SUGAR RATION MEETING SET

School Officials To Study Regulations

Sugar rationing plans, nearing readiness for operation, are to be studied here next Thursday, April 16, by school superintendents and rationing board members of nine counties with more than 140 officials expected in attendance, it was learned Wednesday.

The meeting in Wichita Falls, to be held in the county court room, will be one of several to be held in Texas. Schoolmen and rationing boards of Archer, Baylor, Clay, Foard, Hardeman, Knox, Montague, Wichita and Wilbarger counties are to assemble in Wichita Falls. Bullock Hyder, member of the state rationing board, is scheduled to preside.

In connection with the same plan, state school superintendents of Texas, Oklahoma and Louisiana are to meet at Dallas Saturday, April 11.

Tentative plans indicate that public schools will recess only one complete day for issuance of sugar-rationing cards. On the other three days of registration (May 4, 5, 6 and 7) a skeleton teaching force at each school will carry on classes, it was said.

AREA ALLOWED INCREASED SUPPLY

Wichita county as a defense area, was qualified Wednesday by the War Production Board at Washington for increased sugar supply under the rationing program which soon is to be placed in operation.

Because population in the Wichita defense area has increased 10 per cent, it was explained, receivers of sugar here will be permitted to obtain 95 per cent of normal instead of the basic 80 per cent quota.

Wider Discretion May Be Given For Automobile Sales

Cleveland, April 4—A Price administration official predicted today wider discretion would be given rationing boards to speed new automobiles into possession of eligible purchasers.

Cyrus McCormick III, chief of the Office of Price Administration, told newsmen an estimated 340,000 to 500,000 new automobiles would be distributed from dealers' frozen stocks "in approximately one year," and that new regulations could be expected from Washington within a month. He said requirements for trading a used car in for a new vehicle would be liberalized, and wider discretion would be given rationing boards in distributing the new automobiles. Details of the program, now are being worked out, but no classes will be added to those presently eligible, McCormick added.

Only Nine Lettermen To Return For Spring Training

Texas Highway Cops Are Not Molesting Oklahoma Farmers

A report was circulated here this week that Texas Highway patrolmen were picking up Oklahoma farmers who have farm and commercial licenses on their automobiles. The reports stated that it is a violation of the Texas laws for them to drive a car in Texas with a farm or commercial license on same.

According to Capt. Line of the highway patrol, this is a mistaken idea and that no farmers from Oklahoma have been arrested for the above violations. However, it is a violation for a Texas car to have a farm license or commercial tag. Capt. Line further stated that the patrolmen have been very considerate of the Oklahoma people visiting Burk Burnett and that all Oklahoma farmers who do their trading in Burk Burnett will be treated with every courtesy.

Leo Moore Talks To Rotarians

Leo Moore, mayor of Electra, was the guest speaker at the Rotary luncheon Tuesday and told of the difficulties encountered by the oil operators of this district and the serious effect of the rationing which has been announced for this month by the railroad commission.

Garland & Goble Furniture Co. Offering Many Bargains During Anniversary -- Appreciation Sale

The Garland & Goble Furniture Co. is celebrating its third year in the furniture business here with an anniversary and appreciation sale beginning this Friday and lasting through April 25.

Truman Garland and Harrison Goble, owners, are local boys who have made good in their hometown. Mr. Garland came to Burk Burnett about 18 years ago, and is a graduate of the local high school. After his graduation he owned and operated the Gulf Service Station for a number of years before entering the furniture business.

Mr. Goble has lived here for the past 23 years and knows the furniture business from every angle, having started to work when a small boy for the Owens & Brumley Furniture Co., working before and after school.

Three years ago when they decided to pool their resources and

Football Practice Begins April 15th

Spring football practice will begin at the high school on April 15, when equipment will be issued to the candidates of the 1942 Bulldog team.

Eddleman will not attempt to have any actual practice on the 15th as the first day will be devoted to getting the boys suited and fitted properly.

Practice this spring was delayed a little by a majority of the boys having sore arms as a result of the recent smallpox vaccinations. It is hoped that most of the vaccination sores will be healed sufficiently by the 15th that the boys can get right down to brass tacks.

There is some question as to the strength of the Bulldogs this year as most of the boys who could have returned for another year of competition have decided to graduate this spring.

Of the 24 boys who made letters in 1941 only nine are almost a cinch to return and represent the 1942 team.

Spring practice does not always indicate the true strength of the fall team, because there are nearly always a number of boys who cannot go out for practice in the spring that show up in the fall.

The following boys who will return are: David Brown, guard; Willard Mills, quarterback; Vernon Duke, end; Ertis Gibson, back; Floyd Lawler, end; Toby Tyler, guard; Bernard Whiteacre, back; Alton Sauls, guard; and Don Ray Moore, tackle.

A number of boys who should plug up some holes in the Bulldog's line will graduate from the Junior team.

Living Up To Tradition

In normal times, the banks of the country are interested in financing and encouraging all legitimate business and industrial activity. In war time, the job of the banks necessarily undergoes considerable change.

First, the banks must devote their resources to war production. That is a vast, ever-expanding task. Second, the banks must aid the ordinary citizen in getting out of debt—not into debt. Increasing taxes and higher costs of all kinds impose a tremendous strain on the average budget. All avoidable civilian spending must be curtailed.
Loans which in peace time would be immediately granted, must be refused.

There is no question of the efficiency with which banking is doing its war job. Officers and employers are working overtime. Expansion of banking service has taken place with a minimum of delay. The fullest possible cooperation has been given the government. And banking is rendering all possible service to civilians and consumer industry.

Banking is doing everything in its power to keep the economic machine and the military machine running. It is living up fully to its splendid past traditions of service.

HARDIN GRADE SCHOOL —NEWS—

The eighth grade elected officers for this year. Eugene Cypert was elected president, Denorthe Bradshaw, vice president; Jane Poteet, secretary and treasurer;
Billie Marie Nolan, reporter; Margaret Chambers, pianist; Billie Ray Bowman and Mary Ruth Clement, 7th grade representatives. The rose and larkspur are the flowers of the class. The bake sale was very successful. A show will be sponsored very soon as another way of raising money for the banquet. (Goodwin H8-3).

Bobby Gates is back in school after an absence of two weeks with the measles. We are awfully glad he is well. Avis Germany has been absent with the measles two weeks, also. We hope he is able to be back in school soon.
Several boys and girls missed a day or two last week because of smallpox vaccinations. (Ashton H5-3).

The H7-2 section had quite a bit of fun last week making faces of boiled eggs for Easter. Many of the students made faces to represent different people. Some of them represented were Washington, Mae West, Hitler, a Japanese, a Chinese, a Bride, etc.
The faces were colored with crayolas and water colors while the hair was made of cotton, yarn, real hair, etc. The hats were made of felt, cloth, veiling, etc.
(McSween H7-2).

Our language and art work for the past week have centered around Easter. We have drawn Easter motifs, and cut outs, rabbits, Easter eggs and baskets. We had an Easter egg hunt Thursday afternoon on Mrs. Elliott's lawn. Prizes went to Harold Turn-bow and Zalia Ann Mitchell for finding the largest number of eggs. We wish to thank the room mothers for contributing the eggs and favors. (Vann H2-1).

We were very glad to have Jewel Thornton, Anita Ruth
Wolfe, Louise Stamps, Robert
Wayne Edsey, Glen Ray Smith, Paul Jennings, Wynona Reed, and Shirley Ann Tyler return to school this week after their absences due to illness. Since so many students are still absent we have decided not to have an Easter egg hunt, but wait until all the students are present and then have a picnic. Those that bought defense stamps this week are: Bettie Jane Ainsworth, Wyn-ona Reed, George Powell, and Robert Wayne Ensey. (Walling H1-2).

Our room has bought $35 worth of defense stamps. Thirteen pupils were absent from our room last Thursday because of illness.
(Gibson H6-2).

We are glad to welcome Cavett back to our class
after his long absence.

The boys and girls are enjoying it, because it has true stories about a real little boy and girl.

We had our Easter egg hunt at the Electric Light Plant Thursday afternoon. We enjoyed the last week.

The revival meeting at the Methodist church is being attended by good crowds. Rev. C. A.
Spragins of Wichita Falls is the bringing some splendid messages.

The resignation of President D.
J. Carey, who has been transferred to Drumright, Okla., was accepted at the last meeting of the Lions club in regular session at the Methodist church on Tuesday evening. Carey made a

SHE LOVED A SPY

by SYLVIA TAYLOR

CHAPTER I

Arthur Mulford's secretary faced him unsuspectingly across the massive mahogany desk.

"You wanted to see me, Mr. Mulford?"

The man surveyed the slender figure before him.

"It's like this, Joan," he said decisively, "I'll have to let you go."

Joan Leland stared at him in astonishment. "You mean I'm fired?"

Mulford shrugged. "That's it."

"But why? What have I done?"

He picked up a sheaf of papers and reached for the telephone.

"I don't care to discuss it. You'll receive your next two weeks' salary, of course, but you need not finish out the month."

"You mean this is my last day?"

"Yes! That's all, Joan!"

The late October sunshine flowed in pale golden streams across the busy streets of San Francisco as Joan left the office for the apartment she shared with her sister.

Fired! There was something almost sinister about this abrupt dismissal. After two years on the job!

"Thank heaven, Sybil has a job!" Joan thought.

The apartment boasted a fireplace and long floor-length windows. It was part of one of the old mansions for which San Francisco is famous. A regal building that had housed one of the great families of the city, now cast off by their grandchildren and subdivided into studio apartments. True, there was seldom enough heat and the cooking facilities were inadequate, but the old house reflected the charm and graciousness of the past.

Joan glanced lovingly about the room. The girls had used their furniture left to them by their parents. It was heavy, and rather old-fashioned, but it suited the high-ceilinged room.

A voice from the bedroom hailed her. "Joan? That you?"

"Why, Sybil! What are you doing home so early? I thought the beauty shop was staying open until seven this month."

Sybil appeared in the doorway clad in dressing gown and slippers, cigarette in hand. Her blonde hair curled meticulously; her blue eyes were a trifle hard. The two girls seemed to have little in common in appearance or temperament. Joan, brunette, twenty, restless, impulsive, Sybil, seven years older, gold-haired, inclined to caution, especially where men were concerned. Sybil had been married and divorced when she was twenty-one. Since then she had been determined to save Joan from making the same mistake. "Never trust any man," was Sybil's motto, but Joan did not take it too seriously, suspecting that her sister's cynicism was covering a broken heart.

"What a day!" Sybil said, drearily throwing herself upon the couch. "I have some news for you, Sis."

"I have something to tell you, too," Joan said grimly. "I've lost my job! Mr. Mulford gave me two weeks' salary and told me not to come back!"

Sybil sat up wide-eyed. "Oh, Joan! Not!"

"He wouldn't even give me a reason," Joan continued heatedly. "I can't understand it. I'm sure there isn't anything wrong with my work. There's something very strange about this, Sybil! Mr. Mulford seemed positively anxious to get rid of me."

"But, Joan," Sybil interrupted, "I lost my job today too!"

The girls stared at each other in alarm.

"The beauty shop is closing," Sybil said, breaking the silence. "This is my last week."

"Well, of course we'll find something else," Joan said, but her voice carried no conviction. "After all, we're both experienced. I'm sure Mr. Mulford will give me a reference."

"Jobs aren't easy to get . . ."

"Don't be a pessimist, darling!" Joan advised.

She tied a colored apron around her waist and went into the kitchen. "There's nothing to worry about tonight. We've got enough money in our account to last almost a month."

Sybil's blue eyes were troubled. "Joan, that's just it! I checked that money out yesterday to pay for a new coat. I thought we didn't need it and I was going to pay it back a little each month. There's not a cent left in that account!"

Night had fallen with a suddenness which filled the apartment with a strange new silence.

"How much money have you in your purse?" Joan inquired, frowning.

"Two or three dollars. And you?"

"I have this check from Mr. Mulford. That will pay the rent for another month."

Sybil shivered and drew her quilted satin robe closer. "What are we going to do then?"

"You couldn't return the coat?"

"No. It's been altered."

"I'll start looking tomorrow," Joan said resolutely. "Mr. Mulford's usually at the store until late. I'm going to telephone him and tell him

"After all, there's no harm in applying for the job. If something is wrong with it, I can tell when I go down there."

I'll stop by the morning to get a reference. I forgot all about it this afternoon. I was so upset."

Sybil watched in silence as Joan dialed the number.

"This is Joan Leland. May I speak to Mr. Mulford?"

There was a pause before a strange feminine voice replied, "I'm sorry. That will be impossible. Mr. Mulford left town an hour ago."

Joan gasped. "Left town? Tonight?"

"That's right."

"Who is this speaking, please?" Joan inquired hotly.

"I am his secretary," the voice informed her and the receiver clicked.

"He's left town! And he's already hired a new secretary!"

"I told you there was something funny about this! And how can you get a reference if he's not here? You've never worked for anyone else."

"That's what worries me!"

"Let's eat," Sybil suggested. "I can't think when I'm hungry."

"Cheerful night," Sybil commented, as they ate.

"I know!" Joan cried suddenly. "I'll look for a job in the want ads. Where's the paper?"

Sybil indicated the small coffee table.

Joan seized the paper and turned to the classified section. "I need a job and I need it right now! Listen to this. 'Joan's voice rang with excitement as she read, 'Competent secretary wanted. Willing to work nights. Apply after 9 p. m.'"

"Wait," Sybil said seriously. "Why do they want you to work nights? And why apply after 9 p. m.?"

"What does it matter? A job's a job."

Sybil stared at her in disapproval. "You're not serious?"

Joan jumped up and ran into the bedroom. "I certainly am! I'm going to apply for that job right now!"

Sybil followed her. "You'll do nothing of the kind, Joan Leland! We're not that hard up. Even if we were, I don't want you to work nights."

Joan laughed recklessly as she ran a comb through the raven-black hair and touched a powder puff to the white skin. "You take everything too seriously, Sybil! After all, there's no harm in applying for the job. If something is wrong with it, I can tell when I go down there."

Sybil was unconvinced. "I don't like the sound of it," she insisted stubbornly. "What's the address?"

"North Beach," Sybil said carelessly.

"North Beach? That's certainly not a very good place for a girl to be working nights!"

"How do I look?" Joan asked. Exasperated, Sybil stared at her. Joan looked sophisticated, too sophisticated. Sybil thought, because at heart Joan was just a kid. She didn't know anything about life, or, about men.

"Be careful, Joan! And come right home afterwards, will you?"

"Of course! Stop treating me like a child! I'll call you after the interview, if that will make you feel any better."

"I still don't understand why Mulford fired you without notice or reason," Sybil pondered. "And why did he leave town, if that girl is telling the truth? By the way, what is she doing at the office at night?"

"I don't know. Of course I worked at night once in a while. It's strange that he should start a new girl at night. But an importing shop is a

NEW IDEAS for Home-makers

By RUTH WYETH SPEARS

LONG before we were threatened with the necessity of blackouts window draperies were hung well over walls to give rooms a sunny spacious effect. The same idea may now be used to keep light in at night. A cornice taking the place of a picture moulding is smart for both modern and traditional rooms and gives anchorage near the ceiling for rod, or pole.

True Greatness

It is great, and there is no other greatness—to make one nook of God's creation more fruitful, better, more worthy of God; to make some human heart a little wiser, manlier, happier, more blessed, less accursed.—Carlyle.

This sketch shows how one homemaker made cheerful, soft green sateen blackout draperies, repeating a tone in the chintz of the new slip covers. They are edged with cotton cord fringe in a darker tone.

NOTE: Use your head and your hands to keep up morale on the home front. Mrs. Spears' new BOOK 8 will help you. It contains 32 pages of step-by-step directions for novel economical things to make from things you have on hand or from inexpensive new materials. Send your order to:

The True Role

The true role, in determining to embrace or reject anything, is not whether it have any evil in it, but whether it have more of evil than of good.

There are few things wholly evil or wholly good. Almost everything, especially of government policy, is an inseparable compound of the two, so that our best judgment of the preponderance between them is continually demanded.—A. Lincoln.

Nature Rewards

All those who love Nature she loves in turn, and will richly reward, not perhaps with the good things, as they are commonly called, but with the best things, of this world—not with money and titles, horses and carriages, but with bright and happy thoughts, contentment and peace of mind.—John Lubbock.

Christian Science Services

"Are Sin, Disease, and Death Real?" is the subject of the Lesson-Sermon which will be read in all Churches of Christ, Scientist, on Sunday, April 12, 1942.

The Golden text is: "The prayer of faith shall save the sick, and the Lord shall raise him up; and if he have committed sins, they shall be forgiven him" (James 5:15).

Among the citations which comprise the Lesson-Sermon is the following from the Bible: "Touching the Almighty, we cannot find him out: he is excellent in power, and in judgment, and in plenty of justice; he will not afflict" (Job 37:23).

The Lesson-Sermon also includes the following passage from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy: "In the Gospel of John, it is declared that all things were made through the Word of God, and without Him (the logos, or word) was not anything made that was made." Everything good or worthy, God made. Whatever is valueless or baneful, He did not make,—hence its unreality" (page 525).

When Daughter Entertains at LUNCHEON—

Simple food in a gay setting is smart and youthful

by Dorothy Greig

SUCH glad flurry around the house preparing for the luncheon daughter is giving the girls in her crowd. Everything must be exactly so—yet look easy as though it had happened all by itself.

Well, let's see now . . . how about a menu that stars just two main dishes? Soup and a wonderful dessert salad? It's smart, does away with complications and everyone enjoys it from start to finish. To carry out the youthful informality of the occasion we'll set our table in peasant style—with a plaid cloth, bright pottery dishes and sturdy wooden ware. Here's the outline for just such a luncheon:

Simple food . . . gay peasant setting . . . suggest light hearted informality for a young girl's luncheon party.

LUNCHEON MENU

*Tomato Corn Chowder

Stuffed Olives Radishes

Crackers

*Jellied Ginger Pear and Chicken Mold

Assorted Sandwiches

Coffee or Cocoa

The first dish is a great thirteen of soup . . . a special chowder gloriously thick and creamy and of unusual flavor. Why, it's lightly rosy in hue! That's because it contains condensed tomato soup, a reason also for its distinguished flavor. For fun, we set on the table the very cast iron pot in which the soup was blended and ladle the soup into colored pottery bowls:

*Tomato-Corn Chowder

3 tablespoons salt pork, finely diced

1/2 cup onion, chopped

1/2 cup celery, sliced

2 cups potatoes, diced

1/4 cups boiling water

2 cups corn, cream style

2/3 cups milk

1 can condensed tomato soup

1/2 teaspoons salt

Pinch of pepper

Cook salt pork in heavy saucepan or kettle until lightly browned, then add chopped onions and sliced celery, cover, and cook until both vegetables are yellow and soft. Add diced potatoes and boiling water and cook until the potatoes are tender. Heat the cream style corn and milk together, bring to boiling and add to potato mixture. Then add the tomato soup, salt and pepper; heat again, but do not boil. Makes approximately 2 quarts of soup.

And now for the salad that is both salad and dessert:

*Jellied Ginger Pear and Chicken Mold

Jellied Ginger Pears (green layer):

1 package lime flavored gelatin

1 cup boiling water

1 cup gingerale

3 tablespoons fresh lime juice

4-6 pear halves (canned)

Pour the boiling water over the lime flavored gelatin and stir until dissolved. Cool to room temperature add gingerale, fresh lime juice and halves of pears (cut in half). Arrange pear sections in bottom of mold in sun burst design. Put in refrigerator for 1-2 hours until jelly is set. Then pour chicken mousse (white layer) over the jellied ginger pears and let chill.

Chicken Mousse (white layer):

1 can condensed chicken soup

1 egg, separated

2/3 teaspoons gelatin (softened in 3 tablespoons cold water)

1 cup cooked chicken, chopped finely

1/2 cup whipping cream

1 tablespoon fresh lime juice

Strain the chicken soup and heat in double boiler. Add chopped chicken to the rice, chicken and celery strained from the soup. Beat egg yolk, add hot soup to it; then cook in double boiler until slightly thickened. Pour hot mixture over gelatin and stir until dissolved. When it begins to thicken, fold in beaten egg white, whipped cream and remaining ingredients. Pour over the jellied ginger pears, let chill until firm. Serves 8-10.

Final 4th Division Membership Drive

The final membership drive of the Fourth Division of the American Legion has begun and will continue until Decoration Day. And it is the expectation of Sol Glickman, Chairman of the Membership Committee of the Fourth Division, to attain the highest membership in its history.

For the Legion now more than ever has an important role facing it as it has never had before. Many tasks will be given to the Legion and Veterans as their part in the struggle that confronts America and the world today.

We, as Veterans and Legionnaires must be ready to answer whatever call may be given us or any assignments to be given to us. Pulling together we can be of great help to our country in this time of distress. Of course, as individuals we can do our part, but as an organization we can do more than our part.

Every veteran should look back at the time when he served, when he was wondering whether the people back home were doing their part. Let us not give our boys any time to think or worry about that. But on the other hand let us show them how we served our country in the last war, and we can serve it again in whatever capacity we may be called upon; so if we do not belong to the Legion let us get in the harness and let us take up the torch that we left 23 years ago and help our boys on to Victory.

Look up the local posts in your city, tell them you want to sign up and join the vast membership that Legion holds; and say I Am Ready! Let us go over the top in Legion membership of the Fourth Division. With your co-operation and with some effort we can achieve this goal and let us always remember our services to our community, state, and nation.

Infantile Paralysis Treatment Food Sales To Stamps Big Increase

Boston, April 4—A new and revolutionary concept concerning the cause of infantile paralysis which, if accepted, will entirely revise future treatment of one of mankind's most elusive killers, was reported today by Dr. E. C. Rosenow, Mayo Foundation bacteriologist.

Rosenow said that after 25 years he had at last obtained scientific proof of "a hunch" that the disease is caused by a minute form of visible streptococcus germs and not by an invisible "virus," as science has long believed.

The way was now clear, he said, to apply an anti-serum he has perfected not only for treatment of the disease in advanced stages but for "possible skin tests" to detect the disease before it can develop.

Discussing two reports he made to the Federation of American Societies for Experimental Biology, the elderly, white-haired scientist declared:

"Up to now, the treatment of infantile paralysis has been difficult because investigators were attempting to attack a 'virus'—an organism that eludes even the microscope—but the present study indicates the attack may now be turned on a visible germ which can itself be grown experimentally and employed in measure of treatment."

Prohibits All Non-Essential Commercial Building

April 8—The War Board tonight prohibited construction of non-essential buildings, roads and projects already under way, and prohibited any new construction if the cost is $500 or more, unless government permission is obtained. The board stated that the national interest in the war effort requires that the use of materials and equipment be directed to the war effort. The board stated that the action which WPE Donald M. Nelson had taken would virtually "suspend" construction in non-essential buildings and repair work to restore a structure to working condition.

The motion picture must remain free insofar as national security will permit. I want no censorship of the motion picture; I want no restrictions placed thereon which will impair the usefulness of the film other than those very necessary restrictions which the dictates of safety make imperative. The motion picture especially as used by the Federal Government has a very useful contribution to make during the war emergency. In order that the Federal Government's efforts in the field of motion picture production and distribution may serve most effectively and efficiently, it is desirable that all activities of the Federal Government be co-ordinated under the direction of one central office."

PORTRAIT OF A HERO:
"Nothing has stood longer unless it be MacArthur, the hills and the devil." Believe it or not, that's an old Scotch proverb! . . . The MacArthur is the oldest known Scotch clan. According to legend, the first MacArthur, Smervie Mohr, was the son of King Arthur of the Round Table. (MacArthur means "son of Arthur") . . . Gen'l Douglas MacArthur proves once again that the Scots have what it takes. Previous Yankee doodle heroes of Scotch origin include John Paul Jones, Andrew Jackson, Jeb Stuart and Ulysses S. Grant. (Scotch and soldier, pun my soul!)

MacArthur is like this: When he commanded the Rainbow Division in France during World War I, his superior officer told him one day that he wanted the Cote de Chatillon (a strongly fortified German key position) taken by six o'clock the following evening. MacArthur's answer was: "We will take the Cote de Chatillon by six o'clock tomorrow or report a casualty list of 6,000 dead. That will include me."

When MacArthur went over the top with his troops in France, the only head-covering he ever wore was his everyday service cap, disdaining the safer steel helmet required by regulations. Called down once by his immediate commander, General Menoher, for taking that risk, MacArthur's reply was: "I can't be bothered with changing my hat when I'm busy!"

Shortly after the first American troops arrived in France under MacArthur, the French, who didn't think much of the Yanks as scrappers, figured they'd put on a show and give MacArthur an idea of what real soldiers were like. Placing MacArthur in a spot where he could safely watch the Frenchies do their big stuff, they staged a surprise raid on the Germans across the line. Machine guns started to bark, shrapnel burst, and men were dropping all over the place. MacArthur, armed only with a riding whip, jumped into the battle. When it was over, MacArthur walked over to the wide-eyed Frenchies, leading by the ear a German officer whom he had captured with nothing but a whip!

The bitter irony is that when MacArthur was Chief of Staff, he made a mob of enemies and was branded a warmonger because he pleaded for preparedness! The campaign to smear MacArthur hit a peak half a dozen years ago when he retired, with Pres. Roosevelt's approval, to take on the job of building the Philippines' defenses. His enemies screamed that Manuel Quezon was paying him a salary of $18,000 a year to help him establish a military dictatorship. MacArthur's withering reply was: "I wouldn't sell my sword!"

Back in the early thirties, when he was Chief of Staff, MacArthur prophetically warned that the coming war would be a mechanized affair and repeatedly begged congress for a giant air force and a motorized army. Instead of opening their minds to let in some fresh air, the Rip Van Winkles quipped that the reason MacArthur was anxious to motorize the army was because of his well known dislike for riding a horse! . . . Later, when he was busy training his little native army in the Philippines, many Americans there referred to him sneeringly as "the Napoleon of Luzon." (They didn't know it, but they weren't kidding!) . . . Unlike the second-guessers now beating the drum for the hero they once belittled, Pres. Roosevelt was a MacArthur fan away back. When MacArthur retired as Chief of Staff for what seemed like military oblivion in the Philippines, Mr. Roosevelt told his aides: "I must always find a way to keep MacArthur close to me. If there is ever another A.E.F., he's the man to take it over!"

Newspaper men eat out of MacArthur's hand, and no wonder! When he was Commander of the Philippine Department and news of his divorce from his first wife reached Manila, the local newspaper men rushed to his headquarters and asked if he objected to their printing the story, adding they would suppress it if he wished. "No," was the reply. "Put it on the front page if you want to!"

—Buy Defense Bonds—

MacArthur is one man who wasn't caught napping by the Japs. On December 6—the day before the Pearl Harbor attack—he called the reporters in to his Manila headquarters and told them: "Boys, it's here!" . . . When news of a successful raid on the Japs reached Washington, an army officer remarked: "MacArthur is always in the thick of the battle!" . . . "You mean," corrected a Rainbow Division veteran, "the thick of the battle is always where MacArthur is!"

Merchant Vessel Losses in Atlantic Cause Shortage of Shipping Crews; India Dissatisfied With Cripps' Plan; Observers Ponder New Jap Strategy

(EDITOR'S NOTE—When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of the news analyst and not necessarily of this newspaper.)

Pictured "somewhere in Australia," Pacific naval chiefs of the united nations discuss mutual war problems. Left to right: Vice Admiral Herbert F. Leary, in command of allied naval forces in the Anzac area; Vice Admiral Sir Guy Royle, chief of the naval staff, and Commodore Parry, chief of the New Zealand naval staff.

BATAAN: Defense Vigorous

Most serious attack against General Wainwright's Bataan defense had been launched in the form of a land attack ordered by General Yamashita, whose men had remained quiescent altogether too long to satisfy Tokyo, who soon might have ordered another hara kiri to be carried out.

But the Japs found that the men who had served MacArthur so well were the same ones working under General Wainwright, who proceeded to make a quick shift in his front, to get reinforcements to the beleaguered spot and to meet the Japs with the bayonet.

So vigorous was the hand-to-hand fighting that Japanese dead littered the battlefield, but the American line had held firm, and was not reported pierced at any point.

Wainwright had admitted to the loss of a few advance positions, that was all.

WAR AT SEA: Whittling Away

The German U-boats, perhaps with some Italians working with them, were the only sea force of the Axis which was causing any lasting concern to the Allies, as the Japanese fleet was rapidly and constantly being whittled down to American size, while our fleet was growing larger by about two warships daily. Best news was the navy's announcement that a total of 28 Axis submarines have been sunk by U. S. military and naval forces up to April 1.

The Japanese air fleets were suffering losses of five to one. Pearl Harbor was already twice avenged in ship and plane losses, and the general outlook of the battle against the Nipponese was more favorable looking as time went on despite the map-showing of conquered territories.

The U-boats were continuing their ratio of sinkings along the Atlantic coast for a wide area, but some hopes had been expressed that the loss of the port of Saint Nazaire might be a costly blow to the Nazis, and that the arrest of a spy ring in Brazil might make it more difficult for the U-boat skippers to find targets.

The sinkings by U-boats still was not exceeding our commissioning of new merchant vessels, but it was making it constantly more difficult to get skippers and crews. Congress had before it a bill to award sailors hero medals for bravery at sea in torpedoes of the same type as those awarded to navy heroes.

While many seamen were brave enough in newspaper interviews, it was getting increasingly hard to man ships with survivors of torpedoes, and the shortage created by those who had died at sea had to be filled by new trainees, for the most part.

It was one of the worst war bottlenecks, and the army and navy were combining in a coastal patrol to which small boats were to be added in an effort to sweep the subs out of America's shore lanes.

One plan brought forward was to haul oil and sugar up the East coast by the inland waterway in boats of 80 to 300 tons, and in shallow-draft barges.

This traffic could be carried out safely and profitably, surveys had showed.

LABOR:

Both the American Federation of Labor and the C.I.O. had sent messages to General MacArthur in complete support of his command there, and this was held in most circles to mean general support for the war effort.

In the meantime the senate had backed up the administration's antagonism to tampering with the 40-hour-week law, and it seemed that this effort to take away from labor its chief gain since the last war was doomed to defeat.

JAPANESE: Plans Obscure

The certainty felt by Germany that the Japs were going to move into India with their major offensive instead of Australia gave rise more and more to a feeling that perhaps the landing of substantial reinforcements in the "down under" continent may have given the Japs pause, at that.

It was certain that the Japs were having more success in Burma than they were around Australia, and the view was held that perhaps the Japanese might keep a "token force" north of Australia, and a considerable naval power there, to immobilize the Americans and Aussies.

At the same time, these observers had held, the Japs might turn their attention to India, and profiting by the difficult efforts Britain had had to line up the Hindus on their side in the forthcoming battle, sweep in with their military and win their way to the Persian Gulf.

Chief drawback to this view was the fact that the Japs were said to have only half a million soldiers in the entire Southwest Pacific, perhaps enough to attempt an invasion of population-scarce Australia, but surely not enough to spread out through a country populated with 390,000,000 people.

Unless the Hindus were more than passively opposed to the British, unless they were willing to welcome the Jap invaders with open arms, it would be a hopeless task to attempt occupation of the whole subcontinent, any more than the Japs had been able to do anything in China with far more troops.

Therefore many took still a third view, that neither Australia nor India was the prime objective of the Japs, but Siberia, to open a new front against the Russians in the first place, and simply to hold and attempt to develop the East Indian resources of oil and rubber, while doing their real fighting back in Manchukuo.

If either of these objectives, however, were carried out, instead of the occupation of Australia, it was pointed out that it would play into the hands of Australians and Americans, whose ultimate objective was an offensive against the Japs—not merely holding their own.

INDIA:

Dissatisfaction

Whether India was finally to accede to Britain's wishes or not it still had been evident that the rank and file of the Indian people had been vastly disappointed with the mission of Sir Stafford Cripps and the message he brought them.

Virtually, they pointed out, it was the same as that offered them back at the beginning of the war, with the sole difference that Britain was committing herself to the giving of India of some form of dominion status, while heretofore Britain had merely said she would "talk it over" after the war.

It wasn't apparently so much that the Hindus wanted their freedom now, but it was that they didn't want to be put into the position of having to fight for their freedom under the direction of the British, and as a vassal state.

The Indian leaders wanted Britain to give them the right to organize, finance and carry out their own defense, with the aid of Britain and the other Allied nations.

To this, Sir Stafford Cripps had indicated he had no power to accede. Gandhi and Nehru both, being quoted as saying they hoped for a settlement, and other leaders joining them in this hope.

Back of it all was the Hindu desire to carry out a "passive resistance" to the Japs, figuring on their own enormous numbers and their dark and devious ways of doing things to beat the Japs rather than to attempt the seemingly hopeless task of organizing the country militarily for a battle with planes, tanks and guns.

THE MISSION OF THE SEVENTY

LESSON TEXT—Luke 10:1-17, 21-24.
GOLDEN TEXT—The harvest truly is great, but the laborers are few: pray ye therefore the Lord of the harvest, that he would send forth laborers into his harvest.—Luke 10:2.

Working with Christ for the salvation of men has been the privilege of believers since the time He chose the twelve. We learn today that there were at least seventy more whom He considered dependable and worthy to be sent forth. Knowing how brief was the time before His death, the Saviour called, commissioned, and cared for them as they went two by two, personally to evangelize "in every city and place."

I. Sent to Serve Christ (vv. 1-3).
Prayer is back of the calling of laborers for Christ. God waits for His people to lay before Him the need, and to enlist His grace in moving upon the ones who can best serve Him. There is mystery here which we cannot fully understand, but it is perfectly clear that prayer is the power which has been given to the church with which to "move" the hand of God. The reason the laborers are so few, even in our day, is evidently, then, because there has been so little prayer.

Observe that the Lord sent His servants "two by two" so that they could encourage and assist each other. Christian work is best done in Christian fellowship. The "star performer" or the "lone wolf" may be acceptable in business or social life, but he has no place in Christ's program, unless by His special call and guidance for some particular task, such as pioneer work.

He sent them to go "before His face"—what a glorious place to be! That means that He was watching over them, expecting them really to "labor" for Him. But notice also that in loving thoughtfulness they were—

II. Sustained by Christ (vv. 4-7).
It is well when workers go out that they have proper backing. We speak of the "board" which is behind our missionaries. That is right and proper, but above all there must be the assurance of the provision and protection of Christ.

They were not to be concerned about money. Christ had already moved upon the hearts of His people to see that the laborer had "his hire"—which was food and shelter (v. 7).

Time is what life is made of, and the servants of Christ were not to waste it in lengthy oriental salutations (v. 4), or going from house to house to be entertained, thus losing much time and strength.

Nor was he to strive or become angry if some one did not receive him and his greeting of "peace" (v. 6). In any case his word would return in blessing upon himself (v. 6), and he could go on to another house. The point of all this is that the expectation of the Christian servant is from his Master, Christ, whose business requires diligence and haste (I Sam. 21:8b).

The outcome of such service is revealed in our third point.

III. Successful Through Christ (vv. 17, 21-24).

The seventy returned rejoicing that even the demons were subject to them in Jesus' name. He still has power over the demons of our day. Would that the church wielded that power more effectively!

While it is a great thing thus to see the power of God at work, Jesus told them in verse 20 that an even greater thing is to have one's name written in heaven. That means that we ought to be much concerned not only about having our own names written there, but the names of all those whose lives we touch—at home, at work, anywhere.

The secret of the disciples' victory is found in the statements which Christ in all humility and honesty made about Himself (vv. 22-24). He is the one to whom "all things are delivered"—unlimited in authority and power. The mystery of His person and work is not something man can think out or fully comprehend (how foolish have been the attempts to do it!) for He is God. The fact that the Father had revealed these things to the seventy humble, ordinary men caused Christ to magnify His Father's name in praise and prayer. Spiritual insight (vv. 21, 24) is something only God can give, and often He can give it in full measure only to humble and lowly men. "Men like D. L. Moody, who become spiritual giants, were usually humble men from lowly walks who gave themselves wholly to God" (B. L. Olmstead).

Need to Slow Up

The world is going too fast! Even the church needs to slow up for it is attempting too much in social programs and is losing spiritual poise in many places. Paul said to the church, "Put on the whole armor of God." The whole armor takes time to put on, yet it is dangerous to leave off any part of it.—Rev. A. E. Gregory.

A NEW and different yoke treatment brightens the top of the "teen-age" frock which we present today. A clever detail, this yoke carries a front opening for the bodice and in addition gives that originality which younger girls seek in their fashions! Pattern No. 1520-B is bound to be regarded highly by the younger set anyhow, because it also presents that very popular feature—the dirndl skirt—in this case a dirndl skirt with a snug fitting belt which ties in back with sash ends.

Barbara Bell Pattern No. 1520-B is designed for sizes 6, 8, 10, 12 and 14 years. Size 8 requires 2 1/4 yards 36-inch material, 1 yard 18-in.

Mose Knew Not What Lucy Talked Of, but How!

Before the court on wife-brought charges of desertion and non-support, Mose Brown meekly admitted his guilt and offered nothing in extenuation except that the lady talked too much.

"That's no excuse for desertion, Mose," said the judge. "The law gives a woman the right to talk all she wants to."

"Yassuh, Judge. I know it do. Only Lucy she never stop talkin'." She kept it up stiddy, mo'nin', noon and night, till I cain't stan' it no mo'."

"She does? What does she talk about?" inquired the court.

"Judge, suh," Mose said, "she don't say."

Baldrige came to Wichita County in 1890 from Illinois and settled in the Clara community. Recently he made his home with Mrs. Fisher. He was a member of the Baptist church.

Funeral services were conducted Thursday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock at the First Baptist church, Wichita Falls, by Rev. Noel Snow. Burial was at Rosemont under the direction of Thomas Funeral Home.

United Gas Corp. Helps Promote Gardening, Canning

For the second year, United Gas Corporation has enlisted its full strength in a campaign to promote gardening and canning, according to Mr. R. W. Lindsey, district manager of the company, today.

"People are talking everywhere about Victory Gardens. Our country looks to the increased planting of community gardens this year to help solve the wartime food problem.

"Wise families are planning to can all possible fresh vegetables and fruits and other foods for greater security this winter and to help our country in its drive to conserve tin, a vital war material."

The average family, it was said, uses 450 quarts of canned fruits and vegetables a year, according to the United States Department of Agriculture. In wartime, this supply will have to come to a large extent from home gardens and canning, it was said.

"Home canning is another way in which our service can help in the overall war effort. Wherever heat is used in the home our service will be on hand ready to serve."

Possessions Alone Are Valueless

There was a wisp of a man who was so frail that his wrists were no larger than a child's; when he walked someone had to hold him by the arm. He was eighty-two years old. Forty-two years of that time had been spent in one house; and it was dear to him, as houses are to people who have lived in them a long time.

He found he must leave the house and never return. Not only the house, but the city; and not only the city, but the state. He could not take what he wished. He had written books, but he could not take them with him, for they had been burned.

When the day came for his departure, he had to hurry; but he packed what he could. All his life he had loved Greek and Egyptian statuettes and figurines. He liked having them on his desk as he wrote. As the years had gone by, his interest in the ancients deepened, and his statuettes had become more precious to him. That man's name? Sigmund Freud, the psychologist.

His house was taken from him; and his money; and finally his passport. But they left his antiques. Worthless, they said. He packed them thankfully.

When he arrived in London, he took rooms in a house in St. John's Wood, on the ground floor. Here was his study, his bedroom, and his dining room, for he could no longer climb stairs.

The worthless antiques arrived safely, and he spread them on his desk, as he had in Vienna, and started life over again. One especially dear to him was a six-inch model of the Parthenon in Athens. When he grew weary and tired and discouraged, he would pick it up and hold it in his tiny hands and look at it as if it were a living thing. Then, after a time, he would put it down and take up his pen and start to write again.

The flight from Vienna was too much for the little man with the horn-rimmed glasses and the close-clipped beard and the halting steps. He could go outside only on bright days. Then, finally, he could not go outside at all. But he worked steadily on. He had to pause often and when he paused, his eyes went to his precious statuettes and figurines on his desk.

Then came the day when he could not work, and had to stay in the little bedroom off his study. When the door was open he could look through and see his desk.

He died just before midnight; eighty-three. His antiques were still on his desk.

We must not put our trust in worldly treasures, we should have inner treasures that storm and stress cannot take from us; treasures we can have when our money is gone. The song of a bird, a sunset. A glimpse of a snow-clad mountain. Ideals. Memories of deeds well done, battles well fought.

No romance and fun to getting out a weekly paper?

I remember when I used to write all the news for the daily paper in Eastland, then take off most of one day each week to go over to Ranger and help Rip Galloway get out a small weekly he was issuing in competition with the Ranger daily.

Never will I forget the night when we put out an "extra" on the second Dempsey-Tunney fight (the battle of the long count). That afternoon, Rip had gone through the "poster paper" by hand—the extra was to be printed on colored paper—and removed all the yellow sheets as he didn't want to be called a "yellow journalist."

Three pages were set and "made up" early; all that was needed was the news of the fight. We knew our friends over at the daily also planned an extra and we hoped against hope—with our little press pitted against their big, high-speed one—that we could beat them on the street.

When the first few copies of our paper had been run off, Galloway grabbed them and headed for the news stand. By that time, another six or seven copies had been printed, so I seized them and started for the news stand, too.

I was hatless, coatless, tieless, hair disheveled, face streaked with printer's ink. Somebody yelled, "Boy, let me have one of those papers!"—and I sold all of them before I could get to the stand.

Yes, sir, we beat the daily out.

Limericks were Woodrow Wilson's favorite form of humor. Here's one that sounds new: There was a young man of Fort Worth, Who was born on the day of his birth.

He was married, some say, On his wife's wedding day, And he died when he quitted the earth.

An idea is all you need for success.

This observer has known Victor Cornelius quite a few years, beginning away back when Cornelius was painting signs in Eastland—where he still lives. But now he's making around a thousand dollars a month—and all because he thought of constructing napkin-holders with a slot in the side into which can be slid a card telling what's at the picture.

show. Now his service has spread to almost every state in the Union; your columnist saw his napkin-holders and cards on restaurant and drug-store counters, even in Hollywood.

Incidentally, I've been working on an idea for years: rubber dishes. The advantage is that when you drop one, it won't break but will bounce right back into your hand. I had the thing just about worked out—and then came the rubber shortage.

Matt Moore of the DeLeon Free Press is responsible for this: My gas tank is gas-less, My crankcase is oil-less, I'm getting more drive-less each day;

My wheels are all tire-less, My radio's wire-less— They all have been taken away. My driving's suspended, My walking's beggined.

I don't know just what war is fit for, But they say it takes walking, And not so much squawking, To conquer the Hun they call Hitler.

Choice thoughts from old Tom Carlyle:

Man's unhappiness comes of his greatness; it is because there is an infinite in him.

No man who has once heartily and wholly laughed can be altogether irreclaimably bad.

Wonder is the basis of worship; the reign of wonder is perennial, indestructible in man.

Rightly viewed, no meanest object is insignificant; all objects are as windows through which the philosophic eye looks into infinitude itself.

Produce! Produce! Were it but the pitifullest infinitesimal fraction of a product, produce it, in God's name! 'Tis the utmost thou hast in thee; out with it, then. Whatsoever thy hand findeth to do, do it with thy whole might; Work while it is called today; for the night cometh wherein no man can work.
