The Woman's Day

By Allene Summer

Women are growing tired of bridge, and are turning from the bridge table to the sewing machine. We have this on the word of a lady whose title proclaims her executive secretary of the Needle-work and Textile Guild of Chicago. The lady says that within three months 300 women have joined the guild and are making needlework because they have tired of bridge. One often wonders why women WILL play and work so intensively. The bridge race and craze has been a good example of the way we do things. Bridge is a pleasant form of recreation, the interest in which could be sustained over a period of many years if women would treat it as an occasional form of many formed recreation. But they had to go to it just as they went to mah jong, ball, musiques, charity bazaars and all the games and jobs that have had their little day.

The Holy Estate
Definitions are dull things, but occasionally needed. Sometimes we forget "what it's all about." Which may justify a rebash of some opinions of Rabbi Stephen S. Wise on the holy estate of matrimony. "The ends of marriage are comradeship, the home and the child," says the rabbi. "There never have been and never will be any real substitutes for marriage. All those suggested have been for the satisfaction of the 'I' and not for the 'we' in the marriage relation." The marriage failure, continues the rabbi, are the human misfits who fall out of marriage as well as in its because of their limitations of mind and spirit.

As Bad As Cotton
I have been informed that no young girl who pretends to be the least bit chic will be caught wearing thread silk hose these days. No, sir, the garments which shield her netters from the could blast must be chiffon, the chiffoner the better. The point seems to be that whereas thread silk hose can last a couple of weeks, if judiciously treated, even the heaviest chiffons can't well be expected to last more than a week, and if there's one special privilege that a $29-a-week typist demands it's the right to at least one new pair of silk stockings a week!

Frank Families
A German father recently claimed that he held the world's record for largest family. He claimed that he had had 87 children, 68 by the first wife, 18 by the second. Eugenists and doctors have tried in vain to get the accurate data on this. They can't believe it and are inclined to think that somebody fibbed, if they did not lie. A certain doctor of the University of Munich has done much investigation of astounding birth records. He reports that most of them are based on human hyp-

Mrs. L. P. Smith Is Hostess Honoring Visitor Here

Complimenting Miss Blanche Woodward, of Oklahoma, and Mrs. John Berry, of Clyde, Mrs. L. P. Smith, 2108 13th Street, was charming hostess at bridge yesterday afternoon. Mrs. H. E. Miller scored high and Mrs. Charles Tract made low count in the game. A salad course was served by the hostess. Guests were Miss Woodward, Mesdames Berry, Maple Wilson, Byron Brown, H. E. Miller, Walter Tyler, John Ely, J. O. Ballinger, L. B. Hutchinson, J. T. Hutchinson, Howard Pearson, Charles Tract, L. E. Miller, G. H. Castleberry, O. L. Brashear and C. L. Dean.

The time of meeting was changed from 3 o'clock in the afternoon until 9:30 o'clock.

Priscilla and Hope and Martha were hoisted onto the world. But no such era has ever quite gotten any good like the "Betty Ann" one. Cute and cunning while they're babies, but even cute cunningness gets stale in overdoes. Another sample of or wholesale mindedness.

W. G. CARLISLE AT HOME AFTER THREE WEEKS VISIT

W. G. Carlisle, well known Lubbock man, returned to his home here the first of this week after a visit of over three weeks during which time he visited his children in Tezakama, Hillsboro, and McLennan county, enjoying quite a siege with the fishing tackle during his absence. After being joked considerably by his friends here following his return, Mr. Carlisle yesterday made the statement that he caught one of the largest fish he ever pulled in his life, but that he would not attempt to say how large it was. He said he fed three families with the one fish and had some to spare. Conditions in McLennan county are the best for several years, he said, with prospects for a heavy yield of all manner of crops.

A TENDENCY TOWARD THE MORE BEAUTIFUL

The faces of buildings which are turned toward the world are obviously of interest to the public and all citizens have a property in them. The spectator is, in fact, part owner. No man builds to himself alone. General interest in and public appreciation of public arts are a necessity of civilization. In cities, buildings take the place of fields, trees and hedge rows. Buildings are an artificial form of nature. We have a right to consideration in buildings.—London Mercury.

More and more consideration is being given to the use made of private property. The assumption, once widely prevalent, that the owner of land had a right to use it for any purpose he pleased, now very generally is understood to be false. Yet the legal inhibitions are very limited, pertaining almost exclusively to the creating of nuisances or hazards and the endangering of public health. Gradually public construction of the rights of private property is becoming more inclusive, and recently a good deal has been said of even the refinements that should, as a matter of public obligation if not legal requirement, go into improvements generally.

The most advanced measures so far proposed along this line have been considered in relation to the national capital. Tentative plans are in the making for the expenditure of something like 200 million dollars, over an extended period of development, in the District of Columbia, on a revision and extension of the city plan inclusive of the whole district. Coincidentally much thought is given to the question of protecting the beautiful city thus to be developed. One of the considerations is to control to a reasonable degree the development of private property overlooking parks and highways and facing monumental public buildings. Such control was strongly urged in the recent sessions of the city planning conference in Washington, and in the annual convention of the American Institute of Architects, held at the same time and place.

Selfish interest as well as public obligation directs that regard for attractiveness should be a factor in planning buildings on private property. But selfish interest also is responsible for many encroachments on civic order and beauty. No city can expect a high standard of permanent improvements so long as it tolerates offensive billboards and catch-penny shacks, littered vacant lots and "uglies" generally. Public sentiment is the governing power. If it is strong enough to demand civic attractiveness, it will come. If it is indifferent or hostile administrative activity will not go very far toward civic ideals.

STANDARDIZED THINKING

Standardization is the American watchword today. William Carter Dickerman, director of several large Corporations asks the question whether or not we can escape Standardized thinking. He says we eat breakfast food the flakes of which are turned out in such prodigious quantities as to dwarf by comparison the snowflakes of the blizzard of 1888. We are standardized from the breakfast table to the grave.

We smoke tobacco which is put up into neat little cans at the rate of 247,000,000 pounds a year, or made into cigarettes at the rate of 80,000,000,000 a year; we step on the gas of a car which has 12,000 or 15,000 twin brothers or sisters born the same day; we drive to an office in which nearly everything from the paper clips to the mahogany desks is made in such quantities that a horde of salesmen is being run ragged to keep orders equal to production; finally we are buried in caskets that are being turned out at the rate of over a million a year.

Such mass production has had its effect upon the way of living and thinking of everyone — worker, consumer and exploiter. The worker has lost his individuality. The product has no longer the disinctive touch of the master workman. The consumer has profited in reduced costs, but the exploiter has seen the possibility of applying the principle of mass production to other developments.

Today sees the mass production idea being applied to the mental action of all Americans. We read news dispatches the identical words of which are being read by millions from one end of the country to the other. Syndicated articles are distributed from coast to coast. Dr. S. Parkes Cadman gives his advice on all matters, from the raising of children to the proper way to die. Propaganda is reduced to a science and is insidiously reaching everyone. With others prepared to do the thinking, the natural sloth of the individual is augmented and it is to be feared that unless the situation is realized, we may rapidly develop a nation of slothful thinkers.

Mass production is helping to bring America the greatest prosperity that any country in the world has ever known. Clear and forceful thinking is absolutely necessary if this production is to achieve its greatest efficiency and if America is to lead the world not only in productive capacity, but also in productive thought.

NOW FOR A 15-DAY FLIGHT AROUND THE WORLD

Lieut. Leigh Wade, who was with the Army Air Service's world-girdling expedition in 1924, will endeavor to make a similar voyage in 15 days. He plans to fly westward from New York City. One of Wade's companions will be Linton Wells, who holds the record for the fastest trip around the world—28 days, 14 hours and 36 minutes. Wells traveled by airplane, railroad and steamer, flying over Russia, a large part of Siberia and across this continent. Wade and Wells plan to be off about July 1, in a triple-engine ship—probably a biplane—accompanied by a radio operator. They evidently figure upon crossing the Pacific via the Hawaiian Islands, and probably will traverse Siberia if the Moscow government permits. From now until early December a flight from Hawaii to the Philippines would be dangerous, particularly along the course between Guam and Manila. No plane can withstand a typhoon, and the region just east of the Philippines and Formosa is a breeding-ground for those destructive storms during this period. Wade and Wells may consider hopping over the North Pacific from Hawaii to Japan, via the Midway group, Marcus Island and the Bonins. Along that route they would avoid the typhoon belt proper, and the longest jump would be from the Midway group to Marcus Island—approximately eighteen hundred miles. Should Moscow deny permission for a flight across Siberia and Russia, the party would be compelled to take the much longer course via Southern Asia. In that event they might turn northwest from Honolulu and go on to Singapore, via Fanning Island, Samoa, Fiji, New Caledonia, Northern Australia and the Dutch East Indies. At Brisbane, (Australia) the party would be on a frequently traveled aerial course leading to Singapore in one direction and to Sydney and Melbourne in another. They should experience no particular difficulty between Singapore and the numerous airports in Western Europe. Wade and Wells probably are planning to cross the North Atlantic via the Azores, which present several unmistakable landmarks for pilots of both surface ships and planes. For long flights above the sea the triple-engine plane apparently is favored generally. Doubtless it will be used exclusively on commercial airways over large bodies of water. This type is beginning to displace single-motored ships on airways above land, where the passengers' safety is the first consideration. By either the Siberian-Russian or the alternative course suggested, Wade and Wells must cover 1,800 miles to 2,000 miles daily in order to span the globe within 15 days. The longest hop from land to land would be that between San Francisco and Honolulu—2,405 miles. The success of their enterprise would give the United States another outstanding aviation record. Lieut. Wade is an excellent pilot and an authority on long-distance flights. Mr. Wells has done much to stimulate interest in commercial flying, by his writings on the subject; and he is also a pilot.

Why doesn't England send a flyer to Ireland? Some photographer is going to come into the office with the great scoop some day. It won't be Lindbergh driving a beer truck in Chicago, or it won't be Wayne B. Wheeler in court for hi-jacking. It will be a bathing beauty—in the water.

It is dangerous to drive in a fog especially if it is mental. For Married Men Only. It is better to have loved and been bossed than never to have been bossed at all.

There may be "many a slip between the cup and the lip" as claimed—but there no longer are many "twixt the flapper and public gaze."

We have just read that a "hick" town is a place where over fifty per cent of the deaths are from natural causes. A prohibition barometer, no doubt.

Why doesn't England send a flyer to Ireland? Some photographer is going to come into the office with the great scoop some day. It won't be Lindbergh driving a beer truck in Chicago, or it won't be Wayne B. Wheeler in court for hi-jacking. It will be a bathing beauty—in the water.

SO THINK WE

We think the Texas legislature and the governor are any 'greening very well just now.

We think some people take the benefit of the doubt and buy everything whether there is any doubt about paying for it or not, and the merchant gets the benefit of the doubt. Some time it ends in the bankrupt courts.

We think some people mistake ignorance about how to act while in public, for personality.

We think very often when a friend refuses to lend you money he is merely willing to remain your friend indefinitely.

We think the younger set ought to respect our old "fogies" more than they do. It certainly would take a lot of the kick out of the life of some of the youngsters, if they did not have someone to "shock" occasionally.

We think possibly the children of today are not exactly ashamed of their parents, but just so considerate about them that they fear they would not enjoy themselves in their company, so insist that they remain at home and let them go to the functions with others who would be better suited to the occasion.

We think when people are healthy and vigorous there is little excuse for failure, except when you just give up, and quit trying.

We think that some times people go to the golf course for the recreation there is in the game, but we imagine that about nine-tenths of them go for at least nine other reasons.

We think now somebody will have to pull a new stunt, something like being around the world under water without a scuba, to attract any great attention. Flying across the Atlantic or to the north pole is no longer a stunt. Hurry fellows and get something new.

We think President Coolidge should certainly have a donkey to look after his collection of animals. He now has a bear, a raccoon, two lions, kangaroo, and a deer. He is soon to be presented with a baby hippopotamus. The donkey will give him all of the donkey business that he may need, however, if he gets in the race for president on a third term lap.

We think with an all well going down on the east of us, and on the west of us, and Abernathy starting one in a few days to the north of us, and with all of that all welling to the southwest of us, it will be a long time before Lubbock will keep from being the hub of the oil field in a few months.

We think a lot of folks in business as well as social life allow themselves to take a slump in the summer time.

We think our city and county police officers are doing mighty good work, in cooperating in stamping out bootleggers and other criminals in this city. If the juries will back up the work of these men, there will be very little crime in this community, which is as it should be.

We think with the splendid climatic condition that Lubbock has the summer school of the Texas Technological College is going to become one of the most popular schools of the southwest. With its second summer school just beginning, it seems that there is a tendency to come this way, and by another year, there will be more students here from far off.

We think there are entirely too many people who go crazy as soon as they commit a crime. We believe that if more of them would go crazy before the crime is committed, there would not be so much crime. Pleas of insanity are very common things now.

We think there is going to be a very fatal accident on the streets of Lubbock some of these days, when the fire truck has to pass some car filled with people. There seems to be no thought of the great danger there is in keeping right in the middle of the street when the fire truck rushes by in answer to a call. People should learn to get out of the way, and remain there until it is determined which way the truck is going.

We think the splendid rain in some sections of the Lubbock trade territory was very beneficial to everyone. It seemed to brighten faces, encourage them, and give them a new vision of things.

We think Captain Lindbergh is entitled to much praise and honor for the brave trip he made across the broad Atlantic in a plane but people we believe are going to get pretty tired reading headlines about him before the home-coming celebration is over.

We think that the general appearance of any city is something to be taken into consideration. It is a fact that tourists and visitors notice this particular condition. A town that is exceptionally neat always attracts attention, and people think well of the town. They tell others about it, but if it is dirty, and poorly kept, it also attracts attention and leaves a long time impression on folks, but it is not a very favorable opinion that is formed of the community.

We think every time one of these so-called fortune tellers hits Lubbock, the people should see that they do not get any patronage. It has only been a few days since one of these fellows here and lifted many dollars from the silly and inexperienced young people of the community.

IT IS REPORTED

It is reported that there at least one class of folks that do not care anything about conserving day-light and that is the night prowlers, who do all of their depredation under the coat of darkness.

It is reported that there are at least a dozen fellows in this town who should be fined every hour of the day for fast driving. The maximum fine a few times would put them to where they could not buy gasoline, and that would be a great blessing to the community, and for the safety of the life of men and women and children who are sure to become their victim sooner or later.

It is reported that a man is as good as a mile, but he would much prefer that these racing cars be a mile from us, when they go down the streets of this city at so many miles per hour, above the speed limit.

It is reported that some fellow has figured out that a college education does not pay because he has never known a fellow with a college education successful hold up a bank and rob it, except once. That is a mighty good recommendation for higher education from the standpoint of good citizenship.

It is reported that one graduate undertook to dot down all of the advice that was given him, and it took exactly 1,000 sheets of letters sized paper to enter the advice.

It is reported that it always pays to stop to think, provided you are not in the middle of the street.

OPINIONS

RELIGIOUS SNÖBBERY

A week ago we discussed the prevalent evil of religious intolerance. It has come down through all the ages from the time when Paul and John and other disciples of Jesus Christ were bitterly persecuted because they preached a new doctrine of salvation by grace instead of by law. Jewish leaders, after they had crucified the Saviour, were incensed by the activity of the Nazarene's followers, who persisted in declaring him to be the Son of God, and of working mighty miracles of healing in his name; and all manner of atrocities, including the brutal murder of many Christians, were committed by the Pharisees and Sadducees in their zeal for the suppression of such heresies.

But religious intolerance is not the only evil that has come down through the years to the present day. Peter and John and other disciples continued to preach the gospel of salvation through Jesus Christ, and were led by the Holy Spirit to go into communities of the Gentiles with their messages; and this surprised and disappointed even their own Jewish followers, who had always been taught to believe that the Jews were God's own and only people and that the Gentiles were unworthy, the very scum of the earth. The Gentiles, too, were surprised, for they were well aware of the age-old attitude of Jews, and could hardly believe their ears when they heard a message of love and brotherly sympathy from Jewish lips. The woman of Samaria whom Jesus met at the well, expressed such surprise, and wanted to know, "How is it that, as a Jew, you drink of the water of a woman of Samaria?" The story of the good Samaritan was given by the Master for the very purpose of showing the folly and unrighteousness of the Jewish racial and religious prejudices.

We of this day readily agree with Peter that "God is no respecter of persons," but in every nation, he that saveth him and worketh righteousness, is accepted. "With him," that is to say, we give our assent to this proposition; but do we go any further? There are men and women in this community who would be as surprised as was the woman of Samaria if some of our leading Christians would go to them, extended the hand of fellowship and sympathy, and speak to them about the gospel of Jesus Christ. There are many here who have no intolerance toward the religious views of others, but who either do not care whether others have any religious views, or are unwilling because of social barriers to undertake association with them on a basis of spiritual equality. Our nation is founded upon the theory that all men are created free and equal, but many of us apparently believe that freedom is sufficient without actual equality. We have social snobs, and religious snobs; and yet all of us subscribe to the doctrine of the brotherhood of man, and the fatherhood of God. When a man sees himself as God sees him, lost in sin, and utterly hopeless except by the grace of the Father through Jesus Christ the Saviour, then all the flimsy barriers erected by worldliness are swept away, and he is able to see his fellow man, as his brother; and there comes the yearning desire to share with him the glories of salvation, even as it came to Peter and John when they bore witness of Jesus in the Gentile cities of ancient Palestine.—Brownwood Bulletin.

A QUEER SERVICE

BY MILTON BRONNER NEA Service Writer

LONDON, June 7.—A strange advertisement recently appeared in some of the London papers. It read like this:

If you want sympathy, advisory friendly discussion, warning or help, ring up East 6545 and ask for The Servant. Only condition—don't offer remuneration. I called up East 6545, asked for The Servant, and made an appointment to visit him. I was met by a tall, well-built, keen-eyed clergyman whose dark beard was growing gray. He led me into his living room—a room built for use and not for ornament. I told my host my real mission was to find out about The Servant and how he worked and why. "I am the pastor of the church next door," he said. "Many years ago, when I was a young clergyman in St. Paul's cathedral, I saw them piling up their arms so high on the offertory plate that the priest could not lift it to the altar. And above the altar was a statue of the Christ—with hands empty of all except the nails with which they crucified him. "It set me thinking. It here in upon me that nowadays the Church and the Purse are too closely welded together. I went home and read the New Testament all over again and there I noticed a curious thing I had not noted before. Jesus never had anything to do with money. He never seems to have had any upon his person. He never seems to have handled it. "That's what in my humble way I have tried to do—I have tried to do something that can't be done with money or even with mere preaching. Rich and poor, mighty and lowly, Jew and Gentile, come here to consult me. They do not know my name. I do not ask theirs. They are men and women in trouble about which they will not consult their own relations, nor their friends, nor their lawyer, nor their banker. "The only subjects I bar are financial matters and unemployment. I insist my advice must be free and unreserved, save by the knowledge that I am trying to do some good. It is a mission of some service in which I try to give something that money cannot buy and that shortly cannot achieve. "Very reluctantly he gave me his name—G. D. Shenton.

PUTTING IT TO THE TEST:

Butter and eggs are sustaining much of the rural population of Dawson County at the present time. All the money from last year's bumper cotton crop has been practically spent. But there is a daily increment from the sale of cream and eggs and fryers.

The editor of The Journal knows several families who are "getting by" on eggs, cream and chickens. And many of them now wish that they had additional chickens and cows.

They have found out that they can live without cotton—especially when cotton is low in price. And people have turned to poultry and cows with a vim.

Everybody is scanning the heavens daily for rain. It has not yet come in sufficient quantity to warrant the belief we shall get a cotton crop. But few doubt that we shall obtain sufficient moisture to make a good feed crop. If this can be done and farmers will improve the grade of their cows and produce more chickens and eggs they may be assured that they can pull through this year of light precipitation.

The trouble with our farmers has been that they have all along contended that as side lines and cotton as the main and dependable crop. But they have discovered that their wives who have tended to the cows and chickens now are the financiers of their little farm domains.—Dawson County Journal.

Since the rains have started, and there is yet plenty of time to make nearly any kind of crop in this section, it may not be necessary to resort to the strict development of the industries mentioned by the Journal, but it is possibly one of the very best things that can happen to folks some time to put them to test. It is an old adage that necessity is the mother of invention, and necessity very often puts an end to thinking, and brings good results out of what we had figured would be disasters.

Your Health

BY DR. MORRIS FISHER

Editor Journal of the American Medical Association and of Mygia, the Health Magazine

One of the most common industrial poisons is carbon disulphide, used in the manufacture of this rubber articles, artificial silk and in the preparation of cellulose.

When this substance is taken into the body, it seems to have a particular effect on the nerve tissues, so that the patients become paralyzed, sometimes show symptoms of insanity, and sometimes blindness due to its action on the optic nerve.

It will be remembered that wood alcohol seems also to have a special affinity for the optic nerve, and that it also produces blindness.

Illuminating gas contains another important poison, carbon monoxide, which is responsible for sudden death when it is inhaled from the exhaust of motor cars in a closed garage. In 1922 an investigator announced that he had discovered changes in the brain following poisoning with carbon monoxide and recently numerous instances have been described in which such poisonings have resulted in serious disturbances of the brain.

In addition to mental disturbances, this poison may also result in blindness and in producing changes of great seriousness in the blood.

It would be possible to list dozens of other poisons which produce serious changes in the body when they are taken in. They include all of the combinations of the coal tar derivatives, many of the poisons developed in the war industry, particularly in the manufacture of powder and benzene and its derivatives.

Benzene causes dangerous changes in the blood, and it is a question whether any system of ventilation can possibly control the fumes of benzene. A committee appointed to investigate the use of benzene in industry recommended that some substitute be had for it whenever possible.

CHOOSE OWN REWARD

AMSTERDAM.—A Dutch spy and his wife found a reward returned a 170,000 string of pearls recently, were asked by the insurance company to name their own reward. Their choice was a horse, a new wagon, and a new scissors grinding machine.

TREES AS FORECASTERS

TUCSON, Ariz.—Climatic cycles of variations in the weather are recorded in the trunks of trees. Dr. A. E. Douglas, astronomy professor at the University of Arizona, says, by "reading" the rings in trees he has been able to make a general forecast of the weather for years to come.

WAGES FROM SON

VIRGINIA, Minn.—Turned out of her son's home on his farm, a 67-year-old mother brought suit here against him for wages for her housework. She testified he had promised to keep her for the rest of her life. She was awarded $1000 of the $2500 she asked.

Today's Poems

THE ANT

I know that Scripture reading folk Will pluckly decant Upon the wearer of a yoke— The patient, laboring ant. Inevitably they sing his praise. They find him in the skies— And bid us imitate his ways. And thus learn to be wise. I've studied ants for many a year, I've watched them plod along About their work and much I fear These goodly folk are wrong— He has no real, he has no fan. No ornaments of dignity He labors from the rim of sun Until it sets at night. And to what end? A paltry queen

THE ANT

That mother all his brood Hides in a hole, with regal mien And bids him bring her food. And so he toils from morn till night— The poor not dreaming all day long Of the power of his gait, nor of his weight. While she grows fat and sleek, The bee will loaf upon the job— No toiling slave is he. He sits and feeds his young— Another feathered brood. The poor not dreaming all day long Of the power of his gait, nor of his weight. And if that may be called love, I'll say it's a good one. —James J. Montague

Bussey Joins The "Hole-in-1" Group

Texas Tech's first all-college golf champion, Clifton Bussey, joined the national "hole-in-one" golf association yesterday afternoon taking the initial ceremonial steps for the organization yesterday at the municipal course. Clifton used a maulie iron on the tee for hole number 1. The ball hit short of the green and roled to the cup, holding that.

At the time of the shot he was playing with other local golf enthusiasts including Sam Weaver, Jess Lockhart, D. A. Dowell and James Allen.

Bussey is a sophomore of Texas Tech and is studying engineering. He recently won the first all-college golf tournament that was held here early in April. Numerous times he has parred the municipal course and several times has shot the country club course in par.

CHITERS MIDAS

THIS HAS HAPPENED
T. Q. CURTIS, millionaire department store owner, takes BILLY WELLS, NYDA LOMAX and WINNIE SHELTON from his store and places them in his home for one year, because he wants to help further ambitions which he expressed. Billy, who is the only one that is serious, is the only one to enjoy his generosity.

Billy is infatuated with DAL BONAINE, nephew of Mrs. Meadows, their hostess. She is harassed by the fact that he is "playing" both her and Winnie Shelton.

Through everything she loves CLAY CURTIS, son of her benefactor, who has disinherited himself and is living with Billy's mother in the poor part of town, working in a factory by day and writing music at night.

Unknown to T. Q. the girls learn he intends to adopt one of them when the year is up. Nyda and Winnie institute a series of intrigues to gain his affection.

Billy loses interest in her violin and finally has a breakdown. T. Q. begins to question the wisdom of his philanthropic experiment when he finds that Nyda, for whom he has fitted a model kindergarten room in order to help her with her work, is not interested and is careless and unkind with the children under her care.

Believing the girls need a change, he takes them to Europe for several months. Upon their return, they find the town in an upheaval over a Hindu fortune teller. All three girls are told amazingly intimate things by the strange man. RALPH TRUMAN, a friend, says he believes the Hindu has an accomplice.

When Nyda appeared in the doorway of the library her ravaged face more than supported her contention that she had been suffering from a violent headache since the evening before. T. Q. Curtis was visibly shocked by her appearance.

"I hope you will forgive me for having routed you from your bed, my dear," he went to her and held her hand with a tender tenderness. "You look like a very sick girl. I'm sorry."

"I'm just used to a headache," Nyda moaned, drooping against his shoulder.

"I won't keep you long, my dear," T. Q. assured her. "Mrs. Meadows, it distresses me beyond words to have to do what I am about to do, but I am sure you will understand and forgive me, when you know the necessity for it."

As briefly as possible he told them the story of the robbery. He did not mention Billy's name, and he had gravely put his question to each of the other two women.

"Mrs. Meadows, have you any information of any kind—whatever that would have any bearing on this distressing occurrence?" he asked.

"I have not," Mrs. Meadows answered smoothly, without indignation. "I was in my room all evening, writing letters and reading. I saw nothing, heard nothing whatever. I am sorry I cannot help, Mr. Curtis."

"Nyda," T. Q. turned to the sick girl.

"Mr. Curtis, I didn't have anything to do with the robbery," Nyda cried, holding her head between her long, slim hands. "I did hear someone moving about; but before I could get to the door, I was too ill to care who it was or to think anything about it."

"Why, Nyda, I thought you were much better when I took you back to you," Billy protested.

"My book," Nyda's face was a study of pain and astonishment. "I don't know what you're talking about, Billy."

"You must be mad with a headache if you've forgotten that you sent me down to the library to get a grammar book for you so that you could study for a quiz today," Billy retorted hotly.

"I did not send you for a book," Nyda contradicted her flatly. "I was far too sick with a headache to study last night, and you know it."

"Billy, my dear child, Nyda has accused you of nothing more serious than a misstatement of fact. I think it quite possible that Nyda's head is aching so frantically that she cannot remember last night's events distinctly."

"His eyes opened wider than was their wont and gazed into the eyes of the light went out of Billy and died. He understood what T. Q. was trying to tell her; that no one but him and Savers knew that there was a saved of evidence against her."

She ran straight to him, and flung her arms about his neck.

"What are you going to do for me, Billy?" asked, fearfully.

"I'm going to get on Eddie Banning's trail, and I'm not going to lose any time. I'll keep in touch with you, as much as possible. But you're not to worry. Goodbye, honey. I'll send Ralph to you. I've got to get into street clothes and be out of here in ten minutes. Goodbye again. And he stooped and kissed her on the lips.

Clay is not long in clearing up the mystery. Read the next chapter.

There was nothing said between them about forgiveness. Their last furious parting was not mentioned, apparently not even remembered. He sat down at last, after he had triumphantly forced her into a chair drawn close to his.

She told her story in a jerky, sub-tonic voice, while his hands gripped hers. He did not interrupt her once.

"You don't believe I stole from your father, do you, Clay?" she begged at last.

"Don't be a damned little idiot!" he scolded her tenderly. "You're pretty sure it was Eddie Banning you saw last night, leaving Nyda's room?"

"I can't be sure, since it was dark, but it was Eddie before. And I've told you how he's been tormenting Nyda for months—ever since we went to live with your father. And I know it was Eddie's voice that I heard quarrelling with Nyda that night."

"But what can I do, Clay?" she was becoming hysterical again. "I've told you why I can't go to T. Q. and tell him the truth, or as much of it as I know and suspect."

"You're going home and act as if no thing has happened—if that is possible," he commanded her almost sternly. "Dad has said he wouldn't call in the police. Just keep your head up, and act as innocent as you really are. Don't row with Nyda. The rest is up to me."

"Thank you, Ralph. I'll be there as soon as possible."

"But for once his favorite of the 'Cinderella girls' had no gay, impudent come-back. Billy pushed into a corner at the back of the car, her eyes closed, tears slipping slowly down her white cheeks. Kelly took one good look at her, visited softly then stepped hard upon the accelerator as the car whirled into the street.

Ralph was waiting for her outside the door of the main office building. He, too, needed only one look at her drawn, pale face to see that the situation was serious.

"Clay's waiting for you, honey," he told her tenderly, as he took her arm to lead her to the pretty little white stucco building that housed the library. "Count on me to the end of my kingdom—or all of it, if you need it."

He left her at the door of the library, a certain delicacy restraining him from addressing that meeting. Clay, in overalls, his face streaked with grease, was standing at a table, waiting for her, his black eyes frowning and puzzled. "That there was no joy in his eyes at the prospect of seeing her again hurt her appallingly. Driven by an impulse which she could not control, she ran straight to him, and flung her arms about his neck.

"What are you going to do for me, Billy?" asked, fearfully.

"I'm going to get on Eddie Banning's trail, and I'm not going to lose any time. I'll keep in touch with you, as much as possible. But you're not to worry. Goodbye, honey. I'll send Ralph to you. I've got to get into street clothes and be out of here in ten minutes. Goodbye again. And he stooped and kissed her on the lips.

Clay is not long in clearing up the mystery. Read the next chapter.

There was nothing said between them about forgiveness. Their last furious parting was not mentioned, apparently not even remembered. He sat down at last, after he had triumphantly forced her into a chair drawn close to his.

She told her story in a jerky, sub-tonic voice, while his hands gripped hers. He did not interrupt her once.

"You don't believe I stole from your father, do you, Clay?" she begged at last.

"Don't be a damned little idiot!" he scolded her tenderly. "You're pretty sure it was Eddie Banning you saw last night, leaving Nyda's room?"

"I can't be sure, since it was dark, but it was Eddie before. And I've told you how he's been tormenting Nyda for months—ever since we went to live with your father. And I know it was Eddie's voice that I heard quarrelling with Nyda that night."

"But what can I do, Clay?" she was becoming hysterical again. "I've told you why I can't go to T. Q. and tell him the truth, or as much of it as I know and suspect."

"You're going home and act as if no thing has happened—if that is possible," he commanded her almost sternly. "Dad has said he wouldn't call in the police. Just keep your head up, and act as innocent as you really are. Don't row with Nyda. The rest is up to me."

Service Men Aid In Courtesy Work

The service stations of Lubbock and the Chamber of Commerce are cooperating splendidly in carrying out the idea of the courtesy campaign inaugurated several days ago," says Mrs. Jewell Hall, secretary.

Service station owners were eager to furnish all information available for the convenience of tourists. The Chamber of Commerce receives daily calls regarding routes and the condition of roads.

An increased number of tourists are now passing through Lubbock. Many of them call at the office of the Chamber of Commerce for proper routing, and most of the motorists express appreciation for the courtesy shown them in Lubbock.

In addition to the wholesome interest, many business enterprises are seeking information regarding the advantages of Lubbock. Each day data is being furnished prospective citizens of every profession.

LOCKNEY WHEAT OUTPUT IS HEAVY

Forty-two cars shipped so far with harvest now only begun

LOCKNEY, June 7.—According to local grain men, there has been 42 cars of wheat shipped out of Lockney and Abilene, six miles west of Lockney, today and the harvest has barely begun.

On June 5, approximately 80,000 bushels of wheat were shipped out of Floyd county on one train.

According to government tests the wheat is practically all test number 1, dark hard and with a high protein content.

The wheat crop in this county has come on and grown to maturity on a moisture that was already in the ground, as the last moisture of note was a snow in the latter part of December. The wheat that was lying that the air police on Tempelhofer coming tower had sighted the Columbia. Eager eyes in thousands of cases aided by powerful binoculars, were strained to the eastward, where, in the blue late-afternoon sky small specks became visible. Nearer and nearer they approached; bigger and bigger they grew, until even the naked eye could distinguish between the monoplane and the bi-plane and pick out the yellow winged Columbia from the rest.

Cheers Greet Bellanca As the American, with its honor guard of German planes, mechanical staff and crew, Tempelhofer field, the crowd broke into wild cheers waving American and German flags, clapping hands and throwing hats in the air.

Amid deafening hurrahs and cheers, the trans-Atlantic fliers stepped out of the machine. The American Ambassador Jacob Gould Schurman, warmly clasped their hands. Then the German minister of commerce, Herr Curtius, who especially dwelt on the cultural value of the Columbia's expedition, thanked the aviators for "placing this new boundary mark of human ability on German soil."

There were lusty cheers after each speech, then a chorus of voices from the crowd standing on tables, chairs and fences to look over the policemen's heads yelling insistently: "Hoch Heben. Hoch Heben!" "Lift high"—which as the sound increased in volume was finally "Heiden and Chamberlain" in place of a fashion and Levter, more modern, were borne aloft by Luftwaffe officials. These, however, soon gave signs of strain, and on their shoulders the aviators seemed to sit as on a rocking horse, that the more powerful police had to restrain them.

Three violators of the traffic regulations paid fines in police court yesterday. J. C. Kellar, state highway inspector, returned Monday from Lubbock and Bailey counties where he has been at work for the past ten days. He reported 41 arrests and 23 complaints filed in the week's time spent there.

benefits which will be derived from it, committee men said. The petition as prepared and which will be presented to the citizens for approval today reads: "THE STATE OF TEXAS COUNTY OF LUBBOCK TO THE COMMISSIONERS COURT OF LUBBOCK COUNTY: We the undersigned resident property tax paying citizens of the County of Lubbock, and State of Texas, hereby petition your honorable body to order an election as provided by the general laws of the State of Texas and more particularly under the provisions of article 21 chapter 3 of the revised civil statutes of 1925, to determine whether or not the county-wide bond of Lubbock County, Texas, shall be issued in the sum of one million dollars and a tax shall be annually levied and assessed on all taxable property subject to taxation in said County as provided by law to pay, interest, and create a sinking fund to pay off said interest and bonds as same mature for the purposes of constructing, maintaining and operating macadamized, graveled, or paved road and turnpike or in aid thereof in Lubbock County, Texas, on the following road and Highways to wit: State Highway No. 7 entirely thru Lubbock County; State Highway No. 54 entirely through Lubbock County, and State Highway No. 9 from Lubbock North to the Lubbock-Hale County line, and to build any other highway or roads in Lubbock County, with said money if there be sufficient funds remaining after the satisfaction of the road named above.

Revival Meeting Drawing Crowds The revival meeting which is being held at the tent on Avenue L and 13th Street, continues with growing interest, according to R. L. McCutcheon, pastor of Southside Missionary Baptist church, who is in charge. A number of conversions and additions to the church have been made during the meeting and the grounds are resplendent with the banners of Rev. Hayward, the evangelist. A feature of the revival is the song service. A cordial invitation is extended to the public to attend.

On the whole, the scheme is almost as it is in the United States. The Republicans or the Democrats permanent control of the Senate, regardless of how the country voted on membership of the House of Representatives.

Will Increase Hatred It's a kind of insurance for the Tories against the Labor-Socialists. The proposal is certain to draw more oil in the flames of class hatred already fanned by the "regulation" of trades unions.

tion of power and much of it is duplication. In centralization, there seems to be no definite thought of coordination. I just want you to remember that every duplication and addition means spending $2 where only $1 possibly should have been spent. "Reluctance to centralize in public affairs certainly is one principle of the fathers that we ought to stick to." Extends Thanks Emphatic on his gratitude for legislative cooperation, Moody referred especially to the fact that members "serve here on pay that doesn't meet expenses." "I think the time will come," the governor said, "when the people will realize that they pay at least parallel with expenses is conducive to better attention to public affairs. A man cannot be expected to give his highest talents to public service when forced continually to consider his own private interests which may need attention." Moody was invited to address the house in a resolution. He was presented by Representative Tom D. Berry of Bogata.
