Baby Richard

WASHINGTON — Supreme Court Justice John Paul Stevens refused Saturday to block an Illinois Supreme Court ruling that gave custody of a boy known as Baby Richard to the biological father he has never met. Stevens issued a two-page ruling denying emergency stay requests by lawyers for the boy, who is almost 4, and for the couple who adopted him./10A

Two winners

One ticket bought in Fort Worth and one bought in North Texas correctly matched all six numbers drawn Saturday night for the twice-weekly Lotto Texas game, state lottery officials said. The jackpot is worth $28 million.

The numbers drawn Saturday night from a field of 50 were: 5, 21, 22, 33, 43 and 44.

Lottery officials estimate the jackpot for Wednesday night's game will be $4 million.

MISD tackles school discipline

Some board trustees see need for more parent accountability

■ Retreat attendees discuss problem areas, remedies.

By Myra Lee Salcedo
Staff Writer

In the near future, when students misbehave in school, their parents may be on the hot seat as well. That is the contention of at least three Midland school board trustees who discussed discipline problems at a Saturday board retreat.

"We spend so much of our resources on counselors, discipline and security, we need to get around to educating our kids," said school board president Jackie Hamilton.

The school district employs a security force of 15 and a staff of 52 counselors trained to intervene with discipline problems.

Last semester alone, the MISD Police Department responded to 870 calls. A total of 153 arrests were made. There were 503 misdemeanor offenses, including 95 fights, 88 simple assaults, 11 weapons brought on campus and nine additional felonies. School board trustees suspended 55 students last semester, and suspensions are increasing. The board suspended 17 students alone at the Jan. 10 board meeting and an additional 12 students at the Jan. 12 meeting.

Classmates struggle to understand, cope with friend's illness

Six-year-old Craig Fields is not really sure why his best friend, Tyler Strickland, is in a Dallas hospital. Craig thinks he may know, but he can't exactly piece it all together.

"He's in the hospital," Craig said, "because he threw up on his birthday."

Tyler did throw up at his birthday party. Craig and all of Tyler's best friends were there when it happened. Tyler threw up, "because he has a tumor growing in his head," said 5-year-old Christie Clark, another of Tyler's best friends.

Shortly before Christmas last year, Tyler, a kindergarten student at Quanah Parker Elementary School, became ill and passed out. Tests would later reveal that Tyler had brain cancer.

Welfare summit brings progress on reform issues

WASHINGTON (NYT) — After meeting with President Clinton, governors and members of Congress from both parties said Saturday that they had significantly narrowed their differences on welfare policy, but not on one of the most contentious issues in the debate: how much freedom states should have to design their own welfare programs.

Specifically, they said they had profound differences over whether the main federal-state welfare program, Aid to Families with Dependent Children, should remain an entitlement program, guaranteeing cash assistance to anyone who meets certain eligibility criteria set by federal law, regardless of the total cost or the number who apply.

Sen. Bob Packwood, R-Ore., chairman of the Finance Committee, said "there was surface consensus" on the need to overhaul the nation's welfare system.

"It was like watching great fencers parry and thrust," he said, adding that fundamental philosophical differences "were gently glossed over today."

The upshot of Saturday's meeting is simple: Officials agreed that they would radically reshape the nation's welfare system but foresaw bitter battles ahead.

Fourteen million people get cash benefits through the main welfare program, at a cost of $12.5 billion for the federal government and $10.3 billion for the states this year.

White House chief of staff Leon Panetta and Health and Human Services Secretary Donna Shalala said Clinton agreed that states should have far more flexibility than they now have to set eligibility criteria, benefit levels, work requirements and other details of their welfare programs.

But Gov. Arne Carlson of Minnesota, a Republican, said, "There was not an enor-

Simpson trial may hinge on blood found under Nicole's fingernails

By Michael Fleeman
Associated Press

LOS ANGELES (AP) — We've heard about the bloody glove, the wailing dog, the limo driver and the absent Bronco.

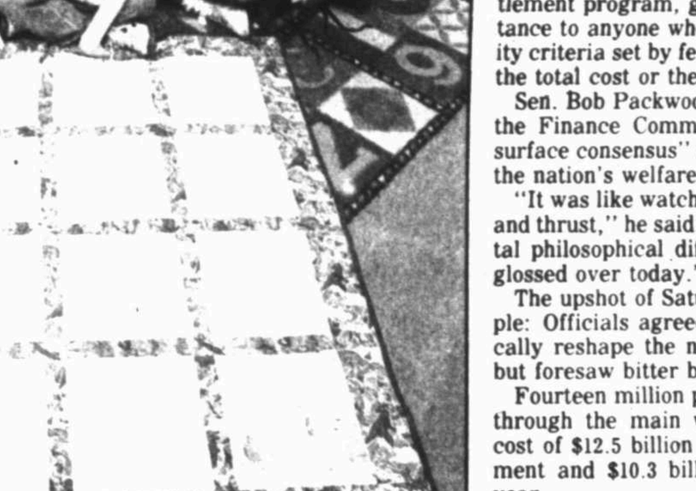

But O.J. Simpson's fate may well hinge on the blood said to have been found under Nicole Brown Simpson's fingernails — blood the defense contends doesn't match her ex-husband's.

The purported mismatch, revealed in the defense's opening statement, raises the possibility Ms. Simpson scratched her assailant during the fatal attack June 12 and that her assailant was somebody other than Simpson.

It was one of the biggest surprises in defense attorney Johnnie Cochran Jr.'s statement, halted in mid-presentation because he also inserted the claims of previously undisclosed witnesses who came forward with intriguing information that might exonerate Simpson.

Promoters of meteor crater seek tourism, development

By Jean Pagel
Associated Press

ODESSA — Just off Interstate 20, out toward Monahans, a crater slopes into the flat West Texas landscape of oil derricks and clumpy mesquite.

The grassy bowl marks the spot where researchers say a meteoritic shower collided with Earth at least 20,000 years ago.

Promoters consider the Odessa Meteor Crater scientifically significant and intriguing to visitors.

But vandals won't stay away.

Pellet shots scarred a plaque at the crater's front entrance. Someone stole two picnic tables from their welded stumps. Graffiti defaces the concrete slab at the picnic area.

So advocates for the crater — Odessa investor Tom Rodman, in particular — are working to protect and enhance the remote site. Rodman thinks Ector County residents support the effort.

"Most of them would like to see it become a tourist attraction and be maintained," Rodman said. "They feel it's been neglected."

Rim-to-rim, the Odessa Meteor Crater spans 550 feet but drops only 6 or 7 feet below the level of the adjacent oil fields.

Research articles theorize that the meteor's mass disintegrated on impact. Sediment nearly filled the crater, while erosion has worn at its rim.

U.S. opens first liaison office in Vietnam since war ended in 1975

HANOI, Vietnam (AP) — The United States opened its first liaison office in Vietnam since the end of the war 20 years ago, taking a step Saturday toward full diplomatic relations with its former foe.

The two countries were able to proceed with opening liaison offices in each other's capitals after signing an agreement earlier in the day to return or pay for diplomatic properties seized when the Vietnam War ended in 1975.

James Hall, a former U.S. Army captain and veteran of the war, will head the office in Hanoi. He greeted two dozen American businessmen, reporters and others who drank champagne and toured the mostly empty nine-story glass tower.

One task of the new office will be to support efforts to learn the fate of 1,621 American servicemen listed as missing in Vietnam.

President Clinton has said Vietnam must do more to help on the MIA issue before the United States agrees to exchange ambassadors. But the decision to open liaison offices demonstrates Washington's approval of Vietnamese efforts so far.

U.S. diplomats wouldn't say when they thought the United States might establish full relations with communist Vietnam.

But the chances for rapid progress are slim with the Republicans controlling both houses of Congress. Jesse Helms, chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, and eight other members of Congress asked Clinton to postpone the office openings. They said Vietnam still seemed unwilling to provide key information on MIAs.

U.S.-Vietnam relations began to warm when Clinton agreed in July 1993 to stop blocking Hanoi's access to international development loans. He lifted the 19-year U.S. economic embargo against Vietnam last February, and more than 50 American companies have already set up shop here.

Hall signed the diplomatic properties agreement with Nguyen Xuan Phong, director of the Americas Department at Vietnam's Foreign Ministry. Under the agreement, Vietnam agreed to return 10 of the 36 original U.S. buildings and pay an undisclosed amount of cash for the others, said a Vietnamese diplomat, who spoke on condition of anonymity.

Hanoi took possession in Washington of the former South Vietnamese embassy building, which it plans to use as its liaison office.

By far the most famous building reverting to the Americans is their bunker-like former embassy in what used to be called Saigon. U.S. helicopters lifted Americans from its roof just hours before victorious communist troops entered the city and brought the war to a close on April 30, 1975.

The last American diplomatic office in Hanoi was a consulate that closed its doors in December 1955. The United States withdrew after refusing to recognize Ho Chi Minh's communist government that replaced the French colonial regime in 1954.

U.S. businessmen based in Hanoi welcomed the opening of the liaison office.

Chris Runckel, Hall's deputy, said the liaison office would be ready for business on Friday. Eleven U.S. diplomats have been assigned to Hanoi.

Sarejevo celebrates its 1,000th day under siege

By Arthur Allen
Associated Press Writer

SARAJEVO, Bosnia-Herzegovina — Was it a celebration of the city's fighting spirit or a requiem?

It was probably something of both when Sarajevo turned on its diverse cultural charms Saturday to mark the city's 1,000th day under siege.

Although journalists count the siege as beginning April 6, 1992, when the fighting started, city officials use a different standard: the day the last train was able to leave Sarajevo — May 3, 1992.

However it's counted, the siege has wrecked much of a city once noted for its beauty and done incalculable damage to its cultured and cosmopolitan soul.

Sarajevan's love of the arts was apparent at Saturday's observance, which included a performance by the Sarajevo Philharmonic and an appearance by actor Miki Trifunov, an ethnic Serb who gave a reading against Serb barbarism.

Organizers had invited hundreds of mayors, from Rudolph Giuliani of New York to Paris' Jacques Chirac, to attend the show of solidarity with a city committed to the idea of pluralism.

But no American mayors came, and the only big-city mayor from Western Europe was Barcelona's Pasquall Maragall.

"Bosnia has never been so alone as it is today," said Bernard-Henri Levy, the French philosopher and one of the guests. "I've been coming here for three years and this is the saddest I've ever seen the city."

Noticeably absent were mayors from countries in the Contact Group — Germany, the United States, France, Britain and Russia — that has been negotiating to divide Bosnia into two parts.

British and U.S. Embassy officials said they weren't involved in the invitations and didn't know why the mayors didn't come.

> 'Bosnia has never been so alone as it is today.'
> — Bernard-Henri Levy, French philosopher

"Considering the number of Americans who gas about Bosnia, you would have hoped some mayors would show their solidarity," said William A. Hunt, a history professor at St. Lawrence University in Canton, New York, who came with two other U.S. academics.

With Sarajevans perceiving little international commitment to their defense, and the threat of renewed war looming because of stalled peace talks, organizers had problems characterizing the event.

"If there is something to celebrate, it is that we have the will to continue to defend this town and its multicultural, democratic spirit," said Asim Metilovic, an organizer.

But some Sarajevans feel the city's destruction is irreversible. Nearly three-quarters of the 400,000 prewar residents have fled. Of about 260,000 current residents, nearly half are Muslim refugees from the countryside.

"The Sarajevo spirit will never die," Croatian theater director Tomislav Grbicic proclaimed at the opening ceremony Thursday night.

"It already has," grumbled painter Lana Milasinovic, 23, as the audience applauded. "So many writers and intellectuals have left. This town died when Yugoslavia died. I am leaving too, and soon."

The weekend events included tours of the city, concerts, lots of Turkish coffee and colloquia with titles such as "The Future of Sarajevo and the World."

For some Sarajevans, the weekend offered an opportunity to share a cup with a guest and bask in the none-too-plentiful artificial light that city authorities used to juice theaters, cafes and hotels for the event.

But that was it.

"It's nice for me to see so many visitors, but this won't help," said Aida Pobic, a reporter with the Oslobodjene newspaper. "These people will leave tomorrow and the city will remain under siege."

MISD: Retreat attendees discuss discipline problems

(From 1A)

Considering the number of students attending MISD, officials said the numbers weren't high. "We have literally thousands of boys and girls that are great kids," said MISD Superintendent Joseph Baressi Jr. "But we have a growing number — also of a group that is younger (beginning in fourth grade) — of discipline problems."

"We also have a growing number of students who don't qualify for special-education services, but need special assistance," said Larry Lusby, MISD executive director of computer and pupil services. He said the counseling staff — including the addition of one psychologist — has been expanded to remedy the situation.

"What can one psychologist for the whole district do? Not very much, in my opinion," said trustee James Fuller.

"As a community we are suffering," said trustee Dianne Anderson. "We are filling up Culver (Youth Home) and the AECs (Alternative Education Centers attended by expelled students)."

Ms. Anderson said "swifter and more efficient" action should be taken for serious behavior infractions. "We have got to start making parents accountable for their children's behavior ... Why not make parents come to school the next day and attend with their child? We can say a child cannot come back to class until a parent spends a whole day in school."

Trustee Adela Marmolejo, however, said missing a full day of pay could pose a serious hardship for a single parent.

"But what do we do? Do we continue to allow a kid to disrupt learning?" asked trustee Robin Hightower. "Somewhere, we've got to make it hard on somebody."

"Parents are getting off too easy," Ms. Hamilton said. She said an Odessa judge has parents who — accompanying their youngsters to court — watch a film about parent training.

At the Saturday morning workshop — which was attended by an audience of about 60 — Ms. Hamilton showed a videotape produced by the Parent Resource Institute for Drug Education (PRIDE). The tape discussed the Marietta, Ga.-based organization's parent training program, called Parent-to-Parent. It focuses on stemming drug and alcohol abuse.

The narrator of the videotape discussed a survey of more than 1 million youngsters who indicated they used drugs and alcohol mostly at home and on weekends, but seldom at school. PRIDE offers Parent-to-Parent workshops that are taught by parents, rather than counselors or experts. PRIDE suggests it is the job of parents, not schools or churches, to stop adolescents from abusing drugs and alcohol.

Ms. Hamilton said cost of the workshops are expensive, but Neighbors Against Burglary' Drugs, Inc. (N.A.B.'D.) are interested in bringing the program to Midland.

Trustee Jack Hamilton said teachers as well as parents are responsible for discipline problems in the classroom. A longtime educator, former teacher and principal, Hightower said, "Some teaching styles prevent discipline problems ... Teachers can organize a classroom in such a way — with ongoing activities — they don't allow time for kids to get into trouble."

Hightower said principals have to support teachers' actions when they refer a student to the office. "The student has to have something happen to them that will make a difference," he said.

Depending on the nature of the offense, students may be counseled, given detention or corporal punishment.

Corporal punishment was meted out 238 times last semester at Goddard Junior High School, while corporal punishment occurred 182 times at Alamo and 132 times at Abell junior high schools.

There were reports of misconduct on buses 202 times at Goddard, 77 times at Alamo and 178 times at Abell. Wilson Heidelberg, MISD executive director of auxiliary services, said bus incidents were few in light of the fact that 8,500 students are transported twice a day on buses.

Ms. Anderson said teachers should be surveyed to see what actions they think could be taken concerning discipline problems. Ms. Hightower said class sizes should be made smaller. Several trustees thought there should be more overnight suspensions.

"Do we open up more AECs? Whatever the board is willing to pay for, we can do," said Ricardo Torres, MISD executive director of secondary education.

Fuller said, "You mean whatever the community is willing to pay for."

Fuller said the community decries increasing discipline problems in the schools but also decries raising taxes to pay for staff and programs to handle the problems. "The public has to decide if it is going to pay for more resources," he said.

Heidelberg, who reccommended video cameras be put on buses to cut down on bad behavior, said some parents absolutely refuse to take any responsibility for the actions of their offspring. "I showed one parent a videotape of her child live and in color on a bus. After watching the videotape, the parent said: 'What did you do to cause my child to act like that?' "

"We are spending a great deal of money on police, counseling and discipline because parents are not accountable," Ms. Hamilton said.

"I have no problem with putting more responsibility on parents," Fuller said, " ... But let's be realistic. There are some prevailing attitudes among teachers in classrooms that seem to promote problems ... We need to bite the bullet and say: 'Either get squared away or we are going to replace you.' "

Trustee Michael Dobey said quicker action needs to be taken against students who misbehave. "If we don't educate students in 13 years, they will drop out and become a tremendous cost to taxpayers down the road," he said.

Lusby agreed. "We spend less than $5,000 per student per year. It costs $30,000 per year to keep someone in the penitentiary," he said.

"And prisoners have the best of everything in prisons and we can't even get books," Ms. Hamilton said. "We are robbing Peter to pay Paul."

"We need to put some bite into what teachers and principals can do within the Texas code," Ms. Anderson said.

Trustees used the retreat as a brainstorming session to find out where the discipline problems were most serious and what types of action could be taken. Baressi said administrators could prepare a variety of reports detailing costs and plans to implement measures trustees want to see enacted.

"We need to have a variety of these packages sketched out before the March 4 board budget retreat," Baressi said.

He summed up the main issues that trustees want to consider acting on. Those issues include swifter action being taken for offenders; overnight suspensions increased; class sizes reduced for grades four through six; making parents more accountable; offering parent training sessions; and dealing with teacher attitudes and expectations.

WEATHER WATCH

Midland could see some snow

Staff Report

Get those coats out because Superbowl Sunday may end with some snow falling, according to National Weather Sevice forecasters.

Today should be mostly cloudy with a 20 percent chance of light snow or rain and a high in the mid 40s and north winds 10-20 mph, and tonight should be mostly cloudy with a low in the mid 20s, according to a spokesman for the NWS office in Midland.

Monday calls for decreasing cloudiness with a high near 50.

After an overnight low of 37, Saturday's high reached 59, compared to the record high for that date of 79 set in 1987. The record low was 10 set in 1948.

STATE

Skies were cloudy across west and north Texas Saturday, while South Texas enjoyed sunny skies and mild temperatures into the lower 80s.

In West Texas Saturday, skies were mostly cloudy.

Temperatures ranged from 42 degrees at Dalhart to 64 degrees at Sanderson. Winds were mostly northwest to north at 15 to 25 mph occasionally stronger gusts in parts of the Panhandle and South Plains.

Sunday's West Texas forecast calls for snow possible over parts of the Low Rolling Plains and South Plains. A rain and snow mix is possible over parts of the Permian Basin and Concho Valley. Highs will be from the mid- to upper 30s in the Panhandle to the low 60s along the Rio Grande in the Big Bend.

NATION

A broad storm system spread snow and rain from the Mississippi Valley to the East Coast on Saturday, while heavy rain fell on parts of California.

Rain and freezing rain extended from the Mississippi Valley to the Ohio Valley. Up to an inch of rain fell in 24 hours in parts of Missouri and at Owingsville and La Grange, Ky.

Freezing rain was widespread across parts of Illinois, Indiana, Kentucky and Ohio.

Snow fell across northern Ohio and was scattered across the upper Ohio Valley into the Appalachians.

By late afternoon, snow also extended to the central Atlantic states, mainly from Philadelphia southward toward Norfolk, Va.

In the Southeast, thunderstorms moved across Georgia and northern Florida during the day with small hail and gusty wind. Heavy rain of 1 to more than 2 inches was reported across sections of Mississippi, Alabama and Georgia.

Rain fell along the northern Pacific Coast. Up to 2 inches of rain fell in some sections of central and Northern California in 24 hours, and several inches of snow was reported along the Sierra Nevada into the southern Cascades.

COPE: Tyler's friends struggle to understand

(From 1A)

A trust fund has been established to help defray medical expenses for the Strickland family. To make a donation to the fund, direct all inquiries to the Tyler Strickland Trust Fund, Bank One Midland, 2301 W. Wall St., 79701, or call 688-6400 for more information.

the week before Christmas. Tyler's doctors have not given his family a prognosis, but it is expected he will return home sometime next month.

"I can't wait for him to be home and be OK," 5-year-old Will West said. "I love him."

Christie said she feels bad that Tyler is sick. He is one of her best friends, too, because, she says "He is kind to other people."

To help both Tyler and all his best friends deal with his illness, his classmates drew pictures on pieces of cloth, which were then stitched together into a quilt. The quilt will be sent to Tyler at Children's Medical Center in Dallas.

According to Michael Conley, another of Tyler's best friends at school, the quilt was made, "To keep him warm and so he wouldn't forget that his friends are thinking about him."

His class has also banded together to make Tyler a book and a giant get-well card, as well as some presents to help with his recovery process. Additionally, the students are collecting cans to help raise money for Tyler's family.

Making gifts for hospitalized classmates is not unusual for school-age children and is, in fact, a form of therapy for youngsters, according to Susan Morgan, Tyler's teacher, and LeAnn Solmonson, who serves as student counselor at Quanah Parker.

"There's not a lot the kids can do to make it better," Ms. Solmonson said, "but doing something kind is therapy in a way. The kids think, 'I'm helping make Tyler happy.' "

Parents of students in Tyler's kindergarten class are also helping by managing a trust fund established by Ms. Solmonson, and organizing a garage sale tentatively scheduled for April 8. Proceeds from the sale will go to help pay for medical expenses.

Tyler's father, Todd, is an independent drywall contractor and has had to stay behind in Midland to help pay for his son's hospitalization. His mother, Kelly, does not work. The family has no medical insurance.

Mrs. Morgan said the parents of Tyler's classmates helped even before he was transferred from Memorial Hospital and Medical Center to Children's Medical Center.

"They would send meals up to the hospital so Tyler's parents wouldn't have to leave during his surgery," Ms. Morgan said.

Obviously, adults close to Tyler know the grief of dealing with a child who has cancer and the help that is necessary for the family. The kids can't yet piece it all together.

"Children this age don't deal with grief the way adults do," Mrs. Solmonson said. "They have a crisis for 15 minutes, they deal with it and they have the ability to put it aside. Kids ask one question, you answer it and then they go on."

Ms. Morgan, who has never had a seriously ill student in 19 years of teaching kindergarten, said that 5- and 6-year-old children are, "Blessed by innocence, and with not knowing fully what is going on."

Classmate Craig Fields said he had only one message for his best buddy: "Come back soon."

HINGE: Blood could determine fate of Simpson who formed the centerpiece of Cochran's statement, a West Los Angeles woman with a trail of lawsuits and other problems — can be discredited by the prosecution.

(From 1A)

Blood is a different story.

If prosecutors fail to adequately explain the blood scraped from under the dead woman's fingernails, Simpson could go free, or at the very least get a hung jury and another trial, legal analysts say.

Even now, by failing to anticipate the issue in its opening statements, the prosecution is a step behind, they add.

Assuming the defense reported the test results accurately, there could still could be a perfectly reasonable explanation for a finding of Type B blood, forensic experts say. Those include contamination of the sample or faulty testing in the police lab.

But this argument could play into the defense's hands. The defense could argue that if the exonerating blood test results are unreliable, the incriminating test results — and there are many — could be as well.

"It raises the risk of the jury disregarding the blood evidence," Loyola University law professor Stanley Goldman said. "And if they ignore the blood evidence, the prosecution doesn't have much of a case."

In his opening statement, Cochran used the blood test results to suggest prosecutors ignored evidence pointing away from Simpson in the murders of his ex-wife and her friend Ronald Goldman.

The blood revelation was startling because it was the first time the defense had suggested it had physical evidence that could help clear Simpson of the murder charges.

"This could prove that somebody else did these murders," said Timothy Perrin, a law professor at Pepperdine Law School.

ISSUES: Summit participants discuss reform

mous amount of agreement on what we mean by flexibility."

"What we as governors have in mind may not be in sync with what Congress has in mind," Carlson said. Members of Congress from both parties say the federal government must set minimal standards for the use of federal welfare money and cannot just give each state a lump sum of cash to use in any way it sees fit.

Despite these disagreements, officials who met Saturday with Clinton said there was a surprising amount of agreement on broad objectives and basic principles.

Sen. Barbara A. Mikulski, D-Md., said the four-and-a-half-hour meeting "was characterized by a tone of civility, collegiality and cooperation." Vice President Al Gore said, "It was a terrific session."

Sen. Hank Brown, R-Colo., said: "Both sides are serious and intend to move ahead with a bill. Today's session brightens considerably our chance to get a bill. This issue is on the front burner."

Participants said they agreed that welfare recipients should be required to work and that there should be a time limit on payment of cash assistance. Moreover, several participants said they believed that private job-placement agencies should find jobs for welfare recipients, a task now usually performed —if at all — by government agencies.

Gov. Thomas R. Carper of Delaware, a Democrat, said, "There is far more that unites us than divides us with respect to changing the welfare system."

Federal and state officials from both parties agree that work should pay more than welfare, that states should be more aggressive in enforcing child-support obligations, and that welfare recipients should sign a "contract of mutual responsibility," pledging work in return for welfare, he said.

Saturday's session, at Blair House, across the street from the White House, was attended by eight senators, eight representatives, six governors, two state legislators, two mayors and two county officials. The governors included Howard Dean of Vermont, a Democrat, who is chairman of the National Governors' Association, and Tommy Thompson of Wisconsin, a Republican, who is vice chairman.

Thompson and Gov. John Engler of Michigan, a Republican, have proposed that the federal government give the states lump sums of cash, or block grants, to replace 298 federal programs with projected outlays of $119 billion this year.

SEEK: Vandals won't leave crater alone

(From 1A)

"When the meteor struck and exploded, it pulverized the limestone," Rodman explained during a recent tour. He stooped to dust his fingertips with the flour-like powder that coats the floor.

Thousands of nickel-iron meteorites showered down on at least 2 square miles, according to a brochure on the crater. Rodman picked up several of the remnants that resemble raisins: "If you look, you'll find little rusty flakes of it."

A railroad land trust at one time owned the site, Rodman said, and University of Texas geologists arrived in 1939 to excavate and map what articles label the second-largest such crater in the United States. Crews dug a 165-foot shaft in search of the mass.

Development then stalled until the Chamber of Commerce opened a small museum there in the 1960s, he said. But the vandal-plagued museum was closed and torn down; its displays were moved to the Ector County Library.

Ector County eventually inherited the little-publicized crater.

Jim Jordan, county judge, said he thinks a majority of Odessa residents have never toured the site 10 miles southwest of the city.

But he and others think travelers would stop to view what the National Park Service in 1965 named a registered natural landmark.

"Everybody is chasing every buck they could find," Jordan said. "The tourism dollar along Interstate 20 is something we need to take more advantage of."

Andy Sansom, executive director of the Texas Parks and Wildlife Department, visited the crater in October along with state Sen. John Montford, D-Lubbock. Both expressed interest in its promotion.

"I asked Sansom for a study on how to make it both profitable and a place where students can learn about our visitor from outer space," said Montford, who represents Odessa.

"We are awaiting the results of Sansom's study and we're very excited about the prospects."

Rodman hopes to entice a caretaker to live at the site and ward off troublemakers — like those who have dumped garbage there and stolen some the crushed rock.

"Nature has been much kinder to the crater than the road-builders have been," he said.

He applied for a $15,000 federal grant that would pay to curb a path that twists through the crater's cactus and brush. He would also like to try another museum, put up more explanatory signs and possibly upgrade the access road from I-20.

County officials say that criminals sentenced to community service could provide free labor.

Rodman gropes to explain his long devotion to the site and his interest in meteors.

Kobe family begins cleaning up quake-damaged condominium

By Greg Myre
Associated Prss Writer

KOBE, Japan — When the Matsuda family woke on the cold wooden floor of a gymnasium-turned-shelter, it was the first promising day since the earthquake that flattened Kobe.

Eisaku Matsuda, a computer systems analyst, put on his blue jeans and headed straight to the family's partially damaged condominium to press ahead with his cleanup efforts.

"We're hoping we can move back into our house today," Matsuda said Thursday. "I want my family to resettle at home — then I can go back to work."

The earthquake left more than 300,000 people homeless. Long, tedious days in makeshift shelters at schools, gyms and public halls have stretched patience to the limits.

A few victims are trickling back to damaged homes that still lack water, gas and heat. The Matsudas spent most of the day trying to determine if that was the way to go.

There had been a strong aftershock Wednesday night. The shelter in the sturdy gym at Ikuta Junior High School, which had no visible quake damage, seemed a safer bet than the Matsudas' high-rise condominium building, which has long, thick cracks in its walls.

Yet compared to many Kobe residents, the Matsudas were fortunate. The quake smashed their dishes and glasses, bounced furniture off the walls and ripped down chunks of plaster. But their home was standing, and Matsuda, working with other relatives, had cleaned up most of the mess by Thursday afternoon.

The building had been "yellow-tagged" by city officials, which meant the high-rise building was deemed unsafe, but residents could enter if they wish.

The alternative was to continue sharing a home with 2,000 people. There had been disputes over how loud the television should be played, and heated arguments had erupted between smokers and non-smokers.

Doctors were treating up to 100 people a day, most with colds and flus that physicians fear could become epidemic.

As they weighed the decision on whether to return, school and work questions intruded on the Matsudas.

Eisaku Matsuda, 38, is under pressure to return to work at his computer company in Osaka, which is 25 miles away and was largely unscathed by the quake.

"They are pressing me every day," said Matsuda. "If I don't call them by 9 or 10 (a.m.), they call me."

Matsuda's wife, Mirei, walked their two sons to the Kobe Suwayama Elementary School on Thursday for what was to be the first day of classes since the tremor.

The boys, Shunichi, 11, and Soichi, 6, were anxious to see friends. Before leaving the shelter, they bounced around the gym floor in their socks, restless with their confinement.

But Principal Shinhati Okada told the students assembled on a sandy playing field that the school was packed with refugees and he couldn't say when classes would resume.

"We want our children to go back to school or they will fall behind," said Mrs. Matsuda. "They have been out of school too long and they are goofing off too much."

Some families, she said, have shipped their children to relatives in other cities so the kids can get back to the books. Mrs. Matsuda was also fretting about the emotional health of her children.

"Whether they realize it or not, there's stress building up inside them," she said.

At dinnertime Thursday, Mrs. Matsuda went to the food line and picked up the family meal in a cardboard box: rice, cold sausages, potatoes, apples and chocolate cookies.

As she headed back, she walked past the entrance to the gym and headed down the street, around the corner and on to the condo with cracks up and down the front.

It was decided: the Matsudas were going to spend their first night at home since the quake.

She told a journalist they were not yet ready to receive visitors.

2 drown in floods

BRUSSELS, Belgium (AP) — At least two people drowned and one was missing Saturday in heavy flooding that swamped several cities in southern Belgium, officials said, while parts of the German city of Cologne were under water.

In Namur, a Belgian city on the swollen river Meuse, a man drowned when he fell into his cellar.

Near Mons, another city in southern Belgium, a woman drowned and another was missing after their car fell in the river and they were swept away trying to escape the vehicle. A third woman from the car was taken to the hospital in a state of shock.

In Germany, the Old City district of Cologne was inundated for the second time in 13 months when the swollen, muddy Rhine spilled over emergency flood walls.

Building collapses, killing at least six people

RIO DE JANEIRO, Brazil (AP) — A six-story apartment building collapsed Saturday in a southern resort town, killing at least six people and leaving more than 20 trapped in the rubble.

"We can hear the screams of many people, including a group of small children that was playing under the building when it collapsed," police Sgt. Ver Dasca told The Associated Press.

He said crews, supported by four helicopters and several cranes, had rescued seven people so far and were responding to the shouts of others. They recovered six bodies.

The building in Guaratuba, 500 miles south of Rio de Janeiro, collapsed suddenly at 10:30 a.m.

Dasca said a construction crew was working in the building at the time to reinforce the structure after residents had reported several cracks in the concrete base.

"The crew heard a boom and ran out immediately," he said. "The whole building came down in 30 seconds."

Police had earlier said that about 50 people were in the building at the time it collapsed, but they later reduced the estimate.

Dasca said 14 apartments in the building in the trendy center of Guaratuba were rented by vacationers from the nearby city of Curitiba.

Dasca said 100 police and fire officials were working on the rescue with the help of several hundred citizens, including friends and family of those under the rubble.

The Parana state government is sending airplanes and helicopters to help transport the injured and Gov. Jaime Lerner has flown to the scene to offer the state's financial and technical support.

Smithsonion finds itself in dispute over planned Enola Gay exhibit

By Mike Feinsilber
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The Smithsonian Institution likes to call itself "the nation's attic," the accumulator of stuff that tells a people's history, from arrow heads to moon rocks.

But now the Smithsonian is in trouble, caught in a dispute because it planned to put something from its attic — the fuselage of the Enola Gay, the B-29 that dropped the atomic bomb — on display, and say something about that event, what led to it and flowed from it.

It turns out that saying something was going to be difficult. The regents of the Smithsonian, its governing body — nine citizens, six members of Congress, the chief justice of the United States and vice president, if they chose to attend — now have to decide if the Smithsonian can say anything.

The American Legion, other veterans groups and their congressional allies did not like what Smithsonian curators decided to say and show, including pictures of the devastation of Hiroshima and Nagasaki.

The critics said the Smithsonian had set out to make an anti-war statement, cheapening the sacrifices of World War II's warriors, portraying the dropping of the atom bomb a racist act, not one that, as Harry Truman said, saved many American — and Japanese — lives.

The veterans want the regents to cancel the entire exhibition, and there are reports the Smithsonian's chief, I. Michael Heyman, will recommend either that or the removal of all historic commentary from the exhibition, leaving only the bomber's fuselage.

House Speaker Newt Gingrich said Saturday he had talked to Heyman and expects an announcement Monday, that "the exhibit will include interviews with the pilot and crew and that most Americans will feel that it is tasteful."

Retired Brig. Gen. Paul W. Tibbets, who piloted the Enola Gay, called plans for the exhibit "a damn big insult." He said, "They're trying to evaluate everything in the context of today's beliefs."

About that he was exactly right. In the view of many historians, their duty is just that, to examine what has gone before in the context of today's beliefs.

"'Truth' does not have a singular face," says Neery Malkonian, associate director of the Center for Curatorial Studies Museum at Bard College. She says the "truth" about Hiroshima was different in 1945 than in 1995, and will be different in 2045.

"History falls into two categories," says Robert Archibald, president of the Missouri Historical Society and the American Association for State and Local History. "Controversial and noncontroversial. The noncontroversial is the stuff that doesn't matter."

To his father, the atom bombing of Japan was a glorious event, signifying victory, homecoming, relief. To him, Archibald says, the atom bomb recalls schoolday duck-and-cover exercises and 50 years of Cold War tensions; the bomb recalls the night John F. Kennedy went on television to disclose that the Soviets had put missiles on Cuba; it seemed like the eve of a nuclear Armageddon.

But there were questions even in his father's day, historians have found out.

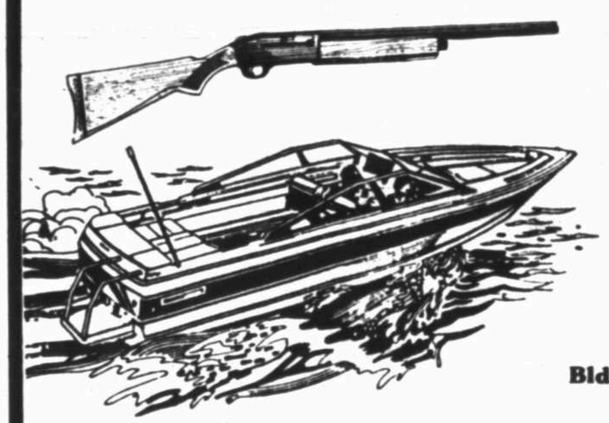

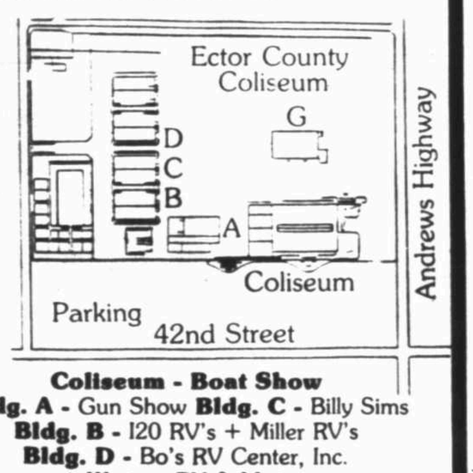

Was Japan tottering toward defeat, making neither the bombing nor an American invasion necessary, as the U.S. Strategic Bombing Survey later suggested?

Bus-van collision kills six children, driver

TOLONO, Ill. (AP) — A church van carrying children home from a youth basketball game collided with a bus on a slippery road and burst into flames, killing the van driver and all six of his young passengers.

The children, ages 10 to 15, were players on the church's school team, said Champaign County coroner Eldon Quick. Three of them were brothers.

Roads in the area were iced by a mixture of snow and rain Friday night.

The van driver, an assistant pastor of the Calvary Baptist Church in Urbana, apparently lost control of the vehicle, which was broadsided by the chartered tour bus, authorities said Saturday.

Quick said he met with parents at the church parsonage early Saturday to break the news. "They were as you would expect, devastated," he said.

The wreck occurred on a rural road just off Interstate 57 outside Tolono, a central Illinois town about 25 miles southwest of Urbana. The van driver, Jesse Hughes, 26, had turned off the interstate to drop off one of the children.

"The van was crosswise in the road, fully engulfed in flames from the engine to the rear," said David C. Well, assistant chief of the Savoy Fire Department and one of the first rescuers on the scene.

House Republicans to stall drive to repeal assault-weapons ban

WASHINGTON (AP) — House Republicans will delay a drive to repeal last year's ban on assault weapons until May and separate it from overall revisions to the crime bill passed last year, the chairman of a crime subcommittee said on Saturday.

Rep. Bill McCollum, R-Fla., appearing on CNN's "Newsmaker Saturday," said House Republican leaders have decided to reconsider the assault weapons after the House has dealt with the legislation stemming from its so-called Contract With America.

"We're going to address it because a lot of our members want to," said McCollum, chairman of the Judiciary subcommittee on crime.

But he empasized that it won't be done as part of the crime section of the Contract With America.

"We're going to produce legislation very soon on the floor of the House that's going to end the endless appeals of death row inmates, change the rules of evidence on search and seizure, beef up our prison systems, do something about criminal aliens, and merge the cops-on-the-streets program and the prevention programs into a local community block grant program," McCollum said. "Now, in May, later on, yes, we're going to go back and address that assault weapon question."

In his State of the Union address Tuesday, President Clinton said emphatically that he would not let the ban be repealed.

Though McCollum predicted the House will vote to overturn the ban, Senate Majority Leader Bob Dole of Kansas said last week the Senate is unlikely to follow suit because Democrats in that chamber can mount a filibuster.

Rep. David Bonior, D-Mich., appearing with McCollum on the program, warned: "Any attempts to override the assault weapon ban will draw the president's veto."

Bonior acknowledged that two dozen House Democrats have asked Clinton to reconsider his position on the ban. But he said the vast majority of the 204 Democrats in the House remain fiercely committed to the assault weapons ban because "ending this carnage on our streets is a serious problem."

Bonior voiced hope that Republicans will reconsider earlier pledges to kill the crime-prevention programs enacted by last year's bill and eliminate provisions putting 100,000 new policemen on the streets.

LEGAL HELP FOR CEREBRAL PALSY VICTIMS

Many parents wonder if medical negligence caused their child's cerebral palsy. The majority of cerebral palsy is not caused by medical negligence, but medical and nursing mistakes around the time of birth do cause cerebral palsy. We can help with the answers to your questions and if there is medical negligence we may be able to obtain a settlement or verdict for you or your child.*

Some of the many factors we consider are:
1. Did your baby have seizures or "jitteriness" within 48 hours after birth;
2. Did your baby get enough oxygen during labor, delivery and in the nursery;
3. Was your baby taken to the intensive care nursery;
4. Was there fetal distress detected by the electronic fetal monitor or stethoscope;
5. Was your baby born depressed, very blue, floppy or in need of resuscitation;
6. Was there a delay in performing an emergency C-Section;
7. Were there umbilical cord problems, including knots, wrapped around neck, etc.;
8. Were there placental problems such as abruption or insufficiency;
9. Was there an extremely traumatic delivery, difficult forceps, vacuum extraction, baby bruises, etc.;
10. Did your baby have low blood sugar,
11. Did the pregnancy go past 42 weeks?

High court justice denies stay requests in Baby Richard case

WASHINGTON (AP) — Supreme Court Justice John Paul Stevens refused Saturday to block an Illinois Supreme Court ruling that gave custody of a boy known as Baby Richard to the biological father he has never met.

Stevens issued a two-page ruling denying emergency stay requests by lawyers for the boy, who is almost 4, and for the couple who adopted him. Stevens rejected their claim that they were entitled to a hearing before the full U.S. Supreme Court.

"The underlying liberty interests the applicants claim have already been the subject of exhaustive proceedings in the Illinois courts, culminating in the Illinois Supreme Court's decision last year," Stevens wrote. "The result of those proceedings was a determination that the biological father was entitled to present custody."

Stevens said he had no authority to consider "the regrettable facts that an Illinois court entered an erroneous adoption decree in 1992 and that the delay in correcting the error has had such unfortunate effects on innocent parties."

Loren Heineman, attorney for Otakar Kirchner, the boy's biological father, said Richard would remain with the adoptive family for the time being.

"I don't think anything changes here," Heineman said Saturday. "They've given no indication that they intend on withdrawing from the legal battle. Today, tonight or tomorrow, they're going to ask another justice for a stay."

He said the adoptive parents, known in court papers only as John and Jane Doe, "have never wanted to think about the big picture and have made a mess of things."

Richard Lifshitz, an attorney for the adoptive parents, said they were considering approaching other Supreme Court justices for a stay or asking the entire court to hear the case.

"My clients have no intention of not pursuing everything they can within their power to do what's best for the child. That has always been the most important thing in their minds," Lifshitz said.

He said lawyers also might ask the state Supreme Court to clarify its ruling last Wednesday that ordered the child returned to Kirchner.

"What's very unusual in this case is that the Illinois Supreme Court rendered an order requiring the child to be turned over to Mr. Kirchner without any opinion accompanying that order, so it's very difficult to know what is the basis of that court ruling," Lifshitz said.

Kirchner said it could be another two years before he has full custody of his son because child psychologists could recommend a slow introduction.

"Of course, I never planned to hurt my son and I understand that this transition has to be made slowly," he said.

Kirchner earlier proposed a gradual transition that would give visitation rights to the couple who have raised Richard. But he made the offer on the condition that the couple abandon all efforts in court to win back custody of the boy.

The Illinois Supreme Court voided the boy's adoption last year, saying Kirchner had been denied his parental rights. Last Wednesday, the state's top court granted Kirchner's request for an order that the child be turned over to him.

The boy's attorney, Cook County Public Guardian Patrick Murphy, had asked Stevens to issue an emergency order barring a transfer of custody pending a full-scale appeal to the U.S. Supreme Court. The high court has previously refused to hear arguments over the validity of the adoption and Kirchner's parental rights. The Does filed a similar motion late Friday.

Murphy said it would be at least Monday before he decided the next step to take in the legal battle.

Smithsonian commissions replica of T. rex's head for Gingrich's office

WASHINGTON (AP) — Newt Gingrich is getting a big head — one befitting the most ferocious of prehistoric creatures.

The Smithsonian's National Museum of Natural History is making a $5,000 replica of a Tyrannosaurus rex head that Gingrich, a dinosaur buff, will use to decorate his congressional office.

The five-foot casting will be paid for out of private funds, not taxpayer dollars, according to museum spokesman Randall Kremer.

"My understanding from a couple of people involved in this is that the speaker intends to put the head above his mantle as a reminder that even the mightiest of beasts might become extinct," Kremer said.

The Smithsonian traditionally has lent artifacts, usually those in storage, to members of Congress to decorate their offices.

But Gingrich's request is unusual because skulls from the T. rex, one of the most ferocious prehistoric carnivores, are extremely rare and the Smithsonian doesn't want to part with its lone casting.

Instead, the museum located an original skull in Montana and is paying to have a fiberglass mold made. The finished casting, which should be ready within a month, will go straight to Gingrich, Kremer said.

"It will be on loan. But any time we want it, it's part of our collection and we can ask the speaker for it," he said, adding the museum is proud the skull will be prominently displayed in the speaker's well-traveled office.

But some of Gingrich's colleagues find the whole arrangement a bit too indulgent for a Congress bent on cutting government perks and spending.

"To commission a separate piece of art . . . in this time of cost-cutting, that's not something I think I could justify," said Rep. Mark A. Foley, a Republican freshman from Florida.

Foley gave a speech on the House floor last week to criticize another Capitol Hill perk — the $2,500 gold-embossed set of U.S. law books given to each representative.

Tony Blankley, Gingrich's spokesman, did not return calls Friday and Saturday seeking comment.

Judge upholds Exxon case verdict

ANCHORAGE, Alaska (AP) — A federal judge has refused to overturn a $5 billion jury verdict against Exxon Corp. for spilling nearly 11 million gallons of oil into the Prince William Sound.

Exxon called the award "totally unwarranted" and vowed to continue its appeal.

Company lawyers filed 11 requests for relief after a federal jury in September ordered Exxon to pay $5 billion in punitive damages to about 14,000 plaintiffs, including commercial fishermen, Alaska natives and property owners.

In his ruling Friday, U.S. District Judge H. Russel Holland rejected each request. He also rejected 11 similar motions filed by attorneys for former Exxon skipper Joseph Hazelwood.

Hazelwood was fired in 1989 after his tanker Valdez struck a reef and dumped nearly 11 million gallons of oil into pristine Alaska fishing waters.

In a prepared statement, Exxon chairman Lee Raymond called Holland's decision "very disappointing." Raymond said the company had taken responsibility for oil spill cleanup and had set up a voluntary program that distributed $300 million to more than 11,000 claimants.

Midlanders pledge $750,000 to support TCU alumni center

Staff Report

FORT WORTH — Midland independent oil and gas operator John L. Cox and his wife, Maurine, have pledged $750,000 to support the building of a new alumni center at Texas Christian University.

The donation will fund the Cox Banquet Hall in the planned Dee J. Kelly Alumni Center. The new alumni center will become a focal point to welcome campus guests and serve the university's 50,000 alumni. The Cox Banquet Hall will be home to a ballroom-style facility designed to seat up to 300 people.

The center is named in honor of Dee J. Kelly (TCU Class of '50), a prominent Fort Worth attorney and TCU trustee. Groundbreaking is expected by mid-1995 on a site east of TCU's Amon G. Carter Stadium.

Longtime TCU supporters, the Coxes have two children who attended TCU. Son Kelly Cox is a 1977 TCU graduate and a TCU trustee. Daughter Carolyn Cox also attended the university.

Texas A&M president to speak at club dinner

Staff Report

Ray M. Bowen, president of Texas A&M University, will speak to Midlanders on the state of the university at 7 p.m. Tuesday at the Petroleum Club.

Advance tickets can be obtained by calling David Sites at 689-9500 (work) or 684-8332 (home) before 5 p.m. Monday. Tickets at the door will be $15 a person, which includes dinner. Seating is limited.

Also expected to attend the event are: Ed Davis, president of the A&M Development Foundation; John David Crow, director of development for the athletic department; Maj. Gen. Tom Darling, commandant of the Corps of Cadets; and Midland John Younger, Regional Development Foundation Liaison Officer.

Lone Star Brass will perform.

Texas A&M University is the nation's third largest university and has gained international recognition for the quality of teaching and research, according to a representative of the Office of University Relations. Bowen is the 21st president of the institution.

Bowen earned his bachelor's and doctorate degrees in mechanical engineering at Texas A&M and earned his master's degree in that field from the California Institute of Technology.

Bowen was a professor or associate professor at such Rice and Louisiana State universities and the U.S. Air Force Institute of Technology.

He began serving in an administrative position at the University of Kentucky as dean of engineering before moving to serve at the National Science Foundation as acting assistant director for engineering and deputy assistant director for engineering.

More recently, he served as provost and vice-president for academic affairs at Oklahoma State University, as well as serving as interim president of that school.

He is the author or co-author of several books journal articles.

Sen. Gramm wins

PHOENIX — Texas Sen. Phil Gramm was the runaway winner in Arizona's first Republican presidential straw poll Saturday, although he did not achieve the lofty numbers he received three weeks earlier in Louisiana.

Gramm received 460 of the approximately 850 votes cast. That was more than the 50 percent he said was his goal, but well behind the 72 percent he scored in a similar contest Jan. 7 in Louisiana.

Conservative commentator Patrick Buchanan, who challenged President Bush in the 1992 GOP primaries, finished a distant second Saturday with 112 votes. Conservative talk show host and former Reagan administration official Alan Keyes was third with 98 votes.

Designers finish airport plans

By Michael Kashgarian
Staff Writer

A more spacious and modern airport terminal building that will offer reasonably priced fast food is on the drawing board.

Plans for a new terminal building at Midland International Airport are on schedule. Schematic diagrams and artist renderings of the terminal have been completed; finishing design touches are under way.

"It's exceeding my expectations," said Ed Jones, chairman of the Airport Advisory Board. "It's really a modern state-of-the-art design."

The most notable change to users, Jones said, will be "a lot more space in ticket, baggage claim, and restaurant areas so everyone using the airport will be less crowded."

City Manager Mike McGregor expressed a similar opinion. "It's going to offer more access and convenience to the baggage area and rental cars," he said. "And it improves the traffic situation considerably."

Among the amenities for waiting passengers will be a food-court area with a curving glass wall presenting a panoramic view of the airfield. And among the food services anticipated will be a popular fast-food restaurant — with prices comparable to non-airport locations.

Overall, the new terminal will be more user-friendly especially to travelers not familiar with the airport, officials said. That's due in part to a survey of users and concession lessees in assessing needs before design, officials said.

The new terminal will be attractive to

Program's tapes use family focus for prevention

■ Service organization looks into purchase of drug-abuse treatment system.

By Katherine Poteet
Staff Writer

A local service organization is looking into purchasing a drug-abuse program designed with the idea that parents and family — not the government, schools or churches — are what will keep children off drugs.

Neighbors Against Burglary' Drugs Inc., (N.A.B.'D.) will meet with area service organizations and businesses Wednesday to discuss Parent-to-Parent Drug Awareness Program, which teaches parents how to not only raise drug-free children, but how to teach other parents the same skills.

The meeting is scheduled for 7 a.m. at the Petroleum Club.

Joan Johnson, executive director of Drug Free Youth in Texas (D-FY-IT), said the organization will judge the interest in the program before it commits to purchasing the program's tapes.

"We'll probably work on a voluntary basis as far as facilities," said Ms. Johnson, who has researched the program. "However, the tapes have to purchased. N.A.B.'D. just wants to make sure that there is enough interest in this in the community to make a monetary commitment."

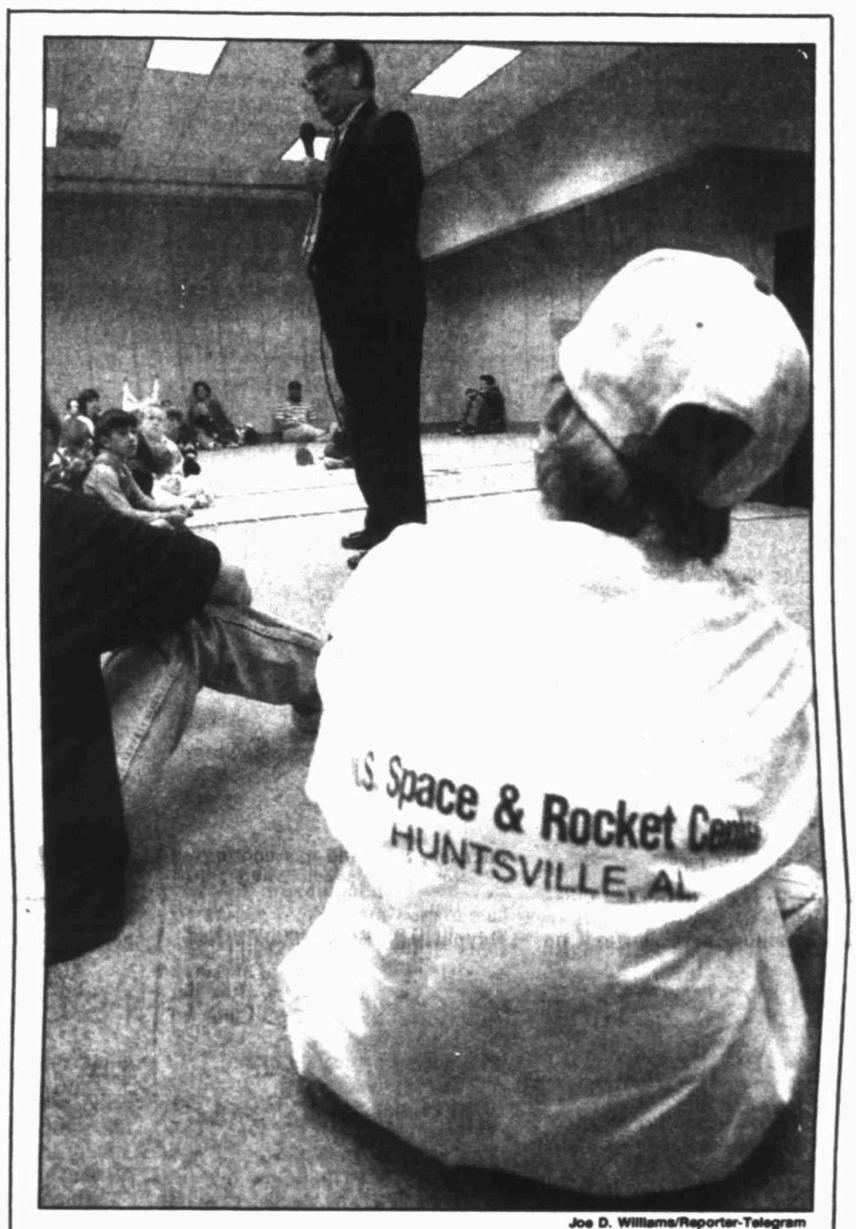

The program was started in 1988 by Parent Resource Institute for Drug Education (PRIDE) Parent Training in Marietta, Ga., as a way to combat drug abuse among the country's youth.

The program starts with master facilitators, who are trained in Georgia. The master facilitators then return to the community and train local parents to be facilitators in the program. Those parents are then qualified to take other parents through eight workshop sessions with videotapes.

The sessions include "The Me Within," "Put Yourself in the Way," "Awareness is Your Best Friend," "Remember the Difference," "Expect and Inspect," "Never Cry Alone," "Take Time for Yourself," and "When All Else Fails."

The cost for the eight tapes is $500, but N.A.B.'D. would also have to pay $4,800 for licensing and $35 for each parental tuition kit. In addition, the organization would pay for the master facilitators' training.

Ms. Johnson said she is hoping an organization such as the Palmer Drug Abuse Program will volunteer its facilities where parents can attend the workshops.

Retired astronaut tells experiences to children

By Tonie Miller-Uzzel

ODESSA — Children gathered at his feet listening intently as retired astronaut Richard F. Gordon Jr. told of his experiences venturing through the heavens, orbiting the moon and walking in space.

The pilot of the Gemini 11 mission in 1966 and the pilot of Apollo 12 moon mission in 1969 — the second lunar landing mission — was at Permian Mall Saturday discussing his career with NASA.

Gordon was speaking and signing autographs in conjunction with a week-long McDonnell Douglas-/Lockheed NASA Space Station Exhibit at the mall. The exhibit's last day on display was Saturday.

During his presentation, Gordon invited the children in the audience to come up front and sit around him.

"I want to talk to you about history — the history of the space program," Gordon said. "How many of you know when the space age began?"

No one answered, so he answered for them: Oct. 4, 1957.

House, family generate wide variety of opinions

The weathered wooden house that the widowed Antonia Ybarra calls home is also home to her three daughters, a crippled son, and two teen-age grandsons.

It leaks when it rains. And when it's cold, the outside weather sneaks through broken windows that are stuffed with scraps.

To Midland police, the home is called "the fence" — a dormant hot spot for street-level drug dealings: mostly heroin, some cocaine.

To a few Midlanders whose mission is to help poor people live in safe and decent housing, the dilapidated house is the home of a 70-year-old widow who deserves better housing.

"We don't punish the lady for the action of the kids," said Midland City Councilman Juluis Brooks.

"She's in need, and nobody can take that away from her. She's trying, but she can't do anything. She has some handicapped children there. Are we going to punish . . . the mother because of the kids? We can't blame the parents for the kids' faults."

All but one of her sons have criminal records.

Three of Mrs. Ybarra's five living sons and a son-in-law are serving prison time for drug-dealing offenses. One son, Daniel, 40, is living at home. He suffered partial paralysis on his right side almost 20 years ago in a stabbing.

One son was killed last year in a traffic accident after he was released from

Everyone has interest in Simpson case, hidden or not

Perhaps the most commonly asked question of the day is, "Are you tired of the O.J. Simpson trial?"

And without fail, the person will respond, "Yes, absolutely. I'm sick of it. It's time to move on to other, more important, things."

Then in the next breath that same person will ask, "By the way, did anything new happen today?"

Ott

The point is, we are interested. Oh, we may pretend that we're not, because, after all, as educated pursuers of "real news" we should be above such pettiness, but the bottom line remains unchanged: we like to keep up with our celebrities, especially if they have just been accused of some dastardly deed.

That's why we sneak glances at the National Enquirer when we are checking out at the grocery store. It's why, when waiting for our doctor's appointment, we grab the latest "People" magazine from the table in the middle of the room. And, it is why the most popular item in almost any newspaper is the "People" column that features brief items about famous persons such as Liza Minnelli, Alan Jackson and Peter Ustinov, each of whom were mentioned Friday in this newspaper.

How do I know that?

Because it was the second thing I looked at Friday morning, right after the college basketball scores in the sports section.

But back to the O.J. Simpson story. No matter how much we may deny an interest in the case, there is a nagging desire on our part to know more of the intricate, and hopefully morbid, details.

It happens to all of us, even to crusty newspaper types. We have a television set in the newsroom, for example, that remains tuned to CNN throughout the day. This means the daily coverage of the Simpson trial is being beamed into the newsroom at all times.

From time to time, people from other departments will wander by and see the action.

"Are ya'll still watching that garbage?" the person will smirk. "I would think you'd have more important things to follow." Then he (or she) whirls around and heads down the hall. But just before reaching the corner, the person looks over the shoulder and says, "By the way, have they figured out whose blood was under Nicole's fingernails yet?"

That's another indication that you have developed a hidden interest in the case. You start referring to the key players in familiar terms. The victim becomes "Nicole." The defendent is simply "O.J." The chief prosecutor is "that Marsha woman with the nice legs." And, her assistant becomes "the tall white guy with a beard, you know, the one who had chest pains."

So don't feel guilty if you are interested in the case. So are most of your friends, even if they won't admit it. If you don't believe me, just ask them.

They'll say, "I have absolutely no interest in the case. Besides, I know O.J. killed Nicole because that Marsha woman with the nice legs laid out a perfect case in her opening statements, even though her assistant, the tall white guy with a beard, you know, the one who had chest pains, came across as a real dork on TV. But believe me, I'm not interested."

NEW: Planned terminal proceeds on schedule

the eyes as well, officials said.

"I think it will be head and shoulders over the building we have now," said Kyle Womack, the planned terminal project manager and vice-president of the local architectural/engineering firm of Parkhill, Smith and Cooper.

The architecture will reflect the progressive business environment of Midland and the exterior curves of the building will evoke a sense of flight, Womack said.

"And we have been careful to use colors and finishes that will reflect West Texas and our heritage," he said.

Airport officials are also working with local museums to display art at the new terminal.

Beneath the good looks and convenience, the new terminal will replace one inundated with problems more costly to repair than to start anew, officials said.

Aspects travelers probably won't notice will be the cost efficiency of operations and expansion possibilities — the foremost goals in design, officials said.

Operating costs will be comparable to the existing terminal, officials said. As a result, there will not be an increase in costs passed on to airlines, which in turn would mean keeping ticket costs down, officials said.

The design of the terminal also allows for future expansion. The planned terminal — which will have four jet gates and a turboprop gate like the current terminal — will be expandable to 24 gates. "Six times growth using the existing facility is phenomenal," Jones said.

The new terminal design is being overseen by Parkhill, Smith and Cooper at a cost of $1.78 million. That firm has subcontracted with the Denver-based architectural firm of Gensler and Associates for design work. Also subcontracted are the Midland-based Rhotenberry Wellen Architects for mechanical and electrical aspects and the Lubbock-based Agnew and Associates for construction administration.

The go-ahead to build a new terminal was ratified with a unanimous City Council vote in October 1993.

Projected cost is an estimated $30 million. Anticipated sources of funding will be: about $13.7 million from Passenger Facility Charges (PFC), which are a $3 per enplanement charge tagged on ticket prices; about $12 million in Federal Aviation Administration entitlement grants; and about $4.4 from airport revenues, such as concessions, parking and landing fees.

The FAA grants are funded through a 10 percent charge on ticket prices. Of that 10 percent, roughly 25 to 30 percent goes back to airports in the form of the grants. Based on past grants, local officials have made their estimates to help fund the new terminal.

"It's all speculation at this point what the (dollar) number will be. It could be what we expect, it could be less," Jones said.

A lower number would mean an adjustment of funding from the other two sources — PFC dollars and airport revenues — or scaling back on the terminal project, officials said. But a shortfall is not anticipated, officials said.

Whatever the funding source, city officials have assured that the amount of entitlement grants will be set before the city issues bonds for the new terminal and no tax dollars will be used.

"There have never been any tax revenues used in the history of the airport and there won't be any used," Jones said.

City officials are also attempting to get the FAA to commit to designating the entitlement grants over the next five or six years to the terminal, rather than having to seek approval on a yearly basis. The FAA has supported a new terminal and funding throughout the project, officials said.

PFC dollars have financed the design work thus far.

As the design work progresses, officials anticipate soliciting bids for construction of the terminal by the end of fall.

"They expect to have the bid approved and ready for construction one year from today," Jones said. "Then it's going to take two years to build it. So we're three years from having a new terminal."

The terminal building will be constructed in front of the existing structure in the vicinity of the current covered parking.

In turn, covered parking will be moved back, as will close-in and remote parking. Construction will begin with erection of the new covered parking.

During construction, a shuttle system will be used to transport customers from the parking lots to the existing terminal building.

DEATHS

Irene Sanders Ward

SEMINOLE — Services for Mrs. (A.C.) Irene Sanders Ward, mother of Midlander Betty Ward Crow, are to be 1 p.m. Monday at M.S. Doss Community Chapel in Seminole with the Rev. Charles Hargrove officiating, with James Satterwhite officiating. Burial will follow at Morton Memorial Cemetery in Morton under the direction of Roger Pool Funeral Home.

Mrs. Ward died Friday at her residence.

She was born July 9, 1908, in Boxelder.

She moved to Seminole 50 years ago from Morton.

She married Autice Chester "A.C." Ward on June 26, 1926, in Ropesville.

She was a member of First Baptist Church, Seminole Study Club, former member of Rebecca's, Texas Flying Farmers and Ranchers Association, charter member of Seminole Sheriff's Posse and Gaines County Sheriff's Posse.

She was a homemaker.

SPACE: Retired astronaut tell s experiences to children

half of my lifetime, but I look at the audience and I realize that most of you don't know anything else but the space age," Gordon said.

He began with the former Soviet Union's launch of Sputnik I in October 1957.

"That was the first discovery," he said as he began to outline each space program that began with the Mercury program and proved that men could survive in space.

He spoke of the late President Kennedy's promise that before the decade of the 1960s was over, a man would land on the moon.

Gordon was part of the third group of astronauts named by the National Aeronautics and Space Administration in October 1963.

Gordon said NASA worked hard on that goal beginning with the Gemini program. Gordon served as pilot of Gemini 11's three-day mission. One of the flight's missions was to learn to rendezvous with a previously launched Agena. This rendezvous was achieved in less than one orbit, according to his biography information.

Gordon also executed docking maneuvers with the Agena and performed two periods of extravehicular activity — EVA — that included attaching a tether to the Agena and retrieving a nuclear emulsion experiment package.

Other highlights accomplished by Gordon and command pilot Charles Conrad on this flight included the successful completion of the first tethered station-keeping exercise, establishment of a new altitude record of 850 miles and completion of the first fully automatic controlled re-entry.

"I had the distinct privilege of performing two EVAs, commonly known as space walking," Gordon said.

He explained that during EVAs in the Gemini program, pressure suits were tested for the ultimate test of being used on the lunar surface.

Gordon mentioned that Friday was the 28th anniversary of the disaster on the launching pad in which three astronauts died in a fire during a routine testing.

"Our success made us somewhat complacent . . . we had a lot to learn and a lot to recover," Gordon said. He noted a number of changes were made in the program at that time to ensure safety.

As he discussed the continuing space programs he came to the Apollo 11 moon landing in July 1969 when Neil Armstrong stepped on the moon.

The next flight was Gordon's turn as he occupied the command module pilot seat on Apollo 12 in November 1969. He flew along with Spacecraft Commander Charles Conrad and lunar module pilot Alan L. Bean.

Throughout Conrad's and Bean's 31-hour lunar surface visit, Gordon remained in lunar orbit aboard the command module obtaining mapping photographs of tentative landing sites for future missions.

He also performed the final redocking maneuvers following the successful lunar orbit rendezvous that was initiated by Conrad and Bean from the surface.

"Did you know the moon has 13,000-foot mountains and valleys a kilometer across and 600 feet deep?" Gordon asked the youngsters.

Gordon spoke with a little regret as he mentioned that he was scheduled to walk on the moon in the Apollo 18 mission; , however, Apollo 17 was the last mission to go into space. Originally, NASA intended for 20 Apollo missions.

"I just missed . . . but, that's the way the cookie crumbles," Gordon said.

He said that while astronauts were highly competive, they were happy for each other's good fortune. "I was in Mission Control when the Eagle landed (on the moon) and we were all very, very happy people. I don't think there was any jealousy for the crews. We took a lot of pride in each other.

"Now, we have the shuttle program which involves the future of the space station and inevitably, landing on the Martian surface," Gordon said.

"Nine years ago today there was a flight called Challenger and as you all know there was a problem in the boost phase and we lost the lives of seven young people devoted to the space program," Gordon said.

He said safety wasn't a concern while he was in space because he was trained for it.

"There is lots of testing, so it's not really a concern," he said. "You have trust in the hardware . . . Accidents did happen, such as the Apollo 1 and Challenger."

During a question-and-answer period following his presentation, Gordon was asked what a space walk was like.

"To open up the hatch and go outside and fly alongside the space craft at 25,000 feet per second . . . there is nothing to disturb your motion out there. It was an exhilarating experience."

Gordon said the highlights in his career were just being selected by NASA, the flight experiences and EVAs.

"The satisfaction of accomplishing a mission that we trained so many years for — seeing it culminate in a success. That's what I'm proud of," Gordon said.

Before his speech, Gordon visited with Julio Montanez and Molly Scott — the winners of an essay contest on "Why I want to be an astronaut."

Montanez said he wants to be an astronaut to see how it feels to be in space and see what everything looks like out there.

"It looks fantastic and it feels wonderful," Gordon told him. "Most of us say we discovered the Earth because when you look back and the Earth is the size of a golf ball . . . it's pretty awesome."

"You realize it's fragile and it's beautiful. It looks like a Christmas tree ornament hanging in the void of space."

In Memory of
PRISCILLA SUTTEE
Born October 4, 1924
Died January 3, 1995

Mama loved dishes of willow blue,
Any old antique thing would do.
Chickens, pottery and coffee tins,
Victorian Wreaths, birdhouses, brooch pins.

Mama loved her Christmas trees and village,
Old wooden trunks to pilfer and pillage.
Elegant tables and her Cherrywood bed,
Gingham cloth and velvet of deepest red.

Mama loved ribbons and bows and beads,
Country Living magazine to read and read.
Her crossword puzzles and Pall Malls,
Hot black coffee and auction sales.

Mama loved shiny, diamond rings,
And the way Willie Nelson sings.
Old junk shops, primitives and dolls,
Surprising Butchie with telephone calls.

Mama loved to get the mail,
Hanging up things with hammer and nail.
And anything the color of blue,
Burgundy, hunter green, those darker hues.

Mama loved westerns on T.V.
John Wayne, James Arness, Audie Murphy.
Mama loved to wheel and deal,
And to eat out nearly every meal.

Mama loved her grandchildren twenty-three,
Those seven greats wherever they be.
Her six in law children and two outlaws, too
Her sisters, now so few.

And Mama loved Sharon,
Pat, Butch, Stanley,
Tammy, Lela and Mc.
But mostly Mama loved our Daddy.

MC art instructor displays ceramics

"Liniform," a synonym for curvilinear and sinuous, best describes the lyrical gestural quality that MC Art Instructor Carol Bailey has sought to express in her show "Liniform Vessels: Ceramics and Watercolor Monotypes" now on display in Midland College's McCormick Gallery.

Her work is rooted in her personal fascination with the forms, designs and colors found in nature.

"I hope to communicate the impression of forms caught in a frozen instant of movement—reaching, twisting, dancing, growing and changing—celebratory of life in all its aspects, whether painful or joyous," Bailey said in her artist's statement.

"My love of color shows in this. I love watercolor."
—Carol Bailey

Bailey, who teaches ceramics, sculpture and three-dimensional design, hopes her students will be inspired to do handbuilding and more sculptural forms.

For this show, Bailey concentrated on handbuilding her ceramics pieces rather than working on the potter's wheel. She also used a variety of clays and firing processes.

"Almost everything in the show is handbuilt—through slabs, coils and handbuilding methods," she said.

Handbuilding gives her the flexibility to work with larger pieces. "Just out of handbuilding techniques you can make a pot as large as yourself.

"By handbuilding, you have the ability to work much larger than most people can throw. A lot of forms are possible that would not be for a lot of people working on the wheel," she said.

Handbuilding also gives her the flexibility to experiment with form. "Some of the first ones started out with gourd-type shapes and then they started elongating, getting feet and longer necks," said Bailey.

The emphasis in the show is color and the fluid movement of the pieces.

"My love of color shows in this. I love watercolor," Bailey said. "One of the things I love about clay is what you can do with color on a sculptural piece which adds another dimension."

Bailey said she hopes her own love of the medium will inspire her students.

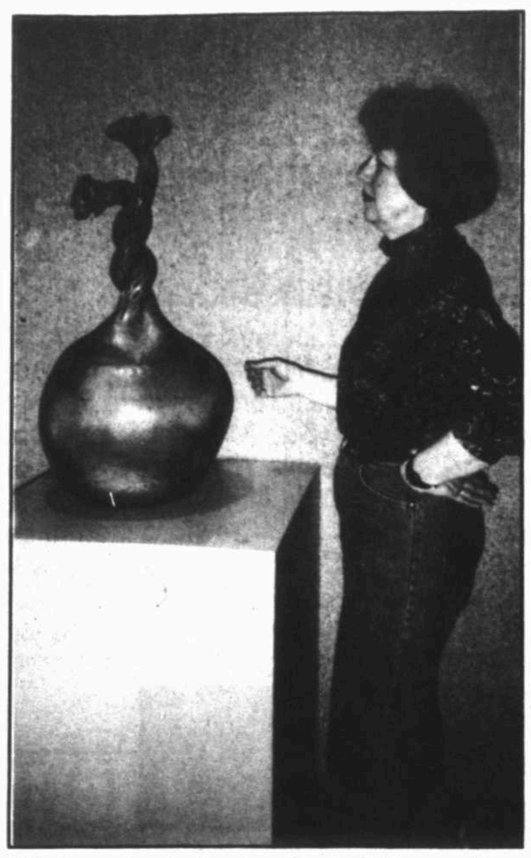

"My goal for students is for them to be able to pick up more technical knowledge than they had when they first came in and also for them to expand their own creativity and have the freedom and environment in the class to be creative and to try some things they had not tried before."

"I enjoy teaching at Midland College because of the openness and enthusiasm with which students approach my classes and because of the supportive atmosphere provided by other faculty members and the administration and staff of Midland College," she said.

The show is a continuation of Bailey's thesis show from Ft. Hayes State University and will remain on display in the Midland College McCormick Gallery through Feb. 9.

Bailey displays one of her handbuilt ceramic pieces. Handbuilding provided the opportunity to experiment.

MC Ceramics instructor, Carol Bailey explains the steps to creating a "liniform vessel." Bailey's show can be seen in the McCormick Gallery through Feb. 17.

Time management, real estate set for Feb. 6

Study/travel courses offer credit, fun

Students can take a seven-day trip to Washington, D.C. this spring or a two-week trip to Europe this summer and receive three hours of college credit.

Dr. Pamela Howell, English Faculty member, is offering a study\travel course for students who enroll in the second session of summer school.

"Students will make a direct and immediate connection between authors and the places where they lived," Howell said about the trip to European cultural sites.

Coombes

Students can earn three sophomore literature credits for World Masterpieces I or II, 2301 or 2302. The course is scheduled July 12 through August 1. Cost of all hotel, roundtrip airfare and other costs is about $2,000.

Howell has scheduled two organizational/informational meetings Wednesday, Feb. 1 for anyone interested in the trip. The meetings will be 1 p.m. or 6 p.m. in the Faculty Lounge in the Student Center. Interested students should contact Dr. Howell at 685-4628.

A trip to Washington, D.C. will be offered during the Spring interim term in May. Students can get three hours of college credit by enrolling in GOVT 2302, 2305 or History 2301.

However, students may not enroll for government and history credit at the same time.

"The benefits of a trip of this nature is that it gives the student visual and place hooks to attach to book knowledge," Will Morris, division chair of Social and Behavioral Sciences, said.

Combining a trip with class credit makes the subject matter much more alive without sacrificing academic integrity, he said.

Students will tour Washington, D.C., Mount Vernon, Harper's Ferry and possibly a civil war battlefield.

Morris said the trip to Harper's Ferry, the site of John Brown's raid, is important because students can understand events much more clearly if they can see actual countryside,

Estimated cost for the trip is $685 per person, not including tuition and fees. Interested students should contact Morris or Lee Almaguer as soon as possible at 685-4739.

He's Earning The Trust Of People In West Texas. One Family At A Time

You don't just give your trust away. It has to be earned. Not just once but again and again. Year after year. Family after family. And that's what Michael Melson, Insurance Agent and member of the 1994 Million Dollar Round Table(MDRT), is doing.

The MDRT is an international association of more than 19,000 top life insurance professionals, dedicated to improving life insurance service through professional and personal development.

Only 6 percent of all agents earn a seat at the Million Dollar Round Table...by earning your trust and the trust of your community. One family at a time.

He earns it by giving you good advice as you plan for a solid future. By helping you and your family achieve financial security needs. By getting involved in community affairs.

No, your trust isn't just given away. It must be earned. Not just once. But again and again. Year after year. Family after family. And no one believes and practices this more than Michael Melton.

HOME: Family deserves help, despite actions of children, officials say prison.

Their brother, Andy Ybarra, who has been characterized as the "bedrock" of the family, is married and has never been to prison.

Daniel Ybarra said that when his brothers get out of prison, "They are going to go to a halfway house."

He said that his mother's house will no longer be used for dealing drugs.

The frame house is partially bordered by a wooden fence on the street side to prevent law-enforcement officers from witnessing drug deals, according to Midland police.

"That fence is to prevent us from observing drug dealings," said Midland Police Department spokesman Sgt. David Garcia.

The house could have been "seized" by law-enforcement agents as a tool of drug-trafficking. But officials said it wasn't worth the effort because of the property's value. The house and land have been valued at $6,130 by the Midland Central Appraisal District.

Garcia said that in the mid-1980s, he investigated drug dealings at the Ybarra house.

For example, cash — $1,000 or more — and food stamps were uncovered following a search there, he said.

"They are greedy," police Detective Jeff Darr said of the brothers. "They have learned how to manipulate the system."

"Every time we'd send one (brother) to prison, one or two would be getting out," Darr said.

"I sent four of them down in '89, including some cousins," Darr said. "It was after that that they upgraded the fence."

Despite her sons' criminal records, Mrs. Ybarra "should not have to live like she is living," Garcia said. "Her sons are on a steady rotation out of prison."

Midland County District Attorney Al Schorre — whose staff has prosecuted the sons — said, "Once the drug abuse seeps into that family, and you have several of the family members doing it, the whole family tends to slip into the sub-cultural.

"One brother teaches the next. Before you turn around, the whole family has been tainted."

Recently, Mrs. Ybarra — speaking through an interpreter — said her "sons are paying the debt that they owe society."

The interpreter, Gil Delgado, who ministers to the homeless by feeding and clothing them and by "feeding them the word of God," said Mrs. Ybarra is under "a lot of stress."

Mrs. Ybarra's daughters "are real old-fashioned," said Delgado's wife, Belia Delgado. "They won't even cuss. They are beautiful people."

While the brothers may have dealt in drugs to make money to survive, "that's not justifiable," Delgado said. "You have to be responsible for your actions."

Mrs. Ybrarra's 34-year-old daughter, Margarita, said her "brothers are nice; I don't get into their business."

She and another sister are babysitting to earn extra income; another is receiving welfare aid by way of the Aid to Families With Dependent Children (AFDC) while her husband is in prison. The mother receives Social Security income. Meanwhile, the sisters may be enrolling in Casa De Amigos programs to increase their educational level and job opportunties.

Among Midlanders who have volunteered to get into Mrs. Ybarra's "business" and to try to make her house more liveable is Don Hellinghausen.

"Regardless of the drug thing," he said, "we have to get help for Antonia."

Connie Glover, executive director of Community and Senior Services of Midland, thinks "every American has the right to live in safe, decent, affordable housing."

She is aware of the Ybarras' situation.

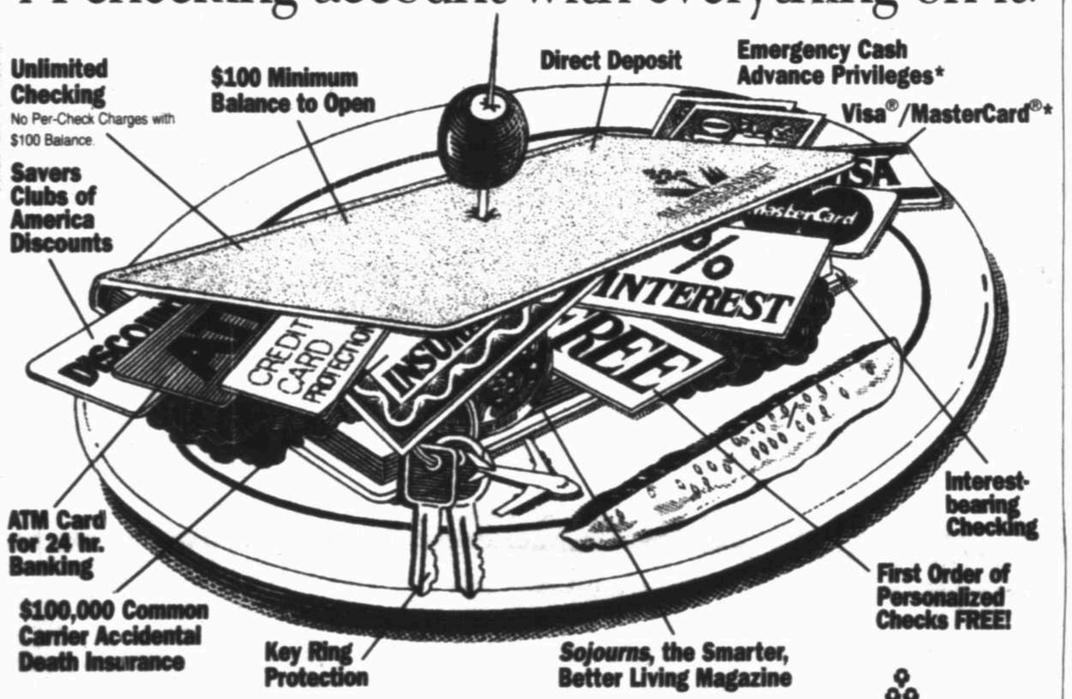

"We Midlanders have to take it on as a responsibility for the entire community to do everything we can to help provide decent housing to other Midlanders."

While people often are victims of their culture "and lifestyle, they still have that right to decent housing," Ms. Glover said.

"It seems like the mother in this situation is just the victim, and why should she be penalized for what her family members do? We can't make aggregate judgment — it has to be individual. She has that right."

Senate should OK budget proposal

Quick approval in the House of Representatives Thursday of a proposal for a balanced budget amendment was certainly a victory for the new Republican majority and House Speaker Newt Gingrich. More than that, however, it was a victory for the American people who polls have shown strongly support a balanced budget amendment or at least the concept of Congress spending no more than the government takes in.

There is little doubt that the balanced budget amendment will face tougher opposition in the Senate, where it is expected to come up for a vote in about two weeks. And with that in mind, Americans may want to either call or write their senators to ensure that they know the people who sent them to Washington still want them to act in a responsible fashion. The overspending that Congress has done for decades must be brought under control. That is perhaps the strongest message voters sent to members of Congress in the elections last Nov. 8th.

The Republicans' well-known "Contract With America" — while no doubt to be debated item by item in the Congress — offers a good overview of the major ills now afflicting government and the need for a way to control excessive spending is at the top of the list for many Americans. Why is a balanced budget amendment needed? Well, according to information from The Heritage Foundation, a well-respected Washington, D.C. think-tank, the national debt now stands at more than $3.5 trillion, nearly 90 percent of which has accrued since 1969. In fact, the last time the nation had a balanced budget was in 1969.

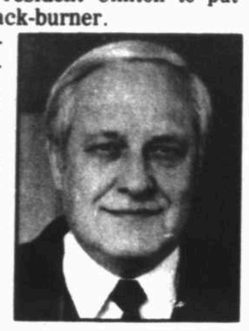

That amount of debt means the federal government owes more than $13,000 for every man, woman and child in the nation, and while some Americans say the national debt is meaningless, consider this. The annual interest payments on that debt will reach $235 billion this year — and that's money that constitutes a direct financial burden of $3,500 for every family of four in America. The way to reduce that financial burden is to reduce the debt.

The House was correct to approve the balanced budget amendment. Now the Senate should follow suit. It's time for the Congress to get serious about the national debt that Americans have been concerned about for years.

Kantor plays vital role in administration

WASHINGTON — United States Trade Representative Mickey Kantor held a five-hour meeting of his senior staff one recent Saturday to draft a new trade agenda for the upcoming two years. None of the staffers knew, however, that only weeks earlier, he had advised President Clinton to put trade issues on the back-burner.

Anderson

"What he was recommending was downplaying trade," said one source familiar with Kantor's position. "He said it's killing us with our constituency of (organized) labor. He told Clinton, 'We did the right thing, but let's move on.'"

Kantor's advice may have been reflected in the Clinton's State of the Union address, in which trade may have been the only issue to get short-changed.

There is certainly enough to boast about. In the past two years, the Clinton administration has tallied a total of 71 agreements to open up foreign markets for American products and services. The administration has helped open the largest free trade zone in the world (NAFTA), negotiated the largest multilateral free trade pact in history (GATT), forged 38 bilateral textile agreements and struck a deal with Asian-Pacific nations to eliminate trade barriers in the fastest-growing region on earth.

Some administration officials crow that Kantor's legislative successes stand in sharp contrast to other administration initiatives, which have often been less successful. One reason may be that Kantor moved early to cultivate bipartisan support for his agenda. For example, Kantor had a private breakfast with then-Senate Minority Leader Bob Dole, R-Kan., shortly after his confirmation in 1993, striking up a rapport that's paid dividends ever since.

"That relationship has been a tremendous (factor) in the success he's had," a friend of both men told us. "Bob Dole trusts him and never passes up an opportunity on television to say something nice about him. Kantor has got a great feel for people and for politics."

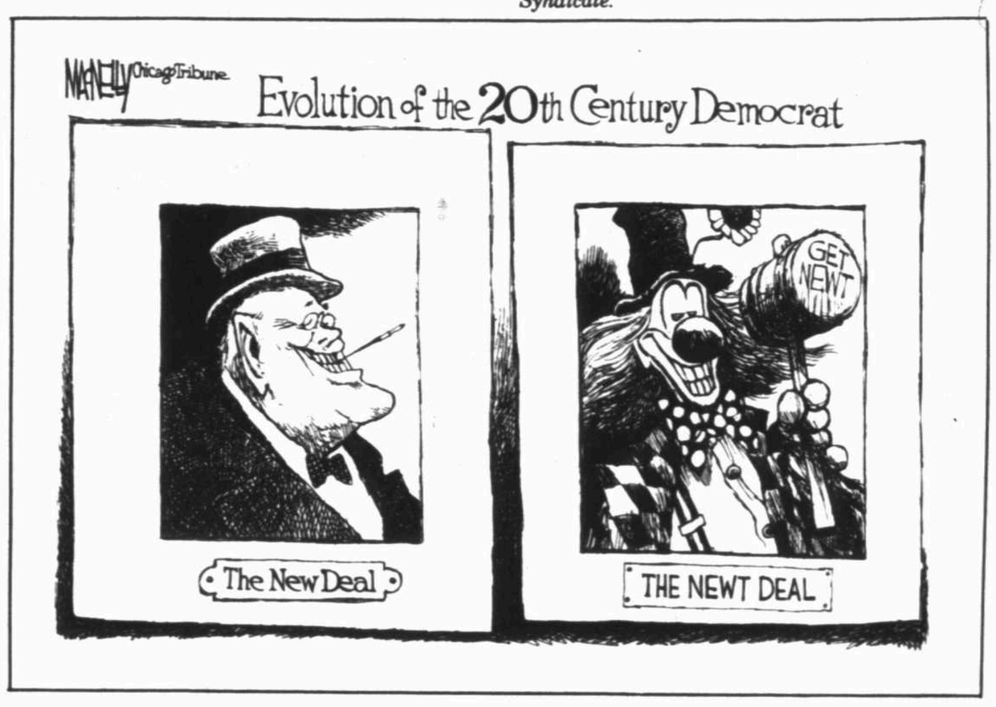

This is one of the reasons Kantor is regarded as one of the smartest politicians in the Clinton administration. Now Kantor's deputies hope to parlay a solid record of past achievement into new trade pacts, opening up burgeoning markets for American goods and services. If they are successful, however, there won't be the kind of Rose Garden ceremonies that accompanied their previous efforts.

According to sources, Kantor believes Clinton has tapped trade for all its political value. Maintaining a high visibility on the issue the next two years could undermine Clinton's re-election prospects because of the time it diverts from more pressing domestic issues. Moreover, organized labor leaders are still nursing their wounds over their failure to stop NAFTA and GATT, which they fear will lead to a loss of American jobs. Despite the administration's aggressive attempts to educate the public, many workers still view the trade pacts as a threat to their future.

Kantor's deputies hope to devote the next two years to more aggressive education efforts and to the fine print and implementation language of various existing agreements. "It's a different profile and focus, but it's equally, if not more important," one Kantor deputy said. "In effect, the agreements we have reached aren't worth the paper they're written on if they're not implemented properly or adhered to."

A trusted friend to Clinton for 15 years, Kantor was the president's natural choice to help rally the administration after the GOP landslide on Nov. 8. At one point recently, Clinton asked Kantor to head his re-election committee, an offer Kantor declined, according to sources.

Liberalism surfaces in union address

WASHINGTON — President Clinton's turbid State of the Union address was a metaphor for modern government — sprawling, metastasizing, undisciplined, approaching self-parody. It underscored the fact that his administration now is politically almost harmless, but is aesthetically excruciating.

Will

The address was heavily larded — exactly the right word — with semi-conservative words about cutting taxes, spending and regulations. However, regarding two matters Clinton considers crucial — the AmeriCorps "national service" program and the minimum wage — the address was half-baked and half-hearted liberalism.

AmeriCorps, says Clinton, will revive American volunteerism. The approximately 80 million Americans who volunteer their time to religious and civic organizations may wonder who needs reviving and how much it matters whether AmeriCorps eventually produces 100,000 more volunteers. Today 2.9 million of America's 80 million volunteers are ages 18 to 25, the ages of AmeriCorps "volunteers."

To Americans who use the English language to communicate thoughts rather than parody them, the use of the word "volunteer" in connection with AmeriCorps' recruits must seem like the latest redundant evidence that Washington is stark raving mad. To plain-speaking Americans, a volunteer is someone who contributes his or her unpaid labor. Clinton's "volunteers" will be paid a $7,400 annual stipend, plus $9,450 worth of college expenses over two years. And this is not all that Clinton's little puddle of government-manufactured "volunteers" — little relative to the 80 million true volunteers who need neither financial incentives from, nor organization by, government — will cost taxpayers.

In addition to the health and child-care entitlements for AmeriCorps members, and AmeriCorps' Washington bureaucracy, money is spent to locate "volunteers" to take AmeriCorps money. The Omaha World-Herald says that AmeriCorps gave Nebraska's state government a $457,622 grant to recruit 23 AmeriCorps members. That $19,896.60 per recruit calls into question the effectiveness of the $1.7 million AmeriCorps paid a Washington PR firm for national advertising.

According to the New Citizenship Project, a conservative advocacy group, of AmeriCorps' first 20,000 "volunteers," 1,200 are working for agencies of the federal government. The New Citizenship Project warns that AmeriCorps is ripe for politicization, citing a Washington Monthly report that a 1993 pilot project became an exercise in identity politics and political correctness, developing ethnic and homosexual caucuses. And the Los Angeles Times reported that a 1994 pilot project in San Francisco used its "volunteers" to protest "three-strikes-and-you're-out" crime legislation.

Clinton calls AmeriCorps the achievement "I would say I was most proud of." No minimum wage increase will be rival for that title.

In 1992 candidate Clinton endorsed increasing the minimum wage. During 1993 and 1994, when he had a congressional majority that would have done it, he did not ask for it, primarily because some sensible Democrats told him it was a dumb idea. Al From, head of the centrist Democratic Leadership Council, which once advertised Clinton as a New Democrat, says of the minimum wage proposal: "It's anachronistic, it's a loser, it's got no bite with the middle class. And it screams old Democrat."

Now that there is a Congress that Clinton knows will not enact an increase, he calls it urgent. However, during Tuesday night's oration, when he was pitilessly detailed about almost everything, he remained reticent about how much the minimum wage should be increased. Leaving aside the unwisdom of government telling employers what to pay employees, it is generally true that when you increase the cost of something, people buy less of it. There is evidence that is true of labor at the low end of the wage scale.

ANOTHER VIEW

Are immigrants really 'stealing' our jobs?

The misplaced fear that waves of immigrants are "stealing" American jobs (rather than taking jobs Americans don't want) has been supplanted of late by the fear that those same immigrants also are stealing American tax dollars.

The political debate on this sensitive topic — which has led Californians, for example, to vote to cut public assistance to illegal immigrants — rests on the premise that newcomers are disproportionately burdening our burgeoning welfare state, reaping a windfall of food stamps, medical care and so forth. If that's true, it certainly is cause for concern among the vast majority of taxpayers who rightly seek to rein in a labyrinth of government entitlement programs.

Only, this new fear, too, is misplaced. Data shows that immigrants, legal or illegal, are no more likely to rely on the government welfare apparatus than is the public at large. Less so, in fact.

The February issue of Reason magazine touts recent research by the Manhattan Institute, whose "Index of Leading Immigration Indicators" shows, among other things, that only 2 percent of non-refugee immigrants who arrived between 1980 and 1990 receive welfare. Nearly twice that percentage of native-born Americans, 3.7 percent, are on welfare.

As hard-working, taxpaying Americans correctly target the growing welfare web (and its underlying social breakdown), they must not misfire on newcomers who, by and large, only want to join their ranks.

World is plentiful with Dickens-like names

Reading too much Dickens lately. Which reminds me of a Greenwich Village bookshop clerk. A young man. College age. I asked for a copy of "David Copperfield."

"Who's the author?" he asked. "Dickens," I said. "What's his first name?" he asked. Recalling that exchange, I'll start over:

Russell Baker

Reading too much CHARLES Dickens lately. First though, the dumb book-clerk story reminds me of a waiter story. If Dave Barry will forgive the plagiarism, I am not making this up. It really happened during a lunch in Martinsburg, W.Va., which doesn't matter. This is about youth, not West Virginia.

So four of us were lunching in Martinsburg, and I was playing the old crock. Saying something like, "It's amazing how little America's young crocks know of our ancient world. Take our waiter —"

He was an alert young crock. College age. "I'll bet he doesn't even know who Joe DiMaggio is." All three scoffed and scoffed. "Ha, ha! Not know who Joe DiMaggio is? Don't be silly."

When the waiter, alert and college age, came back to the table a scoffer asked if he knew who Joe DiMaggio was. His uneasy look said, "These old crocks are putting me on," but out loud he said, "Well, I think I've heard of him somewhere."

"Know who he is?"

The waiter took his time, searched the memory file in the back of his skull, then said, "An actor or something, isn't he?"

What can we take for granted anymore? You're going to say Newt Gingrich, everybody knows who he is. That's what you think. That's because you read newspapers, heed Tom Brokaw and are a C-Span junkie, making you the minority elite.

Probably think you're too good to watch MTV and diddle the day away surfing the shopping channels, don't you? Face the facts of modernity: College-age people never heard of Joe DiMaggio, never heard of Charles Dickens, are already forgetting they ever heard of Newt Gingrich, those who did.

See why I say, "Reading TOO much CHARLES Dickens lately"? It's a confession to a terminal social condition: headed down the tubes. Here's how bad off I am:

You know — those few of you who don't fear the tubes as much as the alternative and so are still with me — you know how Dickens had this ability to put the exactly right name on his fictional characters.

There are Hancock & Flobby, the dry-goods people; Uriah Heep, the pious hypocrite; Sir Mulberry Hawk, the seducer of innocent girls; Ebenezer Scrooge, the soul of greed; Mister Murdstone, the brutal stepfather; Mister Micawber, the eternal debtor; Josiah Bounderby, the loutish mill owner; Lord Lancaster Stiltstalking of the Circumlocution Office, and on, and on.

Because of reading too much Dickens lately, I am amazed at how many real people are going around in Dickensian names. What's worse, I waste hours puzzling over what kinds of characters Dickens would have built for these names.

For instance, what would he have done with Cito Gaston? The real Cito Gaston manages the Toronto baseball team, but I see Cito Gaston as a Lancashire businessman posing as a French count to con a snobby London banker into refinancing his chair factory.

All right, Dickens I am not. But who's to say you are not? If you've read this far, you just may be. So I challenge all who hunger for literary fame to test their Dickens potential thusly:

Compose a list of 10 well-known living people whose names would have caught Dickens's eye. Describe the character Dickens would have created for each name. If you feel cocky, fit all 10 into a single plot Dickens might have written, and send to me.

Win no money! Just tax-free fame.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Sunday, Jan. 29, the 29th day of 1995. There are 336 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

One hundred and fifty years ago, on Jan. 29, 1845, Edgar Allan Poe's poem "The Raven" ("Once upon a midnight dreary, while I pondered, weak and weary . . .") was first published, in the New York Evening Mirror. The poem, with its brooding images and mellifluous phrasing, caused a sensation.

On this date:

In 1820, Britain's King George III died insane at Windsor Castle, ending a reign that had seen both the American and French revolutions.

In 1843, the 25th president of the United States, William McKinley, was born in Niles, Ohio.

In 1850, Henry Clay introduced in the Senate a compromise bill on slavery that included the admission of California into the Union as a free state.

In 1861, Kansas became the 34th state of the Union.

In 1900, the American League, consisting of eight baseball teams, was organized in Philadelphia.

In 1936, the first members of baseball's Hall of Fame, including Ty Cobb and Babe Ruth, were named in Cooperstown, N.Y.

In 1956, editor-essayist H.L. Mencken died in Baltimore.

Canned hunt practice is repugnant, cruel

It's difficult to imagine why anyone would want to shoot a caged animal and then hang its head on the wall as a trophy, but in Texas the business of "canned hunts" is thriving. This repugnant practice is ethically indefensible and blatantly cruel. Many of the target animals are so tame that they don't even try to run away. For many, death is painful and lingering because the hunters aim for non-vital areas to preserve their trophies or are simply inexperienced shooters who can't guarantee a clean kill. Not surprisingly, many Texas sportsmen and women have denounced canned hunts.

Fortunately legislation is being considered in Austin that would curb these practices. SB 97 sponsored by state Sen. Mike Moncrief and HB 239 by state Rep. Tony Goodman would stop the canned hunting of certain species such as lions, cougars, leopards, bears, and elephants. Similar legislation passed the Senate in 1991, but the legislative clock ran out before the House could act.

We urge everyone to contact their legislators and urge support for these two bills. Texas shouldn't become known as the canned hunt capital of the United States.

Criteria must be met before Unitary Status

At the school board meeting on Jan. 10, a motion was made to seek Unitary Status, and not support the modified plan. Judge Ferguson gave several instructions, among them was that a plan be drawn so that the elementary schools would never be segregated again. Grades one through six are the focus of my discussion.

A preliminary plan was to be presented to Judge Ferguson in January. The Justice Department hired Dr. Leonard Stevens, and the Intervenors hired Dr. Joseph Travillion to assist in this effort. Dr. Travillion had very little input in this plan. To date, we have not seen the plan.

Now for a little historical background: the Cluster Plan came into being because of a court decision to integrate the elementary schools. A committee from the Anglo community approached both the African-American and Hispanic communities and asked the parents if they would support a plan that would allow grades one through three to remain in the neighborhoods and grades four through six would be integrated on a broader scale.

There were critics of the Cluster Plan from the day of its inception and we did not feel that it was a perfect plan, but that whatever hardships were precipitated by this plan, we shared equally.

The Intervenors' position has always been, if there is a better way to desegregate the schools in Midland, we would support it. Long before Ms. Dianne Anderson was elected to the school board I met with her and voiced this same opinion.

It is my belief that Unitary Status can only be achieved by the district when it has met certain criteria. Among the things that have been used to determine Unitary Status are the Green Criteria. I will only discuss four of them.

1. Student Assignment: Each student population in the district must be reflective of the general overall population of the district. To demonstrate, we are told that Hispanics make up 37 percent, African-Americans 12 percent, and Anglos 52 percent along with Asians. That means every elementary school in the district will have a ratio reflecting those same percentages. Students must be assigned where needed to meet this ratio.

2. Faculty assignment should be reflective of the population. Teachers will have to be assigned in the same way the students are assigned so that there will be a better distribution of teachers according to their ethnicity.

3. Administrative staff: There must be minorities represented in policy-making decisions.

4. Facilities: Facilities in the district are supposed to be equitable. The older schools do not compare to the new schools. In order to make some of our older schools equitable, money for renovations, will mean an increase in taxes.

I am disappointed that the school board chose to seek Unitary Status without supporting any part of the modified plan. Surely, as our elected officials, they will be a part of any negotiation that decides on where our children go to school, how they will get there and what happens after they get there?

Unitary Status in all probability will lead to integration of grades one through three across the entire system. I ask one simple question: Who will you blame when your first-, second- and third-graders will be on the buses going all over Midland to attend school?

Coach Switzer ranks with best coaches

I would like to reply to a letter written by Jack Goodwin in which he criticizes Jerry Jones and Barry Switzer for failing to beat San Francisco.

I'm at a loss to understand how Goodwin can say Barry had trouble winning the "Big One" in the Orange Bowl when he was a college coach. How can you win three National Championships without winning the "Big One?" Also, he won it in the least amount of time it has ever taken a coach, and OU was on probation when Barry took over. If he had trouble winning, why was he the winningest coach in football when he resigned from OU?

No matter how you feel about Coach Switzer, you can't deny his place in football. He ranks among the best of college coaches. The 15-yard penalty wasn't what hurt us. What hurt was when Deion Sanders put his left arm in Michael Irvin's face with no call from the referee. Also, remember that other Cowboys came on the field besides Barry. What you are doing is saying that Barry is to blame for everything.

Remember, the misuse of time before the half was from the offensive coordinator and I don't suppose he can control Bono's kicking leg. You asked the Cowboys to do what no other team has done and then criticized them when they didn't do it. Nothing but a well-coached team could have fought back like they did. Let's not be so greedy.

Taiwan doesn't have large crime problem

Last week I was visiting with a business acquaintance from Amarillo. Our conversation rolled around to the state of affairs in Texas and the United States as far as education is concerned, the terrible tax burden and the problems we're having in our local schools in regard to discipline and crime. I related some of the latest incidents and how a retreat was scheduled to take place in Midland to address such issues. With that my friend said, "At coffee this morning we were discussing the problem of crime in this country and how the offenders keep getting younger and younger." One of the ones present was from Taiwan. When we asked about crime in Taiwan he said, "There is very little." One of the things he attributes this to is that the name of a youth committing an offense is not printed in the newspaper — but the name of the youth's parents is published.

This seems to me to be a reasonable approach and one that I feel certain would have a positive impact.

All must remember government is broke

I have read with a great deal of interest what has happened to the value of the peso in Mexico, how both Mexican and American officials knew months in advance of the coming collapse of the Mexican economy because the Mexican government was borrowing much too much and spending much too freely.

But in November of 1994 at the Summit of the Americas in Miami President Clinton celebrated Mexico's economic management as a model for the region's growth, even as he knew full well that economic disaster had to come to Mexico as the result of irresponsible management.

Now, to bail Mexico out of its economic mess President Clinton wants to loan Mexico $50 billion! That amount is essentially equal to $191 for each and every American!

My answer to that is: No! No! No! at a sound level of at least 125 decibels.

Something that the president, as well as all senators, House members, bureaucrats and citizens need to remember every waking moment is that:

The U.S. government is nearly broke.

We cannot waste money on foreign aid, National Endowments for the Arts, fraud, waste and mismanagement in Social Security, Medicare, the Department of Defense, the Justice Department — on and on and on.

There is great need for new golf courses

I was watching our local TV when they reported that we might get nine more holes at Hogan Park Golf Course. There is a great need for more golf courses in Midland. As I understand this, there are those who think that this should be paid for by increasing the fee.

Boys and girls use this golf course. They are our golfers of the future. If they play golf they are busy having fun and they don't get into trouble.

Young men and women 18 to 45 years of age play golf. They are not making the money that we did in the oil boom and it's been a bad year for the farmers and ranchers too. They don't need an increase in golf fees. The course keeps them out of bars and from being idle. They work off their frustrations beating up on a golf ball.

The Golden Agers need the golf course to get exercise, fellowship and something to do.

To finance our needed nine more holes at Hogan Park, don't' increase the fees!

Put an account in one of the banks and ask for $1, $5 or what you can get the people to contribute to build nine more holes.

President is actor, politician — no more

On Sunday (Opinion, Jan. 22) you printed an "Other View" from the St. Paul Pioneer Press regarding the president and his administration. The following quotes are from that comment with some observations: "It is tempting at the moment to judge (him) as a politician who is failing, as president," "If (he) were consistently the same (person)..." "This presidency has also been impaired by a civil war among democrats..."

First, it is not only tempting, it is unavoidable! Don't they get it? That is all that this man is; a politician! There is nothing else there. That's the problem. To borrow a phrase, it would be easier for a camel to go through the eye of a needle than to make a leader out of this president.

The man is charismatic and an effective actor. He is reported to have an enormous intellect and a photographic memory. If those were the job requirements, we should conduct an IQ exam, not an election. He can campaign and win which may be sufficient to make him boss. It certainly does not make him a leader.

Next, "If he were consistently the same...?" Really? Don't they get it? He is bereft of any of the qualities of leadership and that is why he was and remains a failure. Two years is long enough to judge? Everything needed was known before he was elected.

Finally, "This presidency has also been impaired by a civil war among democrats..." Don't they get it? All winning teams are a reflection of the ability of the man at the top. And so are all losing teams.

Gov. Bush can't fill Richards' big shoes

The letter by Manuel Lujan defining political affiliations doesn't go far enough in its definition.

The term liberal in its political definition represents what America does stand for. Former Gov. Ann Richards did for Texas what two Republican presidents could only dream about. There were more jobs produced in Texas during her tenure and an additional $700 million made available through her efforts for local school districts. I believe newly-elected Gov. Bush's almost apologetic remarks underscore the belief that he will not be able to fill the big shoes left by Ms. Richards!

Also most would like to blame the liberals for everything, yet it is the conservative reich who at every opportunity engage in conduct that would have landed the average Joe in Leavenworth. Remember it was dear old Ronnie who sold out the Permian Basin for international domination interest. And it was old George who was involved in the dope dealing of Panama. Ronnie helped too but he doesn't remember.

Now we have Newt Gingrich apparently attempting to create concentration camps for the less fortunate because they don't fit in. And if you look close enough the little tag on his lapel is not an American flag but his current going rate.

Finally, liberals like President Clinton who advocate government reflective and responses to the American concerns are brow beaten for every irrelevant issue possible. Never mind he reduced the deficit by $700 billion and reduced government by 100,000 employees.

It is certainly socially acceptable to say you are conservative but come to terms with what you actually represent!

Readers' views on: Wildlife center

Some should buy Baker property

The whole Midland vs. Midge Erskine problem of boundary disputes and unhappy neighbors could be solved at far less cost than a lawsuit. This might be accomplished by Midlanders buying the Dennis and Vanessa Baker property for fair market value and deeding that property to the Erskines. Midland could save face by having its sanctuary for injured animals and endangered species. There would be no boundary dispute. The Bakers could leave town with their pockets full and the City Council could get to the resolution of more important issues facing the city of Midland.

James T. Purcell

Wildlife center needs to consider others

It is most unfortunate that Midge Erskine and her supporters did not choose to apply their time, efforts and money to developing a wildlife rehabilitation center that allowed for the consideration of the Erskines' neighbors and our community rather than a public legal display. The wild animals continuing to need to be served would have certainly been served well by such a choice. Truly, Midland could have had a most remarkable wildlife rehabilitation center for the money that has been spent on what I consider to be the personal grandstanding of Ms. Erskine.

There are all forms of heroes in our midst, some who daily risk their lives in service to others, who are still accountable to the laws that are in place for our protection. I continue to be amazed that Ms. Erskine appears to believe that because she does good works she is above the law and really above even common courtesy to her neighbors.

Team has destroyed selfless enterprise

I concur in the thoughts of Richard Jones expressed in his letter published in the Jan. 15 edition. We certainly are fortunate to have the likes of Jad David stand at the gates of justice and protect us from wrongdoers such as the Erskines, with their scheme to care for a number of injured wild and domestic animals through the most sinister EOS Wildlife Refuge Center.

But please, Jones, let's not stop short. David is only the hired hand; he may even be fond of animals. What we urgently need to do is include David's clients in the thank you note, for without their financial support the EOS Wildlife Refuge Center might still be a menace to us. Finally, we should not forget to include our two esteemed members of the Midland City Council who voted against the EOS Wildlife Refuge Center. Without their brilliant, incisive analysis of the case, I suppose that we could still be at the mercy of the Erskines.

I was just kidding, and assume Jones was too. It is now time to recognize what David and the others have really done. All of them have the unique distinction of destroying, with finality, one of the most noble and selfless enterprises Midland has ever seen.

Neighbors have no valid reason, excuse

I was shocked and disappointed when I read in the paper that the "Bird Lady," Midge Erskine, had been denied a permit to keep her wildlife rehabilitation center within the city limits. As I understand it, she was denied a permit because:

1) Neighbors don't want her birds defecating on their lawns — they call this a "health hazard."

2) They don't want her wildlife walking around wild (wildlife walking around wild! oh no!)

3) Because people believe her animals carry disease, and just by living next to her center, they could catch one.

4) This whole thing got started over a boundary dispute.

As I see it, none of the above reasons are valid to use to deny her a permit. The only reason this issue came to court was because an incoming neighbor decided they didn't want to live next to her birds and wildlife, and needed a reason to make her move. I ask you, why didn't they just not move in if they didn't like who they were moving next to? The Erskines provided a valuable service to our community, taking in sick animals and nursing them back to health. What kind of a phobia does this town have if this is the way we treat our environmentally and wildlife concious neighbors?

SPEAKING OUT

Unitary Status is not return to segregation

By Dianne Anderson

On Sept. 16, 1976, Midland Independent School District (MISD) entered into a Consent Decree relating to grades kindergarten through sixth, with the United States of America and other parties. This Consent Decree has in many ways governed the activities of MISD as to those grades in the intervening years. The decree provides, in part, for the formation of a "Cluster System" for grades four through six, which serves as the skeletal structure for the school district.

In 1994, after working within the boundaries of the Consent Decree for 18 years, the majority of the school board felt that it was time to try to free MISD from the confines of the Consent Decree. This was not done lightly, nor without due consideration for all the citizens of Midland and the students of MISD.

We took this action because we believed that the various boards of trustees had, over the years, carried out in good faith the terms of the decree, and we should now be able to deal with the needs of the district in the areas of accountability of educators, parental involvement, and consistency of curriculums, without having to seek prior approval in each instance for action that the majority of the board members believed to be appropriate. Thus, on May 24, 1994, the board voted to seek Unitary Status. If granted, Unitary Status will mean that, our school district will no longer be subject to the control of the federal courts; that is, it will again be free to govern itself.

Unitary Status does not mean that the school system may do as it pleases; the school district is obligated, and must continue to obey the laws of the United States and the state of Texas. The school district would, however, be free to conduct its activities without court supervision. Unitary Status is not an attempt by the board, or anyone on the board, to return to a segregated school system. Putting aside for one moment the ethics and morality of such a move, segregated schools are illegal, and a segregated school system would quickly mean the return of intervention by the federal courts, which would defeat the entire purpose of seeking Unitary Status.

There are those in our community, who perceive this move by MISD as a threat to the gains they have made in their long and difficult fight against segregation and discrimination. It is difficult to dispel such a notion, but I would point out that it would be illogical for MISD to risk court supervision of its activities once freedom from such interference is achieved.

Change can be scary. It is often easier to rely on the present situation, even if it has outgrown its usefulness, because it is predictable. Faced with the uncertainty of change, we tend to try to guess at its outcome, and our prognostications are sometimes erroneously shaded by subjective conceptions; we make the mistake of seeing the future in terms of our past experiences. It is important to try to put these outworn perspectives in their proper place.

It will take courage and trust to make this move to Unitary Status, but the time has come for Midland to move forward into a more creative educational system. There is no reason why this forward step should be perceived as a threat to the future of ourselves and our children; it will be a great benefit to our school system.

It has been, and continues to be, my goal to do everything I can to insure that MISD provides the best educational opportunities possible for ALL of the students in our school system.

Our policy on letters

The Reporter-Telegram recognizes the "Letters to the Editor" format as an important forum for citizen opinion and encourages participation of all readers. To that end, we have set as few rules as possible. However, we must have some, and they are:

- Letters must be signed and include a street address and daytime phone number for verification. Letters not including this information will not be considered for publication.
- They should be no more than 350 words in length. While some lengthy letters are published, we reserve the right to edit when necessary due to space limitations. The briefer the letter, the better its chance of publication.
- Only one letter per month per writer can be published.
- Letters will be edited for length, taste and legal reasons and are accepted only on that basis. Letters which are difficult to reduce in length will be returned to the writer to be edited before being re-submitted.
- We do not publish 'open' letters, copies of letters sent to others or multiple signatures.

Because we cannot research and verify all information in letters, by publishing them we neither imply nor guarantee the accuracy of information stated by writers.

Letters should be sent to: The Editor, Midland Reporter-Telegram, P.O. Box 1650, Midland 79702.

I first went to Planned Parenthood because I really couldn't afford a gynecologist. I was young. And nervous. And didn't know what to expect. But now I can afford to go anywhere. And you know what? I still go to Planned Parenthood.

From my very first visit, I felt they sincerely cared about me. They took the time to know me and answered all my questions in plain talk. Every time I go, they're as kind and understanding as ever.

I also feel their medical staff is professional, knowledgeable and very up to date. They're extremely sensitive to a woman's special medical concerns, and everything is kept confidential. I'm glad they offer such a wide range of services. As far as I'm concerned, Planned Parenthood is like family and will always be an important part of my health care.

Former Oklahoma All-America Lee Roy Selmon was one of five selected into Pro Football's Hall of Fame.

Largent leads quintet into football annals

By Hal Bock
AP Sports Writer

MIAMI — All things considered, Steve Largent had a good week.

The ex-wide receiver, now a freshman congressman from Oklahoma, won another election Saturday, chosen in his first year of eligibility for the Pro Football Hall of Fame.

"It's unbelievable what's happened to me," Largent said. "In the same week, I can vote on an amendment to the Constitution and get elected to the Hall of Fame."

Also picked by a 33-man panel of pro football writers were defensive end Lee Roy Selmon, the first Tampa Bay player to make it to Canton; tight end Kellen Winslow of the San Diego Chargers; longtime NFL executive Jim Finks, and Seniors choice Henry Jordan.

Each received 80 percent of the vote from the panel. Two other finalists, offensive lineman Dan Dierdorf and center Dwight Stephenson, did not receive the necessary votes. Eliminated earlier were eight other finalists — defensive ends Carl Eller and L.C. Greenwood, punter Ray Guy, defensive backs Mike Haynes and Mel Renfro, wide receivers Charlie Joiner and Lynn Swann, and guard Tom Mack.

Largent, an average-sized receiver at Tulsa, was a fourth-round draft choice by Houston, the 117th player selected in 1976. After four preseason games, he was traded to Seattle for an eighth-round pick, hardly a ringing endorsement of his skills.

With the Seahawks, though, he became a star. He played 200 games in 14 seasons and held six major receiving records when he retired in 1989. They included 819 receptions, 13,089 yards on receptions and 100 touchdown catches. He also caught passes in 177 consecutive games, a record broken this season by Art Monk of the New York Jets.

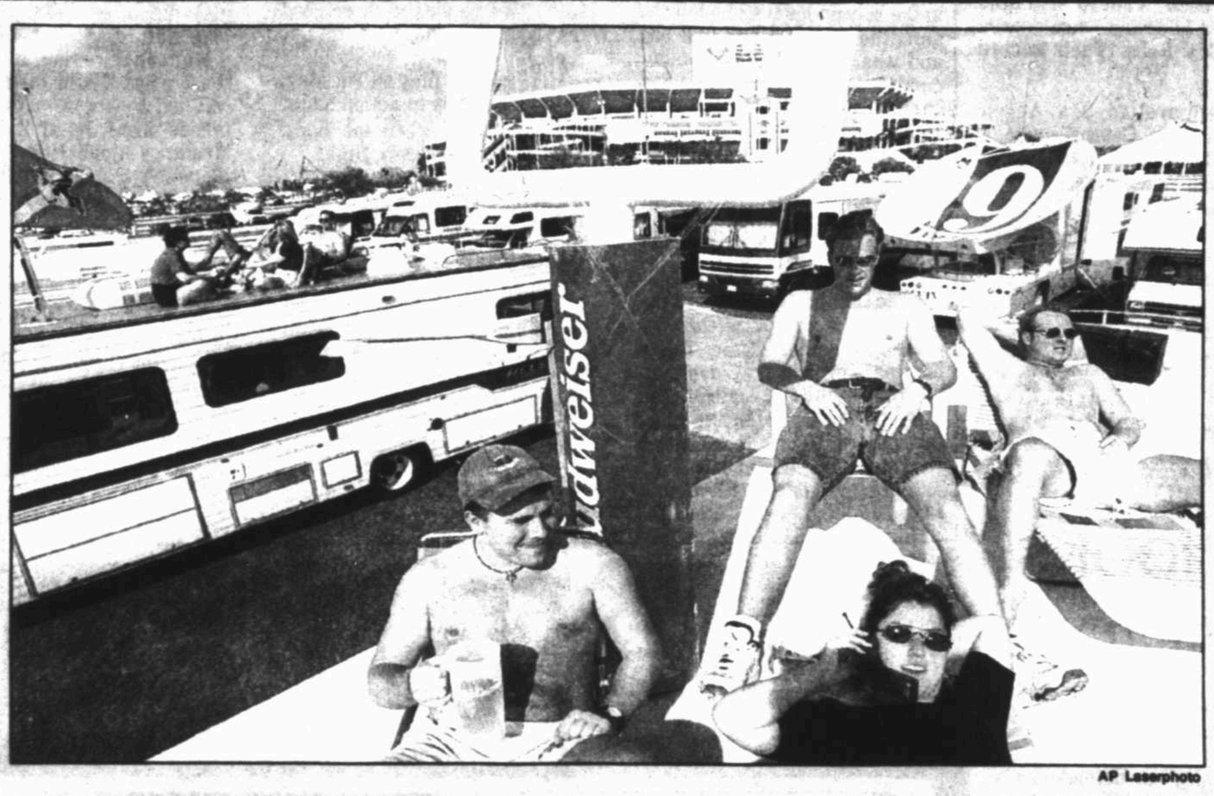

He had 10 seasons with 50 or more receptions and eight seasons with 1,000 yards or more on receptions, both also records.

"It just shows, no matter how sophisticated scouting is, the two things they have difficulty measuring is head and heart," Largent said. "My head is spinning right now."

Selmon won both the Outland and Lombardi trophies at Oklahoma and was the first draft choice of the expansion Bucs in 1976. He was a star on a terrible team that lost its

Not so Super Bowl finally arrives

MIAMI — Why play?

When one team, the San Francisco 49ers, is perhaps one of the greatest of the Super Bowl era.

And the other, the San Diego Chargers, is, well, lucky to even be here.

Why play?

Which is what a lot of people could be asking themselves by the time the Super Bowl ends Sunday night at Joe Robbie Stadium.

For by the second quarter, third at the latest, they may be watching Elvis Grbac throwing to Nate Singleton, Ed McCaffrey and Ted Popson — not long after Steve Young, Jerry Rice, John Taylor and Brent Jones have devoured the suspect San Diego secondary.

By then, the only consolation may be that neither the Buffalo Bills nor Denver Broncos are here.

The 49ers are playing for the NFL

Agassi outduels Sampras

■ Andre Agassi survives Pete Sampras' aces for Australian Open title.

By Steve Wilstein
AP Tennis Writer

MELBOURNE, Australia — Andre Agassi absorbed a 28-ace barrage by Pete Sampras, wore him down from the baseline and lifted his Australian Open title Sunday in a spectacular match to close in on the No. 1 ranking.

Agassi captured his second straight Grand Slam championship with a 4-6, 6-1, 7-6 (8-6), 6-4 victory over the weary Sampras and is in position to snatch his top ranking soon.

Sampras, who endured two five-set matches and a four-setter coming in, simply couldn't keep running around the court to keep up with Agassi. Serves kept Sampras in the match, but it was Agassi's 10th ace that beat him.

Agassi, playing in the Australian Open for the first time, added this title to his two other Grand Slams — Wimbledon in 1992 and the U.S. Open last year.

"He was just too good for everyone and he deserves all the success he's gotten," Sampras said.

Then, choking back tears, Sampras spoke to the crowd of his coach, Tim Gullikson, who suffered an apparent stroke last week when he became dizzy and lost his speech and vision for most of a day.

"I just want to let him know I keep thinking about him, and that I wish he was here," Sampras said. "I've been praying for him the last couple of weeks."

Penders' tirade ignites 'Horns

By Chip Brown
Associated Press Writer

AUSTIN — Terrence Rencher's 28 points and a timely technical foul on Texas coach Tom Penders helped fire the Longhorns past Texas Tech 82-68 on Saturday.

In a matchup of the preseason Southwest Conference favorites, the Longhorns (12-4, 4-1 SWC) trailed early but ignited midway through the first half after Penders, protesting an official's call, threw his suit jacket in the middle of the court.

■ SWC Roundup

Tech (9-7, 3-2) was led by Mark Davis with 15 points and Jason Sasser with 14. The Red Raiders successfully broke Texas' full-court pressure, but they struggled with turnovers in their half-court offense and never recovered from a near-9-minute scoring drought from the field in the first half.

Texas beat Tech for the eighth straight time in Austin and extended its home winning streak to 20 games.

Tech took a 15-11 lead with 10:59 left in the first half and appeared confident as two of the Raiders' first baskets came on thundering dunks by Davis and Darvin Ham.

But Penders' outburst, after a called charge on Longhorns point guard Roderick Anderson, seemed to inspire Texas. After Tech's Koy Smith gave the Raiders a 17-11 lead by making both free throws from the technical foul, the Longhorns went on an 11-0 run and took control of the game.

Anderson, who finished with 18 points, ignited the crowd with a 3-pointer and Rencher scored five straight points in the surge as Texas went up 22-17 with 5:23 left in the half.

Tech had 17 first-half turnovers and couldn't get any closer than 12 points in the second half.

Lee girls romp past Broncs, 6-1

By Stewart Doreen
Staff Writer

On paper, Midland Lee's girls soccer game with Odessa High Saturday was supposed to be a blowout. Lee had outscored its opponents 21-2 in their six victories, and OHS had been outscored 20-2 in their two previous games.

■ 5-5A Soccer

So, it was fitting that the Lee team would not disappoint its fans, defeating the Lady Bronchos 6-1 Saturday at Lee.

"These games are tough," Lee coach Van Gravitt said. "You have everything to lose nothing to gain."

Lee finished the game with two players scoring two goals each. Junior Erin Blinka and sophomore Nicki Smetzer led the Lady Rebels' stay a top of the District 5-5A standings. The 6-1 and 3-0 Lee club moves one-half game ahead of Abilene Cooper and Odessa Permian, who are both 2-0 after Saturday's play.

The Lady Rebels out shot OHS 34-2 during the course of the game. They created the opportunites, using good ball movement and teamwork.

"Everybody worked together out there," Blinka said. "We're trying to finish the play and make the scores."

With Lee up 2-1, Blinka soared high, out jumping players much taller than herself to put Smetzer's corner kick past the Bulldogs go through motion for easy victory

By Mike Butts

Midland High dominated Odessa Permian 4-1 Saturday and then talked about how they played flat and lacked intensity.

No doubt about it, the Bulldog soccer program has reached a level where just winning isn't good enough. But regardless of some MHS dissatisfaction with the win over the Panthers, the Bulldogs are still, said Odessa High coach Gary Reece, the top dog in the league. With Midland Lee's 4-1 win over Odessa High Saturday, the 5-5A standings reflect that with the Bulldogs (3-0 in district, 5-1-1 overall) alone in first place.

"You can talk all you want about all they graduated last year but they are the team to beat," said Reece, whose Panthers (0-2, 3-4) lost to MHS 6-0 in Midland last year. "You're talking about (making) the regional tournament for sure, possibly state."

MHS got two goals from senior midfielder Patrick Sample and took a 3-0 lead 14 minutes into the second half Saturday. But the Bulldogs, who scored seven goals Tuesday against Abilene Cooper, got only five shots in the first half and led 1-0 until the last minute before halftime. They also gave up their first goal of the district season.

"We didn't play to our potential at all," Bulldog stopper Kiley Miller said. "There shouldn't have been a goal against us."

Said Bulldog coach Tom Esikhati: "There was no intensity right from the beginning. I don't know what our expectations were. We didn't approach it the same way we approached Lee (to open district). We had several opportunities we could utilize but we didn't take advantage of them."

Midland High held Permian to three shots on goal in the first half and eight for the game. The Panthers first shot didn't come until the 20-minute mark of the first half. Bulldogs keeper Eric Rogers, filling in for Jared Richardson, made five saves.

GIRLS: Blinka scores two goals against OHS

(From 1C)

OHS goalie Ronnie Nunez. It was Blinka's second goal of the day, both coming off corners and both goals coming off assists from Smetzer (her third and fourth of the season). Blinka's toughness can be seen all over the field.

"When I get in there," Blinka said. "I'll do what I have to do for us to win."

Smetzer followed Blinka, scoring minutes later, blasting a shot from 15 yards out into the lower left portion of the net to make the score 4-1. The goal was Smetzer's fourth of the season and the second of the game.

"We moved Nikki to forward to get her in the offense," Gravitt said. "That was something positve that came out of this game."

Angie Boyd got in on the scoring, netting her fourth goal of the season. Boyd drove a ball from 18 yards out, beating Nunez to the lower left part of the goal. Jennifer Smith finished out the scoring in the 74th minute of the match when Smith bounced a goal off the hands of Nunez.

Odessa High, 0-3 on the season and 0-2 in district, did come out of the game feeling that they are making progress. Nunez despite, allowing six goals, had 17 saves on the day. OHS coach Larry Richardson said the team can take the fact they played Lee so tough in the first half as a confidence bulider for the rest of the season.

"With every game, the team's progression gets better," Richardson said. "My girls came out in the first half and didn't have any energy left in the second half. I see us peaking after everyone else does."

OHS' only goal came in the 31st minute when Natasha Gieger knocked in a loose ball to make the score 2-1.

Even with the large margin in Lee's victory, Gravitt knows there are many aspects of the game that the Lady Rebels have to improve on with tough games coming up in the next few weeks. One concern will be the the condition of goalkeeper Jamie Calhoun, who was injured when she collided with OHS' Jessie McCartney. Calhoun was replaced by forward Jamie Welch, who had two first-half assists.

Also on Gravitt's mind is the performance of the Lady Rebels when it comes to putting the ball in the back of the net.

"We've got to finish better," Gravitt said. "We had perfect crossing passes that were not converted. We have to do a better job of finishing with the teams coming up."

In junior varsity action, Lee defeated the Lady Bronchos 6-0. Lesley Keel and Valli Schumake had two goals each. Vanesa Williams and Allegra LeGrande also scored for the Lady Rebs. Their record goes to 2-1.

Lee will travel to San Angelo Tuesday to face Central, who is coming off Saturday's 5-2 loss to Abilene High. The game will start at 5:30 p.m.

BOYS: MHS looks lethargic in victory

so I felt if we got eight opportunities we might get two goals," Reece said. "We got one and if we get one of the eight others it's a ballgame."

In the second half the Bulldogs picked it up for 17 of their 22 shots.

"In the second half, we came back and did a little better job," Esikhati said. "But we waited too long to get the intensity going."

Sample scored again in the 54th minute with a drive from 15 yards right in front of goal. But Permian halted the Bulldogs' district shutout streak when Eirek Grottheim set up Juan Rivera's short header on a free kick. Permian got a bit of an offensive spark from the goal, but Tyler Krueger's 79th minute unassisted drive from the same spot as Samples' second goal ended any chance for a Permian miracle.

"I don't think our defense broke down," Reece said. "You just give those guys anything at all, and they're going to put the ball in the net."

Richardson's status is up in the air after he hurt his back in the Lee game. The Bulldogs are open Tuesday and play at Abilene High Saturday, where they will continue to try to not just win, but win impressivley.

In Saturday's junior varsity game Midland High fought back from a 1-0 deficit to win 2-1. Russell Dunleavy and Scott Kamis both had goals and assists in the game.

Rebels stop OHS for second place

ODESSA — After failing to score in their first District 5-5A game Midland Lee's boys got four goals for the second straight contest and beat Odessa High here Saturday 4-1. The win puts the Rebels (2-1 in district, 4-3 overall) in a three-way tie for second place in the league with Abilene High and Odessa High (2-1, 6-2). Lee striker Henrik Madsen scored two goals but was red carded and will miss at least Tuesday's game with San Angelo.

Madsen scored in the seventh and 19th minutes on assists from Gabby Hidalgo and keeper Mike Loftis. Midfielder Tim Tipton's goal put Lee up 3-0 at the half. The Rebels out shot OHS 10-0 in the first half.

"We wanted to make sure that we got a couple of goals right away and that's exactly what we did," Lee coach John McCulloch said. "I was able to play a lot of people."

Madsen, who leads the team with eight goals, received his third yellow card of the season in the second half. As he left the game he kicked a Lee ball bag and was given a second yellow card — the equivalent of a red card. McCulloch was not sure whether Madsen would miss one or two games.

Tipton scored again in the 51st minute on an assist from Adrian Castresana to make it 4-0. Adam Morris assisted Tipton's first goal.

"The first half and most of the second half our midfield was putting together some really nice passing and they dominated the midfield," McCulloch said. "They were putting balls through to Henrik and Roger (Balizaire) right and left."

OHS scored in the 74th minute on a header by Jose Aspeitia.

MHS soccer girls fall to Permian

ODESSA — So close, but so far away might be the motto that MHS girls soccer coach Scott Hodkinson is abiding after Saturday's 2-1 loss to the Odessa Permian.

The loss moves MHS to 1-3 for the season and 0-3 in District 5-5A play. The win moves Permian to 5-0 for the season and 2-0 in district play.

Midland came into the game looking to control the pace against the high-powered Permian offense. It looked like MHS would not be successful early on as the Audrey Gutierrez scored in the game's tenth minute.

However, MHS' increased offensive pressure gave them a goal four minutes later as Elizabeth Mathiasson scored her second goal of the season. Allison Miller got the assist on the goal.

The 1-1 tie would last well into the second half until Permian's Becky Athey scored with six minutes to play.

"This loss was so painful because the winning goal was so late in the game," Hodkinson said. "We've played three good teams. We have time to recoup."

MHS will not play on Tuesday, but will be back in action Saturday at 2 p.m. when the Lady Bulldogs host Odessa High.

Kansas puts crushing blow on No. 2 UConn

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — When Connecticut finally lost, the second-ranked Huskies really lost.

■ Top 25 Roundup

Seventh-ranked Kansas rode an impressive first half Saturday to an 88-59 victory over Connecticut, which had been the last unbeaten team in Division I.

The day at Kemper Arena wasn't a total loss for Connecticut basketball as its top-ranked women's team remained unbeaten with a 97-87 victory over No. 17 Kansas in the opening game of the unique doubleheader.

The loss, which snapped the Huskies' 15-game winning streak, also took the steam out of the weekend's debate about who should be No. 1. Top-ranked Massachusetts needed overtime to beat West Virginia on Friday night and a victory by Connecticut over Kansas, the only team to beat the Minutemen, had many thinking that it could vault the Huskies into their first-ever No. 1 ranking.

Jerod Haase had 20 points to lead Kansas (15-2), which took command early with solid defense and outstanding 3-point shooting.

No. 3 North Carolina 62, No. 16 Wake Forest 61

WINSTON-SALEM, N.C. — Donald Williams hit a running one-hander in the lane with 5.7 seconds left as No. 3 North Carolina escaped with a victory over No. 16 Wake Forest.

The Atlantic Coast Conference-leading Tar Heels (16-1, 6-1) are 7-0 this season against ranked teams after extending their winning streak to seven.

The victory set off an uncharacteristic, wild celebration by the Tar Heels players on the Joel Coliseum floor, where they have been upset the past two seasons.

Jerry Stackhouse and Rasheed Wallace led North Carolina — held to a season-low point total — with 17 points each, while Williams had 13.

Wake Forest (11-4, 4-3) has lost 27 of its last 30 meetings with North Carolina.

California 100, No. 4 UCLA 93

LOS ANGELES — Tremaine Fowlkes scored a career-high 24 points and California kept up its mastery of UCLA on the fourth-ranked Bruins' home court with a victory.

Cal (11-5, 3-4 Pac-10), the only team to beat UCLA at home last season, won its third straight at Pauley Pavilion. UCLA (12-2, 6-2) had its six-game winning sreak snapped and fell into a tie with Arizona for the Pac-10 lead.

Fowlkes, a 6-foot-6 freshman out of Crenshaw High School in Los Angeles, singlehandedly lifted the Golden Bears out of a tight game with 9 straight points midway through the second half.

UCLA played catch-up most of the first half and never led in the second. The Bruins got within 1 on a basket by George Zidek with 15:31 left and tied the game three times after that. Fowlkes broke the last tie with a 3-pointer that started a 14-3 run, including 12 points of his own, and put Cal ahead 77-66 with 7:14 to play.

No. 6 Syracuse 76, Miami 51

SYRACUSE, N.Y. — John Wallace had 20 points and reserve Otis Hill added 14 as No. 6 Syracuse beat Miami in the Big East.

The Orangemen (15-2, 8-1 Big East) looked sapped from a loss Monday to No. 2 Connecticut, which ended a 14-game winning streak. They got out to an early 15-point lead but couldn't finish off the Hurricanes (8-7, 3-5) until the final three minutes, when they doubled their lead.

No. 8 Maryland 74, Duke 72

COLLEGE PARK, Md. — Keith Booth scored a career-high 22 points, including the go-ahead basket, and Joe Smith blocked two shots in the final 26 seconds as No. 8 Maryland ended its 15-game losing streak against Duke.

Maryland's victory kept Duke (10-9, 0-7 Atlantic Coast Conference) winless in the ACC, its worst league start in the 41-year history of the conference.

The Terrapins survived a furious Duke comeback and Smith's worst offensive college game to beat the Blue Devils for the first time since Jan. 16, 1988. Exree Hipp scored 21 points for Maryland (16-3, 6-1).

Smith was held to six points on 2-for-10 shooting. The only other time in 49 games that the All-America center did not reach double figures was an 8-point effort against Clemson last season.

No. 10 Michigan St. 75, Illinois 67

CHAMPAIGN, Ill. — Shawn Respert scored 29 points and Jon Garavaglia hit key second-half key baskets as 10th-ranked Michigan State beat Illinois.

Michigan State went ahead for good 38-37 in the Big Ten game on a 15-footer by Garavaglia with about 17 minutes left, but Illinois (13-6 overall, 4-3 Big Ten) stayed within striking distance, pulling to 66-64 with a layup by Jerry Gee with 2:08 left.

Respert, the Big Ten's leading scorer, was a perfect 8-for-8 from the free thrown line during the game.

No. 11 Iowa St. 87, Kansas St. 79

AMES, Iowa — Fred Hoiberg scored 20 of his game-high 26 points in the second half as No. 11 Iowa State held off Kansas State.

Hoiberg and Loren Meyer accounted for all but six of Iowa State's second-half points. The Cyclones (17-2, 3-1 Big Eight) are off to their best start in school history.

No. 13 Arizona St. 79, No. 18 Oregon 76

EUGENE, Ore. — Mario Bennett had 20 points and 10 rebounds and 13th-ranked Arizona State pulled away in the final two minutes to beat No. 18 Oregon.

The Sun Devils (14-5, 4-3 Pacific-10) sealed the victory with three driving layups, two by Quincy Brewer and one by Marcell Capers, after Oregon had tied it at 69 with 4:12 to play.

No. 14 Georgetown 71, Pitt 60

LANDOVER, Md. — Othella Harrington scored 20 points as No. 14 Georgetown pulled away down the stretch for a victory over Pittsburgh.

Georgetown (14-3, 7-2 Big East) struggled throughout the game, and the Panthers (5-12, 1-8) never trailed by more than five points in the second half until Allen Iverson sank a pair of free throws to make it 62-56 with 1:47 to play.

Georgetown went ahead for good on a shot by freshman Boubacar Aw to make it 44-42 with just over 12:00 to play.

Jaime Peterson kept the Panthers in the contest with a game-high 21 points.

No. 15 Virginia 128, George Mason 98

CHARLOTTESVILLE, Va. — Cory Alexander scored a career-high 36 points and No. 15 Virginia broke a 12-year-old school scoring record with 128 points.

The Cavaliers (12-5) rebounded from a 71-70 loss to Wake Forest on Wednesday night and sent George Mason (5-13) to its 11th consecutive loss.

Virginia surpassed the game scoring mark established in a 124-60 victory over Johns Hopkins on Nov. 26, 1982.

No. 17 Stanford 85, Southern Cal 82

LOS ANGELES — Andy Poppink scored 14 of his 20 points in the first half and No. 17 Stanford nearly blew a 17-point lead before beating Southern Cal.

Stanford (13-3, 4-3 in the Pac-10) still led 81-71 with 2½ minutes left, but the Trojans closed the game with an 11-4 run to make it interesting.

Cameron Murray banked in a 3-point shot with 34 seconds to play to make it 83-79, but USC (7-11, 2-6) could get no closer until Murray hit another 3-pointer with 2.5 seconds left.

Freshman Tim Young had a career-high 19 points and eight rebounds for the Cardinal. Dion Cross scored 18 points and Brevin Knight had 11 points, eight rebounds and six assists for Stanford.

Saint Louis 75, No. 19 Cincinnati 68

ST. LOUIS — Scott Highmark scored 22 points and Saint Louis missed only two of 29 free throws, pulling away at the finish.

The Billikens (13-4, 4-2 Great Midwest) rallied from a 40-33 halftime deficit despite shooting 33 percent (9 for 27) in the second half. Cincinnati (15-6, 5-1) was even colder in the second half as it lost for the first time in the conference, shooting 28 percent (9 for 32).

Saint Louis rebounded from an 84-80 overtime loss at Memphis on Wednesday in which it blew an 18-point lead.

No. 22 Villanova 88, Providence 67

VILLANOVA, Pa. — Kerry Kittles scored 23 of his 27 points in the second half as No. 22 Villanova ran away from Providence in the Big East.

It was the fifth straight victory for the Wildcats (13-5, 6-2 Big East), who also got 19 points from Eric Eberz and 17 points, 10 rebounds and six blocks from Jason Lawson.

Providence (11-6, 3-6) has lost four of five, all within the conference.

No. 23 Florida 72, Mississippi 57

GAINESVILLE, Fla. — Dan Cross scored 20 points before leaving with an injury as No. 23 Florida came from behind to beat Mississippi.

Florida (10-6, 4-3 Southeastern Conference) trailed by as many as 10 points midway through the second half before starting its comeback.

Pacific 89, No. 24 New Mexico St. 86

LAS CRUCES, N.M. — Marzell Clayton's 12-foot jumper with 17 seconds left put Pacific in front for good and the Tigers beat New Mexico State.

Pacific (10-7, 5-4 Big West) got seven 3-pointers and 25 points from Adam Jacobsen and 22 points from Charles Jones to score its first win ever at Las Cruces. The Tigers had lost 13 straight games on the Aggies' home floor.

No. 25 Oklahoma 82, Nebraska 72

NORMAN, Okla. — Ryan Minor scored 30 points and No. 25 Oklahoma used six straight 3-pointers to break the game open in the second half and beat Nebraska.

The Sooners (15-4, 2-2 Big Eight) struggled late in the first half and early in the second as Nebraska (14-5, 1-3) overcame a 16-point deficit to lead 48-45 with 11:27 to play.

Then Minor hit a short fadewaway — his first field goal in nearly 20 minutes — to start a 19-3 run that gave the Sooners control for good.

first 26 games and was the centerpiece when the club won two NFC Central Division championships.

He was an all-NFC choice five times and was selected for six consecutive Pro Bowls. In the 1982 game, he recorded four sacks to share MVP honors. Selmon was chosen the NFL's Defensive Player of the Year in 1979. In nine seasons, he played 121 games and had 78½ career sacks.

"Probably a whole lot more people had more confidence than myself that I had a chance at the Hall of Fame," Selmon said. "Looking at the finalists list convinced me that my chances were slim and none. It just shows you that things do work out."

Selmon said he was humbled by the honor. "I'm just in awe," he said. "Something like this is something I never dreamed of. I've visited the Hall of Fame and saw all the outstanding players in there. I could not envision myself as part of that fraternity."

He said he never regretted playing in Tampa Bay, where the losing streak was an albatross for the team. "To be part of an expansion team was very exciting," he said. "We may not have won, but we had a lot of fun and we learned a lot."

Winslow becomes the fourth tight end in the Hall of Fame, following John Mackey, Mike Ditka and Jackie Smith. He played nine seasons with the San Diego Chargers, catching 541 passes for 6,741 yards and 45 touchdowns and played in five Pro Bowls.

He is best remembered for a remarkable performance in a 41-38 overtime playoff victory over Miami in 1981 when he caught 13 passes for 166 yards and blocked a field goal with four seconds remaining, forcing the game into overtime. He was in a state of collapse at game's end and had to be helped off the field.

Jordan, who died in 1977 at the age of 42, was a Seniors candidate in 1989 but failed to get the required votes for election. He is the first Seniors candidate to be resubmitted as a finalist.

He is the fifth player elected to Canton from the outstanding Green Bay defensive unit that helped the Packers to five championships including the first two Super Bowls. Other Packers defenders in the Hall of Fame are lineman Willie Davis, linebacker Ray Nitschke, cornerback Herb Adderley and safety Willie Wood.

Finks built NFL teams in Chicago, Minnesota and New Orleans and was nearly selected to succeed Pete Rozelle as NFL commissioner in 1989. A longtime member of the league's competition committee, he died last May at the age of 66.

SWC: Tech women hand Lady 'Horns big loss

(From 1C)

Texas Christian 72, Texas A&M 71

FORT WORTH — Texas Christian drew a foul on "one of the oldest plays in the book" and converted it into Juan Bragg's two free throws with 2.6 seconds to play, giving the Horned Frogs a one-point victory over Texas A&M.

The Aggies had gone ahead 71-70 on Tony McGinnis' shot from underneath with 2.6 seconds left, and A&M players began to celebrate.

TCU (13-5, 5-1 Southwest Conference) took a time out and set up for a deep pass, and then A&M (9-11, 2-3) called its last timeout. When play resumed, Jeff Jacobs set up underneath to throw the ball in, with Dario Quesado covering him.

Then came what A&M coach Tony Barone called "one of the oldest plays in the book." But his team fell for it.

Jacobs ran across the baseline, and Bragg darted toward him. Quesada, following Jacobs, plowed into Bragg and was called for the foul, putting Bragg at the free throw line on the other end of the court, with no time elapsed.

Bragg, an 84 percent free throw shooter, made both shots.

There was still 2.6 seconds left on the clock, time enough for an inbounds bomb by A&M that left Chris Oney with only a short shot, but he missed. A&M's Damon Johnson tipped the ball back up, and the ball was hanging on the rim as the clock sounded.

Then the ball fell out, and TCU had won its ninth straight game at home without a loss this season.

Kurt Thomas, the nation's leading scorer and rebounder, had 25 points and seven rebounds for TCU. He was in foul trouble for the second half, and the Aggies recovered from a 55-39 deficit with 12:40 left. The Horned Frogs had only one field goal after Thomas fouled out.

Joe Wilbert, who fouled out with 4:52 left, led A&M with 31 points and eight rebounds. McGinnis added 18.

Bragg had 13 points and Byron Waits 11 for the Horned Frogs.

Houston 73, Southern Methodist 71

DALLAS — Tim Moore, who had 20 points and 14 rebounds, made two key defensive plays in the final 1.4 seconds to preserve Houston's victory over Southern Methodist.

Moore blocked a layup attempt by SMU's Jemeil Rich that would have tied the score, then Moore stole Jabari Hearn's inbounds pass intended for Erion Harris with less than a second to play.

Tommy Davis, a 5-foot-8 freshman point guard, put the Cougars ahead (5-13, 2-4 Southwest Conference) with 8.3 seconds left when he drove through the Mustangs and around SMU 6-8 forward Matt Timme.

Consecutive baskets by Moore, the second with 37 seconds remaining, gave Houston a 71-68 advantage. SMU's Troy Matthews answered with a 3-pointer with 26.6 seconds left to tie the game at 71-71.

Former Midland College star Kirk Ford scored 22 points to pace Houston, which won its second straight.

The Mustangs (4-13, 1-5) lost their fifth straight despite 19 points and 10 rebounds from Rich and 16 points from Matthews.

Rice 90, Baylor 79

WACO — Tommy McGhee scored 27 points, leading the Rice Owls over Baylor.

Rice (9-7, 4-1 Southwest Conference) built a 42-30 halftime lead and held off Baylor the rest of the way. David Hamilton scored 16 points to pace Baylor (6-12, 1-5).

Five Owls scored in double figures as the Owls stayed close behind SWC leader TCU. Adam Peakes had 19 points, Kevin Naney 13, Jesse Cravens 12 and J.J. Polk 10.

Baylor, whose only SWC victory was over TCU, got 15 points each from Aundre Branch and Nelson Haggerty and 13 points from Brian Skinner.

SWC WOMEN

No. 7 Texas Tech 84, Texas 40

LUBBOCK — Helped by the second-biggest crowd in Texas Tech basketball history, the No. 7 Lady Raiders crushed Texas, 84-40, the Lady Longhorns' worst loss in 17 years.

Tech (19-2, 5-0 Southwest Conference) put the game away early with an 18-2 run and rolled to its 16th straight victory, the nation's second-longest win streak, behind Michi Atkins' 19 points and 13 rebounds.

"Today was experience vs. youth, and the crowd was the biggest factor," Tech coach Marsha Sharp said, marveling at a crowd of 10,342, just short of the largest attendance ever (10,380) at 8,174-seat Lubbock Municipal Coliseum.

"What a great homecourt advantage from a team point of view. And it all started on the defensive end," Sharp said.

Tech never was challenged, taking a 46-22 halftime lead that grew throughout the second half. Sharp emptied her bench with 5:24 left and a 73-38 lead.

This was the fourth-lowest point total in Lady Longhorns' history and their fourth-worst defeat. The last time they lost by 44 was Jan. 10, 1978, in a 102-48 defeat to Montclair State.

Although Texas has a 41-7 lead in the overall series with Tech, the Lady Raiders have won seven of the last 11 meetings.

No. 18 Texas A&M 101, TCU 47

COLLEGE STATION — Martha McClelland scored a career-high 25 points as No. 18 Texas A&M pounded Texas Christian.

The Lady Aggies (13-4, 4-1 Southwest Conference) extended their school-record home winning streak to 17 games. McClelland was 10-of-15 from the floor. She teamed with Kelly Cerny, who scored 10 points, to pace an inside attack that outscored the Lady Frogs, 62-20, in the paint.

Freshman forward Stacy Price led TCU (1-15, 0-6) with 12 points and 11 rebounds.

Houston 92, Southern Methodist 82

DALLAS — Stacey Johnson scored 8 of her 27 points over the final 4:02, helping Houston pull away from Southern Methodist.

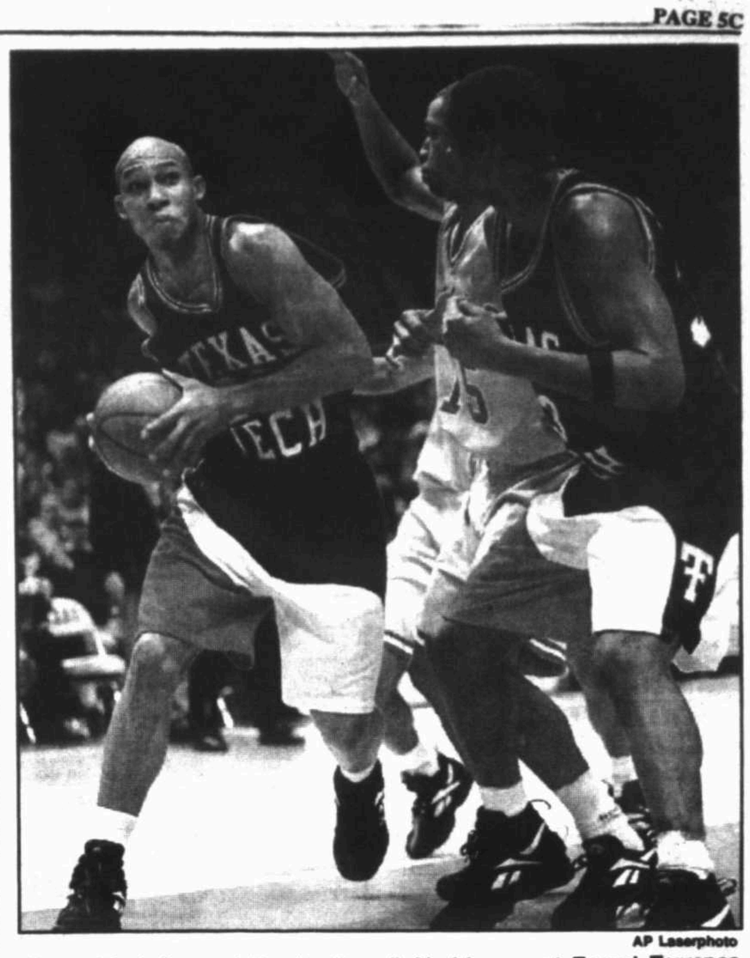

Pat Luckey added 26 points as the Lady Cougars (8-9, 3-3) snapped a five-game losing streak to SMU (11-7, 2-4).

Rice 77, Baylor 56

HOUSTON — Brenda Conaway scored 12 points, leading Rice over Baylor.

Rice (7-8, 4-1 Southwest Conference) took a 32-26 halftime lead, then went on a 10-0 run, and Baylor (10-8, 1-5) could never catch up.

Rice, which is off to a 4-1 start in conference play for the first time ever, hit eight of their nine shots from outside the 3-point line, with Lacey Guinn going 3-for-3 and Stephanie Mundschau 2-for-2.

AP Sports Writer

Of the hundreds of talented Texas high school football players who this week will choose the college they'll attend, few are considered the caliber who can make or break a recruiting class.

Sure, plenty of this year's crop will be good college players. Many will play for league titles. Some may even chase a national championship in the next five years. A few could play in the NFL.

But right now, the stars aren't blinding.

Plenty of above-average skill position players are out there, but the beefy linemen who seldom get recognition are the real strength in this year's class.

So far, Texas A&M appears to be doing the best in stocking its trenches for the opening of Big 12 play in 1996.

Of course, everything at this point is based on oral promises, which are non-binding and don't count until letters of intent are signed and sent to schools beginning Wednesday.

Entering the final stretch of the recruiting race, the Aggies appear to have won the preliminary heat with their verbal commitments.

A&M broke away from Texas and Baylor last week when it received pledges from offensive linemen Brandon Houston of Katy Taylor and Cameron Spikes of Bryan; defensive lineman Shea Holder of Arlington Lamar; and Houston Sterling defensive back Sedrick Curry.

What really bolsters A&M's class is the expected depth it will get at quarterback, a position that's pretty bare behind incumbent senior Corey Pullig.

The Aggies have commitments from Deer Park's Kevin Colon, East Bernard's Shane Lechler and Jacksonville's Randy McCown. Plus, former Class 4A player of the year Branndon Stewart already has transferred from Tennessee.

Some of the targets they may get to aim at include Galena Park North Shore's humongous Robert Hall (6-foot-5, 260 pounds), Round Rock's Donte Hawkins and Rosenberg Terry's Leroy Hodge.

Hodge and Hawkins have made some national lists as tops at their positions, as did Colon.

Another outstanding all-around talent headed to College Station is Jason Bragg, who played a major role in Stephenville winning its last 32 games and the last two Class 4A titles.

Bragg, who can play running back or defensive back and is the prototypical special-teams player, admits that Stewart's transfer played a role in his choice.

Baylor has a nice variety of early commitments, including a top quarterback, Jermaine Alfred of Baytown Lee, and offensive lineman, Brandon Pierpoint of Austin Westlake.

Baylor's best defensive pledge comes from Matt Brown, a linebacker who keyed Arlington Lamar's surprising playoff run last year.

The Longhorns appear to have their usual steady class, although they've received few commitments from offensive standouts.

Receiver Bryan White of Deer Park could be a prize; same with end Dustin Armstrong of Cleburne and running back Chris Butcher of Longview.

On the lines, Texas will be happy to have Deer Park's Keith Frierson on offense and Damon Luckett of Houston Jones on defense.

But UT would've loved to have any of that great trio A&M snagged last week.

Although Texas Tech did well in recruiting last year and Spike Dykes led the Red Raiders to the Cotton Bowl, the blowout loss to Southern California may have wiped out some of the positives.

The only headliner pledges Dykes has received so far are from two massive offensive linemen, Curtis Lowery of Stephenville and Mickey Anderson of nearby Abilene Cooper. Defensive back Tracy Hart of Crandall also could be a nice addition.

Texas Christian's class-maker so far also is a local kid, quarterback Jeff Dover of Grand Prairie.

Locally, Midland High all-state running back Roy Coats has committed to SMU while Lee offensive lineman Rex Tucker is still considering Texas, Texas A&M, Miami and TCU.

BOWL: Contrasting teams meet

championship because they have been one of only two dominant teams in this season of parity. The other was the Dallas Cowboys, whom the 49ers beat 38-28 in the NFC title game two weeks ago, accomplishing the goal they set after losing to Dallas the previous two years.

This is a team of superstars seeking to become the first to win five Super Bowls, while extending the winning streak of the NFC to 11 NFL titles. All but two of the last 10 victories were by lopsided scores, an average of 38-15 — the same score by which the Niners beat the Chargers in San Diego on Dec. 11.

San Diego?

They were picked to finish at the bottom of the AFC West. Instead, they won the division at 11-5, but remained one of those second-line teams, in the "better-than-average" category with the Packers, Dolphins, Chiefs and Lions, among others.

And that's just one of the reasons the Chargers have spent the week fielding questions about the margin of defeat.

"The only way to get respect is to go out and try to win the game," responds Leslie O'Neal, the defensive end who is one of the few recognizable names on the Chargers' roster.

"It would be a travesty if we went out and didn't play well and then had to listen to others about how we didn't belong here, that we had played over our head to get here."

Sounds defensive; it should be.

The Chargers come to the big game following wins over Miami and Pittsburgh that could just as easily have been losses — the other team had the game in its hands on the final offensive play.

Pete Stoyanovich's 48-yard field-goal attempt went wide right in the 22-21 win over the Dolphins, and Dennis Gibson got his little finger on Neil O'Donnell's pass to Barry Foster in the end zone of the 17-13 win in Pittsburgh.

The Chargers were dominated by the Steelers, but made two big plays, both 43-yard touchdown passes by Stan Humphries — one to Alfred Pupunu, the other to Tony Martin. That was after a pass interference call set up a field goal.

But if San Diego scores 17 points today, the Niners will just shrug it off.

San Francisco scored less than 17 just twice in 18 games. One was in the meaningless final game of the regular season, the other in perhaps their watershed game of the year — a 40-8 loss at home to Philadelphia in which Young went ballistic at coach George Seifert for pulling him in the middle of a series.

San Francisco has Young, the league MVP two of the past three seasons; Rice, the NFL's all-time touchdown leader; Deion Sanders; and a panoply of brash young stars whose trash talking would never have been tolerated during the reign of Joe Montana and Ronnie Lott.

San Diego, which enters the game as an 18- to 20-point underdog, has a panoply of the obscure and the cast off. Beyond O'Neal and Junior Seau, the middle linebacker who smashes sand castles in commercials, the average fan would be hard-pressed to recognize anyone, even Humphries or Natrone Means, the smashmouth running back.

Four Chargers starters once played for Tampa Bay, a team that has lost 10 games or more for the last dozen years. Reuben Davis, a 320-pound defensive tackle, played for the Bucs and Cardinals, the only NFL teams NOT to make the playoffs in the last dozen seasons.

After the Philadelphia loss, which left them 3-2, the 49ers went on a 10-game winning tear, and were held under 30 points just twice. Young had 22 touchdown passes and just three interceptions during that stretch, completed more than 70 percent of his passes and finished the season with a record quarterback rating of 112.8, breaking Montana's 5-year-old record.

Those accomplishments nearly erased the shadow of Montana that has plagued Young since he took over as starter in 1991. A victory Sunday will complete the task.

If he does win, it will be with an entirely different sort of team than the ones Montana led to Super Bowl triumphs.

The previous San Francisco winners were a businesslike bunch, a proper group that might have carried briefcases to their games.

This is a rapping, quick-talking, fun bunch.

"I'm household now," Sanders, Mr. Prime Time, said in the chaos of Tuesday's media day, while rookie William Floyd led a rap-fest farther down the field.

That wouldn't have been permitted during the reign of King Joe I.

"The last few times I was here, Joe was the focal point," said left tackle Steve Wallace, in his third Super Bowl with the 49ers. "Now it's more of a team. You feel like part of a team. It used to be you felt like a part of Joe."

Added left guard Jesse Sapolu, contrasting the easygoing Young with the no-nonsense Montana: "Steve's just an average Joe. Well ... maybe I should put that another way."

But if the 49ers were just offense, they wouldn't be here.

The offense was nearly as good as in 1992 and 1993, when they came up one game short, losing to Dallas each time in the NFC title game. That was because the defense just wasn't up to standards.

Enter Carmen Policy, the Niners' president and this year's NFL genius.

Working for the first time under the restrictions of a $34.6 million salary cap, he slashed $18 million-$20 million from the payroll. Yet he still added the defensive players he needed with a clever series of moves that brought linebackers Ken Norton from the Cowboys and Gary Plummer from the Chargers, and defensive end Rickey Jackson from the Saints.

The Niners found two more defensive starters in the draft — tackle Bryant Young and linebacker Lee Woodall. But the man who turned things around at last was Sanders, who can cover anyone man-to-man, allowing the rest of the secondary to work on double teams.

OFFICIAL GAME RULES

It's fun and easy! Anyone 18 or older can play the Welcome to the Oil Patch Game, except employees (and family members of employees) of the Midland Reporter-Telegram, Associated Publishing Company, Brite Systems, Inc. and their advertising and promotion agencies. The Welcome to the Oil Patch Game is designed for people in Andrews, Crane, Ector, Glasscock, Howard, Martin, Midland, Upton, Ward and Winkler counties. No purchase is required to play or win prizes, but you must have a Permian Basin Area Wide Book lucky number to enter and win a prize. Long distance charges may apply in some areas. If you live in the above counties and do not have a Permian Basin Area Wide Phone Book, call 687-1756, 563-5440 or 800-588-1756 to find out where to pick one up without charge.

Here's How to Play

Turn to The Game Page in the Midland Reporter-Telegram or in other area publications and look for this week's question. Then call CityLine, 560-2400. enter category 1111 for the correct answer and to find out if the number on the card following page 256 in your phone book has made you a winner of one of this week's three prizes of a tank full of gasoline (valued at up to $25) and $75 in cash or the grand prize, gasoline for a year (valued up to $1,300) and $1,000 in cash.

Each week three numbers will be selected to win a prize valued at $100 or more. If the number in your phone book is a winner, keep listening. CityLine will tell you how to claim your prize. Keep calling.....new lucky numbers will be added many times in the same week promotion.

You could win one of the unclaimed weekly prizes and enter the drawing for the grand prize. Here's how: Complete the official entry form and mail it so that it arrives before the deadline or hand print your name, address and daytime phone number on a plain 3"x5" piece of paper. Be sure to include your Permian Basin Area Wide Phone Book lucky number and the correct answer to this week's question. The more often you enter, the better your chance of winning. Mail entries - one per envelope to: Welcome to the Oil Patch Game, Associated Publishing Company, 4400 N. Big Spring, Suite 201, Midland, TX 79705. All entries become the property of the sponsors. None will be returned.

Each week for six weeks ending January 15, 1995, the winning numbers will be selected at random and will win one of that weeks prizes. If the winners are not identified by CityLine, they will be drawn from mailed entries. The grand prize,gasoline for a year and $1,000 in cash, will be drawn from weekly winner and all qualified mailed entries. The total value of all prizes to be awarded in the Welcome to the Oil Patch Game is valued at $3,650 or more.

Each game begins at 12:01 a.m. Tuesday and ends at 11:59 p.m. the following Monday. No substitutions of prizes is permitted. Only one weekly prize will be awarded to each winner.

By entering, winners authorize the use of their names, cities or photos for publicity purposes. Winners may be required to sign an affidavit of eligibility and release. Taxes are the responsibility of winners. Void where prohibited.

Situated on a large lot at 1300 Cuthbert, this charming four bedroom home offers a tremendous amount to the discerning home seeker. Full of elegant features such as plantation shutters, this charming property is set into landscaped grounds. Mature trees flank the house to hide it from the road and back garden creating a lovely setting.

The decorated front porch opens out into the entrance hall and the main room. Filled with gleaming floors, high ceilings and plenty of space, the first impression of the home is the quality of workmanship throughout. Wood panelling through the front room gives it a feeling of warmth and the decorative shutters.

The family room overlooks the garden at the rear and shares its focal point between the brick fireplace and the 'wall of windows' that looks out onto the patio. This is a very warm and comfortable set of rooms, made more so by the kitchen which is part of the suite.

Equipped with everything one would expect from a more expensive house, the kitchen allows the cook to be involved with the rest of the family while working.

Accents such as the wood cabinets and high serving bar, all in varnished wood, add continuity to the home's theme.

The large yard at the rear is a haven during the summer. Large trees offer shade and privacy during the hotter months and the brick planters and doorway gardens add elegance. Off from the two car garage, which is of an open 'breezeway' construction, is a compact workshop with built in shelving and work bench. This is coupled with a storage shed next door to give the DIY enthusiast plenty of space.

The master suite also has access to the garden and is sequestered in its own wing to the east of the property. Full of built-ins such as closets that boast shoe racks and shelves, and an entertainment center, it is a perfect hideaway.

This three bedroom, three bathroom family house will be open for viewing this afternoon between three and five o'clock. Nonnie Butler, of Langston Realtors will be showing the home which is listed at $79,900.

Asbestos contained within homes found in three groups

Peggy Strong, CRS, GRI
Chaparral Realtors

Why worry about asbestos in the home? Currently residential real estate is covered by any State or Federal regulations, so will it affect the list or sale of your home? If transferred, homeowners with relocation companies are often required to supply inspections of asbestos, lead, and radon . . . should all homeowners take heed? In part 2 of this series, Texas Consulting Services has supplied us with some additional information.

In the interest of the general public, Texas Department of Health strictly regulates commercial public access buildings. In situations where possible asbestos disturbance should occur, asbestos is abated (removed) under specific guidelines or controlled with Management Plans written by licensed Consultants. Abatements are done by professional contractors under containment using measures to minimize fiber releases. Asbestos in the home need not be a major concern if caution and preventive measures to prevent a major environmental hazard are carefully adhered to.

Types of asbestos: Asbestos Containing Materials (ACM) are categorized on their ability to release fibers into the air and are defined as friable and non-friable. Friable materials can release fibers under hand pressure while non-friable needs mechanical means. Considerable and caution should be taken not to incur a hazard with friable asbestos.

Many people think that because they do not have the most visibly common asbestos in their home that their home is asbestos free. Asbestos cannot be detected by the naked eye and has no odor. It is categorized in three (3) main groups both in the home and commercial properties:

1) Thermal - found on pipes, boilers, and other insulation.

2) Surfacing - acoustic spray on ceilings, tape and bedding on sheetrock, paint, binders, etc.

3) Misc: - Transite siding, roofing felt, shingles, floor tiles and mastic flu pipes, sewer pipes, gaskets, etc.

Please remember, just because there may be asbestos in your home is not necessarily cause for alarm. If remodeling or removing possible ACM materials, caution is advised. If ACM is in good condition, is best not to disturb and release fibers . . . just leave it in place.

Nest week we'll look into Lead Paint Issues . . .Gig'em!

Petroleum Museum plans rig exhibit

■ Rotary rig will become educational exhibit, tourist attraction

By John Paul Pitts
Business/Oil Editor

The drilling rig is a common sight in the Permian, Basin of West Texas and Southeast New Mexico. Along with the pumpjack, it is the unofficial-official symbol, of the vast oil and gas producing empire.

Featured in advertising, on the cover of phone books, on calenders drilling rigs and a favorite subject for artists and photographers in the oilpatch, the drilling rig is as familiar as a West Texas sunset. Unfortunately, it is also somewhat of a mystery, that's because not everyon has the opportunity for a close-up encounter with a drilling rig.

Unless you work for a sector of the oil industries that does business with drilling rigs, or you're a visiting dignitary from Russia, China or Washington D.C., don't expect to get an invitation to visit one of these hard-hat sites. Public tours are almost unheard of, anrking rig generally involves, going through safety-concerned oil company channels.

As a result generations have grown up in the shadow of drilling rigs, without every having visited one or having any idea how they work. One oilpatch wife in her seventies confessed that she had lived in the oilpatch for over 50 years, and had never been to a rig site, even though her husband and six sons had all worked as drillers and roughnecks. "I don't have the faintest idea how they work," she said.

The same situation applies to dozens of secretaries at oil companies, who regularly fill out drilling reports and authorizations for expenditures, for rigs yet have never actually been on one.

But now, a new exhibit at the Petroleum Museum in Midland is expected to change all that.

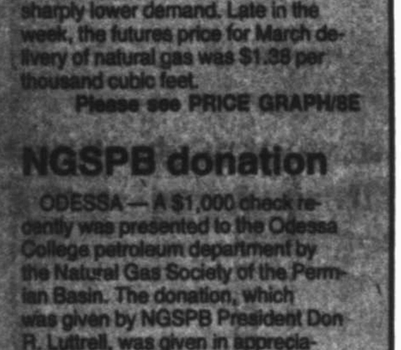

At a spudding ceremony last week, the first step was taken to erect a complete rotary drilling rig, that could become the first in the state to provide scheduled public tours.

"It is our intention," said Red Roberts, a retired drilling contractor, who is assembling the rig, "to create an exhibit that will become a major educational tool to acquaint the secretaries, school children, wifes and the public in general about the drilling industry and the oil industry."

Jane Phares, Interim Executive Director, at the Petroleum Museum said the addition of the rotary rig would allow the museum to complete its story about the oil industry. "That's our purpose — to tell the story of the petroleum industry — and the addition of the rig adds an important chapter."

Bob Leibrock, chairman of the board of the Petroleum Museum, called the drilling rig a symbol of the oil in-

Prices slump

Crude futures prices spent the week above the $18 level, boosted by reports of falling crude supplies and reduced production from Nigeria. Still, prices gave back some of the gains seen last week.

On the New York Mercantile Exchange, contracts for March delivery of West Texas Intermediate closed at $18.24 a barrel late in the week. The posted price was $16.75 a barrel.

Natural gas futures continued to make a slow recovery from the recent pounding they've taken from unseasonably mild winter weather and sharply lower demand. Late in the week, the futures price for March delivery of natural gas was $1.38 per thousand cubic feet.

NGSPB donation

ODESSA — A $1,000 check recently was presented to the Odessa College petroleum department by the Natural Gas Society of the Permian Basin. The donation, which was given by NGSPB President Don R. Luttrell, was given in appreciation for what OC's petroleum department does for the oil and gas industry in terms of courses offered, training for industry personnel and certificates.

J.D. Roberts, petroleum department chair, said the money will be used for scholarships.

Drilling activity

Permian Basin drilling activity was unchanged and the national rig count continued to fall during the week ended January 20, according to Baker Hughes Inc.

In the Permian Basin, the rig count remained 112 for a second week. A year ago the count was 97.

Lea County, N.M. remained the most active in the Basin with 14 rigs.

Nationally, the rig count fell 21 rigs to 736 for the week and is well below the year-ago count of 778.

Transco deal

TULSA, Okla. (AP) — The Williams Companies Inc. has been offered the stock it needs to make Transco Energy Co. a wholly owned subsidiary, the company announced.

Tulsa-based Williams has been offered nearly 87 percent of Transco's common stock. Based on the initial agreement, Williams will buy 24.6 million shares, or about 69 percent of the stock.

A final vote on the merger takes place in the spring.

FOCUS ON COSTS

Oil editor sees little price improvement

TULSA, Okla. (AP) — The editor of the Oil & Gas Journal says the energy industry should expect more pressure to reduce costs this year because prices will not be getting much higher.

"Companies can succeed — many in a big way — without higher prices. But we do need a good understanding of the market fundamentals and a perspective grounded in reality," said John Kennedy, editor of the industry's leading international weekly publication.

Kennedy offered the Journal's annual forecast to the International Society of Energy Advocates. The magazine is published in Tulsa by Pennwell Publishing Co.

Among the Journal's predictions:

■ Imports of crude oil and productions will be up to 52 percent of total demand. "A record high," Kennedy said.

■ Petroleum product demand will be up 1.4 percent, while natural gas demand will be up 1.6 percent.

■ Crude and condensate production will be down 2.4 percent, after dropping about 3 percent a year ago.

The U.S. Energy Information Administration projects the annual growth rate for oil and gas demand to remain at 1.2 percent annually through the year 2010.

Prices are based on an average of $17.55 for West Texas Intermediate and $1.80 per 1,000 cubic feet of natural gas on the Texas Gulf Coast.

Kennedy predicts more pressure on oil and natural gas companies to cut costs and lower risks this year, but he said opportunities will abound for those companies who don't wait for prices to increase.

New rig exhibit to be Permian Basin effort

By John Paul Pitts
Business/Oil Editor

If the rotary rig exhibit at the Petroleum Museum is shaping up to become a major tourist and training facility, it is also shaping up to become one of the largest cooperative efforts of the Permian Basin.

To date almost 40 firms and individuals from around the Permian Basin have contributed well over $250,000 in equipment, services and cash to the project, with the totals expected to increase.

"Nearly all of it has been donated. We have had to buy very little," says Red Roberts, who has been working on the rig exhibit since 1993.

Some of the equipment has come from as far away as Houston and Bridgeport, Texas, and Dale Meyers Trucking and McClatchy Brothers Inc. have hauled it to two donated storage yards, Wagner Manufacturing & Fabricating and Shorty Hall Rig Co., in Odessa.

"When this project is complete it will be a monument to the entire Permian Basin oil industry," said Red Roberts, who has been working to bring a rotary rig to the Museum since 1993.

The basic components of the rig — drawworks, engine compounds, derrick, substructure and motor shed are a gift of Nabors Drilling. "Gene Grimes, vice president of Nabors, was the first one to get a vision for this project and his donation of about $93,000 in equipment was the catalyst for making much of the other equipment fall into place," said Roberts.

New climate good for health of industry

Pitts

What does the new political climate in Washington D.C. have to do with the economic quality of life in the U.S. and the oil business?

"It's good medicine," says Tom O'Toole, chairman of The Principal Financial Services. O'Toole was in Midland this week, and in an exclusive interview, offered some interesting views on that subject and others.

In town to visit with Dawson Geophysical on its recent stock placement, O'Toole, who has sat on the board of two large independent oil companies, said the expected relaxation of taxes and federal regulation, and downsizing of the federal government that is bound to come with the new regime, would be "good medicine" that would have a profound effect on the oil industry.

He said the call by voters to make government smaller was no passing fad and likely would be a long-term component of the political scene for decades to come.

"Less government is what the people want. It's happening in the states, towns and counties. It's difficult to see a big government candidate being elected to public office anytime in the future."

All and all, he said, the net effect of a move toward smaller, more efficient government would be more jobs and business expansion.

"The cost of regulation has become a major cost of doing oil and gas business."

On a whirlwind tour of Prudential offices throughout Texas, he said Prudential managers were extremely upbeat about the what is happening. "There is a feeling that the nation and state are on an uptrend, that things are finally moving in the right direction. Four years ago, you would not have gotten that reaction."

He said that oil and gas was overregulated and oil and gas tax laws were terribly complicated, and that any effort to bring simplification to the industry will be welcome and should result in cost savings. "It will also bring incentive to others to get into the oil business. Right now, taxes and regulations are so complicated that oil and gas is a turn off."

On getting new tax incentives to bring investors back into the oil business, O'Toole said tax shelters sometimes have a negative impact on business.

"The elimination of tax shelters has the indirect effect of breeding entrepreneurship, because investment money goes from shelters into businesses that create jobs."

He said that shelters often create false values, attract unsophisticated investors, and ruin the whole pie for everyone. "Deals that make good economic sense are better in the long run, and oil and gas investments have merit on their own, because oil is an essential product."

O'Toole says the simplicity of a flat tax is an attractive idea that should be given full consideration. He thinks the capital gains tax could be relaxed to 20 percent or so, and could free up assets for oil and gas investment.

As government downsizes, O'Toole said care should be taken to make sure that the poor and disadvantaged were not injured.

AGA study forecasts big surge in future natural gas demand

Staff Report

Demand for natural gas in the United States will continue to grow during the next two decades, reaching as much as 28.3 quadrillion Btu (quads) by the year 2010, according to a study by the American Gas Association. U.S. natural gas consumption in 1993 was 20.9 quads.

"The Gas Energy Demand and Supply Outlook 1993-2010," examines two forecasts, a "business-as-usual" base case projecting a demand of 26.2 quads and an enhanced case projecting use oat 28.3 quads in the year 2010. The study was developed by A.G.A.'s Gas Supply and Demand Committee, a group composed of senior industry executives.

The study points out the tremendous potential for gas energy and the importance of developing new and existing gas markets.

The forecast shows that future growth in natural gas consumption hinges on two major market sectors. One is the electric power generation sector, which pans both the industrial and electric generation markets. The second area of growth potential is industrial and electric generation markets.

Another area of growth potential is the commercial sector. It includes both natural gas vehicles and gas-fueled cooling equipment, which will help reduce the need for electric peaking capacity by utilities.

In 1993, natural gas provided about 25 percent of the energy consumed in the United States. Recent environmental and energy legislation emphasizing conservation and efficiency provides expanded market opportunities for electricity generation, for example, gained more than 1 million new heating customers in 1993, with more than 300,000 residential heating customers switching to natural gas from other fuels. In the new housing market, the share of natural gas heating in 1993 rose to record levels with 66 percent of single-family homes using natural gas.

The base case of the A.G.A. study, or the business-as-usual scenario, assumes that existing regulatory standards and rates of technology development remain unchanged throughout the forecast period.

In the enhanced case, national priorities are reshaped to speed up the development of improved energy-supply and energy-utilization technologies, and natural gas is perceived as a tool to slow down or reverse the growth in U.S. reliance on energy that is either predominantly imported (oil) or a major source of pollutants (coal).

The study projects that gas demand for natural gas vehicles could be between 1.0 and 1.5 quads by 2010, the equivalent of 8.6 to 12.5 million natural gas vehicles.

In the electric generation market, the natural gas share could grow from 11 percent in 1991 to between 17 and 19 percent by 2010.

Natural gas demand for electric generation by electric utilities is projected to grow from 2.0 quads in 1991 to between 4.2 and 4.7 quads by 2010.

In the residential market, between 20 and 25 million natural gas consumers will be added by 2010. IN 1994, about 57 percent of U.S. homes are being heated with natural gas. This dominance by natural gas in the residential market is projected to continue in the new housing market, and result in more than 62 percent of U.S. homes being heated by natural gas by 2010.

The average annual growth rate in commercial demand is projected at 2.1 to 2.2. percent per year, rising from 2.8 quads in 1991 to as much as 4.2 quads in 2010.

New Oryx CEO unveils policies

DALLAS (AP) — The new chief executive officer of Oryx Energy says the United States will become the centerpiece of the company's investment strategy for the foreseeable future.

Robert L. Keiser, in his first policy statement, said that the company's strategic direction will be reoriented through the renewed emphasis on lower-risk and shorter cycle-time prospects.

Those will be primarily in the Gulf of Mexico and the Gulf Coast, "where the company has a demonstrated record of success," Keiser said.

Profitability will be restored through lower costs, which will be achieved by improved operating costs, lower exploration expenses and lower administrative costs, he said.

The company's assets will be repositioned to a base level where growth in discretionary cash flow is more reasonably assured than it has been, he said.

"Those projects with strong growth potential will be funded internally, and those that are lower margin or have limited upside will be sold or otherwise de-emphasized," he said.

Debt will be reduced by about $400 million by the end of 1995, Keiser said.

"This will be achieved by the dedication of roughly 25 percent of discretionary cash flow, with the remainder by the sale of certain assets."

Oryx, based in Dallas, is one of the world's largest independent oil and gas companies.

Halliburton outsources IT needs

DALLAS (AP) — Halliburton Co. said its energy services business segment has agreed to outsource virtually all its information technology requirements to three companies.

The contracts have estimated expenditures of $500 million over their 10-year lives, the company said.

About 270 Halliburton workers will be affected by the moves, but more than 80 percent of them have been offered jobs with the contractors, resulting in fewer than 50 layoffs, said Guy Marcus, vice president of investor relations.

The contracts went to Andersen Consulting for applications maintenance function; I-Net Inc. for managing the desktops, local area network and global telecommunications network services; and Power Computing Company for the data center functional area.

The company made the moves to cut costs and enhance services, Thomas Cruikshank, chairman and chief executive officer, said in a news release. "Halliburton Energy Services will retain overall information technology management and engineering systems responsibilities," he said.

Dallas-based Halliburton is a diversified energy services, engineering, maintenance and construction company.

RIG: Effort by many companies

(From 1E)

Other main contributors of drilling equipment include: Partech Inc, a division of Parker Drilling Co. and MND Drilling Corporation, a subsidary of Mitchell Energy.

Partech contributed an assortment of items including: water tanks, cat walks, dog house, one oilwell pump, bushings, elevators, pipe slips, mud house, rotary table, one pickup and other assorted equipment. Among the items contributed by MND are an assortment of hand tools, rotary table bushings, elevators, bit subs, weight indicator, rig lights, geolograph, mud pits, shale shaker and rotary hose. Johnny Warren and John Larson with Compressor Systems Inc. and West Caterpillar will donate motors and generators for the rig.

"So far no one has turned us down for any contribution," said Roberts. "Everyone is enthusiastic about this project." Much of the contributions, he said, were for services that included hauling, storage, dirt work, electrical, painting and rig up.

To give the site an authentic look, it was constructed with mesquite bushes on each side, with a number of firms involved in the skillful landscaping and site preparation.

Machen Construction, Tripp Construction and Pradon Construction were involved in clearing, cleaning and levelling the site, and Barney Jones of Jones Brothers Dirt Contractors and John Campbell of Transit Mix Concrete & Materials Co. have agreed to haul in approximately 22 loads of caliche and chat for the site.

After rigging up, Britt Trucking & Construction will do the final location leveling, grading, watering and rolling. "This will be an authentic drilling location in every respect, right down to the mesquite bushes and the caliche," said Roberts.

About the only cash needed has been for permits and other expenses, and that was provided by individuals. Scott Sheffield provided cash to clear the location and chemicals to chemically treat the ground. Jim Henry, Ted Collins, Maurice Bullock and Ted Kerr donated cash for hauling and other permits.

When the spudding ceremony was held recently, it was highlighted by more donated services. Conductor pipe and pipe for the rat hole and mouse hole were supplied by Palmer Pipe & Supply and Smith Brothers Pipe Inc. Dale Vines Ready Mix, and Dowell contributed cement for the pipe and fencing provided by American Fence Co. The holes were drilled by Harris Rat Hole Service. Welders who contributed time are Jim McMillian and Scooter Burns.

When the rig is hauled to the site and rigged up, those who have volunteered paint, crews and rig up service include: FWA Drilling, Bridges Equipment, TMBR Sharp, Gene Sledge Drilling Corp., Clint Hurt & Assoc., Slough Equipment Co., Wagner Manufacturing Co., and Odessa Metals Inc.

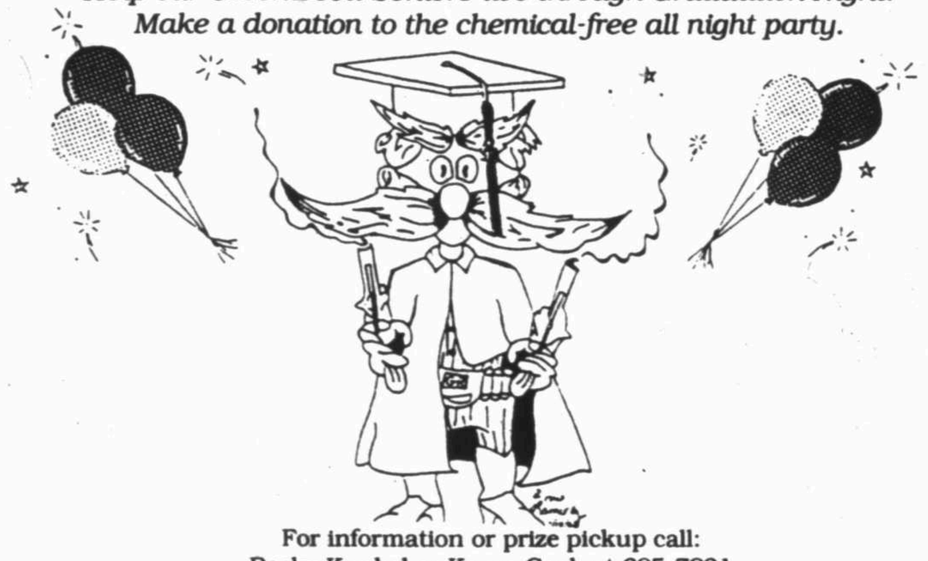

"It is phenomenal that a monumental project like this could be put together using only donated equipment and services, especially when everyone is hurting for cash," said Roberts. "When completed, this rig will truly be a monument to the spirit of the Permian Basin oil industry."

In the next phase of the project components will begin to be hauled to the rig site, as soon as Jones Brothers Construction Co. and Transit Mix haul in caliche for the pad.

EXHIBIT: New attraction

dustry, and said it would complement the education process at the museum, even though the public may not have access to the rig floor initially.

Roberts said he also expected the rig exhibit, which will be located on Museum grounds adjacent to Interstate 20 to become a major tourist draw for the Petroleum Museum.

"We will have it painted red, white and blue, with flags flying and lighted at night. It is a very big rig, rated to drill to 14,000 feet, and it should be a real eye-catcher, and traffic-stopper," said Roberts.

Midland Mayor Bobby Burns said the rig would do much to get traffic off the interstate and would help facilitate planned development by the City along the interstate.

No name has yet been selected for the rig — a deep model, Gardner-Denver 800, with a three engine compound, mounted on 15 foot substructure, with a 136-ft. Lee C. Moore mast — but names that have been suggested include USA No.1 and Texas No.1.

In addition to becoming a tourist attraction, where individuals can get a close-up view of a rig. It is also expected the rig will become a training source for the oil industry, to provide both field personnel and office personnel with orientation classes. A video on the workings of the rig is planned and the Midland Reporter-Telegram will publish a booklet on the story of the rig to be handed out to visitors.

Present plans call for the rig to be static, but totally complete with all equipment in place. Later on, if the Museum decides, the rig can be equipped to make a connection and rotate the bit in the hole.

"We will do the best we can with what used equipment we can gather, but later on some of the equipment may be swapped out as the need for newer equipment arises," said Roberts. He expects the project to be a continual, on-going affair, as the vision for the rig expands, and more companies and indivduals get excited and decide to participate.

EDITOR: Issues warning on prices

"Believe me, you can't wait that long," he said. "Don't try to hang on until this cycle ends. It's not a cycle — it's a brand new world."

While Kennedy believes the national economy is growing, U.S. production will drop to 6.48 million barrels a day, "meaning imports must fill the growing gap between domestic supply and demand," he said.

Analysts urge patience for stockholders of gas producers

■ Analysts say natural gas producers' stock prices will recover, but it will take a few months.

N.Y. Times News Service

When you follow the natural gas industry, the fickle ways of the weather can play havoc with even the best of projections.

"I'm throwing in the towel," said Michael Barbis, gas-industry analyst for NatWest Securities, who in November issued a report predicting that natural-gas prices were on the verge of recovery and would rise 10 percent to 15 percent this year.

Then came the mild weather of December, and for awhile, in January. Even if the currently lower temperatures sink further, his optimism on gas prices has become outdated.

A huge surplus of gas in storage for the winter, which has been drawn down to only about 80 percent because of sluggish demand, is pushing prices down. The price of natural gas for February delivery was $1.425 a million cubic feet late Friday on the New York Mercantile Exchange, down 17 percent just since the end of 1994.

And Donald D. Dufresne, a gas-industry analyst for Salomon Brothers, suggests that prices may drop to the rock-bottom lows of 1992, when a million cubic feet cost as little as $1.05.

Still, Barbis argues, there is a way to recoup, but it takes a lot of patience. Wait several months, he says, and many gas-company stocks should reach their lows, providing nice buying opportunities.

Some of his favorites include Burlington Resources, Enron Oil and Gas, Anadarko Petroleum and Seagull Energy Corp.

Then, wait some more. "These stocks could rally up to 30 to 50 percent," he said, if one is willing to hold on for about a year.

For now, Barbis sees little chance of a turnaround in natural-gas prices and expects the stocks of gas producers, which are down about 35 percent from their highs of last February, to fall further, perhaps 15 percent to 25 percent.

"You have to wait and be patient until these stocks have been trashed," Dufresne said.

Yet some portfolio managers have already been buying. Timothy Connors, who heads the energy investment team for Miller, Anderson & Sherrerd, which manages funds worth about $30 billion, has added some gas companies to his portfolio and plans to buy more.

Despite the gloom now, he sees industry trends that he thinks will help prices recover and prop up earnings.

Most companies Connors favors are buying back their own stock, taking advantage of the depressed share prices. These buybacks, he said, are likely to help the stocks recover.

Among the companies he is adding to his portfolio are Burlington Resources, El Paso Natural Gas and Coastal Corp.

"They are at or close to their historical lows," Connors said. "Each of them have good prospects of earnings growth, even under the current dire circumstances."

Barbis of NatWest Securities also sees trends that could help prices to recover later in 1995. The growing imports of cheaper gas from Canada, he said, will level off this year because delivery pipelines are already running at capacity.

He expects the demand for natural gas to rise up to 4 percent this year, in spite of the relatively mild winter, because some utility companies are using more gas so they can meet stricter air-pollution standards.

Yet, who can predict next winter's weather? Another mild winter season could again postpone a recovery.

"This time of year is so important," he said. "If it doesn't cooperate, you start off the year so badly."

Oil companies consider stake in Maxus

DALLAS (AP) — Several major oil companies are considering acquiring a part or more of debt-laden Maxus Energy Corp., The Dallas Morning News reported.

The newspaper said Platt's Oilgram News, an industry publication, reported that Chicago-based Amoco Corp. has considered buying Dallas-based Maxus.

Amoco was initially interested in buying a stake in some properties being spun off by Maxus, but Platt's quoted a source who said Amoco then "decided to look at buying the whole company rather than doing it piecemeal."

A Maxus spokesman declined to comment on a possible takeover.

Amoco spokesman Greg Clock said the company would not "confirm or deny reports of possible acquisitions or divestments."

But the spokesman for Maxus, which is spinning off mid-continent properties in Oklahoma and Texas as a stand-alone company to be called Midgard Energy Co., confirmed that Amoco reviewed data on the Midgard initial public offering.

Industry analysts said the spin-off also has caught the eye of Phillips Petroleum Co. and Conoco.

Maxus, which has debt nearing $1 billion, announced in December a plan to raise $340 million by spinning off holdings that include 1,500 wells in western Oklahoma and the Texas Panhandle, most of which are producing natural gas, and gas processing facilities.

Cleaner gasoline blends fail to bring expected higher prices

■ Mandated 'clean gasolines' haven't produced expected higher prices for motorists.

N.Y. Times News Service

LOS ANGELES — Motorists are filling up with cleaner gasoline, but the costlier fuel isn't driving up retail prices.

The new government-mandated fuel began reaching gas stations in December, and some analysts predicted consumer would see price hikes of up to a 5 cents a gallon as oil companies tried to recover higher production costs.

It hasn't happened — yet.

"So far the oil industry has absorbed this hit and the consumer has benefited," said Trilby Lundberg, publisher of the suburban North Hollywood-based Lundberg Letter, a widely-watched price and market trends survey.

Local gasoline prices have climbed 19 cents since reaching a 12-month low of $1.07 Jan. 21, 1994. Prices reached a 12-month high of $1.26 in Lundberg's last survey Friday.

But that price is less than 1 cent a gallon more than what Los Angeles motorists paid in November and the same price they paid in early December.

Making the new fuel increased refiners' production costs between 5 cents and 7 cents a gallon, said McDonald J. Beavers, president of Whitney Leigh Corp., a Tulsa, Okla. market research firm.

"The Los Angeles market is so competitive that they haven't been able to pass through the cost," Beavers said. "Right now the consumer is not going to notice any significant price increase."

Dealers and marketers have been watching profits slide in recent months due to rising crude oil prices and the higher costs of clean-air gas recipes.

Jan Speelman, executive director of Irvine, Calif.-based Automotive Trade Organizations, said many service station operators have simply absorbed any wholesale price increase to keep their volumes high.

"We didn't see a big price spike either in December of January," she said. "It was a very smooth transition."

Speelman believes that refiners may have phased in some production costs throughout the year, accounting for the steady rise in Los Angeles' retail prices between last January and October.

Analysts and industry officials say several factors are working in concert to stem a retail price increase.

Refiners have adequate supplies of the new fuel on hand and unusually wet, severe winter weather is keeping motorists close to home and cutting down on gasoline demand.

"Some of them may be flush with product," Lundberg said of local refiners.

Refiners appear content to wait for demand to build.

"It appears that most everybody tried to recover some costs but because of market conditions (prices) have been pushed back down both at wholesale and retail," said Scott Loll, spokesman for Arco Products Co., holder of the biggest market share in Los Angeles. "We're just responding to the market. We had anticipated there would be a (price) increase."

"The retail drops cannot last," Lundberg said. "It is very likely we will see a reversal soon in an effort to bring profit margins back to where they should be."

Oil profits mixed

Associated Press

Stronger crude prices helped buoy fourth-quarter profits by oil giants Exxon and Texaco, while Amerada Hess recovered from a year-ago loss and earnings at Amoco and Ashland Oil declined.

Exxon Corp.

Profits for Irving, Texas-based Exxon, the biggest U.S. oil company, rose 27 percent to a fourth-quarter record on higher production and petroleum product sales, strong chemical and minerals earnings and gains from asset sales and tax credits.

Exxon earned $1.9 billion, or $1.53 per share, on revenue of $30.6 billion. Exxon earned $1.5 billion, or $1.20 per share, on revenue of $28.1 billion during the fourth quarter of 1993.

For the year, Exxon earned $5.1 billion, or $4.07 per share, on revenue of $113.4 billion, vs. $5.3 billion, or $4.21 per share, on $111.2 billion in 1993.

Texaco Inc.

Fourth-quarter earnings rose 20 percent to $399 million, or $1.49 per share, vs. $339 million, or $1.21 per share a year earlier.

Considering only continuing operations, earnings were $381 million, or $1.42 per share, up from earnings of $349 million, or $1.25 per share, in the fourth quarter of 1993.

Revenue from continuing operations were up 4 percent, from $8.58 billion to $8.96 billion.

Results for the just-ended quarter include a $102 million tax benefit on asset sales and a $9 million charge for damage from a fire at Texaco's Panama refinery. The year-earlier results include a $65 million tax benefit on asset sales.

For the year Texaco earned $979 million, or $3.43 per share, on revenue of $33.53 billion. In 1993, Texaco earned $1.3 billion, or $4.47 per share, on $34.07 billion in revenue.

Amoco Corp.

Fourth-quarter profit slipped 8 percent from the year-earlier period to $536 million, or $1.08 per share, on revenue of $7.81 billion. The results included a $45 million gain on the disposition of some European oil and gas properties and $33 million in beneficial tax adjustments.

Amoco earned $584 million, or $1.17 per share, on $7.38 billion during the year-ago quarter. Those profits included a $120 million gain from disposition of part of Amoco's equity investment in a Canadian company.

For all of 1994, Amoco earned $1.79 billion, or $3.60 per share, on revenue of $30.4 billion. The company earned $1.82 billion, or $3.66 per share, on $28.6 billion in revenue during 1993.

Amerada Hess Corp.

The company recovered to an $8.7 million profit in the fourth quarter from a $133.6 million loss a year earlier, which included a $54.5 million charge.

Revenue rose more than 7 percent, from $1.67 billion to $1.79 billion.

For all of 1994, Amerada Hess earned $73.7 million, or 79 cents per share, on revenue of nearly $6.7 billion. The 1994 results include a $41.2 million gain from the sale of assets in an undeveloped natural gas field in the North Sea.

The company lost $268.2 million, or $2.90 per share, on revenue of $5.9 billion during 1993.

Ashland Oil Inc.

First-quarter earnings fell 40 percent, which the company attributed partly to gasoline overproduction.

For the quarter ended Dec. 31, earnings were $35 million, or 50 cents a share. During the same quarter of 1993, Ashland earned $58 million, or 90 cents a share.

Revenue rose nearly 8 percent, from $2.6 billion to $2.8 billion.

Pipeline posts strong profits

HOUSTON (AP) — Panhandle Eastern Corp. credited the strong performance by its pipeline subsidiaries for profits that more than doubled during the final three months of 1994.

The Houston-based natural gas transportation company reported earnings of $53.2 million, or 36 cents a share, for the three months ended Dec. 31. That compares with $23.4 million, or 16 cents a share, during the same period a year ago.

Revenue was $1.16 billion during the fourth quarter, up from $1 billion during the final three months of 1993.

For the year, Panhandle Eastern reported earnings of $225.2 million, or $1.51 a share, compared with $171.6 million, or $1.21 a share, in 1993.

Panhandle Eastern operates one of the nation's largest networks of natural gas pipelines.

Kerr-McGee budgets for China, Gulf

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — Kerr-McGee Corp. plans to spent about $140 million for exploration and production projects in the South China Sea and the Gulf of Mexico in 1995, the company said.

The energy company's 1995 capital expenditure projection is $420 million, about the same as was invested in capital projects last year.

The bulk of the money will go to exploration and production where $315 million is projected to be spent. The company said $140 million is for further development of the Liuhua field in the South China Sea and for projects in the Gulf of Mexico.

The company also will spend $80 million for chemical operations and $25 million for coal operations.

Kerr-McGee plans to increase its titanium dioxide pigment capacity in its chemical operations and to replace equipment and pay lease expenses in the coal operations.

Oryx Energy reports quarterly profit

DALLAS (AP) — Oryx Energy has reported net income of $14 million, or 14 cents a share for the fourth quarter of 1994, compared to a net loss of $52 million, or 55 cents a share, for the same quarter a year earlier.

The fourth quarter of 1994 included net operating income of $24 million.

That includes the benefits of a recently announced change in accounting policy and a $10 million net provision for termination of employees and other related costs.

The fourth quarter of 1993 included a net operating loss of $42 million, a $3 million benefit from the remeasurement of foreign deferred taxes, a $6 million net loss on asset disposals, and a $7 million net extraordinary loss related to early debt retirement.

Diamond Shamrock profits up sharply

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Fourth-quarter profits rose significantly for Diamond Shamrock Inc. on good refining margins and strong retail marketing results, the company said.

Diamond Shamrock reported fourth-quarter earnings of $15.5 million, or 49 cents per share, on revenues of $675.6 million. That compares with earnings of $1.8 million, or 2 cents per share, on revenues of $627 million for the same quarter in 1993.

For the year ending Dec. 31, the company had earnings of $75.8 million, or $2.45 per share, on revenues of $2.6 billion. That was up from earnings of $18.4 million, or 55 cents per share, on revenues of $2.5 billion in 1993.

Roger Hemminghaus, chief executive officer, said several areas of the San Antonio-based company contributed to what was an "excellent" year for Diamond Shamrock.

"During the first half of the year, our refining business was supported by good refining margins. During the last half of the year, as the refining margins narrowed, we had excellent financial results from retail marketing," he said.

Shell earnings up 39 percent

HOUSTON (AP) — Shell Oil Co., citing improved results in its chemical products division, reported fourth-quarter earnings of $211 million, up 39 percent from $152 million in the same period a year ago.

Houston-based Shell, the U.S. subsidiary of Royal Dutch-Shell, said revenues for the October-December quarter were $6.58 billion, up from $5.9 billion in the 1993 period.

For all of 1994, Shell reported profits of $508 million, a 35 percent decline from $781 million in 1993.

Shell said special items reduced net income for the quarter by $109 million, primarily for environmental remediation and also for litigation provisions, asset dispositions and write-offs.

ACTIVITY HIGHLIGHTS

Rigs above indicate the general area of significant discovery wells or exploration locations described in the Activity Highlights below.

Strawn producer flows 1,316 barrels

Staff Report

CHEVRON U.S.A. INC. has completed a prolific Strawn oil producer in the Puckett field of Pecos County, located above Devonian and Ellenburger production in that field, with nearest Strawn production three miles southeast in the same field.

On a 24-hour test, the No. 17 Jerusha Robbins et al "A" tested to flow 1,316 barrels of 44.3 gravity crude and 861 Mcfd on an 8/64 inch choke with flowing tubing pressure of 3,100 psi. The well flowed from perforations 10,108 to 10,126 ft. The interval was acidized with 550 gallons of 15 percent HCL acid.

Total depth was 10,187 ft., where 5 1/2 inch casing is set.

The well topped the San Andres at 1,841 ft., Wolfcamp at 5,291 and Wolfcamp shale at 8,193 ft. on ground elevation of 3,218 ft.

Location is 910 ft. from south and 1,980 ft. from west lines of Section 35, Block 126, T&STL survey, Abst. 3600.

Gas strike tested in Eddy County

Eddy County, N.M. has gained a Premier Sandstone gas discovery, eight miles northwest of Artesia.

COLLINS & WARE INC. tested the No. 1 CV "14" Federal to flow 1,210 Mcfd on a 28/64 inch choke with flowing tubing pressure of 305 psi. The well flowed from perforations 1,482 to 1,494 ft., which had been acidized with 1,700 gallons of 7.5 percent HCL acid.

Drilled to 9,022 ft., the well was plugged back to 1,536 ft. with 8-5/8 inch casing set at 1,600 ft.

Location is 1,980 ft. from south and 660 ft. from west lines of Section 14, T16s, R27e.

Stepout tested in Glasscock field

BTA OIL PRODUCERS has completed a 1/4-mile stepout to the Blalock Lake Southeast field of Glasscock County, 9.2 miles northwest of Garden City.

On potential test, the No. 1 Cox "G" flowed 214 barrels of crude and 195 Mcfd on a 20/64 inch choke with flowing tubing pressure of 230 psi. The well flowed from Wolfcamp perforations 8,099 to 8,127 ft., which had been acidized with 2,700 gallons of acid.

Total depth was 8,260 ft., where 5 1/2 inch casing was set.

Location is 50 ft. from south and 694 ft. from east lines of Section 22, Block 35, T-3-S, C.W. McPherson survey, Abst. 1174.

Schleicher field gets northwest extension

Strawn production in the Carl Cahill field of Schleicher County has been extended a quarter-mile west-northwest, 21 miles southeast of Eldorado.

E.B. BROOKS JR. finaled the No. 9 Wilson-Pope to pump 14 barrels of 41 gravity crude and 32 Mcfd from Strawn Sandstone perforations 4,263 to 4,270 ft. The interval was acidized with 500 gallons of 15 percent NeFe acid.

The well was drilled to 4,330 ft., where 4 1/2 inch casing was set.

Location is 2,130 ft. from north and 2,030 ft. from east lines of Section 4, Block K, D.C. Ogden survey, Abst. 1607.

Arch Petroleum to resume gas sales from Keystone field

FORT WORTH — Arch Petroleum Inc. announces that the Railroad Commission has amended its interim order regarding field rules for gas allowables and gas sales in the Keystone Ellenburger field in Winkler County.

Effective February 1, 1995, the RRC implemented a system of field-wide allowables which will allow Arch to produce and sell approximately 20.3 million cubic feet — 16 million net — of natural gas per day from its operated leases and 2.6million cubic feet — 2.1 million net — of natural gas per day from its non-operated interest in the field.

In the aggregate, Arch's gross and net allowable gas production in the field will be 22.9 and 18.1 million cubic feet of natural gas per day. Arch will continue to produce approximately 15,000 barrels of formation water per day, less allowables.

Approximately 9.4 million cubic feet of the natural gas produced each day from Arch-operated leases will be delivered to Enron to meet the delivery schedule under the volumetric production payment sold to Enron in November 1992. Proceeds from the sale of a portion of the remaining net volumes may be used to offset past delivery volume deficiencies which arose beginning in May 1993 when the RRC required bonus gas allowables earned from formation water production to be banked fro sale at a later date.

Larry Kalas, president of Arch, stated, "The current RRC ruling to produce gas from the Keystone field as a part of the co-production reservoir management plan has the endorsement of all operators in the field. the increased gas sales from the field will have a significant impact on the revenues and earnings derived from the company's oil and gas related activities."

Enron obtains access to largest gas field

HOUSTON (AP) — Enron Corp. has signed a letter of intent on a $4 billion deal with Qatar that would give it access to the world's largest natural gas field, the company said.

Enron spokeswoman Diane Bazelides said several conditions must still be met before the deal is finalized. Those conditions were not disclosed.

The North Gas Field in Qatar is the world's largest non-associated gas field, meaning gas pumped from it is not produced in conjunction with oil.

The huge field is mostly offshore, extending so far into the Persian Gulf that a small portion is in Iranian territory. Recoverable reserves are estimated at 227 trillion cubic feet, according to the Petroleum Finance Co. in Washington, D.C.

The Houston Chronicle cited industry sources as saying the project is worth $4 billion. The sources said Houston-based Enron might finance the entire deal, including a share for Qatar General Petroleum Co.

Mesa to auction Hugoton stake

DALLAS (AP) — Mesa Inc. is trying to auction off its natural gas properties in the Hugoton Field of southwest Kansas, the nation's largest-producing natural gas field.

The company said it plans to use the proceeds to pay down its punishing $1.2 billion debt load.

Mesa, whose chairman is Boone Pickens, said last month it had made the decision to sell half or more of the premium properties, which make up nearly two-thirds of its reserve base.

The company has begun an auction process that it hopes will let it drastically reduce or eliminate the debt and look to exploration and development.

Mesa said it is "initially contacting a select group of companies that have indicated an interest in Mesa's Hugoton properties and have the financial resources to effect such a purchase."

Company spokesman Jay Rosser wouldn't say who Mesa has contacted. Neighbors in the Hugoton Field include Anadarko Petroleum Corp., Amoco Corp., Mobil Corp. and Occidental Petroleum Corp.

If the process isn't successful, Mesa said it could change its mind about selling or break the properties into smaller packages. The process was expected to take at least several weeks, Rosser said.

The properties on the block include a gathering system, a new $43 million processing plant and roughly 1.2 trillion cubic feet of natural gas reserves.

Mesa also has reserves in the West Panhandle Field of Texas, the Gulf Coast and the Rocky Mountains.

Montana tycoon Dennis Washington recently bought a $15 million stake in Mesa and has said he may buy more than 25 percent of Mesa's stock, but Rosser said any moves by Washington wouldn't affect the planned auction.

He also said the current weakness in natural gas prices isn't expected to hurt the sale price.

Mesa has taken a series of steps that has pushed much of its leftover 1980s debt back to 1998, but knew it eventually had to do more, Rosser said.

"For the last four years, even five years, we've aggressively restructured the debt, but we've always known that that was a short-term fix," he said.

Phillips earnings rise eight-fold

BARTLESVILLE, Okla. (AP) — Phillips Petroleum Co. said fourth-quarter earnings were $162 million, eight times higher than a year ago, because of lower costs and refineries running at almost full capacity.

Net income of $162 million, or 62 cents a share, compared with $20 million, or 8 cents a share, in the fourth quarter of 1993. Last year's earnings were hurt by an extended shutdown at a Texas refinery.

Revenues for the fourth quarter were $3.1 billion, up from $3 billion a year ago.

Fourth-quarter results include a net gain of $65 million for special items. Without those items, earnings would have been $97 million, compared with a loss of $33 million last year.

For the year, net income nearly doubled to $484 million, or $1.85 a share, compared with $243 million, or 93 cents a share, in 1993.

In the fourth quarter, Phillips spent $27 million more on crude oil and products, but reduced its production, exploration and administrative expenses by 15 percent.

Its refineries produced an average of 314,000 barrels of oil a day, compared with 207,000 barrels daily in the fourth quarter of 1993, when the Sweeney, Texas, refinery was closed longer than expected.

Exploration and production earnings were up 39 percent in the fourth quarter to $107 million, while chemical earnings were $77 million, up from $32 million in the fourth quarter of 1993.

Gas gathering, processing and marketing earnings were a net loss of $1 million, compared to a $3 million gain a year ago, primarily because of low prices, the company said.

The increase in net income for the year was attributed largely to chemical earnings, which were $259 million, compared with $91 million in 1993.

Santa Fe Energy to explore Ecuador

HOUSTON — Santa Fe Energy Resources leads an international consortium which has signed a contract with the government of Ecuador to explore for and develop hydrocarbons on Block 11 the Oriente Basin. The contract includes initial exploration period of four years with optional extensions.

The Oriente Basin, encompassing the northeast section of the country, is a very prolific oil producing region with existing fields ranging in size from 20 million to 1 billion barrels of recoverable oil. Block 11 is located in the north central portion of the Oriente Basin and, though essentially surrounded by oil production, has been relatively unexplored. The consortium plans to collect and process additional seismic data on the block during 1995 with tentative plans for drilling in 1996. Exploratory activity will be managed from Santa Fe Energy's recently opened office in Quito.

Petrolera Santa Fe Ecuador Ltd., a wholly owned subsidiary of Houston-based Santa Fe Energy, is operator of Block 11 and holds a 35 percent working interest.

MIDLAND SENIOR CENTER LINE DANCERS

Photos by Curt Wilcott Design by Elizabeth Edwin

By Linda Anderson
Staff Writer

They are performance artists — line dancers, in fact — who take pride in their art and rehearse diligently to perfect their talents.

Last year, they performed more than 100 times before local groups, including nursing homes, elementary schools, clubs and civic organizations, and community events. They also have given performances in other cities, including Brownwood, Sweetwater, Monahans and Hobbs, N.M.

However, these dancers are not paid for their performances. They are all volunteers, donating their time and talents to attend rehearsals and perform before their audiences, even footing their own bills for travel expenses when they go to out-of-town performances.

And they are all senior citizens.

Anyone who ever thought retirement years were a time of increasing infirmities and decreasing energy should take a look at the line dancers from Midland Senior Center. This group is proof that retirement years can be the best.

"We started line dancing because it's so much fun," said Fay Hamilton, who teaches the group at Midland Senior Center in Kingsway Mall.

Line dancer Nelda Haynie agreed. "I'm addicted to this (line dancing). I don't want to quit."

John Evans, who Ms. Hamilton called the "Music Man" of the group, said, "The emphasis is on fun. Perfection is not in this world."

But fun is not the only consideration. Line dancing is loaded with other benefits as well, and exercise is one of them.

"My brother called me on the phone, and said he heard on the news that line dancing is the best thing older people can do for themselves," said dancer Rosa Dawson.

Faye Bittick, another member of the group, added: "It's good for arthritis.

"I had othoscopic surgery on my knee, and my doctor told me as soon as I could, to get back to line dancing."

Friendship is another benefit of being a part of this group.

Ms. Hamilton said, "When we go out to dance, we don't have to have a partner — because men are always in short supply." Most — but not all — of the 18 or so members of the group are women.

"It's just a bunch of women," she added. "We get together and have fun."

"Physical exercise is a benefit, but the real benefit is mental exercise," Evans said.

Midland Senior Center's line dancers (bottom left) do a dip-se-do rehearsing for upcoming performances. The group — consisting of about 18 members, all 60 years old or older — perform for various events around the area and occasionally even present out-of-town performances.

Midlanders view Bush's inauguration

By Marilyn McKnight Harrison

Midlanders by the score headed south recently for the two-day inauguration festivities for former resident, Texas's new governor, George W. Bush.

McKnight-Harrison

The event began the evening of Jan. 16 with a Gala at Frank Erwin Center. Among the entertainers were Janie Fricke, The Oak Ridge Boys with Larry Gatlin, a former Odessan, and the Texas Boys Choir. It was preceded by a cocktail buffet at The Four Seasons.

On Inauguration Day, the activities began with a service at Austin's First United Methodist Church. Gayle Dodson tells us that she and her husband, Doc, sat in the same pew as former President George Bush and former first lady Barbara Bush; Dr. Billy Graham, a longtime friend of the Bush family, and Lt. Gov. Bob Bullock's family. Gayle also saw former Midlanders Ruth and Dr. Charles Lutrick at the service. Dr. Lutrick was the Bushes' pastor at First United Methodist Church, when the family resided here.

Governor Bush's swearing-in ceremony took place at high noon on the steps of the Capitol and was followed by a barbecue on the Capitol grounds and a parade down Congress Avenue. The Midland and Lee High Schools' bands were among those participating and "did their hometown proud," according to one report.

That evening, three inaugural balls were held simultaneously and visited by Governor Bush, his wife, Laura, a Midland native, their 13-year-old twin daughters, Barbara and Jenna, and retired Texas Rangers pitcher Nolan Ryan. Among the entertainers were Johnny Dee and the Rockett 88's, The Dixie Chicks and The Phares Corder Orchestra. The Midlanders attended the ball held at the Austin Convention Center.

Festivities concluded on Jan. 18 when Laura hosted a coffee at the Governor's Mansion.

In a side note to inauguration festivities, Becky and Doug Ferguson and their son, A.J., a first grader at Sam Houston Elementary School, presented a plywood likeness of the state of Texas, with approximately 580 red, white and blue thumbprints of elementary students, to the governor's office. Governor Bush was a student at Sam Houston, when his family resided in Midland.

Among the Midlanders seen in Austin were the first lady's mother, Jenna (Mrs. Harold) Welch, Judy and Dr. Don Floyd, Pat and David Pruitt, Frances and Dr. Charlie Younger, Jan and Joe O'Neill, Polly and Ferrell Davis, Kelly and Todd Hullender, Carole and Johnny Warren and Robin and Jack Hightower.

Former Midlanders spotted in the crowd were Sally and Jim Salners of Houston, Patricia and Martin Allday of Austin, Jamie Dodson of New Braunfuls, Brandon Hudgeons, a student at the University of Texas School of Law, and Anna-Margaret (Ray) Morris and her husband, Trey, of Austin.

OUR FOND FAREWELLS and best wishes go with longtime Midlander Billie Hunt, who recently moved to Houston.

Although Billie did not want an excessive display of attention before she left, old friends, Harriet and Harvey Herd, entertained for her with a lovely birthday dinner on the eve of her Jan. 18 departure. Guests included her sons, John Hunt and Ron Hunt, both of Houston, who were here to help with the move.

Billie was a prominent members of the community for a number of years, while active in civic, social, school and church circles. She held offices in many organizations, including the presidencies of the Junior League of Midland and the Midland Symphony Guild. She also was an active member of First Presbyterian Church.

Billie was tremendously supportive of her husband, the late J. Wilmont Hunt, and his many community endeavors, which ranged from City Council member to president of the Midland Community Theatre.

TO OPEN "A Season of Enchanted Opera Evenings," Midland Opera Theater presented Karen Beardsley of New York City in concert the evening of Jan. 20 at Theatre Midland.

The internationally-known opera star and soprano was making her second appearance here in three years. Once again, she charmed audiences with her magnificent voice and her friendly personality.

Her Friday concert was followed by a lovely reception in the theatre lobby. The event was sponsored by the MOT Guild and arranged by Lucy (Mrs. Dub) Lee.

Other Patrons were invited to meet Karen at a cocktail buffet hosted by the opera board on Saturday evening at the home of Janet and Bob Pollard. The fun evening included impromptu singing by the guest of honor and MOT president Brad Kisner, Jim Ross and Janet Pollard taking turns entertaining at the piano.

Before enplaning for home, Karen sang at both services last Sunday morning at First United Methodist Church.

Karen was a houseguest of Brooksie and Charlie Rentz during her stay here. The weekend was sponsored by Texaco.

Next up on MOT's schedule is "An Evening in Jolly Olde England — The Pirates of Penzance." It will be presented by the Riverside Light Opera company on Feb. 26.

ACCOLADES WERE SHOWERED upon Don and Nell Furgeson at a retirement dinner given in their honor by a group of friends and colleagues last weekend at the Petroleum Club of Midland.

The party was billed as "A Star-Spangled Night ... for a Star-Spangled Couple," both of whom were longtime employees of Midland Independent School District.

Doc Dodson, longtime friend and neighbor of the Furgesons, served as master of ceremonies. The invocation was given by the Rev. Mark Alexander, also a neighbor and associate minister of First United Methodist Church, which the couple have attended since before their marriage.

After dinner, the fun began, with remarks entitled "Don, Do You Remember?" by three of his bachelor day friends, Billy Gilbreath, Dan Kallus and Bill Jackson. The staff of Carver Cultural Center, where Nell most recently taught, made a presentation, entitled "Love That Nell!"

The Texas Ding-A-Lings presented handbell music of songs relating to the couple. To conclude the program, special remarks were made by Dr. Joseph Baressi, superintendent of schools. Don's former secretary, Norma (Mrs. Jack) Sherman, presented them with a gift of a travel fund from family, friends and co-workers.

Don, who grew up on a farm near Lubbock, came to Midland in 1957 after graduating from Texas Tech University and joined MISD as an accountant. He has been business manager for MISD for 22 years. Nell, who moved to Midland in the ninth grade, began her teaching career at Henderson Elementary School and "retired" the year their first daughter was born. She returned to work in 1987 at Carver.

Approximately 200 guests turned out for the affair. Family members sharing in the evening's events were the Furgeson's daughters and husbands, Catherine and Jim Lane and Amy and Bobby Muzyka, all of Lubbock; Nell's mother, Jo Kirksey of Midland; her twin brother, Del Kirksye and his wife, Sherry, of Odessa, and Don's aunts and uncle, Zelta and Dr. Wallace Hess and Marion Wolfe, all of Lubbock.

Seat belts prove to be life savers

By Gregory Lewis
N.Y. Times News Service

SAN FRANCISCO — When Sacramento Kings basketball player Bobby Hurley drives the lane these days, he's wearing a seat belt.

It took a near-fatal traffic accident to make Hurley a poster boy in the national campaign to get people to buckle up. But thousands of others are readily wearing their seat belts, shopping for cars with air bags or putting on helmets when they mount a motorcycle or bike — and it's paying off.

Hospital emergency rooms report a decline in the number of severe trauma cases from crashes, and state statistics show a downward trend in traffic injuries and fatalities.

"With helmet use, we're seeing fewer head injuries, and 85 percent seat belt compliance offers them more protection," said B.J. Whitten, spokeswoman for the California Highway Patrol.

"Anytime a car rolls over, and the passengers are not wearing seat belts, the chances are better that they'll be ejected. If you stay in the car, the metal gets scrunched up. When you're ejected, you're hurled out of the car at the speed the car was traveling, and skin and bones hit the pavement."

THAT'S WHAT happened to Hurley. The much-heralded, first-round draft choice was thrown from his Toyota 4-Runner during a two-car collision after a Kings game in December 1993.

Both of Hurley's lungs collapsed, and the left one was severely bruised. He suffered several broken ribs, a compression fracture of the back and wrist and knee injuries.

'With helmet use, we're seeing fewer head injuries, and 85 percent seat belt compliance offers them more protection. Anytime a car rolls over, and the passengers are not wearing seat belts, the chances are better that they'll be ejected. If you stay in the car, the metal gets scrunched up. When you're ejected, you're hurled out of the car at the speed the car was traveling, and skin and bones hit the pavement.'

— B.J. Whitten
spokeswoman, California Highway Patrol

Hurley has returned to the basketball court, but in his off time, he's pitching seat belt use in print advertisements and television commercials for the U.S. Department of Transportation.

"If I could live my life over, I'd change one thing — on the night of Dec. 12, I'd buckle my seat belt," he says in one of them. "The experts say that I'm lucky, because most people who are thrown from their cars in a crash never get over their injuries. A lot of them die. That's why I'm asking you not to push your luck. Use your seat belt."

THE MOTOR safety campaign be gan in the 1970s, during the gas crisis, when highway speed limits were decreased to a maximum 55 mph to save lives as well as fuel. Some limits were later raised to 65 mph, but the safety campaign has continued through other measures.

Since 1986, California motorists have been required to use seat belts, but compliance initially was slow. Now, Whitten says, statistics indicate that 85 percent of the public buckles up.

In 1983, car seats were required for youngsters under 4 years of age or 40 pounds. In 1992, motorcyclists in the state were ordered to wear helmets, and since last January, bicyclists under 18 have been required to wear them, too.

Those mandates, plus increased safety equipment in cars, such as air bags, seem to have led to a shift on the front lines of trauma care: the hospital emergency room.

Hospital and law enforcement officials say that fewer drivers and passengers are showing up at emergency rooms in life-and-death situations.

For instance, in San Mateo County, 1,318 trauma cases were treated in 1987; 365 of those were classified as "Code 3A traumas," which means the patient needed immediate surgery to survive.

In 1993, total trauma cases were down to 925, with only 243 requiring immediate operations.

PETER BRYAN, chief operating officer of Sequoia Hospital in Redwood City, attributed the 30 percent reduction directly to increased seat belt use, air bags and helmet laws for bikes and motorcycles.

"Ten years ago, 19 out of 20 patients who came to the emergency room were not wearing seat belts," he said. "Now, it's just the opposite: 19 of 20 wear seat belts."

The change in its caseload has prompted Sequoia to scale back its emergency room operations.

Vernon Henderson, Highland Hospital's chief of trauma surgery, said the Oakland hospital also had seen a "decrease in the number of serious injuries in auto accidents. Not a dramatic decrease, but air bags are helping."

San Francisco General Hospital has noticed a slight decrease in the number of vehicular accident patients. Equally important, said Diane Miller, the hospital's director of planning, is that accident victims are coming in with less severe injuries — particularly head injuries.

"We believe it's because of seat belts," Miller said. "It's certainly true as it regards motorcycles and the helmet law. It has actually saved lives."

DURING THE first six months of 1992, 757 trauma cases were admitted, and they spent a total of 4,642 days in S.F. General. During the first six months of 1994, 726 trauma patients spent a total of 3,530 days in the hospital.

Better on-the-road safety has had an impact statewide. The Highway Patrol reports:

- Deaths in motorcycle accidents decreased 51 percent from 1989 to 1993, from 620 to 303. The most significant drop came in 1992, when the helmet law took effect.
- Sixty-four percent of people killed in vehicle accidents in 1993 were not wearing safety equipment, such as seat belts, at the time of the accident.
- Nine out of 10 bicyclists who died in 1993 were not wearing helmets.

DANCE: Exercise, friendship, fun in lines

(From 1F)

Line dancing, he said, "greatly enhances their (the dancers') social well being. Most of them didn't know each other" before they joined the group.

"Some (of the dancers) just completely changed" after they joined the group, Ms. Hamilton added. "They blossomed."

Members of the group are in their retirement years. "No one (of the dancers) is under 60," Ms. Hamilton said. "The youngest is 60, the oldest is 79."

"This age group loses a lot of friends," Evans said. Through the line dance group "they have the opportunity to make friends faster."

Ms. Hamilton said that when the group first started meeting a year or two ago, the camaraderie between the dancers was amazing. "I just assumed they all knew each other. I found out (later) that no one knew each other, except a few. The group cooperates and gets along so well. They have fun."

Performance artists recieve benefits from their audiences, and these line dancers are no exception.

Evans said, "The feedback is wonderful when performing before people in (such institutions as) a nursing home. Most people don't like to go into nursing homes, but these girls, after a performance, go around and talk to those people. To experience the peoples'reactions is something you can't get any other way."

Some of their best audiences, he said, are at the elementary schools. "The feedback is terrific! You can't even hear the music at the back of the room" because the children cheer the dancers' performances so enthusiastically.

Because the dancers are volunteers who pay their own costs, they also make their own costumes. Each dancer's basic outfit is a white shirt and black Western skirt (or slacks, for the men), which they dress up with seasonal appliques for the different times of year.

"We probably have four or five different costumes, plus the different seasons," Ms. Hamilton said.

Not only do the line dancers enjoy performing, but their audiences enjoy watching. In fact, Ms. Haynie said, so far this year, the group is booked about six months in advance.

But a busy schedule is what these dancers enjoy. After all, who ever said retirement had to mean slowing down? These seniors are going dancing!

DEAR ABBY

Resolutions will make New Year good for children

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I am a pediatrician, and I wrote these "Parents' Resolutions for 1995." If you think they will help children and parents, you are welcome to print them. — ALFREDO SANTESTEBAN, M.D.

Van Buren

DEAR DR. SANTESTEBAN: Though a little late, your resolutions are well worth space in my column. Thank you for sending them. Here they are:

(1) Because every two hours a child dies in this country as a result of a firearm injury, I'll either get rid of any firearms in my possession, or keep them locked up or unloaded, so my children can't harm themselves.

(2) I'll be an advocate for children everywhere and contribute time or money to feed, clothe or somehow help as many children as I can.

(3) Because cigarette smoke is harmful to children — especially those with asthma — I will not smoke near them. And if I become pregnant, I will quit smoking immediately.

(4) I'll make sure all medicines in my home are stored in a place where no children can reach them.

(5) I promise to spend time with my children, and not feel guilty if I must work outside my home.

(6) I promise to seek help if I'm so overwhelmed while caring for my children that I lose my patience and hit them. I will never shake an infant. If I see a child being hit in a clearly brutal way, I'll try to talk the abuser out of it, or report her or him to proper authorities.

(7) I'll teach my children healthy eating habits and not reward them with candy.

(8) I'll take my children to the doctor for regular checkups and immunizations. If my financial resources are low, I'll take them to a free health clinic. (Please: There are no excuses for not immunizing children properly.)

(9) I'll strive to build my children's self-esteem by never belittling them, and by being a good role model.

(10) I'll encourage my teen-ager to resist peer pressure and to say "No!" when tempted to try drugs or engage in sex.

(11) I'll teach my children responsibility by setting an example: "If you want something — work to get it!" "Everybody has hurdles to jump over; jumping over hurdles builds character."

DEAR ABBY: This letter is prompted by one I just read in your column from the young man whose mother used to shout, "You're just like your father!" He heard it every time his mother wanted to put him down.

For me, it was, "You're just like your mother!" My husband used to say it every time he wanted to hurt my feelings and belittle me.

After many years of taking it without saying a word, I figured out how to respond to what was meant to be an insult.

I said: "Thank you! I am proud to be just like my mother. She was a fine wife and an excellent mother. She was unusually intelligent, had many friends, and was a much respected member of her community." I went on and on, attributing every virtue I could think of to my mother, who really did her best to be everything a good wife and mother should be.

Abby, the last time I heard that comment was in 1976, and I'm sure I'll never hear it again. — WON IN WICHITA

DEAR ABBY: I am 13 years old, and I have two brothers who are 10 and 8 years old.

Our mother died three years ago, and Dad married a very nice lady last Christmas. What should we call her?

I don't think I could call her "Mom" or "Mother," and calling her by her first name sounds rude or disrespectful.

Maybe some of your readers who have had this problem would write in with suggestions. Thank you. — THREE KIDS IN BALTIMORE

DEAR KIDS: I'm open for suggestions. Meanwhile, why don't you ask the nice lady what she prefers to be called?

Abigail Van Buren's column is distributed by Universal Press Syndicate.

University presses offer publishing alternative

By Sandy Shore

DENVER (AP) — When major publishing house slammed their doors on a new book project by New Mexican Max Evans, the celebrated Western author went back to school.

At the University Press of Colorado, Evans found a warm reception for two "Bluefeather Fellini" novels.

"University presses are taking on the role of publishing high-quality fiction, even though in limited numbers because of limited finances," said Evans, best known for his novel, "The Rounders." "It is one of the most important things that exist in America today."

Like many of its counterparts around the nation, University Press is dabbling in fiction to help authors — both celebrated and unknown — who find it nearly impossible to break barriers at major publishing companies.

University presses traditionally have been a forum for scholarly works, typically publishing about 17 percent of the new books in the United States every year, said Peter Grenquist, executive director of the Association of American University Presses.

The title list can be mind-numbing. Luther Wilson, Colorado press executive director, keeps a list of personal favorites ranging from "Ball Bearing Maintenance" to "Aladrofin On Chickens," a study of a Roman scientist who researched animal husbandry.

THE ADVANTAGE university presses have over major publishing houses is that they can break even with a smaller investment and a smaller press run, usually 3,000 to 10,000 copies, directors say.

"We exist to do the kinds of books the commercial houses can't. The goal really isn't to make a profit, it's to serve the public needs of those scholars," said Grenquist.

While university presses offer authors small advances, if any, they keep books in circulation longer and are easier to work with, authors say.

Many university press directors believe they can fill the void left when publishing houses concentrate more on the bottom line than on bringing out the next great work of literature.

"By the very nature of a university press, we don't want to compete with the New York houses because we are not serving our mission if we do that," said Miller Williams, director of the University of Arkansas Press.

"Our job is to make available to the reading public worthy works that for one reason or another — almost always financial — are not being published by the major New York houses," Williams said.

Although many academic presses have published poetry and translated foreign fiction into English for years, the move into fiction has been an eye-opener.

For most publications, university press promotions consist of pulling out lists of libraries and scholars interested in a particular subject and sending them a flier.

'By the very nature of a university press, we don't want to compete with the New York houses because we are not serving our mission if we do that. Our job is to make available to the reading public worthy works that for one reason or another — almost always financial — are not being published by the major New York houses.'

— Miller Williams
director, University of Arkansas Press

FOR FICTION, the presses had to learn marketing the New York way.

"It's very labor-intensive for us. We are also spending quite a lot of time promoting those books," said Beth Hadas of the University of New Mexico Press in Albuquerque. "Once you start publishing them, you get into things like your author's need to be toured around. You may feel like you need to do more advertising."

The presses have had mixed success with fiction.

Louisiana State University published "A Confederacy of Dunces," by John Kennedy Toole, which won a Pulitzer Prize in 1981, and the University of New Mexico Press has found an audience for regional fiction by Hispanic authors.

But Texas Tech University Press disbanded its regional fiction program because it was a "hard sell," said Wendell Broom, press director.

"Our region, from a population point of view, is so small that it's real tough to define regional fiction here," he said.

The University Press of Colorado tiptoed into fiction with Evans' two-novel "Bluefeather Fellini" project.

"I was dragged into it by my board," recalled Wilson. "We have a couple, three creative writers on my board ... who felt there were unmet needs for creative writers both on and off campus.

"It's hard for a first author and sometimes for an experienced author of serious fiction to get the attention of a New York editor."

Evans had paperback interest for the Bluefeather project, but couldn't find a hardcover publisher.

So he and Wilson — longtime friends — helped one another, with Evans offering the book and tips on marketing while Wilson handled publishing duties.

"We were just doing it on guts and friendship," recalled Evans.

THE FIRST Bluefeather novel, published in 1993, has sold about 5,000 copies and the second about 3,500.

The real test began with October's publication of "Hookman," by Boulder schoolteacher Timothy Hillmer. The book is being reviewed by companies interested in film and television rights.

Wilson said the fiction experiment has been successful, so far. The board plans to review the program after the fourth novel is published this July.

"My initial feeling is yes, we will go ahead and continue at this point," he said.

Evans believes university presses hold the key for future great works of literature.

"The strange thing about being fearful of high-quality fiction is that it eventually always winds up selling more than all the other so-called entertainment books combined," he said.

Super bowl may be super bore

By Erma Bombeck

What sells more slices of pizza than the inaugural celebration, draws more reporters than the war in the Persian Gulf, and has a beer pipeline second only to the Alaska oil connection?

Bombeck

The Super Bowl.

More than 750 million people throughout the world will turn their attention toward today's game on television. Those with an abundance of money will pay anywhere from $200 for a legal ticket to $5,000 for a last-minute deal from a scalper.

Nothing in our culture draws as much hype. Even the commercials are reviewed by TV critics the next day to see who won and who lost the soft-drink war.

There are some bewildered women out there who are trying to build their lives around the lump in the La-Z-Boy. When do you feed him to keep him alive? When can you interrupt him for a phone call? How do you keep the kids quiet for three hours without sedating them?

OK, here's another statistic for you. The actual playing time of a three-hour Super Bowl game is 15 minutes. That's right, 15 MINUTES.

You've got two hours and 45 minutes to have a life, but you have to have a game plan. I call for a sit-down dinner any time the referees run out on the field with poles to measure for a first down. They don't run very fast. I can have a flaming dessert served by the time they reach a decision and the game resumes play.

When there is a dog on the playing field (count on it), there is time for the entire family to take in a movie. It seems ironic that guys who can run 90 yards for a touchdown in fewer than 20 seconds can't outrun a dog.

When the offensive team goes in and the defensive team comes out — or vice versa — we actually have enough time to bond and have a meaningful conversation. We could discover the meaning of life while these exchanges take place.

I attended one Super Bowl when I was with ABC. I observed that few fans were sitting in those $200 seats. It was like a stadium in motion. They were at the souvenir stands buying $15 million worth of T-shirts and caps to prove they were there, or checking to see if their limos were still there — for which they had paid an average of $2,600 for the three-day weekend.

I look at it this way. Win or lose, the two teams are having their Andy Warhol 15 minutes of fame.

Use techniques to get most out of egg whites

By Nancy Byal
Associated Press

Fluffy, and tender, the ultimate angel cakes and meringues seem to taste lighter than air. That celestial quality is achieved by giving the egg whites special respect, from start to finish.

Let eggs come to room temperature. You'll get more volume from egg whites if you let them stand at room temperature about 30 minutes before beating. Don't leave them out much longer for food safety reasons.

Separate eggs carefully so that the egg white is totally free of yolk. To keep that from happening, use an egg separator and three bowls. Crack the eggs, one at a time, over the center bowl, letting the white drop into the bowl. Drop the egg yolk into a second clean bowl. If the egg white is yolk-free, transfer the white to your third bowl. Repeat with the remaining eggs. If the yolk and white accidently get mixed in the center bowl, then you've only wasted one egg, rather than a whole bowl of egg whites. Even though you can't use any mixed yolks and whites for angel cake or meringue, you can still save it to make scrambled eggs, omelets or other recipes calling for whole eggs.

Start with clean beaters. If you've beaten ingredients, such as egg yolks, prior to beating the egg whites, be sure to wash the beaters thoroughly in hot, soapy water. The slightest trace of fat on the beaters will prevent the egg whites from whipping.

Check for the peaks. Beat the egg whites on medium speed of an electric mixer until soft peaks form (the tips will curl when you lift the beaters). Gradually add sugar, about 2 tablespoons at a time, beating at high speed until stiff peaks form (the tips will stand straight when the beaters are lifted).

Blend in any other ingredients gently by using the folding technique. To fold, cut down through the mixture with a rubber spatula; scrape across the bottom of the bowl and bring the spatula up and over the mixture, close to the surface. Repeat this circular down-up-and-over motion just until all ingredients are blended, turning the bowl as you work. Stirring the mixture too vigorously deflates whipped egg whites, resulting in less volume.

Emotional support may help in recovery

By Paul Raeburn

SANTA BARBARA, Calif. (AP) — Emotional support and social ties have a direct effect on the brain that may lower blood pressure and relax the heart, a study found.

The study could help explain previous findings that emotional support dramatically improves the chances of survival after a heart attack.

The new study suggests that doctors can improve people's chances of survival by allowing families to be with patients immediately after a heart attack, and by establishing programs to help families and friends provide better emotional support after a patient leaves the hospital.

"There's enough evidence now to say that lack of social support is a risk factor similar to high blood pressure, high cholesterol and lack of exercise," said the study's author, Lisa F. Berkman, an epidemiologist at the Yale University School of Medicine. She described the work Wednesday at an American Heart Association meeting for science reporters.

The first studies showing the importance of emotional support were published 15 years ago. They showed that people who were isolated from family or friends were three times as likely as others to die after a heart attack.

Later studies reinforced those findings by showing, for example, that married men had a lower risk of dying than single men.

In the most recent research, Berkman looked at levels of certain brain chemicals in 1,192 healthy men and women ages 70 to 79.

She found that emotional support altered levels of the brain chemicals norepinephrine and cortisol. Although the exact role of those chemicals on the heart is unclear, they are believed to affect blood pressure and the heart's response to stress.

"If you feel like you have emotional support, you may be less stressed. Your blood pressure doesn't shoot up and your heart doesn't race," Berkman said.

Dr. Suzanne Oparil, president of the heart association, said the importance of emotional support is beginning to have an influence on cardiologists.

"People accept the notion that it's important," she said, and hospitals and doctors are working to improve emotional support for patients.

Engagement announcements must appear at least two weeks before the wedding date. Wedding announcements must appear within one month of the event. Anniversary announcements — 25th or higher — must be published within one month of the anniversary date.

Announcements of pageant winners will only be published for teenage pageants and older. Photographes will be published for winners only, not runners-up. These annoucements are published Thursdays. Deadline is 5 p.m. Monday.

All articles must be submitted in writing. Forms for weddings, engagements and anniversaries, only published Sundays, are available in the Lifestyle office. All materials must include the signature and telephone number of the person submitting them.

We cannot mail forms to persons in Midland. Pictures must be picked up in the Lifestyle office within one month after publication. To have a photo returned by mail, include a self-addressed, stamped envelope. Unclaimed photos are discarded after one month.

Photographs may be submitted with wedding and engagement announcements, and anniversary announcements of 50 years or more, but are not required. A portrait of the bride-elect or of the future bride and bridegroom together may be submitted with engagement announcements. Portraits of the bride only or of the wedding couple may be submitted with wedding announcements. A different photo must be submitted for the engagement and wedding announcements.

Photos should be vertical, black and white, glossy finish, studio portraits. Studio color pictures may be submitted, but quality reproduction cannot be assured. Snapshots generally are not acceptable and Polaroid shots are not accepted. The MRT reserves the right to deny publication of any photo due to quality or content.

There is no charge for publication of photographs and stories.

What's hot and what's not for the coming year

By M.L. Lyke
Hearst News Service

Lift and separate. That was the promise of Wonderbra.

The wisp of padded hype hit headlines like an A-Bomb in 1994, a year of upheaval on both fashion and political fronts.

Republicans pushed Democrats out of office.

Regulatory foes gave eco-freaks the squeeze.

Newborn neo-conservatives, like plumped bosoms, popped out all over.

As the country swung to the right, fashion swung to the past. And it's still swinging. For 1995, old is news.

In retro-glam mode, women are slipping into tight, black, plunging dresses, and painting lips a big, pouty bad-girl red. Slinking is back. So are curves. The drink of choice is the Manhattan, not merlot.

In home decor, Generation X-ers are scouring thrift shops for '50s Formica tables and plastic-form chairs. The more hideous the color, the better.

Boomers have dumped the lodge look and gone muted Italian. And they have finally stopped dyeing their hair. Gray reigns (check out Harrison Ford and Michael Douglas). Table talk includes menopause, 401(k)s, low-fat cuisine and living wills.

NO WONDER X-ERS gag at the mention of "Yups."

That's especially true in Seattle, a city noted for bucking trends. Here, anything "hot" is automatically "not," and that includes Republicans.

Seattle was one of the few cities to vote Democratic in the '94 elections. Taxes and liberals live on in this doggedly nonconformist town.

On the fashion front, the "thrown-together" look still beats high style. Maybe six-inch stillettos are hot in New York. In Seattle, the look's still big boots. But not the overhyped Doc Martens. New ones from Nordstrom's are sooooo cliched.

Flannel-'round-the-waist is old-old-old. Guys are cutting off pony tails. Girls are cutting off fingers on gloves. The hippest shop at thrift stores and discount outlets, raving about cheap "finds" and slamming "fashion sheep."

As for the Wonderbra, Seattle's leading anti-style stylists let the breasts fall where they may.

Here, then, is a list of in's and out's for 1995:

Try lower-fat treat

NEW YORK (AP) — How can you take some of the calories out of ice cream? According to dietitians, you can leave a good number of unwanted calories behind by looking closely in the supermarket's freezer. Instead of taking a high-fat ice cream, pick up a carton of ice milk, which contains from 2 percent to 7 percent milk fat. Ice cream has at least 10 percent milk fat.

Callaway Gardens are preserve

By Jerry Flemmons
N.Y. Times News Service

PINE MOUNTAIN, Ga. — Come spring, the hummingbirds will fly up from South America and the "Prunifolia Azalea" will bloom and the pine forests and hills around this undersized southern crossroads town will freshen with the new year.

As usual, that means romance — well, to be uncouth: sex — is up in the air. The way it works is the male ruby-throated hummingbird does a fancy-flight air dance and the female, seduced by his sensuous moves, swoons and the pair then — says one source — flies off to "a little spider web-covered cottage for a toss or two in the feathers." The result is a couple of tiny eggs, which hatch hummingbirdlets, who are immediately hungry.

So mama and papa spend the sunny days busily feeding their offspring: a few aphids and gnats for roughage and protein, but mostly nectar from red flowers, among them the "Prunifolia Azalea."

BOTH THE ruby-throated hummingbird and the crimson azalea — each a rare specimen in these Georgia forests — define the scope and purpose of a 14,000-acre wooded domain called Callaway Gardens.

Each spring, red is a dominant color among thousands of blossoming plants. That attracts the hummingbirds, which pleases the binocular-bearing bird watchers among the hordes of people who wander around watching nature regenerate herself in technicolor.

"Gardens" doesn't even begin to explain the Callaway spectacle. A blossoming forest preserve, to be sure. But how to account for the acrobats? Or the leaping horses? Famous carrots?

For more than half a century, Callaway Gardens, an hour's drive southwest of Atlanta, has been a kind of private Eden-in-microcosm that takes in boarders. It is both natural and man-made, an ecological theme park, part family resort, part wilderness, part pastoral retreat, part flowering wonderland.

IT ALL BEGAN with the "Prunifolia Azalea," and a walk in the woods outside Pine Mountain by Cason Callaway. That was in 1930. Callaway found the red flower growing wild in the woods, and later learned that it grew only in that immediate area, and was all but extinct. He bought the forest to save the flower. He preserved much more.

For 20 years, the forest was allowed to return to a natural state, and native plants and flowers were reintroduced. He built a dozen lakes. He let wildlife come back to the land. In 1952, Callaway Gardens was opened to the public.

And again this spring thousands of people will come, to roam through the 2,500 managed acres by car, bike and foot. They will see azaleas in a dozen varieties and colors; tulips and pansies; pink and white dogwood; giant flowering southern magnolias; mountain laurel, which we botanists know as "Kalmia latifolia."

THERE ARE Easter lilies and perfumed Carolina jasmine, wild orchids, wild indigo — "Baptisia alba" — and blue phlox, daisies and geraniums, irises and rhododendrons, poppies and trumpet honeysuckle, the latter a favorite nectar source for hummingbirds.

That's the spring lineup. Flowers change by the season, but something always is blooming (chrysanthemums dominate the autumn show).

Callaway Gardens can be seen in several ways. There's a five-mile paved drive through the most spectacular blooming area and past the major attractions, and a wooded bike trail, or four walking trails through planted holly, rhododendron, azalea and wildflower areas.

AN INDIVIDUAL or per vehicle fee allows access to all drives, trails and attractions, which include:

Cecil B. Day Butterfly Center: Largest glass-enclosed butterfly conservatory in North America, this is a kind of magic kingdom of fluttering colored butterflies from all over the world. They — more than 1,000 at all times — live in a jungled environment, complete with exotic plantings and a stream and 12-foot waterfall. Butterflies indeed sit on human noses in this enchanted place.

John A. Sibley Horticultural Center: Five acres under glass. A rock-walled greenhouse with mists and solar air conditioning and plants from everywhere, living together around a pool and 22-foot waterfall.

The Ida Cason Callaway Memorial Chapel: All places of prayer should sit in a dense, pine forest beside a calm pond. "Tranquil" is the word that seems to describe this chapel and its setting. Copied from a 17th-century English Gothic country church, it is a stone and red oak piece of serenity that seems far removed from worldly distresses. The stained glass windows represent the blossoming seasonly changes at Callaway Gardens, and there is an organ recital daily that fills the surrounding woods and competes musically only with the murmuring of Falls Creek, which gurgles by outside.

Business travel tips cut small talk

By Richard P. Carpenter
N.Y. Times News Service

A recent survey conducted by Omni Hotels found that 61 percent of business travelers avoided talking to their airline seatmates by reading. Other findings:

- Only 7 percent are bothered by getting a hotel room on the 13th floor.
- Sixty-six percent of those with children say they phone home every night.
- About half bring goodies home for the youngsters from each trip.

Elderhostel offers travel alternative

Associated Press

Travelers 60 and over can see the world or just a special spot inexpensively through Elderhostel, a network of 1,800 cooperating campuses and national parks in the U.S., Canada, and 45 overseas countries.

Visitors stay in college dormitories, eat at campus dining facilities and can tke advantage of educational, cultural and recreational resources of the host. A typical one-week program in North America would cost about $300, including tuition, room and board.

Anyone 60 or more — or a companion or spouse of someone who is — can take advantage of the programs, conducted through the University of Tennessee in Knoxville.

For more information and enrollment materials, call the university's department of independent study at (615) 974-5134 or 1 (800) 627-7956.

SEEDS FOR THOUGHT

Some fruit trees do better in Permian Basin than others

By Deborah A. Benge-Frost

Oops! I did it again. Promised to follow up with an article on backyard fruit and got side tracked. Well, one week later, let's take another look at backyard fruit.

Benge-Frost

Several fruits will grow in the Permian Basin. Some do well with regular production, while others may only give you a mediocre crop on the average of every four or five years. Let's take a look at how different fruit types do.

Deciduous fruit trees go through a rest period in the winter. Many have very specific need for a certain number of chilling hours. These are hours of temperatures between 45 and 32 degrees F. If fruit trees don't get the proper amount of cold, they will not bloom and grow normally in the spring. If a variety receives too much chilling in a location, bloom and growth is delayed and results are weaken.

Ideally, a variety's chilling requirement should match the chilling hours the location receives. In reality, a difference of 200 hours is common, with problems and advantages resulting. A list of fruit, nuts and berry varieties is available through the Midland or Ector County Extension office. This list contains varieties based on 800 to 900 chilling hours. In the USDA Winter Chilling Zone, we are rated as receiving about 1,000 hours of chilling on the average.

■ Peaches: A favored fruit among home gardeners, peaches bloom early in the spring and their fruit is often lost to a spring freeze. They also have several insect, sometimes disease problems and they are rather short-lived. In other words, you've got to really want a peach to put up with all the problems — but when they bear, it's worth it.

If you want a free-stone variety, choose a mid- to late-season variety. Early maturing varieties are cling types. Also, varieties that mature later in the season are generally sweeter, but they are harder to take care of because they are exposed on the tree so much longer than May and June maturing varieties.

If nematodes are a problem, purchase stone fruits on Nemaguard peach rootstock. Some peach varieties you might consider (listed early to late maturing) are Bicentennial, Harvester, Majestic, Denman, Dixiland and Redskin.

■ Plums: At least two varieties should be planted for good pollination of certain varieties. If problems with nematodes exist, make sure rootstock is Nemaguard.

The large-fruited European-type plums commonly seen in our supermarkets are not as well adapted here because of greater disease susceptibility and lower production. The Japanese or Japanese-hybrid plum varieties will do much. Some recommended varieties to try include Methley, Morris, Ozark Premiere and Wickson.

■ Apricots: Apricots are self-fertile and do not require a pollinator. Unfortunately, apricots do not bear fruit regularly. Trees located next to a building will usually (but not always) fruit a little more consistently than those out in the open. Frost damage is the most common reason for fruit failure, but often fruit simply fails to set. All budded varieties as well as seedling trees are subject to inconsistent cropping.

Again, if nematodes are a problem, seek Nemaguard rootstock. On soils with a pH above 7.5, it is generally better to use an apricot rootstock (root system) rather than the peach rootstock. Apricot rootstock is much more tolerant to alkaline soils. Chances are you will not be able to find apricots grafted onto apricot rootstock. The only way you will be able to do this is to do your own budding. So if you buy grafted or budded apricots, you may need to treat trees for iron chlorosis (yellowing between the leaf veins). Try growing Blenhein or Moorpark varieties.

■ Cherries: This fruit is, at best, only marginally adapted to our area. The winter chilling required to grow cherries will not be adequate in most winters. Sweet cherries are more sensitive to cold and heat, so sour cherries will do better. The sour cherry variety to try is Montmorency, which is self-fertile and doesn't require a pollinator. Starkcrimson and Zager are some low chill sweet cherries that might be considered on an experimental basis only.

■ Apples: A lack of red color on red apples is typical in our hot summer temperatures, but the eating quality of apples is generally very good.

Numerous rootstocks are used on apples to build the size tree you prefer — standard, semi-dwarf or dwarf. The rootstocks available include:

— Seedling: Produces full-size tree that fruits in seven years;

— MM111: Semi-dwarf, 80 percent of full-size tree, fruits in three to five years;

— MM106: 60 percent to 70 percent of full-size tree, fruits in three to four years;

— M7A: 50 percent to 60 percent of full-size tree;

— M9: 25 percent to 30 percent of full-size tree, fruits in two to three years, requires trellising.

The spur-type varieties will remain more compact than non-spur varieties. A rule of thumb for practical tree size is to order spur-type varieties of apples on the least dwarfing rootstock and use the extremely dwarfing rootstocks on the non-spur apple varieties.

Most apples require cross-pollination, so plant at least two varieties. Be sure to plant two different types; for example, a red delicious-type and a jonathan-type would do. A few recommended apple varieties to choose from are Gala (late July-early August), Mails Delicious (early to mid-August), Dixired Delicious (late August to early September), Fuji (early September) and Granny Smith (late September to early October).

■ Pears: Fire blight is one of the biggest problems with pear. This disease limits the use of some popular varieties like Bartlett. Plant at least two varieties to ensure good fruit set. The common varieties suggest here, do not ripen on the tree. They must be harvested when fully colored and have changed from the hardness of a baseball to the slight "give" of a softball. Leave fruit in a cool room for at least two weeks to ripen them. Try some of these varieties: Warren, Ayers, Maxine, Moonglow, Garber and Kieffer.

■ Asian pears: Asian pears produce high quality fruit. They have apple-like texture and apple-like shapes, but pear flavor. They do fairly well and ripen on the tree. A few variety recommendations are Hosui and 20th Century, and Shinseiki.

■ Jujubes: Not well known but extremely tough, dependable fruiting plant, jujubes are date-like in appearance. Eaten fresh they are crabapple-like and dried they are date-like. Li and Lang are two good varieties. Hard to find, but well worth the look, especially in difficult growing conditions.

■ Persimmons: Japanese persimmons are easy to grow, relatively pest-free and attractive in the landscape or garden. There are several good varieties to choose from. Astringent varieties include Hachiya, Tanenashi, Tamopan and Eureka. Non-astringent varieties are Fuyu and Viro.

■ Figs: Figs will grow in our calcareous soils. They generally freeze to the ground unless protected or grown in a protected area. A sudden fall freeze of 20 degrees F. will kill the whole plant because the plant has not yet hardened. Once a plant is dormant a 15 degree freeze can kill top growth but not the root system. Since fruit is borne on current season's growth, you can still get fruit even if the top is killed. Figs need to be deep mulched in the summer time and watered on a regular basis so fruit doesn't drop due to drought.

Choose varieties with a closed eye to keep insects from entering and early spoilage. Some varieties to try include Celeste, Texas Everbearing and Alma (more susceptible to freeze damage).

This is a brief summary of fruits for the home landscape or garden. A more complete listing of recommended varieties is available through the Midland or Ector County Extension offices as well as publications on individual fruits. Come by for a copy of these materials.

Extension horticulture programs are planned for the coming months.

Spring Garden School will be 7 p.m. Feb. 14, 21, 28 and March 7 at Confederate Air Force Headquarters at Midland Air Terminal. Topics covered will be Backyard Vegetables, Backyard Fruit, Home Lawn Care and Xeriscape. Pre-registration is required. Fee is $15 for all four sessions or $5 for each session.

Home Landscape School will be 7 p.m. April 10, 11, 17 and 18 at CAF Headquarters. Classes will be on developing a good home landscape, updating an existing landscaping or working with a professional. Pre-registration is required and class fills up early. Pre-registration fee is $25 per household.

Deborah Benge-Frost is the extension horticulture agent for the Texas Agricultural Extension Service in Midland and Ector counties.

Heart Beat '95

Stories by Georgia Todd Temple

Art and music merge for the American Heart Association's Heart Beat '95, scheduled for Saturday and Feb. 5 at the Midland Hilton.

"This year is very unique and we're excited," said Lori Johns, executive director of the Midland Chapter of the American Heart Association.

"Midland Gallery has offered to have their auction in conjunction with our gala and will donate partial proceeds from the sale of art work to the American Heart Association."

The gala, set for 8 p.m. to midnight Saturday, features a Hollywood theme. Those in attendance will be dressing in Hollywood clothes or as their favorite star.

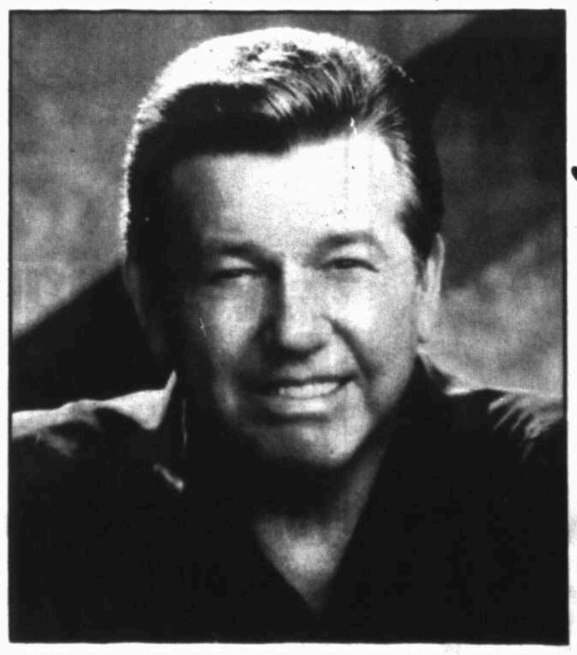

"Historically, Heart Beat's been less expensive to attend and usually a casual affair and a lot of fun," Ms. Johns said.

The gala, now in its 11th year, is presented by the chapter's board of directors.

The evening, priced at $100 a couple, includes

Recording artist to bring unique piano style to Midland

Floyd Cramer

After a professional career that has spanned more than four decades, pianist Floyd Cramer has no plans for a last date in the music business.

"It's still exciting or more so than it used to be," Cramer said in a soft-spoken voice over the telephone. "It's a never ending process of creating, learning, recording new products and getting excited about the new products coming up and the uncertainly about the future.

"Nothing is more satisfying to me than to think of a concept for an album and present it to a company or just do it and then for that album to be accepted by the public. I enjoy going into the studio and recording and when it's over, I'm very happy with the product that we do."

The artist and his wife, Mary, make their home in Madison, Tenn., near their two daughters, Diane and Donna, and their husbands Bobby and Joey, and their four grandchildren Jenny, Jessi, Jason and Josh.

Cramer performs 35 to 40 symphony and pop concerts annually, most through the Performing Arts and Community Concerts programs. His telemarketed recordings of recent years, "Treasury of Favorites/World Famous Love Songs," "The Piano Magic of Floyd Cramer" and "The All-Time Favorites," a double-album gospel package, have sold well beyond gold record levels.

He brings his patented note-slurring piano style to Midland Feb. 2 when he performs at Midland High School Auditorium for Midland Community Concerts.

cocktails and dinner, a silent auction and dancing to the sounds of the Austin-based Big Time Band.

For ticket information call 520-7041.

"They can expect to dance," said Bill Browder, guitarist and manager for Big Time Band, whose members were formerly with Duck Soup.

"We do party classic rock and soul music. It's high energy '60s dance music. We're dedicated to everybody just having a great time. That's our sole and soul mission."

Big Time Band member Mike Cross has "got a wireless mike and he likes to go out in the crowd and do all the dances — twist, shimmy, watusi, gator, mashed potatoes and funky chicken," Browder said. "It's a lot of fun."

Other members of the band are John Mills, saxophone; Riley Osbourn, piano; Eddie Cantu, drums; Keith Winking, trumpet; and Austin native Mike Rieman, bass.

Most of the players also "do other things," said Browder, who is a member of Denim, a country-rock group. He spends his days working as "Mr. Mom" and caring for his two daughters, Katherine, 11, and Mary, 5. His wife, Kristi, works for Motorola.

"I appreciate how hard mothers have it," Browder said. "Mothers are the unsung heroes of the world."

He's not the group's only Mr. Mom. Cantu and Layton DePenning, who works the sound booths and sings background vocals, also perform in that capacity.

Browder, who is originally from Houston, said Big Time Band has a reputation among its peers as "the top of the heap in quality and ability to play.

"For a band that does cover material, we're as good as it gets."

Organizers of Heart Beat hope Big Time Band — which last performed in Midland in November — will help draw a large crowd Saturday.

The chapter hopes to raise "in excess of $40,000" this year, Ms. Johns said.

"In the past, it raised much more than that when people had more disposable income," she said. "I feel that with the silent auction and the art show we will more than exceed our goal."

The benefit trunk showing of unframed original oils and graphic art works from U.S. and European artists will be shown by New York art dealer and critic Walter E. Edelman.

Edelman is president of Edelman Fine Arts Ltd. of New York and represents more than 1,000 artists from the United States, Europe and Asia.

Hours for the free showing are 2 p.m. to 9 p.m. Saturday and 1 p.m. to 5 p.m. Feb. 5 in the upstairs ballroom lobby at the Hilton. Works are priced from $200 to $10,000.

For a listing of the artists whose works will be represented, call Midland Gallery, 694-8761.

Heart Beat is held in February, Heart Month. This year's theme is "Life. It's What We Are Fighting For."

Through the years, a good portion of the money raised in various ways by the American Heart Association has gone to research.

"Thirty-five years ago there was no CPR to revive heart attack victims, no bypass surgery and coronary care units," Ms. Johns said.

"And 25 years ago there was no balloon angioplasty to open clogged arteries. Then, 15 years ago there were no effective anti-rejection drugs to help heart transplant patients. And 10 years ago there was no laser angioplasty or atherectomy to remove plaque from arteries and no (procedure) to keep arteries open.

"The Heart Association has contributed $1.2 billion to research since 1949," Ms. Johns said. "There's several people in our community who are direct results of life-saving research breakthroughs."

Kali Davis, the 3-year-old daughter of honorary Heart Beat chairmen Karla and Jad Davis, is among those Midlanders. The parents call their daughter's successful heart surgeries a direct result of funds raised for cardiovascular research and technology.

The American Heart Association is dedicated to the reduction of disability and death from cardiovascular diseases and strokes, Ms. Johns said. Thus, the association has set certain priorities in allocating the money raised in its behalf.

"For every dollar raised, 32 percent goes to research, 32 percent goes to professional and public education," Ms. Johns said.

"We'll keep expenses for fundraising to around 15 percent and then we give about 13 percent to community service and only seven cents on the dollar goes to management and to general administration."

HOROSCOPE

SUNDAY, JANUARY 29, 1995

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR: Take time to reflect on where you have been and where you want to go. Trying to do too many things at once could leave you exhausted. Family affairs must take precedence throughout the spring. Heavy-duty business decisions must be made in June.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: TV host Oprah Winfrey, actor Tom Selleck, diver Greg Louganis.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Use your keen understanding of human nature to get closer to someone you want to know better. A younger person will reach out to you. Provide a sympathetic ear but monitor your spending.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): A small bonanza gives you cause for celebration, You may find yourself daydreaming more than usual. Direct your energies toward constructive goals.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Be willing to discuss a troubling issue, then forgive and forget. A family member offers you a gift or some form of financial aid. Swallow your pride and accept. A former flame reappears.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Consider all of the ramifications of a career change. One dream fades when another springs into being. A friend shares valuable insights. Be true to your high ideals.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Review your plans with an eye to increasing your financial security. The popularity of a project could wax and wane. A friend contacts you regarding a pending visit. An effervescent attitude helps reduce stress.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Give yourself plenty of time to reflect on an important decision. Romance is on the horizon. Do not create problems for yourself by antagonizing someone who could become an ally in time. Show respect for partner's viewpoint.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Disregard friends who try to separate you from your cash. You cannot afford to make risky investments. Study the matter thoroughly. Hosting a small potluck supper could be fun. Be more spontaneous in romance.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Travel and social engagements are favored today. Take advantage of this afternoon's fortunate trends to enjoy fun and games. Tonight, one-on-one meetings prove especially effective. Speak from the heart when discussing the future.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Children will benefit from your presence and guidance. Any discord in an alliance can be smoothed over if you are tactful. Romance holds possible pitfalls. Avoid crowds if you go out this evening.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): An early morning call could put the damper on your plans. Do not despair. Finish a project that has been on hold. Issue a spontaneous come-as-you-are dinner invitation. Romance beckons.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Joining a special group will boost your prestige. Someone influential seeks your views. As you reach out to help others, new opportunities come your way. Sharing a secret with loved ones brings you closer together.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Trying to purchase the affections of a loved one with money will backfire. Spend more time at home with those closest to your heart. A lasting romantic relationship must be free from anxiety.

Octogenarian David Treadwell of Wilmington, Del., is still a feared competitor in the tournament bridge arena. At rubber bridge, septuagenarian Boris Koytchou of New York still displays the skills that made him an international star first for France then, later, for the U.S. Here's an example of his bidding judgment from a recent rubber-bridge game at New York's famed Regency Whist Club.

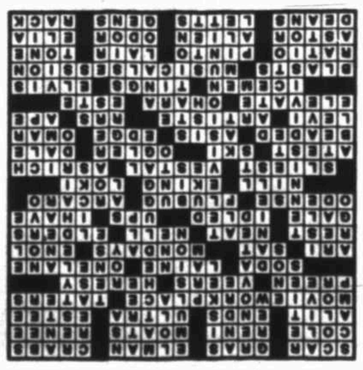

After his partner opened two no trump Koytchou, North, first checked on South having a four-card major, then showed a five-card spade suit. North-South were employing Key-Card Blackwood, where the king of trumps counted as an ace, and South promised four 'aces' by responding five diamonds. Five hearts asked for the queen of trumps, and five spades denied holding it. Most players would now have bid the small slam in spades, but Koytchou placed the final contract in no trump.

There was nothing to the play. The club opening lead was won in dummy and the ace of spades was cashed. When a spade to the jack revealed the 4-1 split, declarer simply unblocked the king, entered dummy with a heart and conceded a trick to the queen of spades. Declarer eventually scored four spades, four hearts, one diamond and three clubs.

Note that six spades fails with normal play. Assuming East leads the jack of diamonds, correct technique would be to win the ace and cross to the king of clubs. Since the odds favor a 3-2 trump split over a finesse for the queen by a whopping 28 percent, declarer continues by cashing the ace and king of spades, planning to concede a trump trick after discarding diamond losers on South's high clubs. Unfortunately, that sets up two trump tricks for East.

combination of a lot of songs that I've recorded over the years and different albums dating back to the 1960s and even before that when I signed with RCA," said Cramer whose first hit single, "Last Date," earned him the BMI Country Songwriting Award in 1960 and BMI's Pop Songwriting Award in 1961 as well as a 2 Million Performance Award.

"Last Date" has since been recorded as "Last Date With You" by Skeeter Davis, words by Boudleaux and Skeeter Davis, which peaked at No. 5 country and No. 26 pop; "Lost Her Love on Our Last Date" by Conway Twitty, words by Twitty, which peaked at No. 1 country and received the BMI Songwriter Award in 1973; and "Lost His Love on Our Last Date" by Emmylou Harris, words by Twitty, which again peaked at No. 1 country and received the BMI Songwriter Award in 1983. The combined airplay of the foregoing cuts earned a 1 Million Performance Award.

Cramer travels with a five-piece string section, drums, bass and conductor.

"We're looking forward to coming there and performing. It's very rewarding to be with the group I travel with, to see the response. For somebody to come up and get an autograph and bring an album they've had for 20 years, it makes you feel good."

Tickets for Cramer and the remainder of the Community Concerts series are $20, available at the door. The Bulgarian Children's Choir will perform March 13 and comedian and pianist Dale Gonyea will appear April 6. Show time is 7 p.m.

Born and raised in the tiny sawmill town of Huttig, Ark., Cramer was interested in music at a young age. His parents bought him his first piano when he was 5.

"I discovered at an early age I enjoyed music — listening and playing. Playing by ear mostly stirred my interest. It's one of those things you can't explain it other than I love music and wanted to participate in it."

After he graduated from high school in 1951, he moved to Shreveport, La., where he soon joined the musical staff of the Louisiana Hayride radio program.

"Every time you do something is a turning point," said Cramer, reflecting back over his career. "I was lucky enough to be on the Louisiana Hayride at the time it was at its peak. During that time a lot of the country people — Faron Young, Jim Reeves, Hank Williams, a young Elvis Presley — were there."

Cramer worked with Elvis, then recording on Sun Records, on a tour that took them through Texas high school auditoriums. A young player himself, Cramer remembered those days with Elvis as "fun, new and exciting. The kids were absolutely wild over Elvis."

When Elvis recorded his first RCA Record, Cramer was on the record with him.

"He was always one of the guys with us; just a good friend," Cramer said of Elvis.

In the early 1950s, Cramer went to Nashville to record with a number of performers from the Louisiana Hayride. And exposure on KWKH Louisiana Hayride broadcasts brought Cramer to the attention of RCA Records' Nashville A&R director Chet Atkins, who suggested the young pianist move to Nashville. In 1955, Cramer made the move.

Cramer quickly became a key player in the Nashville session system, playing on nearly all major label sessions by such artists as Patsy Cline, Jim Reeves, Roy Orbison, Don Gibson, the Everly Brothers, Elvis, The Browns and Brenda Lee. He was offered a recording contract by Atkins at RCA Records in 1959.

Since then, Cramer has had his share of awards, receiving, among others, the Academy of Country Music Keyboard Player of the Year Award seven times. Although he is one of the most nominated instrumentalists in the history of the CMA Awards and a likely candidate for the Country Music Hall of Fame, he doesn't equate success with recognition or awards.

"If you are doing what you really enjoy in life, I don't care if it is delivering the mail, if that's what you like and you enjoy that, boy, you're successful."

Through the years, he has participated in a series of fundraising concerts for Floyd Cramer Music Scholarships established by East Tennessee State University in honor of his musical contribution to society. In the fund's 10-year history, around 200 scholarships have been awarded, of which 46 scholarships have benefited students in business and computer science studies.

When young musicians ask his advice, he tailors his reply to encompass the direction they want to take. Yet, his words form around a single idea.

"The main thing is, I would say, if they are totally committed to playing music, is to pursue it. Maybe go to the city that you think you have the best chance. Try to get into a band. Stay busy. Be active. Give it a chance."

Any career may be more difficult to launch in the 1990s than it was when he started out, Cramer said. But, "it depends the situation. Some people can walk right in and hit it just right and do what they want to do. For other people, it's a matter of time doing this and doing that. Finally, it might happen if you keep working at it."

Cramer enjoys listening to "all different kinds" of music, but he's "not a fanatic about radio" and doesn't "listen on a regular basis.

"I don't collect anyone's records, but I enjoy listening to other players. I really do. Each have their own interpretation, how they feel a song should go and how to play and so forth."

What draws Cramer to a song is the "emotion" it evokes.

"I like a lot of songs because of the emotion that they stir. It could be a feel-good song, a sad song. Each melody or background of the song tells the story, and it's usually of a human emotion that people can relate to, and I think playing instrumentally you can capture that feeling just as well as you can vocally.

"I have nothing against vocals, words. I love them. But, I think when you play music, you also can capture the feeling, the emotion of the song. And that's what we try to do."

Although neither of his daughters were drawn to music as he was, Cramer has grandchildren who are.

"Jason, the 9-year-old, is really into music. He plays piano, and he sings. He's always been musical. Ever since he was 2 years old, he was singing."

Cramer and Jason performed on a Christmas special Dec. 20 on TNN's Music City Tonight.

"We had two grand pianos, and we used their orchestra, and we played 'What Child Is This.' And he did a super job. He loved it."

It's clear from his voice, that he is equally proud of all four grandchildren. As he introduced them, he said, "We got a good combination." Jenny, 15, and Jessi, 12, are Diane's — his oldest daughter's. Jenny is studying to be an actress and Jessi "hasn't made up her mind what she wants to do." Donna's children are Jason and Josh, 6, who is "very musical, too."

All four grandchildren joined him on the Christmas special.

"It was a good time, a very special moment," he said, recalling the four grandchildren being interviewed on the show.

As Cramer looks back over his years in the music business, he feels fortunate.

"For me to be able to do what I enjoy most and still make a living at it, is great. A lot of people don't get that opportunity."
