Junction, Kimble County, Texas, Thursday, June 2, 1927

Number 7

LOCAL DAIRY CHANGED OWNERSHIP ON FIRST

The Brooks Dairy which has been operated for the past three or four years by Mr. and Mrs. T. A. Brooks, is now under the management of Mrs. C. G. Montgomery, who purchased the cows and leased the farm for a period of years, and assumed charge on the first of the month.

Mrs. Montgomery has for the past year or more conducted a chicken farm here, having some 500 White Leghorn hens, and finding that the poultry business did not require all of her time, decided to also embark in the dairy business.

Mrs. Brooks, who has had the business management of the dairy, has built up a nice patronage, and while her herd of dairy cows numbered only six, they were prolific producers, and at times it was almost impossible to supply the demand of her customers; with this herd of six and the two that Mrs. Montgomery has of her own, she expects to be able to supply the demand, and states that if these cows are not sufficient to do so, she will purchase others.

MUTTONS AND EWES BRING GOOD PRICES

John R. Martin has just returned from an extended trip through Terrell and other counties of the border and reports having witnessed the sale at Sanderson, of 3,500 mutton sheep, out of the wool, for $6.25 per head. These were going to feeders in Kansas. Also stated that Buckingham Ranch sold to local buyers, 400 yearling ewes, at $10.00. These were just out of the shearing pens.

Mr. Martin stated that buyers in Terrell County were contracting lambs at weaning, at $6.00. These are the best prices for sheep obtained since the slump some five or six years ago.

BAPTIST REVIVAL

The Baptist revival which has been in progress the past ten days, with Rev. W. Paul Ray doing the preaching, and Mr. Joe L. Trussell leading the song service, is bearing much fruit, as is evidenced by the number of confessions, there being some six or eight up to this writing.

This meeting began last Sunday a week ago, and the services have been well attended at all times and especially was this true the past Sunday and Sunday night.

Rev. Ray has been delivering some powerful and convincing sermons and is reaping a rich reward. And Mr. Trussell also deserves some credit for the work that has been accomplished, for Gospel songs well rendered are frequently as touching and convincing as a well prepared sermon.

It is expected that the meeting will close this coming Sunday night.

ENTERTAINS

Sunday afternoon friends were bidden to tea at the hospitable home of Mr. and Mrs. A. L. Mudge.

Dr. and Mrs. I. J. Stome of San Antonio gave a selection of songs which were much enjoyed. The many handsome and useful gifts presented to Miss Dorothy Mudge and Mr. John Molesworth of Sierra Blanca, Texas, were on display and bespoke the popularity of this happy couple. The ladies of the party were then bidden to view the exquisite tresson and cedar chest of beautiful linens.

Iced tea and cake were served to Miss Tottie Martin, Mesdames Clay Maddox, H. O. Denman, Fred Hall of Eden, Mr. and Mrs. Carl M. Wolff, P. Joseph, Dr. and Mrs. I. J. Stome of San Antonio, John Martin and A. W. Loeffler.

CEMETERY AID FEED CHAMBER OF COMMERCE

Last Saturday night was the regular banquet and meeting night for the Chamber of Commerce. The ladies of the Cemetery Aid served the refreshments, which netted them about $74.09, with a slight expense to be met.

The newly organized Kimble County band was out in uniform and rendered several numbers which were graciously received by those present. The band was not permitted to eat until they had played, so naturally the program was shorter than it otherwise would have been.

Following the concert by the band, a huge cake was raffled, or rather auctioned to the highest bidder to own for only a few seconds. This cake netted the ladies $18.00. The sale of this cake created quite a bit of merriment, due to the fact that the bids finally dwindled to 10 cents, when the bidder was allowed to own the cake for only a few seconds; bidding was fast and furious for a time and finally slowed down to the point when the auctioneer, W. H. Baker, closed the bidding and sold the cake to Mrs. Sayers Farmer for 10 cents.

This meeting of the Chamber of Commerce was devoid of any business, owing to the lateness of the hour in gathering on account of the revival meeting being conducted at the Baptist Church, and all business was postponed until the next regular meeting to be held Tuesday, June 14th, at the noon hour.

The ladies of the Cemetery Aid wish the Eagle to express for them their thanks and gratitude for the liberal patronage at this luncheon, and also state that the entire funds received will be used for the improvement of the cemetery.

PRESIDENT NATIONAL PECAN GROWERS HERE

The writer had the gratifying experience of showing Mr. E. E. Butterfield of Winona, Texas, some of the pecan groves of Kimble County.

The trip was for the purpose of looking over the pecan industry and Mr. Butterfield had visited Houston, Wharton, Seguin, San Antonio and other places but very frankly said that in all his trip so far he hadn't seen a tree that would compare in size or one that was as perfect in shape as the large tree in Mr. Skaggs' grove. He also expressed satisfaction at seeing the original Oliver pecan tree.

While Mr. Butterfield was very free in his praise of the industry of this county he was just as quick to offer constructive criticism. One of the crying needs of this county is to thin the trees out and give the best trees a chance to produce a good crop of nuts. Then he pointed out that he could not see why more trees had not been top-worked to improve varieties of pecans or even good native trees.

We noticed that the arch enemy of the pecan crop, the case bearer, was working desperately trying to rid the trees of the small nuts but to date the damage has not been very great.

Mr. and Mrs. O. V. Westervelt returned Monday from Boerne and San Antonio where they have been visiting relatives. They were accompanied home by their daughter, Julia, who has been attending school in San Antonio.

Lawrence Johnson and wife of Camp Wood were visitors in Junction Sunday and Monday, returning home Monday night.

POLO SADDLES

The eighteen to twenty inch swell fork Texas saddle is the result of years of thought and hundreds of thousands of miles ridden by riders of the great West and Southwest. It is to date the last word in riding comfort and safety. Every second cowboy or polo player can break his own colts and ride a bad one if absolutely necessary. It is ruled out of rodeos because it is too easy to stay in. It is a well known fact that this can not be done on a flat saddle. A San Antonio Army officer, high in polo circles let slip the statement that half the old players had "water on the knee."

Asked him if they got it riding cowboy saddles. "O no," he assured, and I told him we had about ten clubs up here and some of us had been playing rough peck cowboy polo four years and if there was a single knee among us that had water on it I didn't know of it. If swell fork saddles would cripple or kill surely we would have pulled the stunt ere this. It is surely and certainly a matter of an "inferiority complex" when we even begin to think the flat saddle is superior to ours. Furthermore there is no reason for riding them. There are more cowboy polo clubs in reach of us riding our kind of horses and saddles than we can get around to play with. I am told Houston was disappointed in Camp Woods little sporty white costumes at Brownsville and went out and borrowed some cowboy rigs so Camp wood could be photographed, but I am not sure of the truth of this statement. However, there is nothing equal to building and maintaining your own "atmosphere." I, for one, am not in favor of changing the name West Texas into "West New York." And if we are able financially to play polo in San Antonio would ten of us who think so, players, endlose line fans, or outsiders, enclose their checks for a hundred "berries" each, payable to their various orphanages, and mail them to the Eagle office. Junction, to balance mine for that amount payable to the Methodist Orphanage, Waco, Texas?

Am sure the Eagle would carry a list of donors and the amounts. If a hundred is too stiff I will also enclose one for fifty. May be enough of us could send that amount to convince a bunch of hungry and half-clothed children that we didn't spend all our time thinking "polo," "horses" and "saddles" and that we were "fair" sports. It is two years now since Junction "pulled" a plum for the "children without a chance."

All right thinking people will applaud Junction Polo Club's decision to play no match or practice polo on Sundays. Their manager, Weaver Baker, could organize a Cowboy Polo District, claim the championship of Texas and by topping all the players and all the ponies could probably prove the claim. KOTHMANN-CUMMINGS

At the Baptist parsonage Monday at 11 o'clock, occurred the marriage of G. W. Kothmann to Miss Nellie May Cummings, with Rev. J. A. Dekle officiating.

Both of the contracting parties are of the London community. The groom being the son of Mr. and Mrs. E. H. Kothmann, while the bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. E. I. Cummings.

They are both well and favorably known and are very popular in the younger set of that community.

The Eagle joins their many friends in wishing them a happy and prosperous wedded life.

MOLESWORTH-MUDGE WEDDING SOLEMNIZED

Wednesday evening the Methodist Church presented a brilliant scene when the marriage of Miss Dorothy Mudge to Mr. John Molesworth was solemnized there.

The church was decorated with a profusion of greenery while pot plants and tall floor baskets holding flowers and fern added to the beauty of the scene. The altar with its cloths, made by Miss Mudge's grandmother, Mrs. G. K. Gordon, and the brass candlesticks, given to the Episcopal Church by the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. A. L. Mudge, in memory of their deceased daughter, Lilly, provided a beautiful setting.

Prior to the ceremony, with Mrs. A. W. Loeffler at the piano and Miss Camilla Winslow of Austin playing the violin, Mrs. Ira Stowe of San Antonio sweetly sang "Because" by Guy D'Hardelle.

To the strains of the Bridal Chorus from Lohengrin the bride party entered. The groomsmen were Warren Henderson of San Antonio, Rowland Martin and Fred Mudge, brother of the bride. The bridesmaids followed one by one, Miss Betty Butland of San Antonio, Miss Charlotte Molesworth of San Antonio, sister of the groom, Mrs. H. W. Rieck, matron of honor, Cecil Martin Holekamp, ring bearer, and the tiny flower girls, Patricia Patterson and Febajean Riley who scattered dainty blossoms in the path of the bride, who entered with her father, Mr. A. L. Mudge, and was met at the altar by the groom and his best man, Mr. J. A. O'Keefe of Sierra Blanca, Texas.

The impressive ring service read by Bishop W. Capers, of West Texas diocese, assisted by Rev. F. W. Jones.

For the recessional, Mendelssohn's Wedding March was played and the bride party left the church while the bells pealed their marriage chime.

The bride was lovely in a gown of embroidered Brusa silk. The material was brought from Asia Minor by her grandfather, Capatin G. K. Gordon, to his wife and was later worn by the bride's mother, Mrs. A. L. Mudge, as her wedding gown.

The dress was of straight princess lines with panel effect in front, the train of the same material hung from the shoulders and a veil of old Madera lace, held in place by orange blossoms fell in a delicate cloud over all. The veil was an heirloom from a great aunt in Scotland. Brocaded silver slippers with rhinestone buckles completed the costume.

A string of pearls and a miniature brooch surrounded with pearls, the last being an heirloom of the Mudge family from England were her only ornaments.

The bride carried a shower bouquet of white roses and lily of the valley tied with broad white ribbon streamers. The groom wore the conventional black.

The maid of honor, Miss Tottie Martin, was gowned in shaded green taffeta, with basque waist and bouffant skirt, edged with tulle. A large pink horsehair braid hat and gold slippers completed the costume.

Mrs. Rieck, the matron of honor, wore an orchid chiffon gown of clinging lines; she wore an orchid hat and silver slippers.

Miss Butland's costume was the same carried out in the shade of yellow. Each carried an arm bouquet of gladiolus tied with ribbons to match each costume, carrying out the rainbow effect. The little flower girls wore charming little dresses of pink and blue taffeta.

Mrs. Stowe wore an ecru lace gown over green satin with a green satin sash, big hat and white slippers. Miss Winslow's costume was a beaded white georgette, with a small white hat and white slippers. Mrs. Loeffler wore a flowered taffeta with basque waist and full skirt, a large pink hat and silver trimming.

Following the ceremony a reception was held at the new hotel with the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. A. L. Mudge, the groom's parents, Mr. and Mrs. John Molesworth, Sr., of San Antonio, the bride and groom and the bridal party in the receiving line.

In the dining room, punch, ice cream and small cakes were served. The handsome four-tiered wedding cake, embossed in pink rose buds graced one table.

Mrs. Mudge wore an orchid georgette gown trimmed in orchid lace with hat to match. An orchid corsage completed her costume. Mrs. Molesworth wore a becoming gown of flat crepe.

The many handsome gifts were on display in one of the rooms.

Mr. and Mrs. Molesworth, Jr., left after the reception for San Antonio, thence to Quebec, Canada. On June 8 they will sail on the "Empress of France" for a three months tour of England and the continent.

They will be at home at Sierra Blanca, Texas, after October 1.

The bride's going away dress was of dark blue flat crepe with bolero effect and accessories to match.

Out of town guests were as follows: Mr. and Mrs. R. S. Winslow, Miss Roberta Winslow, Mr. and Mrs. Peter Paterson, Miss May Paterson, Mr. and Mrs. Willie Molesworth, Miss Gertrude Summers, of Austin; Mr. and Mrs. John Molesworth, Miss Charlotte Molesworth, Mr. Warren Henderson, Bishop Capers, Miss Clara Mays, Miss Douglas Dick, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Panoor, Mr. Leslie Dick, Mrs. Ira Stowell, of San Antonio; Mr. Percy Hudson, Eagle Pass; Mr. Jack Molesworth, Mr. and Mrs. Joe O'Keefe, Mr. and Mrs. T. Russell, Sierra Blanca; Rev. J. L. Jones, Kerrville; Miss Clara Wilhelm, Miss Myrtle Ridgeway, Menard; Mrs. J. Forrest Runge, Christoval; Miss Camilla Winslow, San Angelo; Mr. and Mrs. Fred Hall, Chas. Hall, Robert Hall, Eden; Fred Hall, Jr., Stephenville; Mrs. Raggin, Leslie Jones, Mrs. M. L. Ball, Miss K. C. Ball, L. L. Ball, Mr. and Mrs. Hal Holland, Fort McKavett; Mrs. Jas. Paterson, Mrs. Fred Felthous, Mrs. T. S. Huttard, Miss Netty Huttard, Mrs. Lee J. Corkill, Mrs. Mary Wheat, San Antonio; Mr. and Mrs. Sterling Baker, Miss Dorothy Baker, Sonora.

BIRTHDAY PARTY

Little Billy Vogle Braley celebrated his second birthday Tuesday afternoon with a party. Cut flowers in vases and baskets adorned the rooms. Miss Doris Jones entertained with music throughout the afternoon.

The wee folks played their wee games until the time came to cut the pretty white birthday cake with its pink decorations. Ice cream and dark cake and iced fruit juices were served. Mrs. George Braley was assisted in entertaining by her mother, Mrs. John L. Jones, and Miss Bertha Vogle of San Antonio.

G. F. Stewart of Sonora was a business visitor to Junction Wednesday.

The New Love

It was late one Saturday afternoon. I was preparing to leave the shop when I realized that Thankful had not gone home. Occupied with ordering some new books for the Fall, I had failed to notice that she was not in her usual place on the floor. If she were in the shop it was possible that she was in the small room we used for a private office, or occasionally as a place to rest, as it was comfortably fitted up with an antique couch and a few overstuffed chairs.

I locked the front door, as it was well past closing time, and going back to the little room marked "Private" in small gold letters, I tried to open the door. It was locked from the inside.

"Thankful," I called.
There was no answer.
I rapped upon the door, first with my knuckles and then with both hands, becoming more and more alarmed. Then, with my ear close to the panels, I listened and was quite certain that I heard sobs.

"Thankful, dear, please let me in," I urged.

After a few moments of labored breathing she appeared at the door, but hurriedly turned away to bury her tear-stained face in her hands and to resume her former position on the couch. She continued to sob.

I knelt beside her and smoothed back the hair from her pale, white brow. "Why, Thankful, what on earth is the matter? I thought you were so happy here."

"Oh, I am, I am!" she cried, "and I'm an ungrateful wretch to give up to my feelings like this when you've been so sweet and kind. I don't see how I could," she wailed.

"Listen, Thankful. Try to calm yourself. Because I want you to tell me everything. You know I'm your friend, don't you, dear?"

"The best I've ever had," she said, struggling to regain her usual poise. "and WILL I tell you, though I want you to know that I'm thoroughly ashamed of myself for letting go." She scrambled to a sitting posture and brushed the last trace of tears from her great brown eyes. I sat beside her and patted her hand, as if she were a child.

"Can't you guess what it is?" she asked.

"Why, no, dear, I don't believe I can. Is there some trouble at home?"

"Oh, no. Things are going splendidly there. Kitten's going to marry young Stewart Ames, and she says Abbie and Mother will live with her in the Ames beautiful home which he inherited from his parents not long ago. He's awful well off and a fine chap. Kitten loves him too."

"And you're hurt because she has, well, sorter left you out? I think I begin to see."

"No, no, it isn't that. She offered me a home there too. Really, Sallie, that isn't it!"

"Well, what is it, my dear?" She hesitated for a full moment, then straightened herself, "I'm in love, Sallie," she announced.

I drew a breath of relief. "Oh!" I exclaimed, "is that all? Well, I must say, I can't see anything so terrible in that. In fact, I think it's rather nice. I thought you had committed some terrible crime. Who's the lucky man?"

"Sallie, don't you really know?" she asked, and there was a twinkle in her eye for the first time since we had begun to talk. "I know you aren't the gossip, prying sort, and I adore you for it, but I don't see how you could fail to guess who it is."

"Well, to tell you the truth, I knew some change had come over you," I replied. "I thought surely some fairy wand had touched the little Thankful of the old days and converted her into a woman of new beauty and charm, but as for noticing who the object of your affection is, I must admit I'm absolutely at sea." But even as I spoke my sub-conscious mind broke in upon the words and, suddenly, as if a curtain had been drawn, the situation of the last five months was revealed.

"Of course I know!" I cried, "how perfectly dumb of me! It's Captain T."

A hundred little episodes came tumbling in my mind. The gentle camaraderie which had existed between them almost from the very first. . . . The change in Thankful, which could only have been brought about by love. And Captain T's day-dreaming, which I thought was grief. I smiled.

"But I can't imagine anything ideal," I declared. He told me himself that he had long since secured his divorce. So what's all the shooting about?"

"You're adorable, Sallie," she smiled, in spite of herself, "you make everything seem right and yet—you see we can't get married and naturally it makes me unhappy at times, because I love him so!"

"Of course I see," I interrupted, "because you can't possibly live on the play-salaries you're getting with me managing this show. Naturally you can't. I know something about that and what it takes to secure this bread and cheese that the poets write about."

Of course you couldn't face matrimony working here like this. My being manager of this business is really a huge joke anyway. Then I began thinking fast. I saw a way out.

"Listen, Thankful," I said, "I'm bored to death of this shop anyway and if your Captain T will take it over he can pay me back any time he gets far enough ahead. It's operating on a paying basis now and I'm delighted to get out. I only bought it, as you know, for a lark. I'm through with it now and if your handsome fiancé will take it off my hands, I'll be the happiest of the three."

I don't think I ever saw such joy as gleamed in the eyes of Thankful Brown. It covered her face like a veil. This was the especial event of her life. Finally she spoke.

That would solve everything as far as we are concerned, for it was only the question of finances which made us both sad, though I wouldn't think of taking the shop from you, Sallie, dear, unless I didn't feel that—

"That I haven't any business here?" I interposed.

"Well, I do think your place is with Curtiss, for I know how he dislikes the whole idea."

"Yes, so do I," I agreed, "and he's been a perfect brick all the way through. Never mind, I'm going to be the most domestic person from now on that you ever saw. I guess Curtiss was clever enough to know I had to get it off my chest like a complex the psychologists talk about. He always did have more sense in a minute than I'd have in a thousand years. You and your Captain T. can get married right away. Why here he is now!"

In less than an hour my proposition had been accepted by the two lovers who could scarcely hide their joy. Captain insisted that he should have the proper papers drawn up to protect my interests but I waved this aside, as I knew that honesty and integrity were part of his fine character which I had grown to know intimately from my association with him in the shop.

The late afternoon sun fell in slanting rays through the panes of leaded glass. It crowned Thankful's soft hair with an aureole of light.

"Look, a Saint Cecilia!" the young Cossack nodded to where Thankful sat, in proud dignity wearing her new-found love, and walking over he placed his lips very gently against the spot of dancing gold. It was truly a gesture of one who had been born close to a throne. I turned away and so engrossed were they in their mutual admiration that they did not know when I had gone.

"Curtiss?" we sat looking over Shades Mountain where a group of bright stars did a sarsband for the benefit of a pale, thin moon that hung by a gossamer thread in a muted violet sky.

"Yes, sweetheart."

I had just finished telling him the story of Thankful and Captain T.

"It certainly is a good thing that these lovers are going to relieve me of that shop."

"Yes, I know. You were tired of it, weren't you, dear?"

"Uh-huh, but that wasn't all. I couldn't have gone on, even if I'd wanted to," I put my head against his shoulder.

"Curtiss, can't you guess?"

He tilted my face up toward him with both his hands and gazed deep into my eyes.

"My darling," he whispered, "is it, can it be?"

"Yes, it is and can be," I smiled, as I mimicked his confusion, "and I do hope it will be a son, Curtiss. Just, like you."

"Oh, no," he replied, "that would never do. It MUST be a girl!" Then we sat in silence for a moment, gazing into the night.

"Listen, precious," he finally said. "I'm going to make a wish over my left shoulder on the new moon and you know that never fails." He turned and his voice was now with meaning, like a man saying his prayers. "Dear God," his eyes were closed, "please send us a little girl. Just like Sallie. Because you see, Sir, she's the most perfectly wonderful person in all the world."

THE END

TEXAS AND TEXANS.

(By Will H. Mayes.)

East Texas Garden Truck

East Texas newspapers contain numerous little articles referring to the tomatoes, the berries, the beans, the ocher, the English peas and other garden truck that appreciative subscribers are taking to the newspaper offices and presenting to the editor, and at times there is enough to be distributed among the entire working staff of the paper. When an East Texan has anything good around his place he does not like to see it go to waste and naturally his thoughts turn to the editor and his family as "ultimate" consumers of garden products, so he puts a large quantity of this surplus in his flivver to show the newspaper man what his place can produce. It is an old custom that is enjoyed as much by the recipients as by the growers of the choice edibles. No editor was ever known to turn down such an offering.

Garden Contest Winner

That East Texas has some splendid gardens is evidenced by the fact that in a contest covering fifteen states, Mrs. J. B. Atkinson, of Walker county, won third place. The contest was conducted by the Southern Ruralist, of Atlanta, Ga., and was extensively advertised. It was sponsored in Walker county by the Huntsville Chamber of Commerce, which did much to stimulate interest throughout the country in better and more beautiful gardens. The Chamber of Commerce last year conducted a similar contest at the Walker county fair, and in that contest Mrs. Atkinson won a number of prizes. This kind of contest would prove a splendid activity for any chamber of commerce. These organizations should let no opportunity get by to get beyond the town limits and show their interest in the entire communities that they serve.

Railroad Building Encouraged

R. C. Duff, president of the Waco, Beaumont, Trinity & Sabine railroad company is much pleased with the action of the Interstate Commerce Commission in rejecting the proposition to merge the St. Louis Southwestern with the Missouri, Kansas & Texas Railroad. In a statement to the press he says that such a merger would have interfered with his plans for the extension of his line at both Waco and Port Arthur. He proposes to extend the line, which will serve numerous East Texas towns, as well as the terminals, by a traffic arrangement with some other road, and the merger would have been in the way of such an arrangement. He will now proceed with his plans, he says, with good prospects for the early construction of his line.

Proud of Its Hotel

That Sherman people are proud of their new hotel was shown when a four-day program was required to properly open the new $350,000 hostelry. More than 10,000 people visited the hotel to look it over and to congratulate the management on the opening day. There were 475 people at the banquet at which the dining room was formally opened. Many congratulatory speeches were made. The opening of the hotel is said to have elicited more interest on the part of the local people than other event in the city's history in recent years. Towns are learning that they can't grow without good hotels.

Big City Hotel

A reader, who says he follows this column with interest in the El Cappelto Citizen, writes to inform me that Bay City is letting a contract for a three-story hollow-tile and brick hotel building to be modern in every respect and to fill a "long-felt want" in that town. It is not surprising that towns with progressive spirit, such as Bay City is said to have, should want people to visit them to have comfortable stopping places.

Improvements at Mission

Mission is to keep its municipal improvements as well as with the growth of the town as possible for a place that is growing rapidly. Bonds have been issued to provide for street improvements, storm sewers and a combined city hall and fire station. The town that looks to its own improvement usually has citizens that take pride both in the town and in their property in the town.

Victoria Creamery

It is announced that a recently established, modernly equipped milk and cream station at Victoria is proving so successful and so popular that a creamery will be built there in the near future. The time is not far off when practically every closely settled county in Texas will have creameries. The people are learning that creameries keep more money in circulation in proportion to investment than almost any other kind of an enterprise, and that large capital is not required to establish and operate them.

High-Power Line to Extend

At a cost of about $750,000 the Texas Power and Light Company will at once proceed to extend its high-power line from Trinidad to Lufkin and Nacogdoches. The Company will take over the municipally owned Nacogdoches power and light plant, unless prevented by injunction, following acceptance of a proposition from the company by the city council. The Texas Power and Light Company is showing its confidence in the development of Texas by investing immense sums to assist in that development, of course with the expectation of satisfactory returns on the investment.

Texas Air Mail

The growing use of the air mail service in Texas and the demand for extension are shown in a statement from the second assistant postmaster general that two new Texas routes are to be opened as soon as bids can be advertised and contracts awarded. One is to serve the territory between Dallas and San Antonio, and the other to link Dallas directly with Houston and Galveston. This will give quick service North and East to much Texas territory.

Honoring Dr. Axson

That was a nice compliment the Axson Club of Houston paid Dr. Stockton Axson the other day. The club, named for him because of his interest in and assistance to higher scholarship, presented a bust of Dr. Axson to the Houston Museum of Fine Arts. Joe H. Eagle presented the bust in an appropriate address, paying tribute to "one who has lived the noblest of vocations," that of teacher, and who has earned this honor by turning out thousands of lives ennobled by the richness of his own learning. How much better it was to pay this tribute to Dr. Axson while living rather than to wait until after death. It will inspire him to still greater efforts.

SHEEP AND GOAT MEN TO MEET IN KERRVILLE

Kerrville, Texas.—Convention committees are arranging details for the annual three-day meeting of the Sheep and Goat Raisers' Association may well be termed "early birds." With the convention date, July 19, 20 and 21, almost two months away, the committees are hard at work and they have every citizen of Kerrville at work with a determination to make the 1927 convention the best in history of the association.

The big auction of registered animals, as in previous years, will be the feature. All types and the best blood lines in the country will be on exhibit. Leading breeders of West Texas and many from out of the State have entered stock.

There will be plenty of sidelights and entertainment for all; but during the hours of the sale each afternoon, the lid will be put on everything else in order not to interfere with the most important feature of the convention.

Ample housing facilities are assured for every visitor. Raymond A. Franklin, a hustling young man, is chairman of the housing committee. He has made reservations for association officials and members of the executive board at downtown hotels and is taking care of reservations for other members as rapidly as they are received. Schreiner Institute dormitories and cottages at Westminster Encampment will care for several hundred guests during the convention. Scores of private homes also will be thrown open. Comfortable quarters will be provided for all.

Executive sessions of the convention will be held at the Arcadia Theatre, starting at 9:30 a. m. each morning.

The auction sale during the afternoon will be held in spacious warehouses and pens on the Southern Pacific tracks, making it convenient for breeders who desire to ship in animals for the exhibit.

Band concerts, dancing and many other forms of amusement are on the evening programs. Three large dances will be in progress each day. The ladies committee is arranging theatre parties and scenic drives through the picturesque Hill Country.

Firestone GUM-DIPPED TIRES

Firestone Round Tread Balloon

MANY Firestone Dealers are prepared to take in your old tires, offering you a liberal allowance on a new set of Gum-Dipped Balloons.

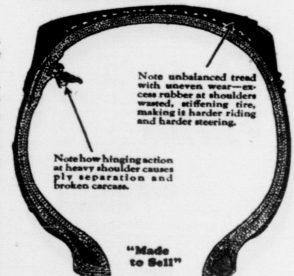

Firestone Dealers are given the advantages of attending Tire Educational Meetings held throughout the country, where tire design and construction are discussed. The sections of used tires reproduced here are a part of this program. Study these two sections and you, too, will understand what Firestone means by tires built for service and tires made to sell.

Flat Tread Balloon

The Firestone Gum-Dipped Balloon with its scientifically designed tread permits free flexing, easier riding, extra comfort and safety.

The balloon tire with heavy, flat tread design is obviously stiffer and rides harder. The excess rubber, placed for appearance at the edges of the tread, is not only wasted but produces hinging action causing ply separation and "shoulder breaks."

Firestone designed and manufactures Oldfield Tires and Tubes, distributing them direct to Firestone Dealers only, through 148 Factory Warehouses. This efficient and economical distribution assures tire buyers everywhere, clean, fresh stocks of Firestone and Oldfield Tires in all types and sizes, and has helped to make possible today's remarkably low prices—the lowest in tire history. ### A NOTE OF WARNING

Recently there have been a number of special advertising propositions presented to the business men of the town which were represented by the salesmen as having come from the Junction Publishing Company.

We wish to take this opportunity of letting it be generally known that we do not desire that schemes of this kind be promoted, by reason of the fact that as a general rule an unconscionable figure is charged for advertising space, and the merit of such advertising is questionable. The publishing company can be depended on to do its best for any of its patrons, either in special, or general advertising, and in the event you wish special advertising of any nature, we can get the job done for you a great deal cheaper than you can purchase it from a promoter. For that reason we wish to take this method of warning our patrons against taking advertising space in these various schemes. At any time you may desire special advertising, let us know and we will be glad to give you figures on the job. At any time you are approached by any person, not accompanied by one of our employees, you may rest assured that we have nothing to do with the scheme and will not answer for the results obtained.

We propose to satisfy every advertising customer of this paper and we cannot be responsible for some advertising scheme that gives a 75 per cent profit to the sales promoter and 25 per cent value to the advertiser.

Remember you can always buy from this publishing company any line of advertising you desire and buy it as cheap as elsewhere. We can deliver to your office any description of office supplies and print for you any line of special advertising whether it be fans, calendars, posters or otherwise.

SERVED THEIR COUNTRY

The remnant of Civil War Veterans who take part in the exercises of Memorial Day, are now few in number; they are cheerful and hopeful men, despite the burden of years.

They have reason for great pride in the work they have done, not merely in their war achievements, but in the tasks of citizenship since that time. Their influence has a great deal to do with the strong patriotic feeling existing in our country at this time. In addresses in the public schools and at all kinds of occasions, and in private life, they have constantly preached how we all must take hold and give loyal support to our government and perform the duties of citizenship.

The story of their achievement fired the heart of youth, and made our young men willing to do their part in the recent World War. These men in their quiet way have helped away the thought of the country, and we shall never cease to honor them.

Horse shoe pitching may not be as aristocratic a game as some we could mention, but a man can join in without having to go home and put on knee pants.

Law makes life and property safe. The Psalmist said his "delight was in the law of the Lord." Delight in the conservation laws will fill our streams and bays with fish and our forests with game.

MORE HONEST THAN SUPPOSED

It is commonly remarked that there is a great deal of dishonesty in the world, and some cynics will say that a large part of the people will do crooked things when they get a chance. D. J. Woodlock, secretary of the National Association of Retail Credit Men, who should know how honest people are, remarked in a recent address, that people are about 99 and 44-100 per cent honest. He explained that only a small proportion of the people who buy on the credit plan, try to dodge their obligations.

While there is an enormous amount of thieving going on, such a statement suggests that it is confined to a rather limited number of people. It is remarked in some places, for instance, that about 98 per cent of the people will meet their bills. The remaining two per cent make a lot of trouble, and their failure to pay adds to the cost of doing business. But it would not be possible to carry on the vast credit system of the United States, if it was not true that most people try to pay and do pay. If this were not the case, most retail dealers would have to refuse credit and sell only for cash.

Of course there are many persons who will cheat in a small way without being discovered. Storekeepers might say, that if they gave 100 people too much change, the majority of them would not come back and return it. But many would not discover the mistake, and many might feel doubtful about it, and think that probably the clerk knew what things cost, and it was his business to get things right. There are not probably many here in Junction anyway, who would deliberately try to pay less than they owed.

The great majority seem to believe in honesty and are trying to be honest. The thing to do is to convince the crooked minority, that they injure themselves more than anyone else when they do a dishonest thing.

SCISSORS AND PASTE-POT

A common idea was formerly that all an editor needed to get up his newspaper, was an armful of exchanges, and some good sticky mucilage and a sharp pair of scissors.

There was some basis for that idea once, but newspaper work has changed. The newspaper of today consists principally of two types of stuff: News and features for which it pays someone outside its office, and the record of its home town activities which it prepares itself with an incalculable amount of labor. The day of the editor who wore out his trousers seat in the swivel chair has passed, while the modern one is a kind of melting-pot in which the thought and activity of his community is converted into printed form.

HOME TOWN THOUGHTS

The people who claim to be patriotic, but who keep that portion of the country which they occupy as a home in a disorderly way, are not contributing much to the making of a finer country.

The way to make a town grow is to make it so attractive and full of advantages that people want to live there.

A growing business usually advertises when trade is good, because new business can be attracted so easily then, and it advertises when trade isn't good, as that is the time when it needs stimulation.

Fish fossils predominated in the Devonian Age, nearly 25,000,000 years ago, which is probably the only time when there was no complaint of fish shortage. But there were no fishermen or any other kind of men in those days, scientists declare.

The people who advertise freely are often put to the trouble of enlarging their stores to accommodate the increasing business, but they have not so far complained about it.

HENRY FORD PERFECTS NEW MODEL AUTOMOBILE

Detroit, May 25.—Early production of a new Ford car superior in design and performance to any now available in the low-priced, light-car field, was announced today by the Ford Motor Company.

Henry Ford, designer of the car, and Edsel Ford, president of the Company, both stated that within the next few weeks they will have a complete description of the new model.

The famous Model T Ford, which still leads the automobile industry after twenty years of manufacture, will continue to be a substantial factor in Ford production, in view of the fact that about ten million cars of this model are still in use and will require replacement parts and service.

"The Model T Ford car was a pioneer," said Henry Ford today. "There was no conscious public need of motor cars when we first made it. There were few good roads. This car blazed the way for the motor industry, and started the movement for good roads everywhere. It is the pioneer car in many parts of the world which are just beginning to be motorized. But conditions in this country have so greatly changed that further refinement in motor construction is now desirable and our new model is a recognition of this."

"Besides the Model T itself, another revolutionary element which the Ford Motor Company introduced twenty years ago was the idea of service. Some of the early manufacturers proceeded on the theory that once they had induced a man to buy a car they had him at their mercy; they charged him the highest possible price for necessary replacements. Our company adopted the opposite theory. We believed that when a man bought one of our cars we should keep it running for him as long as we could and at the lowest upkeep cost. That was the origin of Ford service."

"The Model T was one of the largest factors in creating the conditions which now make the new model Ford possible. The world-wide influence of the Ford car in the building of good roads and in teaching the people the use and value of mechanical power is conceded. Nowadays everybody runs some kind of motor power but twenty years ago only the adventurous few could be induced to try an automobile. It was a harder time winning public confidence than the airplane has now. The Model T was a great educator in this respect. It had stamina and power. It was the car that ran before there were good roads to run on. It broke down the barriers of distance in rural sections, brought people of these sections closer together and placed education within the reach of everyone. We are all still proud of the Model T Ford car. If we were not we could not have continued to manufacture it so long."

"With the new Ford we propose to continue in the light-car field which we created on the same basis of quantity production we have always worked, giving high quality, low price and constant service. We began work on this new model several years ago. In fact, the idea of a new car has been in my mind much longer than that. But the sale of the Model T continued at such a pace that there never seemed to be an opportunity to get the new car started. Even now the business is so brisk that we are up against the proposition of keeping the factory going on one model while we tool up for another. I am glad of this because it will not necessitate a total shutdown. Only a comparatively few men will be out at a time while their departments are being toolled up for the new product. At one time it looked as if 70,000 men might be laid off temporarily, but we have now scaled that down to less than 25,000 at a time. The lay-off will be brief, because we need the men and we have no time to waste."

"At present I can only say this about the new model—it has speed, style, flexibility and control in traffic. There is nothing quite like it in quality and price. The new car will cost more to manufacture, but it will be more economical to operate."

For the first time in its history the Texas Fish and Game Department will begin operating September 1 without using any money from the General Revenue, maintaining itself solely by collections of fish and game fees.

To Keep Food Fresh Requires Some Moisture

If the air in a refrigerator is too cold and dry vegetables lose their crispness—fruit shrivels. Flavor is lost with the moisture.

With ice, you can depend upon the air being moist enough to retard evaporation of water from perishable food. For several days meat will keep its juiciness, cheese will remain soft, lettuce crisp.

An even cold is maintained automatically by the ice melting faster when the weather is warm and slower when it is cool. The cold circulating air prevents excessive dampness. The moist film on the melting ice regulates dryness, holds it in proper check for keeping food at its best.

Ice is the natural way to chill food; there is no other refrigerant like it.

TEXAS TALKS

(By Wesley Peacock, Ph. B.)

The Texas Snake Killer

I was stalking deer in the chaparral of south-west Texas, when I sat down on a point to wait for a buck, my rifle across my lap.

While sitting in the awful silence of a western mesa, my reverie was disturbed by a peculiar cooing noise, low but penetrating, as if made by a bird or small animal in distress. Although the view was open I could see neither bird nor beast. The noise continued. On all sides I heard familiar noises converging at a point in front of me.

When a fleeting shadow in the brush fifty yards in front attracted my attention, I advanced cautiously. It was a paisano, or chaparral cock, with long legs and sharp beak, dancing a love dance apparently, darting here and there, excitedly encircling, advancing, receding, about a common point of intense interest. Soon he was reinforced by two other warriors or mourners, for either a battle or a funeral was impending, so wild and so foolish were the movements of the actors.

Overcome by curiosity, I crept within a few yards of the comedy. Two of the birds would rush off into the brush, leaving one on guard, only to rush back bringing little sticks of mesquite, which they would deposit in a circle, and then dart off for more, while one sentinel would always remain to keep up the song and dance in circular girations. Then all three would join in the cooing and dancing while others would chase off into the brush for twigs to place in circular order, as though their very lives depended upon the hasty completion of a line of defense. I could hear the challenging, monotonous rattle of a viper, which made cold chills run up and down my spinal cord.

When the birds finally made their get away without ceremony, I found a giant rattler coiled and ready to strike, while completely encircling him at a radius of about five feet had been built a fence of small sticks nearly three inches high.

Next day I returned only to find the fence in fact, and the rattler confined but uncoiled, evidently having inspected the fence without effort to over-ride it, which he might have done but for the instinctive fear to cross any unusual object. Knowing that he would live and die in that fragile enclosure, a prisoner through fear, I gave him the coup de grace with a bullet from my rifle and added another three inch rattle to my collection.

Texas cow boys, before wrapping up in their blankets at night, always encircle their camp with a larlet of horse hair as a measure protective against rattlers.

WE ARE ALL SERVANTS OF RATS

Here is a most striking paragraph from a review of Dr. Wm. T. Hornaday's book, "The Minds and Manners of Wild Animals." Says the reviewer:

"For intelligence, Dr. Hornaday awards the palm to the chimpanzee, followed closely by the Indian elephant. But the brown rat claims respect. 'I am,' says the author, 'reluctantly compelled to give the prize for the greatest cunning and foresight in self-preservation to the common brown rat, the accursed brown rat that has adopted man as his perpetual servant.'

That is something that probably very few of us have ever thought, and yet it is absolutely true. Other animals and fowls serve us—horse, cow, pig, sheep, goat, dog, hen, goose, etc.—but rats we ourselves serve. The rat in the first place makes us provide food for him and his disgusting progeny all the days of our lives.

"The rat has adopted man as his perpetual servant." Isn't the mere statement of the fact enough to make us mad enough to try to do something about it?—The Progressive Farmer.

POULTRY INDUSTRY HAS BECOME IMPORTANT ONE

College Station, Texas, May 31.—Since 1880 when poultry raising was first included in the National farm census, that industry has grown by leaps and bounds to a place at the top in the agriculture of the nation, as brought out in a recent discussion on the American hen by E. N. Holmgreen, poultry specialist of the Extension Service, A. & M. College of Texas. Poultry raising today is a one and a quarter billion dollar industry in the United States, according to Mr. Holmgreen. The farm flock is now considered one of the most efficient branches of farm operations.

"So important has the poultry industry become," Mr. Holmgreen said, "that it is now greater in value per year than all the cattle raised in the same period in the United States. It is seven times greater than the value of all sheep; ten times greater than the value of all wool; nine-tenths as great as the value of all hogs; half the value of all corn; three-fifths more than one-half the value of all cotton; and brings in $265,000,000 more than oil."

The severe drought over the greater part of Texas in 1925 has done a very great deal to the advancements of the farm flock in Texas. Those who were fortunate in having a small flock of good birds, well housed and cared for, soon found that the lowly hen was just about the only thing which was producing, and their flock was furnishing the only income on which the family was to live.

"A flock of 200 or 300 hens, properly housed and cared for, should bring in from $250.00 to $500.00 per year. A farm flock affords a steady income, but is not a get-rich-quick proposition. It means 365 days of steady employment during the year, but produces for the family a delightful and healthful food, as well as an income that will cover the grocery bill."

"There are several points that must be kept in mind if the flock is to prove the means of feeding the family. The flock should be well-bred, no matter what variety is chosen. The birds should be comfortably housed, but the investment need not go over $1.50 per hen. If the flock numbers 200, the investment need not go over $300.00. Feed and care for them properly. Bulletins, radio talks, farm papers, and county agents are sources of information. Produce and sell only the highest quality of fertile eggs. Cull, and keep culling out the poor producers."

"There are other factors that enter into poultry raising, but if the above points are observed the flock will prove steady income that will feed the family. The farmer can successfully tie this poultry program in with other farm operations."

TIME NOW TO BEGIN CULLING POULTRY FLOCK

College Station, Texas, May 31.—Now is the time to begin culling the farm poultry flock, according to D. F. Irving, professor of Poultry husbandry at the A. & M. College of Texas. With the price of eggs due to stay fairly low for several more months, only the best birds in the flock will be able to return a profit above the cost of feed and labor, Professor Irving said in a recent discussion on culling. He also brought out the fact that meat prices are highest at this season, so that in many cases there will be more profit in culling and selling now, though some of the birds may still be laying.

"Another point in the favor of culling at this time is that the removal of the adult birds will allow more time and space to be devoted to the growing pullets, on which the hopes for next year are based," Professor Irving said. "In addition, the reduction of the feed bill for the layers will have a tendency to counteract the steadily increasing amount of feed used by the growing birds."

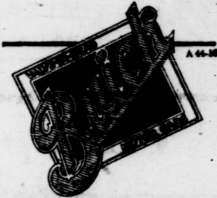

"Unless the heavy breeds can lay close to twenty eggs a month, and that is high production for them during the summer, it will actually be more profitable to sell them now. The lighter breeds can be kept profitably if they are laying over fifteen eggs a month. Of course if a certain output of eggs is required, or the birds are yearling breeders and are to be kept another year, it would be foolish to cull so soon; but if part of the flock is to be sold in the Fall anyway, it will be worthwhile to remove the poorer ones now.

"The following rules may be observed in removing poor birds: (1) In the case of all yellow-skinned breeds, remove birds that show any yellow pigment in the beak or shanks. (2) In the case of heavy breeds, remove the birds that are excessively fat. (3) If birds have been marked with spiral bands for broody periods, remove those birds that show excessive broodiness. (4) Remove all crow-headed birds. (5) Remove all birds that are poor in flesh as they will not lay profitably. (6) Remove birds that have excessively large abdomens. Be sure to distinguish an excessively large abdomen from one that is merely full from heavy laying."

"Confine the culled birds closely for a week, and feed heavily on grain and wet mash before marketing. Use a regular laying mash with twenty-five per cent corn meal added. This should put all the birds, even the broody ones, in good condition for the market. From twenty to twenty-five cents per pound will ordinarily be realized after this fattening period."

Stockings

The comforts of former grandmothers days including sitting and darning of stockings. But grandmothers are too young to be tied down nowadays, and woman has let up on wielding darning needles. It now takes huge factories to supply enough socks and hose for nearly a quarter billion American legs—particularly in view of the fact that even grandmother's skirts are shorter and her hose longer than they used to be; while stenographers and girls are wearing long beautiful rayon hose that goes up over the knees with enough material left over to "roll" successfully.

Stockings were first worn by the Northern tribes of Europe because of the cold climate. Ancient people who dwelled in the Southland had little use for special leg coverings because the warm temperature and their loose, flowing robes gave them all the protection they needed.

Before the days of stockings the soldiers and slaves of the old world who lived in bleak northern climates, used to protect their legs with crude coverings made of cloth and leather.

The art of knitting is believed to have originated in Scotland. William Lee presented Queen Elizabeth her first pair of knitted stockings in 1589.

Men's hose and trousers were originally one-piece combination affairs extending from foot to waist. Loose breeches with separate stockings did not appear until the eighteenth century.

Rayon mixed with silk produces a stocking of excellent wearing qualities; rayon combined with wool mixed has unusual attractiveness; rayon added to cotton hose gives the latter a touch of distinction that has a striking appeal.

It was estimated that during 1925 more than 15,000,000 pairs of rayon or rayon-mixed hose were made.

"Clock" in men's and women's hosiery has been a distinct success in style. Machine clocking was developed after years of experiment and has brought this mark of quality within reach of every pocketbook. In former years it was accomplished only by hand needle work.

HUPMOBILE EIGHT PASSES SEVERE TEST

Sixty seven thousand miles use from his Hupmobile Eight in 26 months, with a total cost for replacements of $15, was reported by Chester A. Large, 830 Drexel road, Upper Darby, Pa., as he turned it in the other day to Harper & Harper, Philadelphia Distributors, on the same make new car.

"The old car has certainly endeared itself to me," he said. "It was always ready, could always be depended on, no hill was too steep nor no journey too long, and no road too rough for a car which could always be counted on to take you where you were going and bring you back on schedule time."

Harper & Harper men point out that the Eight still had its original fenders, original paint and was in splendid mechanical and body condition despite its 67,000 miles of travel.

FLOOD CONTROL—A RADICAL SUGGESTION

"With the widespread ruin and destruction, loss of life and loss of property wrought by the floods from the Mississippi, there is every likelihood that the matter of flood control will have the attention it demands when the next Congress convenes in December," says Walter Scott Meriwether, Editor and Publisher, Mississippi Sun, Charleston, Mississippi.

"And we hope that Congress will consider this:

"The Mississippi and other waterways of this nation are under the jurisdiction of the War Department, and the levees are under supervision of Army engineers.

"Why under this supervision? This work is non-military. No stretch of imagination can connect inland waterways with the problem of national defense. As these waterways are arteries of commerce, why should they not be under the control of the Department of Commerce?

"That very efficient department under the control of its very efficient head, Secretary Hoover, himself one of the foremost engineers of the country, could undoubtedly mobilize engineering skill far superior in this line to any the Army can furnish, for by the very nature of their calling, Army engineers cannot be considered experts in this work.

"Inland waterways should be for the efficient handling of commerce, and as such should be under the jurisdiction of the Department of Commerce. As for the protection of harbors, that is for the Army and Navy."

In the foregoing editorial, Editor Meriwether brings up a point for consideration. Flood control is a proper function of government just as is the deepening of rivers and harbors, the erection of fortifications, the maintenance of courts, the building of highways and the police power lodged in government for the protection of all the people. Time and again the people of this nation have seen so-called political blocs and special interests attempt to enlarge the real functions of government to include the operation or control of purely commercial enterprises.

Government has all it can do to give the people protection and equal opportunity, without entering the field of private endeavor in competition with its citizens and taxpayers.

The Mississippi catastrophe should prove to the people as well as to lawmakers that flood control is a vital function of government. It should not be made a plaything of politics, and used as a lever to launch the government upon purely industrial enterprises which are not for the common safety or benefit of all the people in like measure.

IN THE FINE CAR FIELD THE TREND IS UNDOUBTEDLY TOWARD EIGHTS

Growing in Favor Month After Month

Hupmobile Eight is strengthening its hold on public favor, month after month, because Hupmobile engineers have achieved even finer, more luxurious performance from the straight-eight principle.

You will experience a new zest in driving the latest series Hupmobile Eight—a resilient response that comes from its improved engine design; from the utter smoothness and balance of moving parts; from the silence and ease with which it does all you ask of it.

And today's Hupmobile Eight is not only more delightful in action—but most pleasing in appearance.

If you plan a motor car investment above $1500, you especially owe it to yourself to inspect and ride in this most modern development among eights—the one car that is rapidly changing the whole trend of buying in the fine car field.

REBEKAHS ENTERTAIN

On Tuesday night, May 26, the Junction Rebekah Lodge called a meeting for the purpose of entertaining Mrs. Ada Ramsey, of Wichita Falls, and Mrs. Mattie E. Knauff, of San Antonio, president and secretary, respectively, of the Rebekah Assembly of Texas.

Mesdames Henry Wilson and Lagood and Miss Nellie Smith, and Mr. and Mr. Hughes, of the Menard Rebekah Lodge, were also guests of the Junction Lodge on this occasion.

Mrs. Ramsey and Mrs. Knauff both made very interesting talks and gave some useful information as to what the I. O. O. F. Home at Corsicana is doing, and also instructed the local lodge in matters pertaining to the Rebekah Degree.

After the closing of the lodge refreshments, consisting of a variety of cakes and ice cream were served and a jolly social time was spent.

The hall was decorated with flowers and the banners of the lodge.

DID YOU EVER STOP TO THINK?

That newspaper ads offer many attractive special values in reasonable merchandise that will appeal to all who appreciate low prices combined with quality merchandise.

That when you buy from the stores that advertise, you get better goods, quicker service and lower prices.

That the wise shoppers do not waste much time looking around for the latest; they read the ads and then go direct to the store that advertises. Anyone can save time and money by following the example of the wise shoppers.

That they know that the stores that advertise have stocks so good, so full of style and so correctly priced that there is no use looking elsewhere.

That the stores of your city have ample stocks; they were purchased at favorable prices, which enables them to offer you quality goods at reasonable prices.

The merchants who do you the courtesy to tell you what they have through the advertising columns of the newspapers, always have what you want when you want it.
