Lebanon says rebels abusing cease-fire

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — The Lebanese army today accused anti-government forces of using the newly proclaimed cease-fire to reinforce positions around army strongholds on the hills overlooking Beirut.

But an army statement carrying the charge stopped short of accusing Syrian-backed Druse militiamen of violating the cease-fire, which Monday halted a three-week civil war in Lebanon's central mountains and the outskirts of Beirut.

No fighting among the principals in the civil war was reported today, but newsmen in the northern port city of Tripoli said seven Palestinian guerrillas were killed this morning in a bazooka and machine gun exchange between factions supporting and opposing Palestine Liberation Organization chairman Yasser Arafat.

Beirut newspapers said a four-man committee — composed of representatives of the Lebanese army and warring Christian, Druse and Shiite Moslem militias — planned to meet privately today to work on arrangements for consolidating the truce.

Newspaper reports said U.N. Secretary-General Javier Perez de Cuellar was in contact with the presidents of Syria and Lebanon regarding formation of a observation force to monitor the cease-fire.

■ Reagan moves to quash War Powers opposition — Page 2A

The reports said between 500 and 600 observers would be needed to supervise the truce, mediated by Saudi Arabia and the United States to end fighting that erupted after the Israeli army withdrew from Lebanon's central mountains Sept. 4.

Gen. Franco Angioni, commander of Italy's contingent in the multinational peacekeeping force, told The Associated Press that Italy has been asked to send up to 250 troops to the central mountains as part of the observation force. And the leftist newspaper As-Safir quoted unnamed Lebanese government sources as saying France has promised to contribute 250 observers.

As-Safir said the four-man cease-fire committee is scheduled to debate a plan to establish Lebanese army control over the coastal highway linking Beirut with Israeli army lines in southern Lebanon and over the central highway linking Beirut with Syrian army lines in eastern Lebanon.

In accordance with the agreement, President Amin Gemayel said he was calling for leaders of the various Christian and Moslem factions to begin "a national reconciliation dialogue" to restructure Lebanon's political system. He said Syria and Saudi Arabia were invited to take part.

A committee of representatives from the various groups was expected to meet soon to arrange the conference, possibly in Saudi Arabia.

On Monday, although the cease-fire was generally honored, two Lebanese soldiers were killed as the army battled snipers in the central mountains and Beirut suburbs.

Also, Prime Minister Shafik Wazzan, a Sunni Moslem, and his 10-man Cabinet bowed to the demands of the Syrians and Druse leader Walid Jumblatt and resigned to pave the way for a national unity government.

White House 'confining,' Reagan tells interviewer

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan says the White House is confining, Camp David is an escape valve, but his own ranch in California is "sheer heaven."

He says that although the White House is a wonderful place to live and everything possible is done for his comfort, "you get a little stir crazy during the week, lovely as this place is."

The remarks, to talk show host Merv Griffin, were not an indication that Reagan will or will not run again. In fact, the president ducked the opportunity to say so in the interview to be shown today over 125 stations nationwide.

Griffin, who taped the program last Friday in the family quarters of the executive mansion, tried a back-door route on the question, asking if he could interview the Reagans in the White House again in two years.

"Nice try," said Mrs. Reagan. "Don't call us. We'll call you."

The president said Camp David, the official retreat in the nearby Maryland mountains, is his way of coping with the week's confinement.

"There, you are in a normal house. You can walk out in the drive. You can take a walk. You can go horseback riding," Reagan said. "That is the escape valve. That's the wonderful thing. And once in a while you get to the ranch in California. That's sheer heaven."

Reagan told Griffin that the long 1981-82 recession was already under way when he became president; that "I'm not about to get us into another Vietnam" in Lebanon; that most Americans approve of the way he handled the Soviets' shooting down of an Korean airliner and that the idea he wanted to keep in focus was "this was not us versus the Soviet Union, this was the Soviet Union against the world."

He said he thinks of nuclear arms only as a deterrent because "it says to them, look, if you ever get the idea of pushing that button, look what can happen to you." And, he said, an arms ban must be verifiable because "you have to assume with the Soviet Union that unless you can verify that they have done what they agreed to do, they won't do it."

Reagan spoke of the inhibiting effect of living in the White House. Opening a door to the balcony, he said, can start the Secret Service stirring. "You start wondering," he said, "how many people you are going to inconvenience if you go out on the balcony."

Mrs. Reagan, he said, "has made me such a happy man and has been so much of a teammate." He dismissed reports that she is the driving force behind him, saying:

"People who don't know what they're talking about have written that this (his presidency) was somehow her idea. I know that she went along bravely, but there was reluctance, too. She swallowed hard and went along and I'm grateful to her for doing that and I think I owe her quite a debt."

Mrs. Reagan said she was surprised at how tough the job of first lady is.

"I didn't expect to be as busy as I am. But the days aren't long enough. I get up early in the morning. I'm going all day long," she said. "I'm going after dinner and I never seem to get everything done."

Maybe Reagan said too much

UNITED NATIONS — Why, if President Reagan is really serious about getting a nuclear arms agreement, did he make the far-reaching new American proposals public?, a reporter asked the senior administration official and cabinet member who briefed reporters on "background" before the Reagan U.N. speech.

The high-ranking policymaker, who always has argued that negotiations must be conducted in private and often has charged that public pronouncements by the Russians demonstrated they were only interested in propaganda, hesitated for a moment. Doesn't this impede the negotiations in Geneva?, the reporter asked.

U.N.'s 'good ole days' gone?

By R. GREGORY NOKES
Associated Press Writer

UNITED NATIONS — President Reagan made clear to U.N. members that he yearns for the good old days, when the world body stood as a force for peace and could be counted on to use its moral authority to fight international lawlessness.

But those good old days are unlikely to occur again.

"This body was to speak with the voice of moral authority," Reagan said in an address to the 38th U.N. General Assembly Monday. Then he asked, "What has happened to the dreams of the U.N.'s founders? What has happened to the spirit which created the U.N?"

Reagan's speech, which also focused on arms control issues, was warmly applauded by most of the delegations from the 158 members.

The very size of his audience — a U.N. assembly three times as large as it originally was — indicates what has happened since the heady days of its founding in 1945.

There were 51 original members. Of those, 34 were in Western Europe and Latin America and solidly pro-U.S. There were only 11 from Asia and Africa, most of them pro-West, and only six from the Soviet bloc.

When the United States wanted to send troops to South Korea to stop an invasion from North Korea in 1950, it received quick support from the U.N. membership. Of the 60 U.N. members, 53 backed the U.S.-led police action, 41 sent supplies and 16 sent troops.

Since then, the situation has changed so radically that the United Nations, wouldn't name the Soviet Union in its condemnation of Soviet intervention in Afghanistan or Vietnam in its occupation of Cambodia. It used only the words "foreign forces."

A senior administration official recently said Reagan was disappointed in "the tendency toward a do5ble-standard" on the part of many U.N. members, complaining they overlooked misdeeds of the Soviet Union and its allies but ware quick to criticize Western behavior.

The official, who insisted on anonymity, voiced particular unhappiness that some U.N. SEcurity Council members hadabutained from the votu condnning the Soviet Union jor shooting

Continental readies pared-down schedule

HOUSTON (AP) — Continental Airlines prepared to return to the skies with bargain fares, about a quarter of its former U.S. routes and employees paid about half what they made before the carrier filed for reorganization under bankruptcy laws.

The carrier's first flight was to leave Denver at 8:05 a.m. CDT today for Houston and New Orleans. Continental grounded all its domestic flights Saturday and filed papers with a federal bankruptcy court in Houston, proposing to reopen today with flights to 25 of the 78 U.S. cities it had served.

"We are very optimistic and very enthusiastic about our future," Continental President Frank Lorenzo said Monday at a news conference. "Now that costs are firmly under control, we can compete and build a Continental Airlines that our founders and everyone associated with us can be proud of."

Lorenzo announced the airline will offer one-way fares of $49 on all non-stop domestic flights until Friday. The fares will then jump to $75 until Oct. 15, he said. No prices were quoted for flights after that.

Lorenzo's statement came two days after he announced the airline had filed for reorganization and temporarily suspended domestic flights after posting losses of $471.9 million since January 1979.

The airline's bankruptcy court papers said three problems made reorganization necessary: low-cost competition, reservations systems controlled by two other carriers and labor costs.

Late Monday afternoon, U.S. Bankruptcy Judge Phil Peden granted Continental's request for a temporary restraining order requiring 266 airlines, cities and other companies to continue operational agreements that were in effect before Continental filed for reorganization. According to the motion, the agreements were "vital to their (Continental's) continued existence."

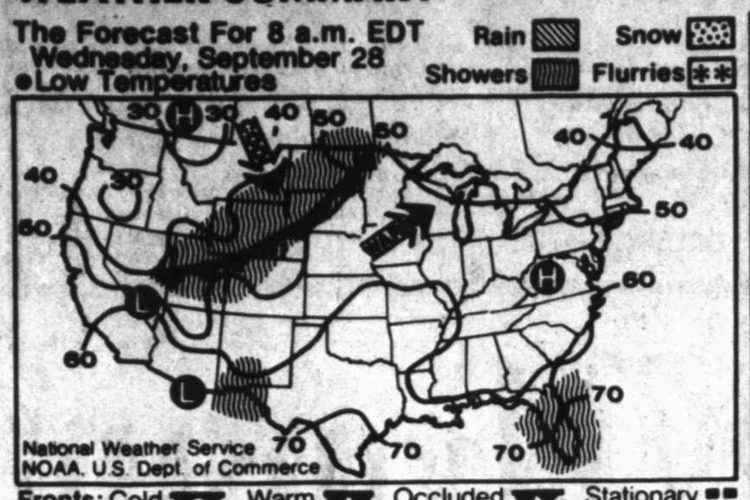

Peden set an Oct. 7 hearing on the airline's motion for an injunction on the matter.

Officials of pilot and flight attendant unions denounced the bankruptcy filing as "union busting" but said they had no plans to picket or strike Continental.

Union officials said the reorganized Continental established a pilot captain's salary at $43,000, less than half the $89,400 paid previously. Flight attendants took a 41 percent cut in pay, with a salary set at $22,500 for top-line workers.

Claudia Lampe, a spokeswoman for the Union of Flight Attendants, said about 300 union members attending a meeting in Denver Monday generally favored a strike. Flight attendants held a similar meeting in Houston Monday night and planned a third in Los Angeles today.

WEATHER SUMMARY

Warm weather and sunny skies are forecast for most of the nation through Wednesday, according to the National Weather Service. Showers are expected from the western to northern Plains, southern New Mexico and most of Florida.

More of the same cool weather is forecasted for the Permian Basin by the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Airport.

Lows tonight will once again be in the mid 60s and Wednesday's high in the mid 80s. Partly cloudy skies will continue through Wednesday, as will southeast winds blowing 5 to 15 mph.

Monday's high of 87 was 18 degrees cooler than the record 105 degrees set on that date in 1977. The low of 63 didn't even come close to the 42 degrees recorded in 1942.

Last of four jail escapees recaptured in El Paso

The last of four federal prisoners who escaped from the city jail two years ago has been captured, according to U.S. Marshal Bill Jonas.

The escapee, 38-year-old William Anthony Dugan, was arrested by U.S. marshals in an El Paso hotel last Friday night.

Assisting in the arrest were FBI agents, federal drug enforcement officers, Department of Public Safety troopers, the El Paso Police Department and the El Paso County County Sheriff's Department.

Dugan and three other federal prisoners being housed in the city jail escaped June 11, 1981, after sawing through jail bars and dropping from the second-floor cellblock to the ground outside the police station.

The other three escapees were ultimately captured, and four Odessans — including two women — have been convicted of aiding and abetting the jail break, according to Jonas.

Jonas said Dugan's arrest capped an intensive two-year investigation that covered several states and two countries.

In September 1981, Dugan was tracked to the Dallas-Fort Worth area but managed to evade arrest after a high speed chase through Fort Worth streets. Recovered after the chase were a vehicle and an automatic weapon.

Dugan was awaiting trial on federal narcotics charges when he escaped. At least two of the other escapees were also awaiting disposition of drug charges at the time of the jail break.

MMH boards to meet Thursday

The Midland Memorial Hospital boards of trustees and directors will meet Thursday beginning at noon in the Medical Staff Conference Room.

Trustees are expected to take action on a recommendation regarding the 77-bed expansion and hear an update on other capital projects.

A report from the planning subcommittee, financial statements for August and a report on financing of capital projects will be given.

Directors will vote on actions taken by trustees and are expected to transfer funds from district accounts into the operating account, including funds for indigent care, capital purchases and budget amendments.

Man injured in traffic accident

A northwest side man was in fair condition at Midland Memorial Hospital this morning after his 1982 Chevrolet pickup truck overturned on Interstate-20 late Monday afternoon.

Larry Olds, 23, of 5005 Andrews Highway, suffered head injuries in the accident, which occurred at 5:15 p.m. Monday about 1.5 miles west of Stanton.

According to the Department of Public Safety, Olds was eastbound and lost control of the pickup after passing another vehicle. Olds' truck then slid sideways and rolled over 2¼ times.

Did Reagan say too much?

"I think basically the answer is yes," the U.S. official said in a surprisingly candid reply. But, he continued, "the problem of controlling information is tremendous. We presented these proposals privately to the Russians in Geneva.

"But with all of the speculation about them and the leaks, many of which mislead the public, the President decided he had to make them public," the foreign policy official said.

That is accurate as far as it goes, but it hardly goes far enough. The fact is that the U.S. also is fighting a public relations battle for the hearts and minds of millions of Europeans who this fall hopefully will support the deployment of an entirely new generation of U.S. medium-range nuclear weapons on their soil, unless, of course, Moscow agrees to compromise.

Even if the Soviets become more flexible, it is extremely doubtful that an actual agreement can be reached before the United States in late November begins deploying the first of 108 new Pershing II missiles and 464 new ground-launched cruise missiles.

Add to that the massive propaganda defeat the Russians have suffered since they downed a Korean airliner and one begins to understand what Reagan was really doing in shedding his image as an anti-communist crusader and donning the robes of a world statesman who had high praise for the art of diplomacy.

"The Russians are on the defensive. It was time for us to take the high road," one American official said in explaining why Reagan had concentrated on making public the new U.S. arms proposals instead of continuing to heap abuse on the Russians for their "callous disregard of human life."

It was a calculated decision, this official said. "We believe they also don't want a nuclear war, so despite our revulsion over the Korean airliner incident, it's in our interest to go ahead with arms talks and try to make progress towards an agreement," Amb. Edward Rowny said in an interview.

Rowny is the chief U.S. delegate to the strategic arms reduction talks (START). He has no doubt what to expect when he again sits down across the table from the Russians on Oct. 6, when the strategic arms negotiations resume in Geneva.

"They're going to say it (the Korean airliner incident) makes no difference. They're going to say it's business as usual and let's get on with it, you know, you mined Haiphong harbor (during the Vietnam war) and we went ahead with a (SALT II) agreement. "They're going to brush it (the Korean tragedy) away and push it aside."

But Rowny expect something more from the Russians. "I think they're going to try to recoup the public image, they're going to try to make amends" by trying to sound more flexible than the United States.

"Andropov worked very hard on public relations in Europe," Rowny said, and for a while he was successful, putting the United States clearly on the defensive. "I called it 'trial by Yuri,' " the chief U.S. negotiator said. Even on the plane incident, the Soviets have 'tried tried to recoup."

He said springing Soviet Defense Chief Marshall Ogarkov for an unprecedented public news conference in the Kremlin two weeks ago was chiefly a public relations effort designed "to make him look like a real, nice human being, all sweetness and light...an effort to wipe away this thing."

What Reagan was doing, he conceded, was stealing the public relations march on the Russians — trying to persuade the rest of the world that it is Moscow and not Washington — that is obstructing a new nuclear arms accord. That has been made a lot easier since the downing of the Korean airliner, he said.

But it also has complicated Rowny's mission at the Geneva talks. The last public opinion poll (taken before the Korean incident) showed that 66 per cent of the American people don't trust the Russian. "If I took one today," Rowny said, "80 or 85 per cent would say they don't trust the Russians."

So, he explained "it puts a bigger premium on verification. Verification's going to be tougher now that more people know what I know about the Soviets. Where I've always known I had to have tough verification, now I'm going to have to have super tough verification."

"Here (in this country) more people are aware of what they're up against," Rowny said. The negotiator's sudden awareness that this could complicate the chances of reaching an agreement is ironic because Rowny, a former four-star general, was one of the most vocal critics of the SALT II accord.

He is, plainly, no dove when it comes to arms control. But now he is charged with negotiating an agreement with the Russians and no one is more aware of what he is up against. Has the Korean airliner tragedy set back the negotiations? On this, he is surprisingly hopeful.

At least it need not have a "very deliterious" effect, he said, if Moscow wants to bargain in good faith.

Reagan spells out commitment

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan is seeking to disarm critics of a Lebanon War Powers resolution who say the administration may be reneging on an agreement allowing U.S. Marines to remain in Lebanon over the next 18 months.

The president, according to Republican sources, was drafting a letter to congressional leaders to make clear his commitment to the delicately-negotiated compromise over invoking the Vietnam era War Powers Act.

The Senate and House were expected to vote Wednesday on congressional authority over the 1,600 Marines now holding positions in and around Beirut.

Last week, Secretary of State George P. Shultz testified that Reagan "has no intention of turning over to Congress his constitutional authority as commander in chief" of U.S. military forces.

Then, in a weekend interview, the secretary said the Marines should remain until there is political stability in Lebanon, which he defined as a withdrawal of all foreign troops, including Syrians.

Shultz declined to give guarantees that the American military contingent would be brought home in 18 months or that its size and mission would remain unchanged.

Both Senate Majority Leader Howard H. Baker Jr. and Democratic leader Robert C. Byrd Jr. expressed fears that the secretary's position seemed to contradict explicit wording in the Lebanon resolution.

"I intend to talk to the secretary of state about that," Baker said. "I believe this resolution invokes the full power of the War Powers Act and would be binding on the president."

Reagan claims recession began before he took office

WASHINGTON (AP) — After two years of denying he was to blame for the 1981-82 recession, President Reagan now says it began before he took office, a contention at odds with private economists and his own previous statements.

"There was a recession when we came," he said flatly in a television interview scheduled for showing today.

Reagan and his top economic officials spent much of 1981 — their first year in office — complaining that they had inherited an economic mess from the Carter administration.

However, the economy was expanding, not receding as the word "recession" implies. In fact, the growth rate of 9 percent for the first three months of the year — taking in the Reagan inauguration — was the best in several years.

The first administration declaration of any recession came from the president himself. And it didn't come until October. Nor it didn't say anything about continuing a downturn that might have been under way back in January.

He said he believed the economy had dipped into "a slight and I hope a short recession."

Later, the downturn was generally conceded to have begun in early in the summer. But the president's autumn statement was considered big economic news at the time — at least partly because it reversed the usual timing for a chief executive, coming before similar judgments by some private analysts.

Reagan made his new statement in an interview with Merv Griffin, taped last Friday for showing today on a nationwide syndicate of television stations.

A White House spokesman said the president was now referring to the fact that the national economy had been relatively weak from 1979 through the end of last year, despite a "technical" declaration by the National Bureau of Economic Research that the most recent recession began in July 1981, six months after Reagan took office.

Now, the president said in the interview, "all of that has been turned around, and I think we're on the way to a solid recovery."

Some private analysts have agreed with the president and his advisers in the past that the seeds of the recession may have been sown in the high interest rates and inflation that were in place when Reagan took office.

But other economists have said the business downturn, which sent unemployment soaring to the highest level in four decades, was made worse or even caused by Reagan-backed policies carried out by the Federal Reserve Board.

There is wide acceptance of the idea that, whatever caused the recession, it began in the summer of 1981 and ended near the end of last year. The general consensus also is that there was a sharp but brief downturn early in 1980, followed by recovery beginning in July.

Gold-mining fever once again strikes in California

REDDING, Calif. (AP) — Dennis Morgan and Dennis Hancock have gold fever, got it bad. Their eyes glow and their voices rise with excitement as they describe the new gold rush, a "rush" they're sure is more than a feeling.

"It's the same story that gold's always been, ever since they first found it in California," Hancock said. "I'll tell you, the first time somebody sees a nugget, they're hooked."

These modern-day prospectors are part of the renewed interest in gold, the result of tough economic times that have the jobless as well as the big mining companies seeking the buried treasure.

"You can say there's a gold rush going on, but the results haven't been manifested yet because of the long time it takes to set up a gold mining venture," said Ralph Lloyd of the state division of mines and geology.

More than 110 gold mines are preparing to begin work, which means California could regain the gold-producing supremacy it held more than a century ago.

In 1853, when shouts of "Gold!" reverberated through a 300-mile area called the Mother Lode and bounced off the Sierra Nevada, the state produced almost 4 million ounces of the precious metal.

But for the last 30 years, only the Oriental mine in Sierra County has been producing anything of consequence, Lloyd said, leaving California behind at least four other states in gold production.

The big companies that have been working quietly for several years are looking forward to putting California back on top.

Homestake Mining Co., largest of the companies searching for gold, has purchased 62 square miles for a $200 million project it hopes will produce by early 1985. Gulf and Western Natural Resources Group has earmarked $80 million for its mine, also expected to produce in 1985. And Mother Lode Mining Co. has bought 1,000 acres and has a permit for a plant to extract 2,000 tons of ore a day.

"They keep a low profile," says Lloyd, who admits to doing a little panning with his family. "When you're doing exploration, you've got to keep it quiet. You don't want people rushing in and taking advantage of your work."

The Shasta County hills came alive with exploration after Terramar Resources Corp., a Canadian company, reported in June it hit a vein in Reid mine yielding an amazing two to 30 ounces of gold per ton of ore. A quarter of an ounce per ton makes a profit.

Not much has been heard about the Terramar find since, with exploration continuing to confirm the initial assays, or analysis of the proportion of precious metal to ore. But hundreds lined up to file claims and promoters — people who sell pieces of claims — made money on the frenzied speculation.

She gets message to hearers

PORT WASHINGTON, N.Y. (AP) — Theresa Stratthaus has earned five college degrees, but she's haunted by childhood memories of people who mistook her for mentally retarded and called her "stupid."

Sharona, her dog, is a mixed-breed who was beaten and abandoned by people who said she was "stupid and untrainable."

Sharona and Ms. Stratthaus are deaf.

TODAY, the woman and the dog, both of whom understand sign language, work through the North Shore Animal League to get a message to the hearing world: "We are capable when given the chance."

Ms. Stratthaus, now a 31-year-old doctoral candidate in psychiatric counseling, spent much of her childhood in a special classroom after an initial hearing loss was misdiagnosed as mental retardation. She has spent her adulthood proving the world was wrong.

"I lived with the label of being stupid. I was the dummy in the classroom and I believed it," she said. "After five degrees, it's still on my mind."

The hearing loss was eventually discovered and she began wearing a hearing aid. But the problem worsened. Six years ago, Ms. Stratthaus became totally deaf.

DEAFNESS was "so traumatic" for her that she refused to speak for two years, communicating only with a pad and pencil. Then, with the support of friends, she began speaking again and learned sign language and lip reading.

Now, Ms. Stratthaus speaks and reads lips so proficiently that people often assume she can hear. When she leads group tours of the animal league's shelter or gives demonstrations with Sharona, she intentionally waits until the end to mention her deafness, thereby emphasizing her capabilities.

Ms. Stratthaus came to the animal league four years ago, looking for a dog that could be trained to "hear for" her. Instead, she saw 1-year-old Sharona in a cage marked by a sign: "I am a deaf dog."

SHARONA had been "literally thrown inside the door" of the animal shelter by people who said, "We beat her and she still wouldn't listen," said Betty Rosenzweig, manager of adoption services.

"I'm a sucker for a happy ending, so I took her," said Ms. Stratthaus.

"One of my friends said, 'Why did you do that? It's like the deaf leading the deaf — she can't even bark.' But I understand Sharona — I understand her isolation."

Ms. Stratthaus worked for six months to teach Sharona to bark. She placed her lips on the dog's throat, "going woof, woof" and then rewarding her, until Sharona — inspired by the vibrations — started barking.

A TRAINER had taught some obedience hand signals to Sharona while she was at the animal league. But Ms. Stratthaus already knew human sign language and wanted her dog to understand it, too.

Manufacturers work to change polyester image

By LOUISE COOK
Associated Press Writer

Remember the double-knit leisure suit?

The people who make polyester would rather you didn't.

They're trying to upgrade the image of the synthetic fabric.

The major polyester manufacturers launched a $1 million campaign early this year, complete with big-name fashion designers, to convince retailers and the public that their product is every bit as good — or even better — than natural fibers.

Fisher Rhymes, director of public affairs for the Man-Made Fiber Producers Association Inc., said that polyester, which is made from petrochemicals, is one of 21 generic man-made fibers recognized by the Federal Trade Commission. Others include nylon, rayon and acetate.

ITS BIGGEST advantages, said Rhymes, are "ease of care and durability." It doesn't need ironing. It's washable. And it's strong.

Its biggest disadvantage, said Rhymes, is the double-knit leisure suit.

The leisure suit made its debut in the mid-1970s, about 20 years after the introduction of polyester itself. It was an immediate hit. "It came in every color from mint green on down," Rhymes said.

The double-knit construction was new. Gerald Elden, president of Hoechst Fibers Industries and chairman of the fiber association, said the fabric didn't wrinkle, had a long life and "stretched across various and sundry shapes."

As the suits proliferated, the quality slipped. "The real problem was the poor knitting and poor fit," said Rhymes. Added Elden: "The styling was terrible. We became our own worst enemy."

The use of polyester continued to grow; by the second half of the 1970s, it had surpassed cotton. Today, Rhymes said, polyester is the "most widely used of any single fiber," accounting for about 40 percent of the clothing market.

BUT THE JOKES about polyester also grew. Rhymes said that although polyester is and always has been used in fine fabrics, some segments of the public, particularly the young and the affluent, just don't believe it. "For some reason that association with the leisure suit just hung on," he said.

The kind of attitude the polyester makers are trying to fight was expressed recently by Jack McDonald, president of Oxxford Clothes Inc., in an interview with The Minneapolis Star and Tribune.

"Polyester is an anathema," said McDonald, whose hand-cut, natural fiber Oxxford suits start at $750. "We have never made a leisure suit and we never will. If you walked into your bank and saw your banker with in a leisure suit and an ascot, you'd wonder about your money."

The trend toward so-called natural products — natural foods, natural fibers, natural lifestyles — also hurt polyester. So did the recession.

So the manufacturers are making an extra effort to spread the word that polyester doesn't mean cheap, that it isn't synonymous with the leisure suit.

They point to Bill Blass suits in blends of polyester and wool, to Mary McFadden dresses which are made of polyester, but look and feel like silk.

THE POLYESTER makers also want to combat the belief that polyester is hot and uncomfortable. "Totally incorrect," said Elden when asked if polyester isn't hotter than cotton. It all depends on the individual weave and fabric.

Rhymes said it's "all a matter of perception." People think cotton is cooler, he said, but scientific tests show they actually can't tell the difference.

Rhymes admitted that some people are hard to convince. His own college-student sons sometimes push for all-cotton shirts. "I have to remind them who's paying the bills," he said.

Elden said the campaign had been successful. "If it looks nice and feels nice, people will buy it."

Company jumps the gun

BALTIMORE (AP) — Long before the Baltimore Orioles won the American League East championship, Orioles' fever was on the rise amid visions of baseball's World Series.

As Baltimore won a record seventh division title Sunday in the Orioles' first season without Manager Earl Weaver, Joe Altobelli, who took over after Weaver retired, said, "I couldn't have written the script any better."

Even though the Orioles have yet to beat Chicago, Volume Services, the company that runs the concessions in Memorial Stadium, already has ordered t-shirts, buttons and pennants proclaiming the Orioles "American League Champs."

However, a spokesman added, World Series memorabilia won't be ordered until the series is actually clinched.

Candy comes in all shapes and colors

YONKERS, N.Y. (AP) — Adrienne Asman once tried to convince a customer that she really didn't want blue chocolate.

"Blue is a real turnoff because there's no such thing as blue food," says the 34-year-old entrepreneur.

But as the founder of Andy's Candies, a struggling specialty chocolate maker, Mrs. Asman could argue only so much. "She got some blue-dyed chocolate, but we stopped at flavoring them raspberry."

Andy's Candies is just one of a growing number of "cottage" candy-makers springing up throughout the country to cater to America's continuing passion for chocolate.

MANY OF THESE manufacturers will view their competition at this weekend's Chocolate Extraordinaire, a chocolate orgy scheduled at the Sheraton Centre in Manhattan, where chocoholics can indulge in variations of their sweetest fantasies for two days.

To make their nascent choco-business succeed, Mrs. Asman and her husband, Robert, 31, have turned to specialty chocolate — chocolate sleds, carousels, castles, churches, pianos, champagne bottles, telephones — and offer customized coloring and packaging to make it different from all the rest.

Barely four years old, Andy's Candies is just now looking for a home of its own out of the Asman house. And it's still looking to break even.

So Asman continues to work as a warranty administrator for General Motors in Nanuet while his wife teaches at Pace Business School here during the summer, usually a slack season in the chocolate business.

Mrs. Asman admits they jumped on the "trendy chocolate" bandwagon when they decided to invest heavily in the handmade candy industry.

"WE WERE successful early," Mrs. Asman recalls. "The first year I walked into Nieman-Marcus in White Plains and they liked my sled. I figured, if they're willing to accept you, we're in good shape."

The Asmans began producing all their wares by hand, using brushed-on liquefied chocolate to paste parts of items, such as the sled, together.

Then they looked for representatives to sell their chocolate to friends and neighbors, much like Avon cosmetics.

Enthusiasm is a prerequisite, says Mrs. Asman. "So we have housewives and college students who just enjoy it to pieces."

The representatives cart around catalogues with the items, ranging from pink angels to lollipops shaped like sailboats, and sell to friends and business associates.

WHILE THE bulk of the business is through individual sales, the Asmans supply about 25 small stores in Westchester and Rockland counties, as well as in Fairfield, Conn. One client is Mystic Seaport.

The Asmans will also custom-design chocolate for weddings, bar mitzvahs or other occasions, hand-dying it to match the other colors of the event.

"We'll do all kinds of special orders. We'll give you pink churches with orange windows or purple Easter bunnies," she said. And that was where the blue chocolate came in.

Toy soldiers made in Germany

In the late 18th century in the vicinity of Nuremberg, Germany, artisans began using excess tin, lead and antimony to make two-dimensional "flat" toy soldiers for their children. J.G. Hilpert was the first to see a market for them; he sold little flat versions of Frederick the Great's armies.

Color-blind society

The crowning of Vanessa Williams as Miss America the other night was a significant event in this country's history, but it was obscured somewhat by the immediacy of other events.

In a way that's good because what it signifies is that perhaps racial concerns are becoming less of concern and more a part of the day-to-day life of Americans. That's the way it should be. If racial equality truly is to become a way of life, we all must become color blind.

Blacks, whites and browns must be able to compete equally for jobs, honors, housing and the like. To that end, they must receive an equal opportunity to prepare themselves educationally for the challenge. That day is closer than it was 20 years ago or even 10 years ago. Racial integration didn't come about in this nation overnight or without bloodshed. Neither did the doctrine of equal opportunity. Slowly, though, the tide has been turning and in recent years rapid strides have been made.

The new Miss America won her title not because she is a "token" black; she won the title on her singing, dancing and acting abilities. She broke a barrier in so doing, a barrier that has existed much too long. The Miss America competition was limited to whites until the late 1950s.

There is no question that racism continues to exist today. But the crowning of Miss Williams is another strong indicator that progress is being made in our quest of a society that doesn't judge any person by the color of their skin instead of the level of their abilities.

Spain's fallen idol

The late Arthur "Bugs" Baer, the newspaper columnist, once described France as a country "where they name a street for you one day and chase you down it the next."

The Spanish people, by reputation at least, are no less volatile but they seem somewhat more cautious than the storied French in their campaign to purge the country of memories of Generalissimo Francisco Franco who ruled them for four decades. Since his death in 1975, Franco has become something of a national embarrassment but he is still is a hero to some.

These elements were showcased the other day in Valencia when workmen tore down a massive equestrian statue of Franco. As a precaution against possible reprisals from Franco disciples, the razing crew wore ski masks to protect their identities. Even the license plates of the trucks were taped over.

Under the restored monarchy and parliamentary government, Spain has been quietly erasing Franco's and his Falangist colleagues' names from major thoroughfares and institutions. There is even talk of some modifications being made to the Valley of the Fallen, the garguantuan military shrine where Franco is buried. The blueshirted fascists, however, bitterly oppose this move.

The fascists are getting off easily. Under the present government, they can parade, chant and give their Nazi-style salutes with impunity. When their patron saint was in power, the slightest demonstrations of dissent brought the offender a jail term or worse — and without trial.

Another View:

Schools should teach

The average scores of this year's Scholastic Aptitude Test did not fall from last year — but neither did they rise. Nearly a million high school students take these tests every year, and they continue to be a valid indicator of academic achievement. The long slide that began in 1964 seems to have ended several years ago, but the recovery has not yet begun. That deterioration had many causes, some of them far beyond the control of the schools. But there is unquestionably a relationship between the declining SAT scores and the rapid erosion of the high schools' curriculum requirements.

Should there now be a national curriculum? As Ernest L. Boyer observes in his book, "High School," the question touches a contradiction in American attitudes. Most Americans remain deeply suspicious of uniform standards, but most Americans want uniform results. Mr. Boyer, who is the president of the Carnegie Foundation for the Advancement of Teaching, proposes a basic curriculum that covers two-thirds of the 20 or so courses that a student normally takes in four years of high school and leaves the rest to electives.

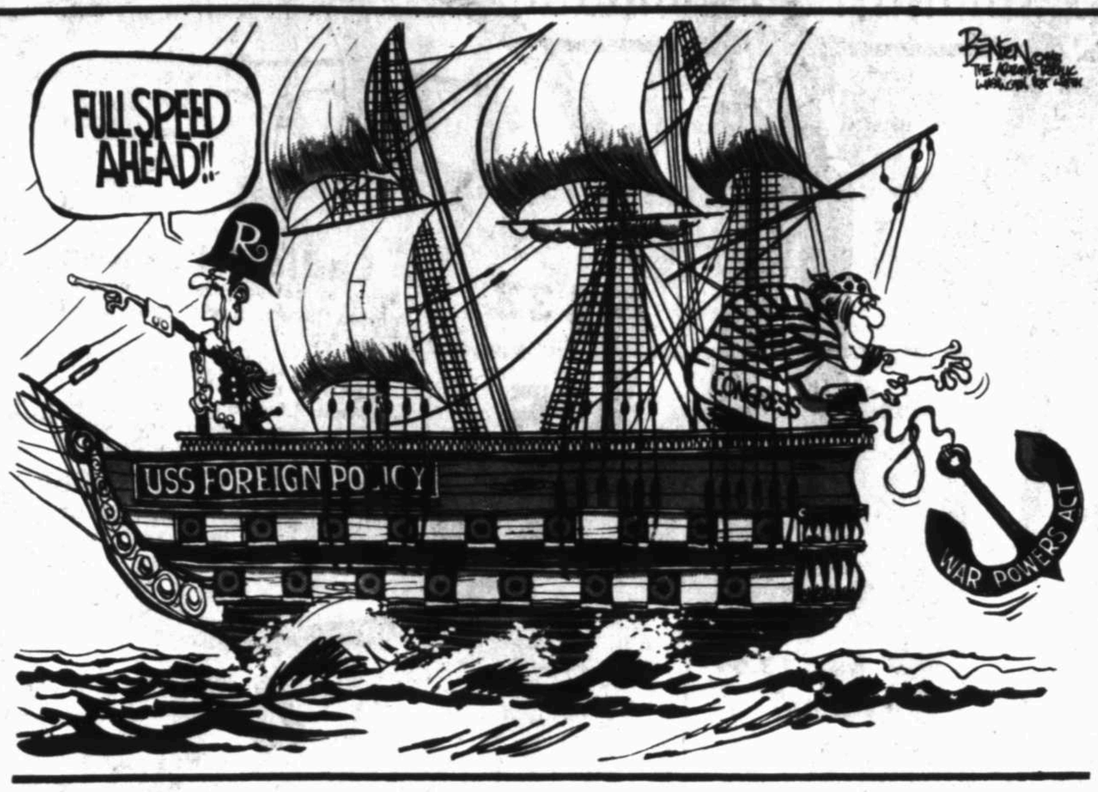

There's nothing wrong with letting students choose their own electives. The trouble starts when they choose too many electives — Family Relations, Glee Club, Creative Communications — and not much English, less math, no science and no foreign languages. A school that permits youngsters to float along with that kind of a schedule is retreating from its responsibilities. High school kids don't necessarily know what they need to know. It's the schools' job to tell them.

Establishing a curriculum begins with a decision as to what's most important, and Mr. Boyer is surely right in declaring that the first priority goes to language and literacy. He proposes a standard freshman English course emphasizing writing. Next come math and science, history and government. Last week's report to the National Science Board recommends at least three years each of math and science for all students, not only the future engineers.

School systems and, for that matter, students and their parents are already moving in that direction. The drift away from academic subjects ended in the middle 1970s and has been slowly reversing itself. Virginia increased its graduation requirements last summer, and the District of Columbia has introduced its highly useful rule requiring each student to take at least one year of a foreign language.

The high schools are now emerging from a long, unhappy period in which many of them hesitated to provide much direction to their students. Far from benefiting from a range of choices expanded endlessly and mindlessly, students often graduated with far less than the basic education to which they were entitled. The current deluge of books and reports gives valuable encouragement to the schools to keep going in a direction in which they are already moving.

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

Controversial drug back on sale

WASHINGTON — A big drug company is quietly moving to put back on the market a controversial painkiller it pulled off pharmacy shelves in March after the government compiled reports that linked the medication to serious allergic reactions, including at least five deaths.

Jack Anderson

The drug is Zomax, a powerful anti-inflammation painkiller that had been prescribed for some 15 million Americans. Its maker is McNeil Pharmaceutical, a subsidiary of Johnson & Johnson.

The drug is unchanged. It will simply have a new label, stressing the risks and advising its use only by persons suffering chronic, intractable pain.

Incredibly, a government advisory panel has approved the reintroduction of Zomax with its new label, on the understanding that further tests of the drug be made after it is back on the market.

McNeil voluntarily stopped selling the drug after studying reports that linked intermittent use of Zomax to hundreds of adverse reactions, including shock, swollen body parts, irregular heartbeat, labored breathing, unconsciousness and heart attack. A Food and Drug Administration computer printout of last June 21 listed 5,282 cases of adverse reaction to Zomax.

Although raw data suggested that Zomax might have been a factor in 40 deaths, the company and the FDA agree there were possible links in only five.

The drug has also caused cancerous tumors in laboratory animals, according to Dr. Arthur H. Hayes Jr., then FDA commissioner.

Under questioning last April by Rep. Ted Weiss, D-N.Y., Hayes said that before the FDA would allow Zomax back on the market "we would have to conclude that there is a population of patients in whom the risks of its use would be outweighed by its benefits."

Another FDA official, Dr. Robert Temple, echoed Hayes's point and added: "There would have to be substantial new information, information not now available, before one would reach a conclusion that making the drug available for chronic use is the right thing to do."

All McNeil has come up with is a new label; there is no new data that would satisfy the FDA's requirement.

Yet last month, an FDA advisory committee approved the drug maker's plan to introduce a new Zomax label provided further tests are then conducted. Temple and other FDA officials were present but made no objection to the advisory panel's decision. They never brought up the conditions they had assured Weiss would have to be met.

The company sticks by its product. A spokesman told my associate Tony Capaccio that perhaps the adverse reactions to Zomax were the result of intermittent use, and suggested that it should be used only in cases of "intractable" chronic pain where other drugs don't work. The company admitted that there is no current clinical data that proves the effectiveness of Zomax for such use.

Footnote: An FDA spokesman stressed that the committee's decision was purely advisory.

WATCH ON WASTE: Given the billions that are squandered by federal agencies, the expenditure of $58,883 on a questionable project may seem like small potatoes. But small extravagances can quickly add up to horrendous waste.

This is the story of one of these small expenditures, uncovered by my associate Lucette Lagnado. It is a proposed grant to the International Youth Year Commission from the U.S. Information Agency. But thanks to the vigilance of Sen. Edward Zorinsky, D-Neb., the request has been red-flagged. Here's what aroused his suspicions:

— The money is supposed to be spent on legitimate educational expenses. But it was allocated to pay for a series of junkets to the Caribbean, Western Europe and Africa in connection with the 1985 International Youth Year.

— The amount of the proposed grant was shrewdly kept a few hundred dollars below the $60,000 limit that would have brought it under congressional scrutiny.

— The money was funneled through a subcontractor, the National Strategy Information Center, which had been chastised by the USIA's inspector general for giving federal funds to an organization that had refused to sign an agreement to hire women and minorities.

— A conflict of interest also appears to be involved. Roy Godson, the head of NSIC, is a consultant for USIA. Thus, he is on the payroll of the agency that granted his group the contract. Godson said that USIA's general counsel had advised him this was not a conflict of interest.

— Zorinsky questioned per diem expenses (up to $100 a day) that were set aside for the young travelers. "Apparently, when the taxpayers foot the bill," he complained privately to USIA, "it is no longer appropriate for young people to stay in youth hostels, dormatories or inexpensive hotels."

HEADLINES AND FOOTNOTES: U.S. trade negotiators dread their trips to Japan to work out commercial agreements. It's not just that the Japanese negotiators are probably the shrewdest this side of the Kremlin, but they're also chain smokers. In energy-conscious Japan, air-conditioning is held to a minimum; after hours of nonstop bargaining in small, poorly ventilated offices, the American negotiators begin to feel like laboratory rats in a cigarette test.

INSIDE REPORT:

Senate gave Reagan 'screwdriver'

WASHINGTON — The 93-0 Senate vote demanding that the administration report on Soviet SALT violations gives President Reagan what he really wants but his diplomatic and political advisers don't: a rationale for concisely stated, provable charges of nuclear cheating by the Kremlin.

Rowland Evans

Robert Novak

Reagan has dropped hints for months that the time has come to call the Soviets to account. Writing on Sept. 12 to a close friend who had complained about mild U.S. retaliation against the Soviet Union's shootdown of the Korean airliner, Reagan said: "We have some screws that can be tightened and I have screwdriver in hand." There is little doubt that the president was alluding to Soviet SALT cheating.

But each time he was ready to go public, advisers intruded. His diplomatic advisers feared that would ruin U.S.-Soviet arms control talks, and his political advisers worried about restoring Reagan's Attila the Hun image. The Sept. 22 Senate vote changes all that, because a unanimous roll-call vote is hard to ignore. Whatever the State Department and White House West Wing think, Reagan is where he wants to be: under Senate command to report the disturbing pattern of Soviet cheating.

Moreover, even State Department detentists are fretting under escalating evidence of Soviet cheating. "They've busted the SALT agreements," a top Foggy Bottom policymaker blurted out to us. That parallels the president's public rebuke to the Kremlin, nearly five months before the Soviets shot down Korean Air Lines Flight 007. On March 31 he warned about "increasingly serious grounds" for questioning Soviet compliance.

In their first effort to use the air tragedy to get an administration accounting of alleged Soviet violations, conservative Republican Sens. James McClure and Jesse Helms tried to tack their amendment to the congressional resolution condemning the Soviet Union for the Korean airline disaster. That failed, 45-50, because of a bipartisan deal — orchestrated by the White House — to accept no amendments. But in failing, the vote revealed to surprised Republicans a large reservoir of support from liberal Democrats.

That led to the second effort last Thursday, when the amendment was tacked on the State Department authorization bill. Sen. George Mitchell of Maine, a widely-respected bearer of liberal Democratic colors, denied that he and his ideological brethren are not serious about charges of Soviet cheating by telling us: "This is a matter of such seriousness that it has gone far beyond slogans."

Support from such unaccustomed sources on a sensitive arms control question leaves Ronald Reagan in a position of unique strength to overcome nay-sayers in his own administration. He also has the evidence, thanks to the top-level Verification Panel set up last April. The panel's chairman, National Security Council (NSC) Director William P. Clark, ordered an immediate study by NSC staffers documenting Soviet noncompliance.

That study, which has been completed on current intelligence data, details a long and sorry story: suspected Soviet testing of two "new type" ICBM missiles, despite a SALT II ban on more than one; deployment of what U.S. intelligence officials call a "battle-management" radar in the interior part of Siberia, violating the Anti-Ballistic Missile Treaty; consistent violations of the treaty, which forbids underground testing of weapons with an explosive force of more than 150 kilotons. The list is long and appears to be growing longer by the week.

Even though the SALT treaties are so notoriously ambiguous and porous that absolute proof is hard to obtain, the Senate means business in demanding an accounting of every piece of non-compliance evidence available to U.S. intelligence. The House will undoubtedly concur when it gets the Senate amendment.

That puts the president in an enviable position, considering his basic instincts. Under congressional mandate to produce, it will be easy for him to play the real Ronald Reagan and send the violations report to Capitol Hill. That may cause sulking on his White House staff and in top drawers of the national security bureaucracy, but it's what the president always has wanted. He now has his screwdriver in hand.

CHARLEY REESE

University a victim of hypocrisy

I would not recommend that my children attend Bob Jones University in South Carolina, primarily because Bob Jones III seems to me long on harsh judgments and very short on Christian compassion.

Nevertheless, the Supreme Court decision denying Bob Jones University its tax exemption was wrong. It did so because the university forbids interracial dating by its students and the Supreme Court said this violates public policy as defined by the government.

First, the Supreme Court has usurped again the legislative power of Congress. Tax exemptions are created by Congress and the Congress, not the courts or the IRS, should decide who gets them.

It is also dangerous to liberty to allow government to use the tax laws to force private organizations to conform to public policy. Hardly anyone would argue that public policy ought to rightly condemn racial discrimination. But until the Bob Jones case, tax exemptions were not considered to be the equivalent of a government stamp of approval.

There are over 100,000 organizations which hold tax exemptions and some of them are kooky and some are probably even subversive. The label, "non-profit educational," covers a lot.

So, ok, you don't like Bob Jones University's racial policies, but the court has established a precedent that tax exempt status is dependent on conformity to public policy as defined by the federal government. Suppose the federal government sets other public policies and then begins to use the tax code to force people to conform to them.

As I recall, liberals got bent out of shape when they learned that Richard Nixon's administration contemplated using IRS to punish its enemies. Well, the principle in the Bob Jones case is exactly the same and even worse because it infringes on the first amendment's freedom of religion.

Bob Jones III says its racial policy is based on its interpretation of the scriptures. I think they are wrong, but I also don't like the idea of the government disapproving someone's religious beliefs.

Let us not forget that Bob Jones University is a private, religious school. No one has to go there. Presumably those black and white students who do go there do not object to the rule against interracial dating.

Harvard is also a private school with a tax exemption and it fosters many ideas that I find objectionable (socialism and internationalism to name two), but if the Congress is going to grant tax exemptions to private universities, it should grant them to all and none of them should be forced to comply with government policy on social or political issues.

Actually, Bob Jones University is a victim of the cowardice and hypocrisy of the Congress. Congress claims that forced integration is not public policy. The Congress claims public policy is to end forced segregation. But the Congress conveniently turns its head while the executive branch and the federal courts pursue forced integration with such methods as forced busing, racial quotas and yanking of Bob Jones' tax exemption.

Too often people, whether conservative or liberal, want to limit freedom to those who agree with them. It can't work that way. If you condone lynching Joe Doaks because you think Joe Doaks deserves it, you have also condoned lynching. It's not a particular lynching you should fear — but the power to lynch.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Tuesday, Sept. 27, the 270th day of 1983. There are 95 days left in the year.

In 1825, the first locomotive to haul a passenger train was operated by George Stephenson in England.

In 1894, President Grover Cleveland proclaimed amnesty for people convicted of polygamy.

In 1904, a woman was arrested for smoking a cigarette on Fifth Avenue in New York City.

And in 1972, the Nobel Committee in Stockholm, Sweden, announced it would not award a Peace Prize that year.

Ten years ago: The Soviet Union launched its first manned spacecraft in two years, an improved Soyuz carrying two cosmonauts.

Five years ago: President Jimmy Carter challenged Israel's contention that the Camp David agreement to put a freeze on new West Bank settlements was only for a few weeks.

One year ago: In an address to the United Nations, the president of Brazil predicted a worldwide depression unless international trade and loans were made more readily accessible to poorer nations.

Today's birthdays: U.S. Sen. Charles Percy of Illinois is 64 years old. Actress Jayne Meadows is 57. Actor-singer Shaun Cassidy is 24.

Thought for today: "Moral indignation is jealousy with a halo." — H.G. Wells, English writer-historian (1866-1946).

world in brief

North Korea fired on

TOKYO (AP) — North Korea's news agency claimed today that South Korean troops fired scores of machine gun bullets at North Korean soldiers Monday.

The (North) Korean Central News Agency, in a report monitored in Tokyo, said no one was injured in the incident. It also said two armed South Korean helicopters flew more than 5,000 feet into North Korean airspace in the western sector of the demilitarized zone Monday.

The report said a protest was filed by the senior North Korean member of the Military Armistice Commission.

Filipino students rally

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — Students rallied for a second day today, denouncing both President Ferdinand E. Marcos and the United States, and the commission investigating the assassination of Benigno Aquino announced it would resume daily hearings in two weeks.

Students at the University of the East burned an effigy of a city policeman to protest alleged police brutality during anti-government demonstrations last week, while in the ballroom of a luxury hotel prominent businessmen met with reporters and criticized recent government denunciations of the business community.

No violence or arrests were reported in the student demonstrations.

Reagan 'hypocritical'

MOSCOW (AP) — The official Soviet news agency Tass today labeled President Reagan's speech to the United Nations hypocritical and distorted, while ignoring his new missile reduction proposal.

Reagan, addressing the U.N. General Assembly on Monday, said "the door to an agreement (on arms reductions) is open. It is time for the Soviet Union to walk through it."

Reagan's latest proposal offers to eliminate an unspecified number of Pershing 2 and cruise missiles from a deployment scheduled to begin in Western Europe in December.

Thatcher takes stand

TORONTO (AP) — British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher says Western nations should "take the offensive" against Soviet propaganda at home, in developing nations and within the Soviet bloc.

"The propaganda campaign to sap the morale of the democracies is relentless," Mrs. Thatcher said Monday in an address to the Canadian Parliament. "We must meet it by puncturing each spurious argument and by destroying every myth that emerges."

"We must constantly proclaim our ideals, to our own people at home, to young countries who have yet to choose, to those who live in the shadow of tyranny. It is time for freedom to take the offensive,' she said.

Arsonists responsible?

ANGRA DO HEROISMO, Azores (AP) — Police say arsonists may have set a fire which gutted the nave of the 16th century Roman Catholic cathedral on this mid-Atlantic island chain, extending damage begun by an earthquake in 1980.

The cedar-roofed structure had not been used since 1980, when it was heavily damaged by an earthquake. It had been undergoing renovation and was not in use at the time of the fire.

Built in 1534, the church was designated a cathedral in 1808, serving the 10-island archipelago that is part of the Portuguese Republic.

Girl may still be alive

ROME (AP) — The lawyer for the family of Emanuela Orlandi, the Vatican employee's daughter believed kidnapped three months ago, says he believes the 15-year-old is alive.

But Gennaro Egidio declined to say Monday why he was optimistic about Emanuela's fate.

Egidio, in a statement, also said it would be a "serious error" to give media access to groups that have claimed the kidnapping unless the groups provided proof they were holding the girl.

On Sept. 4, a tape recording from the purported kidnappers demanded papal assailant Mehmet Ali Agca be released from the prison where he is serving a life term.

Pope John Paul II has made several public appeals for the release of the teen-ager, who disappeared June 22.

Dissident hospitalized

VIENNA (AP) — Hungarian dissident Gabor Demszky, co-publisher of an underground magazine critical of the communist government, has been hospitalized because of a beating by police, according to dissident sources.

The sources said Monday that four policemen searched Demszky's car Friday, dragged him out of the vehicle when he protested, threw him to the ground and beat him with rubber truncheons.

Demszky suffered a concussion, bruises and other injuries, according to the sources, who asked to remain anonymous.

Demszky, who publishes the underground magazine Beszeloe with other artists and writers, was on his way to the apartment of a fellow dissident when police stopped his vehicle, the sources said.

Weinberger tours peasant division

PEKING (AP) — Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger today visited a peasant infantry division which grows cabbage on its target range and drills in guerrilla tactics.

Some observers said the modest military display was a sign of Peking's limited interest in strategic dialogue and defense cooperation with the United States.

Weinberger, who has promised high technology that can be used to modernize China's army, watched the No. 3 Division of the Peking garrison in a half-hour demonstration of hand-to-hand combat and target practice with rifles, mortars and machineguns.

It was the only military demonstration planned during Weinberger's five-day trip, intended to re-establish China as one of America's strategic partners.

The secretary, who arrived Sunday, also plans to tour an aircraft engine factory in Xian and make a quick naval inspection in Shanghai.

The military display, 42 miles northeast of Peking, falls far short of the extravagant show of air and naval power and simulated battles staged for then-Defense Secretary Harold Brown in 1980.

Some foreign diplomatic analysts said today's low-level show is a sign that the protocol-minded and symbol-conscious Chinese are not keenly interested in the strategic cooperation Weinberger is proposing.

On Monday, Weinberger told Defense Minister Zhang Aiping that China can have most of the technology it wants from the United States and he pressed for the revival of "valuable military-to-military discussions."

Under guidelines recently revived by President Reagan, China is now considered a "friendly, non-allied" country, making it eligible to purchase previously forbidden technology to help modernize its weapons.

When Brown arrived for a nine-day visit in January 1980 the Chinese army rolled out the red carpet and both sides agreed on a Sino-U.S. strategic relationship to counter Soviet expansionism.

The visit followed establishment of diplomatic relations, the Soviet occupation of Afghanistan and Soviet-backed Vietnam's invasion of Cambodia.

Brown inspected an armored division and saw 20 Chinese tanks pound a hillside with artillery to wipe out an imaginary invading enemy from the north. China sent its impressive North Sea fleet to Shanghai to join the South Sea fleet in an armada.

Since then China has become disillusioned by continuing U.S. arms sales to Taiwan and slow sales of high technology. It has re-evaluated Sino-U.S. relations and pursued an independent foreign policy.

At the No. 3 Division today, Weinberger reviewed an honor guard, mostly peasant soldiers. A rusting tractor and an earthmover stood nearby.

"This is a very good division. They perform very well. You should be very proud," Weinberger told Qin Tao, commander of the unit.

The division, which fought Americans during the Korean War, now helps peasants harvest their crops and assists local officials in public works projects.

Escapes from Irish prisons nothing new

By ED BLANCHE
Associated Press Writer

LONDON — Scores of IRA guerillas have escaped from jail in the past 10 years, blasting prison walls with gelignite, flying out by helicopter or tunneling under barbed wire fences. One walked out disguised as a Roman dCatholic priest.

Sunday's escape by 38 Irish Republican dArmy guerrillas from the Maze maximum security prison outside Belfast was the biggest, but by no means the first.

Brendan Hughes, a commander of the Provisional IRA, escaped in 1973 from Long Kesh internment camp beside the Maze by burrowing into a load of stinking refuse being taken out in a garbage truck.

The Maze holds 1,200 prisoners, most of them convicted guerrillas of the Roman Catholic IRA or its Protestant rivals.

The prison was called escape-proof when it was built in 1975 beside Long Kesh, which still houses 300 "special category" guerrillas in compounds.

There have been 130 escapes or attempted breakouts since October 1971. Sixty guerrillas have gotten out dof Long Kesh.

The biggest breakout before Sunday's was in November 1974, when 33 IRA men dug a 195-foot tunnel from their hut under two 25-foot-high dbarbed wire fences and a watch dtower at Long Kesh.

Thirty-two were recaptured and the other was shot dead by troops on the main Belfast-Dublin highway south dof the prison, the route that many of Sunday's fugitives took to get away.

Eight IRA men used smuggled handguns dto shoot their way to freedom dfrom Belfast's Crumlin Road dprison in June 1981. All were later drecaptured, mostly in the neighboring dIrish Republic.

The first major IRA breakout was in November 1971, when nine men held in Crumlin Road on terrorist charges escaped over a 20-foot-high wall while playing soccer.

Guerrillas on the outside threw rope ladders over the stone wall and the nine, nicknamed "the Crumlin Kangaroos," clambered to freedom still wearing their striped soccer shirts.

They were followed soon after by dthree IRA men who changed places dwith men due for release and dwalked through the front gate past dthe guards.

In February 1972 seven guerrillas held aboard the prison ship Maidstone in Belfast harbor smeared themselves dwith butter, squeezed through portholes and swam a mile through icy water to the shore.

Gerry Adams, now vice president of Sinn Fein, the IRA's political front, dattempted to escape from Long dKesh several times. He and others tried to cut their way through dthe barbed wire around their "cages." But only one man got out that way.

One of the most daring escapes was in November 1973. Three top IRA leaders were lifted to freedom in a hijacked helicopter from Dublin's Mountjoy prison.

They included Seamus Twomey, a onetime Belfast bookie known as "the dBald Eagle" who later became the Provos' Chief of Staff.

In 1974, guerrillas rammed the main dgate of the Irish Republic's top dsecurity Portlaoise prison 50 miles dwest of Dublin with a 15-ton earthmover.

d The attackers shorted power cables dwhile scores of convicted guerrillas dtried to make a run for it. dBut troops opened fire, killing one dinmate, and prevented the breakout.

Search for 21 escapees of Maze prison continues

BELFAST, Northern Ireland (AP) — Twenty-one escaped IRA guerrillas remained at large today as Britain's chief prisons inspector began an inquiry into the mass breakout from Belfast's maximum security Maze prison.

Charges were leveled that sabotage, complicity by prison workers and security lapses enabled a total of 38 men to escape — Britain's biggest jailbreak ever.

The fugitives, who reportedly used smuggled handguns and knives to battle their way out of the prison, include three of the Irish Republican Army's top gunmen. They killed one prison officer and wounded six others as they fled.

The Rev. Ian Paisley, Northern Ireland's fiery Protestant leader, said Monday night he was told by Northern Ireland Secretary James Prior that the prison's outer gate had been left open before the breakout.

Japan says U.S. has data

TOKYO (AP) — Japanese government officials reportedly said today that U.S. Navy search vessels have located the flight data and voice recorders from the downed South Korean airliner, but a Navy spokesman denied the reports.

Reports by the Japan Broadcasting Corp. and the Kyodo News Service, quoting unnamed government sources, followed a statement by the chief government spokesman that set off a wave of speculation the Americans would soon recover the recorders.

But Lt. Gary Shrout, spokesman for the U.S. Navy in Japan, denied the reports. "As of this afternoon we have not found the black box," he said. "I'm not waffling on that one."

The recorders — the so-called "black box" — have tapes of the last 30 minutes of the flight and might tell why the Korean aircraft veered off course into Soviet airspace.

This morning, Chief Cabinet Secretary Masaharu Gotoda, Japan's top government spokesman, said the United States had invited Japanese officials to join U.S. search operations off western Sakhalin where the Korean Air Lines jumbo jet is thought to have gone down after being hit by a Soviet missile Sept. 1 with 269 people aboard.

Gotoda said the officials were to be present when the Americans recovered the two recorders.

Later today, 10 officials, including two Japanese and one from the International Civil Aviation Organization, left Wakkanai, Japan's northernmost city, aboard a U.S. Navy helicopter for an unidentified U.S. Search vessel.

Mystery writer slain at her home

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The gunshot murder of a "big-league" Hollywood mystery writer who changed her telephone number after receiving "some weird telephone calls" has neighbors dismayed and police puzzled.

Detectives said the fully clothed body of Muriel Davidson, 59, was found Monday in posh Benedict Canyon bungalow she shared with her writer husband, Bill.

Police Cmdr. William Booth declined comment about whether anyone was being sought. An autopsy was set for today to determine time of death, but authorities said Mrs. Davidson died of multiple gunshot wounds.

"There is no suspect in custody and at this time we don't know the motive for the murder," Booth said.

Lt. Ron Lewis said there were no signs of sexual assault, forced entry or valuables taken, and "the house wasn't really ransacked too much."

Lewis, a detective from the central Los Angeles Police Department homicide unit, said he was assigned to the case rather than West Los Angeles detectives "because we're considering it a VIP situation."

Mrs. Davidson wrote about celebrities and crime for such magazines as the Saturday Evening Post, Good Housekeeping and Family Circle.

A 1965 article on conditions at the Cook County (Ill.) Jail helped prompt prison reform and a change of wardens.

In 1966-67, she and her husband collaborated on "Organized Crime in America" for the Saturday Evening Post. Her research included slipping into an illegal casino in Louisiana with a miniature camera in the pocket of her mink.

Mrs. Davidson told Associated Press entertainment reporter Bob Thomas last week that she had a new telephone number.

"Bill and I had to change it because we've been getting some weird telephone calls," Thomas quoted her as saying.

Davidson, a contributing editor with TV Guide, has written dozens of magazine articles and TV scripts. His nonfiction book, "Indict and Convict," was the basis for a 1974 Universal Studio film about a deputy district attorney charged with murdering his wife and her lover, even though he was 150 miles away when they died.

"They were both big-league professional article writers," an acquaintance who asked not to be named said of the couple.

At the time of the murder Davidson was in Houston, where he has been working on a book about oil-fire fighter Red Adair.

Adair said in a telephone interview that he spoke with Davidson after Davidson learned of his wife's slaying, and Davidson said he had been worried about leaving his wife alone — "the kind of concern we all have when we leave our wives alone."

Davidson had called home Sunday night and when no one answered, he asked a neighbor to check. It was the neighbor who summoned authorities, police said.

The Davidsons put their house up for sale for $330,000 last month. Their real estate agent, Ellen Johnson, said Ms. Davidson repeatedly asked: "Please don't let anybody know he (her husband) isn't going to be home."

"She said it several times," Ms. Johnson recalled. "There was somebody they didn't want to know that she was alone. It was strange."

Residents of the Davidsons' Benedict Canyon neighborhood — a quiet area of tree-lined cul-de-sacs in the hills between the Los Angeles basin and the San Fernando Valley — said they'd heard no unusual noises Sunday night and had had few problems with burglars.

"It's spooky," said a neighbor who identified himself only as Andy. He said that although he had lived in his home 20 years, he did not know the Davidsons. "They're kind of private over there," he said.

Survivors include a daughter, Carol Stevens.

Youth testifies about computer snooping

WASHINGTON (AP) — Computer owners have failed to take even the most elementary steps to stop snooping by hobbyists who delight in cracking their security systems, says a 17-year-old who has penetrated dozens of computers across the country.

Neal Patrick told a House Science subcommittee Monday that it would have been easy to stop him and his high school friends from most of their exploits by merely making more complex the passwords needed to enter a computer.

While Patrick and the "414s" — a group of young computer buffs named after their area code in Milwaukee — did not maliciously destroy records or alter data, it would have been easy to do so, he told the panel.

"The potential for damage was enormous," said Patrick, who began his computer career with an introductory course at school in the seventh grade. At one of their targets, the Sloan-Kettering Cancer Center in New York, a group member accidentally erased some billing data from the computer.

"If someone with a sinister intent had access (to) that computer, the damage could have run into the millions, just in dollar value," he said. The group also entered computers of a bank and of the Los Alamos National Laboratory.

With a home computer and a telephone hookup costing just a few hundred dollars, and only a good working knowledge of how to operate the system, anyone could duplicate the electronic travels of the 414s, said Patrick — unless companies and institutions took more trouble to protect themselves.

Passwords that act as entry keys to computers are often exchanged through computer "bulletin boards" which can be dialed by telephone.

AP Laserphoto

Neal Patrick of Milwaukee testifies before a House subcommitee investigating computer and communications security and privacy. Patrick is one of the Milwaukee youths who obtained unauthorized entry into computers of the Los Alamos National Laboratory.

Other passwords are easy to guess, since the computer owners often neglect to change them from the simple commands like "test" or "system" which are used to demonstrate the computer program to a buyer.

"If they had just changed those (passwords), we couldn't have gotten in," Patrick told the panel.

Other experts, however, said it won't be that easy to deter all hackers, a term used to refer to people who gain access to computer systems for fun. They said changing passwords may merely offer some a new challenge, a tougher code to crack.

"In some cases, we have failed to take even the most elementary precaution, the electronic equivalent of locking the door," said subcommittee chairman Rep. Dan Glickman, D-Kan., who has called three days of hearings into computer and communication security. Several congressional panels are looking at proposed laws that would make computer tampering a federal crime.

Breaking into computers by telephone has become a growing problem with the proliferation of home computers that are easily hooked up to long-distance telephone lines. No figures are available, but reports are growing of embezzlement, inventory tampering and even students who electronically change their grades in school computers.

And there is fear that groups like the 414s could, intentionally or not, damage or destroy stored data or cause disruption in vital services.

Experts at the hearing said most truly sensitive computer systems, such as those dealing with national defense or financial data, are safely isolated and require security clearances and special classified codes to use them.

But they often are not immune from tampering from within, by employees who could misuse the systems for personal gain.

Jimmy McClary, who is in charge of computer security at Los Alamos, N.M., said the Milwaukee youths gained access there through a national information network that is a favorite target of hackers. They penetrated only an unclassified system that is meant for open use, but if they had wanted "could have caused confusion, delay and perhaps incorrect results" for legitimate users of the system.

He likened the tampering to a joyride in a stolen car but added it is little different than breaking into a government office. "We should not dismiss the culprit because the office had windows," he said.

Reagan to let Watt decide if he should quit

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan says he'll let James Watt decide for himself whether he should quit as interior secretary.

James Watt

Reagan, asked in an interview with the New York Post if he thought Watt could still function as a member of the president's Cabinet, said:

"I think that's a decision that he himself will have to make — whether he feels he has made it questionable as to whether he can be effective or not."

Discussing Watt's characterization of several appointees as "a black, ... a woman, two Jews and a cripple," Reagan commented in the Monday interview:

"I think in all fairness we have to recognize that, yes, it was a very improper thing to say. But it certainly was not said in the sense of any bitterness or bigotry or prejudice.

"If I thought he was bigoted or prejudiced, he wouldn't be part of our administration."

While Watt has gained some breathing room on Capitol Hill in the battle to keep his job, the criticism over his latest controversial remark and his environmental policies shows no sign of abating.

Watt came under renewed fire today from two congressional critics of his coal leasing program. Sen. Dale Bumpers, D-Ark., and Rep. Edward Markey, D-Mass., told the Commission on Federal Coal Leasing that Watt was ignoring the current over-supply of coal and glutted market to press forward with coal sales that have cost taxpayers $100 million.

"The public and Congress can only assume that the department is more interested in protecting the interests of the coal industry than the interests of taxpayers," Bumpers said.

Markey said by abandoning previously accepted procedures for determining the appropriate worth of the government's reserves, Watt had adopted a course "destined to fail."

Warren White, an aide to Wyoming Gov. Ed Herschler, said the states of Colorado, Montana, Utah and Wyoming — which contain the bulk of western coal — believe that the fundamentals of the current coal leasing program are "sound," but that the commission has "a major job ahead in restoring public confidence in the difficult area of fair market value" because of questions raised over Watt's program.

While the commission resumed hearings into charges that Watt's leasing policies have cost taxpayers $100 million, the interior secretary worked to shore up badly eroded support.

At the White House, meanwhile, a group calling itself Council of Volunteer Americans presented petitions, postcards and mailgrams to Craig Fuller, a Reagan assistant, to show support for Watt.

Myron McKee, a spokesman, said the delivery represented the support of 120,000 people.

Among those delivering the material was Bob Brostrom, who uses crutches. Brostrom praised Watt's efforts to make national parks and monuments more accessible to handicapped people.

Watt received good news when Senate opponents agreed to put off a Wednesday debate on a resolution calling for Watt's resignation for conduct "totally unbefitting a senior Cabinet member."

Watt's supporters had feared his fate would be sealed if the resolution was pushed to a vote and he suffered wide-scale defections in GOP ranks.

In a discussion with reporters, Senate Majority Leader Howard Baker, R-Tenn., said he would not support the Democrat-sponsored resolution, although he added pointedly, "I think the time could come when I could support such a resolution."

Residents don't want cyclists in their midst

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — Police have stepped up patrols and scheduled meetings to try to settle a rift between members of a motorcycle gang and residents of a neighborhood where two fatal shootings have occurred in the past week.

Eleven members of the Outlaws motorcycle gang pleaded innocent Monday to murder charges in the fatal shooting of a man Saturday near their new clubhouse in the Portland neighborhood.

Last Tuesday, an Outlaw member was shot and killed when someone opened fire from a car that sped past the clubhouse.

"The main request of the residents is to get them (Outlaws) out, but they have the same constitutional rights as everyone else and I can't make them move as long as they conform to the law," Police Chief Richard Dotson said Monday.

He said he plans to meet with the gang's president and area residents this week to discuss the situation.

Meanwhile, police have increased the frequency of their patrols in the riverfront neighborhood and officers are "anticipating (more violence) as a possibility," Dotson said.

The 11 — most of whom were outsiders in town for the funeral of the slain gang member — were arrested Saturday after Gary Wayne Baucom, 30, was shot to death while driving past the clubhouse, authorities said. Baucom's pickup ran over three of 36 motorcycles parked in front of the clubhouse shortly after midnight, police said.

The pickup went out of control and crashed into a business at the corner of the street. Somebody "then fired through the back of the truck and hit the driver," police said. Two passengers in the truck with Baucom fled the scene.

Baucom was a brother-in-law of one of the three men involved in a brawl with two Outlaws last Monday at a bar in the Portland neighborhood where the clubhouse is located, police said.

Man kills wife he mistakes for burglar

TAMPA, Fla. (AP) — A 69-year-old man who fired a shot at a shadowy figure in his bedroom after a burglar alarm went off discovered he had accidentally killed his own wife, authorities said.

Salvatore Ciaccia was awakened by the burglar alarm around 5:30 a.m., police said. He grabbed his handgun off a nightstand and fired at a shadowy figure that was approaching him, said Tampa police spokesman Johnny Barker.

Etelvina Ciaccia, 68, was shot in the abdomen with a .45 caliber bullet, police said. She was pronounced dead at 6:05 a.m. at St. Joseph's Hospital.

No charges have been filed, but the Hillsborough County state attorney's office was investigating the shooting.

Longshoremen's strike averted

BAL HARBOUR, Fla. (AP) — Atlantic and Gulf port employers and union longshoremen have agreed on an interim master contract and set a Jan. 15, 1984, deadline for reaching new long-term agreements.

The contract agreed to by the International Longshoremen's Association and seven major harbor management groups ended the threat of a strike Friday, when the current pact expires, by 50,000 workers from Maine to Texas.

The pact means an increase of about $1 an hour in wages and higher employer contributions to pension and welfare funds, effective Oct. 1, union spokesman George Penitz said.

Parents want tainted schools closed

WILLIAMSTOWN, Vt. (AP) — Chanting "Clean water, clean air, no more toxic waste," parents demanded that the state close or clean two schools where a mildly toxic chemical has been found.

The parents have been keeping their children out of class and on Monday staged a protest march between the two schools.

Air and water samples taken last week revealed low levels of tetrachloroethylene, which irritates the eyes and skin, in soil and air at the elementary school, and in the air at the high school.

Funds released for school programs

CHICAGO (AP) — The Education Department has received a judge's approval to distribute a portion of the $48 million he froze in a dispute over government aid for Chicago schools' integration.

U.S. District Judge Milton I. Shadur on Monday released $4.3 million to be used to finance educational programs across the nation. But he continued his freeze on the remaining $43.7 million, and set Oct. 15 for another hearing on the matter.

Coetzee starts wild gold rush

An AP Sports Analysis
By ED SCHUYLER JR.

Gerrie Coetzee, the World Boxing Association heavyweight champion, is a South African gold mine, and therein lies the problem for promoter Don King and possibly some future opponents.

"This is where I won the title, and I want to defend it here," Coetzee said after knocking out Michael Dokes in the 10th round and winning the title at Richfield, Ohio.

"As long as he's the champion with me, he'll fight here (the United States)," said King, a black promoter, who has long criticized rival white promoter Bob Arum for promoting fights in South Africa.

King said he has options for three Coetzee fights. Some say more. But Arum says none.

Arum said that WBA rules state a promoter can't have options on a new champion unless he has promoted previous fights of his. King didn't, said Arum.

"I WILL stick with King," said Cedric Kushner, a South African who now promotes in the United States and is Coetzee's advisor.

"I will not fight this guy over there," said Larry Holmes, the World Boxing Council champion, whose name immediately was mentioned as an opponent when Coetzee became the first white heavyweight champion since Ingemar Johansson of Sweden won and lost the title in fight with Floyd Patterson in 1959-60.

Now, Coetzee calls South Africa's race-separation policy of apartheid "rubbish." He lives with his wife and family at Huntington Beach, Calif., and is on his way to becoming a legal U.S. resident. His third child, a girl, was born in the United States the day after his victory.

But that victory made the 28-year-old Coetzee a hero to white South Africa, and the really big money for him and anyone he fights is in South Africa, where Coetzee tried for the WBA title twice before succeeding in the United States.

THERE IS A 110,000-seat stadium in South Africa that would be filled for Coetzee's first defense, his second, his third, etc., because a Coetzee defense of a share of one of sport's most important individual prizes would be an international event in a country banned from participation in many areas of international sport.

Protests and demonstrations by civil rights groups — there was none for his bid against the favored Dokes — probably will be part of any Coetzee defense in the United States. Some say any South African athlete represents South Africa. It seems here that Gerrie Coetzee is just a professional fighter, who happens to be a South African, and that the hero worship heaped on him there need not reflect his political beliefs.

There will be no demonstrations over a Coetzee fight in South Africa — at least before the fight.

Of course, there would be intense pressure on Coetzee, the kind of pressure he feels he escaped by challenging for the title in the United States.

BUT PRESSURE is the name of the game in fighting, and a multi-million dollar purse can make bearing up under pressure worthwhile. After all, boxing is a business.

"I ain't no politician," Dokes said when asked about fighting a white South African.

But some fighters and at least one promoter are going to feel political pressure in the upcoming weeks and months about being involved in future Coetzee fights. Consciences will have to be searched.

Chances of Coetzee defending the title in South Africa are excellent. Boxing is a business, like dealing in gold and diamonds.

Aussies conquer winds

By PETER BREWER

NEWPORT, R.I. (AP) — The only foreign skipper to take away the America's Cup in 132 years says the wayward winds off this seaport first worked against him, then worked for him in the decisive race.

John Bertrand, the sailmaker who defeated the American yacht Liberty by 41 seconds Monday, said the key was the fifth of the six legs, when he finally eased into the lead.

"We were able to get back into the boat race and go on to cross Liberty by maybe 10 feet and as a result go on" and lead around the next mark, said the Aussie skipper at a news conference after the race.

Bertrand, 37, and Australia II, the fleet 12-meter with a keel kept secret until Monday night, captured the Cup by winning the seven-race series, 4-3.

Until late in the race it looked like the latest Australian challenge was doomed to failure behind Liberty and U.S. skipper Dennis Conner, whose Cup expertise goes back to 1974.

"The conditions (on the run) were as fickle as they were to windward," Bertrand recalled. "We were able to get two wind shifts that Liberty did not get."

Australia II had fallen back 57 seconds turning into the run, but Bertrand, who holds a degree in ocean engineering, went off to the right to hunt for quicker air.

And after squeezing out a 21-second advantage at the downwind mark, Bertrand had to beat Conner at his own game, covering by staying between the U.S. boat and the finish line the rest of the distance.

"Australia II tacks well," said Conner, "But Liberty tacked very well today, too."

"In reality, they were in control most of the last leg," Conner said. "No way in the last weather leg did we think there was a chance to catch them."

Conner said Bertrand took over because "they were able to sail lower and faster and sailed through us to leeward on the lower part of the run. It was very frustrating for us.

"That was the turning point of the race."

Bertrand had trouble with the undependable breezes on the first leg when he lost an early edge to Liberty.

"We had wind shifts of 20 to 30 degrees and major changes in wind velocity," the Aussie skipper recalled. "It was very difficult, very tricky to cover another boat."

He said Liberty sailed a bit faster, picked up better wind and crossed ahead of the Australians.

That gave Conner a 29-second advantage at the first mark which he upped to 45 seconds at the second turn. The Australians chipped that down to 23 seconds at the third mark.

"It's the fulfillment of a dream come true," Bertrand said, "and it's certainly the greatest day of my life."

Huskers get no argument

By Associated Press

The Nebraska Cornhuskers, who have crushed four opponents this season by a combined score of 226-⅙, are a unanimous choice today as the nation's No. 1 college football team.

Texas remained in second place and Arizona moved up to third, while Southern California and Notre Dame, two of the top names in college football, fell out of the Associated Press Top Twenty.

Nebraska whipped UCLA 42-10 after trailing 10-0 in the second period. The Cornhuskers received all 60 first-place votes and a perfect score of 1,200 points from a nationwide panel of sports writers and sportscasters.

Texas, a 26-6 winner over North Texas State, received 58 second-place votes and two third-place ballots for 1,138 points.

For the third week in a row, Arizona reached its highest point ever since the AP poll began in 1936. The Wildcats trimmed Fullerton State 31-10 and climbed from fourth to third with 1,001 points.

Iowa moved up from seventh to fourth with 998 points following a 20-14 victory over Ohio State, which dropped from third to eighth as a result. North Carolina, a 51-20 winner over William & Mary, remained in fifth place with 917 points and Alabama held onto sixth place with 880 points by defeating Vanderbilt 44-24.

WEST VIRGINIA jumped from 12th to seventh with 750 points for a 27-17 triumph over Boston College, knocking the losers out of the Top Twenty. They had been 19th last week.

Rounding out the Top Ten are Ohio State with 709 points, Oklahoma with 695 and Auburn with 693. Oklahoma slipped from eighth to ninth despite a 28-18 victory over Tulsa, while Auburn rose from 11th to 10th by pounding Tennessee 37-14. Washington and Southern Cal were the 9-10 teams a week ago.

AP's Top 20

The Top Twenty teams in the Associated Press colig football poll, with first-place votes in parentheses, season records and total points. Points based on 20-19-18-17-16-15-14-13-12-11-10-9-8-7-6-5-4-3-2-1:

1.Nebraska (60)	4-0-0	1,200
2.Texas	2-0-0	1,138
3.Arizona	4-0-0	1,001
4.Iowa	3-0-0	998
5.North Carolina	4-0-0	917
6.Alabama	3-0-0	88
7.West Virginia	4-0-0	750
8.Ohio State	2-1-0	709
9.Oklahoma	2-1-0	695
10.Auburn	2-1-0	693
11.Georgia	2-0-1	619
12.Florida	3-0-1	566
13.So. Methodist	3-0-0	385
14.Michigan	2-1-0	384
15.Miami, Fla.	3-1-0	310
16.LSU	2-1-0	284
17.Florida State	2-1-0	215
18.Washington	2-1-0	179
19.Maryland	2-1-0	157
20.Arizona State	2-0-1	114

The Second Ten consists of Georgia, Florida, Southern Methodist, Michigan, Miami of Florida, LSU, Florida State, Washington, Maryland and Arizona State.

LAST WEEK, it was Auburn, West Virginia, Notre Dame, Georgia, Florida, Pitt, Michigan, SMU, Boston College and Florida State.

USC fell out after a 26-20 loss to Kansas, Notre Dame disappeared by dropping its second game in a row 20-0 to Miami and Pitt was knocked out after a 13-7 loss to Maryland.

Meanwhile, Miami made the Top Twenty for the first time this season, LSU returned after a two-week absence by trouncing Washington 40-14, Maryland came back after a one-week lapse and Arizona State made it for the first time this year with a 44-14 rout of Wichita State.

Improving Giants sack Green Bay

NFL

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. (AP) — New York Giants Coach Bill Parcells had a can of soda in his hand, a stick of gum in his mouth and a notion in his head.

He had something to say about his team, and he said it more than once.

His words weren't poetic nor nearly as overwhelming as the Giants' 27-3 NFL victory over the normally explosive Green Bay Packers Monday night. But he made his point.

"Although our won-loss record doesn't show it, I think we're an improving football team," said Parcells, whose team evened its record at 2-2 while notching its largest margin of victory in eight years at Giants Stadium.

Presumably, Parcells and Green Bay Coach Bart Starr watched the same game. But it didn't sound that way as Starr indicated his team made it easier for the Giants to look improved.

"We embarrassed ourselves," Starr said. "We did just about everything we could to cost ourselves a ball game. The Giants are good, but they are not supermen. We made them look like supermen.

"I don't like to admit it, but I can't remember us playing any worse than this."

The Giants chose to look at it another way.

"This was just our night. There was no way they could beat us," said linebacker Lawrence Taylor. "We got very stingy. They got close to our goal line and we'd bend. But we didn't break."

Taylor referred to a few instances when the defense refused to break, including a fourth-down play by cornerback Mark Haynes in the second quarter. Haynes rode Green Bay tight end Gary Lewis to the turf inches short of the end zone after quarterback Lynn Dickey executed a seemingly perfect fake handoff up the middle and shoveled the ball to Lewis on an end-around.

"That was my man," Haynes said. "If I don't go with him it's six points."

Cup goes Down Under

Do you come from the land down under?/Can't you hear, can't you hear the thunder?/You'd better run, better take cover...
—From the Men at Work song, "Down Under"

It's all over now.

Midland is about as land-locked an area as any on earth. There isn't even a suitable body of water in the vicinity to stage something as intriguing as a yacht race, and before Monday I assumed that was fine with the populace.

Wrong again, barnacle-breath.

Australia II, feared and reviled before the 25th defense of the America's Cup, has taken the 132-year win streak posted by the U.S of A. and sent it to Davey Jones' locker.

The Aussies did it in striking fashion. After all the hullabaloo before the start of the Cup, Liberty and skipper Dennis Conner stole some of that thunder by sweeping the first two races and grabbing a 3-1 lead.

But as Dick Motta said, 'it ain't over til the fat lady sings.'

MAYBE THAT'S why Conner was dumping ballast before the seventh race. He was afraid the fat lady was an American.

In any event, Conner now has the distinction of being the only American skipper to lose the Cup. One wag around these parts suggested Conner's role in history is now as secure as Benedict Arnold, but that's a little rough.

To me, the most interesting note is how the Midland sports public took to the story. Monday afternoons are traditionally as exciting as Oiler football games. Yesterday the phones rang off the hook for two solid hours as Midlanders fretted over the happenings off Newport.

That interest from sports fans of Football Kingdom U.S.A. surprised me. I haven't given the fans here enough credit. Silly boy, I thought showboats and full boats were big stuff here.

So now, we contemplate the first U.S. loss since before the Civil War. We are talking major win streak here, folks. Or rather, we were. Now, make plans in advance for the next title defense of the America's Cup. In sunny Perth.

THIS ROVING journalist, stickler for accuracy that he is, promptly looked up Perth on the map.

Perth is 'beautiful this time of year' according to uninformed sources. Regardless, now it will be the site of the next defense. Located on the southwest edge of Australia, it would be an ideal place to see the next Cup defense in 1986. Afterwards, travellers could always make a week or two out of it and visit scenic Hong Kong or thereabouts. Heck, by 1986 it might even be safe to walk the streets of Manila.

So there you have it, the final judgement on what will be remembered as one of the biggest events in sports, and undoubtedly the biggest news ever in the history of yachting.

As for Aussie skipper John Bertrand, nearly 10 years of failure by the Australian syndicate backing the challenger has been eradicated. After all the garbage thrown at Australia II concerning specifications, qualifications, and so on, but basically the efforts to squelch the new keel of the boat, triumph is sweet.

One thing is for certain. I know of two University of Arkansas tennis players, Pat Serret and Peter Doohan, who hail from the land down under. I also know that the fabled Aussie love for beer is legitimate.

And I know that on Dickson Street in Fayetteville, Arkansas, and in zillions of pubs in Australia and all over the world, enough brew will be consumed tonight in celebration to float a yacht.

Bob Forsch's no-hitter erases last lingering doubts

AP Laserphoto

Bob Forsch hurls second no-hitter.

By Associated Press

For five years, Bob Forsch lived with the knowledge that some people thought he didn't deserve his first no-hit game.

On Monday night, he left no doubts as he pitched the second no-hit gem of his career and the first in the National League in exactly two years as the St. Louis Cardinals beat the Montreal Expos 3-0.

"A lot of people said that it (the first no-hitter) was tainted," Forsch said. "This one I don't think there was any question about."

Only a hit batsman and an error by second baseman Ken Oberkfell, both in the second inning, kept the no-hitter from being a perfect game. Forsch, 33, retired the last 22 Expos.

Meanwhile, division leaders Philadelphia and Los Angeles both won their games to pull closer to clinching spots in the playoffs. The Dodgers rallied to beat Cincinnati 12-9 in 10 innings and the Phillies beat Chicago 5-2, while Atlanta defeated San Francisco 6-2 and Houston tripped San Diego 5-3.

Forsch, the 20th player to pitch two no-hitters in this century, got his first on April 16, 1978 against Philadelphia.

In that one,a drive that went under the glove of Ken Reitz was called an error in the eighth inning. On Monday night, Oberkfell let a grounder by Chris Speier go through his legs.

"It had a fouled-up spin on it," said Oberkfell, who assisted on the final out in the ninth on a ground ball by Manny Trillo.

Forsch, 9-12, said his second no-hitter was a better pitching performance than his first.

"I felt like I had a better fastball tonight," he said. "Against Philadelphia, the ball was just sinking real good."

Forsch, who threw 96 pitches to beat the Expos, who had been mathematically eliminated earlier in the day, said he groups his memory of his first no-hitter with the one thrown by his brother, Ken, a year later, making them the only brother combination to throw no-hitters.

"The first one set up the second one for Kenny," he said. "There can be no greater feeling than when he got his the next season."

Monday's night's performance came two years after the last previous no-hitter in the NL. Nolan Ryan pitched his record fifth no-hitter, against Los Angeles, on Sept. 26, 1981.

Forsch also alluded to the fact that he is having one of the worst seasons in his 10-year career with St. Louis, which failed to defend its 1982 world championship.

"I don't think I've lost faith in my ability," he said. "It's just that things haven't worked out."

The only ball close to a Montreal hit came in the second inning when Tim Raines slugged a long drive to left-center that Cards' center fielder Willie McGee caught after a long run.

In the same inning, Forsch hit Gary Carter on the left arm, drawing an umpire's warning, and Oberkfell made his error, putting Carter on third. Angel Salazar then struck out, the first of six for Forsch, and the Expos were retired in order the last seven innings.

The Cardinals scored all of their runs in the fifth inning on run-scoring singles by Ozzie Smith and McGee and an RBI-double by Lonnie Smith.

Phillies 5, Cubs 2

Philadelphia won at Chicago for its 11th straight triumph, built its lead over second-place Pittsburgh to 4½ games and lowered its magic number to two with five games left.

John Denny picked up his 18th victory, high in the league, with an eight-inning seven-hitter and the Phillies got all their runs on two-run homers by Ivan DeJesus and Joe Lefebvre and a solo shot from Len Matuszek.

Denny, who has lost only six times, walked none and struck out three before Ron Reed took over at the start of the ninth inning and gained his ninth save.

Dodgers 12, Reds 9

Los Angeles maintained its 3½-game lead over Atlanta by rallying for three runs in the top of the ninth to tie the score and then winning the game with four runs in the 10th.

Pedro Guerrero slammed a two-run double in the 10th and contributed an RBI-single in the ninth.

Greg Brock and Dusty Baker collected their fourth hits of the game to start the 10th inning, and Guerrero drove in pinch-runners Derrel Thomas and Candy Maldonado for a 10-8 advantage. Cecil Espy then singled to score Guerrero and Steve Sax walked with the bases loaded for the final run.

Braves 6, Giants 2

Atlanta won its third straight, holding on to beat San Francisco after Jerry Royster capped a four-run first inning with a two-run double.

Phil Niekro, 11-9, won his fourth straight decision, striking out four and walking four in 6 2-3 innings before being replaced by Gene Garber, who earned his ninth save.

The Braves sent nine batters to the plate in the first inning, chasing Giants starter Mark Calvert, 1-4. In addition to Royster's double, Claudell Washington and Rafael Ramirez knocked in a runs with singles.

Astros 5, Padres 3

Houston also scored early to beat San Diego, as Denny Walling drove in two runs with a double and a groundout.

The Astros scored three runs in the first against loser Eric Show, 14-12. Dickie Thon and Jose Cruz had run-scoring singles in the inning, and Walling drove in the third run with a ground ball. Walling added a run-scoring double in the third.

Mike Madden, 9-4, pitched six innings for the victory.

Heaton 3-hits Yanks for family, friends

By Associated Press

In a nearly empty Yankee Stadium in a game which meant little, Neal Heaton found plenty of reasons to go all out.

Heaton, a native New Yorker, three-hit the Yankees Monday night in Cleveland's 7-0 victory. He did it for himself, his family and friends.

"This was a big thrill, going nine and it's against the Yankees," said the 23-year-old rookie left-hander and one-time All-American at the University of Miami. "All my family was out there — I had about 50 comps (complimentary tickets). And guys I haven't seen for 10 years were here."

The Yankees announced an attendance of 15,119 but only about 6,000 were visible.

They saw Heaton surrender a bunt single to Omar Moreno, Steve Balboni's line single in the seventh and Bobby Meacham's double in the eighth. He struck out six and walked three to earn his third shutout.

Heaton, who moved into the rotation July 20, gained his sixth victory in his last nine starts.

"I'm still a rookie and have to prove myself every time out there," said Heaton. "I don't care if we're 50 games behind and its the last game of the season, I'm doing my best.

"All my life I had been a starter. I thought mentally I was better as a starter. I just wasn't used to the bullpen. I was used to rest, running between starts, and sitting in the dugout, all the things a starter does.

"I hope I never see a bullpen again."

"He has an awful lot of stuff, a good fastball, slow breaking pitch and a changeup," said Moreno.

Andre Thornton and Gorman Thomas each drove in two runs for Cleveland, which broke open the game with four runs in the sixth. Thornton belted a long bases-loaded double to key the rally.

Royals 6, Mariners 2

Darryl Motley slammed a two-run homer and Dan Quisenberry registered his 43rd save, extending his own major league record.

Blue Jays 3, Angels 2

Damaso Garcia singled in the 10th and scored his third run of the game on Garth Iorg's single. Doyle Alexander went nine innings to pick up his sixth consecutive victory.

JIM MURRAY

Plunkett one of great deals

Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

When you talk of great bargains in sports history, you begin of course with Babe Ruth. He cost the New York Yankees $125,000 which, while that was a lot of money in 1919, has to rank in American lore with getting Manhattan Island from the Indians for $26 worth of beads.

The Yankees also got Joe DiMaggio for $25,000, which makes Alaska look like a hard bargain.

The Baltimore Colts got Johnny Unitas for an 87-cent phone call.

But getting Jim Plunkett for $100 in the Year of Our Lord 1978, when coffee cost four bits, steak was $7 a pound, tract houses were $150,000 and journeymen ballplayers were getting million-dollar contracts, has to rank with the great steals of all time.

IN POINT of fact, Plunkett didn't even cost the Raiders the C note. What happened in 1978 was, the San Francisco 49ers turned him loose on waivers and, when every club in the NFL passed on him, the Raiders' Al Davis got on the phone.

How Jim Plunkett came to be available for $100 is one of the sad stories of our day. It makes "Hamlet" look like a comedy, "Stella Dallas" a musical. Five years before, you couldn't have got him out of Boston for the Brinks holdup money.

Jim Plunkett's career was supposed to have been a golden legend. Part Indian, part Mexican, All-American, Plunkett had led Stanford to its first Rose Bowl in 20 years and its first Rose Bowl win since 1936. He won the Heisman Trophy, the Maxwell Trophy, he was the No. 1 draft choice, he had an agent, a lawyer. He could throw a football 70 yards and, if you wanted him to hit a receiver in the eye, he could say, "Which eye?"

He got drafted by the New England Patriots, the Ivy Leaguers of the NFL, and what happened to Plunkett will probably give you a clue as to why another celebrated Stanford quarterback, John Elway, refused to go to the worst team in football this past season. They teach respect for history at Stanford.

WHEN PLUNKETT came to New England, the veteran Joe Kapp was supposed to be the quarterback. It didn't work out that way. Snarled in a contract dispute, Kapp, a Super Bowl-seasoned play caller, walked out of camp before Plunkett got there. He filed a series of lawsuits and never played another game of football.

New England shrugged. It had the world's greatest quarterback anyway, didn't it? He could handle Ohio State in the Rose Bowl, he could take care of Miami in the Orange Bowl, right? He'd get the hang of it after the first series of plays.

The last quarterback in the NFL to step right off a college campus and win in the pros was Bob Waterfield, and that was back in the war years. When Waterfield became a coach, he ardently insisted that it took a minimum of three years for even the most precocious passer to succeed in the professional game. Waterfield said it was like throwing a baby into the North Atlantic to teach him to swim. "You will destroy him," he warned owners impatient to get a No. 1 draft choice in the lineup.

Plunkett quickly became Exhibit A in the Waterfield summation. Accustomed to the unsophisticated or non-existent pass defenses of Oregon State or Ohio State, he found himself throwing not the gorgeous length-of-the-field spirals of his years at The Farm but short, hysterical, to-whom-it-may-concern spasms as likely of success as notes thrown in a bottle. The New England line was scarcely the Seven Blocks of Granite. The Seven Pieces of Kleenex was more like it.

Plunkett got intercepted. Plunkett got hurt. The coaches deserted Plunkett. The fans deserted Plunkett. Then, Plunkett deserted Plunkett.

"Sure, my confidence was gone," Plunkett said as he sat on a bench at the Raiders' training camp the other day. "You try to do everything yourself. You get so you want to throw the ball and catch it yourself. You press. You scramble. You improvise."

THE PATRIOTS' backfield looked like the proverbial Chinese fire drill, a corral in a windstorm.

Plunkett thought a return to the scenes of his childhood would help. The Patriots traded him to San Francisco for a quarterback and five draft choices. But the fault was not geographical. It was, said the league, biological. Plunkett had been broken on the rack, they said. He was afraid to let go of the ball. He was relieved when it was merely incomplete. The 49ers didn't even try to trade him.

The Raiders didn't entirely buy the scenario. The Raiders, you see, hardly ever buy retail. They are specialists in the wholesaling of football players, in distress sales, second-hand properties. Jim Plunkett had completed 1,000 passes in the NFL by then. He had thrown 100 touchdowns. His temperature was normal, vision 2020, he was as big as a linebacker. He could be backup to Ken Stabler and he and Stabler could keep the seat warm till they could break in some kid from Brigham Young.

The $100 quarterback chafed under the role. But he finally got to sit on the bench and get some clear idea of what the flow of a game was without some 270-pound end trying to stick a finger in his eye.

Plunkett discovered something else when he did get to play: You don't have to get rid of the ball in 1.1 seconds on the Raiders. John Unitas says a quarterback should unload the ball in 3.5 seconds after getting it. The Raiders frequently gave you 4 or more.

THE PLUNKETT story took on glass-slipper proportions after that. Stabler left, Dan Pastorini came in. Pastorini broke a leg and Jim Plunkett went to the Super Bowl, where he threw an 80-yard touchdown pass and two others. The Philadelphia Eagles were as easy in the Super Bowl as Ohio State had been in the Rose Bowl.

Has it all come back "Well, I don't throw the ball as long as I once did, nor with the same velocity," Plunkett said. "But I have a pretty clear idea where it's going. And why."

Would the script have been different if Joe Kapp had stayed and let him ease into the career?

"I don't know," sighed Jim Plunkett. "But I sure don't want to go through it all again to find out."

TED BATTLES

Defense keeps Four Horsemen from riding

Things were so bad, it looked like it was time to revive that old Four Horsemen paraphrase. No, not the one used by Grantland Rice when he described a Notre Dame win over Army..." outlined against a blue, gray November sky, the Four Horsemen rode again..." the words that gave the legendary backfield of Stuhldreher, Layden, Miller and Crowley lasting football immortality.

No, this one came many years later, back in the years when the Dallas Cowboys were struggling for respectability and the Cleveland Browns were repeatedly denying it to them.

IT WAS LATE in the game at the Cotton Bowl, back in the days when the much-trampled grass of the historic arena on the state fairgrounds was still real. Dallas had driven to a first down inside the Browns 10 and victory and acceptance weren't even a stone's throw away.

Don Meredith went back to pass. Everybody was covered and Don tried to strong arm it through a trio of defenders. Some claim it was actually 11 defenders. He should have wasted the pass out of reach of everyone except the guy in the 35th row.

Naturally, and predictably, it was intercepted. And Dallas again lost.

The next day, the story of a Dallas writer began, Sunday "the Four Horsemen rode again in the Cotton Bowl. They were War, Death, Pestilence and Meredith.."

It's something Don never forgot, or really forgave, even though he later led the Cowboys to the NFL championship game against Green Bay, another exciting finish overshadowed by a controversial offside and then interception that cost Dallas the title.

ANYWAY, SUNDAY was that kind of day for Danny White. White has been so good so often, it's forgivable, particularly since the Cowboys won. But in all honesty, Danny was terrible. I mean, he played like he was auditioning for the job as quarterback at Tampa Bay and failing.

Even when he did something right, like complete a pass to the two yard-line, he nullified it by running past the line of scrimmage before releasing the ball.

Then, a play later, with Dallas playing catchup, he committed another cardinal sin, the kind for which Meredith was crucified. He threw the ball directly, and with seeming premeditation, right into the arms of the defense.

Obviously, Danny's head wasn't in the game. For that matter, neither was Tom Landry's. If it had been, Landry would have pulled Danny and sent him into the dressing room to have the concussion x-rayed.

Things never got better offensively. In fact, it was the defense that eventually salvaged a 21-20 win against the New Orleans Saints, who were supposed to be an off-date without George Rogers.

THE BLOCKED field goal and safety rescued the Cowboys just in the nick of time, but the Saints really beat themselves. The play that made it all possible came with New Orleans leading 20-13. They'd just received another gift from the Dallas offense, the football on the Cowboy 20.

The Cowboys showed blitz and unaccountably Ken Stabler, the battle-season quarterback who normally is immune to any kind of pressure, saw snakes on the wall and pulled out from the center without the ball.

Instead of a series that would have led to the clinching field goal or touchdown for New Orleans, Dallas had the ball, which, on second thought, meant the Cowboys were still in desperate straits. Luckily, they found a way to get rid of it so the defense could do its thing.

Nelson knocks officials

DALLAS (AP) - North Texas State Coach Corky Nelson on Monday criticized the All-Southwest Conference crew officiating Saturday's football game with Texas, saying "They took the game away from both teams."

Nelson didn't blame the officials for NTSU's 26-6 loss to the No. 2 ranked Longhorns but blasted the 45 penalties called in the game.

"It was ridiculous, a fiasco, the officials were the center of attention," Nelson said. "The officials were too technical and too inconsistent."

NFL REPORT

Not-so-good ol' days back

By BRUCE LOWITT
AP Sports Writer

It's just like the good ol' days for the Tampa Bay Buccaneers — but now the laughter sticks in John McKay's throat.

These days are very much like the mid-1970s, when every Sunday was good for a guffaw or two, as opposed to a win or two.

Through all 14 games of their first season and the first 12 of their second, they were the National Football League's lovable losers. McKay was a veritable compendium of self-deprecation, and the forgiving fans of Tampa-St. Petersburg were willing to laugh along with his weekly helping of caustic humor.

He was the Casey Stengel of the NFL back then. Just as Casey had gone from the headiness of New York Yankees championships to the foolishness of the newborn New York Mets and had become their humorist-philosopher, so had McKay gone from the campus of four-time national champion Southern California to the absurdity of the Suncoast fun factory, there to deflect and absorb the jibes aimed at his cast of misfits.

"I remember when I first took a look at what I had to work with, I knew right away we weren't going to be competitive," McKay recalled, "so I said, 'The hell with it. I might as well relax and enjoy it.' "

He became the master of the one-liner those days. He could laugh about the mounting losses only because crying did no good.

When asked one day about the Buccaneers' execution, he replied: "I'm in favor of it."

When asked about their offense, he commented: "We couldn't score against a strong wind."

And even McKay had to smile when some fans seated near the 10-yard line unfurled a banner proclaiming: "The Buc stops here."

The '70s were, as long-time Tampa sports editor Tom McEwen said, "like the good ol' days — if you happen to think the depression was good."

Just as with the Mets, the Bucs' fortunes rose dramatically. They went from worst to first in 1979, into the playoffs that year and again in 1981. And, like the Mets, they have come full circle.

The depression is back, and no one is more depressed than McKay. Four games into the season, Tampa Bay remains winless, the team's poorest start since those first two humiliating years. They're laughable again — but no longer lovable. The fans stay away by the thousands.

And McKay no longer cracks the quip. Frustration, sometimes dissolving into anger or rage, is more prevalent.

"Mistakes are killing us," he said after they were beaten Sunday by Cincinnati, a previously winless team. "Idiotic plays! They almost bordered on the pathetic!"

Lee Roy Selmon, the Bucs' magnificent defensive end, has been through the bitter, the sweet and now the bitter again. He was Tampa Bay's first draft choice ever.

Unique Windshield offers repair service

Almost everyone who has ever owned an automobile has, at one time or another, had to worry about what to do with a cracked windshield. Many simply ignore the crack until it is impossible to live with, because a new windshield is most certainly not cheap. But this practice is very dangerous, as well as annoying. A crack in your windshield will eventually "run" across the windshield due to changing temperatures and other factors. But now there is a process which enables you to have your cracked windshield repaired without the expense of buying a new one. If you have a small crack or chip in your windshield, let Unique Windshield Repair take care of the problem before it is too late.

Unique Windshield can repair those small cracks or chips in your windshield without the expense of a new one. The process used at Unique Windshield Repair consists of injecting a liquid resin under pressure into the crack or chip and allowing it to harden. The result is that your nick will be about 90% cleared. Cracks cannot be cleared, but the hardened liquid will keep the crack from running across your windshield. After all, the crack is not too dangerous or annoying until it does begin to run.

Unique Windshield Repair offers this service at a price far, far below the price of a replacement windshield. The initial fee for the first crack or chip is only $25, plus $5 for every crack or chip thereafter. The process takes only a short time, and you have a windshield that is just as good as new for only a few dollars! And that's not the only advantage you have by using the services of Unique Windshield Repair.

Owner Bill Conner realizes that many of the Midland businessmen simply do not have the time to have necessary repairs made on their cars, and this includes windshield repair. So Bill offers mobile service on his windshield repairs! Some advance notice is required, and most mobile calls are made on Monday and Tuesday. Wednesday through Saturday, you may take your car in to Conner's Detail Center, at Midland Dr. and the north Hwy 80 service road. Unique Windshield Repair makes repairs from 9am to 5pm, Monday through Friday, and 9am until 12 noon on Saturday. If you would like to set up a mobile call, or if you have other questions about the services offered, call Bill Conner at 685-1967.

Your automobile is probably one of your most valuable investments, and you need to give it proper care in order to extend its life. If you have a crack or chip in your windshield, don't put it off until you have to spend lots of money on a new one, get it repaired! Unique Windshield Repair can repair your windshield and help protect your investment for a very reasonable price. Call Bill Conner today at 685-1967. You'll be glad you did.

Study questions gas production predictions

By VIC OSTROWIDZKI
Hearst Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON — A congressional study, disputing 20 separate forecasts made by oil companies, private institutions and government agencies, claimed Monday that current data is insufficient and too ambiguous to assess domestic natural gas production in the year 2000.

Insisting that the forecasts "reflect conventional wisdom or have been influenced by others," the Office of Technology Assessment (OTA) concluded that the "potential" of conventional gas production will likely range from as little as nine trillion cubic feet (TCF) to as much as 19 (TCF) per year by 2000.

A nonpartisan analytic arm of Congress, the OTA estimated the 1990 production to be anywhere from 13 to 20 trillion cubic feet (TCF) per year.

A striking feature of other forecasters is that 13 of 14 studies that project production in 2000 offer a relatively narrow range, falling within 11 to 15 trillion cubic feet per year.

"This high level of agreement for a production rate two decades in the future is made all the more unusual by the probability that there are substantive differences in the baseline assumptions used by the various forecasters," the OTA said.

IN FACT, the OTA said, "these forecasts are not all independent, original estimates."

"Substantial technical uncertainties prevent a reliable estimation of the likely natural gas production rates for later in this century," the OTA said.

OTA claimed that current proved reserves are likely to supply only a few trillion cubic feet a year of production by the year 2000 and all other domestic production will have to come from gas which has not yet been identified by drilling.

The OTA said its study "found no convincing basis for the argument that the states have been so intensively explored, and their geology has become so well understood, that a consensus can be reached about the size of the gas resources.

According to the OTA, plausible estimates for the remaining conventional natural gas in the states that is recoverable under present and easily foreseeable technological and economic conditions can range from 400 to 900 TCF.

THIS RANGE, the OTA said, varies from a level that would seriously constrain gas production by the year 2000 to a level that might allow production to continue at current levels for the remainder of the century.

Within the last 5 years, the general perception about the outlook for future U.S. gas supplies has moved from pessimism to considerable optimism.

The pessimism was based partly on short-term problems, such as periodic regional shortages, and partly on the declining finding rate for new gasfields and, since the late 1960s, the decline of proved reserves.

The new optimism is based on several factors, including the sudden surplus caused by declining gas demand coupled with new gas field discoveries which raised reserves to high levels and continuing optimistic estimates of new domestic resources by the U.S. Geological Survey and the industry-based Potential Gas Committee (PGS).

The latest Geological Survey estimate implies that about 770 TCF of gas remain as of Jan. 1983, while the PGS estimate implies an even more optimistic 910 TCF.

THE TWO ESTIMATES, which do not include gas that could be recovered with completely new technologies or substantially higher prices, both exceed the amount of gas that the U.S. has already produced during the entire history of its gas use.

As a result of these optimistic signs, much of the natural gas industry believes that gas demand has replaced supply as a critical issue, and some industry organizations are even claiming that supply from all sources could be sufficient to allow a substantial expansion of U.S. gas consumption in the next few decades.

Also, Congress is reexamining laws governing the natural gas industry, with an eye toward deregulating it but providing protections for consumers, significant incentives for producers and opening the marketplace to greater competition.

The surplus, estimated to be as high as two TCF per year has been caused by a combination of energy conservation, recession-induced reductions in industrial activity and industrial fuel-switching from gas to oil because of declining oil prices and increased gas prices.

But the OTA said it is "unclear" whether the recent surge in the rate of additions to proved gas reserves can be sustainable. For example, 1981 reserve additions were over 20 TCF compared to an average of about 10 for 1969 through 1977.

THE OTA CLAIMED that the key to projecting gas production potential to the year 2000 is the successful prediction of future discovery trends and of additions to proved reserves.

There has been speculation that the decline in finding giant fields — which require many years and discovery wells to develop fully — will lead to significant declines in field growth.

In its judgement, the OTA said, "it is not clear whether or not the recent high rates of additions to proved gas reserves are sustainable, even if drilling rates rebound to the levels achieved before the recent slump."

"It is not clear," the study said, "to what extent recent higher reported rates of new field discoveries are caused by an increased willingness of explorers to go after riskier prospects; the eploitation of a limited inventory of low-risk prospects identified by past exploration; an increase in the number of economically viable fields, caused by improved technology and higher prices, and recent changes in reserve reporting methods."

OTA said it projected a "plausible" range of future additions to gas reserves by trying to account for all uncertainties associated with discoveries, including past and recent trends.

IT CONCLUDED that by 1986, average levels of total reserve additions could range from seven to eight TCFs per year to 16 to 17 TCFs per year.

OTA said that in addition to domestic conventional gas production, America's consumers may have access to gas production from so-called unconventional sources, including tight sands, coal beds, gas in geopressurized aquifiers, and Devonian shales; pipeline imports from Alaska, Canada and Mexico, and synthetic natural gas from coal and biomass.

The U.S. currently imports about .9 TCF of gas per year, most of it from Canada.

Based on available studies, the OTA concluded, the expected import potential from Canada, Alaska and Mexico may range from one to 7.4 TCF in the year 2000, with Canada being the most certain large contributor.

OTA also projected synthetic natural gas from coal to range from 0 to 1.6 TCF per year by the year 2000.

Eastern Airlines facing bankruptcy

MIAMI (AP) — Eastern Airlines will be forced to either close down or file for protection under federal bankruptcy laws if its entire work force does not accept 15 percent wage cuts, Chairman Frank Borman said Monday.

A union official responded that "threats" by the airline would not solve its current labor problems.

In a videotaped message distributed Monday to the company's 37,500 employees, Borman said the Miami-based carrier's dim financial picture required drastic and immediate action.

"He told them we have three choices," said Richard McGraw, Eastern's senior vice prsident for corporate communications. "One is to shut the airline down, one is to file a Chapter 11 bankruptcy petition and try to operate like Continental Airlines, and the only really viable option is to approve a 15 percent wage cut."

On Saturday, financially troubled Continental Airlines announced the airline had filed for reorganization under protection of federal bankruptcy regulatons and temporarily suspended domestic flights after posting losses of $471.9 million since January 1979.

Eastern Airlines, which faces the possibility of a mid-October walkout by its 5,800 flight attendants, held a special board meeting last week to discuss cost-cutting proposals prompted by the summer's disappointing business.

Local 553 of the Transport Workers Union, which represents Eastern's flight attendants, had set a strike deadline of midnight Oct. 12, the end of a 30-day cooling off period after which workes are free to walk out.

Union President Patricia Fink said the airline would not succeed if management continued its present tactics.

"Threats cannot and will not solve the problems we have," she said early Tuesday. "The only way is if management and the union work together to reach a solution."

The carrier has suffered a $106 million loss in the first seven months of this year. Although traffic was up 5 percent in July and 3 percent in August it has remained inadequate.

Eastern sustained a net loss of $74.9 million in 1982 on operating revenues of $3.77 billion, and it blamed the recession and fare discounting.

In the videotape, Borman tells Eastern employees that to avoid Continental's fate, employees must agree to a 15 percent pay cut effective Nov. 1 and other concessions later.

Although Continental's wage cuts went as deep as 50 percent for some categories of personnel, McGraw said Eastern could surmount its financial problems with a 15 percent across-the-board cut.

"Fifteen percent is what we need to put the airline back on the road to profitability," McGraw said.

Ms. Fink said Borman was "trying to follow in the footsteps of Continental Airlines" by cutting wages and benefits during a time characterized by "weak financial conditions."

Marcum to head MGF

The board of directors of MGF Oil Corporation Monday announced the election of W. Phillip Marcum as president and chief executive officer replacing R.O. "Jack" Major, who resigned. Marcum was formerly executive vice president.

Major will continue as chairman of the board and plans to reduce his involvement in the day-to-day affairs of MGF to pursue personal opportunities.

Also, the board named Bobby W. Page executive vice president and chief financial officer.

Stock market loses

NEW YORK (AP) — Stock prices showed a broad loss today as traders cashed in profits from the market's recent gains.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, which rose 5.18 points Monday to a record closing high, fell back 8.94 to 1,251.83 by noontime today.

Losers outnumbered gainers by more than 2 to 1 among New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

Baldwin-United tumbled 1⅜ to 3⅛ in active trading. On Monday the company filed for protection under the federal bankruptcy law.

Other losers among the volume leaders included Merrill Lynch, down 2 at 35⅛; Boeing, off 1¾ at 41, and Schlumberger, down 1 at 55⅝.

The NYSE's composite index fell .69 to 97.70. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was off 1.42 at 235.25.

Volume on the Big Board totaled 34.33 million shares at noontime, against 40.93 million at the same point Monday.

Cities gets great Service at ClayDesta

ClayDesta salutes Cities Service, who today is celebrating the open house of their oil and gas exploration and production headquarters in Midland.

We're very proud that Cities selected to move in to ClayDesta Plaza.

Why? Because they know that nothing is better for a successful oil and gas business than being surrounded by other energetic, successful businesses. And ClayDesta Plaza has a business environment that reflects a positive attitude.

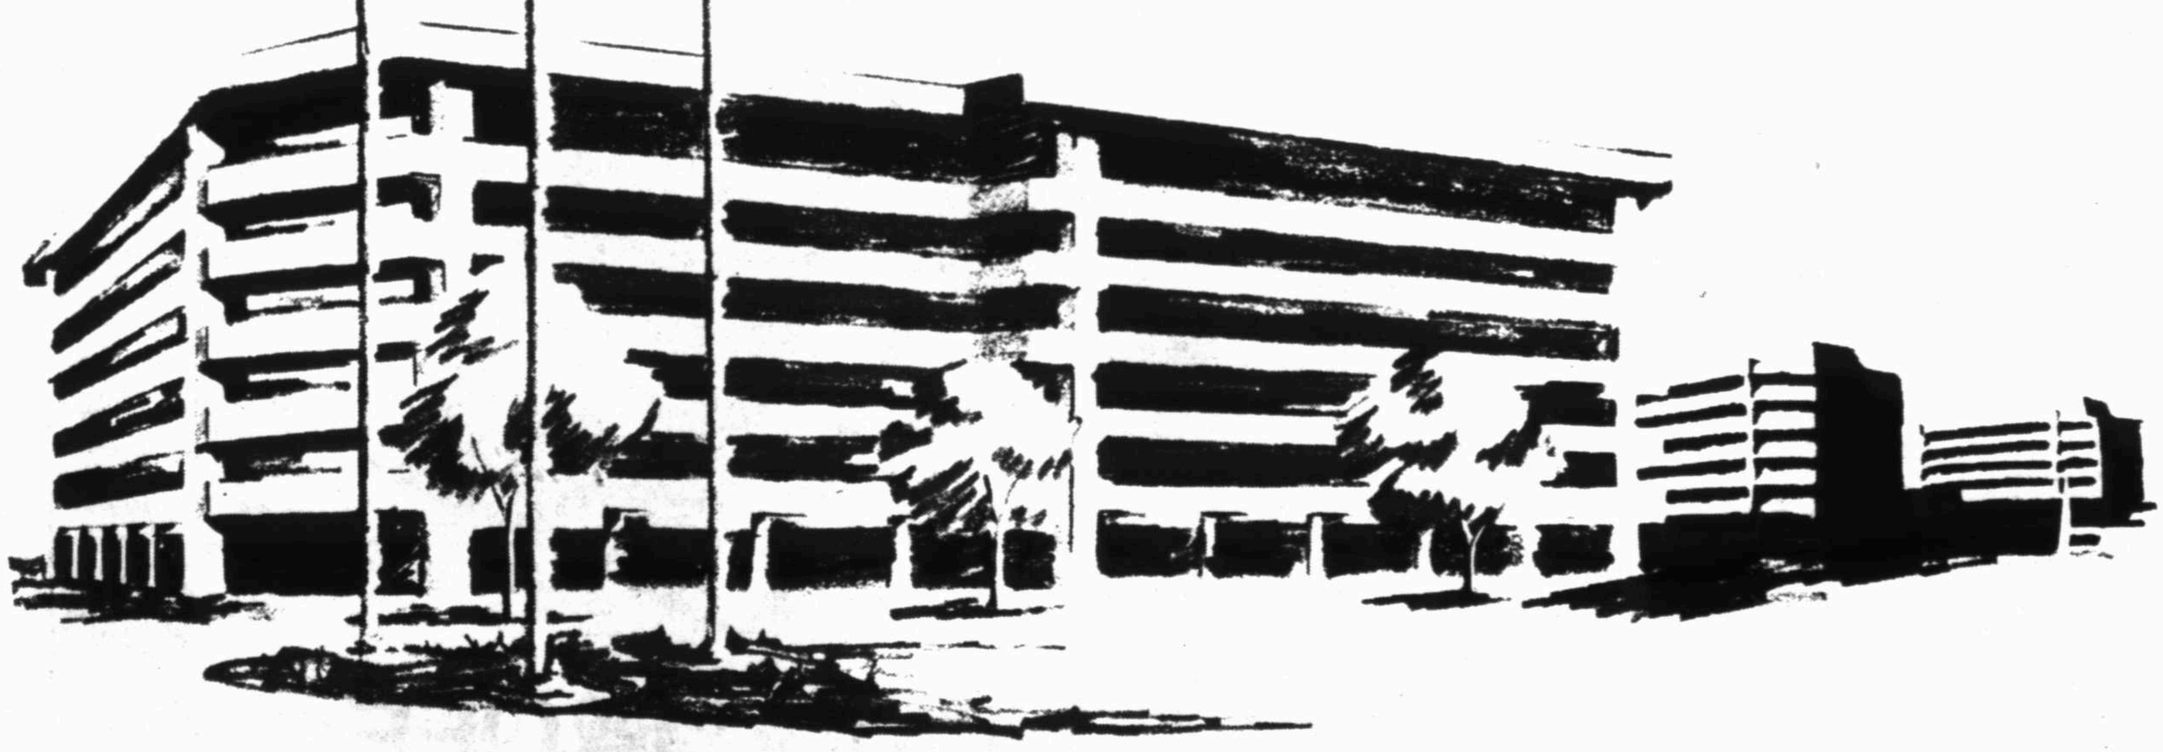

At ClayDesta, Cities Service is joined by more than 25 energy-related companies. Majors like Sohio, Southland Royalty, Sun and Gulf. And many other independent operators.

They all get much more than luxury office space. At ClayDesta Plaza there's lots of room. Plenty of free parking close to where you work. Beautiful landscaping. And Midland's only high-rise private business and social club, the Plaza Club. More amenities are planned, like more great restaurants, shopping, and a major hotel.

There's room for your company at ClayDesta. You can choose from space available in the ClayDesta National Bank Building or the ClayDesta Towers. Or we'll build to suit your needs. Either way, you'll be a part of West Texas' first totally planned business development. With the excitement that comes from working where good things are happening.

Even if you aren't looking for office space right now, give us a call. Bill Sandlin or Rexanna Heidelberg at 682-5379 will be happy to give you a tour.

And show you how to get the same service Cities gets.

ClayDesta PLAZA

Big Spring Street & Wadley Avenue (915) 682-5379

Exxon chief for decontrol

COLORADO SPRINGS (SWN) — Over time, the natural gas industry will more closely approach its maximum potential in energy markets in a less regulated environment, Randall Meyer, president of Exxon USA, told the Interstate Natural Gas Association of America today.

"We can't stay where we are now," Meyer emphasized. "The pressures created by the disorder inherent in our present situation would grow intolerably. An absolutely essential step, I am convinced, is to get behind decontrol as embodied in Senate Bill 1715 and to have it passed this year. The alternate to decontrol is chaotic disorder."

Meyer referred to the natural gas industry as "an industry in transition."

"To make sure that gas claims its rightful place in future U.S. energy markets, the industry must evolve a combination of physical facilities and contractual arrangements with provide for the appropriate sharing of risks and rewards while simultaneously insuring that the total delivery system from finding to distribution is as efficient as we know how to make it," he said.

Presence of younger Marcum at board meeting questioned

By HALLYE JORDAN
Staff Writer

The encroachment of a councilman in a battle of beds between the two Midland hospitals did not reflect the position of the city council, according to Mayor G. Thane Akins.

However, City Councilman Gordon Marcum II's presence in an executive session of the Midland Memorial Hospital Board of Directors meeting has raised some questions about whose position he was representing.

Marcum, who sat in during a special meeting Sept. 9, said he was representing the five-member City of Midland Health Facilities Corporation, of which he is president. The group, which serves in a similar function as other sub-committees, focuses on quality health care in the community, Marcum said.

"The only thing I was asking them to do was to allow them (Parkview Hospital) to replace their present facility," Marcum said Monday. Parkview's present facility is "rundown," he said, and "we feel we ought to have two quality health facilities" in the community.

A certificate of need (CON) application was filed by Parkview owners, American Medical Centers, to replace the 60-bed facility with a new hospital. The hospital would be named Doctor's Hospital of the Permian Basin, to be built on the corner of Loop 250 and Preston Drive.

The land is owned by Marcum's father, Gordon Marcum Sr.

Parkview's first CON for a $17.5 million, 110-bed replacement facility was submitted to the Texas Health Facilities Commission (THFC) in November 1982.

At that time, MMH submitted a CON application for a $15 million, 77-bed expansion. Last March, the THFC approved MMH's application but denied Parkview's.

A second CON, requesting a $17 million, 100-bed facility, was filed by Parkview last July 1. A hearing is scheduled for Oct. 11, in Austin.

The special MMH director's meeting that Marcum II attended was called to determine whether MMH should file to oppose Parkview. Following the executive session, directors voted to file as a party to the request — meaning they may cross-examine, testify and question the need for the additional beds beyond the present 60.

While MMH officials agree a replacement facility is needed, evidence given during the meeting by their auditors and management consultants indicated Midland would have a surplus of beds if MMH's approved 77-bed expansion and Parkview's requested 100-bed facility were constructed.

Since then, however, an amendment to Parkview's request has been received, according to Carol Daniels of the THFC. Although it has not yet been reviewed, Ms. Daniels said Monday the amendment contained "minor-type changes," and that "it looks like it's going to be 75 (bed facility)."

"You'll be receiving a press release on that in the morning," Parkview administrator Dick Liley said Monday, when questioned about the reduction in beds.

When asked from whom Parkview was purchasing the land for the new facility, Liley said: "My dealings have been with HBF Corporation. I'm sure they're acting as an agent for someone but I don't know who for."

Liley said HBF President Larry Bell was negotiating the deal, which involves about 10 acres. HBF also would serve as the general contractors for the project, he said.

Bell, contacted Monday night, said he was serving as the "agent" for Marcum Sr. and Parkview but said no official notice had been made about the corporation doing the general contracting.

Courageous canine indeed a hero

By HALLYE JORDAN
Staff Writer

A new resident of Midland not only has been featured on cable television, in two magazines and both Associated Press and United Press International stories; he also has a chance to make a personal visit to the White House, along with his family.

Arf, a 2-year-old Chesapeake Bay retriever, is one of eight finalists for the Ken-L Ration Dog Hero of the Year Award — and judging from letters and phone calls received from around the country, he deserves it.

He and his young master Eric Sparks Jr., 3, may not think about the near death they both encountered almost a year ago as Arf takes his daily swims at Wadley-Barron Park or the two engage in their favorite game of cowboys and Indians. But the story is etched in the hearts of many dog lovers forever.

AT THE TOP of the list are young Eric's parents, Oksana and Eric Sparks, of 3101 Auburn.

Last Oct. 26, Arf protected Eric Jr., then 2½, from the bite of a deadly coral snake — and almost died for it.

The courageous canine not only became a hero, he also has become a milestone in medical history.

It took 26 vials of antitoxin, the support of four Houston-area hospitals, a determined veterinarian who refused to let the dog die, the help of police departments and paramedics who rushed the life-saving serums to the animal clinic and the love of his family to pull Arf to recovery after 45 days.

Eric Jr. and his grandmother were walking along the front of their five-acre home in Fulshear, outside Houston, when Arf, trotting alongside them, apparently spotted the deadly 28½-inch snake.

Oksana, watching from the house, saw Arf acting in the agitated state he always did when he detected one of the numerous snakes that swarm in the bottomland off the Brazos River.

"The way he acts," Oksana remembered, "he jumps up and down like a cat. What he's done in the past is he would hold the snakes at bay for us. He's smart — he doesn't get close. The only reason he got nailed was to save the kid.

"My assumption is Eric wanted to see it," she said. "The coral snakes are really very pretty."

WHEN ERIC REFUSED to respond to the dog's nudgings, Arf apparently positioned himself in front of the child.

Eric's grandmother pulled Eric away as Oksana, rifle in hand, came running at them.

After the snake was shot, Arf fell to the ground, Oksana said. Her husband was driving in at the time and yelled at Arf to get up.

"He got up and he wasn't walking very well," said Eric, who moved to Midland six months ago and is an attorney with William B. Wilson. "I knew he'd been bitten. It's a terrible feeling — I thought that was it."

"The first thing Eric said was 'Snake bite Arf nose,'" Oksana said.

She examined the dog and couldn't find any bites.

"With a coral bite, there is no swelling and no pain at the point of bite, plus the little puncture marks close up quickly," she said.

She looked again and spotted the tell-tale horseshoe marks already closing in.

Okasana said the dog was treated with a snake bite kit to freeze the wound, a call was made to the Brookshire Small Animal Clinic and the dog was rushed into the care of Dr. Ginanna Crouch.

Coral snake bites are extremely rare, Oksana said, and the antitoxin was difficult to locate.

A PARAMEDIC who was visiting Dr. Crouch at the time, helped keep Arf alive with fluids, oxygen and barbituates.

About 3:40 a.m., some nine hours after the dog was bitten, the first vial of antivenin was administered. At noon, 15 vials had been injected into the dog.

Dr. Crouch contacted Indiana University, where a doctor told her if there was no response, the serum probably wouldn't work.

At nine that evening, Dr. Crouch emptied the last five vials and dripped it into the dog over a two-hour period.

New rape laws make prosecutors' jobs easier, Martin says

By PATRICK DEAREN
Staff Writer

A tougher, better-defined set of laws encompassing rape and other sexual assaults which went into effect Sept. 1 in Texas should result in more defendants pleading out, District Attorney Vern Martin told members of Midland Inter-Agency Council Against Sexual Assault Monday night.

"In a way, it's the toughest rape law I've seen," said Martin, who added that the new legislation still must be tested before juries. "I think it will make our job a lot easier. It really helps the state overcome a lot of the old biases."

The 1983 Texas Legislature redefined and clarified sexual and aggravated sexual assaults in the first major overhaul of the statutes since January 1974. In doing so, said Assistant District Attorney Bill Cooper, the state blotted all gender references from the law and eschewed the term "intercourse" in favor of "penetration" and other definitions.

"Penetration means the slightest penetration, no matter how slight," explained Martin. "And there's a reason they wrote it that way — with just slight penetration venereal disease or pregnancy is possible...But we must overcome a lot of people's pre-conceived notion that it's not rape unless there's been 'intercourse.'"

Cooper told the organization that the new laws make it clear legislators understood that "rape is not a crime of passion, it's not a crime of lust, it's a crime of violence."

In repealing sections 2102-2110 and 2121 of the Texas Penal Code, legislators grouped rape of a person and rape of a child 14-16 under "sexual assault" — a second degree felony carrying with it a sentence of 2-20 years — and aggravated rape and rape of a child under 14 under

Ford to speak at banquet

About 700 persons are expected to attend the annual Midland Chamber of Commerce banquet Oct. 4 which will feature President Gerald Ford as speaker.

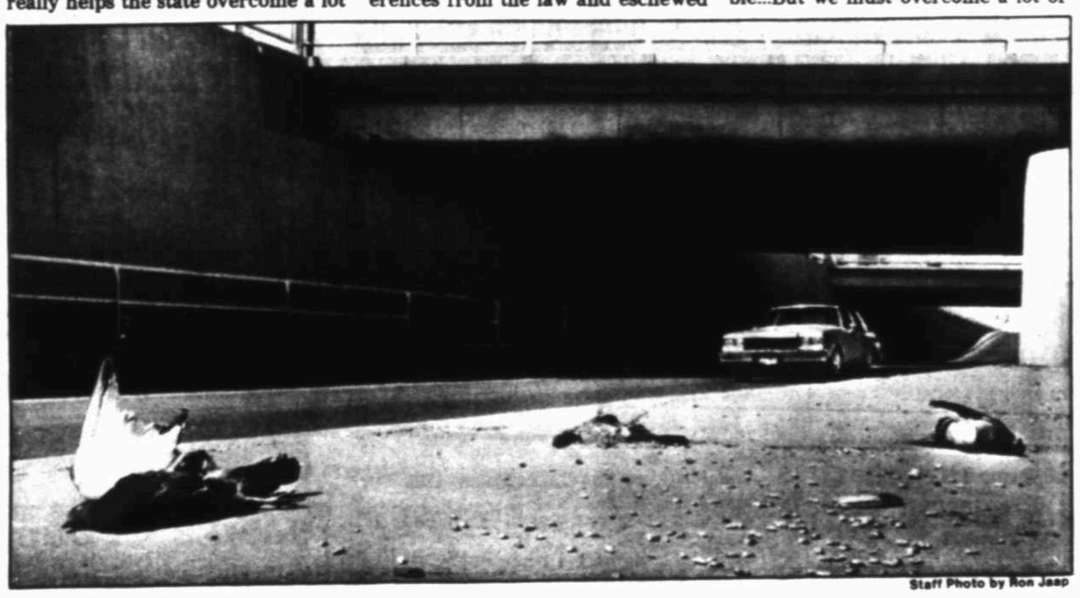

Tickets, at $30 each, are on sale for the event, according to a chamber spokesman. For ticket information call the chamber office, 683-3381.

A reception, open to all chamber members, will begin at 6:30 p.m. in the lower level of Midland Center. The dinner will start at 7:30 p.m., followed by Ford's address.

The program will include installation of new chamber officers and recognition of the outgoing directors. The chamber's 1982-83 annual report and the 1983-84 program of work will be presented.

Ford was elected to the U.S. House of Representatives in 1948 and re-elected every two years through 1972, serving 25 years in the House.

One of several dead pigeons found under the South Big Spring Street railroad overpass is being tested to determine what killed it. While the city says it has been putting out corn to lure the birds away from the downtown area a block or so away, health department Director Don Goodrum insists the corn is not poisoned.

Pigeon found dead will undergo autopsy

By RICHARD ORR
Staff Writer

An autopsy is to be performed on one of several pigeons found dead under the railroad overpass on Big Spring Street, a block or so south of the downtown area.

In addition, whole kernel corn that had been spread along the median between the columns of the viaduct will be tested for the presence of poison.

"If it turns out to be arsenic or strychnine, I'd say it's a case of deliberate poisoning," said veterinarian Dr. Steve Betton, noting that Midland is a desiganted bird sanctuary. "The indiscriminate use of arsenic or strychnine is a no-no.

"Dogs and other animals will eat corn, and birds like cardinals, bluebirds and mockingbirds (the state bird of Texas) will also go after it."

Although the city has been putting corn under the overpass for the past two weeks, health department Chief Sanitarian Don Goodrum maintains it is not laced with poison.

Instead, the corn is being used as bait to lure pigeons away from the downtown area, Goodrum said.

"I know what's goin' on down there," he added. "We've got a big pigeon problem in downtown Midland. The pigeon population has got to be thinned down. We're gonna poison some pigeons, but we're not gonna poison 'em there (the overpass)."

The problem is especially apparent at the First National Bank building and the Yucca Theatre, where Goodrum said the city will concentrate its efforts to reduce the pigeon population.

RHONDA RIGENHAGEN

Ecstasy of owning a car soon turns to agony

A little more than a year ago I became the proud owner of my first real-live-very-own vehicle. I can't begin to describe the ecstasy I felt when I signed my first year's wages and my firstborn child over to the bank.

All I could think about was how nice it would be not to have to ride the bus anymore. I mean, think of it. Going from point A to point B any time of the day or night without dragging out a map, looking up the schedules, deciding the shortest route, figuring which bus I needed to catch, walking three blocks to the bus stop and waiting 20 minutes in three feet of snow and -40 degree wind chill factor, climbing aboard and trying to find a seat that's not next to a weirdo, jolting along miles out of the way and stopping every two blocks to pick up other unfortunates.

I had finally achieved the great American dream. The possibilities awed me.

Since that day, so many lifetimes ago, my vehicle has never failed to spend at least a few days of each month being worked on, and I've paid nearly as much in repairs as in payments. If it's not a new radiator, it's shocks or tires or a left rear spring or the air conditioner or an alternator or a battery or the front end.

Otherwise it's little things like all the knobs falling off or the window not rolling up all the way or the windshield washer not working or the oil or a tuneup or a belt or a hose or a filter or an alignment or antifreeze or wires or...how many pieces can one little car have? I think I've replaced them all. Technically, my little Nova is probably a 1983 model.

It's bad enough when there is something definitely wrong with it. But what really galls me is taking it in for a simple tune-up, having the mechanics do $250 worth of work — half of which I didn't authorize, being intimidated into wordlessly paying the bill, and then finding out it runs rougher than ever.

It's probably my own fault. I should have paid more attention to the engines instead of the mechanics when I used to spend summers as a teenager hanging around gas stations. (Hey, in a town of 835 you find amusement where you can.)

The first few months of ownership were the worst. Everytime I heard a strange rattle I would panic, run to a repair shop and spend $50 on an "automotive analysis," only to be told the rattle was caused by the change I threw in the ashtray. Perhaps I overreact, but like most people I fear the unknown. When I detect a hissing sound I have never noticed before I expect the car to self-destruct.

Maybe I could learn more about how a car works if the mechanics weren't such smart-alecks. When I had a blow-out and passed a place advertising "We fix flats" I took them at their word.

I pulled up, opened the trunk and pulled out the tire rim which had a few remaining strands of a steel-belted radial still attached. Collecting all the strips of rubber I could find I very politely asked them to fix it. They're probably still rolling on the floor.

I've come a long way from those early days. I can now pump my own gas, check the oil (even though I haven't quite figured out what I'm checking it for), use that little thermometer thing to check the air pressure in my tires and look helpless when I get a flat.

Very often I've thought of chucking the whole thing and investing in a moped, 10-speed, horse or dog-sled team. But then I think about the tough times Chrysler is having, all the unemployed steel workers and laid off auto workers (not to mention the hard-hit oil industry) and realize my contribution to a healthy economy is spending one-third of my paycheck to subsidize those who are less fortunate than I (you know — the ones who make $30 an hour to put together a car that barely outlives its warranty.)

But one of these days people like me are going to stop being so generous and noble and come up with a failproof invention. Something the average person can afford. Something that runs without fuel and repairs. Something that doesn't endanger the lives of others when operated carelessly. Something that lasts a lifetime. Something like...feet.

Police investigate theft of vehicle from lot

Police are investigating the theft and subsequent arson of a 1977 Chevrolet Bronco stolen early this morning from Village Lincoln Mercury at 3915 W. Wall.

The Bronco was found on fire at a caliche pit near Cole Park about 5 a.m. Some 40 minutes later, police were notified the dealership had been broken into and discovered that the vehicle had been taken from the lot.

Sunday night, the windows of several vehicles at the dealership were broken and some body damage was reported.

Police responding to a call at the post office annex in the 2300 block of West Louisiana Avenue about 2:15 a.m. today found a stamp vending machine lying on the lobby floor, its audible alarm sounding.

Police Roundup

Nothing had been taken from the machine, but attempts were made to pry it open with a screwdriver and $200 in damage was reported.

In a burglary complaint, Arthur Childers of 4103 Raleigh Court said $5,100 worth of jewelry and $100 in cash were taken in a break-in at his residence sometime in the past four days.

And James Dunn of 3609 Caldera told officers that two movie projectors, a china tea set, silverware and assorted other items were taken in the burglary of his storage unit at Economy Storage, Loop 250 and Holiday Hill Road, sometime in the past three days.

Marcum II's presence at meeting questioned

"At this point, HBF Corporation is the broker for that particular piece of land. We've talked about it, and said we sure would like to do the work, but that's it," Bell said.

Marcum Sr., who said he bought the land in 1970, said "the original option was done over a year ago and HBF has the contract."

When asked if the price of the 9.69 acres of land was $2 million, Marcum replied: "I don't have any idea — Lord, no, I don't know what they're doing. I've turned it all over to Larry Bell."

Bell, who said he was figuring it in his head, said $2 million "sounds a little high."

"If the principles involved in the transaction want to disclose it, that's fine," Bell said. "But I'm really not at liberty to disclose the terms of the option."

When Liley was asked about the younger Marcum's request to MMH directors not to fight Parkview's CON and if it were true that Parkview's attorney Ace Pickens knew what went on in the executive session the next day, Liley said: "I know nothing about that."

Pickens, who lives in Austin, could not be reached for comment Monday night.

According to Ray Branson, MMH president, persons are allowed to attend executive sessions if they are invited. They also are held responsible for maintaining the confidentiality of the session. The younger Marcum said he was not required to register to address the board during executive session.

"As I understand it, he (Marcum II) was a member of that committee (the City of Midland Health Facilities Corporation) but I didn't get the opinion he was representing that committee," Branson said, explaining he thought Marcum was present as a concerned citizen.

The mayor, who said councilmen are encouraged to serve on subcommittees, added Marcum's request and the involvement of his father's land could be perceived as a conflict of interest.

"I guess that perception could be there," Akins said. "It's news to me.

"Maybe we appoint those people (city councilmen) to that committee. But unless the council meets on it and assumes a position, he would be acting on his own," Akins said.

"He may be reflecting simply the majority of the board (the City of Midland Health Facilities Corporation)," Akins said. "But if it were just Gordon in it himself, there would be some question.

"We expect any member we appoint to act on their own good accordance, regardless of the city council's position. We don't intend for them to be 'yes-men,'" he said, explaining he encourages independent thinking on the council.

According to Marcum II, his appearance at the executive session was not a conflict of interest.

"If MMH had voted to oppose it (Parkview's request), I wasn't going to say anything else," the younger Marcum said, adding then it would have been a conflict of interest.

When asked if he felt his son had taken improper action, Marcum Sr., who attended the special meeting as a concerned citizen but did not sit in on the executive session, replied: "Well, no, I don't because he has no interest in it. I bought this property."

According to Marcum, he had no knowledge of what his son told the directors: "As far as Gordon is concerned, he doesn't tell his father anything."

The veterinarian's hospital record of Arf reads of one crisis after another for 11 pages. At intervals ranging from two minutes to, later in the text, 24-hours, his progress was registered. Through the hyperventilation, tremors, loss of reflex and total incoordination to the heart block, Arf was watched. He also was monitored for signs of serum sickness — which also could kill the dog.

At 5:30 p.m. Nov. 9, the entry reads "Arf was released from clinic." He returned to Dr. Crouch Nov. 10.

"Each entry represents a crisis," Oksana said. "It was crisis, crisis, crisis the whole time. The dog was dying from one second to the next."

On Nov. 18, Arf showed signs of serum sickness. According to Oksana, the antivenin can destroy the brain, kidney, lungs and heart. The least damage to a dog with serum sickness would be sterility.

ON DEC. 10, Arf was home, with no heart block and the last of his entries made in the clinic's records. He isn't sterile either — the family plans to add a female Chesapeake Bay retriever to the clan this December.

While the phone calls that came in at 5 a.m. from across the nation asking about Arf's progress have ended, the story which embedded itself in the hearts of well-wishers and dog-devotees has not.

An unsigned letter received last November from a Salinas, Calif., resident was addressed to Arf the Wonder Dog, c/o his Vet, Brookshire, Texas 77423. It read: "Dear Sirs: We must reward courage in whatever form. Please buy Arf and his friends a pound of ground sirloin for me." Enclosed were a few dollars.

The message is echoed by Ken-L Ration, which sponsors the Dog Hero of the Year Award. Arf, as the lone Texas candidate, and the seven other nominees will be voted on by readers of DogWorld magazine. Announcement of the winner will be published in the December issue, and the trip to Washington, D.C., to meet the president, will follow in February.

"I supported Reagan," Eric Sr., said, grinning. "But I've got a friend who is a staunch Democrat. He called me up and said 'You damn Republicans, you'd do anything to get together.'"

But thanks to the support of one veterinarian and numerous others who willed the dog to live, Eric Jr. and Arf can also stay together.

Odessan remains jailed for robbery

ODESSA — A 22-year-old Odessa man remained jailed in connection with the strong-arm robbery of a woman at a store in the 600 block of South Grant Street about 2:30 p.m. Monday.

Municipal Court Judge Otis Moore this morning set $10,000 bond on Sylvester Robinson of 605 Washington Lane.

He is charged with stealing $300 from the purse of a South Lincoln Street woman who told police a man grabbed the purse after she had placed it on a counter at the store.

Arriving officers said they tracked footprints that led them to an address on Ada Street, where they obtained the suspect's name and address after learning he was no longer at the Ada Street address.

Robinson was arrested two hours later after being spotted walking in an alley. Police said the woman suffered minor injuries after grappling with the robber. About $165 of the money was recovered.

Pigeon found dead will undergo autopsy

"The numbers are just staggering," he noted. "What you have to do is bait 'em to get 'em comin' around. Then you introduce strycnine-laced corn to 'em."

Poisoned bait should be used only where other animals can't get to it, and also where human beings cannot come in contact with it. Youngsters walking under the viaduct could conceivably pick up the corn and put it in their mouths.

"Assuming the corn is poisoned," Goodrum said, "I don't know who put it down there. The city's not doing it."

To protect the public, only state-certified applicators are allowed to purchase or use poisoned bait. But there seems to be no law spelling out how or where the bait should be employed, according to Goodrum:

"I don't know that it's written down, but when we do our pigeon elimination program, of course, we put the bait on top of these tall buildings where there's no access for people to get up there. That's what we shoot for."

Goodrum specualted that perhaps the dead birds had been shot or hit by cars. But they showed no apparent sign of external injury. The rectal area of the bird that will be tested for poison, however, did appear to be ruptured.

A rupture of that nature would be consistent with certain types of poison, according to Dr. Betton.

If the corn samples taken from the overpass test positive for the presence of poison, Animal Control Director Dalton Byerly said:

"I don't think it should be put out like that. I was called out there last week and have had several calls from individuals and the Humane Society. I have no idea who's doing it. I have tried to find out and have been very unsuccessful."

State officials have also expressed an interest in the matter.

"It may be possible to send an inspector out to investigate," said Ken Kadlec, director of the environmental science division of the state health department in Austin. "An applicator's license presumes training in how to apply poison."

Results of the autopsy and poison testing are expected in the next week or so.

Martin: Rape laws make prosecutors' jobs easier

"aggravated sexual assault." The latter, a first degree felony, carries with it a sentence of 5-99 years or life imprisonment.

"A lot of the things that used to be defensive (i.e., how violently did the victim resist) now have become factors in deciding punishment, the way I read it," noted Martin. "Changing the name and grouping the raping of a child with other sexual assaults is going to take a lot of confusion away in the mind of the public in seeing what's happening in some of these cases."

The new Texas penal code now makes it a second degree felony, sexual assault if a person intentionally or knowingly:

— "Causes the penetration of the anus or vagina of another person who is not the spouse of the actor by any means, without that person's consent."

Cooper noted that the phrase "by any means" would encompass insertion of not just a sexual organ but a foreign object as well.

— "Causes the penetration of the mouth of another person who is not the spouse of the actor by the sexual organ of the actor, without that person's consent."

— "Causes the sexual organ of another person who is not the spouse of the actor, without that person's consent, to contact or penetrate the mouth, anus, or sexual organ of another person, including the actor."

— "Causes the penetration of the anus or vagina of a child by any means."

— "Causes the penetration of the mouth of a child by the sexual organ of the actor."

— "Causes the sexual organ of a child to contact or penetrate the mouth, anus, or sexual organ of another person, including the actor."

The new law notes that the "consent of the other person" is not given if physical force or violence or the threat of such is used; if the victim is unconscious or physically unable to resist; if the actor is aware the other person is incapable of appraising the nature of the act or resisting it due to mental disease or defect;

If the person is unaware the sexual assault is occurring; if the person is led to believe the actor is his or her spouse; if the person's mental judgment has been impaired by the administering of a substance; or if the actor threatens force or violence against a third party.

"The idea of threatening a third person is not in the old rape law," said Cooper in hailing the new legislation.

Legislators defined "child" as a person younger than 17 years of age who is not the spouse of the actor, and "spouse" as a person legally married to another except when they do not reside together or there is an action pending between them for dissolution of the marriage.

The penal code does provide defense against prosecution if:

— A child 14 or older has a promiscuous background.

— The conduct consisted of medical care for the child, such as the administering of an enema.

— The actor was not more than two years older than the victim.

"Aggravated sexual assault" is defined under the new law as having occurred if:

— "The person causes serious bodily injury or attempts to cause the death of the victim or another person in the course of the same criminal episode."

— "...The person places the victim in fear that death, serious bodily injury or kidnapping will be imminently inflicted on any person."

— "The person uses or exhibits a deadly weapon in the course of the same criminal episode."

— "The victim is younger than 14 years of age."

The statute of limitations on sexual assault and aggravated sexual assault was extended to five years — two years longer than that provided for under the old rape law, said Cooper.

'Go West' advice in editorial

The advice, "Go west, young man," was in a New York Tribune editorial July 13, 1865, in which Horace Greeley told federal civil servants complaining about high living costs and low salaries in the capital:

"Washington is not a place to live in. The rents are high, the food is bad, the dust is disgusting and the morals are deplorable. Go West, young man, go West." Many took his advice.

Fall fashions shine at ladies club show

By DIANE BOOTH
Lifestyle Writer

Midland Ladies Country Club Association was treated to a fall fashion show on the first day of autumn at Midland Country Club.

The show, "Broadway Holiday," featured New York designer Cleopatra Broumand, who showed off her a.m.-p.m. "energy concept" collection, Robbie Casey's fall line and jewel fashions by Lee Majors.

Cleopatra's designs are built around four ancient motifs, a sun mask, lady sun, starburst and an abstract of unfolding fans.

In her fall collection, the designs are woven into jacquard knits, printed on silk jacquard and challis, beaded on tulle and appliqued in paillettes on panne velvet.

Whether for daytime or evening, the designer said all her clothes are "feminine, elegant and dressy."

The energy concept is achieved through the use of natural fibers, she said. "The energy I put in my clothes revitalizes the energy in the people who are wearing them."

The designer has incorporated sweater-dressing into many of her designs for both day and evening wear. Quilted jackets in the soft, rounded cocoon look and the straight architectural 3/4 length are coverups for both daytime and evening garments. Flowing capes, loose cotton/silk knit dresses and blouses and the liberal use of sequins for sunshine and sundown predominate the Cleopatra line.

Robbie Casey's fall designs rounded out the high-energy fashion show.

Sweater dressing by designers such as Vesna Bricelj and Krizia were modeled along with suits by Louis Feraud and Ernst Strauss, sportswear by Anne Klein, Adagio and Christian Dior, dresses by Guy LaRoche, Sidney Calvin Milliken and Robbie Casey's Private Label and evening wear by St. Martin and Paris Workshop to name a few.

Femininity is the key to fashions this fall, said Robbie Casey. "We want to be able to make heads turn."

Women should feel beautiful and elegant at all times, she said, whether the clothes are casual or formal.

Although sweater-dressing dominates this year's fashion look, Mrs. Casey said this season the "city look" is big for suits and coats.

Accessories are more important than ever this season, she said. "They put a total look together. It's fun to be able to take beauty and improve it."

Fashions were accessorized with hats by Frank Olive, gloves by La Crasia, belts by Alexis Kirk, shoes by Pancaldi and jewelry by Lee Majors.

Jewel tones, jewel colors and black onyx are the vogue, Majors said. Pink, blue and yellow are combined, especially in necklaces, the season's most important fashion accessory, he added.

Fashion editors name Lauren for top award

Copley News Service

Ralph Lauren

By KAY JORDAN
Copley News Service

Ralph Lauren has been awarded the 1983 Career Achievement honors in the menswear "Oscars," the annual Cutty Sark Men's Fashion Awards, for his outstanding leadership and continuing contributions to the men's fashion industry.

Winning the Cutty Sark silver trophy represents perhaps Lauren's finest menswear achievement to date since this is the only awards program devoted exclusively to men's fashion and voted by the nation's fashion editors.

What's behind Lauren's success?

His designing credo he says, is "fashion as a function of lifestyle." He believes in clothes that are natural to the way people really live today and that also don't go out of style tomorrow.

A purist who uses only natural fabrics, Lauren avoids gimmicks. "The popular philosophy of fashion as fantasy I prefer to leave to others," he says. "I concentrate on evolving and perfecting the classics. Three factors — quality, simplicity and longevity — determine my lines."

Another Lauren plus is his consistency of style. He terms it "anti-style, an untrendy, unpackaged, individual look." The Lauren style can be as easy and nonchalant as mixing a pair of comfortable, well-worn jeans with a white shirt and colorful cotton sweater.

At a fall fashion preview, Lauren introduced his "ski look" for this fall and winter season. It draws its inspiration from the Sun Valley theme of the 1930s and the looks of Gary Cooper, Ernest Hemingway and Douglas Fairbanks, among others. It includes hand-knit ski sweaters with scenes on the front, coyote-trimmed arctic jackets, scarves tied around the neck and tweed pants.

Establishing his Polo menswear line in 1968, Lauren began designing understated clothes for men of discreet elegance who wanted classic looks with style. Using only the best fabrications, his suits blended the American Ivy League natural shoulder silhouette with the fitted shapes of the best European custom clothing. His shirts were all-cotton, richly patterned and expertly made. And his Polo ties — wide, expensive and handmade — soon became a status symbol.

Today the Lauren menswear empire includes robes, swimwear, hosiery and shoes, as well as international licensees. His Chaps line — designed for the younger man who wants an American traditional look at a less-expensive price — includes tailored clothing, shirts, sportswear and ties. The newest Lauren line, Polo University, features suits and sports coats for the prep school and college-age young man.

His new Cutty Sark trophy joins such other prestigious honors as two Coty Awards.

Feet need good shoes

Copley News Service

Back to school means new shoes. Kids want good-looking, stylish shoes and parents want sensible shoes.

Ill-fitting and improper shoes can cause children's tender feet to develop defects that are difficult or impossible to correct.

Formerly, the only alternative for conscientious parents was unattractive "sensible" shoes — lace-up oxfords and, for toddlers, ankle boots. This footgear has, over the years, met with a chorus of objections from sneaker-happy children.

Now, according to the experts at the Italian Shoe Center in New York City, there's a new alternative — shoes for children that are both orthopedically sound and flattering to the feet.

When shopping for your children's shoes, here are some tips from the experts at the Italian Shoe Center:

— The shoe should be all leather. There should be no cardboard or synthetics in any part of the inner construction. This helps the foot to breathe and move freely, whether static or functioning. Since the life of wear of the shoe depends, in part, on the insole, no shortcuts can be taken in its construction and application.

— The lining should be soft, for comfort. The best materials are soft kid and nappa (or calf). It should be made in one piece without seams and cover the toes to absorb moisture and prevent friction.

— The best-quality leather, properly tanned, should be used to make sure the shoe keeps its shape and is durable. Leather should be flexible yet resilient to the touch; soft and yet firm.

— Strong counters to give stiffness at the heel are important as the heel bone is the last bone in the foot to develop.

— Sewing thread should be strong, stitching close and even. Nylon thread may be used at stress points while other parts should be stitched with cotton or flax.

Thanks to modern innovations in footwear, young people can coordinate their up-to-date clothing with their shoes and still allow their feet all the support needed for their growing years.

AT WIT'S END

Reunion season hits

By ERMA BOMBECK

You can always tell when the high school and college reunion season hits us.

The streets swell with joggers. There are waiting lines around the gym. And you can't find a piece of lettuce in the entire town.

Everyone wants to go back to their old school looking like they're 12 years old. Everyone wants to be the one who fulfilled the class prophecy. It's deja vu with hairpiece, dentures and stretch marks.

Some classmates never return to the school that unleashed them into society armed only with a talent for diagramming a sentence and three Spanish verbs. They have no curiosity as to how everyone turned out.

Others are staples at every graduation and wouldn't miss it for the world. Who are they?

INSURANCE SALESMEN. One class reunion is worth 500 call-backs. Show them a picture of your family and from somewhere they pull out an artist's brush and take Daddy out of the picture, leaving you with no income and a $130,000 mortgage. They really know how to make a party fun.

THE CHEERLEADER WHOSE BUST MEASUREMENT EXCEEDED HER I.Q. BY 35. She has the only chest that can accommodate two name tags. If Sandra Day O'Connor appeared in her black robe she'd say, "How many children do you have now and where are you living? You must have been color-draped. You look fantastic in black."

EVERYONE WHO IS PREGNANT. They show up in the early reunions and why shouldn't they? They have nothing to lose. Literally.

TALL PEOPLE WHO USED TO BE SHORT. At my reunion I met a boy who had grown six inches since high school graduation and turned out to be a hunk. I told his wife (an outsider) it wasn't fair. We put up with him when he was short. He could have at least told us of his plans to grow.

RICH PEOPLE WHO USED TO BE POOR. They drive new cars, give you their "card" and hide out in the restroom from the University Development Fundraisers. They never bring their own bottles, but summon drinks from the bar at $5 a pop.

SHY PEOPLE WHO NOW HAVE THEIR OWN SYNDICATED TALK SHOWS. Their motive in returning is always the same. Revenge upon all the teachers who never called on them when they knew the answer and were too shy to raise their hands.

PEOPLE WHO KNOW ALL THE WORDS TO THE SCHOOL SONG. I have been to a lot of reunions in my time and they always show up. Both of them.

Brassieres change with the times

By The Los Angeles Times-Washington Post News Service

When Scarlett O'Hara swooned into Rhett Butler's arms, it probably was not due to the force of his ardent wooing. More likely, it was the corset shaping her 17-inch waist that caused the fair maiden to faint.

And when a World War II GI admired his favorite sweater girl, it probably never crossed his mind how much her charm owed to the efficient design of her bra.

In all of clothing's stages — from the fig leaf and the bustle to Christian Dior's New Look and the miniskirt — underwear has played a crucial role in maintaining the shape of high fashion. It has nipped in waistlines to make the hourglass figure, flattened breasts for the flapper look, and, in the days of the natural look, performed its most difficult magic by pretending that it wasn't there at all.

THE SHAPE AND FUNCTION of intimate apparel has, indeed, changed with the times. The corsets of the 1800s — with their metal stays and yards of string — gave way to the teddy, the all-in-one and the newly invented brassiere and elastic girdle of the 1920s. These were supplanted by the corselettes, Latex girdles and merry widows of the 1940s and '50s, which, in turn, were vanquished by the light-as-air, seamless bras, bikini underpants and stretch Lycra bodysuits of the 1970s and '80s.

All these changes, said Dolores O'Boyle, vice president for operations at International Playtex Inc., were dictated not only by clothes, but also by changing outlooks on comfort, activity and the way women look at their bodies.

LAT Photo

Callie Sheppard makes a mold, called a "hard hat," from which a brassiere will be shaped.

TODAY, with no single fashion style or body style reigning, women no longer want undergarments that will change the shape of their bodies. Instead, they seek underwear that will perform a variety of functions, so much so that intimate apparel has become one of the largest and most lucrative segments of the American apparel industry. In 1982, it produced shipments valued at $2.73 billion from 696 manufacturers employing more than 79,000 people. Of this production, $64.9 million was exported.

"Women today no longer look to their intimate apparel for shape or control," said Jerry Cohen, vice president of advertising for Olga, a California-based manufacturer. "They're more willing to accept the body that they have, doing things to enhance it without changing it significantly. That makes a big difference in the kind of undergarments that they want to buy."

AND, said O'Boyle of Playtex, the time is past when any one style or shape in underwear will serve all a woman's needs. These days, a woman needs a wardrobe of undergarments in the same way that she needs a shoe wardrobe, a jewelry wardrobe or a lot of different styles of sweathers.

"There is no one bra that is best-suited for everything," she said. "You want to have different ones for different reasons. At one point, a woman may want support, so she will choose a full-coverage support bra. At another time she may want to look sexy, so she'll choose a bra with a plunging neckline or one that gives uplift. At another, she may want something to wear under sheer clothing, so she will coose a pretty fabric with lace or color. Just as few women dress the same way all the time, few women will wear the same kind of undergarments all the time."

IF WOMEN'S needs have become more varied, the underwear industry has not always been in step with the changes. Sometimes, Cohen said, it has had to play catch-up to the seasonal peregrinations of style.

"The intimate apparel industry does change with the changing fashion," O'Boyle said. "But the changes don't happen as fast as they do with other apparel goods. We're always a couple of years behind the fashions in getting new goods onto the market."

From idea to marketplace, the development of an undergarment can take as long as two years.

For example, when International Playtex wanted to develop a bra for small-busted women, the idea was to find a design that would provide perfect fit for women who did not quite fit the normal grading from A to B cup bras. Through what O'Boyle calls "figure research" — national surveys in which numbers of small-busted women were measured and the data analyzed to establish size trends — the company found that it had to devise a new set of measurements that were more exact in determining certain cup sizes.

ONCE THE NEW set of measurements had been devised, the design process could begin. The project was given to a designer who selected the materials, decided how the new bra would look and devised the engineering specifications on how it should perform. While pattern makers worked on patterns for the components of the new brassiere, the company's textile engineers were looking for fabrics that would perform the design functions properly.

Once the bra fabric has been selected it is shaped on molds. There are two different types, a stretch mold that gives shape while stretching the cloth, and rigid molds that provide shape without stretch.

ONCE THE NEW bra has been molded — heat-set to retain a particular shape — the shaped pieces of cloth are sent to a sewing room where straps, side panels and trimmings are cut and the separate pieces are assembled into prototypes. These prototypes — in every bra size — are fitted and wear-tested on the human body.

"Material and process are closely related, O'Boyle explained. "The material must be attractive and it must deliver what we've promised. It must perform the design function and it must attract the customer. Therefore you must choose the materials to conform to the particular characteristics you wish to produce. It's a long process, one that is tested and checked at every step of the way."

Underwear fit important

By The Los Angeles Times-Washington Post News Service

Although underpinnings have changed over the years and have become very much a fashion item, those in the intimate apparel business say consumers still have a lot to learn about choosing the proper undergarments for their needs.

One of the most significant areas of neglect is how to properly select a foundation garment, said Dolores O'Boyle, vice president for operations at International Playtex Inc.

Clearly, bra sizes must be based on average measurements — most manufacturers use statistics compiled by the government through census data and periodic surveys. Using these measurements, lingerie companies can devise average size ranges to fit most American women.

BUT, said O'Boyle, few women really understand what uniform sizing is supposed to reflect, nor do they know how to corectly take their measurements. Because of this, she said, as many as seven out of every 10 women may be wearing the wrong bra size.

Understanding how a brassiere is supposed to fit as well as what it's supposed to do plays a significant role in the size and type of bra that you choose. First of all, said Jerry Cohen of Olga, don't depend on bra straps for support. The support function of a bra, he explained, is built into the bra itself.

IF, WHEN you try on a bra, it lifts, separates, minimizes or performs the other advertised function before you put the straps in place, chances are it's the right one for you. If it doesn't do this, he said, reject it and go on to another style or size.

Bra size is indicated by two basic measurements: the body size in inches and the cup size, which is denoted by letters of the alphabet. Here's how to find the right body size: While standing — wearing a bra and breathing normally — place a tape measure around the diaphragm (under the bustline) at the bottom of the bra. This measurement plus five inches equals the body size.

ONCE THIS measurement has been established, determine the cup size by placing the tape measure around the body at the fullest part of the bust. The difference between this measurement and your body size determines the cup size. If the bust measurement is up to a half-inch larger than the body size, then your cup size is A; one to two incheds larger, B; two to three inches larger, C, and three to four inches, D. Because they're more active and better-nourished, Cohen said, American women are wearing larger sizes. Ten years ago the most popular bra size was 34-B, now it ranges from 34-C to 36-B, he said.

ONCE you've found the right size, it's time to turn your attention to fit. Here are some guidelines:

—The bra cup should completely contain the breast unless you're buying a bra with a low cut or one that's designed to lift the bust. Bulges at top or bottom of the cup mean you need a larger size.

—The bra should be snug around the body but not tight. If it cuts or binds when you breathe it means that the back size is too small.

—The back of the bra — where it hooks — should stay down on the body. If it rides up, the bra size may be too large or the straps too tight.

—The center of the bra should lie flat against the breastbone. If there are gaps, the cup size is too small.

AS FOR A girdle, a garment that has been perceived throughout its existence as fashion's instrument of torture, sales just now are reviving after a decade that saw it fall victim to the popularity of loose, easy-flowing, unstructured garments and the invention of pantyhose that provided light support and needed no garters, thereby eliminating one of the girdle's functions.

"Our sales of girdles have doubled in the last two seasons," said Cohen, explaining that the return of narrow silhouettes and knits to designers' repertoires has revitalized the industry. "But these are not the same kind of girdles that we used to see. Today's woman already has a good body. She doesn't need something that's going to hold her in place."

"I mean, no matter what size, you are, a tummy bulge is not attractive," Cohen said. "And when you've bought a $500 designer knit, you want to do everything that you can to make it look great."

IF YOU'RE ONE of the consumers who is helping to increase girdle sales these days, chances are that during the decade of ease and freedom, you forgot how to choose one properly.

As with bras, girdle fit depends on two basic measurements: the waist and hip sizes.

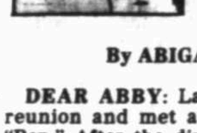

To begin, place the tape measure around the waist following the natural indentation of the body. If there is no clearly defined waistline, bending over to the side will help you find the natural break in your body.

TO OBTAIN the hip measurement, put the tape measure around the fullest part of the hips, usually about 10 inches below the waist. Girdles generally are sized by waist measurement and, since the hip measurement usually will be about 10 inches larger than your waist size, this won't cause problems. But, if your hip size is 11 or more inches larger than your waist size, use the hip measurement as a guide for fitting a girdle.

TO MAKE sure that your girdle fits properly, check the following things:

—The waist should stay in place when you sit down.

—The crotch should fit naturally against the body.

DEAR ABBY

Letter could be incriminating

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: Last year I attended a class reunion and met a former classmate I'll call "Ben." After the dinner Ben walked me to my hotel room and I invited him in to talk. We were very much attracted to each other in more ways than one, and before I realized what was happening, we were making love passionately. (I'm divorced and he is married.)

I have never enjoyed better sex, and he said it was the same for him. He told me he will never leave his wife and children because he has too much to lose. (He is very successful in his own business.) When we said goodbye he told me he would call me so we could meet again to make love in one of the many cities he travels to for business. So far we've met three times. He sends me plane tickets and we spend a thrilling night together.

The problem: Ben is the only man I have really enjoyed sex with. I believe I am in love with him, but after not hearing from him for two months I have decided to write to him and break off our relationship, but I don't know what to say to him. Please give me some advice. How can I break it off without hurting him? I know he cares for me and I am miserable without him. What should I do? Answer soon so I can get on with my life. — NO FUTURE WITH BEN

DEAR NO FUTURE: A letter from you "breaking it off" would be incriminating should it fall into the wrong hands, so wait until he calls, then tell him, "I see no future with you, and I need to get on with my life, so if you really care about me, please don't call me again." And if he calls again, repeat the above message. It may be necessary to repeat it two or three times to emphasize your sincerity.

DEAR ABBY: I am a 30-year-old single female who seems to attract gay men. Wherever I am, if there's a gay man around he will strike up a conversation with me. I find gay men very attractive and a lot of fun to be around, and I would like more gay men friends, but I'm afraid of being labeled a lesbian. What should I do? — GAY ATTRACTION

DEAR ATTRACTION: Where did you get the idea that the only females who socialize with gay men are lesbians? It's absurd. Attractive people attract attractive people — straight and gay.

DEAR ABBY: We work in an office consisting of 11 women and one man. The lone man, "Troy" (not his real name), is in his early 20s.

The problem: One of the women in the office is getting married and we want to give her a bridal shower. Should we include Troy? (It might be a lingerie shower.)

Some of us feel that Troy should not be included and some feel he should. Those of us who feel he shouldn't be included are afraid he might show up — lingerie in hand. Help! — THE OFFICE GANG

DEAR GANG: If the "office gang" is giving a co-worker a bridal shower, and Troy is a member of the "gang," he should be included. Whether he participates or not is up to him. And to those of you who are "afraid" he might show up with lingerie in hand: Grow up!

(Problems? What's bugging you? Unload on Abby, P.O. Box 38923, Hollywood, Calif. 90038. For a personal reply, please enclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope.)

Dresses go to head of class

Copley News Service

The big fashion news for back-to-school is that the dress is once again at the head of the class. The choices are varied, the moods are many, and the styles are fresh, appealing and, most of all, fun.

Borrowing from their adult counterparts, young girls will sport outfits with a nostalgic nod to the '50s. According to G.R. Vervoort, manager of women's and children's wear, Eastman Chemical Products Inc., "The clothes seen in 'Happy Days' come alive with waist-hugging patent leather belts, wide circle skirts, shoulder treatments and contrasting collars and cuffs. The waisted dress with shaped bodice, flared skirt and gathered sleeves is the keynote of the 'Retro' look."

Menswear styling will provide another dominant motif, with the influence mainly in terms of fabrics. The corporate executive of tomorrow will opt for windowpane and glen plaids, tattersalls and stripes for a crisp, businesslike look. Gray will be a major color story, often coupled with red or black. Ties inspire a whole range of neck treatments, from big, floppy bows to neater no-nonsense looks.

Other children's wear trends include comfortable fleece dresses. Reflecting the active wear influence, they feature bright color blocking, mock layering, asymmetrical styling and soft, "movable" fabrics.

The Romantic look still gets an A plus, with lace, ribbons, ruffles and gathers for feminine flair.

Sewing at home booms

NEW YORK (AP) — The home sewing industry is booming, thanks to patterns with flair by big-name designers, computerized sewing machines that eliminate drudgery and higher prices for ready-made clothes.

"There is a lot more emphasis on dressing up today and more of a need for women to have a versatile wardrobe," said Alison Jaret, spokeswoman for the non-profit American Home Sewing Association.

She says that fact, coupled with rising department store prices and a decline in the quality of ready-to-wear clothes, has given the once depressed home sewing industry a much needed shot in the arm.

Ms. Jaret, publicity director for the association which is funded by the home sewing industry, said 40 million home sewers spent $4 billion on fabric, patterns, notions, sewing machines and parts in 1982.

But that was not always the case.

The industry was hard hit in the late '60s and early 1970s when, Ms. Jaret says, "there really was not much interest in clothes."

Dressing down was the rage of the day and jeans were king of the fashion hill. Wash-and-wear fabrics also were in vogue, and polyester and double-knit suits were a staple of every working man and woman's wardrobe.

The emergence of the American designer, coinciding with a rebellion by working women against the traditional male suit, are two factors that led to a boom in designer patterns.

Even women who never stitched a hem in their life are joining the sewing boom, having designer outfits custom made by professional seamstresses.Using the finest $20-a-yard wool, a working woman can have a $500 designer suit tailored by a seamstress for about $230.

And for novice sewers or those with little time to cut and piece patterns, there is a new line of "fast food" ready-to-sew garments, which its creator claims can be sewn by a novice in a day and an expert in 20 minutes.

Pattern companies are not the only businesses reaping the benefits of the home sewing boom. Notion companies, fabric firms and sewing machine companies are also being pulled from the slump.

With just a touch of a finger, computerized sewing machines automatically can set up the type of stitch, the length, the proper tension and type of presser that should be used.

Technology, of course, does not come without a cost.

Singer charged with murder

FORT WORTH (AP) — Country-western singer and songwriter Ronnie Mack has hired lawyer Richard "Racehorse" Haynes of Houston to defend him against charges he murdered his wife two months ago.

Mack, 38, whose real name is Ronald Earl McCowan, was booked into city jail Monday and released on a $5,000 bond set by Municipal Judge Mary Najavar.

Police said a warrant for Mack's arrest was issued after detectives ruled out suicide in the July death of his wife, Coral Ann McCowan, 26, who died of a gunshot wound to the head in the couple's Fort Worth home.

Dealer sentenced for selling grain

GEORGETOWN (AP) — A Bartlett grain warehouse operator has been ordered to serve a 2-year prison sentence for illegally delivering grain owned by Williamson County farmers.

Victor Marek's warehouse in Granger was shut down in September 1982 after state and federal agriculture officials discovered that 6 million pounds of grain was missing, authorities said.

Documents introduced as evidence showed that 20 rail cars filled with more than $150,000 worth of grain were shipped to a Houston exporter, although Marek, 41, had issued receipts for the grain to farmers and was supposed keep it in storage.

Jury says officials not liable

HOUSTON (AP) — Officials who shut down a school for troubled youths conspired against the school's founder and violated his civil rights, but are not liable for damages, says a federal jury.

Artesia Hall was closed 10 years ago after a 17-year-old student who swallowed poison was denied medical treatment and died.

Jurors on Monday found that four state and Liberty County officials conspired against the late Joseph D. Farrar and that Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby committed acts that deprived Farrar of his civil rights, but they ruled Sunday that the defendants were not liable for damages.

Authorities say at least two guns used in slayings

KILGORE (AP) — Authorities said at least two guns were used in last weekend's execution-style slayings of five people who were abducted from a Kentucky Fried Chicken restaurant and then taken to a remote rural spot to be killed.

Ballistics reports also showed two different weapons were used, Texas Ranger Stuart Dowell said Monday, but he declined to identify the makes or models of the weapons.

A preliminary autopsy report indicated the killers fired 11 shots, investigators said.

Three of the victims, David Maxwell, Monty Landers and Joey Johnson, all 20, were students at Kilgore College. Maxwell, an off-duty employee of the restaurant, and Landers had gone to the restaurant to wait for Johnson to finish closing.

The body of the restaurant's assistant manager, 37-year-old Mary Tyler, was found beside those of the fraternity brothers. Investigators believe Opie Ann Hughes, 39, tried to flee as the others were shot. Her body, clad in her restaurant uniform, lay sprawled 50 yards away.

A seven-hour horseback search Sunday of the wooded area, located 18 miles south of Kilgore, where the five bodies were found Saturday morning turned up no clues, authorities said.

The five were executed with point-blank gunshots to their heads as they lay face down beside a dirt road. Their arms were folded and the hands of some covered their eyes, authorities said.

Rewards totaling $50,000 have been offered in the case — half of it by the fast-food restaurant chain and half by Kilgore businessmen.

Investigators checked leads Monday that had been called in from as far away as Kansas. However, concern mounted in this East Texas town that the bandits who stole $2,000 from the restaurant might be local residents.

Jerdy Wolverton, a spokesman for the Kilgore Police Department, said police were assuming that the killer or killers were "locals" since they would have to be familiar with the rugged oil country to find the place where the bodies were discovered.

"That naturally is the speculation right now. That's a very good possibility and we're doing everything we can to check it out," Wolverton said. "Everyone is working hard and long hours. We want to see this this resolved as much as anybody."

"We're assuming it was two people. There's no other way the victims would have lined up and let somebody kill them," Rusk County Sheriff Mike Strong said.

Rail rates obstacle to coal sales, consumers say

AUSTIN (AP) — Southern coal won't be in high demand in Europe until railroad transportation costs in the United States drop, European coal consumers told southern governors in a satellite teleconference.

During the conference conducted by a television hookup between Rotterdam and the Southern Governors' Association meeting here, both sides agreed Monday that rail rates are a major obstacle to international coal sales.

Texas Gov. Mark White said the problem is obvious.

"We can get coal from Poland cheaper than coal from Wyoming or Montana," said Texas Gov. Mark White. He called the rail rates "devastating" to coal-consuming states such as Texas, and said Texas officials can understand why European nations are looking elsewhere for coal.

The Texas governor called on Congress to order the Interstate Commerce Commission "to move with dispatch to bring hauling rates under control."

White added, "It will not hurt the railroads. They are not having trouble attracting new capital."

The SGA is actively courting European markets for coal. But during the teleconference, several of the Europeans made it clear that the United States does not have a captive market for coal in Europe.

"The railroads have a monolopy against us," said Domenico Maiello of Italy. "Our only defense is to step out of these mines."

Kai Bograd, a Danish official, said the price of southern coal could be reduced if southern ports were dredged to allow larger freighters to be loaded. Several officials talked about off-shore facilities that could be used to top off the super-freighters that cannot be fully loaded in U.S. ports.

But Bograd said expensive dredging projects or off-shore facilities would cut only about $1 from the price of a ton of coal.

"You'll still have very high railroad rates. That's the main problem," he told the 11 governors attending the first day of the three-day SGA meeting.

Louisana Gov. David Treen said rail rates have been made artificially high by "featherbedding" in the railroad industry.

"It ought to be a crime for someone to deliberately and maliciously drive up the costs," he said, adding that he vetoed a bill this year that would have required cabooses on almost all trains in his state.

Kentucky Gov. John Y. Brown said it's unfortunate that coal-rich states such as his are unable to make major sales to the coal-hungry European nations.

"The European market is desperate to do business with us, but we can't do business with them," he said.

Frans Smael of the Netherlands said the Europeans would buy U.S. coal if the price was more competitive.

"It looks like an internal United States problem," he told the governors.

Poland, South Africa, Colombia and Australia are actively increasing their coal sales in Europe.

Treen said his state is looking into steps necessary to increase coal sales, including a costly project to deepen the Mississippi River. But he said those projects might be fruitless if rail rates continue to make U.S. coal prices non-competitive overseas.

White cautioned Treen that the slight drop in the price of coal would be more than offset by continued hauling cost increases by railroads with monopolies on some coal routes.

"The railroads will eat up a dollar a ton in the blink of an eye," White warned Treen.

Judge will decide on nurse's trial date

GEORGETOWN (AP) — Murder defendant Genene Jones, charged in a bizarre case involving the death of a 15-month-old Kerrville girl, could find out this week if she will be granted a delay in her scheduled Oct. 17 trial.

State District Judge John Carter, hearing the case on a change of venue from Kerrville, said he will decide by Thursday if he will grant the defense motion.

Court-appointed defense attorney Jim Brookshire requsted the delay because he needs more time to prepare his case.

Ms. Jones, a licensed vocational nurse, is charged with using a paralyzing drug to kill Chelsea Ann McClellan, who died Sept. 17, 1982, and alsois accused of injecting a powerful muscle relaxant into six other children in the Kerrville clinic where she worked.

District Attorney Ron Sutton said the state is ready to go to trial.

Stay won't be opposed

AUSTIN (AP) — Texas Death Row inmate James David Autry will not be opposed by Attorney General Jim Mattox in his effort to avoid a scheduled Oct. 5 execution date,officials said.

If a delay is granted, it will be the third reprieve in 10 months for Autry, who is scheduled to die by lethal injection for the April 1980 shooting death of a Port Arthur convenience store clerk.

Your horoscope

By JEANE DIXON

Wednesday, Sept. 28, 1983

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY: Actor Marcello Mastroianni and actress/author Brigitte Bardot celebrate birthdays today. Also born on this date: French statesman Georges Clemenceau, German boxer Max Schmeling, "Lil Abner" creator Al Capp and TV host Ed Sullivan. Love and marriage are a top priority in the year ahead. Learn to recognize when the time has come to extricate yourself from a bad situation. Owners and managers see business boom. Family members reconcile in December and June. A self-improvement project could turn your whole life around! You get an extraordinary offer in early 1984. Pay attention to appearances. Top powerbrokers like your style.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): An ideal time for business expansion. Money is available from an unexpected source. Use great tact if you must give bad news to an older person. Your kindness softens the blow.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): You benefit from the career or financial opportunities extended to your mate or partner. Avoid appearing either arbitrary or overly secretive at work. A newly-acquired skill will bring rich rewards.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Financial gains come more swiftly than you anticipated. Invest wisely, preferably with the help of experts. You contemplate taking a new career direction. Follow a relative or old friend's advice.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): A small windfall allows you to spend some money on creative efforts. Use the extra cash to refurbish your wardrobe or home. Romance will flourish this evening if you seek quiet surroundings.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Your ability to make quick decisions impresses someone influential. Rapid career advancement is possible. Do not take your friends' financial advice too seriously. A long trip could lead to romance.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Make a special effort to be attentive to your loved ones. Things could backfire if you put work first, romance and family second. Follow older person's advice if it seems appropriate.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 21): This morning's confusion will disappear by evening. You receive support from an unlikely source. Domestic demands keep you anchored to your home while your heart yearns for distant rainbows.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Timing is the key to your success today. Promoting a bright idea to the right person advances your career. Despite some friction on the home front, the evening hours should be rewarding.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Avoid making rash decisions regarding money or romance. Impatience should not be allowed to supplant wisdom. Get better organized to increase work productivity. Make up your mind about a relationship.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Your efforts at work bring a delightful reward. Someone is gullible about money. Make sure you do not become a victim of incorrect information. A close associate has serious intentions.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Strive for greater harmony in a romantic relationship. A delayed financial deal begins to shape up. A trip could give you a fresh perspective and the solution to a problem.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Go ahead with your plans, but expect some delays. Your creativity impresses others. Do a turnabout and use persuasion with someone you have been trying to coerce.

Comedies air this week

NEW YORK (AP) — Update "I Love Lucy" with Erma Bombeck's view of the suburbs, throw in a weekly sexual misunderstanding, and you have Madeline Kahn's first venture into television: "Oh Madeline," the ABC comedy debuting tonight.

The modern woman, according to Ms. Bombeck, jogs on a treadmill of trendiness, but never gets anywhere. In the opening scene of "Oh Madeline," Madeline is bouncing on her indoor jogger while mimicking "She's a Maniac" from "Flashdance."

Madeline, fighting midlife malaise, is also into aerobic dancing and health food, which puts her at odds with her husband, Charlie (James Sloyan). He calls her high-nutrition concoction "a piece of the backyard."

Despite moving in different directions, they profess their love for each other. Maybe so, but, after 10 years of marriage, this modern relationship isn't bulging with honesty.

Charlie writes romance novels. His friend, Robert (Louis Giambalvo), who has no visible means of support and hangs around during the day, says Charlie's books seem easy to write: "He's handsome, she's a virgin and something burns down."

When the show's characters are commenting about the brave new world of diet fads and plastic wrap, "Oh Madeline" can be very funny. When the characters are zinging each other, "Oh Madeline" can be funny: "Have a so-so day," Madeline tells Robert, the ex-husband of her best friend, Doris.

But when the plot lines are exposed as weekly bedroom farce, "Oh Madeline" becomes "Two's Company," and silliness is raised to an art form. Instead of lovable-but-dizzy Lucy burning the roast and hiding the damage under the sheets, lovable-but-dizzy Madeline is hiding under the sheets.

Tonight, Madeline, clad only in a towel, and Charlie, clad in a towel and raincoat, are at Robert's house, but neither knows the other is there, nor does Robert or his date for the afternoon. Next Tuesday, Doris accuses Madeline of making a play for Robert when Madeline hugs the wrong mummy at a costume party.

Ugh! If only life's mix-ups were all this insignificant and meaningless.

Alas, that's the weakness of "Oh Madeline." It's so-what comedy — forgetfully funny, with characters you wouldn't find in real life, or want to know anyway.

But if you like Ms. Kahn's brand of comedy, you'll like "Oh Madeline." It's her show from start to finish. The shrill-voiced comedian from "Paper Moon" and Mel Brooks' movies doesn't play a character as much as she plays her caricature.

Opening lead: Ten of ♠.

Freak hands yield strange results. We can only admire South's technique at his contract of five diamonds doubled.

South's "weak" jump overcall might not measure up to exacting standards — the quality of his suit left something to be desired and his hand was too strong. East's double of five diamonds is hard to fault.

With so much of his values in the enemy suit, it is not surprising that he did not relish the prospect of having to play five spades.

East won the opening spade lead with the king and shifted to the queen of hearts. Declarer won the ace and, since it was likely that East held all the missing trumps for his double, set about reducing his trump length. But first, there was the matter of avoiding a club loser.

The finesse of the club queen won, and declarer ruffed a heart. Next, he carefully crossed back to the table with the ace of clubs for another heart ruff. A spade ruff provided an entry to the board, and a club was led. Obviously, it would not have helped the defenders' cause for East to ruff, so he discarded a spade. Declarer ruffed, trumped his last spade in dummy and then reduced his trump length to that of East by ruffing another club.

Now declarer and East were both down to nothing but three trumps each. Declarer simply exited with a low trump to the queen. East won the king, but he was forced to lead away from his J-9 of trumps into South's A-10 tenace. So declarer lost only one spade and one trump to land his doubled game.

Cancer claims Ruth Carter Stapleton

FAYETTEVILLE, N.C. (AP) — A graveside funeral will be held Wednesday for Ruth Carter Stapleton, the evangelist sister of former president Jimmy Carter, a spokesman said.

Mrs. Stapleton, 54, died Monday of pancreatic cancer.

She had refused conventional treatment.

Carter spokesman Dan Lee said the former president would attend the graveside funeral which a spokeswoman for Rogers & Breece Funeral Home said was scheduled for 2 p.m. Wednesday at Lafayette Memorial Park.

Carter visited his sister during a May family reunion in Fayetteville and returned without publicity within the past two weeks.

Duke University Medical Center doctors diagnosed Mrs. Stapleton in April as having terminal cancer. Her son, Duke opthalmologist Scott Carpenter Stapleton, urged her to undergo orthodox treatment. But she refused, relying instead on exercise, diet and faith.

"My whole life has been geared to this kind of thing," Mrs. Stapleton said in May. "I worked 20 years in healing, and I have seen so many miracles.... If I'm going for broke, I want to have a single mind. I want to put all my faith in God."

Survivors include her husband, Dr. Robert Stapleton; two daughters, Lynn Nimocks of Fayetteville and Patti Stapleton of Fayetteville; two sons, Scott Carpenter Stapleton of Durham and Michael Stapleton of Fayetteville; and a sister, Gloria Spann of Plains, Ga.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — For once, it seemed, comedy star Joan Rivers had little to say after she sparked a furor with remarks during television's Emmy awards.

"Thank God the Emmys are over. I lost my voice," she said Monday while guest-hosting "The Tonight Show" for an absent Johnny Carson. "It's the first time in nine years I've been there and it's crazy. Everything is live...."

Her Emmy-telecast remarks on Interior Secretary James Watt, homosexuals, herpes and hookers had lit up TV station switchboards around the nation Sunday.

Actress Shelley Winters tried to draw her out on the topic during Monday night's videotaping at NBC, but to no avail.

"I want to congratulate you. You did what everyone in the country wants to do. You told James Watt off," Miss Winters said. "Be proud of it."

Miss Rivers responded, "Oh, thank you so much, darling," but changed the subject repeatedly when guests brought up the Emmys.

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Colleagues of WPVI-TV weatherman Jim O'Brien continued to reel under the shock of his death in a weekend skydiving accident, which a coroner's report said killed the popular broadcaster instantly.

A coroner said Monday virtually all of O'Brien's internal organs were damaged by the fall Sunday at 12:30 p.m. at the New Hanover Township Airport in Gilbertsville.

O'Brien, a member of the Channel 6 team that produced the most popular local 6 p.m. newscast in the country, plunged to his death during a skydive from 8,500 feet.

WPVI officials said O'Brien will be buried in Houston later this week in a family plot at Memorial Oaks Cemetery.

HAILEY, Idaho (AP) — Singer-songwriter Carole King declines to talk with reporters about the incident, but an attorney for Miss King says she and her husband have lodged a formal complaint of battery against a U.S. Forest Service employee.

The complaint alleges that Deon Wells of the Sawtooth National Recreation Area shoved the 41-year-old singer while she was looking at the forest service's files on her last Friday.

The files involve an ongoing dispute Miss King has had over whether a road going by her Custer County ranch in central Idaho should be open to the public, Attorney Steven Millemann said Monday. Part of the property is on recreation area land.

FREMONT, Ohio (AP) — Actor Robert Urich, best known for his role as detective Dan Tanna on television, appeared in another series over the weekend — a series of political fundraisers for his uncle, Republican mayoral candidate Norman Bray.

Urich, a native of Toronto, Ohio, spent Saturday shaking hands, signing autographs and discussing his future acting plans with residents in this northwest Ohio city of 15,000. Along the way, he raised $675 for his uncle's campaign against incumbent Democrat Richard Maier.

Largely missing from prime time TV since "Vega$" was canceled, Urich said he has been concentrating on breaking into feature films. He has a lead role in the upcoming "Ice Pirates," a high-tech space adventure, and is being considered for the role of Dick Tracy in a feature film about the comic page hero.

NEW YORK (AP) — Contrary to an earlier report, Bob Hope's visit to his eye doctor was routine, not an emergency.

The 80-year-old comedian visited Monday with Dr. Robert Ellsworth of New York Hospital-Cornell Medical Center. "He always stops in to see his friend, Dr. Ellsworth, when he's in New York," said the doctor's secretary, Elsie Donohue.

Kay LaGuardia, secretary for the hospital's public relations department, said Hope went there for a routine checkup.

A published report from London said Hope had gone to New York for emergency eye surgery. Paula Thompson, on the staff of Ken Kantor, Hope's publicist, said from Los Angeles that the report was not correct.

DR. NEIL SOLOMON

'Morning breath' due to normal processes

Dear Dr. Solomon: Why is it that even though I floss and brush my teeth each night before going to bed, I wake up with a bad taste in my mouth? I go to my dentist regularly so I know that my mouth and teeth are in good shape and I don't have bad breath during the day. — Eli, Pittsburgh

Dear Eli: The condition you describe may very well be due to normal processes that take place during sleep. Drs. E.L. Attia and K.G. Marshall, of McGill University Faculty of Medicine, point out that saliva does not flow during sleep. As a result, the mouth retains tiny particles of food that decay and this leads to bad breath.

Dear Dr. Solomon: I was visiting my daughter and I noticed that my grandson had a diaper rash. When I suggested that boric acid might be good for it, she told me that her pediatrician had warned her against using it. Is this the general opinion about boric acid? — Mrs. L.V., New York City

Dear Mrs. V.: The excessive use of boric acid in young children may result in harmful skin reactions. Even adults who ingest large amounts may be adversely affected, reacting with nausea, vomiting and abdominal pain.

Since there is no satisfactory method of treating boric acid poisoning, prevention is essential and this probably accounts for the pediatrician's warning.

Dear Dr. Solomon: I have a fear of being in confined spaces. I spoke with my doctor about this and he told me that there are different ways to treat the condition, that I could use behavior therapy or I could go into psychotherapy, but that he couldn't say which would be best for me. What would you recommend in such a case? — Elliot, Richmond, Va.

Dear Elliot: As your doctor indicated, there are different approaches to the treatment of phobias, and I could not say which would be better in your case. Dr. W. Stewart Agras, professor of psychiatry at Stanford University, says that the best approach consists in gradually increasing the patient's exposure to whatever it is that is feared. The longer patients are exposed to the feared situation, the more comfortable they become with it. Some of these patients also benefit from the concurrent use of antidepressant drugs, although the drugs alone have little effect.

On the other hand, Dr. Alan Skolnikoff, of the University of California, San Francisco, says that psychotherapy is the best treatment for most phobias since the phobia simply masks a much larger anxiety. Therefore, uncovering the anxiety by means of psychotherapy resolves the phobia.

I am sorry that I cannot be more specific but, as you can see, there is no single method that is best for everyone.

Dear Dr. Solomon: My niece was given a vaccination for rubella and then she found out that she was pregnant. When I asked her if she was thinking of getting an abortion, she said there's no need to. I know that rubella can cause a baby to have problems, and I always thought that this was a reason for an abortion. — Mrs. E.D., Moline, Ill.

Dear Mrs. D.: The question you raise is one that arises repeatedly. Now, data collected by the Centers for Disease Control (CDC) permit a fairly definitive answer.

Over a period of 10 years, the CDC received reports on 730 women who received rubella vaccine either three months before or three months after they conceived. None of the infants born to these mothers after a full-term pregnancy had an abnormality that could be traced to congenital rubella.

An Advisory Committee on Immunization Practices, which reviewed the data, says that the risk of congenital rubella when a woman is vaccinated within three months of conception is negligible, and that vaccination during pregnancy is not in itself a reason for abortion. The committee adds, however, that pregnant women should not be given the rubella vaccine.

Dear Dr. Solomon: At what age should a girl begin to examine her breasts? I want to teach my daughter to take care of herself properly, but I don't want to go overboard and make a big deal out of something that might frighten her without doing her any good. — Mrs. D.L., Clearwater Beach, Fla.

Dear Mrs. L.: Dr. Robert M. Cavanaugh Jr., of the State University of New York Upstate Medical Center in Syracuse, recommends that breast self-examination be taught to mature adolescdents even though serious breast lesions are unusual in girls in that age group. In addition to the possibility that breast self-examination might lead to the discovery of a condition that warrants medical attention, teaching the technique to adolescent girls will encourage the establishment of a lifelong practice while they are still young.

Dear Dr. Solomon: I got a tattoo with a girl's name on it when I was in the Navy and was younger and didn't know any better. Now I'm planning to get married and I'd like to get that tattoo removed. I have heard that lasers can be used for this. Is this true? — Guy, Hanover, Pa.

Dear Guy: Dr. Kent M. Hardy, an Ogden, Utah, dermatologist, says that a carbon dioxide laser can remove a tattoo quickly and easily. The entire procedure takes about five minutes. In effect, the laser burns away a thin layer of the skin and pigment, producing acceptable results.

For Marvin, Syracuse, N.Y.: Some conditions are more difficult to diagnose in elderly patients than in younger ones. For example, older people may have overwhelming infection and yet have no fever or pain. The fact that many older individuals take several different medications is an additional complicating factor in making a diagnosis.

For Leslie, Bradenton, Fla.: Aspirin is included in a number of over-the-counter products including pain relievers, cold and allergy medicines and antacids. If you are not supposed to use aspirin, be sure to check the labels on nonprescription products before purchasing any.
