Computer virus becoming epidemic

Associated Press

Researchers today tried to trace a "virus" that infected computer systems nationwide, slowing machines in universities, a NASA and nuclear weapons lab and other federal research centers linked by a Defense Department computer network.

By Thursday night, the virus had infected hundreds of computers on what one expert said was the largest scale ever. Authorities said the virus apparently destroyed no data but temporarily halted some research.

The New York Times reported today that an anonymous caller to the newspaper claimed that a graduate student had created the virus as a harmless experiment and became terrified of the consequences when it got out of hand.

Viruses are tiny programs introduced to computers either as a prank or vandalism. They can attach themselves to other programs and spread through shared software or "electronic mail" systems that link computers.

Mild viruses may flash a message on a user's screen, while "deadly" forms can destroy data or cripple a computer. This virus apparently did its damage by rapidly duplicating itself, thereby slowing computers' processing speed and taking up their memory space.

Many research centers shut down their computers Thursday in an effort to purge the rapidly spreading virus, but not all experts were confident they had eliminated the program, which could linger in electronic mailboxes. In the past, "antidote" programs have been developed to seek out and destroy viruses.

"The very scary thing is that this is a very sophisticated computer program, and shutting them down may not be enough," said Richard LeBlanc, associate professor in Georgia Tech's School of Computer Sciences.

At Lawrence laboratory in Berkeley, Calif., computer scientists noticed their computers operating very slowly Wednesday afternoon.

They turned off the machines, flipped them back on again and within 30 seconds the virus was spreading again, said Lynn Yarras, a spokesman at the research center.

The computer problem also was discovered late Wednesday at the Lawrence Livermore National Laboratory in Livermore, Calif. The laboratory's work includes design of the nation's nuclear weapons and key work on the Strategic Defense Initiative, or "Star Wars," program.

However, spokesman Jeff Garberson said the virus affected the unclassified, non-secured computer systems and not the classified national defense system.

At the Los Alamos, N.M., National Laboratory, the virus infected only unclassified computers, said spokeswoman Barbara Mulkin.

Computer experts at the lab were analyzing the situation to determine what damage might have occurred and to find a cure. Ms. Mulkin said that might take a day.

MMH examines its option to buy Clearview

By JANE MARLER DEES
Staff Writer

Midland County Hospital District directors are investigating a possible purchase of Clearview Hospital, a local substance abuse detoxification treatment center, officials confirmed today.

Hospital Board President Gene Abbott said this morning he received word earlier this week that the Camelback-Good Samaritan Group, Inc., will divest itself of the 50-bed Midland facility.

Clearview was built in 1985 on a 10-acre tract of land that had been donated to the hospital district by the Scharbauer family of Midland.

The hospital district allowed Camelback-Good Samaritan in a joint venture to build the facility on the far-west Midland tract, but retained ownership of the land, Abbott explained.

Under terms of the 1985 agreement, the hospital district would have first option to buy Clearview if it were ever sold, Midland Memorial Hospital spokesman Laurie Johnson said.

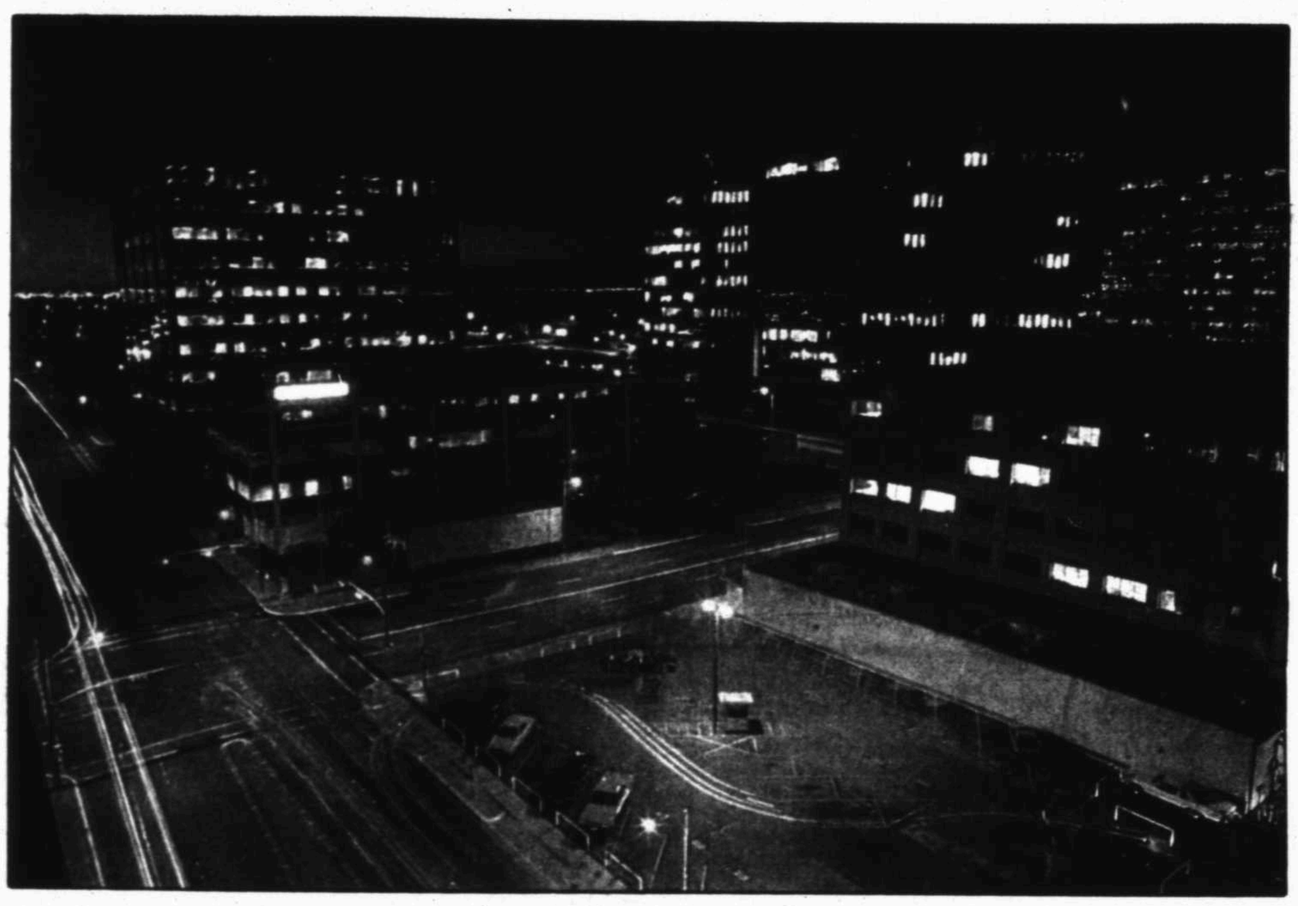

"I am excited about the possibility. It is early ... we're not sure how all this is going to come down, but I hope they (the hospital district) look favorably on it," said Dr. Joe Wolpmann, Clearview medical director and chief executive officer.

"This would be a positive thing for West Texas to be owned and controlled locally," Wolpmann added.

Clearview uses no drugs in its treatment of substance abusers, the medical director said.

That practice brings in patients not only from the Permian Basin, but from as far away as Dallas, Houston, San Antonio and eastern New Mexico.

The lights in downtown Midland belie rumors that the oil price decline left Midland deserted. City officials stressed that message earlier this week in New York while meeting with financial bond rating services.

City lobbies firms for strong bond ratings

Midland plans to issue $4.3 million in bonds by month's end as part of a public safety bond package approved by voters in September.

And, earlier this week, city officials unveiled a prospectus to Standard & Poors and Moody's, two New York City-based financial bond rating services which will eventually make their own recommendations to investors.

City Finance Director Troy Gifford said the purpose of the visit was to answer questions about the offering and the state of the economy in Midland from people who live their.

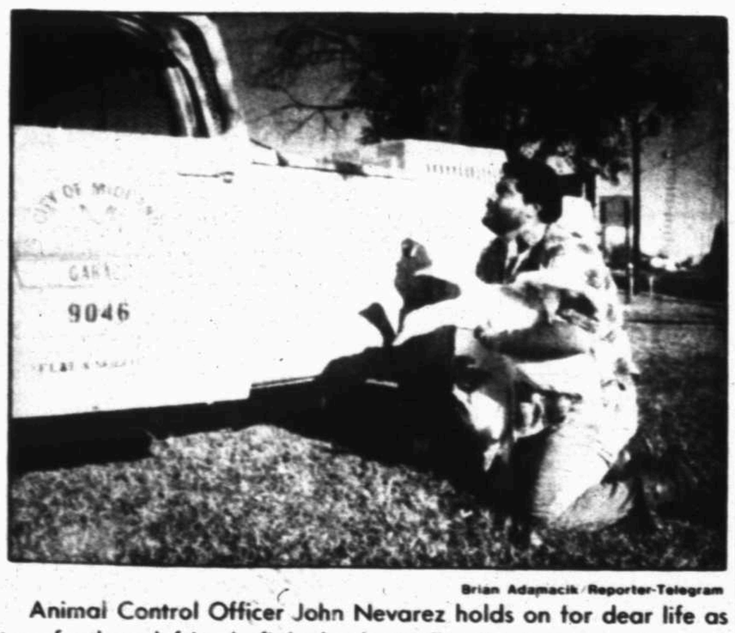

Gifford, along with Mayor Carroll Thomas, City Manager Fred Poe and Deputy City Manager Mike McGregor, spent 24 hours in New York Monday addressing questions from both financial houses.

"We wanted to dispel any myths about Midland as a place of blowing tumbleweeds and idle pumpjacks. Both agencies had a number of questions which we clarified," said Gifford.

Thomas said the greatest concern posed by both services was the county's drop in property valuations, which peaked at $3.5 billion in 1985 but was listed at $2.85 billion as of 11 months ago.

"Things have improved (since 1985)," said Gifford. "Housing has come up a bit. We told them we have 1,100 homes on the market today, compared to 2,500 a year ago ... we simply addressed those questions."

Animal Control Officer John Nevarez holds on for dear life as two feathered friends fight back. Midland's duck roundup was conducted at the city's Wadley-Barron Park on A Street today.

Park's population tries to duck the law

Midland's duck flock must have felt like fugitives from justice.

There they were, just minding their own business, when a slew of trucks, nets and animal control officers descended on their peaceful habitat.

With that, some 70 ducks that now inhabit Wadley-Barron Park on A Street were off and floating — first left — then right — then up the middle like running backs splitting the line.

Within 30 minutes, the ducks had not only managed to elude their captors, but dump their leader into the pond, boots, wallet and all.

"Well, there goes Plan 96 down the drain ... it's a vicious cycle out there," quipped Coy Willis, director of animal control.

The quarterly ritual to contain Wadley-Barron's duck population began today as a simple match of wits between man and duck.

Slagle looking for eleventh-hour surge

By RICK BROWN
Assistant City Editor

State Democratic Chairman Bob Slagle's prescription for a Dukakis Texas win come Tuesday? Get out the vote and hope for a favorable split in undecided balloters.

Slagle, a Sherman Democrat, came to Midland today on a late-hour West Texas tour with a message: polls show the undecideds and "lightly decideds" are moving presidential candidate Mike Dukakis' way.

Quoting internal state party polls, Slagle noted a six percent switch to the Massachusetts Democrat among white males and a nine percent switch among white women.

He noted that the nine percent figure included seven percent who before had fallen in the undecided column. Two percent had previously said they would vote for George Bush.

"If we're within 4 percent on election day, I think we can take Texas," he said.

"Traditionally, you go into the last 72 hours with 12 percent undecided or lightly decided," he said. Victories for former Gov. Mark White in 1982 and current Gov. Bill Clements in 1986 both hung on the balance of the 12 percent split, he said.

White entered election day in 1982 six points behind, but garnered enough undecided voters to overtake Clements.

But in 1986, balloters in the undecided column "broke two-to-one against us," he said.

Dukakis will have to run strong in East and South Texas and the Gulf Coast and do well in West Texas and the Panhandle to take the state, according to Slagle.

Falling easily into the rhetoric of the campaign, Slagle attributed the Dukakis surge to a voter "backlash" against what he called the "negative" campaign of Vice President George Bush.

"If you run a campaign of big lies, the lies start to blow up in your face," he said. "People say, 'Wait a minute.'"

Among issues that Slagle said voters are reconsidering are gun control, patriotism and crime.

"The Pledge of Allegiance is a symbol of unity," the state Democratic chief said. "Yet they use it to divide us."

Texas Democrats hold out hope

DALLAS (AP) — The Kennedy-Johnson bumper stickers have surfaced after 28 years of dormancy as Democrats hope for a miracle on Election Day similar to the one that gave them the White House in 1960.

"I hope we're not all fooling ourselves," said George Christian, an Austin consultant who served as Lyndon Johnson's press secretary.

Fragments of statistics and a nostalgic history of unexpected election outcomes keep Democratic hopes alive that vice presidential candidate Lloyd Bentsen can deliver its 29 electoral votes for running mate Michael Dukakis.

Kennedy and Johnson won the state by only 30,000 votes, and in 1982, Democrat Mark White won the governorship over Republican Bill Clements by six points even though he was trailing in the polls by the same margin the day before the election.

"I think we're gonna do it," says Bob Slagle, the Texas state Democratic chairman.

Attorneys file briefs saying FBI harassed Hispanic whistle-blowers

EL PASO (AP) — Three Hispanic FBI agents are asking a federal judge to make the FBI stop harassing and intimidating them for participating in a successful racial discrimination suit against the bureau.

FBI officials deny the harassment allegations.

The 32-page document filed Thursday in U.S. District Judge Lucius Bunton's court contains affidavits from three Hispanic agents who contend they have been singled out and treated unfairly since Bunton ruled Sept. 30 that the FBI discriminates against Hispanics in promotions and job conditions.

Bernardo "Matt" Perez, who initiated the class-action lawsuit in January 1987, contends in his affidavit that many of his duties as No. 2 man in the El Paso office have been taken away, and that his boss has intimidated another agent for talking to reporters about the case.

WEATHER SUMMARY

The Accu-Weather® forecast for 8 A.M., Saturday, November 5

Clear skies anticipated

From Staff and Wire Reports

Clear skies are in the forecast for tonight, according to the National Weather Service at Midland International Airport. The low will dip into the middle 40s and winds will be out of the northwest at 10-20 mph.

Midlanders can expect sunny skies for Saturday. Temperatures will be a little cooler with the high expected to reach only into the middle 70s. Winds from the north will be 10-20 mph.

Thursday's high of 86 broke the old record high temperature of 85 set for that date in 1987 by one degree. The overnight low of 52 was 30 degrees warmer than the record low of 22 set for this date in 1936.

STATE

A cold front extending across the Red River Valley southwestward into the South Plains was expected to move southward across Texas, bringing with it slightly cooler temperatures and clear skies.

The cold front early today extended from near Wichita Falls southwestard to the South Plains.

Clear skies and slightly cooler temperatures are forecast statewide for Saturday although there will be no drastic changes in temperatures.

Lows tonight will be mostly in the 40s and 50s, ranging from the 30s in the Panhandle and mountains of Southwest Texas to about 60 along the coast in South Texas.

Highs Saturday will be in the 60s and 70s across most of West Texas except in the Big Bend area where readings will be in the 80s, and in the 70s and 80s in both North Texas and South Texas.

Patchy fog was reported along the coastal plains early today and it was partly to mostly cloudy over northern sections of the Panhandle and mostly clear over the rest of the state.

Forecasts called for fair skies statewide tonight. It will be breezy is North Texas and West Texas.

Early morning temperatures were in the 40s in the Panhandle, the 50s in the South Plains and mountains of West Texas and in the 60s and 70s over the rest of the state. Extremes ranged from 46 at Amarillo to 74 at Palacios.

Other early morning temperatures around the state included 53 at Wichita Falls, 59 at Fort Worth, 61 at Waco and Austin, 62 at San Antonio, 74 at Houston, 69 at Corpus Christi, 67 at Brownsville, 69 at San Angelo, 51 at Lubbock, 55 at Midland and 68 at El Paso.

NATION

A storm packing at least 6 inches of snow and strong winds moved through the Colorado Rockies today as a tornado downed trees in Florida and showers and thunderstorms fell over much of the Midwest.

Winter Park and Echo Lake, Colo., each received 6 inches of new snow, and an additional 1 to 3 inches was expected.

An advisory for snow and blowing snow was in effect for the northern and central mountains of Colorado. Strong winds were expected to cause blowing, drifing snow in mountain passes.

Hopefuls 'hitting hard' as date nears

Associated Press

George Bush accused rival Michael Dukakis today of "borrowing like mad" to deal with a fiscal mess in Massachusetts, while Dukakis declared he is coming back in the presidential race as voters realize he "will stand up for them."

With the election just four days away, both candidates were hitting hard in campaign stops and in television appearances and advertisements. Polls continued to show Bush with a lead, but Dukakis and his aides said the race was getting closer.

"The test of a good president isn't who comes up with the best commercial," Dukakis said on NBC's "Today" program. "In the last two or three weeks people are getting a much better sense of who Mike Dukakis is, who wants to be president of the United States, and I think that's one of the reasons frankly why we're doing better and closing this gap."

"I think they see in Mike Dukakis and Lloyd Bentsen a very strong team that will stand up for them and I think that's the fundamental issue," he said.

His voice sounded improved from the previous day when it grew hoarse as he spoke at rally after rally.

Bush, meanwhile, traveled to Fairfield, Conn., to take a poke at fiscal problems in Dukakis' neighboring Massachusetts.

The Republican nominee held up a Boston newspaper labeling the fiscal situation "a mess," and he accused Gov. Dukakis of "borrowing like mad" and "kiting checks."

State officials said this week they were planning to cut state spending to head off a potential budget deficit after learning of a revenue shortfall in October.

Bush said Dukakis got into the situation "by overspending. How did he get out of it, or try to? By raising taxes a total of $180 million this year alone. ... Now he's borrowing like mad, writing checks that he doesn't even have enough money in the bank to cover."

Dukakis was campaigning in New York and Kentucky and ending the day with a walk in Chicago's torchlight parade, a traditional show of Democratic Party unity.

Bush was traveling to four states today — Connecticut and the industrial battlegrounds of Ohio, Michigan and New Jersey.

According to sources in both parties, Republican and Democratic tracking polls showed Bush leading nationally by a margin of seven to nine percentage points, within the range of the nationwide surveys released earlier this week. Democrats contended there was still opportunity for Dukakis, with sizable numbers of undecided or weakly committed voters.

By states, private polls pointed to a significant Republican lead in Ohio; Dukakis held a narrow margin in one New York survey and a slight advantage in Washington where he was ahead by 10 points in a statewide poll with a five point margin of error. Both Illinois and California, where Dukakis will wind up his campaigning, were rated close.

Meanwhile, the Bush campaign announced late Thursday that the eighth person connected with the vice president's ethnic council had resigned his post following reports of ties to Nazi or anti-Semitic groups.

In Washington, Bush spokesman Mark Goodin confirmed reports that during World War II Akselis Mangulis had been a member of the Latvian Legion, a group which had connections to the German SS, the quasi-military unit of the Nazi Party.

Mangulis had been chairman of Latvians for Bush.

Across the country there was yet another round of new television commercials.

Dukakis was airing a tough new ad that zeroed in on Republican vice presidential candidate Dan Quayle. It shows the most remembered moment of Quayle's debate with his Democratic counterpart, when Bentsen said, "Senator, you're no Jack Kennedy." On the screen appear the words, "President Quayle?"

The Republican Party aired a new ad featuring President Reagan and the boast of good times.

"America is at peace, and we are prosperous once more ...", the president says. "I hope you will vote Republican — up and down the ticket — to continue the change we began in 1981."

Slagle stuck by Democratic charges that a Bush commercial that featured Massachusetts convicted murderer Willy Horton was racist.

"If Willy Horton had been a white guy who raped a black woman, do you think he would have been featured in a national campaign by the Republican Party," Slagle asked.

Looking at the controversial Texas Supreme Court chief justice race, Slagle said he stands behind television advertisements that Sen. Phil Gramm labeled "sleazy" earlier this week.

Gramm referred to a CBS "60 minutes" expose last year that asked if justice is for sale in Texas and featured prominently former Texas Chief Justice Ted Robertson, who now is running against a Clements' appointee, Tom Phillips.

Robertson in political advertisements has turned the charge around on Phillips, accusing the incumbent of accepting special interest contributions of his own.

"If the people in Texas knew it was Judge Robertson who was referred to in that "60 Minutes" piece, they would have thrown him out of office on a bi-partisan basis," Gramm said.

Slagle today called the "60 Minutes" expose "a bunch of crap," and said Mike Wallace, the reporter featured in the piece, is a "provacateur," he said. "I don't think he's a newsman at all.

"Tom Phillips has rounded up more money than our candidate for Chief Justice, and more than half has come from major law firms and the insurance industry," Slagle said.

The Slagle tour, which was slated to procede to Lubbock and then Amarillo today, also provided an opportunity to shore up support of local Democratic candidates.

The party chairman in a prepared statement included a plug for State House of Representatives, 69th District candidate Johnnie Lou Avery.

"She has friends in places who can help her represent this area very effectively," he said of the Big Spring businesswoman running from a district that includes Upton, Howard, Crane, Ward, Winkler, Jeff Davis and Reeves counties.

STATE

"I think it's going to be a squeaker, very close, but we're going to win it," insists Bentsen.

Dukakis picked Bentsen as his running mate in hopes of repeating the Kennedy-Johnson feat of 1960. But the immensely popular man from McCook, Texas, has had trouble transferring some of his popularity to the Massachusetts governor.

Going into the final weekend of the campaign, the closest recent poll puts the ticket seven points behind Republicans George Bush and Dan Quayle, while others show a margin of more than 20 points.

Democrats, who have never won the White House without winning Texas, cling to the lowest number. They believe a strong get-out-the-vote program can make up the difference, and cite Bentsen's strong political organization in the state.

"This election isn't going to be won or lost now by Michael Dukakis or Lloyd Bentsen. It's all in the turnout," said Ann Richards, the Texas state treasurer.

Tom Cosgrove, the Dukakis-Bentsen campaign chief in Texas, even suggests that the opening of hunting season last weekend may help the Democrats because some of the gun owners who oppose Dukakis may be out hunting on Election Day.

"When you were looking at 15 points down, even nine or seven is a big improvement," said Christian, who has been advising Bentsen on the campaign.

DUCKS

Passing motorists may have been apalled at the sight, but according to city officials, the A Street sanctuary can only sustain 25 ducks at one time or risk the prospect of killing the pond and its habitants in the form of salmonella poisoning.

"We have all kinds of birds that fly through here and decide to stop in," said Willis, "But this pond can't handle that many."

The city's other fear is for those that leave the pond and attempt to cross A Street. While the roadway is clearly marked with duck crossing signs, Willis said a number of birds unwittingly attempt a jaunt across the busy thoroughfare only to meet fate in the form of a bumper.

So there was Willis and his crew of six conducting a roundup at the A Street Corral. Only the ducks didn't see it that way.

Having failed to net the birds on water, it only seemed logical to get the mallards on equal footing — namely land.

After dragging their submerged canoe back on land, the crew regrouped, loaded back in the boats, and resumed the chase.

This time, seven of the ducks were outsmarted while making a mad dash for Harvard Avenue. Some headed for the haven of a nearby porch, another took refuge under a parked car. "Yeah, we've hit the bonanza now," chanted Wills, carrying one of the orange-beaked critters back to an awaiting cage.

Once the great duck roundup is completed, city officials say they intend to turn the birds loose in habitats outside Midland that have the resources to sustain them. Willis said his department already has a waiting list of farmers and others eager to adopt the ducks.

Animal Control Officer Tommy Greenwood said population growth in the pond is not uncommon. "Some of these wild ducks fly over, see other tame ducks in the pond and decide to stay."

Chuck Swallow, administrative assistant for parks and recreation with the city, said the control officers could get the job done a lot faster if the city would invest in a $2,400 net gun — a gun he says is capable of instantaneously casting a screen over the water.

Animal control officials estimated that to capture just seven ducks, it cost the city an average of $27.50 per bird. "In terms of savings, we really do need that gun," said Swallow, adding the department has even gone so far as to ask for private donations.

By 9:30 a.m., the crew had captured just eight birds.

FBI

An agent in Miami says in his affidavit that he needs psychiatric care for a traumatic stint as an undercover foreign counter-intelligence agent, but that the bureau has refused to grant security clearance to a psychiatrist outside the FBI.

An Albuquerque agent contends in his affidavit that his gun and car were stripped from him under the pretext of a medical condition.

FBI spokesman Gregory Jones, told of the allegations Wednesday, said from FBI headquarters in Washington that "any intimidation or retaliation would be illegal and intolerable, and would result in an FBI inquiry."

The three agents who submitted the affidavits testified in the two-week, non-jury trial before Bunton in August. The 311 Latino agents who joined the suit successfully argued that the FBI assigned them less-desirable jobs, promoted them too slowly and didn't give them the recognition they deserved for their successes.

BOND

Currently, Midland's general obligation bonds are rated at AA- by Standard & Poors and Aa through Moody's, while the city's revenue bond rating stand respectively at A+ and A.

Thomas said he expects to receive word on the city's rating status sometime next week, but acknowledged he was not certain whether or not those ratings will be lowered given the general status of the oilpatch.

"They're concerned about this whole part of the country," said Thomas. "We hope we were able to reassure them that Midland is in good financial condition. They were generally pleased with our cash reserves in relation to the general budget."

As a rule of thumb, the city has kept reserves on hand equal to 25 percent of the $30 million general fund.

Gifford said the city expects to "move quick" on the issuance, which is being marketed and advertised through Abilene-based First Southwest & Co., which also is handling the sale.

"It's a relatively small issue," said the finance director, who expects the high bidder to be a midwest financial institution either out of Chicago or St. Louis. "But I wouldn't be totally surprised to see NCNB (Texas National) bid on them."

Following a 30-day comment period, the city's is expected to accept a bid sometime around Nov. 22 in anticipation of completing the sale by Dec. 29.

Midland voters approved the $4.3 million public safety issue on Sept. 17. The city will spend $2.5 million on a digital trunking system; $1.15 million for additional electronic equipment, including a computer-aided dispatch system as well as a systems consultant; $1 million ($750,000 of which is a carryover from a previous bond election) for a centralized communications center; and $350,000 for the purchase of mobile data terminals.

CLEARVIEW

The hospital, which usually has 60 percent of its beds occupied at any given time, also works with industry's substance abuse problems, Wolpman said. Mobil Oil Corp. once sent one of its employees to Clearview all the way from Scotland, Wolpmann said.

Clearview, a 36,500-square-foot facility, opened on Oct. 3, 1985, after having been built at a cost of $4.3 million.

It is unclear at this time what the purchase price on the substance abuse hospital may be, Mrs. Johnson explained.

The joint venture agreement designated a future sale price based on a specific formula, she said.

Abbott said today he was unsure how the hospital district — currently facing severe financial shortfalls due to skyrocketing indigent care costs — would pay for the Clearview purchase.

The hospital district, which provides a small amount of indigent care treatment at Clearview, will not purchase the facility unless it is "financially viable," Abbott said.

Financial options the district may look into include assuming the facility's current note or borrowing the money, Abbott explained.

Payment of any district financial obligations would likely come from Clearview operations, the board president added.

Under the district's "source of funds" policy, Midland Memorial Hospital, a tax-exempt entity, is currently satisfying a hospital district bond debt that resulted from hospital renovations several years ago, Abbott explained.

The district has 30 days to make a decision on the purchase. However, under terms of the joint agreement, the hospital district also has the option of matching the first outside offer made on Clearview.

VIRUS

At Stanford University in Palo Alto, Calif., the virus was "mainly just slowing down systems and slowing data," said Bob Beyers, a school spokesman.

"The developer was clearly a very high order hacker," or computer buff, said John McAfee, chairman of the Computer Virus Industry Association in Santa Clara, Calif.

"He used a flaw in the operating systems of these computers" to enter the electronic mail system of ARPANET, a computer network established by the Defense Advanced Research Projects Agency, the research arm of the U.S. Defense Department, McAfee said.

ARPANET links nearly every university in the United States, allowing researchers to "communicate data and text very easily," said Bob Finn, a spokesman for the California Institute of Technology.

The virus also infected a network called Science Internet that serves many scientists and research labs, including NASA's Jet Propulsion Laboratory in Pasadena, Calif., said JPL spokesman Jim Wilson.

Also attacked were computers at Harvard University, Boston University, Purdue University, the University of Wisconsin in Madison, Georgia Tech, the Massachusetts Institute of Technology and other major research centers.

The Times reported today that the anonymous caller to the paper said his associate was responsible for the attack and had meant it to be harmless. The caller said the hacker was a graduate student who made a programming error in designing the virus, causing the program to replicate much faster than expected.

The caller said the student realized his error shortly after letting the program loose and now was terrified of the consequences, the Times said.

The Defense Communications Agency set up an emergency center to deal with the virus, the newspaper said.

In September, a former Fort Worth, Texas, programmer was convicted of planting a virus in his employer's computer system.

Vote to join schools with Texas A&M hailed

LAREDO (AP) — A vote to merge three South Texas schools with the Texas A&M University System was praised as a step toward improving life in the economically and educationally deprived southern part of the state.

Directors of the University System of South Texas voted unanimously Thursday to become part of the Texas A&M University System.

Schools that make up the South Texas system are Laredo State, Corpus Christi State and Kingsville-based Texas A&I University.

"It's probably the most important thing that's happened in this part of the state of Texas, ever," said Corpus Christi Mayor Betty Turner.

A lack of professional degree programs and graduate studies has kept South Texas behind the rest of the state economically, she said.

"Our kids move away to go to college and they don't come back," Mrs. Turner added.

President Leo Sayavedra of Laredo State said Thursday, "I think they certainly took a monumental step in trying to improve the educational opportunities for the students of South Texas."

The USST board also voted Thursday in support of establishing a law school at Kingsville. It was not decided, however, whether it favors starting a new law school or moving the unaccredited Reynaldo G. Garza Law School from Edinburg.

"I think the board took two very momentous steps to improve higher education in South Texas today," said Steven Altman, president of Texas A&I.

A&M's regents will vote whether they want to take over the three USST schools on Nov. 21, said A&M System Chancellor Perry Adkisson.

The merger ultimately would be up to the state Legislature, which meets in January.

Adkisson said prior to Thursday's vote that he thought the A&M regents would vote for the merger and "be receptive to the wishes of South Texas."

A&M operates Texas A&M University at College Station, Tarleton State at Stephenville, Prairie View A&M and Texas A&M University at Galveston. Adkisson said A&M would like to increase its presence in South Texas and in urban areas, such as Laredo and Corpus Christi. If approved, a merger could begin as early as next September, he added.

B. Alan Sugg, chancellor of the USST and president of Corpus Christi State, said A&M needed a vote of approval from the South Texas schools before deciding on the merger.

School bus driver critical after shooting

PORT ARTHUR (AP) — A school bus driver allegedly shot in the head by a 10-year-old boy remains in critical condition, hospital officials say.

Russell Jean Hampton was shot in the base of the skull Thursday with a small-caliber handgun, police said. Another bus driver found her slumped over the steering wheel and then called an ambulance.

Ms. Hampton, 40, remained in critical condition early today at St. Mary's Hospital.

A 10-year-old boy described as a "normal, all-around" elementary student was taken into custody later Thursday. The boy, police said, was seen running from the bus shortly before Ms. Hampton was found.

The shooting occurred after Ms. Hampton had dropped off students at Dick Dowling Elementary School and was returning to the district's bus storage barn, police said.

"Apparently this boy had missed the bus earlier in the day and she had seen him riding his bicycle along the road on her way back," said police Lt. J.W. Fontenot. "We don't know whether he was riding his bike to school or playing hooky."

The boy was taken into custody at his grandparents' house, near the site of the shooting. His grandmother had called police.

Police speculated Ms. Hampton had told the boy to get on the bus, with the intention of returning him to school and possibly reporting him for truancy.

Fontenot said the boy also may have been afraid school officials would discover the weapon. A .22-caliber handgun and the boy's bicycle were recovered from the bus.

Insurance panel's director to be placed on leave

AUSTIN (AP) — A key state lawmaker said he is pleased with action taken by the State Board of Insurance to address concerns of mismanagment.

The three-member board Thursday said it will place the agency's chief on leave pending an investigation into allegations of foot-dragging in the largest insurance company insolvency case in state history.

The board also said the Travis County District Attorney's public integrity unit will review the agency's handling of the National County Mutual Fire Insurance insolvency for any possible criminal wrongdoing.

Emerging from an hour-and-15-minute closed session, the board said recent criticism prompted them to initiate the management probe and investigation into the department's delay in taking control of National County Mutual.

During this examination, Commissioner Doyce Lee will be placed on leave, although the details of this move had not been worked out, board members said.

Lee, 47, the commissioner since 1985, said he agreed with the board's decision. "I think it takes the pressure off of me and the board, and the agency can go about its business of regulating the industry. That will give time for the air to clear."

State Rep. John Gavin, D-Wichita Falls, chairman of the House Insurance Committee, supported the board's action. "Most of the problem seems to be a lack of communication within the agency. The left hand and the right hand don't seem to work very well together," he said.

Earlier, state Sen. John Montford, D-Lubbock, called for the board to temporarily remove Lee.

"The State Board of Insurance is failing in its mission to regulate the insurance industry and protect the interests of consumers and policyholders," Montford said. "It is my opinion that the problems with this agency begins with its wasteful management."

Board members praised Lee, and credited him with making the recommendations of conducting an independent audit and contacting the Travis County District Attorney's office. But they said complaints lodged by state lawmakers and consumer interest representatives about the agency forced them to make the move.

"When there's so much publicity and so much allegations, we probably do not have any alternative," said board member David Thornberry.

"For his (Lee) benefit, for ours, for the public in general we do need to get this investigation going," said board chairman Edwin J. Smith Jr.

The board's three members, and Lee, met separately Wednesday with Travis County District Attorney Ronnie Earle. The district attorney's office said it will review the history of the National County Mutual case.

National County Mutual, a Dallas-based company with 125,000 auto insurance policyholders statewide, was declared insolvent last week and taken over by the insurance board.

The debt-riddled company was $54 million in the red and became the largest insolvency of a property and casualty company in state history.

Several lawmakers complained the insurance board's staff had known of the company's problems since at least 1986, and should have moved earlier to protect National County Mutual's policyholders.

In that letter, Montford called for the temporary removal of Lee.

Insurance board members attribute many of the problems to a major reorganization of the agency and rapid expansion of the staff, from about 850 employees to 1,300 in the past 18 months.

The board took no final action on Commissioner Lee, pending advice from the Texas Attorney General's office on how to proceed.

Shamir may have best chance of forming coalition government

JERUSALEM (AP) — Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir's right-wing Likud bloc appeared to be in the best position to form a new government after the final vote count was announced today in Israel's parliamentary elections.

The count released by the Central Elections Committee indicated Likud won 40 seats in the 120-member Knesset, or parliament, and the left-leaning Labor Party won 39 seats, spokeswoman Sarah Yitzhaki said.

The result of Tuesday's vote means neither party has the majority needed to form a government and both parties have been wooing the right-wing religious bloc in an effort to gain control of the Knesset.

The National Religious Party, which has five seats in the Knesset, has pledged its support to Likud, Israeli radio said.

Shamir held bargaining meetings Thursday with two other right-wing religious parties, Moledet (Homeland) and Tzomet (Crossroads), whose support he needs.

Tzomet and Moledet, which won two seats each, favor annexing the Israeli-occupied West Bank and Gaza Strip. Moledet's founder, retired Gen. Rehavam Zeevi, also favors the expulsion of all Arabs from Israel.

Shamir said he would allow more Jewish settlements to be built in the disputed lands but rejected the potential coalition partners' demands for annexation and expulsion of the Palestinian residents.

Zeevi has asked Likud to hold a referendum on the annexation issue as a precondition for his joining a Shamir-led coalition, Israel radio said.

A Likud Cabinet minister raised the prospect that the Labor Party might be invited to join in a government because the religious parties that hold the balance of power were pressing too hard for Orthodox causes.

Labor and Likud now share power in a contentious coalition government.

"The religious parties are presenting many demands and difficult conditions. We will not be able to respond to them all," Moshe Katzav, welfare and labor minister, told the newspaper Hadashot.

Korean radicals bomb U.S. facility

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — Radicals firebombed a U.S. Army facility and a ruling party office and seized a government building today, demanding the arrest of a former president and withdrawal of American troops.

The incidents came a day after thousands of students took part in nationwide rallies against former President Chun Doo-hwan in one of the worst street protests in South Korea in recent months.

Chun has been under public fire for alleged misuse of power, corruption and violation of human rights during his seven-year tenure that ended in February. Chun, a former general, seized power with military backing in 1980.

U.S. authorities said a dozen youths today threw six firebombs into the compound of a U.S. Army engineering installation and fled, shattering windows but causing no injuries.

Radicals have demanded the withdrawal of 42,000 U.S. troops in South Korea as part of their anti-U.S. campaign.

About 20 students hurled firebombs at an office of the governing Democratic Justice Party in the western port of Inchon, shattering windows, police said. No injuries or arrests were reported.

In another attack, on the Office of National Tax Administration in downtown Seoul, five students demanding Chun's arrest seized a third-floor office for a half-hour before being overpowered by police.

Two of the students jumped onto mattresses placed by police on the ground outside the building. Police said the two were slightly injured.

Up to 380 people, mostly police, were injured and about 100 protesters are under questioning after more than 29,000 people took part in anti-Chun rallies across the country Thursday, newspapers reported today.

About 9,200 rounds of tear gas were used against 18,700 firebombs hurled by students, police said, adding that students attacked six government party offices, eight police substations and two government buildings.

Student leaders said today they would continue an anti-government campaign to press for Chun's arrest and punishment for alleged corruption and human rights abuses.

Students also vowed to join another march Saturday to Chun's house, called by dissident groups.

Chun has been under parliamentary investigation on various charges, including his alleged role in putting down a 1980 civil uprising in the southern city of Kwangu. About 200 people died in the military suppression of the uprising.

Radicals are also demanding the overthrow of President Roh Tae-woo and claim the government is a front for military rule. Roh, who has introduced broad democratic reforms, took over from Chun after winning presidential elections in December.

Timely Tips

Helping Your Plants Survive This Winter:
Move your plants to positions where they will get proper light. South sun is stronger in winter and North light is weaker. Don't put sun-sensitive plants close to South windows, and be certain plants in North windows can exist with minimum light. Check plants in South windows periodically to see if they are getting sunburned or are losing moisture too fast. Water more frequently if needed.

Nicaraguan women smuggle goods from Honduras to resell for profit

By WILSON RING
Hearst News and Feature Service

PALO VERDE, Honduras — On a path just inside Honduras, Marta stands stuffing bottles of shampoo and packs of cigarettes into her underwear before she crosses the Guasaule River into Nicaragua.

The ceremony is repeated all around her. Dozens of women struggle to put on as many new clothes as possible while hiding other goods in the folds.

They all come from a clandestine Honduran market that sells exclusively to Nicaraguans. The medium of exchange is either barter or Nicaragua Cordobas.

The women try to hide their purchases before returning to Nicaragua in case they are searched by Sandinista border guards who often confiscate the contraband.

If they are not seen carrying anything they will attract less attention from the Sandinista guards, they said.

Goods like shampoo, deodorant, and other consumer items have been unavailable in Nicaragua for years, except for on the black market.

"You can't even buy a good pair of underwear in Nicaragua, so they have to come here to buy," said Maria de Jesus Rivera, a Nicaraguan refugee living in Honduras who sells to her countrymen at Palo Verde.

Marta, who asked that her last name not be used, resells the goods at an exorbitant markup. She needs the money to buy medicine for an ailing child, she said.

Palo Verde, in western Honduras not far from the Pacific Ocean, has historically been a smuggling point between Nicaragua and Honduras.

The market sprang up soon after the 1979 Sandinista victory over former Nicaraguan dictator Anastasio Somoza. Merchants said its importance has increased in recent years as the Nicaraguan economy has deteriorated. Approximately 300 people venture here each day to do business.

"If we didn't bring them there wouldn't be any of these things in Nicaragua," Marta said.

Every day at dawn hundreds of Nicaraguans, mostly women, wade across the Guasaule to visit the market at Palo Verde, and three similiar sites up and down the river. Most sell beans, clothing or agricultural products.

Access to the market is controlled by Honduran soldiers. They restrict Nicaraguans from escaping into the interior of Honduras.

The goods most in demand are pesticides and parasite medicines for cattle.

"They get them from the people of the (farm) cooperatives and bring them here to sell," said Marco Solivares, another Nicaraguan refugee who sells at the market.

A Swiss-made insecticide used to control pests on cotton plants is the top product. A Nicaraguan can sell it in Palo Verde for the equivalent of $200. It sells in Honduran agricultural stores for $300.

Cosmetics and women's underwear are the biggest draw for Nicaraguans. The path from the market to the river is littered with boxes of face cream and finger nail polish.

The trip to Honduras is not without risk.

Nicaraguans slip down to the river's edge in the predawn darkness, avoiding Sandinista patrols, and cross at first light. The Nicaraguan side is littered with land mines that have killed and maimed dozens.

Many fear being caught by Sandinista border guards on return who will confiscate their belongings and in some cases jail them for smuggling.

Honduran soldiers come to the river's edge but Sandinista border guards are nowhere to be seen. The vendors say the Sandinistas do not want to stop the flow of people across the river.

They also want the hard-to-find goods.

Unifem funds 'woman-power' projects in developing nations

New York Times News Service

UNITED NATIONS — Until recently, the women of Njau used to spend four hand-blistering hours a day pounding millet into flour, their staple food.

Today this is done in five minutes by the village milling machine.

Njau is one of 15 Gambian villages that have received milling machines under a project of the United Nations Development Fund for Women, commonly referred to as Unifem.

The diesel-powered mills, costing about $1,400 each, have been turned over to village management committees. The communities have five years to repay their loans to Unifem for use as a revolving fund for other villages.

Or they may apply to keep the money to purchase more machinery.

Thanks to the mills, the Gambian women have time to grow more food, which can be marketed for cash income. But they still have to spend three hours a day threshing and dehusking the grain. Now they say that what they need is a thresher.

"We have requests for similar time-and-labor-saving technology from 22 other African countries," the Unifem director, Margaret Snyder said in an interview recently.

"Women all over the world want greater access to technologies and skills to make their lives healthier and more productive."

But with its present funds, Unifem cannot begin to meet all the worthwhile demands for credit, said Ms. Snyder. Unifem has $7.5 million, totally committed to this year's projects and hopes to raise as much as $20 million next year, in voluntary contributions from governments, individuals and nongovernmental organizations, she said.

Ms. Snyder based her expectations on the fact that more governments were expressing interest in co-financing projects like the Gambian project, which was co-sponsored by Italy.

At a two-day pledging conference this week, Unifem received $4,707,525 in pledges, or 20 percent more than last year, Snyder said. The largest contributor was Norway, pledging $1,212,121, followed by the United States with $800,000, or nearly three times last year's pledge.

Ms. Snyder said she expected to achieve the goal for 1989 through government donations for specific projects and nongovernmental contributions.

To get more aid, Unifem recently appointed Phoebe Muga Asiyo, retired Member of Parliament of Kenya, to a job it calls goodwill ambassador. She is to travel widely to contact governments and legislators and encourage them to contribute more.

Set up a decade ago to provide women in low-income countries access to technological and financial resources, Unifem has supported more than 400 projects, about 200 of them ongoing.

The fund works in partnership with the United Nations Development Program and with help from other specialized agencies on some projects.

Ms. Snyder said another objective of the organization was to insure that both women and men take part in large-scale development programs.

Among Unifem's most effective projects, she cited these:

— A program to train 400 Kenyan women in fish processing, marketing and management by providing them with two cold storage vans and equipment for smoking and drying fish.

— The establishment of a marketing center for 53 women's groups in the rural Indian provinces of Bihar and Uttar Pradesh with training in design and product development, management, marketing and sales of textiles, handicrafts and other items.

— Small dairy farming cooperatives involving 400 women from eight Bolivian communities, established by building a milk storage center and providing instruction on fodder improvement and animal health.

— Teaching the women of San Miguel, the Philippines, to become entrepreneurs through the establishment of a swine-breeding program.

She said that women were the sole providers for one-third of all households and two-thirds of the poorest households worldwide and that they produce more than 60 percent of the food consumed locally in low-income countries.

Maldivian troops seek mercenaries

Indian paratroopers back island government

COLOMBO, Sri Lanka (AP) — Loyalist soldiers backed by Indian paratroopers searched today for mercenaries who tried to overthrow the Maldives government in a surprise attack that left at least 12 people dead, officials said today.

President Maumoon Abdul Gayoom said his government had the situation under control, and Indian Prime Minister Rajiv Gandhi said he hoped to start withdrawing his paratroopers later in the day.

The people of Male, a small coral atoll that is the capital of the archipelago 475 miles southwest of India, emerged from their houses as hundreds of Indian troops patrolled the streets where the coup attempt took place Thursday.

"The situation is back to normal. The attackers have fled," said Ahmed Abdullah Aziz, Maldivian high commissioner in Colombo. "A joint Indian-Maldivian search operation by boat is on, combing all islands in search of the raiders in case some are hiding."

Radio Male announced five mercenaries were captured before they could leave the atoll in their boats. No additional details were immediately available.

The mercenaries were thought to be Tamils, fighting a separatist war against the Sinhalese-dominated government in Sri Lanka, and were recruited by followers of an ex-president of the Maldives, said diplomatic sources in Colombo, 500 miles northeast of Male.

In New Delhi, India's capital, Gandhi told Parliament the mercenaries were hired by "disgruntled Maldivians living outside the country."

He said no Indian troops were injured.

"Our troops have carried out their assigned take," Gandhi said. "The president and the government of the Maldives are secured, and we hope our troops will begin withdrawing today."

Gayoom, who appealed for India's help after the foreign gunmen attacked the presidential palace in a pre-dawn raid Thursday, went on radio today, urging calm and thanking God for delivering his country from violence.

In his radio address, the 50-year-old leader also thanked Gandhi for dispatching troops in the Maldives' hour of need. Gayoom noted he survived three coup attempts since he was elected to office in 1978, but he gave no indication who was behind the latest attempt.

The top Sri Lankan diplomat in the Maldives, High Commissioner Mohammad Ali, said about a dozen people died during the clashes between the hired gunmen and Gayoom's 1,200-man lightly armed troops.

Diplomats and residents estimated 150 mercenaries shot up the presidential palace and other government buildings with bullets and rocket-propelled grenades.

Aziz said the number of deaths was "definitely less than 20" but could not give an exact figure.

Other diplomatic sources, speaking on condition of anonymity, said Gayoom's National Security Force reported that three of its men were killed and six to eight wounded but the number of mercenary casualties was uncertain.

Today is the weekly holy day when most businesses and shops close in the Moslem nation. Mosques were open for prayers as life started to return to normal in Male, a town of 55,000 people.

Radio Male resumed broadcasting at 7 a.m. (9 p.m. EDT Thursday) today for the first time since the mercenaries attacked the presidential palace and took over the radio station Thursday.

Diplomatic sources and a Sri Lankan military official in Colombo said Tamil guerrillas were recruited with promises of cash by an agent of former President Ibrahim Nasir, who ruled from 1968 until he fled to Singapore after stepping down in 1978. His supporters were blamed for the previous coup attempts.

Radio Male said 700 Indian paratroopers were on Male after landing Thursday night on Hulule island, a 10-minute boat ride away. An Indian navy ship was standing by offshore, the radio added.

Throughout the day Thursday, sporadic exchanges of gunfire were heard between the attackers and the Maldives' National Security Force. But Male residents said they had heard no gunfire since midnight Thursday.

Gayoom has tried to chart a political course of non-alignment with the superpowers for his country, which lies near major shipping lanes leading to the oil-rich Persian Gulf. But when he came under attack, he appealed to India, the United States and Britain for help.

Italy fighting massive abuse of illegal drugs

MODENA, Italy (AP) — Parishioners found moistened sponges in the holy water fonts recently at Modena's 12th century Roman Catholic cathedral. Archbishop Santo Quadri apologized, explaining that the fonts had to be drained to stop drug addicts from using them to rinse their needles.

Drug addiction, said the archbishop, "is one of the heaviest crosses Italy is carrying today."

In the first nine months of this year, 500 deaths in the country have been attributed to heroin overdoses — more than all of 1987.

Former Premier Bettino Craxi said Mafia-controlled drug smuggling and killings will soon reach "South American proportions" in Italy and called for life sentences for pushers.

Police seizures of heroin have risen from 11,440 ounces in 1987 to more than 14,080 ounces so far this year. The use of cocaine, once reserved for the wealthy, is booming, with police seizing more than 17,600 ounces this year, compared to 14,472 ounces in all of last year.

Drug pushers and users have been growing younger every year. A common urban sight has been police and sniffer dogs inspecting students' bags at the gates of high schools. On the first day of school in September, 113 drug peddlers were picked up across the country while lurking outside school buildings.

The drug explosion has also stoked the spread of AIDS, which can be transmitted through dirty needles, turning Italy into the second worst affected country in Europe behind France.

According to the World Health Organization, most of Italy's 2,233 AIDS victims have been heroin addicts.

The spread of drugs has been most spectacular in the rich north, home of high-tech companies, sleek factories and many of Italy's estimated 300,000 heroin addicts.

The communist municipal government in Modena, where Ferrari racing cars are made, has started subsidizing rehabilitation clinics and methadone substitution programs. Opera star Luciano Pavarotti, a city native, has performed free for anti-drug benefits.

In the neighboring Lombardy region, which accounts for nearly one quarter of the heroin deaths, the city of Milan has put drugs just behind motor vehicle traffic as a top municipal priority. City workers have been detached to scoop up 3,000 to 4,000 discarded syringes daily from streets and parks. In Rome, a similar municipal service has collected close to half a million in the past year.

Because of the Sicilian Mafia and the Camorra crime organization in Naples, Italy is considered one of the main international shipping points for heroin to the United States and Europe.

For years, the gangs largely refrained from selling on their home turf out of a sense of honor. But more and more drugs are being distributed at home because of a glut in other markets, according to the Italian Interior Ministry.

Italy's current drug law was passed in the wake of the more lenient atmosphere of the 1970s. It penalizes peddling while allowing possession of "modest quantities."

Sociologist Saverio Vertone charges that the law has turned every buyer into a potential pusher.

"Parliament followed the prevailing winds at the time," said Vertone. "Even LSD was considered OK for personal consumption."

Vertone has joined the chorus of Italians who are demanding tougher measures in the drug war.

Making concessions to terrorists wrong

More of those old disquieting rumors are back again — especially after the recent taped appearance of kidnapped American hostage Terry Anderson. The indication apparently is that the United States and Iran may be indirectly negotiating the release of the nine Americans still held prisoner in the Middle East.

Denials by President Reagan and others in the administration are couched in careful language. It seems possible, based on continuing reports, that intermediaries representing Washington and Tehran may well be discussing the fate of all 14 hostages held by pro-Iranian terrorists in the Mideast.

President Reagan must be greatly tempted to conduct such negotiations for three reasons — his previous hostage maneuvering came off so badly, a long and agonizing bitterness over the torturous murder of CIA station chief William Buckley by the terrorists, and the hope he may crown his last days in the White House by freeing the hostages.

International speculation about such talks increased recently when Prof. Mithileshwar Singh was released by his terrorist captors. This added to earlier rumors of negotiations when the Iran-Iraq truce was declared and direct peace talks began.

There are even rumors that George Bush and Michael Dukakis may have sent emissaries to discuss the hostages with Iranians.

All of this is disquieting because the Iranians and the terrorists have made it abundantly clear that they will not free the hostages without receiving something in return. The terrorists want some of their fellow torturers and killers freed in Kuwait and elsewhere. Iran has another list of demands.

As the entire hostage-Iran-arms-money mess has made so crystal clear, there is no end to the price of ransom. There will always be more threats, more hostages, more demands, and higher prices.

The reason to be tough — to demand the unconditional release of the hostages — is that is the only way to halt terrorism. Realistically we must acknowledge that the present hostages must suffer. That is tremendously regrettable. However, those who hold them must learn there is a limit to terror and murder. Otherwise, we are no longer a civilized world.

JACK ANDERSON

Federal workers hit campaign trail

WASHINGTON — American taxpayers have paid the salary for at least one of George Bush's key campaign advisers, and several Massachusetts state officials have bailed out of their government jobs temporarily to campaign for Michael Dukakis. These arrangements aren't seemly but they are legal.

Jack Anderson

Candidates who drag their staff people along on the campaign trail step into a gray area. The Hatch Act is supposed to keep politics out of the federal workplace, but it has one big loophole. It does not apply to anyone paid out of the president's executive budget, and that includes the vice president's staff.

Lower-level bureaucrats, and state government functionaries walk a thin line when they campaign for their bosses. Some take unpaid leaves of absence, but then taxpayers are left to wonder who is minding the store. Staffers who are careful to decline a paycheck while on the campaign trail could still take advantage of public resources back at the office — secretarial time, postal privileges, supplies and telephone lines.

Craig Fuller, Bush's White House chief of staff, has made no secret of his work on the campaign. Fuller has traveled with the Bush entourage and has been featured in story after story as a campaign kingpin — all the while collecting his annual salary of $89,500.

Democrats are not innocent on this score either. At least a dozen Massachusetts officials took unpaid leaves from their state jobs to work on the Dukakis campaign. Only one, Department of Welfare Commissioner Charles Atkins, is still earning a state salary. He took six weeks of his vacation to work for Dukakis, the Quincy Patriot Ledger recently reported.

The last time the Democrats had the luxury of being the incumbents in the White House was 1980. Former Vice President Walter Mondale told our associate Stewart Harris that the Carter White House had guidelines to keep government employees out of the campaign.

But a small contingent of key White House aides traveled with Carter and Mondale, according to Mike Berman, a Carter White House aide who now works on the Dukakis campaign. Berman was in charge of keeping the campaign expenses separate from government business. When it came to the White House staff, Berman said the line got fuzzy, and White House aides occasionally stuck their fingers into the campaign. Staying out of a national campaign is next to impossible for political animals, Berman explained.

In 1980, Richard Moe was Mondale's vice presidential chief of staff. He stayed back in Washington during the campaign.

Fuller, on the other hand, is rarely away from Bush. When we asked about Fuller's involvement in the campaign, a Bush spokesman at first claimed that Fuller limits his work on the road to White House business. Then the spokesman contradicted himself, saying Fuller's work on the campaign has been checked out by White House lawyers and is perfectly legal.

Fuller's duties have included advising Bush on speeches, polls and primary results. He also keeps in regular touch with campaign chief James Baker, strategist Lee Atwater and pollster Bob Teeter.

While it may be a legitimate job for government workers to be at the beck and call of their bosses, working at taxpayer expense to get them elected leaves a bad taste.

MANEUVERS CURTAILED — Soviet ships are spending less time out of port, and even when they conduct major naval exercises, those exercises are concentrated close to the Soviet mainland. U.S. Navy analysts figure that the Soviets are responding to America's increasing maritime strategy of deploying more forces near Soviet territory. The Soviets are also responding to the tightening of their own budget. They simply can't afford to show their might on the open seas. One thing that has not changed is the threat posed by Soviet submarines. The Soviets are making significant strides in developing anti-submarine weaponry and sensors. And their undersea craft have grown increasingly more quiet.

MINI-EDITORIAL — Congress has bowed to election-year pressure and elevated the Veterans Administration to a Cabinet-level department. In signing the bill, President Reagan said the change would give the veterans "what they have deserved for so long, a seat at the table in our national affairs." We disagree. What the veterans have deserved for so long is a VA that is competently managed and responsive to their needs. Sitting at the Cabinet table doesn't guarantee that.

LEWIS GRIZZARD

Protect yourself to avoid liberalism!

A letter to the editor in a Florida newspaper asked, "Is liberalism a social disease?"

I had to admit, I didn't know. It certainly has to do with being unfit for the presidency if you listen to George Bush and the Republicans, but I wasn't sure if being liberal also meant being sick.

Grizzard

Always anxious to know more about any and every subject, I decided to phone the office of the surgeon general.

"He's out for a quick smoke," his secretary told me. "Perhaps you would like to speak with his assistant, the assistant surgeon general."

"By all means," I said.

When the assistant attorney general picked up the phone, I wasted little time getting to the subject.

"Is liberalism a social disease?" I asked.

"One of the worst," he said.

"What are the symptoms?"

"There are many," the doctor began. "First, there's being soft on defense. There's also pussyfooting on patriotism, having the uncontrolled desire to allow criminals such as murderers and rapists and welfare recipients out of prison to roam freely about our streets and joining the American Civil Liberties Union."

"So," I surmised, "I guess the Republicans are right. Gov. Michael Dukakis is suffering from liberalism."

"A virulent case," said the doctor.

"How do you think he contracted it?" I wanted to know.

"Probably from hanging around Harvard for too long. That particular part of the country — the Northeast — and that particular place is a festering ground for the disease."

"What about on other college campuses?"

"You very rarely find it there anymore," the doctor went on. "In the '60s there was, of course, an epidemic among young people, but that is changing. Every day a new Young Republicans chapter springs up."

"So, is it possible for some people — not Gov. Dukakis, of course — but for some people, to grow out of the disease?"

"Most people usually shake it off by the time they reach 30 or join a country club, whichever comes first," said the doctor.

"But is it still possible to contract the disease from a carrier at, say, my age, 42?"

"Of course," the doctor said, "but we've learned a great deal about stopping its spread, and there are very few cases of people who weren't previously liberal becoming that way."

"So what should the average American do to make certain he or she doesn't catch the disease?"

"First of all," the doctor explained, "avoid any area where there is a history of heavy Democratic support.

"One should also avoid the editorial pages of most newspapers and never, ever go to see a movie with Jane Fonda."

"You can catch liberalism from watching a Jane Fonda movie?"

"Those of us in the health game," said the doctor, "refer to her as the 'Typhoid Mary' of liberalism."

"One more thing," I said. "No matter how many precautions I take, I'm still likely to come into contact with liberals. What should I do if, say, I have to shake one's hand?"

"Be certain," said the assistant surgeon general, "you're wearing a condom."

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Friday, Nov. 4, the 309th day of 1988. There are 57 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

In 1979, the Iranian hostage crisis began as militants stormed the U.S. Embassy in Tehran. Although some of the captives who were taken would be freed several weeks later, for 52 of them, it was the start of 444 days in captivity.

On this date:

In 1842, Abraham Lincoln married Mary Todd in Springfield, Ill.

In 1879, humorist Will Rogers was born in Oologah, Okla.

In 1880, the first cash register was patented by James and John Ritty of Dayton, Ohio.

In 1884, Democrat Grover Cleveland was elected to his first term as president, defeating Republican James G. Blaine.

In 1922, the entrance to King Tutankhamen's tomb was discovered in Egypt.

In 1924, Nellie T. Ross of Wyoming was elected the nation's first woman governor so that she could serve out the remaining term of her late husband, William B. Ross.

In 1952, Dwight D. Eisenhower was elected 34th president of the United States, defeating Democrat Adlai Stevenson.

In 1966, Soviet troops moved in to crush the Hungarian Revolution.

In 1980, Ronald Reagan defeated President Jimmy Carter by a landslide while Republicans won a majority in the U.S. Senate.

In 1981, the launch of the space shuttle Columbia from Cape Canaveral was scrubbed with 31 seconds remaining in the countdown because of problems with a pair of auxiliary power units.

Ten years ago: Iranian government troops fired on anti-Shah student protesters in front of Tehran University, leaving scores of demonstrators dead.

Back door for Bentsen

I think some of your readers who are undecided about the person for whom to vote in the election next week would like more insight into Sen. Bentsen's method of operation and strategy.

The "Bentsen for Senator" and the "Dukakis-Bentsen" advisers have been calling some of the advertising media and, without identifying themselves directly, asking the media contact, "What kind of advertising schedule is Mr. Boulter running with you? What are the dollar amounts being spent with you? How long will his campaign be broadcasting with you?"

If you are a smart businessman, would you call the advertising media and ask what the competition is doing? I would hope that you would be smart enough to have your own ideas about what you need to do and how to do it without questioning what the competition is doing.

I also hope the people who are telling us that they can run our state and nation better than anyone else would not need this information.

The Beau Boulter campaign advisers have not requested any of this information, of me, on any of the Bentsen deals.

It looks like Sen. Bentsen has doubts about his re-election ... or is it his election? It also makes me wonder about all of the changes they want to make. If they are so smart, why do they want to know what the others are doing?

I do not know Beau Boulter personally, but he now has my vote because of his campaign ethics and for operating his own operation.

All of the above mentioned calls are documented in my desk and available to anyone wishing more on the "back door" political approach by the Bentsen bunch.

'Major issues' aren't!

Tonight I sat and watched "All About Michael Dukakis" on C-Span on national T.V. I became very upset listening to Ms. Barbara Anderson. At first I didn't understand what she meant by her remarks, and then it hit me, and boy what a low blow!

I was so proud of the man next to her. In the beginning he had turned his back, but then he spoke up. I enjoyed his stand and totally agree with you. Thanks!

In reference to the man who thought the Americans should be able to sort the media out — well, to a certain point we can. There are a lot of us who are not out every day, and turn to our T.V., radio or newspaper for news and current events. What we have seen recently has been hard for our understanding and confusing for our decision-making.

The decision I came up with tonight is that Dukakis has made Barbara Anderson mad over her involvement in some of her programs, and now she has set out to get revenge.

As for Dukakis's furlough program that a number of people keep wanting to make a major issue, we in Texas, as well as many other states in the U.S., have a program either exactly or very similar to that of Dukakis. I personally had a very good friend shot and killed by her ex-husband. He had been giving her trouble for quite some time, and the police were very well-informed of the situation, to the point where they followed her home on several occasions. He ended up shooting her five times one night. He was convicted and served a little time, during which he received several furloughs, before being released for good.

Thanks to Dukakis for taking a stand. Anyone in that position could have the same thing happen. I am sick and tired of seeing news reports of the murder. I'm really sad it happened, but I also wonder how many other times it has happened that we, the public, do not know about because no one from those states is running for president.

Thanks to the man who asked Barbara if she could say anything good about Dukakis. Per Barbara, "He's a good family man." I believe that says a lot, plus I believe Dukakis is honest and very concerned with America. We need this!

I am disabled from a very large company. Due to some of the policies of the Reagan Administration, I ended up taking early retirement. For the last four years I have watched more news than in the 58 years prior to that, and at times I am appalled at the things that become "major issues."

Dream was nightmare

I had a dream. My dream was that Dukakis was our president and times were so good that no one had to work for a living. Everyone had plenty of money to spend, a good house to live in, a good car to drive. Our prisons were empty. We were not spending money on military defense. I thought how sweet it is having a president like this. Can this be true? Then I woke up.

I went back to sleep with the dream on my mind. This time I had nightmare. I needed a new house, but no one was building houses. I wanted a new car. No one was making cars. I needed food, but the farmers were all on welfare so there was no food. I needed medical care, but the doctors were also on welfare and all of our convicted murderers had been released from prison and were killing people at will. And when we complained to our president, his reply was everyone had to die sometime. Since there was no defense, Russia was invading this country, and our president repeated what Jimmy Carter said when the Cuban boat people were invading Florida, "open your hearts and welcome them with open arms."

I may never sleep again.

What's Wright doing?

Would Durward Wright and the present Midland County commissioners explain how they spent $1,047 on "Drugs and Medical" under the Juvenile Probation category when probation means living at home?

Juvenile Probation should not be confused with the Youth Home category that spent $17 last year on "Drugs and Medical," but budgeted $775 in Botanical Supplies. Juvenile Probation should not be confused with Adult Probation which spent $10,905 in local telephone calls.

Additionally, Juvenile Probation should not be confused with the "Child Welfare" category which spent $27 last year on "Child Welfare Care." This does not appear to be "bare bones" budgeting.

According to the 1987 budget, it would appear that the commissioners are drugging our juvenile probationers, not spending enough on the medical care for our Youth Home children, budgeting too much for local telephone calls for Adult Probation and as far as "Child Welfare Care" goes, it may as well be nonexistent. Let's face it, $27 for "Child Welfare Care" for a year won't even buy milk.

What is Commissioner Wright doing?

The residents of Precinct 1 need a county commissioner who will make sure their tax dollars are used properly. On Tuesday, Nov. 8th, elect Mark A. Spears county commissioner of Precinct 1 — the true leader for southwest Midland.

Writer should eat words

Reference is made to your sports writer, Bill Grimes, and his recent columns. I believe Grimes owes our Greenwood football team, Coach Bob Purser and his staff, and the loyal Greenwood fans, a sincere and humble apology for his so-called "sports columns" he has written regarding the recent Greenwood/Kermit game, both before the game and about the game.

Grimes must not have attended the Greenwood-Kermit game that was played in Kermit last year! If he would do a little checking around, he would arrive at some very interesting answers.

As you must surmise, quite a few of the residents of the community of Greenwood are extremely upset at the lack of past coverage in your paper, and when something was printed it was mostly negative. You would think that Greenwood was a Class A school 100 miles from Midland instead of being a Class 3A school just 10 miles east of Midland.

While I realize that Greenwood is not a 5A school (not yet, anyway) why does it seem that our sports programs are treated like "stepchildren" in your newspaper? If Bill Grimes had written a column stating that Lee did not stand a chance playing Permian, the Lee fans would have escorted him out of town before the sun set!

Yes Grimes, our Booster Club meets at 7 p.m. on Tuesdays, and I think it would be appropriate for you to show up and literally "eat your words!"

WORLD in brief

Labor factions exchange fire

MEXICO CITY (AP) — At least two people were killed and 15 wounded in a shootout late Thursday between rival labor factions inside a Mexico City luxury hotel, news reports said.

The private Televisa newscast "24 Hours" said about 200 dissident labor activists stormed the Hotel Presidente Chapultepec and began firing at members of the pro-government Mexican Workers Federation.

Televisa said the shootout lasted about a half-hour before police arrived and began arresting labor unionists. The report said about 200 people were arrested.

An undetermined number of gunmen were still inside the hotel Thursday night, the report said, adding that police had surrounded the site.

Two blacks shot to death

PRETORIA, South Africa (AP) — Two black men were shot to death by police during unrest in a Natal Province township, officials said today.

The shootings took place in separate incidents during the night at Mpumalanga, according to a police statement. It said the shots were fired to disperse hostile crowds outside homes in the township, but no details were given about the people involved or the cause of the disturbance.

Natal Province has been the site of a prolonged conflict between members of Inkatha, a relatively conservative Zulu organization, and supporters of the United Democratic Front, a militant anti-apartheid coalition. More than 1,000 people have been killed in violence in Natal the last two years.

In Durban Supreme Court, 11 men linked to Inkatha went on trial this week charged with abducting and killing seven youths in March 1987. The assailants allegedly suspected that the youths were United Democratic Front supporters.

U.S. presence protested

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — Leftist protesters burned an American flag and shouted anti-American slogans in front of the U.S. Embassy today to demand the government refuse to negotiate a new treaty on the U.S. installations in the Philippines.

Protesters, representing several labor and student groups, carried banners reading "No to U.S. Bases" and "U.S. Imperialism — Cause of Poverty."

Police estimated the crowd at 1,000. But reporters said the numbers dwindled in half as rain fell. The group dispersed without incident at the end of the protest.

"Dismantle U.S. bases in the country now," Crispin Beltran, leader of the left-wing May First Movement, told the crowd. "We condemn the talks. ... This is an historic sellout of Philippine sovereignty."

Beltran was referring to a U.S.-Philippine agreement Oct. 17 that reaffirmed the presence of the six bases in this country until September 1991.

The United States agreed to provide $962 million in economic and military aid over the final two years of the agreement. Previously, Washington paid $180 million a year for use of Clark Air Base, Subic Bay naval base and four smaller installations.

Lions devour intruder

HARARE, Zimbabwe (AP) — A man who sneaked into a wild animal park to steal meat was caught and devoured by lions, a Zimbabwe newspaper reported today.

The unidentified intruder's remains were found last week by a warden at the Lion and Cheetah Park near Harare, The Herald newspaper said.

"He got into a cage with four very bad lions," Vivian Bristow, owner of the park, was quoted as saying. She told the newspaper the man was believed to have entered the cage to steal meat left for the animals. There are 32 lions at the park.

All that remained of the man were bones, an identity card and a driving license.

Spy photos now for sale

MUNICH, West Germany (AP) — Soviet spy satellite photographs can now be purchased from a Munich company.

"We use Soviet, U.S., and French satellite photographs for research. You can get them from us, but we're not officially marketing them," Rupert Haydn, managing director of the Company for Applied Remote Sensing (GAF), said Thursday.

Haydn said GAF works closely with the Moscow-based Soyuzkarta company, from which the satellite photographs are obtained.

The GAF staff uses modern digital processing to develop data from satellite photographs for environmental and climate surveillance, forestry, agriculture and other areas of research, Haydn said.

Indian bus ambushed

AMRITSAR, India (AP) — Sikh gunmen ambushed a bus and killed 11 people as they tried to flee in the northern Indian state of Punjab, police said.

The attackers fired on the bus after the driver ignored their warnings to stop near Gujarpura, 27 miles northeast of Amritsar, late, Thursday, police in Majitha district said.

Six people were killed inside the bus and five others were slain after they jumped out of the bus and tried to flee, a police spokesman said.

Cheering crowds greet Thatcher at Polish port

GDANSK, Poland (AP) — To cheers of support from thousands of workers, Margaret Thatcher and Solidarity leader Lech Walesa laid a wreath today outside the Lenin Shipyard to honor Poles slain during 1970 riots.

Shipyard workers in hard hats, their hands raised in V-for-victory salutes, chanted "Solidarity! Solidarity!" as the British prime minister and Walesa placed the flowers at a towering monument near the shipyard.

The monument honors dozens of Poles who died when security forces opened fire to quell riots over food prices.

Mrs. Thatcher is the first Western leader to meet Walesa at the shipyard, where Solidarity began eight years ago.

More than 5,000 people thronged the square around the monument and shouted, "Down with communism!" and "Out with Rakowski!" Prime Minister Mieczyslaw F. Rakowski has ordered the shipyard closed for financial reasons.

"Mrs. Thatcher Don't Let the Shipyard be Closed," read one sign.

"See how many have come despite their efforts to stop them? They have filtered through somehow," Walesa told reporters. "We will not be defeated. This is a monument of hope."

Mrs. Thatcher's aides looked worried when she periodically disappeared into the crowd. There was no sign of communist government officials nor of Polish security police who have followed her throughout most of her three-day visit.

The trip to the shipyard, which the government plans to close Dec. 1, was the high point of Mrs. Thatcher's visit, which ended today. The British leader has publicly endorsed the banned Solidarity trade union federation.

Earlier, cheering, smiling crowds lined the British leader's route, pressing flowers into her hands while she toured the Old Town and Gdansk's reconstructed Long Market, whose ornate architecture reflects the city's wealthy past at the major Baltic seaport of the 16th century.

Mrs. Thatcher was greeted by city authorities when she arrived by plane from Warsaw. She then departed for a ceremony where she joined the country's leader, Wojciech Jaruzelski, to honor Polish defenders of the Westerplatte peninsula, scene of the first shots of World War II.

Before leaving Warsaw, she dedicated a monument in the city's eastern Praga district to British flyers who died trying to ferry food and weapons to the Polish-resistance movement in the failed Warsaw Uprising of 1944. The rebellion against the Nazi occupiers cost 200,000 Polish lives.

The ceremonies emphasized the wartime British-Polish alliance.

On Thursday evening, Mrs. Thatcher told communist leaders they must negotiate with Solidarity as the price for long-term Western aid, including the rescheduling of a $39 billion foreign debt.

Solidarity leaders today praised her for that.

"It was beautiful what she said," senior Solidarity adviser Bronislaw Geremek said in an interview. "For this speech, Mrs. Thatcher gets a great deal of thanks from us."

In Gdansk, Mrs. Thatcher similarly mixed an official and so-called "private" program.

At Westerplatte, as the uniformed Jaruzelski watched, Mrs. Thatcher laid a wreath at the monument to the "defenders of the coast." On Sept. 1, 1939, an armored German ship fired a salvo at the small Polish garrison on the peninsula guarding the bay of Gdansk, the first hostilities of the war.

Mrs. Thatcher then traveled by boat to the city center, changing on the way from a somber black coat to a green one, which aides said represented a "feeling of hope."

She was cheered wildly by thousands of people in the Long Market, the main street of the Old Town. Spectators hanged out of windows of buildings to wave.

Israeli religious parties 'bought' votes with promised blessings

By MICHAEL WIDLANSKI
New York Times News Service

An Analysis

JERUSALEM — Historians may some day record Tuesday's election here as "the day Israel got religion."

The phenomenal success of the ultra-religious parties — they doubled their strength — took professional pollsters by surprise and became the main topic of conversation among stunned Israeli citizens and politicians.

Tami Ayani, a cleaning woman at Israel State Radio, recounted how she decided to switch her lifelong allegiance for the hard-line Likud Party to the ultra-Orthodox Agudah Israel party.

"Two rabbis with beards visited my house and promised me a blessing if I voted for them," said Ayani. Her story was typical of many lower class voters who were buttonholed with promised blessings or curses from the ultra-religious parties.

Ayani said she was then pressed by campaign workers of a second ultra-Orthodox party, the Sephardi-led Shas Party, to switch her vote for a second rabbinical blessing.

"But I told them I couldn't do that because I had already received my blessing, and I was afraid that the first rabbi would send a curse after me," she said.

Ayani's story is not unique. The Shas and Agudah Parties both broadcast blessings and intimated curses in televised campaign ads during the month before the election, and the results were stronger than any could have imagined.

In Israel's lower income development towns — where faith healing and hand-laying miracle cures are common — Likud's traditionally strong vote dipped four percent while support for the ultra-Orthodox parties soared.

Judge Eliezer Goldberg, the head of Israel's Election Commission, was so angered by the ultra-Orthodox tactics that he censored a Shas ad late in the campaign that included the words "God is watching what you do."

In addition, the far right religious parties were aided by charter flights loaded with hundreds of ultra-Orthodox Hasidic Jews who were ordered back to Israel from religious seminaries in the United States so they could vote.

Overnight, Israel's religious community — particularly its ultra-Orthodox branch — reached unprecedented electoral power with 18 of the 120 seats in the Knesset, Israel's parliament.

While religious parties have had positions of influence at various times in Israel's history, this appears to be the first time they have combined such a strong showing with a general weakening of Israel's two major parties, Labor and Likud.

"The next time you come and see me, don't be surprised to find me wearing a skull cap and a beard," said Uri Lubrani, a senior Israeli defense ministry official, only half-joking about fears religious parties would attempt to legislate religious law.

When a reporter telephoned Dr. Noah Zeltzer, a dentist, he quipped: "I thought you were calling to see if I'd taken my daily mikva (religious ritual bath)."

The jokes about enforced religious observance were due to post-election comments by ultra-Orthodox spokesmen that they would use their newfound parliamentary power to enact their religious platforms.

"We will put an end to pornographic posters," declared Rabbi Avraham Shapiro, a member of the ultra-Orthodox Agudah Israel Party. He said his party would also push to enact legislation forbidding "public desecration of the Sabbath" by closing movie theaters and banning soccer games on Friday nights and Saturdays.

While some of these items may not be enacted and Israelis will not be forcibly "born again," many suddenly realized that the electoral success of the Haredim ("God Fearers"), as the ultra-Orthodox call themselves, could have far-reaching implications.

Israel's next government may be dominated by a bloc of ultra-Orthodox Jews who cluster themselves in self-imposed "ghettoes" where "Zionism" is often a dirty word and where many evade service in Israel's army.

While the ultra-Orthodox call themselves "god fearers," many Israelis, including religiously observant or traditional Jews, commonly refer to the Haredim as "dosim" — a snide use of the Yiddish word for "religious."

Peruvian leader faces possibility of military coup

LIMA, Peru (AP) — Alan Garcia, Peru's youthful president, was viewed as Latin America's brightest political star after taking office three years ago, but today his nation is mired in its worst economic crisis of the century.

Garcia's reputation is in tatters, and the country's fragile democracy appears increasingly vulnerable to a military coup.

Since Garcia imposed the harshest austerity program in Peru's history in early September, some critics have gone so far as to demand his resignation, and he reportedly has considered stepping down. More ominously, many public figures are warning of the growing danger of a military takeover.

Cesar Hilderbrandt, editor of the independent news magazine Si, wrote in a recently published open letter to Garcia: "You know, just as other officials of your government do, that a coup d'etat is inevitable if the political and economic climate of today continues to devastate the country."

Peru's armed forces seized power in 1968 and ruled until 1980. They returned to the barracks under heavy public accusations that their leftist policies brought on economic mismanagement.

The 39-year-old Garcia's approval rating among Peru's 21 million people has plunged from an incredible 96 percent during his first months in office to 16 percent in late October, according to the respected polling firm Apoyo.

When he took over, the 6-foot-3 Garcia, leader of the populist Aprista Party, was called "the president of hope" by his followers, most of them impoverished mountain peasants or inhabitants of Lima's sprawling shantytowns.

Nowadays he is accused of being a demagogue, of implementing impetuous, irresponsible policies that have brought economic ruin to the nation, and of failing to curtail the Shining Path movement, whose eight-year guerrilla war has claimed more than 12,000 lives.

Mario Vargas Llosa, the renowned novelist who is expected to be the presidential candidate of a center-right coalition in the 1990 election, recently described Garcia as "the charismatic young man responsible for Peru's most incompetent and ruinous government of the century."

What has Peruvians most upset is the country's unprecedented runaway inflation, provoked, economists agree, by the government's uncontrolled spending, which has spawned a huge fiscal deficit equivalent to 16 percent of the gross domestic product.

Consumer prices soared by 114 percent in September, as much in one month as all of last year. Inflation is expected to exceed 1,000 percent by year end.

Having eaten up the country's hard currency reserves to finance a consumer-hinged economic recovery program and having cut itself off from fresh foreign loans, the government is close to bankruptcy. It has had to resort to selling the Central Bank's gold bullion to pay import bills, but now that is gone.

Finance Minister Abel Salinas said recently the economy would shrink by at least 6 percent this year after growing 8.5 percent in 1986 and 7.0 percent in 1987.

The harsh austerity measures, which included increases in food prices of more than 200 percent and a devaluation of nearly 90 percent, brought economic activity to a halt.

Only four new cars were sold in the country in September because of tax increases that doubled car prices, with the least expensive Volkswagen model now costing $26,000.

From early September until mid-October, Garcia did not leave the inner confines of the Government Palace for 34 straight days, except on one occasion to watch the changing of the guards from the front entrance. That single, fleeting appearance was interpreted by commentators as a gesture to dispel rumors he was no longer in charge.

Garcia was reported to have tried to present his resignation to his Cabinet before the unpopular austerity package was imposed and to have offered the job to Luis Alberto Sanchez, his 88-year-old, blind vice president. Sanchez said later that he told Garcia, "I was elected vice president to collaborate with you, not to take your place."

Political analysts say Garcia's recent behavior has given the impression of a dangerous power vacuum that feeds the fears of a military takeover.

"Even the least informed citizen knows, or senses, that there cannot be a power vacuum in politics. He also knows that in Peru power vacuums are always filled by the military," Manuel d'Ornellas, editor of the opposition newspaper Expreso, wrote in a recent column.

Requirement attracts more qualified police applicants

By PATRICK CRIMMINS
Staff Writer

A requirement that aspiring Midland police officers have at least 30 hours of college is attracting higher quality applicants, according to the department's personnel officer.

Sgt. Ed Nicks, who heads the department's recruiting effort, said 52 percent of applicants passed a written examination given by the department a week ago. The test, the initial step in a grueling process to qualify for the department, usually eliminates the largest majority of prospective applicants, Nicks said.

Last Saturday, of 100 applicants, 77 showed up to take the examination. Of those, 41 passed, and are now eligible to go on to the next step of the process, an agility test.

Saturday's test marked the first time the college hours had been required, and the first time openings had been advertised throughout West Texas.

When the last examination for recruits was given in January, only 25 percent passed, Nicks said.

"I am very, very pleased with the 52 percent that passed," Nicks said. "I was hoping that the college requirement would mean we would have more people pass the first test, and it looks like that has happened."

Nicks said there was also some bad news from Saturday's exam session: of 23 applicants who failed to show up for the test, 15 of those were from Midland or Odessa.

"I just can't understand that, especially given the economy," he said.

Surveying recent applicant groups, Nicks said the department is having only about a one percent success rate in recruiting. That is, out of 100 applicants, only one likely will make it through the recruiting process and the 11-week program at the Permian Basin Regional Law Enforcement Academy.

But the one percent figure is similar to what other departments are experiencing, he said.

The 160-officer department has 10 openings, but four are expected to be filled when four recruits graduated November 18 from the academy. Nicks said he hopes to get the final six recruits from the 41 who passed Saturday's class. But he said the odds are against him.

"I'm under the gun, yes, but all of this stuff takes time," he said. "They have to spend 11 weeks in the academy, and another 15 weeks in the field training officers program. There's just no way to hurry that up."

The six most recent openings were created when two officers retired, and four new slots were funded in the department's budget, he said.

Democrats blame local GOP in alleged voter intimidation

By JULIE HILLRICHS
Staff Writer

Officials of Democratic presidential nominee Michael Dukakis' state campaign are blaming local Republicans for an alleged incident of voter intimidation that occurred in a Midland precinct that traditionally votes Democratic.

Dukakis campaign officials have pointed to a case involving a 67-year-old black woman in Precinct 3, who said Thursday that two men claiming to be Republicans told her that "my vote wouldn't count" if she cast a vote for Dukakis on election day.

The alleged incident occurred Oct. 18 during a visit by the two men to her eastside residence, said the woman, who asked that she not be identified.

Dukakis campaign officials say they will dispatch 400 lawyers statewide on election day to handle allegations of voter intimidation by Republicans.

Robert Hinkle, a Dukakis campaign spokesman in Austin, said Thursday incidences of voter intimidation and mischief during absentee balloting are occurring across the state in minority precincts that historically vote Democratic, especially in the Lower Rio Grande Valley.

"We have complaints about voter interference or dirty tricks being played against minorities and other Texans in counties from South Texas, the Gulf Coast, East Texas and in the Permian Basin. It is beginning to constitute a statewide pattern of intimidation and harassment," Larry Vaselka, state counsel for the Dukakis/Bentsen campaign, said at an Austin news conference Wednesday.

Vaselka said the Bush/Quayle campaign has unleashed "an army of bigoted Republican zealots who are trying to intimidate voters, particularly Democratic voters, in a manner that offends all Texans."

Midland County Democratic Party Chairman Janet Massey, who turned the local complaint over to Dukakis' Campaign '88 headquarters, described the alleged intimidation scheme as an unfortunate incident.

"It's too bad this had to happen in Midland County," she said.

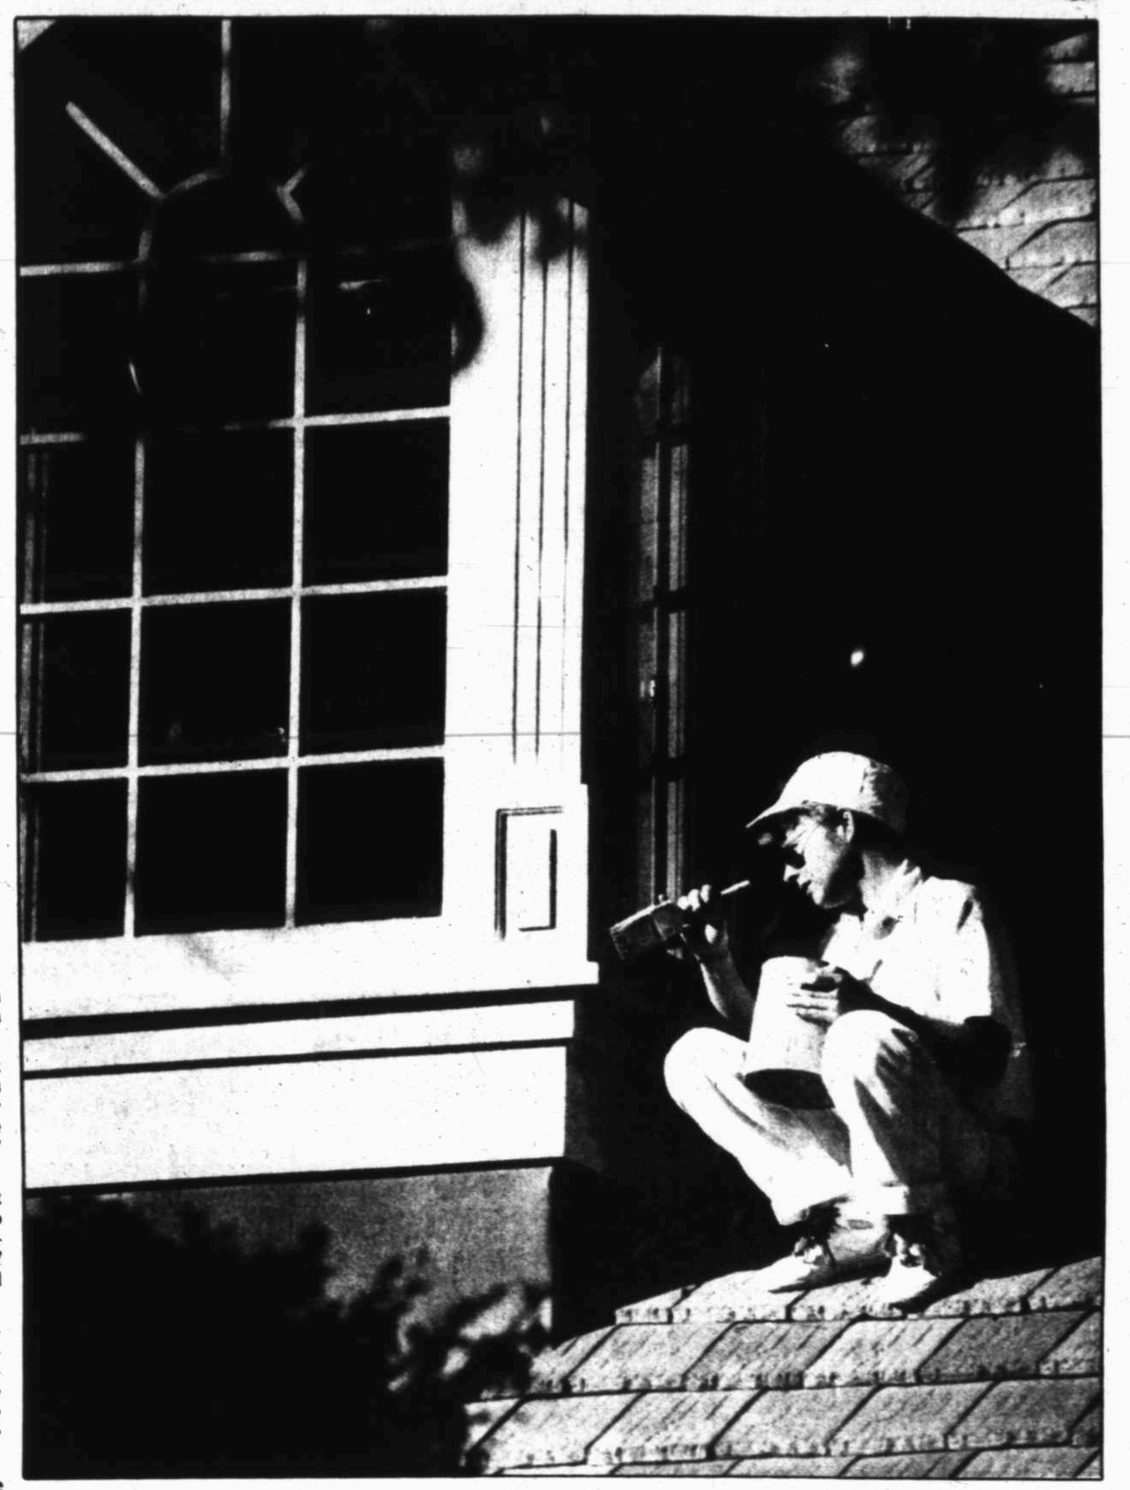

Midland County Republican Party Chairman Bro Seltzer, who said he had no independent confirmation of the alleged intimidation scheme, insisted that no one in the Republican ranks had authorized such a plan in Midland County.

"If it is confirmed, it's important that the public understand that it is not voter fraud," Seltzer said. "Voter fraud has to do with violations of the election code and the integrity of the election process.

"The allegations at the very most would be considered an attempt to influence a voter and attempts to influence a voter are not a violation of either the election code or the penal code," he added.

Seltzer blasted the accusations, describing the information being released and disseminated by the Dukakis campaign as a "last-minute desperation attempt" to motivate voters to go to the polls and vote Democratic.

"The inflammatory nature of the language indicates the lengths to which the Dukakis campaign will go to motivate certain voting blocks. This type of language, especially the use of the word bigot, appeals to the worst voter instincts and has no place in the electoral process," he said.

Justice investigates charges GOP using fear to scare voters

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Justice Department is investigating Democratic charges that Republican advertising in South Texas is an attempt to lower Election Day turnout among Spanish-speaking voters by "injecting an element of fear."

Rep. Jack Brooks, a Beaumont Democrat, prompted the investigation when he asked Attorney General Richard L. Thornburgh to determine whether the Spanish-language radio advertising campaign in the Rio Grande Valley was intimidating voters with its "Big Brother" tone.

"We certainly will look into this complaint and to the extent that there is any evidence that it might be valid, there will be a harsh response from the federal government," said Justice Department spokesman Loye Miller.

Miller said the U.S. attorney in charge of the heavily Hispanic border area would be contacted today and asked to "take a look at the whole situation."

Brooks, who will become chairman of the House Judiciary Committee in January, complained the advertising by the Hidalgo County Republican Party was a "concerted effort" to "inhibit Texas citizens' exercise of their right to vote in next Tuesday's general election."

The ads warn listeners twice that election officials "will be watching" and cite penalties for illegal voting. Brooks said he was concerned the ads could be a violation of federal voting rights laws, which prohibit intimidation or coersion of voters.

"It should be clear that this advertising campaign, accompanied by the repeated 'Big Brother' warning that 'election officials are watching,' was not motivated by the benign goal of discouraging illegal voting, but rather is an obvious attempt to hold down overall voter turnout among Spanish-speaking citizens by injecting an element of fear into the voting process," Brooks told Thornburgh.

Republican officials defend the ads as proper and say they are not an attempt at intimidation.

"I would hope that any law enforcement agency spending time in South Texas concentrates on trying to stamp out the voter fraud we have seen in that region for the past 20 years — voter fraud perpetrated by the Democrats," said Mark Sanders, a spokesman for the Texas campaign of Republican presidential nominee George Bush.

Rep. Bill Richardson, Hispanic coordinator for Democratic presidential nominee Michael Dukakis, Thursday blasted Bush and his campaign for using racist and intimidating tactics.

Bush, appearing on NBC's Today show, denied his campaign had a racist tenor in speeches or commercials.

"I'm fed up with Bush and the Republican Party refusing to own up to these intimidation and racist tactics aimed at Hispanic and black voters," Richardson said, referring to the Hidalgo County campaign and a national Willie Horton furlough ad.

"I challenge Bush to put his 'kinder, gentler nation' rhetoric into practice by taking these clearly intimidating and racist ads off the air," said Richardson, D-N.M.

The Spanish-language ad says: "Voting officials will be watching closely. It is illegal to vote in this election if you are not a U.S. citizen. If you have a green card you cannot vote. If you do you can be subject to up to 10 years in prison, fined up to $5,000 and lose your opportunity to become a U.S. citizen. If you accept money to vote you can get up to five years in jail. Remember, election officials are watching. Paid for by the Republican Party of Hidalgo County, Don Winngate, director."

Area woman's efforts bear fruit

Food bank 'meeting more needs than before'

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

ODESSA — Dolly Neff's mission is ferreting out surplus foods to feed hungry and needy people through more than 100 West Texas agencies — from Big Spring to Alpine.

"More needs are being met than before," said Mrs. Neff, executive director of the Permian Basin Food Bank. "I think they are getting more nutritious foods."

Next week, Mrs. Neff, her staff and volunteers working with the Odessa-based Permian Basin Food Bank will be doing a bit of flag-waving. The occasion will be National Food Bank Week, which highlights efforts of food banks which serve the aged, the ill, the young, the handicapped, and the needy across the nation through agencies and churches.

Since "millions of people are in need of supplemental food assistance" across the nation, said Mrs. Neff, the National Food Bank Week is to focus on "the plight of the needy" and may generate more awareness of the needy in West Texas and elsewhere.

The Permian Basin Food Bank is part of the national Second Harvest network, which solicits surplus foods from major food processors and distributors and distributes the food to more than 200 food banks.

All the while, Mrs. Neff is seeking out additional foods from Midland-Odessa grocery stores and meat processors to help fill the food bank's warehouse and the dinner plates of needy and hungry people.

"We know that there is a lot of good nutritional food that's not salable for some reason," she said.

The food may be nearing the expiration of its ideal sale date, the packaging has changed, or the food container is damaged. "It's still good food," she said.

Dolly Neff

"We work from surpluses," Mrs. Neff noted, "and there's not always enough variety for a good balance." As a result, the food bank "always" is in need of protein food items, such as meat products, beans, and peanut butter. And with grant and donated funds, the food bank buys rice, peanut butter, beans, fish and other items normally funneled to the food bank by Second Harvest and which is needed for balanced diets.

"I'm begging all of the time for food, money and volunteers," Mrs. Neff said. "People really do want to help if you can tell them what they can do."

While Mrs. Neff is rounding up food, operational money and volunteers, she is overseeing the food bank's impending move from a relatively confined and temporary warehouse of 12,000 square feet at 4810 Cargo Road in Odessa to a 17,000-square-foot permanent warehouse donated to the food bank by David Terk of Terk Distributing Co. in memory of Terk's father, Phil Terk, Mrs. Neff said.

"There is a good dock at the front and a railroad spur at the back," she said of the warehouse, which is undergoing a $240,000 renovation, at 1008 E. Second St. in Odessa. The reconditioned warehouse will include a 30,000-cubic-foot freezer-cooler priced at $86,000.

"We were very fortunate to get it," she said of the old warehouse.

Renovation is to be finished by March, when food and household items, from diapers and toilet paper to toothpaste toothbrushes, will be transferred from the temporary warehouse to the renovated warehouse.

At 2 p.m. next Wednesday, Midland Mayor Carroll Thomas and Odessa Mayor Don Carter will read proclamations extolling food banks at the site of the new warehouse. A tour of the warehouse, now "in the raw," will follow the ceremony, Mrs. Neff said.

The Permian Basin Food Bank distributed food, at a 10 cents a pound, to the more than 100 people-serving agencies in West Texas. In Midland, those agencies range from the Blessings for Obedience Soup Kitchen and church missions to High Sky Children's Ranch and the Salvation Army.

"It takes operational money to run the freezer-cooler and the refrigerated trucks" used for collecting and distributing the food. The food bank's yearly operational budget is $140,000.

Virtually nothing is wasted.

"We even weigh the trash cans," Mrs. Neff said. "Our control is all by weight."

Even spoiled and unusable food is not wasted. A Midland pig farmer, Leo Johnson, picks up the spoiled food, cooks it and feed it to his hogs. In turn, each year he donates four hogs to the food bank, which has the hogs slaughtered and converted to sausage for distribution to the needy by way of the agencies.

Last August, more than 17,000 West Texans were fed 83,000 meals prepared at homes from sacks of groceries. And almost 14,000 others were fed 31,000 meals at the agencies from Big Spring to Alpine.

"We have a good success story," Mrs. Neff said of the food bank, which was organized in 1985. "I'm just proud that we are able to help people because they (the volunteer workers and others) are there."

"Somehow, through the grace of God," she said, "it (the food bank) has worked to feed needy families."

"We work from surpluses," Mrs. Neff noted, "and there's not always enough variety for a good balance." As a result, the food bank "always" is in need of protein food items, such as meat products, beans, and peanut butter.

American Legion honors Ector County sheriff

By FRANK TROMBLEY
Staff Writer

ODESSA — Thursday night Ector County Sheriff Bob Brookshire became the second area law enforcement officer to be singled out by the American Legion as Law Officer of the Year for the state of Texas.

Brookshire, who spent nearly 28 years with the Texas Department of Public Safety and retired as a sergeant before becoming sheriff in 1980, was chosen from a list of 75 nominees submitted by local American Legion posts throughout the state.

The award is made annually by the Legion's 40/8 Voiture group, named for World War I units made up of 40 men and eight horses. The award was presented in 1980 to the late Jack Fillyaw, who was an Odessa deputy police chief when he retired in 1981. Fillyaw died in July 1982. The award recognizes law enforcement officers who have dedicated their lives "to the betterment" of their fellow men.

Local Legion officials said the panel of judges that selected Brookshire, a World War II navy veteran, was no doubt influenced by the extent of the sheriff's involvement in community affairs and his efforts "to modernize and improve the crime fighting abilities of his department since taking office."

Since first elected eight years ago, Brookshire, who is running unopposed for a third term, has initiated a crime prevention unit, child abuse unit, burglary and narcotics task forces, a bomb disposal squad and mobile crime laboratory.

Brookshire is actively involved in a number of local organizations, including the Rotary Club, Shriners, the Blood Bank, March of Dimes, Girl Scouts of America, American Heart Association, the Legion, Veterans of Foreign Wars and Fraternal Order of Eagles. He also has been active in the National Sheriff's Association.

Funeral services for C.A. Goldsmith are pending with Ellis Funeral Home.

He died Thursday at his residence in Lakeway.

Absentee voting 'phenomenal,' officials say

AUSTIN (AP) — Absentee voting for Tuesday's election ends today, but it has been a huge success that may account for 25 percent of ballots cast statewide, election officials say.

"It's been phenomenal," said Jim Warren, spokesman for Secretary of State Jack Rains. "We've been meeting with county clerks and talking to them on the phone, and they're reporting unusually large numbers of people voting absentee."

Rains earlier this week predicted a record turnout of 5.98 million votes, or 73 percent of those registered, for this election.

With as many as 100,000 absentee ballots already cast in some of the largest counties, Warren said, "Some county clerks believe as much as a quarter of the vote statewide will be cast through the absentee process."

Final absentee ballot totals should be known by Monday, he said.

In the Dallas suburb of University Park, the line of voters stretched halfway around the block at the city hall polls early today — as it has for the last several mornings.

"Every day I drive by here. I thought whenever there wasn't a line I would vote. But Wednesday, Thursday, there was a line," said Johanna Owens, who finally joined the back of the queue today.

Ms. Owens says she chose to vote absentee at the urging of Republican campaign workers who called her to request she vote early.

"Maybe if they thought people voted early, if something happens at the end (of the campaign), may be they would already have voted," Ms. Owens said.

A few steps ahead in the line, Bobby Hagerman praised the state's new absentee voting system for its convenience.

AP Laserphoto

Arthur Canant, seated, a Travis County election worker, helps process absentee voters at an Austin shopping mall Thursday. Absentee voting ends at 5 p.m. today, with officials predicting as much as 25 percent of the general election vote may be absentee.

"So on Tuesday, you don't feel pressured; so if you run out of time, you still can vote," Hagerman said.

Absentee voting began Oct. 19, and Texans have been casting ballots in a nearly three-week-long "election period" rather than on a single Election Day, noted Randy Erben, assistant secretary of state.

The high absentee participation is being attributed to a 1987 change in voting law that is being used in a major election for the first time. That change eliminated the old requirement that people give an excuse before voting absentee.

"No longer must a voter give a reason or excuse to vote absentee. I urge voters to go to their absentee polling places by Friday and vote...It's simpler and convenient," Rains said.

Absentee polling places have been set up in shopping malls, community centers, on the University of Texas campus and other locations much easier to reach than county courthouses.

Another factor is the presence of a Texan on each party's ticket — Republican presidential candidate George Bush and Democratic vice presidential nominee Lloyd Bentsen both call Houston home.

And, both parties have conducted absentee voting campaigns among their loyalists.

Ed Martin, executive director of the Texas Democratic Party, said a strong absentee vote drive was conducted by the party. "Every contact, phone calls, all the mailings have reminded people of it. Our early voter project has targeted specific populations and encouraged them to vote absentee," Martin said.

Mark Sanders, spokesman for Bush's Texas campaign, said that by Thursday night every person who cast a ballot in the Republican primary was to have been called, told about absentee voting and given the absentee polling place nearest their homes. "We've never done anything like this before in the state," Sanders said.

In Bexar County, Elections Administrator Tony Gomez said that by Wednesday 106,000 absentee ballots had been cast. He expected up to 125,000 by today. "A whole lot of those people voting absentee now are those people who would normally vote on Election Day," he said.

In Austin, Travis County Clerk Dana DeBeauvoir said there have been growing numbers of absentee voters daily this week, prompting her to increase an earlier prediction of 40,000 to as many as 50,000.

Anita Rodeheaver, Harris County clerk, said 61,681 people had voted absentee in person through Wednesday.

Klan targets select states in recruitment drive

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Just north of the Mason-Dixon Line, not far from where the U.S. Constitution was signed, the Ku Klux Klan has launched a recruitment drive marked by cross burnings and robed Klansmen marching through towns.

Recruitment efforts have been met with moderate success, according to the state police, and with tremendous success, according to Richard Fogel, Pennsylvania KKK grand dragon. Texas has also been targeted in this Klan recruitment drive.

Along with whatever success the recruitment drive has generated has come controversy, with the cancellation of at least three events amid fears of violence from counter-demonstrators.

The Invisible Empire of the Knights of the Ku Klux Klan has not been deterred. Fogel said there will be an even greater effort next year in Pennsylvania, one of five states targeted in 1988 by the national leadership.

"The conservative attitude in the state has come to the point where people aren't satisfied with the Reagan revolution in 1988 and want another kind of revolution," Fogel said in a telephone interview from his home in Red Lion, York County.

The KKK has been an unexpected and, in most cases, unwelcome sight in Pennsylvania.

"The conservative attitude in the state has come to the point where people aren't satisfied with the Reagan revolution in 1988 and want another kind of revolution."

— Richard Fogel, Pennsylvania KKK grand dragon

In September, Philadelphia refused the Klan a permit for a rally near City Hall. Ephrata, in the state's Amish area in Lancaster County, recently denied the Klan a permit, fearing a repeat of the stone-throwing and arrests of counter-demonstrators that accompanied a cross burning last year.

A rally organized by the Klan for about 20 groups and scheduled for Saturday at Independence Hall was indefinitely postponed as threats of violence by opponents escalated and the mayor feared for the public safety.

The KKK has started making plans for next year in Pennsylvania, with Fogel calling this year's activities "just a taste."

He said there has been an event every two weeks since March, from the marches and rallies that attract reporters to smaller gatherings where the robed Klansmen stand on street corners handing out pamphlets.

Membership numbers are not released, but Fogel said the Invisible Empire has members in nearly all the state's 67 counties, with the strongest concentration in the southeastern corner surrounding Philadelphia.

Cpl. Serell Ulrich of the state police bureau of criminal investigations said the Klan is desperate for members.

"They'll tell you 1,000 will show up for a rally and only 39 show up...If they have a rally, they might pick up one or two members," Ulrich said.

"This particular period is a period of increased recruitment efforts by numbers of different white-supremacist organizations," said Eva Sears of the Center for Democratic Renewal in Atlanta. "They're not necessarily meeting with more success in Pennsylvania than in other areas."

Klan Imperial Wizard James Farrands, of Shelton, Conn., said the group targeted Pennsylvania, Georgia, Louisianna, Florida and Texas for recruitment this year.

Whatever recruitment success they are having, Klansmen and their opponents credit a new line of rhetoric, frequently pitched to reporters, that presents the KKK's political stance as right-wing.

"PR is key to the Klan. They obviously have a big image problem to overcome," said Sara Bullard of the Southern Poverty Law Center's Klan Watch in Montgomery, Ala.

"They spout rhetoric that could conceivably fall into the conservative mainstream, but the bottom line is racism."

"He (Farrands) has installed a new generation of Klansmen. People who are trying to make it more of what it's intended to be," Fogel said.

"They (opponents) are saying we're killers and have lynched people and condemn modern-day Klansmen for things that happened in the past. We're a white Christian, fraternal organization."

Asked if the Klan would take its image overhaul so far as to ditch the cross burnings and robes, Farrands said, "The Catholic Church doesn't give up their robes, why should we?"

Witness says Flight 191's crew contributed to crash

FORT WORTH (AP) — Operations flaws by the crew of Delta Flight 191 contributed to the crash of the airliner at Dallas-Fort Worth International Airport in 1985, an expert on cockpit dynamics says.

Lee Bolman, who specializes in cockpit resource management, testified in federal court Thursday that there were periods when Capt. Edward M. Connors exhibited "no sign of active management."

Bolman also testified that the crew at times demonstrated ambiguity about location and air traffic control information.

Connors did a poor job of communicating what he was thinking to the crew and junior crew members were too cautious about expressing concerns that developed in the last 30 minutes of the flight, Bolman said.

"My basic opinion is that serious resource management deficiencies played a role in the developments" leading to the crash, Bolman said.

Bolman said he based his conclusion on trial testimony, depositions, cockpit voice recorder transcripts, a Delta operations manual, the federal safety board investigation report on the crash and a computer-generated videotape of the last minutes of the flight.

Much of the previous testimony has centered around government allegations that Connors had been taking the tranquilizer Stelazine and other prescription drugs and should not have been flying at the time of the crash.

Government witnesses testified that the Federal Aviation Administration would have grounded Connors if they had known he was using the drugs.

Delta attorneys contend testimony about the prescription drugs is not relevant to the trial because the co-pilot was at the controls at the time of the crash.

The testimony came in the non-jury trial of a suit Delta filed against the government in an attempt to get the government to share in the liability for the crash.

The airline alleges that federal air traffic controllers and weather forecasters share in the blame for the crash for not adequately notifying the crew of the doomed airliner about a thunderstorm that developed rapidly in the path of the plane as it approached the airport on a flight from Fort Lauderdale, Fla.

The L-1011 crashed Aug. 2, 1985, killing 137 people.

U.S. District Judge David O. Belew Jr. will determine at the end of the trial what percentage, if any, of the damages the government should pay.

Girl's shooting ruled homicide

AUSTIN (AP) — The shooting of a 7-year-old girl by her mother has been ruled a homicide by Travis County Medical Examiner Robert Bayardo.

Police said the shooting appeared to be accidental, but Bayardo said Thursday "this was very reckless. The girl was shot at very close range."

Rochell Porter was shot once in the left cheek with a .25-caliber pistol Wednesday at her home. The girl, a first-grader at Blackshear Elementary, died at Brackenridge Hospital at 9:30 a.m.

The pistol was on a table when the girl's mother, Ulene Porter, 37, was getting Rochell and her 9-year-old sister ready for school, said Sgt. Don Bredl. Another sister, who is 2, was also at home when the shooting occurred, he said.

Police spokesman C.F. Adams said Ms. Porter told investigators one of the girls moved an ashtray that nudged the gun, prompting her to take the pistol away. She told officers she was turning around with the gun in her hand when it fired, striking the girl.

Bayardo said a homicide ruling "merely means that a person's life has been taken by another," but he added his ruling "indicates a higher degree than just accidental death."

Adams said, "It's a question of semantics, a gray area."

He said the mother's "just very crushed, understandably so. She had a handgun because of problems she's had in the past with burglars and prowlers and the like."

Two burglaries and eight domestic disturbances had been reported to police from an apartment where the woman lived until recently.

Police plan to forward the results of their investigation to the Travis County district attorney.

"The facts, details remain the same," Adams said. "We're not going to go out and arrest the woman."

At Blackshear Elementary, Principal Ida Hunt recalled Rochell as a "beautiful child."

Escapees' lawyers to appeal court ruling on extradition

EL PASO (AP) — Lawyers for two Kentucky prison escapees say they will appeal an appeals court ruling that the men should be extradited to Kentucky regardless of how they got into the custody of U.S. officials.

Derek Quintero and James Blanton were arrested July 9 at a hotel in downtown Ciudad Juarez, Mexico, by at least three FBI agents accompanied by Mexican police. The men were taken immediately to the United States without a hearing before a judge — a violation of an extradition treaty, prosecutors have acknowledged.

But the 8th Court of Appeals agreed with prosecutors that only Mexico, and not the prisoners, has a right to object to the escapees' arrest and transfer to the United States, and Mexico has not done so.

Blanton's and Quintero's attorneys had contended that the men should not be extradited to Kentucky because they were arrested and taken to the United States illegally. They said the FBI kidnapped the two men.

Rod Ponton, Quintero's attorney, said Thursday that both prisoners will appeal to the Texas Court of Criminal Appeals, the state's highest criminal court.

Ponton seemed puzzled by the ruling, which was dated Wednesday but released Thursday.

"The upshot is the court of appeals says if you're kidnapped by the FBI, it's all right. You can be extradited," he said.

Ponton said the ruling is incorrect because it could set a precedent for abuses.

"This isn't Argentina in the early 1970s," he said. "We can't let the government go kidnapping people if they just want to. If we let the government kidnap people without following the law, what's the next step? Going over there and shooting them?"

No injuries reported in house fire

From Staff Reports

No injuries were reported from a blaze that broke out early today in a house east of Midland near FM 307, the fire department reported.

The house was fully involved when the blaze was reported about 6:55 a.m., according to reports. By 8:45 a.m., the fire had been extinguished except for smoke smoldering under the floor.

A fire department dispatcher said inspectors from the fire marshal's office were called to the scene near County Road 1120 and CR 97 to investigate. The cause of the blaze was not known, he said.

Black Dallas officers file discrimination lawsuit

DALLAS (AP) — A suit has been filed in federal court by five black police officers who allege discrimination in hiring, disciplinary and promotional practices in the Dallas Police Department.

The suit, filed Thursday against the city and key city officials, seeks $55 million in damages and comes less than two months after another discrimination suit was filed against the city by the 207-member Black Firefighters Association.

Both suits allege that longstanding discrimination by white supervisors prevents many black officers from advancing.

The city denied the firefighters' charges, and city attorneys declined to comment Thursday on the police officers' suit, saying they had not seen it. A city councilwoman, however, said the police officers' concerns are valid.

The suit by the police officers, which seeks class action status to include all of the estimated 300 black officers on the 3,100-member force, charges that supervisors are quicker to discipline black officers, placing documents in personnel files that later hurt the officers' chances of promotion.

The suit also cites constitutional violations of equal protection, due process, free association and free speech.

C. Victor Lander, a lawyer representing the four black policemen and one black policewoman, said, "The DPD intentionally mistreats its black officers."

Defendants in the suit are the city, former chief Billy Prince, current chief Mack Vines, Mayor Annette Strauss and City Manager Richard Knight.

Discrimination also surfaces in the way white officers treat the black citizens of Dallas, Lander said.

"They feel that they are somewhat different or superior to the black citizens they police," the lawyer said of white officers in general.

Denton merchant Weldon Burgoon practices his roping recently in Denton. The owner of Weldon's Saddle and Western Wear doesn't just cater to a western lifestyle, he lives it.

Merchant promotes $60 million business

By KIT KING

DENTON (AP) — Tall, lean and always dressed in Western clothes, Weldon Burgoon's looks are the essence of a Texan. Not surprisingly, since his family goes back five generations in Denton County.

The owner of Weldon's Saddle and Western Wear, Burgoon has been influential in the county's agricultural community for almost 20 years.

"A lot of people don't realize it, but this is still an agricultural county. Income will vary between $60 and $80 million a year," he pointed out. "The beauty of that is the farmer or rancher has his end product that he sells. Now to create his product, he's going to buy Harpool fertilizer. He's going to buy diesel from somebody locally. He's going to buy seed locally and his labor, probably, is going to be in the area. Whereas, most other manufacturers buy their (raw) materials from outside. So, it's a very important part of our county."

While Burgoon works with the agri-business committee of the Chamber of Commerce and has worked with the North Texas Fair, his first love is working with young people. He was one of the organizers of the Denton County Youth Fair, Rodeo and Horse Show. "He works religiously every year, mostly putting together the rodeo. He helps tremendously with the auction and is always willing to sponsor an event or donate a prize," said Ricki Harrell, Denton County extension agent.

"Weldon's still a kid at heart. He can still imagine where they're coming from and look at things from their level. They have a lot of respect for him because of that."

The youth fair, which attracts hundreds of Denton county young people, is an outgrowth of a youth stock show and sale which began in the '40s. "I showed some chickens when I was a kid," Burgoon laughed.

The fair in its present state began about 13 years ago when, with the sponsorship of the Denton County Livestock Association, it became a three-day event which included all the projects undertaken by 4-H, Future Farmers of America and Future Homemakers of America.

To help the youth fair, Burgoon and other supporters formed the Blue Ribbon Club four years ago. He's been president since its founding.

"If kids are doing something constructive, it's better than sitting around doing something destructive.

"Besides, I just like kids." And to prove it, he always has students — from both Denton High School and University of North Texas — working in the store.

Burgoon, whose words come out in a slow, easy drawl, never seems flustered or rushed, yet he accomplishes an enormous amount. He runs his business, which has been at the corner of Hickory and Bell since 1957. He worked with the chamber, the youth fair and youth rodeo — both the North Texas High School Rodeo and the Denton High School Rodeo Club. He's active in his church, First United Methodist, and in the Denton Wesleyan Foundation. And he and his son-in-law feed cattle on what Burgoon calls his "country place" east of Denton.

"I've roped and competed in rodeos since 1941. Don't misunderstand me, I never did rope well enough to think that I could live without working."

Today he's a member of the Old-Timers Rodeo Cowboys Association and travels with his wife Joy to compete in roping events around the southwest.

"It's amazing to me," he said. "At Seguin an old gentleman 72 years old tied a calf in 12 seconds. That's great, if you can be that active."

And he's not worried about the danger. "Everything you do except sitting in a rocking chair is more dangerous as you get older."

When he goes to the rodeos, Burgoon usually takes merchandise from the store. He said he sells just enough to justify going to rodeos. "I sure couldn't justify it on what I win," he said.

Burgoon became a merchant in 1957 when a saddle shop in Denton went out of business and he bought a used sewing machine. At the time, he was rodeoing and working with his father in a plumbing business. At night and on weekends, he repaired saddles and leatherwork. In 1959 he added some clothing and became a full-time storeowner.

Inventory, back then, wasn't a problem and "We operated many years by the seat of our pants."

As retailing became more sophisticated, Burgoon added electronic cash registers and five years ago put everything on computer. "I love to make charts to show what sizes are selling, what time of year we sell this and that. It provides us with figures so we can do it ourselves."

But the computer doesn't tell you everything. "It provides all the information about what sold last year. But it can't tell us what is going to sell this year. That's when you go back to the seat of the pants," he said.

Bush paints improving rural picture

AGRICULTURE

By CHRISTOPHER CONNELL

WASHINGTON (AP) — Many American farmers have endured tough times during the Reagan era, capped by a withering drought that played havoc with crops in this election year.

But that same drought has driven up prices and mopped up surpluses, and that could strengthen Republican George Bush's appeal for farm votes that many politicians thought once were locked up for Michael Dukakis and the Democrats.

In agriculture, Bush sees a rural America on the mend and headed for greater prosperity built around a free-market philosophy.

Dukakis sees a rural economy still seriously ailing and in need of government help to support the family farmer and guarantee reasonable prices for crops.

"The difference between the two is Bush is happy. We think there's a crisis still out there," said Ted Mondale, Midwest political director for Dukakis.

Sen. Thad Cochran, R-Miss., a Bush agricultural adviser, called the Dukakis program "a big mystery that is causing anxiety in farm country."

"They seem to be in favor of massive cutbacks in production," Cochran charged.

The Democratic nominee has not endorsed the stringent production controls that two farm state Democrats, Sen. Tom Harkin of Iowa and Rep. Richard Gephardt of Missouri, have sought. Their bill died in the 100th Congress.

Mondale said Dukakis supports the concept, but not the particulars, of the Harkin-Gephardt legislation.

Dukakis, in his position paper on agriculture, said U.S. farm policy "must include a combination of supply management and reasonable price supports in a way that makes it possible for family farmers to earn a decent living from the land."

While Bush often refers derisively to Dukakis' "supply management" ideas, the 1985 Farm Bill that Bush lavishly praises also gave the government supply management powers, and Mondale said the Reagan administration's price supports and set-asides were all supply management tools.

Bush has said the bipartisan 1985 farm law is just beginning to pay off for farmers. It has led to lower commodity prices which, coupled with the drop in the dollar's value, helped boost farm exports 18 percent last year, he says. And he boasts that net cash farm income last year was a record $57 billion.

"Rural America has been strongly tested in recent years. However, I believe we have seen the bottom and are headed back up," says Bush.

The vice president says he would press ahead with efforts "to phase out over a reasonable period those subsidies that distort agricultural trade if, and only if, other countries do the same." But he promises to "preserve a true safety net to ensure the viability of the family farm and rural America."

Dukakis says farmers and ranchers are "being squeezed at both ends," facing lower commodity prices and a shrinking share of each food dollar (down from 32 percent in 1976 to 25 percent now).

"Still lower prices are not the answer," the Democrat argues. "Our present policy seems to be guided by a desire to drive commodity prices lower and lower in the hope of some future recovery of lost markets."

Dukakis promises to target farm program benefits to family farmers "who need them most."

Dukakis hopes to narrow the federal deficit by reducing farm subsidies. In his last debate with Bush, the Massachusetts governor said he was sure a Dukakis administration could "give our farm families a decent income without spending $20-to-$25 billion a year in farm subsidies."

Farm subsidies shot up from $5 billion in 1980 under the Carter administration to $25 billion in 1986 under Reagan. This year the administration and Congress came up with nearly $4 billion in emergency drought aid.

But the drought-fed higher crop prices also reduce the need for government price supports.

Mondale, son of the former vice president, said ruefully that Bush was claiming credit for higher prices and exports that really belong "to the weather and the Democrats." Farm state legislators, most of them Democrats, had to "shove the export enhancement program down the Reagan administration's throat," he said.

Bush constantly reminds rural audiences of the Carter administration's 1979 grain embargo against the Soviet Union and implies that Dukakis is liable to try another. Bush promises he won't "use farmers and ranchers and their families as foreign policy pawns."

But Dukakis says, "In no instance would I impose an embargo."

Dukakis says the productivity of U.S. farmers "should be viewed as a blessing, not a curse. Surplus farm commodities should be better used to feed hungry people both at home and abroad." He favors barter with countries "that want our farm goods but don't have the needed currency."

Bush has promised to devote an economic summit meeting with the major U.S. allies to the subject of agriculture.

Both candidates support wider use of ethanol, the alternative fuel made from gasoline and alcohol.

Dukakis has also promised help for ailing rural hospitals and other steps to revitalize rural communities.

Whether rural America perceives its own glass as half-full or half-empty may decide which candidate wins the farm state vote.

"There's a lot of optimism in agriculture today compared with several years ago when huge surpluses were hanging over the market," said Cochran. With inflation under control and interest rates at least stable, "farmers are feeling they may be able to work their way clear of some indebtedness."

Lyng says he'll stay on job until Reagan leaves

WASHINGTON (AP) — Agriculture Secretary Richard E. Lyng has passed the word that he intends to stay on the job until the next administration takes over on Jan. 20.

Senior staff people were told that Lyng "has some unfinished work" to do concerning trade talks and that he and U.S. Trade Representative Clayton Yeutter will be busy tidying up those affairs over the next few weeks, regardless of how the Nov. 8 presidential election turns out.

A special meeting of the 96 member countries of the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade, at which agriculture will be a central focus, is scheduled to begin in Montreal on Dec. 5, for example.

Lyng also has told associates that he wants to take some vacation time over the holidays and then return to USDA for a round of farewells before bowing out.

But gossip still persists that if George Bush wins the election Lyng may be prevailed upon to resign and head up a GOP transition team at USDA, a job he did when Ronald Reagan won the White House eight years ago.

Lyng, 70, has said publicly for months that he plans to retire when Reagan leaves office in January but has not spelled out what role he might play in the event Bush wins the presidency.

The USDA rumor mill was provided additional grist this week. On Tuesday, it was announced that David C. Lyons, Lyng's executive assistant, will resign effective in "late November" and will go to work in the private sector.

Also, a monthly calendar of coming events involving USDA officials showed that Lyng has several speaking engagements booked through November but none after that. His last appearance before a USDA group was shown as Nov. 29 at the department's annual outlook conference.

The calendar included the 70th annual meeting of the American Farm Bureau Federation in San Antonio, Texas, on Jan. 8-12, but no USDA participant was listed. A federation spokesman, John Lewis, said Lyng is not on the program but "would be welcome if he showed up."

Lyng, a longtime friend of Reagan's, has been through the revolving job door at USDA several times and is intimately acquainted with agency functions, needs and the political byways of departmental bureaucracy.

In early 1969, when he was head of the California Department of Agriculture and Reagan was governor, Lyng was named by President Nixon as assistant secretary of agriculture for consumer and marketing services, a job he held for four years.

From 1973 to 1979, Lyng was president of the industry supported American Meat Institute and worked for Reagan's 1980 presidential campaign. As head of the transition team, Lyng helped ease the way for John R. Block to take over as secretary of agriculture.

Lyng became deputy secretary, the No. 2 job in the department. He resigned in 1985 to establish his own consulting firm but returned to USDA as secretary in March 1986 after Block's resignation.

It is unclear who would succeed Lyng if Bush were elected. Yeutter has been mentioned frequently as the leading candidate and has expressed interest in the USDA job. However, some feel that Bush might want Yeutter to stay on as U.S. trade representative, at least for a while.

Former Iowa congressman Cooper Evans, an early supporter of Bush, is rated highly by some as a likely secretary of agriculture.

Sunflowers getting production boost

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sunflowers were in the limelight 10 years ago as a potential oilseed "growth crop" in the northern Great Plains, but farmers turned instead to higher-profit spring wheat and barley.

Grown mostly for their oil-rich seeds, sunflowers may be ready to move out of the shadows again, says Bruce Wendland of the Agriculture Department's economic research service.

One factor is new legislation passed by Congress to give drought relief to farmers whose crops were burned up by this year's drought and hot weather. The law includes a provision allowing wheat and barley producers to plant part of their base acreage in sunflowers in 1989.

Also, sunflower prospects are being helped by the Sunflower Oil Assistance Program, or SOAP, enacted last year to help subsidize oil exports.

Wendland said in the November issue of Farmline magazine that sunflower seed production climbed rapidly to 7.3 billion pounds in 1979 from only 786 million pounds in 1975. However, years of decline set in, and seed output in 1987 dropped to 2.6 billion pounds. This year's drought-shriveled yield is estimated at about 1.4 billion pounds.

The reduced supply has meant higher prices for sunflower seed, an average of $12.37 per 100 pounds in Duluth, Minn., up from $7.25 a year earlier, Wendland said. Sunflower oil prices, which were 16.6 cents per pound in July 1987 in Minneapolis, averaged 29.7 cents this year.

EARNEST KIKER

Producers must follow drug instructions

Kiker

Producers must follow precisely the label instructions on drugs and chemicals used on food-producing animals or be prepared to face the consequences.

In an effort to prevent misuse of drugs in meat animals, the U.S. Department of Agriculture has passed regulatory laws to control drug and chemical use. Producers must use only those veterinary drugs, chemical or feed additives approved by the Food and Drug Administration. The substances must be used at the approved dosage rate, and for the specific purpose or treatment of conditions issued on the label.

The use of any drug or chemical within the established withdrawal time prior to marketing is illegal. Unapproved drug use in food animals is commonly known as extra-label usage and can only be used under the control of a licensed veterninarian.

Extra-label usage must be in accordance with a veterinarian/client/patient relationship; a careful medical diagnosis; and a determination by the attending veterinarian that available labelled products have been found clinically ineffective. There must be assurances that treated animals have been established before marketing. The Food and Drug Administration and the Food Safety and Inspection Service of the USDA have the authority to enforce regulatory laws concerning drug and chemical use on animals.

Hispanic poverty rising at faster rate, study says

WASHINGTON (AP) — Poverty among Hispanics has risen at a faster rate than for other ethnic groups over the past nine years, according to a study by a non-partisan research group.

"The current economic recovery appears to be benefiting Hispanics much less than other groups. Hispanics are the only racial or ethnic group whose poverty rate remains at or close to recession levels (of the early 1980s)," said Robert Greenstein, director of the Center on Budget and Policy Priorities.

The group's study found the percentage of Hispanics living in poverty grew from 21.6 percent in 1978 to 28.2 percent in 1987, while the poverty rate for whites grew from 8.7 percent to 10.5 percent, and from 30.6 percent to 33.1 percent for blacks. The poverty rate for all Americans increased from 11.4 percent in 1978 to 13.5 percent last year.

The center — a non-partisan, non-profit research organization that studies government spending, programs and public policy issues affecting low and moderate-income Americans — based its findings on data from the U.S. Census Bureau and Labor Department. It used 1978 as a comparison year with 1987 because national economic conditions, such as national and Hispanic unemployment rates, were nearly the same in both years.

During the nine-year period, the income of the typical Hispanic family fell nearly $1,600, after adjustment for inflation, compared with an increase of $276 for a white family and a decline of $854 for a black family, the study said.

As a result of declines in Hispanic earnings, the study said the median income for Hispanics equaled 62.9 percent of median family income for whites last year, the lowest percentage on record.

Hurt hardest by the increase in poverty and the earnings decline have been Hispanic married families, the study said. Their poverty rate grew by more than half, with fewer than one in eight families below the poverty level in 1978 compared with nearly one in five in poverty last year.

The study also found that two in five Hispanic children were living in poverty last year, or 39.6 percent, up from a rate of 27.2 percent in 1978.

Raul Yzaguirre, president of the National Council of La Raza, a Hispanic organization, said the study is further evidence Hispanics are the poorest community of people on a per capita basis, yet Latinos have the highest labor participation rate.

He blamed the failure of the educational system to keep students in school and an increase in job discrimination for the rise in the poverty rate.

Greenstein blamed the increase in the poverty rate and the decline in earnings on several factors, including the sharp erosion in the value of the minimum wage, which at $3.35 per hour has remain unchanged since January 1981, while consumer prices have risen 38 percent over that period.

"Because Hispanic workers are more likely to be paid low wages than non-Hispanics, the lack of a minimum wage increase in nearly eight years has affected Hispanics with greater severity than it has affected the general population," the study said.

Cutbacks in state and federal budget programs also have contributed to the increase in poor Hispanics, the study said. Only one in 14 poor Hispanic families with children was raised from poverty with government assistance in 1987, compared with one in eight in 1979.

Almost 3,000 starving cattle found near Dallas

FORNEY (AP) — The discovery of thousands of malnourished cattle at a North Texas ranch, where officers have also found some animal carcasses, has prompted authorities to try to determine who is responsible for their condition.

The Santa Gertrudis cattle were from the King Ranch in South Texas but had been under the care of a Dallas man, said Kaufman County Sheriff Robert Harris, adding probably more than 60 cattle had been found dead.

"It isn't something that happened overnight," Harris said. "I'd say they haven't been fed since they've been up here" in July. "This has been progressing."

According to Ken York, who said he operates American Livestock Management Co., based out of Marshall, the cattle ended up in Forney because of the severity of the drought in South Texas.

York said he has often contracted to sell the King Ranch's cattle but in this case only helped the ranch find land farther north.

"I looked at the place and it looked good," said York. "King Ranch cut a contract" with someone to take care of the cattle.

The person responsible for taking care of the cattle never notified the King Ranch of trouble when North Texas also was stricken by the drought, York said.

"The reports kept coming in and every indication was that things were OK," York said. "This thing is serious out there."

He said a King Ranch representative asked him to check on the cattle after hearing reports of their starvation.

"I come over there and all of a sudden I'm in the middle of it and my company is in the middle of it," he said.

Stephen Kleberg, the King Ranch manager contacted by telephone in Kingsville Thursday night, said he wasn't aware of details surrounding the cattle but added authorities from the ranch were checking on the matter.

Meanwhile, cattle feed had been brought to the site and Harris said authorities would be there constantly to care for them.

Some cattle were so malnourished they could not walk and feed was put just in front of them.

"Their ribs were showing," Harris said. "A lot of them were completely down. Some can't even see — they're starved so much that they're blind."

Harris said it was the worst case of animal cruelty he had ever seen.

"They're high-bred cattle," he said. "They're Santa Gertrudis, they're not just scrub cattle."

In the 1920s and 1930s, the King Ranch crossed Shorthorns and Brahmans to develop the Santa Gertrudis.

State officials now part of Travis County Jail lawsuit

AUSTIN (AP) — State officials, as a result of U.S. Magistrate Stephen Capelle's ruling, have been made part of the 16-year-old Travis County Jail suit.

Capelle Wednesday also granted a motion by lawyers for county jail prisoners to amend pleadings that request removal of felons from the lockup.

County officials blame the presence of hundreds of felons awaiting transfer to state prisons for jail overcrowding.

Capelle's ruling puts the state in the middle of legal proceedings in state and federal courts.

Nueces County officials have filed suit against the state in state district court in Austin demanding removal of felons ready for prison from the Nueces County Jail.

A spokesman for Gov. Bill Clements' office said officials would review the magistrate's ruling and file a response. Bob Ozer, one of two assistant attorneys general present at the hearing, declined comment on the ruling.

Reaction from county officials, who have consistently complained about the state dragging its feet on the jail issue, was buoyant.

"I feel good," said Judge Bill Aleshire.

STATE IN BRIEF

Student drug survey wrong

PLANO (AP) — Public school officials say a student survey, which earlier reported 12 percent of 400 seniors questioned used cocaine in the month before the report, was in error.

The survey on student drug use in this North Dallas suburb contained a typographical error that indicated twice the national average of 6 percent of students used cocaine in the month previous.

But the Plano Independent School District said the 12 percent figure was actually for students who said they had used cocaine at some time in their lives. Officials said the number who responded they had used cocaine in the last 30 days was 5 percent, below the national average.

Larry Guinn, director of student services, said his department found the errors while preparing the survey for presentation to the school board Tuesday afternoon.

The survey of 1,128 eighth-, 10th- and 12th-grade students said also that 12 percent of the seniors reported current use of hallucinogens.

Jury indicts escapee

HOUSTON (AP) — A federal grand jury indicted a man with nine felony convictions for escaping from federal custody while in a Houston halfway house that was founded 20 years ago with the help of then-Congressman George Bush.

The escape, in September 1986, was the second time the man walked away from the same halfway house while serving a 10-year sentence.

Federal authorities said Wilbur "Pug" Barfield, 54, was sent to the New Directions Club in Houston in June 1986 while serving a sentence for possessing illegal firearms. He walked away three months later but was arrested a few days later for stealing a car.

Barfield escaped while on furlough three years earlier. He was recaptured in 1985, sent back to prison, and again furloughed to the New Directions Club in June 1986.

Battleship funds OK'd

AUSTIN (AP) — The Texas Parks and Wildlife Commission Thursday approved $6.9 million to restore the Battleship Texas, which will be taken into drydock from its slip at San Jacinto Battleground State Historical Park near Houston.

The money will be used for hull, deck and superstructure restoration, said Sue Moss, assistant to the director of the parks division.

Police blame city attorney for documents' destruction

DALLAS (AP) — A Dallas Police department report says the city attorney's office was aware that sensitive internal police documents were being illegally destroyed over the past two years but took no action to stop it.

The report did blame one officer, but placed most of the blame on the city attorney's office for failing to warn the department against "purging" records requested under the Texas Open Records Act.

The records of 253 full-fledged investigations into complaints against police officers were improperly destroyed, as were files containing the results of 402 preliminary investigations, according to the report by Capt. W.R. Rollins of the police Intelligence Division.

The report said nearly 150 of them were destroyed after a January 1988 directive from the city secretary's office requiring that such documents be retained.

"Twenty-one months of files which should have been retained had been purged," Rollins said in his report.

Police Chief Mack Vines ordered the investigation in September when he discovered that records from the Internal Affairs Division were missing and could not be produced to comply with a court order stemming from an Open Records Act lawsuit the city filed against County Commissioner John Wiley Price, Attorney General Jim Mattox and the Dallas Times Herald.

Vines lodged complaints against two captains who had headed the division during the 21 months the records were being improperly purged, and shortly thereafter a lieutenant became the third subject of the police investigation that resulted from Vines' complaints.

The investigation exonerated Capt. Roger Duncan, who headed the Internal Affairs Division until late last year, and his top assistant, Lt. Douglas Kowalski.

Capt. Dwight Walker, who headed the division until last month, was removed from office and transferred to a patrol division after the investigation.

The investigation concluded that he should have known of a January 1988 city directive against destroying documents that had been the object of formal requests under the Texas Open Records Act.

Chinese researchers combine science with mysterious 'qi'

By KATHY WILHELM

BEIJING (AP) — A scientist in a white lab coat scraped bits of cancer tissue from a white mouse into two sterilized glass dishes.

Two young men in slightly scruffy street clothes sat on stools in front of the dishes. Each extended his right hand over a dish, closed his eyes and concentrated.

"They are giving off qi," whispered the scientist, immunologist Gu Ligang.

The experiment, a hybrid of modern scientific method and seeming magic, is part of a growing effort among Chinese scientists to verify and analyze what many Chinese believe to be a special human energy called qi.

The belief in qi is central to traditional Chinese medicine but it is viewed skeptically by Western scientists.

In this case, the two men giving off qi were attempting to kill the cancerous cells in the dishes.

Popular interest in qi and 2,000-year-old exercises to develop it, called qigong, is sweeping China after the method had been suppressed for decades as superstition. An estimated 50 million adults practice qigong exercises, while hospitals, schools and scholarly institutes across China are researching qi.

"Qigong is a national cultural treasure and an integral part of Chinese traditional medicine's theoretical system and healing methods," Vice Minister of Health Hu Ximing told a recent conference in Beijing of nearly 600 scientists and qigong masters from more than a dozen countries.

Qi, the Chinese word for air and gas, has a special meaning in medicine — the breath of life.

Chinese traditional medicine teaches that qi flows through the body in invisible channels, like veins, and that illness is a result of blockages in its flow. Traditional healing techniques, from herbal medicines to acupuncture to qigong, are efforts to restore the distribution of qi.

Gu Ligang's experiment with the cancerous cells, like hundreds being done nationwide, seeks to gather physical evidence of whether some people, known as qigong masters, can project their qi like a beam of energy to manipulate matter and cure illness.

Gu, one of 30 qigong researchers at the Beijing College of Traditional Chinese Medicine, said some cancerous cells were killed in one sample in his experiment, but not enough to prove anything.

Qigong masters, however, say their work proves the mysterious force exists.

Hu Yulan, 59, said she has cured serious heart and neurological illnesses by directing her qi at patients.

Another master, Wan Sujian, said a 49-year-old peasant woman came to him after a surgeon told her a large tumor in her brain was inoperable and that she would die in two months.

Wan said the woman could barely walk because of the tumor's pressure on portions of the brain that control movement.

But after 10 treatments, he said, the woman was walking freely.

"The tumor has shrunk," Wan claimed. He predicted complete recovery.

Thousands of other qigong masters, who operate clinics without licensing or regulation, make similar claims. Some say they can heal bone fractures and diagnose ailments with X-ray vision — even when the patient is absent. Volumes of anecdotes of seemingly miraculous cures have been published.

"There are many blank areas in science," said Liu Yaning, a biophysicist at the air force's Xidiaoyutai Hospital in Beijing. "In China, many scientists believe the qigong masters will lead a revolution in science."

But Western medicine, which in the past decade has found chemical explanations for acupuncture's ability to deaden pain, balks at the concept of qi.

"I haven't been convinced by any experiment that this energy exists or that it can be controlled," said Dr. David Eisenberg, an instructor at the Harvard Medical School who attended the qigong conference.

However, Eisenberg, who studied traditional medicine in China in 1979 and 1980 and wrote a book about qigong, said he has seen startling demonstrations of qigong masters' skills and cannot simply dismiss them as fakes.

"There are phenomenon in every culture that suggests there may be the ability of humans to sense and-or manipulate their own biological fields, for lack of a better word," he said. "I'm troubled but not convinced."

Chinese scientists also are troubled. Many who are testing qigong masters said they believe some form of special human energy exists, but can't define it.

Books on qigong describe it variously as akin to radar, infrared light, magnetism, subsonic sound waves or all of those.

"I think qi is a big bag," Liu said. "There are a lot of things in it — not just one kind of energy or matter."

He added that his experiments, showing that natural luminescence given off by qigong masters' bodies is higher than that given off by other people, have convinced him qi exists.

"There is much clinical evidence to see the effect of qigong on many different diseases," said Dr. Lu Yongcai, a pathologist at the Beijing College of Traditional Medicine's Qigong Institute. "We want to know the mechanisms. That qi is present is no problem."

"Qi definitely can cause biological reactions. That's a fact," said Zhou Yang, the institute's chief immunologist.

He said his experiments have shown qi can promote the proliferation of disease-fighting T-cells in laboratory mice and stimulate the development of the thymus, an important gland in the immune system.

Chinese scientists at the qigong conference said their work showed qigong masters can do such things as kill or inhibit leukemia cells in mice, promote healing of strained muscles and broken bones in rabbits and sharpen intelligence.

Eisenberg contended that most of the studies suffered from poor design or lacked control groups and other standard precautions against bias.

"There is at least as much likelihood that this is a cultural, societal wish fulfillment," he said. "Qi is part of the culture."

A young qigong master — said to have healing ability — waves her hands over a patient in order to direct her qi, or vital energy at a Beijing clinic.

Germanys plan rites to recall Kristallnacht

New York Times News Service

BONN, West Germany — The night of Nov. 9-10, 1938, has always stood out as a fateful turning point in the annals of the Nazi terror, and with the approach of the 50th anniversary of what has come to be known as Kristallnacht, both Germanys have announced plans for a broad range of nationwide ceremonies, conferences and other commemorative acts.

The date entered history when, ostensibly to avenge the assassination of a German diplomat in Paris by a Jew, Josef Goebbels ordered a nationwide pogrom by the National Socialists.

By daybreak, 91 Jews were dead, hundreds were hurt, and thousands of synagogues and Jewish shops and home were in ruins. The shattered glass on the streets of German cities was to give the night its name, "Crystal Night."

Though the Nazis had harassed and persecuted German Jews before and would do far more terrible things after, Kristallnacht came to be identified as the moment when no German could any longer claim ignorance of what the Nazis intended.

The 50th anniversary, accordingly, has taken shape as a major act of national atonement and remembrance.

Virtually every city and community has announced one or more days of commemorative events, including memorial services, concerts, theater programs, literary readings or ceremonies, to be held by governments, political parties, churches, schools and organizations.

Several special exhibitions on the history of Jews in Germany have already opened, including major ones in Nuremberg and East Berlin, and both radio and television have initiated special programs, including a panel discussion last week concentration-camp survivors and German youths.

The major television networks have scheduled extensive coverage of official commemorative ceremonies on Nov. 9.

The main West German ceremonies will be held in Frankfurt, the home of Germany's second-largest Jewish population center before the Nazi terror.

Chancellor Helmut Kohl, President Richard von Weizsacker, the presidents of all states and major church leaders will join Jewish leaders for memorial services at the main Frankfurt synagogue.

FAMILY MATTERS

Economic predicament causes family depression

By JIM MAY

May

DEAR FAMILY: The drop in the price of oil has our family all in a turmoil again. We have already gone through this twice now. My husband is depressed and he is making me depressed. I am trying to cheer him up, but I'm tired and scared too. Nothing I do seems to help. The last time this happened the whole family was miserable for almost six months, until the price went up and stayed up.

Is there anything that I can do to help this situation? I know that my husband feels bad and is very worried, but he has a lot to be thankful for. We have (number) kids who are doing just great, we have our health and our faith.

It really bothers me that none of this seems to matter when he gets in one of his moods because of the oil prices. I try to tell him that there isn't anything that he can do about it so why worry? Do you have any suggestions? FRUSTRATED

DEAR FRUSTRATED: Your husband's depression is real. Depression can be a sadness that can't be expressed. The underemployed and those anticipating unemployment feel significant depression and anxiety. Sometimes they consider suicide as a "way out."

Find an appropriate quiet time — no television, no newspaper, no kids, etc. — for you and your husband to discuss this matter. Share your fears and concerns with him. And listen to him with your heart. He has many worries that he must talk about. Sharing of fears and concerns encourages positive changes. We can't fight what we don't know.

This is an important process you both must go through. Please don't try to cheer him up. Just listen and respond emphatically. He needs your heart, not your advice.

If you sense any hints about suicide, such as, "The family would be better off without me," "I'm just a burden to everyone" or "I don't know if I can take this any more, I just want out," seek professional help. Suicide is not uncommon with people who are in a depressed and vulnerable state.

This may be the most important meeting of your life. Rely on your spiritual strengths. God is there and avialable to those who ask.

DEAR FAMILY: A friend of mine recently adopted a baby. Everyone was very happy for her but she is concerned about other people's response toward her baby. I think that she feels like people that don't know her will treat her baby differently because the baby is adopted. I told her that nobody worries about that kind of thing anymore, but I think that she is still concerned. My husband said that you might know something I could tell her. A FRIEND

DEAR FRIEND: A recent study of involuntarily childless women sheds light on your friend's feelings. These women reported feeling that in society itself, many people don't understand how someone could love a child that's not his or her own. This ill-founded belief conveys to the adoptive mother that her feelings and experiences as a mother are somehow less important than a biological mother's.

The research also identified the feeling that adoptive children are inferior because of their "suspect" genetic background. These women felt that society considers biological background important to a child's worthiness.

Finally, the research reflected the idea that a biological tie is necessary for parenthood. The women felt that regardless of their parenting skills, society would feel that they are not real parents. They reported feeling that even their friends had unexpressed, negative thoughts about adoption.

I want to emphasize that this research is based on what the women perceived to be true. My clinical experience suggests evidence is very much to the contrary. However, perceptions are very important and must be respected.

Be empathetic to your friend's concerns and let her experience your support. Blood may be thicker than water, but it's not thicker than love.

Keeping up with children aging to parents

By AMANDA GRIFFIN
New York Times News Service

OPELOUSAS, La. — My children are outsmarting me.

Not in a mischievous way, although that's sometimes the case, but it seems as if my brain cells are dying off as fast as theirs seem to be multiplying.

Take the Memory Game for example. There are 32 pairs of mama and baby animals and the idea is to turn the small cards face down and each player turns two over at a time and tries to match each mama with her baby. The person with the most matches is the winner.

My 5-year-old, who doesn't even know the names of all these animals, regularly beats me at this game. She doesn't just squeak by, she often "takes me to the cleaners" as my checker-playing father would say.

While she's busy pairing the mama and baby orangutans, seals and hippos, I can't even remember the pictures on the last two cards I turned over. I watched my father play this game once with my son and he had the same problem. I'm convinced there's something to this brain cell kill off that comes with age, any age over 15 or so.

Then I sit down to build jet-eating tanks and flying barges out of Lego's with my son and I have the same problem.

"Look mom, if you put those wheels there, your tank isn't going to work. Those wheels only work with the little pieces," he explains, digging through a plastic suitcase full of red, blue, yellow and white Lego blocks, wheels, doors, window frames and tiny men.

I'm as muddled by this conglomeration of plastic as I would be by a tray of surgical instruments.

Lincoln Logs and Tinker Toys bring on the same mental confusion.

So, rather than appear too dumb at times like these I try to act as though I planned my downfall. It's okay for my kids to teach me a thing or two, I tell myself, and I congratulate them heartily on their wins and creative genius at designing tanks that float.

Never let them see me sweat, is my motto.

After all, mom can't appear too brain dead yet. There's still geometry, biology and computer science to come.

Elvis-watcher waits sighting

By DAVID GRIMES
New York Times News Service

It's been more than 11 years now and I still haven't seen Elvis.

I'm afraid if this goes on much longer, you're going to read about me in the supermarket tabloids:

EXCLUSIVE!!! The Only Person in America Who Hasn't Seen Elvis Tells His Story!!

A Sarasota (Fla.) newspaper columnist appears to be the only person in America who hasn't seen Elvis Presley since The King of Rock 'n' Roll allegedly died on Aug. 16, 1977.

"It's not something I'm particularly proud of," said David Grimes, 36. "In fact, I'm downright ashamed."

Grimes said he could not explain how he avoided seeing Elvis during the past 11 years, a period when the deceased singer enjoyed some of his greatest visibility.

"I just don't understand it," Grimes said. "These days, you can hardly go out to pick up the morning paper without tripping over Elvis. I guess I'm just unlucky."

Fresh Elvis sightings roll in daily. The King has been spotted in Vicksburg, Mich., standing in checkout line at Felpausch's Supermarket.

The King also has been photographed standing in a Las Vegas parking lot, and astronomers believe they have discovered a statue of Elvis on Mars.

Indeed, according to Tattler statistics, every man, woman and child in the United States has laid eyes on Elvis an average of 3.2 times since the star was allegedly planted at Graceland, his Memphis home.

Such statistics obviously call into question the credibility of Grimes and his claim to being the only person in America who hasn't seen Elvis.

"I thought I saw him once while I was picking up a six-pack at the convenience store," Grimes offered weakly, "but it turned out to be John Kennedy instead. I was real disappointed."

Grimes also said he once spilled a bowl of pistachio ice cream on the kitchen floor, and as the ice cream melted, it took on the vague outline of Elvis's profile.

"Then again, it could have been Liberace," he said. "It's hard to tell, what with all those nuts and everything."

Grimes says he is uncomfortable being the only person in America who hasn't seen Elvis.

"I've always been a big fan of Elvis', and there's nothing I'd like more than to see him, just as all my fellow countrymen have," said Grimes. "I just hope it happens soon, because neither one of us is getting any younger."

DEAR ABBY

Modest clothing: Times, they are a' changing

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: Recently you told a 14-year-old girl whose mother wouldn't let her wear a strapless, wraparound dress because it was too revealing that the rules for how a 14-year-old girl should dress haven't changed.

Well, I am a 14-year-old girl, and I say they have changed. Today, girls are compelled to show off their bodies because of the same social rules that forced their grandmothers to cover up theirs.

I'm a figure skater — not on ice, on roller skates, so you won't be seeing me in the Olympics unless they accept dancing on wheels instead of blades as an athletic competition.

But whether it's done on wheels or blades, one thing is the same — the boys are always fully dressed, but the girls are semi-nude. The same thing is true in many other sports. Just take a look at how the gymnasts are dressed when they perform. And it isn't only in sports; my sister has an after-school job that requires her to wear a uniform with short-shorts during the summer, so the customers can look at her legs while ordering pizza.

It's everywhere, Abby. Just take a look around you. — SCANTILY CLAD IN TENNESSEE

DEAR SCANTILY CLAD: Call me old-fashioned, but my perception of acceptable (modest) attire hasn't changed, although fashions have. Witness today's baseball and football uniforms. Gone are the baggy trousers — replaced with skin-tight stretch pants.

DEAR ABBY: I just sat through a Sunday morning sermon in which our minister used the phrase "man's seed" no less than a dozen times. It was all I could do to keep from walking out.

It's taken what seems like an eon to enlighten people about the miracle of reproduction, and what happens? An ignorant, callous patriarch stands in front of a church full of people and implies that the creation of life is a process in which man — make that "Man" — sows the seed, and woman provides the passive soil.

Well, I'm not going to take it anymore. All life in this world is born of Woman. It's a power we must reclaim as our own, or be responsible for the continued disrespect and subjugation dumped on our sisters and children. The ovum — make that "Ovum" — is the "seed"; and semen is, you'll pardon the expression, fertilizer. — UNSUNG MATRIARCH, CLEVELAND

DEAR MATRIARCH: Yours is another variation on the same old theme: Which is more important to the creation of life — the egg or the sperm? Obviously they are of equal importance since neither can reproduce without the other. And enough of the name-calling, please. Man is not "fertilizer"; neither is woman "dirt."

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I received an invitation to a wedding reception. The bride is a longtime family friend of my husband's. We have socialized with her for more than 15 years.

The invitation was addressed to "Mr. and Mrs.," so we certainly did not bring our children, who are 6 and 13 years old.

When we got to the reception, we saw children of all ages there! Several people asked me where our children were. I simply said they were at home with a sitter.

Now I am wondering why there were other children at the reception if mine were not included. Are there functions where some people's children are invited, but not others?

I told my husband I thought this was very strange and it bothered me. He said if it bothered me, I should call the bride and ask her to clarify this. I did not want to call her, but I just can't let this go, Abby. Please help, but do not use our real names. — MYSTIFIED

DEAR MYSTIFIED: People with good manners do not bring their children unless they have been specifically invited. Unfortunately, some parents do it anyway. There are some functions to which some people's children (usually family members) are invited, but others are not.

You used excellent judgment in not calling the hostess and demanding a clarification. Let it go.

DEAR ABBY: In a recent column, you defined "leap year" as a "year in which there are 366 days instead of 365, occurring every four years by adding an extra day to February, giving it 29 days instead of the usual 28."

A good definition, but with one little exception. The following information was gleaned from my 1988 World Almanac:

In 46 B.C., Sosigenes, a Greek mathematician, miscalculated that a year consisted of 365 days and 6 hours. On the strength of this misinformation, Julius Caesar decreed that one day should be added to the calendar every fourth year — and so "leap year" was born.

Unfortunately, the good Sosigenes missed his calculations by a mere trifle. The Julian calendar was used for more than 800 years before the accumulated error became noticeable, so in 1582, Pope Gregory XIII decreed that the day following Oct. 4 should be called Oct. 15, thus dropping 10 days to put the calendar back on course.

It was also decided that "leap years" would be skipped in centesimal years (ending with 00) except when they were divisible by the number 4.

So, there you have it. There were no leap years in 1700, 1800 and 1900. But there will be one in the year 2000. — MARK AMUEDO, SLIDELL, LA.

DEAR MARK AMUEDO: Thank you for elucidating my brief explanation of leap year. This may be more than some people want to know. Others will find it fascinating.

Bad fashion scores again

By ERMA BOMBECK

Bombeck

I read a story recently about the debut of new fashions from the collection of designer Giorgio Armani. "It was one of those electric fashion moments when imagination and skill come together," wrote one writer. A department store executive added: "It was absolutely chilling. I've got three buyers back there in tears, and that has never happened before."

The reason that has never happened before is because they've never seen anything like the "skirtpant" before.

Mark my word, the skirtpant is destined to become the Edsel of the fashion industry. It is as hard to explain as it is to wear. It's a skirt that is cut with full legs and hits about mid-calf. The pants part isn't visible until you begin to walk. Don't even think of crossing your legs.

To put it another way, get a picture of the state of Texas in your mind. The waistband is Dalhart. Then when you get to Odessa on one side and Dallas-Fort Worth on the other, you see a fanning out like the town dam just broke. A 37-pound woman will look like a billboard in one.

A few years ago, designers came out with a summer version called the "culotte." They looked great from the front, but the moment someone walked into the sunset in them, she looked like she had been riding a horse for three days.

Sometimes I can't figure designers out. It's as if they flunked human anatomy. In my mind I visualize them as people confined to a small room with a chair and a sketch pad. The only people they see are starved models. They have never seen a women who eats leftovers over the sink. They have never seen a woman who wears her pantyhose like a bikini. Who am I kidding? They've never seen a woman who eats lunch before!

I've always thought it would behoove dress designers to make paper dolls out of Renaissance women who hang out on museum walls and ceilings. Anything they design, they would first try on these women to see how much it revealed, how much it covered, and if the stripes were going the right way. They're what most women look like. They are women with stomachs, chests that are losing the war to gravity, and legs that sound like they're being followed by a group when they walk across the floor. If designers had draped these pasta portraits in miniskirts, the world would never have seen them on the racks.

There are women who will buy and who will wear the skirtpant because they are trendy. But I will never see a skirtpant from the rear without an image of a bull's-eye coming to mind.

Cabooses 'live' in couple's yard

PARKSVILLE, Ky. (AP) — "His" and "her" cabooses might seem unusual to most people, but not to retired conductor John C. Coulter.

He likes trains so much that he bought the two cabooses that carried him along the tracks for more than three decades.

And Lorine, his wife of 36 years, says the larger caboose is hers.

For 37 years, Coulter, 65, worked for the old Louisville & Nashville Railroad Co.

Behind their Boyle County home sits the 1921 wooden caboose that was assigned to him when he went to work for the L&N in 1946.

Nearby there is a larger, more modern, steel caboose which was his home away from home between 1967 and his retirement in 1983.

Soon after he retired, at his wife's urging Coulter bought the steel caboose.

"I reckon I was one of the very, very few that just almost cried when the steam engines left," he says. "I grew up with the steam engines ... and hated the diesels to a passion.

"See, back in those days, every conductor had his own assigned caboose, and you kept everything on here — clothes, cooking utensils. A lot of them slept on them," Coulter says. "The conductor slept here, and the head brakeman and flagman slept back there in them two bunks."

An original stove sits across from the wash basin and water bucket in the old wooden caboose. On the walls hang an L&N calendar, a kerosene lamp and numerous signal lanterns and flares.

There's also a framed newspaper clipping about a 1967 train wreck near Lebanon, Ky. In that wreck, the old caboose overturned with Coulter inside on what was to be its last run. Coulter was slightly injured, and the caboose was not seriously damaged.

Soon thereafter, Coulter bought the caboose and set it off the Lebanon Branch tracks which then ran in front of his home.

Several years later, he bought the steel caboose.

"It went in service in April of '46, and I went to work in February of '46," he recalls. "They retired it in July of '83, and I retired Dec. 23, '83. You have no idea what a feeling it was the last time I turned loose of that caboose. It was moving. I hopped off there, and they went on in the yard with the train. And it was one of the saddest moments just to know that

Lee plays Cougs with eye on coin

By JIMMY PATTERSON
Sports Writer

Of the three coaches involved in tonight's coin toss, only Earl Miller doesn't have to drive over 100 miles to get to where it'll be.

But Miller and his crew have perhaps the most difficult on-field chores of the three teams which are hoping for a chance at playoff gold.

The Lee Rebels will host the Abilene Cooper Cougars, 2-6 overall, 1-4 in district action. Midland High and Odessa Permian, also with playoff hopes alive, will play at Abilene High (2-7, 1-4) and San Angelo (2-6-1, 2-3).

Since there's no way to study for a coin flip, Miller has spent time this week looking into the possibilities that Cooper might provide a tough game for the Rebs.

There's that time worn theory that the Cougar seniors will play hard because this is their final game. And, they probably will.

ONE OF those seniors is quarterback Scotty Pugh. Pugh, the 6-1, 185 pounder went into the year as an All-State favorite. Two months later, though, Pugh may not be as much of a hopeful as in preseason, due to injuries which have hampered his passing performance this season.

Pugh has thrown for just 633 yards, completing 47 of 124 in seven games, which ranks him fourth in the district passing game behind Permian's Mike Winchell, Russell Page of MHS and Michael Emmons of San Angelo.

Pugh's performance against Midland High at Memorial Stadiumn last month was hailed as one of his best ever, rushing-wise. Pugh ran for 154 yards, including scoring runs of 49 and 37 yards, despite being injured. Midland High still beat the Cougs, 25-21.

ALSO in the back of Miller's mind is the concern with overconfidence. After all, we're talking about a Rebel team which was a 21 point underdog to powerful Permian. As you may remember, Permian wasn't so powerful in the 22-21 Lee win, and the Rebs have subsequently found themselves in this three-way tie.

"Sure," Miller said, "you've always got to worry about being overconfident after playing so well against Permian. But ever since the Midland High game, we've played consistently. I don't know a reason why we'd go out and play a bad ball game (against Cooper).

"(Cooper) Coach (Larry) Peel has worked here with us as an assistant coach and knows our system. He's lost four games in a row. It'd probably be a good feeling and would make their season if they could beat us. Kinda like it took a little of the sour out of our season when we beat Permian."

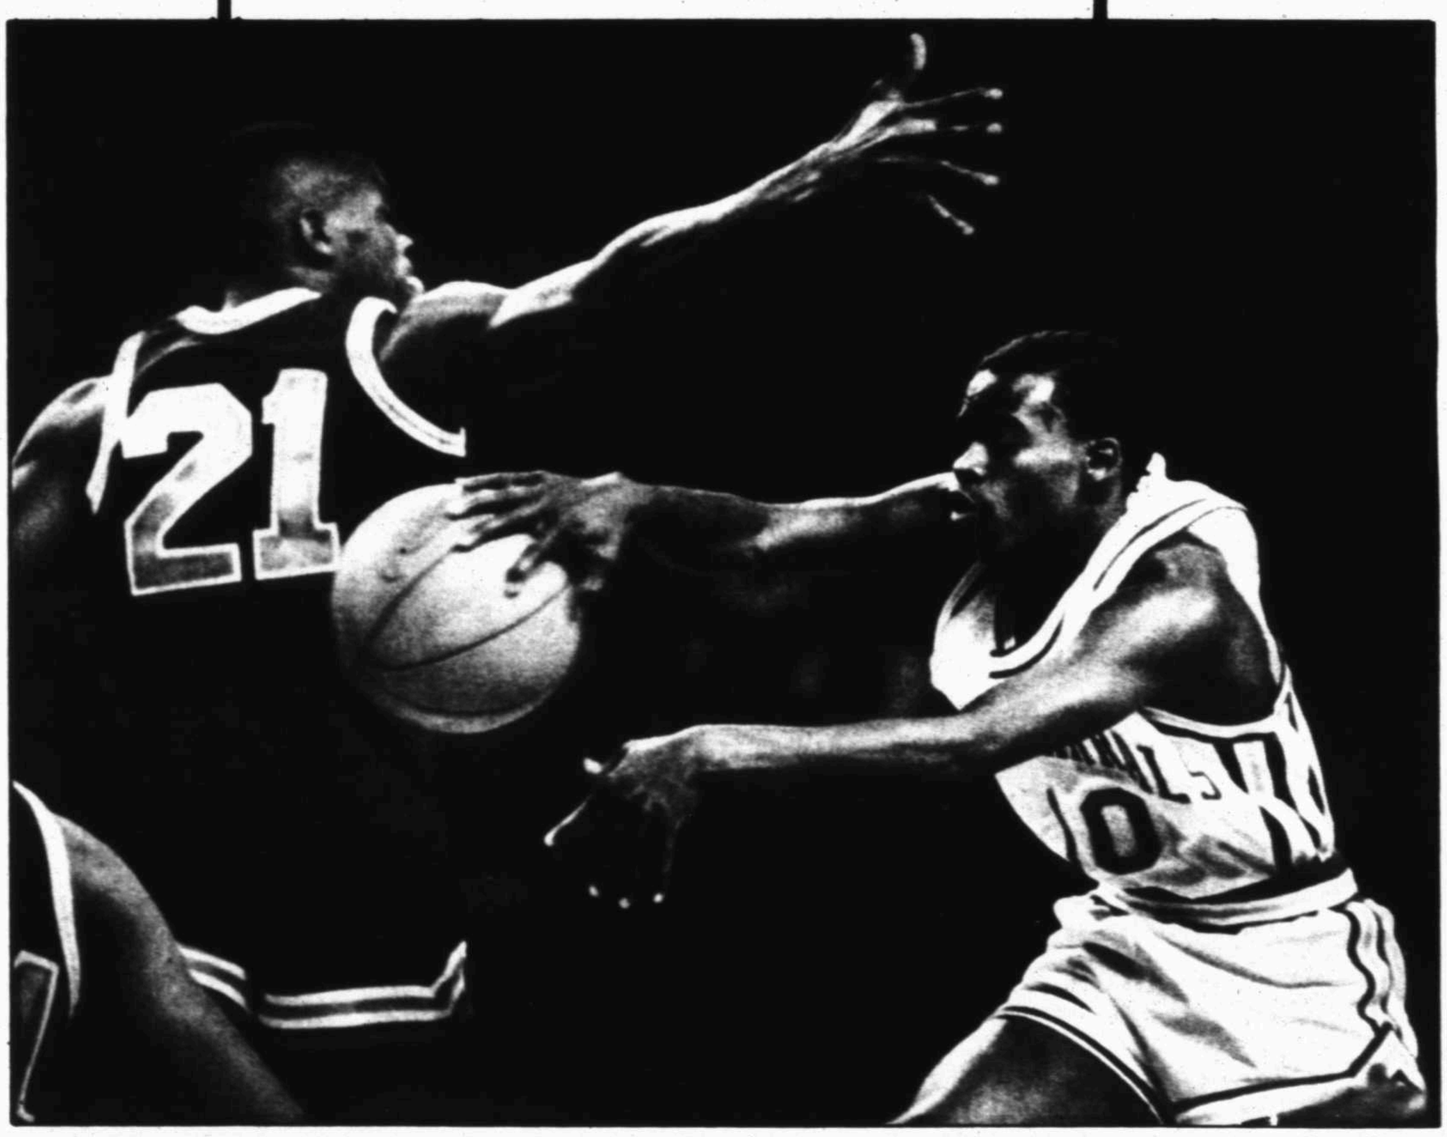

Said Peel: "Our kids are excited because it's their last game and they'll have a say-so as to who goes to the playoffs."

A say-so only if the Cougars win, that is.

Chaps win as Cisco upsets Barton, 83-71

Sneaky Pass

Midland College guard Louis Clay (10) uses a feint to beat defense of Cedar Valley's Charles Caldwell and get off a pass in Thursday's Chap Classic tournament game.

By BILL GRIMES
Sports Writer

Well, it wasn't too bad for a first time.

The Midland College basketball team struggled through their first half of the season against Cedar Valley College before busting loose in the second half for a 87-66 win in the first round of the annual Chap Classic at the Chap Center Thursday.

The big news Thursday was an 83-71 upset of highly-regarded Barton County (Kan.) College by unheralded Cisco J.C. In other first-round action, South Plains drubbed Garden City (Kans.) 107-79.

Jacksonville, Texas, which reached the NJCAA nationals at Hutchinson, Kan., last year by defeating Odessa College and San Jacinto, defeated Howard College, 93-84.

The Chaps secured an early lead behind an impressive junior college debut by freshman Fred Campbell. The 6-foot-8 frosh from Salisbury, N.C. scored all 11 of his points in the first five minutes to stake the Chaps to a 13-7 lead.

MC led by as much as 12 points in the first half, before guard Mike Nute reeled off four points in two seconds to push the Suns to within four with 3:24 left in the half.

CHAP FRESHMAN Tim Owens, who led all scorers with 20 points, pushed in a four-footer seconds later. Former Andrews star Louis Clay then knocked home two free shots and Kevin Chaisson added another freebie second later to put the Chaps up by nine with two minutes left.

MC coach Reggie Franklin was highly displeased with the way things went in the first half.

"I got the feeling we weren't hustling," the coach said. "We just weren't playing hard."

The Chaps eventually pulled out the stops to lead by as many as 26 points before Cedar Valley scored the last five points of the game.

Sophomore guard Charles McCovery thought the Chaps may have simply taken awhile to get the rust of their system.

"It was just first-game jitters," the All-American candidate said. "We have a lot of freshmen who played their first game on the junior college level.

> "I got the feeling we weren't hustling. We just weren't playing hard."
>
> Reggie Franklin

"In the second half, we just went out and played the way we know we can play."

OWENS and McCovery scored 12 and nine points, respectively, to lead the Chaps after the halftime break. McCovery finished with 11 tallies, while freshman Darryl King added 10.

Soph Steve Overstreet came off the bench to pull down a team-high seven rebounds for the Chaps.

Franklin cleared his bench in both halves, looking for the right combinations going into more consequential portions of the season.

"I've got 13 guys I think that can play," Franklin said. "What I'm doing is trying to find a substitution pattern that I can use the rest of the season."

The Chaps face Cisco in winners bracket action at 7 p.m. tonight. South Plains faces the Howard-Jacksonville winner at 9 p.m.

In the losers bracket, Garden City sees the Howard-Jacksonville loser at 2 p.m. and Cedar Valley plays Barton County at 4 p.m.

Cisco-Barton Co.

The Wranglers posted five players in double figures, led by Tyrone Williams with a game-high 27. Mark Chambers and Lewis Hicks added 16 each. Linwood Lambert chipped in 14, and Eric Brown scored 10.

J.T. Marshall led a balanced Barton attack with 16 points, but the Cougars shot only 43.5 percent from the field.

Coin flip is tonight's Biggie in 4-5A

Williamson

Best joke of the week: "Did you know that there are three football games being played in District 4-5A Friday night?"

To heck with football. It's the coin flip after those three mythical games that's making news this week. The general public has already decided that there will be a three-way coin flip to decide this zany run for playoff berths. No one even seems to know that football is on the agenda.

The fact is all three teams — Midland High, Midland Lee and Odessa Permian — must win tonight to force that three-way flip that is going to rock the boat like nothing else this district has seen in years. And we can still have that three-way flip if all three teams lose.

But those are minor facts to consider. The general public is right — as always. All three will win.

THE RESULT will be a high stake coin game that will put Las Vegas to shame. And, just as in Las Vegas, there will be winners and losers. Only the odds are a little different since there will be two winners and only one loser. You won't ever get those odds in Las Vegas.

Still, one of those three teams will be watching the Class 5A state playoffs from the rocking chair. All three deserve to be in the playoffs and all will get that shot from the nimble fingers of Earl Miller, Doug McCutchen and Gary Gaines. The winners will probably win an all expenses paid trip to Las Vegas from fans who want to cash in on those two lucky fingers.

You always hear coaches say, "I'm ready, but I can't play. It's up to those kids."

Well, these three coaches get a chance to take to the field again. It will be on their shoulders — or fingers. The key words of the week are heads and tails.

THE FLIP-off is a game in itself. There really isn't much to it. Three coaches toss coins and the odd-man is out. The other two go to the playoffs. The loser, however, bears a bed of sorrows. It's tragedy and pathos at its best — or is it at its worst?

And who will the two winners meet? Well, District 3-5A already has a champion in Amarillo Tascosa. Tascosa will meet 4-5A's second seed. Tascosa will meet Lee if Lee and Midland High wins the flip. Tascosa will meet Midland High if MHS and Permian win. Tascosa will face Permian if Lee and Permian win.

Amarillo High and Amarillo Palo Duro play at 2 p.m. Saturday to determine second place in 3-5A. That winner will face 4-5A's winner, which will be Lee if Permian and Lee win the flip, MHS if Lee and MHS win and Permian if MHS and Permian win.

Confused? Well, we'll let you know how it all turns out. This is how tonight will go:

Midland Lee 35, Abilene Cooper 14: The Rebels haven't wasted five consecutive playoff trips without having learned a thing or two about pressure. Step One of the coin flip...

Midland High 28, Abilene High 7: Even a share of a tri-championship is important to MHS. Afterall, it's been 37 years since a title has come the way of the Bulldogs. Step Two to the coin flip...

Odessa Permian 42, San Angelo 8: How would you like to play old Mojo after they've been upset by Lee? If your answer is yes, you are in the wrong profession. Step Three to the coin flip.

The Flip-Off: You can take this job and shove it if you think I have to get into this one. I've never even been to Las Vegas with a coin in my pocket...

Alysheba leaves a trail of convinced ex-skeptics

By TED BATTLES
Sports Editor

Alysheba won the Kentucky Derby and Preakness last year and did it under the cloud of lasix.

Although Alysheba displayed remarkable fortitude and athletic ability in recovering from two near-disastrous stumbles to win the Derby and later lost Horse of the Year honors by a nose to Ferdinand in the Breeder's Cup, the cynicism remained.

"Sure, but what if Alysheba had been forced to run without the drug that is banned in most states," the skeptics scoffed.

Alysheba this year quietly pursued the task of making believers out of doubters, but did so in comparative anonymity.

Four-year-olds don't enjoy the same glare of the spotlight as three-year-olds, the glamor age of thoroughbred racing. There is no Triple Crown to quicken the pulse and demand the attention of sports fans everywhere. There is no hysteria to equal that surrounding the Kentucky Derby-Preakness-Belmont trioka.

The races for older horses pay handsome dividends to winners and the successes are appreciated by racing's true thoroughbred fan, but "last year's" hype is missing. For the casual fan, the guy who gets excited about mint juleps and black-eyed peas, there's nothing to seize him by the lapels.

The Breeder's Cup lacks the tradition of the Triple Crown, but it could be the answer to the charisma enjoyed by the three-year-olds.

Coming as it does at the end of the year, as opposed to the spring-summer when the three-year-olds revel in their moments in the sun, it offers a diamond studded climax to the year. It has been around only five years, but the money alone makes it something to get excited about.

There is a complication for the older horses, though. Handicaps are something that four-year-olds learn about. The good ones have to give away weight and Alysheba has been carrying extra pounds all year.

THIS YEAR, in its way, may have been just as rewarding as last year's for Dorothy and Pam Scharbauer, Midland's mother-daughter team who own Alysheba.

Not only has Alysheba silenced the critics by winning without lasix, but has responded to this year's challenges in gratifying style.

When they took the blinders off, Alysheba responded with record-breaking times. It's a horse that has done everything asked of it.

As rewarding as the victories last year, this year's may be even better.

A win in the Breeder's Cup Saturday not only could bring with it Horse of the Year honors, but ensure Alysheba's place in history, breaking John Henry's all-time money-winning record.

For Dorothy Scharbauer, it adds another chapter, win or lose, to a long-running love affair with thoroughbred racing that began more than 30 years ago.

That was when Figure Five, a gift from her father Fred Turner, won the first thoroughbred race ever at Ruidoso Downs.

Another 30 years went by before she decided to get serious about the sport, the result perhaps of a seed planted in 1958 when Tomy Lee, her father's favorite, won the Kentucky Derby.

Tomy Lee never even gave the Preakness or Belmont a whirl. "My father felt Tomy Lee's distance was the mile and he shipped him to California, where he liked to run his horses, after the Derby," Mrs. Scharbauer said.

Some have predicted if Alysheba accomplishes the ultimate triumph, it will lead to a pastoral life of luxury, one, it is supposed, that could be as monetarily rewarding in stud as the years of big purses.

TRAINER JACK Van Berg would like to see Alysheba run as a five-year-old and you can't blame him., The colt has enabled the veteran to attain a pinnacle in the profession he never before quite attained, establishing him as a household name in racing.

Whether Alysheba is turned out to stud or not, as Clarence Scharbauer, Jr., noted last year while enjoying the fruits of victory while enduring the intrusions of privacy that go with a Triple Crown candidate, "We are in racing to stay."

So while it may not be Alysheba, rest assured, the Scharbauers will be back.

McGaughey may be tough to beat

By ED SCHUYLER JR.
AP Racing Writer

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — Seeking The Gold is a member of Shug McGaughey's powerful stable, but it could be the trainer's Breeders' Cup slogan.

He will saddle favorites in three of the five $1 million races Saturday at Churchill Downs.

Two will be odds-on — the unbeaten filly Personal Ensign in the 1⅛-mile Distaff and Easy Goer in the 1 1-16-mile Juvenile. The other, Mining, is the 2-1 early choice in the six-furlong Sprint.

McGaughey also will start the entry of Seeking The Gold and Personal Flag against favored Alysheba in the $3 million classic at 1¼ miles.

Of course, this quantity of quality puts the trainer on the spot.

"I want to have favorites," McGaughey, 37, said Thursday. "I know all eyes are going to be on you, but that's the way I want it."

PERSONAL ENSIGN, Easy Goer and the entry are owned by Ogden Phipps. Mining is owned by his son, Ogden Mills Phipps.

Personal Ensign, a 4-year-old filly who has won all 12 of her starts, six this year, will be making the final start of her career.

"I don't think she can be any better or can Easy Goer being any better," McGaughey said. "If they run their races, they'll be hard to beat."

One of Personal Ensign's eight rivals will be Kentucky Derby winner Winning Colors, who will be one of trainer D. Wayne Lukas' 12 starters in four races.

Winning Colors, who has not won in four starts since the Derby, finished second, three-quarters of a length behind Personal Ensign, in the one-mile Maskette Sept. 10 at Belmont Park. In her last race, she was fourth, 15 lengths behind Distaff starter Hail a Cab in the 1½-mile Spinster Oct. at Keeneland.

Breeder's Cup

Easy Goer will face nine rivals in a bid for his fifth straight win, third in a row in a stakes. His only loss was by a nose in his debut Aug. 1.

"The only thing wrong with him is I don't have him," said Lukas, whose 1989 Kentucky Derby prospect, Houston, was not entered.

"He's a super nice horse. I'm just sorry he was born in the same year as Houston."

Also missing from the Juvenile will be Fast Play, a good looking winner of three of five starts who is owned by Ogden Phipps and trained by McGaughey.

"I think he would have been favorite if the other horse wasn't in it," McGaughey said.

The 4-year-old Mining is unbeaten in six starts, three of them this year, but the Sprint shapes up as anything but a one-horse race.

WITH 14 starters, the Sprint has the largest field of any of the seven Breeders' Cup races.

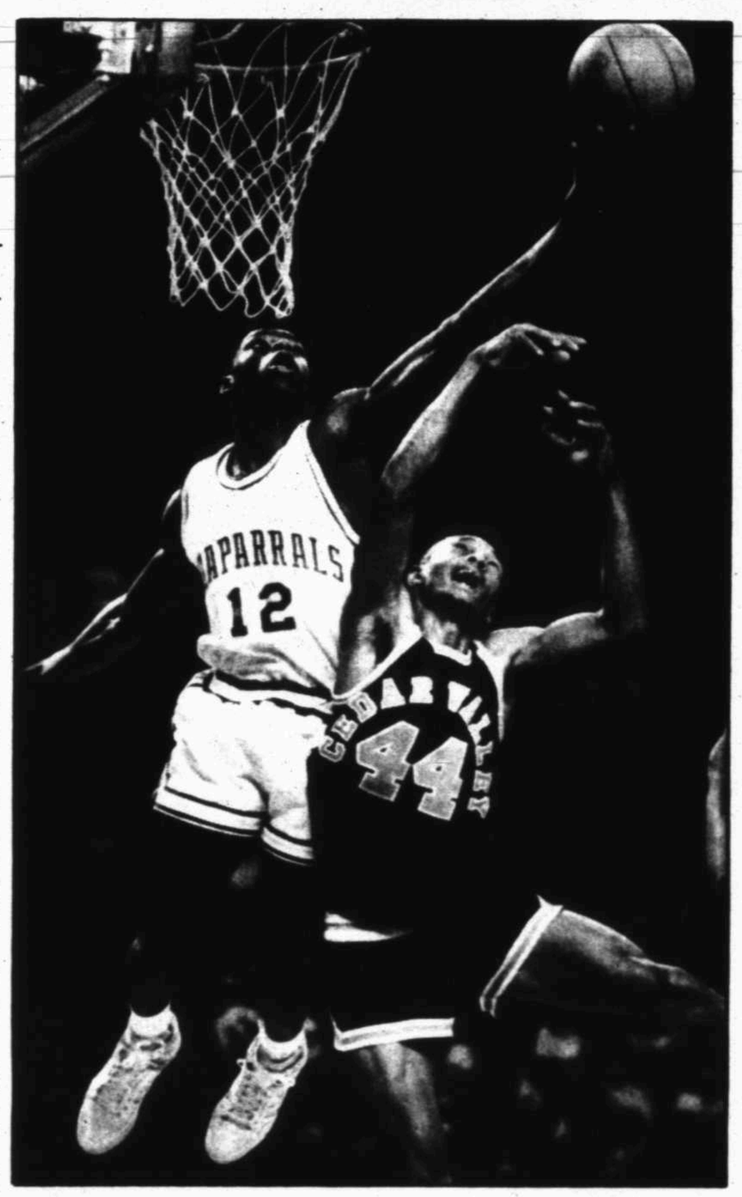

Mining's rivals include Olympic Prospect, winner of his last five races and of six of seven this year; Once Wild, unbeaten in four starts this year; and Precisionist, the winner of the Sprint in 1985.

Seeking the Gold, a 3-year-old colt, will take a record of six wins, four seconds in 11 starts this year. In his last start, Sept. 25, he won the Super Derby at Louisiana Downs.

The 5-year-old Personal Flag has won two of nine starts this year and was fourth in the Woodward, which was won by Alysheba Sept. 17 at Belmont Park.

Alysheba prepped for the Classic Thursday, by working one-half mile in 47 3-5 seconds.

The three races in which McGaughey won't be reprsented will be the $2 million Turf at 1½ miles, the $1 million Mile on the grass and the $1 million Juvenile Fillies over 1 1-16 miles.

Lakers beatable? Mavs try tonight

Associated Press

NBA

Are the Los Angeles Lakers beatable in 1988-89?

They became the first team since 1969 to repeat as NBA champion last season, and they added free agent Orlando Woolridge during the offseason, giving them their deepest bench of the 1980s.

But with three teams — Utah, Dallas and Detroit — taking the Lakers to the seven-game limit in the playoffs, there's hope around the league that Magic Johnson, Kareem Abdul-Jabbar and Co. can be taken.

"There are at least 10 or 11 teams I think that have a legitimate chance of winning the whole thing," Lakers coach Pat Riley said. "But I do guarantee one thing, our players are not tired of winning games. They are going to give us a legitimate chance of winning it again."

The Mavericks, who lost to Los Angeles in the Western Conference finals, gets the first chance to send a message tonight when they play host to the Lakers in Dallas.

The nationally televised game (TBS) is one of 10 NBA openers. Elsewhere, it's New York at Boston, Atlanta at New Jersey, the Los Angeles Clippers at Philadelphia, Cleveland at Charlotte, Milwaukee at Indiana, Detroit at Chicago, Houston at Denver, Seattle at Utah and Phoenix at Portland.

Charlotte joins Miami as expansion teams. The Heat plays its firs game at home Saturday night against the Clippers.

Dallas coach John MacLeod is looking forward to the challenge of facing the Lakers.

The Mavericks are standing pat with last season's Western Conference finalist.

Everyone in the West still regards the Lakers as the team to beat.

Denver's Doug Moe said he Lakers have a Midas touch.

"They can get guys off the scrap heap and keep them for a year or two and they're pretty good, where if you put them with another team they'd be in the tank," Moe said. "Like Mychal Thompson, he was struggling with San Antonio, struggling with Portland, then he goes to L.A. and plays pretty good."

"The Lakers have that supreme confidence," Seattle's Bernie Bickerstaff said.

Cleveland, the only team with a perfect record in the preseason, was only 11-30 on the road last season.

At Charlotte, the Cavaliers will face an emotional opponent in the expansion Hornets, who are led by former All-Star Kelly Tripucka, veteran Robert Reid and first-round draft pick Rex Chapman.

Suit field against Stargell

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A Superior Court judge has kept open a lawsuit filed against Hall of Famer Willie Stargell by his developmentally disabled daughter, who is seeking financial support.

Attorney Elizabeth Chidi, who represents Wendy Rebecca Stargell, persuaded Judge Edward Kakita to allow the case to remain active on Wednesday.

Kakita had threatened to dismiss the case because attorneys for Wendy Stargell had failed to contact the former Pittsburgh Pirates slugger since filing the lawsuit in May.

Wendy Stargell originally sought $2,000 a month. The documents filed Wednesday lowered that amount to $1,750 a month.

Sports in Brief

Baseball

CHICAGO (AP) — Jeff Torborg, 46, former major league catcher and manager of the Cleveland Indians, was named manager of the Chicago White Sox, succeeding Jim Fregosi, fired last month after finishing fifth in the AL West with a 71-90 record. Torborg, who had a 157-201 record with the Indians from 1977-79, has agreed to a two-year contract.

Football

LAKE FOREST, Ill. — Chicago Bears Coach Mike Ditka improved to fair condition following his mild heart attack the day before, as hospital workers fielded "hundred and hundreds" of calls of encouragement and his team faced Sunday's game without him.

McCaskey on Thursday named defensive coordinator Vince Tobin acting head coach to fill in until Ditka returns.

Golf

TUCSON, Ariz. — Russ Cochran shot a 65 to lead the Tucson Open by a stroke. Payne Stewart, South African David Frost, Corey Pavin and Mark Calcavecchia shot 66s to tie for second place.

Tennis

LONDON -- Zina Garrison and Patty Fendick overwhelmed their British opponents to give the United States a 2-0 lead in the 60th Wightman Cup tournament.

Garrison opened defense of the trophy with a 6-2, 6-4 victory over Jo Durie. Then, Fendick hammered Monique Javer 6-2, 6-1.

WORCESTER, Mass. — Martina Navratilova routed 17-year-old Susan Sloane in the New England Virginia Slims, but Pam Shriver lost to 1-6, 7-6 (9-7), 7-5 to 18-year-old Stephanie Rehe.

Hockey

NEW YORK — The NHL rescinded the final eight games of a 10-game suspension against Chicago defenseman David Manson, saying it could not determine whether he started a fight following a game against Vancouver. Manson received a two-minute penalty for instigating a skirmish with the Canucks' forward David Bruce.

Oilers face Kosar's Browns litmus test, and will fail

By DAVE GOLDBERG
AP Football Writer

How much is Bernie Kosar worth?

Check out the line when Kosar and the Browns visit the Astrodome Monday night — despite the Oilers' 41-17 demolition of the defending Super Bowl champions Sunday night, the Browns are favored by a 1½ points.

Does that make sense?

A rule of thumb: the more experienced team can usually stay up two straight weeks. A hunch that the Oilers will lose a little emotion; a hunch that Marty Schottenheimer can hold a team at a high level better than Jerry Glanville ...

BROWNS, 20-17

San Francisco (minus 3) at Phoenix

Someone doesn't think much of the home heat advantage, maybe because Steve Young, who will probably start for San Francisco, played in Tempe, with the USFL's Los Angeles Express. Go with the experience.

49ERs, 30-24.

New Orleans (plus 4) at Washington

The Redskins are hurting at cornerback, but the Saints are hurting at running back and the offensive line. If Bobby Hebert gets time, he can put up some points, but will he? ...

REDSKINS, 24-16

Buffalo (even) at Seattle

On the one hand, there's the Home Dome. On the other ... on second thought, go with the Dome.

SEAHAWKS, 17-16

Rams (minus 1) at Philadelphia

The best way to lose to the Eagles is to get ahead early. The Rams start slowly ...

RAMS 26-20

Jets (plus 4 1-2) at Indianapolis

Erik McMillan, the Jets' rookie safety, is leading the league in interceptions. When Eric Dickerson is in form, you don't have to pass.

COLTS, 19-14

Tampa Bay (plus 9 1-2) at Chicago

Beware the wounded Bear in his own pen.

BEARS, 30-7.

Dallas (plus 6 1-2) at Giants

The Giants, who won the first meeting 12-10, win ugly, but they win. The Cowboys hang in, but they lose ...

GIANTS, 12-10.

Hogs now looking toward national rep

By DENNE H. FREEMAN
AP Sports Writer

The unblemished Arkansas Razorbacks, who clinched a Cotton Bowl berth before Halloween, try to do something about their national ranking on Saturday against the always troublesome Baylor Bears.

The 11th-ranked Razorbacks (7-0) have yet to crack The Associated Press Top 10 and need to keep winning for the sake of Southwest Conference and Cotton Bowl prestige.

Waco isn't an easy place to do that, particularly on homecoming.

The Bears are 3-2-1 against the Hogs in homecoming games.

The last seven Baylor-Arkansas games have been decided in the fourth quarter.

Last year, Arkansas scored with 47 seconds to play to win 10-7 in Fayetteville.

Baylor had an off week to prepare for the Hogs, a team Bears' coach Grant Teaff calls "the best they've had since I've been at Baylor."

"Winning on the road against Texas and Houston like Arkansas has done is impressive," Teaff said. "Arkansas is a highly motivated team."

Quarterback Brad Goebel, tailbacks Anthony Ray and Eldwin Raphel, tight end David Bell and defensive end Eugene Hall used the off week to heal injuries and were probable starters for the Bears.

Oddsmakers rated the Hogs seven-point favorites for the 1 p.m. game at Baylor Stadium.

"Our next two games (Baylor and Texas A&M) are critical as far as the national rankings are concerned," said Arkansas coach Ken Hatfield. "But I don't worry about what other people think of us. The main poll everybody looks at is where you finish."

Arkansas closes the regular season on Nov. 26 against Miami, which embarrassed the Hogs 51-7 last year.

In other games this week, Texas Christian was a four-point pick over Texas Tech in Fort Worth, Houston was a five-point choice over Texas in Austin, and Texas A&M was a four touchdown favorite over Louisiana Tech in a non-conference game at College Station, and No. 1 ranked Notre Dame was a 32-point favorite over Rice at South Bend, Ind.

Texas Tech has won its last three meetings against TCU.

"TCU's going to have a score to settle with us," said Tech coach Spike Dykes. He said the biggest obstacle for the Raiders to overcome in Fort Worth might be the steps at Amon Carter Stadium.

Rangers anxious for outright title

By BILL GRIMES
Sports Writer

So what if the Greenwood Rangers have a bi-district playoff spot locked up, says Ranger coach Bob Purser.

Like the character played by Edward G. Robinson in the movie Key Largo, the Rangers want more, more, more.

"This is as big a game as any playoff game," Purser said. "This is a chance to win an outright district championship.

"We'll worry about the playoffs when we get there."

The Rangers have a chance to lock up their first-ever district championship with a win against Clint tonight at J.M. King Memorial Stadium. On the other hand, Clint must win and hope that Crane upsets Kermit in order for the Lions to edge into the playoffs by one-half game.

The Rangers, 7-2 overall, will be going for their eighth straight win against the Lions.

IN OTHER area action tonight, Iraan and McCamey will battle for the second playoff spot in District 5-2A; Marfa will try to deny Stanton an outright 5-2A championship; Reagan County tries to finish an undefeated season against Forsan; Andrews tries to stay in the 4-4A hunt at Fort Stockton; Big Spring hosts Snyder; Lamesa travels to Slaton; Rankin hosts Robert Lee; and Garden City hosts Sterling City.

Clint can finish no worse than 6-2-1, just one year after going winless. Lion coach Benny Reed said increased turnout helped the Lions get better.

"We had 18 varsity players out last year, and 35 out this year," Reed said. "We have the same kids and most of the same coaches, but the kids just responded to the change (in head coaches)."

Reed was able to shore up his receiving corps with some recruits off the basketball squad, including leading receivers Adrian Segura (5-9, 160) and Tony Bearden (6-4, 180). Segura has caught 11 passes for 235 yards and five touchdowns, while Bearden has nine catches for 155 yards and 3 TD's.

Damas Martinez and John Rangel split time at quarterback for the Lions. Martinez, a converted running back, has completed 22-of-39 passes for 401 yards and six touchdowns while Rangel is 15-36-170.

Fullback John Vasquez leads the Lions' rushing attack with 261 yards on 49 carries, while halfback Ulysses Duronslat has run for 213 yards and the quarterbacks Martinez and Rangel have combined for 228 ground yards.

The Lions have only scored 14 points a game, but the Clint defense led by highly-recruited linebacker George Martinez (6-0, 217 pounds) has allowed less than nine points a game. That defensive strength has given the Lion offense time to get untracked, Reed said.

"We haven't been very successful offensively in the first half," Reed said. "We've been good enough defensively to keep us in the game, then the offense finds a way to score."

Reed hopes his young offense can find more consistency against Greenwood. "We're a team that runs two or three plays and fumbles. But we have to establish some kind of execution.

"We can't just sit there and let them play with constant momentum."

That means Greenwood QB Randy Donnell must be stopped, and Reed's not sure that can be done.

"Donnell is a real good athlete. We also have to stop both fullbacks (Jimmy Cox and Jimmy O'Briant)."

RANGER NOTES: Halfback Randy Marquez will miss the Clint game with a bruised knee suffered on a punt return against Kermit, but should be available for bi-district play. Sophomore Jerry Gay will fill in for Marquez.

Clint will miss only linebacker Adrian Renteria from its starting lineup with a knee problem, but the senior is available for spot duty. Junior Alex Olmeda will start in his place.

Scratchpad

University of Cincinnati was banned from bowl games and postseason basketball tournaments for one year and its scholarships in both sports were cut because of NCAA rules violations. Cincinnati was placed on three years probation and will be limited in its financial aid to basketball players through the 1989-90 season and to football players through 1991-92.

Former Texas football players Earl Campbell — 1977 Heisman Trophy winner — and Bill Bradley will be inducted into the Longhorn Hall of Honor on Nov. 23, before the Texas A&M game. Others to be inducted: football player Joe Magliolo, 1942-43 and 1947; tennis player Dave Snyder, who now coaches the UT men's team; football player Howard Terry, 1935-37; baseball player J.R. "Potsy" Allen Sr., 1925-27; longtime athletic department employee Al Lundstedt; and former Austin sports writer Lou Maysel...

Minnesota Twins pitcher Bert Blyleven, a 19-year veteran, was traded to the California Angels for minor-leaguer pitchers Mike Cook, Rob Wassenaar and first-baseman Paul Sorrento. Blyleven, 37, is the Twins' winningest right-handed pitcher with 149 victories for the Twins. His career record with four major league teams is 234-226. He has also played with Pittsburgh, Cleveland and Texas.

Cook, a former Midland Angel, was at 5-9, 4.65 ERA at Edmonton in the PCL was 5-9 with a 4.65 ERA in 51 games. He was the Angels' first-round pick in the June 1985 free agent draft.

Vincent Askew, two years ago was recruited by the University of Kansas, admitted he accepted recruiting inducements from the school in the form of airline tickets, clothing, and cash for a no-show job, all in violation of NCAA regulations. In 1986, Askew had just completed his sophomore year at Memphis State but was looking to transfer and former Kansas coach Larry Brown recruited him.

Askew spent the summer of 1986 on the Kansas campus in Lawrence but never played for the Jayhaw[illegible]. He returned to Memphis State for his junior year, then skipped his final season and was drafted by the Philadelphia 76ers. But it was while he was being recruited by Kansas that several violations occurred.

National League umpire David Pallone is not expected to face charges in a case involving sexual activity with teen-age boys, according to the Saratoga, N.Y., County district attorney. Prosecutors never confirmed that Pallone was under investigation in connection with the case in which six men have been convicted or pleaded guilty to sexual activities with youths under age 17.

Dan Goldie eliminated top-seeded Mats Wilander 6-1, 6-4 Thursday night to reach the quarterfinals of the $642,500 Stockholm Open-Scandinavian tennis championships....Top-seeded Ivan Lendl, playing his first match following minor shoulder surgery, was routed 6-2, 6-2 Thursday by Amos Mansdorf in their second-round match at the $1 million European Community Championship.

Miami receives vote for No. 1

By Ed Zieralski
Copley News Service

The Port Arthur News, the best little newspaper in Texas, received a few calls this week questioning their sports department's Top 20 poll.

Each week, the Port Arthur News publishes its Top 20 teams, chosen by Bob West, the newspaper's voter in Associated Press' Top 20 poll. Last week, West looked East and placed Miami on top in his AP poll. When the rankings came out Tuesday, Miami was ranked third on the AP poll, but it also had one lonely No. 1 vote — thanks to Mr. West.

Why would West pick Miami above Notre Dame, which beat the Hurricanes, or USC, which is undefeated, or West Virginia, which also is undefeated? It wouldn't have anything to do with the fact that Miami head coach Jimmy Johnson is from Port Arthur, would it? Nah.

West was driving back from New Orleans and was unavailable for comment, but Port Arthur News assistant sports editor Howard Roden defended West's pick.

"We're going to come across as being biased because Jimmy is from here," Roden said. "But personally, I feel the same way as Bob. Consider that Miami made seven turnovers in a very hostile situation and it still came down to a controversial call by an official and a two-point conversion on top of everything.

"Notre Dame isn't going to play that well the rest of the year. And now they're dodging the good teams in the bowls. They don't want any part of a rematch with Miami. Bob made that call the day after the Miami-Notre Dame game. They don't want to play Miami on a neutral field. If they would, all the questions would be answered."

ROACH SHOTS

Speaking this week to the University of Wyoming boosters, the Cowboy Club, head coach Paul Roach began praising Texas-El Paso coach Bob Stull, whose Miners play at Wyoming this Saturday in an important WAC game. Roach made a couple of interesting comments. First he said that Stull is going to be one of the most sought-after head coaches in the nation this year, what with UTEP being 7-1, and then Roach said, according to a reporter who was in the audience, that he heard the University of Missouri and San Diego State were interested in hiring Stull.

SOONERS CONFIDENCE

Oklahoma has lost to Oklahoma State just three times in the past 43 years, so Oklahoma coach Barry Switzer really went out on a limb this week and said, "I think we'll win the game, sure."

NITTANY LIONS WHIMPER

West Virginia's 51 points against Penn State last week were the most ever scored on a Joe Paterno team. It has been 50 years since the Nittany Lions have had a losing season. Paterno has never had one at Penn State. But at 3-4-1, the Lions must win two of their final three to finish at .500. But those three opponents are Maryland (5-3), Pittsburgh (4-3) and No. 1-ranked Notre Dame (8-0). The whole picture at the once-Happy Valley campus is so bleak that it has led one PSU alumnus to say: "It's the end of civilization as we know it. The barbarians are at the gates."

QUICK READS

• Stephen F. Austin's defense spent a lot of time with North Texas quarterback Scott Davis last week. Davis was sacked seven times, intercepted six times and had six of his passes deflected in the big 17-10 upset of No. 1 Division I-AA ranked North Texas.

• Historians have found that since instituting football at Wyoming in 1893, the Cowboys never had allowed 45 points in a game and won, which is what the 'Pokes did when they beat Air Force 48-45 earlier in the season. On the other side, AFA had never scored 45 points and lost.

• At one point in the recent Air Force-Utah game, won 56-49 by Air Force, Rocky Mountain News sportswriter Randy Holtz jumped up and yelled: "Somebody tackle somebody." Holtz also was quoted in the Salt Lake Desert News as saying: "This is a bastardization of football."

• Pro football scouts are beginning to look at Wyoming quarterback Randy Welniak as a prospect because of his productivity. Very smart, good athlete, adequate arm. He's a Bob Griese-Pat Haden type.

• The Sanders household gained 426 yards last week. Barry got a school-record 320 yards for Oklahoma State, and brother Byron chipped in 106 for Northwestern. Byron on his Heisman candidate brother: "I used to tell the guys here about him. Now they tell me what he's doing."

Hartford snaps Bruin win streak

Associated Press

Hartford's Whalers jumped to a 3-0 lead in the first eight minutes Thursday night to snap the Bruins' eight-game unbeaten streak (5-0-3) with a 5-3 victory at Boston Garden.

"They're the top team in the league and it's their building," said Whalers goaltender Mike Liut, who made several critical saves in the final period.

NHL

Boston was coming off an easy 7-2 victory over Toronto on Wednesday night, but the Whalers' Sylvain Turgeon scored goals at 1:15 and 4:42 of the first period and the Bruins never caught up.

Canucks 5, Flyers 2

Barry Pederson scored two goals as visiting Vancouver sent Philadelphia to its seventh loss in nine games.

Pederson made it 1-0 when he tipped in Tony Tanti's slap shot that deflected off Flyers defenseman Jeff Chychrun past goalie Ron Hextall at 8:49 of the first period. The Canucks won at the Spectrum for only the ninth time in 38 visits since joining the NHL in 1970.

Nordiques 6, Penguins 2

Walt Poddubny scored three goals as Quebec beat Pittsburgh in a game the Penguins' Mario Lemieux was forced to leave because of a sprained wrist.

Blackhawks 4, North Stars 1

Steve Thomas had a goal and an assist to lead Chicago, opening the scoring on the power play when he took a pass from Keith Brown and drove a 30-footer past Minnesota goaltender Jon Casey at 8:05.

Jets 3, Devils 3

Andrew McBain scored with 7:49 left in the third period to give Winnipeg a tie with New Jersey at the Meadowlands.

Flames 6, Blues 1

Colin Patterson scored two goals to lead Calgary past visiting St. Louis, scoring on a screened 35-foot slap shot in the second period to give the Flames a 3-1 lead. He made it 4-1 with just over 12 minutes remaining when Doug Gilmour picked off Dave Richter's clearing attempt and sent Patterson in alone for his fourth goal of the season.

'Hit Man' Hearns faces Kinchen with hopes of Leonard rematch

LAS VEGAS (AP) — Thomas Hearns, fighting again in the shadow of Sugar Ray Leonard, meets veteran James Kinchen tonight in a super middleweight fight that could propel Hearns into a Leonard rematch.

Hearns has vowed to bring back the "Hit Man" of his prime and needs to look impressive to keep his dream alive of getting a rematch of his famous September 1981 fight with Leonard.

Leonard, who fights Monday night against Donny Lalonde, will be watching from ringside as Hearns tries to rebound from a third-round knockout loss in June to Iran Barkley and regain the form that has seen him knock out 38 of his 48 opponents.

"I'm going back to what made me the 'Hit Man,'" Hearns said. "I'm going out there and taking them out as soon as possible."

Two other title fights are on the card, with International Boxing Federation middleweight champion Michael Nunn defending his title for the first time against Argentina's Juan Domingo Roldan and IBF junior middleweight champion Matthew Hilton meeting No. 1-ranked Robert Hines.

The fight card will be televised via pay-per-view beginning about 8 p.m.

Kinchen, a San Diego fighter with a record of 45-4-2 with 32 knockouts, is a late replacement for Fulgencio Obeljemias, the World Boxing Council super middlweight champion, who pulled out of the fight three weeks ago with a fractured rib.

The change in opponents cost Hearns a chance to earn an unprecedented fifth title — something Leonard can do by winning two titles Monday night against Lalonde — although the newly-formed World Boxing Organization says it plans to make the winner of the fight its first champion.

More important to Hearns than any title, however, is a possible rematch with Leonard, a fight he has been chasing for more than seven years.

Leonard has said he is done retiring and plans to fight again within a year if he beats Lalonde, and Hearns thinks a rematch of their first fight would be a natural.

"I'm hoping and praying that it does happen," said Hearns, who will earn $750,000 to $150,000 for Kinchen. "I think this will be the one thing that will draw him (Leonard) in."

Leonard has referred to Friday's fights at the Las Vegas Hilton as "only an undercard" to his Monday fight at Caesars Palace, though Hearns insists Leonard is not the only star attraction.

"Ray Leonard is not a shadow over Thomas Hearns now," said the Detroit fighter. "I have four titles, Ray Leonard doesn't."

Troy Waters risks title against Santos

SYDNEY, Australia (AP) — Commonwealth junior-middleweight boxing champion Troy Waters of Australia will face former International Boxing Federation champion Carlos Santos of Puerto Rico in a non-title fight in Canberra on Dec. 2, promoter Marty Rhone said today.

Waters, 23, is currently ranked second in the division by the IBF and 10th by the World Boxing Council. He has an 11-1 record.

Santos is rated seventh by the IBF and sixth by the World Boxing Association. The 33-year-old, left-hander is a 13-year pro who has lost only three times in his career — to Wilfred Benitez, Buster Drayton and Donald Curry.

Waters is hoping for a world title shot within six months, and promoter-manager Rhone admitted his fighter was taking a risk facing Santos.

"Santos is one of best credentialed boxers to come to Australia, but Troy's last two fights have only lasted a total of three rounds and we need to get him some boxing," Rhone said.

"We are taking a risk, but you have to fight the top guys if you want to be champion of the world."

The bill will be the first international boxing promotion ever held in the Australian capital, Rhone said.

JIM MURRAY

Look who is red in face this time

Murray

The last time Washington State went to the Rose Bowl, Herbert Hoover was President, Hitler had not even gotten started, Mussolini was running Italy, the Great Depression was just starting, bread was a nickel, new Fords were $600, the movies were just beginning to talk, Max Schmeling was heavyweight champion of the world, and everybody listened to Eddie Cantor on the radio on Sunday night.

It wasn't much of a game. Washington State — the Cougars had formerly been known as the Red Devils — showed up in red from helmets to shoes and someone pointed out that, by nightfall, they had faces to match. Alabama hoodwinked them badly, 24-0.

I DON'T know about you but I hate to see people who just don't understand the situation riding out for an annual clobbering and thinking it's just a lousy stinking coincidence. Quixotic impulses are all right for the stage and screen but they just don't work in real life.

So, I went out to the UCLA-Washington State game Saturday, determined to do something for the public good. I was just going to tell the Washington State administration to give it up. Stop being the palookas of the Pac-10. Go play Idaho State or somebody but stop tilting at windmills. Leave the big boys alone. It was getting like watching somebody pull the wings off butterflies.

I mean, these looked like a nice bunch of kids. You wanted to tell them to be careful, this wasn't Pullman or the Palouse down here. Try to remember the Brooklyn Bridge is not for sale. Don't buy a watch from anyone on the corner of Hollywood and Vine, don't put any money down on a house in the mountains, don't bid on any car that once belonged to Rudolph Valentino.

AS A MATTER of fact, don't drink the water. Or eat the oranges. You may remember, back in '31, Cougar Coach Babe Hollingberry blamed his defeat in the Rose Bowl on his players eating too many oranges.

Look! I wanted to tell those green kids. This UCLA team you're playing is ranked No. 1 in the country. They've got a quarterback who's fixing to win the Heisman Trophy and they've got a backfield which will be the Green Bay Packers' in a year or two. I didn't plan to look. I'd rather watch Titanic movies.

I thought to myself, don't these guys ever learn? I mean, you looked up their past few trips down here. Last year, USC beat them, 42-7. In 1986, UCLA beat them, 54-16. UCLA beat them here one year, 62-3, and USC beat them, 51-21, in 1979.

So, I settled in, hoping Washington State hadn't eaten too many oranges. Or painted their shoes red. It wasn't going to be a game, just a kind of complicated track meet for UCLA.

THE GAME was as formful as I thought it would be. UCLA was ahead, 27-6, in no time at all. I had a moment of misgiving once. At the half, with a minute to play, UCLA had the lead and the ball on its own 20 and the best passer in the universe — we're told —in the backfield. Twice, they fell on the ball.

Now, I'm an old Jack Dempsey man, myself. Or a Nick the Greek. When you have your man on the ropes and dazed and bleeding, you don't step back and wait for the bell. You go for it. You try to put him away. You don't clinch and look up at the clock.

When you have a ribbon clerk in the game, and you have the cards, you don't say, "I'll pass." You see him and raise. You run him out of the game. Bet the ace.

But, I suppose the unthinkable began to look possible in the second period when, with the score 27-13, UCLA had the ball on its own 20 and Eric Ball went roaring around end for 20 yards. And fumbled.

Within 5 plays, Washington State had scored. Their quarterback ran twice for 23 yards as UCLA, fearing his passing game, had scrambled backward desperately.

IT WAS, as it happens, the old ball game. In no time, Washington State had tied the game, 27-27. UCLA went briefly ahead, 30-27, but UCLA lost its poise. The Bruins began hitting men out of bounds and grabbing face masks.

Much was made of the fact that UCLA, to use a baseball term, died on third as the game ended. Troy Heisman could not find anybody open. But that's academic. The score probably should have been 40-27, UCLA, by that time. UCLA over-relied on the pass not only then but all day, airing it out 44 times, 4 times in a row as the game ended.

None of this dampened the joy in the Washington State locker room later. If this team were a fighter, it would be named Rocky. Its games are like barroom fights, all offense. These guys can hit. They beat Illinois, 44-7; Minnesota, 41-9; Tennessee, 52-24, and California, 44-13. Even in games it loses, it scores 28 points.

It's not a team to go toe to toe with. It's a team you try to keep the ball away from.

Its quarterback is from the wheat-and-apples country. Neither SC nor UCLA had any interest in Timm Rosenbach as a high schooler but this day he had gone into the game as No. 1 in the nation in passing efficiency and No. 3 in total offense. His 16-for-25 passing, with 2 touchdowns, one on an 81-yard play, did nothing to diminish his reputation.

When someone asked, "Do you think you should get some consideration for the Heisman now?" a lot of people thought his response would be "What's a Heisman?" Instead, it was a cool "That's up to the voters."

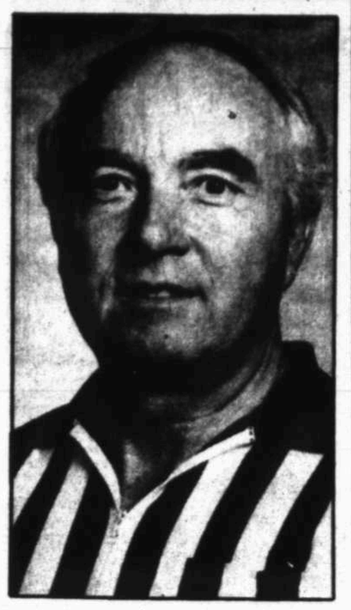

CLEARLY, they're getting delusions of the big time up in the Palouse. They may even want to make the Rose Bowl. Once every 57 years isn't bad.

If they make it, we should get out a whole bunch of Essex and LaSalle cars, put an Irving Berlin on the gramophone and re-run some old Garbo movies.

We already got Shirley Temple as the parade marshal. Perfect! She was probably just learning to sing "The Good Ship Lollipop" the last time Washington State went to the New Year's Day game.

Honored by SBOA

The Southwest Basketball Officials Association recently honored Durward Wright, Midland County Commissioner, and Jack Ratcliff, San Jacinto Junior High principal, with "Honorary Lifetime Membership" in the SBOA. The awards were in recognition of their many years of officiating at the high school and college level and meritorious contributions to basketball officiating. Wright and Ratcliff have been officials for more than 20 years and served as officers and directors of the local chapter.

Goddard White wins cage title

From Staff Reports

Goddard White, coached by Susan Nix, defeated Goddard Black by a 47-42 margin Thursday night at the Goddard gym to win the eighth grade girls basketball city tournament championship.

Goddard Black, coached by Eddie Knight, won the regular season championship and had beaten White in two overtime games during the season, but White came back for the city title, winning in regulation play.

Brandye Hejl led the White with 17 points while Rosie Eaden had 11 for the Black.

In third place action, San Jacinto Green beat Alamo Grey, 47-41. Jackie Perez scored a tournament high 25 points on her birthday for Green while Lasandra Bowers had 24 for Alamo.

In the consolation game, San Jacinto White won 40-27 over Alamo Red with Alisha Gonzales hitting 11 points for the winners. Amanda Wyles had four points to lead Red.

Tech cages AIA

LUBBOCK (AP) — Seniors Sean Gay and Wes Lowe combined for 33 points to lead Texas Tech to an 87-79 victory over Athletes in Action in an exhibition basketball game Thursday night.

Gay had 18 points and Lowe had 15 to help the Red Raiders.

Lone Star Conference

DALLAS (AP) — Previews of college football games of Nov. 5 involving Lone Star Conference teams:

ABILENE CHRISTIAN (2-6, 2-3) at TEXAS A&I (6-2, 4-1), 7:30 p.m., Javelina Stadium (17,500), Kingsville — Ron Harms' Javelinas trying to stay in contention for LSC title and NCAA Division II playoffs. A&I ranked fourth in nation before last week's 32-18 decision over ENMU. RBs Johnny Bailey and Heath Sherman combined for 322 yards and 4 TDs against ENMU. Bailey is LSC rushing leader at 144.3, and Sherman is tops in scoring (84 pts) and runner-up in rushing (112.8). QB James Guidry directs offense which gets 35.5 pts and 441.8 yds per game. Javelina defense gives up 287.4 yds per game. A&I has won last 4 games in this series...ACU gained 417 yds in air last week, but Wildcats dropped 39-24 decision to league-leading East Texas State. Wildcat defense now without five starters out with injuries. FB Gerald Todd is 3rd in rushing (85.8) and 4th in all-purpose yds (111.5) in LSC, and he's ACU team leader in pass receptions (25). QB Stan Stephens has thrown for 1,261 yds and 10 TDs for coach John Payne.

ANGELO STATE (5-3, 4-1) at EAST TEXAS STATE (8-1, 5-0), 2 p.m., Memorial Stadium (10,000), Commerce — One of top NCAA Division II games. East Texas ranked 2nd nationally with 39-24 victory over ACU last week. QBs Mike Trigg and Bobby Bounds and RB Jarrod Owens led Lion offense. Owens' 86-yd TD run was 2nd longest in ETSU history. Trigg has thrown for 1,189 yds and 15 TDs. DE Kit Morton had 3 QB sacks as Lions held ACU to 41 yds on ground. Lion defense leads LSC with 21 interceptions for league-leading plus 13 in turnover ratio. Win will give ETSU at least tie for 1988 LSC football title with one game to play...Angelo State can still claim at least tie for championship with wins in final 2 games under coach Jerry Vandergriff. QB Mickey Russell is LSC Offensive Player of Week after 17-20-0 performance in 38-7 win over Cameron good for 311 yds and 3 TDs.

EASTERN NEW MEXICO (2-6, 0-5) at WEST TEXAS STATE (1-7, 0-5), 7:30 p.m., Kimbrough Memorial Stadium (20,000), Canyon – Battle to avoid cellar. Both teams are 0-5. last weekend WTSU lost 27-15 to Central State and ENMU lost 32-18 to Texas A&I. QB Mike Scott of ENMU has thrown for 1,083 yds and 5 TDs (2 vs. A&I) for coach Don Carthel, and ENMU has 3 of league's top 6 receivers. DB Anthony Pertile and LB Brian Roberson lead ENMU defense. Pertile is LSC interception leader (6), and Roberson has been Defensive Player of Week twice...WTSU depends on passing arm of QB Doak Taylor, LSC leader in passing and total offense with 1,777 yds and 15 TDs.

Marino, Lomax picks

NEW YORK (AP) — Quarterbacks Dan Marino of Miami and Neil Lomax of St. Louis and linebackers Cornelius Bennett of Buffalo and Charles Haley of San Francisco were honored by the NFL Thursday.

Marino was selected AFC Offensive Player of the Month for October and Bennett was chosen the AFC's Defensive Player of the Month, while Lomax was named NFC Offensive Player and Haley was picked as the Defensive Player.

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: Be careful not to burn any bridges. You may want to return one day. You will need all the allies you can muster to make a new business idea work. Romance will have a special glow during the winter holidays and again next summer. January and February will bring an exciting turn of events in business. Distant lands beckon you to new financial and pleasure opportunities. You find someone who shares your delight in the great outdoors.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: actress Tatum O'Neal, playwright Sam Shepard, Celtics star Bill Walton, actress Vivien Leigh, singer Paul Simon.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): A disciplined, coherent approach will carry you far today. You will be amused by someone who attempts to deceive you. Credit is available if you need it. Romance enjoys highly favorable influences.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Keep spending in check. Bargains are available if you are willing to look around when shopping. Share good news with the deserving. Let romance simmer while you decide how you really feel.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Devote more time to research and quiet study before completing an important business assignment. Seek experts' advice on marketing new ideas. Romance deserves a second chance. Wear your heart on your sleeve.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Disregard a gossip who may not have all the facts. A dream you have shared with your favorite person comes true today. Get ready for a wonderful surprise! Enjoy some family fun tonight.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Look forward to a great time at a reunion with family or old friends. You learn something interesting this afternoon. Be ready to make some changes in your lifestyle. Romance sizzles.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Get to work on unfinished projects. You will be amazed by how much you can accomplish in a few hours. Ask mate to help if interested. Meeting problems head-on leads to quick solutions.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Dare to be original and you will reap fantastic rewards. Accept a last-minute invitation and you could have the time of your life. Do not let a broken promise mar your day.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Your social life takes a turn for the better. You make new friends. One of them could even develop into a new romantic partner. You discover you have many mutual interests.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): A problem you thought you had with a child takes care of itself. Be grateful that no trust was broken. Make realistic plans for the upcoming holidays.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Shop around before making a major purchase. Credit is available if you cannot afford to pay cash. Give more thought to renovating your home. Family members are willing painters!

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): A personal problem could have you stumped. Seek advice from a close friend. Postpone writing letters that should be composed when you feel less emotional. A platonic relationship is a source of happiness.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Be more patient with a small child who may not be feeling up to par. Quiet activities and lots of gentle affection will have a soothing effect. Do not overdo food or beverages.

Opening lead: Ace of ♠

We are often asked whether we think that artificial club systems are better than the more natural ones employed by the vast majority of players. In the hands of a top-flight pair, perhaps so. However, most of these methods are too involved for the average player, and they have some odd drawbacks that can be exploited by astute defenders. This hand was played in a national championship.

North-South were using the Precision Club System, in which opening bids of one in a suit other than clubs showed a hand with fewer than 16 high-card points. West put this knowledge to good use to defeat a close contract.

In normal methods, South's one spade opening could be as strong as 20-21 points, so the auction would carry little information. However, West knew from South's opening bid that South could not have more than 15 HCP. Therefore, South had to have a highly distributional hand to jump to game after receiving only a simple raise.

A distributional hand meant ruffs somewhere. To cut down on that possibility, West elected to lead ace of spades and another. That proved to be deadly. Declarer could ruff only one diamond in dummy, so he had to concede two diamonds and a club in addition to the ace of trumps.

Note that, without a trump lead, declarer has plain sailing. Since he can get to ruff at least two diamonds in dummy, he will come home with his contract. Indeed, on some lines he might even end up with an overtrick.

Rivera breaks nose during scramble on his talk show

Geraldo Rivera, lower right holding microphone, ducks away from a melee that broke out during a taping of the "Geraldo" show in New York Thursday.

NEW YORK (AP) — A television show on "hatemongers" being taped by Geraldo Rivera erupted into a brawl that left the host with a broken nose and what he said was a hard-earned lesson: "Throw the first punch next time."

The melee broke out Thursday when a young white supremacist uttered racist remarks, prompting black civil rights leader Roy Innis to grab him by the neck. Pushing and shoving followed, "skinheads" stormed the stage and chairs and punches were thrown.

"I've been in plenty of scrapes before, but never in a studio," Rivera said afterward. "I never expected this. I anticipated heated words, but I didn't know it would boil into violence."

Rivera concluded the taping and taped two more shows before having his nose X-rayed. He said his nose was broken. "It clicks when I move it," he said.

During the brawl, which last about a minute, Rivera got into a toe-to-toe fistfight with a burly man who threw a chair. At some point, he was hit in the nose by another chair, he said.

"It was like a bench-clearing brawl at a hockey match," Rivera said. "About a dozen of them came out of the audience. The three punks on stage would have been easy to handle."

The brawl started when one of the guests on the show, John Metzger, the 20-year-old leader of the White Aryan Resistance Youth, complained about "kikes" and called Innis an "Uncle Tom."

Innis walked across the set to Metzger, his fists balled, then turned to another panelist who was warning him off. Metzger then began to stand and Innis put his hands around Metzger's neck.

"I moved on him," Innis said. "A guy's gonna jump up in my face, I'm not going to wait for damage. He got the Sharpton treatment."

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Vanna White, the letter-turning beauty of "Wheel of Fortune," has filed a $1 million lawsuit against an electronics company and its advertising agency claiming they are using her likeness without permission.

The advertisements selling televisions and stereos for Samsung Electronics show a likeness of Miss White standing on a copy of the television game-show set, Miss White's personal manager, Ray Manzella, said Thursday.

"What Samsung has done is unauthorized and they will have to answer for it," he said.

The suit targets Samsung, of New York, and its advertising agency, David Deutsch Associates, Inc., also of New York.

It seeks $1 million in damage and unspecified punitive damages.

PHOENIX (AP) — A model has filed a $480,000 lawsuit against former New York Jets football star Mark Gastineau, claiming he broke promises and lied to her during their three-year relationship.

Jodee Dominici of Phoenix claims in the suit filed Thursday in Maricopa County Superior Court that Gastineau, whom she met in February 1985, talked her into quitting her modeling job to help manage his business and personal affairs.

Ms. Dominici, who appeared on the television show "Star Search" in October 1985, says Gastineau told her he was single when he actually was married and failed to tell her about his marital status until they had dated about a month.

It also claims Gastineau took $12,000 she received in personal injury settlements and never returned it to her.

Gastineau and Ms. Dominici ended their relationship in January 1988 when Gastineau began seeing actress Brigitte Nielsen. Gastineau resigned from the Jets last month after Ms. Nielsen said she had cancer of the uterus.

NORMAL, Ill. (AP) — Chrysler Corp. Chairman Lee Iacocca assembled his company's board of directors here to visit the new Diamond-Star Motors Corp. auto assembly plant, but the trip wasn't all business.

Iacocca took time from the monthly board meeting Wednesday to take a spin in a couple of new Plymouth Lasers around Diamond-Star's test track.

Iacocca is scheduled to drive the first car off the assembly line at the plant's formal opening ceremony next week.

UNEMPLOYMENT

Unemployment rate still improving

Over 300,000 new jobs added

Source: U.S. Dept. of Labor

WASHINGTON (AP) — The nation's civilian unemployment rate fell to 5.3 percent in October as the economy created more than 300,000 jobs, the government said today in its last major economic report before Tuesday's presidential election.

The 0.1 percentage point drop in the rate from September's 5.4 percent matched June's rate as the lowest since May 1974.

President Reagan, leaving the White House to campaign for George Bush, said the report was "very, very good news for all Americans"

"The future is bright and its getting brighter. ... Nothing's going to stop us now."

Employers added 325,000 jobs last month, more than the average monthly increases of 240,000 in August and September but comparable to last spring's gains of 300,000 a month.

Nearly 100,000 of October's new jobs were on assembly lines, more than double the drop of 45,000 manufacturing jobs over the two previous months.

Today's figures showed 193,000 more Americans at work than in September, with the number of jobless people totaling only 6.5 million.

The report said that the percentage of working-age Americans with jobs remained at a record 62.4 percent.

The number of women holding jobs grew by 320,000 while the number of working men fell by 99,000, according to the Labor Department's monthly survey of 58,000 households.

Food processing paced the unusually large manufacturing job gains with 25,000 new jobs logged in October. The department said, however, that the seasonally adjusted increase in those jobs reflected fewer fall cutbacks than would normally be the case because of light summer hiring caused by the drought.

After "several months of drought-related slowdowns, the one month pickup in manufacturing jobs may thus be somewhat overstated," said the commissioner of labor statistics, Janet L. Norwood.

Nonetheless, she told the congressional Joint Economic Committee that there are 422,000 more factory jobs now than had been the case a year ago.

Despite October's strong growth, the department said, employment in just nine of the 20 manufacturing industries was above July's levels. Other industries showing significant gains included lumber and wood products, steel and aluminium, machinery, motor vehicles, and rubber and plastics.

The 231,000 new jobs on the services side of the economy were paced by gains of 50,000 in retail trade, 47,000 in health services and 21,000 in wholesale trade.

Grocery stores, restaurants and bars all posted healthy gains. Department store employment, however, edged downward for the fourth straight month.

Despite the large manufacturing gains and a drop in new orders last month, factory workers continued to average four hours a week in overtime.

Average hourly earnings rose five cents last month to $9.49, an increase of 3.8 percent over the last 12 months. In terms of purchasing power, however, those wages were buying 1 percent less than they had a year earlier.

Among the various population groups, the Labor Department reported these unemployment rates:

—Men, 5.3 percent, up from 5.2 percent.

—Women. 5.2 percent, down from 5.5 percent.

—Whites, 4.6 percent, down from 4.8 percent.

—Blacks, 11.0 percent, up from 10.8 percent.

—Hispanics, 7.7 percent, up from 7.4 percent.

—Teenagers, 14.9 percent, down from 15.7 percent.

—Black teenagers, 26.5 percent, down from 32.2 percent.

Unemployment up in Texas

AUSTIN (AP) — Statewide unemployment in Texas rose less than one-half of 1 percent from September to October, according to figures released by the Texas Employment Commission.

Texas unemployment was up four-tenths of a percent to 7.4 percent in October, up from 7 percent in September, marking the third straight monthly increase.

Bryan Richey, regional commissioner for the U.S. Bureau of Labor Statistics in Dallas, said the edging up of unemployment in Texas is tied to a national economic slowdown.

Richey also said Texas is experiencing a unique economic situation in light of what has taken place with oil and gas and agriculture, along with the continued re-structuring of financial institutions throughout the state.

Richey said the Texas labor force is up slightly.

In October, the labor force was about 8.36 million. That compares with about 8.35 million in September.

The total number of workers on the job was down slightly in October, to 7.73 million, compared with the previous month's 7.76 million.

The total number of jobless in October was about 620,000, compared with about 586,000 in September, officials said.

Oil prices cross $14 level

From Staff and Wire Reports

Oil futures prices continued higher this morning, crossing the $14 barrier.

At midmorning on the New York Mercantile Exchange, contracts for December delivery of West Texas Intermediate were at $14.07, up 17 cents from Thursday's close. Thursday contracts closed at $13.90 a barrel, up 15 cents. The contract rose 31 cents on Wednesday.

Also on the NYMEX, the December contract for unleaded gasoline increased 1.41 cents to settled at 45.20 cents per gallon, after rising 0.17 cent on Wednesday. Other contract months were higher.

Among other refined petroleum products, wholesale home heating oil, which rose 0.18 cent a gallon in the previous session, was up another 0.97 cent to 44.32 cents.

John O'Connell, senior energy analyst for Refco Inc., attributed the gains mainly to technical buying in the absence of any market-moving news.

"I was a little bit surprised of the strength of the market," he said. "I think people are just nervous in front of the (OPEC) meeting."

The Organization of Petroleum Exportng Countries plans to meet Nov. 17 to discuss cutting production to prop up sagging worldwide oil prices.

Dollar rises in cautious trading

LONDON (AP) — The U.S. dollar rose against most major currencies this morning in moderate European trading as the market cautiously eyed the upcoming U.S. presidential election.

Gold prices drifted lower as a rally in platinum, caused by tight supplies, lost momentum and as the dollar remained steady.

Foreign exchange dealers predicted the dollar would rise ahead of the U.S. balloting-next Tuesday, although it would trade in a narrow range.

"The market is very cautious right now," said a dealer at a major West German bank in Frankfurt. "People are liquidating exposure on the downside, fearing the market might turn around and head higher before Tuesday is over."

But dealers said market players agreed the dollar is bound to decline after the elections.

In London, the dollar strengthened against the British pound. It cost $1.7783 to buy one pound, cheaper for buyers than $1.7805 late Thursday.

Other mid-morning dollar rates in Europe compared with late Thursday:

—1.7820 West German marks, up from 1.7760

—1.4920 Swiss francs, up from 1.4863

—6.0830 French francs, up from 6.0565

—2.0098 Dutch guilders, up from 1.9990

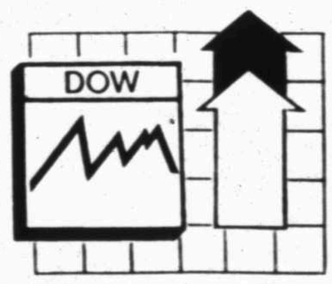

—1,325.00 Italian lire, up from 1,317.50

—1.2220 Canadian dollars, down from 1.2234

In Tokyo, the dollar closed at 124.63 yen, down 0.05 yen from Wednesday's close. Japanese markets were closed Thursday for a national holiday. In London, the dollar was trading Friday at 124.45 yen.

Gold opened in London at a bid price of $422.25 a troy ounce, unchanged from the late bid price Thursday. At mid-morning, London's five major bullion dealers fixed a recommended price of $419.50.

Steady dollar aids stock market

NEW YORK (AP) — Steadiness in the dollar after a recent prolonged decline helped boost the stock market Thursday.

The advance was led by blue-chip issues. The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials ended 13.51 points higher at 2,170.34, after rising gradually through most of the session. The widely watched indicator had been up more than 21 points at 3 p.m. EST, but gave ground just before the close of trading.

Much of the gain in the Dow average was attributed to a surge in Sears Roebuck, one of its components.

Sears shares soared 3 to 46, driven by unconfirmed rumors that investor Ronald Perelman is poised to make a bid for the giant retailer. Sears announced a major restructuring on Monday.

In the broader market, advancing issues outpaced declines by about 4 to 3 in nationwide trading of New York Stock Exchange-listed stocks, with 781 issues up, 652 down and 545 unchanged.

Bank failure 102

FDIC closes Houston bank

DALLAS (AP) — Customers of Texas failed bank No. 102, Southwest National Bank of Houston, will find their deposits in a new institution today, Spring (Texas) National Bank.

Southwest National Bank, with total assets of about $16.9 million, was closed Thursday by Judith A. Walter, senior deputy comptroller of the currency.

A statement read by Caryl Austrian, a Federal Deposit Insurance Corp. spokeswoman in Washington, said the FDIC was named receiver.

"The failed bank's Southwest Freeway branch will not reopen," the statement said. "Insured depositors will have access to their funds at the former main office of the failed bank on Friday."

The statement said checks drawn on the failed bank's accounts up to the insurance limit were to be honored on Thursday.

The closing brings to 176 the number of failed banks in the nation this year, with 102 of those in Texas.

"The board of directors of the FDIC decided to arrange an insured deposit transfer because of an inability to determine the value of the assets," the statement said.

At the time the bank closed, its deposits totaled about $16.5 million in 1,600 deposit accounts, including about $400,000 in 21 accounts exceeding the federal insurance limit of $100,000, the FDIC said.

Uninsured depositors and non-deposit creditors will share proportionately with the FDIC in proceeds related from the liquidation of the failed bank's assets, the statement said.

Insured depositors in the failed bank can automatically continue to conduct their banking transactions with the acquiring bank, the statement said, but should visit the acquiring bank to discuss the continuation of their banking relationship.

Administration of the transferred insured deposits will be funded by an equivalent cash payment from the FDIC, the statement said.

The acquiring bank is paying the FDIC $27,630 for the right to receive the transferred deposits, will initially purchase $2.7 million of the failed bank's assets and will have the option to purchase loans and other assets.

Retail sales improving

Long-dormant apparel sales continued reviving during October, but consumers still spent gingerly on other merchandise, the nation's largest general retailers report.

Sears, Roebuck and Co. said Thursday its overall sales were up 7.5 percent last month, while K mart Corp. said its sales rose 5.8 percent and Wal-Mart Stores Inc. reported its sales rose 24 percent.

But several analysts contended October's results looked better than they really were, because they were being compared against the very weak sales of a year earlier.

AUTO SALES

U.S. cars, light trucks perk October sales

N.Y. Times News Service

DETROIT — Late-October sales of new American-made cars and light trucks rose 6.7 percent from the comparable period last year, the seven domestic auto manufacturers reported on Thursday.

But analysts said the comparison had to be taken with a grain of salt because last year's sales were depressed by the expiration of incentive programs and, to a lesser extent, by the initially unnerving effects of the stock market crash.

"I think, in general, these numbers are a little less than I'd expected," said Paul Kleinaitis, an auto industry analyst for Duff & Phelps in Chicago.

"But people should not be discouraged by these low sales because there are going to be some pretty good product introductions later in the model year."

Detroit sold an average of 37,138 light vehicles a day in the Oct. 21-31 period, bringing its results for the whole month to 35,840 units a day, up 16.6 percent from October 1987.

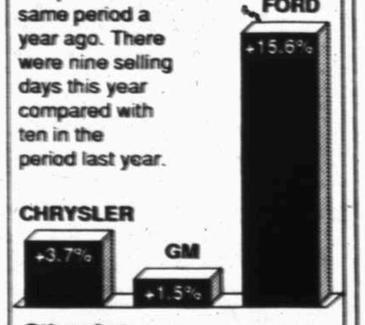

Import sales in the month fell 7 percent, to 11,667 vehicles a day. Late October had nine selling days this year and eight last year; the whole month had 26 selling days this year and 27 last year.

October car sales ran at a seasonally adjusted annual rate of 6.8 million units for domestic brands and a 2.6 million rate for imports; in the last 10 days, domestic cars sold at a 6.6 million rate. This compares with the very strong 7.6 million rate for domestic cars during the first nine months of the year. Annualized rates were calculated from a formula devised by the Department of Commerce.

Chevron set to switch 3,000 Gulf stations

By ANNE PEARSON
Hearst News Service

HOUSTON – Chevron U.S.A. will begin converting about 3,000 Gulf service stations to the Chevron brand in January.

Chevron will spend about $50 million to repaint and erect new Chevron signs at 1,839 stations in Texas, and others in Louisiana, Arkansas and New Mexico, the company said.

The Houston stations will be the first to be changed, starting in mid January, a spokeswoman with Chevron in San Francisco said. All 3,000 should be complete by the end of next year.

Chevron bought Gulf in 1984 but continued to operate the stations under the same name in those four states because Gulf had strong brand identification, spokeswoman Sherri Zippay said.

The four-state region represents about one-fourth of Chevron's nationwide retail gasoline sales, the company said.

Chevron sold Gulf stations in 10 Northeastern states to Cumberland Farms Inc. in 1986, and in eight Southeastern states to BP Oil Inc. in 1985. Those stations will continue to bear the Gulf name until their contractual agreements expire, said Zippay.

FHLB head: insurance not for catastrophies

By DAVE SKIDMORE
Associated Press Writer

HONOLULU (AP) — Congress never intended for the savings and loan industry to pay for the extraordinary losses now being generated by insolvent S&Ls, the industry's top federal regulator says.

M. Danny Wall, chairman of the Federal Home Loan Bank Board, urged Congress to delve into the history of the deposit insurance system before deciding whether or not to spend taxpayer dollars to rescue the Federal Savings and Loan Insurance Corp., which guarantees S&L deposits up to $100,000.

Wall told the U.S. League of Savings Institutions on Thursday that Congress, in setting up the deposit insurance system, set the premiums charged to financial institutions high enough to cover only normal losses, not catastrophic losses.

An actuarial study at the time showed that, to cover all future losses, premiums would have had to have been set nearly four times higher than they were originally, Wall said.

Some of Wall's listeners concluded he was implying that Congress should help the industry pay the bill, but Wall said, "I'm not taking that step."

BUSINESS IN BRIEF

RJR Nabisco management raises bid

ATLANTA (AP) — RJR Nabisco Inc.'s management are making a sweetened $20.7 billion cash-and-stock offer for the food and tobacco giant, raising the stakes from an earlier record bid from a powerful New York buyout firm.

Management and its financial partners said Thursday they would pay $84 in cash and $8 in securities for each share of RJR Nabisco, slightly more than the $90-a-share tender offer launched by Kohlberg Kravis Roberts & Co. and higher than an initial $75 a share buyout proposed by management.

Either deal, if successful, would rank as the largest U.S. takeover ever.

Macmillan agrees to buyout by Briton

NEW YORK (AP) — After months of strong resistance, Macmillan Inc. threw its support behind British publisher Robert Maxwell's $2.51 billion takeover offer for the publishing and information services giant.

The move Thursday paved the way for Maxwell's successful completion of his tender offer for all of Macmillan's shares and his biggest step yet toward his goal of creating a global communications powerhouse.

It came one day after the Delaware Supreme Court effectively blocked Macmillan from proceeding with an agreement to sell the company to an investment group that included the buyout firm Kohlberg Kravis Roberts & Co. and Macmillan's senior management.

Government indicts prominent trader

NEW YORK (AP) — The list of white-collar defendants on Wall Street continues to grow, with the indictment of a prominent trader and his firm for alleged stock manipulation in the sale of Fireman's Fund Corp. shares by American Express Co. more than two years ago.

The 22-count federal indictment was returned Thursday against Salim B. Lewis and the brokerage he owns, S.B. Lewis & Co.

Lewis' lawyer, Stanley Arkin, said his client was innocent and would fight the charges.

Tyson defends offer for Holly Farms

SPRINGDALE, Ark. (AP) — Tyson Foods Inc. has defended its $52-a-share buyout offer for Holly Farms Corp. as officers of Holly Farms urged the company's stockholders to reject the roughly $940 million bid.

The Holly Farms board said Thursday the offer is inadequate.

But Jim Blair, a spokesman for Tyson, said Holly Farms probably won't find a better offer.

Crane field well flows 411 barrels

From Staff Reports

EXXON CORP., Midland, has added two new producers to its Cordona Lake Unit in the Cordona Lake field of Crane County.

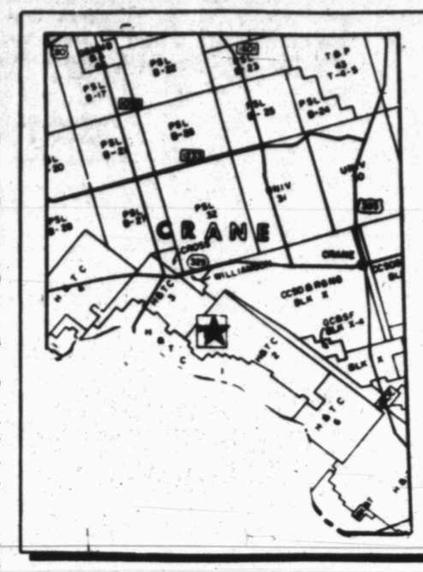

The No. 87 Cordona Lake Unit was potentialed to flow 411 barrels of 42.5 gravity crude, 278 Mcfd and eight barrels of water on a 24/64 inch choke with a flowing tubing pressure of 80 psi. The well flowed from perforations 5,280 to 5,448 ft., which had been acidized with 2,650 gallons of 15 percent NeFeHCL and fractured with 34,128 gallons of gel and 61,040 lbs. sand. Gas-oil ratio was 676:1.

Total depth was 5,800 ft., where 5 1/2 inch casing was set.

Formation tops, on ground elevation of 2,352 ft., include the Rustler at 382 ft., San Andres at 2,510, Clearfork at 3,628, Devonian at 5,278, Silurian at 5,484, and Fusselman at 5,621 ft. Pay was topped at 5,280 ft.

Exxon also tested the No. 85 Cordona Lake Unit, pumping 107 barrels of 42.5 gravity crude, 133 Mcfd and 122 barrels of water from perforations 5,391 to 5,555 ft.

Both wells are located in the Juan Cordona survey, 12 miles southwest of Crane.

★Field producer

Exxon Corp. has added two new producers to the Cordona Lake field of Crane County, one of which flowed 411 barrels of crude.

Delaware discovery pumps 12 barrels oil

PRIMARY FUELS INC. has recorded a modest Delaware discovery in Eddy County, N.M.

On potential test, the No. 4 PFI Amoco "19' Federal to pump 12 barrels of 39 gravity crude from open hole 2,180 to 2,383 ft.

Total depth was 2,383 ft. with 5 1/2 inch casing set at 2,180 ft.

The well topped the Delaware at 2,189 ft. and Delaware Sand at 2,343 ft. on ground elevation of 3,409.1 ft.

Location is 1,550 ft. from north and 1,980 ft. from west lines of Section 9, T22s, R26e.

Nearburg tests well to flow 390 barrels

Activity continues in the Northeast Lovington field of Lea County, N.M. as NEARBURG PRODUCING CO. completes a new Strawn producer in the field.

The No. 1 Doubloon "24-P" State was tested to flow 390 barrels of 44.7 gravity crude, 429 Mcfd and two barrels of water on an 18/64 inch choke with a flowing tubing pressure of 335 psi. The well flowed from perforations 11,022 to 11,076 ft.

Drilled to 11,350 ft., the well was plugged back to 11,256 ft. with 4 1/2 inch casing set at 11,348 ft.

Formation tops,on ground elevation of 3,840.7 ft., include the San Andres at 4,788 ft., Glorieta at 6,200, Abo at 8,202, Wolfcamp at 9,095, Pennsylvanian at 10,500, Strawn at 11,000, and Atoka at 11,146 ft. Pay was topped at 11,022 ft.

Location is 400 ft. from south and east lines of Section 24, T16s, R36e.

Pennsylvanian well flows 4.15 Mmcfd

New Pennsylvanian gas production has been added to the Tule field of Roosevelt County, N.M.

MARSHALL PIPE & SUPPLY CO. finaled the No. 1 Perry to flow 4.15 Mmcfd on a 24/64 inch choke from perforations 6,825 to 7,044 ft. Flowing tubing pressure was 1,883 psi and the producing interval was acidized with 9,000 gallons of 15 percent acid. Condensate gravity was 61.7 API.

The well was drilled to a total depth of 7,275 ft. and plugged back to 7,100 ft. with 5 1/2 inch casing set at 7,274 ft.

On ground elevation of 4,382 ft., formation tops include the Glorieta at 3,243 ft., Tubb at 4,654, Abo at 5,278, Wolfcamp at 5,996, Pennsylvanian at 6,492, and Montoya at 7,140 ft. Pay was topped at 6,825 ft.

Location is 990 ft. from south and 660 ft. from west lines of Section 23, T2s, R29e.

Chaves field gains Abo gas producer

BRAN OIL CORP. has added to production in the Pecos Slope field of Chaves County, N.M. with completion of the No. 1 Osage "33" Com.

On potential test, the well flowed 875 Mcfd on a 32/64 inch choke with a flowing tubing pressure of 140 psi. Production was from perforations 3,951 to 3,994 ft., which had been acidzied with 3,000 gallons of 7.5 percent NeFe and fractured with 60,000 gallons of gel, 5,500 lbs. 20/40 sand, and 40,000 lbs. 12/20 sand.

Total depth was 4,400 ft. with 4 1/2 inch casing set at 4,390 ft. The well was plugged back to 4,335 ft.

Formation tops, on ground elevation of 3,617 ft., include the San Andres at 572 ft., Glorieta at 1,646, Tubb at 3,064, and Abo at 3,769 ft. Pay was topped at 3,951 ft.

Location is 990 ft. from north and 1,980 ft. from east lines of Section 33, T6s, R26e.

SALES

L. Ray Windecker, a sales analyst for the Ford Motor Co., said 1989 had a "strong shot" at becoming the second-best sales year ever.

"The total industry, cars and trucks, domestic and imported, will exceed 15.7 million unit sales this year, compared to the record of 16.33 million in 1986 and the 15.72 million of 1985," he said.

Kleinaitis forecast 15.8 million for this year and 15.5 million for 1989, adding that domestic manufacturers would do even better than these numbers alone suggested.

"Domestic share is up again this month, and that's good news: people are buying domestic cars because their quality is improved," he said.

Imported cars and trucks took 24.6 percent of the total market in October, down 4.3 percentage points from a year ago.

Imported cars were down 2.9 percent, to a daily selling rate of 9,842, and imported trucks were down 24.2 percent, to a daily rate of 1,825.

Suzuki of America sold 1,509 vehicles under its own brand name in the month, 73.5 percent fewer than in October 1987.

The company attributed this to the lack of availability of its Samurai sports-utility vehicle and of its upscale replacement, the Sidekick; this month it also added the Swift GTi subcompact car, though so far it has sold only 16.

"Suzuki anticipates that November sales will begin to rebound," the company said in a statement, adding that total sales should match last year's level by early 1989.

But Kleinaitis said this was unlikely, arguing that Suzuki's image continues to suffer from allegations that the Samurai is unstable in emergency maneuvers.

JOBLESS

An alternate unemployment rate, including the 1,687,000 members of the armed forces stationed in the United States, stood at 5.2 percent last month, also down 0.1 percentage point from September.

On the eve of today's report, both economic and political analysts saw little chance that the new numbers would affect next week's presidential election.

The last time the jobless figures had any impact was in the 1982 midterm election at the depth of the worst recession since the 1930s. Republicans lost 26 seats in the House six years ago, a week after the government announced that unemployment had hit 10.4 percent.

"That was a major indicator then that what President Reagan had led the country to expect did not come to pass," said Richard Brody, a political science professor at Stanford University.

This year, Brody said, the economic numbers contribute to a popular feeling that the president is doing a good job. That translates into support for the candidate of the president's party, Bush.

Steve Rosenstone, a political science professor at the University of Michigan, said data closer to the "pocketbook" such as changes in real disposable income or real per capita growth in the gross national product have a bigger effect than employment rates on how people vote.

"If the election-year economy were showing no growth, that would matter," he said. "Unemployment rates are good numbers to use in political speeches but they're not very good in foretelling how people will vote, unless they dramatically change the perceptions game."

This year, the GOP is winning that game dramatically, according to Rosentone, with polls showing that voters perceive Republicans as being better able to manage the economy by a 2-1 margin, a direct reversal of their perceptions in 1976 when Democrat Jimmy Carter unseated President Gerald Ford.

FHLBB

"I'm not saying what the solution is at this point, I'm just trying to set a historical basis," he said, promising to present the bank board's recommendations after the election.

Regulators estimate it will cost $45 billion to $50 billion to cover the industry's red ink.

The new chairman of the league, B.R. Beeksma, said healthy S&Ls can't bear the cost of bailing out their insurance fund without falling into insolvency themselves.

Deregulation promoted by the Reagan administration and sought by the industry allowed many S&Ls in the early 1980s to raise interest rates offered to depositors and venture into new kinds of loan arrangements. But many underwrote highly speculative and ultimately disastrous loans, often in real estate, and as of midyear 497 of the nation's 3,048 S&Ls were listed as insolvent. Another 408 were solvent but losing money.

Now, the industry that fought so hard for deregulation in the early 1980s says government should have regulated it more, and it is calling for a return to many of the controls of the past.

Beeksma, as part of what he called the industry's "never-again agenda," said S&Ls will accept a clampdown on the kinds of lax regulation that contributed to the red ink.

"I can promise you that the U.S. League will be vigorous in its pursuit of tighter regulation and supervision," he said.

Beeksma, chairman of InterWest Savings Bank in Oak Harbor, Wash., replaces Theo H. Pitt Jr., a North Carolina thrift executive who served as league chairman for the past year.

The trade group also appointed Frederick L. Webber as its new president, the top staff position. Webber is a former assistant secretary of the Treasury in the Ford administration and former White House aide under Richard Nixon. He most recently was president of the National Soft Drink Association.

He replaces William B. O'Connell, who has held the post since 1979.

O'Connell, in his outgoing address, warned the S&L executives against a "division that seems to be developing over the resolution of the problems" of the FSLIC.

O'Connell said after the speech he was referring to tension between healthy and struggling S&Ls. Some healthier S&Ls are trying to leave the FSLIC and join the commercial bank insurance fund, the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp., which charges lower premiums. Ailing institutions that can't qualify for FDIC membership resent that.

Wall Street trader indicted for fraud

NEW YORK (AP) — A prominent trader with ties to financial giant American Express Co. is the latest target of a federal crackdown on Wall Street crime, but his lawyer denounced the charges and accused prosecutors of abuse.

The 22-count indictment announced Thursday against Salim B. Lewis and the brokerage he owns, S.B. Lewis & Co., charged him with manipulation and other frauds in connection with American Express' sale of Fireman's Fund Corp. stock more than two years ago.

Parties release final ad blitz

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan asks Americans to "continue the change" by voting Republican, and Democrats hit hard on pocketbook issues and Dan Quayle's qualifications in the latest barrage of political television ads.

The national parties launched their final round Thursday, with the Republicans showcasing Reagan and the Democrats appealing to the average person's pocketbook in generic spots designed to drum up support for candidates from president on down.

Democrat Michael Dukakis' campaign unleashed its latest broadside against GOP vice presidential nominee Quayle, a 30-second spot featuring a well-known excerpt from his debate with Lloyd Bentsen, the Democratic vice presidential debate.

Onscreen appear the words, "Before you vote, remember this," followed by the debate clip.

Quayle: "I have as much experience in the Congress as Jack Kennedy did when he sought the presidency."

Bentsen: "I served with Jack Kennedy. I knew Jack Kennedy. Jack Kennedy was a friend of mine. Senator, you're no Jack Kennedy."

These words then appear: "President Quayle?"

Both Dukakis and Republican George Bush are running a varied mix of upbeat and attack ads in key TV markets across the country. Their themes but not their names appear in numerous generic TV and radio spots produced by the Republican and Democratic national committees.

The RNC entered the final phase of its $9 million media drive Thursday with the TV message from Reagan. "America is at peace, and we are prosperous once more," Reagan says in the ad. "On Tuesday, I hope you will vote Republican — up and down the ticket — to continue the change we began in 1981."

The GOP also has a 60-second radio ad in which Reagan recounts his record and says "our work is not yet done." He contends the GOP has become "the party of the working people, the family and the neighborhood."

The DNC, contending it is the true party of the average working person, released two pocketbook appeals designed to bolster Democratic local, state and national candidates.

One DNC ad, featuring festive images of the GOP convention and headlines about nasty campaigning, says: "What's hiding behind all of this? The Republican tax plan...If you make $200,000, you get a tax gift of $30,000...If you're a typical middle class taxpayer — like most of us — the Republicans will give you a tax break, too. Twenty bucks."

In the other DNC spot, an announcer bemoans foreign loans and land purchases and the millions of U.S. jobs he says were shipped overseas. "Are the Republicans selling out America's future?" he asks.

Both the RNC and DNC are running numerous radio commercials as well. DNC officials won't discuss their advertising budget other than to say this is the first time they've been able to raise enough money for generic media.

Each national party has produced six TV ads in all. But while most of the DNC ads ran briefly and then vanished, the RNC is still using spots it was airing as far back as July.

Earlier DNC spots discussed the future of America's children, attacked the GOP record on the federal deficit, and charged that GOP prosperity hasn't trickled down to workers or the elderly.

One of the RNC's long-running spots shows a little girl who an announcer says has "known virtually nothing but peace and economic growth" thanks to Republicans. Another flashes images of inflation, gas lines and Jimmy Carter set to the tune "I Remember You."

A third Republican spot, on the air since Oct. 10, shows pilot Chuck Yeager in a defense plant alleging: "When liberal Democrats talk about slashing defense spending, they're not just talking about America losing ground. They're talking about Americans losing jobs."

The Republicans also are using two Hispanic television ads, one talking about Hispanic gains during the Reagan years and another citing recently named Education Secretary Lauro Cavazos as "a friend in Washington."

The Justice Department, meanwhile, said it will investigate a Spanish-language radio ad running in Hidalgo County in south Texas.

Democrats complained GOP officials in the county are violating federal voting rights laws by running ads that cite penalties for non-citizens who vote and that twice remind listeners election officials "will be watching."

Dukakis battles to keep home state

BOSTON (AP) — Like a military general waging a campaign far afield, Democrat Michael Dukakis has left a small garrison of trusted aides back in Massachusetts to protect his home territory from enemy attacks.

The Dukakis effort to carry Massachusetts on Election Day has all the elements of the presidential nominee's other statewide campaigns except one: the candidate.

"Basically, we are running a traditional Democratic campaign in this state, not unlike the campaigns he ran when he was running for governor," said James McGovern, a spokesman for the Dukakis campaign in Massachusetts.

McGovern and other Dukakis aides have complained for weeks that they are stuck between a rock and a hard place.

If they wage a strong campaign here, they are vulnerable to charges that the governor is so weak that he is afraid of losing his home state. If they don't campaign hard, they are open to the rap that they are taking the state for granted.

"We're in a situation where we're damned if we do and damned if we don't," McGovern moaned.

They have decided to err on the side of caution. Although the national campaign strategists have raided the Boston headquarters for field workers, the campaign has kept 12 paid staff working full-time on delivering Massachusetts.

"We're running a campaign," McGovern insisted. "By contrast, I am unaware of any semblance of a field organization put together in Massachusetts by the Bush camp. In fact, I am unaware of any campaign other than what goes on in the Statehouse by a few Republican legislators. I don't see evidence of any real outreach."

In fact, the Bush campaign has not written off Massachusetts.

At the urging of Andrew Card, a former Republican legislator in Massachusetts and a former Reagan White House aide, the Bush national campaign has used Massachusetts adroitly to keep Dukakis on the defensive.

In a state where Democrats outnumber Republicans by about 4-1 and where no Republican except Ronald Reagan has won a statewide election since 1972, the Bush forces are overmatched on the ground by the Dukakis team.

But the Republicans have run a sharper campaign, offering almost daily, press conferences to undermine Dukakis' standing.

The campaign also scored a major coup on Sept. 1 when the vice president toured polluted Boston Harbor and attacked Dukakis' record on the environment. The campaign was buoyed by a second Bush visit for a showy endorsement from the Boston Police Patrolmen's Association.

According to published polls, the Bush effort has had some impact in the state where Dukakis won a landslide re-election to a third term just two years ago with nearly 70 percent of the vote.

A series of surveys by KRC Research published in the Boston Herald indicated that Dukakis enjoyed a 51-37 percent lead in July. That edge disappeared by Sept. 1, when the poll showed the race a dead heat at 42 percent.

By mid-October, however, Dukakis had fought back to a 10-point advantage in Massachusetts, leading Bush by 49-39 percent, only to see Bush gain three points among undecideds and close to 49-42 percent as of Tuesday.

James French, Dukakis' Massachusetts campaign coordinator, was publicly more upbeat than the figures might suggest, saying, "We're confident of a big victory in Massachusetts."

To make sure of that, the Dukakis camp has mobilized its customarily strong field organization, with 34 field offices in the state, phone banks, sign-holding assignments in 123 cities and towns and an extensive get-out-the-vote effort on Election Day.

The campaign has also dropped more than one million pieces of literature at homes statewide and plans to use 3,000 volunteers in the Election Day operation.

The campaign also is running short radio advertisements attacking the Bush record on the environment, elderly and the economy, along with some television ads in Springfield. For the most part, though, they are relying on what campaign aides call "free media" — that is, news coverage.

Moore, Lear among major Democratic contributors

WASHINGTON (AP) — Actress Mary Tyler Moore and TV producer Norman Lear are among a wide range of celebrities, financiers and others who gave large sums to the Democratic National Committee in the past year, according to party records.

Notables who made sizable contributions of less than $100,000 included: California stat legislator Tom Hayden, the husband of actress Jane Fonda, $60,000; Miss Moore, $10,000; Miami Dolphins owner Joseph Robbie, $50,000, and Lear, $25,000.

The information was contained in DNC records filed in Austin, Texas.

The funds were given to the national committee's "soft money" account, which does not have to conform to limits imposed on the candidates and the political parties by the Federal Election Commission.

The so-called soft money accounts are largely transferred by both the Republican and Democratic National Committees to state parties.

Democratic National Chairman Paul G. Kirk Jr. has said he would disclose details of the committee's soft-money fund raising after the election.

Texas law, however, requires the parties to file either a list of donors or a Federal Election Commission registration record when they transfer money into the state from elsewhere.

Since the soft money was not raised under federal limits, the Democrats were required to submit a list of donors.

Major cities claim census undercount

NEW YORK (AP) — New York, Los Angeles and other major cities have sued the federal government claiming that undercounting in the 1990 census could cost them billions of dollars and deprive minorities of their political clout.

"This is one of the most important civil rights issues in the country today," said Peter Zimroth, New York City's chief attorney. "To the extent minorities, black and Hispanics in the inner cities are undercounted, their vote is diluted."

The cities contend in the suit, filed Thursday, that the Census Bureau was prepared to make adjustments to compensate for undercounting, particularly of minority groups, but that it was overruled last year by the Commerce Department, its parent body.

Congressional seats and federal grants are allocated on the basis of population. If an area is undercounted, it may have fewer representatives in the House and lose millions of dollars from Washington.

The census as now structured misses many members of minority groups and illegal aliens, the suit contends, because many of them do not respond to the mailed census forms.

The suit says they could be counted if census takers visited homes in selected areas and projected the results.

Also joining in the lawsuit were Chicago and Dade County, Fla., which includes Miami; as well as the states of California and New York; the U.S. Conference of Mayors; the National League of Cities; the League of United Latin American Citizens; and the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People.

The suit was filed in U.S. District Court in Brooklyn with the Department of Commerce, the Census Bureau and President Reagan among the defendants.

The Census Bureau has acknowledged it undercounts the population, although the best estimates suggest that only about 1 percent of the total was missed in the last 1980 census. But the bureau estimates the undercounting of blacks is 5 or 6 percentage points higher, since it is hard to reach the inner-city neighborhoods where many share addresses and distrust the government.

The Commerce Department referred all calls to the Justice Department. Amy Brown, a spokeswoman, said the department had not yet received the complaint and therefore could not comment.

In Los Angeles, according to City Attorney James K. Hahn, the population was undercounted by 4.6 percent in 1980. Blacks living in Los Angeles were undercounted by 9.1 percent, Hispanics by 9.8 percent and Asians by 7.3 percent.

"What makes this problem of undercounting particularly troublesome — and even tragic — is that the people most affected are the ones in the most dire need of adequate representation and help," Hahn said.

Zimroth, New York's corporation counsel, said the city was undercounted by about 500,000 people in 1980 and that he expects the 1990 census to be even less accurate.

New York state lost five of its 39 representatives as a result of the 1980 census and is expected to lose three more because of the 1990 count, according to Election Data Services Inc.

In Chicago, officials said the undercount costs the city more than $10 million a year in federal aid for social programs, a seat in the state House of Representatives, half a seat in the state Senate, and one-fourth of a congressional seat.

New York state Attorney General Robert Abrams said an inaccurate census violates the principle of one man, one vote.

It would mean that "states, cities and, in particular, minority communities will be shortchanged on funds for housing, education, health, nutrition, community development, drug enforcement and other vital services," he said.

PCB-gobbling bacteria found in river bottom

WASHINGTON (AP) — Toxic PCB compounds someday could be gobbled up by bacteria during hazardous waste cleanup operations, according to new findings from the bottom of the Hudson River.

PCBs accumulated in sediment above Troy, N.Y. are being changed into less toxic forms by bacteria that work without oxygen, researchers from Michigan State University report. These less toxic forms do not accumulate in living tissue.

PCBs' tendency to accumulate in tissue has led several states to advise against eating PCB-contaminated fish. New York, for example, has banned fishing for striped bass below Troy all the way to the ocean.

The new findings raise hopes that highly toxic PCBs could be changed into the less toxic, non-accumulating forms in more locations.

"If it is true, it could have enormous significance," said Richard D. Morgenstern, head of the Office of Policy Analysis in the Environmental Protection Agency.

It's too early to start looking for PCB-free striped bass, said Darrell Banks, deputy commissioner of the state's Department of Environmental Conservation, which plans to dredge and remove 360,000 cubic yards of PCB-contaminated sediment from the river.

The state probably will go ahead with the dredging project, he said. But the Michigan State findings "cause us to hope for a system that might be useful for hot spots we can't deal with" by dredging.

"It could in some cases make dredging unnecessary," said environmental chemist Stephen A. Boyd, one of the Michigan State authors reporting on the work in the issue of Science magazine published today.

He said that for dredging and other removal projects that do go ahead, "it would certainly lessen the risk-to-benefit ratio," that is, make the work less risky than believed up to now.

The work of Boyd and co-authors James M. Tiedje and John F. Quensen confirms a theory advanced in 1987 by General Electric Corp., whose legal dumping of PCB waste at Fort Edward and Hudson Falls, N.Y., from 1951 to 1973 is the source of most Hudson River PCBs.

There are 209 possible PCB compounds. Each contains one to 10 chlorine atoms. GE noted that PCB sediments in the Hudson had lost chlorine, and the proportion with only one or two atoms had increased over what was put in the river.

GE theorized that oxygen-free bacteria probably were responsible, but New York government scientists said there could have been other causes, including the possibility that sediment containing the high-chlorine forms was washing away faster. An administrative law judge recommended rejection of GE's proposal to leave the sediments undisturbed in favor of a state proposal for dredging.

The Department of Environmental Conservation expects to decide in early January whether to go ahead with the dredging.

Steve Hamilton, organic chemist at GE's labs in Schenectady, N.Y., said, "We feel pretty good" about the confirmation of GE's theory by the Michigan State team. He noted that PCB-laden sediments in harbors at New Bedford, Mass., and Waukegan, Ill., have shown similar changes but have not been studied in detail.

GE contributed financially to the Michigan State research, but Boyd said, "That doesn't mean they hired us to state something they wanted said."

Marcoses ordered to give fingerprints or face jailing

NEW YORK (AP) — A federal judge Thursday ordered Ferdinand and Imelda Marcos to comply with grand jury subpoenas for their fingerprints, palm prints and voice and handwriting samples or face possible jailing.

U.S. District Judge John Walker ordered the former president and first lady of the Philippines to appear Wednesday at the FBI's offices in Honolulu to comply with the subpoenas.

If they don't, said Walker, "the Marcoses, both Ferdinand and Imelda, must appear before me on Nov. 10 for imposition of sanctions."

During a hearing at federal court in Manhattan, which neither of the Marcoses attended, Walker did not specify what sanctions he would impose but said he would "hold in abeyance the issuance of a bench warrant" for their arrests.

Assistant U.S. Attorney Linda Imes, in arguing that the material was still needed despite the couple's indictment last month and Mrs. Marcos' fingerprinting this week, revealed "there is an ongoing investigation" by the grand jury.

She would reveal no more in open court, citing grand jury secrecy laws.

Marcos lawyer Sandor Frankel said the couple sought a stay earlier in the day from U.S. Supreme Court Justice Thurgood Marshall.

After earlier losses in the legal wrangle before Walker and the 2nd U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in New York, the Marcoses are seeking a hearing before the Supreme Court and asked Marshall to stay any action against them until the high court decides on whether to hear their case, said Frankel.

"Barring a stay, they will comply with (Walker's) order," Frankel told reporters after the hearing.

The Marcoses were indicted on racketeering charges by a federal grand jury in Manhattan Oct. 21 for allegedlly diverting more than $100 million from their nation's treasury into Swiss bank accounts, Manhattan real estate and fine art.

The same grand jury subpoenaed the couple earlier this year for fingerprints, palm prints, voice and handwriting samples and also for their authorization for foreign banks to turn over their financial records.

The Marcoses balked, claiming they still maintained "head-of-state immunity," but Walker dismissed that claim and found them in contempt of court in August.

A federal appeals court upheld Walker's finding and reinstated the contempt finding as well as an arrest warrant for the Marcoses.

"It's the government's position that it's now time for compliance with these subpoenas," Ms. Imes told Walker.

She requested that if the couple did not comply by Monday, they be arrested and jailed.

Kitty Dukakis leaves hospital

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — Kitty Dukakis says she feels healthier but plans to use common sense to protect her health as she resumes campaigning for her husband, Democratic presidential nominee Michael Dukakis.

Dukakis

Before leaving her hospital room Thursday, Mrs. Dukakis received a telephone call from her husband and wished him a happy 55th birthday. They had planned to campaign together in Waterbury, Conn., Thursday before she was hospitalized Monday night with a temperature of 102 degrees.

Mrs. Dukakis was treated for a bacterial and viral infection at the University of Minnesota Hospital.

"I feel much better," Mrs. Dukakis said as she left the hospital. "I'm looking forward to resuming campaigning...I'm going to do what I can, but I'm going to use common sense as well."

Her press secretary, Paul Costello, said Mrs. Dukakis meet her husband in Chicago late today and that she would keep a limited schedule Saturday, with appearances tentatively scheduled in Texas and Colorado.

If possible, Mrs. Dukakis will resume a full schedule with her husband on the West Coast Sunday and Monday for the final two days of the campaign, Costello said.

Parkin to be charged

WASHINGTON (AP) — Federal prosecutors have indicated that defense consultant William Parkin will be among the first people charged in the massive Pentagon bribery case, a source says.

The source, speaking Thursday on condition of anonymity, said Parkin has been told he "will be indicted unless he comes in and cuts a deal, which he is not going to do."

Parkin has told reporters that he believes he broke no laws in running his Alexandria, Va., consulting business. Although the source would not reveal details of the plea bargain offer, he said the terms were stiff.

Last week, Henry E. Hudson, the U.S. attorney in Alexandria, Va., said the first indictments in the investigation into the $150-billion-a-year defense procurement business could come later this month.

The 2-year-old investigation centers on allegations that consultants paid bribes to Defense Department officials to gather inside information that was useful to companies bidding on the multimillion-dollar projects.

Sharon Dibbley, a spokeswoman for Hudson, said the prosecutor would not comment on reports that plea-bargain arrangements had been offered. Earlier, however, government and defense sources indicated that Hudson's assistants had been kept waiting for responses from some potential defendants to offers of plea bargains.

Students suffer depression

CHICAGO (AP) — At least 12 percent of students at one large medical school showed major symptoms of depression, says a new study of the stresses on future doctors.

"The spring of the second year of medical school appeared to be the most distressing period," said the stud, published in Friday's Journal of the American Medical Association.

The four-year study involved a class of 121 students at Rush Medical College in Chicago. It was conducted by David Clark, associate professor of psychiatry at the school, and Peter Zeldow, associate professor of psychiatry at Chicago's Northwestern University Medical School.

"The study documents what many medical educators have long assumed, which is that medical school is a depressing place to be if you're a medical student," Zeldow said Thursday.

The two researchers said depression in students was caused, in part, by the stresses involved in attending medical school.

Homecoming cancelled

LAKE CHARLES, La. (AP) — A pep rally and homecoming parade were cancelled by McNeese State University because of the campus turmoil that followed a fight between black and white students two weeks ago.

Dozens of police and Calcasieu Parish sheriff's deputies were sent to the campus Thursday morning when a demonstration grew into a shouting and shoving match between black and white students. Order was restored about noon.

There were no injuries or arrests, but school officials later cancelled a big pep rally planned for Thursday afternoon and also Saturday's homecoming parade.

Shortages could ground 1990 shuttle

WASHINGTON (AP) — For the second time this year, the space agency is facing a supply shortage that could ground space shuttles in 1990, and it is looking nervously for other potential gaps in critical materials.

The country's only manufacturer of rayon yarn used in shuttle booster rocket nozzles, Avtex Fibers, began closing its plant in Virginia on Thursday — only two days after announcing its plans to do so.

The National Aeronautics and Space Administration faced a similar problem in May when the Henderson, Nev., plant of Pacific Engineering and Production Co. was destroyed in an explosion and fire. Pepcon, as the firm is called, was one of only two producers of ammonium perchlorate, the oxidizer in the solid fuel that powers the shuttle's booster rockets.

At this point, NASA is guaranteed enough booster rocket fuel to power nine flights and has enough rayon for ten. That would take the agency through this year when only one more flight is scheduled and through next with seven on the calendar.

No one at NASA headquarters or at the agency's Marshall Space Flight Center in Huntsville, Ala., would say how many other materials used for shuttle flights have only a single supplier.

However, sources who declined to be identified said shuttle program boss Richard Truly would probably order a thorough study to identify them and the potential for a cutoff of supply.

Shuttle builder Rockwell International Corp. alone depends on more than 250 subcontractors nationwide for various systems and components. Some are single-source.

For example, one metal — NARloy-Z — is a specially developed alloy used by the firm's Rocketdyne division in the engine's combustion chamber and it is made by only a single licensee. Similarly, only one foundry makes the engine turbine blades and there is only one set of tooling for those.

The presidential commission that investigated the Challenger disaster criticized the space agency for not having enough spares on hand, which fostered a practice of borrowing parts from one shuttle for use on another.

That problem has not been completely solved. After the flight of Discovery last month, engineers found evidence of a leak in one engine. They had to borrow an engine from shuttle Columbia to prepare Discovery for its next mission.

Rocketdyne's Joyce Lincoln said there are 16 engines in existence: three each on Discovery and Atlantis, two new units undergoing acceptance testing, one being assembled after overhaul and seven undergoing improvements. That situation is not likely to ease until spring.

The impact of the fuel and nozzle problems won't be felt for more than a year. An allocation board that included the Defense Department, NASA and other government agencies met recently to divide up ammonium perchlorate production.

"We have been allocated sufficient quantities for nine flight sets," said Rocky Raab, spokesman for Morton Thiokol in Utah which builds the rocket boosters that flank the orbiter.

"The allocation board meets again in early 1989 to make additional allocations, so presuming Pepcon gets the plant going again in early or mid-1989 that would mitigate that situation," he said.

Only the late-November flight of Atlantis remains this year and there are seven more missions scheduled for 1989.

Pepcon is rebuilding its plant in Henderson and has broken ground for a new facility for finishing work in Cedar City, Utah. "Presuming everything goes as planned, our concerns about the fuel are minimized," Raab said.

It is too soon to know what will be done about Avtex which began closing its plant at Front Royal, Va., on Thursday and letting its 1,300 employees go. "Production, for all intents and purposes, is stopping today," said Avtex spokesman Nick Nichols.

Company to build frozen blood center

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — A company plans to build a storage center for people who want their own blood frozen and available for quick delivery if they need it, but a doctor says the concern is preying on people's fear of AIDS.

Daxor Corp. of New York will store blood for individuals at the Federal Express nationwide shipping hub in Memphis, Daxor Vice President Allen Gelb said Thursday.

"It is aimed at anyone who wants to store their own blood or blood for their family because they are afraid of or reluctant to get blood from the general population because of the risk of transfusion," Gelb said.

But Dr. Edward Scott, director of LifeBlood, the Mid-South Regional Blood Center, said the odds are one in 100,000 of contracting acquired immune deficiency syndrome from a blood transfusion.

"They undermine public confidence in the blood supply and exaggerate the risk of transfusion to promote their service," said Scott.

Federal Express spokesman Armand Schneider said he couldn't discuss details of his company's agreement with Daxor. "We will provide some logistic services, including storage and transportation," he said.

Federal Express, an international package courier service, contracts with about 135 other customers to stockpile items for emergency shipment.

Daxor says it was the first company to market individual blood storage, opening a New York facility in 1985. Gelb declined to say how many customers the New York center had or how many Americans they expect will buy the service. Plans call for operating centers in New York and Memphis.

The company recommends that individuals store two units each of red blood cells and plasma, Gelb said. There would be a $170 one-time fee for drawing and processing that blood. It would then cost an additional $492 annually to store those blood components. The person also would pay any transport costs.

Lifeblood will also store an individual's red blood cells for up to 10 years, Scott said.

USDA proposes to ease meat plant inspections

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Agriculture Department is proposing to get tougher on inspections of the most troublesome meat and poultry processing plants but ease up on those with good records.

The prospective changes, announced on Thursday, were welcomed by the industry as an improvement in the inspection program's focus.

But consumer and labor groups assailed it, saying it would be like putting "the fox in charge of the chicken coop."

Thousands of plants that make hotdogs, beef stew, luncheon meats and scores of other processed items that include meat and poultry would be involved in the proposed program.

Over time, officials estimated, the USDA's inspection force of about 2,200 employees at the affected plants would be reduced by half by retirements and resignations.

The changes "would strengthen USDA's inspection in the 6,300 plants that process meat and poultry by focusing inspection efforts where they are needed most," said Lester M. Crawford, head of the department's Food Safety and Inspection Service.

Crawford said the proposal would put into effect the Processed Products Inspection Act of 1986. The law allows the new targeted inspection program to operate only for six years, at which time it would be reviewed by Congress before being renewed.

"Under the proposal, USDA would increase inspection at processing plants where records indicate a need for additional oversight," he said. "By the same token, plants with good records of compliance could be visited less than daily."

The program could begin by mid-1989, but it likely would take several years for the policy shift to be completed.

Slaughter plants, where livestock and poultry are killed, would not be affected by the plan. Those plants still would be under continuous inspection.

Department officials, who once called the program "discretionary inspection" of processing plants, changed the name in the proposal to "improved processing inspection."

The proposal was hailed by a major industry organization, the American Meat Institute, and criticized harshly by spokesmen for consumers and labor.

Crawford said the proposed program would use new computerized information gathered during plant visits by USDA inspectors to document each plant's record.

HOW THIS RAKE CAN SAVE YOUR LIFE.

This simple garden tool is a firefighter. It can help you clear away brush and leaves that act like kindling around your home. And you.
So if you live near the forest, do a little raking. And that's not all. Landscape your home with a fire retardant plant like ivy. Use spark arrester screens on your chimney and vents. And put fire retardant material on your roof and underneath your house.
Because a forest fire burns more than trees.
Remember.
Only you can prevent forest fires.
A Public Service of the Ad Council, the USDA Forest Service and your State Forester.

You're Still Older
Love, Kim

Dearest Holly,
With all my heart I'd like to say,
You get more beautiful,
with each passing day.
You gave me a daughter,
so bubbly and bright.
She's so precious to hold,
and such a delight.
Let's go to dinner, say around eight.
By the way, for Christmas I'd like a 328.
