Beirut building collapses; Six believed dead

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — A deserted four-story building damaged by a bomb a year ago collapsed today as French peacekeeping troops prepared to demolish it, and five Lebanese workers and a French soldier were reported killed.

Five people, both French and Lebanese, were dug out alive from the wreckage, rescue workers said. Residents said they believed as many as six soldiers and eight Lebanese workers were in the building when it collapsed.

The state radio said five Lebanese workers were killed. At about 2 p.m. — three hours after the building collapsed — the body of a French soldier was removed, rescue workers said.

Maj. Alain de Lestrade, spokesman for the French contingent of the multinational peacekeeping force in Lebanon, said two other French soldiers were injured, one seriously and in "precarious" condition.

The building had been judged unsafe for habitation since it was bombed June 11, 1982, during the first week of the Israeli invasion of Lebanon. The blast sheared off apartments on one side and killed an estimated 19 people.

Residents of the Lighthouse district in mostly Moslem west Beirut saw the shabby building slide to the ground at 11 a.m. (4 a.m. CST).

French troops rushed to the scene, tore off their shirts and started digging with their hands in the gray dust, twisted iron bars and large slabs of concrete to reach their trapped comrades.

The French soldiers are part of the peacekeeping force requested by the Lebanese government last fall after the evacuation of Palestinian guerrillas from the Lebanese capital following a protracted Israeli siege. France has 2,000 soldiers in the 5,400 man force.

Assad Germanos, Lebanon's chief military prosecutor, arrived at the collapsed building within minutes and said, "it was an accident. There are some injured. I am not sure how many."

A French major at the scene, who declined to be identified, said a demolition squad was bringing down part of the building because it was becoming dangerous, but that by 10 a.m., "the building started slipping."

Autopsies ordered in store shootings

ODESSA — Autopsies have been ordered following a shootout that left a convenience store clerk and a robbery suspect dead here Tuesday afternoon.

Police said they were called to the Ready-Mart store at 4812 Andrews Highway about 3:30 p.m. and found the clerk lying behind the counter. He was identified as David Lee Slaughter, 33, of 2412 Windsor Drive.

The robbery suspect, 23-year-old Daniel Nunez Patino of 2406 Park Blvd., was found slumped across the gas pump island. He appeared to have been shot in the back with a large caliber handgun.

Patino carried no identifiction but was later indentified by relatives who called police to inquire if a shooting had taken place, according to Lt. Rusty Baker.

Baker said Patino was wearing two pairs of trousers and had two towels wrapped around his waist in an apparent attempt to disguise his appearance. Recovered near his body was a .22 caliber pistol and a paper sack containing $295.

Slaughter had been shot in the upper chest. A .357 caliber pistol was recovered in the store. Both men were pronounced dead at the scene by Justice of the Peace Manuel Valles.

Delayed celebration

Cooler temperatures and threatening clouds delayed Fourth of July fireworks at Cub Stadium until Tuesday night. Hot weather the next few days, however, is expected to explode with temperatures once again skyrocketing into the middle 90s. Only a slight chance of thunderstorms remains to dampen the July spirit — and drought.

Reagan to help steel industry

WASHINGTON (AP) — In a matter of an hour, on opposite ends of the country, the Reagan administration managed to take care of two political chores.

President Reagan played to two unlikely audiences, steelworkers and unionized teachers, offering each politically important group something — but not everything — they wanted to hear.

Reagan stopped off in Los Angeles Tuesday on his way back to Washington after a four-day holiday at his ranch near Santa Barbara, Calif. He paused long enough to tell the American Federation of Teachers that despite their differences over merit pay for teachers, they agree on the need for greater discipline and higher academic standards in the classroom.

Moments after the president spoke, his special trade representative, Bill Brock, announced in Washington at nearly the last possible moment a series of steps that the president had decided upon to protect the domestic "specialty" steel industry from foreign competition.

The steel case had put the president in a difficult position, forcing him to choose between his often-stated preference for free trade and the needs of an industry in which employment has dropped from 60,000 to 40,000.

By talking to the American Federation of Teachers, the president was able to continue his campaign for changes in the nation's education program before a group of teachers that his aides conceded was less likely to be as hostile as he might have faced had he addressed the National Education Association.

That didn't stop approximately 150 of the 3,000 union convention delegates from walking out, to protest the president's education and human needs policies. But it also provided the scene of the president being applauded by the remaining teachers when he said:

"The AFT believes in stricter discipline codes in schools — including provisions to remove students who have histories of repeated disruptive behavior. And so do I."

"It's a group that has not been as quick to reject all of the president's ideas" as the NEA, said one White House official traveling with Reagan. Besides, the American Federation of Teachers is "not as ideological and political as the NEA on non-teacher issues," he said.

Still, the president and the American Federation of Teachers disagree over the issue of merit pay for teachers based on the quality of their work. Traditionally, teacher salaries have been based only on their training and years in the classroom.

Island residents try to resuscitate dying community

HOG HAMMOCK, Ga. (AP) — Residents of this tiny community on Sapelo Island, an hour's ferry ride from the mainland, are trying to save their unspoiled way of life without factories or tourists.

"The young people are all leaving, the old people are dying and nobody's having babies," said Mildred Grovner, 53, who has seen the community dwindle from several hundred residents to fewer than 90.

Residents want to spur the economy, but there are roadblocks to reckon with: no factories and no hotels are allowed.

"Unless we can come up with some sort of mechanism to attract the young people, Hog Hammock will die," said Benjamin Lewis, chairman of the Hog Hammock Community Foundation Inc., a group of community leaders trying to save the area.

"Hog Hammock is the only civilized, organized community on the Georgia coast inhabited totally by blacks that has not been infiltrated by commercialization," Lewis said.

Young people leave because the only jobs on the island are with the Department of Natural Resources or the University of Georgia's Marine Institute, and there aren't enough to go around.

Lewis has solved his personal employment problem by working as director of Development and College Relations at Savannah State College, but returns to the island as often as possible.

The Legislature recognized the uniqueness of Hog Hammock this year by setting up the Sapelo Island Heritage Authority to help preserve the area.

The legislation calls Hog Hammock the last community of its kind in Georgia and says it is in danger of being "irreparably altered" by progress.

"It is important to the citizens of the state of Georgia that this community, which reflects the past culture of this state, be preserved for the benefit of present and future generations," the legislation reads.

"The main interest of the community is not to change the environment here, to let it remain as peaceful as it can here," said Ronald Johnson, a Pan Am steward and part-time Hog Hammock resident.

Lewis said turning toward Hog Hammock's past may be a key to solving the problems of the present.

"There is enough expertise in Hog Hammock among the inhabitants to market their skills," Lewis said. "Uncommon, almost forgotten skills, like basket-weaving, net and wreath making are already being turned into cash, although not by Sapelo residents.

"Some of our people make wreaths and sell them for, say $2.50. When the wreaths finally get to market in gift shops they're going for $16 or $20 with just a little bit of spray paint and a decoration (added). We want to do the finished product here ourselves."

Brunswick lawyer Orian Douglas, who represents the Hog Hammock Foundation, said residents may renovate an abandoned building for use by some future business operation.

Muse president refuses to play by the rules

EDITOR'S NOTE: This is part four in a six-part series detailing commercial airlines — what they can do, how consumers should use them and how a travel agent can help.

By JIM PRESNELL
Business-Energy Writer

DALLAS — Michael Muse, president and chief executive of maverick air carrier Muse Air, knows exactly what kind of game the airline business is. He just refuses to play by the "rules."

Michael Muse and father M. Lamar Muse — former president of Southwest Airlines, mastermind of hotpants on female flight attendants and "Love" service — started Muse Air and came into Midland a year ago with new McDonnell-Douglas DC-9 Super 80 jets that cost less per-passenger to fly than any airline's costs throughout the industry.

Since that time, Muse Air has carried more than 250,000 people into or out of Midland, with an almost even ratio of departing and arriving passengers.

Muse Air will add Lubbock in August and San Antonio and Austin later this year as it expands Texas service to more major cities. "You can get real values on air travel in Texas," says the company president who helped keep it that way during 1982.

"The new little airline" has a unique no-smoking policy for a marketing tool, non-smokers' travel arrangements with special new cars and new hotel rooms, and a special in-flight magazine that is slated for September.

Muse Air Monthly, according to editors at Essex Publishing, Houston, will aim mostly at a male, upper-crust audience that is heavily executive. It will offer an ostensibly classier editorial product and advertising space than the inflight magazines of other air carriers.

Instead of an afterthought, the new magazine will be an integral part of the Muse marketing plan.

Muse Air has low flight costs — so it still makes money on a flight that could begin to cause major airlines to falter. The majors still risk financial ruin from matching reduced airfares in the current round of "fare wars."

Mike Muse has experience as a financial executive and a lawyer. He lauds American Airlines' recent moves to become more "reasonable" in pricing its flights. American abolished many confusing fares recently in favor of four basic fare types, with pricing based on miles traveled.

"It's hard to show a profit when your competitors are giving the product away. But their lower, restricted fare is our unrestricted fare," Muse said in a recent interview.

Muse Air lost $2.7 million in the first quarter of this year, but like many airlines it expects better results for the second quarter.

Mike Muse blames the loss on price wars within the industry. Continental Airlines' pricing has been "crazy" in some markets, he claims. But they, too, are beginning to realize that giving it away hurts all the airlines, Muse said.

"If anyone wants to go to L.A., get it while you can," Muse said of the current Los Angeles fare war from Midland which has priced the flight at $99 one-way. "Offering a lower fare can't steal passengers away" from other airlines, he said.

"Gimmicks on pricing policies won't work, either" in the airfare wars, according to Muse. He thinks the customer wants convenience and doesn't need "Stand on your head and eat peanuts" fares like the book-early SuperSaver on American.

"The major airlines are all a bunch of hogs," said Muse. "They're all driven by market share and to hell with profit. But good prices and services to match, that's the way to make money.

Woman wins right to sue Air Force doctors

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — A woman plagued for decades with headaches won the right to sue Air Force doctors for malpractice after an appeals court said her pain was partly caused by a needle plunged deep into the brain.

The 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals on Tuesday sent Sibyl Harrison's malpractice suit back to the U.S. District Court for Eastern Texas. The lower court had earlier ruled the suit was barred by a statute of limitations.

"In medical malpractice cases...the statute of limitations does not begin to run until after the patient discovers or...should discover his injury and its cause," Judge Henry Politz wrote for the three-judge panel.

The court said Mrs. Harrison, the wife of a retired airman, sought help for her recurring headaches from the Wilford Hall Hospital at Lackland Air Force Base in San Antonio in 1966.

According to the appeals court, Air Force Drs. Benjamin Allen and Richard Ashby suspected a brain tumor and decided to perform an X-ray examination, using two painful procedures requiring introduction of air into Mrs. Harrison's brain and spine.

A needle inserted into her skull for the first procedure was left in place during part of the second procedure, the opinion said.

In the following years, the woman's headaches continued and she suffered speech impairment, loss of memory and a burning sensation, Politz wrote.

Trying to find the cause and a cure for the headaches, the court said, Mrs. Harrison saw several doctors, a lawyer, a psychiatrist, and even wrote a letter to the president of the United States.

But in 1976, Mrs. Harrison's lawyer finally succeeded in inspecting the medical records himself.

"In less than a minute the decade-old mystery of Sibyl Harrison's enigmatic difficulties was solved: During the course of the tests at Wilford Hall the needle from the ventriculogram had plunged into the center of (her) brain," the court said.

Mrs. Harrison filed a malpractice suit against the two Air Force doctors in September 1976.

Search continues for lost 8-year-old boy

ROAN MOUNTAIN, Tenn. (AP) — Searchers worried that an 8-year-old boy missing since Saturday may be suffering from hypothermia after a series of thunderstorms, but were determined to keep hunting.

"I'm going to stay up here until I find him," Patricia Reel said Tuesday as she leaned against a pickup truck at the campsite where she last saw her son, Michael Eugene Reel of Hickory, N.C.

About 55 deputies, rangers, Civil Air Patrol members and volunteers searched Tuesday along the rain-soaked mountains near the Tennessee-North Carolina border.

The search was halted at nightfall and was to resume today, said Carter County Chief Deputy Mike Sellers, who is heading the effort.

"We've searched and re-searched every bit of the area," Sheriff William Crumley said. "We've explored every clue we have."

Sellers noted that two severe storms had struck the area Sunday and Monday nights and temperatures were dropping into the 50s and lower.

"That can only make things worse," he said.

"We compete the same way under deregulation," he said. "Fares are low because we are a competitor in the market place. The warm blanket of the Civil Aeronautics Board (former fare-governing body) has been taken off and the industry is trying to find itself. There have been some casualties (Braniff) and there may be more next winter."

That may prove a prophetic statement. Muse Air plans to buy more DC-9s. When restrictions are lifted Oct. 30 Michael Muse wants to fly all over the nation to popular connecting points and destinations, such as New York, Washington D.C., and Atlanta.

The competition may not be good for the major air carriers. "The big trunks (routes) are very profitable," said Muse, "but if an airline has a 40 percent market share, they want 50 percent and so on. Like a kid in a candy store, they keep lowering fares to get more passengers — but eventually they will make themselves sick."

Already, Muse is expanding his airline's service to more points within Texas to draw on the potential of short-hop flights here. Service to Lubbock will begin Aug. 7 from Dallas and Houston, and in November or December Austin and San Antonio will become Muse Air "beautiful" destinations.

Michael Muse, 33, is president and chief executive of Dallas' Muse Air Corp. Trained as a lawyer and as economist, his experience includes vice president-finance for Southwest Airlines and tax manager for Price Waterhouse.

A reconstituted Braniff Airlines has been the subject of press speculation for some time. But Muse said, "It could not survive in this marketplace — I don't care who puts up the money. It's too ambitious to try buying 30 airplanes, in view of increasing competition for fewer travel dollars."

Fare wars have kept his competition more honest in pricing policies and dealing with consumers, Muse postulated. "We can live with fare wars but I don't like them. Not at all. We make less profit."

Muse said that his company realizes consumers are trying to cut corners — and they look at air fare as the first way to do so when traveling — but says "It's not right to give the product away."

Muse said his passengers largely consist of upscale businessmen who can well afford a higher-priced fare in return for "dignity, respect and an excellent product."

Four-to-one prefer to fly a no-smoking airline, according to Muse Air statistics. This is one way they can compete with the other local carrier, Southwest Airlines.

Southwest is "tough competition," according to Muse, but there is room for two in the Texas market.

Muse said his advantages in fighting Southwest are: Assigned seating on comfortable blue leather-upholstered jets, no smoking on all flights, employees with "better attitudes" and meals provided on long-haul flights.

Southwest stops three times on a trip to Los Angeles — first at El Paso and Phoenix — and doesn't feed passengers.

"It's just a different approach," Muse said, "a different outlook on the way you treat the passenger."

THURSDAY: Southwest profits.

Former CIA head denies getting briefing book

NEW YORK (AP) — CIA Director William J. Casey has denied he helped obtain President Carter's briefing book for a 1980 campaign debate, saying involvement in such a scheme by the Reagan camp "could have destroyed the campaign."

"After being involved in seven presidential campaigns, I know that's dynamite," Casey, who served as Reagan's campaign manager, said in an interview in today's New York Times. "I wouldn't tolerate it. I wouldn't touch it with a 10-foot pole...It could have destroyed the campaign."

But White House chief of staff James A. Baker III said last week the Carter papers came directly from Casey.

The debate strategy plans were used by Reagan aides during the campaign to rehearse Reagan for his campaign debate with Carter.

Reagan, who initially dismissed the matter as "much ado about nothing," has ordered a Justice Department investigation. In recent days, partisans of Casey and Baker within the administration have been feuding and trading blame over the incident, the Times said.

The briefing book matter is also the focus of an investigation by the FBI and a House committee.

Casey criticized the debate preparation team headed by Baker and said it was "remiss" for its failure to reveal to top campaign officials that it used the Carter materials.

Baker said last week that Casey provided the Carter debate materials "with the suggestion that it might be of use to the debate briefing team."

Baker's office said Tuesday that he was en route from Texas to Wasington and could not immediately be reached for comment.

Casey said he was not directly contradicting Baker and said it was possible he might have passed on some materials to Baker without studying them. However, Casey denied he could have overlooked the hundreds of pages of Carter materials that turned up in Reagan campaign files.

"It would have been totally uncharacteristic and quite incredible that I would hand anybody a book I knew to be from the Carter campaign and say this might be helpful to the debate," Casey said.

"I would have said to myself, 'What a setup this would be to hand us something from the Carter White House that could blow us out of the water a week later,'" he said.

The Reagan administration has yet to say where it got the Carter materials. The president, who denied any knowledge of the papers, has speculated they came from a "disgruntled" Carter official.

Casey said he agreed to the Times interview to reassure Reagan campaign workers "that the campaign was properly and honorably conducted."

Showers soak east coast

By The Associated Press

Scattered showers and thunderstorms soaked the Eastern Seaboard from Florida to Maine today, as a cold front lingered along the Atlantic Coast.

A few thunderstorms produced fierce winds Tuesday afternoon and evening in Georgia and the Carolinas. Gusts blew in 15 store windows at Elizabeth, N.C., tore off a 100-foot section of a post office roof and damaged a police car. A tornado touched down near Beaver Dam, N.C., but no damage was reported.

Thunderstorms packing high winds downed trees and power lines west of Augusta, Ga. Elsewhere in Georgia, winds gusted to 63 mph at Macon and to 60 mph at Athens.

Showers and thunderstorms also moved through southern Texas to the central Gulf Coast and southern Florida.

Widely scattered storms dampened areas from New Mexico and Arizona through Utah and Nevada to the northern Rockies.

Temperatures at 3 a.m. EDT ranged from 39 degrees in Pellston, Mich., to 97 degrees in Phoenix and Yuma, Ariz.

Deserted building in Beirut collapses

An employee of the Concorde Hotel, across the street from the collapsed building, said "there was no big noise, no boom. About 10 a.m. (3 a.m. CDT) the building just started slipping slowly and at 11 a.m. it slowly slid down." The employee declined use of his name.

The building, just east of the Saudi Embassy, was badly damaged by a bomb explosion during last summer's Israeli siege of west Beirut to rout Palestine Liberation Organization guerrillas.

The blast that wrecked apartments on one side of the building included one that served as the office and residence of the New York Times correspondent in Lebanon.

The Voice of Lebanon, run by the rightist Christian Phalange Party, said the building belonged to a retired French veterinarian who resided in Beirut.

Within a half-hour of the building's collapse, dozens of ambulances, fire engines and civil defense teams arrived on the scene. There was no fire.

French soldiers and Lebanese Red Cross workers carried stretchers to the front of the wreckage as rescuers probed the rubble.

Residents try to save community

"When restored, this building could provide space for easy-to-operate, income-generating ventures," Douglas said. "By next spring we hope to have a professional staff person ready to present a detailed proposal for bringing industry to the island."

But the Sapelo Island Heritage Authority legislation takes some of the keys to the island's future out of the residents' hands. No resident may be a part of the foundation board, which is chaired by Joe Tanner, commissioner of the Department of Natural Resources.

The DNR owns or manages 1,100 acres of the 1,600-acre island.

For decades after the Civil War, blacks on Sapelo were cut off from the world by the marshes of the Georgia coast. They farmed and fished for a living.

Detroit auto pioneer Howard Coffin, who developed the Cloister resort at Sea Island nearby, owned Sapelo in the early part of the 20th century. Tobacco millionaire R.J. Reynolds bought the island in 1933 and maintained it as a private retreat until his death in 1964.

The state bought the northern two-thirds of the island in 1969, and acquired the remainder, except for Hog Hammock, in 1976.

Tanner, who supports the idea of some form of craft industry on the island, said, "There is no question the community will have a tough time surviving over the long term, no matter what you do."

Steps to help steel industry are announced

Reagan favors merit pay. The teachers' organization opposes each of the specific plans so far suggested, but says it is keeping an open mind on the overall concept, which public opinion surveys have found is popular.

The steel decision will mean that foreign producers of the steel used in defense items, the aerospace industry and telecommunications will be limited in the amount of steel they can send to the United States for the next four years. In addition, tariffs will be assigned to their products, increasing the cost in the United States and making the domestically produced steel more attractive.

Reagan had until Tuesday to make a decision on a recommendation by the U.S. International Trade Commission. He opted for a longer quota and tariff program than that recommended by the commission. But he stopped short of the five-year program favored by those involved in the steel industry.

According to the commission, 20 percent of the specialty steel sold in the United States last year was imported, mainly from Japan, West Germany, France, Sweden and Spain.

By moving to limit those imports between now and 1987, Reagan is taking a step to help steel companies and workers concentrated in Pennsylvania, Ohio, Indiana, and Illinois, key blue-collar states that will be important in the 1984 presidential election.

How did the president reconcile that with his preference for unrestricted trade between nations?

"Sometimes you have to do those things," said an aide traveling with the White House group back to Washington.

Congress, legislatures can pay chaplains

WASHINGTON (AP) — Congress and state legislatures are free to pay chaplains to deliver daily prayers without violating the constitutionally required separation of church and state, the Supreme Court says.

The ruling Tuesday may add fuel to the debate over the court's 21-year-old ban on organized prayer in public schools.

But at least some constitutional scholars say there is nothing in Tuesday's decision to suggest the court would view school prayer any differently now than it did when it barred the practice in 1962.

School prayer is "dramatically different" than prayer in legislative sessions, said Nathan Z. Dershowitz of the American Jewish Congress in New York.

Dershowitz said he was disappointed by Tuesday's ruling. But he noted that, unlike school students, members of state legislatures and Congress are not impressionable youngsters and are not compelled to be present for legislative sessions.

"They are adults who need not be present for the prayers," Dershowitz said.

But Nebraska State Sen. Ernie Chambers, who challenged the practice of paying a chaplain to lead prayers in his state's legislature, said the new ruling could encourage supporters of school prayer.

"I think the court is trying to implement Ronald Reagan's program by references...his thinking that there ought to be prayer in school," Chambers said. "Smart people who want to put religion into education will use this decision and they ought to. They would be justified."

The Supreme Court was ending its 1982-83 term today with other controversial decisions likely.

Pending cases could decide these questions: May women be paid smaller pension benefits than men despite equal contributions to a pension plan because, as a group, they live longer than men? Are Americans illegally taping television shows with their video recorders?

Brazos County sheriff's deputies and fire inspectors survey the interior of the Friendship Baptist Church in northern Brazos County. The church was destroyed by arson early Tuesday morning. Three churches were firebombed Tuesday; four were firebombed Monday.

Officials search for arsonist who firebombed six churches

GAUSE (AP) — He is a man, or perhaps two men, who holds a hatred of religion, once lived in or around Milam County in Central Texas and has taken in the last two days to pitching Molotov cocktails at churches and community buildings.

Authorities hunting for one or two arsonists who torched fires at six small churches — burning two to the ground and heavily damaging a third — and a Masonic hall say they have painted that portrait of the firebug.

But they still have no suspects in the firebombings.

"We've got a lot of information that we've got to run down," said Milam County Sheriff Leroy Broadus. "Nowadays, on some of these crimes, it's hard to figure motives."

Congregations of the churches are mostly black, but authorities said they don't believe the attacks have been racially motivated. A state arson investigator will join the probe today, officials said.

"Whoever it is certainly had to have a real good knowledge of the area," Broadus said. "I don't think they're a resident of the county now, but they probably have been in the past and they have a lot of ties to the area."

He said the churches, nestled in the countryside of this tiny agricultural community, would be difficult to find "unless you knew where they were."

Four small rural churches were firebombed Independence Day, and three more fires erupted in nearby community buildings Tuesday. No injuries were reported.

The fires began after Molotov cocktails — bottles filled with gasoline and sparked by paper wicks — were hurled at the buildings late at night when most townspeople were asleep, police said.

Police found a beer bottle where the fire appeared to have ignited at each of the locations.

A $275 reward was established for information about the fires after Milam County Judge Phil Smith called a special commissioner's court meeting Tuesday.

"It burned plumb to the ground. We definitely suspect arson," said Brazos County Sheriff Bobby H. Yeager.

"It could be one person or a group, or someone who got the idea from the earlier fires," he said.

Texans relieved terrorist remains in Mexican prison

Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON — Two Texas congressmen, en route to the U. S.-Mexican Inter-Parliamentarian Union meeting in Puebla on July 7, feel much more secure about attending after the Federal Bureau of Investigation gave assurances Tuesday that William Morales is still inside a Mexican prison.

Morales, a Puerto Rican terrorist who escaped from a prison sentence in the United States some years ago, had been living in the Puebla area with confederates and had threatened to kill both U.S. and Mexican congressmen attending the meeting. He particularly targeted lawmakers of Hispanic heritage.

Morales seeks independence for Puerto Rico. Recently, his comrades in threatened bombings said, when arrested in Chicago, that they had expected to carry out their plans led by Morales, personally.

But Tuesday, the FBI conferred with Mexican officials to verify that he is still in jail.

Rep. Kika de la Garza, D., Mission, who will preside at the two-country meeting will leave for the conference on Thursday. Also attending will be Rep. Abraham Kazen, D., Laredo.

Among topics of mutual interest which will be discussed are: Mexico's devaluation of the peso and her debts to U.S. banks, immigration legislation, the influx of refugees from Central America to Mexico and the U.S., the war in El Salvador and other Central American countries, narcotics, food for Mexico's unemployed, and federal aid for businesses along the border hit by the economic depression.

Two burned while on high-voltage tower

HOUSTON (AP) — Two boys who were burned when they climbed a high-voltage tower and came in direct contact with 138,000 volts of electricity had dared each other to make the climb, authorities said.

"They were playing around, just climbing up there on dares," said Houston firefighter L.C. Beaty.

Three boys made the approximately 100-foot climb Tuesday afternoon.

Emiliano Fletcher, 14, suffered second- and third-degree burns over 75 percent of his body, said S.W. Reed, a Harris County Sheriff's Department deputy. Fletcher was flown by Life Flight helicopter to Hermann Hospital, where he was in critical condition in the pediatric intensive care unit, said a hospital spokesman.

Ray Leftwich, 16, also was being treated Tuesday night for burns at Hermann. He was reported to be less seriously injured than Leftwich, but details were not available.

A third boy, Ray Leftwich's brother Glen, 13, was treated for shock and released.

Glen Leftwich apparently was not hurt because he was on a part of the tower through which the current did not travel, Beaty said.

Two of the boys were rescued by volunteer firemen who climbed the tower, which still was hot from the current, to save the boys. The third boy climbed down himself.

Texas to pass New York in population

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — San Antonio, Dallas-Fort Worth and Austin should lead Texas in steady economic growth this year, with usually stalwart Houston lagging a step behind because of a prolonged slump in the energy industry, an economist says.

Texas also should pass New York State in population by the end of the decade to be second only to California, according to the 1983 Texas Facts and Figures publication, put out annually by Texas Commerce Bank.

"Texas is growing about three times the national average and, even though that will slow, it should still grow about two times the national average," according to economist Carol Bennett, who prepared the 72-page statistical portrait of Texas.

Ms. Bennett is an assistant vice president with the bank's economics division in Houston.

Part of the state's strength is the resilience of its people — its human resources, according to Ms. Bennett.

"Texans see (the recession) as a temporary aberration," she said. "The recession mentality never really did settle in here. Some plans may be on hold, but they're not canceled."

Texas led the country in construction contracts last year. Though the state had only 6.6 percent of the country's population, it accounted for 20 percent of the nation's new homes.

THE STATE, WHICH passed the 15 million population mark for the first time last year, also had the lowest rate of unemployment among states with the largest number of employees.

Texas ranked second to California in retail sales, helped along by a strong push from the Dallas-Fort Worth metropolitan area.

But 1982 didn't bring only good news, thanks to the oil and gas slump and a string of Mexican peso devaluations.

Retail sales still didn't keep pace with inflation, and those in Texas' agricultural sector mirrored the downward national trend. Poor weather exacerbated the farmers' problems.

The state's rapid growth also rendered it more vulnerable to the country's economic cycles — such as recession.

To Ms. Bennett, though, there's still no place like Texas.

"Laredo and some areas have been hit with high unemployment, but no place in Texas is as bad off as the industrial Northeast, which is in serious shape," she said.

"The energy industry is improving," she said. "People are ready to go back into that industry. And Mexico has made some impressive strides toward improvement."

FACTS AND FIGURES also charts some developing employment trends, touched off in part by the steady influx of job-seekers into Texas and the Southwest.

Nonagricultural employment in Texas is up a dramatic 61.5 percent from 10 years ago. Much of that, the publication said, is due to the more than 850,000 employees added to the nonagricultural payrolls in the last five years by Houston, Dallas-Fort Worth and San Antonio.

Employment in the government sector has dipped slightly, while self-employment and entrepreneurship are on the upswing.

About 42,200 new businesses incorporated in Texas in 1982, almost 8 percent of the national total. The Lone Star State ranks second in the number of firms listed in the country's 500 fastest-growing private companies.

The publication predicts the nation's emphasis on defense should generate more employment in the state's aerospace and primary metals industries, and that the lumber and chemical industries should enjoy renewed prosperity.

Facts and Figures also predicts that, by 1990, Texas should be second only to California in both employment and value added by manufacture.

The statistical data are drawn from, among other places, the U.S. Departments of Commerce, Labor, Energy, Agriculture and Defense; Texas Employment Commission; Texas Comptroller of Public Accounts; Texas Department of Agriculture; Chambers of Commerce throughout Texas; the Bureau of Business Research at the University of Texas; and several Texas business publications and directories.

Lightning zaps Austin into TV twilight zone

AUSTIN (AP) — A lightning bolt that struck a transmission tower in a westside suburb here cut power to broadcast facilities late Tuesday, plunging this Central Texas city into a brief, total television blackout.

The power outage, which occurred at 8:21 p.m., lasted about two minutes, said a spokesman for the city's electrical department.

Policemen acquitted in brutality case

SANTA CRUZ, Calif. (AP) — Four former policemen accused of kicking, choking and beating "street people" to get them out of Santa Cruz were acquitted late Tuesday in a case that has brought the entire force under scrutiny.

Jurors deliberated 1½ days before finding Michael Redus, Joseph Sanchez, Rick LeMarquand and Ed Chevalier innocent of 23 counts of conspiracy, use of excessive force and assault with a deadly weapon. Three of the defendants burst into tears when the verdicts were read.

The testimony in Santa Cruz Superior Court also had linked at least a dozen officers still on the force to acts of brutality or misconduct.

Policemen accused their superiors of encouraging men on the force to beat suspects who threatened or injured officers. Patrolmen leveled accusations of misconduct at one another, and others admitted failing to report misconduct in the belief high-ranking officers would take no action.

After they were dismissed, jurors said they felt the defendants had been singled out for prosecution and that their conduct had not constituted felony behavior.

Contending that the conduct of the four officers stemmed from considerable pressure from the administration and the community, foreman Sam Ledesma said he wondered why top department officials had not been prosecuted.

Chief Jack Bassett has said he is "anxious to have the whole thing put to bed" but promised to investigate every allegation made during the 12 weeks of testimony.

The five-man, seven-woman jury listened to details of 16 episodes of alleged brutality and heard evidence from more than 50 witnesses.

Victim Robert Hebert testified that LeMarquand, Redus and Chevalier beat him and forced him to kneel as they talked of murdering him and tossing his body into the San Lorenzo River.

Officer Nick Marinos told the court he watched in shock one night as Redus pummeled an illegal camper and Sanchez yanked the fallen man by the hair and kicked him in the face.

Describing his handling of violent suspects, the 205-pound LeMarquand told jurors: "I took them into custody physically, I didn't try to reason with them."

He also testified that he struck an illegal camper "in the solar plexus once or twice, folded him up and put him in the car."

Lawyers for the defendants, who all have resigned or retired, did not deny the incidents occurred. But they argued that officers who used force against transients had been provoked by slurs or resistance and were protecting themselves.

Troops to be tested in desert heat

WASHINGTON (AP) — Anxious to see how U.S. troops perform in 120-degree desert heat, the commander of the Rapid Deployment Force will direct the unit's first summer maneuvers in the Middle East next month.

Pentagon officials say the exercises involving some 7,000 Army, Marine, Air Force and Navy members will include the first Marine landing in Somalia, mock air battles over Oman and military exercises in the Egyptian desert.

U.S. troops have drilled in Egypt before, but usually in late fall or early winter. This time, Army Lt. Gen. Robert C. Kingston will fulfill his desire, first stated in 1981, to see what summer heat "will do to... my units."

As chief of the Rapid Deployment Force, Kingston has 220,000 men at his disposal to protect U.S. interests against hostile military threats in the Middle East, the Persian Gulf and the Indian Ocean regions.

Defense Department officials, who spoke Tuesday on condition they not be identified, said the Sudan will be the site of maneuvers of a small counter-insurgency group.

Scouts favor mixed troops, despite history

KANANASKIS COUNTRY, Alberta (AP) — Scouting's founder, Lord Baden-Powell, was shocked at the first Girl Scout troop 75 years ago, but scouts at the 15th World Jamboree say they favor mixed troops in part because "it makes you be good."

Scouts interviewed Tuesday, the day before the official opening of the jamboree in this wilderness region shadowed by the Canadian Rockies, disagreed with Baden-Powell's grandson, who forecast a swing back to sex-segregated troops.

The grandson said Monday at the jamboree that in scouting, boys would rather be with boys and girls with girls.

"Back in France, we had two patrols that had been mixed with boys and girls separated this year, but those scouts now would rather be back together," said Malia Lewis, 17, a scout from Paris.

Scouting has been co-educational for years in many countries outside North America, and an estimated 5 percent of the scouts at this jamboree are girls.

No girls are here from the United States or Canada, where scouting is separated by gender. But several U.S. scouts said they like the idea of camping near girls from other nations.

"It makes you be good. You can't go running around in your skivvies," said Greg Saal of Clinton, Ohio.

He and Chris Middleton of Mentor, Ohio, said they would like to see Girl Scout troops or Explorer posts, which are co-educational, invited to U.S. jamborees, which so far have barred girls.

Some scouts from countries with mixed scouting said they don't want to turn back the clock by returning to segregated units.

"We cannot keep on like we did in the old days, having girls on the lower plane," said Thordue Kristjamsson, 18, of Reykjavik, Iceland.

President Amin Gemayel of Lebanon is seen with U.S. Secretary of State George P. Shultz at the Baabda Presidential Palace near Beirut Tuesday. Shultz said after the talks "We had an intensive review of the situation, compared notes and thought about our strategis."

Shultz begins talks over troop withdrawal from Lebanon

DAMASCUS, Syria (AP) — Secretary of State George P. Shultz began sensitive talks today with Syrian leaders aimed at breaking the impasse over the withdrawal of all foreign forces from Lebanon, but with little hope of success.

Shultz conferred for one hour with Foreign Minister Abdul-Halim Khaddam and then was driven to the nearby office of President Hafez Assad for a meeting with the Syrian leader. Details of the discussions were not disclosed.

Assad has denounced the agreement Shultz arranged providing for the withdrawal of Israeli forces from Lebanon, claiming it threatens Syrian security and violates Lebanese sovereignty because it allows the Israelis to patrol southern Lebanon.

He has insisted he will not consider withdrawing Syrian troops until that agreement is scrapped and Israel pulls its forces out.

As Shultz went into today's meetings, the Syrian state-run press indicated he would fail to alter Assad's position, which has not changed since Shultz last visited Damascus two months ago on his first Middle East mission. The English-language Syrian Times published a commentary saying Shultz "will certainly find in Damascus the same stand which he had known very well."

It suggested Shultz has no new ideas to break the impasse, "especially considering that the United States continues to back Israel in its aggression against the Arab nation."

Missionaries disagree on ransom terms

NAIROBI, Kenya (AP) — Disagreement was reported between Sudanese and missionary officials over ransom terms set by Sudanese guerrillas who threatened to kill five Westerners unless their conditions were met today.

There was no word on the hostages' fate as the deadline passed at noon local time (6 a.m. EDT). The five, including a two Americans and a Canadian, have been held more than 11 days in Boma, a remote area of southeastern Sudan.

The Sudanese source said that the missionary organization, the Africa Committee for the Rehabilitation of Southern Sudan, which ran a mission at Boma, was willing to accede to guerrilla demands for 150 shirts, trousers and shoes, but not the demand for a $95,000 ransom.

However, the Sudanese government has not disclosed its decision on whether to permit a plane to fly in the clothing, said the source, who declined to be identified.

"There is disagreement between the two sides in Juba," where Sudanese and missionary officials were conducting negotiations with the guerrillas by radio, he said. Philip Obang, vice governor of the region, was the Sudanese government representative in the talks, the source added.

A SPOKESMAN FOR THE MISSIONARY organization, which has carried out relief and development projects in southern Sudan since 1972, said he could not confirm the report.

The Liberation Front of Southern Sudan last week threatened to shoot the hostages — two Americans, a Canadian, a Dutchman and a West German — unless its demands for money, clothing, medicine and radio broadcasts of a front statement were met by today.

Among those held is John Haspels, 36, of Lyons, Kan., who ran a Presbyterian mission on a plateau overlooking the 8,000-square-mile Boma National Park. They others are Alois Pscheidt, a West German mechanic; American missionary pilot Ron Pontier, 29, of Clermont, Fla., Canadian missionary pilot Martin Overduin, 32, of London, Ontario, and Dutch male nurse Willem Noort, who worked at Haspels' mission.

"We don't know what the Sudanese are thinking," said one missionary source in Nairobi.

"They might have run out of patience and might be thinking of taking some sort of action," he went on.

ONE GUERRILLA DEMAND WHICH APPEARS to have been satisfied was for broadcasts of a front statement on the capture of a police post at Boma. The Voice of America and the British Broadcasting Corp. shortwave services carried the gist of the statement in regular news bulletins last week.

A raiding party of 12 to 15 insurgents, armed with automatic weapons and two mortars, seized a total of 11 Western hostages on June 24 and 25. Six were released on June 27 and flew by small plane to Nairobi with the list of ransom demands.

The front is a little-known guerrilla group fighting to rid Sudan's black southern region of domination by the Arab north. Forces from the two regions fought a 17-year civil war which ended with the granting of some autonomy to south in 1972.

Trouble resurfaced in recent months, due in part to the Khartoum government's decision to divide the south into three regions.

Syrians intervene in clash of guerrillas

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Mutineers and loyalists of the Palestine Liberation Organization traded mortar, rocket and machine-gun fire in eastern Lebanon today, prompting Syrian forces to intervene and halt the fighting, Lebanese radio stations reported.

State and privately owned radio stations said the clash was touched off by an explosion that ripped through a loyalist guerrilla center in the Bekaa Valley town of Taalabaya this morning.

Loyalists and dissidents from PLO chief Yasser Arafat's main Fatah guerrilla faction traded barrages for 20 minutes around a cluster of towns on the northern side of the Beirut-Damascus highway in the Bekaa, about 12 miles from the Syrian border, the radio reports said.

The radios quoted their Bekaa-based correspondents as saying Syrian artillery units fired at the clashing PLO guerrillas and reimposed a cease-fire that was proclaimed last week.

The reports did not say if there were casualties.

The fighting occurred as the mutiny, led by breakaway Col. Saed Mousa, completed its second month. The rebels want a share of the Fatah leadership and contend that Arafat has veered away from militant anti-Israeli policy.

An Israeli army spokesman said Israeli troops traded fire with Palestinian guerrillas operating behind Syrian lines in the Bekaa Valley early today. No casualties were reported.

Serviceman buried 11 years after plane downed over Hanoi

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Eleven years after a Vietnamese missile shot down his F-4 Phantom over Hanoi, Air Force Col. Farrell Sullivan was laid to rest in a national cemetary here, eulogized as a devoted officer and a devout Christian.

Sullivan, previously listed as Missing In Action, was buried with full military honors Tuesday at Fort Sam Houston. He was one of nine American servicemen who remains were turned over by Vietnam to the United States June 3.

Earlier, more than 130 mourners watched as six white-gloved pall-bearers carried Sullivan's flag-draped coffin into the Bergstrom Air Force Base Chapel in Austin for funeral services.

A seasoned combat pilot and fighter-squadron commander, Sullivan was flying his 257th mission when he was shot down by a surface-to-air missile. There were no American witnesses to his crash and his body was not recovered. Air Force officials changed his status from missing to presumed dead after one year.

Officials to report on health care

AUSTIN (AP) — State officials who traveled to Harlingen to find out whether poor people in the Lower Rio Grande Valley are receiving adequate health care were ordered to submit a report to the governor today.

Representatives from Austin met with officials of the state hospital in Harlingen "to determine where problems with indigent health care, emergency services and prenatal care may exist," said a statement released by Gov. Mark White's office.

White said he planned to work with a legislative task force during the next few months to propose "long-term solutions to public health care needs."

State to meet with waste firms

AUSTIN (AP) — Two companies that want to burn toxic chemicals in the Gulf of Mexico plan to meet Thursday with state officials to discuss the proposed burnings.

The two firms, Chemical Waste Management, Inc., and Ocean Combustion Services, have applied to the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency for permission to burn the wastes about 150 miles east of Brownsville.

State permission is not needed for such a permit, but Brian Berwick of the state attorney general's office said the two companies wanted the meeting "to educate and inform and I suppose to persuade us that this method is necessary and adequate."

Gasoline tank fire extinguished

HOUSTON (AP) — A fire that erupted in a Houston gasoline storage tank after it was struck by lightning was quickly brought under control by firefighters and no one was hurt, authorities said.

The blaze broke out at about 4:30 p.m. Tuesday, said spokesman M.T. Cook.

Firefighter Jim Morris said the fire department used foam and water to extinguish the flames before they spread to adjoining weeds and grass.

Fire department officials did not know what company owns the tank.

Ten-year-old boy discovers abandoned newborn in ditch

HOUSTON (AP) — A 10-year-old boy playing in a north Houston neighborhood discovered a newborn baby abandoned in a ditch, authorities said.

Johnnie Ray Landry, who found the baby, said, "I thought it was a doll and then I heard it crying." The baby was wearing only diapers.

Linda Thompson of the Harris County Child Support Division said the baby was only a few hours old when found Tuesday afternoon, and still had its umbilical cord attached.

The child weighed 6 pounds, 15 ounces.

Doctors did not think the baby would have any major health problems, but the infant will stay at the hospital two or three days, Ms. Thompson said.

Last suspect in four killings at amusement center surrenders

HOUSTON (AP) — The third and last suspect in the slayings of four employees of a Houston amusement center has surrendered, but has refused to give a statement concerning the killings, his attorney said.

Kenneth Ray Ransom, 20, walked into Houston police headquarters Tuesday morning and surrendered, accompanied by his parents and lawyer.

Ransom surrendered because he was "afraid he'd be killed or injured or something like that" if he allowed himself to be captured by authorities, attorney Roy Jerue said.

Ransom has admitted nothing about the slayings to authorities, and will plead innocent to the capital murder charge filed against him, Jerue said.

The attorney said he has evidence proving his client's innocence, but declined to reveal it because "I don't want to try this case in the newspapers."

Ransom "wanted to turn himself in for some time" but chose to do so while accompanied by a lawyer because "he wanted his rights protected," Jerue said.

Ransom answered no questions on his lawyer's advice.

Jerue declined to confirm reports that Ransom fled to Houston after the Friday killings and went to Wharton, about 50 miles southwest of Houston, where he reportedly has a girlfriend and relatives.

Meanwhile, Family District Court Judge Criss Cole on Tuesday afternoon issued a gag order forbidding police officers from publicly discussing the amusement center killings case.

Some Houston police officers said the order came as a result of information released to the news media about the juvenile suspect involved in the case.

James Edward Randall, 16, and Richard James Wilkerson, 19, were arrested Friday night in the slayings at the Malibu Grand Prix miniature race track in southwest Houston. Police said they signed on Monday "businesslike" confessions and expressed no regret about the deaths.

Wilkerson, a former employee at the arcade and race track, has been charged with capital murder. Randall, who is his cousin, must be certified to stand trial as an adult before he can face that charge. A certification hearing is scheduled for August.

The bodies of the four employees were discovered Friday morning, the night manager in his office and the three others in a restroom. All four died of multiple stab wounds inflicted just after midnight Thursday, police said.

Wilkerson and Randall said in signed statements that the robbery plot included killing the employees there at the time because they could identify Wilkerson, Mosier said.

Authorities investigate death of youth during target practice

SULPHUR SPRINGS (AP) — Authorities on Tuesday were investigating the death of a 14-year-old youth who died as he and his two half brothers practiced target shooting near his home here.

Terry Alan Valentine died at 3:30 p.m. Sunday in Memorial Hospital here of a single gunshot wound to the chest, according to a police report.

Police Chief Donnie Lewis said Valentine and his two half brothers, Anthony Nuziard and Ricky Nuziard, were firing a .22-caliber automatic pistol at targets

THE FIRE ALARM SMART ENOUGH TO PHONE FOR HELP.

The Emergency Call System for the home.

What happens if fire breaks out, your smoke detector sounds its alarm, but there's no one home to hear it?

The answer: the Bell Emergency Call System (ECS).

Just plug it in. And it works with your smoke detector to protect your home, business or property. Even if no one's there.

Because as soon as its electronic sensors hear your smoke detector, it calls out the word "Fire" for 30 seconds. This voice-alarm can be cancelled at that time.

If it isn't, ECS phones the first of two numbers you've selected until someone answers.* It announces the emergency. Gives your address. And repeats it.

The Bell Emergency Call System. In seconds, it can save a life or what you've worked for a lifetime to save.

Police agents on trial for torture

PADUA, Italy (AP) — Five police agents have gone on trial on charges they tortured one of the Red Brigades kidnappers of U.S. Army Brig. Gen. James L. Dozier.

All five members of the Central Special Action unit, which helped free Dozier after 42 days of captivity, denied the allegations made by the kidnapper, Cesare di Lenardo. He said the officers gave him electric shocks on the genitals, burned parts of his body and beat him.

Di Lenardo, who attended the opening court session Tuesday, is serving a 27-year term for kidnapping Dozier.

Dozier, who was the highest-ranking American at the NATO base in Verona, was grabbed from his Verona apartment and freed in a police raid Jan. 28, 1982.

Woman joins Begin's Cabinet

TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) — Liberal Party legislator Sarah Doron has become the first woman to join Prime Minister Menachem Begin's Cabinet — winning Parliament approval of her appointment after a two-month delay.

Mrs. Doron, approved Tuesday as a minister without portfolio, is the third woman to serve in the Israeli Cabinet. The others were the late Golda Meir, who served as foreign minister, labor minister and prime minister, and Shulamit Aloni, a minister without portfolio in 1974.

Mrs. Doron, a 61-year-old Parliament member, is known as a hawk on foreign policy. The Cabinet approved her appointment May 1, and news reports said the Parliament approval came after a deal was struck between Begin and his ultra-orthodox Agudat Israel coalition partners, who objected partly because Mrs. Doron is a woman.

Thieves steal $1 million in jewels

LONDON (AP) — Scotland Yard says jewels worth more than $1.6 million — including two diamonds worth more than $1 million — were stolen from a London hotel room.

A police spokesman said Tuesday the victim of the weekend theft at the Churchill Hotel was an international businessman who wanted his identity kept secret.

Mission member goes on trial

DUESSELDORF, West Germany (AP) — A member of the Soviet trade mission accused of spying in West Germany refused to answer questions put to him as his trial opened.

Gennadi Batakhev, a 42-year-old engineer employed by Moscow's mission in Cologne, contended Tuesday that the trial's purpose was "to worsen relations between our two countries."

The federal prosecutor accused Batakhev of soliciting classified blueprints for electronic data processing equipment used exclusively in NATO countries from a West German computer technician.The technician, who was not identified, cooperated during the investigation and has agreed to testify against Batakhev.

The indictment said the blueprints included those for a coding device for banks, a voice distorter used in police and armed forces radio conversations and long-distance transmission equipment used by military staffs.

Dissident permitted to see family

TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) — Jailed Soviet dissident Anatoly Shcharansky has been permitted to see his mother and brother for the first time in 18 months, his wife says.

Avital Shcharansky, who lives in Israel and campaigns for her husband's release, said Tuesday she was told in a telephone conversation from Moscow that her mother-in-law spoke to Shcharansky through a transparent partition for two hours.

She said Shcharansky, who was convicted of spying for the West and jailed in 1978 for 13 years, said that after a four-month hunger strike ending in January he weighed only 70 pounds. He said he regained 44 pounds but had lost all his hair, she reported.

Foreign Ministry employee jailed

PARIS (AP) — A low-level Foreign Ministry employee has been jailed while awaiting trial on charges of spying for China, court sources report.

They said Bernard Boursicot, 39, was charged with giving confidential diplomatic documents to a Chinese intelligence agent while working at the French Embassy in Peking between 1970 and 1972.

Boursicot returned to France in 1981. The sources said Tuesday he was joined the next year by a Chinese woman he knww in Peking, and French intelligence began an investigation shortly thereafter.

Rainstorms, quake kill seven

ISTANBUL, Turkey (AP) — Violent rainstorms and an earthquake have killed at least seven people in Turkey since Monday, authorities report.

The earthquake jolted western Turkey on Tuesday, killing an 8-year-old boy and injuring 20 other people, officials said.

The tremor, measured at 6.2 on the Richter scale, broke water mains, cracked walls and shattered windows in an area about 125 miles southwest of Istanbul.

President discusses ABC quality

NEW YORK (AP) — Ask John Severino, president of ABC Television, to point to the class and quality in series programming on ABC's fall schedule, and he bobs and weaves as if he's been blindfolded and forced to play Pin the Tail on the Donkey.

Every stab he takes misses the mark.

"I think we present a fairly wide range in information and entertainment programs," he said at a recent press conference with TV writers in Los Angeles. "There are sporting events in prime time, which the others don't have, and the Olympics, which the others certainly don't have."

Without mentioning series programming, Severino turned to last year's special programming — "The Winds of War" and "The Thorn Birds." A little dizzy now, he spun around and cited upcoming made-for-TV movies: "The Day After," about the aftermath of a nuclear bomb hitting Kansas City, and "Something about Amelia," about incest.

True enough, ABC's movies and miniseries have done the network proud, but what about the series programs, the staples of prime-time television? Where are the reality-based dramas, the serious-minded comedies, the Emmy awards for distinguished regular programming?

"It's in programming like 'Dynasty,' 'Hart to Hart,' 'Three's Company,' 'Happy Days,' I could go on and on," he said.

So could we. Where's the uniqueness, the innovation in your regularly scheduled lineup? Is there a "Hill Street Blues" on your schedule, a "Cheers" or even something promising like "After MASH"?

"I think 'Police Squad' and 'No Soap, Radio' were programs that were different and unique. Unfortunately, they didn't make it," Severino said. "Police Squad" was zany, but it didn't have any social relevance. It also was canceled by ABC after three episodes. "No Soap, Radio" was a joke — on ABC.

By the way, those programs were broadcast during the 1981-82 season. Anything current that could be construed as sophisticated or quality programming?

"I think 'Webster' is a program that is going to be very unique and different in a quality nature this year," he said. "Webster" is about a black kid adopted by white parents. But NBC's "Diff'rent Strokes" went that route first.

6 ♠	Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Queen of ♣.

Here's a hand to test your technique. Can South claim his slam regardless of the minor suit distribution, if we assume that West has the king of hearts for his overcall?

North-South bid well to their slam. North had little to spare for his cue-bid after West's overcall. Nevertheless, he dutifully cue-bid his ace of hearts after South showed he was interested in heart control for a slam. South wisely decided to settle for a small slam.

West led the queen of clubs, taken in the closed hand. How would you proceed?

If West has the king of hearts, you can claim the slam. After winning the first trick, draw trumps, cash your remaining club honor and ruff a club on the table. Now cash the king of diamonds and lead a low diamond toward your hand. If East produces an honor, you win and return the nine of diamonds, and dummy's ten of diamonds is good for a heart discard.

If East follows with a low diamond, play your nine. As the cards lie, West wins the jack, but he is end played. He must either return a heart away from his king or else play a club and give you a ruff-sluff.

However, you also make the slam if West has three or more diamonds. In that case, he can return a diamond. If he has three diamonds, the long diamond in dummy sets up for a heart pitch. If he has four or more diamonds, run all your winners and, at the end, West will be squeezed between the king of hearts and his long diamond. Try it.

Hidden tax hike

It never ceases to amaze us how Congress can use the English language to conceal actions its members know will bring the fury of the voting public down on them.

A case in point is the tax cap the House voted on the third year of President Reagan's tax cut a few days back. The measure was innocuously titled the "Tax Equity Act of 1983." Don't believe a word of it. What it provides is neither equitable or fiscally responsible.

In fact U.S. Rep. Tom Loeffler says the act is nothing but a scheme to return Congress "to the discredited tax and spend philosophy which has fueled excessive government spending for 20 years ..."

The culprit is the $700 cap on the third year of Reagan's tax cut. What that cap actually will mean, says Loeffler, is an increase in taxes for 8.1 million middle-income Americans. The liberals who pushed the cap tried to sell it as saddling primarily "the rich," but Treasury Secretary Donald Regan has called the cap "retrogression, not progression." He's right.

What the cap would do is give the liberals in Congress billions more to throw about at the expense of hard-working Americans who want but all too seldom get fiscally responsible representation in Washington. The sad result of this cap will be the stifling of the economic recovery just beginning to bloom and unusual tax hardship on 8.1 million Americans.

President Reagan can't veto the budget resolution that contains the tax cap. But he's vowed to veto all excessive spending bills. This one fits that criteria and certainly should be vetoed.

It's nothing but a tax increase to allow overspending by Congress hidden behind a cloak of fairness.

Reagan has a point

President Reagan has a right to complain about how some of his critics have been treating him on the education issue. To hear some of them talk you would think he is part of a conspiracy to undermine the nation's school system.

What the president has described as a "noisy debate" was ignited by a report from a committee he appointed called the National Commission on Excellence in Education. Among other things it recommended more emphasis on the basics, such as English and Mathematics, and rewarding teachers for the quality of their teaching rather than solely on seniority.

President Reagan concurred in both proposals. On the matter of merit pay he has pointed out that in most other areas of our society people are paid on the basis of achievement, not longevity, and he thinks the same pattern should be followed in our public schools.

To those who compared apples and oranges, by accusing the administration of spending more on defense than on education, Mr. Reagan responded with figures. He said that in 1982-83, $214.8 billion went for military purposes, while $215 billion was spent on education.

Basically what the president has been saying is that the federal government should spend less on our schools, and the states and communities more. It is totally unfair to twist this into meaning that his administration is short-changing our public schools. If Mr. Reagan had a lukewarm attitude toward the nation's education system, he would not have created a Commission on Excellence in Education, whose membership included some of the nation's most distinguished educators and citizens.

Another View:

Divisive diversion

Minnesota's state income tax allows parents to deduct their children's school tuition and fees up to $700 a year. That provides, indirectly but very effectively, a state subsidy to private schools.

Justice William Rehnquist's majority opinion reads like a result in search of a rationalization. It will encourage a proliferation of tax expenditures to finance private schools — and how about college tuition?

On the legal points, it is difficult to decide when government tax or spending policy stops being broad support for charitable activities and becomes support for religious activities. But the majority's effort to distinguish earlier cases striking down various grant and tax schemes doesn't work.

They argue that the Minnesota law applies neutrally to both public and private schools. But this apparent neutrality ignores the actual effect: 95 percent of Minnesota's private schoolchildren are in sectarian schools, and deductible costs at free public schools are negligible.

Although the purpose of the statute may be secular — support for education — the effect is to direct these tax dollars overwhelmingly toward religious institutions. Once they are there, the commingling of religious and nonreligious activities is unavoidable.

The court also says that Minnesota has used a "genuine tax deduction" similar to other credit and deduction provisions, and that such legislative choices about tax burden are entitled to judicial deference. But this is not a complicated policy choice among different classes of corporate taxpayers or different kinds of tax shelters.

The majority's further argument that Minnesota's financial support is indirect and only as a result of parental choices about schooling is a fair distinction from outright grants to religious institutions, but it hardly balances the reality: rather than mere "attenuated financial benefits," religious schools stand to profit handsomely from schemes modeled after Minnesota's.

The court's constitutional decision does not change the merits of the policy arguments. Tax benefits for private-school tuition represent a threat to public education, not healthy competition.

Public education has been and remains a crucial community institution and a vital aid to social and economic advancement for the great majority of families. It is unfortunate that just when the country seemed on the brink of a major new commitment to good public education, the court has encouraged a divisive diversion.

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

Interior officials play favorites

WASHINGTON — When James Watt staffed the Interior Department with industry executives, I promised to keep an eye out for any favoritism. Sad to say, my suspicions were not unfounded.

Jack Anderson

Individual Interior officials have scrupulously refrained from taking part in decisions involving their former employers. But the department has repeatedly cut deals with a select few companies that officials once worked for or invested in. My associates Jock Hatfield and John Dillon dug up a few examples from the agency's files:

— Montana Power and Light and Amax Coal were the principal beneficiaries of the now famous Powder River coal sales in Wyoming. The General Accounting Office concluded that 1.6 billion tons of federally owned coal were sold for $100 million below fair market value.

As it happens, the two companies were generous contributors to the Mountain States Legal Foundation, which Watt headed until he came to Washington. The secretary did not excuse himself from the Powder River decision that was so profitable for his old foundation's benefactors.

— Richard Mulberry, the Interior Department's inspector general, used to work at the accounting firm of Fox and Co. He still has $250,000 due him under the company's retirement plan. A few months after Mulberry joined Interior, Fox and Co. won a $387,525 contract from the inspector general's office.

Mulberry excused himself from the contract selection process, but the responsibility for reviewing the contract proposals was delegated to one of his subordinates — who must have known about his boss's connection with Fox. The accounting firm, which has been charged with fraudulent practices by the Securities and Exchange Commission, has seven more contract proposals pending with the department.

— William Coldiron, the agency's solicitor, was director and vice chairman of the board at Montana Power and Light. When he came to Washington, the company paid him $108,881 in "severance, salary and vacation pay." Coldiron did excuse himself from participation in the controversial "fire sale" of Powder River coal leases to his old company.

— James R. Harris, director of the Office of Surface Mining, had financial ties to Amax, the other big winner in the Powder River sale. He was once an investor in land deals with Amax and the Peabody Coal Co.

Harris said he knows "very little" about Interior's coal leasing policy; his office enforces strip mining regulations after the leases are awarded and the companies start work. He said he has never had any dealings with Amax "except as a buyer of property."

Footnote: The Interior Department "absolutely and unequivocally" denies any favoritism toward Montana Power, Amax or Fox and Co.

BEER ON THE HOUSE: Beer money is flowing into congressional campaign coffers. "SIXPAC" — the nickname of the National Beer Wholesalers Association's political action committee — has contributed generously to House members who will decide whether beer distributors should be allowed regional monopolies for particular brands.

Rep. Jack Brooks, D-Tex., has been the chief recipient of SIXPAC's largesse — and is also the chief sponsor of the misnamed Malt Beverage Interbrand Competition Bill. He's also a member of the Judiciary Committee that will pass on the legislation. Brooks got $5,000 in campaign contributions from SIXPAC, and donations from individual wholesalers. He also got a $1,000 fee and a trip for himself and his wife to Las Vegas, where he made a speech to the association.

If the beer bill passes, your beer bill will go up. Bars and grocery stores would have to buy a particular brand from the exclusive distributor of that brand in their area — at his price, of course.

For many years, Indiana permitted such distributor monopolies. Recently it allowed retailers to buy from any wholesaler they wanted to, and the results were dramatic. Independent studies by the Indianapolis Star and the state Alcoholic Beverage Commission showed that the retail price of beer dropped by about 20 percent.

POLITICAL POTPOURRI: Former Florida Gov. Reubin Askew is dead last in the polls among the six announced Democratic presidential candidates. But he still has high hopes, despite such self-deprecating cracks as, "I am a true dark horse. The only paper covering my candidacy has been the Daily Racing Form." He contends that the opinion polls reflect only name recognition. Though he has yet to open a Washington campaign headquarters, Askew says his money is holding out in key states.

— Sen. John Glenn, D-Ohio, like any good astronaut or Boy Scout, is always prepared. He went to a recent tribute to Rep. Morris Udall, D-Ariz., with twice as many jokes as he could use in his speech — just in case a previous speaker had been dipping into the same joke book.

— Sheik Mohammed al-Fassi didn't mean to break the law, the Federal Election Commission and the Justice Department decided. Last October the Saudi Arabian billionaire offered the town of Midland, Pa., $3 million if all 2,200 registered voters signed a pledge not to vote for President Reagan in 1984. No payment was made, and Justice officials weren't even sure that Midland had taken the offer seriously. So the case against the sheik was dropped.

HEMISPHERE REPORT

Recovery missing Mexico, Brazil

WASHINGTON — The International Monetary Fund forecasts that Latin American and Caribbean countries, with exception of Brazil and Mexico, will improve their economic performances "substantially" this year.

William Giandoni

Brazil and Mexico "may show a decline in production or no rise," the Fund said in its fourth annual World Economic Outlook report released June 21.

The Fund did say that arrangements that the two have made to solve their economic problems "offer a prospect of orderly readjustment of the external positions of these countries," but qualified it by adding "provided that the policy intentions are implemented resolutely."

That amounted to tacit recognition that the political and social costs Brazil and Mexico are being forced to meet may be too high.

In any case, the Fund noted that 1982 was a bad year for all of Latin America. Economies of all the Latin republics weakened, but seven countries accounted for most of the region's deficit in its balance of payments, the bottom line that shows how much was gained or lost in international transactions of all sorts.

Mexico's balance of payments shifted from a surplus of more than $1 billion in 1981 to a deficit of more than $6 billion in 1982. That was a result of the sharp drop in receipt of capital from abroad and large outflows of money from Mexico as Mexicans and foreigners alike lost confidence in the country and the peso was devalued. Now, the Fund noted, "the peso is being depreciated according to the difference in expected inflation in Mexico and in its trading partners, and (also is being traded on) a free market."

Brazil, too, suffered in 1982 with an overall balance of payments shifting from a surplus of $500 million in 1981 to a deficit of about $9 billion in 1982. Brazil's current account deficit increased from about $11 billion in 1981 to almost $14.5 billion in 1982, "reflecting a rapid fall in exports and rising interest payments," according to the Fund. However, "during 1982 (Brazil's) cruzeiro depreciated in real terms by some 3 percent against the U.S. dollar, but — given the dollar's strength — appreciated by some 10 percent in real terms against a weighted basket of the currencies of Brazil's export markets."

Argentina managed to reduce its current account deficit from 1981 to 1982, from $4.5 billion to less than $2.5 billion, but the balance-of-payments deficit widened from less than $4 billion in 1981 to about $6.5 billion a year later.

Weakness of the world copper market and contraction of capital inflows caused Chile's international reserves to decline by $1.4 billion in 1982, "the first loss in seven years."

Colombia's overall balance of payments "shifted from a surplus into a deficit because of a reduction in net capital inflows."

Trinidad and Tobago experienced its first payments deficit since 1973, reflecting "a combination of declining exports ... and rising imports."

Growing overvaluation of the Uruguayan peso, "aggravated by the world economic recession and the strong adjustments taken in Uruguay's neighboring economies" put that South American country on the list of the seven problem nations.

On the bright side, the Fund noted that Peru "shifted from a large deficit in 1981 to a surplus in 1982" and that "significant improvements also were registered in the balance of payments of El Salvador and Jamaica."

Prospects for 1983 for the Western Hemisphere countries are much improved. Inflation is projected to rise at a lower rate. Balance of payments is expected to improve markedly. Current account deficits should decline, and capital inflows, rebound.

The Fund forecasts "an economic recovery" in Bolivia, Haiti, Paraguay and Uruguay. Caribbean countries are expected to show rates similar to those of 1982. Central America, with exception of Guatemala, can expect an easing of recessionary trends.

But the World Economic Outlook report appeared cautious on the larger countries.

In Mexico, it said, the main objective of the stabilization program "is to restore external and internal equilibrium in order to return to a sustainable growth pattern. ... A major deceleration of domestic inflation and a turnaround of the overall balance of payments from a large deficit in 1982 to a surplus in 1983, followed by a recovery of the economy," are its goals.

"The program envisages tax reforms, increases in prices of public goods and services and a substantial restraint of expenditure." Interest rates were raised, bank credit expansion limited, the scope of price controls reduced sharply. "Wage policy has been cautious." And "Mexico is expected to obtain relief from a postponement of external debt with commercial banks and to receive new credits," the Fund reported.

ART BUCHWALD

Reagan rerun too familiar

Washington is still in shock. It's hard for any of us to believe that someone in the Reagan political camp would have resorted to stealing President Carter's black briefing book during the 1980 campaign — the one which was prepared for the Carter-Reagan debate.

Art Buchwald

President Reagan first called it, "Much ado about nothing." Then when the briefing book hit the fan he turned it over to his Justice Department to see what the fuss was all about.

We pundits are keeping an open mind on the purloined book. Most American journalists refuse to believe that one of the major political parties in our country would stoop to dirty tricks to win an election.

At the same time we are troubled by what we know so far. The people who seem to have been involved in some way or another are James Baker, the president's chief of staff, David Gergen, his communications chief, David Stockman, and William Casey, the former Reagan campaign manager, who is now director of the CIA.

Baker recalls getting it from Mr. Casey, who was supposed to have gotten it from someone in the Carter camp — a mole, as we say in the Central Intelligence Agency.

Mr. Casey does not recall ever having seen such a book. His memory on it is a complete blank. But if we believe him, this raises a question of national security. If Mr. Casey can't remember being the receiver of filched goods from the opposition party's safe, what is he doing as director of the CIA, where memory is everything? How can he provide the president concise information on Central America, the Middle East and Soviet missiles without forgetting the best details? Do we want someone to head up our intelligence service who knows the names of every company on the Dow Jones Index, but can't recall whether a mole gave him an American president's game plan?

Moving along we now come to the most important part of the effects of the theft, if there was one.

In 1980 we all agreed to await the results of the debate between the two presidential candidates before deciding which man should have his finger on the button.

Then we saw what everyone else did. A Ronald Reagan who was sure of himself and of his answers. Reagan was a completely different candidate from the one who, up until then, was constantly making misstatements which his staff had to correct a few hours later. But during the debate Reagan was as sure of his lines as he was in any of his motion pictures. It was a convincing performance and the pundits walked away from their TV sets convinced Reagan was a candidate who did his homework. He not only had a game plan, but he also knew the other guy's as well.

To this day we don't know if he used the script his people wrote for him for the debate or the script President Carter's people wrote for their candidate.

That is why Washington is concerned. All of us lived through Watergate and it would be a terrible thing if President Reagan's staff did for him what the "Committee to Re-Elect the President" did for Nixon.

Fortunately the president has asked his Justice Department to find out what really happened. Otherwise we may never know.

We'll just have to wait and see.

As one pundit said to me the other day, "This would have never happened if John Dean was alive."

Bankers must await ruling

SEATTLE (AP) — Bankers demanding payment of a $2.25 billion debt for two terminated nuclear power plants being built by the Washington Public Power Supply System must await an appeals court ruling.

King County Superior Court Judge H. Joseph Coleman granted WPPSS a reprieve Tuesday from the largest bond default in history. He said it would be "premature" to lift an order keeping banks from demanding payment until the state Supreme Court decides whether to reconsider a ruling freeing state public utilities from their share of the debt. WPPSS was acting as contractor for the utilities.

Chemical Bank of New York, trustee for bonds sold to finance construction of the plants, had asked Coleman to lift the order.

Response to curfew good

DETROIT (AP) — Parents have "kept their kids home" and youths themselves have responded well to a new curfew enforcement in Detroit, Police Chief William Hart said in announcing 36 arrests.

Citywide enforcement of the 1975 law requiring those younger than 18 off the streets by 10 p.m. on weeknights and 11 p.m. on weekends began last Friday as part of Mayor Coleman Young's war on street crime. Violators face a $500 fine, to be paid by parents.

Meanwhile, lawyers for the Michigan chapter of the American Civil Liberties Union said Tuesday they will challenge the constitutionality of the ordinance.

Diablos pitching duo sour music for Cubs

By ROBERT BRUNDAGE
Sports Writer

El Paso pitchers Bryan Clutterbuck and Jack Lazorko teammed up for a five-hit, 3-1 victory over Midland Wednesday night that gave the Diablos sole possession of first place in the Texas League West at 10-6.

The Cubs dropped into second at 9-7, 1½ games ahead of 7-8 San Antonio.

Three walks accounted for the only base runners Clutterbuck allowed through 3⅔ innings of pitching. Trey Brooks ended his bid for the magical no-hitter with two gone in the fourth with a single up the middle. After moving to second on a wild pitch, Brooks and Mike Anicich (who had walked), were stranded on the base paths.

TRIALING 2-0 in the bottom of the fifth, the Cubs looked like they were figuring Clutterbuck out. Don Hyman led off the inning with Midland's second hit, a double off the center-field wall, and went to third on A.J. Hill's single down the first base line. One out later, Rick Baker hit a fly ball into left-field foul territory that Diablo Jim Paciorek hauled in. Hyman scored.

The Cubs were allowed only four base runners after the run on two hits, a walk and an error. Two double plays effectively ended those scoring threats, giving Clutterbuck the victory and an 8-4 record. None of the Cubs reached safely after Lazorka, who picked up his second save of the series and third of the season, was called on in the eighth.

"We had good pitching and good defense," said El Paso manager Tony Muser. "It was a good team effort."

Muser decided the time was right for the pitching change when Rick Baker led off the eighth inning with a single up the middle. "He was getting his pitches up a bit, getting tired," said Muser. "Lazorko has been pitching well out of the bullpen so there was no sense in going for nine innings. We tried to get Clutterbuck a lead to give him a chance at the victory."

IN A 3-1 ball game, good pitching isn't a one-sided statistic. Midland's Stan Kyles was also doing the job. In nine innings he allowed only five hits while walking two and striking out three to take the loss. Kyles' record fell to 5-8 on the year.

"Kyles threw an outstanding game," said Muser. "He was throwing as well in the ninth as he was in the first. In fact, I thought he was throwing better in the ninth. He's 10 times the pitcher now than we saw in spring training. He's come a long, long way. He's not afraid of this ball park. He goes out and challenges the hitters."

Midland manager Tommy Harmon agreed. "Both of them (the starters) did a super job. Lazorko did too," he said. "Kyles made some mistakes that cost him one run and the game could easily have been tied at 1-1. You've got to give creidt to Clutterbuck though, he came in and did the job and Lazorko slammed the door."

Trailing 2-1 in the sixth, Kyles made the mistakes that cost him the third run. Ernest Riles led off the inning with a walk and went to third when Kyles' pickoff throw hit the dirt and rolled into right field foul territory. He scored on a passed ball on catcher Don Hyman.

Back-to-back doubles by Juan Castillo and Riles gave El Paso a 1-0 lead in the top of the first. Bill Max made it 2-0 when he collected the first of three El Paso singles in the fifth. Mike Felder's RBI shot up the middle provided the eventual winning run.

DEFENSIVELY, THE Diablos seemed to come up with the big plays when they were needed most. With two gone in the third inning — Hyman on second and Jay Loviglio on third (both walked) — Rick Baker hit a shot to right field that looked like it was going for extra bases.

El Paso's Eric Peyton had other ideas. Charging hard on the play, Peyton slid under the ball to make the catch, costing the Cubs two, and maybe three, runs.

"That saved the ball game for them," said Harmon. "If that ball gets by Peyton it might be an inside the park home run. At least a triple. It was the difference in the ball game.

Peyton also turned a double play in the sixth when he caught a Loviglio fly to right and threw to first in time to beat Hyman to the bag.

CUB NOTES — Brooks was the only player in the game with more than one hit, going 2-for-4 and Hyman was the only Cub with an extra base hit, a double in a 1-for-3 effort...Despite spending three weeks on the disabled list, Brooks was one of four Cubs named to the Texas League All-Stars. Hyman, Hatcher and pitcher Darrel Banks were named...The victory was El Paso's third straight over the Cubs and gives the Diablos a 3-1 record in the series...Jim Wright, 3-1, will be on the mound tonight for the Cubs against El Paso's Tim Crews, 4-5...Monday night's blown out fireworks crowd of 3,805 was the third largest in the team's history at Cubs Stadium. The fireworks went off Tuesday instead with 2,710 in attendance, a two-game total of 6,515.

Cincinnati's Mario Soto, left, will start for the National League against Toronto's Dave Stieb in tonight's major league all-star game at Chicago.

AL sluggers don't worry NL's Herzog

By KEITH GAVE

CHICAGO (AP) — American League hitters hoping to end an embarrasing streak of 11 straight All-Star losses will face a talented, yet young and relatively inexperienced National League pitching staff tonight.

But NL Manager Whitey Herzog isn't worried.

"I think the nine pitchers I picked are the best pitchers in the league," he said as his team took batting practice Tuesday. Besides, he added, "I don't know how you can get All-Star experience without getting picked for the team."

Actually, the NL roster lists 10 pitchers. Under pressure from National League President Chub Feeney, Herzog added Los Angeles Dodgers left-hander Fernando Valenzuela.

Feeney explained that he urged Herzog to make the addition after he took a poll of the other 11 NL managers and each named Valenzuela among the top eight pitchers in the league.

"I'll put Valenzuela in and if we lose, I'll blame it on Chub," Herzog joked. The Dodger ace is 8-5 with a 3.63 earned run average, highest on the NL All-Star staff.

WITH TWO previous All-Star appearances, Valenzuela is a veteran on the 1983 staff. Only Montreal's Steve Rogers, who was named for the fifth time, has more All-Star experience. But it is doubtful either will see action tonight since both pitched Monday.

Cincinnati's Mario Soto, whose 9-7 record earned him starting honors, is making his second All-Star appearance, as is Gary Lavelle of San Francisco.

Six of the remaining eight have never played in the All-Star Game. They are Houston's Bill Dawley, San Diego's Dave Dravecky, San Francisco's Atlee Hammaker, New York's Jesse Orosco, Atlanta's Pascual Perez and Chicago's Lee Smith.

And many are likely to be tried by experience. Herzog said he will change pitchers frequently.

"I'll try not to let any pitcher go three innings," he said. "I'll let 'em go one or two. But I'll try not to hurt any team that's in a pennant race."

Meanwhile, Dave Stieb of the American League's East Division-leading Toronto Blue Jays was named to start by Manager Harvey Kuenn. The right-hander, 10-7, is the veteran of the AL's eight-man staff. He is making his third All-Star appearance.

It was just like Old Times

By LARRY SIDDONS

CHICAGO (AP) — There was Billy Williams, slamming a fastball out of the park.

There was Harmon Killebrew, complaining that the Chicago wind had robbed him of a home run.

And there was Ernie Banks, wanting to play on.

Scenes from the past were recreated in every corner of Comiskey Park Tuesday, as 88 former players and baseball officials gathered for an Old-Timers game. It was held as part of baseball's celebration of the 50th All-Star Game, to be played tonight.

Williams, who starred as a slugging outfielder for the crosstown Chicago Cubs, hit a less-than-fastball from Hoyt Wilhelm off the facade of the upper deck in right field for a two-run homer to key the National League alumni to a 6-5 victory over the American League.

Another former Cub, Don Kessinger, got the game-winning RBI in the top of the third and final inning with a two-out double, driving in Bobby Thomson, who also doubled.

Williams was named Most Valuable Player of the game and received a set of golf clubs.

"I just find it kind of ironic that I had to wait until I was 45 years old to get an MVP award," said Williams, who finished 18 major-league seasons with a .290 batting average and 426 homers. "After all these years, it's still a thrill to hit one, especially in the upper deck in front of all these guys."

The wind was blowing hard from left field, and Killebrew, who hit 573 home runs for Washington and Minnesota, swore it cost him another.

"They were kidding me about hitting a home run and I thought I had one," Killebrew said of a shot to left in the second inning. "The wind in Chicago always took a few away, and it happened again today."

The long out helped kill a rally in which the AL scored a pair of unearned runs to tie it 5-5.

Frank Malzone opened the inning with a double and went to third on a single by Bill Freehan. After George Kell popped to third, Malzone scored when former Pittsburgh second baseman Bill Mazeroski let a ground ball by Jim Fregosi go between his legs for a two-base error, and Fregosi scored when the next batter, Bill "Moose" Skowron, lofted a fly ball to left that Lou Brock dropped for another error.

In the top of the third, Thomson lined a two-out double and Kessinger drove him home for a 6-5 lead. Johnny Vander Meer, the only pitcher to hurl no-hitters in consecutive appearances in the majors, then set the Americans down in order to save the victory for Philadelphia Hall of Famer Robin Roberts.

After that, it was time to reminisce and go home for most of the old-timers — but not for Banks.

"Why don't we play 'til it's dark?" the ex-Cub shortstop asked Manager Leo Durocher. "We don't have anyplace to go."

Four Cubs on TL Stars

LITTLE ROCK (AP) — Four Midland Cubs have been selected to the Texas League All-Star game July 20 in El Paso when the East will face the West.

Outfielder Bill Hatcher, infielder Trey Brooks, catcher Don Hyman and pitcher Darryl Banks were named to the squad.

Jackson, the first-half winner in the East, filled five All-Star spots, the league announced Tuesday. Shreveport and Tulsa placed four players each on the teams.

EL PASO led the West with five selections.

The East squad will be managed by Bob Schaefer of Jackson, while Beaumont's Jack Maloof will pilot the West.

Pitchers for the East are Rob Clark of Tulsa, Dan Cox of Arkansas, Joe Georger and Roger McDowell of Jackson, and Bengie Biggus of Shreveport.

Pitching for the West will be Sid Fernandez and Ken Howell of San Antonio, Banks, Walter Vanderbrush of Beaumont and Bryan Clutterbuck of El Paso.

Playing for the East will be Mark Schuster of Shreveport; first base; Terry Pendleton of Arkansas, second base; Kevin Mitchell of Jackson, third base; and John Stevenson of Shreveport, shortstop.

Catchers will be Randy Gomez(gn 'zeexgzt(if| Jghf(Gibjgns(gn Jakc gn¢uOU'FIELDMR' irm Herm Winningham of Jackson and Dan Murphy and Kevin Buckley of Tulsa. Mark Salas will be the designated hitter. Steve Buechele of Tulsa was named to a utility spot.

For the West, Carlos Ponce of El Paso will play first base; Trey Brooks second base; Billy Max of El Paso, third base; Earnest Riles of El Paso, shortstop. Hyman of Midland and Joe Henderson of El Paso will catch.

NO TITLE DEFENSE

Larry-Marvis fight for fun

MEXICO CITY (AP) — Larry Holmes' proposed fight against Marvis Frazier will not be recognized as a defense of his World Boxing Council heavyweight title, says Jose Sulaiman, WBC president, who repeated his warning that Holmes faces loss of his championship.

The organization is insisting that Holmes fight top-ranked challenger Greg Page. Sulaiman conceded that Holmes' failure to agree last month to a definite date for a fight with Page had been overlooked, but he indicated Tuesday his patience was wearing thin.

"Larry must make his mandatory defense," Sulaiman said, adding that "history repeats itself." He recalled that the WBC had stripped Leon Spinks of his heavyweight title in 1978 when he failed to defend against No. 1 challenger Ken Norton.

SULAIMAN SAID Holmes "wants the WBC to support and certify a contest against Marvis Frazier," the 22-year-old son of former heavyweight champion Joe Frazier. He said the WBC would not certify that bout as a title fight because Frazier, who has had only 10 professional fights, had not met any of the WBC's top contenders.

"We have to defend our principles and our rules," Sulaiman said.

Holmes said he has signed to fight the unbeaten Frazier in September or October, probably in Atlantic City, N.J. The undefeated champion reportedly would get $3.1 million for the fight, while Frazier would receive nearly $1 million.

"Larry wants to have an easier fight and make some money, which is fine, but not when the rules of the organization are broken," Sulaiman said.

U.S., Cubs clash in WUG tonight's cage headliner

By JIM COUR

EMONTON, Alberta (AP) — In a rematch of the 1979 Pan American Games finalists, the unbeaten U.S. and Cuban teams will play tonight in a men's basketball headliner at the World University Games.

The Americans are heavy favorites on the basis of a lopsided exhibition victory in Kansas City, Mo., before this competition began.

But the way things have been going for the Americans here in other sports, you never can tell.

The Soviet Union continued its domination in the swimming competition Tuesday night, posting four victories in five events.

The Soviets are far ahead in the swimming medals race with 23, 15 of them gold. The United States is second with 12 medals and Canada third with nine.

UCLA's Bruce Hayes had to settle for his third silver medal when he finished second to Soviet star Vladimir Salnikov, world and Olympic champion in the 400-meter freestyle. Salnikov was clocked in 3:48.32 with Hayes at 3:54.93.

It was the fifth medal of the Games for Hayes, the only American to win a gold medal in the first five days of competition.

Both the American and Cuban men's basketball clubs are 4-0 in these games.

Cuba lost by a big margin to the Americans in the 1979 Pan Am competition.

Before coaching the U.S. team to a 100-52 romp over Australia Tuesday, Missouri's Norm Stewart watched the Cubans erase a seven-point halftime deficit and beat Ivory Coast 107-82. The Americans crushed the Africans 104-65 on Monday.

"I think they're (the Cubans) playing a lot better than they were in Kansas City," Stewart said. "I don't really know any of their players by name but that No. 9 (Raula Dubois) has become a pretty dominant player.

"They're very capable so we'll have to be ready."

Cuban Coach Pedro Chappe Garcia said the obvious — his players want to beat the Americans desperately.

"If there is anything that gets a Cuban team up, it is playing the States," he said.

Politics emerged at the games Tuesday when Soviet Union officials hinted they may delay a decision to enter the 1984 Olympics in Los Angeles until the last moment.

Former President Jimmy Carter called for a U.S. boycott of the 1980 Olympics in Moscow because of the Soviets' intervention in Afghanistan.

"The final decision on our participating in the Los Angeles Olympics should be taken at a time when it is clear the local organizers have succeeded in assuring all of the regulations are followed," Soviet Union Olympic Committee member Nikolay Riashentzev told a news conference.

In Tuesday's U.S. men's basketball victory, guards Johnny Dawkins and Eric Turner combined for 29 points. Dawkins had 15 and Turner 14.

Dawkins, from Duke, and Turner, from Michigan, led five Americans in double figures. Villanova's Ed Pinckney came off the bench to get 12 points while Louisiana Tech's Karl Malone and Michigan State's Kevin Willis each tallied 10.

"I thought we played a lot better defense than we've been playing," Stewart said. "It was a good test for us defensively and I thought we handled it well."

The methodical Australians, 2-2, stayed in the game for the first six minutes, trailing only 17-14. But the Americans then outscored the Australians 33-5 to take a 50-19 bulge.

The Americans went ahead to stay in the game at 11-10 on a foul shot by Missouri's Greg Cavener with 4:23 gone. Pinckney jammed in a rebound 26 seconds later.

Dawkins scored the first three baskets of the second half to put the U.S. squad in front 62-33.

Charles Barkley, Auburn's 6-foot-6, 270-pound center-forward, delighted the crowd at the University of Alberta when he stole a ball, dribbled the length of the court and made a slam dunk with his back turned to the basket.

It probably will be Barkley's job to contain Dubois. Dubois scored 25 points against Ivory Coast.

"I don't want to brag," Barkley said, "but I think we can beat anybody as long as we play as well as we can."

NCAA defends control of TV

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — The NCAA and 24 of its member schools say any contingency plan to sell college football television rights for the 1983 season would amount to a fire sale of damaged goods and would cost the nation's colleges tens of millions of dollars.

The NCAA also contended on Tuesday that the universities of Georgia and Oklahoma could make more money from the NCAA TV plan this season than they could make through independent marketing of their games.

Those contentions came in the NCAA's answer in support of its earlier motion to stay the rulings of a U.S. District Court and the 10th Circuit Court of Appeals that the NCAA TV plan violates the Sherman Antitrust Act.

OU and Georgia had argued that the NCAA should not be given another stay, but that it should be required to post a $3 million bond if a stay is granted to pay for any losses OU and Georgia might incur in not being able to market their own games.

"Why do they think we're fighting the stay?" asked Clyde Muchmore, one of the attorneys for OU and Georgia. Do they think we're trying to make less money?"

U.S. District Judge Juan Burciaga ruled last September that the NCAA plan and its football TV contracts with ABC, CBS and TBS were a violation of the Sherman act.

The NCAA appealed to the 10th Circuit and received a stay of Burciaga's ruling, but in May a 10th Circuit panel, by a 2-1 vote, upheld Burciaga.

The NCAA then asked the 10th Circuit to rehear the case, but was turned down by a 4-1 vote, and has now asked for a stay of Burciaga's ruling and of the 10th Circuit mandate while it prepares an appeal to the U.S. Supreme Court.

If the NCAA fails to get a stay, then NCAA members, singly or in groups, could then start marketing their own games to television as they saw fit.

The College Football Association, whose board backed the OU-Georgia suit, has prepared a contingency plan for such a situation, and some members of the CFA and the Big 10 and Pac-10 conferences have held several meetings to discuss a consortium that might pick up the CBS and ABC program plans for this fall.

In affidavits attached to the NCAA response, the 24 schools and the Pac-10 and Big 10 said they strongly desire to have the NCAA contracts remain in effect for this season.

The affidavits were also signed by nine members of the Pac 10 and all 10 members of the Big 10 and five CFA members — Air Force, Wyoming, Texas A&M, Army and Navy.

The Pac-10 school which was not listed as a signee of the affidavits is Southern California, which banded with Oklahoma to try to put their game on TV before the stay was issued last fall.

All-Star game

"From there, I don't know who's going to pitch. We'll just have to see what develops," Kuenn said Tuesday.

He can choose from Texas' Rick Honeycutt, Kansas City's Dan Quisenberry or Boston's Bob Stanley, all making their second appearance, or All-Star rookies Aurelio Lopez of Detroit, Cleveland's Rick Sutcliffe, Seattle's Matt Young or Baltimore's Tippy Martinez.

KUENN DENIED that he was pressured by New York Manager Billy Martin to add left-hander Dave Righetti to the staff when Ron Guidry of the Yankees withdrew because of back spasms. Righetti, who fired a no-hitter Monday against Boston improving his record to 10-3, said he had been asked if he would be available for the All Star Game and replied that he could pitch an inning because Wednesday would have been his day to warm up between starts.

"First off, Billy did not call me," Kuenn said. "And if he did, I would have asked him to let me know that Righetti was going to pitch a no hitter. It's a shame that players like him can't make the team. There's only so many who can make it."

But youth or inexperience matters little in a game like this, according to last year's All-Star MVP Gary Carter, who is making his sixth appearance as the leading vote-getter among National League fans.

"Experience doesn't mean much. What it boils down to is what got you here," the catcher said. "When the adrenaline gets pumping, the best comes out in everyone. Especially when you're involved in a game like this."

Tulsa tops Arkansas

By Associated Press

Mitch Zwolensky tossed his second consecutive two-hitter as Tulsa blanked Arkansas 2-0 in Texas League action.

Zwolensky, 9-7, retired the first eight batters, 10 in a row in the middle innings and finished with nine consecutive outs.

In other TL games Tuesday night, El Paso beat Midland 3-1 and Shreveport edged Jackson 5-4 in 10 innings.

San Antonio and Beaumont were rained out.

Zwolensky, who leads the league with three shutouts, allowed only three Arkansas base runners while pitching his sixth complete game of the year. The Travelers got a bunt single in the third and a walk and a single in the seventh.

Bob Brower hit a two-run homer in the third for Tulsa.

Ruben Gotay, 0-5, was the losing pitcher for Arkansas.

Randy Gomez hit a two-out, bases-loaded single in the bottom of the 10th

Atlanta welcomes Star break

ATLANTA (AP) — The eyes of baseball fans are on Chicago and tonight's All-Star game. But to Atlanta's Jerry Royster, the All-Star break means the Braves will "have three days off, then come back and play for the pennant."

Although the Braves have been the hottest team in baseball the last two weeks, winning 10 of 12 games to pass the Los Angeles Dodgers and gain first place in the National League West, Royster welcomed the break.

"We're tired. We're showing some signs of fatigue," said the utilityman, who replaced Rafael Ramirez at shortstop for the last four games while Ramirez rested bruised ribs.

Atlanta Manager Joe Torre, who will be a National League coach tonight in Chicago, wasn't worried about cooling off a hot streak.

"I think the break is coming at a good time for us," Torre said. "Injury-wise, we can use some time off."

The wounded, in addition to Ramirez, include relief pitchers Gene Garber and Terry Forster. Garber is on the 21-day disabled list with an inflamed nerve in his right elbow. Forster is nursing a sore shoulder.

Third baseman Bob Horner said, "The thing is, the three-day rest comes at the same time for everybody. I'll tell you, it's a welcome sight to us. You play 80 games, you need some time off."

Hank Aaron, baseball's home run king and now Atlanta director of player development, said, "I just feel the Dodgers will not be the team to beat out. I think the (San Diego) Padres and (San Francisco) Giants will emerge."

Leo, crusty as ever, returns

By WILL GRIMSLEY

CHICAGO (AP) — It was a familiar scene — Leo Durocher in a baseball uniform, sitting on a table in the manager's office and-cussin' up a storm.

"This cap is two sizes too big for me," he growled, wrapping layers of adhesive tape around the inside band. "And Yosh gave me a 34 waist on these pants.

"I haven't been a 34 since I quit playing nearly 40 years ago."

Durocher wore a Chicago Cubs uniform provided by the Cubs' lockerroom custodian Yosh Kowano although he is better known publicly for his tenures with the Dodgers and Giants.

"Look, No. 2,'" he said, showing the back of the shirt. "I've always been No. 2, all my career."

LEO THE Lip, as they once called him, made one of his rare baseball appearances at Comiskey Park Tuesday as skipper of the victorious National Leaguers in the Old Timers Game — the appetizer for tonight's 50th All-Star extravaganza.

"I got No. 2 when I broke in with the Yankees in 1925," he continued. "Never had anything else. Lasorda (Tom Lasorda, manager of the Dodgers) grabbed it, maybe thinking it was good luck.

"One day when I was just a kid on the Yankees I'm lying on a table like this — all dressed in my uniform — and the Babe (Ruth) comes up and dumps me in the middle of the floor."

Durocher, who will be 78 later this month, is still a crusty codger who spews his words at a 500-a-minute clip and snaps out his baseball wisdom in raspy chunks that don't tolerate dispute.

His hair, what is left of it, is pure white. Ignore that waistline malarkey. He still is thin and tough as nails.

IN HIS managerial heyday he was a volatile, contentious guy who conducted a tight ship, feuded with umpires, fans and the establishment and never minded taking an occasional poke at an obstreperous fan who might get too flighty.

Did he ever consider the similarity of his and the style of the Yankees' Billy Martin?

"They're always saying somebody imitated me," he replied. "Eddie Stanky imitated me. Bill Rigney imitated me. As far as I know everybody manages like somebody.

"But Billy Martin, he will never change. Who's going to change him? I'm not saying this in a derogatory sense. That's just Billy."

Leo substantiated the report that he could have had the Baltimore Orioles' job in the 1960s, before he took over as manager of the Cubs.

"Larry MacPhail — the old man not the son (Lee MacPhail, now president of the American League) approached me when I was coach for the Dodgers. I turned him down, Leo said.

"Later, Lee came out to talk to me. I said, 'No, I'm happy with the Dodgers.' This is my home.'"

Durocher said his players once told him, "If you can manage a ballclub, anybody can manage."

"You know, they were right. It's not as hard as people make out. I never paid any attention to charts and computer stuff like they use today.

"I TOLD my pitchers, 'Keep the ball high and tight or low and away.' If they do that, who can hit them?

The year U.S. loses Series?

By BEN WALKER
AP Sports Writer

The Toronto Blue Jays in first place? The Texas Rangers?

Could this be the year of the first all-Canadian World Series? Or perhaps the first all-southern one?

As baseball pauses for its annual All-Star game — the earliest since 1942 — both the Blue Jays and the Rangers are in first place in the American League. In the National, the leaders are the Montreal Expos and the Atlanta Braves, trying to show that last year was no fluke.

If those standings hold up, consider the frigid possibilities of a Montreal-Toronto World Series or a nice, warm Texas-Atlanta encounter.

Meanwhile, the first half of the season has seen Rod Carew chase .400 and Steve Carlton and Nolan Ryan chase each other.

Elsewhere, Carl Yastrzemski and Johnny Bench are going, while Mark Fidrych, George Bamberger and Rene Lachemann are already gone.

And, Dave Righetti of the New York Yankees wrapped up the first-half on July 4 with the first no-hitter in the major leagues since 1981 when he set down Boston 4-0.

The American League East started with Billy Martin returned for the third time as the Yankees manager and Joe Altobelli replacing Earl Weaver in the Baltimore Orioles' dugout.

Yet Toronto has opened the most eyes. Led by pitcher Dave Stieb, 10-7, the Blue Jays' lineup of talented unknowns has carried them to a 43-33 record, one game ahead of the Orioles. Notriously slow-starting, Baltimore has had to overcome disabling injuries to hurlers Mike Flanagan and Jim Palmer.

In New York, Martin barely weathered a scrape with a woman reporter in June that threatened to cost him his job. The Yankees, two games behind Toronto, were also hurt by a lack of right-handed starting pitching: Matt Keough, acquired from Oakland on June 15, became the first Yankee starting right-hander to win when he notched a victory June 19.

The Milwaukee Brewers, last year's champion "Harvey's Wallbangers," have lost Cy Young winner Pete Vuckovich and reliever Rollie Fingers for the entire season with injuries.

Boston has enjoyed Jim Rice's league-leading 22 homers and 58 runs batted in. But Red Sox fans are lamenting Yastrzemski's announcement that this season will be his last; Fenway Park is already sold out for Boston's last home game.

Only the Cleveland Indians, with first-year manager Mike Ferraro, are below the .500 mark in the AL East.

For years, the Texas Rangers were a flop in the AL West. This year, relegated to the bottom in pre-season predictions, the Rangers and rookie Manager Doug Rader are 44-34, two games ahead of California. Leading the way has been Rick Honeycutt, who was 5-17 last season but is 11-4 this year with a 1.64 earned run average.

Carew's .402 average for the Angels leads the majors while George Brett is hitting .364 for Kansas City and Boston's second-year man Wade Boggs is at .356.

The Chicago White Sox spent millions on free-agent Floyd Bannister, but so far, Bannister has only a 3-9 record and 4.76 ERA, and there were whisperings that he was on the trading block. But rookie Ron Kittle has found Chicago to his liking, pounding 18 homers and knocking in 55 runs.

Oakland's Rickey Henderson, who stole a record 130 bases last year, has swiped 42 this season. Seattle, with a 30-51 record — worst in the majors — fired Manager Lachemann in June and released Perry, who has 310 career victories.

In the National League East, the world champion St. Louis Cardinals traded Keith Hernandez to New York and saw Lonnie Smith enter a drug treatment center. Pitcher Joaquin Andujar is just 4-11, yet the Cardinals are only two games behind the Expos.

Montreal's strong showing has been aided by Andre Dawson's 62 runs batted in and Steve Rogers' 12-3 mark.

Philadelphia's Mike Schmidt was almost dormant in May and June, Pete Rose is hitting just .244 and Carlton is 9-9, but the "Wheeze Kids" are second in the NL East.

Carlton and Houston's Ryan have been playing their own sort of game in the race for the all-time strikeout lead. Ryan passed Walter Johnson's legendary mark of 3,508 early this season before Carlton went ahead. The two have traded places several times and Carlton's 3,569 is currently eight ahead of the Astro flamethrower.

The Chicago Cubs, who have not won a pennant since 1945, have pulled within four games of the top while the Pittsburgh Pirates won nine games in a row, longest victory streak in the majors this season. The New York Mets, with Tom Seaver returning home and running up a 5-8 record, saw Bamberger, their manager, resign.

In the NL West, Dale Murphy's 19 home runs and 57 RBI have put defending champion Atlanta one game ahead of the Dodgers. They are the only two teams in the majors above .600.

Los Angeles watched reliever Steve Howe get off to a strong start and then re-enter a drug treatment center. The Dodgers fined him $54,000, equivalent to one month's salary.

Cincinnati's Bench announced recently that this would be his last year.

San Diego expected Steve Garvey would break Billy Williams' NL record of playing in 1,117 consecutive games — he did.

Rangers' Honeycutt disappointed

CHICAGO (AP) — Texas Rangers' pitcher Rick Honeycutt admits he's "disappointed" that he did not receive the starting assignment for the American League in tonight's All-Star Game at Comiskey Park.

But AL Manager Harvey Kuenn said Tuesday that he decided to go with Toronto right-hander Dave Steib because of "the predominately right-handed hitting National League lineup."

The left-handed Honeycutt, whose 11 wins top the league, has a 1.52 ERA. Steib has a 10-7 mark and a 2.54 ERA.

"Truthfully, I'm disappointed," Honeycutt said Tuesday after Kuenn announced the starting assignment. "When you have the stats to back something, it's just there in black and white."

But Honeycutt refused to argue Kuenn's choice.

"What's gonna happen is that Steib's gonna go out and shut 'em out for three innings, then I'm gonna come in for two and we'll go out and score six runs. That way I'll win the game," he said.

Honeycutt made the All-Star team in 1980 as Seattle's representative, but didn't pitch at all.

"I feel a little better this time," Honeycutt said. "I feel like I deserve to be here. The last time I knew they had to have a representative from Seattle and they just happened to pick me."

Gaylord Perry signs with Kansas City Royals

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — Gaylord Perry wasn't going to wait too long for the Kansas City Royals to make the first move.

"If they hadn't claimed me, they would have been one of the first teams I'd have called," the veteran pitcher said Tuesday after the Royals acquired him on a waiver claim.

"I came through Kansas City last week and spent the night at a hotel out by the airport. I saw something in the paper where they had an interest. I was going to call them that morning, but I didn't want to cause any problems," Perry said from his home in Williamston, N.C.

Perry, at 44 the oldest pitcher in the major leagues, had been designated for assignment 10 days earlier by the Seattle Mariners. The Mariners fired Manager Rene Lachemann and released shortstop Todd Cruz the same day.

Perry, who is 22 days older than Jim Kaat of the St. Louis Cardinals, was 3-10 with a 4.94 .

MGF to evade bankruptcy?

Company, ornery creditor meet

Business-Energy Writer

W. Phillip Marcum, executive vice president of Midland's beleaguered MGF Oil Corp., is meeting in San Francisco today with an especially ornery creditor, Stanford N. Phelps. Marcum said he will try to talk Phelps into filing an 'abstention' to halt the Chapter 7 U.S. Bankruptcy Court procedures he instigated against MGF.

"I'm headed to San Francisco," Marcum said, "to see if we can come to some agreement with Mr. Phelps — so we can get this company back on-track.

"THERE IS A CHANCE," said Marcum. "If we can get him to agree to our plan (for a debenture swap arrangement, with stock added to the deal) — which we think is a good plan — the filing of an abstention would help get this company out of the legal 'limbo' that Chapter 7 action put us in."

Phelps, who reportedly owns $5 million in MGF's 14-1/2 percent senior subordinated debentures, sued MGF when he did not receive an interest payment due May 1. If MGF had paid the debenture interest, it would have amounted to $5.4 million on a $75 million issue.

Phelps filed in the San Antonio U.S. Bankruptcy Court last week alleging MGF was not paying its debts and should be held in Chapter 7 bankruptcy and have its negotiable assets liquidated.

IN APRIL, AUDITORS questioned MGF's ability to stay in business. The company said when it offered to swap the debentures it "might not be able to continue" if holders didn't accept the plan.

The new 6 percent senior issue being offered by MGF would mature in 1988.

Revenues of $20.4 million in the first quarter of 1983 didn't stop MGF from losing $10.3 million, and last year's revenues of $104.8 million did not meet debts, which caused a 1982 loss of $80.3 million.

OF MGF'S CREDIT SITUATION, Marcum said, the only things written in stone are terms of its restructuring agreement for $153 million in secured and general-partnership bank debts.

This restructuring in May, and the offer to swap the 14-1/2 percent securities for six percent notes plus common stock, meant that MGF "had a plan in place" before Phelps filed suit, Marcum said.

"We were moving forward when Mr. Phelps caused this unfortunate incident."

Right now the company is in a state of limbo, Marcum said. It isn't actually in Chapter 7 because that point must be judged by the courts. Marcum said, though, that in a practical sense this action has made the company helpless to negotiate any other creditor agreements.

"WE COULDN'T PAY THEM even if we wanted to pay them, now," said Marcum. "Under Chapter 7 we may continue doing business, but we cannot negotiate our other debts."

The $153 million bank refinance deal will be carried out as planned, but any creditor that hasn't signed a deal with MGF before this bankruptcy action is now in 'limbo' until a court decision is made. The deadline for a response from MGF or an abstention from Stanford Phelps and two minor creditors who sued with him will be July 19.

Barring an abstention, MGF has three options: Pay the interest due its bond holders, file a contesting petition, or file Chapter 11 reorganization plans to protect its assets from general creditors like the bond holders.

MGF HAS SAID IT WILL oppose the Chapter 7 action "vigorously." Marcum said Phelps was an underwriter for the securities firm Prudential-Bache in New York City.

"That's how he first represented himself to us, as an employee of Prudential-Bache, who helped underwrite our securities," said Marcum.

Phelps and two other smaller creditors beginning proceedings against MGF, when all its larger creditors are trying to help it to regain its financial composure, is an 'outrageous' move, Marcum said.

Ortloff delivers

It required a special train and took ten days' transit to move two 220-foot, 400-ton ethane recovery columns from Houston to Gaines County recently. The giant columns, designed by the Ortloff Corporation, Midland — a subsidiary of Elcor Corporation — will use advanced technology to help oilfield personnel eek the last barrels of oil out of every well in an EOR field. EOR stands for enhanced oil recovery, and these columns are for a project in the Seminole San Andres Unit.

Whan assembled, the plant will inject, recover, process and recycle CO2 to increase oil production in the West Texas oil field.

AIME meeting in Midland today

The chiefs of several national engineering societies confer in Midland today on the future affairs of more than 100,000 U.S. engineers.

The executive committee of the American Institute of Mining, Metallurgical and Petroleum Engineers (AIME) is holding its mid-year board meeting for the first time in Midland.

Besides conducting routine business, executive committee members will have a chance to exchange ideas and discuss problems affecting the various industries, said AIME's 1983 president, Edward Runyan.

Runyan is president of Midland firm Bell Petroleum Services, an oilfield services conglomerate. Bell Petroleum Surveys, Bell Rubber Co., Bell Petroleum Laboratories, Bell H2S safety, Bell Petroleum Systems, and Bell Casing Bond are included in the company. Most operations are focused in the Rockies, West Texas, and the Gulf Coast.

The meeting should provide some perspective. The current economic downturn affects other extractive industries as well as the petroleum industry, Runyan said Tuesday.

Because the energy producer is the supplier of oil and gas, which are 'premier fuels,' Runyan said. "What we do in the Permian Basin stacks back and affects other members of AIME. It's interesting to talk to the miners — they really have it tough right now."

Mining industries are depressed during an oil glut, Runyan said, because cheaper fuel oil draws large industrial users away from coal. Metallurgical companies are having hard times because of low-price foreign competition, especially in iron and steel.

Runyan is 1983 president of AIME, the international umbrella organization for professional mining engineers in hard rock (iron, copper, molybdenum), coal, oil and gas — all the extractive industries.

The presidents of AIME's professional organizations like the Iron and Steel Society, Metallurgical Society, Society of Mining Engineers and Society of Petroleum Engineers will attend today's executive meeting.

Coal and copper miners will be making a day-long trip to the Yates Field in Pecos County, courtesy of Marathon Oil, so they can get a first-hand look at how the oil industry operates.

"We interrelate with many other engineering societies," said Runyan, serving as spokesman for AIME on a variety of issues. "We interface on what steps are being taken to increase engineering manpower and correct the crisis in engineering education."

Runyan said AIME is working to help schools retain good teachers in the face of tempting offers from industry. AIME provides experts to the Accreditation Board of Engineering Technology to monitor competence of the instructors in our nation's engineering schools.

Established in 1871, AIME is the umbrella organization for the extractive sciences — mining, metallurgical, and petroleum. It has over 100,000 engineer members.

AIME represents roughly 99 percent of energy professionals, except for solar and wind power — which are passive rather than active energy sources.

Japan may buy coal, Alaskan oil from U.S.

By The Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

ENERGY EXPORTS

TOKYO — The United States has urged Japan to buy a third of its imported coal from American mines, and to take part in the development of Alaska's North Slope natural gas, a U.S. official said here Tuesday.

In addition, the official said, Japanese officials have been told that President Reagan would seek to modify a ban on exports of Alaska oil so that Japan and other Pacific countries may buy at least 200,000 barrels a day.

Such a modification would enable Japan to buy up to 73 million barrels a year, almost $21.2 billion worth, or enough to wipe out the U.S. trade deficit with Japan.

The coal proposal, if realized, would increase Japanese oil purchases by an estimated $600 million by 1990. Japan's liquefied natural gas purchases could increase by billions of dollars.

Last year, the U.S. trade deficit with Japan was $19 billion. Through May of this year, the deficit was nearly $8.6 billion, which could mean $20.5 billion for the year.

The proposals were made by a high-level team of American officials headed by W. Allen Wallis, the undersecretary of state for economic affairs. A U.S. official who briefed American reporters afterward said that the Japanese shared the Americans' view that energy trade would "help further develop the close economic relations between the two countries."

No specific incentives or trade-offs on other issues in American-Japanese economic relations were offered, the official said. "Real progress" was achieved, he said, in arousing Japanese interest in energy imports from the United States, but there were no specific commitments.

While acknowledging a desire to diversify their sources of energy imports, the Japanese pointed out that most of the roadblocks to increased purchases from the United States were American roadblocks. Foremost among them is the ban, imposed by Congress, on exports of Alaska oil.

The U.S. official said that President Reagan would try to get Congress to modify the ban and permit "a minimum of 200,000 barrels a day" out of Alaska's production — 1.6 million barrels a day at present — to be exported to Japan and other Pacific countries. In addition, Reagan would propose that all new Alaska production be freed for export. The U.S. official predicted that that would spur further exploration for oil in Alaska.

Court rules against taxing bank securities

DALLAS (AP) — A U.S. Supreme Court ruling curtailing local taxation of federal securities held by banks, such as Treasury bills and federal bonds, could prompt property tax increases by financially strapped Texas cities, officials said.

Tax and legal experts predict that Tuesday's decision by the high court could result in rewriting of the state's bank tax laws.

"Frankly, we're very concerned," Houston Mayor Kathy Whitmire said after the high court ruled 6-2 that local taxing authorities must deduct the value of U.S. government securities when they calculate taxes owed by bank shareholders.

Mrs. Whitmire said it was too soon to discuss how the city can absorb a $12.5 million loss for this budget year when it refunds $6.5 million projected for fiscal 1984 and $6 million collected in 1983. But she called the decision "a substantial loss."

Linus Wright, Dallas school superintendent, said the ruling jeopardizes his proposed merit-pay plan for teachers because money that was to be used to start the program might now be diverted to repay the banks.

"This could seriously harm our efforts to establish a merit-pay program since we were counting on using the money from a tax increase to get it started," Wright said.

Mrs. Whitmire said her city's legal department would be asked to evaluate the court decision, and that Houston might seek state legislation to try to offset some of the revenue loss.

Attorneys for the 52 Dallas-area banks that appealed an earlier ruling by the Texas Court of Appeals said the institutions are entitled to about $44 million in refunds from the City of Dallas, Dallas County and the Dallas Independent School District.

That would be for taxes collected for 1980, 1981 and 1982.

Brian Lidji, a Dallas attorney representing the 52 banks, said the institutions will negotiate the repayment with local jurisdictions.

He said the banks are willing to pay business franchise taxes and personal property taxes, which they do not pay now, in place of the shareholder tax. He said such a settlement, if accepted, would mean banks would still pay 70 percent more in taxes than they would if federal securities are deducted.

"We just want to be treated like other businesses," Lidji said.

Russians are coming, bringing oil

From Wire Reports

NEW YORK — Earlier this year, the Soviet Union stole a line from the capitalists' book by cutting its oil prices to attract buyers in a glutted market. The strategy worked, and warnings quickly arose: The Russians are coming!

Even the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries, which paid little attention to other oil sellers in years past, was alarmed. In June, OPEC dispatched a representative to Moscow for a "dialogue" on oil policies.

Amid a flurry of attention to the new Soviet salesmanship, one U.S. newspaper asked, "Could it be that the Soviets are becoming the 'new sheiks' of the oil world?"

The answer, it seems, is no.

For nearly a decade the Soviet Union has ranked as the world's biggest producer of oil, and its daily export of 3.3 million barrels ranks second in the world to Saudi Arabia's 4 million barrels.

Yet the Soviet Union has had little influence on oil, prices because most of its exports are to its Eastern Bloc satellites and Cuba.

Last year, however, shipments to its allies were cut back to allow more sales to Western Europe. Sales to the West provide hard currency — that is, money accepted for international trade — while the Soviet allies pay lower prices denominated in rubles.

But while the Soviets have surprised their oil-exporting competitors by grabbing a bigger share of the Western market, many experts in the United States and Europe say the Soviets' biggest gains are behind them.

"They are not an emerging oil power," says Michael Roeskau, a specialist in Soviet energy policy at the International Energy Agency in Paris.

Roeskau's agency estimates Soviet earnings from oil exports to the West will drop by 40 percent over the next three years from 1982's $16.4 billion, assuming prices do not fall further.

That still would be a far cry from what the U.S. Central Intelligence Agency once predicted. In a 1977 report that has become infamous in industry circles, the CIA predicted the Soviet Union would be importing oil by 1985; now it appears the Soviets will be exporting oil into the next century.

Among the limits on Soviet oil power are a growing internal appetite for oil, a lack of development technology and a fear of pushing prices too low.

WTGS to hear specialist

The West Texas Geological Society will meet Tuesday, July 12, at Midland Center to hear a specialist in carbonate and evaporite sedimentology and diagenesis.

Thomas C. White, graduate student at Rice University, will speak on "Diagenesis and development of secondary reservoir porosity, San Andres formation, Howard-Glasscock field, Howard County."

The meeting begins at 11:30 a.m. Cost of the luncheon is $6.50. Reservations should be made by calling the Society at 683-1573 before 4 p.m. Thursday, July 7.

Mayor fires police officers, city judge

By MIKE COCHRAN
Associated Press Writer

TYE, Texas (AP) — The mayor fired the cops, who sued the mayor, who was ousted by the city council, which resigned to protest the cop firing.

Got that?

A cop shot a guy, who sued the city, which fired the cop, who brought criminal charges against the mayor, who fired the judge, who sued the mayor.

Uh huh.

There was the bomb threat at the Rinky Dink Cafe and the siege of City Hall, which prompted the ousted cops to deputize their buddies to guard a meeting that the mayor said was illegal.

That was before someone beat a horse and nailed rabbits to a wall but during the time a Nazi swastika fluttered atop city hall.

Welcome to Tye, Texas, population 2,200, home of the Rinky Dink Cafe and Mayor Jim Snowden, whose car displays a sign saying that "God is My Co-Pilot."

The car has a flat tire.

This is convoluted and comical, but rarely amusing to the citizenry of this little city on the western fringe of Abilene.

TOWNSPEOPLE COMPLAIN that Abilenians seldom visit Tye except to loot stores, vandalize trailer parks, dump bodies and put the finishing touches on weekend drinking binges.

Abilene, they say, reaps the economic benefits of nearby Dyess Air Force Base while Tye gets the riff-raff.

Perhaps that explains in part why a substantial number of residents, including the cops, were unhappy with Mayor Snowden for firing the city's three-man police force.

"I fired three policemen and the city judge because I have the state's authority to do it," Snowden said once by way of explanation.

"They were out joining that Citizens for Better Government, and its sole purpose was to make trouble for me."

At 62, Snowden, an automotive shop owner, is a short, tough, stubborn, grizzled, balding chain-smoking ex-Army sergeant who contends the majority of the Tye residents are on his side, not to mention God and the law and, for a while, one city council member.

He maintains the ousted officers are malcontents incapable of "walking and chewing gum at the same time."

Said he: "It makes me wonder why I ever hired them."

The mayor's adversaries, namely a group called Citizens for Better Government, portray him as arrogant and vindictive, a religious hypocrite who rules not as an elected official but as a heavy-handed dictator.

"I wish I was a dictator," Snowden told a reporter, chuckling. "It would be the most efficient government we could have."

Tye, Texas Mayor Jim Snowden poses outside the west Texas community's city hall near his car. Snowden, 69, an automotive shop owner, fired the town's three police officers and the city judge, he says, because he has the authority to do it.

Reflecting on that a moment, he added: "Nah, really, I believe in democracy."

Whatever, the dilemma began Jan. 4 when Snowden, acting without council approval, fired rookie policeman Terry Hood, who along with Chief Don Parrack and his assistant, John Mauney, were the Tye police force.

Snowden dismissed Hood for letting civilians ride in his patrol car, but that paled beside earlier flaps involving Parrack and Mauney.

Parrack was accused, and later cleared, of charges stemming from a racial-intimidation episode in which a black truck driver quoted the flashlight-wielding police chief as saying, "I'm the judge and jury here" and "I'll show you how we treat niggers in Texas."

MAUNEY SHOT AN ABILENE man who he said he thought was raping a female companion. Whether a rape was taking place later was disputed, but Mauney insisted anyway that he opened fire only after the man attacked him.

That led to a $1 million lawsuit and charges that Mauney had violated the man's civil rights.

"They alleged that I shot him," Mauney says now. "That's true. But the rest of the allegations are lies ... I was just doing my job."

At the time, he was doing his job just inside the Abilene city limits.

That is but one issue still unresolved. Another is a $4.5 million lawsuit filed by Mauney and Parrack against Snowden and the city.

The debate over Hood's dismissal came to a head Jan. 21 with the resignation of three council members: Ruby Kennedy, Helena Brazell and Ernest Tyler.

"Snowden told me he was the mayor of this town and he'd run it any way he wanted to," grumbled Mrs. Kennedy, 69, a short, stout, white-haired, grandmotherly figure.

"Snowden hasn't said much to me," she said, "since I called him a damn liar."

ACCORDING TO CHIEF PARRACK, Snowden told him the same day: "I've waited 12 years for this. Now I can run this ... city like I want to."

If Snowden so spoke, he spoke too soon.

The dissident trio gathered that evening at the Rinky Dink, unofficial headquarters for anti-Snowden forces, and hit upon a novel idea: Why not fire Snowden?

The next day, a Saturday, the three council members called a meeting at City Hall to withdraw their resignations and set their ouster plan in motion.

Parrack said Snowden learned of the scheme and told him: "If you let those council members in here or allow any kind of meeting, you'll suffer the consequences."

He ignored the threat.

With Parrack and Mauney cradling loaded shotguns in the hallway, and backed up by a quartet of deputies, Mrs. Kennedy and her two colleagues cited Snowden for "official misconduct" and voted to oust him from office.

BESIDES REINSTATING THE rookie officer, Hood, the trio also voted to ask the Taylor County district attorney's office to investigate Snowden for possible criminal charges.

Parrack said later he deputized four Tye residents only after receiving information "that the mayor was deputizing people ... to make an armed march on City Hall and prevent the meeting from being held."

"Poppycock!" responded Snowden. "I can't believe they thought I was silly enough to go mobilize more people to retake city hall."

Besides, he said with a grin, "It takes four votes to fire me from the council."

Prices drop in '83

The first half of 1983 ended with supermarket prices almost 1 percent below what they were at the start of the year, an Associated Press marketbasket survey shows.

The sharpest decline of the year — and the biggest monthly drop in over two years — came in June, when grocery bills dipped by 1.2 percent, offsetting increases earlier in 1983.

The AP survey is based on a list of 14 food and non-food items, selected at random. The items were priced at one supermarket in each of 13 cities on March 1, 1973, and have been repriced on or about the start of each succeeding month.

Among the latest findings:

—The marketbasket bill rose at the checklist store in six cities during June, up an average of 1.6 percent. The bill decreased in seven cities, down an average of 3.7 percent. The overall change — a drop of 1.2 percent — was the biggest since a 2.7 percent decrease in May 1981. During May 1983, the marketbasket bill also was up in six cities and down in seven for an average drop of nearly two-tenths of 1 percent.

—Comparing prices today with those at the start of the year, the AP found that the marketbasket at the start of July was higher in six cities — up an average of 3.8 percent — and lower in seven cities — down an average of 5.8 percent. Overall, there was an average drop of nine-tenths of 1 percent in the marketbasket bills at the checklist stores in the first half of this year. The marketbasket bills increased by an average of 3.5 percent in the same period of 1982.

— More items decreased in price during June than increased. One-fourth of all the items surveyed were lower at the checklist stores at the start of July than they were a month earlier and only one-fifth were higher.

—Savings at the meat counter helped cut the bills during June.

French Polynesia extensive

French Polynesia extends over such a large South Pacific area — it covers an ocean area the size of Europe, excluding Russia — that it took a number of explorers many years to discover and chart the 130 islands and five archipelagoes.

Their land area is only 1,544 square miles. The first European to discover Tahiti, the largest island, was English Capt. Samuel Wallis in 1767.

World's tallest man lives as recluse in Pakistan

SEHWAN, Pakistan (AP) — Aalam Channa dreams about things like buying a suit off the rack or a pair of shoes at the store, traveling on a plane or just taking a stroll without attracting a crowd.

He can do none of these things. He is 8 feet, 3 inches tall.

Channa is listed in the Guinness Book of World Records as the world's tallest known living human.

At the age of 28, he lives as a virtual recluse. Conscious of his bulk, he rarely ventures from his village in the heart of the Sind Desert, 187 miles north of Karachi.

"You've no idea what it's like being so tall," he said in an interview. "Taxi drivers won't take me anywhere because they're afraid I'll wreck the car if I climb in.

"When I take a bus I always have to buy two seats. Even then I'm not comfortable because there's no leg room, and I end up stretching out in the aisle.

"Everywhere I go people stare at me as if I were a freak. But I'm a human being. The only difference is my height," he said in Sindhi, the local dialect, through a translator.

"As you can see, I'm a poor man. But all my clothes and shoes have to be specially made," he went on. "The government gives me 500 rupees (about $50) a month, but that doesn't even cover the cost of a new suit."

He said he accepts his abnormal height and could be content, but gets infuriated with silly questions about it.

"People ask how many chickens I eat a day or how many eggs I gulp down for breakfast. I get really fed up."

But for the record, he said he eats three meals a day "like everybody else" and does not gorge vast quantities of food. He weighs 328 pounds.

Relatives insist he eats almost sparingly of the chappati bread and curry that is his staple diet.

"I have learned to accept what I am," Channa said. "Of course I wish I was shorter, but I thank God I'm alive. I thank him for everything."

Channa is an attendant at the 750-year-old Lal Shahbaz Qalandar Shrine, where thousands of Moslem pilgrims worship each year.

He said he began growing abnormally from the age of 12, reaching a height of 7 feet when he was 20, then stopped growing at 25. He is in good health, although he lumbers about his house — the biggest in this village — with obvious difficulty.

His house stands apart from others because of the 8-foot, 4-inch front door, which gives him headroom of one inch.

Channa is the youngest of three brothers and two sisters, all of whom are of average build. He was born in Sehwan and has no plans to leave.

Abundant rainfall ends drought

SYDNEY, Australia (AP) — Above normal rainfall in the last two months appears to have broken Australia's worst drought in recorded history, the Australian Bureau of Meteorology says, and the government is seeing rainbows over the country's long-suffering economy.

The weather bureau says the rains in April and May fell abundantly everywhere but a few small areas in the south and west.

The impact of the four-year drought on the country's economy extended well beyond the farm. The Bureau of Agricultural Economics estimates that each dollar lost in farm output leads to another dollar decline in non-farm output.

Agriculture officials say a bigger wheat crop, for example, will mean more work for truck drivers and shippers as well as farm machinery companies and other service industries.

"Our view is very optimistic," says Jim McNamara of the National Farmers Federation. "We believe that agriculture can play a major part in Australia's economic recovery."

According to the latest projections by the agricultural bureau, "the real net value of rural production could rise by some 75 percent" in the year starting July 1 from the estimated value of production in the current year.

But officials note that the recovery is from an extremely low base. The bureau said crop production dropped 31 percent in the year ending June 30 while livestock production was half that of 1981-82 farm year and the lowest recorded since the bureau first began its surveys in the early 1950s.

The growing season here is the opposite of that in the Northern Hemisphere.

About 110,000 of Australia's 170,000 farmers were hit by the drought and wheat production in 1982-83 was halved to just over 8.8 million metric tons. The bureau estimates that figure will rise in the coming year to 16.5 million metric tons.

Chile's recession threatens citizens' view of heavens

PENCO, Chile (AP) — Chile's recession spares little mercy for the 33,380 people of Penco. In 1982 the last of their four industries shut down. Now their observatory, which boasts that it is the southernmost in the world, faces an eviction notice.

"God blessed the skies here," said Arnoldo Bustos, Penco's resident astronomer, studying Saturn's rings through his 12½-inch reflector telescope on a typically cloudless, sparkling night. "But down on Earth we are living a curse."

The plight of Penco, 270 miles southwest of Santiago, is competition from imports, a factor in the 14 percent decline of Chile's 1982 national product, the sharpest economic plunge in South America. The country's hardest hit region is here on Concepcion Bay, site of its second largest urban area and much of its heavy industry.

Thirty-two percent of the region's 462,300 workers, by official count, are unemployed or enrolled in public make-work projects that pay less than a third of the $82 monthly minimum wage. In Penco and other industrial suburbs of nearby Concepcion City, the jobless rate is higher.

After a 1973 military coup, Chilean industry lost its tariff protection against imports. These became even cheaper between 1979 and mid-1982 when the government, in a move against inflation, froze the peso at a high value against other currencies.

Under those monetarist rules, only the fittest were to survive. The losers included Penco's sugar refinery with its 700 employees and a plant where 450 workers ground phosphate rock into fertilizer. They have closed for good.

Last year the other two industries here, ceramics and glass factories, stopped producing but are hobbling back to life with fewer workers. Because Chile has devalued its peso and run short of dollars to pay for imports, they hope to survive.

Less certain is the fate of Bustos' rustic, mushroom-shaped Elke Observatory, which opens to the heavens from a hilltop overlooking the bay and the Pacific Ocean beyond. The closest thing in southern Chile to a cultural attraction, it faces an ironic predicament because nothing imported is likely to take its place.

The problem is that the 21-year-old observatory, along with Bustos' home, were built by the astronomer on land donated by the sugar refinery, which now is being sold for scrap to pay off its creditors.

The government-controlled Banco del Estado, manager of the liquidation, has asked a judge to order the eviction of the 50-year-old astronomer, his wife and three children unless they buy the 17-acre property for peso equivalent of $26,666.

Bustos figures he can afford neither the land nor the expense of moving his $7,500 telescope. Since losing his job last year as the refinery's water plant manager, his sole income is the $280 Penco's school system pays him each month to give classes at the observatory for 180 students.

Each day 50 other stargazers visit the observatory for free under a program called "Chile Learns to Know its Heavens" that Bustos organized with the University of Concepcion. Because neither the university nor Penco's town hall is interested in the land, Bustos is asking the International Society of Amateur Astronomers, based in Belgium, to help find a buyer who will let him stay.

Each night until dawn Bustos, in the company of visitors, forgets his worries in the solace of the stars. But down the hill, Penco's landscape is depressing. Eucalyptus trees, shedding yellow leaves in the Southern Hemisphere autumn, line the dirt road to the bay, where every other wooden shack seems to be selling something to help its jobless occupants eat.

Residents speak of rising crime and alcoholism on the waterfront, where 65 cents buys a five-quart jug of wine, and of the breakup of families and children fainting from hunger at school. Dock workers say four houses of prostitution have opened in recent years.

This is not what Rodrigo Menendez had in mind when he was named mayor four years ago and posted signs saying "Penco is Love" on the road to town. What he hoped for was a tourist boom, attracted by a luxury hotel that never got built.

Still the young mayor is upbeat on Penco's future. He cites the revival of the glass factory, where 104 operators are back at work, and Fanaloza, the ceramics firm that makes cheap dishes, toilets, washbasins and fine bone chinaware.

Denis, the other Thatcher: A cult figure in Britian

By the Los Angeles Times-Washington Post News Service

LONDON — He would stand at the back of overheated halls during the prime minister's campaign press conferences, muttering "Bloody silly question."

And when Margaret Thatcher would handily dispose of an especially tough one, Denis Thatcher would bark "Hear, hear" in an enthusiastic display of support.

The prime minister's 68-year-old husband — sometimes called the "First Gentleman" or "Caesar's Husband" — has long been the most dedicated member of the prime minister's entourage. And now Denis Thatcher has achieved celebrity status himself, becoming something of a cult figure in Britain.

In fact, there are two Denis Thatchers. One is the reality, a retired business executive, loyal companion, father of twins, and long-suffering political husband.

THE OTHER DENIS Thatcher was created by the satirical magazine Private Eye, which depicts him as a gin-swilling reactionary, a scathing observer of the political luminaries passing through 10 Downing St., and who likes nothing better than to hoist a few "tinctures" at the 19th hole with golfing cronies.

This Denis is the author of the "Dear Bill" letters, purportedly written to his golfing buddy, William Deedes, editor of the Daily Telegraph. The fictional Denis Thatcher was also the star of a long-running West End hit play called "Anyone For Denis?" which later reached a far wider audience on television.

The letters are the work of Private Eye editor Richard Ingrams and humorist John Wells, who seem to have the uncanny knack of catching the real Denis in fiction — so much so that some officials at the prime minister's office have suspected a leak inside 10 Downing St.

Deedes himself recently asked Ingrams: "Tell me, Richard, who is your source?"

DURING HIS WIFE'S hard-fought and victorious election campaign, the fictional Denis grumbled: "Only another week, thank God. My hand is already calloused and misshapen from pressing the proletarian flesh and Dr. O'Gooley had to pop in the other day to give me an anti-lockjaw injection after three weeks of solid grinning.

After the Thatcher victory, the fictional Denis wrote Bill: "Well, that's it! ... Another five years of guaranteed hard labor as a tailor's dummy...."

In his scathing comments about politicians and his regard for a stiff "snorterino" or "lotion" or two, the real Denis is not far removed from his fictional counterpart.

DOWNING STREET insiders say the real Denis was persuaded to attend the wine-only, small farewell gathering for departing No. 10 staffers with a guarantee that his wine glass would contain gin and tonic.

Sometimes, the prime minister, 57, needles Denis on his beverage habits, and one aide remembers the occasion when, having filled up his drink, Denis was warned by a police bodyguard: "The Boss is back, sir." Denis reached out one arm to greet his wife while the other hand dumped the drink into a convenient plant.

Denis Thatcher has been asked by the Conservative Party headquarters not to give interviews to the press, whom he calls "the reptiles," mainly because his right-wing views might embarrass the prime minister — though his sentiments often reflect those of the traditional Tory voter.

DENIS BELIEVES THAT most journalists and trade union leaders are "pinkos," "Bolshies" and "Commies."

Whatever his personal politics, Thatcher has been extremely supportive of his wife in her campaign and in her official duties.

"He is marvelous when she is down," a friend of the Thatchers observed. "He's a great back-slapper and very encouraging. But I think he is more worrying when she's up. He sweeps her along and reinforces her instincts, when a little caution would help."

The prime minister herself once said: "He is a sort of shock absorber. He's always been able to do that — from the first election I fought and lost. Denis was always there."

What is the legacy of presidency of Jimmy Carter?

EDITOR'S NOTE — Jimmy Carter's White House years are receding into history, where his ranking among presidents remains to be determined. Whnt.

By MICHAEL PUTZEL
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — It was Jimmy Carter's last Cabinet meeting, and the defeated president went around the room, giving members a minute or two to reflect on their service in the administration.

Some talked about the victories, others about disappointments. Vice President Walter Mondale's turn came last, and he summed up the four years without regrets or apologies:

"We told the truth. We obeyed the law. We kept the peace. And that ain't bad."

It was a proclamation that the Carter people were leaving the field with honor if not victory. Like similar assessments offered more recently by a number of those who served under Carter, it made no claim to greatness.

JIMMY CARTER SERVED as president from January 1977 to January 1981, and two and a half years later, a reporter talked to a number of former Carter administration officials about what remains of the Carter presidency.

Although the foreign policy initiatives for which Carter fought hardest still stand in the Middle East and in Panama, not much of the Carter domestic program has survived. The former president's reputation as a leader remains low. Unlike Gerald Ford, the man Carter defeated to win his presidency, none of Carter's party faithful has urged a Carter comeback.

Carter, now a professor at Emory University, is helping to establish the Atlanta university's Carter Center for public policy studies and is raising money for a presidential library. He declined through a spokeswoman to be interviewed for this story.

"He could have been great if he had managed the presidency better — but I think he missed," former Ambassador Sol Linowitz says of Carter. Linowitz, who negotiated the Panama Canal treaties and served as Carter's special Middle East envoy, adds that the former president had some notable successes but didn't move to build on them in a way that could have won him more lasting recognition.

EUGENE EIDENBERG, assistant to Carter for intergovernmental affairs, says Carter's legacy probably would not be found in the changes he made or the programs he left behind. Instead, he adds, "I think people will remember the decency of purpose."

Stuart Eizenstat, Carter's chief domestic policy adviser, concedes that "most of the lasting accomplishments are probably in the foreign area rather than in the domestic."

The Camp David accords that Carter personally mediated between Israel and Egypt remain as a framework for peace in the troubled Middle East region. The Panama Canal treaties, which defused a delicate Central American controversy, and the never-ratified SALT II agreement for limitation of long-range nuclear weapons are still being observed, despite Ronald Reagan's denunciation of both during his campaign for the presidency.

And Carter's determination to make the defense of human rights an intergral part of U.S. foreign policy was dismissed by Reagan, but the new president nonetheless has had to take into account the imprint of that policy not only in his dealings with foreign dictatorships but in efforts to persuade Congress to support his aid package for El Salvador and other rightist governments.

REAGAN ALSO WAS critical of Carter's normalization of relations with China, the final step in a process begun by Richard Nixon, but he has made no move to downgrade relations with the mainland or re-establish formal ties with Taiwan, steps he once indicated he might take.

Many of Carter's boldest domestic initiatives — welfare reform, national health insurance, hospital cost controls, child health assessment — died in Congress. Others, such as the jobs program broadened under the Comprehensive Employment and Training Act, were abolished by Reagan. Reagan-era budget cuts eviscerated still more Carter programs.

"There's not much meat left on some of the bones," Eizenstat says now, "but the skeleton is still there upon which future administrations can build."

Jimmy Carter

KEY PORTIONS OF THE Carter energy program, including the windfall profits tax that Reagan denounced, do remain in place, as do the Energy and Education departments Reagan promised to abolish. The Synthetic Fuels Corp. remains, although it has yet to fund a single project. Urban Development Action Grants are still being awarded to cities despite repeated efforts to fold them into a block grant for state and local governments.

Carter, like Reagan, came to Washington pledging to do battle with the government's bureaucracy.

His revision of the civil service laws was intended to give elected officials greater authority over career managers and make senior bureaucrats more responsive to their political leaders. Eizenstat said the Reagan administration has "used that to great advantage."

Few Americans who travel by air, move from state to state or ship goods overland have failed to notice the effects of the Carter administration's deregulation of the transportation industry.

THE LIFTING OF federal controls over fares and routes and the resulting resurgence of competition have caused considerable turmoil. But deregulation also has brought down prices and opened the airline and trucking industries to hundreds of new carriers.

But Ben Heineman Jr., who left to write a book after his his boss, Health, Education and Welfare Secretary Joseph A. Califano Jr., was fired, argues that any assessment of Carter's presidency must focus on the broad overview, rather than specific programs.

"Carter had a chance to forge a new Democratic coalition and achieve a new national consensus," says Heineman, who co-authored "Memorandum for the President" and now practices law in Washington. "If you say that this was the essential task of a Democratic president in that period — and I think it was — I don't think there's any question he failed at that essential task."

"His legacy would have to be confusion and failure," Heineman adds, not only because he failed to form a new centrist coalition but because "he never learned how to run the office" of the presidency.

EIDENBERG, NOW A vice president for MCI Corp. in Washington, blamed the administration's management shortcomings on former White House chief of staff Hamilton Jordan, Carter's longtime political strategist.

"Jimmy Carter would never have been president without Hamilton Jordan," Eidenberg said. "And if Hamilton hadn't been in the White House, I think Jimmy Carter would have been re-elected....

"These guys were geniuses at doing the politics of nominations and elections, but they were simply amateurs at doing the politics of public policy."

The president himself, Eidenberg said, "really didn't enjoy the process of lobbying his programs, of politicking. The pros in this town sensed right away that there was no real feel or flair for it."

JODY POWELL, who was Carter's spokesman and still keeps in touch, says it wasn't that there was less interest in policy, "but we obviously had less success."

"If we'd had to depend upon the same people to win the election that you have to depend upon in Washington to govern, we never would have been elected," Powell said. "What we figured out how to do in the election was to go around those people. That's a much more difficult thing to do when you're trying to govern."

As an aide to Califano and later as an assistant HEW secretary, Heineman participated in the drafting of some of the administration's most ambitious, expensive and traditionally liberal domestic policy initiatives. He says he was "too green" then to realize Carter was beating the drums of the left as the country was marching steadily to the right.

IT IS IRONIC THAT CARTER himself saw the country's shift toward the center — indeed, he was a product of it — but did not set his administration on that course.

"The Carter administration, for all four years of its existence, was somewhat schizophrenic," says Robert Greenstein, who ran nutritional programs for the poor under Carter and now directs the Center for Budget and Policy Priorities. "It did not have a clear centrist line, but neither was it a clear liberal administration or conservative administration. It never figured out which it was...."

Powell says Carter tried to move the party toward the center but failed, in part because many Carter appointees didn't agree with their new president's centrist views.

Eidenberg, who had been associated with Hubert H. Humphrey and the party's liberal wing before joining the Carter administration, says: "Carter was far more conservative in his own guts and instinct than the national Democratic Party would allow him to be ... (and) many of his decisions were efforts to compromise the uncompromisable."

National health insurance offered an example of the fierce intraparty struggle. Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., and his liberal allies held Carter to his campaign pledge for a comprehensive, universal health care program for which Carter, after seeing several of his sweeping reform program proposals falter on Capitol Hill, sought to scale down.

POWELL STILL RECALLS, with bitterness, how the White House "wasted time" trying to reach a compromise with the Kennedy camp — until it became clear to Carter, he says, that the liberal wing wouldn't settle for any measure that had a chance to get out of the committee.

Carter eventually did produce guidelines for a program that would have cost $16 billion, but it wasn't enough for Kennedy.

Celebration puzzling

NEW YORK (AP) — What has 300 brains and is 100 years old?

Any hard-core devotee of anagrams and cryptograms, phonetic charades and square forms knows the answer: the National Puzzlers' League, a collection of 300 aficionados who celebrated their organization's centennial Monday.

"It's all just in good fun," said Loris Curtis, 77, of Mason, Mich. A retired farmer, Curtis joined the puzzlers' "Krewe" 56 years ago. "It hasn't changed a good deal," he says.

The league's first 28 members celebrated its creation on July 4, 1883, by walking across the Brooklyn Bridge, then 6 weeks old. One hundred years later, their spiritual descendants still search for the perfect puzzle, the all-time stumper.

When the league holds its annual meeting later this month in New Brunswick, N.J., members will play "Haggle," in which players take a crossword grid and clues to two of the answers, and then cajole, threaten and query their fellow players to get the other clues, and then answer them.

Others look forward to the library trivia hunt — 100 minutes in a library, with a list of 100 questions to answer.

There also will be new puzzles, a treasure hunt and an opportunity to see people who, up to now, have been faceless puzzle pen pals.

For the rest of the year, The Enigma — the league's monthly publication — is their "first connection," says Marjorie B. Friedman of Buffalo, editor of the 12-page compilation of games and puzzles.

Members create the puzzles, send them to Mrs. Friedman for publication, and then spend up to three hours a week solving their fellow members' contributions, according to the estimate of Games magazine, which employs several league members as editors.

There are no prizes. "It's all for honor," says Mrs. Friedman.

And for a kind of companionship, says Curtis, noting that the league always seems to have a lot of bachelor members. Most of the members, says Mrs. Friedman, "are not extroverted. Puzzling is sort of a solitary activity."

"Of course, in their letters, they let go," she said.

Each member takes a nom de plume — or nom, as they are generally called. Curtis calls himself "Larry" because he doesn't like Loris.

Mrs. Friedman calls herself "Mangie," because it is an anagram of "enigma," because it is her nickname, Maggie, with one letter changed, and because "I think it sounds funny."

Before her marriage, Mary Hazard's nom was "Night Owl." She married Harry Hazard, whose nom was "Hap." They met through the National Puzzlers' League, fell in love, and now they call themselves "Hap Owl."

The league was once much larger. In the 1920s and '30s, when the crossword craze swept the nation, membership was more than 500, and the group's slogan was "The National Intellectual Pastime of America."

During World War II, members like William G. Brian — "B. Natural," to the Krewe — were recruited to work as cryptographers for the Signal Intelligence Service, says Curtis.

But at the same time, wartime restrictions on travel forced an end to the group's twice-annual conventions, and the Enigma stopped publication due to paper shortages. Membership fell to less than 100 in the 1960s.

The last few years have seen a league resurgence. The conventions resumed on an annual basis in 1976; the number of people who are willing to pay $9 for the right to try to puzzle the Krewe and be puzzled has steadily increased. Members range in age from 9 to 90, and come from every walk of life. They share one thing — a passion for puzzles.

"It's a battle of wits," says Curtis. "It's a challenge."

Unnatural waters

Though not fit for sailing, Monahans Draw has been designated a navigable stream. Today about all that flows down the draw is the effluent from Odessa's two sewage-treatment plants. The photograph depicts the effluent as it flows through culverts at Farm-to-Market Road 1788 in west Midland County.

Midland, Odessa ready to duel over draw

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

Midland and Odessa will wrangle Thursday in a duel over how Odessa proposes to get rid of its treated waste water.

Odessa wants to continue discharging the effluent down Monahans Draw.

Midland doesn't like the idea. Odessa's waste stinks, says Midland.

Odessa says waste water from its two sewage-treatment plants is sufficiently cleaned up not to be detrimental to the underground fresh water zones along the draw.

Midland disagrees.

Part of that flow is used for irrigation on agricultural land in Midland County. Some farmers would not like to see the draw dried up again.

Midland County, however, contends that the draw's unnatural waters contain contaminants and is polluting water wells. Midland County also contends that the waste water filters into the subsurface soil, saturates the earth and ultimately pollutes the fresh-water zones.

In addition, Midland County officials say the effluent creates health and sanitation problems by providing a culture for mosquitoes.

MIDLAND COUNTY, joined by the City of Midland, will present the case against using the draw to channel the effluent to Texas Department of Water Resource's Hearing Examiner Kaylene Ray at 9 a.m. Thursday in Odessa's City Hall. Her findings and the hearing's testimony will be presented to the three-member Texas Water Commission.

In turn, the commissioners — Felix McDonald, Lee Biggart and John Stover — are to make their ruling.

Basically, Thursday's hearing is for Odessa to present its case for renewing its now-expired permits to discharge into the draw. The draw, which cuts eastwardly through Midland County, lies south of Midland but within Midland's extra territorial jurisdiction (ETJ). By virtue of the five-mile ETJ, Midland is claiming an interest in the health and safety of those citizens who live within that five-mile zone outside the city limits.

Odessa is asking for permits to increase the flow of effluent from its older South Dixie Water Reclamation from 11.8 million gallons per day to 14.7 million gallons and to boost the volume from its 1982 East Water Reclamation Plant from 6.26 million gallons per day to 7.8 million gallons. The latter plant is in Midland County.

ODESSA'S DISCHARGE permits expired Aug. 31, though the city legally is discharging the effluent until the Commission rules otherwise.

Though Midland may or may not suggest how Odessa might best dispose of or reclaim the effluent, Midland can cite a primary example: itself.

Safeway cashier Diane Icenhower scans groceries as the Positalker, right, verbalizes the prices.

Positalker creates 'personable feeling'

By GAIL BURKE
Staff Writer

Remember the days of the friendly grocery clerk who called out the items purchased at the corner market?

They're fading out.

While the clerks are still smiling, it's for a different reason — computerized technology has made their job easier and more efficient.

Midland's Safeway store at Illionis Avenue and Midland Drive has the area's first Positalker — a computerized device which calls off the prices, tender received and change given at the checkstand.

Although the monotone female voice doesn't thank the customer, it may bring back the a trait lost when the traditional cash registers were tossed aside.

Most grocery stores use a laser scanner which reads and prints the prices from the universal code bars on the merchandise. While most scanners are designed for the Positalker attachment, Midland's Safeway is a test market for the device.

"It creates a personable feeling that was lost when we got the scanners," Safeway Manager Mike Lant said, explaining that "the only way you know the price is to look at the video screen.

"If anything else, the Positalker will help the clerks be more personable," Lant said. "They don't look at the scanner. They're trained to listen to the beep. Now they can listen for mistakes and have more time to communicate with the customer."

Lant said the 11 Positalkers, costing $300 to $400, were installed about two weeks ago.

MMH eases transition of nurses

By HALLYE JORDAN
Staff Writer

After graduating from a small nursing school in New Mexico, she found a job.

The 11 p.m. to 7 a.m. shift was difficult, it was more so when she found herself in charge with all major decisions resting on her inexperienced shoulders.

She quit working at the hospital three months later.

The transition from a classroom to a hospital is made easier through college programs that offer nursing students clinical experience while in school. But even then, the student is under the constant supervision of instructors.

"Working 11 to 7, you have to have a lot of maturity. You have to make a lot of decisions all by yourself because there's nobody else around," said Judy Bartley, R.N. "She had some bad experiences. She was almost afraid to go back into nursing."

A program in its second year at Midland Memorial Hospital enticed the young nurse back into the profession.

The Preceptor Program gives nurses new to the hospital an opportunity to get their feet wet — before plunging in.

"They've already had this all in theory and class, but we're trying to give them the opportunity to actually practice in a clinical setting," Ms. Bartley, director of the program, said.

During a three-month period, new nurses choose three areas at the hospital in which they are interested in working.

All participants have permits to nurse, according to Ms. Bartley. Graduate nurses (G.N.s), or those straight out of college, may legally practice while they are awaiting tests results from the State Board of Nurse Examiners. In Texas, the exams are only offered in July and February.

If a G.N. fails the board, she is required to retake the test and cannot practice until she passes it, Ms. Bartley said.

And although some nurses are fresh out of school, some are returning to the field after several years.

"Last year we did have some foreign nurses, nurses new to the country," Ms. Bartley said. "The program can really be a benefit to them. But it's also good for R.N.s (registered nurses) that have been away from the program while raising their families or whatever."

By allowing participants to choose the areas they are interested in, they get an inside look before having to make a decision.

"Maybe if it's labor and delivery they choose, that gives them a chance to see what it's like," Ms. Bartley said. "Maybe it's an area they'll decide they don't want to work in, but you don't know that until you've actually been there working.

"It's not the same as it is in school because everything was so structured. As students, they always had an instructor saying, 'No.' Now they've got to make these decisions themselves but they have a R.N. there to help them, to guide them through it — to kind of act like a buffer."

According to Ms. Bartley, while the nurses in the MMH program are paid as regular personnel, they are not included in floor counts of the staff. This allows them to learn without the pressures of a staff shortage.

"They've got this time to make all of these adjustments without us having to worry about counting on them to staff the floor. We want them to have this time to learn."

There are 10 participants in the program, although there is space for 12, Ms. Bartley said. At the end of the program, "hopefully we'll have 10 new registered nurses because they'll have already passed the board.

"It's real exciting that we're giving them this kind of training because it will pay off at the end. That will be good because they'll have already had some time to smooth out the rough edges and learn their profession. Then they can kind of slide right in."

Midland Memorial Hospital's Katy Longbotham, R.N., left, sticks to new nurse Bennie McAlister, G.N., in the Preceptor Program, which allows experienced nurses to help those new to the hospital during their first three months of practice.

The registered nurses who guide the participants through the month in their area are volunteers.

"I don't draft anybody," Ms. Bartley said. "It depends on the regular nurses themselves and if they want to take the effort."

Many hospitals in major cities have similar programs, Ms. Bartley said. "It's kind of like the intern program that a doctor goes through.

"When they get out on the floor, they have this reality shock. This kind of cushions them and says, 'Well, yes, this is the way you learned how to do it in school, but we have to do it like this because...'

"The participants legally can make these decisions and do all of these things but they've got someone there to help.

"I've been in nursing a long time," the 18-year veteran said. "But if I were to go back to, say the operating room, I'd really like to go through a program like this."

PUC schedules hearings on Bell rate request

The Public Utility Commission of Texas has announced local hearing dates and times for receiving public comments on Southwestern Bell Telephone Company's $1.7 billion rate request which was filed June 24.

This is the first time local hearings will be heard other than in Austin.

Comments at each of the seven hearings — in Lubbock, Houston, Corpus Christi, Brownsville, Austin, Dallas and El Paso — will be heard by a commissioner and three PUC staff members. Staff members include a hearing examiner, a PUC attorney or engineer and a representative from the Consumer Affairs and Information Services section.

Local hearings are scheduled from today through July 16. The Lubbock hearing, which is the closest location for Permian Basin residents, is scheduled July 15 in the City Council Chambers, 916 Texas St.

"I hope customers will take this opportunity to come out to the hearings and let us know what their opinions and concerns are about this request," said Alan R. Erwin, PUC chairman. "Local hearings have proven to be effective in the past for getting the public's opinion and for having an effect on the case. We've set up these hearings to be accessible to as many people across the state as possible with the limited staff and time we have."

No prior registration is needed for consumers to make statements at a local hearing. Consumers unable to attend a local hearing may submit written comments to PUC's Consumer Affairs Office, 7800 Shoal Creek Blvd. Suite 400 North, Austin 78757.For more information call the PUC at 512-458-0100.

Six-year-old astounds violin professionals

GALVESTON (AP) — A 6-year-old student at Trinity School here with two years of violin training is astounding area professionals.

Ray Iwazumi, son of Tatsuo and Mikiko Iwazumi, earned a national honor in the junior division of the National Federation Festivals, held May 14 in Clear Lake City. He was the youngest performer at the festival.

Ray began playing the violin in April 1981, with his father attempting to instruct him.

Ray is being taught with the Suzuki method, which involves a nationwide organization. His first teacher, Nora Josuah, came from Houston each week for about six months until the youngster passed his classmates.

"He was advancing too fast," his father said. "He was so much out of the group, so fast, we started him in private lessons with Beatrice Stanley last year."

Iwazumi used to play the violin but laughed and said, in contrast to his son, he doesn't have much talent with the instrument.

"I tried to teach Ray but it didn't work out. I really didn't know how to teach. Father and child relationships tend to spoil the lessons.

"We're lucky to have the Suzuki branch set up here.

"The intention was to teach him discipline," his father said. "When he started showing very good progress, his teacher, Beatrice Stanley, was excited about his talent. With her guidance, I teach him everyday about an hour to an hour and a half.

"He gets up at 5 a.m. every day to learn Japanese writing and reading from his mother until 6:30. Then I take over to teach him the violin.

"We often have (a) fight over the lesson, since I tried to teach him in being patient and persistent," Iwazumi said. "If he breaks down during the lesson, we have (a) fight.

"But we have a very good way to motivate him. We have a rating system. If he can't finish the lesson, he gets a cross on the calender. If he barely squeaks through, he gets a triangle. If he gets the lesson without incident, he gets a circle.

"If he gets a very good performance he gets a double circle and a reward of candy or a toy.

"On every occasion, such as a contest or performance, we promise him a reward if he does very well."

Ray received a video game for a recent performance.

He acts about like any other 6-year-old boy. He says he likes swimming, playing video games, coloring, playing with toys, reading books, watching cartoons and playing with his friends. He said he doesn't like to ride bikes.

His father said Ray isn't very athletic but prefers activities where he can use his hands.

Fortunately, Ray apparently is too young to experience stage fright.

"It is good he can get used to public appearances before he learns about fear," Iwazumi said.

"At the Clear Lake performance, he was (on stage) playing with his tie and clothes, his mother's heart was just bursting — hoping all would go well," Mrs. Iwazumi said.

Following one of his performances, Fredell Lack, one of the judges, said Ray has outstanding coordination. Other judges have also expressed amazement at his ability to perform difficult selections.

This talent appears to run in the family. Amy, Ray's 3-year-old sister, also is exhibiting musical talent, Iwazumi said.

"She's probably just as good in terms of intonations. She has very good pitch already. I don't know if her dexterity is as good."

Ray's abilities extend to academics. He was a straight "A" student at Trinity. His progress with reading and writing Japanese is equal to that of students at his level in Japan.

The Japanese lessons cover nothing in terms of Japanese culture or religion, Iwazumi said, adding: "We are more or less the average American family in everyday life."

Iwazumi came to the United States in 1961 to study at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology. He is a physiologist at the University of Texas medical branch here.

At the Clear Lake competition, Ray impressed the judges beyond words.

"Ray was something," his parents said. "The judge was dumbfounded and said: 'What else can I say?'"

Odessa claims its sewage treatment plants doubly clean up the effluent via primary and secondary treatments. The effluent Odessa contends, is fit to discharge into the draw. Mildand says otherwise.

Midland, Odessa set to duel over draw

About 1½ years ago, the Commission ordered the City of Midland to find an acceptable means to dispose of its effluent, which was filtering into Midland's own Midland Draw and, charged landowners, polluting the fresh-water zones along the draw and in the Greenwood area.

Midland treats it waste water in a plant southeast of the city. The effluent is pumped to settling ponds. There the waste water undergoes natural evaporation and is pumped from the ponds for use on agricultural land for producing alfalfa and cotton. What concerned the Commission was effluent running over the dikes and into Midland Draw and effluent seeping from the ponds and allegedly polluting the aquifers.

IN COMPLYING with Commission orders, Midland proposed an alternate means to dispose of the water: build a $20-million, 35-inch pipeline from the plant to the Spraberry area about 15 miles southeast of the city. There the effluent is to be stored and used on agricultural land.

Midland may suggest that Odessa follow a similar plan.

However, even while Midland was exploring ways and means to satisfy the Commission's mandate, a few Midland conservationists suggested that Midland invest in a bona fide water reclamation plant and recyle the water. The effluent would be pumped to northwest Midland to the water-treatment plant. There, the effluent would be recycled — treated and purified — and injected into the city's water lines. Such a costly plan was proposed in the event the water supply is further diminished in semi-arid West Texas.

At present, Midland's and Odessa's primary source of water is the Colorado River Municipal Water District. Midland supplements that lake water by pumping from the Paul Davis Water Field midway between Midland and Lamesa.

Both Midland and Monahans Draws eventually flow into Mustang Draw near Greenwood. Mustang Draw leads to a series of other channels which merge into the Colorado River, which feeds the E.V. Spence Reservoir at Robert Lee.

Midland County Commissioner Win Brown, who has been critical of Odessa's alleged misuse of the draw, terms the flow "nothing but an abomination on the West Texas scene."

About two years ago, the Midland County Commissioners' Court hired an attorney, Ted Kerr, to legally contest Odessa's use of the draw. Midland had threatened to sue Odessa for damages but hasn't.

"We've got to do something in Midland County to stop that water from coming down here," Brown said 2½ years ago. "I'm going to put a battleship on it (the draw)," he jested, "and we'll find out who's in control of this damn thing."

Prosecutors will argue 'mercy killing' murder

HOUSTON (AP) — Prosecutors in the murder trial of Billy Ray Clore will argue that the death of his father — which his family members say was a mercy killing — was a standard murder, an assistant district attorney said.

Clore, 25, is charged with murder in the March 21 slaying of his 65-year-old father, Robert Clore. The younger Clore has said he shot his father, who had been in a coma about three months, to put him out of misery.

"Under the Texas penal code, there's really not any provision for mercy killing," said Assistant District Attorney Joe Magliolo.

Jury selection was expected to continue today. An unusually high number of prospective jurors were questioned Tuesday by the judge, prosecuting attorney and defense attorney.

State District Judge Ted Poe said he summoned 70 jurors Tuesday and might have to call more because so many of the people had heard of the case and would be prejudiced by pretrial publicity.

Clore, wearing a three-piece gray suit and cowboy boots, sat quietly Monday as attorneys quizzed potential jurors before Poe.

Clore shot his father, who was in a north Harris County nursing home, once in the head with a .45-caliber pistol, prosecutors allege. Police said Clore, who ran a tire business with his father, made no attempt to flee after the incident.

"I'm doing fine but I was advised not to answer any questions," Clore said Tuesday during a recess in the jury selection proceedings. He was accompanied to court by members of his family.

Clore is free on $7,500 bond. If convicted, he faces up to life in prison.

Jurors were being questioned Tuesday by Poe, defense attorney Jack Zimmermann and prosecutor R.K. Hansen specifically on whether they were familiar with the case and, if so, whether they had formed any opinions on Clore's guilt or innocence.

Talking computer replaces lost 'personable feeling'

While the checkers seem to like the new technology, customers' reactions have ranged from shrugged shoulders to "it's fantastic."

"I like them," said Safeway checker Diane Icenhower. "Safeway is supposed to call out prices, but they're not marked (with the universal code bars). Now the customer and the checker know exactly what the price is and we can catch mistakes."

One shopper said she kept glancing over her shoulder, searching for voices.

"I was going up and down the aisles and kept hearing those voices," said Mrs. Lloyd Thompson. "It's kind of strange, but I like to hear my prices.

"If that isn't the cutest thing," she added, while hearing the Positalker at the checkstand for the first time.

"The only thing I don't want to hear is the cigarettes going past," Mrs. Thompson said, laughing as the Positalker told her the cartons totaled $34.

"I think it's great," she said. "It connects. If I just read the prices, it doesn't always connect."

Alice Cutwright, checker, said the Positalker saves wear and tear on her voice and it gives her time to visit with her customers.

Another checker Jimmy Anderson said he doesn't think the Positalkers will save time — "the scanners do that, but I think it helps the customer.

"As far as noise," he said, while three or four Positalkers were calling off prices, "I've been hearing the same noise everyday. If I worked in an office, it would be typewriters."

Man on trial for murder doesn't 'believe' in killing

ODESSA (AP) — John C. Skelton, charged with capital murder, testified that he doesn't "believe" in killing and never said he wanted to kill Joe Lee Neal — but he did admit he wanted to "break his arms."

Neal, 46, was killed when a bomb apparently wired to his pickup truck's ignition system, exploded on April 24, 1982.

Skelton, 53, admitted that he bought dynamite and blasting caps one month before Neal was killed. He said, however, that the explosives were stolen from the rear of his pickup truck a few days after he purchased them.

Skelton told district court jurors in the second week of his trial that he obtained the explosives from a friend in Tennessee "to blow stumps from my farm in Arkansas."

He also denied planting the bomb that killed Neal or "having anything to do" with the death.

Skelton said that state witnesses who testified that Skelton often threatened to kill Neal were "very mistaken."

Jury selected in tax evasion trial of man who shot Libyan dissident

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — A jury has been selected and testimony has started in the tax evasion trial of Eugene Tafoya, convicted in 1980 of shooting a dissident Libyan student.

Tafoya and his wife, Betty Jo, are being tried on charges they lied about their gross income on their tax returns for 1980 and 1981.

The trial began Tuesday in U.S. District Judge D.W. Suttle's court.

Tafoya, 47, was arrested in El Paso in January on a Canadian extradition warrant issued in connection with the 1979 firebombing of a car in Kitchener, Ontario.

He was free on appeal of his Fort Collins, Colo., shooting conviction at the time of the arrest.

High Sky receives van, scholarship donations

The Anschutz Corporation has donated a 1983 15-passenger van and will participate in the scholarship program for the High Sky Girls Ranch.

The $16,000-Ford van will be used to accomodate 12 girls at one of the cottages, according to Richard Blythe, Executive Director of High Sky.

The scholarships will provide 60 percent of the total cost of care of one girl at High Sky for the period of 1983 and in 1984, according to Blythe.

"We sincerely appreciate the concern Anschutz Corporation has given over the possiblity that the presence of a producing oil well could, in any way, adversly effect the support we would receive in operation of the Ranch," Blythe told the Reporter-Telegram recently.

That statement followed the recent commencement of a drilling program on a block of acreage that surrounds and includes High Sky Girls Ranch.

The ranch owns only surface rights and will not receive royalty from the production of a well on this acreage, according to Anschutz spokesman Steve Converse.

Because of the proximity of the land to the City of Midland (with its potential for commercial and residential development), Converse said, it has been a difficult area in which to assemble a block of oil and gas leases sufficient for drilling of a deep exploratory test.

"With the cooperation of the Clarence Scharbauer Jr. family, David Fasken Estate and Magnatex Industries, Inc. and High Sky Girls Ranch," Converse said the well was drilled.

High Sky Girls Ranch is a private, non-profit child care agency which provides continuous year-round care for homeless girls. The Ranch is not supported by any particular religious association and is governed by a voluntary board of directors. It seeks funding from individuals, foundations, corporations and associations.

BETTER BUSINESS

'New Faces' returns

By LINDA TRUITT

In March, many local high school students received postcards from a company called Five Star Productions asking them to audition for a new TV special called "New Faces."

Since the BBB has learned the company is again mailing postcards to local students, a warning has been issued: Be careful.

The card requests the recipient send $10 along with the application back to the California-based firm. Promising exciting careers in modeling, commercials, motion pictures and video journalism to those who would be chosen to appear on a national TV special, in the past, respondents were promised that on acceptance of the application they would be sent an agreement pertaining to future business work. Under the agreement, Five Star Productions would be entitled to 9 percent of the budding "actor's" earning for five years. Also required was a payment of $136 for "editing and disc replication."

On October 27, 1982 James R. Houston, owner, and several employees were arrested and charged with 31 counts of false advertising and one count of operating an unlicensed talent agency. Evidence shows that Houston was involved with a Florida firm earlier in 1982 called Datastar which operated almost identically to Five Star Productions. An estimated 1,900 students over eight states paid for filming appointments which were never honored. He also has been involved in several other scams including a Las Vegas firm called Western Pacific Coin and Silver Exchange. This company sold $2 million worth of silver ingots to more than 1,000 investors which were never produced. Houston has never been convicted.

As a result of the lawsuit, Five Star Productions is now requesting recipients to just remit the additional $135 for an interview and a test filming.

As for the TV special called "New Faces," it is actually a two-hour television product produced on an optical laser disc for distribution to advertising, casting and modeling agencies, and film producers. Each month subscribers would receive a new disc containing the video profiles of 500 people to be played on a disc player. A computerized infrared command module would allow the subscriber to view the faces as still photographs or with movement and sound. To date, the BBB is not aware of any company which is subscribing to this service.

If you receive the card, it may give you the impression filming in Texas will begin shortly, but the BBB suggests you wait until after the trial of this company (which should be shortly) before making any decisions.

DEAR ABBY

Couple forced to take rash action

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: This is written in all seriousness, so please don't take it as a joke. My boyfriend thinks he is allergic to me. "Dan" breaks out with a red, itchy rash whenever he's exposed to anything he's allergic to, which happens whenever we are together for any length of time. We've heard it's possible for a person to be allergic to another person, although it is extremely rare. Two allergists Dan has gone to said, "It must be your girlfriend's makeup, perfume, hair spray, deodorant, toothpaste, shampoo, etc." But since I've stopped using makeup, perfume, hair spray, etc., and now use only Dan's brands of deodorant, toothpaste, shampoo, etc., his rash has persisted, and we've come to a dead end.

We really care for each other, but we may have to split up if he doesn't quit breaking out every time we're together. It's been going on for over a year. -- K. IN COLORADO SPRINGS

DEAR K.: It may be a "nervous reaction" rather than an allergy. Suggest that Dan consult a psychotherapist. I don't mean to be unkind, but your boyfriend could be unconsciously itching to split up, or "break out."

DEAR ABBY: After 20 years of dating, I've come to the conclusion that my mother was wrong when she said, "A lady never calls a gentleman – she waits for him to call her." Too many times I've had a man ask for my phone number, and I'd hang around the house afraid to go anywhere for fear I'd miss his call. Then he never called.

When a woman meets a man she'd like to see again, and he takes her number, why shouldn't she feel free to take his, too, so if he doesn't call her, she can call him?

I recently met a very attractive man, and we seemed to hit it off very well together. But instead of his taking my number and saying the usual "I'll call you," he gave me his number and asked me to call him. Perfect! I had the option to either call him or not. It was all up to me. I liked that. Don't get me wrong, I'm not on a power trip. I still like doors opened for me, but I prefer to do the calling.

I'd like to hear the opinions of men on this. -- DON'T CALL ME, I'LL CALL YOU

DEAR DON'T: So would I. Gentlemen?

DEAR ABBY: You may think this is silly, but I want to get my ears pierced a second time so I can wear two pair of earrings at once. Mom and Dad say, "NO!" I say they are my ears, and if they rot off, it will be my problem.

I'm 16, and I think I know what I want. My parents say having two holes in each ear is just a passing fad, and one day I'll be sorry.

What is your opinion? -- PERFORATED PATTI

DEAR PERFORATED: True, they are your ears, but you are still a minor, and as such you must abide by the wishes of your mom and dad. I vote with them. Two holes in one head are enough.

All-American food roots from Indians

By TOM HOGE
AP Wine and Food Writer

Much is made of regional cooking in America and dishes are often traced back to their foreign origins. But little credit is given to the American Indian, who created many specialties that are our favorites today.

The Indian diet was not as simple as many think. One historian says when the Pilgrims landed, the Indians were eating some 2,000 different foods made from plants. They used more than 200 varieties of nuts in their diet and were skilled hunters and fishermen.

Their corn is famous, of course, but we also learned of tomatoes, peppers, pumpkins, squash and cranberries from the Indians.

They realized the benefit of eating foods at their peak, and many tribes followed seasonal diets. In the winter, they lived in the woods, eating game and stored vegetables. In warm weather, they moved to the beaches, eating seafood and summer crops.

The tribes also went in for regional cooking. In the Southwest, they grew peppers and beans, making bean soup and a spicy chili. In the Northwest, they specialized in marine delicacies, while in the South they ate the cornbreads that are so popular today, along with soups and hearty stews.

The Indians also introduced settlers to the turkey, which became an instant success.

Meal planning helps newlyweds

Copley News Service

Don't let the "hungry hurries" spoil your romantic newlywed atmosphere. If you both work and prefer to eat at home, you don't have to spend hours preparing a meal. All it takes is 30 minutes to prepare an elegant, delicious meal, according to Ortho Books' cooking experts.

The key to quick cooking is planning and preparation. Make sure you're familiar with the recipes and cooking plan. The most important step is gathering everything you will need, from ingredients and utensils to serving platters. Finding things while you are cooking takes much more time than you think and can throw off your whole schedule.

Measure, chop, mince, separate eggs, boil water — there are lots of things you can do ahead of time to ensure faster meal preparation.

The quick cooking approach depends on your ability to cook a number of dishes at once. The main thing to remember is that you can slow down or speed up according to your own abilities.

This steak dinner from Ortho Books' ($5.95) "30-Minute Meals" is a good one to try for your first attempt at quick cooking.

STEAK BONNE FEMME

1 tbsp. EACH butter and oil
1 large red onion, thinly sliced and separated into rings
½ lb. (20 medium) mushrooms, sliced
1 clove garlic, minced
1½ lbs. top sirloin steak (¾-inch thick), cut into four equal pieces
¼ cup beef broth or dry vermouth
Salt and freshly ground pepper to taste

Warm serving platter in 200-degree oven

Heat butter and oil in a larg frying pan over medium heat. Add onion, mushrooms and garlic and saute until softened.

Increase heat to brown onion and reduce mushroom juices. Remove vegetables from pan.

In same pan over high heat, adding a little more butter and oil if necessary, brown steaks until done to taste (three to four minutes per side for rare). Remove to heated platter.

Add broth to pan; bring to a boil to reduce liquid, scraping pan to loosen browned bits.

Reduce heat, stir in reserved onion-mushroom-garlic mixture and heat through. Spoon sauce over steaks.

STEAMED NEW POTATOES

10 to 12 small new red or white potatoes
Boiling water
Minced parsley

Scrub potatoes but do not peel. Slice thinly.

Place in basket or perfrated container over boiling water. Place carrots on top. (See recipe for Glazed Sesame-Seed Carrots.)

Steam 15 minutes or until tender.

GLAZED SESAME-SEED CARROTS

8 to 10 medium carrots, peeled and cut in 3-inch sticks
2 tbsps. sesame seeds
1 tsp. butter
2 tbsps. butter
1 tbsp. honey
1 tbsp. grated orange peel
1 tsp. grated ginger root (optional)

Place carrots in steamer above potatoes. Cook 15 minutes or until tender.

While carrots steam, toast sesame seeds in the 1 teaspoon butter in a medium-sized skillet until golden.

When carrots are tender, add the 2 tablespoons butter, honey and orange peel to the sesame seeds. Remove carrots from steamer and toss in glaze.

⅓ cup margarine or butter, melted
1 teaspoon vanilla
3 eggs

Heat oven to 350 degrees. Grease pie plate, 9x1¼ inches. Beat all ingredients until smooth, 30 seconds in blender on high or 1 minute with hand beater. Pour into plate. Bake until knife inserted in center comes out clean, about 30 minutes. Cool 5 minutes. Serve with fresh fruit if desired.

Plums chosen for recipe a matter of taste

Skin color is the best indication of plum ripeness. To make the plum bread, as shown in the above photo, any variety may be used as long as they are properly ripened.

There are a number of plum varieties with such different characteristics but what kind of plum you use for this scrumptious Plum Bran Bread is a matter of taste. All plum varieties will be delicious any way you use them as long as they are properly ripened.

Skin color is the best indication of plum ripeness. Choose a plum correctly colored for its variety. A slight softness or yielding to gentle palm pressure is also a good ripeness guide.

Plums ripen best in groups of two or more at room temperature left undisturbed for several days in a ripening bowl or paper bag. Refrigerate fresh plums to prevent overripening.

PLUM BRAN BREAD

2 firm, ripe fresh plums
2 packages active dry yeast
½ cup warm water
¼ cup sugar
2 cups sifted all-purpose flour
¼ cup non-fat dry milk
½ teaspoon salt
1 cup uncooked wheat bran cereal
1 large egg, beaten
⅓ cup margarine, softened

Pit and finely chop plums to measure ¾ of a cup. Sprinkle yeast over warm water in large mixing bowl and stir in sugar. Let stand 2 minutes. Meanwhile, mix flour with dry milk and salt. Add 1 cup flour mixture, bran cereal, egg and margarine to softened yeast.

Beat 2 minutes at medium speed of electric mixer (300 strokes by hand). Stir in plums, then remaining flour mixture to form a stiff dough.

Cover and let rise in warm place until doubled, about 1 hour. Stir dough down. Turn into greased loaf pan 8½x4½x2 5/8 inches) and smooth top.

Bake at once in bottom center of 375 degree oven for 40 minutes or until loaf tests done. Cool in pan 10 minutes then turn out onto wire rack to cool completely. Makes 1 loaf.

Fresh plum bars have old-fashioned flavor

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
AP Food Editor

When you were young, did your mother or perhaps your grandmother bake oatmeal bars with a filling of dates? They were standard American fare for years and many cooks still bake them. Although the original filling was made with dates, later other combinations of dried fruits were often used.

Recently I came on a recipe for these old-fashioned bars with a filling of fresh red plums. When we tried it, I thought it was a good new variation on the old-fashioned theme.

These Fresh Plum Dessert Bars, cut in large size and topped with vanilla ice cream or whipped cream, make a worthwhile ending for an informal meal. If you like, you can change the traditional topping and use whipped cream cheese, sour cream, yogurt or creme fraiche.

I like these bars served the day they are baked because then the top layer has a certain crispness that is lost when the bars are covered and stored.

FRESH PLUM DESSERT BARS

¾ pound (about 4 or 5 medium) ripe juicy fresh red plums
1 cup unbleached flour
¼ teaspoon baking powder
1 teaspoon cinnamon
½ teaspoon nutmeg
1 teaspoon grated lemon rind
¼ cup plus 2 tablespoons firmly packed light brown sugar
¾ cup (12 tablespoons) butter, soft or cut into small pats
1½ cups regular oats

Wash and dry plums, cut flesh away from pits, chop medium-fine, reserve enough of the juicy fruit to make 1½ cups.

In the bowl of an electric mixer thoroughly stir together flour, baking powder, cinnamon, nutmeg, lemon rind and ¼ cup sugar. Beat in butter until blended; gently beat in oats.

Pat half the mixture (about 1 cup) into the bottom of a buttered 9 by 9 by 1¾-inch baking pan. Bake in a preheated 400-degree oven until golden brown at the edges — 12 minutes. Remove from oven, but leave oven control at 400 degrees.

At once, mix 2 tablespoons sugar with the plums and cover bottom layer with plum mixture, crumble remaining oat mixture over plums. Return to the 400-degree oven until golden brown — 20 minutes. Let cool on a wire rack. Cut into bars.

Good served as a dessert topped with vanilla ice cream or whipped cream.

Glacee: A cool treat

LIME GLACEE

6 cups chicken stock
1 medium onion, sliced
2 ribs celery (leaves included), chopped
5 cloves garlic, crushed
3 sprigs parsley
3 teaspoons unflavored gelatin
8 tablespoons fresh lime juice, strained
3 drops Tabasco
1 cup heavy cream, whipped
2 tablespoons candied ginger, chopped

Pour chicken stock into a large pot, add onions, celery, and garlic, bring to a boil, reduce heat, and simmer 1 hour. Drop parsley to wilt in stock; remove and transfer to blender with 1 cup of the stock, blend well, and return to pot. Stir mixture well, then pour through a fine sieve into a large bowl, pressing with back of spoon to get all liquid. Dissolve gelatin in ¼ cup water, add to hot liquid, and stir till dissolved completely. Cool to room temperature, stir in lime juice and Tabasco, and chill till thickened. Serve in icy-cold glass cups or bowls topped with generous dollops of cream. Garnish each portion with 1 teaspoon candied ginger. Serves 4 to 6.

Texan directs international UFO network

SEGUIN, Texas (AP) — In 1948, Walt Andrus changed his life by looking up into the clear Arizona sky. What he saw made him believe — he says "know" — that unidentified flying objects exist.

Now UFOs are Andrus' passion, and a full-time job to boot.

Andrus is the international director of the Mutual UFO Network, a non-profit organization formed in 1969 with about 1,100 members worldwide.

MUFON operates from Andrus' home in Seguin, about 45 miles northeast of San Antonio, where books on UFOs and thick files on mysterious cases share shelf space with his bowling trophies.

"Any scientist or engineer who takes the time to look at the scientific data, they wouldn't question the existence of UFOs," Andrus says.

MUFON, he said, is "a network of investigators, researchers and consultants working together to document cases of UFOs."

Andrus readily concedes that many UFOs hysterically reported to police departments or radio stations turn out to be merely the Goodyear blimp or an errant weather balloon.

It's the cases that remain tantalizingly unexplained, those with baffling physical evidence or involving close encounters with alien "entities" that fascinate MUFON members and overflow his organization's file cabinets, he said.

UFOs became real to Andrus 35 years ago in downtown Phoenix, when he looked into a cloudless sky and saw four silvery balloons instantly disappear, only to pop back into sight about 10 minutes later.

"There could be no explanation for it," said Andrus, a retired executive. "Something that defies any earthly definition we call UFOs."

MUFON's hotline logs about 20 calls a month, Andrus said, though many tips don't pan out.

"Reports have really tapered off now," he said. "Things have just dropped out and we don't know why."

UFOs must be good copy, too, because Andrus receives frequent calls from tabloids like "The Globe" and "The National Enquirer," which often dispatch staffers to interview witnesses at the latest sighting.

MUFON puts out its own monthly magazine, considerably more staid, and plans its international convention the first week of July in Pasadena, Calif.

Andrus believes UFOs merely want to observe life on Earth, to collect terrestrial samples or satisfy their alien curiosities about humans.

"They've been here maybe a thousand, a million years," he said. "We walk on the moon, we've had craft fly around space, but the things they do look like magic. They're at least a thousand years ahead of us."

He pulls out files documenting dramatic changes in soil content, burnt vegetation, radiation levels and other physical phenomena he says verify reports of UFOs — or at least should raise questions in skeptics' minds.

MUFON's meticulous files, and voluminous tapes of hypnosis sessions, also detail about 300 cases of the ultimate extra-terrestrial confrontation — close encounters of the fourth kind, or abduction by aliens, he said.

Dear to Andrus' Earth-bound heart are the thousands of pages of documents laboriously obtained from the government through the Freedom of Information Act.

One such document, released by the Air Force, describes a bizarre encounter involving two airmen at Ellsworth Air Force Base near Nisland, S.D. on Nov. 16, 1977.

The airmen answered a security call and "observed a bright light shining vertically upwards," according to the report, signed by the colonel in charge of base security.

One airman, Wayne E. Raeke, "observed an individual dressed in a glowing green metallic uniform and wearing a helmet with visor," the Air Force report said.

"The intruder turned towards Raeke and aimed an object at Raeke which emitted a bright flash of intense light," it reads. "The flash of light struck Raeke's M-16 rifle, disintegrating the weapon and causing second and third degree burns to Raeke's hands."

"Our government says 'We don't have UFOs,'" he said, "but all the top agencies are involved.

And though he labeled movies like "Close Encounters of the Third Kind" and "E.T., the Extra-Terrestrial" as "glamorized and Hollywoodized" pastiches of the truth, he conceded they did help MUFON.

Pilots train to recognize high altitude dangers

PEASE AIR FORCE BASE, N.H. (AP) — The world at 35,000 feet is a giddy, dangerous place where euphoria can give way to suffocation in seconds.

In the thin air seven miles above the earth, oxygen deficiency — known as hypoxia — can begin with a sense of well-being, then befuddle its victim with eonfused, pleasant thoughts. Death follows quickly.

Each day, Air Force pilots are sent into this potentially deadly atmosphere — without leaving the ground.

The Air Force maintains high altitude chambers at Pease and 16 other air bases around the country to train and reacquaint flyers with the subtle symptoms of hypoxia and other hazards of high altitude flying.

The sessions, including classroom training and a two-hour chamber "flight," are part of a growing awareness that physical training, diet and psychological factors are as important to a pilot as a well-maintained aircraft.

"Back in the '60s the pilot was worried about his equipment. We didn't really know how important the human factors were," says Capt. Ernest Pritchard, head of the Pease training unit. "Now we're on the leading edge of technology and we're beginning to test those limits in human factors."

THE NEED FOR such training was illustrated in May when a West German executive jet with a crew of three mysteriously flew 1,600 miles off course and crashed into the North Atlantic.

The Learjet 25D was on a flight from Vienna to Hamburg when it failed to land and continued on at 43,000 feet while ground controllers and chase planes tried without success to contact the crew.

The plane apparently ran out of fuel and crashed 200 miles south of Iceland. Officials theorize the crew was long dead — the victims of a malfunctioning oxygen system.

A similar mystery claimed the life of Louisiana State University football coach Robert "Bo" Rein in 1980. Rein was in a private plane flying from Shreveport to Baton Rouge. The plane climbed to 41,000 feet, then fell into the Atlantic, 1,400 miles off course.

OFFICIALS SAID the accident may also have been caused by a gradual hypoxia that civilian pilots are not trained to recognize.

To help flyers spot the symptoms, the Air Force has its pilots strap on oxygen masks and sit in the special chamber that can duplicate conditions in the stratosphere.

Air is pumped out, bringing the chamber to the equivalent of 35,000 feet. The chamber is then brought down to 25,000 feet, and the flyers are asked to remove their masks.

At first there are no obvious signs. Breathing is easy; the class turns its attention to a page of math and logic problems. But after a minute a certain light-headed feeling appears, followed by a tingling sensation and subtle visual changes.

THESE EARLY SYMPTOMS are followed by more serious ones. But lack of coordination, numbness and tunnel vision can be belied by a sense of well being. The students are all smiles; if left unattended they would be unconscious in three to five minutes.

The chamber's attendants, wearing masks and trailing air hoses, don't let things get that far.

"How are you doing, No. 4," an attendant asks an Air National Guard captain who is studying his math problems with great concentration.

"Pretty good," the captain answers, with a wide grin.

Hypoxia isn't the only hazard of high altitude flight. As the air in the chamber thins, air and trapped gases in the human body expand. This is most embarrassingly noticable in the lower intestinal tract.

Duo ignores tornado watch to scale tower

DETROIT (AP) — A Hollywood stuntman and his daredevil buddy say they showed their "independence" with a dual Fourth of July ascent of the 73-story Westin Hotel, which they claimed was the first double climb of a major building.

Police arrested the two — who made the climb despite a tornado watch — when they pulled themselves over the top of Detroit's tallest building after a 6½-hour climb Monday.

A third man who maintained radio contact with them from the ground also was arrested.

"You can't control the weather," 29-year-old Ron Broyles of Los Angeles radioed back when told of the tornado watch shortly before they reached the top at 2 p.m.

Broyles, fellow climber Kenn Rick, 32, of suburban Lake Orion, and Fred Jones, 29, of East Lansing, were charged with disorderly conduct and criminal trespassing, said police Sgt. Elmer Bolia. The three were released Monday evening pending a court hearing today.

Customers can protect their credit

By The Associated Press

Do you know where your credit cards are?

Unless you're careful, they could wind up in the hands of a crook.

Theft and other crimes result in credit card losses of more than $1 billion a year, according to recent testimony before Congress, and you can help cut the total by taking a few steps to protect yourself and your credit.

"Make sure you know where your card is at all times," said Meredith Fernstrom, senior vice president for public responsibility of the American Express Co.

Ms. Fernstrom said many people carry only those credit cards they plan to use on a particular day, leaving the rest at home. If you don't keep track of what is where, you may not be aware of a lost or stolen card for several days.

NOTIFY THE CREDIT CARD ISSUER as soon as you discover your card is missing. Many companies provide special toll free numbers for you to call. Keep a record of the procedure to follow, along with a list of all your card holders, at home and at the office to avoid delays.

Your maximum liability for unauthorized charges is $50 per card and you are only responsible for charges made before you report the problem. If you have several credit cards, however, the total can mount up quickly. And the losses which are aosorbed by retailers, banks and other card issuers will eventually be passed on to you and other consumers in the form of higher prices.

Judith Ludwig, vice president for public relations of MasterCard International Inc., urges consumers to "always check your statement over," instead of simply looking at the bottom line and paying the amount listed as due. Make sure each transaction is valid.

If there are any mistakes, Ms. Ludwig said, "contact your bank (or card issuer). Send them a letter. Tell them what the disputed charge is." You do NOT have to pay the amount in question.

Ms. Ludwig also said it is a good idea to ask for the carbons involved in a transaction and tear them up to avoid someone getting your name and card number off the carbon. "The criminal element will pick through trash ... and then whip up a counterfeit credit card," she said.

Saying that the "losses have become phenomenal and (are) growing," Ms. Ludwig added: "Treat that card as if it were cash."

MS. FERNSTROM OF AMERICAN EXPRESS had some other suggestions. Among them:

—Hold on to the tissue copy receipt from each purchase. It will be easier to check your monthly statement.

—Keep your card in the same place in your wallet so you notice immediately if you don't get it back.

—Check the card you get back to make sure it is yours, not a dummy.

—Do NOT give out your card number to someone who calls and says he or she is from a card company or bank and wants to check your account. "No legitimate credit card company will ever call you up and ask for your card number," Ms. Fernstrom said.

—Do not loan your card to other people — even family members — for their use.

—When you hand over your card, try — if possible — to keep an eye on it at all times.

Bus' speed may have caused crash

CARROLLTON, Ky. (AP) — Passengers on a church bus begged the driver to reduce his speed just before the vehicle plunged down a 300-foot embankment, killing two people and injuring about 20 others, officials say.

The bus skidded off Interstate 71 about 4 p.m. Monday, broke through a guard rail and flipped several times while diving down the bank near Carrollton, about 45 miles northeast of Louisville, said Carroll County Coroner James Dunn.

James E. Montgomery, assistant director of the Disaster and Emergency Services office in Carroll County, said the bus may have been speeding.

"One of the passengers said they kept begging the driver to slow down and he wouldn't do it," Montgomery said.

Driving conditions also may have been hampered by thunderstorms packing heavy rains and wind, said state Trooper James Mudd.

Mudd said the passengers he interviewed "were not coherent enough to provide much information." He said only that the bus left the road "for reasons unknown."

The passengers were members of the Greater Community Temple of Memphis, Tenn., and were on their way home after a trip to Cleveland, Mudd said.

Two women believed to be in their 20s were killed, but their identities were not released pending notification of relatives.

Officials were unable to provide an accurate figure for those injured because there was no passenger list and several victims had been shifted from one hospital to another, Mudd said.

Andre Watkins, 16, was reclining in his seat when he felt the bus "take a long skid" in one direction and then another before going down the hill.

"I was thinking about going to the floor, and then I fell on the floor," said Watkins, who suffered a broken collarbone. The bus "rolled over, and everybody fell out when it went down the hill."

"They were strewn from the guardrail all the way down the embankment and a couple were trapped beneath the bus," Mudd said.

Ed Gulley, a photographer for The Madison (Ind.) Courier who arrived shortly after the accident, said, "It was raining pretty hard. If anyone (of the injured) had been able to get up, they probably would have tried. But they were lying pretty still."

NEA plans discussion of affirmative action stance

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — The National Education Association is winding up its convention with a challenge to the union's stance on affirmative action and with one ear cocked for criticism from President Reagan.

The 7,225 delegates, ending four days of business meetings and nearly a full week of union activity, had a long list of unfinished business to wade through today, including a challenge to NEA's policy of backing job preferences for minorities and women in schools under court-ordered desegregation.

But the delegates' attention may be distracted by Reagan's speech today to the NEA's archrival, the American Federation of Teachers, at the AFT's convention in Los Angeles.

With 1.7 million members, the NEA is nearly three times the size of its 580,000-member rival. Although they stand united in opposition to Reagan's proposed tuition tax credits for private education and his attempts to slash federal aid to public schools, the unions have clashed on merit pay.

They also are at loggerheads on how far to go with affirmative action. The AFT fought layoffs of senior white teachers in Boston last year, while the NEA supported keeping minority teachers on the job there. That case went to the Supreme Court, but the justices declared it moot when the white teachers were rehired.

NEA delegates from New Jersey and Illinois were pressing the union to adopt a policy of supporting seniority in all layoffs, with no exceptions.

On Monday, AFT President Albert Shanker blasted the NEA's stance on school reform and claimed, "The future of public education may very well depend on whether the philosophy of the NEA or the AFT prevails.

"They're not just against merit pay, they're against everything that stands for standards and quality," Shanker charged.

A former math teacher, Shanker said the NEA's dogged opposition to proposals that would give merit pay to outstanding teachers was effectively handing Reagan the potent political issue he needed to make him appear to be pro-education.

Reagan repeatedly has taken the NEA to task for its criticism of merit pay.

Cave dancing...an almost forgotten pastime in South

CLARKSVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Singer Snooky Lanson remembers the dances in Dunbar Cave as the best Saturday nights in Tennessee or Kentucky.

"The sound was great ... the dance floor was slate and the walls were solid bedrock," recounted Lanson, who sang with the big bands of Francis Craig and Owen Bradley in the 1930s and went on to television's "Your Hit Parade."

"And with that cool breeze blowing from inside the cave, they would dance all night," said Lanson, now an advertising executive in Nashville.

Cave dancing is an almost forgotten pastime that was popular in Kentucky, Tennessee and Alabama during the 1930s when big bands were as hot as the summers and air conditioners were rare.

Dunbar is a "blowing cave" with cooled air from deep within the cavern continuously flowing out. In its days as a dance hall, the breeze cooled a dance floor 150 feet in diameter.

The cave, which extends at least 10 miles into the limestone near Clarksville, was a favorite for big bands that stopped there on their way between dates in Louisville and Memphis. Bands led by Kay Kaiser, Bobby Shaw and Tommy Dorsey played there.

Ten thousand years before, the cave was home to Indians. More recently it hid supplies for the Confederate army.

"The acoustics in these caves is unbelievable," said Ann Toplovich, a researcher for the Tennessee Historical Commission. "When I was in college, we were digging at Dunbar Cave and some of the guys played their banjos. They would sit in the center of the cave and play softly and you could hear them like you were sitting right next to them."

Ursula Beach of Clarksville also remembers the dances at the cave, with the big bands on their one-night stopovers.

"It was lovely to think that you had a place to go in those days where you could hear good music and dance with a cool breeze blowing on you," said Mrs. Beach, 83.

"We were lucky," she said. "We'd get the best in the country playing right there in what must have been the world's most natural music hall."

The cave was later bought by Roy Acuff of Grand Ole Opry fame, who held square dances on Tuesday and Friday nights and round dances on Saturdays. At one point, a local radio show featuring country music also was broadcast from the cave.

Today, Dunbar Cave is a state park that officials hope to have restored next year for Clarksville's bicentennial.

Several other Tennessee caves also had unusual uses.

In 1894, Julius A. Wayland bought Ruskin Cave near Dickson to start a Utopian commune. The cave housed a cannery for vegetables the commune grew.

Ms. Toplovich said the commune lasted 10 years before a religious denomination bought the site and opened Ruskin Cave College.

In the 1930s, while Dunbar Cave was host to big bands, Ruskin Cave had square dances, with a 3,000-seat bleacher surrounding the dance floor.

Mini-warships fire BB shots to recreate WWII sea battles

GIG HARBOR, Wash. (AP) — When members of the North American Scale Warship Combat Club meet to battle at sea, they do more than maneuver radio-controlled model ships. They fire real shot — BB shot, that is.

"It's a heck of a lot of fun," said Paul Fleming of Gig Harbor, whose 9-month-old Gig Harbor club is one of four in the Puget Sound area.

On bi-monthly maneuvers, members sail radio-controlled scale models of World War II vessels out on a pond or lake.

Fleming said Sunday that most maneuvers pit Allied forces against the Axis, and the war games are scored on an elaborate point system.

A sunken ship is worth 1,000 points, while surrender is worth 3,000.

Underwater mines — actually balloons anchored beneath the water's surface — add another degree of uncertainty.

She knows she's a widow; but anger still continues

By the Los Angeles Times-Washington Post News Service

NORFOLK, Va. — Bobbe Lindland finally acknowledged last week that she was no longer a Navy wife, something she had been for 22 years as far as she was concerned.

She had been married to Cmdr. Donald Lindland 11 years when he was shot down over North Vietnam in September 1972. For 11 years more, she waited — in anger, confusion and bitterness — for word of his fate, fighting against U.S. officials for information they considered secret and she considered personal, fighting against her own emotions, unable to get on with life as if he were dead, unable to suspend life as if he were not.

Last Thursday Don Lindland's flag-draped coffin was unloaded along with seven others from the cargo bay of an airplane in San Francisco after release by the Vietnamese last month.

SINCE 1973, the Vietnamese have returned the remains of about 90 U.S. servicemen, though the U.S. still lists 2,486 servicemen and civilians as unaccounted for in Southeast Asia. The Vietnamese say they have no more remains.

Once the remains of Lindland and the other seven were flown to Hawaii, they were identified by forensic experts at the U.S. Army Central Identification Laboratory near Honolulu.

After reviewing their findings, based on medical and dental records and bone analysis, Bobbe Lindland is convinced that the remains are her husband's. But she is not relieved, because she wants to know how her husband died.

THE VIETNAMESE simply handed the remains over to U.S. officials with no explanation. U.S. intelligence, as far as Lindland has been able to tell, has no explanation of why, when or how Don Lindland died either.

"I've heard a lot of wives in my position over the last few years say how relieved they were at the return of remains, how that now they can get on with their lives, now they can begin to forget," said 45-year-old Bobbe Lindland.

"I'm not one of those. Look, the North Vietnamese murdered Don, and I'm never going to know what happened. Don was seen alive on the ground after he was shot down. I'm convinced that the remains are his, but in my mind that doesn't eniio. I'm still mad. I'm still furious.

"I'm mad at the Vietnamese for what they did to him, what they did to me. I'm mad at the Jane Fondas who rallied against him. I'm mad at the fact that a military war was turned into a political ball game at the expense of our men. I'm mad that mighty Kissinger wrote off the POWs (prisoners of war) and MIAs (missing in action) at the Paris peace talks.

"I'M MAD THAT Mr. Carter welcomed home the draft-evaders and declared our POWs dead. I'm mad I couldn't do more within the system to get more attention to our POWs and MIAs, to make the government more responsive. Maybe we could have saved some more lives."

So Bobbe Lindland cannot be grateful for the chance to bury some part of her husband beneath a stone. She has his body, but she doesn't have the facts, and that's what she's been fighting for since Don's Grumman A-6 Intruder was downed by two missiles while on a bombing mission southwest of Haiphong in what was then North Vietnam.

Three weeks after a teletyped message informed her that he had been shot down, she attended a convention of the American League of Families of American Prisoners and Missing in Southeast Asia.

Soon she became an East Coast spokeswoman for the league, lecturing to local groups and chambers of commerce, being interviewed for television, challenging the government's power to withhold information about America's missing men.

BILLBOARDS WERE raised all over Norfolk. Paid for by the league, they carried a 9-foot picture of her husband and the message: "Hanoi, Where Is Don Lindland and the Rest of Our Men?"

In 1975 the Berkeley-educated journalism major took a job as assistant editor of Armed Forces Journal. She used her Washington press corps job to buttonhole officials, push for more action on POW and MIA issues, find out what had happened to Don.

Through it all, Bobbe Lindland never really knew officially what had become of her husband. Informal information she gathered indicated he was a POW. He hud been seen on the ground, apparently uninjured, after successfully ejecting when his plane was hit by two surface-to-air missles.

There had been North Vietnamese radio broadcasts, monitored by U.S. intelligence, lauding the capture of a pilot at the right time and place. A North Vietnamese soldier captured in South Vietnam reported having seen Lindland's plane go down and a pilot seeking to evade the militia.

"As far as I could learn, and believe me, it was difficult to get anything out of the government, Don was alive," she said. "Don was in a POW camp somewhere in the north."

THE LINDLANDS HAD met on Wake Island in 1961. It was a time when the U.S. was flying diplomats, intelligence people and military advisers into South Vietnam at an ever-increasing pace, when what became a dirty, unpopular war was just a trouble spot.

A stewardess for World Airways, under contract with the government, she was flying 65,000 miles a month, regularly taking ground fire from the Viet Cong when flying into Tansonnhut air base in Saigon, dumping fuel over the Pacific. A crisis was building, and she was living it before most Americans even knew what was happening.

She met Don Lindland on a diving board at a hotel on Wake. He, too, was flying C-121s on Embassy Runs, as they were called. A young ensign with blond hair and an easy smile, he was a big man from Eugene, Ore., who looked like his father, a broad-faced Norwegian immigrant who worked for the railroad.

THEY WERE MARRIED six months later, and soon Don, an economics major at the University of Oregon, decided he would be a career Navy man. The Lindlands were transferred to Pensacola, Fla., where he instructed Navy fliers and then instructors of Navy fliers.

By 1966 Don Lindland was accepted into the Navy's A-6 program and was transferred here, where he was trained to fly attack bombers from the carrier Enterprise.

"Don and I were good friends," Bobbe Lindland said. "We were partners. He mowed the grass. I did the shrubs. He didn't make me wash his yucky flight suits. He threw them in the wash himself. He wasn't worried about his macho image. After all, he took that big aircraft up there and did amazing things with it. He knew he was macho."

Since her husband's disappearance, Lindland has ranged from activism to ambivilance, from the thick of the League of Families fight in Washington to escape to Hawaii as a hospital volunteer, to Pensacola to study Elizabethan history, to Orlando to do free-lance photography.

Ex-volunteers eager to serve

WASHINGTON (AP) — The spirit of volunteerism is still strong among many of the 80,000 former Peace Corps members, but an alumni group says less than 10 percent keep ties to their Third World experience.

Since the Peace Corps was set up 22 years ago, many former recruits became active volunteers after returning home. Some worked with programs to help Haitian refugees in Florida and others supported U.S. efforts to preserve the indigenous cultures of the South Pacific.

A group of ex-volunteers who served in Togo raised money in Chapel Hill, N.C., to help educate promising Tongolese youths.

A winter marathon around a lake in Madison, Wis., is staged each year by a group of Peace Corps alumni to benefit hunger relief programs.

Even though many former Peace Corps recruits have remained active as volunteers in their own communities, only one returnee in eight retains a connection with the experience, according to Deborah Harding, executive director of the privately-funded Peace Corps Institute.

The privately funded institute, which was founded in 1980, wants to encourage more Peace Corps alumni to maintain Third World ties, she said. The institute has published a biographical directory of some 40,000 former volunteers and is planning to find the other 40,000 for a second edition of the volume.

A newsletter to inform returnees about Third World issues and volunteer opportunities will soon be published.

The Peace Corps has done little to encourage returnees to use the special skills they picked up during their stays in remote countries, said Fred Thompson, president of the 1,500-member National Council for Returned Volunteers.

Cave dancing...an almost forgotten pastime in South

CLARKSVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Singer Snooky Lanson remembers the dances in Dunbar Cave as the best Saturday nights in Tennessee or Kentucky.

"The sound was great ... the dance floor was slate and the walls were solid bedrock," recounted Lanson, who sang with the big bands of Francis Craig and Owen Bradley in the 1930s and went on to television's "Your Hit Parade."

"And with that cool breeze blowing from inside the cave, they would dance all night," said Lanson, now an advertising executive in Nashville.

Cave dancing is an almost forgotten pastime that was popular in Kentucky, Tennessee and Alabama during the 1930s when big bands were as hot as the summers and air conditioners were rare.

Dunbar is a "blowing cave" with cooled air from deep within the cavern continuously flowing out. In its days as a dance hall, the breeze cooled a dance floor 150 feet in diameter.

The cave, which extends at least 10 miles into the limestone near Clarksville, was a favorite for big bands that stopped there on their way between dates in Louisville and Memphis. Bands led by Kay Kaiser, Bobby Shaw and Tommy Dorsey played there.

Ten thousand years before, the cave was home to Indians. More recently it hid supplies for the Confederate army.

"The acoustics in these caves is unbelievable," said Ann Toplovich, a researcher for the Tennessee Historical Commission. "When I was in college, we were digging at Dunbar Cave and some of the guys played their banjos. They would sit in the center of the cave and play softly and you could hear them like you were sitting right next to them."

Ursula Beach of Clarksville also remembers the dances at the cave, with the big bands on their one-night stopovers.

"It was lovely to think that you had a place to go in those days where you could hear good music and dance with a cool breeze blowing on you," said Mrs. Beach, 83.

"We were lucky," she said. "We'd get the best in the country playing right there in what must have been the world's most natural music hall."

The cave was later bought by Roy Acuff of Grand Ole Opry fame, who held square dances on Tuesday and Friday nights and round dances on Saturdays. At one point, a local radio show featuring country music also was broadcast from the cave.

Today, Dunbar Cave is a state park that officials hope to have restored next year for Clarksville's bicentennial.

Several other Tennessee caves also had unusual uses.

In 1894, Julius A. Wayland bought Ruskin Cave near Dickson to start a Utopian commune. The cave housed a cannery for vegetables the commune grew.

Ms. Toplovich said the commune lasted 10 years before a religious denomination bought the site and opened Ruskin Cave College.

In the 1930s, while Dunbar Cave was host to big bands, Ruskin Cave had square dances, with a 3,000-seat bleacher surrounding the dance floor.

Mini-warships fire BB shots to recreate WWII sea battles

GIG HARBOR, Wash. (AP) — When members of the North American Scale Warship Combat Club meet to battle at sea, they do more than maneuver radio-controlled model ships. They fire real shot — BB shot, that is.

"It's a heck of a lot of fun," said Paul Fleming of Gig Harbor, whose 9-month-old Gig Harbor club is one of four in the Puget Sound area.

On bi-monthly maneuvers, members sail radio-controlled scale models of World War II vessels out on a pond or lake.

Fleming said Sunday that most maneuvers pit Allied forces against the Axis, and the war games are scored on an elaborate point system.

Every time the BBs fired from miniature guns hit a ship's superstructure, the operator chalks up 5 points. Hitting a gun turret is worth 25 points, hitting the sides above the waterline is 20 points and a hit below the waterline adds 100 points.

A sunken ship is worth 1,000 points, while surrender is worth 3,000.

Underwater mines — actually balloons anchored beneath the water's surface — add another degree of uncertainty.

She knows she's a widow; but anger still continues

By the Los Angeles Times-Washington Post News Service

NORFOLK, Va. — Bobbe Lindland finally acknowledged last week that she was no longer a Navy wife, something she had been for 22 years as far as she was concerned.

She had been married to Cmdr. Donald Lindland 11 years when he was shot down over North Vietnam in September 1972. For 11 years more, she waited — in anger, confusion and bitterness — for word of his fate, fighting against U.S. officials for information they considered secret and she considered personal, fighting against her own emotions, unable to get on with life as if he were dead, unable to suspend life as if he were not.

Last Thursday Don Lindland's flag-draped coffin was unloaded along with seven others from the cargo bay of an airplane in San Francisco after release by the Vietnamese last month.

SINCE 1973, the Vietnamese have returned the remains of about 90 U.S. servicemen, though the U.S. still lists 2,486 servicemen and civilians as unaccounted for in Southeast Asia. The Vietnamese say they have no more remains.

Once the remains of Lindland and the other seven were flown to Hawaii, they were identified by forensic experts at the U.S. Army Central Identification Laboratory near Honolulu.

After reviewing their findings, based on medical and dental records and bone analysis, Bobbe Lindland is convinced that the remains are her husband's. But she is not relieved, because she wants to know how her husband died.

THE VIETNAMESE simply handed the remains over to U.S. officials with no explanation. U.S. intelligence, as far as Lindland has been able to tell, has no explanation of why, when or how Don Lindland died either.

"I've heard a lot of wives in my position over the last few years say how relieved they were at the return of remains, how that now they can get on with their lives, now they can begin to forget," said 45-year-old Bobbe Lindland.

"I'm not one of those. Look, the North Vietnamese murdered Don, and I'm never going to know what happened. Don was seen alive on the ground after he was shot down. I'm convinced that the remains are his, but in my mind that doesn't eniio. I'm still mad. I'm still furious.

"I'm mad at the Vietnamese for what they did to him, what they did to me. I'm mad at the Jane Fondas who rallied against him. I'm mad at the fact that a military war was turned into a political ball game at the expense of our men. I'm mad that mighty Kissinger wrote off the POWs (prisoners of war) and MIAs (missing in action) at the Paris peace talks.

"I'M MAD THAT Mr. Carter welcomed home the draft-evaders and declared our POWs dead. I'm mad I couldn't do more within the system to get more attention to our POWs and MIAs, to make the government more responsive. Maybe we could have saved some more lives."

So Bobbe Lindland cannot be grateful for the chance to bury some part of her husband beneath a stone. She has his body, but she doesn't have the facts, and that's what she's been fighting for since Don's Grumman A-6 Intruder was downed by two missiles while on a bombing mission southwest of Haiphong in what was then North Vietnam.

Three weeks after a teletyped message informed her that he had been shot down, she attended a convention of the American League of Families of American Prisoners and Missing in Southeast Asia.

Soon she became an East Coast spokeswoman for the league, lecturing to local groups and chambers of commerce, being interviewed for television, challenging the government's power to withhold information about America's missing men.

BILLBOARDS WERE raised all over Norfolk. Paid for by the league, they carried a 9-foot picture of her husband and the message: "Hanoi, Where Is Don Lindland and the Rest of Our Men?"

In 1975 the Berkeley-educated journalism major took a job as assistant editor of Armed Forces Journal. She used her Washington press corps job to buttonhole officials, push for more action on POW and MIA issues, find out what had happened to Don.

Through it all, Bobbe Lindland never really knew officially what had become of her husband. Informal information she gathered indicated he was a POW. He hud been seen on the ground, apparently uninjured, after successfully ejecting when his plane was hit by two surface-to-air missles.

There had been North Vietnamese radio broadcasts, monitored by U.S. intelligence, lauding the capture of a pilot at the right time and place. A North Vietnamese soldier captured in South Vietnam reported having seen Lindland's plane go down and a pilot seeking to evade the militia.

"As far as I could learn, and believe me, it was difficult to get anything out of the government, Don was alive," she said. "Don was in a POW camp somewhere in the north."

THE LINDLANDS HAD met on Wake Island in 1961. It was a time when the U.S. was flying diplomats, intelligence people and military advisers into South Vietnam at an ever-increasing pace, when what became a dirty, unpopular war was just a trouble spot.

A stewardess for World Airways, under contract with the government, she was flying 65,000 miles a month, regularly taking ground fire from the Viet Cong when flying into Tansonnhut air base in Saigon, dumping fuel over the Pacific. A crisis was building, and she was living it before most Americans even knew what was happening.

She met Don Lindland on a diving board at a hotel on Wake. He, too, was flying C-121s on Embassy Runs, as they were called. A young ensign with blond hair and an easy smile, he was a big man from Eugene, Ore., who looked like his father, a broad-faced Norwegian immigrant who worked for the railroad.

THEY WERE MARRIED six months later, and soon Don, an economics major at the University of Oregon, decided he would be a career Navy man. The Lindlands were transferred to Pensacola, Fla., where he instructed Navy fliers and then instructors of Navy fliers.

By 1966 Don Lindland was accepted into the Navy's A-6 program and was transferred here, where he was trained to fly attack bombers from the carrier Enterprise.

"Don and I were good friends," Bobbe Lindland said. "We were partners. He mowed the grass. I did the shrubs. He didn't make me wash his yucky flight suits. He threw them in the wash himself. He wasn't worried about his macho image. After all, he took that big aircraft up there and did amazing things with it. He knew he was macho."

Since her husband's disappearance, Lindland has ranged from activism to ambivilance, from the thick of the League of Families fight in Washington to escape to Hawaii as a hospital volunteer, to Pensacola to study Elizabethan history, to Orlando to do free-lance photography.

Ex-volunteers eager to serve

WASHINGTON (AP) — The spirit of volunteerism is still strong among many of the 80,000 former Peace Corps members, but an alumni group says less than 10 percent keep ties to their Third World experience.

Since the Peace Corps was set up 22 years ago, many former recruits became active volunteers after returning home. Some worked with programs to help Haitian refugees in Florida and others supported U.S. efforts to preserve the indigenous cultures of the South Pacific.

A group of ex-volunteers who served in Togo raised money in Chapel Hill, N.C., to help educate promising Tongolese youths.

A winter marathon around a lake in Madison, Wis., is staged each year by a group of Peace Corps alumni to benefit hunger relief programs.

Even though many former Peace Corps recruits have remained active as volunteers in their own communities, only one returnee in eight retains a connection with the experience, according to Deborah Harding, executive director of the privately-funded Peace Corps Institute.

The privately funded institute, which was founded in 1980, wants to encourage more Peace Corps alumni to maintain Third World ties, she said. The institute has published a biographical directory of some 40,000 former volunteers and is planning to find the other 40,000 for a second edition of the volume.

A newsletter to inform returnees about Third World issues and volunteer opportunities will soon be published.

The Peace Corps has done little to encourage returnees to use the special skills they picked up during their stays in remote countries, said Fred Thompson, president of the 1,500-member National Council for Returned Volunteers.
