Trustees Bar School Tax Rate Slash

By LISA PAIKOWSKI
Avalanche-Journal Staff

When is a tax rate increase not a tax rate increase?

The answer to that riddle is one that school trustees may have to explain repeatedly, since they proposed today that the school district rate exceed the "truth in taxation" figure calculated by the tax office Tuesday.

During a called session, the board proposed a rate not to exceed the current $1.38 per $100 of assessed value, but that is more than the maximum $1.30 the tax office says the district can charge without having a public hearing.

As required by the truth in taxation law, trustees have announced a public hearing on the tax rate proposal for 7 p.m. Aug. 20.

School officials fear a backlash of taxpayer complaints from the proposal, and all because of a truth in taxation law that they say resulted in the setting of a misleading tax rate this year of $1.30 — eight cents less than the current $1.38 rate.

The law enacted during the 1978 special session of the state legislature seeks to keep taxpayers informed about the effects of tax rates proposed by taxing units.

The aim of the law is to make taxpayers aware that while a taxing authority says it will not raise the rate from the previous year, more money will in fact be generated at that rate due to reappraisals and new construction.

The law requires, then, that tax offices calculate a tax rate that will increase a tax levy by no more than 3 percent over that of the previous year. A taxing entity cannot exceed that calculated figure without holding a public hearing.

By use of a complicated formula, city-school tax assessor-collector John Brooks arrived at a calculated rate of $1.26 for the school district. The 3 percent allowable increase brought the rate up to $1.30.

School officials say the lowered tax rate is misleading and that the maximum $1.38 proposed by the school board would not be an increase because that is the current rate. The only people affected by that maximum rate would be taxpayers whose property was re-evaluated this year, they say.

The main thrust of the school officials' argument for a rate higher than the calculated figure is that while the tax levy may be frozen the district's budget from year to year is not.

Dr. E.C. Leslie, assistant superintendent for administration, said the truth in taxation law "is based on the false presumption that you can operate on the same amount this year as last year plus 3 percent."

Brooks said that the law "is really talking about a frozen levy on revenue. But you don't have a frozen budget — the budget has to go up."

He said that in "99 percent of the Oil Drifts Close To Coast

CORPUS CHRISTI (AP) — A 40-mile-long tongue of runaway Mexican crude oil drifted ominously offshore of Padre Island as pollution from the world's largest oil spill resumed its northward advance, troubling shrimpers already worried by a meager harvest.

Gulf breezes that powered the huge spill from a blown-out Mexican oil well toward the white resort beaches of the Texas Gulf Coast picked up Wednesday. And forecasters said 10-knot winds would continue today.

"We knew the winds would kick up again, we just didn't know when," National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration spokesman Carl Posey said Wednesday night.

The spill had halted its steady advance Tuesday when southeasterly winds diminished, setting up what Coast Guard officials called a "standoff" at best.

The progress of the giant slick, paralleling the island, 75 miles out into the Gulf, worried shrimpers who gathered in Brownsville to voice their apprehensions.

"We are not doomsdayist, but realistically, we are concerned," said Ralph Rayburn, executive director of the Texas Shrimp Association. "The shrimp industry has never been exposed to this type of threat."

Julius Collins, president of the association, said that shrimp harvests this year are running at about half the pace of last year's catch. He blamed a combination of environmental factors, including a cold winter and heavy spring and summer rains.

A Coast Guard reconnaissance flight detected "a tongue of sheen" 15 miles offshore and stretching 40 miles along Padre Island from Brownsville to 20 miles north of the Port Mansfield cut, Posey said.

He said the tongue ranged in width from about 20 miles to less than 10 miles, and contained several "pancakes and two ribbons of mousse," signifying heavier oil concentrations.

Tar balls carried by the surf continued to dot the high-water line along Padre Island beaches. Posey said the heaviest concentrations were on beaches near the Port Mansfield cut. But he said it was still nothing like the blackened beaches in Mexico.

Scientists studied currents in efforts to predict where the oil might wash ashore, but there were no indications that such predictions would be available before several days.

Coast Guard Capt. Roger Madson said divers found sticky globs of oil suspended 7 to 35 feet below the surface.

Coast Guard crews are hanging a 6-foot mesh from the boom at the Port Mansfield cut today in an effort to snare some of the sub-surface crude, Posey said. The cut leads to the ecologically sensitive Laguna Madre.

On Wednesday, he said, crews found no oil in Laguna Madre — a huge inlet between the Padre Island and the Texas mainland serving as a breeding ground for oysters, blue crabs and other shellfish and as a food source for dozens of marine species.

Report Cites City's Need Of Freeway

By SYLVIA TEAGUE
Avalanche-Journal Staff

Traffic system improvements recommended by a consultant merely will "patch up" the city's current traffic system until a freeway is constructed, Mayor Dirk West says.

While hearing a report on traffic engineering in Lubbock from Jack Hatchell of the Dallas firm of Pinnell, Anderson, Wilshire and Associates, West commented construction of a freeway is "the bottom line" to improving traffic conditions in Lubbock.

Hatchell told city council members this morning Lubbock "is far behind" in constructing a freeway, adding a freeway is "critical now but really critical" in meeting future traffic needs.

"Prior to that, all we can do is trouble-shoot," West said, and Hatchell agreed. "We can really just patch things up until someone decides we need a freeway.

"A freeway should have been started a long time ago," West said.

Hatchell recommends certain short and long-range changes in 12 major intersections in the city, the most striking being a recommendation that an overpass and underpass be constructed at the intersection of Quaker Avenue and 50th Street to accommodate 1990 traffic volumes.

The consultant said his recommendations for upgrading the intersections are based on the assumption that Interstate 27 will be built through Lubbock in the next decade, and during that time the Tech Freeway will be upgraded as planned by the highway department.

But without those improvements,

Fire At Ruidoso Kills Six Horses

A-J News Services

RUIDOSO, N.M. — Fire swept through a barn at Ruidoso Downs early today, killing six race horses, injuring three others and sending two police officers to the hospital with smoke inhalation and minor burns.

Ruidoso Fire Chief William Seelbach Jr. said the blaze, of undetermined origin, apparently broke out near a tack room at one end of the fireproof metal building.

Feeding on hay, sawdust and wood framing inside the building, the blaze destroyed 16 of the 90 stalls inside the barn, Seelbach said. He said a number of horses that were released from their stalls or broke away to safety had to be collected from a wide area following the fire.

Tom White, chief of security at the track, said an airplane was in the air looking for horses in the nearby mountains. Ruidoso Downs officers spotted two horses near the Mitchell Motel at 10 a.m., but could not determine if they were race horses.

Seelbach said units from his fire department were the first to arrive at the scene about 4:15 a.m. and the fire was under control within about 10 minutes. Seelbach said about 25 firemen fought the blaze, including members of the Ruidoso Downs Volunteer Fire Department.

Ruidoso police officers Holly Barron and Hazel Poissot suffered smoke inhalation and minor burns in a futile effort to save some of the horses that were destroyed. They were treated at a local hospital and released later in the morning.

Ruidoso Downs Police chief Ray Garner said policemen called to the scene were "kept busy rounding up spooked stock that ran out on the highway," four-lane U.S. 70 which passes by the race track.

White said the horses in the barn were trained by Don Hassell of Weatherford and Dorothy Cornstubble of Valley View.

Two of the horses killed, Miss Don Meyers and Hesa Hornet, were owned

Three FBI Men Slain

EL CENTRO, Calif. (AP) — A social worker walked into an FBI office in this desert town today, shot two agents to death and then killed himself, police said.

The shootings came just a few hours after an FBI agent was shot to death in a Cleveland public housing project while trying to arrest a fugitive.

The social worker, James Maloney, 30, of nearby Holtville, left a suicide note before he walked into the office in this town 100 miles east of San Diego and opened fire with a .38 caliber pistol, police said.

Wholesale Prices Soar In July

WASHINGTON (AP) — After three months of moderation, wholesale prices shot up 1.1 percent in July, resuming the fast inflationary pace that prevailed at the start of the year, the government said today.

The Labor Department laid much of the blame on rapidly rising energy prices.

The wholesale price of home heating oil rose 9 percent from June to July. Continuation of that rate for a full year would more than double the price by mid-1980. Gasoline prices went up 3.9 percent in July.

The rapidly rising energy prices pushed the cost of all non-food items in the department's wholesale price index up 1.4 percent.

This boost was not offset, as expected, by food prices, which showed no change last month after dropping in the three previous months.

Wholesale prices had risen a modest 0.5 percent in June.

July's 1.1 percent rate, which would produce an annual rate of more than 10 percent if continued for 12 months, was comparable to price increases of 1 percent or more from December 1978 through last March.

"Energy prices are still going quite strong," said John Early, chief of the Labor Department's division of industrial prices. "But finished goods other than energy and food were up 0.8 percent. The price increases were pervasive."

Changes in wholesale prices tend to be reflected after a month or two in higher or lower prices at the retail level.

Early said the effects of four months of moderation in wholesale food prices have begun to appear at grocery store checkout counters. The Carter administration, however, has opened a campaign to make sure that consumers — and not the profits of food processors and distributors — benefit from the slackening in food prices.

The Labor Department's wholesale figures reflect prices for food and other products ready for the retail market. The index, formally known as the Producer Price Index, also measures price changes for items with some processing and for items with no processing, such as raw materials.

The index for finished goods stood at 215.8 in July, 10.1 percent ahead of July 1978. The index figure means that goods that cost $100 in the 1967 base period cost $215.80 last month.

Goods at the intermediate level, those with some processing, rose 1.9 percent last month, the largest increase since October 1974, Early said. Higher-priced animal feeds pushed the food component up 6.7 percent in July.

At the same time, crude goods rose 1.8 percent.

Among food items that consumers may get a break on at the retail level in coming months are beef, veal, pork, poultry and eggs, the report indicated.

But this should be more than offset at service stations, where retail gasoline prices are expected to reflect the continuing rise in wholesale prices.

Gasoline at wholesale was nearly 39 percent more expensive last month than in July 1978.

Toymakers Take Giant Step Into Electronics

By PHILIP GREER
And MYRON KANDEL

Kids will always cuddle up to their Teddy bears, Raggedy Ann dolls, Snoopy toys and all those other familiar favorites. But this Christmas season, millions of American families are going to be huddled around something with a lot more space-age flavor.

Electronic games, which started to make a real impact only last year, are ready to take the toy world by storm.

Industry estimates say total sales of computer electronic games can hit $340 million this year. That's triple last year's $112 million and more than 15 times the $21 million worth sold in 1977."The introduction of electronics has revolutionized the toy industry," asserts Douglas Thomson, president of Toy Manufacturers of America, the trade group for the industry. He likens the advent of the microprocessor chip — which makes electronic games and a host of other products possible — to the impact the arrival of plastics had on the toy business after World War II.

Louis F. Polk Jr., chairman and chief executive of Minneapolis-based Leisure Dynamics Inc., is even more enthusiastic about the prospects for electronic games (perhaps because his company, while only the sixth or seventh largest in the toys and games field, will be, he says, No. 3 in games this year).

Polk, who once was the president of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer Inc. and financial vice president of General Mills Inc. and who has a string of venture-capital successes to his credit, is staking a big piece of his toy company's fortunes this year on a brand-new electronic game called Computer Perfection.

It hasn't even hit the stores yet, but retailers have already ordered 50 percent more of the games than the company can produce, forcing it to allocate orders on a proportional basis.

The same is true of other major manufacturers of electronic games, including Mattel, Milton Bradley and Parker Brothers. Last year, such items as Milton Bradley's best-selling Simon and the Parker Brothers game, Merlin, were so "hot" that many stores were unable to keep up with demand and were completely sold out.

That's one of the reasons why retail toy buyers, as they placed their orders for the coming Christmas season, have ordered so heavily. In fact, observes Milton Schulman, editor of the trade paper, Toy & Hobby World, the buyers' greatest fear is that all the orders will be filled, leading to an oversupply of products and the subsequent price-cutting that would erode profit margins.

But most big toy manufacturers don't expect that to happen, at least among the major new games that will be heavily promoted. Consumer demand, they contend, will be enormous and manufacturing capacity is still limited.

Polk told us he expects the gasoline shortage to help stimulate the sales of electronic games. "There's a new shift of interest to things you can do in and around the home," he said. Another factor is that such games appeal to adults, as well as to children and teenagers. Also, he noted, since they carry price tags in the $30-to-50 range, they're often bought on a family basis, rather than just for one individual.

Thomson says electronic games have had a three-pronged impact on the toys and games business — broadening the age base, increasing the price level of games (which previously was generally below $10), and extending the selling season beyond the traditional pre-Christmas period."Electronics is not a fad," he asserts. "It's a major change in the industry that's here to stay."

In fact, he pointed out, two major toy manufacturers Mattel and Mego International — are going into home computers as well.

Retailers and manufacturers like the idea of an extended selling season, which occurred this year partly because the most popular electronic games were out of stock by the time last Christmas approached and the demand for them spilled over into 1979.

But industry experts note that since the games appeal to a more sophisticated customer with more discretionary dollars available (especially those in the free-spending late-teen and young-adult years), purchases are made when the consumer wants the item, without waiting for the traditional gift-giving occasions.

While Polk, like other executives in the hotly competitive toy world, is closemouthed about actual production and sales figures, industry insiders say sales of Computer Perfection — which has a futuristic plastic-dome design and is based on the company's long-popular series of Perfection skill games — could reach $40 million at retail this year.

Leisure Dynamics, of course, is hoping that the game will become a "classic," meaning that its appeal will last far longer than the average two-year life span of most new games. Since the cost of developing and introducing an electronic game can top $1 million, its longevity can be a big factor in its eventual profitability.

Last year, the company entered the electronic games field with a "search-and-destroy" game named Intercept. Now, Polk says, "We're counting on Computer Perfection to put us out there as a force to be reckoned with."

Steady Hand Necessary For Gigging

By JOHN H. MORGAN

WAVERLY, Va. (UPI) — Frog gigging, a grueling sport practiced only in the dark, requires a steady hand and a human willingness to trudge through terrain most other animals avoid.

On the fringes of Blackwater Swamp in Sussex County, far from the gleaming restaurants where the end product is often served, are a ring of sump holes and ponds where the bullfrog is king.

Wilton Vaughn, Al Moody and Mike Vaughn, all building contractors by day, make it their business after dark to go to any lengths to find the elusive croakers.

"Frogs feed at night when there's more of their kind of insects around," said Moody. "It's also better to hunt them at night because their eyes shine in the dark so it's easier to spot them."

Frogs are not the only creatures at the water's edge whose eyes shine in the dark, however — and gigging is not without its dangers.

On one recent night at a cattail-choked pond by an abandoned farmhouse, Moody had scarcely waded into ankle-deep water when he was confronted by a copperhead at his feet. Man and snake were taken by surprise. The snake prepared to strike and Moody quickly raised his gig: a perfect strike.

"That ain't nothing," said Mike Vaughn, nephew of Wilton. "One night a snake crawled up above my knee and back down again before I had time to do anything about it. Turned out it was a water snake, but I sure didn't know that when he was up my pants leg."

A gig is a 6- to 8-foot pole with a sharp prongs attached to the end. The three hunters were to make frequent use of theirs this night.

As they plodded along a sump bank with their spears raised, silhouetted in the moonlight, they resembled not so much modern sportsmen as some primitive version of Neanderthal men.

"This is what you might call a poor man's safari," said Wilton.

It is best to hunt bullfrogs in pairs. The front man holds the gig and the person bringing up the rear carries a flashlight to shine ahead for the quarry.

Even with the light, however, the gray-green frogs tend to blend in with the environment. "You got to get your eyeballs trained," said Mike. "It does take some practice."

And after the hunter braves the hordes of mosquitoes, the snakes and the tufts of marsh grass so thick one has to go around instead of through them, there still lies the final execution.

When a big bull is spotted, the hunter approaches no closer than five feet away lest the creature dive for deep water. The gig is then lowered — slowly, cautiously — to within several inches of the frog's head. Then comes the jab, which must be clean because it is the only chance to spear the frog before he disappears.

Mike said 20 frogs are a fair catch, although he recalled gigging as many as 50 or 60 on particularly good outings. "I keep a camera in my truck," he said. "That way I can back up all my hunting lies with pictures."

"You can tell how big they are by the way they sound," Mike said. "The little ones go 'broom,' but the really big ones go 'be-room.'"

Expert Says Fuel Conservation Costly

By LeROY POPE

NEW YORK (UPI) — Conservation can solve the American energy problem a lot faster than a synthetic fuel program but it will cost almost as much, says an Atlanta energy expert.

"We could save eight million barrels of oil a day by conservation measures alone," says E. Milton Bevington, president of Servidyne Corp. of Atlanta, for ten years in the business of advising companies how to save fuel and electricity.

Bevington said practically every home and business in the country could save anywhere from 30 to 70 percent of its energy consumption.

"But," he said, "we could easily spend up to $160 billion in the next 10 years on engineering and design and remodeling of buildings, vehicles and machines to save energy."

However, Bevington said, the money would be better spent than the $140 billion President Carter wants to spend on alternative and synthetic fuels, "even though we ultimately may have to go to synthetic fuels."

The difference, he said, is the money spent to conserve fuel will not be handed over to bureaucrats. It will be spent by the fuel consumers themselves and the benefits will be spelled out for them in advance by competent conservation engineers who can demonstrate that the outlays really will pay off in fuel and power savings.

The big savings can be made in heating, air conditioning and transportation energy costs, Bevington said. The high conversion costs can't be minimized, he said. It always costs more to fix up something that is obsolete or was ill conceived in the first place than it does to start out afresh, especially if you start afresh on a mass production basis.

A prime example of this can be seen in the current campaign of the Diesel Automobile Association, a promotional group, to persuade the automobile industry to switch to new, highly fuel-efficient diesel engines for passenger cars.

The association has a couple of American family-sized cars retrofitted with a small four cylinder Japanese diesel engine that gives 47 miles to the gallon with a full load and 62 mpg with only a driver. The engine is used to power light trucks in Japan.

It cost nearly $5,000 each to retrofit the engine into the two American cars, $3,200 for the engine and $1,800 for installation. At that rate, even with the huge fuel saving, it would take 14 years just to pay for the retrofit, Robert Gibbons, president of the association, conceded.

Seeing-Eye Dog Offers Help To Own Kind

YOUNGSTOWN, Ohio (AP) — Sam Mineo has always loved dogs, but Tinker, a 3-year-old mixed terrier, has reserved a special place in his heart.

She's a seeing-eye guide for Corky, a Manchester dog Mineo got as a puppy 15 years ago who is now becoming blind because of cataracts. Any time Mineo puts a leash on Corky, Tinker grabs the loop end and becomes his leader.

Mineo says the unusual canine camaraderie began about a year ago when Tinker sensed her friend was handicapped. Until then, the two dogs had played as equals around the Mineo house and yard.

Corky has been a part of the Mineo household and flower shop next door since the family bought him from a kennel in California.

"He was a playful puppy," Mrs. Mineo said, "but somehow we never trusted him to turn him loose."

She says Corky was still a puppy when they found him chewing on a calla lily and speculates that something in the plant caused him to be chronically nervous. Mineo said that Corky doesn't bother strangers who come into their house or shop, but becomes belligerent when people leave.

A few years ago, Corky underwent surgery for a tumor and the veterinarian said it was malignant. But it appears Corky has learned to live with that.

The cataract began about two years ago and gradually Corky began to slow down. Mineo faced the inevitable and got Tinker through a newspaper advertisement.

Now Corky is obeying another master.

Mineo puts the leash on him, tells Tinker to "take Corky to the yard," or "take Corky to the shop," and Tinker leads the way, tugging at the leash when Corky becomes reluctant or cautious.

Once in the enclosed yard, the two dogs romp, play and explore in normal fashion. Corky is comfortable there, moving around with no problems, because it has been home for 15 years.

But when Mineo calls, Tinker romps to Corky's side, takes the leash in her mouth and begins tugging toward the back door of the house.

Tinker knows her responsibility and Mineo says she won't drop the leash until he opens the door and Corky is safely inside.

TODAY'S EDITORIAL:

It Takes Two To Tangle

THE SOVIETS and Chinese are at it again. The two governments are trading volleys of charges and countercharges over the first armed clash in more than a year along their long and mutually sensitive border.

Peking's story is that Soviet frontier guards ambushed a Chinese group innocently inspecting sheep pastures where Sinkiang province meets Soviet Kazakhstan in Central Asia. One official was killed and a veterinarian wounded.

Moscow agrees on the casualty count, but has a different version of the preliminaries. It reports intercepting a Chinese patrol that intruded half a mile inside Soviet territory.

Either way, the incident would appear to be the sort of thing only propaganda ministries get excited about.

NEITHER CHINESE nor Soviets are ones to make a big fuss over very little for no reason, however. It does not take too educated a guess in this case to suggest what is involved here is jockeying for position preliminary to talks on improving Sino-Soviet relations—for which there is plenty of room.

Moscow has been pressing for a serious and positive Soviet-Chinese dialogue for a number of obvious reasons, including countering the ongoing Chinese rapprochement with the West and easing the potential military threat on its exposed Siberian flank.

Peking's agreement to bilateral talks scheduled in Moscow later this summer was accompanied by a demand that the Soviets cease aiding their Vietnamese allies—a condition the Soviets must find impossible to grant and difficult to get around.

NOW COMES THE border clash, first publicized by Peking in a sharply worded protest. Moscow, meanwhile, in a delayed and muted response, gives every indication of prefering to play it down.

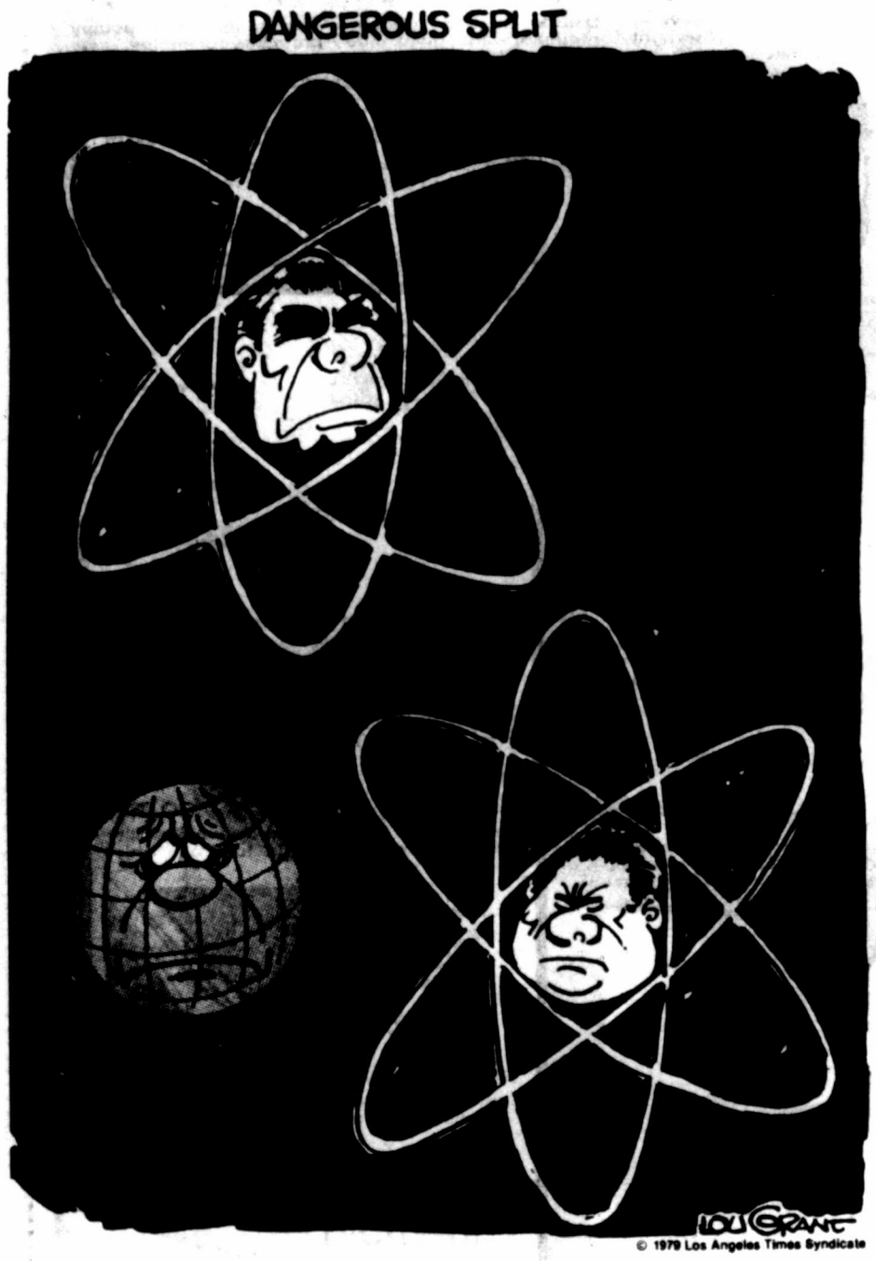

The real issue between the Soviet Union and People's China is, of course, neither sheep pastures nor aid to allies or even ideological differences between competing schools of Communism.

It is territory, the hundreds of thousands of once-Chinese square miles absorbed by empire-building 19th century czars.

Peking wants the territorial question reopened. Moscow refuses to discuss it. In this situation, silence is not golden but a guarantee of continuing friction.

It takes as many to make a dialogue as it does to make a fight. What Sino-Soviet relations at the present impass demonstrate is that it is a lot easier to start a fight than a dialogue.

Able Cable Fable

IF IT'S NOT the possibility of a nuclear power plant accident or an ocean oil slick, it's a forest fire, a coal mine cave-in, a gas well blowout, a dam-busting earthquake or a snail darter's habitat that shows the risks of developing sources of energy.

WHAT THIS COUNTRY needs is a good two-inch-long battery cable extender.

And automotive supply salesmen who don't give you a queer look when you ask for one.

It seemed such a simple matter. The battery cable on my car corroded through and broke away from the terminal. For at least the second time. Maybe the third.

My Sweet Wife checked around. Garages and service stations wanted from $12 up to install a new cable. A cable itself would cost only $4 or so.

But getting a 38-inch waist under a car with a 32-inch crawl space and attaching the cable from a tool box containing a screwdriver and a pair of pliars seemed unappealing.

Especially considering all that oily, gooey mess I saw there.

ALL I NEEDED, my fertile brain deduced, would be an extra-long battery cable terminal or a short separate device to fill the gap between the cable and the terminal.

I could not be the first motorist ever to have a short cable. American manufacturers, ever alert to serve the public interest—and make a buck—were certain to be turning out such gadgets by the oodles.

Blamed upstart.

"Man, that's a new one on me," said the guy at the next.

"They make 'em but we don't carry 'em," said the salesman at the third. "We used to stock 'em where I worked in Plainview."

So, at least I wasn't crazy. Such things do exist. But driving to Plainview to get one seemed inadvisable, considering the price of gasoline.

Besides the President has asked us to conserve fuel.

WAYNE PANTER, the A-J's resident car monkey, said he knew what I wanted and he'd see what he could do. Joe Hughes was certain he'd seen one hanging on the wall at the service station he patronizes.

Hughes was mistaken. Panter was ingenious. He home-built just what I needed. He oughta patent the thing and put it on the market.

But I am not without ingenuity myself. When I started to install Panter's home-made device, I discovered that, by perching my battery precariously, I could stretch the cable to reach the terminal. Barely.

Then, by wedging the battery in securely with the aid of a discarded paint roller, I could start my engine.

This I did. It works like a charm. Now, if Life's Road has no big chugholes ahead, there's no telling how long the May Connection will work.

Next, I'm going to work on a way to change an oil filter without setting a mechanic up with a retirement annuity.

Holmes Alexander:

We're Neither No. 1 Nor No. 2

WASHINGTON—A new language—not just new weapons—has crept into usage with the SALT II debate.

And this debate looks increasingly like a preview of The War Nobody Wants.

The expression most often on the lips of our Secretaries of State and Defense, our Chiefs of Staff and Arms Control Director is the imposter-phrase "essential equivalence."

It is sadly meaningless as these administration defenders of the proposed treaty try to make it say something that just isn't there.

Senators of the Armed Services committee—veterans Jackson, Byrd and Cannon, as well as newcomers Warner of Virginia and Humphrey of New Hampshire—needle Cyrus Vance and others at the witness table to give them a definition of the slippery term.

What's it mean: essential equivalence?

WELL, ANSWERS the witness table in various combinations of tangled verbiage, it means that the United States is neither Number One, as a military power, nor is it exactly Number Two.

The Carter men try to be convincing about a nothingness, try to be assertive about measurelessness, try to get across the idea that the confronting superpowers without having comparable weapons are in a state of equipoise.

But as skeptical U.S. Sen. John Tower, R-Tex., pointed out, the Joint Chiefs of Staff have testified that "we will lose equivalence (while) the Soviets will achieve nuclear superiority in the early 1980s."

ANOTHER PHRASE is heard: "window of vulnerability," which is far from meaningless.

It expresses a state of relative defenselessness in which the United States will find itself in the early 1980s when we are not quite ready to deploy the airborne Cruise missile, which can penetrate the Soviet Union's defenses and demolish every target it reaches.

But the Cruise is nowhere near the M-X, the most devastating block-buster of them all—but not for release until the end of the next decade.

It is through this open "window" that the Russians can draw a bead on our Minute Man sites, theoretically knocking out our prime deterrent.

This threat brings into the diabolical dialogue the expression "launch on attack."

That is, the President, learning that enemy rockets are in-coming, presses the button and releases our missiles on Russian cities and industrial concentrations.

Luckily, the U.S. is armed with a "triad" strategy, and will throw its bomber force and nuclear-missile submarines into the exchange.

WE HAVE EACH day of the hearings a "scenario" of World War III which is played out the caucus room.

It is the preview of what is likely to happen when one adversary, the Communists, are motivated by a will to kill, whereas the other one, our own nation, seems moved only by a will to live.

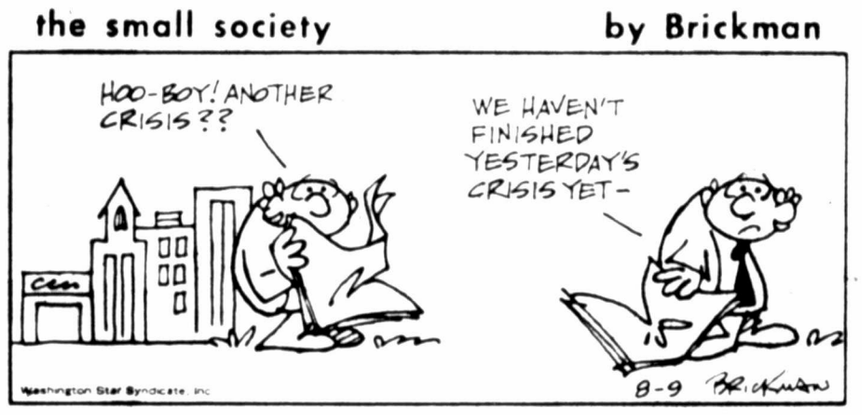

Thus, the anti-treaty senators argue that the previous treaty, SALT I, came at a time when we still were No. 1, and that SALT I "tranquilized" the American people with a false security which allowed the Russians to take over the lead.

Is it wise, then to ratify SALT II without a parallel program of rearmament?

If we are to survive, we must enter an arms race, with or without a treaty, and with a reborn conviction that no fight was ever won without the determination to do so.

This new language—the nuclear lexicon—seems not to have in it the essential equivalence of something called victory.

Sylvia Porter:

Autumn Suits For Men Springing Up In Price

WASHINGTON—Along with just about every other clothes item, the price of men's suits this fall will be up—but the average tag is slated to be "only" about 10 percent higher than fall '78, which makes this hike relatively modest.

Also, the extent of the increases will vary substantially, depending on the price range in which you're buying.

For instance, higher priced men's clothing will be up 7 to 10 percent.

Hart, Schaffner & Marx Clothes, forecasts executive vice president Bert Hand, will hold increases to maximum hikes of 7 percent.

IN THE MIDDLE or popular price range, wool vested suits that sold for $170 last year will retail for around $185, says Botany 500's executive vice president Bruce Geller.

Non-vested wool suits in the same category that retailed for $150 will sell for around $165. Suits without vests in synthetic fibres will retail for around $160 against $145 in fall a year ago.

Another step down in the price category, the retail tag will be up $10 to $15 for suits and sports coats. Wool vested suits are slated to be at $155 to $160. Comparable clothing of man-made materials will be in the $125-$140 range.

In the relatively inexpensive areas, a non-vested polyester that sold for $85 to $90 last fall, will retail for $90-$95.

THE PRICE HIKES reflect a 7 percent industry labor increase earlier this year plus more expensive fabrics.

Many of the woolens and worsteds are imported from Korea, Eastern Europe and South America.

Japan, which previously claimed a big share of the American woolen men's fabric market has been losing its share as production costs have soared and the dollar's buying power against the yen has fallen.

Much of the polyester used in men's clothing is produced in the U.S. These oil-based fabrics mirror price increases resulting from the upsurge in the cost of petroleum, Stanley Gellers, senior editor of Men's Wear, points out.

As for styling, the new clothing will disclose a narrowing of lapels and pocket flaps to coordinate with the new narrower furnishings.

Some manufacturers also predict that the average 10 percent price boost in men's clothing will be offset somewhat by shifting fashion tastes which will reduce the quantity of vested suits in the marketplace. These add $10 to $15 to costs of much clothing.

WHEN SHOPPING FOR a suit this fall, the following will help guide you to finding the best values for your money.

• Crush the lapel. It should quickly spring back into shape. Try rolling the tip of the lapel. When you release it, the lapel should return to place immediately.

• Note the cut of the suit. Check whether trouser creases follow the vertical grain of the fabric, for instance. Study, too, the horizontal grain of the fabric. It should be truly horizontal across the shoulders. Do the sleeves hang straight? The lengthwise threads should be vertical.

• Check the matching of the material. The pattern of the material should match at the seams. This is particularly true of stripes, plaids and fabrics with design.

Seams should be sewn tightly and close but they also should be resilient. Beware of any signs of puckering at the armholes and at other seams in the clothing.

• While hand tailoring is more expensive, it is more desirable than machine sewing. Hand tailoring helps in retention shaping. Machine sewing, however, is regarded as more durable.

Look for hand tailoring in the irregular long stitches at the top of the pants; in the buttonholes; at the joining of the lining of the coat, and at the joining of the collar and the lapel.

Good medium priced clothing frequently comes in blends of polyester and worsted—combining the wrinkle resistance of man-made fibres with the draping quality of wool worsted to give the feel of "hand," or quality fabrics and workmanship.

AS A BUYER, comparison-shop first and decide what price range you can afford (under $100; $100-$149; $150-$199; $200 or more).

Check the ads.

Also consider the so-called pipe rack retailers for bargains.

These discount retailers have been spreading across the country, offering good values and giving you another source in addition to the long-established retailers you have favored.

James J. Kilpatrick:

Government Of Federal Judges

WASHINGTON—Momentous events are not always accompanied by marching bands. Sometimes they creep along on cat feet.

The expansion of the federal judiciary is proceeding so quietly that few persons are aware of what is going on, but the story is infinitely more important than the recent story of Cabinet changes.

President Carter has been handed an opportunity not accorded any President since the days of Washington and Adams.

He has the power to nominate roughly 200 federal judges—152 of them to newly created judgeships, plus 40 or 50 to fill vacancies caused by death or retirement.

For good or ill, his choices will affect the course of American life for generations to come.

FEW PERSONS familiar with the federal courts would question the need for more judges. In many districts both civil and criminal dockets are woefully crowded.

Before the Omnibus Judgeships Act of 1978 cleared Congress last year, we had 399 district judges and 97 circuit judges. By the end of this year, if the Senate grinds out its confirmations on schedule, we will have an additional 117 district judges and another 35 circuit judges.

These will be Carter people.

What kind of people will they be? The question is immensely important.

Ours is the most litigious society in the world, and our federal courts take an increasingly active role in our everyday lives.

Not only in the public schools, but in a dozen other areas also, judges function as lawmakers and administrators. But they are not like other lawmakers who serve for elected terms; once confirmed, federal judges serve for life.

SOME MONTHS AGO, at a breakfast meeting with reporters, Carter said that if he had his own way completely, he would appoint his new judges according to quotas by sex, race and ethnic background.

But politics and judgeships have been entwined since the days of Marbury vs. Madison, and at least as to district judges Carter must temper his social quotas to the prerogatives of the Senate.

The President is doing his best to meet the spirit of his ideal formulation. At the Senate Judiciary Committee, aides are dutifully cataloging the incoming nominations under six headings—males who are white, black or hispanic, and females likewise tagged and labeled.

THE COMMITTEE keeps no scorecard on Democratic or Republican nominees, but informed estimates place the number of Democrats at 90 to 95 percent of the whole.

Neither is any tally maintained on liberals or conservatives, but a preliminary inquiry by the American Judicature Society found that 42 percent of Carter's first batch of nominations regarded themselves as liberal or very liberal.

On July 24, after a brisk debate, the Senate voted 77-21 to confirm Patricia Wald for a seat on the powerful U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia.

JUDGE WALD FITS the President's pattern perfectly—a woman, a liberal, an activist with opinions that she herself has described as radical, such as the opinion that reasonable arguments support extending a right to vote to 12-year-olds.

The other debate revolves around Congressman Abner Mikva of Illinois. He too is a gilt-edged, hand-tooled, morocco-bound liberal.

The Constitution forbids the appointment of a congressman to any position for which the emoluments have been increased during his term of office. The emoluments of circuit judges are tied to the Federal Pay Comparability Act which all but dictates a raise for them in October.

It is a pretty myth that ours is a government of laws, not of men.

Of course our government is a government of men—and women—who cannot shake off the convictions of a lifetime when they don judicial robes.

To a very considerable degree, we are about to get an infusion of liberal activism in our federal courts.

"Just be glad you don't live in the United States. I hear they've just had a horrible purge there."

Officials Urge Public School Health Programs

By PATRICIA McCORMACK
United Press International Writer

Some Johnnies and Janies learn to read in school. Others munch junk food, drive too fast, drink booze, test narcotics, become mothers and fathers before graduation or marriage, get venereal disease, rough up teachers — and even kill themselves.

Many also sit too much, eat too much, grow fat and predispose themselves to heart ailments and strokes in adulthood.

In public health circles, all events like those listed above are called "self-destructive habits."

Which gives rise to the question:

"Why aren't schools warning kids that the payoff for self-destructive behevior is a shorter, disease-riddled life?"

Well, some schools are trying — within limits.

But a lot of school bosses are saying they don't have money for health promotion on the scale really necessary to make an impact.

Others say no one really asked them to get into this part of health in a big way.

Now Dr. Julius B. Richmond, Assistant Secretary for Health, U.S. Department of Health, Education and Welfare, wants the nation's schools to do more to help students control destructive habits.

Say health promoters: give kids the facts about alcohol, smoking, etc., and then let them make the decision to stay on or get off a self-destructive path.

In a new report, "Healthy People," U.S. Surgeon General Richmond pleads for, among other programs, hyped-up health promotion and disease prevention in the academic setting.

Health education and disease prevention is the nation's second health revolution, then HEW Secretary Joseph Califano Jr. said when releasing the Surgeon General's report before he left office at the end of July.

The first health revolution was the control of infectious diseases.

Young, middle-aged and old can get with this new revolution, say Califano and Richmond, by taking more responsibility on themselves for what happens to their health. They must recognize, in old-fashioned terms, that if they burn the candle at both ends, the wick won't last as long.

Here are mini-descriptions of Richmond's health action plan applying to schools:

—Smoking: Special efforts should be directed to children and adolescents. School health education curricula should help a child make intelligent decisions about smoking, as well as about other behavior that affects health.

—Nutrition: Nutrition should be an integral part of the school curriculum.

—Physical fitness: For children and adolescents, exercise too often involvee an emphasis on team sports in which much of the time a player is inactive. More valuable would be properly conducted physical education programs that could help promote lifetime habits of physical exercise as well as contribute to child growth and development.

—Physical education: Since the late '60s many school physical education programs have had to cut back for lack of adequate state and local funding. Many states today have only limited requirements for physical education and no requirements at all for some grade levels.

—Stress control: Educational efforts should underscore the importance of the family as a potential resource for individuals attempting to cope with stress, How families...offer support to a troubled member...can either trigger or intensify stress or help significantly to ameliorate it.

—Health habits: Preparing young children for peer group pressures with regard to smoking, alcohol use, drug use, and sexual activity can enhance their ability to deal with these pressures. Parents, schools, and health professionals...can help children acquire skills to cope with problems they will confront as teen-agers.

—Alcohol and drug abuse: Experimental behavior by young peoople can lead to dependence or misuse of certain substances. Collective measures can be taken by parents, teachers, health professionals and community organization to provide adolescents and young adults with information and skills necessary to help them avoid cigarette smoking or harmful use of alcohol or drugs.

—Nutrition and exercise: Changes in values and social pressures may encourage adolescents to eat snack foods that do not contain adequate supplies of essential nutrients. Yet, good eating habits and regular, vigorous exercise are important to still-growing adolescents (who)...need more calories, and particularly more potein, calcium and iron.

—Family planning: Unwanted pregnancy is a distressing problem for adolescent and young adult women in the United States. Families, schools, health professionals and social organizations can ensure that information about birth control measures is provided to young people of both sexes, and that family planning services are easily accessible to those who are sexually active. Services — including continued schooling — can also be made available in the community for young women who beome pregnant and are in need of care and advice.

— Sexually transmissible diseases: Such diseases that affect large numbers of young people are preventable. Families, schools, health professionals and social organizations can help provide information, confidential counseling and treatment to prevent the transmission of venereal disease.

Boston Designs Bumper Poll

BOSTON (UPI) — A Boston alternative weekly newspaper, The Boston Phoenix, has launched the first political straw poll masquerading as a bumper sticker.

Readers find the bumper stickers in the folds of their papers. It says: "Carter Confidence. I Have It. I Don't Have It."

To the side of each statement is a blank box, and an "x" which can be pasted in to the reader's choice. Alongside is a detachable corner urging readers to register their sentiments with the newspaper.

If initial returns are any indication, Carter is faring poorly among the 75,000 relatively young, well-educated Phoenix subscribers. Carter so far is toting up in the negative column, Phoenix publisher Stephen Mindich said.

Of 500 readers who clipped the survey portion of the sticker and returned it to the newspaper during the first week, 135 said they had confidence in Carter and 358 said they did not.

"The results seem to reflect the scientific polls," Mindich said.

New Study Shows Reaction To Stress Rooted In Personality

By STEVE GERSTEL

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The presidential season is still in its earliest stages, but a few gutsy politicians are already taking long-shot gambles and signing on now with a candidate.

Win or lose, the stakes are high and those big-rollers looking for the early line are taking their chances.

Politicians, especially presidential candidates, are notorious for remembering who was aboard in the uncertain early going and who clambered on when it looked like smooth sailing to the nomination.

It is generally agreed, however, that big-name politicians don't carry the clout they once did.

The days when a strong governor, senator or mayor could stack a delegation and deliver it to the candidate of his choice is gone. But endorsements, properly packaged and displayed, provide nice trimmings for a presidential campaign.

Although most prominent office-holders are biding their time as the chase for the Republican presidential nomination shakes down, there are exceptions.

Predictably, Senate GOP Leader Howard Baker is mining his backyard with the most success.

Some time ago, he named Sen. Richard Lugar of Indiana as his campaign manager and Sen. John Danforth of Missouri to head his issues program. Then last week, Sen. John Chafee of Rhode Island signed on with an endorsement and was given the chore of helping pull New England into the Baker camp.

The balance of Lugar, a conservative, Danforth, a moderate, and Chafee, a liberal, was artfully designed to lend credence to Baker's claim that he can unify the party and that he is the most electable of the Republicans.

Ronald Reagan, going basically with the same team which came so close to winning the 1976 GOP nomination, has again nailed down Sen. Paul Laxalt of Nevada as his national chairman.

The major difference is that in the pre-1976 effort, Laxalt was little known and lightly regarded. His work in the campaign brought him into high regard.

There are a number of other senators who worked closely with Reagan — notably Sen. Jesse Helms of North Carolina — who are certain to join the Californian again, but have not done so yet.

Sen. Robert Dole, having trouble cranking up, finally broke through and named his Kansas colleague, Sen. Nancy Kassebaum, as national cochairman, a catch of questionable value in a 50-state campaign.

Most of the Democratic governors signed a resolution of support for President Carter at a recent conference of state executives.

But four of them abstained and a fifth, California Gov. Edmund Brown, is going to run against Carter for the nomination.

Many prominent Democrats, either dismayed at Carter's performance or unwilling to get lined up with a potential loser, are being extremely careful.

For instance, Senate Democratic leader Robert Byrd and his top aide, Sen. Alan Cranston of California, are giving Carter no encouragement in these troubled days for the president. They are staying neutral.

Sen. George McGovern of South Dakota, the 1976 presidential candidate, wants Carter out of the White House.

Sen. Henry Jackson of Washington, beaten by Carter in 1976, nominally still supports the president but predicts that he will falter and bow out in the primaries.

McGovern is an out-and-out supporter of Sen. Edward Kennedy. Jackson feels Kennedy will be the nominee.

Kennedy, himself, has steadfastly insisted that he expects Carter to win the nomination and has pledged to support his campaign for a second term.

Yet Kennedy, more than anyone else, could help Carter. A declaration by Kennedy that he will not seek or accept the nomination would dispel much of the president's political problems.

That kind of an endorsement would have an impact.

Newspaper Celebrates Anniversary

SHERMAN (UPI) — The Sherman Democrat will observe its 100th anniversary Sunday with a centennial edition capsuling the growth of the city and the newspaper since the publication made its first appearance Aug. 14, 1879.

The newspaper's first editor was a woman, Lydia McPherson, believed to be one of Texas' first female editors of a daily newspaper. She won wide recognition for her work and was featured in an 1896 book titled "Prominent Women of Texas."

The newspaper, like early day preachers, answered "a call from the community" of Sherman and moved its equipment in a covered wagon the 16 miles from Whitesboro to Sherman. It first began publication here as a weekly, changing to daily status three years later, in 1881.

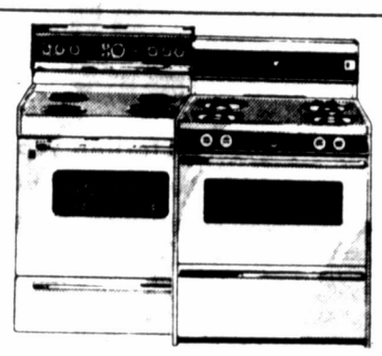

At the time, the newspaper was owned by Mrs. McPherson's sons, G.O. and E.C. Hunter. Its growth for the next hundred years will be described in the special Sunday edition, which includes a section that "points with pride" to more than a dozen of the Sherman Democrat's newspaper neighbors, both weeklies and dailies in the North Texas area.

Also distinctive in the centennial edition are nine full-size cover pages of original art work, reproduced in color, each depicting a person or event important in Sherman's heritage. The art work was commissioned by the newspaper from Pat Vestal of Sherman, whose art appears in several galleries of the region and the nation.

The centennial will also be observed by a formal ceremony and open house Sunday afternoon at the newspaper's plant. Among the guests will be Don Reynolds of Las Vegas, Nev., president of the Donrey Media Group, of which the Sherman newspaper is a member.

Big-Rollers Sign On With Candidates Early In Presidential Race

By ARNOLD SAWISLAK

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Washington Answer Man has been hiding in a shrub over at the White House waiting for the storm to blow over and now is ready to report his findings on the Meaning Of It All at 1600 Pennsylvania Ave.

Question: Sir, what will be the most significant result of President Carter's cabinet and staff reshuffling?

Answer Man: Although Hamilton Jordan as chief of staff will assign tennis court times, he is not chief of the courts. The president is the chief and will continue to check that everyone is wearing proper tennis shoes.

Question: How about those staff evaluation forms that Jordan handed out? How have they worked out?

Answer Man: As federal paper work, on a scale of 1 to 6, the forms rate 4. The spelling, however, gets only a 2.

Question: We get reports that Jordan's appearance has changed markedly since he became chief of staff. Is this true?

Answer Man: Decidedly so. Hamilton has adopted the dark blue, three-piece, pin-striped suit as the chief of staff uniform. He will not wear the vest on the tennis courts. However, he will wear dark blue, pin-striped tennis shoes.

Question: Let's turn to the president's "crisis of confidence" speech. What positive results can be credited to the speech?

Answer Man: The White House has compiled a list of 12,876 good things that were said about America in the 12 hours following the president's speech. That does not include several thousand instances in which Americans said it was a good thing that the presidential election was only 15 months away.

Question: The speech also has given us a new word that seems to crop up everywhere. Can you explain what is meant by the "malaise" the nation is said to be suffering from?

Answer Man: Certainly. "Malaise" is a technical term for the toxic substance that is formed when mayonnaise is left out of the refrigerator after the jar has been opened. However, its use in this context is figurative; literally it would mean we are up to our eyeballs in rotten sandwich spread.

Washington Window

Question: How about some of the president's new energy proposals? Is the new energy mobilization board really going to be able to cut the red tape to speed up work on power projects and pipelines?

Answer Man: No question about it. Within three weeks of its creation, the new board will send out 21,925 forms and questionnaires to energy companies seeking ways to cut red tape. No later than six months after it opens shop, the new board will issue 41,275 forms, charts, tables and schedules demonstrating how it has cut red tape.

Question: Who do you expect to be the chairman of the energy board?

Answer Man: It would be folly to appoint someone who hasn't any Washington experience. The chairman will be James Schlesinger or Elliot Richardson. Hamilton Jordan will be chief of staff. But of course, the president will be chief of the chairman and chief of the chief of staff.

Panels Hold Agriculture Hearings

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Two House subcommittees sought the views of 26 academicians and other experts at hearings to chart relationships between improving the environment and retaining or increasing agricultural productivity.

Experts from across the nation discussed practical application of environmental issues: integrated pest management, organic farming, irrigation, pollution and soil erosion.

A backdrop to the hearings was a new Congressional Research Service study which warned that production gains needed to meet global food demand would be slowed if the United States ignored the adverse impact of air and water pollution on crops and livestock.

Among the witnesses who placed issues in perspective with reports of realistic farming experience was William Lockeretz, formerly with Washington University in St. Louis and now with the Northeast Solar Energy Center in Cambridge, Mass.

At Washington University, Lockeretz supervised the first study of full-scale commercial farms operated organically without herbicides, insecticides or manufactured fertilizers. The study compared 14 well-run conventional farms with 14 organic farms.

The five-year project, begun in 1974, is about to be completed. It was supported by the National Science Foundation, which a few years ago was one of the only sources of agricultural research money for schools outside the land grant complex.

Only recently, the Agriculture Department has expanded its financing to schools outside the complex and its own research centers.

About 85 percent of organic farmers in the study once used conventional chemicals but gave them up because of concerns about human and livestock health, energy costs and soil quality.

Having little in common with "back-to-the-land" homesteaders or with farmers of more than 40 years ago, the Corn Belt organic farmers used modern machinery and owned an average of 425 acres.

Lockeretz told House Agriculture and House Science and Technology subcommittees last week that organic farmers in the study had corn yields that averaged about 9 percent below their neighbors who used chemicals.

Under favorable weather conditions, conventional farmers had better yields, but under drought, organic farmers did as well or better than their conventional neighbors.

Organic farmers in the study produced about 10 percent less gross market value per acre of cropland. With lower expenses, their net returns were "roughly comparable," Lockeretz said.

Part of an explanation for lower gross production was that organic farms had less of their land in corn and more land in rotation hay, which is more soil-conserving than row crops.

Lockeretz estimated that "soil erosion is reduced by about one-third under the rotations used on organic farms."

He said a dollar's worth of crop on an organic farm takes only 40 percent as much fossil fuel as on a conventional farm.

Warning the congressmen to be cautious about organic supporters who claim the study shows farmers can switch to organic methods without losing production or profit, Lockeretz said results are different for a few farmers than if everyone switched to organic farming.

But he said the findings were in "clear contrast to the frequently made assertion that productive and profitable agriculture simply is not possible without major use of agricultural chemicals."

The success of some commercial farmers using organic methods is "a surprising and remarkable phenomenon, one that certainly contradicts a lot of conventional wisdom," Lockeretz said.

There has been acceptance without much supporting data of assertions that a major reduction in fertilizer or pesticide use would doom us to "wildly increased food costs, if not outright starvation or famine," he said.

He said both potential environmental and health hazards of farm chemicals and recognition that the food system is energy dependent have raised questions about continuing trends in chemical use.

Auto Workers Consider Concessions To Struggling Chrysler Corp.

CHICAGO (AP) — United Auto Workers officials are considering a two-year wage freeze proposed by Chrysler Corp., and while approval isn't likely, other concessions may be made to the financially troubled No. 3 U.S. automaker.

UAW President Douglas A. Fraser was to tell today's meeting of about 200 delegates to the union's Chrysler Council about the presentation given to UAW bargainers last Friday by Chrysler President Lee A. Iacocca.

Chrysler has 124,000 UAW members in the United States and Canada, and about 23,000 of them have been laid off indefinitely. The company reported a record $207 million loss in the first quarter this year.

In addition to asking the union for a freeze on wage and fringe benefits, something no Big Three company has ever done, Chrysler has asked for $1 billion in federal aid.

A white-collar hiring freeze already is in effect, and the company says a handful of managers have been laid off.

Fraser called today's meeting because a decision on Chrysler's proposal was too much of a burden for the bargaining committee. He has said he believes a wage and benefit freeze is unacceptable.

The union has given concessions to smaller manufacturers in the past, and Volkswagen Manufacturing Corp. in Pennsylvania and American Motors Corp. work under contracts the UAW considers weaker than those given the Big Three automakers — General Motors Corp., Ford Motor Co. and Chrysler.

"Our leadership has never turned its back on its duty and responsibility," Fraser said.

The UAW, which earlier exempted Chrysler from consideration as a strike target, could not make a counterproposal to Chrysler until settlement patterns at GM and Ford become clear, Fraser said.

Gov. Grasso To Try Electric Car

HARTFORD, Conn. (AP) — Gov. Ella Grasso will be tooling around Connecticut in an electric car for one week this month.

GOV. GRASSO

Mrs. Grasso said Wednesday the General Electric Co. has agreed to loan her one of its Centennial Electrics for eight days beginning Tuesday. She said she will be able to judge for herself how effective an electric car would be for general use.

The GE experimental car is a subcompact run by 18 six-volt batteries that can be recharged from a 220-volt line. It can cruise at 55 mph and has a passing speed of 60 mph. The car can travel 75 miles on one charge at highway speeds and 45 miles in stop-and-go driving.

GE says the car could sell for about $6,500 if 100,000 were produced in a single factory during one year.

Mengele's Citizenship Revoked

MENGELE

The supreme court ruled Wednesday that Mengele invalidated the naturalized citizenship he obtained Nov. 27, 1959, by an "unjustified absence from the country" since 1960.

The court cited a constitutional provision that naturalized citizens can lose their status by leaving the country without government authorization for more than two years. It said Mengele did not request such permission.

Convicted Killer To Be Transferred

VACAVILLE, Calif. (AP) — Dan White, convicted killer of San Francisco Mayor George Moscone and Supervisor Harvey Milk, will be transferred to the protective custody wing of Soledad Prison, corrections officials say.

White is currently being held at the California Medical Facility here, undergoing routine examination and testing.

"We see him as appropriate for protective custody because the notoriety of his crime and the fact he is a former police officer make him potentially a target in the general prison population," prison spokesman Phil Gutherie said Wednesday.

White, a former city supervisor, was sentenced July 3 to seven years plus eight months in prison for the City Hall shooting deaths of Moscone and Milk, who blocked him when he tried to regain the seat he had resigned on the San Francisco Board of Supervisors.

Governor Will Not Back Kennedy

VANCOUVER, Wash. (AP) — Don't count Gov. Dixy Lee Ray's voice among the clamor for a presidential bid by Sen. Edward Kennedy.

GOV. RAY

"There is nothing under the blue heaven that would induce me to vote for Sen. Kennedy, ever," the Democratic governor said Wednesday.

She would not specify her reasons, but said she did not agree with his policies, including his proposals for national health insurance.

The governor made her remarks at a news conference in Vancouver, where she was to visit a fair and deliver a speech on international trade.

Needling Bachelors

The Lighter Side Of Today's News

BURNABY, British Columbia (AP) — For a while, it appeared that it might be easier for a camel to pass through the eye of a needle than for two bachelors from Burnaby to enter the Albee Sewing Center.

But thanks to a ruling by the British Columbia government's human rights board, David Rogers and Danny Brown are on their way toward breaking the sex barrier in the center's sewing class.

Rogers, 28, said he and Brown, 29, were advised Wednesday in a letter from the board that they could enroll in the formerly all-woman class in this Vancouver suburb.

When they tried to enroll earlier this year, the two men were turned away on the grounds that their presence would disrupt instruction. As compensation, they were offered a course in mending. Instead, they took their complaint to the human rights branch.

Rogers, a mechanic who has been working as a restaurant headwaiter, said he and Brown, a security guard, expect a lot of needling from their classmates when the lessons start in September.

"But I'm just interested in learning how to sew," he said. "We are both divorced and as I am a very independent kind of person, I want to learn how to sew."

Chavez Urges Expanded Boycott

SOLEDAD, Calif. (UPI) — Cesar Chavez, entering the fifth day of a water-only fast to support a seven-month-old lettuce strike by his United Farm Workers union, wants to expand a nationwide boycott against the largest grower, United Brands.

At a rally attended by 1,300 people — including 800 UFW Members marching to Salinas, capital of the nation's "salad bowl" — the UFW president Wednesday called for expanding the union boycott against lettuce and United Brands' Chiquita bananas.

Chavez said he would propose to UFW members at the union's annual convention Sunday in Salinas that the boycott be widened to all United Brand products, including John Morell meat products and A&W Root Beer. SunHarvest, a subsidiary of United Brands, is the largest grower being struck.

He also called for the boycott to be expanded to Canada, Europe and Asia.

"A boycott in the U.S., Canada and Europe will help to put pressure on farmers to recognize our just demands," Chavez told the rally.

The UFW is seeking from growers a minimum one-year wage increase of 40 percent over wages ranging from the present starting field worker's pay of $3.70 an hour.

Chavez, 51, who began his water-only fast Sunday for "patience and love," walked more than 10 miles with marchers Wednesday and looked weary toward the end of the day.

"It's not that I'm tired," he told a reporter. "I'm just weak."

Chavez appeared encouraged, however, by the hundreds of people who joined the march during the day as marchers trudged roads bordering fields of tomatoes, chili peppers and corn. The marchers doubled in size to 800 Wednesday.

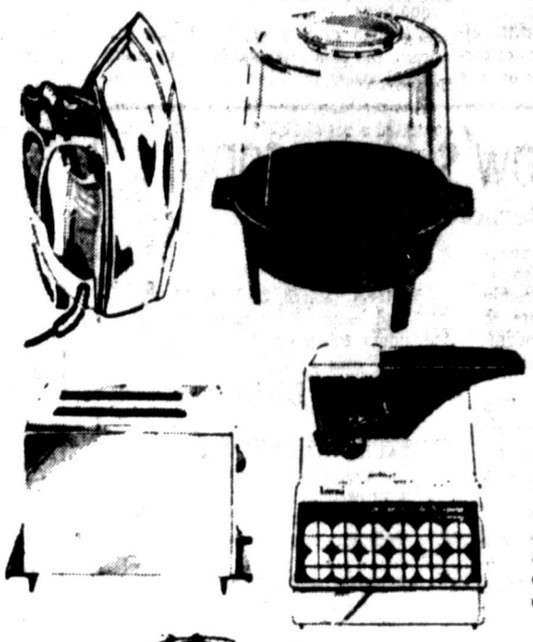

Farm workers, mostly Mexican-Americans, who remained at work along the march route to the Salinas Valley, showed their support in other ways. Some waved. Others tied the stylized thunderbird UFW flag to their tractors.

Worker Siergo Reyes, 27, laughing at a hole in his shoe, said: "The march makes me feel good. As each day passes, I have the spirit to go on fighting."

Some 3,000 people are participating in two UFW marches that will join Saturday in Salina. One group is coming south from San Francisco, a distance of 150 miles, and another is moving north from San Ardo, 70 miles away. Chavez was with the latter group Wednesday.

Study Proposed To Solve Mystery Of Weather

By AL ROSSITER JR.

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The vagaries of climate can have an enormous influenee on the lives of people and even nations around the world, yet scientists understand little about its behavior and even less about what to do about it.

The Natonal Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration has just come up with a five-year plan aimed at unraveling some of the mysteries of the year-to-year and even decade-to-decade variations in our weather.

The plan, a preliminary proposal for a National Climate Program, calls for a coordinated research approach by federal agencies, state groups, private interests, colleges and universities and international organizations.

Special emphasis is placed on the effects of increasing concentrations of carbon dioxide in the atmosphere from the burning of fossil fuels such as coal, oil and gas by energy hungry peoples.

The Climate Study Plan submitted to Congress July 10 said most scientists agree that increased carbon dioxide will affect the global climate — probably by increasing temperatures — but the precise consequences are not known. The plan noted that few options to burning fossil fuels appear tolerable.

"To ignore the problem, however, is the least tolerable option of all," it said.

The plan defines three major areas of study — the assessment of the consequences of climate changes, research to develop a better understanding of the processes that affect the climate, and gathering and disseminating data on climate conditions.

A high priority of the climate program, the plan said, should be to identify and assess all of the societal, economic and political consequences of climate changes, and ways to respond to long-term weather changes.

In addition, the plan said scientists must go beyond merely reacting to changes: "One must also consider the possibilities and costs of trying to prevent or minimize the changes."

The plan said research into the nature of climate processes must go beyond the atmosphere and delve as well into the oceans, the world's ice and snow masses and land surfaces and vegetation.

Science Today

"It is a complex system and our understanding of it is still too poor to support making reliable predictions of its future state," the report said.

"Fundamental questions must be answered. How has the climate evolved in the past? What is the extent to which climate is predictable? What is the influence of the sun on past and current climate variations? How will the changes caused by man increasing carbon dioxide, changing the Earth's vegetative cover, generating heat and dust alter the climate?"

The plan said the information on which research must be based should cover standard atmospheric measurements, atmospheric composition, various ocean variables, solar and Earth radiation, snow and ice cover, and hydrological measurements.

The climate observations must be made globally and over long periods of time, the plan said. Observing systems range from standard local measurements to global satellite experiments at the frontier of technology.

The plan requested was by the National Climate Program Act passed by Congress and signed by President Carter last year.

The federal spending for the recommended activities for the fiscal year that begins in October was estimated at $114.2 million.

SOME WARDROBE

An entourage of 24,000 — noblemen with their families, servants and household goods — accompanied the Empress Elizabeth of Imperial Russia whenever she moved the 400 miles between her palaces at St. Peterburg and Moscow. At her death in 1761, Elizabeth's closets contained 15,000 dresses.

Tomorrow's Horoscope

By Bernice Bede Osol

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) The popularity that is given to you tomorrow places you in the responsible position of taking extra care of what you say to others. Thoughtless remarks could wound deeply.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) You won't take kindly to anyone prying into your business tomorrow. Share your time only with those closest to your heart.

LIBRA (Sept.23-Oct. 23) It's true that you outshine all others in creative thinking tomorrow. However, no one will believe it if you employ autocratic tactics.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Your heart and soul may be willing to tackle most any job tomorrow, but your mind may not cooperate. Take care when using potentially dangerous tools.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) All in all, tomorrow should be a pleasant day. The one weak spot that could cause trouble is your tendency to expect more from others than you should.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Family temperaments may be a little on the hot side tomorrow. Keep their best interests at heart and you won't be the one who causes a flare-up.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) You will enjoy being with the gang tomorrow, but I'm afraid when it comes to doing your part to make the get-together a success, you'll disappear fast.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Getting your own way and satisfying your desires and whims will come easy to you tomorrow. However, it would be wise to take a second look at the expense.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Extend compassion you feel for outsiders tomorrow to members of your own family. Tolerance and patience are a must if you hope to keep peace at home.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) One you go out of your way to help tomorrow may not show any appreciation. Rather than being angry, chalk it up to experience.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) You're a very giving person tomorrow, so long as it doesn't involve surrendering any of your material possessions. Make certain this stems from practicality, not from selfishness.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) You won't go wrong tomorrow if you keep in mind at all times the high standards you advocate. The moment you stoop to anything less, problems will ensue.

Proxmire Advocates Curb To Arms Race

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. William Proxmire, D-Wis., is calling for a 30 percent reduction in the ceiling on strategic weapons in the next round of talks with the Soviet Union.

Proxmire said Tuesday he will ask the Senate to instruct U.S. negotiators to obtain such a ceiling in a successor to the SALT II treaty. Proxmire said SALT II, now under consideration by the Senate, takes some important steps, but does little to stem the arms race.

DR. LAMB

Basic Diet

By LAWRENCE LAMB, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB — Please send me The Health Letter number 4-7 on Weight Losing Diet. I'm 23 years old and I have lost 48 pounds in the last year. I've done it by eating less and cutting down on sweets. Recently I have noticed my hair is falling out and I'm just recovering from mono. I'm 5 foot 5 and wonder what I should weigh and need to know my daily requirements to maintain good health. I'm a beauty operator and very often have little for lunch. What would you suggest for an adequate lunch?

DEAR READER — First, congratulations for getting rid of a lot of excess fat. You should be very pleased about that. There is such a thing as overdoing it. You can cause yourself serious health problems by excessively restricted diets. Let's face it — it's a form of starvation.

You also had the good sense apparently to lose weight at a rate of only about one pound a week. That's plenty. If people would just be sensible enough to expect to lose weight over a long period of time rather than on a crash diet, they would get along a lot better.

Now why is your hair falling out? It's probably because you've been on a calorie-restricted diet too long. Regardless of all the advertisements you read, in the final analysis severe restriction of calorie intake in any form of diet for a sufficient length of time will have its effect.

This was demonstrated years ago at the University of Minnesota that young, active men placed on a 1600-calorie a day diet had hair loss. The biggest problem here, of course, is not having an adequate amount of complete protein as protein rather than burning it up for energy, you have to have an adequate calorie intake as well.

That kind of hair loss is temporary and new hair will grow back in. You can also have hair loss after an illness or operation so I can't totally exclude the impossiblility that infectious mononucleosis may have been part of your problem. That, too, is temporary.

I am sending you The Health Letter that you asked for. Others who want this issue can send 75 cents in check or coin with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it. Send your request to me, in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019. This is a balanced diet and will provide adequate amounts of protein, vitamins and minerals.

You shouldn't stay on this diet too long either. You should think of it as the basis for whatever diet you need and you can add to it any foods that you like in order to have a calorie intake that satisfies your body needs and maintains your body weight at the level that you want.

Now about how much you should weigh. We do have tables for that. For your height and age, you're supposed to weigh about 119 pounds. None of these tables are really accurate. They don't really consider the difference in body composition — how much of your body is fat and how much is muscle. The only really good way to know whether you're too fat or not is by measuring the amount of fat underneath your skin.

Fast lunches can be a problem. I often recommend uncreamed cottage cheese with unsweetened pineapple or some other unsweetened fruit of your choice.

Sociologists Liken New Guinea Tribe To 'Embryonic Mafia'

By ROBERT MUSEL

LONDON (UPI) — Sociologists are fascinated by a comparatively primitive tribe in New Guinea with a crime organization somewhat resembling the Mafia.

The tribe is the Goilala which has transferred its aptitude for murder from the harsh mountains of newly independent Papua New Guinea, off the northeast coast of Australia, to the capital, Port Moresby.

The Goilalas have become so important a factor in Port Moresby crime that they virtually support their tribal economy in the mountains with planeloads of city loot.

Lack of education prevents the Goilalas from corrupting the police and taking over businesses. "Both may, however, simply be matters of time," said a report in the magazine, New Society.

The Goilalas are an inbred group notorious for their implacability. When the first white patrols entered New Guinea's mountains at the turn of the century, the Goilalas met them with a shower of arrows and spears. The Goilalas kept fighting until the late 1930s, many years after other tribes had accepted colonial authority.

According to New Society, the Goilalas, a striking people with dark, brooding, big-boned faces, always exacted an eye for an eye in tribal disputes and killed for pleasure.

A Goilala male proved his manhood by killing "in the same way that a young Mafia recruit must make his bones before taking a senior position in the family."

"Even today there are recorded instances of young Goilalas queuing by a freshly killed body and taking turns to hack at it with an axe," New Society said.

Patrol officers broke the murder spiral in the tribal homelands in the 1950s using the Goilalas' own weapons — torture, arson, assault, destruction of homes and gardens and abuse of womenfolk.

The first Goilalas to reach Port Moresby in the 1950s discovered that murder in the back streets was easier than in the open highlands, where the patrols could extort the name of a suspect. About half of the tribe's 30,000 members now live in squatter camps or resettlement buildings in the capital.

For a people only recently out of the stone age, the Goilalas' adaptation to modern urban crime is remarkable, New Society said. Their crime overlords, called "Kukamara chiefs," present ritual Kukamara tobacco to hit men who can neither refuse to smoke it nor to carry out the murder or crime assigned to them.

The Goilalas once monopolized jobs on refuse collection carts, which enabled them to sift for useable castoffs from European houses and to note which houses were empty. Another tribe, the Chimbus, tried to take over these jobs and the resultant battle, from the late 1960s to the early 1970s, was "longer, more bitter and more bloody than any Chicago gang fight," New Society said.

More than 100 bodies were found in Port Moresby alone.

The magazine said that because there is no liaison between city and mountain police, planeloads of city plunder such as cutlery, crockery, battery-operated radios, tape-recorders, clothing and carpets, are offloaded at mountain airstrips in Goilala country.

It added: "The position of the Goilala in Port Moresby today is like that of an embryonic Mafia. As yet they lack the political awareness and economic sophistication of the Mafia but there are undoubtedly many parallels."

HOW SAFE IS YOUR DRINKING WATER?
HAVE YOURS TESTED FREE!

Like most people you probably are astonished and disturbed at the news of increasing pollution of drinking water you see every day in newspapers, magazines and on television. Sooner or later you have to start asking yourself, "How safe is my drinking water?"

The trouble is that until now you have had no practical way to tell for sure whether your drinking water is good or not.

We think it's important for you to know what's in the water you and your family drink every day. That's why we're making it possible for you to get the full facts from a completely impartial laboratory.

Free, No Obligation Offer

It's easy to have your water tested and evaluated this way. And the service is absolutely free and without obligation of any kind. Here's all you have to do.

Fill out the coupon below or call us toll free and we'll send you a water sample kit. (Easy to follow instructions). Fill the bottle with drinking water from your regular source—tap or well—and send the sample directly to the laboratory in the pre-addressed mailing tube. A copy of the results will be mailed to you promptly.

If the test report reveals pollution of any kind you should review the Water Machine material that also is included with your water sample report. This revolutionary new discovery is so amazing it even can transform salt water from the ocean into pure, delicious drinking water. If it can do that, imagine what it can do for you.

But first you should be sure you have a drinking water problem to solve. The unbiased professional report will tell you. Remember, it's yours at no cost except postage. Baby Products Fill Courtroom During Johnson & Johnson Suit

NEWARK, N.J. (AP) — Bottles of baby shampoo, baby powder and baby oil lined the room, but it wasn't a class for new mothers. It was a court hearing by Johnson & Johnson aimed at protecting its trademarks.

The famous national manufacturer of baby products has filed suit against Quality Pure Manufacturing Inc., charging the packaging of baby products from the small New Jersey firm violates the Johnson & Johnson trademark.

Both companies brought numerous bottles of baby shampoo and other products before U.S. District Judge Vincent J. Biunno this week so he could decide for himself whether Quality Pure packaging is unfair.

Johnson and Johnson alleges Quality Pure, which sells its products at about half the cost of the national name brand, deliberately designed packaging similar to its own to confuse consumers.

The New Brunswick-based Johnson & Johnson backed up its charges by submitting a letter from an irate customer who mistakenly purchased Quality Pure shampoo.

"In each case, the nature and the shape of the package, the colors on the label and the design of the label imitate those utilized by Johnson & Johnson," the suit filed in June alleges.

But Quality Pure, which is based in Fort Lee, says the pale pink, baby-blue and white design on baby oil and powder is "typical" of labeling used by all baby product manufacturers.

When Johnson & Johnson complained to the company last year, Quality Pure made several changes in its packaging because "we did not wish to be in conflict with a large multi-million dollar company," firm treasurer Stanley Jankowitz said in court papers.

Jankowitz noted, however, that even after packaging alterations that cost the firm $7,000, Johnson & Johnson continued to complain.

He accused Johnson & Johnson of "attempting to stifle legitimate competition" and urged the judge to deny the national company's efforts to take Quality Pure off the market until the packaging is changed.

The court papers said an injunction against Quality Pure could have a "devastating effect" on the company and could force the firm into bankruptcy.

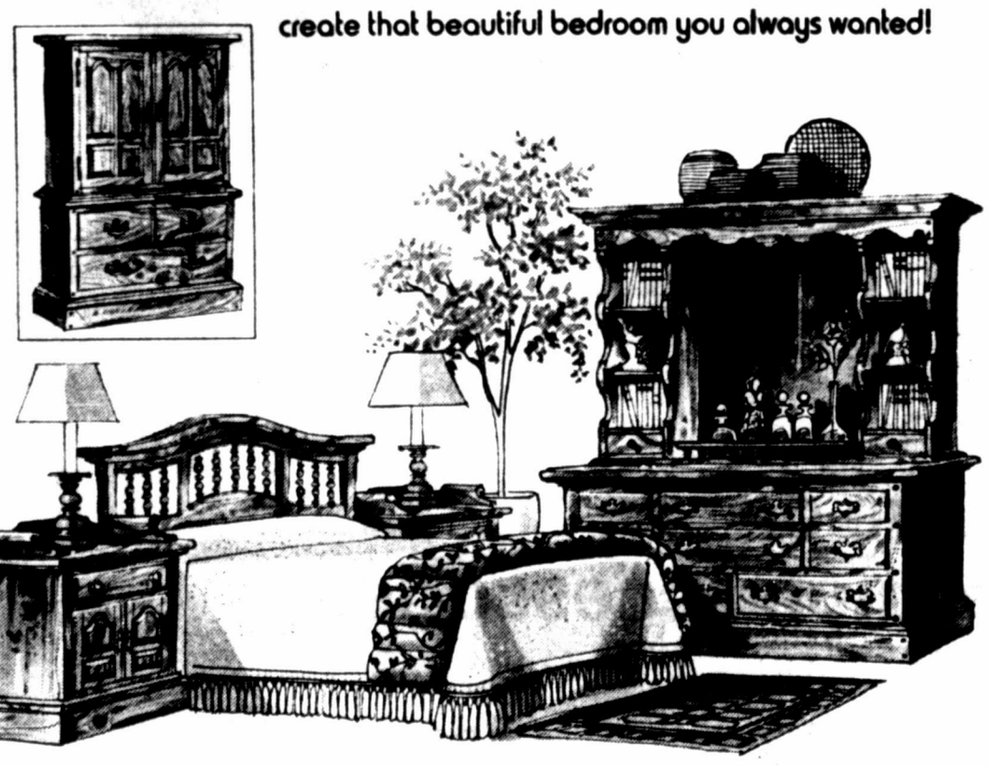

Biunno has reserved decision on whether to issue an injunction against Quality Pure.

Johnson & Johnson also alleged that Quality Pure's television advertising campaign presented the "erroneous message" that its baby shampoo had the same amount of lather and was as mild as the "No More Tears" shampoo by Johnson & Johnson.

Home Fuel Oil Expected To Be Scarce, Costly

WASHINGTON (AP) — The nation may be sweltering in August's heat and humidity, but authorities are looking ahead with new concern about how people will stay warm this winter.

One pessimistic report was issued Wednesday by House investigators. Another equally dim report by private surveyors was being released today.

The issue is home heating oil — its price and availability. Wednesday's House report concerned itself with availability. Previous reports on pricing have suggested the cost could jump at least 15 cents a gallon, approaching $1 a gallon in some areas.

The staff report of the House Small Business subcommittee on antitrust and restraint of trade said many heating oil distributors are behind schedule in filling customers' tanks.

The National Oil Jobbers Council has surveyed 6,500 independent oil dealers and was to release its report today.

The House report noted that staff members surveyed heating oil jobbers in Iowa and that "76 percent ... report their summer fill of home heating oil tanks is running behind where they normally would be at this time of the year.

"Most reported that they were substantially behind schedule, and few foresaw any prospect of catching up before the fall," said the report to Rep. Berkley Bedell, D-Iowa.

The Carter administration has pledged that the country will have 240 million barrels of heating oil in storage by Oct. 1. Administration officials have told congressional committees on several occasions that refiners will be asked to curtail gasoline production in the fall if necessary to meet the heating oil goal.

The House report said there were indications recent increases in distillate fuel, such as heating oil, in oil company storage tanks may be the result of reduced or postponed shipments of heating oil — not because of any increase in the overall supply.

"The statistics for the amount of distillate fuel in inventory are misleading," the report said. "While it may appear that the national stockpile of distillates now is growing rapidly, this may be offset by a growing shortage of fuel at the local level."

To meet the administration's stockpile goal, the nation's refineries would have to increase supplies by an average of nearly 8.5 million barrels per week. But the American Petroleum Institute says supplies of distillate fuel oil increased about 7.9 million barrels in the week ending July 27 — more than a half-million barrels short of the goal.

Speaking of Carter's heating oil stockpile goal, Alan Darrow of the National Oil Jobbers Council commented: "Even if the goal of 240 million barrels is reached, there may still be trouble. The problem ... is it doesn't do any good to have the oil in the refineries if it doesn't reach the homeowner." He explained that the move from refinery to home can take a month.

There were these other developments Wednesday:

— William J. Watt, chairman of the Midwestern Regional Advisory Board to the Energy Department, said federal officials may be lulling Americans into abandoning energy conservation. Watt said the projection of sufficient heating oil supplies is "a phony statistic."

Former Energy Secretary James Schlesinger's "forecasts of adequate heating oil stockpiles at the refinery level have amounted to an announcement that the fuel pinch has ended," Watt said. "The facts do not bear that out." He added that "spot surveys in several states ... indicate that jobbers and distributors have below-normal inventories."

— In dealing with a more immediate problem, the National Governors' Association asked President Carter to rescind or suspend new rules that give them the power to increase service station profit margins.

Klansmen Stage Walk For 'White Rights'

SELMA, Ala. (AP) — Several dozen robed Ku Klux Klansmen were jeered by blacks today as they paraded across the Pettus Bridge on a "white rights" march from Selma to Montgomery — the route once taken by blacks seeking voting rights in the South.

A group of blacks near the bridge jeered the marchers and chanted: "Get out of the land, you damn Klan."

It was on Pettus Bridge that voting rights marchers, led by the Rev. Martin Luther King, were clubbed the first time they tried to march the 50 miles to Montgomery in 1965.

To reach the bridge Klansmen walked down four blocks of Selma's business district, part of it predominantly black. Blacks lined one side of the street. Near the bridge, on the other side, a mostly white crowd watched.

The Klan marchers shouted "white power" chants.

Some women were among the marchers. Most of the marchers wore Klan robes with white hoods but their faces were not hidden.

They were led across the bridge by the robed Bill Wilkinson of Denham Springs, La., the Imperial Wizard of the Invisible Empire, Knights of the Ku Klux Klan.

About a dozen Selma policemen were on hand but no trouble occurred.

Beyond the bridge, state troopers and sheriff's officers took over the security job. The Klansmen marched down the inside lane of the four-lane U.S. Highway 80, backing up traffic for about two miles.

Wilkinson told reporters earlier the Klan would not be stopped by Montgomery city officials who plan to arrest Klansmen marching without a parade permit in the state's capital city.

"They'll have to arrest us, because we're coming through," said Wilkinson. He said Klan lawyers would seek a court order allowing the marchers to enter Montgomery. They plan to reach the capital city Sunday.

A spokesman for the white supremacist group, Bill Riccio, said the klansmen will not allow "anything or anyone to stop us from exercising our constitutional right to march."

Montgomery Mayor Emory Folmar has vowed to keep the group from entering the city because they have not complied with a city ordinance requiring a parade permit.

The City Council refused Tuesday night to consider a Klan request for such a permit, saying it had been filed too late.

"My job is to enforce the laws of this city," Folmar said, "and the law requiring a parade permit is one of them. They shall not parade."

Riccio, state chaplain of the Invisible Empire, said the marchers would be accompanied by campers, portable toilets and a "self-sufficient" vehicle from which they will draw rations as they retrace the route of the historic 1965 march.

If they stay on schedule, the klansmen will be near Montgomery Saturday — just as ceremonies get under way in Selma to dedicate a bronze statue of King at Browns Chapel A.M.E. Church.

Two veterans of that march — King's widow, Coretta, and United Nations Ambassador Andrew Young — have been invited to participate in the ceremonies at Selma.

Labor Official Expecting Wage-Price Controls

CHICAGO (AP) — President Carter's failure to stop inflation through voluntary wage-price guidelines is likely to force him to resort to mandatory controls by next year, a top AFL-CIO official predicts.

"We believe the Congress and the executive branch ... may come to the conclusion that their only recourse is mandatory wage and price controls," AFL-CIO Secretary-Treasurer Lane Kirkland said Wednesday as leaders of the labor federation ended a three-day meeting here.

"None of the other alternative methods they're trying to reduce inflation have much relevence on the primary causes of inflation ... the basic necessities," said Kirkland, heir apparent to the labor federation's longtime president George Meany.

Kirkland said Carter's current approach may only "aggravate" inflation.

As the 1980 presidential election draws near and the administration remains "bankrupt of other ideas, I think the likelihood (of mandatory controls) will increase," Kirkland said.

Carter, who has said repeatedly that he opposes mandatory controls, says he plans to stay with his voluntary program through next year.

Kirkland said Carter's position is reminiscent of former President Richard Nixon' position up until the day he imposed mandatory controls.

"The administration keeps repeating its opposition to it in the same way that Richard Nixon kept repeating it until August 15, 1971, when we had that weekend surprise," Kirkland said.

The AFL-CIO has called on Congress and Carter to impose mandatory controls as the only way to achieve equal sacrifice from all segments of society in the fight against inflation.

Abduction Suspect Remains At Large

ODESSA (Special) — An Odessa man, reportedly kidnapped Monday night, was home safe this morning, but a motive for the abduction had not been determined and the suspect remained at large, Ector County Sheriff Elton Faught said.

Michael Todd Franks, 21, returned home uninjured about 8 p.m. Wednesday after being abducted shortly before midnight Tuesday after he returned with his wife to the couple's trailer house.

"We know who did it but he's still at large," a sheriff's department spokesman said today.

Russell Labruyere, captain of the department's criminal investigation division, said it is believed the suspect is an Odessa resident. He described the suspect as a white man, about 6 feet 2 inches tall and weighing about 155 pounds.

The abductor reportedly was armed with a handgun when he grabbed Franks and fled, leaving Franks' wife and child behind.

"We think we know where he (the suspect) is going...or the direction he's going," Labruyere said.

While no clear motive had been determined yet for the abduction, authorities said it is possible that Franks and his wife just surprised the man while he was burglarizing their trailer house and that he reacted by kidnapping Franks.

Labruyere said that about mid-morning Wednesday Franks was able to escape his abductor when the suspect fell asleep in a parked vehicle at a roadside park near Ranger, some 50 miles east of Abilene.

Franks jumped from the vehicle and hid in some nearby bushes before flagging down a passing motorist, according to the captain.

No ransom was paid.

Ector County deputies said they believe Franks was a passenger in a pickup truck when it stopped at an Abilene service station early Wednesday, and that he told the attendant to notify police that he had been kidnapped.

However, the driver left with Franks in the truck before police could be telephoned.

Labruyere said the suspect apparently was inside the truck pointing a pistol at Franks while he was in the station. He added that the victim was never assaulted during the incident.

Area Man Convicted In Shooting

A former Slaton man was convicted this morning of attempted murder in connection with the Jan. 24 shooting of Randy Scott.

The 72nd District Court jury deliberated 40 minutes before returning the guilty verdict against John Freeman Johnson, 26, now of Dallas.

Scott suffered eight .22-caliber rifle wounds, seven in the back and one in the chest. Bill Wischkaemper, Johnson's attorney, argued that Johnson fired at Scott in self-defense. Testimony in the trial revealed that Scott had fired a .32-caliber pistol one time at Johnson before Johnson returned fire.

Johnson waived his right of having the jury assess punishment, requesting instead that Judge Denzil Bevers sentence him. Bevers set an Aug. 31 sentencing hearing on the case.

Official Criticizes DC-10 Design

ROSEMONT, Ill. (UPI) — An American Airlines official today criticized the design of the engine pylons on DC-10s, the kind of plane that crashed May 25 near Chicago, killing 273 persons.

"We feel there is an unprecedented design problem with regard to vulnerability of pylon damage during maintenance," said Rocco Masiello, American vice president for maintenance.

His testimony was the first overt criticism by American Airlines of McDonnell Douglas Corp.'s design work on the pylon. It came during the second week of National Transportation Safety Board hearings into the cause of the crash.

Masiello testified the DC-10 pylon presented American mechanics with a "completely intolerable situation" when performing maintenance on the DC-10.

He also said American has begun a complete and company-wide investigation into the cause of the accident, independent of the NTSB investigation.

In testimony Wednesday, William S. Fey, American production manager for the DC-10, said the airline decided to ignore a McDonnell Douglas recommendation for servicing the DC-10 engines to save time.

Firefighters Winning Struggle

BOISE, Idaho (AP) — Firefighters began to concentrate efforts on eight blazes still racing through stands of Western timber today after successfully closing lines around five fires in four states.

Two of the eight — the 50,000-acre Gallagher Peak blaze in Idaho's Targhee National Forest and the 6,910-acre Laramie Range fire in Wyoming — were projected for containment by nightfall.

As many as 24 fires were burning earlier in the week, covering more than 135,000 acres. The eight still out of control — including a new one in Idaho that burned two homes and forced 50 families to flee — cover more than 120,000 acres, according to the Interagency Fire Center in Boise, the national firefighting command post.

Fires contained since Wednesday noon included a 2,700-acre blaze in Idaho's Salmon National Forest; 1,425 acres in Montana's Lowland National Forest; 1,510 acres on the Tules Indian Reservation in California; the 200-acre Parish fire in Oregon and a 225-acre blaze on the San Bernadino National Forest in California.

Carr credited cooler temperatures, higher humidity and less wind for the progress. But he said the weather was hot and dry again today, and 6,000 firefighters — half the nation's federal firefighting force — would remain on duty.

Bob Bjornsen, Forest Service director for the fire center, said the outlook "is very grim" for the next 10 days.

Near Bonners Ferry, a town of 1,900 in northern Idaho, a new fire broke out Wednesday afternoon, apparently triggered by an electric fence.

Fanned by high winds, it quickly swept across 750 acres, destroying two homes. Some 50 families living just south of town were evacuated.

Norm Lewis, a spokesman for the State Lands Department, said firefighters hoped to contain that blaze "sometime today."

Fire bosses at the federal command and supply center here reported today that eight major blazes were still uncontained in Idaho, Montana, Wyoming and Oregon.

Hardest hit is Idaho, where five fires are still burning in what Gov. John Evans called "probably the worst fire conditions in (the state's) history." Evans, who flew over the fires Wednesday, said so much smoke fills mountain areas it is hard to spot new blazes.

Evans criticized the Forest Service for its handling of the Gallagher Peak fire. The fire was started by lightning July 6, and firefighters allowed it to burn uncontrolled, hoping it would burn itself out. Instead it spread to destroy 50,000 acres along the Idaho-Montana border.

"The Forest Service did not recognize the serious fire conditions at that time. That fire should not have been allowed to go on as long as it did," said Evans, who admitted he was "second-guessing."

The fire center said four fires, covering 3,340 acres, were controlled Wednesday and six others, covering 6,000 acres, were contained, meaning that although the fires continue to burn, they are ringed by fire lines.

With temperatures in the low 80s, and 40 percent to 45 percent humidity, about 3,000 firefighters working in Idaho concentrated on "hot spots" and the flanks of the major blazes.

In Wyoming, firefighters controlled two fires Wednesday night and hoped to stifle the Laramie Range fire today.

Bureau of Land Management spokesman Joe Montgomery said that blaze "stabilized" Wednesday and progress fighting it has been "excellent."

"I'm sure we'll be announcing containment this afternoon," he said, adding control quickly would follow containment. Fire lines have ringed the fire for two days, he said, but it was not considered contained because it kept jumping the lines.

The Laramie Range fire started over the weekend and spread quickly Monday because of high winds and hot temperatures. Montgomery said thunderstorms on Wednesday helped weaken the fire.

Meanwhile, mop-up operations were under way in Yellowstone National Park and on the Wind River Indian Reservation, where forest fires were controlled Wednesday night. At their peak, the fires scorched nearly 20,000 acres of Wyoming timber and kept about 1,200 firefighters busy.

Fire crews also were getting an upper hand early today over two forest fires in Montana that together have blackened more than 3,000 acres of timber.

Vietnamese Official Attacks U.S. Policy

HANOI, Vietnam (AP) — Acting Foreign Minister Nguyen Co Thach lashed out at the United States today, accusing it of blocking normalization talks, tolerating corruption at the highest levels of government and aggravating the plight of the Vietnamese boat people.

He told reporters accompanying a U.S. congressional delegation led by Benjamin S. Rosenthal that Vietnamese-American talks were now going on, but there were obstacles to normalizing relations. He gave no details on where the talks were being held.

He said the two governments were on the verge of establishing relations last fall, but Washington suddenly set preconditions, namely, that Vietnam had to end the refugee exodus and get out of Cambodia.

Thach said this was a "crazy" example of the Carter administration playing the "China card and using a double standard." He said this meant the United States was criticizing Hanoi for the Cambodian invasion, but said little when China invaded Vietnam because the United States was more concerned with establishing relations with Peking.

Thach said his government has done its "utmost to reduce bribery" by Vietnamese seekng to emigrate and that the refugee exodus was not at a high level, even though some 400,000 Vietnamese refugees are jamming camps throughout Southeast Asia.

"You had Watergate and Lockheed but in our country, corruption is at the bottom, not at the top like yours," Thach said of the two big scandals that rocked the United States this decade.

He also claimed more than 100,000 Chinese from Vietnam were sent from China by boats to Southeast Asia, and said it would be better for America to send civilian ships, rather than the 7th Fleet, to do rescue work "quietly."

Many of the boat people picked up by 7th Fleet ships have said President Carter's decision to help rescue the boat people has spurred a greater exodus from Vietnam.

Thach also there would not be an international conference on Cambodia until the Chinese "threat" there and in Vietnam were halted.

Rosenthal's delegation came to Vietnam specifically to discuss the refugee problem, U.S.-Vietnamese ties, the conflict in Cambodia and other issues.

"We hope our visit will give the Vietnamese a reflection of the various attitudes of the American people," the New York Democrat said Wednesday shortly before his group arrived in Hanoi from Malaysia.

He said the refugee problem in Vietnam and Cambodia could be solved only through "a political solution," and that normalization of relations between the United States and Vietnam was "inevitable and a good thing for the long term."

The congressmen arrived to a low-key welcome after Vietnam lifted a ban on their trip.

FIREFIGHTERS BRIEFED — Party chief Johnny McLain of the U.S. Forest Service reads instructions to a crew of firefighters from Virginia and North Carolina who arrived in Boise to help battle the costly forest blazes in Idaho. The crews are making some progress in controlling the fires, with the help of rain and cooler temperatures. (AP Laserphoto)

Storms Rumble In West Texas

A-J News Services

Very heavy thunderstorms erupted late this morning from near Abilene to San Angelo and Sonora and weathermen said it was just the start of a weekend pattern for West Texas.

A weak cold front pushing into the upper Texas Panhandle this afternoon will trigger showers and thunderstorms as it moves slowly into the South Plains tonight, according to the National Weather Service.

The rain probability on the South Plains is 20 percent tonight and 30 percent Friday, and the West Texas extended forecast calls for showers over most of the region as a result of the frontal system.

Temperatures will be in the low 90s today, the high 60s tonight and near 90 Friday, weathermen said.

The wind will be southerly at 15 to 20 mph today and 5 to 10 mph tonight.

Thunderstorms let loose rain Wednesday night and early today east of a line from Midland to Mineral Wells and dissipated until the only storms left in the early morning hours were east of Del Rio, near Texarkana and along the Upper Gulf Coast.

Some thundershower activity was reported in the Plainview and Floydada areas Wednesday night, but there were no measurable amounts of rainfall..

Statewide rain reports included .18 inch at Texarkana, .15 at Victoria and Alpine, .23 at Junction and .07 at Beaumont, Houston and Galveston.

Lubbock has recorded an official 15.41 inches of rain so far this year and .58 so far this month.

The 1979 total to date is more than double the 7.89 recorded at this point last year.

At least 18 Ohio fairgoers were injured during a sudden thunderstorm, a tornado damaged 34 homes in a nearby town and severe thunderstorms again pounded an area from the Dakotas to the mid-Atlantic states today.

Thousands of homes and businesses in Ohio were without power because of the storms, which hit throughout the day and night Wednesday and persisted today. Hundreds of roads were blocked by fallen tree limbs and flash floods washed over creek banks in many areas.

The area hit hardest was Marion County in central Ohio.

Wicked wind gusts from a thunderstorm toppled tents and hurled debris at the Marion County Fair, sending people in the midway scurrying for cover.

California sculptor Grant Speed has been commissioned to sculpt the 8-foot bronze statue of the former Lubbock musician who gained fame as being one of the pioneers in rock music.

Holly was killed in a plane crash in 1959.

The board also approved alloting $2,100 for a four-page brochure compiled by the education committee of the chamber showing adult continuing education programs offered by the various institutions in Lubbock.

Committee chairman Bill Tinney told the board the chamber will print 20,000 pamphlets to be distributed through the mail to several areas around Lubbock.

The booklet will show adult continuing education courses being offered by the public schools, Texas Tech University, Lubbock Christian College and South Plains College.

Jim Goodwin of the public relations committee received board approval to enter Lubbock in the All-American City competition. He said the city had a good chance of winning the honors and that winning the competition would be good for the city's image.

The board also discussed the possibility of conducting a year-long research project to look into what the chamber can do to increase Lubbock's image among other Texas cities.

Goodwin said an advertising campaign aimed at getting exposure for the city in statewide publications would help the city's image tremendously.

Jury Ponders Evidence In Murder Trial Here

By KAY BELL
Avalanche-Journal Staff

Criminal District Attorney John Montford this morning urged a 137th District Court jury to find Paul Herrera Jr. guilty of the "methodical, cold-blooded" murder of Israel Duran.

The jury was still considering Herrera's guilt or innocence early this afternoon after beginning deliberations at 10:30 a.m.

In closing arguments, an animated Montford told the jury evidence presented during the two days of testimony showed that Herrera fully intended to kill the 23-year-old Duran when they drove to Herrera's east Lubbock residence the late afternoon of Feb. 4.

"This was a patterned, planned, cold-blooded and concocted murder," Montford charged, "with an intent irreconcilable in a civilized society."

The prosecutor told the nine-woman, three-man panel that in considering the defense's argument of self-defense, they should take into account whether Herrera acted reasonably.

"I ask you, is that a reasonable person?" Montford shouted, turning to point at the 20-year-old defendant.

"Self-defense is designed to protect people against people like that," Montford told the panel, again pointing at Herrera. "It's not a vehicle to facilitate murder."

Montford then recited testimony heard in the trial.

He called every action Herrera took that afternoon calculated and methodical, beginning with the drive to Herrera's residence to get the gun and ending with Duran's body being left in a field east of Lubbock.

"I want you to think about, as (defense attorneys) present their argument, what happened to Israel," Montford said.

"Israel Duran is not here. Israel Duran did not have the opportunity to cry," Montford said, referring to Hererra's emotional testimony Wednesday afternoon.

Herrera had testified he shot Duran because he was afraid for his life. The defendant said he feared Duran would attack him with the knife over which the pair had been arguing.

However, Montford argued that Herrera did not act reasonably, even in light of fear.

"Remember that critical juncture when Paul Herrera stood here at the (bathroom) door and delivered that last blast into the body of Israel Duran that (Herrera) had already desecrated," Montford urged the jury, emphasizing his argument by pointing to the diagram of Herrera's house.

"Remember the shock of Israel Duran, who didn't have a chance to cry, because anybody who aims that good is not going to give you a chance to cry."

Herrera's uncle, Richard Gomez, testified he heard two or three shots before Herrera followed Duran into the bathroom and fired a final time.

"If this bloodbath is indicative of self-defense in Lubbock County, then we've lapsed our society into pure lawlessness and anarchy," Montford told the panel.

Co-defense council Mark Hall, however, noted in his argument that Gomez had told Herrera that Duran "was no one to fool around with."

"You heard Paul Herrera testify to the fear he felt driving down the street," the more subdued Hall said. "And when they got to the small house, Israel Duran kept egging Paul on; daring him to take action.

"Paul Herrera knew (Duran) had that knife and he had seen it flipped open in a split second," Hall said. "Then Israel Duran reaches in his pocket — for car keys in that situation?

"What goes through a person's mind? (Herrera) was afraid," Hall emphasized in his argument asking the jury, that if they must convict Herrera, it be for the lesser offense of voluntary manslaughter.

John "J.C." O'Shea, Herrera's other attorney, told the jury the defense was not denying the facts of the case.

"We do not contest nor deny that Israel Duran is dead and Paul Herrera is the one who had the gun," argued O'Shea, who delivered most of his summation standing behind his client with hands on Herrera's shoulders.

"But it is the law, not just in this community but throughout the state, that is to be applied," O'Shea said.

Arguing that the jury acquit Herrera on grounds of self defense, O'Shea noted Herrera's residence had no back door through which the defendant could retreat.

"Look at this young man here," O'Shea told the panel. "At the time he faced this situation he was 19 years of age, not sitting here in a courtroom, as Mr. Montford would have you believe, with time to reflect and consider, but faced by a man, large and armed, and whom he had been told not to mess around with.

"He panicked," O'Shea said, adding, "The facts are dictated by the circumstances."

Freeway Termed Critical Need For City Traffic Improvement

Hatchell said, grade separations like that recommended for 50th and Quaker will be needed at even more intersections.

Hatchell said changes were continuing to be made in the traffic signal timing in Lubbock, with the latest changes expected to be in effect in about two weeks.

Timing plans previously implemented had some "problem areas" which should be smoothed out with the new patterns, Hatchell said.

Currently Lubbock's traffic signals are timed by what is called a traffic-responsive system which Hatchell said is "relatively slow to react to changes in traffic flow and requires a high degree of maintenance."

A digital computer system, which would cost between $1.6 and $2.3 million to implement in Lubbock, could improve traffic flow a minimum of 10 to 15 percent, Hatchell said.

The council took no action on Hatchell's report, instead deciding to further study the recommendations.

The council approved on first reading the request of Norton Baker and Leroy Elmore to annex 740 acres of land south of the city, contingent on agreements to be worked out on the cost to the developer of a sewer lift station. Council members also requested further information on the city's liability if it is unable to provide water or sewer service to the area within three years as required by state law.

The property is located between Indiana Avenue and University Avenue from 107th Street to 114th Street.

This afternoon, the council was to hold a public hearing on and consider the request of the Lubbock Industrial Foundation Inc. to annex land between Ursuline and Kent Streets from Guava Avenue to Olive Avenue.

Also at the meeting, the council agreed to consider a Human Relations Commission recommendation that Quirt Avenue be renamed Martin Luther King Jr. Boulevard in memory of the slain civil rights leader.

HRC chairman Theron Cole said Quirt was chosen because it is the main north-south thoroughfare through East Lubbock and because it connects the city with the airport.

Renaming the street in honor of King would "set the tone for visitors to the city that Lubbock recognizes the accomplishments of black Americans," Cole said.

Council members said more information was needed since no other city streets have been named for individuals, and some estimate is needed on the cost involved to replace street signs.

City Attorney John Ross was asked to study whether the name change was possible under a 1949 ordinance which specifies how streets are to be named.

HRC advisory committee member Harold Chatman mentioned the council was willing to honor rock singer Buddy Holly and said, "Blacks also need symbolism."

Renaming Quirt Avenue would "reassure the community the council does take into effect its needs," Chatman added.

Public Hearing Set On School Tax Rate

cases in the schools, everyone will have above a 3 percent increase." He said Tuesday that the districts will be increasing their budgets more than 3 percent "because inflation is higher than that."

Administrators claim that not only inflation, which they say is anywhere between 10 and 14 percent, but also the 5.1 percent increase in state teachers salaries has eaten up the budget.

Ronnie Gooch, assistant superintendent for business affairs, said that the district this year would gain only about $200,000 more from the tax levy if calculated at the $1.38 rate for both years. That 1.55 percent increase, he said, will be consumed by inflation and teacher salaries alone.

The tax roll for the district was only $1.34 billion compared to last year's roll of $1.32 billion, due chiefly to tax exemptions.

Ed Irons, superintendent of the district, said, "It looks like we're trying to hoodwink the public when we're really not. This is really going to confuse the people."

Board president Monte Hasie said he thinks taxpayers understand the effects of inflation, however. He added that he thinks the small number of taxpayers who went before the Board of Equalization this year shows that people understand that taxes for some will increase because of reappraisal that is required by law.

School officials will run a quarter-page ad (as dictated by law) in Saturday's Avalanche-Journal noting the date of the tax rate hearing.

They must also run an ad giving notice of a board meeting to adopt the budget which is set for Aug. 27. At that meeting, trustees also will set the tax rate.

In other business today, trustees decided to ask attorney Charles Galey to represent the district in the suit that nine city banks have brought against the City of Lubbock, the Lubbock Independent School District and tax assessor-collector John Brooks. The banks claim unfair taxation in the suit.

Grandmother Rejoins U.S. Peace Corps

WASHINGTON (AP) — Bea Alford, a 76-year-old grandmother from Santa Monica, Calif., is giving up her mobile home and Cadillac to enlist in the Peace Corps — for the second time.

She quit her $13,500-a-year job as a Peace Corps recruiter and will leave Friday for Jamaica to work with rural women, teaching them such things as hygiene, gardening and how to preserve food.

"My son can't understand why I would give up a salary to do volunteer work," said Mrs. Alford, who has four children and 11 grandchildren.

"But I didn't like collecting material things and having to pay rent and stand in gas lines," she said. "Money was becoming important to me, and I didn't like that. I wanted to get away from money."

As a volunteer, she will receive a living allowance of about $100 a month. At the end of her tour, she will also get a readjustment allowance of $125 for each month she served.

In an interview, Mrs. Alford said her messages to the volunteers she has been recruiting for the last 10 years differ.

"I tell the young ones to give two years of their life, and old ones to add two," she said. "I try to make older people see they need to be useful. To be needed offers a new life."

Incentives for older Americans to sign up are that they still qualify for Social Security and that they often get more respect in foreign countries than they do in the United States.

Citizens of other countries "sometimes find older people easier to approach," she said. "Older people can sometimes gain their confidence faster than younger ones."

The Peace Corps, started by the late President John F. Kennedy in 1961, now has about 6,400 volunteers, less than half the number of its peak years in the mid-1960s.

Mrs. Alford and her late husband, a carpenter with a cabinet business in Los Angeles, first joined the Peace Corps in 1964. He was 64; she was 62.

"We were getting to retirement age, but we weren't ready for the rocking chair," she said. "We heard the Peace Corps was looking for carpenters, and asked if they'd take an old one. They said 'yes.'"

The Alfords spent two years in English-speaking Belize in Central America.

At first they lived in a government house but found the local residents reluctant to come inside. So they moved into a thatch-roofed house with a dirt floor where the residents would feel comfortable dropping by.

The only running water was in a river that flowed 100 yards from the house. Mrs. Alford did laundry there, scrubbing it on the rocks.

Mrs. Alford's husband died several years later of a heart attack, and last spring she decided to enlist again.

"A mobile home and a Cadillac aren't everything," she said. "I want to live a productive life. I remember the expression of the little boy I taught to write his name. He said, 'Now I'm educated.' The appreciation is the pay."

Workers Questioned After Project Audit

WASHINGTON (AP) — Nineteen American workers have been detained for questioning in connection with possible overpayments to Saudi suppliers involved in construction of a new city in Saudi Arabia, the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers says.

Corp spokesman Bob Hume said Monday five of the 19, all employed by Morrison-Knudsen of Boise, Idaho, are considered suspects in the case. Their names were withheld. Morrison-Knudson general counsel Ken Smith said the company was aware that the project was being audited and that the firm will cooperate fully. The U.S. Army Corps of Engineers is overseeing construction of the $8.5 billion city under contract to the Saudi government.

THE WHITE HOUSE

Subcommittee Ahead Of Carter

By FRANK CORMIER

WASHINGTON (AP) — Who says President Carter has trouble winning congressional approval for his programs?

Why, just a couple of weeks ago a House Appropriations subcommittee approved one of them before it even was submitted.

Dick Clark, the former Democratic senator from Iowa who is Carter's ambassador for refugee affairs, mentioned while testifying before the international operations subcommittee that Carter would seek an extra $208.9 million to double the influx of Vietnamese refugees.

Without delay, the subcommittee formally gave its approval.

Misplaced Word

A misplaced "perhaps" in a presidential sentence probably has folks in scattered cities awaiting Carter visits that may not happen.

At his most recent Washington news conference, Carter said he would be going "sometime to Miami and Bangor, Maine, and San Francisco, and perhaps Des Moines, Iowa."

When aides were asked about plans for the travels Carter mentioned, they said there were none. It seems the president should have put the "perhaps" at the start of the sentence.

Carter Greeters

Among those who welcomed Carter were Mr. and Mrs. John Y. Brown. He is the Democratic candidate for governor of Kentucky, she the former Phyllis George, a former Miss America and television sportscaster.

After two Washington reporters wrote a "pool report" for colleagues that described Mrs. Brown as "slightly overweight," a local reporter asked Brown if his wife were pregnant.

Brown issued a denial but carried away a copy of the "pool report" as a dubious souvenir.

Many Suggestions

At a staff meeting last week, it was learned, Carter assistants looked over a list of more than a dozen travel destinations suggested for August.

An aide, who asked that he not be named, said although the president plans to increase his domestic travels, he obviously will visit only a fraction of the suggested cities.

But the White House does contact people in all the places suggested, which inspires a plenitude of rumors — both true and false — about Carter's actual plans.

Stick-In-Mud

When the president decided to stop at English, Ind., last week to inspect flood damage, only a single Secret Service car awaited his arrival.

And it got stuck in the mud.

Used Fans

At his Bardstown, Ky., "town meeting" the same day, Carter faced citizens vigorously fanning themselves in the hot, humid Bardstown High School gymnasium.

The cardboard fans, distributed free, depicted Christ surrounded by sheep, a young black girl singing hymns and other scenes.

On the back, stickers were attached, proclaiming "President Jimmy Carter Day." These covered an advertising message for "Hathaway & Clark Funeral Home Inc. ... Since 1901."

Energy Tips Provided

The nearly 2,000 Kentuckians who jammed themselves into the small gym were offered free literature, too. The Department of Energy supplied the crowd with copies of a 30-page pamphlet, "Tips For Energy Savers."

Stations Charged Too Much For Gas

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Energy Department says 2,000 of the 5,000 service stations it has audited since winter were found to be overcharging for gasoline.

The department's Economic Regulatory Administration said Tuesday it collected more than $160,000 in penalties for violations of federal pricing regulations. The agency said 409 violations were found in Los Angeles, 155 in Pittsburgh, 118 in Detroit, 155 in Chicago, 91 in Cleveland, 86 in New York and 85 in Boston. The agency said it targeted for audits the stations where violations seemed most likely.

Carter Administration Overlooks Basic Principle

By STAN BENJAMIN

WASHINGTON (AP) — It's such an elementary principle of good management that you wonder how the Carter administration overlooked it the first time out: Where the boss is weak, the deputy should be strong.

If one is best at bright ideas, the other should be tops at carrying them out.

The production whiz needs the sales booster.

Mr. or Mrs. Inside needs Mrs. or Mr. Outside.

The Carter administration overlooked that principle, at least where energy management was concerned, and for two years it suffered the consequences in legislative failures on Capitol Hill and a managerial mess in the new Department of Energy.

Carter's mid-term Cabinet shake-up offers an intriguing opportunity to dust off the principle of management balance and put together a more varied and more effective energy team.

The need for variety was apparent as long ago as April 1977, just after Carter announced his first major set of energy policies.

James R. Schlesinger, then Carter's energy adviser and the obvious choice for secretary of energy once the proposed new department was approved, was asked how he would sell the program — based on the obviously unpopular notion of raising fuel prices — to a voter-sensitive Congress.

Schlesinger said he would simply explain the logical necessity of the program — again and again, if need be — until Congress eventually understood and adopted it.

That meant the program was already in trouble.

Schlesinger predicted passage within the year, apparently unconcerned that logical argument is not always effective in Congress against politics and special-interest lobbying.

Major energy legislation was to be delayed, in fact, some 17 months, emerging almost unrecognizable after a congressional mauling.

But that was Schlesinger's style: professional to the point of condescension, lecturing, keen on theory but with little taste for practical politics.

Come to think of it, that was largely Jimmy Carter's style too. Carter bypassed Democratic Party regulars and special interests in winning election and bragged that he owed nothing to anyone. But then he discovered they didn't owe him anything either, and he never developed a strong support base in Congress.

Carter and Schlesinger have been described as "technocrats," managers whose strength lies in understanding modern technological systems.

Yet when Schlesinger became energy secretary, still another technocrat was named deputy secretary — John F. O'Leary, a veteran government executive who agrees with that description of himself.

The title of undersecretary went to Dale D. Myers, an aeronautical engineer and space programs manager.

Assistant secretary posts were heavy with people drawn from technical and administrative backgrounds.

One of the few Energy Department executives with close links to Capitol Hill admitted privately there was almost nobody in the top ranks of the department capable of effective lobbying with Congress.

In a recent interview, O'Leary, soon to leave the department, agreed that energy policy has suffered from this repeated casting of officials in the psychological images of Carter and Schlesinger.

"It's a technocratic administration," O'Leary acknowledged. "It's certainly a gap that has hurt us, and not just us here but the country."

And O'Leary said the Energy Department was not the only agency suffering from this executive uniformity.

"I know the personalities involved, and they are not master men on the Hill either," he said.

To replace Schlesinger, the president has chosen Deputy Defense Secretary Charles W. Duncan, who has earned a reputation as an efficient manager — which the Energy Department really needs — but not as a policy-originator or persuader of reluctant congressmen.

It remains to be seen who Carter and Duncan will assign to the other top Energy Department positions.

Will they balance the management pro with a skilled lobbyist to coax the latest energy proposals through Congress? With an imaginative idea-person? With a few people who don't belong to the same club?

Or will they, once again, send in the clones?

Trial Witness Refuses To Tell Of Smuggling

AUSTIN (AP) — A Connecticut State prison inmate — apparently related by marriage to Jimmy Chagra — refused to testify today about the alleged smuggling of 1,000 pounds of marijuana to Connecticut.

Chagra's dope smuggling trial was recessed briefly so Runkles — at the court's insistence — could telephone his attorney in Connecticut to ask whether he should accept a grant of immunity from prosecution based on anything he might say.

U.S. District Judge William Sessions of El Paso told Runkles he could be held in contempt and have as much as six months added to his state prison sentence in Connecticut if he refused to testify after being granted immunity.

Runkles invoked the 5th Amendment when asked by federal prosecutors his residence, whether he knows Chagra, whether he is related by marriage to Chagra, whether he was arrested with 1,000 pounds of marijuana in Connecticut and where he got the marijuana.

Runkles at one point told Sessions, "All I want is to go back to Connecticut, serve my time and be finished with this whole mess."

The stocky, white-haired and white-bearded man almost broke into tears as he told Sessions that he had been badly treated by both Connecticut and federal authorities.

He said his mother died July 10 and he was not allowed to attend her funeral.

"I believe it was because of the hold for this trial. ... Nobody can do anything to me except God. I feel threatened. I suspect my personality is changing," Runkles said.

He said U.S. marshals in Connecticut "threatened to drag me on the plane to Texas" if he would not go willingly. He said roaches crawled on him in the San Antonio jail and "you wouldn't believe the filthy conditions" in the Williamson County jail at Georgetown.

In Wednesday's testimony, two men said they were jailed with Chagra in Colombia for several weeks in 1977 after Colombian authorities squelched a mercy mission.

Death Rate Declines In Traffic Crackdown

By SYLVIA TEAGUE
Avalanche-Journal Staff

For the first seven months of 1979, traffic fatalities have dropped nearly 40 percent in Lubbock compared to the same period in 1978, Mayor Dirk West says.

Through July 31 this year, 16 persons died in traffic accidents, compared to 26 deaths during the first seven months of 1978, he said.

West credited his traffic crackdown, which began last October, with reducing the number of traffic deaths, saying the program "continues to show dramatic results."

Although he said "the overall picture is very encouraging," the mayor admitted July was a "tough month," with four fatalities occurring.

But he said the accidents causing the fatalities were the "crazy type," which couldn't be prevented with any kind of traffic program.

While accidents were down last month, ticket were up 20.5 percent over July 1978, West said. He pledged Lubbock police will continue to set records in the number of tickets written as long as "uncaring and foolish drivers continue to break the law."

"We still have a long way to go until our city streets are as safe as they should be," West said, "but in comparison to the nightmare situation we had in 1977, tremendous strides have been made...through strict, unrelenting en-

Houston Told To Reshape City Council

HOUSTON (UPI) — The Justice Department in effect has told this booming Southern metropolis to reorganize its City Council, giving more representation to blacks and Hispanics, or forget further annexations or elections.

Voters Saturday will consider one proposed answer to the federal demand: reshaping the current eight-member council elected citywide into a council with nine members chosen from districts and five chosen citywide.

It is the only charter amendment on the ballot Saturday because a federal court rejected the City Council's proposal to ignore the Justice Department and list the already-rejected status quo as an alternative.

A coalition of disgruntled whites, blacks and Hispanics hopes to defeat the 9-5 plan, even though its failure could force delay of the November election.

They want to send city officials back to the drawing board to develop a larger council with more single-member districts.

On the other side, Chamber of Commerce President Louie Welch and Mayor Jim McConn have been leading a push for passage of 9-5 as necessary to keep city government moving and Houston growing. Their supporters prefer a small council.

Annexation of mostly white areas without the Voting Rights Act-required Justice Department approval — to protect against dilution of minority political power — triggered the current crisis.

Federal lawyers responded by declaring the annexations illegal and going to court to block further elections until the City Council is reorganized. There is no guarantee the Justice Department would approve 9-5, but the council expects it.

The city does not want to disannex the challenged additions to the city limits and it is doubtful the maneuver, which city lawyers say is probably not legal under state law, would quiet Justice Department objections anyway.

Opponents of 9-5 argue the issue is more representative government and improvement in low-budget, growth-strained municipal services in a city which has expanded from 900,000 to 1.6 million persons in 20 years.

They want more single-member district representatives for white as well as

In the gentle art of falsecarding, playing smoothly is a necessary ingredient. You can't fiddle about for two or three minutes, act frightened and still expect people to believe you. And you must take care which card you play to have any hope that your falsecard will succeed.

We endorse West's takeout double, but cannot say the same for North's decision to pass. While his hand was not good enough for a redouble, he should certainly have raised to two diamonds. South's decision to leap to game after he had received delayed support from his partner is rather rash, especially since South had already shown extra values with his competitive bid of two diamonds; but we have seen worse. East naturally increased the stakes on the strength of his sure trump trick.

West led the king of hearts and, as you can see, the contract is unmakable – declarer has to lose a heart, a club and a trump. That is, unless West can be convinced to continue hearts. Declarer must offer his opponent every inducement to do so, and this is no time to go into a brown study.

To the first trick East contributed the six of hearts, and had declarer followed with the two of hearts, it would have been obvious to West that his partner's six was his lowest heart and therefore he was discouraging a heart continuation. So declarer quickly followed suit with the seven, concealing the deuce. It now appeared to West that his partner had begun an encouraging signal, so he led another heart into declarer's ace-jack. Dummy's club loser disappeared on declarer's second heart winner and the contract rolled home.

A bit of analysis on West's part would have made it clear that it was not necessary to continue hearts to defeat the contract even if East held the ace. Since East presumably has four spades for his bid, declarer can have no more than one, so a spade shift had to be safe. If declarer had heart losers, there was nowhere to put them. However, opponents are not always perfect analysts and South's subtle falsecard merits a word of praise.

DEAR ABBY

DEAR ABBY: I am a volunteer with the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals. So far this summer we have had several cases of pets who were overcome by heat prostration after having been left in automobiles parked in the hot sun.

A few years ago you had a terrific piece in your column about this problem. I am enclosing it. Would you please consider a rerun?

Eileen R. In Dover, Del.

Dear Eileen: You're doggone right I will:

Dear Pet Owners: With summer here, please do not take your pet along for the ride and leave him locked in a parked car while you run errands and shop.

When the temperature is 85 degrees outside, the temperature inside a parked car (even with the windows slightly open) will reach 102 degrees within 10 minutes. And in 30 minutes it will reach 120 degrees!

The normal body temperature of a dog is approximately 102 degrees, and it can withstand approximately 108 degrees for a very short time before suffering irreparable brain damage or death.

If you must leave your pet locked in a parked car-leave him home!

P.S. My pet consultant says, "NEVER park a car in the sun-even with the windows open if a pet is inside."

• • •

DEAR ABBY: I have a strange problem. Should I be the matron of honor at my ex-husband's wedding?

I know the woman he's marrying (slightly) but we're really not all that close. I neither like nor dislike her. I still can't figure out why she asked me.

My husband has asked our two children, ages five and nine, to be in the wedding party, so, of course, they will be there. I am not carrying the torch for my ex, but I have no desire to attend this wedding.

How should I handle it? I don't want to make up any lies.

DEAR ABBY: Did a letter in your column ever ring a bell with us!

Upon retiring and moving to San Diego several years ago, we started to hear from acquaintances from our home state. They said, "We've heard so much about San Diego — we'd love to come out and spend a week or so with you seeing the sights and enjoying the weather."

Here's how we handled it: We'd write back saying, "We're so happy you're planning to come to San Diego. When you get here and get settled, be sure to give us a ring. We'd love to get together for a drink."

FDA Safety Restrictions Result Of Rapid Technological Advances

By PATRICIA McCORMACK
UPI Health Editor

Use amphetamines as a crutch for will-power when dieting?

If so, you probably want to shake both fists at Uncle Sam's Food and Drug Administration for its recent pronouncement about the pep pills.

Or haven't you heard? The FDA wants to ban the effective reducing drugs.

You can join the millions who want to stick with saccharin — another substance the FDA wants to nix.

Down on the cattle and sheep farms, people using DES — Diethystilbestrol — to fatten herds likely feel the same way about the FDA, too. The FDA recently stopped DES use down on the farm. It's a cancercauser, claim authorities who were worried about possible DES residues in meat.

The hair-dye industry isn't wild about the FDA either. Ditto for dozens of makers of everything from foods and cosmetics to drugs and medical devices.

The multi-million dollar hair coloring industry, after putting up a big fight, reformulated its dyes, taking out ingredients the FDA said might be linked to development of cancer.

The FDA, by law, must battle to ban products or ingredients in them when there's a good chance some consumers might be injured or made ill — or, if the product is abused.

Amphetamines are in the "abuse" category, according to federal authorities. That's why the FDA this month said it wants them banned.

Doctors wrote more than 3 million prescriptions for the pep pills last year — 500 million pills. The Drug Enforcement Agency figures 50 million got into the hands of drug abusers. This was the FDA's springboard.

The FDA bans so many things — or wants to — an ordinary person wonders if it's safe to use, drink or eat anything containing chemicals.

It's a complex situation. Production and use of chemicals in America soared in the last 30 years. As many as 60,000 are believed in commercial use. Nearly 700 new ones come on line annually.

The part that worried Joseph Califano Jr. when he was Secretary of the Department of Health, Education and Welfare was this:

There are only 15,000 chemicals for which reports of various animal testing have been published. No one really knows which among the 45,000 others in use are safe — or harmful.

"Limits in laboratory facilities and trained testing personnel restrict the nation's capacity for testing," a recent FDA report noted.

"Present resources for carcinogenesis testing in the United States by government and industry combined will permit testing no more than 500 chemicals per year."

"It is estimated that each animal experiment takes from 3 to 6 years and costs at least $300,000."

— Establish better judgement about which chemicals to test first.

— Increase the number of chemicals that HEW tests.

— Expand the scope of current testing not only to determine if chemicals cause cancer but also to see if they have other toxic efects.

— Improve the validity and accuracy of testing procedures.

Dr. David P. Rall, head of the NTP, also is director of the National Institute of Environmental Health Sciences at Research Triangle Park in North Carolina. When he launched the NTP, Califano said:

"I have directed this program to develop a long-range, comprehensive plan to protect Americans from the premature death, disease and long-term illness so frequently associated with toxic substances in the environment."

The FDA report claims the difficult part about assessing the safety of any substance in its long-range effects on human health.

"Scientists know that exposure to even small amounts of certain substances over a long peiod can produce adverse health effects," the FDA report noted.

"The issue of low-level exposure is especially complex and controversial when it comes to substances that cause cancer.

"Because of the nature of cancer, scientists are unable to say with certainty that there is a safe level of exposure — no matter how small — to a cancer-causing substance (carcinogen). Any exposure to such a substance is presumed to involved some risk."

The FDA's drug safety policy takes into account the benefit-risk factor.

"Benefit-risk" means: Whether, in the opinion of qualified scientists, the potential benefits of using a drug outweigh the risks involved.

"All drugs are toxic to the human body in some dose and are capable of causing ill effects," the FDA report said.

A partial list of substances which the FDA has banned or limited in foods, drugs, cosmetics follows:

— Calamus oil or extract, flavoring. Caused cancer in test animals. Prohibited.

— Cyclamate, synthetic sweetener. Suspected carcinogen. Prohibited.

— Cobaltous salts, chemicals once used as foam stabilizer in beer. No proof of safety. Prohibited.

— DEPC (diethylpyrocarbonate), a snythetic chemical once used as a ferment inhibitor in beverages. Could combine with other food ingredients to produce a carcinogen. Prohibited.

— Trichloroethylene, decaffeinating agent in coffee. Carcinogen. Ban proposed.

— FD&C Red No. 4, prohibited for use in foods and ingested drugs, and cosmetics. Data inadequate to establish safe conditions of use.

— FD&C Red No. 2, prohibited for use in foods, drugs, and cosmetics. No proof of safety.

— D&C Red Nos. 10, 11, 12, 13, prohibited for use in drugs and cosmetics. Colors could contain carcinogens.

— Graphite, prohibited for use in cosmetics. Might contain polynuclear aromatic hydrocarbons, some of which could be carcinogenic.

— Methapyrilene, a common ingredient of antihistamines which FDA has proposed to remove from the market. Has tendency to combine with nitrite and cause cancer in test animals.

— Bithionol. Prohibited. Was used as an anti-bacterial agent in some shampoos, creams, and lotions and in products to hide blemishes. Caused allergies.

— Vinyl chloride. Prohibited. Previously used as an ingredient in some aerosol cosmetics. Caused cancer in test animals and among workers exposed to the substance.

— Zirconium complexes, prohibited in aerosols. Previously used in aerosol antiperspirants and deodorants. Caused granulomas on human skin and produced toxic effects in laboratory animals.

The FDA also has set "action levels" for some poisonous or harmful substances in human food or animal feed. When the level goes above the action amount, the FDA has authority to remove the product from market.

The "action levels" are expressed in parts per million, parts per billion.

Here's a sampling of action levels for selected substances in certain commodities, as noted in the FDA REPORT:

— Aflatoxin. Peanuts and peanut products, 20 ppb. Aflatoxin is a cancer-causing mold that, under certain conditions, grows on peanuts and various grains.

— Mercury. Nish, oysters, clams, mussels, wheat. 1.0 ppm.

— Polychlorinated Biphenyls (PCB's). Paper food-packaging material intended for or used with human food, animal feed. 10 ppm.

—Lead. Evaporated milk. 0.5 ppm.

Clip 'n' Cook

TUNA-MUSHROOM SALAD

½ tsp. powdered mustard
½ tsp. water
½ cup salad oil
1 tsp. celery seed
¼ tsp. salt
¼ tsp. sugar
1/16 tsp. ground black pepper
1 lb. fresh mushrooms
1 cup shredded carrots
1 can (7 oz.) tuna, drained and chunked
2 scallions or green onions, sliced (1/3 cup)
3 tbsps. lemon juice
Lettuce leaves

In a small bowl mix mustard and water; set aside for 10 minutes for flavor to develop. Add oil, celery seed, salt, sugar and black pepper; mix well; set aside for 30 minutes for flavors to blend. Rinse, pat dry and slice mushrooms (makes about 5½ cups); place in a bowl. Mix in carrots, tuna and scallions. Add lemon juice to reserved oil mixture; mix well; spoon over mushroom mixture; toss lightly. Line a serving plate with lettuce leaves. Spoon tuna-mushroom salad on lettuce.

'Buy Now,' Home Experts Advise

By JOHN CUNNIFF

NEW YORK (AP) — Rules of thumb have always guided homebuyers, and now a new one seems to have been added: Buy now.

The old rules still offer some guidance. You shouldn't, one rule says, spend for a house more than 2½ times your annual income. Your monthly charges should consume no more than a week's pay, admonishes another.

The new rule, which probably has been as responsible as any single factor in prolonging the home-buying binge, advises you to bend the old rules, to buy now even if you stretch the budget to breaking.

It maintains that high prices today will be higher tomorrow, and that if you don't buy now you'll be in worse shape next year. It tells you to suffer a tight budget now for bountiful rewards in years to come.

"By all means buy now," said Jack Carlson when presented a typical situation, that of a young couple debating whether to commit themselves or wait until interest rates fell from their record-high levels.

Carlson may have special reasons for such advocacy; he is executive vice president and chief economist of the National Association of Realtors, whose 706,000 members depend on sales for a living.

But Carlson isn't alone. Many lenders also believe that interest rates will fall so slowly, and prices will continue to rise so swiftly, that the buyer will come out thousands of dollars ahead of the delayer.

Thinking of this sort, you may conclude, is itself inflationary. In keeping with generally accepted economic principles, sales usually decline as prices and borrowing costs rise. But not always.

In housing, for example, many buyers have been attracted by those rising prices. Instead of being frightened off, they are drawn to what they see as a chance to make money — or to at least avoid losing it.

Housing prices, they observe, have been rising faster than inflation in general. "It makes particularly good sense to invest in real estate during periods of inflation," says Carlson. "It's a matter of watching your capital grow or erode."

According to Carlson, who held several high government positions and served as economist of the National Chamber of Commerce, single-home buyers can expect price increases of 8 to 14 percent in the next year.

Analysis

Based on his estimates, the house that now sells for $60,000 might cost between $64,800 and $68,400 in August 1980. During that time interest rates will drop, he predicts, but only by a point or so.

By waiting a year, he estimates, the person considering a $60,000 home could stand to lose about $6,000. By his calculations, the increase in price would more than offset the decline in interest charges.

In support of his "buy now" thesis, Carlson adds another argument, that there is little likelihood that salaries will keep pace with inflation. Translated, it means, buy now while you can afford it.

Thinking of this sort undoubtedly has made an impact on the housing market. For one thing, despite those high prices and high financing charges, sales seem at times to be immune. June housinng starts rose 6 percent. And sales of existing homes are at a 3.86 million annual rate.

Price increases have been astonishing. The house that sold for $28,800 in 1973 sold for $55,900 in 1979. And realtors expect price increases to be maintained in the double-digit range for at least a year.

Still, a lot of people think that people such as Carlson are expecting too much, and that their advice might be panicking young couples into investments beyond their ability to handle.

Some day, warn critics, the supply-demand balance will be reinstated. Never in history, they point out, have prices continued in a straight line. They may rise over time, they say, but not without interruptio.

So how should a person view what seems to be a new rule of thumb? In the same way he or she should have been viewing those old rules — with a lot of caution, and an understanding of their limited use.

Any way you measure it, a thumb is a very imprecise instrument.

Votes Of Area Solons Listed

HOUSE

GAS RATIONING — The House voted, 234 for and 189 against, to give a president standby authority to ration gasoline, subject to several conditions. One condition is that either house can veto the rationing plan, but not until after the president announces it. In June, before communities in the Northeast and elsewhere experienced long gasoline lines, the House refused to give the President standby rationing authority. This vote came during debate on an emergency energy bill (S 1030), later passed and sent to the Senate.

Rep. Jim Wright, D-Tex., the sponsor, said his measure would "fully preserve the right of a congressional veto over rationing" while not restricting the president's ability to respond to an emergency.

Rep. Dave Stockman, R-Mich., said Congress should have more time than this measure permits to veto a rationing plan that requires "a massive regimentation of the daily lives of 110 million American motorists...."

Reps. Charles Wilson, D-2, Phil Gramm, D-6, Bob Eckhardt, D-8, Jack Brooks, D-9, Jake Pickle, D-10, James Wright, D-12, Kika de la Garza, D-15, Charles Stenholm, D-17, Mickey Leland, D-18, Kent Hance, D-19, Henry Gonzalez, D-20, and Martin Frost, D-24, voted "yea."

Reps. Samuel Hall, D-1, James Collins, R-3, Ray Roberts, D-4, Jim Mattox, D-5, Bill Archer, R-7, J. Marvin Leath, D-11, Jack Hightower, D-13, Joe Wyatt, D-14, Richard White, D-16, Tom Loeffler, R-21, Ron Paul, R-22, and Abraham Kazen, D-23, voted "nay."

THERMOSTAT CONTROL — The House adopted, 267 for and 152 against, an amendment to soften the current federal rule requiring non-residential thermostats to be set not lower than 78 degrees in summer or higher than 65 degrees in winter. The amendment, attached to S 1030, needs further congressional approval before it can take effect. It would let businesses disregard the 78-65 rule if they save a comparable amount of energy by other means — for example, a restaurant could be cooler than 78 degrees during business hours if it kept its temperature quite hot during non-occupancy hours.

Members voting "nay" wanted to leave the existing thermostat rules unchanged.

CHARLES DIGGS — By a vote of 205 for and 197 against, House members tabled and thus killed an attempt to expel Rep. Charles Diggs, D-Mich., from the House. Expulsion was the strongest possible House punishment of Diggs, convicted in federal court last year of pocketing some $60,000 of his staff members' salaries. He has appealed his three-year prison sentence. Later, the House voted unanimously in favor of censuring Diggs, the second most severe penalty it could have imposed.

Most members voting "yea" were Democrats who thought expulsion of Diggs too drastic a step. Most members voting "nay" were Republicans who felt their Democratic colleague no longer deserved to sit in Congress.

Eckhardt and Wright did not vote.

SENATE

AMTRAK — The Senate rejected, 35 for and 65 against, an amendment to keep all Amtrak passenger trains operating at least until Sept. 30, 1980.

The Senate thus agreed with the House that the six most unprofitable trains (whose mileage makes up about 20 per cent of the Amtrak system) should be discontinued. The Amtrak authorization bill (S 712) was later approved and sent back to the House.

Sen. James Sasser, D-Tenn., a supporter of the amendment, said that due to the energy shortage "the American people are coming to realize the importance of mass transportation for intercity travel.

Sen. Russell Long, D-La., an opponent, said the Senate should think of "the 99 per cent of the people who are paying taxes to support something that is an overall money loser."

Sen. John Tower, R, voted "yea."

Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, D, voted "nay."

Sens. Pete Domenici, R, and Harrison Schmitt, R, voted "yea."

REVENUE SHARING — The Senate rejected, 31 for and 59 against, an amendment to cut by ten per cent ($684 million) the fiscal 1980 general revenue — -sharing allotment to the states. The bill (HR 4394) was later passed and sent to conference with the House.

Sen. William Proxmire, D-Wisc., the sponsor, said: "In the revenue — -sharing area, nobody can say that the funds go to the poor, nobody can say that they go to the needy, nobody can say that they go to a specific useful purpose, because nobody knows where they go."

Sen. Charles Mathias, R-Md., an opponent, said that to renege on revenue sharing commitments would cause "a proliferation of lawsuits on behalf of states, cities and towns all over the country who feel that they are entitled as a matter of right to these moneys."

Senators voting "yea" favored a ten per cent cut in revenue —sharing outlays.

Tower voted "nay."

Schmitt voted "yea."

Domenici voted "nay."

HOUSING AID — By a vote of 36 for and 52 against, the Senate rejected an amendment to cut $34 million from the government's $1.1 billion subsidized low — income housing program for 1980.

Senators voting "yea" wanted to cut the public — housing budget.

Foreign Intelligence Attempting To Silence Dissidents In U.S.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Intelligence agencies from five foreign countries have conducted systematic campaigns on U.S. soil to silence dissidents speaking out against those governments, The Washington Post is reporting.

Allegations of foreign harrassment and spying in the United States were made by staff investigators for the Senate Foreign Relations Committee in a report that has not yet been released. The Post obtained a draft copy.

The report said the campaigns to stifle dissent have deprived the targeted groups, some of whom are naturalized U.S. citizens, of such constitutional rights as freedom of speech — at times with the tacit approval of U.S. agencis, the report said.

— Four countries — Iran, the Philippines, Taiwan and Chile — apparently have concentrated on American public opinion. Spies were set on critics of those nations' authoritarian regimes whose words might have threatened close relations with the United States.

Methods included the reported sending of Iranian and Chilean assassination teams to the United States and the monitoring of student political discussions on American campuses, the report said.

— Agents from Yugoslavia, posing as diplomats, routinely threatened dissidents in the United States with death and boasted that the U.S. government would not take any action against them, the report said.

The Soviet Union focuses most of its spy activities in the United States on classic espionage efforts, trying to obtain secret information rather than combatting anti-Soviet views, the report said.

William Bader, staff director of the Foreign Relations Committee, declined comment on specific points in the draft report, which was presented to the panel in January.

He said the draft had been circulated to various U.S. agencies involved and their comments would be reflected in the final report.

"The committee is pushing very hard to have the report ... revised, declassified and issued," Bader said. "From our point of view, it was not intended to be released in its current form."

Some of the information reported by The Post in its Thursday editions had been disclosed earlier by columnist Jack Anderson.

Other details from The Post story:

—During his final three years in power, the Shah of Iran repeatedly warned U.S. officials he would expel CIA agents from his country if action were taken against Iranian spies in the United States.

Those warnings were conveyed by two former U.S. ambassadors to Iran, Richard Helms in 1976, and William H. Sullivan in 1978.

—The study concludes that none of the agencies most directly involved — the Central Intelligence Agency, the FBI and the State Department — took direct responsibility for monitoring political harassment by foreign governments in the United States.

In fact, the State Department actively discouraged FBI investigations of likely crimes committed in the United States by friendly intelligence services. The department also refused to expel known spies using diplomatic cover, despite repeated allegations of misbehavior.

—The CIA passed on to Savak, the Iranian intelligence agency, information it received from the FBI on a prominent critic of the shah who lived in the United States.

CIA spokesman Herbert Hetu said he could not say anything on the specific charges and noted, "I have to emphasize it is not a final report."

State Department spokeswoman Anita Stockman said she could make no comment on the report.

Growing 'Gators Can Be Hazardous

ORLANDO, Fla. (AP) — Depending on the way you look at it, Herman Brooks is a farmer, a grower or a rancher. But instead of raising corn, growing citrus or rounding up cattle, Brooks harvests 'gators.

He runs one of only about a half-dozen places around the country which raises alligators commercially, for their valuable hides.

Brooks is the owner of Gator Jungle, a 14-acre establishment just off State Highway 50 between Orlando and Titusville, a place which at first glance resembles the typical Florida roadside zoos popular with tourists.

Although part of Brooks' business is his tourist attraction, his principal interest is the breeding and raising of 'gators for market. And he minces no words in telling you so.

"I don't want no flags waving, horns blowing, trains running around, or any of that bleep here," says the outspoken Brooks, whose cowboy boots, Levi's and straw hat help to further the impression that he ought to be bustin' broncs in Texas instead of fussin' with reptiles in Central Florida.

But with alligator skins fetching $20 a foot, Brooks sees the relatively new business as having "endless potential."

Since the alligator was scratched from Florida's endangered species list a couple of years ago, Brooks and a few other commercial alligator farm owners have been increasing their stock, and finally making the business pay off.

They slaughter their own carefully bred animals and sell the hides to tanners, who make them into expensie shoes, women's handbags, suitcases, belts and a number of other items.

The marketing is carefully controlled and is not permitted in many states. There is also increasing interest among the alligator farmers in exports to other countries.

"It was very difficult at first because there's never been any books written on alligator breeding," says Brooks, who's been in the business 13 years.

"We had to learn something every year and there was a lot of trial and error. But it's starting to pay off right now ... As a farmer, it's a lot easier raising 'gators."

But alligator farmers encounter problems that those working with the soil or livestock don't have.

"Sure, I've been bitten lots of times," Brooks says. "I've got scars all over me. But it's like playing a slot machine. You know you're going to get it sooner or later."

The farm has hundreds of the reptiles, 12 inches to 5 feet long.

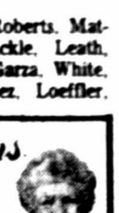

Along with the increasing legal use of the alligator skins, Brooks foresees a gourmet market for alligator meat, which he says "tastes somewhere between frogs' legs and lobster."

"They're ugly and mean and it's not a business for everyone," Brooks says. "But to me, raising alligators is a fine way to make a living."

Grain Futures

CHICAGO (AP) — Wheat, corn and soybean futures rallied Wednesday on the Chicago Board of Trade, partly in response to expectations of new export business.

August soybean futures led with gains of 11¾ cents a bushel, and soybean oil for nearby delivery also rose significantly in fairly light trading.

Expectations that shipments of oilseeds and grains out of the port of Chicago will pick up, plus very light cash sales of soybeans and grains in the Chicago area, helped boost prices.

Futures prices had opened mixed after a private crop forecaster Tuesday predicted sharp increases in the size of this year's corn and soybean crops because of good growing weather over the last several weeks.

Youths Selected For 4-H Competition

The top-ranked 4-H record books in 33 awards programs have been selected to represent District 2 in state competition this month. They were judged the best representations among 7,624 junior and senior 4-H Club members in the district's 20 counties.

The books of the winning seniors now will be forwarded to Texas A&M Univeristy for state judging.

In District 2 competition, about 300 South Plains 4-H members placed their records of achievement on the line. Records include project summaries, information detailng their activities, experiences and leadership development, a narrative about their 4-H experience, photographs and other information.

At the state level, they will compete against the best books from 13 other districts of the Texas Agricultural Extension Service. The 4-H program in Texas is administered by the Extension Service.

Senior 4-H members are competing for scholarships, plaques, trips to the National 4-H Congress in November and other awards.

Record book competition is the critical measurement of the youths' achievement over the years, explained Mrs. Catherine Crawford and Billy C. Gunter, district extension agents.

The records reveal their consistency in achieveing their goals, their experience in 4-H and their growth and development in personal, community and civic responsibilities and leadership, the officials said.

BRISCOE — Thomas Perkins, poultry.

CASTRO — Wendy Bruegel, health; Kim Sides, family life; Laurie Sides, public speaking.

GAINES — Linda Sellers, home environment.

HOCKLEY — Rob Fred, Santa Fe project; Jeff Kester, automotive; Ray Sherrill, veterinary science.

LAMB — Kelli Smith, food preservation.

PARMER — Johanna Mesman, dairy.

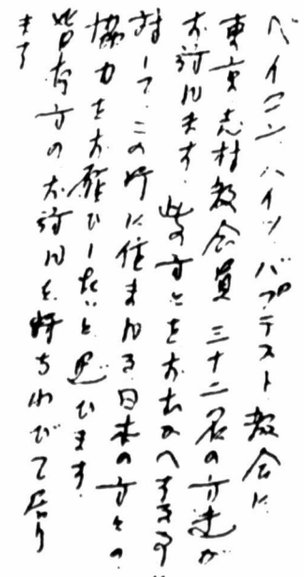

SCURRY — Martha Beavers, photography; Mavis Browning, forestry.

Money-Market Funds Boom

By CHET CURRIER

NEW YORK (AP) — In their search for better returns on their savings, an estimated 1 million Americans have turned in the last few years to a booming new investment vehicle known as the money-market mutual fund.

It was less than seven years ago that the idea was pioneered by the New York-based Reserve Fund, which started out with $100,000 in total assets. By mid-1979, there were more than 60 of these funds, with aggregate assets totaling better than $25 billion.

Donoghue's Money Fund Report, a Holliston, Mass., advisory letter which keeps track of the industry, projects that American individuals and institutions will have as much as $45 billion to $50 billion in money-market funds by the end of the year.

The funds' attraction is no mystery. Using the familiar mutual-fund principle of pooling many investors' money, they have given many individuals their first access to such large-denomination securities as bank certificates of deposit and commercial paper issued by corporations.

Along with other interest rates, the yields on these investments, which generally mature in a few months' time, soared to unprecedented levels in the mid-1970s and again over the past year or so.

A recent compilation by Donoghue's organization showed most money-market funds offering current returns of 9 percent or better, with a few over 10 percent.

Should interest rates decline, of course, money funds' yields will come down as well. And unlike such other interst-bearing investments as six-month bank certificates and Treasury bills, their safety, though considered high, is not guaranteed.

Money-market investments were once regarded mainly as a "parking place" for funds to keep earning interest while an investor waited for the opportune moment to put the money somewhere else, such as in stocks.

But with yields as high as they are currently and many money-market funds offering such features as check-writing privileges, the money funds have come to be seen as a continuing investment in their own right.

Most of these funds are "no load"; in other words, they can be bought direct from the sponsoring organizations, including many leading brokerage houses and money-management firms, without commission or sales charge.

They aren't "free," of course. MAnagement fees and operating expenses are charged to the funds, typically running up to 1 percent of total assets per year, which has the effect of reducing the yield the investor gets by that amount. These fees vary from fund to fund, and would-be buyers should check them carefully in the funds' prospectuses.

Yields vary, too, and this month's leader can be next month's laggard. To some extent, these variances are unpredictable, since they stem from shifting conditions in the money markets themselves.

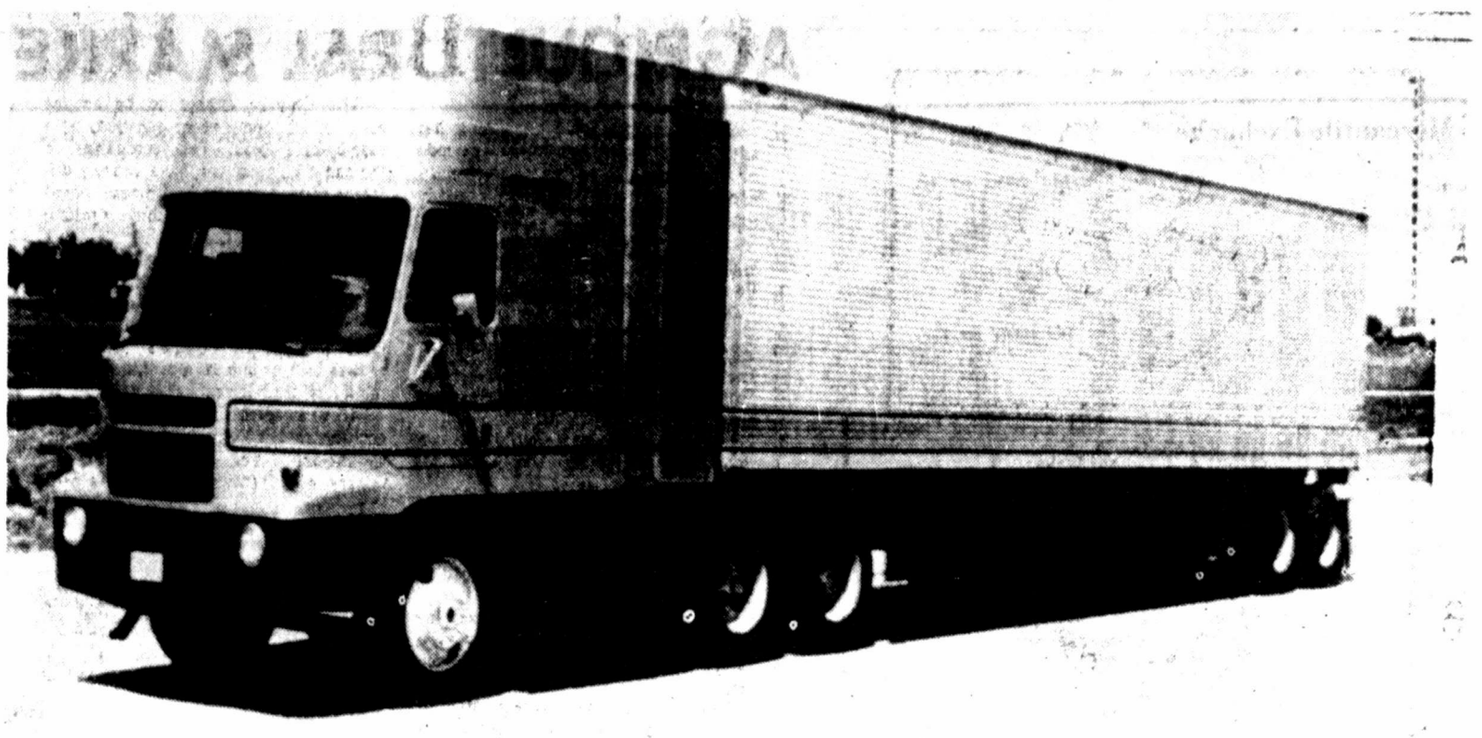

But one factor that affects yields is known — the average maturity of a fund's portfolio. "Funds with the shortest portfolio life believe that safety and liquidity is paramount, since the longer the portfolio life the less liquid the fund and the greater the exposure to market fluctuations," points out the Mutual Funds Almanac, an annual publication of the Hirsch Organization in Old Tappan, N.J.

"Other funds place greater emphasis on maximizing yield by shortening or lengthening the maturity dates of their investments to take advantage of changing market conditions," he said. Wrong decisions by such funds, it should be noted, will mean reduced returns for investors.

Stock Market Logic, a Fort Lauderdale, Fla., advisory letter, counsels: "Never invest in any fund whose portfolio has an average maturity greater than 180 days, as such a poortfolio could be subject to sharp price swings in periods of rapidly rising or falling interest rates."

Weekly figures on maturities and other data are available in Donoghue's letter (Address: Box 540, Holliston, Mass. 01746, $19 for a five-week trial subscription).

The No-Load Fund Investor, Box 283, Hastings-on-Hudson, N.Y. 10706, ($20 a year) also reports on money funds.

Imports Increased By Ag Department

WASHINGTON (UPI) — If you have a taste for imported cheeses, get your palate prepared for good times ahead.

The Agriculture Department is boosting imports, but at the same time extending coverage to most cheese not currently included in the quotas.

The overall result, according to department Under Secretary Dale E. Hathaway, will be a 15 percent increase in total U.S. Cheese imports next year over the 1978 level of 109,855 metric tons.

The total quota will be increased by about 94 percent — to no more than 111,000 metric tons — but most of the increase represents so-called "price-break" cheeses that have previously entered the United States free of quota restriction. A metric ton equals 2,205 pounds.

Price-break cheese, which Hathaway said accounts for nearly all of the growth in cheese imports in recent years, is those priced at least seven cents a pound higher than the government support price for domestic cheese.

The largest increase will be for Swiss or Emmenthaler, and a category of "other cheeses."

Hathaway said the new quotas are the result of agreements reached in the Tokyo Round of Multilateral Trade Negotiations, and legislation approving and implementing the agreements has been signed into law by President Carter.

The new law includes a procedure for relief within 55 days from subsidized imports that undercut domestic prices.

Hathaway said the negotiated agreements extend quota control of imports to virtually all cheeses made from cow's milk, except for soft-ripened cheeses.

The new allocations also provide for a 2 million kilogram (4.4 million pound) increase in imports of chocolate crumb that contains over 5.5 percent butterfat by weight, excluding already prepared candies or confection. Chocolate crumb is used in making candy.

According to Hathaway, proposed regulations for administering the new quota system and price discipline procedures will be published for public comment, and that prior to that announcement, the president will announce the total amounts of quota cheese that may be imported from each country during 1980.

The proposed allocations show the quota for Swiss or Emmenthaler cheese increasing from the current 9,262,448 kilograms to 31,855,276 kilograms. Countries receiving the largest increases are the Common Market countries and Austria, Finland, Norway, and Switzerland.

Italian-type cheeses — Romano, Reggiano, Parmesano, Provoloni, Provolette, Shrinz and Goya — would receive a small boost in quota, as would cheddar cheese, bluemold, Edam and Gouda, and American-type cheeses like Colby.

Death Penalty Bill Sent To Governor

BOSTON (AP) — The state Senate has passed a bill that would restore the death penalty and sent it to Gov. Edward J. King, a staunch capital punishment advocate who has promised to sign it. A King spokesman says no signing date has been set.

Supporters say the bill would take effect immediately. But opponents say it is similar to a death penalty bill found unconstitutional by the state Supreme Court two years ago on grounds that it was "cruel and unusual punishment." The pending bill would permit death for the killing of a police officer, a multiple slaying, rape-murder, kidnap-murder, or a slaying committed by a hired killer.

MOTOR CITY SUCCESS

Despite the ups and downs of the auto industry, Detroit is in an affluent region, The Conference Board observes. Over 30 percent of all families in the area make more than $25,000 a year, and the average household's income is nearly $20,000. Low prices and taxes further augment the standard of living.

Everyone has a fried chicken recipe. Only the Colonel has the Original Recipe.™

The Colonel's Original Recipe.

This is the way Colonel Sanders himself first started making fried chicken. And no one's topped him yet.

No wonder. His Original Recipe chicken is made with a secret blend of 11 herbs and spices. Then pressure fried (not deep fried) tender and juicy. All the way through.

Of course, some of our customers take a fancy to our Extra Crispy chicken. So crisp on the outside. Tender on the inside.

Which is your favorite? The Original Recipe or Extra Crispy? Take these money saving coupons to a participating store and try 'em both. (On Saturday and Sunday, save money on a complete meal for the whole family with our "Weekend Special" coupon.)

Moving Pictures Just Illusion

By SHARI LEWIS

Since moving pictures are just an illusion (the pictures don't move — we just see lots of pictures, one after another, and that creates the illusion of movement), you can make your own mini-movie.

Here's how:

Now hold down the two matched up left edges with the fingers of your left hand. With your other hand, rub the pencil back and forth over picture A. If you move the pencil quickly from your fingertips to the edge of A and back again, you'll make the sad boy in the movie laugh and laugh and laugh. And if you use your crayons on the boy's face, your movie will be in technicolor!

YESTERDAY'S BRAIN TWISTER: Imagine that there are a lot of ping-pong balls on a table. Only one of the balls is filled with sand. You mustn't touch the balls or the table. Now, how would you find out which ping-pong ball is filled with sand?

ANSWER: Just blow! The ones that are not filled with sand will move around but not the heavy one.

TODAY'S BRAIN TWISTER: Can you figure out a word of five letters that can be added after the last nine in the sequence which will make this equation correct: 99 + 9 equals 9 —. (Look for the answer in tomorrow's Kids-Only Club column.)

Deaths Caused By 'Tampering'

MACON, Ga. (UPI) — Prosecutors believe there is sufficient evidence to indicate a female technician in the intensive care unit of the Medical Center of Central Georgia tampered with life support equipment, possibly causing at least four deaths.

District Attorney W. Don Thompson is looking into allegations that the unidentified technician may have turned off alarm systems, disconnected intravenous lines and increased medications to patients in intensive care.

Thompson Monday said patient records and statements by other employees and patients "satisified me that there was tampering."

He said some of the statements supported specific allegations made by the two nurses who lodged the complaint, while others simply support a general pattern of "mysterious" incidents. 3

Thompson plans to consult medical experts before presenting evidence to a grand jury within the next few weeks.

The hospital, which conducted an internal investigation when the complaints were first made in April, has denied any evidence of wrongdoing by employees. The technician was given a leave of absence with pay in April.

The two nurses who filed the charges have resigned in the face of a patient complaint, which the hospital said was unrelated to the investigation.

AFL-CIO Petitions Utah For Pardon

CHICAGO (AP) — One hundred years after the birth of labor organizer and song writer Joe Hill, the AFL-CIO Executive Council has petitioned the governor of Utah to grant Hill a pardon.

Hill was convicted of murder and executed by a Utah firing squad in 1915, but a number of historians contend he was a victim of injustice stemming from his labor activities.

China Bases Business On Trust

By P.Y. CHEN

HONG KONG (UPI) — China has adopted its first foreign investment code in an attempt to woo foreign technology and the estimated $200 billion it needs to modernize.

But Western capitalists are being invited to invest in China on the basis of the ancient Chinese business principle of "trust."

The new law represents a quantum leap over what businessmen previously knew about their rights and duties in China concerning taxes, employment practices and patent rights.

It also aims to protect China's own rights and resources and leaves many vital questions unanswered.

"We (Chinese) have always believed in trust in business dealings," Liu Yiu-chu, a prime architect of the code, said in an interview in Hong Kong's bustling business district.

The investment code, approved by the National People's Congress in early July, contained only 16 skeletal principles.

They stipulate that a foreign investor must contribute at least 25 percent of the cost of a joint venture, with a $1 million minimum. A joint enterprise must have a Chinese as chairman, meaning control rests with China no matter how much the foreigner invests.

Personal and corporate income tax schedules — source of many a capitalistic heartache — have not been handed down, but Mrs. Liu says they "will be promulgated very soon."

A patent rights law will come much later, if at all, she said.

"You must trust us, and we will trust you," Chinese trade officials told a group of Hong Kong-based Western businessmen.

The Chinese appear to be solving many of the unanswered questions on a case-by-case basis. Two companies in the same industry can have entirely different contracts with the Chinese, based solely on how effectively they negotiate with their Chinese hosts.

One thing neither Chinese leaders nor foreign businessmen can control is China's political pendulum. For 10 years during the Cultural Revolution, political turmoil brought China's economic growth to a near halt. Mrs. Liu does not think it will happen again.

Although Mrs. Liu holds no official position in the Peking government, the 45-year-old lawyer is a firebrand revolutionary who mentions the Chinese people's well-being with as much zeal as she talks about the epoch-making business code she helped draft.

Born in Hong Kong, Mrs. Liu trained at Oxford University, spent six years at Harvard Law school until 1975, and has been privy to modern multinational corporations' complex legal operations.

After returning to Hong Kong, Mrs. Liu became legal counsel for Peking's interests there, including the Bank of China and China Resources Corp.

She sees no conflict between China's avowed socialist policy and its courting of Western businessmen. She says joint ventures with foreign investors do not conflict with China's constitution, which stipulates that the means of production must be owned by the people.

Rather than getting bogged down in theoretical disputes like this, Mrs. Liu said Peking is busy setting priorities on what industries it wants — mostly those that produce goods essential to daily life.

"Coca-Cola, for instance, would be very low on the priority list of the Foreign Investment Commission," an agency that studies each joint venture proposal.

Contrary to the hopes of many foreign investors, the Bank of China would only guarantee the "performance" of the enterprise, not the return of invested capital.

Spending Trend Easy To Figure

By JOHN CUNNIFF

NEW YORK (AP) — Their moods and actions may puzzle the leadership, but there really is no mystery about why Americans do and don't — why they spend or save, believe or disbelieve, have or haven't got confidence.

At least in matters financial, people think and act in accordance with what they perceive to be their own best interest. What they think or do might not be wise, but it certainly is perceived to be so.

Analysis

And so they spend instead of saving, they avoid the stock market, they buy houses and gold and diamonds, they sell U.S. Savings Bonds, they shun the big cars and wait to buy little ones, they buy term insurance.

Nothing mysterious about it. Humans in the marketplace have acted in fairly predictable ways since long before Adam Smith or Sigmund Freud. The real mystery is how on earth leaders fail to discern this.

Americans today save relatively little of what they earn because to save is to lose. They earn 5.5 percent interest on passbooks while inflation takes double that. And then they pay taxes on the "gain."

They avoid stocks because stocks haven't kept pace with inflation. And because investors are taxed twice: at the corporate level on their company's profits, and then on the dividends their investments earn.

They've been selling U.S. Savings Bonds all year long because they feel the 6.5 percent return is not "fair," as a Treasury official said recently, especially when other government securities offer more.

They buy little cars for the obvious reasons of gasoline conservation and lower overall operating costs, a pattern of behavior that Detroit resisted for years — while losing 20 percent of the market to imports.

They buy houses because mortgage interest is tax-deductible, because savings left in paper money lose value, and because they pay off their loans in cheaper dollars so long as inflation persists.

They buy gold, diamonds and collectibles because, experience teaches them. The leaders of the nation serve up rhetoric about the need to combat inflation and then spend up an inflationary storm.

They lose confidence in the future, or so the consumer and political polls suggest, when they see leaders complain about consumer habits and then fail to make a change of habits worthwhile.

Two examples are suggestive of many more:

—The country, say those who claim to know, faces a severe shortgage of capital with which to modernize its plant and equipment. But every cent of interest earned on savings — and more — is taxed.

—Savings Bonds are an essential financing tool of the federal government. But the interest the government pays on Savings Bonds is one-half of one percent below the level authorized by Congress.

Sometimes, the ordinary American feels, the country is at war with itself instead of, as is often expressed by government officials, at war with poverty, with inflation, with the energy problem.

The view is frequently shared by corporations, which are given their assignments by federal officials and then shackled by regulations from fulfilling them.

There really isn't much mystery about why Americans act as they do, even when those actions appear to be at odds with official goals. The mystery is why it seems not to be understood.

Chirping Bird Ordered Shot

LONDON (UPI) — A tiny sparrow in the rafters of St. Helen's parish church in the English village of Brant Boughton launched into a long melodious chirp one recent night — and the reverend ordered him shot.

The chirping might have been a delightful interlude except that St. Helen's rector, the Rev. Robin Clark, arranged for another kind of musical evening — a classical guitar recital by Konrad Ragossnig that BBC Sound engineers were on hand to record.

Ragossnig was ready to begin playing but the sparrow kept chirping, and chirping. So the Rev. Clark ordered the sparrow shot.

"It was absolutely impossible," Clark said Tuesday. "The artist just could not start. He is a true professional and you know what these chaps are like.

"A decision was taken to shoot the bird. We may have been wrong and if so I am sorry. But there was little else that could be done at the time."

Some village residents complained about the shooting to the Royal Society for the Protection of Birds.

Local pub owner Jack Haywood said he saw some of the audience after the performance "and they said they felt sick."

Clark said he knew the action would upset bird lovers. "I was upset myself," he said. "But it was necessary. Those people who are complaining are the ones who take potshots at pigeons. And 48,000 birds a week are killed at a poultry factory not far from here. Everyone was sorry it happened."

$1 Million Damage Estimated In Fire

TOLEDO, Ohio (AP) — Damage is estimated at $1 million after a fire that raged for two days at a Gulf Oil Corp. refinery storage tank here before firefighters snuffed it out with a thick blanket of foam.

Firefighters remained on the scene Tuesday, cooling the gasoline tank with water. Officials said it would be about 24 hours before cleanup operations could begin.

Lightning struck the tank Sunday, sending flames and black smoke high into the sky. Gulf officials say there were 800,000 gallons of gas in the tank when the fire started.

Crane Happy With Progress In Presidential Race

By JAY PERKINS

WASHINGTON (AP) — Phillip Crane, the Republican presidential "mail-order" candidate, celebrated his first anniversary on the campaign trail encouraged that people are finally beginning to recognize his name.

And Crane, while admitting he faces a long, uphill battle, says he's perfectly happy with his current position, poised behind the front-runners and — as he says — "the second choice" candidate of conservative Republicans now committed to other candidates.

The Republican representative from Illinois has raised more money than any other candidate — $2.5 million, according to Federal Election Commission reports. But his method of fund raising — direct mail solicitation — is the most costly method and he now is trying to reduce a deficit that at one time was $1.6 million.

The deficit is down to $700,000, and the conservative Republican, a square-jawed son of Middle America, predicts it will be gone before Jan. 1 — the date he becomes eligible for matching federal campaign funds. He already has qualified for $1.6 million in matching funds and hopes to hit the $4 million mark by January.

Crane said in an interview that he stands a good chance of staying in the race into the convention if he can stay among the front-runners in the early primaries. And he said he was satisfied with his state organizations, adding, "I think in Iowa, New Hampshire, Massachusetts and Florida we've out-organized every other candidate."

Crane is widely perceived as a young version of Ronald Reagan, the former movie star who battled President Ford for the 1976 GOP Nomination and is considered a 1980 front-runner. And Crane admits there is little difference between his position and Reagan's about issues dear to conservative Republicans.

The Illinois Republican has the boyish good looks of the late John F. Kennedy. He is quick with answers, as befits a former college teacher, and the replies ring with professorial authority.

He uses no prepared text or notes for his speeches but invariably manages to hit the major points outlined in the press release distributed before his speech.

He has a tendency to load his speeches with a multitude of facts and figures. But he still can incite an audience.

Crane's speech to the International Platform Association convention in Washington was a case in point. He followed Jeanne Dixon, the popular predictor of future events, to the stand and the audience obviously was lukewarm at best.

But halfway through his speech, the reaction visibly turned. He received prolonged applause when he stated his opposition to big government, saying the "government does nothing well." And the reaction continued to swell to the standing ovation he received at the end.

In an earlier one-on-one interview, Crane first appeared stiff. But he relaxed once the first few questions were past, leaning back in his chair and lighting a cigarette.

His speech is missing the "uhs" and other hesitations which afflict most people. His sentences are direct although they do seem to run headlong into each other, with commas replacing periods.

The 48-year-old Crane, chairman of the American Conservative Union, believes his chances for the nomination hinge on how well Reagan and John Connally of Texas, a Democrat-turned-Republican, fare in the early primaries.

Crane says that in Oklahoma, Reagan people told him, "'Phil, you always were our second choice. If anything happens to Reagan, you can count on our support.'

"In the Rockies," he continued, "you find a lot of Reagan support but there's also Crane support; again it's second choice.

"I just came back from Texas and a lot of people who were willing to help me were John Connally people. They said, 'You've got to understand, Phil, we're all for Big John but you're our second choice. So if anything happens to him ...'

"So we're in a position where we can fall heir to a lot of support, depending on Connally's fortunes or Reagan's fortunes... As the fortunes of those who are perceived right now to be front-runners may fade — and we're convinced that will happen — then we're in the position to fall heir to a lot of support that at the present time has to be viewed as committed to other candidates."

The early primaries probably will tell Crane's story. And he thinks Reagan is the man to beat in New Hampshire, Florida and Iowa. "I think what's going to happen with at least nine candidates in the race is we'll begin to see also-rans at once," he said. "We can't afford to be in the also-ran category. We have to be near the top."

Crane — who took his strategy from another early runner, Jimmy Carter — is encouraged by a CBS-New York Times poll showing 12 percent of the population recognizes his name. He notes that Carter at the same time in the 1976 race had about 1 percent of the Democratic vote.

The Crane campaign already has survived two setbacks. He reorganized his staff in May after disagreements about how to operate the campaign. And he apparently has weathered a series of unflattering stories in the Manchester, N.H., newspaper owned by Reagan supporter William Loeb.

Although Crane first was incensed at the stories claiming he dealt heavily, made off-color remarks and was committed to "bedding down 100 women," he now thinks Loeb may have helped him in New Hampshire.

"He raised my name identification factor by about 30 percent," Crane said. "And while he did increase my negatives up there, he increased my positives at a faster rate. We've got a significant sympathy reaction up there because he has done that to enough people for a long enough time that it has created a lot of bad feelings."

Crane doesn't see himself as facing a decision soon on whether to stop or go ahead.

"I think we're strong enough in the early states that we can demonstrate credibility and that, in turn, will give us enough momentum that even if we cannot win the nomination, I don't think anyone can go into the convention with a clear majority.

"If that happens, you're talking about a brokered convention and we'll be in there brokering."

Mateus will tickle your ribs.

Argentina Called Safe Nuclear Plant Market

By RICHARD BOUDREAUX

BUENOS AIRES, Argentina (AP) — Uninhibited by protests or heavy foreign debt, Argentina is becoming a safe market for nuclear energy.

By 1997, under a $4.5 billion plan approved this year, Argentina would get 17 percent of its electricity from six imported nuclear reactors fueled by uranium mined in its Andean foothills and refined with heavy water from an imported plant.

The military government, with a West German reactor working and another being built by Canada, is now weighing bids by foreign companies to supply the heavy water plant, a third reactor and the technology to build such facilities on its own in the next century.

In Argentina, the plan has provoked neither the public doubt about nuclear safety that arose worldwide after the Three Mile Island mishap nor the criticisms being heard next door in Brazil about the price tag of a similar nuclear program.

"I firmly believe these problems will not arise in Argentina because of one fact — the support that all sectors of the country have given to the development of our nuclear activities," Adm. Carlos Castro Madero, president of the navy-operated National Atomic Energy Commission, said in a interview.

The admiral, a nuclear physicist, has made the nuclear program attractive to his fellow scientists. Eight researchers who had left the country for higher pay and better work opportunities have returned in the past three years to rejoin the commission.

Although safe at home, Argentina's plans worry the United States, whose government favors strict measures to keep Latin America free of nuclear explosions. But America has limited influence with Canada and West Germany, the region's chief nuclear suppliers. Firms from those countries are bidding for the Argentina market.

Canada says it will make no deal unless Argentina signs the U.N. Nuclear Non-Proliferation Treaty or opens its present and future nuclear facilites to "full scope" scrutiny by the International Atomic Energy Agency in Vienna, Austria.

But West Germany, under U.S. pressure to follow suit, has set no such condition, whch would amount to an Argentine commitment never to test a bomb.

Diplomatic sources say both countries have rejected a U.S. plea for an even stricter safeguard — that Argentina, in return for reactors, "defer" the option to reprocess its reactors' uranium wastes to make plutonium, an ingredient in nuclear explosives.

Castro Madero says Argentina has the know-how to reprocess and should begin doing so in the 1990s — but only to stretch its fuel supply when uranium runs low. He says Argentina can build a bomb but will not, and most diplomats here believe him.

"Argentina is not going to explode a bomb unless Brazil does it first, and Brazil isn't unless Argentina does," said a diplomat from a nulcear-exporting nation. "Both know it would be utterly foolish. They would lose all outside technical assistance for only a short-term military advantage."

Argentina's 367-megawatt reactor, Atucha I, built in 1975, is the continent's only energy-producing nuclear plant. Chile, Venezuela and Peru have research reactors, and Mexico and Colombia also plan to develop nuclear energy. But Brazil, under a 1975 deal with West Germany, is the only other Latin American nation building nuclear generators.

The United States tried in vain to undo that agreement because it would give Brazil reprocessing technology. But now the deal, which includes two reactors and the option for six more by 1990, is in danger of being shelved by the Brazilians themselves.

Scientists and engineers have told a Brazilian congressional inquiry that the package would cost at least $20 billion — four times the original estimate and too much for a country owing twice that much to its creditors.

Brazilian Foreign Minister Ramiro Saraiva Guerreiro admitted in the face of the criticism that the nuclear program might be delayed. Brazil is already moving to develop hydroelectric power and gasohol to trim its $7 billion-a-year oil import bill.

Argentina is less concerned about the cost of nuclear power. It has 91 percent of the petroleum it needs and foreign exchange reserves that nearly cover its $9 billion debt.

Nor are the country's 26 million people, who suffer frequent power blackouts due to a lag in generating capacity, outwardly worried about nuclear safety.

FAR EASTERN VISITORS — Merle Scott, wife of Bacon Heights Baptist Church pastor H.F. Scott, greets Akira Takahashi, one of a group of 32 visitors from Japan arriving in Lubbock this morning as guests of the Lubbock church. Looking on is church secretary Joyce Rowe. The group, from Shimura Baptist Church in Tokyo, has had a close relationship with the Bacon Heights congregation since a group from the Lubbock church went to Tokyo in 1970. A reception for the Japanese visitors is scheduled at 8 p.m. today at the Holiday Inn and church officials said a special invitation to attend is extended to any Japanese in the community. Israel Ponders Carter's Position On Palestine

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter has personally pledged his support to Israel while at the same time calling for progress on Palestinian autonomy.

U.S. officials said Carter made both points in what they termed a cordial 90-minute meeting Wednesday with Ephraim Evron, the Israeli ambassador.

Afterward, it was clear the two governments have their differences, especially on the Palestinian issue. The strained relationship will be tested later this month when the U.N. Security Council renews its Palestinian debate.

In Jerusalem, Israeli officials were studying a report from Evron on the meeting with Carter. They said public reaction probably will be withheld until after a meeting Sunday at which the Israeli cabinet will make a comprehensive review of the soured U.S.-Israeli relations.

Carter and Secretary of State Cyrus R, Vance have ruled out U.S. support for a Palestinian state. But they reportedly have not offered any commitment beyond that.

Meanwhile, it was learned from sources who asked not to be named that Carter urged Israel, through Evron, to come to an understanding with Egypt on an autonomy plan for Palestinians living on the West Bank of the Jordan River and in Gaza.

For his part, Evron asked that the United States not try to push autonomy beyond limits Israel considers acceptable.

Officials reported Evron also underscored Israel's flat stand against negotiating with the Palestine Liberation Organization. The Carter administration has raised concerns in Israel with a diplomatic probe of PLO intentions.

Vance, offering a hint of the strains, told reporters Evron "is always strong and clear" in his representation of Israel's interests.

At the same time, the State Department press office issued a statement saying, "Our long-standing support for the security and well-being of Israel is firm and unshakeable."

The statement was in response to a charge by Israeli Foreign Minister Moshe Dayan that U.S. policy was changing and that American need for Arab oil was behind the change.

Vance's 75-word statement made no reference to the Palestinian issue or to U.S. oil needs. It said he had seen the Dayan remarks in Israeli newspapers and wanted "to state categorically that there has been no change in our policy toward Israel."

Protesting Iranian Workers Set Hostages Free After 12 Hours

TEHRAN, Iran (AP) — Three Americans and 14 other foreigners who work for a U.S. construction firm were held hostage for 12 hours by Iranin workers then released unharmed, Western diplomatic sources reported today.

The sources said the foreigners, employees of the Morrison-Knudson engineering company, were held at a road construction campsite 25 miles west of Tehran on Wednesday.

The sources said the dispute was over severance pay, which was solved, that the foreigners were released without "any physical violence whatsoever" and were resting at a guest house at an undisclosed location.

The sources said they couldn't provide the names of those involved, but one of them was known to be Frederick Burnett, an Australian.

Burnett's wife, Lesley, spoke with him by telephone from Perth, in western Australia. She said the Iranian workers were armed.

"I was told of the kidnap last night by my nephew who had received a call from the Australian Embassy in Tehran," Mrs. Burnett said.

"I immediately tried to get in touch with Frederick but got through to him five hours later — just after midnight.

"All he could say was that he was all right with the other hostages and that he may be home next month."

In other developments:

— Two persons were killed and five others were injured in the northwestern city of Tabriz when revolutionary guardsmen tried to disarm opposing gunman today, the official Pars news agency reported. The agency said two persons were arrested in the incident.

— Shots were fired in the air today in the capital to disperse opposing groups who demonstrated about the closing of the Tehran daily newspaper, Ayandegan, Pars said.

A group of 5,000 protesters gathered at the newspaper's offices to protest the government decision earlier this week to close the newspaper because of alleged anti-government sentiment. A rival group shouting slogans in favor of the Islamic goverment gathered across the street and the two sides marched to Tehran University where they were dispersed by police. No injuries were reported.

— The state radio reported six more Iranians were executed today, bringing to 394 the number shot by firing squads since Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini's forces ousted the regime of Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi in February.

Lebanese Cabinet Receives Support

BEIRUT, Lebanon (UPI) — Prime Minister Selim Al Hoss' new 11-man cabinet won a vote of confidence from Parliament by an overwhelming margin today, the state-run Beirut radio said.

The vote was 54 to 9 in the one-house Parliament, the broadcast said.

Hoss' three-week-old govenment was accepted despite opposition from some powerful Christian rightist factions who opposed Palestinian and Lebanese leftists during the 1975-1976 war.

Hoss took his cabinet to Parliament Wednesday. In his opening speech to the 64 members attending the session, he pledged his cabinet would concentrate on internal peace between warring Christian and Moslem factions, and the restoration of Lebanese sovereignty over the turbulent south.

Moslem and Christian factions fought a 19-month civil war in 1975-76 that devastated the once-prosperous country.

Even as the parliament voted, reports from southern Lebanon said Israeli-backed Christian militiamen and joint Lebanese leftists and Palestinian forces exchanged heavy artillery fire and wounded three civilians today in the tense Lebanese-Israeli border area.

Travelers from the area said the shelling included most of the villages in the eastern sector of south Lebanon, setting a number of fires. They said 155mm artilery was used.

Despite Hoss' call for unity, 30 members of Parliament boycotted Wendeesday's session to avoid having to take a stand on the new cabinet, political sources said.

Fuad Butros, acting foreign minister, met Wednesday with U.S. Ambassador John Gunther Dean to review the recent upsurge in fighting in the south between Palestinian guerrillas and Israelis and right-wing Christians.

Earlier in the week, Lebanon received a potential setback in efforts to heal the rifts from the civil war when Charles Helou resigned. Helou was a key minister in the first technocrat regime after the fighting ended.

Political analysts viewed inclusion of Helou, a respected Christian politician, as a bid to gain gradual nationwide acceptance of the new government.

The highly volatile situation in the south also helped keep pressure on the government. Hoss told the legislators his government was making contacts on the international level to deal with the grave situation.

Pope's Vacation Causes Splash

CASTEL GANDOLFO, Italy (AP) — Pope John Paul II may or may not have made his first dive into the papal swimming pool, but his vacation already has caused a splash.

Vatican officials used to be relieved when his predecessors went into two months of "summer retreat" at the sprawling estate here in the Alban Hills a half-hour drive from Rome. Now they must contend with photographers in low-flying helicopters looking for shots of the 59-year-old pope trekking through the woods in tennis sneakers, picnicking with friends or doing the backstroke.

The weekly newspaper Domenica del Corriere, in what it billed as a "world exclusive," published photographs of the glass and concrete covered pool deep in the gardens behind the papal palace. According to the magazine, the complex includes not only an Olympic-sized pool but a gym, solarium and sauna.

Officially, the Vatican refrains from comment about the private life of the pope, who was a skier, rower and mountain climber in his native Poland and while cardinal of Krakow was photographed in shorts at a picnic with young people.

Nazi Party Revival Sends 10 To Prison

BERLIN (AP) — A West Berlin court today sentenced 10 persons to prison terms of up to three years after convicting them of trying to revive the Nazi Party.

In announcing the verdicts, the court called its decision "a clear sign" it would not tolerate the "criminal gas chamber party" in the former capital of the Reich.

The court handed down the longest term — three years without probation — to 36-year-old Wolfgang Rahl. Rahl also was convicted of distributing Nazi propaganda and possessing illegal weapons.

Texas Politicians Ready To Begin Campaigns

AUSTIN (AP) — September seems to be the month for 1980 politics to really get rolling in Texas.

Republican presidential aspirants John Connally and George Bush have been after the voters for several months now, but other state and national candidates are waiting until after Labor Day to charge.

"I've been shaking a lot of hands but after Labor Day I'll be getting around the state quite a bit," says Railroad Commission Chairman John Poerner, who will be seeking his first full six-year term.

Contests for two seats on the Railroad Commission — Poerner's and Jim Nugent's — will be the top statewide races in 1980 since there are no campaigns for governor, lieutenant governor, attorney general or U.S. senator.

Although the official announcements may not come until the beginning of football season, the candidates have been busy for weeks lining up public relations and advertising firms to handle their campaigns — and raising money.

Poerner's campaign staff will be headed by Neal Spelce, prominent Austin public relations man, who handled Poerner's successful race in 1978.

Poerner's opponent in the Democratic primary, will be Rep. Buddy Temple, Diboll, who made a move against Speaker Bill Clayton but gradually withdrew as Clayton's strength grew among legislators. Temple's campaign will be handled by John Rogers and Jack Martin, who worked in John Hill's unsuccessful campaign for governor in 1978.

An Austin headquarters will be formally opened about the second week in September.

Nugent will be seeking the remainder of a two-year term left when former commissioner Jim Langdon retired. His campaign will be handled by Dwayne Holman, who handled Mark White's successful campaign for attorney general in 1978. A September announcement is expected.

Jim Hightower, former editor of the Texas Observer, has not formally announced he will oppose Nugent, but he and his campaign workers were active at the recent Texas AFL-CIO convention in Austin. Hightower's campaign committee is headed by Bernard Rapoport, a wealthy Waco insurance man, and Warren Burnett, a prominent Odessa attorney. The most active presidential candidate anywhere, nationally as well as statewide, has been Connally.

Connally has national headquarters in Washington, state headquarters in Houston and another campaign office in Austin. Julian Read and his PR firm are handling the campaign, with Texas political angles furnished by consultant Ken Towery, who handled Sen. John Tower's campaign.

Bush has both his national and state headquarters in Houston, with Jim Baker, who handled Gerald Ford's race, in charge. Bush also has been traveling constantly for several months.

Midland Mayor Ernest Angelo, who is handling Ronald Reagan's campaign in Texas, said a state headquarters will be opened in Austin in Spetember, although Reagan may not formally announce until November.

Reagan plans to visit Texas before the 1980 primaries and may make a trip here in late 1979.

Phil Crane, the Illinois congressman seeking the GOP nomination, has no Texas office but claims substantial support, particularly among independent oilmen. Tom Kidd, Arlington oil man, has handled some of his fund-raising efforts.

There are more question marks in Democratic presidential campaign plans than any other part of 1980 politics.

Backers of President Carter still don't know who will handle the Texas campaign, where the headquarters will be or when it will start. So far most Texas efforts for Carter have been handled either by National Democratic Chairman John White or Chuck Parrish of the National Carter-Mondale office, who was the Texas director in 1978.

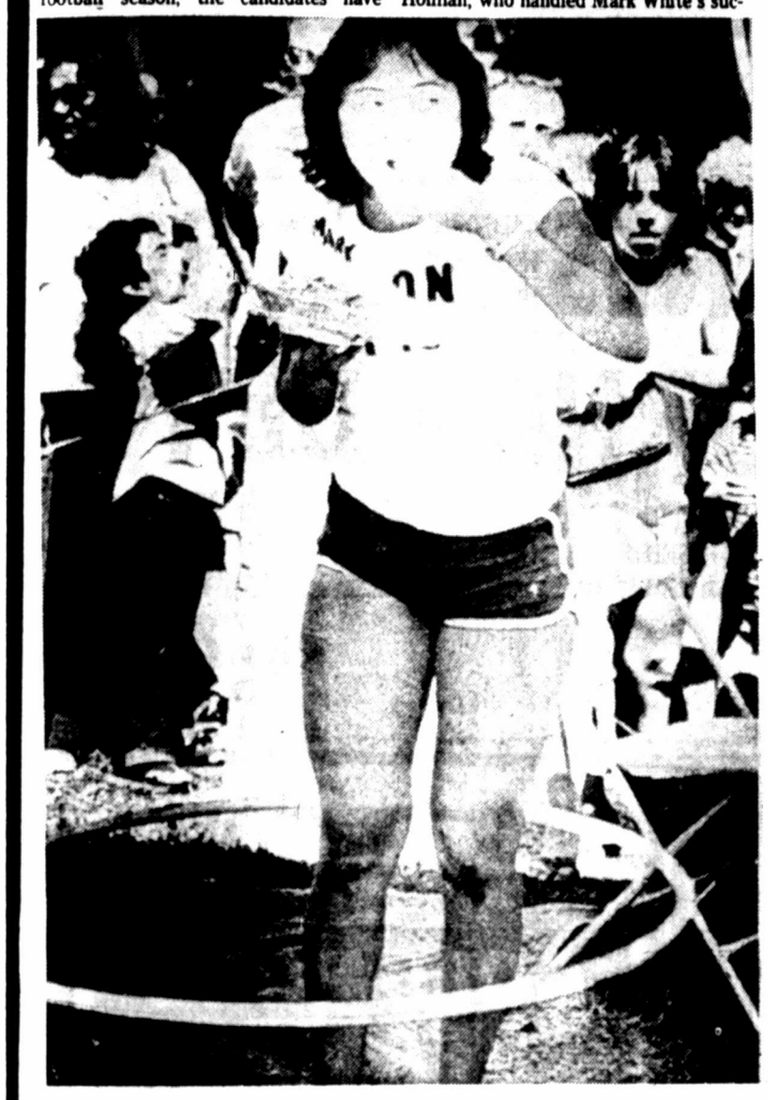

There is speculation Land Commisioner Bob Armstrong, who was head of the 1980 Carter campaign, and Calvin Guest, former state Democratic Party chairman, will head the drive.

Others see an umbrella-like organization that will include Armstrong, Guest, Hill, Attorney General Mark White, Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby, and former Gov. Dolph Briscoe.

There will be no Texas campaign office for Sen. Edward Kennedy, until and unless Kennedy makes an announcement, says John Pauland, an early Carter campaigner in 1978. There has been some talk of organizing a "Texans for an Alternative," but no definite steps have been taken.

Steve Duscha, Jerry Brown's associate press secretary, said the California governor has authorized no one in Texas to speak for him.

"We have lots of friends there, but no spokesman now," he said.

HULA HOOPING TO A NEW RECORD — Mary Howe, 17, grabs a snack while swinging a hula hoop around her legs in Napa, Calif., recently on her way to earning a place in the Guinness Book of Records after her marathon 60 hours of continuous hoop swinging. The three day ordeal broke the 54-hour hula hoop record set last year in Denton, Texas. Mary, from Torrance, Calif., was presented with a check for $1,440 for her efforts by a local radion station which sponsored the event. (AP Laserphoto)

HISTORIC PROPELER RAISED — Workmen raised an Ericsson screw propeller to the deck of a salvage vessel from the sunken ship Indiana in northeastern Lake Superior recently. The Indiana is a 350-ton steam ship built in 1844. It is being salvaged after 121 years underwater. Artifacts from the wreck will be returned to the Smithsonian Institution in Washington. Carter Trying To Resurrect United States Of 1941-45

Commentary

BY ARNOLD SAWISLAK

WASHINGTON (UPI) — What President Carter apparently wants to do to end the nation's "crisis of confidence" is to re-invent the United States of 1941-45 — a country united by the sacrifices and goals of wartime.

Jimmy Carter was just reaching manhood then and getting his first look at the world away from the isolated south Georgia farm country where he was reared.

In the eyes of the young Carter, the United States must have seemed to have set aside differences of class, race and creed to rally behind the smiling image and reassuring voice of Franklin D. Roosevelt to defeat the enemies of democracy. It seemed to be that kind of America the president was asking for in his July 8 speech.

It would be comforting to believe that those days could be brought back by a strong and confident leader who can galvanize public opinion and spirit with a speech when the going gets tough.

But before we begin believing that Tinker Bell will pull through if we clap our hands, it might be a good idea to take a second look at both those times and these.

It certainly is true that there was a strong feeling of unity during World War II, but there also was more profiteering, black marketeering and draft resistance than most of us were aware of. There also was censorship, and a lot of bad news arrived late or not at all.

It is also true that millions of Americans got to know and like people they might never have met except for the dislocations of the war. But it also was a time of some nasty incidents, such as herding Japanese-Americans into concentration camps and the Belle Isle race riot in Detroit.

Americans were a different people then. The revolution in mass communications and the econonic boom that followed World War II had not yet brought the joys and horrors of the world into every home. People could cling to the old values without being challenged at every turn by the media and their own daily experience.

Even though it had just emerged from a depression as traumatic as any national event since the Civil War, there was a strong faith in the basic strength and goodness of the American political and economic system.

Today, unquestioning patriotism and adherence to strict codes of morality still prevail in some places. But many more Americans now are more realistic and tolerant or more cynical and permissive, depending on how you look at it.

People today are more cautious about bestowing their trust and more suspicious about slogans and charismatic leaders.

Auditors Uncover Tax Waste

By KENNETH Y. TOMLINSON

When auditors examined the records of a federal job-training program in East St. Louis, Ill., they discovered thousands of blank payroll checks missing. Though no one knows exactly how much money may have been lost, the checks could have been "worth a fortune in the underworld," says one auditor. Incredibly, no effort had been made to stop payment on them.

For five years after that, in fact, the U.S. Department of Labor failed to try to trace the missing checks. Nor did Labor lift a finger to collect $3 million that the same program owed the U.S. Treasury because of misspending. By the time congressional investigators found this out, Labor no longer had ties with the program, and chances for prosecution or recovery of the money and checks were virtually nil.

Inexcusable? Yes. Unusual? Hardly. After examining a major General Accounting Office review of what happens to government audit findings, House Government Operations Committee Chairman Jack Brooks, D-Texas, declared, "Thousands of audit reports identifying the waste of billions of dollars have been allowed to collect dust for years without any agency action to correct abuses or collect improperly spent money. Billions of dollars are going down the drain because federal administrators don't care?"

Here are a few more examples:

—Auditors disclosed that virtually half of a $100,000 Office of Minority Business Enterprise (OMBE) grant to a southern Illinois company had been squandered on such items as unjustified salaries, travel and parties. Yet the Department of Commerce — which runs OMBE — refused for two years to act on the auditors' findings because the official responsible gave the audit "limited attention." By the time this case was reviewed by congressional investigators, the company had gone out of business. Similarly ignored were 11 other audits on OMBE programs disclosing waste of nearly $1 million.

—Department of Health, Education and Welfare auditors discovered that the State of Oklahoma obtained $2.1 million in federal funds to use for the "educationally deprived," only to spend it on the general school population. An HEW official prepared a letter requesting that the money be returned to the federal Treasury. Incredibly, 19 months passed before the letter was mailed. By then the statute of limitations had expired on $1.5 million.

—Government's failure to adequately verify the income status of people receiving rent subsidies could be costing taxpayers $9 million a year, according to one survey. In a related mortgage-subsidy program, GAO found that nearly one out of five participants reported less income to the Department of Housing and Urban Development than to the Internal Revenue Service. (The lower the income reported to HUD, the higher the subsidy.) GAO exposed problems with HUD income verification in 1978, 1976, 1975, 1973, 1972 and 1971. This year HUD finally acknowledged deficiencies and commissioned a major study, which will cost hundreds of thousands of dollars. But up to now corrective steps have been largely ineffective.

—In the past four years the GAO has issued 20 reports detailing waste in the Defense Department's sale of military equipment to foreign countries. In essence, DOD accounting procedures are inadequate to determine how much we should charge for the weapons we sell. Invariably, the price tags are much too low. These GAO audits alone have revealed losses in excess of $1 billion.

Although Budget Director James McIntyre solemnly warned agencies that they must begin responding to audit reports of waste and corruption, his colleagues in the Carter administration have demonstrated only passing interest in the problem.

"The top people at the agencies don't seem to be concerned," says Chairman Brooks, who vows his committee is going to "keep on their backs." Maryland Rep. Robert Bauman, the GOP's spending watchdog, declares he will continue introducing budget-cutting amendments which could force federal agencies to reduce waste.

Congressmen like Brooks and Bauman need support. After all, it's your tax money.

Chief Justice Looks At Non-Jury Trials

WASHINGTON (AP) — Chief Justice Warren E. Burger says the possibility of doing away with jury trials in certain kinds of complicated, non-criminal trials is worth further study.

Burger notes that jury duty often disrupts family life and interferes with business or professional duties. "But apart from all the other flaws, it borders on cruelty to draft people to sit for long periods trying to cope with issues largely beyond their grasp," he adds. Burger's suggestion is contained in a speech prepared for delivery today to chief state judges meeting in Flagstaff, Ariz.

Tourists Unaware Of Liquor Store

By HUGH A. MULLIGAN
Associated Press Writer

ROME — Near Piazza Navona, where the tourists always go to see three of Rome's loveliest fountains, stands a remarkable liquor store which the tourists have been slow in discovering.

But the natives know all about the marvelous medicinal elixirs of Ai Monasteri, as the shop on Corso Rinascimento is called.

Mulligan's Stew

Ai Monasteri — literally, at the monasteries — deals only in wines, brandies, liqueurs, etc., which are distilled, brewed, bottled, barreled, whatever, by good monks and holy friars in monastery wine cellars, often from the fruits of their own vineyards.

A browse through the shelves indicates at a glance how busy and versatile these men of God have been at reaping the harvest of the Master's vineyard.

There is Rhum Fantassa, fantastic rum, from the Carmelites; Sambuca liqueur from the Cistercian monks at Certosa, a cloistered order whose members have taken the vow of silence; Gin Dry Vallombrosa from an ancient abbey in the Alban Hills; Liquore Sambucaffe del Paradiso, literally the coffee-flavored liquor of paradise, heaven-sent from the cellars of a Benedictine monastery outside Florence. The shop also offers a large selection of medicinal brandies and soothingly alcoholic elixirs which take the curse out of ordinary, everyday drinking.

Who could resist one for the road if the drink offered was Liquore del Pellegrino, the liquor of pilgrims?

Elixir de Miele, a potent potion distilled from honey, has a picture on the label of a dozen plump friars beaming down benignly from a monastery balcony while the busy bee doth his thing for the benefit of the order.

For centuries the Franciscans at Viterbo, 30 miles north of Rome, have been concocting a pine-scented palliative which carries a delightful monastery health warning on the label: "Liquora Amaro che Ti S...," the bitter drink that makes you well.

From nearby Montefiascone comes a crisp golden wine with the strange name of "Est! Est!! Est!!!" which, in the long run, turned out to be less than healthy for a visiting German bishop. His tomb is in the high altar of the local church. According to the story, which purchasers of the wine will find on a card attached to the neck of the bottle, Bishop Johann Flugger of Augsburg set out to visit Rome in 1111, but he was such an admirer of Italian wines he never got there. He sent his servant ahead to mark the walls of inns and taverns where the wine was good with the word "Est" (it is) or "Non est" (it's not) if the stuff was rotten.

At Montefiascone, the bishop's precursor found such fantastic wine that he scrawled the word three times, with accelerated exclamation points, on the inn wall. The result was, as the old Blue Guide to Italy reports, "Both servant and master drank overmuch and died," bequeathing their unique rating system as the name of the district's wine to this day.

Although no Christian Brothers wines or brandies from California were displayed, Rome's monastery grog shop does not limit itself to native ecclesiastical produce. Jerusalem's Latroun monastery was represented as well as monastic endeavors from Cyprus, Greece, Spain, Portugal, Germany, Austria and, of course, France, where the men of the cloth almost have been in the habit of making miracles from the grape harvest.

Dom Perignon, the father of champagne whose statue looks out over the vineyards, may not have put the fizz into the worlds' most festive beverage, but he created an industry as well as a taste sensation by inventing a way of tying down the corks with string and keeping the bubbly blessing from exploding.

For 47 years, until his death in 1715, Dom Perignon served as cellar mastr for the Benedictine Abbey at Hautvillers, little realizing that his name would one day stand for the best of what he and his fellow monks called "vin diablo," the wine of the devil.

Chartreuse, that lovely golden elixir of the gods (or glittering green if you prefer the stronger version), is still brewed with herbs and plants by the cloistered Carthusian monks at Tarragone, Spain, and Voiron, France, according to a still secret formula given to the order in 1605 and perfected a short time after that by Father Jerome Maubec.

Benedictine D.O.M., the fabulous toddy that Dom Bernardo Vincelli first brewed at the Benedictine Monastery in Fecamp, France, in 1510 "to fortify and restore the weary monks" has gone secular and is no longer bottled under religious auspices. It is claimed, however, that the flavor formula of rare varieties of herbs, plants and peels in a base of brandy, is still entrusted to only three people at any given time. The ecclesiastical inscription D.O.M., by the way, does not stand for "Dominican Order of Monks" but "Deo Optimo Maximo," which is Latin for "To God, most good, most great."

This little epistle on the Lord's little old wine makers cannot end without a reverent bow in the direction of Father Juan Ugarte, the Spanish Jesuit who planted the Western Hemisphere's first vineyards in Mexico, and the Franciscan Padre Junipero Serra, whose friars built 21 missions between San Diego and Sonoma, most with vineyards, to launch the California wine industry.

For those who might be shocked at these pleasant gardening activities and cellar recreations of the good friars, Ai Monasteri also features a full line of skin lotions, hair restorers, shampoos, digestive nostrums and dentrifices concocted by the same contemplative cellar masters.

Group Seeks To Keep Nuclear Waste Away

WASHINGTON (AP) — U.S. District Judge John Garrett Penn says he will rule by next week on a plea by two anti-nuclear groups that he ban shipments of spent nuclear fuel through Portsmouth, Va.

James B. Dougherty, attorney for one of the plaintiffs, argued Wednesday that the Nuclear Regulatory Commission approved the Portsmouth route despite its own regulations designed to keep such shipments away from populated areas. NRC attorney Ronald Gluck said it is not practical to avoid Portsmouth for the time being, but that the NRC is looking for an alternate route. Meanwhile, he said, the shipments are protected by armed escorts to guard against "the remote event of theft and sabotage."

Obscenity Law To Begin In September

AUSTIN (AP) — After Sept. 1 it will be up to local communities to decide how many adult bookstores and X-rated movie houses they will allow.

"It's according to what the local community standards are and what local prosecutors want," said Rep. Ralph Wallace III, D-Houston, author of the new law redefining obscenity in Texas.

"It's absurd to think that this bill would cover Playboy magazine. We are after the hardcore-like stuff," Wallace said Wednesday.

"This bill was aimed at X-rated movies," said Sen. Bill Meier, D-Euless, the co-sponsor, "but I'm not concerned if some of the operators of these R-rated movies think it affects them. Maybe they should be X-rated."

The new law passed unnoticed by many in the final days of the 1979 Legislature.

Wallace said there was only a voice vote in the House, and the bill passed unanimously in the Senate.

Meier said there was no discussion in the Senate, probably because he distributed packets of materials in the senators' private lounge showing exactly what type of materials would be outlawed by the redefinition.

The sponsors stressed it will still be up to county and district attorneys to bring charges and push prosecution under the new law. This determination was made some time ago by the U.S. Supreme Court.

The new law attempts to redefine obscenity to make it easier for local prosecutors to obtain convictions, the sponsors said. There have been few convictions under the present law.

"It does nothing but track the New York statute and other states where it is working successfully," Wallace said.

The old law said "obscene means having as a whole a dominant theme that appeals to the prurient interest of the average persons applying contemporary standards."

Meier said local prosecutors have had little luck in showing the "dominant theme" in court and "the average person has no prurient interests."

The new law says "obscenity means material or a performance that the average person, applying contemporary community standards, would tend as taken as a whole appeals to the prurient interest in sex."

The new law also outlaws description of "the ultimate sex act, normal or perverted, actual or simulated, inducing sexual intercourse, sodomy and sexual bestiality." It prohibits representations of "masturbation, excretory functions, lewd exhibitions of genitals or male or female genitals in the state of sexual stimulation."

The bill also increases penalities for violations.

Under the old bill the punishment could be from a $1,000 fine or 180 days imprisonment up to $2,000 and one year in jail for wholesalers of pornographic material.

Under the new bill, the penalties range from $2,000 fines as a misdemeanor to $5,000 fines and two to 10 years as a felony.

Wallace said a special seminar will be held in October at the Criminal Justice Center at Sam Houston State University in Houston to acquaint prosecutors and law enforcement officers with the new law and how to enforce it.

Arrests May Prolong Fishermen's Feud

SEADRIFT (UPI) — Businessman Leon Ruthenberg is urging his frightened Vietnamese employees to return to work, but the arrest of three men in possession of blasting caps may scuttle efforts by him and city officials to quiet a fishermen's feud that has left one man dead.

Ruthenberg's idled Bo Brooks of Texas Inc. crab processing plant remained the focal point in the tense struggle because it was he who employed Vietnamese women as meat pickers and bought live crabs from Vietnamese fishermen, to the annoyance of local residents.

The shooting death of Billy Joe Aplin, 35, and the charging of two Vietnamese with the Aug. 3 killing caused a rash of apparent retaliation and what Ruthenberg called "a mass exodus of Vietnamese Monday morning because they were terrified."

One young Vietnamese man, who refused to give his name, said threatening telephone calls Sunday night caused most of the 100 Vietnamese to flee to neighboring towns. Describing one call, the man said: "He say, 'You kill my brother. You kill my brother. Now I kill you.'"

No arrests have been made in the firebombings of a Vietnamese house and three boats. Aplin's brother, crabber Doc Aplin, said in a television interview the Vietnamese were cordial "while planning to cut your throat."

For the fifth night Wednesday, the town of 1,300 on the Gulf Coast south of Victoria was stilled by a 9 p.m. to 6 a.m. curfew.

"Hopefully we can lift the curfew in a day or two," Police Chief Billy Lindsey said.

Dozens of law officers intentionally disrupted the silence early Wednesday and broke into a motel to arrest three men for possession of explosive devices. Lindsey said he doubted the find was connected to the fishermen's feud, but Calhoun County sheriff's investigator John Sexton, who has authority in the case, was unavailable to give any further details of the raid.

Ruthenberg, a Baltimore restaurateur and wholesaler of crab meat, flew to Seadrift Wednesday and visited in the evening with groups of his former workers in their hideouts in nearby towns.

"They want to come back to work," he said, "but they need assurances that they will be protected. The lawmen in this town and in this state are not going to protect them. This town is run by 20 terrorists."

In Dallas, Justice Department spokesman Bob Alexander said he would travel to Seadrift to work out a compromise and bring back the Vietnamese.

"We've got to reduce fear," Alexander said. "Then, I hope, the Vietnamese will gravitate back because that's home for them and everybody wants to come home."

He said in the mediation he hoped "to start the logical process toward settling disputes, possibly defining fishing territories."

Native fishermen believe the Vietnamese, who moved into the area three years ago because of job opportunites at Ruthenberg's plant, do not abide by unwritten fishing rules and poach from their competitors' traps.

"The other people do the same thing," Ruthenberg said.

He appeared bitter over his business losses but said he had no plans to aid in the release or the legal defense of the brothers jailed in the Aplin slaying — Chinh Van Nguyen, 20, and Sau Van Nguyen, 21.

Ruthenberg's bookkeeper, Georgia Davis, phoned some of the hiding Vietnamese workers to arrange to mail them their back paychecks. She said they were not hostile over the arrests.

Water Board Refuses To Move Hearing

AUSTIN (AP) — The Texas Water Commission has refused to move to Woodville a hearing on possible contamination of East Texas roads by one of the nation's largest handlers of hazardous materials.

Lawyer Bob Wortham of Beaumont pleaded for the transfer Wednesday, telling the commission, "If landowners are denied the right to appear before you, there will be a great deal of bitterness."

"It would only be right," he said, "if the people had an opportunity to come before you to tell you how they've been affected and the damages they've had."

Wortham represented himself and 800 other landowners in Barlow Lake Estates in Jasper and Tyler counties.

He said he had a 1-month-old child who "I'm very leery of taking to Barlow. I fear more for the child than I do for myself or my wife."

"Most of the people are just good, old working folks or poor people" who cannot afford to come to Austin for a hearing, said Wortham. "I could muster only 10 or 12 at the most to come to Austin."

Woodville is in Tyler County, 14 miles from Barlow.

The subdivision was named in a May 9 commission order instructing Browning-Ferris Industries Chemical Services, Inc., to remove all hazardous materials — including nitrobenzene — from five subdivisions in Tyler and Polk counties.

At the request of Wortham, the commission agreed to postpone until Sept. 13 a hearing on a motion by Browning-Ferris to remove Barlow from the May 9 order. Browning-Ferris contends analyses of samples obtained from the subdivision have failed to reveal the presence of any hazardous materials.

Jury Selection May End Today

FORT WORTH (AP) — Jury selection could be completed today in the murder solicitation retrial of millionaire Cullen Davis, prosecution and defense attorneys said Wednesday.

State District Judge Gordon Gray said prosecution testimony against the Fort Worth industrialist will begin Monday if defense attorney Richard "Racehorse" Haynes approves two additional members of the jury panel today.

At the close of Wednesday's proceedings, 30 prospective jurors had been selected for possible service. After a panel of 32 is seated, prosecution and defense attorneys each will strike 10 names. The remaining 12 will hear the case.

Davis is accused of trying to arrange the contract murder of State District Judge Joe Eidson, who was presiding over Davis' lengthy divorce proceeding against Priscilla Davis. Eidson, who was not harmed, cooperated with authorities in a investigation which led to Davis' arrest last August. The couple later was granted a divorce by another judge.

Davis' first trial — moved to Houston on a change of venue from Fort Worth — ended with a hung jury.

black and Hispanic neighborhoods where street, drainage, sanitation or mass transit problems plague many residents.

"There are a lot of minorities involved, but so is the silent majority," Rep. Ron Waters, D-Houston, said. "Ask the people in Alief and Clear Lake (annexed last year) who still can't get city services."

Welch answers the real question is whether Houston will keep its continued low-tax, cost-efficient government that contributes to a good business and employment climate.

He cites New York City, where he says a 50-plus member district-based council has contributed to that city's financial problems.

"Bigger government has never been better government," Welch says in radio ads. "Our friends in Washington have proved that. Vote yes on 9-5 and let's keep city costs and taxes in line."

Houston is one of the last large cities in the nation to face reorganization of its city council in response to new civil rights laws or Justice Department pressure.

Councilman Louis Macey said council stubbornness in annexing mostly white areas without prior approval of the Justice Department caused the problem.

"When we knowingly broke the law, we knew the consequences," Macey said. "We just didn't know the reaction would be as harsh as it was."

European Hypnotist To Perform At Fair

Europe's fastest hypnotist will make his third consecutive appearance at the Panhandle South Plains Fair here Sept. 22-29, fair manager Steve L. Lewis has announced.

Lewis said Vandermeide will be appearing on the outdoor stage at 7:30 and 9:30 p.m. daily except the closing Saturday. No admission is charged for outdoor stage entertainment, which will include several other acts to be announced later.

Vandermeide has been a crowd-pleaser for more than 20 years and has appeared at fairs and expositions throughout the United States and Canada.

With almost unbelievable speed, he hypnotizes his volunteers and provides laughs that grow by the minute.

A fiddlers contest will help launch the fair on its eight-day engagement followed by a lineup of country and western stars.

Slated to appear on stage in Fair Park Coliseum are Charley Pride, 5 and 8 p.m. Sept. 23; The Statler Brothers, with Barbara Mandrell, 5 and 8 p.m. Sept. 24; Eddie Rabbitt, with Janie Fricke, 8 p.m. only Sept. 25; Dave and Sugar, with John Conlee, 8 p.m. Sept. 26; "The Golden Years of Country Music," by South Plains College, 7 p.m. Sept. 27; Tom T. Hall, with Charly McClain, 8 p.m. Sept. 28; and Tammy Wynette, with George "Goober" Lindsey and Rex Allen Jr., 5 p.m. and 8 p.m. Sept. 29.

All seats are reserved and tickets are $4, $5, and $6 except for the SPC show, which are $2 and $3.

Tickets now are on sale at the fair offices, 105 E. Broadway, between the hours of 9 a.m. and 4:30 p.m. Monday through Friday. They also will go on sale Aug. 17 at Dunlap's, Sears and Hemphill-Wells stores in South Plains Mall, Luskey's Western Wear and Ed's Wagon Wheel.

The fair office telephone number is 744-9557.

forcement of our traffic laws."

The mayor said an analysis of the nature of all accidents and fatalities shows night is the most hazardous driving time.

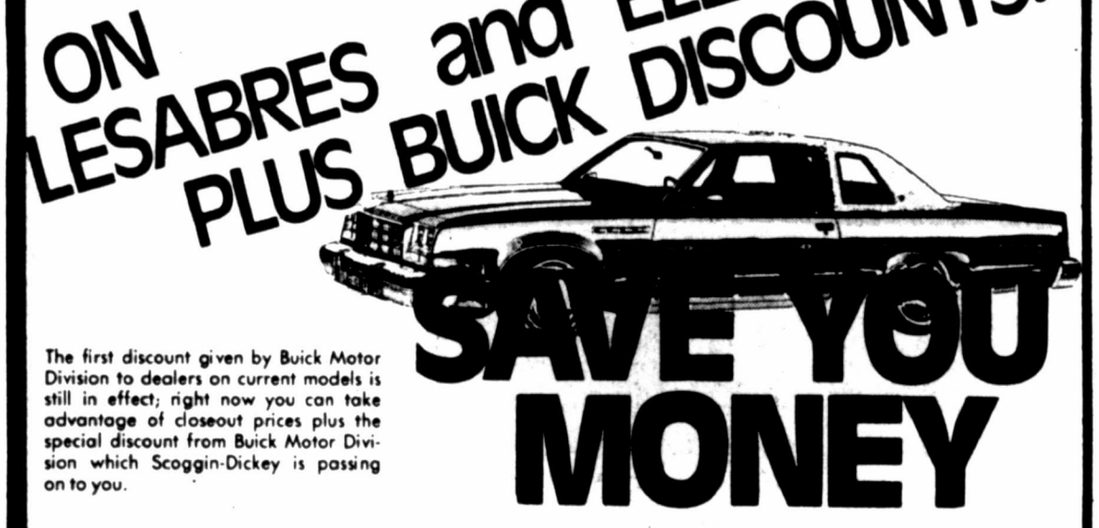

"With school starting soon...traffic will increase and traffic enforcement will increase right along with it," he promised.

Kansas City Arena Cave-In Inevitable

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — Citing "a materials problem, an installation problem and a design problem," a structural engineer says the June 4 cave-in of the Kemper Arena here was "inevitable."

The 17,000-seat, $23 million arena was empty at the time — except for some security guards, who escaped injury.

New Beginnings

Do you presently work in the retail business; possess a college degree; have at least 3-5 years of management experience; but have little opportunity for advancement in the near future?

Do you enjoy responsibility/challenge/long hours and hard work, which will allow you to advance to your highest potential?

If you do, we invite you to discover our Management Training Program. Relocation may be required upon completion of training. With the above requirements, you can train in our Management Program and receive an excellent starting salary plus profit from our outstanding benefits such as credit union, profit sharing, paid medical and more!

If this offer brings a twinkle to your eye and you meet the above qualifications, please contact Dusty Hall in Odessa, Texas at (915) 563-0011, in order to schedule a personal interview. OR send, in confidence, your college transcript and resume, with salary history and salary requirements to:

Pre-Owned Specials...
The response to our "Whale of a Hail Sale" was so outstanding that we now find ourselves OVERSTOCKED on excellent pre-owned AIRSTREAMS and ARGOSY TRAVEL TRAILERS. We must reduce this stock to make room for the '80 models.
We now have in stock pre-owned Airstreams and Argosys in 18', 20', 22', 25', 27' & 29' & 31', lengths with prices starting as low as ..... $2995!
EXAMPLE No. 1 27' AIRSTREAM SPD Double Air, Zip-Dee awning, AM/FM 8-track, TV antenna, power jack, BAL stabilizer Jacks — very sharp!
WAS $9670 — NOW $8282 ..... SAVE $1388!
EXAMPLE No. 2: 31' AIRSTREAM, twin beds, AM/FM stereo, tv antenna, 7 1/2', refrigerator & Seperate freezer, 'L' front lounge.
Was $10,575 — NOW $9494 ..... SAVE $1081!
REMEMBER! A 31' AIRSTREAM TOWS WITH LESS EFFORT THAN AN AVERAGE 20' TRAVEL TRAILER!
We still have a very few Airstream Road Rangers and Monacos with slight hail damage and tremendous discounts!

Want a car that'll go well over 400 miles without stopping for gas?
"Let's make a deal at Fenner's Place."

	Chrysler Newport	357 MILES ESTIMATED CRUISING RANGE	483 MILES ESTIMATED HWY CRUISING RANGE	17 EPA ESTIMATED MPG	23 ESTIMATED HIGHWAY
	Chrysler Cordoba	336 MILES ESTIMATED CRUISING RANGE	483 MILES ESTIMATED HWY CRUISING RANGE	16 EPA ESTIMATED MPG	23 ESTIMATED HIGHWAY
	Chrysler LeBaron	351 MILES ESTIMATED CRUISING RANGE	546 MILES ESTIMATED HWY CRUISING RANGE	18 EPA ESTIMATED MPG	28 ESTIMATED HIGHWAY
	Plymouth Horizon	325 MILES ESTIMATED CRUISING RANGE	494 MILES ESTIMATED HWY CRUISING RANGE	25 EPA ESTIMATED MPG	38 ESTIMATED HIGHWAY

Remember †The circled EPA estimate is for comparison to other cars. Your mileage and range depend on your speed, weather and trip length. ††Your actual highway mileage and range will probably be less than the highway estimate. Cruising range estimates are determined by multiplying the EPA and highway estimates by standard fuel tank capacities. Chrysler New Yorker, Newport and Cordoba: 21 gallon capacity. Chrysler LeBaron: 19.5 gallon capacity. Plymouth Volaré: 18 gallon capacity. Plymouth Horizon: 13 gallon capacity.

"Let's make a deal" now on one of our mileage cars.

When it comes to mileage, we're the place to come to. Consider our full-size Chrysler Newport and mid-size LeBaron get better EPA estimated gas mileage than Chevrolet Caprice or Ford LTD. Cordoba comes up with better mileage than Thunderbird or Cougar XR-7. And Volaré with standard engine and automatic transmission beats the comparably equipped Granada or Monarch in mileage. Overall, we can offer you five Plymouth models that deliver 25 mpg or better. Chevy has two. Ford one.*

Like we said, if you're looking for mileage, we're the guys to see. Especially now during our "Let's Make a Deal" Closeout. Every one of our mileage cars must go now. In fact, you may never have a better chance to get into the Chrysler or Plymouth of your choice. So, "let's make a deal," shall we? Like, today.

*Models counted by make and body style.

TRYING TO TAME RUNAWAY WELL — Workmen aboard the ship L.B. Meaders use special equipment to force steel and lead balls in a gelatin-like mixture down the runaway Ixtoc 1 oil well in the Bay of Campeche to try to stem the flow of oil, so that the well can be capped. The well blew out June 3 and has been spilling about 1.4 million gallons of oil a day into the Gulf of Mexico. A portion of the oil recently washed up on the Texas Coast. (AP Laserphoto)

Oil Workers Trying To Plug Well

CIUDAD DEL CARMEN, Mexico (AP) — Oil workers are pumping steel and lead balls down the runaway Ixtoc 1 oil well in the Bay of Campeche in a bid to stem the furious flow of oil that has spread into the Gulf of Mexico and washed up on the Texas coast.

The tennis ball-sized spheres, mixed in a gelatin solution, are being forced down the four-inch-wide well pipe under heavy pressure at a rate of about eight a minute, said engineer J. Jesus Gaytan Rangel, who is running the operation for PEMEX, the Mexican oil monopoly that owns the well.

Rangel told a reporter Wednesday that at least 50,000 balls would have to be pumped down the well before the flow could be stemed sufficiently so the gusher could be sealed with a mixture of mud and cement.

He said it would be eight to 10 days before engineers know if this attempt to cap history's worst oil spill will work.

Meanwhile, work continues on two relief wells being drilled at angles to the runaway in an effort to relieve the pressure on the main well and allow it to be capped.

Oil well troubleshooter Red Adair, who is working on the relief well project, told reporters Wednesday that it could be at least four or five more weeks before the runaway is controlled. He said work was proceeding "on schedule" and noted that some maverick wells have taken as long as year to bring under control.

PEMEX officials say the first relief well is scheduled for completion by mid-September and the second by early October.

Ixtoc 1 is a test well in a new PEMEX field in Campeche Bay. It sits in 170 feet of water and extends two miles beneath the floor of the bay.

The well blew out June 3 and began spilling about 1.4 million gallons of oil a day and an equal amount of natural gas. The oil flow has since been cut to about 840,000 gallons a day.

PEMEX says about half the oil is being burned away by a fire at the well head fueled by escaping natural gas. The company says another 84,000 gallons a day is being scooped up by skimmer boats.

A solid slick of oil six miles long by 1½ miles wide extends west to northwest from the flaming well, said Armendariz Molina, a PEMEX official. The rust-brown slick then breaks down into narrow belts and is pushed by a stiff northernly breeze along the coast of the Gulf of Mexico, he said.

One 40-mile long belt of oil is drifting off the coast of Padre Island, Texas, where tar balls generated by the spill began washing ashore earlier this week.

Young Turtles' Future Clouded By Dangers Of Ocean Pollution

SOUTH PADRE ISLAND (UPI) — A tiny Ridley turtle, the unlikely survivor of predators and pollution, has wriggled from the warm sand and emerged to face a future muddied by Mexican oil.

The foster parents of the rare creature are a retired Kansas farm couple dismayed at the environment where the Ridley will spend its adult life.

For the record, the palm sized Ridley of undetermined sex arrived at 2:26 a.m. Wednesday, 54 days after being left to incubate in sand. Sometime today it will take an emergency Coast Guard flight to Galveston to join other orphaned Ridleys being cared for by government wildlife officials until they are old enough to be released off the western Florida coast.

Earl Lippoldt, 54, and his wife, Olive, said the hatchling's emergence was worth the annual 100 days of hell spent on the beach in a small trailer protecting Ridley eggs from crabs, coyotes and people.

"Our job is to protect them and get them to the water," Lippoldt said of his independent efforts to save the species from extinction. "The only reason this one won't be let go is because of the oil.

"The Gulf will probably be this way for years to come," Lippoldt said of the oil slick polluting its waters from a blownout Mexican well. "That oil could swirl around out there for years and come in a little at a time. It absolutely will be years before we release anymore turtles."

The hatchling was the first since 1977 among the few Padre Isalnds nests dug by the female Ridleys whose main nesting ground is in Mexico.

"It was wonderful finding the nest June 15, but it is a much greater feeling now that the first one has emerged," Lippoldt said in the sweltering heat outside his trailer.

"And, I'm very happy that they (federal officials) came in here and helped us out. I had asked the U.S. Fish and Wildlife office for instructions when I heard about the oil and Saturday they told me not to even let them near the water if they hatched."

Lippoldt normally looks for Ridley nests each spring and relocates the eggs, often more than 100, to a fenced pen outside his door. If the eggs hatch, as they last did in 1977, he releases the baby turtles in the surf where the females will return after eight years.

Lippoldt said he became interested in the Ridley's welfare when he and his wife retired to Padre Island and were told of the turtles' plight by their next door neighbor, locally known as "the turtle lady." Ila Loetscher, 75, is considered an expert on the turtles.

Oil's Main Path Not Towards Other States

SOUTH PADRE ISLAND (UPI) — News reports that Gulf of Mexico currents could push oil spewing from an offshore Mexican well all the way to Florida and cause serious damage were inaccurate, the Coast Guard said.

Capt. Roger Madson said the reports "got Florida very nervous."

"No large amount of oil is moving to Florida or Mississippi," he said Wednesday.

The news reports had prompted Mississippi Gov. Cliff Finch to rush to Texas Wednesday to confer with federal officials to see if his state's coastline was endangered.

The Coast Guard reiterated its previous explanation that it was impossible to predict whether the oil would move to Florida.

"Nobody can say what it will do," said Roger Meacham of the Environmental Protection Agency at Corpus Christi.

Government scientist John Robinson said Mississippi River currents pouring into the Gulf of Mexico also would deflect to the south any oil that traveled that far. He said changes in seasonal winds from southeast to northernly would push the pollution away from the U.S. Mainland.

Citizens Devise Remedies For Spill

SOUTH PADRE ISLAND (AP) — While scientists are using the latest equipment to battle a massive oil spill, some resourceful Americans are tinkering with home remedies for the world's biggest spill.

And the well-meaning citizens are not shy about offering their services — sometimes for free and sometimes for hire.

"A lot of people think you can burn the oil. But a lot of that oil is mostly water by now. The volatiles have evaporated," said coast guardsman Richard Griggs.

Another caller recommended a simplified clean-up process.

"Take a big piece of plastic, stretch it under the tar balls that sink and pick them up," Griggs recalled one caller saying.

Then there's the woman who saw nothing wrong with mounting huge fans on a barge in the gulf — and blowing the oil back towards the blown-out Mexican well its spewing from.

Some callers opt for more natural defenses. There was a recommendation to use oil-eating bugs to lap up the runaway crude.

Griggs, who insists that suggestions "we think can be applied" are passed on to higher-ups, said, "There are organisms that feed on the carbon in oil."

Some of the callers claim to be inventors who can solve the problem in a few days. Others are housewives who have had more practical experience.

An Atlanta housewife — fresh from a succesful kitchen test — sugested a system that somehow involved massive doses of flour poured into the gulf.

"You've got some who want to come here and do it," Griggs said. "They think they can solve the problem and they want someone to get them here for the benefit of mankind."

HEROIN RING BROKEN

NICE, France (AP) — A $5,000-a-day heroin network operating out of the French Riviera ports of Nice and Cannes has been dismantled by narcotics agents, police officials say. A special anti-drug unit of the French police said seven people had been arrested since early July and that police had seized almost three ounces of pure heroin, with an estimated street value of some 500,000 francs, or nearly $120,000.

Water Systems Fail In Texas Port Cities

SOUTH PADRE ISLAND (UPI) — Oil and water really don't mix when the oil is on your feet and the water is on the mainland stymied by a broken pump.

Residents, tourists and reporters covering history's worst oil spill discovered Wednesday night the oily stains on their feet couldn't be removed because the resort community's water supply had failed.

Gilbert Groomer, general manager of the water district across the Laguna Madre at Port Isabel, said the demand for water was greater than his pumps could accommodate and the system failed in four cities including South Padre Island, Port Isabel, Laguna Heights and Laguna Vista.

Radio Effort Pleases Soviets

MOSCOW (AP) — Soviet officials are delighted with their latest effort in radio propaganda despite claims that the ambitious project — the "Radio Moscow World Service" — is hogging the world's airwaves.

Designed for believability and beamed around the world in English for 19 hours a day, the programs are heard by millions of listeners. They now bring in 1,000 listeners' letters a month.

Many old-time propaganda cliches have been blue-penciled out of scripts to make Moscow's programs more acceptable to Western audiences. Program planners say that even two of the oldest standbys of political jargon — "imperialism" and "capitalism" — may soon be banned from the air.

"Perhaps we're becoming more sophisticated," says Vladimir Pozner, a veteran English-language commentator. "We want to speak in a human voice. We are human beings."

Meanwhile, the new-look programs are paying an unexpected benefit in Moscow itself. Thousands of Russians are tuning in to the World Service, even if they don't understand English, because of its Soviet rock and disco music. Such music gets little time on local Soviet radio.

The World Service programs may even be helping to distract some young Soviets from Western broadcasts. Western programs beamed to Russia have long irritated Soviet authorities, who charge that many of them are "anti-Soviet."

The World Service has been on a shakedown cruise since October, when it replaced a series of shorter programs beamed to individual parts of the world. Its light programs of newscasts, commentaries and musical interludes remind many listeners of the British Broadcasting Corp.'s own overseas service.

While the BBC broadcasts the chimes of Big Ben to announce the time, Radio Moscow uses the Kremlin chimes. News formats are very similar. With propaganda cliches disappearing from Moscow programs a listener searching out the BBC can hear several news items before realizing that his dial is set to the Soviet Union.

Radio Moscow officials deny any intention to steal BBC Listeners, and claim to be flattered by suggestions that their top announcers speak such good English that they can be mistaken for the BBC.

Ghely Shakhov, chief of Radio Moscow, asserts that he sometime wishes his staff would speak in "more broken English" to avoid confusion.

Radio Moscow also faces controversy over the high power of its transmitters and its policy of broadcasting the same program simultaneously on many spots on the dial. In the already overcrowded world airwaves, the Moscow broadcasts reduce the space for other stations to operate.

The Radio Moscow announcers range from members of diplomatic families who have spent long periods living in England or the United States to new graduates of the Soviet capital's foreign language institutes.

One full-time announcer, 25-year-old Marina Dymova, is a long-haired brunette just a couple of years out of Moscow's most prestigious foreign language academy.

Also working for Radio Moscow have been Americans and Britons who have taken up life in the Soviet Union. Officials previously have been reluctant to introduce them to Western reporters claiming that the announcers themselves feared hostile articles.

But on a recent visit to Radio Moscow, a reporter briefly met Annabelle Bucar, a native of the Pittsburgh area who settled permanently in the Soviet Union at the end of World War II and married a Soviet man. She is now a Soviet citizen herself and says she lives "a completely normal Soviet life."

She said she has been able to disabuse American visitors to Moscow of "odd and simple ideas" about the Soviet Union, and that she now considers the country her home.

ANCIENT SYSTEM

The first known system for delivering water to cities was built by the Phoenicians. The Greeks copied the system of digging tunnels to bring water to their cities, and the Romans developed it with aqueducts 50 to 100 feet high that brought water to Rome from more than 60 miles away.

Russian Says Normal Life-Span 150 Years

MOSCOW (AP) — A Soviet authority on reanimation — the science of bringing the dying back to life — says the normal life-span of humans should be about 150 years, and medical life-saving techniques are bringing that goal nearer.

Dr. Vladimir Negovsky, who for 40 years has been reversing the process of death, said in an interview that most people die before they should because of human "mechanical breakdowns" that can be repaired.

He and his staff at the Laboratory of Reanimatology have been pioneers in the search for ways to prolong the period of "clinical death," when a patient whose heart has stopped can be revived. During this period they use such measures as artificial respiration, heart massage, electric shock, drugs and treatment against hypothermia (subnormal body temperature) and hypoxia (oxygen starvation) to reverse the death process.

Negovsky said he has learned to prolong this critical period from an average of five or six minutes to 10 or 15 minutes. He said he expects to lengthen this to two or three hours by lowering body temperatures.

Negovsky, the world's leading authority in the field, has persuaded the Soviet medical establishment to set up some 200 reanimation wards around the country, to equip its large cities with emergency-care "reanimobiles" and to train doctors everywhere in his techniques. He said because of this, thousands of people are alive today who would not have survived accidents or hospital complications.

Soviet scientists "recognize that a new medical specialty has been created," he wrote last year in the journal Problems of Philosophy. "Its most important task is controlling unjustified death, sudden death, a reversible state whose development does not exclude the possibility of a stable and adequate restoration of vital functions. And today we have grounds to hope that such death, in the absence of irreversible damage to vitally important organs, will be conquered. ...

"Today we know that clinical death is that intermediate state through which life ends and death occurs — a reversible death, it is neither life nor death but a state of transition from life to irreversible death.

"It has been established through numerous investigations that the organism's vital functions do not fade out simultaneously: the first to cease is the functioning of the cerebral cortex, then the functions of the stem portions fade out, then respiration, cardiac activity, and other vital functions."

The more the process is understood, and the more doctors learn to battle it, the less excuse there is for many of the deaths that occur every day, Negovsky said.

"People say a person died of loss of blood," he continued. "In the eyes of reanimators this is a crime. A person cannot die of loss of blood. To save such a person is not complicated.

"The first steps in our understanding have been taken. Our studies show that death is not so mysterious as we had thought. Death is a biological phenomenon just like many other biological phenomena. You can study it in detail and learn how to reverse the process.

"Biological studies show that a man should live about 150 years. But along the way, something breaks down. Something stops working. And death sets in."

Like researchers in the West, Negovsky says many of his patients experience a sensation of "after life" during the period of clinical death. He insists these experiences are mirages, "the productions of a sick brain," and not religious experiences.

He said some patients report intense visions of long dark tunnels, with a compelling, god-like figure waiting at the end. They have the sensation of floating out of their own bodies and seeing themselves lying below.

Negovsky's explanation: "When a person dies, his brain dies, bit by bit, and some sort of imagination occurs, some sort of dusky, fantastic, unreal suppositions. ... This is typical of all sorts of brain malfunctions.

"This happens not during the time of death but during the time of dying or in the time of coming back to life. What the patient sees is not in the nether world but in this world."

As for the similarities in the visions of patients — whether they are in the Soviet Union, "in the United States, in France, in South America or in Tibet," this happens "simply because the brains of the human being are structured the same everywhere," Negovsky said.

But a restful sleep is more common than such visions, he reported.

"You ask a person, 'What did you see in the other world?' and he says, 'I slept through my death. I slept through it.'"

It has been estimated that the solar spectrum contains 1,000 distinguishable hues.

Don Henry

For The Love Of It

IT'S COMING BACK slowly for Joe Green. But, so is the soreness.

For most of the young troops daily donning the pads and helmets at Lubbock Christian College, this game of football was never very far away, say, back to the end of November 1978.

But, for Green, it goes back a few years.

But, for the lack of something to do — no, more like the love of competing — Green is having a go at football as LCC fields its first team this fall. And, as he goes about relearning techniques, he brings with him a touch of speed which would please any coach.

Green has run track at the west Lubbock school for the past three seasons. Now, his eligibility has expired in that sport, so he's keeping in touch via football.

"I really hadn't played any football at all since my junior year in high school until last spring when we had (non-contact) spring training," Green remarked Wednesday.

"But, I love competing. I love to run, and now I'm enjoying the contact."

GREEN'S FOOTBALL EXPERIENCE came in Fort Worth but it wasn't abundant. He said he played "a little on the varsity" as a wide receiver at Fort Worth Wyatt that year, 1973, as a junior.

"We had a good team, though, went 9-1 and got beat in the district playoff by Arlington Heights."

But, track consumed most of his athletic energies, and after finishing high school, he ran track at Cisco Junior College. After laying out of school for a year, Green enrolled at LCC and ran the sprints for three seasons.

He didn't touch the 100-yard dash in college, but he has run the 220 in 21.9; he dipped to 22.1 last spring. Also, in the quarter, he had best times of 47.9 and 48.5.

Then came the change from the shorts-and-light jersey uniform and an uncontested running lane to full padding and cornerback harassment. It's a change, Green admits.

"When we went through spring training, we couldn't put on pads (LCC's Texas Conference rules prevent them). So, it was mainly agility, running and a lot of dummy plays.

"But, it's starting to come back now. And everybody is real excited about it. You could tell a difference (in the team) when we put on pads and started hitting."

BUT AT AGE 22 and grade senior ("just 39 more hours"), Green realizes this is his last collegiate competition. He is playing his last year just as Lubbock Christian inaugurates the sport of football.

Green, like all others footballers at LCC, is competing without a scholarship, and he is looking forward to a career as a junior high coach. ("They're just the right age to work with; I'm coaching a seventh-grade girls basketball team now at LCHS, just for the fun of it"). Thus the question is obvious. And Green didn't dodge it.

"I just enjoy the competition. Football is a lot of fun. Sure, I'm sore (workouts only began Monday), and I have weak ankles. But, I have some speed, and I hope that will help me.

"Coach (Jerry Don) Sanders gets along well with all the players. He puts you in a position of enjoying working out. I'm excited ... everybody is excited about playing; we're all ready to play.

"Way down deep inside, I guess it's just that I love to compete.

"I might be the oldest, but will they (the young freshmen) look to me for leadership? I hope age doesn't have anything to do with it.

Dodgers Owner O'Malley Dies

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Walter O'Malley, owner of the Los Angeles Dodgers and one of the leaders in the westward expansion of baseball, died today of heart failure. He was 75.

O'Malley died early this morning at Methodist Hospital at the Mayo Clinic in Rochester, Minn., according to a spokesman for the National League team.

O'Malley had been ill for some time and had been hospitalized since June 28.

His death followed by four weeks the death of his wife, Kay.

Survivors include O'Malley's son, Peter, who is president of the Dodgers.

The senior O'Malley had little to do with the running of the club for several years, although he did attend many of the games at Dodger Stadium.

O'Malley, by almost any account, had been one of the most powerful of the sporting world's lords, exerting his will and influence over the game of baseball for three decades while controlling one of sports' richest franchises.

He made baseball a genuinely national game when he moved the Dodgers from Brooklyn to Los Angeles in 1958. Other sports — basketball and hockey — followed baseball's path west.

Football felt his pull as well. After the Dodgers moved, western franchises were among the strongest of the new American Football League and their strength has persisted after the merger with the National Football League.

He was asked by an interviewer in 1968 if baseball observers were right in thinking O'Malley was the most powerful individual in the sport.

"If the allegation were true, I'm sure things would be a lot different," he replied. "Personally I do not believe in expansion, I do not believe in divisional play, I do not believe in changing the tradition of the World Series, I do not believe in the free-agent draft; many things like that."

O'Malley said he did not necessarily agree with the decisions that baseball owners were making. He noted it took a unanimous vote of the NL owners to approve expansion into Montreal and San Diego, and he went along despite the fact San Diego would be a direct competitor for some of the millions of potential fans in Southern California.

"I have a strong feeling that a vote should not be based on selfish reasons. You have to look at it on a standpoint of baseball generally."

Bavasi said of O'Malley that "in the 16 years I worked for him he never interfered with the operation. I mean the team itself. He involved himself, of course, in the radio and TV end. Walter gives a man a job and if he doesn't do it there'll be a change. But he doesn't look over your shoulder."

Walter Francis O'Malley, son of a onetime New York city commissioner of public markets, was born in New York City Oct. 9, 1903. He studied engineering and graduated from the University of Pennsylvania in 1926 and from Fordham Law School in 1930.

From a base as an engineer-attorney he prospered buying up mortgages in the depression. Along with holdings in Brooklyn's building industry, he also acquired part ownership of the Brooklyn Borough Gas Co., the Long Island Railroad and the New York Subway Advertising Co.

Colts Blank Pasadena In Opener

By JOHN EUBANKS
Avalanche-Journal Sports Staff

A 4-run outburst in the fifth inning Wednesday night proved disastrous for Pasadena as the Lubbock All-Stars defeated South Texans 5-0 in the first round of the South Zone Colt League Baseball Tournament at Lowrey Field.

In the opening game of the double-elimination tournament ror 15-16year-olds, Bobby Rase and Joey Brinson combined for a two-hitter to lead Brandon, Fla., to a 3-1 victory over San Antonio.

The tournament continues today as San Antonio meets Pasadena at 7 p.m. in the losers bracket, and Lubbock tangles with Brandon at 9 p.m.

In the nightcap Wednesday, Lubbock pitching ace Steve Coleman allowed just two hits and struck out nine, while his teammates backed him up with nine hits.

Shawn McClain, who went 3-for-4 at the plate, started the fifth-inning outburst with a leadoff single to left field. He moved to second on a sacrifice bunt by Doyle Sooter and scored when the Pasadena shortstop mishandled Darrell Kitten's grounder.

Catcher Allan Harp then doubled, moving Kitten to third. Hector Limon singled to score Kitten with the second run, but Harp was thrown out at the plate trying to score from second.

Coleman, Lubbock's sixth batter of the inning, then walked and, with two outs, Monty Hopkins hit a towering pop fly which the Pasadena second baseman dropped, allowing Limon and Coleman to score.

James Fannin then came on in relief for Pasadena. He struck out the next Lubbock batter but could not reverse the damage already done — that being 4 runs.

Lubbock scored a lone run in the sixth when McClain again led off the inning with a single, moved to third on singles by Kitten and Harp and came

Cards, Atlanta Eye Hot Exhibition Win

By The Associated Press

The Atlanta Falcons and St. Louis Cardinals have extra incentive to improve their running games when they meet in one of tonight's two National Football League exhibition clashes.

They'll want to keep moving because of the oven-like artificial surface at Busch Memorial Stadium, where temperatures are expected to reach 90 degrees.

"I'd say it's 10 to 15 degrees hotter on on the field," said Cardinals owner Bill Bidwill. "The real problem is the heat it puts on the players' feet. We use charcoal-type pads inside shoes, just like baseball teams do. How much good it will do, I really can't say."

The Kansas City Chiefs will host the Philadelphia Eagles in the other exhibition contest tonight.

St. Louis' efforts to establish a better running attack to mesh with with the passing of Jim Hart — who, like Atlanta's Steve Bartkowski, is expected to start — will be hampered by the continued absence of injured rookies Theotis Brown and Thomas Lott.

"If we had all our running backs healthy, we would be — as we're expected to be — an outstanding running team," said Jim Sweeney, the Cards' offensive backfield coach. "This (injuries) is hampering our development more than anything else."

Although Brown and Lott will not be available, rookies O.J. Anderson and Bobby Trudeau will be available to spell veterans Jim Otis and Wayne Morris on occasion.

"We would like Atlanta not to be running blitz patterns against us all the time, so that we can be honing our running game into the kind of shape we would like to see it in at this stage," Sweeney said. "It really is more difficult to run against a blitz than it is to throw against it."

Meanwhile, the Atlanta ground game, which ranked 27th among 28 NFL teams in per-carry average in 1978, showed signs of improving during last week's 37-14 loss to New England.

Rookies William Andrews and James Mayberry, for example, combined to gain 99 yards on 14 carries.

There has been no progress, however, in talks between the Washington Redskins and running back Benny Malone, who walked out of camp Wednesday after the Redskins refused to discuss the renegotiation of his contract.

Cowboy Back To Miss NFL Opener

THOUSAND OAKS, Calif. (AP) — Star tailback Tony Dorsett probably will miss the Dallas Cowboys' regular season opener Sept. 2 against St. Louis because of a fractured toe, the Cowboys' team physician said Wednesday.

Dr. Marvin Knight said that Dorsett's lower right leg and foot would be in a cast for 10 days to two weeks before additional x-rays are made.

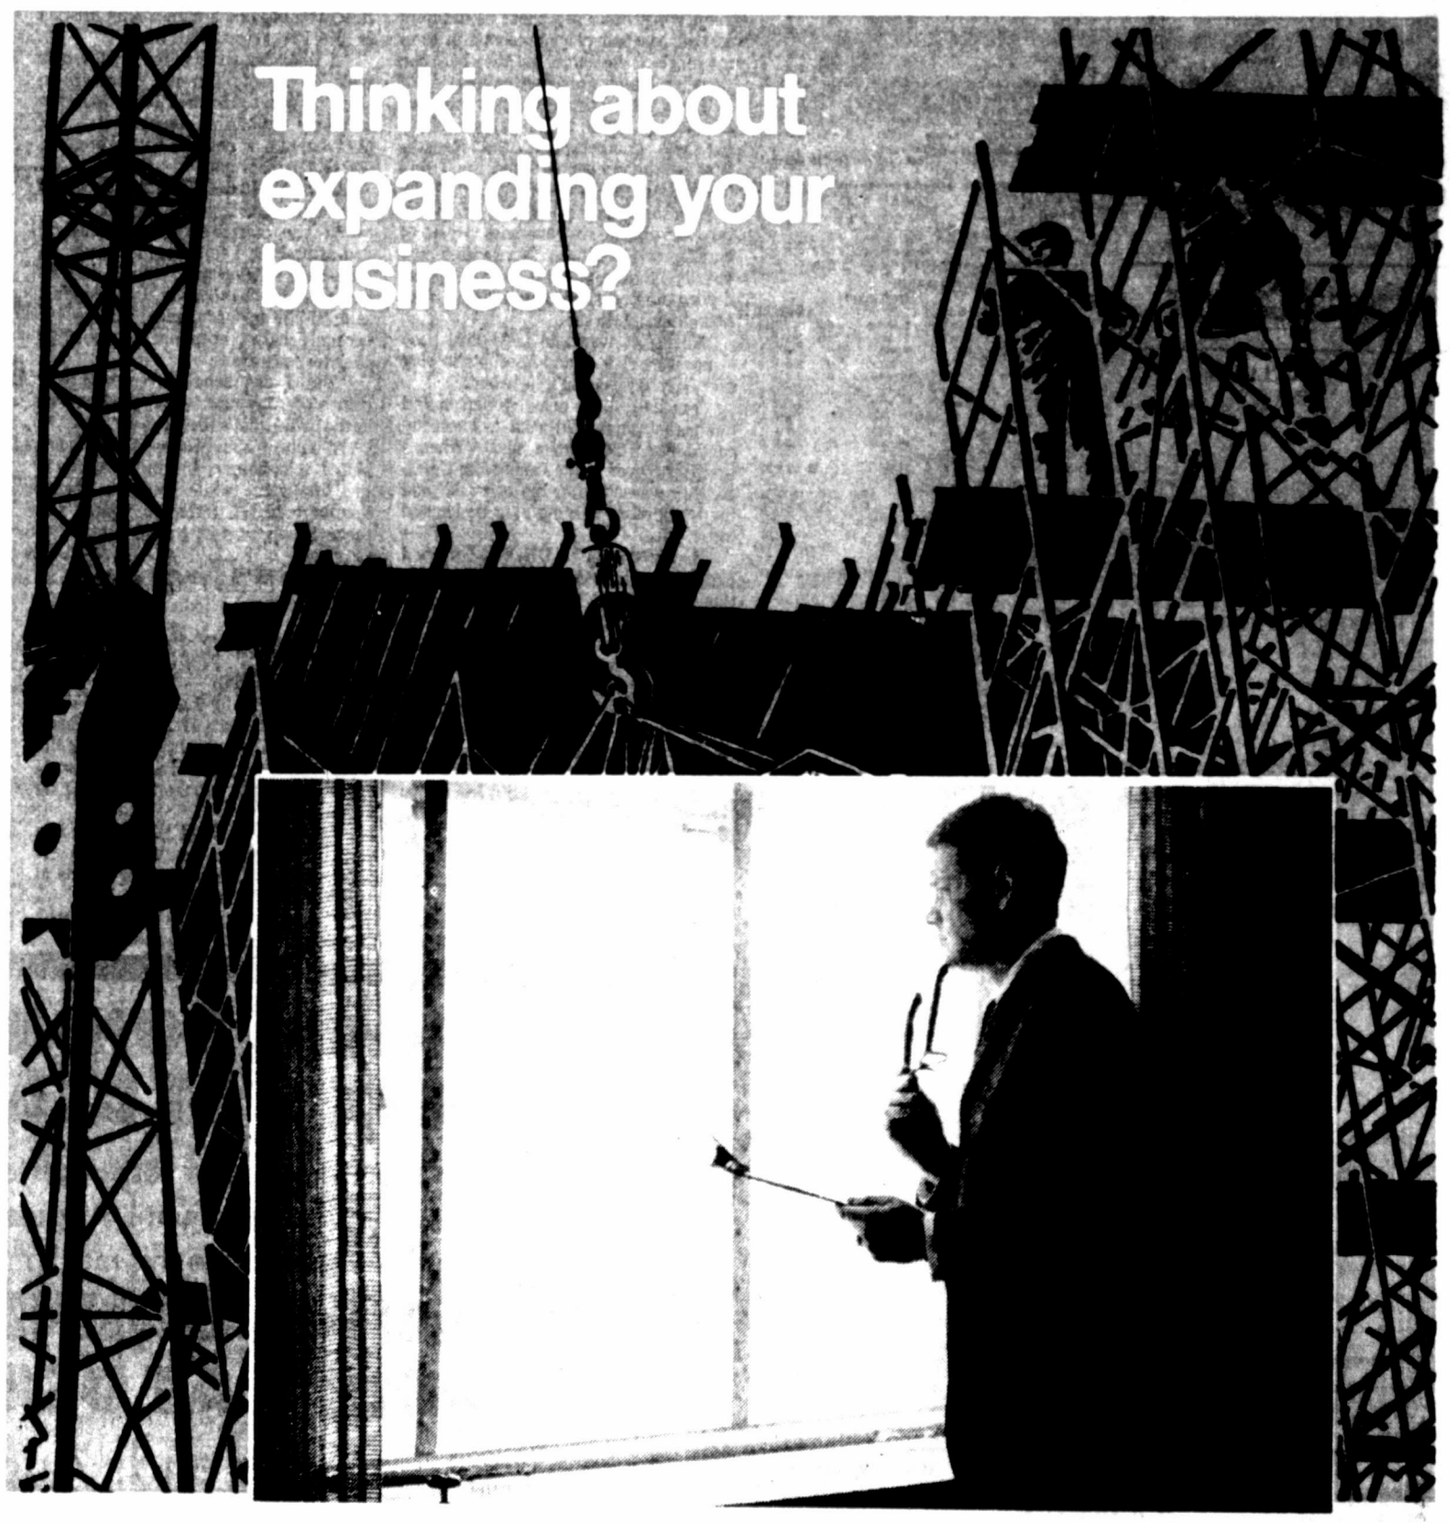

Cowboy coach Tom Landry said of Dorsett, the breakaway back who averaged more than 1,000 yards in each of his first two professional seasons, "This would hurt anybody. He's worked hard, but he hasn't played much at all."

A hyper-extended knee kept the former Heisman Trophy winner from Pittsburgh out of last Saturday's National Football League exhibition game against Denver.

The injury came to light during Tuesday's practice at the Cowboy training camp here when Dorsett asked trainer Don Cochren if he could have his toe taped.

Dorsett suffered the injury in Canton, Ohio, where the Cowboys played Oakland in the Hall of Fame Game. Two fans gave Dorsett a mirror featuring his likeness, but Dorsett dropped it on his toe when he tried to put the mirror in the overhead baggage rack on the team bus.

"He (Dorsett) hadn't said a word about it," said Landry. "It's possible that he suffered some additional injury to the fracture during the workout."

18th Straight Loss Gets Keough Trip To Bullpen

By The Associated Press

What do you do with a pitcher who is still looking for his first victory this late in the baseball season? Oakland manager Jim Marshall is finally doing something — he's sending Matt Keough to the bullpen.

"This has really become a strain on him," said Marshall. "Maybe he's a little bit afraid of losing now and that only compounds his problems."

Keough's problems include the longest losing streak in major league baseball, which reached 18 Wednesday with an 8-1 loss to the California Angels.

His 0-14 record thus far this season tied Joe Harris' major league record for the worst start by a pitcher. And the tough-luck right-hander now is one short of the American League record for consecutive losses, 19, shared by two pitchers from the early 1900s.

If nothing else, it has made him a philosopher.

"When I look at the thing that happened to Thurman Munson and remember that Lyman Bostock was killed last year, I realize baseball is an important part of a player's life — but not all his life," said Keough.

Early last season, Keough was the top pitcher for the A's, who led the American League West as late as July 5, and he represented them in the All-Star game. A knee injury hampered him later and he finished with an 8-15 record, starting the current losing streak last Sept. 11.

In his last start before Wednesday, Keough pitched a three-hitter but lost 1-0 to Seattle.

"I'm afraid the three-hitter he pitched last week in Seattle was a breaking point," said Marshall of Keough. "The effect on him, not winning the game, seemed to show in this game."

Don Baylor was one of Keough's biggest problems Wednesday, pacing a 21-hit attack with four hits and three runs batted in. Baylor raised his RBI total to 101.

Indians 6-8, Red Sox 4-2

Bobby Bonds and Toby Harrah smashed three hits apiece to help Cleveland beat Boston in their afternoon game. Rick Wise allowed 11 hits but picked up his ninth victory in the last 10 decisions with four innings of relief help from Sid Monge.

Dan Spillner, normally a relief pitcher, hurled a six-hitter for his first complete game in four seasons as Cleveland won the night game. Spillner, making only his third American League start, was in command all the way for his first complete-game victory since 1975, when he was with San Diego.

Brewers 8, Orioles 4

Gorman Thomas snapped a ninth-inning tie with a sacrifice fly and Sixto Lezcano added a two-run double as Milwaukee defeated Baltimore, handing the Orioles their fourth straight loss.

The Brewers, who have beaten Baltimore twice after losing seven straight to the Orioles, took a 4-3 lead in the eighth on Ben Oglivie's 21st homer. The Orioles tied it in the bottom of the inning on Ken Singleton's 29th homer before the Brewers came back to score four runs in the ninth.

Yankees 4, White Sox 3

Chris Chambliss' three-run, eighth-inning homer capped a four-run rally that led Luis Tiant and New York past Chicago. Detroit's Steve Trout had given up only five hits through seven innings, but Willie Randolph and Bobby Murcer opened the Yankee eighth with singles. They moved up on a wild pitch and Lou Piniella singled Randolph home before Chambliss slammed his 14th homer one out later.

Tiant allowed only four hits, all of them in the fourth inning, before needing relief help from Ron Davis in the ninth.

"It was a slider," Chambliss said of the home run pitch from Trout. "He really came in to me with that pitch."

Twins 3, Mariners 1

HAPPY REUNION — Texas Ranger Eric Soderholm, center, gets congratulations from teammates Mike Jorgensen (35) and Richie Zisk, right, as he reaches home plate after hitting a 3-run homer in the fifth inning of Wednesday's first game at Detroit. That helped Texas win the game 16-9, but the host Tigers came back to take the second contest 10-4. (AP Laserphoto)

Rangers Split With Detroit

DETROIT (AP) — Texas infielder Eric Soderholm and Detroit utilityman John Wockenfuss are about as different as two baseball players can be in their approach to the game, but they both can carry a ball club when they're hot.

Each got a chance to show his stuff Wednesday night as the teams split a twi-night doubleheader, the Rangers winning the opener 16-9 and the Tigers taking the nightcap 10-4.

Soderholm dominated the Texas victory, driving in six runs with a pair of homers and a single. Wockenfuss was equally as awesome in the second game, driving in five runs with a grand slam homer and a solo shot.

Soderholm wants to play third base — no place else — and he wants to play every day. If he doesn't, he broods.

"I'm basically a negative person and this game tonight did a lot to boost my confidence," Soderholm said. "When I first came over in the trade from Chicago, they weren't using me every day and they wanted to use me as a designated hitter.

"I didn't want to DH, but I knew I had to play, so I did. I felt all the time, though, that if I had a chance to play third, I'd produce. I've been playing third lately, and I think I'm proving my point."

Wockenfuss, on the other hand, has never been a regular, but has been one of the Tigers' most valuable players all season, playing outfield, first base and catching.

"I just trust that the Lord has a plan for me and if that plan is to be the Tigers' utility man, then I'm going to go for it and be the best one I can be," said Wockenfuss, who has hit 13 homers playing part time to Soderholm's eight.

They use different means for getting ready to play and for coping with life in the big leagues, too. Soderholm goes into hypnosis twice a week while Wockenfuss, who became a born-again Christian in 1976, sticks close to his Bible.

"I think hypnosis is one of the best tools an athlete can use," Soderholm said. "It won't make a superstar out of a mediocre athlete, of course. But it will put you into a positive frame of mind and that's important."

"If you compare my record before and after 1976, I think you'll see what a difference religion has made in my career as a baseball player," Wockenfuss said. "I still take my lumps, and my life certainly hasn't been one big bowl of cherries since then.

"But I can handle everything that comes my way now — the good as well as the bad — that's the big thing."

Al Oliver and Mickey Rivers each belted solo homers for the Rangers in the first game while Detroit's Champ Summers had a three-run homer and Steve Kemp cracked a solo shot.

Dixie Beaten In State Meet

WACO (Special) — Wharton's Ricky Garza allowed the Lubbock Dixie all-stars only three hits Wednesday in leading his team to an 11-0 victory in the state Little League Baseball Tournament. The loss eliminated the Dixie team.

Wharton rapped out 11 hits, including a pair of doubles, in the victory. It scores in every inning, getting 3 runs in the third and fifth innings.

The loss was charged to Brent Rice. Garzy struck out ten batters.

Brock Nears Another Plateau

By HAL BOCK
Associated Press Sports Writer

Plateaus.

Baseball thrives on the lines in its record book — lines that denote special achievement. Call them plateaus.

Babe Ruth hit 60 home runs in one season and 714 in his career and those plateaus made him a national hero. Then Roger Maris hit 61 in one year and Hank Aaron hit 755 for his lifetime and the record book added two new lines.

Joe DiMaggio once hit safely in 56 consecutive games and when Pete Rose made a run at that record with 44 straight last season, the whole world of baseball stopped and watched.

The statistical measures are there, established as targets. For a pitcher, 300 victories is a nice round number, especially since only 14 have managed it and none since Early Wynn in 1963.

Next to knock on the door of that exclusive club will be gritty Gaylord Perry of the San Diego Padres, who at age 40 now has 277 wins to his credit. Twenty-three more wins might seem like a lot at his age but don't bet against the gentleman farmer from North Carolina. Last month, remember, he moved into second place on the alltime strikeout list, now trailing only the immortal Walter Johnson.

The man conceded to have the best shot at Johnson's awesome record of 3,508 strikeouts is flame-throwing Nolan Ryan of the California Angels. Ryan at age 32 has 2,854 — 652 away. Three more 200-strikeout years would put him right there.

Cincinnati's Tom Seaver is also within striking distance with 2,841, but he'll be 35 in November and probably will fall short.

Perry went into 1979 with just over 3,000 strikeouts and that impressive number is the same figure used to measure the game's most productive batters.

Three thousand hits. Roll those words over slowly. That barrier has been reached only 13 times in baseball history but it is about to be cracked twice more in the next few weeks.

First over the threshold should be Lou Brock of the St. Louis Cardinals, who goes into tonight's game against the New York Mets just eight hits away. Next will be Carl Yastrzemski, who is some two dozen hits short of the goal right now.

The Cards return home for a 14-game homestand Friday and it will be a nice touch for Brock to reach 3,000 in Busch Stadium. The only other Cardinal with 3,000 is Hall of Famer Stan Musial, who hit the magic number one summer's afternoon in Chicago, where some of its impact was wasted.

Brock has been rather serene about the milestone. "I don't care where I get it. . .New York, St. Louis, Jupiter or Mars," he said. "I'm just happy about the kind of year I'm having."

Brock went into 1979 just 100 hits short of the 3,000-hit mark but there were serious doubts that he'd make it, especially after he'd batted only .221 with 66 hits last year.

At age 40, his bat seemed an instant slower, his reflexes a bit duller. The calender, it seemed, at last had caught the St. Louis swifty, major league baseball's modern stolen base king.

Then Brock put enormous pressure on himself when he announced last spring that, no matter what happened, this would be his final season.

That meant he'd need the 100 hits this year or he'd miss 3,000. And he went about getting them, methodically, seizing every opportunity.

"That's the best thing about this season — the satisfaction of knowing that I'm not just hanging on, that I'm having a productive year," he said. "That's a tremendous feeling of satisfaction."

Years from now, fans will probably remember Lou Brock as the man who stole more bases in a single season (118 in 1974) and more bases in a career (926 so far) than any man in history.

The 3,000th hit, when it comes, will be a singular, isolated moment and while it will be a magic accomplishment, that hit in and of itself won't be a proper measure of the man. Remember, when he gets it, that he needed 2,999 other ones to reach that particular plateau.

WAITING — Pete Rose uses the end of the bat for a scratcher in giving his nose a rub while waiting his turn at bat in the Philadelphia Phillies game with Montreal. Rose helped Philadelphia nip the Expos 4-3 and keep them behind Pittsburgh in the National League East. (AP Laserphoto)

Richard Continues To Whip LA

By The Associated Press

The question puzzled Houston's J.R. Richard as much as he had puzzled Los Angeles batters: "Can you name a reason why you've beaten the Dodgers 10 times in a row?"

"If I knew what I was doing to beat LA, I'd use it to beat other clubs," he replied. "I wouldn't have 11 losses."

One explanation was pure power pitching, which was what Richard used to beat the Dodgers 4-1 Wednesday night. He allowed just six hits, struck out 12 to improve his major league-leading total to 209, and walked just two while squaring his record at 11-11.

"I've had a great deal of luck against the Dodgers," added the 6-foot-8 right-hander, who hasn't lost to Los Angeles since June 23, 1976, and extended his overall winning streak to four games.

"I had a lot of tough breaks early in the season, and I also was pitching erratically," said Richard. "When I pitched well, I didn't get the support."

In five of his losses, the Astros managed one run, and in three others, Houston scored twice. Richard made sure that wouldn't happen Wednesday night, cracking a two-run single in the three-run fifth that capped the scoring and raised his batting average to .141.

"I take pride in my pitching and my hitting," said Richard, who certainly can be proud of his last 10 decisions over Los Angeles.

In his 10-game streak against Los Angeles, Richard has started 13 times, recording three shutouts, surrendering just 21 earned runs in 111 innings for a 1.70 ERA, and has beaten Burt Hooton five times.

"One reason he's so effective against us is that we are predominantly a right-handed hitting lineup," said Los Angeles second baseman Dave Lopes, who went 0-for-3. "He has good stuff — good as anybody in the league — and I'm sure he gets a little more motivated each time he faces us."

"He has the nastiest slider in the league," said third baseman Ron Cey, 1-for-4 including a run-scoring double in the first inning.

"He's just wild enough that you don't dig in on him," said Bill Russell (0-for-3). "You sure don't want to get hit by him."

The Astros, who have won seven of their last eight games, went ahead 1-0 on Terry Puhl's homer — only the 40th of the season for Houston, as compared to the 130 hit by Los Angeles.

Cey's double tied it in the bottom of the inning, but the Astros put the game away when Enos Cabell reached on an error by Russell at short, Jeff Leonard hit an infield single and Alan Ashby was walked intentionally to load the bases before Richard lined his single and Craig Reynolds hit another.

Pirates 5, Cubs 2

Phil Garner's three-run homer off Dick Tidrow in the 10th inning carried the Pirates past the Cubs for their sixth triumph in seven games. A fifth-inning homer by Bill Madlock and a seventh-inning shot by John Milner had given the Pirates a 2-1 lead, but Chicago tied it against Kent Tekulve in the ninth when Barry Foote's single scored Jerry Martin from second.

Reds 3, Braves 1

Bill Bonham, relegated to the Cincinnati bullpen in recent weeks, needed just 101 pitches to hurl a two-hitter and help the Reds beat the Braves.

One of those hits was an RBI double by Barry Bonnell in the Atlanta fifth, but Cincinnati went ahead in the sixth on a two-run homer by Dave Concepcion and got insurance on Cesar Geronimo's homer in the seventh.

Cardinals 8, Mets 4

Pete Vuckovich pitched a complete game, thanks to Ken Reitz' three-run homer in the St. Louis second inning. Reitz' homer brought St. Louis within 4-3 and removed the possibility that Manager Ken Boyer would pinch-hit for Vuckovich when his pitcher's turn came to bat.

Vuckovich, 11-8, went on to retire 14 of the last 16 batters he faced.

Lou Brock, eight hits short of 3,000, did not play.

Phillies 4, Expos 3

Montreal first baseman Tony Perez fumbled a bases-loaded grounder by Bake McBride with two out in the ninth inning, allowing Larry Bowa to score the run that carried the Phillies past the Expos.

Bowa beat out a bunt to open the inning and stole second before Pete Rose walked. One out later Mike Schmidt was walked intentionally to load the bases for McBride.

Schmidt hit his major league-leading 39th homer of the season in the third inning to tie the game 2-2.

Giants 10, Padres 7

Left-hander John Curtis knocked in three runs with a pair of singles and Mike Ivie added two home runs for San Francisco, which built an 8-0 lead, then survived a late San Diego rally.

home on Limon's fielder's choice.

Mark Bounds and losing pitcher Sam Whittington had the only hits for Pasadena.

In the tournament opener, Brandon scored all 3 runs in the second inning, while San Antonio managed a lone run in the fourth.

San Antonio put two runners on base in the fifth inning, but Brinson came in to relieve Rase, thus halting the San Antonio rally.

San Antonio had a chance to score in both in the fourth and sixth inningsbut had baserunners thrown out at home each time.

Brinson recorded the win, while David Glazener, who allowed six hits, took the loss. Mark Tiemann and Ernie Donini each had two hits to lead Brandon in hitting.

Spartacade Bolsters NBC's Olympics Optimism

By FRED ROTHENBERG
Associated Press Sports Writer

Don Ohlmeyer was relaxed. He leaned back in his soft chair and spread his legs across a coffee table. Then he smiled — not the typical Ohlmeyer smile that oozes charm and self-assurance. This one spelled relief.

"What I saw in Moscow made me feel great," said Ohlmeyer, executive producer of NBC Sports. "The last week was the first time I've really been confident that this little sucker would fly."

Ohlmeyer's "little sucker" is NBC's $87-million gamble on the 1980 Summer Olympic Games next July from Moscow — the largest production in television history and the first-ever continuous programming from behind the Iron Curtain.

"Two years ago, we were a lot further away than two years," said Ohlmeyer. "Now we're no more than a year away."

Ohlmeyer and several other NBC officials were invited to Moscow last month to watch and evaluate the Soviet's pre-Olympic sports festival, Spartacade. There was some lingering resentment from some Soviet officials because NBC did not buy the TV rights to Spartacade.

"They told us innumerable times that they were disappointed," Ohlmeyer said. "The management types let their displeasure be known, but the operational level guys were great."

NBC officials were particularly impressed with the Soviets' interest in improving their television techniques and operation.

"This was the first time since 1968 that the host broadcaster has asked for assistance," said Geoff Mason, vice president of NBC Sports' European production who, like Ohlmeyer, was hired away from ABC, the Olympic-experienced network. "The Germans (1972) didn't do it and the Canadians (1976) wouldn't hear of it."

Ohlmeyer said he was sitting in front of a monitor with some Soviet broadcast personnel watching the javelin competition at Spartacade. "I told them that the shot of the javelin was too tight. You couldn't get a perspective on distance. The next thing I knew the guy was buzzing away into a phone, and bango — the next javelin throw had a perfect frame."

Mason said he conducted a seminar in January 1978 for Soviet television editors and cameramen. "They're fascinated by the way we televise football," Mason said. "They're in absolute awe of our isolation (isolated camera) concepts. They're very attuned to learning. Basically, they have the same attitude we have.

"When we first saw their coverage, we were concerned. But I think they've improved 200 percent in the last year. I think the Russians can now cover a sports event as well as any non-American broadcaster. Of course, the Americans are still light years ahead of everybody."

Ohlmeyer said the Soviets are copying many American innovations. "Several years ago, you would never see a tight shot of a face," he said of the technique that ABC promoted at the 1976 Olympics and billed as "up-close and personal."

One shot he remembers from Spartacade had a circle around an excited wrestling coach inset into the action of the match. (Technically, Ohlmeyer calls this a 'circle wipe'.)

"The Soviet picture is fantastic," Ohlmeyer said. "They're as good as our pictures. And their audio is better than ours; they're more concerned about that than we are. They put more effort into where their microphones are planted. One gymnast was on the rings and you could actually hear the squeaking of the rings."

Ohlmeyer said, however, the Soviets' use of graphics (the explanatory descriptions and charts that supplement the picture) were "stone age. And they don't edit like we do. They do mostly live TV."

Because of the seven-hour time difference, most of NBC's 152 hours of coverage will be taped. With 660 personnel and 45 cameras of its own, NBC expects to operate independently, as much as possible, of the Soviets' world picture feed.

"We have our own cameras, tape machines tape editors, engineers and our own studio," Ohlmeyer said. "If we have problems, I'll turn to our engineers, not the Soviets'."

But Ohlmeyers won't have the old NBC Commissary, and that's his major concern.

"With so much at stake, I don't want our people wasting their time complaining about the food," he said. "Their sit-down meals are OK. The problem will be getting food on the run. You won't see any golden arches over there."

Feller Knows Flying Feeling

By MILTON RICHMAN

He should be, considering he has been doing it now for the past 30 years and has logged nearly 6,000 hours as pilot in command.

Feller, the former fireballer for the Cleveland Indians, was in a taxi on his way to the ballpark in Nashville, Tenn., when he heard of Thurman Munson's death on the cab radio. At first, he didn't quite understand the Yankee catcher was flying a jet when he was killed.

"I heard later that he wasn't even flying a year and a half and it surprised me that he'd be handling a jet with that kind of limited experience," Feller said this past weekend in Cooperstown, where he and a group of other Hall of Famers were on hand for Willie Mays' induction into the baseball shrine.

He began flying in March of 1978 and was licensed two months later. He received his instrument rating this past winter and got his rating to fly the twin jet Cessna Citation he was killed in shortly before taking possession of the aircraft on July 6.

Munson loved the $1.6 million plane. He loved it so much, he used it to fly back home to Canton, Ohio, as much as three or four times a week after ball games. He'd fly it to a city like Milwaukee and pilot it back home after a ball game there, too.

"Thurman, you're nuts," some of the other Yankees would tell him. "How long do you think you can keep beating the odds? You're gonna crack up some day."

He would only laugh at such talk and derived so much pleasure over flying back home in the plane as often as he could that he didn't even bother to maintain a residence in either New York or nearby New Jersey this year. On those few occasions he didn't go back home after a ball game at Yankee Stadium, he'd sleep on a sofa over at Catfish Hunter's house.

Feller is familiar with the type jet Munson was flying when he crashed at the approach to the Akron-Canton Regional Airport last week.

"It isn't that difficult a plane to fly for a pilot with limited experience providing everything goes right," he observed. "But when you have the flaps and gear down coming in for a landing, and if you lose power on one engine, it can be very critical for anyone with even great experience. Even the most experienced pilots might not have had time to do much more than Munson did."

Feller, who is director of sales-sports for the Hilton Hotels, has made three belly landings since he has been flying, two of them in Chicago and one in Fort Clinton, Ohio, between Cleveland and Toledo.

"All of those landings were a little scary," he said. "You come in with the landing gear up and the main thing you hope is that there is no fuel spill which can possibly cause an explosion. It only takes a moment or two before the fire hits the engine."

Feller, who knew Munson before he ever joined the Yankees, claims flying a private plane is getting more and more complicated, due partly to the tremendous increase in air traffic.

"If anyone says it's as easy as driving a car, or safer, that's a lie," said the 60-yearold Feller, who has never been timid about expressing himself. "It may be safer, but it's not as easy. For the most part, flying is a boring deal, but every so often you can have 30 seconds of panic."

Feller had his closest call flying from Newcastle, Ind., to Cincinnati once.

"It was at night and it was during the winter," he said. "I was all alone and I got caught in a thick fog, a low which hadn't been predicted. To make things worse, the aircraft didn't have the proper instruments.

"I Began to do a couple of graveyard spirals about 50 feet above the ground, but I pulled it out and I was lucky to get back to Newcastle in one piece. The whole thing was my own fault. I was in a hurry. I didn't check the instruments."

PART OF THE GAME — Tampa Bay's John Grnja (23) takes a foot up the side of the face as he gets in the way of New York Cosmos Carlos Alberto's kick. Action came in the North American Soccer League game at East Rutherford, N.J., Wednesday night. But, taking it as part of the game, Grnja continued to play. The Cosmos won the game 4-3. New Owner Reaffirms Stand: Orioles To Stay In Baltimore

BALTIMORE (AP) — Washington attorney Edward Bennett Williams has lashed out at published reports that he intends to move the Baltimore Orioles to Washington.

Following a meeting Wednesday night with Orioles board chairman Jerold Hoffberger, Williams repeated his earlier stand that he'll keep the American League club here as long as the fans support it.

Williams, who purchased the team for $12 million last week, will take over ownership of the club on Nov. 1 if American League club owners and Oriole stockholders approve.

He met with Hoffberger before the Orioles suffered an 8-4 loss at the hands of the Milwaukee Brewers.

Williams called reports in the Wednesday editions of the Washington Post and Baltimore News American that he was planning to play several series in Washington next year and eventually move the entire home schedule to RFK Stadium "the nadir of irresponsible journalism."

"It is totally and absolutely without foundation," Williams said. "In my estimation, it is bush league journalism to refer to informed sources and print my denial down below. When I saw the story, I went slack-jawed.

"There are a lot of people in Baltimore who are very uneasy because somebody from Washington bought the team," he said. "I said I would keep the team in Baltimore as long as the city supports it, but there seems to be some grave incredulity about this. They shouldn't feel that way because I meant what I said.

"I think Baltimore fans are supporting the Orioles magnificently," he added.

Hoffberger said he and Williams "talked hard" during the meeting but would not say what was discussed.

"Whatever was said will be divulged in due time," he said. "We're dealing with people's lives, their careers and relationships with communities."

"This is serious stuff, and you just don't do it in 90 minutes," Hoffberger said. "We talked hard. There were no fun and games."

The Washington Post had quoted sources close to Williams as saying that he firmly believes Washington is ready to support major league baseball and wants very much to move the team to the nation's capital.

It was learned by the Post that Williams, also president of the National Football League's Washington Redskins, would like to have the Orioles play series against the Boston Red Sox and the New York Yankees at RFK next year.

The News American reported that Williams is convinced a split schedule between the two cities will not work.

Williams plans to meet again soon with Hoffberger and also with Oriole general manager Hank Peters.

Judge Delays 'Rudy T' Trial

HOUSTON (AP) — The wheels of justice slowed for a doctor's appointment Wednesday in Rudy Tomjanovich's damage suit against the Los Angeles Lakers.

U.S. District Judge John V. Singleton suspended the trial until today so he could honor his doctor's appointment.

Tomjanovich and the Houston Rockets filed the suit against California Sports Inc., owner of the Lakers, asking for at least $1 million for injuries Tomjanovich received when hit during a 1977 game by Kermit Washington, then a member of the California club.

The Rockets are suing for an additional $1.4 million for the loss of their star forward, captain and once higher scorer during most of the 1977-78 season.

The film, in both black and white and color, both slow and normal motion, showed Washington landing a swinging right on Tomjanovich, who appeared to be trotting toward a scuffle involving Washington and Rocket center Kevin Kunnert.

Alzado Hedges On Boxing Career

DENVER (AP) — Denver Bronco defensive lineman Lyle Alzado, who turned in his playbook and announced to a team publicist he was quitting football to pursue a professional boxing career, may be having second thoughts about that decision.

Broncos' general manager Fred Gehrke said he spoke by telephone with Alzado Wednesday, several hours after the announced retirement, and that Alzado indicated he hadn't made up his mind.

Alzado was contacted by a Denver television station as he prepared to depart on a flight to Madison, Wis., to meet his agent. Asked about his career aims, he responded, "I don't know, I just don't know." He said he felt the odds of his staying with the Broncos or going into boxing were about equal.

The 6-foot-3, 243-pound All-Pro, a feared pass rusher from tiny Yankton College in South Dakota, contacted the Broncos' public relations office early Wednesday afternoon, shortly after a morning workout, and said he was retiring from football. Neither Gehrke nor coach Red Miller was directly informed of his decision.

"Lyle came to me, shook my hand and said he was leaving," said Jim Saccomano, the team's assistant director of public relations. "I said, 'What do you mean?' He said he was quitting football to go into boxing, and said he was going to catch a flight to New York.

"I asked Fred (Gehrke) about it several minutes later, and he didn't know anything. And Lyle apparently didn't speak to Red (Miller) either. He turned in his playbook to the coach's secretary, and when she asked if he wanted to talk to the coach, he said, 'No'."

Gehrke said he had turned down a request by Alzado's agent on Tuesday to renegotiate the player's contract. Gehrke indicated the agent, Greg Campbell, suggested some inflated contract figures and insisted Alzado could make that kind of money in boxing.

Alzado, 30, compiled a 44-1 record as an amateur boxer before turning to football, and he fought former heavyweight champion Muhammad Ali in an exhibition match last month at Mile High Stadium. Ali said Alzado has "the potential to be a world champ in the next two years if he continues to improve."

Campbell, contacted in Madison, said he has offered Alzado a bout in October against a top-ranked heavyweight, reportedly Leon Spinks, with a shot at the World Boxing Association crown if he wins.

"We're not bluffing," Campbell said. "Unless this is settled with the Broncos in a very short time, we're going to New York to sign a contract for Alzado to box."

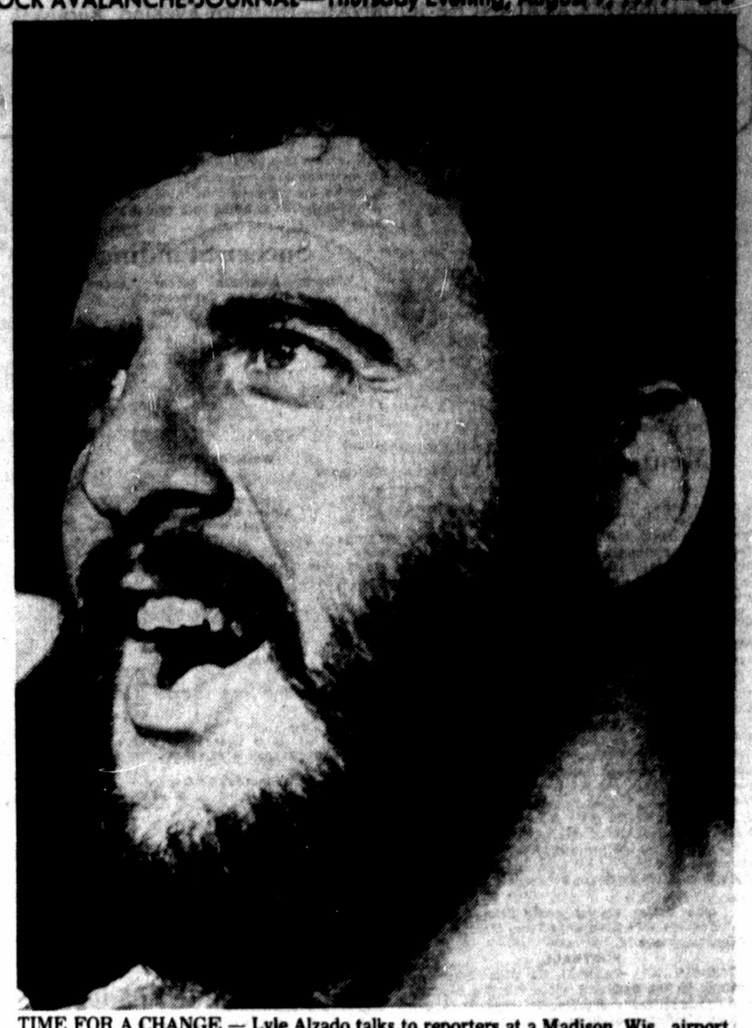

Gehrke, in flatly refusing to rewrite Alzado's contract, said Alzado "is signed for two more years, and I'm not about to give away the football team to one ballplayer."

Gehrke said Miller was "boiling mad" and that many players on the team were upset by Alzado's action. "A lot of damage has been done," Gehrke said. "I don't think Lyle realizes how serious this is."

Most of the players said they assumed Alzado's retirement from football was for real, and said they wished Alzado well.

"You hate to see a player of his calibre go," said defensive end Barney Chavous. "We'll miss him, he's a good ballplayer. But he's a grown man. I feel he knows what he's doing."

Brison Manor, who stands to inherit Alzado's starting spot in the lineup, said all the players were "really surprised" by the announcement. He added, "I hate to get a starting position this way."

TIME FOR A CHANGE — Lyle Alzado talks to reporters at a Madison, Wis., airport Wednesday in announcing that he is giving up his career as anall-pro defensive end with the Denver Broncos to turn to professional boxing. (AP Laserphoto)

Ailing Evert Continues To Win

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — A tired Chris Evert Lloyd, still weakened by the flu, is praying the steamy weather will cool down a bit before tonight's quarterfinals in the U.S. Clay Court tennis tournament.

Mrs. Lloyd, a four-time winner and seeded No. 1, survived her third-round match in 90-plus degree heat on Tuesday, but she was forced to go to three sets for just the second time in 23 matches here since 1972.

"I feel a little better than I did last night," she said after the 4-6, 6-1, 6-2 victory over Czechoslovakia's Renata Tomanova. "The virus is still hitting me. It's just going to take a couple days. In the meantime, I'm still in the tourney and if I lose, I lose."

The 24-year-old Mrs. Lloyd has won 46 of 48 sets in the U.S. Clay Court tourney. She won the singles championship in 1972-75 but bypassed the tourney the past three years to play on the now-defunct World Team Tennis circuit.

"The first set I felt tired and she was just moving me around the court," Mrs. Lloyd said of her match with Tomanova.

"I just hung in there and got the ball back. I didn't do anything specific. In the second set, I thought if she moved me around the way she did in first set she would win. That's what takes the steam out of me and makes me tired. I felt better in the second and third sets, which I don't understand."

Mrs. Lloyd's second-round victory Tuesday night over Wendy White also was a struggle. She won the first set 6-2 but was taken to 7-5 in the second set.

"That was the closest I've ever come to defaulting," Chrissie said. "If she had won the second set, I probably would have quit the match."

Mrs. Lloyd will play Yugoslavia's Mima Jausovec tonight in the feature match on the 10,000-seat stadium court at the new Indianapolis Sports Center. Miss Jausovec, who has lost all six previous times she has played Chrissie,advanced with a 6-1, 6-2 victory over Sherry Acker.

TAKE THAT — After missing a shot, top-seeded Jimmy Connors grimaces as his tennis racquet hits him in the face during the second round of the U.S. Open Clay Courts championships at Indianapolis Wednesday. Connors was in the process of throwing his racquet in the air in disgust but misjudged his throw. Connors regained his composure and went on to defeat Czechoslovakia's Pavel Slozil 6-3, 6-2. Mentioned Briefly

TENNIS

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Chris Evert Lloyd, four-time winner of the U.S. Clay Court tennis championships, was taken to three sets for just the second time in 23 matches but still advanced to the quarterfinals. Mrs. Lloyd, seeded No. 1, beat Czechoslovakia's Renata Tomanovathan 4-6, 6-1, 6-2. In men's action, top-seeded Jimmy Connors, the defending champion, handled Czechoslovakia's Pavel Slozil 6-3, 6-2. Elsewhere, Balazs Taroczy stopped Warren Maher of Australia 6-2, 6-4; John McEnroe, seeded second, wore down India's Ramesh Krishnan 6-4, 6-1; Argentina's Guillermo Vilas, seeded third, stopped Van Winitsky 7-5, 6-3; fifth-seeded Jose-Luis Clerc of Argentina topped Nick Saviano 6-3, 7-5; ninth-seeded Eliot Teltscher beat Australia's Kim Warwick 6-2, 6-4; Poland's Wojtek Fibak beat John Lloyd, Chris's husband, 6-4, 6-4; 11th-seeded Corrado Barazzuth of Italy was a 6-3, 6-0 winner over Czechoslovakia's Jiri Hrebec; eighth-seeded Manuel Orantes of Spain topped Mike Grant 6-2, 6-3, and Andres Gomez of Ecuador beat Chris Lewis 6-3, 6-2.

DUBLIN, Ohio (AP) — Vijay Amritraj overcame cramps and 90-degree heat to outlast Rick Fagel 5-7, 6-2, 7-6 in a $75,000 Grand Prix tennis tournament.

In other action, second seeded Brian Gottfried ousted John Yuill 6-2, 6-0 while Terry Moore defeated George Amaya 7-5, 7-5.

FOOTBALL

DENVER (AP) — Lyle Alzado, all-pro defensive lineman for the Denver Broncos, told the Broncos that he has retired from professional football to pursue a professional boxing career, the National Football League team said. Alzado, 30, fought former heavyweight champion Muhammad Ali in a an exhibition match last month at Mile High Stadium in Denver. Alzado, 6-foot-3 and 243 pounds, had compiled a 44-1 record as an amateur boxer before turning to pro football.

TRACK

VIAREGGIO, Italy (AP) — England's Sebastian Coe, world record holder in the mile and 800 meter events, won the 800 meters at an international track and field meet, beating James Robinson in 1:45.4. Emmit King won the 100-meter dash in 10.36, with Clancy Edwards second in 10.42. Italy's Pietro Mennea took the 200-meter event in 20.28. Edwards again finishing second in 20.79. Mike Tully took the pole vault with a jump of 17 feet, ¾ inches.

GENERAL

SARATOGA SPRINGS, N.Y. (AP) — A record was set at the 59th annual Fasig-Tipton Yearling Sale when a filly by Nijinsky II was sold to Henryk de Kwiatkowski of New York for $500,000. That easily broke the old record for fillies of $275,000, set jointly last year by a filly by Secretariat and another by Sir Ivor.

Huskers, Missouri Get Big 8 Offensive Edge

When you consider the yards gained per game in '78 and the number of offense starters returning this year, Nebraska and Missouri appear ripe in the Big 8.

TIAA Coaches Pick Tarleton

Tarleton State wound up as the fourth best NAIA team in the nation a year ago. And since 12 of last year's starters will return this year, there is little wonder that the coaches in the Texas Intercollegiate Athletic Association pointed their fingers of favoritism at TSU again.

In a poll of TIAA coaches and sports information directors, Tarleton State was a near-unanimous choice for the league championship.

The Texans, who finished the year with an 8-1-1 record, received 25 of the possible 30 points, including five of six first-place ballots. McMurry College and Trinity were picked to share second, getting 19 points each. Austin College was tabbed with 13 points, and Sul Ross State drew 9 points./

Lubbock Christian College, opening football this year and ineligible for the league championship, was last in the poll.

Cavaliers Interested In Celts' McAdoo

CLEVELAND (AP) — The Cleveland Cavaliers say they are trying to acquire high-scoring forward Bob McAdoo from the Boston Celtics, but not at the price of a first-round draft choice.

Jimmy Rodgers, player personnel director for Cleveland, confirmed Wednesday that the NBA team has held preliminary talks with the Celtics about a possible trade for the 6-foot-10 McAdoo.

Colts' Boss Hints Move To Jacksonville

JACKSONVILLE, Fla. (AP) — Baltimore Colts owner Robert Irsay is thinking about moving his National Football League team to Jacksonville, the Florida Times-Union said today.

Irsay told the newspaper he was interested in moving the Colts to Jacksonville's 72,000-seat Gator Bowl if the city provided certain facilities and services he said were necessary for an NFL team.

City officials also expressed interest, the Times-Union reported.

"I'm very serious," Irsay said. "I'd say it's a good possibility of moving to Jacksonville, based on what I've been told the city can produce.

"Jacksonville is one of several cities I'm looking at. I love Florida. In fact, I have a home at Bal Harbour," a city north of Miami Beach.

The Colts owner has talked to officials of the Los Angeles Coliseum about moving his club to that stadium when the Rams move south to Anaheim after the 1980 season. Irsay said he also was interested in Indianapolis, Phoenix, Ariz., and Memphis, Tenn.

Jacksonville mayor Jake Godbold said he is "primed and ready" to go to Baltimore and try to bring home the Colts.

"I'm prepared to do whatever it takes — as long as it's feasible and reasonable," Godbold said. "I think we can meet their requests. I'm absolutely sure we could sell out the Gator Bowl for every game. The attendance guarantee would be no problem."

Irsay told the Times-Union he would need a guarantee of 65,000 season tickets sold for 10 years, the use of 40 acres of land near the Gator Bowl for training and office facilities, a percentage of concession and parking revenues and assurance of a profitable radio network.

Godbold said he expects to talk to Irsay by telephone this week and would like to meet him when he visits Washington on other business next week.

Burned Car Investigated

Terry Finnen of 2920 E. Baylor St. said he heard a noise about 1:35 a.m. and looked out his window to see his car, parked next to the house, on fire.

However, the blaze was out before the Lubbock Fire Department could reach the scene. Reports indicate a flammable liquid had been poured over the vehicle.

Two couples living in the 300-block of Spruce Avenue said they arrived home early this morning to find their place had been broken into.

Along with several hundred dollars worth of clothing reported stolen in the break-in, the victims said they were missing a bar of soap and tooth paste.

Randel Juenger, of 2016 37th St. returned home at about 9:40 p.m. Wednesday to find that $830 worth of stereo records stolen from his house.

Lendon Lawrence of Tahoka said his car was parked at Fair Park Coliseum between 9 p.m. and 11 p.m. Wednesday when the vehicle was broken into and $500 in tools stolen.

A 20-year-old Lubbock man found himself in police custody about 7 p.m. Wednesday after he allegedly attempted to walk out of Furr's Family Center at 4426 34th St. with a radio and stereo, totaling about $176, without paying for the merchandise.

Police might not get any leads into the burglary of the Southwest Forest Industries office until Sept. 8, when they question the persons sitting in seats 9 through 16, row 32, section 3 in Jones Stadium during the season football opener for Texas Tech.

Among items stolen from the office, 506 E. 44th, were eight Texas Tech football season tickets for three seats, plus four other tickets for the home opener with the University of Southern California. The tickets were valued at $960.

Also stolen from the office either late Tuesday or early Wednesday was about $150 in cash.

Genral Manager Walter Haas told police that someone broke into an office desk and took the tickets and cash.

The manager of Broadway Pawn Shop, 815 Broadway, told police Wednesday that a man stole a gun from her store. Vera Rosales, 48, said two young black men came into her store Wednesday afternoon.

After she talked with one of the men, they both left and she noticed the .32-caliber revolver, valued at $130, missing. She said the customer she was not talking to must have leaned over the counter, opened the display case and taken the gun from the shelf.

In other activity, a Lubbock home builder told police Wednesday that vandals went into a house under construction at 4618 7th St. and splashed red paint over a shell stone fireplace, causing an estimated $1,500 in damage.

Cecil Jennings, 58, said the house was vandalized between 3:30 and 4 p.m. Aug. 1, when a worker left the house briefly to get a soft drink.

Pioneer Home To Reopen On LCC Campus

A link to the past will be completed Aug. 26 with the reopening of the Arnett House on the Lubbock Christian College campus.

Built in 1915 as a wedding present for Mr. and Mrs. J. Lanham Higginbotham, of the Higginbotham lumber family, the house originally was at 1214 Avenue L in dowtown Lubbock.

It was purchased by Arnett, a pioneer rancher and banker on the South Plains, in 1918 and served as the Arnett residence until his death in June of 1956.

The house, along with 20 acres of land on West 19th Street, was donated by Dr. and Mrs. Sam C. Arnett Jr. and was moved to what is now the LCC campus in time for the college to open its doors in September of 1957.

Since that time, the Arnett House has served as Lubbock Christian College's first Administration building, then as a women's dormitory, and subsequently as the college's psychology-sociology department, counselling center, photography lab and print shop.

In February of 1975 the Lubbock Christian College Board of Trustees gave the house to the LCC Associates to be moved to its third place on campus and restored. In April of 1978 it was moved to its present location between the Associates Home Economics Building and Katie Rogers Dormitory at 22nd Street and Dover Avenue.

Since selecting restoration of the Arnett House as one of its many projects, the LCC Associates have spent some $45,000 on the house. However, many of the original items are still present, including the windows, a bookcase in the front room, sliding heavy wood doors separating the dining room, living room and hallway, built-in china closet with heavy beveled mirror, the butler; pantry and cabinet, the kitchen cabinets, big storage basement, bed in the master bedroom and a gas stove embedded in the fire place in the master bedroom.

Groundbreaking ceremonies for the relocation were conducted Dec. 9, 1977. Those participating included two grandchildren of the elder Sam Arnetts, Mrs. John Flygare and Sam C. Arnett III. Also present were Mrs. Otis (Naydiene) Cannon, chairman of the Arnett House Committee, and Dr. Harvie M. Pruitt, President of Lubbock Christian College.

Mrs. S.C. Arnett III recently donated the first original art work to be hung in the house and it will be featured above the mantel in the living room.

The eight-room, two-story house will serve as home for the LCC Associates. Work on associate projects may take place here. The three upstairs rooms will serve as work rooms. The downstairs area will be available for catering parties and special events.

Since its organization in May of 1958, the associates has raised and contributed more than $1.5 million in support of the college.

The reopening of the Arnett House, set for 2:30-4:30 p.m. Aug. 26, will coincide with Dr. Sam C. Arnett Jr.'s 71st birthday. Dr. Arnett, an internist, is still involved in a limited practice.

Ten days before that, however, the associates will honor Dr. and Mrs. Arnett and their family with a special dinner at the Arnett House.

Tech To Offer Graduate Course To Help Research Development

A new course in sponsored research development will be offered for graduate students this fall at Texas Tech University.

"The course is designed to help students conceive and develop ideas for externally funded research," said Dr. A. J. Gully, interim associate vice president for research and lead instructor of the program. The class is needed, he said, "because when these people are finished with school, many of them will have careers involving the generation of ideas requiring sponsorship."

Most doctoral students in the program eventually will be employed by municipalities, universities, social agencies and private industry in which they will have to sell ideas to prospective sponsors, he said.

"We want to help students obtain a better appreciation of sponsor-researcher relationships so they will be better equipped to sell their proposals," Gully said. Prospective university faculty will learn how to proceed with research services operations and obtain the most help for their research.

The class has been designated as a chemical engineering graduate course, but it is applicable to all university sectors. "The course had to have a departmental affiliation and, since I am the lead instructor, the office of research services decided to use my home department," Gully said. Any doctoral or master's level student from any department of the university is eligible to receive graduate credit for the course.

"Course work of this nature has been offered in several departments before," Gully said, "but nothing specific for the whole university." The class was only recently announced but Gully reported there already has been positive response from most of the colleges on campus. "We will probably have an over-enrollment problem with the course."

Because of the varied background of the students involved, the course will be offered on a pass-fail basis.

Subjects to be covered include preproposal activities such as developing an idea; identifying a funding source and a preliminary proposal; writing a proposal; submitting and reviewing the proposal; activities in the awarding of a grant and post-award activities such as budgets, management, reporting and publication. Individual and group activities directed toward the development of a good proposal by each participant will supplement lectures and discussion.

Assisting Gully in instructing will be Kathy E. Harris, office of research services staff, and Bill E. Schulze, assistant director of research services.

Salesmanship Workshops Planned In Texas Cities

A series of one-day seminars on fundamentals of professional selling, sponsored by the Center for Professional Development at Texas Tech University's College of Business Administration, will be conducted in six Texas cities.

The first opened in Dallas Tuesday, with others scheduled in San Antonio on Aug. 8, Austin on Aug. 9, Houston on Aug. 14, Lubbock on Aug. 15 and El Paso on Aug. 16.

Author of numerous books and articles on salesmanship and marketing, Don Dible of Fairfield, Calif., is seminar leader, said Dr. Mitchell H. Raiborn, center director.

Dible conducts more than 100 seminars and workshops a year throughout the United States. Raiborn said Dible's "lucid, enthusiastic presentation style is designed to inspire and motivate seminar participants to put to immediate use the principles covered in the seminars."

The program for each seminar starts with a determination of the most pressing problems experienced by participants in their day-to-day efforts. During the seminar, material is tailored to address special problems areas. Topics include prospecting, selecting effective presentations, discussion of appointments, overcoming stalls and objections and closing a sale.

Registration fee is $85, which includes instruction and course materials. Registration may be completed in advance or at the door.

Big Spring Plant Announces Closing

BIG SPRING (Special) — The Cabot Corp. will close its Big Spring plant, plant manager Michael Atchetee has announced.

"We have made the announcement at this time to allow employees to find other employment or to consider their retirement," Atchetee said Wednesday. "The schedule is indefinite. We don't know how long it will be until the plant actually closes."

The manager said the carbon black producing plant will remain in operation as a three-unit setup at least through November. A fourth unit, which was closed last month, will remain closed, he said.

"In November, we will begin to phase out those three," he said. "We will carry out inventory and start salvaging materials."

The decision to close the plant was made by corporation president Bob Sharpie in Boston, Mass. Officials were sent to Big Spring to relay the message.

Although 17 Cabot employees have been laid off in the last two weeks, no more layoffs are expected until the final closing, Atchetee said. A total of 94 employees remain on the company payroll.

Cabot has produced carbon black in Big Spring since 1950. At its highest point, the company had an annual payroll of almost $2 million.

"Our Gulf Coast plants have expanded over the past five years and they are lower cost producers," he said. "We are using 1960 technology equipment here that produces a lower yield and a lower profit margin."

Cabot is also the victim of the fuel shortage of recent months, Atchetee said. Among the company's major customers are the tire manufacturors, who are directly affected by the gas crunch.

"With people driving less, auto production and auto sales are down between 25 and 26 percent, and that means tire production also is down," he said. "The American auto companies are getting a lot of competition from the foreign auto makers, and these cars come into the country with tires already on them."

Association Sues To Halt Dam

AUSTIN (AP) — The Lake Travis Improvement Association has filed suit to halt the construction of Stacy Dam on the Colorado River near Ballinger in West Texas.

Austin and the Lower Colorado River Authority have filed similar suits.

The improvement association contends a May 25 order of the Texas Water Commission authorizing construction of the dam was unlawful because commissioner Dorsey Hardeman participated in the deliberations.

BIG BRAINS

Both orcas (killer whales) and dolphins are two mammals that have unusually large brains in proportion to their bodies. Moby Doll, a young Vancouver aquarium killer whale, tipped the scales at slightly more than a ton. His brain weighed 14 pounds. A seven-ton elephant has a brain of only about 12 pounds.

Congratulations to:

Ghosts Inhabit Virginia Homes

RICHMOND, Va. — When is the last time you encountered a ghost ... much less two? For nationally-known travel writer Mary Alice Kellogg, it was during a recent trip to Virginia.

Intrigued by a U.S. Travel Service brochure which ranked the Old Dominion as one of the nation's top "hunting grounds," Miss Kellogg undertook a bit of spirited reporting by bedding down in several of Virginia's ghostly domiciles.

Recounting her eerie odyssey in the May issue of Signature magazine, Miss Kellogg found Halloween a yearlong event at Haw Branch plantation, an Amelia County estate not far from Richmond. Protected by ancient arbors of magnolia, elm and tulip poplar, Haw Branch is the home of W.C. McConnaughey, his wife Gibson, their daughter Sally, and several supernatural residents.

Assured by all that Haw Branch is a happy place, except for the spine-chilling screams that have been heard from the attic, Miss Kellogg dropped off to sleep in an upstairs bedroom accompanied by the family cat. At three in the morning, she awoke with a start to hear the sound of heavy footsteps running into her room and stopping abruptly at the foot of her bed. The cat bolted for the door, but the footsteps stayed. In the morning, Miss Kellogg learned that the last person who slept in that room had awakened to find a thick vapor maternally tucking the blanket under her chin.

Nearly a score of ghost-inhabited homes are to be found throughout Virginia. Traditionally, the James River area, with its stately plantations and turbulent history, has the greatest concentration of spirits and specters. Westover, Shirley and Bacon's Castle each boast a legendary apparition or two in addition to the historical significance of each estate. Nearby Williamsburg, Jamestown and Yorktown also purport supernatural incidences at Wyth House, the Curse Tree and Nelson House, respectively. Fort Monroe, Hampton's naval stronghold since colonial times, claims to house eight different ghosts within its masonry fortress.

But ghostly happenings aren't solely confined to the Tidewater area. Virginia's capital, Richmond, lays claim to several ghost stories, and the Edgar Allen Poe Shrine stands as testament to Virginia's fascination with the netherworld. From Patrick Henry's Scotchtown plantation in Hanover County, where a tragic duel left bloodstains and spirits, to Lee's Boyhood Home in Alexandria, where the ghost of Lee's childhood pet frolics about, to the Martha Washington Inn in Abington, where melancholy strains of violin music can be heard wafting through the halls, the Old Dominion, with her rich heritage of history and culture, is a place to discover the past as well as the present.

For more information about Virginia's vacation opportunities, contact the Virginia State Travel Service, 6 North Sixth Street, Richmond, Virginia 23219, or phone 804-786-4484.

Tourists From U.S. Still Enjoy England

For the third year in a row, Britain has been chosen the most hospitable country in the world to American visitors, according to a poll conducted by a Washington, D.C., based travel newsletter, "The Joyer Travel Report."

According to Thomas L. Phillips, publisher of the newsletter, 22 percent of the readers, who he describes as inveterate "repeat" travelers, voted Britain No. 1, with Switzerland second at 10 percent. Ireland was third with 8 percent.

Switzerland Perfect For Short Vacation

If a tourist with limited vacation time would devote four days to Switzerland, he or she would see some of the most beautiful country in the world. In fact, a suggested trip worked out by the Swiss National Tourist Office, called "The Golden Pass," covers just this length of time.

It begins in Zurich, the largest city in Switzerland, packed with sightseeing delights: the old guild houses, concert hall, Saint Peter's Church, and the Art Gallery.

The next stop, Lucerne in Central Switzerland, is only one hour away. This city, in addition to its special attractions, is the international meeting place for world travelers. At Lucerne the visitor can see the Glacier Garden and take a walk across the many covered bridges.

A two-hour train ride away is Interlaken, a popular resort located in the heart of the Bernese Oberland. It offers a rich schedule of excursions, plus entertainment at the Kursaal Casino which has everything from concerts and dancing to folkloristic performances.

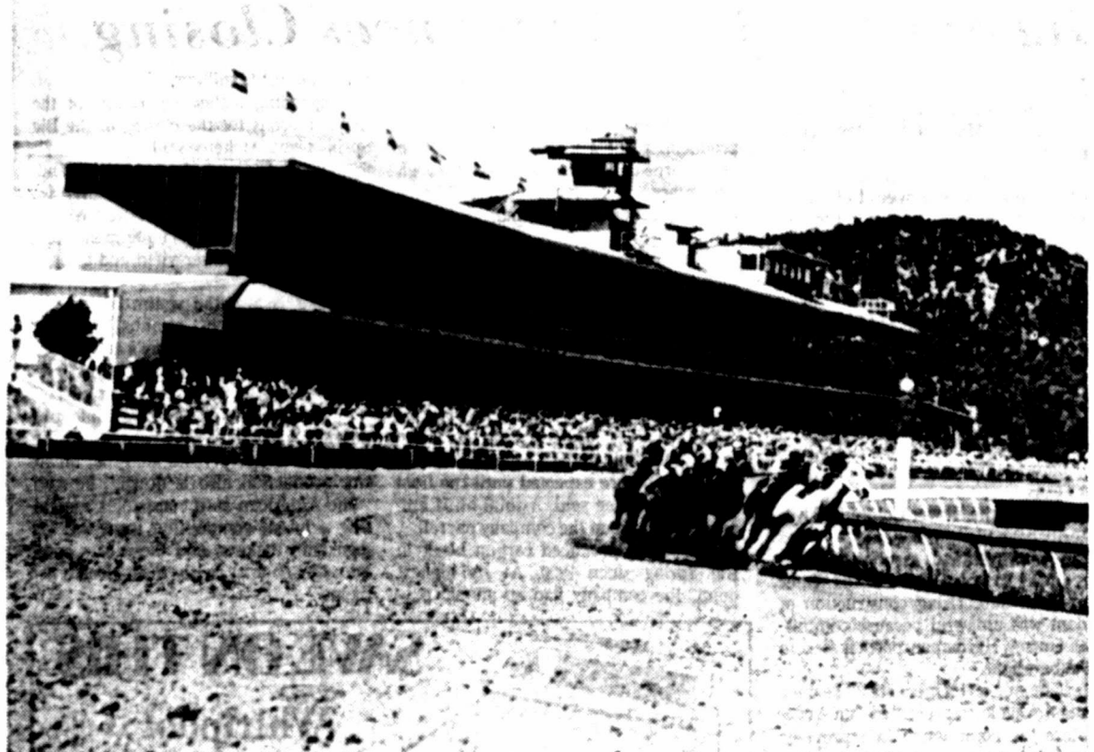

One excursion recommended in the trip is to the Jungfraujoch. A mountain railway will take the visitor 11,330 feet up the mountain to the highest railroad station in Europe.

Next is Montreux, a charming lakeside resort town. It is most famous for the Castle of Chillon nearby. The castle, given lyrical mention in one of Lord Byron's poems, is open to tourists.

Material describing this and other Switzerland tours is available free by writing to the Swiss National Tourist Office, The Swiss Center, 608 Fifth Avenue, NY 10020.

THEY'RE OFF! — Located in the pines of New Mexico, the Ruidoso Downs race track is the home of the world's richest horse race — The All American Futurity. This year's All American will pay the winner $1,280,000.

Officials In New Mexico Report Plenty Of Gas Still Available

No long lines, no rationing and no odd-even days — New Mexico's Commerce and Industry Department has announced that there is no gas shortage in the state and that August allocations are about 95 percent. Similar availability is anticipated for the remainder of the summer.

The Land of Enchantment's Ruidoso area traditionally attracts vacationers escaping the 90 to 100 degree heat in search of the unique blend of recreational and cultural attractions amidst the cool pines. But for the remainder of the summer of 1979, add one more attraction: gasoline.

Activities at Ruidoso include fishing, backpacking, jeep tours and horse racing. Racing continues at Ruidoso Downs through the summer with programs beginning at 1 p.m. Thursday through Sunday and culminating with the All American Futurity on Labor Day. This year's edition of The World's Richest Horse Race boasts a purse of $1,280,000.

The Ruidoso area's mild summer climate has been a refuge for Southwest travelers for over 1,000 years and continues to attract vacationers in ever-increasing numbers. And with petro-nightmares a commonplace occurance in major cities, the Ruidoso area cool pines are even more inviting this August and September.

For information concerning 24-hour gas stations or any updates on the gasoline forecast call 800-545-9877 (for out-of-state travelers) or 300-432-4269 (in-state). Both toll free numbers are provided by the New Mexico Tourism and Travel Division of the state's Commerce and Industry Department.

New FAA Regulation Explained

FORT WORTH (Special)-Airline passengers and airport visitors at major airports who are in possession of weapons in boarding areas are finding themselves in trouble with law officials due to a new Federal Aviation Regulation that was effective in March.

John C. Adams, chief of the Air Transportation Security Division of Federal Aviation Administration's Southwest Region, said that since March 29 when the law, which prohibits carriage of weapons into a security area, went into effect his office has initiated 124 investigations of alleged failure to comply with the regulation — and that is just within the five-state region.

Each of these cases involved attempts to enter a sterile area with a firearm. A sterile area is any point beyond a preboard security screening station (commonly referred to as a security checkpoint).

Persons found guilty of violating this regulation (Federal Aviation Regulation Part 107.21) may be subject to a civil penalty of up to $1,000 per violation. This same civil penalty can be imposed for the possession of a deadly or dangerous weapon on board an aircraft or when appropriate procedures are not followed when shipping guns in checked bags.

Adams explained that guns can be carried in checked baggage if the appropriate procedures are followed. For instance, the air carrier must be informed of the gun and it must be unloaded. Handguns are to be in locked baggage. Shoulder fired guns may be carried in any container that is acceptable to the air carrier.

Buena Park In Center Of Southern California

Why Buena Park? Because it is in the center of Southern California, within minutes of a magic vacationland.

Simply leave your car at home and fly into Orange County or Los Angeles International Airport, then hop on a motorcoach to Buena Park, just 30 to 40 minutes away.

Within Buena Park's city limits, there are four major visitor attractions: Knott's Berry Farm, Movieland Wax Museum, Movie World -A World of Fun, and the California Alligator Farm.

Three of the attractions are within walking distance of each other. Gaily decorated buses will aid you and your family in getting around town for shopping, dining and sightseeing.

Further information on all of the above, plus accommodations, can be obtained by writing to the Buena Park Visitor and Convention Bureau, P.O. Box 5308, Buena Park, California 90620.

Seats Available For China Trip

Seats are still available on a 19-day tour to the People's Republic of China which leaves October 15 from San Francisco. The participants will spend two days in Honolulu and two days in Hong Kong before arriving in China for a 13-day visit.

In China there is a choice of two itineraries. One group will visit Shanghai, Nanking, Soochow and Canton. The second will visit Wuhan, Changsha, Kweilin and Canton.

The tour is sponsored by the U.S.-China Peoples Friendship Association which has sponsored tours to China for over 6,000 Americans since 1972.

Low-Cost Packages To England Offered

This fall there will be several off-season low-cost packaged tours of England. Braniff International and American Express have combined London and the English countryside in a nine-day "English Highlights" tour.

Priced from $767 to $897 (all prices are subject to change) the package includes round trip transportation via 747 jet from D/FW, ground transportation, first class hotels, guides, plus money-saving coupons.

Begin Faces Tough Task Of Boosting Leadership

By ARTHUR MAX

JERUSALEM (AP) — Prime Minister Menachem Begin is ailing and so is his government.

Israel is at odds with its closest ally, the United States, on vital issues of Middle East policy. And the Begin government has been further shaken by criticism from Foreign Minister Moshe Dayan, who is skeptical of the government's ability to carry on.

Seldom has the governing coalition appeared so besieged from within and without as the Begin government after two years in power.

Sources close to Begin, 66, who is recuperating at home from the effects of a minor stroke three weeks ago, admit he is thinking of pushing for Cabinet changes when he returns to his office early next week.

Analysis

But juggling a Cabinet in Israel's intricate coalition politics is not solely the decision of the prime minister and there is no certainty Begin can carry out his wish to give the government a refurbished image without bringing on a crisis that could cause the government to fall.

The disarray is surprising in view of Begin's strong-willed personality and his pledge when he came to power that he would clamp down on Cabinet discipline.

The government's failure to curb an annual inflation rate headed toward 100 percent, its lack of economic direction and its reliance on foreign aid made Israel seem on the verge of bankruptcy and easy prey to foreign political pressures, Dayan charged.

This image of weakness, which Dayan said belied Israel's real strength and determination on vital issues, was behind what he called a "real change in U.S. policy."

Despite denials from the U.S. State Department that the Carter administration was moving toward recognition of the Palestine Liberation Organization, Dayan accused the United States of succumbing to Saudi Arabian oil pressure on the Palestinian question.

Israel fears the United States wants to bolster the Palestinians through a new United Nations Security Council resolution. A dispute over United Nations supervision of the Egyptian-Israeli peace treaty remains unresolved. U.S. condemnations continue of Israeli settlement policy and bombing missions on guerrilla targets in Lebanon, which Secretary of State Cyrus R. Vance says may be violations of U.S. arms sales agreements.

Dayan also was critical, without being specific, of Israel's management of the talks with Egypt and the United States on Palestinian autonomy.

He is officially part of the negotiating team, but the chairman is Interior Minister Yosef Burg, a choice dictated by coalition politics rather than diplomatic skill. Dayan, in pique, refuses to attend the sessions.

Defense Minister Ezer Weizman, frequently the center of controversy, has also been attacked recently for being soft on alleged Egyptian treaty violations. That time, the attackers were Dayan and Agriculture Minister Ariel Sharon whose major preoccupation is Israeli settlements on occupied territory. Both Dayan and Weizman differ with Sharon on settlement policy.

Finance Minister Simha Ehrlich, leader of the second largest party in Begin's Likud bloc, is so besieged by critics that he tentatively offered Begin his resignation last month.

The feeling is growing that this kind of Cabinet fighting cannot continue indefinitely — that something must be done.

Dayan, in his interview, touched on the possibility that he might resign "if the government adopts a policy which I will regard as being beyond what I can permit myself."

But that possibility was seen as strictly a protest gesture since Dayan has no political base of his own and is also troubled by health problems, including removal of a cancerous growth from an intestine in June.

Another more intriguing possibility raised by Dayan was that he favors a broad coalition government that would include the Labor Party that Begin ousted in 1977.

Dayan said such a coalition would allow Israel "to array itself against pressures from abroad and to adopt essential measures on the economic front."

Begin may yet bounce back, reassert his authority over squabbling ministers and find a way to at least make a start on solving Israel's economic woes. And the American-Israeli conflicts could suddenly ease.

"The time has come for this government to engage in very basic soul searching," said Avraham Sharir, a member of Begin's coalition in the Parliament, who urges a Cabinet shakeup. "We have to hurry to avert a total breakdown in the government machinery."

Italy Volcano Tremors Decrease In Strength

CATANIA, Sicily (AP) — The Mount Etna volcano rumbled and spewed molten rock for a seventh straight day today. Local authorities said the threat to island residents was diminishing but a French expert warned of a possible violent eruption to come.

Officials at Catania University's Institute of Vulcanology said their equipment showed a considerable decrease in the number and strength of the tremors accompanying the surge of flames, rock and gas from two craters on the the two-mile-high volcano.

But a French vulcanologist, Haroun Tazieff, who arrived here Sunday to study the eruption, warned against excess optimism. He said hardly any gas was discharged along with the lava bursts of the past few days.

Boat People Placed On Tiny Island

TARA ISLAND, Philippines (UPI) — More than 900 ragged Vietnamese refugees traded their eight-month-old home on a rusty freighter today for a primative camp on a tiny island in the Philippines.

Their long ordeal has not ended, however. Many of them expressed fears they will be forgotten on Tara, an isolated island lacking electricity.

The 914 refugees were part of a group who fled Vietnam last December aboard the 1,600-ton Hong Kong freighter Tung An. They arrived in Manila Bay Dec. 27, but authorities barred them from landing. They were forced to stay aboard the ship for the next eight months.

Strong winds and rain greeted the tattered refugees after a 17-hour trip through the South China Sea aboard a World War II-vintage Navy transport ship.

Although the refugees generally were happy to leave the cramped, fetid Tung An, they also were scared their stay on Tara would delay their processing for resettlement.

"People will forget us," said Olivia Kim Ai, 16.

Phuong Tu Binh, 19, expressed her dismay over the camp's primitive conditions, saying, "I like to stay in Manila because there are electric lights there."

The refugees will settle in 61 prefabricated buildings and long grass huts.

Otto Gobius, Manila representative of the U.N. High Commissioner for Refugees, told newsmen some refugees may be uprooted again once paperwork is started.

"There's going to be a lot of going back and forth to Manila," said Gobius, especially in cases of refugees who fail medical exams.

"I don't think they are very happy," he added.

Located 150 miles southwest of Manila, Tara is a 3-square-mile speck of land which the Philippines offered as a temporary processing center for refugees before their permanent resettlement in Western nations.

Dotted with coconut trees, Tara is inhabited by about 500 tribesmen called Tagbanuas who are known for their peaceful ways. They live in a community on the other side of the island, 2 or 3 miles from the refugee camp.

Catholicism has been introduced to the tribe, but some women still go topless. Prevailing legend says tribal spirits inhabit the 20-foot-high trees near the refugee camp.

The Tung An originally carried 2,300 refugees, most of them ethnic Chinese, but the other 1,400 have already resettled.

U.S. Deep-Sea Divers Die After Rescue Operation

LERWICK, Shetland Islands (AP) — A desperate fight to save the lives of two American divers failed when both men died in a decompression chamber after being hauled up in a diving bell that was stranded 500 feet below the North Sea.

The men were identified by a British National Oil Corporation spokesman as Richard Walker, 32, of Santa Barbara, Calif., and Victor S. Guiel, 29, of Springfield, Maine.

Infabco Diving Services of Aberdeen, which employed the divers, who were working under contract to BNOC, said Guiel had been with them for a year, and Walker since last April.

The mooring cable attaching the bell to the support ship, the Wilddrake, snapped early Wednesday, leaving the pair marooned a few feet from the seabed. Only the "umbilical cord" — the support cable carrying air to the bell — was left intact.

A massive rescue operation, involving a flotilla of support ships plus a team of divers, was mounted and after two attempts another hoisting cable was hitched to the tiny bell -only large enough to take two men -and the bell was slowly winched to the surface.

BNOC at first said there were signs of life aboard, but just before midnight Wednesday issued the terse announcement:

"BNOC regrets to announce they have been advised the two divers have been confirmed as dead."

Walker and Guiel had been working near a production platform in the Thistle oilfield 130 miles northeast of the Shetland isles, the cluster of islands off the northernmost tip of Scotland.

Because the support line carrying air to the bell had not snapped, there were hopes the men would be rescued and support divers worked frantically to attach a fresh winching cable from the Wilddrake to the bell. After one abortive attempt they succeeded and the bell was slowly hoisted up as BNOC reported movement had been seen inside.

The bell was hauled aboard the Wilddrake and locked onto the decompression chamber — the chamber where all deep sea divers spend some time while their systems recover. Two doctors hastily flown out from Aberdeen entered the chamber but shortly afterwards it was announced the men had died.

Carter Plan Would Give $1.6 Billion To Poor

WASHINGTON (AP) — America's poor — their wallets increasingly drained by higher energy bills — would get $1.6 billion in aid next year under a tentative Carter administration plan keyed to congressional approval of the president's "windfall profits" tax proposal.

In the second year of the plan, $2.4 billion would be available to as many as 15 million Americans, according to an administration source who asked not to be named.

The proposal, the result of a promise by President Carter to help "needy Americans to cope with rising energy prices," is just beginning to be circulated among congressmen, public interest groups and representatives of state and local governments.

The administration hopes to have a final plan drawn up by the time Congress returns from its vacation after Labor Day, Christopher Edley Jr., assistant director of the White House domestic policy staff, said Wednesday.

The money would be drawn from the "windfall profits" tax Carter has proposed to collect some of the money expected to flow to the oil companies from his decision to gradually lift price controls on domestically produced oil. The tax would technically be on the extra revenue, not profits, from decontrol. Without it, oil companies would keep more of the revenues as profits. The House has already approved the tax, which is now before the Senate Finance Committee.

Under the proposed program for the poor, Edley said, $1.2 billion of the $1.6 billion in 1980 would be distributed to recipients of Aid to Families with Dependent Children and Supplemental Security Income as special energy allowances. State governments would get the remaining sum to run emergency assistance programs to help families overcome "energy-related crises," he said.

The 1981 program would be essentially the same except that nearly $1 billion more would be available and the eligibility would be expanded to include all households with incomes below 125 percent of the poverty line, now $7,160 for a family of four, Edley said.

"The purpose, in general, is to help the low-income population with higher energy costs," he said. "It primarily is related to heating needs, but not exclusively."

Edley said the bulk of the money would be earmarked to help the poor replace "spending power" they have lost because of higher energy prices.

As currently outlined, the program consists of two parts:

—Special energy allowances. In 1980, $1.2 billion would be given in flat amounts of cash to AFDC and SSI recipients. That sum would rise to $2 billion in 1981 and go to SSI recipients and all households under 125 percent of the poverty lines.

The amount would vary from state to state with half the sum being based on the number of heating degree days, a formula based on the severity of winter weather.

The 1980 national average payment to a one-person household would be $100 a year; $200 for a household of two or more. The payments would be made twice a year. Those living in states where the winter weather is more severe would get more money.

—State-run emergency assistance programs. In 1980, $400 million would be set aside for those programs, which would be designed to give families assistance during some kind of a crisis related to energy needs. In 1981, the sum would be the same but $100 million would come from state contributions.

Money would be distributed to states based on the following formula: 25 percent on the number of poor, 25 percent on heating degree days, and 50 percent on per capita heating oil consumption.

Underlying the emergency assistance program is the "presumption that we need to put more money into areas of the country where there is more reliance on heating oil," Edley said.

Edley acknowledged that "it's going to be difficult to legislate in this area."

Nixon Bounces Back After Five Years

The man flying off to exile in San Clemente was battered mentally and physically, drained by the futile effort to save his doomed presidency.

Now, friends say, Nixon "looks super, he has bounced back." He is looking forward to visiting China again this fall and to starting a new life near his family on the East Coast he so often maligned.

Those friends say the major push to sell La Casa Pacifica, his mansion in San Clemente, came from his wife, Pat.

"She has given him a ultimatum," they said, adding Mrs. Nixon was happiest in Manhattan, where they moved in the early 1960s after her husband's unsuccessful tries for the presidency and the governorship of California.

Pat feels she is too far from children and grandchildren. She reportedly is recovering very well from her stroke — "beginning to bloom again" — and wants to be near the shows, the fancy shops, the museums and the relative anonymity of New York.

But the Nixons abandoned plans to buy a $750,000 East Side penthouse in the face of opposition from prospective fellow tenants, and may settle in Greenwich, Conn.

Nixon will visit China in September — his second trip there since leaving office — and reportedly is "deep into his book" on foreign policy, international relations and how to deal with the communists.

Their friends say the Nixons feel they now have more options and are "thinking how they want to live their lives, and what things are important."

One option was to leave California, saying to each other, in effect, "We don't have to stay here in exile any longer."

Daughter Julie is working on her mother's biography. David Eisenhower will take another year to complete a book on his grandfather, which will include numerous letters from Ike never before printed.

Nixon enjoys the benefits of all former presidents. He has Secret Service protection, a pension and an office staff paid with federal funds.

He gets regular intelligence briefings. Old friends like Henry Kissinger and Gen. Alexander Haig come to visit. He recently threw a party for America's astronauts in honor of the 10th anniversary of man's walk on the moon.

Nixon has maintained his innocence. He told television interviewer David Frost two years ago:

"I did not in my view commit an impeachable offense. I let the American people down and I have to carry that burden with me the rest of my life.

"But if they want me to get down and grovel on the floor — no, never!"

Five years later, House Judiciary Chairman Peter Rodino has not forgotten. Neither has Rep. Tom Railsback, R-Ill., a committee member.

Watergate, said Rodino, "has left an awful kind of impact ... because that distrust is still there, the suspicion is still there —the lack of confidence in public officials."

Said Railsback:

"Watergate, when coupled with Vietnam, created a malaise in the country. The whole sleazy revelations of the Watergate era contributed to the shock and dismay of the American people."

Program To Protect Disclosers Of Government Deficiencies

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government is washing some dirty laundry in public under a new program. First to flutter is a charge by a deputy U.S. marshal that he was ordered to remove the shackles from prisoners transported by air so other passengers would be unaware dangerous men were aboard.

Deputy Marshal Ronald J. Frazier said when he complained to superiors that the policy endangered the public, his complaints went unheeded and landed him in trouble.

Frazier and three others from the U.S. Marshal's Office in Atlanta were the first to go before a new agency, the Merit System Protection Board, to assert they had been punished when they complained about wrongdoing.

The proceeding Wednesday was conducted as a trial under a new law intended to protect "whistleblowers" who disclose corruption or waste in government agencies.

Scores of cases have been received by the new agency. Workers throughout the government will closely watch the outcome of this first case to see if the program can be effective.

The target of the deputies' complaint was Ronald Angel, an old associate of President Carter. Angel headed the Georgia Bureau of Investigation when Carter was governor and was appoined chief marshal in Atlanta when Carter became president.

Angel will get to tell his side before the board's proceedings end. He is accused by Frazier and deputies Charles E. Morris, William C. Reilly and Terry E. Love of threatening them with unwanted transfers when they persisted in complaining of mismanagement and bigotry.

President's Train Ride Angers ABA

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter may have made Amtrak happy by taking the train to Baltimore and declaring it the best way to travel. But he didn't make a lot of friends in the bus industry.

After thinking it over for a day, the American Bus Association decided Wednesday to set him straight.

"That Amtrak Metroliner that you rode, besides being a fuel guzzler, also cost in government subsidy an amount equal to about half of the fare you paid," ABA president Arthur D. Lewis told Carter in a letter.

"Not just your fare," he added, "but also the fares of everyone riding with you."

Carter and his party, which included a pool of reporters and cameramen who paid their own fare, occupied the last car of one of the regular Metroliners that ply the New York-Washington corridor. Every passenger was charged the regular $17.50 round-trip fare.

In Baltimore, the president declared he was taking the train "not only because it is the best way to come from Washington to Baltimore, but also because I wanted to show my support for a strong mass transportation system."

A White House spokesman says Carter "obviously meant to include bus travel." But that word hadn't gotten to Lewis.

"If the bus industry last year had carried all of Amtrak's pasengers on its regular operations, it would have used only 36 million gallons of fuel as contrasted to the 101 million gallons that Amtrak used," he wrote. "Further, the bus industry would have carried them at no cost to the federal treasury."

The letter did not mention that taxpayers pay for the highways on which buses travel.

The White House had no official response, saying the letter had not been received. Lewis also sent copies to five members of Congress, four members of the White House staff and news organizations.

When he spoke to the Sons of Italy convention in Baltimore, Carter mentioned he'd come by train and said, "I recommend this kind of trip to every American regardless of national background.

MX Missile 'Racetrack' Patterns Agreed Upon

WASHINGTON (AP) — Senior administration officials, working to minimize environmental effects in deployment of 200 big new MX mobile missiles, are reported to have reached consensus on a $26 billion proposal for widespread "racetrack" patterns.

Defense Secretary Harold Brown explained the plan in detail Wednesday to a high-level policy review council including National Security Adviser Zbigniew Brzezinski, Secretary of State Cyrus Vance and others, administration sources said.

Brown was expected to formally recommend the plan to President Carter within the next couple of weeks, said the sources, who asked not to be identified.

The president decided in early June to move into full-scale development of the 190,000-pound missile, concentrating on its ability to survive a possible surprise attack by accurate Soviet missiles.

Pentagon experts have since been working on deployment concepts that would satisfy both the "survivability" requirement and environmental concerns of affected Western states.

Defense authorities say they believe the latest plan, in which the 200 missiles would be shuttled among about 4,600 horizontal "protective structures" in Utah and Nevada valleys, meets all the necessary standards.

Those born on this day are under the sign of Leo.

English author Izaak Walton was born Aug. 9, 1593.

On this day in history:

In 1831, the first train in the United States to be drawn by a steam locomotive made a run between Albany and Schenectady, N.Y.

In 1945, more than half of the Japanese city of Nagasaki was destroyed when the United States dropped its second atomic bomb.

In 1970, 54 American citizens were among 99 people killed when an airliner crashed in Peru.

A thought for the day:

A line in Izaak Walton's "The Compleate Angler" says, "Angling may be said to be so like the mathematics that it can never be fully learnt."

TODAY'S STOCK PRICES

July Price Rise Hurts Stock Mart

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market slipped today following release of figures showing a larger-than-expected rise in July's producer prices.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrial issues was off 1.88 to 861.26 at noon.

As the market opened, the Labor Department announced that producer prices for finished goods had risen a seasonally adjusted 1.1 percent in July, an annual rate of 13.2 percent.

The rise was almost double what many analysts had expected, and was a big jump from the 0.5 percent rise in June and the 0.4 percent increase in May.

IBM topped the most-active list at noon, showing a 1/8-point loss at 69 1/4.

The NYSE's composite index of its more than 1,500 listed common stocks was off .11 to 60.25 at noon. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was up .58 at 200.78.

Big Board volume in the first two hours of trading was 15.6 million shares, compared to 21.05 million shares in the same period on Wednesday.

Among noontime prices, BankAmerica fell 1/2 to 30 1/4, Southland Corp. lost 1/2 to 30 1/4. Exxon was up 1/4 to 53 7/8, Twentieth Century Fox lost 7/8 to 53 7/8, and Sears Roebuck was unchanged at 19 1/8.

'Hawaii Five-0' Going Off Air

By PETER J. BOYER

LOS ANGELES (AP) — If I were a TV criminal, I'd be guided by two rules of operation: never get in a high-speed chase in San Francisco and never, never do evil in the state of Hawaii.

Nobody ever survives high-speed chases in San Francisco; even if you could get away, the trauma would be worse than prison.

As for Hawaii, well, that placid place, seemingly ripe for criminal plunder, has The Jaw — Steve McGarrett, the least sympathetic cop on TV.

Committing TV crimes in Hawaii holds a certain attraction: Clear skies, the blue Pacific and all. But getting busted by "Hawaii Five-0" just isn't fun. McGarrett is always serious, always nicely coiffed. He has no sense of humor, none of that sense of mutual respect Sherlock Holmes held for the diabolical Prof. Moriarty.

McGarrett, stoneface he, only cracks those tight lips into a slight shadow of a smile when the crook is nabbed or dead. And then it's a smug sort of a smile that seems to say, "I am a great crimestopper, and I have triumphed again."

Even the most elegant of island crooks are subjected to this contempt. There is no dignity in defeat.

Well, soon enough, Hawaii will again be safe for TV crimes. McGarrett will be gone, jutting jaw and all. "Hawaii Five-0" is in its last season. Crooks can vacation in Honolulu once more.

After 12 seasons of keeping his hair and his island rigidly controlled, McGarrett is through, CBS says. Suspecting a ruse, I requested confirmation from McGarrett himself, Jack Lord.

Even on the telephone, even first thing Sunday morning, Jack Lord's jaw juts. Though he is polite and gracious, I get the feeling I have done something wrong, and will soon be breaking rocks on Maui.

Yes, he says, "Hawaii Five-0" is definitely in its last season. "Twelve years, that's a lifetime."

He recounts the problems the show had when it first came to Hawaii, the absence of production facilities, the expense of being thousands of miles from Hollywood, the reluctance among the Islanders to have a crime show filmed on their pretty beaches.

"It was dreadful," he says. "We were working out of an abandoned warehouse, working 100-hour weeks. We were shooting 85-90 hours of film to get a one-hour episode. At one point, we were $810,000 over budget, and you can imagine how the network felt about that."

But things smoothed out eventually, and Hawaii began to appreciate Lord. He was a chamber of commerce's delight. The show may not have been Shakespearean in its dramatic dimensions, but it always had plenty of lovely scenery shots.

"They've always been very good about doing their filming right in the islands, getting first-class footage of the Hawaiian beauty and scenery," says Jerry Panzo of the Hawaiian Visitors Bureau. "I've met people from Germany here, and the first thing they say is, 'Gee, it's just like 'Hawaii Five-0.' I'm sure we'll miss it."

Stars Doing Stunts Can Be Costly

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — When a big-name star takes a tumble, his production company can end up hurting. Though there are still a few holdouts, the era of the daredevil actor is over.

James Garner does handle many of the chase scenes in "The Rockford Files." And last year, Robert Conrad, 44, went eight rounds with an 18-year-old Golden Gloves champion for "Duke," a miniseries in which Conrad portrayed an aging fighter.

But the days when Douglas Fairbanks Sr. and Errol Flynn risked life and limb to perpetuate their swashbuckling images have vanished in the face of the prohibitive losses faced by production companies forced to halt shooting because of a disabled star.

"When this sort of thing happens the whole company goes down," says Brett Garwood, spokesman for Aaron Spelling Productions, which makes such action TV series as "Charlie's Angels" and "Starsky and Hutch."

Insurance companies do a multi-million dollar business providing policies to protect against a star's absence, whether through accident or illness, industry officials say.

"Many of them (actors) say they do their own stunts, but in reality the stunts they do are very simple or they don't do any stunts," says one insurance company official who declined to be identified.

Yet even activities not considered stunts can lead to accidents. Such was the case with Erik Estrada, who was seriously injured during Monday's filming of the NBC series, "CHiPs".

The 30-year-old actor, who plays officer Frank "Ponch" Poncherello of the California Highway Patrol, was riding a motorcycle on a studio lot at speeds described by MGM spokeswoman Gail Cottman as relatively slow.

"He just slipped on an oil slick in an alley," she said. Estrada's motorcycle hit a car carrying a camera crew to film the scene, and the popular teen idol broke his sternum, several ribs, his right wrist and suffered two slightly collapsed lungs.

Doctors said Tuesday he was "out of danger," but it wasn't known how long Estrada would be away from the "CHiPs" set. Long absences of key stars can be costly.

Al Newman, vice president of MGM, which produces the TV series, said filming would resume today without Estrada. The accident is to be incorporated into a segment of the "CHiPs" series, he said.

William Vanden Bossche, director of insurance for the entertainment conglomerate MCA, which owns Universal Studios and MCA Records, estimates that when a star is absent and the company is forced to cancel a day's shooting, costs run between $25,000 and $30,000.

Most of the expense is pay for the idled cast and crew. When only contract personnel are getting paid, costs mount at the rate of $10,000 to $15,000 daily.

"James Garner can drive virtually any vehicle in the world, so he does his own driving," he said. "But if a car goes over the ravine, he's not going to go over a ravine in the car."

British TV Viewers Object To Cackling

LONDON (AP) — The BBC recently received letters complaining about the "hideous cackling" interrupting nearly all the radio's comedy and quiz shows.

Although most of the letter writers believed the noise was canned laughter, network officials said it was a real laugh from a lady who had come to be known as Mrs. Chuckles, a woman who faithfully attended shows taped before a studio audience.

Coca-Cola Plant Dedicated

MOSCOW (UPI) — J. Paul Austin, chairman of the board of the Coca-Cola Co., dedicated a bottling and container-filling plant Tuesday that will produce Coca-Cola and Fanta orange drink for Russians.

The bottling line has a capacity of 24,000 bottles per hour and a second line has a capacity for filling 200 containers per hour of syrups or premixed beverage.

During the 1980 Olympics, both Coca-Cola and Fanta will be distributed on the sports grounds under an exclusive agreement between Coca-Cola and the Soviet Union.

Pepsi-Cola currently has exclusive distribution rights for cola drinks in the Soviet Union and is sold in Moscow at kiosks bearing the name of the soft drink.

ABC, CBS Plan Movies About John Wayne

By JOAN HANAUER

NEW YORK (UPI) — Hollywood, which mourned John Wayne by saying there would never be another like him, now is trying to find two more just like him.

ABC and CBS both have bought three-hour dramatized television biographies of the superstar and the hunt is on for actors to play Wayne.

The ABC project will be produced by Batjac Productions, which was Wayne's own company and now is presided over by his won, Michael, who will serve as producer.

The film biography will be called "The Duke," and son Michael noted that there never has been an authorized written biography of his father.

The key word is authorized. Maurice Zolotow, who has made a career of writing about Hollywood and its stars, wrote an unauthorized but not unflattering biography of Wayne, and that will form the basis of the CBS three-hour drama to be written by Paul Monash.

The CBS version, to be called "Shooting Star" and produced by Warner Bros., will begin shooting in September.

No one is saying when either drama will go on the air, although it looks like a horse race with the ratings prize going to the network that gets on the air first.

The key to a successful John Wayne bio is casting and there Batjac might have an advantage. The obvious choice to play Big John is look-alike son, Patrick, and his brother suggested he might star in the ABC-Batjac film.

CBS, which has a script in hand, could try to snare a hot "name" like Nick Nolte, or could go with an unknown. Part of the problem is that everyone who comes to mind to play Wayne is too old or too short or too Eastern. They don't hardly make 'em like that any more.

The three-network ratings race goes on, even during the summer rerun doldrums, and ABC continues in the lead, trailed by CBS in second and NBC in the cellar.

The top programs in the country for the week ending Aug. 5, according to the A.C. Nielsen Co., were:

1: Three's Company; 2: Taxi; 3: WKRP in Cincinnati; 4: MA-S-H; 5: Lou Grant; 6: Vega$; 7: Detective School; 8: Laverne & Shirley; 9: Mork & Mindy; 10: (tie) Charlie's Angels and Barney Miller.
