Lions To Hold A Carnival April 17, Thursday Night

Thursday evening at 7:30 at the gym, Gatesville Lions Club will hold a carnival, and of course, everything will be there for the fun and amusement of the customers.

Among the attractions will be fish ponds, freak shows, balloon stands, and others, under the direction of "Side Show Barker" Early Byrd Worley.

The thug of the squared arena, Coach "Bone Crusher" Pruitt will be the chief instigator of the athletic arena, marble machines and cake walk diversifications, and topping the compelling outshelling routine will be a burlesque show, only as one can be featured by the Minsky clan.

The dough, of course, will go into the Lions Den, and everybody knows what they do with any and all funds they get.

Formal Opening Of Gym-Class Room Building at "Cove"

The formal opening of the Copperas Cove High School Gymnasium, Class-Room Building will be held Tuesday night, April 15. All the people in the Copperas Cove School District and the surrounding communities are urged to attend. An interesting program will feature a speaker and ball games are being planned. The PTA will serve refreshments to all visitors.

The building is constructed of native stone. It is a WPA project which calls for an expenditure of approximately $32,000.00.

The building contains two class rooms, two offices, showers and sanitary facilities, and the gym proper. The gym has a playing floor 85 feet by 46 feet and it will seat approximately 375 people.

The ground improvement project which calls for the expenditure of approximately $16,000.00 is progressing rapidly. This project includes the construction of walks, stone gutters, stone curbs, tennis courts, and a football field. The walks and stone gutters are almost completed and the other work should be completed soon.

Here's All We've Got On Army Camp In Coryell

Washington, April 9 (AP)—A Texas member of Congress said Wednesday that the Army planned to establish three additional cantonments in Texas and funds for the camps already had been appropriated.

The Texan, who asked that he not be quoted by name, said one camp probably would be located north of Houston, somewhere in East Texas, another in the vicinity of Waco and a third somewhere in West Texas.

Third Army Headquarters and the Eighth Corps Area at San Antonio declined comment on the new camp locations, but officers admitted unofficially that there were a number of such camps "in the mill". They doubted, however, if any official announcement would be forthcoming soon—possibly not for six weeks.

Lions and Visitors Hear "Amateur" Tell Of European Fight

Frank Baldwin, self-styled "amateur" world condition observer, and Editor of the Waco News-Tribune Times Herald interested a full house at the Wednesday luncheon of the Gatesville Lions.

Mr. Baldwin said the outlook was dismal, and that the prospects for a short war are very short.

The speaker didn't pull any punches in relating his experiences and kept the listeners interested beyond reason all during his talk.

"CAKE WALK" DOWN TOWN: PLANNED TO GET B.B. SWEATERS

An old fashioned "cake walk", sponsored by the local basketball boys and girls, will be staged downtown Saturday afternoon, starting about 4 o'clock and running on into the night. Proceeds will go to help buy their sweaters.

Quartets, a string band, solos, Raggy Ann, the Melody Six, and other entertainers will be featured, so bring your nickels, dimes, etc. and have fun with the others.

We Get a Letter From Fort Knox Kaintuck

It's from Hershall E. Kellogg, a former Coryell County boy who's now up in the Blue Grass country, close to Louisville, where the Kentucky Derby will be held May 3.

Hershall writes as follows: "This is some news sent from Kentucky by a couple of Gatesville boys. This country is pretty, but we would rather be back in Gatesville.

Kentucky is known for its fast horses and beautiful women but we have not been lucky enough yet to see either, but we are sure they are here. We will let you know later which is the fastest—women or horses. But we'll have to do all this in 8 weeks for we will be shipped out of here to some other camp, so you see we have work to do. Both in the Army and out too. Army life is not so bad. All you have to do is take orders.

There are several Gatesville boys up here. They really do get homesick, but we can't laugh at them for Gatesville means something to us too.

We are in the Armored force out here, so we won't have to do much walking. We think they are going to give us a tank and machine guns and turn us lose.

Mat, tell all of our friends in Gatesville if they are gamblers and want to bet, we would be glad to place the bets on any horse that is in the Kentucky Derby, which comes off the 3rd of May. We are counting on making it or know the reason why.

We really have some nice people up here. All the people from miles came down to see us get off the train, but they were really disappointed, after they saw there were not any Texas cowboys on the train.

We had the mumps to break out on our way up here.

We are 35 miles from town and it costs 80c to go to town.

We will send our address if any of the folks down there want to write us, especially the girls.

Our address is: Man Kellogg and William Moore, AFRC, 8th Battalion Co. B. and Leslie "Slim" Glenn and Frank Cummings, AFRC, 8th Battalion, Co. A., Fort Knox, Kentucky.

machine and our figures didn't tally.

Attenyrate, the total of this "suit deal" advertised by Mr. Alvis is $24.38. We had it $1.00 higher.

And, too, it'd be a good thing to buy now, 'cause the Amalgamated Clothing Workers, say they're going to ask for 15% wage increase, and that means suit'll be up. That don't mention wool prices either.

Nation Mourns Loss Of Senator Morris Sheppard of Texas

President Roosevelt and other leaders expressed sorrow over the death of Senator Morris Sheppard of Texas, "the father of prohibition", dean of Congress, and chairman of the senate military committee.

Sheppard, who was 65 years old died Wednesday morning of a brain hemorrhage. He had served in the house 10 years and in the senate 28.

Senator Reynolds of North Carolina is in line for the chairmanship of the military committee.

Members of the family arranged to bring Sheppard's body to Texas and funeral services will be held at 3 p. m. Saturday in Texarkana, his home.

Sheppard was intensely proud of his long legislative record as a party man, often citing his unwavering support of the policies of Woodrow Wilson and the present Roosevelt.

He is survived by his widow and three married daughters.

Governor W. Lee O'Daniel has intimated nothing would be done about this Senatorial place until final rites have been said on the late Senator Sheppard. There are a number of "possibilities" including Gerald C. Mann, Lyndon Johnson, and the Governor himself. Also, Martin Dies has been mentioned. Anyway, it'll probably be a "free for all".

RURAL STUDENTS WIN IN DISTRICT 'TESTS' AT WACO SATURDAY

Among the rural students who won in the District meet at Waco Saturday, were Dora Jean McDonald of Belcher, and Gerald Ray McBride, seniors.

Juniors were: Janell Hull of Antelope and Maston Wolfe Jr. of Arnett.

These students made a very creditable showing, considering the fact that there were twelve counties represented, and they brought home 2nd and 3rd places.

TEXAS HISTORY

THE SAN SABA PADRES
MEET THE COMANCHES

The history of Eighteenth-Century Texas is essentially the story of its first large-scale pioneering movement—the rise, prosperity, and sudden decline of its Franciscan missions—which though given up in 1794, prepared the way for permanent settlement by Anglo-Saxons in the 1820's.

They were not easily discouraged, the padres of those missions; yet, as all pioneers must, they met some severe setbacks. In his third volume of "Our Catholic Heritage in Texas," a seven-volume work being published by the Knights of Columbus, Dr. C. E. Castaneda of the University of Texas gives a detailed account of the most dramatic of them—the San Saba massacre of 1758.

The mission on the San Saba River, near present-day Menard, was founded in 1757 as the first of a chain which were to bring the gospel to the Apache Indians of central Texas; but it was a great disappointment. For after eleven months—by March, 1758—no Apaches had presented themselves, except in passing. Only three still hopeful padres remained: Fray Alonso de Terreros, Fray Jose Satiesteban, and Fray Miguel Molina.

ENTER THE INDIANS

On March 2, however, a great horde of warriors from the north, mostly Comanches, appeared in dress, come to wipe out their ancient enemies, the Apache tribes. And on the 16th, early in the morning, they called on the mission, two thousand strong. Many had rifles.

The padres, who had refused to take refuge in the fortified presidio across the river, received them with friendliness. Fray Alonso gave them tobacco, but without effect. He stood quietly by while they looted his storehouses. And when they announced that were going on to the presidio to seek out Apaches, he gave them a message for the commandant urging him to admit them peaceably.

The Spanish officer, however, had decided to take no chances, and when the Comanches approached, his men fired a volley which sent them scurrying back to the mission. Now Fray Alonso offered to return with them and, taking one of five soldiers he had, rode calmly out of the patio. Then without warning, both were suddenly shot down, and the massacre was on.

A DAY-LON RIOT

From early morning on throughout the day it continued. Fray Satiesteban was struck down as he knelt in prayer; his head was cut off and played with as if it were a ball. The soldiers were shot and cut to pieces. Only eight persons, including Fray Molina, held out beyond noon in a barricaded room.

There they were by no means safe and twice had to flee to new death, for the Indians were firing and destroying everything they could not carry away. By nightfall only Fray Molina and three companions survived, the padre with a broken arm; and in the darkness, somehow, they reached the safety of the presidio.

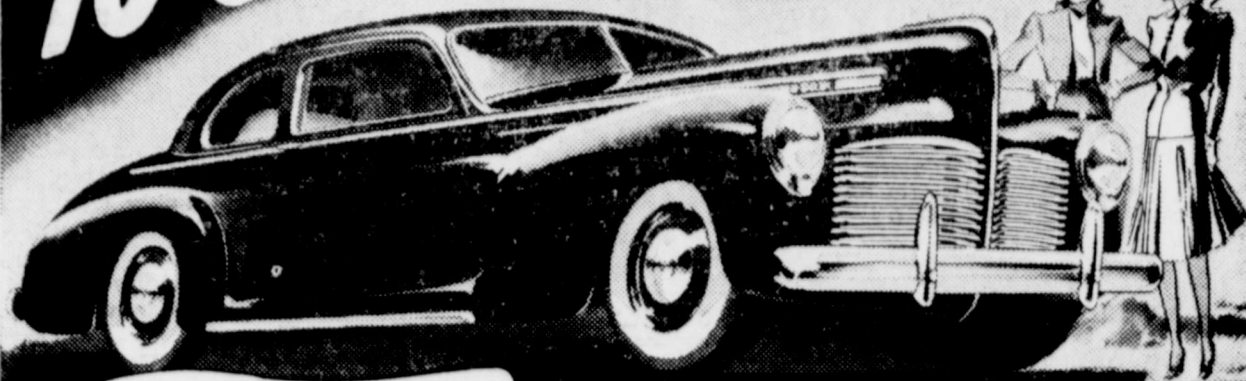

For three days the Comanches lingered, considering an attack on the fort. Then at last, on the 20th, they seemed to have gone, and the few soldiers in the presidio ventured out to the mission. It was ashes and ruins, and the bodies of eight victims lay in and about it, all mutilated.

This was the death-blow to the missionary movement on the San Saba. Although the greatest prosperity of the Franciscan missions in Texas was still to come, henceforth, the Apaches and their northern neighbors were left to their

100 YEARS AGO IN TEXAS

"Andrews and Hammeken have completed the driving of piles and the frame-work of their excellent wharf. It reaches 12 feet water, which is 90 feet distant from high tide; the cap of the T is 80 feet long by 40 broad. The same enterprising individuals have for some time had in successful operation a powerful and well constructed cotton press, capable of compressing 75 bales of cotton in twelve hours." San Luis Advocate, April 13, 1841.

"Three candidates for the vice-presidency, at the election in September, are already in the field, Gen. Hunt, Hon. Wm. Meniffee, and Col. M. B. Menard. Gov Smith has been addressed by a meeting of his friends in this city, asking leave to place his name on the canvass for this office, but his reply has not yet been received."

"A Fair Hit—During the late debate in the House of Representatives, upon Mr. Pickens' Report, that gentleman took occasion to say that Mr. Granger had 'doled out a set speech with all the regularity of the notes of a bag-pipe.' Mr. Granger retorted by saying that if he could not produce such musical or such boisterous notes as the gentleman from South Carolina, it was because he had not been able to fill his 'bag so full of win'. This hit at Mr. Pickens, whose style of oratory is pompous and inflated, convulsed the House with irrepressible peels of laughter."—Telegram and Texas Register (Houston,) April 14, 1841.

FROM THE NATION'S CAPITAL COMES 'GOVERNMENTISH' OR 'FEDERALES'

Words! Words! Words! They pour in a stream of releases from the information offices in Washington—some of them excellently written and finding a welcome place in the news, features and reportorial rooms of the nation's newspapers—some of them containing many meaningless phrases. A discussion of this situation which grew out of an investigation made by members of a class in Applied Government Writing at American university in Washington, taught by William D. Boutwell, director of the United States office of education radio project, appears in the current issue of the Quill, magazine of Sigma Delta Chi. Written by Leslie W. Higbie, an employee in the newspaper reference section of the Library of Congress, it reads as follows:

In the squat, sprawling marble piles that pass for government buildings on the broad avenues of Washington, D. C., work the great corps of government publicity agents. They are known as Information Workers.

Newspaper men get their hand-outs from them. Every year they turn out millions of words for Uncle Sam.

A few blocks away, a group of student writers, studying how to write for the government at one of Washington's man night schools, has come to a startling conclusion after analyzing literature these workers grind out. They've decided that what this country needs from its government is something simple. Plain, everyday language.

This group of students undertook an experiment: They picked out of government bulletins, reports, letters, releases and speeches what they call Governmentish or, as a Washington newspaper man labeled it, Federales.

Sir Arthur Quiller-Couch, the bogey man of college freshman who struggle with his piece of jargon and circumlocution, found nothing to compare with these little gems:

"Budgetary limitations."
"Matter will be expedited."
"Investigations underway."
"Question hereby answered in the negative."

"Under existing legislation."
"Due to the exigency."
"In connection with."
"Hereunto appended."
"Criteria."

"For the fiscal year ending."
And so on far into the soft and stilted night!

Governmentish or Federales, in short, is Washington shop talk.

HAPPINESS IN EVERY CUP

'Go-Ahead Signal'

The United States Housing authority and Public Works administration have particular pets: Count anything a failure from USHA unless it says something about a "go-ahead signal" PWA releases are not 18 carat unless they contain "Let the dirt fly."

Here's one sentence from a recent Housing authority dispatch that actually was printed.

"Average monthly shelter rentals of approximately the same amount paid for living quarters in slum areas in the same communities have been established for the 15,878 homes in the first USHA-aided projects for which rents have been approved under the United States Housing Authority slum-clearance program."

USHA apparently realizes what incoherence means, however. In an article by one of its associate directors this statement occurs:

"... the Committee of Recreation Executives . . . has as one of its purposes the development of a glossary of recreation objectives and terms. This glossary will be of great value to the United States Housing Authority, as well as to all recreation groups." And we might add, also the evrybody else that wants to know what they're talking about.

A Library of Congress bulletin has this to say: "The general collections form a matrix in which are embedded many collections of special material secured by gift or purchase, or by the segregation of material gradually acquired. An enumeration of certain of these is intended to be exemplary rather than exhaustive."

One of the most fertile beds of Governmentish discovered was in a series of CCC articles reprinted from the U. S. office of education publication, School Life.

In a story on "Training of Camp Educational Advisers," the educators say: "The duties herein prescribed comprehend the pedagogical field . . . The presence of . . . different conditions predicated by the existence of an educational system within the framework of a work camp has necessitated the creation of a special program of training for camp educational advisers. Since the position and the system are without a background of precedent, this training has largely taken place through the medium of an in-service program."

Finish With a Bang

The same story finishes up with this kind of a bang.

"In keeping with the principle of decentralization which obtains in the Civilian Conservation corps, the inservice training of camp educational advisers has been decentralized insofar as decentralization is consonant with good administration, in order that special problems may be met more intelligently."

It was suggested in this class of student writers that all this obscurantism might be just "protective coloring for the bureaucrat."

The majority gave the "bureaucrats" the benefit of the doubt, however, and maintained it was simply "fuzzy" writing as a product of "fuzzy" thinking.

Here's what the penultimate in Governmentish might look like if the information boys in Washington really tried:

"It has been brought to my attention, according to a recent survey, that latest statistics show in this connection the difficulties en-

That's what not to do, decided this corps of investigators. It seems a reasonable conclusion.

On the positive side, here's the advice they give. It takes work to make your writing readable. It takes still more to make it clear. If you're planning on writing for the government, take a tip from this analysis: Steer clear of high-powered words. Say things plainly and to the point. Be fresh in your choice of words. Don't let the lingo of Governmentish spoil your writing.—The Publisher's Auxiliary.

Private Papers of a Cub Reporter:

Irvin S. Cobb, in this year's version of his autobiography, gets pretty persnickitty about today's reporters. The columnists, however, are his great big aversion. . . . Irvin insists the columnists are not accurate and so forth. . . . So what happens? . . . So Harry Hansen, the book critic, decided to give Cobb a little lesson in accuracy. . . . Cobb, it appears, relates how, in Belgium in 1914, his life was threatened. . . . He goes on, for several Dick Tracy pages, to tell how a ferocious German major pulled a gun on him, menacing him worse than Karlhoff could. . . . Here is Hansen's cold water: "The actual incident was trivial. The officer was a sergeant, and Cobb's life was never in danger. I saw it, and often marveled at the international episode Cobb made of it."

Oswald Marshall heard it in London. . . . About the two Germans who met in Páree, and Carl said to Fritz: "Have you a gute job here?" "Yah," Fritz fritz'd, "I have a vorry gute job. I zit on top of da Eiffel Towah undt I watch for da English to vave da white flag!" "Iss it gute pay?" queried Carl. "Not much," said Fritz, "but idds far life!"

The colyum's I. Elinson recently planned in from Hollywood making his initial flight. . . . He tried, however, to impress his friends who were taking him to the airport by telling them that flying was old stuff to him. . . . When they got to the airport Elinson said to an attendant: "I'm taking the American Mercury. What TRACK does that leave on?"

Columbia's short-wave listening post heard this from England. . . . It is the best illustration of Russia's position in the war. . . . It was memo'd to Churchill by a returned diplomat from Moscow, to wit: "A report came in to the Kremlin which read: 'Nine British planes destroyed. Nine German planes shot down.' . . . Stalin looked at it, rubbed his hands and smiled."

"Good," he drooled. "That's 18 planes for us."

Alexander Markey observes: "Mebbe the Ill Duce will know better than to Mussolin — the next time."

We hear his chin has retreated six inches!

Joe Reichman, the orchestra man, offers the one about Herr Goebbels, who was interviewing a German journalist who applied for an editorial job on one of the Nazi-controlled newspapers in Berlin. . . . "What," asked Goebbels, "are your views on our government and its policies?"

"Well," started the reporter, "I think—"

"Then," interrupted Beagle Puss, "I can't use you."

Ozzie Nelson has one about them, too. . . . It deals with the two Nazis in Berlin who were reading their newspapers and gloating over "how terrible" things were in the United States. . . . "Why," said one, "things iss so bad idd says here in da pay-pas dot Roosevelt is hiring men for a dollah a year!"

"Iss dot zo?" gasped the other. "Dot's even less dan ve get!"

Notes of an Innocent Bystander:

Labor and management are reminded that strikes can never build national defense. . . . If the British, in the name of Liberty, can stick by their guns—the least Americans can do is stick by their jobs.

Now that it is old-hat, let's not forget that the Lend-Lease battle—one of the fiercest in the senate's history was waged in the interest of unity! . . . America would be a lot safer if all its aviators got into the air force—and out of politics.

Films favor titles suggesting thoroughfares. There were "Back Street" and "Dead End" and now "Side Street." . . . They're steering clear of "alley," as it might remind too many box offices where business has been lately. . . . The British have a delightful sense of timing. The London Palladium featured a revival of "No Time for Comedy." . . . NBC has two former foreign correspondents, who just finished a corking radio serial named "Special Correspondent." A half-hour show about an American reporter with the world as his beat.

"Hearses Don't Hurry," the title of a new crime novel, would be a

It is fine to be in Texas, especially for one who has been seeing the snow and cloudy skies of Washington for a number of months. Mrs. Poage has been suffering all winter and we felt that she needed some good Texas sunshine. The day we arrived in Waco she went to the hospital and has only now been able to get up and about. She is much better now, although she will probably stay in Texas for several weeks longer than I can. In fact, I have already stayed longer than I had expected, but I received a wire from Speaker Rayburn that he was asking for a series of recesses and that he expected no business to come before the House for a week or ten days. This was very welcome advice and was made possible by the fact that the House acted on all of the vital defense measures before they were sent to the Senate. The House is now recessing in order that the Ways and Means Committee may have time to work on the tax bills. However, I expect that before this is printed I shall have returned to Washington.

I felt that it was my duty to come to Texas to do what I could to aid in the establishment of a publicly owned and operated transmission system for the distribution of the power produced at the Possum Kingdom Dam, to our people in the rural communities. I have attended the meetings of the Brazos River Board at Temple and of the newly organized Brazos Transmission Cooperative. Under the contract entered into between these two public agencies and the thirteen local electric Coops (local REA) the Brazos District is to sell all of the power produced at Possum Kingdom Dam to the Brazos River Transmission Coop for 5.19 mills per KWH, approximately one half of a cent per KWH. Of course, this figure refers to the wholesale price and not the retail or delivered price. The Federal Power Commission decided this was a fair price to all of the parties. It gives to the Brazos District a return on all of the money contributed by the State, but does not allow any profit on the $4,500,000 investor by the Federal Government in the Possum Kingdom Dam. The Transmission Coop is a non-profit corporation owned by the thirteen local REA's that are to secure their power from it. It is to build the transmission lines from the Dam to the local Coops. For this purpose it has already received an allocation for a loan of good wall motto for some of the madder motorists.

Betty Compton, the former Mrs. Jimmy Walker, is taking a dance teacher's training course. When she graduates she will get a franchise to conduct an Arthur Murray branch in White Plains. . . . John Hubbard's description of a perfect gold-digging doll: "She's a woman who has no heart—making a fool of a man without a head."

$1,550,000.00 from the REA at Washington. It will transmit power at cost to the local rural units. Among the local units to be served are the Erath County Electric Coop, which serves most of Bosque County; the Hill County Coop, which serves a substantial part of McLennan County; the Limestone County Coop, which has headquarters at Mart and serves much of McLennan and Falls Counties; and the McLennan County Coop, with headquarters at McGregor and which serves parts of McLennan, Bell, Bosque and Coryell Counties. The Limestone and McLennan County Coops were at first omitted from the advantages of the new plan. One of the things that I was happy to be able to accomplish was to get them included and to secure this cheaper power for our people. At the present time portions of Coryell, Bell and Milam Counties are obtaining power from the Lower Colorado development, but the large sections served by the Belfalls and Bartlett Coops do not have any hydro-electric power available. I hope to see the Brazos River developed so that before long every part of our District will be able to obtain the cheapest possible power. Of course as we are able to develop the power possibilities of the Brazos and its tributaries we will be able to control the floods.

In the meantime, it is significant to note that the creation of the public owned transmission agency has ALREADY cut the wholesale cost of power by approximately 60 per cent to the local Coops within the territory. For a long time the price demanded by the utilities for the Coops was approximately 1.5 cents per PWH.

Last summer we began work on the idea of cooperative transmission of this power. Almost immediately the private utilities announced a substantial reduction to the local Coops involved. About Christmas the REA showed that it was serious about the idea and the utilities made another reduction. On February 27 the charter was granted for the Brazos River Transmission Coop, and effective March 1st the private power companies made still another reduction, making the wholesale rate a little more than one-third of what it had been six or eight months before.

It is interesting, however, that although the utility companies claimed that their costs had gone down so as to enable them to give these reductions that no similar reductions have been given to the customers in the towns and cities of the same area. Of course, the Possum Kingdom Dam will not produce sufficient power to supply the cities and the contract that the Brazos River Board has executed provides for the sale of power to only rural electric Coops. It does not take any business from the utilities which they developed, but only proposes to supply rural customers that the power companies formerly stated could not be profitably served. I can not, therefore, understand why the utility companies should be so anxious to prevent these people from receiving the advantages of the Brazos power unless the recent reductions have been the result of competition. They had a room full of attorneys at Temple to try to keep the Brazos Board from ratifying the contract. I am, however, happy to report that both the Brazos River Board and the local Coops have stood firm, realizing that only in this manner can they hope to receive the full benefits to which the people are entitled from this publicly owned project.

John Henry Worker will get an insurance check from the Government each month after he reaches the age of 65 and is entitled to retirement benefits under the Social Security Act. There will be an additional amount if he has a wife 65 or more years of age. If he dies leaving a widow past 65, she will get a monthly income. Or if he should die at any time leaving young children, a monthly Government insurance check will come to the family. In each case the amount of the check will be based on John's wages. That is the reason he should make certain the Government's record of his wages is complete.

CHAPTER FOUR SYNOPSIS

Searching for her father who is missing with $300,000. Kim Ling, beautiful Chinese girl, wins the confidence of the self-styled "King of the River," Gregory Prin, who takes her to his jungle hide-out, a notorious headquarters for criminals from all over the world. Ling finds her father's money in Prin's room and is sure that the latter is holding her father prisoner deeper in the jungle. Her lover Captain Chang Tai, who posed as an army deserter to get into Prin's camp, tricks Prin into sending him to see Kim's father. Meanwhile, Tex Ballister, an American gangster, arrives on the scene from Singapore.

CHAPTER V

Prin recovered his composure quickly. "Well, my dear friend, Ballister—at last!" he said.

Ballister grinned thinly. "How are you, Snooky Ookums? And how is the China Lily? The old bar in Singapore ain't the same since you left."

Kim arose. "Thank you. You will excuse me, please?"

When they were alone, Prin said, "So your foot slipped at last, my amiable ruffian?"

"Not my foot, Prin—yours!" Herbert entered and Ballister demanded, "Andy. When Herbert had served the liquor and left them, Prin resumed the conversation. "You said something about my foot, Ballister—"

"Getting curious, eh? Well, you remember the old Chinese merchant who came to Singapore to close a deal for three hundred thousand dollars worth of army trucks?"

Prin was silent for a moment. "No, I do not," he said at last.

Ballister leaned confidentially across the table. "Well, he wasn't a merchant, Prin. His name was General Ling. And he's one of the great men of China."

Prin's eyes narrowed. "Did you come here to tell me this?"

"Uh-huh," Ballister gulped the brandy. "How'd it find out? The guy you used as the phony truck salesman, so you could get the old man in your launch, told me. As usual, you double-crossed him."

"And where do you come in, Ballister?"

"As your partner, Gregory," Ballister answered. "I come in for one hundred and fifty thousand dollars. And don't tell me you won't pay, because you will." He smiled. "Savvy, senior?"

"I'm afraid I don't."

"All right, play dumb," Ballister agreed. "But if that old guy is hanging around, it'll be just too bad for you in case a battalion of infantry does come up the river."

Prin was startled but masked his surprise. "Indeed?" he said.

"Yeah, indeed. About two months ago there was a guy from the Chinese Secret Service in Singapore looking for the General." Ballister paused, then continued. "The name of the agent was Chang Tai."

This time Prin was unable to control his consternation. He arose abruptly. "Enjoy your brandy, Ballister. I will be back in a few minutes."

"Righto—partner," Ballister laughed.

As Prin stepped out on the porch, Kim Ling pressed back into the shadows. She had been listening outside the window.

Prin called for Frobenius. When the man appeared, Prin said:

"You are going up the river."

Frobenius was startled. "Mr. Prin, dear Mr. Prin, you wouldn't send me to Tanwack," he cried in a panic.

"Quiet! This is important. In a few hours you should overtake nus' face and the man dropped. When he struggled to his feet he faced a revolver in Sen's hand. The native chieftains guarding the idol watched in amazement and muttered of the folly of white men quarreling among themselves.

"Now get started up the river!" Professor Sen ordered. "Come on. I'll show you to the canoe." Under Sen's supervision, Frobenius and his native paddler embarked and headed up the river. As they paddled away, another canoe bearing two of the native chieftains followed them. Professor Sen watched and smiled acidly.

In the bungalow, Ballister faced Prin. "What's the use of stalling?" he said. "Why not cut up that dough and let me start back for Singapore?"

Prin smiled without mirth. "In a hurry, eh? You're in the tropics, Ballister, where things move slowly."

Suddenly Ballister whipped out his revolver. "Suppose I stick a gun into that belly of yours and give you two seconds to split the money?" he snarled.

"You're a stupid ox, Ballister," Prin replied quietly. "If anything happened to me your head would be sticking on the end of a spike in five minutes. And what would that get you?"

Before Ballister could answer, the short wave radio sputtered. Prin adjusted the controls. From the loud speaker a voice said: "Hello, Boss. This is Sammis in Singapore."

"Go ahead," Prin ordered. "The International Police are looking for that girl you took up the river," Sammis said. Ballister's face brightened.

"Why should they be interested in a night club singer?" Prin asked. "The girl isn't a night club singer and her name isn't China Lily," the Singapore agent explained. "She's the daughter of General Ahn Ling and her name is Kim Ling."

Again Prin's iron control masked his surprise. "Watch things closely at your end," he said into the transmitter. "If anything new develops, let me know immediately." He snapped off the radio.

"The China Lily, right here in your own house, getting the goods on you," Ballister said, goading Prin. "And what of it? Where can she take the goods, as you call them? She's here and she never leaves!"

Screaming in Malay, two natives dashed into the room. Sen followed them, carrying a native bag. Without a word, he opened the bag and an object rolled out on the floor before Prin and Ballister. It was the head of Frobenius!

New DuPont Paint Styling Guide Assures You the Colors You Select Are RIGHT!

THROUGH the use of the new DuPont Paint Styling Guide, the problem of choosing the right color for interior and exterior home decorative schemes is made easy—and almost foolproof.

You select your colors from large size color sheets—get an accurate idea of how the shade you choose will look when spread over a wide surface. The old fashioned, unsatisfactory systems of selecting paint colors from small chips is completely done away with! This innovation would, in itself, make the DuPont Paint Styling Guide the most advanced paint color book in use today. However, this book boasts still another advantage:

Transparent overlays let you see exactly how various rooms and exterior surfaces will appear when the color you choose becomes a part of the general decorative scheme. On these transparent sheets are printed designs for completely furnished rooms—living room, dining room, bedroom, kitchen—and a variety of exterior home styles. When these transparent pages are held over any one of the color sheets, the color shows through in the spaces where paint might naturally be applied. Thus, you see the complete decorative effect you want to achieve, before the painter goes to work!

We are extremely proud to be able to introduce the DuPont Paint Styling Guide in this section, to offer our customers the most advanced paint color styling service available today. We cordially invite you to visit our store and ask to see the new DuPont Paint Styling Guide.

My boy friend is a drivin' a "Company car" now. (It belongs to the finance company).

Mr. Uncle Hezzy Drizzlepuss read in the paper where the company's what he's got a hunnert shares of stock in made $113,345,-039 last year and he was shore oylful till he got a letter sayin' they was a payin' a dividend of three and a half cents a share.

My Aunt Emogene's little boy is patriotic. He read where castor oil was a defense industry necessity and now he won't take any on account of he wants to aid defense.

My Cousin Beefy Backslider from Spofford has been in the Army two weeks now and he ain't wrote me no letter that he's a captain. I guess he wants to work his way up slowly from the ranks like the Roosevelt boys and I ought to hear from him about next week that he's got the commishun.

Aunt Emogene's little boy asked me yesterday what they meant by all them "treaties" they are a signin' in Europe now. I told him it was just the same as a political party's platform in this country.

I'm a goin' into business. I thought about milk from contented cows, but some feller has already got that and anyway, I ain't got enough cows and the yain't givin' any milk. So how about some sow belly and bacon from little pigs that lived and died very happy.

BLACKFOOT, IRELAND, PIDCOKE, PEARL OPEN COUNTY LEAGUE SUNDAY, 13TH

The Coryell County News Baseball race will get its initial sendoff Sunday when four teams meet in the first games of the county league schedule.

The first games will be played at Ireland and Pidcoke, when the Blackfoot and Pearl teams invade the other two clubs home grounds. Ireland is a new entry in the league this year and little is known of her strength, but the Blackfoot nine has always been up in the standing and was runnerup to Pidcoke for the title last season.

Pearl, a team which was not in the race last year but with good material in that part of the county they are expected to be a strong threat to any team. Pidcoke is defending champion of the league, and has held this title for the past two seasons. They are expected to have a strong team this year.

Copperas Cove is the other entry in the league. The Cove team drew a bye for Sunday, but will go to Pearl for their first game of the season Sunday, April 20.

Playing Lists Must Be In By Saturday

All managers are urged to bring in or mail their list of players eligible to play in the Coryell County Baseball League. There can be eighteen players on the list besides the manager unless he is a playing manager then he is included in the list.

These lists must be in by tomorrow afternoon at 6 p. m. before they are official. The schedule for Sunday, April 13 is:

Pearl at Pidcoke, Blackfoot at Ireland, and Copperas Cove an open date.

Fifty Hornets Out For Grid Practice

Around fifty boys reported for Spring Football practice last week at the Gatesville High School football field. From this group of boys Coach Madison Pruitt and assistant coach Clint White hope to develop this year's Hornet squad.

Among the boys reporting for practice are six lettermen and several squadmen from last seasons team. The lettermen returning this year are, Kenneth Fry, Fred Post and Curtis Davis, backs; Bob Cross Eugene White and Charles Caruth, linemen.

The other boys reporting for the first practice sessions were: Cloyce Parsons, Gohlke, Twiford Schloeman, Gordon Thornton, Johnnie Woods, Edward Schoenewolf, Joe Hanna, Clyde Lee, Ray Wittie, Bobby Melton, Stanley Edwards, Sammy Morgan, Johnnie Gilmore, Jack Manning, T. L. Copeland, James Sheridan, Jerals Martin, Loye Hubbard, Gaines Franks, James Paxton, Ollie Gaston, Raymond Wilkerson, Harold Thomas, Buddy Powell, Puckett, Sexton, Edwards, Earnest Boynton, Moody Farquhar, Billy McClellan, R. M. Phillips, Wayne Sullivan, Billy Jo Fish, Perry Henderson, Draper, Deorsam, Taylor, Alford, Hodges, Campbell, Roberts, Dyer, and Sheerwood.

These boys and the ones who will come in from the rural schools next year will make up the Hornet team. They have been at practice for only a few days but they are already learning the blocking, tackling, and the ball handling fundamentals in football.

The Coryell County Baseball race is due to get underway Sunday when four of the county's leading teams meet. Out the Pidcoke way manager Virgil Lockhart's Cokers will have their hands full when the Pearl nine invade their diamond Sunday afternoon.

The Ireland team will get their first taste of the County league when the Blackfoot Indians, runnerups of last season, meet them on their home diamond. Ireland and Pearl are new entries in the league along with Copperas Cove, who drew a bye in the first round of play.

It is a little early to start the league this year but since there are only five teams in the race there will be enough Sundays for each team to play each other more than once, therefore the first time each team meets they will be getting into shape and will not effect their standing so much as it would later on in the season.

Central Texas fans will get a chance to see some Texas League Baseball games at Waco next Tuesday and Wednesday when the Dallas Rebels and the Fort Worth Cats meet at Katy Park for the first Texas League games in Waco since 1930. The reason for this is under construction and will not be finished until after the Texas league has started. So since Waco was a former Texas League city and has a good park they have transferred some of their games to Waco.

Tuesday afternoon the St. Louis Cardinals of the National League gave Central Texas baseball fans another treat when they met the Dallas Rebels at Katy Park in Waco. The Cards won their tenth straight victory in exhibition games when they won from the Rebels by a one sided score of 11 to 1.
