Scouts Leave For Jamboree Meet In Idaho

Adobe Wall Council Troop 5691 departed Pampa early today enroute to Jamboree West, national Scout meet scheduled at Farragut State Park, Idaho.

The group will tour Denver and the Air Force academy and sightsee in Wyoming and Montana before checking in at the Jamboree site.

Tom Dunn, 1124 S. Wells, is accompanying Pampa Scouts on the trip.

Scouts from the area attending the event include Mark Kopke, Spearman; Doug Benge, Canadian; Raymond Martin, Wheeler; Jim Jones, Spearman; Steve Lackey, Groom; Jed Miesner, Spearman; Andy Taylor, Canadian; David Cummings, Spearman; Mark Hays, Spearman; and Keith Lemons, Canadian. Pampa Scouts are Curt E. Beck and James Timothy Neslage.

Other Adobe Wall Scouts will represent Borger, Fritch and Guyton, Okla.

The group will return Aug. 10.

Laird Ordered Bombing

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Melvin R. Laird, the former defense secretary, says he ordered the clandestine bombing of Cambodia but did not authorize falsification of the records of the raids.

Laird, now an adviser to President Nixon, described his role in the 1969-70 bombing campaign at a White House news conference Thursday. He said President Nixon approved the raids and that they were kept secret because of a diplomatically sensitive situation.

The secret bombing campaign was revealed last week. It involved more than 3,600 sorties flown by American planes against targets in Cambodia during the 14 months before U.S. ground troops were sent into the Indochina nation in the spring of 1970. At the time, Cambodia was officially neutral, but the Vietnamese Communists maintained large base camps along Cambodia's border with South Vietnam.

Laird, who was defense secretary during Nixon's first term, said the National Security Council "was unanimous" that the bombing should not be made public at the time because of possible diplomatic embarrassment to Prince Norodom Sihanouk, the Cambodian ruler. The State Department has contended Sihanouk secretly gave approval for the bombing of Vietnamese Communist sanctuaries, but Sihanouk has denied this.

FOR STOCKING UP

Shoppers Want Home Freezers

By MATHIS CHAZANOV
United Press International

A full-scale, nation-wide run on home freezers is under way that is clearly linked to the current increases in the cost of food, a United Press International survey shows.

"If you want a freezer," said Bob Williams of Swanlan's Discount Store in Cincinnati, Ohio, "I might be able to sell you one in about four weeks. It really started to break this week. We've easily sold 75 freezers in the last four days."

Meanwhile, the administration said it would stand by its decision to keep the price freeze on beef until Sept. 12. "The plea for the President to remove the ceiling on beef is not one which will be granted at this time," said John Dunlop, director of the Cost of Living Council.

"Our customers say whenever they can find a sale on meat they stock up," said a clerk for the Younker Brothers home appliance store in Cincinnati. "People are really scared."

Other cities where extraordinary sales of freezers were reported included: Concord, N.H.; Cleveland, Ohio; Minneapolis and St. Paul, Minn.; Omaha, Neb.; Birmingham, Ala.; San Francisco; Los Angeles; Philadelphia; Pittsburgh; Tampa, Fla.; St. Louis; Marion, Ill.; Chicago; New York; and Boston.

Salesmen said buyers wanted the biggest freezers available, regardless of condition, and some wanted two small ones if one big one could not be had. Stores said they had trouble getting the freezers from manufacturers, some of whom are more than a month behind on orders.

In other developments: —Swift Fresh Meats Co. said it plans to close packing plants in Grand Island and Des Moines, Iowa, next Monday. A Swift spokesman said the plants will remain closed until the price ceiling on beef is lifted.

—A spokesman for the New York City purchasing department said a request for bids on beef got only one reply and that one was not confirmed. He said the bidder promised to supply beef between Aug. 6 and Aug. 17 only if it was available, which the bidder said wasn't likely.

—In Los Angeles, no bids had been made to supply beef for the city for the month of August when the bidding period closed Thursday.

Skylab Crew Undergoes Final Physical Checkup

CAPE KENNEDY (UPI) — The second Skylab crew arose early today and underwent a final physical checkup while the countdown rolled "right on schedule" toward a Saturday launch.

Navy Capt. Alan L. Bean, 41, civilian scientist Owen K. Garriott, 42, and Marine Maj. Jack R. Lousma, 37, had the rest of the day to themselves in their quarters at the Kennedy Space Center but planned to keep busy brushing up on key phases of their flight plan and

Alvey Listed Very Critical

Fred Alvey, 2100 Christine, was listed in "very critical" condition today by St. Anthony's Hospital in Amarillo.

Alvey was transferred to Amarillo for treatment of a shotgun wound to the head shortly after 8 a.m. Thursday. Metropolitan Ambulance Service and Pampa Police responded to the call from his home.

Alvey reportedly is suffering from head injuries contributed to the blast of a 20-gauge shotgun.

probably visiting with their families, here to watch the launch.

The space agency reported at midmorning the countdown was on schedule. A planned eight-hour, eight-minute hold was scheduled to begin at 12 noon CDT, and when it ends at 8:08 p.m. ground crewmen will begin loading propellants aboard the Saturn IB launch vehicle.

Weather forecasts for the launch remained favorable.

The nation's second Skylab team is scheduled for launch at 8:11 a.m. CDT Saturday on a mission that will keep them aboard the $92 million orbiting space station a record 59 days. Bean and his crewmates are eager to get on with the job.

"We've been training for two and a half years," Bean said after arriving here Thursday from Houston. "We're anxious to get up there. We're anxious to put out 100 per cent of what we've got and we think we know our business."

Bean, Garriott and Lousma will pick up the experiments into living, studying and working in space where the first Skylab crew—Charles "Pete" Conrad, Joseph P. Kerwin and WASHINGTON (UPI) — Special Prosecutor Archibald Cox said today that he was confident President Nixon would surrender White House tape recordings on his Watergate conversations if the Supreme Court ultimately orders him to do so.

Cox said he could not envision any circumstance in which the high court would not make a definitive judgment in the case if called on to do so.

"Our history has been one of our Presidents complying with constitutional decisions of the courts," Cox said. "I don't assume this President will do anything different than his predecessors."

NOT YET, ANYWAY

Beef Shortages Not Bad Locally

Local cattle-related industries have not been affected by the retention of the price ceiling on beef to the extent that other areas across Texas and the nation have been.

Rex McNelly of Moody Farms said today there "seems to be the normal flow of cattle into the lot." He did say, however, that a squeeze will probably develop in the next 30 days or so.

Some of the people who have cattle at Moody, which is operating presently at 85-90 per cent capacity, have shown a tendency to hold their cattle back from market, apparently waiting for the lifting of the freeze on cattle Sept. 12.

McNelly said the cost of feed grain "will almost double" the next time he has to purchase it. He attributed part of the rise to the fact elevators are contracting to send a lot of the grain out of this area.

Henry Newman of Western Beef Packers said that there has been no production at the plant this week. Newman said construction going on at the plant, not the beef situation, was the reason for the shut-down.

In fact, he said the company owns beef already which will be slaughtered when the plant goes back into operation next week.

Elsewhere across the state: Operators of frozen locker companies Thursday said Texans are selling away beef as a hedge against shortages and price increases expected through September.

"My telephone is ringing all the time, but we just cannot reserve lockers and meat," said Joe Wood, operator of a Lubbock locker company. "People are coming in with hard cash, and they have car loads of frozen foods to put in the lockers."

"I've never seen anything like it. I believe this is worse than it

Cox told a news conference that a Supreme Court decision on what Sen. Howard H. Baker, R-Tenn., Senate Watergate committee vice chairman, calls "a historic conflict" would be the quickest way to resolve the matter.

He refused to concede that the court might render a judgment that would simply tell the President what his obligations were without saying specifically whether to surrender the tapes to investigators.

"Almost surely that would never happen," Cox said. He said he could not "think of the court ever telling people what they ought to do" rather than what they had to do.

was back during World War II when meat was so scarce."

Across Texas the story was the same. A UPI survey indicated predictions of an exhausted supply of red meat by as early as this weekend and higher prices brought about by President Nixon's Phase 4 economic controls had caused many to buy while there was meat available.

A UPI survey Wednesday of meatpackers indicated the feeling in that industry that there would be no beef by next week, regardless of the price, and that it would not be until price ceilings were lifted Sept. 12 that meat would be available at any price.

"Our business can best be summed up as going full speed toward an abrupt stop," said Bill Wilkinson, manager of the Butcher's Boy Meat Market in Lubbock.

"We are not going to have any supply of beef by the first of next week. We cannot buy beef and sell it for what it's costing. The whole thing is coming to an abrupt end by the weekend. We are not taking orders with any assurance now, and that on cash deals for a half side."

Senior Golfers Vote To Return

The board of directors of the Tri-State Senior Golf Association met last night to elect officers for the next year.

The board also voted to accept the invitation of the Pampa Country Club to conduct the tournament here again in 1974.

The 1974 tournament, which will be the 40th annual, will take place the last week in July.

J.R. Brown, secretary of the association, said the decision to return to Pampa for what will be the fifth straight year was "done very enthusiastically."

New officers elected are F.B. Martin, Amarillo, president; J.S. Worley, Shamrock, first vice president; Dr. L.F. Rowe, Oklahoma City, second vice president; and J.R. Brown, Amarillo, secretary.

Paul J. Weitz—left off when they returned to Earth June 22 after 28 days in the space habitat.

"We know Pete, Joe and Paul left the spacecraft in good shape and we're going to go up there and live rent-free for two months, and then we'll leave it for Gerry Carr, Bill Pogue and Ed Gibson," Bean said, referring to the third Skylab crew, due for launch this fall.

Doctors who studied the effects of weightlessness on Conrad and his crew reported Thursday on a number of changes in the astronauts, but foresaw no danger for Bean, Garriott and Lousma in the doubly long second mission. They speculated the longer stay might show a leveling off in the effects of life in weightlessness after a month or more in space.

Ehrlichman Hits Dean's Evidence

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Disputing John W. Dean's testimony, John D. Ehrlichman said today that when he saw President Nixon on March 22, Nixon did not act like someone who had learned the full Watergate cover-up story for the first time.

Ehrlichman told the Senate Watergate hearing that he has "grave difficulty" accepting Dean's testimony that Dean, then counsel to the President and his internal Watergate investigator, had in fact told Nixon of his administration's deep involvement in the affair.

Dean had testified that on March 21 he told Nixon all he knew, and that Dean, Ehrlichman and H. R. Haldeman, the President's foremost assistant, were all "indictable."

Dean said he delivered at that meeting what he later called his "cancer on the presidency" speech, hoping to shock Nixon into acting.

Dean's testimony on that point was backed up subsequently when a white-haired presidential aide, Richard A. Moore, was called before the Senate panel. Moore said Dean told him of his deep concern about White House involvement in Watergate and, with Moore's encouragement, went to Nixon with the full story.

But Ehrlichman said the following day Nixon made no mention of Dean's account.

"I am forced to conclude that he (Nixon) either was confident that the White House and (John N.) Mitchell were not to blame or he was setting a few snares... and was playing it cool," Ehrlichman said.

He said the President perhaps hoped to trap his aides and associates by feigning ignorance.

Ehrlichman said Nixon made no mention of what Dean has claimed to have told him of three meetings during the first three months of 1972 where G. Gordon Liddy's wiretapping plan was rejected and ultimately accepted.

Ehrlichman, Nixon's former chief domestic adviser, under-

Press Secretary Gerald L. Warren told reporters. "Of course the President, as in any other matter, would abide by a definitive decision of the highest court."

Dash said the committee would most likely seek a "declaratory judgment"—a ruling by the courts that the Senate has the power to subpoena the presidential tapes, and an order to Nixon to turn the tapes over.

The committee voted unanimously to take the matter to courts. The delay is to give committee lawyers time to draw papers that cannot be challenged on technical grounds.

going his fourth day of questioning, was examined closely on that point by Sen. Edward J. Gurney, R-Fla. Gurney has been skeptical of Dean's testimony, the only direct testimony about Nixon's Watergate knowledge presented to the committee since the hearings started.

Asked to trace what he learned in his own subsequent presidentially-requested "inquiry" into Watergate, Ehrlichman told the senators that he was warned last spring by a Nixon campaign lawyer that there had been "an obstruction of justice" in the case because of cash payments made to the seven original wiretapping defendants.

He said word of this came to him in a conversation April 5 in San Clemente, Calif. with Paul O'Brien, one of the attorneys for the Committee for the Re-Election of the President.

City Officials Bothered With Space Trouble

Pampa city officials, already beset with budget balancing problems, today ran into a balking horse of another color.

City Manager Mack Wofford said a representative of the Burroughs Co., awarded the contract for data processing equipment, reported yesterday the old city commission room at City Hall is not large enough for the installation.

As a result the city manager, mayor and city commissioners are studying the possibility they may have to move city commission meetings back to the second floor and install the computer equipment in the third floor Palm Room.

The commission has held only two sessions in the Palm Room since moving up from the second floor meeting place.

The city manager said a definite decision had not yet been reached on where to make the data processing installation, but the third floor Palm Room currently looms as probably the best solution.

3 'Blue Angels' Die In Accident

LAKEHURST, N.J. (UPI) — The wing tip of one Blue Angel supersonic jet brushed the side of another during a flying pattern Thursday evening, and both planes spun to the ground. Three fliers were killed and one injured.

The accident, near Beckersville, N.J., occurred just four miles from the site of the 1937 fire that destroyed the Hindenburg zeppelin, and apparently was the worst in the 27-year history of the famous Navy precision flying team.

Those killed were identified as: Marine Capt. Mike Murphy, 29, of San Antonio, Tex.; PO 1C Ronald Thomas, 30, of Ponca City, Okla.; and Navy Lt. Cmdr. Ship Umstead, 30, of Detroit.

The injured flier, PO 1C Gerald Harvey, 37, of Sweeney, Tex., was found in scrub pine barrens four miles south of here. He suffered fractures and bruises and was airlifted to a military hospital.

The two other planes landed safely. Navy spokesman Nick Grand said four of the Blue Angels' F4J phantom jets were in a diamond pattern, flying at between 300 and 400 miles an hour at 1,000 feet.

As the jets began a slow roll with the wing tips of the lead plane three feet from the cockpits of two others, the back plane pulled away for maneuvers, said Grand. The wing tip of the lead plane apparently struck one of the other jets on the side, he said.

The team, en route from Oceana, Va., naval air station to put on an air show here Saturday, was performing an "advance show" to familiarize itself with the terrain and landmarks of the flat rural area, Grand said.

The two planes crashed three-quarters of a mile apart on either side of Rte. 70. Red and orange parachutes hung from trees at each site. Officials believed only Umstead failed to eject.

The Blue Angels are based in Pensacola, Fla., and were formed in 1946. By the time fliers become members of the team, "they're the best of the best," said a Navy spokesman.

Four Blue Angels have been killed over the winter training area near El Centro, Calif.—one in 1972, one in 1968 and two in 1967.

Gas Shortage Strikes Denver

DENVER (UPI)—An American Automobile Association spokesman says one fourth of the service stations in the Denver area are out of gasoline and will not reopen their fuel pumps until August.

"Their July allotments have been completely used up," said Dan Hopkins of the Rocky Mountain AAA. "Most of them are staying open for maintenance work, but they're out of gasoline."

The Continental Oil Co. (Conoco) said Thursday it will provide 8.4 million gallons of extra fuel to gas-short eastern Colorado.

R. B. Adams, a company spokesman, said a portion of the extra gas would be reserved for farmers in danger of having tractors and other machinery run out of fuel during the harvest.

"The remainder would be used to augment existing supplies for motorists in the area which has been critically short of gas," Adams said.

The AAA said the gas shortage in Denver is the nation's worst, with stations throughout eastern Colorado closed Sunday and shutting early on weekdays after selling daily allotments.

Adams said Conoco was able to make the gas available by obtaining permission from the state to postpone a shutdown while clean air equipment was installed.

Lamar Full Gospel Slates Special Guest

Jack Burridge, South Bend, Indiana, will be guest speaker Sunday at Lamar Full Gospel Church. Morning services will be conducted at 9:45 a.m., Sunday School, and 11 a.m. worship service. The evangelistic service will begin at 7 p.m.

The public is invited to attend these services which will reveal the story of change in the life of a man involved for 16 years of crime, 10 of which were further marked by the use of drugs. Jack Burridge will tell how Christ walked the halls of a federal penitentiary with him for over three years before he received an early parole, he believes came by the grace of God.

During the past two years, the speaker has told his life story to over 300,000 young people throughout the United States, Canada and Europe in school and churches as well as to civic clubs. He has also appeared on television.

Assassins Kill Allende's Aide

SANTIAGO, Chile (UPI)—Capt. Arturo Araya, naval aide to President Salvador Allende, was assassinated early today in a submarine gun duel with a band of terrorists who lured him onto the balcony of his suburban home by exploding bombs in the garden below.

The pajama-clad Araya, a submarine gun at the ready, stepped out onto the second floor balcony to investigate the sound of explosives followed by shouts when the terrorists, believed to be number about 10, opened fire. He returned the fire but soon slumped to the floor, mortally wounded.

It was the first attempt against Allende's staff since an aborted military uprising outside the presidential palace June 29, in which 22 persons were slain. It came at a time of growing political and labor unrest which the government has warned could bring civil war to Chile.

The government attributed Araya's assassination to the ultra-rightist Fatherland and Liberty Movement which masterminded last month's abortive military revolt. The movement admitted planning the revolt. It went underground after the attempt but pledged to continue its efforts to overthrow Allende.

Araya's assassination "corresponds to a typical fascist action of Fatherland and Liberty," a presidential spokesman said. The spokesman said Araya and Allende's other two military aides had received several anonymous threats since the revolt.

Allende rushed to the military hospital where Araya was pronounced dead and then mobilized "a great number" of police to search for the terrorists.

Ford Reports High Profits

DETROIT (UPI)—Ford Motor Co. Thursday reported its highest quarterly profits—$394 million for the second quarter of 1973.

Henry Ford II, chairman of the board, and Lee A. Iacocca, president, said in a joint statement that they intend to seek price hikes on new model cars under President Nixon's Phase 4 economic restrictions, noting their last general price increase was 18 months ago.

Earlier this week, Chrysler reported a record profit of $198.4 million for the first six months of the year and also called for higher prices. General Motors Corp., the largest of the auto companies, was expected to follow the pattern.

UAW Vice President Ken Bannan commented that the Ford profit statement was "almost unbelievable."

"It's about time that Ford Motor Co. began to share its wealth with the consumers and workers as the company does with its stockholders and executives," he said.

During the January through June period, the second largest U.S. automaker had profits of $755 million, compared with $535 million during the same period in 1972.

EXECUTIVE PRIVILEGE INVOKED

Testimony Reveals New Operation By 'Plumbers'

WASHINGTON (UPI)—John Ehrlichman's testimony has revealed that the White House "plumbers" were engaged in a 1971 operation that so far has not been made public.

It was sensitive enough that for the first time in the Senate Watergate hearings, the White House invoked executive privilege so that Ehrlichman would not have to testify about it.

"This is not a waste of time, this is a terribly important matter," Sen. Howard H. Baker Jr., R-Tenn., vice chairman of the Senate Watergate Committee, said in questioning Ehrlichman Thursday. "I need to know whether or not we are playing games or whether in fact this was a legitimate area of inquiry with the committee. Or am I being stopped?"

Ehrlichman's lawyer, John J. Wilson, read a letter from White House Special Counsel J. Fred Buzhardt saying the matter "was in no way related to the Watergate affair, the alleged cover-up or to any presidential campaign."

"This matter does involve most sensitive national security matters, the public disclosure of which would cause damage to the national security," Buzhardt's letter said in invoking executive privilege.

Wilson offered to go to the White House to seek permission to provide the information to the seven members of the committee upon assurance it would go no further. Baker said he wanted to take the matter under advisement.

Throughout the hearings, now in their 32nd day, national security has been offered repeatedly as a justification for the Watergate bugging and other campaign espionage.

Several witnesses have testified that the fear of antiwar demonstrators and other protesters, coupled with the rash of domestic bombings and guerrilla tactics in the early 1970s, had created the necessity of counter-measures.

Ehrlichman, formerly one of President Nixon's top two aides, has been questioned more about the bugging of the office of Pentagon Papers defendant Daniel Ellsberg's psychiatrist during Labor Day, 1971, than he has been about the Watergate bugging or cover-up.

A White House special unit known as the "plumbers" was established to help plug news leaks and prevent future occurrences of such things as publication of the Pentagon study of the Vietnam war.

According to a 1971 White House memo, Ehrlichman initiated an authorization for the "plumbers" to conduct a "covert" operation to get a psychiatric profile on Ellsberg. Ehrlichman has insisted that he did not know that the team, made up of White House aides E. Howard Hunt Jr. and G. Gordon Liddy, later convicted as master minds of the Watergate bugging, were going to commit burglary.

The other two known operations of the plumbers according to Ehrlichman testimony this week, were directed at the disclosure to the Russians of the U.S. position in the strategic arms limitation talks (SALT) and compromising the CIA in the India-Russia treaty.

Nixon, in his May 22 statement on Watergate, described the activities of the plumbers. He said that he "considered it my responsibility" to see that the "Watergate investigation did not impinge adversely upon the national security area."

Ehrlichman, who was to return for his fourth and final day before the committee today, also testified on Thursday that:

"On four occasions, including July 31, 1972, six weeks before the indictments were handed down, Attorney General Richard G. Kleindienst assured Nixon that 'the seven people who were indicted were in fact the only ones implicated.'"

"He refused to talk to Hugh W. Sloan, Nixon's campaign treasurer, about Sloan's doubts about Watergate last summer because 'I didn't want to see him tell me something before he had talked to counsel.'"

"He did not believe he told ousted White House Counsel John W. Dean III after the Watergate arrests to 'send Hunt out of the country.'"

"On the basis of Dean's repeated assurances last summer Ehrlichman and Press Secretary Ronald L. Ziegler cached Nixon before his Aug. 29 press conference statement that no one then in the White House was involved in Watergate."

White Deer Rodeo Action To Continue

WHITE DEER — The first performance of the 14th annual White Deer Riding Club and White Deer Lions Club rodeo was staged Thursday night before a capacity crowd of spectators.

A barbecue was available to rodeo fans preceding the performance, which was kicked off by introduction of the 1973 Rodeo Queen, Miss Tonya Terry, White Deer.

Cowboys entered in the bull riding event lost out completely when all contestants failed to make the whistle.

Jerry Franklin, Melrose, N.M., is standing high in calf roping with a time of 11.4 seconds.

John Bridwell, Higgins, scored high in saddle bronc competition, marking "Double D" for a time of 30 points.

Miss Becky Armstrong of White Deer is holding high standing in junior barrel competition with a 20.2 clocking for the first go-round.

Miss LaVonda Nolan, Dalhart, rode the pattern in 18.5 seconds to win first go-round in senior barrel competition.

The rodeo continues tonight with a watermelon feast available to rodeo ticket holders. The performance will get underway at 8 p.m.

Saturday activities will begin with a parade at 5 p.m. Participants will meet in front of White Deer High School.

All clubs, riding groups and organizations are invited to take part in the event, said Bob Martin, riding club president.

Buddy Cunningham and Justin's Five will provide music for western dances tonight and Saturday immediately following the rodeo.

Famed Editor Dies Thursday

EMPORIA, Kan. (UPI)—William L. White, editor and publisher of the Emporia Gazette, who was known for his work as a war correspondent and author, died Thursday. He was 73.

White, who was the editor of Reader's Digest for 30 years, was the son of William Allen White and, like his father, was a prolific and outspoken writer.

Alf Landon, the 1936 GOP presidential nominee, called him a "great editor whose work was always indicative of the political moods and needs of Kansas. He was a distinguished man and journalist, just like his father was."

Gov. Robert B. Docking, a Democrat, said White, who was active in Republican politics in Kansas and served in the state legislature two years, "was a dear and trusted friend to whom I turned often for advice."

Sen. Bob Dole, R-Kan., said White was "an individual of unique compassion, perception and human kindness, who will be sincerely missed by individuals from every walk of life."

White had been under treatment for cancer at various times for more than a year. Funeral arrangements were pending.

White was still connected with Reader's Digest at his death. He was a war correspondent in both European and Pacific theaters in World War II. The National Headlines Club said White's 1939 broadcast from the Mannerheim Line in Finland for CBS was the best broadcast from Europe that year.

His books included "They Were Expendable," "Queens Die Proudly," and "Journey for Margaret."

William L. White became editor and publisher of the Gazette when his father died in 1944, but he spent much of his time in the East saying he did not want to live out his life in Emporia in the shadow of his father.

White is survived by his widow, Katherine, a daughter, Mrs. Paul David Walker of Emporia, and four grandchildren.

DO-IT-YOURSELF

Time to Get Screens Ready

By MR. FIX

In spite of the popularity of the new self-storing storm and screen combinations, for most people spring remains the time when you haul the screens out of storage and put them up for the summer.

Even though warm weather is some time away, you should think about the chore. Once the weather has turned hot is no time to be sweating it out with storm windows still in place while you get the screens in shape.

Check screens now to be certain they are ready for hanging. Check to see if they are clean, if they need painting.

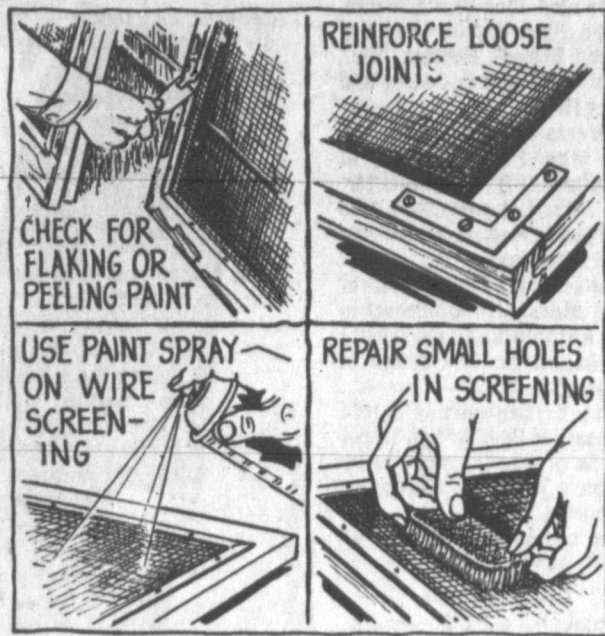

Cleaning is generally enough. An accumulation of winter dust can be eliminated with soap and water and a stiff brush. Thorough rinsing is important. Pick a day when you can work outdoors and do the rinsing with a garden hose.

Examine frames for flaking or peeling paint. It's easier to repaint them when the screens are down and easy to reach than when they are up and in place. Use regular house paint or varnish.

Before you paint the frames, check the joints for tightness. If they seem loose, reinforce them with angle irons or the kind of special corner braces made for screens.

Corrugated fasteners or wood screws will repair a mitered joint that has become slightly loose.

As for painting the screen wire itself, this has become less often done with the coming of aluminum and glass fiber screening. Neither should be painted. Neither needs it since they are not subject to rusting.

Bronze and copper screening do not need painting for the same reason—in theory.

But bronze can stain your house, so it's a good idea to coat it with a preservative. Clean the screen first, then coat with a good quality spar varnish.

Galvanized screening—there's still some around—needs painting just about every other season. Again, clean first. Then use regular screen enamel and thin it well.

There are special applicators to make the job easier or you can make your own by tacking a piece of carpeting on a wood block.

Paint both sides of the screen. Keep the holes open in the mesh by poking with a nail or tooth pick as you paint.

Easier yet is using a paint spray. The job will go faster and you won't clog the mesh. Work outside on a quiet day.

Small breaks and holes should be repaired before they get bigger. Use scraps of screening or special patches available at most hardware stores. Use a patch larger than the hole.

Unravel a few wires along each edge of the patch and bend the wires at right angles. Apply the patch and crimp the wires on the opposite side of the screen.

Do not mix metals. Patches of glass fiber, however, can be used on any screen material.

Television In Review

By RICK DUBROW

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — The old Hollywood, and the glamor that made the town famous, are represented on television chiefly by movie reruns. But there is little old-style Hollywood entertainment series on the home tube.

Video's primary goal in its regular weekly shows is to find a performer or vehicle that will wear well, rather than to seek a program that might be brilliant at times but erratic. This conservative outlook is based on the constant network search for shows that will guarantee a consistent and sizeable share of the audience—for sponsors.

There is, of course, a good deal of glamor on video in the many special programs, and in some of the guest stars on regular series. And it is true that old-style, big name Hollywood luminaries are no guarantee of ratings success in their own weekly television shows. A number of these movie stars have failed in their series attempts, although usually because of a wrong or inadequate program concept.

In the end, however, regardless of the various reasons and qualifications, the fact is that very few weekly video stars radiate the kind of glowing charm and rare individuality that added up to a sense of glamor and romance in so many old movie headlines.

The few television stars who have these qualities are easy to pick out. They would include, for instance, Dean Martin and Lucille Ball. And Peter Falk, whose home screen "Columbo" character—an amiable, feisty, dumb-like-a-fox detective—would fit into any era of moviemaking and delight audiences. And Rock Hudson, who turned to video as a police commissioner in the "McMillan & Wife" series.

And there is Raymond Burr—one of the best movie villains for years, but now a television hero after starring in the "Perry Mason" and "Ironside" series. And, although Doris Day's weekly CBS-TV situation comedy wasn't so good, you have to give the lady credit for holding the video audience for a reasonable run with some of the same qualities that made her a major movie star for years.

Video's generally strict formats and procedures can undoubtedly prevent certain potential major headlines from achieving full-blown stardom—and glamor—until they leave for other fields.

For example, Steve McQueen, Charles Bronson, Lee Marvin and Clint Eastwood once had weekly television series. Richard Chamberlain, one of the few young stars to achieve real glamor in a video series ("Dr. Kildare"), was another upcoming performer who blossomed later in the movies—and, in his case, on the stage too.

Rather than remaining in a rut by trying other video series, or taking easy, predictable roles that might have led to oblivion, he has tackled some of the major classical parts—and other adult acting assignments—and, in general, won praise, opening an entire new career for himself.

Of the young stars who have their own television series today, one who would seem to have potential as, say, a major movie headliner is David Carradine of the weekly ABC-TV "Kung Fu" show. Already a proven stage actor, he is obviously a performer with determination, high standards for himself and a perspective on his profession. Whether the chips fall his way is another thing, and we will have to wait and see.

There are, of course, some video stars with definite links to the older traditions of the movies—for instance, Karl Malden, Buddy Ebsen, Brian Keith, Robert Young, Tony Randall, Dick Van Dyke, Efrem Zimbalist Jr. and William Conrad. And Mary Tyler Moore might have been fine in those breezy career girl movie parts that Rosalind Russell did so well. But overall, television's weekly entertainment series display little of Hollywood's old-style sense of glamor.

The Lighter Side

By DICK WEST

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Although you hear more about meat and milk, one of the leaders in this year's national price-raising contest is wood.

Evidence of this can be found in the fact that you no longer hear anyone say "don't take any wooden nickels." The reason being that coins of that composition are now worth more than the real thing.

In a recent Senate speech, Sen. Gaylord Nelson, D-Wis., noted that prices of some grades of lumber had risen more than 100 per cent in six months.

He said the increase had added at least $1,200 to the average home-building cost and was driving the average person out of the housing market.

True enough. But if you already own a house, the inflationary impact has a different character.

For then inflation enables you to live in a more expensive neighborhood without actually moving.

Either way, wood clearly belongs on the list of materials — gasoline, beef, etc. — that should be used with restraint.

At one time the world of "haute cuisine" began and ended in Latin Europe. The French, Italians, and to some extent the Spaniards, considered cooking a fine art. Over the years this position has gradually deteriorated; however, Latin Europe will undoubtedly continue to lead the culinary field for a long time to come.

A complete collection of Latin recipes would dwarf the Webster's Unabridged Dictionary, so varied is the cuisine in this part of the world!

Texas Court Will Listen To Arguments Concerning Taxes

AUSTIN (UPI) — The Texas Supreme Court says it will listen to arguments by a Dallas tobacco firm a state law requiring state taxes on stolen cigarettes is unconstitutional.

The court scheduled a hearing Oct. 24 for the Zanes-Ewalt Warehouses, Inc., which was required to pay $27,501.65 in taxes. The controversial law defines "first sale" of cigarettes to include loss by theft.

A lower court upheld the law, invoked by Comptroller Robert S. Calvert, after the company paid the taxes under protest.

The court, which will recess for two months, ruled in a separate case that a Minola fertilizer firm could not use "trade secrets" acquired by three former employees of a competing company.

Elcor Chemical Corporation of Dimmitt filed the suit against Agri-Sul, Inc., and its founders — Ronald J. Miller, Donald C. Kruse and Glenn Watts.

The three men, who quit the Elcor firm on Dec. 15, 1969 and formed the new company, knew Elcor's process for manufacturing a sulphur based fertilizer.

Miller contended, however, he and Kruse developed a better technique in experiments in his garage while he was working for Elcor.

A trial court awarded Elcor $15,000 in damages and ordered the three not to spread the trade secrets.

An appeals court permanently enjoined use of the manufacture techniques, but said Elcor had not proved it suffered $15,000 in losses. The damage judgment was voided.

The Supreme Court upheld that ruling.

General Announces New Enlistment Option

AUSTIN — Maj. Gen. Thomas S. Bishop, Texas adjutant general, announced today a new enlistment option for non-prior service personnel for a 90-day trial period.

Bishop said the plan will permit non-prior service members to enlist in the Texas National Guard for six years with the option of serving three of these years in an active drill status and the final three years in the Individual Ready Reserve (IRR) Control Group.

The adjutant general said that during the final three years of the plan, members may be required to attend summer training.

"They would not have monthly drills during their last three years of reserve status," the state's No. 1 Guardsman said.

Texas is one of 16 states authorized by the National Guard Bureau in Washington, D.C., to participate in the trial enlistment option plan. Bishop pointed out the new plan for the next 90 days will replace the Reserve Enlistment Program (REP) under which original Guard enlistments have been conducted since 1963.

The plan is to determine if there would be any significant increase in the number of non-prior service accessions if the initial period of unit participation were for a period of three years, the general added.

The plan was announced by Howard H. Calloway, Secretary of the Army, for Texas and 15 other states.

In addition to this plan, 13 states are conducting similar new enlistment options whereby individuals enlist for six years with the first four years to be spent on regular drill status with the final two years in the Individual Ready Reserve Control Group.

According to a Guard spokesman, at the conclusion of the trial period, original enlistments will return to the six-year status while an evaluation is being conducted on the two optional plans.

SATURDAY, JULY 28
Your birthday today: Opens a year-long scramble to get to where you've always assumed you would be, but until now, have not done enough to achieve. Today's natives carry strong feelings into all they do, often have unique talents for leadership, sports, formalities.

Aries (March 21-April 19): Different opinions needn't conflict; try to stay out of arguments. Personal sensitivity is the main difficulty.

Taurus (April 20-May 20): A rash of family readjustments has repercussions. Hold hasty reactions within bounds, take no chances with mechanical things.

Gemini (May 21-June 20): Morning seems to be a point of departure; see the rest of your life as a journey beginning now.

Cancer (June 21-July 22): You needn't expect a quiet day. Take a conservative approach, with methods that are known to work.

Leo (July 23-Aug. 22): It seems that everybody is doing his worst. Vigorous reactions merely reinforce present matters. Patience is the practical course.

Virgo (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Take a break from accustomed routines, pursue favorite pastimes, accept social challenge. It's a great day for reorganization.

Libra (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Relatedly, you catch up on news. Use the weekend for personal readjustments, putting career aside.

Scorpio (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Progress comes in sudden bounds if you are seeking it. If not, things get so intense, something must be done to smooth things over.

Sagittarius (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): The big promise of the day is that a long-standing source of irritation clears up. Exchange opinions!

Capricorn (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Special activities run into complications, require care, special arrangements. This evening, help your beloved sort things out.

Aquarius (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Make yourself clear, but avoid the impression that you don't care—unless you really don't.

Pisces (Feb. 19-March 20): Your adventurous spirit leads to more than your current resources can cover comfortably.

CHAMP BEATEN

SEATTLE (UPI) — For 3 1/2 hours Yasser Seirawan and Robert Karch knocked heads over a chess board in a coffee shop.

Karch is the recognized Seattle chess champion. He is 43.

Frank Facts

With end-of-summer parties underway, "weiner roasts" are fun — and appropriate outdoor activities.

Miss Jimmie Lou Wainscott, county Extension agent, pointed out that the frankfurter plays a major role in these cookouts — and its contents affect the flavor. Thus, the shopper needs to know what to look for.

The label is the consumer's guide in buying frankfurters — there are no secrets in a hot dog. Everything that goes into them is inspected and regulated according to federal standards.

Shoppers should read labels on product packages and compare them.

For example, if the label states "all meat," the franks contain skeletal muscle tissue — the same as steaks, chops or roasts. If a product utilizes tripe, heart, lips, beef cheeks or other parts, they must be specifically listed on the label.

A label also must indicate if poultry meat is a constituent of the frank. If so, it's limited by law to less than 15 per cent.

Law also limits certain other ingredients.

For example, a certain amount of fat is needed for good flavor, but the content is held to 30 per cent. Taste tests at Iowa State University consistently show that franks containing less than 15 per cent fat are rated barely edible.

Chemicals, including nitrates and nitrites, which are added to products have received much attention lately. Actually, nitrates and nitrites are the oldest meat preservatives known — they've been used since cave-man days.

Sodium ascorbate or sodium erythorbate are added to speed up the curing rate. These salts of ascorbic acid (vitamin C) sometimes are listed on the label.

In order to keep the meat in a tubular shape, a binder such as cereal or soy protein is included. However, this is limited to three per cent.

Water also is added — in the form of ice — to keep the meat cool. This is also regulated, and most is lost during cooking and smoking, the agent added.

If you learned bridge at your mother's knee, the chances are that she taught you to play second hand low.

As devout family men, we believe in according mothers the greatest amount of respect possible, but we have to disagree vehemently with anyone who makes this rule an invariable one.

There are many occasions when second hand should play high. In particular when it won't do any good to play low.

South must play dummy's queen of hearts at trick one. The card can't do him any good if left in dummy's, but if played right then and there it may be worth a full trick.

It isn't, since East produces the king. South holds up his ace of hearts until the third lead of the suit.

Then he leads a club toward dummy. If West plays low South finesesses dummy's 10-spot. East can't do anything better than to take his jack and lead a club, but South goes up with the ace and cashes enough tricks for his contract.

Dear Abby

Office is not the place for personal problems

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1973 by Chicago Tribune-H. V. News Synd., Inc.

DEAR ABBY: I hope you will print this letter to my secretary. There must be many other executives who have this problem and don't know how to handle it tactfully.

Take a letter, Mrs. Brown:

You are an excellent secretary, but I wish you would leave your personal problems at home. I am not a marriage counselor or a financial adviser, and I haven't the time or energy to listen to problems concerning your children.

When you confide your personal problems to me, Mrs. Brown, altho I may appear interested and sympathetic, the truth is, I am very uncomfortable, and I resent using my time [and yours] on such matters.

I value your services and don't want to seem unfeeling or unkind, but I would like our relationship to be strictly impersonal and professional.

YOUR BOSS

DEAR BOSS: I don't know how many bosses share your view, but I'm sure many of their wives do. When a secretary starts crying on her boss's shoulder, she frequently ends up in his arms. The only way to discourage personal conversations [in the office and out] is to abort them at the onset.

DEAR ABBY: We are a one-car family, and because I want to use the car during the day, my husband is picked up every morning by Harry, a coworker. Harry also gives my husband a ride home every evening. [My husband pays him well for his trouble.]

A few months ago Harry and his wife separated, so Harry started coming a few minutes early to have "coffee" with my husband. Pretty soon Harry came a little earlier and had a "bite" of breakfast. Now he comes good and early and sits down to a full course breakfast with us every morning.

Not only that, but after work Harry doesn't just drop my husband off, he comes in for a "drink." Then he sits around hinting that he has no plans for supper, so I have to ask him to stay. I am up to here with that guy. My husband doesn't want to insult Harry because he has to work with him, and I don't think it's my place to tell him off. What do you suggest?

HAD IT WITH HARRY

DEAR HAD IT: How about letting your husband take the car to work for a while? The inconvenience of being "without wheels" would be a picnic compared to putting up with Harry.

DEAR ABBY: I am a 13-year-old girl and I've never seen a problem like mine in your column.

A friend of mine, I'll call her Susan, was raped four months ago and she is pregnant. [She's my age.] Well, my Mom heard about it thru the neighborhood grapevine and now she won't let me go over to Susan's house anymore. Susan doesn't want the baby, and she doesn't believe in abortion, so she is giving it up for adoption when it's born.

They never caught the rapist, and my Mom thinks the rape story is a big lie—that Susan's boy friend [I'll call him "Jeff"] did it to her. I know Jeff pretty well, and I don't think he would do anything like that to Susan.

Anyway, I don't think it's fair that I am not allowed to go to Susan's house. She called me once and asked why I didn't come over anymore and I didn't know what to tell her.

Susan needs friends to comfort her right now.

What should I do?

SUSAN'S FRIEND

DEAR FRIEND: Well, one thing you can't do is to disobey your mother. Since she didn't tell you you couldn't write to Susan, why don't you send her cheery cards and letters now and then? I agree, Susan does need friends right now.

Note to write letters? Send $1 to Abby, Box 60700, Los Angeles, Cal. 90069, for Abby's booklet, "How to Write Letters for All Occasions."

Ruby Speegle Becomes Bride Of Johnnie Mann

Miss Ruby Joyce Speegle became the bride of Johnnie Lynn Mann of Pampa July 4 at 7:30 p.m. in the First Christian Church of Borger.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. August L. Speegle of Borger and the bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. J.L. Mann of McLean.

THE CEREMONY

Dr. Kenneth E. Jones, pastor, officiated for the double-ring ceremony. Mrs. Roy Petty, Jr., organist, played traditional wedding selections and sang, "The Wedding Song," and "There Is Love."

Church decorations included white, double candelabra with blue bows, baskets of white gladioli with blue bows and front pews were marked with blue bows.

THE BRIDE

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a formal length gown of Angelmist peau de soie and re-embroidered Chantilly lace over bridal taffeta designed with a high rounded neckline, empire waistline, long Bishop sleeves, and semi-bell skirt with a full back. Re-embroidered lace created a pinaflore effect bodice and the same lace enhanced the skirt and cuffed sleeves. The full back ended in a sweeping chapel length train. Her veil of imported illusion fell from a Juliet cap and she carried a cascade bouquet of a white orchid surrounded by white shattered carnations and baby's breath.

ATTENDANTS

Mrs. Terry L. Corbett, sister of the bride, Borger, was matron of honor and Miss Sharon Reagan, Borger, was bridesmaid. They wore matching blue crepe formal length gowns and carried nosegays of blue carnations and white shattered mums with blue streamers. Mrs. Corbett wore a white garden hat and Miss Reagan wore a blue garden hat.

Harold Estes was best man and groomsmen were Randy Jones, both of Pampa. Serving as ushers were Terry Corbett and John Hayter, both of Borger.

RECEPTION

The reception was held at the church and the serving table was decorated with an arrangement of blue and white carnations and shattered mums. The bride's cake was served from the bride's table by Mrs. Walter Morgan and the bridegroom's table was assisted by Mrs. Lawrence Speegle. Registering guests was Mrs. Lawrence Speegle.

For the wedding trip to Amarillo, the bride wore palazzo pants with a ruffled neck and sleeveless blouse of floral seersucker. She lifted the orchid corsage from her bouquet.

The couple plans to reside at 509 Short, Pampa.

Area Students Attend Workshop

The Antler staff and journalism students from White Deer High School attended a Journalism Workshop held in Lubbock recently.

At the workshop, Chris Butler was named one of four students to receive an honorable mention for his work in photography.

Those attending were Mrs. Laverne Satterwhite, sponsor; Chris Butler and Cindy Britton, White Deer, Maria Snodgrass and Teresa Campbell, of Skellytown.

Nixon's 'Privilege'

Again citing its constitutional duty to defend the doctrine of executive privilege against "attribution" of whatever degree from whatever quarter, the administration has declined to make available to the Ervin committee tapes of presidential telephone conversations.

Because, as is now known, all calls to and from President Nixon have been automatically recorded since 1971, the Nixon tapes presumably include conversations between him and John Dean, his former personal counsel and chief accuser at the Watergate hearings. And presumably, the tapes could go far toward proving or disproving the President's statement that he was unaware of the Watergate break-in and subsequent cover-up until late March of this year.

White House spokesmen and others have often cited Thomas Jefferson as establishing the precedent of the doctrine of executive privilege. In 1807, Jefferson refused a subpoena issued by Chief Justice John Marshall to testify at the treason trial of Aaron Burr.

The rest of the story is not usually told. Each having made his point — Marshall, that the president was as subject to the law as any other citizen; Jefferson, that the president had higher duties which he could not abandon at the will or whim of judges — the two men resolved the matter sensibly. Marshall did not press for the president to appear at the trial in person, and Jefferson agreed to turn over certain documents to the court.

President Nixon, however, like no other president before him, has erected the concept of separation of powers into a veritable Berlin Wall which permits of no breaching. There is to be absolutely no cooperation between the executive and legislative branches in any area which, to the president's thinking, touches upon the province of the presidency.

Carried to its extreme, as it was indeed carried by former Attorney General Herbert Kleindienst, this means that every one of the two million employees of the executive branch are immune from congressional scrutiny.

Many have accused the press of waging a "get-Nixon" campaign, of trying him by innuendo and hearsay. But how can it be otherwise when the President himself will not — or cannot — take even the most elementary measures in his own defense?

One of those measures would be to meet privately with the members of the Watergate committee, or just with Senator Ervin, and given the committee the information and answers they desire and which they must have to reach a conclusion to their investigation. No violation of anybody's constitutional prerogatives would be involved and public confidence in the government would be immeasurably boosted.

Contrarily, a presidential refusal to meet the Watergate committee halfway will only be interpreted by the public as a continuation of the Watergate cover-up.

It would be the irony of ironies if, by doggedly clinging to such a constitutionally and historically dubious doctrine as executive privilege, President Nixon were eventually to find himself unable to exercise the privileges of the executive.

Fabric For All Seasons

Separate summer and winter wardrobes may be a thing of the past in the near future.

Since the Texas Panhandle is practically in the "white-shoe climate," where winter and summer clothing are not that different, the latest wrinkle in garment making may not mean much to your pocketbook — but it's nice to know what the unlucky 9-10 of the country is doing.

The news from the textile field is the development of a fabric which responds automatically to temperature changes. As the temperature rises, the fabric gets thinner and cooler; as the temperature drops, it increases in thickness and warmth.

The secret is in hollow filaments or pillow-shaped pockets in the fabric which holds liquids and gases. As the gases come out the liquid under cooling temperatures, the pockets expand. Then, when warmed, the gases dissolve back into the liquid and the pockets shrink to their original volume.

Although not yet on the market, the new fabric has many potential uses. A carpet underlay has been successfully tested, for example. Other possibilities are blankets that will be comfortable at any temperature or draperies that get heavier as the temperature outside the window cools.

Warm-cool clothing could be a boon to people like mountain climbers, who go through extreme temperature changes in a short time. They might also enjoy the comfort of tents and sleeping bags that get warmer as the night gets colder.

No man is an island, entire of itself; every man is a piece of the continent, a part of the main. — John Donne, English clergyman.

Fact Of Life: The Dollar Is Shrinking

By MARILYN MANION

Those who have been eating chicken and eggs and dreaming of juicy steaks have some disappointments in store. Before long, so we read in the papers, chickens and eggs will be scarce and expensive. As for me, I'm shopping for vegetarian cookbooks. When vegetables become exorbitant — well, like Scarlett O'Hara, I'll think about that tomorrow.

A lot of people have been blamed for rising food prices — farmers, middlemen, grocers, and so on. But have you shopped for clothes of late? Or houses, or cars? Or anything? Everything's up, not just food. Let's face it, the dollar is shrinking fast.

To find out what makes dollars shrink, you might listen to Mr. Lemuel R. Boulware, who is a retired Vice President of General Electric. Speaking over the Manion Forum radio network, Boulware defined our biggest problem:

"Inflation is the Number One problem. It comes only from government being forced or allowed by its citizens to create worthless extra money (and credit) where there are no extra goods and services to match the worthless money."

"We are thus requiring our government to run a counterfeit money mill of the exact kind that would get any one of us put right into jail."

But government has been — and is — doing this to serve two purposes, dictated by what is obviously 'good politics' with the misled public majority.

The first is to cover our government's expenditures for certain goods and services which the public wants some or all citizens to receive at what is erroneously thought to be 'government expense', and for which the public would itself refuse to pay if it ever realized that such paying is exactly what it is doing.

The second is to pump out added worthless cash to increase the number and cut the value of our dollars so that pay forced above the market will not kill jobs quite as promptly as it would otherwise. What our government thus does here — believing it is 'good politics' with our misled majority — is first to promote or sanction the unearned and unworkable pay increase, and then promptly wipe out the falsely expected addition to buying power. Our government thereby more or less restores the wage-price relationship existing before the forced raise.

Both of these deceitful actions by government result in the tax of inflation being hidden in prices which consumers pay. For, in the end, only consumers can and do pay all the expenses of any business which long survives.

"In this connection, we need to reject the spurious current proposals to 'lift taxes from people and put them on business,' since this would only add a further increase to the tax of inflation which consumers pay."

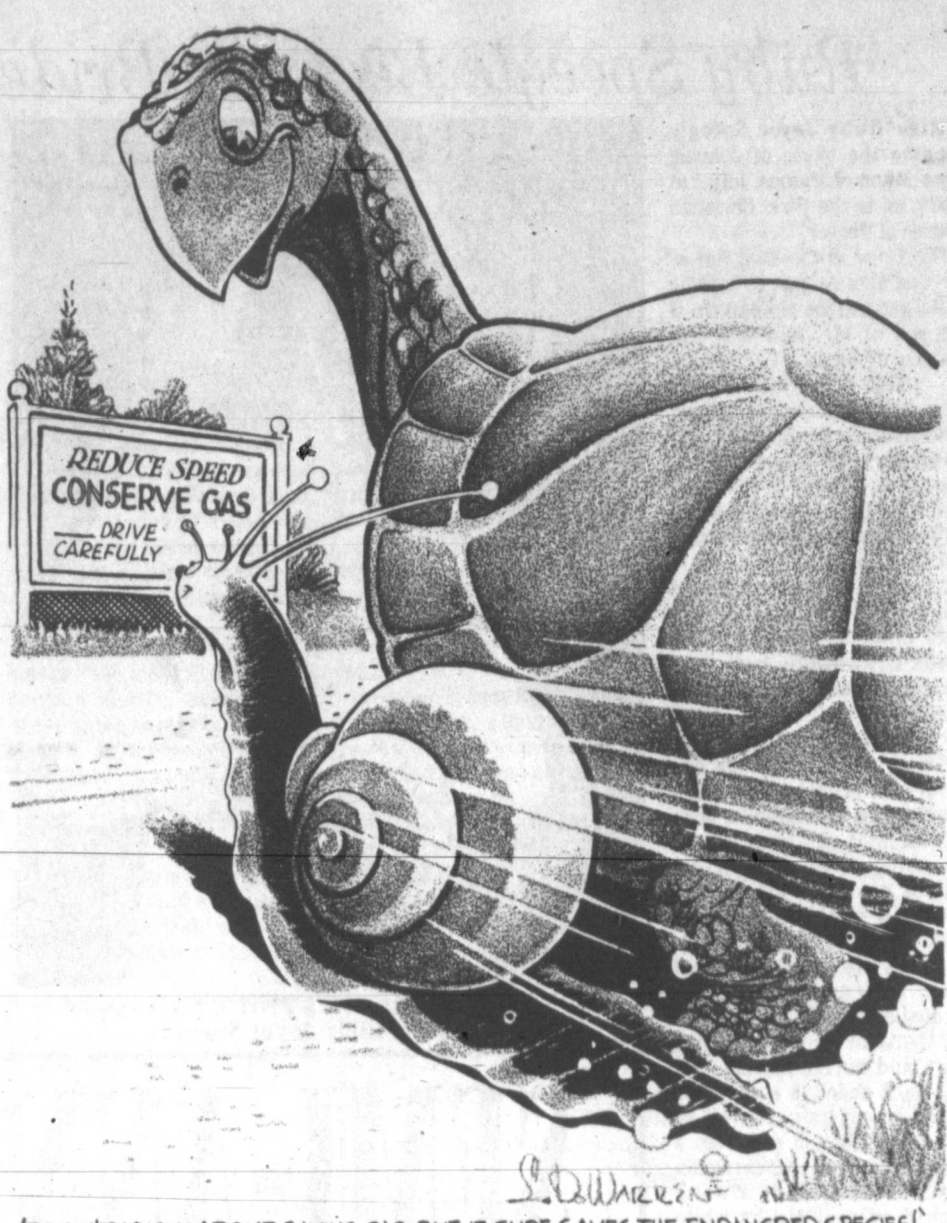

"Most of us are badly fooled by minimum wage laws and what they do to employment and inflation. The first effect of those laws is to price out of the market so many workers who are precisely those whom the laws are wrongly presumed to help. Such, for instance, as the blacks, the youth, and other unskilled whom the rest of us, who are still employed, then have to support in idleness."

"The second effect of these laws is to raise all the other rates which are above the minimum."

"The effect in both instances is higher prices, or fewer jobs, or both — at the expense of the very consuming public which actively or passively authorizes the increases."

The problems facing us today can be solved through the processes that our Constitution makes available to us. When there is a misplacement of the trust we put in our public officials we can correct the condition through the ballot box. That process distinguishes us from the communist nations, where the citizen's vote is meaningless because only communist-approved candidates are permitted to the ballot. We can keep our nation free.

'I DON'T KNOW ABOUT SAVING GAS BUT IT SURE SAVES THE ENDANGERED SPECIES!'

RAY CROMLEY Foreigners think U.S. lets $ slide

By Ray Cromley

WASHINGTON (NEA) — A friend who works in the money field tells of one private European banker who was able to marshal $3 billion in dollars some time back, and used this kitty to drive the dollar down sharply and make a tidy $450 million profit in little more than a week's time.

This is a trifle compared to what the major central banks of the world, from Tokyo to London, could do if they chose, either through greed or fear.

To a marked extent the United States is now dependent on the friendship and confidence of a fistful of lands around the world, each of which has its own national interests to consider.

My friend spends much of his time talking with the international bankers, traders, industrialists and government and private economists in those nations which they traditionally been friendly or near-friendly. In the main they are nations which at one time or another have been rescued by American dollars. American troops. American technical assistance. What sustains us thus far, he says, is simply that the financial leaders of these countries believe, despite our difficulties, that because of our tremendous underlying technical and economic strength, it is in their interest to do nothing unnecessary to push the United States over the brink.

But there is increasing concern abroad that President Nixon and Congress, despite a great deal of fanfare, are doing so little to bring our financial house in order. In the view of both European and Asian leaders, this is a time for the United States to do some painful belt tightening.

Government deficits must be slashed ruthlessly. Spending must be cut or taxes raised to balance the budget. Steps — painfully costly steps — must be taken to boost productivity. And the President and Congress must come to some conclusion about the worldwide economic objectives of this nation in a form understandable in Tokyo, London, Paris, Rome, Teheran, Bangkok.

But what do the leaders my friend talks to see? They see a Congress feuding with the President over spending. They see shilly-shallying at the White House and on Capitol Hill over tough measures required to make the United States more competitive abroad. They see decisions made one day and broken a short time later.

That is, they see half-measures, uncertainty, weak leadership.

There's increasing worry over the bickering between the White House and Congress. The foreign leaders see Watergate as exacerbating that feud. They know that in the American system, domestic financial belt tightening and financial relationships with foreign countries depend on a very strong level of presidential and congressional cooperation.

There is, therefore, growing fear among our friends abroad that the United States government is not going to have the ability to straighten itself out economically.

This fear, if it becomes sufficiently great, could be disastrous. For if their concern becomes great enough these allied nations could deal the dollar much heavier blows than in the past.

The resulting increased cost of raw materials and basic products on which we are now heavily dependent could push inflation in this country to unprecedented levels.

Ways Slicked For Pay Hike For Congress, Bureaucrats

By Robert S. Allen

WASHINGTON — Congress can act speedily and decisively when it's of a mind to do so — like voting itself a hefty pay raise.

You aren't aware of it because it was done so quietly and smoothly that it escaped public notice, but exactly such a pay hike is already halfway through Congress.

The slick job was put over in the Senate.

Without a word of explanation, debate or even a gesture to require a record vote, the august "upper chamber" whipped through a bill that speeds up the existing procedure to grab off juicy pay boosts for members of Congress, the federal judiciary, cabinet members and other high government officials.

Strikingly illustrative of the dispatch and deftness with which the legislation was adopted is that Sen. Gale McGee, D-Wyo., chairman of the committee that originated it, wasn't even on the Senate floor at the time.

He was in China as member of the Senate and House delegation junketing there as guests of the Peking government.

The "phantom" measure is now pending in the House Post Office and Civil Service Committee, where its expeditious approval is certain. The ways are all greased for that.

Rep. Taddeus Dulski, D-N.Y., chairman, is strongly for it, as is Rep. Morris Udall, D-Ariz., ranking committee member and one of the originators of the bill. The militant liberal and vociferous advocate of "congressional reform" spearheaded the drive last October, in the closing days of the session, for the appropriation that financed the nine-member pay advisory commission — whose report recommended the various pay raises.

This report, submitted to President Nixon last month, has not yet been made public.

What's Cooking

Inside word is that the hikes proposed in the report are as follows:

—Members of Congress — $53,125, a boost of $10,625 a year from the present $42,500; up 25 per cent.

—Democratic and Republican leaders of the two chambers — $60,000, from the present $49,500. They also would retain their chauffeured limousines and extra large staffs.

—Chief Justice of the Supreme Court — $72,500, from $62,500. Associate justice — $70,000, from $60,000.

—Other federal judges — $50,000, from the present $40,000.

—Cabinet members — $70,000, from $60,000.

—Heads of federal bureaus, commissions and various other agencies and top Civil Service officials — $45,000, from present $36,000. Equivalent increases for thousands of other civil servants of lesser rank.

It's a safe bet the House will do exactly as the Senate did and enact the pay legislation overwhelmingly. That's certain; it can't miss.

But there will be one big difference.

It won't be done surreptitiously or circuitously. Seeing to that emphatically is Rep. H.R. Gross, Iowa, top Republican member of the Post Office and Civil Service Committee, who has vigorously opposed these "back door" pay boosts from their start in 1967.

He is determined to force both floor debate and a record vote.

There will be no sleight-of-hand whizzing-through act if he can help it — and the doughty and resourceful economy advocate knows how to prevent it. He is a master parliamentarian.

Uncomfortable as it may be for them, Gross is bent on seeing to it that every member of the House is publicly on record on this pay legislation.

His colleagues may not like it, but he couldn't care less.

The feisty Iowa already has won one round. He forced committee chairman Dulski to hold hearings on the measure. Dulski was all set to quietly bypass committee consideration and take the Senate — passed bill directly to the House for rush approval there.

Gross torpedoed that neat scheme by threatening public outcry.

Wisely, Dulski backed down, well knowing that Gross meant exactly what he said and could and would make good on his warning. So hearings were called, and Gross is making the most of them in his admittedly uphill battle against the pay boost.

If the reported increases are approved for already well-paid government officials," says Gross, "the effect upon wage schedules in the private sector will be quickly demonstrated. The President can toss in the sponge on price ceilings and any other efforts he may make to stop the spiraling inflation."

While conceding that inflation has taken a hefty bite out of the income of members of Congress and other government officials, Gross tersely points out that is no different than what has happened to millions of others throughout the country, "especially those living on fixed incomes."

"Further, it is Congress," he adds caustically, "that has contributed more than its share to the wild spending orgy that has generated the inflation that is eating into the sinews and backbone of the country. It is up to Congress, as well as President Nixon, to set the example for all — out war on inflation and the financial crisis that confronts every man, woman and child in this country."

"If the President believes in austerity and frugality, as he says he does, he will reject the recommendations of the commission and refuse to approve any increases. The day of reckoning is at hand."

As a galling example of "mindless spending," Gross cites National Science Foundation's grant of $750,000 to Harvard to find out how water puts out fire. Sports the Iowa derisively.

"I wonder how long it would take the average taxpayer to think up a better way to spend $750,000."

Under the present law, passed in 1967, Congress can get itself a pay boost by what has come to be known as the "back door process" — that is doing nothing. The pending measure preserves that device intact.

Under the measure, the nine-member Commission (3 appointed by the President, 3 by the Senate, 2 by the House, one by the Supreme Court) would submit recommendations to the President every two years instead of four. Deadline for this report would remain June 30, but the President would be required to submit his findings to Congress by Aug. 1.

BERRY'S WORLD

"Here it is July 27th, sports fans — football time, again..."

WORRY CLINIC

By George W. Crane, Ph.D., M.D.

Gwen said she despised me! But later she broke down and cried as I showed her how she had lost much of her "sweetheart" image by slipping into the stereotype of a "good old motherly soul." Boudoir cheesecake beats topnotch culinary artistry!

CASE X-571: Gwen J., aged 31, is the wife who was shocked at finding pornographic pictures in her husband's office desk.

"Dr. Crane, I despise you!" she tearfully exclaimed, after I had told her the true diagnosis. For I had said those nude pictures were more an indictment of her than of her husband.

"They simply mean you have lost much of your stimulating value in the boudoir."

"Instead of having an affair with an outside siren, your husband is actually trying to remain true to you."

"But he requires a reasonable amount of erotic allure from you, in order to function as a husband."

"You apparently aren't furnishing it to him."

"So he is merely adding what might be termed artificial boudoir cosmetic aids to your waning sexual charm."

"Do you create an image of a good old motherly soul, preoccupied with the kitchen stove and the children?"

"Or are you still an alluring siren in the bedroom?"

"For example, his erotic ardor is far greater than yours, for a man's sexual hunger is several times that of his wife's."

"Even so, a husband expects some seductive 'appetizers' to whet his basic virile hunger."

"Do you wear a flannel nightgown on winter nights or greet him in a diaphanous nightie?"

"Do you apply your most exotic perfume just before going to bed at night or do you hoard it till you go out to some social event?"

"Have you developed into a good old motherly soul or do you still retain most of your honeymoon fervor?"

"Remember, men do NOT grow ardent toward their mothers!"

"So when your image changes from that of a sweetheart to that of a mother, beware!"

"For then your mate is likely to become platonic."

"And impotent husbands grow snarlish, hypercritical, caustic and even miserly."

"They'll 'chew you out' in public as well as before your kiddies there in your own home!"

"Then they may make unflattering remarks about you in public, calling you their 'ball and chain.'"

"And begin to advise their unmarried friends against ever getting 'hooked' into a wedding ceremony."

"Remember, men who still are ardently in love, don't downgrade marriage!"

"It's the platonic husbands who belittle marriage and also tell the lewd stories in the locker rooms at the Country Club."

"For salacious stories are a cousin to pornographic pictures, since both are employed (usually by platonic males) to whet their vanishing erotic ardor."

"And the main reason why straying husbands pick girls half your age, is because such sirens fit the stereotype of a 'sweetheart' rather than that of a stodgy 'old motherly soul.'"

"So you wives better spend less time at cooking clinics, poring over dining room recipes!"

"It's the boudoir cheesecake that wins husbands away from even the topnotch culinary artists!"

Records Popular

By WILLIAM D. LAFFLER
NEW YORK (UPI)—Baltimore hitherto has been associated with H.L. Mencken, Spiro T. Agnew, the football Colts and the baseball Orioles. Now make way for Zim Zemarel.

Zemarel is a big band leader. His band plays at all the Colts' home games and on opening day at the Orioles' ball park. It also serenades the fans every year at the Preakness.

Furthermore, Zemarel is always in demand for dance music at college dances.

His first recording, "Killing Me Softly With His Song" (Harmony KH 32248), is not going to make dance band buffs forget about Tommy Dorsey or Glenn Miller, but his music does have a distinctive and pleasant sound. And his rhythms are fine for dancing.

Zemarel doubles as a vocalist on "I Wish You Love" and "God Is Abundant." His voice has velvety textures which should soothe the ears of cheek-to-cheek dancers.

Other tunes are "Sing," "Something," "If," "Me and Mrs. Jones," "Saturday Night," "We've Only Just Begun" and "Aubrey," in addition to the title number.

Zemarel's recording debut should be a successful one and call for many encores.

Relaxing

It is the type of music that sets the mood for hours of relaxing listening to the tunes of other bandleaders.

"Killing Me Softly With His Song" and "Sing" also are featured on "You Are the Sunshine of My Life" by Ray Conniff and the Singers (Columbia KC 32376).

A highlight of this concert is "Dueling Banjos," a vocalizing of the instrumental popularized in the movie, "Deliverance." The voices are neatly suited to the slow opening but they are unable to handle the fast notes as they were written and don't attempt to.

Among the other songs are "The Night the Lights Went Out in Georgia," "Tie a Yellow Ribbon Round the Ole Oak Tree" and "The Right Thing to Do."

Frank Pourcel's music has always been fascinating because of its flexibility. "The World Is A Circle" (Paramount PAS-6047), Pourcel's latest album, is one of his finest and worth repeated playing.

His selections range from John Lennon's "Imagine" to a musical updating of Bach ("Blue Bach"). The album title comes from the Burt Bacharach scoring of "Lost Horizon" and it sets the tone for the concert.

Other tunes are "Ben," "Mammy Blue," "The Time Of My Song," "Popcorn," Neil Diamond's "Song Sung Blue" and "Love Theme From The Godfather."

You can round out an evening of carefree listening with "Learn to Love" by Werner Muller and His Orchestra (London SP4193).

There is a brief suggestion of W. C. Handy in the opening "Mouly Old Dough." Muller leans heavily on movie-Broadway tunes—from "Lost Horizon," "Man of La Mancha," "The Godfather" and "The Thief Who Came to Dinner," giving each a fresh approach.

The TVS Television network of more than 150 stations will broadcast the World University Games from Moscow via satellite from Aug. 15-25. A total of 10 hours of programming will feature the best student athletes of 70 countries.

Chairman Pledged Campaign For Tire Care And Safety

WASHINGTON D.C. — The new chairman of the Tire Industry Safety Council, Malcolm R. Lovell, Jr., has pledged an all-out campaign to bring the facts of tire care and safety home to the nation's 118 million registered auto drivers.

"We want to make sure that everyone who drives a car knows how to get the most safety and mileage out of its tires," Lovell said.

A recent study by the General Accounting Office showed that tires themselves don't cause many accidents," Lovell pointed out. "So, along with continued industry attention to maintaining our record on safety, consumer education in the proper care and maintenance of tires becomes increasingly important."

Lovell, president of the Rubber Manufacturers Association, was installed as chairman of the Tire Industry Safety Council on July 1. He succeeded Ross R. Ormsby, who retired as chairman of the council and RMA.

"Ross Ormsby helped found the council, and got off to a good start," said Lovell. "We are going to make it even more effective in the future with an expanded communications program."

The new program will include regional meetings with news media representatives, special material for driver education classes and service station personnel, public service announcements on tire safety for television stations, and news releases on tire safety subjects.

The council, founded in 1969, is supported by all U.S. manufacturers of passenger car tires. It serves as the communications arm of the industry.

Recently the council has been publicizing the report of the General Accounting Office on the federal automotive safety testing program. The GAO concluded that tires are not a significant factor in highway accidents, and the government is spending too much of its available funds testing them.

Lovell, formerly Assistant Secretary of Labor for Manpower, was appointed president of the Rubber Manufacturers Association on March 1, 1973.

He served as Assistant Secretary of Labor from 1970 to 1973. Before that, Lovell was head of the Michigan Employment Security Administration and chairman of the State Mediation Board.

Earlier he served both Ford and American Motors in a variety of executive capacities in industrial relations.

Lovell, 52, was graduated from the Harvard Business School with a master's degree in business administration in 1946. A native of Greenwich, Conn., he attended Brown University and the Lawrenceville School in New Jersey. He served in the Navy in World War II, with an intelligence group in China.

He is married to the former Beatrice Sweney of Concord, Mass. There are four daughters in the family. They reside in the Georgetown section of Washington.

Science Today

By CARLA A. VINES

OAK RIDGE, Tenn. (UPI)—One branch of scientific research which has spurred some wild speculation about mankind's future in recent years is cryobiology—the study of deep freeze effects on living matter.

Research in the field someday may lead to such things as banks of frozen spare parts for human beings.

Among the scientists carrying out research in cryobiology are Drs. Peter Mazur and Stanley Leibo at the Oak Ridge National Laboratory.

In cages three floors above their crowded laboratory, they have living mice which were born from embryos that once were frozen. They were thawed, transplanted into the wombs of female mice and born in the usual fashion after a normal gestation period.

Couldn't Duplicate Work

These mice are approaching one year of age and seem normal in every way. Mazur and Leibo also have another group of mouse embryos submerged in a bath of liquid nitrogen at 196 degrees below zero. They will be thawed later, perhaps in September, when they will have been in the deep freeze for a year.

The work with mouse embryos illustrated the problems researchers constantly run into. It started with work of an English researcher, Dr. David Whittingham, who reported in 1971 success in freezing and thawing mouse embryos.

Last summer, Whittingham came to Oak Ridge to work with Mazur and Leibo on the procedure.

"But we just couldn't duplicate his work here," Mazur said. "Why, I don't know."

So the two Americans, who had been in cryobiology in other work for some time, struck out on their own.

To understand their work, several basics must be kept in mind. First, there is no formula that will work with all types of cells. Some cells must be frozen quickly and others slowly for success. The same is true of the thawing process.

Freezing Presents Problems

Then a protective agent is used to prevent damage to the cell membrane from salt concentrations which accumulate outside the cell as it loses water and shrinks in the freezing process.

The amount of this material is a vital factor—freeze a cell too fast and ice crystals form inside, damaging it. Freeze it too slowly and it is damaged by the salt solution surrounding it.

"There's a narrow window for each of these elements, and they all must be right," Leibo said. "If you're off on any one of the elements, the whole thing fails. And each type of cell has a different window for each element."

That's why no one yet has succeeded in freezing a whole organ and making it live again.

"Organs," said Mazur, "are complex arrangements of many types of cells, each with its own demands."

Cattle Embryos Next

The next step for Mazur and Leibo is cattle embryos, and they've started already with a procedure of hormone induction of super-ovulation. By injecting the cow near its ovulation period with certain hormones, she can be induced to produce up to 20 eggs, ready for fertilization.

After fertilization by the bull, the cow undergoes surgery, the developing embryos are collected, frozen, thawed and studied for survival. Later the work will involve transplantation into cows for normal gestation and birth.

The ultimate aim of the cattle research is production of better animals more quickly than the cross-breeding procedures of today can achieve.

GOALS: • 1,500 Sunday School Attendance
• $20,000 Debt Retiring Offering

First Baptist Church

First Baptist Church

On April 6, 1907, the First Baptist Church of Pampa was organized with 22 charter members. For 66 years the First Baptist Church has been a vital part of the city of Pampa. The primary goal for these years has been to hold up Jesus Christ as the answer to sin, sorrow, and suffering. God's hand of blessing has been with the membership which now totals 3,146. There are 29 Sunday School departments and 10 choirs. The church property is valued at $1,500,000.00. Claude Cone has been the pastor since September of 1972.

Join with Us on This Double Miracle Sunday

As pastor of the First Baptist Church, I want to invite you to join us on Double Miracle Sunday. We are looking for 1,500 people to be in Sunday School at 9:45. If you do not have a regular place of attendance, we believe you will be spiritually blessed by worshipping with us. A meal of barbecue beef, cole slaw, beans and fried pie will be served at 12:30. Be our guest and remain for the afternoon service. God wants to do something wonderful in your life. Give Him the opportunity this Sunday.

Ray To Speak to All
Adult Departments in Sanctuary

Leading in the Sunday School Rally for adults will be Carroll B. (Buddy) Ray, Jr., son of Rev. and Mrs. Carroll B. Ray of the City.

Ray graduated from Pampa High School in 1958. He earned a B.S. degree from Hardin-Simmons University in 1958 with a major in Business Administration and Accounting. He was a C.P.A. by the time he finished college.

After operating his own accounting business in Cisco for several years, he became associated with Radio Shack Corporation, a division of Tandy Corporation, as Chief Accountant. Two years ago he was promoted to Vice President and Controller.

His interest in religion has led him to serve in his local church as Sunday School teacher, choir member, and committee member. He has served on the Business Administration and Audit Committee of the Baptist General Convention of Texas. In recent months he has been used extensively as a coordinator for Lay Renewal Weekend Missions.

In a number of churches throughout the state. Last month he appeared on a program at the Ministers' Conference at Southwestern Baptist Seminary discussing "Church Renewal". He is married for the former Joyce Roenfeldt of Pampa. They have three children: Valinda, age 15; Stevie, age 11; Marc, age 6. He resides in Burleson, Texas.

Tri-State Tourney To Wind Up Play

By PAUL SIMS

Survivors in each flight and consolation bracket of each flight following Thursday's action in Pampa's annual Tri-State Seniors Golf Tournament will play 18 holes of medal competition today to determine flight winners and runners-up.

Play is expected to be completed in the tourney around 4 p.m. today, according to Sherwood Cox, assistant pro at Pampa Country Club.

Thursday's second-round scores in the championship flight were considerably closer than the day before, indicating no clear-cut favorite going into today's play.

However, the two Texans and two Oklahomans, who were supposedly the men to beat in the championship flight before the tournament started Tuesday, stayed in contention.

C.L. Duniven of Amarillo downed Amarillo's R.C. Davidson, 2-1. The other Texan, Bud McKinney of Dallas, held off a charge by Ed Rogers of Fort Worth and won, one-up.

Golf Tips from the Old Masters

By The Editors of Golf Digest

SNEAD SAYS TAKE THE CLUB BACK LOW AND SLOW

One of the key moves in the golf swing occurs right at the start when the golfer moves the club away from the ball. Most of the great players agree that a correct move at this critical point of the swing can eliminate a host of errors. Sam Snead explains how this should work.

"Your first thoughts about taking the clubhead away from the ball should be to keep it 'low and slow.' Make sure you swing the club back, not drag it along the ground. It will help if you swing it back with the left hand, arm and shoulder in control.

"You will notice that when you swing the club back it stays low to the ground for about 18 inches or two feet before it starts rising. This low, slow take away leads you into a nice wide swing arc that results in power and distance," Snead says.

Miami Dolphins Favored Over Collegian Stars

CHICAGO (UPI) — The Miami Dolphins, who pranced through the National Football League season without a loss last year, were heavy favorites today to duplicate their performance with an easy win over the College All Stars in the 40th renewal of the annual pro-collegian contest.

The Dolphins, close to NFL records for consecutive victories in all categories, were 17-point picks to whip the Stars, coached for the first time by John McKay of Southern California, who has directed three national championship college teams. It will be the first appearance of the Dolphins and Coach Don Shula in the game, too.

There will be only two changes from the team which Shula directed to its Super Bowl triumph last year. Free safety Jack Scott in a holdout and running back Mercury Morris has a hip pointer which will keep him out of the game. Morris, Larry Csonka and Jim Kiick alternated last year carrying the ball for the Dolphins and Shula now was expected to use Csonka, though he has been suffering from a pulled thigh muscle, and Kiick most of the time.

He can rely on two quarterbacks, Bob Griese and Earl Morrall, who almost split the season a year ago as the Dolphins rang up 18 straight victories including the playoffs and the exhibition season. It was likely both would get into the game and should the All Stars put up a tough defense against running, they could throw to such standout receivers as Paul Warfield, Ron Sellers, a newcomer, Howard Twilley or tight ends Jim Mandich and Marv Fleming.

McKay was expected to start Louisiana State's Bert Jones at quarterback with Joe Ferguson of Arkansas in reserve and can use any combination of running backs. Purdue's Otis Armstrong, Southern California's Sam Cunningham, Miami's Chuck Foreman, Long Beach State's Terry Metcalf, Oklahoma's Greg Pruitt and Nebraska's Bill Olds are available.

Harold DeLong of Shawnee, Okla., defeated C.L. Garrett of Phillips, 2-1, and Lew Lacey of Oklahoma City beat Wichita Falls' Doyle Murphy, one-up.

Other winners in the championship flight Thursday were Eddie Smith of Tishomingo, Okla., Raymond Marshall of Lubbock, Ed Rogers of Fort Worth and Mark Smith of Brownwood.

Former Colt Joins Elite

CANTON, Ohio (UPI) — Jim Parker, an All-Pro for eight of his 11 seasons with the Baltimore Colts, becomes the first pure offensive lineman to enter the Pro Football Hall of Fame Saturday.

Parker went to the Cleveland Browns from Ohio State in 1957 as a No. 1 pick and was later dealt to the Colts and became one of the game's dominant linemen until he retired in 1967.

Parker divided his time between left guard and left tackle and was voted All-NFL four times at each position.

His former college coach, Woody Hayes, will present Parker at the induction ceremonies preceding the game between New England and San Francisco.

Also to be honored are linebacker Joe Schmidt and receiver Raymond Berry.

Berry, a teammate of Parker's with the Colts, was for years pro football's career pass-catching leader with 631 receptions until he was caught last season by Don Maynard of the New York Jets.

Schmidt recently resigned as coach of the Detroit Lions where he had starred for 13 years. Four times he was the team's Most Valuable Player and he was named all-NFL eight times, playing in nine straight pro bowls.

Bonds Paces NL Giants To Sweep Over Padres

By United Press International

Bobby Bonds seems set on proving that Sparky Anderson was correct in his appraisal of him.

Anderson, the manager of the Cincinnati Reds, called Bonds the "best all-around player in baseball today" at the recent All-Star game and the fleet outfielder of the San Francisco Giants showed off his skills in that classic by hitting a two-run homer and a double while helping the NL Stars to an easy 7-1 victory over the American League.

Returning to regular season action Thursday, Bonds flashed every bit of his amazing talents by belting two homers, driving in five runs, scoring four times, stealing a base and making a superb defensive play while leading the Giants to a 10-2, 6-5 doubleheader sweep of the San Diego Padres.

Bonds unloaded a three-run homer, his 26th, to help Ron Bryant to his 15th victory in the opener then added a two-run shot in the nightcap and also pulled off a defensive gem as the Giants squeaked by in 10 innings.

His defensive play came in the ninth inning with the score tied at 5-5. Rich Morales was on first with a single and Pat Corrales hit a low line drive to right which Bonds caught on the run then threw to first to double off Morales.

In other NL games, St. Louis took two games from New York, 13-1 and 2-1. Montreal swept a pair from Philadelphia, 1-0 and 5-1. Chicago defeated Pittsburgh 10-9, in the conclusion of a suspended game from April 21 then lost the regularly scheduled contest, 3-2. Cincinnati beat Atlanta, 5-3, then lost, 6-4, and Los Angeles topped Houston, 3-1.

Americans ate more beef than ever in 1972—nearly 116 pounds per person.

Shawn Davis-Indian

CHEYENNE, Wyo. (UPI) — The Blackfeet Indians like to do things in logical order.

For example, they have made rodeo cowboy Shawn Davis an honorary member of their tribe and given him the name "Three Eagles."

The honorary membership has been bestowed upon Davis in return for the fine work he has done for the Indians in general, the Sioux as well as the Blackfeet.

He was given his name because he has won the saddle bronc riding world championship three different times and because he flies his own plane.

Completely logical, right?

What is not so logical at all is the fact that this 32-year-old Shawn Davis of Whitehall, Mont., is still out there staying on top of broncs in the arena, winning his share of rodeo money and then some.

He's lucky he's even walking.

To appreciate that a bit better you have to go back to the spring of 1969, shortly after he won his third world title and was named Montana's Professional Athlete of the Year.

A horse fell on him and broke his back.

Shawn Davis, who looks like Audie Murphy, the late Medal of Honor winner and movie actor, remembers the date, May 25, and all the details.

He had flown his single-engine Bonanza through a severe thunderstorm from Woodward, Okla., to Thompson Falls, Mont., a distance of about 1,200 miles, simply to keep his word. He had promised he'd appear in this particular rodeo and although he didn't care to fly in the bad weather, he had made a promise so he was going to keep it.

Thirty minutes after landing at the end of his seven hour trip, there he was in his chute No. 3, swinging himself up on this foul-natured bronc they had warned him about.

"They told me the horse had bucked a bunch of kids off," says Davis. "They said he had been out 45 times without ever being ridden. I got him out of the chute and the next thing I knew he flipped over and I was under him. It felt like I was having the wind knocked out of me, not too much more... but when I rolled over and went to put my feet under me, my legs wouldn't work."

A stretcher was summoned and Shawn Davis was put in an ambulance for a trip to the nearest hospital.

That was in Missoula, only five hours away.

Thirty miles from the hospital, the ambulance ran out of gas.

When they finally found some, they drove to a nearby clinic where x-rays were taken which showed several broken vertebra in Davis' back along with a main break in the fourth lumbar section.

Meanwhile, there was a call over the ambulance radio that another of the rodeo competitors had broken a leg trying to ride a bull. This was before Davis was taken to that hospital in Missoula.

"So what they did," he says, "is set me on this stretcher out there in the sun while they went back and got the other boy. Then they loaded us both for the trip to Missoula."

Shawn Davis was in St. Patrick's Hospital in Missoula for three months. At first, all he could do was move his head but not his legs. The doctors weren't sure he'd ever walk again. At best, they told him, he'd always drag a foot.

Thirteen months later, Shawn Davis was back riding saddle broncs again.

"I'd say I was lucky, extremely lucky," says Davis, competing here now in the Cheyenne Frontier Days Rodeo without any sign his back ever was broken.

"What would I tell anybody who came back and did what I did after breaking his back," grins Davis. "I might tell him he's foolish like everybody told me."

Shawn Davis is anything but foolish, and he's done some wonderful work with the Sioux Indians. He shepherded a group of them through Europe not long ago and everything went fine until they got to Milan, Italy.

Two big, strong Sioux, wearing Cowboy hats with a long feather in them, got into a spot of trouble there when some Italians refused to believe they actually were Indians. The Italians insisted they were cowboys.

The two Sioux, according to Davis, pulled out knives, grabbed a pair of Italians by the hair and said they'd prove to them they really were Indians. The cops were called, and before the whole thing was over, Davis had to hustle over to the U.S. embassy to get his two Sioux back.

"They didn't mean any malice," he told the authorities. "They're just Indians and don't want to be called anything else. They're proud of their heritage."

Shawn Davis got his two Sioux back. He generally gets what he goes after.

Achievement

The Nobel Prize of 1970 was awarded to Dr. Norman Borlaug, a farm scientist, who has played a leading role in the "green revolution." The committee specifically cited Borlaug's work in developing new wheat strains that produce bigger yields than the old varieties.

Russians Face US

ODESSA, USSR (UPI) — The Soviet Union gets a close look today at some of the track and field athletes it will likely face in the 1976 Olympics during a two-day meet between the juniors of the Soviet and American national teams.

"I expect a close struggle," said Yakov Bkeltser, the Russian coach. "It will be a tougher fight than Minsk." He added, referring to the senior meet earlier this week that saw the Soviets down the American men 121-112 and the women 95-51.

Irwin Charges Into Golf Lead

MONTREAL (UPI) — First round leader Hale Irwin, who shot a course record seven-under-par 65 Thursday, was not planning to do anything different today in round two of the Canadian Open.

But he won't be hoping for a rainout as he was Thursday.

Irwin, whose last major tournament win was at the Heritage Golf Classic in 1971, had eight birdies in his record round. He held a two-stroke lead over Forrest Fezler, Hubert Green and British Open Champion Tom Weiskopf, all of whom shot five-under-par 67s.

Another stroke back at 68 were Len Thompson, Bob Lunn, Bobby Cole and Lee Trevino, who won the Canadian Open here in 1971. Four other golfers were tied at 69.

Setting a course record at Richelieu was not what Irwin was thinking about on his way to a 65 but he was obviously pleased with his efforts as long as he can keep them up in the following rounds.

"I can't complain about the way things went," he said. "It's always nice to set a course record but I don't think it's really any incentive to me to shoot a 64, nor do I think that if someone breaks it will I go out and try to break theirs."

The next total eclipse of the sun to be seen from New York will be on April 8, 2024.

Crenshaw To Join Pros

FAR HILLS, N.J. (UPI) — Ben Crenshaw apparently has decided the lure of pro golf cash counts more than his desire to win a U.S. Amateur championship.

Crenshaw, a three-time NCAA golf champion at the University of Texas, is all set to turn professional next month — bypassing the biennial Walker Cup match between the U.S. and Great Britain, the U.S. Amateur and a possible fourth NCAA title.

That became evident Wednesday when he did not enter this year's U.S. Amateur, which begins Aug. 27 at Toledo, Ohio.

The U.S. Golf Association said Crenshaw's entry was not received by the Wednesday night deadline. There was no chance it was an oversight because no one, not even Sam Snead — as he has found out in the past at the U.S. Open — gets a chance to file late.

Crenshaw, who said last week he would announce his future plans in a couple of weeks, is playing this week in the Western Amateur championship at Benton Harbor, Mich. Presumably, he'll remain an amateur as long as he can, which would mean until Aug. 23, the deadline for entering the Professional Golfers Association qualifying school.

The Walker Cup matches begin the following day at Brookline, Mass.

Crenshaw has had a brilliant amateur record the last couple of years although the best he has done in the Amateur is a fifth place in 1971 and a tie for second last year.

Until recently, he insisted he wanted to remain an amateur long enough to win the National Amateur championship, but faced with the choice of playing in the Amateur this year or trying to win some of the millions available on the PGA tour, he apparently has decided on the money.

Crenshaw first gained prominence when he tied for low amateur at the U.S. Open in 1970 at Chaska, Minn. He also was low amateur in the Masters the last two years, but failed even to survive the cut in this year's U.S. Open.

UIL Pardons Basketball Team

AUSTIN, Tex. (UPI) — The executive director of the University Interscholastic League (UIL), the authority over high school athletics in Texas, has indicated the UIL will not bar Ball High School from basketball competition this season.

But the UIL will probably force Ball to relinquish its district title if it won last season and forfeit all of its games.

Eli Douglas, the superintendent of the Galveston schools, pleaded with the UIL's executive committee Thursday to let the school, already mired in scandal because of the Oklahoma University football affair, play its 1973-74 basketball schedule.

"Please don't suspend us from the league," Douglas said. "We would like a chance to redeem ourselves."

The plea apparently found at least one receptive ear.

"One thing in your favor is that you brought it up of your own accord," UIL Executive Director Dr. Rhea Williams told Douglas. "I think honesty in the long run always will get some sympathy. It deserves it."

The latest scandal became public when basketball coach George Hatch admitted last week he paid Matt Avie, Ball's 6-6 inside man last season, $10 a week for 14 weeks. Douglas said Hatch told him he paid Avie "in order that he might be able to stay in school."

The $10 a week came from Hatch's own money and from a soft drink machine in the coaches locker room.

Hatch "readily admitted his wrongdoing and submitted his resignation upon my request."

Hatch's resignation left Ball High School without a basketball or a football coach. Joe Woolley, the former football coach, resigned at Douglas's request last week because of his part in the Ball-High scandal that concerned the altering of the transcript of a Ball High quarterback so he would be eligible to play for the Sooners.

The quarterback in question, Kerry Jackson, played in eight games for the No. 2 ranked Sooners and Oklahoma forfeited all of them, including its Sugar Bowl victory over Penn State.

PERSONAL FINANCE

No-Load Fund Gives Money Away

By CARLTON SMITH

Down on Wall Street they are saying, with sad shaking of the head, that Jim Benham must have gone bananas. Blown his wig.

Benham, formerly a leading producer for a giant brokerage firm, left the canyons of Manhattan a couple of years ago to start a no-load fund out on the West Coast. That in itself is an indication that a person's not thinking right. A no-load fund. No sales commissions for brokers, that means. It's positively anti-social or at least anti-broker.

Then, just recently, word filtered back that Benham had done something demonstrating beyond any doubt that he is a dangerous lunatic, and ought to be locked up for the protection of the public—or anyway for the protection of the people who run mutual funds.

Benham had announced—put it in writing, in fact—that he was going to start giving money away. Actually, it is a little more complicated than that, as things usually are in the world of high finance.

Under the rules of the game, as mutual funds are operated, Benham is entitled to pocket a certain portion of the money paid in by shareholders. He had announced that, past a certain point, the money would not be pocketed, but turned back to the shareholders. That's giving money away; ergo, it's time to call for the man in the white coat.

To appreciate the extent of Benham's heresy, you need some understanding of the way a mutual fund is organized and operated. First, there is, as one legal entity, the fund itself. Separate from that, as another legal entity, there is the management company.

It's as if you had, in one room, a million dollars or so in cash and securities, all neatly stacked up. That's the fund. In the next room are some men who decided what to do with these stacks of cash and securities. They are the management company, and this is the room in which you can get rich by running a mutual fund.

The management company is hired by the fund, and typically the people who organize a fund will also organize and own the management company. In effect, they hire themselves.

For managing the fund they receive a fee, generally one-half per cent of the fund's assets, sometimes higher. Out of this comes the costs of management: salaries, overhead and operating expenses. Whatever is left is profit for the management company.

When the fund is small, profits are generally modest. As the fund grows, however, profits can accelerate rapidly. Managing a $100 million fund, for example, does not cost 10 times as much as managing a $10 million fund. The management fee, though, is 10 times larger.

Among the largest funds, management fees run to $10 and $12 million a year. Just recently it was reported that 11 men in one management company received compensation of more than $100,000; the man at the top made $500,000.

The heresy pronounced by James M. Benham is that after you reach a certain point, you can't justify creaming that kind of money off the fund for the benefit of the management company.

Benham has the nifty idea that it belongs to the people who have invested in the fund, and the Capital Preservation Fund he heads in Palo Alto, Calif., recently adopted a policy of limiting the management company's net profit to $50,000. Beyond that, whatever is received as management fee will be rebated to the fund—that is, to the shareholders.

As president of the management company, Benham could be raking it in. Why isn't he?

"We are in a highly competitive business," he explains. "I don't think funds can survive by squeezing every dime possible out of their investors. You have to give them as much as you can, if you want people to become shareholders and remain shareholders."

If Benham is crazy, it's like a fox. For more than a year now, most mutual funds have been shrinking. Money has been draining out faster than it has been coming in. Benham's fund has been growing like Jack's beanstalk. Started a year and a half ago with $100,000, its assets are now over the $1 million mark.

It's all invested in top quality government and corporate bonds, currently paying shareholders a return of 7-14 per cent. Investors who've been bruised in the stock market's nosedives seem to like the idea of a no-load, AA-AAA bond fund.

Benham has the look of a man who realizes he's onto a good thing. Asked to comment on Wall Street speculation that he had gone bananas, he solemnly replied: "Bananas is in the eye of the beholder."

The Almanac

By United Press International
Today is Friday, July 27, the 208th day of 1973 with 157 to follow.

The moon is approaching its new phase.

The morning stars are Mercury, Mars, Jupiter and Saturn.

The evening star is Venus. Those born on this date are under the sign of Leo.

French novelist Alexander Dumas was born July 27, 1824.

On this day in history:

In 1789, the U.S. Department of Foreign Affairs was established, later to become known as the Department of State.

In 1909, Orville Wright set a world record by staying aloft in a plane for one hour, 12 minutes and 40 seconds.

Exxon List Actions For Energy Crisis

AUSTIN — An Exxon USA executive listed a number of actions which the State of Texas might take to improve the energy situation.

Carl G. Herrington, senior vice president of Exxon USA, Houston, made the suggestions at a hearing conducted by the Texas House of Representatives Energy Crisis Committee. He said the number one objective for the nation should be "to accelerate the development of all domestic energy resources."

Specially within Texas, Herrington said, the energy situation could be improved by re-examining state environmental standards "to determine if there are areas in which these standards can be relaxed temporarily without causing significant problems."

For example, Herrington said, state standards for sulfur dioxide emissions are more stringent than federal standards.

Relaxation of these standards might facilitate electric utilities switching from natural gas to fuel oil, and development of mass transportation systems.

Efficient mass transit systems in Texas would have a favorable impact on both energy consumption and air quality in the future," he said.

Adoption of a unitization law would encourage increased recovery from petroleum reservoirs.

Necessary state permits for construction by industry of a deepwater oil terminal should be provided. Such a facility would "reduce costs of imported petroleum and cut down on future growth of tanker traffic in the harbors and channels," Herrington said.

The conservation of energy "through more efficient and more prudent use of energy," would also be beneficial.

In addition, Herrington said, officials of Texas and other states can play a key role in obtaining needed federal actions.

"Many of the issues pertaining to the energy situation must be resolved on a national level," Herrington pointed out.

Services Set For Bruce Lee

SEATTLE, Wash. (UPI) — Memorial services will be held Monday for Chinese film star Bruce Lee, star of many box office hits about kung fu fighting.

Lee's mother, one of his three sisters, and a sister-in-law arrived Wednesday night, and his wife was en route by jet with the body.

Lee, 32, died last Friday in Hong Kong, where his funeral was attended by 12,000 persons.

Lee studied philosophy at the University of Washington, but did not graduate. He met his wife, Linda, at the university.

After attending college, the couple moved to Oakland, and then to Los Angeles, where Lee had many television roles and was on the Green Hornet series.

They moved in 1971 to Hong Kong, where Lee had been reared after being born in San Francisco. His father was a well-known Chinese opera performer.

Survivors include two children.

Business Today

UPI Business Writer

NEW YORK (UPI) — The consumer-oriented paperback book has become a favorite marketing tool of big companies.

Popular Library of New York, a subsidiary of Columbia Broadcasting System, dominates the business of producing such books. That's largely because of the efforts of Irving Settel, professor of marketing at Pace University in New York and project manager for Popular Library.

"These books are part of integrated marketing programs worked out for the companies that buy them and distribute them," Settel explained.

Sponsors include such firms as Westinghouse Electric, Hilton Hotels, Boeing, the National Apple Institute, Weyerhaeuser, Merck, Vita Foods, Maytag and the Savings and Loan Foundation.

Some Are Free

The books all bear the sponsor's name, have some degree of direct selling in them as well as general information and most of them are sold on newsstands at standard prices. They also are given away free or sold at reduced prices with the sponsor's merchandise. They are written by recognized authorities, not by company promotion departments.

Among the more elaborate consumer-oriented paperbacks is the 224-page "Maytag Encyclopedia of Home Laundry," which sells on newsstands for $1.25, but costs home economics students only 60 cents. Buyers of Maytag washing machines get a free copy.

Westinghouse's entry is "The Betty Furness Westinghouse Cookbook." Blue Bonnet Margarine offers an elaborate cookbook.

The Savings and Loan Foundation's book is entitled "Managing Your Money for Retirement" and it already had two press runs of one million copies each.

Outside Writers Hired

The trend began in 1962, Settel told United Press International. "There always have been promotional books prepared internally by companies, and some companies have offered previously published books as marketing premiums," he said. "Benjamin Co. of New York does a substantial business in the book premium field."

What Popular Library did was to tailor the consumer-oriented book to the sponsor's marketing needs but have it done outside the company by a professional author. The book must be good enough to sell on its merits as well as being used as a marketing tool.

Investment Chatter

NEW YORK (UPI) — Hornblower & Weeks looks to a "higher market once this near term residual weakness has exhausted itself. We believe," the firm says, "notwithstanding some short-lived rallies, that the market will test its lows before beginning a sustainable upswing in August-September."

Paine, Webber, Jackson & Curtis, as are many other Wall Street firms, is concerned about a recession later this year or early next year. "A recession," the firm says, "may still be avoided, but—as we assess the prospects—the probability of the economic slowdown becoming a turnaround is increasing with the increase in interest rates."

Argus Research Corp. also is worried about rising interest rates and what they will do to the market. "Fear of credit control and inflation encourages precautionary borrowing which has and will continue to place upward pressure on interest rates," the firm says.

Wright's Bankers' Service recommends a "fully invested position in the high quality issues accumulated at the market's lows last month." But the firm cautions investors to be selective in new commitments and "utilize new funds to accumulate a moderate reserve position until the outcome of the current monetary crisis becomes clear."

Show Goes On

In 1909, when William Howard Taft was sworn in as president of the United States, 6,000 workmen labored 12 hours to clear the snow. Soldiers and laborers worked all night to clean streets after a snowstorm struck on the eve of President Kennedy's inauguration.
