STORM AT A GLANCE
(By Universal Service)

Entire southeast section of United States cut off from outside world.

Storm raging over the eastern parts of Georgia and South Carolina and due to hit between Raleigh, N. C., and Cape Hatteras before daylight Wednesday.

Hurricane has cut path 1,000 miles long, taking toll of more than 1000 lives and $200,000,000 property damage.

Between 150 and 200 dead in Southern Florida and property damage estimated at $100,000,000.

Palm Beach and West Palm Beach report 37 dead and damage between $12,000,000 and $20,000,000.

Storm warnings issued all along Atlantic coast as far north as Boston.

WEST PALM BEACH, Fla., Sept. 18. (AP)—Howard W. Selby, chairman of the Palm Beach Red Cross, tonight estimated that the death list from Sunday's hurricane will reach 400 in Palm Beach county.

WEST PALM BEACH, Fla., Sept. 18. (AP)—Sixty-eight dead have been counted in the Belle Glade area of Lake Okeechobee, Sheriff Baker learned tonight.

CHARLESTON, S. C., Sept. 18. (US)—Charleston was completely paralyzed today by the tropical hurricane as it swept up the Atlantic seaboard.

Parts of the city were inundated by high waves which dashed over the walls of the south battery. Business buildings and homes were threatened by the rising water and hundreds sought refuge in elevated parts of the city. Many streets were virtual creeks, eight inches of rain during the last 24 hours adding to the flooded condition.

ATLANTA, Ga., Sept. 18. (US)—Like an avenging monster eager for new prey, the destructive Florida hurricane today hit Georgia, smashed its way through South Carolina, and tonight was swirling a vengeful path toward Cape Hatteras, where it was expected to pass out to sea.

Behind it lay a 1,000-mile strip of death, ruin and desolation.

A toll of possibly 200 lives and property damage of possibly $100,000,000 on the mainland alone had been charged to it in fragmentary reports which trickled in over lines of communication badly battered by the storm. As a whole, communication was being steadily destroyed from the Florida peninsula northward to the Carolinas.

Because of the storm's capricious course, which had taken 1,000 lives, destroyed $100,000,000 of property and rendered 700,000 people homeless in Porto Rico and the Virgin Islands before it struck the mainland, the weather officials at Washington ordered storm signals hoisted and precautions taken all along the Atlantic coast as far north as Boston.

Ships in Danger

Fearing disaster when the storm strikes the steamer lanes off Cape Hatteras, "graveyard of the Atlantic," sometime during the night, word has reached here that the coast guard mobilized its fleet of

LAKE WATERS SWALLOW SHIP

Planes Seek Survivors of Mystery Sinking

OWEN SOUND, Ont., Sept. 18. (AP)—Airplanes flew above Georgian bay in Lake Huron today in vain search for more survivors of the cattle ship Manasoo, which sank as though yanked beneath the stormy waters by some mysterious monster of the deep.

Five survivors were recovering in a hospital, saved after pitching on a leaking raft for two days and a half. One member of the crew was known to be dead, and 17 others were believed to have been lost.

The Manasoo, converted passenger ship formerly known as the Manasa, had made its last regular trip for the season, but was pressed into service for a special trip to transport 46 head of cattle from West Bay, Manitoulin Island, to Owen Island. There was a crew of 21. Donald Wallace, drover in charge of the cattle, and his friend, George Lambert completing the personnel.

Early Saturday a storm was encountered, but the boat rode easily and no concern was felt. The cattle were in special stalls to prevent their shifting, and most of the crew went to bed.

Suddenly Captain John McKay, on the bridge, noticed a loss of buoyancy and a distinct list and sent First Mate Oliver Long down to investigate. Before Long could report back, or even determine the nature of the trouble, the ship was plunging down into the water with all hands who did not chance to be on deck.

EXPERTS CALL BONES THOSE OF HUMAN BEINGS

Remains Found on Murder Farm Established As Juvenile's

MORE AXES FOUND

Northcott Used Hose To Wash Cellar Floor At Midnight

LOS ANGELES, Sept. 18. (AP)—The first positive evidence of the corpus delicti in the Northcott murder farm crimes was announced as established here late today through identification of some of the bones of alleged victims as being ankle, finger, leg and skull bones of juvenile human beings. Two paleontologists of the Los Angeles museum made the identifications. They have examined and classified eight jars of bones found by officers searching the ranch upon which Gordon Stuart Northcott, 21-year-old youth, is declared to have murdered four boys.

The two experts were Dr. William A. Bryan, director of the museum, and J. W. Lytle, assistant paleontologist. Their examination was made at the request of and aided by Clark Sellers, criminologist and identification expert who, after a preliminary examination yesterday, stated he believed some of the bones were human. Sellers said Dr. Bryan and his assistant authorized him to make known their findings. The paleontologists reported that, in addition to the human bones already identified, others were not yet positively classified and that some were bones of animals.

Search in Canada

Meanwhile police of western Canada were hunting Gordon Stuart Northcott, 20, and his mother, Mrs. Louisa Northcott, to arrest them on murder warrants after Los Angeles officers continued to find asserted instruments of death on the Northcott chicken ranch near Riverside.

Two more axes, stained, police said, with blood, were uncovered in the cellar of the Northcott home.

Other officials said the cellar steps were bloodstained. Neighbors told of lending Cyrus G. Northcott, the accused youth's father, a garden hose with which he washed down the cellar steps at midnight recently.

The district attorney said he had talked with Vancouver, B. C., authorities over the telephone and that they had expressed belief the Northcutts would be arrested soon. They left Southern California a few days ago, about the time that Sanford Clark, 15, relative, told police a story of wholesale murder on the farm. Clark said four boys, whom he named, had been lured to the farm, tortured and then killed. He said he had killed one of the boys himself to avoid being killed and as a means of getting away.

Youth in Custody

After Clark told his story Cyrus G. Northcott, father of the missing youth, was taken into custody and is being held here as a material witness.

The elder Northcott denied knowing anything about the axes, and an allegedly blood stained chopping block also was found in the cellar of his home.

Questioned regarding borrowing the hose, he admitted it, saying he used it to wet down the place to prevent flies from coming in the house. He had no answer to the question of why he chose the midnight hour for such an action.

Clark said he could lead officers to a cabin in Mint Canyon used by young Northcott, and which he suggested might hide other evidences of the crimes of the supposedly degenerate youth.

Leading Texas Golfers Here Today For Wichita Invitation Tournament

Entry List of 100 Looms for Initial Tourney at Wichita Falls Golf and Country Club

By LARRY DAILEY
Record News Sports Editor

Marked by the entry of leading golfers of Texas, including a former state amateur champion and the present West Texas titleholder, the first annual invitation tournament of the Wichita Falls Golf and Country club will be started today.

An entry list of 43 last night, which was expected to be augmented today by numerous belated arrivals, indicated that nearly 100 will tee off for qualifying play, which will be for 18 holes.

Held by the gallery, which watched tournament participants reel off final practice rounds yesterday, as a foremost threat to win the tournament is Dennis Lavender, 20-year-old youth from Stamford. This young man captured the West Texas championship this summer from a classy field at Abilene and was a qualifier in the state amateur championship.

Sheldon and Cochran

Foremost among the home guard who will seek to retain the titular trophy for Wichita Falls are I. R. Sheldon and Tommy Cochran. Both are always leading figures in state golf affairs and each is at the top of his game now. Sheldon is Golf and Country club champion and Cochran is a former state titleholder.

Stayton Bonner, runnerup for the Wichita Falls open championship, also is highly regarded as winner of the affair opening today.

The presence of several golfers from other Texas cities indicates the possibility of a "dark horse," and in that category may be placed Jack Parr and John Marriott, both of Electra, who play excellent golf and may attain championship form at any time.

Among the entrants in the tournament is Gene Howe, editor and publisher of the Amarillo Globe.

Play Starts at 8

CORN FARMERS GIVEN GLANCE AT NOMINEE

Democratic Leader Calls G. O. P. Farm Record Failure

ANSWERS QUERY

Questions Printed in Omaha Papers Ahswered By Nominee

OMAHA, Neb., Sept. 18. (AP)—Governor Smith wound up his first campaign speech here tonight, devoted almost entirely to the farm problem, by replying to eight questions put to him in newspaper advertisements by 10 Omaha citizens, declared by Democratic leaders to be Republicans. The inquiries sought to draw him out on certain phases of the farm, prohibition and tariff questions.

The governor said it had been suggested to him that the Republican national committee probably had paid for the advertisements, but he declared he did not believe that. He proposed that if the men who signed the inquiries were actuated by patriotic and not partisan motives, they should put the same questions to Herbert Hoover. There was a tremendous applause as the Democratic nominee declaring he was not embarrassed by the inquiries, announced that he intended to fight his campaign in the open and dodge evasions.

President Is Leader

One of the questions put to the governor was:

"How can you square your support of Democratic candidates for congress pledged against liquor with what you say you do for liquor?"

"There is nothing that the president can do about liquor," Smith declared. "All he can do is recommend, to the congress and he can assume the leadership of the American people is an effort to show them that his recomendation is right. That is what I propose to do.

"How can I support a dry Democratic candidate for congress?"

"That question came up in the national convention and the national convention, deliberately, through the report of the committee on credentials, left every Democrat in the United States free to express his own individual opinion of what he thought on that subject.

"You have an admirable, scholarly gentleman running for U. S. senator here—Mr. Metcalf. I understand that Nebraska is dry, but I would never ask Mr. Metcalf to turn his back on the people of his state until such time as he can come out here and convince them that they are not tackling the problem the right way."

OMAHA, Neb., Sept. 18. (UP)—Gov. Alfred E. Smith delivered his ideas on farm relief in the opening speech of his presidential campaign here tonight.

Governor Smith challenged and disputed nearly every assertion pertaining to the agriculture problems which has been made by Herbert Hoover or the Republican party since the campaign opened.

The Democratic nominee indorsed the McNary-Haugen farm relief bill in principle; promised to work out details by which the principle can be put into effect; declared the tariff is not effective as to basic cash crops without a supplemental device and assailed the administration record on agriculture relentlessly.

The Democratic candidate's bold pronouncement in favor of the McNary-Haugen bill came somewhat as a surprise to the audience of farmers and those whose livelihood depends upon farming, who packed the city auditorium here to hear him in his first campaign bid for the farm vote. He had indicated he would not go so far in this speech.

Hall Is Packed

Every corner of the auditorium, which accommodates 10,000, was filled. Several thousand others stood outside, and Smith spoke into a microphone that carried his voice to the far corners of the country on an extensive radio hook-up.

The enthusiastic reception accorded him in his first campaign speech came as a climax to a boisterous welcome by thousands, not only from Omaha, but from several surrounding states, whenever he appeared and waved his brown derby.

The Democratic candidate de-

RAIL WORKERS' PARLEY FAILS

Mediation Board Concludes Efforts at Peace

CHICAGO, Sept. 18. (AP)—The federal board of mediation this afternoon announced it had terminated its efforts toward bringing about an agreement between the western railroads and the trainmen and conductors' unions.

Samuel E. Winslow, chairman of the federal board, issued the following statement:

"In behalf of the board, the mediation proceedings have been terminated for the reason that the carriers and the employes' organizations were unable to reach an agreement."

E. P. Curtis, president of the Order of Railway Conductors and A. F. Whitney, head of the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen, said no immediate action on the strike vote could be taken and indicated the next move should come from the government. They promised an official statement shortly of labor's position in the wage controversy.

J. W. Higgins, chairman of the board of railway managers had no statement to make concerning the carriers' attitude.

Kidnaped Boy Released By Captors In Joliet Without Pay Demanded

CHICAGO, Sept. 18. (US)—William Ranieri, 10-year-old Italian boy, kidnaped on Sept. 5 and held for $60,000 ransom, is safe and will be returned to his home tonight or early in the morning.

The boy was found by the authorities at Joliet, 50 miles west of Chicago.

The Joliet authorities notified the Chicago authorities that the boy said his captors—four men—released him from an automobile a mile from Lockport, near Joliet, gave him $10 and told him to go home.

Frank Ranieri, the boy's father, accompanied detectives to Joliet tonight to bring the child back to Chicago.

Shortly before the boy was found overtures were made to the Chicago authorities by Italians believed to be agents of the kidnapers. They had inquired whether prosecution would be dropped if the child was released.

SMITH FAVORS M'NARY-HAUGEN FARM PLAN IN OMAHA SPEECH

G.O.P. LACK OF FAITH RECITED

Nominee Says Republicans Have Been Faithless

voted a considerable portion of his speech to an attack upon the Republican administration, which he declared had done nothing effective to aid agriculture, and specifically upon the program offered by Herbert Hoover, the Republican candidate.

He called as witness of the Republican failure to aid agriculture two Nebraska leaders, Senator George Norris, Republican, and Governor Adam McMullen, Republican.

"What does Mr. Hoover offer?" Smith asked. "First, the tariff. Everybody knows, and he knows himself, that the tariff is not effective as to the basic cash crops, without a supplemental device to make it work.

Immediate Need

"He offers inland waterways. Very good. The Democratic party is in favor of inland waterways just as strongly as the Republican party, but I think it is only fair to say that nobody would offer that as an immediate remedy.

"The present condition needs a remedy at once, and not at a time far distant, when the improvement of the inland waterways could be an accomplished fact. At best, were they with us today, they would not exert sufficient influence to solve the problem.

"He offers stabilization corporations. Stabilization corporations made up of voluntary associations of producers can no more stabilize agriculture than the banks of the country were able voluntarily to stabilize our financial system without the intervention of government in forming the federal reserve system.

"He suggests aids to co-operatives. I strongly believe in co-operative marketing. It is clearly all right—as far as it goes. I have encouraged it in my own state. In New York today we have over 1,000 co-operative marketing associations. With a device for taking care of the surplus at the cost of the commodity benefitted, co-operatives would be given a great opportunity for development.

Limited Field

"Their field is limited, however, without such a device, for the reason that when the membership alone is compelled to pay the whole cost of the attempt at stabilization, those outside the membership receive the benefits of the increased prices without bearing any of the burns incident thereto. And the attempt at stabilization is in large measure impaired by the activities of the non-members.

"The fundamental fact is that none of these methods can function with respect to the major cash crops unless they are coupled with the control of the exportable surplus with the cost of lifting it out of the domestic market assessed back on the crop benefited."

Smith then concluded his speech with his statement upon the McNary-Haugen bill, which has as the principal part of its machinery the much-discussed equalization fee. The fee was not mentioned by the governor. Farm relief leaders call it "the heart" of the measure. He merely left this question open by saying he is not limited by the bill's mechanics.

"Various people have attempted to misrepresent and confuse my attitude with respect to the McNary-Haugen bill. I do not propose to leave the slightest doubt in anybody's mind on that subject," Smith declared.

"As I read the McNary-Haugen bill, its fundamental purpose is to establish an effective control of the sale of exportable surplus with the cost imposed upon the commodity benefited. For that principle, the Democratic platform squarely stands, and for that principle I squarely stand. Mr. Hoover stands squarely opposed to this principle by which the farmer could get the benefit of the tariff. What remains of the McNary-Haugen bill is a mere matter of method, and I do not limit myself to the exact mechanics and methods embodied in that bill.

"Here is a clean cut issue, which the farmers and the voters of this country must decide. It remains but to work out the details by which the principle shall be put into effect, and I have pledged myself to name a non-partisan commission of farm leaders and students of the problem to work out these details.

"I shall make that appointment, if I am elected, not when I take the oath of office as president, but immediately after election; and I pledge to the farmers and to the people of this country that no stone will be left unturned to give immediate and adequate farm relief, by legislation carrying into practice this definite principle for which my party and I stand.

"This course alone gives promise to rescuing the farmers of this country from the complete ruin which threatens them today."

Challenges Claims

"Here in Omaha tonight, in the center of one of the great farming regions of this country, I propose to discuss that Republican record of over seven years and a half on the important question of farm relief," Smith declared.

"I challenge the statement that there has been courage or leadership or constructive action on farm relief. I assert that there is not the slightest basis upon which the Republican party can indulge in any degree of self satisfaction, in looking back over its record of seven and a half years, on the question of agriculture.

"On the contrary, I charge that they violated their platform promises, that they deceived the farmer, that they did nothing whatever to contribute in the slightest degree to relieve the distress or promote the welfare of the farmers of this country.

"Posing for decades as the friends of the farmer the Republican leaders have by their betrayal of the confidence which the farmers imposed in them, forfeited every right to the allegiance or support of the agriculturists of this country. They have sown the wind and should reap the whirlwind."

Distress Recognized

The Republican party, the Democratic candidate said, recognized the "deep distress" of agriculture in its 1924 platform and again in 1928.

"What attention should be paid to the 1928 promises if nothing was done under the 1924 promises?" he asked.

He pointed out that Norris had called the 1928 agricultural plank "a direct slap to the farmers of the country."

Smith laid upon Hoover a "direct responsibility for the hostility and inaction of the administration," as "chief adviser of the last two administrations upon agriculture."

President Coolidge himself realized the failure of the administration to aid agriculture, Smith declared, when he said in his message to congress in 1926 that "the whole question of agriculture needs most careful consideration" and added that the government could not be blamed for it.

"This on its face appears to be a confession on the part of the Republican president that the problem cannot be solved by his party," he said. "Why else does he use the language that the government should not be blamed for not performing the impossible?

"The farmer at this time might well recall the words of the one-time popular song: 'All I Got Was Sympathy, But That Didn't Mean a Thing to Me.'

Quotes Norris

"As far as the president himself is concerned, Senator Norris sums it all up in a few words; 'he stood against congress in the measure that they offered but made no constructive suggestion himself, even after the exhaustive study he claims the administration gave to the subject.'

"He might well have added that Mr. Hoover, as the chief adviser of the last two administrations upon the subject of agriculture assumed a direct responsibility for the hostility and inaction of the administration and continues to assume that responsibility by his fulsome endorsement of the record of Coolidge policies.

"It must be a great comfort to the farmers of this country to know that the policy which gave them the sympathy and solicitude of the Republican administration and gave them nothing else would be continued in the event of Mr. Hoover's election. Particularly must this be a comfort to them when they recall that the result of the eight years of sympathy and solicitude by the Republican party is thus summed up by Mr. Hoover in his acceptance speech:

"'The most urgent economic problem in our nation today is agriculture.'

Farm Figures

"What brought all these promises of the Republican party? It could be nothing else except that very apparent distress of the farmers of the country who raise 60 per cent of the country's crops.

"In my speech of acceptance, I took account of the suffering of agriculture. I there stated some facts and figures, not one of which has since been challenged or contradicted.

"From 1910 to the present time the farm debt has increased by the striking sum of ten billions of dollars. The value of farm property between 1920 and 1925 decreased by twenty billions of dollars.

"It would be unreasonable to expect that this great decrease in value would itself be felt only in agricultural circles. It was compelled, from the very nature of things, to have an influence on other lines of business; in 1927 there were 830 bank failures, with total liabilities of over $270,000,000, almost entirely in the agricultural sections, as against 49 such failures in the last year of the Democratic administration. In the period since 1920 there have been almost 4,000 such failures.

"I repeat that the figures herein given by me as far back as the 22nd of last August have neither been contradicted nor challenged.

"According to the figures, there is abundant reason for the recognition of this crisis in American agricultural life.

Farms Deserted

"Viewing it from another angle, the reports of the United States department of agriculture show that during the period of depression, 10,000,000 people were driven from the farms with a net decrease, after deducting all who returned of 4,000,000 in the farm population of the nation. That means that 4,000,000 American citizens were compelled to give up their chosen vocation. It meant suffering and distress in millions of families, and drove the tillers of the soil into competition with the workers in the cities.

"It requires no very great power of imagination or understanding of the problem to be able to realize the disastrous effect on our whole social and economic fabric that must grow from a situation such as that.

"There are definite causes and reasons for the catastrophe which, to the ordinary person, are easy of understanding.

"Twenty-five years ago wheat sold at approximately the same price that it brings today.

"Twenty-five years ago the farmer paid $45 for a mower; today it cost him $75.

"He paid $120 for a binder; he pays over $200 for the same implement today

"Statistics indicate that there has been a decline in the purchasing power of farm products of 20 per cent, as compared with the pre-war period. What other line of business in the United States could stand that?

Trouble in Tariff

"The great fundamental trouble with the farm situation today lies in the undisputed fact that the farmer buys in a protected market, from the hat of his head to the shoes on his feet, for everything needed around the farm not produced by himself he makes his contribution to the tariff system for protection of American industries, and when he produces the crop, he is compelled to sell it in an unprotected market. It the basic cash crops the American farmer raises more than the whole domestic market can absorb. He is therefore compelled to offer his whole crop at the price of the surplus that is exported. Putting it in other words: The exportable surplus is offered first in the domestic market and drags down the price of the whole crop.

Tariff Doesn't Work

"It has been abundantly demonstrated that the tariff, standing alone, with respect to crops of which we have an exportable surplus, does not function. The presence of the exportable surplus in the domestic market prevents the farmer from getting the benefit of the tariff. As to these commodities the tariff is like an engine running with no belting to connect it with the machine it is designed to move.

"Under the protective system of this country, we have interfered with the laws of supply and demand for the protection of industry and labor. No part of that protection has been given to the farmer on his major cash crops; and when we talk about putting agriculture on an equality with industry, we are talking primarily about the problem of making the tariff function for agriculture in the way that it functions for industry.

"The leaders of the Republican party know this. Prominent members of their own party have made it perfectly clear to the leaders. President Colidge must know it, and he must also have known that an increase in the tariff on wheat was an empty gesture. Yet the Republican candidate for president says in his acceptance speech:

Functioning Ignored

"'An adequate tariff is the foundation of farm relief.'

"But he makes no suggestion whatever as to how the adequate tariff is to be made to function and become effective with respect to the major cash crops. He refers to the tariff as though it really worked for the farmer. The solution has two parts: First, an adequate tariff, and, second, a method of making it function. Mr. Hoover refers to the first part and ignores the second.

"The trouble during all these years lies in the fact that the Republican party has not been entirely frank with the farmer. I could go further and say they have not been honest with him. Had they been honest and frank with him, instead of extending sympathy and promising relief through tariff and promising economic equality, they would have frankly said to the farmer that the solution lies in providing a mechanism for the control of the exportable surplus with the cost of that control imposed on the crop benefited as the only way to make the tariff function. As to that important principle the Republican presidential candidate disclosed obvious hostility.

"On that subject the Republican platform says nothing.

"But its convention repudiated the minority report seeking recognition of this principle. What that means is best shown by Governor Lowden's comment:

"'I have urged however, that it is the duty of the Republican party to find some way to rescue agriculture from the ruin that threatens it. That, in my judgment, the convention by its platform just adopted has failed to do, and I therefore authorize the withdrawal of my name from before the convention.'

Hoover on Surplus

"It would be interesting at this time to ask the question: Did the Republican candidate for president ever speak about this question of surplus crops? He did.

"In 1924, he wrote as follows:

"'That (referring to the surplus), can only be corrected by prices low enough to make production unprofitable.'

"What does he mean by that? I can spell only one thing out of that. He wants to drive enough farmers out of business to pull down the surplus crops

"The way he wants to relieve the farmer is to destroy him.

"Again in 1925 he said:

"'The fundamental need is a balancing of agricultural production to our home demand.'

"Is that the solution of the farm problem, to starve the farmer to death? To drive his prices down so low that he can have no production for his energy? Is the sweat of his brow to go for nothing and is he to be eventually driven out of agricultural pursuits?

"As to the balancing of the agricultural production to our home demand, that would not be a good thing to my way of thinking, even if you could do it, but that it cannot be done is best shown by a report from the bureau of agriculture economics, which says:

"'During the last 20 years, 96 per cent of the changes in spring wheat production were due to differences in yields. As a whole perhaps three-quarters of the natural variation in crop production is due to yield variance and lies beyond human control through acreage adjustments.'

"That is in effect to say the solution of disposing of the surplus, advanced by Mr. Hoover, is impossible and is beyond the power of human control."

Smith told his audience in opening his campaign here tonight that he expected to speak frankly on the issues before the people as he has done in the New York state campaigns which resulted in his election as governor four times.

"New York," he said, "for the major part of the time in the past 20 years was a strong Republican state. That in four of those campaigns I led to victory is in no small part due to the fact that I talked frankly to the people of that state in very plain and understandable language. Beginning here tonight and continuing through the national campaign, I propose to continue that policy."

Gov. Smith Given Biggest Surprise Of His Life in Omaha's Big Reception

Corn Belt City's Greeting Parallels Ovations Accorded Bryan in Former Years—Stores Close

OMAHA, Neb. Sept. 18. (INS)—The heart of the corn belt gave Gov. Al Smith a tumultuous and impressive welcome today.

Wearing his famous brown derby and with his most expansive smile, the Democratic nominee reached Omaha, the first stop on his western tour, at 9:15 o'clock (central standard time), and for nearly two hours thereafter he was the focal point of one of the most enthusiastic demonstrations in the city's history. Old timers compare it with the Bryan demonstrations of other years.

Mayor "Cowboy Jim" Dahlman, the Democrat who has bossed Omaha for 21 years in the mayoralty chair, turned out the town in his honor. It was a half holiday for city employes and many business houses were closed. Added to these thousands in the streets were innumerable visitors from the grain belt that surrounds the city.

Hour's Procession

It took Governor Smith more than an hour to traverse the business section of the city, from the station to the Hotel Fontenelle and the crowds were packed from the building line to the car tracks in the street. His car barely crawled in the center of scores of marchers. Dozens of times the press became so thick that his car was completely stopped, and the whole procession was halted until the police could clear the way.

Throughout the march, the governor sat in the rear seat of an open car, Mrs. Smith on his right, waving his brown derby in constant acknowledgement of the cheers and the applause.

There was a reminiscent tinge in Omaha's welcome to the governor. From the tall buildings on Farnam and Douglas streets hundreds of office employes showered torn paper down on the procession. "Al" bowed and waved his brown derby at the crowds in the windows for this home-like touch. There was a running fire of comment in the crowds along the car tracks and kept abreast of the governor's car.

"Look, he's got his brown derby."

"Hooray for Al."

"We're with you, Al."

"You tell 'em, Al."

"See, he parts his hair in the middle, just like his pictures."

Always it was "Al." Never "Governor." It was as noisy, friendly and enthusiastic reception as the governor ever received on the East Side. It both surprised and delighted him, for while he had expected a cordial reception in this territory west of the Mississippi, not in his most optimistic moments had he anticipated anything as warm and as impressive as he got.

One of the few Democratic notables in Nebraska that was absent was Charles W. Bryan, brother of the late Commoner, who is a candidate for governor.

It was explained that the gubernatorial nominee was engaged in a speaking tour in Western Nebraska, arranged before the Smith-Robinson ticket, although he differs with Governor Smith on the question of prohibition, and is telling his audiences in the state that prohibition is not an issue.

Before starting out on his stockyards tour, the governor held a reception for nearly 100 newspaper correspondents.

Iowa newspapermen asked him if he intends to visit that state during the campaign.

"I can't tell you," he said, "that is in the hands of the national committee."

"Would you like to?"

Fears Airplane

"I'd like to visit every city, town and hamlet in the United States," he replied, "but I'm afraid of airplanes."

Another questioned whether Governor Smith had listened in on Herbert Hoover's speech in Newark last night.

"No," said the governor. "I tuned in on some political speech and I thought it was Hoover. But the first words I caught were 'Gov. Alfred E. Smith is the most distinguished executive in any state in the union.' Right away, I knew that wasn't Hoover. It was Pat Harrison."

Florida Storm Travels North

cutters and prepared to answer SOS calls from steamers and other craft in the path of the gale.

Outdistancing in fury even the devastating hurricane which struck Miami just two years ago, reports from Florida indicated that the total property damage would exceed that of any disaster in the history of that storm-plagued state.

Authentic reports from West Palm Beach and Palm Beach disclosed that 37 lives were taken in that area alone, while property damage was estimated at from $12,000,000 to $20,000,000.

A total of 17 bodies had been found in West Palm Beach, Lakewood, Deerfield and Delray on Monday, while the Red Cross reported that 20 more had perished at Bell Grade, a small town about 50 miles from Palm Beach, which suffered the full fury of the gale.

Wind Lashes Lake

Great fear was expressed that a huge loss of life resulted from the storm as cities and towns in the vicinity of Lake Okeechobee, where the waters of the lake were lashed to the intensity of a tidal wave by winds of 95 miles velocity.

James U. Grant, who succeeded in reaching Miami from Pahokee, in that region, declared that at least 100 had perished and possibly more. He told of aiding in the recovery of the bodies of 12 white persons from the flooded waters of the lake.

Col. S. L. Lowry, commanding the 116th field artillery at Tampa, was advised by telephone that the death list at Lake Okeechobee was at least 24, with hundreds injured.

A wireless to naval communications at Washington from the radio station at Point Jupiter reported that the entire town of Jupiter had been "practically wrecked." No estimate was given of lives lost or property damaged.

The coast guard received a report that two of its 75-foot boats had been washed ashore by the gale along the east coast of Florida and 80 per cent destroyed.

Towns Destroyed

An ominous silence hung for the most part over that section of central Florida extending northward from Lake Okeechobee as far as Jacksonville, over which the hurricane hurtled its destructive way.

In that region it was believed that entire towns were practically ruined, valuable citrus crops destroyed and industries and transportation paralyzed.

Jacksonville, which felt the brunt of the storm Monday night, was believed to have escaped fairly well, although great property damage was reported from Jacksonville beach.

The property loss at West Palm Beach and at Palm Beach, the most exclusive watering place on the south Atlantic, was discovered to be even greater after a careful check-up than at first supposed. Hardly a house or a building escaped the blighting hand of the gale. Because of the fact that it was traveling over land, the storm center was reported to have decreased considerably in intensity as it passed over Georgia early Monday, the maximum wind velocity being estimated by the weather bureau at 48 miles per hour.

Wind at Charleston

Later, however, its intensity increased as the gale howled through South Carolina in the vicinity of Charleston, the wind velocity increasing to 60 miles. The tides were reported rising in that city, flooding the lower sections, just before communication was cut off at 2:30.

First discovered about 600 miles east of the Lesser Antilles on September 11, weather bureau officials estimated the hurricane to be one of the longest in time and distance and one of the most destructive ever experienced in modern times. As its center approached Cape Hatteras, the hurricane had then covered a total distance of about 2,000 miles over land and water and had continued in its intensity for nearly eight days.

The storm center was described by weather bureau officials as the "very heart" of the hurricane, an area covering about 50 miles in diameter within which circular winds raged at terrific velocities while rain fell in torrents. Surrounding this storm center is another area of about 200 miles within which the effects of the storm are felt to a lesser degree. When the gale passes out to sea, it is expected that its tail will flick cities and towns all along the coast line possibly as far north as Newfoundland, drenching them with heavy rains.

May Need $6,000,000

It was believed probable that more funds would have to be raised for relief and rehabilitation in Florida than in 1926 when relief organizations expended $4,500,000. Until more detailed information is received, no maximum figure on the amount needed will be fixed, but it is likely that this sum may reach $6,000,000. This would be in addition to the funds which must be expected to extend aid and relief to Porto Rico and the Virgin Islands.

Red Cross chapters throughout Florida, under the direction of national headquarters, were mobilising rapidly to rush medical supplies, food and shelter into the devastated areas of that state. A relief train was reported to have reached West Palm Beach from Miami, carrying nurses and supplies. Ten relief workers from various points in the south were ordered by the Red Cross to report at Jacksonville for quick transfer to other sections.

Robinson Urges Action

Senator Joe Robinson, Democratic candidate for vice president, who is campaigning in the south, sent a wire from Titusville asking the Red Cross to send whatever aid was possible. He said:

"Local organizations are without funds. I am convinced that immediate action by your body is necessary if adequate relief is to be effected. A part of the territory is totally without organization and at least 20 additional nurses are required and approximately an equal number of social workers."

20,000 SEATS FOR AL'S TALK

70,000 Expected to Hear Oklahoma Address

OKLAHOMA CITY, Sept. 18. (UP)—About 20,000 unreserved seats will be open to the public when Governor Smith speaks at the Coliseum Thursday, Scott Ferris, Democratic national committeeman, announced today.

Only about 35,000 seats will be available. Ten thousand of these are to be reserved for delegations from outside the city. At least 70,000 persons are expected.

Requests for reservations have swamped headquarters and previous announcement that all seats would be held for ticket-holders only complicated the problem.

Ferris and several other leaders will meet Smith's special train near the Kansas line and accompany him into the city.

New Milk Inspector To Begin Work Today

Dr. George W. Ragan, Groseback, recently named milk inspector here, will assume his new duties Wednesday morning. It was announced Tuesday by Dr. J. M. Farrell, chief sanitary inspector.

Dr. Ragan arrived in Wichita Falls with his wife late Monday night and spent Monday getting acquainted with the city. Dr. Farrell plans to go with Dr. Ragan Wednesday to call on the dairies and creameries which will come under Dr. Ragan's jurisdiction.

ORGANIZERS OF LEGION GATHER

Early Workers in Veteran Move at Santone

SAN ANTONIO, Sept. 18. (INS)—World war veterans, who helped in the preliminary work of organizing the American Legion, the 301 incorporators and the first executives of every state department, have been personally invited by National Commander Edward E. Spafford, of New York, to attend the national convention here Oct. 8-12.

Nat M. Washer, general convention chairman, announced today that he has been informed by National Adjutant James F. Barton that hundreds of replies have been received at national headquarters in Indianapolis at the commander's invitation.

Commander Spafford plans to introduce all those who find it possible to attend the convention to the assembled delegates. Suggestions have been made that arrangements be worked out during the convention here for a reunion and banquet at the national convention in 1929, the tenth anniversary of the organization of the legion.

First steps towards the formation of the legion were taken at a caucus held by members of the A. E. F. at Paris March 15, 1919. Permanent organization was effected at the St. Louis caucus May 8 to 10, 1919, and a tentative constitution adopted. A national charter was granted by congress Sept. 16, 1919. A permanent constitution was adopted at Minneapolis, Minn., Nov. 10, 1919, and final form given to the organization.

CALIFORNIANS TO EAT OHIO APPLES

SAN ANTONIO, Sept. 18. (INS)—California is going to eat apples at the American Legion convention Oct. 8-12 at the expense of Ohio, it was announced today.

Ohio lost to California in a membership contest in which the wager was apples against oranges. Payment of the debt was agreed to be made here and the Californians are reported to be coming here with their appetites whetted up for Ohio's choicest offering in the way of apples.

To insure that California's oranges shall be represented at the convention, California will send large quantities of organges with its delegation distribution along the route, it was stated.

Good, Healthy Damn Endorsed by Canon

SOUTHEND, Eng., Sept. 18. (UP)—Mild swearing, such as the gentlemanly damn, as a relief for emotions was endorsed by Canon Ellis Norman Gooding, vicar of St. Mary's and son-in-law of the first bishop of Ojemsford, in an address here.

Speaking before a local association, Canon Gooding said:

"In my opinion, a good, healthy 'damn' is much better than continuous grumbling. I object to stupid, ugly swearing, but 'damn' releases the emotion and eases the feelings.

"'Damn' is a word for men. There is no possible harm in it and it is much more satisfying than other horrible expressions sometimes used."

Jefferson County Dairy Men Buy Clover Seed

BEAUMONT, Texas, Sept. 18. (AP)—Fifteen thousand pounds of clover seed has already been purchased in Jefferson county, as the result of a campaign to induce dairy farmers to plant their land in his forage. J. F. Combs, county agricultural agent, declares that thousands of dollars in feed bills will be saved to farmers, thus lowering the cost of milk production.

Amarillo's First Minister To Attend Exposition

AMARILLO, Texas, Sept. 18. (UP)—Among the old settlers who will return to take part in the Old Settler's reunion, during the Tri-State exposition, Sept. 26, will be B. F. Jackson, the first minister in Amarillo.

Rev. Jackson came to Amarillo two years after the town came into existence in 1889. Although not scheduled to make any addresses he will probably make an extemporaneous talk.

Pain Was Awful-Nervous and Tired

Sister Told This Lady About Cardui, Which Helped Her Over Her Weakness and Severe Pains.

SHERMAN, Texas.—"About a year ago, I started taking Cardui for weakness and severe pains in my back," writes Mrs. Lylian Chapman, residing at 402 West Hester street, this city.

"My back nearly killed me, at times. If I started to pick up anything from the floor, or lift a chair, the pain was awful.

"I was very nervous and tired all the time.

"I knew that my system was all rundown. My sister told me that I ought to take Cardui. After I had taken one bottle, I found that I was gaining. My color was better, and I rested better.

"I kept on taking Cardui until I had taken six bottles. My back was stronger, and the pain was gone. There was a big difference in my condition. I have been feeling fine, ever since.

"I used to be sick all the time, but haven't been sick since I took that course of Cardui."

Cardui has been in use so long that its merit has been proved by the experience of several generations of women. It is a mild, harmless extract of valuable medicinal herbs, and contains nothing harmful or injurious.

BABY GIVEN TO WRONG FATHER

Nurse Says Mistake in Parent, Not Child

DETROIT, Sept. 18. (AP)—A mistake in the identity of parents and and not of babies caused a nurse in the Evangelical Deaconess hospital to give the infant son of William C. Greatrex to Alfonso Viemminck, Belgian immigrant, in the belief that she was turning the infant over to its father, the nurse testified today in circuit court here.

The nurse is Mrs. Purcell Vernier and she testified for the defense in the trial of a $200,000 damage suit brought by Greatrex against the hospital for the loss of his baby five years ago. The child was never found. Viemminck declares he gave the baby a short time later to a party of motorists from Pennsylvania.

Dallas Rubber Neck Bus To Have Loud Speaker

DALLAS, Sept. 18.—(UP)—Dallas' first sightseeing bus won't have a leather-lunged crier to shout about the big city's attractions.

When the big bus, which will be operated by the Dallas Railway and Terminal company, passes the big buildings, no "ballyhoo" artist will bark their wonders to the visitors.

A modern radio loud speaker will take the crier's place. And the conductor will recite his line about the city's wonders as he drives his bus on its two-hour tour.

RADIO DREAM BECOMES FACT

Television Takes Fair by Storm

NEW YORK, Sept. 18. (UP)—Radio television, little more than wild dream a year ago, took the center of the stage and held it at the fifth annual radio world's fair, which opened last night in Madison Square garden.

Although some of the manufacturers had erected Spanish villas and sprinkled them with eye-filling young women and other attention-halting devices, the exposition visitors left them flat for the hastily banged-together beaver board huts housing the rival television apparatus.

What they saw was some odd-looking and queer-acting pieces of mechanism. The most amazing one was that of the General Electric company, developed by Dr. E. F. W. Alexanderson, because it demonstrated the hitherto unheard of feat of projecting television on a silver screen with voice accompaniment.

The screen showed images 12 inches square of the subject. The achievement moved television out of the "peep-show" and into the movie class, but at about the point where motion picture projection was 25 years ago.

Other television sets at the fair ranged from peep-shows with screens about three inches square to an amateur set in the New York Telegram booth which registered rather clearly, but on a screen about the size of a lady's calling card.

Ramblin'

with

Marie Theresa

YEAR BOOKS of the Woman's Forum are off the press and ready for distribution. Those members who have paid their annual dues have been given yearboks. This department was told not to say that members are urged to pay their dues early and receive yearbooks, but I hardly know how to bring the two into proper connection without making such statements as might prove objectionable to members of the forum.

Mrs. J. C. A. Guest has the books and will be ready to distribute them when obligations have been met. I can't see that that makes the matter sound any better, but those are the two ideas the women's organization wants to "get over."

While others of us were enjoying a summer's vacation or were passing away the hot months the best we could, the program committee spent many a weary day planning events and attractions for the work of the coming year. Officers of the Woman's Forum are eager to impress members with the necessity of keeping the year's program for frequent reference. Last year a number of members lost yearboks and were obliged to call for duplicates which is an infringement, since such books are to be given only in return for payment of dues.

Last year, Marie Theresa lost two perfectly good year books, both of them beautifully dog-eared and marked with necessary corrections and many comments not for distribution. If each lady would pay her dues, get her yearbook and hold on to it, such things wouldn't happen.

FERDINAND ZEGEL, good looking tenor who will have the role of Captain Dick in "Naughty Marietta" to be a Woman's Forum benefit attraction for Oct. 8, took the part of Carl Franz in "The Student Prince" under Shubert management, and will be remembered by those who saw the light opera mentioned as unusually attractive and possessing a superior tenor voice.

Zegel will have the same opportunity to star in "Naughty Marietta" as in "The Student Prince" and will probably add a great deal to the pleasure of the opera comique (which means light opera, and not comedy, as one might suppose) especially for those who prefer 'em good to look at.

Flappers Nervous as Sheik Proves 'Law'

ROCHESTER, Ind., Sept. 18.—A lot of Lake Maintou flappers are quaking in their shoes lest they be hauled into federal court to testify regarding liquor purchases made by an undercover prohibition agent here.

There recently appeared on the social horizon here a dashing collegiate youth of the sheik type, possessed of a nice car and plentifully supplied with money.

The newcomer was a first-class dancer and soon became very popular with the girls. He said he was named Annheir and from Logansport.

Many of these girls were his companions when he visited alleged speakeasies and free and easy roadhouses and bought drinks.

Now it has developed that the sheik dancer was a federal "stool pigeon" who "buys" have resulted in arrests at Lake Manitou.

It is regarded as possible that the undercover agent's girl friends might be called as witnesses if any of those arersted plead not guilty and want to stand trial.

Lindbergh Participates In Rites for Army Ace

SANTA ANA, Calif., Sept. 18. (AP)—With an impressive testimonial of affection from the clouds in which Col. Charles A. Lindbergh joined with other aviators, the body of Lieut. J. J. Williams, United States army corps, was laid to rest here yesterday.

Lieutenant Williams of Detroit, one of the "Three Musketeers" who came here to thrill massed thousands at the Mines field national air races, was killed while stunting before the crowd.

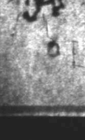

A formation of planes, led by Colonel Lindbergh, who filled in for the dead aviator throughout the week, droned overhead as the casket was carried to the grave. Flowers were dropped as taps sounded over the casket.

CHIC CHERIE (Copyright, 1928, King Features Syn. Inc.) Latest Fashions

If you should happen to be in doubt about the style features of your new fall frocks just buy flounces. You can't go wrong. Emily's dress shows one type of flounced dress. It's sheer crepe with flounces of sheer velvet and a bow of velvet for the bodice trimming. "No," Emily is telling Andy, "Cherie isn't home." Which, of course, isn't true.

And Dina is giving the same message to Eustace. This back view of Dina's dress is a particularly good one. You'll notice the pointed kerchief tier on the back of the bodice? There are two just like it on the back of the skirt and it's a new way to show that one realizes flounces are smart. Made of canton crepe in the new burgundy wine shade.

The several other ways flounces are used are shown on these three dresses. Dina's dress has circular flounces attached to a spug-skirt, yoke and split in front. Emily's flounces go all the way around the skirt and flare a little more on the sides than in the front and back. Cherie's are pleated and pointed. All three dresses show that the hipline should be smooth and that bodices are definitely bloused. The occasion for the packing is that Cherie is flitting—the strain of trying to decide whether it will be Eustace or Andy that she marries is too much for her. She has to get away and think. Otherwise she might decide to marry neither of them and that would be just too awful for words!

Business Girl Better Prepared for Matrimony—She Has No Illusions

The Business Girl Is Better Prepared for Matrimony Than the Girl Who Has Stayed at Home, Because She Can Appreciate Her Husband's Labor and She Has No Romantic Illusions About Him.

It is conceded that the best husband-hunting is found in the commercial neck of the woods. That is where the big game has its habitat and where the smaller animals of the male species play around in fancied security. The business girl has 10 times the chance to marry that the society girl has. She is thrown in daily intimate contact with men who are off their guard, and if she does not make her catch it is because she is just naturally lacking in gumption, or is a foreordained and predestinated old maid.

This being the case, it raises the question of what sort of training business is for matrimony, and whether it fits a girl to domesticate her husband, and make him satisfied to stay put in the home cage, as well as to snare him into it.

Opinions differ on this matter. Some assert that there is nothing like business for teaching a woman how to be a mantamer, which is the principal factor in being a successful wife, while others aver that one of the principal reasons for the increase in divorce is because most brides are more familiar with mahogany-top desks than they are with gas ranges, and know more about double-entry bookkeeping, or stenography, or the art of salesmanship, than they do about making coffee and broiling a steak.

Of course, considering that the wife's ability to make a comfortable home is the foundation stone on which a successful marriage must be built, it would seem that the domestic girl would be the wise man's choice in marriage, and that the best way in which a maiden could be fitted for matrimony would be for her to take an intensive course of study under mother instead of going to a business college.

But it does not seem to work out this way in real life, possibly because the home-staying girl generally spends her time in gadding, and puts off learning how to cook and sew until after she gets married, even as does the business girl. Possibly because her experience in earning her own living teach a girl things that are even more important for her to know than how to make pie, or judge butcher's meat.

For any woman who can read a cook book can become a chef in three months if she wants to, but it takes long and grueling personal experience along the same lines that her husband has suffered to enable a woman to understand him, and sympathize with him, and make allowances for him.

It is never easy for the sexes to understand each other. It is an utter impossibility when they have never touched life at the same points, and so cannot put themselves in each other's places. The woman who has always had everything given to her, who has bought whatever she wanted on bills, cannot know how money looks to the man who sees every dollar as wet with his sweat and red with his life blood, but the woman who has earned her meager pay envelope with blistered feet and aching back and weary fingers sees it as the man does—a precious thing not to be wasted.

The woman who has spent half of her day lounging around the house in kimono and slippers, and who, at night, feels so full of pep that she would like to go out and dance, nags at her husband because he is tired and wants to stay at home and rest. She thinks herself ill-used because he isn't gay and chatty, and her feelings are hurt if he flashes at her some irritable reply to an innocuous question.

But the woman who has been through the grind of hard days at the office when everything went wrong, knows that one can come home so utterly exhausted in mind and body that one's only earthly craving is for rest; that one can be so nerve-fagged that even to be spoken to is the last straw that breaks the camel's back, and querulous fault-finding and complaining are just causes for murder.

So the business training gives a girl an understanding of what men go through that the home-staying girl cannot have, and that makes her give her husband a sympathy that the woman who has never earned her own living cannot give.

Also, it disciplines her. The business girl soon learns not to spread her precious feelings all over the place unless she wants them trampled upon, because nobody is going to take the trouble to gumshoe around them. She learns not to burst into tears when her work is criticised. She learns how to profit by reproof, and how to sink her own feelings, and do teamwork for the good of the firm.

She learns how to control her temper and her tongue; how to bite back the snappy retort that leaps to her lips. Or else she loses her job, for in a business office there is no time to coddle the sensitive, or to make excuses for those who go into tantrums, and have hysterics every time they are crossed.

Furthermore, three years in an office teaches a girl as much about the psychology of men as 40 years of matrimony. The trouble with matrimony is that the knowledge comes too late to do a woman any good, whereas the office experience enables her to start off on the right foot, with expert knowledge and a highly developed technique.

The home-staying girl only sees men at their best, when they are barbered and tailored and have on their best neckties and their company manners, but the girl who works with them, day after day, sees them in their shirt sleeves and as the good Lord made them, a streak of good and a streak of bad, a mixture of weakness and strength, of wisdom and foolishness, and perpetual little boys who have to be alternately spanked and kissed.

Any woman who marries, who has worked five years with men, knows so well how to jolly them along and keep them eating out of her hand, that if she loses her husband it is because she is tired of him, and wants to get rid of him.

So for these and sundry other reasons I think that business is the best training a young woman can have for matrimony, and if I were a young man looking for a wife I would pick out a girl who had gotten along with a cranky boss for a couple of years.

Hunchback's Murder Touched Off Philadelphia Probe of Racketeers

Slaying of Hughey McLoon, Former Mascot of Athletics, Brought Grand Jury of City Into Action

Editor's Note: This is the tenth of a series of articles on racketeering by James P. Kirby and the second of three articles that Kirby is writing on the current upheaval in Philadelphia where a grand jury is investigating alleged collusion between police and gangsters.

By JAMES P. KIRBY
NEA Service Staff Writer

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 18.—The shadow of the diminutive and hunch-backed figure of Hughey McLoon, former mascot of the Philadelphia Athletics and Connie Mack's batboy back in the halcyon days of Eddie Plank and "Home Run" Baker, hangs over Philadelphia's present grand jury investigation of racketeering, gang murders and police collusion.

For it was the racketeer murder of Hughey McLoon, grown to be a cabaret proprietor, that proved the spark that touched off District Attorney John Monaghan's probe. His murder and the avenging murder of Daniel O'Leary only a week later blew off the lid, and thus Hughey McLoon dead is more powerful than ever was Hughey McLoon alive.

For years Hughey McLoon, the hunchback, had been a prominent figure on the fringe of Philadelphia's underworld. Hughey's sporting nature drew him inevitably within that secret sphere where, for one reason or another, one's tongue must be kept in leash. He was never a power—but he knew a lot.

Hughey was on the edge of the councils of Max "Boo Hoo" Hoff, Philadelphia's underworld king, and well acquainted with the three prominent mobs of racketeers in Philadelphia—"the O'Leary's," "the Duffys" and "the American Blacklies." Each had its gangsters and gunmen, recruited for the incidental work of protecting the racket and enforcing its orders with gun and muscle.

Some say Hughey talked too much, others say there was a girl in the case. The latter story has it that Hughey had trouble with Daniel O'Leary over a girl, a 16-year-old wife who had renounced her husband for the underworld. O'Leary was married and had two daughters, 5 and 7, but that meant nothing.

Murdered in Street

One night a few weeks ago Hughey was escorting some troublesome customers from his so-called cabaret. The alleged drunks may have been decoys, for just as Hughey reached the sidewalk a hail of bullets descended upon him from a large blue sedan. Hughey and two trusted companions fell, but Hughey was the only one mortally wounded.

A cloakroom girl of the underworld resorts telephoned to Magistrate Eddie Carney, Hughey's lifelong friend, that it was the O'Learys who had killed Hughey. She has since changed her story several times.

They had a big funeral for the little hunchback. "Boo Hoo" Hoff paid all the bills. A woman—still unidentified—dropped flowers on the grave from an airplane.

But underworld justice is swift—and terrible.

Less than a week later five men paid a 5 a. m. visit to an apartment where O'Leary was keeping a rendezvous with his 16-year-old sweetheart. The five men filled O'Leary full of lead as he slept.

Investigation Begins

The avenging of Hughey's murder blew off the lid. Since that day, Philadelphia has seen no quiet and the underworld's rulers and certain police officials have been quaking in fear.

Judge Edwin O. Lewis charged the grand jury to begin an investigation into the shootings, among other routine matters. But it was then that District Attorney Monaghan stepped into the picture.

Monaghan began at the bottom and his inrepidity has uncovered to the amazed eyes of Philadelphians a picture of official corruption, organized crime, police protection, and similar conditions as to challenge belief. It includes 20 gang murders in the past year.

Powerful figures in the police department, such as Captain Charles Beckman, head of the detective bureau, were summarily called to explain to the grand jury certain personal transactions as well as official acts of omission and commission. Captain Beckman was later suspended by Mayor Mackey, pending a full investigation.

Gangsters, gunmen, racketeers all, public officials, policemen—none have been spared and the grand jury is now in the midst of its second month. Records of corporations in which Hoff was known to be heavily interested financially were seized as were those of public accountants who were engaged in the delicate task of balancing the books for the racket.

Safe deposit boxes in Philadelphia banks in which in one instance Monaghan found record of $500,000 in deposits in cash to an official conspicuous in Philadelphia, were seized and investigated.

Deposits in Philadelphia banks which Monaghan says must have aroused the suspicion of the banks—nine and one-half millions in one and two and one-half millions in another—are being traced. Rumor has it that connection between certain public officials and the racket will be finally established.

"Boo Hoo" Hoff, who, according to Monaghan, seemed to have been advised in advance of police activities—whenever there were any—was an important witness. Two of his partners fled to Canada, but Monaghan says he will extradite them.

Monaghan has initiated a series of raids by his own force of county detectives. He insists that the conditions his present investigation have disclosed could not have continued without the knowledge and connivance of the police and therefore he uses his own officers whenever he wants police work done.

Meanwhile, through all these happenings, Mayor Harry A. Mackey attempts to stimulate the police department into action by orders and commands. Mackey and Monaghan campaigned together on a platform to eliminate vice and crime from Philadelphia.

Mayor Blames Butler

The present conditions, Mackey says, are due to conditions which came about under the regime of General Smedley D. Butler, the "fighting marine" who was appointed director of public safety by Mackey's predecessor, Mayor Kendrick. Butler's emphasis upon militarizing the department had the result of demoralizing it and rendering it ineffective, Mayor Mackey claims. Butler was removed by Mayor Kendrick, who thereafter appointed George W. Elliott safety director.

Mackey has repeatedly called in his director of safety, Harry C. Davis, and also his high ranking police officers and given vigorous orders to clean up "within 24 hours" and to close every saloon and speakeasy. There are estimated to be 13,000 in the city.

There are those in Philadelphia who see the parting of the ways between Mackey and Monaghan as indicating a determination on the part of each to succeed to the control of the Philadelphia political machine now in danger of passing from the control of William S. Vare, an invalid whose illness is not expected to permit him to again resume active control.

Both deny the implication. Neither has as yet openly directed criticism at the other. Monaghan's criticism is directly and solely at the police department but Mackey warmly defends his director of safety.

Tomorrow: Monaghan, the man behind the grand jury probe.

They Put Him 'On The Spot'

Hughey McLoon, formerly batboy and mascot of the Philadelphia Athletics, was placed "on the spot," as gangsters say, when he was murdered in front of his Philidelphia cabaret recently. Above is a picture taken shortly before his death, showing Hughey paying a visit to his old friend, Manager Connie Mack. Below is the little hunch-back in the arms of Benny Leonard, the prize fighter.

OLDEST OTOE INDIAN DEAD

Robert McGlasken Dies on Oklahoma Reservation

PONCA CITY, Okla., Sept. 18. (INS)—Robert McGlasken, oldest of the Otoe Indians, is dead at the age of 102 years, at their reservation south of here. McGlasken was famous in the early days as a buffalo hunter, either with bow and arrow or a rifle. At his funeral tomorrow the old Indian "give away" feast will be held. The Indian's private possessions and many other articles, bought and left by him for the purpose, will go to his friends and relatives.

SOUTH DAKOTA INDIANS GATHER

ROSEBUD, S. D., Sept. 18. (UP)—Thousands of Indians have arrived here with their full war regalia, prepared to start what may be the greatest Indian demonstration since the race was civilized.

The hills surrounding this town were dotted with hundreds of tents containing the visitors. The occasion was the fiftieth anniversary of the establishment of the government reservation here.

The greatest attraction for the Indians at the celebration was the promise of the government that ancient and prohibited dances of the tribes will be permitted. Religious dances, war dances and the widely known sun dance will be allowed by the government for the first time in years and possibly for the last time.

"While we love the ones we lose, we cannot lose the ones we love."

The Day Book of a New Yorker

By GRANT DIXON

NEW YORK, Sept. 18.—Stretching into the sky from the St. George hotel in Brooklyn which overlooks New York bay from the heights is a giant searchlight. This swings across the heavens from sunset to dawn as a guide to flyers who are heading for the metropolis. My informant tells me that on a recent clear night an aviator sighted this beacon shortly after leaving Boston and steered straight for it without having to bother with a compass and other instruments. The light cost $30,000 and requires $20,000 a year to operate it. So successful has it been that the management intends to install a much more powerful one. The hotel figures it has great advertising value.

I have often wondered whether the telephone girls punish impatient callers, and I believe they do. Try asking for a number and getting the wrong one and then losing your temper. If you explode at central, it takes at least five minutes to get the connection. It has often puzzled me as to how they determine how much time fits any particular outburst.

A friend of mine once called from a slot machine and couldn't get either the number or his nickel back. After some argument with central, he unscrewed the top on the ear-piece and took out the disc which vibrates and stuck it in his pocket.

"I guess that will fix them," he remarked, triumphantly.

Irvin Cobb spends his summers at Easthampton on Long Island, where he has bought a place. There are all sorts of boats in the vicinity and recently a friend of Mr. Cobb's purchased one and was puzzled about the name for it. The humorist inspected the boat critically for a few minutes and then said:

"Why don't you call her the Floating Kidney?"

Mrs. Ring Lardner and Mrs. Grantland Rice were recently motoring to New York from Easthampton when the chauffeur stopped and went into a garage to buy something for the car so the two ladies, seeing an attractive store handy, and, like most ladies, not being able to resist, got out and went in to make some purchases. When they came out, the chauffeur and car had disappeared. They made some inquiries in the garage only to discover he had driven off in the direction of New York. The two passengers wanted to know names of garages where they could head him off, but the manager insisted on wasting time in telling them of similar misadventures. They finally hired a taxi and met their driver five miles down the road on his way back. He had gotten in the car and driven off without missing his passengers until he was well on his way.

On these stifling summer nights the denizens of New York, the "cliff-dwellers, as they are called, flock to the parks for relief. Central park has its thousands. Riverside is crowded with lounging men and women who watch the dancing lights in the Hudson and breathe deeply of each breeze that comes up from the harbor.

Here a couple sit in the pool of darkness under a maple tree. The man who passes smiles and wonders if they are married or single, rich or poor, happy or unhappy. Over there a ragged old man is slumped forward asleep. Perhaps he dreams of the good dinners he has had in the past. There are gossiping women, too, and mild looking men taking the dog for an airing before bedtime. Then a couple of sailors saunter by looking speculatively at the group of girls which approaches from the other direction. Meanwhile, across the river a great electric sign flashes its message of moving words. There is a pause, then the sign says, "The Time Is Now." It fades away and a second later in the darkness above the swiftly moving river appears the figures "11:48." The couple in the shadow rise and the sound of their feet fades away up the curved walk. The ragged old man shifts himself and his head drops again on his breast.

Baltimore Race Horse Escapes Injury in Wreck

LONDON, Sept. 18. (UP)—The liner Minnewaska, carrying Billy Barton, the Baltimore race horse, collided with a steamer in the dense fog below Gravesend today. There was little damage to either boat and the passengers were landed in orderly fashion at Tilbury.

Changing Value of Boxers

TEX RICKARD tells his stockholders in the Madison Square Garden corporation that the passing of the million-dollar gate for prize fights is not such a bad thing, after all.

Tex points out that boxers, of recent years, have been making scads of money while promoters have been going broke. Now that million-dollar gates are over, he feels that boxers will take a much saner view of the value of their services.

The moral aspects of the thing didn't concern Rickard, apparently. Yet the new era is better, all around. It was not a healthy thing for a country to be rewarding pugilists at the rate of half a million dollars per fight. It gave us all a false sense of values. If the hired pug can drop down a few notches in the financial scale it will be better for all of us.

Golding in Philadelphia

DOES it occur to you that there is anything in the least peculiar about this "cleanup" that federal prohibition aces are about to make in Philadelphia?

This man Golding, sent there to take personal charge, is a go-getter. Not long ago he laid many Broadway night clubs low. A little before that he caused the indictment of more than 100 persons in a vast beer ring conspiracy in Cleveland. Unquestionably, he's an able man.

When he went to Cleveland no one knew it until the indictments were returned. Similarly, when he went to New York he entered the town quietly and said nothing until he had all the evidence.

But he goes to Philadelphia with a fanfare of trumpets. His arrival is blazoned all over the front pages. He gives interviews announcing that he will drive out all bootleggers. A brass band wouldn't have drawn more attention. If there is a single liquor seller in Philadelphia who doesn't know Golding is in town he must be deaf, dumb and blind—especially dumb.

So, we ask you: does it strike you that there is anything peculiar about the gentleman's visit to Philadelphia?

The Mystery of Life

FROM the time when people lived in caves, there have always been certain men who chose to cut loose from all divine writings and revelations and seek, for themselves, the secret of the origin and purpose of life.

Their searchings have added a good deal to the sum total of human knowledge, to be sure. But the plain, matter of fact explanation they seek has always eluded them.

Now comes Prof. C. Lovatt Evans, one of England's foremost scientists, to announce that the mystery of life's origin and purpose will never be solved by any scientist. Always, he says, there will remain ultimate riddle that no laboratory worker can answer.

Perhaps this is because people, after all, aren't really matter of fact or commonplace at all.

Study your fellow man in the mass, day by day, and you may see nothing extraordinary about him. He is at times, quite mean and blind and selfish and ignorant and cowardly. You are almost persuaded that there is no trace of divinity in him—that he is, after all, only an animated clod.

Then, if you look closely, you begin to see things.

You see, beside the ignoble qualities, strange capacities for sacrifice, endurance, courage, fidelity, hope.

You see a mother in the slums, starving herself to provide a little extra food for the child.

You see an underpaid factory druge working his life away so that people who depend on him may live.

You see a man with a vision giving up riches and honor in order to make the world a better place for men and women who are not yet born.

You see men fighting poverty, sickness and hunger in order to pursue some glimpse of truth.

You see men weaving songs and snaring beauty in a net of words while cities go down in flames about their ears.

And, now and then, you hear battle trumpets and see flags waving, and thousands upon thousands of men step up, without hesitation, to die at someone else's bidding, in the vague hope that somehow the world will be made a bit better thereby.

Will you keep on looking, then, for a matter of fact explanation? You will not—not if you are wise. You will recognize, instead, a great mystery, made radiant by distant flames.

HOUSE DIVIDED UNTO ITSELF

A Denton five-year-old youngster said the other day: "Mother, are I going to vote for Hoover or Smith?" Roundabout can see just how divided a family can be in election year. That child's grandparents are Michigan Republicans, the father is an ardent Smith Democrat. One wonders how the mother will stand.

—Denton (Texas) Record-Chronicle.

RELIGION FALSE ISSUE

It is a shame that a national campaign should be befogged by such a false issue as religion. Every action of the Democratic nominee in 25 years of public belies that it is an issue and even the Republican nominee took occasion in his acceptance speech, and since, to refute any such idea.

We have an opinion, and we are told that everybody has a right to an opinion in this country, and that is that the man or woman who makes the issue religion hasn't very much religion.

We are also firmly convinced that the visit of the Democratic nominee to this state will counteract a major portion of all the opposition to him and that when the vote is counted in Oklahoma next November, Mr. Hoover will be an also ran in this Demberatic commonwealth.

—Altus (Okla.) Times-Democrat.

TRY HOME TOWN FIRST

People seem to take a lot of pride in showing off the things they bought a long distance from home. If they have traveled 1,000 miles the past summer, they like to exhibit things they bought in the distant or famous cities they visited.

But probably if they had inquired in their home stores, they could have bought the same thing for the same or less money. If you value your home town, and want to help push it ahead, why not also say a good word for the things you bought at home? Why not show off that dress or that hat that you bought at home, and remark on what a fine stock they carry in that store, and how good our home stores are? It's the truth.

TOONERVILLE FOLKS — Fontaine Fox

The FORBIDDEN DOOR — by Herman Landon

"What about you, dad? You haven't told me anything about yourself."

Maxwell looked down with a shamefaced air. "It isn't a thing I like to talk about, but you are entitled to know. I was never like your grandfather, Hannan. I have always been a timid, shrinking, vacillating man, lacking strength of character and purpose. The Martenet blood descended directly from Old Winthrop to you. I was left out.

"I have always been an unbalanced and easily influenced man, and all my life has been a series of mistakes. I made a triple mistake when I married your stepmother. First, I shouldn't have married at all. Second, I should not have married such a young woman. Third, I shouldn't have married Julia."

"Oh, it wasn't as bad as all that, dad. You underrate yourself. When did you come to Valhalla Notch?"

"Four years ago, when I dropped out of sight, letting people think I was dead. Julia influenced me to come here. When I didn't return she supposed I was dead. Knowing there were dangers here, she thought she had sent me to my death. Well, I gambled with death for a young and beautiful wife, and here I am."

"You have been here all this time?"

Maxwell nodded. "I came here late one night four years ago. Traycore, stepping out in the hall for the basket, saw me. He conceived an idea. He needed some one to help him, and what more fitting than that it should be a Martenet? He talked with me for hours, and in the end— Well, I decided to remain here.

"And you have been a prisoner here ever since?"

"Prisoner isn't the word. I have stayed on of my own will. And the work has been getting more and more interesting. And this isn't a prison exactly. There is a hidden passage leading out into the open from this part of the building and terminating in a great hollow oak. Sometimes at night I take a walk out there, and so does Traycore, but we never walk together. If Julia and her friends had known about that passage, they wouldn't have been quite so terrified when Old Blighty exploded his wrath."

"Then there is a chance of escape?" asked Hannan eagerly, thinking of Viola.

"Yes, something of a chance." Maxwell glanced timidly at the door. He lowered his voice. "But there is Traycore. He always carries the key to the door that opens into the hidden passage.

"It's a stout door and a strong lock. And Traycore is always watching. Nothing escapes that man. And he is shrewd—shrewd as a fox. I have always feared him, and yet—yet I have stayed on. It has been like a long dream, with Traycore watching over me like an ogre. I am just now awakening." He mopped his forehead with his handkerchief. "My boy, that man is a fiend in human form."

"Yet you say Old Winthrop impressed his own character and personality on him?"

"Sounds like a contradiction, doesn't it? But it's the story of Frankenstein all over again—of the monster getting beyond the control of its creator. I have told you how your grandfather molded Traycore's life according to his own pattern. Then he wrecked it by accidentally disfiguring his face. Then he tried to put the wreckage together again. You see how Old Winthrop became the instrument of destiny in Traycore's case. But something that Old Winthrop couldn't control was aroused in Traycore when that fateful splash of acid ruined his looks, when he saw his life go to pieces, when his friends deserted him, when his sweetheart ran away from him with a scream of horror. Maybe it was a latent devil in Traycore's heart that had waited for just such a calamity to be stirred into activity. At any rate, toward the very last of his life, Old Winthrop began to suspect that he had reared a monster."

"And what did he do?"

"What could he do? He felt responsible for Traycore. He had made him what he was. As he saw it, he had become Traycore's evil genius, although with the best intentions in the world. And while Old Winthrop lived the monster didn't show itself very much. There were just a few alarming symptoms. Occasionally he saw a blaze of hate in Traycore's eyes.

"Now, two of Old Winthrop's strongest traits were loyalty and a sense of fairness. He could have solved the problem easily enough by having Traycore incarcerated. But his sense of loyalty and fairness rebelled against that. He had made Traycore what he was. Besides, the man worshiped him. Monster or angel, he was Old Winthrop's creature.

"Such being the case, he could not deal harshly with him.

"There was one reassuring circumstance, however. Traycore was not likely to leave this portion of the building, except for short walks late at night. His extreme sensitiveness over his disfigurement was an insurance against that. The only danger was that some one might trespass beyond the iron door. John Breck was not likely to do so, and strangers had no business in any part of the house. The only possible danger was to members of the Martenet family. You know Old Winthrop tried to guard against that danger by leaving a solemn warning against entering the iron door. He believed that warning would be needed. He felt there was enough loyalty and honor in the Martenet family to make his injunction effective. He never dreamed that his own son could ever sink low enough to violate it."

"Now, dad! You were only human."

"I was a poor, weak fool."

"But don't you see, dad, if you hadn't come here contrary to Old Winthrop's wishes, then you wouldn't be here now to show Viola and me the way out?"

"Something in that," said Maxwell feebly. "I hope I can retrieve my blunder somehow. If I could only be sure! Traycore is a terrible man. Little by little I've fallen into his power. He controls me just as Old Winthrop controlled him. Only yesterday he told me to go out in the other part of the house and bring Peters to him. I didn't want to do it; I felt what was coming, yet I did. And that's only an example."

"Well," said Hannan consolingly, "I don't know what happened to Peters, but whatever it was it was only a sort of primitive justice. Buck up, dad. Things aren't as black as they seem. You blame yourself too much. Whatever you have done I'm sure it has all been for the best."

"I try to think so," Maxwell mumbled. "And I've done my best to make up for my great mistake. Perhaps we can find a way out, you and I. We must. Alone I couldn't have done anything. I would never have dared defy Traycore. But with you here it's different. We'll plan something. We'll steal a march on him somehow. First of all we must plan how to get the key away from him. Then——"

"Yes, Maxwell," said a voice; "what then?"

The door had opened noiselessly. In the opening stood a tall, broad man in faded garments of old-fashioned cut. His face, like a great scar with a crooked gash for mouth and two pale orifices for eyes, was awful to behold.

"So we'll plan something, will we? We'll steal a march, eh?" The taunting words were addressed to Maxwell, who stood cringing before him. "What a lovely arrangement! And so beautifully simple! All we need is the key, and then——" He threw back his head and laughed.

Hannan watched him with a sickening sensation. Dr. Traycore was not only hideous to look at, but all the evil in the world seemed stamped indelibily on his features.

Maxwell trembled. The effects of years of submission to stronger wills than his own were shown in his frightened, cowering attitude.

"You're a fool, Maxwell," Traycore went on. "Don't you know that it's useless to try to deceive me? Don't you realize that I can checkmate every move your poor brain can think of? Leave us now. I want to be alone with your handsome son."

But for once Maxwell resisted the voice of authority. It was a feeble resistance, yet the worm had turned at last. He drew up his head and fixed Traycore with a look of tremulous mutiny.

"Go," Traycore commanded sharply.

Maxwell swallowed with difficulty. He looked obliquely at his son, and Hannan gave a slight nod. For the present, he saw nothing could be gained by antagonizing the doctor.

Still Maxwell hesitated. There was still a trace of feeble defiance. "If I go," he said, "will you promise that no harm will come to my son."

"You will go regardless," declared Traycore sharply. For a moment he looked narrowly at the gray, timid man, as if puzzled by this unusual show of resistance. "I'm not promising anything. However, you needn't worry. This young man is Old Winthrop's own flesh and blood. That's enough for me. He is safe."

Maxwell walked out.

The two men in the room studied each other.

"You are a handsome youngster," Traycore remarked. "It is fortunate for you that you are Old Winthrop's grandson."

Hannan could not quite see the connecting link between the two statements, but the words left an unpleasant impression on his mind.

"You have your grandfather's features," the doctor went on. "I imagine you have his temper, too. You are adventurous, aggressive, strong-headed, just like Old Winthrop. You are not easily influenced. You have a mind of your own. That's where you differ from your father, Maxwell bends whichever way the wind blows. He is a bit ridiculous, too."

"If you can't speak respectfully of my father," said Hannan softly, "I'll thank you to leave him out of the conversation."

Traycore's crooked lips twisted in a smile. "That's right, young man, I like that. I detest people who fawn and cringe, although I get along with them excellently. I'm beginning to understand. You are the kind that speaks softly and lugs a hard wallop. I hope we shan't come to blows."

"That depends," said Hannan, smiling.

"You see, Hannan," Traycore went on, "your father is prone to underrate my resourcefulness. It doesn't suit my convenience to have him walk off and leave me. I greatly prefer that he—and you, too—remain here for the present. And for you and him to leave this place wouldn't be quite so simple as Maxwell thinks. I have made various arrangements to forestall such an event. There is Cerberus, for instance. He would do his best to detain you."

A cold tremor ran down Hannan's back, but his face was a smiling mask.

"I understood Cerberus was caged."

"But he is automatically released when an unauthorized person enters the iron door. The same thing happens when a certain other door is opened against my wishes. But Maxwell doesn't know about the latter part of the arrangement. And that is only one of a great many precautions I have taken."

EVENING

When I've finished up my labors,
And toward home I turn my feet,
Thinking of the joy that's coming
In a rest, so calm and sweet;
When my addled brain is weary,
Leaden feet are hot and sore,
It is then she always stops me,
Ere I've entered in the door.

"Keep your hat on, Johnnie, darling;
There are things that you must do.
Go and get a big, nice beef-steak,
And a loaf of bread or two.
Don't forget the lawn needs water,
And the chickens must be fed.
When you're thru, please sweep the driveway,
And bring in the baby's bed."

"Someone broke the garden gate down;
There's a leak beneath the sink.
And I want to write to mother,
If you'll go and get some ink.
Then go down and get the laundry;
Surely it is done by now,
Then come back and help with dinner;
You're not busy anyhow."

Fort Worth Boy Killed After Viewing Spot Where Friend Met Her Death

FORT WORTH, Sept. 18. (UP)—Fate played a grim trick on Jesper Bradford, 18, Fort Worth, early today after he had been to view the scene of a crash in which a girl friend had been killed, and he too is dead.

Bradford, with three companions, had been to Dallas to see where Miss Bobbie Lewis had been hurled over the railing of a viaduct there to her death Sunday night. Returning to Fort Worth, two miles west of Arlington, Bradford swerved his auto to prevent hitting a truck and it overturned.

He died on the way to the hospital.

Horse Races Feature Of San Angelo Fair

SAN ANTONIO, Texas, Sept. 18. (UP)—Horse racing has never failed to attract big crowds in West Texas, and interest in thorough bred animals is just as high now as when they afforded the fastest transportation system for the ranch people of the section, before the automobile displaced the cart and buggy, according to R. H. Henderson, veteran president of the all-West Texas exposition here.

Henderson has announced that five races will feature each afternoon program at the exposition here this year, which starts today and continues through Sept. 22. He believes that San Angelo is the only place in the southwest where horse racing has been held each year, pointing out that they have featured the exposition program since its inception nearly a quarter of a century ago.

At a meeting of the exposition executive committee, endorsement was made of the work being done toward promoting interest in pure-bred horses in Texas by the Thoroughbred Horse association.

New Altitude Seekers Die in Balloon Crash

MADRID, Sept. 18. (UP)—The balloon Hispania which left Guadalajara Saturday in an attempt to break the world's altitude record, was found wrecked at Caravaca. Commander Molla and his crew were dead but it was not known whether they died from asphyxiation.

American-Dutch Oil Dispute Settled

WASHINGTON, Sept. 18. (UP)—The state department announced today the settlement of an 8-year-old oil dispute between the Netherlands and the United States, which will enable American citizens to participate in development of petroleum lands in Dutch East Indies on a reciprocal basis. A similar dispute with Great Britain remains unsettled.

Trial of Stewart Reset for Dec. 3

WASHINGTON, Sept. 18. (UP)—District Attorney Rover has asked postponement of the trial of Robert W. Stewart, chairman of the Standard Oil of Indiana, on charges of perjury, from Oct. 8 to Dec. 3, because two government witnesses, Senators Walsh of Montana and Nye of North Dakota, will be absent campaigning. The charge grew out of Stewart's testimony before the senate Teapot Dome committee concerning Continental Trading company profits.

Old Time Cow Rancher Goes in for Sheep

SAN ANGELO, Texas, Sept. 18. (AP)—W. L. Elwood, who operates cow ranches over 600 sections in West Texas, is taking up sheep business after having spent his earlier life with cattle. He is to fence 25 sections of his ranch in Sterling county with sheep proof fence immediately, and will stock it with sheep. He is one of the few remaining exclusive cowmen in the state and has been making heavy purchases recently of calves and other livestock.

Oklahoma Labor Leader Demands Union Label

HOLDENVILLE, Okla., Sept. 18. (UP)—Union laborers who do not demand the union label on all merchandise purchased were flayed by Joe C. Campbell, president of the Oklahoma State Federation of Labor in an address to delegates to the 20th annual convention of the body in session here today.

Campbell pointed out that organized labor's greatest weakness was its failure to demand the union label and pictured to the delegates the strength that might be added to federated labor if the members would accept only union made materials.

Arsenic Trace Found In Body of Farmer

UNION, Mo., Sept. 18. (INS)—An autopsy performed upon the remains of Ed Brinkley, Catawissa farmer, one of the three persons to whose poisoning Mrs. Bertha Gifford, the amateur nurse with a penchant for funerals has confessed, today disclosed indications of arsenic poisoning.

Brinkley's body and those of youthful Elmer and Loyd Schamel, the other persons to whom Mrs. Gifford has confessed having fed arsenic, were exhumed today under direction of Dr. James Stewart, state health commissioner.

Stennis Says Division Of Texas Demos Unlikely

DALLAS, Sept. 18. (UP)—Assurance that no division will occur in the ranks of loyal Democrats of Texas over the prohibition question was made by Judge R. L. Stennis, chairman of the platform committee of the recent state Democratic convention, in a statement issued here today.

"One of the cardinal principles of Democracy is that one's position for or against prohibition is no test of his or her Democracy," Judge Stennis said.

Dallas Man Advocates Adult Sports for Young

DALLAS, Texas, Sept. 18. (AP)—Golf, tennis and other games heretofore considered the privilege of the adult, or near adult, should be given consideration for playgrounds of elementary schools, A. A. Buchanan, director of physical education in the Dallas grade schools, believes.

"It would be a fine thing if we could instill the rudiments of the golf swing into the boy or girl while youth and pliability give the best chance for development," Mr. Buchanan said.

Tennis courts already have been installed on a number of school campuses by the Dallas Park board.

Th' reason so many politicians are reportin' that th' election in ther states is goin' t' be mighty close is that th' two national committees are goin' t' spend over $10,000,000 this fall. BLUE VETS IN ANNUAL FROLIC

G. A. R. Opens Reunion in Mountain City

DENVER, Colo., Sept. 18. (UP)—The Grand Army of the Republic blanketed Denver today like Sherman covered Georgia. A "war" bulletin issued from headquarters said. "We have attacked the city and found it receptive."

From Mayor W. H. Mershon, 83, "The Drummer Boy of Shiloh," who lives at Winchester, Ind., and is perhaps one of the youngest veterans here, to Fred Williams of Long Beach, Calif., who claims the record age of 101 years, the boys in blue are engaged in the greatest "play time" encampment of the army.

Always there is the spirit of play—the assumption that life is good.

Today in hotel lobbies, in parks, and on street corners where hospitable green benches have been placed for the veterans, groups of gray-haired men gossiped, told stories, sang "The Battle Hymn of the Republic," and that sadder more prophetic song: "My Eyes Have Seen the Glory of the Coming of the Lord."

Ninety-year-old war nurses found themselves girls again as the veterans made themselves acquainted with anyone wearing the insignia of the G. A. R. or any of its allied organiazion here for conventions.

The martial thud of the parading drums and shrill melody of fifes were muted briefly yesterday while the veterans paid their last respect to A. E. Cohn, San Francisco comrade, who died shortly after he arrived for the encampment.

Two other comrades were seriously ill in hospitals, one from an automobile accident, and the other from "old age."

But these moments of sorrow were brief. The grand army went on with its reunion, enjoying the holiday and the tales of Shiloh, Gettysburg and Vicksburg.

Vernon C-C Seeks Low Freight Rates

Special to The Record News.

VERNON, Sept. 18.—A movement has been launched by the Vernon chamber of commerce for the purpose of obtaining special freight rates on feed shipped into Wilbarger, Foard, Hardeman, Childress, Cottle, Baylor and Knox counties. Crops in this section are far below normal, and Secretary Grady Shipp of the Vernon chamber of commerce believes the conditions warrant special zone rates.

The Vernon chamber has requested a hearing of the state railway commission and has sent letters to the other chambers of commerce in the section asking them to co-operate in the movement.

No plans as to the amount of the freight rate reduction to be sought have been made. This will be discussed at the hearing, if it is granted, Mr. Shipp said.

Osage Oil Co. Opens Texas Office In Wichita Falls—Well Is Started

Texas headquarters for the Osage Oil company has been opened in Wichita Falls and the company has already started active work in this district, according to Brevard S. Long who will be in charge of the Wichita Falls office.

Brevard S. Long recently resigned as head of the Simms Oil company's land and lease department in the Wichita Falls district and assumed his duties in charge of the Osage's land and lease office here on September 15.

State Revenue Now $49,000,000

Special to The Record News.

AUSTIN, Sept. 18.—In a report to the state board of control, S. H. Terrell, state comptroller, estimates the maximum state revenue to be $49,043,528.78. Using the estimated revenue as a basis the board of control will make its recommendations to the forty-first legislature, which meets next January, and will fix the appropriations for the coming biennium.

The maximum revenue was based on the maximum ad valorem tax rate of 85 cents on the $100 valuation whereas the present rate is only 22 cents. If the 22-cent rate is continued the estimated revenue is $40,752,033.76. Vaulation of property subject to ad valorem taxation for the next biennium was set at $4,000,000,000 while the present valuation is $3,975,000,000. The estimated revenue for the two years beginning next Sept. 1 was only slightly more than that for the present biennium, despite the fact that the estimated valuations increased from $3,650,000,000 to $4,000,000,000, the estimated cash balance Sept. 1, 1928, was only $164,247.51 compared with $1,822,801.84 two years ago.

Estimated receipts from sources other than ad valorem taxes increased from $12,147,196.83 to $13,810,016.88 annually, the comptroller's report disclosed.

Estimated gross receipts from ad valorem taxes for the year beginning Sept. 1, 1928, were $14,000,000; deducting 20 per cent to cover cost of assessments, delinquents and the like, and an approximate remission of $650,000 to counties the next annual total was $10,714,947.51. The total receipts for the fiscal year ending Aug. 31 were $20,166,454.43, out of which the second half of the appropriations made by the fortieth legislature must be met.

Net ad valorem taxes under the 22-cent rate were estimated at $6,386,437.55 with receipts from all sources other than the property tax, based on amounts received this fiscal year, $13,810,016.88.

The husband was fined $100 for contributing to the deliquency of the girl he wedded. Court costs were more than $125. The heaviest loser was a man who married one of the 14-year-old girls while they were out of the school.

Natural Gas

is a community builder

it draws industries

increases property values

—and it's one of the cheapest necessities You Buy....

Have you ever stopped to consider just how much of a part Natural Gas plays in the life and growth of your community?

When your local community boosters and builders, your Chamber of Commerce workers, start "selling the world" of your local advantages, what—usually heads the list?

Natural Gas! A plentiful, dependable supply of Natural Gas—the cheapest industrial fuel available anywhere!

Other points about your community may carry weight with manufacturers and other industries you desire to attract—but the greatest is usually cheap fuel—Natural Gas. Taking the country over, there are comparatively few places that can offer Natural Gas—so it is a real advantage.

And what does it mean to attract new industries?

It means steady growth for the community—more people, more business, more prosperity, increased property values.

The increased property values resulting directly or indirectly from the community growth stimulated by the possession of Natural Gas have, or will, (depending on length of time you have had Natural Gas) more than off-set the cost to the community of the Natural Gas consumed.

Though you may not own property now, you intend to do so, and the advantage of Natural Gas in your community is a real one to you, as you certainly want to know that your community has growth ahead of it when you put your money into property.

And, not to be overlooked, there are the convenience, cleanliness and cheapness of Natural Gas used in your own home for heating and cooking.

As one of the largest Natural Gas pipe line companies in the country, we are happy to be able to contribute something to the growth of your community and to your personal comfort, by rendering the type of service to your local gas company that makes Natural Gas a real asset to the community

Lone Star ★ Gas Company

★ The Lone Star Gas Company is a producer, purchaser, pipe line transporter and wholesaler of natural gas. It bridges the gap between the gas fields and your local gas company's lines and thus serves you by backing up the service of your local company

ONE FUND FOR PORTO RICO

Estimate Set Between Five And Ten Millions

WASHINGTON, Sept. 18. (US)—The American Red Cross today decided to raise a single fund from which it will provide relief for the hurricane victims of Porto Rico, the Virgin Islands and continental United States.

While no goal has been set thus far, it was estimated unofficially that the cost of relief and rehabilitation throughout the stricken areas, including hard-hit Florida, may vary from $5,000,000 to $10,000,000. An amount even greater than that may be necessary if the storm continues to play havoc in new areas.

Rapid strides were made during the day in the task of rushing immediate aid to Porto Rico and also in preparation for the far greater work of rehabilitating its 700,000 homeless and destitute inhabitants.

Four Ships Enroute

With four relief ships already en route or preparing to embark, the National Red Cross announced that it would send a special medical unit composed of U. S. health officers to Porto Rico to lead the fight against the ravages of pestilence and disease.

The unit will include Dr. L. L. Lumsden, senior surgeon, who will direct the unit; Dr. J. W. Mountin, F. R. Shaw, sanitary engineer; Miss I. Malinde Havey, assistant national director of nursing, and Miss Pansy Bloom, former director of Red Cross nurses in the Philippines.

Also three additional disaster relief workers will be sent to Porto Rico to assist Henry M. Baker, national director, who was expected to land at San Juan today on board the naval destroyer Gilmer.

Army to Work

The U. S. army will play a large part in the herculean task of attempting to rebuild roads and restore transportation in the devastated areas. General Hugh A. Drum was ordered to report to San Juan at the earliest possible moment to keep in touch with the situation there. He will be aided by Maj. C. S. Ridley, of the corps of engineers, an expert in road building, and by Col. E. A. Creager, of the judge advocate general's office.

In response to President Coolidge's appeal for aid, voluntary contributions for the relief fund are already pouring in from all over the country. Many local Red Cross chapters are donating sums of from $100 to $1000 from their own funds.

The largest single contribution was made by Edward S. Harkness, New York banker, who sent his check for $10,000 to Miss Mabel T. Boardman, secretary of the Red Cross. The National Biscuit company donated 25,000 pounds of crackers which were on ship at sea. They will be landed at San Juan on Wednesday.

Zone Commission Meets Wednesday

The first meeting of committee and sub-committee chairmen of all committees of the city zoning commission has been called at the chamber of commerce for 10 o'clock Wednesday morning, it was announced Tuesday.

Walter S. Curlee, chairman of the commission, issued the call and will preside at the meeting.

Several months ago, shortly after the commission was organized and the committees were named, Mr. Curlee sent the committeemen information on the work to be done and outlines of similar work elsewhere.

Wednesday's meeting will be in the nature of an organization meeting and will be the first at which the real work of the commission will be started.

NEW YORK, Sept. 18. Girl Dupe of "Alky" Ring

The Philadelphia grand jury busy investigating bootlegging and illegal alcohol sales, was no more surprised than Miss Annie Cooney, 20-year-old stenographer, when it was revealed she was the "owner" of a huge industrial alcohol plant alleged to have done a business mounting into the millions of dollars. Papers she was said to have innocently signed at the direction of her employers transferred title to the plant to her, it was said. The grand jury's revelation was such a shock to Miss Cooney that a physician had to be summoned. The alcohol concern was closed down meantime by federal prohibition agents.

New York is the world's largest city. It sees the best. Demands the best—and gets the best because the money is there to back up the demand. The tendency is for New Yorkers to think that the world ends at the west end of Manhattan island. Therefore, the reader should understand that the attitude of the New York movie critic is just about 10 times as severe and caustic as we poor "rubes" in the provinces might be. Considering all this, this column believes that the blase critic for Life in reviewing the opening of "The Terror," in the current issue of Life has been terribly complimentary. This picture is the second of the all talking motion pictures which opened a few days ago in New York and which opens here at the Strand theater Friday.

R. E. Sherwood, 'Life's critic, now broadcasting:

"The talkies are improving. One of these days we are going to see one that is actually good. 'The Terror' is far ahead of any of its predecessors.

"It is paced so slowly that at times it becomes exceedingly tiresome; some of the thrills miss fire, and some of its comedy lines are anything but funny. It is, on the whole, competently directed, well acted and smoothly constructed—which is a great deal more than could have been said, or was said, for 'Tenderloin,' 'The Lion and the Mouse' or 'The Lights of New York.'

"'The Terror,' as its name would imply, is one of those spine chillers with the scene laid in a lonely cobwebby inn. Among the characters are a screaming heroine, a nervous old lady, a whimsical hero and a mysterious madman who practices mutilation while not otherwise engaged.

"Edward Everett Horton, though too strenuously humorous at times, shows that he is destined for a star's estate in the talkies. There is good work too by Louise Fazenda, John Miljan and Otto Hoffman, and by the director, Roy D. Ruth."

Food Riots Increase in Hurricane Stricken Island, Workers Hear

SAN JUAN, Porto Rico, Sept. 18. (AP)—Food riots are increasing in this hurricane stricken land. This was the word given to Henry M. Baker, national director of disaster relief for the Red Cross, on arrival here today.

Baker brought five assistants on the U. S. destroyer Gilmer and they plunged into work of organizing relief measures.

Mayors of a dozen towns were among the first to wait upon Baker. They told of the desperate plight of the communities and of the despair of the people who have thus far lacked relief. They begged for something, either money or food, to take back with them.

"We cannot go home empty-handed. The people will mob us," was their common statement.

Enrollment at First Baptist Training School Shows Increase

Enrollment at the Sunday school training school of the First Baptist church, which got under way Monday night, reached 138 at Tuesday night's sessions, with all classes in the school except one reporting increases in attendance. Almost twice as many persons attended the supper at the church Tuesday evening as were out Monday.

Wednesday night's session of the training school will be devoted to a discussion of the weekly teachers' meeting held Wednesday nights.

Walter Jackson, director of education at the First Baptist church of Abilene, will discuss the importance of the teachers' meetings and the responsibilities of Sunday school teachers and leaders.

Dr. O. L. Powers' class was the largest attended at Tuesday's session, with Rev. E. M. Agee's class a close second and Mr. Jackson's class third.

Dr. Powers, pastor of the First Baptist church, is teaching a class on "The People Called Baptists." Rev. Mr. Agee is Baptist association missionary here.

Out-of-town workers in the training school include Mrs. D. B. Barnes of the Cliff Temple Baptist church of Dallas; Mrs. Harold Jones of the Southwestern Seminary at Fort Worth and Mrs. G. A. Mabry of Kearns, Texas.

Mrs. Barnes is conducting a class in "Primary Conference Work." Mrs. Jones, a kindergarten specialist, is teaching "Crade Roll and Beginners work." Mrs. Mabry has a class in "Junior Conference Work."

The training school, which began Monday, will extend through Friday night. Free suppers will be served at the church each night.

East Meets West When 15 Aviators Drop In On Cowboys for Barbecue

PARKS RANCH, NEAR MIDLAND, TEXAS, Sept. 18 (UP)—A remarkable combination of modern military aviation and a bona fide surviving part of the old wild west was seen here today when 15 army pilots were guests at a real old-fashioned barbecue of the Cattlemen's association.

The pilots, bringing their nine huge bombing planes from Langley Field, Va., into the hot and dusty Midland airport after a battle against the winds over the mountains from El Paso, were greeted by the cowmen. The planes had been seen overhead and some of the cowmen stopped their automobiles at the airport to see if the fliers wanted entertainment.

Three large calves were killed for the great feast and more than a score of cooks labored all day.

More than 300 cowmen from the surrounding west Texas country responded when the cooks beat on a tin plate and yelled "chuck." The host, Roy Parks, has made money from oil but he is still a cattleman, actively engaged in the operation of his ranch of 36 square miles.

Later the cowmen and aviators drove to Midland, where the modern angle of the west was supplied by a game of polo, between oilmen and cowmen teams. They topped off the day with a "baile" dance at a luxurious new hotel.

The fliers of the second bombardment group will start early Wednesday for Wichita, Kan., en route to the Cincinnati air show Saturday.

Woman Denies Guilt In Poisoning Of 17-Year-Old Step Daughter

GATESVILLE, Texas, Sept. 18. (AP)—Mrs. Willie Frazer, in her cell in the county jail here, charged with murder after the death of her stepdaughter, Adeline Frazer, 17, at Mexia Friday, still claimed innocence tonight.

Meanwhile Sheriff Hollingsworth, who reported no progress in the case, awaits the report of Dr. W. T. Gooch, head of the Baylor university chemistry department, who is making an autopsy of the girl's viscera.

Mrs. Frazer's arrest came Sunday morning after Adeline's death had followed that of her sister, Callie, 15, by only three months. Mrs. Frazer is the second wife of H. Frazer, Leon Junction railroad man.

Callie died in a Texarkana hospital. Her illness was said to have been similar to that which took the life of the elder girl.

FIGHT ON CITY PLANTS BARED

Utility Hearings Reopened By Commission

WASHINGTON, Sept. 18. (UP)—Resuming its investigation of propaganda activities of public utilities the federal trade commission today uncovered new efforts to sway public opinion in Iowa, Canada and New Jersey.

Evidence at today's hearing centered about efforts by utility organizations to discredit municipal ownership and to retard its growth.

In Iowa, it was developed, utilities enlisted the state university and the state college in their publicity campaign. Correspondence showed authorities of both institutions were friendly to utilities and were anxious to aid in their development "in any way possible."

Letter Is Bared

A letter from files of the New Jersey Utilities association revealed a new method in the private utilities fight against publicly owned plants. The letter, written by C. H. Howell, Atlantic City utility man, said:

"I note a growing tendency among municipal plant advocates to eliminate power house worries by buying current at wholesale. It really does simplify their problem tremendously and I am not altogether sure that it is the proper thing for us in any event to take on a contract to wholesale to any municipal electric plant.

"In this connection, Sea Isle City has been reporting substantial gains in its net earnings since buying power from us. I have instructed Swift to undertake to keep the demand up to the very highest point so that their power will cost them as much as possible."

Swift is an employe of the Atlantic City Power company of which Howell is president. The letter was written Jan. 21, 1926, and was addressed to George N. Tidd, president of the American Gas and Electric company of New York City.

Files Opened

Letters from files of the Canadian Electric association disclosed propaganda attacking the publicly owned power plants of Ontario was sent free to educational institutions and individuals in that province. An article in the Montreal Daily Star aroused H. M. Lyster, secretary of the Canadian group, to write the National Electric Light association, New York, that it should be regarded as a warning to utilities.

In Iowa, testimony of H. P. Weeks, Davenport, disclosed utilities have distributed adverse literature in towns considering establishment of a municipal power plant to discourage such a step. Members of the legislature were sent free a propaganda magazine devoted largely to attacks on municipal ownership.

Hoover Talks On Demo Unity

Two Major Parties Needed Says Nominee

HOOVER TRAIN EN ROUTE TO WASHINGTON, Sept. 18. (AP)—After an appeal to New Jersey Republican leaders to make the political campaign one based on issues and not a duel of personalities, Herbert Hoover tonight sped back to Washington to await the time for his second sally into the country.

The appeal, made extemporaneously by the G. O. P. nominee at Newark, was coupled with a laudation of the virtues Hoover said President Coolidge had brought into government. The nominee also spoke of the need of having only two major political parties and added that he would "leave it to you to remark who has happened to our political opponents, through lack of unity."

From Newark, the nominee moved quickly by automobile through Elizabeth, New Brunswick, Princeton and a dozen smaller places to Trenton, where he boarded his train to return to Washington.

He carried with him the memory of two days during which he had been applauded by thousands in one of the most arduous campaign trips he thus far has made.

Today two fast automobile trips swept the nominee and his party through a score or more of towns.

From Jersey City, the nominee returned to Newark where, as the luncheon guest of Senator Walter E. Edge of New Jersey, he delivered the second speech of consequence that he had made in the trip.

At Trenton arrangements had been made for Hoover to speak from a stand that had been built at the city hall. The nominee had not been notified of the plans, but rather than disappoint the crowd, he mounted the platform to tell them briefly of his appreciation of their cordial greetings.

In his speech at Newark at noon, the candidate addressed to the party leaders of the state an appeal for harmony.

Approximately 50 applications for the office of county juvenile officer will be considered by the special board composed of Burl Bryant, Dr. J. W. Cantwell and B. M. Dinsmore which meets Thursday afternoon to choose a successor to J. T. Cabe, ousted from the juvenile office by an order of the county commissioners' court Monday afternoon.

Bumstead Freed By Bandits Who Held Him Captive Three Weeks

WASHINGTON, Sept. 18. (US)—E. J. Bumstead, American mining engineer held a prisoner by Mexican bandits in the state of Nyarit for the past three weeks, has been released, the state department announced today.

The department was so advised by Joseph C. Satterthwaite, vice consul at Guadalajara, who reported that Bumstead left for Ixtlan immediately after being set free.

Details attending his release were not disclosed in the message from Satterthwaite. The department is of the opinion, however, the bandits gave Bumstead his freedom when the danger of a conflict with federal troops who were closing in on them in the mountains presented itself.

Bumstead was seized Aug. 25, when he went to Nyarit to open and operate the Humbolt mine.

Childress Fair Judgers Work

Crowds Break Records on Second Day

By FRANK O. HALL
Staff Correspondent

CHILDRESS, Texas, Sept. 18.—Experiencing another record breaking attendance the Childress state fair closed its second day here Tuesday with judges started on their work and with the presentation of an excellent entertainment program consisting of automobile races, acrobatic stunts and pyrotechnic displays.

The grandstand was filled again tonight with persons who viewed the various entertainment attractions while countless hundreds visited the commercial exhibits, viewed the livestock or agricultural exhibits and made the rounds of the merry midway.

A new attendance record was chalked up Monday night when an increase of 25 per cent in the crowd was made over any previous year.

Farmers and their wives were looking forward today to Wednesday when the special educational lectures will start by poultry, home economics, agricultural and dairy authorities. These lectures will be given on the fair grounds and in connection with the decisions rendered by the judges. Childress closed shop Tuesday and citizens of this town were responsible to a great degree in the swelling of the attendance records. Local business firms will again close their doors Thursday and Childress people will attend the celebration in a body.

Numerous grade entries in the livestock department were made early Tuesday immediately before the judging work started. All exhibit pens are full and extra work has been required to accommodate the increased numbers of entries.

CAMDEN, N. J., Sept. 18. (INS)—Approximately $165,000 has been embezzled from the Burlington County National bank at Medford, 20 miles north of here, U. S. bank officials revealed this afternoon.

"It is true although I cannot tell the amount of money involved," Reeve said. "I started to make unfortunate investments 35 years ago. However, I have touched none of the money within the last 15 years.

Reeve turned over his entire property to the bank and the officials agreed to underwrite the losses until assessment of stock can be made.

The bank is one of the oldest in this section having been established almost a century ago.

PARENTS HALT KIDS' REVELRY

Seventh Graders Placed Under Rules

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Sept. 18. (UP)—Seventh grade school children who sought to emulate the gay night life of their elders were today figuratively spanked and put to bed.

Social rivalry had become so intense among the seventh graders at William Cullen Bryant school, in a fashionable residence district, that mothers of the children took cognizance of it and entered into a "simplicity pact."

Children of 12 and 15 years of age were attending dinner parties in couples; the boys sometimes called for the girls in their fathers' motor cars, and girls wore evening clothes almost replicas of their mothers'.

After discussion brought out such conditions, 89 mothers banded together in the following simplicity pact:

No evening dancing parties; only tea-dances in the afternoon; no elaborate dress; more outdoor parties and games, emphasis on parties in the school building; no parties where boys are expected to escort girls.

W. W. Clement, principal of the Bryant school, expressed great satisfaction at the action of the mothers.

"Last year in one seventh grade room, there was a party every week," he said. "The children were so busy thinking about what they would wear they had difficulty getting their minds on their lessons."

"Last year the graduating class had 90 children in it," Mrs. H. Roy Graham, president of the Bryant parent-teacher group, declared, "and during the year there were exactly 87 evening dinners and dances for them."

BAGGETT SENDS INDIANS THROUGH STRENUOUS SCRIMMAGE

TRIBE PLEASES IN SHAM WAR

Drill Forecasts Fighting, Fast Eleven

By GORDON FULCHER

After asserting Monday that he would not send his team into a scrimmage before the first game Saturday with Electra, Coach E. A. Baggett sprang a surprise Tuesday afternoon by sending the Junior college Indians through a stiff scrimmage session.

The Indians looked exceptionally well yesterday, considering the fact that they have been in training for only nine days. Baggett's team has a lot of fight and the men took to scrimmaging with plenty of action.

Line Looks Good

The line, composed greatly of stars from last year's high school team, is strong and husky. Bill Habern, Gabbert Stephens and Eggleston Ramey are doing well in their first trial on the college team. All of them were lettermen in high school.

An interesting fight for center is taking place between Henry Barton and Walter Pinney. Barton was a regular and letterman in high school last season while Pinney was a Coyote star in 1926. Both of them are good men.

Emil Hutto and Tom Black, linemen from Vernon, are also heavy and real scrappers. Captain Ox Edmondson, the hardest fighter on the Indian team last year, is at his old post at tackle and is flashing better form than ever this season at smearing opposing plays.

Ray Mitchell, Bill McMillan and J. T. Castleberry, from Vernon, ripped off good gains in the backfield yesterday while Olin Dickey and John Weiler are surpassing their form last year in high school as backs.

Jimmy Harvey seems to be the leading candidate for quarter and is also showing up well as a punter and passer despite his small size.

HARVARD GRID OUTLOOK GOOD

Best Crimson Team for 3 Seasons Is Forecast

By WILLIAM R. KING

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., Sept. 18. (AP)—Though Harvard has the best looking varsity football squad that Arnold Horween has gathered together since he became head coach two years ago, indications are that it will have its usual weak line unless "Eskie" Clarke and "Duke" Dunn, center and line coaches, perform miracles with their green material.

Horween had 108 varsity candidates, including 11 lettermen who played against Yale last fall, working out in the stadium today, but observers were able to count his likely looking prospects on the fingers of their hands.

There were backfield candidates galore, including three who performed brilliantly as regulars last year and about a dozen who served as varsity substitutes in the 1927 campaign. Besides these, there were several impressive looking youths who played on Eddie Casey's strong freshman team a year ago.

Injured First Day

One of these, however, was put out of the running for the season before the practice session was half over. John Holbrook, freshman quarterback last year and who was out for that berth on the varsity, broke his collar bone this afternoon while practicing falling on the ball. Sam Burns, a capable end candidate, injured his shoulder attempting the same stunt and probably will be inactive for two weeks.

Though Horween refused to admit it, Holbrook's injury was expected to force the changing of Capt. Arthur French, one of the best halfbacks in the East a year ago, into a signal caller.

French, Harvard sprint champion, is an excellent ball carrier and strong on the defense.

Putnam Too Small

He also is able to act as defensive back, a duty which Horween claims should be carried out by the quarterback. Elliott Putnam, who called the signals for a part of the 1926 Yale game, also was on hand today. He is rather small and his size would prevent him from being much of a factor backing up a weak line.

The other three places behind the line probably will be filled by Joe Potter, Guaranaccia, Mason or Harper, each of whom won his "H" in the last Yale game.

Horween has plenty of back field replacements, including many who served as varsity subs in other years, and several promising youths from the last freshman team.

The varsity end squad was also impressive.

Dearth of Forwards

The forward outlook could not be much darker. Dudley Bell, only capable center in the squad, has been placed on probation and will be idle for the season. During the next three weeks which remain before the season opens with Springfield college, "Eskie" Clarke must not only discover a likely ball passer, but also train him in the Harvard manner.

The guards and tackles appeared no better than the center candidates. Horween has "Red" Barrett, Captain Pratt's understudy last year, Davis of the last second team, and Waterman, a 205-pound giant who was ineligible last fall, trying out for the tackles' jobs, but none of these appeared ready for varsity play until they received further seasoning. Johnson, Uton, Warner and Trainer, members of the last freshman team, appeared to be the best of the other candidates.

DAILY DOPE

By LARRY DAILEY

GO TO TEXAS, young man. Paraphrasing a historic remark attributed to Horace Greeley, advice to ambitious young baseball players who would prosper in their profession, is to play in the Texas league. It seems that about all a ball player needs do to achieve a major league job, is to star in the Texas league. And presto, up he goes to the big time, where lights are brighter, but where the right field, as in the bushes, is behind first and second bases.

Twenty players who pastimed in the Texas league this campaign have been sold or recalled by major league clubs. Some went to their big league jobs before the end of the season, and it is a fact to which Texas league enthusiasts may "point with pride," that every man one of them has made a most favorable impression.

CARL HUBBELL joined the Giants in mid-season and the former Beaumont southpaw has been a winner for McGraw. First Baseman Art Shires and Outfielder George Blackerby left Waco several weeks before the Texas schedule closed to join the White Sox, and they have made such impressions with the Lenas that their retention for next year seems a foregone conclusion. Earl Caldwell, young hurler also from Waco, likewise has shown sufficient promise with the Phillies as to indicate he will be retained.

OTHER TEXAS LEAGUE players of 1928 who will report next spring at major league camps include Pitcher Herb Cobb, Catcher Ike Danning, First Baseman Buck Stanton, Infielder Ed Roetz and Outfielder Tom Jenkins of the Spudders, sold to the St. Louis Browns; Pitcher Lester Bartholomew, recalled, Catcher Mealey and Infielder Jeffries, all from Dallas and on their way to the Pirates; Shortstop Marshall of Beaumont, sold to Brooklyn; Outfielder Petrie of the Exporters, purchased by Detroit.

In addition to the Texas leaguers who have made excellent debuts with the league clubs, Pitcher Marty Griffin from Fort Worth and Homer Blankenship from Dallas went to the Red Sox and Pirates, respectively. Joe Pate, veteran hurler, was purchased by Minneapolis and Ralph Shinners by Toronto to aid the pennant drives of those class AA nines.

FOUR HOUSTON BUFFS have been "sold," if you call the going of a pair to the St. Louis Cardinals as a purchase, and at least one or two champions are certain to go up. Catcher Bubbar Jonnard and Second Baseman Carey Selph go to the city from the Cardinal farm, and Pitcher Frank Barnes and Shortstop Heinie Schuble have been sold to Detroit. Pitcher Bill Hallahan doubtless will go back to the Cardinals and Outfielders Red Worthington and Watty Watkins may be in the Red Bird nest next spring.

Parelli Defeats Young Strangler

Stewart Shades J. Owens; Scot Beats LeFevre

Seemingly groggy from a series of headlocks Joe Parelli caught Young Strangler Lewis, of Chicago, napping and won his way to victory with a body slam in the final fall of the main event of Promoter Alec B. Ross' wrestling and boxing show Tuesday night at the ball park.

Parelli scored the first fall in 17 minutes of wrestling with a flying headlock.

Lewis evened the match by winning the second fall in three minutes with a series of headlocks.

Parelli took the third and decisive fall in 4 minutes with a body slam.

Spike Stewart shaded Johnny Owens in a six-round boxing match which was one of the best staged in many weeks at the local arena.

Howard Scott, of Electra, outfought Frenchy LeFevre in a four-round mill.

Curley Robertson won a judges decision over Bud Scott of Electra in a four-round paperweight go.

Baer Facts

By ARTHUR "BUGS" BAER
(Copyright, 1928, by Universal Service)

NEW YORK, Sept. 18.—Both presidential candidates have launched their chatter excursions.

Before any man can become scoutmaster of America he must travel 20,000 country miles through the suburbs on the rear end of a Pullman.

It would be much easier to stay home and send out souvenir post-cards.

When ex-President Taft was going through the B. & O. tunnels under Baltimore a reporter asked him what he thought of the city.

Taft was a truthful man. All he could see was tunnel. But he wanted those fascinating votes. So he said:

"Finest tunnels I ever saw."

Which will be the recipe for this campaign. Hoover is in New Jersey. When he looks at the busy chimneys of Newark he will say:

"What handsome smoke."

Smith will hesitate for a minute in the freight yards of Junkview, Idaho, get a slant at three empty piano cases, one henhouse and four filling stations, and remark:

"What architect laid out this town? I want him to build my home."

Not that our candidates are citizens who evade the subject. When you are out for votes you take along the sugar and leave home the vinegar.

The candidates will stop at thousands of cities and will be convinced that each one makes Paris look like a bum in a sandstorm.

This has an effect on the people who are forced to live there. The chamber of commerce will swell up like a toad full of yeast cakes and decide that the candidate is the smartest guy who ever tried to open a bottle of milk with his thumb.

We know that it is flattery, but it sounds good.

But when you start to think it over and you see the rear end lights of the candidate's Pullman twinkling down the tracks, you think:

"If this is such a beautiful burg, why did he leave it so fast?"

There is nothing wrong with this method of oiling the constituency with sweet conversation and honeyed interpolations.

It's the small town that elects the candidate. And when you put the small towns all together they spell Washington.

YANKEES GAIN GAME ON A'S

Champs Beat Browns While Macks Lose to Indians

ST. LOUIS, Sept. 18. (AP)—The champion Yankees staggered through to a 14 to 11 victory over the Browns here today, after their panic-stricken manager had called upon his entire supply of available first line pitchers. The Yankees gained a full game over the defeated Athletics, and now lead by two games.

Miller Huggins now will have an off day to rest Heimach, Johnson, Pipgras, and Hoyt for the next battle in Chicago.

The champions got 18 hits today against 14 for the Browns. The victory gave the Yankees three out of four in the series and 12 out of 22 against the Browns for the season. Score:

Barons Win Opener Of Southern Series

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., Sept. 18. (AP)—Sandy Bigelow, hard-hitting right fielder, paced the Birmingham Barons to a 3-to-2 victory over the Memphis Chicks in the first game today of the series to decide the championship of the Southern association.

It was Bigelow's mighty drive over the right field bleachers in the last half of the third that gave the Barons a margin the Chicks could not overcome.

With the exception of the third, when he was touched for four hits, Kelly pitched masterful ball for the visitors. Eddie Wells was invincible except for the lone spurt by the Chicks.

COYOTES TAKE 1ST SCRIMMAGE

Pack Shows Well Preparing For Lawton Game

Driving his men hard for their first game of the season Friday afternoon with Lawton, Okla., high school at Lawton, Coach Bud McCallum put the Wichita Falls high school Coyotes through their first scrimmage of the season Tuesday.

The high school coaches expect one of the hardest games of the season when the team meets the Oklahomans Friday. Lawton has a record of 21 straight victories.

No extremely brilliant flashes featured the scrimmage yesterday. Captain Harvey Black displayed as much ability on off tackle runs as he did last year while Dick Hambrick got away for several fair runs around ends.

The defense of Martin Hodgkiss at center, who tore through the line for several good tackles was the feature of the line play.

Howard Scott, Jud Bell, Jack West, John Harrell, and Ross Says also showed up well as linemen.

Trinity Contest Test for Aggies

Opener to Prove Worth of Alsabrook at End

COLLEGE STATION, Texas, Sept. 18.—Aggie dopesters are keeping a weather eye on the Trinity game this week with an especial view towards ascertaining the efficiency of Bible's theory of converting Pinky Alsabrook into a wing instead of a halfback this year. It is no new job for the youngster from Cisco for all of his work for the Big Dam Loboes for five seasons was on the extremity of the line. His versatility was really displayed last year when he lettered at half on the championship A. & M. team.

This year A. & M. is long on backs and short on ends. Hence the call for Alsabrook to go back to the job where he starred in scholastic circles. The choice is by no means due to experience, however.

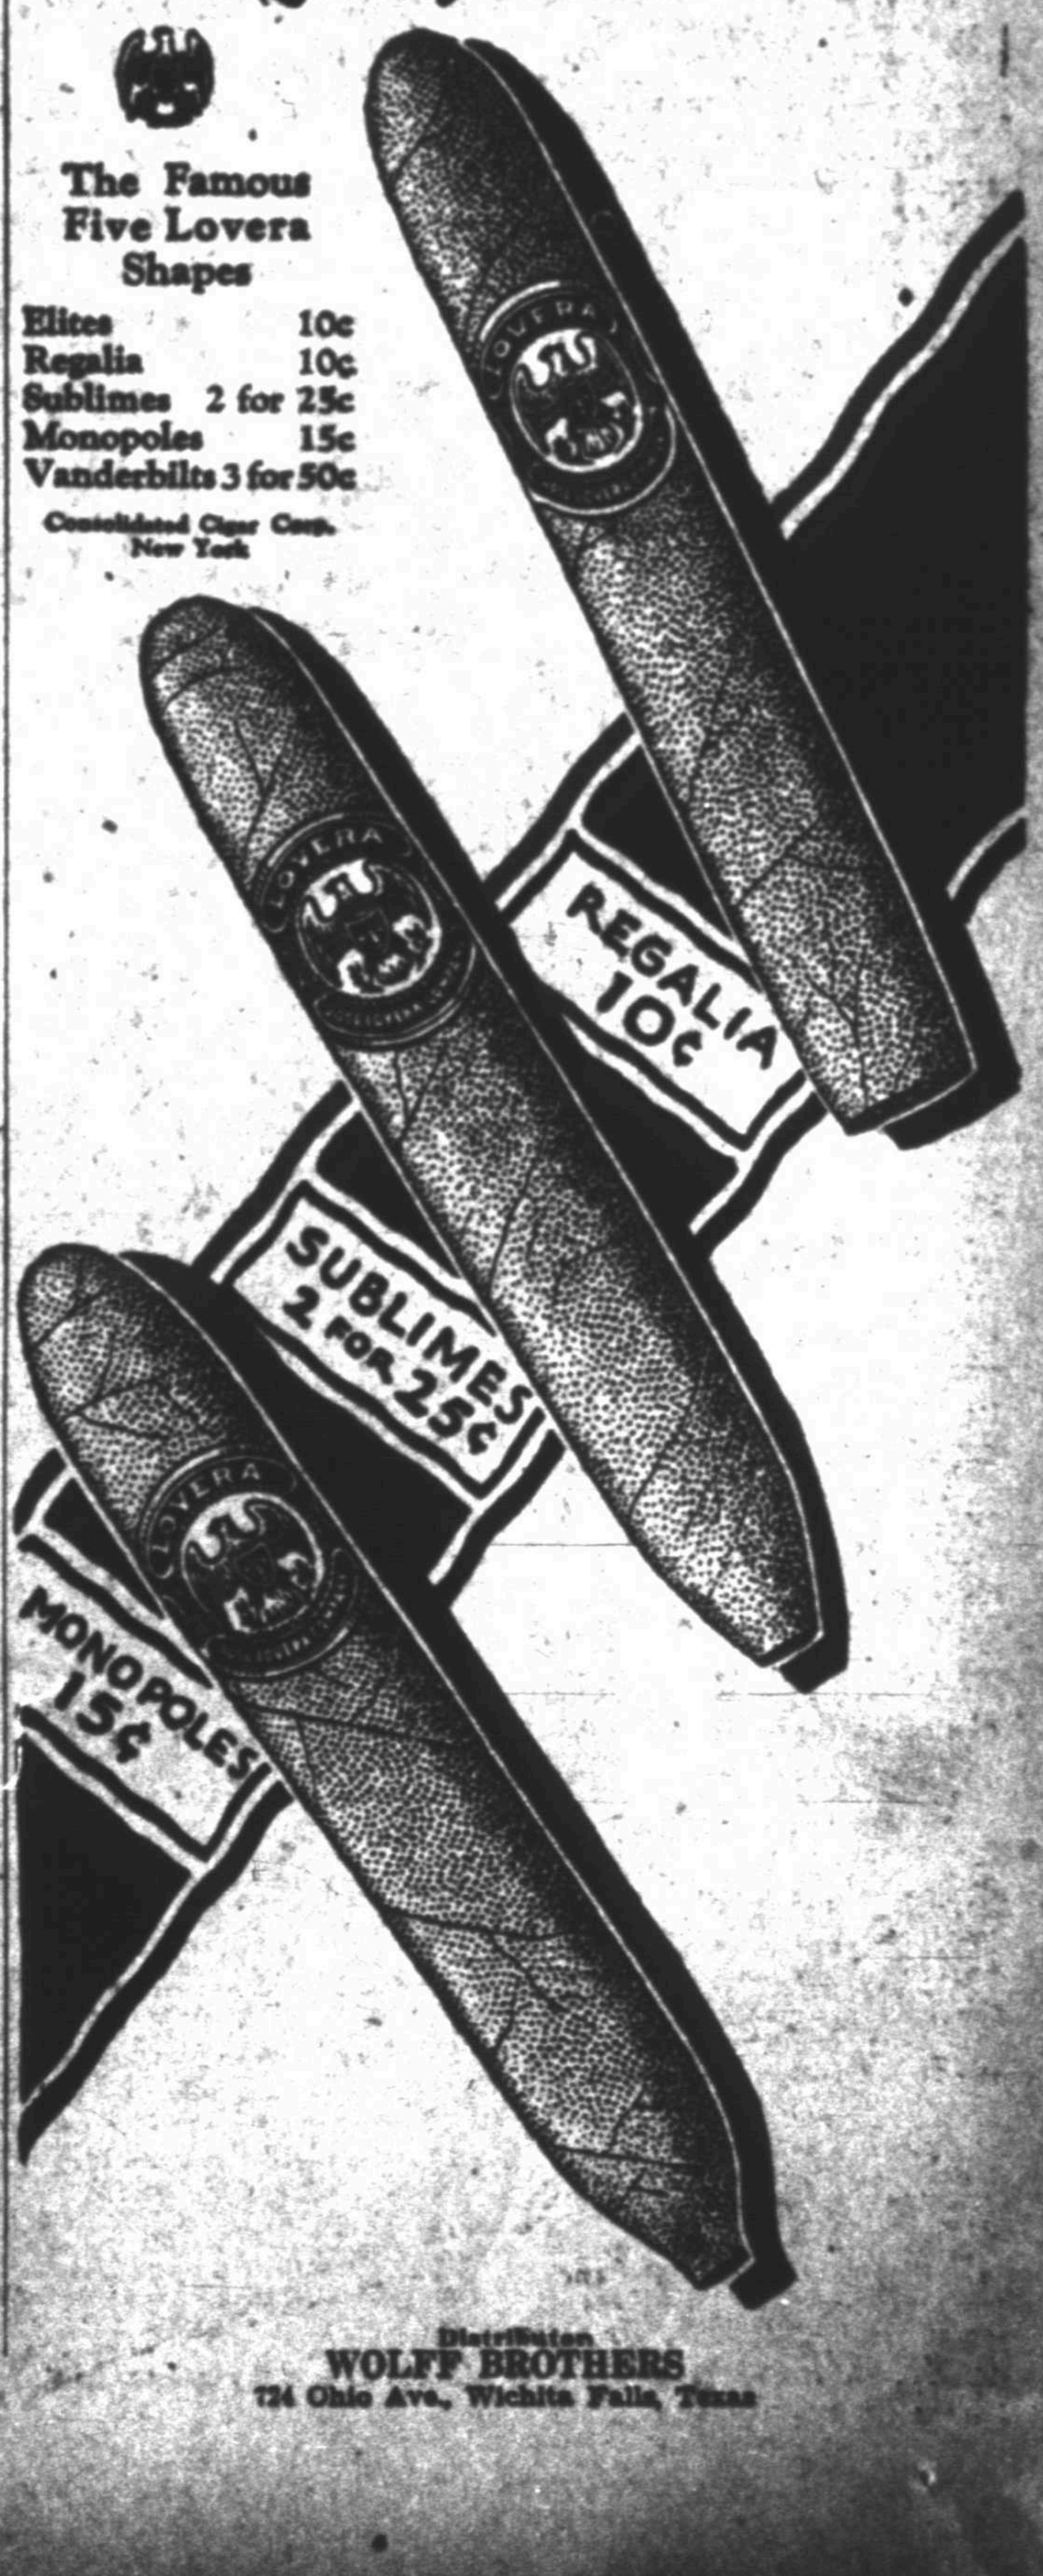

The coaches hope to have this shift and one or two others designed to bolster up the new line perfected in games with Trinity and Southwestern in order to have the team in its season shape when the first big intersectional contest takes place at Dallas on Oct. 6. The Aggies look for Sewanee to be stronger than in several seasons and there is no over-confidence in the outlook for that battle.

DELUXE TRAVEL IN BIG AIRSHIP

Dining and Smoking Rooms On British Giant

LONDON, Sept. 18. (US)—Dining in the clouds, with an after-dinner stroll along the promenade decks, followed by a cigar in the smoking lounge, will lbe realized when construction of the giant British airship is completed.

Work on the new leviathan of the air is being rushed as preparations are being made at Friedrichshafen for initial trial flights of the newly constructed dirigible, Count Zeppelin. The British vessel, the R-101—sister ship to the R-100 in which Commander Burney hopes to cross the Atlantic—is to be used in the England-to-India service.

Plans and designs of the R-101 have been kept strictly secret hitherto, and construction has been carried on for months past in an air almost of mystery. Details of the luxury accommodations for the 100 passengers that the R-101 will carry have been disclosed, however, to Universal Service.

Big Dining Room

A dining room to seat 50 persons at a time is one of the chief features of the R-101. Thus, the entire list of passengers carried may be accommodated in two sittings as is the custom on the regular transatlantic liners.

Besides this, there will be a lounge, promenade decks and cabins with walls of stained plywood. The interior of the airship will be heated with steam radiators, supplied by the engines, which will be cooled with boiling water on the evaporative-cooling system.

A special smoking room will be installed on the lower deck, which will house also a large electric kitchen and additional sleeping berths.

To man the R-101, a crew of 50 will be carried. It is planned to put the airship into service along the empire routes to Egypt, India, Australia and the Cape. One of its first journeys will be from Ismailia, Egypt, to Karachi.

Skeleton Built

The immense skeleton of the vessels is being assembled by 500 workmen. It rises more than 140 feet above the ground. Sections of the girder structure have been completed on the floor of the huge shed and raised on end for assembling. Most of the framework now is in position, and one of the 16 gas bags, all of which are ready, has been lifted into place.

Lieut.-Col. V. C. Richmond, who is in charge of design and construction, explained in an interview that special type valves, invented at the station, would enable the ship to cope with vertical air currents of a velocity of 4,000 feet a minute—the speed encountered in the heart of a violent thunderstorm.

AN ANALYSIS OF HOOVER'S ADDRESS

Editor, The Record News:

Herbert Hoover's address at Newark again demonstrates his commanding grasp of the nation's problems as related to industry and the workers, and is convincing evidence that from the standpoint of the self interest of these people and their families and homes he must be elected president of the United States.

Not only that, but the record and policies of the Republican party, upon which Mr. Hoover stands, go hand in hand with his ability safely to steer the nation through the problems which will arise affecting agriculture, industry and the people as a whole in the next four years.

The speech recalls clearly what can be accomplished when a tried and capable hand is at the helm, and it shows what may be expected from Mr. Hoover and a Republican congress in keeping the nation progressive and abreast of the problems that will arise in the days to come.

Mr. Hoover showed that real wages and standards of living have advanced more in the past seven and one-half years than during any similar period in the history of this or any other country. When the Republican party came to power in 1920, between 5,000,000 and 6,000,000 unemployed walked the streets and fear of hunger haunted a quarter of our 23,000,000 families.

A nation-wide unemployment conference under the chairmanship of Mr. Hoover restored employment and instituted a permanent program that has brought steadily rising wages and improved standards of living while other nations still struggle to regain pre-war levels.

The two great Republican policies which have conducted most of the security and prosperity of labor are the protective tariff and restriction of immigration. The Democratic party, traditional foe of protection, hints in the Houston platform that the Republican policy is the only sound one, but holds up as an ideal the discredited Underwood tariff which brought disaster to labor during the Wilson administration. A tariff bill built on the pattern again would bring ruin.

Under direction of Mr. Hoover the reorganized department of commerce undertook the promotion of American foreign trade on a scale never before attempted by any government. As a result, our export trade is 58 per cent higher than pre-war and other nations in the war have scarcely recovered pre-war levels.

More than two million American families earn their living producing goods for export. Another million families earn their livelihood in the manufacture of raw materials imported in exchange for the exports. That is how foreign trade affects every man's pocket book.

"The measure of our national prosperity, of our stability, of our hope of further progress at this time, is the measure of what we may risk through a change in present policies" Mr. Hoover declared. "More than once in our national history a change in policies in a time of advancement has been quickly followed by a turn toward disaster." Surely, sensible men and women are not going to invite that disaster now by doing that which will change the policies of the national administration at Washington.

Our economic system has abuses, Mr. Hoover said, but it cannot be built toward perfection of poverty. "It must be uplifted and upheld by the willing and eager hands of the whole people. They will uphold it if our economic life be built for the whole people, not for any special group."

To assure this sort of progress our first necessity is to assure the ability and character of our leadership.

Such leadership the Republican party this year offers to the electorate of the nation, in Hoover and Curtis and the Maine election shows that the people will be swayed by phantom considerations. They will not exchange their prosperity and welfare of their homes for illusions.

Intinerant and Poor Stunt Flier Credited With Idea of Airmail

CHICAGO, Sept. 18.—An itinerant and financially-burdened flyer and his press agent must be given credit for inaugurating America's air mail service, according to Harold Crary of the American Air transport association. The aviator was Paul Beck, a student flyer.

In 1912 Beck was performing airplane feats at Coney Island near Cincinnati, but the crowds were not coming to the show. Beck's press agent sought a way to get the aviator into the newspapers and conceived the idea of inducing the postal department to authorize the aviator to carry mail between Coney Island and California, Ohio, a distance of four miles. The postoffice department authorized the establishment, without cost, of an air mail route between the two points, only souvenir postal cards to be carried. The flights duly and safely made in the evening on the three specified days and 560 pieces of first-class mail were handled at the regular first-class rate of postage.

Then 10 years ago the postoffice department officially inaugurated the present day air mail system of flying army planes between Philadelphia and New York. That insignificant mileage has jumped until today the mail planes are flying at the rate of more than 8,000,000 miles a year and in 1929 they will fly 10,000,000 miles on authorized mail routes which serve 102 cities in 35 states.

From the 560 pieces of mail Beck handled in three days, way back in 1912, the mail planes are now carrying from one-third to one-half million letters every 24 hours, exclusive of parcel mail, express and passengers.

School - College Notes

The first general assembly of the year was held during the 30-minute period Tuesday morning. Much time was taken in getting each student in his assigned seat as the seating plan was not given out to the students until Monday.

S. H. Rider, the principal, stated that he thought the students should not be encouraged to become members of too many clubs this year. "The individual students should not be encouraged to belong to more than one club, but he should do his work well in that particular one," he said.

Betty Love Rugeley, president of the Girl Reserves, gave an address of welcome to the new students, and also to the old ones. Patsy Mills welcomed the college students.

Homer Donohue gave a violin solo as his means of making the boys welcome at the school. He was accompanied at the piano by Betty Jo Allred.

The Girl Reserves concluded their program by presenting two vocal numbers, "Call of the Fire" and "Around the Campfire."

Several changes have been made in the system of parking over that of last year, according to S. H. Rider. In previous years, all vehicles have been parking on an angle with the curb, like the system used in the downtown district. Starting Wednesday morning, all drivers will be expected to park their cars parallel with the curb. No parking will be permitted in front of the school or at the intersection of Avenue H and the boulevard facing the building. A traffic officer will assist in getting all vehicles parked correctly Wednesday morning.

During the past year no room was available for the college students to use as a study hall. With the addition of four new rooms to the building this year, the students have a room they may go to at any period of the day and study. Room 222 is open to all college students every period of the day with the exception of the second period. Room 140 may be used during this time.

A meeting of the Girls club will be held during the 30-minute period Friday morning in the main auditorium, according to Betty Love Rugeley, president of the club.

The Wichitan staff members met Monday morning to organize. A plan was suggested by R. O. Jonas, faculty advisor, that is expected to help the reporters very much in their work. The plan suggested was to have a typewritten sheet posted in the Wichitan office each week, instructing the individual writer on the activities he is to write up during the week.

All members on the staff for the 1929 Coyote, the high school year book, met in the Coyote office Monday. Many discussions were made pertaining to the book and plans were made for the year.

The staff for the 1929 Coyote is as follows: Wendell Bush, editor in chief; Elmer Parish, business manager; Otto Juhl, athletics; and Billy Welty, art editor. Miss Louise Kelly is sponsor of the annual and J. W. Williams is business sponsor.

The first general assembly of the year will be held in the main auditorium of the school Tuesday morning during the half hour period, according to S. H. Rider, dean. The Girl Reserves will be in charge of the program as they have in the past.

Twenty-one new students enrolled in the high school Monday, according to the information given out at the registrar's office.

OLDEST SALOON IS NOW VACANT

Old Absinthe House in New Orleans Closed

NEW ORLEANS, Sept. 18. (UP)—At the corner of Bourbon and Bienville street, in the historic Vieux Carre of New Orleans, stands America's oldest saloon, weather-worn and awaiting conversion into a cabaret, antique shop or a grocery store.

The two-story brick building is known as the "Old Absinthe House" and has reached the age of 145 years.

Surrounded by numerous antique shops, studios, cabarets and other small shops such as compose most of the business efforts of the old French quarter, the Old Absinthe House remained true in tradition until the eighteenth amendment shuttered its doors—so far as the sale of its renowned product was concerned.

Several times since the advent of the Volstead amendment the old place blossomed forth in an effort to regain its once famous reputation, but each time it has failed dismally. The last effort resulted in an unannounced call of a squadron of Uncle Sam's dry sleuths and the place soon was made the victim of a padlock. It recently was released after a year's subsidence to the padlock but since then no one has been found to reopen the doors of the ancient landmark.

The old building has remained in one family since it was acquired shortly after its construction. The heirs of Francisco Juncadella, a Spaniard, retain title to the saloon.

In the confines of the Old Absinthe House, where thousands of notables have tourneyed to view the ancient settings and to sign the yellowing register kept for visitors, are still to be found practically all the early period fixtures, including old paintings and two absinthe drippers.

Within the walls of this brick and concrete building many challenges to duels for minor infringements or insults were made and likewise many accepted, the principals, with seconds arranged, repairing to the famous dueling grounds of City Park to settle their grievances with gun and rapier.

While the ancient building is still owned by the Spanish heirs of the Juncadella family, the Vieux Carre association, formed for the purpose of perpetuating and caring for the historic old French district, has charge of the structure.

Texas Oratory To Spur Voters

DALLAS, Texas, Sept. 18. (UP)—Flights of oratory intended to bring Texas voters to the polls in great numbers will characterize political activities in Texas during the next few weeks.

Democratic political rallies will be held in nearly all communities Saturday in Tarrant county. These will be climaxed by a county-wide rally Saturday night on the courthouse lawn in Fort Worth. Congressman Guinn Williams of Decatur will be the principal speakers.

Congressman James Young of Kaufman and Lieut. Gov. Barry Miller of Dallas will speak at Cameron, Milam county, next month. Democratic headquarters here is scheduling similar meetings as rapidly as arrangements can be made through county committees.

Anti-Smith headquarters announce that several speakers have been assigned to various sections of the state for the extensive campaign started by that organization this week.

Homes Destroyed By Modern Girls

DENVER, Sept. 18.—The modern girl is neglecting her charge as a home maker and is destroying the American home by occupying too many "white collar" jobs, according to Mrs. C. C. Casey in an address before the Colorado Federation of Woman's clubs in annual session here.

"The American girl," she said, "is facing today the greatest tragedy in the history of womankind. I am not an alarmist but statistics show there is one divorce for every six marriages. The real job for a girl is that of a home maker. The modern girl is neglecting that job.

"Parents are largely to blame for failing to stimulate their children's interest in practical education. The public schools have too little demand for practical courses such as domestic science, nursing and manual training. In fact unless the modern girl steps back into her job as home maker, the schools will be forced to close courses along these lines that are now open to women. I would consider this nothing short of a crime."

Mrs. Casey, chairman of the educational committee of the State Woman's organization, recommended the radio in preference to the movie as a source of education for the youngsters of today, stating that in her opinion, the radio was more wholesome and better adapted to rural community use than the silver screen.

Health and Diet Advice

By DR. FRANK McCOY
Author of "The Fast Way to Health"

 Questions in Regard to Health and Diet Will Be Answered by Dr. McCoy, Who Can Be Addressed in Care of This Paper

Baby's Teeth

Baby should be taken to the dentist at least once a year, from the first to about the sixth year, and after that the dental inspection and necessary treatment should be given every six months. The temporary teeth of the baby should be kept in as healthy condition as possible to enable the child to thoroughly chew his food, to prevent tooth decay, deformity of the jaws, and also for the sake of appearances and to assist the baby in learning perfect speech.

If these first baby teeth are not properly cared for, the permanent teeth are liable to come in at bad angles and bring about a deformity of the jaws which will be hard to correct. The first 20 baby teeth should be brushed daily, or wiped with a cheesecloth or absorbent cotton which has been moistened and dipped in bicarbonate of soda. The dentist can, however, by the skillful use of his instruments, remove premature decay and make temporary fillings which will preserve the first teeth long enough for the child to receive their full use.

The child's diet during the first six years is especially important in the development of the permanent teeth. Four molars, or back teeth, appear about the sixth year, and these are often neglected due to the fact that the parents think they are only temporary teeth. These first molars form the keystone of the dental arch; all other permanent teeth either grow in front or back of these first four molars. If the reader is over 20 years of age he will find, if he looks into his mirror, that either these first back teeth are entirely missing, or they are well filled with silver or gold fillings. The average reader can forgive himself for this, as there was very little known on the subject of dental prophylaxis when he was a baby. We now know that if the baby is fed properly there is no excuse for dental decay if the services of the dentist are employed at regular intervals, and the teeth kept clean by being well brushed two or three times daily.

In the past few years we have gathered together some important facts as regards the care of the teeth in both the child and the adult. Here is a summary of good "rules" for everyone to follow:

Avoid mushy foods.

Use a minimum amount of sugars and starches.

Use a carefully balanced diet containing plenty of raw vegetables.

Eat coarse foods that scour and clean the teeth when they are well chewed.

Masticate all foods thoroughly to improve digestion and exercise the teeth.

Brush the teeth vigorously after every meal to remove decomposing food particles which may have lodged between the teeth or in cavities.

See a dentist at least every six months.

Do not wait for a tooth to ache before seeing the dentist.

Remember, these are rules for both the adult and the child. If you have children, it is your duty to them to see that such rules are carefully followed.

Questions and Answers

Question—K. L. writes: "Some time ago I was examined by a doctor who said I had mitral regurgitation of the heart as well as an exaggerated dorsal curvature of the spine. He advised me to quit all exercise whatsoever. I am 18 years old and feel that I should forget everything that he told me, but what would you advise?"

Answer—You can at least partially correct the spinal curvature by taking the proper kind of corrective exercises. Get the advice of some gymnasium instructor regarding both the exercises for your spine and other exercises which will help in curing your heart trouble.

Question—L. H. asks: "Is there an oil made from poppy seeds that may be used as a salad oil and is it a good food?"

Answer—Poppy oil, extracted from the poppy seed, is popular in parts of Europe as a table oil. It is of a pale yellow color, practically odorless and has a very pleasing flavor. The inferior grades are used in soapmaking and like products. As far as its food value is concerned, it has no special merit.

Question—Miss B. asks: "Will you please tell me what causes my hands to be exceedingly dry—so dry they often wrinkle in the palms? This is mostly at night. Also, I have a craving for fresh fruit and cool tart drinks—anything cold and juicy. I have been this way for several years."

Answer—Satisfy your craving for fresh fruit by eating nothing else for a few days. This treatment will help to correct the dryness of your skin. For temporary relief, rub cocoa butter on the skin. Use a small amount over the entire body each night before you retire.

FAVORITE JOKES OF FAMOUS FOLK

As Told by Them to FRANK E. NICHOLSON

By GEORGE JEAN NATHAN

Lay all the dramatic critics end to end and you will find that George Jean Nathan is one of the best known dramatic critics in the world and is also associate editor of the American Mercury.

George Jean Nathan

A contemporary of Nathan's told me that once George asked an actor what, in his estimation, was the worst possible audience to play before.

"Well," said the actor, thoughtfully, "I imagine it would be one composed of armless men."

"Yes," replied Nathan, "that might be the worst—but it strikes me that it also would be the safest too!"

I thought that Nathan would tell me that as his favorite bit of humor, but George said, "No, I like best of all Mark Twain's celebrated remark, 'The more I see of human beings, the more I admire dogs.'" (Mr. Nathan is a critic, you know.)

Joan a Barmaid Says Dean Inge

CAMBRIDGE, Eng., Sept. 18. (U P)—Miracles were rejected by Dean W. R. Inge, the "gloomy dean" of St. Paul's cathedral, in an address last night before the modern churchmen's conference.

He criticized the Catholic church for its "mythical saints and bogus miracles."

He left it to historians to decide whether England's patron saint, St. George, "killed dragons or whether he was a dishonest army contractor who poisoned Roman soldiers with bad beef."

"Historians," he added, "may convince us whether St. Joan of Arc was all that French patriotism, the pope and Bernard Shaw have declared her to be, or whether she was a barmaid who became a regimental mascot."

Dean Inge also rejected the "patriotic figments upon which the children of all countries are reared and which cause wars by the national arrogance and hatred so fostered."

Dakota Storms Cause Damage of $100,000

WASHINGTON, Sept. 18. (UP)—Damage totaling $100,000 was caused by last week's storm in Nebraska, South and North Dakota, the Red Cross was advised today. National relief workers were ordered to remain in the three states to render all aid possible.

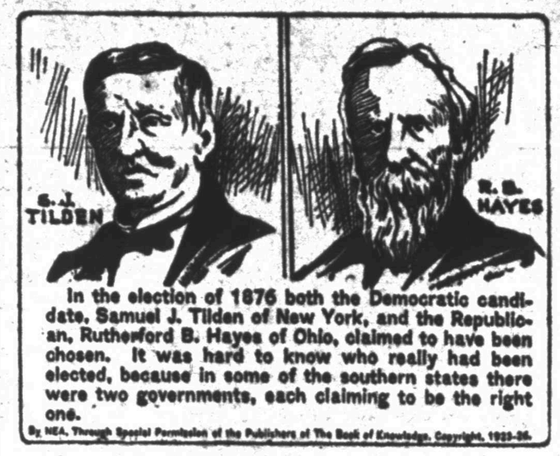

Fireman Dies When Truck Rams Trolley

LOUISVILLE, Ky., Sept. 18. (UP)—One fireman was killed instantly and four others, a street car motorman and a passenger on the car, were injured when a fire truck, speeding to answer an alarm, crashed into the rear of a street car at a downtown intersection. Leo M. McGee, 28, pipeman, was killed.

THE BOOK OF KNOWLEDGE (403) OUR PRESIDENTS

In the election of 1876 both the Democratic candidate, Samuel J. Tilden of New York, and the Republican, Rutherford B. Hayes of Ohio, claimed to have been chosen. It was hard to know who really had been elected, because in some of the southern states there were two governments, each claiming to be the right one.

By NEA, Through Special Permission of the Publishers of The Book of Knowledge. Copyright, 1923-28.

Hayes called back the soldiers from the southern states, which proved another blow to the alliance between negroes and carpetbaggers.

A special court was appointed, called an Electoral Commission, and decided in favor of Hayes. But many still believe Tilden was elected.

The Mississippi river was made deeper at its broad mouth, a great advantage to the city of New Orleans as it enabled vessels to pass in and out of the river without trouble. Coinage of silver dollars was begun again in 1878 and the government began to give gold and silver in exchange for paper money from those who desired the silver. (To Be Continued)

NEW YORK COTTON

NEW YORK, Sept. 18. (AP)—An early advance on the storm news was followed by sharp declines in the cotton market today under realizing and southern selling, accompanied by talk of an easing spot basis. December broke from 17.80 to 17.48 and closed at that figure, the general market closing easy at net declines of 15 to 21 points.

The opening was steady at an advance of 11 to 19 points. Active months soon showed net gains of 22 to 26 points on covering, combined with trade and commission house buying on reports of heavy rains in eastern belt coast sections, and the relatively firm showing of Liverpool.

October quickly sold up to 17.83, and March to 17.72 but demand seemed to be supplied by southern selling and realizing. There was another flurry of buying on the posting of the weather map confirming the early rain reports, but indications that the storm would work northeastward out of the belt, and prospects for clearing weather tomorrow, brought in selling on the bulges. Business tapered off during midday, as if traders were awaiting further developments, but the market's response to the storm news seemed to disappoint recent buyers, and the late decline was accompanied by reports of an easier spot basis in the south. There also was a little selling of October which some traders thought might possibly be against pending shipments from the south. October broke to 17.40 and March to 17.32 in late trading. Closing prices were the lowest of the day on all positions.

Private cables reported London and Bombay buying as well as covering in the Liverpool market influenced by the rains in the eastern belt: also an improved inquiry for cotton cloth from South America and Africa, but that yarns were in limited demand.

Exports today 44,020 bales, making 687,613 so far this season. Port receipts 85,181. U. S. port stocks 691,482.

NEW ORLEANS COTTON

NEW ORLEANS, Sept. 18. (AP)—News that the tropical storm had recurved away from the cotton belt, coupled with liquidation and hedge selling, sent cotton prices down here today. The close was easy at the day's bottom prices, which showed a net loss of 15 to 23 points.

Liverpool was 6 to 16 points better than due and first trades here showed gains of 5 to 8 points. Prices advanced on reports of heavy rains in the eastern belt in the path of the storm, October rising to 17.10, December to 17.18 and January to 17.15, 14 to 20 points above the previous close.

When the weather map was posted showing the storm had recurved to the northeast away from the belt recent buyers liquidated and more or less hedge selling developed. Before the offerings were absorbed October traded down to 16.89, December to 16.99 and January to 17.00, 15 to 21 points below the early highs and 1 to 3 points under the previous close.

The market ruled steady for a time and rallied 5 to 9 points but turned easy in late trading on a renewal of liquidation and hedge selling and made new lows. October closed at 16.70, December at 16.79 and January at 16.83, 32 to 40 points below the highs.

Port receipts, 85,481; for week, 204,001; for season, 940,759; last season, 1,299,593. Exports, 44,020; for week, 130,323; for season, 685,538; last season, 729,903. Tightening Money Halts Climb in Stock Market Trading; Few Gains

By BROADAN WALL
Universal Service Financial Expert

NEW YORK, Sept. 18.—Aftermath of the mid-month money turnover tightened money and halted the advance in the stock market today. The favored industrials were rolling ahead into new high ground early in the day when the banks called $20,000,000 and thereby influenced heavier liquidation and steadily increasing short selling. Coincident with the bank's action, the treasury announced that $29,000,000 would be withdrawn from this district as of tomorrow.

Except for Warner Brothers and a few others, most issues were held to losses of 2 points or less while a few stocks such as American Smelting, Byers and Yellow Truck held their advances to the close. Byers scored the best gain of the day as the pool therein belatedly renewed operation coincident with reports of increasing returns from its specially patented wrought iron output.

Steel, General Motors and other standard industrials all gave ground, as did the rails. Oils remained dull and dipped fractionally. The call rate jumped from the 7 per cent renewal to 7½, with funds apparently scarcer at the close.

Funds Withdrawn

Calling of loans was the direct result of the withdrawal of funds by the government, which in turn was made necessary by the retirement of the third Liberty 4¼ per cent bonds.

From the present condition of the money market, the call rate could easily reach 12 per cent or higher. Those who have been most active on the bull side have been less enthusiastic for the last few days and apparently welcome a reaction at this time as they feel it will give them the foundation to carry out their forecast of "no serious break in stock prices before election."

Warner Bros. Sought

Warner Brothers and the other motion picture stocks were the main targets for the professional raiding that increased in volume as the close approached. From all indications, however, the Warners are going through with their expansion plans. Most active in the bearish activity are those who at times work on the bull side with the westerners who now dominate dealings so they do not attack recent industrial favorites that are sponsored by that group. There was some short selling in General Motors steel and other standard industrials but most of the offerings represented hasty saving of profits by followers of the group movements therein.

Continental Motors was an outstanding actively strong feature early, buying being based entirely on report of entrance into the airplane motor field.

Some idea of the strain of the big trading days on exchange members is given by the fact that several members refused offers to take an additional book on Continental for while being specialist in a stock is attractive at most times those who refused already had too much work to do.

Tyco Prominent

Pools in American Can, Briggs and other rendered scale support but quit trying to push their stocks higher against the reactionary trend as the close approached. Tyco Products assumed sudden prominence on report of earnings close to four times the dividend. Schulte and United Cigar Stores were quiet although important meeting of executives of the two companies was held early in the day.

Yellow Truck was taken in hand and moved higher until the closing reaction assumed real force. Operations were not alone for Cutten account, it was claimed, but also for the other western group that has been associated with Cutten in recent bullish operations. The main Cutten holdings of Yellow were secured many months ago and insofar as any bullish results obtained by the company itself are concerned they are likely to be held for many months more. The favorable aspect of Yellow Truck is based on very long pull possibilities founded on the idea that General Motors will use the company for expanding in the motor truck and bus field.

Grain

CHICAGO REVIEW
By THOMAS TEMPLE HOYNE

CHICAGO, Sept. 18. (US)—All the grain futures, except September rye, closed lower today, but in the action of the wheat market there was a warning to bears to be careful. Selling of wheat is getting the sellers nowhere. Any bullish turn in the news might twist an oversold wheat market into a very strong position.

At the close wheat was ¼ to ½ off; corn was ⅝ to 1½ down; oats were ¼ to ½ lower; rye was 1 lower to ¼ higher.

Bear news on wheat has saturated the trade. For days now the situation has looked so depressive that a bull turn has seemed impossible. Everyone knows that North America has a record yield, that the United States' visible supply is over 90,000,000 bushels, the Canadian marketings are enormous.

For more than a month everyone has known that this would be the situation at this time, and for a couple of months wheat went down and down in price. But for the last week or 10 days it has refused to break farther.

The conclusion that is worth considering is that wheat has for the present discounted all the bearish influences, that shorts have sold all the wheat they dare to sell, that many of them will be glad to cover at a very small decline below the present level if they get the chance.

The few traders who are bullish and the great outside public that is not in the market at all are waiting, ready to buy wheat on the first development of real strength, confident that a decided bull market is coming from some point near the present level between now and election day.

Some little thing may start one. An announcement from the department of agriculture, a statement in a political speech, or the mere crystallization of opinion in favor of Hoover with the idea that his election means an era of renewed prosperity throughout the country.

There is nothing certain about grain markets except that they go down when it seems as if they could not break and go up when it seems as if they could not advance. Over and over again they prove the judgment of good grain men to be at fault.

It is wise, therefore, for the cautious trader not to get so set in his view of the present market that he believes it is impossible for it to advance.

Two constitutions, that of the United States and that of the Advertising club, were discussed as members of the Wichita Falls Ad club observed "constitution" week at a luncheon Tuesday noon.

Fathers-in-Law to Back Triple Hubby

HUGOTON, Kan., Sept. 18.—H. S. Pierce may be facing triple charges of bigamy and wife desertion, but two of his three father-in-laws are backing him up.

Pierce came here about a year ago in quest of romance, making his way from Garden City. He soon left for parts unknown, presumably Denver, and his wife departed for Akron, Ohio, to visit relatives. There she met to her surprise, Mrs. Pierce No. 1 and learned that she was Mrs. Pierce No. 2.

Returning to Garden City and Hugoton, she filed charges of desertion and extradition papers soon brought the return of her husband

He returned, not alone, but with Mrs. Pierce No. 3—a pretty young girl with a 5-months-old baby.

He denied that he had ever married Mrs. Pierce No. 2. That denial, however, did not bring any laxity from Mrs. Pierce No. 2 who swore that he had married her and continued the prosecution.

When arrested, his bond of $1,000 was signed by father-in-laws, No. 2 and No. 3.
