Farm Plan Changes Announced

WASHINGTON (AP) — The administration, under pressure from militant farmers and facing a congressional bill it considers too costly, announced steps Wednesday designed to strengthen farm income and reduce agricultural surpluses.

The changes, being made administratively under existing law, were announced by Vice President Walter F. Mondale. They include:

— Payments to farmers for idling an additional four million acres of feed grains this year. For corn farmers with a normal yield of 100 bushels an acre, this translates into payments of $100 an acre. The current set-aside program calls for idling about six million acres.

— Payments to cotton farmers for idling an estimated one million acres from 1978 production. This means payments of $100 an acre for the producer who has an average yield of 500 pounds an acre.

Soybean Loan Rate

— A government loan rate of $4.50 a bushel for 1978 soybeans, up from $3.50 last year.

— Permission for wheat farmers to let livestock graze up to 40 percent of their 1976 acreage but no more than 50 acres and collect payments equal to 50 cents a bushel for what they normally would have harvested.

Mondale criticized emergency farm legislation now before Congress and said President Carter will veto it in its present form.

"The administration cannot and will not accept legislation which resembles the hastily constructed farm bill recently passed by the Senate," he said.

"That bill would ruin the structure of our farm programs, subject farmers to excess government regulation, and over the long term destroy the export markets on which we rely for a major share of our farm income," Mondale said.

Add To Deficit

Furthermore, he said, the farm bill now in a conference committee would add $2 billion to $3 billion "to a budget that is already in deep deficit." And he said it would set off "a wage-price spiral like we experienced between 1972 and 1973."

There was return criticism from Congress for the administration measures.

Sen. Herman Talmadge, D-Ga., chairman of the Senate Agriculture Committee, said: "I am deeply disappointed that the administration did not go far enough to provide real income assistance to farmers this year."

And Sen. Bob Dole of Kansas, ranking Republican on the committee, said the plan "should be a clear signal to American farmers — and consumers as well — that the administration really doesn't care."

No Question Of Veto

Agriculture Secretary Bob Bergland, who joined Mondale at a news conference, said that if the congressional bill reaches Carter in its present form, there is "no question that he will veto it."

However, Bergland said the administration is willing to work with Congress in possibly raising target prices used to compute federal payments to wheat.

Sentence Set In Fraud Case

By FRANK PATRICK

Avalanche-Journal Staff

PROMINENT businessman John H. Thomas, convicted earlier this year of defrauding the federal government out of approximately $2.5 million in cotton price support payments, was sentenced Wednesday to three years in prison and fined $129,000.

Federal Judge Halbert O. Woodward, also fined Thomas' company, corporate defendant Jon-T Farms, Inc., $215,000.

Woodward imposed the punishment after emotional pleas by the former Brownfield businessman's attorneys during the hearing Wednesday afternoon.

"It is a precious thing that takes a lifetime to build up and can be destroyed in a minute," defense attorney Travis Shelton said of his client's business career.

"This effectively has destroyed John Thomas' reputation...it will destroy his company," Shelton said.

The attorney said the hearing was a difficult thing to face since he and other members of the defense had believed "strongly that evidence from the government's own witnesses exonerates" the defendant.

Shelton also noted the government had launched administrative procedures designed to get back price support money.

"If he's wrong, the government will get its money back," he said.

Assistant U.S. Atty. Bob Slough and Roger McRoberts, who prosecuted the tedious case, made no recommendations before sentencing.

Thomas, a 45-year-old entrepreneur who seemingly possessed a Midas touch, was convicted of illegally receiving price supports in 1972 and 1973 under provisions of the Upland Cotton Program then in effect.

The bulk of the allegations against Thomas, who has since moved his business headquarters from Brownfield to Houston, charged him of willfully and knowingly converting Commodity Credit Corporation (CCC) funds to his own use or the use of another and of supplying false information to the government agency.

Property Claimed Converted

Prosecutors alleged during a hard-fought, 19-day trial that Thomas converted CCC property by causing payments to be allotted to individuals—members of joint farming ventures—who, the government claimed, had no substantive interest in land leased from Jon-T Farms.

Under provisions of the program, there was a $55,000 cotton price support ceiling to individual farmers.

The government contended Thomas evaded the price ceiling through the joint venture plans in which participants leased land from the Thomas company.

Testimony showed that persons signing up as joint venturers invested capital to lease land from the company and to raise a cotton crop. The individuals then received government support payments.

The crux of the case was whether or not venture participants had a "substantive interest" in the leased land and whether they were "actively engaged" in farming operations.

Venture Members Testify

Prosecutors elicited testimony from former venture members, testimony which they contended proved the members never exercised any degree of control over Gaines County farm operations. Prosecutors said members never voted on who would join the ventures, did not select the land to be leased and attended few if any meetings.

The prosecution argued that the only duty of the venturers was to sign necessary documents to make sure government checks were issued.

The defense claimed that Thomas had sought the advice of both his Brownfield attorney and of government agriculture officials before embarking on the joint venture idea.

Thomas was convicted on 91 counts.

Technically, he was sentenced Wednesday to serve three years for each count, with the terms to be served concurrently. He was fined $3,000 each on 43 counts, to make for the $129,000 figure.

Jon-T Farms was fined $5,000 on each of 43 counts.

Administration Lashes Steel Price Boost

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Carter administration angrily criticized as inflationary a price increase announced Wednesday by U.S. Steel Corp., and disputed the reasons given for the increase.

Despite the administration's criticism, Wheeling-Pittsburgh Steel Corp. also announced it was increasing its prices by the same amount, $10.50 per ton. U.S. Steel is the nation's largest producer and Wheeling-Pittsburgh is the ninth largest.

Both corporations said they were raising prices to offset increased costs from the recent collective bargaining agreement in the coal industry. However, the administration said the steel increase was more than double what could be justified by the coal agreement.

Other producers also were expected to follow U.S. Steel's lead.

The increase, the second this year, likely will find its way quickly into See ADMINISTRATION Page 14

Victim Testifies In Assault Trial

FROM HIS vantage point in a wheelchair, Walter O. "Trey" Ford III stared levelly at the man accused of putting the bullet into his spinal cord which left him paralyzed.

"I was just watching, seeing what an idiot he was," he said bitterly of a moment shortly before the shooting.

Both Ford and defendant Robert Torrez Hinojosa testified Wednesday during Hinojosa's aggravated assault trial, conducted in Judge Robert C. Wright's 137th District Court.

Jury Due Case Today

Evidence closed Wednesday, and the case was to go to the jury today after final arguments.

Hinojosa, 23, is accused of shooting Ford, a 20-year-old Texas Tech University student, Aug. 22, 1976, as Ford was riding in a Chevrolet Blazer with eight pledges of the Alpha Tau Omega fraternity.

Ford was riding in the back of the van-type vehicle when the shooting occurred on the parking lot of a fast-food restaurant located near the Town and Country shopping center and north of the intersection of Fourth Street and University Avenue.

Members of the eight-woman, four-man jury watched attentively as Ford wheeled himself into the courtroom to render his gripping account of the episode.

Thought It Was Joke

Ironically, Ford said that when he saw the man he identified as Hinojosa fire a gun he at first feigned injury because he thought the whole thing was a joke.

Ford said a fight challenge preceded the shooting.

"I stood up in the back of the Blazer and said 'Well, why not?' Ford testified. "The next thing I knew, he was shooting."

Ford, a sophomore at Tech, said he fell down on purpose and put his hands to his chest, saying "Oh, you got me."

"Why did you do that?" Asst. Dist. Atty. Phil Gamble asked. "Because I thought he was fooling," Ford answered. He explained he thought the gun was firing blanks.

Struck By Bullet

Ford said he was still down on his knees when he was struck by a bullet. "I'm not sure if it was the second or or third shot," he said.

The witness, who is paralyzed from mid-chest down, said he tried to warn his fraternity brothers in the back of the van with him that real bullets were being fired.

"I couldn't speak, my lung was punctured and filled up with blood and I couldn't talk," he said. "I was real scared."

"I knew I couldn't feel anything in my legs."

Witnesses explained that trouble started when a car containing two men came down the wrong side of the street and cut into the line of vehicles passing through the fast-food line.

Identified As Passenger

Hinojosa was identified as a passenger in the car.

Testimony indicated that words were exchanged between occupants of the car and the students in the Blazer, leading up to the alleged challenge to fight.

"I never had a chance," Ford said at one point.

Hinojosa took the witness stand to state he had in fact fired a gun on the parking lot. But he claimed he aimed the handgun into the air and was only trying to scare occupants of the van.

Hinojosa said that originally he had argued with occupants of another vehicle about cutting into the line, but that the Tech students—located ahead of him in the line—joined in.

"I thought they were coming at me," he said.

Hinojosa said he "panicked" and fired See VICTIM Page 14

SAME BANK HELD UP TWICE IN 11 DAYS

'Bomb Lady' Baffles Police

NEWTON, Mass. (AP) — Twice in 11 days the grey-haired lady has walked into the same branch bank, demanded stacks of $20 bills from the same teller and threatened to blow everybody up. Both times she got away without a trace.

Police are baffled, and say their usual underworld sources are providing little help. "What you would call our regular criminal sources don't have anything to say about this one," Detective Charles Feeley said Wednesday. "She isn't part of organized crime."

The first robbery was on St. Patrick's Day. A woman wearing a knitted hat and carrying a plastic ice cream bag strolled up to the middle window at the Newton-Waltham Bank and Trust Co. in this affluent Boston suburb.

She handed the teller a note saying she had a bomb and wanted money. The teller handed her $200 in $20 bills. The woman turned and went out the bank's side door.

On Tuesday, she was back, this time wearing a wide-brimmed rain hat and carrying a white shopping bag. She walked up to the same teller, and asked: "You remember me?"

"Oh yes, I remember," the teller replied.

Out came another note: "I'm the bomb lady. Give me $200 in $20s. You are being watched."

The flustered clerk handed over $400, and the woman headed out the same side door. This time, another teller ran after her, but by the time he reached the street, she had disappeared.

A picture taken by the bank camera shows a plain, round-faced woman, whom police describe as matronly, maybe 60 years old, with a deeply veined complexion.

"She looks very, very familiar to many of our people," Feeley said.

Police have some theories about the woman and her method of escape.

Once outside the bank, they say, she could have taken an elevator into the nine-story office building above the bank and then changed clothes.

Maybe, they add, she was on the floor of a brown car that a teller saw pull away from the curb after the second robbery.

Or, she could have melted into a crowd at a bus stop, police say.

At that bus stop Wednesday, there was a good deal of talk about the robber. One white-haired 62-year-old woman said: "She's a pretty smart operator."

Her companion added, with a giggle: "Maybe they'll think we're her."

Begin Hits American Pressure

JERUSALEM (AP) — Israel will send Defense Minister Ezer Weizman to Egypt today to reopen the direct Mideast peace talks that were suspended two months ago, Israeli radio and Egyptian sources said Wednesday.

The reports here and in Cairo indicated Israel was undertaking a new diplomatic initiative following Prime Minister Menachem Begin's tense talks with President Carter last week in Washington, where the U.S. desire for new Israeli accommodation with the Arabs was made manifest.

Still, Begin vowed in parliament Wednesday to continue resisting American pressure.

He then saw his supporters beat back opposition attempts to soften Israel's stand on the issue of occupied Arab lands — one of the major points of conflict between Israel and its American ally, and between the Jewish state and its Arab neighbors.

No Word On Stay

It was assumed Weizman would see Egyptian President Anwar Sadat but there was no word on how long he would stay, military sources said in Cairo. The defense minister last was in Egypt on Feb. 1 to discuss military arrangements in the occupied Sinai Desert.

Israeli radio reported that the Israeli cabinet decided Sunday to send Weizman back to Egypt, and the invitation from Egyptian War Minister Mohammed Abdel Ghani el-Gamasy reached Israel on Tuesday.

The reports of Weizman's imminent departure came one day after the dispatch to Sadat through U.S. diplomatic channels of a letter from Begin, urging resumption of direct talks. U.S. Ambassador Hermann Eilts met Wednesday with Egyptian Vice President Hosni Mubarak to transmit a message for Sadat, presumably the letter.

Fifth Stage

Weizman's impending mission, which had been reported previously but whose date was not known until Wednesday, would represent at least the fifth stage in Israeli-Egyptian contacts since last fall. Sadat's visit to Jerusalem in November was followed by a Christmas Day summit with Begin in Ismailia, Egypt; brief political and military talks in Jerusalem and Cairo beginning in January; and a period of U.S. shuttle diplomacy that followed the breakdown of those talks.

In Jerusalem, Begin declared Wednesday during a 7 1/2-hour parliamentary debate on foreign policy: "If we are confronted with demands that could harm the most vital interests of our people, we will not hesitate to say — even to the United States: We are unable to accept these demands."

'Begin Must Change'

Opposition Labor Party leader Shimon Peres told the Knesset, the Israeli legislature: "The time for decision has come now. Begin must change his policies."

Peres and some moderate members of Begin's rightist-based coalition urged the prime minister to change course and agree to cede territory in the occupied West Bank of the Jordan River.

But at debate's end, the Knesset approved Begin's policies by a vote of 64-32 with eight abstentions, mostly coalition moderates. The chamber voted down five opposition motions rejecting the government position, including one

Two More Die In City, Area Road Mishaps

By PAT TEAGUE

TRAFFIC MISHAPS in Lubbock County Wednesday claimed two more lives, bringing to five the number of persons killed in vehicle crashes inside the county this month.

Abelardo Olvera Ortiz, 28, of 2206 3rd St. died less than four hours after his 1977 Volkswagen overturned on FM 1585 southwest of the city about 6:10 a.m.

Department of Public Safety trooper Mike Humphrey said Ortiz apparently lost control of his car just west of the intersection of FM 1585 and FM 179.

Ortiz, who sustained with head and possible back injuries, was brought to Methodist Hospital, where he died at 9:55 a.m.

About six hours after the Ortiz mishap, a 27-year-old Lubbock man riding a late-model motorcycle was fatally injured in a collision with a passenger car at E. 34th Street and Quirt Avenue.

James Edward Morrison of 2324 16th St., Apt. A, died at West Texas Hospital about 2 1/2 hours after the 12:11 p.m. crash.

Morrison was the seventh person to die on Lubbock streets in a traffic accident this year.

He is the third city traffic fatality in the past five days. A 76-year-old Tulsa man, Howard L. Martin, pulled from his

East Coast Autos Said No Bargain

LONG GROVE, Ill. (UPI) — Cars soaked in salt water during East Coast winter storms may be offered as spring "bargains" by some dealers but will give buyers nothing but trouble, an insurance executive said Wednesday.

"The corrosive nature of salt water's action on metal parts and on a car's electrical system will make these autos inoperable, rusting lemons within months," said Marvin Verbeck, vice president and claim manager for Kemper Insurance Co.

"No matter how cheaply these cars may be priced, they are nothing but trouble and should be avoided," he said. He said residents of states which do not have laws requiring car titles to be stamped, "submerged" or "flood car" will be especially vulnerable to the sale of salt-soaked cars.

Verbeck said some 5,000 cars were judged total losses by insurance firms during the February storms that sent seawater sloshing over Massachusetts beaches and highways. He said owners appropriately insured were compensated.

Kemper said he and other insurers were requiring that submerged and "totaled" autos be broken up, with parts reconditioned and used as replacements.

Verbeck offered the following hints for potential used car buyers:

- Check for sand, silt or salt deposits under the carpeting in the passenger compartment. A stagnant odor also may be present.

- Ask to remove a seat cushion, then drop it bottom side down on pavement. If salt falls out, beware.

- Check recesses in the intake and exhaust manifold and other crevices for indications of sand deposits.

- Check for sand in chrome headlight rim.

- Check wiring for signs of corrosion. Note copper connections: they turn green when exposed to salt water.

- Ask to see title to determine if it has been stamped "submerged" or "flood car."

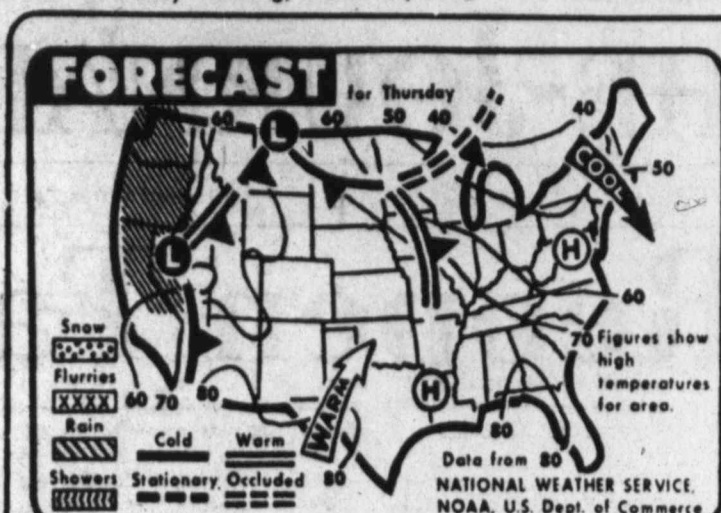

- Be especially careful of any car brought from Massachusetts since February.

- Be suspicious of any car that does not have its Vehicle Identification Number attached, since Kemper and some other insurers have ordered vehicle ID tags removed from cars declared total losses.

Oklahoma Senators Move On Abortions

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — The Oklahoma Senate has voted 32-5 for a bill that would make it more difficult for a woman to get an abortion in Oklahoma.

The measure, which now goes to the House, requires written consent from the patient's husband and requires physicians to inform prospective patients of the possible physical and mental after-effects of abortions.

Hill Urges Supreme Court Steer Clear Of Hughes Estate Case

WASHINGTON (AP) — For the second time since his death, the Supreme Court has been asked to rule on a case involving the estate of reclusive millionaire Howard Hughes.

On Wednesday, Texas Attorney General John Hill urged the Supreme Court to steer clear of the dispute between his state and California over potential inheritance taxes owed Hughes' estate.

California has asked the high court to flex its "original jurisdiction" muscles used to settle certain disputes between states. Lawyers for both states said they expect the judges to render a decision in the case by the end of their June term.

In December 1977 — 20 months after Hughes had died while being rushed from Acapulco, Mexico to Houston aboard a chartered jet — the court was asked to freeze probate proceedings in Texas and refused to do so.

At stake are millions of dollars in inheritance taxes. The Hughes fortune has been estimated at between $2 billion and $166.8 million. The later figure was given after an appraisal by the firm of Merrill Lynch, Pierce, Fenner and Smith, was called "ridiculously low" by Hill during Wednesday's arguments.

Hill also said California's case was so weak "you couldn't find it with radar."

Hill called the court's attention to the fact that several of Hughes' heirs had entered into an agreement with California subject to the decision rendered by the Supreme Court. He called the action "a barter for the jurisdiction of this court, pure and simple."

Jerome B. Falk Jr., the lawyer representing California, said, however, that "the papers in this proceeding were already at the printers before we entered into an agreement with the heirs."

The agreement involved California lowering its inheritance tax rate from 26 percent to 18 percent — and the Hughes' heirs agreeing to settle at that rate — should the Texas claims be discredited.

Last month, a Houston jury found that Hughes' domicile was Texas, clearing the way for Texas to collect inheritance taxes at the rate of 16 percent.

"Why the Hughes' heirs are willing to settle for 2 percent more in California isn't really that difficult to figure," Hill said following 90 minutes of arguments before the court. "If Hughes' domicile is Texas, that opens (the estate) up for about 400 claims from heirs under Texas law. That's just claims, that's not saying they will collect."

Hill told the judges Texas had spent thousands of dollars staging the Hughes' trial in Houston. "Why did California wait 19 months after we began our litigation to suddenly emerge in fairness and sweetness and light?" Hill asked.

He added that the Texas case that established Hughes' domicile in Texas stood in California's way to get a settlement from the Hughes' heirs and that California is "very reluctant to try (the case) on its merits."

Following the arguments, Falk said the finding by the Houston jury is subject to question.

"The fact that Hughes hadn't lived in Texas for 50 years should strike someone as strange," he said and branded Texas' contention that California was "carrying water for the Hughes' heirs" as "pure concoction. It's clear that Texas will make any argument."

Area Temperatures, Winds Climb Today

Spring tightened its grip on the South Plains Wednesday, and the mercury is expected to climb to near 80 degrees today and Friday. More wind will accompany the temperature rise.

The weather service is calling for partly cloudy skies today along with southerly winds at 15 to 20 mph. No rain is mentioned in the forecast. The low temperature tonight should be near 50 degrees.

Scattered showers with a few thunderstorms were detected by radar over central portions of the state late Wednesday. Most rainfall appeared to be aloft with little reaching the ground.

The Panhandle was the only area reporting measurable moisture. Dalhart had .05 of an inch, while Amarillo received .04 and .01 fell in Dalhart.

Scattered showers and some isolated thunderstorms were reported through the eastern Panhandle into the central South Plains during Wednesday's early afternoon hours. Occasional showers and thundershowers also were reported in the eastern section of the South Plains.

Skies were mostly cloudy over northern and southern sections of the state Wednesday and cloudy across much of West Texas. Temperatures ranged from the 60s over the Panhandle to the 80s over the Rio Grande Valley of West and South Texas.

Winds were southerly over the state to 10 to 15 mph, with gusts to the low 20s reported over the coastal bend of South Texas.

Most of the nation remained under the influence of a high pressure area Wednesday, resulting in another day of relatively dry weather. The few areas of precipitation that were observed were light.

A cool air mass lay over much of the Northeast and upper part of the Midwest Wednesday, keeping temperatures in the 30s and 40s. Most other areas enjoyed mild spring weather with 60s and 70s prevailing.

Showers are expected to increase in the western U.S. today, but most other areas can expect another dry day.

Lubbockites Lose Votes By Not Re-Registering

By SYLVIA TEAGUE
Avalanche-Journal Staff

Nearly half the eligible voters in Lubbock County are not registered to vote in the May 6 primary election because they have moved since they last registered, Secretary of State Steven Oaks said here Wednesday.

Oaks, in town to personally register voters at South Plains Mall and at Texas Tech University, said 19,000, or 41 percent, of the 48,000 eligible voters in the county have moved and are not registered to vote.

The voters have been "lost" in a re-registration process mandated by the last legislature which is aimed at purging the voter registration rolls.

Oaks said the voter registration certificates can't be forwarded under the new law. As a result, many voters have been taken off voting lists and must re-register.

Those with old blue voter registration certificates are entitled to vote through June 30, he said, but must re-register to vote in the general election.

However, those who are not registered have until midnight on April 6 to complete the registration form.

Oaks, who was appointed to replace Mark White Nov. 7, said there are many firsts about voter registration this year.

"For the first time voter registration in Texas is postage-paid," he said. It is also the first time voter registration applications have been printed in both English and Spanish.

He said Texans need only fill out the application, drop it in a mail box, then wait to receive a voter registration certificate.

Oaks said he had encountered many misconceptions about the registration process while traveling around the state. "You don't have to be 18 to register," he said. "You only have to be 17 and 10 months."

He said people have said they won't register because they can't afford the poll tax or because they haven't lived here long enough.

There is no residency requirement to vote and there is no poll tax, he emphasized.

People have said they can't vote in the run-off election because they didn't vote in the primary, he said. They can still vote in the run-off, Oaks said, but if they voted in the Democratic primary, they can't vote in the Republican run-off and vice versa.

Oaks has been personally registering voters around the state for four days a week since Feb. 3 and predicted he will have visited "every major population center by April 6."

His goal is one million new registered voters by the April deadline through a "citizens effort."

Hundreds have been registered the past few days in Lubbock, he said, while 1,000 voters a day are registering in Houston.

But of the five million registered voters in the state, only 1 in 3 will vote during their lifetime.

So the Secretary of State has another job to do when registration ends — get voters to the polls.

Already there are public service ads on television urging Texans to vote, and Oaks plans a voter assistance campaign before the May 6 primary.

Youths May Keep Found $13,000

TOLEDO, Ohio (AP) — Three teenagers may keep the $13,000 they found in a cigar box on a suburban street corner two years ago, Lucas County Probate Judge Reno Riley Jr. has ruled.

Riley Tuesday ordered that what is left — after paying $3,200 in lawyers' fees and court costs — be divided among John Purtell, 14; Paul Choate, 17; and Daniel Rilling, 18. The three spent about $1,000 on sodas, candy and tips to waitresses before turning the money over to police. Choate and Purtell have agreed to put their shares in trust funds until they are 18.

Mine Kills U.N. Peacekeeping Officer

KHARDALI BRIDGE, Lebanon (AP) — A jeep carrying two Swedish members of the U.N. peacekeeping force hit an anti-tank mine and exploded Wednesday, killing one of the officers and wounding the other. They were the first reported casualties among U.N. troops in southern Lebanon.

The jeep ran over the mine while traveling on a narrow dirt track on the Israeli-occupied southern side of the Litani River, 200 yards from the bridge. The blast demolished half the jeep and blew the rest onto an earthen bank 10 feet above the roadway.

The Litani separates Israeli troops who invaded southern Lebanon two weeks ago, no communiques were issued by the PLO, the umbrella group for Palestinian guerrillas. Arafat pledged Tuesday the PLO would observe the cease-fire.

But Popular Democratic Front guerrillas holding a position overlooking the Khardali Bridge said Wednesday they had received no orders to stop fighting. A few miles down the twisting mountain road from their position, 35 Swedish troops worked on sandbag fortification.

Thurston said there were fewer exchanges of gunfire along the front Tuesday night than previously this week.

The Popular Democratic Front, a radical faction in Yasser Arafat's Palestine Liberation Organization, claimed its men shelled an Israeli position near the town of Hasbaya in the southeast corner of Lebanon. It vowed in a communique to keep fighting "until the enemy is defeated and expelled from south Lebanon."

An Israeli army spokesman in Tel Aviv said several rockets fired from Lebanon struck northern Israel but no one was hurt.

sand searched for more mines.

The area near the bridge and the asphalt road leading to it were full of shell holes and blast debris. Reporters trudging down the road from the village of Kfar Tibnit walked gingerly around shallow holes in the road where mines had been placed. A thin covering of soil hiding the mines was washed away in recent rainstorms. Israel said its troops had cleared mines from around the bridge on their side of the river.

Swedish Lt. Anders Olen denied reports Palestinian guerrillas had fired on Swedish troops at the bridge. He said, "The firing was among the warring sides on the heights overlooking the bridge and bullets whizzed hundreds of feet over our heads."

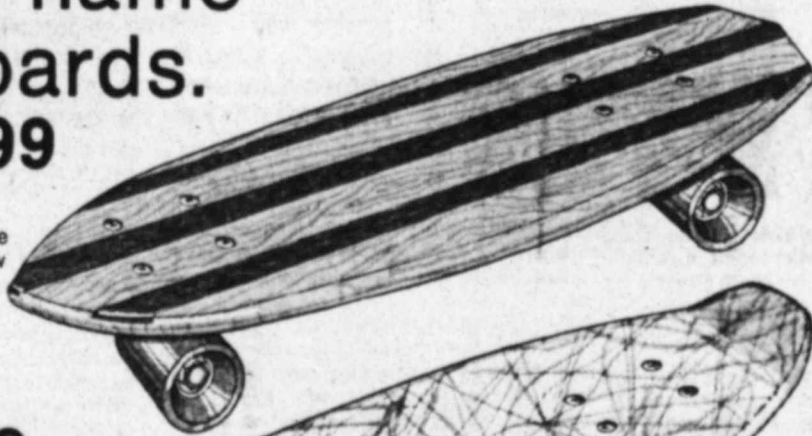

Olen said his orders were to prevent all traffic from crossing the bridge.

The Swedish contingent moved into southern Lebanon last week from duty with the United Nations Emergency Force along the Egyptian-Israeli truce line in the Sinai Desert.

"This is a thousand times better than the Sinai Desert," said Pvt. Michael

AN EDITORIAL:

Pointed Fingers, Loaded Guns

THERE IS A growing feeling among many of the world's U.S. and Russian watchers that the latter may be rapidly overtaking America in the matter of arms, both conventional and nuclear.

While the administration has concentrated on getting the SALT II talks back on track, even to sidelining several key defense decisions, Moscow has continued to build its vast arsenal "far past the point where Soviet defense alone is involved."

IN BRIEF, every move the Soviets have made in the past two years, perhaps longer, has pointed toward not only expanding the control of International Communism, but in preparing for offensive military action.

And while some of the buildup reports fall into the category of "rumor," such as new Russian submarine bases in Cuba, there is enough hard evidence to spur deep concern in Washington.

Unfortunately, either through naivete or unfounded wishful thinking, the policy of President Carter and his advisors, until the past month, has been one of a "tippy-toe" approach in calling Russia's transgressions to the attention not only of the Soviet leaders, but the rest of world.

GRANTED, THE rumored reintroduction of Russian missiles into Cuba as well as work on Soviet nuclear sub pens may be just that. If not, and the White House is not keeping the American people apprised of the latest moves only 90 miles from our shores, then it is compounding the felony.

But, ignoring this—and one can't help but recall what happened when the Kennedy administration ignored similar reports far too long—there is enough evidence on the record in several other areas of the world "to call Moscow's hand."

Russia's continued exploitation of the unsettled situation in various parts of Africa, use and arming of Communist Cuban armed forces to actually invade other nations abroad and Russia's massive emphasis on emerging as a world sea power—all are grim signs on a road toward possible destruction of the Free World.

THERE ARE those who argue that the Russians, no matter the leaders or "how crazy," would never dare risk a preemptive first strike gamble against the U.S.

Perhaps not. And with the success the Kremlin and Premier Castro have had thus far in an almost unchallenged move into strategic parts of Africa, it may be that such a confrontation may not take place.

The danger is at some future date, the U.S. will have to challenge further Russian intrusions, whether direct or by some surrogate such as Communist Cuba. Having backed down or done nothing to that point, Moscow might well misread Washington's intentions and precipitate an inevitable atomic showdown.

The time to stop aggression, as the world sadly learned in Czechoslovakia in dealing with Adolf Hitler, is before it gets out hand. While we applaud President Carter's recent tough stance, we believe we should back up our words with full-speed ahead on the U.S. cruise missile, and a final warning that there must be no more "adventures" in Africa—or elsewhere.

AN EDITORIAL:

Also One For The Cameras

NO ONE WOULD be happier if President Carter's current trip abroad was a resounding success from the standpoint of improving understanding among the nations involved.

And since most of the places on this jaunt aren't exactly "hot spots" where vital decisions must be superficially thrashed about, perhaps in that context it will be a success.

However, we would be less than objective not to note that the trip also has generated some flack, even before and as it got underway.

ON ONE COUNT, in his welcoming response in Venezuela, the President, speaking in Spanish, noted that final Senate approval of the Panama Canal pacts would "be a cause for celebration in the United States" as much as it would be in Latin America.

Earlier, Venezuelan President Andres Perez asserted that U.S. action on the canal pacts is "determining the destiny of hemisphere relations."

It is regrettable that this theme is being emphasized both in Latin America and here at home. It should never have been given the credence it has, mostly by the administration and those supporting the treaties.

AS FOR THE President's contention that approval of the Panama pacts would be a cause for rejoicing in the U.S., he is wrong—and what is damning about the statement, Mr. Carter, who pledged never to tell a lie, knows the statement is not true.

Practically every reliable poll thus far has shown the majority of Americans opposed to the treaties and a one-vote margin of "victory" on the first Panama test is hardly a point over which to celebrate.

The President's trip has generated a flap of another sort, one which flared on his previous overseas jaunt. That has to do with the White House planning of the President's stops in such a manner as, some print media people charge, to "tilt" the coverage toward the television networks.

Representatives of the networks were taken on a pre-flight tour to acquaint them with what is going to happen.

All of which makes one wonder if the trip is designed to bolster relations abroad or is another "symbol" of what all too often seems to be a symbolic Presidency in the midst of some real, not symbolic, problems.

ART BUCHWALD:

It's Not Nice To Ask For That Right Here!

WASHINGTON—Hardly a week goes by when some head of state doesn't visit Washington. In the old days it was Disneyland while they were in the United States they went home happy.

But things have changed. Most heads of state now come to Washington to see how much military aid they can get out of the United States.

Several weeks ago the president of Zemelulu arrived in Washington for a State visit.

THE ZEMELULAN ambassador to the United States met him at the plane, as did the American secretary of state and an honor guard from the U.S. Army, U.S. Marines and U.S. Air Force.

The Zemelulan ambassador whispered to the president, "The first thing you must do is review the honor guard."

The president said, "Those are nice rifles they're carrying. Can I have them?"

"No," said the ambassador, "not yet. First we have to take a helicopter to the White House where President Carter will greet you."

After reviewing the troops the president of Zemelulu got into the helicopter. "Should I ask the secretary of state for 24 of these?"

"It's too early in your visit. We have to go through formalities."

The president looked very disappointed.

THE HELICOPTER landed on the White House lawn where President and Mrs. Carter were waiting to meet the party. President Carter made his opening remarks calling Zemelulu one of the great countries of the world and a friend the United States could not do without.

The Zemelulan ambassador said out of the side of his mouth, "It is now your turn to respond."

"Good, I'll ask him for two squadrons of F-15s and three squadrons of F-16s."

"Wait. It's not the time. You never ask for military equipment in the Rose Garden. It's against protocol."

"What should I say?"

"Just say the ties between Zemelulu and the United States are stronger than they ever have been, and the admiration for America as the preserver of peace is something every Zemelulan cherishes."

"ALL RIGHT, BUT I think we're wasting a lot of time. I have only two days here."

The Zemelulan president made his remarks which were followed by a 21-gun salute.

The Zemelulan president took out a notebook, "I almost forgot the cannons. How many 105-mm cannons should I ask for?"

The ambassador replied, "I think they said they'd give us five."

"Five? My generals told me to come back with no less than 50."

"We'll talk about it later. We have to go into lunch."

The Zemelulan president said, "When can we go to the Pentagon and see the stuff?"

"We have to lunch with the President and Mrs. Carter first. After that we have to place a wreath at the Lincoln Memorial."

"That will blow the whole afternoon," the Zemelulan president complained.

"THE PENTAGON is just over the bridge from the memorial, Mr. President. We can go there after the wreath-laying."

"How late do they stay open?"

"Five o'clock."

"Five o'clock? I won't even have time to pick up any gunboats for our navy."

"We'll go back the next morning."

"Suppose all the F-15s are gone by then?"

"The Pentagon always keeps a dozen in the stockroom for its special friends. Oh, by the way, there is a State dinner tonight and Beverly Sills is going to sing."

"That's nice. Maybe I can talk President Carter out of some cruise missiles during Madame Buterfly."

ROWLAND EVANS & ROBERT NOVAK:

Harris Is Fireproof

WASHINGTON—The White House refusal to help Patricia Roberts Harris, Secretary of Housing and Urban Development (HUD), dump a bureaucratic antagonist has angered liberals and intensified the cold war inside the Carter administration.

Immediately at stake is whether Mrs. Harris takes over the Federal National Mortgage Assn. (Fannie Mae)—a federally chartered corporation which supports the housing market by buying commercial mortgages. But much more is involved.

Backed by both civil servants and political appointees at HUD, Mrs. Harris is a throwback to Great Society liberalism of the 1960s which believed Uncle Sam and his checkbook could solve all problems.

Jimmy Carter, considerably less certain than Pat Harris about most things, does not share that faith in government. There is, then, an internal conflict over both style and ideology between White House policymakers and departmental policy executives—particularly at HUD. But the President will not wield a hatchet.

CARTER IS NEVER inclined to fire anybody, and even if he were it certainly would not be the Secretary of HUD. Black and female, Mrs. Harris is fireproof.

Stylistic differences overshadowed ideological differences when Mrs. Harris's struggle with Fannie Mae began over a year ago.

A prominent Washington lawyer before entering the cabinet, she had served as a well-qualified director for several companies eager for public display of blacks and females.

So she was shocked to find Fannie Mae's 10 stockholder directors were all white males.

It was not what Mrs. Harris did next but how she did it. In her tough-gal style, she demanded that Oakley Hunter, chairman of Fannie Mae, integrate his board, sexually and racially.

Hunter, a 61-year-old conservative Republican who served as a Congressman from California 25 years ago, was nonplussed. Stunned by what he considered a personal insult, he gave not an inch.

THE PERSONALITY clash quickly became ideological. HUD claimed Fannie Mae under Republican Hunter was refusing to buy risky inner-city mortgages, a claim refuted by Fannie Mae and the housing industry. In no time, HUD had sufficient grounds to demand Hunter's ouster.

The President himself agreed to look into it. Ambassador Robert Strauss, the administration's peripatetic Mr. Fixit, tried to get Hunter quietly to resign. Failing that, one course remained: sack Hunter.

But to HUD's astonishment, the White House blocked the way by finding no grounds for firing Hunter. That recommendation came from a 32-year-old White House domestic policy aide named Orrin Kramer who is now regarded as Benedict Arnold at HUD (in the words of one HUD official, "that little creep").

"I'm not going to let this turn into another Marston affair," Kramer told friends. "My job is to protect the President."

That desire is incomprehensible to HUD bureaucrats who could not care less for Jimmy Carter's political hide.

MOREOVER, WHILE HUD and Mrs. Harris seek wider bureaucratic frontiers, in a style harking back to Lyndon Johnson, by taking over Fannie Mae, Carter's men are more concerned about the housing industry in an uncertain economy.

The difference extends beyond Fannie Mae. The Harris team at HUD is frustrated by what it considers meatax budget slashes by Carter's Office of Management and Budget (OMB).

"We are dealing with a bunch of conservatives, including a conservative President," a bitter Harris adviser told us. Carter aides believe HUD is living in a long-gone Great Society, submitting budgets that begged for the meatax.

Carter selected Mrs. Harris for the cabinet without knowing whether her style or ideology were faintly similar to his own. Having picked in haste, he can repent in leisure—for there is no chance of firing her.

Her status among black leaders, organized labor and in Congress wrap her in asbestos.

Accordingly, some worried Harris supporters see the White House refusal to dump Oakley Hunter as a prod to force out Mrs. Harris. In fact, however, that presupposes determination of purpose and constancy of intent generally lacking at the White House.

MOREOVER, MRS. Harris has her own friends there. A few liberal presidential aids share HUD's position on both Fannie Mae and urban spending. Some soft-spoken Georgians assert an admiration for Mrs. Harris's abrasiveness.

The President himself tries to convince key advisers how happy he is about HUD's secretary.

Nevertheless, the overriding mood among policymakers is impatience with Mrs. Harris. In the latest bureaucratic infighting, HUD is issuing regulations to control Fannie Mae and Fannie Mae is preparing a lawsuit to block them.

An overburdened President, unwilling either to support or restrain his Secretary of HUD, looks on with unmistakably helplessness.

A Tragic Recap...

"ABOUT ONE-THIRD of all Vietnam draft resisters could have avoided the draft" legally, but chose exile or punishment "as the consequence of their beliefs."

That statement, among others, is one of the highlights of another study of the Vietnam War and its effects—on those who fought it and those who fled and/or evaded it.

This one, as most others on the subject, will raise hackles, eyebrows and open some old wounds. What it says about the nation's future, by implication, is almost as startling as some of the conclusions it draws about the Vietnam debacle.

The study concerns itself with those who served and those who didn't, and why. It was written by two members of the board President Ford named to administer the program of conditional clemency for draft offenders and deserters.

THE STUDY, in book form, is one of the more comprehensive made on the war. Pre-publication excerpts appear in the April-May issue of American Heritage magazine.

Certain to set off a new round of discussion are such "conclusions" as these:

"Draft resisters and deserters are, like the Vietnam combat veterans, society's losers—disproportionately black, poorly educated youths from low-income families.

"Had they been better advised or more clever, most could have found one of the escape routes used by so many others. The disadvantaged not only did more than their share of the fighting; they also have paid much of the penalty for not fighting."

AND IF THAT piques your interest, then read on...

"It would be inaccurate to say that the 'evaders,' as a group, did anything fundamentally worse than their 24 million peers who also escaped Vietnam, but by legal means."

The book excerpts quoted one resister's comment, "Almost every kid in this country (was) either a draft evader, a potential draft evader or a failed draft evader."

"Those with background, wit or money generally managed to escape (the draft)."

"Through an elaborate structure of deferments, exemptions, legal technicalities, and non-combat military alternatives, the draft rewarded those who manipulated the system to their advantage. ...Going to Vietnam was the penalty for those who lacked the wherewithal to avoid it."

THERE'S MORE, which we will dwell on later.

But, for the moment, such broad, all-encompassing assertions deserve, in our opinion, clarification.

There is no question but that some of the charges are true. Many did, "by hook and crook," legally evade the journey to nowhere.

But many others, well-educated, from fine families, middle class and affluent, professional and otherwise, did go, many on their own accord, because they believed in what they were doing—and were willing to risk their lives to defend it.

To suggest that Vietnam was fought by those who otherwise couldn't escape it is wrong. We know many, including a relative who went back for the third tour as a member of the Green Berets and a neighbor in the Marines on his second tour, who felt they were making a stand for Freedom.

THE CLEMENCY Board's findings, which took about a year to compile, have been used as source material for a book because the Rev. Theodore Hesburg of Notre Dame felt that the surprising and "monumental evidence" he and his fellow board members assembled should be accessible to the public.

Here are some other findings in the report, according to American Heritage:

"Avoiding Vietnam did not necessarily mean emerging unscathed. For one in four, it meant hurried marriages, unwanted children, misdirected careers or self-inflicted physical impairments.

"Vietnam-era draft and military offenders number more than a million. An estimated 570,000 men committed draft violations that could have sent them to prison for five years. Yet fewer than half were reported, 25,000 were indicted and fewer than 9,000 convicted. Only 3,250 went to prison, most to be paroled within a year."

The report further says that 250,000 were punished with Undesirable, Bad Conduct, or Dishonorable Discharges. Yet only 13 per cent of them were convicted by court-martial. Another 300,000 were sent home with General Discharges.

THE AUTHORS are Lawrence M. Baskir, general counsel for the nine-member Clemency Board, and William Strauss.

The book is entitled: "Chance And Circumstance: The Draft, The War And The Vietnam Generation."

Few events in the nation's history have been so traumatic. Indeed, there were many instances of unfair treatment. Many did "legally" evade the draft. Vietnam was an unpopular war, and its victims, both evaders and veterans suffered.

But, to equate evasion with those who served, even unwillingly, is to do a disservice to the 50,000 who died and those who survived. The real culprits were the wishy-washy politicians who helped lose the war for whatever reasons. That is the tragedy.

The findings say something for the future of this nation. While the "next war," Heaven forbid, may be of swift and terrible duration and will spare no one, if we as a people aren't willing to believe in, defend and even fight for this nation, it will soon perish.

That was the challenge of Vietnam, which the Communists realized, and is the challenge for America's future.

Mine Construction Workers' Contract Approved

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The United Mine Workers bargaining council, its leader felled by a stroke, approved a new contract Wednesday for mine construction workers, clearing the way for a final ratification vote next week.

With UMW Vice President Sam Church presiding, the council voted 37-0 in favor of the new pact after four hours of discussion at UMW headquarters.

The unanimous consent raised hopes the 14,000 mine construction workers would ratify the contract in balloting set for Tuesday and finally bring peace to the soft coal industry.

UMW President Arnold Miller suffered a mild stroke earlier Wednesday and was under intensive care at an undisclosed hospital. Miller, 54, had been warned by doctors to take it easy after five months of negotiations and the 110-day coal strike which officially ended last Saturday, Church said.

Most of the 160,000 miners were reported back on the job Wednesday but scattered picketing by mine construction workers disrupted operations in Indiana and Illinois. In keeping with tradition, union miners won't cross picket lines.

Several bargaining council members indicated they expected little trouble with ratification.

"It's a pretty good contract," said Don Lawley, a council member from the Oklahoma-Arkansas district. "They got more than the coal miners got."

"I finally voted yes," said Eddie Sturgill, an international executive board member from District 19 in central Kentucky and Tennessee who had voted against all three contracts the coal miners were offered.

The construction contract was similar to the one approved by 57 percent of the miners except for an improvement in the health program. Church said coverage included company payment of all prescription drugs include those for short-term illnesses.

UMW and industry negotiators reached agreement Monday night on the contract which covers the workers who build mine shafts and other coal operation facilities.

The council's vote of approval apparently headed off a move to dispatch pickets to mines throughout West Virginia to disrupt operations today. Local presidents had vowed to try to keep the state's 60,000 miners off the job if the bargaining council voted down the new pact.

"We sort of wish the miners hadn't gone back to work," said Leonard "Red" Cox, who heads Local 1582 in Marmet, W.Va. "They may be hungry, but we're awful hungry too."

Mine operations were reported nearly normal in Pennsylvania and Ohio.

In Illinois, construction pickets kept about 12,000 or the state's 15,000 miners off the job for the second day in a row. In Indiana, close to half of the 21 union mines were said to be closed due to picketing.

UMW President Miller Suffers Stroke

WASHINGTON (AP) — United Mine Workers President Arnold Miller suffered a "slight stroke" Wednesday and was hospitalized in Miami in stable condition, a hospital spokeswoman said.

A spokeswoman for Mount Sinai Medical Center said Miller was brought in to the intensive care unit shortly before 10 a.m. "The doctor said he's doing well," said spokeswoman Judy Stanton.

Earlier, UMW Vice President Sam Church disclosed that Miller, 54, had been stricken but refused to divulge where the union president was hospitalized.

Church said Miller was ordered by his doctor to take a rest following the signing of a new contract between the UMW and soft coal industry Saturday. The signing formally ended a 3½-month nationwide strike by 160,000 miners.

Miller, who was hospitalized in Washington for several days last August for treatment of high blood pressure, was stricken two days after beginning his sick leave, Church said.

Willard A. Esselstyn, secretary-treasurer of the union, said Miller "is not in serious condition," but refused to elaborate. He added that Miller's doctor had asked that the union chief's location not be divulged to prevent him from being disturbed.

Miller, who also suffers from black lung disease and arthritis, was paralyzed on his left side, according to one source.

Church said Miller was stricken as the union's district leaders met in Washington to approve a tentative contract covering 10,000 mine construction workers who are still on strike.

Railroads' Income In Sharp Decline

WASHINGTON (AP) — Net rail operating income for the nation's railroads dropped to $347 million in 1977, the lowest figure since the Depression year of 1932, the Association of American Railroads reported Wednesday.

It was a sharp drop from the $442 million in 1976. The 1932 figure was $326 million.

Ordinary income for the railroads increased from $278 million in 1976 to $284 million last year, the AAR reported, as gains from non-railroad operations offset declines in income from rail operations.

Operating revenues for 1977 came to $20.1 billion, up from $18.6 billion a year earlier. Operating expenses climbed from $15 billion in 1976 to $16.4 billion last year.

Bush Sure His Campaign Based On 'Right' Issues

By SYLVIA TEAGUE
Avalanche-Journal Staff

George Bush, former Central Intelligence Agency director and father of the Republican congressional candidate with the same name, is something of a ghost in the Republican primary.

Some see the elder Bush peering over his son's shoulder and coaching his campaign efforts from the sidelines.

Others, however, don't see the presence of Bush's father at all.

At a press conference Wednesday candidate Bush admitted he "knew when he entered" the congressional race his father might become an issue.

"But," he said, "I'm not making him an issue." Bush said the recent comments about his father's activities from the camp of opponent Jim Reese were "to be expected."

Reese has contended the elder Bush is running his son's campaign from Houston and often mentions Bush's voting record while in Congress and his membership on the Trilateral Commission.

Reese also asserts many 19th District voters do not realize just which Bush is running.

"Originally there may have been confusion," Bush acknowledged, but said every television ad and personal appearance should dispel that belief.

"People need to realize it is I who's running and not he," Bush said, and denied he was riding his father's political coattails.

Bush said his father would not be doing any campaigning in the 19th District race unless there is "heat on the name and the family," and labeled "political haymaking" all the talk about his father's role in the campaign.

However, Bush said his political background (his grandfather was a U.S. Senator from Connecticut) and his famous name would "open doors in Washington and help this district."

As for recent charges by his other Republican opponent, Joe Hickox, that Bush is too closely allied with the oil industry, Bush said "there's no such thing as being too closely allied to the oil business in West Texas."

Bush, a Midland independent oil and gas producer, said his energy background was "very important" in representing the district.

However, Bush pledged to either sell his oil and gas holdings or put them in a blind trust if elected so he would not be accused of a conflict of interest.

When asked how much he is worth, Bush replied "over half a million dollars."

The purpose of the news conference, Bush said, was to "brag a little and show the thinking of those in West Texas."

Bush campaign workers sent out 8,000 priority surveys to those who voted Republican in 1974 and 1976. Of the 8,000, 409 voters responded to the survey.

Families Return After Gas Cleanup

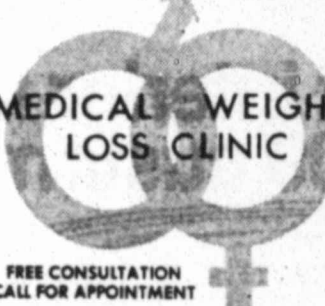

BRANDON, Fla. (AP) — About 60 families who were evacuated from their homes for about 12 hours after a tanker truck filled with gaseous ammonia overturned were allowed to return to their homes Wednesday, authorities said.

Authorities said the tanker, which carried 20 tons of ammonia, overturned late Tuesday on State Road 60 east of Brandon.

Families living within a half-mile of the accident were evacuated as firefighters took on the delicate task of pumping the ammonia into another container. The job was completed safely and none of the gas leaked, officials said.

"We were lucky we didn't have a major disaster," said Willard Silva of the American Red Cross. "I'm surprised it (the truck) didn't break."

The driver of the truck, Jimmy Lee Blake, 36, of Lakeland, Fla., was treated for minor injuries.

Bush asked voters to rank five issues in order of concern including big government, agriculture, inflation, energy and defense.

The number one concern, according to the survey, is the intrusion of government into individual lives, followed by inflation.

Third was defense, with energy and agriculture in fourth and fifth places. The number one write-in concern was the Panama Canal treaty.

Bush said the survey indicated he had based his campaign on the right issues.

"I've been saying over and over the number one problem is inflation caused by big government," he said.

Bush said the survey "showed I'm willing to listen on the different issues," and said it had stimulated interest and response to the George Bush candidacy.

He said the passage of the Panama Canal treaty against the popular will is an example of politicians failing to listen before they act.

"Politicians who talk and don't listen are going to be left behind," he said. "It's clear West Texans are ready to do some talking themselves. I will continue listening to people so that I may better represent the independent values that make West Texas great."

Some of those responses happened to be financial, and more than $3,200 in contributions averaging $30 each flowed into the campaign coffers following the mailing.

"The survey was never considered a fund-raiser," Bush said, although there was a "passing reference to contributions being appreciated."

Bush said he had raised about $75,000 to date and expects to spend "everything we can raise" in the primary.

If the election were held today, Bush predicted, he would get the most votes, but not a majority of the votes. However, on May 6 the situation will have changed, he said.

"I think we can win on the first ballot by virtue of a strong showing in Midland and Lubbock."

Trustee Candidates Discuss Issues

This is the fourth in a series of interviews with city council and school board candidates running in Saturday's election. Views of the four Place 1 school board candidates are presented today. The candidates are listed in the same order in which they will appear on the ballot.

Biographical information:

WARREN

Bill Warren, 50, of 3004 32nd St., is chief accountant in the local office of the state highway department. A Texas Tech graduate, he and his wife Shirley have three children, all graduates of Lubbock High.

Warren has "worked with a number of civic groups" and has been a Scoutmaster the past decade. He lists "15 years of experience with financial budgeting processes" and as an office supervisor.

RAY

Dr. John Ray Jr., 52, of 3024 56th St., is a pathologist and associate clinical professor in dermatopathology at Texas Tech medical school. He attended Hampden Sydney College and Medical College of Virginia.

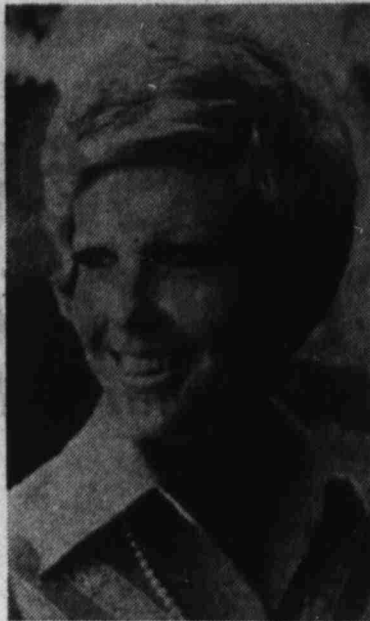

Ray and his wife Betty have three daughters, all graduates of Monterey High. Their son, John Ray III, is a junior at Monterey. The candidate lists himself as a "concerned and interested parent."

ERVIN

Joan Y. Ervin, 45, of 2806 Walnut Ave., is a secretary specialist for IBM. She is a graduate of Dunbar High and attended Prairie View A&M. She and her husband Clarence have two sons, both Dunbar graduates and one now a teacher in Brownfield.

Mrs. Ervin says she has "triple knowledge and insight" of Lubbock schools — as a student and graduate, a former employee (secretary at Iles Elementary) and school board member the past eight years.

STAFFORD

Lynn Stafford, 37, of 4421 10th St., is a homemaker and part-time secretary. A graduate of Texas Christian University, she and her husband Bob have two children in public elementary school here.

Mrs. Stafford, past president of Junior League, was a high school teacher in Fort Worth and substitute teacher in Lubbock. She is "active in civic work" with such projects as United Way and Lubbock State School and serves on the state legislature's drug abuse prevention committee.

Candidate Stances Diverse

By JEFF SOUTH

Avalanche-Journal Staff

Midway through the campaign, one candidate for Place 1 on the Lubbock Independent School District board of trustees bemoaned the "lack of issues. There just isn't anything to argue about, to separate one candidate from another."

After talking with teachers, parents and school officials, The Avalanche-Journal put together a three-page questionnaire that will indeed allow Saturday's voters to discern differences among the four Place 1 hopefuls.

In answering the A-J queries, for example, Joan Ervin and Lynn Stafford said they would support election of school trustees by single-member geographical districts. Bill Warren and John Ray Jr. want to retain the at-large election system.

Mrs. Ervin said she would back a policy requiring teachers to assign a minimum amount of homework to students on certain days of the week — a part of the "back-to-basics" movement some other districts have adopted. Her opponents say homework requirements should be at the discretion of individual teachers.

Mrs. Stafford and Mrs. Ervin would support full disclosure of standardized achievement test scores, including public reporting of districtwide and school-by-school scores. Ray and Warren say such data should not be reported to the public.

School board places are filled by an at-large vote. That is, citizens from throughout the Lubbock Independent School District on Saturday will be voting for both a trustee for Place 1 and a trustee for Place 2.

Unlike city council races, school board seats here may be won by mere plurality. The top vote-getter for each place on the board is declared the winner; he or she need not pull a majority of the votes cast. In contrast to council races, there can be no runoff election for school board (unless two or more candidates for the same place should happen to tie for the highest number of votes).

The plurality aspect makes this year's school board elections particularly interesting because of the large number of candidates — and their political strength — running for each of the two seats up for grabs. Political observers and candidates themselves say capturing 30 to 40 percent of the vote may be enough to win a place.

Terms on the school board last six years. Candidates for Place 1, in the order they will appear on the ballot, are:

—Warren, 50, of 3004 32nd St., a chief accountant for the Texas Department of Highways and Public Transportation. Warren has run a low-budget campaign so far, spending just $325. He has stressed his experience with fiscal processes and the need to continually evaluate school programs and expenditures.

—Ray, 52, of 3024 56th St., a physician and associate clinical professor in dermatopathology at the Texas Tech University School of Medicine. To date, Ray has spent $922 on his campaign. He bills himself as a "concerned and interested parent."

—Mrs. Ervin, 45, of 2806 Walnut Ave., an IBM secretary. The Place 1 incumbent, Mrs. Ervin lists campaign expenditures of $1,442 thus far. She emphasizes her "multi-faceted experience with the district," as a trustee, parent, former student and graduate, and former employee (elementary school secretary).

—Mrs. Stafford, 37, of 4421 10th St., a homemaker and part-time secretary. She has spent $2,150 on her campaign so far. Mrs. Stafford has stressed her experience as a former teacher, volunteer in various civic projects and member of a legislative advisory committee on drug and alcohol abuse.

Mrs. Stafford filed for Place 1 on Jan. 27, the first candidate to do so. It was on the same day that Mrs. Ervin disclosed she would not seek re-election to the school board.

Political observers said Mrs. Stafford's contacts and financial backing make her appear a formidable opponent. That, they say, may be one reason why the other early candidates filed for Place 2, being vacated by board vice president Bob McKelvy.

After Ray and Warren eventually announced for Place 1, Mrs. Ervin decided to run after all. She said she was persuaded to do so by various citizens and groups concerned about her possibly leaving the board.

Mrs. Ervin, current school board secretary, was elected to the board in 1970 to fill a two-year unexpired term. She won that year by less than 100 votes, making her the first black elected trustee and the first woman to serve on the board since 1923.

Mrs. Ervin ran unopposed for a full term in 1972.

All four Place 1 candidates agree on such issues as the need for some evening school board meetings, voluntary tools of desegregation, more community input on school district decisions, maintaining competitive teacher salaries and benefits and banning student smoking on campus.

Warren listed his top priorities as a school trustee as "obtain the best teachers possible and encourage them to stay in the teaching profession, settlement of the school desegregation case, and better communication between the community and trustees."

Ray would focus on "turning out a well rounded and total person from our public schools," attending to needs of students, teachers and parents and improving special educational programs.

Mrs. Ervin's top priority is successful implementation of a desegregation plan without losing sight of "our obligation to educate all children."

And Mrs. Stafford would focus on improved communication, emphasis on the basics and strict discipline.

What is your opinion of the school district's proposed desegregation plan? If the opportunity arises, what solutions would you offer regarding desegregation?

Some parts of the plan are insufficient, but I think it is a workable plan. I feel the community should back this plan and assure its success.

The magnet school at Dunbar should be more extensive and include more enrichment programs.

The plan has room for improvement. I believe it will take a lot of hard work and study to come up with a satisfactory tailored plan that will be generally acceptable and achieve its goal.

I would emphasize equal quality education in all schools in every part of town. I think the concept of magnet schools shows a lot of promise — with minimum busing.

As my vote reflects, I support the plan presented to the court by the school board.

The proposed plan is a fair compromise. I would further suggest making Carroll Thompson Junior High a magnet school offering specialized science courses, languages, some vocational courses and music; and creating another magnet elementary school, if Iles is a success, for children needing remedial reading and math.

How do you see the quality of education in the Lubbock public schools? Generally, what would you propose to improve education here?

We have high-quality programs in the schools, but we need to evaluate them each year to make sure this standard is maintained. We should expect and require more from students and teachers on the content of material being taught.

Parents should encourage their children to demand more challenging subjects to be available. We should support the teachers and require them to be stricter on the requirements for passing any subject.

We have a very fine school system, one to be proud of. I would emphasize students, parents, teachers working together with attention to their individual needs. I would work for improved vocational, bilingual and intercultural appreciation training, and a balance between vocational training, academics and athletics. I'd also emphasize back to basics.

Basically we have good quality of education in our schools. Nevertheless there is always room for improvement. I would like to see more individual-paced study, which would allow a student to advance at his or her own desire. The exceptional child that is too far advanced for present grade level could then better utilize his gifted ability to move ahead.

Our quality of education is good! I would propose the teaching of Spanish in elementary school, more emphasis on reading and math, stricter discipline, emphasis on motivation and self-discipline, and more parental involvement in schools.

Besides quality education, what three specific issues or concerns would be your priorities as a school trustee?

Obtain the best teachers possible and encourage them to stay in the teaching profession; settlement of the school desegregation problem permanently; better communication between the community and trustees.

Concern for turning out a well rounded and total person from our schools; attention to student, teacher and parent needs; furthering developmental and special educational programs.

Successful implementation of the (desegregation) order handed down by the court; make sure we do not lose sight of the main objective — our obligation to totally educate all children of our school district.

Improved communication among all components of the system; emphasis on basic reading and math skills; enforcing strict discipline.

What is your attitude toward the school board's 7:15 a.m. meeting time?

I believe 7:15 a.m. meetings are fine some of the time, but a number of the meetings should be held at night. This would give the community the opportunity to meet with the trustees.

Few can attend at that hour. The requirement that the board be notified several days prior to the meeting if someone wishes to speak on a subject is unreasonable.

If an evening meeting will enhance citizen attendance, I will continue to support the same. Several meetings were held in the evening and attendance was not increased; I therefore have not addressed the matter since. If citizens want evening meetings and will attend, I will support them.

7:15 a.m. does not seem to me to be an illogical time. It certainly doesn't conflict with anything else. I would favor holding some meetings in the evening in order to see if more parents do want to attend.

Would you support a policy requiring teachers to assign a minimum amount of homework to students on certain days of the week?

No. I feel teachers need to have the freedom of assigning work as they deem necessary.

No.

Yes, I do feel that students should have some home assignments. This would further verify the retention of daily teachings.

No. Though I favor homework, requiring a teacher to assign a certain amount is like requiring a doctor to prescribe medicine. The teacher is the professional and should make this decision. I would favor encouraging homework, not requiring it.

Would you support annual reporting of (1) district wide standardized achievement test scores to the public? (2) of school-by-school achievement test scores to the public? (3) of each student's scores to his or her parents?

1. No. I believe the test scores should be available if requested, but not to be reported to the public.
2. No. Answer is the same as above.
3. Yes. I believe parents are entitled to and should know their children's test scores.

1. No, because I think it would overemphasize their value.
2. No.
3. Yes, but the value of the scores should be explained.

1. Yes.
2. Yes.
3. Yes, definitely.

1. Yes.
2. Yes.
3. Yes.

In contrast to the current at-large system, would you support a system of electing school board members on the basis of geographical representation — that is, designating certain seats on the board to particular areas of the city?

I believe the present at-large system is satisfactory at this time. When Lubbock becomes large enough that the trustees cannot fully understand the needs of the people in various sections of the city, I will at that time support election by geographical representation.

I like it as it is — nonpartisan, citywide with no filing fee. Minority ethnic candidates have and will continue to be elected on this basis. I think it is simpler and nonpolitical this way.

Yes, this would allow all areas of the city to have representation. This would further help maintain a tri-ethnic board whereby all races will be represented, and a cross section of viewpoints in all policy-making decisions.

Yes. One member elected from each high school attendance area and two members-at-large.

What is your opinion of the salaries and benefits the school district has set for its teachers and other employees?

I feel we should have a complete review of benefits for teachers and other employees as it appears that benefits have not improved in relationship to the cost of living.

When you consider the preparation, qualifications and responsibilities in relation to what others are making, salaries are too low. The argument that teachers work nine months is no longer valid. The summers are shorter and demands for continuing education greater. A one-year contract offers little security. Many valuable and talented teachers, especially the young male teacher with a new family, can't make it and are lost to the school system.

There is a need for increase of both. In order to attract and keep good teachers and employees, we must be competitive in salaries as well as benefits, for both.

Salaries should be raised, must be raised. Whether they can be raised locally is the big question. Some additional benefits are in order, I believe, such as a revision in the sick-personal leave policy.

What would be your approach in preparing the district's annual budget?

My approach in preparing the budget would be to place major emphasis on the use of the tax dollar where it would be most beneficial to the education of the students. I believe each expenditure should be justified.

I would be certain that value for the tax dollar is received, money is spent wisely and there is no waste.

Be open-minded, getting the best available for the dollars spent.

I have no comments or suggestions until I have been through the process and witnessed the actual operation.

How would you propose to get input on school issues?

I will propose more meetings like the one held early this month (on integration). I feel instead of one large meeting, we should have several small meetings so more of the community would have an opportunity to speak on the issues.

From the people — students, parents, teachers.

Total community input is the greatest solution to any problem. I extend an invitation to all citizens to participate. I am and will continue to be the trustee with a listening ear to citizens at all times.

I would propose an informal communication network in which the school board — a month or two before any decisions are made — announces an area of concern. PTAs then would have time to discuss the subject, and teachers also would provide input through their principal or teacher association representative. This input would go directly to the board.

Recently a local high school asked the district's administration for permission to establish a supervised outdoor smoking area for students. How would you have handled that request?

I think the school trustees handled this properly since they rejected the request. I am against students smoking on school property.

There is no way I could go along with smoking in our public schools.

I do not feel that our tax dollars should be used to encourage smoking in our schools by establishing a smoking area. Yet, non-smokers should not have to be punished with smoke.

There is a policy against student smoking. Therefore, the request must be denied.

Would you support participation in the National School Breakfast Program?

Yes, I will support the National School Breakfast Program.

Yes. I see no justifiable reason to deny children in need nourishing food before beginning the school day. This should be done in such a way that they are not singled out.

Yes, without a doubt or second thoughts.

Though philosophically opposed, I certainly support obeying the new law which provides for this program.

Recently a group of parents protested the showing of certain films by some public schools here. How would you have handled that protest?

Selection of films should be screened by supervisors and coordinators and recommendations made as to what films are available and should be shown for a particular subject area. All films should be previewed by the teacher before being shown to students.

I would assure parents that in the future, attendance would be voluntary and their prior permission must be obtained. I would provide parents an opportunity to preview films that are controversial. If objection is overwhelming, they would not be shown at all.

This should be the choice of parents. If one does not want his child to see certain films, then he should not see them, unless the student can convince the parent otherwise. This should be a voluntary thing.

I would create an ad hoc committee of unbiased but interested and knowledgeable people to make the decision and to develop guidelines for future use.

Americans Expect To Be Richer

NEW YORK (AP) — Half the number of American families expect to be richer five years from now than they are today while fewer than 15 percent expect to be poorer, according to results of a new survey released Wednesday.

The survey of a cross-section of 5,000 families also found that 59 percent felt they were better off now than five years ago and only about 20 percent thought they were worse off.

"Considering the severity of the recent recession and our continuing economic trials the fact that three out five report that they are better off is somewhat surprising," said Fabian Linden, director of consumer research at The Conference Board, which sponsored the study.

"Per capita disposable income (after taxes and adjustments for inflation) has been running a skimpy 7 percent higher this year than in 1973," said Linden.

The Conference Board is a non profit research group which studies business related questions and public attitudes. It sponsored the survey which was done by National Family Opinion Inc. of Toledo, Ohio.

Optimism about future spending power was found in a broad cross-section of income groups although those with higher incomes were slightly more confident than those at the low end of the income scale.

Among those with incomes of $25,000 or more, the top bracket in the survey, 54.4 percent said they expected their economic situation to be "better" or "much better" five years from now. Among those earning less than $10,000, 40.3 percent gave the same responses.

For all groups, 50.1 percent said they expected their spending power to increase.

The difference was more distinct among age groups. Nearly 80 percent of households headed by someone under 35 expected their economic situation to improve. But optimism diminished among older heads of households. Only 17 percent of those over 55 expected their economic situation to improve.

Among all income and age groups, 16.3 percent expected to be much better off; 34.3 percent expected to be better off; 34.7 percent expected their economic situation to be the same; 12.3 percent said it would be worse; and 2.3 percent said it would be much worse.

Asked to assess how their economic situation changed over the past five years 59.1 percent said it improved and 19.7 percent said it was worse.

Specifically, 23.2 percent said they were much better off; 35.9 percent said they were better off; 21.2 percent said there was no change; 16.6 percent said they were worse off; and 3.1 percent said they were much worse off.

Blast After Rail Wreck Forces Evacuation Of Arkansas Town

LEWISVILLE, Ark. (AP) — Fire fighters and railroad officials kept their distance Wednesday from a derailed train burning on the edge of Lewisville as fire threatened a tanker car loaded with a highly toxic and flammable chemical.

Thirty-two cars of the 120-car Cotton Belt Railroad freight train derailed and a chemical car exploded shortly after midnight Wednesday, forcing the evacuation of this southwest Arkansas town of 1,700. Three crewmen were injured.

Lewisville's streets were silent Wednesday as residents heeded orders to stay away.

Railroad officials said the exploded car contained butadiene, a highly toxic substance used in making rubber products.

Rice hulls, newsprint and plastic products that spilled from overturned freight cars fueled the massive fire that burned all day Wednesday.

The fire gutted several nearby buildings at the J&P Petroleum Co. and spread to other parts of the town. Five other chemical cars derailed, but haven't burned.

The injured crewmen were listed in fair condition at a Magnolia Hospital. They were identified as Clarence Halford, 61; Michael Tate, 32; and Jerry McAsee, 47. No other injuries were reported.

Cotton Belt Superintendent W.F. Reed said another chemical car containing butadiene was leaking as a result of the derailment.

"We are concerned about it, but we feel there is no apparent danger of it exploding," Reed said.

Security was tight at the scene. Observers were being kept more than 2,000 feet away from the burning train.

Reed said officials were waiting for the fire to burn itself out so crews could isolate the remaining chemical cars.

"The people will not be allowed to return until we are absolutely certain there is no problem," Reed said.

Thick clouds of black smoke hung over the derailment site. From the air fires could be seen in several areas. Smoke still issued from a gutted building near the wreckage.

The derailment apparently occurred as the northbound train was attempting to make a right turn that would have taken it through the heart of Lewisville. The lead cars of the train apparently left the track as they were trying to negotiate the turn, an aerial view of the derailment site suggested.

The train was en route to St. Louis, via Pine Bluff, Ark., from near Houston when the derailment occurred.

Area Contestants Join Top Cowboys In Rodeo Events

Eleven South Plains area residents have signed up to compete in the 36th annual ABC Rodeo scheduled April 5-8 in Municipal Coliseum.

They will join more than 200 of the nation's top cowboys in the Professional Rodeo Cowboys Association event, which will star Jody Miller, country music singing star.

Performances are set at 7:30 p.m. nightly.

Local participants registering for the action include: Vicki Ross, Cindy Byrd, Joann Whitehead and Jan Davidson, barrel racing; Tim Tierney, Bobby Davidson and Robert Fairman, calf roping; Wayne Higgins, Sammy Hickman and David Jonas, bullriding; Kenneth Smith, bareback bronc riding; and Tierney, bulldogging.

Rodeo officials said the sign-up period for local competitors has ended.

Tickets are on sale at the rodeo headquarters trailer in Town and Country Shopping Center parking lot, Dunlap's Hemphill-Wells and at all western wear stores. They are $3, $5, $6 and $6.50.

Jiggs Beutler of Elk City, Okla., will produce the rodeo and John Mann will be the announcer. Rick "Ragin' Cajun" Young and Bunky Boger will be clowns-bullfighters.

COCKROACHES

With their six legs and flat, oily bodies, cockroaches are able to escape from predators quickly through the smallest opening. Even a slight movement of air registers on the fine hairs of their antennae and triggers sensory nerves in their legs. Threatened roaches have been known to take off in 54-1,000ths of a second.

WE GOOFED — These four city girls are winners of the 1977 Cinderella Girl Pageant here and are not contestants in the 1978 competition as earlier reported in The A-J. McClenton Sentenced To Life

By FRANK PATRICK
Avalanche-Journal Staff

A man who turned down a 15-year offer from prosecutors was handed a life sentence for murder by a jury here Wednesday.

The punishment verdict was returned against 63-year-old T.W. McClenton, found guilty of murder earlier Wednesday in connection with the April 10, 1977, shooting death of Joe Ybarra Flores, 17.

McClenton, visibly upset by the verdict, tried to tell presiding Dist. Judge Denzil Bevers after jurors left the courtroom that he had not dragged the victim's body across a street, as testified to by the state's star witness.

Defense attorney Byron Chappell interrupted him.

"You weren't charged with dragging," Chappell snapped. "You're going to spend 85 years on account of that dragging."

Chappell had urged his client Monday, before a jury was ever picked in the case, to accept the 15 years in prison he had been offered in exchange for a guilty plea.

McClenton, an Avenue C apartment manager and cafe operator, at first agreed to do so, even going so far as to stand before the judge and say he was guilty.

But the lanky defendant balked at the last minute after being asked to agree to stipulated testimony. One of the statements he was asked about was reportedly made by Douglas Harrell, the star witness.

McClenton — against his veteran lawyer's advice — refused to let the stipulated testimony in, necessitating the trial.

He later branded Harrell's statements as lies, apparently without effect upon jurors.

Two other charges are currently pending against McClenton. He was charged with murder in connection with the June 10, 1976, shooting death of Ozell Baker, 31.

And he was charged with attempted murder Feb. 17 in connection with another shooting incident.

As part of the plea-bargaining agreement McClenton turned down, those pending charges would have been dismissed.

It was brought out in testimony that McClenton was assessed a four-year probation sentence several years ago for assault with intent to murder.

The six-man, six-woman jury in Bevers' 72nd District Court filed back in to announce the life verdict — maximum for a murder case — around 5:30 p.m., after deliberating approximately 2 1/2 hours. Jurors had also spent more than two hours before finding the defendant guilty.

Flores' body was found by a passing motorist about 7 a.m. lying near the west curb in the 1500-block of Avenue C, not far from the cafe McClenton operated.

McClenton stated on the witness stand that he had shot the victim.

The trial centered on whether the shot was fired in self-defense.

Damaging testimony came from Harrell, who said he was present inside McClenton's cafe when the post-midnight shooting occurred.

The witness said he, McClenton and the victim were the only ones present.

"Me and T.W. and that Spanish dude were in there talking," Harrell said.

He said Flores apparently angered McClenton by asking him to buy a butcher knife for $1.50 so he could buy some wine.

The witness said Flores had asked McClenton about buying the knife before.

McClenton told Flores to get out, Harrell said.

He said Flores turned and walked toward the door, then wheeled back around to face the defendant.

"He turned and T.W. shot him one time in the chest," Harrell stated.

"Joe (Flores) stepped out the door and staggered across the street."

Harrell said Flores staggered toward some apartments and collapsed next to a phone booth.

The witness said he was frightened and went to a friend's residence in the same apartments. He said he was able to observe McClenton.

"He (McClenton) went and got the Spanish dude and drug him across the street," he said.

"We sat there watching him, afraid to go call the law, scared of him."

Harrell told prosecutor Sam Oatman that the knife Flores had wanted to sell was in his back pocket when he was shot.

McClenton testified that the deceased had been pestering him periodically during the day.

The defendant said Harrell was not even in the establishment when the shooting happened.

According to the McClenton, Flores suddenly announced he was going to rob him and leaped at him with a knife.

"I shot him across the counter about this far away," McClenton said, spreading his hands about two feet apart.

Texas Bubble Boy Likes 'New World'

HOUSTON (AP) — Little David, who has spent most of his six years in a womblike plastic bubble, has in recent weeks taken six trips into the outside world in a specially-designed spacesuit, finding his greatest enjoyment in spraying water from a hose onto his parents, sisters and neighbors.

The spacesuit was developed by researchers at the National Aeronautics and Space Administration in an effort to let David leave his plastic home in a germ-free suit and experience those things that most six-year-old boys take for granted.

Dr. Ralph D. Feigin, chairman of pediatrics at the Baylor College of Medicine, told newsmen that David wore his spacesuit home for the first time last month.

The doctor said, "He sprayed people, plants, and windows with a garden hose his mother handed him. He petted two family dogs. He explored the house for the first time in his life. He looked at family photos and played records and then finally said, 'What I really want to do is go back outside and play with that hose again.'"

Dr. Feigin said hope still existed that someday David would be able to function as a normal child. "But until that day we must take every precaution to insure his safety."

David suffers from a disease known as severe combined immune deficiency. His body has no defense against germs or bacteria.

What would be the snifflers for a normal child could be death for David.

The Baylor Medical College scientist also reported that in January David swallowed two coins from his collection. This necessitated a normally simple operation to remove the coins from the esophagus. But, for David, this could have been an end to his existence.

Doctors said the coins were removed successfully and that David was in "as good a shape as ever."

Dr. Feigin answered some of the recent criticism from other scientists that David's plastic bubble existence was not necessary.

The doctor said, "Other treatments have been evaluated and found unsuitable for David at this time. A bone marrow transplant offers the best hope, but of more than 10,000 potential donors tested, none has proven to be a good match."

The pediatrician added, "David's case is exceptional in that he is not critically ill or suffering from recurrent infections. Not only is he the longest surviving patient with this disease, but he is strong, healthy and has never had a sick day in his life. Thus far, possible remedies have proven to be inappropriate or life-threatening."

Dr. Buford Nichols, professor of pediatrics at Baylor, told newsmen that "David is learning to write, spell and next will take up reading. Music lessons are introducing him to some new sounds. He has completed a rainbow painting and a picture of his own mobile isolated suit."

Burglars Hit Residences, Businesses

Residential and business burglars continued to put a heavy dent on local residents' pockets, reports filed recently with police indicate.

The largest dent made was at Thrift Rents, 1104 34th St., where a "uniloader" and a trailer were stolen. The heavy machinery, valued at more than $10,500, was taken sometime Tuesday or Wednesday, according to Rudolph V. Madden.

Burglars also hit a law firm in the Briercroft Center, during the past two days, hauling away a large, 3-foot-high hourglass, a tape recorder, two clocks and a jar of peanut butter, in addition to destroying a $500 safe.

The goods were valued at more than $1,200, according to complainants Kenneth Hobbs, Roy Byrn Bass and Larry Glazner.

Kelvin Ham said someone broke through the rear bars on a window at Pete's Recreation Center, 3205 34th St., Tuesday or Wednesday, then stole an $800 stereo system, a cassette player and $550 worth of pool cues. In addition, a small amount of money was taken from a pair of pinball machines that were damaged extensively when they were pried.

Thieves took an $800 acoustic guitar from Jim Bowles' 4704 48th St. residence Tuesday, and Mary Sechrist of 2303 14th St. said she lost a $450 accordion, a guitar and an amplifier valued at $50 to burglars Tuesday.

Reporting stolen hubcaps recently were Ila Mae Powell of 707 N. 4th St., Leela Sherrod of 2809 33rd St., Ronald Harrelson of 2401 8th St., apt. 22, and Bradley Bradford of 1608 Ave. Y.

A 19-year-old Lubbock woman told detectives Tuesday she was raped last weekend after three men forced her into a van and drugged her.

The victim said that after she used the phone at a 50th Street convenience store about 5:15 p.m. Friday, a stranger motioned her to a van parked nearby. As she approached the vehicle the man reportedly grabbed her arm and he and one of his companions made her get inside.

According to the woman's story, the men forced her to take some drugs as they drove around town for several hours. She said she was not totally aware of what was happening, but that they drove to a house at an unknown location in the city and put her in a dark room.

The woman told police she was not sure if one or all three of the men raped her then. The next morning, after the effect of the drugs had worn off, they drove her back to the convenience store, where she got into her vehicle and left, she said.

In recently reported property crimes, T.C. Steelman of 1710 Ave. R, No. 202, told Lubbock County Sheriff's Department deputies that someone stole 38 beehives, valued at $2,280, from a site near Wolfforth. The complainant, who said the theft occurred sometime Sunday or Monday, told lawmen the bulky items would have had to be hauled away.

According to Patsy Lowe of 6801 19th St., No. 126, whoever got through a door at her mobile home Tuesday made off with her television set and stereo.

Muse Resigns Amid Rumors Of Conflict

DALLAS (AP) — M. Lamar Muse, who led Southwest Airlines from a three-point intrastate airline through the courts and onto the runways of nine Texas cities, has shocked Texas aviation circles by resigning as president and chief executive officer.

A terse statement from Southwest Wednesday said Muse resigned at a special board of directors meeting Tuesday. San Antonio lawyer Herbert M.L. Muse, one of Southwest's founders, was named to replace Muse until a replacement can be found.

Muse holed up in his home amid rumors that a two-pronged conflict with the board prompted his resignation. A spokesman at the Muse residence said he would be unavailable to the media until Thursday afternoon.

The Dallas Times Herald quoted sources as saying Muse ran afoul of the board from two angles. One was elevation of his son, Michael, to senior vice president of the airline. The newspaper source said that move was in defiance of a directive to hire outside management.

Michael Muse had been vice president for finance and administration before his promotion.

The other area of conflict, the source said, was Muse's idea of a Chicago-based commuter airline subsidiary. Muse spoke enthusiastically of such a plan in an interview with The Associated Press last year. The source said board members viewed the plan less than enthusiastically.

Muse, 57 and a Houston native, went to Southwest in its founding year of 1971 after er a stint as a private investment counselor. He spoke with pride of being a "money man" as opposed to a pilot.

The airline fought with Texas International and Braniff, two other Texas-based carriers, over rights to expand service and to maintain operations at close-in, smaller airports at Dallas and Houston. Courts have allowed the expansions and the right to operate from Houston's Hobby Airport and Dallas' Love Field.

Joe Vera, 42, of 218 Ave. P was listed in critical condition Wednesday at Methodist Hospital with a stab wound he suffered early Sunday.

Robert Lipka of El Paso was listed in serious condition Wednesday at Methodist Hospital, with injuries he sustained in an early-morning traffic accident Saturday in the 3800-block of University Avenue.

Charles Wayne Grimsley, 27, of 320 78th St. was in serious condition Wednesday in Methodist Hospital with head injuries suffered about 1:20 p.m. Sunday in a two-vehicle accident at the intersection of Memphis Avenue and 78th Street.

Patricia Bates, 18, of Lubbock was in serious condition Wednesday in Methodist Hospital with injuries suffered March 12 in a one-vehicle accident at Loop 289 and 34th Street.

Life Insurance Claim Voided

AUSTIN (UPI) — A Lubbock woman whose husband paid a $289 premium on a $50,000 life insurance policy the day before his death is not entitled to collect on the policy because her husband failed to inform the insurance company of his deteriorating health, the Texas Supreme Court ruled Wednesday.

Walter Coulson, an agent for United Savings Life Insurance Co., first applied for the policy March 15, 1970, but his application for coverage at standard rates was rejected because he had a history of high blood pressure and had been on medication to control the blood pressure for several years.

The company returned the policy application to Coulson and offered to insure him at a higher rate.

Coulson, meanwhile, had consulted a physician who informed him he had coronary artery disease, and on June 12 told Coulson he had a coronary insufficiency and faced an impending heart attack.

On July 5, 1970, Coulson mailed the company a $289 check for the first premium on the policy, and a copy of a receipt showing he had delivered a copy of the policy to the purchaser, himself, thus putting the policy into immediate effect.

He died of a heart attack the next day. A trial court had ruled the widow could collect the $50,000, plus 12 percent penalties from the insurance company. But the Supreme Court ruled Coulson's health conditions changed substantially between the time he applied for the policy March 15 and the time he accepted the policy with higher premiums on July 5, and that he had failed to inform the company of the changes in his condition.

The court ruled the company would not have insured Coulson if it had known of his heart condition. A clause in the policy provided it would go into effect at the time the first premium was paid only if the person insured remained in good health at that time.

The high court ruled Coulson had not complied with that provision, and therefore the policy was not in effect at the time of his death.

GRASS FIRE SPREADS

PAMPA (AP) — Firefighters from Pampa and three other fire departments battled a grass fire for several hours Tuesday, trying to bring it under control. The fire may have burned as many as five sections. It started at 11 a.m. on the Don Morrison ranch about 15 miles north of Pampa and was still burning three hours later.

Court Upholds Sentence Given In Robbery Case

A-J Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — The Court of Criminal Appeals Wednesday upheld a 50-year sentence assessed Homer Greer Young Jr. for aggravated robbery in Lubbock County, and also affirmed convictions in four other area cases.

Young was convicted here in September, 1976, of the May 7, 1976 holdup of Serv-U Food Market at 704 E. Broadway. He was one of two men arrested after a high-speed auto chase through East Lubbock.

The Amarillo man had pleaded guilty, and his court-appointed attorney originally filed a brief saying the appeal was "without merit and wholly frivolous."

Young complained, in a brief filed by himself, that he had not been afforded the right to a proper appeal.

The Court of Criminal Appeals reinstated his appeal and denied it. Young contended he had been subjected to self-incrimination when the trial court failed to exclude witnesses against him when he entered a not guilty plea.

Also affirmed were the following convictions:

—Helen Walker Stone, sentenced in Deaf Smith County to two years imprisonment for delivery of a dangerous drug.

—Bill Rutherford, sentenced in Deaf Smith County to five years for theft. No transcript was filed.

—Christopher Dwayne Cline, sentenced in Ector County to 99 years for aggravated robbery.

Cline was convicted of robbing the clerk of an Odessa convenience store at knife-point of approximately $100, and then taking her in a stolen pickup to a pasture where he forced her to submit to "sexual intercourse and to attempt unnatural sex acts."

—Ricky Dale Ramsey, sentenced in Ector County to 45 years for aggravated rape.

Ramsey contended he should have been given a pre-trial hearing to determine his competency to stand trial.

The appeals court opinion says the court had ordered a psychiatric examination of Ramsey, who pleaded guilty, prior to the trial and that the question of competency had not been raised since then until the day of the trial.

Lubbock needs

Mike Stevens

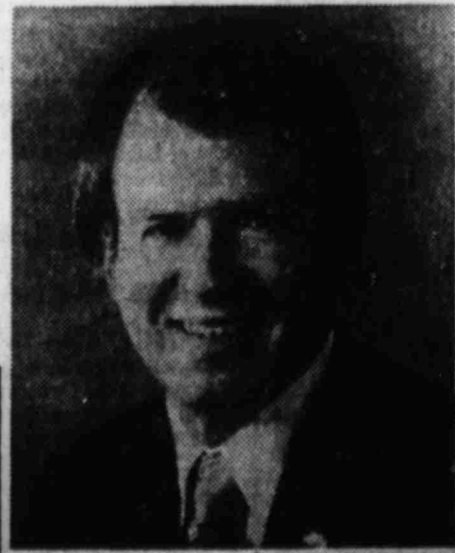

As a Man of ACTION, Mike Stevens will represent the citizens of Lubbock on important civic issues.

ACTION . . . to help control your rising utility costs.

ACTION . . . on taxes and massive reevaluation of your property.

ACTION . . . on traffic safety problems and congestion.

ACTION . . . to protect your home and family from crime.

The citizens of Lubbock have been subjected to 5 murders, 6 rapes, 61 assaults, 27 armed robberies, 81 car thefts, and 313 burglaries during the month of February alone. In one month Lubbockites suffered $568,413.00 in property losses to crime. Based on steadily growing statistics, crime in our city will reach an incredible high unless something is done to stop it—and done NOW. Mike Stevens is calling for the creation of a Crime Prevention Unit for the Lubbock Police Department to interface with the community needs, and bridge the gap between public demand and Police Department demands.

Truly an ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure.

LEGAL NOTICE

General Telephone Company of the Southwest has filed tariffs with the Public Utility Commission of Texas to implement the Federal Communications Commission's telephone equipment registration program (FCC Docket 19528). The tariffs have an effective date of April 15, 1978. The proposed changes will reduce rates for extension telephones and 25 foot long cords; will restructure one-time charges for service connection, moves and changes, increasing some and reducing others; and will offer reduced monthly rates for one-party business and residence customers who provide their own primary telephone instrument. The proposed changes in rates, with some increasing and others decreasing, will reduce General's gross revenues from its Texas operations by $2,565.00.

Carter Emphasizes Rights To Brazil

BRASILIA, Brazil (AP) — President Carter arrived Wednesday in Brazil and told the four-star general who heads its government that all nations must recognize their shortcomings in human rights and can use atomic power without adding to the world's nuclear arsenal.

Both are touchy subjects in this largest nation in South America, the second Carter has visited on his first trip to Latin America as president. Brazil has canceled military agreements with the United States because of Carter's human rights crusade.

In addition, the Brazilian military government has said it will go ahead with the purchase of a nuclear processing plant from West Germany despite Carter administration expressions of concern that it could be used to make atomic weapons.

"Today all of us are joining in the worldwide struggle to advance the cause of human freedom and the rule of law," Carter said during his arrival ceremony at Brasilia International Airport. "This is a struggle that will prevail only when we are willing to recognize our own limitations and to speak to each other frankly and with understanding."

Then, referring to the danger of nuclear weaponry, the president declared: "Both our nations are turning to nuclear power as one of the answers to our energy problems, and we both believe that peaceful use of atomic power is not incompatible with the need to prevent nuclear proliferation."

His statements seemed less blunt than others he has made at home on both issues. Moreover, White House Press Secretary Jody Powell said Carter and the general, Brazilian President Ernesto Geisel, who welcomed his American visitor at the airport, postponed discussing the two sensitive issues in their private talks until today.

Powell said the two presidents devoted their private discussions Wednesday to Africa and the Middle East. No substantive differences surfaced on those matters, the press secretary said. He called the talks "quite cordial and constructive."

Asked whether Carter felt comfortable "fraternizing with a military dictator," Powell disputed that characterization of Geisel and said Carter feels comfortable talking to persons with whom he disagrees as well as those with whom he agrees.

In a toast at a working dinner with Geisel at Alvorada Palace, Carter said the bond between the United States and Brazil is "solid and mature."

Solid Relationship

"It is mature enough that we can recognize what is enduring in our relationship and which things will pass," Carter said. "It is solid enough to give us the strength to weather momentary difficulties and to discuss our disagreements with frankness, but also with respect, understanding and friendship."

Earlier, in Caracas, the president seemed to take a tougher line. He told the oil-rich nation of Venezuela that all major petroleum exporting nations must share their wealth with poor nations of the world "to meet the human needs of the world's people."

The president made the statement in a major address to Venezuela's national congress before meeting for a second day with President Carlos Andres Perez.

Oil Incentives Urged

An American official said Carter and Perez talked about encouraging U.S. oil companies to help hunt for more Venezuelan oil, despite nationalization of their holdings by the Venezuelan government. But Perez was not clear on what incentive he could offer, said the official, who sat in on the meeting and asked to remain anonymous.

The official also said Perez indicated he was thinking about asking for action by the Organization of American States to pressure Nicaraguan leader Anastasio Somoza to step down because of allegations that his government denies human rights.

However, the U.S. official said, "we are not willing to take actions which are going to get us in a position of bringing about the downfall of a leader of a country."

Fly To Rio Today

After the Venezuelan talks, Carter, his wife Rosalynn, 10-year-old daughter Amy and top U.S. officials including national security adviser Zbigniew Brzezinski and Secretary of State Cyrus R. Vance left in the presidential jet, Air Force One, for Brazil's capital of Brasilia. They will fly to Rio de Janeiro today.

From Brazil, the presidential party journeys across the Atlantic, where Carter will become the first American president to make a state visit to Black Africa. He will confer with leaders in Nigeria and Liberia before returning to Washington early next week.

Riding into Brasilia in his presidential limousine, Carter saw a starkly modern city rising from the jungle of interior Brazil. The city, designed to fulfill a Brazilian dream for a safe inland capital, is only 18 years old.

NEVER PROMISED A ROSE GARDEN—Tyler, a city famous for its rose gardens, is growing plants potentially far more aromatic than roses in its county courthouse lawn. Smith County chief deputy Jimmy Collins displays a handful of marijuana, one of two plants picked from the lawn Wednesday morning. The sheriff's department speculated that seeds from several truckloads of the drug being stored on the roof of the building had blown off, starting the garden below. (AP Laserphoto)

Administration Blasts Hike In Steel Price

prices of goods made of steel, such as autos and appliances. The price hike announcements coincided with new concern that inflation in the economy is worsening.

The administration also expressed disappointment that company officials gave no advance indication that a price hike was imminent during a Monday meeting with government officials. That meeting in Washington was to discuss the Carter administration's new anti-inflation program.

The administration, in a statement obviously concerned that other steelmakers will quickly raise prices, too, urged producers to "seriously consider" the implications of the price increase for both the industry and for inflation generally, now running between 6 percent and 7 percent a year.

The latest increase, if followed by the rest of the industry, would mean a raise in steel prices of 8 percent just since the beginning of the year. U.S. Steel announced a 5.5 percent increase on some major products just last month.

"Such inflationary price increases seriously endanger the continuation" of industry's recovery from the beating it had been taking recently from competition from low-priced steel imports, the administration's Council on Wage and Price Stability said.

The council said its statement was approved by Charles L. Schultze, chairman of the President's Council of Economic Advisers, which gave the criticism greater weight than if the council had simply issued it on its own. Schultze is the top economic adviser to Carter, who was out of the country when the price increase was announced.

U.S. Steel said its increase was necessary to offset higher production costs resulting from the new miners' contract in the coal industry. The increase, which would take effect Saturday, would apply to such products as hot and cold rolled steel sheets, widely used in the auto and appliance industries, and for structural shapes, plates, tin plate and tubing.

"The cost of the new (coal) contract began immediately ... when the miners returned to work," the company said, noting that miners who reported to work on Monday got a $100 bonus. Coal operators, including U.S. Steel, which mines 70 percent of its own coal, have estimated the first-year costs of the new coal contract will raise mining expenses by about 10 percent.

But the presidential council argued: "The magnitude of the price increase cannot be fully explained by the higher cost of coal."

The council estimated the coal agreement will increase steel production costs about $4 a ton, spread over the three-year life of the contract, less than half the $10.50 per ton immediate increase announced by U.S. Steel.

Some of U.S. Steel's competitors were caught by surprise by the timing of the announcement.

"I don't think anyone was surprised by the increase," said an industry expert, who asked not to be identified. "The surprise was how quickly they acted."

wrecked auto on North U.S. 87 Saturday afternoon, subsequently was found to have died from a heart attack.

Police said Morrison was westbound on E. 34th Street on his 1976 Kawasaki motorcycle and a 31-year-old nurse's aide was northbound on Quirt Avenue when the collision occurred.

Morrison was taken to the West Texas Hospital emergency room with a severe abdominal injury. He died about 2:45 p.m., a spokesman said.

The woman was uninjured. Services for Morrison are pending. Services for Ortiz are pending with Henderson Funeral Home.

Ortiz was a native of Forest City, Ark., and had moved to Lubbock about nine years ago from O'Donnell.

He had served in the U.S. Army from 1970 to 1973 and was a member of Our Lady of Grace Catholic Church. A mason, he was employed by Smith and Sweet Construction Co.

Survivors include his wife, Elia; two sons, Marco Antonio and Jose Luis, both of the home; his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Rosendo Ortiz of O'Donnell; three sisters, Josephina Garcia of Lubbock, Ermelinda Ortiz of O'Donnell and Maria Gloria of Virginia; and two brothers, John of Lubbock and Gerardo of O'Donnell.

Hale, Lamb Farm Loans Available

AUSTIN (UPI) — The U.S. Department of Agriculture has authorized emergency loans for farmers and ranchers in 11 Texas counties, Gov. Dolph Briscoe said Wednesday.

Briscoe said the USDA authorized the assistance through the Farmers Home Administration to help farmers and ranchers recover physical and production losses due to adverse weather conditions.

The loans will be available in Bowie, Dallas, Denton, Hale, Henderson, Hunt, Lamb, Montague, Nacogdoches, Oldham and Runnels counties.

Talks Due To Reopen In Egypt

from a small leftist party calling on Begin to resign.

The prime minister had come under political fire at home after his talks with Carter apparently failed to produce new agreement.

In another Mideast development, U.N. peacekeeping forces in southern Lebanon reported that the cease-fire declared March 21 by invading Israeli forces appeared to have been generally observed for the first time overnight. Palestinian chief Yasser Arafat had said Tuesday he would cooperate with the U.N. mission to disengage his guerrillas from Israeli troops.

But the U.N. force suffered its first casualties when a Swedish officer was killed and another wounded. U.N. command in Jerusalem said their jeep hit a mine at the Khadali Bridge spanning the Litani River, northern limit of the Israeli advance.

In exceptions to the prevailing calm, the guerrilla fringe Popular Democratic Front said it shelled an Israeli position near Hasbaya in southern Lebanon, and an Israeli army spokesman in Tel Aviv reported that several rockets fired from Lebanon struck northern Israel. No casualties were reported.

Meanwhile, in Cairo, 16 members of the Arab League ended a meeting at which they decided to send emissaries to five hardline Arab states — Syria, Libya, Algeria, Iraq and South Yemen — to try to cool their opposition to the Egyptian peace talks with Israel. Delegates at the League meeting said new Arab solidarity would pressure Israel to negotiate seriously.

U.S. Plan Rejected

In Jerusalem, Begin specifically rejected a U.S. proposal to hold a plebiscite in five years in which the Palestinians could determine the political future of the West Bank and the Gaza Strip.

Inevitably, this kind of referendum would lead to a vote for an independent Palestinian state which Israel rejects, Begin said. In Beirut, however, a Palestine Liberation Organization spokesman said the referendum idea represented a betrayal of Palestinian interests.

Referring to Arafat's PLO, Begin said: "We must remember that the pressures, the threats and the terror of that organization of murderers still exists." The PLO, Begin implied, would coerce Palestinian voters to choose independence.

He said the United States proposed offering the Palestinians three alternatives: autonomy under Israeli protection, federation with Jordan or federation with Israel.

Faced with these choices and PLO pressure, the voters would cast blank ballots or would write in statehood, Begin said, adding: "We are not prepared to endanger our future for the sake of a referendum."

Begin said the Carter administration had agreed on the need for Israel to maintain military forces in the West Bank, even after a transition period to some form of self-rule, as Begin has proposed.

Sources said there was still disagreement on whether the Israeli force should act only as an early warning line or whether it should have the strength to repel a surprise attack.

Peres charged that Begin's policies were leading "to a permanent conflict, first of all with ourselves, with our friends in the United States and with the desire for peace."

Echoing the position of the U.S. government, Peres urged Begin to concede that U.N. Security Council Resolution 242 calls for Israeli withdrawal on all three fronts: the West Bank and Gaza Strip, the Sinai Desert and the Golan Heights.

his weapon. "I figured it would scare them off if I shot over their heads," he said.

Defense attorney Mark Hall asked his client if he had tried to hit anyone. "No sir," Hinojosa testified.

The defendant said he did not know he had hit anyone until he was told by police.

"Did you see Trey Ford testify? What are your feelings toward him?" Hall asked. Hinojosa said he was sorry about the incident, but indicated he had not tried to shoot Ford.

Hinojosa said he had been standing outside his car when Ford stood up and had to reach inside to get the gun off the car seat.

"Did it ever dawn on you you could just as easily have gotten back in the car and rolled up the window?" Gamble asked in cross-examination.

Scoffs At Testimony

He scoffed at Hinojosa's contention that he had only tried to fire into the air. "What did it (the bullet) do, ricochet off a cloud or something?" he asked at one point.

Noting the defendant had stated he had the pistol out practice-shooting the day of the incident, Gamble asked if he had not generally hit in the area he was aiming for.

"If he (Ford) was hit by a bullet, isn't it logical that the gun was pointed at him?" he continued.

"Yeah, I guess it is," Hinojosa answered.

A gun introduced into evidence reportedly was purchased by Hinojosa three or four days prior to the shooting.

Police Cpl. Mike Overland testified he was about a block away when the shooting happened. He said he pursued a vehicle which sped from the parking lot and identified Hinojosa as the passenger.

Overland, who was driving an unmarked car, said the auto apparently stopped after the occupants realized he was a policeman. — FRANK PATRICK

Tallest Geyser Erupts Again

MAMMOTH, Wyo. (AP) — What is believed to be the tallest geyser in the world erupted this week after being dormant for nine years, Yellowstone National Park officials said Wednesday.

Steamboat Geyser startled park rangers when it threw a shower of water and then steam 300 to 400 feet into the air Tuesday, park spokesman Jordan Burns said.

Park geologist Rick Hutchinson said the reactivation may mean new subterranean shifts in circulation of heat and water under the park.

"Tuesday morning, crews working in the area heard an unusual noise, and they found the geyser going off," Burns said. "It was in the early stages of eruption."

The geyser was still in a "steam phase" Wednesday afternoon, which may last 36 hours or more after the water phase, he said.

"This is now believed to be the tallest geyser in the world," Burns said. "It's quite a spectacular sight."

By comparison, Old Faithful in Yellowstone Park, the world's most famous geyser, shoots water an average of 130 feet into the air about every 70 minutes.

Steamboat Geyser, which resembles a steamboat, is easily accessible near Norris Junction in the northern part of the park. The geyser's last major cycle, when it erupted to about the same height, was between 1951 and 1969, Hutchinson said.

"This may be the beginning of a new cycle," he said.

Hutchinson could not estimate when there would be another eruption.

Mexico Counts Cattle Deaths

MONTERREY, Mexico (AP) — About 20,000 head of cattle have died since last December as a result of drought conditions in northern Mexico near the Texas border, beef industry sources said.

Ricardo Morales, chief buyer for the municipal slaughterhouses here, said drought conditions have caused an unprofitable sale of 7,000 cattle during the past three months.

Virgilio Acosta, manager of the regional union of cattlemen, said losses are estimated at about $43,000.

As a result, the Nuevo Leon ranchers are selling underweight cattle to ranchers in the state of Tamaulipas and local meat packing houses at a loss of about $70 dollars per head, Acosta said.

The underweight cattle weigh about 100 kilos less than last year, Acosta said. Light rainfall last summer, during the usually rainy season in August, have caused waterholes to dry up. This combined with last winter's uncommon frost has reduced the amount of land suitable for grazing.

growers when market prices decline.

The current wheat target is $3 a bushel and Bergland said that a reasonable increase might be to $3.40 or $3.50 a bushel.

The changes could boost returns to farmers for crops this year by $3 billion to $4 billion, according to administration estimates.

Although the plan includes measures designed to reduce crop production, Bergland said, "This package will not change the food price factor at all."

Food Reserve Set

Part of the package announced last summer is an intended purchase of about 220 million bushels of wheat by the government as a special U.S. international food reserve to help needy foreign countries.

Farm prices, particularly for grain, sagged far below the record peaks of 1973-74 following bumper harvests of corn and wheat. Farm prices have gone up since last fall, helping trigger a sharp increase in consumer food costs than government analysts expected.

A Senate-House conference committee will resume work when Congress returns next week on legislation which would boost price supports for major crops, pay farmers to idle additional acres and ensure producers of wheat, feed grains and cotton higher federal guarantees if they reduce acreages up to 50 percent. The last is called "flexible parity."

Guarantees Sought

The farmers protest group, American Agriculture, set out last fall to seek federal guarantees of 100 percent of parity for farm commodities, price levels which theoretically would give producers the same purchasing power they had in 1910-14. At full parity, for example, wheat would be more than $5 a bushel, compared with about half that which farmers get now on the open market.

The "flexible parity" plan submitted by Dole would guarantee full parity to grain and cotton farmers who opted to reduce acreages 50 percent and less to those who idled fewer acres.

The White House has made clear this plan is unacceptable to Carter.

Price Boosts Seen

Meanwhile, Bergland has already taken steps under current farm law which he says will help boost farm prices, including a three-year grain reserve plan aimed at taking at least one billion bushels of wheat and corn off the market by paying farmers to store it.

So far, farmers have signed up to store about 252 million bushels of wheat in the reserve program, about three-fourths of Bergland's minimum goal of 330 million bushels.

But farmers have committed only about 5.7 million bushels of corn and other grain to the reserve, an insignificant part of Bergland's goal of 670 million bushels for those grains.

Another action this week included a 4.8 percent increase in federal milk price supports as required by law. This is expected to help dairy farmers' incomes this year and trigger retail milk price increases equal to about two cents a half gallon.

FBI Chief Warns Of U.S. Terrorism

WASHINGTON (AP) — The FBI is taking steps to head off political kidnappings and murders like those that have hit European countries in recent months, FBI Director William Webster said Wednesday.

Webster, who took office Feb. 23, said it is likely that international terrorist groups will target political leaders in the United States, just as they have in West Germany and Italy.

El Paso City Attorney To Fill Lubbock Post

John Ross Jr., El Paso city attorney, will become Lubbock's municipal attorney on Aug. 3. Mayor Roy Bass announced Wednesday.
Ross, 44, will succeed City Atty. Fred Senter, who will retire on July 8 at age 65. Bass said he believes Ross will informally assume his duties here in the interim, even though his resignation in El Paso will not become effective until Aug. 3.
Ross, who has been El Paso's city attorney since 1974, will receive $35,000 a year plus an annual car allowance of $1,900.

League To Sponsor Candidates' Forum

The League of Women Voters will sponsor a televised forum for Congressional candidates which will air on KCBD-TV next month.
Republicans running for the office, Joe Hickox, George Bush and Jim Reese, will appear on April 22 and Democrats Kent Hance and Morris Sheats will face-off on April 29.
Carolyn Lanier, Lubbock league president, said the 30-minute forums will preempt the national news on the station beginning at 5:30 p.m. on the successive Saturdays.
She said each candidate will be given about two minutes to introduce himself, then will be questioned by league members. The candidates will have a few minutes at the end of the program to conclude.
The forums will be uncut and unedited and run exactly as they occur, she pledged.

Quails can run quickly while on the ground, but can only fly a short distance because of their short wings.

a field of 12 applicants, four of whom were interviewed by the city council. He said he believes a fifth candidate for the position also was talked to via telephone.
"Ross has had a wide background in municipal law, particularly relating to litigation involving cities and particularly relating to problems involving at-large elections as well as single-member district elections," Bass said.
And, he added, "I believe he'll be able to build on what other Lubbock city attorneys have laid and that under his direction our city legal department will do a fine job for the citizens."

According to his resume, 13 of Ross' 19 years of practice have been in the municipal law field.
After graduating from the University of Texas at El Paso with a business administration degree and from the University of Arizona with a law degree, Ross became assistant county attorney for El Paso County.
After one year at that job, he left to become assistant city attorney for several years before entering private practice for four years.
From 1967 to 1974, Ross was assistant city attorney for El Paso. In 1974, he became the city attorney.
He and his wife have two children.

Youth's Attorneys Await Ruling In Client's Case

Lubbock attorneys for a 16-year-old Aspermont youth, held here in connection with the Jan. 24 slaying of three members of an Aspermont family, are awaiting a Texas Supreme Court ruling that may allow their client to be tried as a juvenile.

A hearing to determine whether the youth should be tried as an adult originally was scheduled for Wednesday, but Judge William P. Rathiff granted a defense motion for continuance, which postponed the hearing until April 13.

In the meantime, Lubbock attorneys Clifford and Mike Brown are awaiting a Supreme Court ruling on their request for a writ of mandamus. The court has been asked to grant their motion for an adjudication hearing, in which the youngster would be tried as a juvenile.

Lawyer Mike Brown said Wednesday the motion essentially is a request for a speedy, juvenile trial.

Brown said both he and co-counsel, Clifford Brown, have presented "unusually unique" legal questions in the case that the motion must be heard directly by the Supreme Court, as an original, rather than appellate, action.

The motion for the writ of mandamus was filed with the state's Supreme Court on March 17, Brown said.

The young suspect has been in the Lubbock County Jail since Feb. 1, following an order by Judge Rathiff, who presided at a detention hearing for the youngster.

If the youngster were tried as a juvenile, he would circumvent the possibility of facing murder charges.

Early on the morning of Jan. 24, H. W. Swink, 38, general manager of the Stonewall County Feed and Supply store in Aspermont, his wife of four months, and his 14-year-old son from a previous marriage, were slain in their modest Aspermont home.

For the moment, the 16-year-old suspect has been accused of delinquency in connection with the shooting.

Rising Price Index Lowers Carter's Rating

By LOUIS HARRIS

The number of Americans who feel that the prices of most things they buy are going up faster now than they were a year ago has shot up to 59 percent from 49 percent only a month ago and 40 percent last July. This means that the recently reported increases in the price index are being deeply felt by Americans.

As a direct result of this increase in public concern over rising inflation, the rating that people give President Carter on "his handling of the economy" has now sunk to 72 percent negative and 24 percent positive. In 10 months, the public's confidence in the President's ability to handle the economy has dropped from 47 to 24 percent, while criticism of his economic stewardship has risen from 46 to 72 percent. It now appears that Carter is in real trouble with the public on what they see as the central bread-and-butter issue: how to control inflation.

When asked what they expect prices to be a year from now, 37 percent believe prices will be rising even faster than at present, with another 30 percent holding the view that prices will be going up at the current rate. Translated into actual price rises, this suggests that 2 out of 3 Americans would not be surprised to see the country in another round of double-digit inflation.

As a result of these pressures of high prices, a 52-35 percent majority now believes that the nation is in another recession, and by 48-30 percent, a majority feels that there will be a recession a year from now. A year ago, a narrow 37-34 percent plurality felt the country would not be in a recession at the present.

Basically, this recent Harris Survey of 1,199 adults nationwide reveals that the recent surge of prices has brought on a deepening sense of pessimism about the future of the economy. In the past, when people felt this way, there was a tendency for consumers to batten down the hatches and put any extra money they had into savings accounts rather than purchasing new items. Thus it can be expected that the present down mood about the economy may well lead to cautious consumer behavior that can put a serious dent into hopes for continued economic growth.

For President Carter, such consumer pessimism seriously undercuts his already weakened base of support among some of the traditional pillars of public backing for a Democratic president. Indeed, his latest rating among Democrats has sunk to 50-48 percent negative, down from 69-29 percent positive last July. Among union members, he now stands at 65-34 percent negative, a sharp turnaround from the 59-39 percent majority he had in this key group last July. Among those with incomes of $5,000-$10,000, he is now rated 54-44 percent negative, compared to the 60-35 percent positive standing eight months ago.

The clear and urgent message from the people to their President is to give a high priority to bringing inflation under control. This issue alone, if left unattended, could cause irreparable damage to Jimmy Carter, even though he has been in the White House only 14 months.

For a Democratic president, a loss of confidence in his economic stewardship can spell double trouble. Not only does it have an impact on public confidence in other domestic and international affairs, but also the groups most seriously affected tend to be lower income groups who usually vote solidly Democratic. It is not overstating the case to say that confidence in the economy is crucial for a Democrat in the White House.

Reasons Given For Food Costs, Farmers Losses

The Associated Press

Food prices are rising sharply. But the farmers who produce the food are striking because, they say, they are losing money. How come?

There are two reasons for the apparent contradiction. First, marketing costs. Second, agricultural diversity.

Marketing costs cover all those things that happen to food after it leaves the farm. They include labor costs, transportation, packaging and profits. In 1976, the latest year for which a complete breakdown is available, a little less than one-third of the $172 billion Americans spent for food produced on U.S. farms went to farmers, the Department of Agriculture says. The other two-thirds went for marketing costs.

Those figures, of course, are just an average. And that's where agricultural diversity comes in. Today's increases in retail food prices are due mainly to higher prices for items like beef — where producers get a larger-than-average share of consumers' food dollars. The farmers who are striking generally raise crops for products whose retail prices depend more on marketing costs than on farm value.

Here are some specifics: According to an analysis prepared by the USDA's Economic Research Service late last year, labor costs alone accounted for 31.6 percent of the food bill. That's only 1 percentage point less than the amount paid to farmers for the food in the first place.

Look at the figures another way: 32.6 cents of every dollar you spend on food goes to the farmer; 31.6 cents pays the salaries and fringe benefits of the men and women who get the food to market; 8.7 cents goes for transportation, 4.8 cents for corporate profits before taxes and 2.7 cents for business taxes. Depreciation on equipment, etc., takes 2.3 cents; 2 cents goes for rent; and 1.9 cents for advertising. The final 13.4 cents covers miscellaneous items such as fuel, interest costs, repair and bad debts. Total: 51.

The USDA study shows that marketing costs account for a smaller share of consumer spending on animal products than on crop products. Forty-four percent of the money spent on beef in 1976 went to farmers; that's almost 12 percentage points above the average. Forty percent of the money spent on pork and 47 percent of the money spent on poultry went to farmers. In contrast, only 29 percent of the money spent on fresh fruits and vegetables, 20 percent of the amount for processed fruits and vegetables and 13 percent of the cost of bakery products went to the farmers.

Last October, choice grade beef sold for $42.68 per 100 pounds at the stockyards; earlier this week, the price was $52.10. Prices paid for hogs reached $48.45 per 100 pounds, up $12.35 from a year ago.

It is these increases which have contributed to the boost in food prices — 1.2 percent in January and again in February, according to the Consumer Price Index. Beef prices went up 4.1 percent in February, while pork prices went up 2.6 percent.

Part of the problem in February was bad weather which made it difficult to get animals to market. Even without the storms, however, farmers have been selling fewer animals.

In 1975, there were 132 million cattle on U.S. ranch — a record. Prices dropped. Producers cut herds; they sold animals they normally would have kept for breeding. By January 1978, the cattle herd was below 116.3 million. The American Meat Institute says 3 percent less beef was produced in 1977 than in 1976; production this year is expected to be 2 percent below last year.

The huge harvests — which have kept grain prices low, causing farmers who raise these crops to strike — also have kept down prices for feed. And this too, has contributed to the decline in supply.

Ranchers are keeping animals on feed longer since grain-fattened steers brings higher prices. When the animals are sent to slaughter, prices for higher grades of meat may go down. But the meat institute says prices of hamburger and processed meats which come from the lower-grade cattle which is fed less grain will continue to go up. The increase in beef prices had been predicted; the boost in pork prices hadn't.

The experts had been saying hog supplies would increase because feed prices were low and because pork producers would take advantage of the beef situation to push their products. USDA figures released last week, however, showed that there were only 1 percent more hogs and pigs as of March 1 than there were a year ago; an increase of 11 percent had been expected. "We are astonished by the report," said Richard Lyng, president of the meat institute.

What happened? Supermarket News, a trade publication, quoted Robert Bellinghausen of the USDA as saying hog producers apparently anticipated that prices would decline as supplies increased. Instead of holding on to sows and breeding them or raising them to full growth, they sold the animals early, "figuring that they couldn't raise them to market size before the market dropped."

What's ahead? The USDA had been predicting that food prices would rise 4 to 6 percent this year, below last year's increase. Now, the department is talking about an 8 percent increase.

JAPAN ISLANDS EXPLAINED

The basin that created Japan's 300-mile-long Inland Sea is believed to have been formed by geological faults that split a single land mass into what are now the islands of Honshukyushu and Shikoku, reports National Geographic.

Computer System To Ease Mail Forwarding Process

By BOB CAMPBELL
Avalanche-Journal Staff

Three million times a year, Lubbock postal clerks have been having to sort through shoe box-like boxes to find forwarding addresses and pre-printed labels for letters piled up at their elbows.

Now, to the pride of postal officials and the relief of the clerks, the main post office is getting a computer system to do the job faster and more easily.

Eight of the 14 "mark-up" clerks will continue in the new $64,272 system, which is expected to pay for itself in saved man-hours in about 18 months.

The others will apply for openings in other departments. Lubbock will be the 16th of 52 cities to get a minicomputer, an operator keyboard with video display, a label printer and a storage area for disks on which address changes are recorded.

Lubbock is not among the 52 biggest cities in the country nor among the 52 with the heaviest mail volume, however. It was awarded the system apparently because of a study made by post office industrial engineer Bill Morris and a Texas Tech University student.

The computer and other equipment will be installed and ready for use by mid-September.

Don Boyd, post office finance director, said the study by Morris and Tech computer science major Bill Golden promised a 28.9-percent return on the investment within five years, which was well above the required 10 percent.

The system is designed to wear out in five years and be replaced.

Boyd added that the application had the further advantage of being the first submitted in the 11-state southern region of the postal service.

They turned in the study a year ago and were notified of the award this week.

"We're far from one of the 50 biggest cities," Boyd said, "and I think the project they worked up got us into this program."

The three million pieces of mail that have to be forwarded in Lubbock this year will be less than two percent of the 176 million letters and parcels handled by Lubbock postmen.

"It staggers the mind to think of how much mail is handled," Boyd said.

Morris said he and Golden, now a postal inspector trainee in Washington, D.C., emphasized the high rate of return in the study.

The $6.3-million contract award to Sigma Data Computing Corp. of Rockville, Md., was made by the Postal Service in Washington after tests in Long Beach and Santa Ana, Calif. Morris said the tests indicate a per-piece cost reduction from 7.5 cents with present manual systems to about 4.6 cents by using computers.

The new systems will allow postal workers to retrieve the address of a new resident on a postal route and attach a printed label bearing his new address.

Labels now are printed on a separate machine, but the new system will print them automatically for the required address.

Bell Request Gains Another Opponent

A-J Correspondent

PLAINVIEW — A request by Southwestern Bell Telephone for a statewide rate increase has gained another opponent — the Plainview City Council.

Councilmen Tuesday agreed to pay $477.40 to the Texas Municipal League as the city's share of the cost of TML's opposition to the hike. The assessment, according to Mayor Bob Wayland, has been made to all TML-member cities who are served by Bell at 2.5 cents per capita based on the 1970 census.

In a drive to gain local input for the state public hearing on the rate increase, set for May 22 in Austin by the Public Utilities Commission, councilmen have scheduled a public hearing on the local implication of the requested rate increase for April 11. The hearing will be held during the next regular city council meeting.

The action concerning Bell's request surfaced when councilmen noted that Bell had formerly filed an application with the city for authority to change rates. According to that filing, the requested rate change would raise the monthly base rate for one party residents in Plainview from $5.25 to $6.10 and two party residents from $3.40 to $3.65. Rates for a one party business would be raised from $11.25 to $13.05.

A proven, effective councilman who is decisive, not divisive.

Having considered thousands of issues important to all the people of Lubbock during his past four years on the City Council, Alan Henry has demonstrated calm judgement and maturity in hard decisions. It's impossible to please all the people all the time in any business, especially in city government, but Alan has done an outstanding job of working effectively for the future of Lubbock and its people, without flamboyance or selfish motives.

Alan Henry has been active in all types of worthwhile civic work for many years before joining the City Council, always holding the overall future of our city most important. Contrast Alan's background and attitude with that of his opponent who does not pay his city-school personal property tax because he is "not particularly for that tax."

Hints from Heloise

DEAR HELOISE:

When we put in our shower we had to cover a casement window in the middle of the tub.

We put the window curtain on a spring rod in the offset, then put a shower curtain on a spring rod that we pull across the window and back wall, and both are protected when showering.

After the shower curtain dries we push it back so the light from the window can come in. — D. Stanley

DEAR HELOISE:

What toddler doesn't love playing in a sandbox?

After shopping around for one, I found them to be too small, poorly constructed and too expensive! So I ended up purchasing a 50-inch plastic (not the inflatable kind) swimming pool.

It's large enough to accommodate three or four toddlers, it's very sturdy and was one-third the cost! I put ours in a shady spot to protect little ones from the hot sun. — Margi Lykowski

DEAR HELOISE:

Save all aluminum pie plates of any size for picnic plates and serving trays on outings, spoon rests or collecting peelings and trash around the kitchen. Reuse many times. — Helen Connolly

DEAR HELOISE:

Here is a bit of help to the people who have no teeth (or just a few).

I'm gradually getting my teeth pulled, and simply love radishes. My husband felt sorry for me because I wasn't able to eat them.

Well, he came upon a grand solution for me. He grated them. Now I can enjoy those so tempting radishes that I couldn't bite into otherwise. — Mrs. Otis J. Silkwood

Why not?

We grate, grind and shred all kinds of raw vegetables. So why not radishes? They'll taste the same.

They're little bagers though, so if using a hand grater, watch those fingers! — Heloise

DEAR HELOISE:

I read your column every day. Some hints I already know, but have learned lots from you — so here's one from me.

My granddaughter, age 3, wanted to color eggs last week! I had just made an omelet, so I took the empty eggshells, washed and dried them.

I put some food coloring in water in plastic margarine cups and spread newspaper on the kitchen table. With a small brush, Monica had lots of fun with the whole set-up.

Now I'm saving empty eggshells for some future painting time! — "Happy" Grandma

THIS COLUMN is written for you...the homemaker. If you have a hint or a problem write to Heloise, 235 E. 45th St., New York, N.Y. 10017. Because of the tremendous volume of mail, Heloise is unable to answer individual letters. She will, however, answer your questions in her column whenever possible.

Pork Producers Develop New Chop Look

By SUSANNE SCHAFER

DES MOINES, Iowa (AP) — Iowa pork producers have come up with a new look for the chop which is designed to make it a regular on the restaurant circuit.

"Look out New York Strip, here comes the IOWA chop," reads the national advertising campaign slogan for that new look.

"The term Iowa Chop is intended to show quality. We want it to be seen as the Cadillac of pork," said Russ Sanders of the Iowa Development Commission.

The new look is a chop at least one and one-half inches thick that weighs between 12 and 14 ounces per serving.

The cut is trademarked and Sanders has invested $20,000 in the national advertising campaign.

"It's so big you can see what the fellow next to you is cutting into," said George Karrell, director of product quality for Holiday Inn Corp., Memphis, Tenn.

ANN LANDERS

Dear Ann Landers: My mother died a couple of years ago and Dad lives in Florida. He has been seeing a widow for several months. They are both in their late 50s and seem to enjoy each other's company a lot.

Last week Dad told me the two of them are planning to take a cross-country trip together to visit her children. Then they will come West and visit my brother and me. He says they will stay in the guest room. (It has one large bed!)

We are happy Dad is not lonely any more, but we don't know what to say to our friends or the children about the obvious living arrangement. The children (both in college) know their father and I would never sanction their bringing home a live-in roommate of the opposite sex. Yet, grandpa is doing that very thing.

Shall I tell my father I can't have him and his lady friend in my home sharing the same bed? Should I suggest they stay in a nearby motel? Please give me a hand with this. I am — Befuddled

Dear Fud: It's your home and you and your husband are entitled to make the rules. If you don't want your father and his lady friend sharing the same bed under your roof, just explain that you have made reservations for them at a nearby motel. No need to make any comments (or excuses) to your friends or children. You are not responsible for your father's conduct.

Dear Ann Landers: Last week you published a letter from a woman who was stunned by the "condolences" some people pay. It brought back memories.

Nearly 25 years ago our dear mother passed away suddenly. We received relatives and friends at the mortuary. Everything went smoothly until one woman asked my father, in a voice that could have cut through steel, if he had plans for a certain piece of furniture. She had admired it for years and would be glad to "take it off his hands." He replied, "I'm not gone yet. Besides, we have four married children."

Then this cloy asked, "How old was Mary?" Dad, in a voice louder than hers, shouted, "You should know. You went all through school together — starting in kindergarten."

Tell people if they can't say something gracious, like, "She was a fine friend and I shall cherish the good times we had together," or "I'll truly miss her" — SHUT UP. Better still stay home and send a message of sympathy. — Been There

Dear Been: Too bad some folks have no idea how they're coming across. They are more to be pitied than censured.

Dear Ann Landers: I've got to say this before I blow a gasket. It doesn't apply to all young people, but it sure does include a lot of them.

They jog, run cross-country, engage in marathons, play basketball, football, tennis, hockey, soccer, squash, racketball, swim, pole vault and can dance all night. They can also stand up at a bar for hours. But when they get on a bus, a train or a subway they are glued to their seats.

There is no sign of concern for the elderly, a pregnant woman or a mother with a child in her arms — or even a person on crutches.

I ask you — is this the Future of America? I shudder at the thought of it. What do YOU think? — Quo Vadis

Dear Quo: I think you are drawing conclusions from a very narrow sampling. At least I hope so. The young people I see don't act like that.

TO YOUR GOOD HEALTH

BY

DR. GEORGE C. THOSTESON

Dear Dr. Thosteson: Please explain what perthes or leg perthes disease is. What causes it and what is the cure? My 7-year-old grandson has it, and I know it has something to do with the hip. I am so anxious for your answer. — R.T.

It's spelled Legg-Perthes, and it is a disorder of the long bone of the thigh. For reasons that are not clear there is a disturbance in blood circulation in the area which causes a deformity of the bone at its upper end. It is most common in youngsters between 4 and 10 years, and in boys more than girls.

The onset may be as early as two years, and the chief sign is a limp with or without pain. The limp may disappear for periods and return. The earlier the treatment, the better. The prospect seems to be better for boys.

Untreated, there is a deformity of the hip. Taking the weight off it and use of a cast, usually a walking cast, help allow the bone to repair itself. In some cases, surgery may shorten the period of immobility. It is difficult for both parents and youngsters because children are usually full of vim and vitality at these ages. X-rays help distinguish L-P disease from tuberculosis of the bone, with which it can be confused. L-P youngsters tend to be generally quite healthy.

You may find references to this condition under "osteochondritis of the hip," should you want further reading. The outlook is uncertain, depending on the degree of involvement of the epiphysis (the growing end) of the bone.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I get along great on my weight-loss diet as far as the meals are concerned. What ruins me are the between-meals snacks. Any suggestions on how to beat that? — J.D.

Well, if you have to snack, make it the least expensive (calorie-wise) you can. On page 33 of the booklet on reducing you ask for, you'll find a list of 15 or so low-calorie snack foods you can try. For a copy, send 50 cents and a stamped, self-addressed envelope to Dr. Thosteson, P.O. Box 11210, Chicago, Ill. 60611. Problem with snacks is illustrated by the famous cracker nibbler. A cracker alone contains only from 10 to 20 calories, not enough to ruin any diet. But who stops at one or two? The half dozen eaten by the snacker adds up to more than 100 calories. There successful dieting. The booklet's called "Lost Secrets of Reducing."

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I think you will be afraid to print this letter because you'd be afraid of losing your job. You really have no knowledge of the good that vitamins and minerals can do. You are always knocking them...I dare you to print this. — Anonymous.

I have shortened your letter considerably. I wonder why some folks get so evangelistic about such things as vitamins, which need little defense. We all agree they are vital, and in fact, the very name implies that.

Well, the point is that I am not afraid of printing your letter or of losing my job, as you say. The fact is that I love vitamins. I don't appreciate some of the wild claims made by folks whose chief interest is selling them, though. That's the difference. I am even attempting to put together a new booklet extolling the virtues of the humble vitamin (A,B,C,D,E, or what have you). It's not available yet.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: Can I get pregnant? I am 55 and haven't menstruated for a year and nine months. I am worried. Would a doctor think I am silly if I wanted to have a pregnancy test? — N.N.

From what you tell me, I'd say you can forget about being pregnant. No chance. As far as this concern about being thought silly, consider yourself in a large company. Your question is one of the most often asked of me by menopausal women — year in and year out.

For a comprehensive discussion of how to cope with the change of life, write to Dr. Thosteson, P.O. Box 11210, Chicago, Ill. 60611, for his invaluable booklet, "Make Menopause Easier." Enclose a long self-addressed, stamped envelope and 35 cents.

"I wanted to bid six notrump," groaned the Unlucky Expert. "My partners always misplay slams, but how could I tell that he held enough so that we didn't need to ruff something somewhere?"

We don't usually sympathize with our unfortunate friend. Most of the time he brings his troubles down on his own head, but this time he just couldn't really do anything except suffer.

It seems that South drew triumphs, cashed his ace and king of clubs, took dummy's two hearts in order to discard the 10 of clubs from his own hand and led a third club from dummy. After this interesting start the combination of four clubs to the queen in the West hand and four diamonds to the queen-jack held by East, left South one trick short of his contract and North one mile short in his temper.

As anyone who looks can see there are 12 top tricks at either spades or notrump. South should simply have played out his 10 of clubs after taking the ace and king and been sure of five trumps, two hearts, two diamonds and three clubs.

½ tsp. ground nutmeg
½ tsp. baking soda
¼ tsp. ground cloves
¼ tsp. salt
2½ cups grated carrots
1 cup coarsely chopped pecans
1 cup confectioners sugar
2 tbsp. lemon juice
Preheat oven to 350 degrees.

In large bowl, blend sugar with oil; beat in eggs one at a time. Add flour, instant tea powder, baking powder, cinnamon, nutmeg, baking soda, cloves, and salt; mix thoroughly. Fold in 2 cups carrots and pecans.

Pour into greased and floured 10-inch tube pan or Bundt pan and bake 70 minutes or until cake tests done. On wire rack, cool 15 minutes; remove from pan and cool completely before glazing.

Meanwhile, in small bowl, combine confectioners sugar and lemon juice; drizzle over cake. Top with remaining carrots and garnish, if desired, with pecan halves.

Scotch Eggs Use Easter Leftovers

NEW YORK (UPI) — Try Scotch eggs as a good way to use up leftovers from Easter. They're not only quick and easy to make, they taste good hot, warm or cold, accompanied by milk or coffee or tea or beer.

In "The Highlander's Cookbook," author Sheila MacNiven Cameron writes that the traditional coating of ground ham, anchovies and spices has been replaced in modern times by sausage meat. The book, now out of print, was published by Ward Ritchie Press of Pasadena, Calif.

Here is Mrs. Cameron's recipe: boil 4 eggs until hard. Peel, cool and dry them. Beat 1 raw egg with a fork only until white and yolk are blended. Divide 1 pound of bulk pork sausage into quarters and pat each into an oval a scant half inch thick. Dip boiled eggs, one at a time, into the beaten egg and mold 1 portion of sausage around each one. Dip again into beaten egg and then roll in dry bread crumbs to coat evenly. Place each egg as prepared on a dry plate large enough to hold all 4 without touching. Refrigerate, uncovered, at least 30 minutes to set coating.

Preheat deep fat to 375 degrees. Add eggs 1 or 2 at a time, depending on the size of your fryer, and reduce temperature gauge to 350 degrees immediately. Too many cold eggs added at once reduces the fat temperature so fast the quality of the coating suffers. Fry the eggs 5 to 7 minutes, turning to brown evenly. Drain on paper towels.

Serve whole or slice horizontally into rounds and serve on toast or melba toast.

Job Interview Tips Given By Expert

WASHINGTON (AP) — Going out on a job interview? You can make it or blow it, depending on the impression you leave with the interviewer, according to an official of the Association of Independent Colleges and Schools.

"With good jobs hard to find, you can't afford to make a mistake before the employer even considers you for a position," says Stephen B. Friedheim, executive vice president of the AICS. The association has some 500 institutions, all specialists in preparing thousands of men and women each year for jobs in the business world.

Here are their tips for making that job interview work for you:

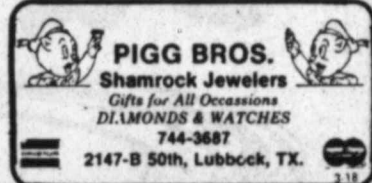

Know the time of your appointment and keep it. If you are going to be even a minute late, call ahead. Officials have other interviews besides yours, and there is other work to do, so don't make their job harder by not getting there on time.

Know your past history. Every firm requires a completed application form stipulating your previous jobs, your education, your interests and your skills. Have this information clearly in mind so that you can easily fill out their forms.

Know the job you are seeking. Make sure that you know enough about the job to demonstrate during the interview that you can handle it. Learn about the job and the firm in advance of the interview so that you can demonstrate that you made an extra effort to gain knowledge which you could put to work as soon as you are hired.

Know your salary needs. Don't be shy where dollars are concerned, that's your money they're talking about. Have a figure in your mind and be prepared to go down to a certain figure, but no lower.

Know how to respond to questions about your last position. Be candid about why you left your last job or why you are seeking a new position while still employed. If you had a personality clash, say so, but don't put down your last employer, even if he was a storm trooper and the organization was a den of thieves.

How Area Congressmen Voted In Recent Roll-Call Tabulations

By Roll Call Report
WASHINGTON — Here's how area members of Congress were recorded on major roll call votes Mar. 17 thru 23.

HOUSE
CAMPAIGN FINANCING Refused, 198 to 209, to bring to the floor HR 11315, a bill making major changes in the Federal Election Campaign Act of 1971. Most of the changes were aimed at reducing the money political parties and political action committees can contribute to House and Senate candidates, and at limiting the money spent by such candidates to gain election. Had the bill been brought to the floor for debate, an amendment to begin partial public financing of congressional campaigns would have been offered.

The bill was drafted by the Democratic-controlled Administration Committee. Much opposition centered on the fact that the Republican party, which traditionally raises much more congressional campaign money than the Democratic party, was widely seen as having been unfairly penalized by the proposed cut in campaign spending.

Rep. Frank Thompson, D-N.J., a supporter, said: "To vote against this bill now would be to perpetuate the influence of special interest money at the expense of the individual citizen and, second, it would be to deny the House its right to debate the question of partial public financing."

Rep. James Quillen, R-Tenn., an opponent, said: "What we have a case of here is an attempt on the part of some members of the majority to alter the political process in such a way as to deny the minority a fair chance of becoming the majority."

Members voting "yea" favored calling the bill up for debate.

Reps. Jim Mattox (D-5), Bob Eckhardt (D-8), James Wright (D-12), John Young (D-14), Barbara Jordan (D-18), and George Mahon (D-19) voted "yea."

Reps. Samuel Hall (D-1), Charles Wilson (D-2), James Collins (R-3), Ray Roberts (D-4), Bill Archer (R-7), Jack Brooks (D-9), Jake Pickle (D-10), W. R. Poage (D-11), Jack Hightower (D-13), Kika de la Garza (D-15), Richard White (D-16), Omar Burleson (D-17), Henry Gonzales (D-20), Robert Krueger (D-21), Bob Gammage (D-22), Abraham Kazen (D-23), Dale Milford (D-24), Manuel Lujan (N.M., R-1), and Harold Runnels (N.M., D-2) voted "nay."

Rep. Olin Teague (D-6) did not vote.

EDUCATION AID Rejected, 156 to 218, a bill providing the middle-class with more federal aid to defray tuition at colleges and other post-secondary schools.

The main thrust of HR 11274 was to change the formula for awarding federal grants under the Basic Educational Opportunity Grant Program. Poverty students would continue to be major beneficiaries of the program, but under the bill a broader range of middle-income students would also become eligible for the federal grants.

During brief discussion on the floor, no supporters or opponents spoke on the merits of the bill.

The Democratic leadership, the administration and other supporters generally regarded direct grants to middle-income students as the best vehicle for easing the middle-class tuition crunch.

Opponents generally favored the Republican plan of providing tax credits rather than grants to offset tuition costs. Opponents also objected to the short-cut parliamentary procedure (no amendments allowed, two-thirds majority required for passage) under which the Democratic leadership had brought HR 11274 to the floor.

Members voting "yea" favored the bill. Roberts, Mattox, Eckhardt, Brooks, Pickle, Poage, Hightower, Jordan, Majon, Gonzalez and Kazen voted "yea."

Hall, Collins, Archer, de la Garza, White, Burleson, Gammage, Milford and Lujan voted "nay."

Runnels, Wilson, Teague, Wright, Young and Krueger did not vote.

FARM BILL Voted, 224 to 167, in opposition to the so-called "flexible parity" provision for farmers. This vote tabled an effort to have House conferees go along with Senate language implementing flexible parity. It came as the House considered an emergency relief bill aimed at easing the financial plight of farmers.

The bill, now in House-Senate conference, would boost farm income by such measures as increased price supports. It is opposed by the Administration as inflationary.

Flexible parity would enable a wheat, feed grain or cotton farmer to set his own price support levels up to 100 percent of parity, with the actual level dependent on how much land he agrees to take out of production. It would raise 1978 market prices of those crops.

No supporter of tabling spoke during debate. An opponent of tabling, Rep. Robert Bauman, R-Md., said: "With all the many problems facing our farmers, the least we can do is to permit full debate on the parity issue...It is an insult to American farmers to treat this issue in such a cavalier manner."

Members voting "yea" were opposed to including flexible parity provision in the emergency 1978 farm bill.

Mattox, Eckhardt, Brooks, Poage, Wright, de la Garza, Jordan, Mahon, Gonzales voted "yea."

Hall, Collins, Archer, Pickle, Hightower, Young, Burleson, Krueger, Gammage, White, Lujan, and Runnels voted "nay."

Wilson, Roberts, Teague, and Milford did not vote.

SENATE
FARM BILL Passed, 67 to 26, the Emergency Agricultural Act of 1978, a measure aimed at improving the 1978 income of farmers. Among many provisions, it raised price support and subsidy levels on grains and cotton, enabled farmers to gain immediate cash by setting aside more acreage, and provided for "flexible parity" linking price support levels to the amount of acreage set aside. The bill (HR 6782) was sent to conference with the House, where its future was uncertain.

Sen. George McGovern, D-S.D., a supporter, said the bill "addresses itself in the short range to the present emergency by pumping an estimated $2.3 billion into the hands of farmers quickly in return for their agreement to lay aside land."

Sen. Edmund Muskie, D-Maine, an opponent, said the bill would cost consumers at the supermarket, and added that bills approved "under the pressure of emotion and urgency" usually create "side effects that were worse than the original problems."

Senators voting "yea" favored the emergency farm bill.

Sen. Lloyd Bentsen (D), John Tower (R), Harrison Schmitt (R, N.M.) and Peter Domenici (R, N.M.) voted "yea."

PANAMA CANAL Rejected, 39 to 45, an amendment to the proposed Panama Canal Treaty. It sought to prohibit the introduction of any military force, other than that of the U.S. and Panama, into Panama between now and 2000. It was considered as the Senate approached a late-April final vote on the second and final proposed treaty, which would relinquish U.S. control of the canal in 2000.

Sen. John Melcher, D-Mont., a supporter, said his discussions with Gen. Omar Torrijos and other Panamanian leaders indicated "this is exactly what the treaty meant, that there would not be any other troops between now and the year 2000...in Panama."

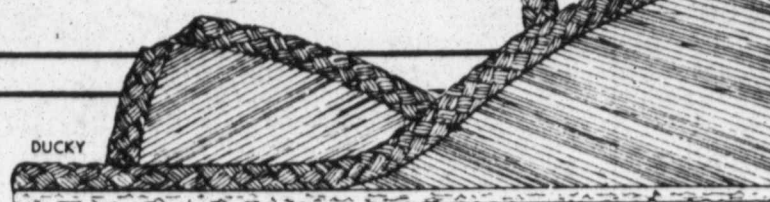

Sen. Frank Church, D-Idaho, an opponent, said that "if you have a good neighbor, you do not ask that neighbor to protect the neighborhood by promising you in writing not to let the Mafia use his house. For 75 years, Panama has been a good neighbor."

Senators voting "yea" favored the amendment.

Bentsen, Tower, Schmitt and Domenici voted "yea."

New Construction Value Shows Gain

NEW YORK (AP) — The value of new construction, paced by a large jump in commercial building, registered a 24 percent gain in February from a year earlier, according to a survey released Wednesday.

The F.W. Dodge Division of McGraw Hill Information Systems Inc. said total new construction came to $9.69 billion in February compared with $7.79 billion a year earlier.

The dollar amount was little changed from new construction in January, valued at $9.42 billion by the Dodge survey.

The Dodge index, a measure of construction activity adjusted for inflation and seasonal differences, registered at 266 in February, down slightly from 270 in January. The index uses a 1967 base of 100 for comparison.

The survey of construction in the 50 states found that housing construction slowed from year-earlier levels because of weather problems but construction of commercial and public buildings, as measured by the value of contracts, rose 60 percent.

New construction of non-residential buildings came to $2.90 billion, in February from $1.82 billion in the 1977 period.

"The $4 billion released by the federal government during the final months of 1977 to create jobs in construction had a strong but brief impact on the otherwise dormant categories of schools, hospitals and other non-residential buildings," said George A. Christie, chief economist for the Dodge Division.

He predicted a continued high level of new construction for the next few months.

Sons Of American Revolution Society To Hold Convention

The 82nd annual convention of the Texas Society of the Sons of the American Revolution here Friday and Saturday will be highlighted by talks by the president of the national society and by a member of a pioneer West Texas family.

More than 140 SAR members and their wives from over the state are expected to attend the first Lubbock meeting of the Texas organization, said R.P. Swofford, president of Lubbock's Texas Tech chapter of SAR and chairman of the convention committee.

Registration for the event at the Holiday Inn, 6624 Ave. H, will begin at 2 p.m. Friday, followed by the opening session at 5 p.m.

Saturday convention sessions will begin at 9 a.m. Among the day's highlights will be a 12:30 p.m. luncheon address by guest speaker U.S. Army Brig. Gen. (Ret.) Albert R. Brownfield of Brownfield.

Speaker for Saturday's 7:30 p.m. banquet will be Wilson King Barnes of Baltimore, Md., president of the National Society of SAR.

"We are pleased to have both gentlemen as special convention guests," Swofford said. "Mr. Barnes is an easterner who is making his first visit to West Texas, and Gen. Brownfield is a native who, after a worldwide military career has returned home to live."

Brownfield is a member of the pioneer ranching family for whom the Terry County city of Brownfield is named. He attended West Point from 1936 to 1939, commanded a tank destroyer battalion in Europe during World War II and later served in Laos and Vietnam. His last military assignment was deputy inspector general of the U.S. Army.

Mr. and Mrs. Larry Williams of 3323 Toledo Ave., Apt. 5, on the birth of a son weighing 8 pounds, one ounce, at 4:28 p.m. Monday in Methodist Hospital.

Barnes, now a Baltimore lawyer, has served as associate judge of the Maryland Court of Appeals, associate judge of the supreme bench of Baltimore, secretary and member of the Maryland Board of Law Examiners and professor of contracts with the University of Baltimore.

Officials of the state SAR group and its area chapters to be present include Maj. Gen. (Ret.) Louis J. Rumaggi of Dallas, president of the Texas Society, SAR; Adrien F. Drouilhet of Baytown; secretary-treasurer of the Texas Society; C. Boone McClure of Canyon, vice president of Texas SAR Dist. 2; and Dr. Allen Early of Amarillo, president of the Panhandle-Plains chapter.

The national SAR society was organized in 1889 in New York by 20 delegates from a dozen states. All of the men were direct descendants of participants in the American Revolution.

The Texas society was formed a few years later, and in the mid-1940s the late Dr. Clifford B. Jones of Lubbock organized the Texas Tech chapter of SAR.

Officials say the general purpose of the SAR is to encourage the study of American history by acquiring research materials, preserving records and landmarks and by marking American Revolution scenes with appropriate memorials.

The local group also awards bronze medals to outstanding members of ROTC units at Texas Tech University, Estacado and Lubbock High Schools.

GENERAL TENDENCIES: The early morning is your best time so you would be wise to try to accomplish as much as possible at this time. A new plan of action could bring much success in the days ahead.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Daytime is fine for meeting interesting personalities and studying new outlets. Don't ask for favors of anyone at this particular time.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Be sure not to invest too heavily in anything today. Your mate may not be in a good mood, but the planets are not favorable. Be patient.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) If you handle routine tasks early in the day you'll have time for more important duties later. Take needed health treatments.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) If you handle routine tasks early in the day you'll have more time for important matters later. Take needed health treatments.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) Handle important duties early since the aspects are more difficult later in the day. Take no chances with your reputation at this time.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Take no risks of any kind, whether at home or at work. Use that smile more and avoid possible misunderstanding with others.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Morning is the best time for correspondence and calling on the phone. Be sure not to overspend for recreation in the evening.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Handle monetary affairs early since later your thinking may be muddled. Avoid one who is detrimental to your best interests.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Not a good day to attend group affairs, but if unavoidable, be careful and use caution. Express happiness with loved one.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Dec. 31) You may think you have so much to do you want to throw in the sponge, but apply yourself and the tasks are soon behind you.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Seek the cooperation of associates and then get busy and accomplish much. Avoid the social as much as you can now.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Be sure not to disturb anyone who has power over your monetary matters. Don't take any chances with the law and avoid trouble.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY... he or she will be carefree and happy in life but upon reaching maturity will have to grapple with the vicissitudes of life, so direct education along troubleshooting lines for best results. Don't neglect good spiritual training.

Tom Wolfe Slates Tech Speech

Noted journalist and writer Tom Wolfe will speak on "The ME Decade" at 8:15 p.m. Tuesday in the Texas Tech University Center Theatre.

Tickets are on sale at the UC Ticket-booth and will be available at the door the evening of the speech. Tickets are $2 for Tech students with identification and $3 for the general public.

Wolfe will discuss American society's recent preoccupation with self. He feels that people see themselves too much as individual, not as part of society or the life stream.

Praised for his style and keen wit, Wolfe is well-known for his books, The Kandy-Colored Tangerine-Flake Streamline Baby, published in 1965, and The Pump House Gang and The Electric Kool-Aid Acid Test, published simultaneously in 1968.

He has continued to satirize American society in his other books, such as The Painted Word, about modern art, and Radical Chic and Mau-Mauing the Flak Catchers, in which he predicted the wave of hostage-taking.

Wolfe, raised in Richmond, Va., was graduated from Washington and Lee University, and took his doctorate at Yale.

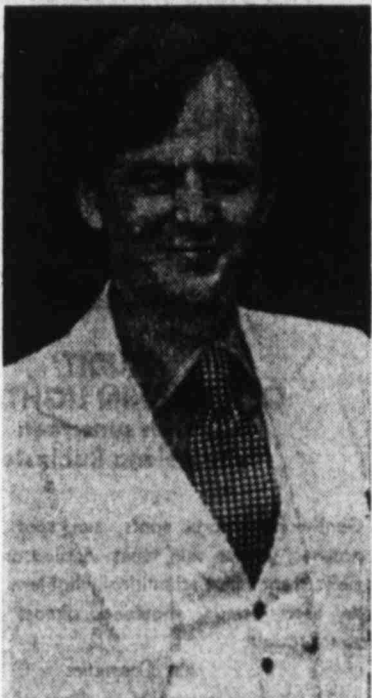

He has worked as a reporter for the Washington Post and the New York Herald Tribune and has written extensively for the New York Magazine as well as for Esquire and Harper's Bazaar.

Wolfe's speech will top off "The ME Decade" Symposium, being held Thursday through Tuesday. The symposium is being presented by UC Activities and will take place in the University Center.

There will be panel discussions on marketing's approach to the individual, human rights and the rights of society, and the new religious wave's effect on the individual.

More information on symposium activities can be obtained by calling the University Center Cultural Events Office.

Teacher Challenges Retirement Law

BRIDGEPORT, Conn. (AP) — People don't "become imbeciles" when they turn 70, says a 70-year-old Westport, Conn. science teacher who has filed a suit challenging the constitutionality of the state's mandatory retirement law for teachers.

Tafel, who turned 70 on March 16, charged in an interview Tuesday that the law is "wasteful and discriminatory." He added that he wants to teach as long as he can be effective. When asked how long that might be, he responded, "It is in the lap of the gods."

Deteriorating Highways Confront U.S. Drivers

WASHINGTON (AP) — Many of America's streets and highways are going to pot.

Frequent freezes and thaws of last winter made them worse, and a highway trade organization estimates there now are 116 million potholes around the country. Put them all together, it says, and you have a crater one-quarter mile in diameter and 50 feet deep.

That's in addition to cracked and fractured pavement, worn out shoulders, washboard rural roads and tens of thousands of defective bridges.

Deteriorating roads have caused accidents and deaths and raised hob with autos. Farmers complain it's costing them more to transport their goods to market, with resulting higher consumer costs.

Truckers Stage Protest
Hundreds of truckers earlier this month staged a 10-hour slowdown on Interstate 70 in Pennsylvania, protesting potholes that broke springs and flattened tires.

In West Virginia, bad roads last year

Council Candidate Stevens Proposes Odd Hour Repairing

Place 1 city council candidate Mike Stevens Wednesday proposed that the city initiate an evening street repair program to avoid interrupting daytime traffic flow.

Stevens, who lists an improved traffic system as a campaign plank, elaborated on that theme at a news conference by saying, "Imagine the congestion it will cause when (street repair) work begins."

He referred specifically to work at 4th Street and Boston Avenue, an intersection he says is rife with potholes.

Stevens also advocated using concrete or other strong base materials for repairs. The change, he said, would save tax money in the long run because maintenance crews would not have to repeatedly repair the same intersections after freezing weather.

It costs more to re-patch the sites every year, he said.

Stevens said he does not blame the street department for poor thoroughfares. "The street department is doing the best they can with what they have to work with," he said.

Street conditions are improving but they are "still poor for the $64 million budget," Stevens said. He added that when his opponent, Alan Henry, became a Place 3 councilman four years ago, the city budget was less than half of what it currently is.

prompted a wildcat strike by coal miners. In New York City, union leaders complain that many bridges are in such terrible shape that repair crews are in danger.

As a result, highway users and builders are pressing for a huge, long-lasting federal program to rehabilitate and maintain the nation's streets and highways. The Carter administration appears willing to go far in that direction.

$270 Billion Invested
The United States has invested more than $270 billion in its road system. But much of the 3.8-million-mile network has existed more than 60 years. More than half of it — 2 million miles — is not paved.

The Federal Highway Administration estimates that roads and streets are wearing out 50 percent faster than they are being replaced and that 900,000 miles of roads urgently need repairing or upgrading. A total of 105,500 bridges — almost one in every five — are classified as rickety, too narrow for safety or otherwise deficient.

Even the interstate highway system, the pride of the nation, is in trouble.

When work began in 1957, the entire 42,500-mile interstate system was to have been completed in 1972 at a projected cost of $37.5 billion. Today, about 38,700 miles are open and another 3,200 are under construction. Work has not begun on segments totaling about 600 miles.

So far, $63.7 billion has been spent, and Transportation Secretary Brock Adams estimates the price for the full network will be $104.3 billion, or about $800 for every licensed driver in the United States.

Costs Balloon
The cost has ballooned because of improved standards, inflation and numerous delays.

Some interstate segments are now two decades old and are beginning to crumble — some because of shoddy construction, some because they have surpassed the average 16-year life of a paved road, and others because of punishment dealt by heavier-than-anticipated traffic.

An industry group, Protect America's Roads, estimates that 28,000 miles of interstate do not meet current highway standards, especially safety standards, and that 5,000 miles are badly in need of resurfacing.

Some of the worst interstate stretches are near Pittsburgh, Washington, D.C., and Detroit, and in Iowa and eastern Pennsylvania.

The federal government is committed to financing 90 percent of interstate highway construction costs. The states are to pick up the remainder and maintain the highways.

States Plead Poverty
But the states say they can't afford the repair task. One reason is that they have lost $2.3 billion in gasoline-tax revenues since 1974 because of the 55 mph speed limit and the slackening of auto travel after the Arab oil embargo.

To offset this loss, many states have tried to increase highway funds by raising gasoline taxes. Of 31 such attempts in legislatures last year, only 8 succeeded.

The Carter administration seems resigned to the fact that in the years ahead substantial federal funds will have to be committed to highway maintenance and rehabilitation.

Secretary Adams has proposed winding up the interstate program quickly and moving on into road rehabilitation.

City Officials Fear $8.3 Billion Not Enough

WASHINGTON (AP) — Some city officials, looking at how President Carter's new urban policy actually will work, say the $8.3 billion plan may not carry enough money.

Says a New York city official: "We like what we see, but I've got to tell you — $8.3 billion wouldn't save the South Bronx, let alone the rest of urban America."

While Carter's proposed new spending or tax breaks for local businesses seems like a lot, it must be spread out among the nation's 18,500 cities, towns or villages.

Administration officials, sensitive to criticism that the urban plan includes actual spending of just $742 million next year, stress the 150 program changes that Carter has ordered. "There is a lot more here than just money," says one official.

Nevertheless, the spotlight is on the spending proposals, which will go to Congress soon.

An informal survey of planning officials in Boston, Milwaukee, Detroit and Peoria, Ill., indicates a substantial and increasing need for federal aid, especially among older cities whose eroding tax bases make it difficult to raise local revenues.

Larry Frishman, planning director in Peoria, says his city will apply for a share of the $4.5 billion that Carter earmarked to stimulate business activity in distressed areas.

"We're an old city, trying to redevelop our downtown area," Frishman said. His first-blush evaluation of the Carter plan:

"I'm afraid there doesn't seem to be much money in it. It looks underfunded for our purposes."

One example of how city needs outstrip the president's plan is in Boston, where housing aide Andrew Olins said the city needs $6 million to $12 million for home rehabilitation loans, which Carter wants to expand nationally to $150 million.

"Weigh our needs against the national total and you sense the disparity," Olins says.

Carter also is urging $150 million in a new federal effort to develop urban parks and recreation.

"In context, the parks fund is blood from a rock, and I for one am grateful," says one city parks director who asked that he not be named. "But I have to tell you, the money won't go far. Everyone is going to want a piece."

Milwaukee's deputy city planning commissioner, John Bechler, says his city just built four day-and-night basketball courts in a housing project at a cost of $50,000.

Health care is another example. Boston says it needs $12 million a year to run its extensive network of neighborhood-based health clinics properly. This year the city is spending $5 million to support 24 facilities. Hospitals director David Rosenblum says glumly, "Trouble is, we're going broke doing it, and we're meeting only half the need of Boston's poor."

Parents Win Control Of Tot's Treatment

HINGHAM, Mass. (UPI) — A district court judge Wednesday dismissed a "care and protection" suit filed by a Massachusetts hospital, giving Diane and Gerald Green the right to halt chemotherapy for their leukemia-stricken 2-year-old son, Chad.

"God prevailed," the boy's father said as he emerged from the closed door juvenile session before Judge Martha Ware at Hingham District Court. "That means we have the right to choose our own treatment for our son."

Marvin Guthrie, an attorney for Massachusetts General Hospital in Boston, said he will appeal "in the most expeditious manner possible." He said he did not know where the appeal will be made.

Another attorney for the hospital, Stephen Saltonstall, said the case may be appealed to the state Supreme Judicial Court as early as today.

The parents have argued that chemotherapy is harmful to Chad both physically and emotionally and claim they can better treat their blond, blue-eyed son on a diet of organic food and distilled water.

"I never expected her to do that," said Mrs. Green outside the courthouse following the decision.

The couple's attorney, George Donovan, said he does not think the case is finished. "But it's only one round. I expect the case to wind up in the U.S. Supreme Court. She (Judge Ware) decided on a constitutional, not a medical basis," Donovan said.

The court battle over whether hospital authorities have a right to implement their treatment has been going on for several months. The Greens stopped taking the boy for treatments last January.

Care and protection petitions such as the one filed by the hospital are usually sought in child abuse and neglect cases.

The Greens appeared at the court to explain why guardianship of the child should not be taken away from them and why they feel their son should not receive the treatments. Hospital officials say the boy will die if chemotherapy is not resumed.

Dr. John Truman, who has been administering the chemotherapy to Chad, expressed fear the boy will die.

"I am very disappointed. If the leukemia cells return, without a doubt he will die," Dr. Truman was the hospital's primary witness.

Truman said Chad will need a treatment in about nine days.

"The ramifications do not just include the life or death of Chad Green," Truman said. "This could involve a lot of other patients with the same problem."

On Tuesday, Boston U.S. District Court Judge Andrew Caffrey declined to take jurisdiction of the case after the Greens

Representative Hits Electronic Banking Cards

WASHINGTON (AP) — The chairman of a House panel that is concluding hearings on electronic banking systems contended Wednesday that the systems could cost consumers their life's savings.

Rep. Frank Annunzio, D-Ill., said the hearings have produced testimony of such cases as that of a Texan whose electronic banking card was either lost or stolen and then used to withdraw $2,300 from his account.

"Even though there was no negligence on the part of the consumer, and he reported the loss to the bank, he was unable to get his money back," Annunzio said.

"The Federal Deposit Insurance Corp., which investigated the incident, told the consumer that there was nothing that it could do to be of assistance and even if he sued the bank it was uncertain whether the court would rule in his favor," the congressman said.

Some electronic banking systems provide a customer with a "debit card" that he can use in a store to have the amount of his purchase automatically deducted from his bank account. The systems are in increasing use across the country.

Annunzio is sponsoring legislation to establish protections on electronic banking similar to those already in effect for credit cards. One of the provisions limits the consumer's liability to the first $50 of unauthorized use if the debit card is lost or stolen. Another section would make financial institutions liable if they make mistakes in handling consumers' electronic funds accounts.

Annunzio, suggesting steps for consumers to protect their money in electronic banking accounts, said they should read carefully the contract supplied by the bank to understand provisions on liability for lost or stolen cards. In addition, he said, unsolicited debit cards should be cut up and returned to the financial institution.

U.S. TRUCKS

Of all the trucks registered in the United States, more than 24.6 million units, or about 95 percent are privately owned. The government, which has the largest vehicle fleet in the country, had 191,000 vehicles in 1975.

attempted to block the Hingham court hearing.

The Greens told Caffrey their constitutional rights had been violated by the hospital's attempts to take custody of the boy.

Texas Track Betting Termed 'Pretty Wide Open'

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — The matronly woman unsnapped her purse and pulled out a roll of cash. She studied her racing program, jotted down a few notes and glanced at the man standing ahead of her at the trackside.

"I'll give you 4-to-1 on that one, honey," said the man, his eyes shielded by dark sunglasses.

The woman peeled off several $20 bills and handed them to the man, who quickly rolled them around a larger bundle of greenbacks and jotted down her bet.

There were other customers, as the man hurried to take care of his business alongside the horse racing track just outside a small South Texas city.

Money, lots of it, was exchanged openly during the intermission between that Sunday's quarter horse races. Back and forth. Some rolls of cash shrank, others grew fat with winnings.

"It's pretty wide open. You can make any kind of bet," said one man with a handful of bills as he discussed illegal gambling that horse race followers admit occurs at every race in the state.

"A lot of people think because in Texas we don't have parimutuel betting we don't have horse racing. A lot of people who know there is horse racing just skip it because they don't think there's any gambling," the man said. "They don't know what they're missing."

For the record, there is horse racing in Texas. Lots of it. And there's gambling, too, although it is illegal and unofficial and nobody really knows how much is wagered.

By one estimate, there are more than 300 race tracks spread across Texas, including everything from manicured tracks with shaded grandstands to roughly outlined ovals barely visible in pastures.

The tracks can be found in Lubbock, Austin, Del Rio, Goliad, Junction, Boerne, Columbus, San Antonio, Laredo — practically anywhere there are horses to race.

The American Quarter Horse Association, headquartered in Amarillo, sanctions races at a dozen Texas tracks with purses that totaled $3.2 million in 1977, according to Don Essary, director of racing for the AQHA.

All that money was put up by the horse owners, which means the biggest horse players in Texas are the horse owners.

A typical futurity race for 2-year-old quarter horses may require the owner to put up $700, excluding penalties for late entries, before the horse gets to the track. With more than 150 horses entered in some races, the purse will be well over $100,000.

Essary said the AQHA has more than 211,000 quarter horses registered in Texas, the largest number of any state. California, which is second, has about half as many.

"We have a rule prohibiting gambling at Texas tracks," Essary said, "but enforcement is difficult. We will close down a track if we find a Calcutta pool, but as far as one-on-one betting, it's impossible to stop."

In a Calcutta pool, the horses, for gambling purposes only, are mythically auctioned off. The favorite brings the highest bid and so on until all the horses in a race are "sold." The man who "bought" the winning horses wins the pool, which can be thousands of dollars.

Calcutta pools have reached over $100,000 in some quarter horse races in Texas, said one racing follower from San Antonio.

Many of the race tracks are at county fairgrounds and races are run during a season.

A spokesman for the Texas Attorney General's Office said enforcement of gambling laws at race tracks is difficult. "It is just like bingo — it's a matter of (local) prosecutorial discretion," he said.

The Department of Public Safety said records don't reflect arrests on horse racing betting alone. "They're all added together," spokesman Richard Grimmer said.

However, Grimmer said there were 34 arrests last year involving all forms of bookmaking, and 3,263 arrests for gambling of all kinds.

At Val Verde Downs track in Del Rio, track manager Billy Bowers runs weekend races year around, except during April and May. In a recent contest, the South Texas Futurity for 2-year-old quarter horses, the winner got $12,000 from a $38,000 purse.

About 700 spectators show up each race day, Bowers estimated.

At La Bahia Downs in Goliad, one of the oldest tracks in Texas, the South Texas Derby, for 3-year-olds, had a purse of $16,400 last weekend with the winner taking almost $6,600. Several hundred spectators sat under a covered grandstand to watch the races.

Races later this month in Del Rio, sponsored by the Alamo Quarter Horse Breeders Association of San Antonio, will draw about 2,500 spectators per day, officials predict.

The sanctioned circuit for the quarter horses in Texas includes tracks at Uvalde, Lubbock, Midland, Del Rio, Uvalde, Laredo, Goliad, Columbus, Austin, Colleyville, Graham and Brady.

Thoroughbred horses are far outnumbered in Texas by the quarter horses and there are only a handful of thoroughbred races.

Judge Nixes Suit To Bar Betting Ballot

AUSTIN (AP) — State District Judge Jim Dear tossed out a suit Wednesday to prevent a statewide poll of how Democratic voters feel about betting on horse races.

Unless Dear's ruling is overturned on appeal, Democratic officials can start printing the May 6 primary ballot.

On Monday, State District Judge Herman Jones refused to stop a Democratic primary straw poll on increasing interest rates on loans under $5,000.

Both of the referendum questions are non-binding but are expected to serve as possible guidelines for the 1979 Legislature.

The State Democratic Executive Committee (SDEC) voted March 13 to put the betting referendum on the ballot, after racing supporters presented petitions containing more than 96,000 signatures.

A similar referendum was placed on the Republican primary ballot. No petition was submitted to the GOP executive committee.

SDEC member Harold Hammett of Fort Worth challenged the betting referendum, claiming that the petition lacked the approximately 74,000 valid signatures required by law.

Dear ruled, however, that the SDEC, in effect could do what it wished, even if none of the signatures was valid.

Dear said he lacked jurisdiction unless fraud was alleged, and no such allegation was made.

He said Jones shares his opinion. Hammett's lawyer, Randall Wood, said the SDEC never would have submitted the referendum except for the petition.

He said the betting referendum differs from the one on loans in that the SDEC voluntarily decided to put the interest rate issue on the ballot.

WIGGLY STRETCHERS

BARNEY'S ORIENTAL MEAT BALLS

Now, here's a recipe that will bring the exotic taste of the Orient right to your dinner table...without costing you a lot of bills. Just be sure to use top quality beef, freshly ground, by one of my boys at your neighborhood Piggly Wiggly store.

1 lb. ground beef	1 cup diagonally cut carrot slices
1 salt	1 can (1 lb.) bean sprouts, drained
1/2 pepper	1 cup beef bouillon
3 T oil	1 powdered ginger
1/2 cup chopped onion	2 T cornstarch
1 clove garlic, minced	1 T soy sauce
1 bunch watercress, coarsely chopped	1/2 cup water
1 cup diagonally cut celery slices

Season meat with salt and pepper and shape into 1-inch balls. In a skillet heat the oil, add the meatballs and brown. Remove from the pan. Add onion and garlic and cook until tender. Add the celery, carrots, bean sprouts and bouillon. Cover and cook until tender, about 10 minutes. Blend together the ginger, cornstarch, soy sauce and water. Stir into vegetable mixture and cook until thickened. Add meat balls and cook until heated through. Stir in watercress. Serve with hot cooked rice. Serves 6.

Oil Drilling Begins On Glomar

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. (AP) — Oil isn't found in vast underground pools and drill bits don't bore like corkscrews. The new Texans in town smile politely when Easterners ask about gushers.

Oilmen expect to find gas before oil off the East Coast — if they find anything at all. Experts say the odds are 5-to-1 against hitting paydirt.

When the Exxon drill ship Glomar Pacific finally began its work Wednesday, it also launched the industry's billion-dollar gamble for oil and gas in the Baltimore Canyon Trough about 100 miles off New Jersey and Delaware coasts.

Glomar Pacific crewmen Wednesday used five whirling drill bits, weighing a total of 2,500 pounds, to open a hole 36 inches in diameter to 250 feet below the floor of the Atlantic Ocean.

The 90-day plan is to use smaller and smaller bits as the drilling continues through sand, shale and carbonate rock. Most of the well will be just over a foot in diameter from 4,200 feet to its planned depth of 14,000 feet.

The well is lined with cement and steel casing to make a closed system. A tall mechanical apparatus sits on the ocean floor above the well to prevent "blowouts," which can cause pollution when pressure inside the well blows out the bits, pipe and casings.

What comes up when you drill? Drillers pump a special fluid called "mud" down the drill pipe to turn and lubricate the drill bit, seal the well wall and blow away the soft earth ahead of the bit.

The "mud" is brought up to the surface where it is filtered and recirculated. The drilling product is usually small stones which have been torn up by the drill bit.

Some of the debris is analyzed and some is discarded overboard under maximum pollution prevention standards regulated by the U.S. Geological Survey.

Crandall Jones, Exxon's offshore exploration manager, said this week his geologists are most interested in the stones between 9,000 and 14,000 feet, which they believe are most likely to contain signs of gas and oil.

Exxon plans at least six exploratory wells to see how much commercial gas and oil is under the 30 mid-Atlantic lease tracts it purchased for $342.7 million.

Other oil companies plan their own exploratory drilling during the next two years. Experts say it will be at least five years before any Atlantic oil and gas reaches shore.

If oil and gas are found, it won't be waiting in vast caves or pools. Like water in a damp sandbox, gas and oil molecules are among the rock formations and must be sucked out.

The Glomar Pacific and the drilling rigs to follow won't be working over the Baltimore Canyon, one of the many underwater valleys that lie off the mouths of major Eastern rivers.

The Glomar Pacific is 398 feet above the continental shelf about 101 miles east of here, 15 miles southwest of the Hudson Canyon and 90 miles northeast of the Baltimore Canyon.

The Baltimore Canyon Trough is a geological formation scientists believe has all the elements of hiding oil and gas deposits. But no one knows for sure.

Natural Gas Tests Completed

WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S. Geological Survey said Wednesday that successful tests of natural gas production have been completed on the first development well drilled in the East Barrow gas field of the northern Alaska National Petroleum Reserve.

Exploration of the field, then conducted by the U.S. Navy, uncovered the gas field last year: since then, what was once Naval Petroleum Reserve No. 4 has been transferred to the Interior Department by Congress with instructions to continue assessing the petroleum resources of the National Petroleum Reserve, as it is now known.

The Geological Survey, an agency of the Interior Department, said preliminary tests of East Barrow well No. 17 "produced a good flow of natural gas and verified that it will be a producible well."

The agency added that the isolated village of Barrow and several nearby federal installations dependent on local natural gas reserves, which have been running low, and new sources will be needed.

It said six exploratory wells and three Barrow gas field test wells will be drilled in the National Petroleum Reserve in Alaska this year; one of the exploratory wells and one test well have already been drilled without producing commercial quantities of oil or natural gas.

15 Challenge Dominican Republic's Red Rooster

SANTO DOMINGO, Dominican Republic (AP) — A group of admirers stood outside President Joaquin Balaguer's home recently holding up a large wooden rooster with a sign that said: "Who can beat him?"

No one has been able to do it in 12 years and three presidential elections, but this time there are at least 15 other "roosters" willing to challenge the 71-year-old Balaguer.

The rooster and the color red are symbols of his Reform Party.

Balaguer, who was first elected in 1966, has presided over a surge in the Dominican economy and has brought a stability that is a sharp contrast to the days following the disorders which prompted the United States to send in Marines in 1965.

As presidential candidates sprouted in the fertile election-year ground, Balaguer, reportedly suffering from failing eyesight, waited to be the last to announce he would seek a fourth term on May 16.

He and his party will face their toughest opposition in the Dominican Revolutionary Party, which carried Juan Bosch to the presidency following the overthrow of the longtime regime of dictator Rafael Trujillo on May 30, 1961.

Bosch now leads a splinter group and is also a candidate, but his chances are considered minimal.

The Dominican Communist Party, officially recognized last month by the Central Electoral Board, also will have a candidate in the elections, as will other minor parties ranging from one extreme to the other in the political spectrum.

But the battle will be between Balaguer and Antonio Guzman, a landowner from Santiago in the north central section of this Caribbean nation which shares the island of Hispaniola with Haiti.

Guzman, 67, was secretary of agriculture under Bosch and in 1965 he participated in negotiations aimed at bringing about a civilian government as the United States prepared to pull out its troops.

In 1974 he was the presidential candidate of a coalition led by the Revolutionary Party but the group withdrew from the elections alleging that they were rigged.

While Guzman has kept a low profile trying to unite all sectors of the Revolutionary Party, the party's professionals led by Secretary-General Francisco Pena Gomez have whipped up some early enthusiasm with a massive demonstration recently in Santo Domingo.

Pena Gomez, 41, a veteran campaigner who is said to have held the party together following Bosch's split, said in an interview that he fears violence in the upcoming campaign. Already, two persons have been killed in rallies organized by the Revolutionary Party and its leaders blame the government.

Pena Gomez, who describes himself and his party as socialistic in the same fashion West Germany's Social Democrats and Britain's Laborites, agreed that Balaguer will be a formidable opponent because of his "honesty and experience." But he added that Balaguer "is beginning to show the natural wear and tear of time."

Pena Gomez accused the military, however, of engaging in corruption and claimed military leaders will fight to keep privileges he contends they obtained under Balaguer.

But Pena Gomez praised Balaguer's leadership: "We have freedom, the middle class is better off and we have learned a lot about democracy in the past 12 years. We feel that if Balaguer loses the election, he will turn over the reins of power."

He acknowledged that the outcome of the election will depend on his party's success in the rural areas where the voters have traditionally given their support to Balaguer.

Balaguer announced his candidacy with an attack on the Revolutionary Party, charging it lacks ideals and saying it isn't necessary to adopt socialistic programs for the Dominican Republic.

The Dominican Republic, which has a population of slightly more than five million people, had a favorable $59.2 balance of trade last year in spite of the reduction in the price of sugar, its main export.

Higher coffee prices compensated for the loss of an estimated $41 million in sugar income.

Balaguer recently submitted to Congress a 1978 budget that called for $620 million for ordinary expenses, an increase of more than $70 million over 1977 figures. Inflation, according to the Dominican Central Bank, was estimated at 12 percent during 1977.

Government officials express hope that current sugar prices will remain at their present level.

MEN-WOMEN

Earn as you learn a rewarding skill.

If you qualify and your local Army Reserve unit has an opening in the field you want, we'll pay you to learn a worthwhile skill.

We pay you well from the day you start Basic Training. You progress to Advanced Training, learning your specialty from expert instructors.

A few months later, you come home to a part-time job with your local Army Reserve unit. We pay you for the 16 hours a month and two weeks Annual Training you put in, improving the skills you've already learned.

Of course, your new knowledge could lead to a full-time civilian job. Or even a high-paying lifetime career.

If all starts with a telephone call - a call that could change your life.

5 REASONS WHY PLYMOUTH VOLARE IS AMERICA'S 1ST CHOICE IN WAGONS OVER THE PAST TWO YEARS.

- 1. HIGH RESALE VALUE.
One reason why Volare is America's first choice in wagons over the past two years is that its resale value is higher than its competition at both Ford and GM.
- 2. PASSENGER ROOM.
Hauling cargo is important and so is hauling people. Volare seats six comfortably and gives more passenger room than all the new down-sized GM intermediate wagons based on eight year old designs.
- 3. BIG CAR RIDE.
Volare is the only wagon in its class with a special front isolated transverse suspension system. The system of unique design that delivers a remarkable ride like a big car.
- 4. LOW PRICE.
You could pay more for some wagons with all the room, comfort and ride of a Volare. Compared to its GM competition, Volare's low price will surprise you.
- 5. SMALL CAR ECONOMY.
Volare offers big passenger room and spacious cargo area and still does a remarkable job of giving down-to-earth economy, especially in gas mileage.

CHS Claims Carter

By TOM HALLIBURTON
Avalanche-Journal Sports Staff
Here's a guy who could trade his American Express card with the President of the United States and most folks wouldn't know the difference.

But yes there is a difference. Not all Jimmy Carters are alike. One Jimmy Carter can meet with his Cabinet to decide the fate of a nation. Another Jim Carter can look in his cabinet and check if any tennis rackets have been stolen.

Our not-so-famous person with a famous name coaches tennis at Coronado high school. He says he receives an occasional crank telephone call from "people who just want to talk to Jimmy Carter."

While one Jimmy Carter abides in a famous Oval Office hear the banks of the Potomac, another guy with the same name barely claims an office. It's so small that Carter is running out of wall space to hang a picture of each CHS tennis team. Goodness knows there's no room for trophies because the Coronado netters collect them too quickly.

The bald-headed coach vanished from his native Kansas and headed for Texas in the sixties because the warmer weather aided the state's youth tennis programs. While Coronado graduated its first senior class in 1966, Carter latched onto an assistant's tennis coaching job at San Angelo the same year. Three years later, he accepted his

Dockery, Raiders Open Spring Drills

By CARTER CROMWELL
Avalanche-Journal Sports Staff
Hoping to find answers to pressing problems at quarterback, running back and the secondary, Texas Tech will begin today its first spring training under Rex Dockery's direction.

Following this week, the Raiders will work out Tuesday through Saturday each week until the Red-White Game closes spring training April 27. Scrimmages are currently scheduled for each Wednesday and Saturday after this week.

Tech lacks depth and experienced personnel in the offensive and defensive backfields. There is little experience at linebacker, too, but Tech has numbers and potential at that spot.

Dockery lists improvement at these positions, particularly quarterback, as one of the staff's major objectives this spring, along with building confidence and the team concept within the young Tech squad.

"We need to develop a more consistent passing game," he said. "And we lost 28 guys from last year's team, so we'll have to indoctrinate our young players with our team concept."

Six quarterbacks will be fighting for the No. 1 spot in spring training, and the obvious hope of the staff is that one will emerge as the clear first-teamer.

However, Dockery says that there is no No. 1 quarterback now. In the race for the job are Mark Johnson and Tres Adams, who shared the duties last season after Rodney Allison was injured; sophomores-to-be Richy Ethridge, David Stone and Darren Reagan; and redshirt Johnny Johnson.

At running back, fullback Sam Bailey is the only player with varsity playing time. Junior Eddie Monaco and sophomores-to-be Steve Dawson, Tim Orr, Mark Olbert and Don Earl are also candidates.

From the standpoints of lack of depth and experience, running back and the defensive backfield are in equally dire straits as quarterback.

The secondary is quite thin with only free safety Larry Flowers and cornerback Willie Stephens possessing significant amounts of playing time, not counting experience gained on the specialty teams.

Mike Patterson, who has played considerably at cornerback the previous two seasons, is not in school this semester because of scholastic problems. There is a chance, however, that he can regain his eligibility this summer and play next fall.

Offensively, the Tech staff is considering installing some facets of the I formation into its attack, but that will depend largely on how the quarterback situation develops. Whatever happens, though, the split-back veer will still be the Raiders' basic offensive set.

Tech will also change its basic defensive alignment this spring, going from the even front of the past two seasons back to the five-man front that was last employed in the 1975 campaign.

That, of course, will add one down line-man and subtract one linebacker from the defensive set. The Raiders have a number of line prospects but not enough linebacker types to be able to go with the three-linebacker setup that they used in 1976 and 1977.

Don Kelly, who started in 1977, is the only linebacker returning with much experience, although junior-to-be Jeff Copeland, a good prospect, saw some action last season. Sophomores-to-be Rusty Maroney and Jeff McKinney and junior-college transfer Ricky Kempf are other candidates here.

Curtis Reed, a defensive tackle the past two years, will be worked some at nose-guard this spring, as will sophomores-to-be Jamie Giles.

With starters returning in wideouts Brian Nelson and Godfrey Turner and tight end James Hadnot, Tech is currently in good shape at receiver.

Seven Squads Top Pro-Member Round

Seven teams tied for the top prize with 11-under-par best-ball scores of 61 during Wednesday's pro-member round of the West Texas PGA tournament at Lubbock Country Club.

Meanwhile, three local professionals tied for the lead after the first 18 holes of their 36-hole tournament with 1-over-par rounds of 73. Host pro Gene Mitchell of Lubbock Country Club, Richard Whittenburg of Hillcrest and Ronnie Rossion of Pine Hills are tied for the lead.

Jerry Mobley of Richland Hills C.C. (Midland) and Richard Hale of Floydada are tied at 74, one shot behind the local trio. At 75 are Alan Tursley of Big Spring and Mike Horton of Hereford.

Bucky Sheffield and Jobe Moss of Lubbock Country Club tied for low amateur honors with even par 72s.

The pros will be paired together in the 18-hole final round with tee-off time this morning at 9:30.

SMILING CHAMP—Boxer Ken Norton is all smiles as he shows off his new World Boxing Council heavyweight championship belt that was awarded to him Wednesday. (AP Laserphoto)

Norton Takes Belt, Looks To Holmes

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Ken Norton received the World Boxing Council's heavyweight championship belt Wednesday with a declaration he'll defend against all comers with undefeated Larry Holmes first on the list.

That bout, which must be held prior to June 15 under WBC edict, could earn the new champion $3 million and probably will be held in Las Vegas.

When the WBC withdrew recognition of Leon Spinks because he decided to give Muhammad Ali a rematch before fighting Norton, the heavyweight division came up with two champions since the World Boxing Association continues to recognize the man who outpointed Ali.

"The easiest way to settle this is for me and Spinks to fight," Norton said on accepting the belt from WBC President Jose Sulaiman at ceremonies in the Holtenbeck Youth Center. "I don't think that will happen very soon."

Sulaiman defended his group's action in taking recognition from former Olympic champ Spinks and awarding it to Californian Norton when he said, "We have done the proper thing. We followed our constitution and rules. We are trying to keep integrity and honesty in boxing. We will not allow power and business to rule boxing."

Sulaiman pointed out again that prior to the Spinks-Ali fight in Las Vegas on Feb. 15, both had agreed the winner would defend against Norton, the No. 1 challenger. The WBC had agreed Ali could defend against Spinks only with the Norton stipulation. Norton later agreed to take only $200,000 with Spinks to get $1 million for their title fight.

Spinks then changed his mind and said his first bout would be a rematch against Ali which reportedly would earn him $5 million.

"The Council was fooled by everybody involved," Sulaiman declared. "We were treated in bad faith."

Norton said, "It is obvious neither Spinks nor Ali want to fight me."

The WBC, with representation in 92 na-

Real 'Assist' Belongs To Pele

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. (AP) — Although Pele won't be credited with a single assist in the upcoming North American Soccer League season, the first-time Dennis Tueart scores, the real assist will go to the legendary Black Pearl.

Tueart — a superstar in England's First Division who signed a three-year, $500,000 contract with the Cosmos in February — credits Pele with the sudden influx of foreign stars to America.

"There's no question about Pele's influence," said Tueart. "The top players in the world saw that Pele was in the United States, so we all figured that the quality of play must be improving. I wouldn't have come here three years ago."

Huskies Open Training

SEATTLE (AP) — More than 100 varsity candidates will be on hand when the defending Pacific-8 Conference and Rose Bowl champion Washington Huskies open spring football practice Saturday at Husky Stadium.

Coach Don James will greet 45 lettermen and 18 returning starters from last year's team that upset Michigan 27-20 at Pasadena.

"The first thing we have to do is find replacements for the starters we lost to graduation," James said.

The Huskies must come up with a quarterback to replace Warren Moon, the Most Valuable Player in the Rose Bowl and co-Pacific-8 Player of the Year with Stanford quarterback Guy Benjamin; a center to replace second-team All-American Blair Bush; a defensive tackle to replace Dave Browning; and a nose guard to replace Cliff Bethesda.

The defensive line will be a particular area of concern for James, who lost five of his top seven defensive linemen from last year's squad.

The battle for the starting quarterback job will be one of the more highly visible confrontations this spring. Duane Akina, a two-year letterman senior, will enter spring drills No. 1, followed by redshirt Now Tueart views his coming to the United States as a real challenge.

"I felt I had accomplished every personal and team goal that I could in England," said the 28-year-old Tueart. "I wanted to come here while I was in my prime."

Tueart, however, won't be in uniform Sunday when the Cosmos open defense of their NASL title. The high-scoring forward pulled a hamstring muscle in his right leg during the team's exhibition swing in Bermuda.

"I aggravated the injury warming up for the Chicago game last Saturday," said Tueart. "I'm so anxious to play that I came back too soon."

Two other junior college transfers will participate in spring drills — linebacker Stafford Mays and placekicker Mike Lansford. One freshman recruit, Ray Horton from Tacoma, has graduated early from high school and also will be on hand for spring practice.

The Huskies plan to work out four times weekly — Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday and Saturday — but weather could change that. Spring practice will wind up May 6 with a varsity intrasquad game, which replaces the traditional varsity-alumni game.

"The intrasquad game gives a lot more players a chance to get in the action and it's a much better way to assess the progress of more players," James said.

Cosmos coach Eddie Firmani is drooling at the prospect of teaming Tueart up front with Steve Hunt, Giorgio Chinaglia and Vladislav Bogicevic. It's a potentially explosive combination.

"There's no question about it, it's a quality unit," said the personable Tueart. "I don't think we'll have any problem playing together."

Tueart noted he doesn't mind moving over to the right side in order to let Hunt remain on the left, which also is his natural position.

"It doesn't matter to me which side I play on, as long as I'm playing, and I certainly don't want to take Steve's position," said Tueart. "I'll play on the right, but if the ball isn't coming my way, I'll go after it."

Tueart played in all three of the Cosmos exhibitions in Bermuda, scored three times and assisted on two others and was pleased by the way he fit in with his new teammates.

"I was delighted with my play in Bermuda, but unfortunately I got hurt," said Tueart. "I expect to be ready for the third game of the season, but I'm hoping for the second. I don't want to come back too soon, but I can't wait much longer."

Although Tueart was not a part of the Cosmos march to the championship last year, he realizes the difficulty involved in repeating.

"Everybody expects us to win again," said Tueart. "But teams will be giving that little extra when they play the Cosmos. It's not going to be easy. The quality of play around the league is so improved that we won't be able to let down for one moment."

"We have to live up to the standards Pele has set."

WTSU Tabs Edwards

CANYON (AP) — West Texas State University has named Ken Edwards, formerly of Portland State University, as the school's 11th head basketball coach.

WTSU athletic director Dick Dietl said Edwards has agreed to a two-year, $25,000 a year contract.

He will succeed Ron Ekker, who coached West Texas for the past five seasons and was fired, effective Aug. 31, after his team posted an 8-19 record this past season.

Edwards resigned his post at Portland State less than two weeks ago in a dispute with school officials over recruiting policy.

Edwards compiled a 96-60 record during his six-year tenure at Portland State. His teams have been characterized by a fast-break, high scoring style of play.

LA, IOC Head Toward Clash

LONDON (AP) — Los Angeles is moving towards a head-on clash with the International Olympic Committee and is in danger of having its bid to stage the 1984 Summer Games rejected.

IOC members are bristling with anger over the tone of Los Angeles' answers to a questionnaire. The Associated Press learned. They say it is arrogant — even insulting.

They particularly resent the city's open avowal that it will be responsible for television rights and will basically receive all television revenue. This is in defiance of IOC rules.

Los Angeles, the only applicant for the 1984 Summer Olympics, is scheduled to present its bid to the IOC at Athens in May. As of now, many IOC members are in a mood to throw out Los Angeles' bid and invite applications from other cities.

They say at least five cities would be ready to take over the 1984 Games is asked. Lord Killanin, the highly diplomatic president of the IOC, simply said: "We have contingency plans." A few days ago, Montreal, which staged the costly but highly successful 1976 Summer Games, said it would be delighted to step in and host the 1984 Games if Los Angeles couldn't.

"We still love them," said John Argue, president of the Southern California Committee for the Olympic Games (SCCOG), speaking of the IOC.

And SCCOG Vice President John R. MacFadden said:

"They (the IOC) have a rule that all the television money goes to them and then is divided up. We're seeking an exception to that rule in that the television revenue will come to Los Angeles and will be divided up with the IOC. I don't think that's arrogant."

"There is no intent on the part of the drafters of the response to the IOC questionnaire or to the representatives of the federations which could be construed as arrogant or self-serving. We were merely trying to point out that Los Angeles is very desirous of hosting the games but at no cost to the local taxpayers."

"Any situation of this nature requires negotiation on disputed points so as to arrive at a mutually acceptable compromise, and there's nothing in the document over which responsible people can not reach an agreement."

Killanin is scheduled to meet Los Angeles Olympic planners in Mexico City next month. He is expected to smooth over the dispute and to try to persuade them to tone down their whole approach to the Games and to agree to run them the IOC's way.

The IOC has always insisted it must have the last word on television contracts. It has a regular formula for splitting up the revenue, with a little more than one-third going to the IOC and the rest to the local organizing committee.

At Moscow in 1980 about $40 million will be divided up in this way. The IOC's share will be divided up among the 26 international federations which run Olympic sports and among the 133 recognized national Olympic committees in the form of sports aid programs.

Every city applying for the Olympics has to fill out a questionnaire, in which it is required to outline its basic plans for the Games and to agree to certain conditions laid down by the IOC.

The 86 members of the IOC have been sent copies of the Los Angeles questionnaire and have been startled to find the American city taking a strong independent line.

For example, Los Angeles said "every reasonable effort" will be made to accommodate the needs of the IOC and the federations. But it added: "However, all final decisions must be reserved to the local organizing committee."

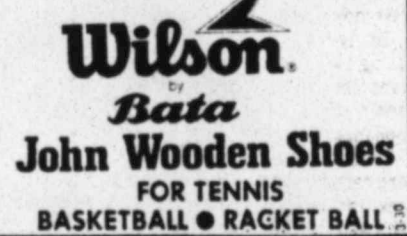

No applicant city has ever dared to take such a line with the IOC, which was set up by the late Baron Pierre de Coubertin, founder of the modern Olympics and which has jealously guarded its position as the guardian and supreme ruling body of the Games.

NL East: Pirates Gain Power

By FRED ROTHENBERG
Associated Press Sports Writer

Without sacrificing any lumber or lightning, the Pittsburgh Pirates have become frightening.

They now have their best pitching staff in decades to complement the thunderous hitting and blazing speed that has made opposing pitchers wish for the safety and security of a Pennsylvania coal mine.

"We have the best 1-2, righty-lefty combination in baseball," crows Pittsburgh Manager Chuck Tanner, prone to optimistic outbursts but probably on target this time.

Left-hander John Candelaria, sporting the league's best earnedrun average in 1977, could become one of the best pitchers of all time. At 24, the 6-foot-7, 225-pounder, already has a no-hitter to his credit, plus last year's 20-5 season with a 2.34 ERA. In his three major league seasons his record stands at 44-18.

The special right-hander in Tanner's eyes is Bert Blyleven, whose promise, so far, has outstripped his production. Part of the 11-player, four-team winter deal, Blyleven will be getting his National League initiation after eight seasons in the American League. He's the owner of one of the best curve balls in the business and has a career record of 122-113 but with a sparkling 2.79 ERA.

Last season with Texas, Blyleven was 14-12 including a no-hitter. His ERA of 2.72 was second-best in the AL.

The other starting pitchers are expected to be Jerry Reuss, Jim Rooker and Jim Bibby, recently signed as a free agent. The Pirates lost more than they gained from the free-agent market, however, seeing ace reliever Rich Gossage sign with the New York Yankees and fellow bullpen stalwart Terry Forster defect to Los Angeles.

The bullpen duties now rest with 35-year-old Grant Jackson and Kent Tekulve, who was 10-1 with a 3.06 ERA.

The defense is somewhat suspect, but the hitting is superior. Any evaluation of the Pittsburgh offense must start with Dave Parker, the NL's top batter last season with a .338 average and 21 homers and 88 runs batted in. Parker holds down right field with Bill Robinson (.304, 26 homers, 104 RBI) in left and the speedy Omar Moreno (53 stolen bases) in center.

The infield defense, particularly Frank Taveras at short, can be shaky. First baseman Willie Stargell is 38 and injury prone, but if he can find one more glorious, healthy season the Pirates could sail away from everyone else in the NL East. If Stargell falters, John Milner, also acquired from the New York Mets in the 11-player deal, would step in.

Second baseman Rennie Stennett batted .336 but missed the last month and a half of the season with a fractured bone in his right leg. Taveras hit .252, but was a threat to steal every time he landed on first base, leading the league with 70 thefts. Third baseman Phil Garner contributed 32 stolen bases to the Pirates' lightning attack and also provided some big lumber, popping for 17 homers and 77 RBI.

The team Pittsburgh will have to beat is Philadelphia, NL East titlist the past two seasons. The Phillies have a powerful offense and a wonderful defense, but their starting pitching is starting to fade.

Steve Carlton, of course, is the mainstay — 23-10 last season and the Cy Young Award winner. Larry Christenson quietly won 19 games but had a fat 4.07 ERA. Jim Lonborg and Jim Kaat are each a year older.

The bullpen remains a strong asset with Tug McGraw, Gene Garber, Ron Reed and Warren Brusstar expected to get even more work than last year when they amassed 212 relief appearances.

If the bullpen can hold the opposition, Philadelphia's hitters usually think of something in the late innings. The most creative are Mike Schmidt, who had 38 homers and 101 RBI, and Greg Luzinski, who smacked 39 homers and knocked in 130 runs.

The defense, anchored beautifully on the left side by third baseman Schmidt and shortstop Larry Bowa, can be counted on to bail out a pitcher or two.

The Montreal Expos, who have never finished higher than fourth, should take one giant step this year — courtesy of the best young outfield in baseball and the Baltimore Orioles. Two of Baltimore's starting staff last season, Ross Grimsley and Rudy May, now belong to the Expos.

Rookie of the year Andre Dawson (.282, 19 homers, 65 RBI), Ellis Valentine (.293, 25 homers, 76 RBI) and Warren Cromartie (.282, 5 homers, 50 RBI) could be an outfield trio for another decade in Montreal — if they come to terms. All are unsigned for 1978.

The starting staff includes May (18-14), acquired in a trade from Baltimore; Grimsley (14-10), a free agent; Steve Rogers (17-16), and Wayne Twitchell. Manager Dick Williams is counting on Darold Knowles and Will McEnaney to be the bullpen stoppers.

The infield appears set with Tony Perez at first; Dave Cash at second; Chris Speier at short and Larry Parrish at third.

The St. Louis Cardinals seem to be a front-line pitcher away from challenging the leaders. Bob Forsch won an unnoticed 20 games and John Denny was 7-0 before an injury wrecked his season and he finished 8-8. Eric Rasmussen was 11-17 last year.

Other high spots are Ted Simmons, a marvelous catcher who batted .318; the infield of Keith Hernandez at first, Mike Tyson at second, phenom Garry Templeton at short and Ken Reitz at third, and, of course, base-stealing king Lou Brock who, at 38, can still provide the inspirational leadership.

The Chicago Cubs have 20-game winner Rick Reuschel and the incomparable relief specialist Bruce Sutter, who is coming back from a late season injury. That's more than the New York Mets have. The Mets' best pitchers — all since traded — are in Cincinnati (Tom Seaver), Texas (Jon Matlack) and California (Nolan Ryan).

The predictions: Pittsburgh, Philadelphia, Montreal, St. Louis, Chicago and New York.

Howe Still Active, Marks 50th Birthday

SPRINGFIELD, Mass. (AP) — A living and playing legend, Gordie Howe celebrated his 50th birthday Wednesday night with teammates from 30 years ago. Then he played a game with the New England Whalers, only three of whom were born in 1946. Howe's first year in major league hockey.

"I don't feel 50 years old," said Howe on Wednesday prior to the Whalers' game here with the Cincinnati Stingers. And he really isn't 50 since his actual birthday is Friday.

The Whalers had scheduled this on-ice party for Friday, March 31, in Hartford, Conn., their regular home. However, the roof of the Hartford Civic Center blew off last Jan. 18, necessitating the Whalers' switching their home games to Springfield. The Whalers couldn't book the Springfield Civic Center ice for Friday.

An incredible athlete, Howe leads the World Hockey Association team in scoring with 34 goals and 56 assists for 90 points. He is already talking about playing next season, when he is expected to be a grandfather for the first time. His sons, Mark (22) and Marty (24), play on the Whalers, and Mark's wife Ginger is eight months pregnant with the couple's first child.

Only teammates John McKenzie, 41, Dave Keon, 38 and Al Smith, 33, were alive when Howe scored his first goal in 1946, while playing his first game for the Detroit Red Wings of the National Hockey League.

"It scares me, I should hurt more after a game these days than I do," said Howe. "The younger guys end up sorer the next day than I do."

Going into Wednesday night's game, Howe had played in 72 of the second-place Whalers' 74 games. Every time he skates on to the ice, he adds to his bucket of records, including most seasons (30); most games (2,252); most goals (1,028); most assists (1,457); most points (2,483); most penalty minutes (2,297); most years in playoffs (23); most All-Star team selections (23), and most Most Valuable Player awards (7).

Howe's last NHL goal, No. 786, was on April 3, 1971. Shortly afterwards, he retired to an executive position with the Red Wings. He was lured out retirement by the Houston Aeros and scored his first WHA goal on Nov. 3, 1973. He went on to become the first man to notch 1,000 goals, bagging the big one on Dec. 7, 1977 in Birmingham, Ala.

The plans for Wednesday night's pre-game celebration included on-ice tributes from several of Howe's longtime friends. Some of his old Detroit teammates scheduled to be here were Sid Abel and Tommy Ivan. Also expected to be here were some Detroit-area cronies, including baseball great Al Kaline, tennis star Tony Trabert and track immortal Jesse Owens.

There also was to be a 6-foot by 3½-foot cake shaped like a hockey rink and bearing Howe's facial likeness.

Tonight a "Roast of Gordie Howe" is scheduled with Howard Cosell as master of ceremonies. Friday, when Howe really reaches a half century, will be a day of rest.

Fans Heap Gratitude On Havlicek

BOSTON (AP)—The long-running retirement party for John Havlicek of the Boston Celtics has turned into a windfall for both the National Basketball Association and the veteran superstar.

Thousands of dollars worth of gifts have been heaped on Havlicek since he announced on Jan. 29 that his 16th NBA season would be his last.

Havlicek timed his announcement, he said, to give fans around the league one last look at him.

In recent weeks, the coast-to-coast going-away parties have packed extra fans into arenas. Because NBA teams don't share gate receipts, the one-time bonanzas go directly to each host club.

To show their gratitude, team owners are carting out pre-game booty for Havlicek, including a color television set, jewelry and furniture.

Boston's playoff prospects are currently slim to none. But despite the 29-42 record going into Tuesday night's game at Portland, worst in the team's modern era, the Celtics are a drawing card with Havlicek in uniform.

And the biggest party is yet to come, a three-day celebration April 7-9, the regular season's final weekend. The Celtics play at home and Havlicek's 38th birthday just happens to be April 8.

Havlicek announced his pending retirement after Boston had made its last stop in Detroit, Milwaukee and San Antonio. But in other NBA cities, the rush was on to buy something special for a man whose six-figure NBA salary makes it unlikely that there's much he doesn't already have.

The Golden State Warrior players gave Havlicek a gold money clip, but the rest of the booty was presented by NBA team officials.

It ranges from trophies to a gold watch and also includes a recliner, a rocking chair, skis, tennis rackets, a pendant for his wife Beth, a video tape recorder and an outboard motor.

Havlicek had made it known he wanted the motor. For the birthday party weekend, the Celtics will roll out a camper-mobile home, another video tape machine, a stereo and assorted other presents.

Still to come are gifts from the Celtics players, the team's season ticket holders and NBA Commissioner Larry O'Brien.

The season finale against the Buffalo Braves will be televised nationally. A local radio station is running a contest to determine who gets "the shirt off John Havlicek's back."

Youngster Leads PBA Event

GARDEN CITY, N.Y. (AP) — Randy Lightfoot, who one month ago was just another youngster trying to make it on the Professional Bowlers Association tour until his dramatic victory in Miami, took the first-round lead in the $70,000 Long Island Open Wednesday.

Lightfoot, 20, of St. Charles, Mo., upset multi-champions Marshall Holman, Mark Roth and Larry Laub to win at Miami for his first PBA championship in two years on the tour.

Wednesday, Lightfoot never shot a game below 225 in averaging 246 for six games. His games of 245, 225, 264, 258, 237 and 249 gave him a 1,478 total.

However, Lightfoot only holds a two-

Medford, Mass.
Pete Couture, Windsor Locks, Conn., who rolled one of five perfect games in the tournament, was third with a 1,453 total.

Tracksters Suffer Slow Week

By JIM FERGUSON
Avalanche-Journal Sports Staff
Lubbock high school tracksters didn't burn up any cinders last week. Could be the hottest thing around at the day's end was that bologna sandwich some one laid on the dash of the Estacado bus.

It was certainly the week that wasn't on the local track scene.

"We just didn't go to compete it seems like," Monterey coach Bob Gay said about the Plainsmen's journey to the Hobbs Relays. "I guess spring break had something to do with it. At least, that's what I hope."

There were some other dandy excuses tossed around, but the most legitimate had to be Estacado's.

At the Big Spring Relays, the Matadors did not compete in any of the dashes, the 880 or mile. For a good reason too, the Big Spring event was comprised only of stick passing races, like the spring medley and distance medley.

And when you don't compete you don't lower your times any, some say.

Despite the poor overall performances, there were still a pair of top showings registered by Hub City competitors.

At the Hobbs meet, which saw the New Mexicans sweep the Texans 1-2-3 in the overall standings, Monterey high jumper Chuck Perry registered a 6-8. His previous best had been a 6-7, eighth in the state.

Although the jump would have been enough to win most meets by a few inches, Perry had to settle for the silver medal. He and a leaper from Clovis both leaped the height but Perry had more misses on earlier attempts, so...

The 6-8, however, is still good enough to lead the city by seven inches. Bringing up second is Pat Randolph of LCHS at 6-1.

Freddie Ivory of Estacado also left his mark on the Big Spring meet, leaping 23-1 in the long jump and tossing the discus 156-4 for a pair of wins.

The long jump mark topped his previous best by a little more than six inches. However, the EHS senior's discus toss was five feet short of his city-leading 161-1.

Ivory is currently the Hub's top field-event performer, leading the long jump and discus along with a fifth in the shot put.

Joe Robinson, the Plainsmen's top hurdler, cut his time in the 120 highs from 15.6 to 15.2 at Hobbs and remains the city's number one high stepper.

The only significant change in the City's Top Six came in the 440 yard relay where Estacado dropped its previous best time by almost a full second to overtake rival Dunbar for the lead. The Matadors clocked a 43.4 Saturday, while Dunbar's best remains at 43.8.

After the race, Estacado coach Percy Hines said he believes the Matadors are now on their way to some much quicker times. He predicted a clocking somewhere in the 42s may be just a baton grasp away.

Dunbar, which has been suffering through a rash of injuries since the start of the track season, got a shot in the arm Saturday with the return of speedster Kenneth James.

James, a state qualifier last year, recorded a 10.2 for his best time in the 100 this year. Kenzie Burrell of Estacado still holds the lead at 9.9. However, a healthy James is expected to pass that mark without much difficulty.

Also returning after a week of R&R was Dunbar's Billy Don Hardaway. Hardaway, like teammate James, a state tender a year ago, heaved the shot 50-5 1/2.

In his best event, the discus, Hardaway is still well off the 180 foot range it will take to make the Austin trip again.

Hardaway's best plate throw remains at 159-10, three feet behind Ivory.

The five Lubbock high schools will attempt to better their best marks Saturday at the annual City Meet on Coronado's all-weather surface.

Cage Recruits

A pair of guards, 6-0 Marshall Smith Jr. and 6-3 Bill McGee, have become Lubbock Christian College's first cage recruits of the year.

Smith hails from Albuquerque Highland and played on the 1977 Class AAAA state-runner-up team. This year he was voted All-City on the players team and All-District on the coaches team. He averaged 15.5 points and 7 rebounds a game with a high of 29. Highland finished 16-11, losing in the first round of the state tournament.

McGee averaged 14.5 points a game for a 20-18 Houston Robert E. Lee team this year. He shot 48 per cent from the floor and 73 per cent from the line. He was a second team all-district and has been selected to play in the Big Brothers Roundball Classic set for April 6 in the Houston Summit.

Assistant coach Darrell Price has been in charge of showing recruits around campus and indicated a dozen or more players will be in town within a week.

Price and head coach Larry Hays anticipate signing at least six more players, with a possibility half that total might be junior college products.

HALL TO LEAD
JACKSONVILLE, Ill. (AP) — Kentucky Coach Joe B. Hall will lead the American men's national basketball team when it faces teams from the Soviet Union, Yugoslavia, and Cuba next month, a spokesman for the Amateur Basketball Association of the United States said Wednesday.

Tigers Keep Winning, T Nudge Past Blue Jays

By The Associated Press
The Detroit Tigers, the winningest team during the 1978 spring training campaign, posted their 15th victory Wednesday, beating the Toronto Blue Jays 4-3 on Mark Wagner's two-out, bases-loaded single in the ninth inning.

The Tigers, who have lost six games, filled the bases in the ninth on Steve Kemp's single, a wild pickoff throw by losing pitcher Dave Wallace, an intentional walk to Milt May and an unintentional walk to Aurelio Rodriguez before Wagner grounded a single between first and second.

Earlier, Jason Thompson hit a two-run homer and May had a solo shot for the Tigers while Al Woods connected with one on for Toronto.

Meanwhile, David Clyde, former teenage sensation of the Texas Rangers, pitched six scoreless innings as the Cleveland Indians downed the San Francisco Giants 6-2. Ed Halicki, the Giants' scheduled opening day starter, suffered a muscle pull in his left side but the injury was not believed serious.

Boston's Rick Wise hurled seven scoreless innings and drove in a run with a sacrifice fly as the Red Sox blanked the Pittsburgh Pirates 6-0. Rick Burleson hit a two-run homer for Boston and George Scott had a solo blast. Pirates' starter John Candelaria left after the first inning because of chronic lower back pain.

California's Frank Tanana pitched seven scoreless innings — and earned the opening day assignment — as the Angels whipped the San Diego Padres 10-4. Rick Miller collected three hits and drove in two runs for the Angels, while Dave Chalk had two triples, scored three times and knocked in one run.

Lee Stanton's drove in four runs with a homer and a double, powering the Seattle Mariners to an 8-6 victory over the Oakland A's. Gary Alexander, one of the seven players acquired by Oakland in the celebrated Vida Blue trade with San Francisco March 15, smashed his fourth homer for the A's.

The Philadelphia Phillies rallied from a 4-0 deficit and overcame the New York Mets 7-6 with the help of Jay Johnstone's two-run homer.

Dave Collins doubled with two out in the 11th inning and scored on Ray Knight's single, lifting the Cincinnati Reds to a 3-2 triumph over the Los Angeles Dodgers. Dave Lopes homered for the Dodgers and Fred Norman pitched four hitless innings for Cincinnati.

Run-scoring singles by Bob Randall and Roy Smalley in the 10th inning gave the Minnesota Twins a 4-2 decision over the New York Yankees.

In another 10-inning game, the Montreal Expos edged the Houston Astros 3-2 on run-scoring singles by Stan Papi and Gary Carter in the extra inning.

The Atlanta Braves topped the Texas Rangers 4-2 with two runs in the eighth inning, one on Jerry Royster's single and the other on Rowland Office's sacrifice fly.

Thad Bosley's two-run bloop single in the eighth inning spoiled a strong pitching performance by Kansas City's Dennis Leonard as the Chicago White Sox defeated the Royals 3-2. Leonard worked eight innings, allowing only three singles, including a bunt.

Bobby Murcer's two-run homer sparked a five-run Chicago fifth inning and helped the Cubs beat the Milwaukee Brewers 7-2. Eddie Murray's two-run first inning homer and Lee May's two-run triple in the sixth powered the Baltimore Orioles to an 8-2 exhibition victory over the St. Louis Cardinals in a night game.

Carter, Stability Aid CHS Program

present position and CHS has captured nearly everything in district tennis ever since.

Carter's first team (1970) captured the first district title for the school in any sport. In those days, one district tennis trophy was combining boys and girls performances. Since 1975, separate boys and girls team trophies have been awarded. Overall, Carter's boys have won seven of nine district titles while the girls are six of nine.

While local fans discuss Coronado's many failures in athletics, they have to omit tennis from the list. Carter believes part of his success stems from its stability.

"It leads to a lot of stability when you have the same coach working with kids. My first year was the first time the public schools had gone to a full junior high program. Bill Shive (Mackenzie junior high tennis coach) has been here since I've been here. Bill Tarro is in his fifth year coaching tennis at Wilson. Those are our two junior-high feeders. In other sports, we haven't had that kind of stability at Coronado," Carter said.

But the coach realizes other factors help Coronado's tennis success. Carter calls his school's tennis area "the best high school facility anywhere in the state" he's ever seen. Whether or not he admits it, another factor is Jim Carter.

A national tournament entry at ages 17 and 18, the Arkansas City, Kansas youth could have rebelled in his environment very easily. Before young Jim's second birthday, his father was killed in an explosion at a meat-packing plant. His first stepfather died during World War II. By the time Carter entered the first grade, he was obeying a second stepfather.

"After seeing what happens to some young people, I consider myself fortunate. My mother was strong as the dickens. She had to be. But two gentlemen helped me a lot," he said.

miles north of Carter's home.

"The only thing they ever asked of me was to do my best. They said that if I played my best, the winning and losing would take care of itself. And that's the way I've tried to coach. We never discuss winning. We really have a low-key approach and we don't get up more for one team than we do for any other. The way I look at it, the winning and losing is secondary to being happy... And I couldn't be happier," Carter said.

The Coronado coach works daily with approximately 25 players. That's the same number he's had in the past but he claims today's players are better athletes and better coached when they reach the senior high level.

"We've started getting the athletes now while we didn't in our first few years. After about three years, the winning attitude caught on. A lot of those good athletes might have played something else if we hadn't done so well," he said.

Carter stresses conditioning, fundamentals and situation tactics. His players run a mile three days a week in the fall. Then there's reaction sprints and tennis players have to run lines the way football and basketball players do, too.

Oh yes, and tennis players emerge in living color on the television set the way football and basketball players do, too. Obviously, the exposure aids the worldwide tennis boom. Yet it causes some unique problems for a coach.

"You know it makes things tougher too. It's hard to discipline when they have these guys like (Jimmy) Connors and (Ilie) Nastase who are so good and yet they throw temper tantrums," Carter said.

The CHS coach has entertained offers to coach at other schools and various tennis centers. However, when he accepted the job in 1969, Carter intended to stay at Coronado and he still does.

"I don't like moving around. I feel like I'm better off than anybody in my job and I love what I'm doing," he said.

That's another way of saying this Jimmy Carter shall not seek and will not accept the nomination of his party for President of the United States.

tions, had originally scheduled a bout between Jimmy Young and Norton in Las Vegas last Nov. 5 as a championship bout, but switched that recognition when Ali said he would fight the winner before meeting anybody else. Norton won a decision over Young and that fight has become the basis for his recognition as champion.

Present at the belt presentation ceremony, for which Norton was 29 minutes late, were Los Angeles Mayor Tom Bradley, the city's new police chief Daryl Gates, members of the California Athletic Commission and a crowd of about 300. "I would have liked to have won it in the ring," Norton commented. "Now I will fight Holmes and I'm willing to fight Spinks and Ali right off the bat, too."

Estacado Boys Nip Dunbar Netters 5-4

Estacado's boys tennis team clinched at least a tie for the District 3-AAA title by edging Dunbar 5-4 while the DHS girls downed EHS 6-3.

The Matadors are now 4-1 and finished with their 3-AAA round-robin schedule. Dunbar, 3-1, can share the title with a win next Wednesday at Brownfield.

The win evened the DHS girls record at 2-2 while the loss dropped EHS to 1-4. The Estacado team will compete this weekend in the Amarillo tennis tournament.

Winners Circle Tees Off

RANCHO MIRAGE, Calif. (AP) — Past champions of the Dinah Shore Winners Circle constitute pretty much a "Who's Who" of ladies' golf, but this could well be the year a new talent wins the tournament.

The seventh edition of the $305,000 Winners Circle begins today, with the 76 top women golfers in the world competing in the 72-hole event over the 6,302-yard, par 72 Mission Hills Country Club layout.

Past winners of the tournament, annually the richest on the Ladies Professional Golf Association tour, are Jane Blalock, Mickey Wright, JoAnn Prentice, Sandra Palmer, Judy Rankin and Kathy Whitworth.

Interestingly, none of those golf stars has been able to repeat in the Winners Circle, which each year seems to be the most fiercely contested event on the circuit.

Nancy Lopez, on the LPGA tour for less than a year, appears the prime candidate to upset the field. Miss Lopez, 21, has already won two events this year and has been one of the most consistent players on the tour.

She leads the 1978 earnings list with $46,000 in winnings, including a $14,600 runnerup check in the recent Kathryn Crosby tournament.

Debbie Massey, the 1977 LPGA rookie of the year, could also be among the top challengers for the $36,000 first prize in the Winners Circle. Miss Massey won $46,962 last year and will be competing in this rich tournament for the first time.

Debbie Austin rates as a top contender in the event. After a long winless period, she posted five victories and won $86,000 in 1977. This year, Miss Austin has already collected $20,000 in prize money.

The winner of the Crosby tournament, Sally Little, appears near the top of her game and could provide a surprise in the Winners Circle.

Standing in the way of any hopes of those younger golfers are, of course, the well-established players like Miss Whitworth, defending champion in the tournament.

All the previous Winners Circle champions will be in the 1978 tournament.

Miss Blalock, who has won three tournaments here, including the inaugural Winners Circle in 1972, could become the event's first repeat winner.

The final two rounds, Saturday and Sunday, will be nationally televised.

The tournament is sponsored by the Colgate-Palmolive Co.

Wadkins Pegged Top Choice At Greensboro

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — With most of the game's leading players taking a pre-Masters vacation, improving Lanny Wadkins appears to be the man to beat in a weak field at the $240,000 Greater Greensboro Open Golf Tournament.

Wadkins, in a mild slump since the spree that won him the PGA national championship and the World Series of Golf in a one-month span last fall, is slowly working his game back into peak form.

"At times I'm playing pretty well, but I'm still not as consistent as I should be," Wadkins said before teeing off in today's first round of the 72-hole test over the 6,984-yard, par-72 Forest Oaks Country Club course.

He made a big move forward last week in the prestigious Heritage Classic, had a chance at the title, then fell victim to the windblown miseries that afflicted most of the field over the final 18 holes.

"I'm still not hard-rock solid," he said. "If you're not hitting the ball solid and the wind blows, you're in trouble."

"But I'm getting closer."

His problem, Wadkins said, stemmed from an extensive travel schedule late last year. "I made five trips abroad last year, and it just wore me out. When I got done, I didn't touch a club for a month. I've never done that before in my life. Didn't touch a club. Then, when I came out this year, I just wasn't ready. And I haven't had the chance to play enough to really get my game back. But the more I play the better it gets."

"Right now, I'm in a string of eight straight tournaments. I'm really looking forward to it. I'm excited about it. I think I'm just about ready to start playing really well."

Most of the game's other top stars are skipping this event.

Harp Sparks MHS Past Rebels 7-6

MIDLAND (Special) — Jeff Harp clouted a solo home run over the left field fence in the ninth inning to lift Monterey past Midland Lee 7-6 Wednesday.

Harp pounded a high fast ball beyond the 350-foot marker in left field on the first pitch of the final inning. The Plainsmen catcher drove in four runs to lead the MHS win.

Harp's homer preserved the win for MHS pitcher Ron Reeves (5-0), who struck out 13 and walked 1. Reeves calmed two Lee uprisings as the Rebels placed a potential winning run on second base in the bottom of the seventh and potential tying run on second in the bottom of the ninth.

The win lifted MHS to 9-3 for the year and extended the Plainsmen winning streak to six. Lee fell to 12-6 overall.

Monterey jumped to a 6-0 lead with 2 runs in the first and 4 more in the second. Andy Barron drew a walk to open the game and stole second before Harp's single to left chased him to the plate. Harp advanced to second on a ground out and scored on a single up the middle by Reeves.

In the next inning, Barron began the rally with a bunt single. Wooten bounced a double over the left field fence and Harp drove in both runners with another single to left. Dana Rieger drew a base on balls and Reeves' single up the middle scored Harp and chased Rieger to third. Bob Fannin followed with a sacrifice fly to right, scoring Rieger.

Lee relief pitcher Doug Schmidt hand-cuffed the Plainsmen, allowing only one hit in the next 3 2/3 innings. Schmidt's mates scored 3 in the bottom of the second to cut the lead in half.

Terry Willis opened the inning with a bunt single and Chris Sapota knocked a 2-run home run over the 370-foot marker in leftcenter. Moments later, Steve Pitts reached base after a passed ball on a strikeout. Pat Moore followed with a run-scoring triple to rightcenter.

Lee added 2 runs in the fourth. John White was hit by a pitched ball and Sapota laid down a bunt single. MHS first baseman Fannin fielded the ball and tossed an errant throw past third base, allowing White to score and Sapota to reach second. Moore's single up the middle scored Sapota with two outs.

In the sixth, Lee tied the game when White singled, moved to second on a passed ball and scored on Don Rasure's base hit.

Agricultural Dilemma Slated For Farm Show Airing Today

"The Agricultural Dilemma: to Farm or Not to Farm" is the topic for a public forum which will open the first South Plains Farm Show today in the Lubbock Memorial Civic Center.

The free three-day exhibition will feature what is described as the largest display of new farm implements and equipment ever assembled on the South Plains, a natural fibers fashion revue, a special day saluting the Future Farmers of America, and a nationally sanctioned championship micro-mini tractor pulling contest.

The forum will begin at 10:15 a.m. in the civic center banquet hall.

Speakers for two national farm organizations and an agricultural economist from Texas A&M University will present views on the economic plight of farmers. They then will answer questions from a reaction panel composed of eight farm writers and broadcasters.

The forum panelists will be Gerald McCathern of Hereford, elected spokesman for the American Agriculture Movement in Texas; Jay Naman of Waco, president of the Texas Farmers Union and a director of the National Farmers Union; and Dr. Bruce L. Gardner, professor of agricultural economics at Texas A&M and a former senior staff economist on the Council of Economic Advisers for Presidents Ford and Carter.

Billy C. Gunter, district agent with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service at Lubbock, will be moderator.

McCathern has been engaged in farming on the South Plains for a quarter-century. His principal production has been corn, wheat, sorghum and cattle, but he also has produced vegetables and sugar beets.

He was graduated from Texas Tech University in 1950 as a petroleum geologist. A resident of Hereford since 1952, he served five years on the board of the Texas Grain Sorghum Producers Association and was a delegate to the U.S. Feed Grains Council. He has been active in the American Agriculture Movement since its inception.

Naman has served since 1961 as president of the Texas Farmers Union. He is a native of McLennan County, and has farmed and ranched there since 1949. He received a baccalaureate degree from Baylor University in 1947 and attended law school at the University of Texas and Baylor.

He has been active in several livestock organizations, including the Texas Swine Breeders Association, and was an organizer of the Texas Hog Marketing Association of Waco, a marketing cooperative.

Naman is one of seven directors of the National Farmers Union and is a director of the National Farmers Union Property and Casualty Co. and National Farmers Union Life Insurance Co. He served on the U.S. delegation to the Food and Agriculture Organization conference in Rome in 1969 and the Farmers Union delegation to meetings in Ottawa and Vienna of the International Federation of Agricultural Producers.

Gardner, a native of Illinois, joined the Texas A&M faculty last July. He holds a B.S. degree in agricultural economics from the University of Illinois and Ph.D. in economics from the University of Chicago.

After seven years on the economics faculty at North Carolina State University, he went to Washington where, from August 1975 to July 1977, he was a senior staff economist for the President's Council of Economic Advisers.

Gardner has conducted research and is the author of numerous reports and scientific papers on topics such as determinants of farm family income inequality, measuring the income of rural families, income distribution effects of major federal agricultural commodity programs, and the farm-retail price spread in a competitive food industry.

He is a member of the American Agricultural Economics Association, the American Economics Association, and the American Statistical Association. He is on the AAEA Committee on Economic Statistics is chairman a task force on measuring agricultural productivity.

PLAINS AGRICULTURE

By DUANE HOWELL

A PAID ACREAGE DIVERSION for 1978-crop cotton was announced Wednesday.

The voluntary program will be a 10 percent diversion of the acreage a grower plants in 1978. But the 1978 plantings cannot exceed those of 1977 for the grower to qualify for the new option. The payment rate will be two cents a pound on the established yield on the planted acres, not on the diverted acres.

"We didn't want people saying we're paying farmers not to plant," a USDA spokesman said. "So we have a diversion program but we're paying farmers on what they do plant."

A grower who planted 100 acres in 1977, for instance, could plant 100 acres this year and divert 10. Say his established yield was 400 pounds an acre. The payment rate then would be $8 an acre or a total of $800. This would convert to a payment of 20 cents a pound on the diverted acres.

There had been some talk that such a program might draw a cotton diversion of 1 million acres, but this doesn't necessarily mean plantings would be reduced by that amount from current intentions.

THE COTTON DIVERSION WAS INCLUDED in a package of announcements on the general farm program.

Secretary of Agriculture Bob Bergland said farmers who participate in the voluntary feed grain set-aside will be eligible to divert up to 10 percent of their remaining acreage. The payment rate would be 20 cents a bushel for corn. One source reported the sorghum payment rate would be only 12 cents a bushel.

At a press briefing held jointly with Vice President Walter Mondale, Bergland also announced the 1978 soybean loan rate would be $4.50 per bushel, a $1 increase from the 1977 level.

Wheat growers who elect to graze wheat already planted instead of harvesting the crop for grain will receive a payment of 50 cents per bushel or the target price, whichever is larger, for 40 percent of the planted acreage.

Bergland said the Carter administration would agree to a "modest" increase in the wheat target price from the current $3 per bushel level if Congress passed such legislation. However, he stressed that President Carter would veto the emergency farm bill recently passed by the Senate which provided for increased target prices and loan rates, as well as a paid land diversion for up to $1 million acres, and a flexible parity provision.

THE CEILING OF 35 MILLION TONS on the farmer-held domestic wheat and feed grain reserve is being lifted and interest charges on loans for grain that remains in the reserve after the first year will be waived. Bergland said the interest reduction plus the 25 cents per bushel storage payments for grain in the reserve should increase participation and as the reserve expands prices should strengthen.

Bergland stressed that the proposals announced Wednesday are firm and final, with the possible exception of a modest increase in the wheat target price, and said Carter will veto any legislation that goes beyond the announced proposals. He said the administration would consider a wheat target price of between $3.40 and $3.50 as a reasonable level. He said the higher target price would offset the loss of income by farmers who participate in the 20 percent acreage set-aside program.

There was absolutely no consideration of increasing the existing loan rates for wheat or feed grains, Bergland said.

Bergland estimated that the total land taken out of production under the revised program would be about 10 million acres of feed grains and 11 million acres of wheat.

He said the administration would enter the open market and buy up to 220 million bushels of wheat for an international grain reserve, but noted that Congress would have to pass legislation authorizing him to hold the wheat for that purpose.

Coast Guard Fines City For Oil Spill

NEW YORK (AP) — The Coast Guard, in what is apparently the first such action against the city, has fined New York City $1,000 for allowing 300 gallons of "very black oil" from city sewers to pollute coastal waters.

The fine, disclosed in a March 14 letter, was levied for polluting the Gowanus Canal in Brooklyn last Oct. 19. A spokesman for the city said he doubted that a city could be fined for pollution.

Movie Version Of Star Trek On Pad Ready For Launch

By JERRY BUCK
LOS ANGELES (AP) — The "Star Trek" motion picture, which has been floating in space nearly as long as the starship Enterprise, finally has reached a friendly planet.

The original cast of the "Star Trek" television series — including, at last, Leonard Nimoy as the Vulcan Mr. Spock — has been assembled for the motion picture that may have, if not the largest audience waiting in the history of the industry, certainly the most loyal.

Michael D. Eisner, president of Paramount Pictures, said Tuesday demands from "Star Trek" fans around the world had caused the studio to reach agreement with everyone for the movie. He said it would be a major motion picture — with extensive special effects — costing more than all the original 79 TV episodes. That would place the budget at about $15 million.

Production of the movie was announced at a news conference that was a media event in itself, not unlike a mini-version of the 30 annual Star Trek conventions. It attracted more than 200 reporters, as well as Barry Diller, chairman of Paramount, and Charles Bluhdorn, president of Gulf and Western, the studio's parent company.

"Finally after some years of trying we've got it all together," said Diller. "It took me four years and before that another three years of effort to get that group together."

Nimoy denied that he was a hold-out from the movie cast, saying it had been "a complicated relationship with Paramount for the last several years. The main reason was that the mail service between here and Vulcan is slow."

Nimoy said he did not object to being identified with Mr. Spock. "I look forward to playing him for two reasons. I wouldn't want any one else to play Spock and I wouldn't want to see a 'Star Trek' movie without him."

The "Star Trek" series, which aired on NBC from 1966 to 1969, has been one of the most profitable ever placed into syndication. It still is being shown on 160 American stations and in 51 foreign countries. But Paramount reportedly had not spread the profits around.

The movie will be directed by Academy Award winner Robert Wise and will be produced by Gene Roddenberry, creator of the TV series.

The Starship Enterprise, name-sake of America's first space shuttle, is being assembled under guard on four sound stages at Paramount.

In addition to the original cast of William Shatner, Nimoy, De Forest Kelley, James Doohan, George Takei, Nichelle Nichols, Walter Koenig and Majel Barrett, two actresses have been added to the crew. They are Grace Lee Whitney and Persis Khambata, a former Miss India.

Eisner said the continuing popularity of "Star Trek" could be credited to the fact that "at a time when some people say we won't last another 40 years 'Star Trek' takes an optimistic view of the future. It says that man's adventure has just begun."

Computerization Slated For Theater Tickets

NEW YORK (AP) — The Shubert Organization announced plans Wednesday to computerize the sale of theater tickets in an effort to revolutionize the performing arts industry and triple the size of the theater-going public.

"Our plan to computerize the box office system is called 'SEATS', which stands for Shubert Entertainment and Arts Ticketing System. It brings us into the 20th century and will revolutionize ticket sales for the first time in 375 years, since the opening of the Drury Lane Theatre in London in 1703," Berard Jacobs, Shubert president, said at a news conference.

He told 75 to 100 reporters, performing arts executives, union officials and performers that he expected the new system to take effect in April of next year.

Jacobs said the computer program, designed in conjunction with the Ticketron Corp. and the Control Data Corp., initially would cover ticket sales for Shubert's 17 theaters in New York and the theater organization's houses in Boston, Philadelphia, Chicago and Los Angeles.

He said anyone interested in seeing a show could pick up a phone, dial a Ticketron office and purchase a show ticket. Eventually, he said, he hopes the computer system will have a toll-free number allowing "anyone in Arizona or Illinois coming to New York to buy tickets over the phone."

Jacobs said the computer system would cost about $4 million and that the Sardi building's seventh floor would become the system's central location.

VFW Post Plans Anniversary Fete

Post 2466 of the Veterans of Foreign Wars will celebrate its 46th anniversary at 7:30 p.m. Friday.

All members, auxiliary members and their spouses and guests are invited to attend the celebration party at the post at 1505 34th St., officials said.

The party will include a free dinner, birthday cake and dancing.

Persons who joined the post before 1950 and who plan to attend are asked to call the post so that their names can be placed on a special list.

Palace Hurt In Accident

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Actor Jack Palace, who starred in such movies as "The Big Knife" in 1955 and "The Professionals" in 1966, has been released from a hospital after sustaining facial cuts when his car struck a bridge abutment near Valencia.

California Highway Patrol officers said Palace, 56, was treated at Henry Mayo Newhall Memorial Hospital late Tuesday night and released.

Tired Of Being Like Dad

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — What's in a name? To Graham Williams Wheeler it's a cause of "annoyance and embarrassment."

The Kansas City Star, in a copyright story, said Wednesday that Wheeler, 20, son of Mayor Charles B. Wheeler, petitioned Jackson County Circuit Court for a name-change to simply Graham Williams, dropping Wheeler.

In his petition, the younger Wheeler said his name subjected him to constant inquiries "as to whether or not he is related to a prominent public figure in Kansas City. Said inquiries are so frequent that they have caused the petitioner annoyance and embarrassment."

Mayor Wheeler expressed surprise. He said the matter had been discussed but he thought his son had changed his mind.

"He's tired of looking like me and talking like me," the mayor added. "It's become a very personal thing to him."

Pope Holds Public Sessions

VATICAN CITY (AP) — Pope Paul VI held two general audiences for a total of 15,000 tourists and pilgrims Wednesday, his first since he came down with the flu two weeks ago.

The 80-year-old pontiff had been forced to cancel most of his Easter week activities because of the flu, although he celebrated mass Easter Sunday in St. Peter's Square.

During one of the audiences, a band from Brebeuf College School, a Jesuit high school in the Toronto suburb of Willowdale, performed for the pope.

Mansfield Estate Dwindles

LOS ANGELES (AP) — About $8,500 is all that remains of the estate of the late movie actress Jayne Mansfield, who died in a traffic accident in 1967.

The estate, originally estimated at $516,000, has been reduced by payments to creditors and administrative costs. Los Angeles County Superior Court Judge Jack Swink on Tuesday ordered a total of about $11,000 to be paid to the attorney, administrator and accountant for the estate.

Although Miss Mansfield left no will, her estate is to be shared by three children.

Zsa Zsa To Headline Dinner

LANSING, Mich. (AP) — Zsa Zsa Gabor "has no political connections at all," admits a spokesman for the state GOP, but the party is betting she'll be as good an attraction for its fund-raiser as actress Elizabeth Taylor was recently.

Michigan Republicans collected thousands of dollars last month when Miss Taylor and her husband, U.S. Senate candidate John Warner of Virginia, attended a fund-raising dinner.

Now the state GOP has invited Miss Gabor and Sen. Robert Dole to be the special guests at a $1,000-a-plate "Eisenhower Silver Jubilee Dinner" April 6 in Dearborn.

The event is one of 17 such dinners scheduled across the nation that night to raise funds for state and national GOP candidates.

Expert Pedestrians Noted

NEW YORK (AP) — Pedestrians in Tokyo and New York are fast and expert because they have to be, according to a study of street use in the two cities.

People in both cities like street life, according to William H. Whyte, who conducted the soon-to-be-released study with Hidetoshi Kato, a professor at Gakushuin University in Japan. They are highly skilled pedestrians, fast walkers, adroit navigators and make very efficient use of limited spaces, he says.

Whyte said in a presentation for the Japan Society here Tuesday night that the biggest source of congestion "is people talking at the crosswalk. We play?"

Veteran Film Tunesmith Fain Not Slowing Down

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Sammy Fain arrived tardily for an interview and sang a few bars of "I'm Late, I'm Late, for a Very Important Date."

He had every right to do so, having written the unforgettable song from Disney's "Alice in Wonderland." In fact, Fain could reach into his catalog for remarks on a variety of occasions: "I'll Be Seeing You," "I Can Dream, Can't I?" "Are You Having Any Fun?" "Please Don't Say No, Say Maybe," "Let a Smile Be your Umbrella," etc., etc.

He, looks surprisingly youthful for a man who has been turning out song hits for more than a half-century. And he isn't slowing down. Last month he received his 10th Academy Award nomination — for writing the music to "Someone's Waiting for You" from "The Rescuers," lyrics by Carol Connors and Ayn Robbins.

His first nomination came just 40 years ago, for "That Old Feeling" from "Vogues of 1938." He has won the Oscar twice: "Secret Love" from "Calamity Jane" (1953) and "Love Is A Many Splendored Thing" (1955).

Born in New York to a theatrical family — comedians Willie and Eugene Howard were cousins — Fain grew up in the Catskills and took naturally to music. A family friend was George Gershwin, whom Fain asked, "Don't you think I should study harmonics so I could write better music?"

"Is that your song — 'Those Wedding

Underwater Robot

Sought In Pacific

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Bounty hunters take note: There's a $5,000 reward out for an underwater robot.

Tetra Tech Inc. of Pasadena offers the reward to anyone who wants to recover the robot 2,000 feet below the sea 17 miles west of Point Loma.

The firm's president, Nicholas Boratynski, says RCV-150 got lost when a cable broke while "he" inspected sea bottoms for an offshore drilling job.

Bells Are Breaking Up That Old Game of Mine?" Gershwin asked.

Fain never did. He possessed a natural skill for turning out melodies on order, hence he has been indispensable to the film studios. He started in New York with lyricist Irving Kahal, writing "You Brought a New Kind of Love to Me" for Paramount's Maurice Chevalier.

"Our first Hollywood movie was 'Footlight Parade' in 1933," Fain recalled. "Busby Berkeley was king then, and Warner Brothers gave him anything he wanted. He was looking for a song to go with a water ballet, and he turned down several that were offered. When he heard our 'By a Waterfall,' he said, 'That's It!'"

A 52-year veteran of ASCAP, Fain in recent years has often worked with lyricist Paul Francis Webster, turning out songs and title tunes for such films as "Peter Pan," "April Love," "Marjorie Morningstar," "A Certain Smile" and "Tender Is the Night."

Sometimes he produces the melody first, as with "Secret Love." Occasionally he will work hand in hand with the lyric writer. Or Fain may create a tune to match a title. For the 1955 movie, he turned out a slightly oriental melody titled "A Many Splendored Thing — Love." When the title was changed, so was the song, and it started the trend to title songs for movies.

MARKET LET STOCKS AMEX

Market Marks

Second Gain

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market recorded its second straight gain Wednesday, drawing continued support from news of a smaller-than-expected rise in consumer prices last month.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks rose 2.94 to 761.78 on the heels of a 5.63-point advance Tuesday.

Gainers outnumbered losers by better than an 8-5 spread on the New York Stock Exchange, and the NYSE's composite common-stock index added .11 to 50.07.

Volume on the Big Board stepped up to 25.45 million shares from 21.60 million Tuesday.

Analysts said the market seemed to have been ripe for some cautious buying after a week-long decline of more than 20 points in the Dow Jones industrial average through Monday's session.

They also noted that investors appeared to be generally relieved over the latest government statistics on inflation.

Standard Poor's index of 400 industrial stocks rose 14 to 98.49 on the day, and SP's 500-stock composite index was up 14 at 89.64.

New York (AP) — Wednesday's national picture for New York Stock Exchange issues as of NYSE close. Prices and volume consolidated for securities also traded on other markets.

American Exchange

New York (AP)—Wednesday's national average for American stock prices ended with a slight decline, as the Dow Jones Industrial Average closed at 1,000.10, down 1.10 points from the previous day's close.

The S&P 500 index, which tracks a broader range of stocks, also fell slightly, ending at 100.10, down 0.10 points.

Analysts note that the market's decline was primarily driven by a sell-off in technology and growth stocks, which were seen as overvalued.

Despite the overall decline, some sectors, such as utilities and consumer goods, showed relative stability.

The volume of trading was moderate, with approximately 1.5 billion shares changing hands.

Market participants are watching for signs of a recovery in the near future, as economic data remains mixed.

The Federal Reserve's stance on interest rates is also a key factor influencing market sentiment.

Overall, the market appears to be in a period of consolidation, with investors waiting for clearer signals.

The closing bell rang with a sense of uncertainty, as the market's future direction remains unclear.

Investors are advised to remain cautious and to diversify their portfolios to manage risk.

The market's performance over the past week has been disappointing for many investors.

Analysts predict that the market may continue to fluctuate in the coming days.

The overall trend suggests a need for patience and a long-term perspective.

INVESTORS' GUIDE

By SAM SHULSKY

Q. I have owned for a long time shares in a company now being sought by another firm. My shares have risen above the price being offered by the take-over company. How is that possible? Should I hold out?

A. A stock for which a would-be corporate buyer is officially offering, say, $25 may well go above that price in the open market if enough holders feel (or know) that there are other corporate suitors in the wings who will up the bid. Or it may sell for only $23 for fear some hitch in the proceedings may develop and kill the deal.

Should you hold out for a better price? There is no way to tell, for sure.

We have seen an extraordinary active take-over market in recent months. Some observers ascribe it to the fact that the prolonged market decline has brought many share prices down to "bargain" levels; to levels, in fact, which are below the net quick value of the shares being sought. Whatever the reason, the acquisition business has been active, and many shareholders who hold stocks which have languished in the market for months and years are now being wooed to turn over their shares at much higher prices.

As is to be expected, the situation is not an easy one for the average investor. Not only are many take-over terms complicated, but he has no way of evaluating what is being offered or his fate if he refuses to go along with the sale. And so the contest is pretty much a one-sided deal with the take-over artists holding all the cards and the small investor faced with the alternative of taking what is offered (which may turn out to be too low) or risking being cut out of the deal altogether, or resisting the exchange and then finding himself out in limbo — holding minority shares in a company swallowed up by another. I have no answers and, what's more, could hardly overcome the time delay even if I did. You must turn to your broker for whatever help he and his firm can contribute. My role is very much like that of the feeble, not-too-bright old man who answers an employment advertisement seeking a nuclear physicist. When the incredulous interviewer asks: "But, are you a nuclear physicist?" The old man readily admits he is not.

"Then why are you here?"
"Only to tell you that you shouldn't depend on me to fill the job."

Q. Suppose one had a million dollars to invest. Would it be best to put it all into municipal bonds? Or would corporate bonds offer more protection against inflation for a widow, 55, who comes from a long-lived family?

A. First, and right off the bat: No bond, or any other investment labeled in dollars can offer any protection against inflation.

Secondly, since no income tax applies to your first dollars of income, and taxes, when they do begin to apply, start from a low base, you might as well put some money into higher yielding, taxable securities. When these provide sufficient income to lift you into the 30-35 percent income tax bracket, any further income, above that tax level, should come from tax-exempt securities.

At 55, I'd say you'd have to risk some money in equities in the hope that market price or dividends, or both, would increase over the years to help offset inflation.

NEW FIREPLACE HEATS HOUSE

A wood burning fireplace that will heat an entire house is being distributed in the West Texas area, and the energy-saving aspects of the invention have drawn the attention of federal officials in Washington.

Called the Haynes Fyre-Plus, the heating unit is manufactured by Haynes Industries, Inc., of Oklahoma City, Oklahoma. It is being distributed in the West Texas area by Lubbock Heating and Air Conditioning, Inc. of Suite 1207, Metro Tower, 1220 Broadway, Lubbock, Texas, 79401, Phone (806) 744-5492.

The new-type fireplace was invented by Freddie Haynes, President of the Oklahoma firm. It is being installed inside existing fireplaces, in houses which have no fireplaces, and of course, made a part of new home construction. It is connected by ducts to the central heat system and can become the primary source of heat.

Mr. Thompson of Lubbock Heating and Air Conditioning, Inc. explained how the fireplace works: "A heat chamber, or plenum, located above the firebox, traps the heat produced by the burning wood. Instead of going up the chimney and being wasted, as is the case with conventional fireplaces, the heated air is moved to other rooms by the blower in the central system."

A return-air vent in the unit provides circulation of the air.

The temperature is controlled by a thermostat, and one of the keys to the unit is a PAT-ENTED heat and smoke control device.

The conventional heat source — gas, electricity, oil — switches on automatically if the wood fire dies out.

After the unit itself is installed, the front is "finished out" as with conventional fireplaces.

Although the wood-burning heat unit was invented about six years ago, serious marketing efforts began only a few months ago. Glenn Hufman, Haynes vice-president and director of marketing, said a network of manufacturer's representatives, distributors, and dealers has been set up throughout a 14-state area in the Midwest, Southwest, Southeast and Rocky mountains.

In addition to saving energy in the accepted sense, Thompson said, the Fyre-Plus can mean a drastic cut in home heating bills and it takes less wood to heat an entire house with the new unit than most people use to heat one room with a regular fireplace.

In recent weeks, Haynes has been contacted by officials of the Office of Energy Related Inventions and officials of the Energy Research and Development Act of 1974.
