Pope observes 61st birthday

ROME (AP) — Pope John Paul II was moved from the intensive care unit to a general care hospital room today, his 61st birthday. In St. Peter's Basilica, 31 cardinals led prayers in a special birthday Mass for the pope, wounded five days ago.

Doctors said the pontiff had a restful night and woke up feeling well although running a slight fever.

"We are steadily approaching the time when we will be able to say there's no longer any danger of infection," said the chief of medical staff at the pope's hospital, according to the Italian news agency AGI. "This moment is linked to a number of factors, above all, the disappearance of fever," Dr. Emilio Tresalti was quoted as saying.

The pope will be watched around the clock, hospital sources said.

His new, 11th story room at Gemelli Policlinico Hospital has an image of the black Madonna of Czestochowa, the most famous icon of Poland. The pope was born as Karol Wojtyla on May 18, 1920, at Wadowice, near Krakow, Poland.

Six rooms were set aside for the pope, his private secretaries, doctors, nurses and Vatican officials and visitors. The pope's room has a window with a view of the magnificent dome of St. Peter's Basilica.

Vatican officials said the pope's announcement Sunday that he had "sincerely pardoned" his assailant would not affect the criminal proceedings against the young Turkish man charged with shooting the pope. The pope's remarks, in a tape-recorded message played by loudspeaker to a crowd in St. Peter's Square, touched off inquiries to newspapers asking if that meant the suspect would be released.

Vatican spokesman, the Rev. Romeo Panciroli, said the pope's doctors were inviting foreign doctors to Rome for consultations. "In view of the great interest expressed the world over for the pontiff's health ... they are inviting as consultants some foreign colleagues of clear fame." No names were given.

As the white-and-yellow Vatican flag fluttered outside in celebration, Cardinal Carlo Confalonieri, 87-year-old dean of the College of Cardinals, led a crowd of 6,000 in a birthday Mass in the basilica, the largest church in Christendom.

The pontiff's fellow patients planned to attend a second Mass for the same purpose late this afternoon in a chapel in Rome's Gemelli Policlinico Hospital.

In his intensive care room, the pontiff rose from his bed and sat in an armchair Sunday for the first time since a gunman pumped at least two bullets into him Wednesday in St. Peter's Square, hospital officials said. Wearing a white stole over his hospital gown, he celebrated Mass.

But a medical bulletin this morning said the pontiff was still running a slight fever, with his temperature oscillating around 100.4 degrees.

In a brief, tape-recorded message broadcast by loudspeaker at noon Sunday to 15,000 people in the cobblestoned square, and by radio to millions more in Italy and abroad, the pope said he had pardoned his attacker.

"I pray for that brother of ours who shot me, and whom I have sincerely pardoned," the pontiff said in a slightly slurred but steady voice.

Mehmet Ali Agca, the 23-year-old Turk charged with shooting the pope, remained under heavy guard in Rome's police headquarters. In New York, the Turkish ambassador to the United States, Sukru Elegdad, described Agca as a hired killer for an international right-wing group.

Agca has insisted that he acted alone, but Italian police believe someone helped him escape from a Turkish jail in 1979 and travel through half a dozen European countries before the shooting.

"Certainly he had financial help. But it is possible he decided to shoot the pope on his own," said an anti-terrorist police official, who asked to remain anonymous.

Police said they believed that Agca fired two bullets Wednesday, instead of three as previously reported.

Reagan returns as 'the Gipper'

President Reagan and actor Pat O'Brien embrace as they appeared together at the commencement exercises at Notre Dame University. The appeared together in the movie "Knute Rockne, All American" in 1940 and Sunday each received honorary degrees.

SOUTH BEND, Ind. (AP) — Greeted warmly as "the Gipper" but protected heavily as the president, Ronald Reagan was back at Notre Dame reminiscing about the role that gave him his big break in pictures and reciting the themes that carried him to the White House.

Nostalgia marked the day and extremely tight security surrounded the president Sunday as Reagan chose the university's 136th commencement for his first public appearance outside Washington since he was shot in an assassination attempt seven weeks ago today. The trip lasted slightly more than six hours, ending back in Washington before dark.

For Reagan, it was a return to the campus that he has said "has a very secure place in my heart."

It was in South Bend that the Notre Dame football legend of Knute Rockne and George Gipp grew — a legend that, back in 1940, was to be the turning point of Reagan's movie career.

The president, wearing a protective vest beneath his academic robe, shared a platform at the Notre Dame Athletic and Convocation Center Arena with Pat O'Brien, who in the movie "Knute Rockne — All-American" played Rockne, the coach to Reagan's Gipp, the halfback who died of pneumonia.

Also on the platform were U.N. Secretary-General Kurt Waldheim; former Secretary of State Edmund S. Muskie, who instead of an honorary degree received a special university medal; Jersualem Mayor Teddy Kolek and at least one black-gowned Secret Service agent.

"If I don't watch out, this may turn out to be less a commencement than a warm bath in nostalgic memories," Reagan said.

"Win one for the Gipper," he said at one point, weaving into his speech the most famous line from his 56 movies.

Reagan, playing Gipp on his deathbed, told his coach: "Someday, when things are tough, maybe you can ask the boys to go in there and win just once for the Gipper." The coach, eight years later with his Notre Dame team on the verge of defeat at the hands of Army, brought the players to life by calling on them at halftime to "win one for the Gipper." And they did.

After O'Brien, whom Reagan had not seen since taking office, received his honorary degree, Reagan gave the 81-year-old actor a presidential bear hug.

Reagan's citation for an honorary doctor of law degree said in part: "His vision now, as then, (when he was governor of California) has a simplicity about it....He asks direct questions. Can we have better government but less government?...He invites us to share the greater role in creating the future out of the best of the past."

The athletic center, which seats 12,500, was filled with 1,977 graduates, parents, friends and members of the academic community. Metal detectors were used to make sure no one brought in weapons.

Security precautions also forced the graduates to abandon a campus tradition of bringing firecrackers and champagne to the ceremony. The popping of corks and firecrackers sounds too much like pistols.

President's tactics remind congressmen of LBJ

WASHINGTON (AP) — The tactics President Reagan used to woo Democrats over to his side in the budget battle remind many congressmen of former President Lyndon Johnson.

"The personal contact the president made and the powers of persuasion he used in encouraging the House to adopt the Gramm-Latta substitute were reminiscent of the type of lobbying the late President Lyndon Johnson perfected to an art," said Rep. Richard White of El Paso.

"The Reagan team's effort is reflected in the overwhelming vote on the measure, which passed by a 253-176 margin," said White, one of 63 Democrats who supported the bipartisan bill of cosponsored by Rep. Phil Gramm of College Station.

The president invited to the White House for a personal visit just about every Democrat who was considered a possible "aye" vote on his first major legislative test.

He bestowed on them presidential box seats in the Kennedy Center for the Performing Arts and presidential cufflinks — plus the personal attention that flattered their egos.

Rep. Jake Pickle of Austin, who represents the same Central Texas district that first sent LBJ to Washington, smiled at the comparison.

"That sounds a lot like the way he (Johnson) used to operate," recalled Pickle, a former LBJ staffer and close friend who was involved in every campaign Johnson ever made.

Rep. Kent Hance of Lubbock got a personal visit with Reagan and received the cufflinks and the Kennedy Center tickets. But that wasn't all.

Hance failed to win approval in a Ways and Means subcommittee of an administration-backed bill pertaining to unemployment benefits, but Reagan was grateful for his efforts and found a way to show it.

A day or two after the committee meeting, Hance accompanied Rep. Charles Stenholm of Stamford, on a trip to West Texas with Energy Secretary James Edwards.

Edwards visited a solar energy project with them at Crosbyton before going to Midland — in Hance's district — for a noon speech, which Hance also attended.

Edwards said during his speech that he had talked with the president that very morning and that the president had mentioned how he considered Hance one of the best members of Congress.

"I knew what he (Reagan) was doing," Hance said later of the roses thrown his way by Edwards, "but I still liked it."

Pickle nodded when he was asked if that sounded like LBJ.

"He was good at it," Pickle said of LBJ.

However, LBJ didn't win all his battles and Reagan likely won't either.

Spring clean-up campaign gets under way in Midland

Sanitation trucks rolling out of the city garage this morning signaled the start of the spring clean-up campaign.

Sponsored jointly by the Midland Chamber of Commerce and the city of Midland, the campaign is being spearheaded toward cleaning out the large amount of trash in south and east Midland.

The city has been divided into eight sections. Two days have been allotted for each section in south Midland and another two days for an area in east Midland. Spotlighted today and Tuesday is Area 1, which runs from Fairgrounds Road to Big Spring Street, south of Cuthbert Avenue.

On Wednesday and Thursday, the campaign will be focused on Area 2, which is north of Cuthbert Avenue and is bounded by Big Spring Street and Fairgrounds Road.

The chamber noted that the areas which have been allotted two days for pickup had high volumes of material to collect during the first clean-up campaign last fall.

Residents in any of the areas with large amounts of trash or large items that need to be collected are request-

William Saroyan dies

FRESNO, Calif. (AP) — Author William Saroyan, whose stories probed the mysteries of living, dying and uniqueness of individuals, died today of cancer at the age of 72.

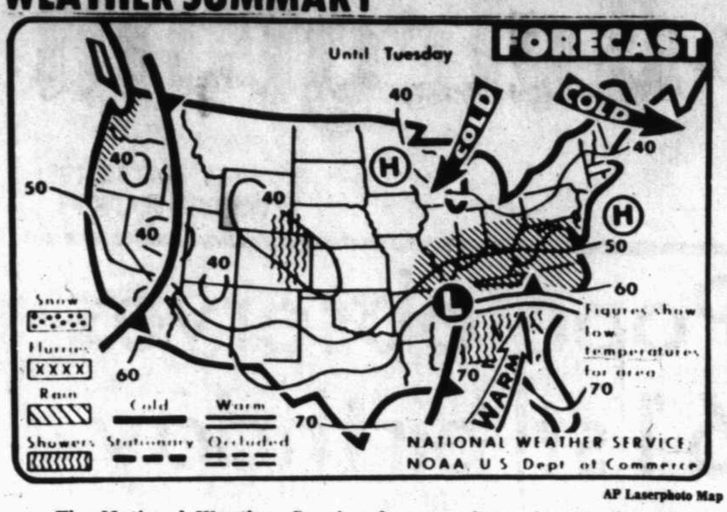

Saroyan had been hospitalized since collapsing at his home here April 20.

Saroyan won the 1940 Pulitzer Prize for his most famous play, "The Time of Your Life," but rejected the $1,500 award because he felt wealth or commerce should not patronize art.

Saroyan's writings, most of them autobiographical, include numerous short stories and the books "My Name Is Aram" and "The Human Comedy." The latter detailed the alternating sad and happy experiences of a young telegraph messenger growing up in mythical Ithaca, Calif., during World War II.

He was twice married to and divorced from Carol Marcus, debutante daughter of a Bendix Corp. executive. They had two children, a son, Aram, who becamse a writer, and a daughter, Lucy.

Texas area forecasts

West Texas: Mostly fair through Tuesday except partly cloudy with widely scattered showers or thunderstorms northeast Panhandle through tonight. Cooler today. Highs 70s north to near 100 Big Bend. Lows 40s north and mountains to mid 60s Big Bend. Highs Tuesday 60s north to 90s southwest.

North Texas: Scattered thunderstorms, a few possibly severe east today. Fair and cooler west. Fair and cooler tonight and Tuesday. Highs 80 northwest to 91 southeast. Lows 49 northwest to 62 southeast. Highs Tuesday 74 northwest to 81 southeast.

Wind to subside

The weekend's gusts of dust may subside — or at least slow down — on Tuesday as southeasterly winds become a mild 10-15 mph Tuesday for the first time in days, according to the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Airport.

Generally, the weather should be fair through Tuesday, with no important temperature changes.

Winds will be easterly to northeasterly tonight at 5-10 mph, with a low temperature expected in the mid-50s.

Tuesday's high temperature should climb to the mid-80s.

This morning's low was 52 degrees. The record low for the date was set in 1967 at 45 degrees.

Sunday's high was 88 degrees — nine degrees shy of the 1978 record all-time high for May 17 of 97 degrees.

Vets may find Agent Orange troops

WASHINGTON (AP) — Veterans representatives say that if the government can't identify which troops were exposed to Agent Orange in Vietnam, it should allow veterans groups to try to find them.

"Veterans still want answers on whether Agent Orange caused illnesses," said Lewis Milford, director of the National Veterans Law Center, which spent years trying to interest the government into investigating the consequences of the spraying of Agent Orange.

"If the government says that they can't come up with a group of ground troops that were exposed, they had better let veterans and their scientists take a look at the records to see if that is so," Milford said.

He spoke after a panel of government scientists said the Pentagon can't determine which soldiers were exposed to Agent Orange and recommended a broader study of whether the herbicide or anything else in that country's environment harmed the Americans' health.

The government wanted to identify which military units entered areas that were doused by the herbicide. But the scientists, in a recent report to the White House, said Pentagon records are so incomplete that experts have been unable to establish the amount of exposure by any particular group of soldiers.

"The panel is of the opinion that design of a scientifically valid Herbicide Orange study of ground troops may not be possible," said panel chairman John A. Moore, who also is associate program director of the National Institute of Environmental Health Sciences.

"If the focus of a study of Vietnam veterans is broadened to consider Vietnam service as the exposure factor ... a scientifically valid study can be designed," said Moore, who signed the panel's report.

He suggested that the broader study look at the health effects of all the herbicides, insecticides, drugs and poisonous fungi that soldiers may have encountered in Vietnam.

Representatives of veterans groups say they are wary of a more generalized study.

Agent Orange contains the contaminant dioxin, one of the most deadly poisons in existence. Twelve million gallons of the herbicide were used in Vietnam to destroy crops and reveal communist troops' jungle hiding places.

Thousands of returned veterans have complained of disabling and life-threatening illnesses which they attribute to exposure to Agent Orange.

Some 45,000 veterans have taken Agent Orange examinations at Veterans Administration hospitals. The VA says it has no evidence pointing to the defoliant as the cause of any ailment suffered by former Vietnam troops.

Moore, the chairman of the scientific panel of the government's Interagency Work Group to Study the Possible Long-Term Effects of Phenoxy Herbicides and Contaminants, said there is "at best a remote chance of accurate identification" of troops who were exposed to Agent Orange.

Moore said any study of ground troops will require two to five years "for an initial result."

A bill passed by Congress last year directed the VA to conduct an Agent Orange study, but the VA's chief Agent Orange official, Dr. Barclay Shepard, said the investigation could be broadened.

A week ago, the VA awarded a $114,288 contract to UCLA researchers to design a scientific study. Shepard said the UCLA team will decide whether an Agent Orange study can be done or whether only a broader study is possible.

A bill to broaden the Agent Orange study has been approved by the House Veterans Affairs Committee.

Moore testified in support of that move, listed the variety of disorders that servicemen link to Agent Orange and said, "As a toxicologist, it is difficult to accept logically that a single causative factor — Herbicide Orange — could be responsible for all of these health effects."

Vet who shot up hospital found dead in his home

CALABASAS, Calif. (AP) — James Hopkins, a Vietnam veteran who two months ago crashed a jeep into the lobby of the Veterans Administration Hospital in West Los Angeles and fired off several guns, was found dead in his home at a trailer park Sunday, a sheriff's spokesman said.

Deputy Clyde French said sheriff's homicide investigators found an empty liquor bottle and pill bottle on a table next to the bed where the 32-year-old veteran was lying.

Hopkins' wife, Suzanne, called the Malibu sheriff's substation just before 3 p.m. after discovering his body in the mobile home at the Blue Duke Trailer Park on Las Virgenes Road, French said. He said it was not known how long Hopkins had been dead.

On March 14 Hopkins, wearing battle fatigues, drove a jeep through the doors of the VA facility in West Los Angeles and fired 14 shots from an M-14 rifle, a 12-gauge shotgun and a .45-caliber automatic pistol into lobby walls. He was also carrying two other handguns and had 100 rounds of ammunition.

No one was injured in the shooting.

Hopkins, who said he was deaf, claimed after the incident that he had been harmed by exposure to the chemical defoliant Agent Orange which was used during the Vietnam War. He charged that the Veterans Administration was ignoring his plight.

Hopkins was arraigned March 16 on charges of destruction of federal property and was released on $25,000 bail awaiting a July court appearance.

His wife had said after the hospital attack that Hopkins "was definitely mentally affected by the Vietnam War." She said he would "go out on maneuvers" when he was home alone, dressing up in camouflage and going into the hills.

Mrs. Hopkins said last March that her husband's problems with the VA dated back to 1974 when he underwent a psychiatric evaluation and was a patient for a time. In 1976, she said, VA doctors told Hopkins that his hearing had been impaired and would get worse. Then, for the second time, his records were lost.

Mrs. Hopkins said that his attack on the hospital came two days after the VA refused to authorize a form saying he was deaf so that he could get a typewriter telephone from the phone company.

After he underwent a required examination VA doctors still refused to sign the form, Mrs. Hopkins said. She said he became "quite upset" and said, "What do they think, I'm faking? Do they think I like this?"

ed to call the chamber of commerce, 683-3381, and leave their address with a description of the material to be picked up. If the chamber isn't notified, the items won't be collected, according to the sponsors.

The city is using extra refuse collection trucks in the clean-up areas to provide additional pickup on the Dumpsters. In addition, the city is bringing out a loader and two dump trucks to pick up the large items.

The schedule for the rest of the city after completion of Areas 1 and 2 is as follows:

Area 3: Garfield Street to Big Spring Street, north of Cuthbert Avenue; May 22.

Area 4: Garfield Street to Big Sping Street, south of Cuthbert Avenue; May 26-27.

Area 5: Midkiff Road and Garfield Street, south of Cuthbert Avenue; May 26-27.

Area 6: Midkiff Road and Garfield Street, north of Cuthbert Avenue; May 22.

Area 7: Holiday Hill Road to Midkiff Road, north of Cuthbert Avenue; May 28.

Area 8: Holiday Hill Road to Midkiff Road, south of Cuthbert Avenue; May 29 and June 1.

Robert Garwood finally free man

JACKSONVILLE, N.C. (AP) — For the first time since he was captured by the Viet Cong in 1965, Marine Pfc. Robert Garwood, is a free man.

"I have finally come home to America," Garwood, 35, said after a jury found him innocent of molesting a 7-year-old girl. "For the first time since I was 19 years old, I'm free."

Garwood gained national attention in February when a military jury found him guilty of collaborating with the enemy in Vietnam and hitting another prisoner of war. He was sentenced to a dishonorable discharge, demotion to the rank of private and forfeiture of $147,000 in back pay. He is on leave while he appeals the conviction.

After his court-martial he was charged with sexually molesting a young girl near here. He could have been sentenced to life in prison if convicted.

The 12-member jury acquitted Garwood Saturday of first-degree sex offense, attempted rape, attempted first-degree sex offense and taking indecent liberties with a child.

Joined by his fiancee, Donna Long, and his attorneys, Vaughan Taylor of Charlottesville, Va., and Edward Bailey of Jacksonville, the Indiana man was uncharacteristically talkative during an interview after the verdict.

"I want to thank everyone and everybody that has written letters to me and supported my family and me," he said. They've given me a lot of encouragement to keep on going.

"I fought so long and so hard," he said, tears spilling onto his cheeks. "God bless America. Thank you."

Mrs. Long, with whom Garwood has been living in Jacksonville, said, "Three times he fought for his life, once against the government of Vietnam, once against the government of the United States and once against the state."

In testimony last week, the girl, now 8, testified that Garwood took her out for an ice cream cone Aug. 7, drove her to a deserted road and fondled her, forced her to fondle him, tried to rape her and tried to make her have oral sex with him.

Defense attorneys rested their case Friday after presenting 13 witnesses, most of whom said Garwood was in Charlottesville, Va., during the time the incident allegedly took place in Onslow County.

He came to Odessa in 1943 from Limestone County. He was a member of the Central Baptist Church in Odessa.

Other survivors include a son, two daughters, three sisters, a brother, 11 grandchildren and eight great-grandchildren.

New phone books in; will be distributed by end of month

Tips for consumers and a glance at Texas history are offered in the 1981 telephone directory, to be distributed between now and the end of May to Midland customers.

Clay Styles, residence services center manager for Southwestern Bell, said one copy of the directory will be delivered to each residential phone customer.

Styles said 124,925 books are being printed, with 82,268 to be delivered to area residents by the end of the month.

The extra books, he explained, are for new customers moving to Midland throughout the year and for businesses and customers who need replacements.

The new 147-page directory features a painting on the cover by Austin artist and historian Bruce Marshall depicting early-day Texans who contributed to the state's history.

It also will feature a locator map to make it easier to locate businesses advertising in the yellow pages. The map provides a geographic overview of a metropolitan area divided into sections. Arrows in ads and listings will direct the customer to the appropriate map and approximate location.

"Distributing the new directories is a huge job," said Styles, "and will take several weeks to complete. We ask customers to be patient during this time and not call us until after several weeks if they do not receive new directories."

Odessa man dies in head-on crash

A 19-year-old Odessa man was killed late Saturday in a head-on collision in north Odessa, and a Lovington, N.M., man escaped serious injury early today when his vehicle overturned six times near Garden City.

Jeffery Wayne Hines was killed when the vehicle he was driving west on East University Boulevard in Odessa about 9:45 p.m. Saturday apparently went out of control and collided with an eastbound vehicle driven by Beverly Dawn Byers, 26, also of Odessa.

The woman and 9-year-old Michael Cody Byers were treated at Odessa's Medical Center Hospital, according to a Department of Public Safety spokesman.

James Ellis of Lovington reportedly suffered chest injuries and a broken leg about 12:45 a.m. today when his vehicle ran off Texas 158 about nine miles west of Garden City and overturned six times.

Investigating DPS trooper Woody Jackson of Midland indicated that Ellis was eastbound when his vehicle ran off the south side of the roadway and overturned.

Ellis was treated and released from Midland Memorial Hospital's emergency room.

Police check theft of big flag

The reported theft of a large American flag valued at $1,600 was being investigated by Midland police early today.

Dean Rhoden of 4013 W. Illinois Ave. reported the theft to police Sunday. The report indicated the flag was taken from a flagpole at the Executive Office Park, 4500 W. Illinois.

Marie Johnson of 1930 Hudson Avenue reported the theft of a 19-inch color television valued at $300. Police reports indicated that entry to her residence was gained through the rear door.

Three Midland juveniles were taken into custody by police Sunday on charges alleging criminal trespassing and child in need of supervision.

Reports indicated police were called to 1006 N. Terrell St. about 4 p.m. Sunday by Janie Perkins. The woman told police she had asked two girls — aged 15 and 16 — to leave her residence, but they had refused.

The two girls were taken into custody after a police officer had instructed them to leave the residence and they again had refused to do so, reports indicated.

Later police were called back to the scene and this time took a 16-year-old girl into custody.

Horse clinic set

STANTON — Midland veterinarian Dr. Robert Cobb will conduct a horse vaccination clinic at 5 p.m. Tuesday in the Kelly Arena here.

The clinic is open to horse owners in Martin County and neighboring counties, according to Rick Vestal, the Martin County agent for agriculture.

Vaccinations and other medication which may be administered at the clinic and their corresponding fees are equine encephalomyelitis, $10; tetanus, $7; rhino, $8; influenza, $7; rabies, $5; wormings, $10; floating teeth, $10.

The clinic is being sponsored by the Martin County 4-H Club and the Livestock Program Area Committee of the Martin County Program Building Process.

Police Roundup

Woman captured

DALLAS (AP) — A capital murder suspect who fled a hospital room clad only in a cotton gown Sunday was recaptured later in the day when a department store guard apprehended her for shoplifting, authorities said.

Renee Michelle Taylor was wearing a dress and high heels when she was turned over to Dallas County officers about 7:30 p.m., said sheriff's spokesman James Ewell.

Ms. Taylor, 30, had given birth to a baby boy three days earlier and had remained in Parkland Memorial Hospital for treatment of a kidney infection, Ewell said.

He said doctors indicated any remaining medical problems could be treated by the jail nursing staff, and she was taken to a solitary cell after her recapture.

Saving the children

Child abuse is a tragedy virtually beyond words. Yet for all its horrors, statistics sadly show that the incidence of child abuse is on the increase in Texas.

Last year alone the Department of Human Resources investigated more than 46,000 reported cases and 15,716 of them were found to be valid.

In fact, child abuse has become so prevalent that news oganizations report on numerous cases each year. It is no longer a minor problem, but rather one that society as a whole should address quickly in order to bring about a reduction in the number of cases.

The members of the Texas House of Representatives deserve commendation for their action in that regard. Recently they agreed to take $5 million from an air-conditioning program in order to replace cuts in the child welfare and protective services budget.

That money will result in the receipt of an additional $15 million in federal funds to enable caseworkers to investigate 10,000 more reported cases of child abuse.

Rep. Ted Lyon, D-Mesquite, summed up the situation appropriately when he noted, "The state of Texas can afford to sweat a little bit to take care of 10,000 children."

Of course, the appropriations bill is still to be considered in conference committee and the child abuse funds could still be cut again.

We hope they won't be. Children are crying out for our help. We should not turn a deaf ear to them.

B-1 flying high again

An updated version of the warplane that was shot down by President Carter appears to by flying high in the Reagan administration. It's the B-1, which the U.S. Air Force has long viewed as this country's bomber of the future.

The new B-1, it is reported, would look like the bomber that Carter canceled but would actually be vastly improved, incorporating some "stealth" technology for eluding Soviet radar coverage.

Pentagon sources say that Air Force generals are firmly behind the new B-1 and that it is expected the generals will be backed by Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger. President Reagan also is reported to be supportive of the new bomber.

Plans call for designating between $15 billion and $20 billion to build about 110 of the new B-1s, with the first squadron of 15 to be ready for duty by late 1986.

Defense experts cited the stealth features of the new warplane in rebuttal of Carter's contention that Soviet radar would make the B-1 an obsolete way to fire nuclear weapons at Russia. But they also stress that the new B-1 could defend Persian Gulf oil fields in a conventional war.

The United States has long needed a bomber to replace the oudated B-52 fleet. The updated B-1 could be the answer.

'Energy crisis' revealed U.S. drift toward socialism

Charley Reese

In "Petroleum Independent," the magazine of the independent oilmen, they publish statistics on oil production and consumption. These statistics show that despite oil embargo by the Arabs in 1973-74, U.S. oil imports have increased every year since 1972 through 1979.

In short, the Arab oil embargo did not result in a decrease of petroleum available to the U.S. As a matter of fact, the tables show that from 1972 to 1979 oil imports increased enough annually to offset the decline in domestic production and provide a net gain of about 800,000 barrels a day.

The same tables show that consumption did not increase more than supply. In fact, throughout the entire period, the U.S. continued to export about 220,000 barrels a day. During the same time frame, crude oil prices rose about 384 percent!

Now, what does that mean? We all remember sitting in lines at gas stations. We remember the political speeches about crises and shortages. We still hear, from some quarters, the warning that we had better not offend the Arabs.

Well, I think it is safe to conclude that a new Arab oil embargo would be no more effective than the first. There is more non-Arab oil on stream today than there was in 1973 and the Arabs are as hooked on money as we are on oil. Secondly, I think we can conclude that some politicians either stupidly over-reacted or else practiced deception.

The gas lines, in my judgment, were the result of the government stepping into the marketplace and trying to allocate supplies. While annual totals showed an increase, there could have been some short-term dips in the flow. If the government had left the oil companies alone, they would have gotten the gasoline to where it was needed.

The second dumb mistake the government made was to impose price controls on domestic oil. That was a cheap political ploy that ended up hurting us. It never made any sense to pay an Arab three times more for his barrel of oil than we paid a Texan or a Californian. If the government had not interfered, domestic prices would have gone up quicker, domestic production would have increased more rapidly, and the whole situation would have stabilized much sooner. Furthermore, we would have sent the Arabs a message: that we were prepared to pay whatever price necessary to break their cartel.

Therefore, I think it is a fair conclusion that the Congress and three presidents (Nixon, Ford and Carter) get an "F" for handling the energy problem. Now what about the oil companies?

Well, there is a lot of emotion mixed up in this business, and a lot of misinformation. I often fault the multinational oil companies for their lobbying in the foreign affairs area where they have a tendency to identify their short-term interests with the national interests. But on doing what they are designed to do — acquire oil and deliver refined products at a reasonable price — I think any fair person has to give the oil folks an A-plus.

Despite the Arab effort to cut us off, they got the oil to our shores. I don't like paying $1.40 a gallon any more than the next guy, but let's not forget that beer now sells for $5 a gallon. As anybody knows, it costs far less to produce a gallon of beer than it does a gallon of gasoline. If you want to look for excessive profit margins, I wouldn't look at the oil industry.

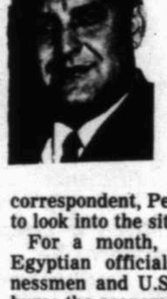

Part of the price increase is purely inflationary. The price of oil should have gone up some even without OPEC. What OPEC did was kick the price higher than it normally would have been. What American politicans did was encourage the illusion that oil prices were the cause of inflation when in fact the inflation, which they caused, was working on oil prices.

As for excess profits tax, that is a pure fraud. In the first place, it is not a tax on profits, but an excise tax levied at the wellhead. In the second place, it doesn't touch foreign oil, only American-produced. In the third place, like all taxes, it is passed along to the consumer. In the fourth place, it is a transfer of capital from the private sector, which needs it, to the public sector, which does not. If somebody is going to spend $80 billion, you can be sure the oil industry can spend it more productively than those idiots in Congress.

What the "energy crisis" really revealed was that we have an extremely low level of competence and integrity in the public sector and that on the intellectual level we have drifted dangerously far toward socialism. When public figures automatically assume that profits are evil and taxes are good, you know you're in deep trouble.

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

Aid to Egypt lost in bureaucratic bungling

Jack Anderson

WASHINGTON — The American taxpayers have been sending Egypt billions of dollars in foreign aid to pay for the Israeli-Egyptian peace process. Peace in the Sinai may be well worth the price, but the taxpayers have been misled about the cost.

Much of the money has had about the same effect as pouring pitchers of water on the desert sand. The funds have been misspent with an extravagance that should be called to public attention.

In 1975, then-Secretary of State Henry Kissinger promised U.S. aid in return for the Sinai Accords. I reported at the time that the cost would amount to $15 billion over the next five years. The story evoked horrified denials.

Well, I was wrong. The actual total of U.S. military and economic assistance to Egypt and Israel during the five-year period was a staggering $20.6 billion.

Then, in 1978, Jimmy Carter negotiated the Camp David agreement. He assured Americans it would cost them no more than about $1 billion a year in additional aid for the next five years. I reported that the Egyptians and Israelis were actually expecting an additional $19 billion over the five-year period.

Since the Camp David agreement, the American taxpayers have been subsidizing Egypt and Israel to the tune of $5.5 billion a year, which is about $3 billion more each year than Carter claimed it would cost. My $19 billion prediction, therefore, should be close to the mark in another two-and-a-half years.

In other words, our political leaders have consistently understated the price tag on the Middle East peace accords. There were also whispers that millions were disappearing down the drain. So I sent my roving foreign correspondent, Peter Grant, to Egypt to look into the situation.

For a month, Grant interviewed Egyptian officials, American businessmen and U.S. officials who disburse the economic aid in Egypt.

What he found was an Agency for International Development staff of 120 taking up three floors of one of Cairo's biggest and newest skyscrapers. He also found bales of reports and studies by highly paid consultants, identifying the critical problems of Egypt's floundering economy.

What he didn't find were any tangible results from the great accumulation of paper. Most of the ambitious projects haven't even gotten off the drawing board.

Of the billions we have sent Egypt in economic aid, most of it has been spent on short-term patchwork programs like food and foreign exchange. In fact, about 75 percent of the money allocated for long-range development projects like roads, sewers, communications and industry — some $1.5 billion — is still waiting to be spent.

Hardly any construction projects have been completed. Not one agricultural program has advanced beyond the pilot stage. Meanwhile, Egypt's economy continues to deteriorate while its population continues to grow at more than a million a year, aggravating the problem severely. Egypt still has to import more then one-third of its food while potentially rich farmland along the Nile lies fallow for lack of development.

Much of the problem is bureaucratic — and the fault lies on both sides. Defending AID's operation, the agency's Egypt-Israel desk officer, Gerald Camens, acknowledged that there were start-up problems because "we were dealing with a country we didn't know that much about."

Another problem at the Washington end seems to be an internecine battle over "turf" between the State Department and AID. As one congressional observer told my reporter John Dillon, "AID and the (U.S.) embassy don't always see eye to eye."

The diplomats want to see more tangible results of the aid program. For example, embassy officials were reportedly upset when AID funds were used to replace engines and equipment in old tugboats working the Nile, instead of replacing the boats themselves — which would have provided visible evidence of U.S. assistance.

But by far the hairiest bureaucratic problem, Grant reports from Cairo, is in the Egyptian government, which is riddled with incompetence, duplication and corruption. Egypt's bloated bureaucracy has been described by AID officials with experience in developing nations as the worst in the world.

One reason for this is that the government guarantees college graduates jobs in the bureaucracy — as a politically expedient means of solving unemployment in a potentialy dangerous segment of Egyptian society. But the government can't afford to pay its civil servants adequately — even high-level officials make less than $100 a month.

The inevitable result is that competent officials leave as soon as they can find private jobs, and bureaucrats who stay spend much of their time and effort protecting their pathetic empires. The overstaffing and jealousy lead to endless delays in getting anything accomplished, and encourage the graft that is practically guaranteed by the low salaries paid to civil servants.

HEADLINES & FOOTNOTES: Congressional stroking has reached a professional level in the Reagan administration. While Jimmy Carter's White House people couldn't even manage to spell some congressmen's names right, Reagan aides took less than an hour to get thank-you notes to members who had voted for the administration's budget. The notes were on White House stationery and were signed by the president.

INSIDE REPORT:

Japanese auto import decision set precedent for Reagan

By ROWLAND EVANS AND ROBERT NOVAK

Evans

Novak

WASHINGTON — The negotiated Japanese auto quota, hammered out in Tokyo just before the deadline of Prime Minister Zenko Suzuki's visit to Washington, left senior officials in the Reagan administration apprehensive about the future and angry about the way they were treated.

The Cabinet's principle advocates of free trade — Treasury Secretary Donald T. Regan and budget director David Stockman — had no idea what was happening in Tokyo until the quota was announced. At no time was a protectionist policy determined by the celebrated Cabinet process. Protection for Detroit was dictated by President Reagan, without even informing the free-traders.

Their apprehension stems from the precedent for the future. While telling ordinary Americans they must stand on their own two feet, the president was willing to bail out incompetent auto management and inefficient auto labor. The administration now will have a more difficult time turning away thrift institutions and other troubled industries lining up at the federal handout window.

Pro-quota officials call the Japanese deal a special case caused by Reagan's campaign promise in Detroit last year. Thus, their justification for the quota is wholly political, which gives special interests a clear message: Ronald Reagan can be susceptible to the disease of political expediency that has plagued recent presidencies and destroyed Richard M. Nixon's.

Reagan, who reveres 19th century free-traders, was thought faithful to his ideology on this as on other issues. Consequently, when Secretary of Transportation Drew Lewis recommended Japanese import quotas, free-trade economic advisers thought he was running out of control. Later, these free-traders at Treasury and the Office of Management and Budget (OMB) thought he was in full retreat under attack when Lewis turned over the auto quota issue to the Cabinet's foremost protectionist, Commerce Secretary Malcolm Baldrige.

The free-traders were wrong. Lewis was getting out of the auto quota business not because he had lost but because he had won. Indeed, Lewis has maintained privately that he never would have recommended quotas had he not received marching orders from Reagan. The president's actions since then give credence to Lewis's claim.

Reagan personally ordered that Ambassador Mike Mansfield ask the Japanese government to limit imports to specific levels, which the free-traders had incorrectly interpreted as Secretary of State Alexander Haig going it alone. Since there were no more calls for meetings on auto imports, it was assumed at Treasury and the OMB that the protectionists had lost.

Actually, Don Regan and Stockman simply were not being invited to meetings. It was a sensation familiar to Drew Lewis. As Reagan's 1980 deputy national campaign chairman, he once bucked the tide by advocating presidential debates, and found himself omitted from future discussions of that question.

No free-traders were around when Reagan instructed Special Trade Representative William Brock on his mission to Japan. With senior presidential aides James Baker and Edwin Meese present, Brock was told: Start at 1.4 million cars a year and yield to 1.6 million if necessary (compared with 1.8 million last year).

There was stunned disbelief at Treasury and the OMB when the 1.68-million-car quota (just 80,000 cars over the secret bargaining limit) was announced in Tokyo. While described as "voluntary," the terms of the agreement are clearly those of a negotiated settlement. Don Regan, in describing the quota to newsmen as "voluntary," could not stifle a little smile. "I am smiling," the secretary of the Treasury admitted.

At a meeting by Reagan with his outside economic wisemen, Milton Friedman forcefully argued there was no difference between "voluntary" and "involuntary" quotas in adverse economic and political effects. When Reagan replied that there were political reasons for a quota, Friedman shot back that politics was the worse reason for such a decision.

The president smiled and cocked his head, which most present interpreted as acquiescence. It was not. He has now departed from ideology for the sake of politics to push reduced auto imports from Japan and increased grain exports to the Soviet Union. Departing from the ideological consistency that has brought unusual coherence to his first hundred days, Reagan in those two exceptions has disturbed his faithful admirers.

The rationale for both was that Reagan was fulfilling a campaign pledge and there are no more outstanding pledges that violate Reaganology. Nevertheless, when the president rejected the advice of economic experts for political gain, the signal was clear. Even without a campaign pledge, other pressure groups will be at his door seeking exceptions to Reagan's rule that everybody should stand on his own two feet.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Monday, May 18, the 138th day of 1981. There are 227 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in History:

On May 18, 1804, Napoleon Bonaparte was proclaimed Emperor of France.

On this date:

In 1860, a Republican convention in Chicago nominated Abraham Lincoln for president.

In 1863, the Civil War siege of Vicksburg, Miss., began in the Union drive to split the Confederacy.

British pop singer making recovery in Dallas

DALLAS (AP) — British pop singer Sheila Rossall not only has gained more than 20 pounds during her stay in a Dallas allergy clinic, but also has written two songs, says a friend who visited her recently.

Ms. Rossall, who had a No. 1 hit in England three years ago, weighed less than 80 pounds when she was admitted to the Brookhaven Medical Center in February. Now, doctors say, she weighs more than 100 pounds and may be released within three months.

The singer has a rare disorder that causes her to suffer allergic reactions to thousands of man-made substances, especially chemicals and processed foods. She has been eating organically grown meats, fruits and vegetables and breathes filtered air at Brookhaven's environmental control unit.

The Dallas allergy clinic is one of only four advanced isolation units in the United States capable of maintaining near total environmental seclusion. Doctors try to isolate a patient from man-made materials and pollutants long enough to allow the body's natural defense mechanisms to recover from toxic reactions suffered prior to admission.

Ms. Rossall once sang with the British Rock group Pickettywitch and had a chart-topping tune in England called "Love Me Just A Little Bit More."

Annette Ellery, who helped start a "Save Sheila Fund" in England, said she learned about the new songs last week when she flew to Dallas to visit her friend and raise more money.

Mrs. Ellery said her money-raising efforts have netted about 19,000 British pounds — a little less than $40,000 at current exchange rates. The bill from Brookhaven is more than $21,000 thus far, she said.

Ms. Rossall's friends spent 5,000 pounds to refurbish her Bristol apartment, where she was confined to a bed for three years, kept alive by air filtration machines and the constant care of friends.

"But the doctors have told us that all the money was a waste," Mrs. Ellery said. "We need to put her in a house, away from other residents, out in the country. We call it the 'greenbelt' area, and just to build there you need government permission."

Mrs. Ellery says doctors have advised her to buy a special mobile home, which would cost about $25,000.

Hugo Friedhofer dead at age of 80

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Hugo Friedhofer, pioneer motion picture orchestrator-composer who won an Oscar for "The Best Years of Our Lives" and also scored such classics as "Joan of Arc" and "The Young Lions," has died at age 80, a hospital reported.

Friedhofer, who was born in San Francisco in 1902, died early Sunday morning at St. Vincent's Hospital. He had been hospitalized there since a fall at his Hollywood apartment.

A six-time Oscar nominee, Friedhofer was known to his peers as a man of keen wit as well as artistic ability.

Friedhofer came to Hollywood in 1929, just two years after sound came to the movies, and began his career playing in orchestras that accompanied silent films.

In the 1930s he was assigned to composer Erich Wolfgang Korngold as orchestrator on such films as "Anthony Adverse," "The Sea Hawk" and "The Sea Wolf."

He also orchestrated songs under Max Steiner and Alfred Newman until 1937, when he won praise for an original score for "Marco Polo" with Gary Cooper.

He won the "Best Years" Oscar in 1947 and said he was especially proud of that score, particularly the scene in which former pilot Dana Andrews sits in the cockpit of a scrapped B-17 reliving the horror of his personal war.

In that scene Friedhofer had the orchestra faintly simulate the sound of engines revving up in what has been called one of cinema's finest blendings of film and music.

He is survived by a daughter, Carol Tongue of Palo Alto, Calif. Services were pending.

Piano competition begins in Fort Worth

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — The sixth Van Cliburn International Piano competition began Sunday to the tune of Bach's English Suite No. 3 in G-Minor, played by Australian Alan Kogosowski.

The 28-year-old Melbourne native was the first of 38 pianists from 17 countries to compete in the preliminary competition at Texas Christian University's Ed Landreth Auditorium.

All are under 30, with an average of 13 years of professional training and three previous competition experiences.

The 38 were the top third of a field of 127 screened from 20-minute videotaped performances. The field will be narrowed to 12 semifinalists, of which six will be chosen to compete for a gold medal and $12,000 first prize.

A total of $37,500 in prizes will be awarded, and the winner will have the opportunity to launch an international career as a soloist with the world's major orchestras.

The competition is judged by an international jury of 12 pianists chaired by Fort Worth Symphony director John Giordano.

Their choices will be announced Sunday, May 31, in a nationally televised awards ceremony hosted by pianist Andre Watts.

The competition has been held here every four years since 1962, when Dr. Irl Allison, founder of the National Guild of Piano Teachers, decided the United States needed an event to compete with the Soviet Union's Tchaikovski Competition, won in 1958 by Texan Van Cliburn.

Town finds story shocking

DANVILLE, ILL. (AP) — Townspeople were shocked by the story of two 11-day-old Siamese twins who were removed from a hospital here after a state welfare worker found them starving — allegedly on orders of their physician-father.

"Everybody's talking about it, but the hospital won't tell us anything," said a lab technician at the Lakeview Medical Center in Danville, where the twins were found, "listless and whimpering," earlier this week.

An anonymous telephone tip resulted in state child welfare workers finding the twins, a published report says. The Chicago Sun-Times said the twins' medical chart at the Lakeview Medical Center in Danville ordered workers not to feed them.

But state child welfare officials say they believe the twins, who are joined at the waist, had a guardian angel at the facility — someone who violated those orders and kept the twins alive.

"Where I work they all think it's sick," said Karen Moody, a nurse's aide at the Americana Health Care Center, a nursing home across the street from Lakeview.

Vermillion County State's Attorney Michael Clary said his office is considering criminal charges against the father, who has not been identified.

The Illinois Department of Children and Family Services is also investigating, although director Gregory L. Coler said officials at the Lakeview Medical Center in this community of 42,000 at first refused to cooperate in the investigation.

"They know they must cooperate," Coler said Saturday. "It is obvious that some hospital employees knew of the situation, but yet they didn't report it."

Coler said the twin boys were in fair condition and have gained "a few pounds" since Wednesday, when the department ordered them transferred to Children's Memorial Hospital in Chicago. They were being fed intravenously.

The hospital refused to release any information about the twins early today.

Coler said the twins, whom he described as "severely deformed," weighed 10 pounds at birth. Their weight had dropped to less than 7 pounds when they were taken from Lakeview.

Both the attorney for the twins' family, David Kirk of Danville, and the president of the Lakeview Medical Center, Richard Livengood, declined comment on the matter.

On Friday, Vermilion County Circuit Judge John Meyer granted temporary custody of the twins to the state.

The same day, the state's attorney's office filed a petition claiming that the twins had not been properly cared for. The petition said hospital workers had failed to give the twins food, water, oxygen or necessary medical treatment after their birth on May 5.

Cairo's camel market is noisy, busy place

By MAGDA El-SANGA
Associated Press Writer

CAIRO, Egypt (AP) — Whips cracking, herders hopping and grunts abounding, Cairo's camel market gets under way twice a week on a dusty five-acre lot west of the city, where buyers' and sellers' calls compete with the camels' groans in frantic bids for attention.

Over 1,000 of the one-humped dromedaries ramble around the Imbaba market, said to be the world's largest camel souk, on its buiest day, Monday.

"About 2,000 camels are sold here each week; it's like the world's camel stock exchange," said Sheikh Aly Abul-Qassim, a Sudanese camel merchant.

While a few camels can be seen carrying loads around the streets of Cairo and in the country, or giving rides at tourist attractions and posing for pictures, most of the camels at the Imbaba souk are headed for people's dinner tables and the carnivores' cages at the Cairo Zoo.

"About 90 percent of the meat used in Egypt is camel meat," Abul-Qassim asserts with a conspiratorial grin. "Any time you order hamburgers or meatballs in a restaurant in Cairo you can be sure it's camel meat."

The tough quality of the meat, the animal's basically mean nature and the widespread attitude of seeing camels as beasts of burden or tourist conveyances by the Pyramids, makes for the unpopularity or even abhorrence among most Egyptians of putting camel on their plates.

"Very often, if you don't know much about meat, that's what you're buying at the butcher's even if you think you're getting beef," said a butcher's agent who would not give his name. "It's cheaper for him to buy camel than beef, and the profits are greater."

Meat prices, never low because of the costs of importing beef and lamb from as far away as Australia and New Zealand, rose rapidly last summer, reaching $6.40 a kilogram (2.2 pounds).

In angry reaction, President Anwar Sadat called for a month-long boycott of meat last September, and set a government ceiling of $4 per kilogram at the end of the ban. Butchers adhered to the fixed price briefly, but meat prices are again on the climb, touching $5 for a kilo.

At either price, the majority of Egyptians, with an average per capita income of $370 annually, can only afford meat as a luxury on special occasions.

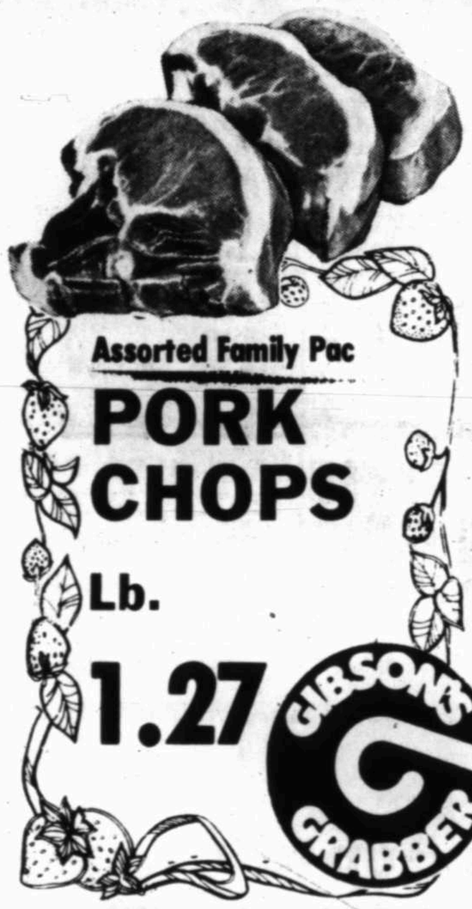

"The government price for camel meat is $2.57 per kilo, at the butcher's, after slaughtering and deboning. But with the traders at Imbaba selling the best quality camel still alive at $2.20 per kilo, it follows that the butchers find the government ceiling unrealistic," Abul-Qassim said.

Sheikh Aly and his brother Ibrahim have their offices at the market, one of 14 principal agents who set up there to handle the lively trade. Most of the agents and sellers are Sudanese.

There are about 2 million or 3 million camels in the northern part of the Sudan, Abul-Qassim said. He and Ibrahim bring some 2,000 camels to Cairo each year, in 20 trips between the months of October and May, before the scorching summer heat sets in.

Egypt does not breed camels, in spite of and perhaps because of its high consumption of the animal as meat, and for its leather and fertilizer from its bones. "Nothing is wasted," Abul-Qassim said.

DR. NEIL SOLOMON

Some women are fine with fewer pre-natal doctor visits

Dear Dr. Solomon: I am pregnant with my first child and am in need of some clarification. How often should a pregnant woman see her obstetrician? At my first visit, I was given a detailed schedule of visits that became more and more frequent until the time I am scheduled to give birth. Yet I know several women who skip these appointments at the slightest pretext, and I'm beginning to wonder how important these visits are. What's the rule, if any, and what would you suggest? — Mrs. L.S

Dear Mrs. S.: The American College of Obstetricians and Gynecologists recommends the following schedule of visits for healthy women: every four weeks for the first 28 weeks of pregnancy; then every two weeks up to 36 weeks of pregnancy; and then weekly until delivery. Where a pregnancy is complicated in any way, of course, a woman will be seen as needed.

Some doctors have suggested that women may do just as well with fewer prenatal visits. For example, a group of researchers at the Aberdeen Maternity Hospital in Scotland have reported that a review of the medical records of almost 2,000 women has shown that a total of five visits would suffice.

I would suggest that a woman who has confidence in her obstetrician should follow his advice; if she does not have confidence in him, she should change doctors. But it would make no sense for a woman to see an obstetrician without following his instructions. Of course any patient should feel free to ask any questions about any aspect of treatment.

Dear Dr. Solomon: I read your item about the operation of a skin bank with much interest. If human skin is not available for burn patients when it is needed, what do doctors use? It seems to me that since there are so many parts of the body that can now be replaced with man-made parts, scientists ought to be able to come up with an ersatz skin. Is there any possibility of this? — Gerry

Dear Gerry: A number of synthetic skins designed for use as dressings for burn patients have already been produced. In addition, pigskin is employed for the same purpose. The trouble with both, however, is that they are not very effective in controlling infection.

A new synthetic product has now been tested, and the results indicate that it is at least as effective as pigskin or human skin. It costs less than human skin and, of course, can be made more readily available.

The new dressing consists of a nylon-knit fabric bonded to a silicone-plastic membrane. It permits water vapor to pass through at a controlled rate so that the patient does not lose too much fluid. In one respect it acts like human skin in that it keeps large drops of water from contaminating the wound by leaking back through the material.

The new dressing is still being studied and is not available yet for widespread use. Therefore, skin banks continue to be in need of cadaver skin.

(If you have a medical question, write to Neil Solomon, M.D., 1726 Reisterstown Road, Baltimore, Md. 21208. Dr. Solomon cannot give personal replies but will answer as many questions as possible in his column.)

Vina Rahlfs, center, helps four-year-old Greg Landreth, left, and Danielle Glenn, 5, feed the guinea pigs in their classroom at Trinity School. Mrs. Rahlfs is retiring after 20 years at Trinity and the school has named Tuesday "Vina Rahlfs Appreciation Day."

Vina Rahlfs appreciation day planned by Trinity School

By NANCY LORD
Lifestyle Writer

When Vina Rahlfs began teaching at Trinity School 20 years ago, classes met in the Sunday school rooms of the Episcopal Church of the Holy Trinity and were taught to children ages three through second grade.

Now the school has its own modern campus and teaches students from three years old through ninth grade.

"The school has grown very, very much since I've been here," she notes.

Mrs. Rahlfs is retiring on May 29 after 20 years of teaching at Trinity School and the school has designated Tuesday as "Vina Rahlfs Appreciation Day."

Mrs. Rahlfs received her bachelor of science degree in elementary education from The University of Alabama. She also has a master of education degree from Sul Ross University with certification in guidance counseling. She began her teaching career at Raymond School, several miles outside of Bessemer, Ala.

She says she came to Midland because her husband, John, had been station here with Air Force before they were married, and they just liked West Texas.

She taught at Travis Elementary in Midland for three years before going to Trinity School. Mrs. Rahlfs has been the head of Trinity's lower school (three-year-olds through fifth grade) for about 15 years.

Throughout the time she has been a member of the administrative staff, Mrs. Rahlfs has continued to teach some classes as well. She says she thinks it's important for administrators to teach a few classes in order to keep in touch with what's going on in the classrooms.

She estimates that she has taught approximately 600 children during her years at Trinity.

"I have always tried to meet the needs and potential of the students I have taught," she says. Mrs. Rahlfs also believes that it is important to have a challenging ciriculum and to meet the needs of individual students, especially those in the preschool classes.

She expalins that she is retiring because she has always wanted to travel. She and her husband, who is the owner of John W. Rahlfs Insurance Company, plan to begin their travels this summer with a tour of Scotland.

Mrs. Rahlfs says she wants to travel while she's still young enough to enjoy it.

The Rahlfs' have two children. John Rahlfs Jr. is associated with M.D. Anderson Hospital in Houston. He and his wife, Cathy, have a two-year-old daughter named Carrie. Their other son, Tom, is a senior medical student in Houston.

She is a lay reader at the Episcopal Church of the Holy Trinity. She is a patron member of the Symphony Guild and belongs to the Permain Basin Ballet Guild.

Mrs. Rahlfs hobbies include cooking, reading and tap dancing. "I haven't had much time to develop hobbies," she notes. She also enjoys playing bridge and hopes to play more after her retirement.

She says her decision to retire was difficult because the school is like "home" to her.

Mrs. Rahlfs has great hopes for the future of Trinity School. "I think it's a very strong, very fine school with great potential," she says.

DEAR ABBY

Wire power no substitute for willpower

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: You are my last hope. I am an obese woman who has tried every kind of diet imaginable, but nothing works for me. I saw a woman on Tom Snyder's show a while back who had her mouth wired shut so she couldn't eat solid foods; she could only drink liquids. I can't find a dentist who does this. I even called the American Dental Association, but they said they didn't know who to call either. I am desperate. Please hurry. I weigh 320, and can hardly breathe. — NO WILLPOWER IN THE BRONX

DEAR NO WILLPOWER: I rarely give unasked-for advice, but wiring your mouth shut is not the answer. Please locate the Overeaters Anonymous chapter nearest you and go to a meeting! I've attended some of this organization's meetings and found the people there to be an unbelievably loving, supportive group. You need friends who have been through your kind of hell. Please go. Then write again and let me know how you're doing. I care.

DEAR ABBY: I work for an advertising company, selling ads on the phone. I live in Iowa and make phone calls all over the country. Last November I called a man in Texas who had the most wonderful voice I had ever heard! He bought some advertising from me, so I called him back for business reasons. He must have liked my voice too, because we started talking and found we had a lot in common. He asked for my home phone so he could call me in the evenings. We've been talking every night, and now I feel as though I've known him all my life.

Abby, is it possible to fall in love over the phone? I think about this man night and day. We exchanged pictures, and now he wants to come to Iowa to meet me. I'm so afraid if we meet in person this wonderful dream will come to an end. Do you think I'm foolish? Should I let him come? Has anyone else ever fallen in love with a voice on the phone? Please help me. — IN LOVE AT FIRST SOUND

DEAR IN LOVE: I'm sure you aren't the only person who has fallen in love with a voice. If you're both over 21 and free, meet him, and let reality take over from fantasy.

DEAR ABBY: I just hung up from a long-distance call that I must share with you. When I answered my phone, the fellow on the other end said, "Dick, I'm calling to thank you. My wife is pregnant!"

I realized instantly what he meant. Early in February, while I was interviewing him for a story, I had asked routinely if he had any children.

"No," he replied, "but my wife and I have been trying for a long time." So I quipped, "You have got to quit wearing jockey shorts."

That broke him up, of course, and after admitting that he did wear jockey shorts, he asked what his shorts had to do with it.

I said he had obviously missed the Dear Abby column in the Cleveland Plain Dealer in which you stated that jockey shorts reduced a man's sperm count.

I promised to send him a clip of your column, and he said that while it sounded a bit crazy, he and his wife were desperate enough to try almost anything.

In his call today, he said that when his wife learned she was pregnant, they counted back and found that she conceived a month after he switched to boxer shorts! He also said if they have a baby girl, they may name her "Abby." — DICK ELLERS, REPORTER

DEAR DICK: Wonderful! Thanks for the report. Your letter made my day!

(You're never too young or too old to learn how to make people like you. Get Abby's new booklet of practical advice. Send $1 and a stamped (35 cents), self-addressed envelope to Abby, Popularity, 132 Lasky Dr., Beverly Hills, Calif. 90212.)

Exhibits in Chicago

CHICAGO (AP) — An exhibition of plans, drawings and photographs of gardens and parks designed by contemporary artists is on view at the Museum of Contemporary Art here through June 14.

The projects present a variety of imaginative solutions to the problem of defining a landscape space.

Also on exhibit through June 14 is the first show to examine the entire range of the late Robert Smithson's sculpture.

Smithson, who died in 1973, had established an international reputation as the pre-eminent exponent of earth art at the time of his death at the age of 35.

A pint-size paint idea for pint-size painting jobs

By AL CARRELL

If you can remember that it's paint and not milk, you may like the idea of using a pint-size plastic cardboard-type milk carton as a small paint bucket. Cut out an opening in the panel near the top part that angles down to the main part of the carton. This gives you plenty of room to pour in the paint and dip the brush. The size is so handy for small paint jobs and will hold quite a bit of paint. The plasticized inside surface also lets you pour nearly all of your leftover paint back into the original container.

+ + +

Dear Al: You have indicated you are anti-wax for furniture polishing. However, I like wax and have come up with a unique buffing iron. It's an actual old-time flatiron. I warm it up and then wrap it in a couple of layers of old blanket. The warmth makes the wax penetrate the pores of the wood better, and the weight of the iron does a lot of the rubbing in work that I'd normally have to do. When not in use as my furniture tool, the iron has a place in my antique collection. — H.W.

+ + +

Dear Al: I have a new distressing and antiquing stunt. After putting the base coat of paint on the furniture, I take a chain and coat it with some of the black paint that I'd been using for spattering on another piece of furniture. I hit the chain against some newspapers to get rid of excess paint. Then I hit the furniture with the chain. It makes dents in the wood plus leaves slight black marks. It really gives the furniture a look of character when you cover it over with the antiquing glaze. — Mrs. E.J.

Better try this out on a scrap of wood before you go after your dining room table. Also this has to be used in moderation.

+ + +

A SUPER HINT — I once talked about the great new energy-saving solar clothes dryer which is also known as the clothesline. It prompted some folks to go back to that way of drying clothes. It also brought in some handy hints. One reader suggested putting a turnbuckle at one end of each strand of clothesline wire. This allows you to tighten the wire since after a few months of use, the wire stretches and starts to sag. Another suggestion was to wire in a piece of chain at one end and hook the end link to the clothesline pole. Then as the wire stretched, you could hook the next link to tighten. Either way, your laundry won't have to sag onto the ground.

+ + +

Dear Al: The area under the sink that is above cabinet doors is wasted space. The sink bottom sticks down and is in the way for use, plus there are pipes coming up to the sink. I boxed in that area, cutting holes for the pipes and making a couple of small access doors. I use this area to hide jewerly and other small valuables. No burglar would think of looking under the sink, and even with a metal detector, the metal from the sink, pipes and other things would throw it off. — R.G.

Boy, won't the plumber be surprised when you next have a sink problem. Better learn to do all your own plumbing repairs and save two ways.

Tin Pan Alley gold trivia

NEW YORK (AP) — Where is Tin Pan Alley?

Originally, it was a section of East 14th Street, where ricky-ticky piano music trickled out of publishers' open windows. Later it was distributed all over town, said song writer Irving Caesar, citing Seventh Avenue, Union Square, 28th Street.

The Brill Building, still standing on Broadway at 49th Street, in the '30s and '40s was known as the headquarters of Tin Pan Alley.

Caesar, 85, said the biggest hit song to come out of the Brill Building was probably "Is It True What They Say About Dixie?" which he wrote. He also wrote "Tea for Two" in five minutes, he said, but "Swanee" took a little longer, "about 20 minutes."

Opening wine

NEW YORK (AP) — How soon should one open wine before serving it?

A food and wine center here suggests red wine should be opened one hour before serving to let the wine breathe, releasing its full aroma and flavor.

White or rose wine should be opened at the time of serving, the experts said.

HINTS FROM HELOISE

Refreezing meats properly

DEAR HELOISE:

I am a husband and father who loves to cook — which prompted the discussion at work today.

We were talking about cooking and one girl asked me if meat could be refrozen once it has been thawed.

Having worked as a meat cutter for 14 years, I tried to explain meat could be refrozen if done properly.

But, all of a sudden voices said, "My mom says you can't refreeze meat of any kind."

Please, Heloise, help me out. Many people still believe what their moms or grandmoms told them about this, which may have once been true, but isn't anymore.

Do ask your experts, but I believe you will agree with me. — Happy

+ + +

I do agree with you, as did the experts I talked with. Meat can be refrozen. However, there are certain factors to take into consideration when doing so.

Ideally, the meat should still have ice crystals in it or at least still be cold.

Once the meat has been allowed to come to room temperature, it must be cooked as there is always the danger of undetected spoilage. In addition, the meat will lose much of its quality in refreezing.

So, as a precaution when defrosting meats, always place them in the refrigerator. In the event you change your mind and decide to blow the budget and eat out, the meat can remain in the fridge a day or two with no harm done. You can even refreeze it with only a slight loss in quality.

The same holds true should your freezer be turned off for whatever reason. Refreeze the meat as long as it's cold, but in the meantime, while you are waiting for the repairman or for the power to be turned back on, DON'T open the freezer dox.

By keeping the door closed, the meat will stay cold for several days, in which case, you can safely refreeze it. — Heloise

CITRUS TEA

Dear Heloise: To give that pot of tea a little extra zing, try putting in a small piece of orange peel or a slice of unpeeled orange.

It really adds that certain something! — Mrs. M.C.

FOR LAUNDRY DAY

Dear Heloise: When I have to wash clothes at the laundromat, I carry my detergent powder in empty coffee cans with plastic lids.

Much better than opened-top boxes which usually get turned over in the car and the detergents spill out. — Irene Bauer

To choose Dad's stogies, brush up on 'cigarology'

NEW YORK (AP) — A novice who goes hunting for cigar gifts for Father's Day June 21 would do well to study up on "cigarology," advises the Cigar Association of America.

The subject involves knowing a 20th from a 40th, short filler from long filler, and the difference between ring size and ringside.

In shops that specialize in cigars, salespersons often talk about 20ths or 40ths. Those are merely fractions of 1,000 — the number of cigars with which such shops most often deal. A 20th — 1-20th of 1,000 — is a box of 50 cigars. A 40th is a box of 25.

Long filler and short filler are terms that describe the tobacco's consistency. The long filler tobacco within a cigar's wrapper is generally the length of the cigar itself, or nearly that long. It tends to burn slowly. Short filler is made up of smaller cuts of tobacco. It tends to burn faster.

If your favorite smoker prefers cigars of a particular size but is known to switch brands now and then, you'd do well to buy something in the familiar size grouping, the association suggests. A Churchill, for instance, has a ring gauge, or diameter, of "50."

Cigar rings are measured in 64ths of an inch, meaning a Churchill has a diameter of about three-quarters of an inch. The ring size affects a cigar's mildness as well as how it feels in the holder's hand.

The larger the ring size, the milder the cigar, given the same type of tobacco.

Other size groupings include Cigarillo, about "32," Panatela, about a "36" ring, Corona, about a "42" and Perfecto, "45." The most popular size, according to the institute, is the Panatela, followed by the Cigarillo and Corona. These and others may vary in length, which is measured in inches.

SHE LOST 52 POUNDS AND 84 INCHES and IT STAYED LOST . . . PERMANENTLY!

DO YOU EVER HEAR OR READ OF THAT FROM THOSE "OTHER GUYS?"

OF COURSE NOT! All they can talk about is how fast and how cheap their deals are. We don't believe in that for a lot of reasons, mostly having to do with health, simplicity and permanency.

HERE'S A CASE IN POINT: Mrs. Nelson of Woodlands, Texas. She first undertook the Pat Walker's program in 1958. You can see where she started, where she was in 1960 and where she is today at the tender age of 63! And a bundle of energy because she is healthy and feels good about herself.

1981 - OVER 20 YEARS LATER!

Fat made me a person other than "myself" until Pat Walker's.

From self-pity, excuses, procrastination and total negativism came the real "me" . . . positive, aggressive, compassionate, caring, enthusiastic and with real, good reason for loving life.

Pat Walker's counselors asked for a commitment to "listen" and in return I have a permanent and perfected figure, 52 pounds and 84 inches less. By listening I had the opportunity of understanding and never once did I lose my dignity. They were professional, caring, knowledgeable.

This was their method 20 years ago; in 1981 the same professional attitude continues to reduce the women of the world. My photographs tell it all.

Dole says Reagan will have to compromise on SS

WASHINGTON (AP) — Key members of Congress, convinced the White House is ready to negotiate, are trying to produce a substitute tax cut plan while a ranking Republican says President Reagan also will have to compromise on Social Security cuts.

Sen. Robert Dole, R-Kan., the chairman of the Senate Finance Committee, said Sunday that Americans now near retirement age "probably don't have too much to worry about" and added, "I think you'll see a lot of compromises in the president's proposals."

Reagan's proposals, aimed at saving the Social Security system from bankruptcy by cutting overall benefits 10 percent by 1986, include added penalties for people who retire before age 65 and tighter eligibility requirements for disability checks.

"The short term, yes, we'll make some changes which will not affect benefits," Dole said. "Long term, I think we'll make changes that may affect benefits — maybe we'll change the (cost of living adjustment), maybe we'll do other things."

Interviewed on the CBS program "Face the Nation," Dole said Health and Human Services Secretary Richard Schweiker is "looking for a compromise" on Social Security.

"I would guess, just based on conversations with my colleagues on both sides of the aisles, that we're probably not going to do very much very soon as far as the early retirees are concerned," Dole said.

He said a phased-in reduction of benefits may be necessary, and that it should be started before 1990. "But beyond that I would guess that those who are going to turn 62 in the next few years probably don't have too much to worry about," he said.

Dole said he thought the White House announced the Social Security proposal too soon, although he added that he did not believe it would damage efforts to pass Reagan's tax and spending cuts.

He said House and Senate tax writers of both parties are nearing agreement on a multiyear tax cut somewhat smaller than Reagan's proposed 10 percent a year for three years.

"The difference of opinion is whether it ought to be a 10-10-10 ... 8-8-8 or some combination," he said. "So in my view, we're fairly close to some agreement."

White House chief of staff James A. Baker III told reporters later Sunday that after being told of Dole's remarks on taxes, Reagan telephoned him "to reiterate his strong support for his program and to make the point he hopes he (Dole) will hold to the president's position."

While Reagan "is not actively seeking a compromise," Baker said, he is willing to listen to proposals in an effort to strengthen support for the basic idea of steep tax cuts designed to give businesses and individuals incentives to save and invest.

On Sunday, Treasury Secretary T. Donald Regan cut short a planned three-day visit with Saudi Arabian leaders and returned to Washington a day early to help defend the president's tax proposals before Congress.

Dole said possible compromises on the tax bill would be discussed today when he meets with Rep. Dan Rostenkowski, chairman of the House Ways and Means Committee; Rep. Barber Conable, the ranking Republican on Ways and Means; and Sen. Russell Long, the ranking Democrat on the Senate Finance Committee.

It will be at least another 10 days before the House Ways and Means Committee begins writing a tax-cut bill. But Democratic members of the panel, conservative Democrats and other groups are expected to continue separate brainstorming sessions this week in an effort to narrow differences as much as possible before the formal work begins.

In several public statements last week, Reagan aides indicated the president could accept a tax cut spread over fewer than three years, as long as it provided relief across the board, including some to high-income Americans with money to invest.

That appeared to open the door to a two-year tax cut, with further reductions promised in future years if the growth of federal spending can be checked.

The first big step in controlling spending will be completed in the House and Senate this week with final approval of the compromise 1982 budget, which sets suggested spending limits for the year beginning next Oct. 1.

Authorities hunting terrorists in bombing

NEW YORK (AP) — Airlines were warned to "be extra vigilant" as authorities searched today for Puerto Rican terrorists who claimed responsibility for planting three bombs at Kennedy Airport, including one that exploded and killed an airport worker.

Bomb threats telephoned to police and Trans World Airlines Sunday night prompted closure of two TWA terminals for more than an hour, delaying about six international flights, an airline spokesman said. Airline security officers and Port Authority police searched the area but found no bomb.

The explosion occurred Saturday morning in a men's restroom as airport security officials were approaching to investigate a suspicious package. Killed was Alex McMillan, 20, of New York City.

A man with a Spanish accent, saying he represented the Puerto Rican group, had called minutes before the blast to say bombs had been planted in the terminal and aboard a Pan Am flight to Guatemala and would explode within 15 minutes.

The jetliner was evacuated and searched, but no bomb was found.

A second bomb was found at about 6 p.m. Saturday near Gate 18 of the Pan Am terminal, which was closed for three hours while the FBI and police bomb squad removed the device, said airport spokeswoman Lou Hammond.

The third bomb, found at about 5:15 a.m. Sunday in a women's restroom, forced the Pan Am terminal to close for nearly five hours, authorities said.

"We have to assume that each of the bombs was brought in separately and at different times because there was a thorough search of the terminal after the explosion and after the second bomb was found," said police Lt. Edwin Youngblood.

Police said a caller identifying himself as a member of the Puerto Rican Armed Resistance Movement claimed responsibility Sunday for planting the three explosives found Saturday and Sunday in the Pan Am terminal.

The Puerto Rican Armed Resistance Movement also claimed responsibility for two pipe bombs that exploded in lockers at Pennsylvania Station in Manhattan last Dec. 21, causing damage but no injuries.

Police said the movement is believed to be a splinter group of the FALN, a Puerto Rican nationalist organization which has claimed responsibility for several bombings across the country.

Meanwhile, police and airport officials reported they had received a number of other bomb threats over the weekend but had not ordered evacuation of any terminals.

Midland area students will get scholarships

Seven Midland area students are the recipients of Carr Academic Scholarships for 1981-82 at Angelo State University.

From Lee High are Brian Erxleben who received a $1,500 award; Sara Stone,$500, and Angela Whittington, $500. Receiving scholarships from Midland High are Daniel Salas, $1,000; Teddy Bartley, $500, and David Bartus, $500. Another Midland area winner is Andrea Frerich of Garden City who received a $1,000 award.

The scholarships are based on the students' academic record and personal achievements. Funds are provided by the Robert G. Carr and Nona K. Carr Scholarship Foundation.

Erxleben, who ranks among the top students in his class, has also received academic letters and awards. He plans to major in pre-vet work.

Miss Stone, who has served as swim team captain, also has been a student leader in the Student Council and honor society. She plans to major in accounting.

Miss Whittington, who plans to major in psychology, has been active in Student Council, honor society, forensic league and German Club.

Salas, active in varsity football, also has participated in the German Club and the Fellowship of Christian Athletes. He plans to major in business.

Bartley, who plans to major in accounting, has been an active participant in the Student Council, FCA and speech projects.

Bartus, who has won honors in English and world history, plans to major in business at ASU. He's also been a member of the varsity tennis squad.

Miss Frerich, who plans to major in journalism, has been a class officer and student leader in Future Teachers of America and the Beta Club.

Redistricting first order of business

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — After months of talking about it and hearing plenty of advice from voters, Texas legislators begin today the first debate on redistricting according to the 1980 census.

A House committee plan for a shakeup of congressional districts, including the three new ones allotted Texas, is the first order of business.

Senators spent most of Saturday listening to final public testimony on their version of a congressional bill, plus senatorial redistricting, and expect to debate the results later this week.

Most of the testimony heard in the Senate was criticism of the House plan.

In Dallas, Raul Reza Vasquez, state director of the League of United Latin American Citizens, said LULAC was prepared to go to federal court if the Legislature does not treat Hispanics fairly in redistricting.

Spokesmen for the Coalition of Minorities also have threatened court action if redistricting is used to dilute black power in Dallas.

Speaker Bill Clayton said the fact that Texas is gaining congressmen makes the job easy, since there will be no districts where two U.S. representatives must run against each other.

He said he was confident the House and Senate can agree on a congressional remap before the Legislature adjourns June 1 and avoid an often-predicted special session over the matter.

The House will take up a bill drawn by the House redistricting committee, which has been criticized by some for a Republican tilt and by others for "gutting" U.S. Rep. Bill Patman, D-Ganado, and splitting Corpus Christi between the two districts.

Asked whether he agreed that the bill would make it too easy for Republicans to capture newly created congressional seats and take some from Democrats, Clayton said, "I don't see that it does."

In an interview, he endorsed the committee bill and said he hoped it passed.

"I think they came up with a good plan," he said.

As for Patman, the speaker said, "He has a district he can win in."

Patman accused the committee last week of "gerrymandering" his district so that he would get only four of his present 10 counties.

Today also is special for Clayton because it is Speaker's Day, on which other legislators will heap praises on him. He cut off the traditional giving of lavish gifts several sessions ago and has asked his supporters to contribute money, instead, to Boys Ranch and Girlstown.

Clayton will be honored at a Speaker's Ball in the University of Texas' "Super Drum" special events center. A crowd of 4,000 is expected.

Robin Carollo, 17 and Paul Crouch, 18 have filed a suit asking a state judge to waive Texas' parental consent requirements so they can mary despite Miss Carollo's father's objections. Crouch and Miss Carollo could wait until she turns 18 in September, but there's a complicating factor — their baby is due in July. Miss Carollo would like to be Mrs. Crouch by then.

Lovers file suit seeking approval to get married

DALLAS (AP) — Paul Crouch and Robin Carollo aren't quite ready to follow the tragic example of Romeo and Juliet, but the young lovers have found a typically 20th century remedy to the same problem.

The couple has filed a lawsuit asking a state judge to waive Texas' parental consent requirements so they can marry despite the objections of Robin's father.

The star-crossed lovers are in a predicament that William Shakespeare would appreciate, but with a twist. Their baby is due in July, and Miss Carollo won't turn 18 until September.

Under Texas law, parental permission is required before a woman under age 18 can marry.

Sam Carollo, a well-to-do aerospace engineer, steadfastly has refused to allow his daughter to marry, despite her pregnancy.

"I'm a cowboy and a mechanic. Her father just doesn't like either one of those," said Crouch, who has lived with Miss Carollo since November.

"I'm really not a redneck," said Miss Carollo. "I lived in semi-upper middle-class and I guess Paul lived in lower middle-class. I guess that's one of the main deals."

"They're trying their hardest to do the right thing," said Ginger Casper, Crouch's mother. "He's got a fulltime job.

"He doesn't like my son because (Crouch) is a goat roper. He wears western clothes all the time and dips snuff. He's just a normal teen-age goat roper."

Sam Carollo insists he has nothing against goat ropers in general or Paul Crouch in particular. His objection is his daughter's tender age.

"She's just underage, and I don't think marriage is the right thing for her," he explained.

"It doesn't matter if it was President Reagan's son. I wouldn't sign it until she's 18."

Officials, bloodhounds search for escapees

ATMORE, Ala. (AP) — Authorities are using bloodhounds to search for seven inmates from the Holman maximum security prison who short-circuited the power system, cut holes in two prison fences and fled under a cover of darkness, officials said.

Four of the inmates are convicted murderers. Five have prior escape records.

Prison spokesman Ron Tate said some inmates apparently made their way into the Holman prison power house Sunday night, clipped through wires and tripped the master switch, throwing the prison in darkness. It was 15 minutes before the auxiliary power unit kicked on, he said.

Meanwhile, the seven prisoners crawled out a dormitory window, cut holes in two prison fences and escaped. Holman is located in southwest Alabama, near the Florida-Alabama state line.

Tate said prison officials originally thought 11 inmates had escaped since they were unable to locate the other four immediately.

"This is the biggest thing we've had in escapes in quite some time," Tate said. He added that he thought it was only the second time any prisoners had escaped the maximum security facility.

He said it was not certain how the inmates got into the power house, but the ensuing blackout and confusion allowed them to slip away unnoticed.

"Everything was in chaos," he said. "If I had to be in any prison when the lights went out, it sure wouldn't be Holman."

Fifty-one death row inmates are housed at Holman, but Tate said none of the seven escapees was on death row.

Tate identified them as Tony R. Nolin, 26, serving a life sentence without parole on a Jefferson County murder conviction; James R. Straigtz, 29, serving 30 years on grand larceny, escape and burglary convictions from DeKalb, Elmore, and Montgomery counties; Ronald E. Kennedy, 39, serving a life sentence on burglary, grand larceny, escape and first degree murder convictions from Madison County; Randy H. Livingston, 30, serving a 50-year sentence from Jefferson County for promoting prostitution; Olynnk Burnett, 37, serving life in prison on convictions from Winston and Escambia counties for murder, intent to murder and escape; Kenneth Hendley, 44, serving a 22-year sentence from Mobile and Montgomery counties on robbery and escape convictions; and Gerald Armitage, 27, serving a life sentence on first degree murder and escape charges.

Prison officials, bloodhounds, the Escambia County sheriff's department, Atmore police, and Alabama state troopers are combing the area for the escapees.

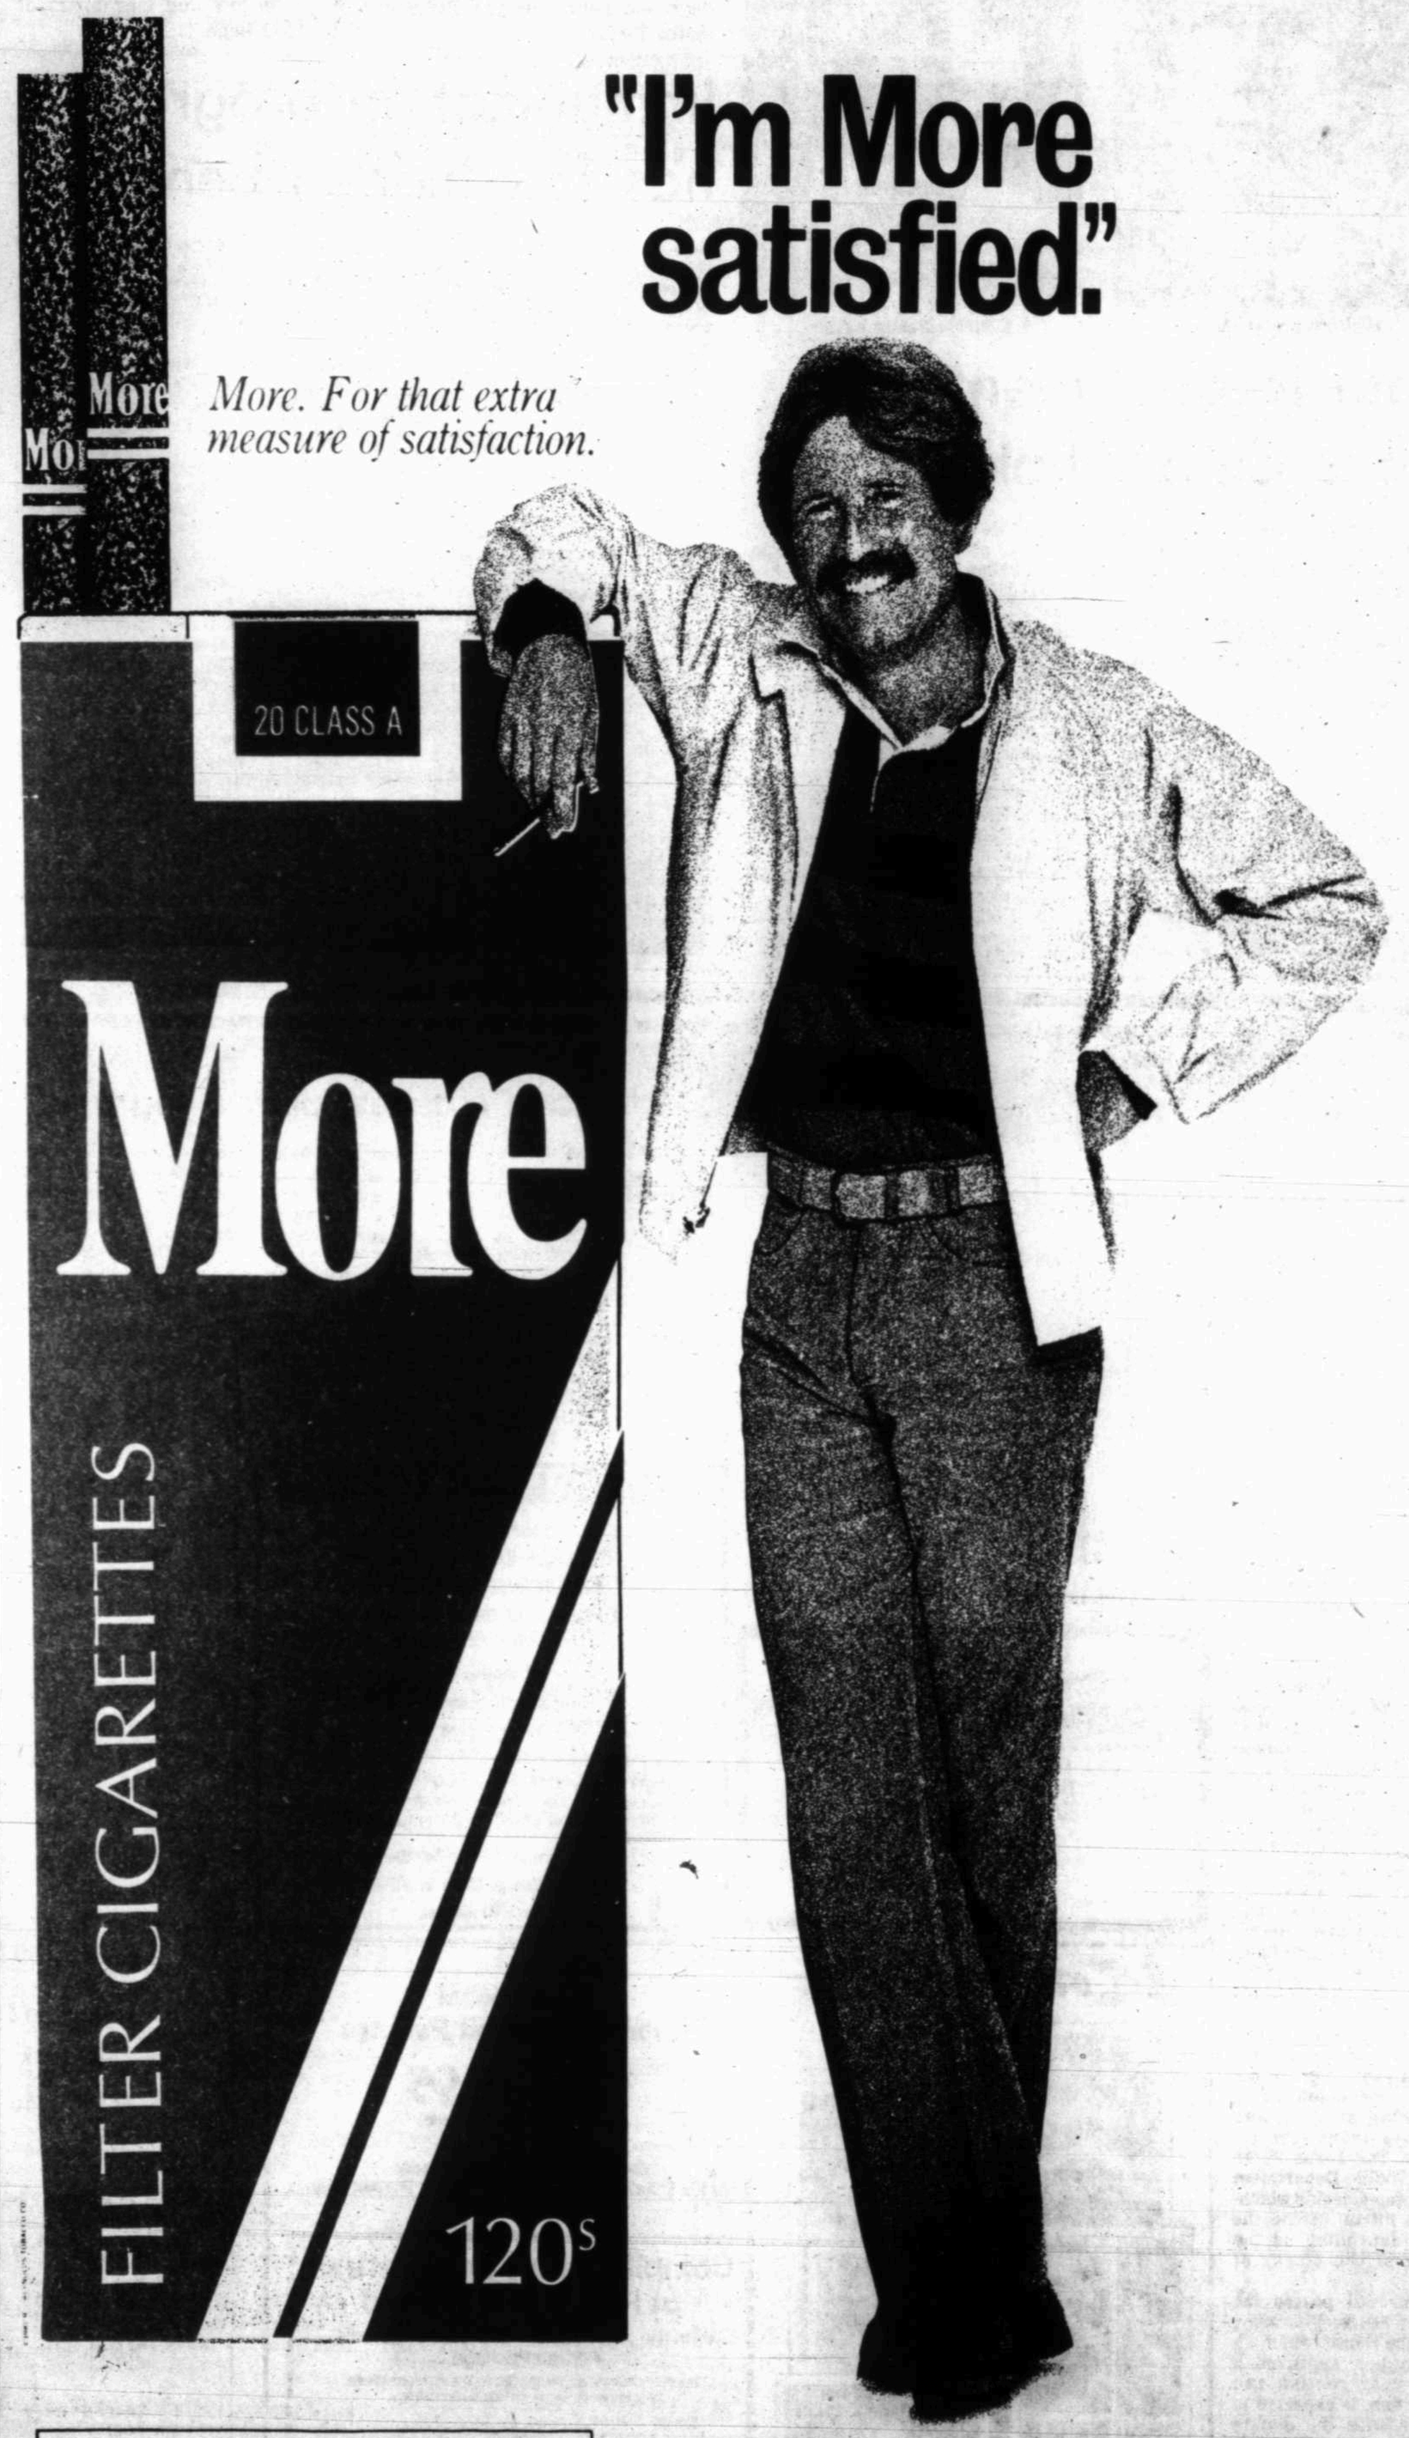

Tate said the inmates, all white males, escaped in the general direction of Alabama 21.

Miss Kreger is a senior at Midland High School where she ranks 82 with a 3.519 grade point average. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Lonnie A. Kreger. She plans to attend Tyler Junior College and study business management with an emphasis upon fashion.

At MHS, Miss Kreger is a member of the President's Cabinet, National Honor Society, Junior Council and Packbackers.

Immunization program has few hidden benefits

ATLANTA (AP) — While attention is focused on efforts to end the spread of measles in the United States, record declines in mumps and German measles also have occurred, health officials say.

The declines in those disease are a direct result of the federal government's effort to eliminate measles in the United States by October 1982, said Dr. Alan Bloch, a measles expert with the immunization branch of the national Centers for Disease Control.

Doctors from around the country will be told about the good news and other hidden benefits of the measles-elimination program when they meet at the CDC Tuesday for the 16th annual Immunization Conference.

U.S. Health and Human Services Secretary Richard Schweiker was to open the three-day session, which will include reports from leading doctors in the immunization field.

Bloch said mumps and German measles have declined because 75 percent of the measles' vaccine used in the elimination program also contains vaccine for those diseases.

"Measles is more than 60 percent lower than last year's record-breaking provisional number of 13,430 cases," Bloch said in a recent interview.

"Rubella (German measles) was 45 percent below last year's record-breaking number of 3,837 cases. For mumps there was a record-breaking low of 8,500 cases in 1980 and we are 60 percent below that," he said.

Although experts are optimistic about eliminating measles by the fall of 1982, they do not expect to eliminate the other two diseases, Bloch said. Unlike measles, which is easy to diagnose, mumps and German measles cause different symptoms in different people and often go unrecognized.

Bloch said ohere is a difference between trying to eliminate measles in the United States and trying to eradicate it worldwide.

"Eradication means the total abolishment of the disease, and elimination means the abolishment of ongoing transmission," he said. "We have to be careful to call it elimination. To totally eradicate measles would be very difficult. Nobody is thinking of doing it."

Because the measles-elimination program involves only the United States, doctors expect imported measles cases to continue to arrive here, making it important to continue immunization programs.

"I think measles' elimination has other benefits besides the low number of cases we're seeing," Bloch said. "I think the major benefit is putting in place a system which should perpetuate high immunization levels nationwide. We can effectively prevent ongoing transmission resulting in large outbreaks of measles."

Four protesters arrested

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Four people were arrested but no violence erupted as officers using horses and riot gear formed a barrier between an estimated 650 pro- and anti-Khomeini demonstrators.

The two factions hurled insults at one another during a six-hour demonstration outside the Federal Building in the Westwood area Sunday, police said. No injuries were reported.

Police closed a few blocks of Wilshire Boulevard for about an hour as demonstrators milled on the sidewalks, and offramps from the nearby San Diego Freeway were closed for about five hours, said Sgt. John Stilo.

The Iranians for Constitutional Monarchy, who oppose the current rule of the Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini in Iran, had sought a permit to hold their demonstration on U.S. property surrounding the Federal Building. But authorities said they had insufficient personnel to guard the property against possible damage, so the demonstrators had to keep to the city sidewalks.

Small plane crashes, pilot unharmed

HOUSTON (AP) — A single-engine plane that crashed in the front yard of a Harris County home apparently lost power on the final approach to a suburban Houston airport, investigators say.

The pilot, Gary Boyd, climbed from the wreckage unharmed, said Larry Lieder, a spokesman for the Cy-Fair Volunteer Fire Department.

Boyd, who was flying from Spring Creek Airport in north Harris County, was making his final approach to Weiser Air Park when the plane's engine backfired, Lieder said.

The 26-year-old pilot attempted to land the Cessna 182 Skylane in a field but crashed in the yard of Sharon Zissa's home, Lieder said.

One of the wings sheared off a light pole and briefly left two homes in the neighborhood without power, Lieder said.

Fishermen protest for third day

CORPUS CHRISTI, Texas (AP) — Commercial fishermen protesting a proposed ban on redfish and trout harvests set up floating pickets at four spots along the Texas coast Sunday, but Coast Guard officials said maritime traffic flowed smoothly.

In the third day of nautical demonstrations, the fishermen lined up their boats at Port Isabel, Port O'Connor and Port Aransas on Texas' lower coast and along the Kennedy Causeway at Corpus Christi.

Although Coast Guard units were "keeping a low profile," the presence of patrol boats may have deterred commercial fishermen at Port Isabel from organizing a blockade, said Coast Guard Lt. Alan Sine.

"Earlier, it looked like they were going to start something organized down there, but we kept the area under surveillance and let them know we were not going to tolerate that kind of activity," he said.

The fishermen are upset over a bill that would ban them, but not sport fishermen, from catching redfish and spotted trout for two years. The Texas Parks and Wildlife Department then would decide whether to lift or extend the ban, depending on the state of the stocks of fish.

The bill passed the Texas Senate Thursday, and the House, which already has approved a four-year redfish and trout ban, is expected to agree with the Senate version. Gov. Bill Clements has said he will sign the legislation approving the ban, which would begin Sept. 1.

Friday, a flotilla of 36 commercial fishing vessels stretched across the Intracoastal Waterway 10 miles southwest of Port O'Connor and blocked the passage of two barges. Coast Guard officials dispersed the blockade with threats of possible fines for obstructing navigable waterways.

Over the weekend, commercial and sport fishing vessels occasionally bumped into each other, leading to angry exchanges between fishermen on the boats, but the Coast Guard did not take action against the protesters.

"It's all been pretty smooth and pretty quiet today," Sine said Sunday. "We're letting everyone know what'll hapen if they disrupt traffic, but there's hasn't been any of that."

GRAMMER-MURPHEY

Zoeller ends long slump

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — "Golf's crazy," says Fuzzy Zoeller, who spent a long, turbulent day proving it.

He suffered and survived most of the game's sensations and breezed to a four-shot victory in Sunday's wind-swept 36-hole windup to the $300,000 Colonial National Invitation tournament.

The happy-go-lucky Zoeller gunned down half a dozen challengers with a topsy-turvy 68-70 spiced with strings of bogeys and birdies, highs and lows, ups and downs.

In the end, he stripped three shots from par from the closing seven holes of Colonial's par-70 Trinity River treachery to scuttle all threats and halt a two-year slump dating back to his memorable 1979 Masters triumph.

"Really," he sighed, "it's a great feeling."

His six-under-par 274 beat runner-up Hale Irwin by four strokes, earned him $54,000, overshadowed his chronic back problem and sent him scurrying off to a champagne celebration.

"I may be sore in the morning ... but who cares?" he said as he grinned and grappled with his feisty two-year-old daughter, Sunnye.

It was Sunnye who got off one of the best lines of the week as she helped her dad construct an opening round 67.

"Don't choke," her father quoted her as saying. "Remember, this is how you earn a living, Daddy. Keep it up."

He did, despite several notable lapses.

After Friday's thundershowers necessitated a 36-hole finale, Zoeller began the day at four-under-par, a storke ahead of Irwin and two better than Tom Kite and Keith Fergus.

He carted four straight birdies during the morning round, opened up a six-shot lead and appeared en route to a runaway. Just as quickly, he bogeyed three in a row, finished with a third-round 68 and invited a fresh series of challenges with a shaky start on the final 18.

Ray Floyd mounted the most serious threat, reeling off five birdies through seven holes while Zoeller was dropping two more shots to par. They were tied at four under at one point.

"There was some doubt in my mind on the second 18," admitted Zoeller, "but I hit an eight-iron on the 12th hole that clinched it, I think."

He laced the shot within inches of the cup, dropped the birdie putt, and swept on past the field, including a faltering Floyd and a frustrated Irwin and Kite.

Floyd fell from contention with a double bogey at the ninth, while Irwin and Kite failed to mount a charge. Like Zoeller, both ended with par 70s, with Kite making a most expensive bogey at the last hole.

Irwin won $32,400, Kite $15,600, tying with Curtis Strange, 67-72 Sunday, and Scott Simpson, 70-70, for third.

Floyd's closing 70 deadlocked him with Don January at 281, a stroke behind Frank Conner.

"I felt like if I could beat Irwin and Kite, I could win it..." Zoeller said of the closing round. "Hale was up and down, too, and Kite — well, it was one of those days when golf got him.

"He was all over the hole ... but the putts wouldn't go in."

Lee Rebels host Lewisville Tuesday

By MIKE CRUVER
Sports Writer

Coach Mike Campbell's District 6-5A champion Lewisville Farmers invade Midland Lee diamond Tuesday for the first game in the bi-district baseball best-of-three series. After the single game Tuesday, the series moves to Lewisville Friday for a 1 p.m. game. If necessary two games will be played Friday.

The Farmers came into Tuesday's game following a gruelling three-game playoff with Dennison to determine the district champion after the two clubs were tied at the end of the regular season. They will be facing a Rebel team that has been idle since claiming the District 5-5A title May 9 with an 8-5 win over Midland High.

Coach Ernie Johnson's outfit takes a 16-6 season record into the game with the first pitch set to be thrown at 4 p.m. Lewisville, meanwhile is 20-10 for the season.

COACH CAMPBELL said, "We are the type of club that does whatever we have to do to win. We can play for the big inning or lay down a bunt and play for one run." The Farmers have belted 19 home runs in 30 games. Leading the home run parade is senior shortshop Sam Burgess and senior first baseman Kenneth Miller with four. Catcher Chris Hall and designated hitter Rick White have added three each.

Lee is not as dependent on the long ball; hitting just seven in 14 district contests. Alan Koonce hit two district round trippers to pace the Rebels' power attack. Hitting solo homers for Lee were Randy Velarde, Ron Smedley, Bill Dern, Kevin Bradshaw and Barry Blackwell. Even though the Rebels haven't hit many, the homers that Lee has hit has come at opportune times.

The Rebels use the consistent attack of a team with four regulars hitting over .400. Smedley's .451 leads the team and was good enough to win the district crown. Added punch comes from Koonce, .431; Velarde, .420; and Blackwell at .405.

Lewisville doesn't have a .400 hitter on its roster. Leading the Farmers is third baseman Guy Larsen with a .341 mark. Right behind is right fielder Mike McCarney, .327, Hall, .313; and left fielder Byron Beal, .314. Beal platoons in left with Randy Baird, .152.

BURGESS, leads the Farmers with 23 RBIs despite his .281 batting average. Second on the club with RBIs is Larsen with 19. Two hitters, White and Hall, have knocked in 17 runs each. In all, the top 10 players for the Farmers have driven in 113 runs in 30 contests.

Smedley leads the Rebs with 18 RBIs. Second is Koonce with 15 while Blackwell had knocked in 14 and Velard has chased home 12.

The Farmers don't have a real base stealing threat according to Campbell. He added that the team is pretty even in the running catagory with several players swiping three bases this season.

Lee hasn't done much stealing either. The Rebels prefer to play the hit and run game. But, when Johnson sends someone it is usually Barry Corley, Blackwell or Velarde. Ricky Wright has good speed and Chris Parker can pick up a stolen base or two.

ACCORDING to Johnson, Koonce will start on the mound for the Rebels Tuesday. Koonce, the thunder-throwing, right handed senior chalked up a 5-2 district mark, 7-2 overall. He pitched 47.2 innings with an ERA of 2.08 in district. He struck out 46 and walked only nine. Koonce surrendered 14 earned runs in his 47.2 innings of work.

Coach Campbell said he would probably send senior right hander Byron Beal to the mound Tuesday. Beal has an 0-2 record with a 3.18 ERA. Campbell would like to go with one of his aces, right hander Doug Smith or lefty Mike Crusoe. Crusoe leads leads the team with a 10-3 season mark. In 68.1 innings he compiled an ERA of 1.32. Crusoe, who pitched a no-hitter against Denton in district play, was the losing pitcher Saturday in the second playoff game with Dennison.

Smith, with a record of 7-2, has built an ERA of 2.15 in 62 innings of pitching. He was credited with both wins over Dennison.

Johnson, with the benefit of nine days off, can start with Koonce and save Randy Velarde for the game Friday in Lewisville. Velarde has a 7-1 season record. In 37.2 innings of work, Velarde has struck out 31 and walked 24 with a 1.69 ERA. In relief, Johnson has Pepper or Dern to call on. Pepper, used extensively in relief, has no wins or losses, in 3.1 innings of pitching. Dern, who made a start against San Angelo, has 1-0 season mark in 8.2 innings of work. Dern's ERA stands at 4.27 while Pepper's did not give up an earned run during the regular season.

Lewisville in the playoffs for the first time in since 1977 while Lee is breaking a two-year hold on the District 5-5A title by Abilene Cooper.

Alice Ritzman's expression during Sunday's LPGA Classic says it all as putt fails to drop while Los Angeles Dodgers' outfielder Jay Johnstone smiles through it all after teammates dumped bucket of shaving cream on his head during a radio interview.

Whitworth just happy to be winner

PARAMUS, N.J. (AP) — Kathy Whitworth, savoring her first LPGA victory in two years, says she doesn't care that winning the $125,000 Coca Cola Classic is a giant step toward becoming the first female golfer in history to reach $1 million in earnings.

Instead, Whitworth was fighting back tears after a sudden-death playoff at the Ridgewood Country Club that gave her a victory over 26-year-old Alice Ritzman.

"At times last year and the year before, I thought I could never win again," said Whitworth, 41, who frequently finishes in the top 10, but hasn't regained the momentum she enjoyed while dominating the Ladies Professional Golf Association tour in the late 1960s and early 1970s.

"I really had doubts," she said. "I can't talk about what this means to me without getting choked up."

Whitworth's joy was tempered by the recent death of two close friends. Her long-time caddie, Jim Devers, died last December of cancer, and business associate Leo MacNamara passed away suddenly on Thursday.

Jackson, Amarillo post victories

By The Associated Press

In Texas League action, Jackson beat El Paso, 9-5, and Amarillo defeated Tulsa, 10-2.

Rusty Tillman doubled home two runs as the Jackson Mets beat the El Paso Diablos, 9-5. Mike Anicich and Mike Fitzgerald also drove in two runs each for the Mets.

Tom Thurberg, 3-2, was the winning pitcher. Mike Madden, 3-3, was the loser.

The Amarillo Gold Sox pounded out 13 hits in a 10-2 victory over the Tulsa Drillers.

Captains nudge Cubs in 11th

Shreveport's Captains pushed over an 11th inning run to snap Midland's winning streak at four Sunday night, but you can't say the Cubs didn't give the fans a run for their money.

Down 7-3 going into the ninth, Midland exploded for four runs after two were out to send the game into extra innings in an effort to keep the streak alive. But Mark Lohuis got the final out and then held the Cubs at bay until the eleventh when a walk to John Ziccardi and a double down the left field line by John Rabb scored pinch-runner Doran Perdue with what proved to be the winning run.

THE WIN squared the Texas League series at one apiece going into tonight's 7 p.m. tilt in which Manager Jack Mull will fire Alan Fowlkes, 3-2, at Midland while Roy Hartsfield will counter with Joe McClain, 3-3.

Midland's rally in the ninth almost fizzled before it began when relief pitcher Greg Moyer hit Mike Shepston with a pitch and Craig Kornfeld walked, Mel Hall lined out to right and Javier Fierro grounded into a force at second. After Tom Grant walked to load the bases, it put Moyer in position for a easy save with two out, but that's when the fun began. Mike Diaz singled home two runs to put runners on first and third.

DAVE OWEN came in to run, an important change, as it turned out, and Jack Upton looped a single to right, plating Grant. That was it for Moyer and on came Lohuis, 1-0, to yield a single to left to LaVigne. Owen roared in from second and his fade away slide to the diamond side of the plate avoided a throw and tag that was in time. That tied it, and after a walk to Carmello Martinez only a great play by Tom O'Mally at third on Shepston's hot grounder kept the Cubs from winning it on the spot.

Lefthander Tom Spino started for Midland and Rob Blyth, 0-3, eventually lost it, but Phil Nastu, a little used southpaw pitched effectively after taking over in the second for Spino. At the time, it was 5-0 and Shreveport had five hits, including Greg Baker's third homer of the season. Nastu kept the Captains off balance in allowing four hits through the seventh, but then showed signs of tiring in the eighth when Shreveport struck for two important runs.

An error and Don Gladden's homer to right made it 7-3 and Nastu was headed for more trouble after two walks and a bad hop infield hit by Ron Quick loaded the bases. Blyth was summoned to get the last out.

Although Shreveport pitching cooled the hot bats of Hall and Upton, LaVigne continued his bat revival with three hits, including his third homer, a solo blast to center in the sixth. The former University of Connecticut cager has nine hits in his last 16 trips and has knocked in eight runs in the last three games.

BRUIN BREWIN'S—LaVigne's bat binge raised his average to .238, which seems modest enough, but quite an improvement over his .180 of a week ago...How did the Cubs lose after rallying for four in the ninth and those fielding gems by shortstop Javier Fierro and Centerfielder Mel Hall? With a runner on second, Fierro's head long dive into the hole stopped Greg Baker's grounder in the ninth and the only possible play was to third for the out. And Hall ran from left center to right center to one hand John Ziccardi's a long fly to end the second...

Hurt subsides as we realize it's all for best

TED BATTLES
BATTLE SCENE

Gradually the hurt is subsiding. When Spike Dykes picked media coaches for the Midland Lee Maroon-White game Thursday, we admit we felt slighted. Then, we realized it's all for the best.

We'd never be able to whip a team into shape in the short time allotted and, besides, something that happened last winter on a visit to Spike's office probably landed us on Dykes' Sick List.

Spike was busy with something else so while we waited we browsed through his library and came across a book by Charles Caldwell on the Single Wing. When Spike was asked if he was thinking in terms of the Single Wing, he grinned and said, "Oh, that must be one of Gil Bartosh's old books, one he forgot to take along when he became athletic director."

WE CAN easily visualize what happened when Spike returned the book. "Gee, Gil, I didn't know you were into ornithology."

"Oh, yes, I picked it up from Dud DeGroot, the old University of New Mexico and Washington Redskin coach. He not only found it intellectually broadening, but felt running around the Rockies in pursuit of a rare species to study was a wonderful way to stay in shape."

Gil then looked at the book, and laughed, "Spike, the book isn't about birds or wounded aircraft, it's a football formation used many years ago before they simplified the game to such an extent that even if a kid can't walk and chew gum at the same time, he can play it...or coach it, just kidding, Spike, hey, hey."

Despite his youth, Spike proved wise beyond his years in turning the Maroon and White reins over to a couple of Born Yesterdays like Ed Clements and Terry Williamson. At least they won't rock the boat.

FRANKLY, it would have been a monumental task preparing a team for this game. We'd have had to gut his present squad and start over to install our single wing. First, we'd have to find a non-existent breed of back who could run-pass-and-punt, known in the halycon days of the single wing, as a triple threat, for tailback. A Walter Payton type might fill the bill, if he could pass and punt and play defensive halfback.

A Tony Dorsett type would be great for the wing, where his speed would make him a dangerous scatback on, excuse the term, misdirection plays. Of course, he'd have to be able to tackle so he could play safety on defense.

Quarterback...6-4 220 and a devastating blocker. Fullback...gimme another Earl Campbell. He's physical enough so that learning how to back up the line with the quarterback would be no problem.

For linemen we might have to recruit some of the run-all-day soccer types. We'd need a center who could hit a moving target from five to 15 yards away, a couple of mobile 170-180 pound guards who could pull and beat a back to the point of attack and a couple of tough, aggressive 180-210 pounders for tackles while the ends would have to be lean, mean and durable, the kind who could knock down a tackle or linebacker or wipe out a four-man escort on a power sweep.

OF COURSE, the shoulder would have to come back into the tackle, low, clean and sure. None of this helmet on the wishbone stuff. Remember how low the tackle was an indication of courage and you got a yellow jersey for any tackle above the waist?

With this team you wouldn't see any of this Las Vegas football where some guy ran around passing from his own end zone. Rock 'em back to their own 15 with a quick kick and force 'em into a mistake.

Offensively, we'd control the ball, conservatively 36 minutes of a game. The primary danger is that against the crazed-with-fear-of-the-pass defenses in vogue today, our tailback would break on every play, leading to second half fatigue. So maybe we'd have to instruct our backs to fall down after four yards, if the yardage came too easily and quickly.

OF COURSE, a waiver would be necessary from the MISD in regard to any responsibility for holes in dressing room walls following pregame or halftime talks.

Before the game, we'd inform the squad gravely of the Lee Oklahoma Alumni, not to be confused with the Notre Dame Subway Alumni and the scheming branch in New Jersey, that was plotting for our removal because of our revolutionary offense.

Then, at half, we'd resort to our Win One for the Gipper talk. No, it's not something out of Rockne. Gipper is our St. Bernard, blessed with an enormous appetite and the pay check for a win would help feed her.

We can almost hear the wheels turning on the other side of town, but sorry, Pat even if you called and turned the Bulldogs over to us today, there's no way we could get the team ready to play by Saturday, even if Gil would let us borrow his Charlie Caldwell edition.

Or was that a sigh of relief from Spike?

BOWLING BEAT

Hopper, Hall set pace in Midland pin circles

BY RANDY ISENBERG

Don Hopper's 277 game and 697 series in the Industrial League playoff, and Patti Hall's 642 three-game set and 846 four-games in the Ladies Scratch Trio, were the highlight scores of the past couple of weeks on the lanes in Midland.

Other fine scores were: Leona Church's 222-221-633-820 set in the Ladies Scratch Trio and Ellie Shelton's 224 game and 600 series in the same league.

The top men's scores included Ross Greham, 237-260-687, in the Oil Stars, Clint Benefield, 245-672, in the same league. Guy Conley rolled a 290 game in the Dellwood Early Mixers, after leaving a four pin count, Conley rolled 11 strikes in a row.

L Ray Sutton, who three years was in top flight form, found the line again with a 278 game while bowling in the Oil Star League. On June 6, Sutton rolled a 255 game in the same league.

In the prior two weeks, Ross Graham, has rolled series of 687, 242-631, and 244-651. Graham, in this year's city meet, became the first Midlander to roll a 300 game in the city tournament's nearly 50 years of competition. I feel, and so does a consensus of those who know, Graham is the Midland bowler of the year this year for his consistency day in and day out performances on and off the lanes. The Midland Bowling Association has no such award honoring its participants, but I strongly feel that the bowling interests in the city should get together and plan such an award.

The Rex's Golf Team of the Oil Star League has been explosive the past couple of weeks, averaging better than 200 per person as a team. On April 29, the team sponsored by Rex Worrel, rolled series of 3053 and 3039. On May 6, they rolled four sets of team games of better than 1000.

The Ready Salads and Foods team of the Air Park Scratch League rolled a fine team game of 1109, enroute to clinching the second half of the league. In that effort, Lorenzo Davila rolled a 235 game; Jr. Perales and Tito Velasco round out the quintet. This fine bowling came at the expense of the C.C. Tanstafft team captained by lefty Jim Ledbetter who rolled a 244 game enroute to a 528 series. Ledbetter completed the year at 203 for the 108-game season.

The Dellwood Lanes King and Queen of the Hill tournament held at Dellwood Lanes on Fridays at 7 p.m. and 9 p.m., has provided an opportunity for competitive bowlers to test their skills. The tournament concludes on Labor Day with a big Grand Masters tournament. So far, seven kings have been crowned in 13 weeks of competition. No women has yet been on the top rung of the latter as of yet.

The kings have been Scott Pope of Andrews, first king and also the top money winner with $493.12; Clifford Holloway, who held the top spot for two weeks; Joe Tidwell of Odessa, also a two-time winner; Sammy Montez of Monahans, the only three-time winner; Ross Graham, two-time winner; Tommy Gammage, two-time winner and current king; Clint Benefield, who is the seventh leading money winner at $278.75 and is also the only bowler so far to string five strikes in a row for $100.

The top 10 money winners at this time are: Pope; Kenny Hostetter of Odessa, a non-winner at second with $466.88; Graham, $461.; Gammage; Tidwell; Montez; Benefield; Clifford Holloway; Mark Triplett; and Johnny Poe. So far, $5,138. has been paid out in prize money.

With 17 weeks of qualifying left before the Grand Masters tournament on Labor Day, there is time to join the 13 bowlers who have already qualified for the finals. To become eligible, a bowler must cash at least once in the weekly tournament. This is a handicap tournament, handicapped at 85 per cent of an individual's average and 200.

Upcoming events— Air Park Lanes Memorial Day Stratch Doubles Elimination Tournament scheduled for Monday, May 25, at 11 a.m.

Texas, Arkansas tangle for SWC tourney title

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — The Texas Longhorns and Arkansas Razorbacks were to meet today for the championship of the Southwest Conference baseball tournament.

The game was to be held at 1:30 p.m.

The two teams advanced to the championship game with identical 9-3 victories over the Houston Cougars Sunday.

Kevin McReynolds and Kenny Rogers each had home runs Arkansas handed Houston a 9-3 defeat to oust the Cougars.

Arkansas jumped out to a 4-0 lead in the first inning as Chris Shaddy and Reggie Thomas scored two Razorback runs on a single and a double.

Houston cut Arkansas' lead to 4-2 in the bottom of the second, but Rogers hit his sixth homer of the season in the fourth inning to raise Arkansas' lead to 8-2.

Chris Campbell drove in two runs with a single and scored all the way from first on a three-base throwing error to highlight a wild, seven-run outburst in the eighth inning as Texas took a 9-3 victory over Houston.

The Longhorns were leading 1-0 when the eighth inning began and they scored their seven runs on four hits, three walks, two sacrifices, one balk and the throwing error by Houston first baseman Dale Oliver.

Phils take aim on Fernando

By JOHN NELSON
AP Sports Writer

Mike Schmidt of the Philadelphia Phillies says "it sure ain't the World Series," but the attention that will be focused on tonight's meeting with the Los Angeles Dodgers and rookie phenom Fernando Valenzuela might make it seem so.

"We've got everything to gain and nothing to lose," Schmidt said. "The best way to approach a game like this is to not get excited."

Valenzuela, a left-handed screwball pitcher from Mexico, brings an 8-0 record with five shutouts and an 0.50 earned run average into the game at Dodger Stadium. The 20-year-old Valenzuela has yet to face the 1980 World Series champion Phillies, and Schmidt and his teammates would like nothing better than to put the first blemish on his record.

SCMMIDT CRACKED his major league-leading 11th home run of the season Sunday to help the Phillies beat San Diego 6-3 and win the rubber match of their three-game series with the Padres on the West Coast.

Phils right-hander Nino Espinosa tossed a seven-hitter for his first victory since April 19 and second in five decisions.

About the meet with Valenzuela, Schmidt said, "He probably is more anxious to see us than we are to see him."

The Phillies scored five runs off Padres starter Juan Eichelberger, 3-2, in the first three innings. Pete Rose and Del Unser had RBI doubles in the first inning, Espinosa singled home a run in the second, and Manny Trillo and Larry Bowa drove in third-inning scores. Schmidt's homer, with none aboard, came in the fifth.

Dodgers win 7th in row; Astros make it 4 straight

Dodgers 6, Mets 1

The Dodgers, the hottest team in baseball with seven straight victories and 10 in 11 games, got still another fine pitching performance to beat the Mets. Left-hander Jerry Reuss, 4-1, scattered 12 hits and didn't allow a run until the ninth when Hubie Brooks hit an RBI single.

Ron Cey provided the firepower with his fifth home run in six games. The Dodgers scored all their runs in the fourth off Pat Zachry, 3-5. The inning included doubles by Derrel Thomas, Dusty Baker and Pedro Guerrero and singles by Bill Russell, Reuss and Thomas.

The Mets have lost seven in a row and 22 of 30. Brooks' RBI hit snapped a string of 19 innings in which New York has failed to score.

Reds 4, Pirates 3

Ken Griffey hit a two-run, inside-the-park homer, and Ray Knight hit a solo shot to give Cincinnati a three-game sweep of the Pirates. Mario Soto, 3-5, went the distance for the Reds, scattering seven hits.

In the third inning, Griffey hit a sinking line drive to left field that bounced past John Milner and rolled to the wall. Griffey raced all the way around the bases for his first home run of the season. Knight's leadoff homer in the seventh was his third.

Cardinals 4, Braves 3

St. Louis scored all its runs in the first inning, two on a single by Ken Oberkfell, and held off the Braves. Oberkfell's hit was the fifth straight single off 41-year-old right-hander Gaylord Perry, 3-3.

Pinch-hitter Bob Porter smacked a two-run double for Atlanta in the eighth to make it 4-3.

Astros 6, Cubs 1

Houston left-hander Bob Knepper yielded four hits in 7 1-3 innings to notch his fourth straight victory, and the Astros capitalized on some wildness by Cubs pitchers.

Chicago lefty Mike Kurkow walked six batters in his 2 1-3 innings as Houston marched to a 4-0 lead. Twice, Krukow, 1-4, walked a man with the bases loaded. Terry Puhl and Craig Reynolds each drove in a pair of runs for the Astros.

Giants 5, Expos 4

Jack Clark cracked a bases-loaded single in the bottom of the 12th inning to help San Francisco hand the slumping Expos their fifth loss in six games. The Giants, meanwhile, have won seven of their past 10.

Mike Sadek led off the San Francisco 12th with a walk off Bill Lee, 1-2. One out later, Enos Cabell singled, sending Sadek to third, and Joe Morgan walked to load the bases for Clark.

San Francisco came up with a run in the ninth on a two-out single by pinch hitter Jim Wohlford to send the game into extra innings.

Islanders now one away from Stanley Cup repeat

BLOOMINGTON, Minn. (AP) — The New York Islanders turned the Minnesota North Stars every which way but loose Sunday night, clawing back from a two-goal deficit and skating to a 7-5 victory which brought them within one game of their second National Hockey League Stanley Cup championship.

"This is the position to be in," said New York's Bryan Trottier, whose club leads the best-of-seven series 3-0. "Just reach out and grab it."

"This was by far our best effort and it still wasn't good enough," said Minnesota Coach Glen Sonmor. "That's as simple as I can put it."

The Islanders, "relentless," as Minnesota's Bobby Smith calls them, had as many heroes Sunday as they had records. The defending Stanley Cup champions allowed the North Stars a 3-1 first-period lead, but came back from so many angles and with so many weapons that they reembled a 0-man meat grinder, with the North Stars as lean hamburger.

"There is so much this hockey team can do," said defenseman Denis Potvin. "This club is hungry."

Mike Bossy, New York's automated goal-scoring machine, had two goals — his 16th and 17th — and two assists to give him 33 playoff points, snapping the record of 29 he shared with Trottier.

Potvin's two assists gave him 25 points in the playoffs, breaking the NHL scoring record of 24 for defensemen previously held by Bobby Orr. Trottier, with an empty-net goal and an assist, scored in his 16th consecutive Stanley Cup game, also a record.

"That's the wrong team to get into a shooting match with," said Minnesota goalie Gilles Meloche. "All their lines can score."

Butch Goring, the Islanders' whirling dervish whose 5-foot-9-inch frame barely seems large enough to contain his heavyweight-type energy, was the catalyst, however. Goring scored three goals, including two in the second period.

Minnesota, playing before 15,784 vocal fans at the Met Center, raced to its 3-1 lead in the first period on goals by Steve Christoff, Steve Payne and Smith to overshadow Bossy's 16th goal of the playoffs.

In the second period, Bob Nystrom scored on a tip-in and Goring followed with a power play tally at 7:16 to tie the game at 3-3. At 11:51, Goring notched his second goal of the game when he batted the puck out of the air past the stunned Meloche for a 4-3 edge.

Payne scored at 1:11 of the third period for a 4-4 standoff, but Bossy connected 54 seconds later and Goring took advantage of a bad clearing attempt by Minnesota and scored from directly in front of the North Stars' net at 6:34 for a 6-4 cushion.

"The hat trick is a great feeling, but I was more interested in winning the game," said Goring. "Somebody always comes up big on this team on any given night."

Minnesota's Dino Ciccarelli scored his 14th goal of the playoffs and 21st point at 13:35, trimming the margin to 6-5. That goal enabled the 20-year old winger to break Don Maloney's rookie scoring record of 20 points set in the 1979 playoffs.

The North Stars continued to press for the equalizer, but just 15 seconds after they pulled Meloche, Bossy broke out 2-on-1 with Trottier, and, rather than take the goal for his own hat trick, set up his linemate for the clinching empty-net goal.

Meloche, who has been playing sick during the series, dragged his tired body back to the nets for the final, painful seconds.

"Anytime you score five goals you should win," he said. "I don't feel too good. I'm rundown, I guess."

Or, maybe just overrun.

Taste Bonus!

Research generates consistent proof that low tar MERIT matches taste of higher tar brands.

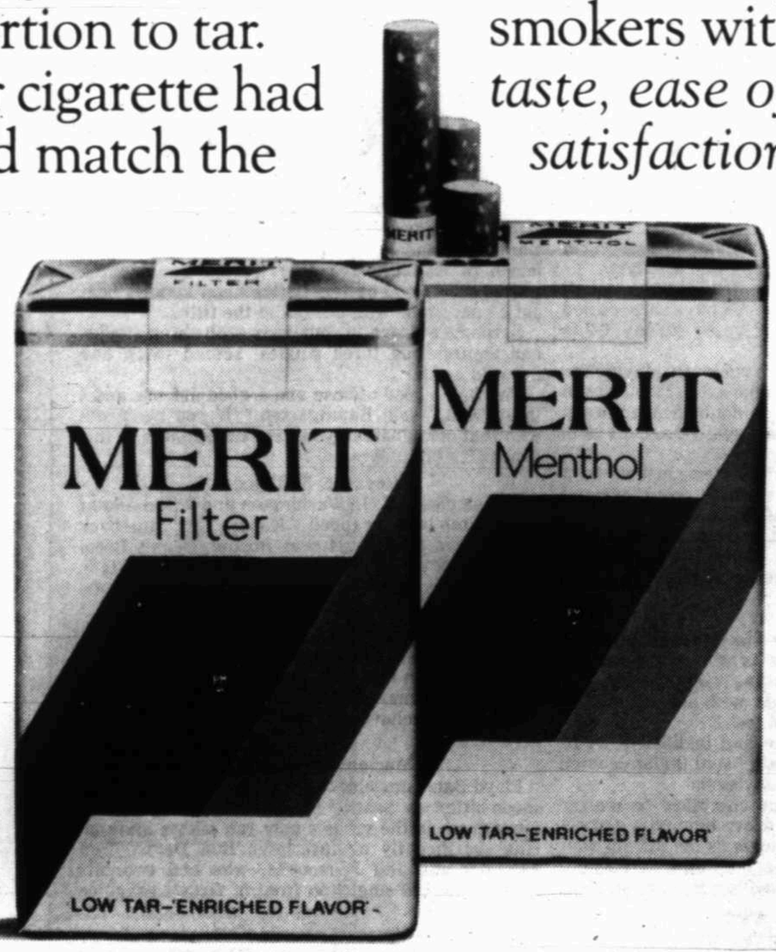

Five years ago, low tar MERIT sparked a whole new era in smoking by delivering taste way out of proportion to tar.

Until MERIT, no low tar cigarette had been able to prove it could match the taste of higher tar brands.

Millions Endorse MERIT Taste

Switching studies confirm it. 90% of smokers switching to MERIT are coming directly from higher tar cigarettes.

Fact: Since its introduction, MERIT has gained more smokers than any other low tar brand!

MERIT: Taste Success

MERIT continues to win higher tar smokers with its unique combination of taste, ease of switch, and long-term satisfaction.

A combination that appeals to millions of smokers who have switched to—and stayed with—the first proven taste alternative to higher tar smoking.

The momentum builds: MERIT is changing the future of smoking.

Two District 8 wildcats sited

Exxon Corp. of Midland has sited a cation for a 20,500-foot rank wildcat Loving County 20 miles west-northest of Kermit.

Designated the No. 1 Evelyn Lineerry "C", the location is 1,948 from e north line and 2,110 feet from the st line of section 3, block C-26 of the ublic School Lands survey.

Drillsite is two miles southwest of a 2,303 depleted Silurian gas discovery n the Lineberry field and 4 1/2 miles outheast of a 22,500-foot Ellenburger iscovery, No. 1 Glen S. Brunson in he Brunson Ranch field.

HOWARD WILDCAT SITED

Flag-Redfern Oil of Midland will drill the No. 1-A D. Allred as 10,800-foot wildcat test in Howard County 14 miles northwest of Big Spring.

Located 2,055 feet from the north line and 2,310 feet from the west line of section 5, block 33, T2N, T&P RR survey, the site is a replacement well for the No. 1 which was plugged and abandoned.

Just south of the No. 1 Allred, a wildcat location and just east of the No. 1 D. Allred, plugged dry and abandoned at 9,042 feet on 8-6-73 the project is 3,500 feet north of the No. 1 Myers, a Fusselman discovery.

Six wildcats sited in District 8 area counties

Area operators have sited wildcat locations in District 8-A counties of Borden, Hale, Garza and Dickens.

BORDEN COUNTY

Deeper of two new wildcat tests scheduled for Borden County is Aminoil USA, Inc. of Midland No. 1 Chilton "20", projected to 9,000 feet.

Drillsite is 585 feet from the noth line and 561 feet from the eat line of section 20, block 30, T-4-N, T&P survey.

The site is about 10 miles southeast of Gail and 1 1/4 mile west of the Wicker (Strawn) field area.

****

MGF Oil Corp. of Midland will drill the No. 1 Everett, a scheduled 8,575-foot wildcat, 10 miles southeast of Gail and 4 1/2 miles west of the Wicker (Strawn) field of Borden County.

The new wildcat is 660 feet from the south line and 660 feet from the east line of section 138, block 25 of the H&TC survey.

HALE COUNTY

Texas Oil & Gas Corp. of Midland has announced a location for a scheduled 9,300-foot wildcat in Hale County, one mile west of Abernathy.

Designated the No. 1 Givans "A", drillsite is 1,650 feet from the south line and 1,420 feet from he east line of section 10, block CK, in the GC&SF survey.

The location is 1/4 mile south of the depleted Abernathy field.

GARZA COUNTY

In Garza County, 18 miles north of Gail, Houston Oil & Minerals Corp. of Midland has staked a location for the No. 1 Lott, a proposed 8,700-foot explorer.

Drillsite is 1,980 feet from the north line and 660 feet from the east line of section 12, block 30, T-7-N, Jim Burress survey.

Location is four miles west of production in the Red Loflin field and two miles southwest of Ellenburger production in the Happy field.

DICKENS COUNTY

States Oil Co. of Houston has announced a location for the No. 1 D.E. Woodward, a proposed 5,400-foot exploratory project in Dickens County,, seven miles southwest of Spur.

Location is 467 feet from the south line and 467 feet from the west line of the R.M. Parish survey A-855.

It is approximately 2 1/2 miles eat of Atkins production in the White River field.

Cuba, Puerto Rico make $1 billion demand from U.S. gasoline taxes

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court today rejected attempts by Puerto Rico and the U.S. Virgin Islands to obtain more than $1 billion in gasoline tax revenues from the U.S. Treasury.

The justices, without comment, let stand a ruling that Congress, in revising the tax laws, did not intend the two island governments to have the money.

At issue in the two separate appeals was a congressional scheme that some federal officials view as a substitute for the federal revenue-sharing program, from which Puerto Rico and the Virgin Islands are excluded.

"The ultimate decision in this case will be of historic importance to the relationship between the United States and its territories," lawyers for the Virgin Islands contended.

The dispute strikes "at the heart of the fiscal relationship between the United States and Puerto Rico," lawyers for the commonwealth told the court.

Treasury officials last year estimated that the amount in dispute came to about $1 billion, with the amount growing each year.

Puerto Rico and the Virgin Islands say they are entitled to the revenues from the 4-cent-a-gallon gasoline excise tax collected when gasoline refined on their islands is transported to the mainland.

The two governments made the claim under a congressional plan to help make the islands self-sufficient by refunding to them federal taxes collected when their products are shipped to the mainland.

The gasoline issues did not become important until 1956, when the first refinery opened in Puerto Rico and 1966, when a refinery opened in the Virgin Islands.

When the requests were made in 1974, the treasury refused to hand over the past tax revenues and declined to start making the payments from future taxes. Puerto Rico filed suit in 1975, and the Virgin Islands did so a year later.

A federal trial judge in Washington said in 1978 that Puerto Rico was entitled to the tax money collected beginning in 1974, but it was barred by its own inaction from collecting past revenues. The court said the Virgin Islands could collect all of the back revenues and future revenues.

An appeals court last October overturned the decision, ruling that Puerto Rico and the Virgin Islands were not entitled to any of the gasoline tax revenues.

The appeals panel, saying the issues were "virtually identical," ruled that the gasoline taxes were not the "equalization" of competition taxes envisioned in the congressional scheme.

The Justice Department told the Supreme Court that the suit was barred by a separate congressional statute and by a principle that bars the government from being sued unless it consents.

In the case of Puerto Rico, the amount the island claimed came to $350 million through 1974, with the sum growing by $20 million a year.

Anadarko announces Scurry probe

Andarko Production Co. of Midland has announced plans to site a 7,500-foot wildcat in Scurry County.

The No. 1 Koonsman will be located 715 feet from the south line and 2,802 feet from the west line of section 259 block 2, H&TC survey 12 miles northeast of Snyder.

Located 2 miles southeast of the No. 1 Clara Johnson et al, a wildcat test plugged dry and abadnoned 3-17-75 in the Tonto northeast field, the site is 1 1/2 miles east and slightly south of depleted oil production in the DIF field, the No. 1 La Cascia, a Fuller discovery and 2 miles south and slightly east of a depleted Fuller oil discovery.

Don Main gets traveling trophy

Don Main, geologist for Union Texas Petroleu, was the overall winner of the World Series and was recently presented the $1,000 cash prize and trophy for Young Explorationist of the Year by Dr. Jack G. Elam of the Permian Basin Gradute Center.

Limited to geologists less than 35 years of age, all participants had less than three years experience and no one was able to make money consistently.

Don Main had a total of 12 points which was the total of his relative standings at the end of three games. He started with a total of $3,000,000 and at the end of the third game, he had $2,625,775. Weekly profits were subject to a 25% capital gains tax. Main drilld only three wildcats, all dry; and he drilled seventeen development wells, of which eight were productive. In effect, he won the series by careful close-in bidding on development tracts.

Second in the series was M.A. Kulenguski, geophysicist for Conoco. Others in the top ten were 3rd) James Johnson, Union Texas Petroleum; 4th) John Carmony, Exxon Company, U.S.A.; 5th) Mark Vining, Exxon Company, U.S.A.; 6th0 Owne Fitzsimmons, Crown Central; 7th) Dean Thomas, Texaco, Inc.; 8th Michael Holdsworth, Moran Exploration; 9th) Harry Bettis, Jr., Independent; and 10th) Rene Ulmschneider, Cities Service Company.

Nolan County sited for five District 7B probes

Five new field wildcats have been scheduled in Nolan County and one in Fisher County of District 7-B of the Texas Railroad Commission.

NOLAN COUNTY

Gage and Co. of Fort Worth has staked the No. 1 Jahew Jameson "I" as a 7,550-foot wildcat, 18 miles west of Blackwell and 8,500 feet south of a 5,852-foot Canyon production in the JMM field.

Location is 467 from the south and west lines of the W. A. Stepp No. 1 survey.

****

Walter Exploration Inc. of Dallas No. 1 M.D. Jones is a 7,200-foot wildcat test, six miles southwest of Roscoe and two miles northwest of a 6,700-foot Strawn production in the Dogion field.

Location is 660 feet from the south and east lines of section 83, block 24 of the T&P survey abstract 256.

****

Arbusto Energy Inc. of Midland will drill a 7,000-foot wildcat, five miles southeast of Maryneal and two miles southeast of a 5,992-foot Strawn production in the Group, North field.

The wildcat is the No. 1 Bridgeford, spotted 2,267 feet from the north line ad 2,000 feet fromt he west line of section 74, block 1-A of the H&TC survey.

****

Southern Union Exploration Co. of Midland has filed application to drill a 6,700-foot wildcat, four miles north of Blackwell and one mile northeast of a 3,850-foot Cisco oil production in the Price-Jordan field.

The new test is the No. 1 Jordan, located 937 feet from the south line and 1,866 feet from the east line of section 68, block 1-A of the H&TC survey abstract 1045.

****

JEM Petroleum Corp. of Midland ha staked the No. 1 Nabers a a 6,500-foot wildcat, two miles north of Blackwell.

The location is 1,980 from the north line and 660 feet from the east line of section 27, block 1-A of the H&TC survey abstract 320 and 14,100 feet southeast of a 3,850-foot Cisco oil production in the Price Jordan field.

FISHER COUNTY

JEM Petroleum Corp. of Midland has filed an application to drill a 5,500 foot new field wildcat in Fisher County, 1/2 mile east of Sylvester and 8,400 feet northeat of a 5,342-foot Strawn oil production in Sylverster field.

Designated the No. 2 Schemert, location is 3,084 feet from the north line and 680 feet from the east line of the J.F. Newman survey.

Highschool offers day oilfield training class

EDITOR'S NOTE-School days,school days, dear old gushing oil well days. In oil country in Western Pennsylvania, the training starts early. One high school offers half a day of on-the-job training as part of its regular school program.

By JOHN BRONSON
Associated Press Writer

BRADFORD, Pa. (AP) — Dave Faller stands in yellow mud up to his ankles, his workboots squishing in the muck as he and several other high school students wrestle with a three-foot-long oil rig wrench.

As a diesel-powered winch sputters, then roars in the background, the students unscrew a grease-slicked pipe and lay it with a hollow thud on a pile of other tubing taken out of the well.

"This is just like working in a regular oil field," the 17-year-old senior says. "When the wells don't pump, we pull 'em up to see what's wrong."

Faller is one of 40 students enrolled in Bradford Area High School's unusual petroleum production course — one of two such high school programs in the United States. The other is in Wayne County, Ohio.

Bradford's students get on-the-job training for half the school day. The rest of the school day is spent in regular classes. At graduation, the students are qualified as "knowledgeable learners" for oil field jobs that start at $17,000 a year, says Myron Crumrine, supervisor of vocational education.

So far, about two-thirds of those who entered the five-year-old program have become "roustabouts," as oil field workers are called.

Bradford High School has oil, gas and mineral rights on 25 acres of land, where the training takes place, and owns eight acres outright.

Ten pumping jacks, resembling giant metal insects, peck at the ground on the wooded hillside behind the football stadium. Last year they sucked out 440 barrels of crude from sandstone formations about 1,300 feet below the ground. The school sold the oil for $16,000.

"Not too many school programs bring in that kind of money," says Crumrine.

The program was launched in 1976 after Crumrine surveyed the job market for oil field workers at the request of the Pennsylvania Oil, Gas and Mineral Association.

"The oil industry has existed here for over 100 years, but the skills involved are passed on by word-of-mouth. There has never been a formal training program," he says.

Crumrine found a big shortage of trained workers.

"They lost a generation of workers," he says, explaining that the labor force waned during the years when crude oil prices were depressed.

The Arab oil embargo changed all that, and petroleum producers found themselves lacking a skilled labor pool.

"Companies told us all kinds of horror stories," says Bradford Director of Curriculum Ed Goulding, who was high school principal when the petroleum course was created.

"Some workers couldn't find the wells they were supposed to pump. Others didn't know one end of a wrench from another. And the older guys who could pass the knowledge along were retiring," he says.

To close that gap, Crumrine and an advisory group developed the curriculum for the petroleum production course.

With funds from the Pennsylvania Bureau of Vocational Education Department, the school was able to purchase the land and mineral rights for about $40,000.

A federal Appalachia grant was received to drill new oil wells and local oil companies — Quaker State, Pennzoil and Kendall — supplied pipe, rods, tanks and other equipment.

Goulding says the initial outlay for land and mineral rights is now worth an estimated $400,000 with the improvements that have been made.

And the course has hit the mark as far as producers are concerned.

"It's very effective. We're just tickled with it," says E. James Bryner, president of the Pennsylvania Oil, Gas and Mineral Association. The association represents 1,000 companies, primarily small oil and gas producers.

"We are not only supplying our own local industry, but we're having calls from as far away as Louisiana for workers on offshore oil rigs,"he says.

The students say the course can be physically as well as intellectually demanding.

Among the skills taught are tool recognition and usage, oil well servicing and plugging, pumping jack maintenance, bulldozer operations, welding, carpentry and oil field mechanics.

Nations power sources vulnerable to sabotage, terrorism says GAO

WASHINGTON (AP) — The congressional investigative agency says the nation's electric power system is vulnerable to war, sabotage and terrorism. The Energy Department says it isn't.

The system of 11,000 generating stations and their interconnections has never suffered a national disruption or a long-term regional disruption, the General Accounting Office noted in a report to Congress released last week. But the system is "highly vulnerable because its components are widely dispersed, operated in a low manpower environment, have minimal security and are highly interdependent."

In a response included in the GAO report, the Energy Department disagreed with almost all the GAO conclusions. In particular, the department said dispersal was a source of strength because it provided many sources of power and transmission routes.

"Power system vulnerability to acts of sabotage and terrorism would be at best regional and would constitute a regional electrical emergency" for which plans are the responsibility of the utilities and states, the department said.

GAO staffers studied an unidentified region containing 120 utilities and, the report said, found: "An attack on just eight substations could result in widespread power outages, with cascading blackouts throughout the electrical grid. In addition, major metropolitan areas in the region could be without power for several days and be subject to rotating blackouts for over a year.

"Damage to four substations could actually place one city on interruptible power for up to a year. One substation's key components could be damaged using a rifle and leave an important defense-related facility without power."

A long power disruption in the region would hurt major military facilities and the ship, aircraft, electrical equipment, transportation, chemical, primary metal and wood product industries, the GAO said.

The Emergency Electric Power Administration in the Energy Department has only two employees working part time on emergency planning, the report said.

Some utility employees around the country are listed as special unpaid government workers who would manage the power system under the guidance of the EEPA in a national emergency.

Interviews with several of those workers found them mostly unsure of their responsibilities and doubtful the organization could work in an emergency, the GAO said. Some no longer worked for the company under which they were listed and some did not even know they would represent the government in an emergency.

The power system is so dispersed it is impossible to protect and plans should focus on allocation of what reduced power would be available and the repair of damage, the report said. Yet the government's plans are out of date, couched in the most general terms and do not give any idea of what manpower, equipment and components could be made available, the report added.

P. Marshall Ryan, Energy Department controller, said in the response that the EEPA had developed a "four-year revitalization program that will be pursued to the extent that funds are available" and the development of national and regional plans for electrical emergencies was "well in progress."

NOTICE
TO BIDDERS
Sealed proposals, addressed to the Mayor and City Council of the City of Midland, Texas, for furnishing and installation of a free standing antenna tower will be received at the Office of the City Secretary, City Hall, Midland, Texas, until 2:30 p.m. on the 1st day of June, 1981, and publicly opened and read aloud at 3:00 p.m. on the same day.
Any bid received after closing time as stated above will be returned unopened.
Bid envelopes shall be plainly marked "Proposal for Project No. 284".
Complete copies of plans, specifications, and contract documents may be examined and/or obtained at the office of the City Engineer, City Hall, Midland, Texas.
A bid bond or proposal guaranty is to accompany the bid, thereby guaranteeing the good faith of the bidder and that the bidder will enter into the written contract. The guaranty is to amount to five percent (5%) of the total bid and must be in the form of cash or certified check issued by a bank satisfactory to the City of Midland, or a bid bond. If in the form of cash or certified check, it is expressly agreed and understood that the City of Midland is given the right to retain such as liquidated damages if such bidder withdraws its bid anytime after such bid is opened and before official rejection of such bid, or if successful in securing the award thereof, such bidder fails to enter into the contract and furnish satisfactory performance and payment bonds. If a bid bond is submitted, it shall be executed on forms contained in the contract documents by a corporate surety authorized to do business in the State of Texas, and acceptable to the City of Midland.
The City of Midland, Texas, reserves the right to accept or reject any or all proposals or bids, to waive technicalities, to make any investigation deemed necessary concerning the bidder's ability to perform the work covered by the plans and specifications, and to accept what in the judgment of the Mayor and City Council is the most advantageous bid.

EASTMAN WHIPSTOCK... LEADERS IN DIRECTIONAL DRILLING

We're the first, the largest, and the best!

When it comes to directional drilling, there isn't another company than can compete with Eastman Whipstock. Since 1934, we have been the leader in directional drilling, sub-surface surveying, and oil relief well projects.

JOIN THE LEADER

Eastman Whipstock will continue to be a leader in new technology and services. And to accomplish this we plan to add 400 additional employees to our competent and aggressive staff. The following are a few of the career opportunities currently available at Eastman Whipstock.

ENGINEERING

ELECTRONIC ENGINEER: There is a minimum of 5 years of experience in electrical design and development required for this position. Other requirements include a BSEE or MSEE degree with a solid background in using micro-processors. Preferred experience encompasses working with high temp analog circuits, the design of downhole oilwell electronic equipment, and magnetics. The designing and developing of advanced high temp analog/digital equipment for use in the downhole oilwell environment are this position's responsibility.

MECHANICAL ENGINEER

(Product Development): A BSME and 4 years experience are necessary in order to be responsible for mechanical design and development of downhole tools. The job responsibilities encompasses every facet of mechanical product development, from initial product conceptualization, prototype, testing to production. Fluid mechanics, elements of machine design, and material design are the specific technical areas involved.

R & D STAFF ENGINEER: A BS or MS in physics and experience in mathematical simulations and system error and analysis are needed for this position. Preferred requirements are as follows: Experience in geophysics, inertial guidance systems or other complex measuring systems and having a good working knowledge of computers and programming. Oilfield related experience desirable.

PERSONNEL

SR. COMPENSATION BENEFITS SPECIALIST: This position reports to the Personnel Manager and requires 3 or more years experience establishing a comprehensive wage and salary program, and administering a benefits program. Domestic experience is required, international experience is desirable. This is a Senior level position that offers a strong possibility of career advancement. It will require some domestic travel and future international travel, along with the ability to work with top level management.

MARKETING

DISTRICT MARKETING REPRESENTATIVES: Three plus years sales experience in the drilling industry and a degree in Marketing or related discipline are the requirements for these positions. Job responsibilities revolve around promotion and sales of Eastman Whipstock tools and service, evaluation of the market place, and the maintenance of customer accounts.

OPERATIONS

DIRECTIONAL DRILLERS: We are currently in need of additional Directional Drillers to work on our projects, domestic and international. Past experience should include: Mud Motors, Jetting and Single Shot Orientation.

Volcano —

Survivors celebrate anniversary of Mount St. Helens eruption

LONGVIEW, Wash. (AP) — A year after the eruption of Mount St. Helens, people here have learned to "live with the mountain" and marked today's anniversary with carefree parades and festivals that celebrated their survival in the shadow of the restless volcano.

After a weekend of merrymaking, local musicians planned to gather at a nearby Kelso motel today for the Mount St. Helens Musical Revue, featuring songs about the cataclysmic eruption of the volcano on May 18, 1980.

Sixty people were killed or left missing when about 1,200 feet ripped off the top of the once-picturesque mountain, and losses were estimated in the hundreds of millions of dollars. Only recently has the mountain begun to show signs of rebirth, with the first green shoots of spring poking through the gray ash.

On Sunday, the mountain was quiet, although storm clouds blocked the crater from view.

Today was a workday for most, so anniversary celebrations were held during the weekend.

"We're not celebrating the volcano," said Randi Beemis, president of the Castle Rock Chamber of Commerce. "We're celebrating the fact that people survived the volcano."

A castle-building contest using volcanic ash was conducted in Castle Rock, where the list of events also included a tug-of-war between loggers and U.S. Army Corps of Engineers' staff.

Volcano Daze in Toutle included a town-sponsored log-and-mud race over an obstacle course through debris left by mudflows from the eruption.

In Silver Lake, Harry Truman fans gathered to eat venison and to toast a forthcoming biography of the 84-year-old man who refused to budge from his home on the slopes of the volcano and was buried in the eruption. Their drink was his favorite — Schenley's and Coke.

Although most events were upbeat, the tragedy of the blast — and the ever-present possibility of another — was not forgotten.

Churchgoers in communities throughout southwestern Washington spent the weekend praying for lost loved ones and gave thanks for survivors.

In Castle Rock, the events began with a memorial service and presentation of a plaque listing the names of the dead or missing.

On the other side of the mountain, people lined the streets for a parade Sunday in Yakima, which was buried in ash by the eruption.

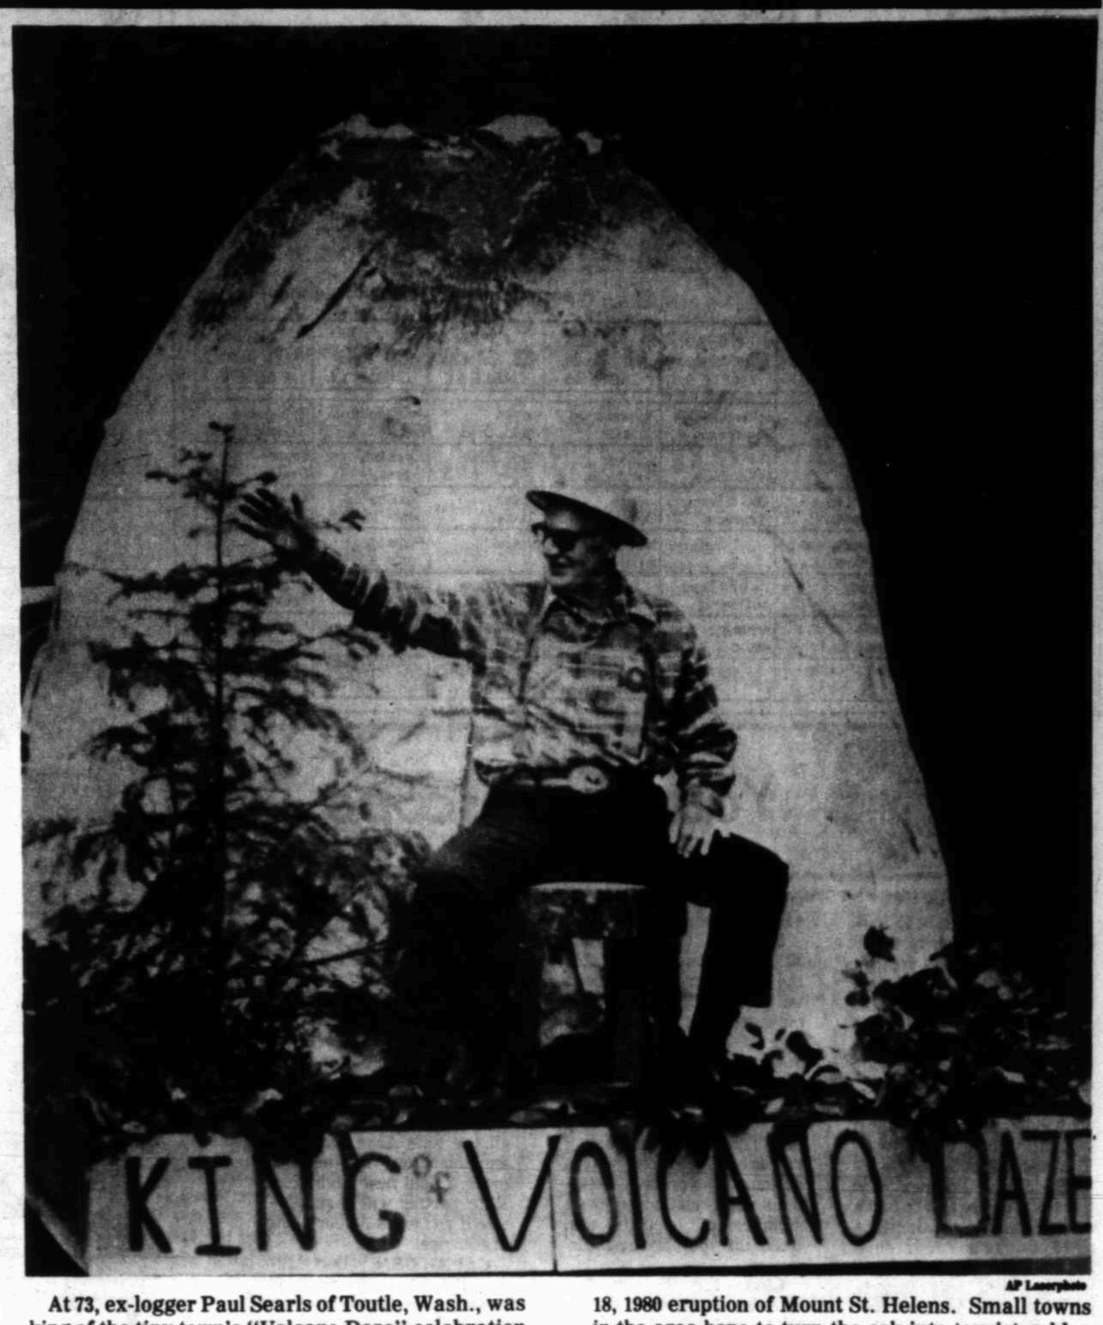

Dedication of a new radio emergency action center in Toutle kicked off Saturday's activity, and about 75 people attended a memorial service.

The Rev. Wendell Small, pastor of Toutle Community Church, said his Sunday sermon discussed how the eruption "woke people up, made them aware of the fruits of other people helping each other."

He said the parish also gave thanks that more lives were not lost, adding that 500 people could have died had the blast occurred while logging operations were in full swing.

The Rev. Robert Ross, pastor of St. Paul Lutheran Church in Castle Rock, said his sermon discussed the uncertainty of life in the shadow of a newly active volcano.

"There has been a lot of anxiety because we have to live with the mountain," said Ross. "We found there has been renewed need for trust in God."

At 73, ex-logger Paul Searls of Toutle, Wash., was king of the tiny town's "Volcano Daze" celebration over the weekend, which commemorated the May 18, 1980 eruption of Mount St. Helens. Small towns in the area hope to turn the ash into tourist gold.

Eruption plus one—

A mighty shiver and a cloud of dust

SPOKANE, Wash. (AP) — Yakima County Sheriff Richard Nesary was at his ranch changing sprinklers that Sunday morning when he looked up to see a boiling black cloud racing toward him.

It was, for him, the first indication that volcanic Mount St. Helens was belching what would become a 1,000-mile cloud of ash and steam; a cloud so dense it turned midday into midnight, buried much of eastern Washington and northern Idaho under a blanket of grit, and stranded thousands of travelers.

"I thought the weather man had screwed up again," Nesary recalled nearly a year later. "But when I got inside my house, I got a call from one of my sergeants who said Mount St. Helens had blown. I said 'No kidding.'"

Before the day was over, ash would fall hundreds of miles away from Mount St. Helens, well into western Montana and, eventually, the cloud would circle the globe. It was, in short, a natural catastrophe that cost many millions even in places far from the mountain.

After the eruption, face masks to filter tiny ash particles became commonplace in many communities. Auto air filters were in demand.

Roads in northern Yakima County, about 100 miles east of the volcano, were closed for five days. And, as the ash moved eastward many other roads were shut, made impassable by soft, gritty volcanic ash.

A frightening combination of solar eclipse and blizzard, the ash cloud shrouded Moses Lake, Ritzville and Spokane as it headed toward northern Idaho and western Montana. In tiny Vantage, Wash., 1,000 stranded travelers were put on school buses and taken to a shelter in Wanapum 20 miles away.

The ash cloud crossed the rolling wheat fields of Adams County, burying Ritzville in central Washington. Five inches of ash — 1 million cubic yards — dazed the 1,799 Ritzville residents. Within hours, the population had more than doubled with 2,400 unexpected guests.

Spokane, a city of 170,000 nearly 250 miles from the mountain, was like a ghost town, and for 2½ weeks it remained in a state of emergency. Spokane's cleanup tab: $2 million.

"We were quite prepared, accidentally," said Mayor Ron Bair. The year before the city had staged a mock nuclear attack. "That exercise didn't do a a lot telling us what to do in an atomic attack, but it did help us form an emergency board ... that was in place on paper when Mount St. Helens blew."

Across the nearby border in Idaho, state police closed Highway 95 around Coeur d'Alene on and off for two weeks, while the speed limit on east-west Interstate 90 was cut to 35 mph.

robably hardst hit in northern Idaho was Moscow, where 250,000 cubic yards of ash fell — in places nearly three-quarters of an inch deep.

"We decided to do the cleanup job now and worry about the paperwork and dollars later," said Mayor Don Mackin. "When this happened, it proved to us when people cooperate there's almost nothing you can't do."

It took three weeks and an estimated $670,000 to clean up Moscow, Idaho. In spite of a mid-July Chamber of Commerce tongue-in-cheek funeral for the "last of the ash," volcanic dust is still around.

But Mackin's sentiments that day were echoed by officials in towns big and small. Stunned, bewildered, dazed citizens shook off the initial surprise and started the dirty, exhausting, expensive job of cleaning up.

Yakima's 50,000 residents organized into broom-and-shovel brigades to help the city clean up. Street sweepers, water trucks and road graders came from Seattle, King County, Portland, Ore., and Multnomah County.

Eventually, 500,000 tons of ash were removed from the 14-square-mile city.

Two weeks later Yakima was functioning again, but it cost.

Plants, animals show resiliency after eruption of Mount St. Helens

ALONG HOFFSTADT CREEK, Wash. (AP) — Spring is stirring in the 150 square mile zone of devastation around Mount St. Helens and the story unfolding tells of the resiliency of plants and animals in the face of an awesome natural catastrophe.

Mega winds and a blast wave of super heat swept this area the morning of May 18 a year ago. Virtually nothing above ground survived.

Now, scientists and biologists are entering the area after a mild winter to find, to their fascination, that plants — like dandelions poking through sidewalk cracks — are pushing their way through the crusty ash.

Primordial bacteria thrive in Spirit Lake and an occasional bald eagle perchs on a bare limb high in one of the trees in the land of the "standing dead."

Grazing elk nibble the tops off Douglas fir seedlings foresters plant. Honeybees, butterflies and ladybugs have reappeared — some survivors, others carried in by the wind.

It is here — 13 miles northwest of the crater — that one can best appreciate the destructive force which flattened the forested foothills of Mount St. Helens.

Once a pristine high Cascade stream, Hoffstadt Creek now mostly runs gray. Along its banks, young trees were tumbled in geometric patterns.

It was along the creek that four loggers who had been thinning trees the morning of May 18 began a desperate struggle to safety. Three of them died, severely burned, lungs full of ash.

Two months after the eruption the remains of a herd of elk was found nearby. They had been broiled instantly by the 800 degree heat.

Not far away, half a dozen miles up and over a couple of ridges towards the volcano, is an area that for months was a biological wasteland. The most abundant life form now is single-cell organisms, 10 million to a milliliter of water, in Spirit Lake. They are organisms similar to the ones which were around at the dawn of life.

North and west of Hoffstadt Creek is the land of the "standing dead," where trees up to 10-feet around were seared in their place by the heat or yanked out by their roots.

Everything is covered with ash, two inches to several feet thick.

More than 800 loggers a day work here, some scared and ready to quit, others nonchalant.

It may be 100 years before some of the areas closest to the volcano return to their pre-eruption state. But along the fringes of the blowdown zone, in isolated pockets of timber that survived and in wetlands and along creek beds, the rebirth of life already is under way.

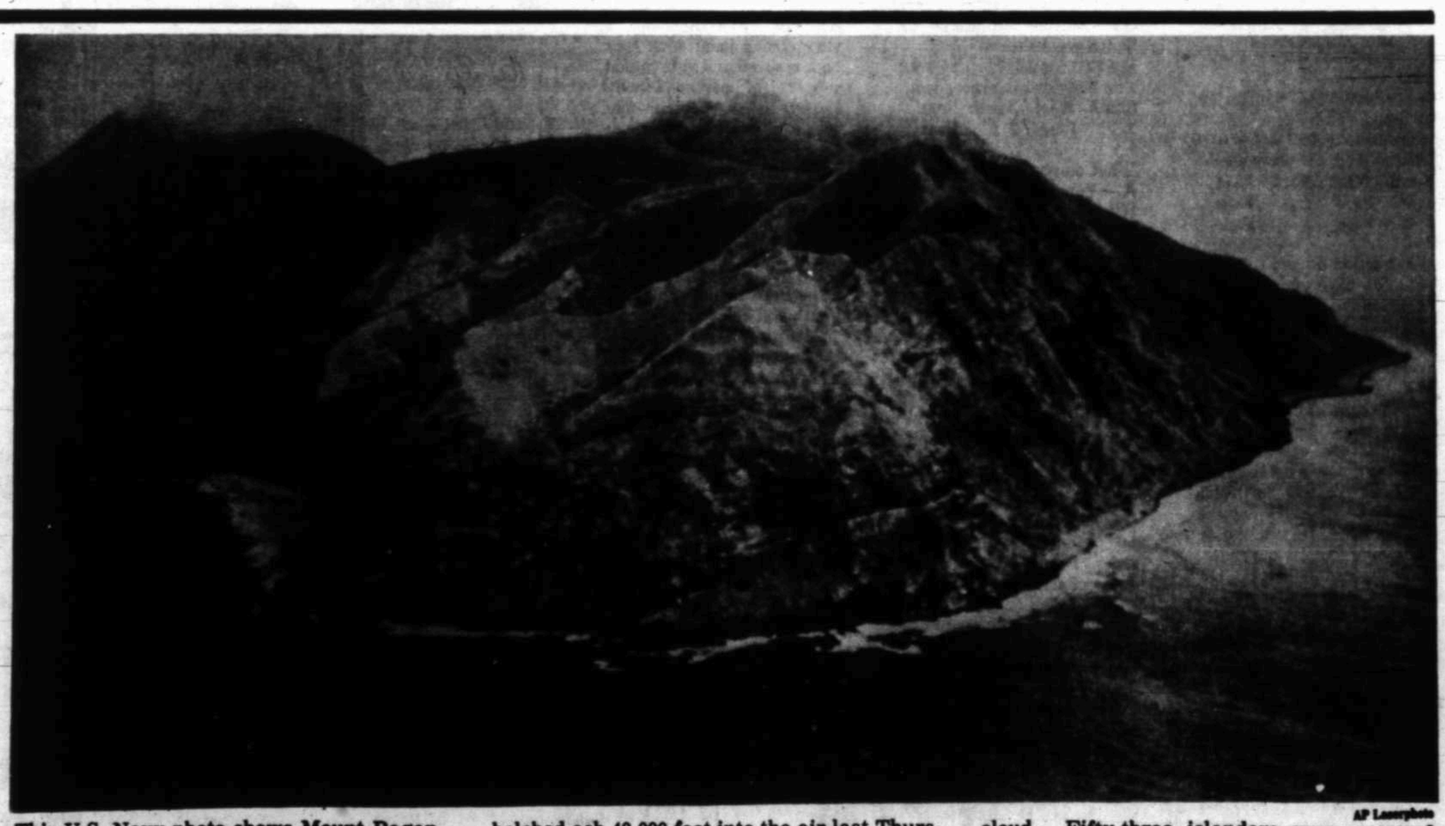

"The resilience of nature is pretty impressive," said Dr. Jack Winjum, department manager of forest culture for Weyerhaeuser, the largest landowner in the blowdown zone. The company is working to salvage the dead and down timber and return the area to a productive forest.

What scientists are seeing now is the rebuilding of the chain of life — plants, insects, animals.

"Basically we are having to start over from a blank slate," said Bill Ruediger, a U.S. Forest Service wildlife biologist. "But it is happening quite quickly."

The plants that are appearing are hardy, pioneer plants — fireweed, Canada thistle, bracken fern, salal and pearly everlasting.

"Ninety-nine percent of them have perennial live shoot systems," said Winjum.

This U.S. Navy photo shows Mount Pagan, the peak in the left background, at the remote Northern Marianas island of Pagan, which belched ash 40,000 feet into the air last Thursday, sending lava streaming toward the only village and covering the island with a heavy cloud. Fifty-three islanders were rescued from an ash-darkened beach.

Meteorologist follows path of destruction

CHICAGO (AP) — Like a film clip borrowed from one of those "mad-scientist" classics of the 1930s, smoke from dry ice wafts lazily toward the ceiling in Theodore Fujita's fourth-floor laboratory.

It swirls slowly at first and then faster and faster and faster, turning, twistig, turnin upon itself until a miniature tornado is born.

Fujita, professor of meteorology at the University of Chicago, peers calmly over the top of his thick lasses, watchng the mini-twister go through its paces another time.

"To understand the fury," Fujita says, his tornado simulator quiet for the moment, "you have first to understand its mechanics."

Springtime for millions of Americans translates into tornado season. It is the time of year when you can feel the air — unusually quiet before the storm — suddenly explode with a burst of cold and turn electric, dispatching a writhing twister to wreak havoc.

Annual damages run in the millions of dollars and kill an average 120 Americans.

"People think of tornadoes as mighty," said Fujita, a nationally respected theorist on the nature of twisters. "But it is really a force struggling to survive."

Tornadoes occur when warm and cold air masses collide and the warm air begins to spin as it rises through the cold air.

In the more than 25 years he has spent studying tornados, Fujita has flown over them and followed their destructive swaths mile after mile. He has chased them on grants from the National Aeronautics and Space Administration, the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration, the National Science Foundation and, more recently, the Nuclear Regulatory Commission. He has chased them at day and at night, and on occasion, been close enough that his friend Allen Pearson, forecaster for the National Weather Service, worries "Ted will be the last of the kamikaze..."

He has halted a lecture before 200 students with the announcement, "I'm going to chase tornadoes," and promptly dashed out the door to a Learjet waiting to streak him over the Mississippi River at an altitude of 45,000 feet.

"After working this many years, I can say I have flown more hours and spent more money chasing tornadoes than anyone else I know of," said the 60-year-old Fujita. "If I did not have grants to do this, I would take the money out of my own pocket, go broke if I had to.

"I love tornadoes," he said. "They are a passion with me."

It was a love that moved him as a young man in his native Japan to scale 5,000-foot high Mount Seburi in order to measure barometric pressure first-hand during a thunderstorm.

Your horoscope

By JEANE DIXON

Tuesday, May 19, 1981

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY: This was the birthday of the late American portrait painter Sarah Peale, a member of the famous Philadelphia family of painters. In the coming year, your own artistic talents receive much wider attention. Do not be surprised if this new recognition contributes to your financial well-being in a unique way. The business outlook is very bright during the next few months. You are able to make certain family relationships more positive and rewarding. Be willing to step back and look at things from younger person's point of view. Romance is active and interesting. Be careful not to commit yourself too soon.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Those who are self-employed have an advantage today. Use your talents judiciously. Give home a facelift to improve both its appearance and increase its real estate value. Show greater confidence in partner.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Another person's unselfish act could mean greater financial security for you. Reward this individual in a unique way. Follow up an exciting workday with a quiet evening at home.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): An outsider may hold the key to greater financial success. Showcase your managerial talents. Logic impresses authority figure. Support your views with facts. Love is grand when you are considerate.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Tolerance is a must if you are to get along with a difficult co-worker. Strengthen your relationship with member of opposite sex. Build up your financial reserves.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Overseas connections are vital to professional, financial progress. Reaffirm old alliances and develop new ones. Join clubs, civic groups. Community involvement boosts personal prestige.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Friends are willing to do favors. Original ideas attract the attention of prominent people. Choose your associates carefully. Social activities increase.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Get organized so that you can complete routine tasks quickly. Friend may ask you for a loan. Be sure you get a note promising full repayment plus interest.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Office politics may test your mettle. Study body language for clues. The evening provides you with an opportunity to develop stronger ties of love and friendship. Get into the social swim.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Stop looking back all the time. Live for today and tomorrow! You need to make a bold new beginning. Mate, partner will be supportive if you explain your plans in advance.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): You may be judging mate or partner too harshly. Although you are a regular dynamo, not everyone has your stamina. Be fair. You could profit from slowing down a bit yourself.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): See people and situations as they really are. Seek skilled help and expert advice. Romance moves in a new direction. Be alert to changes in mate's attitude.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): You may need a new approach or innovative idea to advance career now. Love and marriage are in the spotlight.

Q.1—East-West vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠Q108743 ♡A82 ◇A ♣AQ6
The bidding has proceeded:

South	West	North	East
1 ♠	Pass	2 ◇	Pass
2 ♠	Pass	3 ◇	Pass

What action do you take?
A.—You have enough to bid again, and we would not fault you if you chose three no trump—partner should have at least six good diamonds and an outside entry. However, a bid of three hearts might be more flexible. Partner can still bid three no trump over that, but you now give him the chance to show a mild spade preference. If he holds something like J-x of spades, four spades should be the superior game contract.

Q.2—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠AQJ5 ♡K98 ◇107 ♣AQ76
The bidding has proceeded:

West	North	East	South
1 NT	Pass	Pass	Dble.
Pass	2 ◇	Pass	?

What action do you take?
A.—By removing you double of one no trump to two diamonds, partner has shown a weak hand and a long diamond suit—with any amount of strength, he would have passed for penalties. You have nowhere to go, and any attempt to improve the contract could lead to disaster. Pass.

Q.3—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠9872 ♡KJ83 ◇J62 ♣72
The bidding has proceeded:

East	South	West	North
1 ◇	Pass	Pass	Dble.
Pass	1 ♡	Pass	3 ♡
Pass	?

What action do you take?
A.—Even though partner's bid is not forcing and you don't have much of a hand, you should go on to four hearts. Partner has contracted for nine tricks regardless of what you hold. Viewed in that light, your trump honors and doubleton club are quite adequate to undertake game.

Q.4—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠K97 ♡AQ10976 ◇AQ3 ♣8
The bidding has proceeded:

South	West	North	East
1 ♡	Pass	2 ◇	Pass
?

What do you bid now?
A.—Your primary duty is to tell partner about your good hand and fine suit—you can support his suit later. A bid of two hearts doesn't express the value of your hand, nor does three diamonds, and a jump to four diamonds bypasses three no trump. Three hearts solves all your problems.

Q.5—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠872 ♡AQJ107 ◇KQ6 ♣AQ
The bidding has proceeded:

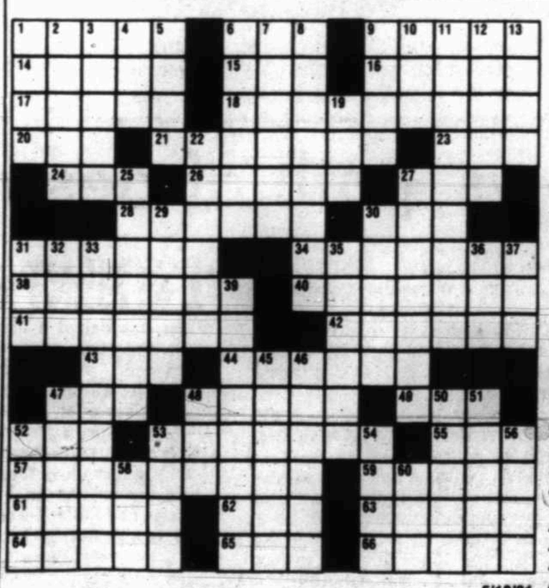

South	West	North	East
1 ♡	Pass	2 ◇	Pass
3 ♠	Pass	3 ♡	Pass
4 ◇	Pass	4 ♡	Pass

What action do you take?
A.—You have described a very strong hand with your high reverse and subsequent support of partner's suit. Despite that, partner has shown no inclination to proceed past game. It seems you surely have two spade losers on the hand. You could bid five hearts to ask partner for a spade control, but that runs the risk of finding him with three spade losers! Pass.

Q.6—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♡J8762 ◇AQ83 ♣J1073
Partner opens the bidding with one spade. What do you respond?
A.—You have neither the values nor the suit quality to respond at the two-level, but you cannot afford to pass—your side might easily have a game. The only solution is to respond one no trump despite the void in opener's suit. Obviously, you will raise vigorously if partner introduces a second suit.
