Texas attorney general pays surprise visit to Manor Park's Alzheimer's unit

By Richard Acosta
Staff Writer

Texas Attorney General John Cornyn, whose office has a lawsuit pending against Manor Park, popped in to the facility's Alzheimer's unit early Tuesday afternoon.

Cornyn, who was in Midland paying a courtesy call on the local Attorney General's Child Support Field Office, steered his political entourage toward the elderly care center on the city's westside during a 20-minute detour from his original schedule.

Cornyn's office filed a lawsuit July 6 against the nursing home, which does business under the name Mabee Healthcare Center, for allegedly allowing a five-time felon access to Alzheimer's patients. The lawsuit calls for $20,000 per offense, for six alleged offenses, attorney fees, post judgment interest on the penalties and court costs.

Cornyn, during a lunch event at Midland's Cheddar's restaurant attended by Midland City Council members, Midland County Judge Bill Morrow, State Rep. Tom Craddick and Midland County GOP chairman Brian Carney among others, announced his intention to veer off his prearranged course and pay an impromptu visit to Manor Park.

The attorney general said senior citizens are a high pri-

Board thwarts additional pay over mandate

By Jeff Stevens
Staff Writer

The Midland Independent School Board decided it didn't have enough money to give teachers a raise above the state mandate but might be able to give everybody else in the district a raise. To achieve that, administrators are recommending a $1.5 million tax increase.

The board voted 5-2 to give teachers a $3,000 a month raise along with their step raises. Glen Bufler and Pat Hodges were the dissenting votes. That was a vote that might have been unnecessary, because state law required them to give the raise and funded it with $6 million in state aid.

The final decision likely didn't seem equitable to some.

Steve Buck, president of the Midland Federation of Teachers, before the decision, proposed that the board give everyone an across-the-board raise.

Buck's argument was that all Midland ISD employees were below average in their salaries and he thought that the district should divide all discretionary funds equally among all employees.

Sports complex group presents 2,442 signatures

Just a day after a community survey showed waning support for a sports complex, the Citizens for a New Sports Complex presented 2,442 signatures to the City Council.

"We were able to acquire the 570 signatures we needed in less than two weeks," said Ken Marks, petition chairman.

"We needed to test the pulse of the community," he offered in explanation of the continued effort. "People have been really enthusiastic."

Marks and company are petitioning for a combination football/soccer stadium and baseball stadium to be built west of town near Loop 250 and Highway 191.

The proposed method for funding the estimated $35 million project is to raise sales taxes by one quarter of one cent. To do that, voters would have to approve the idea at the polls.

Approximately 1,000 Midlanders, however, responded to a survey sponsored by the Midland Vision 2000 task force and 47 percent disagreed that Midland needed a new sports complex.

A report from the task force study indicated that more than 1,000 respondents were less than enthusiastic about funding a new ballpark.

Web site lists sex offenders by ZIP, name, city

By Jimmy Patterson
Staff Writer

What started as a way to prompt the Dallas Independent School District to disclose its financial records for the public has blossomed into a project that has far exceeded its originators' expectations.

Openrecords.org, an Internet Web site that sprung from the Dallas Examiner, a newspaper serving politically active blacks in Dallas, is now making freely available information about all convicted sex offenders in the state of Texas. The offenders can be searched by name, city and ZIP code. The address of the Web site is www.openrecords.org.

Late last week, 104 offenders living in Midland were listed. Broken down by ZIP code, the site shows 47 in 79701, 17 in 79703, one in 79704, 23 in 79705, six in 79706 and 10 in 79707.

Russell Fish, who helps administer the site in his Dallas office, said that hits to the sex offender site have routinely been in the six-figure per-day range. Fish said his site has been collecting more visits each day than the Dallas Morning News, Fort Worth Star Telegram, Wall Street Journal and San Jose Mercury News combined. So busy has the site been, administrators have logged three to four hits per second. On July 1, the wait for information was 90 minutes. The site moves much more quickly during the early morning hours.

Currently, information is listed on Texas sex offenders only; however Fish said the site has been inundated with calls and e-mails from other states.

"I searched the street next to my son's school and found six offenders," said Fish, referring to an address in the Dallas-Fort Worth area. Ninety-five percent of the site's requested searches are for sex offenders; 20 percent of the e-mail received comes from Texas residents.

"What we're trying to do is to make this stuff that is already public record available and easily accessible," Fish said.

On Sept. 1, when the Legislature has said that photos and exact addresses of offenders also will become public record, that information, too, is expected to be included on the site.

Betty Dickerson, executive director of the Midland Rape Crisis Center, said she fully supports the Web site's efforts to educate and protect people, and possibly prevent someone from falling victim to a predator.

"It's one of the best things that could have ever happened," Ms. Dickerson said. "It allows parents and others to identify sex offenders in their neighborhoods."

Until the exact addresses become public record, a listing might show only that an offender lives on Midland Drive, or Loop 250. In both cases, that doesn't narrow it down much.

"It's all about protecting children and protecting victims," Ms. Dickerson said. "People will at least know they have a sex offender living in their neighborhoods."

Tired and thankful, first Kosovo refugees from U.S. return home

PRISTINA, Yugoslavia (AP) — There were embraces and tears, shouts to friends and neighbors along the bustling streets, even a hug for Asi, a German shepherd who licked everyone in sight.

The first Kosovo Albanian refugees returning home from the United States received joyful welcomes Tuesday from loved ones they thought they might never again see.

"This is the greatest day of all time," said Eshref Latifi, who returned home after almost four months. "We had doubts about ever being together again, but hope kept us alive."

Latifi and his family were among the first 275 Kosovo Albanians to return to the province from the United States. Many more of the nearly 10,000 who were brought to the United States are expected to follow.

They returned to a radically different Kosovo, with Albanian flags fluttering on buildings and no sign of the hated blue-uniformed Serb police who imposed the discriminatory policies of the past.

"We can't believe we're seeing this," said Izedin Latifi, 24, Eshref's son, as he rode through crowds in the Pristina market near his home. "The streets are full, the stores are open. We didn't expect it be this good."

They also didn't know if they'd find Asi, who was left behind along with another family dog when the Latifis fled in March. Family members cared for the animals for a time, but then they left Kosovo as well. Relatives who began returning several weeks ago found Asi, but said Serbs killed the other dog.

The arrival of the refugees from the United States, part of a contingent of 1,300 Kosovo Albanians returning home Tuesday, comes at a critical moment in the seventh week after NATO's bombing campaign against Yugoslavia made Serb and Yugoslav forces retreat from the southern Serbian province.

Violence has continued despite the 35,000 NATO troops, along with Russian soldiers, deployed since June 12.

The international mission led by the United Nations and NATO faces a stiff test in maintaining order Wednesday when a large crowd of Serbs are expected to attend the funeral of 14 Serb farmers fatally shot in a field Friday.

Doctors finished autopsies on the farmers Tuesday, and Serbs mowed the grass in the cemetery in Gracko, the victims' village 15 miles southwest of Pristina. Serbian Orthodox Church leaders, including Patriarch Pavle, arrived to prepare for the funeral.

"It's a demonstration of sorrow for the dead and a protest" for the living, said Father Milorad of Pristina. Serbs "are not satisfied with the protection from KFOR," he said, using the acronym for the NATO-led protection force in Kosovo.

The Russian Foreign Ministry issued a statement Tuesday calling the killings "an outrageous crime" and urging an end to attacks against Serbs, a traditional Russian ally.

The killings were only one example of the violence haunting Kosovo, including nearly 200 killings, hundreds of house burnings and other unrest, mostly in revenge attacks by ethnic Albanians on the Serb minority.

On Tuesday, French soldiers found two Serbs dead in a car in northern Kosovo, the private Beta news agency reported.

Serb and Yugoslav forces killed an estimated 10,000 people and forced almost 900,000 out of Kosovo before and during the NATO air campaign, which began March 24.

Since the airstrikes ended, more than 100,000 Serbs are believed to have fled the province, leaving fewer than 50,000 behind. And as Serbs fled, more than 720,000 ethnic Albanian refugees returned.

The United States took in about 9,700 refugees. About a third have indicated they want to return home, the International Organization for Migration said.

"We're having a very, very strong demand for return flights," said Michael Barton, an organization spokesman accompanying the refugees. He said about half of all 87,000 refugees abroad wish to come home quickly.

Refugees have until May 1 to take advantage of the U.S. offer of free transportation home.

Latifi and his family were forced from Pristina on March 31 by Serb forces and spent weeks in neighboring Macedonia before flying to Fort Dix, N.J. After five weeks there, they went to St. Louis for a month.

Other refugees who came back Tuesday had been in Denver; Twin Falls, Idaho; State College, Pa.; and in New York City.

"You can never feel better than in your homeland," declared Shukran Fushnica, 45, one of an extended family of 15 that returned to Kosovo from New York.

The refugees flew to Skopje, Macedonia, on Tuesday and then took buses into Kosovo. There, they were quickly reminded of Kosovo's harsh reality: During a stop at a roadblock, a loud explosion sounded, sending them back into the buses.

The reason for the blast wasn't clear — it likely was a controlled explosion by NATO peacekeepers. The buses proceeded to Pristina, where they were met by a small but emotional crowd.

Some of the returning refugees said the desire to return home, combined with difficult living conditions in the United States, caused them to give up the chance for a U.S. green card and eventual citizenship.

Bad weather prevents recovery teams from reaching site of Colombia crash

BOGOTA, Colombia (AP) — Low clouds prevented recovery teams from reaching a remote mountainside to inspect wreckage thought to be that of a missing U.S. anti-drug reconnaissance plane, U.S. officials said Tuesday.

The wreckage was first sighted Sunday, and U.S. officials speculated that the plane, which disappeared Friday, had crashed into a mountaintop not specified on maps.

Fog and low clouds in the area of the suspected crash site "are pretty much continual," said Steve Lucas, a spokesman for the U.S. Southern Command in Miami, the U.S. military's operations base for Latin America.

White House anti-drug chief Barry McCaffrey, on a visit to Colombia, said ground teams had not yet been able to reach the site. However, he said it was unlikely rescue teams will find survivors.

"There is no reason to believe anybody is alive," McCaffrey said while visiting a Colombian military base where U.S. advisers are helping train and equip a new 1,500-member counternarcotics battalion. It is part of an aid program valued at nearly $300 million this year.

The de Havilland RC-7 disappeared from radar screens while flying over a major drug-producing region dominated by the rebel Revolutionary Armed Forces of Colombia, or FARC.

The missing airplane, packed with sophisticated radar and eavesdropping equipment, was on a "routine" counternarcotics mission over Putumayo state, which in recent years has seen an explosion in the cultivation of coca — the raw material of cocaine.

Defense report reflects Japanese anxiety over Asian security

TOKYO (AP) — Since its defeat in World War II, Tokyo has abided by a pacifist constitution that bars it from offensive military action. However, the annual defense report it issued Tuesday makes clear that Japan has the right to defend itself — including the use of military strikes to prevent likely attacks.

Such talk would have been taboo just a few years ago. Tokyo has long been extremely cautious about taking a stand on defense, as any sign of militarist revival generally draws nervous protest from its Asian neighbors.

The 500-page defense report, Japan's longest ever, came amid the country's efforts to redefine its security role in an increasingly tense Asia.

Under pressure from the United States to take more responsibility for its defense, Japan's parliament passed a new set of security guidelines in May that allow Japanese forces to provide greater assistance to American troops in Asia and give the United States greater access to air- and seaports here.

But it was a North Korean missile launch last August that shocked Japan into re-evaluating its national defense.

The rocket flew over Japan and landed in the Pacific Ocean, proving that the communist nation could strike any part of Japan.

''Along with suspicions regarding its nuclear weapons development, North Korea's missile development concerns not just Asia, but the international community as a whole,'' the defense report said.

Japan should continue to pursue development of a missile defense system with the help of the United States, the report said.

Recent intelligence reports show North Korea may be preparing to test-launch another missile — one that could possibly reach the U.S. mainland.

After the missile launch, tensions between the two countries remained high.

In March, Japanese patrol boats and naval destroyers pursued two suspected North Korean spy ships off the nation's western coast. The Japanese vessels fired warning shots at the ships in the first such action since World War II.

Tensions further accelerated in the Korean Peninsula on June 15, when South Korea sunk a North Korean torpedo boat, killing about 30 sailors, during a clash on the Yellow Sea.

Analysts said the defense report, which this year had a special chapter on the North Korean missile threat, underlines Japan's shifting stance on security.

''The paper seems designed to generate a belief in the public that Japan needs more arms and more training,'' said Naoaki Usui, a writer and defense expert. ''It's a warning to North Korea not to do anything funny.''

The Mainichi newspaper said the report marked a clear shift in emphasis away from peacekeeping and disaster relief. The liberal Asahi newspaper criticized the report as using the missile threat to justify a major change in defense policy.

The rising friction between Japan and its Asian neighbors was a major issue in this year's report, Defense Agency Deputy Director General Nobumasa Ota told reporters.

The defense report outlined Japan's intentions to acquire more advanced weaponry, such as air-to-air refueling tankers, and to boost its information-gathering abilities through a satellite system.

The report also warned of potential problems with China.

It noted a recent rise in the number of Chinese ships near Japan, saying that as the country modernizes its military capabilities, ''attention must be paid to the scope of its activities on the seas.''

China has been threatening Taiwan and may be stepping up naval exercises after Taiwanese President Lee Teng-hui asserted earlier this month that his island should have ''state-to-state'' relations with Beijing. China considers Taiwan a renegade province, not a separate state.

While many of the Chinese ships are survey vessels conducting research, Japan has also spotted several Chinese navy vessels this year, the report said.

17 dead in Indonesian Christian-Muslim riots

JAKARTA, Indonesia (AP) — Clashes between Muslim and Christian gangs in eastern Indonesia and attacks by separatist rebels in the far west left 17 people dead Tuesday.

Mobs rampaged in Ambon, the capital of the Maluku archipelago, looting and setting ablaze dozens of shops in sectarian violence between Christian and Muslim residents, officials and witnesses said.

Clashes between the rival groups have wracked the province, 1,450 miles east of Jakarta, that was known as the Spice Islands during Dutch colonial rule. More than 300 people died during similar violence in January.

Police initially attempted to disperse hundreds of looters by firing tear gas and warning shots into the air. But when the gangs — armed with rocks, machetes, lances, arrows and gasoline bombs — failed to scatter, officers were seen firing directly into the crowds.

Paing Suryaman, an official of Al-Fatah hospital, the city's main hospital, said nine Muslims were killed and 32 others were hospitalized, mostly with gunshot wounds.

At least five members of Ambon's majority Christian community were killed in the clashes, witnesses said.

Meanwhile, at the opposite end of Indonesia, about 1,100 miles northwest of Jakarta, an army sergeant died and two soldiers were wounded in an exchange of fire with rebels of the Free Aceh Movement.

In a separate incident, a police sergeant and his teen-age son also were fatally shot by suspected rebels.

The guerrillas are fighting for the independence of the gas- and oil-rich region. Government forces have responded with mass repression, often against local villagers.

Over the weekend, a special counterinsurgency unit killed up to 41 people in the region. Army commanders said the dead were rebel fighters, but human rights activists maintain the victims were villagers killed after being rounded up at a prayer meeting.

Almost 200 people, including several dozen members of the security forces, have died in the fighting in the past three months. Up to 80,000 villagers have fled to outlying areas to escape intensifying combat.

Cornyn takes on task of fixing child support system

By Richard Acosta
Staff Writer

Texas Attorney General John Cornyn stopped by the Midland Child Support Field Offices Tuesday as part of his tour of the attorney general's 66 field offices around the state.

Cornyn said his tour was aimed at promoting his plan to straighten out child support services in Texas.

"This department has not had solid leadership for a number of years now, which has left the department in bad shape," Cornyn said.

The four main problems facing the child support division, according to Cornyn, are:

n The sizes of caseloads.

"There are 20,000 new cases a month," Cornyn said. "Thirty percent of children are born out of wedlock and 50 percent of marriages end in divorce. With the cases growing so fast, it is hard to give each the attention they deserve."

n Telephone response times.

"I heard that there are some places where, during normal business hours, people could not get anyone on the phone," Cornyn said. "My first priority is to improve customer service so we are going to hire 114 new employees just to answer the phone."

n The check turn-around time.

"I have learned that before I took office the child support department had collected $16 million on child support payments, but (it was) not distributed because of computer errors," Cornyn said. "So the kids who need the money were not getting it, although it had been sent in time."

n The office's computer system.

"Our computer system was supposed to be in place by 1993 and cost $10 million," Cornyn said. "It didn't get started up until 1997 and it cost $74 million of state and federal funds and it doesn't work. On Jan. 1, 1999, I found out the system is not even Y2K compliant. We are going to get it fixed, because it will help the program."

However, the additional 114 employees will cost $6.4 million of the 2000 budget and $4.9 million for 2001, according to Matt Winslow with the Attorney General's Office. Winslow said the reason the first year is higher is because it includes training and equipment.

Fixing the computer problem will be an expensive task, Cornyn said. He did not know the amount it would cost to fix it, but said the sum will easily exceed millions of dollars. While the computer problem is being fixed, the turnaround time on checks will still be delayed, he said.

Winslow said 2000 fiscal budget for the child support department will be $191.5 million; in 2001 it will be $189 million.

Cornyn said the problems the department faces did not occur overnight and would take time to fix. He said getting the department on track is his top priority.

"This division is like a patient in critical condition, and my first responsibility is to stabilize the patient," Cornyn said.

In addition to the current problems with the child support department, Cornyn said a new federal law will require a single location for certain types of child support payments. Winslow explained that the policy is to be implemented in all states. Only child support payments that were established after January 1994 and are going to a child who is receiving federal aid will be effected by the law.

However, with one address receiving a number of payments, Cornyn said he thinks it would be an overload and may cause more delays.

VISIT: Cornyn pops in on Manor Park

(From 1A)

ority agenda item in his office and he wants to ensure that the elderly in Texas are being treated fairly and with dignity.

During his brief walk-through at Manor Park, Cornyn smiled and waved to employees and residents, but was taken aback when the news media attempted to take his photograph.

During his comments at the lunch meeting, Cornyn had suggested that the incident that resulted in his office filing a lawsuit against Manor Park may have been an "isolated" event. He also indicated that he would be taking a closer look at the matter.

The attorney general's lawsuit has claimed that Clifton Orphry, who was a newly hired janitor at Manor, was seen taking a patient out of the Alzheimer's ward on the night of Sept. 26. The lawsuit also states that another employee saw this and tried to follow the resident and Orphry. Later, Orphry was reportedly returning the resident to her room, when another employee noticed the patient was not wearing shoes and her shirt was buttoned crooked.

A deposition in the lawsuit claims the resident was, "fastidious about always wearing her shoes." An investigation into the incident concluded that the resident had been sexually assaulted by Orphry. Subsequent investigation revealed that Orphry had a long criminal history and that Manor Park officials had failed to do proper background checks when he was hired.

Manor Park Executive Director Alan Hale did not return phone calls seeking comment on the Cornyn visit.

Uniform discussion sparks debate

By Jeff Stevens
Staff Writer

Derision, or at least disagreement, was in attendance at Tuesday night's Midland Independent School District meeting.

As it has in the past, discussion surrounding uniforms sparked a lively debate when board member Pat Hodges raised some questions about the uniform policy revision, which the board eventually would pass on first reading.

The administration proposed a revision to the dress code policy to include uniforms, which the board approved in April and May.

The hot topics in that revision were areas regarding exemptions from wearing uniforms and funding issues.

The most contentious issue, however, was what constituted a "philosophical exemption" and how the board would go about granting exemptions for that reason.

State law allows students attending uniform-requiring schools the option of applying for an exemption based on philosophical or religious reasons.

The proposed policy was somewhat vague about philosophical reasons, according to trustee James Fuller.

"If I say, 'Wearing uniforms limits my child's ability to express his happiness.' What if we get that type of philosophical difference?" Fuller said.

Trustee Martha Manulik countered, "We can say that doesn't mean it's a bona fide philosophical belief."

She added that philosophical beliefs such as a person's happiness would not hold water with an employer requiring its employees to wear "nice clothes."

"Uniforms in the context of an educational experience and nice clothes in the context of a job are two different things," Fuller said.

The only guidelines set out by the policy were that: "The philosophical beliefs of the parent are sincere; and the objection to wearing school uniforms is part of the parent's philosophical beliefs; and the student's wearing a school uniform would place an undue hardship on the parent's philosophical beliefs."

The vagueness and an undefined protocol also caused Susan Houdyshell some concern. Ms. Houdyshell is a mother of three children, all of whom are students at schools requiring uniforms. She has been an opponent of uniforms from the start and is interested in exempting her children from the policy.

Ms. Houdyshell wanted to know if she would have to file three separate exemptions and what would qualify as a valid reason.

"I asked for opt-out policies and procedures in April and again in July," said Ms. Houdyshell. Can I receive one exemption for all three? That's the kind of policy and procedure I've wanted all along."

Ms. Hodges also was concerned about the wording of a segment of the policy dealing with district funding of uniforms.

By state law, a district requiring uniforms must provide them to low-income students. The dress code revisions had wording that said, "The district's public funds shall not be used to purchase uniforms without specific approval by the board. The funding for providing uniforms for students unable to pay may include one or more of the following: 1. Donations, gifts and or grants; 2. Funds generated at the campus level by students, staff, PTAs and/or business/community partners; or 3. Any other source approved by the board."

Ms. Hodges was concerned that all funds, once received, are public funds. That issue was cleared up by slightly rewording the passage but some board members didn't seem to be at ease with the rest of the policy.

Approval barely passed by a vote of 4-3 with Ms. Hodges, Fuller and Glen Bufler voting against. Board President Becky Oekerman, Ms. Manulik, Shane Boring and George Lara voted for the policy, which still has another reading before finally being passed.

The upside is obvious. But is there a downside for people wishing to learn about the safety — or lack thereof — of their neighborhood? Imagine searching the site and learning the person who just moved in next door just checked out of the Texas Department of Corrections. Ms. Dickerson said while the feeling of being a prisoner in your own house is perfectly understandable, "people are better off knowing than not knowing," she said.

But even with that knowledge, Ms. Dickerson said there is little more that victims and potential victims can do thanks to current civil laws.

"With current civil laws, you can't do anything," she said. "But you can make absolutely sure that your children are never alone, and you can warn them. Unless they are extremely young you should warn them what a sex offender is and what they have done and that the children should stay away from them. Education is the best tool we have. Parents need to discuss things that sex offenders do to lure them and groom them to become victims."

Dispositions listed on the page include probation; incarcerated in county jail, Texas Youth Council or Texas Department of Corrections; discharged; paroled and released on juvenile probation.

Midland County Sheriff Gary Painter said he is a proponent of such open information and the safety it affords potential victims, but also feared what he called an inevitable downside.

"I think the people need to know who these people are so they can protect their families and themselves," Painter said. "The problem comes with providing so much public information that there could be a court lawsuit ruling come down that says it's a violation of the criminal's rights.

"Everyone is responsible for their actions. If you have a predator who preys on children, then they need to be watched. The police can't do it all the time so if you've got others watching them, I don't see anything wrong with that."

Painter said past history indicates it's only a matter of time before a lawsuit is also filed challenging the public's right to freely view the information over the Internet.

"We have more rights for the convicted and for the felons, and fewer rights for the unconvicted," Painter said. "Victims need their rights; victims need to have abundant information."

Sample e-mails that Open-records.org has received include this from a woman identified only as Becky H.: "What a service to the children of Texas. I wish this had been around when I was the victim of a child molester."

Another e-mail to the site's headquarters says, "I would like to find out exact addresses. It's our right and for our protection as victims. We don't want perverts in our neighborhood. Protect the children not the criminals."

Fish said, "It appears from the mail we've been getting that it has struck a responsive chord with families, and women in particular. The common thread we see from the e-mail we receive is, 'I don't want to see these people near my kids.'"

SPORTS: Group not in competition with high schools

(From 1A)

Instead, support was strong for a new Midland High School campus and for renovation to the existing Lee High School campus.

But Marks said that building a new stadium will not hamper the possibility of enhancing the high school campuses. At a meeting at the Holiday Inn Tuesday night, Marks urged 12 fellow supporters to clarify the issue when they start campaigning for a tax increase.

"We're not in competition with the high schools," Marks said. "We can't build new schools for them."

Pat Blackwell, a petition volunteer, said that the tax increase — if passed — will only apply to the construction of a sports complex. Midland Independent School District would have to hold its own bond election to fund any projects, she explained.

"We can't build a new school with city sales tax money. MISD needs to have a bond election," Ms. Blackwell said.

She and other supporters at the night meeting said they're not opposed to renovating or replacing school buildings. In fact, some believe that the new complex will spare MISD the expense of building its own sports facility.

"It will meet the city's need for economic development and MISD's need for a new athletic facility," supporter Lou Brown said.

Still focused

Marks did not seem discouraged at the Vision 2000 response, but was pleased to know where his group's next focus lay.

"Give us a chance to lay it on the table and then make up your mind," Marks said at the council meeting. "This is one of the most important things Midland has done in a long time."

The City Council also seemed encouraged by the response.

"Personally, I support it," Councilman Lee Wood said Tuesday morning. "Hopefully, my little boy will be a quarterback and hopefully I'll be sitting there (at the new sports complex) watching him play."

Councilman Don Washburn also voiced support for the initiative but stressed he wouldn't want to sway anyone's vote.

"I want everyone to look at the facts and get out and vote. I think it will be a shame if 1,200 people pass a sports complex or 1,200 people kill it," he said referring to poor voter turnouts in the past.

Washburn also wanted to stress that the issue bears plenty of consideration and that voters should make an effort to thoroughly acquaint themselves with it.

He added, "I hope people vote for what's good for Midland and not necessarily what's good for themselves."

What's next?

By the end of this week, the Citizens for a New Sports Complex will release a report explaining what kind of economic impact the new facility will have on the Tall City, Marks said Tuesday night.

So far, Midland's current facility doesn't host enough events to have a significant influence on the economy, Marks said. However, the research will show how other cities of a comparable size have capitalized from hosting large sporting events.

Lubbock, for example, made an impressive profit from holding high school football playoffs there last year. Marks quoted the Lubbock Chamber of Commerce as saying that their city gained an estimated $20 million from the event.

Within the next few weeks, supporters also will be mailing out pledge cards and brochures comparing the current facilities and the features sought from a new sports complex.

VOTE: Administrators call for $1.5 million tax increase to fund raises

(From 1A)

"If that's $500 a year for everybody, then give everybody a $500 a year raise," Buck said.

According to Buck, the state provided the district with approximately $6 million to fund a mandated $3,000 pay raise for teachers. Approximately 80 percent of that would go to pay for the raises and Buck was focusing on dividing that "discretionary" 20 percent among all employees.

Art Martin, executive director of business services, however, said that discretionary money would have to be used to fund additional step raises teachers receive every year.

One problem with that logic is that MISD teachers get step raises every year and until now those have not been funded with money provided by the Legislature.

Further, in mid-June, the school district claimed that it didn't have enough money to give additional raises.

"The bottom line is, the money's just not there," said Holland in a June 19 Midland Reporter-Telegram article.

Then at the June 22 meeting, the board heard arguments from Mary Smith, principal at Emerson Elementary School, who claimed the raise would put teachers uncomfortably close to principal salaries.

Superintendent Joseph Baressi Jr. agreed. "I feel in a very awkward position. Mrs. Smith has stated something that is not only true of her but the people (in administrative positions) below her.

Still, there was the thorny issue of where the money would come from.

That little detail was solved Tuesday when Martin recommended a tax increase that would raise $1.5 million and fund pay increases for everyone but teachers.

The administration recommended that professional support staff — administrators, principals, assistant principals, diagnosticians, etc. — get a $300-a-month raise and that all non-professional support staff receive a 4 percent of midpoint raise.

According to Executive Director Thomas Holland, 4 percent of midpoint is a calculation that determines the median figure of a given occupation.

In other words, if custodians start at $10,000 and the highest paid custodian makes $20,000, $15,000 would be the midpoint and custodians would get a $600 a year raise — a far cry from that recommended for administrators.

According to Holland, some administrators and executive staff work 10 months a year, some 11 months and some 12 months. That would mean that some will get $3,000 raises, some $3,300 and some $3,600.

The end result was the president of the top teacher's union was not happy with the outcome.

"They're willing to raise taxes to give everybody else a raise but they're not willing to raise taxes to give teachers a raise," said Buck, who is particularly bothered by the fact that Midland teachers make less than the state average and have for more than five years.

The board also approved setting starting teacher salaries at $29,700 — $3,000 above last year's starting pay.

Correction

Attorney Tedd Kerr practices with the firm Harris and William Kerr in Midland.

A story in Tuesday's edition of the Midland Reporter Telegram incorrectly identified attorney Kerr as a member of the law firm, Cotton, Bledsoe, Tighe and Dawson.

The story also attributed statements to Cotton, Bledsoe, Tighe and Dawson attorney Rick Strange about the Open Meetings Act which should have been attributed to Ted Kerr.

The Reporter-Telegram regrets the errors.

Arafat agrees to consider call for Wye delays

> 'I say once again we are committed to Wye, and we will implement Wye.'
> — Israeli Prime Minister Ehud Barak

EREZ CROSSING, Gaza Strip (AP) — Palestinian leader Yasser Arafat reluctantly agreed Tuesday to consider for two weeks Israeli Prime Minister Ehud Barak's request to delay Israeli territorial pullbacks from the West Bank.

Barak made the request during more than two hours of talks at a steamy no-man's land separating the Gaza Strip from Israel. Despite promising to consider it, Arafat made clear he was not inclined to agree to any slowdown in Israeli withdrawals mandated under the U.S.-brokered Wye accord.

''We must see the precise, accurate implementation of agreements signed on the basis of reciprocity,'' the Palestinian leader said at a joint news conference held immediately after the session. He expressed hopes the peace process would continue to move ahead.

Arafat apparently came away empty-handed in his quest for details on the release of Palestinian prisoners and the opening of a so-called safe passage between the West Bank and Gaza Strip. He called on Barak to cease building Jewish settlements, calling it ''illegal and destructive to the peace process.''

The two sides did agree that a joint panel would meet Thursday to begin working on plans to implement the Wye accord. And Barak stressed he would not try to change the terms of the pact without Arafat's permission.

''I say once again we are committed to Wye, and we will implement Wye,'' Barak told reporters. But he said he had presented arguments in favor of combining some territorial withdrawals with comprehensive talks on an overall peace settlement between Israel and the Palestinians.

''He will consider them, and we will hear his feelings within about two weeks,'' the Israeli leader said.

Palestinians fear such a merging of Wye and so-called final status talks will cause delays in the ceding of land and perhaps other provisions of the pact as well. The near-total breakdown of the peace process over the past several years has led to despair and anger among many ordinary Palestinians, and their leaders badly need to offer them concrete proof that peace efforts are paying off.

Barak has sought to persuade Arafat to give up the second Israeli pullback mandated under the Wye agreement, saying it would turn more than a dozen Jewish settlements into isolated enclaves that could then become targets for attack by Palestinian militants. Barak believes the presence of such potential flashpoints would be dangerous for both sides.

The new prime minister, a former army chief of staff, has warned in the past that terror attacks would bring the peace process to a halt. Arafat said he assured Barak of the Palestinians' ''full commitment'' to carrying out security obligations.

Barak has been pushing the idea of combining Wye and the final status talks since taking office three weeks ago, despite repeated objections from the Palestinians.

Barak's last meeting with Arafat on July 11 was marked by a show of warmth on both sides. After those talks, Barak and Arafat praised one another's leadership and promised to work together for peace.

In the wake of Tuesday's meeting, the atmosphere — while still far friendlier than such gatherings during the tenure of hard-liner Benjamin Netanyahu — was noticeably cooler. Barak called the meeting ''comprehensive and good'' while Arafat rather glumly termed it ''candid.'' The Palestinian delegation wore somber expressions as they entered the post-meeting news conference.

Netanyahu fulfilled the first phase of Wye, a withdrawal from 2 percent of the West Bank, but suspended the pact in December, charging that the Palestinians had reneged on their security commitments. A complete implementation of Wye would leave the Palestinians with full or partial control over 40 percent of the West Bank, up from 27 percent now.

Mexico declares victory in battle to save sinking cathedral

MEXICO CITY (AP) — Following a massive seven-year engineering effort, the government announced it has successfully righted Mexico City's 300-year-old Metropolitan Cathedral, which had been in danger of toppling because it was sinking unevenly into muddy soil.

President Ernesto Zedillo toured the baroque cathedral, some of whose columns are still shored up with metallic supports, and praised the $50 million rescue effort. The last supports should be removed by the end of 1999.

Zedillo was the first president to step foot in the cathedral in nearly 150 years. Mexico's traditionally anticlerical government had no relations with the church for more than 60 years, until 1993.

Roman Catholic Cardinal Norberto Rivera said Zedillo visited the cathedral because of its cultural and historic importance, not for religious reasons.

Engineers knew in the early 1600s, when the church was being built, that it was sinking to one side into the former lake bed on which the city is located. They inserted wedges of stone to level it, but they didn't know that the problem would only get worse.

The reason, engineers found in the early 1990s, was that one corner of the cathedral had been built on top of the remains of an Aztec pyramid destroyed by the Spaniards in 1521 to seal their conquest of the ancient city of Tenochtitlan.

The pyramid's base provided solid foundations for one end of the church, while the other sank more rapidly — by as much as 3 inches per year.

Engineers used a technique similar to one employed to help level the Tower of Pisa in Italy to straighten the Mexico City cathedral. They dug deep vertical wells under the cathedral, then bored smaller horizontal tubes to the sides of the well and allowed them to collapse, basically lowering the high end of the massive building.

Sanchez honor, recognition were clearly deserved

Ciro Sanchez knows the barrio, whence he came. Now he hopes to honor some of the other Hispanics who rose from that old barrio to defend this country.

Sanchez, who was presented the City of Champions Award during Tuesday's meeting of Midland City Council, came to Midland in 1942 as a migrant worker and in 1963 established his own real estate company. He has enjoyed success as a result. But he has not forgotten the barrio or those who lived there with him during the 1940s.

Having served in World War II and realizing that there were other Hispanic veterans who also were not receiving the recognition for their service to the country, Sanchez earlier this year launched an effort to raise funds to construct a war memorial to Hispanic veterans. The effort has received resounding support and Sanchez noted that he and other supporters of the project would like to see the memorial constructed by Sept. 15, 1999.

Sanchez is showing the same commitment to the Hispanic war memorial that he has shown in the past to other civic projects. Throughout his 57 years in Midland, Sanchez has supported a number of community projects and organizations. Currently, he is a member of the Midland Board of Realtors, the Downtown Lions Club and Midland Vision 2000 and Beyond. In the past he served as president of the Eastside Lions Club, was a founder and charter member of the Midland Hispanic Chamber of Commerce, and was a member of Objectives for Midland in years past.

Long a supporter of Midland and Midlanders, Ciro Sanchez was an outstanding choice for the City of Champions Award. Congratulations to him on this well-deserved honor.

'Good Samaritan' bill to free doctors

For several years, it has been safer for a Texas medical professional to provide free care to someone deep in Mexico than to volunteer at a clinic across town.

...Many physicians and other healthcare providers have balked at offering their services at clinics and other facilities where patients cannot afford to pay.

That will change Sept. 1, when the "Good Samaritan" law authored by state Sen. Robert Duncan, R-Lubbock, goes into effect. This welcome legislation makes it clear that health care workers who volunteer in charitable clinics are protected from being sued for alleged negligence.

Under the Charitable Immunities Act, charity clinics themselves or nonprofit groups that operate them still can be sued if a patient is hurt or dies as a result of services given at the facility. But the threat of liability is removed from individuals such as retired physicians or nurses who have time on their hands but until now have been reluctant to volunteer....

Medical personnel have had less litigation to worry about on trips such as the one an Amarillo church group takes to Mexico each summer. Physicians, dentists and others set up a temporary clinic in a small village, where lines of residents wait for hours to be treated.

On those mission trips, a local Mexican physician takes responsibility through Mexican authorities, and the Texas visitors are free from liability.

Thanks to Duncan's bill, medical professionals will be free to do the same kind of volunteer work at home.

Immigration struggle a battle without bad guys

Anderson

The Rio Grande isn't much of a moat, and no Great Wall of Texas has yet been built, but there is a no man's land where U.S. agents and mostly Mexican nationals daily engage in high-minded conflict — high-minded because there is nothing morally repugnant about people wanting to become Americans, nor about Americans wanting to regulate the flow of immigration. So, except for the usual criminal element, it is a battle without bad guys.

But there are bad laws. Rep. Silvestre Reyes, D-Texas, spent 26 years with the Immigration and Naturalization Service (INS), many of them as a border patrol chief. So disturbed is he by the system, which keeps decent people waiting years for green cards or American citizenship while at the same time releasing Angel Maturino Resendez who was wanted for a wave of serial killings, that he is determined to overhaul it completely.

What is needed now, Reyes insists, is to split the INS into two agencies, one devoted to law enforcement, the other to providing legal residents with legitimate services. He and others have introduced legislation that would put both bureaus under the deputy attorney general, each with a professional director who has worked at least 10 years in the field. That means a decade in the border patrol for the law-enforcement side, a decade in immigration services for the other.

If the INS Reorganization and Reform Act of 1999 becomes law, maybe it will help Lucia and Jose Cruz. A captain at the Mansion restaurant in Dallas, Jose has been in the United States for 14 years. It took from 1985 to 1990 for him to get a green card. In 1996, he took the test for American citizenship and passed it. He'd be sworn in within six months, they told him. But to this day, nothing has happened.

Jose Cruz's wife, Lucia, is a massage therapist at the Spa at the Crescent in Dallas. She came to the United States in 1986. She has permission to work, but no green card — so she doesn't dare travel to Mexico to see her family lest she not be let back in the country. Her mother and grandmother are American citizens. Shouldn't this help Lucia Cruz become a citizen, too? Not really, authorities say. It would be easier if her mother had been single and not married to a Mexican national. Logic and current law are often at odds.

Their problems are nothing, however, compared to those of Basilio Bustamante. Orphaned at 13, he was thrown into the streets, eventually becoming a serious drinker and tumbling into five charges of driving while intoxicated, some of which landed him in jail. His most recent sentence, for 10 years, was suspended with six years' probation because he found not only an excellent job keeping the garden of Jim and Marilyn Augur, but also a pair of guardian angels.

The Augurs arranged for him to join the Salvation Army's rehabilitation program. He stopped drinking and hasn't had a drop in four years. Then, a year ago, immigration officers descended on the Augurs' house and arrested Bustamante in an operation designed to deport aggravated felons. But Bustamante was no longer aggravated. He was observing the rules of his probation faithfully.

To prevent deportation, Marilyn Augur is counting on the Family Reunification Act, a bill sponsored by Rep. Martin Frost, D-Texas, that would give judges more leeway in immigration cases, allowing them to take rehabilitation into account. It also would permit the attorney general to rule that, in compelling circumstances, some long-term residents could remain in the United States with their families.

The INS has a legally and morally complex mandate that could be alleviated by rational and humane laws — or by the building of a Great Wall of Texas.

Tax increase would mean less money for Midland

To the average citizen of Midland a 1/4-cent increase in sales tax does not represent a big cash outlay, so at first glance it seems reasonable if economic benefits are forthcoming.

However, big business such as oil and gas, service companies, builders, etc., who buy larger volumes and pay sales taxes finds that the 1/4-cent increase results in a large amount of money over time, so they begin to make their purchases elsewhere.

What does that do for Midlanders? It will result in less purchases in Midland! This would translate to less overall cash flow. Less sales mean more people will lose their jobs. It also means that when Midland receives its share of sales tax revenue from the state, there will be less, not more to receive.

Now consider the opposite. Suppose the county passed a referendum to reduce the sales tax. One could say it would reduce revenue, but not if it encouraged more large business to purchase in Midland County. It would result in many more transactions occurring in Midland, clearly resulting in more jobs, cash flow, and more taxes generated. This would benefit all Midland (but not solve the direct financing of the proposed sports complex). They would be generating more monies and taxes overall.

Sometimes it is counterproductive to raise taxes.

Golf courses use own water, not city's

I am responding to the letter written by Gwyn Hill on June 30. How misinformed can Midland citizens be? The fact is, Ranchland Hills Country Club and Hogan Park or any other country club in this area does not use city water. The first reason is that they couldn't afford it. The second reason is the water department wouldn't furnish water to them at any cost.

If Gwyn Hill is an agronomist, she would know that a rain doesn't last long in this area, even a downpour. Being an agronomist myself, and a retired golf course superintendent and golf course architect, I know there are many reasons to water after a rain. When the ground is wet, fertilizing and spraying insecticides or herbicides is more economical because less water is needed to penetrate the soil.

Since all golf courses in this area use their own water wells and lakes, there is no cost to the taxpayer — none whatsoever, not one cent. All golf course water systems have an override that is normally used to stop sprinklers when it rains. How much water is wasted? None on a golf course, because the superintendent knows where, when and how to use the water. Golf course superintendents do know how to take full advantage of rain!

Two stellar talents lost in Shaner and Taubman

Midland and its community theater have lost two stellar performers this year in the passing of Bill Shaner and Bob Taubman. I was along the way when they both came to Midland and was privileged to observe them use their great talents, energies and intelligence to make this a happier and better place in which to live.

Bill and Bob are now back on the stage in that wonderful world where they have gone and I know they would both agree that the Midland, which they left behind, is the greatest place on God's green earth and in His starry skies.

Asian connection whitewash created by partisan politics

Safire

WASHINGTON — The most dramatic clash between the FBI and the heavily politicized Reno Department of Justice took place in February 1997.

Stimulated by press reports of "the Asian connection" to the Clinton-Gore campaign, the bureau teletyped all field offices for reports on foreign attempts to influence U.S. political campaigns. On Washington's Birthday the FBI's counterintelligence chief, John Lewis, delivered a packet of those top-secret reports to Janet Reno.

"The attorney general gave the packet of teletypes to then Deputy Attorney General Jamie Gorelick," reports Michael Bromwich, the in-house inspector general. At the same time, White House counsel Charles Ruff made two calls to Justice seeking to find out what embarrassment was in store.

Never told by Reno of FBI restrictions on the documents, Ms. Gorelick bucked them to the Office of Intelligence Policy and Review. They then blithely passed them on to Laura Ingersoll's Justice "task force," selected for its ineptitude.

Nothing doing, said the FBI, which "retrieved the packet shortly after the task force received it," according to Bromwich. When I asked the FBI director, Louis Freeh, on Thursday if he had been aware of the confrontation — an unprecedented dispatch of agents to snatch back evidence from Main Justice — he replied, "I knew about it and certainly approved of it."

What was going on? The FBI, though slow off the mark and unaware of all the leads it had in its computers, was getting evidence of China's efforts to penetrate our political system. Ruff's calls show that the Clinton White House hungered for it. Justice was passing the surveillance of messages to Ted Sieong and Maria Hsia — both in direct contact with Al Gore in his fund raising — all over the building.

And so the FBI acted to prevent contacts with the White House officials under investigation, to avoid the sort of improper "heads up" given them in Whitewater. The FBI meekly genuflected when Reno's lapdog IG chastised it for cooperating too much with Congress rather than Main Justice, but Freeh says grimly: "None of that changes my resolve to limit dissemination that would undermine the integrity of a criminal investigation."

The name-no-names whitewash by Reno's IG admits that Congress was not given two pieces of espionage information it should have had until September 1997 — after the Senate investigators had all but closed shop and Democrats happily declared the Asian penetration unproven.

The two of its deep, dark secrets mentioned above are covered in Elizabeth Drew's new book, "The Corruption of American Politics."

One is the Hong Kong source of the $400,000 contribution of Indonesia's Sieong, most of it routed to the Democratic National Committee through his resident alien daughter. Another secret was sent the committee only after its hearings were over. It alleged that Maria Hsia had recruited someone in California's state government to be "an agent" for China.

"It looks to me," says Fred Thompson, "that people at high levels of Justice and the bureau had access to significant information very early on."

Here was a dangerous triple failure. First our counterintelligence failed to take seriously the fund-raising-espionage connections. Then our Justice prosecutors failed, letting middle-level perpetrators walk lest they lead to higher-ups. Finally, our congressional oversight failed, obstructed by partisans who put party ahead of country.

U.N. finds no evidence of war-related environmental problems in Kosovo

N.Y. Times News Service

BELGRADE, Yugoslavia — A United Nations environmental team has found no evidence of a major ecological catastrophe in Yugoslavia as a result of NATO's bombing war, its leader said Tuesday. But he urged the West to provide immediate aid to help clean up significant "hot spots" of war-related pollution.

In a news conference to discuss preliminary findings from the 10-day inspection visit, Pekka Haavisto, a former Finnish environment minister and chairman of the U.N.'s Balkan Task Force, said: "We talk about chosen hot spots where immediate action has to take place, but not about a major ecocide or country-wide catastrophe."

Still, he said, environmental damage in heavily bombed industrial towns like Pancevo, Kragujevac and Bor needed immediate attention to protect the health of ordinary citizens, and added, when asked, that the West should help.

Mercury released by the bombing of industrial targets is contaminating Pancevo. And in Kragujevac, where the Zastava car factory was bombed, there are high levels of PCBs. In Bor, the problem is acid rain, which could be affecting areas beyond Yugoslavia.

One of the most difficult problems the team faced, Haavisto said, was distinguishing between pre-existing environmental damage in Yugoslavia — an Eastern European country that has had nine years of economic sanctions — and damage caused by the war.

In Pancevo, for instance, where a major petrochemical factory, a refinery and a fertilizer factory were bombed repeatedly, mercury lies in pools and should be cleaned up even before any other effort is made at reconstruction, he said.

When asked if it was safe to eat fish from the Danube, he hesitated, saying that local officials had lifted a ban on river fish and that they were honest in their assessments. Still, he said, he would not let fishing continue in a mile-long channel near Pancevo where effluent from the three factories enters the river.

"We found very dangerous chemicals there," he said. "But how dangerous it is to the whole Danube we cannot say."

Existing cleaning mechanisms were overwhelmed by the water used to try to put out the fires and by the lack of electricity or chemical supplies, he said.

Haavisto said the original state of environmental pollution in Pancevo was high, though the bombing had worsened it. The effects of the "black rain" in Pancevo, when burning factory fires sent pollutants and chemicals into the air, had now passed, he said.

"We've had some very worrying findings, but in some sites where there was a lot of worry we found nothing," he said.

He said the initial findings did not show an increased level of radioactivity from any bombs containing depleted uranium, as was feared. But he noted there might be other consequences from trace elements that still need to be examined.

And in Nis, for example, local fears about depleted uranium and the leakage of PCB's into the ground and ground water proved unfounded, he said.

In Bor, at a copper factory, the problems are worsened by a lack of electricity to run equipment that would stabilize sulfur or run pumping stations, and so sulfur dioxide is being emitted into the air, causing acid rain and likely traveling across borders.

NATO countries are divided on how much and what kind of help to provide Yugoslavia. The United States has refused to consider any reconstruction aid while President Slobodan Milosevic is in power, saying it will provide only relief assistance. The European Union is urging broader aid to repair the electrical system before the winter. But Washington has begun to discuss how to get aid to individual cities, especially those run by the opposition to Milosevic, and Pancevo and Kragujevac both are opposition-run.

In general, Haavisto danced carefully around the political issues, stressing that the report of the U.N. team would be given to Secretary-General Kofi Annan in about a month, after more detailed laboratory tests and evaluation.

Haavisto said that the Yugoslav authorities were helpful and the team, which also went to Novi Sad, Kraljevo, and Prahavo, visited any site he chose except for those in Kosovo where land mines remain.

Russia to ask for revision of debt payment schedule

MOSCOW (AP) — The Russian government wants its foreign creditors to revamp the entire 20-year payment schedule for its Soviet-era debts instead of adjusting it year by year, the Finance Minister said Tuesday.

Russia has been unable to meet several foreign debt payments recently and has been asking the London and Paris clubs of creditors to reschedule payments on its Soviet-era debts due this year and next.

Finance Minister Mikhail Kasyanov announced at a press conference Tuesday that the negotiations should take a broader approach, and the entire 20-year debt schedule needs to be reworked. Kasyanov is to lead talks with the London Club that begin Aug. 3.

"The topic of the (London Club) agenda shouldn't include the payments for 1998, 1999 and 2000, but all outstanding payments ... to lower the debt burden, allow Russia to undertake more ambitious reforms, stabilize economic growth and contribute to the well-being of the population," Kasyanov said.

Russia's total foreign debt is about $150 billion, of which $100 billion dates to before the collapse of the Soviet Union eight years ago.

Russia faces annual foreign debts payments of roughly $15 billion a year for the next decade — a sum the nation simply can't afford.

In an interview published Friday, Russia's envoy to international financial organizations, Mikhail Zadornov, said the country will see no economic growth in the next decade unless its foreign debts are rescheduled.

The Soviet-era debt was last renegotiated in 1997. Moscow then defaulted on its London Club debt in December when it missed a $362 million interest payment. It missed two more debt payments totaling $578 million in June.

Talks with the Paris Club are expected to begin Thursday, a day after the International Monetary Fund's board of directors is scheduled to decide on disbursing funds from a new $4.45 billion loan program.

An IMF agreement is a precondition for beginning formal talks with the London and Paris Clubs.

FDA approves drug against recommendation of advisory panel

WASHINGTON (AP) — An inhalant drug for the treatment of simple influenza has been approved by the Food and Drug Administration, despite an advisory panel recommendation that the drug be rejected.

The drug, to be marketed under the name Relenza, was approved by the FDA based on U.S., Australian and European clinical studies that showed it reduced the duration of flu symptoms by one to one and a half days.

An FDA advisory panel in February voted 13-4 against recommending approval of Relenza, saying the drug showed only a small benefit for flu sufferers. The panel called for more studies, particular among nursing home populations.

The FDA rarely approves a drug over an advisory committee's negative recommendation, but the agency has the authority to do so.

Dr. Heidi M. Jolson, director of the FDA's antiviral drug product division, said Relenza's manufacturer, GlaxoWellcome, Inc., provided more information about the drug after the February committee meeting.

''We felt we had sufficiently addressed the concerns that the advisory committee had brought up,'' Jolson said, though she admitted that going against an advisory committee's recommendation ''doesn't happen commonly.''

Even though the drug offers only a modest benefit, it adds a new weapon to a flu-fighting arsenal that now is very limited, she said.

''Influenza is an important public health problem and this will provide another option for treatment,'' she said.

But some experts said the drug offers little relief and could cause serious side effects for some patients.

''This drug should never have been approved,'' said Dr. Sidney Wolfe of the Public Citizen Health Group. ''The benefits are close to zero.''

Wolfe, a frequent critic of the FDA, said the action is an example of new and lower standards the agency is now using for drug approvals.

He said the drug could pose a breathing risk for asthma patients.

The FDA announcement did warn that asthma sufferers might face breathing problems and recommended that they be ready to use bronchodilator therapy when taking Relenza.

Glaxo officials said the drug is the first of a new class, called neuraminidase inhibitors, that attacks both type A and type B flu strains. The drug is approved for prescription use by adults and by adolescents 12 years and older who have had flu symptoms for no more than two days.

Dr. Michael J. Elliott of Glaxo, based in Research Triangle Park, N.C., said the drug has been tested on about 6,000 people total in its clinical trials. In Australian and European trials, he said, flu sufferers reported the inhaled drug shortened the duration of flu symptoms by about a day and a half.

In U.S. studies, patients using the drug said their symptoms went away about a day earlier than people taking a placebo. Elliott said these findings were based on the self-reporting of people involved in the clinical trials and were not proven by laboratory tests.

The American studies mean the course of a flu illness that would last from 6 to 10 days would be reduced to 5 to 9 days, he said.

Influenza affects 25 million to 50 million Americans annually and is blamed for more than 20,000 deaths and about 300,000 hospitalizations. Flu incidence tends to peak in the fall and winter. Symptoms include headache, muscle aches, fever, cough and sore throats.

The FDA said the Relenza was only effective among patients who started treatment within two days after symptoms appeared, and was less effective among patients who did not have fever or severe symptoms.

The drug was not proven effective in preventing the flu, the FDA found. Jolson said the drug was not indicated for use in stopping the spread of influenza in such places as nursing homes. This was an issue the advisory panel recommended be studied.

Elliott said Glaxo had not determined the price of the drug, but it is expected to be available this fall.

''We are very pleased that Relenza will now be available for the 1999-2000 flu season,'' Dr. James Palmer, a Glaxo vice president, said in a statement.

The drug works by inhibiting the action of neuraminidase, an enzyme the flu virus uses to break away from an infected cell and move to another cell. Blocking the enzyme's action limits the spread of the virus.

Relenza is to be sold in 10-dose packages. It is to be taken twice daily for five days. Relenza is dispensed through a device that lets the patient inhale the drug into the lungs through a mouthpiece.

Greenspan's prescription works: Consumer confidence falls

NEW YORK (AP) — Federal Reserve Chairman Alan Greenspan's bid to cool off the economy with higher interest rates appears to be working: Consumer confidence fell in July after rising eight straight months to a 30-year-high.

The Conference Board, a private research group, reported Tuesday that its index of consumer confidence dropped to 135.6 from 139.0 in June.

Consumer confidence is an important economic indicator, since consumer spending accounts for two-thirds of the nation's overall economic activity.

Economists had not been expecting so big a drop and said it was partly the result of the Fed's June 30 move to nudge up short-term interest rates one-quarter of a percentage point in a pre-emptive strike against inflation.

The Dow Jones industrial average rose 115.88 points, or 1.1 percent, to close at 10,979.04 Tuesday, helped by the consumer confidence report and also by bargain-hunting following last week's selloff.

Greenspan signaled last week that the Fed is ready to push rates even higher if the economy shows signs of overheating. But the consumer confidence report indicated that the quarter-point increase may have done the trick.

The consumer confidence reading ''probably does indicate that the consumer is going to be a little bit more cautious,'' said Donald Ratajczak, director of economic forecasting at Georgia State University.

Higher interest rates can mean tighter credit for businesses and consumers and less rosy job prospects.

The slip in consumer confidence does not necessarily mean that the nation's longest peacetime economic expansion — eight years and counting — is ending, said Lynn Franco, associate director of the Conference Board's consumer research center.

Instead, she said, ''Like the stock market, even today's gung-ho consumers need resting periods.''

The consumer confidence survey is based on a poll of 5,000 households. It uses a baseline of 100, set in 1985.

Boys being held for two house break-ins

■ Rifles, gold jewelry among stolen items.

By Rick López
Staff Writer

> 'It's unusual to see children of such a young age steal and possess firearms.'
> — Sgt. Terry Cowin,
> Midland County Sheriff's Department

Two young brothers remained in Culver Youth Home on Tuesday after they were detained in connection with two house break-ins.

Sheriff's deputies said the boys — ages 10 and 12 — took two rifles, musical equipment and other property from two families who live in their neighborhood.

The boys live within walking distance of the two crime scenes on County Road 1125, said Sgt. Terry Cowin, an officer with the Sheriff's Office youth services division.

The burglaries were reported about a week ago, he said.

In one break-in, the suspects entered the house after breaking open a locked front door, Cowin said. The boys had the keys to the other house they allegedly burglarized, he said. Both families were out of town at the time.

The homeowners told Cowin they suspected the children of entering their homes After meeting with Cowin, the boys confessed to the break-ins and eventually showed him where the stolen goods were stashed, he said.

The two rifles — a 20-gauge shotgun and a .22-caliber rifle — were stashed in a clubhouse the boys have in their backyard, Cowin said. None of them appeared to have been used, he said.

At this point in the investigation, it appears that the boys broke into the homes looking for any items of value — not just weapons, Cowin said.

The boys also took a pellet gun, a portable radio, an accordion, a boom box, gold jewelry and 45 Susan B. Anthony dollars. Cowin believes that the total amount of stolen goods could be in excess of $5,000. It seems that all stolen items have been recovered.

The boys were each charged with two counts of felony burglary and taken to Culver Youth Home, where they will have a detention hearing within the next 10 days.

Cowin said it's not uncommon to see children of such a young age commit a burglary.

Another 12-year-old was detained a week ago for breaking into a neighbor's house in April to steal a Sony Playstation. He was also charged with breaking into a house in May and stealing $95. The child has since been released from Culver Youth Home and is in the custody of his parents, Cowin said.

However, it's unusual to see children of such a young age steal and possess firearms, Cowin said.

"It's getting worse these days," Cowin said. "Parents need to be more responsible with their kids. Let's face it. If my kids bring home something (expensive) and says he got if from a friend, I'd check it out."

AMOS looks after welfare of people in need of food, health care

By Ed Todd
Staff Writer

"We're upset with you," Dianne Bingham bluntly told her client, Raymond Hernandez.

He was pleased, because he knew that Ms. Bingham and the nurse, Missy Hardwick, cared about his welfare.

"But we are going to take you anyway," Ms. Hardwick assured him.

Ms. Bingham, assistant director of the Midland Skilled Nursing Facility, and Ms. Hardwick were concerned about the 58-year-old Hernandez because earlier he "didn't come back and get checked" for his vital signs and especially his diabetes at the Area Missions Outreach Services (AMOS), formerly Area Methodists Outreach Services, at 970 S. Loraine St. on Midland's south side. "His (blood) sugar was a little high."

"We want him to take care of himself," Ms. Hardwick said.

Hernandez, who said that he had been "sweating real bad," explained that

Harley group hopes to raise funds for Fire Department

By T.E. Jenkins
Big Spring Correspondent

BIG SPRING — The Big Spring Harley Owners Group (HOGs) announced this week they are $3,000 away from their goal of purchasing a thermal imaging camera for the Big Spring Fire Department, and plan to attack the last leg of their fund-raiser with ... maple syrup?

The HOGs, along with the staff at Carriage Inn Retirement Center, will be serving up pancakes from 6:30 a.m. to 9:30 a.m. Friday at the center, 501 W. Seventh St. in Big Spring.

"There is no straight charge levied at this breakfast," said HOGs spokesman Barry Barnett. "We are simply asking people to come in, have breakfast with us, and then make a donation to the thermal imaging camera fund."

Barnett said Carriage Inn is donating all of the food for the early morning breakfast and is quite proud to see Big Spring businesses taking such a needed role in the purchase of the camera.

"We plan on having a lot of fun Friday morning, and we've got the whole staff here at Carriage Inn in on the whole thing, so it should be a good meal as well as a good time," Barnett said.

"We really would like to see many members of the Big Spring City Council come out and help support this project. They all live right here in Big Spring, so they have just as much to lose if our Fire Department gets in a situation where they need this equipment."

The HOGs' quest for a thermal imaging camera actually took shape in February, when the group announced they would be working hand in hand with the Fire Department to buy the agency the piece of much-needed equipment, which can be used to locate victims through smoke or behind walls, he said.

Barnett said the effort has already exceeded his expectations.

"When we originally decided to do this, we figured it would be a year-long project" Barnett said. "We had no idea that we would accomplish so much, so quick. Right now, we stand about $3,000 shy of our goal, and it looks like

Howard County restores hours in employees' work week

By Art Sinclair
Big Spring Correspondent

BIG SPRING — Howard County giveth, Howard County taketh away and now it may giveth back.

In April, county commissioners took 2 1/2 hours per week away from all county employees. The move came on the heels of bad news from the Howard County Appraisal District on plummeting mineral prices for this past year. In budget hearings Tuesday, the Commissioners Court agreed to attempt to restore the full 40 hours for employees; October is the target date for restoring the money to the employee pay checks.

At the same time, commissioners agreed to raise the deductible on the Blue Cross Plan from $100 a year to $200 year. The county will save about $15,000 in the move.

In other budget slashing moves, commissioners agreed to remove $300,000 in capitol purchases from the Road Department.

The county library budget deleted one full-time employee and reduced four part-time employees to three. The Sheriff's Department loses one full-time deputy and one full-time clerk. Sheriff Bill Jennings will now have to do with 13 full-time deputies in the field.

Another $500,000 was lopped from the budget by putting on hold plans for renovating the old county library build-

Big Spring to seek TxDOT grant for downtown park, tourist facility

By Art Sinclair
Big Spring Correspondent

BIG SPRING — The Big Spring City Council has voted to seek a Texas Department of Transportation grant for a downtown park and tourist facility.

The grant for $516,000 will require matching funds of $103,264 from the city. The Industrial Foundation has agreed to contribute $25,000 to the project and the city of Big Spring $25,000.

The Dora Roberts Foundation has submitted the request for a TxDOT Enhancement Project Grant and the Big Spring Chamber of Commerce is considering a sizable contribution.

The new tourist facility would be unmanned but supplied by the chamber. It would be similar to a modern roadside park with maps and other interesting signs about Big Spring. Much of the area would be planted with green grass with strategically placed trees on the half-block area.

MHS graduate is one of 'the few, the proud, the Marines'

By Matt Josefy

"The few, the proud, the Marines."

Not many bear the title Marine, but Midland High School graduate Michael Porter has completed his initial year in the special armed forces group and arrived in Iwa Kuni, Japan.

Porter entered the Marines straight out of high school. The middle of June marked his one year anniversary of service.

Already he has experienced more than many people do in an entire lifetime. He has been stationed at boot camp in San Diego; the Naval Air Station in Pensacola, Fla.; Cherry Point, N.C.; Camp Pendleton, Calif.; and has been through Marine combat training.

He said that the experience is quite an awakening for high school graduates who are "thrown right out there into the real world."

Training is not easy, and is mentally stressful. Physical activities are required to be done at double-speed. "You've just got to get used to the stress and learn how to think on your feet," he said.

An encouraging fact is that "I'd say 50 percent of the people there are straight out of high school and they're just as scared as you are."

As for all the hazing stories, "They're pretty hard on you but they don't beat you or anything," he said.

For many newcomers, "they haven't had jobs and so the toughest part for them is learning to take orders, and adapting to respect authority."

Once that is established, a recruit gets a lot of training that they would not get in a normal job.

Eventually, Porter plans to take the military up on their offer to pay for virtually all of his education.

Already he has learned a great deal. They have trained him as an aviation electrician, and he can now "work on pretty much anything, like the FA-18 Hornet." The focus while in Japan will be the AV/AB Harrier.

He has traded having family and friends around for the right to be called a first-class private, which can make him a bit lonely at times. However, he does keep up with his hometown through telephone calls and e-mail.

Recently, he purchased a computer for his parents so that they too can communicate via e-mail.

Despite having to look out for himself, Porter has been with some people since the beginning of basic training, and one even ventured to Japan alongside him. Some of his East Coast buddies were sent to Kosovo.

Porter plans to stay in the service as long as he can. His stay in Japan is to be one year long.

Demon Cat should seek redemption before owner seeks revenge

There's an old saying that goes, "You can't teach an old dog a new trick."

What about cats?

Is it possible to teach an older one good habits, like keeping their claws off your furniture? Can you train them not to lay their shedding selves over your dry-cleaned clothes?

López

These are just a few acts committed by the pet I shall refer to as "Demon Cat." He's a 20-pound feline I rescued from the throes of a moving family who wasn't able to find him a new home.

I took Demon Cat under the impression that I would find him a good owner in a couple of weeks. That was August 1997. He's been stuck with me ever since.

I feel sorry for the little sucker. Don't get me wrong. We've had our share of good days, like the time he killed a scorpion that sneaked into my apartment. He's also a good conversation piece for dates that come visit my pad (though his furry belly gets more rubs than mine).

But Demon Cat has indulged in quite a bit of mischief — like knocking my cordless phone into my bubbly bathtub (which I was occupying) and gnawing my GameBoy adapter to shreds.

His latest ruse was relieving himself on a shirt that I wore in the presence of a six-month-old kitten. It seems that Demon Cat gets jealous each time there's someone new in my life — especially if they also have a cat of their own.

I guess Demon Cat was intimidated by the smell of Samantha — "the other pet" — and decided to take matters into his own hands. Now, any other item that was worn in Samantha's presence is fair grounds for "revenge."

Some friends and I were discussing whether it's proper to discipline cats for their deviance. One friend said cats don't remember what wrongful acts they committed from one day to the next, so punishing them isn't fair.

On the other hand, another friend suggested that cats do indeed recall bad behavior.

For instance, this friend said her three cats aren't very good at telling the difference between her carpet and their litter box. But the next time she caught them in the act, she bombarded them with a squirt of water. Now, whenever her animals start squatting over the carpet, all she has to do to ward off their urge is pull out the water gun .

Sounds like a novel idea ... if I could only catch Demon Cat in the act.

A friend suggested I confuse my cat's sense of smell by deodorizing all my clothes from that trip with a drenching layer of Lysol. Good idea ... if I want to smell like hospital linen.

I guess Demon Cat is just having trouble expressing his jealousy, and unfortunately, putting up with his envy is a small price to pay for his company. Maybe the health insurance will cover the cost of pet counseling ... or a good Super Soaker.

BREAKFAST: Big Spring Harley Davidson Shop is oldest in Texas

(From 1B)

we will be able to raise the full amount and present the camera to the Fire Department at the 70th year anniversary of the Big Spring Harley Davidson Shop in September.

The Big Spring Harley shop is the oldest in Texas. It is run by Howard and Mary Walker; Ms. Walker is the daughter of the founder of the shop.

"I just can't say enough about the people of Big Spring. We started trying to keep a list of everyone who donated to the fund, but we just had so many people walking in off the street and donating, or giving the money to one of our members on the street that it has become all but impossible to keep track of.

"I'm just glad to see the people here are willing to help when it's so badly needed. There was no way the Fire Department would have been able to find room in their budget for this equipment, so the people of Big Spring, the very heart and soul of our city, came together to make it happen," Barnett said.

For more information on the Thermal Imaging Camera Fund, or to make a donation, contact the Big Spring Harley Davidson Shop at (915) 263-2322.

ing to be used as a court building.

The county auditor and county treasurer each gave up one full-time clerk and now share one clerk between them in place of the full-time clerks.

This year's budget of $9.2 million is close to last year's budget. At this point, Howard County commissioners are hoping to hold the line on any new taxes.

GRANT: Council endorses TxDOT beautification project

(From 1B)

The proposed facility would be built on the land presently occupied by the crumbling Permian Building.

"We are within $8,000 of having the funds to tear down the Permian Building," said Tod Darden, utilities supervisor for the city.

Estimated demolition cost is $92,000 with more than $20,000 earmarked for asbestos disposal.

"We hope to have the building demolished and the lot cleaned up before fall," said Assistant City Manager Emma Bogart.

The council also endorsed a $1 million Texas Department of Transportation project that would beautify Interstate 20 near the intersection of I-20 and U.S. Highway 87. TxDOT is wanting to build decorative retaining walls with vegetation similar to those planned for Loop 250 in Midland.

"It will be good for Big Spring, and most of all it doesn't cost the city anything," said Mayor Tim Blackshear.

Family wins $110 million judgment against man who was never charged with murder

HOUSTON (AP) — A $110 million judgment against the man suspected but never charged in the highly publicized slaying of a Friendswood girl is a hollow victory, the father of the 12-year-old said Tuesday.

"It's about the only thing we're able to do," said Miles A. "Bob" Smither, whose daughter Laura disappeared while jogging near her home on April 3, 1997. Her body was found more than two weeks later after a massive search. "There's not really much closure."

Unable to secure a criminal charge against the man Friendswood Police Chief Jared Stout named as the primary suspect, Smither and his wife Gail Smither filed a wrongful death lawsuit last April against former bulldozer operator, William Lewis Reece.

Reece was never charged in the murder after the department failed to accumulate enough evidence to present to a grand jury. Also, laboratory tests failed to link Reece to Laura Smither's murder.

Still, Smither says he's convinced Reece killed his daughter. "There is absolutely no doubt," he said.

Reece's attorney, Anthony Osso, was out of town this week and could not be immediately reached for comment.

The Smithers were able to win the civil verdict last Friday against Reece by default because he never responded to the couple's lawsuit.

It's an avenue made more popular following the civil judgment against former football player O.J. Simpson, who was found innocent of charges that he murdered his wife Nicole Brown Simpson and waiter Ron Goldman. A civil jury held Simpson liable and he was ordered to pay $33.5 million.

"It's an empty formality," said Neil McCabe, a professor of law at South Texas College of Law. "Some people say it's a way for a family to get closure."

OBITUARIES

Curtis Thorpe

Blessed are the dead who die in the Lord from now on. 'Yes,' says the Spirit, 'that they may rest from their labors, and their works follow them.' (Rev. 14:13)

Curtis Thorpe was born December 9, 1910, in Lake Creek, Texas, to William Riley and Winnie Thorpe. The family moved to Kermit in 1933. Growing up in the Depression era in the oil patch of West Texas, Curtis learned the meaning of hard work and dedication to work done well. While employed by Jim Fogle, Curtis met the boss' daughter, Dorothy Alice. They were married in Carlsbad, New Mexico, August 31, 1935. Their marriage has been a model of fidelity and devotion not only to each other, but to the purpose for which God designed their lives, as partners in ministry in and through the church.

On the basis of God's amazing grace and the prayers of a godly mother, the pivotal event of Curtis' life occurred in 1936. He was working as a roustabout for General Crude Oil, living in a one-room house in Cooper, New Mexico, and one evening he knelt beside his bed and received Christ as his personal Savior and Lord. Believing God had called him to preach the Gospel, Curtis Thorpe delivered his first sermon at a mine in Carlsbad to "whoever came." He attended the Bible Baptist Seminary that had been established by the legendary J. Frank Norris in Fort Worth, Texas. As a student, he pastored small churches and upon his graduation in 1942, he moved to Fredonia, Kansas, where he pastored for five years. The church grew throughout his tenure.

In 1947, Rev. Thorpe arrived four years after the Temple Baptist Church in Odessa had been organized. The church called him pastor, and on the second Sunday of February, he preached to 47 people in a 30-by-60-foot building with three tile walls and a tin one on the northeast corner of 10th and Texas. Committed to preaching salvation through Christ alone with a passion to touch the lives of everyone in the city of Odessa, Pastor Thorpe has faithfully ministered at Temple for almost 52 years —leading people to faith in Christ, loving and serving them. The core values and foundation of Bro. Thorpe's hard work and dedication have been, and continue to be, the basis for Temple Baptist's commitment to excellence and honoring the Lord Jesus Christ.

The church now averages over 1,700 in attendance, buildings and property extend over three full city blocks, and has maintained a significant spiritual influence in the city of Odessa and throughout the world through her missionary involvement. Rev. Thorpe's philosophy of ministry is summarized in his own words: You have to have the Lord's blessing. We tried to make him first in our lives. We stayed with preaching the Gospel ... We tried to be sympathetic and friendly and caring to the people in their time of need.

Pastor Thorpe is survived by his wife, Dorothy Thorpe of Odessa; sons, Jerry Thorpe, who co-pastored with his father for 35 years at Temple, and his wife, Freddie; and Paul Thorpe and his wife, Kay, of Midland. Grandchildren are Cheryl Thorpe of Houston; Alan Thorpe and his wife, Dianna, of Stephenville; Kyle David Thorpe of Santa Monica, California; Darren Thorpe of Dallas; Damon Thorpe of San Antonio; and Mandy Thorpe of Austin. Great-grandchildren are Neki Davis, Dustin Davis, JeriLynn Thorpe, and Ali J'Len Thorpe. Bro. Thorpe is also survived by two sisters, Faye Ingram and Mary Jane Spence, both of Houston.

Bro. Thorpe will lie at the Curtis and Dorothy Thorpe Prayer Chapel on the Northwest Corner of 10th and Texas on July 28, from 8 a.m. to 9 p.m. A memorial service is scheduled for 2 p.m. on Thursday, July 29, in the auditorium of Temple Baptist Church. Memorials in his honor can be made to the building fund of Temple Baptist Church. Funeral arrangements by Frank W. Wilson Funeral Directors and Hubbard-Kelly Funeral Home.

The reality of Brother Thorpe's life and legacy are summarized in this eternal truth, "...he who does the will of God abides forever." (John 2:17)

AMOS: Program focuses on elderly and children

(From 1B)

he "was lying in bed sick" and didn't show up for the checkup. "My dad and my grandmother had diabetes.

"Sometimes I eat a little bit, and it (blood sugar) goes zoom, goes up," he said. "If I get angry or get worried about too much or get excited, my blood sugar will go up. I get sick and I worry about it and try to find my way to get out of it."

Hernandez is among Midlanders who, for free, may get their vital signs, including blood pressure, temperature, pulse, and blood-sugar levels, checked Tuesdays beginning at 10:30 a.m. by staffers of the Midland Skilled Nursing Facility.

The focus is on adults, especially the elderly, and children, especially those at high risk of contracting certain diseases or disorders, such as diabetes found in their family.

"Whether we are diabetic or not, we've got freedom of will," said Ms. Bingham, who noted the importance of people eating wholesome foods and especially those low in fats. "We are going to eat what we want to eat. And (often) not until something drastic happens, whether we are diabetic or not, will we then change.

"That's true," Ms. Bingham said. "A diabetic craves sugar. A non-smoker wants a cigarette."

The ingestion of "sugar is like a high," Ms. Bingham suggested. "It burns quick and fast. You get this rush whereas a protein will burn slow and steady. It's not a rush, and it's best for you. You still have freedom of will."

AMOS Executive Director Mary Helen Metts said that AMOS targets "elderly people who are falling through the cracks who are not on Medicare or Medicaid or don't have any private insurance.

"We have a lot of families on this strategic (south-side) location that need these services," Ms. Metts said. In addition to providing initial checkups on people and referring them to physicians and other health-care providers and dietitians, AMOS provides free food and clothing to needy people.

"Because of the (downturn in the) economy, they are seeing an influx of families that are needing this health (care)," Ms. Metts said. "And the churches can't handle it all."

The Midland AMOS is funded by 12 churches, including Methodist, Episcopal, and Assembly of God churches and the Abundant Life Church, the Greater Saint Luke AME Church, and Crossroads Christian Fellowship.

"All ages come through our doors on a daily basis," Ms. Metts said. "We have limited financial assistance as well as we help with utilities and rent" for low-income families in dire circumstances.

AMOS volunteer Warren Alexander said that the AMOS health-care program "is wonderful ... as along as," he quipped, "they don't try to take my blood pressure."

AMOS client Linda Herman, who said that her mother is diabetic and her father has high blood pressure, came in to get her vital signs checked "to make sure I'm doing OK."

"Her parents have medical problems," Ms. Bingham noted. "Specifically, her mother is a diabetic. Therefore, it makes her predisposed to have some type of medical problem. We don't give them any advice. We send them to their physicians."

At age 66, Robert White, a former automotive mechanic, photographer and refrigeration engineer, depends on his Society Security check for his month-to-month survival.

"I was sort of getting hungry," he said of his visit to AMOS. "I'm on Social Security. I sort of ran out of food before my next payday."

He got a load of food and his vital signs checked at AMOS. He was OK.

White said that he found out about AMOS' services when he was at a hospital visiting a friend and was "exchanging hard-luck stories" with a "born-again doctor. So, we exchanged some Bible. He recommended the social worker, and the hospital gave me the number of this (AMOS) place.

"Look what wonderful people I met," White said. "I've already got it (his food) loaded in the car. I am ready to go home and eat. This Social Security don't make it."

A grateful person, White said that he gives "God all the credit for what I was able to accomplish (career-wise) in my younger days. I completed the sixth-grade of education. Now, most people would say you couldn't become a photographer or a refrigeration engineer with lower schooling. I did and only with God's help. He gave me wisdom."

Hispanics call network boycott against TV 'brownout' of Latinos

By Paul Shepard
Associated Press

HOUSTON — A national coalition of Latino groups decided Tuesday to mobilize Hispanics for a weeklong boycott of the four major TV networks in September to protest the "brownout" of Hispanics in American television.

"Latinos are mad as hell and not going to take any more," said Felix Sanchez, president of the National Hispanic Foundation for the Arts.

Sanchez's organization and nine other Latino groups announced the move at the annual convention of the National Council of La Raza, a coordinating organization whose 240 affiliate groups claim a membership of 3 million.

Two weeks ago, the NAACP at its national conference said it was going to monitor how network shows incorporate minority roles in their programs. That organization, the nation's oldest and largest civil rights group, threatened boycotts and legal action to make its point for greater diversity.

Alex Nogales, spokesman for the National Hispanic Media Coalition, said the Hispanic boycott will be the opening salvo in the fight for greater diversity on television.

The coalition said Latino leaders will meet in Washington on Sept. 12, National Hispanic Heritage Week.

"There the group will launch the brownout," asking Hispanics to turn off their televisions to counter the networks' "brownout" that is evidenced by "a virtual absence of Latino images on television," a coalition statement said.

Organizers said they plan no action against sponsors, only against the networks.

The coalition plans to meet with advertisers, will look for legal and regulatory remedies and plans to start buying stock in publicly owned media companies to influence stockholder meetings.

"We are starting with small incremental steps," Nogales said. "But if these networks don't want to hire us, we don't have to watch their product."

Nogales suggested that the nation's 31 million Latinos rent Latino-themed films or read Latino literature during the boycott.

While Hispanics constitute 11 percent of the U.S. population, they comprise less than 2 percent of the characters on prime-time television shows, said Lisa Navarrete, a spokeswoman for La Raza, a national Hispanic advocacy organization.

Navarrete said that only one Latino actor, Martin Sheen on NBC's West Wing, has been cast on a new network show set to premiere in the 1999-2000 season.

La Raza President Raul Yzaguirre said a lack of Hispanic faces on television contributes to marginalizing and stereotyping.

"People build perceptions of the world around them based in part by what they see on television," Yzaguirre said. "We want a balanced picture."

ABC in May announced plans to add minority characters to five of its shows. Sanchez said he was happy about the move, but it falls short of what is needed.

"We are glad they are looking at these issues, but we are still going to be underrepresented," Sanchez said. "It isn't even a first step."

NBC said in a statement that minority representation "continues to remain a top priority" and expressed pride in minority actors on shows including "ER" and "Law & Order." The statement added: "We realize there is still work to be done."

ABC Television Network's president, Patricia Fili-Krushel, said in a network meeting in Pasadena, Calif., Tuesday that she wanted to "reaffirm ABC Network's commitment to finding lasting solutions to make our network more diverse."

She said progress was made during the five years she was president of ABC Daytime in adding minority characters to programs, as well as hiring minorities for jobs behind the camera, including writers, technicians and stagehands. She said the problem existed in "different parts" of the network and was a "personal commitment" for her. "I think you will see change," she said.

ABC also noted that it had sponsored an entertainment special in June, "The 1999 ALMA Awards," honoring the achievements of Latino performers.

Other major networks had no immediate response to requests for comment.

Two weeks ago at its national conference in New York, the NAACP announced it would begin to monitor the "virtual whitewash" in fall TV programming.

In addition to requesting congressional and Federal Communications Commission hearings on licensing and ownership of the networks, campaign organizers are considering lawsuits and boycotts of advertisers.

The NAACP also plans to study whether the 1934 Communications Act mandating public ownership of the airwaves can be used as a basis for suing.

Grant paves way for new cardiovascular center

UT Southwestern was chosen from 41 universities vying for the grant and was among three finalists.

DALLAS (AP) — The University of Texas Southwestern Medical Center at Dallas has received a record-sized grant from a private foundation to pay for a new center for researching cardiovascular disease.

The grant, $24 million over the next four years, came from the Las Vegas-based Donald W. Reynolds Foundation to establish the center at the university's campus downtown. It ranks among the nation's 10 largest health-related grants given out between 1980 and 1997, according to a New York-based group that tracks charities.

"We're grateful to the Reynolds Foundation for this remarkable opportunity to search for new measures to reduce death and disability from atherosclerotic heart disease — still the number one killer of Americans today," Dr. R. Sanders Williams said Tuesday at a news conference in Dallas.

Williams, the university's chief cardiologist, was named director of the new Donald W. Reynolds Cardiovascular Clinical Research Center.

UT Southwestern was chosen from 41 universities vying for the grant and was among three finalists. The other finalists were Johns Hopkins University in Baltimore, Md., and Stanford University in Palo Alto, Calif.

"There were major institutions competing for the award — some of the most prestigious institutions in the United States," said Dr. Michael Criqui, professor of preventative medicine at the University of California-San Diego School of Medicine, who is involved with the American Heart Association.

The new research center will be housed in existing UT Southwestern buildings and initially will employ about 50 people, most of whom already work for the university, Williams said. It will focus on genetic and clinical research to help scientists figure out what causes atherosclerosis — the fatty buildup in blood vessels that leads to heart disease and stroke.

Plans also call for the development of new technologies to treat those suffering from atherosclerosis and to use some 10,000 Dallas residents for a study on cardiovascular disease prevention and treatment. Organizers hope the center will serve as a bridge between cardiovascular scientists and doctors.

"There's excellent basic science, excellent clinical trials," Williams said. "The problem is connecting the various segments of the research community."

The Donald W. Reynolds Foundation was founded in 1954 by the late media mogul for whom it was named. Reynolds was the founder and owner of Donrey Media Group, which, at his death in 1993, owned 52 daily newspapers, five cable television companies and various other enterprises.

The sale of Donrey Media Group in 1993 helped create the foundation, which has grown to one of the 30 largest private philanthropic groups in the nation.

Rocket belt designer wins lawsuit against partner

HOUSTON (AP) — The man who designed one of the world's few rocket belts persuaded a judge Tuesday to order the James Bond-style device returned to him, along with more than $10 million in damages.

After more than four years of litigation, Larry Stanley said he believes the verdict and judgment, nearly four times the amount sought, bring him one step closer to the belt.

"I'm relieved this is over with," said Stanley, who recognizes the defendants have nowhere near the amount. "Hopefully, this will exert public pressure on them to finally return the belt."

Brad Barker, the estate of late business associate Joe Wright, Wright's former attorney Johnette Anderson and Duratron Inc. — a paper company allegedly set up to hijack the belt — did not mount a defense in the 1 1/2-day trial.

No-one has seen the contraption in public since 1995. And Barker, the former partner alleged to have it, vowed after learning of the judgment: "Even if I had it, I would smash it into a million ... pieces with a road grader."

In a telephone interview with The Associated Press, Barker said he wasn't even aware of the trial until he read the newspaper Tuesday morning.

"I wonder why they just didn't ask for $1 trillion?" an indignant Barker said when told of the outcome. "Where do they think they're going to get this money? If they think I have it, they've got another thing coming."

The judge also assessed Barker $131,000 in legal fees and another $110,000 in damages from a November 1994 fight in which he beat Stanley about the head with a mallet. It was the last time Stanley saw the device in person.

Stanley was most pleased with formally winning rights to the belt, which hasn't been seen since Barker drove off with it after a June 1995 NBA Finals media party on the Houston Ship Channel.

Barker has been coy about the belt's whereabouts in the past, but on Tuesday said he doesn't have it.

"I guess they'd better find that damned belt," he said.

If the belt isn't voluntarily returned, Stanley thinks he has another way to retrieve it.

"(We) are offering a $10,000 cash reward for information which leads to the recovery of the operable rocket belt, which was stolen from American Rocket Belt Corp.," Stanley said. He added that anyone with information should call his attorney, Michael Von Blon.

Company accused of selling contaminated sutures

TRENTON, N.J. (AP) — The nation's biggest maker of surgical sutures is accused in a nationwide class action lawsuit of selling contaminated sutures that gave patients serious infections and caused at least one death, lawyers said Tuesday.

Ethicon Inc., a Johnson & Johnson company based in Somerville, recalled 3.5 million packages of its Vicryl brand of sutures in 1994 — under pressure from federal regulators.

However, because hospitals use up sutures quickly, only one-fourth were returned to the manufacturer and destroyed.

"We recalled the sutures ... not because we believed the product was contaminated, but because we could not assure (its) sterility," said Susan Odenthal, director of communications at Ethicon, which makes about 80 percent of the sutures used in this country.

She declined to discuss specific allegations. The company has made confidential settlements with some plaintiffs, but Odenthal said she did not know how many.

According to the lawsuit, "contaminated sutures" made by Ethicon in 1994 were used in surgeries and other medical procedures, causing serious injuries and infections.

"A lot of these victims had to be rehospitalized for a significant amount of time," attorney Wendy York of Sacramento, Calif., said Tuesday.

Some had to have additional surgery to clean up the infection or redo the original operation, and one Las Vegas police officer was permanently disabled.

Ms. York said she represents 35 plaintiffs who developed post-operative infections along the suture lines, causing such symptoms as fevers, chronic fatigue, extreme nausea and painful swelling. Other lawyers represent additional clients, she said.

Ms. York said a woman from the San Francisco Bay area died as a result of an infection caused by the sutures.

The lawsuit claims problems started right after a new sterilization system was installed at the San Angelo, Texas, factory where Ethicon sterilizes and packages all its sutures. The lawsuit says the new system began malfunctioning almost immediately and that when tests showed evidence of contamination, Ethicon tried to resterilize those sutures and distributed them anyway.

Drowning indicated in death of elephant

VIENNA, Va. (AP) — A 4-year-old circus elephant that died after wading into deep water while playing in a pond apparently drowned, circus officials said Tuesday.

Benjamin, born at an elephant conservation center in February 1995, died Monday while playing with his elephant companion Shirley in a private pond near Houston. Benjamin traveled with the Ringling Bros. and Barnum & Bailey Circus.

Initial tests indicated excessive water in Benjamin's lungs and stomach.

Dr. William Lindsay, director of veterinary care for the circus, said in a statement released by Ringling Bros. that the evidence "suggests that Benjamin died from drowning. He showed no signs of abnormality or chronic disease."

JACQUELINE BIGAR'S STARS

The Stars Show the Kind of Day You'll have: 5-Dymanic; 4-Positive; 3-Average; 2-So-so; 1-Difficult

HAPPY BIRTHDAY for Wednesday, July 28, 1999:
Hold down the fort this year and go within for answers. You will be sorely tempted to be reactive and act, but there will be long-term implications. Others play unusually dominant roles in your life. You might want to force your will; remember that the highest form of control is none at all! If you are single, your popularity peaks. Finding a relationship won't be an issue for those who are looking. If attached, communication and grounding are very important. A residential move is a strong possibility. AQUARIUS tantalizes you.

ARIES (March 21-April 19)
★★★★ Optimism suits you, even though an element of instability is present. Friends do the unpredictable. Hold on tight. The unexpected runs rampant, and will for the next few months. You might question what you want. Ideas and people change. Curb your temper.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20)
★★★ Accept the limelight and attention. Others don't agree with you and let you know it in no uncertain terms. You take responsibility, but criticism might feel a bit unjustified. Consider changing your role; let others carry more of the weight and see how they handle it.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20)
★★★★★ Events could challenge you to see a different point of view. Be realistic about what is possible. Assess your physical energy. Your intuition and inner thoughts go haywire. Do little of consequence right now. Others look to positive changes.

CANCER (June 21-July 22)
★★★★ Pressure builds on the money front. You might not be happy with what arises with a partner and your funds. Be willing to say "no" if need be. Creativity and risk need to be shunned. More information comes forward in the next few weeks. You will get what you want. Tonight: Happy with a friend.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22)
★★★★ You are in the cosmic pressure-cooker. Demonstrate how stable you are. Professional options are presented, though a family member could feel quite threatened by what is happening. Others act in unpredictable ways; some display multifaceted personalities. Consider what is possible.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22)
★★★ Pace yourself and listen to others. Somehow you cannot seem to understand what is happening. Nerves are frayed — including yours. You'll eventually find solutions. Detach, and let go of immediate pressures. Take a walk or a break. Relax while doing something you love.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22)
★★★★★ Discovering you are on the roller coaster of life one more time could make you feel exhilarated but a bit nervous. Changes are occurring with those you love best, and you can't stop them. The end result is a change in your relationship, though ultimately this could be for the better.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21)
★★ Dealing with bosses takes diplomacy; handling family demands, flexibility. Count on being stretched to the limit. Tempers flare — mainly yours. Establish limits, though changes begun now could have long-term ramifications of a somewhat unpredictable nature. Tonight: Do what is good for you.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21)
★★★★ Listen carefully to what another suggests. Your natural spontaneity could have a lot of impact. Words spoken today might have you thinking for months; action triggered over the next few days could change your perspective. Focus on what you do well — your work and hobbies! Tonight: Swap war stories with friends.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19)
★★★★ Holding on to your wallet is a good idea right now; others have great suggestions about how to spend your money! Negotiating what you want could make a considerable difference in a relationship. Creativity and romance bubble up from nowhere! Enjoy. Tonight: Remain in control.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18)
★★★★★ The moon in your sign beams in liveliness, to say the least. Be careful, as today's eclipse triggers news of all sorts. Use your sense of humor. Refuse to be put in either/or situations. Given time, new information and solutions will appear. Be your magnetic self! The world is your oyster.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20)
★★ Plan on doing and saying little in the face of uproar. Your reactions could be grounded, but in a few weeks you'll see events differently. Emphasis is on keeping the lines of communication open and knowing that this, too, will pass. Think before saying anything you might regret.

Opening lead: Five of ♠

The special power invested in the trump suit should not be overlooked. Despite having only half the points in the pack, South manipulated the trumps to rack up a doubled game.

The recommended action when the opponents have landed in your best suit is to let them play there. Had North passed one diamond, that would probably have resulted in a plus score for North-South. But North elected to balance with an off-shape one no-trump, and North-South scrambled into five clubs, doubled by East.

West got the defense off to a good start by leading a spade. Declarer rose with dummy's ace and immediately led the king of diamonds. East covered with the ace (ducking would not have helped and could have cost had declarer started with a singleton diamond), declarer ruffed, then cashed the ace of hearts and ruffed a heart.

Declarer's two losing spades were discarded on two high diamonds. There followed a spade ruff in hand and another heart ruff in dummy. Reading the position perfectly, South now came to hand by ruffing a spade with the queen of clubs and, when the last heart was trumped on the table, the defenders could collect no more than two trump tricks thanks to declarer's trump spots.

Most of King's time devoted to physical therapy

BANGOR, Maine — Stephen King is writing again, though his primary focus continues to be recovering from his own scary moment — being struck by a minivan.

In a statement, King said he is using a laptop computer to write for an hour and a half each day. But he added that most of his time is devoted to physical therapy.

"SK continues to work hard at his physical rehabilitation. He spends more time out of bed every day, using a walker or wheelchair," the horror writer said.

The note referred to King in the third person because he dictated the contents to his wife, Tabitha, spokeswoman Julie Eugley said Tuesday.

King suffered broken bones and a collapsed lung when he was struck June 19 while walking on a country road.

NEW YORK — A photograph of the late Carolyn Bessette Kennedy has bumped Kim Basinger off the cover of Vanity Fair.

The magazine's September issue features the wife of John F. Kennedy Jr. on the cover and in a 10-page black-and-white spread of pictures by Bruce Weber, who works regularly for Vanity Fair.

Ms. Bessette Kennedy posed for the pictures a little over a year ago in Glen Cove, on Long Island, and Weber offered them to the magazine in the wake of the plane crash that killed her, her husband and her sister.

The magazine's September issue had not yet gone to press, so the photo of Basinger and an accompanying article were pulled and will appear at a later date, according to Beth Kseniak, a Vanity Fair spokeswoman.

"We were able to change the cover at the last minute," she said.

The magazine will be out next week and will also include an article on JFK Jr.

INGLEWOOD, Calif. — Former "Diff'rent Strokes" star Gary Coleman unexpectedly showed up in court to pay a $400 fine for punching an autograph-seeker.

Coleman, 30, paid the fine on Monday. He had been arrested 17 days earlier on a bench warrant issued after he failed to pay the fine.

He pleaded no contest five months ago to disturbing the peace for a confrontation the diminutive former child actor had with Tracy Fields, who wanted an autograph.

He played Arnold on the sitcom "Diff'rent Strokes," which ran from 1978 to 1986.

LOS ANGELES — Robin Williams and partner Pete Sampras traded shots and barbs in a celebrity tennis match against Billy Crystal and Andre Agassi.

Williams and Sampras, the second-ranked tennis player in the world, beat Crystal and Agassi, the world's No. 3 player, in a four-game set that went to a tiebreaker Monday during the Mercedes-Benz Cup tournament.

In between, the foursome had the crowd and umpire Tracy Austin, a two-time U.S. Open champion, laughing.

Agassi grew jokingly impatient after Crystal kept hitting the ball to Sampras, the six-time Wimbledon singles champion.

"Billy, six Wimbledons," Agassi said, pointing at Sampras. "Hit it to Robin."

PASADENA, Calif. — Farrah Fawcett has gone public with the reason behind her memorably odd appearance on the "Late Show with David Letterman" — questionable advice from mom.

"My mom said 'Just go and have a good time,'" Ms. Fawcett recounted Monday, adding jokingly: "This is your fault, mom."

The actress, who appeared at the Television Critics Association to promote the CBS-TV movie "Silk Hope," made light of her bizarre behavior two years ago.

The actress became the butt of jokes when she squirmed in her seat and seemed to lose her train of thought during Letterman's show on June 1997.

Maybe she was guilty of "being a bad talk show guest," the 52-year-old actress said this week, but she was simply trying to be playful.

Ms. Fawcett, who gained stardom with the 1970s TV show "Charlie's Angels," said she's ended a lengthy break from acting that was intended to help her deal with unspecified "personal issues."

"The work had lost a little of its glamour," she added. "It became more work than fun."

Handyman's confession to murders raises questions about police

EL PORTAL, Calif. (AP) — A motel handyman's confession to killing three sightseers in Yosemite National Park earlier this year is raising questions about why police let him slip through their hands.

Authorities refocused their attention on Cary Stayner last week after a park naturalist was beheaded.

FBI agents said as recently as last week that they believed most of those responsible for the sightseers' slayings were behind bars on other offenses.

The agents said they were presenting evidence to a grand jury against those they believed were the killers, a band of ex-cons. Investigators said they were encouraged by a crime lab report and the incriminating statements of the ex-convicts.

But they did not realize they were on the wrong path until they refocused their attention on Stayner, a motel worker with no apparent link to the ex-cons who was questioned and ruled out as a suspect in the February deaths of the sightseers.

After his arrest Saturday, Stayner confessed to the beheading of Yosemite naturalist Joie Ruth Armstrong, and then said he also single-handedly killed all three sightseers in February.

The admission left many wondering why the FBI initially ruled Stayner out as a suspect.

"We've just got to find out what happened," said Francis Carrington, whose daughter Carole Sund and granddaughter Juli Sund were killed along with a family friend. "I don't think we know the whole story."

The FBI declined comment Tuesday on Stayner's confession. FBI task force spokesman Nick Rossi said many leads need to be pursued, and noted that Stayner faces charges only in last week's slaying of Ms. Armstrong, 26.

Investigators believe Stayner may have acted alone, but they're trying to corroborate his confession and have not ruled out accomplices, law enforcement sources speaking on condition of anonymity told The Associated Press.

Even with Stayner vowing to plead guilty to all four killings, questions remain about how agents can make a case against him when they were so sure the ex-cons were involved in the sightseers' deaths.

But the big question remains: Could the latest slaying have been prevented?

Stayner said voices in his head drove him to kill Ms. Armstrong, even though he figured he had gotten away with the first killings and risked being captured after spending five months in plain sight. He had been working at the motel where the sightseers were last seen alive.

Unfortunately, predators often aren't caught until they feel safe enough to act again, said Clinton Van Zandt, a former FBI behavioralist and serial killer expert.

"I'm sure that's little consolation for the victims' families, who are probably thinking, 'My God, why didn't they get this guy?'" Van Zandt said.

The investigation was difficult from the moment Mrs. Sund, 42, Juli, 15, and their Argentine friend, Silvina Pelosso, 16, vanished on Feb. 15 from the Cedar Lodge in El Portal, a remote enclave on Yosemite's western doorstep.

After an insert to Mrs. Sund's wallet turned up on a Modesto street corner, it made sense to look there for her killer, and agents focused on the region's methamphetamine subculture.

Stayner reportedly admitted he had discarded the insert 60 miles west of Yosemite to throw police off his trail.

Agents zeroed in on associates of Eugene "Rufus" Dykes and Michael "Mick" Larwick, half-brothers with records of sex and drug offenses. They were arrested in police standoffs after the sightseers vanished but before the bodies were found.

An FBI crime lab report linked clothing fibers from the sightseers' slayings to a vehicle used by several members of the group. Potential suspects began pointing fingers at each other. Dykes eventually signed a statement admitting involvement in Mrs. Sund's murder — but then told The Associated Press that it was a lie.

His father, Burel Dykes, said Tuesday that he's "tickled to death" by Stayner's confession.

"I think he's clear," the elder Dykes. "I always did think he's clear."

The attorney for Larry Utley, a tall, hulking ex-con who faces unrelated robbery charges as a result of the sightseer probe, was less forgiving of the FBI's performance.

"People expect killers to look different. That's why these people continue to evade detection," Public Defender Martha Carlton said. "Law enforcement refuses to accept they're involved until it steps up and hits them in the face."

Carrington said he didn't feel he should second-guess the FBI task force, which has spared few expenses over the last five months to solve the murders.

"I'm as disappointed as they are that we didn't get to him sooner. They missed him. They admitted that themselves. I think it frustrates the FBI more than anybody," Carrington said. "We just feel terrible about Joie."

House backs Clinton decision to continue normal trade with China

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House approved President Clinton's one-year extension of normal trade with China on Tuesday, overcoming complaints that the Chinese government abuses its own citizens and spies on America.

The annual debate over the future of U.S.-Chinese trade policy ended with lawmakers voting 260-170 to defeat a resolution to overturn the one-year trade extension announced by Clinton on June 3.

Since 1980 no Congress has succeeded in rejecting a president's decision to extend what was formerly called most-favored-nation status, which gives China the same low tariffs enjoyed by other U.S. trading partners.

The trade status "promotes China's integration into the global economy, which in turn strengthens market-oriented reformers within China," Clinton said in a statement welcoming the House vote. "Expanding trade can help bring greater social change to China by spreading the tools, contacts and ideas that promote freedom."

House opponents of business-as-usual with China picked up four votes from last year, a reflection of the growing perception that China, accused of stealing American nuclear weapons secrets and trying to buy influence in U.S. elections, is a threat to U.S. interests.

The "gangster-like rulers" in Beijing are building up huge trade surpluses with the United States while aiming missiles at U.S. cities, said Rep. Dana Rohrabacher, R-Calif. The Chinese are committed to destroying capitalism: "Read that, the United States of America is who they want to destroy."

But Robert Matsui, D-Calif., warned that "over the next 20 or 30 years China will become one of the most dangerous players in the world if we begin to try to isolate them."

Going beyond party lines, the China vote pits conservatives and liberals who contend that China's human rights and weapons proliferation practices disqualify it from normal trade status against free traders and internationalists who say the United States must engage, rather than isolate, China.

Labor organizations and conservative groups such as the Family Research Council condemned normal trade while business groups worked for its continuation. Nearly 200,000 jobs and $18 billion in exports depend on trade with China, the U.S. Chamber of Commerce said.

Before the vote, the administration warned that turning down the trade status could derail attempts to conclude talks with China on accession to the World Trade Organization "that could result in a historic opening of China's markets to U.S. agricultural, industrial and service exports."

Those talks have been stalled since China accused the United States of intentionally bombing its embassy in Belgrade. The United States said the attack on the embassy was an accident.

Critics of China had much to talk about this year: suspicions that the Chinese stole secrets from U.S. nuclear weapons labs, allegations they made illegal political contributions during the 1996 presidential campaign, concerns about Chinese threats against Taiwan and dismay over a Chinese trade surplus expected to go well over $60 billion this year.

Those who say that the policy of engagement has failed to deter human rights violations in China referred to the recent Chinese crackdown on the Falun Gong meditation group. About 100 Falun Gong followers sat quietly on the Capitol grounds, continuing a weeklong protest against the arrests of sect members in China.

"This is just a matter of will Americans do business with murderers, with torturers, with child molesters, with people who are being led by leaders who have no spark of humanity," said Rep. Pete Stark, D-Calif. "This cannot go on."

Under a 1974 law, the president must seek an annual waiver to extend normal trade status with totalitarian states. Since 1980 every Republican and Democratic president has opted to renew that status.

The bill is H.J. Res 57.

United States, Russia agree to begin new round of arms reduction talks

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States and Russia agreed Tuesday to begin a new round of negotiations next month to reduce their long-range nuclear weapons.

The decision was made during talks between Russian Prime Minister Sergei Stepashin and Vice President Al Gore, co-chairmen of a U.S.-Russia commission.

But Gore, at a news conference, said a START III treaty would not be signed until the Russian parliament ratifies the 1993 START II accord.

Despite repeated assurances by Russian President Boris Yeltsin that he would push the treaty, it has been stalled by objections from nationalists and communists, as well as concern the pact would put Russia at a disadvantage unless it builds costly new weapons.

Even so, Stepashin told reporters "we will try to get START II ratified in the fall."

Gore said prompt action was unlikely in the aftermath of tensions over Kosovo. But he acknowledged, "That cannot explain the long delay."

"We are entering the 21st century. We have to enter it as friends," said Stepashin, whose visit was aimed at putting U.S.-Russian relations on an even course after an angry rift over NATO's bombing of Yugoslavia. "We have to understand each other. We have to respect each other."

In the same vein, Gore said in a statement, "In this new era, strong U.S.-Russia ties will be an essential component of American national security and global stability."

On a touchy front, Gore and Stepashin reluctantly acknowledged they discussed the number of Russian spies in the United States. The Washington Times, in a front-page article on Monday, said the United States was insisting on a sharp reduction.

"Old attitudes fade away very slowly," Gore said, referring, apparently, to large Cold War-era spy contingents.

Stepashin, who had refused on Monday to respond to a question about spies, said, "As long as states exist there will always be special services."

Gore said Sandy Berger, President Clinton's national security assistant, and Vladimir Putin, Berger's Russian counterpart, will take up the matter in private discussions.

In 1993, the United States and Russia agreed to shrink their arsenals of long-range nuclear warheads so that neither side would have more than 3,000 to 3,500. But the Russian legislature has refused to ratify the accord.

Even so, Gore and Stepashin announced the two countries would begin discussions on a START III treaty in Moscow next month. Also, they said in a joint statement that an agreement reached last year to exchange information would be accelerated.

The actions in the arms control arena were not big steps, but they represented an effort to work together, at least in areas of mutual interest.

Under START III, arsenals would be cut to 2,000 to 2,500 warheads each.

Stepashin, in his first U.S. visit since becoming prime minister, sought to convince American investors that Russia is where they should seek their fortunes. He also wanted to repair a rift over NATO's bombing of Yugoslavia in the spring, a strategy bitterly opposed by Russia. It forced Serb troops to quit Kosovo, though, and Russian peacekeeping troops are on duty in the province along with U.S. and other NATO forces.

Reform Party does not have presidential strategy, candidate for 2000

Campaign 2000

ST. PAUL, Minn. (AP) — The Reform Party has a star in Minnesota Gov. Jesse Ventura and nearly $13 million in federal matching funds to hand to a presidential candidate next year, but it doesn't have much else.

The economic issues that used to focus third-party anger are dormant, the relationship between Ventura and party founder Ross Perot is chilly, and the party has no presidential strategy yet.

"Are they a major force in American politics? Are they offering answers to vexing problems that aren't arising elsewhere? No," said Thomas Mann, director of governmental studies at the nonpartisan Brookings Institution in Washington.

The party comes off a fractious convention weekend where activists chose Jack Gargan of Cedar Key, Fla., as chairman to succeed Russ Verney, a Perot ally.

Gargan was Ventura's pick, and a key Minnesota leader said Gargan's election will open the party as never before for candidates.

But there's a long way to go.

The Wall Street Journal ran an editorial Tuesday with a picture of Ventura and the words "among the zanies" below it. Despite the pro wrestler's shocking victory last year, analysts say the Reform Party isn't in a position to do well in elections anytime soon.

Minnesota Reform Party founder Dean Barkley, now director of the state agency in charge of long-range policy and planning, literally laughed off the skepticism.

"I'm amused with all these pundits writing our obituary and the election is still a year and three months out," Barkley said. "It's the same ones who would have given us no chance that Ventura could win."

Mann, however, said the party has only three things going for it: ballot access in 19 states, the federal matching funds and Ventura.

"There's no image for the Reform Party. There's no serious identification of citizens for the party. There's not much of an organizational base, so there's not much to it," he said.

Third parties tend to struggle without economic discontent or ideological extremism in the major parties. The Reform Party originally appealed to voters on the issues of a balanced budget, trade protectionism and term limits, but those no longer register.

A Pew Research Center for the People and the Press poll released last week showed no single burning issue concerning voters. Shortly before Perot first ran for president in 1992, more than four out of 10 voters surveyed named the economy as the top issue.

The Wall Street Journal editorial said the party runs the risk of being "taken over by a faction lured primarily by the $13 million in federal funds that Reform has coming."

Even with the money, no candidate has emerged to lead the ticket and Ventura's status only helps the party so much. He doesn't credit the party for his own victory, he hasn't spoken with Perot in months and doesn't plan to become a party builder. Ventura has also ruled out a presidential bid himself.

Still, Pew Center director Andrew Kohut said the party is in better shape now "without seeming to be under the thumb of Ross Perot. The public looks at him much more skeptically than they do Jesse Ventura, although neither is considered presidential timber this year."

Barkley believes the party will find a good centrist candidate.

"A lot of people giggled when Jesse Ventura was first announced, and they aren't giggling right now," Barkley said.

GOP to ask states to give back $6 billion in welfare money

WASHINGTON (AP) — Desperately seeking cash for routine spending bills, House Republican leaders intend to ask the nation's governors to return up to $6 billion in welfare money accumulated by the states in recent years, according to congressional officials.

The officials, who spoke on condition of anonymity, said the idea was broached most recently by Rep. Tom DeLay of Texas, the GOP whip, at a leadership meeting. It was approved by Speaker Dennis Hastert, R-Ill., as part of a months-long struggle by the GOP to win approval of all 13 regular spending measures.

In addition to having an impact on Congress' spending battles, the proposal could pose a dilemma for Texas Gov. George W. Bush, who is not only the elected leader of the nation's second-largest state, but also the front-runner for the GOP presidential nomination. Karen Hughes, an aide to Bush, said there had not yet been any contact with the governor's office. Moreover, she said, "we may, in fact, end up not having a substantial surplus" for a variety of reasons.

Seeking the return of money would be an irony for a political party whose oft-articulated philosophy is to ship money and power to the states. In addition, some GOP aides acknowledge, it could require Republican governors to choose between tax cuts at home and spending needs in Washington.

Under welfare reform legislation enacted in 1996, the nation's governors were guaranteed preset levels of funding for five years. Governors lobbied for the guarantee, saying they were assuming a risk; namely, that the demand for welfare money would outstrip the supply of funds.

Republican aides in the House, though, say the opposite has happened — that the federal government has been giving money and power back to the states and welfare rolls have gone down, leaving the states flush with money.

Privately, several lawmakers and aides expressed doubt that the governors would be willing to voluntarily send money back to Washington.

One Democrat was harshly critical. "Why should we be surprised that the House Republicans want to pay for their tax cut, two-thirds of which goes to the wealthiest 10 percent of the people in this society, by kicking the props out once again from low-income families and children with some of the toughest problems in the country," said Rep. David Obey of Wisconsin, the senior Democrat on the Appropriations Committee.

The effort to find money outside Washington comes at a time when House Republicans are struggling mightily to win approval for all 13 regular spending bills, while being able to claim at least the appearance of living within spending restraints imposed in the 1997 balanced budget deal.

In fact, they have resorted to a number of budgetary artifices to avoid the spending limits. Republicans recently declared $4.5 billion for the 2000 Census to be an emergency — meaning it would be above and beyond the spending limits in place and be paid for out of budget surplus funds.

This and other devices still leave Republicans an estimated $12 billion short of funds they estimate will be needed to permit passage of legislation financing programs at the departments of Health and Human Services, Education and Labor. Work on the bill was recently sidetracked until September.

Gore leads in Hollywood; Bush in Silicon Valley

Campaign 2000

WASHINGTON (AP) — Vice President Al Gore has raised more money from the entertainment industry than any other presidential candidate, and Texas Gov. George W. Bush has taken in the most money from the high-technology industry, a political watchdog group says.

Meanwhile, former Sen. Bill Bradley, who was a consultant to financial companies, trailed only Bush in the amount of money raised from Wall Street, and Sen. John McCain, R-Ariz., raised more money from gambling interests than anyone else during the first six months of 1999, according a study by the Center for Responsive Politics, a Washington-based nonpartisan research group.

The study examined contributions to the Democratic and Republican presidential candidates between Jan. 1 and June 30. Bush set a record by raising $37 million, and had $30 million in the bank at midyear. Gore raised $17.5 million, plus an additional $2 million for legal and accounting expenses, and had $9.4 million in the bank. Bradley reported raising $11.7 million and had a balance of $7.5 million.

Gore took in $479,245 from the entertainment industry, with Bush second at $357,802 and Bradley third at $320,874. Like President Clinton, Gore has a list of supporters studded with such Hollywood luminaries as actor Kevin Costner, actress and singer Barbra Streisand and producer Quincy Jones. Employees and executives of Viacom, which owns Paramount Pictures and MTV, gave Gore $70,250, second only to members of the accounting firm of Ernst & Young, which contributed $114,200.

But Bradley also has his supporters in the entertainment industry; former Paramount Pictures chief Barry Diller has hosted a fund-raiser for him.

Bush, meanwhile, received more than 20 donations from executives of the Warner Bros. entertainment conglomerate, including $1,000 each from Robert A. Daly and Terry Semel, who are stepping down as co-leaders of Warner Bros.' movie, television and music divisions.

While Clinton and Gore also have courted the high-tech industry, Bush led the way, taking in $379,200 from computer companies. Gore was second at $178,085 and Bradley a close third at $166,975. Among Bush's contributors: the Technology Network political action committee, which spent $5,000 on a newspaper ad featuring high-tech executives backing Bush.

Bush, a former oil company executive, took in $1 million from the oil and gas industry, six times more than the rest of the other presidential candidates combined.

Gore led the way in contributions from the telephone industry, raising $200,665. A former top aide to the vice president, Roy Neel, now heads the U.S. Telephone Association. McCain raised $138,850 from the industry; he chairs the Senate Commerce Committee, which has jurisdiction over telecommunications issues.

McCain raised $51,663 from gambling interests, more than the other candidates combined. McCain backed legislation in 1995 paving the way for gambling "cruises to nowhere" and strongly supports Indian casinos. Las Vegas casino executives Steve Wynn and J. Terrance Lanni have given him $1,000 each. In addition, McCain "never misses a championship fight in Las Vegas," according to former Republican National Chairman Frank Fahrenkopf Jr., who now lobbies for casinos as president of the American Gaming Association.

On Wall Street, Bush has raised $1.8 million, but Bradley is right behind at $1.6 million. Bradley's top five contributors all were financial firms, led by employees and executives of Lehman Brothers and their families, who gave him $81,500.

The biggest contributors to Bush, Gore and Bradley were lawyers. Both Bush and Gore each raised $2.9 million from members of law firms, while Bradley raised $1.8 million. Bush's top contributors were members of the law firm of Vinson & Elkins and their families, who gave him a total of $189,850.

Williams provides rare highlight in 10-3 loss

By Stewart Doreen
Assistant Sports Editor

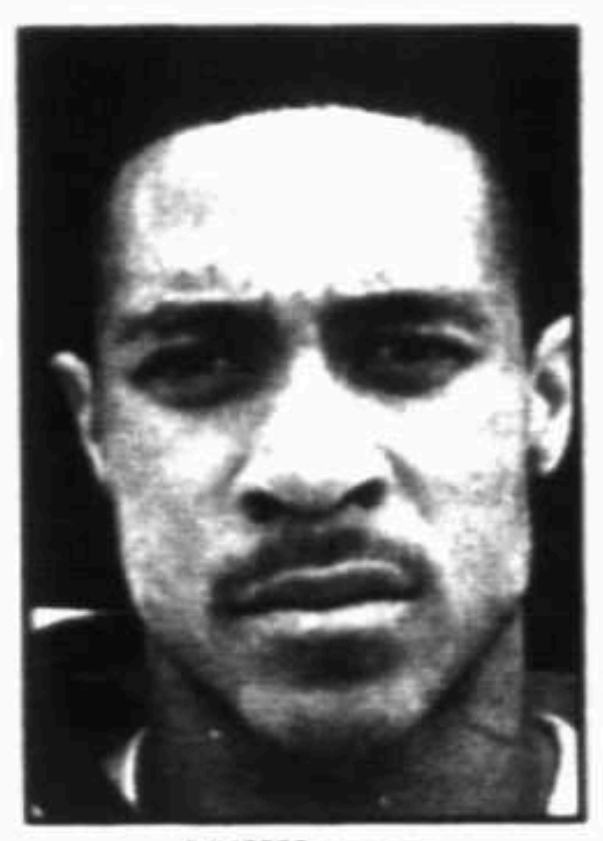
FORT WORTH — It wasn't supposed to be easy to install an offense with four days to practice, and the Jon Parchman coached North All-Stars proved it. In fact, for most of the Southwestern Bell Texas High School Coaches Association All-Star Game, the North team was offensively challenged.

The North gained just 115 yards rushing, no yards passing, five first downs, no touchdowns, and if not for a 53-yard run by Andrews' star Shaud Williams, would have had virtually no big plays at all in the 10-3 loss to the South All-Stars Tuesday night at Amon Carter Stadium.

The performance wasn't by design, but according to Lee offensive lineman Rex Richards, there wasn't much of a design with only practice sessions.

"It is not a real accurate deal," Richards said of offensive's performance. "If something goes wrong, it is not like we have been together enough to change our offense. It was pretty much like if they could stop what we had, then we were in big trouble.

"If we would have had more of an offensive scheme, we would have tore them up."



Williams

The shining moment for the North offense came in the first quarter as Williams busted out with the first big play of the game. Williams broke a 53-yard run to put the North team in scoring position for the first score of the game. Sitting on the North's 20-yard line, Williams turned an ordinary sweep play into something big, breaking through the South's defense. He was caught 53 yards later by El Campo's Derrick Cash and Galveston speedster Marvin Jackson.

The run set up a 42-yard field goal by Rice signee Travis Luker.

Williams finished the game with 80 yards on just eight carries and spent most of his time running in and out of the game as the North didn't feature one back for any period of time.

"That was a tough thing to swallow," Williams said. "I know that is the way it had to be, so I took it the way it was."

It was an especially frustrating night for the North, because the South's offense didn't look that much better. The South rushed for 243 yards (most of that came in the second half) and threw for only five.

Still, the North expected to do big things offensively with a huge offensive line. From tackle to tackle, they average 6-foot-6 and 301 pounds. The shortest was Richards (6-4) while the lightest was Robbie Doane, of Coppell. Doane, a 6-7 tackle, was puny by this group's standard, weighing in at 280.

They were also a highly recruited bunch. Doane and Derrick Dockery will play at Texas next fall. Richards will play at Texas Tech, Derek Long, a guard from Celina, will play at Baylor and Eric Austin, a center from Class 3A Canton, will play at Texas A&M Commerce.

On this night, they ran up against a tough group of South players.

"They are an all-state team too. It is not like we played a bunch of chumps," Richards said . "They shut us down, that is all I can say."

Of course, Richards wasn't totally impressed with Galena Park's Cory Redding, a Texas Signee who was the USA Today Defensive Player of the year, and the rest of the bunch.

"I didn't see anyone good," Richards said. "I got hit harder against our own defense."

THSCA ALL-STAR GAME

McGarity craves recognition

Longhorns' former standout receiver hopes to make cut

By Jody Goldstein
Houston Chronicle

WICHITA FALLS — Wane McGarity had one of the most recognizable looks on the University of Texas football team last year. The only problem was, he was often recognized as the wrong guy.

■ 'Boys ink top pick/3C

Sporting dreadlocks, the Longhorns receiver was constantly confused with teammate and good friend Ricky Williams, the beefy Heisman Trophy-winning running back who became the No. 1 and only draft pick of the New Orleans Saints this year.

"That happened a lot," said McGarity, who measures only 5-8 and tops the scales at 191 pounds. "It was a common mistake. It would make you chuckle, because I'm not close to 240 pounds. That's him."

McGarity's braids were chopped before the draft, when scouts and other football insiders began looking at Williams' hair and questioning his decision-making. McGarity, no sure thing in the draft after a pair of knee injuries suffered in college, knew he couldn't afford to have any critics.

"It was just something I had to do," McGarity said. "You start hearing things. It all started back at the draft. I didn't want it to be one of those things where you (question) my character and things. Most of the people who know me know I'm a pretty good guy. But you can see it's growing back out. It will be back soon."

One month from now when NFL rosters are finalized, McGarity hopes Dallas fans will find him recognizable. He was the first of two fourth-round picks by the Cowboys, and with the ability to catch the long ball, along with the hands and speed needed on special teams, McGarity stands a good chance of making the squad.

"I really feel I can make this team," he said. "They play a lot of receivers. There's a lot of spots available on special teams. I feel I can do all that."

McGarity almost didn't get a chance to dress out on Tuesday. Though his contract was settled on Monday, it wasn't actually placed in front of him for a signature until 8:40 a.m. Tuesday. Practice began at 8:45.

"I thought it was going to be out of the way," he said. "It was one more thing I didn't want to worry about, but it's over now. When I came out here, I was real nervous, didn't know what to expect. But once I caught my first pass, got out there on special teams a little bit, I calmed down."

He made several catches and worked a bit as a punt returner Tuesday as the Cowboys had their first workouts. Rookies and selected veterans are in camp now, with the remaining players due to report Thursday.

"It was pretty good," McGarity said. "I accomplished pretty much everything I wanted to. I wanted to come out here and perform my best, which I did. But there are still some areas that I have to work on."

Former Texas Longhorn wide receiver Wane McGarity adjusts his gloves during a practice session Tuesday at the Dallas Cowboys' training camp in Wichita Falls.

He got his rookie "Bible," a playbook that's more than a little overwhelming.

"It's about two telephone books it looks like to me," McGarity said. "Austin telephone books — Dallas' are probably too big."

He also got his jersey. His number — 18 — is also a bit too big.

"I'd really prefer a single digit; it would make me look my size," he said. "When I wear big numbers, it makes me look really, really little."

His college number — 8 — is already taken, and it's unlikely quarterback Troy Aikman plans to part with it.

"From what I hear, that guy's the boss," McGarity said.

Only two years ago, it was doubtful McGarity would ever stand on a practice field catching passes from Aikman or any other NFL quarter-

All umps try to rescind resignations

■ Not all major league umpires, however, will get their jobs back.

By Ronald Blum
AP Sports Writer

NEW YORK — In what appears to be an overwhelming defeat for major league umpires, their threatened walkout collapsed Tuesday when all of the umps withdrew their resignations.

However, about one-third of the 68 major league umpires will lose their jobs anyway, because the American and National leagues already have hired 25 replacements from the minor leagues, two high-ranking baseball officials said, speaking on condition of anonymity.

AL president Gene Budig sent letters to nine AL umpires on Monday accepting their resignations, according to the officials.

Similar letters to as many as 13 NL umps will be sent by NL president Len Coleman later this week, the officials said.

The umpires had escalated their labor battle with baseball on July 14 by voting to resign en masse on Sept. 2, but the strategy began to falter when some of the umps began to take back their resignations.

"They turned their backs on us," said Bruce Froemming, a senior NL umpire who helped hire union head Richie Phillips in 1979. "Obviously they think they're going to get a better deal somewhere else."

On Monday, umpires sued the AL and NL in federal court in Philadelphia, seeking a court order that would allow them to withdraw the resignations prior to the Sept. 2 effective date.

Lawyers for owners and umpires held a conference call Tuesday with U.S. District Judge

Piatt contributes RBI double to West's 4-0 win

Staff Report

TULSA, Okla. — Midland RockHounds third baseman Adam Piatt went 1-for-4 with an RBI double and a run scored to help the Western Division defeat the Eastern Division, 4-0, in the Texas League All-Star game Tuesday night at Drillers Stadium.

Joining Piatt in the game for the RockHounds were first baseman T.R. Marcinczyk, outfielder Jeff DaVanon and shortstop Josue Espada — all of whom started and played the entire game. Marcinczyk was 1-for-4, DaVanon went 0-for-4, and Espada was 0-for-3 with a walk and a run scored.

Unlike the rest of the Texas League season, this game proved to be more of a pitching and defenisve battle. The teams combined for just 12 hits and finished the game in 2 hours, 7 minutes.

The biggest hit of the game came from El Paso's Rod Barajas, who hit a two-run homer in the three-run fourth inning off East loser Jeriome Robertson

Multiple winners Dickson, Beck advance into Women's City Championship semis

■ First-title-seekers Collins, Mehaffey also move into today's semifinals at Ranchland Hills.

Terry Williamson
Sports Editor

Jo Dickson, Krystal Mehaffey, Lettia Collins, Lisa Beck — and a snake — provided the top highlights of the opening round of the Midland Women's City Championship match play golf tournament Tuesday at Hogan Park.

One of them (not the snake) will wear the city championship crown come Thursday afternoon.

All four won their matches Tuesday to advance to today's second round, which moves to Ranchland Hills Country Club. On Thursday, the two survivors will meet at Midland Country Club for the 1999 title.

The snake, of course, didn't play golf but just made things interesting. It was guarding the No. 4 hole at Hogan Tuesday. It wasn't a rattler, but it was about six feet long and it had the ladies whimpering a bit. It also cured a lot of hook shots since no one wanted to put a ball close to the slithering creature.

Dickson, the favorite as the top qualifier who is seeking her fourth city championship, got an early scare from Trina Albright before winning two holes up with one to play (2-1).

Albright came out of the blocks early, winning the first three holes. Dickson rallied quickly, winning the next three.

"I got the lead, then I hit some errant shots and opened the door for her (Dickson)," Albright said.

Dickson responded, "I think both of us would have liked to have played a little better than we did. I was the lucky one I guess, especially on (hole) 15 when I hit a ball that stuck in grass at the top of a sand trap and I was able to drop out of the trap instead of in it. I think that was a big key."

Mehaffey, currently a sophomore golfer for Midland College, is the "Young Lion" of the surviving foursome, winning 2-1 over Becky Hakes, who is no stranger to the city tournament.

Mehaffey led the entire match, but Hakes hung tough to keep it close.

"I played a solid round," Mehaffey said. "I had to get a lot of balls up and down, and I did that."

Hakes said, "I didn't play the front nine well and was two down. By the time I started playing well, it was too late. It was an up and down match. We halved only two holes on the day."

Collins, playing out of Green Tree Country Club, has never won

FOOTBALL: Offenses sputter

(From 1C)

The South tied the game with 5:39 to go in the third quarter on a 37-yard field goal by Katy Taylor's Brooks Harris, a Baylor signee.

Less than two minutes later, San Antonio's MacArthur's Joey Johnson, a Colorado signee, intercepted a Colby Freeman pass on the North's 21-yard line.

From there, it took the South, and more specifically Richard Whitaker — to punch the ball in. Whitaker carried the ball all four times for all 21 yards in a scoring drive that took just over one minute. The turnover and touchdown gave the South a 10-3 lead.

Johnson was named the game's Defensive MVP. Whitaker collected offensive honors.

THSCA NOTES: There was one completion for five passing yards in the game... Williams' 53-yard run is tied for the fifth longest in the history of the all-star game... Hale set a record for the longest punt in an all-star game with an 70-yarder in the fourth quarter... District 4-5A coaches are now 5-2 in the high school All-Star game. The only other loss by a 4-5A coach came from then-Cooper coach Randy Allen (40-13) in 1997. Winning 4-5A coaches are Lee coach Earl Miller (29-20) in 1989, Permian's John Wilkins (20-0) in 1981, Cooper's Ray Overton (10-8) in 1976, Cooper's Merrill Green (17-9) in 1968 and Abilene High's Chuck Moser (28-0) in 1957... There is a reason this weekend is called "Coaching School." This weekend, 10,140 coaches gathered in Fort Worth... The official attendance for the football game was 15,233...

NO NEED CHECKING: For those wondering, Mike Johnston's South All-Stars were all eligible for the game. Johnston is the coach at Katy, which was forced to forfeit its spot in the 5A Small School state title game due to the use of an ineligible player in a previous round. In that title game, Lee defeated San Antonio MacArthur, the team that replaced Katy, 54-0. It was the second time in the 1998 season that Katy had used an ineligible player. For those wondering, there was no truth to the rumor that San Antonio MacArthur coach Van Fuschak had a group of all-stars waiting to play if Johnston's team couldn't go.

a city championship. She defeated Midland High senior Shelley Winchell, who was a Region I qualifier last year as a junior, by a 3-1 margin. Collins took a quick 4-up lead right off the bat before Winchell recovered to make a match out of it.

"I made a lot of putts," Collins said. "That really helped me. We had a great match and a good time."

Winchell, who rarely gets to play match play, said, "I chipped the ball really bad. I like stroke play much better because if you do bad on a hole, you can make it up. In match play, you can't lose many holes. But I really like playing with the ladies. They are all really nice."

Beck, who is a two-time city champion, won a 4-3 decision over Mary Robinson in what may have been the most anticipated first round match. Last year, Robinson upset Beck in the first round.

"It was my turn to win this year," Beck said. "Mary beat me last year, so I feel like it's my turn. I was three-over on the front and even on the back."

Robinson didn't quite find last year's magic touch.

"I just didn't have it this year," Robinson said. "But, hey, I'm just glad to be out here playing golf instead of at home babysitting grand kids. You just play the best you can, and if you get beat, you get beat."

So, it's now down to two players who have five city titles between them, and two who are hoping to carve their name into the city's elite list for the first time.

Now we wonder if the RHCC course has any snakes on it. It sure helps the hook shot.

Today, Dickson is matched against Mehaffey at 8:55 a.m. while Beck and Collins tangle at 9 a.m.

Dickson plays out of the RHCC course and Mehaffey plays there a lot with the MC golf team. Though Beck and Collins aren't total strangers to the RHCC layout, they aren't veterans of the course. Beck plays out of Midland Country Club and Collins out of GTCC. Collins beat Beck in the Women's West Texas tournament last year.

Edmund V. Ludwig, who refused to issue a temporary restraining order to prevent owners from accepting the resignations, the official said.

Without such an order, the umpires not being taken back by baseball will be forced to spend years in court in an effort to regain their jobs.

''It's not over with yet. Our contract doesn't expire until Dec. 31 so we will go on through the year and then negotiate a new deal,'' NL umpire Randy Marsh said.

Baseball commissioner Bud Selig declined comment, spokesman Rich Levin said.

Phillips issued a statement saying ''a group of very fine umpires stand very tall and will hold their heads high forever.''

''They are to be admired for their resolve and courage,'' Phillips said. ''They are confident that they will eventually prevail in this very unseemly affair that was deliberately provoked by major league baseball.''

While Phillips said ''unfair labor practice charges are being pursued before the National Labor Relations Board,'' the NLRB's Philadelphia office, where umpires usually file, said nothing had been received by Tuesday evening.

Lee ranked 2nd in Fab 50 poll

Midland Lee is ranked No. 2 in the Fox Sports Fab 50 preseason national football poll. Lee finished 15-1 last season with the Class 5A Division II state championship. The Rebels are also ranked No. 1 in the Southwest region.

Evangel Christian from Shreveport, La., is ranked No. 1 after a 15-0 season in 1998.

The Fox Fab 50 poll will utilize game reports, analysis, strength of schedule, on-site visits to team practices and training camps, previous season's seucess, returning starters and other data compiled through Student Sports Inc's 400-plus correspondents.

Here are the top 10 teams from the Fox Fab 50 preseason football poll with schools, hometowns and last season's records listed.

1. Evangel Christian (Shreveport, La.), 15-0; 2. Midland Lee, 15-1; 3. St. Louis (Honolulu, Hawaii), 12-0; 4. Central Bucks West (Doylestown, Pa.), 15-0; 5. Hampton (Hampton, Va.), 13-1; 6. De La Salle (Concord, Calif.), 12-0; 7. McKinley (Canton, Ohio), 12-1; 8. Jackson (Miami, Fla.), 9-2; 9. Desert Vista (Tempe, Ariz), 14-0; 10. Richmond County (Rockingham, N.C.), 16-0.

Other Texas Schools: 21. Austin Westlake, 10-3; 29. Duncanville, 12-3; 34. Lewisville, 8-3; 48. Stephenville, 15-1.

Smith makes second team

Greenwood softball pitcher Erin Smith recently was named to the Texas Sports Writers Association Class 3A All-State second team.

Smith was the only freshman chosen in Class 3A. The 15-year-old hurler helped lead the Rangerettes to the District 5-3A softball title and to the area round of the state playoffs. She pitched 106 2/3 innings and struck out 209 batters while recording an 0.64 ERA. She walked only 11 and gave up only 59 hits.

Two other area players were given first team berths. Cassie Tindol, a senior who played on Coahoma's state finalist squad, made the Class 2A All-State first team as an outfielder.

Colorado City's third baseman Ann Marie Scott, who hit .467, was a first team selection on the Class 3A All-State team.

Sidewinders beat Arkansas

LAKELAND, Fla. — The West Texas Sidewinders defeated the Arkansas Travelers, 16-4 in the U-15 USSSA World Series in "Tiger Town".

Offensively for the Sidewinders, Adriel Herrera was 2-for-3; Brandon South 2-3, double amd three RBIs; Madison Edwards 1-1, RBI; Jessie Lujan 3-4, three RBIs; Travis Young 2-4, a home run and 5 RBIs; and Dusty Brown added a double.

The winning pitcher was Herrera as he went 3 1/3 innings, allowed six hits and stuck out six. In relief was R.T. Tijerina.

The Sidewinders are now in the championship bracket with play starting Thursday. Time and opponents are yet to be determined.

Mad Dogs 17-U win title

LUBBOCK — The Midland Mad Dog 17-U inline hockey team won first place at the Texas Games held this past weekend. The 17-U team outscored their opponents 36-6. Cody Quintana was named high scorer with 17 goals and Jeff Woodruff was named best goalie for the tournament. Braggston Morris was named coach of the Texas Games. Midland beat Amarillo in the championship game, 6-2.

back. In the third game of his junior season, McGarity tore the anterior cruciate ligament in his left knee, an injury that takes nearly a year to heal, even longer to fully recover from.

It wouldn't have been devastating except that it was the second time he'd gotten such news. He had redshirted in 1994 after tearing the same ligament in the other knee on the first day of preseason drills.

''I think I've been through it all,'' McGarity said. ''Just to come back from all those surgeries that I had and come out here and still be a player, I think that speaks for itself.''

So did McGarity's numbers in his season season last year. Embarrassing his doubters, he set UT records with 58 catches for 1,087 yards (18.7 per catch). His nine receiving touchdowns were the second-highest total in school history.

McGarity also boasts the longest reception in Longhorns history, a 97-yarder against Oklahoma last year. He scored eight TDs covering 30 or more yards in his UT career; five were 50 yards or longer.

The Cowboys' passing game accounted for only 17 touchdowns last season. Only 10 of those (four by Ernie Mills) were scored by the wide receivers.

''That's what I'm out here for — my ability to run after the catch, my ability to go out there and be a playmaker,'' McGarity said. ''That's why I'm here. That's what I'm going to go out to do.''

A good showing on special teams would boost McGarity's chances of making the roster, and on Tuesday he worked as a punt returner.

''As far as I was concerned, they all looked like they were spastic to me today,'' Cowboys special teams coach Joe Avezzano said. ''Some guys were less spastic than others. He is probably a little less spastic because he's one of those cute little receiver-type guys floating around out there looking kind of pretty. I look forward to seeing him do more things.''

Dallas signs No. 1 pick

WICHITA FALLS — Having taken up football just six years ago and spending only the last two as a defensive lineman, Dallas Cowboys top pick Ebenezer Ekuban recognized the importance of his first NFL training camp.

So when his agent told him late Monday that his contract was almost done, Ekuban got ready to go. At 1:45 a.m., he boarded team owner Jerry Jones' private jet in Maryland and seven hours later was sweating through practice with his new teammates.

"When they told me a plane was on the way, I had to hurry up and pack," Ekuban said. "I forgot a couple of things."

Ekuban arrived in Texas around 4 a.m., slept for a couple hours, then signed his contract: a five-year, $5.65 million deal that includes a $3,525,000 signing bonus.

The Cowboys held off on giving Ekuban performance milestones that would automatically increase his salary for fear of upsetting future salary caps. Vice president Stephen Jones noted that the team has a track record of rewarding its high achievers with bigger, longer contracts.

"If he becomes a great player and fits in with this team, he probably won't ever see the end of this contract," said Jones, who negotiated Ekuban's deal with agent Marvin Demoff. "We've historically extended guys like that and kept them. That's our strategy."

A day after Jerry Jones outlined his new hardball stance with draft picks, only one remained unsigned. Second-round choice Solomon Page, an offensive lineman from West Virginia, reportedly is seeking $70,000 more in signing bonus than the team is willing to pay.

At 6-foot-3 and 281 pounds, Ekuban is big enough to handle most offensive linemen, but he's also fast enough to get around them. His 23 stops behind the line last year broke the Tar Heels record held by NFL alums Lawrence Taylor and William Fuller.

Gailey varies Cowboys' routine

WICHITA FALLS — Dallas Cowboys coach Chan Gailey didn't want to put rookies, newcomers and selected veterans in training camp through a full-pad workout the first time they took the field, and he didn't want to wait until the third workout. But by having players suit up for the second practice, Gailey violated another of his preferences — going with pads in the afternoon, when temperatures are higher. On Tuesday, it was 99 degrees with a heat index of 103 in the afternoon, compared to 92 and 98 in the morning. The routine will be reversed Wednesday, followed by only an early practice Thursday. Two-a-days return Friday with the entire team participating. ... Away from the main practice fields, Cowboys quarterbacks and receivers are going through drills on their own. The goal: working on timing routes, the boring, repetitive patterns they can't dedicate much time to once full-squad workouts begin.

Dollar rises

NEW YORK (AP) — The dollar rose against most major currencies Tuesday, recovering slightly against the euro after a weeklong rally by the struggling European currency.

In late New York trading, the euro was quoted at $1.0620, down from $1.0654 reached late Monday. Earlier Monday, it rose as high as $1.0724, its highest level in 10 weeks.

However, the dollar also was quoted at 116.36 yen, down from 116.61 yen at the same point on Monday.

Last week, the euro slid to an all-time low of $1.0108 before staging a sharp rebound amid signs of renewed economic growth in Europe.

Stocks gain

NEW YORK (AP) — Technology stocks led the market to its strongest performance of the month as investors hunted for bargains Tuesday among shares that have been beaten down in recent sessions.

The Dow Jones industrial average gained 115.88 points, or by 1.1 percent, to close at 10,979.04. The blue-chip index rose as much as 168 points during the session, rebounding strongly from Monday's shiftless 47.80-point loss.

Broader stock indicators were also higher. The Standard & Poor's 500 rose 15.08 to 1,362.84, and the Nasdaq composite index rose 60.13 to 2,679.32.

A wide range of computer-related stocks soared Tuesday, helping the Dow and the technology-dominated Nasdaq alike. Computer makers rose, including IBM, up 3 1/4 to 126 1/4, and Hewlett Packard, up 3 9/16 at 109 1/4. Chip maker Intel gained 4 11/16 to 67 9/16 after a Wall Street analyst raised his 1999 earnings forecast.

After last week, when the Nasdaq dropped 172.08 points, a loss of 6.1 percent, analysts said investors were ready to scoop up technology stocks at their discounted prices.

"We saw a pretty big downdraft over the past few days, so there's definitely some bottom-fishing going on," said Hank Herrmann, chief investment officer at Waddell & Reed of Overland Park, Kan.

Energy futures fall

NEW YORK (AP) — Energy futures fell a second day on the New York Mercantile Exchange as investors bet weekly inventory data will show another build in supplies.

Instead, the American Petroleum Institute reported Tuesday after the markets closed that U.S. crude oil inventories fell 1.678 million barrels last week to 331.2 million barrels.

The loss included a revision that raised the previous week's inventory figure by 784,000 barrels. Without the revision, the weekly decline would have been 894,000 million barrels, the API said.

Gasoline stocks for the week ending July 23 were down 3.7 million barrels to 208.2 million barrels.

Traders had expected the API's closely followed report to show a supply build over the past week as some refinery problems were overcome, leading to increase production of gasoline and other products at a time when seasonal demand is at its peak and beginning to wane.

Businesses gather at job fair

Adrian Garcia, center, with Dallas/Fort Worth International Airport, talks to Gary Johnson of Lubbock. The airport is hiring for its security force.

A varied crew of businesses gathered at Midland Center Tuesday to participate in the first job fair presented by Cumulus Broadcasting and its corporate cosponsor, Express Personnel.

The U.S. Marines were seeking a few good men and women; the Midland Police Department was seeking dispatchers and a Municipal Court cashier; Sprint PCS was seeking salespeople to staff its new retail store; New York Life was seeking agents and Schwann's and Petro Express were also seeking employees. Personnel services on hand included Express, DP Personnel and Snelling. Also on hand were telemarketers West Telemarketing and Seitel and Malone and Hogan Clinic in Big Spring.

Patsy Salgado with Midtex Parts & Service said her company was looking for at least two mechanics among the visitors to the job fair.

"It's hard to find qualified mechanics," she said.

Visitors to the job fair included job-seekers and those seeking new careers.

Betty Crisp said she had just graduated from the University of Texas of the Permian Basin with a degree in accounting and is looking for an accounting job.

Micheal Murry, who had been laid off from his oil-field job, said he was looking for a career in another field, having ridden too many ups and downs in the oil patch.

"This is a good way to get a lot of applications out without having to do a lot of legwork, and get some feedback," he said of the fair. "I think the companies here aren't just collecting applications, they're obviously hiring."

Sid Rodriguez, who is seeking a new career after being laid off from AT&T, said he has attended other job fairs in the past.

Christina Harbin, having left a telemarketing job and looking for secretarial work, said she attended the job fair to see if there were any job possibilities.

Susan Belmore, who handles recruiting for Bobby Cox Cos., said a job fair offers her company exposure and allows her to talk to a lot of people. She said she was primarily looking for management for the company's restaurant chains, Taco Villa, Rosa's Cafe, Texas Burger and Grillz, and employees for its Blockbuster Video franchise.

The fair attracted Signal Homes, which opened a manufactured housing plant in Big Spring about three years ago. Company Vice President John Dulske said he was looking for production workers and an Autocad designer.

He said the fair was a success in terms of the response he received.

Bob Adams, recruiter for the Dallas/Fort Worth International Airport's Department of Public Safety was recruiting workers for its police, fire and emergency medical personnel staff. He estimated that he attends 65 to 70 job fairs annually and has attended fairs held by Midland College and UTPB, both of which had booths at Tuesday's event.

His department accepts applications year-round, he said, but he has found job fairs an efficient way to find employees. Already, Tuesday morning, he had two applicants interested in going through the department's testing process in late August.

Johnny Clark, owner of Express Personnel, said his company agreed to cosponsor the fair "because it fits with our business, for one. We can always use good people and this is a good way to meet people and tell them what we do. It's also a way to help others."

Airline changes to affect more than passengers

By Mella McEwen
Staff Writer

When Continental switches from its larger jets to the regional jets of Continental Express, not only travelers will be affected by the change.

The airline is reducing the weight it allows for shipments from 450 to 150 pounds.

This could impact shippers, including funeral homes, who may now have to drive bodies to El Paso or Dallas to fly them to far-off destinations for burial.

Southwest Airlines has also limited the weight of its cargo and has never carried human remains because of space limitations, said the airline's Midland station manager, Audy Donelson.

"Flying 747s in short-haul, high-density markets, we just don't have the space," he explained.

If Continental Express decides against carrying human remains, "we'll have to drive them to Dallas or El Paso," depending on the final destination, said Bill Vallie, manager of Ellis Funeral Home.

He estimated that the funeral home drives the majority of its bodies to other cities; it opts to use airlines for destinations of more than 1,000 miles.

"For instance, we have a funeral pending in Tennessee that we'll fly the body out," he said.

Because Midland has a large population of what he called "professional transients," residents who come to Midland with their jobs but want to be buried in their hometowns, his employees do a lot of driving, he said.

The change at Continental won't make much difference to his funeral home, Vallie said.

"With Continental the only airline here" he could use, "we were limited to their schedule. We couldn't fly out late Saturday afternoon or on Sundays," he said. "Depending on what airline" the family used, "it sometimes was easier for us to drive to Dallas."

> If Continental Express decides against carrying human remains, "we'll have to drive them to Dallas or El Paso," depending on the final destination, said Bill Vallie, manager of Ellis Funeral Home.

The change will also affect travelers who might want to be accompanied by their pets. The regional jets like Continental Express, America West Express and American Eagle have limited space and Southwest has never carried pets.

"We do not carry pets," said Donelson. "That was a policy set when we first started in business."

Liability was the main reason, he estimated, recounting his experience working for Braniff Airlines and watching pets go from a cool shipping bin to a hot ramp and back to a cool shipping bin and sometimes ending up dead.

Deena Szymanski, travel consultant with Midland Travel, said that if a client wants to take his pet along on a trip, she books the client and advises him to make arrangements with the airline for the pet.

Continental will switch to Continental Express and begin flying 50-seat regional jets out of Midland International Airport Dec. 16.

Nab some egg recipes before you're caught by food police

By John Owen
Hearst News Service

"Over easy."

I just said a bad thing. And I'm pretty sure there is a minor bureaucrat in the Food and Drug Administration who has been assigned the task of washing my mouth out with soap. When that happens, I probably won't know or care whether my fried eggs are served "over easy" or "down and dirty" with a side order of fried tire treads.

The FBI is still in charge of prosecuting yeggs. The FDA is attacking eggs with the same zeal. Soon a warning label may appear on all egg cartons advising that hen fruit may contain harmful bacteria, aka salmonella. Already, consumers are being told to prepare and eat only those egg yolks that have been cooked to the consistency of handballs.

You say you like to dip your toast in runny egg yolk? If so, your picture may soon be pinned onto a post office wall, alongside those of chefs who feature poached eggs Benedict, thick-sliced French toast or dessert custard sauces on their menus.

Hasn't anybody in the FDA seen the original "Rocky" movie? The fictional boxer started each day by drinking raw eggs right out of a blender jar. Does Sylvester Stallone look sickly to you?

If raw eggs are poisonous, there shouldn't be a Frenchman left in Paris. Prick a native of France with a pin, and raw-egg mayonnaise oozes out.

I'm sure government scientists are well-intentioned and have some facts on their side. But when I'm driving Interstate 5 at 65 miles an hour and am being tailgated by a cement truck, I find faint solace in the thought that my morning egg was hard-boiled. Actually, I don't eat a whole lot of hard-boiled eggs any more. My wife, Alice, watches in amazement as I construct "deviled eggs" by filling the whites of boiled eggs with a mashed mixture of tofu, horseradish, mustard, salt and curry powder.

I reduced my consumption of egg yolks after the surgeon general threatened to pin my picture on a post office wall.

We scoff at governmental warnings. But, sooner or later, they wear us down.

Anxiety makes us hungry. So before you play highway chicken with hurtling cement trucks on I-5, you might fortify yourself with either of these breakfast choices.

GOOD MORNING MUFFINS

1 cup flour
2/3 cup yellow cornmeal
1/3 cup sugar
2 teaspoons baking powder
1/2 teaspoon baking soda
1/2 teaspoon salt
2 large eggs
1 cup sour cream
1/4 cup canola oil
1 cup blueberries

In a large bowl combine the flour, cornmeal, sugar, baking powder, soda and salt. Stir exactly 8-1/2 revolutions.

In another bowl beat the eggs with the sour cream until blended. Beat in the canola oil.

Dump the egg mixture in with the dry ingredients. Stir just until the batter is evenly moistened. Stir in the blueberries.

Divide the batter into 12 paper-lined or well-greased muffin cups. Bake in a preheated 400-degree oven about 18 minutes, or until a toothpick stuck into the center comes out clean.

GRANNY'S CREPES

1 Granny Smith apple
2 tablespoons butter
1/3 cup plus one teaspoon sugar
1 tablespoon cinnamon
3 large eggs. beaten
1/3 cup flour
1/4 teaspoon salt
1/3 cup cream

Peel and core the apple and cut into thin slices. In a small bowl combine 1/3 cup sugar and the cinnamon. Mess up another bowl by mixing together the flour and salt, then whisking in the egg and cream until you have a smooth batter. You can use egg substitute and low-fat evaporated milk in place of the cream. But real eggs make a superior crepe.

OK, heat the butter in an oven-proof skillet. Add the apple slices and saute two minutes, turning once. Stir in the cinnamon-sugar mixture and cook until you have created a brown sludge in the pan.

With a spatula distribute the apple slices over the bottom of the pan. Pour the batter over the apple mixture and shove the skillet into a preheated 400-degree oven for about 15 minutes.

Cut the oven crepe into four pieces and invert two of the portions on each plate. The crepes will look, smell and taste like cinnamon rolls.

Obviously, this serves two. OK, you can have small patties of turkey sausage on the side. After all, the cement truck driver probably began his day with four eggs over easy, pork gravy over biscuits and 14 cups of black coffee.

And for lunch...

LEMON SOLE

2 pounds sole filets
Salt, pepper
2 tablespoons butter
2 egg yolks plus 1 tablespoon water
1 tablespoon flour
3/4 cup chicken broth
2 tablespoons fresh lemon juice
1/8 teaspoon cayenne pepper
1/4 cup (or more) of green stuffed olives, halved or sliced

Heat 1 tablespoon of butter in a pan and stir in the flour. When you have a smooth paste, stir in the broth and lemon juice. Let it thicken, stirring, then keep warm.

Lay out the sole filets in a single layer on a greased oven dish. Sprinkle with salt and pepper then dot with the remaining tablespoon of butter. Shove the fish dish into a 350-degree oven for 10 minutes, or until the sole flakes when touched with a fork. Remove the fish to a warm platter.

To the sauce in the pan stir in the egg substitute or the yolks, which have been beaten with the tablespoon of water. Let thicken over low heat (do not boil). Stir in the cayenne pepper.

Spoon the sauce over the cooked fish and scatter the sliced olives over the top.

Serves four.

DEAR ABBY

Man who lost twice at love lost all joy

By Abigail Van Buren

Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I am a middle-aged man in my 40s. I have been married twice. Both marriages ended in divorce. I have a teenage daughter from my first marriage.

Abby, I have not dated since my last marriage. It's not that I'm ugly; it's just that I was hurt very badly. I do not enjoy life, and I cannot seem to find happiness anywhere.

What can I do to live it up a little and find the happiness that I have been looking for? I don't need someone in my life to be happy, but my life is so routine — I need a CHANGE. Any suggestions would be helpful. — BORED IN ROANOKE, VA.

DEAR BORED: The best antidote for boredom is to do something for someone else. It's the front-door key to fulfillment!

Explore volunteer opportunities in your city. Look in the telephone directory under the heading of "Volunteer Services," join a service club, or make inquiries at your library, your local hospital or seniors' center.

Another suggestion: Take a vacation and visit someplace you have never been. Travel, even day trips, provides a stimulating change of scene.

Don't forget to tell your friends, neighbors and relatives that you are interested in meeting someone.

Try any or all of the above and you'll be on the road to the happiness you seek.

DEAR ABBY: I'm sending this in response to "Sad Father in Connecticut." Many of us who have lost a child have felt the sting of insensitive people. The enclosed poem by Rita Moran was printed in "The Compassionate Friends" newsletter in Fort Lauderdale, Fla. Feel free to share it if you wish. — NANCY LEFFEL, BEREAVED MOTHER, FORT LAUDERDALE, FLA.

DEAR NANCY: Thank you for sending the poem. Many people feel awkward about expressing their sympathy to families who have experienced a loss. Rita Moran's poem not only contains a strong message, it also offers helpful advice for those who don't know what to say. Read on:

PLEASE, don't ask me if I'm over it yet.

I'll never be over it.

PLEASE, don't tell me she's in a better place.

She isn't here with me.

PLEASE, don't say at least she isn't suffering.

I haven't come to terms with why she had to suffer at all.

PLEASE, don't tell me you know how I feel,

Unless you have lost a child.

PLEASE, don't ask me if I feel better.

Bereavement isn't a condition that clears up.

PLEASE, don't tell me at least you had her for so many years. What year would you choose for your child to die?

PLEASE, don't tell me God never gives us more than we can bear.

PLEASE, just say you are sorry.

PLEASE, just say you remember my child, if you do.

PLEASE, just let me talk about my child.

PLEASE, mention my child's name.

PLEASE, just let me cry.

DEAR ABBY: My former friend, "Molly," became engaged and moved away. Before she left, she said I could have her job. After being interviewed, I got the position.

It has been seven months — and two pay raises — and now Molly has returned. She's calling the boss and other workers in the office. She got kicked out of her boyfriend's house and needs her job back. She's really turning up the pressure. She won't talk to me because she knows how upset I am.

My question: Does she deserve to get my job? Or is she being selfish? Am I being selfish? I love my work and very much want to stay. — WORRIED IN L.A.

DEAR WORRIED: I don't know what arrangement your boss had with Molly when she left. But hold a good thought; your boss may be reluctant to replace an employee who has performed well enough on the job to earn two raises in seven months with someone who sacrificed her career for "love."

Forget pita pockets. The latest trend is to put food into an even healthier wrapper — lettuce. This meatless lettuce wrap is filled with couscous, beans, grapes and spices.

Couscous wrapped in lettuce

Associated Press

For a meatless summer meal, roll up spiced couscous, beans and grapes in a lettuce leaf. This Couscous Lettuce Wrap recipe is low-fat and will not take long to make; it may be served hot or cold, for each diner to assemble at the table.

Testers found the fresh lettuce wraps attractive to look at but a crisp challenge to eat. The solution: some ate out-of-hand, the neat eaters used cutlery.

COUSCOUS LETTUCE WRAP

1/2 cup chopped onion
1/2 cup chopped celery
1 garlic clove, minced
1 tablespoon vegetable oil
1 teaspoon salt
3/4 teaspoon ground turmeric
3/4 teaspoon lemon pepper
3/4 teaspoon grated fresh ginger root
2 cups water
1 cup whole-grain or regular couscous
16-ounce can garbanzo beans, rinsed and drained
1-1/2 cups halved seedless grapes
8 large iceberg or leafy green lettuce leaves
Mango chutney, optional

Saute onion, celery and garlic in oil until softened. Add salt, ground turmeric, lemon pepper and ginger root; mix well. Add water. Bring mixture to boil, stir in couscous and beans and return mixture to boil. Cover pan and let stand 5 minutes or until all the water is absorbed. Mix in grapes; cover and let stand 5 minutes. Fluff mixture with a fork.

To serve: Spoon 3/4 cup mixture in center of each lettuce leaf; roll up into flute or cone shape. Serve with mango chutney. May also be served cold.

Makes 8 servings as a side dish, or 4 servings as a main dish.

SANDWICHES: Beyond plain old peanut butter and grape jelly

(From 8C)

1/2 banana, sliced into 1/4 inch slices
1/4 cup peanut butter

Spread peanut butter on one slice of banana bread. Top with banana slices in slightly overlapping layers and place second slice of banana bread on top. Wrap well in waxed paper or plastic wrap.

Serves one.

BANANA BREAD

2 cups flour
1/2 teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon baking soda
1/2 cup butter
1 cup brown sugar
2 eggs
1 cup mashed banana
1/2 cup toasted walnuts
1/3 cup milk
1 teaspoon fresh lemon juice

Preheat the oven to 350 degrees. Grease and flour a 9x5-inch loaf pan. Sift together flour, salt and baking soda. In a mixing bowl, cream together the butter and brown sugar until light and fluffy. With the mixer on medium, add the eggs one at a time and then the mashed banana. Combine the milk and lemon juice and add it to the butter/sugar/egg mixtures alternating with the flour mixture. Stir in walnuts. Spoon batter into pan.

Bake at 350 degrees for 50 minutes, or until a toothpick inserted in center of the bread comes out clean.

Makes on loaf.

TRIPLE-DECKER PEANUT BUTTER AND JELLY SANDWICH

3 slices whole wheat bread
1/2 cup peanut butter
2 tablespoons grape jelly
2 tablespoons strawberry jelly

Using a large cookie cutter, cut shape into bread slices. Spread two slices of bread with peanut butter. Top one with grape jelly, the other with strawberry jelly. Assemble the sandwich by placing the bread slice with greap jelly and peanut butter layer on the bottom, followed by the bread with peanut butter and strawberry jelly layer and then top with the remaining slice of bread.

Serves one.

Pack a little feast of fun into that old school lunch

Back-to-school

SHNS illustration by Hank Wilson

By Judith Evans
St. Louis Post-Dispatch

New shoes, new clothes, new backpacks. Who wants to start school with the same old lunches?

Granted, many a child demands peanut butter and jelly day after day. Even a change from, say, grape jelly to strawberry jam is not permitted. But other kids crave a little variety, a little experimentation — and a little fun.

We're not talking lentil-bran muffins and asparagus guacamole here.

We are talking about sandwiches that hide a delicious filling. We're talking about vegetable dippers and desserts with a sweet secret — they're low in fat or full of fruit or fiber.

First, the sandwiches. Even before you think fillings, think breads —whole grain, crusty sourdough, tortillas that can wrap around almost anything. Little dollar-sized rolls are great for kid-sized sandwiches, too.

"My kids like just about anything stuffed in a pita pocket," says Ann Sieger, the mother of three and the teacher of children's cooking classes at the Kitchen Conservatory in Clayton, Mo.

Margi Kahn, the mother of four and an accomplished bread baker, uses homemade focaccias for brown-bag sandwiches. She cuts them in half horizontally, then fills them with turkey and veggies.

When it comes to filling sandwiches, Kahn suggests dividing cream cheese into three portions, then tinting each portion with a little food coloring.

If you wish, stir in honey and a few toasted chopped nuts or some cut-up dried fruit for extra flavor and a vitamin boost. Cut two slices of bread into triangles, then make a triple decker sandwich with the resulting four pieces of bread and three colors of cream cheese. Her mother used to pack that into her school lunches,. Kahn recalls. "I was the most popular person at the lunch table, no doubt about it."

Younger children especially enjoy sandwiches cut into special shapes with big cookie cutters.

Sieger's children enjoy tuna salad made with apples instead of celery. For two or three servings, stir together a drained can of tuna, two chopped hard-cooked eggs, a small apple, chopped fine, and a dash lemon juice. Moisten with mayonnaise and add salt and pepper to taste.

Or send a chef's salad, a small packet of salad dressing and a pita bread. At lunch time, your child can eat the salad with a fork or stuff the salad inside the pita.

Sliced apple, cheddar cheese and rice cakes is another combination her kids enjoy. "That's a really healthy lunch," she said.

When it comes to dessert, Sieger sometimes makes a box cake in a jelly- roll pan. She cuts it in half, spreads one half with jam or jelly, then tops with the other half. She cuts the cake into bars, which are a lot less messy than a traditional iced cake.

Super sandwiches

By Jennifer Nickol
Scripps Howard News Service

Does the mention of a sandwich conjure up images of bologna and mustard on white bread? It may be the mainstay of brown-bag lunches, but packable sandwiches needn't be boring or a nutritional disaster. Try these ideas:

BREADS:

Enriched and whole-grain breads are low in fat, while providing energy, vitamins and iron. For extra dietary fiber, choose whole-grain wheat bread, rye, multi-grain, oatmeal or bran bread. When choosing grain products, keep in mind:

Crackers, biscuits and some muffins can be high in fat or sodium. Check labels.

Many breads come in a variety of sizes. Snack-size pumpernickel, a tortilla or small pita pockets may be good choices for youngsters.

FILLINGS:

Try these ideas for lower fat and sodium:

Chopped poultry with mandarin oranges, alfalfa sprouts and a low-fat dressing.

Mashed, cooked dry beans flavored with onion, parsley and garlic.

Diced apples, pears or grapes.

Sliced cucumber, zucchini, onion or tomatoes; spinach leaves, lettuce or other salad greens (even fresh basil).

Shredded carrots or cheese.

Flavored mustards, reduced-calorie salad dressings, plain low-fat yogurt.

Whole fruit may be enjoyed by older children, but pear and apple slices are more appealing to young children. Treat cut sides of fruit with citrus juice to help prevent browning.

Include one of your child's favorite foods even if it tends to contain a little more sugar, sodium or fat than you think she or he needs.

You can make up for the indulgence by serving more nutritious meals and snacks at other times of the day. Nutritious food that is left uneaten is certainly not a health benefit.

Liven up back-to-school lunches with variations on a peanut butter theme — including triple decker sandwiches cut into cookie cutter shapes or a peanut butter and banana sandwich on banana bread. Dinosaur cookies and a molded cheese-topped pretzel add to the lunchtime fun.

Peanut butter again?

You bet. The school lunchbox favorite just got better by improving upon the standard two slices of bread, PB&J.

Staff Reports

Ask most youngsters what they want for lunch and you'll hear the same response: "a peanut butter and jelly sandwich." Of course, such one-dimensional eating habits are not healthy for the child and tedious for the parent who has to pack the same lunch day after day, week after week. But what do you do to vary lunch contents and still please the finicky palate?

Keeping in mind that visual appeal is a big part of making a meal enjoyable, Wilton is offering some ideas as recipes. Adding fun into the lunchbox can be as easy as using cookie cutters to make dinosaur-shaped tuna sandwiches. Or melt cheese in the microwave, shape it in a candy mold and cover a pretzel with it. For those who want to add some pizzazz to the lunchbox, recipes follow:

CHEESE-TOPPED PRETZEL

Candy molds
Vegetable pan spray
6 pretzel rods
6 ounces of pasteurized processed cheese food or natural Cheddar cheese (do not use pre-shredded cheese

Divide cheese in half into 2 (3-ounce) pieces. Cut each half into four piece. Spray pretzel mold and glass measuring cup with vegetable pan spray. Place 3 ounces of cheese into the prepared measuring cup. Microwave on high for 40-45 seconds or until melted. Cheese will still be thick. Do not overheat. Pour cheese into prepared mold cavities.

Place pretzel rod on cheese, press and pat overflow cheese on top of pretzel. Refrigerate 15-20 minutes until set. Remove from mold by gently lifting rod out of mold. Keep refrigerated until ready to serve. Spray microwave measuring cup again and repeat with remaining cheese.

Makes 6 pretzels.

'DINO' SUGAR COOKIES

1 cup butter or margarine, softened
1 cup sugar
1 large egg
1 teaspoon vanilla
2 teaspoon baking powder
3 cups flour

Preheat oven to 375 degrees. In a large bowl, cream butter and sugar with an electric mixer. Beat in eggs and vanilla. Add baking powder and flour one cup at a time, mixing after each addition. The dough will be very stiff; blend last cup of flour in by hand. Do not chill dough.

To make cookies stamp cookies, roll in one-inch balls, place on ungreased cookie sheet. Dip stamp into flour and press.

Buffalo hot dogs get mixed reviews from testers

By Linda Anderson

I tell you what, people just keep wanting to give me food! A couple of weeks ago it was potato bread; now its buffalo hot dogs.

Anderson

That's right, buffalo hot dogs. Heartland Buffalo, a company that obviously deals with products made with buffalo meat, sent me some packages of hot dogs made with ... well, you know.

According to the information the company also sent me, these hot dogs have "Less fat, calories, cholesterol than chicken, beef, turkey and many fish;" are "Higher in protein and iron and lower in sodium than beef hot dogs;" have "3.5 grams of fat and 60 calories per buffalo dog;" are "Hormone and steroid free;" and "Tastes sweet, rich and robust — not gamey."

Oh, and the information makes sure the consumers know buffalo are "Not an endangered species."

The information also gives us the following claims: "Buffalo (bison) is recommended by leading cardiologists and nutritionists because it is lower in fat, calories and cholesterol, and higher in protein and iron than beef, chicken and turkey and many fish. Best of all buffalo is tender, juicy and tastes great. Heartland Buffalo offers a healthy and delicious way for the entire family to enjoy one of America's favorite foods ... the Hot Dog!..."

Here's the down side: These hot dogs aren't available in area stores — yet. The up side is that they can be ordered from the company's toll-free phone number (1-800-277-0125) or its website (www.heartland-buffalo.com).

So, OK, I love hot dogs and can't resist free food, so I took some of the hot dogs home for the young taste-testers to try. Also gave some to one of my co-worker so her own personal taste-testers could be heard from.

First, the taste-test results at my house: My kids took one look at the label, where it said "buffalo," and refused the honor of trying one. I told them that no, buffalo aren't endangered any more, and that yes, some ranches actually specialize in buffalo instead of cattle; and yes, the animals on those ranches are raised for meat. Nope, nothing worked, they refused. One said she couldn't eat buffalo any more than she could eat venison. I told her that was different, no one ever herded deer — she said they could if they wanted to, and her answer was still no.

So I tried them by myself. The conclusion? The buffalo hot dogs taste kind of, I don't know, faded or something. You know they taste like hot dogs, but just not very much. I kept waiting for the hot dog flavor to get stronger, and it never did.

At my co-worker's house, one of the testers said the hot dogs tasted like bologna; one said they were good; and one ate one (the hot dogs had been grilled) and went back to work before anyone had a chance to tell her they were made from buffalo. Evidently she liked them too.

So the results were mixed. Most testers thought the hot dogs were at least OK, except for those who refused to taste them just because they were made from buffalo.

I guess the marketing department still has some work to do.
