Oil prices hit $40

■ The price of light sweet crude closed up $1.45 at $40.40 per 42-gallon barrel for November delivery after gaining nearly $1 on Monday.

Associated Press

NEW YORK — Crude oil futures prices hit an all-time high of $40.40 a barrel Tuesday as angry rhetoric from Iraqi President Saddam Hussein escalated Middle East war fears.

Traders said the deaths of 19 Palestinians in Jerusalem on Monday and Saddam's threat of retaliation fed a buying spree that has nearly doubled oil prices on the futures market since Iraq invaded Kuwait on Aug. 2.

The price of light sweet crude — the key grade of U.S. oil — closed up $1.45 at $40.40 per 42-gallon barrel for November delivery after gaining nearly $1 on Monday. The previous record close was $39.54 on Sept. 27, when crude reached $40.10 during the day.

Futures prices don't translate directly to increases at the gas pumps, but gasoline prces have risen steadily since the invasion. A spot survey released Tuesday by the American Automobile Association found the average price of self-service gasoline hit $1.37 per gallon last week, up 29.5 cents from the day before the invasion.

Crude oil futures contracts promise delivery at a future date at a set price. They have traded on the New York Mercantile Exchange since 1983. Crude oil last fetched more than $40 a barrel after the 1979 Iranian revolution.

Oil traded at about $21 a barrel when Iraq seized Kuwait. The main reason for the increase has been the possibility that war will disrupt Middle East production and reduce supplies to the West, making oil more scarce and hence more expensive.

"The market is very, very tense," said Peter Beutel, an oil analyst at Pegasus Econometric Group Inc. in Hoboken, N.J. "Each and every day it reassesses what the possibilities are for war in the Middle East. The most recent event in Jerusalem upped the ante."

The bloodshed in Jerusalem occurred when police opened fire on Palestinians who hurled stones at Jews worshipping at the Western Wall. Saddam appeared to use the killings as an opportunity to lash out at Israel and the United States.

In a statement read by a Baghdad Radio announcer, Saddam said Iraq has a new long-range missile that could be launched against Israel and the U.S.-led forces

Maestro quits

NEW YORK (AP) — Maestro Leonard Bernstein has stepped down from the podium — perhaps for the last time — because of a lung tumor, emphysema and pulmonary infections, his publicist said Tuesday.

Bernstein

Bernstein's doctor told the 72-year-old musician to stop conducting and performing on the piano, publicist Margaret Carson said.

Carson said Bernstein had been experiencing increased difficulty breathing during the past several weeks. Dr. Kevin M. Cahill attributed Bernstein's problem to the progressive emphysema from which he has suffered for many years, complicated by a pleural tumor and pulmonary infections.

Carson said Bernstein plans to continue work on a new chamber music piece, a new musical theater work and several educational, film and recording projects, as well as his memoirs.

Reservists can leave at any time

By Michael Kashgarian
Staff Writer

What happens when a U.S. Army reservist or a member of the National Guard is told to drop everything and report to active duty?

Michael E. Butler, 43, of Midland, said he would be prepared if there were turn of events in the Middle East.

As a member of the U.S. Army Reserves for 19 years, Lt. Col. Butler takes his duty seriously.

"I'd be ready to go. I keep a bag packed by the door as a commitment as part of the reserves," the Vietnam veteran said.

Butler, who puts in 30 to 60 days of training per year, belongs to a pool of reserves out of St. Louis. He travels periodically to Fort Knox, Ky., as a tactics and weapons instructor.

But Butler's life goes beyond his duty as a reservist.

Married with two sons, Butler is assistant director of engineering for the city of Midland.

Like many others, Butler faces the chance of being called up and leaving his family and work.

"I think my family would manage very well. My wife is a school teacher and she understood when we were married my commitment to the reserves and my work," Butler said.

Butler said he thinks reservists' families are aware of that commitment and that helps prepare them for a call-up.

Bush rejects higher taxes for wealthy

■ President Bush initially said he could accept higher income taxes on affluent taxpayers if the taxes were coupled with a reduction in capital-gains taxes.

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — President Bush appeared to open the door Tuesday to higher income taxes on the wealthy as part of a budget compromise but later abandoned that strategy under pressure from Republican senators, senators and officials said.

The quick turnabout came after Bush met with GOP senators and was told not to try to trade lower capital gains taxes, which he wants, for higher income taxes on the wealthiest Americans, which Democrats want.

Bush initially voiced a new readiness to bargain with congressional Democrats on the long-divisive tax issue after signing a temporary spending bill that ended a three-day government shutdown. The agreement gives Congress until Oct. 19 to come up with a new $500 billion, five-year deficit-reduction package.

At a morning news conference, Bush had said — for the first time — he could accept higher income taxes on affluent taxpayers "at some level" if it were coupled with a reduction in capital-gains taxes. However, Republican leaders warned Bush away from that idea.

After a late-afternoon meeting between Bush and GOP lawmakers, Sen. Bob Packwood, R-Ore., said, "We all put

Williams spends $16.6 million, figures show

By Rick Brown
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Republican gubernatorial candidate Clayton Williams has outspent Democratic rival Ann Richards 2-1 since mid-summer in a GOP campaign effort featuring $2.5 million in television advertising.

With less than a month before the election, reports from the Texas Secretary of State's Office indicate Williams now holds the record for most money expended on a statewide campaign.

The Midland entrepreneur's total of $16.6 million, including a $6 million loan he gave himself during the primary, beats the previous record set by Gov. Bill Clements in his $12 million gubernatorial bid of 1986.

Richards, the state treasurer, has spent a little more than $10 million so far in her campaign, which included a bitter primary battle royal with Attorney General Jim Mattox and former Gov. Mark White.

She also is likely to break Clements' record by the time voters cast their ballots on Nov. 6, as campaign aides say she still has $1.5 million in the bank to spend.

Council OKs ordinance restricting smoking

By Brian Pearson
Staff Writer

■ Related stories/1,2B

After a three-month struggle pitting Midland smokers and non-smokers, an ordinance restricting smoking in public places cleared its first City Council hurdle Tuesday.

Councilmen voted 5-2 to approve the ordinance on first reading, with the proposal expected to be given final review Oct. 23. Councilmen Jose Cuevas and Bob Monaghan cast the opposing votes.

Under the ordinance, smoking in restaurants, work places, grocery stores and other public places would be restricted as of Jan. 1, 1991.

Violators could face up to $500 in fines, with the Midland Health Department acting as the ordinance's enforcement arm.

Councilman John Castro in July originated the idea of forming a committee of smokers and non-smokers to hammer out the proposal.

"This was a very, very tough committee," Castro said. "This wasn't a shy committee.

"We've tried to protect everyone's rights, but we're not going to protect everybody."

Before councilmen voted, Theresa Coleman, a smoker who served on the committee, stood up and pleaded with them to strike down the ordinance.

"We believe it is wrong for a city government to impose a ban on the legal act of smoking," Ms. Coleman said. "It is our feeling that you will do this community a great disservice if

Voters give opinion on defeated MISD bond issue

By Myra Lee Salcedo
Staff Writer

The hottest topic at the school district's board meeting Tuesday night wasn't even on the agenda.

Several Midlanders who voted against the school district's bond — and one who voted in favor — showed up to voice their opinions on why the bond failed.

Even though a report on the failed $24.5 million bond wasn't scheduled, Ken Morrison, Midland Independent School District Board president, opened up the meeting for discussion.

Voters resoundingly defeated the bond issue Saturday. About 57 percent of the voters were in opposition of the bond which would have financed a new junior high, elementary school, alternative education center and other school building projects.

"I'm angry," said Ettie B. Jones, a mother of two children in the school district. "So many people are unaware of how incredibly overcrowded the schools are. It was not made clear to the people of Midland that our schools could lose their accreditation," Ms. Jones said.

Ms. Jones decried the fact that state mandates of 22 pupils per teacher only applies to kindergarten through fourth grade. "We have as many as 36 students per class in Goddard Junior High School," she said.

Ms. Jones said that the need for the bond issue wasn't made clear to the public.

Board member James Fuller said, "Apathy defeated this bond. The fact is: Many of the parents exposed to the issues chose not to vote." Fuller said that apathy allowed the opposition to dictate the outcome of the election. "Accreditation has been put in jeopardy." Responding to complaints that information prior to the bond election was scant, Jackie Hamilton said that school board members spoke "at every single school, sent you vote in favor of this ordinance.

COUNCIL: Ordinance would restrict smoking in public

"We are adults. We are registered voters and we are not amused."

Ms. Coleman has fielded more than 2,200 signatures from Midlanders opposed to local smoking restrictions as well as state and federal taxes placed on tobacco products.

Mayor Carroll Thomas said the ordinance represents concessions from both ends of the smoking issue.

"What we have is an ordinance that's as fair as can be at this point," Thomas said. "We're hopeful that it's fair and will last for a long time."

About a half dozen citizens addressed the council before the vote was taken. Some spoke against the ordinance, while others said it wasn't strict enough.

Patricia Wettstein, a Midlander who spoke at the meeting, said the ordinance means another victory for non-smokers.

"I am so delighted that you have taken some steps to regulate this smoking," Ms. Wettstein said. "I have been intimidated all my life by smokers who are rude and blow smoke right in your face."

Meanwhile, Cuevas, who said he agrees with Ms. Coleman's views, said city officials have no rights to restrict smoking in businesses.

Under the ordinance, restaurants with more than 75 seats would be non-smoking. Owners of those restaurants could set aside smoking areas as long as they do not encompass the entire establishment.

The restaurants, though, would have to carry external signs notifying patrons that smoking is allowed only in designated sections. Signs would be needed to mark boundaries between smoking and non-smoking areas.

Restaurants with fewer than 75 seats may be non-, partial or all smoking. The all-smoking establishments would have to post signs indicating that non-smoking areas are unavailable.

The ordinance also would affect businesses with more than 10 employees. They all would be non-smoking, but employers may provide designated smoking areas as long as they do not encompass the entire building.

Places where smoking would be completely outlawed include grocery stores and public rest rooms. However, if an establishment has more than one rest room for both genders, at least one, but not all, of them can be designated as smoking areas.

Meanwhile, all taxis, buses, limousines, courtesy vans and touring vehicles must carry conspicuous signs indicated whether smoking is permitted in the vehicle.

Bars would be exempt from the ordinance. The proposal defines a bar as an establishment which has more than 50 percent of its annual gross sales from selling alcohol for consumption on the premises.

SOLDIERS: Reservists are called at any time

(From 1A)

On the other hand, Rob G. Van Stavern, 46, principal at Fannin Elementary School and a major in the reserves, said if he were called up, his family's welfare would be a key concern.

"The burden after a person gets mobilized falls on the family," said Van Stavern, who is married and the father of two.

"The main anxiety is for the welfare of my family. ... There are responsibilities a father has that a mother can't replace," Van Stavern said.

"My wife would have all those things I normally do as well as what she does day to day," he added. "I feel the stress would be more on her than on me."

In addition, Van Stavern said that reservist families don't have access to a nearby base and services as do enlisted personnel.

"I'm not comfortable with my family being separated from a support system," said Van Stavern, who is with the 4166th U.S. Army Reserve School out of Lubbock. A Vietnam veteran, he has been a member of the reserves for 15 years.

But families are not left completely in the dark. The American Red Cross in Midland has set up a support group for family members if their loved ones are called up.

Family problems don't end there, though. In this day and age, the flourishing of single-parent families has caused some concern when it comes to reservists, said Lt. Col. Ed Komandosky, Public Information Officer for the Texas National Guard.

"The single parent issue has become a big issue. Members of the National Guard and U.S. Army reserve must make arrangements for someone to take care of their children once they are alerted ... something that should have already been done," before being alerted, Komandosky said.

One Midlander in that predicament is Mike Casey, 40, a member of the Texas National Guard and former U.S. Air Force reservist for nine years. Casey is the divorced father of a 7-year-old son and a 4-year-old daughter.

"I would have trouble trying to figure out what to do with my kids but when you enlist, you enlist with the understanding of going when you have to go," Casey said, adding that in such a case his ex-wife would care for the kids.

"The major concern for me is being away from my children ... they are my life," Casey said.

But a reservist leaves more than a family behind, he or she leaves a job.

"When they are called to active duty they have re-employment rights when they return ... and with the Mideast crisis they are being called up to active duty," said Lester Williams, regional director for veteran employment and training service for the U.S. Department of Labor.

According to the Veterans' Reemployment Rights Law, employers must keep a citizen soldier's job — which includes seniority and benefits — for four years and can be extended to five years if at the federal government's convenience.

"This law pertains to volunteers and involuntary call-up for active duty," Williams said.

"They walk into a job as if they never left," Williams said, adding that all employees — city, county, and U.S. government as well as private industry — are entitled under conditions of the law.

And while away from the job, those called up receive pay comparable to enlisted soldiers, Williams said.

For some this may create financial injury due to a drop in pay.

To help ease the burden, reservists may seek help by applying to the Soldiers and Sailors Civil Relief Act of 1940, which limits interest rates for all financial obligations incurred prior to entering active duty. In addition, the act has provisions for lease terminations, involvement in judicial proceedings, installment contracts and mortgage foreclosures.

Not all reservists have mortgage foreclosures or even children to worry about. But that doesn't immunize them from inconveniences incurred by a call-up.

Robert Kleck, 19, a member of the Texas National Guard for six months and a student at Midland College, said it would hamper his life.

"It would set my schooling back a good way," Kleck said.

Although he isn't married, he has a family that would be affected also.

"I am an only child and it would definitely have an effect on my family. It would set back my life a ways but it is something I feel I could overcome," he said.

But Kleck and the others and their families are just a few area residents whose lives have a stake in an armed forces build-up.

In Midland there are three U.S. Army reserve units, all part of the 90th U.S. Army Reserve.

"They are not being considered by the Pentagon to support Desert Shield at this time, ... but the situation changes every day," said Major Rudy Purificato, Public Affairs Officer at Fort Sam Houston, San Antonio.

"The units are the type of combat support unit the army would use in Desert Shield," Purificato added.

The three units are: the 104th Quartermaster Company with an authorized strength of 67 people and a wartime mission to establish and operate temporary storage in support of divisional or non-divisional units within the U.S. Army; Detachment 1 of the 974th Supply Company, authorized strength 77, with the training to provide general support in repair parts supply for equipment; and the 4266th Logistics Command RTU (Reserve Training Unit), which supplies logistic supports training in coordination of maintenance, repair parts and transport of cargo.

"They can be called up from a few days to a few months warning. It can happen very quickly. It varies from unit to unit depending on where they are going," Purificato said.

The president can call 200,000 reservists for active duty for up to 90 days and if Congress declares war, 1 million may be called for up to two years.

In addition to the U.S. Army reserves (a federal entity), National Guard units — state-run and combat related — can be called up by the president via state governors for active duty. The National Guards are essentially a dual-status, state/federal, reserve group.

Company A, 111th Engineer Battalion, the Midland component of the Texas National Guard under the 49th Armor Division with an authorized capacity of 187, had 119 members at the beginning of September.

A combat engineer battalion functions are to build roads, repair airstrips, dig bunkers and similar work during wartime.

In Texas, there are 21,104 people in the guard.

The reserve and guard combined make up more than 40 percent — about 1.6 million men and women — of U.S. defense.

CAMPAIGN: Williams sets record

(From 1A)

A Williams money gathering lieutenant, Buddy Barfield, said his candidate also has at least another $1.5 million up his sleeve. The Republican candidate is anticipating raising that much with an Oct. 15 fund-raiser featuring President Bush.

By law, candidates had to file campaign contribution and expenditure reports with the secretary of state Tuesday for the period starting July 1.

Williams' campaign reported spending about $4.7 million during that time, compared to Richards' $2.2 million.

Within his total, Williams said about $2.1 million went for purchases of television air time, which were completed through a company known as Creative Media Planning Inc. of New York City.

Williams also logged nearly $300,000 in commercial production expenses with Admarc, a Midland advertising firm that produced the ClayDesta Communications commercials in which the candidate first rode to prominence.

In contrast, Richards reported spending about $600,000 on television, mostly by way of the Squire-Eskew agency of Washington, D.C.

On the campaign contribution side, Williams reported gathering $3.6 million from 14,400 donors, compared to Richards' $2.6 million from 14,900 donors.

Richards' campaign manager, Mary Beth Rogers, said 82 percent of her candidate's contributions came from in-state sources, while 86 percent were for amounts less than $100.

Among Richards' largest contributors, $165,000 came from a political action committee called Texans United for Fundamental Freedom. Campaign spokesman Monte Williams said the San Antonio-based organization consists mainly of attorneys and doctors.

Other contributions to Richards came from Port Arthur attorney Walter Umphrey for $50,000; the American Federation of State, County and Municipal Employees for $48,000; Southwest Airlines chief Herb Kelleher for $10,000; the National Abortion Rights Action League for $10,000; and the Texas State Council of Machinists for $10,000.

Midland oilman John L. Cox gave the Richards campaign $20,000.

Williams' largest contribution came in the form of $100,000 from Dallas businessman Connie C. Armstrong.

Others donations came from Laredo oilman-rancher David Killam at $25,000; Dallas Mavericks owner Don Carter at $20,000; and Rio Grande Valley vegetable mogul Othal Brand at $10,000.

Still other contributions came from Virgil Waggoner of Houston at $40,000; Temple wholesale grocer Robert Drayton McClane Jr. at $25,000; Mesa Petroleum chief T. Boone Pickens at $10,000; and Mike Toomey, Clements' former chief of staff, at $10,000.

Among Williams' Midland contributors were Robert C. Lyon at $20,000; Herbert Blankinship at $7,500; Charles A. Bird at $5,000; D. Button at $2,500; George H. Glass at $2,500; Frances S. Haley at $2,500; and Carlton Beal at $2,000.

MISD: Voters speak out on defeated bond issue out pamphlets and put of posters."

"People just did not get out and support the bond," she said.

Board member Ken Marks said, "The problem is still there. The overcrowded situation is still a problem. We are worried about students having a place to sit down."

Marks said that despite the defeat, "We are not going to quit and throw up our hands. We will have another plan to present to the community."

Marks said he is tired of Midlanders waiting for a crisis to "turn things around" when long-range planning can prevent a crisis. "The kids are penalized," he said. "We have failed them as a community. There is enough blame to go around for everybody and we are going backwards instead of forwards."

Marks said that some constituents had called him complaining of paying higher taxes and noted that Midland is still in an economic downturn. "Well, we are in an upturn in population," he said, "and we have 1957 science facilities at Midland High School."

Sam Manning, Lee High School teacher and president of the Midland Federation of Teachers, said he still supported the bond for parental and political reasons. "The people of Midland did not see the big picture," Manning said. "Americans are known to manage by crisis management, while the Japanese use long-range planning."

Manning said, "People must see that children are our greatest investment and resource. I may sound caustic, but I believe voters made a mistake out of self-interest."

Joy Stark, a parent who had several children attend Midland public schools, questioned that the newly donated Exxon building — slated to house administration offices — was being fully utilized.

Marks replied that the downtown office building was not conducive to classroom instruction and that it would have to be renovated to suit state guidelines rather than office building codes. Several board members also said most parents would not want their children attending school downtown.

Marks said that he abided by a remark made earlier by Joe Cummins, school administrator. "Cummins said, 'The road to success is always under construction,' " Marks stated. "I am still dedicated to the fact that we are going to try to do the best job we can.

"We have got to provide facilities and materials to those kids who need to compete and go out in the world and make a good living."

Ms. Stark complained that the Air Park site, which had been slated as the site of the new junior high school was in the path of air traffic.

When one board member noted that Goddard Junior High School was also in the pathway of air traffic, Ms. Stark asked, "Should we build another school and increase our odds against disaster, then?"

Joanne Luehring, another parent, asked, "What if a plane hit a the gas pipeline in that area? We are dealing with a lot of emotion here. These are our kids."

Alma Marshall, school administrator and former teacher, said, "The big picture may include pocketbooks. Nothing in this world is free. Anything worth having is worth sacrificing for."

Ms. Marshall, who was a classroom teacher for 28 years, said, "Anyone who doesn't think there is a difference between 25 and 35 students in a classroom is out of their mind." Her remark broke up the tension and resulted in some of the few laughs of the evening as did Morrison's reminder to audience members to "address the chair" instead of each other.

Wayne Woodside said, "The bond failed in my opinion because of no innovative thinking. The answer is not new construction."

Woodside said his concern wasn't just construction costs but the additional ongoing costs of operation and overhead in new buildings. He recommended expanding the existing junior highs.

Board member Larry Rusk said that expanding the schools meant that all of the support structures, including the gymnasium, library, cafeteria and restrooms would also have to be expanded.

Noting heated discussion between opposition members and board members, Manning said, "We are not going to solve these problems unless we pull these two groups together and meet with a compromise."

Jared Jensen, 12, a seventh-grader at San Jacinto Junior High School said he wanted to take a stand in favor of the school bond. Jared who was attending the meeting to satisfy a requirement for a Boy Scout merit badge, said the overcrowded halls at San Jacinto were a danger for all students.

"You can get run over in the halls," Jared said. "When the bell rings you can get flattened. If you drop something you better forget it because if you bend over you'll be pushed down."

The seventh-grader said that there were 30 students in his honors math class. "Students are entitled to a teacher's help," he said. "There isn't enough class time for the teacher to help 30 students."

Jared pleaded for the opposition and supporters of the bond to think of the students. "Please help us," he said. "We need help. There isn't much we can do by ourselves because we are not old enough."

OIL: Crude reaches all-time high in Saudi Arabia deployed to deter further Iraqi expansion.

Saddam threatened to use the new missile "against the targets of evil when the day of reckoning comes." He again demanded that Israel withdraw from the occupied West Bank and Gaza Strip, and that the United States remove its troops from the region. If they didn't, he said, "you will get what you will get."

Responding to the increased tension, crude oil futures opened above $40 Tuesday and at one point traded as high as $40.95 before settling lower. Later settlement months also closed higher.

Ed Kevelson, a trader with Dean Witter Reynolds Inc., said crude traded at a low of $40.10 on the day — the previous record — a development he called "frighteningly bullish."

Besides concerns over the Middle East, traders said the approach of winter — when demand for oil increases — now was adding to market fears.

"Everybody's worst possible nightmare is fighting breaking out in the Middle East and another cold winter in the United States," Beutel said.

Refined products traded on the New York Merc also rose Tuesday, though not as sharply as crude oil.

BUDGET: Bush rejects higher taxes for wealthy up our hands and said, 'no deal on (tax) rates at all.' He (Bush) just acquiesced in it."

Capital gains, which are profits from the sale of assets such as houses or corporate stock, currently are taxed at the same rate as ordinary income. The administration has argued that a lower tax rate would stimulate the economy; Democrats have countered that most of the benefits would go to the wealthy.

Although he declined to discuss details at the news conference, Bush had clearly indicated he could support a compromise coupling higher taxes on the wealthiest Americans in exchange for the cut in capital-gains tax rates that he has long sought.

"That's on the table. That's been talked about. And if it's proper, if it can be worked in proper balance between the capital gains rate and income tax changes, fine," Bush said.

But later, Republican leaders said they cautioned Bush against pursuing such a trade, suggesting Democrats would never agree to drop capital-gains taxe rates low enough to make the bargain worthwhile.

"The president agreed. Our uniform position was that we will not go up on the (income tax) rates, no matter what," said Packwood, the senior Republican on the Senate Finance Committee.

He said Bush asked the Senate GOP leaders at the meeting if they would hold fast to such a position. "And to the man, in the room, every single person said we will support that," Packwood said.

"Stop trying to buy us off with capital gains. We're not going to change that summit agreement," said Sen. Ted Stevens, R-Alaska, at a remark directed at Democrats.

A senior administration official, who spoke on the condition of anonymity, said that Bush told the GOP leaders that he did not want to raise the marginal tax rate — that is, the tax rate on the last extra dollar of income, sometimes called the "tax bracket" — if he couldn't get a capital gains rate cut at "an acceptable level."

The marginal rate for the wealthiest Americans is 28 percent.

"These guys said, 'you're not going to get it' and he (Bush) said, 'fine, we don't need either one of them. ... there's nothing in it for us,'" the official said.

Nebraska governor limits campaigning due to threat

OMAHA, Neb. (AP) — Gov. Kay Orr said Tuesday she won't campaign for re-election in a county bitterly divided over a proposed radioactive waste warehouse because her life has been threatened.

Boyd County, a sparsely populated ranching area on the state's northern edge, has been in turmoil since officials began considering it as a possible home for low-level radioactive waste from five states. A rancher who opposes the plan is on a hunger strike.

The Nebraska State Patrol said a letter was received in early August "that contained some implied threats." Patrol spokesman Jeff Hanson declined to release any further details, saying the matter was under investigation.

Hanson said the letter lacked some elements needed before authorities could charge anyone with making terroristic threats.

Orr spokesman Doug Parrott said he understands that the threat is related to the nuclear waste dispute.

Mrs. Orr said she knows who made the threat but wouldn't disclose the name. She said she had hoped the situation in Boyd County wouldn't deteriorate to the point of threats.

"There are a lot of things that you consider when you step into a public office," Mrs. Orr said. "I think most of it was pretty well understood by Bill (her husband) and me.

NATION

The proposed waste site lies about two miles outside Butte, a village of about 500 people. Supporters have welcomed the money the dump may bring. Opponents have said they fear accidents and long-term effects of the radioactive waste.

US Ecology, a waste site developer chosen by the Central Interstate Low-Level Radioactive Waste Compact Commission, has applied to the state for permits to build the waste warehouse.

The reinforced concrete warehouse near the South Dakota border would hold waste from the five states that make up the commission: Nebraska, Arkansas, Louisiana, Oklahoma and Kansas.

Democratic gubernatorial candidate Ben Nelson's campaign manager, Sonny Foster, said it was the first he had heard of any threat against Mrs. Orr.

"I think that I can say on the behalf of Ben Nelson that we don't feel that threatening people is part of the political process and there's no way that Ben Nelson would ever condone that kind of activity," Foster said.

Nelson has visited Boyd County and has said that he is concerned about the divisions in the community, Foster said.

One rancher who opposes the waste site has been on a hunger strike for more than three weeks.

Lowell Fisher of Spencer, who said Tuesday he had lost 29 pounds since his fast began on Sept. 17, said he didn't believe the threat against Mrs. Orr was a serious one.

Fisher said he intends to continue his water-only diet until the governor tells the waste compact commission that the community objects to the waste site or holds a special election to see if there is.

An aide to the governor has said Mrs. Orr lacks the power to call such an election and noted that the village board has supported the waste site plans.

Bush criticizes Israel for battle with Palestinians

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Bush said Tuesday Israeli security forces should have acted "with more restraint" in battling Palestinian demonstrators outside the holy Temple Mount in Jerusalem.

"I am very, very saddened by this needless loss of life," he said at a news conference.

At least 19 Arabs were killed and more than 100 wounded Sunday during an hour-long battle outside Al Aksa mosque as thousands of Arabs threw rocks and bottles at Jews praying at the Western Wall below. Eleven Jews observing the festival of Succot were hurt in the barrage.

Appealing also for "calm on all sides," Bush three times referred to "the Palestine question" as needing a solution. Previous presidents are not known to have used the phrase.

Arabs and their supporters long have demanded the establishment of a state called Palestine on Israeli-held land. Bush's Mideast policy deals with East Jerusalem, Gaza and the West Bank as occupied territory but has been opposed to Palestinian statehood.

Bush did not intend to signal anything with the phrase and there is "no change in policy," Roman Popadiuk, the deputy White House press secretary, said.

"I am not sure if there is an intentional new signal," Margaret D. Tutwiler, the State Department spokeswoman, said in response to questions.

The mosque, one of the holiest shrines to Moslems, is on a plateau sacred also to Jews because the temples of Solomon and Herod stood there.

Because of its significance to both faiths, the site has often been the scene of bloody encounters.

"It is particularly saddening," Bush said, "given the sanctity of the holy places and observances there, that violence shattered all of this."

Bush added: "Israeli security forces need to be better prepared for such situations, need to act with greater restraint, particularly when it comes to the use of deadly force..."

German mail needs notation

WASHINGTON (AP) — People sending mail to the newly united Germany need to use care to avoid confusion in the addresses, the U.S. Postal Service reports.

The problem arises because similar systems of postal codes were used in the former East and West Germanys.

Until a new system can be developed, the codes for locations formerly in West Germany should be preceded by the letter W (for west), and for those formerly in East Germany by the letter O. Ost is the German word for east.

For example, addresses might include the line "W-5300 Bonn" or "O-7010 Leipzig."

In either case, the country name to use is Federal Republic of Germany.

Landlord ruling stands

ST. PAUL, Minn. (AP) — The Minnesota Supreme Court has let stand its ruling that a landlord may refuse to rent to an unmarried couple because of his religious beliefs.

The court Monday denied a petition to rehear the discrimination case, in which it ruled 4-3 last month in favor of landlord Layle French of Marshall.

The court had ruled that French's rights of conscience take precedence over the couple's rights under the state's laws against discrimination.

State Human Rights Commissioner Stephen Cooper sought the rehearing, saying the decision contradicted the state Legislature's intent to prevent discrimination on the basis of marital status.

Cooper said the ruling opened the door to landlords imposing their morality on tenants.

FTC seeks injunction

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Federal Trade Commission moved Tuesday to block a joint venture it said would create a virtual monopoly in the making and sale of a telescope commonly used by serious amateur astronomers.

The commission said it has authorized its staff to ask a federal judge in Los Angeles for a preliminary injunction blocking the proposed merger by Meade Instruments Corp. and Celestron International, the two largest producers of mid-size Schmidt-Cassegrain telescopes.

These telescopes use mirrors and lenses and are suited for observation of both nearby planets and deep-sky objects, as well as for astrophotography, the commission said. They generally cost $1,000 or more.

The commission said believed the joint production would virtually monopolize the production and sale of these telescopes. It said it would ask the court to block the acquisition until its legality has been determined by administrative proceedings.

If the preliminary injunction is granted, the commission will have 20 days to issue a complaint beginning the administrative procedure.

Meade is headquartered in Costa Mesa, Calif. and owned by Harbour Group Investments, L.P. Celestron is located in Torrance, Calif., and owned by Diethelm Holding (USA) Ltd., a subsidiary of Diethelm & Co. Ltd. of Switzerland.

Harbour Group and Diethelm have announced plans to form Celestron Meade International, which would be half-owned by each of the two companies.

No show costs $150

TUCSON, Ariz. (AP) — A girl has won her court battle to show up the guy who was a no-show for the high school prom.

Now all Wendy Collins has to do is collect $150 from David Schlosser, who she said stood her up for the dance at University High School.

Pima County Justice Court Judge Robert Gibson on Friday ordered Schlosser to reimburse Ms. Collins the $150 she spent for a dress, shoes and accessories for her would-be date.

Ms. Collins sued Schlosser in Small Claims Court. He did not respond to the claim, so the award was automatic.

Neither Ms. Collins nor Schlosser could be reached for comment Tuesday because their phone numbers are not listed.

Union denounces agency

SAN DIEGO (AP) — The national union representing U.S. Border Patrol agents lashed out at administrators of the agency's San Diego sector, branding as cowardly a decision to remove two agents from field duty for allegedly breaching Mexico's sovereignty.

"This is but one more example in a continuing pattern where the Border Patrol has placed its employees in dangerous situations and then has failed to support them when predictable and inevitable controversy erupts," Patricia Nighswander, executive director of the National Border Patrol Council, said in a statement released Sunday night.

Congress turns to tax increases, medicare cuts

WASHINGTON (AP) — A two-penny tax on home heating oil and a delay in unemployment benefits, two deficit-cutting proposals that drew widespread objections, are likely to be dropped from the plan about to be crafted in Congress.

The impact on Medicare recipients will almost certainly be cushioned. But taxes on gasoline, tobacco and alcohol almost certainly will rise by the time Congress fills in the blanks on its $500 billion deficit reduction package.

And a debate about which taxes to raise — and whether to cut the capital gains tax — will move to the front.

Each proposed spending cut and tax increase will be debated intensely over the next 10 days as Congress struggles to complete the deficit accord by an Oct. 19 deadline, lawmakers involved in the effort predicted on Tuesday.

"It's going to be the equal of the struggle we've had so far," said Rep. Bill Frenzel, R-Minn., who has been in the middle of this year's budget negotiations.

The plan will be crafted in more than a dozen congressional committees, and in a Congress where nerves have been frayed by months of grappling with the deficit. The conservative and moderate wings of the House GOP have clashed bitterly in recent weeks, and many Republicans feel wounded by what they considered rough lobbying by White House aides during last week's fight over the first budget pact.

"I'm nervous that it's made Republicans in the House less effective," Frenzel said.

Whatever the difficulties, there is no choice but to go ahead.

Agreement between President Bush and Congress on the bare bones deficit agreement ended a budget impasse early Tuesday, and led to legislation restoring the federal government's ability to operate normally. Another shutdown is threatened for Oct. 19 if there is no agreement on the fine points of the $500 billion plan to cut domestic spending, trim the military and raise taxes over five years.

Some of the toughest bargaining is expected to be over taxes. Bush said for the first time Tuesday that he could accept higher tax rates on the wealthy in exchange for a cut in the capital gains tax he has long campaigned for.

Democrats have long resisted the cut in the capital gains tax rate unless it was blended with higher taxes on the wealthy.

Senate Majority Leader George Mitchell, D-Maine, said Bush had "apparently come around to our point of view," and aides to Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, chairman of the tax-writing Senate Finance Committee, said he was endorsing the changes as part of a deficit-reduction plan on which the committee was to begin working Wednesday.

In past years, Bentsen had endorsed taxing capital gains — which are profits from the sale of investments — at lower rates than apply to wages. But he has opposed such a change recently because most of the benefit would go to those with incomes over $100,000 a year.

Republicans also will push for renewal of expiring tax provisions that help companies that perform research and experimentation and for housing credits for low-income people.

Democrats are serving notice they will seek deeper cuts in defense spending than the earlier plan envisioned. "Is the military going to help with the burden sharing or not?" asked liberal Rep. George Miller, D-Calif.

For their part, Republicans are expected to fight elsewhere for the deepest spending cuts possible, and the most modest tax increases.

Congressional negotiators will be building on the remains of a deficit-reduction plan that was rejected last week in the House.

"Obviously, we're trying to get to where we don't hit the average-income people so much," said Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, D-Texas, chairman of the tax-writing Senate Finance Committee.

Two items that prompted objections from House members last week are expected to be excluded from the final package, according to lawmakers and aides who spoke on condition of anonymity.

One would have placed a 2-cent-per-gallon tax on home-heating oil.

Council moves to curb Barry's spending

WASHINGTON (AP) — The District of Columbia Council passed emergency legislation Tuesday to restrict Mayor Marion Barry's spending authority in his last weeks in office.

Approved by voice vote were proposals to restrict Barry's ability to lease property or award construction projects for the district, and require the council to review any city contracts proposed by Barry that exceed $1 million.

The temporary, 90-day statutes can take effect without the mayor's signature and will expire six days after Barry leaves office on Jan. 2.

"The fact of the matter is we just don't want the mayor to spend any money," said council member John Ray. "That's the emergency."

"What we are seeing looks like an attempt to get a lot of things signed, sealed and delivered before Jan. 2," said council member Betty Ann Kane, who sponsored the bill intended to restrict the mayor's leasing authority.

Barry was convicted in federal court Aug. 10 of a misdemeanor charge of cocaine possession.

Before his conviction, he said he would not seek a fourth, four-year term as mayor. Barry is running as an independent for a district-wide city council seat.

In recent weeks, council members have become concerned that the mayor might be using city funds to reward his friends with pay raises and contracts before he leaves office.

Other members said they supported the bills to help fight the city's projected $100 million budget deficit.

Documents obtained Tuesday by The Associated Press show that more than two dozen of Barry's political supporters holding city jobs have received pay raises since August.

The records do not indicate that Barry himself requested the raises, but did show that they were approved by two of his top assistants. Most of those getting the raises will receive a minimum of $55,000 annually.

Others employed under lucrative annual contracts were given full-time positions. That would make it difficult to remove them from office once Barry leaves as mayor.

Democratic mayoral nominee Sharon Pratt Dixon has promised that if she is elected on Nov. 6, she will fire 2,000 mid-level city managers to save an estimated $95 million.

The bills approved Tuesday will require council approval of all city leasing or construction contracts proposed by the mayor's office. The city spends about $40 million annually on such agreements.

Judge remains on 2 Live Crew obscenity trial

FORT LAUDERDALE, Fla. (AP) — Prosecutors in the obscenity trial of bawdy rap group 2 Live Crew failed Tuesday to have the judge dismissed because a defense lawyer was her law professor 15 years ago.

Luther Campbell, Chris Wongwon and Mark Ross face misdemeanor charges stemming from a June 11 adults-only performance at a nightclub in nearby Hollywood. If convicted, the Miami-based rappers could be sentenced to up to a year in jail and fined $1,000.

The first two days of the trial have been devoted largely to motions and and challenges over jury selection.

Defense attorney Bruce Rogow challenged Broward County's voter-based jury pool as unconstitutional in cases that depend on community standards, like obscenity. But Broward County Judge June Johnson said she wanted to see the whole 70-person pool before ruling on the defense motion.

Prosecutors on Monday asked the judge to step down, noting that Rogow taught her law at nearby Nova University in the mid-1970s. Johnson refused, saying she lost touch with Rogow after the class.

Prosecutors appealed the decision before Circuit Judge George Brescher, but he denied the challenge Tuesday, saying the motion lacked a required document and was filed too late.

"I think what the state has done is try to interfere with this case getting to trial," Rogow said. "This was utterly frivolous and I think in bad taste."

Rogow also represented Charles Freeman, a black record store owner convicted of obscenity last week by an all-white jury for selling the group's album, "As Nasty As They Wanna Be."

A six-member panel is to be chosen from 70 prospects requested by the judge. No jurors had been selected by the end of Tuesday's session, although about 25 had been questioned.

Jury selection is expected to take several days.

Only three of 25 potential jurors questioned Monday were black, and potential jurors interviewed by early Tuesday afternoon included three blacks. Music by the black group is aimed principally at a young black audience.

Jury composition is particularly sensitive because obscenity cases are decided on the basis of how the panel defines community standards.

The album, which U.S. District Judge Jose Gonzalez earlier ruled obscene, has sold about 2 million copies.

Campbell, the leader of 2 Live Crew, told reporters he was unhappy with the way jury selection was going. "I need young people and black people," he said.

Discovery heads toward reentry

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — Discovery's astronauts, flush with success from a near perfect mission, packed up their gear Tuesday for their return to Earth while the satellite they released streaked deeper into space.

The Ulysses satellite, which will study the sun, was 1.7 million miles from Earth three days into its five-year journey and hurtling through the solar system at more than 24,000 mph.

Discovery was scheduled to land at 9:57 a.m. EDT Wednesday at Edwards Air Force Base, Calif., to conclude NASA's first shuttle flight in almost half a year. Good weather was expected.

"This flight is probably as close to perfect as we can get," said flight director Ron Dittemore.

The biggest problem occurred Tuesday when a heater on one of Discovery's three auxiliary power units failed. Mission Control in Houston said a backup heater was activated and working fine. The heaters could be operated manually, if necessary.

Mandela tells ANC comrades they will be released soon

CAPE TOWN, South Africa (AP) — A smiling Nelson Mandela returned to prison Tuesday, this time on a visit with promising news for African National Congress comrades still jailed for anti-apartheid activities.

"It evokes all kinds of memories ... but I'm concentrating on the pleasant ones," said Mandela, who was released in February after 27 years in prison for trying to overthrow the white-led government.

He went to Pollsmoor and Robben Island to tell jailed ANC members about government plans to release political prisoners.

Mandela spent nearly two decades on Robben Island, some of it breaking rocks in hard labor, before his transfer in 1982 to Pollsmoor.

He described Tuesday's meetings as emotional.

"The atmosphere was one of enthusiasm and the spirit of comradeship was so strong that when we meet, the emotions run wild," he said after his visits.

Mandela said he spoke only to ANC members, but that the organization seeks the release of all political prisoners, irrespective of affiliation.

"We have set a date by which all political prisoners will be released and that is the end of April 1991," he said. "All that we are concentrating on is that political prisoners are released as soon as possible and we are busy with that process."

The ANC has said the government must free all political prisoners before the black opposition movement will enter full-scale negotiations on ending apartheid and white-minority rule.

The government has released dozens of prisoners in recent months and 15 more are scheduled to be freed Wednesday from Robben Island. Another six also are to be released from other South African prisons, the ANC said. It says there are some 3,000 people it considers political prisoners.

President F.W. de Klerk has said his government will free all political prisoners, but has not said how many inmates fall in that category.

On Monday, de Klerk said the ANC's estimated 20,000 exiles could begin applying for amnesty to clear the way for their return to South Africa.

De Klerk, who legalized the ANC in February, cautioned that amnesty would not automatically be granted to everyone who applied.

The release of political prisoners and the return of exiles are two main obstacles to negotiations on ending apartheid.

De Klerk says he wants to draw up a new constitution with opposition groups that would allow the 5 million whites and 30 million blacks to share power. The government and the ANC have been holding preliminary talks since May.

Mandela appeared in a jovial mood before visiting Robben Island. He smiled broadly while boarding a boat to the prison, the most noroious in South Africa.

He recognized a guard on the craft and greeted him warmly, saying, "Oh, you are a sergeant now."

Later, Mandela recalled some aspects of prison life.

"As you know, we were not allowed to read newspapers," he said, "and I remembered very well how successful we were in smuggling in newspapers."

Black youths steal knives, go on stabbing rampage

DURBAN, South Africa (AP) — Blacks armed with knives went on a rampage Tuesday and stabbed eight whites, raising the specter of new racial violence, authorities said.

About 20 young blacks stole knives from a store and began stabbing people along a street near the beach, police said.

"They were in a berserk state and were lashing out with knives at anyone who was near them," witness Robert Trulock told the independent South African Press Association.

Two suspects were shot and wounded by police, and seven were arrested, police said.

The attack may have been racially motivated, said police Lt. Nina Barkhuizen. Police were investigating the possibility that some participants wore badges of the Pan Africanist Congress, a militant black opposition group, she said.

Despite deep racial divisions and widespread violence in South Africa, there have been few cases of blacks randomly attacking whites.

Law and Order Minister Adriaan Vlok condemned the violence and called for private citizens to refrain from seeking revenge.

"It might be somebody trying to provoke a reaction from the white population," said Thabo Mbeki, a spokesman for the African National Congress.

The black youths took the knives from a store specializing in weapons from the Far East, Barkhuizen said.

They then ran down a street next to the beachfront and stabbed whites, witnesses said.

Bleeding victims staggered into the lobby of the Lonsdale Hotel and collapsed in front of horrified guests.

Eight people, ranging in age from 15 to 85, were hospitalized with stab wounds, Barkhuizen said. A hospital official said three of the white victims were in serious condition.

Patrick Lekota, an ANC official in Durban, called the attack "a desperate attempt to discredit the liberation movement as a whole."

About 5,000 blacks have been killed in factional fighting since 1986 in Natal Province, which includes Durban. But the violence has been almost exclusively in black areas, pitting Zulu supporters of the conservative Inkatha movement against Xhosas and other blacks linked to the ANC.

The warfare spread to black townships around Johannesburg in August, and about 800 people were killed in the ensuing weeks.

ANC leader Nelson Mandela has accused security forces of fanning the violence, possibly at the behest of right-wing elements who oppose government-ANC peace talks on ending the apartheid system of racial segregation.

The government has denied the charges and challenged accusers to provide proof. Vlok said Tuesday that affidavits supplied to the government purportedly backing the accusations had proved to be fabrications.

Both the ANC and Inkatha oppose apartheid.

No sweet dreams for Mayor Dinkins

In the city that doesn't sleep, why is a bed so important? Therein lies one of the bumpiest bedtime stories to rock this town in a long time.

The city's media are bombarding millions of New Yorkers with the news that a city carpenter spent the past four months crafting a hand-carved cherrywood headboard for Mayor David Dinkins' bed. In the stories, no detail of his bedroom and Gracie Mansion is spared. And least of all the bill: some $11,500 to taxpayers.

The timing could not have been worse. The headboard was installed just after Dinkins threatened higher taxes and possible layoffs for 15,000 city workers and a freeze on all municipal hiring. The mayor gave teachers a big raise and proposed thousands of new police as he called for new taxes. The city comptroller now projects the deficit for next year at $2.6 billion — sending taxpayers to bed with a headache.

City bonds are now just one step above junk bonds. Neither the mayor nor Gov. Mario Cuomo know what to do about it except raise taxes. To all this, the mayor's staff replies: Former Mayor Ed Koch took the mayor's bed with him!

It has now been discovered the Koch absconded with his own bed which he brought to the mansion in 1978. So he's innocent!

City government has grown by 49,000 employees over the past seven years — much of it political patronage. But the bed is making a bigger uproar than that multi-million-dollar giveaway.

Rip Van Winkle never owned such a treasure. If only George Washington had slept in this bed, it could be sold at a big price. The jokes and the irony go on and on.

The mayor isn't going to get much sleep for a while.

Citizens can fix 'sick' government

After viewing the "Prime Time Live" TV show recently, I can't believe what we have let happen. My prayer is that we, the Midland community, will support our health-care providers. The Medicare bureaucracy is going to destroy our excellent physicians if we let it happen. They will be replaced with a socialized system where excellence, skill and talent go unrewarded in favor of the "take-a-number" version.

As an operating room nurse at MMH I have been blessed to work with several outstanding surgeons. These surgeons work night and day to care for all of you when needed — whether you have money, insurance or nothing. Do they want their children to be doctors? For the most of them — no. They see the future of medicine as a government-regulated and controlled nightmare.

From a personal viewpoint, it took me over a year to wade through the Medicare paperwork after my mother died. I finally hired an insurance specialist because the system is so complicated. Now the government insists that physicians file the claims or second insurances won't pay. This means doctors must hire more people to do more complex paperwork. Medicare has the power to make or break our physicians, determine who makes sound judgment calls, or decides what tests can be ordered, length of hospital stay and what the doctor can charge. This is not what we want. We want to choose our own doctor and trust his years of education and experience to care for us when we are sick or injured.

If we continue to let the government run our lives, we have surely forgotten what America is all about. We have the power to give the business of medicine back to the physicians. Bureaucracy is not bad but ours has "bureaucosis." Who can fix a sick government? "We The People."

Good deed deserves proper public recogition

Your recent report of the Odessa boy who found and returned $100 reminded me that Midland also has such a boy.

The same week of the event in Odessa I received a call from the Plaza Center Revco cashier who asked if I missed some money. I looked and was short a $100 bill and told her so. She said, "come on over and get your money." Later I picked up $90 that was left after a young boy was rewarded with $10. He had found a $100 bill on the drug store floor.

Will you help me find this boy so he gets a proper public recognition for his good deed?

Words are the mirrors reflecting our decline

It has been said that the language of a nation is a reflection of its character. Your article on "People" Sept. 18 about Steve Allen not being amused by TVs trend toward vulgarity was a true and profound statement. I hope the majority of your readers concur.

I was taught that bad language was a sign of ignorance or stupidity. I hope more respected people like Steve Allen will speak out about our decline.

Congress denies 'atomic vets' rights

WASHINGTON — Thousands of soldiers and civilians who unwittingly served as observers to the first U.S. nuclear weapons tests 40 years ago now recognize danger when they see it. This time these "atomic veterans," as they call themselves, are up against Congress and the defense contractors who built those early bombs.

Anderson

Atomic vets want Congress to repeal the Warner Amendment, a law sponsored in 1984 by Sen. John Warner, R-Va., which prohibits veterans and civilians from suing defense contractors for exposing them to harmful radiation.

A House-Senate conference committee is scheduled to decide this week whether to repeal the Warner Amendment. Warner is on that committee and even he has conceded that the law giving the defense contractors immunity was a bad idea. But that is no guarantee that the atomic vets will get what they want. Their just cause may be no match for the influence the defense contractors have over Congress.

Those contractors oppose the repeal measure, sponsored by Sen. Harry Reid, D-Nev., even though it contains language which would make the federal government, not the contractors, pay the damages awarded in any lawsuits.

Among the contractors lined up on the other side are AT&T and the University of California. AT&T's Bell Telephone Laboratories operated what later became Sandia National Laboratories, one of three Energy Department national labs where nuclear weapons research was conducted. The university operated the other two — Los Alamos and Livermore.

Since 1987, AT&T has contributed $2,449,067 to congressional campaigns, including money to the heavy-hitters on the conference committee that is now deciding the fate of the Warner Amendment: $15,000 to Rep. Les Aspin, D-Wis., $7,000 to Rep. Bill Dickinson, R-Ala., $4,000 to Sen. Sam Nunn, D-Ga., and $4,750 to Warner. Reid, the sponsor of the repeal measure, is not on the committee. He has received $3,000 in campaign money from AT&T.

Aspin, Nunn, Dickinson and Warner are frequently referred to as the "Big Four" on the conference committee. Congressional sources told us that if the repeal of the amendment is left to a vote of those four, the atomic vets are in trouble.

Atomic vets told us they have been burned by Congress in the past. They claim the 1984 ban on lawsuits was snuck onto the books in the first place and that even Warner was buffaloed by the Reagan administration into thinking it would be beneficial to vets.

Rep. James Bilbray, D-Nev., tried to repeal the Warner Amendment in the House last year, but his bill was defeated. So now Reid has taken up the cause in the Senate.

In the current round of debate, Sen. Alan Simpson, R-Wyo., added language to soften the blow to defense contractors. Under the law as proposed, the vets could sue, but if they won, the government would pay the damages. And attorneys' fees would be limited to 10 percent of any award so lawyers could not profiteer on the cases.

A spokesman for AT&T told our associate Tim Warner that the company opposes the repeal of the law even if the federal government would shoulder the liability. The spokesman said AT&T would still have to mount an expensive defense against the lawsuits. If the vets are to be compensated, AT&T thinks that should happen administratively and not through the courts.

An estimated 250,000 military and 150,000 civilian personnel were involved in 235 atomic weapons tests conducted between 1946 and 1962. Some of those veterans now say that exposure was the cause of their cancers.

Court considers medication for murder

Justice David Souter was confirmed last week, but unfortunately, he did not have the opportunity to hear one of the most fascinating cases of the decade.

This is true — I did not make it up. A murderer on death row named Michael Owen Perry killed his mother, father, two cousins and a nephew and was sentenced to die in the electric chair. He happens to be a certified schizophrenic, and by law he cannot be executed if he is insane.

Buchwald

The prosecution took the case to the Supreme Court requesting permission to force the defendant to take anti-psychotic drugs so that he will be sane long enough to sit in the electric chair. The convicted murderer's lawyers are fighting this, maintaining that the state cannot give their client drugs to make him healthy just so they can kill him.

The Supreme Court is not the only place where people are taking sides on the case. At Duke Zeibert's restaurant in Washington many learned lawyers debated the appeal while their clocks were ticking away in the office.

Tenderfoot said, "The electric chair takes precedence over a person's mental state of health. The person should take his drugs like a man so that he can walk the last mile with a smile on his face and a shine on his shoes."

Grimsley, a great defense lawyer, raised his fork in anger. "The state has no right to force any person in this country to be sane if it's going to kill him. According to the television programs, Perry thinks he's God. Is there any politician in the state of Louisiana who wants to kill God?"

Blowman, a former prosecutor, refused to buy this.

"We only know that Perry says he's crazy. That's pretty weak evidence. I believe that we should kill him, and then do an autopsy to decide whether he was schizophrenic or not."

Grimsley asked, "Don't you think that would be a little late?"

Blowman retorted, "The state shouldn't worry about what it takes for someone to be capital-punished. A crime has been committed, and justice will be served if we do the only sensible thing — and that is to shave his head and strap him into the chair. If he's nuts, he won't know what hit him, and if he isn't, he can fake it."

Ludlow, a practicing psychiatrist, spoke, "The prosecutors insist that if you force anti-psychotic drugs down a death row inmate's throat he will get better. That doesn't necessarily follow. My fear is that after medicating him, the state will certify that the defendant is sane, when in fact there has been no improvement at all."

Blowman blew. "Who is to say who is sane and who isn't? The man murdered people. It doesn't matter if he doesn't know what day it is. The rest of us do. So I say, get the priest and let the games begin."

A woman CPA said, "I can't understand why a state would go to so much trouble to electrocute someone who is around the bend."

"The prosecutors have to do things like that during an election year."

Ludlow added, "If you ask me they should give the anti-psychotic drugs to the government for bringing the case to the Supreme Court."

"Is it possible that they were angered because the murderer claims he is the Deity?"

"Maybe, but if the Supreme Court decides he is God, they will have a real hot potato on their hands."

WILLIAM SAFIRE

Ginglock resulting from politics of principle

WASHINGTON — Do not be embarrassed by the closing of the Statue of Liberty for a little while; she will understand.

The derailing of budget summitry and the shutdown of non-essential services is not evidence that "the system doesn't work," or that our representatives in Congress are too irresponsible to bite the tax bullet just before election.

Safire

On the contrary, the system has never worked more dramatically to demonstrate what can happen when government by elitist consensus puts forward a fake compromise and runs smack into the politics of principle.

Face it: a real disagreement exists in this nation about the direction of domestic policy. And don't buy conventional media wisdom: it is not between a little band of responsible leaders who favor balancing the budget versus a grubby swarm of populists who want to expand entitlements but are too hypocritical to vote the taxes to pay for them.

The conflict is between politicians who want to do more for the people versus those who want people to be able to do more for themselves. In presidential elections, the conservative philosophy wins on promises of tax restraint; in congressional, the liberal philosophy wins on promises of expansion of services.

But a compromise was not struck between the contending philosophies. Instead, a deal was cut in the dead of a six-month night between Democratic liberals and Republican centrists that tipped the scales in the direction of a more active and expensive role of government.

That's when Newt Gingrich, the Republican whip in a House long dominated by Democrats, hollered foul. It is one thing to compromise; it is something else to lose. And the Foley-Darman-Dole deal was, by any conservative standard, a loser.

The whopping new taxes were front-loaded, imposed right away, while the non-defense spending "cuts" were to be end-loaded, not to kick in for years — and almost certain to be rescinded in a replay of the doublecross of President Reagan by Speaker O'Neill in 1982.

Moreover, the promised "cuts" were only paper reductions in the rate of increase, a far cry from actual reduction, and not even a leveling of expenditures after allowing for inflation.

With his point of view frozen out of the compromise, Gingrich gutsily said no. Every member of the House facing a tight race — lest we forget, that means those most closely attuned to the will of the people — voted with him to reject the leaders' lurch to the left.

Result: Ginglock. Newt rightly put loyalty to the party's principles ahead of presidential discipline; Bush took a licking without flinching, later coming up off the floor with a no-contract, no-work position that holds Congress's feet to the fire.

The red faces belong to those who thought they could precipitate a crisis to sell the taxpayer a bill of goods. These new Hoovers argued that only a huge tax increase could shrink the deficit and lower interest rates. But the deepening recession will lower interest rates; new taxes would make the downturn steeper and the deficit deeper.

The leadership lost because they led the nation in the direction of income redistribution, where the nation wisely does not want to go. The right way to reduce the deficit is to limit non-defense increases to the rate of inflation and to let real defense cuts sop up the red ink.

This resilient country will survive the shock of its refusal to be stampeded. Election Day is near; let's draw the tax-vs.-spending issue and put it up to the people.

Greenpeace says KGB seizes ship

MOSCOW (AP) — Greenpeace complained Tuesday that Soviet officials were ignoring their requests about the fate of 34 activists and a ship seized by the KGB near a Soviet nuclear weapons test site.

Those seized Monday included four activists who were last seen heading toward the test site at Novaya Zemlya in the Barents Sea, said Rebecca Johnson, spokeswoman for the world environmentalist organization in London.

Greenpeace identified the four as Ted Wood of Hollywood, Calif.; Jorn Haye of Germany; Jeane Ni Ghormain of Ireland; and Bjoern Okern of Norway.

"We are being stonewalled by the Soviet authorities," Ms. Johnson said. "Their refusal to answer to the status of our ship parallels their refusal to talk about nuclear testing.'

The ship, with 28 Western activists and six Soviets aboard, had permission to tour the Soviet arctic, Greenpeace said.

Soviet officials have not commented since Monday, when the official Tass news agency said a Coast Guard icebreaker, under command of the KGB intelligence service, fired across the bow of the motor vessel Greenpeace off Novaya Zemlya and seized the craft.

Tass said the ship would be taken to the Kola Gulf for an inquiry, but gave no details about the crew.

They were seized just after the four were dispatched to the island to trek several miles to the test site, which Greenpeace asserts is being used despite Soviet assurances of a unilateral moratorium on weapons tests. The four carried radios and radiation detection equipment to try to document the tests and protest against them, Ms. Johnson said.

She said Greenpeace representatives met Tuesday in Moscow with Soviet officials, including a KGB press officer, but got no answers.

On Monday, Foreign Ministry spokesman Gennady Gerasimov said the vessel was detained for "deliberate violation of the state border of the U.S.S.R., failure to obey border authorities, landing people at unpermitted places and an attempt to enter an area closed to navigation."

Before communications with the ship were lost, Greenpeace activist Steve Shallhorn said from Oslo, Norway, that about 15 border guards had boarded the 190-foot, Dutch-registered vessel. He said the icebreaker threatened to fire on the Greenpeace ship, which was about four miles from the two-island group.

Ms. Johnson, who is international test ban coordinator for Greenpeace in London, said, "We informed the Soviets early on that we were sending people ashore."

"Our expectation is that everyone is in fact safe but we want communication back with the ship so we can verify that," she said.

She said Greenpeace planned to ask the U.S., British, Dutch and German governments for help.

The Soviets had told Greenpeace to steer clear of Novaya Zemlya, which is about 370 miles from Norway and was a primary Soviet nuclear test site from 1958 to 1963. Environmental groups claim it was last used in 1988.

'We are being stonewalled by the Soviet authorities.'

— Rebecca Johnson, Greenpeace spokeswoman

Arab world condemns killings at temple

NICOSIA, Cyprus (AP) — Much of the Arab world bitterly condemned the killing of 19 Palestinians in Jerusalem by Israeli forces, and some extremists vowed Tuesday to exact vengeance against Israel and the United States.

The killings at Jerusalem's Temple Mount — sacred to both Islam and Judaism — could drag Israel into the Persian Gulf dispute at a time when it has been trying to avoid just that.

Middle East experts in Jordan expressed concern that Monday's deaths might trigger terrorist acts which could be interpreted as Iraqi-sponsored and bring the U.S.-led multinational force and Iraq closer to war.

Palestinian terrorist Abul Abbas threatened to retaliate unless the United States cuts its strategic ties with Israel. And President Saddam Hussein of Iraq said the deaths brought Israel closer to "the abyss."

Iraq called for U.N. action, while the radical Moslem Brotherhood in Jordan called for a Jihad, or Holy War, to liberate Palestinian land.

Saddam also announced that a new Iraqi missile with a range of hundreds of miles could be launched against "the targets of evil when the day of reckoning comes."

President Bush said Tuesday in Washington that Israeli security forces should have acted "with more restraint" when they opened fire on the rioting Palestinians.

"Let me just express my strong feelings about this, my sorrow at this tragedy. It is particularly saddening because of the sanctity of the holy places. Violence shattered all this," Bush said.

Iraq, which has been trying to rouse the Arab masses against the U.S.-led multinational force in the gulf, said the battle against the foreign presence in Saudi Arabia and Israeli occupation of Arab lands was the same struggle.

Thousands of Palestinians and Jordanians took to the streets of Jordan's capital, Amman, Tuesday under a sign reading "Mohammed and Christ came for peace, Bush and Israel came for Blood."

In Beirut, hundreds of Palestinians burned tires around their refugee camps, while shops closed and protesters marched through the shantytowns shouting "Stop the massacres!"

Israeli officials said the shooting started Monday after Arabs began stoning Jewish worshipers at Judaism's holiest site, the Western Wall, which is below the Temple Mount.

It was the bloodiest incident in Jerusalem since the Middle East war in 1967.

"Palestinian blood will not be cheap. We will wait and see what the United States reaction will be. But our retaliation will be severe against Israel and the United States," said Abbas, leader of the Palestine Liberation Front and suspected mastermind of the Achille Lauro cruise ship hijacking in 1985.

Abbas, at a news conference in Baghdad, set several conditions he said Washington must meet to avoid retaliation against U.S. targets.

Among them were resuming its suspended dialogue with the Palestine Liberation Organization, suspending its alliance with Israel and not vetoing U.N. Security Council resolutions expected against Israel because of the killings.

Also condemning the Temple Mount killings were Egypt, Jordan and the PLO's executive committee.

Saudi Arabia, meanwhile, accused Israel of trying to "erase the Palestinian identity."

Jordanian newspapers said the Temple Mount killings demonstrated the link between the gulf crisis and Israel's hold on the occupied territories. Several newspapers urged an international blockade of Israel.

New center 20 years in making

■ About 75 citizens and city officials brave the cold to dig up the first shovelfuls of dirt at the site of the new southeast Midland senior center.

Digging up a shovelful of gold perhaps would not have been as satisfying as the earth Myrtle Hall excavated Tuesday in Washington Park.

For Ms. Hall, 72, breaking ground for the Southeast Senior Citizens Center meant the beginning of something she and other senior citizens in east and south Midland have been pursuing for about 20 years.

"This is wonderful," she said following the ceremony. "It was a struggle for the past 20 years. Thank God we made it."

About 75 people braved chilly winds to witness the ceremony, also attended by city officials and others who will have a hand in creating the $467,000 center.

The 9,000-square-foot facility — scheduled to be completed in Washington Park in about four months — will serve as a daily gathering place for more than 150 elderly persons, officials said.

The center will offer social activities, medical and nutritional services.

Mayor Carroll Thomas, who also wielded a shovel at the event, said the groundbreaking represents a

Officials push for new court

By David Morris
Staff Writer

Ten weeks out of the year, 318th State District Court Judge Dean Rucker is scheduled to preside over jury trials.

Unfortunately for Rucker, his courtroom on the fourth floor of the Midland County Courthouse is not big enough to accommodate a 12-person jury.

So when jury weeks roll around, Rucker finds himself scrambling to borrow a full-sized courtroom from a fellow judge.

But fellow judges, swamped with burgeoning case loads of their own, often are unable to surrender their courtrooms.

"I believe that the case load is sufficient now that fourth district court would be kept just as busy" as the three existing district courts, Rucker said. "I believe we need a fourth district court in Midland County."

With a major renovation project in the works, it may not be long before the courthouse will have the space necessary to house a fourth district court, which judges and prosecutors say is sorely needed.

Rochester's bankrupt, CPA tells Bunton

By David Morris
Staff Writer

Odessa land developer Louis Rochester was back in federal court Tuesday, claiming that he is bankrupt and cannot pay the money he owes the bank which in 1988 he was convicted of defrauding.

Judge Lucius D. Bunton III, who took the matter under advisement, must now decide whether to reduce Rochester's sentence.

A federal jury found Rochester guilty of bank fraud in December 1988. Bunton sentenced him to five years' probation, 500 hours of community service and fined him $10,000.

Later, Bunton ordered Rochester to repay a $7.2 million illegal loan he had obtained from the now-defunct Odessa Savings Association.

AmWest Savings & Loan Association — which took over Odessa Savings — and the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation seek to collect on the defaulted loan.

Federal investigators said Rochester was an Odessa Savings stockholder and not allowed to receive such a large loan from the institution. Rochester's conviction stemmed from the illegal loan, which he had told Odessa Savings officials was meant for Arlington real estate developer James Pruett.

This spring, the Fifth U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in New Orleans upheld the conviction and Rochester's attorney filed a motion for reduction of sentence.

In a hearing on the motion in Bunton's courtroom Tuesday, Rochester testified that he is bankrupt and cannot repay the $7.2 million.

Bunton took the matter under advisement after agreeing to cut short Rochester's stay in an Odessa halfway house, where Rochester was serving six months as a term of his probation. Rochester had served about four months of the sentence.

"I've been unable to do anything, as far as business is concerned," said Rochester, who claimed his real estate development company has crumbled since his conviction.

He said he and his company — Murphy & Rochester — will file for bankruptcy within 30 days and therefore cannot be expected to repay the loan.

Charles L. Carlson, a certified public accountant retained by Rochester, testified that as of May, his client was "about $20 million in the hole."

Former Exxon division HQ turned over to MISD

Midland school administrators were all smiles Tuesday as they toured their new home in the Exxon building, 615 W. Missouri.

The 80,000 square-foot downtown building was recently donated to the Midland Independent School District (MISD) by Exxon's Southwestern Production Division. The division currently occupies leased office space in the One Petroleum Center/ClayDesta Plaza.

The keys to the $1.5 million building were officially handed over to Ken Morrison, MISD school board president in an 11 a.m. dedication ceremony Tuesday following a tour of the sixth floor.

Exclamations of, "This is perfect" and "Just look at all of this space" were heard by the dozens of administrators and guests as they viewed spacious offices lit by shuttered windows.

Nell Sites, a longtime Exxon employee who retired in 1986, said, "Any offices with three windows were considered big when I was here." Ms. Sites noted that the offices had been refurbished and carpeted since she had occupied an office in the building.

The offices, which were all clean and bright, had been spruced up just in time for the dedication, according to one former Exxon employee, who also noted that the elevators had been freshly carpeted Monday evening.

Robert Olsen, manager of Exxon's Southwestern Production Division, said, "Having this building used for educational purposes fits the company's objective of support of education."

L. Bryant Williams, manager of Exxon's new Onshore Exploration Division and former head of the Midland Exploration Division, added that consolidating school district operations under one roof will save Midland taxpayers money and "allow for a more focused education effort in the community."

School officials said they expect to move into the building during the Christmas holidays.

Following the presentation guests were invited to stay for a barbecue lunch.

Treasurer candidates engage in verbal duel

By Erin Blair

Van Hightower

Democratic state treasurer candidate Nikki Van Hightower discussed her four-point platform for raising new non-tax funds for Texas when she visited Midland Monday.

Ms. Van Hightower said she had gained investment experience working as the Harris County treasurer for the past four years, where she was responsible for $1.25 billion.

"My opponent has never managed public funds," she said. "Kay (Bailey Hutchison) is a bond lawyer, she makes money off the state government."

Ms. Hutchison said Ms. Van Hightower is wrong. "My business experience as a small business owner; finance and management experience as an attorney in public finance and banking; government experience in the Texas House and in Washington (where she was vice chairman of the National Transportation Safety Board) particularly qualifies me for the job."

Ms. Van Hightower said that her Republican opponent's experience in legislation was more involved with policy-making than funds management.

"Her platform is managing state debt, but we don't have a state debt problem because the state can't issue operating debt, only capital debt for jail and school projects where it's paid off over the life of the project," she said. "It's a nonsense issue."

She disputed Ms. Hutchison's accusation that she favors a state income tax.

"I don't know any politician willing to crucify himself over income tax," Ms. Van Hightower said. "Taxing is the job of the legislature, not the treasurer, anyway."

What the treasurer's office can do is generate new revenues, she said.

Her four-point plan calls for expanding the Tex-Pool program, which she said would bring an additional $50 million to local governments by pooling their investment resources.

She would also increase compliance with the state's unclaimed

Morales says ethnicity not a voter concern

By Erin Blair

Morales

Citing polls that put him 12 points ahead of his Republican competitor, State Rep. Dan Morales of San Antonio said he was confident of his chances of snaring the attorney general's job during a a brief campaign stop Tuesday in Midland.

Morales, in town to attend a luncheon sponsored by the Mexican-American Democrats and the Young Democrats of Midland County, said he has broad-based support across the state, including West Texas.

"I think Texas has come to the point where voters make their decisions based on a candidate's qualifications, record and preparation for the office, not ethnicity," said Morales, who is a Mexican-American.

His qualifications for the post include three years as a Bexar County assistant district attorney and five years as a state representative. Currently he is chairman of the House Criminal Jurisprudence Committee and is a member of the House Ways and Means Committee.

He said his top priority as attorney general would be to resolve the outstanding public policy lawsuits, including school finances, prison overcrowding and Department of Mental Health and Mental Retardation issues.

He added that he would de-politicize the attorney general's office.

"The problem is that in Texas today, state policy is made by judges. The courts are running the state," Morales said. "We need to restore policy-making to the Legislature.

"And we need an attorney general with an exclusive focus on the legal problems of the state, not one interested in politics and personal gain.

"My only motivation for running for the position is to put together the best law firm possible for the state of Texas."

He said he planned to double the number of attorneys available to assist rural county district attorneys in the prosecution of narcotics and capital murder cases.

"No drug offender, drug dealer or person accused of capital murder should have an advantage in a trial because of inadequate support for local prosecution efforts."

He disputed GOP attorney general candidate J.E. "Buster" Brown's claim that Morales had no trial experience by saying that he tried more than 70 cases in the Bexar County Attorney General's office, while Brown has never worked for a metropolitan civil law firm or a major county district attorney's office.

Staying sober: I've got to take it one day at a time

Ott

EDITOR'S NOTE: On July 31 of this year, Reporter-Telegram City Editor Gary Ott checked into Clearview Hospital for treatment of alcoholism. He has written a series of four columns detailing his experiences. Today's installment focuses on returning to the "real world."

It has now been 72 days since I last took a drink.

It seems like forever.

But it wasn't.

It was shortly before midnight on Monday, July 30, 1990. I remember the situation well. I was in my apartment alone watching television. There was a bottle of Scotch on the table before me. I was mixing it with water, though as the night progressed the amount of water going into each drink was becoming smaller and smaller.

I was trying to get drunk. And for good reason.

Earlier in the day I had acknowledged to my boss that I was an alcoholic and needed help in fighting the disease.

Best I can recall, it was the first time I had ever admitted out loud that I was indeed an alcoholic. Now I was setting out to prove my point.

And why not?

The next day I was going to check myself into Clearview Hospital, a drug rehabilitation center.

After spending 28 days in Clearview, where, quite naturally, finding a bottle of booze was impossible, I was back on the streets free to consume whatever my heart — or taste buds — so desired.

And that's where my life's newest challenge was to begin.

Suddenly, there would be no one looking out for me, protecting me from the urges that would no doubt swoop down from time to time and tempt me with my old habits.

I made a mental note of the most obvious temptations that would face me.

Predictably, they were many.

Here's a partial list:

■ Stopping by The Bar, my favorite hangout, after work for a few drinks.

■ Gathering with friends on the weekend to watch football games on TV.

■ Watching — and enjoying — offbeat beer commercials on TV.

■ Playing a leisurely round of golf, where icing down a 12-pack of beer is as much a part of my game as three-putting from 25 feet.

■ Having guests drop by unexpectedly.

■ Participating in backyard barbeques.

■ Running into old friends on the street and hearing those magical words, "Hey, let's go have a drink. I'm buying."

social milestone for east and south Midland residents.

"We were determined, as you all were determined, to get the job done," Thomas said. "I think it's going to be a marvelous center, one that you will be proud of for many years to come."

Councilman Jose Cuevas, one of the key players in making the dream a reality, said it took a lot of work to get the center off the ground. "A lot of times I didn't think it would be possible," he said.

The bumpy journey leading to Tuesday's groundbreaking started in 1968 when a group of about 50 predominantly black senior citizens, led by Ms. Hall, began holding programs for the elderly in various Midland schools.

The programs were funded through federal grants, which lasted until 1979.

Undaunted by the financial cutoff, the seniors met in each other's homes.

Through a contract with the city, Community and Senior Services of Midland started a center at Hollowell United Methodist Church, 400 S. Marshall St., in 1987.

Voters in 1988 turned down a $400,000 referendum to pay for expanding the city's senior citizens centers. The defeat did not stop the November 1989 opening of the Dellwood Senior Citizens Center, 3303 W. Illinois Ave.

Construction of the Southeast Senior Citizens Center will be paid for through money from certificates of obligation issued earlier this year.

The center is assured to be well used, as evidenced by the 103 senior citizens who come regularly to Hollowell.

The Rev. Hadley Edwards of Hollowell said he will miss the senior citizens' daily presence in his church.

"Every one of them has earned my love and respect," Edwards said. "I'll always be a part of their lives."

Edwards, though, said the well-deserved new center will be a blessing.

"It will provide a place of fun and activity for the seniors," he said. "It will also be a positive statement made from the city of Midland to the east Midland community."

Top officials' cars to remain unmarked

By Brian Pearson
Staff Writer

Vehicles driven by the city of Midland's top five administrators will remain unmarked, despite a controversy over whether the practice is against state law.

Midland City Council voted 5-2 on Tuesday to not require the cars to carry the city emblem.

State law requires that all city vehicles, except those used by some police personnel such as detectives, be emblazoned with the municipal markings.

City vehicles driven by City Manager Fred Poe, Deputy City Manager Mike McGregor, Assistant City Manager Susan Thorpe and City Attorney David Reagan carry no such markings.

Poe said the take-home cars are exempt because they have been budgeted under the police department.

However, Councilman J.D. Faircloth, who voted against the recommendation, contended that state law grants exceptions only to vehicles used by police personnel.

"The law is very, very specific," Faircloth said. "I'm concerned about complying with the law."

Faircloth, who brought the matter to light, said some police personnel and other city employees are upset over having the police department used as a loophole to avoid compliance with state law.

Reagan said the state statute, which has not been the subject of a court case in Texas, does not specify who can use the unmarked vehicles. It states only that vehicles budgeted under the police department can go unmarked with council approval, he said.

Reagan added that the unmarked vehicles here sometimes are used by administrators assisting in police business. Administrators said they also use unmarked cars when checking the progress of private contractors working on city projects.

Councilman Tom Johnston, who also opposed the recommendation, questioned why the administrators' cars needed to be exempt.

"I wrestled with this pro and con," Johnston said. "I don't know why to the management staff it's such a burden to have their cars marked like the rest of the cars."

Other councilmen pooh-poohed the concerns and pointed out that administrators in other cities such as San Antonio also drive unmarked vehicles that have been budgeted under police departments.

"It seems like everybody has done the same thing," Councilman John Castro said.

Councilmen Jose Cuevas said he saw no reason to change the status quo.

"I don't think it's a consensus of the City Council or the department heads that they're abusing the law," Cuevas said. "I felt that it was one of those situations where if it's not broke, don't fix it."

Council OKs 19.3 percent increase in taxi rate

By Brian Pearson
Staff Writer

The first taxi fare hike in eight years received a tentative thumbs up from Midland City Council Tuesday.

Councilmen on first reading approved raising the fee for a three-mile cab ride from $4.15 to $4.95, a 19.3 percent increase.

The current rate is $1.35 for the first fifth of a mile and 20 cents per fifth of a mile thereafter. Under the proposal, that would be upped to $1.55 for the first sixth of a mile and 20 cents per sixth of a mile thereafter.

The proposal is expected to go before the council for final review Oct. 23.

B.G. Lee, owner of Yellow-Checker Cab Co. in Midland, said the higher rate would give his company a needed shot of financial relief.

He said increases in insurance rates, gasoline prices and the cost of living have spelled economic trouble recently for his taxi service.

"I've had to borrow money to pay the bills," said Lee, who has owned Yellow-Checker since 1978. "It wouldn't be fair if we didn't have a fare increase. That's about the size of it."

Rick Menchaca, assistant to the city manager, said the new rates would be the equivalent of a pay hike for taxi cab personnel.

"In essence, they haven't gotten a raise in eight years," Menchaca said. "It has been hard to keep the city taxi franchises alive. They're a vital part of our business section."

He pointed out that Midland's taxi rate has been lower than rates in other Texas cities. A city survey shows that Odessa cab services charge $4.20 for a three-mile ride, while those in Lubbock charge $4.40 and ones in Dallas charge $4.20.

"The other cities are looking at increasing their rates," Menchaca said. "We're just one of the first cities to enact an increase."

NEW: Commission must petition state lawmakers for court

(From 1B)

A study conducted earlier this year by 142nd District Court Judge Pat M. Baskin shows that the number of criminal cases filed in Midland district courts jumped by 173 percent between 1976 and 1989. Family law cases increased by 80 percent, while civil cases — many of which are now disposed of in county courts — have decreased by 2 percent.

Meanwhile, the number of district courts has remained steady at three since 1977, when the state Legislature created the 238th and the 318th district courts to relieve the case load in the 142nd.

"We have an overload, and that promises to get worse instead of better," Baskin said. "We're having about as many criminal cases filed now as we had at the peak of the boom in 1981 and 1982.

"We are not desperately behind, but on the other hand we have sort of desperately tried to get completely caught up but we are just not able to do it."

Catching up is complicated by the fact that the number of cases filed each month outstrips the number disposed of by trial, settlement or plea bargain.

In August, for example, 165 criminal cases were filed in district court. Some 478 cases carried over from the previous month, for a total of 643 cases on the docket. Records show that of those cases, 161, or 25 percent, had been disposed of by the end of the month.

The month before, only 91 of 569 docketed criminal cases were settled.

Meanwhile, 204 civil actions were filed in district court in August, to bring the total number docketed to 2,167. By the end of the month, 162 had been disposed of, records show.

"The statistics of Midland County, both civil and criminal, justify the (creation) of a fourth district court," said John Hyde, 238th District Court judge.

Attorney H.W. "Woody" Leverett, who tries both civil and criminal cases in district court, said the backlog of cases means a slowdown in the administration of justice.

"Cases seem to settle a lot quicker when there are judges and juries available to hear them," he said, explaining that many felons who claim innocence plead guilty when finally faced with the prospect of going to trial.

Ralph Petty, Midland County assistant district attorney, said he and other prosecutors have been frustrated by the shortage of courtroom space and time.

"There are approximately 1,200 original criminal cases filed in our office each year," he said. "A fourth district court, and an increase in the staff of the district attorney's office, would go a long way towards eliminating the backlog of criminal cases...and improve the quality of justice in Midland County."

Petty said a fourth court is necessary because little can be done to force more cases through the existing courts, even though district courtrooms are often idle.

In his study, Baskin pointed out that improving court efficiency would be difficult because the legal system is designed to dispose of cases in a deliberate and often slow manner. Increased speed would be gained at the expense of fairness, he said.

While Midland's state judges are certain of the need for an additional court, it is the state Legislature which will ultimately decide whether one will be forthcoming.

State Rep. Tom Craddick, R-Midland, said he would be willing to sponsor legislation creating a fourth district court.

"Courts are tough, because of the money, but I think if we can show need we'd be able to get it," he said. The state pays the base salary — $76,309 a year — of Texas' 384 district judges.

Counties, however, must pay the administrative costs involved in maintaining state courts. For that reason, Craddick said, he does not plan to submit a bill for a fourth district court until he receives a request to do so from the Midland County Commissioners Court.

Thursday dance benefits child

Staff Report

The Ben Nix Band is holding a benefit dance Thursday in Stanton for 19 month-old Chad Atchison, who needs a liver transplant.

Atchison

Chad, the grandson of long-time Stanton resident Polly Atchison, suffers from a rare liver disease called glycogen storage type IV, caused by a defective gene inherited from his parents. Without a transplant, doctors have given him three years to live.

The transplant surgery, which has an 80 percent success rate, will be done at Texas Children's Hospital in Houston as soon as Chad is well enough.

The dance will be held at the Martin County Community Center, 301 N. St. Theresa, Stanton, at 9 p.m. The $5 admission fee will be donated to the liver fund.

An account has also been established in Chad's name at the First Banker's Trust and Savings Association, 208 N. St. Peter, Stanton.

Chad is the son of Charles and Darlene Atchison of Abilene.

Ms. Van Hightower would expand the Linked-Deposit Program for providing low-interest loans through Texas banks to small businesses.

Further, she would develop cash management technology for the office that would limit rollover time and maximize the time the treasurer could invest funds.

She said most of these ideas already have been implemented by Treasurer Ann Richards but need development.

"I'll be building on her success and keeping the momentum going."

BANKRUPT: Rochester to file for bankruptcy in mid-November

(From 1B)

Mary Jo Clark.

She testified that Rochester had a net worth of more than $15 million in May but added that he was $7 million in debt by June 30.

Carlson said the discrepancy might be due to errors on Ms. Clark's part in assessing the value of property owned by Rochester.

Under questioning by Blankinship, Ms. Clark said she had no knowledge of secret foreign bank accounts which Rochester might be maintaining.

In an unrelated civil ruling issued earlier Tuesday in Bunton's court, Rochester was ordered to pay about $9.9 million in defaulted loans to the FDIC.

Schick told Bunton the civil ruling was further evidence of his client's inability to repay the $7.2 million.

In other action Tuesday, four people entered guilty pleas before Bunton.

- Alberto Flores-Rodriguez, 44, of Odessa, pleaded guilty to using a telephone to facilitate the distribution of more than two kilograms of cocaine. He faces a maximum of four years in prison and up to a $250,000 fine.
- Jose Aguirre Estrada, 26, of Midland, pleaded guilty to using a telephone to facilitate the distribution of heroin. He faces a maximum of four years in prison and up to a $250,000 fine.
- Lizzie M. Mitchell, 38, of Odessa, pleaded guilty to possession of an altered U.S. treasury obligation — a government check for $192 which had been altered to read $3,192. She faces a maximum sentence of 15 years in prison and a $250,000 fine.
- Nathan Royce Day of Midland pleaded guilty to unlawful possession of a weapon. He faces a maximum sentence of 10 years in prison and a $250,000 fine.

FRIENDS: So far, urge to drink hasn't returned know about such temptations. That's why they suggest to those of us trying to quit that we "avoid old playmates and play places." In other words, they say, "don't put yourself in high-risk situations. Find new friends and new hobbies."

That's easier said than done. And, quite frankly, I haven't always taken their advice to heart. Granted, I don't spend half my life in bars anymore, but, by the same token, I haven't dropped any old friends, either.

Why should I? It wasn't their fault I drank too much. No one ever tied me down and forced Scotch down my throat. It was always my decision to drink and my decision alone. I'm a 38-year-old adult and that means I'm old enough to be held accountable for my own actions.

Besides, those friendships were never based on a common fondness for booze. They went much deeper than that. True, drinking was often a part of our activities, but rarely was it the sole purpose for getting together. It was, so to speak, the icing on the cake. To suddenly disregard people I have known and loved for eight years just because I no longer drink seems a terribly unfair thing to do. And, an overreaction.

To paraphrase Harry Truman, when it comes to my drinking, the buck stops here.

Having said that, however, perhaps the biggest surprise involving my recovery has been the fact that my urges to drink have, in fact, been few and far between. It is as though someone waved a magic wand and made the desire disappear.

It wasn't supposed to be that way.

Everything I was told indicated just the opposite would be true. Visions of me constantly craving alcohol danced in my mind. Would I break into a cold sweat every time the word "Scotch" was mentioned in my presence? Would my car automatically turn into the parking lots of my favorite watering holes? Would I be miserable every time I was around a person who was drinking? Would I be unable to sleep at night without my usual nightcaps?

On and on the questions went.

But so far, the answers have all been a resounding "no."

Of course, that could all change tomorrow. That's why people constantly tell me, "take recovery one day at a time because you never know what tomorrow brings."

That's an important message.

Occasionally the thought — I can never have another drink as long as I live — crosses my mind. It sounds ridiculous, too big to even take seriously. Forever. What a foreboding thought.

What about New Year's Eve, 1999? We'll be entering a new century and I can't drink champagne? You must be kidding.

What about April 9, 1992? I'll turn 40 and must remain sober? Yeah, right.

Or, what if I decide to marry again? Me? Live with a woman and not drink? Give me a break.

Still, that word — forever — keeps creeping back into my thought processes. After all, that's what I'm supposed to be shooting for — total abstinence. "You're only one drink away from being drunk again," I'm repeatedly told.

And, that's where "one day at a time" enters the picture. Worrying about Dec. 31, 1999, boggles the mind. But remaining sober today somehow seems possible.

Then when tomorrow becomes today, I should strive not to drink during that 24-hour period. That's what the program teaches.

Take it one day at a time. Follow the plan, I'm told, and when New Year's Eve, 1999, arrives I'll be prepared.

When I once arched a caustic eyebrow at that "simplistic approach," I was instructed to remember the words of an old Kris Kristofferson song, the one that goes, "Yesterday is dead and gone and tomorrow's out of sight. Help me make through tonight."

"But that's about love," I said.

"True," the person acknowledged. "But it could just as easily be about drinking."

OK, so taking it one day at a time is what I've got to do. No problem. I can handle that. It even makes sense.

But having acknowledged that, still another thought keeps drifting through my mind. Can life be fun without an occasional drink? I don't want to go back to the way things were, mind you, but can't there be a middle ground, an in-between area where moderate drinking is allowed?

I mean, I'm not greedy. I don't want to get blitzed. I would just like to sit around with a few friends and have a drink while enjoying a casual conversation.

No can do, I'm told. The disease of alcoholism doesn't work that way. It is all or nothing. Once an alcoholic starts drinking — even if he sincerely intends to have only "one or two" — he can't stop.

It's so difficult for me to comprehend that theory. It doesn't seem possible. Surely an intelligent individual can determine beforehand how much alcohol he will consume in one sitting and then follow through with that plan.

Yet, everything I have read on the subject — and been told in therapy — contends just the opposite is true. Certain people simply do not have the capability to drink in moderation. It doesn't make them bad, or even weak. They merely have a disease they can't control.

So they — or should I say "we" — have but one alternative — don't drink at all.

Which brings us back to the original point. Is it possible for a heavy drinker to give up the booze and still enjoy life?

Many who fall into the "heavy drinker" category immediately answer "yes." I have heard their arguments often.

"I laugh more," they say, "and it's real laughter, not phony barroom humor." "It's fun to wake up in the morning and remember what happened the night before." "The real joy is being in control of my life again." "I have pride in myself." "I look in the mirror and I like who I see."

And so on and so forth. The people are sincere. I can see it in their eyes.

As for me, the verdict is still out. There's no doubt I feel better. Likewise, I'm proud of myself for trying to sober up. Some people have even told me I look better, that I have fewer wrinkles on my face.

But am I having more fun?

I don't know. I just don't know.

Like everything else associated with alcoholism, only time will tell.

But, meanwhile, I'll take it one day at a time. I have no other choice.

Disc jockey planning Crime Stoppers stunt

By Michael Kashgarian
Staff Writer

KCRS FM-103 disc jockey Craig Stewart plans on just hanging out this weekend — on top of a local building.

Stewart, 31, plans to climb onto the roof of the Permian Cellular Systems building, 3001 W. Cuthbert Ave., at 7:30 a.m. Friday as a fund-raising stunt for Midland High School Crime Stoppers. The man on the building is scheduled to make his decent at noon Saturday.

"I don't plan on coming down till we get that money raised. ... I might be up there a while," Stewart said.

Midland Crime Stoppers is hoping to raise $4,000 for their high school program.

"I just want everybody to come out and contribute what they can whether it's a penny or a $100 ... or $1,000," Stewart said.

A variety of prizes — from gift certificates to hamburgers and deli sandwiches — will be given away to visitors who stop by. In addition, Pepsi Cola will be providing drinks to those who come by.

"I think it's going to be a blast. We'll be going on the air (with live remotes) two or three times an hour every hour I'm up there," Stewart said.

Sgt. Keith Ward, coordinator of Midland Crime Stoppers, said if the event is successful in its money-raising efforts, the High School Crime Stoppers program will have enough funding to last a year or longer.

The school program, like the Midland Crime Stoppers, is based on soliciting citizen tips to solve crimes and offering cash rewards and anonymity.

"What we focus on is crimes that happen on campus — thefts and vandalism and things like that," Ward said.

The program includes all freshman and senior high schools in Midland.

"They (students) can call Crime Stoppers or go through their grade level principal, which they seem to prefer to do," Ward said.

"When a tip is received it is given to the school administration. We want the school to handle it. The only time police will be called in, is if the school feels that is necessary," Ward said.

"We are not trying to change how they (the schools) deal with the problem, we are trying to help them deal with it more effectively," Ward added.

Ward said the program began in the fall of 1989 and is still in the developing stage. "We would really like to get it going," he said.

Area schools have been receptive to the program since its beginning.

"I think there is a very definite need for Crime Stoppers in our high schools," said Jimmie Kelly, principal at Midland High School.

"I don't believe our schools are any different that our community" and therefore what works in the community (Crime Stoppers) has a place in the schools, Kelly said.

"We are very much in support of Crime Stoppers and it has worked in our school," he added.

COURT: More space likely in future

(From 2B)

Budget figures show that in 1989, the average cost to the county for maintaining a district court — including pay supplements for judges and bailiffs' and secretaries' salaries — was $91,382.

Precinct 3 Commissioner Louisa Valencia said that in light of the cost, Midland's judges might have to settle for more courtroom space without the immediate addition of a fourth permanent judge.

She said additional courtrooms created during courthouse renovations, which are expected to take two years to complete, could be used to accommodate visiting judges.

But Guy McCrary, Precinct 2 commissioner, said he expected commissioners to petition for a fourth district judge during the next regular legislative session in January.

"It's not going to happen simply because the commissioners court of Midland County tells the Legislature we want a new district court," he said. "The Legislature would have to be convinced of the need."

The blaze at 817 Autumn Ave. caused extensive damage to the living room, kitchen and two bedrooms of the home, officials said.

An electrical heater too close to a sofa was determined as the cause of the fire.

No injuries were reported.

Man sentenced for 'ice' possession

Staff Report

PECOS — A federal judge Monday sentenced a California man to 248 months in prison on charges stemming from his possession of more than 10 pounds of crystallized methamphetamine, also known as "ice."

Assistant U.S. Attorney William W. Torrey said authorities arrested the man, Richard D. Tomblinson of Arroyo Grande, Calif., at the Sierra Blanca U.S. Border Patrol checkpoint in Hudspeth County on May 20.

Tomblinson, 54, and 39-year-old James P. Shrauger were carrying the drugs, two pistols and $10,000 cash in a van owned by Tomblinson's daughter, Torrey said.

Both men bonded out of jail shortly after their arrest and went to Arizona, where Tomblinson reportedly asked Shrauger's help in obtaining chemicals to manufacture methamphetamines.

By this time, Torrey said, Shrauger was cooperating with the U.S. Drug Enforcement Administration (DEA). In late June, he reported Tomblinson's activities to authorities.

Based on information Shrauger provided, the DEA and the Arizona Department of Public Safety arrested Tomblinson in what Torrey described as the "largest methamphetamine bust in Arizona history."

Charges are pending against Tomblinson in Arizona, but authorities returned him to Texas to face charges stemming from the Sierra Blanca arrest.

He pleaded guilty on Aug. 28 in Pecos to one count of possession of a controlled substance with intent to distribute and one count of using a firearm in a drug transaction.

Judge Lucius D. Bunton III sentenced him Monday to 188 months on the first count and 60 months on the second, with the terms to be served consecutively.

He faced a maximum sentence of life in prison and a $1 million fine.

Shrauger, meanwhile, pleaded guilty on Aug. 27 to misprison of, or failure to report, a felony. Bunton sentenced him Monday to three years probation and fined him $10,000, Torrey said.

"Tomblinson had bragged to Shrauger while they were in custody that he had been manufacturing methamphetamines for the past 20 years," Torrey said.

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: Careful business decisions will produce terrific results in the months just ahead. Welcome the offer of a leadership position in November: a substantial raise could follow. Even if an economic slowdown hurts profits this winter, an unexpected financial windfall could come your way early in 1991. A commonsense approach to diet and health resolutions is essential. A change of attitude next April will enhance love and marriage. Focus on creative work during the summer of '91.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: actress Helen Hayes, actors Ben Vereen and Richard Jaeckel, jazz legend Thelonius Monk.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Business opportunities abound now. Move ahead with greater confidence to make important deals. Refuse to let anyone interfere with your plans. The spotlight is on your ambition and prestige.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Your personal finances should be looking up! News from distant shores could be the cause. Recognize your limitations as well as your strengths. A sense of humor is your best ally.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Distant affairs are easier to handle today. Be more assertive about your professional plans. Others will gladly follow where you lead. Your charisma fascinates a member of the opposite sex.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Steer clear of difficult-to-please higher-ups or troublesome neighbors. Recent tensions will fade soon. New work programs prove interesting. Replace bad habits with good ones.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Someone may be trying to swim in two directions at once, not really knowing what they want out of life. Try not to dwell on an unkept promise. Seek new recreational outlets.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): False friends and "takers" leave a funny feeling in the solar plexus. Spend time with someone you can really trust. Think about embarking on a short period of training, study or research.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Once your mind is made up, there is no stopping you! Plant the seeds for what you want. Put your desires in writing after talking them out. Use private sources and inside information wisely.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Your own intuition is far more accurate than rumors or glorified reports. Certain individuals may be depending on friends instead of taking responsibility for their own financial security.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Be patient if delays or obstacles arise in connection with negotiations. An either-or attitude could destroy good relations and block harmonious flow today. Schedule a business trip.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Take responsibility for your own mistakes and triumphs. Surround yourself with upbeat people! Seek prompt professional attention for any health problems.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Display your talents to best possible advantage. Group gatherings are highlighted later today. Rise above petty arguments. Emotional maturity is a must. Teasing someone could boomerang.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Focus on an important personal goal. Get in touch with people who are highly placed. Financial extravagance remains a temptation; resist. Nurture a close relationship.

"I never hold any cards," is a constant complaint at the bridge table. Little do the carpers realize that being dealt too many high cards can be as pernicious an affliction as having too few. This hand illustrates our point.

Holding a five-card major suit is not, in itself, sufficient reason to shun opening one no trump. That action best described South's hand, and after a Stayman two-club inquiry, North-South landed in the perfectly normal contract of four spades.

Declarer won the opening club lead in hand, drew trumps ending in hand and tried the heart finesse. That lost and a heart was returned. Declarer eventually had to tackle diamonds, and as the cards lay there was no way to avoid losing three tricks in the suit. Down one.

Here was a typical case of having too good a hand. Had dummy held any heart other than the queen, declarer would not have had a finesse to blind him to the winning line.

After drawing trumps, declarer should have cashed out the club suit, discarding a heart from the board, and then played the ace and queen of hearts, spurning the finesse. South doesn't care which defender holds the king of hearts. That defender must capture the queen and then is faced with losing alternatives. A heart or club continuation will allow declarer to ruff on the table while sluffing a diamond from the closed hand. And if the defender elects to break diamonds, declarer's losers in the suit are automatically limited to two.

Lennon's 'Imagine' played to mark his 50th birthday

NEW YORK (AP) — John Lennon's worldwide message of peace was delivered Tuesday as his song "Imagine" was played simultaneously for 1 billion people in 130 countries to celebrate what would have been his 50th birthday.

"A dream we dream alone is only a dream, but the dream we dream together is reality. Happy birthday, John. The world is better today for sharing a time with you," Yoko Ono said at a United Nations ceremony before the playing of "Imagine."

The slain former Beatle himself issued a call for harmony in a taped message that served as an introduction to the music.

"We all want peace, whatever sort of job we have. ... Think of your children. Do you want them to be killed or don't you? And that's the choice we have in front of us. War or peace," said Lennon, whose son Sean turned 15 Tuesday.

None of the other Beatles were at the United Nations, but a tribute came from Lennon's old songwriting partner, Paul McCartney, who released a live version of the Beatles' tune "Birthday." The song, originally on the "White Album," was the first Lennon-McCartney single released since the Beatles broke up in 1969.

"The release date and John's birthday is just a happy coincidence, but it's also a nod and a wink to my old mate," said McCartney, 47.

Other observances were held elsewhere from Liverpool to Los Angeles. In Lennon's hometown in England, fans gathered at the former site of the Cavern Club, where the Beatles were discovered.

On the West Coast, about 50 people — part of an estimated 1 billion people worldwide who had access to the event — stood near Lennon's star on the Walk of Fame and listened to the "Imagine" broadcast.

NEW YORK (AP) — The muse has overtaken Marilyn Quayle, wife of Vice President Dan Quayle, and flown her imagination to Havana.

Quayle

Mrs. Quayle has just completed her first novel, a story about the quest for control of Cuba after the death of Fidel Castro, according to the latest issue of New York magazine.

Written with her sister, Nancy Northcott, the manuscript tentatively titled "The Rage of the Lamb," is making the rounds of some publishers, the magazine said.

Details of the Mrs. Quayle's literary effort were as hard to come by as a good Cuban cigar in the United States.

Robert Barnett, Quayle's lawyer, told the magazine: "I have been working on a project with Mrs. Quayle and Nancy Northcott, but I'm not prepared to discuss it at this time."

IRVINE, Calif. (AP) — Folk singer Judy Collins says she's enjoying renewed interest in her career and having as much fun recording, writing and singing as she did at the height of her popularity in the 1960s and '70s.

Miss Collins was scheduled to perform Tuesday at the University of California, Irvine.

Collins

Best known for her renditions of "Both Sides Now" and "Amazing Grace," the performer's recordings on the Elektra label are being reissued on CDs. She also has a new album, "Fires of Eden."

Even the association Miss Collins had with the peace movement two decades ago is continuing with her current involvement in social issues. She recently performed at a New York rally for African National Congress leader Nelson Mandela.

"I went to sing for Mandela this year and Tracy Chapman was there," she said in an interview published Monday in the Orange County Register. "It felt good to be linking arms with the present."

EUGENE, Ore. (AP) — To honor the memory of his son Jed, author Ken Kesey went where he'd expect to find him.

The Kesey family gathered early Monday on Mount Pisgah for installation of a bronze sculpture by Peter Helzer.

The artwork commissioned by the family commemorates the lives of Jed Kesey and Lorenzo West, teammates on the University of Oregon wrestling team. They died six years ago when a team van plunged off an icy Washington highway.

The surface of the 40-inch-high sculpture is a relief map of mountains, rivers and towns in the Eugene area. Supporting it are three bronze columns depicting Oregon's geologic history with images of fossils.

The family selected the mountaintop after Kesey's daughter, Sunshine, asked him where they might go to meet Jed if "somehow we were to die and go into some kind of limbo."

"I had this flash," said Kesey, who wrote "One Flew Over the Cuckoo's Nest" and "Sometimes a Great Notion." "And then I knew that if we were going to meet somewhere, Jed would know to meet me up here on Mount Pisgah."

Gas tax drops in Senate plan

STATE

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Lloyd Bentsen is proposing a lower increase in the gasoline tax, congressional aides said Tuesday. The move should help Texans and others in states where driving long distances is a way of life.

Bentsen, the Texas Democrat who chairs the tax-writing Senate Finance Committee, will present his ideas to the panel Wednesday morning.

The budget outline Congress passed Monday asks the committee and the House Ways and Means Committee to find up to $150 billion in new revenues to help trim the deficit by $500 billion over the next five years.

The original budget written by congressional leaders, including Bentsen, and administration officials would have raised the gasoline tax next year by 12 cents a gallon. Using 1988 consumption figures, the tax hike would have cost a typical driver in South and West states $125.52 annually.

Bentsen's proposal reduces the increase to 9 cents per gallon. That costs the typical driver in South and West states $94.14 each year.

The difference comes from dropping a 2-cent per gallon tax on all petroleum products, including home heating oil, and cutting a penny per gallon from the gasoline tax.

The original budget package was rejected by the House of Representatives early Friday, triggering a chaotic weekend of disagreement between Congress and President Bush that caused a temporary shutdown of the government.

The new budget outline contains the same deficit-reduction goals, but gives congressional committees power to make the specific spending cuts and tax increases.

Aides said Bentsen also agreed to accept the president's capital-gains tax cut in exchange for raising income-tax rates on wealthier Americans.

President Bush told reporters Tuesday that he would go for such a deal. But congressional Republicans later in the day told him not to.

At a late-afternoon meeting, Sen. Bob Packwood, R-Ore., said, "We all put up our hands and said, 'No deal on (tax) rates at all.' He (Bush) just acquiesced in it."

Packwood is the ranking Republican on the Senate Finance Committee.

The fight between Democrats and Republicans over capital gains has been a major impediment to completion of a deficit-reduction plan this year.

Ex-LULAC chief indicted for assault

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Hispanic rights activist Tony Bonilla was indicted Tuesday in the alleged sexual assault of a 22-year-old "friend of the family.".

Bonilla, former president of the League of United Latin American Citizens, turned himself into Bexar County authorities at about 1:30 p.m. Tuesday, said Anthony Nicholas, Bonilla's attorney.

"I would say only that he is innocent of the charges," Nicholas told the Associated Press. "And he will plead absolutely not guilty (at arraignment)."

Bonilla, a Corpus Christi native, was released on a $10,000 personal recognizance bond, Nicholas said.

The victim, Nicholas said, was a close friend of one of Bonilla's daughters.

Bonilla is accused of forcing the woman to have sex with him in a San Antonio-area motel room on May 5.

Bonilla served as national LULAC president from 1981 to 1983 and ran unsuccessfully for Corpus Christi mayor in 1987.

He is chairman of the Corpus Christi Chamber of Commerce, the first Hispanic to head the more than 2,000-member organization.

Southern Baptist judge inspires rapture, wrath

DALLAS (AP) — Depending on which Baptist faction a person belongs to, H. Paul Pressler is a fundamentalist hero or hound.

Pressler's role in the takeover of the Southern Baptist Convention has placed the otherwise obscure state judge at the forefront of controversy. And different people use different terms to describe him.

To Paige Patterson, president of Criswell College in Dallas, Pressler "is a man who is absolutely brilliant, a consistent personal soul winner, a great preacher, and one of the most generous people I've ever known in my life.

"He's a man of God's word and a man of impeccable integrity."

But Abner McCall, former president of Baylor University, sees Pressler in a less favorable light.

"If I ordered up a carload of intolerant, religious bigots, and they sent me Paul Pressler, I would regard that as fulfillment of the contract," McCall told the Dallas Times Herald.

Pressler, who serves on the 14th Court of Appeals, receives most of the credit and blame for using secular-style politics to engineer the takeover of the national convention.

Although he realized a long-held desire to purge "the liberals" and impose a creed of strict, literal reading of the Bible, he still faces stiff criticism.

In conservative political circles, Pressler is well-known through his directorship on the Council for National Policy and his many Washington contacts.

A year ago, Pressler, 60, was on the verge of being nominated by President Bush to head the Office of Government Ethics when information provided to the FBI — but never publicly disclosed — may have ruined his chances.

"There was no disqualifying information in the FBI probe," said Pressler. He said he declined the federal post for family reasons.

The judge, a graduate of Phillips Exeter Academy of New Hampshire, Princeton University and the University of Texas law school, says he can't understand the intense sentiments he provokes.

"Perhaps they had to have some bogeyman to attack," he said.

After Princeton and law school at UT, Pressler came back to Houston to practice law. It was during those years that he allegedly made a remark that defined his mission within the church.

"He said in 1963 that he was going to get rid of liberals (in the Southern Baptist Convention) or split it. And he certainly did (split) it, only there aren't any liberals to be found," said John Baugh, a Houston businessman active in Baptist affairs.

Pressler denies making the remark.

But in 1979 Pressler helped launch a campaign to remodel the Southern Baptist Convention. The takeover relied on using the largely honorific office of the presidency to place fundamentalists on the boards of the convention's agencies and seminaries.

The following year, Pressler pushed to have fundamentalist trustees put on boards of all Southern Baptist institutions.

The moderates were unable to effectively combat Pressler's tireless campaign, and year after year suffered more defeats.

Although the long conflict took a toll on Pressler's personal and professional life, he said he did what had to be done.

"I think everything's been accomplished," he said. "I know of no other method that would have rectified the problems."

Errant church voted into fold

FORT WORTH (AP) — The pastor of the First Baptist Church of Fort Worth says the vote by the Tarrant Baptist Association to allow the church to return to the Southern Baptist fold shows that it belongs, despite a tumultuous past.

The Rev. Bill Ramsey said Monday night's vote pleased him and sent "a signal that First Baptist is wanted by the association," which kicked the church out 65 years ago because of fiery fundamentalist J. Frank Norris.

The 2,000-member church, located in suburban Haltom City, has now been granted the right to return on probationary status.

The Rev. Bill Smith, pastor of Bellevue Baptist Church, who spoke in favor of allowing the church to return, said Ramsey had told him his reason for joining was to become part of an evangelistic and cooperative denomination.

During a meeting attended by about 900 people at North Fort Worth Baptist Church, two people spoke in favor of allowing the church to return and two spoke against.

Only the church representatives, known as "messengers," were allowed to vote. No vote count was announced, but leaders said the vote was "overwhelmingly" in favor of granting "watchcare" status to the church for one year. At that time, the church can apply for permanent membership.

Norris began his attacks against what he considered liberal Baptist leaders nearly 70 years ago. He died in 1952 and was a controversial figure, both revered and hated.

In the 1930s, Norris was acquitted in the slaying of a critic and of charges he burned down his church.

The church, founded in 1867, split with the Southern Baptist denomination in the 1920s and 1930s. It became the "mother church" of Norris' fundamentalist movement.

The Tarrant Baptist Association first ousted the church in 1922, later reinstated it and then kicked the church out in 1925.

The movement headed by Norris spawned independent Baptist churches, colleges, seminaries and Bible schools throughout the nation.

Baptists who opposed allowing the church to be allowed to return said they were concerned it would add to the divisiveness already present in the denomination between fundamentalists and moderates.

Proposed insurance hike alarms Lewis

AUSTIN (AP) — The State Board of Insurance said Tuesday it will reopen a public hearing on homeowners' insurance rates after House Speaker Gib Lewis said he was "alarmed" by a proposed increase of almost 16 percent.

In a letter to the Insurance Board, Lewis, D-Fort Worth, said, "I call upon the State Board of Insurance to take additional steps to ensure ratepayers are afforded the protection and fairness they deserve."

Moments later, the Insurance Board issued a statement saying, "it would be appropriate to grant Speaker Lewis' request."

The Insurance Board was scheduled to meet Oct. 22 to consider the new property insurance rates, but said it will use that meeting to take additional testimony on the rate-setting method.

The board's staff has recommended the 15.8 percent increase.

Texas cotton farmers brace for killer chill

LUBBOCK (AP) — A freeze could paralyze 25 percent of the nation's cotton in its final stages before harvest, said Panhandle farmers.

They were bracing Tuesday for the freeze that could bring economic hardship to the region.

"We can't afford to have a freeze this early," said Don Johnson, executive vice president of the Plains Cotton Growers.

"If we had a hard killing freeze, it would affect the quality and yield of the cotton. We were expecting 2.6 million bales. But we would have to bring that number down."

Rains, heavy winds and cold temperatures were expected to reach as far south as the Rio Grande Valley, according to the National Weather Service.

'It would certainly be much better if we could get another couple weeks in.'

— Don Johnson, Plains Cotton Growers

Johnson said a freeze would stop the cotton from maturing, thus keeping the fibers from reaching their full size or strength.

"If the fiber is not mature, the freeze stops the growth dead in its tracks," Johnson said. "You will have fiber that weighs less and of lower quality."

Johnson said it would be hard to estimate how many bales would be affected by the drop in temperature.

"A good deal of the crop is fairly well along," Johnson said. "It would be difficult to estimate what the loss would be. It would certainly be much better if we could get another couple weeks in."

Fullwood traded

GREEN BAY, Wis. (AP) — Brent Fullwood's often disappointing career with the Green Bay Packers ended Tuesday when the team traded the former No. 1 pick to the Cleveland Browns for a future draft choice.

Had the Packers been unable to trade Fullwood, he would have been waived, Coach Lindy Infante said Monday night.

"I'm not sure what we do totally fits Brent Fullwood's talent and the things he does," Infante said Tuesday. "We need a running back we can put on the field and leave on the field for the duration and be productive."

Foyt recovering

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — A still-pained but somewhat mellowed A.J. Foyt has a different perspective on life from a wheelchair. And maybe that's why, at age 55, he isn't ready to retire.

"Life's short," he said Tuesday at Methodist Hospital, where he is recovering from the most serious injuries of his racing career. "I see people down the hall who are a hell of a lot worse off than I am.

"So I figure myself very lucky," said the four-time Indianapolis 500 winner.

Foyt, who has won a record 67 Indy-car races, as well as seven NASCAR stock car events and seven sports car endurance races, suffered severe leg and foot injuries in a crash Sept. 23 in an Indy-car road race at Elkhart Lake, Wis.

His brake failed at a turn on the Road America course and his car went into a dirt barrier with such force it had to be cut open to pry him loose.

A's one game from pennant

■ Oakland became the 18th team to take a 3-0 lead in a postseason series Tuesday with a 4-1 win over the Boston Red Sox.

Associated Press

OAKLAND, Calif. — Same Boston start, same Oakland finish.

The A's again won with ease, and are on the verge of another sweep after a 4-1 victory Tuesday in the American League playoffs.

If this all looks familiar, it is. For the third straight game, the Red Sox took an early lead and for the third straight game, it wasn't enough.

"They're the best team in the world," Boston manager Joe Morgan said. "I've been saying that for a few years."

Willie Randolph, filling in for injured Walt Weiss, had a pair of RBI singles and Dave Henderson made the most of his first start with a sacrifice fly as the Athletics became the 18th team to take a 3-0 lead in a postseason series. Every other team won, 13 by sweeps and that includes Oakland, which swept Boston in the 1988 playoffs and won last year's World Series over San Francisco in four straight.

Oakland will try Wednesday to advance to the World Series for the third straight season when it sends Dave Stewart against Roger Clemens in a rematch of Game 1 starters. The New York Yankees of 1976-78 were the last to do it.

"We've played the best for a long time," Oakland manager Tony La Russa said. "In most of our games, our starting pitching has been great and our relievers have been excellent. I think today was very typical."

Mike Moore, who struggled most of the season, shut down Boston on one run on four hits for six innings. Then it was time for Oakland's bullpen, which has not allowed a run.

Dennis Eckersley pitched the ninth for his second save of the series and his nine career playoff saves and 10 in the postseason are both records.

The Red Sox have lost nine straight, and their seventh consecutive playoff defeat set a record.

Mike Boddicker pitched well in defeat as the Red Sox again wasted another strong effort by a starter. Boddicker gave up just six singles, but three errors, three walks and two hit batters hurt him. In this game, Boston's bullpen didn't get a chance to blow it.

The Red Sox were 56-21 when scoring first in games during the regular season, but are 0-3 in the last week. Tom Brunansky's sacrifice fly put Boston ahead in the second, but the Red Sox could not extend it; instead, they extended their hitless streak with runners on base to 17 at-bats in the series.

Henderson's sacrifice fly and Randolph's single in the fourth put Oakland ahead and the Athletics added two more in the sixth on an error by shortstop Luis Rivera and another by catcher Tony Pena, who had the ball jarred loose from his mitt by Terry Steinbach.

The Athletics still have not hit a home run — Boston's Wade Boggs has the only one of the series. Of Oakland's 32 hits in the series, 29 are singles, and they have been enough.

Maybe if this game had been back at Fenway Park, it might have been different.

Jody Reed hit the second pitch of the game three feet foul at the 330-foot mark in left field — at Fenway, it might have stayed fair and bounced off the wall. Reed later hit a long drive that would have been off the Green Monster, but instead was caught.

From the start, the crowd sensed another A's victory. Oakland was 51-30 at home this year, so it wasn't so unexpected.

Lady Rebels hold off Cooper

■ Midland Lee's volleyball team moves its district record to 4-4 with a two-game win over Abilene Cooper Tuesday.

By Bill Price
Staff Writer

Midland Lee kept its volleyball playoff hopes alive Tuesday, as the Lady Rebels defeated Abilene Cooper 15-0, 15-11 to stay within two games of second place with four matches to play.

The wins makes Lee 4-4 in District 4-5A play (5-11 overall), while the Lady Cougars fell to 1-7 and 5-16. In other 4-5A matches Tuesday, Abilene High defeated Midland High 16-14, 15-11; San Angelo dropped Odessa High 15-2, 15-9; and Odessa Permian won a non-district affair over San Angelo Lakeview, 15-4, 15-8.

The MHS loss leaves Permian in sole possession of the district lead with a 6-1 record, while the Lady Bulldogs and AHS are both 6-2.

After the Lady Rebs cruised in the first game by jumping out to a 9-0 lead with Melina Milan serving, the Lady Cougars had five offensive opportunities. But Lee was always able to turn back the Cooper serves, and scored in bunches of two, three and one.

Cooper fought back and led Game 2 by a 2-0 margin. Lee returned the favor, though, and took a 5-3 edge. But the two teams continually failed to take advantage of service opportunities, as the game was marked by 41 sideouts and tied scores on seven occasions.

However, Lady Rebel head coach Elise Wheat showed

Reds dust Bucs

Associated Press

PITTSBURGH — The Cincinnati Reds' potent combination of power, pitching and defense has them one victory from their first World Series in 14 years.

The Reds beat the Pittsburgh Pirates 5-3 Tuesday night to take a 3-1 lead in the National League playoffs.

"When we were going good early in the season this is how we won games," manager Lou Piniella said. "The Pirates came back from being 3-1 down in 1979 so I'm sure their fans know it can be done. But we're in the position we want to be."

The Reds can win their first NL pennant since 1976 — when they were known as the Big Red Machine — on Wednesday night if left-hander Tom Browning can beat 22-game winner Doug Drabek in Game 5.

Passion remains for Permian vs. Lee

Barring a court reversal of penalties handed out by the University Interscholastic League to Odessa Permian, Friday night's game between Midland Lee and old Mojo just doesn't have much significance.

Williamson

After all, Permian can not share in district honors or playoff glory this year. In other words, you don't have to beat Odessa Permian to win the District 4-5A championship in this weird year of 1990.

Beating Permian is a usual "must" if you want to win the 4-5A crown. That always goes without saying. So, 1990 will be the year of aberration in this storied district. There is no question about that.

This should be the year that 4-5A attention switches to the Midland High-Odessa High game over in Ratliff Stadium. That's where the story of significance is taking place. That's the big game.

But West Texas' fanatical football public never got the message. The Lee-Permian series is still the framework to measure all seasons. H.G. "Buzz" Bissinger's "Friday Night Lights" didn't change the hunger for this meeting. UIL penalties against Mojo didn't decrease the hunger for tickets that disappeared last August. The UIL's three teams to the playoffs didn't switch attention to other directions.

Lee vs. Permian is still the social event of the year. Just owning tickets to this game places you in high community standing. With UIL penalties, other allegations in the hopper and court proceedings aside, West Texas embraces the meetings between the Rebels and Panthers. That means the public will take the ills, warts and scandal in stride — as long as it doesn't ruin "The Game."

That game comes Friday in a sold out Memorial Stadium with a Cable News Network (CNN) crew on hand to give the nation one more look at the Permian woes and mystique. All over a game that means little other than the fact that Midland Lee is facing Odessa Permian.

Many will take this profound love as another misguided West Texas priority. Others will just shake their heads in disbelief. But the passion remains, and let's face it, the public wants Lee vs. Permian to be its showcase. For now, it's the way things are.

In fact, Permian's woes with the UIL have done little to shake interest in District 4-5A football. It is interesting to note that an estimated 53,500 fans saw District 4-5A teams play football two weeks ago in the district openers.

It may be that those who have lost so many games to the Permian machine are celebrating the 1990 fall of Mojo. It may be that the three-team to the playoffs' concept has given more teams and fans hope with Permian out of the race. Maybe, it's just a sad case of many fans wanting to watch a team fight through its misery. We know that mentality exists because TV's "Current Affair" has a significant audience. We seem to love hearing and seeing other people's problems.

What can't be denied, however, is the fact that West Texans, outside of Odessa, just like to see Permian get beat. And Lee's Rebels have been the only team in the district which seems to have any consistent run at victory against Permian.

The eyes of the nation, past and present, always seem to shift to this game. There are times when you wish those eyes would turn elsewhere. But in high school football, this is as big as it gets — warts and all.

ALCS: Crowd sensed victory from start

From 1C

By the sixth inning, the fans were chanting "Sweep! Sweep!" Later in the inning, when Morgan came out to the mound to talk to a troubled Boddicker, many in the crowd pointed at Boston's beleaguered bullpen and jeered.

The Athletics' second straight victory by a 4-1 margin increased its scoring edge in the series to 17-3. Oakland has also outhit the Red Sox 32-19.

Those numbers sound impressive, and they are. But the dominance they also indicate is misleading.

The Red Sox have not been blown out. They led 1-0 into the seventh inning of Game 1 and were down only 2-1 after seven innings in Game 2.

This time, Boston brought the tying run to plate in the eighth, but Mike Greenwell flied to deep center field on Rick Honeycutt's first pitch, ending the inning with two runners on base.

Harold Baines, who drove in three runs in Game 2, scored two in this one. After Jose Canseco led off the fourth with a single, Baines singled and they pulled a double steal as Mark McGwire struck out.

Henderson, playing in place of Willie McGee, tied it with a fly ball and Randolph singled with two outs.

An error by Rivera put Baines on base to start the sixth and Henderson was hit by a pitch.

NLCS: Drabek vs. Browing in Game 5

From 1C

Chris Sabo, in a 2-for-13 slump, snapped a 2-2 tie with a two-run homer in the seventh inning off Bob Walk, the winner in Game 1 at Cincinnati. Jose Rijo, the Reds' ace, pitched like it Tuesday night as he gave up six hits and three runs in seven-plus innings.

"Lou and (coach) Tony (Perez) worked with me on my swing before the game," Sabo said. "It was just a little adjustment."

Jay Bell chased Rijo when he led off the eighth inning with a home run to make it 4-3. Randy Myers finished the eighth but he wasn't quite as nasty as usual.

After Myers got Andy Van Slyke to fly out, Bobby Bonilla hit a hard drive off the center-field wall just above the glove of Billy Hatcher. Eric Davis came over from left field to field the carom and made a terrific one-hop throw to nail Bonilla trying to stretch it into a triple. Barry Bonds followed with a single and stole second, but Sid Bream struck out leaving the Pirates 5-for-34 with runners in scoring position in the series.

"Bonilla's ball looked like a 1-iron going out there," Piniella said. "Davis made a great play in being alert to get to the ball."

It's not really a surprise, though. Davis is a Gold Glove winner in center field who moved over to left in August to rest his sore knees.

"This team can win in a lot of ways and I think we're getting hot again at the bat," Davis said. "This could be fun."

Rob Dibble came on in the ninth and shut down the Pirates for the third save in the series by the relievers known as The Nasty Boys. Pittsburgh is 0-for-15 against Dibble with 10 strikeouts. In 12 1-3 innings against Myers, Dibble and Norm Charlton, the Pirates have scored one run and struck out 15 times.

"Everytime we got in hot water this season we came out of it," said Bonds, who is in a 5-for-39 slump.

Bonds better not count on the Nasty Boys throwing the Pirates any life jackets.

"If we have the lead by the sixth inning the Pirates start thinking about us," Dibble said. "But Drabek won't be easy to beat."

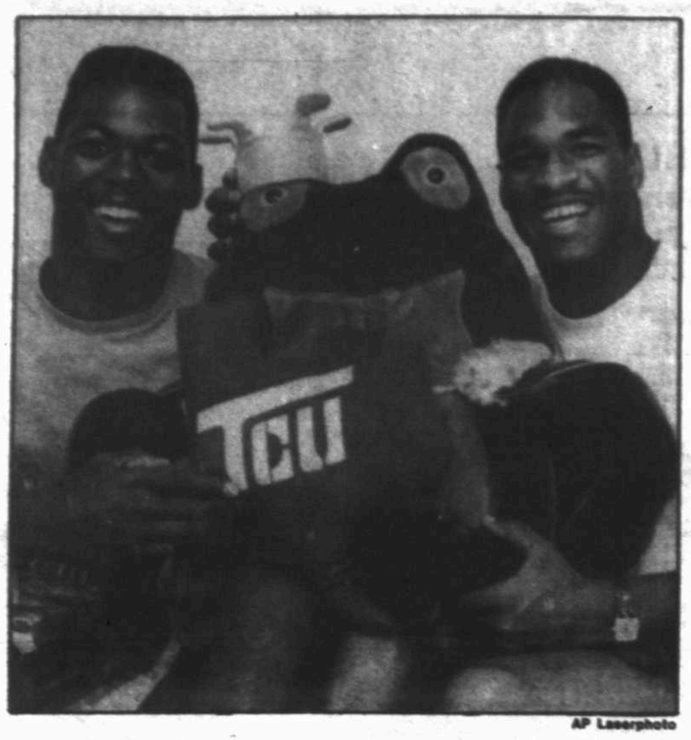
The Reds won their fifth straight game at Three Rivers Stadium, including the last three games of a series in August.

The fans showed up in greater numbers for Game 4 and the Pirates showed their appreciation by taking a 1-0 lead in the first inning.

A less than enthusiastic crowd of 45,611 showed up for the Reds' 6-3 victory on Monday, eight thousand less than the Steelers drew for Sunday's game against San Diego. Tuesday night's game drew 50,461 and there were only small pockets of empty seats in the upper deck in center field. There was also a lot more noise.

Sabo caused some of the crowd to get up and leave when he homered down the left-field line.

Wonder Frogs back?



AP Laserphoto

For the second straight week, TCU quarterback Leon Clay (left) was named the Associated Press Offensive Player of the Week. And safety Tony Rand is the Defensive Player of the Week after blocking a punt and recovering it for a TD in the Frogs' 54-26 win over Arkansas.

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — It's not deja vu all over again for Frog football. It's worse.

"Incredible," says Jim Wacker, Texas Christian's delightfully neurotic coach. In fact, he said it 17 times Tuesday while describing last weekend's 54-26 upset of 21st-ranked Arkansas.

Maybe the only two things that weren't "incredible" were the Horned Frog offense and defense.

They were "fantastic" and "unbelievable."

And the largest Frog Club crowd of the year loved it. They roared over phony congratulatory notes from Richard Nixon, Ronald Reagan and George Bush and cheered the discovery of a new species of Horned Frog.

It is something called "Kickus Buttus."

Wacker never met a superlative he didn't embrace, but what's really incredible is that he may be right. The Wonder Frogs just might be back.

For the first time since the 8-3 Bluebonnet Bowl season of 1984, TCU is off to a 4-1 start, winning four in a row after a season-opening loss to Washington State.

It was also in 1984 that TCU last beat Arkansas, a 32-31 thriller.

The Frogs are 2-0 in Southwest Conference play, which hasn't happened since 1958 when they wound up in the Cotton Bowl.

And as Wacker says, the ambush in the Ozarks Saturday night was no fluke.

"It was one of those games where it all came together," he said. "But never in my wildest dreams did I think it would come together like that. We got the ball 10 times. We scored five touchdowns and four field goals and had to punt only once.

"That's incredible."

Equally remarkable, he said, was a defense that blocked a punt for a touchdown.

LEE: Lady Rebs run out of subs little concern, and did not call a time out until just before match point.

"I wasn't real sure we were going to pull it out. But we were trying a new rotation, that's one of the reasons I wasn't real concerned, and playing people in positions they really weren't used to. Maybe that made it seem we weren't as intense," Wheat said.

In addition to to playing an irregular rotation, Wheat found herself in short supply of people to substitute into the game as it wore on. As is the case in most volleyball matches, Lee substituted early and often with each service change.

However, the three-substitution rule came into play late in Game 2, forcing Wheat to leave players out of position.

"We had to have Tekeira Strambler and Tiffany Grafa serving, and we had Jenna Jones up front. They usually don't play there but did a good job. We've only had one other match where the three-substitution rule came into play (against San Angelo). But it's good to have this type of match where we can get the experience all the way around the rotation," she said.

"Actually, it very rarely happens (that the rule becomes a concern), and I always panic when it does. But all our kids are capable of playing every position, they're just stronger in other areas.

"Hopefully, the win will put our minds back on volleyball. We've been in a semi-slump (having lost their two previous matches), so maybe this will make a difference."

In junior varsity play, Cooper dropped Lee 17-15, 15-13.

Gibbs puts no stock in OU's high ranking

NORMAN, Okla. (AP) — If rankings are to be believed, No. 4 Oklahoma is a far better team than unranked Texas. Oklahoma coach Gary Gibbs, though, doesn't put much stock in rankings.

"I think Texas is the best team we've played to date and will be one of the best we'll play all year," Gibbs said Tuesday at his weekly media luncheon. "I think Texas can play with anybody in the country.

"You go look at their lineup, and they're playing with experienced players, physically gifted players, highly recruited players," he said.

The Longhorns are 2-1, with victories over Penn State and Rice and a loss to Colorado. Oklahoma is 5-0 after a 31-17 victory last weekend over Oklahoma State. The Sooners have played two games against teams that were ranked at the time, UCLA and Pittsburgh, and won both easily.

Gibbs believes this is the best Texas team since 1983.

"They have some great players on their defensive unit," he said, singling out linebacker Brian Jones, safety Stanley Richard and end Oscar Giles.

On offense, he said, the Longhorns' ability to run the ball with Phil Brown and Adrian Walker makes them more balanced and therefore more difficult to defend. Brown is averaging 89 yards rushing per game, Walker 51 per game.

The one-hour, 45-minute operation was performed at the Santa Barbara Cottage Hospital by Dr. Richard Scheinberg, an orthopedic surgeon who specializes in sports medicine.

The operation reconstructed the extensor tendon in Connors' left wrist, Scheinberg said.

Connors, a five-time U.S. Open winner and twice a Wimbledon champion, will have his wrist in a cast for six weeks, according to the doctor, followed by a rehabilitation program.

"I would like to see him play not before the middle of January or the end of January. It depends on how the rehab program goes," Scheinberg said.

The 38-year-old left-hander hurt his wrist in a first-round match in Milan, Italy, in February. The injury occurred at 5-5 in the third set when Connors tried to return a powerful serve of Markus Zoecke of West Germany.

"It was probably one incident that tore it," Scheinberg said.

After a Milan tournament doctor bandaged his wrist, Connors lost the 11th game, then changed his game by using soft backhands and drop shots to climb unexpectedly to 6-6. But he eventually lost the match.

Connors didn't play again until the WCT Tournament of Champions in New York the week before the U.S. Open in August. Because of the wrist and the fact he was out of shape, he pulled out of the U.S. Open and didn't play in a sanctioned tournament until a few weeks ago.

Last week, he was a first-round loser to Ronald Agenor of Haiti in an ATP Tour event in Toulouse, France.

Chaps take on cohesive look

By Jimmy Patterson
Assistant Sports Editor

The new-look Midland College Chaparral basketball team demonstrated its new-found philosophy for a handful of fans at Chaparral Center Tuesday night.

Teamwork and cohesion seem to have been practiced with as much gusto as picks and rolls so far this season and, although it is still the preseason, the new outlook appears to be sitting well with the 16 who are suiting up.

Only three players return from last season's 18-13 team, a Chap squad which had more than its share of problems and finished fifth in the Western Junior College Athletic Conference hoops race with an 8-8 league record.

"I'm happy," head coach Reggie Franklin said. "We're playing pretty decent right now."

The MC green team, led by returnees Charlie Craine and Eugene Witherspoon, and newcomer Steve Armstrong, out-played the MC White squad 33-27 Tuesday night in a 25 minute scrimmage.

The White team was paced by Carroll Boudreaux, a first-year player with MC who sat out last season after transferring from Delgado Junior College in Louisiana. Freshmen Malcolm Milam, of Dennison, and Marlon Jefferson, of Navasota, also led the White group.

Franklin said instead of going after "one impact player" for the Chaps this season, he has compiled a group of "kids that are junior college prospects."

So balanced is this year's team that Franklin shakes his head when asked if he has a hint at a starting lineup.

"Everybody's even," Franklin said. "I asked six players today who they would start and all six came up with different lineups. (Assistant) Coach (George) Walker even came up with a different lineup than the one I had. That's how even it is."

MC opens the season at home Nov. 5 against Cisco Junior College. The Chap Classic begins three days later, Nov. 8-10.

A hint at the Chaps' potential came not so much from the display they put on Tuesday night, but in the announcement that in a scrimmage last week, MC beat Garden City, Kan., by 13 points. Garden City will likely be the nation's top-rated team once the preseason junior college rankings are released later this month.

Said Chaparral booster Bill Williams: "(The players) are communicating with each other, talking with each other, and having fun. Those are important qualities."

"Meet The Chaps" night is an annual event where the golf, tennis and basketball teams, as well as the cheerleaders, are introduced to the boosters and general public.

WTSU ponders a drop from NCAA Division II

CANYON (AP) — In an effort to alleviate a financially strapped athletic department, West Texas State University is considering a drop from NCAA Division II to join the NAIA, said the school's president.

"If I went before them (the Texas A&M board of regents) today, I would recommend a non-scholarship program and retain all of our current programs," said WTSU President Ed Roach.

WT's intercollegiate athletic budget is a little more than $1 million, Roach said. He said the university's commitment is $600,000 ($500,000 derived from the current student enrollment and $100,000 from other revenue sources) — thus creating a "gap" of $482,000.

Roach said the nearly half a million dollars would have to be raised on a yearly basis in order to remain in Division II.

Roach said a NAIA non-scholarship program such as Tarleton State, also a member of the Texas A&M system, operates on an athletic budget of less than $600,000 annually.

Roach, who will make a recommendation to the Texas A&M Board of Regents in December, set a Nov. 21 deadline for recommendations on the situation.

A member of the Texas A&M system, WT is currently competing in the Lone Star Conference. To remain in the conference, a school must compete in football.

WT currently fields teams in football, volleyball, men's and women's basketball, men's and women's tennis and riflery.

"The coaches want the opportunity to close the gap," Roach said.

"There have been a lot of changes since I came here. We were in the Missouri Valley Conference then. There were deficits in the athletic program then. It is still operating at a deficit. It can't continue to do so.

"As a group the coaches want to stay together. There are some alternatives. We can go non-scholarship in all sports. We can remain scholarship in basketball and go non-scholarship in football and volleyball.

"It's gratifying to see the coaches' zeal in wanting to go out and work toward raising money."

Miami's decision on Big East due today

Associated Press

CORAL GABLES, Fla. — The University of Miami, looking for basketball credibility to go with its football championships, is considered likely to accept an invitation to join the Big East Conference.

Miami's 55-member board of trustees will decide today whether to accept an invitation to join the conference. The offer was formally extended Monday.

"I believe accepting an invitation to the Big East would be very much in order," board member David Kraslow said Tuesday. "I favor it very strongly for a whole variety of reasons."

Kraslow said he has talked with other board members and "most of them" share his enthusiasm for the alliance. Board member Nick Crane said he has no reservations.

"It sounds good to me," Crane said. "Everybody's talking about going into conferences, and I think for long-term security that's the place to be — in a conference."

Perhaps foremost for Miami, joining the high-profile Big East could mean the salvation of a basketball program that has averaged less than 3,000 fans per game since it was resurrected in 1985 after a 15-year hiatus.

Talks between Miami and the Big East began three months ago, and the conference has outlasted some formidable competition. Miami has also considered alliances with the Metro, Southeastern and ACC.

School officials found the Big East appealing because it encompasses an area that has a large television market .

Irish turn eyes toward Air Force

SOUTH BEND, Ind. (AP) — Notre Dame coach Lou Holtz, still smarting from the Irish loss to Stanford, turned his eyes toward Air Force and away from his hopes for a second national championship.

"As far as I'm concerned, that's a dead issue," Holtz said Tuesday. "The only chance we had was to go 11-0 and play anybody else that went 11-0. Here, you aren't going to win it with a loss."

Stanford (2-3) knocked Notre Dame from the No. 1 ranking last week to No. 8 after Tommy Vardell rushed for his fourth 1-yard touchdown and the final score of the Cardinal 36-31 victory. Irish quarterback Rick Mirer's pass slipped off Derek Brown's fingertips as time ran out.

Notre Dame (3-1) plays Air Force (3-3) Saturday.

Holtz appeared revived from the Stanford shock, but admitted he and the team haven't had enough time to recover.

"I handle losses very poorly. I think that's a known fact," he said. "But you don't have time to shake it, and you have to shake it."

Holtz refused to second-guess his decision to play tailback Ricky Watters and receiver Adrian Jarrell on punt returns against Stanford in place of the injured Raghib Ismail. Watters and Jarrell fumbled away three punts, and the Cardinal converted two into touchdowns.

"If I had to do it over again, I wouldn't send anybody (deep)," he said.

The Irish began the season ranked No. 2, then moved into the top spot after a 28-24 victory over Michigan.

Playoff talk follows win

Associated Press

IRVING — The Dallas Cowboys were dealing with a strange phenomenon at Valley Ranch on Tuesday — playoff palaver.

The Cowboys' 2-3 start, after a 1-15 finish last year, had some players talking possible playoff. But coach Jimmy Johnson tried to play it down.

"I like optimistic thinking, but any talk that points toward the playoffs is at this time premature," Johnson said. "I don't mind 'em thinking it, but things can get out of hand if they start looking far down the road."

The Cowboys upset Tampa Bay 14-10 on Sunday with rookie Emmitt Smith gaining 121 yards rushing.

Defensive tackle Dean Hamel, who played on some of the Washington Redskins' playoff teams, said "there's no reason this team can't make the playoffs. We're starting to get it together."

While Johnson tried to dampen playoff chatter, he did say there was a big difference in this year's team and the 1989 version.

"We have a realistic chance of winning when we take the field this year," Johnson said. "Last year our chances were slim week after week."

Even owner Jerry Jones tried to hold down unrealistic optimism.

"I've been thinking playoffs since the day I got here," Jones said. "Nothing is impossible, but from a realistic standpoint we've got room for a lot of improvement."

Then Jones added, "well, anything can happen. Nothing's impossible."

The Cowboys play at Phoenix on Sunday and were rated two-point underdogs by the oddsmakers.

"This is a very big game for us," Jones said. "We could get to .500 and that would say a lot about our franchise. If we got to .500 it would be a way of saying that this thing is on its way up, not down."

Jones said that because of Johnson and his assistants, "I'm envied by some other owners in the league."

Johnson said the Cardinals "will be a big challenge for us. We've got to stay focused on the Cardinals. We've got to understand that we're still the underdogs and Phoenix is a lot better than what they've showed. We know what happened at Phoenix last year. We left there very disappointed."

The Cowboys lost 24-20 and quarterback Troy Aikman was knocked unconscious.

"We're a much stronger fourth quarter team now," Johnson said. "Our players seemed to get stronger against Tampa Bay. I guess I was as pleased about that as anything."

Dallas, which trained in the Austin heat so it would be in better condition, has scored twice as many points in the fourth quarter (33) than in any other quarter this season. The fourth quarter is the only quarter in which Dallas holds a scoring edge over its opponents (33-28).

Stunned Broncos drop to 2-3

Associated Press

DENVER — The Cleveland Browns are feeling a whole lot better about being 2-3 than are the Denver Broncos.

The Browns emphasized on Monday night with their 30-29 victory over the Broncos that they can't be dismissed in the AFC. As pitiful as they looked in losing three straight, the Browns showed impressive resiliency as they won in Mile High Stadium for the first time since 1972.

"I told our ball club coming out here today that it's not about anybody's job, it's about this football team," Cleveland coach Bud Carson said. "We were at a point where we needed to get our heads up and start acting like winners, because the Cleveland Browns have been winners.

"We were able to do that tonight. We pulled everything together and got going back on the right track."

The Broncos, meanwhile, are getting sidetracked in the second half. For the fifth consecutive time, Denver blew a halftime lead.

"It should never have come to this," said linebacker Karl Mecklenburg. "We had a lot of opportunities. We had a lot of missed assignments that they scored on. Things like that."

The Broncos, winners of the AFC title in three of the last four seasons — beating Cleveland for the championship each time — are two games behind the Raiders and one behind Kansas City in the West.

"We should have won," John Elway said. "We simply cannot afford to lose again. We've been close the last four weeks and it's a real problem, and we know we have to take care of it.

"There are 11 games left, and you never know. We may win them all."

It looked like the Broncos had their third win until Bernie Kosar rallied Cleveland. Bright orange cloths, distributed to 74,814 fans before kickoff as a sort of rallying symbol, turned into crying towels in the fourth period as the Browns came back.

"Bernie played a great game tonight and he had some big plays, especially on fourth down," Elway said. "We were up tonight, but things just didn't work well for us."

The ultimate hero, Jerry Kauric, is a rookie. But he had a sense of the history of the rivalry.

"It's been years since we won here," the kicker said after his 30-yard field goal as time expired revived the Browns. "I think this is really going to bring the team together. This win is so big for us. We were playing for Bud and ourselves."

The Browns, who had struggled with Denver's defense for three periods, were looking at a nine-point deficit with 7:21 left. Then Kosar began picking Denver apart with an 11-play, 80-yard touchdown drive.

The Browns succeeded in converting two fourth-down plays, including Kosar's 24-yard strike to Brian Brennan for a touchdown.

With 2:04 remaining, the Browns drove from their 39 to the Denver 12, keyed by Kosar's 20-yard throw to Reggie Langhorne on 3rd-and-10 from the 50.

That set up Kauric's winning field goal.

Miller, Haley named NFL players of week

Associated Press

NEW YORK (AP) — Chris Miller of Atlanta and Charles Haley of San Francisco were the offensive and defensive players of the week, the NFL announced on Tuesday.

Miller, a fourth-year quarterback, completed 23 of 44 passes for 366 yards and three touchdowns, including a 3-yarder to Andre Rison to beat New Orleans 28-27. That TD came with 1:33 remaining as Miller drove the Falcons 80 yards in 82 seconds with no timeouts. Twice, he kept the drive going on fourth down, with completions of 45 and 16 yards.

It was the best passing performance of Miller's pro career.

Haley, a linebacker, had two sacks among his eight tackles, forced a fumble and defensed a pass in the 49ers' 24-21 win at Houston. He has five sacks this season.

While Miller was the first Falcon to win a player of the week award this year, Haley was the third 49er. Joe Montana and Jerry Rice previously took offensive honors.

Gas prices up

NEW YORK (AP) — The average price of self-serve unleaded gasoline nationwide rose 2.4 cents in the last week to $1.37 per gallon, the American Automobile Association said Tuesday.

The average retail price of self-serve unleaded is up 29.5 cents, or 27.4 percent, from Aug. 1, the day before Iraq invaded Kuwait and triggered the Middle East crisis.

The AAA's highest recorded price for self-serve unleaded is $1.388 per gallon before the Easter weekend in 1981.

The survey is based on a nationwide spot check of stations conducted by Computer Petroleum Corp. of St. Paul, Minn. The AAA said stations continued to report adequate supplies of gasoline.

Prices rose in all parts of the country, with largest increase in the West and the smallest in the Midwest, AAA said.

Dollar drops

NEW YORK (AP) — The dollar finished mostly lower on world markets Tuesday, but selloffs in other currencies prevented its decline from deepening.

Gold prices tumbled after rising overseas. On the New York Commodity Exchange, gold bullion for current delivery fell $5.20 to settle at $389.70 a troy ounce.

Dollar rates in New York: 1.5238 German marks, 1.2735 Swiss francs, 5.1015 French francs, 1,142.25 Italian lire and 1.1506 Canadian dollars.

Market falls

NEW YORK (AP) — Stocks fell sharply today today as record-high oil prices replaced federal budget problems as the market's focal point.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials tumbled 78.22 points, 3.1 percent, to close at 2,445.64.

It was the Dow's 11th worst point drop, after the fall of 86.61 points on Sept. 11, 1986.

Dow energy unit scraps public offering

■ Stock market woes and a weak economy has caused Dow Chemical to cancel plans for a public offering of its energy subsidiary.

By Kyle Pope
Hearst News Service

HOUSTON – Spooked by a plunging stock market and an anemic economy, Dow Chemical Co. is scrapping a planned initial public offering of its Houston energy subsidiary.

The Midland, Mich., chemicals giant had hoped to raise $285 million by spinning off 28 percent of its Destec Energy unit in a public offering.

Company officials said on Friday, however, that the plan was sidelined by a stock market that has dropped 15 percent since the offering was proposed in July.

"This is not a popular time for new issues," said Marvin Brown, manager of communications for Destec, a power generation company. "There have been a number of new issues that have been put on hold or withdrawn because of the market effect of the Iraqi invasion" of Kuwait.

Sarah R. Opperman, manager of financial communications for Dow, said the Destec offering may be revived later if the market improves.

"It's just a matter of getting caught at the wrong time," she said. "We still believe in the rationale behind Destec and the offering."

The subsidiary operates and has an interest in eight cogeneration facilities capable of producing about 750 megawatts of electricity and 2 million pounds per hour of steam.

Dow, which already supplies about 5 percent of the electricity used in Houston through turbines at its Freeport chemical plant, had hoped to use the proceeds from the Destec deal to pay off debt and help expand Destec's capacity in Texas.

Fred H. Siemer, an analyst with New York-based Chemical Research, said the Destec offering likely lost its luster as the price of Dow's stock continued to fall.

The company's stock, which one year ago traded as high as $75 a share, closed unchanged Friday at $43.

Growth in installment credit falls in August

■ The government reports that consumers took out more in credit in August over July, but the growth in installment credit has slowed dramatically as consumer confidence plummets after the Iraqi invasion of Kuwait.

By John D. McClain

WASHINGTON (AP) — Americans cut the growth of their installment credit in half in August, the government said Tuesday.

The Federal Reserve said consumers took out a seasonally adjusted $2.1 billion more than they repaid, an increase of 3.4 percent at an annual rate over July and slightly more than the average $1.78 billion a month during the first seven months of 1990.

But the growth of consumer credit slowed dramatically from a net increase of $4.73 billion, or 7.8 percent at an annual rate, during July, the Fed said. Consumer credit averaged $4.42 billion a month during 1988 and 1989, the Fed said.

Consumer confidence plummeted after Iraqi tanks stormed Kuwait on Aug. 2, according to various surveys. The Conference Board, a New York-based business research group, said confidence in the U.S. economy in August dropped to its lowest level since 1983 when the nation was emerging for its last recession.

"The slower growth in August reflected a larger decline in auto loans outstanding and a smaller expansion of revolving credit than in July," the report said.

Automobile loans continued their slide, down 7.3 percent or $1.74 billion. The sluggish automobile sector declined 1.6 percent, or $377 million, in July and 7.3 percent, or $1.76 billion, in June.

Revolving, or credit card, debt rose $1.78 billion, up 10.1 percent from the previous month. But that was less than half of the 21.7 percent, or $3.78 billion, gain in July.

Bank and credit union loans not secured by real estate rose 10.6 percent, or $1.84 billion, after a 7.4 percent, or $1.27 billion, increase the previous month.

Borrowing for mobile homes advanced 10.9 percent, or $208 million, after a 3.3 percent, or $63 million, gain in July.

A new company, AMERICAN COLLEGE FUNDING CORP. has formed in Midland to help prospective college students find money for school.

Owner Ron Gossett, a South Carolina native, offers his service to prospective students nationwide. "Their only requirement is they want to go to college," he said.

He can also help those needing their GED or with below-par SAT scores.

Delayed bond interest check, fault of bank

By Bill Doyle

Q. I have $25,000 face amount of 6.6 percent bonds issued by a large city's school district and due to mature Dec. 15, 1993. The bonds are registered in my name and, for the 10 years I have owned the bonds, I have received $825 semiannual interest checks from the bank that is paying agent and trustee for the bond issue.

The latest interest check did not arrive. I phoned the bank's headquarters five days later and was told interest payments on this bond issued is being taken care of by a different office. I called there and the woman I spoke to said they cannot reconcile the records of registered ownership.

She promised to call me the next business day. That day is long past. I have not heard from anyone at the bank. Can you think of any reason I should not sue the bank, the city and its school district in small claims court?

Doyle

A. Rather than hauling all three into court as defendants, I suggest you center your fire on the bank. As paying agent, the banks is supposed to distribute the interest payments. And, as trustee, it has a fiduciary duty to bond owners.

That second point is important and, all too often, is overlooked. A bond trustee is required to act on behalf of the bondowners and have their best interests at heart. But conflicts of interest can pop up, because the trustee is hired by the issuer.

As you relate the story, your problem is with the trustee-paying agent. Based on what the woman in the branch office told you, the records of who owns which bonds are just plain fouled up. Let the bankers know you will see them in court if you do not receive the $825 interest payment plus interest on that money from its due date — fast.

Check at your courthouse to learn the size of cases handled by small claims court. There is a limit in all states. In some states it's as low as $100, while in others it's $1,000 or more.

Q. I bought some municipal bonds last year because the interest they pay is free from federal income tax. I paid $25,476 for the bonds.

Now, I am considering selling these bonds and buying U.S. Treasury securities. At the time of purchase, my broker assured me I could sell at any time. However, he did not put that in writing. Can I sell these bonds?

A. Sure. The bonds you named in your letter are part of a large issue by a populous county and are "marketable" — meaning they can be bought and sold readily in the bond market. It's only small amounts of bonds, issued by out-of-the-way places that are so "thinly traded" they are difficult to unload.

Although you can sell, but you won't know the price you will get until your broker executes your sell order. The broker can provide a rough idea of the price by checking the "Blue List," a fat shelf of quotations printed daily by Standard & Poor's Corp.

Q. You carried a letter from a reader who said all his municipal bonds are rated triple-A, because they are insured by major companies, and asked if they would have AAA ratings if they were not insured. You replied, "Most likely" and noted that insurers analyze credit worthiness before providing coverage to a bond issue.

Isn't payment, by an issuer or underwriter, for insurance of a bond issue already worthy of an AAA rating like leaving the house wearing belt and suspenders?

A. Gee! I've know a number of guys, including some great copy editors, who wore both.

Municipal bond insurance sees to it that, if the issuer defaults, interest is paid when due and the bonds are redeemed at face value upon maturity.

When used for bonds that already qualify for triple-A ratings, that coverage is nicknamed "sleep insurance." It's probably not necessary, but it lets bond owners sleep nights — much as a belt and suspenders eliminate all worry about trousers going to half mast.

UAL board rejects employee buyout bid

By David Dishneau

CHICAGO (AP) — UAL Corp.'s board of directors Tuesday rejected an employee buyout bid and said it will proceed with plans to place a large aircraft order it had postponed at the labor group's request.

The parent of United Airlines also said it would seek to quickly reach new contracts with its pilots, machinists and flight attendants unions, which led the buyout effort.

The decision represented the fourth failed takeover bid in three years at UAL.

UAL made the announcement late Tuesday morning after a meeting at which the board said the employee group failed to arrange financing for a $201-per-share, $4.38 billion acquisition offer that the board had accepted in principle in April.

The board said in a statement that it rejected a new employee offer that was "at an uncertain but substantially lower value than the April 9 agreement, was not accompanied by definitive financing arrangements and was subject to other significant contingencies."

Gerald Greenwald, chief executive officer of the United Employees Acquisition Corp., had said Sunday that the employees failed to get bank financing for the $201-a-share bid but had hoped to make up the shortfall with other features.

There was no official word on the specifics, but some reports put the revised bid at $165 to $170 a share, with about $150 of that in cash and the rest in securities.

The New York Times, quoting an unidentified source, put it at about $160 a share, or $3.5 billion. In this version, only about $70 a share would be in cash. The rest would mostly be in notes secured by aircraft.

The buyout group said the cash portion of its revised bid would come from loans from suppliers; revenue from sale-leaseback arrangements, in which the company sells equipment such as airplanes and leases them back; employee investments; and cash on hand.

Greenwald said Monday he did not know what the group would do if the board rejected its restructured offer. He was not immediately available today.

All three of the labor groups are working with expired contracts. The pilots, who have been trying to gain control of the company for 3½ years, had vowed to confront UAL's management with everything including a strike if the acquisition attempt failed.

The directors also could face a movement to oust them by angry stockholders led by Coniston Partners, a New York investment group which owns 11.8 percent of UAL shares.

The employee group asked the board in July to postpone the aircraft purchase while the future ownership of the corporation was in the air. UAL had said previously that it expected the order to be the largest ever placed for wide-body jetliners.

Major Developments in the UAL Corp. Buyout

August '89	The bidding starts: Los Angeles investor Marvin Davis offers $5.4 billion ($240 a share), for UAL Corp., the parent of United Airlines. He later sweetens the bid to $6.19 billion, or $275 a share.
Sept. 14 '89	UAL directors accept a $6.75 billion offer, or $300 a share, from United's pilots, management and British Airways PLC. The offer includes labor and wage concessions.
October 13 '89	The $6.75 billion takeover by pilots, management and British Airways collapses when financing fails. On Wall Street the Dow Jones average of 30 industrials falls nearly 200 points.
March 19 '90	UAL unions and the Coniston Partners investment firm announce a new $3.8 billion offer.
April 10 '90	UAL Corp. formalizes agreement to sell the company to employees for $4.4 billion.
May 30 '90	Union group recruits Chrysler Corp. Chairman Gerald Greenwald to lead the buyout effort.
August 8 '90	Unions granted a two-month extension to line up financing.
Sept. 17 '90	Reports emerge that unions may request a lower bid of $165-175 a share instead of $201-a-share bid proposed earlier.
October 3 '90	UAL unions line up $1.75 billion in financing for the employee buyout, still short of the $2 billion in bank loans needed for a bid of $165-$175 a share.
October 9 '90	UAL's Corp's board of directors rejected an employee buyout bid because the employee group failed to arrange financing for a $201 per share, $4.38 billion acquisition offer that the board had accepted in principle in April.

Ground broken for Texas' first private CNG station

DALLAS (AP) — Ground was broken on what Railroad Commissioner John Sharp said would be the first compressed natural gas station in Texas for privately owned vehicles.

Sharp on Tuesday joined officials of United Parcel Service and Lone Star Energy Co. at the construction site.

"Around the turn of the century, someone had the bright idea of installing a gasoline pump in front of their business, and the gasoline station was born," Sharp said during the ceremony at the UPS facility.

Today, he said, "this first natural-gas station in Texas may prove to be just as important a beginning as we move into the next century and towards the increased use of natural gas as an alternative fuel for vehicles."

Under the agreement, Sharp said, UPS will convert 15 of its Dallas-based delivery vehicles to natural gas and Lone Star will build a fueling facility on UPS property.

The fast-fill station will be capable of fueling a vehicle in four to six minutes, Sharp said.

"These natural gas vehicles burn so clean that you can put a white handkerchief over the exhaust pipe while the engine is running and not see a bit of residue on the cloth," he said.

Motorola, Hitachi settle suit

AUSTIN (AP) — Motorola Inc. said settlement of its legal squabble with Hitachi Ltd. over patents assures its customers of an uninterrupted supply of its microchips.

A Hitachi official said his company also expects to sell two of its chips unhampered.

Motorola announced Monday that the lawsuit had been settled for undisclosed terms, the Austin American-Statesman reported.

James Norling, the Phoenix-based president of Motorola's Semiconductor Products Sector, said his company was "very pleased with this settlement."

"Our unwavering goals in this legal action were to protect Motorola's intellectual property and to assure our customers an uninterrupted supply of Motorola's leadership microprocessors. This settlement achieves both those goals," he said.

Analysts say Motorola came close to being hurt in a risky legal gambit, the newspaper reported.

The company filed a patent infringement lawsuit in January 1989, attempting to halt the U.S. sale of Hitachi's chips.

Motorola lost the case.

U.S. District Judge Lucius Bunton of Midland ordered Motorola to stop making one of its most profitable chips, the Austin-made 68030 that accounts for more than $100 million in annual sales.

Motorola appealed Bunton's ruling, and in late June reached an agreement in principal to settle with Hitachi.

One industry analyst said Motorola may have achieved its goal of slowing down the introduction of Hitachi's two new chips to the U.S. market.

"In the most cynical of views, Motorola's goal was to delay the Hitachi product from coming out, while they worked on competitive products," said Michael Slater of California. He publishes the Microprocessor Report newsletter.

Chili peppers appeal to sophisticated diners

By Natalie Haughton
N.Y. Times News Service

LOS ANGELES — There is nothing quite like a good dish spiced with chilies to give your tastebuds a boost — or perhaps a zap.

If you are a chili pepper fan, as I am, and love experimenting with spicy new dishes, you will find plenty of opportunities with the more than 180 recipes ranging from mild to throat-scorching in "The Whole Chile Pepper Book," by Dave DeWitt and Nancy Gerlach (Little, Brown and Co.; $16.95).

As editors of the Whole Chile Pepper, a bimonthly magazine (with a circulation of 50,000) devoted to chilies and spicy foods, the authors, who live in Albuquerque, N.M., are well qualified to write a chili volume.

They first started researching and writing about chili peppers in 1977.

"In the past 10 years, chilies have exploded onto the American scene," they write in the book. Not only has cultivation acreage doubled, but new varieties are being developed and new products and cookbooks with chilies are ever increasing.

The book is a fascinating volume that documents the chili's past and lore and includes background information on identification, usage, cultivation and preservation of chili peppers.

While most of the recipes in the book are adapted versions of culinary classics from varied cultures, the authors have created their own interpretations of pre-Columbian and New Southwest dishes. Each recipe is accompanied by a heat scale rating so consumers will have an estimate of the degree of chili heat in the dish.

America's infatuation with the chili is not just another fad, DeWitt said.

"The popularity is still surging. In all the research we've done, we haven't seen evidence of any backsliding in 10,000 years of chili-pepper consumption. America is finally growing up and becoming more sophisticated about eating. We're realizing that there's a lot more than meat and potatoes out there, and we're looking to other cultures to see what the possibilities are." they write.

The book also includes a field guide with color photographs identifying 27 varieties of chilies, gardening instructions, mail order and seed sources, the latest health claims and a special "Whole Chile Pepper Diet."

Following are a few recipes from the book to tickle or tingle your tastebuds.

HERBED CHILI OIL

Olive oil readily absorbs the chili flavor and heat, so it does not have to steep for as long as the chili vinegars. Flavored oils are wonderful on salads or pasta.

1 teaspoon dried crushed red chilies, seeds included
1 teaspoon chopped rosemary leaves
2 whole bay leaves
⅛ cup olive oil

Combine all ingredients, cover, and let stand 12 to 24 hours (the longer it steeps, the hotter the oil). Remove herbs and chilies and store oil in a cool, dark place. Makes ⅛ cup.

From "The Whole Chile Pepper Book," by Dave DeWitt and Nancy Gerlach, Little, Brown and Company.

PASTA WITH CHILI AND CAULIFLOWER

Chilies have found their way into Italian cooking and not just in shakers of crushed red chilies in pizza parlors in the United States. This dish from southern Italy does not have a sauce; the pasta and cauliflower are tossed with the spices.

1 medium cauliflower, broken into florets
¼ cup olive oil
2 tablespoons butter
6 garlic cloves, minced
1 tablespoon dried crushed red chili, seeds included
1 pound caveatelli OR pennette pasta, cooked al dente
1 tablespoon chopped parsley
¼ cup grated Romano cheese
Steam cauliflower until almost done

Heat oil and butter and add cauliflower and garlic. Saute, stirring frequently, until cauliflower is browned. Stir in chili and heat an additional 5 minutes.

Toss cauliflower mixture with pasta and parsley. Top with cheese and serve. Makes 6 servings.

CHILAQUILES

Chilaquiles is an idiom that translates into "broken-up sombrero" and refers to the "stale or dry" corn tortilla strips in this casserole simmered in a chili sauce. Actually, it is a tasty way to use any tortillas that have become stale. The following recipe adds chorizo (a spicy Mexican sausage) and beans for additional flavor, but they can be omitted for a simpler entree.

6 dried red New Mexican chilies, stems and seeds removed
1 dried Chipotle chili, stem removed (optional)
1 small onion, chopped plus ½ cup chopped onion for garnish
2 garlic cloves, chopped
2 tablespoons vegetable oil
1 medium tomato, peeled and seeds removed, chopped
½ teaspoon ground cumin
1 dozen corn tortillas, cut into strips
Vegetable oil for frying
1 cup chicken broth
1 pound chorizo sausage, cooked and crumbled

Frozen bread dough speeds baking process

Shaping loaves more fun than mixing

By Nancy Byal
Associated Press

Frozen bread dough lets you skip all the slow parts of bread-making — measuring, mixing, kneading and the long first rising — and go straight to the fun of shaping.

The shaping of this beautiful bread is about the easiest I know. Just roll the dough, sprinkle with cinnamon-sugar, cut into 2-inch-wide strips, and coil the strips in a round baking pan.

CINNAMON COIL BREAD
⅓ cup sugar
2 teaspoons ground cinnamon
1 16-ounce loaf frozen sweet bread dough, thawed
Powdered Sugar Icing (recipe follows)

Stir together sugar and cinnamon. Set aside.

On a lightly floured surface, roll thawed bread dough into a 16x12-inch rectangle. Brush entire surface lightly with water.

Sprinkle sugar mixture over rectangle.

Cut dough lengthwise into six 16x2-inch strips.

Roll up one strip very loosely and place it, one cut-side down, in the center of a lightly greased 9x1½-inch round baking pan.

Coil remaining dough strips loosely around the first rolled strip.

Cover; let rise in a warm place until double (45 to 60 minutes).

Bake in a 350-degree oven about 35 minutes or until bread is golden.

Cover bread with foil the last 10 to 15 minutes to prevent over-browning, if necessary.

Remove from oven. Drizzle warm bread with Powdered Sugar Icing. Makes 12 servings.

POWDERED SUGAR ICING
1 cup powdered sugar, sifted
½ teaspoon vanilla
Milk

In a small bowl combine 1 cup sifted powdered sugar, ½ teaspoon vanilla, and enough milk to make of drizzling consistency. Makes about 1 cup.

Nutrition information per serving: 168 cal., 3 g pro., 35 g carb., 2 g fat, 2 mg chol., 183 mg sodium. U.S. RDA: 10 percent thiamine.

Frozen bread dough can make preparation of homebaked breads and sweet treats much easier — and faster.

CHILIES: Peppers add spice to recipes

(From 1D)

1 cup cooked pinto beans
½ pound crumbled queso fresco OR Monterey Jack cheese

Cover chilies with hot water and let them sit 15 minutes until softened. Place chilies in blender with 1 cup water in which they were soaked and puree until smooth.

Saute 1 small onion, chopped, and garlic in oil until soft. Stir in chili sauce, tomatoes and cumin; simmer sauce 10 minutes. Put sauce in blender and puree until smooth.

Fry tortilla strips in oil until chewy but not crisp.

Combine chili sauce, chicken broth, chorizo and beans; simmer an additional 5 to 10 minutes.

Stir in tortilla strips, top with cheese and remaining 1/2 cup chopped onion; serve. Makes 4 servings.

CITRUS PEPPER SORBET

Sorbets can be served either as a dessert or as a refresher between courses. The addition of peppers to the recipe adds just a little heat to the frozen fruit juices.

1¼ cups sugar
3 yellow wax hot peppers, stems and seed removed, chopped
3 large oranges, peeled and chopped
2 tablespoons dark rum
4 tablespoons fresh lemon OR lime juice
3 tablespoons light corn syrup

Combine 1¼ cups water with sugar and heat until sugar dissolves. Bring to a boil, remove from heat, and cool to room temperature. Cool in refrigerator 2 hours.

Puree remaining ingredients with remaining ⅓ cup water and refrigerate 2 hours.

Stir sugar mixture into fruit. Pour mixture into ice-cream maker and follow directions for making ice cream.

Red Baron flies high in pizza taste test

By Karola Saekel
N.Y. Times News Service

The taste panel sat down to some serious sampling of pizzas — not any of the newfangled gourmet pizzas, but good old pepperoni and cheese pizzas from the freezer case.

We picked seven altogether: three made for conventional oven heating only; one made primarily for microwave heating, and three that can be heated either way.

Like most convenience foods, these pizzas failed to win raves from the professional cook-/bakers on the panel, but some got acceptable to good ratings. The winner, to most tasters' surprise, was the product specifically designed for the microwave oven.

The brands of frozen pizza were tasted by our panelists and rated in the accompanying chart. Each could earn 100 points — 20 each from the five tasters. Each brand was judged on taste, appearance, texture and whether the taster would buy it.

Red Baron Microwave Deep Dish Singles (two to the package, 12 ounces, $3.19) with 71 points, was described by one taster as having topping that is "generous and good tasting with a smoky flavor." Most panelists concurred, though the crust was compared to everything from focaccia to biscuits to soft white bread. Four people would buy these super-easy pizzas, which take less than five minutes in the microwave oven.

There was a steep drop in overall points to No. 2. Stouffer's (8 3/4 ounces, $3.29) with 47 points won more compliments on its crust than on the topping, which only one person liked a lot. Several thought it too salty or too tart. One person would buy this pizza, and one might.

Weight Watchers (5.87 ounces, $2.69) was third with 43 points. It had a very crisp crust which some people found pleasant and some didn't. By and large, the topping wasn't found unpleasant — just too skimpy. One would buy it.

Totino's (10.2 ounces, $1.19 to $1.49) was right behind with 42 points. Its crust was found somewhere between crisp and tough and the topping not very convincing. Strangely, one person thought it too sweet, another too salty. One would buy it and another might.

There was also one prospective buyer for fifth-placed Tony's (15.5 ounces, $2.79), which had 35 points. It was found to have more favor for its crust than the toppings, though one person said there was an ample amount of cheese and tomato.

None of the panelists would buy Celeste (6 3/4 ounces, $2.09) with 27 points, or Mr. P's (seven ounces, 99 cents to $1.09), with 25 points. Both gathered mostly unfavorable comments.

One taster said the whole category seems to suffer from being uninteresting. Frozen pizzas, it seems, need a little more pizzazz.

The panelists were two caterers, a food writer, the chef/owner of a restaurant and the general manager of a restaurant.

Homemade pizza offers creative choices

Be creative and make homemade pizza in celebration of National Pizza Month.

NEW YORK (AP) — Celebrate October as National Pizza Month with homemade pizza. For your own California Pizza, follow these tips from Larry Flax and Rick Rosenfield, founders of California Pizza Kitchen:

- No pizza is too creative. Try your favorite flavors and combinations including peanut butter and jelly, or bacon, lettuce and tomato.
- Always balance your toppings. Never have one flavor stand out more than another.
- Use fresh, not dried herbs.
- When making the crust, roll out the dough so it is evenly round. Build the crust by pushing one hand in to the other edge of the dough.
- Keep the crust thin. Let the toppings be the pizza's main feature.
- Not all ingredients need to be baked. Try topping your pizza with additional items after it comes out of the oven.
- Pizza bricks, which can be purchased at many department stores, cut cooking time and bring out more of a wood-burning flavor.
- Pizza is no longer a dinner dish. Make a breakfast pizza with scrambled eggs and sausage.

DEAR ABBY

Juror's patience tried by annoying hassles

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: This is another one of those "I never thought I'd be writing to Dear Abby" letters. However, because of your response to a letter concerning jury duty, I felt an obligation to set the record straight.

Van Buren

Obviously, you have never been summoned to jury duty. If you had, I doubt that you would have answered as you did.

Being summoned is one thing; serving is another. You can sit around for a month waiting to be impaneled; then you have to deal with the defense, the prosecutor and judge, who ask you more questions than they ask the accused.

After the trial is finally over and a verdict is reached, the judge either reverses the decision or throws it out.

This kind of treatment makes people want to serve on a jury? Not me! — BEEN THERE IN OHIO

DEAR BEEN THERE: I agree with Judge Boldt, who wrote: "Jury service honorably performed is as important in defense of our country, its Constitution and laws, and the ideals and standards for which they stand, as the service rendered by the soldier on the field of battle in time of war."

I rest my case.

DEAR ABBY: I am a schoolteacher, and children seem to take a special liking to me. I live in an apartment complex that has a lovely pond with ducks. I often go to the pond with a sack of bread to feed the ducks.

My problem is that children come up to me and want to help feed the ducks. Abby, I could be a kidnapper or child molester. I almost want to ignore or discourage them because I don't want them to think that all strangers are as safe as I am. I would like to tell them not to be so trusting and friendly to strangers because some bad person could kidnap them. These children live in or near the complex.

What are your thoughts on this, Abby? — TROUBLED IN VIRGINIA

DEAR TROUBLED: When you are approached by children — as you surely will be while feeding the ducks — tell the children that they are safe with you, but to remember that not every stranger is an OK person.

Be sure to stress that they never should accept any kind of gift — candy or money or anything else — from a stranger. And they should never under any circumstances get into a car with a stranger. Use the opportunity to educate these children about the dangers of strangers.

DEAR ABBY: I really like this guy. We were going out for a while, then this great guy moved. I really want to get in touch with him, but I don't know his address.

His father lives near me. Should I ask him for his son's address? If so, should I do it in person or on the telephone? I don't know the man personally. Abby, please advise me. — NEEDS ADVICE

DEAR NEEDS: If this guy had wanted to keep in touch, he would have left his address and written to you, since he knows yours. Therefore, it's safe to assume that he isn't interested, so contacting his father would be a big mistake. (In this day and age, if you ask a father how to get in touch with his son, the father might think that you are in some kind of trouble.)

What teen-agers need to know about sex, drugs, AIDS, and getting along with their peers and parents is now in Abby's updated, expanded booklet, "What Every Teen Should Know." To order, send a long, business-size, self-addressed envelope, plus check or money order for $3.95 ($4.50 in Canada) to: Dear Abby, Teen Booklet, P.O. Box 447, Mount Morris, Ill. 61054. (Postage is included.)

PART-TIME INCOME AVAILABLE

The Midland Reporter-Telegram has several routes which need to be re-filled with qualified, responsible individuals. Now is one of the best times ever to obtain a route in your area!

Often asked questions:

Is it worthwhile for adults also?

Yes! Our current carrier force is already 65% adult and 35% youth. Morning newspaper routes are attractive for:

- ADULTS who have full-time jobs, yet want to supplement their income with a steady part-time job.
- MOTHERS who can't justify a small job and daycare, because as a carrier, you do not need daycare!
- COLLEGE STUDENTS needing a part-time job which will work with classes!
- YOUTHS who are involved in afternoon school functions, but want to work!
- SENIOR CITIZENS wanting regular exercise, added income, or just want to work with people, neighbors, and friends.

How much money can I make as a carrier?

Depending on the size of the route(s) from $200 to $600 monthly! Some motor routes make even more. Although no motor routes are expected to be available, depending on your service record, you may qualify to move up to a motor route later!

How long does it take?

The actual delivery takes 1 - 2 hours Monday - Saturday, and 2 - 3 hours on Sunday, again depending on the size of the route(s). Also, a few hours a month are needed to collect from subscribers. Many carriers choose to handle some of this by putting envelopes in subscribers' papers. Collecting in person will be necessary though!

When do papers have to be delivered by?

6 AM Monday - Friday and 7 AM on Saturday and Sunday

Do I ever get a day off?

The job requires a 7-day a week commitment. However, carriers do take days off by finding a friend or family member to substitute for them!
