Saturday aboard a Yugoslavian jetliner.

Late Saturday, the United States asked Yugoslavia to arrest Abbas, but there was no immediate response from Belgrade.

AUSTIN NOTEBOOK

Politicians tread carefully on AIDS control

By BILL KIDD

AUSTIN — Acquired immune deficiency syndrome — AIDS — has been called the new leprosy, combining physical disease with social and moral issues.

AIDS also has a political dimension — and state governmental involvement with the disease has become a major issue in recent months.

State involvement in disease control is hardly a new idea — protection of public health is a basic right and duty of government, and is a well-established principle.

What makes AIDS different in that regard is that the disease is linked to homosexuality, about as politically sensitive an issue as any around these days.

Concern has been mounting that efforts to control a deadly disease will lead to discrimination or repression — intentional or otherwise for homosexuals.

There's also concern expressed that efforts to assure civil rights for indivudials may lead to the exposure of other members of the public to AIDS — and that concern over "gay rights" is leading to a neglect of the rights of all society.

Concern over the threat of AIDS in public schools in other states has caused Texas health and eduction officials to begin development of guidelines for school children with the disease — although no cases have been reported in Texas for school-age children.

Texas Departmwnt of Health epidemiology chief Dr. E.E. Alexander says there are many fears "coming out of ignorance."

"We've been bombarded with calls from school principals and school superintendents whose school boards are concerned about it."

But, Alexander says, AIDS victims should pose no threat in an "ordinary classroom," unless the victims have uncovered sores, neurological problems which could cause them to bite other children, or aren't toilet-trained.

AIDS, he says, isn't spread casually — with sexual activity considered the primary cause (and that would not be occurring in the classroom).

Education Commissioner William N. Kirby stresses that the guidelines are only guidelines, and not rules — with each school district determining how to treat AIDS victims.

State Health Commissioner Dr. Robert Bernstein says he feels AIDS should be added to the State quarantine list — but with safeguards to prevent the use of quarantine of persons simply for having the disease.

Diseases already on the quarantine list include veneral diseases, cholera, tuberculosis, yellow fever and plague.

Officials in San Antonio and Houston have called for quarantine of AIDS victims who persist in contacts which could spread the disease — and for prosecution of those who violate the quarantine orders.

Those calls were prompted by statements of an alleged homosexual male prostitute that he would continue sexual relations despite having been diagnosed as having the disease.

At least some gay rights activists have indicated agreement with the quarantine proposal, noting that homosexuals are at most risk.

And presumably they also understand that fears of persecution of gays could become reality if the disease continues to increase and spread among the non-homosexual population.

State officials also have been looking at the transmission of AIDS through blood transfusions, with legislation offered during this year's legislative session to prohibit blood banks from buying blood from persons with communicable diseases.

The bill also would have had the Department of health compile, and distribute among blood banks, lists of persons with such diseases (with the information confidential and criminal penalties for improper disclosure of information).

Sen. Cyndi Krier, R-San Antonio, Senate sponsor of the bill (carried in the House by Rep. Ken Armbrister, D-Victoria), said the bill was read as though aimed solely at AIDS, but said when the measure was drafted before the session, "we didn't know AIDS was a big danger."

Neither the House nor the Senate versions came out of committee — despite the fact that the legislaion was requested by the Department of Health.

But chances are that such legislation may receive more attention at the next legislative session, if the problem hasn't been resolved at the national level.

In fact, the next legislative session could see a renewed battle over a number of issues involving homosexuals, depending on what happens with the Texas law prohibiting oral and anal sexual intercourse between homosexuals — a law which was upheld in split decision by the U.S. 5th Circuit Court of Appeals Aug. 26 (but which gay leaders want the U.S. Supereme Court to overturn).

It appears that concern over AIDS is continuing to widen — as shown by the decision of Dallas-based Enserch Corp. to test applicants for food service jobs for AIDS, and other communicable diseases.

And until AIDS can be cured, or is stopped, the governmental and political aspects of AIDS are likely to become more, and not less, complicated.

Fort Bend residents edgy after 10 murders this year; Trials to begin

RICHMOND (AP) — Residents of east Fort Bend County subdivisions are locking their doors and hoping their street is safe after 10 violent deaths have haunted the community in less than a year.

Jury selection is scheduled to begin Monday for two men accused of six murders earlier this year.

The six deaths occurred less than five miles apart from each other in the sprawling subdivisions which dominate Fort Bend County west of Houston.

Reginald Lewis, 21, is charged with four counts of murder in the Feb. 1 shooting deaths of his parents and two brothers. He will be tried in state District Judge Charles Dickerson's court.

Just around the corner of the courthouse, state District Judge A. Reagan Clark will preside over the trial of Archie Smith, 38, who is charged with the April 28 shooting death of his ex-wife, Lunita Smith and Charley Steptoe, 27, of Richmond.

He is also charged with the attempted murders of Arthur Office, 42, and Donna Duah, 33, both of Fort Bend County.

"I'd venture to say a large percentage of these subdivision people don't even know who their neighbor is across the street or next door," said Sgt. Larry Welch with the Fort Bend County Sheriff's Department crime prevention division.

"Most of our crime problem is on the east end — the Houston side of Fort Bend County," he said. "The majority of the people are very transient. They live in Fort Bend County, but they work in Houston."

A Fort Bend County grand jury indicted Lewis in May in the mass slaying. He was charged with killing his family, Henry Lewis Sr., 45, his father; Mary Lewis, 44, his mother; and brothers Henry Jr., 22, and Byron, 13.

"Alcoholics and drug abusers often hide behind a mask. I did. And then I got help."

Rep. Armey calls the House his house while in Washington

WASHINGTON (AP) — While in Washington, freshman Congressman Richard Armey doesn't live in a house. He lives in The House — of Representatives.

Armey, R-Denton, a former professor, was elected to Congress last year. His wife and five children stayed in Texas.

"My line is that Washington isn't a fit place for a Texan to live," Armey says.

This summer, he said he decided it was a waste of "my two most precious resources while I'm in this town — time and money" to rent a place to live and commute to work.

He gave up his $700-a-month, one-bedroom apartment and now sleeps on his office sofa when he comes in late from his weekend trips to Texas. During the week, he stays in the House gymnasium.

"I had suggested to my wife and to my staff early that I would probably just as well stay in the office," Armey said in a recent interview. "They were concerned that it might be depressing for me and encouraged me to take an apartment, which I did, out in Crystal City (Va.)"

But Armey said he found himself working until 11:30 at night and rushing to catch the last Metro subway train from Capitol Hill to Virginia before midnight. Hours later, he'd be on the morning train back into town.

Living in the House office buildings "has been far less depressing," he said. "I found the Metro depressing, especially at night, especially when I had to get up from my work. My apartment was depressing. You know, I never saw it in the daylight hours."

Rep. James Jeffords, R-Vt., lived in his office for 11 months about five years ago, and Armey isn't the only one sharing the halls of Congress with the cleaning crews this year.

Rep. Bob Whittaker, R-Kans., sleeps in his office, but preferred not to talk about it, according to his press secretary.

Armey said as far as he knows, Whittaker is the only other congressman living in an office, although he thinks there are periodic mystery guests in the gym. When he comes in late, he said, he often notices closed doors on a few of the 12 sleeping rooms, indicating they are occupied.

The gymnasium, located in the basement of the cavernous Rayburn building, has Nautilus body-building machines, showers, a sauna, a steam bath, a television and telephones.

Each of the 7-foot-by-5-foot sleeping rooms is equipped with a bed and a chair, Armey said.

"There's nothing fancy there," he said. "I don't know if I should say this, but it's somewhat reminiscent of my idea of a prison cell."

Nevertheless, Armey said, the life is really quite satisfying because of the amount of time alone he gets.

"What I do is get up from my desk as late as I please, quite often around midnight," he said. "The Metro is long since gone and I'm not worrying about it. I go down to the gym. I get a workout on the weights. You turn on the news, you're down there alone, you have a chance to think, do something physical for yourself, take a hot shower and roll in the sack.

"I'm up at 6 again, again get a good workout on the weights, get a chance to visit with some of the other guys, which is something I missed out on. I'm getting to know more of the members."

In the mornings, he said, he goes from the Rayburn to the Longworth next door where he has lunch in the cafeteria. His office is in the Cannon, the third of the three House offices buildings. All are connected to each other and the Capitol by underground walkways.

"I don't like leaving the Hill," he said. "I was reflecting on that. My world is very small when I'm in Washington, compared to the five counties I travel in (Texas).

Two charged in delivery of marijuana to prison

HUNTSVILLE (AP) — Grand jurors have indicted two Houston women who allegedly delivered a pound of marijuana to the Texas Department of Corrections' Wynne Unit.

Janett C. Rocka, 22, and Kalene C. Winslett, 22, were indicted Thursday by a Walker County on drug delivery charges stemming from an incident that allegedly occurred July 12.

Investigators say two Wynne Unit inmates arranged the sale of the marijuana that the two women allegedly delivered. No inmates have been charged in the incident, said special prosecutor David Weeks.

TV station suing MTV

HOUSTON (AP) — The owners of Channel 5, Houston's new music video station, filed a $205 million antitrust lawsuit against MTV and the owner of a local cable company charging they are trying to force the fledging station out of business.

The lawsuit, filed in federal court Friday, claims that MTV Networks Inc. and Warner Amex are keeping Channel 5 off cable television and that MTV's exclusive contracts with major record labels force Channel 5 to use out-of-date and leftover music videos.

Channel 5, KOSH-TV, went on the air July 12 as the nation's only all-music video VHF station. It is designed to reach viewers within a 15-mile radius of downtown Houston.

The station's owners, Wodlinger Broadcasting Co. of Texas Inc., claim they have suffered at least $205 million in damages as a result of the alleged antitrust violations by MTV and Warner Amex.

Dallasites put on benefit

DALLAS (AP) — About 80 area performers will join in a benefit Sunday to raise money for relief efforts for the earthquake-torn Mexico City area, a publicist says.

Tony Beacon organized the three-hour show at the Fairmont Hotel, for which Mexico's Consul in Dallas, Oliver Farrez, will be honorary chairman.

"Mexico's tragedy has touched the hearts of everyone connected with this benefit," said Beacon.

He said he expected the benefit will raise about $20,000 for relief efforts. Proceeds will be given to the American Red Cross, earmarked for Mexican Earthquake Relief.

The show will feature performances by Ballet Folklorico de Anita Martinez, mariachi music of Los Reyes, Tommy Breslin, Michael Owen and others.

UT buys supercomputer

ARLINGTON (AP) — Regents of the University of Texas have voted to spend $14.5 million for an advanced supercomputer from Cray Research Inc.

The computer will be used for research projects throughout the UT System.

UT regents on Friday also appropriated an additional $5.5 million for equipment from other companies to complete the systemwide High Performance Computing Center.

The UT equipment is expected to be used in many fields, including medical research, petroleum engineering, aerospace engineering, quantum chemistry, high-energy physics and economics.

AIDS victim readmitted

HOUSTON (AP) — An AIDS victim who became the center of controversy last week when the city health director ordered him to refrain from sexual encounters is in the hospital again.

Fabian Bridges, 30, was admitted Friday to Jefferson Davis Hospital, a hospital spokesman said. Bridges remained in the hospital Saturday although a hospital spokeswoman would not confirm why Bridges had been admitted.

Bridges, a transient, checked himself into Ben Taub Hospital Oct. 2 when Houston gay activist Ray Hill convinced him that City Health Director Dr. James Haughton was threatening to have him involuntarily placed in a mental institution.

Haughton had sent Bridges a letter ordering him to "desist from having sexual relations and donating blood" after Bridges boasted he would have sex with strangers despite having the contagious acquired immune deficiency syndrome, or AIDS.

Bridges checked himself out of the hospital Oct. 4 when members of the gay community found him a home at an undisclosed location.

South, West, show 6 percent rise in crime, FBI report shows

NATION

WASHINGTON (AP) — The number of crimes reported to police went up 3 percent in the first half of 1985, the first increase since the same six months of 1981, the FBI reported Saturday.

The bureau's Uniform Crime Report showed that reported crimes in cities of a million people or more decreased by 2 percent, while total reported crimes in suburban areas jumped by 4 percent.

The overall 3 percent increase in reported crimes was attributable largely to "6 percent upturns in both the Southern and Western regions of the country," said FBI Director William H. Webster.

The Uniform Crime Report gave no reason why reported crime rose significantly in the South and West but showed no change in the Northeast, and dropped by 1 percent in the Midwest.

While reported murders nationwide from Jan. 1 to June 30 fell by 2 percent, the FBI said, violent crime overall went up 4 percent and property crime increased by 3 percent. Reported rapes rose by 7 percent, as did aggravated assault, the report said.

The figures confirmed a disquieting trend in crime that emerged in the last three months of 1984, according to an FBI report released last April.

For the last three months of 1984, overall reported crime had risen by 2 percent compared to the last quarter of 1983, the report said.

The newest report compared the first six months of this year with the Jan. 1-June 30 period of 1984.

When the FBI released its preliminary 1984 crime figures, in April, Webster had noted that overall crime decreased by 3 percent from 1983 to 1984.

"The overall downward trend is encouraging, but the increase in the fourth quarter demonstrates that crime in our society must remain a concern of the general public and a high priority of the criminal justice community," Webster said at the time.

The report released Saturday showed that the 3 percent increase in the overall number of crimes reported for the Jan. 1-June 30 period of 1985 was the first time the index went up since the figures for the same six-month period in 1981 were compared with those for 1980.

Overall reported crime dropped by 5 percent from 1981 to 1982. The same 5 percent decrease occurred in the first six months of 1982, 1983 and 1984.

Some crime experts and Justice Department officials have questioned the reliablity of the FBI's Uniform Crime Report, maintaining there are few controls to detect instances where local police might inflate or shrink crime figures for political or budgetary reasons.

A broader gauge of crime in America, the Bureau of Justice Statistics' National Crime Survey, showed that for all of 1984, the number of people victimized by crime fell from 37 million to 35.5 million — a decrease of 4.1 percent.

These annual surveys have shown that only about one in every three crimes are reported to police, although a much higher proportion of serious crimes are reported.

No National Crime Survey figures have yet been released for 1985, however.

The crime figures reported Saturday were based on information provided to FBI headquarters here by some 13,000 state and local police agencies.

Among other highlights of the report were these:

— The number of reported robberies nationwide remained unchanged, compared to the first six months of last year, although robbery reports spurted by 10 percent in cities whose populations range from a quarter-to a half-million.

— Overall crime in cities ranging from 250,000 people to 499,999 rose by 7 percent.

— Reported murders have been trending down since 1981, with the sharpest drop at 12 percent from the first six months of 1983 compared to 1982.

Businessmen see gloomy trade future

HOT SPRINGS, Va. (AP) — U.S. business leaders voiced gloom Saturday over the nation's huge trade deficit while a top administration official indicated that a fresh batch of unfair trading complaints against other nations are being weighed.

Bruce Smart, deputy commerce secretary for trade, said an interagency panel that he chairs has identified at least three "egregious and large" areas of unfair trading practices against U.S. products.

He declined to say which products or nations would be the subject of complaints.

But Smart told a group of reporters that the panel, part of a six-agency task force named last month by President Reagan, would meet again on Tuesday to firm up its recommendations.

He said that as many as five examples of unfair trading practices might be passed along to the task force for action. The complaints would be in addition to five announced late last summer by the president.

But members of the Business Council, wrapping up a three-day fall retreat, seemed to take little comfort from steps being taken by both the administration and Congress on trade.

Instead, leaders said the U.S. business community remains extremely jittery about the nation's huge trade deficit. And while they said the trade debt would improve slightly as the dollar continues its downward slide, U.S. manufacturers can expect little major relief anytime soon.

The council is predicting that the trade deficit for 1985 will be $133 billon and — despite recent declines in the value of the dollar — will increase to $141 billion in 1986.

"We're very seriously concerned," said Ruben Mettler, chairman of both the Business Council and TRW Inc. He said the trade imbalance is causing severe marketing problems for his firm — both in selling exports and in competing with low-cost imports.

The 65-member council is made up of executives of the nation's largest corporations.

Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, D-Texas, author of a bill to impose a 25 percent duty on products from Japan and other nations with large trade surpluses and which keep out U.S. products, told reporters on Saturday that such legislation was like "a big stick in the closet."

"I think it's time we had a healthy dose of pragmatism," Bentsen said after addressing the council. "There's nothing wrong with acting in your own self interest."

James Robinson III, chairman of the American Express Corp., cited the "tremendous drag that our adverse trade account has had on the U.S. economy," pulling down growth in the Gross National Product by at least two full percentage points.

"We see only modest growth and some improvement in trade, but not immediately," said Edward G. Jefferson, chairman of E.I. du Pont de Nemours & Co.

A report by the council's economic advisers said "pervasive influence of foreign competition" was hurting nearly all U.S. businesses.

The report cited a "tight linkage" between the trade deficit and high goverment budget deficits, high interest rates, the strong dollar, rising protectionist sentiment and "poor performance in manufacturing."

Smart, the Commerce undersecretary, said that the administration planned to maintain pressure on trading partners to open more markets to U.S. goods.

He disclosed that at least two earlier unfair trading complaints — against the European Community for barriers on U.S. canned fruits and against Japan for restraints on the sale of U.S. tobacco products — may be close to a resolution.

Both actions required some form of administration response — up to retaliatory tariffs or quotas — by Dec. 1.

Smart said that negotiations were proceeding in both instances and that he did not anticipate that the United States would have to resort to sanctions.

As part of his new, tougher trade policy, Reagan announced late last summer that the United States was moving in five separate cases involving alleged unfair trading. Of those, only the canned fruit and tobacco cases required action by Dec. 1.

The other three — barriers to the sale of U.S. telephone equipment in Brazil, insurance in South Korea and leather goods in Japan — are still in the preliminary stages of investigation, according to U.S. officials.

Smart conceded that the unfair trading actions announced to fate by the president were largely "symbolic," aimed at "getting the attention" of U.S. trading partners.

Alaska governor recovers from heart surgery

SEATTLE (AP) — Alaska Gov. Bill Sheffield planned to attend a football game between the Seattle Seahawks and the Atlanta Falcons on Sunday, two days after doctors cleared a blocked artery in his heart, a spokesman said Saturday.

The governor expected to spend his second night in Providence Medical Center before being discharged today, and planned to return to Alaska after the football game, his aide said.

Medicare may fund heart transplants

Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

WASHINGTON — Top health officials of the Department of Health and Human Services have recommended that the government begin paying for heart transplants for a limited number of Medicare patients — those under about age 55 — and Secretary Margaret M. Heckler is "favorably disposed" to the idea, sources said Saturday.

In addition, the Public Health Service is recommending that new multimillion-dollar Magnetic Resonance Imaging (MRI) machines, which provide far better pictures of the central nervous system and of the soft tissues inside the human body than X-rays or CAT-scan devices, be approved for use on Medicare patients generally. Sources said the department is likely to adopt that recommendation also.

Approval of the recommendations would be a watershed in introducing some of the most advanced medical technologies — capable of producing enormous health improvements and generating huge costs — into the nation's largest medical program, which now totals about $70 billion a year.

Although immediate costs for heart transplants would be small because of the age-55 limit, many politicians and health specialists fear political pressure eventually would lead to a change in the age cutoff to include far more patients.

Heckler has made no decision on the transplant recommendation but previously made clear that she would favor Medicare heart transplants under limited conditions that would keep costs from ballooning.

In May, she appeared ready to signal a go-ahead but postponed a decision — at White House insistence, according to some sources — and ordered the Public Health Service and the Health Care Financing Administration to study the issue further.

Those two agencies now have developed a plan for Medicare coverage of heart transplants that would limit eligible recipients to those whom medical specialists consider the best candidates. Generally that means people who are under their "mid-50s with adequately young physiologic age to permit successful transplantation" and who are, in most cases, free of other serious health problems.

These limits, according to a memorandum prepared by the two agencies, would exclude the vast majority of Medicare's 30 million beneficiaries, most of whom are over 65, leaving only certain categories of beneficiaries, such as the disabled and certain young adults.

As a result, the memo estimated that 63 people in 1986, 91 the next year, 103 in 1988, 115 in 1989 and 128 in 1990 would be eligible for the Medicare-funded heart transplants. The costs, therefore, would be relatively small, ranging from no more than $10 million in 1986 to no more than $50 million-and probably half that-by 1990, depending on restrictions.

The PHS-HCFA plan would limit the number of medical centers eligible to perform Medicare transplants. Only about 10 that have had substantial transplant experience would qualify the first year. That would rise to 20 the next.

Bridge-jumpers leap

FAYETTEVILLE, W.Va. (AP) — Hundreds of sportsmen took a leap Saturday, the one day of the year when parachutists can legally experience what they call "controlled terror."

Police estimated more than 100,000 people crowded onto the 3,030-foot-long New River Gorge Bridge to watch more than 400 death-defying jumpers leap from the span during the annual Bridge Day celebration.

Most of the "base" parachutists screamed as they jumped one-by-one, but there was no other noise until three seconds later when the "whap" of their rectangular chutes was heard.

Several injuries were reported Saturday when an 15 mph wind whipped across the 876-foot-tall bridge and blew most jumpers into the boulder-strewn New River instead of a targeted sand bar.

UAW may strike Chrysler

HIGHLAND PARK, Mich. (AP) — The United Auto Workers will strike Chrysler Corp. .. miunight Tuesday if national labor negotiations continue at the current slow pace, UAW President Owen Bieber declared Saturday.

Bieber, in sharp contrast to his optimism earlier in the week, said Chrysler has been "dragging its feet" on the union's demand that it match the labor contract pattern established a year ago at General Motors Corp. and Ford Motor Co.

Bieber revealed that he and Chrysler Chairman Lee Iacocca had met privately Friday but said the pace of the talks did not pick up and the union planned no further statements. Chrysler said it would have nothing more to say Saturday.

Hart scoffs at 'fine print'

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Gary Hart today dismissed a White House-backed proposal that promises to balance the federal budget by fiscal 1991 as "politics as usual" and urged Congress to "read the fine print" before supporting the plan.

Hart charged the proposal, which was approved by the Republican-controlled Senate and embraced by the Democratic-run House this week, does not equally distribute the burden of reducing budget deficits currently running at about $200 billion a year.

"Ultimately this plan fails because it's just politics as usual. It's a typical Washington response. It's based on changing the budget process — instead of the budget policies," Hart said, in the Democratic response to President Reagan's weekly radio address.

'Pyschological' dad pays

TRENTON, N.J. (AP) — The New Jersey Supreme Court has upheld rulings that a man who treated a girl like a daughter during his marriage must pay child support in spite of a post-divorce blood test showing he is not her biological father.

The state's highest court split 3-3 on the issue Friday, leaving intact two lower court rulings ordering the Milwaukee, Wis., man to continue paying $50 a month in support.

A state appeals court ruled 2-1 in July 1984 that the plaintiff, identified only as Henry B., should continue to pay support because he was her "psychological" father and the only father she ever knew.

Meter maid arrested

BOSTON (AP) — A Boston patrolman arrested and handcuffed a meter maid when she allegedly refused his request not to ticket an illegally parked car, and bystanders cheered, police said.

A crowd of 20 people gathered Friday in Boston's Back Bay as the officers handcuffed Bernadette Gilardi, who was later charged with being a disorderly person.

The ticketed car was parked at a fire hydrant, but the two patrolmen had told the driver to pull over while they cleared up a traffic jam. The officers said they asked Ms. Gilardi not to ticket the car.

"It was incredible," said Officer William Walsh. "People were cheering and yelling, 'Lock her up. Lock her up.'

"You would have thought we had arrested a Palestinian terrorist."

The Boston Globe reported that one cheering bystander said seeing a meter maid was arrested was a special treat.

"I always thought being there to see the Red Sox clinch the pennant in 1967 was the greatest thing I'd ever seen," said Richie Coglin. "No way.

Is there a 'cultural defense'?

NEW YORK (AP) — Vietnamese parents are accused of child abuse after using a folk remedy to treat their son's fever. A Hmong refugee following traditional courtship rites is charged with kidnap and rape.

Culture shock in the courtroom is increasing across America, reflecting the swelling population of immigrants and refugees. Most of the cases involve Asians.

The most dramatic one to date is scheduled for trial Nov. 4 in Santa Monica, Calif., where Japanese immigrant Fumiko Kimura tried to commit parent-child suicide last January by walking into the sea with her two young children. The children drowned, but she survived.

In Japan, parent-child suicide happens almost daily. They call it oyako shinju, and a parent who survives is rarely prosecuted.

Mrs. Kimura is charged with first-degree murder, which carries a possible death penalty if she is convicted. Prosecutors have been inundated with phone calls and letters, mainly from the Japanese-American community, asking that Mrs. Kimura's cultural background be taken into consideration.

Prosecuting attorney Lauren Weis argues that "there is no such thing as a cultural defense" in the United States with its melting pot society.

Yet some courts have been sympathetic to the cultural defense.

In Fresno, Calif., an agricultural region with a large population of Asian refugees and immigrants, a Hmong mountain tribesman recently tried for kidnap and rape drew 90 days in jail for misdemeanor false imprisonment and his family was fined $1,000.

The defense argued that the tribesman was following accepted Hmong tradition when he chose a Hmong woman for his bride and spirited her away to Los Angeles. The family purportedly filed charges merely because they didn't approve of the tribesman and did not get the right price for their daughter. The judge ordered the man's family to pay $1,000 to the family of the bride.

The Hmong, who live mainly in California and Minnesota, have also run into trouble for trapping and eating squirrels in public parks and using opium for medicinal purposes.

Bringing a case to trial is itself sometimes difficult when cultural factors are involved.

Lucille Wheaton, a public defender in Fresno, recalls a case where two Laotian friends quarreled and one pulled a knife, slightly cutting the other. He was charged with assault with a deadly weapon.

"By the time the charges were filed, the families had made up and wanted us to just forget the whole thing," Ms. Wheaton said. "They said they had forgiven him and he was planning a traditional forgiveness feast.

"Sometimes when our criminal justice system intrudes, it may upset the balance of resolution that these people have developed among themselves," she said. The man went free, but "the whole thing was a learning process for him," Ms. Wheaton said.

Investigators say the cultural defense can also be abused.

In Los Angeles, a Thai man allegedly sprayed a group of four Laotians with gunfire after one of them sat with the soles of his feet bared at the defendant while the Thai sang in a nightclub. The gesture is considered highly insulting by some Asians. One of the Laotians was killed and another injured.

The Thai, Ponsak Trakulrat, 35, pleaded innocent to one count of murder and two counts of attempted murder. He remains in custody pending trial Nov. 21.

Lt. Glenn Ackerman, head of the task force, likened it to a Bronx cheer.

"As far as we're concerned, in serious crimes cultural ignorance is no defense," Ackerman said, adding that police "have a certain amount of discretion" when it comes to making arrests in lesser crimes.

For example, he said, a Vietnamese folk remedy for bringing down a fever is to run a hot coin over the surface of the patient's body. Ackerman has seen cases where Vietnamese children treated this way suffered visible burn marks that prompted doctors to report the family for child abuse.

MIDLAND FAMILY OF THE YEAR

Mother accused of murdering children in ritual suicide attempt

EDITOR'S NOTE: Japanese immigrant Fumiko Kimura goes on trial this month for killing her two children by drowning them in the sea. She claims it was a failed attempt at oyako shinju — parent-child suicide, which occurs almost daily in Japan. Public support for Mrs. Kimura has been overwhelming, with thousands of people urging the prosecutor to take her culture into account.

By TAMARA JONES
Associated Press

SANTA MONICA, Calif. — The beach was nearly deserted that afternoon. A man stooped to gather seashells along the windy shore, deaf to the laughter of a teen-age couple mocking the shrieking gulls.

Just north of the pier, a woman dressed in pink walked toward the chill water with two young children.

Fumiko Kimura clutched 6-month-old Yuri to her chest while 4-year-old Kazutaka scampered ahead of his mother, happily scooping up fistfuls of sand and watching it pour through his small fingers.

Mrs. Kimura set her purse and the baby's diaper bag down on the hard, wet sand and took Kazutaka by the hand.

No one saw them enter the surf.

The teen-agers spotted the bodies floating about 30 yards from shore when a lone seagull suddenly swooped out over the waves. The mother survived, the children did not.

Her voice raspy from mouthfuls of salt water, Mrs. Kimura told police from her hospital bed that she had attempted parent-child suicide.

In her native Japan, it happens almost daily. They call it "oyako shinju."

In California, they call it first-degree murder.

The case has generated international publicity and considerable public support for Mrs. Kimura, 32, who faces a possible death penalty if convicted in a trial scheduled to begin Nov. 4. Thousands of strangers from the United States, Japan and Europe have signed petitions or called the Santa Monica District Attorney's office.

"They want her to be treated as she would be in Japan — a lenient sentence and psychiatric help," said Lauren Weis, the deputy district attorney prosecuting the case.

Mrs. Kimura's attorney, Gerald Klausner, has hinted that in hearings set for Oct. 18 and 21, he will mount an insanity defense, portraying her as a doting mother who apparently suffered a psychotic episode after learning her husband had been unfaithful.

Fumiko Kimura, 32, charged with the ritualistic slaying of her two children in an ancient Japanese custom called 'oyako shinju,' is escorted into a Santa Monica, Calif., courthouse in this 1984 photo. Kimura's defense portrays her as a doting mother who suffered a traumatic experience after discovering her husband's unfaithfulness.

AP Laserphoto

Awaiting trial, Mrs. Kimura sits alone in the prison cell where she has been held on $100,000 bail since February. She fills legal pads with bleak, penciled prose. She writes of womanhood and weakness. Sometimes she writes about music.

But mostly, Fumiko Kimura writes about the sea.

"The ocean cleanses my heart and my body.

"The ocean breeze blows the past away."

Her life was never as simple as her poetry. Failure had shadowed her since childhood. On the dismal afternoon of Jan. 29, Fumiko Kimura failed at her own suicide.

"Living is hard and dying is hard," she told The Los Angeles Times in a brief interview within days of her arrest. Her attorney no longer permits her to speak with reporters.

Fumiko was one of six children from a broken home. She earned decent grades in high school but flunked entrance exams to Japan's National Music University.

Fumiko journeyed to California and enrolled in a community college but did not graduate. After 14 years in the United States, she still has not mastered English, according to Klausner.

She sold hot dogs in Dodger Stadium and worked as a waitress. She married a Japanese American, but after eight years, that too ended in failure.

Then Fumiko met Itsuroku Kimura at the restaurant where they both worked. They married six years ago, and Fumiko fulfilled her dream of motherhood.

Friends and relatives described the Kimuras as loving, over-protective parents who clung to Japanese traditions such as sleeping on mats and leaving their shoes at the door. Mrs. Kimura's life was said to revolve around her children.

The trouble began when the phone rang nine days before she walked into the sea.

A Japanese waitress on the other end announced she had been Itsuroku's lover for more than three years. She asked to talk with Fumiko the following day. Fumiko agreed.

Facing the prospect of a second divorce, Fumiko was again filled with a sense of failure.

"Fumiko never had a lot of confidence in herself as a good mother or wife," said Gail Klausner, the wife and assistant of Mrs. Kimura's attorney.

Later, the mistress told police she thought the best way to end the affair was "honestly" — by confronting Itsuroku's wife.

After sitting down with Fumiko and Itsuroku in their home, the mistress announced that she was returning Itsuroku's gifts. Then, on Jan. 27, she sent a boy to her door with a note. In it, she apologized and offered "to sacrifice her own life if the problem could be settled," according to the police report.

Shortly after 2 p.m. on Jan. 29, Fumiko Kimura, clutching her drowned children, lay face down in the cold water, waiting for death.

On Jan. 31, Cooper and a Japanese-speaking officer visited Mrs. Kimura in her hospital room and asked if she knew that killing her children was against the law. Mrs. Kimura said no.

U.S., Soviet mountaineers conquer summit together

WASHINGTON (AP) — William Garner and Randy Starrett, back from their own summit with the Soviets, may have a useful lesson for Ronald Reagan and Mikhail Gorbachev, one they learned on the wind swept peak of a 24,406-foot mountain in Soviet Central Asia last summer.

It is the same message the two young Washington area residents left atop Pik Pobedy — "Victory Peak"— the Soviet Union's second highest mountain, which they conquered Aug. 22 along with an American movie cameraman, David Breashears, and a dozen of the Soviet Union's most skillful alpine climbers.

On a piece of paper, sealed in plastic and left inside a World War II Soviet artillery shell casing hauled to the summit, the two Americans wrote in English and Russian:

"We, the American team on the first joint Soviet-American expedition up Pik Pobedy, have climbed this mountain to illustrate for the people of our two countries how much greater value there is in our learning to take risks together, than in our continuing to put the world at risk through mutual confrontation."

Perhaps mindful of the scheduled Nov. 19-20 summit meeting between President Reagan and Soviet leader Gorbachev in Geneva, Switzerland, the Soviet climbing leader put it another way during a celebratory exchange of vodka and champagne toasts on their return from the peak.

As Starrett recalls, one of his Soviet comrades said that "if the world's leaders were alpinists and could come together in the mountains, the world's problems would vanish."

The harrowing, nine-day climb made Soviet heroes of Garner, 36, an independent consultant and Soviet affairs analyst here, and Starrett, 43, a trial lawyer from suburban Fairfax County, Va.

The two have been climbing mountains together for 15 years, in North and South America and in Europe, but they are the first foreigners to ascend Pik Pobedy, which lies on the Soviet border with China in the Tien Shan mountain range.

It is the world's northernmost peak above 7,000 meters or 23,100 feet, well into the so-called "death zone" where climbers must use oxygen or risk a speedy death.

Poles detained for calling election boycott

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — Poland's first parliamentary election since the 1980 workers' revolt takes place today, ending a campaign in which communist authorities mounted an unprecedented media effort to defeat an opponent not on the ballot.

That opponent is a boycott call by the outlawed Solidarity union, and Solidarity leaders said Saturday their supporters were being detained or harassed by the government.

The outcome of the election is not in doubt since most seats are guaranteed for the Communist Party and its allies. But the government has waged a Western-style campaign to boost voter turnout in the face of the boycott.

Authorities view the election as a critical test of their claim that social stability has returned following the 1980-81 labor upheaval and the ensuing military crackdown that crushed Solidarity, which was the first free trade union federation in the Soviet bloc.

Communist Party and government officials say a strong turnout — 75 to 80 percent — would show that the opposition's influence is weakening and perhaps convince the West to restore normal political and economic links with Poland.

Police picked three senior Solidarity figures in Warsaw for questioning Saturday, and Solidarity founder Lech Walesa said other opposition activists also were rounded up in an effort to block them from monitoring the voter turnout.

Jacek Kuron, Zbigniew Romaszewski and Janusz Onyszkiewicz were the Warsaw leaders summoned by police for questioning, family members reported. Onyszkiewicz and Romaszewski were released after being held for several hours, but there was no work on Kuron.

"In the whole country there have been many detentions," said Walesa, interviewed by telephone at his apartment in Gdansk. "The point is to disorganize counting and gathering information. But we have foreseen this and all is well set up so there is no possibility to paralyze it."

He did not provide any specific figures, but the Rev. Henryk Jankowski, one of his close advisers, said 17 Solidarity activists had been detained in Gdansk in recent days.

Shantytown mudslide 'like earth divided'

PONCE, Puerto Rico (AP) — Some people thought it was an earthquake. Others at first thought a bomb had gone off.

Miguel Torres Morales didn't have time to think of anything.

"I looked up from my bed and saw a dark sky. My roof had been torn away."

He raced out with his wife and seven children as mud and water poured in. Wood and debris flew around them and the ground gave way beneath their feet.

"It was like the earth had divided into two."

Two of the children, Nilsa, 12, and Norma, 14, were lost in the dark chaos, which started about 3 a.m. on Oct. 7.

Within minutes, mud, boulders, giant chunks of limestone and floodwaters ripped apart, then buried, the impoverished, closely knit shantytown called Mameyes.

"There is no name, no words for this. It is too horrible," said Vicente Reyes Luciano, 35, a carpenter who lost seven relatives in the mudslide that destroyed 400 of the 500 homes built of wood, tin, zinc and concrete in Mameyes.

He pointed to two mounds of muddy debris where he said the homes of his two brothers were. The brothers' bodies and those of their children still had not been recovered by the weekend.

"They are totally buried beneath the mud," he said. "There are many in there. God, too many."

Porfirio Torres Rodriguez said a taxi was all that was left at the home of his brother, Manuel Torres Rodriguez, who was buried with his wife, three daughters, son-in-law and two grandchildren — eight people in all. Their bodies were still being sought.

"We don't know what we did to have this. We are poor people, but good people lived here," Torres Rodriguez said.

Rescue teams pulled 35 bodies from the devastated half-square-mile community by Friday, with estimates of the missing ranging from 75 to 500. The floods and mudslides caused by the 10 to 15 inches of rain from tropical storm Isabel killed at least 75 throughout this U.S. Commonwealth island.

The shantytown, on the edge of a working class neighborhood dating to the 17th century, began growing two decades ago.

Like other shantytowns, now home to an estimated 200,000 Puerto Ricans in the island's urban areas, Mameyes began growing as the local economy declined. Unemployment jumped from 10 percent to 21 percent over the past dozen years, and the rate is much higher in the southern region.

Mameyes sprang up on one of several steep, green ridges at the base of a 1,500-foot mountain called "The Vigil" because from its top the first Spanish settlers watched for the approach of unfriendly ships to the coast city of Ponce.

Lacking funds to expand the low-cost public housing, the Commonwealth government in recent years has installed electric and water services to communities such as Mameyes, which is on Ponce municipal property.

Torres Morales, an unskilled laborer, said he moved here 12 years ago from a residential neighborhood because he could no longer afford to pay rent. He and his wife Carmen Lidia Rosario had 10 children, aged 5 to 20.

Three daughters married in recent years and moved to middle-class neighborhoods. He supported the rest of his family largely on the $300 monthly checks he gets from the Commonwealth government.

"There is no work. We have no other choice," Torres Morales replied when asked why people moved to Mameyes.

Reyes Luciano built his house in Mameyes 10 years ago on concrete blocks. His house survived. Less sturdy homes were crumpled by the landslide.

Angelo Ayala, 23, heard a rumble and thought the moving ground was an earthquake. Thoughts of Mexico City, where thousands died in huge earthquakes last month, flashed through his mind.

The thought of a mudslide didn't occur to him.

"There's never been a slide here despite Puerto Rico's frequent storms," he said.

"There had never been any apparent possibility of this," Torres Morales said. "We weren't thinking about leaving because of the rain. Nothing like this happened before."

After the disaster, Gov. Rafael Hernandez Colon said that the U.S. Commonwealth's Housing Department, with help from federal geological experts, would try to identify other shantytowns in areas in danger of landslides. He and legislative leaders agreed that relocating families from such areas must become a priority.

"If our priorities had been different, perhaps this would not have happened," Ronny Jabaro, speaker of the House, said at Wednesday's mass funeral service.

Hernandez Colon, who was born in Ponce, flew over the disaster areas Monday afternoon in a helicopter. He saw tow trucks pulling two cars from the Coamo River, where a bridge had been washed out.

Later in the day, he learned that three close friends of his, Eric Rodriguez Jovet, Enrique Costas Ortiz and Graciela Costas, drowned inside one car. Four police officers died in the other.

Poachers seeking 'medicinal' horn stalk black rhinoceros

Jeram, a Sumatran rhinoceros, one of 130 of the species that exists in the wild, was captured near Kuala Lumpur, Malaysia, in April, is now a resident of the Malacca zoo.

AP Laserphoto

HARARE, Zimbabwe (AP) — Conservationists here have launched an international emergency appeal for money and equipment to save Africa's last viable population of black rhinoceros.

"While the world has been looking at whales and pandas, the rhino has been careering towards extinction in one of the greatest conservation disasters of all time," wildlife expert Dick Pitman said at the inauguration of the Rhino Survival Campaign in September.

Poachers have killed thousands of black rhino, reducing their population in Africa from about 100,000 in 1960 to fewer than 8,000 last year, said Pitman, chairman of the Zambezi Society. The conservation club is one of several organizations that have merged under the umbrella of the Zimbabwe National Conservation Trust to launch the rhino campaign.

According to Pitman, poachers are prepared to kill game rangers and others who stand in their way because of "the insatiable demand for rhinos' horn in Southeast Asia, the Far East and North Yemen," where it can fetch up to $27,500 a kilogram (2.2 pounds).

In North Yemen, which accounted for almost half the rhino horn poached in the past decade, the horns are used to make handles for ceremonial daggers. Although the government there has banned horn imports, an illegal trade flourishes.

In Southeast Asia and the Far East, there is an almost mythical belief in the medicinal power of rhino horn. The powdered horn is sold in cures for everything from common colds to high fevers.

"You might as well chew your fingernails," Pitman said, scoffing at the horn's medicinial value.

Zimbabwe's black rhinos number 1,500 to 3,000. The population has actually increased in what is considered their last viable stronghold in the world — a little known wilderness of 3,860 square miles in the middle Zambezi River Valley.

Zimbabwe is recognized as one of the most conservation conscious countries in Africa — so much so that it has to organize annual culls of some animals, such as elephants, to prevent overpopulation.

But peace in the Zambezi River Valley for the rhino has been shattered this year by poachers' gunfire. Rangers have found carcasses of 58 rhinos, with the horns removed.

"Poachers enter and leave the region more or less at will, using dugouts belonging to Zambian fishermen," Pitman explained. Zambia is Zimbabwe's northwestern neighbor.

Because the rhinos have not been legally hunted for several decades because they are protected as an internationally endangered species, they have become accustomed to human contact and are easy to find and kill.

Rangers protecting them have been involved in several shootouts with the poachers this year.

The government passed legislation this year to nearly double penalties for poaching but the law has no effect on those who are paying the poachers.

Controversy stampedes over rhino breeding

KUALA LUMPUR, Malaysia (AP) — A controversy is swirling in Malaysia around a plan to export Sumatran rhinoceros to U.S. zoos for breeding in captivity as one means of preserving the species.

The Sabah State Forestry Department said in July it was negotiating with the American Association of Zoological Parks and Aquariums to send males and females to the Los Angeles and San Diego zoos in California, the Bronx Zoo in New York City and the Cincinnati Zoo in Ohio for breeding.

But the Sahabat Alam Malaysia, the Malaysian branch of the Friends of the Earth, opposed the idea in a letter to Sabah's chief minister, Joseph Pairin Kitingan, contending that the rhinos may die en route and that the breeding should be done here, preferably in the wild.

The chief minister then banned the export of the rhinos.

Mohamed Khan Bin Momin Khan, chairman of the Asian rhino specialist group of the International Union for the Conservation of Nature and Natural Resources, disagreed with the ban. He maintained that artificial insemination could be used in captivity if natural mating fails and that attempts could be made to see if other rhino species could be used as surrogate mothers for Sumatran rhinoceros.

Mohamed, who is also director general of the Wildlife Department in Kuala Lumpur, said the plan calls for breeding four pairs in the United States, two pairs in Sabah state on Borneo island, two pairs at the Malacca state zoo 90 miles south of Kuala Lumpur, and two pairs at the Sungei Dusun wildlife reserve near this capital.

"It should be noted that the American zoos are committing themselves to providing technical (including veterinarial and animal husbandry) aid for the project in addition to funding the training of a number of Malaysian zoo personnel in the United States," Mohamed said.

Sabah Forest Department officials estimated the entire breeding project to cost about $1 million, mostly donated by U.S. sources.

Mohamed Khir Johari, president of the Malaysian Zoological Society and president of the Malaysian branch of the World Wildlife Fund, also maintained that Malaysia should allow the breeding of the animals in the United States.

Mohamed, the Wildlife Department director, said only about 30 of the rhinos remain in Sabah and about 100 in peninsular Malaysia. In 1970 they totaled about 1,000. He added that if attempts are not made to save the Sumatran rhinos they would meet the same fate as the one horned Javan rhinoceros which became extinct in 1932.

Thailand's bears threatend by Asian medicine

BANGKOK, Thailand (AP) — Bears, which once roamed Thailand's jungles in large numbers, are being decimated to Asians who believe bear flesh and innards will cure everything from lung problems to hemorrhoids, Thai conservation officials say.

Pisit Na Patalung, secretary-general of the Wildlife Fund Thailand, said Thailand's two major bear species, the Asiatic black bear and the sun bear, will become extinct if greater government protection is not provided.

Pisit said hundreds of bears have been killed illegally in recent years, with many ending up at Bangkok restaurants catering to South Koreans, Japanese, Chinese and other Asians. Sometimes, he added, a live bear would be tied to a post for inspection by customers, then beaten to death and prepared for consumption.

The owner of a Chinese medicine store in Bangkok's Chinatown said many South Koreans, most of them visiting businessmen, purchased bears' gall bladders, believing they would be cured of various ailments, including chronic fatigue and hemorrhoids.

The owner, who spoke only on condition of anonymity because trading in bear and bear products is illegal, said many customers liked to wash the gall bladders down with liquor. Gall bladders sell for 4,000 baht ($150) each, he said.

With the boom in bear business, the owner added, many medicinal stores in Chinatown were even selling "faked" gall bladders.

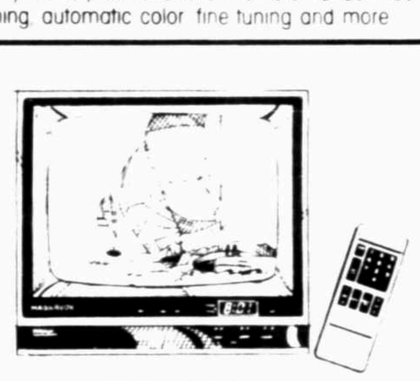

This situation is not unique to bears or Thailand. Beliefs in a number of Asian clutures that animal products cure illnesses or restore youthfulness and sexual vigor have led to massive slaughter of wildlife.

WORLD IN BRIEF

China keeps 3.5 million girls home from school

PEKING (AP) — Traditionally minded parents in China are keeping 3.5 million elementary school-age girls out of school, the State Education Commission said in a newspaper account published Saturday.

The total represents 7 percent of the 50 million girls ages 7 to 11 who should be attending school across the country, the official English-language China Daily reported.

"Lingering sex discrimination largely contributes to the problem," the report said, quoting commission officials. It said the problem was most severe in remote regions such as Inner Mongolia and Guangxi Zhuang Autonomous Region.

Even in cities, girls are prevented from attending school and forced to enter workshops or do heavy work at home, the China Daily said.

China decided this year to gradually implement nine-year compulsory education. Parents who refuse to send their children to school can be fined.

Concorde forced to land

SHANNON, Ireland (AP) — A Concorde supersonic jet carrying 105 people safely made an emergency landing Saturday at Shannon International Airport after experiencing engine trouble about 1,000 miles out over the Atlantic, a British Airways spokesman said.

Spokesman Michael Blunt said the jet was about one hour and 20 minutes into its three-hour, 3,000-mile trip from London to Washington, D.C., when a problem was found in one of its four engines. The plane reversed course and landed in Shannon, he said.

Blunt said he did not know what caused the problem, but that the pilot followed routine procedure and shut down the engine.

The plane was carrying 96 passengers and nine crew, Blunt said. He said another Concorde was sent from London to take the passengers to Washington.

Car bomb kills three

VILLA SAN GIOVANNI, Italy (AP) — A car packed with dynamite exploded in the center of this town in Italy's southern Calabrian region, killing three people and injuring two, police said Saturday.

Police said the Friday night bombing probably was the work of the Mafia crime organization. They said they believed the target was Antonio Imerti, 39, reputed to be a mobster from a nearby town. Imerti was slightly hurt.

Police said dynamite had been placed in a Fiat 500 and detonated by remote control.

Bombs hit Belgian city

CHARLEROI, Belgium (AP) — Bombs today damaged the offices of a metal-working industries federation and the tax collector, police said. Authorities blamed Fighting Communist Cells, a leftist group, for the attack.

No injuries were reported in what police said was the second bombing by the terrorist group in five days.

Police said it appeared the sole target were the offices of Fabrimetal, a federation of metal-working firms, but that the terrorists mistakenly bombed the tax office as well.

Investigators said they found pamphlets marked with the terrorist group's insignia at the scene.

Charleroi, about 30 miles south of Brussels, is the center of Belgium's southern steel industry.

Witnesses said they saw two men in their 20s break windows of the two buildings, drop two attache cases and run.

County forecasts

Midland, Ector, Glasscock, Upton, Reagan, Crane, Gaines, Andrews, Dawson, Borden, Martin and Howard counties: Sunday partly cloudy and warm. Highs mid 80s. Wind south 5 to 15 mph. Sunday night partly cloudy with lows mid 50s. Monday partly cloudy with a 20 percent chance of showers. A little cool. Highs upper 70s.

More rain possible

From Staff and Wire Reports

It may rain more this week but apparently not today.

The weatherman at the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Airport is calling for partly cloudy skies today, a high in the mid-80s and southerly winds at 5 to 15 mph.

For tonight, he is predicting continued partly cloudy skies and a low in the mid-50s.

But showers may fall on Monday. The weatherman is forecasting partly cloudy skies and a 20 percent chance of showers then. The high temperature is to be a bit cooler — in the upper 70s.

The high temperature on Saturday was 81 degrees, and the record high for an Oct. 12 is 98 degrees in 1979. The overnight low was 61 degrees, while the record low for an Oct. 13 is 34 degrees in 1969.

STATE

Shower and thunderstorms continued along the Texas coast Saturday as an upper-level trough passed over highly moist and unstable air.

The heaviest storms were concentrated along the upper coast from western Louisiana through Beaumont to near Galveston, the National Weather Service said. Isolated showers were also detected over Northeast Texas and the south High Plains.

The abundant low-level moisture resulted in partly cloudy to cloudy skies across the eastern two-thirds of the state. Skies were generally clear over West Texas as a low-pressure trough induced drier air into the High Plains and the Trans Pecos region.

Temperatures were mainly in the 80s statewide except for the Panhandle and west of the Pecos where upper 60s prevailed.

NATION

Wet weather was scattered over the Great Lakes, the Gulf Coast, the Southeast and parts of the West on Saturday, while Florida and the Ohio Valley had record-tying highs.

Rain and a few thundershowers lingered over most of Lower Michigan and spread across northern Ohio and Lake Ontario.

A band of rainshowers extended from Lake Michigan to northwestern Arkansas, and drizzle and fog persisted over parts of the upper Mississippi Valley.

Thundershowers developed over the upper Texas coast and southwestern Louisiana, and continued on to southern Florida. Light rain fell along the coast of South Carolina from the remnants of tropical storm Isabel.

Sleep center seeking cause of 'crib death'

By RON GILMORE
Staff Writer

ODESSA — Physicians and medical technicians at Women's and Children's Hospital in Odessa are using sophisticated equipment and a newly-opened sleep laboratory to explore the causes of Sudden Infant Death Syndrome — the number one killer of infants under the age of one year.

"Although it affects only two out of every 1,000 live births, it's not rare considering it's the leading cause of infant death under one year," said Dr. John Bray, head of the pediatrics intensive care unit at Women's and Children's.

Recent data from the National Center for Health Statistics lists Texas as the state with the second-highest number of SIDS cases reported with 630 deaths.

Bray, along with medical technicians trained in the specialty of sleep studies, have recently initiated the first sleep laboratory in the area. Although they also study the sleep patterns of adults with sleeping problems, one major focus is on infants who have had "near-miss" and/or apnea episodes — literally, failing to breath while sleeping.

Current medical studies support theories that such infants are at high risk of dying from SIDS, commonly known as "crib death." SIDS has been described as "the sudden and unexpected death of an infant in whom a thorough autopsy fails to demonstrate an adequate cause of death."

"There's several theories around, but the one we're most interested in is the relationship of respiratory drive and the possibility of SIDS," said Bray. "It's the oldest one and probably the one with the most backing."

Bray defined "respiratory drive" as "the ability of the brain, lungs and diaphragm muscles to work in unison to maintain proper breathing."

Bray cautioned, however, that the theory was "in no way the total answer."

"The other reason that we're interested in this relationship is because it's the only one that seems to give us a tip-off. It's one group that we know is at a much greater risk than the rest of the population."

Indeed, infants who have been found not breathing by their parents or who go long periods without taking a breath seem dramatically in danger of dying from SIDS without medical help.

Studies have revealed several other high-risk categories including premature infants (usually due to teenage pregnancies), mothers who had severe anemia, smoked cigarettes, used methadone HCl or had unusual drops in diastolic blood pressure during pregnancy.

Other risk factors involving the infant include male sex, a mild respiratory tract infection (40 to 75 percent of SIDS infants were reported to have had this during the week preceding death), second or third pregnancy and triplet or twin births.

Still at a higher risk are siblings of a SIDS infant, thought to be five times more likely to succumb following the first death.

Most SIDS deaths occur between the ages of two months and four months, although related deaths up to two years of age have been reported, according to a recent report from the Children's Hospital of Buffalo, N.Y., a leading institution for infant apnea research.

The overriding common link of most SIDS deaths, however, appears to be apnea resulting in a "near miss" episode in which the child simply stops breathing. Although Bray concedes that there has been relatively little research into infant apnea, he believes that by studying the sleep patterns of infants, some clue as to the cause of the episodes might be discovered.

"In the lab, we actually look at the sleep patterns to see if they are related to a possible apnea event," said Bray. "We look at whether the infant's brain puts out a message or nervous impulse to breathe but is prevented by some sort of obstruction or whether the brain never puts out the message to breath."

The report from the Children's Hospital of Buffalo supports Bray's methods.

"The most effective way to determine if an infant has respiration abnormalities while sleeping is to perform a sleep study," said Dr. Ian Nathanson, director of the Apnea Evaluation Unit at Children's.

"There are two types of sleep studies that can be used in infants: the polysomnogram (PSG) and the pneumogram (PNG). Each test has certain advantages."

Nathanson suggested the PSG, since it can detect more abnormalities and requires a trained specialist to administer the test. The PNG can be done at home by a parent and may not pick up on certain kinds of respiratory problems, he indicated.

Women's and Children's, which uses the PSG, recently conducted its first infant sleep study in the new laboratory. The subject was Michael Buehler, the two-month old son of Mr. and Mrs. George Buehler of Odessa.

"We're the only sleep disorder center in the West Texas area," said Annette Berry, a pulmonary-diagnostic supervisor and overseer of the lab. "We've been doing sleep studies in the patients' rooms but just opened the lab a month ago."

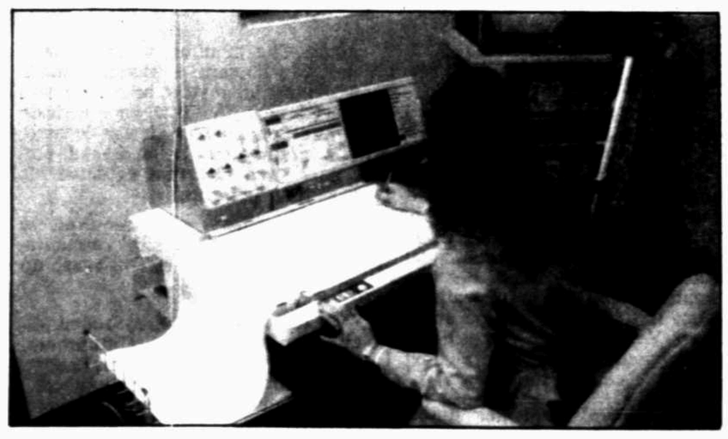

Using multi-syllabled equipment such as an electroencephalogram and a polysomnograph, a video camera to visually record the sleep patterns, several tests including PH probe studies and hypoxic arousal studies, Ms. Berry carefully monitors the infant's sleep process, looking for irregularities that may show up on a computer print-out.

The study monitors many components of the sleep process including eye movement, the four stages of sleep including Rapid Eye Movement (REM) or deep sleep, carbon dioxide (CO_2) and oxygen levels (infants with apnea often do not breath even when levels of CO_2 are dangerously high, as in Michael's case) and movement of the rib cage, abdomen and chin.

The infant is placed on a bed in a small room adjoining the sleep lab and observed via a one-way mirror.

Please see SIDS, Page 2B

The Geislers: A Midland family with lots of heart

Kent Porter/Reporter-Telegram

Ralph and Eulalia Geisler of Midland perform wonders on classic cars and in hospital care. Their son, a Dallas heart surgeon, performed a history-making feat Aug. 30 — the first successful heart transplant in Dallas.

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

The amazing Midland Geislers have heart in phenomenal ways.

And they have a surgeon-son who puts heart and life into his work.

Ralph Geisler, the patriarch, has a talent for things mechanical. He builds cars — not just mere restoration — from the chassis of classic motorcars such as the Rolls-Royce and the Mercedes Benz. At 84, he is retired as building manager of Midland's premier "skyscraper" — the 12-story Petroleum Building, which was built by visionary T.S. Hogan in the 1920s. It was the edifice that gave impetus to Midland's growth into the Tall City and energy capital of West Texas.

His wife, Eulalia, 74, is a Nightingale of sorts, a Samaritan, who for the past 35 years has worked for Midland Memorial Hospital's auxiliary corps. She comforts the afflicted and their families.

And their son, Dr. Gerald "Gerry" Geisler, a native Midlander, is a Dallas heart surgeon who recently performed the first successful heart transplant in Dallas at St. Paul Medical Center.

"He was born with a gift," said his father.

The recipient of that transplant is a 44-year-old electrical engineer, John McMahon of Euless. He suffered a massive heart attack on Aug. 9, 1985, and was taken to St. Paul Medical Center, where he was placed on a life-support system for 20 days.

In the meantime, Eric Brian Epps, an 18-year-old engineering student at The University of Texas in San Antonio, was severely injured in a traffic mishap in San Antonio and was taken to Brooke Army Medical Center where he was kept on life-support systems. His chances of recovery were deemed "hopeless" by Brooke physicians, who asked his parents, Herb and Margaret Epps, if they had considered organ donations.

They hadn't.

"There are four people alive and benefiting" from the Epps family's "really wonderful" decision to allow transplantation of their son's organs.
— Dr. Gerald Geisler

But Epps, a 49-year-old bank officer, "thought maybe something good will come out of this by allowing someone else to live for awhile."

"The thought that perhaps parts of my son would live on has helped me see through this tragedy," Epps said. "I cried for two solid days."

Mrs. Epps initially was hesitant to let go of her son's heart and other organs but relented after she was assured the organs would be removed "with dignity."

"We both knew that Eric would be 100 percent in favor of this," the parents said. "He was very sensitive to the needs of his fellow man."

His heart was sent to St. Paul Medical Center, where a transplant Task Force for two years had been preparing for a heart-transplant operation.

Midland woman securing rescue equipment for Mexico City

By MARK LEWIS
Staff Writer

Lillian Wallis

For several weeks after two massive earthquakes struck Mexico City, dramatic news stories about desperate attempts to rescue people trapped in the rubble helped encourage American support for relief efforts.

When it became obvious that no one could have survived that long without food or water, demolition teams moved in and the story faded from the front pages and newscasts.

But help is still needed, because there are still people alive under some of the damaged buildings, according to Midlander Lillian Wallis, who was born in Texas but educated in Mexico City.

"The San Antonio Consul-General called me last night" with news of 10 people trapped in one building who have been kept alive for three weeks with water from a broken pipe, she said Friday. "Now they're being feed through crevices."

Rescuers have concentrated on the major collapsed buildings and paid little attention to the many buildings severely damaged but not destroyed by the quakes, she said — "They hadn't even looked in that building" where the 10 people were recently found.

But French and other foreign rescue teams have already pulled out, leaving Mexican rescue teams without the kind of expertise and sophisticated equipment they need to find and rescue these people.

"They have nothing," said Ms. Wallis, who is leaving for Paris Monday to pick up listening devices which can locate survivors, and hydraulic equipment which can help extract them from the ruined buildings.

"We've got $30,000 worth of equipment ready to take to Mexico," she said. Bill Meister of Odessa donated $20,000, and $10,000 was contributed by Jack Miller of Victor Equipment in Denton.

Since the first quake struck Mexico Sept. 19, Ms. Wallis has made a full-time career of organizing relief efforts. She is the chairman of the Midland-Odessa Earthquake Relief Fund, whose supporters include Mayor G. Thane Akins, Sally Tharp, Odessa businessman Herb Blankenship and the Hispanic Chamber of Commerce.

"And we've gotten a lot of help from Channel 2 (KMID-TV) and radio station KWEL," adds Ms. Wallis, who has made three trips to Mexico City escorting donated supplies.

The Relief Fund has received contributions worth "in excess of $80,000," she said, "And after three weeks of running around, I have seen that everything the Permian Basin has done has gotten directly to the people. Believe me, they know where the Permian Basin is.

"We're still needing money (which can be donated to the Relief Fund account at RepublicBank First National Midland). This is a non-profit organization — I'm not getting paid for my time," she added.

Other Midland relief contributions have been made through the Red Cross (about $10,000) and local churches.

While Mexican authorities are requesting donations of cash rather than food, clothing or equipment, Ms. Wallis said her private sources have asked for those items.

"They told me, 'We don't want to go to the United States government, (for the supplies). The United States government would come in there to tell them how to use it — and they are a very proud people. There would be resentment."

In Paris, Ms. Wallis will be trained on the rescue equipment, then will train local volunteers when she brings it back to the Permian Basin (American Airlines is donating the airfare).

"The equipment is relatively simple to operate," said the Midland businesswoman, who expects to be using it in Mexico City by Thursday.

"I think it will still be useful," she said. "So many other buildings were totally neglected. There's more rescue work to be done."

From Brynner's death to Reagan's retirement

Rambling thoughts from a tangled brain in desperate need of a Tylenol:

— A news item reporting Yul Brynner's death noted that the veteran actor used to smoke five packs of cigarettes a day. That put my mathematical abilities to work. If he was awake 18 hours of each 24, he would have smoked over five cigarettes per hour, or almost one every ten minutes. If you take into consideration he spent a great deal of his time on stage, where he wasn't smoking, he had to consume them even faster when he was smoking. Either that, or he never slept. That bit of information, by the way, is free of charge.

— So is this. Female disc jockeys, especially those on country-western stations, always seem to have sexy-sounding voices.

— A quote from an obscure jazz singer: "I like ugly women. Pretty women can do anything. Ugly women have to do everything."

— I miss Howard Cosell. While his dour pomposities sometimes grated on my nerves, his presence in the booth at least made Monday Night Football seem more like a happening than just another game. That element is missing now. It has become boring. There is no one to hate.

— A person should not blow his nose in public.

— To avoid being late so often I recently set my clock ahead 10 minutes. It was a sincere, yet foolish, attempt to correct a bad habit. When the clock reads 6:45, I know it is really 6:35 and my schedule runs accordingly. I take the extra 10 minutes of sleep. That clock-changing trick must only work with idiots.

— Being one who loves rumors, here's the latest regarding the 1988 presidential race as told by a Washington-based political columnist. I can't remember his name, but I swear I read his report somewhere. His scenario was as follows: President Reagan will resign the presidency sometime in 1987 and turn over the reins to George Bush, thus giving the vice-president a chance to enter the race as an incumbent. The writer based his speculation on two factors: 1) Reagan's health is probably worse off than his advisors are letting on, and 2) Nancy Reagan spent much of the first family's recent California vacation looking for a new home. Why, the writer asked, would she be house-hunting if they weren't going to move in until 1988? With those kinds of "facts" who can question the validity of the story? And, remember, you heard it here first.

— Here's a quote you women might want to store away for sometime in the future when you are particularly disgusted with that special man in your life. "He leased a high-priced body for his low-rent mind."

— An Austin columnist recently conducted a contest in which he honored the city's ugliest pick-up truck. I think I'll do the same thing. Except, being in Midland, we'll have to change the rules slightly. My contest will seek to locate the city's most ostentatious Mercedes Benz.

— It was like old times. A woman approached a shaggy-haired gentleman the other evening and said, "Get a haircut, hippie." It was so refreshing. I hadn't heard that word in years. Still, it seemed sort of silly, especially since the man was wearing a coat and tie and sipping Scotch at the time.

— If I could secure a one-on-one interview with God and only ask three questions, they would be: 1) Do you ever answer those quick-fix prayers people offer up when they find themselves with an immediate problem, such as passing a geometry test they never got around to studying for? 2) Do you keep up with American politics? If so, do you find yourself pulling for one candidate over another? 3) Any tips on how I might improve my putting stroke?

HEART

St. Paul opened the first Coronary Care Unit in Dallas in 1965. Its medical staff performed the first open-heart surgery in a private hospital in Dallas in 1957 and performed the first successful coronary-bypass operation in 1968.

The surgical team in the McMahon operation was headed by Dr. Geisler, chief of thoracic and cardiovascular surgery at St. Paul. The attending cardiologist was another former Midlander, Dr. John C. Grammer, director of St. Paul's Coronary Care Unit. Geisler was assisted by Dr. John E. Codd, chief of heart surgery at DePaul Health Center in St. Louis. Dr. William L. Kraus is medical director of cardiology and heads St. Paul's Health Institute. "He's sharp," said the senior Geisler. "He's my cardiologist, and I'm tooting his horn."

"I think the (Epps) parents were very gracious to permit this transfer," said Ralph Geisler. "It was a lucky thing" for McMahon.

McMahon, who is doing "great," according to a hospital spokesman, may be leaving the hospital and going home this week and soon to work as an engineer at K-C Aviation in Dallas.

"This man was almost dead when we operated on him (on Aug. 30)," said Dr. Geisler, 49. "He's made a tremendous recovery."

Geisler, a 1953 graduate of Midland High School, studied at Notre Dame University and earned his doctor of medicine degree from St. Louis University Medical School in 1961, and served in the U.S. Marine Corps in Vietnam before he joined the St. Paul medical staff in 1970.

"The (heart) operation is pretty exciting," he said.

The surgeon said McMahon will be on medication for the rest of his life to prevent his body's immune system from rejecting the heart.

McMahon is "quite a character," the surgeon said. "He's an intelligent man and has a very strong personality. He really wanted to live."

Geisler described parents of the Epps teen-ager as "really wonderful." He said they were "happy" that someone else was able to survive in the wake of their son's death.

The Epps son's two kidneys were transplanted in San Antonio, and his liver was transplanted in Dallas.

"There are four people alive and benefiting," Dr. Geisler said, because the Epps parents shared their son's vital organs with others.

Mrs. Geisler characterized her son as "a gentle, loving man. He cares about his patients."

And the physician described his parents as "terrific." His father said his son is a "ringer for his mother."

Dr. Geisler's younger brother, Gene, who was a "car nut" like their father, was an engineering student at Notre Dame when he, at 22, was killed in an automobile accident in 1960. He was returning from the Continental Divide Race in Colorado. He was a race-car mechanic.

"That's about the only sad thing that's ever happened to us," the senior Geisler said.

"We didn't know about transplants in those days," said Mrs. Geisler.

South Texas DA criticized on jail policies

BEAUMONT, Texas (AP) — A district attorney's interpretation of the state's Speedy Trial Act is keeping people in jail for weeks without formal charges or indictments, the Beaumont Enterprise reported in its Sunday editions.

And those policies of Orange County District Attorney Steve Howard are being criticized by the American Civil Liberties Union as unconstitutional, the Enterprise said in its copyright story.

"I think he (Howard) doesn't understand the law or he's selectively following it," said Jim Herrington, an Austin lawer with the Texas branch of the ACLU.

Texas law states a charge or indictment must be filed within a reasonable amount of time, but Howard said the term "reasonable" is ambiguous.

Parents rest uneasily when SIDS-risk baby sleeps

By RON GILMORE
Staff Writer

A sleeping baby is a blessing for most parents.

But for parents of children at risk of Sudden Infant Death Syndrome, it can be a hand-wringing experience.

"It's not unusual for Michael to stop breathing 20 to 30 times a day," said Deborah Beuhler of her three-month-old son. "It's so frustrating because no one can give you any answers. Your child can look so healthy one moment and be dead the next. I guess the cure is time."

For Deborah and her husband George, a petroleum engineer with Anadarko Production Company, the third time is definately not a charm. All three of their sons have had apnea episodes — failure to breathe — making them prime candidates for SIDS.

"It started with Jarod," said Ms. Beuhler of her three-year-old son. "He was only four hours old when the nurses at Women's and Children's Hospital in Odessa turned around and saw that he was blue. They didn't have apnea monitors then and so they shook him and put him in an incubator for 12 hours." Fortunately, Jarod had no more reoccurances with apnea and the Buehlers thought their problems were over.

Until they had Benjamin.

"He was also only four hours old when the same thing happened," she said. Benjamin, now two years old, continued to have problems breathing.

Ms. Buehler, who had never heard of SIDS, was referred to Dr. John Bray, a pediatrician who specialized in intensive care. Bray, who was new to the Permian Basin, was knowledgeable about SIDS and placed Benjamin on an apnea monitor, which the Buehlers were able to use at home. The monitor, a small metal box which emits a piercing alarm when the infant stops breathing, was placed near the Buehler's bedside where Benjamin's crib was located. The infant would lie on a small potholder sized mat that detected his breathing patterns.

The Buehlers were required to learn cardio-pulmonary rescucitation, a procedure they still brush up on periodically.

By the time the family added Michael to their growing numbers, they were completely comfortable with the devices but frightened of SIDS. They chose to have no more children.

"To witness your child go through these episodes is frightening," she said. "Of course, by the time we had Michael, I was an old pro, but my heart still races when the alarm goes off."

The parents sought help and comfort by attending a newly-formed support group for parents of near-miss and SIDS children at Women's and Children's Hospital.

"I was a parent who desperately needed emotional support," she said.

Benjamin's episodes with apnea ended when he was 11 months old, but Ms. Buehler still found it difficult to sleep at night.

"That monitor with its blinking red lights was my security," she said. "And I had to 'wean' myself from not having him right next to me when we put him in the next room."

The monitor, however, was back in the bedroom when Michael was born.

Like so many sequential siblings of near-miss infants, the chances of dying from SIDS increased dramatically with their last child.

"Michael was on a monitor from the very start but he didn't have an episode until he had been home for two weeks," said Ms. Buehler. "He was two months pre-mature and had under-developed lungs, pneumonia and was just very severe."

"He would go on 'rolls' — an hour or two of apnea episodes," she said.

Michael's particularly troublesome apnea, led to a study of his sleep patterns in Women's and Children's new sleep center.

"He was the first infant to be studied there," she said.

Michael appears to be "the first" in other areas as well. Because of his peculiar shallow breathing, the mat-type monitor used on Benjamin was not sensitive enough, sending heart-stopping alarms to the Beuhlers in the middle of the night, when there was nothing wrong.

A new system of placing electrodes directly on Michael appears to be working better, although he must wear the electrodes constantly giving him the appearance of a bionic baby, until the episodes end.

Still another first is the "Neo-Wave" blanket on which Michael will soon be sleeping.

"The Neo-Wave works by shooting air currents and making the blanket vibrate," said Terry Sims, of Women's and Children's. "It should be enough to stimulate Michael into breathing, although it should be used in conjunction with the monitor and not depended on alone."

Sims added that the blanket is being used at the hospital but has not been used locally in private homes until now.

Ms. Buehler is adamant about the use of the monitors, not only for children with apnea, but for every newborn.

"SIDS is so tragic," she said. "I've heard mothers say, 'I just burped him, fed him and put him down and then he was dead.'"

"The kids just look so healthy," she said. "You never know. I think that every kid should go home with a monitor."

SIDS

"We try to make it as close to the home environment as possible," said Ms. Berry of the warmly-decorated sleep room.

Bray admits that while the sleep studies may be effective in determining if there is a respiratory abnormality, it still does not prevent SIDS. Infants suspected of being at a high risk of SIDS usually go home with an apnea monitor which warns the parent when the infant has stopped breathing.

Although the monitors have given parents of apnea-prone infants hope of getting their child through the critical first year of life, Bray warns against depending solely on the devices.

"Of course, the simple solution is to put all these kids on apnea monitors," he said. "But I don't think that's right because what we'll find is that 30 percent of them will have an identifiable reason for their near-miss event. They have a medical problem that is treatable."

Bray added that near-miss events might be caused by pneumonia, a nasal "web" in the back of the nose, cardiac diseases, seizure disorders and others.

"Just to throw everyone on a monitor doesn't make any sense," he said. "You need to delineate why they had the event if you can and if you can not, then you need to find out what is the status of the respiratory center and can you intervene?"

Still, the progress that Women's and Children's is making in the area of SIDS overshadows that of its sister hospitals in the Permian Basin.

Midland Memorial Hospital continues to send most of its high-risk infants to Women's and Children's or to sleep centers in Fort Worth or Lubbock.

"We don't work with a lot of them here," said Dr. Prem Gupta. "Usually if there's a high risk and apnea, we send them to Fort Worth or Odessa because of their pre-maturity. We're not set up for it here."

Gupta indicated that even with the completion of the new ICU unit in the nursery, MMH will probably still "wind up transferring them."

Women's and Children's continues to be a leader in not only the study and treatment of SIDS-related disorders, but the emotional and psychological support of the families of apnea-prone and SIDS infants.

A support group started two years ago, meets once a month and is headed by Women's and Children's nurses.

"Most of the members are parents who had a near-miss or lost a child," said Becky Cameron, an registered nurse in the PICU. "The parents who take their kids home on a monitor need that support."

The group meets at the hospital on the second Tuesday of each month at 7:30 p.m.

LETTER FROM COLLEGE

Circle to be patrolled

By H.A. TUCK

Due to speeding, some accidents, and a number of near-misses, Midland police Monday will begin patrolling Chaparral Circle on the campus.

Almost since its beginning, the college has designated Chaparral Circle and the parking lots as public facilities. This grants city police the authority to enforce traffic and parking regulations on the campus.

We want to remind drivers that the speed limits are 20 miles per hour on the Chaparral Circle and 10 miles per hour in the parking lots.

• • •

While we're talking about traffic on the campus, we'd also like to issue another request to the joggers, walkers, dog-walkers, and bicyclists to wear light-colored or reflective clothing when they're at Midlnd College. This is especially needed early in the morning and late in the evening when visibility isn't too good. We're glad everyone utilizes the campus, but want them to be safe while they are getting their exercise and enjoying the beauty of Midland College.

All the buildings are going to be open from 1-6 p.m. with lots of exhibits, demonstrations, and explanations of all the instructional facilities and equipment.

At 4:30 p.m., the Health Sciences Building officially is being dedicated in a brief ceremony.

Ths is the first time since the campus was officially dedicated in 1975 that an Open House has been held for all the college's facilities.

Everyone at MC hopes you'll be able to attend.

"Now, due to the new long distance rules, you're gonna have to choose your own long distance company...or somebody's gonna do it for you!"

Recently, in the Midland 689, 694, 697 and 699 telephone exchanges, you received a carrier selection form from Southwestern Bell asking you to make a very important decision about choosing your long distance service. The form listed several long distance companies, including ClayDesta Communications, from which you were to choose.

Why choose? Southwestern Bell has been required by law to allow you to choose the long distance carrier you want for 1 + dialing.

Why choose ClayDesta Communications? With ClayDesta, you get quality—at a discount. When easy access arrives you simply dial 1 + area code and number as usual and we automatically handle your call—anywhere, anytime. Plus, our operators enable you to place credit card calls from any phone, touch-tone® or rotary.

What happens if I don't choose? Your choice will be made for you—at random—without regard to quality or price. You could end up with higher prices, unsatisfactory service or poor quality—and have to pay Southwestern Bell to change!

The choice is yours, now!

We want to be your choice for long distance. Fill out and return the form below. To reaffirm your choice, check ClayDesta Communications on your Southwestern Bell carrier selection form and relax. You will have chosen quality—at the right price!

If you're in the Midland 68 exchanges (excluding the 689 exchange), your choice for a long distance carrier has already been made for you! But, if you want higher quality, lower priced ClayDesta Communications long distance, fill out and return the form below and begin saving money on every call—anytime, anywhere. We'll credit your first long distance bill with the amount Southwestern Bell charges for you to make the change.

It's your money, make up your own mind. Choose the long distance service you want.

We want to be your clear and simple choice for long distance communications. ClayDesta Communications.

Experience teaches

An adage tells us that "experience is the best teacher" and many people concur as a result of their own personal experiences.

Realizing that fact, social workers have for years utilized the services of rescued alcoholics and drug addicts to help convince others just wandering into the maze of drug and alcohol dependency that it is a lonely, frightening and, for some, inescapable place.

But the adage becomes even more convincing when the words are spoken by a former first lady who is renowned for her public appearances made in the interest of warning others of the dangers hidden in bottles of liquor and pills. Betty Ford's visit to Midland this week reinforced the adage as she told those attending her talk in Midland Center: "My participation tonight is in no way as an expert in chemical dependency, but rather as a layman with a hard-earned education through a very personal experience."

Mrs. Ford's message this week was clear. Dependency on drugs and alcohol does not begin obviously or quickly. Often, as in her case, the "victim" does not even realize his or her dependency unless or until confronted by loving family and friends.

The acknowledgement that one is dependent on alcohol or drugs is extremely difficult, and is made even moreso when the "victim" is a member of one of the nation's finest political families. But that fact makes the recognition and the reaching out to overcome the problem all the more crucial because it telegraphs the message to every person in this land that chemical dependency does not recognize the social fences of money, power or position. Every American — every one — is subject to falling victim to the ravages of chemical dependency.

But the recognition of the problem isn't the final victory and the message that comes through even more vividly is that there is hope — and help — for those suffering under chemical dependency.

The "cure" isn't easy. It takes courage, stamina, the strength and love of family and friends. But there is a light at the end of the tunnel.

That was Mrs. Ford's message and we're appreciative of her selfless willingness to share the details of her personal bout with chemical dependency with the people of Midland. Perhaps she touched some lives here for the better.

Crisis to prevent

When President Reagan resolved the air traffic controllers' strike in 1981 by firing all the strikers, that hardly ended the administration's responsibilities. On the contrary, it created a new obligation to see that the system was safely re-established. But according to the preliminary results of a General Accounting Office investigation and the testimony of airline pilots and others at recent Senate hearings, that hasn't happened.

There are more flights now than before the strike but fewer controllers, and fewer still who are fully qualified — 5,000 fewer, the GAO reports. Even the administration, which claims the old payroll was padded, admits to the need to hire 1,000 new controllers, which it plans to do over the next two years. But that "may be too little, too late," according to the Air Line Pilots Association. And such recruiting will do nothing to meet the need for seasoned controllers, a need pointed out by the Federal Aviation Administration's own task force on the subject. Indeed, over the next few years the shortage of experienced controllers is expected to get even worse as many of those who didn't strike, and thus kept their jobs, start reaching retirement age.

The administration has tried to cope with the manpower problem by limiting the amount of airline traffic, but that's a tactic to which the airlines vehemently object, and partly as a result of concessions to the airlines, it hasn't fully worked. The number of near misses reported on the ground and in the air is climbing. The National Transportation Safety Board points to "deficient controller coordination" as one important cause, while the GAO found more than two-thirds of the new controller work force complaining that working conditions are "adversely affecting the safety of the system."

The airlines proposed a solution at the Senate hearings. They want to create a private corporation they would run jointly to handle air traffic control. That would raise a number of new problems — military security, for instance, since civilian controllers currently help guide military aircraft, a job that should not be turned over to private enterprise. But more fundamental, it's a solution that misses the point. According to the experts who have testified thus far, what's needed to improve safety are changes in working conditions, in runway clearance procedures, and in the number of experienced controllers in the towers.

One obvious first step would be to permit rehiring from among the already trained controllers the president fired for striking more than four years ago. Quite aside from the system's need for them, after four years there's a real question whether further punishment is called for. But that would be only a first step. It's also necessary to redesign both the tasks required of controllers and the restrictions imposed on airlines to conform to the real human limits the system is up against. At the Senate hearings, the head of the FAA warned of the danger of quick fixes. We do not, he said, "have a crisis." The goal, the Senate should warn him back, is to prevent one.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today's highlight in history:

On October 13th, 1775, the United States Navy began as the Continental Congress ordered the construction of a naval fleet.

On this date:

In 1792, the cornerstone of the executive mansion, later to be known as the White House, was laid during a ceremony in the District of Columbia.

In 1843, the Jewish organization B'nai B'rith was founded in New York.

In 1845, Texas ratified a state constitution.

In 1943, Italy declared war on Germany, its one-time Axis partner.

In 1960, the third presidential campaign debate was broadcast, with Republican nominee Richard M. Nixon in Hollywood and Democrat John F. Kennedy in New York.

In 1962, the Edward Albee play "Who's Afraid of Virginia Woolf" opened on Broadway, with Uta Hagen as Martha and Arthur Hill as George.

Five years ago: The Cuban government announced it would pardon all U.S. citizens serving prison terms in Cuba, including those held for airline hijackings.

One year ago: The space shuttle Challenger and its seven astronauts glided to a perfect landing at Cape Canaveral, Florida, ending a journey that featured the first space walk by an American woman, Kathy Sullivan.

Today's birthdays: Actor-singer Yves Montand is 64. Comedian Nipsey Russell is 60. British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher is 60. Singer Marie Osmond is 26.

Thought for today: "The worst cynicism — a belief in luck." — Joyce Carol Oates, author.

India's Rajiv helped cool heads prevail

WASHINGTON — Sometimes a world leader earns the respect and gratitude of another government for action he did not take, or words he did not utter — a subtle exercise in statesmanship that goes unnoticed by the public but is appreciated at the upper levels of power.

Jack Anderson

That's how Prime Minister Rajiv Gandhi won points with knowledgeable officials in the Reagan administration last year in the aftermath of his mother's assassination by Sikh extremists. Not only did he speak out firmly against revenge on the Sikh community, but he pointedly did not lend credence to Soviet disinformation specialists' widely circulated lie that the CIA was behind the murder of Indira Gandhi.

Rajiv Gandhi owed nothing to the United States. It must have been tempting to look for a sinister foreign scapegoat to blame for the tragedy — a response that is all too common in Third World countries shaken by domestic violence.

But Gandhi disdained the easy course and refused to support the Soviet fabrication by so much as a hint that it might be plausible. By doing so, he earned the good will that was so evident when he visited Washington this year.

In a more immediate and personal sense, Gandhi also won the gratitude of the scores of American diplomats stationed in India. Had the Indian government given the slightest encouragement to the pernicious rumor of CIA involvement in the assassination, some of the Americans might have paid with their lives.

For the fact is that disinformation is not just a clever game of one-upmanship. It can be a deadly business, as Americans stationed in Pakistan learned to their horror six years ago.

When Moslem extremists seized the Grand Mosque in Mecca in November 1979, rumors almost immediately swept the Middle East that the CIA had somehow engineered the sacrilegious attack, presumably in retaliation for the seizure of U.S. hostages in Tehran earlier that month. U.S. intelligence officials have blamed Soviet agents for that rumor.

Absurd as the story was, it was believed when repeated by a radio announcer at a soccer game in Islamabad, and a frenzied crowd soon swept through the Pakistani capital to the American Embassy. Five buildings were sacked and burned, two Americans died in the melee and the rest barely survived the mob's anger as government troops were painfully slow to arrive and restore order.

If Gandhi had lent credence to the Soviet disinformation attempt following his mother's assassination, there could have been a bloody repetition of the Islamabad violence.

In fact, two previous instances of Soviet disinformation aimed at India's press and public demonstrate how easy it is to cause mischief in the Third World with planted stories that seem laughable to Westerners.

One phony story described how Neil Armstrong, the first man on the moon, supposedly heard the Moslem call to prayer while he was taking his giant steps for mankind. Armstrong, according to the story, was so impressed that he decided to convert to Islam — and was fired when he disclosed his plans to U.S. officials.

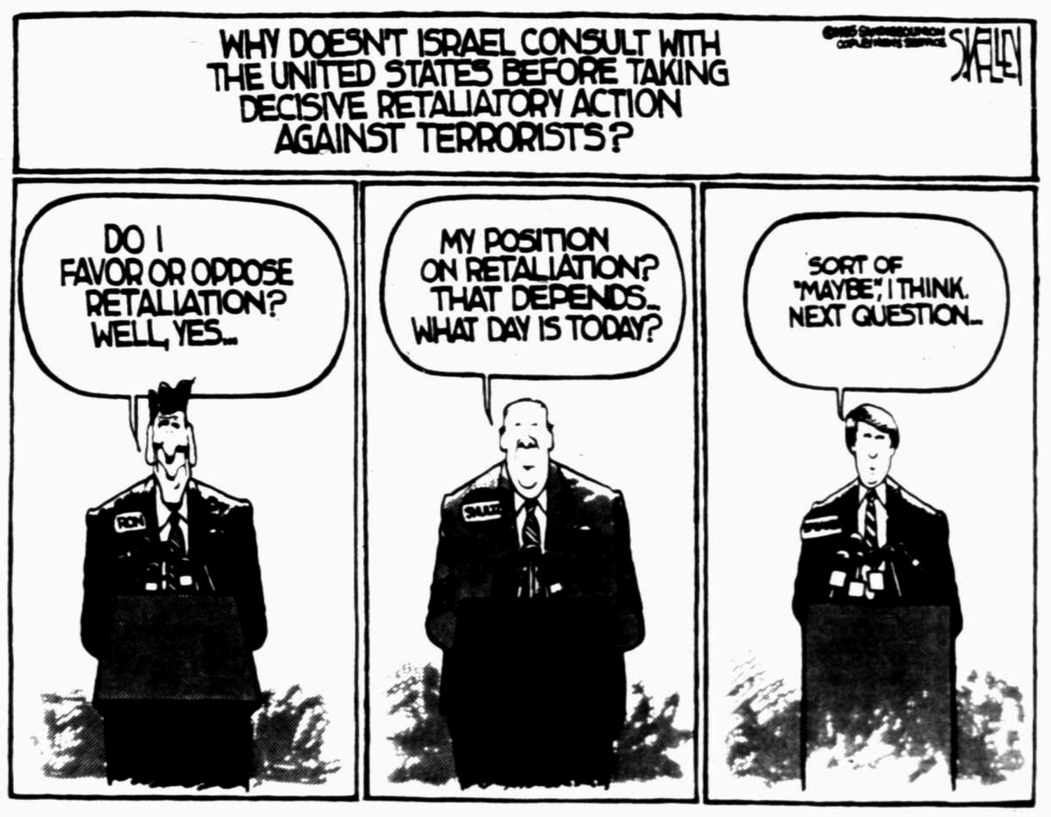

Crazy as this sounds, it was eventually published by an Indian newspaper in March 1983, and achieved widespread credibility in Asia. Armstrong had to hold a telephone conference with 21 Indian journalists to explain that he had heard no divine call of any denomination on the moon, and had left the space agency voluntarily in 1971.

Yet the same story popped up not long afterward in the Egyptian press — necessitating another tele-conference — and later appeared in Pakistan and the Philippines. The Kremlin's Hans Christian Andersens must get a chuckle every time a new clipping comes in.

More serious by far was the fabricated speech the KGB circulated in early 1983, attributed to the U.S. ambassador to the United Nations, Jeane Kirkpatrick. She supposedly had made the speech to a conservative conference in Washington about a year before. (The Soviet tale-spinners don't rush into these things.)

The spurious speech revealed a U.S. master plan for the "Balkanization" of India, breaking the nation into small states that would then be ripe for control by the United States. This was somehow to be accomplished by the use of U.S. grain for blackmail, plus an increased U.S. military presence in the region.

GEORGE F. WILL

Proposal would give Reagan 'meat cleaver'

WASHINGTON — Bob Dole, illustrating the axiom that wit is educated insolence, said the Senate should pass the radical budget-balancing bill without hearings because, "The longer something hangs around here, it gets stale. People start reading it." Heaven forfend.

George F. Will

The proposal, an action-forcing device, would require five annual cuts of equal size ($36 billion) bringing the deficit to zero in 1991. The President would be required to submit a budget with sufficient spending cuts or tax increases to cut $36 billion from the deficit. If — if! — Congress did not ratify his blend of pains and did not devise its own blend, the failure would trigger a presidential duty to cut spending, across the board, by whatever fixed percentage is required.

Note that congressional failure to make hard choices would not invest the President with broad power to exercise rational discretion in shaping the budget. Defenders — yes, defenders — of the proposal stress that it makes the President a mere automaton. The proposal minimizes choice — thought — in budget-making. This evasion of governance might, for example, require the President to cut equally, thereby assigning the same social value to Amtrak subsidies and programs for spina-bifida babies.

This proposal is historic in its potential consequences and stunning in its symbolism, especially as it reveals a transformation of conservatism. In its potential for large consequences, it ranks a cut below repeal of the Missouri Compromise. It will not ignite civil war, quite. However, as an allocator of effective power within the central government, the proposal is as significant as the establishment of the Federal Reserve System.

Considering its source — the conservative party — the proposal is as startling as the Giles Enforcement Act of 1809, which suspended parts of the Bill of Rights in order to enforce compliance with Jefferson's embargo against Britain and France. Sen. William B. Giles, the author of this concentration of irresistible power in the central government, was a Virginia Jeffersonian, at least rhetorically.

Today's conservative proposal for shrinking deficits mocks some conservative rhetoric. It would involve an enlargement of executive-branch power without parallel in peacetime. Modern conservatism defined itself in opposition first to FDR and then to LBJ. Hence conservatism has celebrated congressional prerogatives against "presidential government." But conservatives supporting this deficit-cutting proposal favor a form of executive power far beyond the dreams of liberal political avarice.

We few who are "strong government conservatives" — we Hamiltonians — believe, as our hero did, that "energy in the executive is a leading character in the definition of good government." But minimizing the element of mind in governance is a high price to pay for instilling energy in the executive.

The proposal illuminates the real, as distinct from the rhetorical, nature of contemporary conservatism. Social Security would be completely exempt from cuts. Social Security and interest payments, which are necessarily exempt, comprise one-third of the budget. All other entitlement programs would suffer only cuts from annual cost-of-living increases. Thus the controllable portion of the defense budget, especially pay, maintenance and operations, would bear a heavy burden of the cuts. So conservatives supporting the proposal are siding with the middle-class, social-insurance side of the central government against the defense priority.

The proposal is as American as, well, Prohibition. It expresses a deep desire to tame turbulent social forces with institutional cleverness and words on parchment. Deficits a problem? Outlaw the rascals — that worked so well with gin.

RUSSELL BAKER

Some song lyrics aren't fit to be censored!

At age 12 or so I first heard the lyrics to what then seemed to me a dirty song about Columbus. Nowadays I would call it a bawdy song, but, bawdy or dirty, the lyrics will not be set forth here. In these matters I follow the principles suggested by the notorious beer baron and arbiter of taste, Dutch Schultz.

Russell Baker

Meyer Berger of The New York Times once wrote a story calling Schultz, among other things, "a pushover for blondes." When Schultz objected, Berger reminded him that he had called himself a pushover for blondes.

"That is beside the pernt," said Schultz. "I only remember it made me feel bad when I saw it in The Times. I don't think 'pushover for a blonde' is any kind of language to write for a newspaper like The Times."

Colleagues later had Schultz shot dead for bad political judgment — to wit, planning to murder a special prosecutor named Thomas E. Dewey — but on the matter of vulgar language he was thoroughly sound. Seeing it printed in a family newspaper makes you feel bad.

On the other hand, hearing it sung in the park by another 12-year-old, as I first heard this vulgar song about Christopher Columbus, merely makes you feel that you have been present at one of life's spicier moments. There had been very few spicy moments in my life at age 12, and so shock and delight suffused me.

Not until college did I hear that scandalous song again. There it was being sung in a fraternity house by two young men adorned in the academic tweeds and oxford weaves that were de rigueur for fraternity men of the day. Hearing it again gave me no pleasure.

This may have been because it seemed almost childishly innocent compared to so many songs heard in the military during World War II. More likely, it was because there was something embarrassing in seeing grown men — college men, for heaven's sake! — singing that old childhood Columbus song under the misapprehension that they were being daring.

I certainly was not embarrassed by hearing it sung on a campus and in a fraternity house. Song repertories among most students of my acquaintance included thick batches of mildly salacious to downright filthy material. A good percentage of it was lyrically superior to the plodding and dreary popular song lyrics of the day. Consider, for example:

"The Queen of Spain was an amorous Jane, a lascivious wench was she." Now there is an elegant start on anybody's song lyric.

These old songs had lain dormant in my skull for years until a few weeks ago when a well-meaning group, led by worried mothers, began raising a hullabaloo about what was quickly dubbed "porn rock." They had detected vulgar and obscene lyrics in rock music and were putting heat on the music industry to cut it out.

I was amazed these women could understand anything that rock performers sing. The typical rock singing performance sounds to me like what might be heard if the Turkish Army took on the United States House of Representatives in hand-to-hand combat. Nevertheless, I will take the mothers' word that it is raunchy stuff.

Beyond that, I have trouble getting alarmed about it. Vulgarity is as American as a sawed-off shotgun, to vary Dashiell Hammett's phrase. Forty years ago, radio music was so closely investigated for double-entendre that songs as innocent as Fats Waller's "Hold Tight" were kept off the air, yet children in the park were singing "Christopher Colombo" while adolescents were off at war bawling songs that would have undone Aunt Pearl's permanent wave.

Music censorship on the radio was silly and a failure if its purpose was to protect American youth from musical exposure to obscene vulgarity. In the years immediately after World War II, late-night saloon life in America was boisterous with youth crying for the piano player to render "Roll Me Over," "I Used To Work In Chicago," and similar harmless vulgarities for group singing.

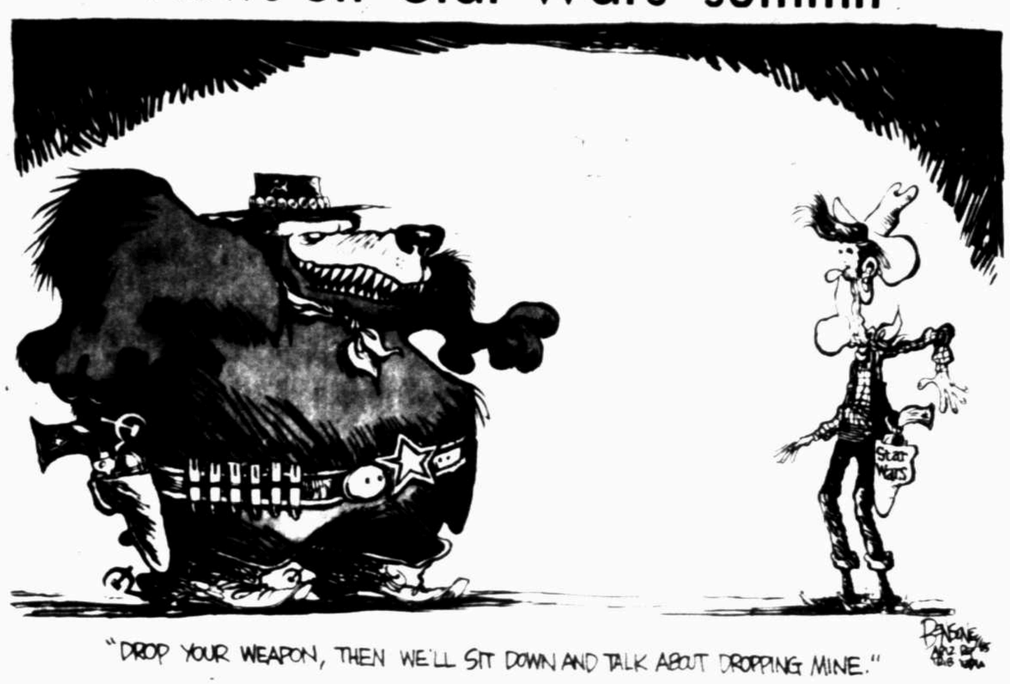

Stirred by the alarmed mothers, my memory began playing back the full repertory of bawdy, off-color and just downright dirty songs it had gathered during years when my mother would have cringed had I let on that I knew a more emphatic way of saying "gosh darn it all to the dickens!" I was astonished by the amount of vulgarity a youthful mind can accumulate, even in times of censorship.

It is reassuring to know that censorship cannot diminish our youth's capacity to enjoy vulgarity to the fullest, for surely vulgar and obscene performances should not be tolerated in any public medium where the comfort of the general audience will be disturbed by a breakdown in decorum.

The Dutch Schultz principle is as applicable to music as it is to newspapers. There is some music which, when you hear it performed in circumstances where nobody is acting ashamed, makes you feel bad.

Government's duty should include retaliatory action

Modisett

The American people are making a mistake by letting the politicians run the show, where countering the threat of terrorism is concerned.

It was in June this year when TWA Flight 847 was hijacked and the passengers held for 17 days in Beirut. A Navy diver named Robert Stethem was brutally murdered by the hijackers, for no reason whatsoever.

After that hijacking incident and murder, the Reagan administration was properly incensed. There was talk of retaliation and not letting the murderers get away without just punishment. Obviously, words are easy to say; action is just too difficult, apparently.

Now there's been the hijacking of a cruise ship on which more than 500 people were held hostage. An innocent 69-year-old man, Leon Klinghoffer, who was paralyzed and confined to a wheelchair, was viciously murdered and his body shoved overboard by the terrorists.

Now the American people are being told by the politicians that action will be forthcoming; that this elderly man's death will not be forgotten and the murderers will not get away scot-free.

Baloney!

Remember Robert Stethem? What have we seen done to avenge his death? Now there's the death of another innocent person to avenge. Will it happen? Well, you do what you want, but I'm not going to hold my breath.

Maybe I'm not "average." Maybe it's wrong to expect more from your country than lip service. Maybe there's no one in this land who believes as I do that this nation's leaders are cutting their own throats by their failure to act to counter terrorism. Maybe...but I don't really believe it.

I've said it before, but I think it bears repeating. When government fails to do its duty to the people it's supposed to serve, the people — at some point — will rise up and take the responsibility to act into their own hands.

The Reagan administration had better begin recognizing that fact — fast!

At least three of our good West Texas cities are in a fairly close race for the Worse Street Flooding Award. I know because I've floated down streets in Midland, Abilene and Odessa personally.

That isn't comical in any sense of the word, but one has to recognize the fact that flash-floods do occur. They're a phenomenon of this environment and, thus, must be tolerated to a degree.

But only to a degree. At some point communities such as these three have to accept the fate given them by nature and provide drainage systems that will accommodate flooding to the point of preventing it from getting into homes.

Of course, finding that point isn't simple. I certainly can't tell them how to do it. I'm not an engineer, but some engineer somewhere can and I think, personally, it's time to find him or her. And it is understood that such drainage systems may entail a lot of taxpayer expense.

But no community I know wants that decision to be forced on them by flood-related deaths.

Watering the streets wasteful, nuisance

I am curious to know if I am the only person in Midland who is bothered by the large amounts of water constantly running down the streets of this town and forming puddles in the intersections. This is a terrible waste and quite a nuisance, too. We can have a two-inch rain and the very next morning the sprinklers in some large apartment complexes and office buildings will be going full blast. We can have a two-month drought and the streets will still be running full of runoff water from these same complexes.

I, for one, will happily support a petition to make such waste of West Texas' most precious resource a crime. I would support such a move because I believe we should conserve water and because I am sick of cleaning my car and not being able to drive six blocks before my two hours' labor is ruined. Some clod is sure to drive by at full speed through one of these puddles and douse me good with filthy water.

Additionally, all this water undermines the base of the pavement and leads to some horrendous potholes. Let's stop allowing our streets to be sewers. Anyone who feels the same should start raising cain with City Hall. Let's start now!

You should 'elicit' correct use of word

I am writing in reference to your article on chlamydia, the most common sexually transmitted disease, which was published Sunday, Oct. 6.

Dr. James Humphreys was quoted as saying, "What was bothersome was that of the cases we saw, you could diagnose gonorrhea but often could not culture any and you couldn't illicit (sic) any history of activity that would suggest a person had been exposed to gonorrhea."

I'm sure that Dr. Humphreys would not want to "illicit" anything from his patients. "Illicit" is an adjective meaning unlawful. I think he would prefer to "elicit" or bring out a history of activity.

The improper usage is especially amusing considering the subject matter of the article. I suggest that it is possible to contract chlamydia in an illicit relationship but this is not necessarily true; this information would have to be elicited from the patient.

Is this what they call a Freudian slip?

Telecommunications tax breaks promise

On Oct. 1, 1985, Texas telephone customers began paying a new tax on their telephone bills, a tax which adds up to a $93 million net tax increase for Texans during the next five years. Candidate Mark White built his 1982 campaign on two major promises to the people of Texas. He would not raise taxes, and he would keep utility bills low. The new telecommunications tax, signed into law by Gov. White on May 24, 1985, breaks both of those promises. It is a tax increase, and it means higher telephone bills for Texans.

This double White lie will cost Texans $123 million in net increased state taxes during the next two years, according to estimates from the State Comptroller and Legislative Budget Board. In addition, after local taxing authorities add their sales taxes, the net increase will be an additional $81 million during the following three years. Those numbers add up to $93 million in net new taxes for Texas telephone customers.

Despite this, our governor is perpetuating his White lies. On June 2, he told the Houston Chronicle: "I think you'll find that there's a clear understanding that there's no increase in taxes as a result of this session." On May 28, he told the Dallas Times Herald: "We've managed to pass an appropriations bill without any new tax burden on the people of Texas, and I think that's a great accomplishment." I am sure the people of Texas will dispute both of those statements when they receive their telephone bills with the new state tax starting next month.

The new tax increase imposes the 4⅛ percent state sales tax on all telephone service except for a basic local line with a rotary dial telephone and interstate long-distance service. Cities and municipal transportation authorities will each add local sales taxes beginning the Fiscal Year 1988.

The state gross receipts tax formerly charged to the telephone companies was abolished except for basic local line service. This was initially designed as an attempt to address an inequity in the way the state taxed telephone service. The traditional companies were being charged the gross receipts tax, while the new long-distance companies were not forced to pay that gross receipts tax. Surely the inequity could have been addressed in a more responsible way. The net result of this plan is a new tax increase for Texas consumers, instead of a fairer system of taxing the telephone companies.

All of this is in addition to $190 million in new and increased state and local government fees which Gov. White signed into law last June.

I ask all Texas telephone customers to carefully look at their telephone bills next month. When they see the new state tax, I hope they'll circle it in red and send it to Gov. White. Maybe then our governor will realize that the people of Texas understand the difference between a gift horse and a Trojan Horse, and Mark White will stop trying to hide his tax hikes and utility bill increases.

Give them some of own medicine

By WILLIAM RANDOLPH HEARST JR.
Editor-in-Chief, The Hearst Newspapers

NEW YORK — We can be proud of our president, and our Navy and Air Force intelligence, for their superb feat of intercepting in mid-air the four Palestinian terrorists who seized the Italian cruise ship and brutally murdered a crippled, elderly American tourist.

The midnight interception, high above the eastern Mediterranean Sea, of the Egyptian commercial airliner that was attempting to fly the four Arab fiends to freedom was brilliantly executed. It was sensationally daring, in the tradition of the U.S. Marines who in the early 1800's stopped Barbary coast piracy against American ships.

The pirates, who claim to be a splinter group of the PLO under the leadership of Yasser Arafat, had presumably been granted free passage by the Egyptian government. Many details are still vague and we are still sorting out the contradictory statements made by the many parties to this outrageous dispute.

But one thing is absolutely certain: The United States through the careful vigil of our Sixth Fleet in the Mediterranean zeroed in on the Egyptian commerical airliner that was flying the pirates to a safe haven and forced the aircraft to land at a NATO base in Sicily.

The remarks of two Americans struck me as an indication of national feeling at the moment.

The first comes from Defense Secretary Casper Weinberger who stated that this was a well conceived, planned and executed interception carried out under the direction of the president.

The second comes from New York's mayor Ed Koch, who said: "Thank God for the president and the military."

Italy, which has shown in the past that it knows how to deal with homegrown terrorists, must decide the next step in dealing with the murderers.

Following that, the terrorists might be prosecuted by the United States for the murder of one of our citizens.

The terrorists surrendered to Egyptian authorities in Port Said 44 hours after beginning the supercharged drama. They gave themselves up after Egypt had assured them safe passage to one of the terrorist-harboring nations in the Middle East.

The Egyptian government says it made this pledge of safe passage before it knew of the cold-blooded murder of Leon Klinghoffer, a 69-year-old partially paralyzed stroke victim, who was first shot and then thrown overboard by the Palestinian terrorists. He was from Manhattan and Jewish. Last summer an American sailor in mufti was killed by terrorists who seized a TWA plane bound for the U.S. from Athens.

Both the Reagan Administration and the Italian government worked harmoniously arranging for the swift apprehension of the pirates who killed the American. All reasonable people were outraged by the act.

This flagrant act of piracy on the high seas, which has been regarded as criminal for centuries, apparently was not the pirates' original grand strategy. They intended, accoring to knowledgable sources in the Middle East, to use the ship as a staging area for a raid on a port in Israel, load it with captives and take off into international waters.

Four thugs belonging to the elite security guard around Arafat, head of the PLO, decided ostensibly to take revenge on the Israelis on their own. The faction seizing the Italian liner, called themselves the "Palestine Liberation Front" (PLF), but Arafat's organization professed ignorance of its existence. Egyptian authorities were totally perplexed by the so-called "new group" and said they had never heard anything about the culprits or their organization.

Our CIA, however, has identified the two "traveling companions" of the hijackers as being a top PLO official and a well known Palestinian terrorist.

Lacking either economic or military clout, the terrorists believe the publicity surrounding their acts will tell the world their story.

Just look at Lebanon and all the factions fighting there — Sunni Moslems, Shi'ite Moslems, Christians, Druzes and Israelis who invaded the region to chase out the PLO a couple of years ago.

The PLO pirates aboard the Italian cruise ship wanted the release of fellow terrorists held prisoner in Israeli jails. Arafat insisted they acted on their own and in defiance of his orders. He sought to turn the fiasco to his advantage and establish credibility by acting as "peacemaker" in defusing the deplorable situation.

In the chopped up, violence-scarred little nation of Lebanon the U.S. lost dozens of our best young men trying to preserve tranquility in a nation that was hijacked by terrorists. France had grevious losses, too.

Only the other day the Soviet Union, which had four of its diplomats abducted, one of whom was executed gangland style, has been compelled to send at least 60 of its citizens out of Lebanon.

From the latest American interception of these murderers, terrorists the world over should get the message.

Contribute to Safe Halloween

By Dr. JAMES COMPTON

Dr. James Compton, a Midland orthodontist, is a board member of the Easter Seal Society of the Permian Basin.

Tradition has played an important role in the development of America and our own Permian Basin: Ideas, customs, and stories have been passed from generation to generation forming solid links in our chain of cultural heritage. From tall tales of Judge Roy Bean to unequaled loyalty to football teams, rich tradition abounds in West Texas. Possibly the richest tradition is that of generosity toward our fellow man. Permian Basin residents have always "dug deep in their pockets" to help one another. This generosity is exemplified by the innovative and energetic work done by the Easter Seal Society of the Permian Basin. They consistently work towards bettering the lives of the handicapped.

Last year they began a new fund-raising project known as Safe Halloween. The purpose of Safe Halloween is to provide safe, tamper-free treats for Halloween while at the same time stimulating business for the merchants and providing funds for rehabilitative services.

Safe Halloween is a coupon promotion booklet containing 10 free coupons. The coupons are being given by: Arby's, The Cornpopper, Everybody's Grocery Store, Hickory Farms, Jerry's Perfect Pets Shop, Kent Kwik Convenience Stores, Pizza Hut, Seven-Eleven, Taco Villa, and the UA Cinemas. The program has the support and sponsorship of the Midland Reporter-Telegram, the Odessa American, and KOSA-TV.

These sponsors have donated advertising space. Taco Villa has sponsored the printing.

Safe Halloween coupons not only provide safe, tamper-free treats for Halloween but also offer anyone the opportunity to use them. The merchants have imposed no age restrictions on their use. This unselfish donation reflects their support for Easter Seal Society, the Rehab Centers in Midland and Odessa and, lastly, our handicapped citizens.

The Easter Seal Society of the Permian Basin raises funds that are used at the Permian Basin Centers to provide rehabilitative services. Ninety percent of every dollar raised stays here at home to help our area patients who need therapy programs. Our Permian Basin Rehabilitation Centers are fully accredited by the Commission on Accreditation of Rehabilitation Facilities (CARF). They are the only accredited facilities between Abilene and Tucson. The Permian Basin Rehabilitation Centers actively pursue the best programs for their patients whether it be here at home or elsewhere if the need be. They have reciprocal relations with many fine Rehab Centers throughout the country.

The Permian Basin Rehabilitation Centers offer professional, medically-oriented programs of physical, occupational, speech therapy and audiological services. In addition they provide expertise in the various disciplines of therapy that are necessary to aid handicapped persons return to the mainstream of life. These programs enable the handicapped to gain the self-reliance necessary to lead full and purposeful lives within the limits of their disabilities.

The staff of the Permian Basin Rehabilitation Centers provide support and understanding along with the fully integrated therapy programs. Sometimes their emotional boosts are just what the patient needs to carry on their fight for independence.

It is through the generosity of local merchants, sponsors, Easter Seal Society volunteers, and you, that so much can be accomplished for those among us who need help. Whether a stroke or accident victim who can't walk; an elderly person who cannot hear well; or a child born with a serious birth defect, the Permian Basin Rehabilitation Centers of Midland and Odessa are here to serve you.

Join the Easter Seal Society volunteers, our local merchants and give treats for Halloween that provide treatment for those of us here who need rehabilitative therapy.

MC, MMH set orthopedic injury seminar

From Staff Reports

Midland College, in cooperation with Midland Memorial Hospital, will sponsor a one-day seminar on "Orthopedic Injuries" for area physicians and other medical personnel.

The seminar is slated from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. Nov. 2 in the Allison Fine Arts Building. It is one of a series provided by MMH for continuing medical education.

Topics to be covered are hand and foot injuries, orthopedic radiology, common fractures, management of the multiple-injured patient and sports injuries.

Participants also will participate in a "hands-on" session involving splinting and casting techniques.

The course fee is $25 for physicians and $15 for allied health professionals. For information or to register, contanct the Department of Continuing Education at Midland College. Deadline to register is Oct. 18.

Counseling center offers workshop on personalities

From Staff Reports

The Samaritan Counseling Center is offering a one-day workshop on Saturday, Oct. 19, from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. on "Gifts Differing."

It is a workshop that will define the Myers-Briggs Type Indicator to help you understand, accept and appreciate the uniqueness and strengths of your personality.

Participants will define and experience the eight preferences (Extra Perception). Information on developing your opposite preferences will be shared. In addition, the group will explore practical ways to use your personality type in communicating, managing stress and decision-making.

The workshop will be led by Rev. Norman Godfrey, who is a pastoral psychotherapist with 12 years counseling experience. In addition, he has successfully completed the Myers-Briggs Type Indicator Professional Qualifying Program.

For registration information, please call Debbie Roberts at 563-4144.

Real Estate today

ADVERTISING ISN'T EVERYTHING

There will always be some sellers who are unhappy because THEIR home is not receiving enough individual advertising. This may come as a surprise, but it's not advertising that will sell your home. It's the Realtor that will sell it.

Theoretically, your house could be advertised every day with troops of lookers parading through for a free tour without generating a single qualified buyer. That's probably not what you want. In fact, studies have shown that more sales of house A are generated through ads on house B and C than through ads on A itself. That means that your agent's overall advertising is more important than blitz advertising of your house in particular.

The important value of real estate advertising is to get the prospect INTO the agency. Once there, they will look at many listings and select what's best for them to look at. This may or may not be the one advertised. Even more important than advertising, is the correct pricing of your home. Any house will sell at the right price.

"I FINALLY FOLLOWED MY OWN ADVICE AND LOST 14 POUNDS."

Over the years, I've seen how excess weight or poor nutrition adversely affected people physically and emotionally. And I've observed the results of various weight-loss programs.

Herbalife is the first one I've seen that makes sense, for both nutrition and weight loss. And not just for my patients.

When I finally tried it, I lost 14 pounds. And I've kept it off with Herbalife's nutrition maintenance program. The fact is, I weigh less today than I did in medical school. So I have no problem recommending Herbalife. And I intend to continue using it myself.

Dr. Burke and his patients are among hundreds who have changed their lives for the better. Physically. Emotionally. And financially.

Find out how Herbalife can help change your life, too.

Jail plans to be submitted

Midland architects Walter Pate and James Riggen are to present to the Midland County Commissioners' Court on Monday the final design-development drawings for the Midland County Jail renovation.

The architects are to meet with the commissioners in the Commissioners' Courtroom on the second floor of the Midland County Courthouse.

The commissioners' meeting begins at 9 a.m.

At the commissioners' request, the architects have drafted plans to bring the jail up to standards mandated by the Texas Commission on Jail Standards and to increase jail-inmate capacity.

The architects' proposal on jail renovation reflects $2.94 million in construction costs and fees. An additional $501,000 would be required to expand Culver Youth Home, which is apart from the jail. Current plans call for increasing jail inmate capacity from 85 to 128 to reduce the number of inmates who are transferred to other jails county at a cost of about $6,000 per week.

In other business, the commissioners are to:

- Discuss a modular jail apart from the courthouse.
- Discuss renovation of Culver Youth Home.
- Discuss ways to enforce the "litter law" in Midland County.
- Consider appointing Judge James "Jim" Fitz-Gerald, presiding judge of Midland County Court-at-Law No. 2, to the Bail Bond Board.
- Consider approving the tax-roll summary for 1985.
- Consider a resolution on appointing five members to the 1986-87 Midland Central Appraisal District's board of directors.
- Consider establishment of polling places for new election precincts.
- Consider closing Midland County Road 110-East between CR 1150-South and CR 1140-South.

Jaycees gather in Midland

From Staff Reports

Close to 40 Jaycees from around West Texas showed up in Midland Saturday for the Annual West Texas Summit Conference. But that wasn't enough for the former president of the organization's national chapter.

"Something has gone wrong in terms of participation," said Sam Chase, former U.S. Jaycee president.

Chase addressed seven chapters from San Angelo, Plainview, El Paso, Lubbock and Martin County, including Midland, that were participating in the two-day conference. Jaycees is a service and character building organization with more than 200 members in the city.

While Chase said he was troubled by the turnout, he said he would have made the same speech if 300 people attended.

"There's never enough people here," he said.

Chase also said he was upset with the "me" societal trend in the nation.

"We have become the 'me' society. We don't seem to care as much about our fellow beings.

"We're not really as concerned as we used to be about things happening outside of our own territory," Chase said.

Doc Hanks, former U.S. Jaycee vice president and former Texas president, said, "We're not a project organization. We are a people organization and what Jaycees do, in my mind, is provide opportunities."

Hanks said projects are a by-product of Jaycees, which is set up to provide leadership and training opportunities.

"The value of the plaza (the Midland Centennial Plaza built by the Jaycees) is that a whole bunch of Midland Jaycees went through that project with increased expectations. They learned a lot and gained more training."

Other speakers at Saturday's conference included, former state Attorney General John Ben Sheppard, former Jaycee Texas President Sam Chase and motivational speaker, Kip Glasscock.

Beginning Friday through Sunday, area Jaycees will meet with other leaders throughout the state to identify and discuss Texas issues. The Public Leadership and the Issues of Texas forum will begin at 6 p.m. Friday at the Odessa Hilton.

MC instructor chosen

Midland College speech and communication instructor Dr. Tyler Tindall has been named the first community college representative elected to an office in the Texas Speech Communication Association.

Tindall was named vice president-elect of the group at its annual meeting Oct. 4-6 in Corpus Christi. He also serves as chairman of the Community College Association of the Speech Communication Association.

Sooner defense throttles Longhorns, 14-7

TED BATTLES
Sports Editor

DALLAS — Texas trotted out its heralded high-octane offense against Oklahoma before the usual Cotton Bowl sellout (75,587) Saturday afternoon and if it hadn't been for the Steers' defense, the Longhorns wouldn't even have scored.

The Sooners emerged with a 14-7 win in this battle of unbeatens, the deciding score coming on a mad 45-yard dash along the east sidelines heading south in the third period by Patrick Collins, a sophomore from Tulsa.

Perhaps that makes it sound like a pretty close game, but a check of the statistics is more revealing. Yet even that doesn't hint at the suffocating superiority of the invaders from the other side of the Red River.

Texas provided the illusion of a contest with an unusual fumble-interception touchdown by Kip Cooper. The senior end from Port Arthur was pursuing a thrust at the line by Collins. UT's other end Thomas Aldridge popped the ball out of Collins' arms. Cooper caught it and in the confusion eventually found his way into the end zone seven yards away with 2:35 left in the first period.

"The ball just popped up," said Cooper, "I was just afraid I would fall down before I could get into the end zone.

That was it offensively, er defensively-offensively, that is, for the previously unbeaten Steers.

THE STEERS offered no excuses, "It was hot and we did get a little tired," said linebacker Ty Allert, outstanding for the Steers all afternoon, "but they (OU's offense) were out there every bit as much as us. I don't think we can use the heat as an excuse."

Oklahoma tied the game with 10:18 left in the half when 215-pound Lydell Carr, the Sooners' leading rusher for the day with 80 yards in 23 carries, leaped the scrum at the goal line for a TD from a yard out.

OU had come 80 yards in nine plays, the only serious drive of the game. The big gainer was a 43-yard pass from quarterback Troy Aikman, a 6-3 sophomore from Henryetta, Okla., to Keith Jackson, 241-pound tight end from Little Rock.

With the score tied at seven, it turned out the only question left was whether Texas' defense could make it stand up.

"Take that long touchdown away and I'll take the defense we played any day," said Texas Coach Fred Akers. And when you hear the rest of it, you'll understand why Akers had reason to be proud of his defense.

The Steers went without a first down in the second half and managed only four first downs in the game. That was just one shy of the all time low and one has to dig back to 1939 when the national champion Texas Aggies choked off the Steers with three first downs to top it.

But that's only the tip of the iceberg. The smothering OU defense held Texas to minus 24 yards rushing in the last half.

UT was penned inside its own 30 on five of six third period possessions. It never got beyond its own 36 under its own power in the second half.

Still, not impressed with Oklahoma's defense, even minus All-America nose guard Tony Casillias, injured in the first period? Well, consider this. Texas faced fourth down on seven last half possessions with 12, seven, 11, 12, eight, eight, 27 and 35 yards to go for first down. On the other possession linebacker Brian Bosworth, who played like Casillas would have played, made a diving interception of a Todd Dodge pass on first down.

IT WAS a long afternoon for Dodge, intercepted twice and sacked four times for 36 yards in losses.

Preventive medicine best treatment for injuries

By BOB BRUNDAGE
Sports Writer

There are times during an athletic season when the most important member of a team isn't the head coach, one of the assistants or even the players themselves. There are times when that burden falls on the team's athletic trainer.

At all levels of competition, high school, college and professional, the athletic trainer is responsible for mending bumps and bruises, rehabilitating torn muscles and ligaments.

In years past, back in the days when Midland High athletic trainer James 'Doc' Dodson came out of Texas Christian University, treatment of injuries was the primary concern of a trainer. Now, Dodson says prevention of injuries is the top priority.

Part of the preventive medicine is keeping the players in excellent physical condition. A second, more recent innovation is the use of knee braces.

Now, the knee brace has been around for many years, but, until recently, it hasn't been used until after the injury has already occurred. Both Midland High and Midland Lee are changing that philosophy, along the lines of several colleges.

"Knee braces are now part of preventive medicine," said Dodson, a 1958 grad of TCU and trainer at MHS going on his 27th year. "Before, they were only used after the injury."

Among knee braces, Dodson prefers "The Anderson Knee Brace, which was developed by George Anderson, a trainer for the Los Angeles Raiders. He developed it for Kenny Stabler and that's also where they get its' name: Knee Stabler."

Part of the new thoughts on conditioning programs is working out in shorts for a few days before putting on the pads and hitting. Also, "Water breaks are very important to replace a player's bodily fluids. In 1959, there was no such thing as a water break. Now, we have one every 50 minutes."

Dodson and his crew of trainers divide water breaks into different categories of drink. On the first break, "we give the players a 16-ounce glass of water and on the second a 16-ounce glass of Quickick thirst quencher."

Quickick is one of the many drinks on the market high in potassium and sodium chloride which help to refresh an athlete during and after workouts.

And, still another conditioning practice is the length of a practice session, going to shorter hours even before the eight-hour rule was implemented.

"Coaches not working youngsters for four or five hours but limited to two hours has helped us a lot," said Dodson. "The better condition a player is in, the fewer the injuries. But injuries happen at a higher rate when the athlete is nearing exhaustion."

Medically, the biggest advance is in knee surgery, or rather, the lack thereof. Instead of making a four or five inch incision into the knee to repair the damage, arthoscopic surgery has come into existance.

"The biggest thing in training now is the fact that we have arthoscopic surgery compared to conventional open surgery. Before, in open surgery, a player was out six weeks. James Welborn (MHS quarterback) two years ago missed only 17 days." own business, donating money toward the braces that would hopefully prevent knee injuries.

Some of the doctors who do knee surgery here in Midland were big contributors in cutting back their

Cardinals' speed kills Dodgers

By JOSEPH DURSO
N.Y. Times News Service

ST. LOUIS — Back home on their slick green carpet, back home in the fast lane, the St. Louis Cardinals finally flashed their speed Saturday after two straight losses and defeated the Los Angeles Dodgers, 4-2, in the playoff for the National League pennant.

It was a game decided by the Cardinals' speed and marked by the Dodgers' obsession with the Cardinals' speed, especially in the first two innings when St. Louis bedeviled Bob Welch and raced into a 4-0 lead. After that, the Cardinals stopped running and scoring, but Danny Cox also stopped the Dodgers as he pitched four-hit ball into the seventh inning and then turned his lead over to the Cardinals' bullpen "committee."

As a result, the Cardinals cut the Dodger lead in the series to two games to one, and will try to even the playoff Sunday by pitching their ace, John Tudor, against Jerry Reuss. The first team to win four wins the pennant and moves into the World Series against the American League survivor next Saturday.

Cards' Terry Pendleton

"We knew that if we didn't win, we'd be in deep trouble," said Tommy Herr of the Cardinals. "We also knew teams are intimidated by our speed. Consequently, you saw all kinds of outlandish pickoff throws, to first base, to second base, everywhere. They threw the ball around trying to stop our running game."

"We got beat two games and had to win pretty soon," said Whitey Herzog, the manager of the Cardinals. "We did it the way we did it all year: running and going to the bullpen."

The Cardinals survived a Dodger threat in the top of the first inning and promptly roared on to great success.

In the home half of the inning, Vince Coleman led off with a line single over third base, and it was post time. In the regular season, Coleman set a record for a rookie by stealing 110 bases. In the first game of the playoff, he went 0 for 4 and didn't hit the ball out of the infield. In the second game, he opened with a single and drew nine throws to first base from Orel Hershisher before he tried stealing second and was thrown out.

This time, he drew three throws before Welch delivered a pitch to Willie McGee, who led the league in hitting and stole 56 bases. There was a pause while Manager Whitey Herzog shot out to the plate to argue strenuously with the umpire, John McSherry. His complaint: Welch was not coming to a full stop in his motion and was, in effect, quick-pitching in order to keep Coleman close.

Herzog left to hometown cheers, and Coleman immediately stole second against a pitchout. It was his first steal of the playoff, and by now Welch was totally rattled. Then he walked McGee, and now the scenario was ideal for the Cardinals: The sprinters on base, nobody out.

Welch went to three balls and no strikes on Tommy Herr, recovered briefly and threw two strikes, but then made a fatal mistake: He whirled and tried to pick Coleman off second. But the throw carried wide into right-center field, and Coleman raced home while McGee cruised to third.

Next, Welch walked Herr, who stole second on the fourth pitch to Clark. It was way past time for Welch to get somebody out, and he did. He struck out Clark, and then walked Andy Van Slyke on purpose to load the bases.

Hogs dash Tech's upset hope, 30-7

By TERRY WILLIAMSON
Assistant Sports Editor

LUBBOCK - For the better part of three quarters at Jones Stadium Saturday night, the No. 6 ranked Arkansas Razorbacks played like they were thinking about next week's date with the Texas Longhorns.

However, the "Eyes of Texas" tune left the Hog head in time to record a closer-than-it-sounds 30-7 victory over Texas Tech's hard luck and offenseless Red Raiders before a hopeful, but disappointed again gathering of 38,464 fans.

In the "Believe It or Not" category, Arkansas held a mere 14-7 lead with Tech at the Hog seven-yard line midway through the third period. That's when Arkansas started thinking about Tech and the Red Raiders' dream of a major upset was sent to where ever upset dreams go when reality sets in.

Tech had moved into scoring position at the Arkansas seven before Hog linebacker David Dudley sacked Raider quarterback Aaron Keesee for a 19-yard loss. Tech's Marc Mallery then missed a 46-yard field goal effort and the Red and Black seemed to have the air fall from its sails.

"I knew we needed a big play. Tech came out in the right formation for the defense we called. If they had come out in the wishbone, we would have checked out of the defense we were in," said Dudley.

Bears punch out win over SMU

By TED BATTLES
Sports Editor

IRVING— Traveling from the Cotton Bowl crosstown to Texas Stadium Saturday was like going from staid, proper, follow-the-trends Wall Street to Las Vegas, where a carefree anything goes air was prevailent.

Both games were football, but Texas-Oklahoma was summo wrestling. Baylor-SMU displayed all the skill of a high wire act.

Judging by the difference in the crowds, summo wrestling is more popular.

Baylor, now 3-0 in the SWC race, drove 80 yards to score with 9:18 left in the game for a 21-14 victory and perhaps a healthy leap in the weekly polls.

At least BU Coach Grant Teaff feels his Bears deserve it. "Last week SMU was 13th. We vote on 15 teams in the coaches' poll. I plan to vote for us at around No. 12."

Teaff's reasoning is that last week Baylor beat Houston, last year's Cotton Bowl representative. " And tonight we beat the preseason favorite."

QUARTERBACK TOM Muecke dove over left tackle from the three on an option-keep to score the decider from the two. It was Muecke's passing that moved the Bears 57 yards in the nine-play drive.

The two-letter senior from Angiton hit Matt Clark for 34 yards to the SMU 33 and then, with third and 12, found halfback Robert Williams open over the middle for 23 yards to the 10.

"We had to prove we were a team in these two road games," said Teaff. But with Arkansas, A&M and Texas left, things done't get any easier.

Teaff felt the key to the game came when SMU drove from its six to first down on the BU 14, consuming 8:06 in the third period drive.

THE FIREWORKS started early where the two Southwest Conference contenders dazzled the fans with their derring do.

The Bears jumped in front 14-0 on Terry Syler field goals of 38 and 22 yards and then swept 51 yards in six plays to score with 11:19 left in the half on a 27-yard pass. Fullback Stockmer, the Bears' short yardage specialist, lined up at tight end and got behind the secondary for an easy touchdown.

Anyone who thought the rout was on hadn't seen a Baylor-SMU game. By halftime SMU was all even.

Tailback Reggie Dupard tight roped the sidelines around left end from the 16 with 5:35 in the half, closing out an 80-yard drive.

The Mustangs then raced the clock, taking over at the BU 48 with 1:52 left in the half and did it with 14 seconds to spare when Jeff Atkins punched in from the one. Quarterback Don King's 25-yard pass to split end Marquis Pleasant set it up.

Trivia Teaser...

Yesterday's answer: Heisman trophy winners as juniors in addition to Doc Blanchard: Doak Walker, SMU, 1948; Roger Staubach, 1963, and the only two-time Heisman winner. Name him?

'Doc' works on a player's neck and equipment before a practice.

'DOC'

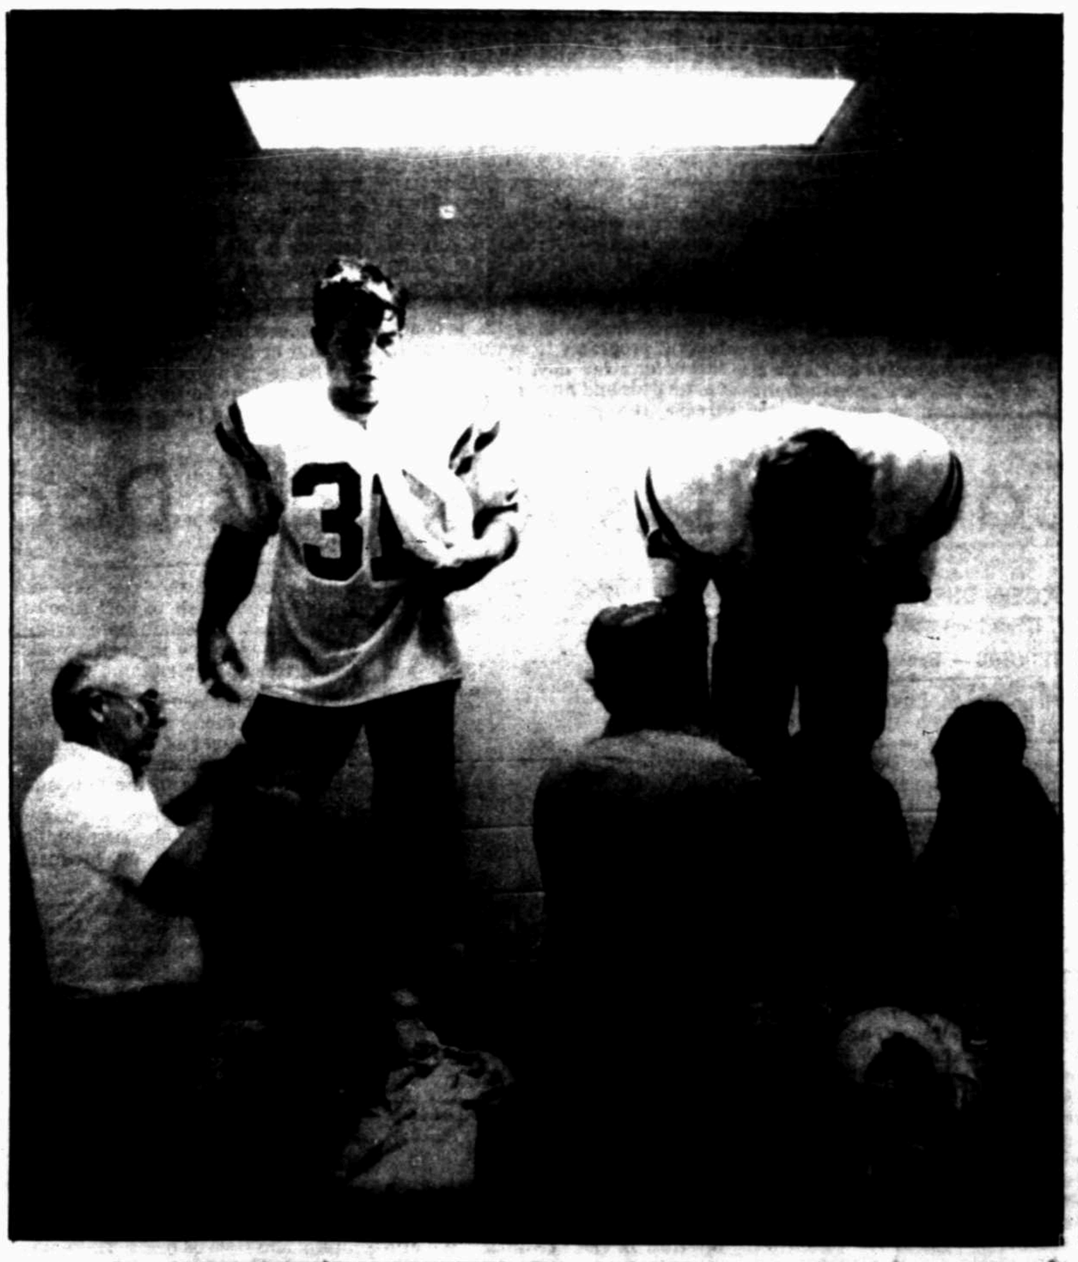

Much more than a trainer...

James 'Doc' Dodson not only works on a player's bumps and bruises, but spends time with the team spirtually during a team prayer (above) and with the players at their lockers (left) before a game. Below, Doc and his crew of student trainers (below) work on knee braces and taping to prepare for a game, patching up old wounds and taking precautions against future injuries.

Photography by Kent Porter

"If just one kid's knee is saved by these braces, it's worth the money," said Dodson, who spends a lot of time rehabilitating knees, both for MHS athletes and outsiders. "We had four orthopedic surgeons donate $1,000 apiece to get us started with the knee braces for all of our youngsters at both schools. They are Thurston Dean, Don Floyd, David Mallams and Charles Younger.

"Ironically, Charles Younger was one of our captains the first year I was at Midland High in 1959."

DESPITE ALL the preventive medicine, players still go down with injuries. It's a fact of all athletic competition. That's when Dodson's knowledge is the most important, diagnosing the locale and extent of injury, making sure the player can be moved and then moving him off the field in the proper fashion. Hopefully, that fashion is under the player's own power.

As soon as possible, Dodson and his staff put ice to the injured area, yet another inovation to training practices.

"Ice, in comparison to heat, is a new form of thinking," said Dodson. "We don't use heat any more. Ice and electrical stimulation are the foremost things in athletic treatment now.

When a player goes down, 'Doc' is quickly at his side.

"We have found ice anethetizes the area and a youngster can get full range of motion more quickly whereas heat is more superficial. The sooner you go to full range of motion, the sooner the player is able to return.

"When I first came out here treatment was a lot more heat and not so much ice," said Dodson. "Now it's five percent heat, 95 percent ice."

A FINAL creation in treatment of injures is the student trainer, the high school student in the lockerroom and on the field to help out.

"Of course, a lot of it now is the student trainers are a lot better," said Dodson. "I start working with them in the ninth grade and bring them along. I'd say, I have the finest group of student trainers in the United States."

That isn't too hard to believe considering the background of their mentor. Dodson has an impressive background with three major highlights to his career.

In 1972, Dodson was a trainer for the Olympic Games in Munich. "My primary assingment was with the white water people," said Dodson. "After they were finished, I worked with the boxers, judo people and fencing people."

In 1977 and 1980, Dodson was named Outstanding High School Athletic Trainer in the United States.

Earlier this year, Dodson was named to the National Athletic Trainers Association Hall of Fame.

But, the single-most important thing to Dodson is keeping his "youngsters" healthy. He's dedicated a lifetime to their needs and, in return, has received their gratitude and love.

Witherspoon stops Scaff in 10th round

BIRMINGHAM, England (AP) - Former World Boxing Council heavyweight champion Tim Witherspoon of Philadelphia pounded his way toward a another match with current titlist Pinklon Thomas Saturday by stopping fellow American Slammin' Sammy Scaff in the fourth roubnd of a scheduled 10-rounder.

British referee John Coyle halted the contest in the middle of the fourth round soon after Witherspoon had knocked Scaff down.

Witherspoon, outweighed by 23½ pounds by his 257-pound opponent, said afterwards: "Now I'm ready to take back the title."

The bout was on the undercard of the Azumah Nelson-Pat Cowdell WBC featherweight title fight at Birmingham's national exhibition center.

Olajuwon paces Rockets

HOUSTON (AP) — Akeem Olajuwon pitched in 17 points in his scanty 19 minutes of play Saturday night to lead the Houston Rockets to a 94-88 win over the New York Knicks in preseason play.

Rookie Patrick Ewing led the Knicks with 16, and Rory Sparrow and rookie Gerald Wilkins scored 14 points apiece.

The Rockets outscored New York 15-2 in the final 4:40 of the first quarter to take a 29-21 lead. Mitchell Wiggins scored 12 second-quarter points as Houston increased its lead to 55-42 at the half.

New York pulled to within four, 63-59, at 5:50 in the third quarter after five straight points by Wilkins and a basket by Ewing.

A pair of late baskets from Houston's Robert Reid boosted the Rockets to a 76-67 advantage going into the fourth quarter.

New York was never closer than six in the fourth quarter as Houston improved its preseason record to 4-1. New York is 0-4 in preseason play.

Dorsett within 31 yards of 10,000

Associated Press

IRVING — The Dallas Cowboys' Tony Dorsett needs 31 yards to become the National Football League's sixth 10,000-yard rusher but he's drawn a rough team Sunday — the Pittsburgh Steelers.

In his nine-year career, Dorsett has had 42 games of 100 yards or more but none against the Steelers. The Cowboys have 40 victories in Dorsett's century games.

Dorsett, a native of the Pittsburgh suburb of Aliquippa, Pa., gained 96 yards against Pittsburgh in Super Bowl XIII but the Steelers always set their defenses to stop him.

"We feel you have to try to shut Dorsett off to beat Dallas," said Pittsburgh Coach Chuck Noll. "Stopping the Dallas running game is stopping Tony.

"He has just grown in strength during his career. He has a great sense of running. He may be a little on the small side but talent in the NFL comes in different packages and he has a lot of talent."

Dorsett, who won the Heisman Trophy and led the University of Pittsburgh to a 12-0 national championship season in 1976, has 12,644 career yards. He is the NFL's leading rusher since 1981 with 5,345 yards.

Members of the 10,000-yard club include Walter Payton, Jim Brown, Franco Harris, O.J. Simpson and John Riggins.

The Cowboys plan to stop the game against the Steelers for a brief awards ceremony should Dorsett enter the exclusive club.

"I think that would be worth interrupting the game," said Dallas Coach Tom Landry. "It's quite a milestone."

Dorsett said it would be nice to reach the plateau against the Steelers.

"I have a lot of friends in Pittsburgh," said Dorsett. "That would make it really nice. The Steelers were my heroes while I was growing up."

At 190 pounds, Dorsett was thought to be too small to endure the rigors of the NFL.

"Tony kept himself in good shape and he has always been the type of runner who is a difficult target," said Landry. "It's hard to get a good shot on him."

Dorsett often criticized Landry during the early part of his career because he felt he should carry the ball more.

"I think Coach Landry has used me just about right," said Dorsett. "He didn't burn me out."

The 4-1 Cowboys are four-point favorites over the 2-3 Steelers but Pittsburgh owns a five-game winning streak over the Cowboys. Kickoff is noon with a sellout crowd of 65,000 fans assured.

Dallas hasn't beaten the Steelers since a 17-13 victory in Texas Stadium in 1972.

In the last meeting, Pittsburgh beat the Cowboys 36-28 in 1982, snapping Dallas' NFL record of 17 consecutive opening victories.

Pittsburgh is 12-10 all-time against the Cowboys, including victories in Super Bowls X and XIII.

"The Cowboys are playing very aggressive football right now," said Noll. "They are the Cowboys of old."

Landry said "the Steelers have a dominating defense. They are a very physical team. We'll have to get physical to beat them."

Oliver doubles to up Jays' edge over Royals, 3-1

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — Al Oliver, who has been in the major leagues twice as long as the Toronto Blue Jays, has now led them to within one victory of the World Series.

Oliver once again victimized Kansas City relief ace Dan Quisenberry, lining a pinch-hit, two-run double that capped a three-run rally in the ninth inning Saturday night that led Toronto over the Royals 3-1 and into a commanding 3-1 lead in the American League playoffs.

"The last couple of times I've faced the Quiz, I've been fortunate to find the holes," said Oliver, whose two-out, RBI single off Quisenberry in Game 2 completed a winning, two-run rally in the 10th.

Saturday night's triumph moved Toronto — an expansion team that did not begin playing until 1977 — within one triumph of bringing the first World Series to Canada.

The Blue Jays can wrap up the best-of-seven series Sunday in Game 5. This is the first year of the seven-game playoff format. Only four teams in history have overcome a 3-1 deficit in a best-of-seven World Series.

And once again, Oliver, who began his major-league career in 1968, was the right man for the Blue Jays.

With runners on first and third, Oliver batted for Cliff Johnson and promptly doubled into the right-field corner.

"He's got one of the funniest-looking pitches I've ever seen," Oliver said. "It rises. He threw me a changeup and I was lucky enough to get it over the infield."

The Blue Jays pinned the loss on Charlie Leibrandt, who had pitched a four-hit shuout through eight innings. But Lloyd Moseby's double tied the score and chased Leibrandt and brought in Quisenberry — whose career record in postseason games is just 2-4.

"I expect I can get anybody out if I can get a ground ball," Quisenberry said. "That's what I was trying to do with Oliver."

Tom Henke, who took over for Toronto starter Dave Stieb with two outs in the seventh and finished up with hitless relief, ran into trouble in the ninth when he walked Steve Balboni with one out and pinch-hitter Dane Iorg with two out.

But Henke ended the game by retiring out pinch-hitter Jamie Quirk on a popup to shortstop Tony Fernandez.

Stieb, who beat Leibrandt in Game 1, gave up the only two Kansas City hits.

Stieb and Leibrandt, who had the two best earned run averages in the league this season, had met in Game 1 at Toronto. Stieb, a five-time All-Star won that game with eight shutout innings of three-hit ball, while Leibrandt could not survive the third inning and took the loss.

But this time, on a perfect, 68-degree night at Royals Stadium, a crowd of 41,112 was treated to a brilliant matchup.

Leibrandt used his off-speed pitches to get out of a no-out, second-and-third jam in the second, which came one inning after the hard-throwing Stieb escaped a two-out, second-and-third jam.

Stieb was especially careful when pitching to George Brett, who went 4-for-4 with two home runs in Kansas City's 6-5 victory in Game 3. But Stieb's preoccupation with Brett proved costly.

Stieb had retired seven straight batters before Lonnie Smith led off the sixth by walking on five pitches. Smith then broke for second, and Willie Wilson grounded through the uncovered hole at shortstop for a single that sent Smith to third.

That brought up Brett, who had been intentionally walked in the first. Once again, Stieb intentionally walked Brett, loading the bases.

But, after throwing two strikes to Hal McRae, Stieb suddenly faltered and threw four straight balls, forcing home Smith. On ball four, a pitch just off the outside corner, Stieb bent over, scooped a handful of dirt from the pitcher's mound and threw it.

Stieb managed to avoid further trouble by getting Pat Sheridan on a popup and inducing Frank White to ground into a double play.

Leibrandt, acquired from Cincinnati midway through the 1983 season for pitcher Bob Tufts after being unable to achieve success with the Reds, was masterful until the ninth.

He had trouble in the second when Johnson led off with a walk and Jesse Barfield followed with a grounder just inside the third-base line for a double. But Leibrandt was equal to the task, getting Willie Upshaw and Iorg on short fly balls and ending the inning by retiring Ernie Whitt on a grounder back to the mound.

Leibrandt helped himself throughout the night with his pitching and fielding. He set AL playoff records with eight chances and five assists.

Bob Stieb and Leibrandt escaped early jams before settling into grooves that gave each one-hitters through five innings.

Stieb had a problem in the first when leadoff batter Smith walked on five pitches and took second on a sacrifice by Wilson.

That brought up Brett, and Stieb and the Blue Jays were determined not to let Kansas City's one-man wrecking crew ruin them for a second straight night. Stieb threw Brett four straight outside pitches, with just one of them catching the corner for a strike, before going ahead and giving him an intentional walk.

An infield out by McRae moved the runners to second and third, but Stieb got out of it retiring Sheridan on a fly to center.

Terry Pendleton followed by slashing a hard grounder between first and second, where Steve Sax made a diving stop and threw him out. But McGee crossed on the play, and the Cardinals led by two.

Before he got out of a nightmare inning, Welch also walked Darrell Porter intentionally. The final toll: 32 pitches, four walks, one hit and a lot of aggravation.

It didn't subside in the second inning, either. Cox struck out, but Coleman singled to right, and the chase was on again. This time, he headed for second base and Scioscia again called a pitchout. It worked, and Coleman stopped about 30 feet toward second, as Scioscia came out from behind the plate with the ball looking for his play. He hesitated, then fired to first, but the throw was low and wide and shot into right field.

Coleman, who takes two bases on such things, took two bases again. Then McGee singled past Greg Brock at first base, and the Cardinals led by three.

They pressed their luck a bit when McGee tried to steal second and was thrown out. But Welch by now was in tatters. He went to 3 and 2 on Herr, who hit the next pitch over the right-field fence, and the Cardinals led by four.

By the time Rick Honeycutt replaced him with two down in the third, Welch had tied a negative record: six walks (three of them intentional), matching the playoff record for wildness set in 1974 by Bruce Kison of the Pittsburgh Pirates. He also had thrown 83 pitches in 2//Z innings, 42 of which were called balls.

The Dodgers, having wasted a chance in the first inning, didn't get another until the fourth. Then Pedro Guerrero led with a double to left, and Mike Marshall followed by bouncing a double off the synthetic turf into the seats in center field. That made it 4-1.

In the seventh, the Dodgers nudged home another run as Ken Landreaux singled home Steve Sax to make the score 4-2.

Boilers get best of aerial battle with slumping Illini

Associated Press

WEST LAFAYETTE, Ind. — Quarterback Jim Everett passed for a career-high 464 yards and four touchdowns Saturday, winning an aerial battle with Illinois' Jack Trudeau and leading the Boilermakers to a 30-24 Big Ten Conference football victory.

The two quarterbacks combined for 66 completions in 113 attempts for 877 yards and seven touchdowns. Trudeau, who set Illinois career records for total offense and passing, hit 39 of 66 passes for 413 yards, but he missed four straight in the closing seconds as the Illini threatened from the Purdue 14.

The Boilermakers ran out the clock to even their Big Ten mark at 1-1 and raise their overall record to 3-2. Illinois fell to 1-1 and 2-3.

Everett's passing total was 52 yards short of the Purdue single-game record of 516 set by Scott Campbell against Ohio State in 1981. He completed 27 of 47 attempts.

Everett, a fifth-year senior, passed for 208 yards in the second quarter and another 123 in the third period as the Boilermakers took a 23-17 lead. Purdue widened it to 30-17 with an 18-yard touchdown pass from Everett to Steve Griffin and seemed to have the game under control after stopping Illinois on downs at the Boilermakers' 13.

But the Illini forced a Purdue punt, then Trudeau guided a 72-yard scoring drive and hit David Williams on a 5-yard touchdown pass to pull the Illinois to 30-24. It was the third touchdown reception of the game for Williams, who set a school record with 16 catches for 164 yards for the game.

Iowa St. 22, Kansas 21

AMES, Iowa — Don Poprilo scored touchdowns on his only two carries of the game, including the game-winner from 3 yards out with 2 minutes, 45 minutes left to lift Iowa State over Kansas in a Big Eight Conference opener.

Poprilo's second touchdown capped a 10-play, 74-yard drive that began after Kansas fullback Mark Henderson fumbled and Bill Berthusen recovered for Iowa State at his own 26.

Iowa State quarterback Alex Espinoza, whose starting job had been in jeopardy earlier in the week because of poor play, then completed three of five passes for 53 yards to move the Cyclones into scoring position. The big play was a 36-yarder to tight end Jeff Wodka that put the ball on the Kansas 23.

Wodka was double covered, but he caught the ball after it was deflected by Kansas defensive back Milt Garner. Completions of 9 and 8 yards to Wodka moved the ball to the 3 and on the next play, Poprilo bounced off the left side of the line and rolled into the end zone.

Minnesota 21, Northwestern 10

EVANSTON, Ill. — Rickey Foggie hurled touchdown passes of 61 yards to Kevin Starks and 17 yards to Valdez Baylor and the Minnesota Gophers spoiled Northwestern's homecoming in a Big Ten game.

Minnesota, playing its first game away from home and outdoors, hiked its record to 4-1 overall and 2-0 in the conference. Northwestern fell to 2-3 and 0-2 in the Big Ten.

Foggie's passes set up a pair of first quarter field goals by Chip Lomiller before the sophomore quarterback connected with his 17-yard touchdown pass to Baylor for a 14-0 lead in the second quarter.

On the fifth play of the second half, Foggie hurled his 61-yard bomb to Starks for a 21-3 lead.

Pittsburgh 24, N. Carolina St. 10

PITTSBURGH — Brian Davis ran 23 yards for the deciding touchdown early in the fourth quarter and Charles Gladman ignited Pittsburgh's sputtering offense with 176 yards as the Panthers rallied to defeat North Carolina State 24-10 Saturday in college football.

With the score tied 10-10, Davis ran into the end zone untouched on his first carry of the game with 13:44 remaining to play, following Teryl Austin's 19-yard punt return.

North Carolina State quarterback Erik Kramer fumbled after being belted by Pitt's Bob Buczkowski on the Wolfpack's next possession, with defensive end Tony Woods falling on the ball in the end zone with 9:01 to play, to make it 24-10.

Temple 14, Rutgers 13

PHILADELPHIA — A 13-yard touchdown pass from Lee Saltz to wide receiver Willie Marshall and Bill Wright's extra point kick with 1:57 left in the game gave Temple a Homecoming Day victory over winless Rutgers.

Temple had two crucial interceptions late in the game.

Army 45, Boston College 14

WEST POINT, N.Y. — Sophomore quarterback Tory Crawford, starting in place of injured Rob Healy, and halfback Clarence Jones each rushed for three touchdowns as unbeaten Army steamrolled Boston College.

The Cadets, 5-0 and winners of their last eight, amassed 505 yards on 79 carries with its potent wishbone running attack. Boston College continued its string of win one, lose one and dropped to 3-4.

Colorado 38, Missouri 7

BOULDER, Colo. — Sophomore quarterback Mark Hatcher rushed for 151 yards and three touchdowns and passed for another score, and linebacker Darin Schubeck keyed a defensive surge as Colorado overpowered winless Missouri in the Big Eight Conference football opener for both teams.

The Buffaloes, beating Missouri for the first time since 1978, raised their record to 4-1, while the Tigers fell to 0-5.

Colorado exploded for 17 points in the first four minutes of the second quarter to take a 24-0 advantage.

Kentucky 33, Mississippi St. 19

LEXINGTON, Ky. — Mark Higgs and Mark Logan scored two touchdowns apiece and each rushed for over 100 yards to power Kentucky over Mississippi State in a Southeastern Conference game.

Kentucky won its fourth straight game to improve to 4-1 overall and 1-0 in the conference. Mississippi State fell to 4-2 and 0-2.

Higgs finished with 125 yards on 19 carries while Logan had 35 rushes for 115 yards. Quarterback Kevin Dooley completed 16 of 31 passes for 261 yards and was intercepted twice.

N. Carolina 34, Wake Forest 14

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. — Kevin Anthony passed for a school record five touchdowns — three to flanker Earl Winfield — as North Carolina whipped Wake Forest in an Atlantic Coast Conference game.

Anthony teamed up with Winfield on touchdown passes of 11, 26 and 2 yards and tossed scoring passes of 6 and 34 yards to split end Eric Streater as the Tar Heels grabbed a 34-0 halftime lead en route to the school's 500th victory.

Clemson 27, Virginia 24

CLEMSON, S.C. — Stacey Driver rushed for 121 yards and Kenny Flowers added 111 more as Clemson defeated Virginia before 78,000 fans in Death Valley.

Clemson had won the past 24 matchups and Virginia was looking for its first win against the Tigers.

Virginia fell to 3-2 overall and 2-1 in the Atlantic Coast Conference with the loss, while Clemson is now 2-3 and 1-1 in the conference.

The lead changed four times, but Clemson got on the board last with 13:45 left in the game.

UCLA 34, Stanford 9

STANFORD, Calif. — Scoring touchdowns on three big plays — a blocked punt, quarterback David Norrie's 51-yard bomb to Willie Anderson and James Primus' 40-yard run — UCLA romped to a 34-9 victory Saturday over Stanford.

The Bruins, 2-1 in the Pacific 10 and 4-1-1 overall, handed Stanford its fourth straight loss, leaving the Cardinal at 0-2 in the league and 1-4 overall.

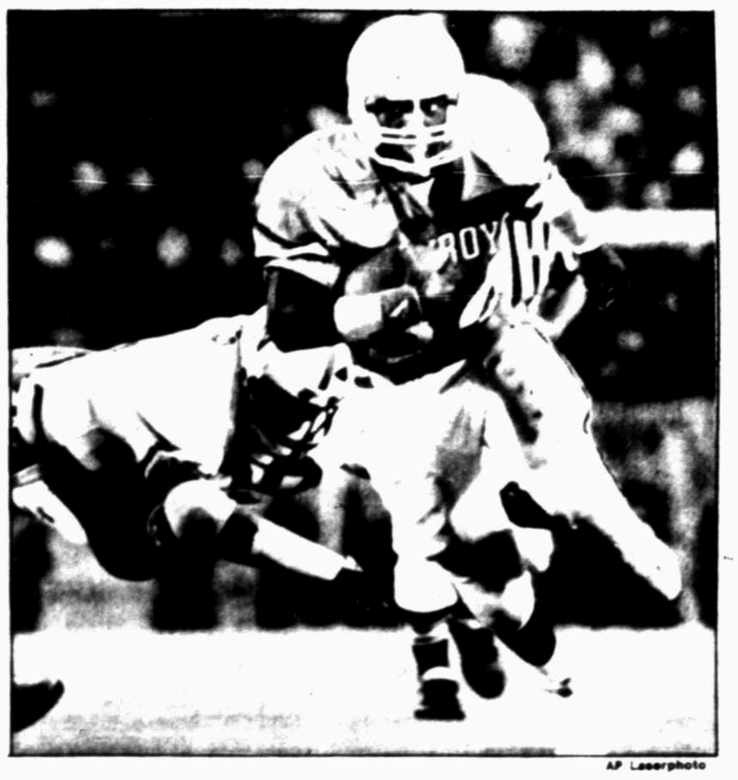

Primus, who also ran three yards for UCLA's final TD with 3:33 left, broke open the game with a 40-yard TD run that gave UCLA a 27-9 lead with 4:40 left in the third quarter.

Norrie's 51-yarder to Anderson put UCLA ahead 20-9 midway in the third quarter after Stanford had pulled to within four, 13-9.

Washington 28, California 12

BERKELEY, Calif. — Washington scored two quick early touchdowns after California turnovers, and quarterback Hugh Millen roused the sluggish Husky offense for a decisive 79-yard fourth-quarter drive in a Pacific-10 football victory.

Washington, 4-2 and 3-0 in the Pac-10, took a 14-3 lead by scoring twice in a little over two minutes midway through the first quarter, then was virtually shut down for two periods while the Bears rallied.

Angry 'Cats bounce back against Rebs

From Staff Reports

The season continues to be a struggle for both Midland's volleyball teams, and Saturday's District 4-5A contests turned out to be no different for coaches Janice Baulch of Midland Lee and Sonja Pittman of Midland High.

Facing the toughest two teams in the district, both Midland High and Midland Lee fell in straight games, falling farther behind in the district title chase.

The Rebels played host to longtime district power, the second-place San Angelo Bobcats and were looking to pull off a major upset. The 'Cats, stinging from Tuesday's loss to Big Spring, were in no mood for upsets, however.

THE HOME court advantage didn't do the Rebels much good as Lee fell in straight games to San Angelo 15-7, 15-9, to fall to 1-7 in district, 6-17 overall.

The Bulldogs, after outdueling Lee on Tuesday for bragging rights in the Tall City, went to Big Spring to tackle the first place Steers. But Pittman and MHS returned home faring no better than the rest of the district has against the 8-0 Big Spring powerhouse this season. MHS fell 15-11 and 15-9 to lower their marks to 3-5, 9-13.

SAN ANGELO'S Lisa Eubanks served for nine straight points in first game to pace the Bobcats and the Rebels never took the lead in the second game.

The Rebel JV squad also fell in straight games to the Bobcats.

The Bulldogs' junior varsity squad did emerge victorious, taking a two-game match from Big Spring winning the first game 16-14 and cruising to the second, 15-6. MHS JV is now 6-2 in district and 18-6 overall. With six games remaining on the district schedule, both teams hope to regroup and play the role of the spoiler in the district playoff chase. Lee will get a chance to knock off the high-flying Big Spring team on Oct. 22, while MHS gets its shot at San Angelo on the same date.

Meanwhile, Lee travels to Abilene Cooper Tuesday for a contest with the Eagles, while MHS hosts Abilene High with the junior varsity game beginning at 6:30 p.m. with the varsity to follow.

Jerry Mennenga/Reporter-Telegram

Lee senior Ann Del Llano goes down to her knees to save a spike. The Rebels fell Saturday to the San Angelo Bobcats in straight games to leave their district 4-5A record at 1-7. Midland High also lost to Big Spring in two games.

BOWLING BEAT

Conley tops charts at Fairmont Park

By RANDY ISENBERG

Guy Conley's 672 series on games of 228-203-241 paced men bowlers at Fairmont Park Lanes and Monica Elger paced the women with a 218 game and 572 series

On Sept. 20, in the Bowl-A-Gans Mixed League at Fairmont Park, Debbie Tilley rolled a 212 game and 605 series. Leaders at Dellwood Lanes were Frank Woodard for the men with a 267 gmae and 657 series, and Rosie Urias for the women with a 218 game and 615 series.

Other bowlers turned in fine performances during the week. Among them were: Christy Scribner 241 game on a 141 average; Denise Morton with a 126 average, a 211 game and 500 series.

Youth bowler Jeff Jordan celebrated his 15th bowler with a 285 pacesetting game en route to a four game set fo 930 during the Wedensday afternoon youth practice session. Jeff's other scores were, 244, 204, 197. Jeff bowls in the Dellwood Youth League. Cory Sprague is the coach.

JON WHITE, 16-years-old, is sporting an average of 179 at Dellwood in the Jr., Sr., Youth League and he rolled a game of 206 en route to a 559 series. Sixteen-year-old Sean Woodard was not far behind with a 217 game and 554 series.

IN the Fairmont Park youth program Reid London roled a 233 game and 556 series, and Marc Minegar rolled an all spare game.

Dave Kelly was the winner of the first Fall Pin Point Bowling telecast. Pin Point Bowling is taped every Saturday afternoon at Dellwood Lanes at 3 p.m. The Oct. 19th taping will be conducted at Fairmont Park. Dellwood will the host for the Special Olympics regional bowling tournament on that date.

The next World Class Bowling Centers Singles tournament is at Dellwood Lanes, Oct. 25-27. This week's tournament is being conducted at Fairmont Park Lanes through Oct. 13.

Mustangs blow early lead, lose game

From Staff Reports

Midland Christian's six-man football team jumped out to an early lead Saturday, but watched as Lohn scored four unanswered touchdowns late in the game to take a 42-27 victory.

Lohn moved to 4-1, while the Mustangs are 3-3.

Midland Christian scored first a touchdown on a six-yard run by Robert Willoughby but the point after was blocked. The Mustangs went up 14-0 on a one-yard pass from Danny Sartain to Tony Corona and a two-point kick by Willoughby.

Lohn bounced back to tie the score at 14 with a pair of long runs by William Covington, one for 60 yards and the other for 64.

Midland Christian came back with two scores, the first in the second quarter on an 8-yard run by Corona er to go up 20-14 at the half. MC came out strong again after intermission with a 19-yard TD pass from Sartain to Corona, the run was good to make it 27-14. But the Mustangs couldn't find the end zone again.

Lohn dominated after that, scoring four unanswered touchdowns to run up the final score.

Willoughby led the way with 20 tackles on defense, while Covington scored four of six TDs for Lohn. Quarterback Sartain was 17-31 for 169 yards in the air, while Corona went 7-10 for 64 yards. MC travels to Novice next week.

Purple beats up Gold; Lee teams split

From Staff Reports

Midland Lee's ninth grade teams split a pair of games over the weekend, while it was the Midland Purple team outpointing its brother squad Midland Gold, 27-7.

Midland Purple is 3-2, Gold is 1-4.

Lee's White team beat Crockett 37-7 to go to 3-2 on the season, while Lee Maroon fell to Bonham 19-8 and dropped to 2-3. Other action had Nimitz beating Ector, 22-6 and Hood beating Bowie, 28-12.

In the eighth grade Midland-Odessa Conference, it was Alamo 28-0 over San Jacinto to remain undefeated at 4-0-1. San Jacinto is 1-3. Other scores are Ecotr over Hood, 13-12, Bonham over Bowie 26-6 and Nimitz over Crockett, 22-13.

IN THE eighth grade City Conference, it was Alamo and Trinity fighting it out to a 0-0 tie to remain tied atop the conference at 2-0-1. In the other game, it was Goddard, 1-2, winning it first game against San Jacinto, 0-3.

Seventh grade action in the American Conference saw Goddard Red move to 3-1 with a 22-16 win over Alamo Grey, 1-3. San Jacinto Green, 3-1, whipped Goddard White 36-0. Goddard White is 2-2. Alamo Scarlet went to 3-1 with a 26-6 win over San Jacinto White, now 0-4.

In seventh grade National Conference results, Goddard White beat San Jacinto Green 18-6 to go to 3-1 while Green fell to 1-3. Goddard Red, now 2-2, handed Alamo Grey its first loss, 8-6.

Chap teammates square off in tennis final

From Staff Reports

ABILENE — The Rolex Southwest Collegiate Tennis Championship came down to a pair of Midland College players Saturday in the championship game with the winner receiving an all-expense paid trip to Florida to represent small colleges in the national tournaemnt.

Chaparral Mike Oosterveen ended up winning the title, defeating teammate Jean Roussel in three sets, 2-6, 6-4, 6-4.

Oosterveen moved into the finals with a victory over No. 1 seed Ter-Ola Anderson of UT Tyler, 4-6, 6-4, 6-3 while Roussel defeated UT Tyler's Danny Hovey, 6-1, 6-0 in the semifinals.

Oosterveen will represent Midland in the small college tournament in Fort Meyers, Fla. in December at the ITCA National Championships. on the University of Texas-El Paso and University of New Mexico at UTEP. The men will have the weekend off and both men and women will resume play on Oct. 26-27 in a tournament in Odessa.

CSU pounds New Mexico, 45-28

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. (AP) — Tough and durable fullback Steve Bartalo rushed for 152 yards and three touchdowns Saturday night to pace Colorado State to a 45-28 Western Athletic Conference football rout of defenseless New Mexico.

Bartalo, the Rams' 197-pound ground machine, wore down New Mexico's generous defense and scored on three short runs inside the 2-yard line.

A walkon at CSU three years ago, Bartalo tied the conference single game record with 47 carries set by New Mexico's Mike Williams in 1977.

The victory snapped a three-game losing streak for CSU, now 2-5 overall and 2-2 in the WAC. New Mexico, which has given up 132 points in three straight losses, dropped to 1-4 overall and 0-2 in the WAC.

CSU quarterback Kelly Stouffer threw for a trio of TDs, hitting wide receiver J.D. Brookhart with a 16-yard scoring pass, senior Dan Hammerschmidt with an 11-yarder and junior David Harris with a 38-yarder. Kicker Steve DeLine added a 27-yard field goal.

New Mexico, whose offense couldn't offset the defense's inability to stop the Rams, scored twice in the fourth quarter within two minutes, after the Rams had built a 38-14 advantage.

Senior halfback Willie Turral scored three touchdowns for New Mexico and backup quarterback Ned James, the catalyst of the final period New Mexico bid, added a 12-yard scoring jaunt.

Hawaii 26, Wyoming 18

LARAMIE, Wyo. — Nuu Faaola ran for 87 yards and two touchdowns Saturday as Hawaii won its first game this season with a Western Athletic Conference victory over Wyoming.

Hawaii, 1-3-1 overall and 1-1 in the conference, scored first on a six-yard run by Faaola on the team's first possession but missed the conversion as Wyoming intercepted a Greg Tipton pass.

Wisconsin makes Hawks work for it

Associated Press

MADISON, Wis. — Chuck Long threw for a touchdown and Ronnie Harmon ran in another to lead the top-ranked Iowa Hawkeyes to a 23-13 hard-fought victory over the Wisconsin Badgers in Big Ten action Saturday.

It was the fifth win this season for the undefeated Hawkeyes and gave them a 2-0 conference record. The Badgers fell to 3-2 on the season and 0-2 in Big Ten play. The game looked like an easy Iowa victory until Wisconsin Coach Dave McClain yanked starting quarterback Mike Howard and substituted Bud Keyes for the second half. 1

Keyes, aided by some offensive errors by the Hawkeyes, twice led Wisconsin to within three points of Iowa in the third quarter.

But a 12-yard touchdown run by Iowa running back Harmon and a 35-yard field goal by Robb Houghtlin in the fourth quarter put the Hawkeyes out of the Badgers' reach.

Michigan 31, Michigan St. 0

EAST LANSING, Mich. — Michigan quarterback Jim Harbaugh threw a touchdown pass and defensive back Ed Hood scored after a blocked punt within the first 4:01 of the game as the third-ranked Wolverines beat rival Michigan State.

The victory left the Wolverines unbeaten at 5-0 for the season and 2-0 in the Big Ten Conference, while the Spartans slipped to 2-3 and 0-2. The hard-hitting game was dominated by the defenses. Michigan State was forced into four turnovers, all of 3

Auburn 59, Florida State 27

AUBURN, Ala. — Bo Jackson reeled off touchdown runs of 53 and 35 yards and Auburn turned two interceptions into fourth-quarter scores as the 12th-ranked Tigers routed No. 4 Florida State.

The victory by Auburn, which posted 28 points in the final quarter with the help of the two interceptions and a fumble, left each team with a 4-1 record. Jackson put Auburn ahead 7-0 with his 53-yard burst less than two minutes into the game, then gave the Tigers a 31-17 advantage in the third quarter with his 35-yard TD dash. 4

Florida State quarterback Eric Thomas rallied the Seminoles with a fourth down, 48-yard pass to Hassan Jones, setting up a score that closed the gap to 31-24 late in the third quarter.

Top 20

Nebraska 34, Okla. St. 24

STILLWATER, Okla. — Quarterback McCathorn Clayton ran for two touchdowns and passed for another, and tailback Doug DuBose rushed for 139 yards as No. 9 Nebraska beat fifth-ranked Oklahoma State in Big Eight action.

Clayton completed 8 of 16 passes for 161 yards as the Cornhuskers improved to 4-1, 1-0 in the league. Oklahoma State dropped to 4-1 and 0-1. The victory was the Cornhuskers' 24th straight over Oklahoma State. 5

Clayton scored on runs of 1 and 7 yards, and had a 38-yard TD pass to Robb Schnitzler.

The Cornhuskers grabbed a 20-3 third-quarter lead and then held on as Oklahoma State scored 14 straight third-quarter points to make the score 20-17.

Florida 17, Tennessee 10

GAINESVILLE, Fla. — Neal Anderson rambled for two touchdowns as seventh-ranked Florida defeated No. 14 Tennessee in a Southeastern Conference game.

Anderson's scoring runs of 9 yards and 1 yard came in the third quarter on drives of 49 and 38 yards, following punts of only 32 and 31 yards by Tennessee's Bob Garmon. Anderson finished with 160 yards on 29 carries. 7

Florida had a 17-3 lead, before the Vols scored early in the final quarter and had one more shot before stalling midway through the period.

The victory gave the Gators a 4-0-1 record, including 3-0 in the SEC, but Florida is ineligible to win the conference race because it is on NCAA probation.

Tennessee fell to 2-1-1 and 1-1 in becoming Florida's eighth consecutive victim in SEC play. The Gators are undefeated in their last 15 games, the longest streak in the NCAA.

The game drew a record crowd for Florida Field of 74,432.

Penn State 19, Alabama 17

STATE COLLEGE, Pa. — Massimo Manca's four field goals triggered Penn State's Nittany Lions over the Alabama Crimson Tide in a defensive struggle of the Top Ten teams.

Manca kicked field goals of 38, 44, 50 and 20 yards to give unbeaten No. 8 Penn State its fifth win of the season. Manca's longest was 53 yards last week in Penn State's 17-10 victory over Rutgers. He missed on two attempts Saturday. 8

Tenth-rated Alabama, losing its first after four victories, held the lead just once, in the first period on a 19-yard touchdown pass from quarterback Mike Shula to flanker Al Bell.

Penn State, which held in check an Alabama offense that had scored 85 points in its last two games, took the lead for good 2:33 into the third period on a 50-yard field goal by Manca.

Brigham Young 28, San Diego St. 0

PROVO, Utah — Robbie Bosco threw for two touchdowns and ran for a third as 11th-ranked Brigham Young rolled over San Diego State in a Western Athletic Conference game.

Bosco thrilled a homecoming crowd of 65,407 by throwing scoring passes of 13 and 20 yards and completed 25 of 37 passes for 257 yards as the Cougars boosted their season record to 5-1, 2-0 in the WAC. 11

Air Force 24, Navy 7

ANNAPOLIS, Md. — Quarterback Bart Weiss set up two touchdowns with passes of 60 and 53 yards and engineered a 44-yard scoring drive on the ground as unbeaten and 13th-ranked Air Force defeated Navy.

The Midshipmen held the Falcons' potent Wishbone attack to their lowest point total of the year, but the offense managed only a third-quarter touchdown on a 15-yard pass from quarterback Bill Byrne to tight end John Sniffen. 13

Air Force did not get a first down in the first quarter and was mired deep in its end of the field early in the second period when Weiss connected on a 60-yard toss to wide receiver Ken Carpenter. Two plays later, fullback Johnny Smith raced untouched into the end zone from the 3-yard line.

Ohio State 48, Indiana 7

COLUMBUS, Ohio — Tailback John Wooldridge scored four first-half touchdowns as 15th-ranked Ohio State defeated Indiana, handing the Hoosiers their first loss of the season.

Wooldridge gained 104 yards rushing on 20 carries and ran for scores of 1, 4 and 7 yards as the Buckeyes moved to 4-1 on the year. The 5-foot-11, 197-yard junior also caught three passes for 35 yards and another TD. Ohio State tailback Keith Byars, still recovering from a broken foot, was in uniform but did not play. 15

Quarterback Jim Karsatos completed 8 of 14 passes for 156 yards and two TDs for the Buckeyes before leaving the game early in the third quarter.

Georgia 49, Mississippi 21

JACKSON, Miss. — Scrambling sophomore quarterback James Jackson ran for three touchdowns — including two in a 21-point third quarter — as the Georgia Bulldogs rolled over Mississippi in a Southeastern Conference football contest.

Leading 14-7 at halftime, 18th-ranked Georgia, 4-1, scored on three of its first four possessions in the third quarter to jump to a 35-7 lead. Jackson ran five yards for one touchdown and 27 for another in the quarter. Jackson's 20-yard touchdown run with 1:13 left in the second quarter broke a 7-7 tie, and his 55-yard completion to Stanley Blalock set up a fourth quarter touchdown. 18

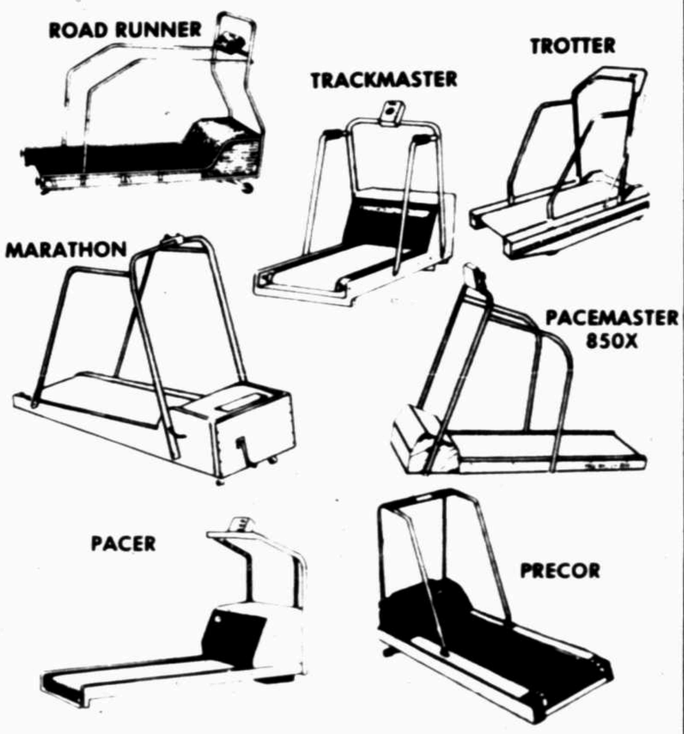

LSU 49, Vanderbilt 7

NASHVILLE, Tenn. — Tailback Garry James scored three touchdowns and rambled for 63 yards to become the No. 5 rusher in LSU history as he led the No. 20 Tigers to a Southeastern Conference victory over Vanderbilt.

The win boosted LSU's record to 3-1 overall and 1-1 in the SEC, while Vanderbilt fell to 2-4 and 0-2. LSU cornerback Norman Jefferson started the Tiger runaway when he stepped in front of a John Gromos pass at the Vanderbilt 26 on the game's first play from scrimmage and ran untouched into the end zone to get the Tigers on the scoreboard with 14:52 still on the first-quarter clock. 20

Make no mistake, Aggies for real

By KEN HERMAN
Associated Press Writer

COLLEGE STATION — Texas A&M Coach Jackie Sherrill said his Aggies made a "lot of mistakes" in Saturday's win over Houston.

Fortunately for the Aggies, they got the mistakes out of the way in the first quarter and went on to a 43-16 Southwest Conference football rout of the Cougars.

"Considering the adversity we had early in the game, I was pleased with the way we responded and bounced back," Sherrill said. "In the first part of the game, we made a lot of mistakes."

THE BIGGEST miscue was a fumbled lateral when quarterback Kevin Murray did not connect with Roger Vick. Murray chased it into his own end zone and batted it out for a safety, stretching the Cougar lead to 9-0.

It was all Aggies after that as A&M raised its overall record to 4-1 and 2-0 in conference. Houston is 1-4 and 0-2.

The game turned around after a fumble by Houston running back Michael Simmons in the first quarter. The Aggies recovered on their own 4-yard line as Houston threatened to build a 16-0 lead.

"When we recovered the fumble in the first quarter, it gave us some confidence," said Sherrill.

Jimmie Hawkins piled up 151 yards on returns and scored on an interception in the rout. Houston built a 9-0 first-quarter lead, then crumbled after a fumble deep in Aggie territory.

HOUSTON SCORED on a game-opening 62-yard drive and added a safety on an A&M miscue. The Cougar scoring drive was kept alive by quarterback Gerald Landry's fourth-down, 11-yard pass to Mat Pierson at the Aggie 4-yard-line. Michael Simmons carried it in on the next play.

On the Aggies' third offensive play, Murray hit Vick in the shoulder pads at the A&M 15 with an overhand lateral which resulted in the safety.

After the Aggie free kick, Landry drove the Cougars toward another score. But A&M safety Kip Corrington fell on Simmons' fumble on the Aggie 10.

A&M dominated after that, building a 17-9 halftime lead. Houston had 93 yards total offense in the first quarter, but minus 2 in the second.

Early in the second quarter, running back Ira Valentine scored from the 1 to cap a 16-yard Aggie drive sparked by Alex Morris' 34-yard punt return. Eric Franklin's 41-yard field goal with 2:56 to go in the first half gave A&M a 10-9 lead.

Owls snap SWC skid at Frogs' expense

Associated Press

HOUSTON — Rice quarterback Mark Comalander's four-touchdown performance should have earned him the game ball in a 34-27 victory over Texas Christian Saturday that ended the Owls' record string of 26 consecutive Southwest Conference losses.

But he may have to share it with the Owls' defense.

After Comalander propelled the Owls into a commanding fourth quarter lead, it took a gutsy goalline stand by the Owl defense with 57 seconds left in the game to presevere the historic victory.

"Everything we do, we try to make exciting," Rice Coach Watson Brown said. "Down on the goalline when we had to flat stop 'em, and they knew on that last fourth down play that they had to make that play, we proved we weren't dead."

TCU FRESHMAN quarterback David Rascoe, subbing for injured Scott Ankrom, threw two fourth quarter touchdown passes to pull the Frogs within seven point before the Owls' big defensive stand.

"Geez-oh Pete, I guess it can't get any worse," TCU Coach Jim Wacker said.

"Our kids fought out there today, though and never gave up. We had lots of people who had their best games today.

"I'm danged proud of Rice University and Watson Brown. they really deserved to win this football game today. They did a heck of a job of changing things up on us today."

The Owls, who had not won a league game since beating Baylor 17-14 on Nov. 14, 1981, took a 17-7 halftime lead on Comalander's touchdown strikes of seven yards to Kenny Major and 63 yards to Marc Scott and a 25-yard field goal by James Hamrick.

THE OWLS, 2-4, earlier this season broke an 11-game losing streak with a victory over Lamar. At the time it was the longest major college losing streak in the nation.

TCU's Ken Ozee kicked field goals of 25, 23, and 33 yards, including two in the second half to rally the Frogs to a 17-13 deficit.

After Ozee's 41-yarder, Comalander drove the Owls 77 yards in eight plays and ran three yards late in the third quarter and James Hamrick added a 41-yard field goal.

Rascoe hit Keith Burnett with a 73-yard touchdown bomb with 11:27 left in the game three 35 yards to Ricky Stone with 6:54 to go.

Comalander's third TD was a six-yard touchdown strike to Darrell Goolsby with 7:44 to play.

TCU, 2-3, dropped to an 0-3 record in SWC games. Rice is 1-1.

STEPHON HOWLAND gave TCU the early lead with a 58-yard touchdown run on the Frog's third play of the game.

Howland broke loose from a tackle attempt by Rice's Doug Adams at the line of scrimmage, cut back to mkdfield and raced untouched into the end zone on his touchdown run.

Howland had 100 yards rushing on his first three carries of the game.

BEARS

The Ponies' Reggie Dupard turned right end and reached the five only to fumble. Baulor end Eugene Hall recovered for the Bears at the one.

"We drove out from the one," said Teaff, "and even though we lost the ball at midfield on a fumble that drive was important."

Teaff summarized, "We were hurt immensely by penalties, but we withstood the best offense in the Southwest Conference. They really hammer you and they bled us pretty good with that drive in the third period, but we didn't let them break the long one."

Baylor's strategy was to run Muecke more and throw to the outside. It paid off in setting up a field goal, the touchdown pass to Ralph Stockmer and on the two point conversion pass from Muecke to Derrick McAdoo.

SMU Coach Bobby Collins wasn't sure how his charges would react for Houston next week. "After two losses in a row, it's hard to tell how your kids will react. We're not making the big plays. Still overall I thought we played well enough to win. You've got to give Baylor credit."

TECH

IT WAS all Arkansas from there on in as defensive end Carl Bradford tackled Tech's Ansel Cole in the end zone for a safety after a Greg Horne punt had put the Raiders in a hole at their own one.

Then Arkansas rolled. Horne missed a 48-yard field goal attempt, but the Hogs came back with a 72-yard, 11-play drive with Derrick Thomas getting the final yard for a 23-7 lead. And Arkansas followed that with a 49-yard, 3-play drive behind backup quarterback Mark Calcagni with Sammy Van Dyke getting the final six and the final 30-7 margin.

"I couldn't be prouder of our football team. They fought all the way to the end," said Arkansas coach Ken Hatfield. "Tech was an underdog, fighting its heart out. Tech deserves better than thefinal score. It was really a seven-point game."

Up until Dudley's big sack of Keesee, Arkansas was struggling against Tech. The Razorbacks held a meager 7-0 lead at the half and those points came on the third play of the game when Keesee tossed an air ball interception to Kevin Wyatt, who returned it 35 yards for a touchdown.

Arkansas took a 14-0 lead on its first possession of the third period when James Rouse, who was the game's leading rusher with 125 yards on 14 carries, busted the Tech defense for a 34-yard scoring romp.

While the Tech defense was playing the game of the year, the Red Raider offense didn't get into Arkansas territory until the 11:23 mark of the third period. That's when Tech marched 80 yards for its only score as Keesee connected with freshman Wayne Walker for a 25-yard TD pass that was off the hands of Arkansas defender Kevin Anderson.

Walker caught three passes for 67 yards on that drive and former Midland Lee star Isaac Garnett added a big 11-yard gain. For the third time this year, Garnett led all Tech rushers, but had only 49 yards on 14 carries.

"I believe I played about 55 percent of what I can do," said Garnett. "I'm disappointed in myself. We had one or two breakdowns that were costly. We had them down and let them up."

TECH CAME back on its next possession to march to the Arkansas seven when things turned sour. Some gutsy play calling saw the Raiders convert two fourth down plays into first downs.

On fourth and eight at the Tech 49, junior reserve Roland Mitchell of Bay City took a short snap in punt formation and turned it into an 18-yard gain. Keesee later converted a fourth down sneak into a first at the Hog seven before meeting Mr. Dudley in the disaster of the night.

"The kids played hard, but the game just got away from us," said Tech coach Jerry Moore. "We've got five games left and we can't lose sight of the goals we set at the beginning of the year. If we don't give up we will be alright."

The rest of the nightmare - or reality - left Tech at 3-3 on the season and 0-3 in Southwest Conference while Arkansas can now start singing the "Eyes of Texas" with a 5-0 season start and a 2-0 conference reading. The Longhorns loom next.

Arkansas has now won 13 of the 14 games between the two teams at Jones Stadium. Tech has not beaten Arkansas here since 1966.

There is no race left for Texas Tech, but a Red Raider fan leaving Jones Stadium still found reason for optimism. "The way I see it there are two positive things about tonight. First, we didn't have to decide to go for one or two points and we have Rice at home next week. Either way, there's hope."

HORNS

Through it all, Texas was still tied going into the fourth period. Aiken slid left, faked inside, drew an outside commitment from the end and pitched to Collins, who escaped a covey of orange jersies and tiptoed along the sidelines for 45 yards and the TD with 12:25 left in the game. "We didn't have a break down on the play. It was just executed perfectly," said Akers, "They got a block on our safety and our corner couldn't get over to cut him off."

Still, there was plenty of time for a come back...but not the way the Sooners were playing defense.

Aiken was 4-of-9 for 69 yards and rushed for another 52, but he directed the Sooners' beautifully. Carr's 85 yards led OU while Odessa's Charles Hunter was the top UT rusher with KENT, Ohio — Eric Wilkerson rushed for 123 yards and two touchdowns, both of the scores coming during a 28-point third quarter as Kent State broke open a close game and went on to defeat Texas-El Paso 51-24 Saturday in a nonconference college football game.

Kent State, 2-3, celebrated its homecoming by rolling up 302 yards rushing and 291 yards passing against winless Texas-El Paso, which fell to 0-6.

The visitors scored first on a 50-yard pass from Sammy Garza to Larry Linne, but Kent State came back quickly to take a 14-7 lead after one quarter on a 76-yard pass from Tim Phillips to Jim Kilbane and a 1-yard run by Robert Golden.

ABILENE — Mike Myers split the uprights with a 25-yard field goal with nine seconds remaining Saturday night to give Tarleton State an 18-15 victory over McMurry in a TIAA Conference college football game.

Tarleton is now 1-1 in conference play and 1-5 overall. McMurry fell to 0-2 and 0-6 for the season.

Austin Col. 21, Millsaps 7

SHERMAN — Quarterback Todd Elliott led his Austin College Kangaroos past the Millsaps College Majors.

Elliott set school records for completions and attempts by passing 31-55 for 300 yards and two touchdowns. Jay Bishop held the old records of 28 completions, set in 1963, and 49 attempts, set in 1964.

Prairie View 28, Bishop 16

PRAIRIE VIEW, Texas (AP) — Quarterback Ernest Brow threw a touchdown pass and ran one himself to lead the Prairie View A&M Panthers to a 28-16 victory over the Bishop Tigers Saturday night in a nonconference game.

Prairie View is 2-5 on the season and 0-4 in Southwestern Athletic Conference play. Bishop is 2-4.

NE Louisiana 37, Lamar 14

BEAUMONT — Mike Wooten rushed for 140 yards in the Northeast Louisiana pass-oriented offense as the the Indians defeated the Lamar Cardinals'.

Wooten's performance was the best showing by a Northeast Louisiana back since the first game of the 1983 season. The 5-foot-9, 195-pound freshman tailback scored on touchdown runs of 45 and 37 yards.

Texas A&I 39, E. Central U. 13

KINGSVILLE — Tailback Marcus Brown scored three touchdowns Saturday night to lead Texas A&I University to an intersectional victory over East Central University of Oklahoma.

Brown scored the first three Javelina touchdowns on runs of one, three and four yards. Texas A&I is 3-2-0 for the year, while East Central, which had beaten the Javelinas the past two seasons, fell to 2-3-0.

POSTAL JOBS

CLERK & CARRIER POSITIONS
($9.48/hr to start)

Special announcement for all candidates planning to sign up for the Clerk-Carrier Examination at the Big Spring Post Office as well as many other Post Offices in the 797 Zip Code Area when it is soon announced. [Since it won't be offered again for at least 3 years, don't miss out!]

4-HOUR WORKSHOP
Score 95-100% or Your Tuition is Refunded!

NOW is the time to prepare. The pressure is on to score as high as possible to get the job. Career Postal Workers will now earn a starting salary of $18,532 plus benefits — with an accelerated step increase plan, men and women, regardless of age, are eligible. The first step toward a postal service career is getting your name onto the "Register of Eligibles," which is accomplished by passing this Exam. To be one of the first hired, you need to get one of the higher scores! And to be hired at all during the next three years, you will need to score at least 95%.

This workshop is being offered now, prior to the formal announcement of the examination dates, to give you adequate time to prepare for the test. Many post offices begin testing within a week of the announcement which isn't enough time to prepare properly. By starting now, you'll be ready to attain high scores using our methods when the test is given.

Come to the workshop. If you don't feel, at the end of the course, that it will help you achieve a score of 95% or better, don't pay for the workshop! Furthermore, if your score is less than 95% on the official exam after using our techniques, we will immediately refund your tuition in full!

WANT TO RELOCATE? We are the publishers of The Postal Alert, the bi-weekly newsletter giving you postal exam dates nationwide. Only The Achievement Center provides this service. Learn how you can relocate to any area of the country you like.

- ★ You are invited to bring your tape recorder to record the workshop for personal exam review.
- ★ You may attend as many extra sessions of the workshop as you like (on a space available basis) without additional tuition charge.

WORKSHOP TUITION — $40 (Includes guaranteed 4-hour Workshop, The Corey Guide to Postal Exams (with 6 complete practice tests), a Sample Exam with Answers, Workshop Workbook, "12 Important Steps for Getting Hired into the U.S. Postal Service" Booklet, Follow-up consultation privileges, Achievement Award to high-scorers and Practice Kit containing Six Additional Practice Exams with Answers, Memory Test Flash Cards, and "Simulated Exam" on cassette tape). Please bring two No. 2 pencils with you to the Workshop. ANNOUNCEMENT WITH SIGN-UP DATES MAILED TO YOUR HOME.

Seating is limited, pre-registration by phone is advised. Otherwise, you may register by arriving thirty minutes early. Tuition is payable at the door by cash, check, money order, MasterCard, VISA or American Express.

Wendy's and Barbecue Sandwiches

MANAGEMENT DEVELOPMENT PROGRAM
ARE YOU "WENDY'S KIND OF PEOPLE?"

At Wendy's Old Fashioned Hamburger Restaurant we believe in a total commitment to satisftying every customer. We are dedicated to quality----not just talking about it. Our beef is pattied fresh daily at our restaurants. Each sandwich is made to order with the customers choice of condiments. Our sandwiches never sit under heat lamps like the other hamburger restaurants you know. If you share our dedication to quality, you're "Wendy's Kind Of People", and we want to talk to you.

We are growing Wendy's operation in the West Texas area committed to hiring only quality individuals who want to be a part of the Wendy's Management team. As a Wendy's Manager, you'll learn that people are your most valuable resource and will be able to lead them to meet our tough standards. You'll relish the opportunity to be closely involved with the daily operation of our restaurants. Two years college or previous management experience is required. If you're "Wendy's Kind Of People", and want to receive the kind of salary and company benefits you deserve, Come By 903 Andrews Highway, Monday through Friday.

NC AND CNC MACHINE TOOL MAINTENANCE TECHNICIAN

The Los Alamos National Laboratory has openings for highly qualified electronics specialists proficient in NC and CNC machine tool and inspection equipment maintenance.

Responsibilities and Requirements:
- The ability to independently repair, maintain, calibrate, and modify numeric controls used on lathes, machining centers, and contouring machines (including computer and microprocessor-based programmable controls)
- Maintain electronic equipment used for quality control measurements.
- Must be able to work in a customer service environment and interact effectively with machine operators while solving NC machine problems.
- Will provide guidance and on-the-job training to lower-level technicians.
- Flextime and occasional overtime is required.
- Must be eligible for a DOE Q security clearance (active or reinstatable clearance desirable).
- Must have demonstrated ability to independently maintain, repair, and modify digital control systems involving microprocessors.
- Strong background and experience in electronics technology as applied to maintenance of control systems enumerated above (including servo and electromechanical systems).
- Technical institute graduate in electronics technology or a combination of relevant education and experience.
- Factory training on current NC and CNC controls required.

About Los Alamos:
The Los Alamos National Laboratory is located in the mountains of Northern New Mexico at an elevation of 7400 feet. The living is uncrowded, casual, and pollution free, and the climate is superb (cool summers and mild winters). Los Alamos has an excellent school system and ample recreation opportunities (hiking and skiing within 20 minutes of the city). Fringe benefits provide 24 days annual vacation; 18 days annual sick leave; 11 paid holidays; and medical, dental, and retirement programs.
Interview and relocation expenses are paid by the Laboratory.

BUYERS GUIDE

IMPORTANT: Spoken promises are difficult to enforce. Ask the dealer to put all promises in writing. Keep this form.

WARRANTIES FOR THIS VEHICLE

☐ AS IS—NO WARRANTY

YOU WILL PAY ALL COSTS FOR ANY REPAIRS. The dealer assumes no responsibility for any repairs regardless of any oral statements about the vehicle.

☒ WARRANTY

FULL ☒ LIMITED WARRANTY. The dealer will pay 100 % of the labor and 100 % of the parts for the covered systems that fail during the warranty period. Ask the dealer for a copy of the warranty document for a full explanation of warranty coverages, exclusions, and the dealer's repair obligations. Under state law, "implied warranties" may give you even more rights.

SYSTEMS COVERED: Engine: Inside Block and All Internal Parts, Cylinder Head Assemblies, Timing Case Cover, Gears, Belt and Sprockets, Harmonic Balancer, Oil Pump, Water Pump, Intake Manifold, Case and Gaskets. Transmission: Case, Torque Converter, Drive Plate, Flex Plate, Fly Wheel, Bell Housing, Rear Seal, Case or Rear Axle Housing and all Internal Parts, Drive Shaft and Axle Shaft Assemblies and the Housings, Axle Shaft Bearings, Drive Shaft Center Bearings, Constant Velocity Joints, Universal Joints and Yokes.

DURATION: All listed components are covered for 5 Months from the vehicle sale date or 3,000 miles from the vehicle's odometer reading at the time of vehicle sale, (whichever comes first) after payment by the customer of the first $50 of covered repair costs for each repair visit.

☒ SERVICE CONTRACT. A service contract is available at an extra charge on this vehicle. Ask for details as to coverage, deductible, price, and exclusions. If you buy a service contract within 90 days of the time of sale, state law "implied warranties" may give you additional rights.

PRE PURCHASE INSPECTION: ASK THE DEALER IF YOU MAY HAVE THIS VEHICLE INSPECTED BY YOUR MECHANIC EITHER ON OR OFF THE LOT.

SEE THE BACK OF THIS FORM for important additional information, including a list of some major defects that may occur in used motor vehicles.

A number of abandoned motor vehicles now being held in custody by the Chief of Police, City of Midland, Texas, will be offered for sale at public auction to the highest bidder for each piece of property separately, and all sales shall be for cash.

The right is reserved to accept or reject all or part of any offer and to accept the offer most advantageous to the City of Midland, Texas. All offers to buy must be "as is, where is". Two weeks will be allowed for removal of these vehicles. Any vehicle not removed during this time will be subject to storage at the rate of $6.00 per day from the date of sale.

All buyers will remain at the auction site at the end of the sale to pay for any vehicles purchased. Buyers will be issued a cash receipt at the time of purchase. Auction sales receipts will be mailed to the buyer within two weeks of sale. Buyers may obtain "certificate of title" from the State of Texas with auction sales receipts.

This public auction will be conducted November 2, 1985 at 10:00 A.M. Place: Motor Vehicle Impounding Area, 1603 Orchard Lane, Midland, Texas. The impounding area will be open for inspection of vehicles at 8:00 A.M., November 2, 1985.

For further details covering this sale contact the Traffic Division, Midland Police Department, City of Midland, Texas, P.O. Box 1152, Telephone, 683-4281 Ext. 381.

NORTHTOWN
Near work & play

Neighborhood family settings located near work and play are sometimes difficult to find for those in search of that type of lifestyle.

Those points are readily available to homeowners in the Northtown area. With Haynes and North Loop 250 serving as the northern and southern boundaries and Garfield and North Midkiff to the east and west, residents in this area enjoy quiet living in a modern urban setting.

Among the many reasons Northtown residents choose to live in this area is that students are within easy walking distance to Goddard Junior High School and Emerson Elementary; and within a short driving distance to Midland Lee High School. Playtime enjoyment can be made fun and safe at Kiwanis City Park which offers several tables for picnicking and a huge playground for kids of all ages. And "just around the corner," are many neighborhood retail shopping centers including Oakridge Square, Plaza Shopping Center and Midland Park Mall.

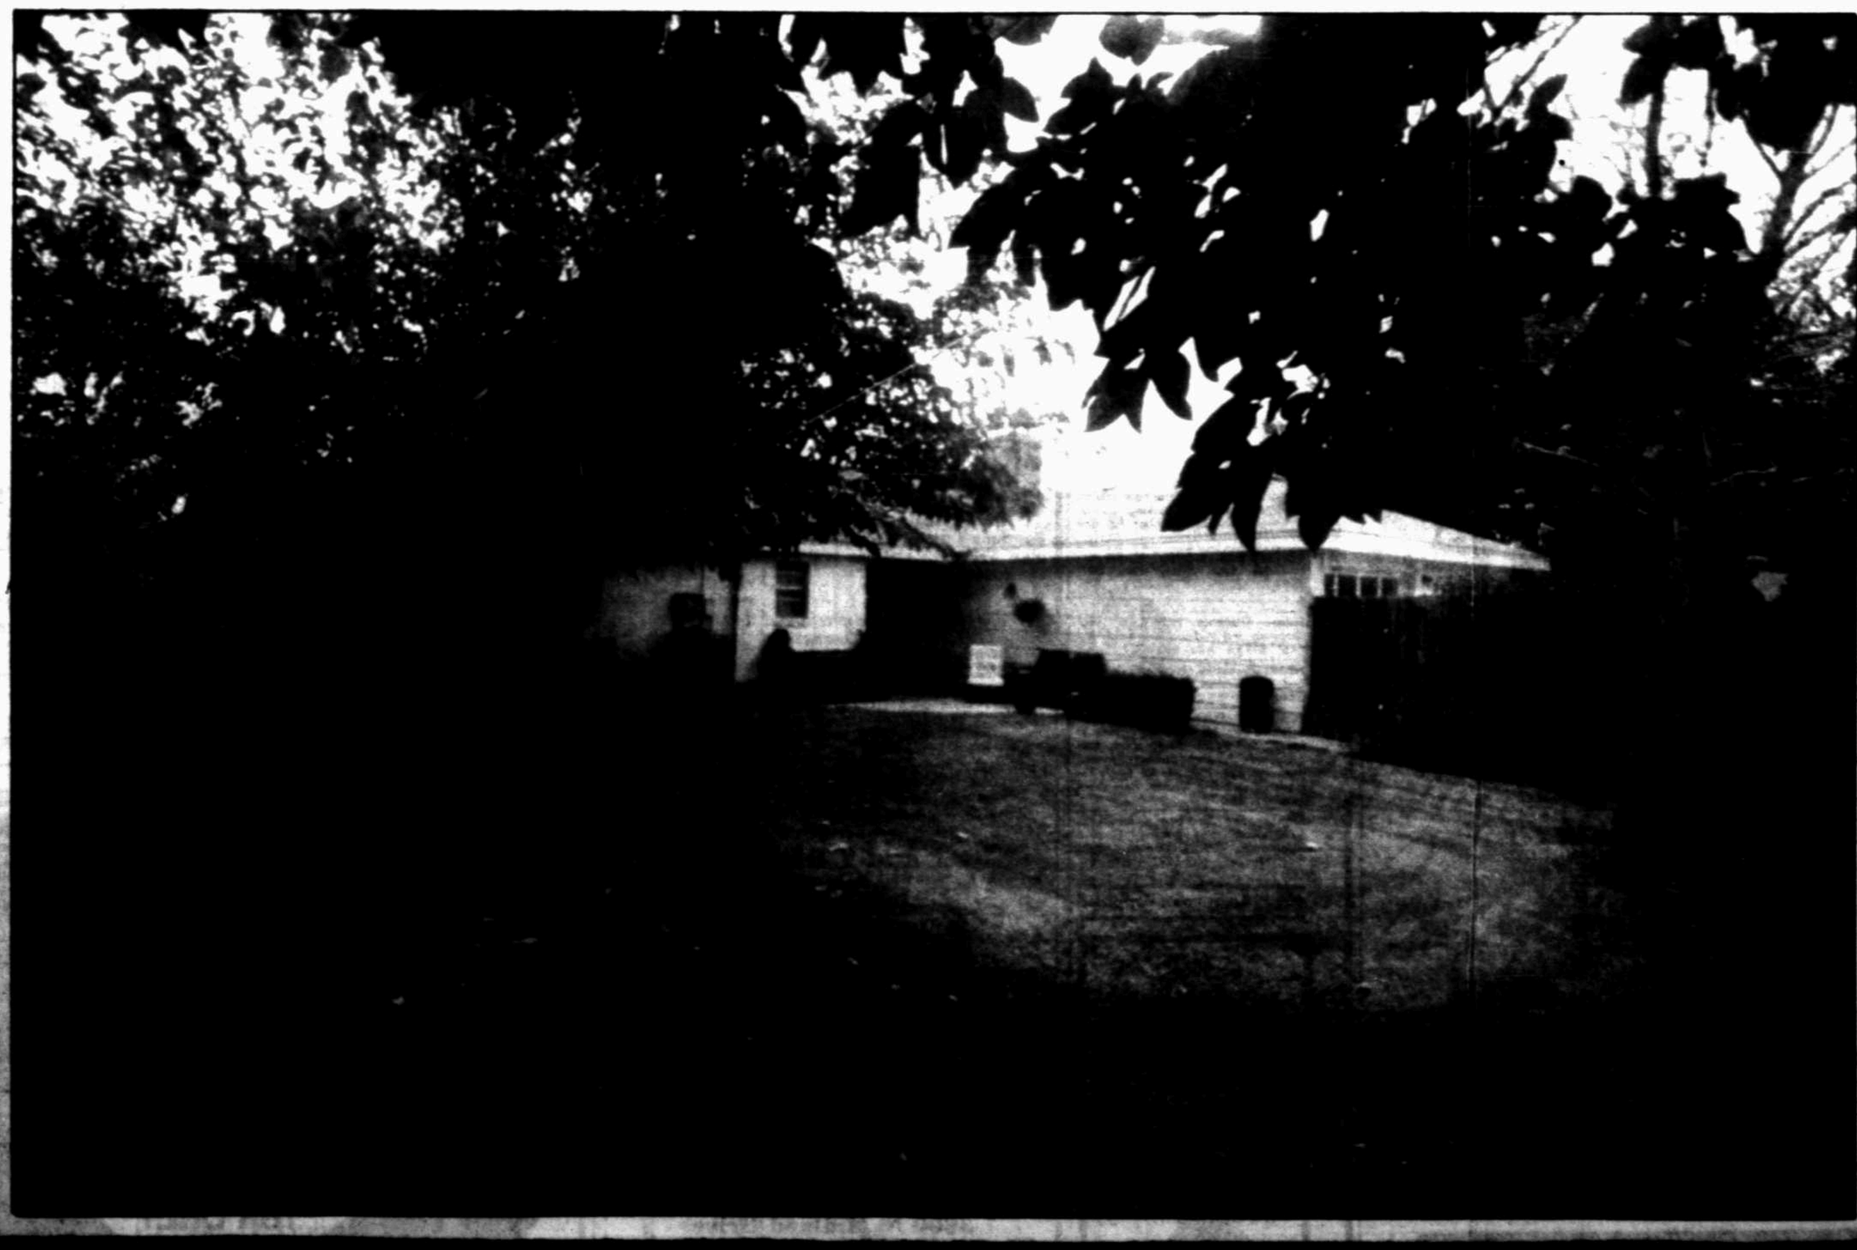

And within this cluster of homes boasting neatly-manicured lawns and "neighborly" relationships among residents, is a lovely domain located at 2506 Emerson Drive.

Please see NORTHTOWN, Page 2D

Listed by Carriage Company Realtors at $79,500, this three bedroom, two bath home has approximately 1,773 square feet of well-planned living space (Pictured on the cover).

Approaching the front entry, one can certainly appreciate the immaculately landscaped front lawn and clean, fresh look of this white brick home with freshly-painted "Peace Yellow" trim.

Within this 13-year old home central heat and air, with a humidifier attached to the furnace, add energy efficiency to this home. Additionally, plush carpeting and custom drapes throughout provide added luxury.

The entrance hall features parquet-look tile with stark white wall partially covered with green and white patterned wallpaper, offering guests a fresh and inviting appeal.

To the left of the entry lies a small sitting room, perfect for quiet moments with soft music. A large panel of windows looks onto the front lawn.

As a part of the area, a formal dining room provides a perfect place for those special dining moments. Another large window with white sheers and drapes also looks onto the front lawn. A convenient dimmer switch built into the elegant chandelier sets the mood for quieter moments.

Through an envelope door to the kitchen, the hostess can quickly serve guests.

In the kitchen, roominess is the order of the day. Walnut-stained cabinets with avocado green counter tops surround the many conventional features of this room. Among those amenities are a gas stove, electric oven and broiler, dishwasher and disposal. Yellow mini blinds donning the window above the sink and sheek muted linoleum add a touch of contemporary style to the area.

A breakfast nook as a part of the kitchen boasts country style wallpaper in golden brown tones, complete with favorite "homestyle" recipes.

Through a louvered door, access can be made into a nice-sized utility room with cabinets and a large walk-in pantry with shelves and accessory hangers.

Through the back door and into the two-car garage, the man of the house can enjoy a convenient workbench (which can be locked) and utility shelves. A pull-down stairway into the attic can be used to store extra supplies. As an option to the purchaser of the home, a nearly-new portable spa stands ready for use.

Through a large open area in the kitchen, family members can relax in the cozy living area with panelled walls painted ivory. Serving as the focal point is a handsome brick wall in rich earth tones with a large fireplace and wide hearth. A handmade walnut mantle poses perfectly above. Also, built-in cabinets with doors and a ceiling fan add convenience.

Through a sliding glass door donned in white sheer drapes, family members can gain easy access to the covered patio and huge fenced backyard.

Just off the family room and entry is a long hallway supporting the bedrooms and bathrooms. Spacious linen and coat closets offer additional storage.

In the guest bath, white formica atop a long vanity with sink is illuminated under soft lighting. A tub/shower combination accommodate the users. Bright daisy patterned wallpaper completes the look of the fresh, clean theme of the home.

In the two guest bedrooms, large walk-in closets with storage and shoe shelves add convenience for their users.

Each of the rooms also reflect individualized personalitites in the draperies used. In one of the rooms, white sheers behind golden yellow and white patterned drapes complete the look. In the other, white scalloped shades behind stark white tie-back drapes with blue and white checked ties and attached carnass board reflect an air of femininity.

In the master bedroom, a ceiling fan with a conventional light illuminate the large area. A large walk-in closet with shelves accommodates the user.

In the master bath, a long vanity topped in white formica has many cabinets. Another large walk-in closet stands ready for use. A separate toilet and tub/shower combination provide privacy for the user.

With the many amenities offered by this lovely home and others in the area, one can certainly understand why Northtown residents enjoy living where they do. For more information about living in this peaceful area, please call your realtor.

Listed by Don Harvey Realtors at $82,500, this three bedroom, two bath home located at 2508 Goddard offers many features including a two-car garage, fireplace, refrigerated air, two living rooms and two dining rooms.

Close to the Northtown area, located at 2523 Noel, this lovely townhome is listed by Dene Kelley Realtors at $89,900. It features contemporary style throughout the three bedroom, 1 3/4 bath home with fireplace, refrigerated air and two-car garage.

Golden Park has grand opening

Golden Park, located at 3100 W. Kansas is the Permian Basin's newest retirement community. The grand opening for this revitalized community was held Thursday, October 10.

This project of JAB Investment offers area residents fifty-five and above a very attractive lifestyle - active comfortable and affordable.

The quaint duplexes, recreational centers and amenities are designed for independent living. The project is exceptionally well located with shopping, dining and medical facilities nearby. Also, it is within a close proximity of several churches.

A LETTER TO:
Ms. Krances Limberlips, Manager
Dead Beat Apartments
666 Crab Grass Alleyway
Bug Gulch, Texas 7777

THE JUNCTION APARTMENTS

Dear Ms. Limberlips.

This is to advise you that I have moved from apartment #13 at the Dead Beat Apartments. Ms. Limberlips, do you remember last Monday, when I called to inform you that my air conditioner was out and it was 118 degrees inside my refrigerator and that my cat, Rufus, had died of a heat stroke? (God rest his nine lives). And when I asked when my air could be repaired you suggested a long vacation to Siberia...and you even offered to loan me your skunk parka and your St. Bernard. Now, Ms. Limberlips, I thought that suggestion was in very poor taste. I can't forget the fact that your St. Bernard ate my poor parakeet, "Tweety Pie." (God rest his soft feathers).

So my dear lady, on FRIDAY, I moved to the JUNCTION APARTMENTS and they are PAYING MY ELECTRIC BILL" (and all my utilities) I'm relaxing in front of this sparkling pool right next door to my apartment. I have a fireplace washer/dryer connections, an all electric kitchen, a gigantic storage closet, a lofted bedroom and a bathroom that is really unique. My rent is only $590.00, and I only have one check to write each month!

The JUNCTION management team have a warm and friendly (PROFESSIONAL) attitude, sort of likened to Mary Poppins, but I've heard that they are worse than Adolph Hitler's Third Reich when it comes to dealing with inconsiderates and undersirables. (So, I will keep my nose clean and my stereo turned down.)

The maintenance guys are courteous and prompt. They are on call 24 hours.

The JUNCTION security officers are BIG fellows, and to be respected. The Manager tells me that the JUNCTION staff is the best in the west! And I agree...

So, Ms. Limberlips, you can send all my mail to THE JUNCTION APARTMENTS, 1902 Midland Drive, Midland, Texas... Instead of a Siberian vacation, please send all your unhappy residents to the JUNCTION, or have them call 699-5168.

Yours truly,
John Henry

Don't be late with Christmas freight

Has Santa Claus ever been late with his Christmas gifts?

Of course not. So why should your Christmas gifts be late?

Well, if you want your mailed gifts to arrive at their destinations on time, then now is the time to begin thinking about getting some of your Christmas shopping done. Christmas may seem a long way off, but many mailing deadlines for the holiday season are just around the corner.

In fact, Friday is the suggested Christmas civilian and military mailing deadline for surface mail — the least expensive method of transport — to Africa, Australia, Asia and the Far East, according to a United States Postal bulletin. Military surface mail to the Middle East has a suggested deadline of Oct. 28. Other destinations have various deadlines during October, November and early December.

Parcel Airlift, or PAL, packages destined for Armed Forces members should be mailed in November. Dates will vary by destinations.

To qualify for PAL super-saver flight, a package must weigh less than 30 pounds and be 60 inches or less in length plus girth. Regular stateside parcel post rates apply for these packages, plus an air service fee between 30 cents and $1.20.

Similar, but less expensive, air lift transportation to the military is available for smaller packages up to 15 pounds. Packages should be marked "Space Available Mail."

If distant lands are not included on your Christmas list, you still might want to start your shopping early. There are six fewer shopping days between Thanksgiving and Christmas this year and the postal service is warning against waiting until the last minute to mail Christmas gifts.

Midland Postmaster Bill Williams said postal deadlines have not yet been released for mail traveling within the Continental United States, but he recommends that Christmas parcels be mailed on or before Dec. 1 to insure delivery. Christmas cards should be mailed around Dec. 10-15, Williams said.

For all destinations, deadlines for parcels are earlier than deadlines for cards and letters.

AN ALTERNATIVE to surface mail is priority mail, or air mail.

Although it does cost more, sometimes the price is not that much higher, according to Williams. He suggested that postal customers inquire about the price difference between surface and priority mail when sending holiday packages.

"Depending on the weight of the package, it could be almost as inexpensive to mail by priority mail as by surface mail, which is fourth class," Williams said, "and it will get there much faster."

For example, a three-pound package traveling from Midland to Kansas City, Kan., will cost $2.21 and will take approximately 6-7 days to arrive at its destination by surface mail. It's possible that surface mail could take longer due to Christmas rush mail and weather conditions affecting road travel.

Sending the same package by priority mail would cost $3.45, but cut the travel time to approximately two or three days.

A package also can be sent overnight by Express Mail. Express Mail is accepted Monday-Friday before 5 p.m. at the downtown Post Office, 100 E. Wall Ave.

Mail Deadlines

Parcel Airlift (PAL) packages must weigh less than 30 pounds and be 60 inches or less in length plus girth. Regular stateside postal rates apply plus an air service fee of 30 cents to $1.20.

Space Available Mail (SAM) must weigh 15 pounds or less and be marked "Space Available Mail."

The Postal Service has issued these Christmas mailing deadline calendars:

Packages being sent after approximately Dec. 16 should be mailed by Express Mail or priority mail to insure Christmas delivery, warned Williams.

Although Santa's sleigh may have no trouble with thin tinsel wrapping paper and big floppy bows, properly packing Christmas parcels is very important for a person mailing gifts. Williams said a parcel often won't reach its destination because it was addressed with a stick-on-type label.

"The weather changes so much during Christmas, and packages going far distances especially are subject to even greater climate changes. What happens is the packages get into humid climates or in pressurized cabins," Williams said, "and the moisture gets up under the stick-on labels and they fall off.

"Then we have no way of knowing where the package should have gone," Williams said.

Williams suggested the address be clearly marked on the package in a dark-colored felt tip pen and that the address also be placed inside the package as an extra precaution.

Zip Codes are essential for speedy parcel delivery, he noted. Parcels now are sorted and postmarked by machines according to Zip Codes. If a package is missing the Zip Code, it must be hand sorted and marked, thus delaying delivery. Each post office has Zip Code books in the outer lobby for customers' convenience.

Because parcels are now postmarked by machines, Williams also advised customers not to put string around their packages.

"The string gets caught up in the machines and often will tear up the wrapping or package, or it will damage the machine," Williams said. "The best way to wrap packages is with the nylon fiber tape."

THE USE of masking tape and brown craft tape (packing tape that must be moistened) is strongly discouraged.

"The fiber tape is the very best and the strongest way to wrap the outer package," Williams stressed.

To protect breakable items, the first precaution is to use a sturdy box.

The best packing materials are styrofoam, newspaper and shock absorbent plastic. Newspaper alone is not always enough insulation, but if combined with the styrofoam or shock absorbent plastic it should provide adequate protection, Williams said. He also suggested that extra padding be placed in box corners.

Postal customers should insure breakables for the items' cost in case it is broken, Williams suggested. Postal clerks also should be advised of fragile materials so the box can be marked for extra care.

Packages wrapped in holiday paper can simply be rewrapped in brown paper for mailing or can be decorated with seasonal accessories and placed in a larger box for mailing.

Even though it seems very early for Christmas shopping, think of it this way — Santa has been working in his workshop since last Christmas to deliver his presents, so this really isn't early at all.

Have you heard...?

Electric blue and white were the colors Becky Hyer chose for her Saturday evening wedding, and that color scheme was effectively repeated in many of the pre-nuptial parties given for Becky and Steven Marsh. They exchanged vows at seven o'clock in the First United Methodist Church, with a reception following in the Petroleum Club's Atrium.

To carry out the traditional "something old," Becky wore her great-grandmother Hyer's wedding ring; for the "something new," her dress; an original sixpence for her shoe collected by her father when he was a boy, and for "something blue," a garter made by Mrs. Kathy Yates.

The newlyweds will make their home in Dallas. The daughter of Sandra and Reg Hyer, Becky is an associate accountant with Southland Corp. She graduated from SMU, where she was a member of Alpha Delta Pi sorority. The groom, son of Marilyn and Dr. Fred Marsh of Omaha, Neb., is assistant branch manager for Murray's Savings Association. A graduate of TCU, Steven is a member of Phi Kappa Sigma fraternity. Both have their M.B.S.s from TCU.

The party whirl began for the couple in May with a cocktail buffet at the home of Flo and Sam White to announce the engagement and concluded Saturday morning with the Bridesmaids' luncheon given by Judith (Mrs. James) Devenport at half past eleven at the Racquet Club.

Other pre-nuptial festivities included a couples' party and alphabet shower given at the home of Rosalind and John Redfern Jr. and co-hosted by Becky's maid of honor, Rosson Grover; Rosalind and Arden Grover and Doris and John Redfern III, and a linen shower given by Nada (Mrs. Dub) Baulch, Eleanor (Mrs. Jack) Evans, LaRae (Mrs. Glen) Aaron and Kathleen (Mrs. Robert D.) Janssen at the Baulch home.

Additional parties were a tableware shower in the home of Winn (Mrs. Richard) Stovall, with Dorothy (Mrs. James L.) Davis, Glenda (Mrs. Herb) Pearce, Virginia (Mrs. Bob) Jones and Elloui (Mrs. John Louis) Moseley co-hosting, and a Christmas decorations and holiday recipe shower given by Hazel (Mrs. Keith) Somerville, Evelyn (Mrs. Roy) Minear and former Midlander Ethel (Mrs. Harry) Clark of Brandon, Miss., in the Somerville home.

A potpourri bag party was given Friday to enable out-of-town guests to participate in the festivities. Held in the home of Jody (Mrs. Jack) Blake, the party was co-hosted by Carolyn (Mrs. David) Johnston of Spring, Betty (Mrs. Bill) Sumner, Barbara (Mrs. Jack) Nini, Barbara (Mrs. Charles) Hartwell, Holly Hartwell of Washington, D.C., Nancy (Mrs. H.L.) Sloan, Robin Sloan of Sallisaw, Okla., and Anelle (Mrs. Jim) Mack.

The groom's parents entertained with the rehearsal dinner Friday evening at Midland Country Club.

TO CELEBRATE MAC McGUIGAN'S Big Eight-Oh, his wife, Fern, entertained with a delightful cocktail party recently in their home. The approximately 150 guests included many longtime Midlanders, as well as friends and relatives from out of town.

Family members sharing the occasion were Mac's son, John F. McGuigan and wife, Sherwood; his niece, Sally Moore Kato of Houston, who was reared in the McGuigan home; his cousins, Louise and Jim McGuigan of Fort Worth; Fern's sister and brother-in-law, Meg and Earle Unger of Buena Vista, N.M., and formerly of Midland, and the Ungers' daughter, Leslie (Mrs. B.C.) Bennett of Clifton.

Mac, who has lived in Midland on three separate occasions, first came here in 1935 with Shell Oil, but has been a permanent resident since 1941. At that time he was with Lion Oil Co., but later became a consulting geologist and independent oil operator.

Active civically, Mac has twice served as president of the board of governors of Midland Community Theatre and has been a member of the City Council and the Planning and Zoning Commission. He is a lifetime member of the West Texas Geological Society and member emeritus of the American Association of Petroleum Geologists.

The honoree was born on Sept. 30, 1905, in Washington, D.C. Besides the one son, he has a grandson, John F. McGuigan Jr., a freshman at the University of Denver.

LIZ AND BILL ADAM celebrated their 20th wedding anniversary with a two-week trip to England and Scotland. They began their visit with a two-night stay in Edinburgh, zipping down to London on the high speed train, the Flying Scotsman, for a week and a half.

Headquartered at St. Ermins Hotel, the couple enjoyed the city's many attractions, as well as several day trips into the beautiful countryside, including visits to Brighton and Bath. In addition, they enjoyed traveling by hovercraft across the Channel from Dover to Calais and a boat trip on the Upper Thames through the locks from Maidenhead to Windsor. They also spent a couple of evenings at the theatre, where they saw Andrew Lloyd Webber's hit musicals, "Cats" and "Starlight Express."

TO HONOR PROSPECTIVE newlyweds Beth Poer and Matt Doffer, a cocktail party was held last Sunday evening in the home of Sandy and Jim Alsup.

Co-hosts were Mary Ann and Gene Bartus, Gail and Gary Gililland, Tricia and Mike McElwrath, Sheila and Bill Morrow and Chris and Fred Newman. Special guests were the bride-elect's parents, Carolyn and Bob Poer.

Fresh chrysanthemums in fall shades and the bride's chosen colors of jade green and ivory were used to decorate.

The couple is planning a Nov. 2 wedding in the Episcopal Church of the Holy Trinity. Beth is in Great Western's accounting department, and Matt is a petroleum engineer with Magnatex.

Used car can be honey or lemon

WINSTON-SALEM, N.C. (AP) — With used car prices on the rise, it pays to be careful when buying a second-hand car.

The secret to buying a used car that will be a creampuff rather than a lemon is easy, according to Robert R. Isenhour, the manager of R.J. Reynolds' 2,600-vehicle fleet operations.

"Rarely will you find the perfect car. But if you know when and where to buy, how to examine the car, how to carry out your own road test, and how to haggle over the price, you can buy a used car that will meet your needs without breaking the bank," says Isenhour.

Infectious arthritis caused by germs

ATLANTA (AP) — Almost any bacterium, fungus, or virus that can cause disease can cause infectious arthritis, according to the Arthritis Foundation.

Infectious arthritis is an illness in which joint problems are brought on by an infection.

If the infection is diagnosed and treated early, it can be stopped and there is usually no lasting joint damage, the foundation says.

Variations on a classic theme are beautifully interpretedby LORCH. The color-flecked tweed, double-pocketed jacket coordinates with a jeweltone plaid skirt. Both are in soft, whisperweight wool. Adding striking contrast is the coordinating cowl neck sweater. All this is dashed with the extra excitement of a fringe trimmed scarf which comes with the jacket. The hat is also available.

Apartment safety critical

Hearst News Service

Too many people choose an apartment in which to live based on the number of good-looking bodies at the swimming pool or easy access to major thoroughfares. But safety should be a primary factor, according to Kay Maley, vice president of Wilson Properties Inc. in San Antonio. She is also a licensed professional counselor who has worked with rape trauma victims and has conducted rape prevention seminars for the San Antonio Apartment Association, as well as workshops on how to make apartments more secure.

"The answers I'd get would help me make a decision on whether I'd want to live there," Maley says. She suggests being aware of the following:

• Ask who has access to apartment keys. Does the pest control service have to check the keys in and out or do they keep them overnight? No one should have a master key except the manager and maintenance personnel.

• Ask if the unit numbers are engraved on the keys. If you lose the key to your apartment, anyone finding the key would immediately know which door that key opens.

• When people move out, are the locks changed or exchanged with others? If not, the previous tenant would be able to get in if he had a copy of his key.

• Are there adequate locks? Make sure there is a dead bolt on the front door. If locks are broken on doors or latches on windows, how long will it take for them to get repaired? Locks should be repaired the same day, even if it means personnel have to work after hours.

• When hiring personnel, does the apartment management check for references for criminal records? That should include anyone who has access to your apartment.

Chinese prefer 'soft' sales tactics

HONG KONG (AP) — Hard-sell tactics don't work in China.

The most effective way of doing business with the Chinese is "a quiet, controlled, low-key approach," says an American marketing manager.

His firm was the first American company to send a trade mission to China after former President Richard Nixon's 1972 visit. It took one year of meetings and discussions to sell its first bag of polyethylene, but Phillips Chemical now supplies China with thousands of metric tons of polyethylene each year.

Researchers chart love's course

New York Times News Service

NEW YORK — Researchers charting the course of love are beginning to put some order into an area that has long been regarded as chaotic and undefinable.

The emotional turbulence of love and marriage, the research suggests, can be traced partly to the way habits of the heart are shaped in childhood, and partly to the inevitable changes over the course of even the most successful relationship.

"People don't know what they are in for when they fall in love," said Robert Sternberg, a psychologist at Yale University who is one of those doing the new research. "The divorce rate is so high not because people make foolish choices, but because they are drawn together for reasons that matter less as time goes on."

What brings a couple together, Sternberg is finding, almost inevitably recedes into the background as the relationship matures. And those qualities that matter most later on, his research suggests, are rarely the ones that loom large in the early stages of the match. In his view, the major components of love are intimacy, passion and commitment. While a relationship can manage to survive with any one or two of these qualities, Sternberg argues, the fullest love requires all three. However, each blossoms at its own pace, and follows its distinct course.

"Passion is the quickest to develop, and the quickest to fade," Sternberg said. "Intimacy develops more slowly, and commitment more gradually still. All of this means that no relationship is stable, because the basic components change at different rates."

Many turmoils of romantic love, other new research is showing, are a direct legacy of the partners' childhood bonds with their parents. That premise, of course, has been a mainstay of psychotherapists since Freud. But the research offers an important empirical test that, in broad strokes, supports otherwise untested, but common, assumptions made by therapists about the troubles that crop up in people's most intimate relationships.

THE RESEARCH is showing, for example, that children who grow up feeling rejected by the parent of the opposite sex are prone as adults to extremes of jealousy, anxiety and depression in their love life. But that psychological legacy can be diminished if a person understands the origins of his or her feelings, according to the researchers.

"We're confirming in our research what therapists have been saying for years," said Phillip Shaver, a psychologist at the University of Denver, who reported on his findings at the recent meeting of the American Psychological Association.

The new work sheds light on two psychological puzzles. One is why people whose lives are otherwise well-ordered and successful can be so infantile — easily hurt, jealous, anxiously demanding — in their romantic relationships. The other is why a couple who seem so in love at the outset of their match can founder as time passes.

Sternberg's studies show how love can founder with time. In research on relationships that had lasted from just one month to as long as 36 years, he was able to identify the specific elements that increased and decreased in long-lasting couples.

The intimacy of the partners becomes more crucial, particularly to women, as successful relationships endure, according to Sternberg. In general, both partners find it increasingly important to understand each other's wants and needs, to be able to listen to and support each other, and to share common values. And intimacy tends to maintain a gradual growth, although it may seem to recede into the background of the relationship.

"IN A strong marriage, the emotion of intimacy will seem to fade as the partners become more familiar with each other," Sternberg said in an interview. "But it is there in a latent form, and emerges strongly when the relationship is interrupted by travel or illness — or death."

Passion, which peaks in the early phases of the relationship, declines to a plateau. Still, passion continues to matter to the long-term success of a relationship. According to Sternberg, "A man continues to care about his wife's physical attractiveness; the more attractive he feels she is, the more successful the relationship in the long run."

While a strong emotional commitment is essential to a long-term relationship, commitment alone does not bode well, according to Sternberg. "You have to work constantly at rejuvenating a relationship," he said. "You can't just count on its being OK, or it will tend toward a hollow commitment, devoid of passion and intimacy. People need to put the kind of energy into it that they put into their children or career."

While Sternberg's theory may explain some of the vicissitudes of love, other investigators are probing into people's childhoods for clues. One view emerging from the new work is that romantic love in adulthood and the infant's love toward his parents are one and the same response seen at different points in life.

EVIDENCE FOR this viewpoint was presented by Phillip Shaver, a psychologist at the University of Denver, in a paper presented with Cindy Hazan at the meeting of the American Psychological Association last month. Shaver reported data showing that the main patterns of love recognized in infancy hold true for adults, too.

Developmental psychologists, notably Mary Ainsworth at the University of Virginia, have classified infants according to the bonds they form with their parents, particularly with their mothers in the first year or two of life. Infants who feel their mother is available and responsive are most secure. But those who feel insecure about being loved fall into one of two patterns: some become anxious and clinging, while others react by withdrawing and avoiding reliance on anyone.

Ainsworth has found that about two-thirds of infants fall into the secure category, while the rest can be classified in equal proportions as anxiously clinging, or as withdrawing.

The same rough proportions, Shaver reported, hold true for adults, in terms of their romantic relationships. In a study of 540 people between the ages of 15 and 82, Shaver found that just over half fit into a secure style of romantic love.

Those who are secure describe their love relationships as happy and trusting, while the anxious lovers report that they frequently become obsessed by their lovers, are prone to intense jealousy, and undergo extreme emotional highs and lows. The avoidant types, by comparison, shy away from intimacy.

THE ORIGINS of these different styles of loving, Shaver believes, lie in childhood. For example, in recalling their childhood, people who were anxious lovers, when compared with the secure ones, tended to report that their mothers were emotionally intrusive, while their fathers were demanding and distant, and that the relationship between their parents was unhappy.

While psychotherapists have long made similar claims about the childhood origins of adult romantic problems, their theories suffer from a pitfall that also applies to Shaver's data: it is based on the recall of the person himself, and so may be biased by his present outlook. In other words, people who are anxious about their love relationships as adults may be prone to recall their parents with similar anxiety.

That problem was overcome by other data reported at the psychology meetings by Carl Hindy, a psychologist at the University of North Florida in Jacksonville.

Hindy, who began his research while working with Conrad Schwarz at the University of Connecticutt, was able to study 192 men and women whose early family histories were known in unusual detail. Each of the people studied — as well as their mothers, fathers, one of their siblings, and a best friend — had undergone several hours of tests and questions about the person's early years and present relationships.

One pattern Hindy studied is what he calls "anxious attachment," a term borrowed from the British psychoanalyst John Bowlby's work with infants. Its common symptoms are extremes of depression when a relationship ends or of jealousy when there is an interloper, clinging to the partner while trying to extort signs of affection, and feeling that one never gets enough love and attention.

"SUCH PEOPLE fail to develop stable expectations for love and affection in childhood, and grow up chronically anxious about what they fear will be a rejection from their partner," Hindy said. "They depend on the partner for emotional stability; their moods fluctuate with how loved they feel. Since they have no stable sense that others will like them, they are constantly searching for reassurance. They will even threaten to leave just to get an affirmation of their partner's love."

Singles' lifestyles studied

Copley News Service

It's time to give special consideration to enhancing the lives of single people. And these American singles, according to a study released recently can't be pigeonholed in one category.

"Singles are now 43 percent of the population, and being single is now a valid lifestyle," said Satenig St. Marie, divisional vice president and director of public issues and consumer programs for JCPenney, which released the study.

"In the last 25 years, the number of singles in the United States has nearly doubled," said St. Marie. "With almost 77 million people in this category, singles must be recognized as a major force in our society," she added.

"Gone from our vocabularies are such terms as 'bachelor,' 'spinster,' 'old maid' and 'divorcee,' which carried with them a sense of incompleteness and misfortune."

She said there has been a marked switch in attitude since the end of the 1960s.

"Singles are no longer seen as people who somehow missed their chance to be married," St. Marie said.

"Single-person households have doubled since 1960," said Marion Prince, extension home economist for Washtenaw County, Mich.

She said the 1980 census showed that of the 169 million people who live in large cities, 39 percent are living alone.

Twenty percent of all home mortgages are issued to single people, she added.

Prince singles should reach out to singles in their area with such extension courses as one she taught at the University of Michigan at Ann Arbor, "Living Alone Creatively."

"SINGLES, ESPECIALLY women, will have to face the fact that they may be living the rest of their life alone and make the most of it," said Prince. She said at age 40, 29 percent of the women will marry or remarry, but at age 50, only 7.7 percent will marry or remarry.

"Singles need to be told that they have the power to arrange things so they won't be alone," Prince said.

For example, if one's birthday is nearing and one doesn't want to spend it alone, be candid with a friend. Say, "My birthday is next week. Let's do something to celebrate." And there's nothing wrong with throwing one's own birthday party to make sure the day is a happy one, Prince said.

Prince also offered this sage advice for singles: "To feel like a whole person, productive and valuable, takes a lot of working at it."

The just-released study on singles' lifestyles, "Consumer Feedback '85," is the second conducted by JCPenney. Last year, dual-income families were surveyed.

The Penney study group was limited to men and women who were single, divorced and widowed, between ages 25 and 39 and with incomes of $50,000 or less.

The survey exposed single attitudes including these:

— The singles saw being single as a valid, acceptable lifestyle.

— Independence was the major advantage of being single, although the degree of independence was conditioned by the presence of children.

— The singles felt better off than their parents.

— Being part of the baby boom generation, although it increased the competition for jobs, has advantages. Singles in the surveyed age group like being part of a large group to which advertisers and others are seen to cater.

THE MOST important thing the survey revealed was that singles can't be lumped into one group, either as consumers, in the work-place or socially, according to St. Marie.

The singles were separated into three distinct lifestyle types — changing, focused and settled:

— The changing single is currently building self confidence, looking for life's direction, adapting to single status and finding a new environment.

In relationships, the changing single is considering marriage, contemplating becoming a parent and looking for a relationship.

In careers, the changing single is seeking more challenge, money and satisfaction.

— The focused lifestyle concentrates on personal interests, avoids commitments and works for money.

The focused single is committed to a relationship with an adult or child and tries to balance relationships with self and career.

The focused single is committed to career advancement, money, recognition and fulfillment.

— Only the settled single has come to terms with being single and pursues interests for personal satisfaction.

In relationships, the settled single has his social network in place and has resolved family relationships.

CHOOSING WINDOW FABRIC

Fabric chosen for window treatments must be part of the total fabric "package" of the room. As such, it should be consistent with the tone or mood of the room. It should not feature an unexpected or inappropriate pattern or texture. Window fabric selection should be worked out when the entire fabric plan of the room is being developed. Fabrics that match the wallpaper create spatial continuity when repeated for draperies or curtains. The choice of fabric and the amount of trimming used will, of course, determine to what degree a window treatment will seem traditional or even period pure. More simple interpretations tend to appear more contemporary. They are often preferred for rooms with mixed furnishings.

When you need help choosing fabric or other coverings for window treatments come in and see our selection at WINDOW DECOR, 30 West Industrial Loop, 685-0875. We specialize in decorating windows and have a staff with many years of experience to see that you get the best coverings for your special needs. Hours: 8am-4:30pm Mon. thru Fri. and by appointment.

HINT:
Use patterned fabric to provide a room with zest.

Singles' search no longer simple

King Features Syndicate

"Single" used to refer to that fleeting period between graduation and marriage. The single woman was really a fresh-faced kid. If she hadn't met her future spouse in college, she panicked because dates were harder to get in the real world than on campus.

Often friends and relatives came to the rescue with strings of blind dates. "Single" wasn't supposed to last forever.

In 1985 "single" covers a lot of ground — from 18 to 70 plus, from never married, divorced, to widowed. The new single woman may be 20 or 40 or 60. And "single" can last forever...especially if you're looking for men in the old familiar places.

"Thirty percent of today's singles meet others at social gatherings or during work hours," say Jacqueline Simenauer and David Carroll, co-authors of "Singles: The New Americans," a comprehensive study of the single lifestyle.

But where do the remaining 70 percent find their "others"? If Ms. Simenauer and Carroll are right, the obvious meeting grounds, the office and someone else's party, are hardly the most fertile ones. Seven out of 10 times love is sought elsewhere.

"If you'd see the men in my office, you'd think the 30 percent figure is high," says my friend Louise. She adds, "I've never met a neat guy at a party unless he was attached to someone else."

And singles bars are out too. Nearly as dead as disco, the bars which hummed in the '70s are quiet — casualties of a new moral sex.

Is there nowhere but the frozen-foods section of the supermarket for discovering the man of your dreams?

Singles are innovative. They have to be. As their numbers have proliferated, their clever mating schemes have likewise multiplied. Even the once mundane laundromat has become a potential port of call for the love boat.

SEEKING LOVE via the classified ad is not a new idea. The plain and forlorn have done it for ages. What's new is the growing number of respectable newspapers and magazines carrying those ads — and the type of clientele spending their few dollars per line in search of love.

Even the liberal Village Voice, whose personals once mainly put the married, the homosexual, the kinky in touch with each other, now serves "mostly an upscale audience of single or divorced professional people seeking real relationships with the opposite sex," reports a spokesperson for the ad department.

She says, "We handle about 50,000 replies a year to personals. The audience is predominantly mid-30s and affluent."

An ad-taker for the Chicago Tribune, which runs "love ads" on Mondays and Fridays, says, "We get a high percentage of professionals. A lot are divorced. We don't take marrieds."

At The New York Review of Books, the ads seem to be placed by people who take themselves — and culture — seriously. A lot of professors, writers and extremely "sepeople" pen their needs and desire. Many are married and "seeking dalliances." A recent gem: "A man who is a serious novel would like to hear from a woman who is a poem."

Do the ads unite any real people...much less novels and poems? Jody Nelson, an advertising copywriter, met her husband, Brian, a systems design engineer, through a personal he placed in the Riverfront Times (a St. Louis, Mo., publication). She says he was nothing like he described himself, but she liked him anyway.

"He said he was warm and sensitive, strong and stable. He said he had blue eyes and a long lean body and a 'runner's mind.' Actually he's crazy. His eyes are hazel, and his body isn't very lean.

"I love him anyway."

Jody's experience, though it has a happy ending, raises the question of truth in advertising. Is there any in the personals department?

The Tribune ad-taker admits, "We do get some complaints. Men usually say the women aren't as slim and attractive as they claimed. Occasionally a woman calls to say a single or divorced guy turned out to be very married.

"But what the heck. It's chance you'd take anywhere, isn't it?"

Classifieds have their advantages. They allow the finicky woman to state her requirements flatly: "No herpes, please." "I hate jocks." "If you haven't been divorced for a year, don't write."

ADS GIVE people with special problems an opportunity to expose them immediately: "I walk with a cane." "Seeking a woman who is also an amputee." "Looking for a woman who has the desire to fill her fantasies by phone."

And ads are relatively safe: Potential freaks only need have a box number...no name, address, phone number.

Sherri Foxman, author of the book "Classified Love," says some ads are much better than others at attracting the opposite sex. "Don't use the word 'sincere' in describing yourself or the man you're looking for. 'Sincere' connotes 'boring.'"

"'Sensitive' is a good word," says the Voice spokesperson. "Wit usually works too. You've got to know the language before placing and ad, though."

A DWM is a divorced white male. A SJW is a single Jewish female. "MWM, clean, safe, discreet" is to be avoided. Read a few, you'll pick up the language. And you might get hooked.

Singles clubs, like the medical profession, have become highly specialized. Groups are formed around a hobby or an abiding interest. If romance doesn't pan out, you still get something for your money.

Chessie Wymark, an English teacher who was widowed two years ago, has belonged to the Single Gourmet for several months. She says, "Twice a month we go to different restaurants. It costs $35 a year to join. Everyone pays for their own meals. The club isn't cheap, but it draws the best people."

Chessie has dated a few of the men. "But I wouldn't begrudge the membership fee if I didn't get dates," she insists. "The meals are truly marvelous experiences."

According to Helen Adler, who runs the Houston chapter, women outnumber men almost three to two. "We get a lot of doctors, though," she adds.

Maybe you don't like good food well enough to pay the price. How about books as the basis for companionship? Or classical music?

JULIA LACY, a retired special-education teacher, formed Bibliobuffs in 1979 as "a Yellow Pages for singles who love to read." There are already 200 members in 18 states. Single Booklovers, another group which has been around longer, has an even larger membership.

Both groups send questionnaires to members who return the completed forms with checks to become part of the club's register. Members who are intrigued by the printed descriptions of other members can send for the specifics and start a correspondence. Both groups claim a high percentage of Mensa people in their listings.

Anne (a pseudonym) currently has 17 "pen affairs" going with men she's discovered through the two book groups. "I'm a shy person," she says, "but I bloom when I talk about books."

She describes herself as "into Tolstoy and John Irving." She plans to meet "a psychology buff who read D.M. Thomas' 'The White Hotel' three times during his last vacation."

John (a pseudonym) did meet several of the women in his Bibliobuffs register. "I was disappointed," he says. "You can't talk about books all the time, I guess."

John's membership has lapsed. He doesn't need a singles group now that he's engaged "to a woman who considers Judith Krantz literature. What can I say?"

Plain vanilla dating services still exist. You pay a fee, fill out a very long questionnaire and wait for the phone to ring after the computer has matched you with dream dates. But video dating is more exciting. And it takes the guesswork out of meeting a stranger in a restaurant.

After paying the fee ($200 to $300 is standard) and filling out the forms, the new client is interviewed on video tape.

Explains Don Moore, owner of The Introduction Company in St. Louis, "The tapes run about three to six minutes. The atmosphere is very casual. We give the client several chances to appear relaxed on camera."

What do these clients say on camera?

"They can talk about anything — work, the foods they like, sports, hobbies, whether or not they've been divorced. We just want them to be comfortable so they'll display themselves to the best advantage on tape."

THE COMPLETED full-color tape goes into the customer's file. During the year a client may choose up to 30 tapes from the company's file for dating purposes.

The process works like this: If you see a man you'd like to meet, the service sends him a postcard identifying you. Then he comes to the office to preview your tape and decide if he would like to meet you.

Lifestyle policies

The policies for publication of announcements in the Lifestyle Department of The Midland Reporter-Telegram are:

Information for Sunday pages must be in our office by 5 p.m. the preceding Tuesday. For publication in a weekday paper, we must receive the information by noon two days before the information is to run. For example, an item to appear in Wednesday's paper must be received by noon Monday.

Engagement announcements must appear at least four weeks before the wedding date. Wedding stories must be submitted within five days of the event.

Engagements, weddings, anniversaries and club notices must be submitted in writing. All materials should include the name and telephone number of the person submitting them. These items appear in the Sunday paper only. The Reporter-Telegram has forms for announcements of engagements, weddings and anniversaries.

We cannot mail pictures or forms to persons within Midland. Pictures must be obtained in the Lifestyle office within one month after publication.

Portraits of the future bride and bridegroom in one photograph may be submitted with engagement announcements. Wedding photographs should be of the bride only.

Photos should be black and white, glossy finish, studio portraits. Studio color pictures may be submitted, but they may reproduce poorly. Quality reproduction cannot be assured when color prints are used.

There is no charge for publication of photographs and stories.

Anniversary celebrated

Mr. and Mrs. H.L. Winkler of Midland will celebrate their 50th wedding anniversary with an Open House at the Ranchland Hills Country Club from 2:30-5 p.m. Oct. 19.

The Ranchland Hills Country Club Board of Directors join Warren and Ann Winkler, the Winkler's son and daughter-in-law, in hosting the open house.

Winkler and the former Agnes Russell were married Nov. 1, 1935, in Dallas. They resided in Dallas until 1948 when they moved to Midland. They have one son, Herald Warren Wikler who resides in Lubbock.

Winkler was founder, owner and general manager of Ranchland Hills Country Club from 1948 to 1972 when he retired and sold it to the membership. He is a Shriner and a life member of the Professional Golf Association.

The Winklers are members of Trinity Episcopal Church.

Girl becomes 'cookie queen'

Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

FALLS CHURCH, Va. — In a campaign that lasted less than two months, 13-year-old Elizabeth Brinton sold more than $25,000 worth of Girl Scout cookies this year. That's an all-time single-season high of 11,200 boxes.

In cookie circles across the nation, and here in this tranquil Washington suburb, she has become such a celebrity that mail addressed to "Elizabeth Brinton, Cookie Queen, Falls Church, Va.," is delivered right to her house.

The Girl Scout U.S.A. national governing body does not keep official sales records. But having sold 36,000 boxes since she began knocking on doors and stalking subway stations at age 6, Elizabeth is widely regarded as the greatest Girl Scout cookie seller of all time.

"I don't want to brag," said Elizabeth, giggling at the thought, "but it's true."

So how does a 104-pound pixie sell 11,200 boxes of cookies?

Very aggressively.

Piling cases of cookies all around her in a chocolate-coconut-peanut butter fortress, she did much of her selling in crowded subway stations as people descended on escalators, or, even better, while they stood waiting for buses at rush hour.

"I do pretty outrageous things. I make weird comments," said Elizabeth, who took advice from her mother, Noel, who sells real estate. (Her father, Fullerton, is a government computer consultant and she also has a sister, Heather, 15.)

"My mom told me, 'Look them in the eye, talk to them personally and speak up.'"

So Elizabeth spoke up.

"I would say, 'They're tax-deductible. We take checks.' And when someone pulled out a check, I'd say, 'Why not buy a whole case?'"

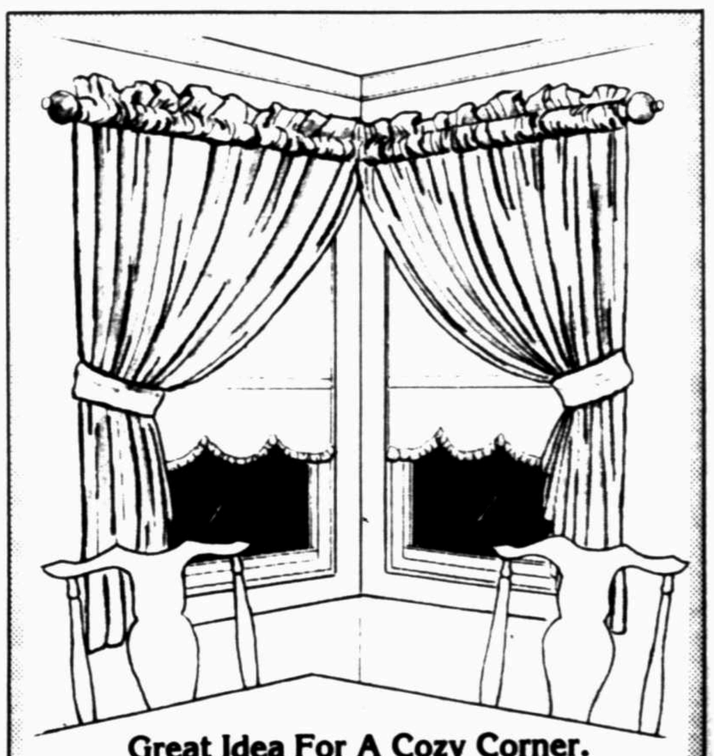

If people replied that they could never eat that many ... "I'd say, 'You can freeze them.'"

'Imposters' doubt their abilities

Hearst News Service

Every time he sat down at his typewriter to write an article, fear rushed at him. His mind reeled: Would this be the time he failed? Would he ever think of a beginning sentence? Would his editor reject the whole piece?

The doubts and uncertainty always hounded the 30ish writer, even though he had published countless articles in national magazines such as Esquire and Cosmopolitan and he'd never missed a deadline.

Last year, Tony (not his real name) landed a staff writing position with a well-respected national magazine. How did he get the job? Was it his writing ability, his reporting skills or his competence? Tony doesn't attribute it to any of these skills. Instead, he says, "I'm a good talker. I know how to sound like I know what I'm doing."

TONY SUFFERS from the "Impostor Syndrome" or the "Impostor Phenomenon."

"It's a feeling among very bright people that they don't deserve success and they doubt their abilities," says Gail Matthews, head of the psychology department at Dominican College in San Rafael, Calif.

Joan Harvey, also a psychologist and author of "If I'm So Successful, Why Do I Feel Like a Fake? The Impostor Phenomenon," elaborates: "Despite the evidence of their success — they may have made lots of money and received various honors — they feel they've fooled others. They're afraid of being found out."

Matthews, who did in-depth interviews with 50 men and women, says, "We found the Impostor Syndrome in all professions: scientists, executives, computer programmers, artists. Everyone from police officers who believe they're only pretending to be tough to rock superstars who fear one day having to beg for food, have experienced the Impostor Syndrome."

Pop star Paul McCartney confesses that he sometimes feels it's all a mirage. As he explained in a recent interview on "Entertainment Tonight": "They can think I'm famous as they like, but in back of it all there's always this sneaking feeling it's not really true. I'm not really him and any second now it's going to finished and I'm going to be bumming around on some beach looking for a meal. I don't know why I think like that — probably my upbringing in Liverpool, where you were never allowed to get above yourself. Someone would come along and knock you down."

THE "SUDDENLY successful" and people in creative fields may be most at risk for the Impostor Syndrome.

"Artists feel they lack true creativity and that they'll be exposed as not talented. They may think they're technically talented but lack that creative genius," says Harvey.

Artists aren't alone, however.

"Management people think they lack management skill. Executives who are good at writing 'obsess' about not being good on the phone. People who are good on the phone 'obsess' about not being good writers. Impostor Syndrome victims think they have something lacking; there's a critical ingredient missing that they need in order to feel successful," says Harvey.

In her book, Harvey categorizes four impostor types:

• Workaholic: Not all workaholics suffer from the Impostor Phenomenon, but workaholism is one of the impostor's behavior patterns. They view their success as being due primarily, or disproportionately, to hard work rather than ability, talent, intelligence or creativity. The catch-22 is they tend to think that they must not be very competent or talented because they have to work so hard.

• Magical thinker: The Impostor Phenomenon magical thinker is a worrier. He has intense, repeated visions of failure as he prepares for the task at hand. Intellectually, the magical thinker knows that worrying is not the real cause of his achievements. Emotionally, however, he believes that if he should ever anticipate doing well, fate would punish him by taking away his success.

• Shrinking Violet: An Impostor Phenomenon shrinking violet is extremely modest, unassuming and reluctant to accept compliments. The shrinking violet feels that any display of pride on his part will eventually be punished by some humiliating failure. He may fear other people's jealousy.

• Charmer: The Impostor Phenomenon charmer tends to be a high achiever who is attractive, likable, socially adept, witty, warm and, in some cases, flirtatious. Charmers think they are "getting by" on their charms, or getting ahead because of their charms rather than their true abilities. They fear that without their social skills the work would stop coming and their friends would abandon them.

LIVING WITH AN "impostor" can be rough. Partners may be subjected to a continual barrage of seemingly empty worries.

"Take them seriously," Harvey advises. "And that's hard to do."

Fine Chinese antiques presented for sale

Associated Press

The People's Republic of China for the first time is selling some of its finest antiques in the United States, with sales taking place this month in Chicago and San Francisco.

The antiques are of museum quality or just below, according to an article in the October issue of Connoisseur, and their sale may open up a new market in Chinese antiques.

For the past four or five years, foreign dealers have been given limited access to these goods, but in general they have been allowed to export only 20th century reproductions — bright, gaudy second-rate merchandise.

Now the Chinese will bring to the United States about 300 examples from the highly refined Qianlong and Jiaqing periods (1736-1821). The shipment includes fine jades and textiles, but the prize items are the two dozen-odd superb pieces of furniture, including lacquer cabinets in pristine condition.

The Chinese pieces will be shown to an invitation-only group of dealers and collectors at the China Art Center in Chicago this week, and to collectors and general public alike at the San Francisco auction house of Butterfield and Butterfield Oct. 28 to Nov. 8.

Hard times said to build character

BUFFALO, N.Y. (AP) — Hard times build character, says a New York university research team which surveyed students who recently had experienced the death of a parent.

Within a year or so, the reseachers said, the students underwent "conversion," a psychological process by which negative events are reinterpreted to yield positive lessons that better equip one to cope with future stress.

The results of the study concluded that the overall mental health of "convertees" was much better than that of either the nonconverted or a control group.

New home-use, health-care kits can predict ovulation

Copley News Service

The age of preventive medicine, when people are learning to take direct responsibility for their well-being, has spawned a new industry: do-it-yourself-care.

Its ingredients: blood-pressure monitoring devices, home pregnancy tests, glucose-measuring equipment for diabetics and ovulation predictor tests.

Retail sales of such high-tech self-care reached an estimated $250 million last year. And the market, according to Tambrands Inc. of Lake Success, N.Y., is growing at the rate of 20 percent annually.

Two of the newest entries in the self-care category are Tambrands' First Response pregnancy and ovulation predictor tests, which its creators claim to be state-of-the-art.

The Ovulation Predictor Test is designed for the 3 million to 5 million American couples having difficulty conceiving and the millions more who want to plan the time of pregnancy. Before this test, the most widely used home procedure has been the basal body temperature method, which only indicates that ovulation has already taken place.

The First Response Pregnancy Test, manufacturers say, can be used as early as the first day of a missed menstrual period, while other such tests provide accurate results only after three to nine days.

The device is designed to provide a "yes" or "no" answer with a simple color change, from clear to blue, in 20 minutes.

Pregnancy brings both dreams, nightmares

Associated Press

Pregnancy is a time of hopes and fears, of dreams — and nightmares.

Doctors describe a pattern of highs and lows during pregnancy, according to an article in the October issue of Harper's Bazaar, and one doctor even says he can tell the stage of a woman's pregnancy by her dreams.

"It's possible to tell how far along a woman is in her pregnancy by hearing her describe her dreams," said Dr. Arthur Colman, clinical professor of psychiatry at the University of California in San Francisco. "Consciousness is altered in fairly predictable patterns throughout the nine months."

During the first three months or trimester, the rise in estrogen and progesterone may cause fatigue and morning sickness.

"Women who have suffered from premenstrual syndrome or who have had adverse reactions to the Pill may be especially prone to these fluctuations," said Dr. Niels Lauersen, clinical professor of obstetricsgynecology at New York Medical College.

This is when a woman faces the fact that her life will never again be the same. She also worries about miscarriage until the doctor detects a fetal heartbeat.

The second three months of pregnancy may be the best, said Dr. Marya Anna Friederich, clinical associate professor of obstetricsgynecology and psychiatry at the University of Rochester School of Medicine.

Women are more comfortable physically as the body adjusts to pregnancy. They switch their focus from themselves to the baby.

"They feel it move, sense it as a separate individual," she said.

The third trimester, according to the story in the magazine's "Special Guide Section to a Healthy Over-30 Pregnancy," brings "prepartum blues."

"A lot of women don't feel as attractive as they did a few months along," Lauersen said. "They're emotionally down because they're heavier, tired, bloated."

Women in the final trimester often feel irritable, anxious and mildly depressed. The uterus begins to press on other organs. The stomach is pushed up and flattened, causing indigestion and heartburn. Pressure on the lungs can make breathing difficult.

"A major concern is 'Will my baby be normal?'" said Elisabeth Bing, a certified childbirth educator and pioneer in promoting the Lamaze technique. "This question isn't voiced frequently, but when I actually ask women if they are worried, they say yes. Sonograms help reassure them."

Women also fear the pain of childbirth.

"There is anticipation of enormous discomfort, of tremendous stress," Bing said. "Women say, 'I can't stand a lot of pain. How will I cope with it? I'd like to have a natural birth, with as little medication as possible, but will I give up in the middle?' This issue looms very large."

Diana Simkin, cofounder and director of Family Focus Inc. in New York City, calls the final month a trimester in itself.

"From the 34th to 40th weeks," she said, "women begin to zero in on what it will be like to be a mother."

Childbirth classes provide an expectant mother with a forum for expressing her fears and alleviating the blues, but some women are too frightened to attend. That is unfortunate, Eileen Stukane wrote in Harper's Bazaar, because obstetricians and other pregnant women can be the most understanding counselors.

'Seeing is believing' for developer

NEW YORK (AP) — A real estate developer who approached one of the original Rothschilds for a business loan discovered sometimes seeing is believing when it comes to raising money.

According to "The Persuasion Explosion," by Art Stevens, Rothschild turned the developer down but promised: "Meet me tomorrow on the floor of the London Stock Exchange. We will walk across it together. When my bankers see me with my arm around you, you'll get from them all the financing you need."

Woman spins yarn so friends can 'put on the dog'

SAGINAW, Minn. (AP) — While most dog owners toss the loose hair in the garbage without a second thought after grooming their pets, Peggy Swan is recycling that hair into clothing for family and friends.

The Saginaw woman spins yarn from the dog hair, dyes it with Kool-Aid and creates sweaters, hats and vests that are soft to the touch, comfortable to wear and appealing to the eye.

"I kind of like the grape and lemonade myself," she said.

Making clothing from animal hair isn't unheard of — after all, that's what wool, angora and mohair are. But, Swan says, "You don't want to be ordinary. I like to do different things."

Swan says she read about the techniques of spinning dog hair into yarn and dyeing it in magazines. The practice of spinning dog hair into yarn is quite popular in some areas, she said. "In Alaska, you have to buy it (dog hair)."

The Swan family once raised Samoyeds, the large, white, long-haired dogs popular in Alaska and other northern climates. It was during that time she learned about spinning dog hair into yarn in a magazine for Samoyed owners.

Coincidentally, this came not long after Swan had learned to use a spinning wheel and not long before she read about the process of dyeing the yarn. So it's logical that her mind brought a spinning wheel, dog hair and Kool-Aid together into an unusual knitting art.

The Arc de Triomphe flanks the busy Champs Elysees, above. Even the urban French, like this couple in Luxembourg Gardens, below, are an outdoorsy people. Their love of nature and art shows in the flowers and sculptures adorning Paris, bottom.

Text by Melissa Fletcher

PARIS, FRANCE

EDITOR'S NOTE: Reporter-Telegram chief photographer Ron Jaap and San Antonio Light staff writer Melissa Fletcher were among the participants in a recent media tour of France sponsored by the French government. This is the first of a two-part series, concluding next Sunday, about their visit.

Paris does not belong to Parisians in the summertime. It belongs to people with cameras around their necks and sunburns on their noses, people who order Coca-Cola with their dinners in four-star restaurants. Go to Paris in the summer and you're likely to encounter more Americans than Parisians. Walk down the Champs Elysees and you'll hear a swirling mixture of French, Brooklynese, Texan and Californian. Most Parisians escape the tourism of the summer months by taking extended vacations in Normandy.

But, fortunately, the sites which draw the tourists are still there (if you can see around the tour buses). That not only includes traditional sites like the Arc de Triomphe and the Eiffel Tower, but also everyday buildings, shops and administration offices and restaurants.

Paris is a city of juxtapositions, where the glorious past stands untouched in the midst of modernity. To a Texan born and raised on Stop-n-Go, a simple stroll around the block in Paris can cause wide-eyed amazement. Most buildings are five or six stories high, usually with boutiques, perfumeries, jewelers or restaurants on the first floor and offices or apartments on upper floors.

Block after block of these long, white buildings flow past the tour bus window, presenting a never-ending stream of crenellation and medallion work, embedded cherubs and cornices, Gothic arches and fluted columns. It is an extravagant architecture drenched in history.

As a group of travel writers exploring France, our indoctrination into European life began at the airport, where the pungent smell of body odor surrounded us. We became used to it quickly, the same way we grew accustomed to not buttering our bread and holding our forks inside out. Dogs were as omnipresent as the body odor, adding their own special contribution to the atmosphere.

Everyone in Paris owns a dog, and the mutts are allowed everywhere, in airports, restaurants, even department stores. Small breeds are especially in vogue, so that a walk down the sidewalk entails negotiating battalions of terriers, bulldogs and poodles. An interesting observation: French dogs rarely wag their tails.

On the way in, we noticed a man relieving himself on the side of the road. Yes, we had certainly arrived. But trundling into Paris proper, we all brightened noticeably. It was simply too beautiful to ignore: the lush architecture, the wide boulevards and the gleaming Seine River, which runs lazily through the city.

We sailed over wide bridges, past expansive plazas graced by copper statues of gods and goddesses gone green with age. These mythological creatures are larger than life, towering above streetgoers, with flowing robes, intricately curled locks and staunch visages.

With each block came scenes straight out of a history book. But what is perhaps most amazing is the nonchalance with which Parisians co-exist with all this history. Designer shops stand next to age-old palaces. A marquee for a Chuck Norris adventure film (Parisians adore American movies) trades scowls with a statue of Zeus across the way. People stood casually smoking cigarettes under a fierce-looking Diana, looming 15 feet above their heads, clutching her bow and arrow.

IF YOU take an unescorted trip to France, it's best to learn French; if you can't do that, try to learn as many useful phrases as possible before you go ("Where do you buy Metro tickets?" "How much?" "Where is the bathroom?") and take a good phrase book with you. And smile a lot. The French were not as rude as we expected, and some were downright friendly.

Our hotel was only a few streets away from the famous Champs Elysees, the two-mile long boulevard flanked by the Arc de Triomphe and the Concord Plaza, the breezy promenade where Marie Antoinette's head was removed. We drove down the Champs, passing droves of tourists who sauntered in the late afternoon sun. Many more were sitting in the numerous outdoor cafes, drinking bottled water, espresso or wine.

Though the public water system is fine, most Parisians drink bottled water, and tourists follow suit. Our French guide, Bernard, a smiling, good-humored fellow, said it's because French people just like the best of everything. We learned later that the Burger King of the Champs Elysees serves wine.

We passed a stand marked "hot dogs and crepes." We passed window boxes full of flowers. Like dogs, brightly colored flowers are everywhere in Paris. As you leave the city and journey through the rolling, idyllic countryside, you see even more flowers. Even the most modest whitewashed cottage will have its own screaming retinue of tulips, pansies and roses.

Every meal entailed at least four courses, usually many more. On our first night we were subjected to canapes, bread, a salmon appetizer, beef medallions in sauce, strawberry and cream crepes, petit fours, chocolate and espresso. And that was one of our lighter meals.

In the seven days we spent in France, we ate almost every creature known to fly in the sky, crawl on the ground or swim in the sea. France is not a haven for vegetarians. We ate roundly at every meal, since the French government wanted to be sure we were sufficiently impressed with the national cuisine. As a result, we were satiated to the point of catatonia most of the time.

It's really not wise to overindulge at lunch in France — it can sap strength needed for site-seeing. The sidewalk cafes, with their formica tables and plastic chairs, offered lighter fare at reasonable prices.

Evenings in Paris are a delight. The temperature ranges between 65 and 70 degrees during the summer months, so air conditioners are unheard of except in fancier hotels and restaurants.

France's Brittany: 'The world stops here'

By NEIL MORGAN
Copley News Service

My French is bad enough. My cold was worse.

As I sat sniffling at a Paris sidewalk cafe, my good friend Nicole Garnier offered a plan:

"Go to Brittany. The iodes will make you well."

"Yodes?" I asked. "Yodes?"

"But of course. They are in the air, along the seashore, everywhere. You breathe them."

The trains to Rennes depart from Gare Montparnasse, and I took one before full light the next morning. It was a holiday weekend, and the train was nearly full as we raced through Le Mans to the Brittany peninsula, the western tip of Europe.

"The world stops here," a French poet wrote.

Brittany is like no other part of France, and its people are unlike other French. Seafaring Bretons came from Wales, Cornwall and Devon in the fourth and fifth centuries. Still they stamp the faces of every village, the language and fashion and speech. It is a small, quiet land that opens to those who bother to seek out its secrets. The few cities are found beside estuaries where fresh water meets salt, and fishing boats lie on their sides at low tide.

The late Helen MacInnes described such a scene in her 1942 spy novel "Assignment in Brittany": "Here, where the tides had swirled out a muddy inlet, there were still small groupings of simple houses, with their inevitable jetties and anchored boats and drying fishing nets. The houses hugged each other tightly as if to give themselves courage."

CNS Photo

Granite carvings four to five centuries old adorn Brittany's churchyards, like these at Guimiliau, which represent scenes from the Passion of the Cross.

AMERICANS DO not yet filter out to Brittany in large numbers. To us it remains a conundrum, shy of famed restaurants or resorts, great vineyards or heralded sights.

But this changes rapidly. Brittany is inexpensive. Its people, many of them blue eyed and fair, respond to American kindness like forgotten relatives. Its network of hostels for hikers and bikers lures the young. Granite cottages can be rented for a week at the cost of a night in Paris. New Michelin stars guide the American to fine Breton food. The Relais et Chateaux group includes a dozen Breton inns of rare character and warmth.

Brittany is small enough that it is easy to base at such an inn, and make day drives to discover any part of the peninsula.

The most familiar sight remains one claimed both by Brittany and Normandy: Mont St. Michel, that island of tiered turrets and spires, a rock mountain of medieval mystery towering above 6 miles of treacherous tidal flats and bogs. Currents race in, their distant groans swelling quickly into thunder.

But the essence of old Brittany is in the southwest. It is 170 miles from Rennes, where I left the Paris train, to Pointe du Raz, above the roiling Atlantic.

For all this distance Brittany is a peninsula overhung with scudding clouds that bring sudden, short showers; in winter, rasping winds bear smells of the sea. The north and south coasts are nowhere more than 95 miles apart. The north coast, red and rocky, lines the English Channel. That nearness has shaped Brittany from the arrival of the Celts and on through the terrors of the Hundred Years War, when Brittany was a battlefield between English and French.

IN MORE recent years members of the French Resistance, Allied spies and the Gestapo stalked each other by night across Breton moors and through its villages and farms. Counteragents flying from British airfields dropped into Breton woods by parachute, or made shuddering landings by flashlight signal on bumpy fields. At first the Nazis were setting up forward bases for an invasion of England that never came; later, it was the Allies, softening the French channel coast for their landings on nearby Normandy beaches.

Now, from Roscoff and Dinard and St. Malo on the north coast, great gleaming British car ferries ply the channel, calling at the islands of Guernsey and Jersey on their way to ports of Devon and Cornwall and even Dublin. Tidy towns like Benodet have become summer resorts for the British. Somber granite homes along the north coast are unshuttered only with the arrival of British owners in summer. The fishermen of both England's Cornwall and of Brittany steam into port with generous catches of Dover sole.

Breton fishermen delighted, a century ago, in raiding Cornish fishing villages across the channel. They are a quieter lot today, and their kinship conceded. "The strangest thing of all," MacInnes wrote, "was to know that the Bretons were more closely related to the Cornishmen than they were to other Frenchmen, or than the Cornishmen were related to other Englishmen."

The old language of Brittany, heard less these days, is close to Welsh. The suffix guic , seen on countless road signs, means village. Place names are rich with Celtic syllables such as plou, lann, hoet, trou and ker.

THE CHURCHES that grew in a Catholic land from this Celtic culture are unique, and reason enough to visit Brittany. Centuries ago, marine traders grew wealthy. Unlike more conventional mariners, they did not build dynasties; they brought profits home to erect proud towns and churches. Mont St. Michel is a memorial to seafaring wealth. So are hundreds of churches across Brittany: granite masses with lacy belfries, snuggled within the walls of parish closes with their incomparable calvaries, faces and figures hewn by stonecutters, depicting episodes of the Passion of the Cross. Many were carved at the end of the 16th century in hope of diverting an epidemic of plague, or in gratitude for survival.

Almost every Sunday, at some parish church in Brittany, is a pardon day when faith and tradition merge: the purging of sin represented by a bonfire after the procession of parishioners, some still in Breton costume: men with beribboned felt hats, women with towering lace coiffes.

On Sunday I drove to St. Yves, a village near Bubry, for its annual pardon. There were not enough of us foreigners present to be noticed, and our cameras did not offend. The parish of St. Yves had brought reinforcements: four busloads of young musicians from larger towns, and three bagpipe bands vied in the cacophony of the procession past the village shops and its single cafe. Three priests and the elders of the parish carried the crucifix and the treasures of their church and stood solemnly as the bonfire blazed, taking aloft their sins and leaving the scent of pardon in the air.

OTHER TREASURES of Brittany are easily reached in day trips from Chateau de Locguenole near Hennebont, the most sumptuous hostelry of Brittany and one of its three two-star kitchens; or from Les Moulins du Duc near Moelan-sur-Mer, an enchanted, single-star inn with rooms in traditional stone Breton houses built around ancient mill wheels.

Some of my favorite discoveries:

— Carnac, where 3,000 stones make up forests of megaliths, some 15 feet high, that precede known history and make Britain's Stonehenge seem a toy copy. Some stones weigh 350 tons; they were set up by a race who preceded the Gauls, between 2,000 B.C. and 50,000 B.C. Lines of menhirs relate to the solar system and probably to worship of sun or moon.

— Pont-Aven, a river town favored by artists, with pleasant galleries and restaurants. There are good native painters. Gauguin, a Breton, painted here. Jean-Yves Mayeux, whose moody Breton oils first dazzled me at the Ritz Hotel in Paris, clings stubbornly to his studio in Port-Haliguen, the old fishing port of the Quiberon peninsula. His daughter Stephanie presides over a simple gallery of his works nearby. If you are buying a Mayeux or two, at prices from $300 to $900, you can subsidize your Brittany holiday with the savings below Mayeux prices in Paris galleries.

— Guilvinec and Loctudy, small fishing ports that should be visited around 5 p.m., when boats are racing back into harbor with their catches of shrimp and lobster, tuna, Dover sole and crawfish. Those who crave oysters will know bliss in Brittany. The incomparable Belon oyster is brought almost directly from its bed to the table at restaurants near the Belon River estuary.

— Quimper, where the ancient Breton tradition of hand-painted pottery is carried on under the subsidy of Belgian sponsors. Here, too, is the ultimately unforgettable cathedral.

ITS CHOIR is quite out of line with its nave. The journey down the aisle is a crooked one. Since the blunder occurred four or five centuries ago, there is disagreement over which architect failed to get straight his lines of sight.

— Locronan, a village whose exquisite central square of granite houses and shops and inns was built during the Renaissance and is immaculately preserved.

— Pleyben, a town of 4,000 residents, with one of the grandest calvaries of Brittany. Nearby are the churches and calvaries and parish closes of St-Thegonnec, Guimiliau and Lampaul-Guimiliau. Their simple majesty is gripping. Some calvaries have as many as 200 carved figures.

— Chateau de Locguenole, set in a forest of chestnuts and cypress and rhododendron near Hennebont. With its low-key, two-star kitchen and its elegant bedrooms, it is the ultimate Breton retreat. It is the ancestral home of its proprietor, Mme. Alyette de la Sabliere, a woman who epitomizes the blending of French chic and Breton heartiness.

One day Mme. de la Sabliere led me on a tour of a seafront health spa for which the nearby Quiberon peninsula is famed in Europe.

The smell of kelp was heavy in the air.

"Yodes?" I asked her, suddenly remembering why I had come to Brittany.

She laughed.

"It is the great secret of the spa," she said. "The smell of the salt air, the sea, the weeds. There are iodes everywhere. I think you call the smell iodine. It is supposed to cure anything."

I breathed deeply, and was certain that my cold was gone.

Parisian flea market celebrates centennial

PARIS (AP) — Rusty World War I helmets, 17th-century commodes, plastic shoes and leather T-shirts, centuries-old silver baby cups and used tuxedo shirts.

These are some of the myriad objects to be had for a price at the Marche aux Puces, Paris' largest and most popular flea (puces) market, which is celebrating its 100th anniversary this summer.

For many tourists, a visit to the Puces ranks with the Eiffel Tower. Some 120,000 people, in fact, are estimated to flock north to the Metro stop Porte de Clignancourt each weekend, the nearest convenient point to the St. Ouen market complex. The Puces is open only Saturday, Sunday and Monday, but year round.

The days when a lucky few would stumble unknowingly on dust-covered masterpieces now worth millions are long gone, but the 75-acre Puces draws hordes of bargain-hunting tourists, savvy antique collectors and dealers.

"When I see all this junk, I keep wondering where it all comes from," said Penelope Bender, an 18-year-old from Charlottesville, Va. "There's so much of it, and it doesn't look like American junk."

Ms. Bender's search for a heart-shaped locket ended in vain, but she said she enjoyed rummaging through old movie posters and piles of lace underwear, and lunching on the traditional flea market fare of sausage and french fries.

The Puces came into existence in 1885 when hawkers and junk peddlers were banished from downtown Paris and forced to sell their wares, mainly used clothes and household items, in the countryside north of the city.

Today, the Puces is big business, with some 10,000 people earning their living in its 3,000 separate stands. Judging from the luxury cars that line the narrow streets around the market, it is a profitable business, with yearly turnover estimated around $120 million, half of it coming from foreigners.

"There are more and more Americans coming to buy at the Flea Market," said Giselle Gaboriaud, a dealer in antique silver in the Puces' Serpette section. "Not just in the tourist season, but all year round."

Still, prices of antiques — a pair of sterling silver serving forks was about $80 — are usually 15 to 20 percent cheaper than in downtown antique shops.

PARIS

Daylight lasts until around 11 p.m., when a luminescent, azure sky lights up the roofs of the ornate buildings. The French are an outdoorsy people, whether they hail from city or countryside. Their love of nature is reflected in their flowers, clean streets and expertly-manicured public gardens.

Being outdoors at dusk in Paris, walking the streets with the multitudes, strolling in front of brightly-lit cafes is an exhilarating experience.

WE TOOK an afternoon tour of Paris by bus, guided by an elegant Sophia Loren look-alike who acquainted us with the copious history behind practically every structure in the city. She told us that, while there are 10 million Parisians, only 2 million live in the city, the remaining 8 million are strewn out in clusters of hilly suburbs.

We caught only glimpses of those suburbs as we sped along freeways; we came to know the city as intimately as possible in a 2½-hour period. We were driven past countless churches, bridges and government palaces, the latter always guarded by a phalanx of gendarmes. We cruised by Rodin's sculpture "The Thinker," scowling in a garden, and paused in front of the Cafe de Fleure, where existentialist writer Jean Paul Satre sat contemplating life over warm beer.

We stopped at the long strip of park in front of the Eiffel Tower, and chided the most militantly anti-tourist journalist among us for having his picture taken in front of that dark, looming skeleton.

Unfortunately, we'd had our usual big lunch, and eyelids were approaching half-mast halfway through the tour. We disembarked for a tour of Notre Dame, the famous cathedral that took 150 years, beginning in 1163, to build.

It is a Gothic wonder, a study in incredibly high, arched ceilings, intricately detailed architecture, immense stained glass windows and darkly beautiful paintings. In the shadowy, subdued light, flocks of tourists filed up and down on either side of the great pews, clicking pictures.

WHILE THE evenings in Paris have their own heady electricity, and the afternoons their frenzy, the mornings are the most magical. "Doesn't Paris look rested in the morning?" asked Bernard as we sleepily made our way to the train station.

It was 6:30 a.m. on Monday, our third day, and we were bound for Dijon, the city famous for its mustard, wine and currant liquor. Our high speed train was due to pull out in 45 minutes, but wanted to linger.

A golden, diffused light bathed the palaces and statues, even the million little cars parked up on the sidewalk. Armies of pigeons pecked at the ground, getting in feed time before the daily onslaught of legs and feet. A crew of workers, armed with what looked like medieval metal brooms, raked the already clean gravel.

Everything moved in a slow, lyrical motion, and the air had an undefinable sort of sweetness to it.

In less than an hour, the streets would be clogged once again with cars and buses, but by then we'd be on our way to Dijon.

DEAR ABBY

Endless flow of family drains mother's strength

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: I'm writing to you because I don't know where else to turn. I live in the mountains and have a nice home with extra space to put people up. Here was the schedule for last summer: First my daughter and her husband came for 10 days. Then my brother and his wife came for two weeks. When they left, my grandson and his wife came for a week. Over the Labor Day weekend, my son and his wife came with their three children.

Abby, I'm 72 years old and tire easily. As I write this, I am so exhausted I can hardly hold my head up. I never let on how weary I am. Sometimes at the end of a day, I cry. I do all the cooking and cleaning myself because I don't think it's right to ask guests to help out. And they seldom offer. No one realizes how hard is it on me because I never complain.

My family is already planning to come for Thanksgiving and Christmas. What should I do? — DEAD TIRED IN NORTH CAROLINA

DEAR TIRED: Dry your tears and retire the welcome mat. It's time to speak your mind. Tell your family that you can no longer accommodate houseguests for more than an occasional weekend. And don't be bashful about asking them to pitch in with the cooking and cleaning. Unless you do, your family will assume that they are welcome as usual. And who can blame them?

DEAR ABBY: Let me enlighten "Bride to Be," who says, "Nowhere can you dance all evening, and eat and drink all you want for $20."

Well, I'll tell you where you can dance all evening, eat and drink all you want (coffee, tea, punch — no liquor) for $5 a couple.

Learn to square dance! It's fantastic fun, relieves tension and stress, is good exercise, and you meet lots of great people and create lasting friendships. Also, there are no problems getting home alive after a "bash," and no threat to others on the road.

Square dancing is not for old fogeys, either; it's for people of all ages. I know. I speak for many square dance fans. — JOYCE IN BERTHOUD, COLO.

DEAR JOYCE: You certainly do. In just one club in Southern California, there are 5,000 members — from pre-teens to men and women in their 80s. There are clubs for couples, clubs for singles, clubs for families and parties for every holiday. The dues are affordable, and I'm told that folks who square dance are the happiest, wholesomest, friendliest people you'd ever want to meet. So do-si-do, allemande left, swing your partner, weave the ring, load the boat, and promenade!

DEAR ABBY: The lady in my life (I'll call her Wanda) is a 36-year-old widow with one child — a 16-year-old son. I'll call him Buddy. He's a good kid, but his mother has spoiled him rotten. He talks to his friends on the telephone for two and sometimes three hours consecutively. Wanda has to interrupt his conversation in order to use the phone — then he rushes her to get off so he can resume his conversation. I have given up trying to call because her line is always busy. Wanda sees nothing wrong with this. She says she "loves" him, and the telephone is sort of a substitute father, so who am I to argue with her?

Right now she's doing Buddy's homework while he's playing a record for someone over the phone.

I think something is terribly wrong here. What do you think? — WANDA'S MAN

DEAR MAN: I think Wanda is setting Buddy up to be ill-equipped to handle life's problems. Children need to learn discipline, responsibility and consideration for others in order to become productive and self-sufficient. That's love.

Letting Buddy goof off while she does his homework is giving him a sadly distorted picture of the real world. For all Wanda's good intentions, Buddy will be the big loser in the end. Wanda needs to be wised up.

(Every teen-ager should know the truth about sex, drugs and how to be happy. Box 38923, Hollywood, Calif. 90038.)

AT WIT'S END

Long hair requires patience

By ERMA BOMBECK

There is only one other promise I've made to myself more often than "Monday, I am going on a diet." That is, "I'm going to let my hair grow long."

Usually, something triggers it, like a waiter will return my charge card and say, "Thank you, sir, come in again," or I'll try on a large brimmed hat and a friend will look at me and say, "That reminds me, I've got to have dinner early. Fred's bowling in a tournament tonight."

Hair is more than just a style or a preference. It's a revealing look at the woman wearing it. Short hair is practical. It's cute. It's the polyester of hair. It's drip-dry, no wrinkles, no nonsense and travels easily.

It's the mark of a woman who bleaches her dishrags, counts her change and takes a handbag to the ski slopes. She wears underwear under her pantyhose.

Women with long, silky, sexy hair live in another galaxy. They wear sunglasses on top of their head, drive around with expired licenses and figure if God had meant for them to use a comb he would never have invented fingers.

Long hair also says something else about a woman. It identifies her as the patron saint of patience.

I have never understood why my toenails can grow three inches in an afternoon while my hair will grow to the tip of my coat collar and go into growth arrest. This is the point that separates the sex symbols from the who-needs-this group.

I tell myself that Jaclyn Smith probably at one time had a piece of hair over each ear that would neither go forward nor backwards, and one night in a moment of desperation, she chopped it off with a pair of needlepoint scissors, but I don't really believe it.

I want to believe that Cybill Shepherd was born with capped teeth and hair the entire length of her body, but I honestly can't buy that either.

No, there's something to be admired in these long-haired beauties who have the courage to tough it out. Women who have babied their locks through those awkward years when it won't curl and it won't straighten, when it's too long for a bang and too short for a side part, when it's too painful to have their ears removed surgically, and it looks too rotten to go out in public wearing it.

As I told a hairdresser last week, "This is it. My last haircut. Even if I crawl in here on my hands and knees with a blank check and beg you to cut my hair, I want you to say no. Stand firm even if I whimper and make threats and promise to destroy myself. Are we agreed?"

He yawned. He had heard it all before.

Researchers study trash dump for possible link to MS rate

KEY WEST, Fla. (AP) — Medical researchers are studying the possibility that a 19-acre trash dump dubbed "Mount Trashmore" may be causing an alarmingly high incidence of multiple sclerosis.

Disease experts have confirmed 31 cases of the paralyzing disease in Monroe County, made up mostly of the Florida Keys. Of the 31 victims, 29 live in Key West and 10 have either lived near or worked at the city dump.

Any area reporting more than 30 cases of MS per 100,000 population is labeled a high-risk area. Key West has a rate of more than 100 per 100,000.

"I know there is a lot of concern in Key West that there might be an environmental cause of the disease," said Dr. Matthew Zack of the federal Centers for Disease Control in Atlanta.

"But so far the most plausible theory is that persons who lived in northern climates migrated southward carrying with them the excess risk of disease," Zack said.

Researchers have found that people who live in the north usually are more susceptible to MS than those who live in the south. MS affects the central nervous system, causing speech defects and loss of muscle coordination.

The man-made mountain, which was built over 50 years with trash, garbage and poisonous materials, now stands six stories high and is oozing into the blue waters surrounding the island city.

"A lot of people in town are convinced Mount Trashmore is to blame," said Dr. William Bigler of the Florida Department of Health and Rehabilitative Services.

Last month, investigators from the state, the CDC and a private biomedical research institute came to Key West to find out what is causing the disease to spread.

DR. KURIANSKY

Dealing with AIDS

By Dr. JUDITH KURIANSKY

AIDS: It has surpassed cancer in myths and fear. As the media makes more people aware of AIDS, more questions and concerns emerge.

Acquired Immune Deficiency Disease is a deadly illness which is shrouded in misinformation. It's imperative to keep up to date about the facts: what it is, how it is spread and what you can do to prevent catching it.

Then it is important to confront your feelings about it. This is especially crucial with regard to your children and AIDS.

When President Reagan got colon cancer, people began to speak openly about bowels and other body functions that were hitherto taboo.

When Rock Hudson was diagnosed as having AIDS, similarly taboo subjects have "come out of the closet."

Witness this question from a 40-year-old woman:

Q. "I've been reading about AIDS and I'm scared. I'm divorced, but I've been seeing one man for quite a while now. I know he's the only one for me, and I think he's faithful to me, but I cannot be positive. I'm panicked now about what he might be doing. What should I say to him? I need to know if it is just as dangerous to have intercourse as it is to have oral or anal sex."

A. I am surprised that you, like an increasing number of men and women today, can use the words "oral and anal sex" so easily. I rarely ever feel comfortable writing or speaking about the latter in lectures. The former, though it is the most frequently asked subject (when I ask people to write down their questions about sex on anonymous cards), also causes the most anxiety. Yet now it is crucial to discuss them, to know.

All the facts on AIDS are not in. We must acknowledge that. But the best information to date is that the type of sexual activity that is dangerous is that which involves the exchange of blood products or body fluids. Rips, even imperceptible ones, in the lining of any of the orifices (the vagina, the anus or the mouth) are dangerous. Sex involving the mouth can be risky because of the likelihood of sores or cuts, even after brushing your teeth.

Obviously, the safest kind of sex would involve holding and touching. But let's not get out of hand about this. Not everyone is walking around as a potential carrier. If you know your sex partner and have been together monogamously, you need not let your fears get out of control.

IF YOU HAVE any doubts about your partner's sexual liaisons, ask. For all the women who have been wanting to, but have been fearful of, discussing commitment, the AIDS threat poses a more emotionally and socially acceptable excuse.

And the man who hesitated to discuss his fidelity, or protested being trapped, can also have a less conflict-ridden context in which to talk. He may also be more willing to curb his wandering eye.

Be direct. Say, "I've been reading about this disease, AIDS. I'm worried about it. I'm worried about herpes too, but this is more serious, because it's life and death. I realize that we have hesitated talking about our lives outside our relationship, I want to talk about it without your feeling like I am boxing you in."

If your partner cannot tolerate such directness, discuss the issue of AIDS in more impersonal way. Say, "What do you think of AIDS? Does it frighten you? What impact do you think it will have on the sexual practices of people?" He is bound to reveal his feelings about himself in his answer.

Some factions see AIDS as a punishment for sex or as a justification for ultra-conservatism in sexual behavior. I am in favor of the movement away from casual sex and toward morality and commitment. But AIDS should not, in my view, be taken as a warning to be anti-sex. You may just be using AIDS as an excuse. Be cautious and be open and you will reduce your risk without totally destroying sexual pleasure.

AIDS has recently not only become a threat to women, but also to children. When helpless youngsters contract such a serious disease, it makes adults feel that much more vulnerable and helpless themselves. Parents' fears, guilt and anger escalate. They become confused as to how and what to tell their children.

MANY MOTHERS have told me they have not talked to their children about AIDS. As a mother of an 8-year-old said, "My daughter won't understand about it anyway, so I'd rather not say."

Many parents also don't know what to say. They don't know the facts or they are too anxious about the subject, and fear transmitting that anxiety to their children.

The three topics of sex, death and AIDS are intertwined, since AIDS can lead to death and can be transmitted by sex, and the same guidelines apply to parent-child discussions.

It's OK for you as a parent not to know everything. You can tell your children, "We don't know all the facts. I don't personally, and even the doctors don't." Be sure to add, "I know that may make you feel confused, but that's the truth." The fear of unanswered questions is less than the fear of the unknown.

It's also OK for you as a parent to be anxious about the subject (of sex, death or AIDS). Express your fear to other adults. Then calmly have a talk with your children.

Answer any questions. Don't be afraid that you're telling them too much or that they won't understand. If they don't, they won't absorb it.

Bring it up even if they don't ask, if you think your children are hearing about it on TV or elsewhere. One 7-year-old girl told me she thought you can get AIDS at the doctor's office from the other patients. Her mother was shocked to hear this. She had no idea when a month previously she had taken her daughter to the doctor that she had developed this thought. She didn't even know she knew the word!

AIDS IS A health problem. Talk to your children about good health practices. That will ease the fear. Give them specific things to do. Tell them, "If you're out playing and a friend gets a cut, come get me or the school nurse (depending on where you are) to put a bandage on it right away." And, "it would be best not to drink out of the same can, or put your mouth too close to the water fountain spigot."

Children are hardier than we think. Sometimes we trick ourselves into thinking we won't tell them about something with the intention of "protecting" them. We are really protecting ourselves.

Dr. Kuriansky is a columnist for King Features Syndicate.

No-fault divorce shown faulty

New York Times News Service

WASHINGTON — No-fault divorces have been a psychological blessing for both sexes but an economic disaster for many women and children, says Lenore Weitzman, who spent more than a decade studying the fallout from the revolutionary reform.

In 1970, California instituted the nation's first no-fault divorce law. It provided for divorce if either spouse asserted that "irreconcilable differences have caused the irremediable breakdown of the marriage."

Today similar no-fault proceedings are the sole means or an option for divorce in every state except South Dakota.

Weitzman last week described to the Women's Legal Defense Fund some highlights of her new, 504-page lifework, "The Divorce Revolution."

"We have reduced the acrimony and trauma, the hypocrisy, perjury and bitterness surrounding divorce proceedings," she said. "However, these laws have also had unanticipated, unintended and unfortunate consequences."

Among consequences she listed were these:

• Unsurprisingly, both parties still suffer financially after a divorce, with men losing 19 percent and women 29 percent of income.

• Surprisingly, when income was compared to federal standards for basic family needs, men's standard of living after a divorce improved by 42 percent, while women experienced a 73 percent decline.

• Women are awarded smaller shares of tangible property than they used to receive.

• Only 15 percent of divorced women get any alimony and the typical award expires within 25 months.

• The woman, who 90 percent of the time gets custody of the children, gets an average custody payment of $200 a month for two children, and is less likely than before to be awarded the family home.

"Put bluntly, divorce is a financial catastrophe for most women," Weitzman said.

Children suffer too. More than half of single-parent families (82 percent of which arise from separation or divorce) live in poverty. Current estimates are that 60 percent of American children will spend some time in a single-parent family before they reach the age of 18.

What went wrong?

"When the legal system treats men and women 'equally' at divorce, it ignores the very real economic inequalities that marriage creates (and) also ignores the economic inequalities between men and women in the larger society," she said. "Even in two-career families most married couples give priority to the husband's career."

Weitzman said the new divorce rules fail to give the woman an equal share of the man's enhanced earning capacity, assume incorrectly that all women can speedily enter a labor market in which many have outdated experience and few skills, and make inadequate allowance for the additional child care burden of working mothers.

"If I had one remedy to offer, it would be this," Weitzman said. "Our aim should be to adjust divorce laws so that men and women have the same standard of living following a divorce and so that children can share in their father's standard of living."

Short-term remedies include higher child support awards, vigorously enforced, and higher "spousal awards" (alimony), said Weitzman, whose preliminary results contributed to passage of the federal child-support collection law that went into effect Oct. 1.

A longer-term remedy outlined in detail in her book would be to divide between divorcing partners not just tangible assets, like home equity or bank accounts, which in most cases are small, but "career assets" as well.

She argued that those "career assets" — typically pension and retirement benefits, professional or trade education and licenses, access to free or inexpensive hospital and medical insurance, the goodwill of a business, and use of company goods and services — should be counted as divisible property if they were acquired in the course of a marriage.

Does she expect the reforms to be reformed?

"I don't see how anybody can be unaffected by this kind of statistical evidence," she said, tapping her two-pound tome.

Women's burnout based on guilt

Hearst News Service

"I wish I didn't feel so guilt-ridden and resentful; a lot of women are in my position," says Susan, a 44-year-old single parent. She's juggling a job, a home, a child, financial problems, friends and what she calls "a nowhere sex life."

Susan is an executive secretary, "a dead-end job in my company." Her work leaves her enervated, irritable, and "I end up taking it out on my kid. I'm either too critical or overprotective. Sometimes I'd like to dump him at his father's and run away." She suffers from severe insomnia, takes Valium during the day, and has "a couple of scotches before I go to bed."

Does Susan's story strike a chord?

Elaine, 36, is postponing motherhood until she's promoted to upper management. She worries she may be "too haggard and tired when that time comes to handle a baby. I'm afraid if I get pregnant now, I'll lose the ground I've gained at work. I've spent too much time legitimizing myself to be replaced by someone who's available while I'm on maternity leave."

Convinced that the promised promotion will settle the issue, Elaine drives herself, hoping the announcement will be made before her biological clock runs out. She complains of stomach ailments, and recently she's seen several doctors for the cysts which are breaking out on her face and chest.

Here are two examples of women heading for burnout, as described by Dr. Herbert J. Freudenberger, the New York psychologist who first identified the phenomenon and has been writing and talking about it ever since. His latest book on the subject, written with Gail North, is "Women's Burnout: How to Spot It, How to Reverse It, and How to Prevent It"

Men suffer from burnout, too, Freudenberger acknowledges, but theirs is different. For one thing, women must prove themselves and, therefore, deplete their energies in a number of roles, as mother, wife, worker and woman; men typically burn out through their work and usually can function in their other roles.

"Women burn out attempting to legitimize themselves in the male world," Freudenberger says. "Men burn out in the need to achieve in the workplace, unburdened by gender. Women burn out from coping with guilt, leaving children at home for work; men have not been expected to care for children. I feel very strongly that women cannot have it all; if they have to try, they must do it with significant compromise and moderation."

Freudenberger defines the problem as "a wearing down and wearing out of energy. It is an exhaustion born of excessive demands which may be self-imposed or externally imposed by families, jobs, friends, lovers, value systems or society. It is a feeling state, accompanied by an overload of stress which eventually impacts on motivations, attitudes and behavior. Those who believe they can balance work, love, children, friends and families will surely destroy themselves trying."

He reminds that repercussions from burnout, which is often misdiagnosed as chronic depression, can include poor job performance, drug addiction, stress, smoking too much, overeating and physical ailments such as ulcers and colitis.

Part of the problem is that "women, who are nurturers used to giving, don't take enough time for themselves, and often deny they are under pressure. Their heads say go, their bodies say no, and they keep going. They suffer from exhaustion, sleeplessness, headaches, backaches, colds that don't go away. They come to my office feeling they are having a mental breakdown; they have no energy left, they cry, they have heart symptoms. One woman told me, 'I say left foot, right foot. If I don't keep walking, I will collapse.' "

In today's high-pressure society, "Women are going through all kinds of transitions and changes in terms of their roles, with no clear guidelines. There must be a re-evaluation and reprioritization of life and style, or more and more will have significant physical problems."

Obesity raises surgery's risk

Dear Dr. Solomon: A friend of mine was going to have a hysterectomy, but she says her doctor postponed it because she was too heavy. If a person requires surgery, doesn't it have to be done? — Ms. B.I., Tucson, Ariz.

Dear Ms. I.: Sometimes the best way to handle a problem that would ordinarily call for surgery, but that is considered to be too risky, is to postpone the surgery. If this is not feasible, then special precautions, such as admitting the patient to the hospital a few days ahead of time, may have to be taken.

Dr. Howard W. Jones III, of Vanderbilt University School of Medicine in Nashville, points out that a hysterectomy on an obese patient may take from four to five hours, and underestimating this time could be a serious mistake.

Dear Dr. Solomon: Some cities or states are trying to pass laws that would require children who are travelling in an automobile to be strapped into a special seat. I wouldn't mind such a law if it did any good, but is there any evidence that it would? — Lee, Detroit, Mich.

Dear Lee: Placing a youngster in a child-restraint device while driving is one type of preventive medicine that can pay big dividends and that all parents should practice. In one state, it was found that children who were not kept in a child restraint device were 11 times more likely to die in an accident than were children who were using these devices. Moreover, children who were being held in the arms of an adult were no safer than those who were completely unrestrained.

If ever there was a sound reason to practice the ounce of prevention, the use of a child-restraint device is it.

Dear Dr. Solomon: My sister-in-law took her son to an eye doctor because he was having trouble reading, and the doctor told her that there was nothing wrong with his eyes. Then she took her son to a psychologist for an intelligence test, and the psychologist told her that he was above average. If the boy's eyes are all right and there is nothing wrong with his intelligence, would you have any other explanation of why he is having trouble reading? — Ms. W.L. Cincinnati, Ohio

Dear Ms. L.: There are a number of possiblities that may account for youngster's inability to read well despite normal vision and intelligence. Emotional problems, for example, may keep a child from reaching his potential. However, the primary cause, according to Dr. Marshall P. Keys, a Rockville, Md., opthalmologist, is a brain dysfunction. Such children require a skilled, sensitive and patient teacher who can provide the child with individual attention.

For Theresa, Richmond, Va.: The American Academy of Pediatrics has recommended that children under 6 years of age not be given any medication that contains alcohol without the supervision of a physician. The academy also recommends that any medication that contains more than 5 percent alcohol should have a child-resistant cap.

Weak dollar could shore up falling oil prices

By MELLA McEWEN
Business/Oil Writer

As the dollar goes, so goes America...Texas...the Permian Basin. The Permian Basin economy is dependent on oil prices, and two major factors affecting crude prices are international production rates (supply) and the strength of the U.S. dollar.

The recently weakening dollar is expected to have a positive impact on the Texas economy. According to figures from the State Comptroller's office, and compiled by Data Resources, Inc., an economic forecasting firm, Texas lost 68,900 jobs in 1984 due to the strength of the U.S. dollar in the world market.

The unusually strong dollar, which has doubled in the last four years, began to weaken early this year and fell to its lowest level since 1972 in recent weeks after a group of five nations - the U.S., Britain, Japan, West German and France - announced on September 22 that they would try to drive down the value of the dollar. Following the announcement, the dollar fell suffered an absolute 24-hour fall of 6.1 percent against the West German marks.

Since, Midland's top export is oil, Johnny Wilson, senior financial consultant and commodities specialist for Merrill Lynch, Pierce, Fenner & Smith, said local oilmen could be optimistic in that the weakened dollar should drive up oil prices. "The dollar and crude oil are re-evaluating their relationship to each other. As the dollar goes down, the price of crude should increase slightly."

He reasoned that the increase would be because as the dollar weakens, the total wealth for the Arabians decline, and they tend to push the price of oil up to maintain their buying power. "If they want to maintain their wealth stream, they must increase the price."

He also predicted that cotton would be the most immediate commodity affected by the drop in value of the dollar. "The plentiful amount of cotton and higher cost had made buyers like Taiwan, South Korea and Hong Kong more or less go hand to mouth. Now, with the weaker dollar, the buyers will try to increase their inventory."

Powers Duvall, Manager of the Trust Investment Department for First City National Bank, and a Certified Financial Planner and Chartered Financial Analyst, said the strength of the dollar was rough on Midland, and the state in general. "With a weak dollar, the Arabs could justify a price increase through 1980, since the dollar didn't buy as much. But the dollar rose dramatically, and made it tough to justify a price increase. Now the dropping dollar is lending some support to oil prices." Prices, he said, were at about the same level as a year ago.

However, Duvall cautioned that despite the falling dollar, the price of oil could still fall. "People who invest in oil futures are betting that the price of oil will drop, and they're looking for it to drop from about $29 to $27 by March of next. Still, that's better than some forecasts we've been hearing."

"Of course," he added, "that doesn't that's what it'll do. That's what they're saying with their money. The weaker dollar may keep things better than they might have been otherwise."

The strength of the dollar is measured by its value in foreign currencies. A strong dollar is one that's worth more than when exchanged for foreign currency, and makes foreign goods cheaper for the American consumer, holding inflation down. However, it makes American goods more costly and difficult to sell abroad, limiting exports and putting Americans out of work. A weaker dollar, on the other hand, makes foreign goods cost more, but makes American goods less expensive and easier to sell overseas.

The dollar, Duvall said, doubled in the last four years, and although the price of oil was falling, the rising dollar didn't help. "Even though the price of oil fell, the dollar's rise meant that foreign countries still paid a lot for oil. Now the weaker dollar means they can afford to buy more oil, and become less conservation-minded."

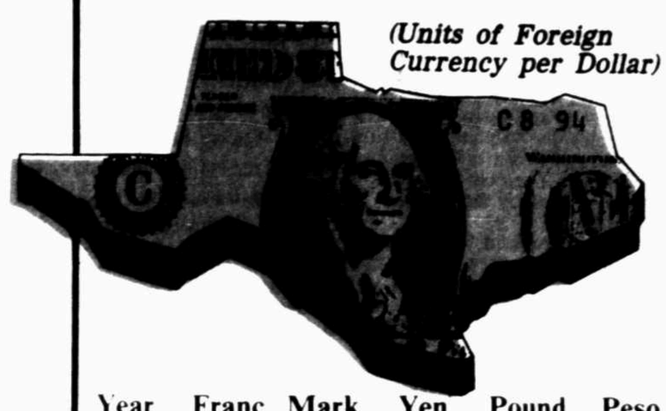

Since the group of five nations announced their intentions to drive down the dollar's value, Duvall said, it has come down very hard, losing about 10 percent against the Japanese yen. However, the strong dollar had its impact on the economy - both national and state.

In 1984, Texas ranked seventh among states in jobs lost, following California, New York, North Carolina, Pennsylvania, Michigan and Ohio. The state lost 4.3 jobs per 1,000 people, well below the U.S. average loss of 6.2 jobs per 1,000 people. The strong dollar and subsequent loss of jobs, according to figures from the State Comptroller, cost state and local governments $8 to $9 billion, and Texas' share of that was $400 million, $200 of which was lost by the state government.

Economists attribute the dollar's strength to rising federal budget deficits. When the government borrows dollars to finance its shortfalls, it competes with businesses and consumers for dollars. This increased competition eventually causes interest rates to rise, which makes certain U.S. investments attractive to foreign investors. But foreign investors need dollars to buy those investments, so they join in the competition for dollars, pushing the dollar's value up even further.

Tracking the tastes of Texas

Restaurants serve more nutritious meals

By SUSAN LINDSAY
Business/Oil Writer

As society changes so does it's taste in food. Tracking that change in taste and making the right menu choices at the right time can be the difference between success and failure for restaurants who live or die by providing the customer what he wants to eat at a price he is willing to pay. According to the Texas Restaurant Association, the Texas taste is undergoing a profound change that is forcing restaurant owners to rethink their operations.

There is a reason for the proliferation of salad bars that have taken the fast food industry by storm, say industry sources, and it has to do with the health craze.

"At one time, everyone ate big meals at home. They were 'steak and potato' people. Now the trend is toward more health conscious food — away from heavy cholesterol and sulfides — and into more exotic types of food," said Louis Hochman, president of the Texas Restaurant Association.

According to figures released by the TAR, most Texans go out to eat at least two to three times a week. Of those going out, 36 percent of the consumers polled said they are more likely to order natural foods and vegetables when dining out than they were a year ago. About 25 percent of the survey respondents said they are less likely to order red meat and 35 percent are more likely to order salads.

"Customer demand for healthy foods is being felt in all segments of the restaurant business today — from fine dining to fast food — and I think it will keep growing," Hochman said.

"Today's customer is more interested in 'eating healthy' than 'just eating' and restauranteurs are responding to this trend by including foods perceived as nutritious on their menu," he said.

Restaurants notice these trends by customer demand and by reading national food publications, he said.

One local restaurant which has followed the trend toward more nutritious meals is Scratches Restaurant. Julius Brooks, owner of Brooks Barbecue and Scratches Restaurant, said he took a gamble to include a wide selection of fresh vegetables on the menu at Scratches, but they have been selling well.

"I think people want a more balanced meal. Eating vegetables makes people think they're eating at home," he said.

Between nine to 12 vegetables are prepared at Furr's Cafeteria each day, said assistant manager Gus Hernandez, and each are entirely eaten each day. He said this number is up over vegetable portions prepared last year.

Nora Wu, assistant manager for Golden China, said more people are eating the vegetables dishes at her restaurant. "They have become very popular," she said.

Even pizza has gotten into the nutritious act. Luca's Pizza co-owner Javier Flores said that establishment has introduced pizza pockets or calzones filled with cheese, ham and spinach, as well as strombolli, filled with ham, salami, sausage and pepperoni.

Red Lobster Manager Bill Piper said more Midlanders are eating the restaurant's broccoli selection, instead of rice or potatoes. "The broccoli is becoming more popular," he said, adding that broiled foods at his restaurant are also beginning to sell better than fried foods. "People want the broiled foods, because they are less fattening. They are more conscious of what they eat. They're eating more salads, also."

Hochman said one of the newest trend in salads is the pasta salad with fresh vegetables. His restaurant, Luigi's, has been serving this for less than a year now, and has been very successful with it.

Another salad that restauranteurs call trendy is taco salad, which is sold in fast food chains, Mexican food establishments as well as in more fine-dining restaurants.

'Hunter' takes charge at Schlumberger Ltd.

By STEVEN P. ROSENFELD
AP Business Writer

Michel Vaillaud

NEW YORK (AP) — Michel Vaillaud, the first new chief executive in 20 years at Schlumberger Ltd., says he has no plans of tinkering with the formula for managing the world's largest oilfield services company.

"You hire the best and you give them the best training and after that you give them a lot of freedom and after that, if they goof, you fire them. And that's the name of the game," he says.

Those challenging rules of the "game" have been set since the company's founding in 1927 by French physicist Conrad Schlumberger and his brother Marcel, a mechanical engineer, who together developed a technique for measuring potential oil and natural gas deposits underground.

"The founders were very smart to realize from the beginning that if you have boys working in west Texas, in Romania, in Venezuela, you're not going to have them calling you up on the phone asking you what to do," Vaillaud said.

For a company with $10.9 billion in assets and 80,000 employees spread around the globe, Schlumberger maintains a modest headquarters staff of 200 people in New York and rarely sends a direct order to its managers in the field.

"That's what makes the company so appealing to young people, because they really run their business," said Vaillaud.

But that does not mean no one is in control of the company.

With people in the field making most of the decisions, top management has more time to spot problems before they flare into crises, reviewing candidates for key jobs, considering new strategies and takeover targets, Vaillaud said.

The few big decisions are up to the chairman, with the approval of the board of directors.

He describes his job as spotting trends that will affect the business, such as a shift in fortunes in oil markets.

"You have to do it with a few people and a lot of sniffing to see what's going on," he said. "You're just like a hunter. It's like smelling in the wind and trying to detect a few little things that will make you feel one way or the other."

The man who developed that management style into a highly profitable art at Schlumberger was Jean Riboud, who stepped down as chairman and chief executive on Sept. 11, in favor of Vaillaud, 53, his handpicked successor.

Riboud, 65, who is suffering from cancer, had been Schlumberger's chief executive since May 1965 and its chairman since March 1972 and is a legendary figure in the oil business.

Under Riboud, Schlumberger's profit soared almost 44 times to $1.18 billion and revenue increased nearly 20 times to $6.37 billion. The company has about $4 billion in cash on hand.

It was to send the message to the markets that Schlumberger goes on after Riboud's reign that the company made an exception to its usual secretive style and granted requests for interviews with the new chairman.

Vaillaud, in shirt sleeves and alternately gesturing with his hands and rearranging a cluster of pencils, said his days are spent in meetings or telephone calls with individuals and small groups or in world travel.

"Schlumberger is a bit of a telephone and a plane civilization," he said. "You spend days and days in the plane and you spend hours and hours on the phone."

Would Mexico change if it could change?

was inevitable. The dust had barely settled on the Mexico earthquake disaster when it began.

Network TV commentators reported first. They observed heavy equipment used in the rescue operation moving leisurly and randomly from site to site wihout much urgency and no semblance of plan or purpose. They, also, wondered why the Mexican army stood by stoicly staring into space, caressing rifles while an army of civilians and foreigners clawed frantically at the debris to get at trapped victims. Mark Lewis, Midland Reporter-Telegram reporter, who was in Mexico City for less than 24 hours observed what appeared to be disorganization and much discontent on the part of French and other foreign rescue teams with the way operations were going. Within days a headline appeared in the Dallas Morning News saying that relief funds for Mexico were off dramatically because those giving feared the money would only be used to line the pockets of corrupt officals. In the same publication this week there was a story which reported that American rescue teams were threatening to leave Mexico because they were irked at delays in demolishing still standing but dangerous buildings which could topple under their own weight and kill hundreds more. The Mexicans, it seems, don't want to use explosives.

SOMEONE DESCRIBED the entire pitiful situation as a disaster trying to cope with a disaster.

Poor, bungling, inept Mexico. Nothing, save its well-entrenched system of corruption, has ever worked in Mexico — probably never will. If the U.S. is the classic picture of democracy and free enterprise in action, Mexico is the cartoon version. Although the two countries share several thousand miles of common border, they are a million miles apart economically, and philosophically.

In terms of natural resources Mexico could be one of the richest nations in the world, instead it is one of the poorest. Every good fortune of Mexico, seems to eventually turn sour. When it found oil, it could have been the salvation, of the nation, instead corruption, and bad management turned it into an economic nightmare. Blessed with an abundance of cheap labor, Mexico could have become a major exporter of assembled products, instead it exports only cheap labor — to the U.S.

My love-despair affair with this country goes back 25 years. As a young man I lived there for awhile, became engaged to a Mexican girl and thought about spending the rest of my life there, enjoying the "good life." It took me two years to realize, however, that I would make a better American than Mexican. I despaired too much over the things that never got done, and people who didn't care whether they got done or not. I despaired that I was the only one to ever become indignant over wrongs and injustices.

I REMEMBER once going early to the train station in Tapachula, Chiapas to buy a first class train ticket to Veracruz. I didn't want to sit on the board seats with the drunks and chickens in second class. But nobody told me that in Mexico they sell first class tickets as long as someone will buy them. There must have been 5 tickets sold for every available first class seat. Not only did I not get a seat in first class, I couldn't even find one in second class which was oversold 10-1. I finally had to sit outside on the back platform with others who also purchased first class seats. Strangely, I was the only one who thought I had been wronged. Those around me could not understand why I fumed.

For years I labored and speculated over a variety of theories as to "why nothing ever works in Mexico and change never comes," but could never find one that fully satisfied, until I read a recent article in Texas Monthly on the "Heart of Mexico." It hit the nail on the head. It all has to do with a basic view of life, says Texas Monthly.

AMERICANS THINK that life makes sense, that they can find a solution to just about any problem that exists. Fatalistic Mexicans think that life doesn't make sense, it doesn't matter if its fair or not, because there's nothing you can do about it anyway., says the article.

If the quake rescue squads were irked with Mexico, it is nothing new. America has been irked at its neighbor to the South for several generations. We make two basic mistakes in our relations with Mexico. One is assuming Mexico thinks like us and that we can relate to them on economic and humanitarian issues. The other is that Mexico wants to change and would change if it had the opportunity. They would not.

TASTES

Local restaurants say entrees are also taking another direction as people are beginning to turn away from red meat. "Chicken and fish are doing extremely well in our restaurant," said Tony Schottenbauer, general manager of Harrigans.

To track the changing Texas taste, Schottenbauer uses a computer to compile a list of entrees served each week. The biggest trend noticed, says Schottenbauer, has been a gradual weaning from red meat and heavier foods.

Still, Bill Henkel, owner of Cattlemen's Steak House, believes there will always be a market for steaks. "Since we're in West Texas, steaks and potatoes will always be popular here and chicken fried steaks are king, but I have noticed that people are eating much more chicken and leaner meats, especially the younger set," said Henkel.

Claudio Brugalossi said his restaurant, Claudio's, serves a vertical chicken salad that is so popular, it's listed as a special several times a week. "It's cooked vertically so that the fat drips into the frying pan. People like it because it is a lean dish. I'm trying to keep my customers lean."

Fajitas are another dish made with a lean meat, which has enjoyed growing success.

Mexican food restaurant owners say the dish is not really Mexican food. Instead, fajitas originated around San Antonio and Austin. But, the dish made its way to Midland about a year ago, despite reluctance from the Mexican food establishments.

"I did not want to sell them, but I finally had to put them on the menu when people kept coming in asking for them," said George Enriquez, owner of Mario's Spanish Inn.

George Veloz, owner of Monterrey Cocina Mexicana, explained that the dish is hard to make in the kitchen because it is charbroiled and different from all of his other dishes.

"I'd rather sell less variety of things, because when you add more variety, you lose some of your quality," he said. "I'd rather sell an order of enchiladas any day than fajitas, but fajitas are one of my biggest sellers.

"I think I was about the last one to start serving fajitas, but we all did because they are so popular. It's what we have to do to keep up," he said.

Another new dish that has made its way to Midland is pollo loco, served by El Burrito. Owner, George Veloz, says he makes periodic trips to Mexico and towns along the Texas border to see what is selling there. "The food in style there, will usually end up being in style here eventually." He says pollo loco, which is one-half a chicken split and barbecued over a mesquite fire is selling like crazy on the border, and predicts it will soon catch on here. Veloz recently remodeled his store and built a special indoor barbecue pit to capitalize on the pollo loco craze. He says the chicken dish is moving rather well at his Big Spring location. "We really make an effort to get out and try to track the new trends in taste," says Veloz.

But one Mexican dish that has not caught on well is menudo or beef tripe.

"It hasn't caught on well, especially with the Anglos," said Alfred Morales, co-owner of Casita Gerardo.

"But just the other day, I saw a recipe for it in the Midland Reporter-Telegram and also in Texas Monthly and Texas Homes. So maybe, it is catching on," he said, adding that a very exclusive Dallas country club serves menudo and can't keep enough of it.

Morales said menudo has often been called a "poor man's dish." He said at one time meat packing companies didn't know what to do with the tripe and gave it away to poor Mexican people. After the companies learned that people were making menudo, they started selling it.

He said the secret to good menudo is fresh tripe, the right amount of seasoning and pigs feet.

"Most Anglos hear that and automatically won't try it. I wish more people would. I would serve it," he said.

Another trend noticed in Midland is a growing liking for ethnic food. "The younger generation, especially, is very into new foods," said Hochman.

One of these is Cajun Seafood Specialists, which carries Cajun foods, such as barbecue shrimp, shrimp etoufee, gumbo and bacon-wrapped oysters. Jimmy Fontenot said since the restaurant's opening this spring, business has been very good.

"Cajun food is a new concept in Midland. The spices are different. Everything is spicy. We don't believe in eating anything that's bland," he said.

Other restaurants serving food not easily found in West Texas are Little Europe, which offers German food, and Anasazi Restaurant, which has Italian and continental cuisine, including veal and game bird dishes.

"New restaurants are a trend, and a good one. New types of restaurants bring new ideas. Shogun is a good example of that. They serve Japanese food, cooked in front of the customers, and are doing very nicely," he said.

"Also, the more restaurants there are, the easier it is to attract industry, because we can say that we can satisfy any taste," he said. "Midland has the highest percentages of people going out to eat and we have numerous restaurants. Midland can satisfy any Texas taste."

Tracking the Texas taste

Midlanders display popular tastes of Texas. SCHLUMBERGER

Typically, Vaillaud has been spending three weeks in the United States, followed by a week in Japan and two weeks in Europe to keep in touch with the widespread operations of the company. Now that he is chairman, Vaillaud said, he may spend a little more time in each spot before moving on.

He considers no meeting wasted, even if no decisions are reached after lengthy discussions.

"What you are gaining by this is having the man you spoke to having understood something. He himself will make the right decision; you don't have to decide. If you have smart people, once you have brought them to the right thinking then there is no problem. They will do it," Vaillaud said.

"It is the ultimate ego for the boss to say 'I decide.' The boss has every right but having ego."

Vaillaud, who was recruited by Riboud in 1973 and was elected president of Schlumberger in 1982, is a former director of the petroleum administration in the French ministry of industrial and scientific development and a former chairman of the French national office of aerospace research.

He has his work cut out for him.

Earnings fell 8.8 percent in the first half of this year despite a 9.1 percent rise in revenue.

One big problem is the slump in oil prices since 1982 that has depressed oil exploration.

Floating drilling platforms known as semisubmersible rigs, which Schlumberger was leasing out for more than $100,000 a day when the oil boom peaked in 1981, now are being placed for less than $30,000 a day.

The company's main business, the measurement system of oil and gas deposits that is known as wireline logging, has become more competitive as oilfield services companies scramble for a share of the shrinking exploration business.

Schlumberger, which has always commanded a premium fee for its wireline services because of its advanced technology, its worldwide capabilities and its reputation for quality, is now lowering its prices to levels closer to the competition.

It is cutting costs and keeping overhead down.

Sandi Haber Sweeney, an analyst who follows Schlumberger for the investment firm Sanford C. Bernstein & Co. Inc., estimates operating profit from all of the company's oilfield services has slipped to between 25 percent to 30 percent of revenue from the 40 percent to 45 percent level of 1981.

But those results are "still fantastic," she said, adding that while the company has not gained ground during the oil industry's downturn, it still remains profitable.

Analysts say the biggest problem for Schlumberger is its Fairchild Semiconductor unit, which is caught in an industry depression.

"It has been a real failure so far," said analyst James Crandall at Salomon Brothers.

Vaillaud did not dispute analysts' estimates that Fairchild will lose about $100 million this year.

Crandall said returning Fairchild to sound footing is Vaillaud's biggest challenge.

Vaillaud said that while he is not pleased with the loss at Fairchild, a strong management team is in place and the company has weathered a severe downturn in the semiconductor business.

"It's a stress test. I think they (Fairchild) are tired, but they got through the stress test with success," Vaillaud said.

He said his major problem is controling costs at a time when oil markets are depressed so that Schlumberger will be able to harness its huge cash reserves when markets rebound, as he expects they will in the 1990s.

"What our clients are wanting us to do today is to continue working on research, bringing new products as soon as possible and being able to build the equipment when the business is going to start booming because they won't be willing to wait," he said.

With his globetrotting schedule, Vaillaud said, he tries to catch up on his sleep and devote time to his family in his spare time. Vaillaud and his wife have apartments in New York and Paris and a home in the French countryside where he grows peach and pear trees.

"If you want to stay healthy, you sleep first," he said. "The first hobby is family. In this business when you keep moving around and working a lot the No. 1 victim is family."

His three daughters have careers of their own, with one teaching mathematics in a New York girls' school and the other two living in Paris where they work as a fashion photographer and as a manufacturers' representative.

"I think cultural life in New York and country life in France are probably the two things I like after sleeping and the family," said Vaillaud, a fan of opera and ballet.

Tom Brown names chief executive

Donald Evans

Donald L. Evans, president of Midland-based Tom Brown, Inc., has been named Chief Executive Officer by the Board of Directors.

He replaces Thomas C. Brown, who will remain active with the company, serving as Chairman of the Board of Directors.

Said Brown: "Mr. Evans has continually provided invaluable insight and leadership in the management of the company, its oil and gas operations, and the company's recent restructuring efforts. Naming Mr. Evans as Chief Executive Officer of the company is indicative of the Board's confidence in his ability to pursue the company's objectives of continued growth and development."

Engineers plan Tuesday meeting

Riley Needham

The Permian Basin Section of the Society of Petroleum Engineers will meet Tuesday, October 15 at the Ranchland Hills Country Club. Social hour will begin at 5:30 p.m., with dinner at 6:30 p.m.

Guest speaker will be Mr. Riley Needham, Production Manager of Research and Development for Phillips Petroleum Co. His topic will be "Research Challenges for the Next Decade."

His discussion will address improvements in the economic recovery of oil, including the three important methods of increasing oil recovery: gas, water, and steam injection. He will also review the status of efforts to control mobility of gas, water and steam, and illustrate unique features of reservoirs that can be exploited to improve oil recovery, and address the understanding and ability to model basic processes. The talk will also include a discussion of better forecasting of field performance of oil recovery processes.

Petroleum Association to present natural gas marketing seminar

The Permian Basin Petroleum Association, in conjunction with Smart and Kuss, natural gas marketing consultants, will present a seminar on "Natural Gas Marketing Opportunities for Independent Producers" in Midland October 24 at the Petroleum Club.

No specific starting time has been set,pending scheduling of guest speakers.

The seminar will address the possibilities of natural gas marketing cooperatives, an as-yet untried way for smaller producers to compete for markets, and ways they can take advantage of current special marketing programs. The advantages and disadvantages created by regulatory change will also be discussed.

Consultant John Smart was a gas buyer for the nation's largest natural gas pipeline company, and his partner Charles Kuss was responsible for an independent exploration and production firm's natural gas sales.

Along with Smart and Kuss, a number of visiting marketing experts will tell producers how to take advantage of little known and little understood ways to increase profits.

The natural gas sales business has gone sour and is causing many independent producers to worry about tomrrow's marketing opportunities. However, not all the changes in the gas industry have gone bad, and those willing to take advantage of new opportunities can have a bright future.

HOW TO GET TAX DEFERRED EARNINGS ON STOCK AND BOND INVESTMENTS.

If a comfortable retirement is one of your investment goals, there's one financial instrument you can't afford to overlook. It's the Hutton VIP, offered through E.F. Hutton Life Insurance Company and it's a package of very impressive benefits.

The basic principle behind Hutton VIP—(that's short for Variable Investment Program)—is to build up your retirement assets now—while deferring taxes till you reach retirement.

What's involved? Hutton VIP, to start with, boasts a family of investment funds. You can choose to invest in an Equity Series, Money Market Series, and a Bond and Income Series. Each is run by one of E.F. Hutton's most successful portfolio managers. Each is, in its own right, a superior form of investment.

A Hutton Life Fixed Account, which guarantees interest earnings, is also offered. And once you are in Hutton VIP, you can transfer assets from one series to another, at no charge or tax liability.

And that is just the half of it.

Hutton VIP is a variable annuity as well. Its funds are earmarked for retirement. That means that you pay taxes on your earnings, when you retire, at lower rates because you're very likely in a lower bracket. And that, in turn, means everything you earn is actually worth a good deal more.

Hutton VIP has no front end load, so your money goes to work for you at once. The minimum investment is $5,000 at first, with optional additions of $500. And since it's a variable annuity, the policy doesn't have to go through probate to be passed along.

If you're planning your retirement, Hutton VIP may fit in your portfolio. It's too good an idea to overlook. And showing you all the options is the job of your Account Executive at E.F. Hutton. It is one more reason you should listen.

The Prospectus containing more complete information on Hutton VIP including all charges and expenses should be read before investing or sending money.

Two local businessmen were the first from the Midland area to attend the new Dale Carnegie Strategic Presentations Workshop, conducted in Las Vegas, Nevada on October 3, 4, and 5.

DAVID FIELDS is presently a pilot for American Airlines and owner/partner in Fields Properties, a real estate related investments firm specializing in mortgage brokering where he provides lump sum cash for mortgages and an opportunity for higher yields for investors.

Fields holds a BA degree from West Texas State University.

WALT McCLURE is the general manager at Fields Properties where he is responsible for supervising property managers, maintenance and investment personnel.

McClure holds a BBA degree from West Texas State University.

The Strategic Presentations Workshop was developed by Dale Carnegie and Associates to enable senior executives to improve presentation skills in an intensive three day program.

YISH NAFTEL has recently joined the staff at the Midland Hilton as Sally's Restaurant manager.

Naftel returned to the Midland Hilton after an eight months absence during which time he was employed at the La Fonda Hotel in Santa Fe.

JOHN REDFERN, JR. has been presented a special award by the Independent Petroleum Association of New Mexico for his outstanding contribution to the Association.

Redfern has served on the board of directors of IPA NM since its founding in 1979.

The Independent Petroleum Association of New Mexico has approximately 700 members that reside or operate in New Mexico and less than 1/3 of the members of the board come from New Mexico.

BETTY CERF has recently joined the staff of the Midland Central YMCA as director of membership services.

Prior to her appointment, she held the position of women's health fitness director for the Midland YMCA. Her new responsibilities include supervision of the central courtesy counter and coordinating the operations for enhancement of membership services.

MARGARET RENFRO has been appointed director of accounting services at Qualitech Computer Center, Midland. Her primary responsibility will be to coordinate Qualitech's Helpmate Service. A Helpmate is a CPA who provides accounting software training to Qualitech clients and oversees the implementation of the computerized accounting system.

Renfro is a member of the AICPA and the TSCPA. Before joining Qualitech, she was involved in public practice with Johnson, Tidwell and Co. for four years and most recently worked two years with Relm Operating, Inc. She holds a BBA degree in accounting from Abilene Christian University.

JOHN H. MEINKE has been voted registration as a professional engineer in Texas by the Texas State Board of Registration for Professional Engineers.

Meinke is a 1977 graduate of the New Mexico Military Institute and a 1980 graduate of the New Mexico Institute of Mining and Technology where he earned a BS degree in petroleum engineering.

Upon graduation, he joined Gulf Oil Corp. in Monahans, and is currently employed by Chevron, USA in Midland as a production engineer. He is a member of the Society of Petroleum Engineers of A.I.M.E.

SANDRA WEGNER has been promoted to the position of Assistant Director of the Midland County Library, upon the retirement of Tannie Pate.

Wegner has ten years of experience at the library and was formerly the head of Special Collections, including the Genealogy and Petroleum departments.

She is a recent graduate of North Texas State University, Denton, where she earned a MS degree, majoring in library and information science.

VICKI BAILEY, certified fitness specialist, has been named by best selling author Covert Bailey as the local representative for his fitness and diet education program, the Fit or Fat System.

Bailey, who is one of 24 fitness leaders selected to teach the program, recently returned from the Fit or Fat School in Reno, Nevada, where she attended the five day instructor training program. She is now licensed to instruct a continuing course based on concepts developed in the Fit or Fat book.

She will be holding seminars on weekends for area residents. Course content will include the difference between overfat and overweight, why diets do not work, how exercise changes your metabolism, rules for aerobic exercise and many additional basic tenets that can assure a low-fat lifestyle.

Bailey was employed as director of aerobics and women's fitness at The Midlander until March, 1985. She is certified by Kenneth Cooper's Institute for Aerobic Research as a Fitness Specialist, is a member of the American College of Sports Medicine and the International Dance Exercise Association.

FORREST EUGENE DAVIS has been promoted to district manager of West Texas for Denny's.

Davis holds a BA degree from the University of Maryland, and has been an assistant manager with Denny's in Salt Lake City, Utah prior to his promotion.

JIMMY WANER has been promoted to regional sales representative for West Texas and Southeast New Mexico for Compressor Systems, Inc.

Waner previously served as warranty coordinator and technical sales representative for the company, joining CSI in 1980.

JOE BOWERS, new vehicle salesperson at Village Dodge, Inc., Midland, recently received an award for individual performance in selling Dodge vehicles.

Specially designed incentives and awards are provided for outstanding achievement at three performance levels — Bronze, Silver and Gold. Membership in each level is determined by points earned for sales of new cars and trucks.

Bowers has reached the silver level of recognition in Dodge's sales professionals club.

HOUSTON-(SWN)-Swift Energy Co. 1985 net income could increase 25 to 40 percent over 1984, A. Earl Swift president and chief executive officer, recently told a group of investors at the AMEX club in New York City, as he outlined the company's business strategy and plans for continued growth.

Swift commented "The business of Swift Energy Co. is centered around oil and gas operations, conducting joint ventures with significant industry partners and the formation of public and private limited partnerships.

"We have experienced significant growth in all of these areas in our short five year history. Swift now operates in excess of 300 wells, has ongoing joint ventures with large oil and gas companies and has raised over $40 million in limited partner capital subscriptions."

Swift continued, "Our company is seeing indicators that the strategy works. Revenues and earnings for the first six months of 1985 are up 47 percent and 23 percent, respectively, over the same period last year.

"We think we can continue this growth for 1985. Based on the level of income partnership funds that we are able to invest in the purchase of producing oil and gas properties before the end of the year, we project the increase in the company's earnings for 1985 to be 25 to 40 percent above the prior year.

"I am optimistic that this growth will continue into 1986."

Swift Energy Co. is primarily engaged in the acquisition, exploration, development and operation of oil and gas properties through partnerships and joint ventures.

The company also offers directly, and through two majority owned subsidiaries, geological consultation and prospect generation services.

Humor in television, radio commercials no laughing matter

Los Angeles Times —
Washington Post News Service

NEW YORK — The making of a television commercial is no laughing matter, not when the production cost alone can zoom well over $100,000. Yet, in recent years, advertising agencies and their clients increasingly have turned to humor to get their messages across on both television and radio.

We see the use of humor by the combatants in the "burger wars," by mustard makers, by breweries, by telecommunications firms. We hear it in spots for credit cards, banks, cheese, telephone companies, magazines. There are few product categories that haven't been stroked by a comedic brush.

"Humor has always been with us," said Leonard Matthews, president of the American Association of Advertising Agencies. "It's one of the staples of the copywriter's art." But for a number of reasons — stronger competition, marketing segmentation, client receptivity — humor is being relied on more frequently to convey a sales message.

The new emphasis on humor began in the early 1980s, according to Manning Rubin, a creative director at J. Walter Thompson Co. in New York. "We began getting away from the hard sell that was a result of the recession," Rubin said. When the economic times were tough, clients didn't want to fool around with lighthearted commercials.

Daniel Slamberg, creative director at the Radio Advertising Bureau in New York, said the trend became noticeable at the turn of the decade as "many clients and agencies came to believe that humor sticks in the mind better."

THAT BELIEF probably was fostered in part by a 1982 report from McCollumSpielman & Co. in Great Neck, N.Y., a leading national tester of television commercials. The study found that humorous commercials far outpaced spots featuring celebrities and "real people" in awareness, memorability and overall performance.

Occasionally, an ad slogan passes into the general lexicon. Years ago, there was the Alka Seltzer tag line, "I can't believe I ate the whole thing." More recently, Clara Peller's cry, "Where's the beef?" for Wendy's International was used last year by presidential candidate Walter Mondale.

Popularity can bring its own problems, though. "The ad can be so funny that you obscure the message," Matthews said. As successful as the Alka Seltzer campaign was, he said, sales remained relatively flat. Wendy's, though, scored sales gains of 26 percent in 1984, although the company said it wasn't certain how much of that increase to attribute to the commercial.

Why does one knee-slapper succeed in boosting sales where another falls flat? Sometimes, the message doesn't carry enough relevance. The Alka Seltzer spot mentioned chocolate-covered meatballs to get a laugh and that may simply have been too unrealistic to the consumer, Matthews said.

The industry in the United States has been strongly influenced by British commercials, which wallow in humor, and, in recent years, have won the lion's share of international awards. After all, nothing breeds like success.

TO MEET THE growing demand, U.S. agencies often reach out for independent specialists, although some shops do their own funny business. At J. Walter Thompson, creative teams turn out humorous spots for Burger King, French's mustard and other clients.

"Humor must come out of the brand," Rubin said. "It can't fit a dozen other products ... Humor has to create a point of view about the product."

For French's, the object was to show that it tops all yellow mustards. Of 15 different executions of that concept — from scenes of nature to proponents of natural foods — the agency and client agreed on a spot showing a variety of sandwiches reacting in horror when approached by non-French mustards. "Who knows better than the sandwich?" Rubin said.

A completed script normally is sent to an outside production company, where the director is king. And the king of kings is Joe Sedelmaier of Chicago, a seminal figure who began to make his mark in the late 1970s. He is known best for such commercial classics as Federal Express (the fast talker) and Wendy's ("Where's the beef?").

Sedelmaier was the prototype of the strong-willed director who does things his way. "I'm not difficult but I have a point of view," Sedelmaier said. Humor grows out of the premise, he said. "It's not the punchline, but the telling of the joke." It must bear repetition, so little touches are needed to give the viewer something different to look for each time.

"What's funny to me is a man struggling to keep his dignity," he said. "People aren't absurd, but absurd things can happen to them."

THE INCREASING COST of television production — a Sedelmaier job starts at around $130,000 — has pushed many clients into radio, where a 60-second spot can be produced for under $2,000.

Humor is being used as a means of differentiating a product from its competitors in today's fragmented market place, Slamberg said. "It's the new orthodoxy." But a radio ad must be heard at least three times before it registers, and one-joke ads don't wear well. So the move is toward funny situations. "It's very difficult to write," Slamberg said.

Two production houses that have been at it long and successfully are Dick Orkin's Radio Ranch and Bert, Barz and Kirby, both based in Los Angeles. As partners in the 1970s, Orkin and Bert Burdis created some memorable commercials, including spots for Time magazine. They split in 1982.

"In radio you depend on imagination to create the scene," Orkin said. "You can design humor for almost anything." The humor stimulates an emotional response far more effectively than a straight approach that touches all the selling points, he said. "I like to believe that the best of our stuff is little moments that arrest attention."

U.S. vintners see Japan as expansion market

Los Angeles Times —
Washington Post News Service

For American wine makers, it must seem like deja vu: In recent years, young Japanese have been forsaking their traditional drinks — just as their American counterparts did 15 years ago — and instead are quaffing imported wines. Sake and Scotch are giving way to Cabernets and Chardonnays.

"Drinking imported wine has become very fashionable in Japan," said Reiko Schwartz, who works for Los Angeles-based Japan-Pacific Publications and recently edited a book on Japanese cuisine.

And so California wine makers, trying to offset slumping domestic consumption, are pushing to expand their presence in Japan, where European wines currently outsell American imports by more than two to one.

Sebastiani Vineyards, California's ninth largest with sales of 2 million cases in 1984, said this week that it will begin selling its wine in Japan under an agreement with Nittetsu Shoji of Tokyo. By 1990, the Sonoma, Calif.-based vineyard hopes to be exporting 40,000 cases — a volume that would make it Japan's third-biggest-selling American import behind Seagram Wine's Paul Masson brand and Heublein's Inglenook label.

The announcement comes just months after the industry's San Francisco-based trade group, the Wine Institute, opened an office in Tokyo to help spur sales of U.S. wines in Japan and other Pacific Rim countries.

"Foreign markets are becoming increasingly important for our wine and spirit sales," said Seagram spokesman John Oliver.

After growing at nearly double-digit annual rates in the 1970s, the U.S. wine industry has been clobbered this decade by a flattening of U.S. consumer demand and by competition from foreign imports. Growth in the Japanese market could potentially offset the slowdown that the industry has encountered domestically and thus help avoid production cutbacks and loss of jobs.

But in Japan, where wine tariffs still are among the highest in the world, U.S. wine sales have more than quadrupled since 1980. In the first six months of 1985 alone, the U.S. exported 839,865 gallons of wine to Japan, more than 200 percent higher than the 258,460 gallons shipped in the first half of 1984.

However, American wine makers still lag behind European brands in Japan. Portugal's Mateus sells about 160,000 cases a year in Japan, and French Calvet sells 130,000 cases a year, according to T. Randall Emch, Sebastiani's director of planning.

In part, the disparity is due to the strength of the U.S. dollar, which has made American products more expensive than their European counterparts. But it also reflects the greater experience that Europeans have in marketing to the Japanese.

Yet it will take more than marketing expertise to make inroads. U.S. wine tariffs were revised last year to allow imposition of stricter duties on incoming wines unless the importing country also eases its tariffs on U.S. wine exports. However, Japan's stiff tariffs will remain in place until April 1987, when they will fall to 30.4 percent from 38 percent and carry a specific duty of at least 53 cents a liter.

RepublicBank reports income

DALLAS (AP) — RepublicBank Corp. on Tuesday reported a 2 percent increase in net income to $35.7 million in the third quarter over 1985's second quarter.

But net income dipped compared to the same period last year. The $35.7 million compares to $38.4 million for the third quarter in 1984.

For the first nine months of the year, earnings per share increased 5 percent to $3.50 on net income of $106.7 million compared to $3.33 per share on net income of $100.4 million for the first nine months of 1984.

The third-quarter results also reflect a provision for loan losses of $34.5 million, which was about $16.5 million greater than net loan charge-offs last year, the statement said.

RepublicBank's total assets increased to $22.6 billion on Sept. 30, 1985, and total deposits increased to $16.1 billion — a 7½ and 8½ percent increase, respectively, over last year.

Now That CD Rates Have Dropped...
Shouldn't You Be Looking Out For Your Best Interest?

Let's face it. CD and Money Market rates just aren't what they used to be. The numbers tell the story. Last year a one year CD yielded up to 12%. Today, the same CD might only offer an 8 +% return. Prudential-Bache Securities has just published a new "Action Alert" on CD alternatives for the concerned investor: safe, secure investment alternatives you may not be aware of.

So, before you let the bank roll you over into lower CD rates, send for your free "Action Alert," and find out which alternatives are in your best interest. Just call us at the number below or send in the coupon.

We would like to propose the marriage of your business with the future.

If you're ready to make a serious commitment to computerizing your office for the future, then we'd like to make a proposal.

Our proposal is based on a complete analysis of your business needs, which a QUALITECH Computer Specialist will discuss with you at length.

As a result of the discussion, we'll present you with a "Management Blueprint." It's a comprehensive proposal, tailored to your specific requirements, including: hardware and software recommendations, training schedule, implementation timetable, service and support information, and of course, a cost breakdown.

Normally, a proposal of this nature costs up to $500. But right now, for a limited time, QUALITECH is offering this service for free. If you're interested, call us today.

New regulations may benefit gas users

WASHINGTON (AP) — Government energy regulators soon may bring lower prices to the 45 million American families who heat their homes with natural gas, at the expense of both industrial users and producers of the fuel.

The Federal Energy Regulatory Commission's three members were scheduled to vote on a controversial and wide-ranging package of measures overturning the rules under which the government has viewed natural gas for nearly five decades.

The $50 billion a year natural gas industry — including producers, pipeline companies and local distributors — now provides slightly more than one-fourth of the nation's energy.

Responding to widespread complaints that the agency's current regulations have prevented falling oil and natural gas prices at the wellhead from benefiting most consumers, the commission last May proposed new rules to restructure the industry.

The regulations could become effective as early as mid-November, though with up to $5 billion in decreased industry revenues from the resulting lower bills at stake, they are sure to be challenged in court and possibly overturned by Congress.

Basically, the new regulations would force the nation's some 30 major gas pipeline companies to abandon their traditional middleman role as wholesalers who buy natural gas from drillers and then resell it to industrial plants and local utilities.

Instead, the pipelines over a transition period of several years would come more to resemble carriers — transporting gas from producers to users for a fee without ever owning the commodity itself — much like railroads, barge lines, truckers and air freight companies.

Though not mandating such "carriage," FERC would provide such strong financial incentives for it that any pipeline which refuses would risk being crippled by both existing and potentially new competitors, according to analysts.

While that carriage provision has drawn opposition from pipeline companies, the most controversial measure in the package would end their practice of "rolling in" or averaging their purchases of cheap and high-priced gas supplies into one bill.

Instead, so-called "old" gas from wells drilled prior to 1978 and still under government price controls — about half the nation's current supply — would be designated primarily for residential and small business customers.

"New" gas from wells drilled since 1978 and now averaging more than twice the wellhead price of old gas would be placed into a separate block for industrial customers who can more easily switch their boilers temporarily to other fuels, such as fuel oil and, in some cases, coal, when prices dictate.

Consumer groups claim the changes could reduce the average nationwide residential price of gas by 50 cents to 75 cents per 1,000 cubic feet. For June, according to the latest available government statistics, that average residential price was $6.89, an all-time high.

Under the present system, industrial users have been able to negotiate prices almost half that level — $3.84 per 1,000 cubic feet, down 60 cents from their nationwide industrial average price two years ago — using the threat that they would otherwise switch to fuel oil.

The Natural Gas Supply Association, an organization of the nation's largest producers, said the new rules could costs drillers $4 billion to $5 billion in yearly revenues because of price cuts they will have to accept in order to maintain their industrial sales.

That development also scares some Wall Street analysts, who have expressed fears that the loss of revenues to producers will dry up funds for new drilling at a time when the nation's reserves of natural gas are at a historic low.

PBGC schedules classes

The Permian Basin Graduate Center has scheduled four courses on subjects ranging from gas contracts to federal taxes to time management.

"Overview: Gas Contracts" taught by John Ochsner, Regional Manager, Lone Star Gas Co., and "Right-of-Way, Damages, Ingress and Egress," taught by G. Ernest Gilkerson, Landman-Lawyer, in Principles of Land & Leasing, will be held Thursday, October 17, from 7 to 10 p.m. Fee is $25.

"Federal Income Taxation of Estates, Trusts and Beneficiaries," Thursday and Friday, October 17-18, from 8:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. This program will provide comprehensive coverage of federal income tax provisions for estates, trusts, and beneficiaries. The level of presentation is introductory and includes a concise and practical explanation of Subchapter J of the Internal Revenue Code. Ted D. Englebrecht, Peat Marwick, Mitchell Professor of Taxation, George State University, will instruct. Fee is $260. Eligible for 16 CPE credits.

"Time Management" Thursday, October 17-31, from 7 to 9 p.m. This course will provide an understanding and application of a process to aid in more effective and efficient use of one's time. This process can help eliminate much of the frustration we experience from never being able to "get things done." Dr. Vernon Stokes, Deputy Director, Region 18 Education Service Center, will instruct. Fee is $80. Eligible for 6 CPE credits.

"Reservoir Engineering for Geologists," will held October 22-23 from 8:30 a.m. to 4 p.m. This course is for geologists, geophysicists, and petroleum land management specialists with limited previous training in reservoir engineering. The course is an overview of basic reservoir engineering principles and designed to provide a broad understanding of the factors that influence oil and gas production. Dr. William D. McCain, Jr., Petroleum Engineer and Visiting Professor of Petroleum Engineering, Texas A&M University, will instruct. Fee is $260.

IADC chapter sets Tuesday dinner meet

Clayton W. Williams, Jr. will be the guest speaker at the October meeting of the Permian Basin Chapter of the International Association of Drilling Contractors.

Williams, whose business interests include oil and gas exploration, production and transportation, real estate, banking, ranching and telecommunications, will talk about his struggles and successes as an entrepreneur in the Permian Basin.

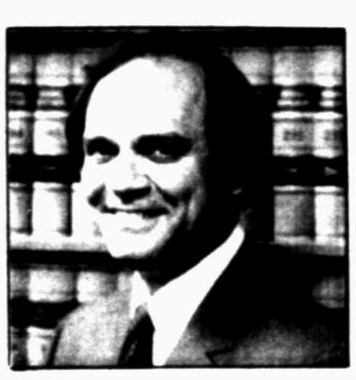

The meeting will be at 6:30 p.m. Tuesday at Green Tree Country Club. For more information, contact Ray Peterson at 686-8411.

Health education course begins at the Midlander

The Fat or Fat System by Covert Bailey, a fitness and nutrition education course has begun at the Midlander, 285 Corporate Drive.

The six session course focuses on material developed by nutritional biochemist Covert Bailey in his best selling books, Fit or Fat and The Fit or Fat Target Diet. Content includes the difference between overweight and overfat, U.S. dietary goals, why diets don't work, how exercise changes your metabolism and how to choose a perfect eating plan.

Vickie Baily will instruct the course. Prepaid registration for the course is $55 for Midlander members and $60 for nonmembers. Two sessions will be held.

D. Wendell Barnett

Lubbock attorney to present talk to Basin CLU Chapter

The Permian Basin Chapter of Chartered Life Underwriters will convene for its regular breakfast meeting on Tuesday, October 15, at Midland's Plaza Club, on the top floor of the ClayDesta National Bank Building.

D. Wendell Barnett, an attorney from Lubbock, will speak on the topic of "Estate Planning using Life Insurance". Barnett is a principal in the firm of Barnett & Terill, and specializes in Estate and Financial Planning.

"The Permian Basin Chapter is a branch of the American Society of CLU's, the largest body of financial planners in the U.S.," according to Doug Saylor, CLU, the Chapter's president.

Part of the chapter's function is to educate its members and the public in Financial Planning. "We have contracted with a firm out of Washington, DC to put on a seminar that deals with ideal ways to distribute a person's estate with the least tax costs. This will be in January of 1986 and will be open to the public for a cost of less than $100.00," Saylor said.

Officers of the chapter, in addition to Saylor, include: Marilou J. Simmons, CLU, vice president; and M.E. Stevens, CLU, secretary/treasurer.

Local SIPEs chapter to hear geologist at Wednesday meet

The Midland Chapter of the Society of Independent Professional Earth Scientists announces that the regular monthly luncheon meeting will be held at 11:30 am., Wednesday, October 16, 1985 at the Midland Country Club.

Barney McCasland, a Midland consulting geologist, will speak and present a slide presentation on Petroleum Exploration in Sudan.

Some independents will only do business with a downtown bank.

We'll see you October 21.

That's when we open our new full-service facility in ClayDesta Center. Oil and gas people know that ClayDesta National Bank is dedicated to serving the independent operators who have made the Permian Basin such a great energy center. Now we'll be able to better serve the professionals in the energy industry, too.

So if you've been wanting to do business with an independent oil and gas bank closer to your office, your time is just about here.

After all, how long has it been since a bank came to you? No wonder folks have been saying, "You've Never Seen a Bank Like ClayDesta."

Study documents changes in corporate training policies

New York Times News Service

NEW YORK — Seymour Lusterman, author of a new study for the Conference Board, "Trends in Corporate Education and Training," has found what he considers to be important increases and changes in corporate training policies.

"I had done a study for the Conference Board about education in industry back in 1977, and I systematically have attempted to take a look at the changes," Lusterman explained in an interview last week. "We got a grant from the Government's Student Marketing Loan Association, better known as Sallie Mae, to help."

Besides wanting to know more about the scope of education in the private sector, Sallie Mae's administrators wanted to find out if there was a trend among companies to assume student loan obligations. Lusterman said firmly, "No, they are not doing that."

Lusterman thinks that at least five factors have led to a growing corporate emphasis on training employees in the face of large layoffs of blue-collar and middle-management workers.

First, he puts technological change as a major reason for increased training, so that corporations can keep up. Next, he notes that the companies interviewed stressed that competition had been intensifying.

"The quality of personnel is so important these days, because of the idea that well-trained employees can help a company in a competitive industry, and also can help cut costs by making people more effective," he said.

Mergers and deregulation are two other factors that have had an increasing impact on management thinking in recent years.

"Many companies are becoming different kinds of companies," Lusterman said, explaining that not only are some producing different kinds of products from what they offered eight years ago, but they also find they "need changing skills and new ways of thinking." "Their goal is to become more marketing-oriented." he said, noting the financial services industry and the airlines as two examples.

Lusterman takes special interest in marketing because before his 16 years with the conference board, which is a business-sponsored research organization, he was a vice president of an advertising agency and a marketing vice president for Pepsico Inc.

Marketing has become especially important to banks like the Bank of America, one of the respondents to the survey. Monday, Michael L. Thomas, a vice president and the bank's director of corporate human resources development, reported "a 500 percent increase in sales training from 1983 to 1984" in the bank's global consumer marketing division, an indication of banking's changed role. "Now we are a high-stress industry in contrast to just managing the store before," he said.

In the past the bank concentrated more on training in specific areas such as credit and financial analysis, but now middle and senior officers are getting more training on global issues, such as international trade and finance, business ethics, and cultural differences. "You might say bigger fish to fry," Thomas said.

A fifth factor, according to Lusterman, is "the new generation of highly trained managers," many with master of business administration and other advanced degrees, who have been taking over top offices. Accustomed to advanced study, they take a keen interest in better-trained employees.

Some years ago most training was done at lower levels, but now it has become more pervasive among middle and even senior management. He describes "a great increase in the upward movement of training."

As the need for training becomes more specialized there has been a trend to use more outsiders. And one problem, not easily solved, is how to pick good ones. This is good news for the growing number of small training companies, as well as for many professors at graduate schools of business administration who offer their services as lecturers.

Experience, reputation and word-of-mouth among training directors are some methods used to pick these trainers. "But the problem remains," Lusterman said. "One training director I interviewed even asked if we couldn't do something about developing a consumer guide."

Businessman tries to reach out, but FCC says no

WASHINGTON (AP) — You'll have to wait before you can send a message to Mars or Venus, or the stars Sirius, Canopus and Alpha Centauri. Stanley Kaplan wanted to make it possible now, but the Federal Communications Commission said no

Kaplan's idea was to allow customers to beam a radio message of 25 words or less into the heavens for five bucks. He had a catchy name for the project: "Space Shots," and said he spent "into six figures" for a 1,000-watt transmitter and other necessary paraphernalia.

To launch his new business last year, Kaplan said he sent out 1,000 press releases and gave 100 interviews. He sold hundreds of $10 kits containing six "launching forms" — they used to be called message blanks — one free and five for future use.

The extra $5 was for the kit, which Kaplan said "gives people all the reasons in the world why they would want to send messages into space."

Then he learned he'd need permission from the FCC and made his application to use a channel reserved for paging systems.

"Their rules weren't written for this kind of thing," said Kaplan, 36, of Sudbury, Mass. "It's a new concept. It's use of space in an imaginative, entertaining way. They were not apparently capable of rising above the rules to another level of what people want to do."

Indeed, the FCC turned him down, sniffing that On-Page, the name of Kaplan's company, "clearly does not contemplate distant reception of its signals."

The commission had solicited comment from interested parties and quoted one, Fred R. Marshall, as expressing doubt there would be a response from parties being paged.

"There are not many phones on the sun, the moon, any of the planets in our solar system or any star outside the solar system," Marshall was quoted as saying. The FCC said he also asked how many requests for paging service had been received from extraterrestrials.

A group of Bell Telephone companies also focused on the fact that the messages won't be delivered by radio transmission and referred to Kaplan's scheme as frivolous.

U.S. RIG COUNT

Basin rig count up two

The Permian Basin rig count climbed two this week to post a 290 total. The national rig count fell one to record a 1,934 rig total.

Ector County advanced the count by three rigs for a total of 15, while Midland County remained at 12. Andrews County lost 11 rigs but remained the most active County in the Permian Basin.

Lea County posted the biggest gain, up five to 26 this week. New activity was seen in Lubbock County for the first time in several months and Coke County added three to its total, up to five.

In the U.S., Texas added 24 for a total of 650 rigs, 130 of which are located in District 8 in the Permian Basin. Alabama added seven and Utah added four. Declines were posted in Mississippi, down nine, Kansas, down eight, and Oklahoma, down five.

Permian Basin totals a year ago were at 349, while the U.S. count was at 2,487.

AUSTIN — Texas crude oil production averaged 2,239,406 barrels daily in July, compared with June production of 2,269,872 barrels daily and July 1984 production of 2,300,631 barrels daily.

Texas oil production in July 1985 totaled 69,421,575 barrels, up from 68,096,165 barrels in June and down from 71,319547 barrels in July 1984.

Oil, gas drilling lag behind 1984

Through the first nine months of this year 35,027 wells drilled for oil and gas in the U.S. have been completed. These are only wells bearing official 1985 completion dates, according to Petroleum Information Corp.

Completions reported during the nine month period totaled 61,884 but this total includes a substantial number of wells from prior years for which status was not determinable until data became available this year.

At this time in 1984 the comparable nationwide figure was 41,248 completed wells. The decrease, amounting to 15.1 percent is in keeping with the trend of rig activity.

Rotary rigs at work in the U.S. have averaged 1,986 for the first nine months of this year. The comparable 1984 average was 2,370. The decline for 1985 is 16.2 percent.

The 35,027 completions this year include 3,949 purely exploratory wells, of which 374 were completed as oil discoveries and 202 were gas discoveries. The resulting percentage of success (14.6%) is below the 17.3 and 17 percent attained in all of 1984 and 1983, respectively.

Through September, a total of 66,023 permits to drill for oil and gas were issued in the U.S. From these permits, 12,373 new oil wells have already been completed plus 3,131 new gas wells, and 7,610 dry holes. Another 647 of these permits have been drilled and the resulting wells are suspended with final status not yet determined. An additional 10,208 are currently drilling or in process of completion. Thus 51.5 percent of the permits issued this year have either been completed or are now active.

If there is no major change in the number of rotary rigs active for the balance of the year, the total of U.S. wells completed this year should reach approximately 63,400 percent, according to Petroleum Information.

Any late year flurry of activity could increase this expected total. By comparison 76,202 wells with official completion dates in 1984 have now been recorded. The comparable figure for 1983, when the year-long average of active rigs was 2,229 is 71,159.

The expected total of approximately 63,400 wells for 1985 would be the lowest annual total for U.S. drilling since 1979 when a little less than 58,000 wells were completed.

Utilization drops

Utilization of rigs in the Permian Basin was down 1 percent this week, according to figures released by Smith Tool. Of the 675 rigs available in the area, 312 were being utilized, for a total utilization of 46.2 percent.

EDITOR'S NOTE: The totals on the utilization chart represent the depth at which each rig is rated. However, some rigs that have been depth-rated for deeper depths are drilling at shallower depths. That will account for some disparity that might appear in the tables, shown to the left.

Permits issued to drill for oil and gas in the U.S. totaled 1,573 for the week ended October 4, down 25.1 percent from the previous week's total of 1,968, according to Petroleum Information Corp. One year ago during the same week, 2,199 permits were issued.

Japanese firm plans to launch US project

TOKYO (AP) — Japan's top petroleum distributor, Nippon Oil Co., will launch a $100 million project to develop oil fields in the U.S., company president Yasuoki Takeuchi said.

Takeuchi announced the project, the first for U.S. oil development by a Japanese oil company, on Wednesday, Japanese newpapers reported Thursday.

The major economic daily Nihon Keizai quoted Takeuchi as saying that his company obtained oil fields from Texaco Inc. in five areas including California, North Dakota and Colorado.

Actress Glenn Close, who co-starred in "The World According to Garp," "The Big Chill," and "The Natural," has the starring roles in "Maxie" and "The Jagged Edge."

By FRED ROBBINS
King Features Syndicate

For eight years Glenn Close was a stage actress, in New York and at regional theaters all over the country, experiencing many setbacks and some small-scale successes. Rapidly approaching her middle years, she had cause to wonder if "her time" would ever come.

"Many times," says the actress with the crinkly eyes and strong New England face, "it was just sheer stick-to-it-iveness and resilience that kept me going."

In 1982, Glenn Close's whole world began to change — suddenly, overnight — for the better.

That year, at 35, she made her first movie, "The World According to Garp." The next year she made her second, "The Big Chill," and, the following year, her third, "The Natural," with Robert Redford.

Each time — three seasons in a row, which set a record — she was nominated for the Academy Award as best supporting actress.

Never mind that she didn't win. She was that "waiting actor" who didn't give up, whose perseverance finally was rewarded.

Today, just one year after her most recent Oscar nomination, no longer a supporting actress, Glenn Close is bursting forth in starring roles in two vastly different movies that promise to establish her as the screen's "new" Katharine Hepburn. Or as the closest competitor super-hot Meryl Streep (whom she greatly resembles) has had to date.

In one of her starring movies, "The Jagged Edge," a suspense thriller, Ms. Close plays a lawyer — modern career woman; chic, brainy, a divorcee with young children — who defends co-star Jeff Bridges, in a sensational murder trial.

"Ten years ago," she notes, not without a degree of satisfaction in her voice, "Robert Redford would have been playing this role."

Even more of the actress' versatile talents are on display in the whimsical, romantic comedy "Maxie," in which she not only plays a dual role but also sings for the first time on screen. (Her lyric soprano, though, has been heard by Broadway audiences in two musicals — Richard Rodgers' short-lived final show, "Rex," and "Barnum," a smash hit that brought her a Tony nomination.)

"Maxie," going into release almost simultaneously with the "The Jagged Edge," concerns the misadventures of a young couple, Glenn and Mandy Patinkin, who move into a San Francisco apartment only to discover that it's already inhabited by the outrageous spirit of a long-dead movie starlet of the '20s. This wild and zany flapper then proceeds to take over the body of the ultra-conservative Jan, a secretary for the archbishop of the local diocese.

The ensuing complications for her equally strait-laced husband, the curator of a library's rare book section, can be imagined. Suddenly he finds himself in love with two women who could not be less alike.

Speaking of Maxie, this character who possesses her, Ms. Close says, "She is such a delightful, spontaneous creature that she brings to both them, husband and wife, things that they're better for, from having been in contact with her."

"It's (the leap between being a supporting actress to being the star) a very big step. First of all, when you're actually filming, you become aware of what a physical challenge it is. Playing a starring role usually means you're in every scene of the movie. And you feel responsible for the impact of the picture. So much is riding on your shoulders. So you have to be very disciplined and keep your wits about you. But I've always said, the bigger the challenge, the better I like it. And I feel very lucky to in this position now. After all, I've only wanted to be a movie star since I was 11."

— Glenn Close

In "The World According to Garp," when a total unknown, she played the outspoken, utterly humorless, feminist mother of Robin Williams (who is only four years younger than she, incidentally), aging from 24 to 58.

"I forgot it was Glennie," said her mother, 58 herself at the time, after seeing the picture at a private screening. "She was sitting right there beside me but I was so engrossed I forgot."

So convincing was the actress in this portrayal, which won her a National Board of Review Award, that it was generally assumed she was an older actress "playing" young.

Several movie producers, who next offered her roles as a middle-aged woman, were fooled. So were some of the co-stars of her next, "The Big Chill," in which she was a young doctor and wife and mother in her 30s.

Pulling an age-switch in "The Natural," she played a vibrant Nebraska beauty left behind, and pregnant, by baseball player Robert Redford, who was surprised a decade or so later when she reappeared in his life with the young son he knew nothing about.

Next, in a low-budget but critically acclaimed film, "The Stone Boy," she and Robert Duvall played a contemporary Midwestern farming couple whose lives were shattered when their older teenage son was accidentally shot and killed by his younger brother.

She may have been typecast on screen as wise, nurturing, even rather saintly characters, but, insists the actress, "My friends know that I'm bawdy and raunchy."

Ms. Close went from the dour farm scene in "The Stone Boy" to Broadway, where, as a sexy, adulterous (and gloriously costumed) actress, she co-starred with Jeremy Irons in "The Real Thing." And, in this smash hit, she won a Tony as best actress.

Going glamorous now on the screen for the first time, in not one but two films, she professes finding the leap from supporting actress to star a bit more daunting than she had imagined.

"It's a very big step," she acknowledges. "First of all, when you're actually filming, you become aware of what a physical challenge it is. Playing a starring role usually means you're in every scene of the movie. And you feel responsible for the impact of the picture.

"So much is riding on your shoulders. So you have to be very disciplined and keep your wits about you. But I've always said, the bigger the challenge, the better I like it. And I feel very lucky to in this position now. After all, I've only wanted to be a movie star since I was 11.

"I was always acting when I was a kid — at play, never in public. I would do characters. I was a total tomboy, and my favorite for a long time was Lucky, Hopalong Cassidy's movie sidekick. We had a Shetland pony which my sister Tina got to ride beacause she was always Hoppy. And I would trot alongside, hitting myself with a stick, pretending I was a horse from the waist down and Lucky from the waist up."

Glenn Close — who was name after godmother Glenn Andrews, an author of cookbooks — grew up in wealthy surroundings in Greenwich, Conn. Her Scottish ancestors had been among the four families settling this now-posh community in the late 1600s, and the estate where she spent her childhood had been in the family for 12 generations.

Earlier, a life of ease and luxury was the keynote in the Close family. But her own parents were — and are — strong-willed Yankees, rebels actually, who listened to a different drummer and taught their children to march to it also.

"I love them very much," says Ms. Close of her parents, who were secretly engaged at 16 and have been married since they were 18. "They turned their backs on the social and material side of Greenwich. They quit the country clubs in protest when they found out that Jews were not allowed as members. They chose to stay away from the yachting and debutante scene. And they brought up their children in a very unmaterri "We hardly ever watched television, we went to very few movies, but we did play games, all of us together — incredible, imaginative games. I think it was in these games that things focused for me and made me want to be an actress. Or perhaps it's simply in the genes, for I come from a line of emotional, creative people."

Among other things, she adds, her parents instilled in her "good old Yankee hardheadedness," the belief that the most satisfying rewards come from "hard, really profound work."

"They taught me that nothing comes easy. But if you want something bad enough you can make it happen — if you put the work into it."

Q. I think Robert Mitchum is just fabulous. Could you tell me about him?
Linda Mercier
Streamwood, Ill.

A. He's 67, was born in Bridgeport, Conn., but after his mother remarried (his father, a railroad worker, was killed in an accident when he was 2), the family moved along with his stepfather's newspaper jobs to Delaware and then New York City.

He graduated from high school at 14, worked briefly as a lyric composer for WMCA Radio, and at 16 took to the road. By his mid-20s, he'd worked as a stevedore, a ditchdigger, a sheet metal shaper, a jazz saxophonist and a pro boxer. (His boxing skills would later figure in to a series of highly publicized barroom brawls, including one in which he took on a heavyweight contender.)

After boxing, he drifted into Hollywood as a writer. By 1943, he had his first acting role, a bit part in a Hopalong Cassidy movie. Two years later, though, he became a star in "The Story of G.I. Joe." Numerous films followed, including "Night of the Hunter," "Heaven Knows Mr. Allison," "The Longest Day," "Farewell, My Lovely," "The Friends of Eddie Coyle" and "That Championship Season."

A couple of seasons back, as you're probably aware, he scored a major success with the ABC miniseries "The Winds of War." The sequel, "War and Remembrance," is now set to go into production in January, but not with Mitchum as was originally hoped. According to his agent, all of the roles are going to be recast.

He does, though, have three other TV projects upcoming: "Promises to Keep," on CBS, in which he co-stars with his son, Chris, and his grandson, Bentley; "The Last Run," also for CBS, due to begin production this month; and "North and South," another epic miniseries, which airs on ABC next month.

He's been married to the former Dorothy Spence for 45 years. Besides Chris, they also have a son, Jim, 43, and a daughter, Petrine, 32. Home base is a ranch near Montecito, Calif.

Carol Neumann
Jersey City, N.J.

A. He was born in Bridgeport, Conn., the oldest of three, but grew up in Brooklyn where his size (he's now 6-foot,3-inches and 260 pounds) helped him gain All-City linebacker status on the football team. He wasn't just brawn, however; he was also a talented actor and a bright student who went on to Columbia.

After college, he enlisted in the Marines for five years, including an eight-month stint in Vietnam, an experience which undoubtedly helped him years later when he was acting in the Vietnam drama "Streamers" on Broadway.

That play was his break in New York, and his movie break followed in the film "Semi-Tough," leading to appearances in "10," "Split Image," "First Blood," "Never Cry Wolf" and the current "Cocoon" and "Silverado."

Q. Whatever happened to Bill Kurtis, the co-anchor of "The CBS Morning News"? We didn't care for Phyllis George, but we do miss him.
Mr. and Mrs. Irwin Crandell
South Bend, Ind.

A. On July 23, he signed a contract to return to WBBM, the CBS station in Chicago at which he was an anchor before moving to the "Morning News."

Q. I love Paul Young. Can you tell me where he's from and what he'll be doing next?
E.R.
Ocean City, N.J.

A. The 29-year-old pop hearththrob is from North London, and since his second album, "The Secret of Association," and single, "Everytime You Go Away," have become such major hits, all he seems to be doing is touring.

This month, he starts another leg on his U.S. tour, expected to run through the end of the next month, after which he returns home to England to tour there. He does have plans for another album. Phil Collins has been talking about producing it, but it will have to wait until sometime next year.

Q. I would like to know whatever happened to Deanna Durbin. Is she still singing?
Ann Cidin
Las Vegas, Nev.

A. Around the house perhaps, but not professionally. When she left Hollywood in 1949, after a 13-year career, she said she would not return to films and she hasn't. She prefers to live quietly with her husband and two children in a farmhouse 30 miles outside of Paris. Some producers have tried to lure her back, however; one even scaled the walls surrounding her house in the early '70s, but his attempt merely prompted her to hire guards, not make movies.

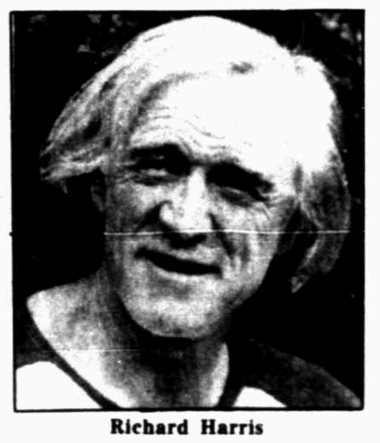

Brian Dennehey

Q. I'm a really big fan of Richard Harris. What has he been doing lately?
Barbara Mebalic
Rock Creek, Ohio
Debbie Denton
Las Vegas, Nev.

A. According to his agent, he's back on the road with "Camelot," the successful revival of the musical that he did on Broadway a few seasons back.

Apparently, Harris worked hard to get the role of King Arthur, first for the film of the musical back in 1967, following Richard Burton's creation of the character onstage.

He bombarded the producer with telegrams on the order of "Harris is better than Burton," and "It would be a disaster without Harris," etc., but when they got him nowhere, he turned up, dressed as a waiter, at a party the producer and his wife were attending. He handed the producer a drink, smiled and got a screen test. Weeks later, he had the part.

This is a concept to which her Harvard-educated father, an eminent physician, has long ascribed. Today he runs a clinic in Big Piney, Wyo., 90 miles from the closest hospital.

Ms. Close was 13 when her father, heeding his social conscience, gave up his lucrative practice in Greenwich and went to the Belgian Congo. There, with the assistance of his wife, he set up a clinic which he operated for the next 16 years. They were there when a bloody rebellion changed the region's status from a colony to a republic and its name to Zaire.

For two years, Ms. Close, her older sisters, Jessie and Tina, and younger brother, Alexander, attended schools in Switzerland. Later, while spending most summers in Zaire, they either lived with a grandmother in Greenwich or were in boarding schools near home.

Ms. Close was enrolled at Rosemary Hall, then an all-girls school, in Greenwich. There, with friends, she formed an improvisational unit, The Fingernails (The Group with Polish), that was the first outlet for her pent-up dramatic energies. "We did skits and satires on pop songs," she says.

Following graduation from high school, Ms. Close's life went off on a tangent that lasted five years.

It was expected that she would go directly to some university to study theater, or a prestigious drama school, or even to Hollywood, which was always her goal.

Instead, to the puzzlement of the family, she became a folk singer.

The year she turned 18 was 1965. It was the era of "flower children," the protest against the Vietnam War, and she became an active participant in that scene.

"I had some extraordinary experiences in various singing groups," she relates. The one she was with longest was called Up With People. "And I was performing and writing songs and thinking how I could change the world with a song.

"But that's my lost life, '65 to '70. Those are the years I wish I had back. I'm still full of conflict about that period. Looking back, I feel as though I was extremely manipulated and used in a way that I don't think was good."

For three years, starting when she was 22, Glenn was married to Cabot Wade, a rock guitarist from Nashville. "I got married," she says now, simply, "because I wouldn't have an affair."

Together in 1970, they enrolled at William & Mary College in Virginia — she to major in drama, with a minor in anthropology. But theirs was a marriage fraught with conflict.

With some wonderment, Ms. Close looks back at the naivete of her younger self.

"That person back then is in many ways a stranger to me," she says. "It's mind-boggling. I had no other role models except my parents. So for the first two years in college, I was going to class, making meals for my husband, doing the laundry, everything, never even thinking we could share the work. It took a long time to learn how to stick up for myself."

After playing Olivia in "Twelfth Night" in her freshman year, Ms. Close was repeatedly cast in major roles by Prof. Howard Scammon, head of the college's drama department. "There was," he recalls, "just something magnetic about her."

When she graduated — Phi Beta Kappa — in 1974, Scammon arranged for her to participate in auditions held in Chicago by the Theater Communications Group for outstanding drama students. And in one swift leap, she became an employed, professional actress. But fame still lay several hard-knock years in the future.

In Chicago, representatives from New York's Phoenix Theater company signed her and, at 27, she returned East to begin her long-delayed career, commuting, at first, from her family's home in Connecticut.

In the years that followed, Ms. Close played, in New York and on grueling bus-and-truck tours, many leads with the Phoenix troupe. And she put in a long apprenticeship elsewhere, in stage productions at various far-flung regional playhouses.

She says she never had thoughts of quitting. "I knew that I was good and that it would all work out all right. That probably was the bottom line — that I've always felt I had gift, a power."

Screen tests for movie roles came to naught.

One famous director, after giving her a screen test rejected her, bty saying "Your face is too alive."

"I didn't know what to do then," she says. "On stage, I've always felt that even if you're lounging on a couch, there has to be something going on in that character that disturbs the air, makes the audience feel something."

Attending a dinner party while starring on Broadway in "The Real Thing," the actress found just that when introduced to handsome James Marlis, a wealthy, 47-year-old venture capitalist who, like herself, was divorced.

"When I first met Jim," she reports, "I wasn't looking for anybody. I wasn't dating anyone and I was very happy — feeling very creative and fulfilled. Everybody says you find people when you're in that state, which I guess makes a lot of sense."

She also found, she says, that Marlis "has great style, is a very kind and generous man," and she wanted to be his wife.

They were married last September, in Nantucket, Mass., in a small, private ceremony.

She says, "I do like being married. I like going into marriage soberly. And I think being married can be a greatly freeing thing.

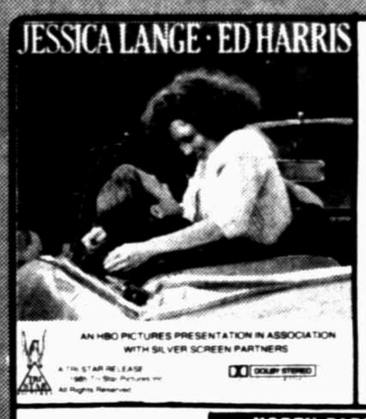

"Life is very hard for everyone, and no one individual is perfect, so I don't expect that from my marriage. I don't expect my husband to be perfect. God knows, I'm not. But it's a comfort to be married, to feel that you're ready to say, 'I would like to stick it out with you. I like having a place together that's kind of our energy plug — from where I can go out into the world and then whatever happens out there, come back and find comfort with you.'"

Conan the 'Commando' amusing

By DAVID LEE FORREST

Forrest

There's no question that "Commando," Arnold Schwarzenegger's newest movie, is a fairly funny film. There are, however, some questions about how much of the humor was deliberate and how much of it was unintentional.

When Schwarzenegger goes on a wild shopping spree through the "Weapons 'R' Us" section of an army surplus store, you can be pretty sure that the humor is deliberate.

But when this man — whose huge bulk makes him only slightly less conspicuous than a wooly mammoth — tries to sneak across a lawn in broad daylight, you may wonder if the director realized how silly this looks.

Schwarzenegger, well-known for his role in the "Conan" movies and hot off his success in "The Terminator," plays John Matrix, a retired soldier who once lead a secret U.S. commando team overthrowing governments and doing other odd jobs.

One day, a group of old enemies drops in to shoot up Matrix's mountain retreat and kidnap his daughter.

The plot gets a little tenuous from there, but the basic excuse for the ensuing mayhem is that Schwarzenegger has exactly 11 hours to find out where the little girl is and rescue her.

Along the way, he picks up the unlikeliest of allies, Rae Dawn Chong. Ms. Chong, the daughter of comedian Tommy Chong (of "Cheech and Chong" fame), made her film debut in the caveman epic "Quest for Fire" so she's probably used to co-starring with someone as brutish as Schwarzenegger's Matrix.

Even though her part is awkwardly grafted onto the main story, she fares quite well in the comic relief role of an airheaded stewardess who becomes the killer commando's sidekick.

Even Schwarzenegger's own funny lines work. The script is perfect for him; it was obviously carefully written so all his humorous lines require absolute deadpan delivery. If Arnold's acting is anything, it's absolutely, positively deadpan.

This movie is inevitably going to be compared to Sylvester Stallone's "Rambo: First Blood, Part 2." Although not quite as carefully crafted as "Rambo," many viewers may find "Commando" more enjoyable.

Schwarzenegger's film isn't as overtly manipulative as Stallone's was and doesn't have to carry the paranoid quasi-political baggage that burdened "Rambo."

"Commando" is essentially apolitical. Even though the hero is a guy who made a living toppling foreign governments, the film balances this by making the villain a right-wing fascist. Perhaps now that Arnold, an avowed conservative, is engaged to be married in April to Maria Shriver — daughter of Eunice Kennedy and Sargeant Shriver — he wants to be more even-handed politically.

The entire movie is cartoonish and wildly exaggerated. At one point, Schwarzenegger stands around unharmed while nearly a dozen bad guys blaze away at him with automatic weapons. You'd think at least one would accidentally hit him. Arnold, of course, kills all of them.

Towards the end, the film degenerates into gore and becomes increasingly less credible (although, Schwarzenegger does finally get a little banged up). There is even some classic Sam Peckinpah-style slow motion death scenes.

An incidental note for film buffs and "Dynasty" fans: The enemy stronghold Schwarzenegger storms in the film's climax is the mansion built by silent film comedian Harold Lloyd and was also the site of the Moldavian wedding massacre in "Dynasty."

Although "Commando" is certainly entertaining on visceral level and does have some genuinely funny scenes in it, perhaps Ms. Chong best summed it up in one scene when she said, "I can't believe all this macho B—S—!"

"Commando," rated R for a great deal of violence and some strong language, is now showing at the Midland Park Mall Cinemas.

'The Jagged Edge' a sharp thriller

"The Jagged Edge" is a well-named film, this sharp thriller takes its audience on a nifty little roller-coaster ride with some unexpected jig and jags along the way.

The movie opens with a shockingly brutal murder. A San Francisco publishing empire heiress is killed with Mansion family-style brutality. It's the type of murder mystery the late Alfred Hitchcock (who, five years after his death, has now eerily returned to prime-time television) might have liked.

An ambitious district attorney, played by Peter Coyote, decides that the victim's husband is not only the most logical suspect but also the most politically convenient.

The suspect husband, played by Jeff Bridges, ends up hiring a former assistant DA, played by Glenn Close, to defend him.

Ms. Close's character still has a chip on her shoulder from a miscarriage of justice she participated in four years earlier while working for Coyote. The incident made her quit criminal law, and Bridges has to coax her to take his case. Bridges' charming and wealthy character, however, is great at coaxing people to do things for him.

What finally seems to swing Ms. Close back into criminal law is her extreme dislike of the DA and his methods.

One nagging question, never adequately answered, is why such a basically decent woman would have kept this mistake — which sent an innocent man to prison — secret for so long.

Although the action builds slowly, this gradual build-up proves to have been worth the wait when the action finally shifts into the courtroom. Although this film doesn't paint the most complete portrait of a trial ever seen, it does nicely capture the ebb and flow of action in a courtroom.

"The Jagged Edge" touches on the potentially serious ethical problem of an attorney becoming emotionally involved with a client as Ms. Close's character falls for Bridges.

Bridges, who proved his versatility in the lead role of last year's "Starman," gives a solid, but almost subdued, performance.

Ms. Close, in a dramatic swing back from her comic role in the recently released "Maxie," does an excellent job in her role despite the fact that the flawed screenplay gave her character some serious weaknesses.

Director Richard Marquand, whose last big movie was "Return of the Jedi," and writer Joe Eszterhas, who wrote what little story there was in "Flashdance," provide a terrifically unsettling twist ending that even Hitchcock probably would have admired.

While "The Jagged Edge" doesn't measure up to the best thrillers of Hitchcock, it's easily the best courtroom drama since 1982's "The Verdict," and might even be better than that film.

"The Jagged Edge," rated R for some very brief but intense violence, some sexual innuendo and strong language, is now showing at the UA Cine IV.

'Friday Lunch' start of weekend for successful

By MARYLOUISE OATES

Los Angeles Times

Washington Post News Service

HOLLYWOOD — The food, frankly, doesn't matter. "Friday Lunch," says Bistro Garden owner Kurt Niklas, with a Paul Henreid accent and a Bette Davis shrug. "Friday Lunch is getting too much. Why not Monday? Why not Tuesday?"

Ah, but it is at Friday Lunch that the weekend starts for the successful and sybaritic. They don't have to rush back to work — or go back at all. It is the Friday Lunch scene that supplements social registers and box-office grosses — the final standing based not on who you are or what you do, but on where you sit. From La Toque and the Polo Lounge on Sunset, to West Hollywood's Trumps, the Ivy and Ma Maison, to the Bistro and Bistro Garden on Canon Drive, to the nearby Grill, and to Jimmy's near Century City, this circuit on any Friday contains more important people than the Senate Dining Room and the NBC Commissary.

Men seem more willing to fake the necessary facade with the Papa Bear Gambit. "Hi, Chris," they say to the maitre d' at the Bistro Garden, using a big, gruff voice — just like a sturdy fellow recently did leading a quartet of lawyer-like men. Whoops! He had mistakenly come through the garden, missing the long line at the almost hidden entrance. Even a hearty handshake brought him no table.

There's also the gambit of being late. "Berkowitz. Berkowitz. Berkowitz," a woman repeated another recent Friday, planting herself before Kurt Niklas' son, Christopher. He rules from the reservation book, parting the crowds with the ease of a chef separating an egg. The woman was not known to him. He looked her in the eye, repeated "Berkowitz, Berkowitz" and asked, "Is that you or me, madame?" before seating her. One must have pull. One can't be just pushy.

Everywhere regulars abound, like actress Donna Reed with her buddies at the Bistro Garden. Mo Dean, her trademark white-blond chignon of Watergate days replaced with a honey-blond bob, might be near The Group — that cadre of Nancy Reagan friends including Bonita Granville Wrather and Betsy Bloomingdale. MGM-UA's majority shareholder Kirk Kerkorian, O.J. Simpson, and entertainment attorney Greg Bautzer might be in the garden — or they might be at Ma Maison, where the Friday Lunch tradition first took hold, a decade ago.

At The Grill, superagent Ed Hookstratten might be signing deals. Director Billy Wilder is probably there, likewise Steve Martin — if he's not at Trumps, where it's a tossup whether he, Warren Beatty or Raquel Welch causes more staff star-craziness.

At these fancy-dancy spots, the food is not dressy. Chopped salads — what the Brown Derby decades ago named the Cobb salad — are still big sellers, and all around you hear, "Iced tea, please."

Ballet, symphony to give joint performance

Ballet Midland and the Midland-Odessa Symphony join together Oct. 22 at Midland's Lee High School Auditorium and Oct. 24 at Odessa's Bonham Junior High for the symphony's second subscription concert of the season.

Leading Ballet Midland will be Anthony Ferro, artistic director and choreographer of three of the works to be performed. the works are Bartok's "Rumanian Folk Dances," Mahler's Adagietto from Symphony No. 5 and Mendelssohn's Symphony No. 4.

Ferro began his studies at Penn State university and the Juilliard School in New York. His training includes the Martha Graham School, New York School of Ballet, American Ballet Theatre, Alvin Ailey Dance Center, Paul San Assardo School, Luigi Studio, Dance Circle and Marjorie Mussman, all of New York. He has also studied with William Martin-Viscount, Fort Worth.

Ferro is a former dancer/soloist with the Twyla Tharp Dance Foundation, Metropolitan Opera Ballet, Atlanta Ballet, Juilliard Dance Ensemble, Kuzuko Hirobiyashi Dance Theatre, Louis falco Dance Company and Dance South of Atlanta. Prior to accepting his position as ballet Midland's director, he also taught master classes at the Dance Theatre Workshop of New York, plus schools and workshops in Atlanta and Fort Worth.

His film credits include performing in Milos Foreman's "Hair." He was actress Rachael Ward's dance coach in the Burt Reynolds production "Sharkey's Machine." He has done over 30 works for opera, ballet and theater. His latest choreography was "Avanti," set to Mendelssohn's Fourth Symphony and the popular "Red Wagon" done to the 1930s big band sound. He attended the 1984 Choreographers Conference in Geneva, NY, sponsored by the National Association of Regional Ballet.

Ferro is married to dancer Susan Clark of Midland. Miss clark will also be on the October program. She has performed with the American Ballet Theatre II and as a principal dancer with the Atlanta Ballet. She is performing as guest artist throughout the country and during the 1985-86 season she is a member of the Ballet Midland Academy.

Other Ballet Midland members performing are Judy Coleman, Brian taylor, Sandra Huxman, Kelly Shaw, Karen Keaton, Amy Wolfe and Jim Cramer.

Also on the program, the symphony will perform the lighthearted "Italian in Algiers Overture" by Rossini and Haydn's Symphony No. 101, sometimes referred to as the "Clock Symphony" for its clock-like sounds in the second movement.

For more information on the concert call the symphony offices at terminal, 563-5269. Concert time is 8 p.m.

Storytime planned at museum for preschoolers

ODESSA — It is not too early to register for the special storytime for preschoolers planned for Oct. 29 at the Presidential Museum, 622 N. Lee St.

The hour long program begins at 10:30 a.m. Several stories are told with the assistance of puppets and accompanied by songs popular among children. Each story has been selected to relate directly to the museum's exhibit, "A Stitch in time." Following storytime, participants will have the chance to express themselves creatively in an art project.

"Our 'Spinning Tales, Weaving Legends' program for pre-schoolers is the first time the museum has offered a special event for children this young," says Anne Sherburn, director of the museum. 'We have now begun to concentrate on offering a whole range of activities for all age groups. We want all children to feel welcome at the museum and to know that museums are fun places to be."

"Spinning Tales, Weaving Legends" will be conducted by Pam wells, known throughout the Permian Basin for her community involvement and theatrical talents. Before moving to Odessa, Ms. Wells was a docent for five years at the Smithsonian Institution, Washington, D.C.

In describing her enthusiasm for working in museums, Ms. Wells says, "I like working with children and museums are unique places to learn. they offer great opportunities for parents and children to learn together through 'painless' education. I'm really looking forward to working with the staff of the Presidential Museum in their first attempt at 'painless' education for pre-schoolers."

The museum encourages all interested parents to contact the museum and register their pre-schoolers, ages 3-5, for "Spinning Tales, Weaving Legends." There is no charge, but registration is required.

"Spinning Tales, Weaving Legends" is offered in conjunction with the exhibition "A Stitch in Time," which will be on display through Nov. 2. This exhibition features over 15 quilts ranging from those made in the Great Depression through ones completed this year. also on display are over 10 different kinds of needle art techniques, including handmade lace, needleypoint, tatting, Brazilian embroidery, crocheting and crewel work.

Hours at the museum are Tuesday through Saturday 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. There is no admission charge.

Necklaces on display in Big Spring

BIG SPRING — the Heritage Museum has a special exhibit of Southwest American Indian necklaces on display.

The necklaces, on loan from the William Jacka Collection of the Lakeside Heritage Club, Lakeside, Ohio, illustrate the various types of materials utilized by Native Americans for beads.

Native Americans cut and shaped beads from shells and stone prior to the introduction of glass trade beads on the East Coast in the 1670s. The earliest beads were drilled with hand flint drills and pump drills. Visitors to the museum may try their hand at drilling holes in shells with a replica pump drill.

Stone, shell, turquoise and glass beads are represented in this exhibit, which is on display through November.

The museum is open from 8 a.m. to noon and 1 to 5 p.m. Tuesday through Friday and 1 to 5 p.m. Saturday and Sunday. For more information call Neil Allen, curator, 1-267-8255.

State Fair continues in Dallas through Oct. 20

DALLAS — The 1985 State Fair of Texas continues in Dallas through Oct. 20.

The annual fall event has a long and varied lost of events that are free once visitors pay their gate admission. An ice revue, a three-ring circus, a helicopter aerobatics act, a high diving show, a parade, a fireworks display, drills by military groups and numerous concerts, including performances by name stars, are included in the price of admission. Cost is $4 for adults, $1 for children 5 to 11 years of age and free for children under 5. Senior citizens are admitted free on Tuesdays.

"Pepsi on Ice" is being presented at 2, 4, 6 and 8 p.m. daily beside the Esplanade, while the Dr Pepper State fair circus has performances at 3 and 8 p.m. daily. Friday through Monday the circus has additional performances at 1 or 5 p.m.

Trapeze acrobatics are being performed from "Starship 3," a helicopter flying over the Lagoon, at 2:30, 4:30 and 7:30 p.m. daily and members of the Miller Great American High Diving Team plunge from an 80-foot tower into a pool of water at 1, 3, 5 and 8 p.m. daily.

Each night at 7 p.m. a parade featuring marching bands, floats, beauty queens, costumed characters, horse-drawn wagons and a variety of other participants will wind its way through the fairgrounds.

Following the parade, a fireworks display will be presented at 7:50 p.m.

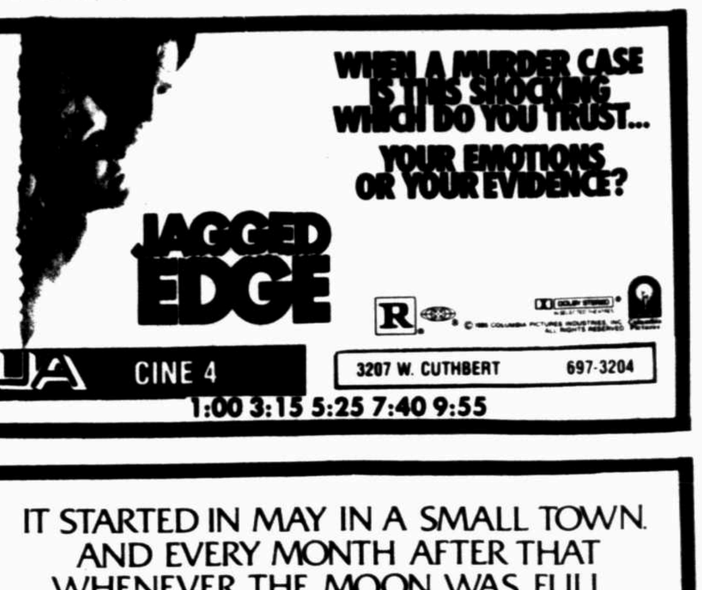

The U.S. Marine Drum and Bugle Corps will play daily except Tuesdays at 4 p.m. on Marine Square and at 5 p.m. in front of the Hall of State. The Marine Silent Drill Team will join the others Friday through Oct. 20 at 3:45 p.m.

The U.S. Navy Steel Band will play at 11 a.m. Friday through Oct. 20 in various fairgrounds locations. The U.S. Army Drill Team will perform in front of the Hall of State at 4 p.m. Wednesday through Oct. 20, and the First Cavalry will be in the same location at 4:30 p.m. today.

Many outdoor concerts will take place on various stages around the fairgrounds. Those which have not taken place to date include Mel McDaniel, today; Raven, Monday; Little Joe y la Familia, Tuesday; Frenchie Burke, Saturday through Oct. 20; the Judds, Saturday; and Williams & Ree, Oct 20. Most performances will be at 6 and 8 p.m.; however, some are at 1, 3 or 5 p.m.

Coors Stage 7 will feature appearances each by Boyfriend, Four Kinsmen, Sazerac Jazz and Two for the Road trio, while performers in the Big Tex Coca-Cola Stage will be The Shoppe, Riders in the Sky, Vince vance and the valients, Clay and Sally Hart, Sons of Thunder, Brooks Brothers, Longhorn Singers, Sym-Funny Band and the Anita Martinez Dancers.

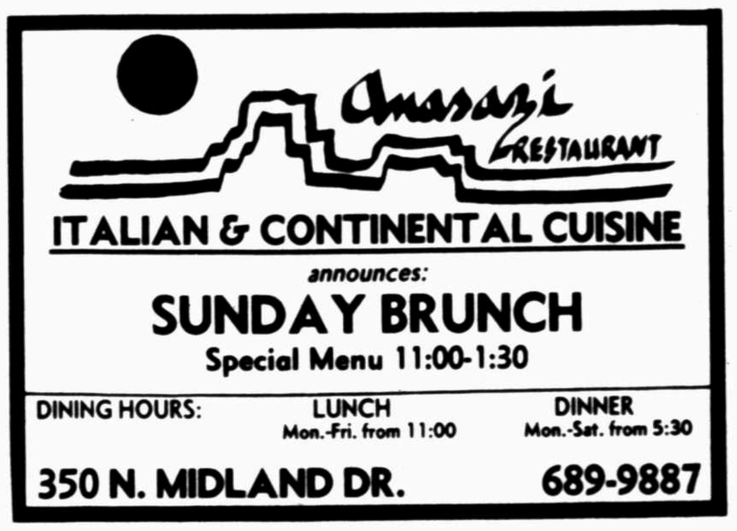

The Billy Roy One Man band will play daily at the Hall of State and appearing at various times in front of the Hall of State will be other groups. thirty-four more dance groups will perform during the fair in the Showplace Theatre of the Creative Arts building and the Dallas Repertory Theatre will also present its Top Hat Revue there.

ENTERTAINMENT IN BRIEF

'She Stoops to Conquer' to open

ODESSA — The Globe Theatre and the Odessa College Theatre Department open a five-performance run of Oliver Goldsmith's comedy classic, "She Stoops to Conquer" at 8 p.m. Oct. 18.

Subtitled "The Mistakes of a Night," the production features both community and college talent.

"Combining our resources for this production has enabled us to pot together an exceptionally strong cast and crew," says Paula Thompson, director of the show and head of OC's theater department.

"Odessa and Midland have a wealth of dramatic talent," she says. "By working with nore experienced actors, the student cast members have themselves grown. And of course working on the Globe stage offers our actors an experience they can't find anywhere else in the region."

"She Stoops to Conquer" has been delighting audiences for over 200 years with its warmth and wit. The play follows the misadventures of Marlow, a young Londoner on his way to meet Kate Hardcastle, the woman his father has chosen for him to marry.

His plans go awry when Kate's step-brother plays a joke on Marlow by leading him to think the Hardcastle home is an inn. As a result, Marlow treats Kate and her father as if they were servants. Kate plays along with the joke in order to get to know Marlow better, and thus "stoops to conquer."

The production is sponsored by McMinn's Home furnishings. Additional support is being provided by the Odessa Cultural Council.

"She Stoops to Conquer" will be performed at 8 p.m. Oct. 18, 19, 25 and 26, and at 2:30 p.m. Oct. 27. Admission is $7 for adults and $4 for students and senior citizens. For reservations and information, call the Globe Theatre, 1-332-1586.

Couple's work to be on display

ODESSA — Work done by a San Angelo husband and wife team, Jim and Martha Wittstruck, is on exhibit at Odessa College through Oct. 25 in the OC Gallery in the Instructional Building.

Mrs. Whittstruck received her master's degree from the University of Nebraska-Lincoln and her bachelor's degree from Millersville State College, Millersville, Pa. She is a fulltime art instructor at Angelo State University.

Wittstruck received his bachelor's degree from the University of Nebraska. He taught adult education ceramics classes at Angelo State University for three years and worked as an instructor for the University's Elderhostel program. He is also a founding member of a new artists' cooperative gallery in San Angelo. He is a parttime instructor at Angelo State University.

She has been working in clay since 1971. Her first experiences were learning how to create functional pieces out of clay. After getting her bachelor of arts, she worked as a potter's apprentice before going on to graduate school where her designs becoame more sculpture orientated.

Both artists have exhibited their work in numerous shows throughout the Midwest and have juried a number of shows. In 1978, Mrs. Wittstruck was the recipient of the Vreeland Award, the University of Nebraska-Lincoln's graduate award for outstanding creative achievement.

Gallery hours are 8 a.m. to 9 p.m. Monday through Friday.

'Toughlove' to air on Channel 2

"Toughlove," a special presentation of the ABC Sunday Night Movie will be aired on Channel 2 television today.

This ABC Theatre presentation focuses on parents who take extreme measures to save their rebellious, drug-abusing children from disaster. Toughlove is a family support program founded by David and Phyllis York.

"The program encourages parents to continue to be loving but to stop being intimidated and manipulated by their unruly offspring," says a spokesman for Toughlove.

A chapter of Toughlove has been founded in Odessa.

Book boasts Connecticut's firsts

HARTFORD, Conn. (AP) — Connecticut can boast more than its share of firsts, according to a newly revised book chronicling the state's inventors and adventurers.

The book, appropriately titled "Connecticut Firsts," notes numerous examples of the state's pioneering.

For example:

- E.R. Sears of Greenwich was the first woman to win the U.S. Women's Squash Racquets Singles Championship. She did it in 1928.
- G.C. Blickensderfer of Stamford patented the first portable typewriter in 1892.
- And Peter Carl Goldmark of Stamford invented the long-playing record in 1948.

YOUR HOROSCOPE

By Jeane Dixon

Monday, October 14, 1985

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY: Seek straight answers from experts and the business picture will show dramatic improvement. You'll find that you have more money to spend on your family's comfort. Set aside funds for investment purposes while the money is rolling in. Your generosity and devotion to duty make you the one to whom loved ones turn in times of crisis. Be careful not to let a selfish individual manipulate you. Romance weathers a storm. CELEBRITY BIRTHDATES: "Night Court" star Harry Anderson, actor Roger Moore, fashion designer Ralph Lauren, baseball's Al Oliver, actress Lillian Gish, President Dwight D. Eisenhower, Pennsylvania founder William Penn.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Blending two different cultures can be tough, but the resulting happiness makes your efforts worthwhile. A blueprint for success is close at hand. Look for it! Love conquers all.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): The things you do now will help you build a better future. A promise should not be taken lightly. Others finally seek your advice. Avoid saying, "I told you so."

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Improving distribution methods will boost your income. A new plan brings speedy results. Be sure you have family members' support. Help a youngster develop his or her potential.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Put your experience to work for the good of others. A phone call could change your life. Tender words have special significance. Romance is more rewarding than in the recent past.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Do not take anything for granted today. Check out the details of an agreement before signing or recommending it. A greedy individual could try to deceive you. Insist on seeing something for yourself.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Nothing could be more effective than the plan you are already working on. Protect your investment. You can be a top performer if you really concentrate. Resist the temptation to sound off.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Work hard for the results you want. Probe beneath the surface and you will discover the truth. Investigate a situation personally before passing judgment on someone's actions.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): You can be a catalyst for good works today. Reach out to those who have helped you in the past. Refuse to take "no" for an answer and you will win big!

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): There are no easy solutions. Count on your hard work and dedication paying off at the bank. A new approach adds spice to your social life. Romance gets a welcome assist.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Your career can soar to new heights now. Heed your instincts but also listen to a trusted advisor. Your personal income could grow substantially if you make the right moves.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): A love relationship emerges stronger than ever from a crisis. Married couples need to set aside more time for each other. Financial help is on the way. Do not give in to pressure.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Pay more attention to your appearance; it could mean the difference between looking good and looking great! Create something special to reward or honor that special person in your life.

GOREN BRIDGE

BY CHARLES GOREN AND OMAR SHARIF

© 1985 Tribune Media Services, Inc.

Q.—While I have been a rubber bridge player for many years, I have always been hesitant about trying my hand at duplicate bridge. Would you please explain the main differences between the two forms of bridge?—J.E., San Francisco, Calif.

A.—There's enough material here for a book. But we'll try, anyway.

In rubber bridge, the object is to win two games, and each hand is simply a campaign in the battle for the rubber. At duplicate, each board is a separate war, and your result on any one deal has no bearing on any other deal in the competition.

In rubber bridge, your object is to win the rubber. It is of little import if you go minus 200 when the opponents can make a partscore. At duplicate, you must score at least as well, or better, than every other pair sitting in your direction, each of whom will play the same cards that you do.

In rubber bridge, you strive for the safest contract. At duplicate, you must try for the highest-scoring contract. As a result, minor-suit games are all but forgotten in duplicate. Bidding and making three no trump with an overtrick scores more than bidding and making five of a minor, or even collecting an overtrick at a minor suit game. Thus, if you go beyond three no trump when you have a minor suit, you are almost committed to slam.

In rubber bridge, you should take the safest line of play for your contract; overtricks are a luxury. And on defense, your main objective is to defeat the contract, even if the line you adopt might yield an extra trick to declarer if it does not succeed.
