SSC commission debates proposal

By RAMONA NYE
Staff Writer

GARDEN CITY — Area superconducting super collider commission members at 11 a.m today were debating presenting a renegade proposal to the federal government after deciding to allow members who were not current in their dues to take part in the decision.

The dues vote — a countermanding of commission bylaws — came after commission members from San Angelo and Odessa refused to pay additional membership fees solicited by officials.

The commission also heard a proposal from Gary Thurman, a certified public accountant who claimed to represent an unnamed client willing to underwrite $50,000 of the proposal should the commission decide to approach the U.S. Department of Energy directly.

Today's meeting was called because bylaws were violated at a June 8 gathering where non-dues paying members voted and the proposal died on a 13-10 vote, Thane Akins, project manager, contended Tuesday.

But Odessa and San Angelo officials were confused by the call for a second vote and were against paying more money to the commission that they already helped with monetary support.

Odessa Mayor Don Carter said Tuesday, "I don't feel comfortable with paying dues just so we can vote."

At the June 8 meeting Carter said he voted to send the proposal as is to DOE. He declined to say how he would vote today.

San Angelo Mayor Dick Funk said Tuesday his city did not pay a membership fee but contributed $75,000 toward putting together the Garden City SSC proposal. He intended to vote today against sending the local site directly to DOE, he said.

"We have equity in the study being conducted and we have not relented to this so-called $1,000 a vote deal," Funk said.

On Tuesday the Midland City Council voted unanimously to pay a $7,242 membership fee so their representative — Mayor Carroll Thomas — could cast seven votes at today's meeting in Garden City. Each $1,000 earns one vote.

Thomas contended that the money will not go to waste if the group votes again today to end the SSC quest.

He said the membership fees will go toward creation of a regional economic development group to attract other industries to the area.

In a related development, the commission today heard a bid from the Creative Energy Corp. of San Antonio to build three $15 million "waste-to-energy plants" in San Angelo, Big Spring and Midland-Odessa areas.

In a letter to the commission, Osvaldo Perez, company president, said his organization is "contemplating" setting up the three plants. Each plant would create about 200 construction jobs and 57 permanent positions.

Big Spring City Manager Mack Wofford said his council authorized payment of a $2,059 membership fee in March. Each city was charged 7.5 cents per captia.

Prior to today's dues vote, city officials from San Angelo and Odessa were without the power to take part in a decision whether to go renegade; Akins contended Tuesday.

Dues are $1,000 for individuals, and $100 for chamber of commerce representatives, he said.

Clements denies cover-up

By JIM WARREN
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

Clements

AUSTIN — Gov. Bill Clements said Tuesday he regreted his key role in the SMU football scandal but dismissed talks of his impeachment as a partisan attack.

Clements said he accepts the scathing report prepared by four Methodist bishops who investigated the Southern Methodist University. But in his first real comments on the report, the Republican governor denied orchestrating a cover-up to shield him from bad publicity during his bitter campaign against former Gov. Mark White.

"It's a disappointing set of state of affairs with that (SMU) athletic department," Clements said, "20-20 hindight is a wonderful thing."

The bishops' report concluded that Clements led the movement at SMU to continue illicit payments to football players even after the NCAA placed the school on probabation for similar infractions. The report said Clements and others on the SMU Board of Governors worked to keep the scheme quiet during last year's campaign. It also said hundreds of thousands of dollars were paid to athletic department officials to keep them from discussing the cash-to-players system.

Clements dismissed an effort by two liberal House Democrats to file articles of impeachment against him. "There are some partisan feelings being expressed," the governor said. "People in that category that are very partisan see an opportunity to bark and make noises and they do. That's to be expected."

Reps. Paul Moreno, D-El Paso, and Al Edwards, D-Houston, said they still want to remove Clements from office. Edwards said he has drafted the impeachment articles and is waiting for more feedback from House members before filing them.

House Speaker Gib Lewis said he doubted the impeachment movement would go anywhere. Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby again said he didn't think he should comment on Clements' involvement in the scandal.

Clements said other SMU officials agreed to continue the payments, and they could have stopped the pay-outs over his objection. Clements cut short the discussion about SMU and indicated he would leave if reporters continued to ask him about the scandal. He vehemently denied devising a cover-up, citing his frank talks with the bishops.

"There was no cover-up. That's absolute nonsense."

The governor also chided Attorney General Mattox, who has agreed to investigate Clements' involvement in the SMU controversy. Mattox, at the urging of Rep. Eddie Cavazos, D-Corpus Christi, and other legislators, said he will review the bishops' report — and perhaps call for witnesses' testimony — to determine if Clements and the others violated any state civil laws.

Any criminal wrongdoing uncovered, Mattox said, will be turned over to the Dallas County district attorney's office.

Inaction could shut in Basin gas

By ALLEN E. HOWLAND
Assistant Business/Oil Editor

A federal court ruling overturning watershed natural gas rules opening pipeline access could result in sizeable quantities of shut-in Permian Basin gas by the end of the summer if FERC fails to iron out problems in its Rule 436 pointed out by the court.

A three-judge panel of the U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia Tuesday turned back to the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission its two-year-old rule, which the commission has long claimed would increase competition in the natural gas industry.

"If FERC or the pipelines do not come up with some kind of interim or emergency action by the end of the grace period, it is likely a lot of spot market gas will be shut in," said John Smart of the Midland gas consulting firm Smart & Kuss.

However, Smart and other gas industry observers think the commission will take action to avoid the rule being vacated by the court's decision. "The commission's push toward 'free market' forces dictating gas markets, makes it likely that the commission will come up with some interim emergency measures," Smart said.

Ironically, the appellate court's finding stemmed from a producers' petition against open access to natural gas transmission but it could prove helpful to pipeline companies facing mounting take-or-pay liabilities, according to a pipeline company spokesman.

While remanding the rule to the commission for further work, "Rule 436 is still alive and well," in the meantime, said John McFall, a spokesman for El Paso Natural Gas Co. in El Paso.

McFall noted that third-party gas moving to the West Coast on El Paso's system is covered by Section 311 of the Natural Gas Policy Act — not Rule 436 — so it will not be affected by Tuesday's decision.

FERC will have 45 days to address problems pointed out by the court in its 125-page opinion by Judge Stephen L. Williams. The court said that contract-demand reduction provisions of the rule "suffer from a want of both legal authority and reasoned decision-making."

A new solution to contract demand based adjustments could negate the impact of massive take-or-pay claims being accrued by producers. Take-or-pay contracts signed in the late 1970s to early '80s required pipelines to pay for produceable gas, whether or not they accepted the gas into the pipeline.

Buyers were willing to make such agreements in order to ensure longterm supplies. But abundant gas supplies and decreasing demand have combined to reduce pipelines' gas takes and pipelines have not been paying take-or-pay claims made by producers.

Lamesa project funds requested

By RAMONA NYE
Staff Writer

Residents from eastside Midland packed into City Council chambers Tuesday night urging the council to allocate federal funds to start a Lamesa Road project that officials hope will pump jobs and economic opportunity into the area.

"For too long the development of the eastside had been left on the back burner," said Roger Robles, a Midland Hispanic Chamber of Commerce member, addressing the council during the Tuesday night public hearing.

The city Public Works department is requesting $610,500 in U.S. Housing and Urban Development funds to buy the right of way from about 29 families along Lamesa Road, north of U.S. Highway 80 and to help relocate them.

The $1.2 million project — expected to be funded by the State Department of Highways and Public Transportation — will realign Lamesa with its arterial south of Highway 80 and eventually connect the road to Loop 250 making Lamesa a major north-south road.

Officials predict the alignment will double traffic on the street and bring in businesses, jobs and customers.

One eastside convenience store owner, James Lister, 1401 E. Pennsylvania, told the council, "If there's one thing the southside needs, it's a thoroughfare with lights. There has been no development in the area since 1949."

Nancy Vickrey, a consultant working on the Lamesa Road project, asked the council to allocate $363,000 in federal funds rejected earlier this year by YMCA officials to enable the city to immediately begin buying right of way.

State budget cut could cost MISD $1.4 million

By STEVE LEVINE
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — House budget writers plan to present today a $104 million budget cut that could cost the Midland Independent School District more than $1.4 million next year.

Also, Texas senators are looking at a corporate income tax to help finance the $39.6 billion budget they approved Tuesday.

House Speaker Gib Lewis said the House should debate tax and budget matters next Tuesday. A House spending bill to be filed today eliminates an earlier proposal to shift $200 million in tax burden from the state to school districts.

It replaces it, in part, by eliminating a $52 million-a-year appropriation designed to help districts recover from large drops in property values. More than 20 percent of the state's 1,063 districts lost $73.7 million last year, so the appropriation would have covered only 70 percent of the problem.

Eliminating that item could cost MISD, which lost 14 percent of its property value last year, $1.455 million. Ector County ISD could lose $1.354 million and Monahans-Wickett-Pyote ISD could lose $315,000. Houston ISD tops the list with a possible loss of more than $14 million.

Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby called the Senate's appropriation bill, which passed 26-3 Tuesday morning, a "very bare bones budget." It would spend nearly $28.2 billion in state funds over the two-year budget cycle, $2.05 billion more than current levels.

Hobby said senators voted for the increase because "we don't want to cut (child welfare) or turn people out of nursing homes or cripple higher education."

The spending bill would require $6.6 billion in new revenue to balance, and Sen. Bob Glasgow said senators are considering a corporate income tax to raise $1.5 billion. Businesses would pay the state 10 percent of their total federal income tax levy.

"It's based on income, call it what you want to," said Glasgow, D-Stephenville and chairman of the Senate's Tax Policy Subcommittee. "It's a broad-based tax on everybody that's in business,...and it's based on the ability to pay."

AMA adopts AIDS testing recommendations

CHICAGO (AP) — Doctors hailed the American Medical Association's endorsement of mandatory AIDS testing of immigrants and prison inmates, but one AIDS-clinic physician said the policy should focus on prevention and care.

Policymakers for the 271,000-member AMA, the nation's largest organization of doctors, debated less than a half-hour Tuesday before adopting, virtually unchanged, 17 recommendations their trustees made Saturday.

"I did not hear a single dissenting voice," Dr. Robert E. McAfee, a trustee, said after the voice vote. "That says this is a very solid, broadly based, widely supported document."

Under the policy endorsed by the 406-member House of Delegates during the AMA's annual meeting, tests would be mandatory for inmates and immigrants but not marriage license applicants or all people entering a hospital. Blood and organ donors and military personnel already are tested for the AIDS virus.

The AMA also recommended elementary school pupils be taught how to prevent transmission of the deadly disease.

The recommendations on testing appeared to mirror those of President Reagan, who has called for mandatory testing of all immigrants and federal inmates but who apparently would make tests at the state level voluntary.

In a related development, Veterans Administration physicians sent Reagan a confidential memo opposing an administration suggestion to give AIDS tests to all patients admitted to veterans hospitals, The New York Times reported today.

The AMA recommendations now become the basis for AMA education and lobbying efforts on acquired immune deficiency syndrome, which has struck more than 35,000 people in the United States and killed more than 20,000.

Dr. Ron Sable of Cook County Hospital's AIDS clinic in Chicago said the AMA policy was hastily developed.

"The focus on testing as the key to AIDS control diverts attention from the real needs of AIDS prevention and the care of AIDS patients," Sable said.

Army investigators take pictures of crash site

From Staff and Wire Reports

FORT HOOD — Army investigators Tuesday drew a diagram and took pictures of the site where 10 reservists and National Guardsmen — including two Midlanders — were killed in a helicopter crash Monday morning.

Investigators from Fort Rucker, Ala., and the 5th Army in San Antonio, were logging where each metal scrap fell over the 1½ acres site where the crash occurred during a two-week training exercise.

Killed in the crash were Spec. 4 Henry Salcido, 33, and Staff Sgt. Cecil B. Little, 39, both of Midland, passengers in a Bell Textron UH-1H Iroquois "Huey" helicoptor.

Fort Hood spokespersons could provide no civilian occupations or other information about the pair this morning.

Fort Hood-based Maj. George Creach said Tuesday he is uncertain how long the on-site investigation will last, but he expects it will take at least six weeks. Creach said investigators have noted on a grid each piece of wreckage on the half-acre site.

Also killed when the helicoptor plunged into a clearing about 15 miles northwest of Killeen were eight other men from units based outsided of Texas.

The Midland victims were members of Company A, 111th Engineer Battalion, 49th Armored Division of the Texas National Guard, said Jim Parker, a unit spokesman.

The rest of the victims were from 353rd Engineer Group in Oklahoma City, and 489th Engineer Battalion, based in Little Rock, Ark., said Maj. William Coleman, spokesman for the 49th Armored Division.

The 10 were participating in training manuevers, called Starburst '87, that included about 13,000 Texas National Guard 49th Armored Division soldiers and 5,000 soldiers of Army reserve support units.

Army officials said the helicopter was slightly above tree-top level before it crashed within 1½ miles of the military installation's western boundary.

The crash site has been sealed off until the investigation is complete, at which time the wreckage will be taken to Fort Rucker.

The exercises began June 13 and are scheduled to end Friday.

Soldier dies when tank explodes at Fort Hood

FORT HOOD (AP) — A tank taking part in a military exercise was hit by artillery fire from another tank and exploded, and one National Guardsman was killed, officials said today.

At least five people were reported injured in the accident, the second at the Starburst '87 maneuvers this week.

Sgt. Roger Allen of the Fort Hood Public Affairs Office said an M-60 tank blew up just before midnight Tuesday, killing a member of the Texas National Guard's 49th Armored Division.

One of the injured guardsmen was hospitalized in serious condition, but the other four guardsmen were released after treatment, he said.

Earlier this week, 10 reservists and National Guardsmen were killed in a helicopter crash.

Kidnappers free defense minister's son; Glass stillheld

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Kidnappers today released the son of Lebanon's defense minister but held on to U.S. journalist Charles Glass, who was seized with him a week ago.

Ali Osseiran, 40, and his driver, Suleiman Salman, the third person captured June 17, arrived at the Osseirans' home in the coastal town of Rmeileh at 7:30 a.m., said Afaf Osseiran Saidi, the freed man's sister.

Defense Minister Adel Osseiran told a news conference in south Lebanon's port city of Sidon: "Charles Glass is still alive. Efforts are continuing to obtain his release."

Asked whether he thinks Glass, a former ABC television correspondent from Los Angeles, will be released soon, the 82-year-old Osseiran said: "I hope so."

However, a police spokesman said: "It appears Mr. Glass has joined the list of foreign hostages in Lebanon despite Syria's pressure to free him."

The elder Osseiran had blamed the kidnappings on the Hezbollah, or Party of God. But the militant Shiite Moslem group issued a statement Tuesday denying it was involved in the abductions, which took place in a Hezbollah stronghold.

The Christian-controlled Voice of Lebanon radio station said the younger Osseiran and Salman arrived today in Rmeileh, 19 miles south of Beirut, in Osseiran's white Volvo. The three men had been traveling in the Volvo last Wednesday in southern Beirut when 14 kidnappers stopped the car and seized them.

Ali Osseiran left Rmeileh today with his sister for "a rest" at the family's home in Bramieh, a Shiite village 22 miles south of Beirut, the family said.

When Osseiran was asked about Glass' whereabouts, he paused and then sadly replied: "I don't know."

But a bodyguard, who declined to be named, told The Associated Press that Ali had dinner with Glass Tuesday night before the release.

The bodyguard said he was not at liberty to say where Glass was being held or give further details.

AIDS

"I was also sorry that there was a failure to discuss in any way the responsibilities of medical personnel to care for people with AIDS."

Dr. Marian Craighill, an alternate AMA delegate from Boston, said she was glad there was no call for AIDS testing of marriage license applicants.

"The marriage license idea makes absolutely no sense epidemiologically," she said. "The vast majority of people applying for marriage licenses these days already have been cohabitating, and the population segments most exposed to intravenous drug abuse and other AIDS hazards are the least likely to seek marriage in the first place."

The AMA paper called for education of elementary and young adults on how AIDS is spread — usually through sex or sharing of contaminated hypodermic needles — and how it can be prevented.

Dr. Alan R. Nelson, chairman of the AMA board of trustees, said doctors can help school boards incorporate such material into curriculums. "Whatever the process, it is important that physicians be involved," he said.

The delegates also called for:

— Routine AIDS testing at clinics treating drug abuse and sexually transmitted disease, unless the patient objects.

— Creation of a commission of national, state and local leaders to develop a consensus on how best to fight AIDS.

— Greater educational efforts aimed at doctors and the public, including voluntary media guidelines for public service announcements about AIDS.

— More federal funding for testing, counseling and research to determine the most effective counseling methods. The trustees said the $1 billion expected to be appropriated by Congress for 1988 will not be enough.

Also Tuesday, AMA delegates voted in favor of a ban on smoking on all U.S. commercial aircraft and endorsed legislation setting the minimum age for purchasing tobacco products at 21.

GAS

"Resolution of take-or-pay claims has been the primary point keeping pipelines from accepting FERC 436 settlements," explained Dave Presley, president of Colony Energy Corp., Midland.

Presley discounts the chances of gas being shut in as a result of the court decision "unless a company decides to shut-in an entire decision as Transco recently did to call FERC's bluff on open access."

The Associated Press reported that the appeals court took two days to hear arguments on 65 lawsuits challenging the FERC decision. It reviewed 85 briefs totaling 2,000 pages and bearing the names of 225 lawyers. The court, in a footnote, commented on the "rich lode" of benefits for lawyers from natural gas regulation.

The judges questioned the "voluntary" nature of pipelines' decision to open access for third-party transportation of gas. "When a condemned man is given the choice between the noose and the firing squad, we do not ordinarily say that he has 'voluntarily' chosen to be hanged," said Williams' majority opinion, written for himself and Judge Robert Bork.

In addition, the opinion criticized the "CD turnback" portion of the FERC rule — the contract demand reduction mechanism — that permits utilities to reduce the amount of gas they have contracted to buy from a pipeline if the pipeline refuses to transport natural gas it does not own.

Tamara Young-Allen of FERC said Tuesday that the commission had no immediate comment. However a public briefing was scheduled for Wednesday afternoon by the agency.

SSC

Officials from San Angelo and Odessa said Tuesday they were confused about the request for more money.

And Funk added that he did not understand why the commission's called today's meeting after the June 8 meeting where the group ended the quest to bring the multi-billion dollar physics lab to West Texas.

"The city of San Angelo will not spend any more money and as far as we're concerned we voted a legal vote...I don't know where they're coming from in this other area," Funk said.

San Angelo will support the state's choice of Dallas and Amarillo as proposed SSC sites, Funk said.

Carter also said he did not understand why the commission voted again today.

"There was a fair and just vote taken at the last meeting. A decision was reached. I do not approve of going back and trying to generate some additional votes to get that verdict changed."

BUDGET

Gov. Bill Clements has pledged to veto any tax increase greater than $2.9 billion and strongly opposes any income tax.

Pointing out that the bill increases higher education spending by $866 million from current levels, Senate Finance Committee Chairman Grant Jones said it might demonstrate that Texas is "rebuilding our commitment to higher education."

Meanwhile, Clements indicated he is not strongly interested in a plan that would have the state borrow its way out of debt. That proposal, first discussed at a Dallas meeting Sunday, involves a $1.9 billion bond package that would cover Texas' $1 billion deficit for fiscal 1987, the recent $700 million reduction in estimated available revenues and about $200 million in other debits. Proceeds from a state-run lottery would back the bonds.

The plan came forward as an alternative to a $2.6 billion, lottery-backed bond proposal to finance the state highway program. The governor said only the highway bond plan is being discussed "in depth" by state leaders.

"At this point, in my judgment, there is no other option being seriously considered," he said. "There may be other options. But at this point, they're not on the table and they're not up for discussion."

Lewis confirmed that leaders are talking about both bond proposals, neither of which he supports. "If this is a way we can get out that's acceptable by everybody, we'll do it that way," Lewis said.

Rep. Mike Toomey, who attended the meeting in Dallas Sunday, said Highway Commissioner Bob Lanier proposed the plan to divert attention from the highway bond plan. "I do not think it was an idea that carried much weight," Toomey, R-Houston, said.

Lanier said he left the meeting with the understanding that both options would remain on the table pending completion of a statewide public survey to be undertaken in the next 10 days. He compared the deficit-bond plan to a business seeking a bank loan to cover the debts of a firm it acquired.

Hobby called both bond plans unrealistic ways to balance the budget. The state would have nothing to show for its investment, he said, if it used bonds to cover the deficit.

"The classic use of bonds is to build a courthouse, library or prison or whatever, some long-life facility," Hobby said.

FUNDS

Along with the Lamesa Road project, six Midland groups and six city departments lined up before the council Tuesday night asking for a piece of the $1.2 million federal pie. The request totaled more than $2 million.

The City Council will decide who gets what by Aug. 11 and submit their applications to HUD Aug. 31.

Other groups requesting money included:

The Midland Economic Development Corporation asked for $350,000 to continue a revolving loan fund for small businesses began by a $161,000 CDBG grant last year.

The Midland Association for Retarded Citizens requested $50,000 to buy a building at 1503 Montgomery to house a vocational training center.

Taylor Park Child Care asked for $15,000 to buy a deep freeze, coffee machine and playground equipment.

Midland Project Self Sufficiency asked for $60,000 to hire a director to assist single parents out of the poverty cycle and provide transportation and day care for struggling parents.

Clean Midland requested $50,000 to help clean up illegal dump sites and clear yards of low income persons.

The Black Advisory Council asked for $178,000 to $350,000 to buy a building to house a senior citizens' and tutorial program.

The remaining requests were from city departments including:

Midland City Code Enforcement proposed to use $171,720 to remove 100 abandoned homes and clear lots.

Midland Public Works requested $100,000 to pave streets on the eastside.

City Fire Department asked for $400,000 to replace a 1951 fire station at 200 E. New Jersey.

Housing Rehabilitation aid to use $75,000 to help renovate homes of the elderly and low income.

A remaining $10,000 would be used as a contingency fund in case other projects run out of money before completion and $113,050 will be used to administer the federal monies.

Men burned when scaffold hits line

From Staff Reports

Two brothers were injured this morning after they inadvertently contacted a high power line near the scaffold where they were working.

Jose Ramos, 23, and Jesus Ramos, 21, were injured about 9:30 a.m. near an alley in the 700 block of West Scharbauer Drive, according to Cpl. Jim White, police spokesman.

The painting scaffold was positioned between a fence and Hillcrest Manor, and just below power lines, bystanders said.

White said the men, who were painting a building, apparently accidentally pushed the scaffold into a 7,200 volt power line owned by Texas Electric Service Company.

Both men suffered burns, and late this morning were undergoing emergency treatment at Midland Memorial Hospital, a spokeswoman there said.

She said the conditions of the men were not available.

"I think it's just absolute nonsense," Clements said of the probe by Democrat Mattox. "He's a very partisan person. He sees an opportunity to make headlines."

Mattox said he has gone out of his way to avoid politics. "I've had excellent dealings with the governor. I hope this doesn't damage that situation," Mattox said. "There's no doubt the governor has responsibility, speaking for the citizens of the state. It's difficult to do that when his integrity and credibility are in question."

In its June 9 edition, the Reporter-Telegram incorrectly attributed a statement to Commissioner Scott Welch regarding the drainage problem on County Road 1212.

The statement which read, "The city's not going to do anything (to help alleviate the problem) because it's not bothering them," should have been attributed to an unidentified county official.

EL PASO MARRIOTT BECOMES A RESORT

The management and staff of the El Paso Marriott announced that the hotel will become a full fledged resort every weekend between Memorial Day and Labor Day.

"Now people can afford to go on vacation without the hassle of a lengthy trip," said Mike Shoffit, General Manager. "Our hotel is ideal for an El Paso weekend get-a-way, as we have everything necessary for fun, relaxation and recreation all under one roof."

The El Paso Marriott Hotel features a large indoor/outdoor swimming pool, exercise room, whirlpool and dry sauna, in addition to a putting green, and volleyball games. Golf and tennis are available nearby at Vista Hills Country Club. Shopping is another option with convenience to the Cielo Vista and Bassett Center Shopping Malls.

Two fine restaurants and lounge are available to serve even the most discriminating tastes. The Las Cascada restaurant serves breakfast, lunch and dinner daily featuring Mexican specialties with modest prices. Chatfield's restaurant provides fine cuisine serving dinner only. Chatfield's portions prove "Bigger is Better". McGinty's lounge is considered "the" place in town for dancing and cocktails after a rough day of sunning and relaxing.

A Friday and Saturday night check-in will set the stage for a resort like weekend with rates starting at just $52 per room. Whether it is high up on the sixth floor overlooking the city, a deluxe king poolside or a luxurious suite, the El Paso Marriott has the perfect way for you to spend your summer weekend.

Call 779-3300 or toll free 1-800-228-9290 to make your reservation at El Paso's newest weekend resort!

Hsing Hsing, left, the male giant panda at the National Zoo in Washington frolics with Ling-Ling during mating season in 1985. Zoo officials announced Tuesday that Ling-Ling gave birth to a healthy four-ounce cub.

Second cub may have been stillborn

By MICHELE COPPOLA

WASHINGTON (AP) — Ling-Ling, the National Zoo's female giant panda who gave birth to an apparently healthy cub, may have also given birth to a second, stillborn cub, zoo officials said today.

Zoo spokesman Robert Hoage said the healthy 4-ounce cub born Tuesday was "doing fine" and added, without elaborating, that a second cub may also have been born.

"We do have some additional developments," he said. "There is some evidence that a second cub was born. It may have been stillborn."

As for the squealing cub being nurtured by its mother, zoo spokesman Mike Morgan said earlier:

"So far it looks good. The mother has been giving the cub appropriate attention. We're not absolutely sure that it has nursed but it has been in a position where it could have apparently."

If it lives, the cub will be the first panda to survive captive birth in the United States.

While thrilled with the birth, which occurred at 3:33 a.m. Tuesday, officials were careful about gauging the chances of the cub's survival because two of Ling-Ling's previous offspring died.

"People are walking around smiling, pleased that it is going well, but there is a lot of apprehension," Morgan said. "We don't want to be overly optimistic."

The 18-year-old Ling-Ling is the only giant panda in the United States to have given birth, and the new offspring could become the first panda cub in the United States to survive. The 250-pound Ling-Ling and her mate, Hsing-Hsing, 17, were a gift from China in 1972 after President Nixon's historic visit to Beijing.

The only other pandas now in the United States are a pair on loan from China to the Bronx Zoo in New York City.

"We are delighted and pleased to hear the news," said Liu Haiming, first secretary for the Chinese Embassy.

Officials were monitoring the mother and cub via closed-circuit television. They won't know its sex until they can get close to it and do not intend to interfere any time soon unless something goes wrong. Four ounces is the average weight for panda cubs born in captivity.

"The mother is cuddling, showing maternal care. As long as it goes well, I think it will be several weeks before we even attempt to get near the baby," said zoo spokesman Robert Hoage.

The public won't be able to directly view the mother and cub for several months, but visitors to the zoo can watch via the TV monitor.

A cub born to Ling-Ling in 1983 died of a bronchial infection a few hours after birth and another cub was stillborn in 1984.

Zoo officials will wait until the sex is determined and for the zoo director to return from a trip to China before deciding on a name.

PHILADELPHIA TODAY

The day was cloudy, with showers beginning at 3 p.m. and continuing into the evening.

Jacob Hiltzheimer "went twice to church," but did not note sermon texts.

CONFEDERATION TODAY

Two or more deputies from Massachusetts, New York and Virginia, and Mr. Kean from South Carolina stayed on in New York waiting for Congress to have a quorum and resume its session. John Armstrong was on his way from Pennsylvania to join them in their wait.

CONVENTION TODAY

The Convention was in recess after its fourth full week of work. The week just past had begun with a masterful speech by Alexander Hamilton on the need for an effective central government, which seemed to have impressed all of the delegates and convinced few if any of them. Then, after a thorough analysis of the weaknesses of the Paterson Plan by James Madison — it had rejected that plan for patching up the Articles of Confederation — reported the Virginia Plan as amended, and began the second round of discussions on the Virginia Plan.

One day after changing "national government" to "Government of the United States," it had again discussed whether to patch up the Articles or provide a new government, reaffirmed its decision to do the latter, and resumed on the Virginia Plan.

DELEGATES TODAY

William Samuel Johnson (Conn.) worshiped at St. Paul's, dined at City Tavern, and spent 5 shillings in miscellaneous expense.

George Washington dined at Robert Morris' and spent the evening drinking tea at the home of Samuel Meredith, a Pennsylvania delegate in Congress.

Charles C. Pinckney (S.C.) and his second wife, Mary Stead Pinckney, observed their first wedding anniversary.

Massachusetts delegate Rufus King wrote the state treasurer asking for pay owed him.

LOOKING BACK
Where Were the Wives?

Since Mary Stead Pinckney had accompanied her husband to Philadelphia, she and the general could celebrate their anniversary together. However, what of the other wives?

Of the 47 delegates from out of town, 38 were married. Of these, at least seven, perhaps nine, brought their wives with them.

In addition to Pinckney, those delegates who brought their wives were Elbridge Gerry and Rufus King of Massachusetts, Alexander Hamilton of New York, William Churchill Houston of New Jersey, Edmund Randolph of Virginia, and Pierce Butler of South Carolina. Luther Martin of Maryland and John Rutledge of South Carolina may have brought their wives. William Few and William Pierce, of Georgia, both members of the Congress meeting in New York, brought their wives to that city, but not to Philadelphia.

Mrs. Hamilton returned to New York in July when her husband temporarily left the Convention; Mrs. King and Mrs. Gerry returned to New York in late July and stayed there, and Mrs. Butler, after a week's exposure to Philadelphia's meteorological and societal climate, went on to New York. Mrs. Houston probably left with her husband early in June. Mrs. Randolph brought the couple's children, including one newborn, and Mrs. Gerry brought her infant daughter.

The fact that the three most recently married delegates all brought their wives is probably not coincidence. That the Pinckney, Butler and Hamilton families had relatives who could care for children in their parents' absence is suggestive. So is the fact that Houston is the only nearby delegate to bring his wife, and he was in such poor health (tuberculosis) that Mrs. Houston may have insisted on accompanying him.

Many wives (Mrs. Strong, Mrs. Ellsworth, Mrs. Davie) had young families. Others, like Mrs. Sherman, apparently were needed at home to keep an eye on the family farm or business. Still others, like Martha Washington, had grandchildren and other extended family to watch over. Others may simply have preferred to stay home.

Contra leaders on 'suspicious persons' list

NATION

WASHINGTON (AP) — Names of Nicaraguan Contra leaders, some of their supporters and others who resupplied them are on a U.S. Customs Service computerized list of suspicious persons, according to a Customs document.

The document was prepared for Rep. Charles Rangel, chairman of the House narcotics committee, who is investigating alleged links between illegal drugs and the Nicaraguan rebels.

"This initial check provides information that warrants further investigation about possible tie-ins between the Contras, the individuals carrying out the Contra supply missions, and drug smuggling activities," Rangel said Tuesday.

The New York Democrat said he submitted 38 names to Customs, based on news reports and information from other congressional probes about the possible drug link. Customs responded with a memo confirming that 23 of those individuals and a seafood company were on the computer, but did not say why they were in the data base.

The Customs response was obtained Tuesday by The Associated Press with the 24 entries blacked out.

Rangel and the agency would not identify the computer entries, but the AP obtained the list. It includes a number of people who have been linked in news reports to allegations of drug smuggling by the Contras or by aircrews that have flown supplies to the rebels.

The Treasury Enforcement Communications Systems (TECS) computer lists individuals and corporations that are "known to be violators or suspected to be in violation of customs laws or other related laws," according to Customs Service spokesman Ed Kittredge. He said the computer also includes vehicles, aircraft and vessels used in such violations.

Kittredge added, "It's a lookout system. If your name is in TECS and you come through they're going to talk to you, and go over you pretty carefully."

He said Customs does not release the entries because they are law enforcement records.

"Customs reports that for 24 of the 38 individuals or companies...there is 'positive' information on the Customs computer, indicating previous interest by Customs in these people or companies," Rangel said.

The memo to Rangel, dated June 17, was signed by William Rosenblatt, acting commissioner of customs.

The memo said that in the absence of personal identifiers such as Social Security numbers, birth dates and corporate locations, some of the information that was turned up could be flawed.

The memo said the special agent in charge of the Customs office in Miami has investigated drug smuggling claims by a pilot, Michael Tolliver. Tolliver has said in interviews that in March 1986, he flew weapons to the Contras and returned to the United States with drugs, landing at Homestead Air Force Base in Florida.

"Our investigation of this matter included interviews of several individuals and sources, who provided information refuting Mr. Tolliver's claims. Consequently, we were unable to substantiate the allegations," the memo said.

In the list of computer entries obtained by the AP, here are those previously named in news accounts:

— Tolliver.

— Adolfo Calero, a top civilian Contra leader who testified before the congressional Iran-Contra committees, and who travels often between his Miami home and Central America.

— George Morales, a champion speed boat racer, who pleaded guilty to drug smuggling charges and is currently in prison. He has said in interviews that the CIA and other government agencies looked the other way while his planes smuggled guns to the Contra rebels in Central America and returned with loads of cocaine and marijuana.

— Frank Moss, the pilot of a DC-4 seized in Florida last March by local and federal drug officers. Papers on the plane, reportedly belonging to Moss, contained the telephone number of a secret U.S. intelligence operation in Honduras. They also contained the names and telephone numbers of top Contra leaders.

— John Hull, who has a ranch in Costa Rica near the Nicaraguan border. It has been reportedly used as a staging area for Contra operations. Congressional testimony indicated he received money from the Contras to buy food, clothing and supplies.

Fort Lauderdale to end spring break tradition

FORT LAUDERDALE, Fla. (AP) — A tourism committee in this city long synonymous with spring break has given up on trying to bolster the faltering tradition among college students.

After a disastrous year when overall attendance was down by one-third and many hotels were half-empty at the height of the season, the Broward County Tourist Development Council's marketing-advertising committee voted unanimously Tuesday not to advertise on campuses.

The committee instead supported the tourist council's continuing advertising campaign to lure young professionals and families.

"We've lost spring break," said committee member James Painton. "If we try to advertise (it), we are committing suicide."

"I can't believe we can contemplate spending one penny to advertise spring break when we need money in other areas," committee Chairman George Harris said.

Spring break in Fort Lauderdale became a college rite after the 1960 movie "Where The Boys Are." Every spring, thousands of students packed bars and beaches for a few days of sun and often drunken revelry.

Council Chairwoman Nicki Grossman said she expected the full panel to endorse the committee's recommendation, perhaps as early as Thursday.

Last Titan 2's removed

JUDSONIA, Ark. (AP) — The last of the nation's Titan 2 missiles has been removed from its silo, ending an era in U.S. military history.

The missile, which had been deactiviated last month, was removed Tuesday, said Capt. James T. Smith, spokesman for the 308th Strategic Missile Wing at Little Rock Air Force Base. Its booster was placed on a truck and was taken away.

The missiles, now considered obsolete, had served as a key ground-based element of the United State's nuclear triad since their deployment in the 1960s. The nation once had 54 of them poised underground in Arkansas, Kansas and Arizona. Each state had 18. They were tipped with the largest hydrogen bombs in the U.S. arsenal.

The Titan 2's were previously removed from their silos in Kansas and Arizona, Smith said.

The 103-foot missile stood vertically inside the concrete, 165-foot-deep silo. The top of the silo was shielded by a 740-ton steel-and-concrete lid that could be rolled away on tracks.

The SALT II treaty requires that the silos be left open for six months so that Soviet photography from satellites can verify that the missiles have been removed. The control consoles also must be displayed above ground for several weeks after they have been removed from the control centers within the silos so that the Soviets will have an opportunity to satisfy themselves that the United States is dismantling the Titan 2 system.

60 trapped at Gorge

CANON CITY, Colo. (AP) — Sixty tourists were stranded and had to make their way hundreds of feet up an emergency ladder when two cars jammed on the Incline Railway at the Royal Gorge.

No injuries were reported Tuesday in what company officials said was the first major mechanical failure in the 56-year-old rail ride, which takes tourists to the bottom of the 1,000-foot-deep gorge.

Ben Hart, Royal Gorge Bridge company marketing director, said the two cars were stranded about halfway down the incline when the main drive wheel failed, jamming the tow cable.

Unknown creature 'mystery' to residents

WOODBURY, N.J. (AP) — Mysterious roars and growls from the darkened woods have spurred residents to form search parties and police to try to trap what may be a wild animal on the loose in the Pine Barrens.

"They think this is just another one of those incidents like the Jersey Devil," said Carol Davis on Tuesday, referring to the mythical creature said to have stalked the Pinelands for generations.

She and her husband, Allen, have been afraid to let their daughters play outside their Pittsgrove Township home, 15 miles south of Woodbury, after they heard the sounds and saw some type of large animal in the woods outside their home last week.

"It's not safe. It shouldn't stay out there," she said.

Police and state wildlife officials are trying to track down the mysterious animal causing the noises, which only are heard at night.

"I personally don't know what it is," said state police Detective Sgt. William Prato. "We've had reports of a large black cat with a large black tail."

Prato said it's possible that a panther could be combing the densely wooded sections of Vineland and Pittsgrove Township near the Maurice River. But it's also possible the sounds disturbing residents since early June could be from wild dogs or domestic cats in heat, he said.

"We've never really had anything like this before," he said.

Vineland Police Capt. James A. Forcinito said investigators have found tracks, but are unable to determine if they are from dogs, foxes, raccoons or possibly bears.

Forcinito also said there have been three reports since January of household animals ripped apart in Vineland by an unknown creature. "People are speculating it's a (wild) cat because of the sightings," he said.

The Davises caught a quick look at the animal June 14 after hearing the sounds from a patch of woods behind their home.

"We walked into the woods and I saw something hit the ground after falling out of a tree," Mrs. Davis said.

Often sexual abuse of child involves person child respects

EDITOR'S NOTE — The author, a former Associated Press writer and investigative producer for NBC-TV, is a veteran crime reporter. For this series, he talked with 400 or more people, victims and perpetrators, as well as experts in criminology.

On Your Guard

There's a great deal we've learned in recent years about the sexual abuse of children.

We know that, like rape, it can have profound traumatic results, creating lifelong problems for its child-victims.

We know that for many years we were deluded by the myth that sexual abusers of children were dirty old men, or strangers prowling the streets for innocent victims.

We know that the people most likely to sexually abuse children are their own family members, friends, neighbors or acquaintances.

Child-victims almost always feels boxed-in and even blame themselves for what happens.

A 44-year-old father in Baltimore recalled an experience with a choirmaster when he was 12.

"I never said anything to my parents. Who would have believed the choirmaster should do such a thing? I was so deeply ashamed that I had never spoken more than 20 years later when my own son was in the choir and this same church member tried to fondle him. But my boy told me and we were able to remove the man and make sure he would not manage to be alone with children."

One of the more heart-breaking aspects of this kind of abuse is that it often involves someone the child has been raised to respect, trust and obey: an aunt, cousin, teacher, church leader, scout master, doctor, baby sitter, counselor at a day care center, older brother or sister.

What is sexual abuse of a child?

First, it is not the reasonable, responsible physical contact between an adult and a child that is a natural expression of love and fondness.

It is when the adult or older child makes sexual contact with the child for the adult's gratification. It means physical as well as non-physical contact.

Force is a key part of it. That doesn't mean the child has to be chained down. More often, there's subtle force, of a psychological nature. A child may be bribed with gifts or candy or money. He can be threatened, told he'll be all alone and no longer loved. He can be told he is to blame for what happens. He can be told if he doesn't keep the secret and cooperate, his family, mother or father, will be hurt.

The result is that the child rarely reveals what happens to him or her.

In the United States in 1985, according to a survey by the National Committee for Prevention of Child Abuse (NCPCA), there were 303,192 cases of sexual abuse of children.

Girls have been the most frequent victims, but various studies indicate tht sexual abuse of boys has been increasing.

Child sexual abuse laws vary from state to state. Actually, very few of the sexual offenses against children are reported, let alone prosecuted.

Incest, for example, sex between family members, usually takes place in the privacy of a home. There are no witnesses to back up the child's testimony. If there is no one to corroborate the story, if the other parent isn't prepared to support the child's allegations, the child is pushed toward retracting the story. And that contributes to the myth that children lie about or fantasize sexual offenses.

It is the kind of offense that knows no racial, economic, political, cultural, religious, educational or geographical barriers.

Here are some guidelines for children, developed by the NCPCA:

— You need to know that your body belongs to you and no one has the right to touch you without permission. You have the right to say "No" to some adult who is touching you in a way you don't like, even if the touch seems accidental.

— There are different kinds of touching. There's the touch that feels good — hugs and comforting touches. And there's the touch that feels bad — pinching and hitting. Then, there's the touch that feels "funny" — like some adult or older child touching your private parts, the parts that are covered when you wear a bathing suit.

"Who would have believed the choirmaster should do such a thing? I was so deeply ashamed that I had never spoken more than 20 years later when my own son was in the choir and this same church member tried to fondle him."

If that happens, tell the person, "I don't like that." And run away and tell someone.

— If someone is touching your private parts or trying to get you to do something that feels "funny," whether it's a parent or another relative or good friend, you should tell your other parent or some trusted adult.

— If someone wants you to keep some secret, don't do it. No adult or older person has the right to ask you to keep some secret about how he or she is behaving with you.

Of course, there are good secrets — like a surprise birthday party. That's a lot different than the kind of secret that you are supposed to keep forever and that's about doing things that make you feel bad.

You can always tell a person who asks you to keep such secrets, "No, my family doesn't allow me to keep bad secrets."

Thursday: Robbery

Dogs lose jobs because they had too much fun

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A couple of part-German shepherds have lost their jobs as guard dogs at a historic restoration because they'd rather frolic than fight with intruders.

"They sit around a lot," said Julia Hurn, associate director of the Cultural Heritage Foundation. "They chase squirrels. They play with children. They eat chili burgers. They do bark...but it's more like a warm, welcoming bark."

"Crystal and Moose are alert, and give the impression that they are patroling," Hurn said, but it turns out all they want is a good time.

One morning, a maintenance worker found the dogs frolicking with a group of teen-age boys who had climbed the six-foot-high fence around the eight Victorian homes. "The dogs were barking all right — for joy," Hurn said.

Humans now will guard the houses, she said.

Hurn hopes someone will adopt Moose, 7, and Crystal, 4, but said "we don't want anyone to take them thinking they will be guard dogs. They are too gentle and loving."

Boone again mentioned for PTL post

Pat Boone

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Pat Boone, squeaky-clean crooner of the 1950s, pitchman for milk and baptizer of born-again Christians in his backyard pool, has twice been mentioned as a possible new leader for scandal-wracked PTL.

Attorney Melvin Belli, representing ousted PTL founders Jim and Tammy Bakker, suggested Monday that Boone, a charismatic Christian, take over the 518,000-member ministry temporarily. Belli said Boone has "no axe to grind."

Boone, in a statement issued through his manager, Tim Swift, said no representatives of the Bakkers or of the Rev. Jerry Falwell, who took over PTL after Bakker's downfall in a sex scandal, have contacted him.

Boone said he hopes "Jerry and Jim and their attorneys will get together in a room, close the doors, pray and not come out until they have a meeting of their hearts and minds and put the whole thing to rest."

Last month, a published report said PTL contributors had contacted Boone as a possible replacement for Falwell.

But Boone said no contributors had contacted him directly and that Falwell was doing a "great job." He also said he would "cringe to be even asked to shoulder that kind of responsibility."

Boone, an entertainer for more than 30 years, has long had a wholesome image. A 1956 album cover showed him on the Columbia University campus in his trademark white buck shoes and argyle socks.

"You know, there's something about me that makes a lot of people want to throw up," he said in a 1976 interview with Rolling Stone magazine.

Boone, a Florida native raised in Tennessee, had hits with "Two Hearts," "Love Letters in the Sand," and "April Love."

His versions of Fats Domino's "Ain't That A Shame" and Little Richard's "Tutti Frutti" gave him a reputation for diluting black rhythm and blues for a still racially divided record-buying audience.

He also had a variety show on television that ran three years. No liquor or cigarette advertisements were accepted.

"April Love" was the theme to a movie by the same name. In it, Boone's reputation as too much of a good guy really took hold. He refused to kiss co-star Shirley Jones.

He did not kiss the leading woman in the next two films, and by the time he planted one on co-star Diane Baker in the 1959 "Journey To The Center of The Earth," it made news.

During that time, he wrote the best-seller "Twixt Twelve and Twenty," a book of tips for growing up good. He admitted that as a teenager, he sometimes hung out with friends, smoking cigarettes and drinking beer.

Boone's photo in front of Columbia was no white-buck shuck. He actually was attending the university, in case his career flagged. He graduated in 1958 with a bachelor's degree in English and speech.

Boone's career faltered in the 1960s with the advent of the Beatles.

In 1963, he starred in the movie flop "The Main Attraction," in which he bedded down with the heroine. He began making Las Vegas appearances, resumed drinking, and started telling off-color jokes to audiences.

There followed a series of bad investments, and Boone lost $2,500 on one visit to Las Vegas casinos. His marriage to the former Shirley Foley, daughter of country-western singer Red Foley, began to falter. The couple's daughters, Cherry, Lindy, Debby and Laurie, were beginning to feel the pressure.

That year, a friend, Harald Bredesen, visited the troubled Boone home and prayed with the family. Boone said his life changed. And quickly.

Old show business pals started to make Boone the butt of their routines, calling him "Mr. Clean."

Vietnam War deserter returns home

WEST RUTLAND, Vt. (AP) — A Vietnam War deserter who returned to the United States "expecting the worst" after 17 years in exile embraced his ailing father a free man, and said others who went AWOL should come home, too.

"Come back and face them. It is not worth it," Douglas G. Beane, 40, said of his years on the run, after his release Tuesday from Quantico Marine Base, Va. The Marine Corps on Monday decided against a court-martial.

Beane, who surrendered June 9 at the urging of his Australian wife in hopes of seeing his ill father, arrived at his parents' home Tuesday night and walked across the lawn into the arms of his mother, Christine, and father, Donald.

The elder Beane, walking stiffly because of circulatory problems, said that he at first was angry at his son for deserting two weeks before his tour of duty in Vietnam was to end. But, he added, "I've forgiven him."

"I used to dream about Rutland and the Green Mountains for years and years," Douglas Beane said. "Then they turned into nightmares" because of fear he would never again return to his native state.

Standing in front of the home, he said: "It looks all the same, the same as my dreams, except it's real now."

Beane was discharged under an other-than-honorable classification after the Marines decided against a court-martial on desertion and other charges, sparing him a possible 18 years' hard labor, said his lawyer, Maj. David Henderson.

Beane faced charges of dealing in the black market and threatening to kill a fellow Marine when he deserted, and has admitted the offenses, said a spokesman for Quantico, where Beane had been held since his return.

Henderson said the decision not to prosecute apparently resulted from a belief that Beane had suffered enough and "the Marine Corps has other things to do."

Sgt. Dean Chamberlain, the Quantico spokesman, said Beane was discharged "for the good of the service."

However, Henderson said the case is not a signal that other Vietnam deserters can come home and all will be forgiven. "Each case is judged on its own merits," he said.

Vietnam War deserter Douglas Beane, left, with his Marine counsel Major David Henderson, talk to reporters Tuesday outside the Quantico Marine base in Quantico, Va., after the Marine Corps set him free.

$1 trillion budget OK'd by Democrats, faces Senate, Reagan

WASHINGTON (AP) — Democrats pressing for final congressional approval of a $1 trillion federal budget for 1988 already are training their fire on the spending plan's most formidable obstacle: President Reagan.

By a 215-201 vote Tuesday, the Democratic-led House approved the budget, which includes $19.3 billion in new taxes, along with military spending cuts and domestic program increases — all opposed by the president.

The Senate was expected to follow suit today, although Democrats hold a slim 54-46 majority there and the tally was predicted to be close.

Reagan repeatedly has denigrated the Democratic package. Democratic leaders concede that if his opposition continues, they would be unlikely to find the two-thirds majority needed to override future vetoes.

Many congressional Democrats hurled verbal brickbats at the president Tuesday, belittling him for his seemingly unshakeable stance that he would veto legislation containing new taxes or with different spending priorities than his own.

"I must say I don't have much hope for the president...with respect to congressional budgets," complained Senate Majority Leader Robert Byrd, D-W.Va., on the Senate floor.

Other lawmakers attributed devious motives to the president's persistence in opposing new taxes.

"What do you do when you're president, your popularity is plummeting, the Senate has gone to the other party, the Irangate hearings grind on day after day?" asked Rep. Charles Schumer, D-N.Y., during the House budget debate. "You try to create a smokescreen with your favorite issue, the budget."

"Just because the president wants to shift attention away from his other troubles, we can't let ourselves be distracted from the need to put our fiscal house in order," said Rep. William H. Gray III, chairman of the House Budget Committee.

Reagan repeatedly has said that increasing taxes is the wrong way to cure the government's chronic deficits. On Tuesday, he told the National Federation of Independent Business that with its budget plan, "Congress has declared war on American jobs and I'm not going to stand for it."

Rep. Bill Frenzel, R-Minn., said that the Democratic budget's reliance on taxes shows "the House is obviously ruled by the dead hand of Walter Mondale." He referred to the 1984 Democratic presidential candidate's call for higher taxes during his unsuccessful campaign.

Minimum drinking age guarenteed in ruling

By DAN FREEDMAN

Hearst News Service

WASHINGTON — The Supreme Court Tuesday guaranteed a minimum drinking age of 21 for most of the nation by affirming Congress's right to withhold highway funds from states that do not comply with the age limit.

The 7-2 ruling upholds the National Minimum Drinking Age Amendment, passed by Congress in 1984 amid concern that deaths involving drunk driving were on the upswing, especially among 18-to 21-year-olds.

Within a year after Congress passed the amendment, a number of states had raised the drinking age and safety experts attributed a decline in alcoholic related deaths — from 2,165 three years earlier to 1,430 among 16- to 19-year-olds in 1985 — to the states' actions and a greater awareness of the issue.

In its Tuesday ruling, the high court said the federal government, while still not able to order states to change their drinking ages, can legitimately hold back funding without violating a constitutional guarantee giving states the right to regulate liquor within their boundaries.

The decision means that states maintaining a drinking age of less than 21 will lose millions of federal dollars in highway construction and maintenance funds. This year, the federal government has witheld $33.9 million from four states — South Dakota, Ohio, Wyoming and Colorado — that have not passed laws establishing a 21-year-old drinking age.

South Dakota, which brought the legal challenge that resulted in Tuesday's ruling, lost $4 million last year because its law permits 19-year-olds to buy beer with 3.2 percent alcohol content.

Wyoming, with a minimum drinking age of 19, is losing $4.5 million this year.

"Citizens of Wyoming become adults at age 19," said Karen Byrne, assistant attorney general in Cheyenne, Wyoming, and author of a brief filed by eight states supporting South Dakota's position. "It was consistent that they be allowed to drink and enjoy the responsibility of being grown up."

Advocates of tough laws for drunk driving, however, hailed the decision as a dramatic boost for safety on the nation's highways.

"The 7-2 vote indicates the court's strong support for what our research has been showing for over a decade — that higher alcohol purchasing ages will alleviate the loss of life among young people who are trying to learn how to drive and how to drink at the same time," said John Cook of the Washington-based Insurance Institute for Highway Safety, an insurance industry research organization.

Last year, the South Dakota state legislature approved a 21-year-old drinking age law that was mandated to take effect if the Supreme Court ruled in the fashion that it did Tuesday. South Dakota officials say that the new state law may even enable them to recoup lost highway funds.

"Congress has acted indirectly under its spending power to encourage uniformity in the states' drinking ages," Chief Justice William Rehnquist wrote in the majority opinion. "We find this legislative effort within constitutional bounds even if Congress may not regulate drinking directly."

Joining Rehnquist were Justices Byron White, Thurgood Marshall, Harry Blackmun, Lewis F. Powell and Antonin Scalia. William Brennan and Sandra Day O'Connor authored dissenting opinions.

Taiwan now preparing for end of family rule

By DAN BIERS

TAIPEI, Taiwan (AP) — President Chiang Ching-kuo is easing some government controls in Taiwan in what is viewed as an attempt to solidify public support for his Nationalist Party before six decades of his family's rule comes to an end.

His father, Chiang Kai-shek, began the dynasty in 1928 in China and extended it to Taiwan in 1949 when the communists took over the mainland. He established a Nationalist government here, much to the resentment of native Taiwanese, and claimed to be the legitimate government of all China.

But while Chiang Ching-kuo has said he will step aside in three years and now is introducing a measure of democracy to Taiwan, the Nationalists are not seen as likely to allow any serious challenge to their ultimate power.

The Nationalists, also known as the Kuomintang (KMT), have gradually brought more native Taiwanese into the government — they make up 85 percent of the 19.5 million population — and the pace of change has quickened measurably in the past year.

Chiang, 77, allowed the formation in September of the first dissident party, composed primarily of native Taiwanese, since the Nationalists arrived.

He also announced that martial law imposed 38 years ago would be lifted and replaced by a national security law described by authorities as less stringent.

Some dissidents claim, however, that the security law is essentially the same as martial law.

Kuomintang officials say they also are considering changing the legislative system that now ensures the dominance of aging party supporters and lifting the ban on establishing new newspapers.

The pressure for political reform has come from an increasingly affluent and better educated local population, as well as from the United States, Taiwan's major trading partner and weapons supplier, observers say.

Ma Ying-jeou, deputy secretary-general of the Nationalist Party, said the rise of a powerful middle class means "we are now coming to an age where we can fend off the enemies of democracy by practicing more democracy in a gradual way."

Hu Fu, a political science professor at National Taiwan University, has said, however, that without change, "the whole situation will deteriorate."

Observers believe Chiang realizes the popular support gained by easing authoritarian rule will be critical for the next generation of Kuomintang leaders, the first without a member of his family at the helm.

Chiang is expected to leave politics when his term expires in three years, and has vowed that no relative will succeed him.

The president's younger brother, Chiang Wei-Kuo, heads the powerful National Security Council, but analysts say he is most likely there to forestall an army takeover and to safeguard family interests in the future.

The most visible change so far has been the emergence of the dissident Democratic Progressive Party, which won an impressive 21.6 percent of the vote in December elections for the Legislative Yuan, the highest lawmaking body.

The party has since organized several political demonstrations, emboldened other groups to speak out on a range of issues and enlivened debate in the Legislative Yuan, where some young Kuomintang members now challenge government policies.

Although very loud and very visible, the Democratic Progressive Party has had difficulty uniting various opposition factions and presenting a plan for the future.

But the dissident party chairman, David P.C. Chiang, said in an interview that the first order of business is changing the political system that ensures Kuomintang domination, particularly in the legislature.

More than two-thirds of the 321 members in the Legislative Yuan are aging lawmakers elected on the mainland four decades ago and frozen in office as representatives of mainland districts.

The Kumonintang steadfastly refuses to renounce its claim to the mainland, which remains a touchy subject for many native Taiwanese.

"We have an identity crisis in Taiwan," Professor Hu said, explaining that the elderly Kuomintang members remain attached to the mainland where they grew up while the Taiwan-born opposition leaders "don't have the central mission" of recapturing China.

Many dissidents are known to advocate a Taiwan independent of China, but the Democratic Progressive Party sidesteps the issue.

"There is no such necessity for (advocating independence) now," said Chiang, the opposition leader, who is no relation to the president.

"We have been in fact independent for several decades, no matter what you name it," he said, adding that the party has proposed self-determination to allow the people of Taiwan to determine their future.

Kuomintang members argue that a declaration of independence would further isolate Taiwan internationally and could lead to an attack by the Chinese communists, who claim the island is part of China.

Opposition denounces Korean leader

AP Laserphoto

Arriving in Seoul for talks on ending South Korean unrest is Kim Young-sam, leader of the Reunification Democratic Party.

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — Opposition leaders denounced President Chun Doo-hwan today after the collapse of talks on ending nationwide protests that have plunged the country into crisis. The opposition vowed to step up its campaign to oust the government.

The Reunification Democratic Party issued a tough statement after party chief Kim Young-sam met for three hours with Chun. The president had never met with Kim and the talks were a concession by Chun after two weeks of the worst political violence since he took power in 1980.

"We condemn the current regime's scheme to prolong its power and declare strongly to struggle together with the democratic forces to struggle for democratization in a peaceful and non-violent manner," Kim said in the statement after the meeting.

Opposition leaders said they would go ahead with plans for major protests against the government on Friday. Radical students have vowed to march on the presidential palace.

In southern Seoul today, about 1,000 workers, students and dissidents tried to stage a demonstration outside a railway station. But about 2,000 riot police hurling tear gas grenades repeatedly attacked the demonstraters and sent them fleeing. When they tried to reassemble they were dispersed by the police.

A U.S. envoy, Assistant Secretary of State Gaston Sigur, is in Seoul for a series of meetings. Roh Tae-woo, Chun's designated successor as president, met today with Sigur and the American envoy later visited Kim Dae-jung, an opposition leader who has been under house arrest in Seoul since April 8.

Roh said he told Sigur the government was committed to a political solution and compromise.

The opposition statement came after Chun and Kim failed to conclude a political agreement to resume debate on political reform and end the distrubances that have swept the country since June 10.

Chun told Kim he was willing to drop his April 13 decision suspending talks on revising the constitution, and other major reforms, said a presidential official, who declined to be named.

"It would be good to resume immediately debate on constitutional revision and to work out an agreement that would allow democracy by agreeing on constitutional revision," Chun was quoted as telling Kim.

But Kim said after the talks that there had been no agreement and Chun did not appear to understand the extent of the crisis facing South Korea.

"We could not reach any outright agreement on my request for him to revoke the April 13 decision," Kim said.

The opposition wants direct presidential elections and constitutional revision as part of a program for advancing democracy in South Korea.

Chun's willingness to resume talks represented a dramatic and embarrassing setback for the government, which had been insisting up until two weeks ago that it would not change its position.

The opposition launched a major drive June 10 aimed at ousting Chun and forcing direct elections.

Unrest related to desire for full democracy

By BARRY RENFREW

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — Here is a look at the political situation in South Korea in question-and-answer form.

Q. Why has South Korea been hit by massive anti-government demonstrations and riots?

A. The opposition, riding a wave of popular support, wants full democracy and an end to the authoritarian governments that have dominated the country since its founding in 1948. Opposition groups want direct presidential elections and full political liberties, such as freedom of press, speech and assembly.

The unrest began after President Chun Doo-hwan announced April 13 he was suspending debate on political reform until after the 1988 Seoul Olympic games to safeguard national stability and the games.

Q. How is this unrest different from the demonstrations and clashes that often hit South Korea?

A. For the first time in years, many middle-class Koreans are showing open support for the protests. Most Koreans have been unhappy about the political situation for a long time. However, they avoided the country's violent politics and the government had long counted on their acquiesence.

Suddenly, the situation has changed with businessmen, housewives and others coming out into the streets to shout, "Down with the military dictatorship."

Q. How does the Korean political system work? Don't the Koreans have elections?

A. The country does have elections that international observers say are relatively fair. But the opposition contends the presidential election system is unfair because there is no direct vote. People vote for representatives to an electoral college system, which selects the president.

The governing Democratic Justice Party has an advantage because its patronage system and strong controls in the countryside help ensure it gets a majority of the electoral college delegates. Western diplomats and other independent observers agree an opposition leader such as Kim Young-sam probably would achieve an outright victory in a direct presidential election.

Many Koreans resent the government's unwillingness to tolerate almost any opposition political activity. Riot police standing guard are a daily sight in Korean cities and even peaceful demonstrations are likely to be dispersed by tear gas attacks.

Q. Is the government in danger of losing control or collapsing?

A. There is no sign yet of the government losing control. The army has not been called out and riot police fighting the protesters are not carrying guns because of the government's desire to limit violence and to avoid fueling more public opposition.

But the violence is the worst South Korea has seen since Chun took power in 1980. Recent government moves to resume talks with the opposition indicate it is deeply concerned about the situation because compromise is very rare in Korean politics.

Q. What is the government likely to do if the situation continues to deteriorate? Will the army be called out?

A. The government is saying very little, but signs indicate that it does not want to impose martial law because of the impact on domestic politics and on South Korea's international image.

Chun, as a former general who had military support when he took power in 1980, is also aware that calling in the military could lead to top generals trying to take control themselves.

Chun is due to step down in February when his seven-year term runs out and he has designated Democratic Justice Party chairman Roh Tae-woo to take his place. The opposition says it will not accept another seven years of Justice Party rule under Roh.

Q. Where does the United States stand on this issue, given its strong influence in South Korea and the presence of some 40,000 American troops in the country under a mutual defense pact?

A. The United States has been urging both the government and its opponents to avoid political violence and seek compromise to restore stability. American officials say South Korea needs more democracy, but add that it must come about peacefully with the support of all Koreans.

Q. Why are there growing anti-American feelings among the protesters?

A. Some of the opposition crowds shout anti-American slogans because of their belief that Washington has helped keep Chun in power. But the great majority of Koreans want American troops in their country to help guard against attack by communist North Korea.

Anti-American sentiment appears to be mainly based on frustration that Washington is not doing more to help what many Koreans see as a struggle for democracy.

Q. What will happen to the Seoul 1988 Olympics? Could they be called off?

A. International Olympic authorities say nothing short of war will stop the games and there is nothing so far to indicate that the games could be moved elsewhere.

Most Koreans are extremely proud their country was selected to host the games and say they must be staged successfully.

Opposition groups say it would be a travesty to hold the games in a country that is not a democracy. The government has tried to use the games as a justification for its tough positions.

Why Our Merger Is The Right Response For Texas.

There's been a great change that's come over Texas in the past few years. It's a change that has affected every aspect of Texas life. Including banking. InterFirst and RepublicBank's reaction to it has been unique. After 60 years of friendly competition, we have joined forces to become First RepublicBank.

We feel this is the right response for a number of reasons.

Perhaps most important is that we'll be sharing a common philosophy. To provide superior service and better financial tools for our customers. In the coming months, we plan to introduce innovative new ideas to banking here in Texas.

Second, our partnership will make us a better bank. It puts us in a position to serve you better. Our combined facilities will make banking with us more convenient. And our combined operations will make banking more efficient.

Third, it makes us stronger. By combining assets, we've become the largest Texas bank ever. And our financial clout now goes beyond Texas' borders. As the twelfth largest bank in the country, our combined size gives us the necessary capabilities we need now and in the future.

These are a few of the reasons we at InterFirst and RepublicBank have come together. We know it was right for us. Now, we intend to show you how right it is for your banking needs as well.

The Right Response.

Soviet election did attract voters

What do you know? The Soviet Union held some elections for some government positions Sunday and, you guessed it, the Communist Party received a rousing vote of support.

Of course, there's a catch. First, the Communist Party is still that country's only political organization and, secondly, the party controlled the nomination procedure.

Now, no doubt this little event served some worthwhile purpose for Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev. After all, he's been playing the American news media to the hilt at every turn with a classy public relations hard-sell. He's trying to convince all who'll listen that he's a true reformer. But is he?

It's true that Gorbachev has been edging away from conflict lately. He's reported to be working closely with the United States in trying to bring the Iran-Iraq war to a conclusion. But if that is indeed the case, his motivation is more likely to be the fear of being required to commit more troops and materiel to another world hotspot than his concern for bringing an extremely deadly war to a conclusion. Soviet troops are still bogged down in Afghanistan seven years after they invaded to install a puppet regime and are finding the opposition there difficult to stomp out. What Gorbachev doesn't need currently is another long-term fire to fight. He has enough of a battle with the Soviet economy.

He and wife, Raisa, have given a respectable public image to Soviet officialdom since taking office, but one has to suspect that much of it is merely "show business" — perhaps taking a cue from the election in 1980 of former actor Ronald Reagan and the American president's strong popular support.

But there's a difference between elections held in the United States and those in the Soviet Union that Gorbachev cannot fathom. Elections in the United States are "free" in the true sense of the word. The nominations aren't rigged and voters can cast their ballots for whomever they choose. In fact, if American voters don't like any of the candidates in a particular election they can choose to simply not vote. That in itself can be interpreted as an expression of their disgust.

It's not that way in the Soviet Union. The Communist Party decides who'll seek election and, in many cases, who wins — even in contested races. In fact there's only one aspect of the election process in which the communists excel — that of voter turnout.

In the Soviet Union, balloting is considered mandatory for citizens, even though the election results are pre-determined.

Another View:

Let U.N. try again

The ridiculous war between Iran and Iraq is a threat to peace and order far beyond the Persian Gulf. The rest of the world has tolerated it too long. The United Nations should move the issue higher on its agenda, as the United States and other participants in the seven-nation Venice summit recommended Tuesday. If Iran won't agree to hold peace talks, it should be slapped with an international arms embargo and other appropriate sanctions.

Standing up for a principle is lonely business, particularly when it involves an element of danger. President Reagan didn't receive the strong endorsement he sought for the U.S. policy of escorting Kuwaiti oil tankers in the Persian gulf. All he got was a mild assertion from the allies that the flow of oil through the Strait of Hormuz "must continue unimpeded."

How that "must" happen, however, was not specified. Surely Uncle Sam will see to it. The main thing this part of the statement from Venice accomplished was to sustain the prediction of the president of Iran, who had said before the meeting that the allies would refuse Reagan's request for meaningful support.

Approval of this plan was far from the proudest accomplishment of the Venice meeting.

On another point affecting Iran and Iraq, however, the joint statement had more substance. It urged the adoption of a U.S.-sponsored resolution in the U.N. Security Council calling for an arms embargo against Iran unless it agreed to peace talks. The last time the United Nations attempted to intervene, Iran rejected a call for a cease-fire. Now, with the United States and the Soviet Union becoming more involved in the gulf, is an appropriate time to try again.

Keeping the sea lanes open, necessary as that is, won't end the war. Iran and Iraq have been slugging senselessly away at each other for almost seven years with a horrible loss of life and property, and no end is in sight.

The continuing refusal of Iran to negotiate makes an international diplomatic effort more necessary with each passing month. The recommendation that the United Nations take a greater role deserves support from China and the Soviet Union as well as the industrial nations of the West.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Wednesday, June 24, the 175th day of 1987. There are 190 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On June 24, 1497, the first recorded discovery of North America took place as explorer John Cabot, on a voyage for England, sighted land, probably in present-day Canada.

On this date:

In 1314, the forces of Scotland's King Robert I defeated the English in the Battle of Bannockburn.

In 1509, Henry VIII was crowned king of England.

In 1647, Margaret Brent, a niece of Lord Baltimore, shocked the Maryland Assembly by demanding a place and vote in that governing body. She was ejected.

In 1793, the first republican constitution in France was adopted.

In 1842, author-journalist Ambrose Bierce was born in Meigs County, Ohio.

In 1908, the 22nd and 24th President of the United States, Grover Cleveland, died in Princeton, N.J., at age 71.

In 1940, France signed an armistice with Italy during World War II.

In 1947, Kenneth Arnold of Boise, Idaho, reported seeing flying saucers over Mount Rainier, Wash.

In 1948, the Berlin Blockade began as Soviet forces halted all land traffic between the city and West Germany.

In 1975, 113 people were killed when an Eastern Airlines Boeing 727 crashed while attempting to land during a thunderstorm at New York's Kennedy International Airport.

In 1983, the space shuttle Challenger, carrying America's first woman in space, Sally K. Ride, coasted to a safe landing at Edwards Air Force Base, Calif.

Ten years ago: The White House reported that President Jimmy Carter and his wife, Rosalynn, owed no federal income tax for 1976, but offered to pay $6,000 to the government anyway.

Five years ago: Proponents of a proposed equal rights amendment to the U.S. Constitution officially conceded defeat, but vowed to continue efforts to fight for equal rights for women.

One year ago: By a 97-3 vote, the Senate approved a sweeping tax revision bill calling for lower tax rates and fewer deductions, credits and benefits.

Today's Birthdays: Actor Al Molinaro is 68. Comedian Jack Carter is 64. Movie director Claude Chabrol is 57. Actress Michele Lee is 45. Actress Nancy Allen is 37.

Big Brother beats up little business

WASHINGTON — Has Big Brother been helping Big Business beat up on a new kid on the block? The Federal Communications Commission has put a small company out of business because of a single breach of the rules — and it did so on the complaint of a giant communications company that has gone unpunished for several more apparent violations of FCC regulations.

Jack Anderson

The case began in 1985 when MCI Communications and its subcontractor, Western Telecommunications, lodged a complaint with the FCC against a would-be competitor, TeleSTAR, which hoped to become a $1 billion digital microwave network serving the Southwest. TeleSTAR had started construction of a transmission facility in the foothills of the Rockies without first getting FCC approval.

The commission's hearing division chief and trial counsel concluded that TeleSTAR's violation of FCC regulations was not intentional, and they recommended granting the company an operating license. But an administrative law judge refused to grant the license. TeleSTAR has appealed.

Copies of FCC documents, including material submitted by TeleSTAR, were obtained by our reporter Lisa Sylvester. They suggest that MCI had a lot of nerve accusing any other company of breaking the FCC's rules. For example:

— On more than 20 separate occasions, MCI began radio transmission without final FCC approval.

— In one case, MCI apparently began transmission more than four years before it even applied for FCC approval. The FCC application form was stamped as received in August 1984; the service test start date was recorded as April 1980.

— MCI seems to have committed exactly the same sin it complained that TeleSTAR was guilty of: beginning construction of a facility before it got FCC approval. TeleSTAR claims that MCI started work on a microwave radio station route between Glenshaw (near Pittsburgh) and Erie, Pa., without permission. FCC documents show that MCI applied for a construction permit in July 1982, but didn't get it until December of that year. Yet only nine days later, MCI sought permission to begin transmissions on the route.

An FCC employee told us it would be "unusual" for such an extensive route — more than 100 miles — to be set up in just nine days.

Along with its appeal, TeleSTAR has filed a voluminous petition claiming that MCI has broken FCC rules on many occasions and gotten away with it. The FCC's associate general counsel, Sheldon Gutman, told us that TeleSTAR's accusations of discrimination are being handled as a restricted proceeding. As a result, he said, "there is very little anyone around here can say about this case." Gutman also refused to comment on TeleSTAR's own separate case, which is under consideration by the commission.

When we asked MCI about TeleSTAR's accusation, the company replied: "MCI is in the process of investigating the allegations, but has not completed it. Company policy is to comply with all federal and local ordinances in a timely manner. All of MCI's sites which the company is currently operating are licensed by the FCC."

TeleSTAR's president, Noel Stewart, an electrical engineer and Marine veteran of Vietnam, said investors had pledged $40 million in new capital, but the lack of a license for the 500-mile route in Colorado and Utah had pushed the company into bankruptcy. Stewart sought help from Sens. Orrin Hatch and Jake Garn, Utah Republicans, and both have asked the FCC for an explanation.

"TeleSTAR has made some very serious and convincing arguments to support their allegations of misrepresentation of facts, misstatements, errors of substantive and procedural law, deliberate withholding of pertinent findings and unfair treatment," Garn wrote the FCC. He also asked Sen. Daniel Inouye, D-Hawaii, chairman of a communications subcommittee, for an investigation.

PAY RAISE BATTLE: With appropriate timing, a group of maverick congressmen are observing the Constitution's bicentennial by challenging their own recent pay raise on constitutional grounds. And they may have won a point with the federal judge hearing their case.

The law that gave Congress its raise earlier this year makes a president's salary recommendation automatic unless both Senate and House vote against it within 30 days. The Senate rejected the raise and so did the House — but one day beyond the deadline.

The Constitution gives Congress sole authority to set its own pay. Opponents of the raise argue that this was done to prevent a president from punishing Congress by cutting its pay. Under the current law, they say, a president could cut the lawmakers' pay while they were in recess, and they might not reconvene in time to stop it. "Congress may not be able to get the bat off its shoulder until the ball is over the plate," the judge observed.

A decision by the court is not expected for at least a month.

PLAYING BOTH ENDS: The legendary method of getting a mule's attention is with a two-by-four upside the head. Middle Eastern oil sheiks have been using the Kremlin as a two-by-four to arouse a little interest by the United States.

The Kuwaitis wanted protection for their tankers in the Persian Gulf, so they made overtures to the Soviet Union, and let the word out. The Reagan administration promptly promised U.S. escort service for the Kuwaitis. "The lesson to our neighbors," one Middle Eastern diplomat observed wryly, "is that the only way to get U.S. attention is to invite the Soviets in."

Strategic change calls for European vision

PARIS — There is a certain ferment just below the top in Western Europe as people begin to contemplate the uncertain prospects of strategic change once disarmament actually starts.

Flora Lewis

For the moment it isn't going anywhere for lack of impetus from leaders. Margaret Thatcher of Britain, whom former President Valery Giscard d'Estaing of France has called "a remarkable professional, surely the best in Europe," is the only figure in power with the perceived strength to launch an effective initiative.

But she doesn't seem interested. Like the others, her focus is on home affairs. "And that means England, not even Scotland," a British official said in private indiscretion. President Reagan arrived home from the Venice summit meeting claiming broad allied agreement, but it went no further than hoping for economic growth and deploring the Persian Gulf war, not on what to do next. All the leaders are dragging their feet.

Still, pressures to recognize the need for new plans are mounting. In France, the focus is on new defense concepts based on some kind of French-German military integration. Giscard and West Germany's former Chancellor Helmut Schmidt have come out for a joint command under a French general, and Giscard would have France declare that its independent nuclear deterrent could also be invoked to protect West Germany.

These are far-reaching ideas, implying a reversal of historic policies, so much so that even the many proponents refuse to face the full implications and therefore are not yet taken really seriously. The key question ducked is what that would mean for the Atlantic alliance, answered only with vague allusions to a need for "coordination."

All West German forces are now committed to NATO. Would a French commander in charge of all or part of them in turn be integrated within the alliance structure, thus ending France's proclaimed supreme autonomy? Impossible, is the unanimous French response. In that case, would Germans under the command be removed from NATO, almost surely destroying the alliance? That is definitely not the aim. So the impasse remains.

But the reasoning leading up to the final barrier is powerful. Together, with the geographical depth of France and its access to the Atlantic, French and German forces could present a much more impressive conventional strength, reducing but not eliminating reliance on the nuclear deterrent in Europe.

Two fears haunt the French now. One is that German dreams of reunification will lead to neutralism. There has been a good deal of speculative comment here that Mikhail Gorbachev might attempt to seduce the Germans with such an offer.

It is almost certainly outlandish. High officials in Moscow make it clear that the last thing the Russians want to see in Europe is the re-emergence of a single Germany, which would have great economic and political power even if pledged to non-alignment. And though he draws all the advantages he can from relations with West Germany, East Germany's Erich Honecker, or his successor, would not easily accede to disappearance of the rump state they have built. Further, what would Poland do?

Still, the French are obsessed with the thought. Full military ties with West Germany would insure against the possibility.

The second French fear, ironic though it may sound from a country that expelled American troops, is that the United States will withdraw much of its forces from Europe and "decouple," substantially diminishing its guarantees for Western Europe's defense. Despite mounting budget constraints and occasional American suggestions that this would startle the Europeans into doing more for themselves, it is also unlikely.

The basics of the alliance remain unchanged and need not be affected by nuclear, and it must be hoped eventual conventional, arms reductions as long as they are carefully planned and balanced. That will require the development of a European policy, which doesn't yet exist.

Giscard, who plans to run for president of Europe if that post is ever created, now heads the foreign affairs committee of the French Assembly. He intends to use the platform as a "center of reflection," calling foreign as well as French witnesses on major policy directions. This fall, he says, he will convene joint hearings with the defense committee on "strategy for France and the West."

This is a useful approach, which Congress might consider for its own purposes. Congress now can do little more than fight White House policies it can't accept. But if governments won't propose and innovate, why shouldn't legislators try to work out a framework for meeting coming challenges?

If subject's ethics, look to ole' Morality U!

Washington School of Applied Ethics and Morality. Can we help you?"

"My son is coming to Washington this summer and I would like to know if you are giving any courses in hypocrisy, betrayal and sleaze?"

Art Buchwald

"Yes, we have an excellent curriculum that will lead either to a bachelor's degree in stonewalling or a master's degree in perjury."

"Can you give me some idea of what you're offering?"

"We have a popular class in lying. We hold moot congressional hearings in which the student is challenged to wriggle out of answering any compromising questions."

"How does he do that?"

"By using the Elliott Abrams defense. When asked a question the student is taught to reply something like, 'It probably happened but I don't remember it,' or 'I don't remember it but if you say it took place I'll accept your word.'"

"Is Abrams the instructor?"

"No, he has nothing to do with the school. But the students look on him as a role model."

"It doesn't surprise me. He's everybody's role model."

"If your son is working in Washington this summer I would advise that he take a seminar in special prosecutors."

"I didn't know you could take a whole seminar in them."

"It's essential if you're going to work for the Administration. Let's say, for example, your son, while in Washington, gets involved in a defense factory bribery case. In exchange he receives stock and cash as a reward. As soon as it becomes public what he is up to, he is entitled to his own special prosecutor. We demonstrate how he can face up to a prosecutor while keeping damage for himself to a minimum."

"How is it done?"

"The student asks for immunity and then agrees to rat on all the other people involved with his scheme."

"But isn't that dirty pool?"

"No, dirty pool is another course where government officials learn how to help polluters get around the EPA."

"Since we're talking about morality, do you have any studies in adultery?"

"Your son can take adultery, but he won't get any credit for it."

"What about greed?"

"Greed is required, and you can't graduate without it. We teach that there is nothing wrong with being greedy if it's in your country's best interests."

"My son hopes to work with one of the federal agencies. Is there a lot of sleaze involved with this?"

"It depends on how much work he does for the vested interests. We offer all the standard white-collar crimes. What our students do with them is their business."

"My son wants to know if you teach students how to shred incriminating documents."

"Each student is required to own a paper shredder and burn bag. The burn bag can also be used to carry his lunch."

"You have a fun school."

"We try to make our students good citizens, even if they have to lie to do it. As Ollie North said, "There is more to government than rewarding your friends and punishing your enemies.'"

"How much more?"

"Come to think of it, not much."

WORLD in brief

Romero's death again an issue

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (AP) — The unsolved 1980 assassination of Archbishop Oscar Romero has re-emerged as a political issue, with the church saying it has new evidence and the extreme right calling for a fresh investigation to clear its name.

The auxiliary archbishop of San Salvador, Monsignor Gregorio Rosa Chavez, said this week the Roman Catholic Church has some new information about Romero's murder, for which no one has been brought to trial.

Romero was killed when a lone gunman fired a single shot into his heart while he was offering Mass on March 24, 1980, at a chapel in this capital.

In his weekly Sunday homilies, the archbishop had denounced violence from both left and right in the Salvadoran civil war. He read the names of the dead and disappeared, most of them believed to have been victims of right-wing death squads.

The day before his death, Romero exhorted the army and the nation's security forces: "Do not kill! No soldier is obliged to obey an order against the law of God.... Stop the repression!"

Haitian suit dismissed

GRASSE, France (AP) — A French court on Tuesday dismissed the Haitian government's lawsuit seeking about $120 million from Jean-Claude Duvalier, the former Haitian dictator now in exile in southern France.

The tribunal in Grasse, after six weeks of deliberations, ruled that it did not have jurisdiction to hear Haiti's demand for money it claims Duvalier, known as "Baby Doc," took from the country during his 15 years in power.

Yann Colin, one of the lawyers representing Haiti, said he expected the ruling would be appealed.

"We will inform the Haitian authorities of the judgment, and if they agree with our conclusions, after examining in detail the reasons for the judgment, we will file an appeal," Colin said.

Haiti argued that Duvalier used the money to buy jewelry, luxury cars, a castle near Paris and other properties.

Duvalier did not attend the court hearing last month.

Irish policeman shot

BELFAST, Northern Ireland (AP) — A man drew a rifle from a baby carriage Tuesday at a playground where children were playing and fatally shot a policeman who was driving by, officials reported.

The outlawed Irish Republican Army asserted responsibility for killing the off-duty police sergeant in predominantly Protestant north Belfast.

A police spokesman said the killer, moving from behind children on swings and other playground equipment, shot Sgt. Robert Guthrie three times as he drove his car through the rear gate of a heavily protected police station.

The spokesman, who in line with British practice was not identified, said Guthrie, 41, was taken to a hospital where he died two hours later.

Leak frightens Bhopal

NEW DELHI (NYT) — Thousands of residents of Bhopal fled their homes in panic early Tuesday morning when ammonia gas leaked from a factory near the Union Carbide pesticide plant there, Indian news agencies reported Wednesday morning.

The reports said that the leak occurred at Jyopi Industries and that it created a panic among people who live in the shantytowns nearby. The same neighborhood was devastated in December 1984 when lethal gases leaked from the Union Carbide plant after water entered a tank of methyl isocyanate, setting off a violent chemi cal reaction. That leak has been blamed for more than 2,500 deaths.

No injuries or fatalities were reported in the leak on Tuesday, but the police said they had arrested the factory manager, a plant operator and two other people and charged them with negligence and endangering public life.

Tourists slain in Turkey

BAYBURT, Turkey (AP) — Two tourists, a West German and an Austrian, were found shot to death in this eastern township, a news agency reported Tuesday.

The bodies were discovered in a car Monday near the village of Gunbuldu, some 600 miles east of Ankara, the Hurriyet news agency said. An autopsy showed each suffered three bullet wounds.

The West German was identified as Matheus Joachim Franz and the Austrian as Elizabeth Nasah. Their ages and hometowns were not made public.

Police said they have ruled out theft as a possible motive for the killings, the agency said. An inquiry was under way.

The two had visted Turkey several times in the past, Hurriyet said.

Papal meeting 'normal'

VATICAN CITY (AP) — A Vatican official said Tuesday it was normal for Pope John Paul II to meet President Kurt Waldheim of Austria and that it would be "morally wrong" to postpone the controversial audience.

Two days before the pope's meeting with Waldheim, four American Jews arrived in Rome to spearhead protest demonstrations.

Cabinet decides to try hijacking suspect in West Germany

BONN, West Germany (AP) — The Cabinet today rejected a U.S. request to extradite Mohammed Ali Hamadi, accused hijacker of a TWA jetliner in 1985, and decided to try him in West Germany instead, a high-ranking government official said.

Hamadi "will be placed on trial before a court in the Federal Republic of Germany for air piracy, murder and other crimes as soon as possible," Wolfgang Schaeuble, the Bonn chancellory's state secretary, said in a statement.

"The full force of West German law will be applied," Schaeuble told a crowded news conference. He did not say when Hamadi's trial would take place.

Schaeuble said the Cabinet, meeting in a morning session, approved the recommendations of Chancellor Helmut Kohl and the interior, justice and foreign ministers that a six-month-old U.S. extradition request for Hamadi be turned down.

He defended the decision, saying that Hamadi would face the same charges, and similar sentences for those crimes, in West Germany as he would have faced in the United States.

Hamadi, a 23-year-old Shiite Moslem, is wanted in the United States on charges of air piracy and murder in the June 1985 hijacking of a TWA airliner to Beirut.

He is accused of being one of four hijackers who killed U.S. Navy diver Robert Stethem of Waldorf, Md., and held 39 Americans prisoner for 17 days.

The chancellery official added that Bonn ministers had opposed extradition out of fear for the lives of two West German hostages held in Beirut.

"This decision was not taken lightly," Schaeuble said. "But the risks it poses for the two West German hostages held in Beirut will be smaller than with the other option."

Rudolf Cordes and Alfred Schmidt were kidnapped in Beirut shortly after Hamadi was arrested at the Frankfurt airport on Jan. 13. Bonn security sources have said the kidnappers hoped they could swap the two for Hamadi and block the Lebanese suspect's extradition to the United States.

Schaeuble said he did not think the decision to reject the longstanding American request would harm U.S.-West German relations.

"Since the first day our cooperation (with the United States) in this case has been very close," Schaeuble said.

U.S. Attorney General Edwin Meese III, during a one-day visit to Bonn Tuesday, told West German officials that Washington would accept the decision not to extradite Hamadi, government sources said.

Swiss, neighbors ready to fight over army

GENEVA (AP) — The Swiss are up in arms over what they view as a broadside against their militia from neighboring West Germany.

Three years before neutral Switzerland is to vote on a proposal to disband the 650,000-man force, a West German TV film supporting the proposal has caused widespread popular protest and a government condemnation.

The film, titled "The Dream of the Slaughtering of the Holiest Cow," was broadcast early this month on a channel that can be viewed in most of Switzerland.

It describes the anti-army "people's initiative" campaign, which collected 113,000 signatures on a petition given to the Swiss Federal Chancellory. Under the system of direct democracy in this nation of 6½ million, that number of signatures is enough to force a national referendum.

The proposal would replace all references to Swiss defense needs in the federal constitution by the sentence "Switzerland has no army" and a clause prohibiting all military training.

Sympathizers include Friedrich Duerrenmatt and Max Frisch, well-known Swiss writers, who made brief appearances in the film.

Most observers predict that the proposal is headed for a lopsided defeat in a country in which the military has a long tradition. The reserve force has not fought in foreign wars for five centuries, but is rated one of the best-trained and most highly motivated in the world.

"Switzerland has no army, it is an army," is an often-heard phrase. Every militia member between the ages of 20 and 50 keeps his assault rifle at home to allow full mobilization in less than 48 hours. Fortresses, bunkers and underground supply depots are common in the mountains.

Switzerland is the only Western European country where conscientious objectors are still sent to jail, although criticism from church and human rights groups has prompted authorities to plan changes in the law.

The German film was written by Roman Brodmann, 67, a Swiss television writer who was one of the early supporters of the proposal to abolish the army. The work created an immediate uproar.

"German TV — A Frontal Attack on the Swiss Army," was the banner headline in Blick, the country's biggest circulation tabloid. A prominent member of the conservative Radical Party, Jean-Pierre Bonny, formally demanded that the government comment on what he called an "unfriendly act."

In a statement read to Parliament, Defense Minister Arnold Koller said it was "incomprehensible" that German television broadcast "propaganda" for the anti-army proposal.

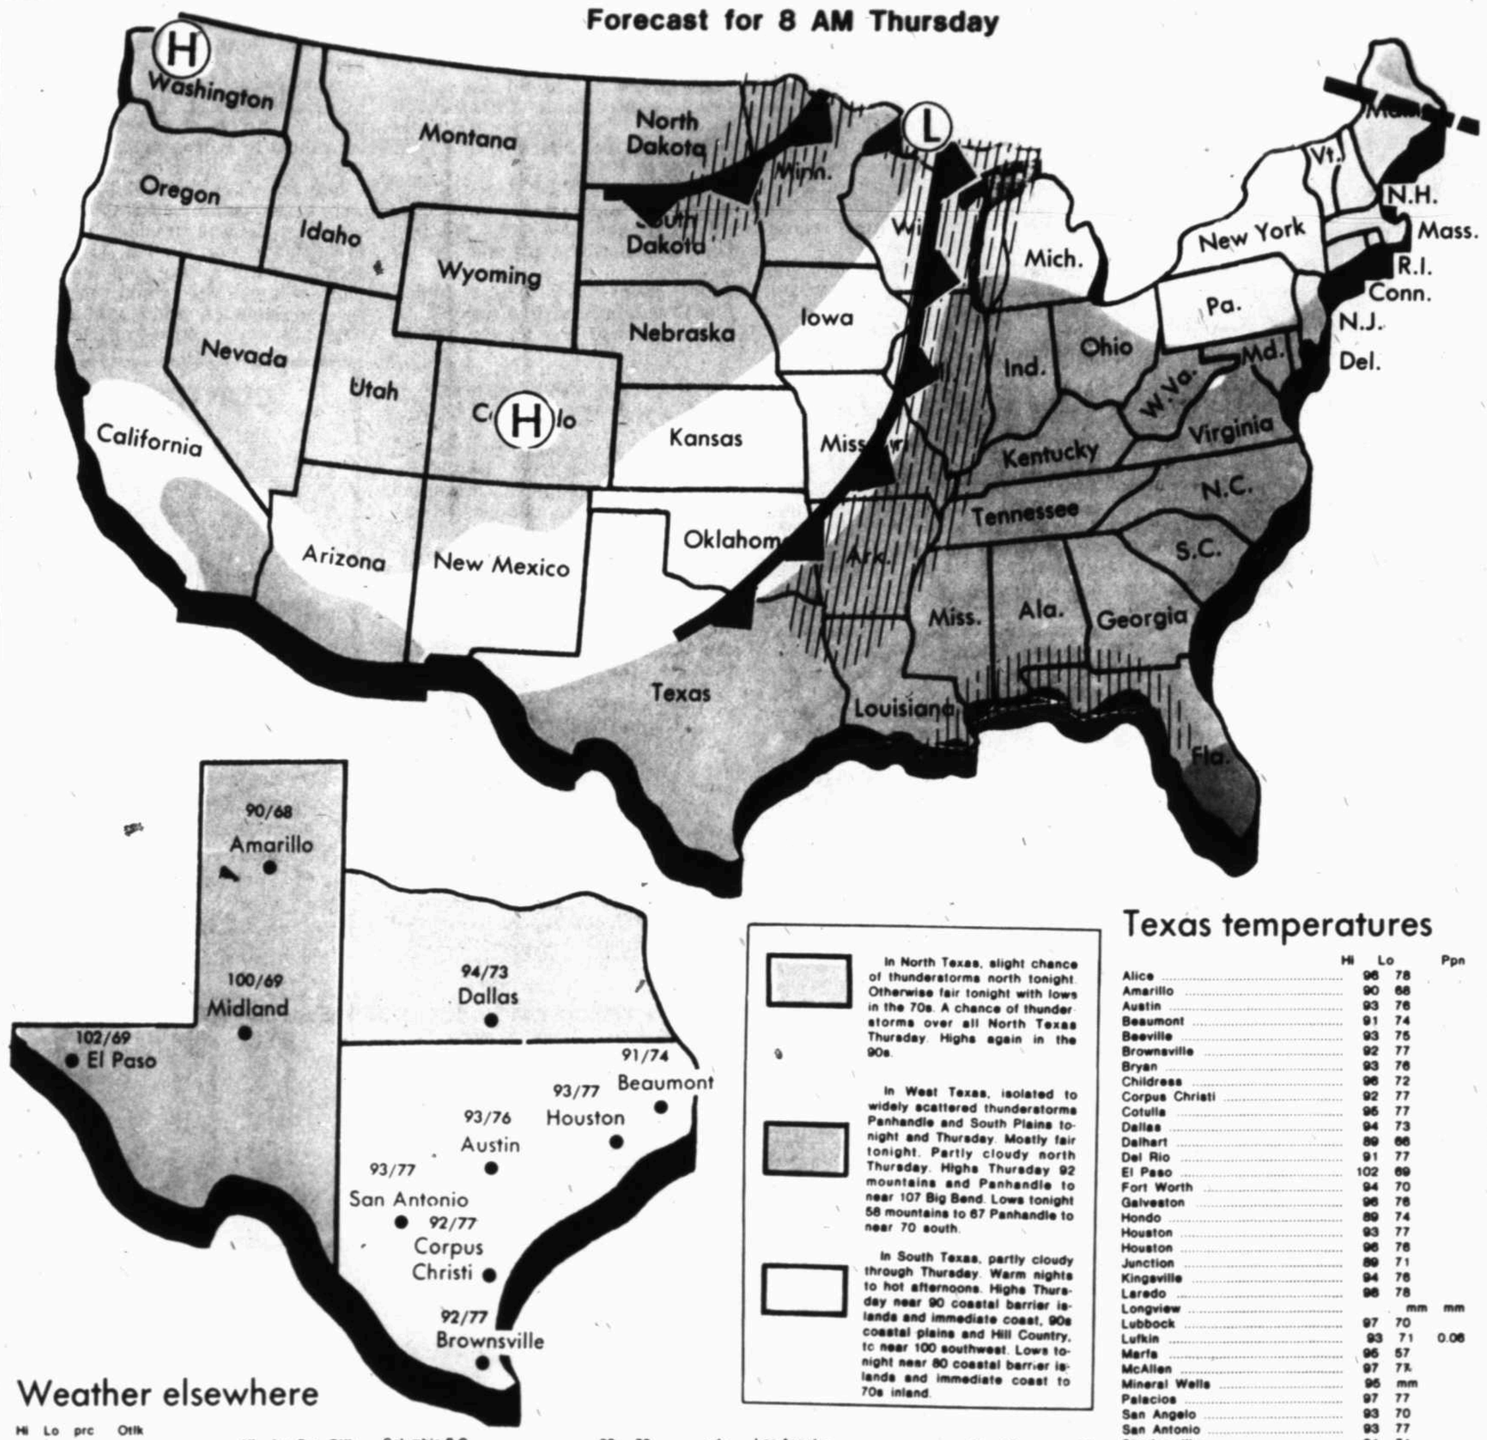
WATCH — (Conditions are right for a tornado or severe thunderstorm to form.)

WARNING — (A tornado or severe thunderstorm already is in existence.)



Storms moving across state

Associated Press

The remnants of thunderstorms which passed through north central and northeast Texas Tuesday night moved southeast early this morning, causing scattered showers across portions of east and southeast Texas.

The National Weather Service reported strong thunderstorms in the Oklahoma Panhandle ahead of a stationary front across Kansas. These thunderstorms were heading southeast toward the Texas Panhandle.

Fair to clear skies prevailed throughout the remainder of Texas.

South to southeast winds were common across Texas at 5 to 10 mph.

The forecast calls for scattered late afternoon and evening thunderstorms through Thursday for north and southeast Texas, the Panhandle and South Plains. The rest of the state will have partly to mostly sunny days and fair nights. Highs will be in the 100s in the southwest and Big Bend and the 90s elsewhere. Lows will be in the 50s in the southwest mountains, the 60s in the Panhandle and 80s along the coast with 70s elsewhere.

Counties forecasts

Midland, Ector, Crane, Upton, Reagan, Glasscock, Andrews, Gaines, Martin, Howard, Borden and Dawson: Tonight - mostly fair with lows near 70. Southeast wind 5 to 10 miles an hour. Thursday - sunny and continued hot. Highs mid 90's. Southeast wind 5 to 15 miles an hour.

Sterling, Tom Green, Irion and Coke: Tonight - mostly fair with lows near 70. Light southeast wind. Thursday - sunny and continued very warm. Highs mid 90's. Southeast wind 5 to 15 miles an hour.

Extended forecast

West Texas: Widely scattered mainly afternoon thunderstorms and near normal temperatures. Concho Valley and Permian Basin, lows around 70 and highs mid 90s. Far west, lows upper 60s and highs in upper 90s. big bend area, lows mid 60s mountains to mid 70s lowlands. Highs mid 90s mountains to near 106 along the Rio Grande.

Border states forecasts

Oklahoma: Scattered thunderstorms statewide tonight and mainly southeast Thursday. A few thunderstorms possibly severe west and north early tonight with locally heavy rainfall. Not as warm over the west and north Thursday. Lows tonight upper 50s Panhandle to near 70 southeast. Highs Thursday low 80s Panhandle to low 90s southeast.

New Mexico: Fair skies tonight and Thursday morning. Partly cloudy by afternoon again with isolated thundershowers. Highs in the upper 70s and 80s mountains and northeast with 90s elsewhere. Lows upper 30s to mid 50s mountains and northwest with mid 50s to upper 60s lower elevations south and east.

Louisiana: Scattered mainly afternoon and evening thunderstorms through Thursday. Highs 90 to 95. Lows 70 to 75.

Arkansas: Mild with widely scattered thundershowers east early tonight and in the northwest late tonight. Partly cloudy and warm Thursday with scattered thundershowers, most numerous north. Lows tonight mid 60s north to mid 70s southeast. Highs Thursday in the 90s.

MISD board votes to close West Elementary School

By JANE MARLER DEES
Staff Writer

A lengthy Tuesday afternoon meeting of Midland Independent School District trustees ended with them shutting down a school, approving a list of reasons why teachers can be fired and receiving the good news MISD students are extremely bright.

Amid concern from the West End Heritage Committee and residents of the historic neighborhood, trustees unanimously voted to shut West Elementary and shuttle the 160-odd students in question to Sam Houston Elementary beginning September 1.

The decision to close West — which has served youngsters for the past 42 years — was one of economics, trustees have said.

In closing the school, the district will save an anticipated $50,000-$60,000 a year minus the one-time $10,000 it will cost to relocate five portable buildings to Houston, which will be used for classrooms and data processing equipment, MISD spokeswoman Becky Ferguson said earlier in the month.

West End advocate George D. Gilles, a Midland attorney, spoke for the Heritage Committee at the meeting Tuesday expressing his hope the elementary will continue to serve — at least in part — the educational needs of children.

"The concept of establishing a children's learning center at West Elementary (i.e. library, arts and crafts workshops, sports equipment, etc.) offers the opportunity to maximize the benefits of these nearby facilities," said a June 23 letter by Gilles to the trustees.

Although Gilles went on to say the West End residents were "obviously disappointed" by the closing, he understood the move was based on declining student population there.

"We are committed to continue having students there as long as its feasible," said MISD Superintendent Joe Baressi during the meeting.

The next item on the agenda — approving the revision of the trustees' policy on the non-renewal of term contracts for teachers — brought debate from two teachers' rights representatives.

Under the policy adopted Tuesday, there are 27 reasons why the district would have grounds for not renewing an employee's contract with MISD. Two reasons were amended before the final passage.

Linda Harris, a counselor at Midland Freshman High School and president of the Midland Educators Association, presented to trustees eight policy changes she and her peers felt were needed. Two were accepted by trustees.

The first change came in the first reason for non-renewal. Prior to the change, the first reason for non-renewal was "Deficiencies pointed out as part of the appraisal or evaluation process or any other communication."

Ms. Harris argued and won the point that "communication" was an ambiguous term. Trustees inserted the word "written" before communication in their final plan.

Secondly, Ms. Harris sought to have the twentieth reason for non-renewal reworded. As it stood prior to the change, the reason was "A significant lack of student progress."

Trustees changed the wording to say "A significant lack of student process...such lack of progress which will not be solely predicated on standardized tests."

"Our main concern is that would be one of the few if not the only criteria used to dismiss a teacher," Ms. Harris said of reason #20.

Release from a contract with the district also could be the result of trustees or another MISD management representative receiving a complaint of a publicly intoxicated employee.

Trustee Joe Golding had expressed his concern at this reason in earlier meetings, citing the fact it may have been too extreme.

However, trustees ultimately decided it was not and the reason stood: "Drunkenness or excessive use of alcoholic beverages; illegal use of drugs, hallucinogens or other substances regulated by the Texas Controlled Substances Act."

Teacher representatives — such as Alma Marshall of the Texas State Teachers Association — were concerned about how future trustees would interpret the reasons for non-renewal set down by the current board.

"I'm concerned that within the next 25 years we might have another school board election, but these written policies will still be here," Ms. Marshall mused in reference to the fact the Fifth Circuit Court of Appeals in New Orleans has placed a stay of election on the school district until a single-member district lawsuit is settled.

"Don't be naive about what people will use against you," Ms. Marshall told the board.

Church officials disagreed Tuesday over a move by the City Council to close off one block of Cherry Lane. The Rev. Domingo Estrada, above, of Our Lady of Guadalupe Cahtholic Church said the closing will protect his parishioners who cross the street frequently going to one church building to another.

Decision to close street pleases one church, upsets two others

By RAMONA NYE

Our Lady of Guadalupe Catholic Church officials say closing one block of Cherry Lane will protect its young and elderly parishioners, but officials from two other area churches say closing the street will inconvenience their worshippers.

"I'm not mad at anybody, I'm just disappointed," said Novert Merino, deacon of the Emmanuel Baptist Church, 1800 Cherry Lane, after a City Council 5-1 vote Tuesday to close Cherry Lane between north Craver and Tyler streets.

Councilman Bill Williams was absent from the meeting.

Mayor Carroll Thomas, who voted for the closing, said the city has barricaded several low traffic streets where property is owned on both sides by the same person.

"I felt like it did not hamper access to any other facilities," Thomas said.

But Councilman Gordon Marcum said he voted against closing the street because, "I just hate to cut off any public access. Especially when that's the only street in the area that has access to the other churches."

Novert Merino, left, an Emmanuel Baptist Church deacon, said closing Cherry Lane will inconvenience his congregation.

Summer heat here to stay, at least for awhile, forecaster says

By RICK BROWN
Assistant City Editor

Temperatures today were expected to approach the 100 degree mark for the second time in two days as weather forecasters warned the onset of high summer heat is here to stay — at least until the weekend.

"Once these things get set up, they can be really persistent," said John Wright, meteorologist in charge at Midland Regional Airport offices of the National Weather Service.

"Normally in West Texas, the primary culprit is the southwesterly wind that comes off the Mexican desert," Wright said.

Highs close to 100 degree were expected to be coupled with lows in the low 70s through Saturday, the weather service reported.

Midlanders plan to send criminals strong message

By JULIE HILLRICHS
Staff Writer

Midlanders concerned over increased criminal activity in their neighborhoods this summer are planning to send a message to lawbreakers that they're organized and on the lookout.

On Aug. 11 various neighborhoods, in cooperation with the Midland Police Department and the Midland County Sheriff's Department, will join other cities across the United States in National Night Out activities to deter burglaries and other neighborhood crimes.

Keith Turner, of the Midland County Sheriff Department's crime prevention unit, said each neighborhood watch organization will plan its own National Night Out activities.

Among the events suggested are block parties, dances, barbecues and ice cream socials.

"It's a get to know your neighbor type thing and it's a way for citizens to show the criminal element that there are more people who are against crime than there are criminals," Turner said.

Maxine Hannifin, a Neighborhood Watch captain, said an event such as National Night Out benefits all neighbors.

"A lot of times, we have new people move in...they don't even know their neighbor and I think that's sad," she said.

Turner said National Night Out began several years ago in Pennsylvania and has been successful throughout the Midwest and Northeast United States.

About 16.5 million Americans from 4,700 cities in 49 states participated in last year's event, he added.

Although there is greater public interest in National Night Out than three years ago, Turner said it's imperative that Midlanders become more involved.

Jobe sets $1 million bond for 'dangerous' Cuban

By PATRICK CRIMMINS
Staff Writer

A Cuban native who authorities said is "dangerous" and a key figure in a Midland-Odessa cocaine ring remained in the Midland County Jail today in lieu of $1 million bond following his arrest late Monday.

Candelaria Vasallo Deliz, 29, was charged Tuesday with possession of cocaine with intent to deliver. His bond was set by Justice of the Peace Keith Jobe.

Deliz, a Havana native who lists an Odessa address, and five other people were arrested without incident at a southeast Midland residence by Midland County sheriff's deputies and Midland County District Attorney's Office investigators.

Ten grams of suspected cocaine and $4,700 cash were seized after the arrests, reports said.

Explained district attorney's investigator J.D. Luckie of the $1 million bond, "We're concerned with the safety of our witnesses if he's released," adding that Deliz may be questioned about other cases.

Luckie said he could not recall bond that high in any prior Midland County case.

Luckie said Deliz is notorious among Permian Basin narcotics agents and typically traveled with at least two bodyguards.

Capt. Clayton McKinney, head of criminal investigation for the sheriff's office, said the bond is "justified."

"It was a major takedown for us," Luckie said.

Would-be city jail escapees to appeal jury convictions

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

The three would-be escapees from the federal unit of Midland City Jail are filing appeals of their jury convictions in federal court on June 9.

Jurors had found the trio guilty of trying to escape from jail although one, convicted armed robber Shelby David Shifflett, had testified that he was the instigator and perpetrator of the escape attempt from the second-floor jail in the city's Public Safety Building.

"I broke running," the 36-year-old Shifflett had testified, after civilian jailer Lawanda Wilson, 56, had opened the cell door to bring the federal prisoners their evening coffee. "I was thinking about it (escaping) for awhile."

In rushing from the cell, Shifflett said he knocked down Mrs. Wilson and his cell mates and co-defendants, Wayne Ross Brunson, 26, and Jerry Miller, 31.

Despite Shifflett's confession before the jury and Miller's denial that he had any part in the attempted escape, the 12 jurors found the three men guilty. Brunson did not testify. U.S. District Court Judge Lucius D. Bunton promptly sentenced each defendant to five years in prison and added those five years to sentences which the judge earlier had imposed on Shifflett, Miller and Brunson.

Shifflett already was facing a 30-year prison term for the armed robbery of two savings-and-loan associations in Odessa in 1986 and 1987.

Brunson was serving 17 years for transporting hazardous chemicals on an airliner and for possessing drugs and firearms.

And Miller, whose five-year probation was revoked because of his involvement in drugs and firearms, was serving a three-year term for possession of a firearm by a convicted felon. Previously, he had been convicted of burglary and driving while intoxicated.

GARY OTT

In theaters, action not always confined to the silver screen

Ott

In the past couple of weeks I have seen two movies, which, if memory serves me, is exactly two more than I attended all of last year.

I'm not sure what has sparked this sudden interest in the cinema, but I keep finding myself in a long line waiting to get in a theater.

For the record, the two movies were "Ishtar" and "The Witches of Eastwick."

"Ishtar" was something of a disappointment and "Witches" was delightful, mainly because I like anything Jack Nicholson does.

But what always catches my attention when I attend a movie is how the theaters have changed over the year.

First, of course, there is the small matter of money.

I hate to date myself here, but I can remember when a movie cost 90 cents for adults and 25 cents for children under 12.

I also remember when a Coca-Cola cost 20 cents. And, that was for the large size. Popcorn was 15 cents and candy bars were a nickel less.

Now, as everyone knows, that has all changed. Still, I accept it because everything has increased in price, so why shouldn't moviehouses follow the trend. It's all part of life.

What does bother me, however, are the other changes, the things you might not recognize at first glance.

For example, I miss ushers.

Surely you remember them. They were clean-cut young men who had short hair, sporty red jackets, neatly pressed black trousers, white shirts and skinny little ties.

They would take their flashlights and lead you down the isle to your seat.

It was the kind of attention that made a patron feel important.

Now, of course, you are are on your own. Show up a few minutes late, after the movie has already started and the theater is dark, and finding your seat can be a harrowing experience. Usually you end up misjudging your distances and, as a result, will take a seat in a fat lady's lap. You will start to comment on how soft and comfortable the chairs are, but then she will pinch you on the fanny and call you horrible names.

This will cause you to leap to your feet and struggle down the isle in search of another seat, which generally is next to some dirty old man who is breathing heavily at a sexy scene on the screen.

Speaking of dirty old men, audiences have changed, overall.

I'm sort of picky about the people I want sitting near me when I attend a movie. In particular, I don't like talkers, especially those loud-mouthed individuals who have already seen the movie and insist on providing a running commentary on upcoming scenes for the rest of us.

I also don't like small children to be anywhere near me in a theater. At a baseball game is one thing, but when I'm trying to follow the plot of a complicated murder mystery, I don't need whining sounds interrupting my train of thought.

Likewise, I would appreciate it if tall people would refrain from taking a seat directly in front of me. I like giants if they happen to be the starting center on my favorite basketball team, but it can be terribly painful on your neck when you are trying to see around one of their heads. Also, they have the uncanny ability to shift their weight and constantly remain directly in your line of vision.

Finally, I always attempt to avoid dirty old men. After all, when a good sex scene comes on the screen I want to watch it in peace. I don't need some creep next to me breathing down my neck and drooling on my new pants.

CHURCH

Since 1969, Guadalupe church officials at 1208 Cherry Lane have tried to close off one block where they own property on both sides, said the Rev. Domingo Estrada.

Elderly and young congregation members frequently cross the street going from one church building to another, Father Estrada explained.

Once the street is closed within a year, church officials want to convert a vacant area north of the street into a playground and eventually build a shrine on adjacent church property, Father Estrada said.

"We would hope it would not be an inconvenience, but we are so concerned about the safety factor, we feel like this has to take priority," he said.

"It's been a miracle nobody has gotten hurt yet," he added.

During the council hearing, an attorney for the church, Hal Brockett said, " We feel like the huge number of people at Guadalupe (1,400) outweigh any inconvenience experienced by other churches.

"Safety considerations outweigh the inconvenience of any other churches in the area," he added.

But representatives from two area churches east of the closed street, Emmanuel Baptist Church and Church of Christ, 1301 Cherry Lane, said the closing would make it harder for their out-of-town visitors to find their churches and the move would cut them off during flooding.

Deacon Merino contended that Cherry Lane is the main road used by his 196 congregation members when the other low-lying streets flood out.

"That street was laid out for the people to travel in and out. It's (the closing) going to benefit one but inconvenience the rest of us," Merion said.

Bill Rodriguez, a member of the Emmanuel Baptist Church and area property owner testified, "I shouldn't be deprived, as a businessman, the access of that street."

Rodriguez, also a planning and zoning commission member, contended that the Guadalupe church should try to control traffic by erecting stop signs or using a crossing guard.

Originally the request to close the street was denied June 15 by the city Planning and Zoning commission based on the other church objections, said Dave Thurbon, assistant planning director.

Before the street is closed, Guadalupe officials must pay the city $6,720 for vacated right of way, replat the area and erect barriers across both ends of the street.

Arrested with Deliz were Odessans Sally Araceli Quinonez, 24, Francisco Rico, 18, Elberto Blanco Reyes, 47, Carolina Rico, 25, and Rodolfo Puente. They also were charged Tuesday with possession of cocaine, Luckie said.

Rico, Reyes and Puente are being held in lieu of $50,000 bond each. Bond for Ms. Quinonez and Ms. Rico was set at $25,000 each, Luckie said.

CRIME

"Citizens can help the police agencies so much more...The only problem is that a lot of people are apathetic until it happens to them," he said.

County residents have reported about 180 burglaries to sheriff's officers so far this year, said Turner.

"That an incredible amount considering the county's sparse population and many of the homes are spread apart," he said.

Turner added that only three patrolman cover the 972 miles of county roads at any given time, making it difficult to deter criminal activity.

To make matters worse, he said the county's neighborhood watch program has dwindled in the past few years from 41 to six active organizations.

To once again generate support for anti-crime efforts, Turner said, crime prevention associations are stirring up interest across the state.

"I hear they've been pretty successful in the bigger cities like San Antonio, Dallas and Houston," he said. "We in West Texas would like to set ourselves apart from everyone else."

WEATHER

what became for some a day of raucous splashing, pool managers reported.

As many as 450 persons were reported at Doug Russell Pool on Midland Drive, manager Martha Gerken said.

At Hulff Pool, located near the intersection of Main Street and New Jersey Avenue, water revelers were "90 percent kids," reported manager Randell Hunt. "They're pretty noisy," he said.

Tuesday's high of 100 degrees was 2 degrees cooler than the record for that day, which was set in 1972, the weather service reported.

Still, Midlanders may count themselves luckier than their Texas neighbors to the south.

Robin Blanton, a waitress at Pancho's Restaurant in Terlingua, reported a thermometer-popping 117 degrees at her location Tuesday.

Big Bend area residents when temperatures go that high "get under an air conditioner," she said.

But in Prudhoe Bay on Alaska's north coast — where general store clerk Laurie Owens said "we got all kinds of Texans" — temperatures were a comfortable 42 degrees.

"That's pretty warm for right now," Owens observed.

School district withdraws employee AIDS policy

CORPUS CHRISTI (AP) — School trustees withdrew an employee AIDS policy because a health officials said recent state legislation is unclear about the superintendent's authority to report AIDS cases to health officials.

Corpus Christi Independent School District board members, for the second time, sent the proposal back to administrators for further review Monday night.

APPEAL

Shifflett, the more prison-seasoned of the trio, had served 14 years in prison for offenses ranging from bank robbery and kidnapping to escape.

The jailer, Ms. Wilson, testified that Shifflett and Brunson had assaulted and overwhelmed her after she had opened their cell door to bring them coffee. In the meantime, Miller, who had grabbed the jailer's keys, unsuccessfully was trying to open the gate — with the wrong key — in an apparent escape attempt. But Miller testified that his bungled effort to the open the gate was to let in police officers so that they could quell the disturbance.

Shifflett testified that the attempted escape was his plan and that Brunson and Miller were unaware of his scheme. He said Brunson had not assaulted the jailer; only he did that. Rather, Shifflett testified that Brunson had cautioned him not to harm the jailer.

Shifflett testified contrary to the wishes of his attorney, Rick Strange of Midland, and admitted his guilt.

Brunson, however, listened to the advice of his attorney, B.J. Brown of Odessa, and did not testify.

Assistant U.S. Attorney Jake Snyder, who prosecuted the trio, said that Shifflett had an ulterior motive in confessing and trying to take on the burden. Shifflett wanted to be "the big man" in prison in the event he had gotten Brunson and Miller "off the hook." Shifflett's confession was a sham, Snyder said.

Among Miller's several areas of appeal include "insufficient evidence" to support the jury's guilty verdict, "overwhelming evidence" contrary to the jury verdict, failure of the court to grant Miller's motion for a directed verdict of acquittal and "any other errors" which Miller and his counsel, Harris Kerr of Midland, may discover in reviewing the case.

Shifflett does not allege lack of evidence in his notice of appeal. Rather, he alleges errors in the judge's rulings during the trial, failure of the judge to grant his request to use the federal law library, and "any other errors."

All three defendants were appointed attorneys to defend them and to appeal their convictions.

After the April 6 escape attempt, Shifflett, Miller and Brunson were separated and locked up in single cells.

On a total battery of California Achievement Tests, given yearly to MISD students, second graders performed at a third-grade level — four months ahead of their national counterparts, said Mrs. Ferguson prior to the meeting Tuesday.

Fourth graders achieved at the fifth-grade level — five months ahead of their national counterparts, while sixth graders were eight months ahead of their national counterparts with a performance gauged at the seventh grade level.

Assistant Superintendent H. Lamar Hebert attributed the high scores to the excellent teachers in the district.

DEATHS

Marshall Earl Jolly

Jolly

Dr. Marshall Earl Jolly, 62, of Midland, died Tuesday evening at an Odessa hospital following a lengthy illness.

Services will be Thursday, 11 a.m., at the First Baptist Church with Bob Hopkins, minister of education, officiating.

Burial will follow at Resthaven Memorial Park under the direction of Ellis Funeral Home.

Jolly was born Aug. 14, 1924, in Clyde, where he was reared. He graduated from Clyde High School in 1941 and in September of 1942, entered the U.S. Air Corps and served until March of 1946. Following his discharge, he attended Southern College of Optometry in Memphis, Tenn. He graduated with a doctor of optometry degree in 1949.

He opened his first practice in Ranger and stayed there until moving to Midland in 1959. He became associated with Dr. Brandon Rea and Dr. Robert Voss in Midland Visual Clinic until October of 1971. At that time he opened his own practice, which he continued to operate until his retirement in Dec. 1986.

He married the former Gwendolyn Swanzy on Sept. 1, 1946.

Jolly was a member of First Baptist Church; a former member of the Ranger Jaycees and Midland Jaycees, and a past president of Ranger Lions Club. He was a Mason and a member of the Acacia Lodge in Midland and the Suez Shrine Temple. He was a lifetime contributor to the Shrine Crippled Children's Hospital.

Jolly was affiliated with the Texas Optometric Association, the American Optometric Association, the West Texas Optometric Society, the Optometric Extension Program and Foundation for Research and Education in Vision. In 1955, he was selected as Optometrist of the Year by the West Central Texas Optometric Society.

Survivors include his wife; three daughters, Mrs. Reginald (Jeri) McCaslin, Mrs. Marc (Lee Ann) Lewis and Mrs. Joe (Marsha) Pickering, all of Midland; two sisters, Mrs. Maude Hannaford of Raleigh, N.C., and Mrs. Hilton (Pearl) Edwards of Clyde; three brothers, Forrest Jolly of Oklahoma City, Reo Jolly of Clyde, and Dr. Grady B. Jolly of Abilene; and six grandchildren.

Chuck McWright

Chuck McWright, 38-year old former Midland resident, died June 15.

Graveside services will be Saturday, 2 p.m., at Memory Lawn Cemetery in Lockhart, under the direction of McCurdy Funeral Home of Lockhart.

McWright, currently of Missouri, was born Oct. 4, 1948, in Kermit. He graduated from Kermit High School in 1967 and from Tarleton State University in 1972.

Survivors include three sons, Jason McWright, Shane McWright, and Aaron McWright; four brothers, Mac McWright of Round Rock, Rick McWright and David Dillon, both of Midland, and John Dillon of Kermit; three sisters, Lyn Denton of Schertz, Carol Gray of Midland and Cathy Dillon of Kermit.

Anne Adams

Services for Anne Adams were to be today, 2 p.m., at Westside Church of Christ.

Pallbearers were to be George Anderson, Charles Barber, Nelson Kirby, Don Adams, Bill Cave and Bill Beair.

Maude Dell Crawford

Maude Dell Crawford, 85, of Midland died Monday afternoon at a local hospital.

Services will be Friday, 10 a.m., in Archer City, with burial to follow at Ringgold. Aulds Funeral Home in Archer City is handling arrangements.

Mrs. Crawford was born Jan. 20, 1902, in Kaufman. She married John L. Crawford and they moved to Archer City. She was a seamstress.

She was preceded in death by her husband in 1966. In 1984, she moved to Midland.

Survivors include two sons, Donald O. Crawford and J.L. Crawford, both of Midland; one sister, Mrs. Banche Ozee of Henrietta; four grandchildren; and five great-grandchildren.

Andrews hospital asks OC to take over program

By FRANK TROMBLEY
Staff Writer

ODESSA — The Odessa College Board of Trustees Tuesday night heard a request from financially troubled Permian General Hospital in Andrews to take over its nursing program.

In a letter to OC President Phil Speegle, Glen D. Bunn, the hospital's chief executive officer, said the proposal had been discussed with the hospital's board of managers. "I feel that I can express the board's willingness to work a satisfactory arrangement with you," Bunn said.

Speegle told trustees no state funding is available for the hospital-run program.

With State College Coordinating Board approval, he said, a nursing program under the auspices of OC would qualify for state funding.

The OC president said a comparable program run by OC at the hospital in Kermit has worked out very well, with all of the 12-to-15 students passing their courses.

Speegle said he believed such a program would provide a real service to Andrews. "I think it would be a good thing," he said.

He told board members no action would be required on the request until the State College Coordinating Board is contacted.

In other action Tuesday night, Speegle said he had hoped to be able to inform board members on the status of legislative budget efforts regarding financing for education.

However, he said, the Texas Legislature still has not decided which budget proposal to accept. But the budget proposed by Gov. Bill Clements would cut funds for higher education by 23 percent, Speegle noted.

"If the governor's bill passes with no new taxes," the OC president said, "education in the State of Texas will be in real trouble."

Because OC has "managed its finances wisely" the college could probably operate for about three years without increased funding, but no longer than that.

If funding is decreased, he said, some schools will be able to open this fall only if they can convince employees to work without pay until a state budget is passed.

Speegle noted the board is required to set the tax rate for fiscal 1987-88 by Aug. 10.

"How do you set the tax rate if you don't know what the state budget will be?" he asked.

With tax valuations down about $800,000 from last year, he said, OC board members may "have to set a much higher tax rate" this year if the state doesn't get a budget by Aug. 10.

Odessa's Augesen angry at acquittal in stabbing death

By FRANK TROMBLEY
Staff Writer

ODESSA — District Attorney Eric Augesen expressed anger Tuesday after an Ector County jury found 22-year-old Gary Lynn Wauqua not guilty of the 1984 stabbing death of a 39-year-old tavern owner.

Nearly two years ago, another Ector County jury found Wauqua guilty of the killing of Gayle Stifflemire and sentenced him to 99 years in prison.

However, the court of appeals in El Paso held Wauqua had not received effective counsel because his attorney, Lawrence Barber, had failed to seek a ruling on whether a witness against him was an accomplice to the crime.

The appeals court ordered 70th District Court Judge Gene Ater to hold a new trial for Wauqua.

Donnie Lee Bretz, 27, Wauqua's half brother, was convicted in August 1985 in 70th District Court, fined $10,000 and sentenced to 99 years in prison for the murder of Ms. Stifflemire. The conviction of Bretz still stands.

The killing of Ms. Stifflemire purportedly occurred during the robbery of the Tally Ho Lounge, 3114 W. 2nd St., Oct. 25, 1984. Neither the trial of Bretz nor the earlier trial of Wauqua clearly revealed who wielded the knife that inflicted the stab wounds that killed the tavern owner.

The appeals court noted Keith Wayne Hall, 22, had been with Bretz and Wauqua in the bar prior to the robbery. The court noted Hall had driven the car away after the tavern's cash register had been loaded into the car, later emptied and disposed of.

The appeals court said Barber should have asked the judge to rule if Hall, who had been granted immunity from prosecution to testify, was actually an accomplice.

Prior to the beginning of Wauqua's retrial, Augesen indicated prosecution would be difficult because witnesses would be hard to find.

WEST TEXAS IN BRIEF

Autopsy fails to reveal cause of infant's death

From Staff Reports

A preliminary autopsy report failed to show what caused the death of a newborn infant whose partially decomposed body was found last week at a local motel, Midland police said Tuesday.

Detectives received the report Tuesday, but learned little from it, according to Cpl. Jim White, police spokesman. White said the cause of the death and time of death are still a mystery, but he said the case has not been classified as a homicide.

"It is still being considered an unexplained death," White said. "We still don't know what happened."

The body, with umbilical cord still attached, was found in a paper sack last Thursday night in a door space between two rooms at the Rodeway Inn, 3601 W. Wall Ave., by a man who had just rented a second-floor room.

Because of the smell, the man thought the sack contained trash, police reports said.

White said detectives have interviewed several witnesses, but have not turned up "anything concrete yet."

The investigation is continuing, but is still classified as an unexplained death, White said.

K-9 unit locates suspect

From Staff Reports

Police Roundup

A 17-year-old Odessa man is in city jail this morning after he was tracked by a dog from the Midland police K-9 unit and arrested near the scene of a home burglary late Tuesday.

K-9 Officer Pat Bostick and his dog, "Joker," arrived about 11:45 p.m. Tuesday after a woman reported a burglary in progress in the 3100 block of Golf Course Road. The man was followed through an alley and vacant lot, and found hiding in an evergreen tree near the intersection of Golf Course and Northrup, police reports said.

Ten minutes earlier, police had been called, and a residence was found with the front door kicked in. Other officers were then notified and a search was organized, reports said.

Police have a suspect in the burglary of a residence in the 4500 block of Lanham, reports said. Among the items stolen in the burglary were a solid gold watch valued at $3,000, a diamond necklace valued at $3,000, two gold rope bracelets valued at $1,200, a pair or pearl earrings valued at $400, a gold rope necklace valued at $350, and a pair of gold earrings valued at $100.

The burglary occurred Tuesday, police said.

From Staff Reports

Eleven Midland residents have completed studies at Midland College for certification as Homemaker/Home Health Aides.

They will receive their certificates at brief commencement ceremonies Thursday at 2 p.m. in the college's Health Sciences Building.

The 160-hour course is sponsored by the University of Texas Medical Branch at Galveston's School of Allied Health Sciences and conducted locally by the Midland College Department of Continuing Education.

Graduates are certified to be employed in such health care fields as nursing homes and home care for Medicare patients.

Carmen Edwards, R.N., an instructor for Midland College's Associate Degree Nursing program, taught the course.

Those scheduled to receive their certificates Thursday include: Thelma L. Bishop-Duvall, Rama Brown, Ilma L. Browne, Carol Earlene Cunningham, Juliette Young Dickens, Lish Linette Durham, Hazel Annette Gaston, Sylvia Smith, Reba Annette Swinney, Marguerite Jacquline White, and Melvin E. Wright.

Convicted killer put to death for '82 slaying

HUNTSVILLE (AP) — A convicted killer who blamed drug use for his troubles with the law was put to death early today for the 1982 robbery-slaying of a Beaumont jeweler.

Elliot Rod Johnson, 28, of Port Arthur, asked for forgiveness while family members of his victim waited across the street from the Texas Department of Corrections Walls Unit to assure themselves the execution had been carried out.

"I'm very sorry for bringing all the hurt and pain to everyone who loved me so much," Johnson said in his final statement. "I hope all my friends find it in their hearts to forgive me."

The drugs began flowing into his arms at 12:43 a.m. He was pronounced dead at 12:55 a.m.

The execution was delayed for more than a half hour when prison officials were unable to find a suitable vein for the lethal needle, Attorney General Jim Mattox said. Instead of the usual practice of one needle in each arm, Johnson, who had a history of drug use, had two needles in his left arm.

Johnson received a lethal injection for the shooting death of Joseph Granado. Granado, 67, and a fellow employee at his downtown Beaumont store, Arturo Melendez, 45, were gunned down during a daylight robbery April 8, 1982.

"I felt I had to be here for this," Granado's daughter, Rosie Moreno, said after waiting in a nearby prison office for word of Johnson's death. "I had to see justice is done. I don't want to be mean and ugly to him. I just want to see justice be done."

Johnson, a 10th-grade dropout who also dropped out of the Army because he couldn't cope with military life, unsuccessfully filed appeals to seek a fourth delay of his execution.

"I haven't killed anyone," Johnson said in his last interview two weeks ago. "I feel like I'm being railroaded."

Johnson and another man, Maurice Andrews, were sentenced to death for the Granado slaying. An execution date has not been set for Andrews. A third man received a life prison term and a fourth got 30 years.

Jeweler was about to retire, widow says

Associated Press

After more than 40 years in the jewelry business, Joe Granado was looking forward to retirement.

His partner, Arturo Melendez, was preparing to buy the thriving downtown Beaumont shop.

But on April 8, 1982, they were gunned down during a robbery.

Elliot Rod Johnson, one of four men convicted in the robbery-slayings, was executed early today for Granado's death.

"He worked all of his life," Granado's widow, Lena, says. "He really didn't have any hobbies. He was fixing to retire in about a year. He was old enough to retire and he was going to turn his business over to Arthur.

"I don't think it's bitterness," she says of her husband's death. "It's just a deep hurt."

Mrs. Granado, of Vidor, said she and her husband were within two weeks of celebrating their third wedding anniversary when he was killed. They had known each other for years since she worked in downtown Beaumont checking parking meters. After both of their spouses died, they married.

"We had talked one time about this situation," she said about his fears of robbery. "He said he had been doing this for 40-some years and he told me he never was afraid. Sometimes he'd work at night till 12 or 1 o'clock during Christmas or other busy times."

Mrs. Granado says she doesn't consider herself a cruel person and was opposed to capital punishment before her husband's slaying.

"I used to think it was terrible to see somebody die," she says. "I said I wouldn't want to sit on a jury and decide that. I don't think that way anymore."

UH to liquidate investments in firms linked to South Africa

HOUSTON (AP) — The University of Houston board of regents' decision to totally divest from companies doing business in South Africa makes the school the first Southern university to do so, one regent said.

A resolution approved unanimously by the board will liquidate UH's $6.4 million initial investment in companies doing business in South Africa over a two-year period and prohibit investing school funds in companies operating there.

"We are the first in the South and probably the Southwest to do this," Regent Xavier Lemond said of Tuesday's vote. "We've been working on this for quite a while. The first step toward complete divestment was our endorsement of the Sullivan Principles in 1985.

"When you look at what our investment managers have been doing, the (university's) portfolio shows we've been gradually moving away from companies in South Africa.

"The resolution specifically says our money managers or university officers will not invest university funds in companies that do business in South Africa," Lemond said.

The resolution does not dictate how UH officials should invest.

Linda Bright, UH treasurer, said $6.4 million of the school's $42 million endowment is invested in 19 companies doing business in South Africa.

Parents should care about all children, new PTA head says

DALLAS (AP) — Manya Ungar, newly elected president of the National PTA, says she wants parents to get involved not only with their children but also with caring for other children's needs.

"We cannot and should not avoid the problems that exist for someone else's child," she said Tuesday.

"All children are deserving of our efforts. If we wish to shape a better tomorrow for our own children, then we must make sure there are effective education and social programs for all children today."

Mrs. Ungar made her statement as delegates of the nation's oldest and largest parent-teacher association approved a resolution urging state boards of education and legislatures to require that home schools and other non-accredited schools meet minimum education standards.

The resolution passed easily because most delegates see non-accredited schools as potentially harmful to children's education, said Tari Marshall, a spokeswoman for the National PTA at its annual convention here.

Mrs. Ungar, a 29-year PTA veteran and mother of two from Scotch Plains, N.J., takes the helm of the national organization at a time when parents are joining in increasing numbers.

PTA membership plummeted after reaching an all-time high of more than 12 million in the early 1960s, but it has rebounded from a low of 5.1 million with the largest period of growth for the 90-year old organization. Nearly a million new members over the past five years have taken PTA ranks to 6.1 million.

Nine hopefuls to address LULAC meeting

CORPUS CHRISTI (AP) — Nine candidates will heat up the 1988 presidential race as they converge on the League of United Latin American Citizens national convention.

Convention organizers say the number of prominent contenders shows the importance of Texas and its Hispanic vote in the March 8, 1988, "Super Tuesday" primary.

The convention, beginning today, could be seen as the point where the 1988 campaign gets rolling, said Ruben Bonilla, convention chairman.

"I believe that it is the kickoff," Bonilla said, "and South Texas is serving as the springboard for the presidential campaign."

But a weak response from the Republican candidates invited has LULAC members and some Republicans wondering why the party is passing up the opportunity.

The convention schedule includes all of the top contenders from the Democratic Party, but only one Republican.

"The Republican Party is remiss in conceding the Hispanic vote to the Democratic Party," said Bonilla, a Corpus Christi attorney and former LULAC president. "Neither party has a lock on the Hispanic vote, and the Republicans' concession as reflected by their absence means the Democrats stand to gain."

He said LULAC invited at least seven of the top potential Republican nominees, as well as every Cabinet member, but only U.S. Rep. Jack Kemp of New York accepted. Bonilla, who is chairman of Mexican American Democrats of Texas, praised Kemp for avoiding what he described as the other Republicans' "shortsightedness in writing off the Hispanic vote."

John Buckley, Kemp's press secretary, agreed. "We find it very curious that none of the other Republican candidates is interested in speaking to a group that's part of the fastest growing community in the electorate," Buckley said in a telephone interview.

By the time the convention began today, some delegates already had heard from one candidate, Democratic Rep. Richard Gephardt of Missouri, who initially declined an invitation to speak, but later changed his mind. He fit in an appearance at a pre-convention breakfast Tuesday before a mostly South Texan group.

Other Democrats scheduled for the five-day convention are Sen. Joseph Biden of Delaware, Sen. Albert Gore of Tennessee, Gov. Michael Dukakis of Massachusetts, the Rev. Jesse Jackson, former Arizona Gov. Bruce Babbitt and Sen. Paul Simon of Ilinois.

Libertarian candidate Russell Means, known best for his activities in the American Indian Movement, also will appear.

Chairman George Strake of the Republican Party of Texas said he would like to see more GOP candidates seizing the chance to speak to LULAC.

"Frankly, I think they should have," Strake said, but added they might have been put off by LULAC's partisanship when Ruben Bonilla and his brother, Tony, held presidential posts in the late 1970s and early 1980s.

Bombs damage Alfonsin offices

BUENOS AIRES, Argentina, (AP) — Bombs exploded early today in 11 offices of President Raul Alfonsin's Radical Civic Union party, causing damage but no casualties, police reported.

No one claimed responsibility for the attacks. The bombs went off in party offices in Buenos Aires and in the interior cities of Mendoza and Tucuman.

The offices were badly damaged but no one was hurt, according to police reports.

Party spokesmen said they believed the attacks could be linked to the controversial and recently enacted Due Obedience Act. The law, declared constitutional by the Supreme Court Tuesday, grants immunity to hundreds of military and police officers accused of human rights violations under the previous military regime.

Under the law, signed June 8 by Alfonsin, only generals accused of human rights abuses during the anti-leftist campaign by the former military regime can be tried. Officers with ranks of brigadier general and below cannot be prosecuted because any actions committed would have been following superiors' orders, the law says.

Iraqi helicopter downed by Iran

NICOSIA, Cyprus (AP) — Iranian fighter jets shot down an Iraqi helicopter early today after it attacked a merchant vessel near the Iranian port of Bushehr, Iran's official news agency reported.

Gulf-based salvage executives in Bahrain and Turkish state radio in Ankara said the vessel was a Turkish freighter but they differed on its name and tonnage.

Also today, Iran's main opposition group claimed its forces killed or wounded 138 Iranian government troops in attacks on four government military bases near the border with Iraq.

The salvage executives, speaking on condition of anonymity, said a missile hit the ship about 10 miles off Bushehr in the northern gulf.

They said the 36,010-ton Arpad, owned by the Denizcilik Anonim Sirketi Co. of Istanbul, put out a distress call.

But in Ankara, Turkish state radio identified the ship as the 30,600-ton Hira-3, owned by Sahlan Transmarine Co., and said it was hit at 1 a.m. by an unidentified warplane.

Becker at ease on Wimbledon's center stage

Martina wins early match

WIMBLEDON, England (AP) — Martina Navratilova, seeking a record sixth consecutive Wimbledon title and an end to a disappointing year, took just 32 minutes to defeat Claudia Porwik of West Germany 6-1, 6-0 in a first-round match on Center Court today

Second-seeded Steffi Graf of West Germany, fresh from beating Navratilova for her first Grand Slam title in the French Open, kept her 1987 record unbeaten, defeating Adriana Villagran of Argentina 6-0, 6-2. Graf won the last five games after trailing 2-1 in the second set.

Also winning easily were Helena Sukova of Czechoslovakia, the women's fourth seed, who defeated Jo Louis of Britain 6-1, 6-4, and fifth-seedd Pam Shriver of the United States, who downed Natalia Medvedeva of the Soviet Union 6-2, 6-1.

Among the men's seeds were three American winners. No. 7 Jimmy Connors beat countryman Mike Davis 6-1, 7-6, 7-6. Tenth seed Tim Mayotte beat Jean Fleuriana of France 6-2, 6-3, 6-3. And No. 15 David Pate beat Sergio Casal of Spain 6-4, 7-6, 7-5.

The third day of the two-week-long grass-court Grand Slam tournament opened under the best weather conditions thus far, attracting a large crowd that included the Duchess of York, wife of Britain's Prince Andrew. After 1½ days of rain, brighter skies and even some sunshine were the order.

West Germany's Boris Becker is down on his knees digging a return against Karel Novacek in a first-round match at Wimbledon Tuesday.

Defending champ advances

By ANDREW WARSHAW

Wimbledon

WIMBLEDON, England (AP) — One glance around the Center Court stands and Boris Becker knew he was back at his favorite tennis arena.

Less than two hours later, the 19-year-old West German had made a successful start in defense of his men's title at Wimbledon without a passing thought to the rain that had held him up for so long.

"I was probably one of the few players who did not really care about the weather," Becker said after his 6-4, 6-2, 6-4 first-round victory Tuesday over Karel Novacek of Czechoslovakia, the opening match of the rain-delayed championships at the All-England Club.

"I don't feel any pressure here. It is the place of my success. But I'm glad we could get out on court today when we did," he said.

Under gloomy skies, Stefan Edberg of Sweden made sure he got into the second round fast, posting 6-0, 6-0, 6-0 victory of countryman Stefan Eriksson in one hour.

Edberg became only the third player in Wimbledon history to have scored a triple-love success at the grass-court Grand Slam event.

The world's No. 1 player, Ivan Lendl of Czechoslovakia, also beat the rain but struggled on his least-favorite surface, losing a set to qualifier Christian Saceanu of West Germany, but prevailed 6-2, 3-6, 6-3, 7-5.

Others were not so lucky as the showers that wiped out Monday's play returned on the second day of the championships and persisted until midway through the afternoon, causing a further disruption in the program.

Among the players who spent another frustrating day in the locker room were No. 3 seed Mats Wilander of Sweden and No. 10 Tim Mayotte of the U.S.

Both were to make their third tries today, Wilander against Gary Muller of South Africa, Mayotte against Jean Fleurian of France.

Matches featuring Americans Jimmy Connors and Chris Evert and Yannick Noah of France were to follow, while West German Steffi Graf, the No. 2 women's seed, was to follow Mayotte on Court One.

Other seeded men to post first-round victories Monday were No. 11 Pat Cash of Australia, No. 12 Brad Gilbert of the United States and No. 13 Joakim Nystrom of Sweden.

On the women's side, No. 7 Gabriela Sabatini of Argentina reached the second round, along with No. 8 Manuela Maleeva of Bulgaria and No. 11 Lori McNeil of the U.S.

Wimbledon being Wimbledon, officials ruled out the possibility of making up for the backlog of matches by allowing play on the middle Sunday, traditionally a rest day.

Where is 'Plan B' for 1988 Summer Olympics?

By GEORGE VECSEY
N.Y. Times News Service

NEW YORK — When asked if there is an alternate plan for the 1988 Summer Games, scheduled for South Korea, the leaders of the Olympic movement say there is no such thing.

The real question is: how could there not be — even if it exists only in somebody's head?

How could the leadership of the Olympic movement not be planning for one city, or perhaps five cities, where the Games could go in a hurry sometime next year?

These worldwide leaders did not reach power in business and the politics of sports without always having a worst-possible scenario filed away in a desk drawer, or worked out in secret, or tucked away in their minds.

The Olympic leaders watch and read about the demonstrators seeking political changes, and they know the 1988 Summer Games are one of the biggest wedges both sides have. But the top Olympic officials are taking the long view of the current crisis.

"It's not in anybody's best interest to stir things up," said Richard Pound of Canada, vice president of the International Olympic Committee, who visited the offices of The New York Times Tuesday. "Sometimes you can get media-driven."

One of the most forthright officials to emerge from world amateur sports in many years, Pound said he has given no thought to a substitute site for the Summer Games.

"I may sound optimistic and unwavering," he said recently, "but my feeling is that, in the end, things will settle down. Everybody in South Korea has such a stake in it being a sensible country. Nobody wants to be responsible for screwing it up. I think you'll see some kind of cultural solidarity emerge."

As a Canadian who speaks French and English and has worked hard at his Spanish, Pound has risen faster in the Olympic movement than a American official might have done. He has access to a world view as well as information from his government in Ottawa, and he insists it is not time to be talking about the Games' being threatened.

"You're looking at the kind of convulsions we had in North America and France in 1968, that Japan had in the early 70s," said Pound, a tax lawyer who lives in Montreal. "This is the kind of thing you have to go through. One just hopes it does not get out of hand."

Pound's view that South Korea was not too dangerous at the moment was echoed by Robert Helmick, president of the U.S. Olympic Committee, and one of two American members of the international committee.

"If I were responsible for one swimming team right now, we would send them here," Helmick said in a telephone interview from Seoul a few days ago.

"But I don't see the military caving in, the police are in control, and the demonstrations are very focused. This is not to say the situation is not serious if the government doesn't change things. It is quite serious."

The Korean organizing hosts have told Helmick that the protests "prove they have a democracy, that this doesn't affect the mood of the people toward the Games. But I don't necessarily agree with that, and Western witnesses might not agree, either.

"People tell me there is more citizen sympathy all the time. As a U.S. citizen, I hear this as a message for change. Some people in the U.S. business community feel change will come before 1988."

While waiting for any changes that might happen, Helmick said: "As an IOC member, I say it's just not possible" to plan to shift the Games. You either go forward or you cancel, and that has never happened except in wartime."

Nobody can openly talk about change because that might only invite problems from one country or another, but what would the IOC do if South Korea appears unstable after next February's proposed new regime?

"You'd have to ask the question," Pound said. "You'd have to say, 'It appears you are not strong enough. Let us know that the government of Korea can have a peaceful Games.' In the meantime, we must let the process settle itself. We cannot hold a special session, because that would really be interfering in their domestic situation."

Some potential hosts, including Mayor Tom Bradley of Los Angeles, have sent none-too-subtle reminders that their cities would be available. But there is some question whether even Peter Ueberroth and his Merrie Band could organize the hotels and stadiums and unions and volunteers in a major Western city within a year.

The one city in the world that could gear up for the Games in short order would be Moscow, where officials could arbitrarily seal off the city, commandeer all hotel spaces, and put all the apparatus into operation. But the 1988 Games are irrevocably locked into late September, when Moscow might be a bit too cold and too dark.

Pound said any "consortium" of emergency sites would have to be spaced reasonably close together — five in northern Europe, for example, rather than Tokyo, Moscow, Los Angeles, Mexico City and Athens, for example.

"You're 15 months away, come on," Pound said, adding that he had no idea when the fail-safe time was for stopping television cameras and sports equipment and advance officials from being put on planes. "Three months might be a reasonable time, but it's a moving target. I'm confident about Seoul."

Pound and Juan Antonio Samaranch, president of the IOC, may have every reason to be "confident" about South Korea, but it is hard to believe they do not think about their options — even if they don't talk about them.

Angels' White shows Rangers another side

Associated Press

AL Roundup

ARLINGTON — On Monday night, when California's Devon White had three hits and made a sparkling defensive play, Angels manager Gene Mauch said his rookie outfielder was going to get better and better.

True to Mauch's prediction, White, a former Midland Angel, did even better Tuesday night, hitting home runs left-handed and right-handed in leading the Angels to an 8-6 win over the Texas Rangers.

"Last night (Monday), Devon showed you his arm, speed and defense," said Mauch. "And tonight he showed you something else."

When White went to the plate for the third time Tuesday night, Rangers starter Charlie Hough was working on a no-hitter through 5⅔ innings and was nursing a 2-0 lead.

Two swings of the bat later, the score was tied as White connected for his 12th of the season to break up the no-hitter. And on the next pitch, Wally Joyner hit his 15th of the year to tie it at 2-all.

"The home runs are unexpected," said White, who last year hit 14 in 112 games for Edmonton of the Pacific Coast League. "But Hough hung one of his knucklers up there and I got a pretty good hack at it. I was surprised it went so far."

His second of the night — and 13th of the year — went even farther, into the centerfield bleachers off reliever Mitch Williams.

Hough, 7-3, was victimized by his own lack of control and by shaky defense. Four of the seven runs charged against him were unearned, including three in the Angels' seventh that turned a 4-4 tie into a 7-4 California lead.

Joyner drove home two of the runs with a 2-out double.

Willie Fraser, 4-5, survived six innings of near-disaster to earn the victory.

Yankees 2, Orioles 1

Gary Ward hit a dramatic homer with two out in the eighth inning as the Yankees won their ninth game in 12 and handed the Orioles their 22nd loss in the last 25 games.

Rick Rhoden, 9-4, had battled through the first seven innings against Mark Williamson, a 27-year-old rookie making his first major league start.

Blue Jays 8, Tigers 7

Willie Upshaw hit a grand slam and Fred McGriff and George Bell also homered to spark Toronto.

Upshaw's homer off Jeff Robinson, 4-4, keyed Toronto's six-run fourth inning. The Blue Jays had loaded the bases on two-out walks to Jesse Barfield and Ernie Whitt and Bell's single.

Riles burns Angels with two doubles

From Staff Reports

EL PASO — Ernie Riles keyed a four-run uprising in the bottom of the seventh inning to erase a two-run Midland lead and give El Paso a 7-5 win against the Angels in Texas League action Tuesday night.

The win gave El Paso a 4-2 edge in the six-game series to open the second half of the season. The Angels, 2-4, return home tonight for a six-game set with Wichita at 7 p.m. at Angel Stadium.

The left-hand hitting shortstop Riles, who hit .252 in 145 games for Milwaukee in the major leagues last season, drove home the tying runs with his second double of the game in the seventh off the left-handed Miguel Garcia, 5-3. After an intentional walk to Garrett Nago, Garcia then yielded a second two-run double to another lefthander, Tim Casey, to give the Diablos the lead.

Midland had just staked starter Phil Venturino with a 4-2 lead with a three-run seventh of its own. But the usually dependable Garcia couldn't hang on to the lead. Jamie Briscoe upped his mark to 5-2 in relief.

Whitson surprises Astros

Associated Press

SAN DIEGO — Ed Whitson was pitching one of the best games of his career — and he didn't want to spoil it by thinking about it.

"I'm superstitious," said Whitson, whose two-hitter gave the San Diego Padres a 4-1 victory over the Houston Astros Tuesday night. "I don't look at the scoreboard, because when I do the very next inning I get roped."

Whitson didn't have to look at the scoreboard. He retired the last seven Astros hitters for his second complete game in his last three starts. Whitson walked five and struck out six.

"Its the best I've ever seen him pitch," Houston Manager Hal Lanier said about Whitson, 8-6. "He did a great job against us. Our scouting report on him had been that during his last three outings he has been getting sharper every time out."

On June 12, Whitson pitched a four-hit, 5-0 victory over the Giants in San Francisco, his first shutout in the National League in six years. Whitson pitched a three-hitter against Cincinnati on June 15, 1983.

That was the fewest hits he had allowed in a complete game until Tuesday night.

Houston's Nolan Ryan, 4-7, pitched six innings, allowing four hits and four runs, two unearned. He struck out four, giving him 109 in 91⅔ innings.

In the Padres' second, Carmelo Martinez singled and John Kruk followed with single. Center fielder Billy Hatcher ran by the ball and Martinez scored from first on the two-base error. Two outs later, Garry Templeton singled to score Kruk.

The Astros scored in the seventh when Kevin Bass and Cruz walked to open the inning. With two out, pinch-hitter Terry Puhl singled, scoring Bass.

Reds 4 Giants 1

SAN FRANCISCO — Ron Robinson allowed four hits in 6⅓ innings, and reliever Rob Murphy got out of a seventh-inning jam as Cincinnati beat San Francisco.

Robinson, 3-2, struck out three and walked one before needing help from Murphy in the late innings.

Eric Davis and Dave Parker singled to open the seventh, Buddy Bell grounded into a double play before Bo Diaz doubled home Davis to make it 2-0.

Cubs 4, Mets 1

NEW YORK — Rick Sutcliffe pitched a four-hitter over 8⅔ innings and Paul Noce hit a two-run double in the fifth inning, followed by Mike Brumley's two-run homer, leading Chicago over New York.

Sutcliffe, 10-3, retired 16 consecutive batters until pinch-hitter Lee Mazzilli led off the ninth with a single. Two outs later, Darryl Strawberry singled and Lee Smith came on to strike out Kevin McReynolds for the final out and his major league-leading 20th save. In 44 innings this season, Smith has 55 strikeouts.

Sutcliffe, who has won seven of his last eight decisions, struck out five and walked two.

Ron Darling, 2-5, remained winless in 12 starts since April 22 as his personal losing streak reached a career-high five.

Phillies 4, Cardinals 1

ST. LOUIS — Shane Rawley pitched a four-hitter over eight innings and Philadelphia beat St. Louis to snap a six-game losing streak and give Manager Lee Elia his first victory with the Phillies.

Steve Bedrosian pitched the ninth inning for his 17th save and 10th in his last 10 appearances, one short of tying Sparky Lyle's major-league record. Rawley, 8-4, walked three and struck out four.

The Phillies took a 1-0 lead in the first when Milt Thompson singled, stole second, and scored on Von Hayes' single off Lee Tunnell, 3-2.

St. Louis outfielder Vince Coleman, who had reached base in 50 straight games, fouled out, grounded out twice and struck out to end the streak.

Expos 8, Pirates 2

PITTSBURGH — Reid Nichols and Mike Fitzgerald homered during Montreal's three-run second inning and Neal Heaton won his 10th game as the Expos beat Pittsburgh.

Heaton, 10-3, won for the seventh time in his last eight decisions by limiting the Pirates to a run and five hits over five innings. After Heaton was forced to leave because of a sprained right knee, Andy McGaffigan came on and pitched two innings before yielding to Jeff Parrett. Parrett pitched the final two innings for his first major league save.

Dodgers 3, Braves 2

LOS ANGELES — Fernando Valenzuela pitched a five-hitter for his first victory in almost a month and Franklin Stubbs hit a three-run homer, giving Los Angeles a victory over Atlanta.

Valenzuela, 6-5, struck out four and walked four en route to his fifth complete game, tying him with Pittsburgh's Rick Reuschel for the National League lead.

It was Valenzuela's first victory since May 27, snapping a personal three-game losing streak and a three-game skid by the Dodgers. The lefthander improved his career record against the Braves at Dodger Stadium to 7-0.

Schatzeder sent to Minnesota

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — The Philadelphia Phillies traded veteran lefthanded pitcher Dan Schatzeder to the Minnesota Twins Tuesday for two minor-league players and purchased the contract of pitcher Doug Bair from the Maine Guides of the International League.

Schatzeder, 32, who has played at least part of 10 seasons in the majors, compiled a 3-1 record with a 4.14 ERA in 26 games this season.

Joe Carter victim of serious beaning

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — Cleveland Indians first baseman Joe Carter suffered a broken nose when he was hit in the face by a pitched ball from reliever Keith Atherton in the seventh inning of Tuesday night's game with the Minnesota Twins.

Carter, a former Midland Cub, was held for observation Tuesday night at Fairview-St. Mary's Hospital in Minneapolis, said Twins team physician Harvey O'Phalen.

"It doesn't look as bad now as we thought originally," said Cleveland Manager Pat Corrales. "We were pretty worried."

Atherton, who hit Carter on the first pitch, said Carter lifted up his left arm and the ball hit his face just below the left elbow. "The ball just got away," said Atherton, who loaded the bases with the hit-by-pitch and then gave way to reliever George Frazier. "It scared me when I saw him taken off on a stretcher. I just thank the Lord he's okay."

"With the lights in the outfield, its a little tough to come in and bat," said Brett Butler, who was on third base when Carter was hit. "Your eyes have to readjust. I think the lighting is different depending on where you stand in this ballpark. Maybe the outfielders should bat with a football helmet."

It was the second time that Carter was hit in the game by a pitch. In the fourth inning, Twins starter Mike Smithson hit Carter in the left hand near the wrist.

The Blue Jays built an 8-1 lead. The Tigers got within 8-3 in the seventh on Lou Whitaker's run-scoring double off Dave Stieb, 6-4, and Kirk Gibson's RBI single off reliever Gary Lavelle. Darrell Evans hit a two-run homer in the Detroit eighth, his 12th, to cut Toronto's lead to three runs.

Red Sox 9, Brewers 5

Rookie Ellis Burks keyed a six-run sixth inning with a three-run, two-out homer as Boston rallied from a five-run deficit to beat Milwaukee.

Wade Boggs extended his hitting streak to 24 games, tops in the major leagues this year, with an RBI single for Boston's first run in the fifth.

Don Baylor ignited the rally in the sixth with his 14th homer. Burks homered off Bill Wegman, 6-7, to tied the score at 5-5. Jim Rice capped the Boston rally with a two-run single.

Steve Crawford, 3-2, the third Boston pitcher, was the winner although forced to retire after being hit on the pitching hand by Jim Paciorek's single with two out in the seventh. Calvin Schiraldi checked the Brewers the rest of the way for his third save.

White Sox 13, Mariners 3

Carlton Fisk and Harold Baines keyed a season-high 18-hit attack with home runs to lead Chicago.

Fisk hit a solo homer in the third inning and added an RBI single in the eighth, when Baines hit a two-run shot for the White Sox. The homer was the seventh for Fisk and the ninth for Baines.

Bill Long, 4-3, was the winner but needed help in the seventh inning. Scott Bankhead, 7-5, took the loss.

Royals 4, Athletics 0

Mark Gubicza allowed only three hits and George Brett knocked in three runs, two with a homer, for Kansas City.

Gubicza, 5-8, outdueled Oakland's Jose Rijo, 0-3. Gubicza retired the last 16 batters, matching his career best with the three-hitter and posting his fifth career shutout and first of the season.

Willie Wilson led off the game with a single and advanced to second on a passed ball. One out later, Brett hit an RBI double and then scored on Danny Tartabull's single for a 2-0 Kansas City lead.

Twins 9, Indians 4

Minnesota's Gary Gaetti drove in four runs with a homer and double, and Mike Smithson won his first game since April 20.

Smithson, who was placed on the disabled list May 11 with an elbow injury, allowed six hits over 6⅓ innings before George Frazier came on to earn his second save.

Frazier relieved with the bases loaded and two out to get the final out of the seventh. He replaced Keith Atherton, who had hit Joe Carter in the face with a pitch to load the bases. Carter, who was taken from the field on a stretcher, suffered a broken nose.

GENERAL

DALLAS — Eighteen students have been announced as the 1986-87 Southwest Conference Senior Scholar-Athlete award winners. Qualifications include classroom excellence, leadership and two years of varsity competition on the SWC level.

Here are the winners and their schools.

Betsy Meacham and Jim Kremers of Arkansas, Shelley Keyes and Mark Buchanan of Baylor, Mui Pin Chan and Jim Robinson of Houston, Regina Cavanaugh and Danny Burgess of Rice, Jamie DeWeese and Den Bishop of Southern Methodist, Kara McGrath and Chris Beckman of Texas, Fiona Connor and Jay Muller of Texas A&M, Jody Nelson and Scott Meyers of Texas Christian and Julia Koncack and James Johnson of Texas Tech...

BASKETBALL

CHARLOTTE — Carl Scheer, long-time general manager of the Denver Nuggets and now commissioner of the Continental Basketball Association, will be named head of basketball operations for the Charlotte Hornets NBA expansion team.

The Charlotte Observer, quoting Topeka Sizzlers president Bernie Glannon, reported in Wednesday's editions that Scheer was leaving for Charlotte, and that the CBA was already looking for a replacement...

FOOTBALL

DALLAS — Dallas offensive lineman Howard Richards, a first-round draft pick in 1981 from Missouri, was claimed by the New York Jets.

Richards, who was plagued with injuries throughout his six-year career with the Cowboys, has until 3 p.m. today to decide whether to go to the Jets or become a free agent.

Richards and quarterback Reggie Collier were waived by the Cowboys last week. Collier went unclaimed...

HOUSTON — Frank Bush, whose NFL career as a linebacker for the Houston Oilers ended after a spinal injury, is getting a second chance to stay in the sport as the club's western player scout.

Bush was a starting linebacker last fall during his second season when he suffered a cervical sprain in a game against Kansas City. Doctors determined he had an irregularly narrow spinal canal and recommended he not play football again...

HOCKEY

TORONTO — Brad Smith, who scored five goals and was Toronto's second most penalized player last season, signed a two-year contract with the Maple Leafs.

Billy says Rev. Jackson should stick to politics

BALTIMORE (AP) — Former New York Yankees Manager Billy Martin spoke out against Rev. Jesse Jackson Tuesday, saying the unofficial candidate for the Democratic presidential nomination "has no right" to bring politics into baseball.

Martin made the comments about Jackson at a book signing session in the afternoon, then repeated his feelings between innings of the telecast of the Yankees game against the Baltimore Orioles.

"Politics don't belong in baseball and Jesse Jackson has no right to bring it in," Martin said.

Jackson had delivered an ultimatum to major-league baseball, saying its owners and operators have until June 29 to work out a comprehensive plan to bring minorities into the front office. Jackson's ultimatum came after former Los Angeles Dodgers vice-president Al Campanis had said on national televison that blacks lacked the "necessities" to handle management-level positions in baseball.

"All he talked about was blacks and Hispanics," Martin said of Jackson. "What about American Indians, Japanese, Chinese, females? Jesse Jackson should stick with religion and keep politics out of baseball. A man or woman should earn a right to be in baseball and not be given the right because of color or creed."

If baseball failed to meet Jackson's deadline, certain selected baseball teams could expect pickets, boycotts and other economic reprisals from civil-rights activists starting July 4, Jackson said.

"The time for polite conversation and no results is over. We get along fine, but the issue is not attitude. It's the lack of a plan, the lack of commitment," Jackson said.

Jackson attended a meeting of owners in Philadelphia earlier this month at which affirmative action programs were discussed.

"Every single team will have a fair employment plan in place," Commissioner Peter Ueberroth said after the meeting, adding the programs would be evaluated by Jackson, civil rights activists and a group of former players at a June 29 meeting in Chicago.

ANGELS

Riles, who was sent to El Paso on injury rehabilitation but has now been optioned to the club, collected 13 hits in the six-game set for a .619 average.

Marty Reed, 7-3, will open the homestand for Midland tonight against the first-half champion Wichita Pilots. The Pilots have gotten off to a good start again in the second half, jumping to a 5-1 record against San Antonio.

In other Texas League games Tuesday, Wichita beat San Antonio 6-3 in 12 innings, Shreveport edged Tulsa 3-2, and Arkansas defeated Jackson 5-4.

A three-run homer by third baseman Dave Cortez in the 12th inning lifted Wichita over San Antonio.

Cortez' homer, his first of the season, came off of Scott May, after Dodger reliever Rob Rowen, 1-6, walked Chris Knabensure and allowed a single to Tom Brassil.

Reliever Joe Lynch, 4-5, was the winner.

Kirt Manwaring singled to drive in Greg Litton with the winning run in Shreveport's win over Tulsa. Dean Freeland 9-3, picked up the win. The losing pitcher was Rick Knapp, whose record falls to 5-7.

Pinch hitter Luis Alicea singled in the winning run in the bottom of the eighth inning as Arkansas squeeked by the Jackson Mets.

Arkansas' John Costello won in relief, improving his season's record to 3-1. Mets starter Dave West fell to 5-6 with the loss.

Reliever Steve Peters pitched the ninth inning for the Travelers and picked up his 16th save.

Union puts collusion on trial

NEW YORK (AP) — Dick Moss, the agent for Detroit Tigers pitcher Jack Morris, told an arbitrator Tuesday of his client's unsuccessful attempt as a free agent to find a job with another team during the offseason.

Moss was the leadoff witness at a hearing into a second grievance filed by the players union charging the club owners with collusion in blocking the movement of free agents.

The grievance, being heard by arbitrator George Nicolau, involves players who became premier free agents after the 1986 season. Of that group, only Andrew Dawson and Lance Parrish moved to other major-league clubs. Tim Raines, Ron Guidry, Doyle Alexander, Rich Gedman and Bob Boone, after sitting out the start of the season, eventually returned to their old clubs. Bob Horner went to Japan to play for the Yakult Swallows.

Morris, after failing to make a deal with another team, re-signed with the Tigers and was with them for the start of the season.

It is the union's contention that the owners had agreed among themselves not to sign other team's free agents, and by doing so hoped to keep players' salaries down.

Is this Watson's week?

Hartford Open

By CHRIS DAHL
AP Sports Writer

CROMWELL, Conn. (AP) — Tom Watson missed breaking his mysterious, three-year slump by inches last week in the U.S. Open. Some of his fellow players believe he now may be that much closer to victory in this week's PGA Tour stop, the $700,000 Canon-Sammy Davis Jr.-Greater Hartford Open.

"He's proven the fact that he's back. Now I think he's going to want to go out and end the slump with a win," Hubert Green suggested Tuesday as players straggled in from San Francisco, where Watson finished a disappointing second by one stroke to Scott Simpson in the U.S. Open.

The Greater Hartford Open's celebrity pro-am was scheduled for today at the par-71, 6,786-yard Tournament Players Club of Connecticut course. The 72-hole tournament begins Thursday.

Simpson, the tour's leading money winner, has decided to take the week off following his Open victory. Other notables taking a breather include Greg Norman, Larry Mize, Payne Stewart, Corey Pavin and Seve Ballesteros.

Defending champion Mac O'Grady didn't commit to play in this year's GHO until after he had finished his final round at the U.S. Open.

OTHERS VYING for the $126,000 top prize will be Paul Azinger, the tour's No. 2 money-winner, veterans Ray Floyd and Fuzzy Zoeller, and West German Bernhard Langer, who is making his first appearance in Hartford.

Watson, the winner of 31 tournaments in his 16-year career but none since the Western Open in 1984, stated early last week that he would come to Hartford only if he played well in the Open.

Leading after the third round, Watson said he would definitely play at Hartford if he won.

Because he played in the final group of the day, Watson had only 30 minutes to decide whether to play in the Greater Hartford Open following his disappointing loss.

Just off the course, Watson told golf writer Bruce Berlet of The Hartford Courant that he would forego the cross-country trip. But within the next 20 seconds, he turned to his wife, Linda, and his caddy and asked if they felt up to the trip.

Receiving affirmative responses, Watson changed his mind and committed with about five minutes to spare.

"Is Watson playing here this week?" John Mahaffey asked Tuesday after conducting a juniors clinic. "Well, I think obviously he may be the guy to beat. It depends on how he feels emotionally. It must be a pretty big drain losing the U.S. Open like that. ... It must be a tough thing to take."

"I THINK what's happening with Tom is that he's getting a little excited about playing well and being on a roll," Green said. "He's the type who will play well two or three weeks in a row, and he's liable to come out and play well here, too.

"He's a little bit down, but he's also charged up because he's been playing better golf."

Green said his own performance will depend on how well his driver is working and Mahaffey, who believes the Connecticut TPC is a good course for him, remembers a personal drought similar to Watson's when he didn't have a victory between the 1981 Anheuser-Busch Classic and the 1984 Bob Hope Classic.

"I've gone through the same thing, so I don't feel sorry for anybody," he joked.

But, they said, the tennis would start earlier than usual today and thereafter.

Almost 28 hours had been lost before the 101st championships finally got under way, avoiding the first washout of the opening two days of the two-week tournament.

Becker and Novacek were thwarted by a short shower the first time they tried to start and went back to the locker room after warming up for seven minutes.

But the second attempt, an hour later, was successful, and, although he was not at his best, Becker still played like he'd never been away.

With his big serve working well, the two-time defending champion never looked in trouble against Novacek, who reached the quarterfinals of the French Open on clay earlier this month but was not nearly as effective on the grass.

There also were the Becker antics — one, in particular, which had the crowd gasping and surprised the West German himself.

In the middle of the second set, the right-hander suddenly transferred his racket to his left hand and played a cross-court half volley for an outright winner.

It stunned everybody on and around the court.

"Changing hands was the only chance I had of making the point. I just thought I'd try it, and it worked. I've never played a shot like that in my life and probably won't ever again," Becker said. "I don't know what came over me."

Becker said he apologized to Novacek about the unconventional shot.

"It may have looked like I was playing with him, and I did not mean it that way so I said, 'Sorry.'"

Bubka pushes record to 19-9 ¼

PRAGUE, Czechoslovakia (AP) — Sergei Bubka of the Soviet Union broke his own world record in the pole vault with a jump of 19 feet, 9¼ inches at an international track and field meet Tuesday.

Bubka's brother, Vasili, was second with 18-4½ and another Soviet, Grigori Yegorov, finished third at 17-8½.

Bubka set the old mark of 19-8½ in the Goodwill Games at Moscow on July 8, 1986.

Bubka accomplished the feat on his third attempt in cold and rainy weather, according to the Czechoslovak news agency CTK.

"The rain, due to which the competition had to be interrupted several times, made the conditions very difficult today," Bubka said after the meet ended late in the evening.

Under the circumstances, he said, "I am all the happier over the record." The absence of stars from other countries and the bad weather contributed to the lack of outstanding performances in the meet, which was dominated by East European and Cuban athletes.

Athletes from 25 countries took part in the competition.

Alberto Cova of Italy and Elly van Hulst of the Netherlands were the only Western winners.

Cova won the men's 3,000 meters in 7 minutes, 53.98 seconds, and van Hulst won the women's 1,500 meters in 4:12.26.

Igor Kazanov of the USSR won the men's 110-meter hurdles in 13.44 seconds, with Johnathan of Britain second.

Czechoslovakia's Imrich Bugnar won the men's discus with a throw of 217 feet, 2 inches, well ahead of West Germany's Rold Danneberg's 214-0.

A SUMMER-PERFECT PICNIC

A picnic is the perfect way to spend a summer day. Whether you head for the forest preserve, the beach, the backyard or roof top, whiling away the hours with friends and alfresco feasting is one of the season's special pleasures.

Picnics are summer's most enduring rituals, but the de rigueur fare of the past – fried chicken and potato salad – no longer reigns supreme over the picnic blanket. Today, lighter, more stylish food, and wine to complement it, has taken its place in the sun.

Contemporary picnic fare stars summer-fresh fruits and vegetables in simple-yet-spectacular salads and desserts. When the wine paired with these lighter foods is selected to enhance the food, the mood and the fun, both taste that much better.

Warm-weather picnic potables should be refreshing, crisp quaffing wines that are low in alcohol and high in taste appeal. Served chilled, iced or with a splash of soda, lively Chateau La Salle wines are picnic-perfect. Four fresh fruit flavors – Blanc, Blush, La Peach and Wild Berry – provide a selection to suit every taste. Ideal matches for main dish salads and all manner of desserts, they highlight food flavors and add to picnic fun.

Next time you step out to celebrate the season, take along one of the following portable parties. Both easy-to-prepare menus pair fresh, new versions of all-time picnic favorites with summery sangria or the fruity, fun wine of choice. They're as easy as summer meals should be.

Curried Chicken-Rice Salad
Watercress, Orange and Red Onion Salad
Seasonal Fruit
Wild Berry Summer Sangria or Wine of Choice

Celebrate a sunny day with a summer-perfect picnic. Prepare colorful Ginger Chicken Salad and tangy-sweet Wild Berry Picnic Pie the night before to allow for thorough chilling. Team them with bread, cheese and the fruity, fresh flavors of Chateau La Salle wine for refreshing picnic panache.

Curried Chicken-Rice Salad

3 cups cooked rice
2 cups cooked chicken or turkey, cut into 1-1/4 x 1/2 x 1/2-inch strips
1 cup sliced celery
1/3 cup sliced green onions with tops
2/3 cup mayonnaise
1/2 cup chutney, chopped
1 tablespoon curry powder
1/2 teaspoon salt
1/4 cup toasted slivered almonds

Combine rice, chicken, celery and green onions in large bowl. Combine mayonnaise, chutney, curry powder and salt, mixing well; stir into rice mixture. Chill. Sprinkle with almonds to serve. Makes 4 to 6 servings.

Sangria Blanc

1 bottle (750ml) Chateau La Salle Blanc
1/3 cup orange-flavored liqueur
1 orange, thinly sliced
1 lemon, thinly sliced
1 lime, thinly sliced
1/2 cup seedless red grape halves (optional)
Ice cubes
1 bottle (10 ounces) club soda

Combine wine, liqueur and fruit; stir to blend well. Chill. To serve, pour into ice-filled glasses, filling 3/4 full. Top with club soda; stir gently. Makes about 6 servings.

QUICK PICNIC COOLERS TO TOAST THE SEASON

Into tall, ice-filled glasses, pour equal amounts of:

- Cranberry juice and Chateau La Salle Blush
- Orange juice and Chateau La Salle La Peach
- Pineapple-grapefruit juice and Chateau La Salle Blush
- Grapefruit-orange juice and Chateau La Salle Blanc
- Club soda or lemon-lime soda and Chateau La Salle Wild Berry

Ginger Chicken Salad

3 whole chicken breasts, split, boned and skinned
Salt and pepper
1 cup water
4 slices (1/8-inch thick) fresh ginger root
1 cup pea pods, cut in half diagonally
1 cup jicama, cut into 1 x 1/4 x 1/4-inch strips or 1 can (8 ounces) sliced water chestnuts
1 medium red pepper, cut into short, thin strips
1/2 cup diagonally sliced green onions with tops
1/2 cup bottled Italian dressing
2 to 2-1/2 tablespoons soy sauce, as desired
1 tablespoon finely shredded fresh ginger root
1/2 teaspoon sugar

Sprinkle chicken with salt and pepper. Bring water and ginger root slices to a boil in 10-inch skillet. Add chicken; return to boil. Reduce heat; cover and simmer until chicken is cooked through, about 12 minutes. Cool in cooking liquid; cut into 3/4-inch pieces. Combine chicken, pea pods, jicama, red pepper and green onions. In small bowl, combine dressing, soy sauce, shredded ginger root and sugar; mix well. Pour over chicken mixture; toss lightly. Chill to blend flavors, tossing lightly several times. Toss lightly before serving. Makes 6 servings.

Wild Berry Picnic Pie

3/4 cup sugar
3 tablespoons plus 1 teaspoon cornstarch
3 egg yolks, lightly beaten
1-3/4 cups Chateau La Salle Wild Berry
3 tablespoons butter or margarine
2 tablespoons lemon juice
1 baked 9-inch pie crust
2 to 2-1/2 cups fresh raspberries, strawberries or a combination of berries

In medium saucepan, combine sugar and cornstarch. In small bowl, combine egg yolks and wine, mixing well; stir into sugar mixture. Cook over medium heat, stirring constantly, until mixture thickens and begins to boil. Boil, stirring constantly, 1 minute. Remove from heat; stir in butter and lemon juice. Chop 1 cup berries; stir into filling mixture. Pour hot filling mixture into baked pie crust. Arrange remaining berries on top of filling. Chill until filling is set, 3 to 4 hours. Makes 6 to 8 servings.

Wild Berry Summer Sangria

1 bottle (750ml) Chateau La Salle Wild Berry
1/2 cup brandy
1 lemon, thinly sliced
1 lime, thinly sliced
1 cup raspberries or sliced strawberries
3/4 cup orange juice
Ice cubes
1 bottle (10 ounces) club soda

Combine all ingredients except club soda; chill. To serve, pour into ice-filled glasses, filling 3/4 full. Top with club soda; stir gently. Makes about 6 servings.

DEAR ABBY

Child-proofing home can save lives

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I just read the letter in your column from "Kiki's Mom" who said that her 2-year-old daughter received a frightening shock when she stuck her mother's keys into an electrical outlet. She was indeed lucky her daughter was not more seriously injured — or killed.

"Mom" should go to the nearest hardware store and buy some plugged discs that fit into these outlets. Her child may not have her keys to play with, but there are other objects such as hairpins that could be stuck into outlets with the same results. Mothers should not attempt to cover electrical outlets with tape — a child will quickly learn how to pull it off.

"Mom" should go through her entire house to ensure that no safety hazards exist. Safety latches for cabinets are a good idea. All household cleaners should be stored out of reach — never under a kitchen sink. The best way to spot a problem is to get down on the floor and view a room the way a child sees it.

Grandparents who frequently have little guests should also child-proof their homes. Most grandparents have forgotten what it was like to have an inquisitive, exploring child in the house. — EVELYN IN TUSCALOOSA

DEAR EVELYN: Thank you for some valuable suggestions. And, readers, wouldn't a half-dozen of these "outlet pluggers" make a fine gift for a baby shower?

DEAR ABBY: My sister and I are both married. We decided to take a weekend trip together — just the two of us. Just as our plans were coming together, she comes up with a "proposition" — if I lose 10 pounds before we leave, she will buy me a new outfit while we're out of town. Mind you, I am 5 foot 6 and weigh 125 pounds. I am by no means "fat," but she would like to make me think I am. She's always telling me that if there is something I want, she'll give it to me if I "tone up" or lose weight.

I am tired of her finding fault with me when she is just one size smaller than I am. Is there some way I can tell her how I feel without hurting her feelings, although she has hurt mine more than once? — UP TO HERE IN CHARLOTTE, N.C.

DEAR UP: Why do you think it would hurt your sister's feelings if you were to tell her truthfully that she hurts your feelings when she suggests that you are overweight when you're not? That's the only way to get her off your back. Try it. You'll like it. And don't worry about whether she likes it or not.

The "weight" you'll lose will be the burden of your sister's hostility. And telling her will "tone up" your self-esteem like no other exercise.

DEAR ABBY: Recently you ran a letter in your column from a woman who wanted suggestions as to what to do about her husband's scratchy beard, short of shaving it off, which he refused to do.

Our residents here at the Good Samaritan Village in Albuquerque, N.M., enjoy having "Dear Abby" read to them, and they had a very lively discussion about that letter. One of the residents suggested that the woman give her husband a permanent, which would curl the ends under and make the beard less scratchy. What do you think of the idea? — MARY A. JOHNSON, ACTIVITIES COORDINATOR

DEAR MARY: Tell that resident that she rates with the professionals. That suggestion was offered by several top-notch barbers and hairdressers.

(For Abby's booklet, "What Every Teen-Ager Ought to Know," send a check or money order for $2.50 and a long, stamped (39 cents), self-addressed envelope to: Dear Abby, Teen Booklet, P.O. Box 447, Mount Morris, Ill. 61054.)

Strange names describe wokware

Associated Press

Cooking accessories used in preparing food in a Chinese wok have names that are often difficult for costumers to remember.

Even basic tools are called such exotic names as "jow lei" and "wok chan."

The jow lei is a strainer used in deep frying and the wok chan is a spatula-like device for stir frying.

Eggplant slices add pizzazz to plain vegetable casserole

By NANCY BYAL
Associated Press

Eggplant Parmigiana was a childhood favorite of mine. An Italian friend often made it when I visited her daughter.

I've converted the vegetable casserole into a main dish by adding chopped cooked turkey or chicken to the tomato sauce.

My son likes to help me stack the eggplant slices and sauce so that each stack is a serving.

TURKEY-EGGPLANT PARMIGIANA

1 beaten egg
¼ cup milk
1 medium eggplant, peeled and cut crosswise into ¼-inch-thick slices
¾ cup fine dry bread crumbs
2 tablespoons cooking oil
¼ cup chopped onion
1 clove garlic, minced
1 tablespoon cooking oil
15-ounce can tomato sauce
7½-ounce can tomatoes, cut up
2 tablespoons snipped parsley
1 teaspoon sugar
1 teaspoon dried oregano, crushed
1½ cups chopped cooked turkey or chicken
¾ cup shredded mozzarella cheese
¼ cup grated Parmesan cheese

In a shallow bowl combine egg and milk. Dip eggplant slices in egg mixture, then in crumbs. In a large skillet cook eggplant, ⅓ at a time, in 2 tablespoons hot oil until golden, turning once. (Add more oil, if needed.)

Remove from skillet; drain. In same skillet cook onion and garlic in 1 tablespoon oil until tender. Stir in tomato sauce, undrained tomatoes, parsley, sugar and oregano.

Bring to boiling; reduce heat. Simmer, covered, 10 minutes. Add turkey. Arrange half the eggplant in a 12x7½x2-inch baking dish. Spoon half the sauce over; sprinkle with mozzarella. Repeat layers. Sprinkle with Parmesan. Bake, covered, in a 350-degree oven for 20 minutes. Uncover; bake 10 to 15 minutes more. Makes 6 to 8 servings.

WHAT'S COOKING

Davis compiles, donates recipes for cookbooks

EDITORS NOTE: This series of "What's Cooking" interviews will feature nonprofit organizations that have published cookbooks. This is the first in a series of interviews with members of First United Methodist Church.

By ELIZABETH EDWIN
Lifestyle Editor

Although Cecelia Davis says she doesn't cook much anymore, there was a time when she spent a lot of time in her kitchen.

Mrs. Davis is the mother of two, Khris who is now 24 and Wes who is now 22. When the children were young, Mrs. Davis said she was busy, "taxying kids around ... I had to have the food ready when they could eat."

But now that Khris has graduated from Texas A&M University and is working in Dallas and Wes is a senior at Angelo State University, it's just Mrs. Davis and her husband, Bob, at home.

"We eat differently now that the kids are gone," Mrs. Davis said. "We eat less meat and more vegetables, but when our son's home from college, he inhales everything."

Mrs. Davis said her first experience with cooking was when she was a member of senior United Methodist Youth Fellowship in Highlands, where she grew up. The youth group compiled a cookbook to sell as a fund-raising project. "But I just helped get the cookbook together. My mother was the cook then, I didn't start cooking until after college graduation."

Mrs. Davis graduated from North Texas State University and moved to Midland to teach seventh and eighth grades at Alamo Junior High School. She and her roommates took turns with the kitchen detail.

She began attending First United Methodist Church which had a very active single's group at the time, which is where she met her soon-to-be husband Bob. They also attended a couple's Sunday school class together.

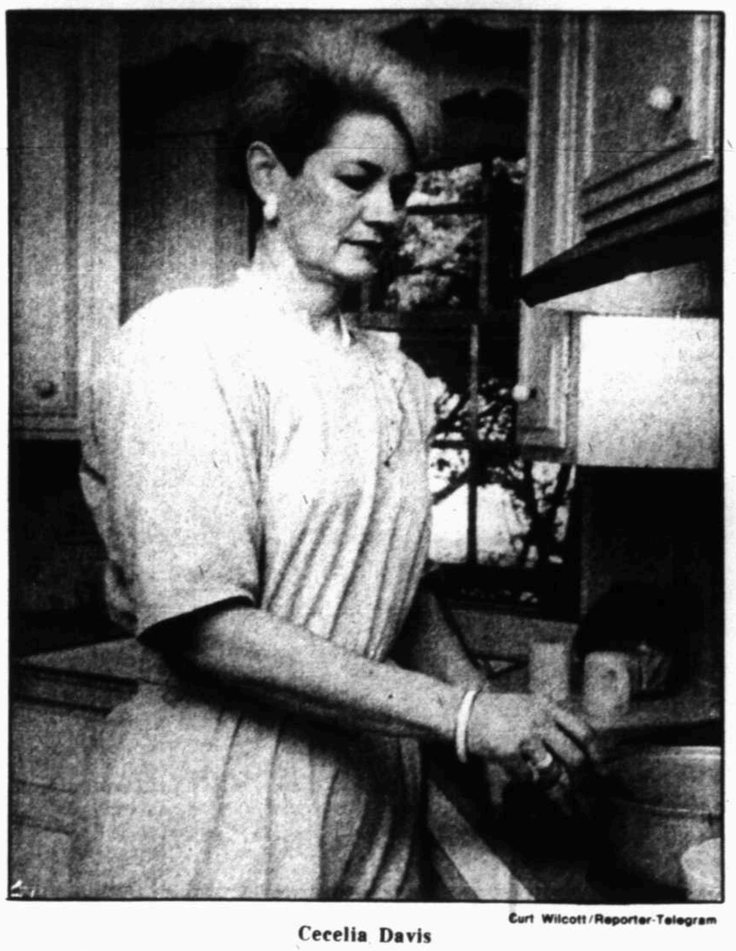
After the Davis' married, Mrs. Davis stopped teaching full-time. She enjoyed working with students, so she worked as a substitute teacher. Mrs. Davis still substitutes for secondary schools.

She has also been active in many other areas. She has served as president for American Association of University Women, was a charter member of Junior Woman's Club and was vice president of United Methodist Women and chairman of the Grace Gutherie Circle.

The Davis' are still members of First Methodist and the Sunday School Class they now attend, Partners, and it keeps them in the cooking mode at least once a year. As a fund-raising project, class members prepare a Thanksgiving dinner every year.

As a member of the Grace Guthrie Circle of UMW, Mrs. Davis is once again helping compile recipes for — or contributing recipes to — various church cookbooks. Her Circle compiled a Salad and Dessert Cookbook a few years ago and sponsored a salad tasting luncheon of the recipes included in the book. The group is currently planning to compile a casserole cookbook to be published in October.

Mrs. Davis' recipe for German Apple Cake was included in "100 Years of Creative Cooking" published by First Methodist. Following is that recipe, in addition to some of her family's other favorites.



Curt Wilcott/Reporter-Telegram
Cecelia Davis

GERMAN APPLE CAKE
2 eggs
2 cups flour
2 teaspoons cinnamon
1 teaspoon soda
½ teaspoon salt
1 cup salad oil
1 teaspoon vanilla
2 cups sugar
4 cups apples, sliced very thin
½ cup chopped nuts
TOPPING:
2 small packages (3 ounce) cream cheese
3 tablespoons butter
1 teaspoon vanilla
1½ cups powdered sugar

Mix all ingredients together with spoon (do not use mixer). Batter will be stiff. Spread into floured, greased bundt pan. Bake at 350 degrees for 50 minutes to an hour. Serve with whipped cream or ice with the topping listed above.

SPECIAL K BARS
Melt and bring to a boil 1 cup white sugar and 1 cup light corn syrup. Remove from heat and add 1 cup peanut butter. Stir in 6 cups Special K cereal and spread into a greased jelly roll pan. Melt 1 package chocolate chips and one package butterscotch chips over boiling water. Spread on top of Special K mixture. Let cool and cut into bars.

RAISIN CINNAMON BREAD
⅔ cup hot water
½ cup sugar
1½ teaspoon salt
¼ cup butter or margarine
½ cup warm water
2 packages active dry yeast
3½ cups flour
1 egg (slightly beaten)
1 cup golden raisins
1½ teaspoons cinnamon
¾ cup sugar
¼ cup finely chopped pecans

Stir together hot water, ½ cup sugar and butter until mixed. Cool to lukewarm. Mix warm water and yeast in large mixing bowl. Add egg, flour and raisins; stir well about 2 minutes.

Mix ¾ cup sugar and cinnamon. Pour ½ batter into greased 1½ quart casserole dish and sprinkle ¼ cup cinnamon/sugar mixture, repeat. Add remaining cinnamon, sugar and nuts on top. Bake uncovered at 375 degrees for 40-45 minutes.

STOVEPIPE BREAD
3½ cups sifted flour
1 package dry yeast
½ cup milk
½ cup water
½ cup salad oil
¼ cup sugar
1 teaspoon salt
2 eggs
butter

Put 1½ cups flour in mixer bowl. Add yeast and blend well.

In a small pan, heat milk, water, oil, sugar and salt until just warm. Add to dry ingredients and beat at low until smooth. Add eggs and beat at medium speed until blended. Gradually add 1 cup of flour blending at low speed until smooth. Stir in remaining flour with a wooden spoon.

Spoon into 2 well-buttered 1 pound coffee cans. Cover with plastic lids and let stand in a warm place until dough has risen almost to top of cans. Remove lids. Bake at 375 degrees 30-35 minutes until browned. Let cool 10 minutes in cans then cool on rack.

HALF HOUR SPAGHETTI SAUCE
2 tablespoons fat
1 clove minced garlic
½ cup chopped onion
1 pound ground beef
1 can condensed tomato soup
1 can tomato paste
2 cups water
1 teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon oregano

Heat fat in skillet. Saute garlic and onion in fat. Add ground beef. Break into small pieces with the side of a spoon and cook until brown. Add tomato soup, tomato paste, water, salt and oregano. Simmer for 30 minutes.

Complex carbohydrates promote storage of energy

By BETTY WILSON
Hearst News Service

Runners would be wise to make their last meal before competition a meal of complex carbohydrates.

Carbohydrates are our most efficient source of energy. Athletes, whether they run, play softball or golf, need complex carbohydrates to promote the storage of energy in the body for use during endurance sports.

Simple carbohydrates, like sugars and syrups, will supply quick energy, but not enough to see runners through to the end of the race.

A better choice would be breads, pasta, cereals, fruits and vegetables. These foods satisfy and furnish vitamins and minerals necessary to regulate body functions.

To prevent heat stroke in hot weather it is important to drink plenty of liquids before, after and during exercise.

Special fluids aren't necessary, as the foods eaten in a well-balanced diet provide enough vitamins and minerals to replenish any lost through perspiration.

TACO CHICKEN RICE BAKE
3 pounds chicken, cut up
Salt
1 envelope (1¼-ounce) taco seasoning mix
2 cups canned tomatoes
1 cup raw rice
¾ cup water
Sliced green onions, shredded cheese and sour cream (if desired)

Preheat the oven to 375 degrees. Remove the skin and excess fat from the chicken. Season with salt and 2 tablespoons of the taco seasoning mix.

In a 12x8-inch baking dish, combine the tomatoes, rice, water and the remaining taco seasoning. Arrange the chicken over the rice mixture. Cover tightly with foil and bake at 375 degrees for one hour, or until the chicken is tender and most of the liquid is absorbed.

Serve with the onions, cheese and sour cream as toppings.

BARBECUE HAM CASSEROLE
SAUCE:
1 pound ham, cubed
1½ cups cooked mixed vegetables
1 cup ketchup
½ cup water
2 tablespoons brown sugar
2 tablespoons instant minced onion
1½ teaspoons Worcestershire sauce
⅛ teaspoon pepper
CORN BREAD:
½ cup corn meal
½ cup flour
½ cup shredded cheese
1 tablespoon sugar
2 teaspoons baking powder
½ teaspoon salt
½ cup milk
1 egg, beaten
3 tablespoons oil

Heat the oven to 425 degrees. Grease an 8-inch square baking pan.

For the sauce, combine all the ingredients in a saucepan and heat thoroughly, stirring occasionally. Pour into the baking pan.

For the corn bread, combine the dry ingredients with the cheese. Combine the egg, milk and oil in a bowl. Add the dry ingredients and mix well.

Drop by spoonfuls over the top of the sauce. Bake for 30 to 35 minutes.

To serve, divide the corn bread into six servings and spoon the sauce over the top.

NOODLES WITH POPPY SAUCE
8 ounces wide noodles
½ cup milk
½ cup poppy seeds, whole or ground
2 tablespoons sugar
1 tablespoon margarine

Cook the noodles according to package directions. Drain.

Combine the remaining ingredients in a saucepan and simmer five minutes. Add the noodles and heat to serving temperature.

ZUCCHINI WITH ORZO
1 cup orzo, alphabet macaroni or broken spaghetti
3 cups coarsely grated zucchini
2 tablespoons margarine
¼ teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon pepper

Bring two quarts water to a boil, add the pasta and cook four minutes. Drain.

Meanwhile, heat the margarine in a large skillet over low heat. Add the zucchini and cook, tossing frequently, four minutes. Add the drained pasta and continue to cook four or five minutes, tossing often.

Ring-shaped meatloaf cooks faster

By NANCY BYAL
Associated Press

Shaping a meat loaf mixture into a ring makes it cook one-third faster than the traditional loaf. At serving time, fill the center of the ring with shredded lettuce and tomato wedges.

MEAT LOAF MEXICANA
1 beaten egg
¼ cup water
2 teaspoons chili powder
½ teaspoon salt
½ of a 15-ounce can (1 cup) refried beans
¼ cup finely chopped onion
¼ cup sliced pitted ripe olives
1½ pounds lean ground beef
¼ cup shredded cheddar cheese

In a mixing bowl combine egg, water, chili powder and salt. Add beans, onion and olives. Mix well. Add ground beef; mix thoroughly. Pat mixture firmly into ungreased 5½-cup ring mold. Turn meat out of ring into a shallow baking pan. Bake in 350 degree oven for 35 minutes. Sprinkle cheese on top of loaf. Bake 5 minutes more or until cheese melts. Remove loaf to serving platter. Makes 6 servings.

Rice indispensible ingredient in classic dishes

By MELANIE BARNARD
and BROOKE DOJNY
Copley News Service

Those plain little white grains that sit so inconspicuously and so inexpensively on every supermarket shelf in the country are really culinary superstars in disguise.

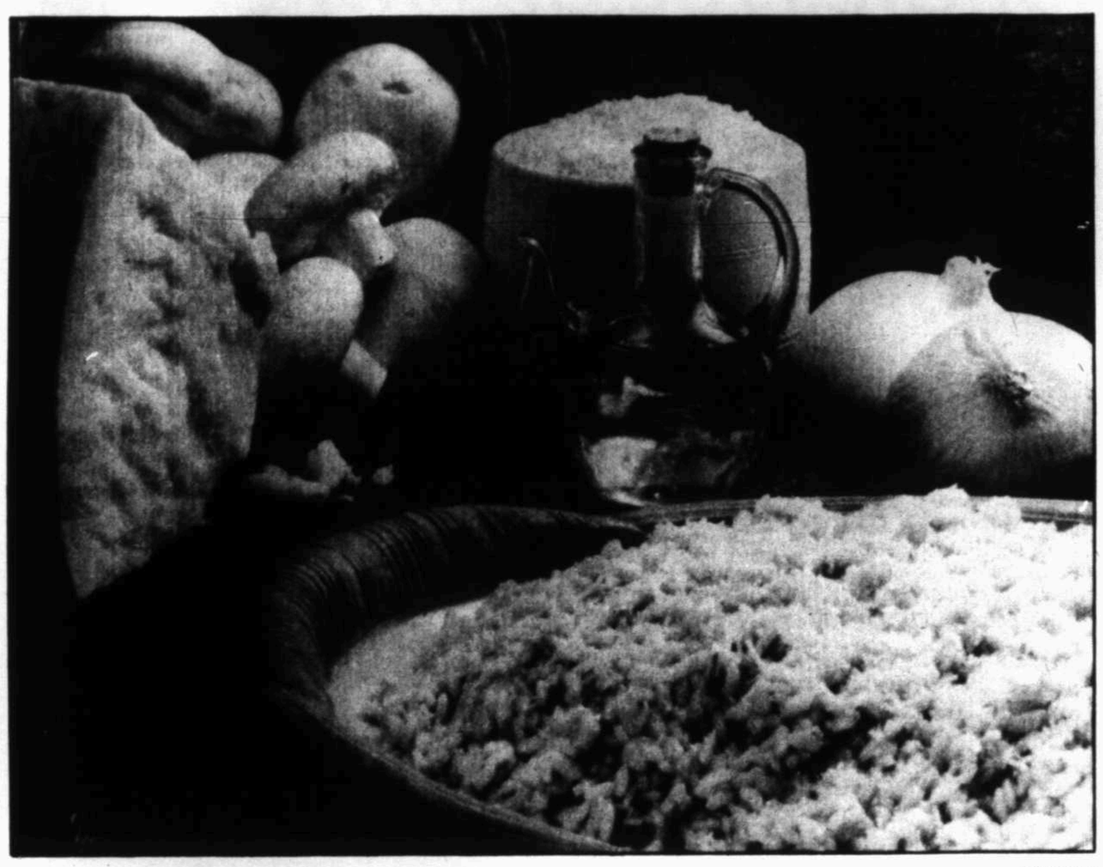
Rice is the staple grain of many world cultures and it is indispensable to a goodly number of classic dishes. It mellows the hot spices of Indian curries; it is the basis of all Spanish paellas; it becomes a creamy course between soup and stew in Italian risottos; it appears at virtually all Chinese meals; it is part and parcel of Japanese sushi; it is the main ingredient in one of France's most glorious desserts, Rice Imperatrice.

Americans, too, eat rice from coast to coast and border to border and, like the rest of the world, we tend to take this minor miracle for granted. Most of us think little more of rice than a mound of white stuff at the side of the plate, designed to fill us up.

In fact, rice can be one of the best friends for the cook on a time budget. Long-grain white rice cooks in 20 to 25 minutes and nicely accommodates other ingredients in the pan with it.

The following are truly one-dish meals and both need little more than a green salad and perhaps some french bread. Shrimp and Snow Peas with Lemon Rice is also good with a few small clams added with the rice. Chicken and Rice with Olives uses a cut-up frying chicken for ease and economy, but any preferred chicken parts can be substituted.

We think that it is high time for rice to be recognized!



CNS Photo

Rice is the staple grain of many world cultures and is a nutritious alternative to pasta.

SHRIMP AND SNOW PEAS WITH LEMON RICE

¼ pound smoked sausage
5 scallions
1 small red bell pepper
1 clove garlic
3 tablespoons olive oil
1 cup raw, long-grain white rice
¼ teaspoon red pepper flakes
One-third cup white wine
1 cup bottled clam juice
1 tablespoon lemon juice
Two-thirds cup water
½ teaspoon grated lemon zest
4 ounces snow peas
1 pound medium shrimp, peeled and deveined

Thinly slice sausage and cut slices in half. Cut scallions in 1-inch pieces and chop in food processor with bell pepper and garlic.

Heat oil in large (12- to 14-inch) skillet and cook sausage and vegetables over medium heat, stirring often for about four minutes until vegetables are softened and sausage is lightly browned.

Add rice to skillet and cook about 1 minute, stirring until all grains are coated and begin to look translucent. Add pepper flakes, wine, clam juice, lemon juice and water. Stir well and bring to boil. Cover pan, lower heat and simmer 20 minutes.

While rice is cooking, trim snow peas and cut in half on diagonal, if they are large.

Uncover pan, gently stir zest into rice mixture. Arrange snow peas and shrimp on top, gently pushing them into rice. Cover pan and simmer three to five minutes until snow peas are crisp tender and shrimp is just cooked.

Taste and add salt and pepper, if needed.

Yield: 4 servings.

Preparation time: About 35 minutes.

CHICKEN AND RICE WITH OLIVES

1 (2 to 2½-pound) frying chicken cut into into 8 pieces
3 tablespoons olive oil
6 ounces smoked ham in one piece
1 medium onion
1 medium green bell pepper
1 large clove garlic
1 cup raw, long-grain white rice
½ cup white wine
1½ cups chicken stock
2 dashes Tabasco sauce
½ cup frozen green peas
¼ cup sliced black olives
Salt and pepper to taste

In large (12- to 14-inch) skillet, saute chicken in oil until golden brown on both sides, about 8 minutes total. Remove chicken from skillet.

While chicken is browning, cut ham into rough ½ inch dice. Chop onion, bell pepper and garlic together in food processor and add along with ham to drippings in skillet. Cook over medium heat for about three minutes until vegetables begin to soften and ham begins to brown.

Add rice and cook about 1 minute, stirring until all grains are coated and begin to turn translucent. Add wine, stock and Tabasco sauce. Stir well, arrange chicken in single layer in pan and bring liquid to boil. Cover pan, lower heat and simmer 18 minutes.

Add peas and olives to skillet. Stir gently to distribute. Cover pan and simmer about five minutes until peas are cooked. Taste and season with salt and pepper. No salt at all may be needed since canned stock and ham are both quite salty. Pepper should be added generously.

Yield: 4 servings.

Preparation time: About 35 minutes.

CHEDDAR RICE

2 cups cooked long-grain rice
1 cup shredded cheddar cheese
3 tablespoons minced onion
1 clove garlic, minced
1 tablespoon chopped fresh parsley
¼ teaspoon salt
⅛ teaspoon pepper
2 eggs
3 tablespoons butter or margarine, melted
½ cup milk

Preparation Time: five minutes
Cooking Time: five to nine minutes (plus five minutes standing time)
Oven Setting: HIGH (100 percent power)

In 2-quart glass casserole combine cooked rice, cheese, onion, garlic, parsley, salt and pepper. Beat together eggs, melted butter and milk. Stir into rice mixture.

Microwave, uncovered, six to nine minutes, stirring gently once or twice, until heated through. Cover and let stand five minutes before serving.

Serves 4 to 6.

SPICED RICE PUDDING

3 eggs, lightly beaten
2 cups milk
⅓ cup sugar
½ teaspoon almond extract
¼ teaspoon each ground cinnamon and salt
2 cups cooked medium- or short-grain rice
One-third cup raisins
Ground nutmeg

Preparation Time: five minutes
Cooking Time: seven to ten minutes (plus 30 minutes standing time)
Oven Setting: HIGH (100 percent power)

Combine eggs, milk, sugar, almond extract, cinnamon and salt in 2-quart glass casserole, beating to blend well. Stir in rice and raisins.

Microwave, uncovered, 7 to 10 minutes, until just thickened, stirring every 2 minutes. Sprinkle lightly with nutmeg. Let stand 30 minutes before serving (do not stir). Serve warm or chilled.

Makes 6 servings.

Rice cooks well in microwave, complements virtually any entree

By DESIREE VIVEA
Copley News Service

What's a staple the world over, can complement virtually any entree, is easy on your food budget, contains all eight of the essential amino acids, and is equally tasty in a dessert, side dish, salad, soup or stuffing? It's rice.

There's long-grain rice (light and fluffy), medium- and short-grain (plumper and stickier), brown rice (high in nutrients with a nutty flavor and chewy texture), and wild rice — which isn't really a rice at all (it's really a grass seed). And then there's instant rice: milled rice that has been cooked and dehydrated, and needs only a quick rehydration before serving.

Rice can be cooked perfectly well in the microwave, but be warned that it will take about as much time as when conventionally cooked. This is because rehydration of the grain takes time — no matter what cooking method you employ. Since microwaving doesn't save any cooking time, I usually prefer to cook rice on the stovetop and reserve the microwave for other dishes.

But your microwave is perfect for reheating cooked rice (and pasta, too). When reheating conventionally, you need to add water to prevent rice from drying out and hardening. You can easily end up with overcooked, mushy grains. Not so with the microwave. No added water is needed: just cover dish tightly with plastic wrap and microwave, stirring gently once or twice, until heated through. Flavor and texture will be like fresh-cooked.

Here's an added boon for the busy: you can cook up a whole week's supply of rice (that's how long it will keep), then cover and refrigerate. Use as needed, reheating plain rice for a side dish, adding to casseroles, etc.

Chicken, melon teamed in salad

By NANCY BYAL
Associated Press

Summer puts salads on center stage in a starring role. Main-dish salads add variety to hot-weather menus and can be as nutritious and satisfying as your favorite hot entree.

For the scalloped edge that makes this salad a show-stopper, scoop out the melon balls. Then lay the shells on their sides. Using the melon-ball cutter, press down onto the edges of the shells, cutting a series of scallops.

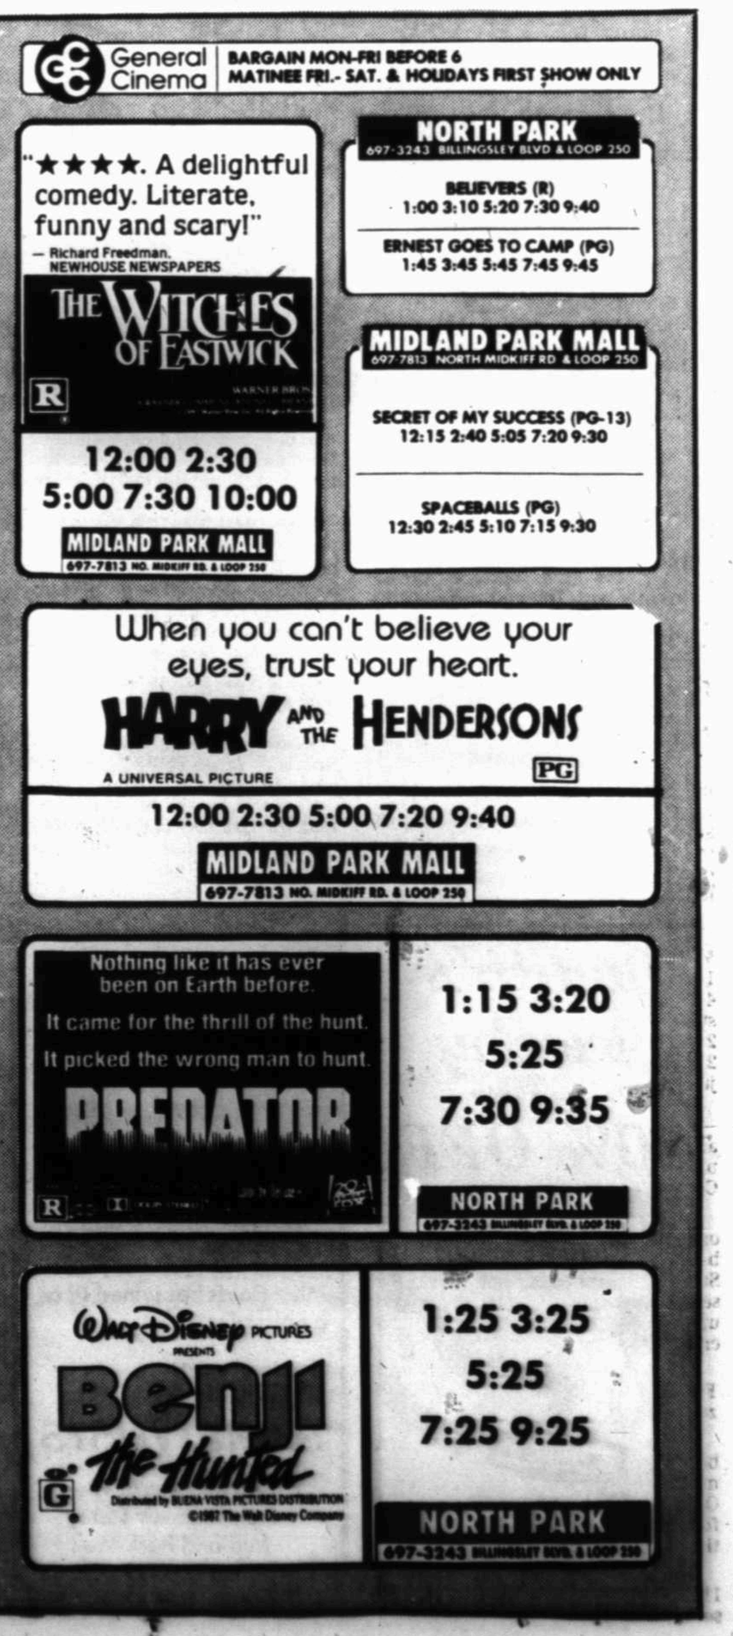
CHICKEN-MELON SALAD

½ cup pineapple yogurt
2 tablespoons mayonnaise or salad dressing
¼ teaspoon ground ginger
2 cups cubed cooked chicken or turkey
½ cup sliced celery
2 small cantaloupes
Leaf lettuce
1 cup strawberries, halved
1 tablespoon sunflower nuts

In a mixing bowl combine yogurt, mayonnaise and ginger. Stir until well blended. Add chicken or turkey and celery. Toss lightly to coat. If desired, cover and chill for up to 8 hours.

Meanwhile, cut cantaloupes in half lengthwise. Remove seeds. Using a melon-ball cutter, scoop the pulp out of the cantaloupes. Set aside and chill 2 cups of the cantaloupe balls until serving time. (Cover and refrigerate remaining balls for another use.)

To serve, line 4 salad plates with lettuce leaves. Place cantaloupe shells on plate. Divide reserved cantaloupe balls among shells. Mound salad mixture in centers. Garnish with strawberry halves. Sprinkle with sunflower nuts.



America's favorite berry plentiful in June, July

Copley News Service

Ruby red and sweetly alluring, the strawberry is America's favorite berry.

Early settlers found the berries growing wild in Virginia, and native Indians (who called them wuttahimneash) blended the fruit with meal to make bread.

During the 18th century a French naval officer returned home with some strawberry plants he had found in Chile. These were eventually crossed with the wild North American variety, and thus were born the forerunners of the large, commercial berries now on the market.

Several centuries back Englishman William Butler wrote, "Doubtless God could have made a better berry, but doubtless God never did." For those of us who are true strawberry aficionados, this is indeed the best of all possible berries.

Why are they called strawberries? It may be because farmers used to bring them to market on sticks of straw. Or their name may have come from the straw that was laid down to cover the soil around the plants.

Then again, the name may derive from the old English word "straw," which means to scatter things over the ground, in the way the spreading vines scatter the berries.

No one knows for sure. (Incidentally, Romans called the berry fragaria because of its delicious fragrance. I rather prefer that name.)

Strawberries are an excellent source of vitamin C and a surprisingly good source of iron — there's as much iron in a cup of fresh strawberries as in an extra-large egg.

Use fresh berries within two days of purchase and place in a colander before refrigeration, to let cool air circulate around them.

Never hull berries until after they have been washed, or they might absorb too much water and become mushy, with a diluted flavor — which would be a terrible waste! Your best bet is to wash berries just before eating.

Serve strawberries as is, or with a dollop of plain yogurt, sour cream, regular cream, whipped cream, on top of cereal, ice cream, soaked in liqueur, blended into beverages, or in any way that strikes your fancy. May through July are peak months for this luscious natural treat, so go ahead and indulge while the pickin's are good!

America's favorite berry, the strawberry, is high in food value, low in calories and a luscious natural treat. The allure of the ruby red berry has keep its popularity alive through the ages, and strawberries are plentiful in June and July.

GLAZED STRAWBERRY-KIWI CHEESE PIE

¼ cup butter or margarine, melted
¾ cup graham cracker crumbs
¼ cup wheat germ
1 pound container cottage cheese
½ cup water
½ cup instant non-fat dry milk powder
½ cup granulated sugar
¼ cup unbleached white flour
4 eggs
1 tablespoon lemon juice
1 teaspoon vanilla
1 pint fresh strawberries
1 fresh kiwi fruit, peeled and sliced thin
1 cup water
1 tablespoon cornstarch
2 tablespoons honey

In small bowl toss graham cracker crumbs and wheat germ with melted butter. Press firmly into sides and bottom of 9-inch pie plate to form crust. Chill 1 hour, or until set.

For filling, combine cottage cheese, water, milk powder, sugar, flour, eggs, lemon juice and vanilla in container of blender. Whirl until completely blended and smooth.

Pour cottage cheese mixture into prepared crust. Bake in preheated 250 degree oven 1 hour, then turn oven off and leave pie in oven 1 hour longer. Remove pie from oven and refrigerate while preparing topping.

For topping, wash and hull 1 pint fresh strawberries. Arrange sliced kiwi fruit in center of pie (overlapping, if necessary), and strawberries in a double ring around edge (stem-side down). Combine water and cornstarch in small saucepan. Cook over low heat, stirring constantly, until clear and thickened. Stir in honey. Let cool slightly, then spoon glaze over fruit. Refrigerate at least one hour, or until ready to serve.

Serves 6 to 8.

MOTHER NATURE'S STRAWBERRY-MINT SWIRL

1 pint fresh strawberries
2 tablespoons lemon juice
1 pint container plain, unsweetened yogurt
2 tablespoons honey
1 tablespoon lemon juice
1 cup finely chopped ripe cantaloupe
2 tablespoons chopped fresh mint leaves
Fresh mint sprigs, for garnish

Wash strawberries, reserving 2 large berries for garnish; hull the rest. Combine hulled strawberries in blender with lemon juice and half of yogurt. Whirl until smooth, then scrape out with spatula into bowl.

Combine remaining yogurt, 2 tablespoons honey, and 1 tablespoon lemon juice in blender container. Blend to mix well, then stir in chopped cantaloupe and chopped mint leaves.

In four flat serving bowls swirl together equal portions of strawberry and cantaloupe mixtures to make pinwheel design (don't overstir). Cut reserved strawberries in half and place 1 in center of each bowl, with a mint sprig. Chill about ½ hour before serving.

Serves 4.

CAROB-DIPPED DELIGHTS

1 cup carob chips
½ cup butter or margarine
¼ teaspoon vanilla
2 pints fresh strawberries, with stems

Combine carob chips, butter or margarine and vanilla in top of double boiler. Heat over boiling water, stirring frequently, until melted. Let cool slightly.

Wash strawberries and drain; pat dry. Holding by the stem, dip each strawberry into carob mixture to coat about ¾ of berry. Set on wire racks to let coating set, then refrigerate until ready to serve.

STRAWBERRY-BANANA SMOOTHIE

2 cups fresh strawberries, washed and hulled
1 large ripe banana
3 tablespoons honey
1 tablespoon lemon juice
2 cups milk
Fresh mint leaves (optional, for garnish)

Combine all ingredients except mint leaves in blender and blend until smooth. Garnish with fresh mint leaves, if desired.

Serves 2 to 3.

Berries, yogurt make low-cal Juliet

Hearst News Service

The strawberry growing season is short, so enjoy this fruit often while it's fresh.

For the pick of the patch, choose berries with bright color and stems attached. Berries with white tips are not ripe and will not gain further sweetness or flavor.

Strawberries are low in calories and a good source of vitamin C. Count 55 calories for 1 cup.

STRAWBERRIES JULIET

4 cups whole fresh strawberries, divided
1/3 cup frozen whipped topping, thawed
1/3 cup plain yogurt
1 tablespoon sugar

Slice enough strawberries to measure 1/4 cup. Crush with a fork. Add whipped topping, yogurt and sugar. Mix well.

Spoon the remaining berries evenly into four dessert dishes. Top each serving with the strawberry-yogurt mixture. Chill for one hour. Serves 4; about 104 calories per serving.

STRAWBERRY SORBET

1 pint strawberries, sliced
1/4 cup water
2 tablespoons sugar
1/4 cup orange-flavored liqueur
1 tablespoon lemon juice

In a small saucepan combine the berries, water and sugar. Bring to a boil. Reduce the heat and simmer five minutes. Cool. Blend or process smooth. Add the liqueur and lemon juice. Mix and pour into a shallow pan. Freeze until firm, about 1 inch around edges. Beat smooth. Return to the freezer. Freeze until firm.

SUGAR-FREE STRAWBERRY FREEZER JAM

2 cups crushed strawberries
4 teaspoons unflavored gelatin
1-1/2 tablespoons lemon juice
2 tablespoons liquid artificial sweetener, to equal 1 cup sugar

Soften the gelatin in 1/2 cup berry juice. Heat the remaining 1-1/2 cups crushed berries to boiling. Remove from the heat and add the softened gelatin, stirring until it is dissolved. Add the lemon juice and artificial sweetener. Stir and cool.

Pour into containers suitable for freezing.

Berries baked right into biscuit for easy, rich blueberry shortcake

By NANCY BYAL
Associated Press

Some folks prefer a rich biscuit as a shortcake base; others say sponge cake is better.

I stand with the biscuit backers. This all-in-one blueberry shortcake has lots of the fresh fruit baked right into the biscuit.

Cut it into wedges and serve it warm with whipped cream.

BLUEBERRY SHORTCAKE

2 cups all-purpose flour
2 tablespoons sugar
2½ teaspoons baking powder
½ cup margarine or butter
1 slightly beaten egg
½ cup milk
1 teaspoon finely shredded lemon peel
1 cup fresh blueberries
2 tablespoons sugar
Sweetened whipped cream
Fresh blueberries (optional)

In a large mixing bowl stir together the flour, 2 tablespoons sugar and baking powder.

Cut in margarine until mixture resembles coarse crumbs. In a small mixing bowl stir together egg, milk and lemon peel.

Stir egg mixture into flour mixture just until moistened. Spread half the dough evenly in a greased 8 by 1½-inch round baking pan.

Top the dough with the blueberries. Sprinkle blueberries with 1 tablespoon of the sugar.

Dot remaining dough over blueberries; sprinkle with remaining sugar.

Bake in a 400-degree oven for 25 to 30 minutes or until shortcake is light golden brown. While shortcake is still slightly warm, cut into 6 wedges. Serve warm topped with whipped cream. Sprinkle with additional fresh blueberries, if desired. Makes 6 servings.

Strawberry dessert refreshing, cold

Associated Press

When raspberries are bountiful, use them in place of strawberries in this refreshing dessert. But during strawberry season, take advantage of using this alluring berry in a delicious ice dessert with a hint of lemon.

STRAWBERRY ICE

¾ cup sugar
1 cup water
4 cups fresh or frozen strawberries
2 cups pink lemonade
2 cups raspberry-cranberry juice drink

In a small saucepan combine sugar and water. Cook over medium heat until boiling. Boil gently 10 minutes. Cool.

Meanwhile, in a blender container or food processor bowl, blend strawberries, covered, until smooth. Strain through a sieve to remove seeds. Stir together cooled sugar syrup, blended berries, lemonade and cranberry drink.

Pour into a 13 by 9 by 2-inch pan. Freeze until almost firm. Break frozen mixture into chunks.

Turn into a large mixer bowl and beat until nearly smooth. Return mixture to pan and freeze until firm. Or, freeze in an ice-cream freezer following manufacturer's instructions. Makes 16 servings.

Food processor pizza dough made in minutes

By MELANIE BARNARD
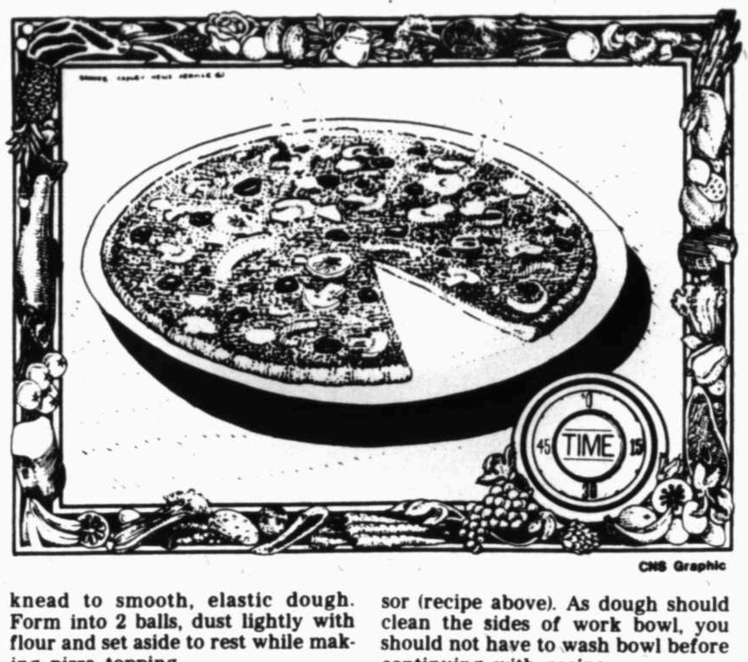
Copley News Service

Is there anyone who doesn't love pizza? It seems to be the perfect food for the '80s, springing from obscurity in the early 1950s to stand beside the hamburger as our No. 1 fast meal. A complete meal in itself — combining protein, carbohydrate and vegetable — a pizza slice is also the ideal non-sweet snack.

After the agreement on pizza's overall merits ends, the debate begins: thick, floury crust or thin, crisp, browned crust? Should the tomato sauce topping be chunky or smooth? What kind of cheese? How much cheese? Is a pizza without cheese and tomato really a pizza at all?

We embrace all theories, as long as the result works and tastes good!

We begin with a quick dough made in a food processor with the newly available "quick rise" yeast. While it doesn't have a chance to develop the sour yeasty flavor that comes with one or two rises, the crust rolls out beautifully and provides a perfectly tasty vehicle for its flavorful toppings.



CNS Graphic

QUICK PIZZA DOUGH

2½ cups all-purpose flour
¾ teaspoon salt
1 package quick rise yeast
1 cup warm water (approximately 115 degrees)

In the work bowl of food processor, combine flour, salt and yeast. Pulse twice to mix. With machine running, gradually pour warm water through feed tube. Dough should clump together and form ball on top of blade. Process for 45 seconds to knead to smooth, elastic dough. Form into 2 balls, dust lightly with flour and set aside to rest while making pizza topping.

FRESH TOMATO AND SMOKED CHEESE TOPPING

1 recipe Quick Pizza Dough
8 plum tomatoes
2 cloves garlic
¼ cup olive oil
¼ teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon black pepper (preferably coarse-ground)
3 tablespoons fresh basil leaves, thinly sliced or 2 teaspoons diced
½ pound smoked mozzarella, thinly sliced or grated

Preheat oven to 500 degrees.

Make pizza dough in food processor (recipe above). As dough should clean the sides of work bowl, you should not have to wash bowl before continuing with recipe.

Halve and core tomatoes but do not peel or seed them. Process with on/off pulses in food processor until coarsely chopped. Remove to bowl.

Peel garlic cloves and chop in food processor. Put olive oil through feed tube and season with salt and pepper.

On lightly floured board, roll out balls of dough into rough 12-inch circles. Place rounds on two lightly floured baking sheets and spread each evenly with half of tomatoes and half of garlic oil, leaving ½-inch border. Sprinkle with basil and arrange cheese on top.

Bake on 2 racks of preheated oven for 10-14 minutes, rotating baking sheets halfway through cooking time so they cook evenly. Pizza crust should be golden brown and tops bubbly. Cut into wedges and serve hot.

Yield: 4 servings.

TUNA-PARSLEY PIZZA

1 recipe Quick Pizza Dough, with addition of 2 teaspoons fresh thyme leaves or ½ teaspoon dried, added to dough after salt
½ cup parsley
1 scallion, cut into 1-inch lengths
½ cup olive oil
¼ teaspoon black pepper
1 large (12-ounce) can oil-packed tuna, drained
1 red pepper
12 anchovy fillets (optional)
Sprigs of fresh thyme (optional)

Preheat oven to 450 degrees.

After making pizza dough in food processor, place parsley sprigs and scallions in work bowl. (There should be no need to wash bowl, as dough should have cleaned sides.) Pulse machine to chop parsley and with motor running, pour olive oil through feed tube. Season oil with pepper.

Roll dough out into 2 rough 12-inch rounds and place on lightly floured baking sheets. Spread each of rounds with half of tuna. Seed pepper, cut into ¼-inch slices and scatter over tuna. Drizzle evenly with parsley oil and lay optional anchovies over top in crisscross pattern.

Bake on 2 racks of preheated oven, rotating baking sheets halfway through cooking time, for 12-15 minutes. Garnish with optional thyme sprigs before serving.

Yield: 4 servings.

Vegetables blend in steamed combo

Associated Press

To make this vegetable combo with fresh pea pods, steam the peas and onion for just 3 minutes. Add the pea nods and steam 4 minutes more.

'PEAS AND PODS

2 cups shelled peas or one 10-ounce package frozen peas
¼ cup sliced green onion
6-ounce package frozen pea pods
1 teaspoon margarine or butter
¼ teaspoon salt
⅛ teaspoon dried thyme, crushed
Dash pepper

Place peas and green onion in steamer basket. Place basket over boiling water. Cover and steam 5 minutes. Add pea pods; cover and steam about 2 minutes more or until crisp-tender. Transfer to serving bowl. Add margarine, salt, thyme and pepper; toss to coat.

Texan's Chicago-style pizza 'a meal, not an appetizer'

Associated Press

Back in 1943, a transplanted Texan named Ike Sewell dreamed about operating a fine Mexican restaurant in Chicago. That plan fizzled, so Ike teamed with restaurateur Ric Riccardo and opened Pizzeria Uno, the first Chicago-style pizzeria, instead.

The rest is culinary history. Today, the passion for world-famous Chicago-style pizza runs as high as the Sears Tower, as true as the city's love for the Cubs, Bears and Sox, and as deep as the pan the pizza is baked in.

Midwest Living magazine describes Chicago-style pizza as a solid, stick-to-your-ribs meal that's unlike the deep-dish pizza served anywhere else. Layered in a special deep baking pan are an inch of piping-hot cheese, meat, and tomato topping, smothering a soft chewy bread-like crust.

First comes the cheese — top-quality, thick-sliced or hand-shredded mozzarella — followed by a more-than-ample portion of mildly seasoned sausage.

On top go fresh tomatoes, lightly stewed, then chopped — or crushed by hand, if the pizza is truly Chicago-style.

Heaping spoonfuls of freshly grated Parmesan cheese and herbs, such as basil and oregano, create the final layer. Extra layers of fresh green peppers, onions, anchovies or mushrooms are optional.

Before Sewell and his partner introduced this dish, pizza, for the most part, was a flat piece of dough generally topped with vegetables. "Pizza wasn't a meal," he says. "It was more of an appetizer."

Pizzeria Uno almost gave away pizza in the beginning. "No one except GIs who had been in Italy even knew what the word pizza meant," Sewell recalls. Then a newspaper reporter's story touted the pizza as better than any he had tasted in Italy. Almost overnight, lines outside the restaurant began foretelling Sewell's pizza fame.

Around the Windy City, restaurants serve variations galore of the original Chicago-style pizza. Most of these pizzerias, Giordano's for example, have their own secret recipes and loyal followings.

"Back in 1973, my brother Efrin and I were experimenting. We created a dish similar to one our mother used to make on special occasions, and we called it stuffed pizza," says Joe Boglio, owner and father of Giordano's stuffed pizza.

Basil and oregano that grow in the window at Edwardo's are typical of fresh ingredients in every Edwardo's "natural" pizza. When Edward Jacobson developed his spinach-souffle stuffed pizza about eight years ago, he served it with a money-back guarantee.

After the spinach version, Edwardo's created a broccoli and pesto pizza, and then a whole-wheat crust. But the all-time favorite remains the spinach-souffle stuffed pizza.

The secret of Gino's East deep-dish pizza is in the crust, which includes a "magic" ingredient even most of the pizza makers don't know about.

Pie book offers recipes from simple to sublime

By VERNE PALMER
Copley News Service

This book is not — nor was it intended to be — a definitive exploration of all there is to say on the subject of pies and pastries. It won't overwhelm, intimidate or confuse even the rankest beginner.

On the other hand, the recipes are an eclectic mixture of the traditional and the contemporary, ranging from simple tarts to sophisticated croissants, pastry horns and Napoleons — so it won't prove too elementary for the veteran baker.

What it is, is a nice, bite-size introduction to the intricacies of pie baking, cobblers, dumplings, turnovers, eclairs, strudels, cheesecakes, breakfast pastries, quiches, etc.

Detailed explanations coupled with step-by-step photos do much to take the mystery out of that old bugaboo, the perfect pie crust, and a wide-ranging variety of types are introduced.

Special attention also is given to savory pies, pastry-wrapped meats and working with filo and puff pastry.

A sampling of recipes follows.

FROZEN STRAWBERRY CREAM PIE

2 tablespoons orange-flavored liqueur or 1 tablespoon lemon juice
3½ cups strawberries
¼ cup water
1 cup sugar
1 teaspoon light corn syrup
3 egg whites (at room temperature)
1½ cups whipping cream
Vanilla crumb crust for a 9-inch springform pan, baked and cooled (recipe follows)

In food processor or blender, whirl liqueur and 2 cups of the strawberries until pureed. Set aside.

In a 1-quart pan, combine water, sugar and corn syrup; bring to a boil over medium heat, stirring until sugar is dissolved. Continue to cook until syrup reaches 240 degrees (soft ball stage) on a candy thermometer. Remove from heat.

At once, place egg whites in large bowl of electric mixer and beat until soft peaks form; slowly beat in hot syrup. Then beat on high speed until meringue has cooled to room temperature (6 to 8 minutes).

Fold berry puree into meringue. Whip cream until soft peaks form; gently fold into meringue. Turn mixture into crust; cover and freeze.

At serving time, remove pan sides; place pie on a platter. Cut remaining 1½ cups strawberries in half lengthwise; arrange in a ring around edge of pie. Let pie soften at room temperature for 15 minutes, then serve.

Makes 8 to 10 servings.

Vanilla crust: Crush 1½ cups (36 1½-inch) vanilla cookie wafers into a mixing bowl and add one-third cup melted butter or margarine. Blend thoroughly and bake at degrees for 10 minutes.

NAPOLEONS

1 envelope unflavored gelatin
3 tablespoons cold water
Double recipe French pastry cream (recipe follows)
1 package (17½ ounces) frozen puff pastry
2 cups sifted powdered sugar
About 3 tablespoons warm water
½ cup semisweet chocolate chips
2 teaspoons light corn syrup

Sprinkle gelatin over the 3 tablespoons cold water; set aside to soften. Prepare French pastry cream. After stirring in vanilla, stir in gelatin mixture until dissolved. Cover and refrigerate until firm (about 6 hours) or until next day.

Thaw pastry at room temperature for 20 minutes. Preheat oven to 400 F. Unfold 1 sheet of pastry; on a lightly floured board, roll out to 10x18-inch rectangle. Using sharp knife, cut crosswise into 6 3x10-inch rectangles.

Prick rectangles all over with a fork, pricking all the way through dough; then place on ungreased baking sheets, spacing about 1 inch apart. Repeat with remaining sheet of pastry.

Bake until light golden (10 to 12 minutes); transfer to racks and let cool. Cut each cooled rectangle in half crosswise.

Stir together sugar and 2 tablespoons of the warm water until smooth and easy to spread; set aside. Place chocolate chips, corn syrup, and 2 teaspoons of the warm water in a small pan; cook over low heat, stirring, until chocolate is melted. Mixture should drizzle easily; if necessary, stir in up to 2 more teaspoons warm water.

Hold 1 pastry rectangle in your hand, flat side up; spread thinly with white icing. Immediately drizzle with chocolate mixture, making 3 parallel lengthwise lines. Then lightly drag a wooden skewer across iced pastry several times, at right angles to chocolate lines; drag first in one direction, then in the other, to create a design.

Repeat with 7 more pastry rectangles. Place on racks and let stand until icing is set. (At this point, you may cover iced and plain pastry loosely with foil and let stand at room temperature until next day.)

Spread about one-third cup of pastry cream on each of 16 plain rectangles. Stack in groups of 2, with cream sides up; top each stack with iced rectangle. If made ahead, cover lightly and refrigerate for up to 6 hours.

Makes 8.

French pastry cream: In 2-quart pan, combine 1 cup sugar, ½ cup cornstarch, ¼ teaspoon salt and 1 cup milk. Stir until cornstarch is dissolved. In another pan, scald 2 cups milk over medium heat; add slowly to sugar mixture, stirring constantly. Bring to boil over medium heat, stirring; boil and stir constantly for 2 minutes, then remove from heat.

Beat 4 egg yolks until thick and lemon colored. Stir half the milk mixture into yolks, then stir all back into pan. Cook over low heat, stirring, until mixture is thick enough to mound slightly when dropped from a spoon (5 to 7 minutes). Pour into a bowl; stir in 1 teaspoon vanilla. Cover pastry cream with a piece of plastic wrap, pushing plastic directly onto surface of cream.

Refrigerate until slightly set (about 45 minutes).

Woman turns from flowers to flour, rolls out dough

Associated Press

NEDERLAND, Texas — When most people are rolling over in their sleep, Janet Davis is rolling out the dough.

At 3 a.m. most days, the lights are on at J&J Homemade Pies, and it won't be long before the smell of cinnamon rolls fills the little house-turned-bakery off Twin City Highway here.

After the cinnamon rolls are finished, employees, mostly members of Mrs. Davis' family — put different fillings in the sweet rolls and top them with a sugar glaze before putting them in the oven.

And in another room, someone is mixing the dough for fried pies — Mrs. Davis' hottest-selling item.

They try to get the brunt of the work done before the sun comes up, the phone starts ringing and the regulars start stopping by on their way to work.

BUT THERE never seems to be enough time to get everything done before hungry customers start coming in.

"It's pretty hard to be right in the middle of a batch of something and them have to go and wait on a customer when you're all covered with flour," Mrs. Davis says. "But sometimes that's what you have to do."

Mrs. Davis owned a flower shop for years until she stopped one day and figured just how many competitors she had.

"I started looking around and it seemed like there was a flower shop just about everywhere I looked," she says.

"But there weren't any bakeries. I raised four sons and all I ever did was cook, so I figured I already had the training," Mrs. Davis said.

SO SHE cleared out the flower arrangements two years ago and replaced them with bakery items. And when the bakery moved from its former, out-of-the-way location on Spurlock Road to Twin City Highway last February, she had to start ordering twice the amount of ingredients to keep up with orders.

"People don't realize the volume we deal in here," Mrs. Davis says. "We go through 300 to 400 pounds of flour a week."

Cecilia Bevins, the only J&J employee who isn't a member of Mrs. Davis' family, remembers her first day at the bakery during the holiday season, when she was helping Mrs. Davis make pecan pies.

"She told me to crack 98 eggs into a bowl and I just looked at her and asked her how many eggs she really wanted me to crack," Mrs. Bevins says. "I thought she was kidding."

The bakery is open from 7 a.m. to 6 p.m. Monday through Saturday, Mrs. Davis says, "but if someone calls ahead of time and wants to pick something up at 6:30 — or even 5:30, we'll have it ready for them."

Mrs. Davis lets customers dictate her store hours to a certain extent, and she also lets them dictate her wares. You name it, they bake it, she says.

"Sometimes, somebody will come in and give me a recipe and ask me to fix it for them, which I do," Mrs. Davis says. "And people are always suggesting new recipes for me to try."

MRS. DAVIS also prepares non-dairy desserts and convincing "sweets" for diabetics.

She said she wasted countless eggs trying to make a diabetic angel food cake until someone told her that angel food cake is one of the few regular desserts diabetics can eat.

Mrs. Davis started out with traditional pies, but it wasn't long before her four sons talked her into making fried pies for them to take to work and sell. They "went over like gangbusters," she says.

So she bought the necessary equipment to make large quantities of fried pies, which comes in handy now that she sells more than 1,500 a week from deliveries to stores and walk-in business.

Mrs. Davis follows two rules in her business: Don't skimp and don't get in a hurry.

GETTING IN a hurry usually results in wasting materials, she says. And she doesn't skimp because that's just plain good business.

She prides herself in the homemade filling she puts in her custard pies: coconut, chocolate, sweet potato and lemon, and refuses to use prepared filling she can buy by the bucket.

It's a lot more work, Mrs. Davis acknowledges — enough to keep everybody busy — her four sons, three daughters-in-law, husband and mother.

"But I've had older people come in and say, 'I used to buy fried pies like this years and years ago, and you don't see them like this any more,' " she says.

And when that happens, Mrs. Davis says, all the early morning hours spent stirring pie filling amid clouds of flour are worth it.

Book lights fire under barbecuers

Copley News Service

If barbecue boredom is threatening, Sunset Books has a jewel of an answer for beginning grillers and their more seasoned compatriots alike.

This revised and updated version of Sunset's best-selling standard offers all the basic needs to get a neophyte from first fire to dinner table and enough fresh and intriguing recipes (175) to keep a veteran grilling all year long.

The information/reference sections: barbecue basics; marinades, sauces and butters; grilled appetizers; fuels, and grilling fruits and vegetables are wonderfully organized and easy to use — though why they're interspersed within the recipes is something of a puzzlement.

The recipes are divided into beef, lamb, pork, fish, poultry and all-occasion patio party menu sections. All the old favorites are there, but they've been given interest-renewing new interpretations. Hamburgers, for instance, appear in ethnic dress and at least two are offered in platter-size versions.

For the more adventuresome there are such innovative ideas as pine nut-stuffed lamb chops, skirt steaks with fresh herbs, apple-glazed pork loin, Merida-style spareribs, pork and melon skewers, lemony skewered fish and vegetables, grilled scallops with ginger-lime sauce, garlic orange chicken, turkey steaks with cashew butter and on ad infinitum.

CNB Photo

PINE NUT-STUFFED LAMB CHOPS

8 lamb rib or loin chops, cut 1 inch thick
2 tablespoons butter or margarine
3 tablespoons lemon juice
¼ teaspoon each oregano leaves, salt and pepper
½ cup pine nuts
1 clove garlic, minced or pressed
1 teaspoon grated lemon peel
3 tablespoons each finely minced green onions (including tops) and finely minced parsley

With sharp knife, cut horizontal pocket in each lamp chop, starting at fat edge and cutting to bone. Set chops aside.

Melt butter in small frying pan. Transfer 1 tablespoon of melted butter to small bowl and stir in lemon juice, oregano, salt and pepper; set aside. Add pine nuts and garlic to remaining melted butter in pan. Cook over medium heat, stirring frequently, until nuts are golden brown. Remove from heat; stir in lemon peel, onions and parsley.

Stuff ⅛ of pine nuts mixture (about 1 rounded tablespoon) into pocket of each chop. Lightly brush both sides of chops with some of lemon juice mixture. Place chops on lightly greased grill 4 to 6 inches above solid bed of hot coals. Cook, turning once, until chops are well-browned on outside but still pink in center; cut to test (8 to 10 minutes).

To serve, drizzle chops with remaining lemon juice mixture.

Makes 4 to 8 servings.

APPLE-GLAZED PORK LOIN

1 (4-pound) pork loin roast
1 cup apple juice
3 tablespoons soy sauce
1 clove garlic, minced or pressed
¼ teaspoon ground ginger
1½ teaspoons each cornstarch and water

Barbecue pork by indirect heat, placing pork on grill directly above drip pan. Cover barbecue and adjust dampers as necessary to maintain even heat.

In bowl, stir together apple juice, soy, garlic and ginger. After meat has cooked for 1 hour, baste with apple juice mixture. Continue to cook, basting frequently, until meat thermometer inserted in thickest part (not touching bone) registers 170 degrees (30 to 60 more minutes).

Let meat stand while you prepare sauce. To make sauce, skim and discard fat from pan drippings. In small pan combine drippings and remaining apple juice mixture. Stir together cornstarch and water; pour into pan. Bring to boil over high heat; boil, stirring, until sauce is thickened.

To serve, cut roast into individual chops. Pass sauce at table to spoon over individual portions.

Makes about 6 servings.

SKIRT STEAKS WITH FRESH HERBS

1½ to 2 pounds skirt steak, trimmed of excess fat
½ cup olive oil
3 tablespoons red wine vinegar
1 tablespoon Dijon mustard
1 clove garlic, minced or pressed
¼ teaspoon pepper
25 to 30 fresh thyme, rosemary or tarragon sprigs, each about 3 inches long

Cut steak crosswise into about 12-inch lengths, then arrange in 9x13-inch dish. In small bowl, mix oil, vinegar, mustard, garlic and pepper. Pour over meat; turn meat to coat. Cover and refrigerate for at least 4 hours or until next day, turning occasionally.

Soak herb sprigs in water to cover for about 30 minutes.

Lift meat from marinade and drain briefly (reserve marinade). Weave each piece of meat onto long metal skewer, rippling meat very slightly and tucking an herb sprig between skewer and meat on both sides of meat.

Place skewers on lightly greased grill 4 to 6 inches above solid bed of hot coals. Cook, turning often and basting with marinade, until done to your liking; cut to test (5 to 6 minutes for rare).

Makes about 6 servings.

Myths about marinades exploded

By MERLE ELLIS

You can soak it full of flavor but you can't soak it tender, and therein lies the myth of marinades. A fallacy has grown up over the years that soaking a tough piece of meat in special liquid over a period of time will make it tender. Actually marinating meat has only the most superficial effect on tenderness.

What it does affect is flavor. Marinades are marvelous for that. They allow you to express your creative imagination and experiment with all manner of flavor combinations. Much of today's meat can use all the help it can get in the flavor department. Even marinades that contain some acidic ingredients like wine, lemon juice or vinegar don't do much of a job at tenderizing. The acid can affect only that meat which it touches, so marinating a thick piece even for a long time has little tenderizing effect on the middle of the meat. Left in a marinade too long, the surface of the meat will become mushy and the center will still be no more tender. So when you use marinades, don't use them to tenderize, use them with flair for the flavor they provide.

A "little old winemaker" in California years ago gave me a recipe for a basic wine marinade with variations for beef, lamb, pork, poultry and fish. I have enjoyed it. It won't make a tough steak tender but it sure will make it taste good!

BASIC MARINADE
(And Variations)

1 cup California red dinner wine
1 cup consomme
1/4 cup California wine vinegar
2 teaspoons mixed herbs (thyme, rosemary, marjoram)
1 clove garlic, crushed
1/4 cup grated onion
1/4 cup catsup or chili sauce
1 tablespoon brown sugar
1 teaspoon salt
1/2 teaspoons black pepper
1 tablespoon Worcestershire sauce
1/2 cup oil
2 teaspoon dry or prepared mustard
(makes about 3 cups)

For Beef: Combine all ingredients. Heat to blend flavors. Cool sauce before using it as a marinade. Pour over meat in glass or porcelain dish, deep enough so that meat is at least half covered by liquid. Add more wine, if necessary, to half-cover thick pieces. Marinate for 2 or 3 hours, turning meat frequently. Before broiling, remove meat from marinade. Heat marinade and use it to baste meat frequently as it broils. The marinade baste adds flavor and keeps the meat moist.

For Pork: Use powdered ginger instead of other spices or herbs. Substitute 3 tablespoons honey for the brown sugar and step up the smoke flavor by adding a teaspoon of smoked salt instead of unseasoned salt. Add a little soy sauce, to taste.

For Chicken, Turkey or Lamb: Use a California white dinner wine, only, for the liquid and try a mixture of rosemary, oregano and dry dill for the herbs. Omit the mustard, but add a teaspoon of soy sauce.

For Fish: Use California dry sherry and broth for the liquid, try ginger alone for the spice, leave out mustard and sugar. Cut down on the catsup or leave it out entirely. For saltiness, rely on soy sauce, about 1/4 cup of it.

'Chat and Chew' cafe means home cooking

WILD PEACH, Texas (AP) — Vickey Cowan — owner of Vickey's Chat and Chew, a tiny cafe nestled alongside Blacks Ferry Road here — is kind of shy with strangers.

But visit a while and she reveals a treasure trove of stories about more than 50 years in the restaurant business.

The 67-year-old Nixon native, who has lived in Brazoria and Wild Peach for the past 35 years, has operated seven different eateries over the years in Brazoria, West Columbia and the Angleton area.

Years of getting up before dawn, catering to customers and hunching over hot stoves have carved deep lines in Ms. Cowan's face, but those lines soften and fade as she smiles while speaking of the restaurant she opened last winter.

Make no mistake. Running Vickey's isn't just fun. To Ms. Cowan it's good, honest work that gives her sore muscles every day, but keeps her sleeping like a baby every night.

Watching her customers made choosing a name for the place easy, Ms. Cowan says.

"All I had to do was take a look at the people here. On a Sunday after church the place is buzzing and people are chatting and chewing," she says.

Though the sparsely decorated restaurant has just 10 tables, there's no sense in making it bigger since all that would do is complicate things, Ms. Cowan says.

"My place is small and so is my menu. I can control it that way," she says.

By keeping the selection small, Ms. Cowan says she can provide better food.

"People may not get a 10-course dinner here, but they leave patting their stomachs so I must be doing something right with my cooking. The only complaint I've ever heard is that I put too much on the plates," she says.

To accompany her typically southern-style entrees, which are made from recipes she's devised herself, Ms. Cowan also bakes rolls and pies.

Ms. Cowan says she and her staff of nine waitresses, cooks and the rest of the kitchen crew, also try to make meals special by treating customers with kindness.

"We're famil" here and we want people to feel that," Ms. Cowan says.

"I really don't know what people do with time on their hands anyway ... I've never had it ... I guess I'll just go on that way. I've always been a hard worker," Ms. Cowan says.

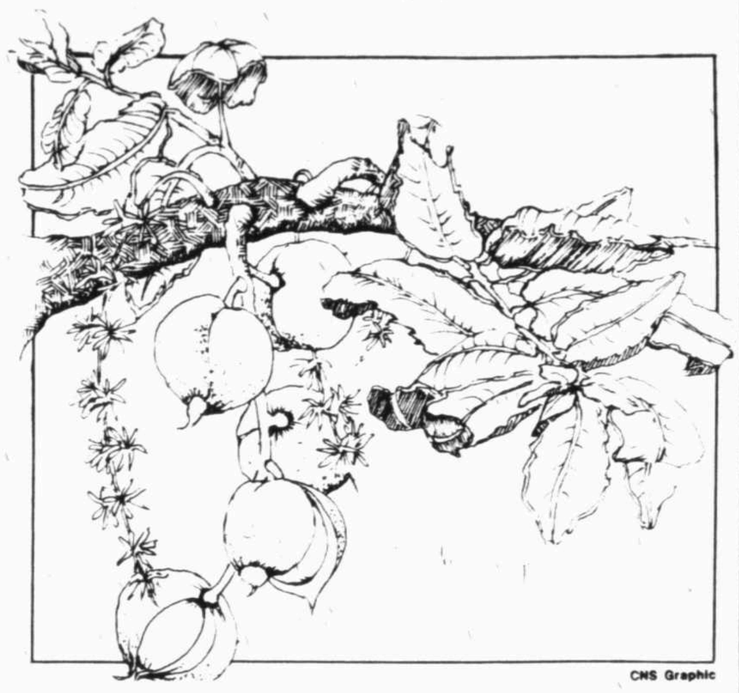
Hawaii, macadamias exotic duo

By KIM PETTIT
Copley News Service



CNS Graphic

A few years after World War II, when tires and gas were easy to come by, my grandfather drove inland to an exotic tree farm in California. He picked out a young macadamia nut tree, drove home with it sticking out the side window, and planted it in the small lawn of his front yard. My mother can remember it growing by leaps and bounds, season-after-flowering-season, until it shaded the front of the house.

The climate along the Southern California coast was perfect for the young tree — moderately tropical with just enough rain and adequate drainage. And by the early 1960s, the tree had grown to a height of nearly 30 feet with dark green hollylike leaves. Tiny green buds began to appear on the tree. Soon, they developed into sprays containing from 300 to 600 sweet-smelling white blossoms. Each spray produced up to 10 nutlets and beneath the outer husk was a hard brown shell that contained the prized macadamia nut kernel.

One of my earliest memories as a child was visiting my grandparents' house for Sunday dinner. Dad couldn't park the car fast enough for me, as I leaped out and hurried underneath the tree. The tree dropped leaves all yearlong, and if I looked underneath the leaves, I always found nuts.

I followed Grandpa down the driveway to the garage behind the house, and added the newfound shells to those already drying on a tray. Then we picked out some that had dried since my last visit, and went through the ritual of placing the hard, round shells into his vise.

Grandpa tightened the jaws on the shell until it began to squeak, then with a final strong turn of the handle, the shell snapped and the delicious nut appeared, ready for eating. The fresh, sensational flavor was probably wasted on my young taste buds, but to this day, I can remember how good they were, warmed by the sun.

Although Grandpa's tree did well in our climate, most of the macadamia nuts in commerce today are grown in Hawaii, where the industry is still relatively new. The first macadamia plantation was not started until 1921 by Ernest Shelton van Tassell, a transplanted Easterner from Massachusetts. His plantation did not produce as expected because it was found that seedlings from the same parent often produced nuts that were very different in quality.

This led to 20 years of research by the University of Hawaii. During that time, some 60,000 trees were observed and tested, selected and grafted, until nine varieties were developed that reliably produced a quality crop. These major varieties are used today to make up the bulk of Hawaii's crop.

The largest plantations are on the Big Island of Hawaii, on the sunny Kona Coast and on the other side of the island, near Hilo. Maui, Oahu and Kauai also have smaller orchards. The groves on the Big Island are beautifully tended and stretch as far as the eye can see. The porous volcanic soil is ideal for good drainage and the tropical sun angles down on the trees for luxurious growth.

Macadamia nuts are more expensive than most other nuts because they are the costliest nut to produce due to the long-term investment period before they yield, as well as due to their special requirements in harvesting and processing. The trees flower in waves over a period of four to six months, requiring five to six harvests annually.

Thinking back to when I was 5 years old, out in the small garage with Grandpa, I remember snacking on raw macadamias. As soon as the shells dried enough to crack, we slipped them into the vise, opened them up and took turns popping them into our mouths. By the time Mom came out to the garage to call us in for dinner, we were too full to think about eating.

MACADAMIA NUT CHEESE BALL

12 ounces cream cheese, softened
1½ cups Cheddar cheese, grated
2 teaspoons minced onion
½ cup chopped sweet pickles
1 teaspoon salt
½ cup macadamia nuts

Combine cream cheese, Cheddar cheese, onion, sweet pickles and salt; mix well. Shape into a ball. Place nuts in plastic bag and crush with rolling pin or lightly chop nuts in food processor. Roll cheese ball in macadamia nuts. Cover and refrigerate several hours or until well chilled. Serve with crackers.

CHOCOLATE MACADAMIA NUT TORTE

3½ ounces macadamia nuts, crushed into small pieces or pulverized in food processor or blender
1 egg
¾ cups sugar
¾ cup butter or margarine, softened
½ teaspoon salt
2 tablespoons rum
1½ cups flour
1½ cups whipping cream
¼ cup powdered sugar
⅓ cup cocoa powder

Tear eight sheets of waxed paper and trace the bottom of an 8x8-inch square pan, or 8-inch-round pan onto the paper. Stack sheets evenly and cut all sheets with the traced pattern.

8-inch cooky layers: In a large bowl, combine ¾ of nuts with egg, sugar, butter, salt, 1 tablespoon of rum and 1 cup flour. Beat with electric mixer at low speed. Increase speed and beat 3 minutes. Mixture should be light and fluffy. Stir in the remaining ½ cup flour.

Preheat oven to 375 degrees. Dampen baking sheets and place waxed paper forms on top. Place about ¼ cup dough on waxed paper; spread evenly to the edges of the paper. Bake cooky rounds 8 to 10 minutes. Always cool cookies on wire rack about 5 minutes, then peel off paper. Stack cooled cookies on a plate; cover and store if not used immediately.

Filling: Beat whipping cream; gradually add powdered sugar and cocoa powder. After stiff peaks form, stir in remaining 1 tablespoon rum. Spread about ½ cup of flavored whipped cream on cookies and layer. Refrigerate torte at least 2 to 3 hours before serving. Just before serving, sprinkle with reserved nuts and cut into squares or wedges.

Dollar falters

LONDON (AP) — The dollar opened lower in quiet trading on European markets today after gains of recent days were terminated by profit-taking and rumors of intervention by central banks. Gold strengthened.

In Tokyo, the dollar fell 0.65 yen to a closing 145.95 yen after climbing to an 11-week high. Later, in London, it was quoted at 144.65 yen.

Other dollar rates at midmorning, compared with late Tuesday:

—1.8245 West German marks, down from 1.8370

—1.5125 Swiss francs, down from 1.5260

—6.0950 French francs, down from 6.1335

In London, the British pound was quoted at $1.6145, compared with $1.5985 Tuesday.

GOLD

Gold opened in London at a bid price of $441.00 a troy ounce, compared with late Tuesday's $441.50. At mid-morning today, the city's five major bullion dealers fixed a recommended price of $443.00.

In Zurich, the bid price was $443.00, up from $439.50 late Tuesday.

Earlier, in Hong Kong, gold rose $2.96 to close at a bid $442.60.

Silver was quoted in London today at a bid price of $6.85 a troy ounce, up from Tuesday's $6.80.

Bentsen predicts production drop

By ANDREW MANGAN
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — A new study of oil consumption and demand in the United States predicts a dwindling amount of oil from non-OPEC countries through the turn of the century.

The six-page Congressional Research Service study was released Tuesday by U.S. Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, D-Texas.

U.S. oil production is projected to decline by between 25 percent and 50 percent and imports from many non-OPEC countries are also on the wane, according to the study, which used past U.S. production rates as a basis for its conclusions.

The United Kingdom will see a 50 percent drop in oil production by 2000 and Canada will trail off by at least 10 percent, according to the report.

Mexico, also a major source of U.S. imports, is projected to double its production by the turn of the century, as is Norway, but at considerably greater cost than in the past, the survey states.

"The upshot of these facts and figures is that new U.S. imports of oil must come largely from OPEC members in the Persian Gulf and North Africa," Bentsen said in a letter to his Senate colleagues.

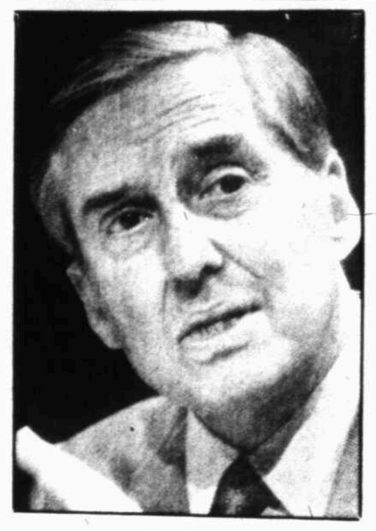
The CRS study predicts that consequently, OPEC countries will be pumping up to three times as much oil into the United States in 2000 than in 1986.

"In 1986, .745 barrels per day of crude oil was imported from Persian Gulf countries (82 percent from Saudi Arabia) and this constituted about 18 percent of total U.S. crude oil imports," according to the study.

Even if all additional production were realized in non-OPEC countries and all of that sent to the United States, the study estimates an additional 2.18 million barrels per day will be needed in 13 years.

"The CRS study draws the conclusion that even in the unlikely event that the United States is able to purchase the entire export volume of Mexico, Venezuela, Ecuador, Indonesia and Nigeria in 1995, we will still have to more than triple imports of Persian Gulf oil to three million barrels a day," Bentsen wrote.

"We need an energy policy consisting of more than OPEC-dominated markets and a return to gunboat diplomacy. The first step toward a better energy policy is retention of the energy security provision in the trade bill," he said.



Bentsen

Bentsen, who chairs the Finance Committee, faces an uphill fight on that measure. Many eastern and midwestern senators are strongly opposed to the energy security provision, which would require the president to act if projections of oil imports top 50 percent.

Few creditors interested in Texaco reassurances

RYE BROOK, N.Y. (AP) — Texaco executives said the finances of the nation's third largest oil company are healthy even though it has filed for protection under bankruptcy laws.

Only about 50 people turned out at the meeting of Texaco creditors Tuesday to hear the assurances of solvency.

"There's positive cash flow for Texaco," said Harvey Miller, the lawyer who was handling Texaco's proceedings in bankruptcy court.

Texaco filed for protection under Chapter 11 of the federal bankruptcy laws on April 12, in reaction to the upholding by Texas courts of a $10.3 billion judgment against Texaco. The money was awarded to Pennzoil after a Texas jury found that Texaco had snatched Getty Oil from Pennzoil.

Texaco has more than 17,000 creditors, including Pennzoil. The larger creditors formed two creditors committees and hired counsel to represent all creditors at the legal proceedings in U.S. Bankruptcy Court in White Plains.

Richard Brinkman, senior vice president and chief financial officer for Texaco, chronicled the bankruptcy filing for the small gathering at a ballroom in the Rye Town Hilton. A regular meeting of creditors is mandated by federal bankruptcy law.

During a question period, Harrison Moore, chairman of the Institute for Management Studies, asked if Texaco would be good for debts incurred prior to the bankruptcy filing.

Moore's company runs executive development programs and was owed $3,125 for March, April and May.

Miller assured him that Texaco planned to pay all its creditors in full and would have schedules of payment ready by Sept. 8.

"Would you recommend we continue doing business?" Moore asked.

"I can't make credit decisions for you, but if I did, I would," Miller said.

Moore said after the meeting he would continue doing business with Texaco.

False offer for Dayton Hudson lands bidder in hospital

NEW YORK (AP) — A Cincinnati stock broker made a false $6.8 billion offer to buy Dayton Hudson Corp. Tuesday and later was hospitalized, while Wall Streeters puzzled over the incident that sparked gyrations in the company's stock price.

The broker, P. David Herrlinger, was fired by his employer Tuesday after the firm learned of the bid. Later, Herrlinger was taken by family members to a hospital to be treated for an undisclosed ailment.

Herrlinger told WKRC-TV in Cincinnati that he intentionally made the stock bid even though he did not have the money to back it.

"Wouldn't you describe it as a little unorthodox, the approach you've taken," a television reporter asked before Herrlinger was taken to the hospital.

"No," Herrlinger replied, laughing.

Herrlinger told the Cincinnati Enquirer that he did not regret what he had done.

"I made a lot of brokers happy today; hopefully, a lot of shareholders, too," Herrlinger said.

According to various sources, neither Herrlinger nor his former employer, Capital Management Corp., owned any stock in the Minneapolis-based retailer or stood to profit from the sharp jump in price following disclosure of his offer.

But stock regulators and others involved were piecing together information to determine the extent of the losses — and gains — that might stem from the affair. The Dayton Hudson stock soared as much as $9 in heavy trading before falling back to finish the day at $53.12½ in New York Stock Exchange composite trading.

"You don't have a business story here, you have a medical story," said Anthony Covatta, a neighbor who acted as Herrlinger's spokesman. "This is not one of your cagey Wall Street guys trying to pull a scam."

The saga began when Herrlinger notified Dow Jones News Service he represented Stone Inc., which he said was offering to buy Dayton Hudson for $70 a share, or $6.8 billion cash. He said Stone was a private investment firm.

After calling Herrlinger back to try to confirm his identity, Dow Jones reported the offer on its circuits, which are read by thousands of stock traders, brokers and other Wall Street professionals.

Dayton Hudson for weeks has been mentioned as a prominent takeover target, and the markets pushed the price up sharply from Monday's close of $54 on the New York Stock Exchange.

The New York Stock Exchange halted trading in Dayton Hudson at 9:35 a.m. EDT after seeing the report, but the stock continued trading on the Boston Stock Exchange and in

Senators push for state clout in offshore drilling projects

WASHINGTON (AP) — Two senators are pushing legislation that would give states more clout in federal decisions to sell offshore oil and gas leases.

In introducing the bill Tuesday, Sens. John F. Kerry, D-Mass., and Ernest F. Hollings, D-S.C., said a 1984 Supreme Court decision "muddied" the congressional intent of the Coastal Zone Management Act.

Hollings, chairman of the Senate Commerce, Science and Transportation subcommittee on national ocean policy study, and Kerry, a member of the panel, said the law was written so that offshore oil and gas leases would not be offered in violation of a state's own coastal guidelines.

But the high court, in a 5-4 decision favoring Reagan administration plans to offer oil leases off the California coast, said drilling leases for the outer continental shelf are outside areas governed by states and therefore do not directly affect a state's coastal regulations.

"It seems clear to me that Congress intended for the lease sales to be approved by the states," Kerry said. "This legislation will serve to protect the coasts that local officials want to protect from the potential hazards of offshore drilling in environmentally fragile areas."

The Kerry-Hollings proposal would change only a single word in the law, Kerry aide Sally Yozel said.

The law now says federal policies that "directly" affect a state's coastal zone must be consistent with state regulations. That would be changed to read that federal activities "significantly" impacting states' coastal zones must adhere to state guidelines.

Kerry, in a prepared floor speech, said offshore oil leases would have a great impact on states even though they are beyond the three-mile mark.

He pointed to Georges Bank, a rich fishing area off Massachusetts, parts of which are included in the Interior Department's five-year plan for offshore leases.

"Considering that Georges Bank is one of the most productive offshore habitats in the world, common sense would dictate that any activity on Georges related to offshore oil and gas drilling is an activity that does have a significant environmental and economic impact on Massachusetts' coastal zone," Kerry said.

Yozell said similar legislation already has had a hearing in the House and is expected to be acted on shortly.

Banks face reality about loan losses

By ROSE RAGSDALE
Hearst News & Feature Service

By boosting their loan-loss reserves one-by-one, the nation's big banks are grudgingly admitting what investors, regulators and economists have said for years: Many of the Latin American loans they carry on their books aren't worth full value — and some are completely worthless.

However, banking experts say the ultimate effect of the actions on banks' earnings, developing nations and the American public will be less far-reaching than otherwise might be expected, considering the huge losses involved.

"Instead of continuing to kid themselves, the banks are starting to acknowledge what everybody already knew," said John Kareken, professor at the University of Minnesota.

Consequently, the banks' recent moves to increase their provisions for future losses among their Latin American loans were generally anticlimactic, the experts said. Kareken said the financial markets already had discounted the big banks' stocks to reflect a 35 percent to 40 percent drop in the value of their Latin American loans.

In recent weeks, seven of the nation's top 10 banks and several smaller regional banks have set aside provisions totaling more than $8.2 billion for future loan losses in Latin America.

Manufacturers Hanover Corp., the latest big bank to boost its reserves, said that it would add $1.7 billion to cover future losses among its Latin American loans. BankAmerica Corp., Security Pacific Corp. and First Interstate Bancorp. also are among the big banking companies that succumbed like dominoes to industry-wide pressure to increase reserves against losses.

A widespread awareness of the need for the big banks to set aside more reserves has buffered the external impact of the actions, the experts said. Even the banks who will suffer their worst quarterly losses in five decades are expected to bounce back quickly with higher earnings in

WASHINGTON (AP) — Hostile corporate takeovers can improve efficiency and enrich the nation, the Reagan administration says, and generally should be left to work their will.

But hostile corporate takeovers also can threaten the hearts and souls of America's communities, says a group of state government officials, and those interests also should be protected.

Those views were voiced Tuesday as the Senate Banking Committee took testimony on legislation that would put new curbs on Wall Street's raiders. Hearings were continuing today.

Beryl W. Sprinkel, chairman of the president's Council of Economic Advisers, urged the panel to reject the bill, saying takeovers lead to a healthier, wealthier economy.

"The available evidence ... is that unsolicited transactions that effect mergers and acquisitions increase national wealth," he said. "They improve efficiency, transfer scarce resources to higher valued uses and stimulate effective corporate management."

The debate over takeovers is dominated by "pejorative, militarist images," Sprinkel added. But he said the evidence does not support the calls for sharp new curbs on Wall Street.

Managers who must face the possibility of being taken over should they not perform "must continually explore new ways to make America's corporations more productive and more competitive in the world economy, and this result clearly benefits American consumers and workers as well as the shareholders themselves," Sprinkel said.

But state officials having regulatory roles disagreed.

"Businesses do not exist merely in the abstract, on stock tickers and balance sheets," Ohio Attorney General Anthony J. Celebrezze Jr. said.

1986 mergers and acquisitions

Data from W.T. Grimm & Co. shows a record level of mergers and acquisitions in the U.S. in 1986. Acquisitions stood at 3,356, up 12 percent from 1985. Foreign acquisitions were up 32 percent, at 260, the highest level since 1972. There was also a record number of transactions with a price tag of $100 million or more — 353 in 1986, compared to 270 in 1985.

Seminar targets displaced petroleum professionals

By DEANNA J. NEAL

Neal

Displaced professionals in the Permian Basin will have the opportunity to develop job search skills by participating in a seminar conducted by Simon-Tanner & Associates in cooperation with PROFESSIONAL OILFIELD SAFETY, INC.

According to spokesman Larry Geron, the three-day seminar is designed to get the job search going in an organized way. "Participants are guided through a proven successful procedure to get the right job offer through interview training. Those attending will learn how to effectively communicate their employment desires and needs and their special skills to potential employers," said Geron.

Participants receive one hour of one-on-one counseling during the final day, where participants can discuss specific personal situations. Geron adds that follow up sessions will be available at a later date, if necessary.

— Assessing skills and abilities
— Writing an action-oriented resume (25 copies will be professionally printed)
— Reviewing past accomplishments
— Resume preparation
— Approaching the market place
— Researching potential employers
— Composing marketing letter (3 standard letters provided)
— Proper telephone techniques
— Networking to find "hidden jobs"
— Interview training
— Salary and negotiating strategy

Seminar leaders have extensive human resource management experience and have spent much time in career continuation consulting to displaced petroleum professionals in the Permian Basin.

Geron says the seminar will be held at the Professional Oilfield Safety, Inc. building at Highway 80 and Loop 250. Seminar dates are July 7, 8 and 9 from 9:00 a.m. to 4:00 p.m. Pre-registration cost is $40. For registration, call 699-7544.

When it comes to one of America's all-time favorite foods — pizza — pepperoni is king. At least according to a recent Gallup survey.

Americans polled on their pizza topping preferences, found pepperoni most appealing to the majority. In fact, a full 50 percent of the respondents indicated that they preferred pepperoni to all other toppings.

In 1986, DOMINO'S PIZZA produced more than 160 million pizzas and plans to top that mark in 1987. The world's largest pizza delivery company can verify the popularity of pepperoni. Last year, Domino's Pizza used more than 17 million pounds of pepperoni. Beneath that pepperoni, there were 125.6 million pounds of flour, 1.8 million pounds of custom blend sauce and 86.7 million pounds of cheese.

Headquartered in Ann Arbor, Mich., Domino's operates 3,850 stores in all 50 states, District of Columbia, Puerto Rico and eight foreign countries. There are three Domino's locations in Midland.

Lois Grupe's GALLERY OF GIFTS at 12 Oak Ridge Center has been purchased by Ben and Sue Gould, long-time Midland residents. It will continue to operate at the same location as Sue Gould's Gifts.

The new owners say they will continue to offer the same line of fine gift items, which will be expanded during the coming months. They also carry Hallmark greeting cards, Crane stationery, party supplies and seasonal merchandise.

Sue Gould has over 20 years merchandising experience with several Midland stores.

DAYTON

the national-over-the-counter market, where it rose to a high of $63 a share.

At least 72,200 shares of the stock changed hands on the Boston Stock Exchange at prices in the low 60s. In addition, a block of 131,500 shares traded in the national over-the-counter market at $63.

Wall Street sources said the brokerage firm of Morgan Stanley & Co. apparently handled the bulk of the buying and selling of the stock at the Boston exchange.

Peter Roche, a spokesman for Morgan Stanley, said the firm did not comment on its activities in the markets.

Dayton Hudson maintained it had no contact with Herrlinger or Stone Inc. But reports of the offer came as the company was asking Minnesota lawmakers to give it greater protection from hostile takeovers, and chairman Kenneth Macke was quick to use them to make political hay.

At a joint House committee hearing in St. Paul, Macke read reports of the offer and said the situation surrounding Dayton Hudson was very fluid.

"By the end of the day someone could have control and we could be gone by the end of July...believe me, I'm not trying to be alarmist," he said.

When trading resumed on the New York exchange at 11:35 a.m., the stock was at $59, but the price began sinking as traders became suspicious at the delay in confirmation of the offer by independent sources.

By that time, Herrlinger had been identified as being a portfolio manager and securities analysts with Capital Management. Richard Miller, president of Capital Management, disclosed he had fired Herrlinger that morning after hearing him link the firm to the offer for Dayton Hudson.

Miller said Herrlinger had been with the small firm for three years and was regarded as a good worker.

Following those disclosures, Dow Jones stated the buyout offer might not be bona fide, and Covatta confirmed it. By then, the stock had dropped back to the $54 range.

Covatta said Herrlinger was taken to a hospital by his wife for an examination following the call to Dow Jones. Covatta said Herrlinger "is not well," but he didn't know what was wrong with him.

"It's just a terrible shame that this thing got out on the wire this morning," said Covatta, an attorney for a Cincinnati law firm. "It's just too bad nobody was around to contain this."

Everett Groseclose, managing editor of Dow Jones News Service, said the Herrlinger report was checked carefully before being transmitted. "This was a recognized somebody with a legitimate firm. The information he gave us was bad," Groseclose said.

Covatta described Herrlinger as a "pillar of the community" who had not shown signs of aberrant behavior.

The New York Stock Exchange stated it would conduct an analysis of price and volume changes in Dayton Hudson stock to determine whether any securities laws were broken.

BANKS

the last half of 1987, according to banking analysts.

"The most important thing to come out of this is that the banks are finally realizing that the grocer in Stockton, Calif., is a lot more important to their future than the grocer in Sao Paulo," said Paul Nadler, a Rutgers University professor. He said that the big banks had learned the value of sticking to their familiar territory rather than venturing into other parts of the world. He cited Bank of America's recent decision to withdraw from international retail banking and focus its energy on the West Coast.

Kareken said the big banks probably would work to assess the risk of loans to Third World countries more accurately in the future, while smaller banks might withdraw from the market altogether.

"The big banks will not desert the market, because it is too profitable," he said, "but the regional banks that thought they would get some easy profits by following the big banks into Latin America have had enough."

Currently, the worldwide debt of developing countries is nearing $1 trillion. Aside from the Philippines, most of the loans made by private U.S. lenders are to Latin American countries.

TAKEOVER

"Companies are the employers of real people and the backbone of real cities and towns."

Celebrezze, testifying on behalf of the National Association of Attorneys General, said the battles over takeovers can be so expensive and debilitating that they destroy corporations for an academic notion of efficiency.

Within Ohio, he said, Goodyear Tire and Rubber Co. fought off a takeover attempt, but at the expense of 3,300 jobs. Owens-Corning Fiberglas fought off a takeover, but lost 13,000 jobs, he said.

The bill, sponsored by Banking Committee Chairman William Proxmire, D-Wis., would require corporate raiders to publicly disclose their holdings and intentions within one day of acquiring 3 percent of a company. Under current law, they have 10 days after acquiring 5 percent, and critics say that tips the playing field toward the raider.

The Securities and Exchange Commission said it also opposed Proxmire's bill, but on less sweeping grounds. Acting Chairman Charles Cox told the committee the SEC supports closing the 10-day window to two days, rather than requiring a next day filing.

Oil patch showing signs of recovery

Firms slowly stepping up exploration efforts

By LEE A. DANIELS
New York Times News Service

NEW YORK — From the shores of Lake Michigan to eastern Colorado to the Gulf of Mexico, a species that was a prime candidate for the endangered list is making a comeback: the wildcatter.

In the past few months, oil companies ranging from the giant Chevron Corp. to the tiny Forest Oil Co. of Denver have been stepping up their search for oil in the United States. To be sure, this exploration activity is nowhere near the frenzied level of five years ago. But after two years of plummeting activity, the industry is making a slow, painful comeback.

The exploration level is still too low for oil companies to reverse the decline in domestic oil production, which last year dropped 700,000 barrels a day, to 8.4 million barrels. Moreover, last year's $19-a-barel plunge in oil prices, from $29 to $10, is still shaking the smaller exploration and production outfits, whose ranks will probably continue to shrink.

But clearly, after scraping the bottom of the barrel for 18 months, the industry is on the way up.

The number of active drilling rigs in operation, a key measure of industry drilling activity, reached 814 last week. That was 57 more than in the previous week, the largest weekly advance in 18 months. And oil companies are planning to increase exploration activity in the second half of this year. The Petroleum Information Corp., a Denver consulting firm, estimates that the weekly rig count will average 950 to 1,050 for the whole of 1987. That would mean about 38,000 new wells drilled this year, compared with 35,000 last year.

There are other signs that confidence is building in the oil patch. Companies are beginning to bid anew for drilling tracts in the Gulf of Mexico, and investor money, which had all but dried up last year, is becoming available once again.

Acquisitions are once more on the rise. Admittedly, most involve the purchase of smaller companies. But British Petroleum Ltd. recently shelled out $7.82 billion to purchase the minority stake of the Standard Oil Co. that it did not own. And the Chicago-based Amoco Corp. has a strongly contested agreement to buy Dome Petroleum Ltd. of Canada for $3.86 billion.

This pickup in activity on so many fronts represents an obvious vote of confidence in the notion that oil prices will rise. World prices for crude oil currently range from $18 to $20, the highest level in 18 months. Just as important to oil companies, the wild fluctuations that characterized oil prices last year have disappeared. And with most members of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries abiding by their production quotas, oil industry executives and analysts do not expect the volatility to return soon.

Oil ministers from OPEC are scheduled to meet Thursday to discuss its six-month-old production accord, which has been chiefly responsible for the higher prices. While OPEC has had problems maintaining harmony among its members before, most oil industry executives and analysts expect the accord to be extended.

Even so, prices are likely to remain too low to justify anything close to the aggressive exploration efforts of the early to mid-1980s, industry executives and experts maintain.

A price of $18 to $20 a barrel "is a lot better than $9 to $10, but it's not enough" to cause a surge in exploration, said George P. Mitchell, chief executive of the Houston-based Mitchell Energy and Development Corp.

File Photo

Recovering oil prices are slowly putting more roughnecks back on drilling rig floors.

Kenneth T. Derr, vice chairman of Chevron, the nation's fourth-largest oil company, added, "I expect some upturn in drilling in the next few months, but it would take a crude price of about $25 a barrel to fire up a significant exploration effort in the United States."

Many in the industry do not expect oil prices to reach that level until the early 1990s. And if prices hit that level, drilling activity would not surge, said officials of both major oil companies and smaller independent exploration and production concerns. Having been burned so badly by the plunge in prices, oil companies will not fully revive their exploration operations until prices remain at or above $25 for at least several months, these officials say.

So far, Mitchell and other oil executives have been backing up their statements about prices with their wallets. The Oil and Gas Journal, an industry publication, estimates that oil companies will spend $12.9 billion this year exploring for oil. While that is above the $12 billion spent on exploration last year, it is well below the $20.7 billion spent in 1985, when the price of oil averaged more than $25.

Mitchell said his company may drill as many as 70 wells this year. But Mitchell Energy was typically drilling 300 wells a year before prices plunged last year. Moreover, with natural gas in the United States still selling well below its peak price, the company intends to reduce its gas production by a third, to 100 million cubic feet a day.

Besides thinking prices are still too low, the industry is nervous that some unforeseen development — a breakdown of OPEC's production-quota pact or a serious military incident in the Persian Gulf — will generate new turmoil in the markets.

Even if they are not exactly ebullient about the future of the oil business, American oil executives are noticeably more optimistic than they were just months ago. But that does not mean they will deviate from their cautious strategy. The components of this strategy include:

—A greater emphasis on paying down debt and wringing as much cash out of operations as possible.

—A continued focus on buying proven oil reserves.

—A hunt for oil abroad and in waters off the United States, and a concentration of efforts in the lower 48 states on finding natural gas.

Indeed, American companies' growing exploration activities in such foreign countries as Indonesia, Canada and Colombia all but guarantee that the production of crude oil in the United States will continue to decline. Most industry executives and analysts expect it to fall by 250,000 more barrels a day this year.

The sharp contraction in the number of independent oil companies in the past two years contributed to the decline. These independents have traditionally accounted for 85 percent of drilling in the United States and still account for 50 percent of the country's oil and gas production.

There are no precise figures on the number of independents, in part because many are mom-and-pop outfits with fewer than 20 employees. But Frank Schwab, a principal of Genssler & Schwab, a New York-based consulting firm, estimated that as many as 5,000 of these smaller oil producers have gone under since the beginning of 1986.

Many others, such as the Bon Ray Energy Corp., an Oklahoma City-based exploration and production company, are struggling.

While Bon Ray ran 15 rigs during the boom years of the early 1980s, only one is operating today. Similarly, Bon Ray's exploration staff is down 40 percent from 1983, and its number of offices has shrunk from four in three states to one, in Oklahoma City.

"It's been very, very tough," said Ray Hefner, Bon Ray's chief executive.

Many of the remaining independents still face a rough road, said Thomas A. Petrie, a managing director of the First Boston Corp. "To take advantage of the coming upturn, they'll have to be financially healthy enough to bid for good properties and to carry out drilling projects," he said.

For both the major oil companies and the independents, that means reducing debt even more. Rising investor confidence and oil-stock prices are helping some large and small companies to do just that. In recent months, the Occidental Petroleum Corp., for instance, raised $1.2 billion by selling new shares, while the Wainoco Oil Corp., a small Houston company, raised $24.6 million.

Executives at both Occidental and Wainoco said their offers drew a greater response than they had anticipated. Even so, investors are far more selective now than they were before the oil-price crash, Schwab, the consultant, said. The new tax law, which eliminated many oil-related tax shelters, has also made life more difficult for many independents. And the tax law's elimination of investment tax credits, among other things, will make exploration in the continental United States less economical.

The total amount of public and private investment in oil and gas drilling fell to $186 million in 1986, from $2.7 billion in 1981, according to Robert A. Stanger & Co., an investment research firm in Shrewsbury, N.J. Such funds will probably shrink more this year, the firm predicts.

All these trends play into the hands of the big companies and stronger independents, said William J. Kimmel, an analyst at Kidder, Peabody & Co. "Until the upturn is definitely here and everybody can touch it, investment capital will stay largely with the majors, leaving many of the smaller independents financially starved," he said.

That development in turn means that it will increasingly be the stronger oil companies that have access to oil and gas properties, said James D. Crandell, a Salomon Brothers Inc. oil analyst.

Exxon Corp., the world's largest oil company, is a case in point. Exxon last year sharply reduced its exploration budget and its work force. Nonetheless, it has spent about $2 billion since 1984 to buy about 500 million barrels of oil reserves throughout the world. That volume is equal to the reserves of hundreds of independent companies.

For their part, officials of smaller companies hope that if they manage their costs well and pick their projects carefully, they can carve out a niche in the new, tougher environment.

"We do feel confident that the bottom has been reached and won't be seen again," said Everado Goyannis, treasurer of Forest Oil, a Denver-based energy company with 300 employees. "We're more optimistic about the possibilities of gaining more production and exploration opportunities this year and next year. We're going to be putting money into the ground."

INVESTORS' GUIDE

Precious metals represent speculation, not investment

By BILL DOYLE

Q. I'm writing you because I admire your advice to older people against risky investments. Financially, I'm stuck in neutral. I've got about $40,000 in cash, 200 ounces of gold and silver coins and a large number of antiques — mostly guns and jewelry.

I'm 60 years old, live in rental quarters and have no income. My expenses average $600 per month. What do you suggest I do until I reach 62 and start collecting Social Security?

Doyle

A. I must start by saying you have not been following this column's advice. You need income and you should have put your assets to work to produce more dollars — long ago.

If that $40,000 is really in "cash" or accounts where it is earning no interest, your first move should be to change that. My advice is to put $35,000 into either federally insured certificates of deposit or U.S. Treasury bills. Keep the other $5,000 in an interest-paying money market deposit account at a bank or savings and loan association.

Your gold and your silver coins have to be called risky. It has always been stressed here that precious metals are not investments. They are speculations. Granted, their prices have risen smartly in recent months. But they are not really suitable for you. In your shoes, I would start selling and putting the proceeds into safe, interest-paying investments.

The values of good antiques just keep rising. And there is great enjoyment just having them around the house. But when you need money, getting full value for them can be awfully tricky. If you have to sell, be sure to get prices from a number of dealers and/or private buyers.

I'll admit to having a soft spot for old guns, because I own some. Even the sidearms I "liberated" during WW II would fetch high prices. If I were pressed for cash, I would unload.

From a strictly conservative financial point of view, you could sell all your gold, silver and antiques. Then, after putting the money from the sales to work earning interest, you could live very comfortably.

However, you don't have to sell everything — immediately or, perhaps, ever. Your return address shows you live in an area where costs are not sky-high. Assuming you enjoy your antiques, keep them until you really have to sell. And, unless you're strapped for money, you can sell your gold and silver gradually. Just don't make the mistake of hanging onto everything you own and denying yourself a comfortable living.

Q. Fourteen years ago, I bought a newly minted collection of 48 very pure one-ounce silver ingots depicting "the great events and leaders of World War II" at $10 per ounce. The certificate accompanying these beautiful pieces attests that only 2,500 sets of this limited edition were minted.

During 1981, when the price of silver soared to $40 an ounce, I chose not to turn in the collection for melting. I thought many others would do that and my collection would become more valuable.

I recently learned that the private mint from which I made the purchase went out of business eight years ago. How do I find out what this perfectly intact collection is worth, other than its intrinsic silver value?

A. You'll have to check with coin shops and precious metal dealers handling collections such as yours. You may be in for unpleasant surprises. Although "only 2,500" sets of your particular commemorative ingots might have been minted, many, many other so-called "limited editions" were produced and are still being produced.

All too often these are worth little, if anything, more than their metal values. As I write this, silver is trading a bit above $7.50 per troy ounce. Sometimes collections such as your fetch even less, because buyers naturally insist that the ingots be assayed to determine true purity.

BUSINESS BRIEFS

Bill would protect benefits

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate Judiciary Committee has approved a bill designed to protect the health benefits of retired workers whose companies enter bankruptcy proceedings.

With little discussion, the committee sent the measure to the full Senate by voice vote Tuesday.

Sen. Howard Metzenbaum, D-Ohio, introduced the legislation in response to a move by Dallas-based LTV Corp., which suspended medical and life insurance benefits to its retirees last July 17 when it filed for protection from creditors under Chapter 11 of the federal bankruptcy code.

Rally draws 2,500 participants

MIAMI (AP) — Eastern Airlines' takeover by Texas Air Corp.'s Frank Lorenzo was the focal point of a labor rally Tuesday that attracted about 2,500 people to the headquarters of the Machinists union.

"There's a whole new generation of robber barons, if you will, like Frank Lorenzo who have made work a dirty word for the majority of Americans, and we want an end to it," said Andy Banks, director of the newly formed Florida Jobs for Justice Committee.

High court strikes down tax

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court has struck down a Washington State manufacturing tax that favored some in-state businesses.

The ruling's potential impact for other states was disputed.

The 6-2 decision announced Tuesday said the Washington tax discriminates unconstitutionally against interstate commerce because the levy, in effect, is assessed only on products manufactured in Washington that are sold to out-of-state customers.

Stock market falls 5.78 points

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market declined in active trading Tuesday. The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials fell 5.78 points to 2,439.73.

Bond prices declined in slow trading.

The dollar rose against the Japanese yen in Tokyo but fell in relation to most key currencies in European and U.S. foreign exchange markets.

Gold prices increased in reaction to the dollar's decline. Grain and soybean futures prices advanced on the Chicago Board of Trade.

Farm production expenses fall

WASHINGTON (AP) — Farm production expenses fell 16 percent in 1986, their third consecutive annual decline, to an estimated $106 billion, the Agriculture Department says.

A preliminary report by the department's Economic Research Service said Tuesday the average expenditure per farm last year was $47,976, a drop of $7,266 from 1985.

Steelworkers ask for benefits

NEW YORK (AP) — The United Steelworkers are asking a federal judge to restore pension benefits for 8,000 LTV Steel Co. retirees that were cut after the steelmaker filed for reorganization under bankruptcy laws.

In a hearing at U.S. Bankruptcy Court in Manhattan, Richard Seltzer, a lawyer for the steelworkers, asked Judge Burton R. Lifland to restore the $400 monthly benefits.

But lawyers for LTV and the Pension Benefit Guaranty Corp., a federal agency which guarantees basic pension benefits for retirees, urged that Lifland not grant the union's request for an injunction, partly because the steel company and the union are continuing negotiations on a new contract that would affect the benefits.

THURSDAY, JUNE 25, 1987

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY: A health problem could be related to job dissatisfaction or emotional distress. Do what you can to remedy a difficult situation. Expressing warm feelings will heal a rift between family members. Travel abroad sounds appealing. Just be sure you can afford it! Think big when it comes to business and career. You need to do things on a larger scale. Love triumphs over adversity.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: baseball's Alejandro Pena, "Animal Farm" author George Orwell, producer-director George Abbott, TV host Phyllis George, director Sidney Lumet, composer-singer Carly Simon, actress June Lockhart.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Contact friends or colleagues who live at a distance. Real estate contracts come from out of the blue. Comparison shopping for major appliances leads to real savings. Read various consumer guides.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Someone who is willing to help you wants to remain anonymous. Make certain you do not reveal this person's identity. Home life is more tranquil. Petty differences seem to be forgotten.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): A good day for pushing ahead on pet projects. Be on the lookout for excellent new business opportunities. Work out a budget revision with mate or partner. You need to build savings.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): You may not be able to get a new project off the ground today. Use your time productively by tackling routine work. Higher-ups expect you to cover for someone who is on vacation.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Adjust your home life to accommodate a new work routine. A misunderstanding exists with one of your co-workers. Take immediate steps to straighten things out. Higher-ups are increasingly aware of your potential.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Work alone as much as possible and you will accomplish more. Your associates are more inclined to gossip than to come to grips with a problem today. Distant affairs prove very profitable.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Take advantage of this slow-paced day to catch up on minor chores. Postpone trying to get in touch with influential people. June graduates receive several promising job leads. Celebrate!

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Be extra careful with your money. Do not invest in any venture without consulting experts. Secret agreements and transactions should be avoided. Tell loved ones about your intentions. Their input is important.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): You have been pushing yourself too hard lately. Slow down a bit and unwind. Go over accounts and bring financial records up to date. Family members are on the same wavelength.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): People who work behind the scenes offer you good advice. Follow it and you could reap a bonanza! Listen to those who are more experienced before making a major decision. Romance flourishes.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): A mail-order business produces greater profits than in the recent past. A close friend makes you feel life is truly worthwhile. Pay greater attention to a loved one's special needs.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Teamwork will bring excellent results. Professionals are easier to approach. A good day to deal with bankers and lawyers. Pursue your objectives with zeal. Romance is more rewarding than in the recent past.

DRAWING TRUMPS THE HARD WAY

North-South vulnerable. East deals.

	NORTH ♠ A Q 7 4 ♡ K 5 ◇ K J 6 3 ♣ A K 2
WEST ♠ 10 9 8 6 2 ♡ 8 6 4 3 ◇ A ♣ Q 9 3		EAST ♠ Void ♡ A Q J 10 9 7 ◇ 10 9 7 5 4 ♣ 7 6
	SOUTH ♠ K J 5 3 ♡ 2 ◇ Q 8 2 ♣ J 10 8 5 4

The bidding:

East	South	West	North
4 ♡	Pass	Pass	Dbl
Pass	4 ♠	Pass	Pass
Pass

Opening lead: Eight of ♡

Finding a disastrous trump break can be unpleasant. But instead of moping about your fate, you would do better to look for a way of overcoming it.

East's four-heart preempt was based on the vulnerability and his distribution. North's takeout double was routine, and he had no interest in moving further when South simply bid four spades, since his king of hearts was a doubtful asset. West's decision to defend, even with five trumps, is debatable.

West led a heart and declarer ruffed the second round. When the king of trumps revealed the bad break, declarer realized he would have to bring in the club suit without loss—besides the heart trick he had already lost, he was faced with an unavoidable loser in both trumps and diamonds. So at trick three declarer led the jack of clubs. East covered with the queen and dummy's king won.

He won the jack in hand and started to run clubs. West ruffed the fourth round and declarer took care to discard a diamond from the table rather than overruff. Declarer ruffed the heart return in hand and led his last club. If West ruffed, declarer would overruff in dummy, draw the last trump and score a high diamond for the contract; if West did not ruff, dummy's last diamond would be discarded and the high trumps would take the last tricks.

It might seem that West can beat the contract by refusing to cover the jack of clubs. But declarer can get back to the same position as above by cashing his high clubs before he touches the diamond suit.

Kelly says going to college 'made me more of a person'

Kelly

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Gene Kelly says the four years he spent in college before becoming famous dancing on film "made me more of a person."

The 74-year-old Pittsburgh native was honored Tuesday by the University of Pittsburgh, which is celebrating its bicentennial. Kelly graduated from the school in 1933 with a degree in economics.

University President Wesley W. Posvar presented Kelly with a medallion and unveiled a bronze star on campus honoring him as an outstanding alumnus and "a great artist."

Posvar and Kelly also screened rare movie footage, recently found in university archives, of Kelly performing in undergraduate productions.

Asked at a news conference why he spent the "four best years of a dancer's life" in college, Kelly replied: "It made me more of a person, aided me as a creative artist and to any young person I would say, 'Get an education. Learn, learn, never stop learning.'"

Penn

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Actor Sean Penn, repeatedly hauled into court after fistfights, was sentenced Tuesday to two months in jail for violating probation and was ordered to undergo counseling for his violent behavior.

His lawyer promised that Penn, 26, would learn self-control.

"He feels this is an unfortunate experience," said attorney Howard Weitzman. "He has to learn that people are going to attempt to goad him into situations where he may react inappropriately.

"He needs to and does understand that incidents like this are inescapable and he can control and will control them," said Weitzman.

Municipal Court Commissioner Juelann Cathey found Penn also violated probation by beating up a movie extra during shooting of his latest film, "Colors."

"Based on the two violations, Mr. Penn's going to be required to serve 60 days in County Jail," Ms. Cathey said.

"I think he's a talented individual, and I don't see any reason for this kind of conduct," she said.

He pleaded no contest to the reckless driving charge, which was reduced from drunken driving, Deputy City Attorney Alice Hand said.

"Because of a combination of the two incidents, primarily because of the battery incident, he was given 60 days for the probation violation, and his probation was extended for 24 months," Ms. Hand said. He could have faced six months in jail and a $1,000 fine.

Penn's probation had been for 12 months starting Feb. 20. Penn pleaded no contest in February to the nightclub battery. The reckless driving incident occurred Memorial Day.

The drunken-driving charge was reduced because it was Penn's first alcohol-related driving offense, his blood-alcohol level was barely over the limit and "there was no major impairment," Ms. Hand said.

Ms. Hand said Weitzman will arrange Penn's "counseling for violence." Weitzman must present proof of such psychotherapy when Penn surrenders to begin his sentence, and a report on his progress after six months, she said.

Weitzman said he had not been informed where Penn will serve his time.

Earlier this month, movie extra Jeffrey Klein sued Penn in Superior Court in connection with the fighting incident. Klein, 32, also alleges that Orion Pictures and other companies involved with producing the film were negligent for subjecting employees to Penn's reputed temper.

During a break in the filming at Venice Beach on April 2, Penn allegedly cursed Klein for snapping photographs of him and co-star Robert Duvall, then hit him as the altercation escalated.

Klein had been hired to ride a skateboard past the two actors.

The actor also is being sued in connection with the nightclub scuffle.

NEW YORK (AP) — In the tribute to George Abbott three days before his 100th birthday, much was made of the famed director's punctuality.

The next morning, Tuesday, he and his wife got stuck in an elevator on the way to a rehearsal of "Broadway," a show Abbott wrote and directed in 1926, and which he is directing in a revival that opens Thursday, his birthday.

The elevator was stuck between floors for 20 minutes before workers removed the roof and lowered a ladder, letting the passengers climb out.

Abbott sat a few moments on the floor, then was helped to his feet and took another elevator to the ground floor. And because he always allows for the unexpected, he still was on time for the rehearsal.

Westheimer

BOSTON (AP) — For $1,000, benefactors of the Ms. Foundation could dine, rub shoulders with the rich and famous and maybe get advice from sex expert Dr. Ruth Westheimer at an affair kicking off a fund-raising campaign.

If Westheimer failed to grab their interest at Tuesday's affair, donors, who paid as little as $100 for the foundation, could chat instead with Ms. magazine founder and editor Gloria Steinem, Marlo Thomas, her husband, Phil Donahue, or Brian Holloway of football's New England Patriots.

The 10-year-old foundation, an offshoot of Ms. magazine, calls itself the only multi-issue U.S. fund aiding women and children. It has given out a total of $2.7 million.

Among the projects it has assisted are an organization that works to improve conditions for women who work at computer terminals; a network of incest victims, and groups that aid Hispanic and Asian immigrant women find jobs and child care and help them make their way in America.

LONDON (AP) — Prince Philip, husband of Queen Elizabeth II, will visit Denver in October to receive the highest award given by the American branch of Outward Bound, the international survival-training organization.

The prince, a patron of Outward Bound, is to receive the Kurt Hahn Award, named for Outward Bound's founder, Buckingham Palace announced Tuesday.

His Oct. 24 visit coincides with the 25th anniversary of the organization's founding in the United States.
