Chinese congress picks Mao successor

By BARRY SHLACHTER

TOKYO (AP) — The Chinese Communist national congress has formally chosen Hua Kuo-feng as party chairman and political heir to Mao Tse-tung, and Hua has proclaimed that a "new leap forward" is at hand for China and its people, Hsinhua said Saturday.

Peking's official news agency said Hua told the Chinese people that under his leadership they must seek inspiration "at home and abroad" and "unite with all forces that can be united," a clear signal that he is charting a more open and pragmatic course for China in the future.

The Hsinhua report, monitored here, said the 11th party congress — the first since 1973 — ended Thursday after seven days of meetings and that Hua was elected party chairman by secret ballot.

Announcement of that action was hailed Saturday by some 100,000 flag-waving Chinese who beat gongs and drums in Peking's central Tien An Men square, according to Japanese and Italian reports from the Chinese capital.

The vote formally naming Hua as successor to the late Chairman Mao indirectly gave party approval to what are believed to be key Hua policies of ideological moderation, technological development and closer contacts with foreign nations. The party central committee had named Hua chairman last October, one month after Mao's death.

The outcome of the congress meeting firmly establishes Hua's leadership and policies as Secretary of State Cyrus R. Vance flies to Peking for talks with top Chinese officials. Vance left Washington Saturday and will arrive in Peking on Tuesday.

Hua came to power over the opposition of the radical "Gang of Four," led by Mao's widow, Chiang Ching, who emphasized doctrinal purity over economic progress. She was believed partly responsible for the Cultural Revolution of the 1960s that cut many Chinese ties with the outside.

Hsinhua said the congress formally approved the purge of the Gang of Four, ousted from the party after allegedly attempting to take power at Mao's death. Also read to the congress was a revision of the party constitution containing provisions apparently aimed at rooting supporters of the Gang out of the party.

Hsinhua said Hua, in a four-hour political report, told delegates gathered in Peking's Great Hall of the People that they must "hold high the great banner of Chairman Mao and carry out his behests, sum up the experiences of our struggle against the ... Gang of Four ...bring into play all positive factors inside and outside the party and at home and abroad, unite with all the forces that can be united."

Hsinhua also said Hua, 57, called for action to "make China a great, powerful modern socialist country by the end of this century," contended that "a new leap forward is shaping up in the national economy" and spoke of "a new period of development in China's socialist revolution."

The 73-year-old Teng Hsiao-ping, the twice-disgraced and twice-rehabilitated veteran of Chinese politics, was elected a party vice chairman, Hsinhua said.

Groucho services today

By PETER J. BOYER

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Comedian Groucho Marx is being cremated, and a memorial service Sunday will be a quiet family gathering closed to the millions who laughed at his zany antics and inspired insults for more than half a century.

"There will be just a private gathering at Arthur Marx's house Sunday," said a family friend. Arthur is Groucho's son.

"I guess you could call it the end of an era," said his longtime companion, Erin Fleming, who was at Groucho's bedside shortly before he died Friday night. "But I don't believe Groucho will ever leave us. He's too impudent."

Nat Perrin, long a close friend of Groucho's, said the comedian had asked to be cremated. A spokesman for Groman Mortuary would not say when Marx would be cremated, but Perrin said Saturday, "It may have already taken place."

Groucho, born Julius Marx on New York City's East Side 86 years ago, had lapsed into critical condition earlier in the day at Cedars-Sinai Medical Center after a two-month bout with pneumonia.

In a series of stage plays and movies with his brothers in the 1920s and '30s, Marx immortalized a variety of seedy, lecherous wisecracking characters like Wolf J. Flywheel, detective Sam Grunion, J. Cheever Loophole, and especially Professor Hackenbush, of the raised eyebrows, false moustache and stooped walk.

His death leaves only Zeppo, who dropped out of the brothers' act to handle the business end. Gummo, Chico and Harpo all are dead.

Groucho became known to a younger generation as quizmaster of the radio and television show "You Bet Your Life," in which he mercilessly insulted contestants and sidekick George Fenneman until 1961.

"All we can say about Groucho is that he was one of the great original funny men," said another great comic of the same era, George Burns. "We're going to miss him a lot, but

Voyager 2 heads for outer planets

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — The Voyager 2 spacecraft sped from Earth toward the outer planets of the solar system Saturday, apparently in good shape despite early signs that something serious had gone wrong.

"Voyager looks much, much healthier than we originally thought," said John Casani, director of the Voyager program.

The possibility of trouble had not been ruled out, however, because a boom crucial to the success of the voyage apparently had not locked into position, although it had extended from the spacecraft as planned. Earlier, a data tape played back from the craft seemed to show it had not fully extended.

Scientists were considering a test to see how well the equipment on the boom worked.

That equipment is essential to the heart of the mission — to send back pictures of Jupiter and Saturn and to measure the atmosphere, magnetic field, cosmic rays and density of the planets.

The spacecraft is the first of two sorties into space in a $500 million program to find out more about the origins of the solar system.

The 1,800-pound Voyager 2 was launched smoothly at 10:30 a.m. EDT. But an hour after it cut loose from its Titan Centaur rocket to proceed on its own power, launch officials said there seemed to be trouble with the boom and with a stabilizing gyro.

But both problems appeared less serious by evening.

The six-foot boom holds two television cameras and three science experiment packages. Had it malfunctioned, the mission would have suffered "definite degradation," Casani said.

Launch officials considered activating one experiment as a way to test the position of the boom. The experiment is designed to measure clouds of ionized gases streaming from the sun and other stars, and the test would involve directing its highly accurate pointing apparatus toward the sun.

Scientists had counted on the Voyager program to provide new knowledge about the creation of the universe. They believe that by studying the outer planets, they can find out more about how Earth was formed. On Earth, such study is impeded by the continuing effect of the sun, while the cold outer planets are more like the way they were when the solar system was formed.

With Voyager 2 at its tip, the Titan Centaur rocket rises on a tail of fire from its solid fuel booster engines Saturday at Cape Canaveral. (AP Laserphoto)

Despite a speed of over 30,000 miles per hour, Voyager 2 is not scheduled to make its closest approach to Jupiter, 450 million miles from Earth, until July 10, 1979. Voyager 1 will travel faster and reach the planets somewhat sooner.

School bus system set

By KAY HORD

When fourth, fifth and sixth graders in Midland's public schools begin school Aug. 29, they and their parents will face new bus routes and schedules due to implementation of court-ordered desegregation plan.

The plan, patterned after Dallas, is based on the cluster system. Each cluster includes a fourth, fifth and sixth grade school. Fourth graders in the cluster will attend one school, fifth graders another and sixth graders another.

All fourth-grade schools are located on the west side of Midland, fifth-grade schools in the center and sixth-grade schools on the east side.

"The busing system for the desegregation will be completely independent of the busing routes we have already," Assistant Superintendent Garland Chapman said.

"We have a system worked out that will use only two buses per cluster to transfer the students to their cluster schools."

In the mornings, one bus will leave from the fourth-grade school, and one will leave from the fifth-grade school. In the afternoons, both buses will originate from the sixth-grade school. A monitor will be supplied for each bus by the principal at the school where the bus originates.

Using the Henderson, Emerson, Pease cluster as an example, bus A will leave Henderson at 7:45 a.m. carrying Henderson's sixth graders to Pease. At Pease, the sixth graders will disembark, and Pease's fifth graders will board the bus. At 8:10 a.m., the bus will leave Pease and carry the fifth graders to Emerson. The fifth graders will get off the bus at Emerson, and Emerson's fourth graders will get on the bus. The bus will leave Emerson at 8:25 a.m. taking Emerson's fourth graders to Henderson.

The second bus, bus B, will begin at the fifth-grade school, Emerson. At 7:45 a.m., the bus will leave, taking Emerson's sixth graders to Pease. At Pease, the fourth graders will board the bus, which will leave at 8 a.m. for Henderson. At 8:25 a.m., the bus will leave Henderson, taking Henderson's fifth graders to Emerson.

The entire run takes approximately 45 to 50 minutes.

After school, both buses will begin at Pease, and monitors for the buses will be supplied by Pease.

Bus A will leave Pease at 3:15 p.m. taking the sixth graders back to Henderson. The bus will leave Henderson at 3:45 p.m., taking Emerson's fourth graders back to Emerson. At 4:05 p.m., the bus will leave Emerson taking the fifth graders from Pease back to Pease.

Bus B will leave Pease at 3:15 p.m. taking Emerson's sixth graders back to Emerson. The bus will leave

'No crime in Lamesa; law don't allow it'

ROUSTIN' ABOUT with Ed Todd

Lee Bartlett is a man of mellow humor. Some say he's colorful. He kids around a lot. He also likes to keep things peaceful.

He's a lawman from Lamesa.

"There's no crime in Lamesa," he said the other day. "The law don't allow it."

Bartlett, the chief of police for that town to the north, came down to Midland on some sort of law business.

And what he had to say in a coffee shop was worth repeating.

Probably, they had heard it before. If so, they didn't seem to mind.

The stage was lit, and Bartlett's show was on.

The chief hails from Meadow, which is in the middle of cotton country. "I came from a farming family," he said.

Indeed, as a youth, he helped out on

Accreditation at stake, hospital trustee says

By GEORGE H. JOHNSTON

Midland Memorial Hospital stands to lose its accreditation unless it undergoes extensive renovation, according to John Dorn, hospital trustee.

Dorn, who also is chairman of the trustees' building committee, said Friday an accrediting committee has postponed revoking accreditation because of plans to renovate the hospital.

"There are sections of the hospital that are clean, but are showing years of wear," Dorn said.

ider doors, modernization of t' fire alarms and improvement of fire escapes are only a few of the needed improvements noted by Dorn.

A $10 billion bond issue, along with creation of a hospital district, will be presented to Midland County voters Sept. 17 in an attempt to finance renovation of and additions to the hospital.

According to Dorn, in order to meet accreditation standards, improvements will have to be made to the hospital whether the bond issue is approved or not. The proposed addition will house a critical care unit, a post-coronary care unit and an obstetrics unit, Dorn said.

In renovating the hospital, he said, only the ceilings, floors and outer structure will be preserved. All the inner walls will be

Vance off to Peking on diplomatic mission

By BARRY SCHWEID

WASHINGTON (AP) — Five and a half years after the United States and China first broke the ice, President Carter is sending Cyrus R. Vance to Peking to see if conditions are right for establishing full diplomatic relations with the Communist mainland.

The secretary of state departed Saturday for a four-day visit to China beginning Monday.

Administration officials, possibly mindful of frustrations in the Middle East and other foreign policy fronts, are minimizing Vance's expectations.

They told reporters the visit would be "basically exploratory" and without any prospect of "great results or pronouncements."

One top State Department official said flatly: "We are not going to China for a breakthrough in normalization."

"We hope to find a formula which can bridge some of the difficulties that still separate us," the President said in a speech in May at Notre Dame.

Vance, in June, said: "We want to explore ways to normalize further our bilateral relations with the People's Republic of China. Mutual and reciprocal efforts in this regard are essential."

The main roadblock, administration officials agree, is the continuing U.S. relationship with the Nationalists on Taiwan.

Were it not for this "sticking point," a top policy-maker said, the administration would move immediately to full relations.

In signing the Shanghai communique with the late Premier Chou En-lai in February 1972 former President Richard M. Nixon acknowledged that "all Chinese on either side of the Taiwan strait maintain there is but one China and that Taiwan is part of China."

The Carter administration stands by the Shanghai communique and its promise of a gradual increase in American-Chinese contracts and exchanges. But the President and his policy advisers are reluctant to alienate Taiwan's supporters in Congress and within the public at large.

Some of these same Nationalist sympathizers are being courted by Carter to approve a new treaty scaling down U.S. control over the Panama Canal and to support pressures on Israel to make concessions to the Arabs.

Peking, meanwhile, has never permitted normal relations with any country until it broke relations with Taiwan. Unless Vance unexpectedly finds otherwise, the rule applies to the United States as well.

Li Hsien-nien, the senior deputy prime minister in the Communist government, emphasized last month that "relations can continue to be improved" if the United States fulfilled three conditions.

He listed them as: "Severance of diplomatic relations with Taiwan, withdrawal of its troops and abrogation of the (defense) treaty."

Li added: "None of these three can be dispensed with."

Basically, this involves a break in diplomatic relations with Taiwan while maintaining business, scientific and cultural ties. At the same time, the U.S. liaison office in Peking, opened in 1973, would become a fullfledged embassy.

U.S. trade with Taiwan last year amounted to $4.6 billion. The island is this country's 12th largest trading partner. By contrast, trade with the mainland, almost $1 billion in 1974, had declined to about $335 million last year.

Apart from diplomatic and business considerations, the 1954 U.S. defense treaty with the Nationalists is a major element in the China policy puzzle.

The U.S. presence on Taiwan has been cut from a high of some 9,000 to 10,000 American troops in 1972 to 1,165 now — in keeping with the Shanghai communique commitment to reduce U.S. forces as tensions are abated.

But the United States remains legally bound, under the 1954 treaty, to defend Taiwan against attack.

In a major speech last Monday Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., outlined a formula for switching diplomatic recognition to the mainland while maintaining "unofficial relations" with Taiwan for its security and economic support.

Kennedy said the United States "should make clear unilaterally our continuing opposition to use of force against Taiwan." And, he said, until there is a peaceful settlement with the mainland, Washington should provide supplies needed for self-defense.

At the same time, Kennedy told the World Affairs Council in Boston, the United States should end its diplomatic presence on Taiwan, its defense treaty and formal diplomatic relations.

Similarly, U.S. officials said Vance would do nothing that appeared to be abandoning Taiwan.

Offered money to resign, ex-Bell official testifies

SAN ANTONIO, Tex. (AP) — Two weeks of testimony in a suit against Southwestern Bell Telephone Co. has produced claims that the firm hounded one former Bell executive to his death and offered to pay another a lifetime pension if he would quietly resign.

The allegations came as witnesses took the stand for the plaintiffs in a $29 million damage suit brought by one-time Bell official James Ashley and the family of T.O. Gravitt, who headed Bell's Texas operations until his suicide in October 1974.

Gravitt's widow, Oleta Gravitt Dixon, testified that her husband was a "tortured man" before he killed himself in a carbon monoxide-filled garage in the couple's Dallas home.

"I saw my husband crumble before my eyes and I couldn't do anything about it," she testified in state district court here.

Mrs. Dixon said Gravitt had told her earlier the company was investigating him and "asking employes if they bought him gifts, if he had taken kickbacks . . . if they had fixed him up with women."

The firm, in a counterclaim in the suit, alleges that Ashley and Gravitt defrauded Southwestern Bell of about $30,000 by filing false expense and travel vouchers.

Mrs. Dixon said she had refused to say at the time of her husband's death that she thought her husband was insane when he killed himself.

Earlier in the trial a psychiatrist testified that Gravitt was driven to insanity and suicide by the telephone company's investigation.

Ashley testified he was offered $110,000 cash and a $20,000 annual pension if he would resign during an internal investigation. The former $50,000-a-year Bell executive said he refused the offer and was fired in 1974.

In earlier testimony, however, C.L. Todd, vice president and general manager for Bell in San Antonio, testified that Ashley had demanded $400,000 or he would go ahead with plans to sue the company.

Ashley testified last week that he turned down the phone company's alleged offer because if he had accepted it, he would have been branded as "that guy who stole all the money from the phone company."

Ashley said he was suspended by Todd on Oct. 9, 1974, and was told the suspension was based on allegations of sexual promiscuity with employes and improper expense vouchers.

Asley also testified he and Gravitt were targeted for removal because they disagreed with various tactics used by Bell to win rate hikes as well as other company procedures.

He said he participated in the "Bell scheme" because he had no choice if he wanted to keep his job.

Measles cases rise sharply

AUSTIN, Tex. (AP) — Almost ten times as many measles cases have been reported in 1977 as a year ago, and five persons have died of the disease, the State Health Department reported Saturday.

It said the start of school poses a "very real threat" of a new upsurge and urged parents to have their children immunized.

The department said 1,888 cases have been reported, compared with 195 by this time last year.

"Complications such as deafness, pneumonia, encephalitis or even death do occur from this so-called mild disease," the department said.

Half of the cases reported this year occurred in school-age children, and there was a sharp decline when school let out. Only two cases were reported in the most recent week for which data is available — the week that ended Aug. 13. One was in Hidalgo County, the other in El Paso County.

"The potential for additional measles morbidity and mortality is a very real threat as we prepare for the 1977-78 school term," the department said.

Recommended minimum age for immunization is 15 months, but babies as young as six months should be immunized if they have been exposed to the disease, the department said.

The department said the mortality rate from measles this year is 2.7 deaths per 1,000 reported cases, considerably higher than the 10-year average of 1.4 deaths per 1,000 cases.

"Although it is possible that increased virulence of the measles virus could have caused the higher case-fatality ratio this year, we suspect that under-reporting of cases is the likely cause.

Geologist optimistic despite absence of oil

JOHN GETZE
The Los Angeles Times

ANCHORAGE, Alaska — For someone who has just helped spend well over $100 million of his company's money, resulting in the discovery of nothing but dirty rocks, Thomas Neel seems surprisingly nonchalant.

"Everybody has dry holes," explains Neel, Atlantic richfield's exploration manager for south Alaska. "That's part of the business." His boss must agree, because Neel is being promoted to Arco's corporate planning division in Los Angeles.

Arco, along with other oil industry giants like Shell, Exxon, Texaco and Gulf, paid more than $560 million last year for the right to drill for oil and gas in the Gulf of Alaska. So far, they've found nothing.

There is still a reasonable chance that future test wells will discover commercial quantitites of crude fossil fuel, but even the optimists admit the prospects are not nearly so good as they were several months ago — before the industry drilled dry holes on four of the most promising offshore tracts.

But even if they don't find oil or gas, it's no big deal, industry executives say. In the oil business, you are bound to have many more losers than winners.

"I think many people have the mistaken impression that finding oil and gas is a definite thing," says Neel. "Unfortunately, it is damn difficult. But we're interested in each and every offshore area that's offered up here. We know what the odds are and we know how to play them. The successful wells have to pay for all the unsuccessful ones."

To date in the Gulf of Alaska, Arco and the other oil giants have some catching up to do.

As partners, Shell and Arco — along with several smaller oil companies — have drilled and completed two dry holes. One well was on a tract for which the partners paid $62 million at last year's Interior Department lease sale. The other well was on a tract for which the firms paid $41 million.

Also, Exxon has given up on a well in tract No. 284, for which it and other partners paid $11 million, and Texaco and its partners have abandoned a well on tract No. 241, for which they paid more than $28 million.

"It's been a disappointment, but we're not writing the area off," says Carl Tucker, an Alaskan exploration executive for Exxon Corp. "I understand they drilled about 50 wells in the North Sea before hitting anything. But I have to admit the results so far (in the Gulf of Alaska) are not very encouraging."

Says Neel: "We still think there's a chance of success here, but there is no way you can drill dry holes on two of the most expensive lease tracts without having your enthusiasm dampened."

A geologist by training, Neel is optimistic now for the same reason he was optimistic before the lease sale last year — the area's geological formations appear to indicate the presence of oil.

"First of all, the gulf (an 80-mile stretch of water between Kayak Island and Icy Bay on Alaska's southern coast) is a sedimentary basin, and that's the only place for a source (of oil). Second, our seismic testing showed traps (where the source can be held).

"And third, there's crude oil seeping out around the edges of the basin," adds Neel, apparently reviving his own enthusiasm. "It's a very exciting area. Damn, it's there somewhere."

Committee to be formed

HOUSTON (AP) — The Texas director of the League of United Latin American Citizens (LULAC) said Saturday a five-member LULAC committee will be formed to work with Houston Police Chief Harry Caldwell to improve relations between police and Mexican Americans.

Rueben Bonilla made the announcement following a meeting with Caldwell to discuss a series of proposals by LULAC. Bonilla said the advisory committee would be appointed and coordinated by Mamie Garcia, the organization's district director.

Bonilla said the committee will advise Caldwell on such new programs as police officer sensitivity training so they will understand the Mexican-American culture. The committee also will help evaluate psychological tests of applicants to look for bigotry or hatred of minorities.

"LULAC is not trying to tell the chief how to run this department," Caldwell said. "LULAC is simply trying to provide the chief with the sensitivity he needs to run the department."

Women share name, birthdate, S.S. number

ABILENE, Tex. (AP) — When two girls were born on the same day in 1918 near Gibbsland, La., about the only thing they had in common was their first names — Vastie.

Then 20 years ago the two women unknowlingly received something else to share — the same Social Security number.

And if the husband of Abilene's Vastie had not applied for increased Social Security benefits last fall, the unique situation might have never been revealed.

Jim Walker, 74, went to the local Social Security office to apply for supplementary Social Security implement (SSI) payments to obtain Medicaid.

But Walker's application was rejected because the Social Security computer found another Vastie Walker, who was living in California, was already receiving maximum benefits..

According to the Social Security officials, the California woman had the same name, the same date of birth and the same Social Security number.

When Claudia Wills, who helps local senior citizens, heard about Walker's case, she went to the local Social Security office on his behalf.

Ms. Willis said she thinks the problem began in Louisiana when the California woman applied for her number. When Abilene's Vastie Walker applied for a number 20 years ago, Social Security officials assumed the application was that of the original applicant asking for a replacement card, Ms. Willis speculates.

Ken Hargis, assistant district manager of the Abilene Social Security office, said the problem was that officials did not know two people were involved.

"Everything was so similar right down to the dots on the i and the cross on the t," Hargis said.

Vastie Walker of Abilene now has her own, and hopefully, unique Social Security number, Hargis said.

And, according to Ms. Willis, Walker should start receiving next month payments he applied for last year — retroactive to the day he applied.

Elementary school bus system set

Emerson at 3:45 p.m. taking the Henderson fifth graders back to Henderson. At 4:05 p.m., the bus will leave Henderson taking Pease's fourth graders back to Pease.

"We want the parents to realize that the only children on the bus with their child will be the children in his class at his school," Chapman said.

School will be from 8:40 a.m. to 1:40 p.m. for grades four and five and from 8:40 a.m. to 3:10 p.m. for grade six.

The schools, divided into clusters are:

Cluster two, Jones, fourth; Bowie, fifth, and Milam, sixth;

Cluster three, Burnet, fourth; Fannin, fifth, and South, sixth;

Cluster four, Lamar, fourth; Rusk, fifth, and Crockett, sixth;

Cluster five, Long, fourth; Houston, fifth, and DeZavala, sixth;

Cluster six, Bonham, fourth; West, fifth, and Washington, sixth.

At Travis Elementary, kindergarten through fifth grade will remain at Travis. Sixth graders will attend Washington.

Information on bus schedules, routes and other school-related questions will be provided for a second time on Saturday, Aug. 27, at booths located at Gibson's, Skaggs-Albertson's and Sears.

Congressman to speak at Wednesday meeting

Congressman George Mahon of Lubbock will be the guest speaker Wednesday noon at the meeting of the Midland Downtown Lions Club in the Hilton Inn, Carl O. Hyde, the club's program chairman, announced Saturday.

He is expected to arrive here Wednesday morning and will be in his office in the Federal Building before and after lunch.

This will be Mahon's first visit to Midland since announcing several weeks ago that he will not seek re-election as the representative from the 19th District in next year's elections. He said, however, that he plans to serve out his term, ending Dec. 31, 1978.

He was elected as the first congressman to represent the newly-created 19th District in 1934 and has served continuously in that position since that time.

He was named as a member of the House Committee on Appropriations in 1939 and has served as its chairman since 1964, longer than any other person in the history of the Congress.

Mahon also holds the distinction of being dean of the Congress, and one of its most highly-respected members. He also is a regent of the Smithsonian Institution.

Mahon, who grew up on a cotton farm in Mitchell County, was graduated from Hardin Simmons University and The University of Texas Law School. He holds honorary degrees from a number of colleges and universities over the nation. He served as county attorney and district attorney of Mitchell County before going to Congress.

He holds numerous awards, including the American Political Science Association's Congressional Distinguished Service Award; George Washington Award of the American Good Government Society; Congressional Distinguished Public Service Award of the American Legion; Veterans of Foreign Wars Congressional Award; Reserve Officers Association annual award, and Guardian of Small Business Award presented by the National Federation of Independent Business.

Mrs. Mahon is expected to accompany her husband to Midland.

Lance probe prompts look at banking

By MICHAEL DOAN

WASHINGTON (AP) — The report by federal investigators on Budget Director Bert Lance's personal finances is leading Congress and bank regulators to take a closer look at bankers and how they should operate.

John Heimann, the comptroller of the currency and the chief regulator of federal banks, concluded in a report last week that Lance had committed no crimes in his personal financial dealings before becoming President Carter's budget director. But Heimann said that Lance's activities left "unresolved questions as to what constitutes acceptable banking practice."

Lance, former chairman of the National Bank of Georgia in Atlanta, had made personal borrowings from major New York and Chicago banks about the same time his own bank was making deposits with the larger banks as part of a correspondent banking relationship.

A typical correspondent banking relationship involves a smaller bank placing interest-free deposits with a larger bank. The smaller bank then uses the larger bank's services or enlists the larger bank's aid in making loans.

In the Lance case, some of his loans were reported in his bank's statements to stockholders but there was no mention of the Atlanta bank's correspondent relationship with the lending banks.

Heimann said he wants to find out if banking regulations or laws should be changed "to require public disclosure of such practices or other remedial action."

Several congressional committees want to go beyond the Lance affair and investigate banking in general.

Rep. Henry Reuss, D-Wis., chairman of the House Banking Committee, said, "I think that the misuse of a position of power by a banker is something that we've got to look at."

Rep. Fernand J. St Germain, D-R.I., head of a House banking subcommittee, will hold hearings next month on legislation to prohibit the kind of loans that Lance obtained. The bill before the panel would forbid a big bank from making a loan to an officer or director of a smaller bank when the smaller bank has a correspondent relationship with the larger bank.

He was pretty good at it. So was his ol' sidekick, a fellow named Mickey Clark.

Bartlett, who was no heavyweight back then, played running back. Clark, who was, played right tackle.

"He (Clark) was nearly as big as he is now," he said of his ol' partner. "I got to see quite a bit of his butt in those old T-formation days." Clark, who stands 6 feet 2, makes the scales hit around 280.

Bartlett, at 5 feet 8, weighed somewhere between 160 and 170 back then. He's packing a little more weight now.

So is Clark.

"The reason I couldn't make more yardage," Bartlett said of his gridiron play, ". . . I couldn't see around him."

The Meadow Broncos, a Class B team, fared well when those two chums suited out together in the mid-1950s. They won some district, regional and bi-regional championships but didn't make it to state.

Clarked graduated in 1955. He left town.

Bartlett checked out a year later. He packed up, too, and the population dropped to 407.

Eventually, Clark and Bartlett got together in another field — police work. For about a year, they worked together as officers on the Brownfield Police Department. That was in 1966. Clark was a sergeant there when Bartlett joined up.

Clark left. And Bartlett moved into the sergeant's slot. Later, he became a lieutenant. He was assistant police chief in 1975, when he moved over to Lamesa as police chief.

Meanwhile, Clark, who was still keeping the peace, wound up in Midland as the sheriff's chief criminal investigator.

But he left that, worked for Bartlett as assistant chief for a spell, and early in 1977 moved to Fort Stockton as police chief.

"He's a good man," Bartlett said of his former sidekick. "Nothing bad to say about him."

And investigators Brown and Vera had nothing bad to say about their chief. He was listening.

"He's just chief," said Brown, who was coaxed to comment.

"Is that all you can think of?" the chief asked.

Vera thought of something to say.

"I think he's doing a tremendous job," he said.

The chief was pleased.

"I enforce the rules and regulations of the department," Bartlett said.

"We have our share of crime," he said, in shifting his lingo to the serious side. "But the very violent crimes are nil, just about."

"You've got to like it to stay on it," he said. "You've got to want to help people."

Bartlett, who's 39, said he tries to instill in the "young officers" that they're "out there to help and not to punish."

But "it's our duty to see that they (the people) don't have to put up with it (crime)."

And maybe that, too, is another reason why the chief declares that crime is outlawed in Lamesa.

On days that are slow and easy, Bartlett may tell a reporter groping for "bad news":

Trace of forecast rain hits area

Big Spring apparently got a head start on the rest of the area, receiving a trace of rain Saturday. Andrews and Lamesa reported cloudy skies, and Rankin reported "rain all around us but none here."

The National Weather Service at Midland Regional Air Terminal forecasts a 20 per cent chance of rain today through Monday.

The forecast also calls for partly cloudy skies through Monday. The highs for today and Monday should be back in the upper 90s, with the low tonight in the lower 70s. Winds are expected to be southeasterly at 15 to 20 mph during the days.

Saturday's high was 95 degrees and the low was 76. The record high for Aug. 20 is 105 degrees set in 1964. The record low for today is 54 degrees set in 1947.

Heavy rainstorms soaked parts of northern Texas with up to six inches of rain Saturday morning causing officials to issue flash flood warnings for some areas.

The heaviest rains drenched Northeast Texas where six inches of moisture fell around Greenville during the early morning hours.

The National Weather Service warned of flash flooding in several North and Northeast Texas counties.

Rain water filled many rivers and streams in the area of the precipitation almost to the tops of their banks. Officials said the Trinity River would crest at between 24 and 26 feet while the Sabine River was expected to crest near bankfull on Sunday.

Rain also fell along the Texas coast as well as in the Texas Panhandle and in Far West Texas.

Skies over the northern two-thirds of the state were cloudy as widely scattered showers continued into the afternoon.

Across South Texas, however, skies were clear.

MIDLAND ALLIANCE members Pat Edwards, second from right, and Diane Garrett, far right, go over literature and maps in preparation for the beginning of school Aug. 29 with Doris Ranson, left. Information booths were set up Saturday in Gibson's, Skaggs Albertson's and Sears to provide information and answers to school-related questions. The booths will be set up again in the same locations on Saturday, Aug. 27. (Staff Photo)

Vestal to speak at breakfast

A city-wide prayer breakfast sponsored by the Midland Jaycees and tied in with the Midland Alliance, will be held at 7 a.m. Tuesday in the Permian Ballroom of the Midland Hilton.

According to Les Riek, Jaycees project chairman, the organization stresses the spiritual development of each individual. "In keeping with this belief, we would like to share ...a period of 'thanks' for what we in the city of Midland can be grateful for," he said.

the things Groucho said will always be around."

Israeli service plan under fire

The Los Angeles Times

JERUSALEM — The Israeli government's long-range plan to provide additional social services to Arabs in the occupied territories has been attacked by critics ranging from Israeli taxpayers to the American secretary of state.

The added services apparently would make it necessary to introduce Israeli law into the occupied territories and at least some form of Israeli civil administration. Some critics argue that this would be a step toward what amounts to annexation of the territories.

Since the Arab-Israeli war of 1967, Arab residents of the occupied territories have lived under their own laws but under Israeli military administration.

It is not yet clear whether the Israeli military will administer the new services to be made available to the Arabs or whether Israeli civilians will take over the new responsibilities. But whatever the government has in mind, its program already is under attack on virtually every front.

According to Israeli officials, the program is being undertaken for humanitarian reasons. But the government concedes that the program has met with little popular approval. One official put it this way:

"The press has almost uniformly condemned the plan and the public is not for it. They see it as a plan for 3 million Jews to carry a million and a half Arabs."

An antigovernment newspaper called it "a program of creeping annexation." Another newspaper saw the program as evidence that "Israel proposes to remain in the areas for a long time."

In Washington, the State Department issued a statement in the name of Secretary Cyrus R. Vance, saying that despite Israel's stated goals "the action creates an impression of permanence" in connection with Israel's occupation of the Arab territories.

The territories include the Golan Heights, taken from Syria, the West Bank of the Jordan River, taken from Jordan, and the Gaza Strip and the Sinai Peninsula, taken from Egypt. More than a million Arabs live in the occupied territories and almost half a million others live in Israel proper.

Under the program announced last week, Arabs in the occupied territories who want additional social services, will be offered the same benefits that are available to citizens of Israel, including a health plan, unemployment insurance, social security and a ban on child labor.

It is the child labor ban that has been seized on by those critics who see annexation as the program's ultimate goal. They argue that extension of the ban into the occupied territories would require the assistance of the Israeli Labor Ministry to help administer it.

The Likud coalition that governs Israel called during the election campaign for extending Israeli law to the occupied territories, but officials deny that the social services program has that end in mind.

Nonetheless, a Tel Aviv newspaper quoted Foreign Minister Moshe Dayan as telling the cabinet, "We must view ourselves as a permanent government of the areas as regards our obligations toward the population."

Clearly, the program involves a step in that direction, and parts of it are expected to be put into effect within the next two months. Meetings are already being held between the military administrators and the ministries that would be involved.

Popular opposition to the program has been based on the fact that Israeli citizens are taxed heavily while the Arab residents contribute little except for an 8 per cent sales tax that is paid under protest. The government has said that it hopes to provide the additional services without levying any new tax on the Arabs.

Estimates of the cost of the new services range upward from $100 million — a staggering sum for a nation attempting to cut its budget in order to curb inflation. Some of the programs, however, would be voluntary and self-supporting. For example, Defense Miniter Ezer Weizman has proposed a form of national health insurance that would provide Arab families with coverage for $4 to $6 a month.

Israel itself has no national health plan. Israelis are covered by the health program of the Histadrut, the huge labor federation, or under private plans similar to the American Blue Cross.

Report clears Vance, offers personal view

By JACK EGAN
The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — The voluminous report the Comptroller of the Currency issued Thursday on Bert Lance not only cleared the budget director of any criminally prosecutable offenses in his previous financial dealings but also provided numerous insights into the way banker Lance handled his personal finances.

The report provides a particularly detailed anatomy of a $2.6 million loan Lance obtained April 24, 1975, from the Manufacturers Hanover Trust Co. of New York and the difficulties Manufacturers Hanover had in administering the loan.

Manufacturers Hanover officers sent Lance eight "Dear Bert" letters between July 11, 1975, and Nov. 5, 1976, repeatedly asking him to provide the documentation needed on his loan. The bank also requested additional collateral to bring the loan into compliance with its internal rules. In particular, more than 14,000 shares of National Bank of Georgia stock, which Lance had received as a stock dividend, were requested for collateral purposes.

On March 12, 1976, Lance received another letter from the bank requesting $21,911.46 "so that we can clear your loan from the past due interest list." The amount eventually was paid.

And on Sept. 30, 1976, the Lance loan was flagged as a "special mention" in a "Problem-Classified Loan Report" prepared by Manufacturers Hanover senior vice president Frederick A. Rager because of "heavy concentration of collateral and the temporary undermargined condition" of the credit.

On Jan. 6, 1977, Lance paid his Manufacturers Hanover loan off. At that time he sent the bank a letter authorizing the release of his collateral to the First National Bank of Chicago, which had issued him a large replacement loan of $3.4 million.

Asked about the apparent laxity with which Manufacturers Hanover dealth with Lance, bank vice president and spokesman James Hambleton said, "Maybe the treatment appears different from what you or I would get, and it probably is, but there was nothing improper about it."

"The bank was paid off, which was the ultimate test," he said.

As to the consistently undermargined status of the Lance loan, Hambleton said, "It wasn't a hideously huge amount of money you're talking about. At the time it was undermargined, but not seriously so, and not sufficient to warrant such concern."

He also noted that "special mention" was the least significant of four categories that his bank uses to describe loans with problems.

The series of letters to Lance from the bank began July 11, 1975, with a note from vice president and account officer Betsy Jo Viener stating: "It seems we still have some paper work to complete in line with our loan to you." There was the matter of 4,000 shares of Calhoun First National Bank stock that had not been properly pledged as collateral and a form Lance sent back that "was signed but not completed."

She followed up on Aug. 7 with a short letter, including a copy of the July 11 letter, several forms that still needed to be filled out and advance thanks for "your taking care of these documents as well as the additional collateral."

Canal tunnel proves sensitive

By THOMAS W. LIPPMAN
The Washington Post

CAIRO — When Egyptian President Anwar Sadat returns from vacation after the Moslem holy month of Ramadan, one of his first official acts will be an inspection trip to one of the most ambitious and politically sensitive construction projects in the Middle East — a motor vehicle tunnel under the Suez Canal.

The tunnel is to be the first land link between the Sinai Peninsula and the rest of Egypt since the destruction of a railroad bridge in 1967. It has been designed to carry two lanes of traffic as well as water and electricity lines for agricultural and industrial projects planned for the Sinai side of the canal. But it could also carry tanks and other military vehicles at a depth that is intended to make it impervious to Israeli air attacks.

Some 400 men are at work on the tunnel, which is scheduled to be finished in 1979. Named for Ahmed Hamdi, a "martyr" of the 1973 crossing, it is to be the first of two or possibly three. It is about five miles north of Suez City, near the southern end of the canal and the road to the strategic Mitla Pass.

Most of the Sinai Peninsula has been under Israeli military occupation since the 1967 war. But ever since Egyptian troops crossed the canal on pontoon bridges in the 1973 war, Sadat has been promoting plans for the development of the Sinai under eventual Egyptian control.

Back to bell-bottoms

Six years ago — back in 1971 — the United States Navy miscalculated.

Now it isn't often perhaps that the Navy miscalculates or, should we say, it isn't often that the Navy admits to a miscalculation.

But in this particular instance, the powers that be realize that an error in judgment was made, and they are taking steps to correct same.

Yes, the U.S. Navy is going back to bell-bottom trousers, and this well might be considered by many persons as a favorable omen in the news.

It was in 1971, when the idea of social relevance was soaring, that the Navy discarded its traditional bell-bottoms, jumpers and floppy white hats. Adm. Elmo Zumwalt said at that time that sailors henceforth would dress more like officers, with coat, tie and cap.

And from then until now, sailors have looked like anything but sailors. And, bless their hearts, the sailors have hated the whole idea.

Traditionalists, of course, are applauding with the sailors, because they too think sailors should look like sailors. They never could get used to seeing enlisted men in double-breasted jackets, shirts and ties, and visored caps, the uniform decreed by the admiral.

It is especially noteworthy that bell-bottoms aren't coming back because someone has won an argument over respect for tradition. They are coming back rather because the Navy, in a recent survey, found that 80 per cent or more of the enlisted men think the old uniforms were more comfortable and more practical. That perhaps is why they endured for so many years as standard naval attire. Tradition isn't necessarily a slavish devotion to an old set of rules, as many persons seem to think, but can be the best way of doing things.

The Pentagon, six years ago, undoubtedly was of the opinion that because society was changing, the Navy also should change. It thought it was giving the sailors status, when actually status is what it was taking from them.

So, after a six-year period, a quarter of a million sailors in grades E-1 through E-4 will make the switch back to bell-bottoms during the next two years.

And most everyone seems to be happy about the whole business.

Evidence insufficient

The news that the CIA secretly supported research into human behavior control is bound to excite the voguish general prejudice against the agency. Before it is damned, a couple of points are in order.

For one, the CIA is forbidden by its charter to conduct surveillance on American citizens unless it is necessary for the security of agents. The sort of thing the CIA was up to — studying sleep, for example, and researching drug-induced behavior — was not domestic spy work. For another, there is no legal prohibition against the CIA's having American citizens or domestic organizations do, or be subject to, scientific experimentation sponsored by the CIA.

The CIA has done many things that are ethically and morally wrong. President Carter and Congress are taking positive steps to tighten up accountability of the agency, assisted by the news media which has done an excellent job in pressing for disclosure of the facts.

However, we believe that Americans should not lose sight of the fact that the CIA also did many things that were right — indeed vital to the security of the United States.

Separating the right from the wrong is easy in some cases, very difficult in others. So far nobody has made a good distinction as to which borderline acts are good and bad. Before the distinction is drawn, fair judgment is impossible.

INSIDE REPORT:

President Carter meets the critics

By ROWLAND EVANS And ROBERT NOVAK

WASHINGTON — President Carter's bid for support from a blue-ribbon committee promoting a firm stance against the Russians collapsed when he began arguing that defense spending cannot go up because public opinion is against it.

"No, no, no," Paul Nitze was overheard murmuring. He is a former Deputy Secretary of Defense and one of eight prestigious private citizens summoned to the White House for an unannounced meeting with the President Aug. 5. An early Carter-for-President supporter, Democrat Nitze is now a critic of Carter defense policies. He and others present were dismayed to hear the President echo the dubious judgment of his national security subordinates about what the American people will or will not accept.

"Paul," the President complained to Nitze, "would you please let me finish?" That mood of exasperation dominated the one-hour meeting (twice the time scheduled) that left everybody ill at ease.

The White House press office falsely announced that Mr. Carter had met with "a group of leaders from private industry." In fact, he had invited members of the Committee on the Present Danger, formed to advocate a more muscular negotiating stance.

Democrats included Nitze, former Under Secretary of State Eugene Rostow, former Treasury Secretary H.H. (Joe) Fowler, AFL-CIO secretary-treasurer Lane Kirkland and retired Adm. Elmo Zumwalt. Republicans were former Deputy Defense Secretary David Packard, former United Nations delegate Rita Hauser, and a non-member of the committee, former Secretary of Defense Melvin R. Laird (who uncharacteristically said not one word during the hour).

The meeting was arranged by presidential aide Hamilton Jordan, whose multiplying duties include guiding a strategic arms limitation treaty (SALT) through Senate ratification. Increasingly involved in foreign policy, Jordan is worried about opposition to the President by defense-oriented Democrats belonging to the Committee on the Present Danger.

Mr. Carter made clear he did not like the committee's paper "Where We Stand on SALT," which criticizes the administration's policy. His repeated refrain: I am the President trying to do his best and achieve goals we all agree on; why don't you support me instead of picking on me?

Rostow and Nitze explained the committee's position. But Joe Fowler, past-master of the honeyed phrase, gave the political response: This was a bipartisan group whose members had served many Presidents, had criticized many Presidents and were committed to the nation's security. In circuitous terms, what Fowler was saying amounted to this: Don't be so touchy, Mr. President.

Instead of being won over by the Carter charm, the committee members left worried on three counts: first, that the President seemed overeager about getting a SALT agreement; second, that he accepts the dogma that Americans won't spend for their own defense; third, that after six months in the White House, Jimmy Carter shows signs of the same sensitivity to criticism that has proved so costly to his recent predecessors.

ISRAEL STRIKEOUT

Two imminent decisions by the Carter administration saying "no" to Israel are certain to be interpreted by pro-Israeli Congressmen as political pressure resulting from Israel's total refusal to accept President Carter's Mideast peace plan.

One decision would deny Israel what it very much wants: co-production rights to the F-16, the new U.S. super-fighter. The other would cut Israel's request for 250 F-16's to a mere 50 to 75, on grounds that Israel's air force needs no more to maintain its superiority over the Arabs. But Israel is expected to use its influence on Capitol Hill to change the administration's mind.

The decision against giving Israel co-production rights is partly based on objections from the four NATO allies of the U.S. that already have been given co-production rights — Belgium, the Netherlands, Denmark and Norway. To admit Israel into this select circle would anger these countries (two of which, Belgium and the Netherlands, will actually assemble the new aircraft).

Officials privately deny that the F-16 decisions reflect the real unhappiness over Mr. Carter's failure to bring Israel into line with his own Mideast peace plans.

The President has repeatedly promised not to exert that kind of pressure on Israel. Nevertheless the F-16 rebuffs will give Israel a pretext to make that charge quietly among powerful friends in Congress. That will lead to a congressional demand for an administration policy closer to Israel's liking.

WASHINGTON MERRY — GO — ROUND

Paperwork troubles President

By JACK ANDERSON and LES WHITTEN

WASHINGTON — President Carter is scrambling desperately to get ahead of the paperwork being piled on his desk. Sources close to the president acknowledge that he has become too bogged down in details and deadlines to see beyond the immediate crisis.

His view of the problems on the horizon, they say, has been obstructed by the mountains of paperwork on his desk. "There has been very little long-range planning in the White House," one top presidential adviser told us. "It's all crisis management. Nothing is solved until the deadline approaches."

Carter has advanced from one crisis to another since he concluded his inaugural walk down Pennsylvania Avenue seven months ago. He hadn't finished unpacking before he was confronted with a critical shortage of natural gas. "The president should have been told in November that he'd be facing a natural gas crisis in January," complained one adviser.

The recent steel price increases also took the White House by surprise. "That could have been predicted six months ago," grumped the adviser.

But some Carter aides are now trying to anticipate the problems before they become disasters. The president's pollster, Patrick Caddell, is trying to devise statistical measures that can predict trouble in advance.

Stuart Eisenstat, the overworked domestic policy chief, is also trying to plan for the future. But his staff has been overwhelmed with immediate problems. "We've had to deal with energy, tax reform, welfare, the economic stimulus package, aliens, mininum wage, urban problems, reorganization and social security," Eisenstat told us. "These are critical problems that the Republican administrations just didn't deal with."

One White House adviser suggested that Carter "hire 12 of the brightest guys in the country and let them work on long-range problems." But Eisenstat, in an interview with our associate Howie Kurtz, said that he fears such aides might "sit off in a corner and lose touch with reality." He prefers to have his own staff work on complex proposals such as energy and welfare, which he noted "were not concocted overnight."

There is no longer an H.R. Haldeman zealously guarding the door to the oval office. Every aide has been encouraged to send his ideas directly to Carter. Consequently, he spends much of his time pouring over stacks of memoranda, option papers and trivial problems.

"The president shouldn't be spending his time deciding who gets to use the White House pool," complained one top Carter associate. "He spends hours on stuff like that. He loves detail." After one Cabinet meeting, for instance, aides were surprised to find that Carter had read and approved the minutes of the meeting. They were initialed "OK — JC." The president has now been convinced that such duties should be relegated to a secretary.

On substantive issues, however, Carter insists on having complete background data, not just a summary. For example, he recently read nearly 100 pages of memoranda on the problem of shoring up the ailing Social Security system.

A cover memo from Eisenstat described the short-term and long-term problems, congressional expectations, the question of public confidence and a series of options. There were spaces for Carter to approve or disapprove the options. Attached were lengthy memos and charts from Treasury Secretary Michael Blumenthal, Health Education and Welfare Secretary Joseph Califano and budget boss Bert Lance.

Sone Carter staffers argue that the only way to achieve any action in bureaucratic Washington is to set deadlines. The president, for instance, waited to get involved in the congressional wrangling over auto emission standards until two weeks before Detroit's threatened shut-down of production. This was a calculated strategy to force Congress to pass the auto pollution legislation, a top aide told us. Contingency plans were hurriedly drawn, nevertheless, to allow continued production while slapping fines on the polluting cars.

Meanwhile, administration officials agree that planning is urgently needed to deal with the decaying urban areas of America. "There's no comprehensive policy toward the cities," one insider griped. "It's been put on the back burner. Health is over here, welfare is over there — nobody is pulling all the elements together."

Other aides point out that an interagency group is already working on solutions to urban problems. "If anything, we're spending too much time on long-range planning," one member said. The group, however, has no responsibility for reforming welfare, the number one problem for the cities.

Now that most congressmen have fled the humid capital for the summer, Carter finally has a chance to look ahead. He has attended over 20 budget hearings to set priorities for next year's spending. He has also asked his cabinet for a list" of legislation they want the White House to push next year.

For the first time, the president is deferring to congressional experts on many issues. "Congress is light years ahead of us in many areas," one assistant told us. "We often don't have a position until some congressman calls up and says, 'What's your position?'"

NICK THIMMESCH

Is Communist China worth the cost, Mr. President?

Nick Thimmesch

TAIPEI, Taiwan — While Secretary of State Cyrus Vance politely bows to Communist China's rulers in Peking this week, the people of this busy, crowded island will wonder what the United States is really up to, in terms of keeping its moral and legal commitments to their nation.

Taiwan is properly called "The Republic of China," a refuge for the Nationalist Chinese who established a government here in 1949. Today, however, it is best known as "Taiwan," because its 16 million people (14 million of them native Taiwanese) have built a remarkably successful society and nation quite separate from mainland China.

They are very worried that the Carter Administration, following the 1972 Nixon-Kissinger initiative, will formally recognize Red China. That act, they feel, would be a grave mistake and could damage if not destroy their nation.

Government leaders here believe that a gang of intellectual elitists in Washington are willing to sacrifice Taiwan as a pawn in a clever power game where the U.S. plays off the Soviet Union vs. Red China. Sen. Edward Kennedy, with the aid of a recently departed State Department China hand, is the latest to join those maneuvering for recognition of Peking.

What a shame to jeopardize a nation which is about what Americans hope all societies will be — patriotic, hardworking, open and non-aggressive. The Taiwanese are all of these, and nowadays live more in the model of the U.S. than they do in the authoritarian government organized here 30 years ago by Chiang Kai-shek. They are splendidly caught up in optimistic nation-building — constructing roads, schools, airports, shipyards and a variety of other manufacturing facilities.

This earnest spirit was demonstrated in the way the Taiwanese quickly cleaned up their country in the aftermath of two devastating typhoons last month. No looting, just workers on the streets only hours after the ferocious typhoon passed.

Anyway, now they fear that the Carter Administration will submit to Red China's demands that the U.S.:

1 — Withdraw diplomatic recognition of Taiwan, and grant it to the Peking regime.

3 — Remove the 1,300 American military (mostly advisers) on Taiwan.

Taiwanese officials, and the American community here, feel that once the U.S. submits to these conditions, leaving Taiwan in limbo, the Chinese Communists will gradually conduct a war of nerves against Taiwan — by threatening Taiwan's trading partners, by resuming "hot" shelling of Quemoy and Matsu islands and by deploying its menacing submarine fleet in the Taiwan Straits. These aggressive actions would be designed to erode investors' confidence in Taiwan, disrupt the successful economy and hurt the people's morale.

Taiwanese and U.S. military brass do not expect that Red China would blockade Taiwan for some years to come, and claim that an outright invasion is unlikely in the near future. The Taiwanese air force, though inferior in numbers to the Chinese Communists, is vastly superior in equipment and pilot skill. Taiwan also has a first-rate army of 600,000, which, along with the civilian population, would inflict enormous casualties on any invaders and make conquest of the island very difficult.

Is the prospect of this disorder worth it? What does the U.S. get in recognizing Red China, a confused regime which insists that our Presidents, secretaries of states and lesser officials come to its doorstep and never sends its top officials to Washington?

When Nixon made his historic 1972 visit, it all came off on television like a marvelous travelogue — the Great Wall, the cavernous halls where Nixon and court wined, dined and toasted with the smiling Communist rulers. Panda bears, sweetness and light.

But now, several years later, some heads have cleared. We are reminded that the Chinese Communists have murdered millions of their own people, have controlled the huge citizenry to the point that people are inhibited from producing or creating. Moreover Peking constantly purges its leaders, only to suddenly revive and restore them, expecting all to forget the scathing language used in condemnation only a few years back.

In a word, Red China has been and is a political and economic mess — with food shortages and overrated military force — a convulsing paper tiger made inept by endless and lethal political bickering. What Red China needs desperately is recognition from the U.S. and with it a flow of American technology to repair its sadly decrepit infrastructure. A U.S. connection would also serve its short-term requirements of deterring the Soviets, but Chinese Communists are also fully capable of one day having another convulsion, and deciding that it is time to shuck the running, dirty capitalistic Yankee dogs and renew fraternal ties with Communism's Vatican — the Kremlin.

Is recognition worth it, Jimmy Carter, you who earnestly plead for human rights — a practice alien to Peking, perhaps the bloodiest Communist state of them all? Or are 800 million Chinese and all that land mass enough to persuade you otherwise?

Mark Russell says

The CIA is laying off 800 spies. There's nothing sadder than a spy out of work. All he can do is lie around the house tapping his own phone.

Or, to keep in practice, he can overthrow his wife's bridge club.

The spies' union wants job security from the CIA. They are asking for a shorter work week and time-and-a-half for assassinations.

When the spies come home, they should be welcomed with a ticker tape parade. What a sight — crowds cheering as the spies tiptoe down Fifth Avenue.

AUSTIN NOTEBOOK

Familiar faces around capitol may be drifting away this year

By BILL KIDD
Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — There is, a poet once remarked, "nothing constant in the universe" — and Texas state government appears to be no exception to that rule.

This has been a year when some familiar figures on the capitol scene have indicated they will be emulating the fabled Arabs, by striking their tents and fading away (to varying distances, and in varying degrees of silence).

Three state agencies are scheduled to go off to whatever reward (or punishment) defunct agencies are heir to, with the Water Development Board, Water Quality Board and Water Rights Commission merging Sept. 1, to be reincarnated as the Department of Water Resources.

Water Development Board members, faced with picking an executive director for the new agency, went to the No. 2 men in the WDB and WQB — Charles Nemir and Dick Whittington — for the interim executive director and deputy director positions.

Executive directors James Rose and Hugh Yantis, who had been seen as the most likely contenders, apparently will make their exits — Rose announcing he's forming his own company to help cut red tape and otherwise assist cities and towns seeking to develop water projects.

Supreme Court Justice Tom Reavley announced he's resigning to enter private practice.

Reavley's place will be filled by Texarkana Court of Civil Appeals Justice T. C. Chadick. (Chadick's appointment means Charles Barrow will have a few weeks seniority and no longer be the newest member.)

Department of Public Welfare Commissioner Raymond Vowell announced he's retiring, noting that the Carter administration's overhaul of the welfare system will take years to implement — and that the agency needs a younger man to handle that.

Charles Barden, first and only head of the Air Control Board, stepped out to enter private business.

Parks and Wildlife Director Clayton Garrison leaves that agency, and Henry Burkett, P&W law enforcement director, moves up.

The State Board of Insurance continues in a somewhat unsettled state, with Chairman Joe Christie expected to make his announcement for the Democratic nomination for the U.S. Senate seat held by John Tower.

SBI member Durwood Manford continues serving on the board on an appointment which expired Jan. 31 — with no indication what Gov. Dolph Briscoe may do regarding reappointing or replacing him.

And Commissioner of Insurance Joe Hawkins, who had announced his plans to leave the agency, left sooner than planned following a grand jury indictment for alleged perjury. E. J. Yourtis was named as interim commissioner.

Savings and Loan Commissioner W. Sale Lewis completes a decade of service, and his assistant, Alvis Vandygriff, moves up.

On the political scene, there have been announcements of several departures.

And longtime Deputy Commissioner Bill Pieratt left to take over as head of the Farmers Home Administration in Texas.

The Texas delegation to Washington won't look nearly the same, either, with Reps. Omar Burleson and George Mahon retiring, and some other members expected to do likewise.

There also apparently will be a new face in the attorney general's office, and the secretary of state's office, and perhaps the state treasurer's office — and maybe even the governor's office.

And with the various congressional races shaping up, some state Senate and House members are moving out — meaning that others will be moving in, pointing to considerably more new members in the 1979 Legislature than there were in the 1977.

Those changes, of course, are the stuff that politics — and political columns — are made of, and judging from the activity so far this year, the names that will be making headlines in 1978 will be a different set than those which have been prominent in 1977, and for many years before.

WASHINGTON — Dr. Renee Richards, the transsexual tennis player, has won her suit against the U.S. Tennis Assn. and the Women's Tennis Assn. for banning her from the U.S. Tennis Open being held at Forest Hills at the end of this month. They had tried to ban her because she could not pass a sex chromosome test given to women athletes to make sure they are what they say they are.

Dr. Richards claimed that the sex chromosome test was unfair, and since she's allowed in professional women's tennis locker rooms she should be allowed to play as a woman at Forest Hills.

The other side had maintained that if Dr. Richards was permitted to compete as a woman it would open the floodgates for a wave of transsexuals playing in women's sports. Many men would have operations just so they could compete against women.

Now that is possible.

As a tennis player who rarely can beat a man on the courts, I've considered an operation similar to Dr. Richards' many times.

After a discouraging set the other day I even discussed it with my wife. "If I could only have a transsexual operation," I told her, "I know I could improve my forehand."

My wife was very sympathetic. "Do it if you think it will help your game."

"The problem is I'm not sure. If I had the operation and then women started beating me, instead of men, it would make me sick."

"Women beat you now," she said.

"I know," I replied "and it makes me sick. But with a transsexual operation I might be able to psych them out.

"If they knew I was once a man, and they now had to play me as a woman, it could make them so nervous they might double-fault and lose their serve, particularly if I didn't shave my legs."

"It's a gamble," my wife admitted. "The only problem as I see it is that if you had the operation and you still kept losing at tennis, there would be no way of going back, if you know what I mean."

"I've thought of that," I said. "But it did wonders for Dr. Richards' game."

"But she was a good player as a man. She's just become better as a woman. If you're a lousy player as a man there is no guarantee you'll play better as a woman. Wouldn't you feel more comfortable taking tennis lessons?"

"Do you know what they charge for tennis lessons these days? At least I could get the operation under Blue Shield and save some money."

"There is a compromise," my wife said. "Instead of going to all the trouble of an operation, why don't you play in women's tennis clothes? Then if it didn't work out you wouldn't have lost anything."

"That is a thought," I said excitedly. "If I wore your tennis dress when I played I might be able to beat a woman. It could certainly give me an edge when they looked across the net."

"I think you'd look nice in my tennis dress," my wife said.

"But suppose they make me take a sex chromosome test?"

"Refuse to take it. I think if you're willing to wear a tennis dress, they have no right to ask you any questions."

"What a brainstorm," I said. "With a dress on I could even beat Ethel Kennedy."

"Would you believe Chrissie Evert?" my wife said as she zipped me up in the back.

I was about to rush out of the house with my racket when my wife called me back. "You forgot the pom-poms on your tennis socks."

Russia reported due oil shortage

By ERNEST CONINE
The Los Angeles Times

The CIA says that maybe, just maybe, a shortage of oil in the 1980s will force the Soviet Union to reduce military spending — a feat that seems beyond U.S. arms-control negotiators.

If this happens at all, however, it will be several years from now. The more immediate question raised by the CIA report is whether it might be in America's self-interest to bail out the Russians by helping them develop their vast reserves of oil and natural gas.

The answer is by no means simple. It involves controversial judgments as to the future danger of U.S.-Soviet conflict in the Middle East, the contribution that Russian oil and gas supplies, if adequately developed, might make toward alleviating U.S. energy shortages, and, murkiest of all, the likely trend of office politics within the Kremlin.

THE CRUX of the intelligence agency's forecast is that the Soviet economy, the growth of which has already slowed, will run into even more trouble in the 1980s.

The CIA says Russian oil production, which now runs from 11 million to 12 million barrels per day, has peaked — that, by 1985, it will drop by some 25 per cent. Unless alternative energy sources can be developed more fully and quickly than now seems likely, the result will be economic stagnation and a substantial dependence on imported oil.

Soviet economic growth has already slowed from an impressive 6 1-2 per cent in the last half of the '50s to less than 5 1-2 per cent in the '60s, and to not much more than 4 per cent in the '70s.

American experts say the reasons include a decline in the growth of the Soviet labor force, reflecting a falling birthrate; an inefficient agricultural system; a slowdown in industrial productivity resulting from the civilian economy's failure to keep up with rapidly changing areas of technology, and the voracious appetite of the military-industrial complex.

THE CIA says these pressures are now joined by another — the prospect of a growing oil shortage that may force the Soviet Union, now a net oil exporter, to import as much as $10 billion worth a year by 1985.

Actually, the Russians have huge, untapped reserves of oil, natural gas and coal, but these are mostly east of the Urals, many hundreds of miles from major population centers. Effective exploitation would require heavier infusions of money and technology than apparently are available.

The CIA concludes that a further reduction in the rate of Soviet economic growth is "almost inevitable," that in some years it could drop to zero or even decline.

If things indeed unfold that way, the agency says oil imports will "absorb most of the Soviet hard-currency earnings in the 1980s," and largely foreclose purchase of Western technology that Russia needs.

THE INSTINCT of the aging, inflexible Soviet leadership no doubt will be to keep doing what it's doing now: seek huge Western credits, continue to give industrial development priority over the satisfaction of consumer needs, and continue to build Soviet military power.

But the most likely source for credits and technology on the scale needed is the United States, which is not now in the mood to go very far in providing them. And Russian consumers can't be shortchanged much more than they already are without risking politically dangerous unrest of the sort that erupts periodically among workers in Poland.

If the Soviet Union were a Western democracy, there isn't much doubt what it would do: cut military spending and reduce the armed forces to release manpower for the civilian economy.

AFTER ALL, Russia spends some 12 per cent of its gross national product for defense purposes — more than twice as much, proportionately, as does the United States. Soviet and American military power are now roughly equal, so what is the sense of spending more and more?

Unfortunately, the Russian leaders show no sign of accepting this logic.

The CIA thus predicts that Soviet military spending will continue to grow at a rate of 4 per cent to 5 per cent for several more years, but it holds out the hope that, somewhere down the pike, economic pressures may force a policy change.

You could make a case that we should try to help make this happen. We could withhold credits, block or discourage exports of technology — especially oil and gas technology — even on a strictly commercial basis and, in general, do whatever we could to sharpen Soviet communism's economic crisis. If it worked, economic pressures at some point might force the Russians to cut military spending and accept genuine arms control.

BUT FEW Americans, in or out of government, have the stomach for such a radical policy. Even if they did, the United States might not have the leverage to do anything but make the Russians angry, since other Western nations would not follow our lead.

Another trouble is that Russia has a policy option that the CIA study does not stress — the use of its military and political power to gain control of the rich and enticingly close oilfields in the Middle East. Since the United States is heavily dependent on this oil for its own needs, any such Russian move would carry the seeds of a direct and very dangerous Big Two military confrontation.

It could be that the American interest would be better served by actually helping the Soviet Union develop its oil and gas reserves.

IN RETURN for providing technology and sharing some of the costs through the extension of credits, the United States could take repayment in the form of oil and liquefied natural gas. Several such cooperative deals have, in fact, been proposed.

The drawback to helping the Soviet Union overcome its energy-related economic problems is that it would help take the Kremlin off the hook. It might very well save the Soviet leaders from the harsh necessity of giving the military-industrial complex less in order to give the civilian economy more.

POSITIVE THINKING

Live over top of things to ensure a happy life

By NORMAN VINCENT PEALE

It is basic principle of human psychology that to be happy in life one must be useful. And the reverse is also true, that to be really useful one must have the quality of joy. One of the most useful men I know, a young lawyer, often tells me, "I am happy in my work." That is one reason he does it so well.

"Joy?" you may ask. "How do I go about acquiring this joy?"

Well, there are a number of ways. I see that there is a new pill being developed. It is claimed that it will lift your spirits without the nervousness and excitement which ordinarily goes with such medication. That would be something, wouldn't it, to carry a handful of joy-raising pills around in your pocket and take one every time you feel depressed.

If you stop to think about it, that would be a superficial remedy. Joy and delight in life are not so much in the bloodstream and stomach as they are in the mind and heart, although physical feelings bear on it. But the fundamental procedure for making your life a joyful one is the attainment of a joyful attitude of mind.

When I began to write about this, I looked into a concordance to the Bible to see how many references there were to joy. I found so many texts dealing with joy that it took me 15 minutes merely to read the list. The Bible is packed to overflowing with the mention of joy. I wonder how anybody ever got the idea that religion is dull and dour, sad and gloomy. People who think that must have something wrong with them to entertain so jaundiced an outlook on life. Look into the New Testament and you will find that it commands, "Rejoice." And then, to make certain you understand its importance, it emphasizes the matter by saying, "And again I say, 'Rejoice.'".

It will be helpful to take those words and firmly plant them in your conscious mind until the idea of joy sinks into your unconscious. When that happens you will feel like rejoicing daily; you will be genuinely happy all the time. When you adopt that attitude of rejoicing you will naturally do those things which cause you to enjoy life and be useful.

By this process something fine will happen to you that is best expressed in a phrase I got from a woman some time ago. She is a very gifted spiritual person, and her personality has a sparkle.

"There is a very stimulating quality about you," I said to her. "People find you quite inspiring. Could you put your philosophy of life into words for me?"

"Yes, I can," she said. "It's something I learned from a dear old colored woman years ago. She used to tell me, 'Live over the top of things.' What a wise suggestion — 'Live over the top of things.'"

Both these women had an upward accentuation in their faith. There is real ascendancy and victory in that phrase, "Live over the top of things." Unfortunately too many people actually live under the bottom of things, bogged down and continually overwhelmed. And this is because in their thoughts there is no uplift. On the contrary, successful people live over the top of things. They have the benefit of a powerful mental upthrust of faith.

To really enjoy living and to find the usefulness and happiness that comes with such attitudes, the secret is to get yourself full of God. It is perhaps a strange phrase but its meaning is clear; get the mind filled with God's spirit.

When you get yourself full of God, everything works together for good. The way is opened to wisdom, strength, goodness, peace, health and joy. In other words you will be in tune with God, the creative power in this world, and that creative power puts new vitality and life into people. They learn to live over the top of things. They become happy and useful people.

Locomotive used to test nuclear materials cask

Copley News Service

WASHINGTON — If you want to test the strength of a 28-ton cask to be used as a container for shipping nuclear active fuels and wastes, just crash a rocket-propelled locomotive into it at 81.5 mph.

That's exactly what the Energy Research and Development Administration did at its Sandia laboratories near Albuquerque, N.M. The cask was sent hurtling into the air, then bounced twice on the ground before coming to rest.

The result: minor surface dents but no breaks or cracks.

Not so the locomotive, however. The front half was crushed, with the trailer on which the cask had rested wrapped around the bashed-in area in a U-shape.

This is the third strength test performed on the shipping cask. In two earlier ones, a cask mounted on a tractor-trailer was slammed into a concrete wall first at 61 mph, then 84 mph. The cask was not breached either time.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

To The Editor:

Thank you for your editorial Aug. 24, "For the record," regarding Congressman Bob Krueger's outright distortion in blaming the Republicans for failure to deregulate natural gas. You point out that Mr. Krueger should know better. I would say Mr. Krueger does know better but hopes he can convince the public otherwise.

As an independent voter I tended to support Mr. Krueger, but when I attended a reception for him in Stanton last week and had the opportunity to question him, I was forced to revise my opinion.

Mr. Krueger was evasive when I asked his opinion and position regarding the Panama Canal giveaway. After talking around the issue for several sentences, he gave the implied answer that he favored the give-away of the canal. I think that's a shame.

The answer which apalled me was in response to the question, "What is your interpretation of the legal services bill and how did you vote on it?" Mr. Krueger's answer was: "There are so many bills, I just don't remember that one."

This bill is a $300,000,000 annual funding level which the liberals are using to establish their network of lobbyists and organizers. Mr. Krueger voted FOR this measure. Our congressman, Mr. Mahon, was given the Conservative Caucus Civil Liberterian award for opposing the measure. It seems the height of irresponsibility or indifference for Mr. Krueger to have voted for such an expensive bill within the last two months and to be unable to recall ths bill. Indeed, is hard earned tax payers' money to be spent with so little thought?

I think Mr. Krueger knew about the legal services bill and how he voted for it. In a like manner, when he spoke in Midland blaming the Republicans for the failure of his bill to deregulate natural gas, he knew that 88 per cent of the Republicans voted with him, whereas only 25 per cent of his fellow Democrats supported him.

Davis freed temporarily on heavy bond

By MIKE COCHRAN

AMARILLO, Tex. (AP) — Cullen Davis won his freedom under $1 million bond Saturday moments after the state formally launched its capital murder case against the wealthy Fort Worth industrialist.

"If the bond sticks, I'll buy all of you a drink," the smiling, dark-haired defendant told newsmen shortly after the ruling by State District Court Judge George Dowlen.

"It is my opinion the defendant should be released on temporary bond pending determination of the issue in Tarrant County," Dowlen said from the bench.

A state prosecutor, after winning permission from Dowlen, left almost immediately by plane for Fort Worth, the application for bond in hand.

Dowlen's Fort Worth colleague, Judge Tom Cave, was expected to make the ultimate ruling once the application was returned to his court.

Asked if Cave were "standing by" a prosecutor snapped, "He's available."

It was Cave who presided over an earlier, ill-fated attempt to try Davis in Fort Worth. And it was Cave who previously denied bond for Davis.

Dowlen's decision came shortly after Dist. Atty. Tim Curry of Fort Worth provided jurors a blue print of the state's case against the 43-year-old defendant.

Curry said the state intends to show that Davis was the black-clad, black wigged gunman, who triggered a savage shooting spree last summer in which two were killed and two critically wounded.

He also is accused of captial murder in the slaying of Stan Farr, 30, and the wounding of Davis's estranged wife, Priscilla, 36, and Gus Gavrel Jr.

"The state expects to prove the bullet which killed Andrea and a bullet removed from the body of Stan Farr were fired from the same gun," Curry told the jury.

"And we expect to prove the bullets fired into Farr were witnessed by Priscilla Davis."

The case against Davis is circumstantial as it pertains to Andrea but the state claims three eye witnesses to the other shootings. Davis posted $650,000 in bonds on charges stemming from the other shootings Friday in Fort Worth.

"I was going to believe it when I saw it," sighed Davis after Dowlen's ruling. "Tonight I'm going to sleep in a good bed."

It was precisely one year ago Saturday that detectives took Davis into custody as he prepared to board his private jet for what he said was a business trip to Houston.

Within hours, the original murder charges filed against him were upgraded to capital murder and Judge Cave ordered him jailed without bond.

"We're not arguing or criticizing what Judge Dowlen has done," said a disappointed Curry. "But we do take exception to it. He's done what 13 other judges saw fit not to do."

"Whatever the bond decision, we can live with it. We're just interested in getting this case tried and concluded."

Davis and his defense team, headed by Richard "Racehorse" Haynes of Houston and Phil Burleson of Dallas, spent several minutes sparring with newsmen clustered around the defense table.

"Any social plans?" Davis was asked.

"No," he smiled, turning to Haynes and saying, "Have you booked any social plans for me?"

Davis was expected to spend the weekend in seclusion with girl friend Karen Master, the stunning Fort Worth blonde at whose home Davis was arrested after the shootings.

She has taken an apartment in Amarillo during the trial and has been an occassional visitor to the Potter County Courthouse but not the courtroom. She has visited with Davis in an anteroom during breaks in the trial proceedings.

Shuttle service to open Sept. 1

A new shuttle service for Midland, the Chauffeur, will begin operations 60 days ahead of schedule with a public grand opening on one of its parking lots at 3302 W. Wall Ave. at 9 a.m. Sept. 1, according to Patt Sayers, manager.

Four 14-passenger vans will ferry passengers into and out of the downtown district on an approximate schedule of one every eight minutes between 7 and 9 a.m., and 4 and 6 p.m., Monday through Friday.

The Chauffeur, a division of Gihls Properties, Inc., is the answer to growing traffic congestion, scarcity of downtown parking and energy shortages, according to Henry Blanton, Gihls president.

The vans will be driven by only experienced drivers, and will make nonstop runs to the downtown core from two parking areas — one at 3302 W. Wall Ave., and the other at 1802 N. Big Spring St.

Subscribers will be accepted on a monthly basis at $32 per month for the parking facilities and shuttle, or $24 for the shuttle only. The Chauffeur will also offer the occasional passenger a rate of 60 cents per trip.

Interested persons may obtain more information at the grand opening or by calling 683-4853.

Hospital to host nursing workshop

Midland Memorial Hospital will host an emergency room nursing workshop August 28 in the Medical Staff Conference Room from 10:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m., according to Mrs. Ellen Kennedy, inservice director.

"This is a follow-up to the last four months of teleconference programo on various aspects of nursing," Mrs. Kennedy said.

Conducting the workshop will be Nancy Magel and Jonna Lee Masters, both registered nurses. Miss Masters is inservice coordinacor at The University of Texas Health Science Center in San Antonio.

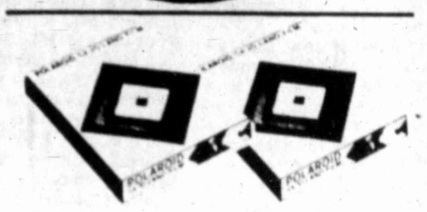

All nurses interested in emergency room nursing, and who have attended the teleconferences are invited to participate in the workshop. They should contact Mrs. Kennedy at 682-7381, extension 37, for additional information and registration.

Groucho Marx is shown at various stages in his life: from left, at age 16 as a vaudeville performer; in 1933; in 1955; and in 1974.

Groucho's contribution? 'He made people laugh'

By the Associated Press

Dick Cavett recalled that incident Friday, the day Groucho died after 86 birthdays of his own.

Cavett said he once told Groucho that he could probably find something funny in his own death.

"He said he could but that it was easier to find something funny in the deaths that are not your own," said Cavett, who is starring in a Broadway play.

In Los Angeles, George Fenneman, who was Groucho's sidekick on television's "You Bet Your Life" and his straight man for the 30 years they were together on radio and TV, said the comedian's death marks "the end of an era."

"Luckily I have the wonderful moments of 30 years working with this living legend, although several months ago he ceased to be the Groucho I knew," the 57-year-old Fenneman said. "There will probably never be another performer like him."

Actor George Jessel said he knew "Grouch" since 1910.

"I guess I knew him longest," said Jessel, 79. "In the last few months, I was very close to him because Erin Fleming (Groucho's longtime companion) invited me to come to the house and make him laugh. What was Groucho's contribution? He made people laugh, and that's quite a contribution."

Ralph Edwards, longtime host of television's "This Is Your Life," lauded Groucho's ability "to touch the average American."

"Groucho was a master at putting down pomposity," Edwards said. "The inside of the man was honest and loving, when the opposite seemed to be the truth. Groucho had many imitators, but no one could duplicate him."

Nat Perrin, a longtime friend of Groucho's who was appointed temporary conservator for the comedian during a bitter court battle over his care, mourned his old friend's death.

"My feeling is very, very sad," said Perrin. "The man had a big impact on my life. He lived his life his way. He really did it his way."

Some Groucho one-liners

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Groucho Marx was as famous for his one-line wisecracks as for his bushy eyebrows and duck walk. Here are a few:

Woman: (passionately) "Closer darling."

Groucho: "If I were any closer, I'd be in back of you."

Man: "You love your brother, don't you?"

Groucho: "No, but I'm used to him."

Man: Stop at a Western Union office. I want to wire my father.

Groucho: What's the matter? Can't he stand up by himself?

Man: "He doesn't believe in wearing shirts."

Groucho: "Oh, an aetheist, eh?"

He once resigned from a prominent country club, claiming, "I couldn't join any organization that would accept me as a member."

One night the daughter of actor Alan Ladd appeared on Marx' radio and TV quiz show, "You Bet Your Life." She remarked that her father was in the movies.

"Is your dad Laddie, son of Lassie?" Groucho asked.

On another show, Marx told an Egyptian contestant: I used to know a red-hot mummy from Egypt. We were terribly wrapped up in each other."

Once a jackpot hopeful said he designed everything from a safety pin to a locomotive.

"Wait a minute — why would a locomotive need safety pins?" Groucho interrupted. "Oh, I guess when they change engines."

Hearst grandson prefers editing magazine to corporate position

The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — Will Hearst, grandson of the late newspaper tycoon William Randolph Hearst, came to town to push his new outdoor sports-plus-ecology magazine, Outside. He forgot to shave. "Makes me look like a mountain man, huh?" Hearst joked, sliding into his waiting Cadillac limousine.

Hearst, 28, last October resigned his seat on the board of directors of the Hearst Corp., the massive publishing empire founded by his grandfather, to take the managing editor's job at Outside. The magazine is being published by Jann Wenner of Rolling Stone, who is considered by some to be a modern-day version of the original Hearst. The diminution in personal power is substantial, but Will Hearst says the smaller staff and closer ties to "regular people" make the switch worthwhile.

"The Hearst Corp. is very big, it's hard to do anything there," Hearst explained. He said he'd rather be in a small office — Outside's San Francisco staff members 15 — than be stuck in a stuffy New York corporate boardroom. "I want to go where I can meet as many regular people as possible," Hearst said earnestly. "The culture's in the streets."

The newspaper heir's populist leanings — he's a left-wing Democrat in a family of rock-ribbed rightist Republicans — caused some strain after the kidnapping of his cousin Patty in February 1974. Despite family pressure, Will Hearst refused to move from his walk-up apartment in San Francisco's Russian Hill to the security of a high-rise with a doorman.

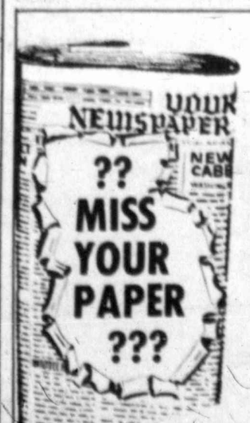

"I never could get used to moving in that corridor of isolation," he said, shaking his head. "Watching your movements, knowing how many exits there are in the theater — that's no way to live."

Will Hearst has seen his cousin Patty several times since a federal judge let her out on bail last Nov. 21. She's gained weight, he said, and seems to be getting her strenght back. During her odyssey with her Symbionese Liberation Army captors and in jail later on, she was extremely thin, pallid and sickly.

"She's depressed and sick to hell of the whole thing," Hearst said. "She told me she can't even try to drive a car because no insurance company will touch her with a 10-foot pole."

He added that his cousin has grown increasingly suspicious of all strangers, particularly those working in the news media. "It will stick with her all her life," Hearst predicted. "Her orientation is to see people as using her to sell newspapers, or leftwing ideology or the ruling class. She's become the Farrah Fawcett-Majors of causes."

Doctor prescribes work as Humphrey lifeline

By MARTHA MALAN

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — Sen. Hubert H. Humphrey's physician has prescribed "work and lots of it and soon" for his patient, who learned last week that he has terminal cancer of the pelvis.

And the Minnesota Democrat seems ready to follow the prescription.

"He wanted to know whether I have the reservations ready to go back to Washington after Labor Day," said Fred Gates, a Humphrey aide, Friday. "He seemed very optimistic in everything we discussed."

Dr. John Najarian, chief of surgery at University of Minnesota Hospitals, who headed the team that performed surgery on Humphrey Thursday, said work is the senator's lifeline.

"Returning to his job in the Senate is absolutely therapeutic for this man, who thrives on his work," Najarian said. "He has lived a complete life of public service and he must continue living that kind of life. It is essential for him."

Humphrey, 66, underwent surgery Thursday for a blockage of the lower intestine. The surgery disclosed a widespread tumor in the pelvis, which doctors said cannot be removed surgically.

A primary concern of the senator was to get a television installed in his room in time for Friday night's preseason football game between the Baltimore Colts and Minnesota Vikings. Baltimore won the game 29-7.

"I brought one in and we watched most of the game," Gates said. "He was holding in there, even though the Vikings were losing."

Najarian said Humphrey was momentarily discouraged upon being advised of the extent of the tumor.

"He was saddened and disappointed," Najarian said, "but only momentarily. He looks forward to the next step, chemotherapy," or chemical treatment.

Doctors said the tumor was a recurrence of cancer which forced the removal of Humphrey's bladder last October. Although it's hoped the chemotherapy can prolong the senator's life, Najarian has said it is impossible to predict how long.

Humphrey was up and about several times during the day, Najarian said. The smiling senator even took several unauthorized strolls down the hall, unaided.

Gates said the senator had not talked on the telephone with anyone.

Two-day extension granted

CARSON CITY (AP) — The Nevada Supreme Court has granted a two-day extension to an initial Monday deadline for responses to a Mormon judge's petition to be reinstated on the Howard Hughes "Mormon Will" trial.

The high court said Friday that in response to requests from a lawyer for relatives of Hughes, the deadline was reset for Wednesday.

A motion for a time extension was filed earlier Friday by Las Vegas lawyer William Morse, representing Annette Gano Lummis, Hughes' aunt.

Morse said a complete transcript of the hearing in which Clark County District Judge Keith Hayes was removed from the case is not expected to be ready until Monday.

Morse added the initial Monday deadline was "impractical and impossible."

Deaths reported in quake

JAKARTA, Indonesia (AP) — A major earthquake in the eastern Indian Ocean triggered a landslide on the Indonesian island of Sumbawa, the government said Saturday. At least 31 persons were reported dead and 67 others missing.

They were the first casualties reported since the quake, possibly the strongest ever recorded, struck between Indonesia and Australia at 1:11 p.m. Jakarta time, 2:11 a.m. EDT on Friday.

The Indonesian Meterology Department pinpointed the quake's epicenter in the ocean 931 miles southeast of Jakarta. Sumbawa is one of the closest land areas to the epicenter, about 400 miles to the north.

A government spokesman said medical teams, volunteers and food supplies have been sent to Sumbawa and $24,000 has been allocated for disaster relief.

The 31 landslide victims were found among debris and rubble in the island district of Lunya, authorities said.

On Sumba island, 200 miles north of the epicenter, a policeman contacted by telephone reported "a few cracks on some buildings and a little damage on our pier."

But government officials here said they have been unable to get in touch with the island.

The quake also rattled tall buildings as far away as Perth, Australia, 1,300 miles south of Jakarta, and tremors rippled along the 2,400-mile length of the Western Australian coast.

Seismographic monitoring stations around the world reported the strenghth of the quake at between 7.7 and 8.9 on the Richter scale. Seismologists in Vienna reported a reading of 8.9 and said it was was "one of the strongest quakes in recorded history." However, they acknowledged that energy waves may have distorted their reading.

Authorities said aftershocks buffeted Indonesian islands all day Friday.

One official said inadequate communications with remote islands in the Indonesian archipelago have hampered efforts to access, quake-related damage and injuries.

Muchson Surachman, a deputy director of Department of Social Affairs, said his agency was still trying to establish contact with some of the islands.

A spokesman for the Meteorology Department reported damaged buildings and at least one injury on the tourist island of Bali, about 300 miles northwest of the epicenter. A powerful quake struck that island last year, killing more than 1,000 persons.

There were reports of higher than usual waves, but no immediate indication that the quake had triggered a major tidal wave, often the most dangerous effect of earth tremors in this part of the world.

A reading of 8 on the Richter scale is rated as a "great" quake, capable of tremendous damage. Every increase of one number in the Richter measurement means a tenfold increase in magnitude. Therefore a quake measuring 8.5 is 10 times stronger than one that measures 7.5.

Texas energy engineer says recycling promising answer

DALLAS (AP) — Jack Brady, who told the government to "bug off" when it requested information about his solar-powered home, is giving the same government another chance.

Brady is a consulting energy engineer with a mission. He wants the Carter administration to offer incentives to those who find ways to recycle energy.

"Let's give the Carter administration credit for something bad," Brady said. "The Carter energy policy is not really appropriate without a credit of some kind for energy recycling."

Brady said he stumbled onto the "maddeningly simple" idea of using energy more than once when he was commissioned to do a study for a Dallas cafeteria.

He found that waste heat from air conditioners and refrigeration units could be used again to provide hot water for other needs.

Brady also found that no goverment help was available for such a project.

"Energy recyling should be subsidized like solar, geothermal, nuclear and wind energy projects are," Brady said.

He estimates that the cafeteria could cut its utility bills by 30 per cent, with two or three years necessary for the necessary equipment to pay for itself.

"I'm having a hard time getting the country changed while I'm trying to keep my own profits and losses straight," said the university lecturer and City of Dallas solar consultant—with tongue firmly in cheek.

Brady had problems with the government when he tried to get some help for his solar-powered home in Plano, a Dallas suburb. The government backed off and it cost Brady $30,000 to finish the project, which includes solar air conditioning as well as the simpler process of solar heating.

"Then they (the government) started calling regularly to get data from my home's operation," Brady said. "I told them to bug off."

Brady said he knows of no other home which is totally solar powered. The house does have backup electric and gas systems, which are used instead of drawing on solar reserve power. Brady said the day is not far off when it will become cheaper to use the solar power exclusively.

Brady's ideas on energy recycling are not solar-related. He said using waste heat from current cooling or refrigeration systems would in effect provide free hot water and lower electric bills to consumers.

He admits that incentive plans for recycling projects have passed the House. "But the Senate seems to kill them all."

The business of energy recycling is a new one, but one that is booming, Brady said. "There are many products available for recycling energy now, but homeowners don't know about them" he said. "Some of them are only 90 days old and I don't know of any of them more than 120 days old."

"What I'm trying for is what everyone is trying for," Brady said. "We all want lower energy bills. We've got to get the government to subsidize private enterprise in its quest for new products that work. Gosh, that sounds funny," he said.

Brady said he has no connection with any firms that make such products.

His next step is to try to attract attention for his cause.

"I want to talk with a guy from the Building Future Forum they had in Washington," Brady said. "I heard he said that it's easy to get your thinking into proposed energy bills. I'm gonna call that guy who said it was easy."

Brady would also like to hear from senators and representatives or from administration spokesmen concerning his views.

He's convinced he's not the only one in his line who feels as he does about energy recycling.

Mayor Retico welcomes Drilco Industrial to Hibbing, Minnesota.

We at Conner's along with many Midland Area firms have watched with pride the growth and development of Drilco Industrial into one of the leading manufacturers of equipment for the energy producing industry. We are proud to have been chosen to take part in this open house celebration and would like to add our congratulations and best wishes to them in this new venture in Hibbing, Minnestoa.

Rock, sideburns, sex appeal part of Elvis' legacy

By LINDA DEUTSCH

LOS ANGELES (AP) — To little kids and teenagers, it must be a strange spectacle: a world of adults grieving the death of a rock 'n' roll singer.

"Who was this Elvis Presley anyway?" they wonder.

"Why did Mama cry when she heard he'd died? And what's this got to do with me?"

How do you explain?

If there had been no Elvis, we might still be wearing crewcuts and saddle shoes. We might be humming ballads and saying nothing about sex.

"If there had been no Elvis," says music publicist Paul Wasserman, "there would have been no Beatles, no Rolling Stones. Elvis was a pioneer."

Like George Washington?

Well, sort of. He was a revolutionary for sure, but he carried a guitar, not a musket, and his message was a different kind of freedom.

He was a "culture hero" and it seems just now that he should be compared to another man in this century: Rudolph Valentino.

They were American originals — "The Shiek" and "The Pelvis."

Valentino gave us slicked-down hairdos, the tango and the term, "matinee idol."

Elvis it was long hair, tight pants and a remarkable sound called rock 'n' roll, He was "real cool, man." He was "the most."

A half century apart, Valentino and Elvis inspired their audiences with the same magic. You might call it "sex appeal."

Elvis' legacy, some say, may include the sexual revolution.

Those were innocent times, the '50s. The drug culture had not been born. Adults spoke in whispers of "free love," and The Beatles had not yet written, "Do It In the Road."

"Rebel Without a Cause," was the movie of the day. James Dean was the rebel; Elvis became the cause.

His lyrics were innocuous, but the throb in his voice and the look in his heavy-lidded eyes was enough to make a preacher gasp.

In Los Angeles this week, radio reporter Barbara Esensten told her listeners of Elvis' impact on her teenage view of sex in the taboo-ridden '50s. "For a long time, I was confused and frankly afraid," she said. "Then, Elvis came along."

Her mother, like many others, disliked the swivevl-hipped singer. She prodded mother to explain. "Finally," she said, "He looks like he's trying to get women excited."

"He is," I said. We stared at each other and laughed ... "I can't help but believe," said Ms. Esensten, "that in many different ways, Elvis Presley freed up a lot of folks."

Robert Zimmerman of Hibbing, Minn. — later Bob Dylan — was in knee pants, figuratively speaking. But the times they were changin."

"His music was wild, defiant, challenging, adventurous," Los Angeles Times rock critic Robert Hilburn wrote when Elvis died Tuesday. "His long hair, sideburns, loud clothes and uncompromsing manner offered a symbol for teenagers desiring to state their own identity."

"It was a time of extraordinary gentility, blandness and politeness," said critic John Rockwell. "Presley was the man who codified a kind of rebellion."

His music, which may pale beside today's sophisticated rock, was a brilliant splash of color in the gray days of crooners. Elvis' unique blend of country-Western, gospel, black soul music and rhythm and blues was the hottest innovation since jazz.

"His music was the only thing exclusively ours," recalled Carl Wilson of The Beach Boys. "His wasn't my mom and dad's music ... His voice was a total miracle, a true miracle in the music business."

John Lennon once said, "Nothing really affected me until Elvis."

Elvis didn't invent rock 'n' roll, many have noted. He just interpreted and sold it better than anyone else alive.

"Heartbreak Hotel," "Hound Dog," "Don't Be Cruel," and "All Shook Up," were just a few of the songs that came on like a shot of adrenalin for the tired, middle-aged record industry.

He sold more records than anyone in history — 500 million — and tuned in a previously untapped market of consumers, the teen-agers.

His charisma inspired a hit Broadway musical, "Bye Bye Birdie," an affectionate remembrance of the national panic when Elvis was drafted.

He united the world's kids in a youth movement that transcended political differences. His death was front-page news in every language.

But there were things Elvis could not do. He never won true critical acclaim while he was alive — he had to die first.

He never made a very good movie — although he starred in 31 productions. Such films as "Love Me Tender," "Jailhouse Rock" and King Creole" were forgettable musicals with a built-in audience.

Oddly, Elvis' mentor, Col. Tom Parker, who carefully molded every facet of his career, cared little about Presley's films.

"We don't have approval on scripts," Parker once said, "only money. Anyway, what's Elvis need? A couple of songs, a little story and some nice people with him."

Inevitably, the movies made millions.

The word "superstar" might have been invented for Elvis. Yet, he never fit into the social strata of the so-called "beautiful people."

He was the stranger, the poor country boy who found sudden wealth but never felt at home with the rich folks.

In recent days, many have spoken of Elvis' hungry beginnings as a key element in the legend and the legacy, a rags-to-riches story as American as Horatio Alger.

"He was a truckdriver who gave away Cadillacs," said TV newsman Charles Kuralt, "That's an American story. How could we ever feel estranged from Elvis? He was a native son."

When he died, Elvis left an impression on virtually every entertainment medium. The longest running show now on Broadway is "Grease," a nostalgic sendup of the songs and styles of Elvis' '50s. It will soon be a movie.

Two of TV's hit series, "Happy Days" and "LaVerne and Shirley," are '50s pieces which inevitably mention Elvis.

"You know," says Marshal, "some of the kids in the show are too young to remember. We have to show them Elvis Presley pictures."

It doesn't really matter if you were alive when Elvis reigned as "The King" of rock 'n' roll. He changed your life.

End to hiring advantage for veteran asked

By SUSAN W. STEWART
The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — Civil Service Commission Chairman Alan K. Campbell called Saturday for curtailment of the hiring preference the federal government now gives veterans.

Veterans, he said, hold 50 per cent of all federal jobs but constitute only 22 per cent of the national work force.

Campbell outlined his controversial proposal which would require Congressional approval, before the national convention of the American Legion in Denver.

The present system of preferential hiring, he told the assembled veterans, "has effectively diluted the benefits" for non-veterans who need help in getting jobs.

Campbell's remarks were politely received by the Legionnaries. But Louis Clark, assistant director of the National Economic commission of the Legion, said the group has a standing resolution "that we oppose any effort to weaken or destroy the veterans preference act as it now is."

The practice of giving an edge to job-seeking veterans began in 1944 with passage of the Veterans' Preference Act. The law's intent was to compensate for time lost in wartime service by making it easier for them to find jobs with the government.

Now, however, the law gives veterans preference long after their service has ended and provides what amounts to unlimited tenure once they have a civil service job, according to Campbell.

The system is "curiouser and curiouser," he said, in that it has left male veterans holding a concentration of middle-and upper-income government jobs while women are concentrated in lower-paying jobs.

Under present law, veterans who served in either world war, in Korea between April 28, 1952, and July 1, 1955, or who served more than 180 consecutive days on active service from January 1955 through Oct. 14, 1976, are eligible for a five point "adjustment" in their competitive civil service exam scores.

Disabled veterans and their spouses and mothers, as well as the spouses and mothers of deceased veterans, are eligible for a 10-point adjustment.

In addition, Campbell pointed out, after test scores are computed and employers begin selecting from the "eligibles," a veteran may not be passed over, all other things being equal, unless the Civil Service Commission has granted the employing agency a waiver to do so.

In 1975, Campbell said, veterans made up only 20 per cent of the "eligibles" but accounted for 34 per cent of those selected for jobs.

Women, on the other hand, made up 41 per cent of the "eligibles" but only 27 per cent of those selected for jobs.

Campbell is co-chairman of the Federal Management Personnel Project, the part of President Carter's government reorganization planning that aims at streamlining employment practices. The proposals he outlined to Carter are the work of that group.

Briefly, the proposals are these:

—Veterans who receive a five-point adjustment on their civil service test scores should be "in some way limited either in the length of their use of preference or in their ability to monopolize the 'rule-of-three' (whereby employers must pick veterans over better qualified applicants)."

—No preference benefits should be extended to potential "double dippers," — those who make a career of military service, then retire, collect their pensions and apply for federal civilian jobs in addition.

—Veteran preference during a personnel reduction should be limited. (Under present law, when a government office cuts back on personnel, veterans cannot be released while non-veterans remain on the job.)

—Veterans who receive a 10-point adjustment in exam scores, "should either compete as equals, once the 10-point advantage is given, or could be hired under a special appointing authority ... designed to deal, with their specific needs."

"Unlimited preference," Campbell said in his speech before the Legion's National Economic Commission is inconsistent with the notion of veterans readjustment, of fair competition, and of merit."

Jury still deadlocked

By DAVID GOELLER

BALTIMORE (AP) — For the deadlocked jury in the mail fraud-racketeering trial of Gov. Marvin Mandel, Saturday was a 10th day of deliberations. They had hoped it would be time for a reunion cookout.

Thinking their work would have been over by now, the seven men and five women on the U.S. District Court panel decided earlier in the case to spend the day around a barbecue grill.

Instead, they were back in the windowless room where they have been deliberating since Aug. 10 about the fate of Mandel and five codefendants. Last week, they told the judge they could not reach a verdict, but he sent them back to keep trying.

The likelihood that the deadlock would end soon seemed slight Saturday, after a U.S. marshal guarding the panel said at midday that the jurors would return at 9 a.m. Sunday.

On trial with the 57-year-old Mandel, a Democrat, are Irvin Kovens, his best friend; W. Dale Hess, former majority leader of the House of Delegates; attorney Ernest N. Cory Jr. and Hess' business partners, brothers William A. and Harry W. Rodmers III.

Mandel is accused of accepting between $300,000 and $400,000 in business interests, jewelry, cash, vacations, clothing and bonds from the five codefendants in exchange for efforts to get the 1972 General Assembly to legislate benefits for Marlboro Race Track, then allegedly owned secretly by the other five.

Mandel, Cory and Kovens face one racketeering count, the others two each. Racketeering is punishable by a maximum sentence of 20 years in jail, a $25,000 fine and confiscation of business interests used in the crime. Each man also faces 20 mail fraud counts, each carrying a top penalty of five years and $1,000.

Alaska oil flowing again

VALDEZ, Alaska (AP) — Oil tankers lined up to enter Valdez Harbor Saturday as oil began flowing again through the trans-Alaska pipeline.

The latest shutdown began Monday night when about 30 barrels of oil leaked into the main pump building of Pump Station No. 9 after workers apparently left three drain valves open. The pipeline reopened Saturday morning.

Sam Akin, a spokesman for Alyeska Pipeline Service Co., said most of the idle time was spent checking the pipeline to make sure "everything's the way they want it."

For the second time, human error was cited as the cause of a pipeline accident. Pump Station No. 9 was put into use several months early to replace Station 8, which was put out of commission by a July 8 fire and explosion which killed one worker.

Commissioners set hearing on budget

Midland County commissioners Monday are scheduled to hold a public hearing on the proposed $4,895,943 budget for 1978 and then vote on the budget.

The commissioners will meet at 1:30 p.m. in the courthouse.

The proposed budget is up $650,886 from the 1977 budget, but the tax rate was set Wednesday at the same 95 cents per $100 of assessed valuation. The assessment will continue to be based on 32 per cent of market value.

Also at Monday's meeting the commissioners are scheduled to consider adding two more voting boxes to Justice of the Peace Precinct 2.

In other business, the commissioners are scheduled to hear a report from Midland Soil and Water Conservation District conservationist Dick Hagelstein and then consider adopting a resolution to participate in the National Flood Insurance Program.

knocked out to provide larger rooms.

Most of the rooms will be private, Dorn said, with a small percentage being two-bed wards.

"A survey of patients in the past two to five years showed 95 per cent preferred private rooms," he said.

Doctors prefer private rooms for medical reasons, and private rooms are the trend throughout the country, he added.

In addition to private rooms, private bathrooms will be added to each room by hanging a prefabricated unit on the outside of the building, Dorn said.

By using the prefabricated units, he said, more patient and bed space will be provided in the renovated rooms. Also, plumbing will be in alignment on the building's exterior for easier repairs.

In addition to the practical usage, the prefabricated bathrooms, Dorn pointed out, will have a cosmetic effect on the present structure because they will be joined by concrete railings.

The need for handrails in the hospital's bathrooms was another reason Dorn cited for extensive renovation.

"We need to put handrails in every bathroom, and the present configuration of the walls will not permit this," he said.

Dorn said most of the walls cannot support the weight of patients using handrails. Studs would have to be placed in the walls so that handrails could be used, he said.

The need to widen doors to each room is another reason cited for renovation. "The widening of individual door frames is not economical," he said.

The trustees decided on renovating the present structure rather than building a new hospital, Dorn said, because the present structure is very solid and "extremely well built."

"It has stood for 30 years and there is no reason why it won't stand for another 300," he said.

The present facility, he said, is in the population center of the city, and is well located near main highways which serve Big Spring, Odessa, Andrews and communities to the south.

Dorn said preventing the waste of materials is another factor in deciding to keep the present structure.

"The material in older buildings is valuable, and it is time for the nation to attempt to conserve," he said.

Finally, Dorn cited cost as a reason for renovation rather than rebuilding.

"Remodeling versus rebuilding is 45 cents a square foot versus 75 cents a square foot," he said.

In order to disturb as few patients as possible during renovation, work will begin in the north wing of the original building on the third and fourth floors, which are empty, and the second floor, which is virtually empty, Dorn said.

Patients will then be moved to renovated areas so work may continue in other parts of the hospital, he added.

Reovation of and addition to the hospital are designed to meet the growing population of Midland, Dorn said.

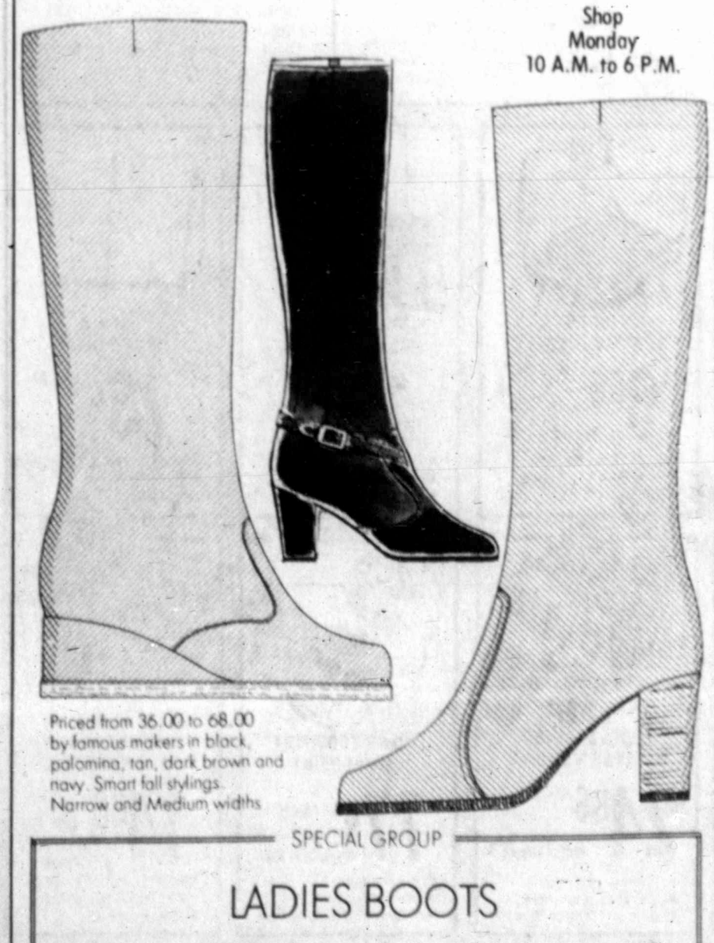

The addition, except for the critical care unit, will be capable of being expanded to three floors, which will bring it level to the present facility's roof, Dorn said. The critical care unit will be limited to only two floors, he added.

"We are looking to meet nearly double the present population, which should take us well into the 20th century," he said.

"We think we have allowed for additions to the medical staff, and we further believe we can furnish first class medical facilities under the present plan for the least amount of dollars or tax burden to the public," Dorn said.

At least three years of planning, Dorn said, has gone into the proposed renovation and addition.

Independent says U.S. will solve fuel woes

By ROB WOOD
Associated Press Writer

HOUSTON (AP) — A fast-talking Texas multimillionaire believes the United States "will muddle through this energy problem and have it all solved within 20 years."

But, George P. Mitchell, of the nation's biggest independent oilmen, has an even greater concern for the urban crisis and predicts, "It will take at least three generations to handle this one.

"If we don't act now down here in Houston, we'll see the inner city destroyed as in many other major metropolitian areas."

Mitchell, a balding bundle of energy and ideas, knows something about both subjects.

He says he has drilled more than 3,000 wells, discovered 100 oil fields and 125 gas fields.

Along with a $50 million grant from the federal government, he built a new city called The Woodlands, located on 20,000 acres, about the size of Manhattan, some 25 miles north of downtown Houston. With some 300 homes now sold, Mitchell envisions a community of 150,000 within the wooded, lake-dotted area, where black and white and brown will play together on the numerous tennis courts and on the lush 18-hole golf course, and meet to discuss community development projects.

"I want to transplant the disadvantaged and the upper and middle class into a new town where they can enjoy a better quality of life," he said in a recent interview.

"I want to provide jobs in this new town and I still want to us to be a part of Houston.

"Hell, there is a flight of the whites to the suburbs and this is destroying our cities. People work in the cities, live outside the cities, and contribute nothing. They are parasites on the big cities. We want The Woodlands to be incorporated into Houston. We want to pay our taxes to the city. How can a city survive if you have 100 political subdivisions surrounding it and doing nothing."

On energy, Mitchell is just as firmly committed to the future. "Give us 20 years and we won't have an energy problem in the United States. There is going to be a worldwide crisis, a lot more serious problem than has or ever will face this nation."

The son of immigrant Greek parents who made it on his own and a Texan without the cowboy hat or the fancy-stitched boots, Mitchell predicted that within the next two decades, "this nation will be almost self-sufficient in energy. That means we won't need much imported oil. We have the resources and the industry to solve the problem.

"Sure, the federal government is throwing up some road blocks in our energy development program. But, hopefully, Congress will come up with a compromise that will permit us to expand our role in the drilling of more wells."

Mitchell, 57, said another big problem facing the oil industry today is "that the American consumer has never really believed the industry. The reason is simple. The big oil firms, the so-called big seven, have been secretive, kept the information close to the chest.

"If the industry did it right, the companies would take the top men in their companies and make them the heads of the public relations departments. They don't have the real talent in public relations now. We are criticized by foreign countries and by our own Congress."

Mitchell, turning left, right and all-around in his big swivel chair, said American know-how had "saved Great Britain with the North Sea oil fields. If given the opportunity, Americans could have discovered their oil reserves years ago and

API striving to right bill passed by House

By CLYDE LA MOTTE

WASHINGTON — The American Petroleum Institute came out swinging last week against the energy bill passed by the House, but API carefully avoided aiming any of its blows directly at the White House or at Energy Secretary James Schlesinger.

The House made some changes in the legislation the Carter administration had originally proposed, but it adopted most of the Carter plan, particularly some of the provisions the industry found particularly undesirable, such as the crude oil equalization tax and the extension of federal price controls of natural gas to intrastate sales.

Schlesinger has said at various times in recent weeks that the oil companies are awash in cash flow, that the energy bill offers adequate incentives to stimulate domestic production and that the wellhead price producers get more here than they get overseas.

At a press conference last week, API's executive vice president, Charles J. DiBona, presented an opposite view: The bill reduces incentives to domestic producers rather than increasing them, domestic producers may be getting a higher wellhead price than abroad but their investments are many times higher, so the return per dollar invested is less, and that the bill as it now stands would actually reduce capital available for exploration and production — not increase it.

However, when he was asked whether Schlesinger is lying to or misleading the public with his statements, DiBona shied away from a direct answer.

He had said, in prepared remarks at the opening of the press conference, that "despite the intentions of its sponsors, this bill simply is not a comprehensive energy program. Rather, it is basically a tax bill."

Apparently it is the API strategy to avoid a head-on clash with the administration over the energy legislation. Thus, in the weeks ahead while the Senate has the bill under consideration, API will urge some major changes in the House bill but will not direct public criticism at President Carter or Schlesinger.

The feeling seems to be that with the President's popularity still high and Schlesinger in a position of power regarding energy-related governmental actions, it would be poor strategy to focus industry criticism on them or the statements they make.

There has been no indication of how directly involved President Carter will be in the energy debate during Senate discussion of the legislation, but the White House did exert pressure on Democratic House members. And the President has made it clear that he wants to have some of his original proposals that were changed or dropped by the House restored by the Senate.

A continuing point of controversy — and a point that will be stressed in the Senate debate — is over the issue of the emphasis or lack of emphasis on efforts to increase domestic energy production rather than relying primarily on conservation.

The Carter administration contends that its plan does this, while industry critics say it does not.

DiBona said last week that the House bill either ignores the key obstacles to expanding the supply of petroleum — exploration on the Outer Continental Shelf — or it adds obstacles.

"As it stands now, the House bill would do more harm than good to the national interest," DiBona said. "It would not solve the nation's imports problems, would not help increase domestic production and would not remove some of the major obstacles to energy growth and development in the United States.

The question is whether the public in general and the Senate in particular will listen to the advice of the White House or to the advice of industry.

Public opinion polls indicate a growing public awareness of the energy problem and some recognition of the need for action. However, there has been so much conflicting information there does not appear to be any clear-cut public opinion concerning a specific plan of action.

A showdown is at hand because if the Senate approves legislation similar to the House bill, the legislation will become law. Industry criticism of the plan or of the administration would at that point become moot.

Injection project set

AUSTIN — The Railroad Commission of Texas has approved the application of Cities Service Oil Co. to operate a gas injection project at an oil-producing unit in Gaines County that has been equipped for hydrogen sulfide service.

Authorization of the gas injection system to supplement an existing waterflood operation is necessary for the recovery of an additional 27.1 million barrels of oil at the Seminole, West (San Andres) unit in the Seminole, West field, Chairman Mack Wallace and Commissioner Jim C. Langdon said.

Senior Staff Engineer Willis C. Steed said the Cities Service operation is in compliance with the commission's Rule 36 which provides safeguards to protect the general public from harmful effects of hydrogen sulfide in oil field operations.

The field was discovered in 1948. A secondary recovery waterflood was begun in 1969.

Steed said the original oil-in-place of the 2,780-acre unit area is estimated to be 154 million barrels. Cumulative production is 22 million barrels and anticipated remaining life of the field is 25 years.

Cities Service engineers testified the injection of gas and water into the San Andres reservoir will increase the ultimate recovery from 22.5 million barrels to 49.6 million.

Denver City seeking gas

AUSTIN —Chairman Mack Wallace said the Railroad Commission of Texas has been asked by Denver City to aid the West Texas community in obtaining emergency relief of at least 15 million cubic feet of gas for the winter season.

Wallace disclosed that a staff inquiry into ways the commission could help Denver City in its petition to the Federal Power Commission already has started.

"I have directed our special counsel, Bex H. White Jr., to conduct a study to see if the commission can be of any assistance," Wallace said.

The request for commission assistance was conveyed to Wallace in a letter from Mayor Dan Harris of Denver City. Harris attached a copy of the petition of the Denver City Utilities for emergency relief to the FPC.

Denver City obtains all of its gas supply from El Paso Natural Gas Co., an interstate supplier subject to FPC jurisdiction.

Natural gas is the sole source of energy for Denver City citizens, Mayor Harris and five city councilmen stated in their petition.

The petition noted two quotas that the Denver City utilities system has set to conserve and reported "the citizens of this city have done an outstanding job of trying to conserve gas."

The document said Denver City use of gas in the summer of 1976 was 19,377,000 under the quota for the season. The 1976-77 winter quota was exceeded by 312,000 cubic feet.

The petition noted that Denver City citizens' response to requests to conserve gas through insulation and elimination of unnecessary usage of gas had been "outstanding."

Also, the petition stated, "this little city has grown since 1973 and is still growing and we must continue to grow as we are in an oil field area where people are producing oil and gas for the nation."

Denver City has added 75 to 100 more gas meters since the "very mild winter" in the quota-setting period of 1973-74, the petition stated.

By MAX B. SKELTON
AP Oil Writer

HOUSTON (AP)—The start of production from Alaska's Prudhoe Bay region halted a 12-year decline in domestic crude production.

Domestic output peaked with a daily average of 10,089,000 barrels the week ending Nov. 6, 1970.

That is a decline of 2,129,800 barrels a day or 21.1 per cent in less than seven years.

Including lease condensate, United States production set an all-time high of 9,637,000 barrels a day in 1970 and then began six years of decline.

Output dropped to 9,463,000 in 1971, 9,441,000 in 1972, 9,208,000 in 1973, 8,724,000 in 1974, 8,362,000 in 1975, and to 8,156,000 in 1976.

When production hit the weekly peak of 10,089,000 in late 1970, crude oil imports were averaging only 1,254,000 barrels a day and imported products were averaging 2,049,000.

Only 11.4 per cent of the crude being processed by domestic refiners at that time came from foreign sources. The combined average of 3,303,000 barrels a day for imported crude and products amounted to 22.4 per cent of domestic requirements.

At the time domestic production hit bottom last May, imported crude was averaging 6,653,000 barrels a day and foreign petroleum products were averaging 1,843,000.

Of every 100 barrels being processed by U. S. refineries, 44 came from foreign sources. Combined crude and products imports approximated 48 out of every 100 barrels consumed by American buyers.

In weekly processing reports from the American Petroleum Institute, foreign crude entering U. S. refineries broke the 4,000,000 barrels a day mark only once prior to the 1973-74 Arab embargo.

That level was exceeded eight times in 1974 and 28 times in 1975.

The 5,000,000 barrels a day level was broken in mid-1976. Refiners held their foreign requirements above that level until the daily average moved beyond the 6,000,000-barrel mark the last two weeks of the year.

Foreign crude requirements ranged from 5,789,000 to 6,964,000 barrels a day this year until mid-July when refiners mixed a record 7,079,000 barrels a day with their domestic crude receipts.

Two weeks later, another record at 7,162,000 barrels a day saw foreign crude accounting for 48 per cent of the total crude runs at domestic refineries.

The record level for total imports was set the week ending March 4 when crude and products averaged 10,292,000 barrels a day, including 3,686,000 in products.

Since then, requirements for foreign products have dropped below the 2,000,000-barrel level and combined crude and products imports have exceeded 9,000,000 barrels a day since early June.

Texas and Louisiana have been the major losers in the long decline in domestic crude production.

Production in Texas has dropped from 3,588,000 barrels daily to 3,164,000 since late 1970. Louisiana output dropped from 2,748,000 to 1,559,400.

California's output dropped from 1,027,000 to 973,000, while Oklahoma's dropped from 627,000 to 434,000.

Production in Wyoming declined from 438,000 barrels a day to 310,200, while that in Mexico dropped from 354,000 to 237,500.

Except for Alaska, Florida has recorded the sharpest increase, boosting its production from 9,000 barrels daily to 128,500 barrels a day.

Colorado boosted its output from 71,000 to 104,900, while Utah moved from 63,000 to 93,800, and Michigan moved from 32,000 to 90,600.

Other increases saw North Dakota move from 60,000 to 64,300, Arkansas from 48,000 to 52,800, Alabama from 20,000 to 50,000, and Ohio from 26,000 to 34,700.

Alaska's production was averaging only 240,000 barrels a day in 1970. By the time Prudhoe Bay's initial objective of 1,200,000 barrels a day is attained, Alaska's overall output could be pushing 1,500,000.

Plant sets safety mark

CRANE — Phillips Petroleum Co.'s Crane natural gas liquids extraction plant has completed more than 30 years of operation without an occupational lost-time accident.

The employe safety record began May 8, 1947, and is continuing. During the period, more than 1,585,000 man hours of work have been accumulated without a disabling injury.

"This exceptionally long record is due mainly to the traditional stress on safe-working practices by employes," E. T. Tipton, plant superintendent, said. "Employes have held regularly scheduled safety meetings, attended by safety experts, since the record-making period began."

The Crane plant, located two miles north of Crane, began operations in 1919. Liquids extracted from gas processed by the plant go to Phillips' natural gas liquids processing center at Sweeny.

A new division for doors and windows

Now you can have a green thumb twelve months out of the year with the "garden window" from Mid-West Door and Window Co., a division of Mid-West Glass Co.

This unique window extends twelve inches out into the sunlight giving your plants a "hot house" treatment. Open to the inside, plants are easy to arrange and to water. If ventilation is needed, the top opens any desired amount by a crank from the inside of the house. Adjustable shelves accomodate any size plant. This can replace present windows or be installed in a new home.

Mid-West Door and Window Co., located at 904 W. Front St., in Midland, has been created to carry a complete line of general aluminum windows, single hung windows, picture windows, garden windows and others. Also sliding doors and storm doors and screens. They feature full view storm doors and storm windows. With the installation of refrigerated air, many homes have replaced their present doors with storm doors, thus eliminating doors that allow cold air to escape. They also have a complete line of Anderson Window Wall and a large stock of bronze windows available in insulated glass.

Mike Smith, manager, can help you with your window or door problems. Call 682-4632 for an answer to your difficulties.

Texicana gains examiner's nod

AUSTIN, Tex. (AP) — Texicana Commuter Airlines has received the recommendation of a Texas Aeronautics Commission examiner for service between San Antonio and Austin, Waco, San Angelo and Corpus Christi.

Examiner Robert G. Cross also recommended that the commission grant Texicana's request to offer service between Austin and Waco.

However, he recommended denial for scheduled routes between San Antonio and Brownsville and Corpus Christi and Brownsville.

The final decision will be made by the commission.

Texicana plans to use two or three 19-passenger Swearingen Metro IIs. The airline proposed one-way fares of $25 on all routes except San Antonio-Austin and Austin-Waco routes which would be $15.

University to honor president of Freeport

George B. McBride of Midland, president of Freeport Oil Co. since 1965, will be honored by the University of Texas at El Paso as Outstanding Ex-Student during homecoming activities Sept. 29 through Oct. 1.

George B. McBride

A 1948 graduate of the university, with a B.S. degree in geology, McBride chaired the alumni committee which established the William Strain Fund to benefit his major department. He is a member of the Alumni Council for the Geological Sciences and of the Lloyd A. Nelson Memorial Professorship Committee.

He also is a charter member of the Matrix Society which provides an ongoing program of support for the university.

McBride began his career in Midland as a geologist with Standard Oil Co. of Texas. In 1949, he became district geologist with Texas Gulf Producing Co., and in 1951 joined Louisiana Land and Exploration Co. as division exploration manager.

He became chief geologist for that concern in 1954 in New Orleans.

He resigned from Louisiana Land to return to Midland to open an exploration office for the Oil and Gas Division of Freeport Sulphur Co. In 1960, he was named vice president of the Mississippi River Corp. in New Orleans.

Dowell racks up record

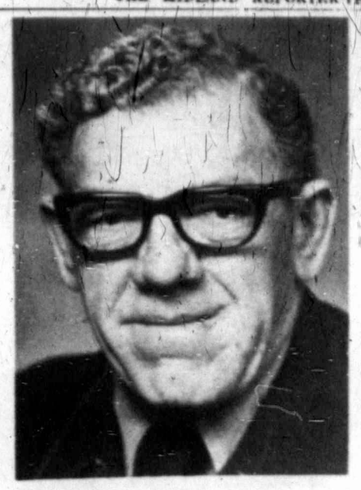

HOUSTON — Dowell Division of Dow Chemical U.S.A. last Monday achieved four million manhours with no disabling injuries, a record accomplishment for the division.

Working to reach this goal were 4,073 employes located at approximately 100 locations throughout the United States.

More than one-half of the employes in the division work in the field, operating approximately 540 automobiles, 670 pick-up trucks and vans, as well as 1,620 trucks weighing over one ton.

The equipment operators drive more than 42 million miles per year, operating more than 2,830 pieces of equipment, a Dowell official said.

The start of the record was April 1, 1976.

relieved that nation of its terrible economic pressures. We have conquered the seas and the oceans and the mountains.

"But just try to convince the consumer of that. The press of the Eastern United States has been totally anti-oil until the past year or two. Consumers and the press believed the oil industry was nothing but a big ripoff. You know our rate of return is about 14 per cent, right in the middle of the average of all the industries of this nation."

FEA schedules public hearing on exemption of motor gasoline

DALLAS — A public hearing on the "Proposal to Exempt Motor Gasoline from Price and Allocation Contols" effective Nov. 1, will be held in Dallas by the Federal Energy Administration, Curtis E. Carlson Jr., Dallas FEA acting regional administrator announced.

The hearing will be Sept. 7 and will continue, if necessary, to Sept. 8. It is scheduled for 9:30 a. m. in the Federal Energy Administration Training Room 250, 2626 W. Mockingbird Lane.

Any person wishing to testify should submit a request in writing no later than Aug. 26 to Susan Dickey, FEA, P.O. Box 35338, Dallas, 75235.

Telephone requests may be made to Ms. Dickey at 214 749-7626, but must be confirmed in writing.

Through the hearings and written comments, FEA seeks reaction to its preliminary conclusions that decontrol of motor gasoline and market forces are adequate to protect consumers.

Another preliminary conclusion is that motor gasoline is not now in short supply, and supplies should be sufficient to meet demand through 1979.

If FEA's preliminary conclusions are confirmed, it could submit a decontrol proposal to Congress, which would take effect if neither house passed a resolution disapproving the measure within a 15-day review period.

"As stated in the President's April 20 National Energy Plan, gasoline allocation and price controls are a major area of unsettled oil policy," said FEA Administrator John F. O'Leary in announcing the proposal.

"There is little question that gasoline allocation and price controls have distorted what at times has been a competitive market," O'Leary said.

O'Leary further noted that even if gasoline supplies are tight in 1979, it is still worthwhile to proceed with decontrol since the present allocation program is based on 1972 market conditions, which are now outdated.

"If we are required to reimpose controls because of supply shortages, the base period for allocations would be determined by more recent conditions," O'Leary added. "The purpose of the hearings is to gather other facts and views before submitting the final proposal to Congress."

The motor gasoline decontrol proposal is the fifth initiated by FEA under provisions of the Emergency Petroleum Allocation Act.

The earlier four decontrol measures, which took effect in 1976 included residual fuel oil decontrol June 1; middle distillate decontrol, July 1; a vairiety of special products, Sept. 1, and naphtha jet fuel exempted Oct. 1.

Dr. W. L. Fisher, director of the Bureau of Economic Geology at The University of Texas at Austin, will present the course from 7 to 10 p. m. Wednesday and from 1:30 to 4:30 p. m. and from 7 to 10 p. m. Thursday in the PBGC classroom in the basement of the Metro Building in Midland.

A spokesman for the graduate center said "it is now fairly well established that the Delaware, Val Verde and Marfa basins are rift related, making this subject of great interest to Permian Basin geologists.

Dr. Fisher received his M.S. degree in Geology from the University of Kansas and a Ph.D in Geology from the same university.

Langdon makes surprise bid

AUSTIN (AP) — The Railroad Commission of Texas has set September oil production allowable at its usual 100 per cent, but the flow won't be enough to meet oil company demands.

Except for two months last winter, the allowable has been at 100 per cent of market demand since April 1972.

The allowable will generate about 3.6 million barrels per day of production, but oil companies say they are willing to buy 3.9 million barrels of Texas crude daily in September, an increase of 1,167 barrels from August.

Commissioner Jim Langdon surprised the oilmen who were present for the allowable hearing by suggesting the routine monthly oil hearing be cancelled if the petroleum industry doesn't start using it as a forum for its problems.

"You know what it costs to produce oil and gas. I believe this message needs to be given every month along with your purchase nominations," Langdon said.

Dozens of oilmen, traveling on expense accounts, come every month. A handful read their companies' nominations, which the commission already has in writing. They hear the allowable set — no surprises there — and go home.

"I believe you ought to include how much your receipts have declined in the last 12 months from what you get from your normal sources," Langdon said.

Nominations by major oil purchases for September, in barrels per day and with any changes from August in parentheses:

Amoco, 332,500.

Amoco to set two platforms in Gulf

NEW ORLEANS, La. — Amoco Production Co. has announced it is preparing to set two adjoining, four-pile platforms in the Eugene Island area of the Gulf of Mexico off Louisiana to develop gas reserves the company has discovered there on two 100-per-cent-owned tracts.

The "Tampa" style installation (tender-assisted minimum platform arrangement) will be set on Eugene Island Block 322 and will be used to develop gas reserves beneath that acreage and adjacent Block 301.

The blocks lie about 120 miles southwest of New Orleans in about 235 feet of water.

In the "Tampa" style installation, one of Amoco's bridge-connected platforms will contain production facilities while the other 115-foot slot platform will be used for drilling. The platforms will be installed next month.

In making the announcement, R. S. Tremaine, Amoco Production vice president and New Orleans Division manager, said that development drilling will begin from the installation as soon after it is set as possible.

"Amoco is in the midst of an accelerated program to evaluate all our offshore tracts and to develop all commerical oil and gas reserves we find. Our intentions are to get those reserves to the consumer as quickly and efficiently as we can," Tremaine said.

Amoco Production recently announced plans to spend $157 million in 1977 and 1978 to further evalute leases in federal waters off Louisiana and Texas the company has acquired since 1973.

Amoco purchased the southern half of Eugene Island Block 301 in the March 1974 federal offshore lease sale for more than $31.1 million. The company acquired Block 322 in September 1970 for more than $1.2 million.

Councillor is also witch doctor

By DIANA LURIE
Copley News Service

JOHANNESBURG — When Johannesburg City Councillor Rae Graham is not engaged in civic matters with her municipal-minded colleagues, she's to be found sitting with equal dignity but in strange and, to us, macabre surroundings.

It all began when English-born Rae married a South African soldier and they moved to a Venda village.

"I lived with the tribe for 10 years and have studied the Venda people for 28 years," she said.

Her name among the Venda people is "Mashuda" — the Lucky One.

"I went into the blacks' homes and if they were cleaning skins, I asked if I could — there was no harm in them teaching me how to cure a skin. I can kill and skin an animal more quickly than most men," she remarks offhandedly.

She is the sole white member of the tribe and only one of two whites openly practicing her craft in the republic.

"There are three types of doctors," explains Rae. "One is a herbalist and 80 per cent of black women practicing in the republic fall into this category. The second group are the Mangomas."

She claims she and other Mangomas have the power to tell the past, present and future just by knowing the name — and having the person breathe on the animal bones used in this almost-occult experience.

"You just sit there. You don't speak," says Rae. "All you have to do is breathe on the bones which work as the medium into the seeker's soul and mind.

"When I first decided to do this work 18 months ago, I went to my husband who said it would be fine so long as I kept it as a study subject. He didn't want me practicing and my children were horrified."

She pauses, then goes on: "Of course, I wouldn't ever become the third type, which is a Sangoma. Whites don't have the same ability to go into trances, talk to spirits, use other voices.

"Confusing a Mangoma with a Sangoma is like mixing up a radiologist with a surgeon. For example: the Sangomas search for lost people; I, on the other hand, do what is called 'diving' and many whites, as well as blacks, believe in it."

In order to qualify, Rae had to undergo a long ceremony. As an anthropolgist, it helped her in her work.

Recalling her Venda inauguration ceremony, she says: "It started on a Saturday morning with lots of drumming. I had to dance with the other witches. My husband and some of my children attended, which was super because it was a very difficult emotional and psychological experience for me."

Eventually, it was time for her to do what is called for — kill the sacrificial goat.

She took a knife, and while two men held the goat's back and front legs she slit the bleating animal's throat with a quick move. By this time, all the family — with the exception of one strong-stomached son — had departed.

The goat's blood was then bled into a bucket, the innards removed, the liver kept separate, and Rae cut the most sacred bone — the goat's knee.

DR. NEIL SOLOMON

Sun exposure ages skin, induces cancer

DEAR DR. SOLOMON: Suddenly, this summer and last, all my friends are beginning to wear big straw hats on the beach and they're talking about watching it so they don't get too dark. It's a whole change from the "healthy tan" we were working so hard to get other summers, almost as though our lives depended on it. Just how much sun should you get? And what about vitamin D? Nobody says a word about needing that anymore.— Joan F.

DEAR JOAN: The amount of sunnning Americans have been going in for during the past 50 years has had two very unfortunate results. First, in case you are interested in your looks, it ages your skin by some 15 to 20 years. Second, it causes hundreds of thousands of cases of skin cancer.

In both instances, the damage is done by ultraviolet waves in the solar radiation. That is not the radiation which makes you feel hot. You do not feel UV radiation at all.

If you are a woman, you might say, well, I must have a tan so I will sunbathe for only an hour a day, and that won't do any harm. Of course, it won't do as much harm as two hours a day. But later on in life, when you are in your thirties or forties or, fifities, your skin will look much older than if you had not sunbathed.

If you don't believe this, compare the skin on the back of your hand to the skin on your thigh or any other part of your body that is not normally exposed. The difference is due to the sun's ultraviolet radiation.

If you must sunbathe, do it as little as possible. Start gradually so that your skin can build up the protection of a tan. And use plenty of some really good sunscreen—one that contains a scientifically proven ingredient such as PABA. Stay out of the sun during the four or five hours in the middle of the day. The sun's rays are then coming pretty straight down through the atmosphere and are less filtered than when they come in at a slant — as they do in the early morning and late afternoon.

There are more than 300,000 new cases of skin cancer reported every year in the United States, and most of these are caused by the sun. Fortunately, the great majority of skin cancers are not of the dangerous variety that spread. There are two varieties of these relatively benign skin cancers: basal cell cancers, which look like smooth, pearly little pimples that bleed periodically, and squamous cell cancers, that tend to be scaly.

Then there are about 10,000 cases of malignant melanoma, a virulent and very dangerous cancer that can kill you in a few months. This type is usually dark brown or black, and it often looks like or arises from moles. If you ever see anything like that, get to the doctor right away.

As to vitamin D, you don't need lots of sun in order to get enough. You get plenty of vitamin D in any good diet. Years ago, before milk was fortified, there were cases of vitamin D deficiency that were cured by a moderate amount of sunbathing. But those days have passed.

Cow's milk linked to disease, allergies, pediatrician says

EDITOR'S NOTE — "Drink your milk, dear." That familiar admonition from Mom should go, a pediatrician argues. He says cow's milk is natural only for calves, and links it to human disorders.

By BRIAN SULLIVAN

NEW YORK (AP) — Milk, the perfect food, the stuff that millions of mothers urge their kids to drink because it will make them strong, tall, and healthy — could there possibly be anything wrong with it?

Not just possibly, argues Dr. Frank A. Oski, a pediatrician and department head at New York State University, but definitely. And he's set out to prove his case in a book starkly entitled, "Don't Drink Your Milk."

"Isn't it time," he asks, "for the weaning of America?"

Milk — cow's milk, that is — is not natural, Dr. Oski contends, except for calves. For humans, especially infants and children, cow's milk is linked with iron-deficiency anemia; is a cause of cramps, vomiting, and diarrhea; can cause allergic reactions like nasal congestion, asthma, skin rash, chest infections including bronchitis, and may play a role in the origin of arteriosclerosis and heart attacks, Dr. Oski says.

His book, published by Wyden Books in August, was written with reporter John D. Bell. It includes a discussion of the politics of the milk industry, but its main focus is the medical aspect.

"I think this is a subject, the bad parts about milk, that should be brought to the attention of the public," Dr. Oski said in an interview. "The public is bombarded with the good things about milk continuously, so that it's part of the collective unconscious. When I see children all the time who are affected badly by milk, well, somebody has to stand up and say, 'Hey, wait a minute.' "

Taking allergic reactions to milk as an example, Dr. Oski says that 25 per cent of children who are fed cow's milk before the age of six months will develop one or more allergies. For those given cow's milk before 1 year of age, he says, 8 to 10 per cent develop allergies.

A spokesman for the National Dairy Council, Robert Kowalski, said, "Yes, milk causes allergies, there's no question about it." But he added that the majority of pediatricians place the estimate at 1 to 2 per cent, and that the allergy is outgrown at age 2.

"It's unfortunate that Dr. Oski has chosen to denounce milk drinking at a time when a number of nutrition surveys have demonstrated that many American diets are low on riboflavin, vitamin A, and calcium — nutrients abundant in milk and other dairy foods," Kowalski said. "Most health authorities still recommend eating balanced diets with foods from four basic food groups: milk, meat, fruits and vegetables, and grains."

Another anti-milk point made by Dr. Oski in his book is that the majority of the people in the world are "lactose intolerant." Lactose is the sugar in milk.

When the lactose in milk is consumed, it must be broken down by the enzyme lactase before it can be absorbed from the intestinal tract into the blood stream. But if the amount of lactose exceeds the capacity of the enzyme to break it down, the result in the intestine is a sense of bloating, gas, cramps and perhaps a watery diarrhea.

Dr. Oski said a study at Johns Hopkins School of Medicine showed that 15 per cent of all whites and 70 per cent of all blacks tested were unable to digest lactose. "Surveys of the world populations were begun and we now know that far more people are unable to digest lactose than are able to digest it," Dr. Oski writes.

The Dairy Council's Kowalski counters that no other researchers have come up with the same results as those in the Hopkins study. And he contends that checks with health department officials and others involved in providing milk for blacks and others held to be lactose intolerant failed to produce such evidence.

"Ideally," he writes, "the infant should be exclusively fed human milk for the first year of life. If this is not possible or desirable, then the infant should be fed a commercial formula for the first year.

"The infant should never receive cow's milk in an unmodified form. After the first year of life, the child requires no milk of any type. The child, like us adults, can thrive without cow's milk ever crossing his lips."

Dr. Oski also says it is possible for the infant and child to get enough calcium for the teeth and bones from other foods, such as spinach, sardines and other fish. "One helping of spinach contains as much calcium as one glass of milk," he writes.

Passengers pack Heathrow airport

LONDON (AP) — "We are bursting at the seams," an exasperated official at Heathrow Airport said Saturday as thousands of delayed travelers jammed bars and buffets in three terminals here.

At the height of the summer getaway, flights to U.S. and European points were running hours behind schedule because of a job action by air traffic controllers demanding higher pay.

Refusing to use flight log computers, the controllers were recording each flight by hand in a process that slowed air traffic in and out of Heathrow, the world's busiest airport outside of the United States.

"It certainly looks as though we are in for a very bad weekend," said a spokesman for British Airways, which canceled 36 of its 160 flights.

The British Airports Authority said service to New York, Boston, Montreal and Tehran were "badly hit" today as well as flights to most European cities. Even a move lifting nighttime restrictions on flights could not relieve the backlog.

Airport officials estimated about 100,000 passengers traveling through Heathrow were delayed on Friday. Gatwick airport just outside London also was affected by the slowdown.

Heathrow has been plagued for months by strikes of airport workers, most of them demanding a pay increase agreed to in June 1975 but frozen by the government's anti-inflation policy of wage controls.

WHAT'S YOUR LIFESTYLE?

When you start looking for a home consider carefully your lifestyle and your family's lifestyle. What does that mean? It means simply the things your family and you like to do and the way you spend your money. In other words, think about your hobbies, sports, interests, and leisure-time activities. This sounds quite obvious, yet many families sometimes tend to overlook these considerations.

For example, you might look at a home with a beautiful swimming pool. Swimming pool...an almost magic word! If your family loves to swim and spends a lot of time in the water, it would be an ideal home for you. But...suppose your family enjoys ping pong, dancing, playing pool and parties, and there's another home available with a huge rec-room? Maybe that one would be better suited for you.

Don't be dazzled by great features that really won't fit in with the way your family lives; instead choose a home that's "tailor-made" to your family's lifestyle. Remember, pictures are for display. Homes are for Living! There's an excellent chance that we have a home that fits!

Unusual church reflects denomination's roots

EDITOR'S NOTE — The only American Catholic Church in the world had an unusual beginning, and the denomination a somewhat bizarre founder. The story unfolds at a quaint adobe edifice built of earthquake rubble.

By HUBBARD KEAVY

LAGUNA BEACH, Calif. (AP) — A small adobe building reposes in the sun of this seaside village south of Los Angeles.

It is the only church of American Catholicism, a kind of stripped down Roman Catholicism begun nearly a century ago.

The spiritual leader of its small flock today is Archbishop Simon Eugene Talarcyzk, a Roman Catholic priest for a decade. He uses the liturgy adopted by the founder of the American church, which is the Roman liturgy virtually word for word. One sacrament, confession, has been dropped and its clerics may marry.

"As a Roman Catholic, I could not think as freely as I do now," Talarcyzk says. "I felt that I wanted to perform services for people without being constantly told by superiors what I could and could not do. It was a life strictly by the rule book, and I began to feel like a hypocrite. The life was too routine."

Talarczyk is the sixth successor to the man who built the church, Percy Wise Clarkson. Clarkson had been an Episcopal rector. For unfathomable reasons, he declared all of the property of his Episcopal church his own, and his bishop defrocked him. He switched to American Catholicism.

After being deposed, Clarkson's superior threatened suit, but a compromise was reached: he was given a piece of church property 24 feet wide and 60 feet deep. From the rubble of the Long Beach earthquake of 1933, Clarkson, by then a bishop in the American Catholic Church, and his followers erected this building, which is 17 feet wide and as deep as the plot. It has only 14 pews, seating three each.

Henry Brandreth says Clarkson taught "numerology and other strange superstitions." The signs of the zodiac in the tile floor indicate the diverse means of the searchers for truth.

Wrought iron gates separating the sanctuary from the nave (once hung between the barroom and the lobby of a hotel), the primitive paintings on the walls by itinerant artists, and the shabbiness of the turquoise carpeting project a feeling of honesty.

Joseph Rene Vilatte founded the American Catholic Church in Green Bay, Wis., almost a century ago. However, it apparently was not called that until he incorporated the church in Illinois in 1915.

A Parisian trained for the Roman Catholic priesthood, he sought solace in churches of several different nations, arriving in the U.S. in 1876.

He turned up in Green Bay in 1884 where an Episcopal bishop urged him to work as a lay missionary among the French people, both Catholics and Protestants. Vilatte urged them to ignore differences in doctrines and to unite and form one congregation. This was the start of his church.

Vilatte arranged to be ordained in the Old Catholic Church in Switzerland, which had broken with Rome.

Now a priest, he returned to this country, where he conducted services in Green Bay and Chicago for 40 years. During this period, he went on two strange errands. One was to Ceylon in 1892 to be consecrated a bishop in the Independent Catholic Church so he would have sanction to bless the oils essential to the administration of some sacraments.

Six years later, the capricious ecclesiastic went to the Vatican to seek a reconciliation. While in Italy, he compounded his erratic behavior by founding the National Episcopal Church in Milan. For this Rome excommunicated him.

Returning to America, he continued his career with the church he founded until age 80. He consecrated a successor and retired to his original seminary in France. He reached accord with Rome four years before his death in 1929.

Miami is the only other city to have an American Catholic congregation, but it has no church. As primate for the United States, Simon Eugene went to Miami recently to consecrate a bishop, but the man chosen by the board defected to another sect hours before the planned ceremony.

Talarczyk, an affable, soft spoken man of 49, says a high mass each Sunday for worshipers numbering as few as two. The average is 11, including last Easter's 50. The small attendance does not worry Talarcyzk, although he has taken out advertisements in a local paper.

"We are worker priests and do not have time to proselytize," the archbishop says. He is assisted by two priests, both of whom are in mechanical trades. With doctorates in canon law and divinity, Talarcyzk teaches English and the classics in public schools.

Campbell became a regular communicant "because I became frustrated in my own church. I was a Roman Catholic for 52 years, but the services have been so changed that I left mass feeling frustrated."

"It is a harbor for the harborless, where all can find hope and guidance," says Talarcyzk. "We preach the gospel, as did Vilatte, and not hell fire and brimstone. All God's children are welcome."

Center serves as command post for war on major forest blazes

By WILLIAM ENDICOTT
The Los Angeles Times

BOISE, Ida. — To the gray- and yellow-shirted fire fighters crowded into the small auditorium at the federal Interagency Fire Center here, James E. Moore delivered some less-than-encouraging words.

"Communication is poor," he said. "Visibility is poor. We're short of radios, short of tools, short of shelters, short of clothing.

"You're going to be tired. You're going to be sore. And you're going to be weary. But try to look at the bright side of it."

A reporter asked him later, "What's the bright side? You didn't say."

Moore, a fire-fighting specialist with the U.S. Forest Service, thought a minute, grinned and replied, "Well, I guess the bright side is that it could be worse."

From northern Alaska to Southern California, the drought-plagued West Coast is experiencing one of the worst fire seasons in years and it is through the fire center here that personnel and equipment are routed to wherever the need is greatest.

The center is a cooperative effort of five federal land-managing agencies — the Forest Service, the Bureau of Land Management, the Bureau of Indian Affairs, the National Park Service and the Fish and Wildlife Service — plus the National Weather Service. It is the only one of its kind in the nation.

Since a special fire emergency plan was put into effect here earlier this month, more than 6,000 fire fighters from 37 states have moved through the center to be briefed and outfitted before being dispatched to fires in Alaska, California, Oregon, Colorado, Utah, Nevada and Arizona.

For example, less than 30 minutes after Moore's briefing, 200 men from Wisconsin, Georgia, Kentucky, North Carolina and Idaho filed aboard a chartered Hughes Air West 727 jet to be airlifted to Bakersfield. There they were to be taken by bus into the Sierra to do battle with an uncontrolled blaze in the Sequoia National Forest.

Most were regular employes of state and federal forestry agencies, but not all were full-time firemen. Some were administrators. One was a soil scientist. Others were students. And there was a river ranger, Winfred Speed, who usually spends his time patrolling the Chattoga River on the border separating Georgia and South Carolina.

For their efforts, they will earn an average of $3.90 to $4.50 an hour, plus an additional 25 per cent in hazardous duty pay — and time and a half for overtime.

"I think this might be my last foray," said Ed Forrester of Webster, Wis., a crew boss for the men borrowed by the fire centers from the Wisconsin Department of Natural Resources. "This stuff is for young men." Forrester is 32.

"It's a strain on a family, too," he said, adding that he was trying to finish a dollhouse for his daughter's sixth birthday when he was called out. "I hope I get home in time to finish it." Her birthday is Sept. 15.

The germ of an idea for a centralized fire-fighting center probably was first planted shortly after the turn of the century when a series of lighting storms torched the tinder dry woods in Idaho and western Montana, eventually consuming more than 2 million acres, and killing 80 people before it was contained.

But it was not until 1965 that the fire center was established here, with all the sophisticated communications equipment and logistics experts necessary to coordinate fire-fighting efforts all across the country.

The center operates now with military-like precision. Its warehouse stocks everything from portable showers and fire-fighter's tools to duffel bags crammed with all the gear a fire fighter needs for an extended period on the fireline — sleeping bag, toilet articles, gloves, helmets, C-rations, mosquito repellent and chapstick for dry lips.

Briefings are like preparations for combat exercise; Moore told the fire fighters, "We don't know as much about the enemy as we really should and he doesn't always react as we think he should."

At the hub of the activity here is a room on the second floor of the administration building with a panoramic view of the Boise Municipal Airport and the southern Idaho desert. It is the "logistics support office," the command post where requests from fire bosses in the field are processed, planes are chartered and priorities assigned. It is staffed 24 hours a day, seven days a week during the peak fire season.

Early last week, John Russell worked from a desk in the middle of the room as the duty coordinator, juggling orders for equipment and men, parceling out assignments, dealing with unexpected emergencies.

"I've got a 727 charter coming in after 2100 hours down there," he said to a voice on the other end of the telephone, "and the Siskiyou County tower closes at 2100. I'd like you to get them to stay open because the charter won't fly if the tower isn't manned." He was assured it would be done.

The huge map on one wall is marked with big red X's, each X representing a fire, and next to the map is a large board on which each fire and its size is posted. Across the room, another board plots the location of fire-fighting aircraft.

Only four major fires still raged out of control — three in California and one in Colorado — and there was a corresponding easing of the tension. But a fire center official dispelled any notion that the worst was over.

"I can't say there's any relief in sight, looking at the big picture," he said. "We would need 4 inches of rain in a concentrated period to restore us to even near-normal conditions. That's how dry it is."

The man who has been director of the center for the last five years, Jack F. Wilson, said Boise was chosen as the location for the fire center primarily because "we're right in the middle" of the states where fire danger always is the greatest.

He is worried now that the reserve of fire fighters he can draw upon is running out. "Every day we're scrounging now," he said. "We're spread thin. I thought we were out four days ago, but we're still able to come up with crews."

A problem, however, is that as the Eastern and Southern states offer up more of their own personnel to fight fires in the West, they are "digging in to their own capabilities," said Wilson. "I just hope we get a little break to let us regroup for awhile."

Scoutmaster assessed 30 years for morals offense

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — A criminal judge says a former scoutmaster's remorse over having had sex with his scouts caused the judge to sentence him to 30 years in prison — instead of the maximum 175-year penalty.

Judge Oliver Schulingkamp sentenced Richard S. Halvorsen, 52, to the prison time on Friday. Two months ago Halvorsen pleaded guilty to five counts of indecent behavior and 11 counts of aggravated crime against nature involving five boys.

Schulingkamp had meted out sentences of up to 75 years to other defendants in the wide-ranging Boy Scout sex case but said that Halvorsen's remorse let him get off with a lighter sentence.

New Orleans investigators found several cartons of pictures of naked boys in the raid on Halvorsen's home which broke open the case. Officers said the information led them to a wide-ranging ring that stretched to the East Coast and the Mid-West.

Long budget delay ends

HARRISBURG, Pa. (AP) — The Pennsylvania Legislature has passed a $5.1 billion budget to end seven weeks of wrangling that had stopped payments to state employes and welfare recipients.

About 8,000 state employes had called in sick Friday to protest the budget delay.

The state Treasury Department kept its vaults open over the weekend and checks were to be processed immediately.

The bitterly contested budget passed the House 102-88 shortly after midnight after last-minute haggling over whether one legislator could vote from a hospital bed. Gov. Milton Shapp signed it into law 90 minutes later.

With the budget's passage, state employes and welfare recipients will again be paid.

Consumer price decline said limited in meaning

WASHINGTON (AP) — A White House spokesman says figures showing a moderate rise in consumer prices in July are good news, but have limited meaning in the long-term battle with inflation.

The Labor Department said Friday that overall consumer prices rose by four-tenths of 1 per cent in July. Grocery prices dropped by one-tenth of 1 per cent, the first decline since November.

"The moderate July increase in overall consumer prices does not mean we can relax about the inflationary problem," said Press Secretary Jody Powell. "The underlying rate of inflation did not moderate in July and is still rising at a rate above 6 per cent."

The underlying rate excludes food and fuel prices.

The July increase in consumer prices would amount to a 4.8 per cent annual inflation rate. In the first six months of the year, prices went up at an annual rate of 7.2 per cent.

The price index hit 182.6 in July, meaning it would take $182.60 to buy what $100 would have bought in 1967.

The grocery price decline was due mainly to lower prices for beef, poultry, pork, fresh vegetables, sugar and ground coffee. The decrease was expected because of lower farm prices posted during the past three months.

Black Africans plan off-Broadway drama

By PETER EISNER

NEW YORK (AP) — Four men run into a darkened New York theater, startling the audience with screams and shouts and lights that flash at times like the searchlights that follow a prison break.

"It looks more like Johannesburg to me."

The event is a play, entitled "Survival," performed by four South African actors. Raised in the the black ghettos around Johannesburg, they bring their vision of the prison they say exists whether or not a South African black happens to be in jail.

They have traveled in the United States for about eight months, invited to participate in a college tour. The play is scheduled to open Off-Broadway in September.

Inspired by American writings, such as the works of James Baldwin, Richard Wright's "Native Son," and "The Autobiography of Malcolm X," they view their work as a sort of consciousness-raising.

"We were in Soweto (the black ghetto of Johannesburg) last year and soldiers came to stop the play," said one of the actors, Themba Ntinga.

The show had been seen in Johannesburg and Cape Town by blacks and whites together. The actors say they would never perform for a segregated audience.

"A lot of whites came to the show not because someone said it's a happy show, but because they heard we are putting it raw on the stage," said Selaelo Maredi, who composed music for the play.

"When the (white) audience came backstage, they asked if they are going to be driven into the sea," said Ntinga. "That's very unfounded."

The actors say they see South Africa as a frightened place. Through a series of vignettes, their play deals not so much with violence as with the ironies of a system which they say denies their humanity.

Maredi, who is 34, Ntinga, 25, and Seth Sibanda, 24, say they all have been in prison. Fana David Kenana, 23, says he has avoided going to jail, except for minor cases of detention.

Under South African law, a prisoner may be held without trial, so that many of those in jail are at the mercy of South African security police.

A liberal Johannesburg newspaper, the Rand Daily Mail, estimates that since 1963, 42 persons have died in detention in South African jails. Of those, 18 nonwhites have died in the last year.

The actors say there are several black theater groups operating in South Africa. Theater halls are government-controlled and sometimes performances are done in churches.

The method of introducing music in Survival involves the four "prisoners" forming a singing group called "The Jailbirds." Laughter and song are used to contact the audience, just as they can be used by prisoners to survive their ordeal.

IS IT CURIOSITY or hunger that causes this 4-month-old kitten to poke its nose inside the rim of a goldfish bowl? Curiosity may have killed the cat, but it can't do more than wet this kitten's nose. If it is hunger the young feline will soon find that there are more accessible meals than this goldfish. (AP Laserphoto)

Carter immigration proposals worry Hill

By AMY KIDD
Austin Bureau

AUSTIN—Atty. Gen. John Hill admittedly has mixed reactions to President Carter's proposals to curtail illegal immigration into the United States. Hill says the administration finally is facing up to a major Texas problem without getting to the heart of the matter.

"Regardless of how we finally decide to deal with the present situation within our country," he comments, "we still have this problem of how to stop the flow (of illegal immigrants)."

In fact, Hill claims the Carter "amnesty" plan to offer naturalization to illegal aliens in the United States since 1970 may have encouraged even more illegal immigration northward from Mexico.

And even if the U.S. can figure out a way to curb the growing rate of illegal movement into the country, he says Texas' problems won't be solved without economic gains to the south.

"Beyond any question, the core problem is one of economics and one of poverty in Mexico. It think that's obvious to anyone who has looked into the problem," Hill notes.

Those conditions cannot be reversed by the U.S. alone, he adds, but job programs in border areas may be one way of heading off further economic decline that has pushed increasing numbers of Mexican citizens northward in search of financial gains.

"The new pipeline for oil coming into McAllen is a good example of what could help," he says. "We have to bear in mind that we can improve trade with Mexico in a lot of areas and we need to encourage that—because that's to our advantage.

"In fact, I think if we'll took south generally over the next several years and extend a hand of mutual respect and aid . . I think we'll realize we don't have any nation, anywhere, with which we need to foster cooperation more than with Mexico."

Meanwhile, Hill has taken a "wait and see" outlook on the effect of Carter's proposals, saying it's too early to tell how the plan, especially the amnesty provision, would affect Texas.

"I know it's a concept we don't readily grsp." We're not quite sure how its going to work administratively and we don't know how many people we're talking about. I'd like more details before making a final judgment," he says.

However, Hill says he appreciates Carter's bringing a proposal forward—a move many state and national leaders have beeen unwilling to make.

Egyptians planning livestock complex

BISMARCK, N.D. (AP) — Visiting Egyptian officials are leaving America's bread basket with some ideas on better ways to feed their people and with a tentative agreement to start putting those ideas to work.

Officials from the Upper Nile province of Giza and a nonprofit American corporation signed the pact — a statement of intention — here Friday to study and develop a 10,000-acre livestock complex in the Nile River Valley.

Gov. A. Abdul Akher of Giza signed for the Egyptians and Michael Saba of Bismarck, president of the private International Agricultural Pool, signed for the Americans.

North Dakotans from several groups and possibly experts from the University of North Dakota and North Dakota State University are to provide the expertise for the project. Egyptians are expected to provide the capital and the 10,000 acres, both officials said. Financial details were to be worked out later.

The signing came at the end of the business part of a 10-day Egyptian mission led by Akher. The Egyptian officials were returning a visit North Dakota Gov. Arthur A. Link and other state officials had paid them last year.

According to the agreement, the pool is to do a feasibility study and then complete the project. The agreement called for reclaiming and irrigating the land; producing beef, milk, eggs and chickens; developing a marketing program; and developing "a labor outlet ... for the local residents."

Akher and Link said the agreement was only the first result of the Egyptians' visit, adding negotiations could lead to further deals for North Dakota products.

"Some of these negotiations reached the stage of real business," Akher said.

He said the Egyptians were still interested in getting sunflower seeds to be processed into oil in Egypt. "No agreements have been signed ...more time and study is needed," Akher said.

Author Haley wins another doctorate

PROVO, Utah (AP) — "It always tickles me to get another doctorate because I never finished college," said author Alex P. Haley after receiving an honorary degree at Brigham Young University's summer commencement exercises.

Haley, whose best-selling book "Roots" traced his ancestors back through slavery to African origins, received the degree on Friday. He said he is "up over my ears in sequels" to the book, including "Search," which will chronicle the work in writing "Roots."

Haley told reporters he was surprised at being asked by many why he would want a degree from a Mormon school, since the Mormon church denies blacks its priesthood.

Fertilizer sales expected to drop

WASHINGTON (AP) — American farmers bought a record amount of fertilizer in the year ending June 30, but a top chemical corporation executive thinks the pace will decline by 5 to 7 per cent by next summer.

Fertilizer consumption, measured by the amount that left producers' facilities, rose five per cent in the year ending June 30 compared with the previous year, the Fertilizer Institute says.

A 16 per cent increase in deliveries of potash products, an 11 per cent rise in deliveries of phosphates and a 6 per cent climb in use of nitrogen products pushed the consumption totals above 51 million tons for the first time, the private association said.

Joseph P. Sullivan, a former board chairman of the institute and president of the Chicagobased chemcials division of Esmark Inc., however, predicted in an interview that consumption would decline next year to the 1976-level of between 48 million and 49 million tons.

One reason for the expected decline, he said is that corn growers who need rely heavily on fertilizer are receiving the lowest prices in five years.

Slightly offsetting that trend, he said, is "the fact that farmers and their bankers now have a higher certainty about the government's intentions in the way of price supports and such" because of imminent final action on new farm and food-aid policies through 1981.

Sullivan said he expects nitrogen-related fertilizer consumption to decline only slightly. Even though prices are rising because supplies such as natural gas are tight, nitrogen products were the only group of fertilizers to be in greater supply this July than last, the institute report said.

Sullivan said he estimates a decrease in phosphate and potash deliveries of between 5 and 8 per cent.

The increased production capacity for nitrogen-based fertilizers that was stimulated by high prices two and three years ago still has not been fully developed, Sullivan said.

Nonetheless, U.S. farmers will become much more dependent for nitrogen in the 1980s on imports from Russia, Canada, Mexico and Venezuela, he said.

U.N. committee asks more time on hostage treaty

By WILLIAM N. OATIS
Associated Press Writer

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. — A United Nations committee set up to draft an international treaty outlawing the taking of hostages has failed to meet its first deadline and is asking the General Assembly for an extension into 1978.

The 34-nation Ad Hoc Committee on the Drafting of an international Convention Against the Taking of Hostages was established last Dec. 15. Its orders from the 1976 General Assembly were to "make every effort" to present the text of a treaty to the 1977 session, scheduled to open Sept. 20.

The panel ended its three-month first session Friday without having approved any treaty language.

As expected, the main drawback has been the volatile nature of the subject. As one observer put it, "One man's hostage taker is another man's freedom fighter."

West Germany initiated the hostage effort and proposed a treaty text. Other countries have put forward a dozen amendments. Discussion so far has not gone beyond the first few articles in the 14-article text.

On its last day, the panel adopted by unanimous consent a report that spoke of "some progress," and a West German resolution recommending that the assembly "request the Ad Hoc Committee to continue its work in 1978."

The West German delegate, Ambassador Ruediger von Wechmar, said he was "highly satisfied," and convinced the assembly will grant an extension.

The German text applies only to hostage taking on an international scale. It would require a country that had ratified the treaty to prosecute or extradite anyone that detained another person to force action from a state, international organization or corporate body.

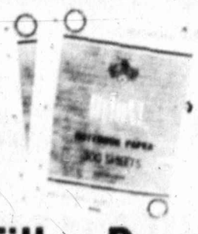

Algeria, Guinea, Lesotho, Libya and Syria proposed amendments to exempt hostage taking by U.N.-recognized liberation movements "in the process of national liberation" from colonial, racist and foreign rule, and a Syrian amendment added "foreign occupation."

The amendments apparently were aimed at the Palestine Liberation Organization (PLO) which has been recognized by the United Nations and has observer status in the world body. Palestinian guerrillas have taken hostages on numerous occasions, usually to try to force Israel to free Arab prisoners in its jails.

The same countries, upset over Israel's 1976 airborne invasion of Entebbe airport in Uganda to rescue Israeli hostages from pro-Palestinian guerrillas, proposed an "Entebbe clause" to ban the threat or use of force against any country on grounds of hostage rescue.

South Africa eyeing new political scheme

PRETORIA, South Africa (AP) — A plan for sharing limited political powers with Indians and people of mixed race — but not blacks — is reported under consideration by South Africa's white government.

Prime Minister John Vorster and several cabinet members met privately last week with community leaders representing the Indians and the "coloreds," as people of mixed race are called, to discuss the proposal.

No specifics have been announced, but the plan, as pieced together from newspaper accounts and government sources, proposes separate parliaments for South Africa's 4.3 million whites, 750,000 Indians and 2.5 million "coloreds."

There are no provisions to bring South Africa's 18 million blacks into the new system, despite growing pressures on the white minority to offer a greater political role to the black majority.

Blacks hold political rights only in their nine rural homelands — or tribal reserves — that constitute 13.7 per cent of South Africa's land area.

The ethnic parliaments would have full autonomy over the affairs of their own people, but the existing all-white parliament would retain control in issues of national concern — like defense and foreign policy. The white parliament would also keep certain constitutional veto rights, including the power to dismantle the new political arrangement if it finds it necessary.

The council, according to some reports, would be formed on a proportional basis of four whites for every two "coloreds" and one Indian.

Fired executive turns on Bell

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — An Internal Revenue Service investigation into tax matters related to Southern Bell Telephone Company's political slush fund may wind up with the government giving a reward to the man who disclosed the existence of the slush fund, the Charlotte News said Friday.

But the Charlotte Observer quoted sources close to the case in its Saturday editions as saying any reward for the man was "not likely."

Meanwhile John J. Ryan, who revealed a scheme of corporate political contributions by Southern Bell after he was fired as head of the company's North Carolina operations, says, "Firing me was the biggest mistake they ever made."

The News said it had learned that the IRS is investigating whether there were tax violations in the operation of the slush fund. The agency may pay Ryan, who lives in Charlotte, the standard reward given to individuals who supply such information, the paper said.

A spokesman for the IRS declined to comment on the report, citing federal laws which prohibit the IRS from confirming or denying that an investigation exists.

At Southern Bell's parent company, American Telephone and Telegraph Co. in New York, spokesman Larry Coffin said that he had no knowledge of a special audit by the IRS. Local Bell officials declined comment.

If the IRS decides Southern Bell falsified tax returns because of the slush fund and owes back taxes, Ryan could earn up to 10 per cent of the amount collected in back taxes.

Ryan, Southern Bell President L.E. Rast of Atlanta and three other top executives are scheduled for trial early next year on charges stemming from the political slush fund. The five were indicted two weeks ago by a local grand jury, and Ryan was also charged with embezzling money from Southern Bell.

All five men have denied all the charges.

Ryan was fired from his $64,000-a-year job in 1973. In 1975, he told newspaper reporters that Southern Bell had operated a political slush fund.

The company eventually admitted the existence of the fund, saying corporate money was channeled into political funds through falsified expense vouchers. Ryan has said he had no involvement in falsified expense vouchers.

The News quoted a Charlotte tax attorney as saying if the slush fund came from fake pay raises, as Ryan said it did, then tax returns filed by AT&T would have illegally reflected false wages.

Ryan, 57, now lives in a tiny $100-a-month apartment and works for a placement service, finding jobs for management executives.

In an interview with the Charlotte News, Ryan said there is no phone in his apartment because he fears it would be bugged.

Reasons for Ryan's dismissal have not been made clear. In recent years, he and his wife have divorced, he has had difficulties finding jobs and his standing in the community has vanished.

"We had a five-bedroom house," said his 22-year-old son, Jack. "We belonged to the Carmel Country Club, the Capital City Club in Atlanta, the Olde Providence Racquet Club. We each had a car. Now we (his father and another brother) own a Vega. Mutually. And it doesn't run."

Ryan said he had felt he had an obligation to disclose the existence of the slush fund.

"When you write this, tell them John Ryan was near enough to the bomb that when he lit it, he knew the explosion would hit him. But tell them the target was worth it," he said.

"Bell thought I wouldn't talk to reporters because I'd be incriminating myself," he said.

When Ryan first talked about the fund in 1975, he charged that Bell department heads received special raises with the understanding that part of the money was to be kicked back to the political fund.

He said he knew such kickbacks were illegal, but that they were part of corporate life.

The newspaper stories prompted a series of local, state and federal investigations resulting in indictments against 11 Southern Bell executives last year. But the indictments were dropped when the company took responsibility for the executives' actions.

Eckstine nears 64

"We were known for our bebop," Eckstine said of the 1940s swing group carrying his name that included singer Sarah Vaughan, saxophonist Charlie (Bird) Parker, and trumpeters Dizzy Gillespie, Roy Elridge, Miles Davis and Fats Navaro.

Chimney sweeps making comeback

EDITOR'S NOTE — Folks in Boston's suburbs have been startled lately by the appearance of some unusually costumed chaps, performing a service little needed for decades.

By DANIEL Q. HANEY

WELLESLEY, Mass. (AP) — They might have stepped out of the novels of Charles Dickens — merry men in top hats and tails prance atop suburban chimney pots.

These fellows are chimney sweeps. Their smudge-faced smiles and wire bristle brooms are visions from a bygone century. The high price of oil is bringing them back.

Among the enterprisers moving into this old craft is Rick Osburn, 24, a student at Harvard Business School. He has combined the whimsy of Olde English garb with this necessary but filthy housekeeping chore to build a brisk business in the suburbs west of Boston.

In these well-off towns, the chimney sweeps pull up for work in a battered station wagon. Out they step in glorious black top hats, black vests, black jerseys and long black tails. And around their broad grins, their faces, too, are sootsmeared black.

"People see us in these outfits and they come running out with cameras," Osburn says.

One of the sweepers, Michael Lawrence, has cleaned about 300 chimneys since the company began work in February. Summer is a good time for chimney scrubbing.

"You have to be an electrician, mechanic, steeplejack, gymnast and Hercules," Lawrence said.

While the customers stare, he lays heavy cloths on the floor in front of their fireplace. Then he dons a facemask and goes at the chimney with a wire bristle broom.

Using flexible steel rods for a handle, he pushes the broom to the top of the chimney. Clouds of soot and creosote billow down and are sucked up by a vacuum cleaner. Then with his hands and a heavy brush, Lawrence scrubs everything he can reach.

Sometimes he hits an obstruction and has to climb onto the roof and scamper up the chimney. Perched there, he pushes brooms down through the opening.

Osburn and Lawrence lecture clients on the dangers of chimney fires. These occur when the built-up creosote ignites. Flames shoot 10 feet above the roof. Such fires can damage the chimney and even burn down the house.

The firm, called Master Chimney Sweepers, charges $40 to clean one fireplace and flue. It began as a way for Osburn to work his way through business school, but has grown so fast that he says he may keep it going after graduation.

So far, Osburn employs three sweepers and hopes to hire two more. His company cleans chimneys in 12 suburban towns.

DIRT, SQUIRT, QUIRT

Cukes don't cross with cantaloupes

By CHARLES GREEN
Midland County Extension Agent

The hot, dry weather in the West Texas area continues to take its toll of squares and small bolls on cotton crops. Generally, West and Northwest Midland County have suffered the most from drought. Several dryland plantings in those areas may not be economically feasible to harvest.

Bollworm activity is on the increase, but spotty, in the parts of the area that have been fortunate enough to receive showers and have more tender growth. We expect a heavy egg lay to occur over the next three weeks. Cotton that is heavily moisture-stressed and "cut out" in growth will likely not be bothered by bollworm.

With hot summer conditions continuing to persist, cattlemen should pay particular attention to water for beef cattle. Beef cattle should have an abundant supply and wasy access to water at all times. In large pastures waterings should be developed so that an animal does not have to walk more than one-half mile to water.

Mature cattle will consume an averge of about 11 gallons of water per head per day, with younger animals requiring proportionally less. Water requirement is influenced by several factors, including rate and composition of gain, pregnancy, lactation, activity, type of ration, feed intake and environmental temperature. The amount of water includes the moisture contained in forage plants.

At an average temperature of 40 degrees F., 0.37 gallon of water is needed for each pound of feed (dry matter) consumed. As the temperature rises, the water required per pound of dry matter intake increases by the following amounts: 50 degrees, 0.40 gallon; 60 degrees 0.46 gallon; 70 degrees, 0.54 gallon; 80 degrees 0.62 gallon; and 90 degrees, 0.88 gallon.

A dry cow weighing 800 to 1,000 pounds consumes 12 to 14 pounds of dry matter while on a maintenance ration. A cow in the same weight range and her three-to-four-month-old calf consume 20 to 24 pounds of dry matter per day. Using these figures a rancher can quickly determine how much water is herd consumes every day.

A common question received by county agents from gardeners is, "Will cucumbers and cantaloupes cross." Although they are closely related, both are in the Cucurbitaceae family and the genus Cucumus, they are each in a separate species. Cucumber is in the species satinus and cantaloupe is in the species melo var reticulatus. The separate species is the major reason cross fertilization does not occur. It is for all practical purposes, impossible to obtain natural crosses between plants in different species except as done by plant breeders in some breeding programs.

Pollen from one species can and likely does come in contact with flowers of the other species but genetic or other differences prevent the fertilization process from occuring. It is not necessary to separate cucumber and cantaloupe fields to prevent crossing. If cucumbers or cantaloupes are misshaped, of peculiar flavor or otherwise of poor quality, the reasons are environmental and not genetic.

While we are on the subject it might be well to mention a common mistake in the naming of the cantaloupe. What we call cantaloupe is actually muskmelon. The true cantaloupe is Cucumus mello, var. cantalupensis. It is a fruit with a warty, scaly and rough rind and is not grown in the United States.

A Sheep and Goat Field Day will be held at Texas A&M Research and Extension Center, San Angelo, Sept. 1. The program begins with registration at 9:00 a.m. and will include the latest information on what is happening on sheep and goat research at the center. All area producers are invited and encouraged to attend.

New FBI director will face challenges of public image

By SANFORD J. UNGAR
Special to the Washington Post-Outlook

Frank M. Johnson Jr., a U.S. District Judge from Montgomery, Ala., is President Carter's choice as new director of the FBI. (AP Laserphotos)

When a 29-year-old Justice Department lawyer named J. Edgar Hoover took over what was then known as the Bureau of Investigation in 1924, he faced a fearsome task. The Bureau was corrupt; it spent too much time investigating the political views of citizens; its public image was dreadful. For the most part, Hoover dealt effectively and methodically with those problems, building the agency into a position where it enjoyed unique national (and worldwide) esteem.

Ironically, the same kind of challenge now confronts Frank M. Johnson Jr., the federal judge from Montgomery, Ala., who is President Carter's choice to take over the embattled FBI in January. Although there have been two acting directors (L. Patrick Gray III and William Ruckelshaus) and one full-fledged director (Clarence M. Kelley) since Hoover died in 1972, the problems created by Hoover during the second half of his 48-year reign still remain to be solved. The public standing of the Bureau and the morale of its agents are probably as low as they have ever been.

The very dwindling of the FBI's reputation with the public and the slippage of its enormous constituency on Capitol Hill make this an opportune time for Johnson to take some bold steps. If confirmed by the Senate, he will have a 10-year term, but he will have to move quickly to rescue the Bureau from Hoover's legacy.

Hoover encouraged a no-holds-barred attitude that led men of the law to break the law — wiretapping civil rights leaders, opening the mail of political dissidents, and disrupting the personal lives of those it investigated. Even after Hoover, in his dotage, ordered such practices to stop because he was afraid they would cause the FBI embarrassment, well-trained minions kept them going; now some of those minions, whether retired or still in the Bureau, find themselves under investigation.

Gray and Kelley, too, ordered an end to improper and illegal tactics, but there have been indications that some lower officials — accustomed to the need to distinguish between what the director said and what he meant — kept up the wiretapping, buggings and burglaries until fairly recently. When FBI agents themselves could not get away with the tactics, or didn't want to run the risk, they simply had their confidential informants or friendly local policemen do the dirty work for them.

Rank-and-file agents, especially the younger ones, will be looking to Johnson for strong leadership in this area. They want him to establish clear investigative standards and then enforce them strictly, making a severe example of those who insist that nothing has or can be changed. At the same time, they need to have confidence that their new director is fully aware of what happened before and capable of coping with the manipulative Hooverites who still occupy many of the top positions in the FBI and have a vested interest in covering up. (Kelley acknowledged at one point that he had been deceived by some of his key aides, but said he could not figure out who was responsible.)

Yet the agents also want Johnson to demonstrate sympathy for the plight of John Kearney, a retired supervisor from the New York field office who is the only person indicted so far in connection with abuses committed during the search for radical fugitives in the late 1960s and early 1970s. They hope the new director will confront his old friend, Attorney General Griffin Bell, and demand that others be indicted soon or the case against Kearney be dropped. If Kearney alone ever goes to trial, there is a serious prospect of work stoppages or other militant protests by agents in the field.

For an organization that portrays itself as the paragon of virtue and integrity, the FBI is also plagued by an absence of standards for personal behavior. The recent revelation that agents in Las Vegas may have accepted improper favors from casino owners with ties to organized crime is only the tip of an iceberg. For years, agents in many field offices have received low-interest mortgages from banks, cut-rate prices from automobile dealers and special breaks from other businessmen who might have occasion to depend on the Bureau to solve crimes. A new director, particularly one who has had to worry about codes of judicial ethics for the past 22 years, is in an ideal position to institute reforms.

It is also high time for the FBI to have a statutory charter to set out its exact jurisdiction and govern its operations. To this day, most of its responsibilities and procedures are spelled out pr ly in presidential executive orders and informal directives, which could theoretically be repealed, modified or drastically expanded athe whim of a president or an attorney.

As the Senate Intelligence Congress recognized (but has been slow to move on), the Bureau desperately needs to have these matters spelled out in clear, precise language. There has never even been a high-level debate since World War II about whether the FBI should be involved at all in the areas of counterintelligence and "internal security;" since it was already involved, it simply stayed there, defining many of the threats and fears for itself.

Recently, Bureau officials have tended to throw the entire problem to Congress, saying in effect, "You tell us what to do, and we'll do it." As a newcomer, Johnson will be in a unique position to assess the FBI's capabilities in these fields and to help Congress and the Executive Branch develop a sound charter.

For decades, Hoover insisted that there was no such thing as organized crime. When he did reluctantly admit that some kind of syndicate must be at work, he would take only scant steps to combat it, preferring the investigation of stolen-car cases and others that provided impressive statistics which the Bureau could shovel up to Capitol Hill as evidence of its effective use of federal funds.

Kelley, like Gray before him, took strong steps to restructure the FBI's investigative priorities, and now the Bureau pays much more attention to cases involving organized crime, white-collar crime and official corruption. Even so, the trend needs to be further encouraged and extended to some field offices that have resisted the change. (Neil J. Welch, special agent in charge of the Philadelphia field office, a man who probably would have become director if Johnson had not taken the job, has set an example by assigning vast teams of agents to work on major breaking cases, letting less urgent ones slide temporarily.) Some agents who handle organized crime matters also complain that the Bureau's interest is still superficial — that it overlooks Mafia activity in black and Puerto Rican neighborhoods, which are considered too dangerous for FBI agents, and instead concentrates on arresting all the small-time numbers runners it can find.

Kelley may himself be sorry that he instituted a "quality-over-quantity" approach to criminal cases. It has apparently led Justice Department budget analysts to argue that since the Bureau's caseload has dropped, its funds should be cut. Johnson may find that the FBI does not need all the money it gets, but not because it is opening too few meaningless cases.

The new director will probably discover early on that a fair percentage of the 20,000 people who work for the FBI still consider J. Edgar Hoover to be their boss; his views of life and politics still govern them. The fact that many of those people are in the highest ranks creates an enormous personnel problem, and it means that most rank-and-file agents, who do the FBI's work on the streets, have little respect for the top leadership of their agency. They cannot understand, for example, why Kelley kept James Adams — who is known to have signed his name as a "witness" to a forged signature of Hoover's long-time aide, Clyde Tolson, on Tolson's will — in the No. 3 job in the Bureau. Or why Kelley rewarded, rather than punishing, at least four Old Guard stalwarts who flatly refused to carry out his new policy of "openness" toward the press. (Three of these men still serve as special agents in charge of the Boston, Baltimore and Los Angeles field offices; the other has the fourth-ranking job in the FBI.)

Agents hope that Johnson will discover a way to stop filling the most important jobs in the Bureau with people whose main qualifications are surviving and maintaining close ties to the Hooverites who control the personnel office. (Kelley was generally given three choices for each post, but all of them were men who were guaranteed not to rock the boat.) For some slots the new director may have to bring in outsiders if he wants to be sure of achieving control over operations, but he should also consider skip-promoting junior people in the ranks whose intelligence and outspokenness had previously hurt their careers.

One significant gesture would be to give the job of associate director to Welch, a veteran agent who is popular among young agents and who displays skepticism — indeed contempt — toward the bureaucracy at FBI headquarters in Washington. The feud between headquarters (which Hoover used to call the "seat of government") and the 59 field offices is one of the Bureau's most serious problems. Johnson will undoubtedly think himself back in the courtroom when he discovers that a special agent from the Midwest and an assistant director who has spent most of his career at headquarters give him opposite advice on the same question, such as how to handle a kidnaping case. The field office view is generally more up-to-date and reflects the realities of investigative life, yet Kelley has tended to listen to the people he sees every day at headquarters. The new director may want to consider eventual transfers to the field for anyone at headquarters who has been there for at least 10 years or who still has at least 10 years to serve before reaching the FBI mandatory retirement age of 55.

Hoover was always cautious about letting his agents investigate narcotics cases, in part because he feared that they would be corrupted. He thought the Bureau was just perfect with the scope it had. Yet Gray and Kelley both proposed that the FBI incorporate the Drug Enforcement Administration. Johnson would be well advised to put all such views aside, at least until the Bureau has its own house in better order. Among other problems, DEA has suffered serious corruption in its own ranks and its agents are not as well trained as those of the Bureau.

Instead of entertaining such empire-building schemes, the new director might concentrate on improving relations between the FBI and other federal law enforcement agencies. One way to start would be to make available to them the excellent facilities of the FBI Academy at Quantico, where many of the assigned Bureau agents now literally spend much of their time fishing and rowing.

Although Kelley made progress on the issue of FBI relations with the press, once he finally found some agents who understood the press, the Bureau still too often weighs what will help it politically and bureaucratically before making information available to the public. It focuses most of its press releases on the Ten Most Wanted list, routine crime statistics and the often banal speeches and testimony of the director. Other members of the hierarchy and some of the most knowledgeable special-agents-in-charge are rarely even introduced or identified to the press, let alone permitted to speak for the FBI at the national level. As a character-building experience, it might be useful for the Bureau to distribute information about, and encourage portrayals of, some of the cases it has NOT solved, so that the rest of society can help figure out why. (One of Kelley's most popular moments among the rank-and-file came when he declared publicly that the FBI was "stumped" in its search for missing newspaper heiress Patricia Hearst.)

As a man with a well-established record in the field of civil rights, Johnson may find that he has trouble with the agents. After years of ignoring civil rights cases, Hoover was forced into pursuing that area during the Johnson administration, and virtually every field office now has a squad whose job is to pursue complaints of police brutality and other alleged civil rights violations. But many agents have resisted, arguing that the pursuit of every complaint is a waste of time, especially since so few of them are prosecuted by the Justice Department. Agents also do not like to risk alienating the local policemen who are essential to the solution of most Bureau cases.

The new director might want to take a look at the FBI's own internal record on issues or discrimination against minorities and women. Substantial progress has been made since the days of Hoover, who was an overt bigot and thought that women could not do an agent's job. But the numbers are still small (139 black agents and 70 women agents), and there is restiveness in the ranks about discriminatory recruitment procedures which seem to be aimed at producing the same old standard "regular guys" favored by Hoover.

Because he is such a close friend of Attorney General Bell, Johnson will also have to treat carefully around the old question of the Bureau's relationship with the Justice Department. The independence fostered by Hoover, who was more powerful than any attorney general under whom he served, is not a good model, but neither is the record of Gray, a politician at heart, whose undoing came when he destroyed documents related to the Watergate investigation on orders from the White House.

Bell's immediate predecessor, Attorney General Edward Levi, moved in the right direction — to supervise the Bureau much more closely. Yet more can be done. Johnson may, for example, want to invite the Justice Department to participate in the "inspection" of FBI field offices, so that process becomes less of a token bureaucratic maneuver than it has traditionally been.

The new director might also want to consider some of these unsolicited bits of personal advice:

—Look closely at everything that was done in the last six months before you take over. The Old Guard, still firmly entrenched, is horrified at the prospect of another outsider in the directorship and will have strengthened their own positions as much as possible. They have money left over in this year's budget and are about to make some 1,500 personnel transfers; that may be one method they use to keep control over key jobs.

—Beware the flatterers. They will try to drive you everywhere you go, make your life easy for you and tell you how wonderful you are. Don't let them polish your car so often. (Kelley, once a humble man, has taken recently to complaining, Hoover style, when his car in Kansas City is not shiny enough.) Keep a list of your faults in your pocket and look at it from time to time, to remind yourself that the director of the FBI is human.

—Don't let them put your picture up in all the field offices next to that of the President. Despite the Bureau's tendency to treat you that way, you will not be the second most important person in the world. Discourage all such remnants of the cult of personality.

—Cut down on ceremonies. Everyone celebrating his or her 13th anniversary of service with the FBI need not have a picture taken in your office.

CUSTOM HOMES YOU CAN AFFORD
Created to give you the most for your money, these Capp homes offer efficient floor plans for maximum living space. And every model is an exciting design you can customize to fit your lifestyle, your family and your budget.

FINISH-IT-YOURSELF AND SAVE THOUSANDS
The solution to an affordable dream home is in your hands. By doing the finishing work yourself, you'll save thousands of dollars compared to the cost of having a contractor build the same house on your lot. And you'll end up with a lot more home than you thought possible.

WHAT WE DO, WHAT YOU DO
Capp will custom-build on your foundation according to Capp specifications. We install interior partitions, exterior doors and windows. Then we'll enclose your home and supply you with all the quality finishing materials you've selected from Capp. Do as much of the finishing work as you like—the more you do, the more you save. And even if you hire someone else to help—you still come out ahead.

FINANCING—WE CAN HELP
Your Capp Representative can assist you, whether you use your own lender or Capp financing sources. If local financing is not available, a small deposit can get you started with Capp. If you own your lot and meet our minimum qualifications, you're all set.

CAPP HOME PLANNING GUIDE—FREE!
Act now. Get a quality built home for under $22,760 and save. See how the Capp Finish-It-Yourself House™ can fit your dreams . . . at a price you can afford. Call your Capp Representative today for our FREE, 96 page Capp Homes Planning Guide. Or send the coupon. Discover "Finish-It-Yourself" . . . it's the only way.

*Prices shown are for the house semi-constructed on your lot and foundation and includes materials to finish the interior. Stairs and local taxes, landscaping, septic tanks, sidewalks, driveways, masonry, brick, stone, certain appliances and paint are not included.

Strock to Moore combo bombs Dallas Cowboys

DALLAS (AP) — Miami quarterback Don Strock hooked up with running back Nat Moore for a touchdown passes of 56 and 69 yards to lead the Dolphins to a 20-14 National Football League exhibition game victory over Dallas Saturday night in Texas Stadium.

Miami was down 14-13 in the fourth quarter when Strock nailed Moore on a swing pass that Moore lugged 69 yards for the score. Bob Griese's kick put the final point on the board.

Dallas had scrambled to the lead after Strock and Moore connected for first blood in the opening period. With kicker Garo Ypremian out with an injury, Griese tried the extra point and failed.

The Cowboys got back in it near the end of the first half as Preston Pearsoncracked over from the one. Efren Herrera's kick made it 7-6 Dallas.

After the kickoff, Strock tried to hit Freddie Solomon with six seconds left in the half. Dallas strong safety Charlie Waters intercepted, then lateraled to free safety Cliff Harris, who carried it in for a 28-yard touchdown and the 14-13 Dallas lead.

Solomon dropped one at the Dallas 10 with the nearest Cowboy five yards away. Later, another Strock aerial sailed through defender Bennie Barnes' hands and bounced harmlessly off Moore in the Dallas end zone.

Miami is now 3-0 and Dallas drops to 1-2 in exhibition play.

Three-run homer hangs loss on Midland Cubs

BY TED BATTLES

Midland's Cubs muffed an opportunity to put some daylight between themselves and the pursuing pack when Tony Castillo whacked a three-run homer to give the Amarillo Gold Sox a 5-4 victory in the opener of the five-game Texas League series at Cubs Stadium Saturday night.

As a result, the Cubs found themselves back in the pack, so to speak, in a flat-footed tie with San Antonio for first after the Dodgers beat El Paso, 6-3, and only .002 percentage points in front of El Paso.

The loss was bad enough, but the Cubs were still blushing as though they had been caught walking out of the shower. The pitcher who beat them, Rod Leisle, had never pitched before.

WELL, ACTUALLY he pitched five innings in relief earlier this year.

"I hadn't pitched since my high school days in Fresno (Calif.) at Bullard High and my Babe Ruth days," he said after limiting Midland to four hits in a seven-inning stint.

The 21-year-old, four-year pro baseball vet had been an outfielder and infielder throughout his career, but a rash of sore arms created a crisis on the Gold Sox staff and Manager Dave Campbell called for volunteers.

"I guess you could call me an 'Emergency pitcher', I throw hard and have pretty good stuff so I tried it."

Karl Pagel hit a first inning homer, with Kurt Seibert who had walked on base. It was Pagel's 28th of the season and leaves him just one short of the Midland club record.

"I WASN'T too loose in the first," said Leisle, "and I guess I just laid the ball in there for him."

Tony Castillo, who hadn't hit a homer since July 10, unloaded on Midland's Darrell Turner, 12-7, for a three-run blow to highlight a four-run sixth and give the Gold Sox their victory margin.

One run was already in as a result of Steve Smith's run scoring single and runners were on first and second when Castillo came up.

"The first two times up he threw me fastballs over the plate and I took them," Castillo explained. "This time I was waiting for it when it came."

Castillo's fifth round trip was gone all the way. "I felt as though I got all of it. It was a fastball inside-black."

THE CUBS had won seven straight over Amarillo before Saturday's loss and made a bid to pull it out in the ninth. Scott Boras doubled to the left-center corner, moved to third on Tony Pepper's grounder and after Duane Gustavson walked, scored on Seibert's fly to left off reliever Mark Lee, who was looking for his ninth save. When Buckner walked, there was still hope, but Lee got Joe Hernandez on a bouncer to short for the force at second.

Pagel and Boras combined for hits in the fourth to give Midland a 3-1 lead after Paul O'Neill hit a solo homer in the top of the fourth, his fifth circuit blow of the season.

CUBPRINTS — Jeff Albert, 7-11, will be Manager Jim Saul's pick for tonight's 7:30 p.m. game while Rusty Gerhardt will go for Amarillo.

Gerhardt is 4-7 for the season with three losses to Midland. Albert is 1-2 against Amarillo...Steve Davis missed his second game of the season as a result of leg cuts suffered in a collision at home plate in El Paso, but is expected back soon. Seibert, playing shortstop, turned in the save of the game in the second with a diving catch into the dirt toward third to nab Smith's liner. It was a big play since the bases were loaded and only one out at the time....For Amarillo, Gene Quirk turned his back on Jimmy Buckner and raced to the wall in center to commit larceny for the Gold Sox.

Cowboys' life can be lonely

By BOB DILLON
R-T Sports Writer

IRVING — He appeared to be a lonely person, all six-foot-nine inches of him, as he slowly dressed in the Dallas Cowboy dressing room Saturday night.

Ed "Too Tall" Jones, Dallas' great defensive end, seemed discouraged. "At times the defense played well. But then we made a lot of mistakes in blowing that one to the Dolphins."

Jones, who tips the scales at 265 pounds, played well — well enough in fact that Coach Tom Landry feels he's on his way to becoming All-Pro someday in the very near future.

"It would appear that Jones is about to emerge as one of pro football's dominant figures," Landry said. "In his first three exhibition games he's been almost uncontrollable. I think you'll notice Jones more and more in the future. He was certainly in evidence out there against Miami, as he was against San Diego and Seattle."

Jones is very soft-spoken, despite his size. Most of the other Cowboys were awfully quiet and dressed slowly, even though it was only a 20-14 exhibition loss.

Defensive co-ordinator Ernie Stautner is high on Jones. "Too Tall" lines up on the strong side of the line most of the time. In that role, he is expected to stack up bodies, which he does quite well. That's one reason he doesn't get as many traps of the quarterback like Harvey Martin and Jethro Pugh," added Stautner.

Stautner went on to say that Jones is very important to what they're trying to accomplish on defense.

Jones defelcted one pass and was in on five tackles and six assists during the game played in steamy weather, before more than 56,000 fans.

Ldndry felt there were some good points to the game, one being the two-minute drive led by quarterback Roger Staubach just before the first half ended.

"We were very sharp and everything clicked on that drive," he said. "After that, we put our rookies in, and in the second half, everything went to pot."

Landry went on to say that the big plays hurt Dallas on defense, and again, like last week, they made the long pass plays pay off.

"Tony Dorsett ran well, along with Larry Brenson, and Drew Pearson caught the ball well for us."

Landry went on to say he didn't start Bob Bruenig at middle linebacker because the big guy was suffering from a sore leg, but thought Bruce Luther played well in his place.

Landry defended guarterback Danny White's performance, saying that the youngster didn't have any protection, and his timing suffered because of it.

GAME HIGHLIGHTS: The hardest hit of the game came in the first period, when Cowboy Thomas Henderson blasted Freddie Solomon on a punt return, nearly knocking his head off. . . The best broken-field play was turned in by a large orange cat while the teams were warming up. Attendants finally coralled the quick moving kittie. . . Biggest applause, besides the two Cowboy touchdowns came when the Dallas cheerleaders came onto the field.

Paul Rice joins Mustang gridders

DALLAS (AP) — An assistant basketball coach and a Lewisville, Tex., running back are the latest additons to Southern Methodist University teams, the school announced Saturday.

Mike Jaccar, a former SMU guard who now plays with the Texas Rangers' farm club at Asheville, N.C., was named an assistant basketball coach. He will assume his duties after the current baseball season.

Paul Rice, a three-time all-stater who gained more than 5,000 yards in high school, joined the SMU football team in practice Saturday. He had initially signed a letter-of-intent with SMU in 1974 but instead went to Southern California and then later to Ranger Junior College.

Corpus loses world series

FARMINGTON (AP) — Independence, Mo., burst loose for 7 runs in the final inning to surprise defending champion Corpus Christi, Tex., 8-6, Saturday in a first round game of the 1977 Connie Mack Baseball World Series.

A two-run double by Butch Coats was the big Independence blow in the inning. It moved the team into a 6-5 lead.

Brooks Robinson may hang up golden glove

BALTIMORE (AP)—Brooks Robinson, often called the greatest third baseman in baseball history, may end his spectacular 20-year playing career with the Baltimore Orioles within a few days.

The Baltimore Sun reports that the official announcement of Robinson's retirement from the active roster is expected soon.

According to a story in the Sunday editions of the Sun, the decision was apparently made last week.

Earlier in the season, the 40-year-old Robinson had said that he expected to finish the season in his present capacity as a player coach.

But Saturday he said, "I'm sure they'll ask me to be a fulltime coach, and if they ask me, I'll do it."

Orioles general manager Hank Peters had no comment on the prospect of Robinson's retirement Saturday, but said a statement from the team might come Sunday.

Robinson analyzed the situation. "They've got a roster problem and they're in a situation right now where they have to do something. If I were them, I'd ask me to be a fulltime coach."

Robinson's retirement would make room for catcher Rick Dempsey, who is ready to come off the disabled list. Dempsey has been sidelined with a broken bone in his left hand since July 9.

Doug DeCinces is now the Orioles regular third baseman, and Robinson has been used sparingly this season.

Robinson, who has spent all or part of the last 23 seasons in an Orioles' uniform, called his retirement, "no big deal."

"I was going to retire anyway, so now I'll just do it a month and a half early."

In 1964, Robinson was named the American League's Most Valuable Player. He also dominated the 1970 World Series with a string of incredible fielding plays, for which he received the Most Valuable Player award.

He won 16 straight Golden Gloves awards at third base from 1960 to 1975.

With the exception of Ty Cobb, Brooks Robinson has played more games than anyone in American League history—a total of 2,896.

Looking back, Robinson said, "Everything's been fantastic. I couldn't ask for anything better than it has been. I never dreamed I'd accomplish all I did."

Chicago thumps Oilers

HOUSTON (AP) — The Chicago Bears scored touchdowns on a pair of crucial fourth-down plays, a two-yard pass from Mike Phipps to Johnny Musso and a one-yard plunge by Roland Harper Saturday to beat Houston 14-10 in a National Football League exhibition game.

The loss extended the Oilers' exhibition losing streak to nine in a row over the last two seasons. Houston is 0-3 this year while the Bears jumped to 3-1.

The Bears, who last week upset world champion Oakland 20-13, took a 7-3 halftime lead on Phipps' flat pass to Musso on fourth down after the Oiler defense had held for three downs inside the two.

Houston came back on its next series with a 30-yard field goal by Skip Butler and took a 10-7 lead in the third quarter on a 22-yard touchdown pass from quarterback John Hadl to tight end Jimmy Giles.

But the Bears offense produced again in the clutch in the fourth quarter with the winning touchdown on Harper's plunge that came again on fourth down.

The score was set up on a 40yard pass from quarterback Bob Avellini to wide receiver Bo Rather. Houston's defense again stiffened for three downs forcing the Bears to win it on fourth down.

Hadl drove the Oilers 69 yards to the Chicago 19 in the final minutes before the drive bogged down and Butler missed a 37-yard field goal attempt that would have narrowed Houston deficit.

Key plays in the drive were a 13-yard pass by Hadl to rookie Rob Carpenter, a 17-yard pass interference penalty against the Bears' Mike Spivey and a 13-yard double reverse by Billy Johnson.

Chicago's defense then held throwing Carpenter for a one-yard loss. Houston drew an offside penalty on third down and Hadl then threw two incomplete passes.

Giles and Hadl combined for a 31-yard pass in the final minute that gave Houston one last chance at victory. Giles' catch gave Houston a first down at Chicago's 28. But four straight incomplete passes by Hadl once again killed Houston's chances.

White Sox acquire Cards' Kessinger

CHICAGO (AP) — The Chicago White Sox acquired shortstop Don Kessinger from the St. Louis Cardinals Saturday in exchange for two players to be named later.

The deal was announced immediately after the conclusion of the Brewers-White Sox game in Milwaukee.

Kessinger is expected to help fill some of the leaks in the Chicago defense. Starting shortstop Alan Bannister has hit well all season but has committed 30 errors.

North says first tour win has to come someday

HARRISON, N.Y. (AP) — Andy North, holding a solid, three-stroke lead, takes a philosophic view of the chances for his first pro golf tour victory Sunday over the last 18 holes of the rich Westchester Classic.

"It's just something that's going to happen sometime," the lanky North said Saturday after taking command with his six-under-par 65.

"If it happens tomorrow, that's fine. If it doesn't happen tomorrow, that's fine, too.

"All I can do is go out and try to shoot a decent score.

"I've been in this position before, been in position to win, and I tried to force it and I couldn't play at all. You can't force it, can't force the birdies. All you can do is play your best and try to let it happen."

North's third-round effort unlocked the biggest tangle of players tied for the top in this decade and made him the man to catch in the event that offers a total purse of $300,000.

The 6-foot-4, 27-year-old North, who has yet to win in five years of tour activity, started the day one stroke behind a group of seven players who shared the lead—the largest number of men tied for the top since the first round of the 1969 PGA National Championship.

He swept by them all with a five-under-par 31 on the front side, then had to work hard to make it stand up with an erratic back nine over the hilly, windswept, 6,603 yard Westchester Country Club course.

North, stopping occasionally to do some calesthenics to ease his stiff back muscles, finally finished with a 201 total, 12 under par.

"I played very, very well over the front nine," he said, "and then just kind of hung on. I was very fortunate to get it in as well as I did."

He missed five of the last nine greens but one-putted to save par on four of them.

Tom Weiskopf and big Howard Twitty put on closing rushes to tie for second at 204 with 18 holes to go in the chase for a $60,000 first prize. Weiskopf closed birdie-eagle, lashing a two iron second shot to within five feet of the flag on the final hole, and Twitty finished off birdie-birdie-birdie. Each had a two-under-par 69.

Next came a group of four at 207, six under par. They included Tom Watson, winner of both the Masters and British Opens this season, former Master title-holders Charles Coody and George Archer, and Mac McLendon. Watson and Archer had 68s, McLendon 70 and Coody 72.

Thompson, Twitty, Weiskopf and Coody all started the day in a tie for the lead with Rod Curl, Miller Barber and Jim Wiechers, all of whom drifted back in the pack. Wiechers and Barber had struggling 73s and three round totals of 208. Curl was 74-209.

Jack Nicklaus shot 68 but was an all-but-impossible 12 strokes back at 213. Johnny Miller had 69-208. Defending title-holder David Graham was out of it at 72-217.

In addition to his stretching exercises, North carried a sweater with him, which he draped over his shoulders between shots to warm the muscles in his chronically-ailing back.

"It's such a screwy game," he said. "The last three weeks I felt great, was really wanting to play. I played horrible, missed the cut in all three tournaments.

"I came here overly tired, not feeling very well, and I'm leading the golf tournament. I can't explain it."

He played the two nines as if he were two different people. On the front side, he didn't miss a green, three times getting his approaches inside of five feet and made those putts for birdies, holed another from about eight feet and dropped his longest of the day, a 15-footer, for still another birdie. He was five-under-par for those nine holes and had five "3's" on his card.

But he was lucky to save par on the next two holes, missing the green on each, then finally making bogey on the 12th.

"I was lucky to get out of that stretch only one over," he said. North managed a 12-footer for birdie on the next hole, missed the green on two of the next three but chipped close to save par on both.

Minnesota continues AL slide

BLOOMINGTON, Minn. (AP) — Ken Singleton belted a tworun home run while Ross Grimsley and Dennis Martinez combined on a six-hitter to carry the surging Baltimore Orioles to a 6-2 victory over the sliding Minnesota Twins Saturday.

Grimsley, 12-6, who has won his last three starts, was removed after giving up a leadoff walk to Minnesota's Jerry Terrell in the eighth as Baltimore won its eighth game in 10 starts.

Denver Broncos punch Atlanta

ATLANTA (AP) — Craig Penrose fired a 28-yard touchdown pass to Riley Odoms and Chris Pane set up a field goal with a 40-yard punt return as the unbeaten Denver Broncos downed the Atlanta Falcons 10-2 in a National Football League exhibition game Saturday night.

It was the third straight victory for the Broncos and their first ever over the Falcons in Atlanta, where they had dropped one preseason game and two regular-season outings previously.

Penrose's scoring strike to Odoms came with only 5:58 left in the game and clinched the victory. It ended a six-play, 56-yard march that also included a 21-yard pass from Penrose to Odoms.

Pane's 40-yard punt return came in the opening period, carried to the Falcons' 41 and set up a 25-yard field goal by Jim Turner with only 1:16 left in the quarter.

The Broncos had stalled early in the field goal drive, faked a 52-yard attempt and had Norris Weese connect with Odoms on a 19-yard, fourth down pass for a first down at the Falcons' six.

Atlanta, 1-2, was limited to a safety for the second straight week, scoring it late in the third period when Robert Pennywell tackled Steve Spurrier in the end zone.

Steelers whip Jets

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. (AP) — Terry Bradshaw threw two touchdown passes and Roy Gerela kicked a pair of field goals Saturday night as the Pittsburgh Steelers beat the New York Jets 26-13 in a National Football League pre-season game.

Bradshaw played the first and fourth periods of the game, completing 13 of 16 passes for 125 yards. The two touchdown passes were 17 yards to Lynn Swann midway in the first quarter and 16 yards to Frank Lewis with one second to go in the period.

Gerela's 44-yard field goal at 2:27 of the second period widened Pittsburgh's lead to 16-0. The Jets cut it to 16-10 at the half on Richard Todd's one-yard quarterback sneak and Pat Leahy's 31-yard field goal.

The team traded field goals in the second half with Gerela connecting from 20 yards out in the third period and Leahy hitting a 35-yarder in the fourth quarter.

Then Reggie Harrison locked up the victory, scoring on a 10 yard-sweep with 5:20 to play.

Tampa Bay ends streak

TAMPA, Fla. (AP) — Tampa Bay ended a 19-game losing streak Saturday night when Eddie Williams' one-yard touchdown run gave the Buccaneers a 10-7 National Football League preseason victory over the Green Bay Packers.

Tampa trailed 7-3 with 8:33 to go when Williams went over the Packers' left side for the winning touchdown.

Tampa had not won since beating the Atlanta Falcons 17-3 in the 1976 preseason during the Bucs' expansion year.

The victory gave the second year Bucs a 1-2 record, the same as the Packers.

Green Bay took the lead 7-3 late in the third quarter when backup quarterback Randy Johnson passed 28 yards to wide receiver Ollie Smith for a touchdown.

Before a crowd of 49,045, Tampa turned a fumble into the winnning touchdown. Linebacker Richard Wood recovered running back Terdell Middleton's fumble at the Green Bay 32. Seven plays later, Williams scored.

Saints nip Bills, 20-17

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Tony Galbreath plunged over from the one-yard line, giving the New Orleans Saints a 20-17 victory over the Buffalo Bills in a mistake-filled National Football League exhibition game Saturday night.

Bobby Scott, the third quarterback used by the Saints, set up Galbreath's score with a 40-yard pass to wide receiver Larry Burton.

The touchdown, which gave the Saints a 20-10 lead with less than three minutes to play, became critical moments later when backup quarterback Ken Johnson hit reserve running back Curtis Brown with a 53-yard scoring play for the Bills.

Earlier, the Saints scored on Rich Szaro's first and fourthquarter field goals of 48 and 20 yards and an 11-yard touchdown pass from Archie Manning to tight end Henry Childs in the second period.

The first two Buffalo scores came on a six-yard pass from Joe Ferguson to wide receiver Bob Chandler in the second quarter and a 47-yard field goal by Tom Klaban in the fourth quarter.

Buffalo was plagued with turnovers, including a fumble in the end zone and an interception on the Saints' five in the second quarter and another fumble on the New Orleans 12 in the third period. The Saints also blocked a Bills' field goal attempt in the second quarter.

Chargers rip Giants

SAN DIEGO (AP) — James Harris threw two touchdown passes and Don Goode scored on a 34-yard interception return in the final seconds, leading the San Diego Chargers to a 29-17 National Football League preseason victory over the New York Giants Saturday night.

Harris fired a 45-yard scoring bomb to Charlie Joiner on the first play of the second quarter, shortly after the Chargers' Louie Kelcher had sacked New York quarterback Steve Ramsey in the Giants' end zone for a safety.

Joiner's score gave San Diego a 9-3 lead and the Chargers led the rest of the way in raising their preseason record to 2-1.

Austin holds off Laura Baugh

WHEELING, W.Va. (AP) — Scrambling to a par 72 by overcoming some admittedly poor putting, Debbie Austin held a two-stroke lead over LPGA glamour girl Laura Baugh following Saturday's second round of the $50,000 Wheeling LPGA Classic. She had a 36-hole total of 139.

Miss Baugh, perhaps the best-known player on the ladies' circuit despite the fact she has yet to win in five years on the tour, fired a two-under par 70 for a total of 141. A shot back of Miss Baugh was another non-winner, Kathy Farrer, one of two golfers to shoot three-under-par 69s on a bright sunny day over Oglebay Park's rugged Speidel course.

Jan Stephenson also fired a 69, tying U.S. Women's Open champion Hollis Stacy and Joyce Kazmierski at 143. Miss Stacy, shooting an erratic round that included five birdies and five bogeys, had a 72, while Miss Kazmierski salvaged an eagle three on the par-five, 450-yard 18th hole for her 73.

Tied at 145 were Bonnie Lauer, Gloria Ehret and Debbie Massey. Miss Ehret shot a 70 over the par-72, 6,150-yard Speidel layout and Miss Massey fired a 71.

Miss Austin, seeking her fifth tour victory of the year and third in the past four weeks, said her play from tee to green Saturday was almost as good as Friday's, when she shot a 67. But she said difficulties with her putting almost ruined her round.

"I felt loose off the tee like I did Friday, but I just didn't have that great putting feel again," said Miss Austin, who hadn't won on the tour in nine years until she started putting her game together earlier this year. "I had to make a 20-footer on No. 14 (a 460-yard par five), but that was about the only big putt I made all day."

Plimpton seeks racing thrills

BRIDGEHAMPTON, N.Y. (AP) — First he was a quarterback with the Detroit Lions. Then he turned to pitching in an All-Star game at Yankee Stadium. That was followed by a stint in the ring with Archie Moore, then the world light-heavyweight boxing champion.

But George Plimpton, author-athlete, has not done it all. That is why he spent three days at the Bridgehampton Race Track in order to become a qualified driver for the pro-celebrity match race to be staged at Watkins Glen, N.Y. on Oct. 2 in conjunction with the Grand Prix of the U.S.

There is more.

Four days after his 10-lap race that is offering a purse of $7,000 for charity, Plimpton will don the mask and pads of a goalie and work the nets for the Boston Bruins in an exhibition hockey game against the Stanley Cup champion Montreal Canadiens.

"I've always been aware of what it takes to drive an auto from my days of working with Jackie Stewart on a television special," said Plimpton. "I've kept notes ever since that experience and auto racing has always held my interest.

"The drivers push themselves to the limit of their ability. Nothing else ever gets in their way. I'll never get to that point, but I figured if I were going to write a book about racing, I had better find out how to drive a car."

With that in mind, the 47-year-old Plimpton trained under the direction of Jacques Couture of the Jim Russell International School of Auto Racing.

He alternated between a Formula Ford and a Toyota Celica and emphasis was placed on engine speed, proper braking, turns, downshifting and coming out of turns at a high rate of speed.

"I learned one thing," said Plimpton, "and that is it takes total and absolute concentration. You can't let your mind wander for a single second."

Celebrities entered in the race at Watkins Glen include Pete Conrad, the former astronaut, Dick Smothers and Shelly Novak, a star of the FBI television series.

Drivers are Bobby Unser, Bill Simpson, Steve Krisiloff and Elliott Forbes-Robinson.

The money-winners will be allowed to designate their own charity.

"I'm not a thrill seeker by any means," said Plimpton, who was also a stunt man in the movie Rio Lobo in which John Wayne shot him.

"All I want to do is gain experience in both auto racing and hockey so that I can write or report intelligently.

"I'm going to another track (St. Cavite in Montreal) shortly for some additional training. I'm also going to the Bruins' pre-season camp and work in the nets."

SMU to rely on true grit

DALLAS (AP) — Southern Methodist University won three football games last year on true grit.

The talent-shy Mustangs parlayed a gung-ho spirit into victories over Texas Christian, North Texas and Arkansas with a narrow miss against Texas.

The cold hard facts are that SMU is going to have to take that wild-eyed attitude into the 1977 season because there's no depth and waterbug quarterback Ricky Wesson is gone.

SMU gets the privilege of meeting Woody Hayes and his Ohio State legions Oct. 1 in Dallas.

And that little match against North Texas at Texas Stadium Sept. 17 isn't going to be a mild firefight what with former SMU Coach Hayden Fry hankering to hang a number on his old employers who beat him 38-31 last year.

SMU Coach Ron Meyer is the bubbly sort and you won't get much hang dog talk out of him. But he's realistic.

"We still don't have a whole lot of talent and depth and our schedule is murder, but look what we did with great spirit last year," said Meyer. "When we went into the year, I was afraid of going 1-10 or 0-11."

He added "A year under the system and the great spirit and morale of the team are probably our biggest plus factors going into 1977. Now, the players know our philosophies and our thoughts and they know what it takes to win. They know that they have to work hard every day."

Meyer is depending on freshmen to give the Mustangs a lift to go with the handful of talented players on hand.

Speedy Arthur Whittington, who rushed for 789 yards, returns as one of the most exciting backs in the country. He scored twice on punt returns of 75 and 50 yards last year and had a 92-yard kickoff return.

Other potential game-breakers are slot back Emanuel Tolbert, who caught three touchdown passes against Arkansas and tight end Robert Fisher, the team's leading receiver with 23 catches for 369 yards.

"We need to improve our defense and I think we made good strides in our final spring game," said Meyer.

"You always shoot for 11 wins — that's our goal," said Meyer with a straight face.

Pair hits quickies

LONDON (AP) — Former Celtic soccer stars Lou Macari and Kenny Dalglish, worth over $1 million in the English transfer market, kicked off the English Football League program Saturday with two of the day's three fastest goals.

Macari, worth $340,000 to Manchester United when he signed four years ago, cracked in a goal at the five-minute on his way to a three-goal performance at Birmingham, and Dalgleish, the country's most expensive player at $748,000, marked his debut for champion Liverpool with a goal after 6:07 at Middlesborough.

Yankees make diamond noise

NEW YORK (AP) — For a change, the New York Yankees have been making more noise on the diamond than off it. Whether it is too little and too late—whether this is the calm before another storm—remains to be seen.

As they headed into Arlington, Tex., Friday for an important weekend series with the high-flying Texas Rangers, the Yankees had won five games in a row and 10 of 11, their best stretch of the season since a 14- 2 burst way back in late April and early May.

THE HITTERS were hitting, more importantly the pitchers were pitching...and the team was in a virtual tie with Baltimore for second place in the American League East, 3½ games behind the Boston Red Sox, although they hadn't been in first place since July 9.

Best of all, the Yankees were able to concentrate on baseball. It has been two weeks since the latest controversies—the umpteenth rumor that Manager Billy Martin's job was in jeopardy following two embarrassing losses to the expansion Mariners in Seattle and team captain Thurman Munson's 11- day beard in defiance of owner George Steinbrenner's clean-shaven edicts.

BUT THE high-powered, all-in-fun needling and carefree atmosphere that marked the Yankees' clubhouse en route to the American League pennant last year is missing. Instead, there is an ever-present feeling of tension. The media still treads softly when approaching certain players and doesn't even bother to seek out Munson, who has adopted a code of silence.

"It's still not like last year...and I don't know if it ever will be," says one Yankee. "Different personalities—that's the difference."

But most of the new faces— Paul Blair, Ken Clay, Bucky Dent, Don Gullett, Cliff Johnson, Gil Patterson, Mike Torrez, George Zeber—are quiet souls, even though Blair was nicknamed "Motormouth" when he played with Baltimore.

THAT OF course, leaves Reggie Jackson, the millionaire right fielder, who is hitting well above his career average—he should wind up with around 30 homers and 100 RBIs—in addition to cutting down his fielding boo-boos.

After getting off on the wrong foot by (1) rapping Munson, the league's Most Valuable Player in 1976, in a magazine article, (2) refusing to shake hands with waiting teammates following an early-season home run and (3) the bally hooed near-brawl in the dugout with Martin when his outfield play incensed the fiery manager, Jackson has settled down to a diet of steady, and occasionally brilliant, performances.

"It's taken me a long time to get used to things around here and get comfortable," Jackson said recently. "It's taken me quite a while to get used to the ballclub and it's taken the ballclub quite a while to get used to me."

But, says one Yankee, Jackson may never be fully accepted by the other players.

"Some of these guys can tolerate him, but they'll never be friendly with him," he says. "And Thurman and Reggie haven't complimented each other on the field...not really."

STILL, THE Yankees' resurgence boils down to two things—the pitching has improved dramatically since the All-Star break and the team has finally started to win some games in the late innings.

"We're scoring a lot of runs and taking a little pressure off the pitchers," says first baseman Chris Chambliss, "and they're starting to relax and throw some good games."

"Earlier in the season," adds pitcher Ron Guidry, "if we got a lead we seemed to hold it, but if we blew a lead it seemed we hardly ever came from behind."

Basically, the improvement in the team's won-lost record reflects the recent improvement in the pitching of Catfish Hunter, Ed Figueroa and Mike Torrez—Guidry has been fairly consistent all season. The revitalized pitching has enabled the staff to weather Gullett's shoulder problems which forced him to go on the disabled list with a 10-3 record.

"IF WE don't get an early lead, the pitchers are keeping us in every game," says third base coach Dick Howser. "If you have big-name pitchers and they're not out there, it doesn't do you any good. Every one of our starters but Torrez has missed some turns, and he hasn't been here all year. If our pitchers had been healthy all year I think we'd be five or six games in front."

Last year, the Yankees got off winging and had spreadeagled the field by 10½ games—their eventual division-winning margin—by July 15. The pressure was off, the race was over, the players were loose.

What it all proves is that there is very little room for unhappiness and controversy when you're 10½ games in front.

Rangers trade Ed Kirkpatrick

ARLINGTON, Tex. (AP) — Veteran utility infielder Ed Kirkpatrick, who was battting .188 in 20 games for the Texas Rangers, was traded to the Milwaukee Brewers for a player to be named later, the Rangers announced Saturday.

Kirkpatrick was acquired from the Pittsburgh Pirates in a trade for Jim Fregosi June 14.

The Rangers also said they were recalling Len Barker, a righthand pitcher from Tucson. Barker, who had played briefly with the Rangers in July and posted a 1-1 record, had a 9-7 record at Tucson.

Manson wins title

NEW YORK (AP) — Bruce Manson of Los Angeles, a University of Southern California senior, won the U.S. Men's 21-and-under tennis championship Saturday for the second straight year.

Manson, 21, carried his top seeding past third seed Tim Wilkison of Shelby, N.C., a 17-year-old pro, 6-1, 4-6, 6-3, 6-4. Manson faltered only in the second set, which Wilkison won with a service break in the seventh game.

Manson won the last five games of the first set, won another five in a row to take a 5-1 lead in the third set and then overcame Wilkison's 3-0 lead in the fourth set by winning six of the next seven games.

Stacy Margolin of Beverly Hills, Calif., defeated Sandra Collins of San Bernardino, Calif.

Majors enters season blind

KNOXVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Two days before the University of Tennessee opens its fall football practice, new coach Johnny Majors says he doesn't know what to expect from a team that finished with a 6-5 record last season.

"You just don't know a thing for sure until you see them play somebody else," Majors said Saturday. "But I'm glad to see practice here. When you start working you don't have the time to worry about what players you have or don't have."

MAJORS, THE top-ranked college coach in the country after guiding Pittsburgh to the national championship last season, was hired to reverse Tennessee's steady decline as a major football power.

An All-America tailback for the Vols in the 1950s, he was recruited by his alma mater to replace Bill Battle, who resigned at the end of last season after seven years at the helm.

But Majors would make no prediction on how long it will take to bring Tennessee back to the prominence it once enjoyed both nationally and within the Southeastern Conference.

"It's a lot, what we've got to get done," he said. "We've got to take each year at a time, making the most of what we've got. We have a lot of room for improvement, vast improvement, in a lot of areas."

WHAT HE doesn't have is an incoming class of 105 freshmen, including a Tony Dorsett, that five years ago provided a solid starting point for rebuilding the University of Pittsburgh's football program.

The NCAA now permits colleges to award only 30 scholarships to incoming freshmen. Majors signed 28 in an effort that was hampered both by the change in coaches and by duties resulting from Pittsburgh's national championship.

"That's the reason I'm not jumping up and down and doing a tap dance today," he said. "We've got some nicelooking freshmen, but I'm not sure we have enough of them. It makes a difference in building our program."

Majors said the squad now has 110 members and he expects several more walk-ons to report next week.

ONE PERSON conspicuously absent is Hubert Simpson, an elusive halfback who often filled in for Stanley Morgan last season. Simpson was suspended from the team just before spring practice after he ran into trouble both at school and with local police.

Majors said he hopes to have his starting lineups determined within the next 10 days to two weeks. The Vols open their 1977 season Sept. 10 in a home game against a California team that its coach, Mike White, calls his most balanced squad in his five years there.

"I have no idea what California will be like," Majors said, "except I know that they're big, massive compared to us."

Tauber sets new record

JONKOPING, Sweden (AP) — Ulrike Tauber, a 19-year-old East German student, broke her own 200-meter individual medley world record with a time of 2 minutes 15.95 seconds Saturday, the next to last day of the 14th European Swimming Championships.

Miss Tauber bettered the mark she set July 10 in the East German Championships at Leipzig by 1.01. It was the third world record set in these championships.

Petra Thuemer, Miss Tauber's fellow countrywoman, beat the 400 freestyle record and Gerald Moerken of West Germany shattered the 100 breaststroke standard last Wednesday.

Sabine Kahle was runnerup behind Miss Tauber in 2:17.79 and Olga Klevakina of the Soviet Union third in 2:19.35. Sharron Davies of Great Britain finished fourth in 2:21.57.

Miss Bogdanova, at 13 the youngest entry in the meet, turned in a new championship record time of 1:11.89. Carola Nitschke of East Germany was second in 1:13.12. Her fellow countrywoman, Ramona Reinke, who led at the 50-meter mark, was third in 1:13.76.

Dagmar Rehak of West Germany came fourth in 1:13.84 and Margaret Kelly of Britain finished fifth in 1:14.14.

The Russians grabbed another gold medal, their sixth in the championship, with Vladimir Salnikov, 17, breaking two European records on the way to an impressive victory in the 1,500-meter freestyle.

He timed 8:07.61, four seconds faster than the earlier 800meter record, and then smashed the 1,500 mark with a clocking of 15:16.45, some 10 seconds below the previous mark.

East European grip broken

SOFIA, Bulgaria (AP) — The East European domination of the World University Games was broken Saturday night by Silvio Leonard, the Cuban sprinter, and Sara Simeoni, the Italian high jumper.

Leonard streaked to the gold medal in the men's 100-meter dash in 10.08 seconds.

Miss Simeoni cleared 6 feet 3..5 inches to win the women's high jump, with Debbie Brill of Canada second.

But American Jane Frederick, who had led the women's pentathlon throughout most of the gruelling two-day series, was edged by Anna Dimitrieva of Bulgaria in the last event, the 800 meters, and had to make do with a silver medal.

Nadejda Jakoubovitch threw the javelin 201 feet 6 inches to win a women's gold medal for the Soviet Union.

Alberto Juantorena, the double gold medalist of the Montreal Olympics, won his heat in 1:47.9 to qualify for Sunday's final of the 800 meters.

Leonard won the 100 meters by 11 hundredths of a second from Petar Petrov of Bulgaria, who took the silver medal in 10.19. Another Cuban, Osvaldo Lara, clocked 10.31 for the bronze.

Miss Simeoni's victory in the high jump gave Italy its first gold medal of the games. Miss Brill cleared 6-2¾ for the silver, and Tatyana Bojko of the Soviet Union took the bronze with a leap of 6-1¼.

Miss Frederick appeared a likely winner of the pentathlon at the start of the day, when she led Miss Dimitreva by 62 points after three events.

The Bulgarian tied for fourth place in the long jump, while the American finished seventh and had her lead cut to 36 points.

It still looked good enough for the gold. After one lap of the 800, Miss Frederick was up with the leaders and the prize appeared safe. But then Miss Dimitreva streaked away, and Liesel Albert of West Germany went with her.

The German won the race in 2:12.0. Miss Dimitreva finished second and, another three seconds behind, came Miss Frederick, in great distress.

The American screamed "help, help" as she staggered across the finish line and was helped to the side, where she collapsed. Ten minutes later, Ekaterina Smirnova of the soviet union embraced her and walked her, hand in hand, to the dressing room.

Miss Dimitreva won the gold medal with 4,630 points, a record for these games. Miss Frederick was second with 4,625 and Miss Smirnova third with 4,521.

BOWLING BEAT

Ronnie Hopkins sizzles with 253 mark

By RANDY ISENBERG

Ronnie Hopkins highlighted the Midland bowling scene this week with a blistering 253 game in the Muscular Dystrophy "Bowl-a-thon" that was held.

Hopkins' high game came in a most worthwhile way, as sponsors donated a minimum of a penny for each pin a bowler knocked down.

Money is still being collected for the event which was held this past weekend and officials are optimistic that the Midland bowlers will top the $1,000 mark raised last year. Texas bowling centers will raise an estimated $167,000 to aid the national campaign against Muscular Dystrophy.

Also bowling well in the event were Ronnie's son, Darrell, who rolled a 514 sereis with a high game of 193.

J.N. Campbell, after a slow start, finished with a strong 488 total. Cindy Feemster, who raised 60% of last year's figure, rolled a 431 series and is still raising money. Final totals will be known on Labor Day.

HUNTING AND FISHING REPORT

Mourning dove season nears for hunters

A 60-day mourning dove season will begin Sept. 1 and run through Oct. 30 in the North Zone while Texas Parks & Wildlife Commissioners have established a split season for the South Zone, running Sept. 24 through Nov. 6 and Dec. 31 through Jan. 15, 1978.

Bag possession limits for whitewings and mourning doves are 10 doves per day and 20 in possession. Shooting hours will be from 30 minutes before sunrise to sunset in the North Zone.

A Sept. 3-4 and 10-11 season for whitewings and mourning doves is scheduled in those counties along the Rio Grande, but thus far no game sanctuary has been established for whitewings in the Lower Rio Grande Valley as has been the case in the past.

STRIPED BASS continued to provide most of the action at Lake E.V. Spence last week with an 8 ¾ pounder by J.W. Purser, Big Spring, the largest caught. Pat and Roger Moore, Midland, took two striped bass at 5 ¼ pounds while Fred Kessler, Mertzon, landed a 20-pound yellow catfish. Bill Smith and John McDonald, Odesea, took three stripers to five pounds, 11 white bass and 19 crappie, the latter two species running to 1 ½ pounds.

Oak Creek has been best known for its big black bass, but appears ready to take on a new look, according to Ike Pate of the Sportsman's Lodge.

"This lake has offered some fine channel cat fishing in the past, but nothing like it should in the next few years."

Pate goes on, "We have a crop in the lake now that has to be the largest this lake has ever contained. These fish average about eight inches in length and are growing very well. The Parks and Wildlife Department added another 45,000 catfish fingerlings this past week. They are Rio Grande Blues and should reach 10 pounds."

Time to make hunting plans

By RODGER McKOWN
Texas Parks & Wildlife Department

Hunting season will be opening in West Texas almost before we know it.

Mule deer draw the most atttention of West Texas hunters and those who travel to the Trans-Pecos for hunting.

In terms of opening date and length, West Texas will have a carbon copy of last year's mule deer season in Trans-Pecos counties. That season will open the last Saturday of November as it has for a number of years, but will be only nine days in length as it was last year. That makes dates for the 1977 Trans-Pecos mule deer season Nov. 26 — Dec. 4.

HUNTERS WILL be hoping that the carbon copy doesn't extend to weather conditions that prevailed for the opening weekend of the 1976 season, when cold wind and snow hampered hunters for the first few days of the season. The poor weather and the abbreviated season combined to drastically reduce mule deer harvest last year.

That however was the goal of the Parks and Wildlife Department biologists in recommending the nine-day season. It was felt that there was a need to relieve some the hunting pressure on that popular game animal in the Trans-Pecos, where the bulk of the state's mule deer range is located.

The season will be open on white-tailed deer in all Trans-Pecos counties during that same Nov. 26 — Dec. 4 period but, in three counties and a portion of a fourth, hunters will have an extra 28 days for whitetail hunting only. The season will be open Dec. 5 — Jan. 1, for white-tailed deer only in Pecos, Terrell and Jeff Davis Counties and in that portion of Val Verde County that lies west of the Pecos River.

QUITE A number of Trans-Pecos hunters go east of the Pecos to hunt white-tailed deer. Seasons east of the Pecos will be basically about the same as they have the past several years, with the season open in most of the regulatory counties, Nov. 12 — Jan. 1. The Panhandle is an exception to that, with a Nov. 19 — Dec. 4 season. Archery deer season will be open in most counties of the state Oct. 1 — 31. The archery season in the Trans-Pecos is set for Oct. 1 — 9.

Turkey season in most counties of the state, with the exception of the Trans-Pecos where there has been no turkey season in the past, is generally concurrent with the deer season. A change for next fall providies for a turkey season in two counties west of the Pecos River. Turkey season in Pecos and Terrell Counties will be concurrent with the mule deer season, Nov. 26 — Dec. 4, with a bag limit of one gobbler or bearded hen. There will be no open seasons on turkeys in any remaining Trans-Pecos counties.

ANTELOPE SEASONS are also of interest to many West Texans. Antelope season in the Trans-Pecos and Permian Basin areas is scheduled for Oct. 1 — 9. In the Panhandle, the antelope season will be Oct. 1 — 4.

Javelina season is set generally for the southwestern one-third of the state, including all of the Trans-Pecos, for Oct. 1 — Jan. 1.

Quail season west of the Pecos River will be open Nov. 12 — Jan. 29. That season will be Nov. 12 — Feb. 12, in most of the counties immediately east of the Pecos and varies in other parts of the state.

Hunters from West Texas and other areas of the state are showing more and more interest in the pheasant season in Panhandle counties. That season is set for Dec. 10 — 25.

Siderowf to lead U.S. team

SOUTHAMPTON, N.Y. (AP) — Bill Siderowf, a 40-year-old veteran of international match play, heads a team of 10 amateur golfers competing against the British in the Walker Cup Friday and Saturday at the Shinnecock Hills Golf Club.

The Walker Cup, played every two years and alternated between British and U.S. courses, was last won by the United States at the Old Course in St. Andrews, Scotland. The Americans have won the tournament 22 times with two losses and one tie since 1922.

Siderowf, the oldest member of the U.S. team, has played in three Walkers Cups — in 1969, 1973 and 1975 — and represented the United States in the World Amateur Team Championships in 1968 and 1976.

Sandy Saddler, a member of the British team that won the Eisenhower trophy last year in the World Amateur Team Championships, is the non-playing captain.

Soccer team loses money

TORONTO (AP) — Sam Paric, managing director of Toronto Metros-Croatia, said the team lost about $50,000 during the North American Soccer League season.

He said Thursday the club, about $1 million in debt, will settle all operating liabilities.

Paric said the team, last year's NASL champions but eliminated this year by Rochester Lancers, is in the midst of putting together a package for sale of the club.

William McMurtry, the club's lawyer, said there is no doubt the club will need refinancing.

The team owes hotels in NASL cities about $15,000.

TED BATTLES
BATTLE SCENE

Vida Blue was the last pitcher to win the Most Valuable Player award in the American Leaque back in 1971 and in 1968 Detroit's Denny McLain won it in the American League while Bob Gibson accomplished the feat in the National League.

McLain had to have a 31-6 season to attract MVP attention while the same year Gibson was 22-9, but 13 of those victories were shutouts and his 1.12 ERA stands as a single-season record.

THAT GIVES you some idea of what kind of a performance it takes for a pitcher to receive consideration. Nowadays they are content to take solace in the Young Award, recognition accorded only to the top moundsman in each league.

The only time a relief pitcher ever won the MVP was back in 1950 when Jim Konstanty pitched the Philadelphia Whiz Kids to the National League pennant.

This year former Midland Cubs pitcher Bruce Sutter has built a pretty good case for himself on both counts, pitcher and relief pitcher, for MVP honors, by what he has done as a rescuer of imperiled games in the late innings when he was healthy.

He was so effective, the Chicago Cubs became an overnight pennant contender.

A back injury that has cost him six weeks of the season will cost him any consideration for post season laurels, but nothing speaks more eloquently in his behalf than what has happened to the Chicago Cubs since he became a basket case.

With Sutter, the Cubs were a contender. Without him they are seven games out of first and in checking back since his enforced absence, in almost every series there have been one or two games when a late-inning lead evaporated into defeat for want of a Sutter in the bullpen.

Maybe he couldn't have saved them all, but he would salvaged enough to keep the Cubs near the top.

CONTRAST SUTTER'S contribution to his team's success with that of a Doyle Alexander, who apparently feels his individual statistics are more important than the pennant chances of his club.

The other night the Texas Rangers' pitcher had a no-hitter going into the sixth inning against Kansas City. The Rangers were leading 4-0 when George Brett homered, Hal McRae walked and was wild pitched to second and Al Cowens singled. With John Mayberry coming up, Manager Billy Hunter reached into the bullpen.

Alexander was livid. "I threw pretty good strikes. I thought it was kind of premature to take me out at that point. This team is becoming more and more like Baltimore in that we're playing basically sound baseball. But it's more and more like Baltimore in the way I'm being used.

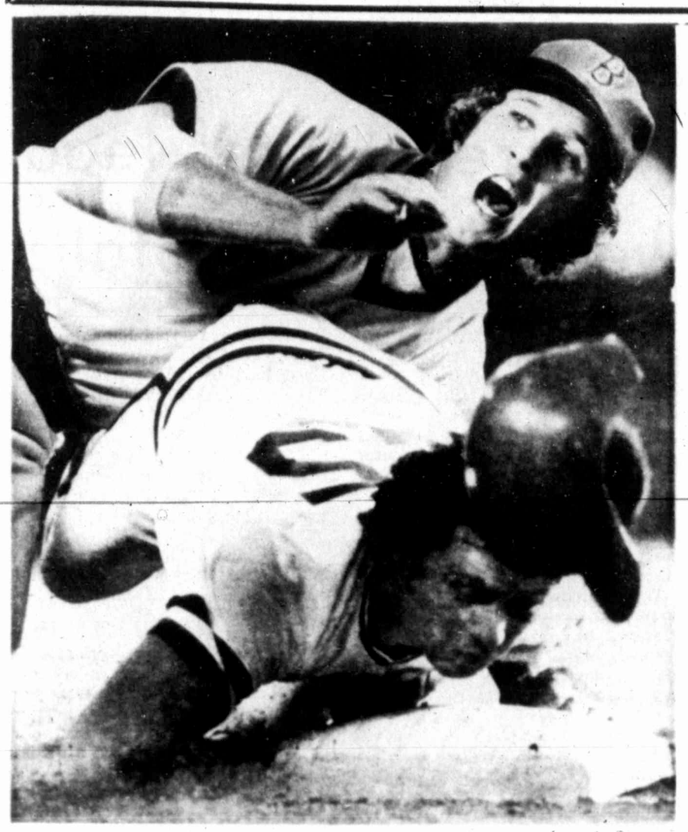

"I'm not happy with the way I've been handled lately," he huffed.

Alexander, who played out his option at Baltimore last year, said, "It wasn't just money that got me here and it's not just money that will keep me here. This team is going to win and I'd like to be a part of that, but not under these circumstances."

Mind you, this tirade occured after Roger Moret came out of the bullpen and saved Alexander's 12th win by not allowing a base runner the rest of the way.

Hunter, who was a coach at Baltimore, and therefore knows and perhaps understands Alexander, took the outburst in stride, commenting only, "I told him I thought he was a little young to be a manager."

Uecker saves ABC baseball face

By HOWARD SMITH

NEW YORK (AP) — Bob Uecker, the best thing about last season's version of "Monday-Night Baseball," is also the best thing about this season's revised edition.

ABC's ratings for the Monday night games are up slightly this year and Uecker, the former Milwaukee Braves catcher with the fuzzy hair and quick wit, is one of the prime reasons.

Uecker teamed with Bob Prince and Warner Wolfe last year on ABC's first string unit. This year, with Prince having been placed on waivers and Wolfe dropped to third string as part of a general shakeup, Uecker lines up alongside Keith Jackson and the ubiquitous Howard Cosell.

"I got along well with Wolfe and Prince," he says. "Maybe the chemistry wasn't right, I don't know. I just tried to do my job. I don't think my job has changed that much this year. I enjoy working with Howard and Keith. No problem."

Uecker started out last season as a baseball version of Don Meredith. He was supposed to be funny. He was funny and still is, but he has also become an excellent play-by-play man and analyst. He tells you what shortstop has slowed down a step and is cheating toward the hole, or what a pitcher should throw in a given situation, or why a batter is slumping.

He knows his stuff.

"I've had people ask me if I can really tell the difference between a slider and a fastball," he says. "I tell them, 'Hell, yes.' I was a catcher for a lot of years and I know pitchers. I like to call the pitch, what I think a guy will throw next. I think the fans get a kick out of that.

"If there's a time to be funny, I can be funny. But if you've got a good ballgame going, who the hell wants to hear someone making jokes."

Uecker's last year in the majors was 1967 but he began preparing for a broadcast career long before that. "I spent enough time in the bullpen practicing play-by-play. I would be calling a game and the other guys would be laughing. We had a lot of fun in the bullpen."

Uecker currently does the play-by-play on the Milwaukee Brewer games in addition to his Monday night chores. "The only time I was really scared doing a game in Milwaukee was soon after I started and Merle Harmon and Tom Collins walked out of the booth and left me alone on radio. I didn't know what to do so I talked and talked. I was even talking about the paper on the floor, everything."

ABC has had a good run of close ballgames this season and that makes everyone's job easier. "When you get a 9-0 ballgame, that's when you really have to do some broadcasting," says Uecker. "You talk about other ballclubs, things that happened in the past, tell jokes, whatever."

Uecker says he has never blasted a ballplayer, although he doesn't hesitate to point out mistakes. He says he hasn't gotten any flak from players and doesn't care if he gets any from writers.

"I don't ever worry about writers ripping me," he says. "Of course you like to have guys write nice things about you, but it doesn't really bother me if they don't. I got ripped and booed a lot more when I played."

Pranks relieve tight bullpen atmosphere

No, it's not a bases-loaded jam in the bottom of the ninth, nor is it a night out on the town.

It's just another typical day in that den of hilarity, the major league bullpen. Occupants of the bullpen, far removed from the watchful eye of the manager, go to extreme lengths to keep things interesting. The results are often strange, such as the time Fingers arrived on the mound with his usually ornate handlebar mustache pointing due south, rather than the usual north.

"When I was with with Oakland, it used to get mighty cold in the bullpen during night games," said Fingers, now San Diego's relief ace. "To keep warm, we had Sterno out there so we didn't freeze to death.

"Well, one night when I didn't think they would need me, I decided to take a snooze to pass the time. The guys thought that would be the perfect time to get me.

"Darold Knowles took a can of Sterno and melted the wax in my mustache. By the time I woke up, it was too late and the damned thing was hanging ...and that's when the call came from the manager for me to warm up. Ten minutes later I was standing on the mound, looking like a fool."

With killing time almost as important as killing rallies, relief pitchers have come up with several diversions to keep busy. Among the favorites are eating, checking out the female fans in the stands and making up petty games.

"There's really not much to do out there, unless you are scoping out a super chick, or eating something," says Baltimore's Tippy Martinez.

"One time in Milwaukee, I was trying to get a couple of hot dogs. I made a deal with a fan that I would trade them a baseball for a hot dog. I put the ball in my cap and stretched up ...instead of putting the hot dog in the hat, he grabbed my hat, tossed me the hot dog and took off. It was worth it though, I was pretty hungry."

In Los Angeles, Charlie Hough and company pick numbers out of a hat to determine who will make the fifth-inning coffee run. Hough was spotted one night recently returning to the bullpen with a carton full of coffee, soda, crackers and hot dogs.

Relievers sometimes spend their time keeping up with the ponies. A popular Los Angeles bullpen tale involves former Dodger Ron Perranoski. One afternoon he was summoned into a game earlier than he had expected. After a few pitches, he called time and said he was having trouble with the mound. When the groundskeeper arrived, rake in hand, Perranoski said: "There's nothing wrong; who won the fifth race?"

"It started in 1969 when we won the pennant," Pignatano said of his garden of tomatoes, cucumbers, radishes and other salad delights.

Elderly gals love Dodgers

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Bonnie Marvin and her two daughters are getting up in years, but they don't let a little thing like advancing age stop them from being the most loyal Dodger fans in Los Angeles.

Mrs. Marvin, 93, and her daughters, 69-year-old Iola McCoy and 65-year-old Anna Marvin, have attended every one of the 1,600 or so games the team has played in Los Angeles since it moved west from Brooklyn in 1958. And they're determined to keep their seats in the first row of aisle 41, midway between third base and the left field foul pole, for 20 more years.

Or longer.

"We don't get sick," said Mrs. McCoy. "I've come when I've had headaches so bad I could hardly hold my head up. But none of us has missed a game and we don't plan on missing any."

The women, who live about two miles from Dodger Stadium, arrive about the same time the gates open, 90 minutes before the first pitch.

"We like to beat the crowd," said Mrs. Marvin, who says she's been a Dodger fan for many of her 93 years. "We've been very fortunate to attend every game. And we never get bored, never."

The three say they remember well the day they found out the Dodgers were moving west.

"We liked them before they moved out here," said Miss Marvin. "I had an uncle in New York who was a Dodger fan. We couldn't wait when we found out they were coming."

The three agreed unanimously as to their biggest thrill—Don Drysdale's string of 58 2-3 scoreless innings in 1968—and their biggest disappointment—when the Dodgers lost the National League pennant to the San Francisco Giants in a playoff in 1962.

In 20 years of sitting in prime foul-ball territory, the group has had just one injury.

"I had my glasses broken and I needed five stitches when I was hit by a foul ball," said Mrs. McCoy. "It was on July 5th and the Dodgers were playing the Padres. I don't remember what year it was."

What happens when the Dodgers are out of town?

"We listen to every game on the radio," said Mrs. McCoy. "I keep score of every game, home and away. I've got all the records except one book that was stolen at the Coliseum when the team played its games there."

How good is the current team?

"I can't say this is the very best," said Mrs. McCoy. "I think the teams were better in the mid-1960s."

"I think the 1959 team was the best," said Miss Marvin. "They had less to succeed with and they did more."

"My favorite teams were the teams with Don Drysdale and Wally Moon," said Mrs. Marvin. "But I've loved every team. We all love our Dodgers."

Roberts moves

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Veteran defenseman Jim Roberts, an original member of the National Hockey League club, has been reobtained by the St. Louis Blues from the Montreal Canadiens in exchange for future considerations.

The 37-year-old Roberts played three seasons for the Blues before being traded to the Canadiens in 1971.

Marshall Plan money returning to Americans

By MARK POTTS

NEW YORK (AP) — After World War II, the United States helped put war-torn nations back on their feet by giving them vast sums of money under the Marshall Plan.

Now the money is coming back, in the form of investments by foreign companies and individuals in the U.S. And one banker thinks the current amount of foreign investment in the U.S. "is a trickle," compared with what is potentially available.

Last year, direct foreign investment in the U.S. totaled more than $30 billion, and this year's figure is expected to be considerably higher—a far cry from the $13.7 billion total in 1971.

"If we can give advantages to this sort of capital, there's going to be a flood," says Jack Shaffer, senior vice president for foreign business at Sonnenblick Goldman Corp., a New York mortgage banker.

Shaffer, who is an agent for foreign institutions and individuals looking to make investments in the U.S. and counts among his customers the Shah of Iran, says foreign investors are careful about where they put their money.

Most of the investment is in the form of real estate ventures like hotels and office and apartment buildings.

There also has been some commercial development. West Germany's Volkswagen, for example, is building a $200 million auto production plant in Pennsylvania, and Switzerland's Nestle and the British-Dutch soap and food maker Unilever have long had extensive U.S. holdings.

But foreign investors usually seem to avoid commercial properties. "There aren't a lot of big ventures waiting to be sold," Shaffer says, noting that foreign investors are wary of organized labor.

About two-thirds of the foreign investment comes from Western Europe, especially France, Britain and West Germany. But recently, the stakes of Japan and the oil-rich Arab countries have been increasing.

Even Canada, beset by economic problems, is a major source of investment—perhaps as much as $2.5 billion this year.

One impetus to foreign investors is tax incentives. Many U.S. localities offer tax breaks to encourage investment, and foreign governments are often very liberal in their tax laws. West Germany, for example, levies little tax on profits from foreign investments by West German firms and citizens.

Where the foreign financiers invest their money often depends on their country of origin.

"Principally, they like the state of California and the Sunbelt," observes Shaffer. But Europeans, he says, are particularly fond of Texas and Latin Americans like the southern half of the U.S.

And everybody seems to like the Midwest.

"The Midwest is going crazy right now with foreign purchasers into agriculture," Shaffer said. "Their thinking is a lot more basic than ours—they think in terms of long-term shortages of food, which we don't think about."

Major business developments this past week included:

—Several major U.S. banks, including Citibank, the nation's second largest, raised their prime interest rate—the rate charged the best corporate borrowers—from 6¾ per cent to 7 per cent.

The action had been anticipated as a result of the Federal Reserve Board's recent moves to slow growth in the nation's money supply.

—Consumer prices posted their smallest rise in seven months in July, the government said, the result of lower food-producing costs. The Consumer Price Index rose .4 per cent in July, and food prices rose only .1 per cent.

The Carter administration is counting on slower increases in food prices to cut the annual inflation rate from 10 per cent at the beginning of 1977 to 6 per cent by the end of this year.

—The government said housing starts increased 8.1 per cent in July from June, a 46.1 per cent rise from July 1976.

Much of the increase came from an 18 per cent rise in multi-family housing starts. Single-family starts rose 4.4 per cent.

—Ford Motor Co. announced it was recalling almost 750,000 late model cars to replace possibly defective engine cooling fans, which have been linked to one death and several injuries.

Treasury Department study shows penny should be dropped as coin

Newsday

You may have to count on getting your pennies strictly from heaven pretty soon. If the U.S. Mint has its way, there may not be any left on earth. The people who make our money are seriously considering proposals to drop the humble copper entirely from the American coinage system by 1980.

A study of the total U.S. coinage picture has been getting quiet, intensive attention by the Treasury Department. The study's controversial conclusion is that the penny should be put out of pocket, permanently. The study, by the Research Triangle Institute of North Carolina, an independent research team commissioned by the Mint, showed, with overwhelming logic, that the penny is costing us a bundle, and that things will only get worse, not better, with the costs surrounding the production and distribution of the one-cent piece.

Whether or not the penny actually gets dropped is technically a decision that could be made by Treasury Secretary W. Michael Blumenthal, presumably with the concurrence of President Carter. But in this case, Mint officials said, they would like to have the approval of Congress before acting. And already there are signs that opposition is widespread. The majority of public and private organizations polled by the survey team — banks, state revenue heads and grocery, fast-food and dime store chains and other retailers — are opposed to the proposal. The biggest potential problems were seen as the need for new price structuring, difficulties in making change and general consumer resistance. The Mint has quietly sent out another set of inquiries — after the study data came in this June — to the keepers of state coffers, eliciting specific comments on the ramifications of penny elimination. New York, to date, is one of the few states that has not responded to the query. A national consumer attitude study is also being considered by the Mint.

Dropping the penny would leave the nickel as the lowest denomination. That would mean rounding off sales taxes and retail prices to the nearest nickel. This has been of concern, legally and consumer-wise, to those who have responded to the survey. The Mint's researchers say that the predominant worry is which way prices will be rounded off. Ideally, their expectation is that prices will be rounded off to the nearest nickel, not always upward. For instance, if something costs 36 or 37 cents, it would be rounded off to 35. If it costs 38 or 39 cents, it would be rounded off to 40. "We believe the effects of rounding off would be netted out over time," said the study's director, David Stuart. But merchants and officials surveyed expressed the view that any sort of rounding off would raise both possible legal questions and consumer hackles.

Since 1974, the Mint brass had been thinking seriously about the whole coinage system and how it might be streamlined, modernized and rendered more efficient. A thorough study, forecasting future costs and analyzing current problems, hadn't been done in years. Enter Research Triangle Institute and the recommendation cited above.

The Mint's concern was triggered by the Great Penny Shortage of 1974. About that time, the cost of copper, traditionally a relatively cheap and stable commodity, began to soar. In fact, the way things were going, it looked as if it would soon cost more than a penny to make a penny.

And naturally, the speculators and the hoarders began pinching pennies like they were going out of style. There were also all those people who have always squirreled away an aggregate untold fortune of pennies in bottles, shoe boxes and dresser drawers, or squandered them on wishes in pond bottoms, fountains or the ocean floor. Thirty billion of them, in fact, had disappeared from circulation one way or another, by the time of the penny crunch. The Treasury Department's Division of the Mint carried on gallantly, however, grinding out new pennies at a stepped-up rate of as many as 50 million each minting day. And an all-out campaign was launched by the Mint to coax old pennies out of hiding. If just half of the lost hoard were put back into circulation, said Mary Brooks, director of the Mint at that time, no new pennies would have to be made for at least two years.

No such luck, of course. The pennies haven't reappeared in anywhere near the numbers necessary to slow replacement production. People, it seems, are hanging on to their piggy banks. And although the penny-crunch has eased somewhat, mostly because the price of copper again, general production costs have gone up and inflation has continued to erode what the penny could buy. Meanwhile, pennies keep dropping out like college sophomores, with about 6 billion pennies a year leaving what the Mint likes to call the "circulation pool."

Today, the production rate of pennies is a rip-roaring 35 million on an average day, with a projected total of 8.6 billion for 1977. And if those figures sound staggering, they are. Penny production accounts for about 75 per cent of the total coinage manufactured in this country. We make more pennies in a year than the total coinage output of the next five largest countries in the world.

Currently, the one-cent piece is being stamped out at three different minting facilities: the Denver and Philadelphia mints and the West Point Bouillon Depository. According to the Mint's current study, if pennies keep disappearing at the present rate, demand for them will reach 37 billion, or 90 per cent of our total coin requirement, by 1990. Yet, if, according to the study's recommendation, penny production is terminated by about 1980, the Mint can reduce operating costs and won't have to build a new minting facility. "Either the Philadelphia or the Denver mint could manufacture all coinage needs for this country until at least to the year 2000," Stuart said. If we stop making pennies, that is. A new mint facility, by the way, would cost anywhere between $50 to $70 million to build, according to the best estimates. And that's a lot of pennies.

What about costs associated with the prolific penny? A penny is 95 per cent copper and 5 per cent zinc. It costs about 0.7 of a cent right now to make a single penny. In 1973, the price of copper temporarily rose from about 40 cents to $1.40 a pound, the cause of the extensive hoarding that precipitated the ensuing penny crisis. Now the price is down again to 53 cents a pound on the futures market.

SEC files Zales suit

DALLAS (AP) — Zale Corp. officials say a U.S. Securities and Exchange Commission investigation that resulted in charges that the firm violated securities laws was "thorough and exhaustive."

The SEC filed a civil suit Friday accusing the nationwide company of income tax evasion and the maintenance of an offbook trading account in a foreign country.

Immediately after the suit was filed, top officials of the firm agreed to sign a consent decree enjoining them from engaging in activities of the type charged in the suit.

The decrees amount to a handslap by the SEC with a warning never to become involved in such illegal practices.

The SEC's allegations said Zale, in prior public filings, failed to report:

—Reimbursements of approximately $21,000 for political contributions to senior officers in 1970-72.

—The maintenance of an offbook trading account in a foreign country and the use of funds in the account.

—The full extent of the company's tax liability in prior years.

The SEC also asked that the company be ordered to name three persons to the board of directors who have not had any prior affiliation with Zale and to make one of the new independent directors chairman of an audit committee to review the company's financial procedures and adopt a "code of ethical standards and business practices."

Zale officials said they expect to set a date soon for its 1977 shareholder meeting at which time the recommended actions will begin.

RRC okays field MER

AUSTIN — The most efficient rate of production now assigned to the Block 31 (Devonian) field in Crane County was left unchanged following a study by the Railroad Commission of Texas.

The MER of the field is 19,180 barrels of oil per day. The field, discovered in 1945, has produced more than 143.7 million barrels of oil and is considered 60 to 70 per cent depleted.

Coal syndication offerings get close securities board scrutiny

By BILL KIDD
Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — State Securities Board officials are checking closely coal syndication offerings being promoted in Texas, with a view towards possible legal action.

Commissioner Richard Latham says the agency has made some "very preliminary" moves which may result in some charges.

Latham notes that there are a number of valid, legitimate coal syndication offerings in the securities marketplace, but that there also are a number of con men — who have shifted to coal syndication offerings from commodity options and oil and gas securities.

But unlike the commodity options and "Schedule D" offerings, many of which originated in Texas, the coal offerings are coming from outside the state, meaning Texans are more likely to be the victims of unscrupulous operators.

Several states are cooperating in investigating the problem, Latham says.

Latham advises buyers should be careful in purchasing coal syndication offerings, just as they should be, he adds, in purchasing any securities, particularly from persons or firms with which they are not familiar.

Latham also reports the number of securities applications being filed with the board continues at about the same level as last year, although the dollar volume may be up somewhat for the 12 months.

The Texas Credit Union Department holds its annual meeting with State-chartered credit unions in San Antonio Sept. 7 and 8, with proposed regulations and the purchase of a headquarters building for the department on the agenda.

Recommendations by the special committee appointed to study regulations for area central credit unions also are due to be considered, the department reports.

Charter applications to the Department of Banking continue coming in, with 26 applications for new banks now pending with the department.

Since the first of the year, 38 applications for new charters have been filed — with three of those being conversions from national banks.

Two "interim" charters — used to move existing banks into a holding company — have been granted, and three are pending.

Compared to past years, the charters requests are scattered throughout Texas, although there are four from the Houston area — and three applications pending for banks in Katy.

Lubbock also has three applications pending — while Dallas has none, unlike most other years, although one application filed earlier has been denied.

Applications to the Savings and Loan Department continue coming in as well.

Through mid-August, 77 applications for branch offices were filed with the department, along with three charter applications.

No charter applications have been granted thus far this year, with two applications denied.

Two branch office applications have been denied, and 63 have been granted.

A survey by Arthur Young & Co. shows compensation paid top executives in the Southwest was up 11.3 per cent in 1976, below the national average of 14 per cent (a record average increase).

The Southwest area — in this case Texas, Louisiana, Oklahoma and Arkansas — ranked sixth among the areas surveyed.

One reason for the sharp increases, the company indicates, was generally better economic conditions in 1976.

Graduate Center CPA course starts Friday

The Permian Basin Graduate Center announces a 10-week CPA Review course. The first classes will be held Friday and Saturday.

The course will be taught by instructors from Texas Tech Univesity under the direction of Dr. Raymond J. Clay Jr.

His staff will be the same staff that offers the courses on campus.

The classes will be held from 6:30 p. m. to 10:30 p. m. on Fridays, and from 8 a. m. to 5 p. m. on Saturdays in the PBGC classroom in the basement of the Metro Building in Midland.

The CPA Review program is designed to assist candidates in preparing for the Uniform Certified Public Accountants examination. These sessions are not designed to substitute for regular courses offered by universities, but are intensive review sessions to guide the CPA candidate in his preparation for the November 1977 examination.

The subjects of Business Law, Quantitative Methods, Cost-Managerial Accounting, Income Tax, Financial and Fund Accounting, and Auditing will be covered in the 120-hour program.

Registrations for individual subjects may be made. Classes consist primarily of lecture and discussion. Sessions will be limited to 40 students on a first-come-first-serve basis.

Candidates must enroll by Monday to ensure the course being held.

Fee for the complete program is $425 with individual subjects priced separately.

Collector always has enough time to enjoy clocks

"I can't think of any other field that has inspired more ingenuity, innovation and inventive genius than the making of timepieces," Martines says.

Beginning with a small boy's typical interest — and disaster — Martines came to be not only a clock fancier but a repairman, collector and dealer in antique pieces. He also distributes a newsletter to 500 other collectors.

"I like to think that in most cases I don't sell a clock, I 'place' it," Martines says. "A lot of people these days can afford fine old clocks but really don't appreciate them. I like to know that the people I do business with thoroughly appreciate and will give a good home to the clocks they purchase."

He was about 12 when curiosity about the family alarm clock caused it to explode in his hands. "I didn't know you had to take the tension off the spring before you disassembled the movement," he recalls.

He was just looking and admiring when he began exploring antique shops, because he had no money. "But as time went on, purely by long observation, I began to recognize the good from the bad, the jewels from the junk. You automatically begin to note detail in glass, furniture and clocks and differentiate the unusual from the usual."

His wife, Peggy, was responsible for his acquiring one of his noteworthy items, an elegant grandfather's clock priced at $700. He was a Cleveland school teacher at the time and put off looking at it in the shop because he knew he might fall in love with it despite the lack of money.

At last he put down $50 without the foggiest notion where he would get the rest but knowing that he would somehow. Ultimately he sold one of their two cars to pay for it.

"That's pretty much the philosophy you have to follow to acquire things you simply can't live without," he says.

"I probably know more about clockmakers of the last century than anybody in the country, because I made it my business," he says.

He left teaching to become a securities salesman but the firm folded and friends suggested he turn his clock hobby into a business.

"Every minute of my clock work is enjoyable," Martines says. "You meet no shallow people in this business.

"And the best part is that it's all here at home."

Ringing the bell

With BOB TIEUEL

Puerto Rico Next United States' Vietnam? According to Sidney Lens, the Puerto Rican experiment is a flop. The United States has been trying to convince the rest of the world for a quarter of a century that the "commonwealth" status it conferred on Puerto Rico through Public Law 600 in 1950 was truly something new under the sun—free and equal partnership between a midget state and colossus. The present governor—Carlos Romero Barcelo—favors incorporation of Puerto Rico into the United States as the 51st state.

Washington has been boasting for decades that the American way of developing an undeveloped country is vastly superior to the Communist or socialist way. Indeed, the American multinational firms in recent years have been saying that they are the new "revolutionaries."

The Communists, Socialists, Maoists, Trotskyites and Fidelistas, they claim, are out of touch with history; it is the big American firms—with their know-how and capital—that can transform poor countries into prosperous meccas, quickly and without violence, not the Communists.

Time and again, one is reminded by local Puerto Ricans that the only thing standing in the way of a social explosion, is food stamps. Yet on the other hand, the broad streets, the uncommon number of automobiles on the expressways, the skyscrapers on Ponce de Leon Avenue, the plush hotels along Ashford Avenue and the packed Las Vegas-type casinos, all project an aura of affluence, not consistent with "food stamps."

21 per cent of the 900,000 work force are listed as unemployed but admits some sources that it is probably 30 per cent. If it were not for the fact that many hundreds of thousands of Puerto Ricans have migrated to the mainland (2 million now live in New York, Chicago and other northern meccas) the jobless figure at home would be astronomical.

Seven of ten Puerto Ricans are eligible for food stamps. In 1976, the cash value of stamps was $805.9. More than ten per cent of the total U.S. expenditures for food stamps went to Puerto Rico, though it has less than 1½ per cent of the population of the mainland.

Discovery of copper deposits ($5 to $20 billion reserves, nickel (slightly less), and probably petroleum ($20 to $50 billion reserves) may allay matters, but they obviously won't produce the jobs needed to cure unemployment. The nationalist spirit still runs deep on the island. "If we were the 51st state, we would become like your Indians, living on a great reservation 100 miles long and 35 miles wide," stated one independentista. "Our culture, our language and all would be destroyed." We would have to move to U.S. in droves to stay alive," he added.

The homes of musicians Scott Joplin and Duke Ellington are among the final 33 sites associated with black Americans to be designated as National Historic Landmarks, bringing to 61 the number of such sites or structures to receive this status as of June 1, 1977. Under-Secretary of the Interior James A. Joseph said this latest selection of sites concludes a three year nationwide study conducted for the National Park Service by the Afro-American Bicentennial Corporation, (ABC), non-profit organization headed by two brothers, Robert A. and Vincent A. DeForrest of Washington, D.C.

The Carter administration has appointed two Mexican Americans from Texas to high profile positions—former Houston comptroller Leonel Castillo as head of the U.S. Immigration Agency and Corpus Christi attorney Tony Canales as U.S. attorney for the Southern District of Texas.

The administration has not named a black, much less a black woman, to a similar stature in Texas. The recent announcement by HEW Secretary Joseph Califano, that Texas State Rep. Eddie Bernice Johnson of Oak Cliff, Dallas would be named to the $47,500 a year directorship of the Dallas regional office, would go in correcting that situation, our bellringer sources report. Rep. Johnson would carry out HEW policy in Texas, Louisiana, Arkansas, Oklahoma and New Mexico. "We want to keep the lines of communication open at all times," she told this correspondent in Oak Cliff recently. And from her past record, we bet she will.

Until later, Peace and be a good neighbor.

Work break often can lessen stress

NEW YORK (AP) — A walk around the block; time out for meditating or reading; lunch hour exercise at a health spa. These are some of the ways business professionals find relief from job stress, reports a registered nurse in the occupational health field.

Interviews conducted by Dawn D. Kinsler, health administrator of Texas Commerce Bank, Houston, revealed individual workers' personal habits played a major role in creating stress, she says. Among them: poor dietary habits, elimination of daily breaks from work routine and skipping breakfast or lunch.

Ms. Kinsler, writing in "Occupational Health Nursing," official publication of the American Association of Occupational Health Nurses, suggests a number of ways to reduce excessive work stress.

These include understanding organization objectives, having ready access to superiors, starting a task with adequate facilities and supplies, maintenance of maximum organization and efficiency, a positive attitude toward success of an endeavor, being assertive rather than aggressive and not relying on others for positive self-affirmation.

Relaxation at home, according to Ms. Kinsler, can carry over into the work setting for a general sense of well-being. Weekends with proper rest and good nourishment, leisure time spent with entertainment, sporting events, exercise programs and generally "doing your own thing" were advocated.

Operatic stars Evelyn Lear and Thomas Stewart, a husband-and-wife team in real life, have the title roles in two Santa Fe Opera productions — Miss Lear in "Fedora" and Stewart in "Falstaff."

By ROGER SOUTHALL
R-T Staff Writer

SANTA FE, N. M. — As in past years, the Santa Fe Opera's 1977 season repertory has been eclectic, ranging from tragic works to comic ones. But (again as in past years) comedy has been king.

No matter — whether darkly dramatic tragedy or feather-light opera buffs, the current season's offerings have been rewarding to eye and ear, and highly entertaining. As it has since 1957, the Santa Fe Opera always gives a good show.

The SFO this week concludes its 21st season and while I have no way of knowing for sure, I think it can reasonably be assumed this has been the most successful summer of all. It isn't too late to attend one or more performances this season, but time is running out. The five productions in the repertory will all have performances this week before the season closes Saturday night. A call to the box office at 505-982-3851 will provide information on the availability of seating for Monday night's "Falstaff," Tuesday's "Fedora," Wednesday's "Pelleas and Melisande," Thursday's "Cosi Fan Tutte," Friday's "Falstaff" or Saturday's "The Italian Straw Hat."

Verdi's great comic masterwork, "Falstaff," has probably been the hit of the season — and rightly so, because it is a splendid production — splendidly conceived, staged and performed.

Mozart's graceful and melodic comic opera "Cosi Fan Tutte" has been another audience-pleaser; rightly so, too, because in addition to being a visually-appealing production, Santa Fe's version offers some of the best solo, duet and ensemble singing I have heard, by an extremely talented cast made up almost entirely of newcomers to the Santa Fe scene.

The third comic work in the repertory, "The Italian Straw Hat," is a "farsa musicale" by contemporary Italian composer Nino Rota and it, too, has been well received here this season although I did not have opportunity to attend a performance.

The two serious works in the repertory are Umberto Giordano's verismo (or realistic) operatic tragedy, "Fedora," which I heard, and Claude Debussy's decidedly non-verismo "Pelleas and Melisande" which I heard some seasons ago and chose not to see and hear again.

"Falstaff," Verdi's last opera, is a winning combination of high and low comedy, fine music and — in Santa Fe's production — excellent singing and acting. It's a good-humored romp and a fine show.

A review

Thomas Stewart is in the pivotal role of Sir John Falstaff, the fat and foolish old knight who gets his lumps (and a painful lesson) from two "merry wives of Windsor" after he sends each an identical love letter. The redoubtable ladies are portrayed by Jean Kraft (Mistress Page) and Ellen Shade (Mistress Ford). Other pivotal cast members include Doug Perry as Bardolph, Sheri Greenawald as Nanetta, Vinson Cole as Fenton, Pablo Elvira as Ford (sharing the role with Lenus Carlson. Contralto Maureen Forrester, newly slimmed-down; cuts a fine comic figure as Mistress Quickly and her voice sounds as good, or even better, as when she sang with the Midland-Odessa Symphony several seasons back.

Director Colin Graham's staging of "Falstaff" is excellent and Allen Charles Klein's rustic set, though not what one would call pretty, is appropriate and very workable. Conductor Edo de Waart's musical direction is intelligent and well paced.

Giordano's "Fedora," having its first Santa Fe production, would be, I think, rather lackluster without the gorgeous sets and costumes and the fine singers that SFO provides. Definitely "Fedora" is no match, musically or theatrically, for the composer's better-known "Andrea Chenier."

In the title role of Princess Fedora Romazov is soprano Evelyn Lear who not only has a splendid voice, and uses it well, but also is a good actress. Also featured in the cast are Jack Trussel as Loris, Helen Vanni as Countess Olga Sukarev, William Dansby as Gretch, David Ward as Grigori and Thomas Palmer as Count de Siriex. The opera's handsome sets are by John Conklin and the equally striking costumes were designed by Dona Granata. John O. Crosby, the SFO's founder and general director, conducts.

Mozart's "Cosi Fan Tutte," one of the most-often-presented operas at Santa Fe (the current production is the sixth one) has been staged by Peter Wood, with sets and costumes designed by Paul Steiberg.

Jazz group chartered

The Midland Jazz Association Inc., has been chartered as a non-profit Texas corporation and is planning its first jazz party for Nov. 15 through 20.

According to Max H. Christensen, the invitational event in the Midland Hilton will feature 23 leading jazz musicians. The lineup will include guitarists Bucky Pizzarelli and George Burns, pianists Dave

ENTERTAINMENT

McKenna, Derek Smith and Dick Hyman, saxophonists Kenny Davern, Johnny Mince, Flip Phillips and Eddie Miller, trumpeters Pee Wee Erwin, Ed Polcer and Ruby Braff, tromobonists Carl Fontana, Ed Hubble and Bill Watrous, drummers Mousey Alexander, Jake Hanna and Cliff Leeman, bassists Jack Lesberg, Milt "Judge" Hinton and Michael Moore, singer Mavis Rivers and vibes expert Red Norvo.

The jazz party will have daily performances in the Hilton ballroom.

Third play slated

COLORADO CITY — The Colorado City Playhouse will open a production of Tennessee Williams' "The Glass Menagerie" Thursday night.

"Menagerie," third attraction of the Playhouse's current season, will have additional performances Friday and Saturday nights and concluding presentations Sept. 1 through 3. Curtain time will be 8 o'clock daily.

"Menagerie," which established Williams as a major figure in American theater, is the story of a former Southern belle, Amanda Wingfield, her crippled daughter, Laura, and the gentlemen caller whom Amanda hopes to snare as husband for her shy and gentle daughter. The "memory play," set in the 1930s, is narrated by Amanda's son, Tom.

The play is directed by George Womack. Bobbie Steakley has the role of Amanda, Cynthia Wishart will be seen as Laura and Bill Martin portrays the gentleman caller. Carl Beery Moore has the part of Tom.

Performances of "Ths Glass Menagerie" will be in the historic Colorado City Opera House, a turn-of-the-century structure which has been completely restored. The small auditorium seats 160, offering a pleasant, intimate kind of theater experience.

Tickets for the performances are now on sale at the box office, and they may be reserved by telephoning 728-3491.

FOLKSINGER Linda Jean of Fort Davis will be guest artist with the Midland-Odeasa Symphony in an annual "Pops in the Park" concert at 8:15 p.m. Saturday in Midland's Wadley Barron Park, West Cuthbert and North A streets. The concert, featuring light classical works and Broadway show tunes in addition to the guest vocalist's ballads and folksongs, will be repeated at 8:15 p.m. next Sunday in Odessa's Sherwood Park.

Season to end with 'Promises'

FORT WORTH — "Promises, Promises," the recent Broadway musical featuring songs by Burt Bacharach and Hal David, will be the final musical of Casa Manana's 1977 summer season.

The show, starring TV and screen personality Ken Berry, will open Monday night at Fort Worth's well-known theater-in-the-round, with performances to continue through Sept. 3. Performances will be at 8:15 p.m. Monday through Saturday each week, in addition to Saturday matinees at 2:30. Reserved seat tickets for all presentations are now on sale at the Casa Manana box office, 3101 W. Lancaster Blvd., and they may be ordered by telephoning 817-332-6221.

"Promises, Promises" will be Berry's first engagement at Casa Manana; he comes to Fort Worth directly from work on a new Disney Studios film, "The Cat From Outer Space."

Berry will be renembered as the star of the popular "Mayberry R.F.D." series on TV, and for his work in numerous films in recent years. Berry also has been active on the stage, having toured in productions of "Music Man," "Oklahoma!", "No, No, Nanette" and "I Do! I Do!". He has made guest appearances on many TV variety shows in recent years.

"Promises, Promises," based on the award-winning film, "The Apartment," is the story of an engaging bumbler in the headquarters of a big corporation, who wins promotions by lending the key to his apartment to corporation executives for illicit nights out.

Playing opposite Berry will be Brenda Thomson of Los Angeles as Fran Kubelik, his love-interest. Other featured players include John Hickman as J. D. Sheldrake, Nancy Bond as Marge MacDougall, Al Evans as Dr. Dreyfuss. Still other cast members are David Cooper, Zac Ward, Ray Erlenborn, Carter Smith, Sharon Garrison, Robyn Doolin, Ginger Williams, and Sheryll Fager-Jones.

"Promises, Promises" has been described as "the first musical where you go out feeling rhythms rather than humming tunes." The show has 15 songs, no less than eight of which were emphatic hits, including the two most popular of all, "I'll Never Fall in Love Again" and "Promises, Promises."

Jack Bunch, co-producer of the show with Bud Franks, has staged and directed the production. The musical director and conductor of the Casa orchestra is Joseph Stecko. Set designs are by Charles S. Kading and lighting is by Cleta Watts.

Following the conclusion of "Promises, Promises" on Sept. 3, Casa Manana Musicals will close out its 1977 season with a one-week special, "An Evening With Florence Henderson," scheduled Sept. 5 through 10.

Music series to resume

ODESSA — Even as the Globe of the Great Southwest prepares to close its ninth annual Summer Shakespeare Festival with a matinee performance of "Two Gentlemen of Verona" this afternoon, the theater is looking ahead to the fall-winter portion of its 1977 season.

Tryouts to fill parts in the Globe's October production, "Bell, Book and Candle," will take place at the theater at 7:30 p.m. Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday, open to all interested actors in the Midland-Odessa area.

Then, on Sept. 10, the Globe will resume its popular Saturday night country-Western music events. The series, heretofore known as the Odessa Brand New Opry, this season has an altered name, the Odessa Brand New Opree, a change made necessary to avoid litigation from the Nashville Grand Ol' Opry which claimed the Odessa Opry was an infringement on its trademark title.

The Sept. 10 opening show will feature the Melody Masters as the house band, and others booked for the evening include the Pierce Family of Stanton, the Grapevine Singers, a gospel group, and individual singers David van Housen, Robin Anderson, Carrie Vaughn, David Pollard and Linda Martin.

The Odessa Brand New Opree will have additional shows on Sept. 17 and 24 and Oct. 1 before shutting down for the month of October while "Bell, Book and Candle" is having performances on the Globe stage.

"Bell, Book and Candle," by John van Druten, is a comedy about a beautiful 20th Century witch, Gillian Holroyd, and the problems she encounters when she falls in love with a normal mortal, Stephen Henderson.

The Globe production will open Oct. 7, with additional performances on Oct. 8, 14, 15, 21 and 22. The production will be staged by Durward Jacobs, guest director at the Globe of the Great Southwest this season while Globe managing director Charles McCally is on leave of absence to complete work on a doctoral degree in theater.

Today's final performance in the summer festival series will begin at 2:30 p.m. Tickets will be for sale at the box office in advance of show time.

Library group plans 10th book, record sale

One of Midland's most popular yearly events, the used books and records sale sponsored by the Friends of the Midland County Library, comes up Oct. 14, 15 and 16.

This year's sale — the 10th one — will be held in the County Exhibit Building on East U.S. 80, with all proceeds to be utilized by the Friends organization for special projects and programs benefitting the public library. Funds from earlier book sales went to such projects as the art rental department of the library, the Bookmobile project, the Sci-Tech fund, landscaping projects, and purchase of motion picture projectors and audio-visual equipment.

Again this year, the Friends organization is sounding a call for donations of books, phonograph records, magazines, jigsaw puzzles and art works for the sale.

All residents of the city and county with items to contribute are asked to bring them to the public library, 301 W. Missouri Ave., any weekday during regular library hours. The items may be delivered to the library garage entrance in the alley on the west side of the building.

Persons with large quantities of items to donate may contact the library to arrange to have the items picked up by members of the Friends organization.

Ballet group plans workshop

A special workshop for dancers and prospective dancers of Permian Civic Ballet will be held here this week.

The workshop will begin Wednesday and continue through Aug. 28 in the studios of Bingham Dance Center here. Registration and auditions of junior dancers will be at 2 p.m. Wednesday, and for senior company members, at 3 p.m.

William Martin-Viscount of Fort Worth, who serves as artistic director for Permian Civic Ballet, will be in charge of the daily sessions. The workshop is planned to provide technical training for the dancers as well as to work out the choreography for the ballet organization's December production. Additional information on the workshop is available from Mrs. Patrick Lipscomb, member of the Permian Civic Ballet Association board of directors.

Theater begins tryout sessions

The first of three tryout sessions to fill roles in Midland Community Theatre's next major porduction, "The Bat," will be at 3 p.m. today in Theatre Centre, 2301 W. Indiana Ave.

Additional sessions will take place there Monday and Wednesday nights, beginning at 8. All will be open to interested actors in Midland and surrounding area.

"The Bat," a classic mystery thriller by Mary Roberts Rinehart and Avery Hopwood, is based on Mrs. Rinehart's famous novel, "The Circular Staircase."

The play, which has parts for seven men and three women, will go into rehearsal soon for an early fall opening. It will be the fifth production of MCT's 1977 season.

Skaters perform 'ballet on ice'

By DON McNICOLL

LONDON (AP) — Skating superstar John Curry has brought a new dimension to London entertainment with his spectacular ice show, now pulling in tourists and locals to the legendary Palladium Theater.

The critics have hailed Curry as the Rudolf Nureyev of the silver blades, and polished up their most flattering phrases to praise his "Theater of Skating."

The dazzling show, best described as ballet on ice, will complete an eight-week run at the end of August. Then it will go on a two-year tour covering Western Europe, Scandinavia, the United States, Australia, New Zealand and South Africa.

Curry, the first British skater to win the European men's figure skating title, the Olympic gold medal and the world championship in the same season, has on stage with him a gifted and comely cast of American, Canadian, and British skaters.

But he is unquestionably the star, especially in his "L'Apres Midi D'Un Faune," and in "Icarus" — as the audiences are reminded: Daedalus made a pair of great wings for his son Icarus, launching him into the bright air with pride and hope. The boy flew bravely and with increasing wonder, and in his exaltation he did not mind the sun's power to melt his wings and end his flight forever.

London has seen ice shows aplenty over the years. But even the very best of these could not challenge the rich perfection that Curry, his choreographers, dancers, designers, musicians and lighting experts have achieved to delight eye and ear.

For years, Curry dreamed of uniting the techniques and styles of ice skating and the ballet. He made his first attempt at London's Cambridge Theater earlier in the year, and although that show was acclaimed, Curry regarded it as very much of an initial pioneering effort.

The Palladium presentation on blue ice on a much bigger stage, with every refinement that Curry and his team could devise, transforms the familiar ice show to the level of a new art form.

The respected Daily Express critic Herbert Kretzmer made the point that, "No matter how you dress up your skaters, there is a strictly limited repertoire of movements and positions possible on ice, only so many twists, turns and leaps that go on repeating themselves with slight variations, intil the curtain falls."

But his criticism was heavily laced with praise. He said that Curry, "a riveting performer, every inch a superstar ... was brilliantly successful in catching on ice the effect of flight" in Icarus, choreographed by John Butler, regarded in London as one of America's most brilliant choreographers.

The show opens with "Le Valse Glace," choreographed by Ronald Hynd, once a principal dancer at the Royal Ballet and now an internationally favored choreographer. This will not rank as his greatest work, and indeed drew a verdict of "quite dreadful" from Clement Crisp in the Financial Times, although other critics were friendlier in their comments.

By ANDY LANG
AP Newsfeatures

At least once a year, you should use at least a portion of one day for no other purpose than to decide what must be done when you have the energy to do something.

It applies, of course, to home owners, who are continually making mental notes of things that have to be done in the future. Most of them never actually get done, for one reason or another, but chiefly because they are remembered only when there isn't time to do them. When the time is available, they are conveniently forgotten.

One possible solution to the predicament is a deliberate checkup in which a pencil and notebook are an integral part of the process. You simply make a tour of the outside of the house, taking plenty of time to observe everything. Write down anything that needs attention.

What this does is to give you a list that you can refer to any time you get the urge to fix something. Even if the urges are few and far between, the list is permanent. While it is in existence, you cannot excuse your inaction on the grounds that you simply forgot what it was you wanted to do.

As you do the checking, make up your mind that you will overlook nothing, no matter how insignificant it might seem at the time. That tiny gap between the wall and a window, for example, might not be large enough to admit a pencil, but if left neglected, could become an entranceway for a driving rain that ruins an entire wall. Therefore, check all openings, especially around doors, window frames and places where dissimilar materials are joined.

Look at the gutters and downspouts. Remember how, in the recent heavy rain, the water poured over the gutter at that point to the left of the bedroom window? Mark it down. Is the flashing intact at the point where the chimney comes out of the roof?

Do the window wells need a cleaning so they don't overflow again? How about those two flagstones in the walkway that have sunk a bit? Make note that the mortar has started to deteriorate at several places in the brick wall.

What about those gaps in the concrete patio floor? Shouldn't they be fixed before water moving into them makes the separations wider?

All right, now you have a long list. What are you going to do about it?

Fall fashions reflect warmth, softness

By LANA CUNNINGHAM

Last winter the designers felt the cold shock of an unexpected energy shortage. This winter, they are prepared for it.

New fall styles in Midland stores reflect a major change in materials to keep the woman warmer, but the styles will make her more feminine.

The trend is toward natural fibers and away from the large number of polyesters used in clothing the past few years. Nevertheless, the fabrics are luxurious to the eye and hand, according to John Ingram of a Tall City fashion store. Silk is seen in blouses for both daytime and evening wear. Wool, which slipped into the background when the easy care polyesters came on the market, has reappeared in various forms.

There is lightweight wool challis for dresses and blouses with wool gabardines and heavier wools used in skirts, pants, vests and jackets.

Another change in wools noted by Pat Murphey of a local department store is that many of the wool fashions will be lined to give a softer feel to the wearer. "It is not the scratchy type it (wool) used to be."

Cashmere and angora fibers also are being used in various garments, and mostly sweaters. It gives warmth to the wearer, but the woman still retains the soft look. And if the woman can not afford the real thing in the natural fibers, they are being copied in forms of polyester, according to Della Neal, owner of a Midland woman's clothing store.

A polyester gabardine is similar in looks and feel to the wool gabardine. Another polyester fabric resembles the softness of angora.

Corduroy has been used for winter fashions for many years, but this year it is even stronger with the emphasis upon providing warmth and style for the woman. Again, this fabric gives a look of softness to the fashion. Corduroys range from the pinwale to the extra wide wale, and even to the ribless, which Mrs. Murphey described as so soft it almost looks and feels like velvet.

The best fall colors listed by the Midland fashion experts are the earth tones with grays, camels, rusts, browns and sandstones. Jo Ann Johnson described some of the colors as dusty tones. "They are not clear and bright." Other colors are forest greens, teal blues, purple, mauve and raisin.

Solid colors are not as prominent this year. Ingram sees prints, stripes and plaids being used.

Layering is the big news in the fall lines. Last year when the eastern and northern United States experienced one of the severest winters in history, people were bundling up to stay warm. This year, that layer upon layer of clothing is considered to be fashionable. Actually, it is practical. This year, with President Carter wanting the thermostats kept down, women can keep warm in style.

According to Mrs. Neal, the more layers a woman has, the better it is. But, as one fashion buyer for a Midland store quipped, "Some designers have done it so much it would be hard to walk out the door."

The layering, though, has to be adapted to the West Texas weather with the Midland woman probably not wearing as many layers as those in the East.

Dresses and skirts are big this year in the designers' lines. The lengths shown basically are below the knee, but can be worn at the length where the woman feels it is the most comfortable.

Dresses are continuing the soft, feminine look started in the spring and summer. "The fall is for dressing up again," Ingram said. "The past has been subdued and tailored. Women now are looking to glamour."

Wool challis, crepe de chine and jersey are the most popular fabrics for dresses. Many are modeled after the Russian peasant dress, according to Brenda Cauthen of a local fashion store. These styles have the rounded gathered neckline, full sleeves and gathered skirta,

The thin wools in these dresses can be worn easily in West Texas, according to Mrs. Cauthen. "It is warm when the weather is cold, but they are not hot when the weather is warmer."

Skirts are "really popular this year," Mrs. Johnson said. They are soft with pleats and gathers or a full cut. The longer length is being used with boots, according to Mrs. Cathy Yates of a Midland store.

Skirts are a popular item used in the layering idea with sweaters, blouses, vests and jackets.

Sweaters are very big this year, Mrs. Yates reported, with the cowl neck sweater being the major style. Also coming back on the scene after an absence of several years are the classic Shetland wool sweaters with the crew or V-neckline. These are worn over the classic oxford shirt, Mrs. Cauthen added. Also coming in are long coat sweaters which reach to the knees or below.

The blazer still is a good styled jacked that can be combined with pants, skirts or gaucho pants. Mrs. Yates described it as a classic that will be around for many years.

Some designers are modifying the blazer and making it shorter this fall to go with the fuller skirts. Vests also have been changed to fit the fuller styles. One vest is longer and with small slits up each side to allow for the full skirts, Mrs. Cauthen said.

Number one in tops is the blouson, Mrs. Murphey said. It had its beginnings last spring and summer, and has expanded to the fall lines. There are blousons that button or zip up the front, and some that are pulled over the woman's head. These can be worn with the cowl-necked sweater.

More pleats are being seen in the pants, Mrs. Cauthen reported, and Mrs. Neal said jeans with pleats also are popular. The pleated pant gives women "a feminine look and are more comfortable and dressier."

Slimmer-legged pants are being worn tucked inside boots. Following the same idea are knickers, which stop just above the top of the boot. Knickers are being sold more among the younger woman while gauchos and the slim pant can be worn by most women, Mrs. Neal added.

Blouses definitely are more softer and feminine. Mrs. Johnson explained they are made of silks, crepes, and crepe de chine. Wool challis also is good. Blouses are ruffled, bowed, tucked and gathered with fuller sleeves in some styles.

Swirling the skirt of her Victor Costa dress, Dawn Collins, left, is ready for a party. The dress features a black velvet bodice with sleeves and skirt of wool challis. Brenda Cauthen, right, wears a black and white wool tweed jumper with silk black and white plaid blouse featuring full sleeves. The outfit also is by Victor Costa. Black suede boots and suede clutch handbags complete the outfits. (Staff Photos by Bruce Partain)

Evening wear will shimmer with gold, an idea that also started in the summer. Evening gowns are made of fabrics using metallic threads and are worn with gold accessories.

Ingram described fall evening gowns as soft with many chiffons. Long skirts are big with many of satin.

An outfit is never complete without the accessories. Although dresses and skirts are popular, the leg is "out," reported Mrs. Cauthen. They are being covered by boots or opaque hose or socks.

Boots will be seeing one of their biggest years in West Texas this fall, Mrs. Murphey said. Although her store sold a large number of them last year, she feels they will be even more popular this year, and especially in suede.

Suede also is good for handbags, Mrs. Johnson said. Not only is suede warmer, but it reflects the softer look, she explained. The clutch and envelope handbag will be good, Mrs. Murphey added, although "everything goes, from large to small." These are constructed of every material ranging from leather to canvas.

Jewelry is seeing a swing toward pearls, which often are worn with the dark-colored evening dresses. The Midas touch of gold jewelry will be stong to match the shimmering evening gowns. Natural stones also are

Lightweight wool is used in the sandstone-colored pleated pants and navy blazer by Prophecy. A sandstone blouse with bow adds softness while the sandstone suede hat by Halston gives the final touch.

Jones of New York has designed two jacket and skirt outfits for the working woman. Mrs. Collins, left, wears a navy wool cutaway jacket with full cut skirt and creme blouse of wool challis. A Halston scarf of blue, grey and creme ties into an ascot. A forest green vest and skirt with silk printed blouse is modeled by Mrs. Cauthen. The vest has slits in the side to allow for the skirt's fullness. Both are wearing Halston cloches to complete the outfits.

Beverly Bessellieu becomes bride

Mrs. Michael Joseph Koenig

Michael Joseph Koenig, son of Mr. and Mrs. George C. Koenig of Cypress, formerly of Midland, married Beverly Lynn Bessellieu, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jack W. Bessellieu Jr., 2829 Durant St., at 6:30 p.m. Saturday in Trinity Presbyterian Church.

The double ring ceremony was officiated by Dr. William Hedrick. Mrs. Bertha Johnson was the organist, and Janet Frizell was soloist.

After a trip to Ruidoso, N.M., the couple will reside in College Station. She is a senior horticulture student and he is a junior marketing student at Texas A&M University.

Attending the bride as maid of honor was Paula O'Donnell of Corpus Christi. Carla Bates and Laura Wardroup of Midland and Terri Koenig of Houston were the bride's other attendants. The flower girl was Amie Mersinger of Columbus, Ohio, cousin of the bride.

Ben Disney was best man. The groomsmen were David Koenig of Cypress, brother of the bridegroom; Richard Koenig of Houston, also a brother of the bridegroom, and Roger Lasater of Waco. Ushers were Roy Kissel, Tom Ochs, Robert Thompson and Scott Meaders.

The bride was given in marriage by her father. She wore a traditional gown of white silk chiffon and Venise lace. It was styled with an Empire bodice with an English net yoke and Venise appliques, seed pearls and a wedding band neckline. The long angel sleeves were partially gathered to cuffs of Venise lace.

The flowing demi-bell skirt featured a chapel train. Her veil of silk illusion edged in matching Venise lace fell to fingertip length from a Juliet cap. She carried a semi-cascade bouquet of yellow roses, stephanotis and miniature white carnations, snowflake mums and Hahn's ivy.

Pre-nuptial courtesies included a display shower given by Mrs. A. J. Cain, Mrs. J. D. Ochsner, Mrs. B. H. McWilliams, Mrs. J. K. Lydecker, Mrs. S. H. Hinojosa and Mrs. J. E. Scherer. A rice bag party was given by Mrs. J. H. Frizell, Mrs. V. G. Brown and Mrs. B. L. McDearman. Mrs. G. L. Bates and Carla Bates had the bridesmaids' luncheon.

Out-of-city guests for the wedding and reception included Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Ziegler and Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Bessellieu of San Antonio, grandparents of the bride, and Mr. and Mrs. R. J. Martinez of Baton Rouge, La., the bridegroom's grandparents.

Designers offering variety being used in jewelry accessories, Mrs. Johnson added.

Scarves have grown to a larger size, called shawls by some, and are made of wool challis, again emphasizing the need for warmth with style. Flowers, used widely in the spring, are still popular but are in the fall shades and made of heavier materials, according to Mrs. Johnson.

"Everything is softer and prettier this year," Mrs. Murphey said in summing up her feelings toward the new styles.

Designers are offering more variety in their lines, she said. "They will never again say that 'your dresses should be short and you will wear them that way.'

"We dress the way we feel comfortable and that's the way it should be," she added.

Midland women are "very style conscious and they don't really have to go out of town to shop," Mrs. Neal said of the market in the Tall City.

"It's a fun season because the looks are good, and the women are really liking it," she added.

Hunter Midkiffs to be honored on anniversary

Mr. and Mrs. Hunter Midkiff of Midland will be honored on their 40th wedding anniversary with a dinner party Monday in the home of their son, Sam Midkiff, 903 W. Kansas St.

The dinner will be given by the children of the couple, Sam, James R. Midkiff of Coyonosa and Leann Midkiff Giles of Midland.

Mr. and Mrs. Midkiff were married Aug. 22, 1937, in Midland.

By ERICA WILSON

I get so many letters from readers asking WHAT fabrics are good for WHAT projects that I thought a column devoted to the subject was the best idea. Though we're lucky to be experiencing a time when "anything goes" in needlework, there's no doubt about it: certain fabrics "go" better than others, and to guard against a bad case of needlework nerves, it's better to know what's what before a project begins, rather than after it's over.

Ginghams—those luscious checks that line themselves up in the notions department like candy—are absolutely a godsend when it comes to doing cross stitch. Depending on how big or small you want your stitches, you can pick the gingham check size to match, and keep everything beautifully crisp and straight because your fabric will be your guide. I also swear by gingham for smocking—the alignment of the checks means half the work is done for you when it comes to keeping your stitches in line, and it gathers up into one color once you're all done.

For patchwork, you'll have far less work ahead of you if you stick with soft cottons, percales and muslins. Don't use anything with dacron fibers; they're very springy and don't lie down, and when you're ironing your "hems" back on your individual patchwork squares, it's truly a must to have fabric that behaves and lies down when you want it to.

With crewel embroidery, I always use 100 per cent linen or cotton homespun. There's nothing like a rich, luxurious background cloth to make your wool stitches sit up and be noticed. Linen twill is another fabric that's becoming popular for crewel; it's a diagonal weave that gives a very subtle, tweedy background to your work.

Speaking of subtle effects, firms like Burlington are still importing "teasles" (a kind of dried thistle) to this country from Avallon in France, where they're grown. They are used to brush up linen, for a furry, velvety nap. The spiny thistle has hundreds of tiny "hooks" on each head, which literally scratch the material to make it stand up. It's heartening to note that in the 20th century, a centuries-old method is still the preferred one!

Well, modern times have brought some improvements—like Moccaskin and Ultrasuede, which duplicate the real thing, but are far easier for the needleworker to work with. Both are great for covering boxes and making handbags, because when you cut the fabric, it doesn't fray. (If you insist on using velvet for some project along the way, be sure to use cotton velvet with a very flat pile, or even corduroy, and it won't be so difficult to stitch on.)

When deciding upon a good, strong fabric, nothing beats blue jean denim or mattress ticking—both need to be pre-softened with a good go-round in the machine, but it's worth the extra step because besides being rugged, they're terrific backgrounds for stitches. An added bonus to ticking is that it gives you automatic vertical lines to guide your stitches. Perfect for samplers, where your rows of different stitches sit wonderfully even side by side, with an occasional line or two of ticking peeking through for visual interest.

And finally, for shadow work, that lovely, transparent form of whitework stitchery, organdy and crinoline are the best choices. They'll set off your fine, airy stitches magnificently and let the light filter through for maximum effect.

Couple builds a sweet home

In 1949 Mrs. Paschall and her husband built a house based on instructions published in a newspaper, using about 2½ pounds of sugar cubes. They put the cubes together with a firm paste made with powdered sugar with unbeaten egg whites.

The little white house, hardened like concrete in the ensuing years, has been serving as the Paschall family's main Christmas decoration.

Mrs. Paschall now plans to make a similar house for each of her four grandchildren.

DEAR ABBY

Son's live-in 'wife' not considered family

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: My boyfriend's parents are celebrating their golden wedding anniversary this month, and have planned a big bash at a very fancy country club.

They say it's only family and close friends, and you guessed it—I'm not invited. I have lived with their son for three years, and if that doesn't make me "family," I don't know what does.

I could marry him if I wanted to, but if I did I would lose the alimony I'm getting from my last husband, and also the child support from my kids' father. (My second husband.) I also think marriage is very old-fashioned today.

Everybody in town, including my boyfriend's parents, knows that we have been living together, so why shouldn't my kids and I be invited?

I hear that my boyfriend's ex-wife and her kids will be there. I ask you, is that fair? I think it's rotten for his folks to treat me this way. Am I wrong?—LEFT OUT

DEAR LEFT: Yes. (In two counts.) (1) Marriage is NOT "old-fashioned"—it's as popular today as it ever was. (2) Your boyfriend's parents are free to invite (and exclude) whomever they wish. It's their party.

DEAR ABBY: I witnessed an incident at the beach last Sunday that ruined my day. A young mother was trying to teach her daughter, who appeared to be about three, to swim. She held the child's head under the water and yelled, "If you don't learn to enjoy the water, you'll never learn to swim!"

Meanwhile the poor child was hysterical as she clung to her mother for dear life, crying and begging her to stop. The mother tore the child's little hands loose, and pushed her head under the water time and time again, insisting she had to learn to "like" the water. The child came up repeatedly, gasping, choking and pleading, but the mother showed her no mercy.

I wanted to say something to the mother, but I was afraid she'd tell me to mind my own business. Later I heard her tell her friend that a swimming teacher had told her that this was the only way to teach a child how to swim.

I had a similar experience when I was young. I'm now 32, I never learned to swim, and I'm still afraid of water.—CONCERNED IN GA.

DEAR CONCERNED: Whether or not the mother knew it, she was abusing that child, and child abuse is everybody's business. You should have told that mother what you told me.

DEAR ABBY: Are there any foods or beverages which will help a person sexually? I have heard there are several.—WANTS TO KNOW

DEAR WANTS: I know of none. But if you believe that a certain food or drink will "help you" sexually, by all means try it. It probably will.

Everyone has a problem. What's yours? For a personal reply, write to ABBY in care of this newspaper. Enclose stamped, self-addressed envelope, please.

Michael P. Towers marries Miss Gipson

AUSTIN — Joyce Ann Gipson and Michael Patrick Towers were married in a double ring ceremony at sunset in St. Luke's Episcopal Church on Lake Travis here.

The bride, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Elwin Gipson of Lufkin, is an honor graduate of Rice University with a degree in banking.

The bridegroom, son of Mr. and Mrs. Clem H. Roberts of 3110 Stanolind St., Midland, received a bachelor of arts degree from The University of Texas-Austin, where he was head tutor for the Athletic Department two years. His social fraternity was Chi Phi for which he served as pledge president and rush captain.

The couple will reside in San Marcos, where Towers will attend Southwest Texas State University on a fellowship. He will teach in the Department of English while working towards a masters degree.

Rubella screening tests help prevent birth defects

COLLEGE STATION — Rubella screening for women of childbearing age can signal their susceptibility to the disease, advises Carla Shearer, health education specialist with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, The Texas A&M University System.

When a pregnant woman contracts rubella (German measles), her baby may suffer brain damage, deafness, heart defects or blindness—and screening tests can help prevent this, Miss Shearer says.

Family doctors or local health departments may give the test, and the Texas Department of Health Resources will offer the test free of charge to women 20 to 30 years of age—during August (Immunization Action Month), September and October.

Blood samples will be sent to laboratories in Austin for analysis and results will be returned to local departments. Those needing immunization will be told and referred to their private physicians, the specialist says.

Immunizations have prevented major epidemics in the state this decade, but in the first six months of 1977, Texas had four times more reported cases than in the same period last year, Miss Shearer adds.

Look who's in kitchen now—Peter Rabbit

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
AP Food Editor

Who could ever be as naughty as Peter Rabbit? Certainly not his sisters — Flopsy, Mopsy and Cottontail.

For in Beatrix Potter's "The Tale of Peter Rabbit," published 75 years ago and loved by children and adults since then, Flopsy, Mopsy and Cottontail were "good little bunnies" who "went down the lane to gather blackberries." It was Peter who, disobeying his mother, ran straight to Mr. McGregor's garden and into trouble.

Poor Peter! After his adventure he was not very well and his mother put him to bed and gave him a dose of camomile tea. "But Flopsy, Mopsy, and Cottontail had bread and milk and blackberries for supper."

To celebrate the 75th anniversary of the classic tale, Frederick Warne has published "Peter Rabbit's Natural Foods Cookbook" written by Arnold Dobrin and illustrated by dozens of Beatrix Potter's marvelous pictures. We couldn't resist trying Flopsy, Mopsy and Cottontail's fresh blueberry cobbler, even though we had to use frozen unsweetened berries because at the time the fresh ones weren't around. The cobbler is delicious. There's only one sad note. Although Arnold Dobrin notes that instead of blueberries other fresh fruit — cherries, raspberries, peaches, apples or rhubarb may be used — not a word does he say about blackberries.

FLOPSY, MOPSY AND COTTONTAIL'S FRESH BLUEBERRY COBBLER

Equipment: colander or strainer; medium-sized saucepan; measuring cups and spoons; baking dish (9 x 9); medium-sized mixing bowl; fork; two dinner knives or a pastry blender; pot holders; hot mat or wire rack.

Ingredients:

¼ cup water
¾ cup granulated white or raw sugar
1 cup whole wheat flour
¾ cup brown sugar, loosely packed
½ teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon baking powder
Pinch of nutmeg
1-3rd cup butter or margarine

Turn on the oven and let it heat to 350 degrees.

Wash the blueberries in a colander or strainer and pick out any stems and leaves. Put the fruit, water and white or raw sugar in a saucepan and bring to a boil stirring so sugar does not burn. Simmer for two minutes. Pour the slightly cooked fruit into the baking dish.

Add the butter or margarine, cut into small pieces. Use a pastry blender, or use two knives, one in each hand, and cut the butter or margarine into the flour mixture until it forms crumbs about the size of peas.

Sprinkle the crumbs over the berries. Bake for 25 minutes, or until the crumbs are light brown. Use the pot holders to remove the baking dish from the oven. Set the dish on a hot mat or wire rack to cool slightly.

The Wine Cellar

by Sam Day

Burgundy the heavy red or white wine form the golden slopes of Burgundy, has inspired many stories and reference in literature. It has also been rather expensive and often hard to obtain. It wasn't until the sixteenth century, when Charles V of Spain and the Holy Roman Empire handed the Duchy of Burgundy to the King of France, the Parisians had a chance to really taste the wine at their leisure. Shakespeare mentions in King Learr, describing it as waterish. It is doubtful he was talking about the real thing. In the 18th century, the Crown put prohibitively high tariffs on French wines, and the colonies and England had to smuggle in all that they could drink, and that wasn't easy.

Now you can injoy Burgundy at your leisure-see our fine selection of red and white Burgundies at IMPERIAL LIQUORS, 3209 W. Wadley, 694-4256. Indeed, we feature a full selection of imported and domestic wines at the home of the friendly moustache as well as a complete array of champagnes, beers and distilled spirits. Drive-up window service available Hours: 10-9 Mon. - Sat.

The first major program changes in Girl Scouting since 1963, for girls ages six through 11 are encompassed in "Worlds to Explore", a new combined handbook for Brownie and Junior Girl Scouts, according to Doris Gallagher, public relations coordinator for the Permian Basin Girl Scout Council.

"Worlds to Explore" contains many new activities for today's and tomorrow's world, but also retains much that is familiar and traditional in Girl Scouting. The chief innovations are projected for youngsters in the fields of science and technology, and the treatment of a career, as well as the home, as an extra part of a woman's life.

The new handbook has six sections: an introduction to Girl Scouting, and five "Worlds to Explore"—World of Well-being, World of People, World of Today and Tomorrow, World of the Arts and World of the Out-of-Doors. Each illustrated chapter, including many pieces of how-to art, offers a broad range of activities. Unlike the previous handbook, girls can choose activities according to interests and abilities rather than age level.

The World of the Out-of-Doors section expands on the traditional Girl Scouting involvement with camping, nature and conservation. Because, for example, girls are doing more at a younger age, for the first time Brownies are encouraged to go troop camping. There is greater emphasis on ecology and understanding of the environment, said Mrs. Gallagher, whether it's on a farm, in an urban apartment, a suburban house or mobile home.

In the World of Today and Tomorrow chapter, the youngsters are introduced to the metric system, to carpentry, in addition to simple scientific experiments, and insights in to what the future can hold for them as working women, explained Mrs. Gallagher. World of the Arts includes activities in the whole range of arts, visual, performing and literary.

Activities in the World of Well-Being chapter highlight physical and emotional health, nutrition, the home, safety and consumer awareness, among other topics. In the World of People section, citizenship projects are geared to developing appreciation of differing cultures and building pride in one's heritage.

Incorporated throughout the new handbook's five worlds are certain basics that have made Girl Scouting unique and that have stood the test of time, pointed out Mrs. Gallagher, such as principles embodied in the Promise and Law, the concept of service and international friendship.

The handbooks are available in the 2,000 Girl Scout departments of retail stores in all parts of the United States and by mail from Girl Scout National Equipment Service and J.C. Penney Co. catalogues.

AT WIT'S END

Son prefers getting over giving at home

By ERMA BOMBECK

My neighbor, Wanda Weird, was complaining to me the other day about her son. "That kid is going to drive me crazy," she said. "Everytime I turn around he wants to be paid for what he does. Do you know what he had the nerve to give me last Mother's Day? He gave me a chintzy little plaque made out of library paste and toothpicks that he made himself."

"I think that's rather sweet," I said. "From a 19-year-old boy?"

I know how Wanda feels. Our son's middle name is, "Do I have to use my own money?" Some years ago, in a burst of parental insanity, we initiated the "allowance" system at our house. We thought it would be an incentive to do a good job, instill a firsthand working knowledge of how our free enterpriae system works, and give him a feeling of financial independence. We didn't know then he was saving up for a down payment to buy Nevada.

What do we get for our $2 a week?

We get the table cleared whether we are still eating or not. I have had my coffee cup snatched from my mouth while my lips were still blistering.

We get a decision-maker who decides that the remains of a $6 sirloin should be tossed down the disposer while a peach seed floating in a bowl of syrup should be saved in the refrigerator.

We get a garbage hustler whose open lid policy has attracted dogs who have taken busses to get to our garbage can smorgasbord each night.

Every week, his money goes into the bank, giving life to a new adage, "It is better to receive than to give." Whether it's gum, a movie, a poster, a record, there is always the perennial, "Do I have to use my own money?"

Yesterday, we stopped in front of an ice cream parlor and I could just anticipate his next guestion. So I said to him, "I do not think you realize that it costs parents $147,114 to raise just one child. That includes education, health expenses, clothes, housing, food, and the potential salary of a mother who might have worked but stayed at home to raise the child. There is some sacrifice involved. Of course, we wouldn't have it any other way. But think about it. Imagine that in a lifetime your father and I will have coughed up $147,154 on your behalf."

He was silent for a moment, then got out of the car and went in for the ice cream. When he returned, he handed me a cone and said, "I only got one dip each for us. I didn't think you could afford two dips each."

Diseases trigger malnutrition

Copley News Service

Malnutrition can result from many causes beyond a faulty diet. Numerous people suffer from symptoms of low nutrient intake, even though they believe their diet is balanced and adequate in nutritional requirements.

Some of the most common problems are caused by inherited or genetic disorders, infections, various diseases or surgery.

The phenomena of hospital-induced malnutrition can affect 25 per cent to 50 per cent of hospitalized patients whose stay extends for two weeks or more.

Genetic conditions may exist which involve reactions to various vitamins and minerals.

Some people have a sensitivity to gluten, a protein found in wheat, rye, barley and oats. The sensitivity apparently results from the lack of an enzyme needed to properly digest and assimilate the gluten. Damage to the lining of the intestinal tract occurs, resulting in chronic diarrhea.

This is called celiac disease in children and because of the poor absorption of many nutrients, including fat-soluble vitamins, they usually become underweight, anemic and retarded in growth.

A gluten-free diet is essential in the treatment of this disease. Rice and potatoes, or potato starch is substituted for the offending foods and combined with a diet high in other nutrients.

Some people lack the enzyme lactase which is necessary to digest lactose found in milk and milk products. Those so afflicted may find that the ingestion of milk, ice cream or other foods containing milk, will result in nausea, vomiting and diarrhea. Severe protein losses can occur and all milk must be eliminated from the diet.

Mrs. Theresa C. Cloer was matron of honor, and Robert M. Grace was best man. The bridesmaids were Kathy Bradford of San Antonio, Susan Wilson of Baltimore, Md., Nancy Grace of Midland, Sandra Gorrirge of of Fort Worth and Judy Williamson of Hurst. The groomsmen were Dale Stephens and Larry Cloer of Arlington, Raymond Holbert of Dallas, Kirby Bradford of San Antonio and Jim Wilson of Baltimore. Ushers were John and David Grace, brothers of the bridegroom.

The couple will reside in Arlington. She is a senior, majoring in marketing, at The University of Texas-Arlington. The bridegroom is a graduate of UT-A with a degree in accounting. He was a member of Phi Gamma Delta fraternity.

Miss Johnson marries Scharbauer

Karen Sue Johnson became the bride of Douglas Scharbauer in a double ring ceremony held at 7:30 p.m. Saturday in First United Methodist Church.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ted Charles Johnson of 2204 N. H St. Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Scharbauer Jr., 2001 Sinclair St., are the bridegroom's parents.

Officiating for the ceremony were Dr. Charles E. Lutrick and the Rev. J. B. Stewart.

Mrs. Bert Glass Johnson, sister-in-law of the bride, was matron of honor. The maid of honor was Lyn Story of Houston.

The bridesmaids were Pamela Ruth Scharbauer of Missoula, Mont., sister of the bridegroom, Betsy Ann Casselman of Midland, Elizabeth Ann Black of Houston and Molly Virginia Allen of San Antonio. The bridesmatron was Mrs. Jesse Charles Callaway.

William Regan Brunner of Oklahoma City, Okla., was best man. Groomsmen were Bert Glass Johnson, brother of the bride; Clarence Scharbauer III and Chris Scharbauer, brothers of the bridegroom; Herschell F. Ezell III, Dallas; Jesse Mark Hill, Fort Smith, Ark., and Jack B. Wilkinson Jr., Midland.

Music was furnished by George L. DeHart, organist; Mrs. Robert Frank Ward, soloist; Mrs. H. P. McClintock of Dallas, harpist; Mrs. Charles E. Barber, violinist, and Mrs. Jack Beshears, flutist.

Matching lace covered her Camelot hat, over which was a shirred illusion mantilla. Narrow lace edged the veil around the face, with a wide border at the bottom, which cascaded to beyond the train's length. She carried a cascade of white roses.

The reception was held in Midland Country Club, before the couple left on a wedding trip to Greece, the Greek Isles and England. They will reside at 2210 Western Drive.

The bride is the granddaughter of George W. Glass and the late Mrs. Mabel Holt Glass. The bridegroom is the grandson of the late Mr. and Mrs. Fred Turner and Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Scharbauer.

THE VISIBLE WOMAN

Women know why they work

By JANET LOWE
Copley News Service

Now we've got it settled that a woman shouldn't feel guilty if she chooses to be a homemaker, and shouldn't feel guilty if she prefers to employed.

The dust has settled from that controversy and we find a strange phenomenon. It's one of the most distinct trends for the late 1960s and the 1970s — women are going to work, including mothers of small children, in ever-increasing numbers.

In 1920, women made up only 20 per cent of the nation's work fence. In the 1960s the percentage began accelerating and by 1970, 40 per cent of American women were employed.

Now, in 1977, 49 per cent of U.S. women are working outside the home. The increase has hit mothers as heavily as it has single and childless women. In 1940, only 1.5 million mothers were employed; by 1970, that number had jumped to more than 12 million.

Some Americans approve of this trend; others do not. But whether we like it or not, few of us understand what is happening.

A retired man told me, "It's that women's movement, they put ideas in people's heads."

I couldn't agree with that, since most of my friends and I were working long before we heard of the women's movement. Since the emergence of feminism, however, we do see our work differently.

I was curious about what American women had to say about why they worked.

While traveling extensively throughout the United States this last year, I asked hundreds of women that question.

"Because I like to see my children wearing shoes and eating breakfast," answered one woman. She is among the 6.5 million women who head households alone. She works to support a family.

Even the married woman is just as likely to work for economic reasons. About 18 per cent of the married women who have jobs are married to men whose income is less than $7,000; and 15 per cent are married to husbands earning less than $10,000 annually.

Another woman, who said her husband earned $13,000 a year, also worked for economic reasons.

"In our city, the average house costs $50,000, and you can't find a loan for less than 8.25 per cent, so if we're never going to own a home, I've got to be working," she explained.

A schoolteacher, whose husband also taught school, may have been said to work for pinmoney, but she sees it differently. "We could get along on my husband's salary, but if we do our budget is so tight we can't do much of anything, and we end up fighting all the time, just because the tension gets so bad."

Another reason for working cropped up among women who'd never had children, or whose children were grown. If they didn't work, they wouldn't have much to do. The average American family has fewer than three children, women are waiting longer to have children, and aren't having as many.

It is common for a woman to find herself with an "empty nest" by her mid- or late-30s.

"I've got nearly 30 years to go before my husband retires, and I don't care for tennis or bridge. Thirty years is a long stretch of boredom," commented a woman who now teaches sociology at a community college.

Recipe copies coating

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
Associated Press Food Editor

DEAR CECILY: Why don't you copycat the bought seasoned coating mix for chicken? After coating a cut-up chicken with an envelope of the mix, you bake the bird. Very easy, but I'd like to make my own mix. Recipe? — POULTRY FAN.

DEAR FAN: No sooner asked for than given. The following formula is as close to the bought mix as we can come. — C.B.

MAKE-AND-BAKE CHICKEN

¼ cup fine dry breadcrumbs
1 tablespoon cornstarch
1 teaspoon sugar
1 teaspoon chicken-flavor instant bouillon granules
½ teaspoon salt
½ teaspoon paprika
½ teaspoon dried minced onions
⅛ teaspoon garlic powder
2½-pound chicken, cut up
1 tablespoon corn oil

Into a large plastic bag turn the flour, breadcrumbs, cornstarch, sugar, bouillon granules, salt, paprika, onion and garlic powder; shake together. Brush each piece of chicken on all sides with the oil. Put 2 pieces of chicken into the bag and shake thoroughly; remove; repeat this two-at-a-time process with the remaining chicken. Place chicken in a single layer in a shallow baking pan. Bake in a preheated 400-degree oven for 20 minutes; turn chicken and continue baking for 20 minutes more. Serve at once. Makes 4 servings.

Personality awakens from 40-year sleep in three faces of Eve

By ANDREW ROSENTHAL

The 51-year-old woman — also known as Eve White, Eve Black and by 19 other names — says she became aware of herself as an individual for the first time about three years ago, when her deeply submerged personality awoke from what amounted to a 40-year slumber.

During that period, she said, her life was ruled, to the chagrin and pain of those close to her, by personalities manufactured by her own injured psyche.

Mrs. Sizemore was one of the world's most celebrated cases of multiple or fragmented personality. Her story gained popular attention from the film, "The Three Faces of Eve," which was inspired by the writings of her first psychiatrist, Dr. Corbett Thigpen.

As part of a long therapy with Dr. Tony Tsitos, she has written her own story, 20 years after the film was made, one year after she saw it for the first time. "I'm Eve" was coauthored by Mrs. Sizemore's cousin, Elen Sain Patillo.

In an interview in her New York hotel room, Mrs. Sizemore talked about her strange past, about her lives as Eve White, the Strawberry Girl, the Bell Lady, the Freckle Girl and others, all named for a character quirk manifested during their period of domination.

"It was at the death of the Retrace Lady," she recalled of her final "face." "It was the 19th of June in 1974, by the way. I remember the exact instant.

"When she died, there I was. Almost instantaneously, I was ready to create another one (personality). I felt so alone and terribly afraid."

Mrs. Sizemore said her fear was mixed with relief. At last, the woman who emerged seemed to be an adult version of the tortured child who had shut herself off from the world long ago, in a tiny North Carolina town, after a traumatic series of violent incidents.

Although Mrs. Sizemore and her doctors are certain that she is a healthy, whole person now, it was not the first time it had looked as though her life would resume a more normal course. After two years with Thigpen and Dr. Hervey Cleckley, in 1954 they had been satisfied that a final integration had taken place, Mrs. Sizemore said.

She then married Don Sizemore, her present husband, and tried to settle into a life of domesticity. But her problems reappeared, along with blinding headaches, fainting spells and amnesia.

"We were led to believe when we got married that all I had to do was love Chris and everything would be all right," her husband said. But then it started again.

"We didn't know when the next one was going to happen so I just learned to live with it," he continued.

Learning to live with it, he said, meant waking up one morning to a terrified woman who claimed she'd never seen him before. And it meant dealing with periods of blindness and muteness, too.

"I was so ashamed," said Mrs. Sizemore, making a tent of her fingertips and settling into a deep chair. She spoke calmly and with self-assurance, her round face creasing often into a smile.

"I thought I shouldn't be alive. I thought someone with a thing like that inside them didn't deserve to live."

But Mrs. Sizemore said she gradually came to understand herself. And when the Retrace Lady "died" she was sure her nightmare was over. For the first time, she's absorbed the memories of all the women and is "learning to deal with life differently," she said.

Mrs. Sizemore said she was starting to enjoy herself again. "I see things I've never seen before," she said. "Like bees on a leaf or grains of sand.

Mrs. Daniel John O'Hearn

Mary Pike, O'Hearn repeat vows

Mary Elizabeth Pike and Dr. Daniel John O'Hearn exchanged double ring wedding vows at 11 a.m. Saturday in the chapel of the First Presbyterian Church.

William J. Pike presented his sister in marriage. She wore a gown of white organza with an illusion yoke touched with sprays of Venise lace and capped with a double tiered capelet back. The skirt, falling from an Empire waistline, was flounced and ended in a chapel train. A garden hat of matching organza and lace completed her ensemble. She carried yellow roses, stephanotis and baby's breath.

Out-of-city guests for the wedding included the bride's grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. W. C. Moore of Kerrville.

Mrs. Harry Clark, Mrs. A. J. Cain and Mrs. Sam Hollis were hostesses to a party for the bride in the Clark home. A wine and cheese party for the couple was given by Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Howard, Mr. and Mrs. James Trott and Mr. and Mrs. Shermam Carrell in the Howard home.

The bridesmaids' luncheon was held in Los Patios Restaurant. Hostesses were Mrs. Moore, Mrs. W. J. Tiplex and Mrs. Al Kilgore, aunts of the bride. The bridegroom hosted the rehearsal dinner in the home of Mr. and Mrs. E. B. Hall.

Susan Elaine Wurtz marries Tad Lanford

Dr. Robert B. Smith was the officiating minister. Robert E. Poer was organist, and Mrs. Stan Austin, sister of the bridegroom, was soloist. The guitarist was Mrs. Travis Taylor.

Mrs. Tad Lanford

Serving as the maid of honor was Emilie Wurtz, sister of the bride. Donna Adkins and Meg Taylor of San Angelo and Diane Fine of Monahans were bridesmaids.

Stan Austin of San Antonio, brother-in-law of the bridegroom, was best man. Mark Latham of Greenville, Brad Jackson of Breckenridge and Tommy Jackson of Marlin were the groomsmen. Ushers were Hank Wurtz of Denver, Colo., brother of the bride, and Steve Hall of San Angelo.

Mr. Wurtz presented his daughter in marriage. She wore a formal gown of Dacron sheer and Venise lace in Empire silhouette with U-shaped neckline and stand-up collar. Venise lace framed the neckline, veiled the top of the long bishop sleeves and continued down the skirt front to form a wide panel curving to the back. Lace appliques with seed pearls accented the sleeves. The slender skirt was trimmed with Venise edging and ended in the back in a chapel train. A lace cap held her long tiered veil of illusion.

The rehearsal dinner was given by the bridegroom's parents in Sheraton Inn. A rice bag party was held in the home of Mrs. Joe Thompson, and the bridesmaids' luncheon was given by Mrs. Wayne Munson, Becky and Tricia Munson in Midland Country Club.

STITCHING WITCHERY

Tips help when tidying corner

By BETTY W. KINSER
Copley News Service

Neatness counts! Here are some tips on tidying up your sewing corner:

Place a knitting basket with legs beside your sewing table. As you remove each pattern piece from the fabric, drop it into the basket. When you have finished sewing, fold the pattern into the envelope.

Dear Betty: When I finish with a pattern, I fold each piece separately with the right side out and the name and number of the piece visible. If I forget to mark a dart or something, I can easily find the one piece I need without rummaging through a dozen or more. — Evelyn Mayes, Americus, Kan.

Dear Betty: I had an extra set of canisters for flour, sugar, tea and coffee. I now use them for zippers, trims, elastic and buttons. It sure keeps the sewing area neat. — Burdette Kratke

Another neatness trick: Fold down about 1.5 inches of the top of a small paper sack to make a firm rim. Tape rim of sack to edge of sewing table and you have a handy place to drop thread ends, scraps, etc.

Dear Mrs. Kinser: I bought an inexpensive pair of shorts last summer. No label in them and I've forgotten where I bought them. But I did want you to see what some manufacturers put into a piece of clothing for elastic! If you run your finger (carefully!) over the edge, you will feel the problem.

No reply from you is necessary...I just wanted you to share my outrage that such a thing is put on the market. —Jane C. Zellhoefer, Bellevue, Neb.

I share your outrage with all my heart, Jane. Running my finger (carefully!) over the edge of the elastic, I found it was very prickly and stiff. It must have been horribly uncomfortable.

I hope you haven't thrown away the shorts. There are very comfortable and durable waistband elastics available. Why not salvage your shorts with new comfort at the waist? A little work, yes, but cheaper than buying new shorts.

Dear Mrs. Kinser: If you plan to topstitch the hem on a "V" skirt anyway, press under five-eighths-inch seam allowance on yoke. Position it over the five-eighths-inch seam allowance of the skirt and topstitch in place.

Good idea, Jane. Readers, do hand baste first. Otherwise the layers are going to shift and pucker.

QUICK STITCH: Your neck is weary, you want to lean back and rest a bit...on a neck pillow! Make your pillows from scraps of fabric and old nylons or polyester filling.

Crushed ice adds to special taste

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
Associated Press Food Editor

In summertime in New York City, Italian Lemon Ice (Granita di Limone) abounds at street stands, in "candy" stores and other shops. It's so refreshing it's worth concocting a version of it at home. But up to this summer we were never satisfied with recipe directions — including our own — for duplicating its "shaved" texture.

Now, thanks to Betty L. Torre's "The Complete Beginner's Guide to Everyday Italian Cooking" (Doubleday), we've come on a fine way to achieve the ice's special taste-on-thetongue. Mrs. Torre recommends putting it through an ice crusher after it has been frozen and just before serving. We used the crusher that is an accessory to our electric food grinder and set it at "fine." With other types of electric crushers or with hand-operated devices, a different setting might be advisable.

ITALIAN LEMON ICE
(Granita di Limone)
1 cup sugar
4 cups water
1 tablespoon freshly grated lemon rind
2/3 cup freshly squeezed lemon juice
Pinch of salt

Bring the sugar and water to a boil, stirring until sugar dissolves. Remove from heat. Stir in the lemon rind, lemon juice and salt. Pour into 2 ice trays that do not have dividers. Freeze, stirring occasionally, until icy-hard. Just before serving, remove one tray at a time; dip the bottom of the tray in warm water, loosen edges and turn out; break into quarters and put through an ice crusher. At once firmly pack into an ice-cream scoop and mound in glass sherbet cups or glass serving dishes. Rush to eaters! Makes 6 to 8 servings.

Expectant fathers get fatter

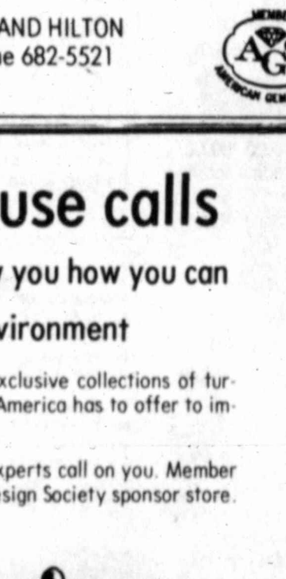

STORRS, Conn. (AP)— That "getting fatter" feeling familiar to pregnant mothers is affecting expectant fathers as well, a study indicates.

Jacqueline Fawcett, an assistant professor at the University of Connecticut's school of nursing, found that both husband and wife thought their girths were widening as the pregnancy developed.

She studied 50 couples from the eighth month of pregnancy until the second month after the child was born.

"As pregnancy developed, both husbands and wives said they were taking up more and more space. After the child was born, both said they perceived themselves as taking up less space," she said. "The findings suggest that husbands are very involved with the process."

Storm windows will insulate all year long

Summer or winter, storm windows work, because they create a "dead air" area—at least a half inch of space—that serves to insulate.

Glass conducts heat, so a single pane window lets the summer heat in. Glass also allows for heat gain from sunlight. Naturally, air conditioning must work harder to counter this invading heat.

But with storm windows, the sun's rays meet with the trapped air and turn back. In the same way, storm windows insulate agianst loss of "conditioned air" in summer. Cold can't move beyond air space that confines it.

WINE DRINKER

Christian Brothers do exist

By TOM GABLE
Copley News Service

NAPA, Calif. — To millions of wine drinkers, The Christian Brothers who make and market Napa Valley wine are undoubtedly two brothers named Christian and the gentle Brother Timothy in the advertisements a creation of good Hollywood casting by an advertising agency.

But north of this wine country town in California is the Novitiate of Mont La Salle, a monastery of the teaching order of the Catholic church known as Fratres Scholarum Christianaurum (F.S.C.), and adjoining it is one of several real California wineries owned by these Christian Brothers and presided over by a real Brother Timothy, F.S.C., recently named man of the year by the American Society of Enologists.

"There are only five of us brothers here full time," says Brother Timothy, a tall, gentle man with the hands of a Midwestern farmhand or a defensive end for the Pittsburgh Steelers. "Some 200 to 300 others work for us at various times during the season, quite a difference from when I first came into the Napa Valley in 1935, and less than a dozen worked to make sacramental and medicinal wines."

The Christian Brothers began their commercial expansion in 1937, after Prohibition, with all distribution handled by the late Alfred Fromm (who was joined by Franz Sichel eight years later to form Fromm & Sichel, which still distributes the wines). Gradually, the sweet-edged wines popular in the 1940s and the 1950s were joined in abundance by such premium varietals as Cabernet Sauvignon, Chardonnay, Johannisberg Riesling and Pinot Noir.

Today, The Christian Brothers are one of the 10 largest wineries in the United States, with some 1,100 bearing acres in the Napa Valley alone. They produce an astounding one-third of all domestic brandies consumed in the United States, most of which are blended for the American palate, although their XO Reserve is blended for more traditional palates, to include potstill brandy aged in wood for eight years.

"Our wines are non-vintage blends," Brother Timothy said, reciting the constituent wines of a recent issue of Zinfandel (70 per cent Zinfandel, 16 per cent Pinot Noir and 4 per cent Petite Sirah and other assorted red wines wines). "Rather than issue vintage-dated wines, we strive to blend toward a concept of perfection we have in the backs of our heads. I doubt if we would ever go to vintage dating, as have some of our competitors (Paul Masson and Almaden)."

The white wines of The Christian Brothers are blended and then given two years of aging before bottling and release. The whites will have two, three and up to five wines in the blends, while the red wines often have as many as 60 different wines making up a blend, or cuvee. THE WINE DRINKER — 5

Brother Timothy believes the top wines produced by The Christian Brothers are their Cabernet Sauvignon, Pinot St. George, Zinfandel and Johannisberg Riesling.

The best-selling item is their Chablis, among the generics, and the Chateau La Salle (a sweeter Chenin Blanc wine) among the proprietary names. All the wines are widely distributed through the United States and in some foreign countries.

"Our wines are made in a more traditional style," says Brother Timothy. "I do have one late-harvest Johannisberg Riesling but don't know how it will be distributed. There are just 300 to 350 cases. But we would rather be known for producing sound, quality wines from the Napa Valley. That is and will continue to be the goal of our blending."

TIL Act not working very well

By NANCY L. ROSS
The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — Like Prohibition, the Truth in Lending Act was supposed to cure a specific evil. But critics and friends alike say it, too, has proved excessive and ineffective.

TIL was intended to let consumers know how much interest they are really paying and, by the public disclosure of the rates, to curtail excessive charges. Nine years after its passage, supporters and foes alike agree that TIL is not working well.

The commission on Federal Paperwork found the law was too long and complicated to be useful in helping consumers shop for credit. Moreover, since finance charge disclosures are normally made only at the time of purchase, it is impossible to use them to comparison shop.

Less than a quarter of the population uses the information that TIL requires lenders to disclose, according to the National Commission on Consumer Finance.

Two scientific samplings showed that few persons understand finance charges when expressed in annual percentage terms. Because that understanding is linked to education, the disclosures have not affected the buying behavior of low income consumers, who dominate the bad risk category, which is charged the highest interest rates.

At a hearing last month on a bill to reform TIL, Senate Banking Committee Chairman William Proxmire (D-Wis.) declared, "It is just so frustrating to have a law like this that doesn't seem to be working in practice. It is true that it is better than nothing, better than what we had before 1969. But it could be so much better if we could get the majority of people using it instead of a small minority."

Some small businesses are unable — or unwilling — to cope with TIL disclosure statements. At the hearing, a Chicago businessman displayed a 31-inch loan contract incorporating TIL disclosures.

A Baltimore furniture store president said some customers walked out in disgust after waiting from 30 minutes to an hour for the credit department to handle the arrangements. (Had they remained, they would have found that the store charges an annual interest rate of 20 per cent.)

Buyers must defend themselves from dryers

By SIDNEY MARGOLIUS
Newsday

Almost everybody in the family now uses hair dryers. That means almost everybody faces the hazards of these appliances, including venturesome children.

Despite previous discussions of possible safety standards and the Consumer Product Safety Commission's own warnings, the commission has no current plans to develop mandatory safeguards, a spokesman said.

The need for a standard to require all models sold to have safeguards is again an issue because of the flood of imports. It's difficult for the commission to detect potentially hazardous dryers because the imported products enter the country under a number of brand names.

But there is no standard, and no sign that any will be forthcoming soon. The commission is busy struggling to set standards for mowers, Christmas lights and several other products. So, for now, you're going to have to be your own cop in buying and using hair dryers.

Any type of hair dryer can pose hazards. The extent of hazards, including risks of electrocution, is believed to have increased in recent years with the greater use of dryers that permit the user to move about.

Your first line of defense is to make sure that any model you buy is certified by Underwriters Laboratories to meet certain safety standards. The listing is not necessarily a full assurance of safety, but it's the only standard available.

Especially noteworthy is that the underwriters set a limot on the air temperature so you don't get burned. While many hand-held models certified by the underwriters go up to 1,200 watts, any dryer of 1,000 watts or over should be handled with special care because of the high heat produced.

High heat can, in fact, damage hair as well as make the rim around the outlet and other surfaces and nozzle dangerously hot. Most of the better quality dryers have a medium heat as well as high and low settings.

It should be noted that many imported models do meet underwriters' standards. But always check, wherever the model comes from.

Of 50 incidents reported last year by the product safety commission, 16 involved no actual injury but potential hazards such as sparks and smoke or excessive heat while dryers were being used. In a few of these cases dryers burst into flame several seconds after being turne on, in some instances melting the plastic case and heating element.

In 15 cases, the hand-held dryers gave off sparks, flames, or molten metal or plastic, resulting in burn;. Seven incidents involved overheated dryers and-or melting of the plastic housing, again causing burns and scorched or burned hair.

In 10 incidents involving hot surface contact, users were burned by the hot metal rim around the air outlets, the hot metal plate surrounding the base of the air outlet, sr hot nozzles or hoss. In two cases people used hand-held styler-dryers while tlaking a bath, dropped the dryer into the tub and were electrocuted. In three cases, two of them fatal, electrical defects or malfunctions caused shock. The remaining cases involved cord sparking, breakage of the support pole in a hood dryer, striking the rim of a bonnet dryer case, and entanglement of hair when it was sucked into the air intake of a hand-held dryer.

As these and other incidents demonstrate, there's danger of electrocution in using a hair dryer in the bathroom, where it often is used. Water in sinks or tubs creates a special hazard.

Even using a hair dryer while standing on a wet floor or plugging in or turning on a dryer with wet hands is dangerous. It may be risky merely to leave a hair dryer in the bathroom of there are small children who can get at it. In one case, a 7-year-old boy was found dead in a bathtub with a plugged-in hair dryer beside him.

Defective wiring can cause shock even with careful handling. If you ever drop or damage a dryer in any way, or damage the plug, take it to the nearest repair center for testing before you use it again. It's also important toavoid touching hot surfaces and especially beware of the dryer't overheating if: the air intake vents inadvertently are covered by a towel, lint, hands or hair; of it the air outlet is obstructed; or the dryer is operated for long periods. Some dryers have an automatic thermal protector that turns the motor off if it is overheated.

If you have an electric curler or styler that uses steam, be sure never to let the heating rod touch your skin. Never push the steam button whe5 the st ler is close to your scalp, either.

Blass returns for benefit

By PATSY GORDON and LANA CUNNINGHAM

Bill Blass, New York City designer and businessman, will make a return visit to Midland to narrate an Aug. 25 fashion showing for the benefit of the Midland-Odessa Symphony and Chorale.

Blass' 1977-78 fall and winter creations will be featured as a part of the formal evening, which also will include a seated dinner.

The widely-acclaimed designer knows that women want to dress up again for evening, whether for private entertaining or public occasions, so he has used fabrics that are luxurious in his collection.

Fall evenings will literally shimmer with the softest metallic silk chiffons and brocades in stripes, florals and Blass' trademark, plaids.

He heralds the return of the short evening dress, and not just a little black nothing. The short dresses are in metallic fabrics with flowing skirts, and ruffles abound at the neckline and cuffs.

Long skirts are opulently big in shocking color. A peach taffeta skirt is topped with a mauve crepe blouse and sashed with a raisin silk cummerbund.

Some day looks have camel reversing to purple and mauve in a double-faced wool coat. This is worn over camel and mauve plaid crepe de chine separates.

Blass is a native of Indiana and was graduated from Fort Wayne High School in 1939. His fascination with the fashions in haute couture magazine led him to study in New York City, where his first job was as sketch artist for the sportswear firm of David Crystal.

World War II interrupted his career and he enlisted in the United States Army. Discharged with the rank of sergeant, he returned to pursue his career in fashion design. In 1959, he joined Maurice Rentner, Ltd. of which he has since become the sole owner. The firm now is called Bill Blass, Ltd.

Bill Blass

Winner of an impressive number of awards for design excellence over the last 16 years, he has been included in the Fashion Hall of Fame since 1971. For his most recent accolade, he received an honorary doctorate from the Rhode Island School of Design in May.

The showing is the annual fund-raising event of the Midland Symphony Guild, and is made available through the courtesy of Julian Gold, Inc.

By TOM HOGE
AP Newsfeature Writer

One of the nicest dividends of summer is the fresh, sun-ripened tomato that appears on farmers' stands, rich, red, tender and sweet. No hothouse product can ever duplicate this natural flavor, in my opinion.

The tomato was originally grown in the Latin American countries of Peru, Ecuador and Bolivia. It wasn't heard of in Europe until 1554, when an account appeared in Italy of "golden apples," an apparent reference to those yellow tomatoes that sometimes appear in our markets.

In England, tomatoes were at first viewed with suspicion, especially after it was learned that they belonged to the deadly nightshade family. In France, they were snubbed by most chefs who called them "love apples" apparently because they were supposed to possess aphrodisiac powers.

It was not until the middle of the 17th century that the tomato began to be used as a food instead of as a curiosity.

Once converted, the French became tomato buffs, seeking out new ways to prepare the vegetable. In fact, Larousse Gastronomique, bible of the classical French cookery, lists more than 30 ways of using the tomato, exclusive of sauces. They are featured in fondues, glazes, mousses and souffles.

The French go in for tomato salads in a big way and rarely combine them with greens as we do. They usually slice the tomato and season it with a dressing of vinegar, olive oil, salt and pepper, and perhaps a spoonful of Herbes de Provence, a nicely balanced combination of herbs available in delicacy shops and big supermarkets in this country.

When it comes to cooking tomatoes, the French again keep it simple, as in the delicious Casserole aux Tomates, which combines the vegetable with shallots, chopped Provencal olives, canned French celery hearts and fresh herbs. The mixture is sauteed, turned into a casserole and topped with biscotte crumbes, those crisp French rusks that crumble so easily. This casserole is a fine accompaniment to roasts, burgers or steaks.

Committee records 'monopoly' on fun

By DIANE CLARK
Copley News Service

The game where fortunes can be won — and lost — overnight has been played in a treehouse for five days, in a moving elevator for 11 days, on a balance beam for 100 hours and in a bathtub for 31 hours.

It has even been played on the ceiling by a couple of University of Michigan students. They drew a Monopoly board on the ceiling, then used helium-filled balloons on long strings that they maneuvered from the floor as tokens.

Perhaps a more unusual feat was the underwater game played by a group of scuba divers. It lasted 42 days.

All these statistics, and more, are recorded by the Monopoly Marathon Records Documentation Committee on Madison Avenue in New York. It's "The Guinness Book of World Records" in the Monopoly field.

And these statistics are also in the head of Maxine Brady, a young woman who has spent her life buying and selling real estate, occasionally going broke and even landing in jail — Monopoly fashion, of course.

She has been playing since she was a little girl in Brooklyn, is author of "The Monopoly Book: Strategy and Tactics of the World's Most Popular Game," and has six sets of her own.

"I like to watch the different people who play Monopoly. They are so diverse. They can be educated or uneducated, children or adults. And for some reason the game lends itself to believe-it-or-not-type fads. Swallowing goldfish is nothing when compared with the amazing antics of Monopoly players... for some reason the game just inspires people to play it in weird ways."

Monopoly was born during the depression years in the home of Charles Darrow, an out-of-work heating and engineering equipment salesman, who lived in Germantown, Pa.

Darrow started sketching the street names of Atlantic City, N.J., on his tablecloth. He added the city's three railroads and a bus company which became the Short Line, the utility companies and the jail.

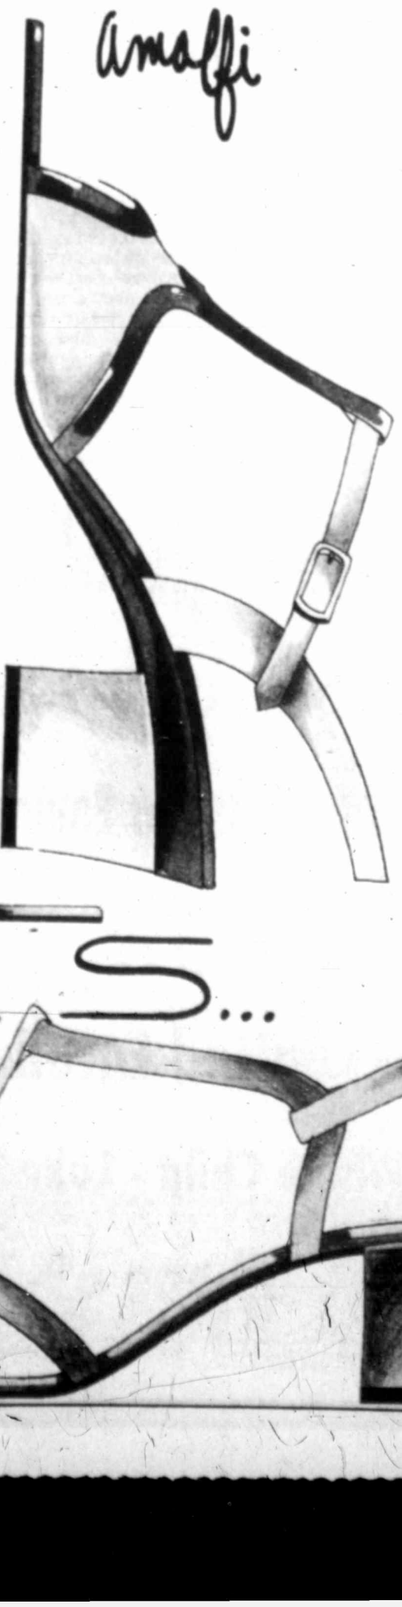

He used scraps of wood molding to carve his houses and hotels, buttons for tokens, dice and play money. From then on the Darrows would sit in their kitchen doing all the buying, selling and trading of property that they couldn't do in the outside world. Friends joined them. More sets were made and more and more people enjoyed the thrill of being winners.

Since 1935, when Monopoly was first published by the toy manufacturing Parker Brothers, more than 80 million sets have been sold. They are now in 25 countries and have been translated into 14 languages and Braille.

Atlantic City hasn't crossed the ocean with the sets, however. For, in England, the streets of London are on the board.

Groups attack dietary report

By MARIAN BURROS
The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — A controversial Senate report that recommends radical changes in American eating habits has come under attack from an increasing number of special interest groups.

The report, which says its recommendations would lead to longer and healthier lives, is the most specific yet issued by the federal government. In the past its nutrition education has come in the form of admonitions to "eat something from the four food groups every day," and "all food is good food."

The attacks on the report prepared by the Senate Select Committee on Nutrition and Human Needs come as no surprise to one of its consultants. When "Dietary Guide of the United States" was published last January, Mark Hegsted, professr of nutrition at Harvard, said: "There will undoubtedly be many people who will say we have not proven our point; we have not demonstrated that the dietary modifications we recommend will yield the dividends expected." He was right.

First, the cattle producers protested because the goals recommended reducing the consumption of meat and increasing the consumption of fish and poultry.

Then the sugar interests said the recommendation for reducing the intake of sugar by 40 per cent had no scientific basis.

The National Canners Association is upset because the report suggests using fresh and frozen instead of canned vegetables.

The egg producers had their say: The Nutrition Committee heard from them that cholesterol levels are not lowered by a reduction in egg consumption.

The most sweeping attack on the Dietary Goals, however, came from the American Medical Association. The AMA said they should not be adopted because there is no proof that diet is related to disease and besides, changing Americans' eating habits might lead to economic dislocation. The National Dairy Council endorsed the AMA's statement.

Ironically, about the same time the AMA was attacking the report, the respected British medical journal, Lancet, praised them. An editorial in the April 23 issue said: "The American goals will be welcomed by people who have thought seriously about the diet of Western man."

It noted that the recommendations are similar to those made in a Scandinavian report adopted by Sweden and Norway.

The six dietary changes recommended are:

—Increase complex carbohydrate (vegetables, fruits, grains) consumption to account for 55 to 60 per cent of caloric intake.

—Reduce over-all fat consumption from approximately 40 per cent to 30 per cent.

—Reduce saturated fat consumption to account for about 10 per cent of total calories; and balance that with polyunsaturated and monosaturated fats, which should account for about 10 per cent of calories each.

—Reduce sugar consumption by about 40 per cent to account for about 15 per cent of total calories.

—Reduce salt consumption by 50 to 85 per cent.

The AMA contends that "insufficient evidence exists at this time to support the need for or the benefit from major changes in the national diet as proposed."

It says the relationship between diet and deaths from heart disease is "suggestive, fragmentary and even conflicting"; the links "between diet and cancer of the colon and breast cancer are very tenuous"; there is no proof "salt consumption is a major factor in causing hypertension in persons in the United States; there are no studies showing diabetes is any way related to diet. Moreover," the AMA says, "patients with diabetes require diets tailored to the individual."

Community Nutrition Institute, a public interest group which monitors federal food and nutrition programs, reviewed the AMA document, in its Weekly Report. It concluded that what bothered the association about the Dietary Goals was that they "infringed on the doctor-patient relationship." The gist of the AMA comments does appear to be that the proper way to deal with disease is through cure rather than prevention.

According to the association's comments:

—The proper way to deal with high blood pressure is through detection via mass screening programs and then through treatment.

"Medical management for some patients may include sodium restriction or caloric restriction or both."

—"Diets to control diabetes (or other conditions) must be tailored to meet individual needs rather than seeking a uniform diet for all."

—The problem of obesity, whichis also addressed in Dietary Goals, should be dealt with through "individual medical advice, and, where appropriate ... a prescribed individual diet."

—"Adoption of national dietary goals is not an answer to obesity and could prove detrimental if followed by individuals properly requiring medical supervision for their particular condition."

The association concludes that there is "potential for harm for the radical long-term dietary change ..."

Light strips create floating effect

By BARBARA HARTUNG
Copley News Service

Q. We would like to create a modular built-in look in our apartment bedroom so we can have lots of storage space. However, I am unsure just how to handle the bed.

Should it be built into the wall or would it be easier to use a bed frame that would be pushed into the headboard area? — R.R.

A. I would think it would be easier and simpler to build in the bed platform as designer Ruth MacLeod did. She created a neat, trim built-in profile with a bed using modular units and a platform for the bed.

Q. We have an older home which we are fixing up as we go along. We have a guest bedroom which I'd like to create in a 17th Century American style.

All I have are a four-poster bed and a double dresser. Both furniture pieces are in mahogany.

How might I create a pleasant and cheerful guest bedroom? I would like to do the work myself because I sew and can do painting, but I do not have an unlimited budget. — M.V.C.

A. I would suggest that you look for a colonial print in a design and color scheme you find pleasing. Use this for your theme from which you can develop the colors in your room.

Let's say, for example, that you find a colonial print which is a copy of a stencil pattern from the Pennsylvania Dutch people that is red and blue on a cream background. You might make a simple coverlet for the top of the bed in this fabric, quilting it a bit if you wish.

Borrow the stencil design from the fabric and repeat the stencil design on your walls.

Practice first on paper, then try your hand at it in the closet. You'll not be aware of your unsure hand there and yet you'll give a charming look to the guest's closet.

Many times a room will look lovely with the walls stenciled all over, or if you think that might be too much, try stenciling around the doors and windows and across the top of the wall.

You might take the red or the blue from the stencil design and do your draperies and your dust ruffle for your bed in that color. Trim the curtains or draperies or line them with the stenciled fabric design.

For added zip consider a canopy for your bed which might be the solid ruffle or pleats on the outside and the print on the inside. Add a small, round table covered with the print fabric and a painted rocker or natural wood one with a cushion of either fabric.

Shelled raw peanuts needed for special Chinese recipe

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
AP Food Editor

One of the most harmonious peanut recipes we've ever happened on comes from a new, privately printed Chinese cookbook called "Harmony of Flavors" by Yung-chi Chao Chen.

Tasters at our house were so enthusiastic about the fascinating flavor of these peanuts that we've had to make four batches of them. Be forewarned!

Mrs. Chen is well known for her Chinese cooking classes at the Princeton Adult School in Princeton, N.J., where she has been teaching for a dozen years. When she started the classes most of the students were women, but gradually men — university professors, university and high school food services personnel, doctors, lawyers and writers — began joining.

Most appealing is the clear way the recipes are given: after the ingredient listings, preparation and cooking directions are neatly set off. Helpful, too, is the chapter, "Serving Chinese Food," with its groups of family-style, banquet and buffet menus. A group of exquisite color photographs illustrates about a dozen of the recipes.

But back to Mrs. Chen's Roasted Peanuts (Kau hwashengmi). The recipe for them appears in a welcome chapter on cold dishes — welcome because these dishes are of course prepared in advance.

A note of our own. The shelled raw peanuts called for in the following recipe are available by mail order. Judging by the mail-order bags a friend sent us — from a large supplier in Georgia and one in North Carolina — this is an excellent way to come by them. However, shelled raw peanuts are also available in health food stores. In our own neighborhood in New York City, we found some good ones in a small shop run by a yoga group.

MRS. CHEN'S PEANUTS

1½ to 2 pounds shelled raw peanuts with inner skins
1½ to 2 tablespoons salt
1½ to 2 tablespoons sugar
4 or 5 star anises
¾ to 1 cup water

Preparation:

1. Line a large baking tray with aluminum foil. Spread the peanuts evenly on the tray.

2. In a small saucepan, bring the water to a boil. Add salt, sugar, and star anises, cover, and simmer for 10 minutes. Pour the liquid and star anises over the peanuts and let soak for 30 minutes, or until the liquid is almost entirely soaked up.

Roasting:

1. Preheat the oven to 300 degrees. Place the tray on the center rack and roast the peanuts for 30 minutes. Reduce the oven heat to 200 degrees. Stir the peanuts and roast for 1½ to 2 hours or until the peanuts are completely dry. Check and stir the peanuts now and then with a spatula to make sure all the peanuts are evenly roasted.

2. Remove from the oven and let cool. Store in jar.

ORANGE KISS-ME CAKE

1 cup raisins
1-3rd cup walnuts
2 cups sifted flour
1 cup sugar
1 teaspoon baking soda
1 teaspoon salt
½ cup shortening
1 cup milk
2 eggs
1-3rd cup sugar mixed with 1 teaspoon cinnamon and ¼ cup finely chopped walnuts

Squeeze the orange and reserve the juice. Using the coarse blade of a food chopper grind the pulp and rind of the squeezed orange together with the raisins and walnuts. Into a large mixing bowl of an electric mixer sift together the flour, sugar, soda and salt; add the shortening and ¾-cup milk and at low speed beat for 1½ minutes. Add the eggs and remaining milk and beat for 1½ minutes. Fold in orange mixture. Turn into a 12 by 8 by 2 inch pan that has been wellgreased and lightly floured on the bottom. Bake in a preheated 350-degree oven until a cake tester inserted in the center comes out clean — 40 to 50 minutes. Drip 1-3rd cup of the reserved orange juice over the warm cake. Sprinkle with the sugar-cinnamon-nut mixture.

Ultrasuede clinic slated Tuesday in Permian Basin

ODESSA — Krestine Corbin, author of "Ultrasuede Fabric Sewing Guide" and authority on sewing with this fabric, will present a lecture-demonstration at 2 p.m. Tuesday in Leggett's Fabrics at 1613 E. 8th St. here on handling ultrasuede with expertise.

Ultrasuede is a fabric with the look, the feel, and touch of fine suede leather, yet it outlasts and out performs leather because of its special construction. Made of polyurethane, it is machine washable and dryable, crush resistant and comes back to its original shape.

Leading pattern manufacturers have brought out new lines of the simple, tailored looks of Halston and Dior for home sewing. However, because of the $39 a yard price tag for the 45" fabric, women have been seeking tips and hints for sewing garments of ultrasuede. "At $39 a yard you'd better know what you're doing," Mrs. Corbin has said.

Her show will feature everything from a soft blouson jacket, a skirt with soft fullness, to a floor length swirling goxn in a rich plum tone. "Many persons have the idea that ultrasuede must be used for only traditionally tailored garments, but this just is not so."

Mrs. Corbin's methods combine the best of the garment industry techniques used by high fashion designers in sewing on the "miracle" fabric as well as a "few ideas of my own which simplify the construction for the home seamstress."

The presentation also will feature such accessories as purses, belts, applique and air-brushing, as well as the use of ultrasuede fabric in home decorating.

Mrs. Corbin will bring a $6,000 wardrobe of garmets made from ultrasuede.

Tickets for the event are $2.50 per person and may be purchaaed at Leggett'a Fabrics. A portion of the proceeds will be donated to the Midland-Odessa Symphony and Chorale.

Krestine Corbin is wearing a designer pattern which she made in silver grey ultrasuede and is showing two garments which illustrate the use of ultrasuede as trim and applique. This is easy to do since the fabric does not ravel.

Secretary becomes scuba instructor

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. AP) — Linda Bell will swim the depths to reach a goal she sets for herself. And that's exactly what the 23-year-old woman had to do when she decided to become a scuba diving instructor.

"It was a suppressed thing I never talked about," she said. "I always wanted to scuba dive ever since I saw a television show about a diver. Different things kept me from doing it. But once I got into it, I just went gung-ho."

She quit her job as a secretary and went working for a local diving shop. The shop, which operates a diving school, sponsored Miss Bell at the Professional Associatiom of Diving Instruction School in Jacksonville, Fla.

Now a certified open water scuba instructor, Miss Bell hopes that her new profession will give her opportunities to take diving groups to the South Pacific, the Bahamas and Australia.

His daughters valuable asset on large farm

FAIRMOUNT, Ga. (AP) — What a farmer needs to run a profitable beef cattle operation is at least a few strong sons. Bill Everett, instead, has three daughters, but they are no less valuable than sons.

Robin, 10, Renee, 16, and Regina, 18, help their father run his 1,500-acre farm with 1,000 cows and calves between studies, part-time jobs, dating and other activities.

I never expected them to be as much help as they've been when they first started following me around the barn," he said. Since they were girls, he didn't plan on their doing more than an occasional chore or two. But then the girls wanted to show steers at the fair as part of their 4-H club work.

Once a year, after the steers are sold, the family balances the books. After all the bills are paid, the profit goes into each girl's college fund. Regina became a freshman at Berry College this year.
