Coming Sunday

Crimes

The times may change but the charges don't. At least that's what a spot check of early-day law enforcement records reveals. These revelations in Sunday's Local section show that the same crimes concerned pioneer Midland County law enforcers as much as they do their present-day counterparts.

Shelters

Backyard fallout shelters are often thought of relics of the 1950s, but Midlanders are still building them — just in case — and putting them to good use in the meantime. In Sunday's Lifestyle section, read about local fallout shelters and civil defense.

Teachers

Ronald A. Britton, vice-president of the Midland Independent School District board, uses "Speaking Out" to share a teacher's look at how those in the profession pass along knowledge — and affect the future.

Council may trim services

By LANA CUNNINGHAM
Assistant City Editor

Looking at a projected $2.1 million shortfall by the end of this fiscal year, Midland City Council argued over eliminating MidTran during a special session Friday morning at City Hall.

At one point in the budget review session, a councilman blamed part of the city's financial problems on the city manager's department; and a special auditor hired by the council warned the city will face "several years of stringencies."

To bring down expenditures, the council looked at several areas of cutting services provided by the city — including shutting down the public transportation service, not opening a new fire substation in northeast Midland and not filling positions when vacated.

Finance Director Troy Gifford had prepared the figures reflecting where the city stands for the first four months of the fiscal year, which began Oct. 1, 1983.

SALES TAX has increased slightly, he noted in the report. By the end of the year it should hit $7.3 million, which is what had been projected. It would be the same as the amount received in 1983, the report noted.

"Ad valorem tax collections appear to be on target with the budget," he stated in the report, with $6.65 million collected. By the end of the year, the figure should be $8.83 million.

Expenditures in the General Fund budget are estimated to total $30.185 million while revenues amount to $28.048 million. To make up the difference, the council last September approved moving $2.5 million out of the unappropriated surplus.

If the figures keep moving on track, the report showed the city will have to take $2.1 million out of the surplus, showing a savings of $400,000.

But almost half a million dollar savings didn't please the council. However, afterward Councilman Tom Sloan told one television news reporter the council was happy with the report and felt the city is in good financial shape.

Gemayel, Assad agree to cease-fire

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Presidents Amin Gemayel of Lebanon and Hafez Assad of Syria have agreed to a Syrian-guaranteed cease-fire in Lebanon's civil war, a senior Lebanese official said Friday.

Gemayel also is ready to call Lebanon's warring leaders to renewed reconciliation talks in Switzerland, probably next week, as a step toward including Lebanese opposition leaders in a coalition Cabinet, the official said.

The official, briefing reporters on Gemayel's talks with Assad in Damascus Wednesday and Thursday, denied that Gemayel had agreed to abrogate the May 17 Lebanese-Israeli agreeement that called for the withdrawal of Israeli troops from Lebanon. The official spoke on condition he not be identified.

It was Gemayel's first visit to Syria since he assumed power in September 1982. Syria backs the Shiite Moslem and Druse militias that have been fighting Gemayel's beleagured government.

The cease-fire was to begin Friday evening, the official said. However, fighting was reported after dark along the "green line" dividing Moslem west Beirut from the Christian east. Police said at least one civilian was killed and 20 wounded in fighting in downtown Beirut. Artillery exchanges also were reported in the mountains to the east late in the afternoon.

The senior Lebanese official said, "There is no decision to abrogate the (May 17) agreement."

But he said: "The May 17 agreement is at an impasse. The environment about the agreement has changed. It has not led to withdrawals or peace in Lebanon. Therefore we are looking for ways and means to reach the same objectives."

The official said Lebanon would be consulting with Israel and the United States, which sponsored the talks leading to the accord, and hoped to "go beyond the May 17 agreement."

Syria has opposed the pact, saying it wrecks Arab solidarity against Israel because it recognizes Israel's sovereignty and legitimacy. Syria also said the pact violates Lebanese sovereignty and endangers Syrian security because it would have permitted Israel to patrol a security zone in southern Lebanon.

Israel said it would withdraw its troops only if Syria also withdrew from Lebanon. Syria refused, so the pact never went into effect.

Official sources said Assad had agreed to give Gemayel time to sell the scrapping of the agreement to the Gemayel family's right-wing Phalange Party militia.

The party is led by the president's father, Pierre, and its militia leaders have threatened to boycott reconciliation talks if the May 17 pact is cancelled.

State-run Beirut radio said that Syrian Foreign Minister Abdul-Halim Khaddam was meeting Friday in Damascus with Lebanese opposition leaders who have been fighting Gemayel's government troops.

Assad asked leftist Druse leader Walid Jumblatt and Shiite Moslem militia chief Nabih Berri go to the Syrian capital for talks, Syrian state radio said. Jumblatt, head of the Socialist Progressive Party, had already said abrogation of the May 17 agreement would not be enough to make him end his opposition to Gemayel. Jumblatt has repeatedly demanded Gemayel's resignation.

Jumblatt said Thursday, after the Gemayel-Assad talks, that the Lebanese president should be put on trial because of his orders to the Lebanese army to shell Shiite Moslem and Druse neighborhoods.

Lebanese Foreign Minister Elie Salem met with U.S. Ambassador Reginald Bartholomew Friday afternoon, then flew to Riyadh to consult with Saudi Arabian King Fahd about the Gemayel-Assad meeting.

Bay area mobilizes to find missing boy

By LISA LEVITT

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — They can't find 10-year-old Kevin Collins, but there's no escaping him, either. His freckled face looks out from 200,000 posters plastered in every corner of Northern California since his disappearance three weeks ago.

His name has become a household word in the Bay area, where the case is featured daily in newspapers and on television.

A whole city has mobilized to find the boy.

A hotline has been set up for tips. T-shirts bear Kevin's countenance. There's a $10,000 reward from the city for information.

Police Capt. Lawrence Gray said police find all but about 200 of the 2,000 juveniles reported missing in San Francisco each year, and the rest are considered runaways. Kevin Collins is different.

Ad campaign will promote cooperation

By LAWRENCE BUDD
Staff Writer

The Permian Basin Media Coalition will kick off its $1 million campaign to spark cooperation between Midland and Odessa Sunday with advertisements in both cities' newspapers.

The Bridge Co., a coalition of advertising agencies, presented the campaign Friday to the top echelon management of Midland and Odessa newspapers, radio and TV stations.

Along with advertisements in newspapers and on radio and TV, billboards strategically placed in the two cities will promote the effort.

While the newspapers will be taking up the general cooperation theme from the first, radio and TV will be used to publicize the celebration Saturday, March 10, marking the opening of the north link highway (Highway 191) which will connect the two cities. After this celebration, radio and TV will join the newspapers on the general theme.

Sunday's ads will be the first in a series based on the theme — "Famous Duos." Comedy teams, sports figures and cities which flourished by combining their strengths will be highlighted during the campaign.

"Their ultimate success came from combining their talents and working together," said Price Womack of Womack Claypoole Griffin, one of the four agencies making up the Bridge Co.

Blind doctor performs surgery

Hospital board sanctions him

OGDENSBURG, N.Y. (AP) — A surgeon performed eight operations after going blind four years ago, say state officials who fined the hospital, disciplined the doctor and barred his guide dog from patient areas.

John Bongiovanni

The state Board of Regents said Dr. John R. Bongiovanni, 53, has been blind since March 1980, but performed eight operations in late 1980 or early 1981, including urinary, bladder and prostate surgery.

During one operation, nurses had to tell him when a patient began bleeding upon insertion of an hydraulic extension. Policy dictates termination of the procedure at that point, the regents said.

The board issued sanctions last week against Bongiovanni, including an order that bars him from bringing his guide dog into areas where patients are treated at A. Barton Hepburn Hospital. The board also fined the hospital $4,000.

The ruling "may make it impossible for me to perform," Bongiovanni said.

Bongiovanni said his blindness resulted from an automboile accident four years ago.

There was no evidence Bongiovanni's patients complained about their treatment.

"It's just like insulting a member of your own family," said Edwin Dobisky, executive director of the Greater Ogdensburg Chamber of Commerce, which bestowed a special humanitarian award on the popular physician last December.

Formal non-judicial charges against Bongiovanni included medical practice with his ability impaired, negligent practice, and permitting an unlicensed person to perform activities requiring a license.

The regents also required Bongiovanni to inform all patients that he is blind and complete a retraining course.

Mondale, Hart, Glenn stump in Georgia

By The Associated Press

Walter F. Mondale, Gary Hart and John Glenn worked together Friday night to raise money for the Georgia Democratic Party, but they also took time to toss some barbs in their first joint appearance since the New Hampshire primary.

After a long day of campaigning from Vermont to Georgia, the humor was sharp-edged and the campaign speeches still well-honed for more than 1,300 party faithful on hand for the party's Jefferson-Jackson Day dinner.

With Super Tuesday on March 13 and its primaries across the South only days away, the Democratic presidential candidates are paying a lot of attention to Georgia, Florida and Alabama.

Mondale, who spent much of the day attacking Hart on the issues and on his new-found interest in the South, kept up the barrage.

"The senator talks about his commitment to (the South). But I understand his schedule down here has been designed by a doctor. It's called a surgical strategy. Georgia, Florida, and Alabama are scheduled for a triple 'Hart' bypass," Mondale said.

Council considers cutting services

Falling below expectations was revenue from the sanitation department, which is $300,000 under the budget. Gifford said it was due to the "loss of 64 percent of the total number of apartment units" to private business. Although city officials are working to win back the business, Gifford noted most of the complexes were under contract and not even half are expected to go back to the city this year.

USING THREE METHODS, Gifford projected sample budgets for the fiscal years through 1987. In Case A, if the city tacks on a 7.95 percent tax increase and raises expenditures 4 percent, the budget could be balanced by 1987. Until then, though, the council will have to dip into the surplus.

In Case B, with a 7.95 percent tax increase, 5 percent hike in personnel and 2 percent raise in other costs, the budget again won't balance until 1987. Under Case C, using the same tax increase and a 5 percent raise in personnel and other costs, the budget still isn't balanced by 1987.

The council requested city department heads prepare a list of additional cuts that could be studied by the March 27 meeting.

Assistant City Manager Mike McGregor said they hadn't been replacing every employee that left. But with 830 city employees, less than half fall under a category of not being replaced. Deputy City Manager Fred Poe explained more than half are in police and fire departments or jobs that provide a direct service.

"In sanitation, when a driver quits you have to replace him," Poe said as an example.

SLOAN REMARKED that the council "can't avoid a tax increase."

But Councilman David Godfrey questioned the feasibility of continuing to operate MidTran despite efforts to reduce its losses.

Special auditor Bob Clements — on his last day under the council's employment — noted Midland is under some contract obligations to continue the bus system for 20 years. Or, he suggested, the council could eliminate the commuter service provided workers in the early morning and late afternoon hours.

"Is the commuter service paying its way," asked Councilman Steve Davidson.

"It comes closer than anything else," said Clements, explaining it would require a detailed analysis.

"If the council feels we need to provide a social service, then drop the commuter part," suggested Godfrey.

"It covers what it's doing," said Councilman Gordon Marcum II.

But Godfrey insisted on dropping the commuter part, saying if it loses as much as a nickel it's not worth operating.

Mayor G. Thane Akins recalled when MidTran was initiated in 1979 it was designed by General Motors to broker all the social services transportation into the one. "GM came up with the idea to also generate revenue by commuters."

Sloan suggested the staff study what it would cost the city to eliminate MidTran. "The city of Midland is not a charitable organization," he said.

"YOU HAVE A 20 to 30 year commitment (with the federal government)," said Clements. "You would be liable for the federal and state contributions. You also would have to sell the vehicles."

Midland paid 7 percent of the cost of MidTran's vehicles with the state and federal governments picking up the rest of the tab.

Councilmen discussed where to find another $2.1 million in cuts, and Gifford pointed out that "we based the budget on a $2.5 million shortfall. We're under that."

Two fire substations for north Midland had been approved by a bond issue and are under contract to be constructed. The council, however, talked of not opening the one in northeast Midland that would serve the Saddle Club area.

But some more cuts must be made, according to Sloan, who complained part of the problem came from the city manager's department. "We had to hire Clements to do what the city manager's department should have done."

Clements said the city will be "facing a difficult decade. You're facing several years of stringencies."

Later, the auditor explained that unless there is a big boom resulting from events in the Middle East, a steady growth won't keep the council from dipping into the surplus. Normally, the council tries to keep 15 percent of its General Fund budget — $4.5 million out of $30 million in estimated expenditures — in the surplus.

Midland has about $9 million in surplus now, but the council is concerned about "running it down" too quickly, said Clements.

The city's financial health is better than most cities, he noted, "but even a steady growth won't solve the problem."

Mondale, Hart, Glenn stump in Georgia

Hart held up a shower head, quoting Mondale as saying he had taken "a cold shower" in losing the New Hampshire primary to Hart.

"It's a new shower head and I think you're going to have a chance to use it in many Tuesdays to come," Hart said.

"Tuesday in New Hampshire, voters chose ideas over slogans, solutions over promises and the national interest over special-interest endorsment and money," he added.

Glenn gave a shortened version of his stump speech, appealing to Georgia Democrats to vote for his more conservative views.

"I believe my political philosophy is more in tune with yours than any other candidate running," the Ohio senator said.

The Rev. Jesse Jackson, meanwhile, campaigned in Florida and predicted that Hart's campaign would fizzle in the South.

The fifth candidate, George McGovern, remained behind in Massachusetts, hoping to place first or second in yet another "Super Tuesday" primary after saying that anything less would force him out of the race for the Democratic presidential nomination.

Mondale started his day with a news conference and reception in Augusta, Maine, attended by Gov Joseph E. Brennan, his top supporter in the state, and other prominent Democrats.

Chernenko: U.S. builds obstacles to peace

MOSCOW (AP) — Soviet leader Konstantin U. Chernenko on Friday accused the United States of creating obstacles to peace and said the Americans must take "real actions" to back up their assurances of good intentions.

Chernenko made no new offer aimed at improving ties between the superpowers, but stressed the Soviet Union's commitment to detente and to measures to control nuclear weapons.

He repeated the Kremlin position that if the United States agrees to a nuclear freeze and renounces first use of nuclear weapons, there might be a chance for a disarmament accord.

But on several points he used phrasing different from the more rigid anti-American rhetoric of his predecessor, Yuri V. Andropov.

Chernenko, who became Communist Party chief Feb. 13 after the death of Andropov, is the official candidate of the Kuibyshevsky district of northeastern Moscow in Sunday's elections for 1,500 parliamentary deputies.

His 45-minute address, an election speech televised nationwide, was his first speech since Andropov's Red Square funeral Feb. 14. As general secretary of the Communist Party, and the country's top leader, Chernenko was the last of the 12 members of the ruling Politburo to deliver his address.

At one point, shuffling through his papers, he lost his place for 30 seconds.

The 72-year-old leader wore eyeglasses to read his text and spoke some of the passages haltingly. Chernenko, who was believed to have been ill for a prolonged period last year, occasionally took a handkerchief from his pocket to wipe his mouth, sipped tea, and coughed several times. His breathing seemed slightly labored.

Chernenko devoted most of his speech to domestic, primarily economic, issues and said he would continue Andropov's campaign to increase efficiency and eliminate corruption.

But he did address the most serious Soviet-American quarrel — the deadlock over long-range and medium-range nuclar weapons.

"The Americans created obstacles to the talks both on 'European' and on strategic nuclear weapons by deploying their missiles in Europe," Chernenko said. "It is the removal of these obstacles (which would also remove the need for our meaures taken in response) that offers the way to working out a mutually acceptable accord."

The Soviets deployed nuclear missiles in East Germany and Czechoslovakia to counter the 572 Pershing 2 and cruise missiles being deployed by NATO. The Soviets broke off the arms reduction talks last November when the Western European nations began receiving the new NATO missiles.

Bay area mobilizes to find missing boy

The tousle-haired fourth-grader, who comes from a family of nine children ranging in age from 7 to 19, was on his way home from basketball practice on Feb. 10 when he vanished. He was last seen at a Haight-Ashbury bus stop about 7 p.m., petting a large black dog.

"We Love You Kevin — Where Are You?" one poster says. "This Child Could Be Yours," reads the caption of another.

All the fliers, seemingly pasted on every tree, every store window, every building wall in San Francisco, feature the same photo: a button-nosed waif looking over his shoulder, his eyes registering the slight surprise of someone who wasn't expecting to see a camera.

The campaign to find Kevin is run by his parents, Ann and Dave Collins, and Ann's brother, Michael Deasy. They get at least 100 phone calls every day. Some people think they've seen the boy. There have been five to eight such sightings in the Sacramento area in the last week, none of which panned out. Others are psychics, who say they've had visions, or people who just want to help.

"The heaviest day we had, we got about 400 calls," Deasy said Friday.

The parents both are students who took leaves of absence to search for their son. Dave Collins has been studying nursing and his wife was in a medical assistant's program.

The walls of the family's command center in the St. Agnes Church rectory, less than a block from the bus stop where Kevin was last seen, is covered with maps of the city sectioned off with red markers. There are posters of Kevin in four languages and an enlargement of the photo used on the flier.

The family feels certain Kevin in not a runaway.

"There's no way," Mrs. Collins said. "It's completely out of character. He'd never been away from home at night, except to an aunt's house twice. No way. Not Kevin."

The family has heard from people as far away as New York, who offered help. And media attention on Kevin's case has helped renew interest in other missing children.

Faye Ackerman's 10-year-old grandson, Tony Franco, was on his way to school on May 9, 1983, when he disappeared. Media attention waned after several months.

"Tony's name was no longer mentioned on the evening news," Mrs. Ackerman said. "It's like he's gone, he's disappeared, and nobody seems to care."

The case is active again, she said, but there is a continuing problem of maintaining that interest.

Kevin's disappearance has made it clear to his family that there needs to be a national network to help in cases like these.

"We've all found there's really nothing in place that can deal with the problem, respond effectively, immediately, which is needed. There's no organizations out there that can help us," Deasy said. "The police do what they can, but they have limited resources, they have to deal with other things. The problem of retrieving abducted children is a community responsibility."

Advance tickets for the Highway 191 celebration are available for $5 at most local banks and the Midland and Odessa chambers of commerce. High school bands from both cities will perform, barbeque will be provided by the Chuckwagon Gang of Odessa and local dignitaries will be speaking.

"It's been a tremendous effort between the two cities, counties and chambers," said Womack. John Landgraf of Landgraf Crutcher & Associates in Odessa and Jim Chase of HBF Corp. of Midland are serving as co-chairmen.

"We think Midland and Odessa have already awakened to the possibilities of working together," said Womack, explaining that the cooperative effort is aimed at reinforcing this attitude.

While the media has committed to one year, Womack called the cooperative efforts a long-term project.

"None of us can change the past. We've got to put it behind us and take a positive look toward the future," said Womack, "That's the only way we're going to reach our full potential in West Texas."

HOPE is prolonging agony of murdered man's brother

state

HUNTSVILLE (AP) — Matthew Gardner knows that nothing can bring his brother back, but he's not happy with the attention the convicted killer's parents have been getting.

He says he'd like to forget the day his older brother, Bruce, was shot to death in a Fort Worth lake cottage in the summer of 1982. But he says the accused killer's mother won't let him.

Lois Robison and her husband, Kenneth, have founded a group called Help Our Prisoners Exist, or HOPE. They want their condemned son, Larry Keith Robison, to get a life sentence without possibility of parole — instead of the death penalty.

The Robisons and other death penalty opponents went to Austin Feb. 24 to ask a House Committee to allow life without parole as an alternative for juries to consider in murder cases.

"Why do they (Robison's parents) have to go out and scream and holler when he's gone out and coldbloodedly murdered somebody? I don't think he has the right to live for what he did," Gardner, 30, told the Huntsville Item. "What right did he have to say these people had a right to live or die?"

He said he feels victimized by his brother's death and the Robisons' efforts to save their son's life.

"I am a victim, too," Matthew said. "As far as I'm concerned, I feel like I'd like to stop hearing about it in the media. It won't bring my brother or those people back."

Robison, 26, has been on Texas Death Row since September on a conviction he killed Bruce Gardner, 33, of Fort Worth, on the morning of Aug. 10, 1982.

The Robisons argued before a Texas House committee Feb. 24 that the jurors who heard their son's case would have given him life without parole rather than the death sentence, if they had had the option.

The father said the death sentence is no help even to the victim's family.

"Even for them, death as a vindictive act, as retribution, as vengeance, is no real solution," Robision told the lawmakers.

But Gardner said stories about the couple's efforts are prolonging the agony of the murder for him.

"The bridge between my brother and myself is burned and the ashes are there and this lady wants to keep stirring it up," he said. "They put the poker right in you and twist it a little bit more."

On the morning of Aug. 10, 1982, five people were killed in two cottages on Lake Worth. Lee Bryant, 31, who was living with Larry Keith Robison at the time in one of the cottages, was found by his mother the afternoon of the slayings.

His body was found nude and decapitated, with his head tucked under his arm. Other parts of his body were found scattered in the house.

In an adjacent cottage were the bodies of 34-year-old Georgia Reed; her 11-year-old son, Scott; Reed's mother, Earline Barker, 55; and Bruce Gardner, an acquaintance of Georgia Reed.

The woman and the boy were stabbed and shot. Their throats were slit. Gardner was shot three times in the head and had a slash wound on his neck that did not penetrate. His 1977 Pinto and wallet were stolen.

Robison was arrested in Kansas after he was found asleep in Gardner's car.

Matthew Gardner said he believes Robison killed "for the fun of it," and should die for his crime.

Until now, he said, he has kept silent about his grief and anger, but reading reports on the Robisons with little mention of the details of his brother's murder prompted him to speak up.

Clerical error leads to appointment of dead man

AUSTIN (AP) — Aides toGov. Mark White are blaming clerical error for his appointment of a dead man to the Interstate Oil Compact Commission.

White sent a letter Feb. 22 to San Antonio oilman John Newman, reappointing him to the panel. But aides said that Newman had died more than a year earlier.

White actually approved the appointment of Newman's son, John Jr., said Dwayne Holman, the governor's appointments director.

"It was never our intention to appoint the father," Holman said. "It was always our intention to appoint the son. We were not aware he was John Newman's son (but) we probably should have been. We knew that Mr. (Newman) Senior was dead," he said.

Parasite invades town's water supply

McKEESPORT, Pa. (AP) — More than 100 residents of this depressed steel town have been sickened by a tiny parasite that has invaded its aging water system and is forcing 45,000 people to boil their drinking water or buy it in bottles.

"Economically, for a city like McKeesport it's been very devastating," Mayor Louis Washowich said Friday. "For the people on fixed incomes, the people without jobs, it's just created another economic burden. Even if they boil the water there's still the cost of gas."

The parasite, Giardia lamblia, has caused nausea and diarrhea in 112 people, and the number of victims in this once-bustling Monongahela River Valley town is expected to rise because of its month-long incubation period, officials said. The illness is non-fatal and easily treated with prescription drugs.

The tiny organisms, less than one-thousandth of an inch long, are believed to have entered the water system through an open reservoir, where authorities noted dog droppings near the water's edge, or through an overworked filtration system. The water system serves McKeesport and four neighboring communities.

The Allegheny County Health Department issued its health warning Feb. 22. Residents were told to avoid even washing food with tap water.

The community has enough problems already, including an unemployment rate that peaked at 22.8 percent in January 1983 and is still near 15 percent, according to the state Labor Department.

The jobless rate has been aggravated by U.S. Steel Corp.'s decision to slash production at its National Works, whose idle blast furnaces dominate downtown.

Since the water warning, restaurateur John Brusick says business has dropped 20 percent at the Elbow Room, even though the kitchen doesn't use McKeesport water.

"Business has been bad enough as it is," Brusick said.

The city is distributing free water at several fire stations. Residents toting plastic milk jugs or bottles say picking up clean water has become a daily chore.

"I never realized, but we use a lot of water," said Sharon Jimenez, 28, who said her family of four needs two gallons of drinking and cooking water every day.

Liberty and White Oak, two communities that had used McKeesport water, have switched to other sources, Smith said. The other communities affected by the problem are Port Vue and Versailles.

Many residents and restaurants are turning to bottled water, at up to 99 cents a gallon. Swissvale Koldrok Pure Water Co. in McKeesport and Polar Water in Pittsburgh say sales have tripled.

Since first being diagnosed in the United States in 1965, giardiasis has become the country's leading waterborne disease, breaking out in two to eight communities each year, health authorities say.

Previous outbreaks of giardiasis, also called "beaver fever" or "backpackers' disease," have been traced to sewage leaks, droppings from beavers and other small animals, or spring flooding that flushes through animal grazing areas into water systems, said Dr. George Healy of the federal Centers for Disease Control in Atlanta.

Health officials say it will take three to six months to upgrade the McKeesport system. Although the water is still being tested, the county's health director, Dr. N. Mark Richards, said he is convinced the parasite is present in it.

Robert Smith, executive director of the municipal water authority, said preparations are under way to drain the uncovered reservoir and remove sludge where the parasite may be lodged. The 5-million-gallon basin will be sterilized and refilled.

Smith estimated that improvements to the reservoir, pipes and the 76-year-old treatment plant will cost $1.4 million, which he hopes to recoup in federal funds.

Arizona town hottest place in the nation

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) — It's so hot in Gila Bend, recently proclaimed the hottest place in the nation, you can make instant coffee from tap water.

So says Mayor Julius "Duke" Fox of Gila Bend, who doesn't mind the publicity about the desert town just over an hour's drive southwest of Phoenix.

"If it helps the town to grow, we don't mind the notoriety," Fox said in a telephone interview Friday.

According to a just-published study by Weatherwise Magazine, Gila Bend recorded the nation's hottest temperatures on 64 days last year. McAllen, Texas was second with 49 of the hottest days and Lake Havasu City, Ariz., first a year ago, dropped to a third-place tie with Presidio, Texas, at 36. Yuma, Ariz., with 32, ranked No. 4 and Bullhead City, Ariz., with 24, was No. 5.

Gila Bend has three temperatures in the summer, Fox said, "around 110 in the shade, 130 in the sun and 150 on the desert sand."

He said water from the town's two wells normally comes from the ground at a temperature of 107 degrees, "hot enough, if you want, to make instant coffee without heating it."

Why is the town water so hot?

"We can get cool water by drilling to 500 feet, but the salt content is too high. You eliminate the sodium by going to 7,500 feet, but it is hot."

With a population around 2,000, the town's economy is based largely on tourism and agriculture — cotton and cattle — and there's also a major Air Force Base not too far away.

Tourism?

"We're situated sort of like the hub of a wheel," Fox said. "With the interstate highway system the way it is, many folks crossing Arizona just about have to make a rest stop here to refuel their car, eat or sleep."

Fox was born and reared in Chicago and came here seven years ago to operate a 41-unit Best Western motel with dining facilities for 150 people.

Has he become used to the weather?

"If you ask a native that question, they say, 'You never get used to it, you just learn to tolerate it.'

"I think that's accurate."

Polio victim wants to be professional dancer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A 14-year-old polio victim has overwhelmed the competition at break-dancing contests with his flash, dash and style — even with one leg paralyzed. Now he wants to turn pro.

"I love it," Eddie Fernandez says. "The music really psyches me up. My mother always tells me I'm stubborn enough to succeed at whatever I want. I want to be a dancer, a professional dancer."

Fernandez was paralyzed from the neck down at age 2, he said. After 12 operations, only his right leg remains completely paralyzed, while he has regained 75 percent use of his left leg.

But it isn't leg action that gives him his flair — but rather hand and arm movements that set his body in motion and which have earned him the nicknames of "Handyman" and "Master Hand."

Fernandez has won more than 20 Los Angeles-area dance contests over the past three months, he said.

It was a scene from the film "Flashdance" featuring the free-form, energetic style of dancing that inspired him nine months ago, he said.

Since then, he and his older brother, Pablo, 20, have been practicing break-dancing daily.

His English teacher at Olive Junior High in Baldwin Park said it looked as if Fernandez was "flopping around on the floor like a dead fish" during one of his performances.

The characterization drew a laugh from Fernandez.

"Too much," he said, explaining: "It's dance."

Reagan: More women should be in office

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan told 85 women who are elected Republican officials on Friday that he is eager to see the number of female GOP officeholders grow at the national, local and state levels.

"Politics has its share of fun and glamour, but in the end it's sheer, unrelenting hard work for people like you that makes it possible for us to put our beliefs into practice," he said at the fourth in a series of five White House lunches for GOP women.

Joking that his wife, Nancy, had once introduced him by saying, "Behind every successful woman there's a dedicated man," the president gave "high praise and heartfelt thanks for all you've done for our Republican cause."

Most of the women at the lunch represented Northeastern states. Reagan's daughter, Maureen, conducts the lunches as part of her job as consultant to the Republican National Committee on how the GOP can gain more women supporters.

"We have nine outstanding Republican women in the House of Representatives. Now isn't it time we give them more company?" the president asked. The audience applauded.

"Today, there are thousands of able Republican women like you that are serving in public office," Reagan said. "You in state legislatures and other state and local offices are on the front lines of democracy putting your beliefs into practice close to the people. We look on you as leaders who truly know what the American people think and need."

Vatican's Holy See expected to have $31 million deficit for '84

VATICAN CITY (AP) — The Holy See will have a $31.8 million budget deficit for 1984 from its worldwide activities, the Vatican announced Friday.

"While it is forseen that the Vatican City-State (the church administration) will close with a balanced budget, the Holy See is expected to have a deficit...," said a communique at the end of a week-long meeting of cardinals examining Vatican finances and reform of the church's bureaucracy.

The deficit will be made up by Peter's Pence — contributions from individual churches and the faithful to a general fund for use by the Pope at his discretion.

The communique said 60 percent of the Holy See's budget covers personnel expenses.

It did not give a breakdown of income or expenditures, except to say that Vatican Radio's deficit alone would be $9.8 million.

It said the 10 cardinals discussed ways to reduce the deficit. They are members of the Council of Cardinals for the Study of the Organizational and Financial Problems of the Holy See, a body created by Pope John Paul II in 1981 to advise him.

The budget of the Vatican City-State covers the costs of administering the municipality of Vatican City, including street cleaning, building care and post offices. The budget of the Holy See includes only the costs of activities related to or run by the Roman Catholic Church within the city-state, such as Vatican Radio and administrative costs of the curia and papal envoys.

The Vatican does not routinely release its balance each year. The last time it did so was for 1981, when it had an income of nearly $100 million. The deficit that year was $28 million, sources said.

Vatican sources said the deficit for 1982 was $30 million, and about the same for 1983.

The communique said the cardinals also discussed the problems of the Vatican bank, officially known as the Institute for Religious Works, but gave no details.

Lawmakers call for ban of nuclear attack game

LONDON (AP) — Two British legislators called Friday for a ban on the sale of an American board game in which players try to wipe out populations with nuclear attacks. They called the game "disgusting and offensive."

The Arizona manufacturer of "Nuclear-Escalation," which features glow-in-the-dark dice, claims it appeals to those with a sense of humor.

But Bruce George and David Winnick, members of Parliament, said they were not amused. They belong to the opposition Labor Party which has pledged to get rid of all nuclear weapons on British soil.

"To gain enjoyment from simulating the deaths of millions of people is beyond belief," George told reporters.

Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher's Conservative government has agreed to deploy 160 U.S.-made NATO nuclear missiles in Britain by 1988.

Monsignor Bruce Kent, leader of Britain's Campaign for Nuclear Disarmament, called the game a "nasty twist to the war toy industry." He called for Britain to ban military toys.

George said he and Winnick have sent a letter to the game's distributor in Walsall, central England, seeking the withdrawal of the game from the market.

In Tempe, Ariz., Rick Loomis, president of the game manufacturer Flying Buffalo, said he was "sorry to hear there was such an uproar."

"The game is intended to be humorous. The subject is so serious that you have to laugh about it because otherwise you'd cry," he said.

Loomis said this is the first complaint about the game he can recall and it's sold all over the world: "It's one of our best sellers and a great deal of fun to play."

A spokesman for the British distributor said the game was out of stock and would not be reordered.

"It had nothing to do with the complaint," he said, refusing to give his name. "The game is just a bit of fun and we have never had complaints before."

He said there were sales of a few hundred copies of the game which went on the market in Britain before Christmas.

Police find French, Dutch money in accused kidnappers' apartment

PARIS (AP) — Police discovered about $165,000 in French and Dutch currency in the apartment of two Dutchmen accused of kidnapping Dutch beer magnate Alfred Heineken, police sources said Friday.

Police believe the money is part of the ransom paid for the release of Heineken and his chauffeur, who were abducted Nov. 9 from outside the brewery's Amsterdam headquarters. Police freed them three weeks later and recovered most of the ransom, believed to be more than $10 million.

Two suspects, Cornelius Van Hout, 27, and Willem Holleeder, 26, were arrested Wednesday along with Sylvia Winter, 38, a Dutch woman who hid them in the Paris apartment. Two other Dutchmen were arrested earlier.

Police sources said the suspects denied all the charges leveled against them.

Secretary now chief prosecutor

Sue Lagarde

DALLAS (AP) — Sue Lagarde can type 100 words per minute and once earned $6,500 a year as a secretary for such Texas notables as the late Dallas billionaire H.L. Hunt.

But no more. The 46-year-old woman has been hired as one of five chief prosecuting attorneys for District Attorney Henry Wade at an annual salary of $68,000.

She is the first woman to hold that position in Wade's office.

Wade, for whom Ms. Lagarde had also once worked as a secretary, says that he always knew she had potential.

"I knew I had a smart girl," Wade said. "I knew she would make a good lawyer."

She said it was Wade's encouragement that led her to get a law degree.

"Mr. Wade has had an impact on my life," Ms. Lagarde told the Dallas Times Herald. "You might say he's been a father figure."

Her office would indicate that. The prosecutor she replaced, Gerald Banks, had hung a picture of John Wayne on the wall. Ms. Lagarde replaced it with a signed portrait of Wade.

Ms. Lagarde grew up in a small Louisiana town of 3,000 and learned typing and shorthand by working on her hometown newspaper. She moved to Dallas after graduation from Northwest Louisiana State University and her ability to type 100 words a minute landed her a job with Hunt.

"It was interesting for a while, but quite frankly, there just wasn't enough work," she said.

So in 1964, she went to work for Wade, shortly before the trial of nightclub owner Jack Ruby for the murder of accused presidential assassin Lee Harvey Oswald.

"I always start them out at the bottom, and watch the ones that bloom," said Wade. "She was a bloomer."

Ms. Lagarde answered press calls from around the world and took dictation from assistant district attorneys as they prepared for the Ruby trial.

Later, she became a court reporter, but developed tendonitis, an inflammation of the muscles in her arm.

"I was in court taking shorthand almost every day," she said. "The doctor said it was from writing so much. He recommended a leave of absence."

At the age of 36, she entered the Southern Methodist University Law School, graduating in December 1975. By June, she was working again as an assistant district attorney, handling misdemeanor cases.

Ms. Lagarde was promoted to handle specialized crime and consumer fraud cases, and then defended county employees in civil lawsuits. She never lost a case in that capacity, Wade says.

Ms. Lagarde thinks Wade's office has changed for the better since she started working there.

"There are more women working in the office," she said. "Women add another dimension to things, our own perspective."

Potential teachers to take skills test

AUSTIN (AP) — Texas will launch a new era in the education of its teachers today when 2,400 prospective education majors take the first state-mandated basic skills test.

Educators say the examination will set higher standards for teachers, but they acknowledge that it may also increase the shortage of teachers, especially among minorities.

"We're addressing a population in the (Rio Grande) Valley that is 75 to 80 percent Hispanic. Our student population is 78 percent Hispanic, and it's going to have a devastating effect on that group — especially when there is a terrible shortage of bilingual teachers in the state," Peter Garcia, dean of the school of education at Pan American University in Edinburg, told the Dallas Morning News.

In a pilot program last year to establish the validity of the test, 87 percent of the blacks who took it and 65 percent of the Hispanics failed at least one part of the exam — compared with 22 percent of the white Anglo students tested.

Teacher colleges with mainly minority enrollments have since instituted remedial programs.

And some colleges, anticipating a sharp drop in education majors in the next few years, are trying to find jobs for education professors in other academic departments.

The three-hour test, called Pre-Professional Skills Test or P-PST, was designed by the Educational Testing Service of Princeton, N.J., to measure proficiency in math, writing, and reading.

Starting May 1, the students must pass all three parts of the test in order to get their degree in education. Those who fail one or more parts of the exam will have two more chances to pass the part they flunked.

Results from the test will be returned in six weeks.

Some educators are critical of the way the test's pass-fail cutoff point was established, but they don't blame the exam for the poorer performance of minority students.

"The state has somehow failed by allowing these students to graduate high school," said professor Willie Tritty of Prairie View A&M University.

He said what's needed is the program Prairie View established, in which math, English and science professors created remedial programs to help students pass this new test.

Some educators are worried that the exam will further drain the teacher shortage in Texas.

"It (the test) can have a potentially negative effect on the pool of teachers," said Dr. Richard Swain, the Texas Education Agency's associate commissioner for professional development.

However, Swain added that stricter standards for students will eventually mean that more students will be able to pass the test.

Johnson's younger daughter will marry today

AUSTIN (AP) — Luci Baines Johnson, younger daughter of former President Lyndon B. Johnson, will be married today to Ian Johnstone Turpin, a Grand Cayman Island banker and member of a prominent Scottish and English family.

It is the second marriage for Ms. Johnson, whose four children, along with Turpin's 5-year-old son, will take part in the ceremony.

The two will be married at 1 p.m. before a small family gathering at the LBJ Ranch, 65 miles west of Austin, which is now part of the national park system.

Tonight there will be a black-tie reception for about 300 invited guests at the Lyndon B. Johnson Library in Austin.

The Rev. William J. Kaifer, a longtime friend who has officiated at the christening of her four children — Patrick Lyndon Nugent, 16; Nicole Marie Nugent, 14; Rebekah Johnson Nugent, 9, and Claudia Taylor Nugent, 7 — will perform the ceremony in front of the fireplace at the Johnson family ranch home.

Turpin, 39, is trust operations director for the Canadian Imperial Bank of Commerce in the British West Indies. She currently is vice president of the LBJ Company, which manages the Johnson family's banks, investments and real estate.

Luci Johnson, 36, was married Aug. 6, 1966, in the Shrine of the Immaculate Conception in Washington to Patrick Nugent, an Air Force enlisted man and native of Waukegan, Ill. She converted to the Roman Catholic faith for the marriage.

On Jan. 19, 1979, she filed suit for divorce, on the basis of incompatibility. For a brief time Nugent had been general manager for radio station KLBJ, owned by the Johnson family.

Liz Carpenter, spokeswomen for the Johnson family, said Friday the marriage was annulled. Later, Mrs. Carpenter's office issued a brief statement saying that "Luci and Ian have dealt with the proper channels of the church and each has established their right to marry again."

The wedding ceremony at the ranch will be closed to the press and the public. A wedding luncheon will be served following the ceremony.

At the evening reception in Austin, the press will be admitted briefly to take photographs.

After the reception, in the vaulted halls of the LBJ Library, there will be a seated dinner. Bagpipers will pipe in the guests.

The wedding dinner will feature a combination of foods marking the backgrounds of the bridal couple, from native Texas and Scotand and England.

A short program will feature bagpipes plus Texas folk music, followed by dancing.

Sunday afternoon there will be a barbecue at the LBJ ranch for out-of-state guests with Lady Bird Johnson as the hostess.

Girl leaves hospital to show her heifer

HOUSTON (AP) — Audrey Davis, 16, says she didn't come all the way to Houston from her hometown of Cross Roads just to lie in the hospital.

Audrey left Hermann Hospital for a few hours Thursday determined to show her heifer in the Houston Livestock Show.

"I came a long way," Audrey said. "I didn't just want to come up here and lay in the hospital."

Audrey's agriculture teacher, Tommy Barnett, took her to Hermann Wednesday after she complained of stomach pains. There tests were run, and doctors ruled out appendicitis.

But Audrey found her doctor, Red Duke, to be sympathetc. Duke, who calls himself "a frustrated cowboy," allowed her a brief leave so she could finish what she had set out to do — show her heifer.

"He said he loved Poll Herefords and wanted me to show," Audrey said.

Duke said he told her, "Hell, just show that cow."

"It's ridiculous that she should be sitting here instead of being down there at that show," he said. "She gets sick; she comes right back. It just tickles me to death for a kid who has the interest and will take the time to work on something like a cow."

Friends washed, fed and prepared the Hereford for the show before Audrey showed up wearing her yellow hospital identification bracelet.

Audrey's class showed several hours behind schedule, forcing her to return to the hospital later than she planned.

The animal placed a disppointing 16th out of 20 Poll Hereford heifers.

Audrey said she worked one hour a day last year with her heifer, which placed fifth among 13 entries in the 1983 livestock show.

"She has really looked forward to this," her mother, Ruby, said.

PAN wants 'clean elections'

MEXICO CITY (AP) — Pablo Emilio Madero, the new leader of Mexico's largest minority party, said Friday he hopes it will be able to use the ballot box to break the ruling Institutional Revolutionary Party's long grip on power.

"The only thing we ask is that there be clean elections," Madero, president of the conservative National Action Party, said at a meeting with foreign journalists here.

When a reporter observed that hoping for elections to bring a minority party to power in Mexico means never getting it, Madero replied: "Who knows?...It's possible. It's not easy, but possible."

The ruling party, known by its Spanish initials as the PRI, has held power in Mexico for more than 50 years. It holds the presidency and all governorships and controls the federal congress and state legislatures.

"We don't believe that Mexico should be rebuilt from the ashes of a new revolution," Madero said. "It should be through the civilized way of the vote."

Madero's party made unprecedented advances in municipal elections last year, most notably in the northern border state of Chihuahua where it now holds the city halls in Ciudad Juarez and Chihuahua City.

But it charges that many of its victories are not recognized by the government.

"We're struggling for any victory of any party to be recognized," Madero said. "Mexico must find a democratic solution to its problems. ...The people's will should be respected."

His party, known by its Spanish initials as the PAN, holds only 39 of the more than 2,000 city and town municipalities in Mexico.

Madero described his party as the largest in Mexico. He said the PRI "is a governing force, not a political party."

The PAN leader said the victories last year "mean that National Action after 45 years has been consolidated as a political force." He said that in the near future he hopes it will develop into a viable alternative at the national level as well as regionally.

Election reforms during the six-year presidential term of Jose Lopez Portillo, succeeded by President Miguel de la Madrid in December 1982, opened up the system somewhat to opposition parties.

Madero won 16 percent of the votes as PAN's presidential candidate in 1982. He was named president of the party at its convention last month.

He said PAN had been offered a government subsidy but refused to take it. "We don't want to depend on what we're fighting to oust from power," he said.

The party leader called the waves of undocumented workers heading from Mexico to the United States one of the most serious problems currently in the northern border states.

"A great effort must be made to create jobs that are lacking there, so Mexicans won't have to leave," Madero said.

Madero, 63, lives in the northern industrial city of Monterrey. He is a nephew of the late President Francisco I. Madero, a key figure in the Mexican revolution that started in 1910.

The PAN leader said "he has no doubt" that his uncle today would be a member of his party. "The revolution was won on the battlefield and it was betrayed in the peace that followed," he said.

Labor's Benn makes comeback

LONDON (AP) — Tony Benn, hero of the Labor Party's far-left faction, returns to Parliament after a strong election victory over Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher's nominee.

The election result, announced Friday, marked a comeback for Benn. He lost his seat in the House of Commons in the general elections in June that saw Mrs. Thatcher's Conservatives give Labor its worst whipping in 60 years.

Benn, who held Cabinet posts in past Labor governments, won a special election held Thursday in Chesterfield, a mining town in central England. Mrs. Thatcher's candidate, Nicholas Bourne, took third place.

According to the results, Benn won 46 percent of the vote; second place finisher, Max Payne, of the centrist alliance of the Liberal and Social Democratic parties, received 35 percent, and Bourne 15 percent.

The retirement of Laborite Eric Varley, who represented Chesterfield since 1964, forced the election.

Benn, 58, calls himself a "persistent commoner." He is a former peer who renounced his title, Lord Stansgate, in 1963.

Undaunted by the general rout of his party and the loss of his own seat in Bristol in June, he declared that the Chesterfield victory shows that "the passionate advocacy of socialism" will get votes for Labor.

He advocates banishing nuclear weapons from British soil, massive public spending to reduce Britain's near record 13.4 percent unemployment, abolition of the House of Lords, and widespread nationalization of banks and private industry.

Britain was one of the NATO countries to the start deployment last year of U.S.-made nuclear missiles.

When Britain went to war in 1982 over the Argentine invasion of the Falklands, Benn condemned Mrs. Thatcher's decision.

He is often blamed for Labor's fierce left-right feuding that erupted in 1980 after he narrowly lost his bid to win the party deputy leadership to Labor right-winger Denis Healey, a former defense secretary.

The growing influence of Benn and his supporters left Labor with a radical platform in June's general election. The balloting gave Mrs. Thatcher a second-term.

Conservatives hold a 144-seat majority in the 650-seat Commons.

Tall, white-haired, pipe-smoking and soft-spoken, Benn is dubbed the "Comrade Benn," "Brother Benn," and "Demon Benn" in Britain's press.

He attended Oxford University and inherited the title of Visbount Stansgate when his father, a Labor peer, died in 1960.

He was industry secretary in 1974-75 and energy secretary in 1975-79 during Labor administrations.

Benn married an American, Caroline Middleton De Camp, in 1949. They have three sons and a daughter.

Baboon drives pursuers bananas

BONN, West Germany (AP) — A baboon fled from scientists who were going to use him for medical experiments, then drove his pursuers bananas for three days by swinging through trees near the West German capital.

A ranger armed with tranquilizer darts caught up with the fugitive in a Bonn forest on Friday and returned him to the University Clinic.

"Bonni" the baboon spent his time on the lam plundering garbage cans for food and cavorting through the forest, university spokeswoman Dorothea Carr said.

The 3-foot-tall, fully grown baboon made his break Tuesday evening while being taken into a university building where researchers planned to conduct medical experiments on him, Ms. Carr said.

"He was not in a cage. Probably someone was holding him, but he was too strong and got away," she said.

Ms. Carr had no information about the experiments being planned.

Baboons are powerful monkeys native to Africa, and have little fear of other animals, including humans. They are also thought to be among the most intelligent of monkeys.

Bonni first dashed up a 125-foot tree, where he sat ignoring animal trainers sent out after him. He was still there the next morning when the fire department came.

They hosed him down in subfreezing weather, but Bonni escaped across several rooftops into the hilly woods west of the Rhine River city.

City ranger Reinhard Nowicki combed the forest and found the baboon Friday afternoon perched in a tree, where he had sought shelter from a sudden shower of icy rain.

Nowicki fired a tranquilizer dart into the baboon, who docilely climbed down and fell asleep at the foot of the tree.

Women in good TV roles

NEW YORK (AP) — Finally, the legitimate complaint that television doesn't offer good roles for women is becoming an old wives' tale.

Sunday night, in a continuing march toward meatier roles in TV movies and more leading parts in TV series, Ann-Margret shines in ABC's stunning remake of Tennessee Williams' "A Streetcar Named Desire," and Suzanne Pleshette is her sassy old self in the debut of CBS' "Maggie Briggs."

The actual title of Miss Pleshette's first series since "The Bob Newhart Show" is "Suzanne Pleshette Is Maggie Briggs," a recognition of her controlling influence on the project. As co-creator, she hand-picked the cast.

CBS has four series beginning this month, and all have women playing New Yorkers in the starring roles.

Besides Miss Pleshette as a New York newspaper reporter, there's Lila Kaye as a TV cooking-show host from Brooklyn in "Mama Malone," Jane Curtin and Susan Saint James as divorced women pooling their kids and resources in a Greenwich Village apartment in "Kate & Allie" and Sharon Gless and Tyne Daly as New York cops in the return of "Cagney & Lacey."

THE first episode of "Maggie Briggs" exhibits a good dose of street-smart humor and nice comedic meshing between Miss Pleshette and Kenneth McMillan ("Ragtime"), a real pro who plays Walter Holden, Maggie's newspaper buddy of 15 years.

"I saw my first dead body with you," says Maggie.

"The good times can't last forever," says Walter.

Maggie is distressed because, in a move to save the dying New York Examiner, she's been transferred from hard-news assignments — "the quality stuff," she says — to the paper's "Modern Living Section," which, she argues, specializes in fashion, movie reviews and where to find the best Mexican food.

And everybody knows where already. "Mexico," she says.

It's a small ensemble cast, with extras constantly floating by in the manner of the hyperactive "Hill Street Blues." As a slice of newspaper life, this is Hollywood's version of the print world, so it's full of fictions. Maggie and Walter don't seem to get much work done, and there's no apparent reason why they or their well-tailored editor (John Getz) are considered good journalists.

BUT, YES, some restrooms in newspaper shops are decrepit, and hard-edged repartee is the preferred tongue of many journalists. All of which seems to fit the sassy Miss Pleshette, whose real feel for comedy may be in that audiences can see she's really enjoying herself.

Conversely, no one can enjoy playing the emotionally gut-wrenching role of the coquettish Blanche DuBois, the protagonist of Williams' powerful play that was made into the 1951 Oscar-winning film starring Marlon Brando and Vivien Leigh.

Blanche is as fragile as crystal, a walking nervous breakdown who says she's "always depended on the kindness of strangers." Raised a proper Southerner on a plantation, she can't square her upbringing with the tatters of her life that include alcoholism, a busted marriage to a homosexual and her own repressed sexuality.

Having left her teaching job and left town under suspicious circumstances, she comes to sultry New Orleans to stay with her sister and brother-in-law in their claustrophobic tenement. This clearly isn't going to be a balm for frazzled Blanche.

Sister Stella (Beverly D'Angelo) is pregnant, and her husband, Stanley Kowalski (Treat Williams), is a vulgar bully. But Stella is willing to forgive because, she tells Blanche, "There are things that happen between a man and a woman in the dark that sort of make everything else seem unimportant."

The production's main weakness is the set, which has the transparent look of cheap Hollywood construction, rather than real squalor.

Colorado governor's remark angers Nevada officials

DENVER (AP) — Angry Nevada officials said Friday the governor of Colorado should go to Las Vegas and find out that he was all wet when he asserted that one in every eight women under 45 in that gambling mecca is a prostitute.

In Carson City, Nev., Gov. Dick Bryan said he called Colorado Gov. Richard Lamm and "unloaded."

"His comments are totally without foundation in fact, and an insult to every Nevada woman," Bryan said. "And in my judgment he owes an apology to the state of Nevada and women in particular for what I believe to be an insensitive, unfounded and intemperate comment.

"He said he was sorry."

Las Vegas Mayor Pro Tem Ron Lurie said Lamm should go to Nevada and see for himself.

"We're a community of 500,000 people with many churches and many fine residential areas," he said. "A statement like that to me is the most unprofessional thing I can imagine."

Lamm, however, said he has been to Las Vegas several times, as recently as last November.

"I am aware of the fine churches and homes, but I'm also aware of the casinos and the activities they attract," he said.

Speaking to a group of high school journalists on Thursday, Lamm said organized crime is attracted to areas where casino gambling is legal, such as Nevada.

"One in eight women under 45 in Las Vegas is a prostitute," he added.

"I am aware of the fine churches and homes (in Las Vegas), but I'm also aware of the casinos and the activities they attract."

— Colorado Gov. Richard Lamm

Lurie said that was a "a slap in the face" to the city, especially in light of Clark County Sheriff John Moran's campaign to wipe out prostitution in Las Vegas.

While prostitution is tolerated and even licensed in several outlying Nevada counties, Bryan said major resort areas such as Clark, Washoe and Douglas counties and Carson City all ban prostitution.

Lamm's remark also provoked other Nevada officials, including Moran.

"He's uttering fig-leaf phrases to cover up his naked ignorance," Moran said.

Lamm's press secretary, Sue O'Brien, said the source of Lamm's comment was a pamphlet quoting an article in Kiwanis Magazine. The article was written by the Rev. David S. Linsay, of Clearwater, Fla., during Florida's anti-casino fight.

The article said figures based on a U.S. Census Bureau survey showed there are 10,000 prostitutes in Las Vegas, "or one woman in nine between the ages of 15 and 39."

"I didn't know the Census Bureau does research on prostitutes," Ms. O'Brien said, "but that's what it says."

Ray Bancroft, a U.S. Census Bureau spokesman in Washington, said the department does not classify anyone as a prostitute, but it does allow people to write in that description under the category of "miscellaneous personal services."

Ms. O'Brien said Lamm had used the figure on Las Vegas prostitutes "widely" during his 1982 fight against a petition drive to allow casinos in southern Colorado.

In his comments to the Colorado High School Press Association on Thursday, Lamm said he regards legalized gambling as "a cancer" that attracts unsavory elements and crowds out other businesses."

Bancroft said that in the 1980 census, people were asked by the Census Bureau to list their occupations and the resulting tabulations turned up 29,000 occupational titles. One of those, under "miscellaneous personal services," is "prostitute."

Bancroft pointed out that the census doesn't designate anyone as a prostitute. They merely ask people what they do for a living.

City asked to go 'on the wagon'

BOCA RATON, Fla. (AP) — The 60,000 residents of this coastal community were asked Friday to give up beer, booze and wine for a week as part of the city's Alcohol Awareness Month.

"To some people, it'll be quite an effort," Mayor Bill Konrad said. "For some, it'll be impossible, and for others, it won't make a difference."

Konrad earlier proclaimed March Alcohol Awareness Month, and decided to join Boca Raton Community Hospital's request that residents go "on the wagon" the last week of March.

The sobering request is part of the hospital's attempt to make people aware of how much they drink, said Donna Curley Hearn, the hospital's community education coordinator.

If people can't or won't give up alcohol for a week, they should think about their excuses, Ms. Hearn said at a news conference Friday.

"It has to be pointed out and publicized. If people think it's important, they'll try," the mayor said. "But I don't think it will put the bartenders out of business."

Restaurant smoking regulation proposed

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — One day after a measure restricting smoking in offices became law, a city official said Friday a compromise may be near on a controversial proposal to regulate smoking in restaurants.

The new proposal, introduced by Supervisor Carol Ruth Silver, was drafted to complement the office smoking measure, which fueled vigorous debate before voters narrowly approved it in November but took effect with few complaints Thursday.

Ms. Silver's legislation had been expected to rekindle the smoking controversy Friday afternoon at a public hearing before the city's Energy and Environment Committee. However, the matter was tabled as she told the committee there may be a compromise within a month.

She said her aides are continuing to meet with representatives of the city's hotel and restaurant association and officials of the heart and lung associations to try to come up with a regulation acceptable to all.

Ms. Silver noted that the city Health Code already prohibits smoking in restaurant kitchens. She said her proposal, as it now stands, would require San Francisco restaurateurs to set aside at least half their dining rooms for non-smokers.

Violators would face penalties ranging from a one-time fine of $50 to $500 per day. The proposal would exempt bars, restaurants with less than 25 seats and restaurants rented out to private parties.

An alternative law would ban smoking in restaurants in most cases, but it would allow owners to create a smoking section of up to half the dining room. She said that would reverse current law, which permits smoking but allows owners to set up non-smoking areas.

"The health community felt it was important to make the stronger, affirmative statement on restaurants," she said.

Ms. Silver said she and the author of the office smoking measure, Supervisor Wendy Nelder, agreed to separate the proposals when they realized the tobacco industry would wage a tough battle against Ms. Nelder's legislation.

The tobacco industry spent $1.2 million in its unsuccessful campaign against the Nelder proposal. About $60,000 was spent by supporters.

The office smoking measure requires employers to post a written smoking policy that satisfies the non-smokers who work in the offices. Anyone who finds the policy unacceptable may complain to the city. Employers face fines of up to $500 a day for continued infractions.

Obscure 1888 law helps mover

DES MOINES, Iowa (AP) — A mover who saved the state $1,382 on his bill, then was fined $100 for his trouble, has been cleared by an obscure 1888 law.

Rich Eychaner, president of Midwest Moving and Storage Inc., charged $2,968 a year ago to move Iowa's public safety commissioner, Gene Shepard, from Allison to Des Moines. According to state Department of Transportation regulations, Eychaner should have charged the amount of his binding estimate, $4,350.

Because he charged less than the estimate, Eychaner's company was fined $100 in August. But Conrad A. Amend, superintendent of the DOT's transportation regulation authority, reversed his ruling this week, citing a little-known 1888 provision that says nothing in state law shall prohibit reduced rates for the handling of state goods. Since the state paid Shepard's moving costs, Amend decided the clause applied to the move.

Ex-officer convicted of robbery

PITTSBURGH (AP) — A former Allegheny County police officer has been convicted of robbing 18 liquor stores in the Pittsburgh area last summer, and faces up to 20 years in prison on each count.

A jury deliberated less than two hours before returning the verdict Thursday against Lexie L. Carter, 42, of Mount Oliver, who acted as his own attorney. He was also convicted of possessing a sawed-off shotgun and faces federal charges in five bank robberies last summer.

Carter was a county police officer for seven years before quitting in 1980 to start an airplane charter service. He worked as a clerk in a state-operated liquor store for three months in 1981, and deputy district attorney Diane Berman said Carter was aided in the robberies by his knowledge of store operations.

Dysentery breaks out in shelter

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A church-run shelter has agreed to stop accepting homeless people until a dysentery outbreak has been controlled.

The Rev. Fred Hilst, 68, a Baptist minister and director of the Bible Tabernacle shelter in the Venice district, said he had ignored a "limited isolation" order issued by Los Angeles County because it was against his religious beliefs to refuse shelter to the homeless.

Dr. Shirley Fannin, a county communicable disease official, said the county considered closing the shelter after Hilst admitted he still was accepting people despite the order.

Dysentery is an infectious disease marked by severe diarrhea. The outbreak was discovered early last month. Nineteen of the shelter's staff members and residents got the disease since Feb. 15.

Mississippi House favors lottery

JACKSON, Miss. (AP) — The Mississippi House voted 75-37 on Friday in favor of a proposed constitutional amendment to authorize a state lottery.

The measure failed to gain the necessary two-thirds vote Thursday but won passage the next day after supporters included a provision earmarking lottery proceeds — estimated at $63 million in the first year — for public education.

The proposed amendment must win support from two-thirds of the Senate and then be ratified in a statewide vote. Backers said 17 states and the District of Columbia now have lotteries.

Nebraska honors Indian woman

LINCOLN, Neb. (AP) — The first Indian woman member, Susette LaFlesche Tibbles, has been inducted into the Nebraska Hall of Fame.

A bronze bust of the lecturer, writer and artist was unveiled in a ceremony, which also marked the 117th anniversary of Nebraska statehood.

Mrs. Tibbles gained national attention when she publicized the plight of the Ponca Indians who were forced to move from Nebraska to an Oklahoma reservation in 1878. She died in 1903.

Fat sergeant being booted out

DES MOINES, Iowa (AP) — An Iowa National Guard sergeant who is being booted out because he is too fat is protesting that the general in charge is carrying a few extra pounds, too.

Adjutant General Roger Gilbert is "just as big 'round as I am," said Staff Sgt. Michael Vodenik, 30, a 10-year veteran and electronics technician at Camp Dodge.

Vodenik is six feet tall and weighs 270 pounds, well above the Guard requirement of 189 pounds, a Guard spokesman said.

Vodenik, who said he has tried to diet, also lost his civil service job at Camp Dodge since workers there must belong to the Guard.

Team continues search for climber

TALKEETNA, Alaska (AP) — A Japanese climbing team searching Mount McKinley for the body of Naomi Uemura has been spotted at 14,000 feet, near where the adventurer may have fallen to his death.

Uemura has been missing since he made the first solo winter ascent of North America's tallest peak last month.

Jim Okonek, owner of K2 Aviation of Talkeetna, said he spotted the four-member team Wednesday "moving well" at 14,000-feet and heading for an ice-wall where two other mountaineers concluded the Japanese adventurer had fallen during his descent.

Uemura, a hero in his homeland, reached the 20,320-foot McKinley summit on Feb. 12 but failed to return to his base camp at the 7,200-foot level on schedule.

Ford observes real-life drama

Harrison Ford

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Actor Harrison Ford, who appeared in such action-packed films as "Raiders of the Lost Ark" and "Star Wars," entered a real-life drama by joining detectives who arrested a murder suspect.

Ford, who has been in the city preparing for a film role as a Philadelphia homicide detective, accompanied a police squad Thursday to the Montgomery County community of Norristown, where a 34-year-old man was arrested and charged with a slaying last July.

The Philadelphia Inquirer reported that Ford is observing homicide detectives for his role in "Called Home." The movie, with a $12 million budget, is to be filmed in Philadelphia and Lancaster.

In the film, an Amish boy looking out a train window sees one homicide detective murder another. The killer sees the boy and knows there is a witness to the slaying. Ford plays a Philadelphia detective assigned to investigate the slaying.

Police Commissioner Gregore J. Sambor gave Ford permission to observe the city's homicide detectives at work.

Kirk Douglas

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Actor Kirk Douglas wasted no time stepping into his role as Bacchus XVII, the king of merriment at the Mardis Gras, as soon as he stepped off a plane.

Douglas borrowed a fancy umbrella from the brass brand that struck up a tune in his honor Thursday afternoon and danced his way up to his coronation by Krewe of Bacchus Captain August Perez III.

"I don't know that I've ever played a king, but I'll try to give it a proper regal air," Douglas said.

The actor seemed to catch on pretty fast. His first royal decree? "I want everyone in the New Orleans area to have a good time in the Mardi Gras season."

A Bacchus official handed him a bucket of purple doubloons — the coins that are a Mardi Gras fixture — and suggested Douglas throw lots of them.

"I'll be generous," the new ruler promised. With that he tossed handfuls of doubloons engraved with his image onto the purple carpet, delighting Bacchus members as well as passers-by.

After drinking a champagne toast out of the krewe's blue and gold drinking horn, Douglas signed autographs.

Douglas has not been to New Orleans since World War II, when he lived here as a young Navy ensign. He will board a float Sunday to ride through New Orleans in the annual Bacchus parade.

Lillian Gish

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif. (AP) — A glittering array of stars from the film world turned out to salute actress Lillian Gish, the last great performer in the silent movie era.

Miss Gish, 90, was presented Thursday night with the Life Achievement Award of the American Film Institute, becoming the second woman recipient of the 12-year-old honor after Bette Davis.

She presided at the table of honor in the Beverly Hilton ballroom with stars Sally Field, Jessica Lange, Jeanne Moreau, Sissy Spacek, Mary Steenburgen, Lily Tomlin and Cicily Tyson.

"She is the symbol of eternal youth of America," said Miss Moreau, who has filmed a documentary of Miss Gish's life.

"She had an air of serenity that made everybody calm," said Robert Mitchum, who starred with Miss Gish in the 1955 film "The Night of the Hunter."

"She was there at the birth of an art form," said Douglas Fairbanks Jr.

Miss Gish was also saluted by Richard Widmark, who appeared with her in "The Cobweb"; actress Colleen Moore, a friend since 1918; Eva Marie Saint, who appeared with Miss Gish in the TV drama and Broadway play, "A Trip To Bountiful"; Jennifer Jones, of "Duel in the Sun" and "A Portrait of Jenny"; and Richard Thomas, who appeared in Miss Gish's most recent film, the TV movie "Hobson's Choice."

Miss Gish, who starred in the pioneering classics of D.W. Griffith such as "The Birth of a Nation," "Broken Blossoms," and "Intolerance," reiterated her familiar theme that the movies lost magic when they learned to talk.

She urged a return to the silent film, but added: "Don't give up talking pictures. We still make good ones like "Tootsie" and "Gandhi."

PARIS (AP) — Italian actress Monica Vitti was awarded Friday the Order of Arts and Letters by French Culture Minister Jack Lang, who praised her for helping spur a renewal of Italian films.

"We need Italian cinema to find its health again so that French cinema will not remain an island in the middle of other European countries," Lang said.

Also attending Friday's ceremony was actor Gene Kelly, who will head the jury Saturday night for the the Cesars awards, the French equivalent of the Oscars. Miss Vitti, 52, will be one of several emcees at the ceremonies.

Miss Vitti recently won the best actress award at the Berlin Film Festival for her role in Roberto Russo's "Flirt," which she helped write.

Dr. Suess turns 80 years old

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Daniel Patrick Moynihan came to the floor,

On Friday, to break through the quorum call bore.

He stood with his coat on,
To the amusement of everyone,
And read a poem of praise,
Marking four-score birthdays:
"Mr. President, Mr. President,
I rise to set a precedent.
With glee and with joy,

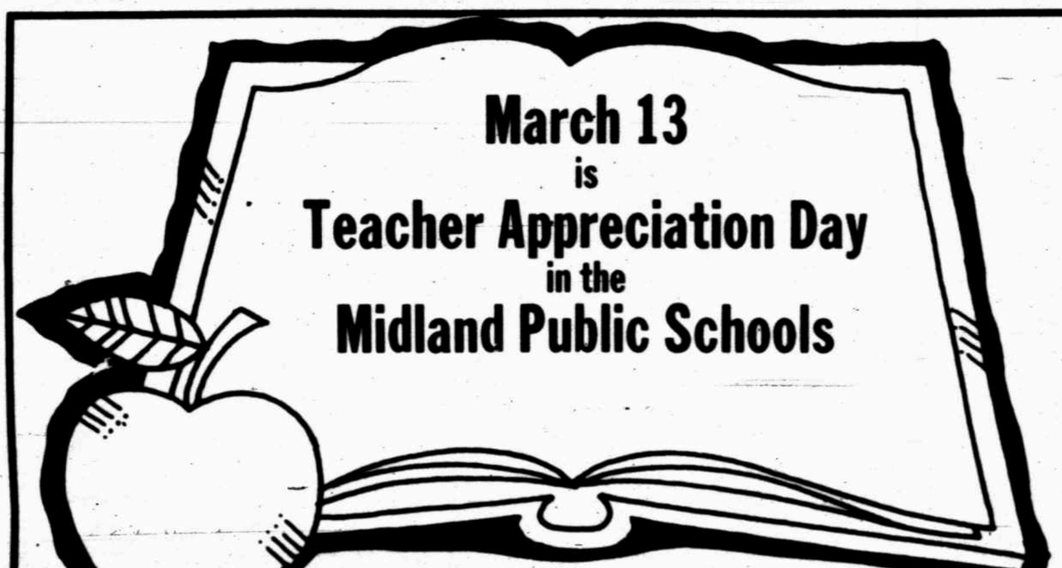
Midland Public Schools



American historian and philosopher Henry Adams once said: "A teacher affects eternity; he can never tell where his influence stops." That's true. In fact, teachers are second only to parents in their influence on students' career choices, inspiration and encouragement of talent development and instilling in students a recognition of self-worth and the desire to learn.

Midland High outfielder Mike Stanton gets hit in the head during a pickoff attempt in 4-5A Pre-District Tournament game against San Angelo. San Angelo won tie game on a coin flip.

Lee stuns Cooper

By BOB BRUNDAGE
Sports Writer

ODESSA — Midland Lee's Bryan Willis made an impressive season debut Friday afternoon when he pitched the Rebels to a 5-1 victory over Abilene Cooper here in the Pre-District Baseball Tournament.

Willis threw about as well as any pitcher can be expected to at this time of year. In seven innings, the right-handed senior allowed only one run off three hits and three walks while striking out 16 Cougars.

"My fastball was just moving and so was my slur ball, that's a slider and curve," said Willis. "I was throwing pretty good the other day in practice."

"Willis just pitched a great game," said Lee manager Ernie Johnson who viewed most of the game from a right field vantage point after being tossed out in the second inning. "I can't complain about anything especially against a team as good as Cooper. It was a great pitching performance."

Players were running to and from Johnson from the Rebel dugout to relay information, any coaching moves he wanted to make but mostly Johnson was just watching the game.

4-5A Baseball

"I felt like my Coke was good and I was sitting in the sun. It was warm," said Johnson who wasn't too happy about being ejected from the game. "All I said, and I wasn't talking any louder than I am to you right now, is you umpire and let the kids play."

The Rebels scored enough runs in the first inning, two, to win the game, but added two more in the fifth and one in the seventh inning for their final score. Cooper, which is one of the favored teams in the 4-5A this year, scored its lone run n the second inning.

"This is great," said Willis about the victory. "We got a good look at Cooper and they're supposed to be the best in the district. I think we should go on and win this tournament since we beat Cooper today."

With the victory, Lee advances into the winners bracket and will face Odessa Permian today at 1 p.m. at Permian Diamond. The winner will move into the championship game at 4 p.m. Permian was an easy 13-5 winner over Big Spring.

IN A morning game Friday, Midland High and San Angelo played to a 3-3 tie through seven innings before time ran out and forced the game to be called. Called that is by a flip of the coin.

"It wasn't a total loss," said MHS manager Tim Whalen after the Bobcats one the toss and were declared the winner. "I found a dime when I was walking away grumbling."

The Bulldogs jumped out to a 3-0 lead in the top of the fourth inning and San Angelo rallied for two runs in the bottom of the frame and the tying run in the fifth.

Mike Timlin went the distance for MHS, giving up only three hits while Jim Osborne and Anthony Gonzales combined for San Angelo.

Since the Bulldogs were hit with the loss, they had to play a second game Friday. In the final game of the day at Odessa High, Midland High held on to defeat Abilene High, 6-5, to advance to the consolation game today at 1 p.m. at OHS field.

Against Abilene High, pitcher Steve Wootan pitched and hit the Bulldogs to a 6-3 lead through six innings before getting into trouble in the bottom of the seventh.

Dunbar, Southwest in finals

By TERRY WILLIAMSON
Assistant Sports Editor

Fort Worth Southwest coach James Wood is glad to be getting another crack at the No. 1 ranked team in the state and Fort Worth Dunbar coach Robert Hughes, as usual, won't accept anything less than a trip to Austin's Super Drum.

That was the feeling after Friday night's Region I high school basketball semifinals at Chaparral Center where Southwest's 27-10 Rebels rolled over El Paso Jefferson 65-48 and unbeaten Dunbar (37-0 and No. 8 ranked nationally) claimed the hide of El Paso Riverside 59-42.

It marks the second straight year that Fort Worth teams have dominated the Region I tournament at the Chap. Dunbar lost to Fort Worth Paschal at the buzzer last year and now they face the finals jinx at 3 p.m. today against Southwest, the only team that has played the Wildcats within 10 points this year.

The two teams have met twice this season with Dunbar winning both by narrow margins of two and six points. That's where Wood is hoping today's matchup will be the third time charm.

"I would like to think we are even with Dunbar, but they are an awesome ball club," said Wood. "We don't have anyone as good as Rodrick Ford or as quick as Fred Hamilton, but it's a great opportunity for us to get to play Dunbar again."

Hughes wasn't pleased with his team's 17-point verdict over 26-6 Riverside. "We played so bad it was a joke," he said. "I felt the same way after Friday last year."

Asked if last year's heartbreaking loss at the buzzer in the Region I finals would have a positive effect for today's matchup with Southwest, he replied, "I can't think of anything a loss will do for us. We don't take kindly to losses around here.

"It doesn't matter who we play Saturday, Southwest or anyone. It's the game we have to win if we want to get to the Super Drum and we should know that better than anyone after last year."

In just comparing Friday's two games, Southwest looks capable of playing with the unbeaten Wildcats. The Rebels took control of 29-4 Jefferson early with 21 first half points from 6-foot-7 Norman Anderson, maybe the premier player out of the Dallas-Fort Worth area.

Anderson hit 11 of 15 shots from the field for 25 points to lead all scorers and was by far the most impressive player Friday night. He scored only four second half points as he switched emphasis to defense and wrecking the Silver Fox press with some fancy dribbling up court. He did it all.

"Norman is a great player and we are fortunate to have him on our team," said Wood. "We did try to force the ball into him in the second half and lost it a couple of times. We don't have to do that with this team with Willie (Thomas) and Ron (Perkins) out there."

Perkins is the leading scorer for Southwest this year and he had 12 points on a bad night for him. He hit only six of 18 points, but Anderson's 25 and Willie Thomas' 14 were plenty to offset Perkins' shooting problems.

Jefferson guard Jesse Uranga was the only Silver Fox to hit in double figures with 12 points. Southwest hit 58 percent from the field to 44 percent for Jefferson as both teams took 50 shots.

Both Riverside and Dunbar took 51 shots from the field, but the Wildcats hit 25 times while the Rangers connected only 15. Dunbar could have been in much more trouble with a hotter shooting team on this night. The Wildcats weren't impressive until the fourth period when they buried the Rangers.

Riverside missed its opportunity at an upset run in the third period when neither team scored for the first 3:40 of the second half. Riverside ended up hitting one of nine shots in the period and six of 26 for the last half. That won't do it against No. 1.

Dunbar's Tim Howard used two prolific streaks to score 20 points, hitting five-of-five in the second quarter and four-of-six in the fourth period to go along with two free throws. The only other Wildcat in double figures was star guard Rodrick Ford with 11 points, but he hit only four-of-11 from the field.

Riverside got 17 points from David Neria, who had 29 against Monterey at the Chap Tuesday in an area playoff. Neria doesn't even average in double figures for the season, but he must like playing in Midland.

But for today, it's Fort Worth against Fort Worth — again. And as far as Fort Worth fans are concerned, it will be Shootout III today.

Spring, baseball's here

Another spring and baseball is back with us, or about to be. And the grand old game just seems to go on the same as it always has, undisturbed by the turmoil that disrupts the rest of the world.

Baseball, it's still 90 feet between the bases, 60 feet six inches from the pitcher's rubber to home plate, three strikes and you are out and four balls and you are on first base.

It's comforting, isn't it, that some things never change...

Some figures dug up by The Sporting News might prove a little unsettling, if you are over 40 and have a memory.

SAN DIEGO second baseman Juan Bonilla earned $130,000 last season while batting .237 with four homers and 45 runs batted in.

Arbitrator Steve Goldberg of Chicago took one look at those figures and his horror at the injustice was evident in his decision. He said Juan certainly deserved more than the $185,000 the Padres were offering.

He decreed Bonilla should receive a livable $325,000 for 1984, influenced, undoubtedly by Juan's impressive stolen base figure...three of 'em, I believe.

Bonilla will get this amount, although prospects are good that a kid named Alan Wiggins will keep him on the bench.

MONTREAL'S Gary Carter is regarded as one of the game's better catchers in today's market and is paid like it, $2 million a season. It's justifiable enough, after all, he batted in 100 runs once. And for nine years he is averaging 20 homers a season. Consistent .300 hitter, well, he's never really been close.

Yogi Berra is back managing, but he's probably sick at heart that he's not still playing. In fact, when he looks at Carter's credentials, he's probably weeping in the dugout.

That's not the worst of it. Even though Dale Berra is his son, Yogi's got to wonder about the justice of it all.

DALE IS a journeyman ball player with the Pittsburgh Pirates. Last year his batting average shriveled from .263 to .251. His rbi total slipped from 61 to 52. They'd have benched Yogi for such run production figures, but the Pirates figured those were the figures that deserved a five-year extension to his contract.

The Cardinals couldn't wait to unload Keith Hernandez last year. The Mets were delighted when he batted .297, showed awesome 12 home run power and knocked in 63 runs. Not bad for a shortstop, only Keith is a first baseman.

Probably the most impressive thing about Keith is his knowledge of the Civil War. He's a real buff.

BUT BACK to baseball. Keith collects $1.1 million with a year to go on his contract, after which he can look forward to healthy pay increase or, like Bonnilla, arbitration.

Hernandez' statistics really aren't that bad, well, in fact they are almost comparable to those of Lou Gehrig's in 1938.

That year Gehrig hit .295 with 29 homers and 114 runs batted in. The Yankees were appalled. They wanted to cut his $39,000 a year salary $9,000.

Just because the guy was working on a 2,122 consecutive game streak was no excuse. Of course, the Yankees probably would have shown some compassion if they, or even Lou, at the time knew the old Iron Horse was fighting a fatal disease.

Lou didn't discover that until the next year.

Longview gains 5A girls finals

From Wire Reports

AUSTIN — Cassie Brooks scored 20 points and Angela Lawson added 21 as the undefeated Longview Lady Lobos beat Duncanville, 71-54, Friday night to advance to the finals of the Class 5A girls state basketball tournament.

Longview, ranked No. 1 in the state and among the best teams in the nation, will face Houston Yates tonight in the championship game.

Yates moved to the finals with a 51-50 win over San Antonio Highlands Friday.

Lawson keyed the Longview attack that has run up a 38-0 record this season. The Lady Lobos now have won 96 of their last 98 games. Their season ended last year with a 78-77 loss to Yates in the state semifinals.

Duncanville, also a semifinal loser last year, was led by 6-1 senior Cathy Nixon, who had 19 points. Cheryl Woodruff added 18.

Duncanville finished the year 33-2, with both losses to Longview.

Senior guard Shelia Valin hit 16 points as defending state champion Houston Yates held off San Antonio Highlands 51-50.

Yates, 26-0, ran its win streak to 48. Highlands finishes the season at 30-6.

Hale Center beat Frisco 52-41, and Pollok Central to edge Troy, 64-56, to advance to the 2A finals.

Hale Center was led by Kristi Lockett, 14 points, and Stephanie Smith, 15 points and 11 rebounds. Cheryl Curtis scored 17 for Frisco.

Central's Melody Modisette scored 16 points while Anita Smith and Leasa Thigen had 12 each. Nikke Redden scored 17 for Troy.

SMU'S Prado sets mark

AUSTIN (AP) — Southern Methodist's Ricardo Prado set a U.S. Open record in the 400-yard individual medley to highlight another big day for the front-running Mustangs at the Southwest Conference Swimming and Diving Championships Friday at the University of Texas.

The defending conference champ Texas cut SMU's lead from 23.5 points to half a point by the day's end with conference record-setting swims from backstroker Rick Carey and its 400-yard medley relay team to keep the meet a two-school race.

Prado, a sophomore from Brazil, set a conference record in Friday morning's prelims, then lowered it to 3:46.30 in finals, the fastest short-course time ever. The previous record was 3:54.08 set in 1982 by Chuck Bauman.

The time doesn't count as an American record because Prado is not a a U.S. citizen.

"I didn't expect I would feel so well," said Prado. "I made a few mistakes at the walls but hopefully I can get these corrected before the NCAA meet."

American record-holder Carey lowered his own conference mark in the 100 backstroke to 48.59, and the relay team of Carey, Stuart Smith, Chris Rives and Mike Ellison broke Texas' 1982 conference record with a 3:13.34.

DALLAS — Mark Aguirre scored 28 points to lead Dallas over the Kansas City Kings 108-94 in NBA Friday.

The Mavericks raced to a 32-19 first-period advantage with Rolando Blackman and Aguirre each connecting for 10 points as the two teams began a consecutive-night, home and away, two-game series.

The Mavericks took a 65-49 halftime lead as they shot 65 percent from the floor in the first half. Dallas, which has won eight of its last 12 games, widened its lead to 19, at 76-57, midway through the third period before Don Buse led a Kings nine-point blitz to pull within 10, 76-66.

Brad Davis hit three consecutive jumpers midway through the final period as the Mavericks coasted to their 23rd home victory in 31 games.

Lakers 98, Hawks 94

ATLANTA — Kareem Abdul-Jabbar, dominating three backup Atlanta centers, scored 30 points and Jamaal Wilkes scored 24 as he led the Los Angeles Lakers to a 98-94 victory over the Hawks Friday night.

Hawks' center Wayne Rollins missed his second game with bruised heel and neither temporary starter Billy Paultz nor reserves Ricky Brown and Scott Hastings could stop Abdul-Jabbar.

Atlanta's Dan Roundfield finished with 11 of his team-high 28 points in the fourth quarter, while Glenn Rivers had six of his 15 in the rally.

Chaps face NMJC in playoff tonight

By TED BATTLES
Sports Editor

Midland College usually finds an invitation to the Region V tournament waiting for it at the end of the season.

The season ended Thursday night in Odessa and the Chaparrals discovered they were still two games away from the Regional Junior College tournament at the Langford Chaparral Center next weekend.

The defending Region V champs must beat New Mexico Junior College at 8 p.m. today in the Chap Center. If they win, they would still have to play the winner of the New Mexico Military Institute-Amarillo College game Monday night. In the event that NMMI wins its first game in 18 against Western Junior College Conference opposition the year, the teams would meet at Chap Center.

If Amarillo College wins...and there may be a federal investigation if they don't...Monday's game would be played in Amarillo. The Chaps have twice lost to the Badgers.

Midland lost its final game of the season at Odessa College, 85-81, Thursday night to finish in a tie for fifth place with South Plains. A complicated power-rating system is used to break ties and in this case SPC came out a 39.5 to 38.5 winner over Midland.

In the other first round tournament games to determine the final two spots alloted to the WJCC, Frank Phillips is at Western Texas College, and Clarendon is at South Plains tonight. The winners will meet Monday.

Monday's survivors then will join WJCC champion Howard College and runnerup Odessa in next week's Region V tournament. The other four teams in the eight-team tournament come from the Northern Conference.

Jordan leads MHS bid

Swimming finals today in Monahans

MONAHANS — Midland High swimmers are proved they are competitive Friday when several qualified for today's finals in the Region I Swim Meet here.

"It's pretty much up in the air still but El Paso Eastwood probably has the strongest boy's team and Amarillo High for the girl's," said MHS swim coach Jesse Marsh. "We're in pretty good shape. We qualified almost everybody we wanted to."

Andrew Jordan is the top MHS swimmer so far, finishing in first place in two preliminary events: 50 free in 22.1 and 100 free in 48.3.

Mike Seay is the only other Bulldog with a top time, finishing first in the 100 butterfly with a prelim time of 54.8. Seay is also in third in the 200-free, 1:51.5

Other Midland High boy's to qualify for today's finals are: The boy's free relay team in second place; David Hartman, sixth in the 200 IM, 2:10.0; Paul Harris, sixth, 100 breaststroke, 1:07.2 and the boys medley relay team, sixth.

For the girl's, Midland High's Robin Black finished in sixth place in the diving event, which concluded Friday, with 242.60 points. Two places back was teammate Karen Bates, 242.50.

Midland Lee's Jana Housman was the only Rebel to qualify for the finals. Her 2:08.1 time in the 200 free was good for fourth place.

Midland High's Stacy Barbee is in fifth in the 100 breaststroke at 1:18.02.

The boy's diving competition opens today's schedule at 9 a.m. with the swimming finals set for 2 p.m.

In regional competition, the top two swimmers automatically qualify for the State Meet in Austin. Also, the next four best times from the four regional tournaments also qualify for a field of 12 swimmers and divers per event.

Cowboys' White charged

DALLAS (AP) — A Plano teen-ager filed an assault complaint Friday against Dallas Cowboys quarterback Danny White, alleging White ran the young man's car off the road and then punched him last Saturday.

Plano Justice of the Peace Kenneth Bangs said he would formally notify White of the complaint by mail and set a court date if White pleads not guilty to the misdemeanor, which carries a maximum penalty of a $200 fine.

John Michael Clark, 17, said White's van passed his car several times on a road east of Plano last Saturday afternoon and that White forced Clark's car onto the left shoulder.

Clark said when the two stopped at an intersection, White got out of his van, walked to Clark's car and punched Clark in the face as he sat behind the steering wheel. A friend was riding in the car with Clark but would not comment on the incident, according to the Dallas Morning News.

"He got out of the car and I said, 'Wow, Danny White,'" Clark told the News. "He said, 'I don't care what you do to me, I'm worried about my kids. If I ever see you on the road again, I'll kill you — do you understand? I'll kill you.'"

White said he did not punch Clark, and he called the incident "minor."

"It was so minor," he said. "If you were there and knew what it was, you'd say it was minor, too."

Clark said he did not file the complaint until Friday because his father was out of town until then. The youth's father, William Clark, said he and his son went to White's home in Wylie after the incident last Saturday and that White admitted punching the youth.

"People will see that they are trying to damage my reputation and take advantage of the situation," said White. "Hopefully people will be smart enough to know what's going on."

BYU's Young ready to decide

PROVO, Utah (AP) — Brigham Young All-America quarterback Steve Young said Friday he planned to decide this weekend whether to accept an offer from the United States Football League's Los Angeles Express or wait for the National Football League's Cincinnati Bengals to draft him in two months.

Young, who set over a dozen NCAA passing or total offense records in his two seasons as a starter at BYU, said the deadline was self-imposed "because I don't want to see this go on any further than today."

The Express took Young in the first round of the USFL draft.

Young, runner-up in the 1983 Heisman Trophy voting, also has spoken frequently with management of Cincinnati, which owns the first selection in the NFL draft in May.

Young said he had anguished for several weeks over the decision, but enjoyed his position.

Midland faces Cooper today

Against Abilene High, pitcher Steve Wootan pitched and hit the Bulldogs to a 6-3 lead through six innings before getting into trouble in the bottom of the seventh.

After giving up three runs in the first three innings, Wootan went the next three allowing only one hit. In the top of the fourth, the righthander jacked a two-run homer over the left-center fence to tie the game and then followed with an RBI single in the fifth for a 4-3 lead. Singles by Chris Herbert, Mike Stanton and Jeff Magness in the sixth provided the Bulldogs with their final two runs of the game.

Trailing by three in the bottom of the seventh, the first three Eagles to the plate punched singles in the outfield. The third single went into left where Midland High's Mike Stanton fielded it and then made an errant throw to third allowing Abilene's final two runs to score.

Whalen decided the time was right for a pitching change and called Doug Daehling to the mound for Wootan who got the next three batters to ground out. Two of the outs were fielded by Wootan who had replaced Daehling at third base.

"I was pretty tired because my arm was already hurting before the game," said Wootan. "I went ahead and pitched anyway."

And, about Wootan's first home run for Midland, Whalen said, "He hit it pretty good. Steve has been hitting the ball real hard for us this year.

"I was proud of them," continued Whalen. "I thought they made a lot of clutch plays. We got a little sloppy at the end when we threw the darned thing around and nobody would stop it."

IN OTHER tournament action, Odessa High moved into the semifinals with a 5-4 victory over Abilene High and Abilene Cooper was a 7-1 winner over Big Spring, sending the Cougars into the consolation game against Midland and Big Spring against Abilene High for seventh and eighth place.

Straw hat girl leads Uniden

COSTA MESA, Calif. (AP) — Judy Clark, better known on the LPGA Tour for her distinctive straw hats than for her golf accomplishments, crafted a 4-under-par 67 Friday to take the lead midway through the $300,000 Uniden Invitational.

Clark, who's never won a tournament in her six years on the tour, began the second round at even par, but carded five birdies and a lone bogey to move into the lead.

Her 36-hole total of 138 gave her a three-stroke lead over Joan Joyce, who had a second-round 72.

Karen Permezel, who shot a 72, is another stroke back, and Pat Bradley, with a 69, is five strokes off the pace at 143.

NANCY LOPEZ, with a second-round 74, and Penny Pulz, with a 71, were at 144.

Kathy Postlewait, who shared the opening lead with Joyce, struggled to a 78 to fall far behind.

Clark, 33, was grinning broadly after her round over the difficult Mesa Verde Country Club course, a round that included a 20-foot chip out of a bunker and into the cup for a birdie on the par 3 second hole, and a pair of 30-foot putts that dropped.

She and Joyce were the only players under par after the second day of the tournament.

Sporting her ever-present straw hat, Clark said, "I'm exhausted. There's not an easy hole on this golf course."

Although she has some 40 different straw hats, Clark said she plans to wear the same one for Saturday's third round.

"Sure, I'm kind of superstitious; anything that works," she said. "If I win this tournament, I'll wear this hat until it falls apart; maybe I could have it shellacked."

Thus far, Clark's search for a lucky hat hasn't been successful. A second-place finish two years ago was her highest in the 158 LPGA tournaments in which she has played.

She has, however, improved each year since joining the tour in 1978. She collected $69,091 in 1983, placing her 23rd on the earnings list for the year.

ASKED if she thinks it's about time she won, Clark said: "Definitely."

She added, "I've been close a couple of times ... but I didn't play as well as I could have when I had the chances to win."

Clark said she wears the straw hats that have become her trademark simply because she likes them better than the visors that most of the other women golfers wear.

Class guy Irvin leaves with Kuhn

By HAL BOCK
AP Sports Writer

The torch was passed quietly at Commissioner Bowie Kuhn's office Thursday.

The fact that Peter Ueberroth was not there to receive it first-hand is really not vital. He'll arrive eventually. Perhaps more important was that there was no one there to take it from Monte Irvin.

After more than 15 years on the commissioner's staff, Irvin is retiring at age 65. His departure leaves that office without a black in an administrative position.

"I think they'll bring somebody in to do the job I was doing day-today," Irvin said. "I think it's important to have somebody like that to give youngsters something to aspire to. They feel remote, removed from the commissioner's office otherwise."

HE DID not say black youngsters, but that is Irvin's way. He does not see blacks and whites. He sees people. This despite the fact that his own blackness delayed his arrival in the major leagues until the relatively advanced baseball age of 30, two years after Jackie Robinson and Branch Rickey had cleared the way for a racial revolution in the game.

Robinson and Irvin were the same age and Rickey could easily have selected Monte for the job of trailblazer. "Branch saw something in Jackie a lot of others didn't," Irvin said. "He was a great judge of talent and Jackie didn't prove him wrong. When I got there in 1949, they were used to the idea (of blacks in the major leagues). There was no animosity. We didn't have the rough time Jackie had.

"I THINK my saddest moment in baseball was seeing Jackie at the World Series in Cincinnati in 1972. To see this great athlete unable to see a foot in front of him, making the greatest speech you ever heard about his dream of equality in baseball, it was very emotional."

Nine days later, Robinson was dead at age 53.

"We are here such a short time," Irvin said. "Live it right and once is enough. You don't need a second chance if you do it right the first time."

As special assistant to the commissioner, Irvin served as a conduit between baseball's highest levels of management and the minority players. A member of the Hall of Fame, he was a visible line of communication for them, a connection directly to the game's policy makers.

He has come with Kuhn through baseball's most turbulent times — two player strikes, expansion, revision of the reserve clause, drug problems and a financial revolution — and he remains deeply impressed with the man who left office with him.

"You have to admire him for what he's tried to do," Irvin said. "I think he's been terrific under difficult, trying situations. He's more popular now than ever. He's won over many of his detractors and he's really at the height of his popularity. It's a crime that he's got to leave, but I'll tell you this. He seems more at ease and at peace with himself than I have ever seen him.

"MY TIMING is awfully good to go out with a class guy like Bowie."

As for himself, Irvin said, "I want to be remembered as somebody who came along, tried to aim for the stars and hit the moon. That's no mean accomplishment. I have no remorse and no regrets."

Kuhn has left Ueberroth one important legacy. His final announcement as commissioner was that Irvin has agreed to continue as a consultant to the office, making appearances and handling special projects. This will not interfere with Monte's retirement in Florida, where fish are waiting to be caught.

Hogs paid $250,000 to shed Lou

FAYETTEVILLE, Ark. (AP) — Arkansas Athletic Director Frank Broyles says it cost less than $250,000 to sever ties between the University of Arkansas and football coach Lou Holtz, who left in December.

In a statement Thursday, Broyles gave the figure. He said he was doing so because UA President Ray Thornton instructed him to. He said Thornton wanted questions about Holtz's departure laid to rest.

The Arkansas Democrat reported the developments Friday.

On Wednesday, Broyles had said he didn't have to answer questions about Holtz's departure.

Broyles' statement Thursday said: "I am confident that any loyal and dedicated Razorback fan, given all the circumstances, would feel comfortable with the manner in which coach Holtz's resignation was handled. It should be noted for all of your readers that athletic directors at major institutions would agree on the cost figure of $250,000 any time we are faced with a complete change in the football staff. This amount includes moral and legal commitments to the assistant coaches as well as the head coach. We are pleased that we were able to make this transition at a lesser cost."

He did not give the exact cost of Holtz's departure nor the source of the funds that paid those costs. He would not answer questions about his statement.

There have been published reports that Holtz was paid up to $830,000.

Paris gendarmes ready for British

PARIS (AP) — Paris Mayor Jacques Chirac said Friday he has asked for extra police at today's France-England rugby match, who should "tan the hide of the English" if there is any hooliganism.

"I'm fed up with the British fans," Paris Mayor Jacques Chirac said Friday, claiming England football supporters caused at least $262,500 damage in France when they came to Wednesday's France-England soccer game.

"I have asked the chief of police to increase the force" at the Parc des Princes Stadium "and that he give instructions that they shouldn't hold back."

Chris, Pam advance

NEW YORK (AP) — Chris Evert Lloyd and Pam Shriver easily advanced Friday night into the semifinals of the $500,000 Virginia Slims Championships tennis tournament.

Shriver, who is seeded third, will take on her doubles teammate, top-seeded Martina Navratilova in today's first semifinal, while the second-seeded Lloyd will play Barbara Potter.

Lloyd crushed the young Czechoslovakian 6-1, 6-2 after Shriver eliminated another Czech, sixth-seeded Hana Mandlikova, 6-3, 7-6.

The winner of this 16-player, season-ending event will collect $125,000, the largest purse in women's tennis, while the runnerup will pocket $60,000.

Lloyd needed less than one hour to dispose of Sukova, whose mother was a finalist at Wimbledon in 1962. And she did it with her relentless, nearly error-free groundstrokes from the baseline.

Sukova, a 6-foot-1 18-year-old who entered the pro ranks before turning 16, occasionally whipped a stinging forehand or backhand winner. But, most of her strokes were unforced errors.

Role-player Lloyd gets Sonics' attention

HOUSTON (AP) — Houston guard Lewis Lloyd is not one of the National Basketball Association's best-known names, but he's certainly got the attention of the Seattle SuperSonics and his own head coach, Bill Fitch.

The third-year pro from Drake University and New Mexico Military Institute, , who recorded a career-high 34 points Dec. 22 against the Sonics, bettered that by two points Tuedsay night to lead the Rockets to a 111-105 victory.

"In terms of assists, shots and defensive plays, he's one of the best in the league," Fitch said after the game, noting that Lloyd had his vote for the NBA's most-improved player.

Lloyd has worked his way into a starting position with the Rockets after being cast off by the Golden State Warriors, for whom he averaged 8.4 points a game in two seasons.

Lloyd's dedication endeared him to Fitch before the season started. The veteran guard went through two of Fitch's brutal rookie camps.

"He volunteered his body," Fitch said. "And not many guys volunteer their bodies at my camp unless they've been committed to a mental institution or something."

While he is the Rockets' second-leading scorer behind rookie center Ralph Sampson, Lloyd is most proud of his accomplishments at the opposition's end of the floor.

"When I first came here, they said I couldn't play defense," Lloyd said. "I've been working hard ever since, and I'm still working on it."

Only eight of Lloyd's points came in the fourth quarter Tuesday, but he got three steals and a critical jump ball to help hold off the Sonics.

NFL backs off in Irsay's case

CHICAGO (AP) — National Football League owners, facing a $49 million penalty for trying to block the Raiders from moving from Oakland to Los Angeles, decided Friday not to interfere with Baltimore Colts owner Robert Irsay's desire to move his franchise, Commissioner Pete Rozelle said.

At a news conference after a morning meeting with representatives of the 28 NFL clubs, Rozelle said, "With that judgment against them now, they decided it would not be prudent to take any action should he (Irsay) decide to move."

Rozelle said Irsay indicated he had discussed moving the Colts to several cities. Irsay acknowledged in-depth discussions with officials in Indianapolis, although he insisted there was no firm commitment, but Rozelle said Irsay indicated he was considering several other cities as well. Only New York had been ruled out by Irsay, said Rozelle.

During Super Bowl week, there were reports Irsay was planning to move the team to Phoeniz, Ariz., but nothing ever came of them.

Rozelle said Irsay planned to inform league owners of any move around the owners' scheduled March 18 annual meetings in Hawaii, or shortly thereafter. The commissioner said the league needed notification by April 1 in order to make scheduling commitments.

Rozelle reiterated his claim, made after one of the earlier stages in the court fight against the Raiders, that "NFL franchise free agency" has the NFL in essence reached a situation of "franchise free agency" had been created. "It is is possible for an owner basically to hold an auction with cities and states interested in acquiring one (a team)."

He conceded it was unlikely the owners would attempt to block a franchise shift in most cases, but added, "We will review each one separately. As of today, it's obviously prudent not to try and block this move. But if the owners wish to face the possibility of a greater liability, they might do so."

Irsay, who avoided newsmen at the meetings, was not present when the other owners or their representatives discussed the prospective move of the Colts.

Similarly, Al Davis, managing general partner of the Raiders, remained out of the privileged session while his fellow owners discussed the implications of Wednesday's federal appeals court decision in San Francisco upholding by a 2-1 vote the Raiders' move from Oakland.

Rozelle said league attorneys were confident the dissenting opinion in the Raiders' case would be upheld on appeal to the U.S. Supreme Court.

He said he met privately last week and again Friday morning with Baltimore Mayor William Schaefer. Irsay also told Schaefer earlier Friday that no action would be taken immediately on moving the franchise from Baltimore, which apparently is mounting an 11th-hour effort with cash incentives to convince Irsay to stay.

Release angers Kern

SARASOTA, Fla. (AP) — Relief pitcher Jim Kern, waived by the Chicago White Sox because of arm troubles, has accused the team of "destroying my arm and then shucking me off like last year's shotgun shells."

Kern was placed on waivers Thursday so the team can give him his unconditional release, although he said he almost begged General Manager Roland Hemond to let him pitch for the White Sox' AAA team in Denver.

Hemond called the decision to release Kern "difficult," but added, "We had to look at the business side of it."

By waiving Kern on Thursday, the team released itself from obligation to pay his $350,000-a-year salary.

Soviet denied visa to Olympics

WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S. decision to deny a visa to the Soviet Union's advance man to the Summer Olympics does not signal that Soviet athletes will also be denied entry into the United States, the State Department said Friday.

Oleg Yermishkin, told Thursday to stay out of the U.S., had been identified earlier as an agent of the Soviet secret police, a department official said in explaining the denial.

The official, who refused to allow use of his name, said Yermishkin "was identified as a fairly high-ranking KGB official when he served as first secretary of the Soviet Embassy in Washington."

But department spokesman John Hughes said the action, which he refused to discuss in detail, does not presage additional visa problems for Soviets participating in the Olympics.

"WHAT WE are seeking to block is illegitimate activity," said Hughes, who added that Yermishkin's visa had been denied "for internal security and national security gounds."

"In no way are we blocking legitimate activity. You have to accept the fact that we made a judgment in this case on grounds of internal security. It is solely a matter of the individual involved," he said.

Hughes went on to say that the U.S. is fully prepared to admit "individuals whose activities will be soley related to the Olympics."

Meanwhile, U.S. Olympic organizers in Los Angeles, site of the summer games, said they were "deeply troubled" over the timing of the decision, which they described as "unfair."

"Frankly, we are puzzled by the length of time it took to make this decision," said Peter Ueberroth, president of the Los Angeles Olympic Organizing Committee, in a statement.

THE SOVIETS originally sought a six-month visa for Yermishkin, Hughes said.

He said the Soviets were told in December that Yermishkin would not be accepted for a six-month visa under conditions of complete diplomatic immunity.

Hughes said that on Feb. 10 the Soviets submitted a visa application in Yermishkin's name to the U.S. Embassy in Moscow and that the United States rejected the application 18 days later.

The spokesman called the action entirely justified and added, "In no way are we attempting to prevent Soviet participation in the Olympic games."

Yermishkin's duties as advance for the Soviet Olympic team would have included assisting the Soviet Olympic Committee in getting ready for the Games and preparing for the reception of Soviet athletes and sports officials.

No slithering for Mike tonight

By The Associated Press

Mike Rozier spent his pro football debut slipping and sliding his way to a disappointing 27 yards in the rain in Oklahoma. There'll be no such atmospheric problems for the Pittsburgh Maulers' Heisman Trophy winner in Michigan.

Tonight's game against the Panthers will be played indoors, on the carpet of the Silverdome. Earlier today, the Outlaws, who debuted as a USFL expansion team by beating the Maulers 7-3, take on the visiting Denver Gold.

Despite his (and Pittsburgh's) low numbers, Rozier said he was "pleased with the way I played and with the way the team played ... We know what we did right and what we did wrong. I'm not real concerned about statistics. I'm just concerned about winning."

The Panthers are coming off a last-second 20-18 victory over Chicago in their season opener. Bobby Hebert, the quarterback who missed most of Michigan's training camp while a contract dispute was resolved, completed 20 of 34 passes for 296 yards and two touchdowns.

USFL

Doug Williams' USFL debut as quarterback of the Outlaws was hardly more auspicious than Rozier's — completions on nine of 22 passes for 62 yards — but he did throw a 12-yard pass to running back Derek Hughes for the winning touchdown in the downpour.

The crowd in Tulsa's Skelly Stadium figures to give Dave Stalls of Denver a rousing reception. Stalls, when he was a defensive lineman for the National Football League's Los Angeles Raiders, said during Super Bowl Week last January, "I don't know if I can get psyched up (for a game) in front of 500 farmers in a hay field."

Fan purchases Phoenix Giants

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) — Martin' Stone, who was once paid $20 for 20 minutes of pitching pregame batting practice to the Los Angeles Dodgers and Boston Red Sox, says "the savings from that is what made it possible for me to buy a ballclub."

The 55-year-old lawyer from Lake Placid, N.Y., became the majority owner of the Phoenix Giants on Thursday after buying 75 percent of the team's stock.

Stone told reporters at a news conference that the Pacific Coast League club would remain in Phoenix and the financially troubled Class AAA affiliate of the San Francisco Giants would "show a profit this year.

"I'm convinced of it," he said. "I see no reason why we would not."

Terms of the sale to Stone were not disclosed, but the club's 17 co-owners will retain 25 percent interest, club officials said.

Dynasties on way out?

OMAHA, Neb. (AP) — Allowing pro football teams to sign college underclassmen to contracts "will make it very difficult for the colleges and will work to the detriment of the pros," says Nebraska Athletic Director Bob Devaney.

A federal court decision Wednesday apparently cleared the way for pro leagues to sign players who have college eligibility remaining.

"We'll just have to wait and see what happens," Devaney said. "I don't believe this ruling forces them to go out and sign kids. But if a kid wants to play, then they could consider signing him."

That could mean an end to major-college football dynasties, University of Nebraska-Omaha Coach Sandy Buda said.

He said the signing of underclassmen wouldn't have much effect on teams at UNO's level, NCAA Division II. "We don't have that many underclass players who are ready to play pro football," Buda said.

But, he said, the ruling could do much damage at the Division I level.

Reaction

"Take the Nebraska football team of this last year. If the pros could have signed underclassmen, it would have utterly destroyed the Nebraska program.

"If players like Irving Fryar, Mike Rozier, Turner Gill and Dean Steinkuhler had $1 million waved in their faces as underclassmen, you don't think they would turn it down, do you?

"If underclassmen are signed, the dynasties will be shattered. They won't have those players around for five years like they do now."

Devaney said the pro rule against signing underclassmen was "more of a gentlemen's agreement."

"They could sign underclassmen, but it was to their benefit not to do it," Devaney said. "The colleges were their minor league system that they couldn't afford to operate themselves."

Peter Ueberroth

Ueberroth won't accept unless job restructured

CULVER CITY, Calif. (AP) — Peter Ueberroth, expected to be named the new baseball commissioner on today, said he would not accept the job unless there are changes made in the current structure of the commissioner's office.

"It's not properly structured to be an effective position," Ueberroth said.

"If it was offered, I would say no. Under other conditions, maybe."

Ueberroth, presently head of the Los Angeles Olympic Organizing Committee didn't specify his objection other than noting he has "a simple and lengthy list" of suggested changes.

Sources confirmed that all 26 baseball owners are scheduled to meet in Tampa, Fla. today to appoint Uebberoth to the job. Sandy Hadden, secretary treasurer and general counsel to baseball, would serve as interim commissioner until Ueberroth fulfills his obligation to the Olympics, which end Aug. 12.

Ueberroth is reportedly the choice of baseball's search committee, headed by Bud Selig, owner of the Milwaukee Brewers. The owners have reportedly agreed to ratify the search committee's selection.

Selig has been unavailable for comment. But a source close to the situation said the owners were swayed to Uebberoth's favor when he received the backing of Peter O'Malley of the Los Angeles Dodgers, a Kuhn supporter.

A.C.A. is an anonymous fellowship of adult children of alcoholics, (although all are welcome). Many of us grew up in alcoholic homes or are at the present time faced with dealing with the consequences of this disease in a parent, relative or friend. In this fellowhip we have come to understand that alcoholism is an illness which we did not cause, cannot cure and cannot control. We have found by sharing our experience, strength and hope and by following the 12 suggested steps of AA we can live our lives in a more meaningful manner and can change our attitudes, old patterns and habits to find serentiy, even happiness. Couple adopts 11 Koreans

By MARGARET STAFFORD
Associated Press Writer

CEDAR FALLS, Iowa — After Jim and Jodi Swarbrick had a son in 1970, the doctor told them they wouldn't have any more children. The doctor was wrong.

Today, the Cedar Falls couple has 12 children — 11 of them adopted from Korea. Six of them have handicaps.

In 1976, following the advice of friends, they turned to agencies that arrange the adoption of Korean children. The first was a girl, Tori, who is now 8.

The kids came in waves. First was Tori; then Maggi and Keri, both 6; then Luke, 13, Andrew, 10, Jason, 10, Joey, 8, Jenna, 14, Noah and Zachary, 19 months, and finally Channon, 3. Zach and Noah, Maggi and Keri and Luke and Andrew are three sets of siblings.

It cost the couple $4,300 a child to adopt, and they took children who were hard to place, either because they were older, handicapped or male.

Jenna has polio, Jason has cerebral palsy, Joey is terminally ill with a rare form of muscular dystrophy, Noah is developmentally delayed and may have cerebral palsy, Tori is deaf in one ear and Keri has severe asthma.

The Swarbricks' most difficult challenge is dealing with the imminent death of Joey. Doctors have said no treatment exists for his disease and he doesn't have long to live.

Joey and his father will visit Mickey Mouse, Donald Duck and other characters at Disney World in Orlando, Fla., on a special trip arranged by a Des Moines organization which works to fulfill the wishes of dying children.

But the crisis has brought the close-knit family even closer.

The talk is mostly in English, with some Korean mixed in.

Although some of the children are handicapped, they are also gifted.

"We've had some hard times, but the good times far outweigh the bad," he added. "We wouldn't change this for anything."

With one exception: The Swarbricks have their names in for a 12th adopted child.

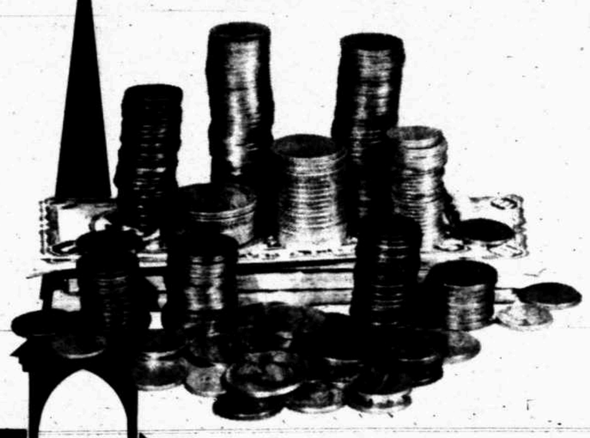
STRIKE IT RICH!



Sunday Psalm 119 1-8
Monday Jeremiah 17 5-13
Tuesday Psalm 1 1-6
Wednesday 1 Corinthians 15 12-34
Thursday Luke 6 17-19
Friday Leviticus 19 1-37
Saturday Psalm 103 1-22

How many times have you heard this remark? How many times has it raced through your own mind? It's very easy to think that having enough money would make you happy.

Many people have found that millions of dollars just won't eliminate all their difficulties . . . or won't make life's problems easier to solve.

What then? For generations people have solved their problems by going to the church of their choice. In this way they have "struck it rich." Because, with God's help they have found the courage and the power to fulfill life's demands.

And so there is a way to strike it rich. Try it next week in your place of worship.

Vatican newspaper says heresy charge against Galileo baseless

RELIGION

VATICAN CITY (AP) — The Vatican newspaper says the heresy charge brought against the Italian astronomer Galileo in 1633 seems baseless, but sources said earlier this week the Vatican commission studying the charge is not expected to recommend overturning it.

"The Holy Father has said the church had erred in condemning Galileo, and the commission apparently does not feel any need of a formal action beyond stating the circumstances that had led to his condemnation," said a Vatican source who asked not to be identified.

An inquisition court in Rome condemned Galileo Galilei as being "vehemently suspected of heresy" for his assertion that the Earth was an ordinary planet revolving around the sun.

The church condemned Galileo after he published in 1632 his "Dialogue on the Two Chief Systems of the World," which stated that the Earth was not the center of the universe.

On Thursday, the Vatican newspaper L'Osservatore Romano said in an editorial that the Roman Catholic Church's action against Galileo "seems to have no foundation."

"The so-called heresy of Galileo seems to have no foundation," said the newspaper, adding that its evaluation was based on an interpretation of theological teaching and canon law.

The sources said the commission was preparing its final report on the case.

"From the commission's re-evaluation, it is plain that the church officials at that time were ignorant...Although the judgment, given the prevailing cultural and scientific atmosphere, probably was taken without malice," he said.

Pope John Paul II said last May 9 that the Roman Catholic Church erred in condemning Galileo and sentencing him to house arrest.

The commission, appointed by the pope to study the case, is headed by French Archbishop Paul Poupard, acting president of the Vatican secretariat for non-believers, and includes French Cardinal Gabriel-Marie Garrone.

Bishop: Members need to go to Mass

CHICAGO (AP) — In his first pastoral letter as Roman Catholic archbishop of Chicago, Cardinal Joseph Bernardin urges church members to renew their commitment to attend Sunday Mass. "Otherwise, we forget who we are," he says.

He says "the liturgy is not an 'extra,' something nice that may give us good feelings. It is not an option, nor merely an obligation...but a need — like food and drink, like sleep and work, like friends. We need to gather, listen, give praise and thanks, share Communion."

POSITIVE THINKING

Successful people overcome discouragement to triumph

By NORMAN VINCENT PEALE

Across the years I have met not a few defeated people and in every case they were victims of discouragement, even depression. On the other hand, I have known many exciting and victorious persons, and in every instance one important factor in their victory has been the overcoming of discouragement, the rising above depressiveness. When discouragement hangs over a person like a heavy cloud cover blotting out the sun, the light of life is dulled, the spirit is depressed. But when that cloud cover is lifted, then zest and enthusiasm come through and one lives with renewed strength and joy.

The late Governor Charles Edison of New Jersey told me of the resilient, undefeatable spirit of his father, the famous inventor Thomas A. Edison.

On the night of December 9, 1914, the great Edison industries of West Orange were practically destroyed by fire. Mr. Edison lost two million dollars that night and much of his life's work went up in flames. He was insured for only two hundred and thirty-eight thousand dollars because the buildings had been made of concrete, at that time thought to be fireproof.

Young Edison was twenty-four; his father was sixty-seven. The young man ran about frantically, trying to find his father. Finally he came upon him, standing near the fire, his face ruddy in the glow, his white hair blown by the December winds.

"My heart ached for him," Charles Edison told me. "He was sixty-seven — no longer a young man — and everything was going up in flames. He spotted me. 'Charles,' he shouted, 'where's your mother?' 'I don't know, Dad,' I said. 'Find her,' he bade me. 'Bring her here. She will never see anything like this again as long as she lives.'"

The next morning, walking about the charred embers of all his hopes and dreams, Thomas Edison said, "There is great value in disaster. All our mistakes are burned up. Thank God we can start anew."

And three weeks after the fire his firm delivered the first phonograph. This is the story of a man who face the inevitable hazards of human existence with fortitude, courage, faith. He knew tht sixty-seven years meant nothing, that the loss of money meant nothing, because he could always build again.

There is generally someone about who always will say, "But Thomas A. Edison was a very unusual man. He could take it that way. I couldn't."

Yes, Edison was unusual. But I have seen many people, unknown to fame and fortune, who were also unusual in the same way; people who thought right, acted right and believed right under the adversity which comes to every human being.

Military battles civilians over use of its facilities

WASHINGTON (AP) - A few years ago, Edwin Colodny, chairman of USAir, offered an idea for easing the pressure on Washington's crowded National Airport — shift some of the traffic, especially the small private planes, to underused Andrews Air Force Base.

But the suggestion in a speech to an aviation group died almost as it was uttered. If it had not, the Pentagon would have been ready with its biggest guns to shoot it down, say government and private aviation experts.

As congestion at many civilian airports increases, the military stands as determined as ever to block any widespread use of its facilities by commercial or private pilots, even though the Federal Aviation Administration long has urged such a move as a way to save tens of millions of dollars.

"This is an ongoing struggle between the Department of Transportation and the Department of Defense," says Steve Bassett, a spokesman for the Aircraft Owners and Pilots Association, which would like many of the military airfields opened up to its members.

Over the past three decades more than 150 military fields have been closed and many are being used by civilian pilots today. But only about 10 percent of the country's 233 active military fields — many of them operating far under capacity — are open to civilians, usually with severe restrictions.

In a report by the Defense and Transportation departments soon to be sent to Congress, the Pentagon again prevails, according to government sources knowledgeable about the report. Of 25 additional facilities examined for possible joint use, "less than five" are given a favorable recommendation and some of those are being phased out for military use anyway, one source said.

Congress two years ago said it wanted the two departments to submit a plan to make military airfields available for other users "to the maximum extent compatible with national defense requirements," saying such a move would avoid the need to spend millions on new airports.

The FAA suggested several years ago that at least 50 military facilities might be suitable for joint civilian use to avoid the need for more civilian airports.

"The FAA traditionally has been for joint use because it increases airport capacity in metropolitan areas and permits more efficient use of existing airports," said agency spokesman Fred Farrar.

Those who advocate civilian use of more military fields argue the facilities were constructed at taxpayer expense and should be made available unless it can be demonstrated that civilian planes would jeopardize the military's mission or pose a safety problem.

Among the facilities that long have been eyed by the private pilots are military airfields near major cities including Los Angeles, San Francisco, Chicago, New Orleans, New York and Boston. But in each case the Pentagon has been firmly opposed to opening the facilities.

In a few cases the aviation community has succeeded.

The city of Houston has been trying to get nearby Ellington Air Force Base for civilian use for eight years. The Pentagon recently agreed to sell the airfield to the city, which plans to open it to small, private planes in July to take some pressure off of the region's two major airports.

An Air National Guard unit will still use the airfield, now paying the city for the privilege.

Charles Sherrod helps workers with equipment at New Communities Inc., a south Georgia land cooperative patterned after an Israeli mode.

Social experiment still alive in Georgia

LEESBURG, Ga. (AP) — In 1961, Charles Sherrod, a young theology student, was up to his thighs in mud, digging a ditch and serving time on a road gang.

If anyone had said he would be a city leader and head of a rural southwest Georgia cooperative 23 years later, "I would have laughed," Sherrod said.

The 47-year-old Sherrod is president and founder of New Communities Inc., a 4,400-acre cooperative. The non-profit organization, patterned on an Israeli model, was one of the social experiments of the 1960s. But New Communities, which has teetered on the brink of insolvency since it began in 1968, has managed to survive.

The route from a South Carolina road gang to New Communities, located just north of Leesburg, has been a long and hard one, said Sherrod, who has served as one of six city commissioners in nearby Albany since 1978.

The cooperative's land shrank to 4,400 acres in the 1970s when more than 1,300 acres were sold to cover debts. Five straight years of drought and dwindling federal assistance have taken a toll. Only a few families live on the land; at one time, 500 families hoped to move there.

The Little Farmer's Market is a mostly barren store, stocked with some canned goods and staples. Fishing licenses are sold there. One corner doubles as a library, where anyone can borrow dog-eared paperbacks and magazines.

Sherrod hasn't realized a fraction of the dreams he had for New Communities — designed to be a self-sufficient community with 200 houses, a hospital, a K-12 school — but the minister hasn't called it quits.

"This organization is all about upgrading life for the poor," he said. "All we have to do is stabilize the land, and then we'll work on housing."

In 1961, Sherrod, a student at Virginia Union University, and 16 others were arrested for trying to integrate a lunch counter at a South Carolina drugstore. Sherrod and the others spent about two months, by choice, in jail.

"We said jail, no bail. We were going to fill the jails," he recalled.

He and some of the others were put to work making concrete culverts and digging storm sewers.

Sherrod said he sustained his faith by reading the Bible.

"It was then that my commitment to the ministry took form," he said. He turned down a position at the university and decided to continue as a field director for the Student Non-Violent Coordinating Committee, a group which made headlines as its workers fought for civil rights in the Deep South.

Sherrod's job was to travel alone to southwest Georgia and work for voter registration. He helped organize protests in Albany, where blacks shut down the city's private bus system and integrated interstate bus lines, lunch counters and other public facilities.

It was then that Sherrod began thinking about New Communities Inc.

"We knew we had to get a safety zone for our people," he said.

A New York-based foundation helped send Sherrod to Israel to study the moshavim and kibbutzim. Sherrod found the atmosphere of the kibbutz too rigid. The moshav, where people leased land individually but farmed the land collectively, was more suited to south Georgia.

The Norman Foundation put up the initial money to buy 6,000 acres. New Communities nearly went under in 1974, but a group of New York City churches contributed enough money to save the experiment from failure.

Financial problems remain a problem at New Communities. Currently, the cooperative is soliciting $300 contributions from individuals and churches to retire an outstanding debt of $1.7 million.

"Our primary source of income is farming," Sherrod said, but the cooperative is not in full production because of a shortage of materials, equipment and labor. Eight full-time employees work year-round on the 1,500 acres under cultivation, and 150 people help at harvest with the soybeans, peanuts, grapes, corn and other crops.

About 50 people live on the land; 100 others who help farm it live nearby because of the lack of housing at the cooperative. The peanuts they raise go into a government program, Sherrod said, while soybeans and some of the grapes and vegetables are sold wholesale or to local stores.

The community also auctions off the hogs it raises and allows people to pick vegetables and grapes themselves for a lower price.

Dog voices his opinion

CHESTERFIELD, Mass. (AP) — When the candidates are dogs, dogs should get the vote, the board of selectmen has decided.

The question of canine enfranchisement arose Feb. 11 when Gail Kielson was elected the sole delegate from this Berkshire Hills town to the state Democratic convention.

The unanimous vote was cast by her husband, David, the only other one of about 60 registered Democrats in town to show up at the caucus in the couple's kitchen, and by their golden retriever, Rusty. Rusty reportedly indicated his preference by barking "aye."

Former Selectman Donald E. Fobes wrote to the board seeking equal rights for his golden retriever, Sandy, after reading about Rusty in a Miami newspaper while vacationing in Florida.

Selectmen responded with a letter headed "One Dog-One Vote" in which they observed that, "Sandy is of sounder mind and judgment than some voters and most selectpersons." They recommended that the town clerk and Board of Registrars enroll him for all town elections in which another member of his species is among the candidates.

Church, his ministry backbone of Jesse Jackson's campaign

ATLANTA (AP) — The minister has finished and the flock is shouting "amen." It's time for a sign of faith.

The believers march down near the pulpit to testify, but not for the Lord. Their "amens" are for the message and, even more, for the minister — the Rev. Jesse L. Jackson.

The scene is the Sisters Chapel of Spellman College and Jackson is here on a crusade for the presidency.

Black churches have become the way stations of the Baptist minister's political quest, as well as the financial and organizational backbone of his late-starting campaign.

"It's the only thing comparable we have to the AFL-CIO in terms of an organized base," says Frank Watkins, Jackson's issues coordinator. "To us, it is our own AFL-CIO."

Watkins says it's natural for politicians who develop relationships with labor, women's organizations or special interest groups to "cash those chips in" when running for president.

In Jackson's case, Watkins adds, he's "developed relationships over the years with black ministers."

Indeed, Jackson's people say tens of thousands of black preachers across the nation are involved in his bid for the White House.

"This is the first time I have been involved in a political campaign ... that I have ever seen ministers actively participating in such large numbers," said Michael A. Figures, an Alabama state senator who is a state co-chairman of Jackson's campaign.

"They are taking a leading role — raising money, making public statements. It's really an amazing thing."

Support crosses denominational lines. The Rev. T.J. Jemison, president of the National Baptist Convention, U.S.A., Inc., has endorsed Jackson and he says about 95 percent of his organization's nearly 29,000 ministers are supporting the presidential contender.

Jesse Jackson

Jemison's group boasts nearly 7 million members and is the largest black church in the nation.

Another Jackson backer is Minister Louis Farrakhan, who heads the black Nation of Islam. The sect is an offshoot of the original black Muslim group founded by Elijah Muhammad, who exhorted his followers to shun politics. But Farrakhan has registered to vote for the first time and Jackson says the Muslim leader will lead a drive to register 100,000 voters nationwide.

Other endorsements have come from Presiding Bishop J.O. Patterson of the Pentecostal Church of God in Christ and Bishop H.H. Brookins, a high-ranking official of the African Methodist Episcopal Church in Western states

Some leaders, such as Jemison, recall that Jackson marched shoulder to shoulder with them in the toughest battles of the civil rights movement.

"He just didn't come to the forefront in fighting for the rights of people," Jemison says. "He's been on the scene a long time. He's paid his dues."

Jackson's clerical supporters are convinced they can inspire support for the candidate in a unique way because of the pivotal role religion plays in the black community.

"The church is the most cohesive, most permanent and most stable institution in the black community," says Brookins. "Its outreach extends farther than any other institution."

The black preacher, he adds, "has been the chief communicator to black people about issues that impact them. Because of this impact with the people, they are therefore able to influence them."

Though most church leaders refuse to predict how many votes they can turn out for Jackson, some point out their support is a barometer of grass-roots support.

"Preachers like to gauge the wind," says the Rev. William Howard, a Jackson supporter and former president of the National Council of Churches. "They don't necesarily plow new ground. They don't take these decisions lightly. These are not necessarily men who had had a historic commitment to Jesse Jackson."

But when involvement of black churches extends into the financial realm, it raises concern that churches might be jeopardizing their tax-exempt status when their ministers become Jackson organizers or allow the candidate's workers to pass the hat after political rallies in church.

Translation system, based on computer, needs humans

WESTPORT, Conn. (AP) — It has been a technological dream for years: a machine that turns out accurate, grammar-perfect translations from one language to another.

Engineers on several continents have tried to create such a machine. So far, no computer has been able to completely replace a human translator.

A young U.S. company, however, is marketing the next best thing: a semiautomatic translation system, based on a computer, with a human adding the finishing touches.

"Our approach is interactive — the machine and the translator work together," says Ron Mahoney, president of the 3-year-old company, Automated Language Processing Systems (ALPS). The computer automatically translates much of the text, but recognizes and indicates to a translator phrases or words that could present problems. The translator then selects or types in the proper words.

ALPS is offering systems that translate English to French, German, Spanish and Italian and a system that translates French to English.

Computers have had a tough time handling the nuances of language, and for good reason.

Take the French word "dejeuner." As a verb, it means "to eat lunch," but it has no one-word English equivalent. It can also be a noun meaning "lunch." Preceded by the word "petit," it means "breakfast."

Similarly, the English word "free" has at least two translations into French — "gratuit" if the word means "free of charge" or "libre" if it means politically free.

Jack Rapport, the regional manager of ALPS for the northeastern United States, cites another potential problem for a machine. He says the English phrase "the spirit is willing but the flesh is weak" could be translated by a machine as "the wine is good but the meat is rotten."

Partly for these reasons, computer translation so far has usually been used for straightforward, technical material. In Luxembourg, the European Economic Community has experimented with machine translation for economic and governmental texts.

Mahoney and Rapport, in interviews in their Westport sales office, emphasized that their systems were directed toward lengthy translation jobs; they cited as an example the translation of a personal computer manual several hundred pages long.

The ALPS product is based on years of research at Brigham Young University in Utah. Professors there were working, in part, to translate the Book of Mormon, the fundamental religious text of the Mormon religion.

ALPS, based in Provo, Utah, is stepping up the marketing campaign for its product, and has sold systems to companies including Xerox and Computervision, a company that specializes in computer-aided manufacturing and design.

Mahoney, a former vice president with Texas Instruments, said he believed the $5 billion worldwide market for translation services would grow in coming years by 5 percent to 10 percent annually.

Animals make monkey of researcher

MISSOULA, Mont. (AP) — In an experiment on diet and learning, researcher Steve Lavender plunked eight rhesus monkeys down in front of Pac-Man video games to see how they would fare.

But the critters made a monkey of Lavender, proving so adept at the game that it had to be redesigned to beat their sure-fire system of winning.

With the beat of folk-rock music thumping in his ears, one simian named Albert plays for about four hours a week. He maneuvers the voracious yellow Pac-Man figure around the screen as it heads toward its goal while eluding vicious predators. When Albert succeeds, yellow lights flash and a miniature marshmallow rolls down a chute to his left.

Albert pops it into his mouth and resumes play, still chewing.

But Albert quickly figured out that he did not have to chase over the whole screen to get a marshmallow. He simply steers Pac-Man to a row of three figures at the bottom of the screen and munches more marshmallows while waiting 60 seconds for the same figures to reappear.

Oklahomans get ready for caucuses

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — In living rooms, schools and libraries across Oklahoma small groups of people will be gathering early this month to begin the process that could ultimately decide who sits in the Oval Office next January.

The process is the political caucus — grassroot politics at its most basic level.

For state Republicans, the process begins March 5. Democrats hold their precinct meetings March 13. In each case, more than 2,300 meetings will take place.

Precinct co-chairwoman LaRue Donwerth, with her husband, Floyd, will host one of the Democratic Party caucus meetings at a school in Oklahoma City. Eight precincts will be meeting at the school, and as district coordinator she will be checking on each of them.

The caucuses "are pretty serious in most instances, particularly in a presidential year," she said.

About 10 to 15 people usually attend her precinct meeting, out of some 500 Democrats eligible to attend. She says a good crowd would be 30 to 50.

Her precinct, for instance, is eligible to choose 10 delegates to the county convention.

"A caucus system lends itself to those people who are poltically active or semi-politically interested," said a former state Democratic Party official who asked not to be identified.

He said caucuses can range from meetings of the "creme de la creme" of society to sessions comprised of nothing but members of the same family.

The former party official said precinct meetings in presidential years can attract 10 to 20 times more participants than off-year meetings.

In both parties, the process beginning this March will have the same end result — to select delegates to the national conventions in the summer.

Republicans will select their nominee — presumably President Ronald Reagan — at their national convention Aug. 20-23 in Dallas.

Democrats meeting July 16-19 in San Francisco will choose among a former vice president, a former astronaut, a former governor, a civil rights leader and four others.

The former party leader said Mondale's Oklahoma forces "have worked the hardest and have been here the longest of all the candidates." He said Mondale sent crews into Oklahoma last fall.

Few surprises are expected in the precinct caucuses held by Republicans Monday, March 5, at 7 p.m.

Humans just may cotton to protein-rich seed

DENTON, Texas (AP) — Fields of soft, fuzzy bolls of cotton that for almost a century have been a mainstay for Texas farmers may glitter more like white gold in years to come.

Cotton holds the promise of a protein-rich food that could become a mainstay for good nutrition. If dreams of a Japanese company and researchers at two Texas universities come true, cotton could again become king in Texas as its seed becomes a worldwide food.

Research at both Texas A&M and Texas Woman's University has opened the door for development of cotton seed as a food source for humans.

The problem of getting the word to the buying public may be solved by a Japanese firm which is buying the only business in the nation that processes the cotton seed kernel for human consumption

Yazaki USA Inc. is in the final stages of purchasing Rogers Cotton Seed Co., a Waco seed firm that for several years has been the only source of the edible seed used by A&M and TWU research kitchens.

"We're selling out because we needed worldwide marketing and we did not have the capital," said Rogers' board chairman, W.T. Rogers.

Rebecca Gould, left, and Candice Pickens pose with food made from cottonseed flour at Texas Woman's University in Denton, Texas. Cotton holds the promise of a protein-rich food that could become a staple for good nutrition. Research at both Texas A&M and Texas Women's University has opened the door for development of cottonseed as food source for humans.

HE WILL continue to operate the seed company under the new contract while Yazaki handles marketing, Rogers said.

What makes the cotton kernel so important is its high protein content.

It contains more protein than any other nut, including peanuts. One hundred grams of cotton seed flour is 60-percent protein, as compared to 48-percent protein for the same amount of peanut flour, said Carol Shanklin, associate professor of nutrition and food science at TWU.

The same amount of all-purpose flour is only 12 percent protein and whole wheat flour is 14 percent. Soy flour is 42 percent protein. By contrast, 100 grams of broiled ground beef or stewed chicken contain about 30 percent protein.

Substituting cotton seed flour for even 10 percent of wheat flour in a product will increase the protein content by 50 percent, TWU research shows. In some recipes for brownies and bar cookies, cotton seed flour can replace all the wheat flour, increasing the protein content as much as 400 percent.

For undernourished people around the world, such a protein increase could be the difference between death and a healthy life.

AND TO TOP it off — cotton seeds are tasty.

Most people who try them describe the flavor as akin to peanuts, cashews and sunflower seeds, said Rhonda Simmons, research associate for the Texas A&M Food Protein Research and Development Center.

The A&M center distributes what it calls TAMU nuts at conferences and meetings to advertise the product. TWU experts have developed a product called a bolla chip.

Similar in shape to a tortilla chip, it has a delicate, nutty flavor. Currently, TWU officials are working with their attorneys on possible sale of the product to a major company. They hope to work out a deal so that TWU might receive continuing financial benefit to be applied to more research, Shanklin said.

Research kitchens at both universities have tested a whole line of recipes using the kernel, flour and the latest development — flakes. Flakes are being used to replace flour in many of the recipes with rave results, Shanklin said.

Manufacture of the flakes eliminates removing the oil from the kernel, a step that some believe leaves a slight aftertaste, although not as strong as the taste of soybeans. To substitute flakes for cotton seed flour, the cook has only to reduce the oil called for in the recipe, she said.

ELIMINATING manufacturing steps also lowers the cost of the product — making it even more marketable.

A five-pound sack of wheat flour sells for about $1.20 retail, while one pound of cotton seed flour purchased wholesale is ~~$1.75~~. Flakes are just under $1 a pound wholesale.

Other recipes tempt sweets lovers with cookies and a peanut butter cup-style candy made with cotton butter. There're also pizza rolls with a crust of cotton seed flakes. The university researchers have tested their products on the best judges in the world — youngsters in public schools and day-care centers.

The real benefit more than taste, however, was that students were taking in much higher protein levels than they would had they been eating products with wheat flour or peanuts.

Within five years, researchers and producers say the seed can assume a role in the marketplace as a major source of protein.

Cotton has been a staple for cloth production in nations for centuries. For years in the United States, the seed and waste products from the plant have provided cattle with a high protein diet. And cotton seed oil is found in an array of products already on grocery shelves.

But humans — and other animals that lacked the double stomach that cattle have for digestion — have been unable to use the high protein substance left after the oil has been removed.

COTTON SEED contains a pigment called gossypol that in high concentrations is toxic to humans. In small regulated amounts, gossypol is being used in China as a male contraceptive.

HOW TO WRITE A GOOD WANT AD

1. IT'S ALWAYS BEST to start your advertisement with the name of the article or service you have to offer. If you have an apartment or room for rent or property for sale, it's better to start your advertisement with the location.
2. BE CLEAR. Readers react more quickly and favorably when given complete or definite information. One of the most important considerations of any advertisement is to include the price.
3. MAKE IT EASY for the reader prospect to reach you. ALWAYS INSERT your telephone number or your name and address. If you do not have regular hours, state a preferred time to have prospects contact you.
4. THE GREATEST READER RESPONSE can be secured for your advertisement by using consecutive insertions. Play safe. The thrifty 15 day plan is best and costs less per insertion. There are also special monthly rates for those who want to keep their name and offers before the public each and every day. Cancel when you get results, the charge will be the rate earned at the time of cancellation.
5. PLACE YOURSELF in the reader's position and ask yourself what you would like to know about your offer. The answer you give will make a good classified ad.
6. CLASSIFIED READERS ARE already interested in buying used or new merchandise. These people have the money and are in the market to buy. Give them every advantage you can with good ad copy.
7. WANT ADS THAT FAIL do so not through any lack of readership, but because they are often quickly worded and do not contain enough information to get prompt action.
8. TO PLACE YOUR ADVERTISEMENT in The Midland Reporter-Telegram, where you reach the active Classified market,

"WE WANTED A QUALITY LIFESTYLE, NOT GIMMICKS AND GIVEAWAYS..."
"...That's why, when John and I were transferred to Midland, we chose to live at Oakridge Apartments. Sure, we passed up a few gimmicks and giveaways offered by the other communities. But what we got instead is an apartment community superior to anything else we saw. New on the market this year, Oakridge Apartments are bright and beautiful with sparkling new amenities and lots of extras. But more than that, Oakridge is a real quality neighborhood. The people out here are just great, and the management team is the best we've ever had."
1-, 2- and 2-bedroom studio apartment homes are available now. Take Loop 250 to N. Holiday Hill Road and look for the giant American flag.
