Perot says he hopes to decide by Thursday

■ Clinton, Bush court volunteers; Perot announces toll-free number to gauge support.

By John King
Associated Press writer

DALLAS — Ross Perot coyly refused Monday to say if he would rejoin the presidential race but most of his top supporters said overtures from President Bush and Bill Clinton had not quelled their desire for Perot to make a late entry.

On a remarkable day even for this tumultuous political year, Bush and Clinton courted Perot and his backers by sending high-level delegations to lobby for the support of his volunteers and to convince Perot to stay on the sidelines, where he has been since quitting the race in July.

"There is no messianic drive here to have a candidate or to have me as a candidate," Perot told reporters. "If the volunteers ... feel that it's appropriate that I run, certainly I am going to honor their request. Then, I will give it everything I have night and day."

Perot has complained that neither Bush nor Clinton had a credible deficit-reduction plan and has said he would enter the race if his supporters so desired, enabling him to push his own deficit-reduction plan.

The Texas billionaire said he hoped to make his decision Thursday based on word from his supporters, although he said it could slip to Friday. In an evening appearance on CNN's "Larry King Live" he announced a new toll-free telephone number where those not already working for him could register their support.

Worldwide sting

ROME — Two alleged drug kingpins arrested as they left an ice cream parlor in the heart of Rome were among the first nabbed in a worldwide dragnet that dealt a heavy blow to a Mafia-Colombian connection, authorities said Monday. "Operation Green Ice" used a sting to help catch some 200 people over the weekend in the United States, Italy and at least five other countries, officials said. Tens of millions of dollars in cocaine, cash, jewels, securities and property were seized./3A

Credit card fights

NEW YORK — A credit-card showdown is looming between Visa and retailing giant Sears, Roebuck & Co. that could affect the cost of buying with plastic for millions of consumers. Sears, parent of the upstart Discover Card, is suing for the right to issue Visa cards, which have a much wider reach. The Chicago-based retailer argues that consumers would benefit from increased competition through lower interest rates and annual fees. From Visa's point of view, the Sears move is like Burger King seeking the right to sell Big Macs./7A

Alternate-fuel rift threatens energy bill OK

■ House, Senate square off on program requiring private fleet operators to buy vehicles using fuel other than gasoline.

By H. Josef Hebert
Associated Press writer

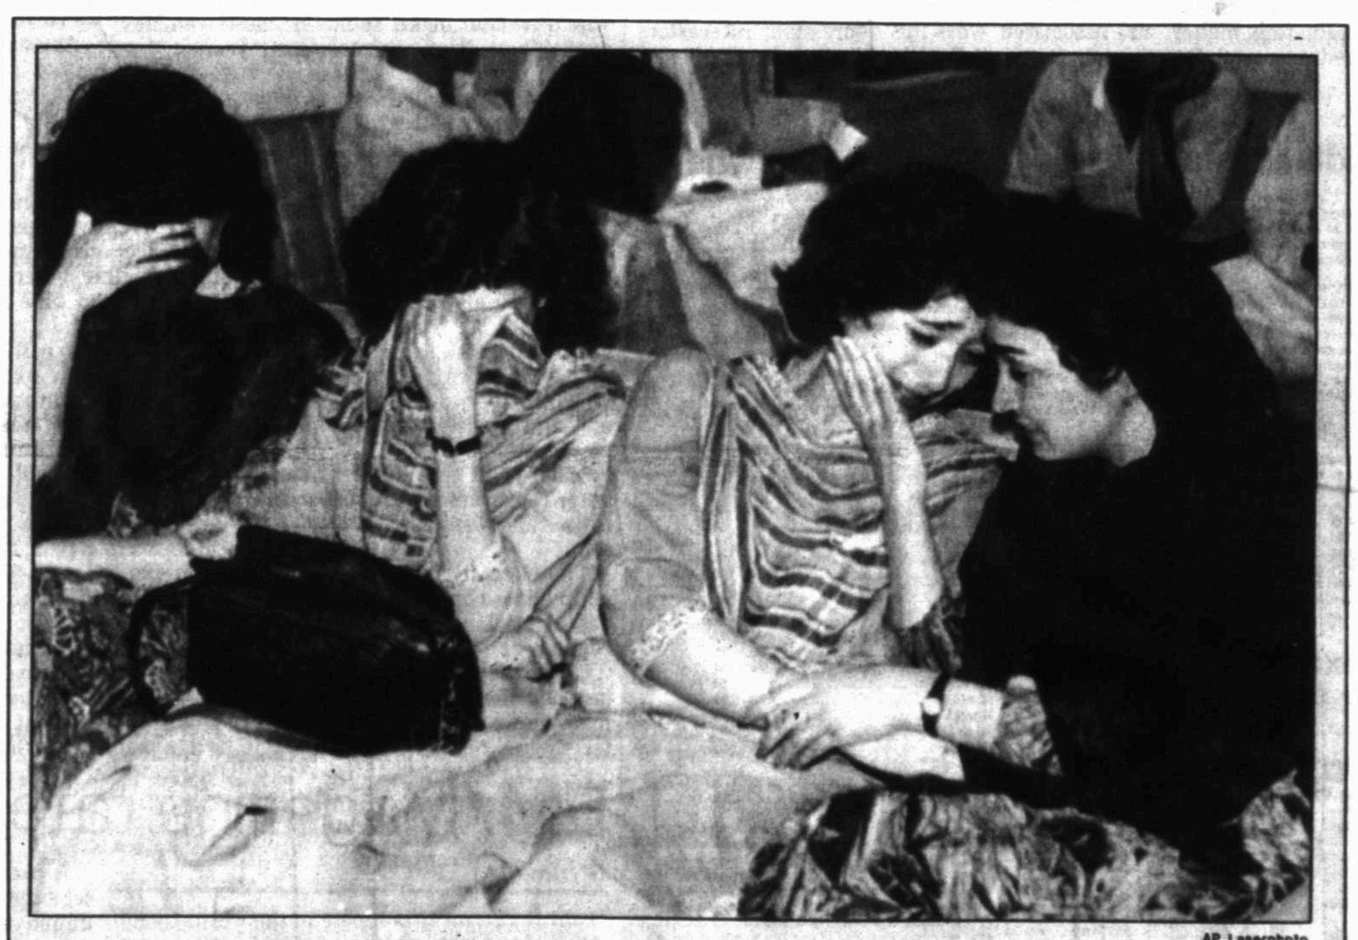

WASHINGTON — An ambitious program that requires private fleet operators to buy alternative-fuel vehicles may be scrapped by House and Senate negotiators trying to reach a compromise energy bill by week's end.

That provision has stymied the two houses, who have been trying for three weeks to merge energy bills previously approved by wide margins — one in the House, the other in the Senate.

Rep. John Dingell, D-Mich., head of the House negotiating team and a longtime defender of the U.S. auto industry, has insisted that the alternative-fuel program be scaled back.

The complex legislation, running to more than 1,300 pages, would set new standards for lights and electric motors to foster energy conservation, make it

Time runs out for residents wishing to register to vote

By Michael Kashgarian
Staff writer

Those who wish to vote in the upcoming election have less than a week to register if they haven't already.

The last day to register in person at the Elections Administrator Office is Friday, and mail-in registrations must be postmarked by Oct. 5.

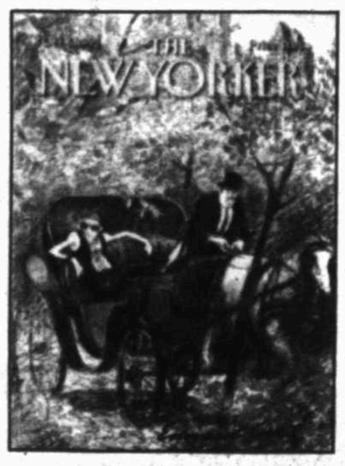

Bettye Calvert, Elections Administrator for Midland County, encourages registering early because waiting until near the deadline may jeopardize voting this election.

For example, if a mail-in registration card doesn't have all the necessary information, there may not be time to correct it.

"We get them every day that aren't filled out correctly," Ms. Calvert said.

For last minute registrations with errors "we'll send them a letter of rejection, but it will be too late to vote in November. They need not to wait," she said.

Midland students surpass state, national ACT scores

Study: MISD rates in top half of nation's schools

■ MISD pupils' average composite score is 21.5, compared to national score of 20.6, state score of 19.9.

By Myra Lee Salcedo

Midland Independent School District is rated higher than 45 percent of public school districts in the United States (including Hawaii and the District of Columbia), according to "Expansion Management" magazine.

"Expansion," billed as "the magazine for business-mobility decision makers," announced Monday that MISD ranks near the top half of schools nationwide, according to a study.

The magazine conducted the study and ranked MISD with a 95.2 score using its Education Quotient (EQ) index. The EQ index ranged from 50-150, with 100 indicating an average score. Lubbock Independent School District received an 80.6; Amarillo, 95.7; and Abilene, 97.8.

Ector County Independent School District — and other Texas districts similar in size to MISD — were not among the 500 school districts ranked.

This is the second year the magazine has ranked school districts. "We have done so because readers continue to ask for information about education. ... The conventional wisdom is that a good school can help the level-headed, thoughtful child — as well as the wondrous, unfocused one develop into a quick-thinking, problem-solving, mature young adult — in other words, the kind of worker U.S. companies

Midland public school students once again demonstrated their college preparedness by topping state and national mean scores on the ACT (American College Testing) program.

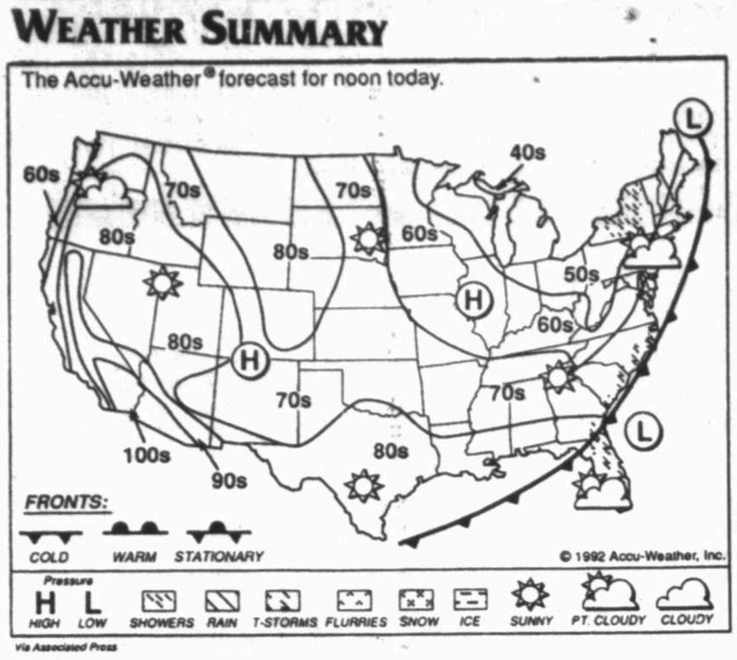

The mean composite score for students in Midland Independent School District is 21.5, compared to a national composite score of 20.6 and a state composite score of 19.9. A perfect score on the ACT is 36.

"These tests are so rigorously controlled in terms of their statistical foundation, and so many students take them, if a school district scores even 1 point better than anyone else, it is significant," said Joe Cummins, MISD executive director of planning, evaluation and testing.

Cummins noted that 18 percent of the students at Lee High School and 13 percent of the students at Midland High School scored in the

Highs to reach near 80

Staff report

Today's forecast calls for sunny skies and a high near 80 with east to southeast winds at 5-15 mph. Tonight should be clear with a low in the lower 50s, according to the National Weather Service in Midland.

Wednesday should be sunny with a high in the lower 80s.

After an overnight low of 47, Monday's high reached 81, compared to the record high for that date of 100 set in 1977. The record low was 41 set in 1945.

STATE

A weak cold front moved into the West as another left the Texas coast Monday, both keeping state temperatures in the milder 70s.

The weak cold front located along the coast left early Monday, taking with it, showers located along the Rio Grande plains near Laredo and near Harlingen.

Later in the day, a weak cold front over northern portions of the south plains and southern portions of the Texas Panhandle as sunny skies prevailed across West Texas.

Statewide highs stayed mainly in the 70s and 80s.

NATION

A tropical depression hovering off the coast of Florida kept thunderstorms brewing in the South on Monday, while high wind warnings were posted for the Great Lakes. Sizzling autumn temperatures baked extreme southern California.

The tropical system, with winds less than 39 mph, was no threat to land but related thunderstorms drenched parts of Florida, coastal Georgia, Virginia and the Carolinas.

Predicting higher surf associated with the depression, forecasters issued a coastal flood watch for northern Florida.

PEROT: Texan sets deadline to decide on race

(From 1A)

That number is 1-800-925-1300.

Near the close of the show, Perot's wife and three of his five children joined him in the studio, all saying they would support him if he decided to run.

Perot exulted in the spotlight and said there was much common ground with both camps when it came to economics, although neither Bush nor Clinton accepts Perot's bitter medicine for erasing the deficit in five years.

After each side spent 2½ hours detailing its economic programs and fielding questions from Perot's 50 state coordinators, Perot said he was leaving it up to his volunteers to decide whether he should join the race.

The Perot state leaders were returning home to brief their volunteers on presentations in which both Clinton and Bush supporters argued their candidate's views were closer to Perot's.

While they praised both delegations, it was clear most of Perot's top backers were not swayed.

"All this did was reinforce my support for Ross Perot," said New Mexico Perot coordinator John Bishop. "I absolutely want him to run and fully expect him to."

"I definitely want him to run," said Missouri coordinator Sandy McClure.

Kansas coordinator Orville Sweet said much the same. "My personal feeling is there still is a pretty wide gap between what the two parties want and what we want."

Echoed Connecticut coordinator James Boutelle: "He should get back in the race. He's a positive force."

Those and other comments left the clear impression that Perot's legions will urge him to enter the race when they report back in the coming days.

Perot did, however, leave himself room. He said there would have to be an "overwhelming consensus" for him to join the race. Asked to define what he meant, Perot said only, "If everyone is lukewarm it probably wouldn't be a good idea."

The scene in Dallas was as confusing as it was remarkable, an extraordinary spectacle of both candidates sending delegations to win over Perot and his supporters.

Both campaigns argued that they indeed had credible plans to cut the deficit, although neither was prepared to endorse the politically risky steps Perot advocates, including tax increases on gasoline and Social Security benefits.

For Clinton, an active Perot candidacy could scramble a race that has been stagnant for more than a month — to Clinton's benefit because of his consistent lead in national polls.

A new ABC News-Washington Post poll out Monday night showed almost a statistical dead heat between Clinton and Bush in a three-way race with Perot.

"I don't pay any attention to polls," Perot said Monday night on CNN's "Larry King Live." Should he decide to run, Perot said he would debate "anywhere anytime — you can't duck that."

Perot is likely to hurt Bush most in Florida and his native Texas, two critical states to Bush's come-from-behind hopes.

"There is a lot of commonality," Perot said after the Clinton presentation. "Where there are differences of opinion they are honest differences of opinion, with both sides looking for answers and neither side frozen in its positions."

Asked if he also found a "lot of commonality" with Bush's program as well, Perot said: "There is a great deal of overlap."

BILL: Leaders could cut alternative-fuel program

easier to build nuclear power plants, and use tax benefits to promote renewable energy sources and open the electric utility industry to more competition.

Staff discussions continued over the weekend and senators and representatives themselves were to resume talks today.

But as Congress begins its final week before adjourning, the legislation's sponsors expressed concerns that major remaining differences may force them to scuttle key parts of the bills, which were approved by the Senate 94-2 in February and by the House 381-37 in March.

At the top of the hit list has been a Senate proposal to require private fleet owners to begin buying vehicles that run on fuels other than gasoline. The provision was seen as a key to introducing into general use by the turn of the century large numbers of vehicles that run on such fuels as natural gas or electricity.

Dingell objects to the Senate timetable, which would make some of these vehicles available to fleet operators next year.

Seeking a compromise, Senate negotiators offered to let the Energy Department decide what fleet requirements to impose and agreed to broad exemptions if either the fuels or cars are not available.

That was not enough for Dingell, who wanted any such administrative rulemaking not to begin until 1998 to give more time to automakers already facing complex requirements under the 1990 Clean Air Act.

If a rulemaking cannot begin until 1998, the alternative-fuel vehicles program "would be pushed into the next century," argued a disappointed Sen. Timothy Wirth, D-Colo.

"If you're going to wait that long, your program's not going to have any impact," added Sen. Bennett Johnston, D-La., who had insisted that any rulemaking begin in 1993 and be completed within two years.

An irritated Johnston said the dispute could cause negotiators to scrap the alternative-fuel program altogether and he accused Dingell of speaking only for the auto industry: "You're saying Detroit doesn't want this program and we're not going to have it."

As negotiators prepared to resume talks on today, Dingell reportedly was sticking to his position.

But the rift over alternative-fuel vehicles isn't the only unresolved issue that threatens the bill, which has been before Congress for nearly two years.

The negotiators remain at odds over offshore oil drilling with the House seeking broad prohibitions along virtually all the country's coastline except Louisiana and Texas and calling for the government to buy back leases off Florida, North Carolina and parts of Alaska. Senators oppose the buyback and say the drilling ban is too broad.

Johnston and other senators also have refused to go along with the House on curbing states from regulating natural gas production. The issue, known as "pro-rationing," has pitted the Northeast consuming states against the natural gas-producing states such as Texas and Oklahoma.

The dispute threatens the bill's entire natural gas program, including efforts to make it easier to build pipelines and expand markets for natural gas.

Mail-in registrations also must be postmarked by Oct. 5, no exceptions, Ms. Calvert said.

"And I don't care if they swear up and down it's been there (at the post office) two weeks," she said.

Want-to-be voters also can get out and register in person this weekend.

"There will be volunteer deputy voter registrars in various parts of town this weekend," Ms. Calvert said.

One such location will be at a voting booth on Saturday and Sunday at Midland Park Mall during regular hours.

"So if they got to wait until the last dog dies, they can go to the mall where the Jaycees will register them," Ms. Calvert said.

27-36 interval of the test range in English. About 12 percent of the students at LHS and 11 percent at MHS scored in the 27-36 interval in math.

"We had six students score at the 99th percentile which is about a 32-35, and six scored at the 97th percentile," Cummins said.

About 226 MISD students — the majority were seniors and some were juniors — participated in taking the ACT in the 1991-'92 school year.

MISD Superintendent Joseph Baressi Jr., in a Monday afternoon meeting of Partners in Education, said that MISD's scores take on greater significance considering "65 percent of MISD students take the SAT (Scholastic Aptitude Test) or the ACT, compared to about 40 percent statewide. The larger the sample taking the test, usually, the lower the score."

Although some parents question applauding a score little better than average, Cummins said, "The national average is a very good strong score to use. When students as a group score above the national average it shows (academic) strength."

Cummins said nearly 35 percent of MISD high school students taking the SAT last year scored above 1,000.

"The ACT and SAT are really college entrance exams rather than high school program evaluations," he said. "Lots of students do not score at the national average. So, it is significant when our students score above it."

The total number of seniors eligible to take the ACT last year was 889. Most students chose to take the SAT, Cummins said. A total of 446 seniors took the SAT last year.

According to information from the school district, the predominant admissions instrument in Texas is the SAT. The ACT program is the predominant admissions test in 28 states, mainly in the West and Midwest.

want to recruit to compete in the world economy," wrote the editors of EM in the recent September/October issue of the magazine.

Each district was measured along eight education quality indicators and compared against a statistical composite of U.S. school districts created from a nationwide random sample.

The ranking is intended to help corporate executives who make plant expansion and corporate headquarter site-selection decisions for their companies.

The quality of public schools is the most important factor in site-selection decisions, according to Robert Ady, president of PHH Fantus of Chicago, the world's largest site-selection consulting firm.

A panel of 11 education and corporate site-selection and human resources experts determined the weight of each quality factor in computing the EQ.

The indicators the districts were measured on follow:

- High School Graduation Rate — The panel of experts ranked this indicator as the most important. The graduation rate was figured using the percentage of enrolled ninth-graders who graduate from high school four years later. The panel notes that the rate does not take into account students not finishing school because they move out of the district.
- Average ACT and SAT Scores — Though the ACT (American College Testing) programs and SAT (Scholastic Aptitude Test) are aptitude tests and not achievement tests, they still are the only nationally standardized test scores available.
- Average Classroom Teacher Salary — A district is more likely to attract higher quality teachers if it pays higher salary. An average teacher salary can also reflect the district's commitment to retaining teachers with raises.
- Amount of Money Spent Per Pupil on Instruction Only — This included money spent on textbooks, instructional aids and teacher salaries.
- Student-to-teacher ratio in the classroom.
- Student-to-counselor ratio.
- Percentage of area residents who are high school graduates.
- Percentage of area residents who are college graduates.

MAGAZINE: The New Yorker editor explains changes

magazine's name lifts subtly off the page.

Inside are lots of changes, as promised, but also lots of reassurances.

"People here seem to love it," Brown, 38, said at her office. "Some of the people who've been here a very long time have come in to me today and said it feels very vivid and vibrant, still The New Yorker, but with an extra vitality to it."

A limping Vanity Fair turned glitzy under Brown's eight-year tenure. When owner S.I. Newhouse pegged her to take over The New Yorker, some people reacted as if Madonna had been named director of the Metropolitan Opera.

But a fair number of the 67-year-old weekly's 630,000 readers, along with advertisers, felt it needed shaking up.

Brown's maiden effort, dated Oct. 5, is 178 pages, one of the biggest issues of recent times, and is printed on slick paper 25 percent heavier than its predecessors.

Her inaugural brought in 85 pages of ads. The weekly had been losing money with an average of 35 ad pages under the previous editor, Robert Gottlieb.

Overall, the design has been made lighter on readers' eyes. Some of the drawings are in color; a black-and-white photo or two also appears.

Haughty old Eustace Tilley, with monocle aimed at butterfly, is still atop the table of contents. But that page has now been revamped to offer solid clues of what articles are about.

A short story by John Updike, a piece of baseball commentary by Roger Angell and Andy Logan writing about city politics are all comfortably familiar.

So, too, the lineup of cartoonists. But wait, what's Jules Feiffer, a regular contributor to the weekly newspaper Village Voice, doing here. His take on Woody-Mia, feminism and men who don't "get it" runs for two pages, in color.

Brown said it was an impromptu offering from Feiffer and she hopes he and other cartoonists respond frequently to her having declared space open in the magazine.

She also said she hoped for more letters.

The magazine finally has a "Mailbox." The first letter is from a New York Fire Department doctor, taking issue with a recent cover that suggests firefighters still roar to the rescue of treed cats.

Now comes a TV critic, James Wolcott, with reviews of the new season's shows. Television was a subject for incidental pieces before. Some readers felt a TV column was overdue.

Another first-time feature is a boxed "Fifty Years Ago in The New Yorker," containing four lines of verse by Ogden Nash. It will appear regularly. "It would be a shame not to expose readers to the things that they've missed," Brown said.

The byline — that assertive listing of an author's name atop stories — has arrived, replacing the more understated signature at the bottom of a piece.

News breaks, the little end-of-column fillers that skewered howlers, pomposities and banalities printed elsewhere, continue to atrophy. There's only one in this issue.

Contrary to some published reports, Brown said she has not blackballed long pieces, the 20,000-worders that often went unread.

"There will always be a mix of short and long," she said, pointing to the centerpiece of her first issue, Mark Singer's 22,000-word account of what befell a marijuana dealer who claims young Dan Quayle was his regular customer.

Brown said she had a number of 20,000-word pieces in the works, but they "have to be earned . . . to have a compelling narrative to tell."

In general, the first issue has made Brown "proud and happy," but without much time for reflection.

Pakistani plane crashes with 167 aboard; no sign of survivors

KATMANDU, Nepal (AP) — A Pakistani jet filled with Europeans — including mountain climbers and missionaries — plowed into a pine-covered hillside Monday, and rescuers searching the burning wreckage reported no survivors among the 167 aboard.

Officials said one American also was on board the Pakistani International Airlines Airbus A300 when it crashed on a landing approach, the second air disaster near the capital in as many months.

The pilot had given no indication anything was wrong before contact was lost with the plane, and the weather was normal, officials said.

Airline sources in Pakistan said the plane may have been flying too low as it approached this city ringed by Himalayan mountains thousands of feet high. The sources, speaking on condition of anonymity, said the plane was flying at 7,500 feet when it should have been at 9,000.

The airline has had a poor safety and service record in recent years.

A Thai Airbus crashed into a snowy peak near the capital in July, killing all 113 people aboard.

The Pakistani jet, on a flight from Karachi, Pakistan, crashed 14 miles south of Katmandu's airport, said Nagendra Prasad Ghimire, deputy chief of Katmandu airport.

Except for a few chunks of scattered wreckage, the fuselage was mainly in one piece, according to Associated Press reporter Binod Joshi, who drove to the site. The plane's tail was in the air and its nose buried in the ground.

Rescue crews that reached the site earlier by helicopter said the plane was on fire. They found no evidence of survivors, Ghimire said.

Kedar Prasad Bagjai, a villager whose home is a 30-minute walk from the site, said he heard a loud noise followed by explosions that lasted 15 minutes. He and other villagers said they later saw "many bodies" at the crash site.

They said there were scattered clouds but no rain at the time of the crash.

The state-owned Nepal Radio announced that bodies of victims would be handed over to relatives at Katmandu airport today.

The accident occurred at the start of Nepal's tourist season, when dozens of mountain climbing teams fly into this picturesque land to climb the world's highest peaks. Airline officials said at least 89 of the 155 passengers were Europeans and that the jet had a crew of 12.

Thirty-five Britons, including a missionary family with three children, were among the passengers, the Pakistani airline reported in London. Most of the other Britons were headed for climbing vacations in the Himalayas, the airline said.

The missionaries were identified by the college where they trained as Andrew Wilkins, 38, and his pregnant wife, Helen, 36. They were traveling with their children, Hannah, 10, Naomi, 8, and Simeon, 6, according to All Nations Christian College in Ware, England.

Airline officials in Karachi said the passengers also included 12 Dutch citizens, 29 Spaniards, 10 Italians, two Swiss, one German, 10 Nepalese, two Bangladeshis, and 12 Pakistanis.

A Thai Airways jetliner, an Airbus A310-300, crashed into an 11,500-foot mountain north of the airport July 31 after it overshot the runway on a landing approach. Eleven Americans were among the 113 killed then.

The cause of that crash is still being investigated, but the manufacturer said evidence pointed to pilot error.

Pakistan International, Pakistan's domestic and international carrier, has had a poor safety and service record since the end of military rule in the country in 1988. There are frequent press reports of near misses and tires exploding.

Italian-U.S. sting hits Mafia-Colombian link

ROME (AP) — Two alleged drug kingpins arrested as they left an ice cream parlor in the heart of Rome were among the first nabbed in a worldwide dragnet that dealt a heavy blow to a Mafia-Colombian connection, authorities said Monday.

"Operation Green Ice" used a sting to help catch some 200 people over the weekend in the United States, Italy and at least five other countries, officials said. Tens of millions of dollars in cocaine, cash, jewels, securities and property were seized.

The case showed how strong the links have grown between Colombian and Italian gangsters, an alliance that top Mafia investigator Giovanni Falcone was probing before he was murdered in May.

Achille Serra, a top police official, said the ring sent cocaine from Colombia through the United States and Spain for distribution in Italy and other European countries.

Colombians looking for a shipping network built their partnership with the Mafia to expand their European sales, said U.S. officials in Washington.

"The Colombians have chosen Italy as their warehouse to store cocaine for distribution throughout Europe," said Greg Passic, chief financial investigator of the Drug Enforcement Administration.

"That makes sense," he added. "Italy is the biggest cocaine customer" in Europe.

Authorities have suspected for months that the Colombians, lacking their own distribution network in Europe, are joining with Italian organized crime leaders, particularly in Sicily. The goal is to expand beyond the United States, where the cocaine market appears to be saturated.

The sting operation that led to the bust was based at a bogus company in southern California that laundered cartel money, officials said.

Suspected drug smugglers from Colombia, Italy, England, Spain, the British Cayman Islands, Costa Rica, Canada and the United States used the firm to launder about $53 million in drug assets, a U.S. DEA agent said.

DEA agents and the U.S. Customs Service set up The American Ventures Associates in the swanky beach town of La Jolla in September 1989, agent Julius C. Beretta told a San Diego news conference.

George Terwilliger, a deputy U.S. attorney general, called the case "truly a crippling blow to the Colombian cartel." He said it would be naive to think the operation would stop the flow of cocaine in the United States.

But, he said, "Our strategy is working."

While officials in Rome said 201 people were nabbed, U.S. officials held a news conference in Arlington, Va., and put the number of arrests at 153. The discrepancy could not immediately be reconciled.

Authorities in Rome reported 34 arrests in Italy but gave no breakdown of the others. U.S. agents said arrests were made in Los Angeles, San Diego, New York, Chicago, Houston and the Miami-Fort Lauderdale area.

Robert Bonner, head of the DEA, said seven of those arrested handled "most of the key financial operations" for the Cali cocaine cartel in Colombia.

Authorities said the operation struck a deep blow to organized crime groups in Sicily, Naples and Calabria, which have a stranglehold on southern Italy.

"Never has there been a strike of such importance against the Mafia, Camorra and 'ndrangheta," national police Chief Vincenzo Parisi said, referring to the mobs in those areas.

Parisi said the operation began Friday with the arrest in Rome of Colombians Jose Duran, whom he described as a Colombian drug cartel boss, and Pedro Villaquiran, a reputed leading cocaine distributor in Europe and Duran's aide.

Authorities were led to them when police trailed a Dutch woman to an ice cream parlor in Rome's famous Piazza Navona, the news agency AGI said.

Officers watched as she sat at a table. Duran, reportedly known as "the Pope," and Villaquiran joined her. As they left the bar and walked a few steps past the fountain in the square, police quietly arrested the three.

Carlos Rodrigo Polania-Camargo, identified as the head of the foreign office of the Colombian National Bank, was arrested Friday in San Diego, officials said. Polania-Camargo reportedly has represented his country on international anti-drug commissions.

Reports show Iraq, U.N. to resume Vienna oil talks

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — Iraq is willing to resume talks on a U.N.-monitored oil sale "without preconditions" as a way of heading off a Security Council attempt to seize Iraqi assets, documents obtained Monday say.

But Baghdad hopes to increase the amount of the proposed sale from $1.6 billion to $4 billion. It seems doubtful the Security Council would approve.

Talks will begin today between Foreign Minister Mohammed al-Sahaf of Iraq and the United Nations' humanitarian affairs undersecretary, Jan Eliasson of Sweden, Iraqi officials say.

An outline of al-Sahaf's opening proposition, obtained by The Associated Press, notes that the Security Council has begun discussing a draft resolution that would permit seizure of Iraqi oil-related accounts.

It would be the first time the United Nations seized a nation's assets.

The funds, estimated at up to $1 billion, would be used for humanitarian aid for Iraq, Gulf War reparations, U.N. programs in Iraq such as demarcating the border with Kuwait, and destroying Iraq's terror weapons.

The Security Council turned to the asset-seizure program after a year had elapsed since it authorized a $1.6 billion, one-time sale of Iraqi oil under strict U.N. oversight to pay for the programs.

Iraq never proceeded with the oil sale, calling it an intolerable intrusion on Iraq's sovereignty.

But with the Security Council ready to vote on adopting the assets-seizure resolution, al-Sahaf plans to revive the oil talks.

His memorandum says, "Iraq is ready to resume the talks without preconditions." It comments that if the talks are resumed, "the draft resolution (on assets seizure) is unnecessary."

But Iraq proposes new sale terms, which would require Security Council approval.

According to the memo, two points must be worked out in the Vienna talks.

First, Baghdad says the United Nations initially was willing to allow export of Iraqi oil through Iraq's oil outlets, then changed its position to confine the export through Turkey only.

Second, the United Nations wants its staff to distribute relief goods in Iraq.

South African government releases prisoners

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — The government began releasing scores of political prisoners and extremists Monday, including a notorious white supremacist who gunned down seven blacks in a sidewalk shooting spree.

The first prisoners were released overnight: Seven African National Congress members walked out of East London prison on the southeast coast to the cheers of supporters. The ANC said up to 150 activists would be released Monday, with some 300 prisoners to be released by Nov. 15.

"I'm a well-disciplined ANC member who fought the apartheid regime," said Mthelelili Mncube, a member of the opposition group's military wing who had been sentenced to death for 11 killings.

"I have no regrets for what I did in good faith," he said after walking out of Pretoria Central Prison.

Government leaders, meanwhile, were trying to mend ties with the country's second most powerful black leader, Mangosuthu Buthelezi. The head of the Zulu-dominated Inkatha Freedom Party pulled out of political negotiations to protest a weekend reconciliation meeting between President F.W. de Klerk and ANC chief Nelson Mandela.

Buthelezi's boycott threatened to deepen the political crisis and unleash new violence. De Klerk and Mandela are struggling to revive multiparty negotiations on ending apartheid and stem violence that threatens South Africa's political and economic stability.

Much of the violence involves ANC and Inkatha supporters engaged in a bloody power struggle.

Monday's releases included two men sentenced to death for murder. Barend Strydom, of the extreme right-wing White Wolves, went on a shooting spree in downtown Pretoria in 1988, killing six blacks and an Indian. He was undergoing medical tests before being released Monday.

Also released was ANC activist Robert McBride, who parked a car bomb at a popular Durban bar in 1986, killing three white women and injuring 69 people. Both men were sentenced to death, but the sentences were later changed to life imprisonment.

McBride, who was greeted by about 100 cheering ANC supporters as he left prison, was attacked and wounded by white prisoners Sunday in an apparent assassination attempt, police said. The ANC claims a prison warder was involved in the attack on McBride, who was wounded with a pair of scissors.

"We will protect you," ANC supporters chanted as McBride emerged from Westville Prison in Durban.

De Klerk and Mandela restored relations between the government and the ANC at a summit Saturday after a three-month deadlock, and said they were making progress toward resuming full-scale negotiations on power-sharing.

The two sides remain divided on key issues such as an amnesty for security forces members and the future of the country's nominally independent black homelands.

As part of Saturday's agreement, the white minority government is to free militants convicted of crimes committed for political reasons before October 1990. Hundreds of political prisoners have been released under earlier agreements during the past two years.

The government until recently opposed the new releases, saying the militants did not qualify as political prisoners because they committed violent crimes.

Strydom was to be released because he claimed he killed for political reasons — out of opposition to the prospect of black rule in South Africa. Some extreme right-wing groups hailed him as a hero.

The government, which generally has taken a tough stance against right-wing violence, had said it opposed releasing Strydom. But the white authorities ultimately decided to wipe the slate clean and free virtually all prisoners with links to political groups.

Finance ministers reject 'two-speed Europe,' push treaty

BRUSSELS, Belgium (AP) — Despite this month's upheaval in their monetary system, European Community finance ministers on Monday proposed no changes and pledged to forge ahead with a treaty that would unify their currencies by 1999.

There has been speculation that Germany and France might try to form an economic union with Belgium, Luxembourg and the Netherlands, leaving the others in the slow lane of a "two-speed Europe."

But in a final statement, the ministers of the 12-nation EC said, "Everybody present emphasized their opposition to the concept of a two-speed Europe."

They said approval of the Maastricht treaty, a blueprint for closer political unity and a single currency by 1999, remained urgent. If successful, the plan could transform the EC into a world superpower.

"The first priority is to continue the ratification process without any change of text," Belgian Finance Minister Philippe Maystadt told reporters.

French voters narrowly approved the treaty last week. Only three other nations — Greece, Ireland and Luxembourg — have ratified the accord, negotiated last December by EC leaders in the Dutch town of Maastricht.

One nation, Denmark, has rejected the agreement but plans another referendum next year. The treaty must be ratified by all EC nations before it could take effect.

The ministers said they favored a period of "calm and reflection" before trying to revamp the battered European Monetary System.

The monetary system will be discussed at a special summit of EC leaders called by Britain, current EC president, on Oct. 16 in Birmingham, England.

The British pound and the Italian lira earlier this month were knocked out of the monetary system, which limits fluctuations in currencies. The system's exchange rate mechanism is dominated by the strong German mark.

Opening lead: Four of ♡

When you have nothing else to guide you, all finesses are equal—any given finesse has a 50 percent chance of success. However, that does not mean that it makes no difference which finesse you take when a choice is available.

North's double was slightly flawed, but in the balancing seat, rarely will you hold a perfect hand and no better bid was available. With 13 high-card points and ten-aces behind the opening bidder, South's jump to three no trump was a reasonable shot.

West led a low heart and declarer captured East's technically correct play of the ten with the queen. Since East was marked with the ace of diamonds, declarer needed a winning finesse in either minor suit to bring home nine tricks. It was just possible for West to have either the queen of diamonds or king of clubs. Put yourself in the declarer's chair and decide which is correct to try.

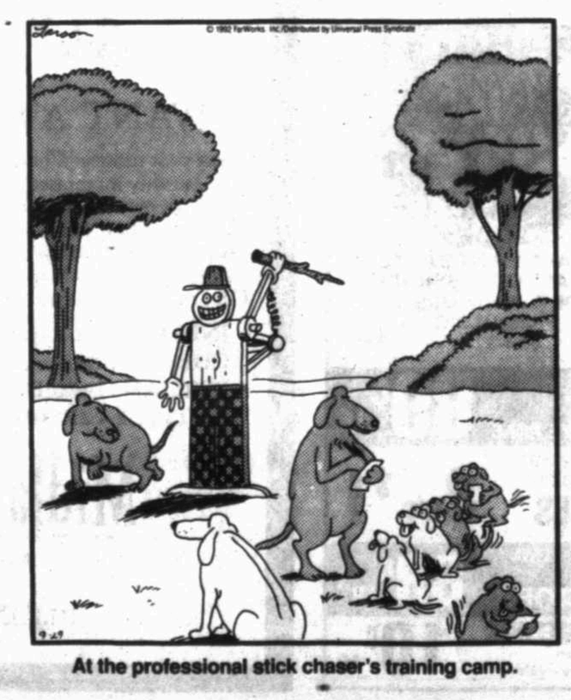

When this hand was played, South elected to finesse West for the queen of diamonds first. When that succeeded, declarer had nine tricks—three spades, two hearts, three diamonds and the ace of clubs. Just lucky or well reasoned?

Suppose declarer ran the jack of clubs at trick two and it lost. East would force out declarer's remaining heart stopper, and the defense would come to three heart tricks and one in each minor before declarer could take advantage of a favorable lie in diamonds. But if the diamond finesse fails, a successful club finesse brings in four tricks in that suit and nine tricks in total. Taking the diamond finesse first gives declarer two bites at the cherry.

Brandon Tartikoff recalls favorite pitches in book

NEW YORK — "Noah's Ark: the Miniseries" and Marlon Brando's Tahitian home movies were among Brandon Tartikoff's favorite pitches when he was chief of NBC Entertainment.

Tartikoff

Tartikoff says in his new autobiography, due out next month, that he heard more than 30,000 pitches in 15 years of television programming.

When he told a producer offering the Noah miniseries he didn't like the idea, the producer responded: "'Brandon, baby, you're not getting it. This is 'Roots' with animals!"

Excerpts of Tartikoff's "The Last Great Ride," co-written by Charles Leerhsen, a senior editor for People magazine, appear in the Oct. 5 People.

Tartikoff, 43, was president of NBC Entertainment from 1980 to 1991 and is now chairman of Paramount Studios.

His all-time favorite TV pitch was by Brando, who paid a visit to Tartikoff's office one day in 1986.

He said Brando began, "It's my home movies of Tahiti, of myself in the water, over a number of years, with all these beautiful native women. ... You put this thing on in February, and it's 15 below with the wind-chill factor, how can the guy in Pittsburgh not watch naked Tahitian women in the water with Marlon Brando."

He said Brando soon moved on to other topics.

LOS ANGELES — Singer Bobby Brown said he and his wife, Whitney Houston, don't get ruffled by rumors about their marriage.

"Whitney and I just try to maintain our relationship as it is and not let the tabloids run our lives," he said. "What they say means nothing to the love that we feel for each other. Basically, we just brush it off."

Some have said the true motive behind the union between Brown, 23, and Houston, 29, might have been publicity.

Brown credits Houston with giving him the freedom to be himself.

"She's very secure and she knows how much I do love her," he said. "It makes me feel better to know I have a strong woman beside me."

Brown's hip-hop "Don't Be Cruel" album has topped the 8 million mark worldwide.

The deal is done. Marky Mark, the hip-hop performer and teen-age idol, will be seen on bus-shelter posters in his Calvins — underwear, that is, and in some cases, jeans that slip insouciantly below the underwear.

"It all started with him," said Calvin Klein, whose label the singer flaunts on stage. "He has been wearing the underwear and jeans in his concerts, and when I saw him on the cover of Rolling Stone in our underwear, I decided to do a deal."

Some of the photos by Herb Ritts show him alone. In some, he poses suggestively with Kate Moss, a model who, like Marky, is bare chested. The print and television versions of the ads will start appearing in November.

The singer was granted the right of approval over the pictures. "He is very particular about his image, so as part of the arrangement, we gave him that right," Klein said.

Among those that passed muster was one showing him in mid-thigh briefs, his hand on his crotch. Asked about it, Klein said: "That is something he does in concerts all the time. This is him."

NEW YORK — Country hunk Billy Ray Cyrus says he was a geek growing up in Kentucky.

Cyrus

"My ears stuck out, my eyes were too big, and my hair was always in a butch cut," he told People magazine.

"In first grade, a bunch of eighth-graders made a circle around me and were pulling their ears out, pointing at me and laughing. That's when I started praying every night: 'Dear God, I know I'm ugly but when I grow up, just make people think I'm funny.'"

Cyrus, 31, hit it big with the tune "Achy Breaky Heart."

RAPID CITY, S.D. — Randy Travis will play a cowboy movie star in a one-hour television special for The Nashville Network.

"This definitely is stretching out and trying to do something different," the country singer said last week.

"I think everybody wants to venture into other directions and just see what else they can do," he added.

Travis started filming in February near his vacation home in Hawaii. Production moved to New Mexico and Colorado in July and Travis was wrapping up in South Dakota last week on a buffalo ranch.

He spent part of the time at Rapid City Regional Hospital with the flu, but he was back in action Wednesday.

The cast includes Lou Diamond Phillips, Burt Reynolds and veteran cowboy actor Dale Robertson. The show is tentatively scheduled for broadcast in January on the cable channel.

Fair's hall of honor glorifies state heroes

Most Texans would probably think that Davy Crockett, Sam Houston and William B. Travis are pretty good company for anyone to be associated with. So when the State Fair of Texas announced it was adding more honorees to the new Heritage Hall of Honor, we were interested to see who would be included with that stellar group of individuals already in the hall.

Now the list of people to be added to the Hall of Honor is public and, frankly, it is a roll of individuals who helped carve Texas out of the wilderness and mold it into a progressive state. Some of the new honorees are people steeped in the history of Texas — like pioneer cattleman and trail drover Charles Goodnight, King Ranch owner and naturalist Robert J. Kleberg Jr., rancher and historical preservationist Watkins "Watt" Matthews, former Gov. Dolph Briscoe, and South Texas citrus grower and land developer Lloyd Bentsen Sr., father of U.S. Sen. Lloyd Bentsen Jr.

Others are less widely known, but still played a significant role in the state's first 150 years.

Significantly, a majority of the honorees are or were involved in ranching — Goodnight, Kleberg, Matthews, Daniel and W.T. "Tom" Waggoner, Anne Burnett Tandy, and Mary Nan West. That fact serves as an unavoidable reminder of the state's roots and speaks loudly of our heritage.

The others to be honored — rural electrification leader John W. Carpenter Sr. and scientific and educational pioneer Dr. Edward B. Evans Sr. — indicate the wide diversity to be found in Texas society.

The State Fair's Heritage Hall of Honor should reflect the width and breadth of the people who have had a significant impact on the state. The list of inductees to the hall appears to do exactly that, while keeping the Eyes of Texas fixed firmly on the state's proud heritage.

Vietnam hawks, doves face off again

Vietnam hawks and doves found a new battleground last week — Senate hearings on prisoners of war and missing in action. Once again, they left each other and their country bloodied. One more time, they blinded the nation to fundamental truths about its long nightmare.

Gelb

Hawks like Henry Kissinger kept pushing the deception that South Vietnam alone could have held off the communists at war's end had not doves denied U.S. military help. The Kissingers continued to run from the central truth that can still liberate them and the nation from Vietnam's shadow: South Vietnam lost the war, not America and not American doves. It was always Saigon's war to win or lose, though the U.S. lost its wealth, its soul and hundreds of thousands killed and wounded in giving Saigon a chance.

Doves like Sen. John Kerry again ignored the chance to bring home this truth. Their interest seemed limited to finding a new weapon against hawks, who they believe dragged the U.S. into the war and then unpardonably prolonged it. Thus the Kerrys, too, fled from a liberating truth: Liberals and conservatives alike promoted and supported the U.S. commitment to "save Vietnam from communism" until the late 60s. Whoever lied about whatever, that collective responsibility remains.

All such thoughts were far from everyone's mind when Kerry, a war hero, decided to look at the POW-MIA issue. His initial idea was to put that wrenching matter behind the nation and get on with the long process of normalizing relations with Vietnam.

Somewhere along the way, he found strong suggestions that Hanoi did indeed hold back servicemen, and that Richard Nixon knew this in 1973 and did nothing to free them — supposedly to rush through the politically popular withdrawal of all U.S. forces in a vain effort to salvage his presidency from the Watergate scandal.

Last week's evidence and testimony were often imprecise. News stories compounded the confusion.

These seem to be the facts: Hanoi did return all confirmed POWs in 1973. But there was evidence then that a number of servicemen listed as MIAs might have been alive, mainly in Laos. President Nixon knew this and told Americans about it in March 1973. But neither he nor Kissinger pressed the issue further with the public, despite promptings by some aides.

When Kerry hit Kissinger with the charge that he had not done all he could to free servicemen knowingly left behind by the U.S., the former secretary of state struck back. People who opposed further U.S. military action at the time, he said, "cannot now say you didn't get what you only could have gotten by continuing military operations."

The nerve touched, out came the venom from Kissinger, Gen. Alexander Haig and others: The U.S. could have threatened Hanoi over the MIAs save for the doves' opposition. Moreover, they argued, South Vietnam could have been saved if doves had not cut off military action and aid, thus stabbing the Vietnamization policy in the back.

This was the 1969 policy of withdrawing U.S. forces and turning the war over to the South Vietnamese. But Vietnamization never could have worked, as David Halberstam and Stanley Karnow, the great historians of the war, never tire of explaining.

How could Saigon, corrupt and lacking the mantle of nationalism, stand up to Hanoi, which, rightly or wrongly, held that mantle? How could South Vietnamese forces defeat Hanoi when 550,000 U.S. fighters backed by the heaviest bombing in history could not?

Colonial-style exploitation finds new cover

The military-industrial-intelligence complex needs a new enemy and it looks like they are appointing Islamic fundamentalists in particular and Third World nations in general.

One example is a new book, "The Fourth World War," by Count de Marenches and David A. Andelman (William Morrow & Co.). Count de Marenches used to be head of French intelligence. Andelman is a journalist.

It's an interesting book, in part because Count de Marenches is so arrogant, egotistical and patronizing, as he explains to us — with patience appropriate when talking to hayseed Americans — just how the world works and just what we have to do to survive in it. Without giving away anything, what we have to do, of course, is accept the wise author's advice.

The first thing to do is recognize that career intelligence heads are by vocational conditioning, lying, duplicitous, cynical and secretive. When they write books, it is always with a purpose. Any book or article originating directly or indirectly with a professional intelligence person should always be read with alertness for a hidden agenda.

The second point to keep in mind is that the vast national security complex created by the Cold War has a vested interest in a new war with a new enemy. Otherwise, like aerospace engineers, they will find themselves out of a job. Unlike honest aerospace engineers, however, the national security elite are amoral enough to fabricate an enemy.

Furthermore, in the 20th century there has developed an unbroken seam between intelligence, the inner core of governments, and the ruling cliques of each nation's financial establishment. There is no such thing as a non-establishment head of intelligence, though from time to time, professional bureaucrats are given the administrative and operational tasks.

There's no question that in the future there will be terrorist incidents. Terrorism, far from being a new phenomenon, is the only way the weak can strike at the strong. On the American frontier, the Indian raid was called terrorism.

There's no question that there are already political and economic conflicts between industrialized nations and poorer nations. There's no question that population growth alone will make all the world's problems worse.

But a declaration of war is pure, self-serving poppycock. It is an invitation to continue colonial-style exploitation under a new cover. It is a cynical, cold-blooded decision to put financial gain ahead of peace and cooperation in the world of the future. It is a vicious decision to substitute brute force and propaganda for honest negotiation.

Count de Marenches neglects to mention that people in some of these countries have legitimate reasons for their hostility. The hostility of Iran toward the U.S., for example, has nothing whatsoever to do with religion — theirs or ours. It has to do with such secular matters as our intelligence agencies having overthrown their government, imposed on them a dictatorship, trained and equipped their secret police, and all for the purpose of exploiting Iran's oil resources.

LEWIS GRIZZARD

There's time for us to become truly equal

A male friend showed me a group of photographs of women in a recent issue of U.S.A. Today.

Grizzard

"Women are coming after us," he said. "These are photographs of all the women running for the Senate."

There was a pack of them to be sure. But read my words:

I have nothing against women running for the Senate or being elected to the Senate. I'd even take Murphy Brown over Ted Kennedy.

I also have nothing against gains women have made in the business world, nor the fact they are achieving equal pay status with men in the work place.

But let us look into the future here. We could have a woman president, an all-woman Congress, and women could take complete charge of the business world, but there would remain one ultimate inequity between men and women.

They have the babies, we don't.

They're the ones who have to go through morning sickness, carry around all that extra weight for nine months and endure the pain of childbirth, while all their husbands (providing they have husbands in this day and time) have to do is pace around in the wiiting room.

I'm not saying all women resent this inequity, but perhaps the most radical and militant portion of the women's movement are.

I don't think these women will ever rest and consider the sexes equal until men have to start having babies, too.

This could never happen, you say? Did you read the other day the report that through genetic engineering it might be possible for people to live 400 years.

If scientists and researchers can figure out a way to add 325 years to the average life span, you don't think they'll eventually figure out a way for men to have babies?

Certainly they will, and I think they should begin working immediately on such a project. It would solve a lot of modern day problems.

"Honey," a wife could say, "I've really got a big project going on down at the firm. Why don't you have our next baby?"

"But, Sweetheart," the husband might reply, "I've got the member-guest golf tournament coming up at the club. If I were pregnant the extra weight would really louse up my swing."

"Darling, I had our last baby. It's your turn. That's only fair."

Fair. That's the key word here. How can men and women ever be completely equal and how can the reproduction process be totally fair until both sexes are able to give birth?

I'm no scientist, so I don't have all the details worked out here, and there would be certain anatomical matters to be considered.

But we've sent a man to the moon, haven't we? And we're soon going to be able to live 400 years.

Figuring a way for men to have babies, too, might be nothing compared to all the other things we've accomplished. Would I have a baby if science ever comes up with a way to make that possible?

Sure I would. Equal is equal. And fair is fair, and I like to see an end to the war between the sexes.

But I'd wait a while, I think. Like at least until I was 225. I just don't think it's a good idea for kids, male or female, to have babies.

And that would also give me 180 years to find a wife (I'm old-fashioned) with whom I can get along.

Even for me, that should be plenty of time.

Shopping isn't fun anymore

For several years, it was common practice for the Midland area grocery stores to double manufacturers' coupons. For example, you would get 70 cents back for a 35-cent coupon. My wife is a very diligent "coupon clipper" and was able to save us quite a bit of money in this manner.

Recently all Midland grocery stores (except one chain) discontinued their double coupon policy. Discussions with store managers led us to believe that the stores would lower prices such that the store price with a standard coupon would be about the same as the old price with the coupon doubled. This was true for a short period of time, but now it is not the case, all the stores have raised their prices. We were told that prices would be lowered to compete with the warehouse stores. This is not true, either. I want to let all Midland-area grocery store managers know that you have taken the fun out of grocery shopping. My wife would look over each ad and work with her coupons so that our final grocery bill would be 10-15 percent less than when full retail price. For her, it was a great challenge. The elimination of double coupons killed the challenge of saving money in this manner.

I have heard other shoppers complain that grocery shopping is no fun. The final line is that after looking at all the grocery prices and our budget, we will now have to increase the monthly grocery budget for my family by 15 percent. Also with only three major chains in town, competition has little effect on prices. My wife states that certain items that you could find at a sale price have not been at a sale price for two months or longer. We are not extravagant eaters and very frugal in our grocery shopping. It is sad that I will have to sacrifice another part of my family budget (newspaper subscription, cable TV, savings) just because there is no competition between Midland grocery stores for lower prices.

If it were feasible we would boycott all Midland area grocery stores and shop in other towns, unfortunately prices in Lubbock and Odessa are about the same as in Midland. One final note — I have learned that double coupon policies are still available in Amarillo and Hobbs, N.M.

MC sign is a disappointment

The sign located at the new north entrance to Midland College is a degradation to the esthetic quality of the campus-built environment. The installation of a major eye-catching appeal with a commercial soft drink advertisement on it is not suitable for a place of education.

Midland College campus has been a source of pride to Midlanders for a number of years. I realize signs of this type are expensive and I am sure the soft drink company paid for part or all of the cost, but surely the college district is not in such dire straits that it must commercialize. It would have been better to have no sign at all than one like this. Very bad taste. We are all the poorer.

Reader likes positive letter

Thank you very much for running the Leonard A. Bourgeois family letter from Swansea, Mass., in the Thursday, Sept. 17, newspaper.

Most letters to the editor are negative, but this letter was very positive for a change.

All the softball teams that played in Midland during the ASA National Tournaments cannot say enough about the friendly city that we live in. Many of the players said that they would like to move to Midland someday. It made us very proud to call Midland our home.

Cable TV industry 'owns' Bush, Gore charges

MORGANTON, N.C. (AP) — Al Gore said Monday that President Bush was owned "lock, stock and barrel" by the cable TV industry as the Democrats sought to expand a consumer issue into a political one as well.

The vice presidential nominee said that if Bush vetoes legislation to increase local government oversight of cable television, as the president has promised, "the American people just may veto your decision for another four years."

Gore, a co-sponsor of the legislation, chose the small town of Morganton as the site for his remarks because the community won a contentious legal battle in which Telecommunications Inc., the nation's largest cable operator, lost its local franchise and the city began setting up its own cable system.

TCI will continue operating in Morganton until the city system is running. A TCI spokesman said Morganton city officials sought to force the cable operator out because city officials saw a chance for a new source of revenue.

"They didn't do it because of bad service; they didn't do it because of high rates," said David Krone. He said TCI charged $7.50 a month for basic service in 1985. The rate is $16 now.

The Senate passed the cable bill last week 74-25 and the House earlier approved it 280-128. Both votes were large enough to override a veto. The president has until the end of this week to veto the legislation.

The measure would require the Federal Communications Commission to determine reasonable rates for basic cable service and prices for equipment — such as remote control boxes — needed for cable service.

Sponsors say the legislation would enhance competition in local communities between existing cable companies and others capable of providing expanded television programming.

Bush has said the bill would "hurt Americans by imposing a wide array of costly, burdensome and unnecessary requirements on the cable industry and the government agencies that regulate it."

Gore said the president "knows that on this issue, the big cable monopolies own him lock, stock and barrel."

"But he also knows that the American people are on the other side of the issue, so he's trying to figure out what to do," the Tennessee senator said at a town meeting. "Well, it's not that complicated Mr. President. Don't veto the cable bill."

If Bush vetoes the bill, Gore said, he "will have sided with the monopolies and against the American people and the American people just may veto your desire for another four years."

Bush campaign spokeswoman Alixe Glen maintained that Gore "represents the classic Democratic notion of regulate, regulate, regulate, regulate, which will stifle competition and jack up rates, which is just what the American people do not want."

Mary Barton and Gary Lawson, photojournalists at the Tulsa Tribune were married Sunday at the Tribune's newsroom. The paper is to cease publication Wednesday.

Soon-to-be defunct paper hosts wedding of two employees

TULSA, Okla. (AP) — Mary Barton and Gary Lawson found a way to cut through the melancholy of The Tulsa Tribune's final three days. The staff photographers got married in the newsroom.

"I've seen chimpanzees, a Dixieland band and the world's tallest man in this newsroom, so I guess this doesn't surprise me," Jenk Jones Jr., publisher of the Tribune, said Sunday night.

The marriage of the two soon-to-be-unemployed photo journalists in a soon-to-be-vacated newsroom was not all gimmicks, but it was far from the traditional wedding the bride's mother had envisioned.

The groom wore a dark suit, the bride a white dress. She carried a white Bible. His palms were sweaty minutes before the wedding began.

And pictures were taken by three Tribune photographers and a couple of freelance photographers. A lot of pictures.

Brent Smith, a Unitarian minister, conducted the ceremony between the sports department and the photo editor's desk.

"We wanted to give this to the people who have made us happy," said Lawson, 33, who joined the Tribune a year ago.

Barton, 26, cut the cake and thanked about 100 co-workers, family and friends because "we've been nothing but happy here."

They met in 1987 at a football game when she accidentally planted her monopod on his foot. Sparks flew two years later, but Barton worked at the Lawton Constitution and Lawson at the Stillwater NewsPress.

She later moved to the Edmond Evening Sun and then to the Muskogee Daily Phoenix, before being hired by the Tribune in February. Five months later, the newspaper announced it would cease publication when its joint operating agreement with the Tulsa World was dissolved.

"We played hopscotch all over the state to find a place where we could live and work together," Lawson said. "This isn't the place where we met and fell in love, but it's the place where we were happy."

"It behooves us to remember that for every one of life's endings, there is a new beginning," the minister said.

"This is the way I want to remember the Tribune, instead of the sadness that will be here over the next three days," said Windsor Ridenour, executive editor of the Tribune.

If he had one thing to complain of, it was when the wedding began — 12 minutes late. They missed a deadline.

Sears files lawsuit to obtain right to issue Visa credit cards

NEW YORK (AP) — A credit-card showdown is looming between Visa and retailing giant Sears, Roebuck & Co. that could affect the cost of buying with plastic for millions of consumers.

Sears, parent of the upstart Discover Card, is suing for the right to issue Visa cards, which have a much wider reach.

The Chicago-based retailer argues that consumers would benefit from increased competition through lower interest rates and annual fees. From Visa's point of view, the Sears move is like Burger King seeking the right to sell Big Macs.

"It would reduce competition, in our opinion, between Discover and Visa, thus giving consumers fewer choices," said David Brancoli, spokesman for San Francisco-based Visa International, parent of the Visa network of cards.

Regardless of the outcome, the case's impact on consumers isn't expected to be felt immediately. But the trial, scheduled to begin Wednesday in U.S. District Court in Salt Lake City, is being watched by industry analysts as an important test of the status quo.

The case stems from an antitrust lawsuit filed by Sears in January 1991, alleging Visa was blocking a Sears-owned savings and loan in Utah from issuing a new Visa card.

The thrift, MountainWest Financial, was set to target nearly 7 million people in its promotion of the card, which featured no annual fee. But Visa's board of directors rejected MountainWest's application to distribute it.

"Visa's sole motive is to protect its member banks from the increased competition," Sears says in court papers.

Visa says the 6,000 financial institutions that issue Visa cards already offer a wide range of options for consumers. Visa also argues it has the right to deny an application from Sears because of the Discover Card, a direct competitor to Visa.

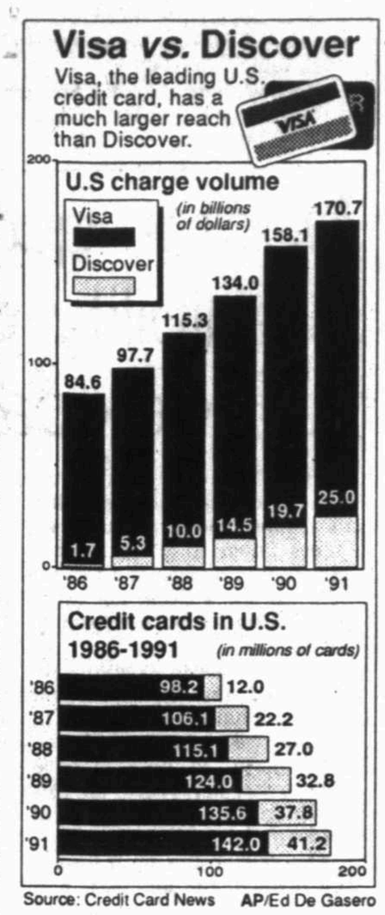

Since its introduction in 1986, Discover has issued 41 million cards and is accepted by 1.4 million merchants nationwide.

But Sears would gain a great deal from an affiliation with No. 1 Visa. Discover is strictly a domestic card, while Visa has a total 281 million cards worldwide accepted at 9.6 million locations.

Other upheavals in the credit-card industry have already given Americans the widest choice of cards in the world. It isn't uncommon for consumers to have three or four Visa cards from different issuers in their wallets.

In recent years, non-banking companies ranging from American Telephone and Telegraph to General Motors Corp. have issued Visa cards. To a degree, the cards have increased pressure on banks, the historical issuers of Visa cards, to reduce rates and fees to keep their customers.

If MountainWest were allowed to issue Visa cards, Sears would gain a competitive advantage for the Discover card by acquiring valuable information about the Visa franchise, Visa argues.

Candidate denies involvement in shooting

MAITLAND, Fla. (AP) — A legislative candidate Monday denied any involvement in the shooting of his opponent's wife, although police said they found a gun hidden in his apartment and a bullet-riddled blanket in his car.

Police said Eric Kaplan has so far declined to cooperate in their investigation into Sunday's shooting of attorney Judith Starks, wife of Republican state Rep. Robert Starks.

Kaplan's attorney issued a statement saying Kaplan denied "any involvement and knowledge concerning this matter." Kaplan is the Democratic candidate for the suburban Orlando seat.

Mrs. Starks was shot through the calf early Sunday as she sat up in bed when five shots were fired from the back yard into the couple's home. Mrs. Starks, 47, was treated at a hospital.

No arrests have been made.

"It appears that we're building a very strong case against Mr. Kaplan. We hope that the crime lab tests will solidify our case against him," Seminole County Sheriff's spokesman George Proechel said Monday.

Proechel said an eyewitness followed Kaplan's vehicle to Kaplan's apartment complex in Casselberry, where police recovered a five-shot .38-caliber revolver and a handwritten note with Starks' address on it.

In Kaplan's car, deputies found a blanket riddled with five bullet holes, apparently used to muffle the gun, authorities said.

Detectives attempted to question Kaplan late Sunday, Proechel said, "but he isn't cooperating," and has hired a lawyer.

Kaplan, 28, didn't immediately respond to messages left on his telephone answering machine.

The statement issued by attorney James Russ said Kaplan "expresses his sincere concern and sympathy for the family of Robert Starks. The reported attack upon them in their home — particularly if politically related — is indeed a tragedy for them and for the entire central Florida community."

On Monday, Mrs. Starks spoke with reporters while propped up in bed with pillows and a bandage on her left leg.

"I really believe that God protected me. It gives me even greater confidence in his protection," she said. "For that reason, I'm not fearful for whatever might happen in the future, whatever Bob decides."

Starks, 46, said he was "amazed, bewildered, flabbergasted" when police told him they suspected Kaplan. An airline pilot, Starks was away on the job at the time of the shooting.

"He's very outgoing, nice-looking, all-American guy, some guy you'd want your daughter to date," Starks said. "Maybe he didn't think he could win, and he wanted to win so bad."

FEMA head requests more power

WASHINGTON (AP) — Congress should give the Federal Emergency Management Agency the power to respond to disasters such as Hurricane Andrew even when states don't ask for assistance, the agency's director said Monday.

"Under federal law, FEMA and other federal agencies cannot 'take over' but must wait until federal help is requested by the governor," Wallace E. Stickney said in a speech to the National Press Club.

"Sometimes a state may be reluctant to acknowledge that its resources are unequal to the task — that its capabilities are being overwhelmed," said Stickney. "Any such delay can be ruinous."

"I believe that we have to develop a policy that allows FEMA to be proactive in catastrophic events like Hurricane Andrew — to deploy federal resources and respond even when the states are reluctant to make such requests," he said.

"As it stands now," said Stickney, "we are deploying resources to affected areas and encouraging states to ask for assistance."

The change in policy would require an amendment to legislation known as the Stafford Act, passed in 1988.

Sisters give birth on same day

JACKSONVILLE, Fla. (AP) — Coincidences are nothing new for two sisters who gave birth on the same day, in the same hospital and with the same doctor.

Helen Hertzog and Mary Murphy, who work together at a produce store, learned they were pregnant on the same day and had the same due date.

They rushed to tell their husbands, who work the same shift at a wallboard manufacturing plant. It was the second child for both of them; both couples already have 3-year-old sons.

Perhaps to break the pattern, Mrs. Hertzog, 28, gave birth to a 7-pound, 3-ounce daughter. Her 22-year-old sister had an 8-pound, 13-ounce boy just four hours later.

"I can't get over this," Mrs. Hertzog said. "It's something else."

Tourism industry employees gather for 'think tank'

■ Group to discuss how year-round school will affect its business.

Associated Press

AUSTIN — Hundreds of people involved in the multibillion-dollar Texas tourism industry gathered at a summit Monday to discuss such issues as the potential impact of year-round school.

The three-day meeting creates "a think-tank for the tourism industry," said Dianne Mendoza Freeman, state tourism director. "Tourism is big business for Texas."

When international visitor figures are released at the end of the month, the state Department of Commerce said it expects Texas travel industry sales to top $21 billion for 1991.

It also said more than 357,000 Texans credit their jobs to the travel industry, with a combined payroll of $5.8 billion.

At the annual Travel Summit, Ms. Mendoza Freeman said, "We want to look at what the trends are, what we believe will be the most significant issues that the industry will have to deal with, and be proactive about addressing them."

Nearly 500 delegates representing all aspects of the travel industry were attending the summit, according to officials.

Ms. Mendoza Freeman said the state is committed to "partnership marketing programs," in which the state works in conjunction with the private sector and such groups as chambers of commerce.

Among issues discussed at the summit was the impact year-round schools could have on tourism.

Of Texas' 1,000-plus school districts, 46 are offering year-round classes on at least one campus this year.

Students in year-round school go the same number of days as those on the traditional calendar. But instead of going for nine months and having a long summer break, they may go to school for three months, for example, then be out for a month.

Supporters say year-round school allows crowded districts to get more use out of their buildings, and more importantly, they aim to improve attendance and student learning.

Opponents have disputed the contention that there are academic benefits, and they cite drawbacks to the idea.

At a summit presentation on year-round schools, Quinn Rasberry, consultant to the International Association of Amusement Parks and Attractions, said a year and a half of study on the issue by the group yielded "no evidence that year-round schools promote quality education."

She said the programs are costly to operate and provide only a "Band-Aid" solution for overcrowding.

"We've not put a price tag on the potential damage to our industry," Ms. Rasberry said. She said less than 3 percent of all students nationally are on a year-round program, and that it has so far had little effect on tourism.

'We want to look at what the trends are, what we believe will be the most significant issues that the industry will have to deal with, and be proactive about addressing them.'

— Dianna Mendoza Freeman, state tourism director

However, she said, such a program could affect hiring practices, attendance and marketing.

"At a minimum, year-round schools or a longer school year will affect the way your business operates," Ms. Rasberry said. "The worst-case scenario, ... is that it could kill your business."

Doctor questions credibility of TB test for Mexican steers

HOUSTON (AP) — A doctor has questioned the credibility of a tuberculosis test used on steers imported from Mexico, as some physicians and federal officials are worried the cattle could spread a bovine form of TB to humans.

Dr. Terry Beals, executive director of the Texas Animal Health Commission, said although cases of "mycobacterium bovis" in humans have been extremely rare, he believes it is a "big potential problem."

The disease can be transmitted through the air, meat and milk, although pasteurization makes milk transmission unlikely. Mexican veterinarians must test the imported cattle for TB, but Beals claimed there is some question about the test's credibility.

Nearly 1.2 million Mexican steers were imported last year, and many of them came through Texas.

Spread of TB among domestic cattle has been limited by rigid U.S. quarantine rules.

Dr. Jeffrey Starke, director of the Childrens Tuberculosis Clinic at Ben Taub Hospital in Houston and chairman of a state TB advisory committee, agreed that importation of steers "raises a potential health threat to people."

But Starke sees no correlation between increased Mexican steer imports and the recent upturn in the human form of TB.

The U.S. Department of Agriculture is attempting to quantify the TB risk to animals.

This "risk assessment" was begun last April at the behest of USDA policy-makers and the National Cattlemens Association, said Dr. Kevin Walker, an economist with the USDA's Center for Epidemiology and Animal Health in Fort Collins, Colo.

Students seek honor for Guerrero

■ Student Association leaders think UT should give ex-TRC member an honorary diploma.

Associated Press

AUSTIN — Two University of Texas student leaders are calling on the school administration to give former Railroad Commission member Lena Guerrero, who resigned under fire last week, an honorary diploma.

Dinica Quesada and P.D. Wadler, both Students Association representatives, told The Daily Texan they plan to submit a resolution on Friday asking the university to give Ms. Guerrero "ample recognition for her work."

Ms. Guerrero "has proven her leadership and commitment to Texas. It's sad people are putting so much weight on her degree status. People need to look at what she's done for Texas and the university," Ms. Quesada said.

Ms. Guerrero stepped down last Thursday, two weeks after news reporters first began questioning her 12-year-old claims to being an honors graduate from UT.

Grade transcripts showed Ms. Guerrero actually had completed only 101 of 120 class hours needed for a degree and compiled a C-plus grade average. After three terms in the state House, the Democrat was appointed to a vacancy on the three-member Railroad Commission by Gov. Ann Richards in January 1991. She is seeking election in November to a six-year term.

"The university has given degrees to people who have never before set foot on campus," Wadler said. "Ms. Guerrero has done more for UT than many of those honored in the past. She deserves recognition for her work."

But acting UT president William Livingston said it is "highly unlikely" that Ms. Guerrero would receive an honorary degree "since we've only given those awards to United States presidents."

"The only individuals who have received honorary degrees from the university were Lyndon Johnson, Mrs. Johnson and George Bush," Livingston said. "So I doubt (Ms. Guerrero) could receive that type of recognition."

Wadler said such limits on honorary degrees won't lessen his efforts at obtaining one for Ms. Guerrero. "Lena has more right to an honorary degree than George Bush," he said.

GOP members criticize reception Richards plans to host for Guerrero

AUSTIN (AP) — The state Republican Party has criticized a reception to be hosted at the Governor's Mansion for Lena Guerrero and charges that Gov. Ann Richards' call for higher ethical conduct "was just empty election-year rhetoric."

Richards is hosting the reception for Texas Railroad Commission candidate Guerrero at the mansion prior to a fund-raiser, said Ms. Guerrero's campaign and the governor's office. Tuesday's fund-raiser will be held at a nearby hotel, they said.

Ms. Guerrero's spokesman Chuck McDonald said the GOP attack proves that Ms. Guerrero is a viable candidate despite being forced to admit she lied for years about her college status.

Last week, Ms. Guerrero apologized for lying and stepped down as chairman of the Railroad Commission, but immediately said she would stay in the race to recapture her seat against Republican Dallas oilman Barry Williamson.

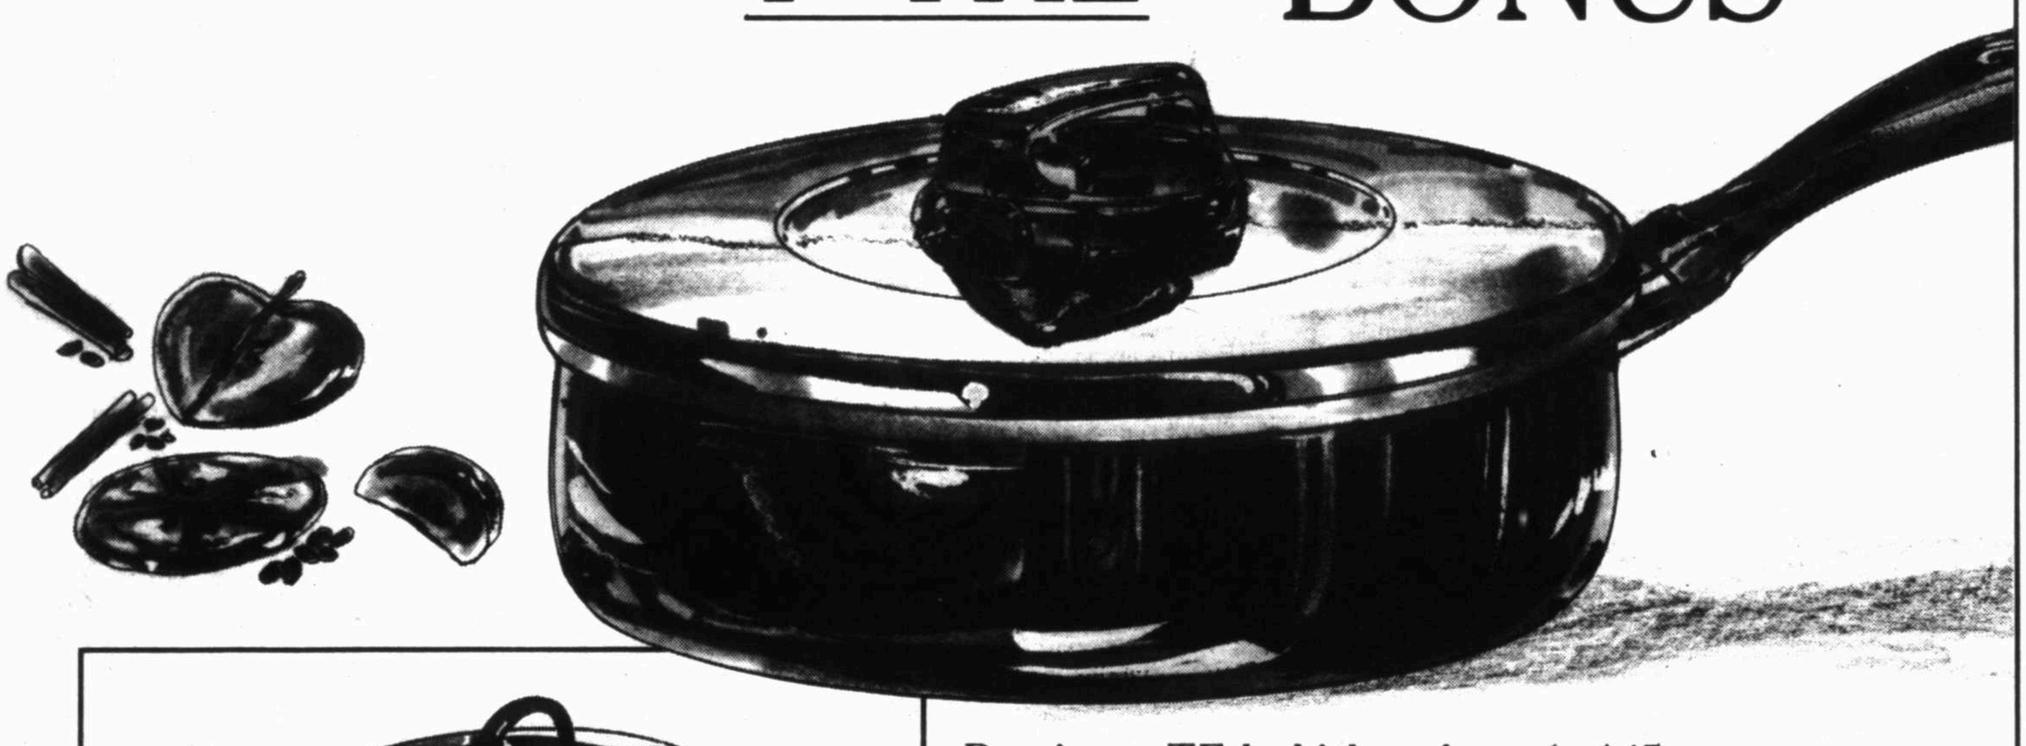

"Lena Guerrero's still in very good shape to win this race so now we are getting daily requests from the Republican Party to cease and desist," McDonald said.

State Republican Party Chairman Fred Meyer said Richards refusal to denounce Ms. Guerrero shows that "high ethical standards evidently are not required if you are Ann Richards' personal friend and political protege."

Margaret Justus, a spokesman for Richards, said the GOP criticism was off the mark.

The reception was being paid for by Ms. Guerrero's campaign so that no tax money was being used, she said. She added that the reception was no different than similar events hosted by previous governors.

Band hopes to paint its way to parade

■ Lee band and orchestra students are decorating curbs to raise funds for their trip to California.

By Myra Lee Salcedo
Staff writer

Lee High School Band and Orchestra students have spray paint cans in hand and are ready to enhance the curbs of Midland.

But don't worry, they aren't out to mark up curbs with graffiti. Instead they will be painting the Lee emblem on curbs — for $5 a painting.

"It's $5 closer students will be to raising their $500 each to go to the Tournament of Roses Parade," said LHS Band Booster President Brenda Sorrells.

Students are required to have raised at least $300 of the $500 by Wednesday. The Rebels who don't have the full $300 will not have a reservation.

A flurry of fund-raisers, including the sale of the Rebel 'n' Roses Cookbook, have netted the band about $116,000.

"We still need to raise more than $70,000, and have only eight weeks to do it," Ms. Sorrells said.

On Monday, Midland's Cinemore Four Theater announced it would give each of its five employees, who are LHS Band and Orchestra members, $100 donations. "The manager, Dick Snyder, has challenged all Midlanders to make donations," she said.

'We still need to raise more than $70,000, and have only eight weeks to do it.'

— Brenda Sorrells, band booster

"We also have a hand-painted Rebel 'n' Roses support flag which will be carried in the parade," Ms. Sorrells said. "We want people to sign it, for a donation, and will have it available for signing at football games."

A cheesecake sampler — six slices of different flavors — which is offered from Neiman Marcus for $55, is being sold by LHS band students for $26. Cheesecake lovers can order from students or by calling 699-2559.

And then there are the students prepared to decorate curbs this weekend. "One student raised $130 in one afternoon stenciling curbs," the LHS Band Booster said.

Persons interested in meeting Snyder's challenge and making donations to the band, buying a cheesecake or cookbook, or having their curb painted may call 699-2559 or 699-7613.

INTRODUCING ...

Helping others

Woman puts Midlanders on the road to self-sufficiency

By Ed Todd
Staff writer

Jerrie Ann Westmoreland is a curious soul who revels in helping people outdo themselves — becoming more than they thought possible.

She helps them bridge the possible.

If they are poor and without a home of their own and want to escape the quagmire of hopelessness, she helps them obtain shelter.

And once they have a safe place to live and to study, properly motivated and encouraged, they may set out to learn skills and knowledge to depend on themselves and not on the welfare doles.

Their aim is self-sufficiency. Earn a living. Get off the welfare rolls. Get away from that abusive spouse. Think well of yourself. Impress yourself and others. Move up from picking cotton to teaching school, from washing dishing to working on computers, from digging post holes to shuffling office papers, from just wishing to caring for others, from doing nothing to working.

Jerrie Ann Westmoreland directs the Midland County Housing program and helps low-income people get off welfare and become self-sufficient.

Ms. Westmoreland, who is executive director of Midland County Housing, also works with men and women, mostly single mothers, in a program called "Project Self-Sufficiency."

The scope of the project is to transform people from takers to givers, from idlers to doers, from dreamers to thinkers, from tax spenders to taxpayers, from dependents on society to producers of goods and services.

"I enjoy people. I enjoy studying psychology and sociology. And I have always wondered why people do what they do," Ms. Westmoreland said.

She includes herself in that lot.

And that curiosity got her interested in doing her collegiate academic work in psychology and biology.

MISD schools seek businesses to share a piece of the PIE

By Myra Lee Salcedo
Staff writer

When businesses help schools, it boosts the morale of teachers and students, said Joseph Baressi Jr., superintendent of Midland Independent School District.

Bariessi told a Monday gathering of representatives of various schools and businesses that the Partners in Education (PIE) program raises the self-esteem of pupils and educators.

Even better, it lifts the spirits of the employees who support the schools, according to Ellen Smith of the Southeast Senior Citizens Center.

"Last year, the seniors, along with the American Heart Association, put on skits for children at Carver Center. The seniors planned intergenerational events to dispel the myths on aging," Ms. Smith said.

"Visiting with the students raised the self-esteem of the seniors sky-high. We had a ball," she said.

Martha Manulik, coordinator of PIE and supervisor of VIPS (Volunteers in Public Schools), said the school district will try to involve businesses with schools on a monthly basis. "This is our third year in the program," she said. "Pairing Mobil with Crockett Elementary School was our watershed."

She said the Monday planning meeting was an attempt to "get together with businesses in the community and see what does work."

Ms. Manulik said a teacher coordinator on each campus in the program will work with a business representative.

"This is a real partnership, as opposed to a school adoption program," she said.

Cemetery vandals destroy more than tombstones

By Rick Smith
Associated Press

SAN ANGELO — Like a lot of you, I take cemetery vandalism personally.

And recently, I stopped by San Angelo's Fairmount Cemetery to make sure everything was all right after a wave of vandalism.

Broken stones have been righted and repaired, yes.

But small scars still remain — thin gray lines that glue the broken pieces together.

Scars reminding us that not even the dead are safe from casual violence and thoughtless acts.

I grew up with Fairmount and Calvary cemeteries in my backyard, and I have a special fondness for the old graveyards.

The other day, I renewed a few old acquaintances.

Fairmount is a walker's cemetery, from its narrow, tree-shaded lanes to the central gazebo with enough concrete benches to cool four dozen weary feet.

Walking, a visitor wanders from stone to stone, taking time to read inscriptions and worry over dates. Taking the time to visit.

The most unusual stones serve as landmarks: the Thomas McCloskey (Oct. 28, 1856-Dec. 26, 1914) statue; the sad angel standing guard over the graves of Chris (1856-1902) and Theodore (1858-1941) Hudson.

Behind McCloskey's statue is the Hubbard plot — stones all mounted on poles so that they seem to fly in formation above the ground.

"To be loved in the hearts of those left behind is not to die," reads the inscription on the Hubbard family plot.

Down the lane is the Gordons' plot (Robert, 1889-1964 and Agnes, 1905-1988.) A curved concrete bench waits in the corner of green, grassy lot, inviting visitors to rest under a juniper tree.

Fairmount's children's stones are the saddest.

"Earth has one pure spirit less, heaven one more," reads the inscription on one stone. Weather has worn away the name on the stone, but the dates remain (June 11, 1893-March 13, 1894), and a tiny stone cherub eternally slumbers on top.

"Love," one tiny stone simply says, "forever."

In all fairness to adventure-seeking teen-agers, Fairmount must seem spooky at night.

The vine-covered maintenance building and ancient, spoke-wheeled wagons look like props from a vampire movie.

But, on a bright fall afternoon, the only ghosts I encounter are wisps of love and longing left by the living: tattered wreaths, fresh flowers, a tiny red balloon tied to a shrub next to a child's grave.

When vandals violate a place like this, they do more than topple tombstones.

They destroy a trust.

In life, we constantly surrender our loved ones to the care of strangers. We say farewells to spouses at airports, kiss the kids goodbye before they board the bus for school. We pray for their safety and entrust them to the kindness of strangers.

In death — at cemeteries — we do the same.

If I could, I'd tell those who vandalized Fairmount to visit the cemetery on a bright fall day, walk around, spend some time, read some stones.

Maybe they would see that we bury hopes and dreams and love beneath those markers — not just bones.

Maybe they would begin to understand.

Maybe they would feel differently about the graves they desecrated.

And leave the rest in peace.

MHS students have holiday on Wednesday

Staff report

Midland High School students who claim they will have the day off from school Wednesday are absolutely right.

Wednesday is the first of six early dismissal days for Midland public school pupils, with the exception of MHS students.

While students across the district will be released from school about two hours early, students at MHS will have a holiday. MHS teachers will have longer inservice sessions than other teachers due to a special program.

Other early dismissal times follow: Three and four-year-olds and half-day kindergarten pupils will be dismissed at 11 a.m. Head Start and migrant pupils will be dismissed at noon. Full-day kindergarten, first, second and third graders will be dismissed at 12:30 p.m.

Sixth graders will be dimissed at 1:10 p.m.; Lee Freshman High School students, 1 p.m.; Midland Freshman High School students and Lee High School students, 1:30 p.m.; and Coleman High School students, 2 p.m.

Men find skull in dryer

PASADENA (AP) — Harris County officials on Monday were trying to identify a human skull discovered inside a dryer at an apartment complex.

Pasadena Police spokeswoman Betty Parks said the skull found Monday morning was turned over to the Harris County Medical Examiner's office.

Two men, aged 20 and 17, who were in the laundry room at their apartment complex around 1 a.m. spotted the skull inside a dryer and immediately called authorities, Ms. Parks said.

HOUSE: Westmoreland enjoys helping others

(From 1B)

"I have always been interested in behavior, our behavior (as a people)," said Ms. Westmoreland, 43.

"Many times, it is seemingly illogical. Even my own."

While she observes the quirks in human behavior, she is doing something about helping "people stuck in the welfare system and in poverty" to rise above the ruts of despair.

"People cannot do anything without housing," Ms. Westmoreland said. "You cannot survive. It is a basic need."

Once that basic need is satisfied in some people who have "struggled and struggled against hope" for a place to live, they may, in instances, "give up" and decide just to exist on welfare doles and do nothing else.

And that is where millions of America's poorer citizens are today: wallowing in welfare.

"I feel that government has spent billions of dollars on social programs that don't work," Ms. Westmoreland said.

And while more and more people are dropping into poverty and are getting on welfare rolls, there is a "new movement toward welfare reform," Ms. Westmoreland said. "I am very proud to be a part of that movement."

Ms. Westmoreland oversees 375 subsidized housing units in Midland that are occupied by the elderly, the handicapped, the disabled, low-income single parents, and others.

More than 400 people are on waiting lists for similar units, she said.

Ms. Westmoreland said that about $12,000 in tax dollars are required to keep a single parent and child on welfare — in shelter, on food stamps, on Medicaid, and other aid.

A single parent in the work force would have to earn $16,000 a year to earn the equivalent of $12,000 in welfare aid. The $4,000 disparity comes in the costs of transportation to get to work, to buy insurance, and to pay taxes, Ms. Westmoreland said. "You've got to have money to make money."

In the 1980s, said Ms. Westmoreland, the Department of Housing and Urban Development (HUD) "had the intelligence to come up with the Project Self-Sufficiency (PSS) program, which gives "local governments a large leeway in the design of the local projects" to help the underachievers, the under-educated, the unskilled and the unschooled to "utilize local resources."

Since 1986, about 140 families in Midland have gone through the PSS-housing system and are self-sufficient and are no longer on welfare.

Some former underachievers, once they taste success, often become overachievers, Ms. Westmoreland. The desire to succeed often is reflected in their competitive spirit to earn high grades in school.

However, "some are just happy to pass" courses, Ms. Westmoreland said, and "some don't make it."

With the aid of PSS resources, men and women, mostly single parents from their teen-age years into their 40s, are able to think and to act successfully.

PSS resources include Midland College's vocational-education programs, Job Training Partnership Act (JTPA) programs. Texas Department of Human Services, and Midland County Housing.

PSS participants gain skills and confidence to get "out of the welfare system."

"The courage that they have is just unbelievable," Ms. Westmoreland said. "It (PSS) is a program for people who are in the (welfare) system and who want to get off. And most people on welfare wish not to be there."

Lottery director announces new game called 'Touchdown'

AUSTIN (AP) — State officials Monday hoped to cash in on Texas' love of football by offering a new scratch-card game called "Touchdown."

"Football season is here at last, and our new Texas lottery Touchdown game is going to give players a new opportunity to win by outscoring their opponents," State Lottery Director Nora Linares said.

Officials introduced the game at a news conference in the north end zone of Memorial Stadium on the University of Texas campus.

In the game, players scratch the latex covering off spots marked "Your Score" and "Their Score."

If "Your Score" is higher than "Their Score," the player wins the dollar amount under the "Prize" box. There are two games on each $1 ticket.

Prizes range from $1 to $500. With nearly 20 million of the 100 million tickets being a winner, the game offers about a 1 in 5 chance of winning.

That's the highest odds of winning money in any of the five scratch-card games, although the vast majority of "Touchdown" winners — 15.6 million tickets — are $1 winners.

The game will be touted by two new television commercials. GSD&M, which is handling the advertising campaign, said in background material that the game was "designed to appeal to men, and/or sports enthusiasts."

But Ms. Linares disagreed, saying, "I don't like stereotyping at all. I'm a football fan, and every woman I know watches football. We're here to please anybody that likes the game of football."

She also dismissed a question about the appropriateness of holding a news conference on gambling at a college football stadium.

"We just think this is fun to play. We know that people are excited about football in Texas," she said.

Wally Pryor, stadium announcer for home Texas Longhorn football games, helped Ms. Linares in the news conference by demonstrating how to play the game.

Although the state's fifth scratch-card game since the lottery started in May, "Touchdown" is the first one to incorporate a beat-the-score play. Since May, Texas has sold approximately $667 million in tickets and paid $299 million in prizes.

Ms. Linares said computerized number games are still scheduled to start in November.

AIDS: Author to discuss crisis

has counseled extensively with prisoners, substance abusers, homosexuals, prostitutes and youth.

He has worked with members of the Texas Legislature in promoting AIDS legislation.

Antonio's new book due addresses AIDS as a weapon of political warfare, AIDS and TB, AIDS dementia, AIDS and the pill and AIDS and abortion.

Antonio contends that routine mandatory testing of medical patients should be the foremost "universal precaution" against the disease.

Besides routine mandatory testing, Antonio asserts that measures needed in the fight against AIDS include confidential reportability of those carrying HIV to public health authorities and notification of their partners that they are at risk and should be tested.

The author has spoken on the AIDS issue in more than 25 states as well as abroad. He has spoken before a variety of civic, medical, legal, and religious groups, and has testified at congressional hearings on AIDS and other health-related legislation.

He has been a guest on hundreds of radio programs across the country and has appeared on numerous television programs, including "Crossfire," "Larry King Live," "The 700 Club," and "The Morton Downey Jr. Show."

Antonio serves as executive director of the American Health and Human Rights Coalition, an organization that promotes sound public health measures as a means of controlling the spread of AIDS and related diseases such as pulmonary tuberculosis. He also directs the Destiny Project, which is designed to transform the public health of developing nations.

Historian thinks he's solved hippo mystery

HUTTO (AP) — A mystery that long has baffled Hutto residents — how the hippopotamus came to be the school mascot — soon may be solved.

"I've been investigating it for about 10 years and I think I finally have the answer," says Hugh Davenport, Hutto's self-appointed historian.

But Davenport, 84, said he won't reveal the answer until Oct. 17, when dedication ceremonies are planned for a new, 14,280-pound concrete hippo statue.

He plans to add his new information about the hippo to a book he's been compiling since the 1970s about Hutto using photographs, newspaper clippings and letters.

Legend has it that the hearts of Hutto residents were won over by a hippo that escaped from a carnival in 1915 and took refuge in a nearby creek.

According to the Hutto student handbook, "The ordeal of recapturing the ferocious animal was so ingrained on the citizens' minds that when Hutto opened its first 11-grade school later that year it chose to name its athletic team the hippos."

But Davenport says, "Nobody has ever come up with something they can really believe."

Chamber of Commerce President Murray McDonald said he prefers the carnival tale over another popular theory — that someone looked at the football players and said, "Hey, you all look like a bunch of hippos."

Audio Acoustics offers $100 off INFINITI miniature hearing aids

Audio Acoustics audiologists Michelle Arsulowicz and Orland Purcell program an INFINITI miniature hearing aid.

Computer programmable hearing aids have marked a dramatic improvement in the hearing aid industry in the last year. Until now, these high-tech instruments were only available in all-in-the-ear and behind-the-ear styles.

Today, a new computer programmable hearing aid, in the miniature canal size, is available at Audio Acoustics Hearing Centers. This is the smallest type of hearing aid on the market. It fits discreetly into the ear canal and is barely noticeable.

The new INFINITI hearing aid is a product of Siemens Corporation. The Siemens Corporation is widely respected in the medical community because they have developed highly advanced medical equipment used in hospitals and doctors' offices across the country. The Siemens hearing aid division has been a leader in the field for over 100 years.

The INFINITI hearing aid offers four times more flexibility than traditional mini-hearing aids. The audiologist is able to use the computer programming function to do the following:

- Adjust the power setting to provide the listener with the optimum listening situation.
- Correct the sound quality to provide comfortable listening.
- Control feedback or whistling noises.
- Set the automatic gain control so the hearing aid will turn itself down if a sound that is too loud occurs.

Since the INFINITI hearing aid has digitally programmable capabilities for all four controls, adjustments can be made to enable people to hear in almost any setting. Many patient complaints concerning gain, loudness, sound quality or feedback can easily be handled in the office, according to the programmable products specialist who designed the new instrument. In the past, many conventional hearing aids had to be returned to the manufacturer for these types of adjustments — a frustrating period at best, for the patient.

By contrast, the new high-tech INFINITI mini-canal devices are adjusted using a specially designed computer. The INFINITI differs from previously available programmable aids because no cords, wires or remote controls are needed. This instrument is also available in the behind-the-ear style. It is the first digitally programmable hearing aid with the capability to help people with varying degrees of hearing loss, from mild to severe.

The cost? The INFINITI is quite reasonable when compared to other types of digitally programmable hearing aids. And now Audio Acoustics is offering $100 off per ear ear. Don't pass up these tremendous savings.

There are two audiologists at Audio Acoustics Hearing Center. They both hold master's degrees in audiology (the study of hearing loss and rehabilitation) from universities in the United States.

For more information call Audio Acoustics at 689-HEAR. They are located at 2101 N. Midland Dr., #4. Hours are 8:30 a.m. to 5 p.m. Monday through Friday.

Graham's Pharmacy sets sail for sea of upcoming holidays

Graham's has a wide collection of Columbus memorabilia to help celebrate the 500th anniversary of the discovery of the New World. Shown are ship replicas, Columbus dolls and globes.

It's been almost 500 years since Christopher Columbus, commanding the Santa Maria, with the Nina and the Pinta in tow, set sail for the East Indies and discovered the New World. The folks at Graham's Pharmacy are celebrating with a delightful collection of Columbus memorabilia. This includes Columbus dolls, ship replicas, map coasters, desk globes, globe book-ends and so much more.

And, speaking of holidays, it won't be long until Christmas comes around. Lots of Midlanders have started shopping already, and Graham's Pharmacy is all ready for them.

A beautiful, whimsical selection of Precious Moments dolls is on display. These include huggable baby dolls, beautiful brides, adorable Little Leaguers, precious angels, a bunny-suited darling and pajama bags.

For little girls, Grahams has an assortment of Tinkerbell cosmetics and Fragrances. Also Snow White and Cinderella jewelry boxes and cups, and Sleeping Beauty mugs. And Graham's hasn't forgotten little boys. The Paddington Bear collection is absolutely super. Look for Paddington bear book-ends, banks and even nested Paddingtons!

For both boys and girls, find a complete Sesame Street band — complete with all your child's favorite characters. Just push the instrument each one carries and it will play a little tune. There are also some great, artist-inspiring Crayola paint sets.

Baby gifts include Roly Poly Disney pull trucks, "Boo Boo" Bunnies — adorable little rabbits with fluid-filled tummies. Just pop them in the freezer and when baby gets a "boo-boo" they act as comforting compresses.

Also, be sure to take a look at the Keepsake Bonnet. It's a lovely lace handkerchief, styled into a baby bonnet. A little girl wears it when she's an infant, then, years later, carries it as a handkerchief on her wedding day. A gift that will truly span the years.

And, for the grown-ups, ladies' western belts, earrings, button covers, necklaces in denim, silver and other mediums have just arrived. The western look is hot, and Graham's has all the accessories for wonderful gifts.

As always, Graham's has a great selection of silk florals. Have an arrangement created for you by the talented Kris or pick out your own flowers and do it yourself!

Selections of cookie jars and trolls are also great.

Besides its large selection of merchandise, Graham's has the advantage of convenience. Anyone who is short on time or long on errands can get a prescription filled, shop, pick up household items and have a delicious meal at the soda fountain.

Graham's Pharmacy, a Dodson Street merchant located in Old Town Midland, has offered fast, reliable service for more than 15 years. Personal service and a well-stocked pharmacy are Graham trademarks. For example, this home-owned and operated pharmacy, which is also a Legend pharmacy, offers free delivery within the Midland city limits.

They keep computerized prescription records for customers' tax and insurance purposes. Also, they honor PCS and Blue Cross/Blue Shield along with other prescription insurance cards. Visa, MasterCard, Discover and American Express are welcome.

Graham's Pharmacy is open from 8 a.m. to 6 p.m. Monday through Friday and 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. on Saturday. Call 684-0569.

Investment bankers bring their knowledge and energy home

"We have a very experienced staff of brokers, we're all West Texans, and we've all come back to the area we love. We're also part of a company that provides high-quality investment banking and brokerage services throughout the Southwest," said Jim Pinnell, vice president of The Principal/Eppler, Guerin & Turner, Inc. (EGT) area office. The company originated in Dallas and has had a presence in Midland since 1966.

"Our mission is to be active members of our community and to help our friends and neighbors make their money work harder for them," Pinnell said.

Pinnell himself is originally from Andrews. For the past 24 years he's been in the investment banking business in Dallas. Most recently he was an institutional broker — helping people who manage other people's money — with The Principal/EGT. Although based in Dallas, he traveled to New York, Chicago, Minneapolis and other large metropolitan areas to work with portfolio managers and analysts. Just recently he returned to this area to head the local office.

Another "local broker" is Jack Nichols. Originally from Lubbock, a graduate of Texas Tech, he worked for a large bank in Dallas. In 1979 he happily came to Midland and has been part of the area's financial scene ever since. He's a member of the Kiwanis Club, active with the First Methodist Church and is also an alumnus of Leadership Midland.

Bobby Crues, with 31 years experience in the investment business, is originally from Plainview. He's remained in this area throughout his career. Locally, he's chairman of Midland Jazz Classic and a member of the Lions Club.

Originally from Colorado City, in 1972 broker Tanya McCann began her career in the Dallas office of The Principal/EGT. In February 1992, she joined the Midland branch as the culmination of her three-year plan to "return to West texas." Ms. McCann is an active member of the Uptown chapter of the Business & Professional Women's organization.

These brokers and their professional staff are part of The Principal/EGT. The Dallas based company is a unique investment firm. In terms of capital size, it is the largest regional firm based in the Southwest, with more than $40 million in equity capital.

Historically, The Principal/EGT has been conservative in its management and investment policies. They continue to believe that good common stocks and bonds are the cornerstone of long-term investment programs.

From their headquarters in Dallas, the company conducts a premier regional investment banking and securities brokerage business. Their growth is fueled by an ability to provide high-quality investment banking and brokerage service to individual, institutional, corporate and municipal customers.

A full-line investment firm, the company is a member of NYSE and SIPC.

"We can help with just about any type of security investment," Pinnell said. "We feel we offer a high level of personal service, responsiveness, professionalism and expertise. In conducting our business, we carefully consider our clients' objectives and respond with advice tailored to their specific needs."

Drop by 600 W. Illinois and visit Pinnell and his staff anytime. They remind their friends and neighbors that "The coffee's always brewing." Or call them at 683-5208.

In besieged Sarajevo, cooks make do

War paste, rice schnitzels, nettles and war cookies won't win any blue ribbons, but they do help to keep body and soul together. In Sarajevo, that's enough.

SARAJEVO, Bosnia-Herzegovina (AP) — Take some dry bread and crumble it. Add a can of sardines squirreled away last winter, cut in small pieces. To that add salt, oregano or any other spice, and water.

Spread this pate look-alike, Fehma Rezakovic's Sarajevo war paste, on bread for a satisfying — if slightly unusual — breakfast.

Sarajevo's kitchens are the domain of cooks trained for generations to turn out dishes rich in meat, fresh produce and lively spices that reflect the city's location as a crossroads of Europeans and Ottoman Turks. But under siege, necessity has become the mother of invention.

War paste, rice schnitzels, nettles and war cookies won't win any blue ribbons, but they do help to keep body and soul together. In Sarajevo, that's enough.

Mrs. Rezakovic, 54, and her neighbors spend their days scouring markets for food, trading recipes and feeding hungry family members who are fighting a war — or fighting to maintain a normal life amid the siege.

"They have forced us to be creative," she said of the Serb forces choking off supplies to the city.

"Sometimes, I lose my desire to cook," Mrs. Rezakovic said Thursday, bright eyes flashing under a shock of gray hair. She nodded her head for emphasis. "Nothing changes. Every day is the same."

"We used to have everything," she added. "Now, we have nothing."

Nothing, that is, except flour, rice, pasta, oil, and the ever-present nettle.

Anyone who has more in Sarajevo either was smart enough to stock up heavily before fighting started this spring, or has a lot of money to spend. In a city where the average person earns the equivalent of $10 a month, one egg now costs about a dollar and a half.

That makes rice schnitzel, a breaded patty of boiled rice, a good bet. It's better for those who stockpiled canned tomatoes or paste to make a sauce.

Nettles, better known by westerners for their ability to cause pain, are a substitute for spinach and about the only greens available.

Sefika Gogalija has been growing and selling nettles in Sarajevo for 30 years. Traditionally, they are used to make soup or tea. Standing in back of her stand at a small downtown market where she offered nettles, dandelion leaves and various grasses for tea, she said this has been a banner year.

"Before, we didn't grow it like this," she said. "It's the biggest amount of my life." With two sons and their families — 10 people in all — to feed, the 52-year-old said she has been eating a lot of nettles herself.

She's had nettles mixed with rice, she's had nettles wrapped in pastry dough. Sarajevo residents swear the nettle contains iron, is good for the blood and digestion — but enough is enough.

Atifa Sekso said she despairs at her limited supplies "almost every day, 10 times a day, 100 times a day." But she gets by with a deep breath and another shot of optimism.

Her war cookies consist of three cups of wheat flour, three spoonfuls of sugar and a cup of oil, mixed together. But there's a hitch.

"If you don't have gas or electricity, you go to your neighbor's to bake them," she added. On the way back, though, she has to hand out cookies to a gauntlet of other neighbors.

Animals try to recover from trauma of hurricane

TAVARES, Fla.(NYT) — The trauma to animals who survived Hurricane Andrew only to lose their homes and families can't really be measured, according to a local veterinarian.

"They don't really realize what has happened to them," said Ross Valdez of the Park Heights Animal Care Center in Fruitland Park.

Valdez and his wife Anita traveled to south Florida recently to treat animals hurt during or after the hurricane. They also brought back seven dogs and cats who need permanent homes and one dog who needs a foster home.

Anita said many of the animals that they saw in the Andrew's Ark program in Palm Beach were very thin, and timid. Some had no nails since they had tried to scratch or dig their way out during the hurricane.

Animals experience the same trauma from hurricanes as humans would, Ross said, except they can't talk about it. They may have stopped eating or drinking and may experience vomiting and diarrhea because they have to scrounge for garbage, spoiled food or wild animals.

Many domestic pets were suddenly thrown into a "street-life" survival mode for safety and food, he said.

Homeless South Florida residents often had to give up their pets when they moved away from the area or into a shelter, Anita said. That added to the trauma of the hurricane for those residents and the pets, she said.

"Animals don't really understand" why they've lost their safe home and families, Valdez said. The animals may have memories of the hurricane and may associate it with losing their families and familiar neighborhood.

But being safe and well-fed in a good home will help them forget it, Valdez said. "Happiness overwhelms their sadness — they're very forgiving. They're just happy to be in a home again," he said.

The animals the Valdezes brought back have been given any shots or medical care they need and are ready for new families, they say.

"Just promise that you'll give them a good home," Valdez said.

Drew and Duke, adult german shepards, Grandpa Buddy, a hound dog, Brittany, a cocker spaniel, and Calli, a callico cat as well three kittens are available. The kittens: Andrew, a male cat with grey/black coloring, female cat Iniki who is grey with white feet, and Kacci a solid black female cat are waiting for families.

Brittany, the cocker spaniel, only needs a foster home.

"They would appreciate one on one attention from a person. That's the hardest thing for them." Families can even take the pets on a trial basis, Valdez said.

Once these pets have been placed in homes, the couple will bring up more animals from the Andrew's Ark program in Palm Beach. The animals are housed in a South Florida warehouse and cared for by volunteers.

This program will maintain an identification number and photo for each animal so South Florida owners can still track down their pets if they want to, according to Anita.

Road to education is journey to find yourself

By Erma Bombeck

The beginning of the school year seems as good a time as any to tell young people what education is all about.

Going to school isn't necessarily fun. It won't guarantee you a good job. It may not even make you smart or rich. So what are you doing there and why should you stay?

Bombeck

Because school may be your last chance to star in your own life. It's the twilight zone between parental domination and the mating scene. You've got center stage all to yourself. You're in control. So what are you going to do with your life? Get pregnant and live at home? Drop out of school and watch the soaps all day? Join a gang? Whine about all the obstacles to success in your path? Fulfill a family prophecy to be a bum?

The wheel of blame spins daily, coming to rest on teachers who don't make it interesting enough, parents who don't care, school boards who don't provide enough money, government that doesn't give enough support. That's garbage. It all comes down to you.

Anyone can spiel off a litany of reasons for not trying ... the planet is polluted, a nuclear war will eventually wipe everyone out, AIDS threatens our very existence, our parents didn't finish school, the American dream is dead.

The irony is that we've all been there at these crossroads, lost and confused with a road map we can't read marked "destiny." What makes some keep going and others turn back?

For me, I remembered what I left behind. I didn't want to return to a house with a toilet on the back porch. I didn't want to return bottles to the store to go to a movie. I didn't want to grow old wondering if I had something to give and was too scared to find out what.

The road to education is a boring drive. There's not a lot to see on it ... blackboards dot the landscape with equations and diagrammed sentences. Sometimes it's hard to keep awake. Detours are fraught with disappointments and wrong turns. Occasionally, a teacher will hitch a ride who is bright and funny, but he or she gets out and you go on.

As the years go by, you'll think you'll never reach your destination.

It isn't until much later in your life that you realize what a remarkable thing you did. You finished something hard. You interacted with people different from you who had an impact on your life. You challenged yourself against some odds. You developed curiosity and realized how much you have to learn. You proved to yourself how good you can be.

Dear Abby

Wife put an end to charity that kept man from home

EDITOR'S NOTE: Dear Abby is on a two-week vacation. Following is a selection of some of her favorite past letters from 1972 and '73.

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: When I read the letter signed "All Torn Up" describing a husband who was Johnny-on-the-spot to do chores for the neighbors while his own remained undone, I was reminded of how my mother solved the same problem.

Van Buren

My father was a wonderful mechanic who worked daily at his job from 8 till 5. We lived on a small ranch, and during his "free" hours he was supposed to do all the things one must do on a ranch, such as milking, irrigation, fence-mending, barn repairs, etc.

Friends and neighbors would meet Dad at the gate as he came home with, "If you have a minute, will you please check my brakes?" (Or it was the timing or the radiator or something else.) Dad, being the bigearted man he was, never said no. His hot dinner was often eaten cold. Weekends he spent repairing a friend's car, truck or tractor while his own ranch work was left undone. Mother often made minor repairs or irrigated with the aid of a flashlight. (This after she had done her own work during the day.)

Finally, Mother had "notices" printed and passed them out to these unsolicited "customers." They read:

"MECHANIC ON DUTY MON. THROUGH FRI.

"6 p.m. to 8 p.m. Charge $8 per hour.

"Sat. and Sun. 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. Charge $10 per hour.

"These charges are to cover the cost of the handyman I have had to hire to do my husband's ranch chores."

You have no idea how fast these freeloaders learned to do their own repairing or found another patsy. — SUNBONNET SUE

DEAR ABBY: I am a 28-year-old unmarried man. I know I sometimes make those around me uncomfortable because I am very fussy about order, perfection and cleanliness. For instance, the money in my wallet must be arranged with the larger bills on one side, progressing to the smaller ones. The suits in my closet must all be facing in the same direction, and my shoes have to line up perfectly. I will spend half an hour crawling around on my bathroom floor looking for lint and hair you would need a magnifying glass to find.

I would like to get married, but I always seem to find something wrong with the girl. Do you think perhaps the reason no girl can qualify is because deep down I am afraid a wife and family may clutter up my otherwise orderly life? It was suggested I seek professional help. What do you think? — NEAT AND ORDERLY

DEAR NEAT: If anyone asks if he should get professional help, I always vote yes. Better to seek it and not need it than to need it and not seek it.

DEAR ABBY: My husband has had three serious accidents at work in the past two years. I have quit asking him to do chores around the house because he is always smashing his fingers with a hammer, cutting himself, or falling off the ladder while changing the screens or storm windows. It's a good year when he hasn't had a couple of automobile accidents.

The doctor at the plant where he works suggested that he see a psychiatrist! Why? He isn't crazy. — HIS WIFE

DEAR WIFE: People who have more than their share of "accidents" could be unconsciously punishing themselves for unresolved guilt. And they need not be "crazy" to do so. I think the plant doctor planted a very sound suggestion in your husband's mind.

This one's for everybody, from teens to seniors! To purchase Abby's new booklet, "The Anger in All of Us and How to Deal With It," send a business-size, self-addressed envelope, plus check or money order for $3.95 ($4.50 in Canada) to: Dear Abby, Anger Booklet, P.O. # NFL has had better weeks

By Dave Goldberg
AP Football Writer

The NFL probably would do just as well to forget Week 4 of the 1992 season.

Not only did the league lose again in court when four unsigned players were declared free agents by Judge David Doty, but Sunday was a day of stinkers and snoozers.

That is, after three weeks of good, exciting football, we had games like Denver's 12-0 win over Cleveland (four field goals); the Rams' 18-10 win over the Jets (four field goals and a safety); Buffalo's 41-7 blowout over New England, and Minnesota's 42-7 win in Cincinnati that brought the Bengals down do earth.

Why?

1—After games like Buffalo's 34-31 win over San Francisco, the Giants' near comeback against the Cowboys (from 34-0 to 34-28), the Cleveland-Miami Monday night fourth-quarter shootout and John Elway's 20th game-winning drive over the Raiders, we were due for an off-week.

2—The luck of the schedule. The league's best division, the NFC East, was off, idling the Cowboys, Eagles and Redskins. That doesn't explain it all, of course. Phoenix and Indianapolis were also off.

3—Injuries. The Browns were playing with their third quarterback in three weeks: Mike Tomczak, picked up 10 days ago. And John Elway still operates behind a questionable offensive line and without Vance Johnson, Steve Sewell, Sammie Smith and Michael Young, four offensive weapons he needs.

Not that every game stunk.

The 49ers' 16-10 win over the Saints, the best matchup of the day, wasn't decided until Eric Davis picked off Bobby Hebert's pass in the end zone with 10 sec-

Tech must play perfect game to beat Aggies, Dykes says

Associated Press

LUBBOCK — Pre-season pundits picked Texas Tech as the most likely school to challenge Texas A&M for a Cotton Bowl berth.

But Spike Dykes said Monday his Red Raiders would have to play much better than they have this season to upset the fifth-ranked Aggies at College Station Saturday. In fact, he said, they'd have to be perfect.

"A&M is a horse of a different color," Dykes said. "The Aggies are hands-down the favorites to win this conference. They are solid from the bottom to the top."

Tech, which was widely regarded as a legitimate contender for its first Southwest Conference title during the preseason, was reeling from a 1-2 start before handling the Bears 36-17 Saturday in Lubbock.

Against Baylor, the Tech defense, which had been surrendering 415 yards total offenses, held the Bears just 305, including a season-low 148 yards rushing. Baylor came into the game featuring the league's most-prolific rushing attack, averaging 205 yards.

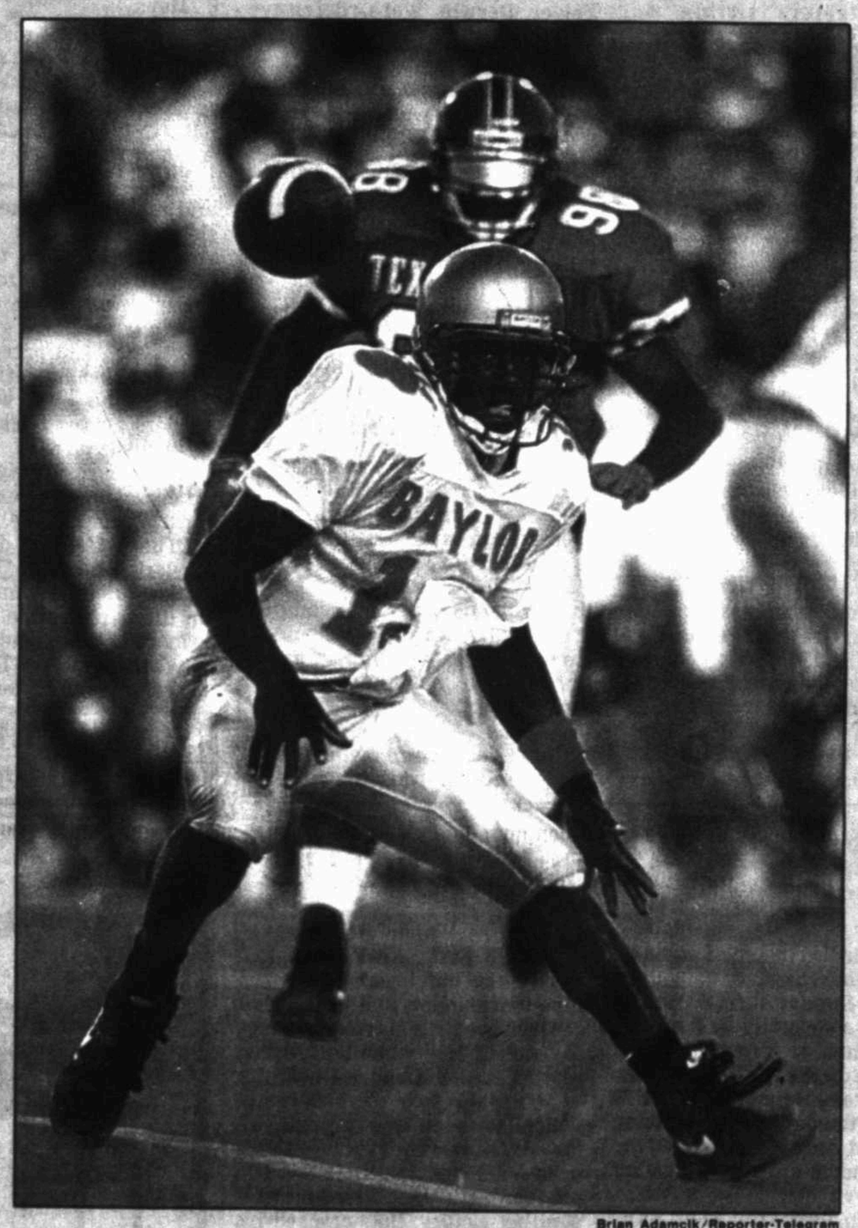

"I don't know that we have played a better defensive game than we did against Baylor," Dykes said. "It was a complete game, one we had been trying to get unwound all year. There's no doubt about it, it would be hard to play A&M if we hadn't beaten Baylor. It would have been do-or-die, walk-the-plank."

The Aggies (4-0) have won 10 straight home games at Kyle Field and 13 consecutive regular season games.

Saturday's game pits the league's No. 1 offense (Tech) against its best defense (Texas A&M).

"To beat them would take a perfect football game from us," Dykes said. "Last year they just sort of lined up

Two former holdouts ink NFL pacts

■ Deals could open the door to extension of free agency.

Associated Press

Keith Jackson and Garin Veris, two of the four former holdouts who were given free agency by a federal court, took advantage of their freedom on Monday to change teams.

Jackson, a three-time Pro Bowl selection at tight end for Philadelphia, agreed to a four-year deal with Miami. The Dolphins said he would arrive Tuesday to sign the contact and hold a news conference.

Veris, a former New England defensive end, signed a two-year pact with the San Francisco 49ers.

Jackson, who made $300,000 in 1991 and reportedly was seeking $1.5 million per season, said at halftime of ABC's "Monday Night Football" said Miami's offer "blew Philadelphia's out of the water by a lot. Philadelphia's bid was not very competitive."

He also said his decision "had a lot to do with the offense. I'm going to leave a great quarterback, but I'm going to a team with another great quarterback. I think I can fit it a lot better in Miami."

He feels he can contribute quickly.

"Hopefully, I'll be in uniform this weekend," he said. "I'm going down to meet with the coaches and try to learn the offensive scheme. Last year, about four games in, Roy Green came to us and had a big game. I hope I can do the same."

Eagles president Harry Gamble said he was disappointed that Jackson decided to leave.

"Keith is certainly a very talented player and in this business, you never like to lose talented players," he said in a statement. "At the same time, however, I feel very comfortable in saying that the Philadelphia Eagles made an extremely attractive contract offer to Keith. Apparently, Keith has made what he considers

A's clinch

■ Oakland wins the AL West when Twins fall to Chisox.

Associated Press

OAKLAND, Calif. — The Oakland Athletics clinched the AL West title Monday night without even taking the field, and that was fine by them.

The A's had the day off, and won their fourth division crown in five years when the World Series champion Minnesota Twins were eliminated with a 9-4 loss to Chicago.

"One of the players said, 'when you look at the season we've had, this is almost the only way it could be,'" manager Tony La Russa said after it was official. "There's nothing that has fallen into place for this club, so this is probably the way we had to clinch it."

"I know one thing: We've almost finished with six months of playing and we've got the most wins, so therefore we earned it," he said.

The Athletics, whose season has been punctuated by injuries to Rickey Henderson, Dave Henderson, Bob Welch and other key players, plus the stunning trade of Jose Canseco, could've clinched the championship on the field in Milwaukee on either Saturday or Sunday.

But the Brewers beat the A's both days and completed a three-game sweep, keeping the magic number at one. Oakland will open the playoffs on Oct. 7 at the home of the AL East champion, either Toronto or Milwaukee.

"Maybe this is the way it's supposed to be this year," pitcher Rick Honeycutt said. "I think everybody really wanted to clinch it on the field and go crazy like you do, but this year has kind of lingered on and so maybe this

Raider slide continues, 27-7

Associated Press

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — The biggest crowd in Kansas City in 20 years got exactly what it wanted Monday night, watching the Los Angeles Raiders plunge to their worst record in 28 years.

Quarterback Dave Krieg scored two touchdowns and Barry Word muscled up the middle for 125 yards as the Chiefs (3-1) beat the Raiders 27-7, leaving the Silver and Black with an 0-4 record for the first time since 1964 and putting any hope of saving their season severely in doubt.

The raucous crowd of 77,486, the Chiefs' largest since Nov. 11, 1972, was warned several times by officials to quiet down while the Raiders had the ball.

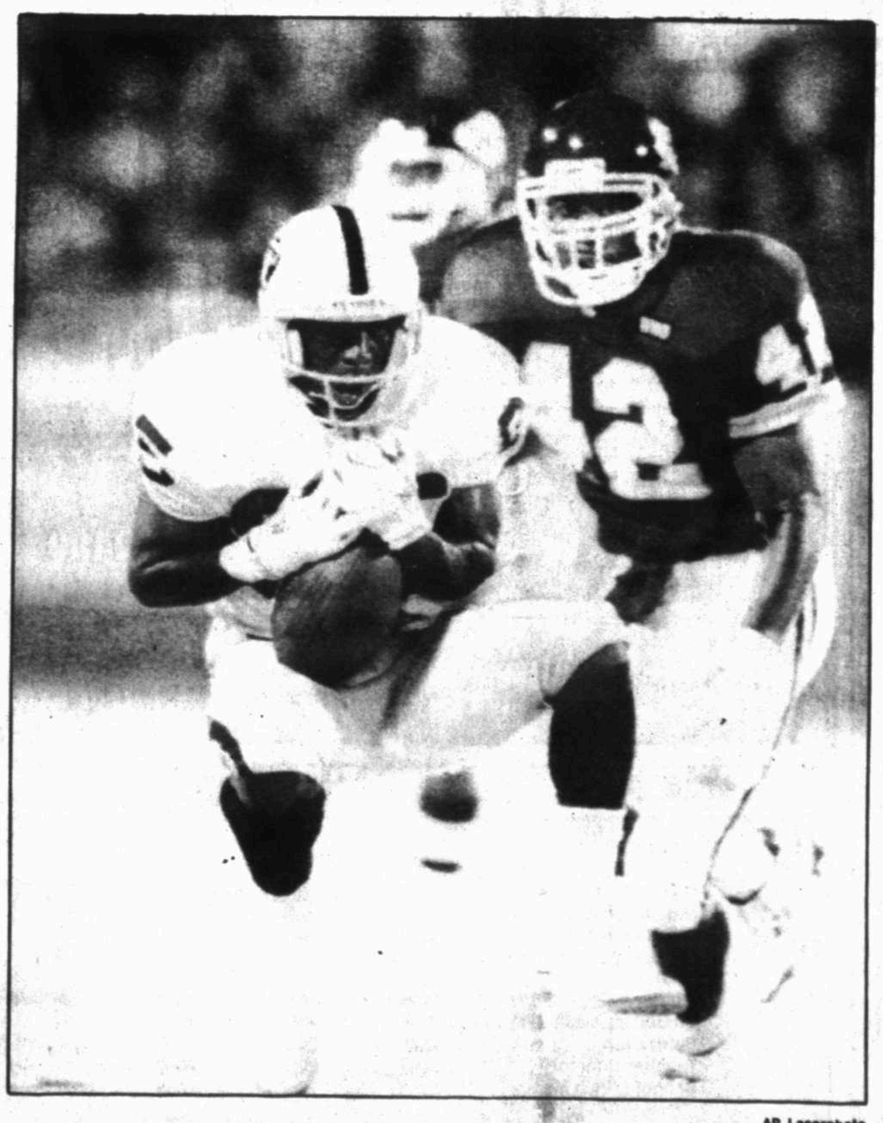

Word, a 245-pounder working mostly up the middle, went over 100 yards against Los Angeles for the third straight game as the Chiefs won their sixth in a row over their old AFL rivals and maintained a first-place tie with Denver in the AFC West.

Krieg, who spent 12 years with Seattle before signing with Kansas City this year as a Plan B free agent, used Fred Jones' block on Ronnie Lott to dash 7 yards into the end zone on the first play of the fourth period for a 17-7 lead.

Krieg also scored on a 3-yard run in the second quarter, becoming the first Chiefs quarterback to score two touchdowns in a game since Bill Kinney in 1983.

Nick Lowery's 41-yard field goal midway through the final period made it 20-7 and Charles Mincy returned his first career interception 25 yards for a clinching touchdown with 1:52 left.

After a dull, scoreless first period, the Raiders seized a 7-0 lead 4:36 into the second quarter when Eric Dickerson sprang through a big hole over right tackle and sped 40 yards to the end zone untouched, outrunning Charles Mincy the final 20 yards.

Mackovic lauds Longhorn quarterbacks

Associated Press

AUSTIN — Texas coach John Mackovic on Monday lauded senior quarterback Peter Gardere, who now holds the school's career touchdown passing record, and said he was impressed with the debut of freshman Shea Morenz.

Gardere's three touchdown passes in the Longhorns' 33-15 victory over North Texas on Saturday put him one ahead of Bobby Layne, who had held the record since 1947.

"Gardere had a good game, what with completing 14 of 19 for 201 yards and three touchdowns," Mackovic said.

Gardere's five TD passes in the first three games this year ties his output for all of 1991. The victory was the Longhorns first, boosting their record to 1-2 as they prepare to open their Southwest Conference season Saturday at Rice.

"All of our quarterbacks, but especially Peter, have learned to read and react in our offense, but that's what having three games behind us gives the team." Mackovic said.

Morenz, the much-touted recruit from San Angelo, saw his first college action during the second half Saturday. He was five of nine for 65 yards, although he threw one interception and fumbled twice.

"Morenz showed that he can create things, ad lib, and make some plays," Mackovic said.

"Quarterbacks have different styles — those who scramble to run and those who scramble to pass. Morenz is probably a little of both," he said.

Mackovic credited an aggressive Longhorn defense with allowing him to play Morenz and others.

"Our defense took control of the game early on, and that allowed us to get some of our younger players into the action and get them a little game experience," he said.

Texas has won 26 consecutive games against Rice, dating back to 1965, when the Owls won 20-17 in Austin. The Longhorns have dominated the series between the two teams, 57-20-1.

"I didn't know until this morning that Texas hadn't lost to Rice in 26 years," Mackovic said. "That's just an extra incentive for (Rice coach) Fred Goldsmith and his team. I don't think I am going to get any credit for all those previous years."

At least 18 SMU players draw suspensions

Associated Press

DALLAS — At least 18 Southern Methodist football players have been suspended for Saturday's game against Baylor for improperly receiving cash for books the athletic department bought.

The players were supposed to return the books for an athletic department credit. Instead, they obtained cash, according to an NCAA investigation.

The football players are among 50 SMU athletes who improperly sold the books.

Coach Tom Rossley declined to release the punished players' names but told The Dallas Morning News that "a substantial number of starters" will miss the game. He said some of the players will also be suspended for the Rice game Oct. 10.

The News quoted a source who reported that running back Kevin Shepard, wide receiver Brian Berry, defensive end Chad Patton, cornerback Marcus Malonson and defensive tackle Byron Bonds are among starters sitting out Saturday.

"This will be a test of our unity," Rossley said. "Each player will have to play better and each coach will have to coach better. I think we have great kids. We don't have thugs."

SMU had a choice of games to suspend the players but had to do it within the first six games, according to Janet Justus, the NCAA director of eligibility.

Players who have already sat out at least one game are wide receiver Derwin Ware, defensive back Isaiah Nelson, offensive lineman Travis Atwood, defensive end Adam Voyles, running back Jacques Smith, safety Cal Burdick, safety Mark Martinez and defensive tackle Kenny Rea.

Quarterback Mike Romo and center Marty Solombrino have sat out two games.

SMU investigated the matter in the spring and punished the athletes through a student judicial board. The athletic department handed its findings to the NCAA in May.

TECH: Aggies host Raiders

and ran over us. They threw a little bit when they had to, just something to do to kill time. They've got a great football team."

Last year, Tech dropped its fourth consecutive game to A&M, 37-14. Greg Hill paced the Aggies' 332-yard rushing effort with 137 yards of his own, while the Red Raiders amassed just eight yards of rushing offense.

Dykes says the Aggies' rushing attack again this year is based on muscle, not finesse.

"Their offense is different from Baylor's," he said. "Baylor's is an option oriented game, dependent on the triple option. (The Aggies') is more of 'Just hand it off and get out of the way.' Their running backs are out of this world."

Temple tightens grip on top spot in prep grid poll

Associated Press

DALLAS — Temple coach Bob McQueen arranged a fierce early-season schedule as a challenge for his players. He wanted them battle-tested in preparation for the district race and, hopefully, a run at a state title.

It worked better than McQueen expected. The No. 1 Wildcats not only learned their lessons, but they taught the rest of the state a few, too.

Temple (4-0) climbed to the top of the poll three weeks ago by knocking off defending champion Odessa Permian then maintained it the last two weeks in two rough road trips.

The Wildcats strengthened their grip this week, receiving 26 of 28 first-place votes in The Associated Press poll of Texas sports writers and broadcasters.

"The kids are certainly happy, but these kids sort of go about their business," he said. "This is the darndest group I've ever seen. If I had to give them one characteristic, it'd be work ethic. They're committed to practicing hard."

Their effort paid off the last two Friday night's in road games against San Angelo Central and then-No. 4 Converse Judson.

The Wildcats ended the Rockets' 41-game regular-season home winning streak by defeating Judson 37-21 in what McQueen called "one of the greatest high school games I've ever seen."

Judson's loss dropped it to seventh. Second-ranked Jersey Village and No. 3 Dallas Kimball held their positions, and No. 4 Odessa Permian broke its tie with Judson.

Marshall and Spring Westfield each moved up a spot to fifth and sixth. Beaumont West Brook remained eighth, and Midland Lee and Arlington Sam Houston swapped spots, with Lee ninth and Sam Houston dropping to No 10.

Temple's opponent this weekend, Tyler John Tyler, received the most votes of team's not making the Top 10, only five points behind Sam Houston.

The 4A poll was shuffled slightly as fallout from then-No. 2 Austin Reagan's upset loss to Waco University and then-No. 5 Bastrop's defeat to Austin LBJ.

Reagan dropped to seventh and Waco University earned five more votes than LBJ to secure No. 10.

Carthage, named first on 19 ballots, held its No. 1 ranking, but has only a 24-point lead over No. 2 Austin Westlake, the smallest margin of any class.

Waxahachie moved up one spot to No. 3 and Jasper leaped three places to No. 4, followed by defending champion A&M Consolidated and Corpus Christi Calallen, which was idle.

Houston C.E. King and Bay City each gained a spot, moving to No. 9 and No. 10.

Southlake Carroll, 3A's most dominant team since 1986, remained No. 1 following its state-record-55th-consecutive-regular-season victory. The latest victim was Springtown, considered the Dragons' toughest district foe.

Vernon and Bellville held their second and third positions. Anahuac benefited from losses by the three teams in front of it to take over No. 4.

Waco Robinson, which debuted in the poll last week, shot up to fifth, passing Carrizo Springs, which moved to No. 6 from ninth.

Hamshire-Fannett, which was tied by Beaumont Kelly, is seventh and Alvarado's loss dropped it No. 8.

Defending champion Groesbeck returned to the poll at No. 9 following a one-week absence and Reagan County enters the ranking at No. 10. Spots in the 3A poll were the most contested, as 43 teams received votes.

There was little movement in 2A and 1A, where top teams Freer and Bartlett easily defending their positions.

Class 2A's Albany slipped three spots to No. 6 following a tie with DeLeon, and Van Alstyne and Schulenburg moved up to No. 3 and No. 4 behind second-ranked Groveton.

Grapeland dropped one to No. 5, Pilot Point remained No. 7 and Universal City Randolph held onto No. 10. Boyd and Tidehaven swapped spots, with Boyd taking over No. 8 and Tidehaven sliding to ninth.

In Class A, Runge, Hico, Tenaha, Iola and Overton remained No. 2 through No. 6. Paducah stayed No. 10.

Daly not likely to change game

Associated Press

ENDICOTT, N.Y. — Don't look for Long John Daly to change his name, or his style, just because of a newly discovered short game that brought him his long-awaited second PGA Tour victory.

"To me this proved a point, that I don't have to change my game to win out here," said Daly, who played four almost-faultless rounds while sailing to a six-stroke victory in the $800,000 B.C. Open.

"I think I played aggressive and I hit the driver an awful lot. I think if the young kids, if they want to hit it long and play aggressive, I don't see why they can't," Daly said.

It wasn't surprising that the long-hitting Daly tamed the elongated and narrow fairways of the En-Joie Golf Club while falling one stroke shy of the tournament record with an 18-under-par 266. An average Daly drive travels about 284 yards, best on the tour.

But the 26-year-old displayed an unusually deft touch with his putter and irons. He had one bogey in the four rounds, that coming on the seventh hole on the opening day.

His 19 birdies included eight on En-Joie's four par-5 holes.

During Sunday's final round, Daly only ever really had to save himself once to avoid a bogey. That came on the par-3 No. 7 when he hit his tee shot into a bunker 20 feet from the cup. After bouncing his second shot 6 feet past the hole, he made an uphill putt for par.

"You can always tell when a guy is in a good sync. John was driving it straight and putting it well. The course it tailor-made for him if he's hitting it straight like he was," said Ken Green, who finished in a four-way tie for second.

"No doubt, my short game definitely won the tournament," said Daly, who said he couldn't recall the last time he played three rounds of golf without a bogey.

Or hit so straight off the tee.

"Thursday the critics were definitely right the way I hit the ball," Daly said, referring to the complaint that his accuracy is erratic.

"But the last three days I hit a lot of fairways. I just hit the ball solid. I hit some great long irons ... I putted real well," he said.

Daly, of Castle Rock, Colo., had missed the cut in six of his last nine tournaments and hadn't shot consecutive sub-70 rounds since the end of May when he finished second at the Kemper Open.

Daly said two days of rain, which softened the ground, allowed him to whack away with his drives. On the final hole Sunday, pumped with the adrenalin of his pending victory, Daly cracked his tee shot 340 yards.

"A wet golf course is an advantage for a long hitter. For a long hitter, if you hit it right or left, it doesn't roll as far," he said.

Nolan Henke, another runner-up, said Daly's striking distance already gives him an advantage.

"He can just hit it past the trouble spots with his driver. If there's an obstacle, he just flies over it," Henke said.

Phillies sweep Mets, 7-6

Associated Press

NEW YORK — Greg Mathews won for the first time since 1988, allowing eight hits over seven-plus innings to lift Philadelphia to a 7-6 victory and a doubleheader sweep of the New York Mets on Monday night.

In the first game, Mariano Duncan's infield single scored Ruben Amaro in the 10th inning as the Phillies won by the same 7-6 score.

Philadelphia has won nine of its last 10 games, while New York has lost its last six in a row. It was also Philadelphia's sixth straight victory over the Mets.

The Phillies, playing their third straight doubleheader, won both games with St. Louis on Saturday and split on Sunday.

Mathews (1-3) made seventh starts this season before winning. Since undergoing arthroscopic surgery while with St. Louis in 1988, he'd been shuttling between the minor leagues and signed as a non-roster player this spring.

Keith Shepherd gave up a run in the ninth, but finished for his second save.

Joe Vitko (0-1) allowed six runs on seven hits over 2⅓ innings in his first major-league start.

Pirates 10, Cubs 3

CHICAGO — Kevin Young and Gary Varsho each drove in three runs, and Tim Wakefield held Chicago to four hits in seven innings.

The victory was the fifth straight for the National League East Division champs and their 10th in 12 games. The Cubs lengthened their longest losing streak of the season to seven.

The Pirates played mostly with reserves as manager Jim Leyland decided to give the regulars a day off after clinching the division title on Sunday.

Wakefield (7-1), in his 12th start since being called up from Buffalo in late July, allowed all three Chicago runs, one unearned, walked one and struck out two. Jim Bullinger (2-7) pitched into the fifth inning and gave up six hits and six runs, five earned, in the loss.

The Pirates trailed 2-0 in the fourth when Andy Van Slyke walked, Orlando Merced singled and Albert Martin was safe on second baseman Ryne Sandberg's fielding error, his eighth of the year.

That loaded the bases, and one out later, Young singled for two runs, tying the score. Tom Prince followed with a double over center fielder Dwight Smith, scoring two more for a 4-2 lead.

Consecutive singles by Carlos Garcia and Van Slyke knocked out Bullinger in the fifth. Jeff Hartsock relieved and yielded an RBI single to Merced, a sacrifice fly to Martin and a run-scoring single to Young as the Bucs built a 7-2 lead.

A sacrifice fly by Mark Grace in the sixth trimmed the deficit to 7-3.

Cardinals 4, Expos 1

ST. LOUIS — Omar Olivares allowed five hits over seven innings and St. Louis got four runs in the sixth inning on five consecutive singles as the Cardinals beat the Expos.

Olivares (9-9) had three strikeouts and walked two for his first victory since Aug. 29. Lee Smith worked the ninth for his league-leading 41st save.

Rookie Gil Heredia, making his first start for Montreal because of a slight injury to Dennis Martinez, shut out St. Louis for five innings to run the Expos' streak of scoreless innings to 26.

After Heredia was taken out to start the sixth, Bill Krueger (0-2) gave up singles to Chuck Carr, Ozzie Smith and Bernard Gilkey to load the bases.

Felix Jose followed with a two-run single off reliever Sergio Valdez, and the third run scored when catcher Darrin Fletcher threw wildly to second trying to get Jose.

AL: Chicago's 9-4 victory ends Twins' playoff bid

(From 1C)

is appropriate."

General manager Sandy Alderson agreed, saying, "We had an opportunity to do it on the field but we just couldn't get it down. It's been one of those seasons."

La Russa, Honeycutt, Alderson and Mark McGwire were among the A's who gathered in a room in the back of Mac's Bar and Grill in Jack London Square in Oakland to watch the White Sox-Twins game on a big-screen television.

When the White Sox won it, the A's cheered and gave each other high-fives. They passed out hats that proclaimed "1992 Division Champs" and included the words "Catch the Fever."

The Athletics also popped $100 bottles of Dom Perignon at the news. Among those in the celebration was team owner Walter A. Haas Jr.

Oakland has lost five of its last six games. They play again Tuesday night at home against Texas, the team that got Canseco in a trade for Ruben Sierra, Bobby Witt and Jeff Russell.

White Sox 9, Twins 4

The Twins, who in late July still had the best record in baseball, became the latest World Series winner that failed to repeat, losing to Chicago and being eliminated. The New York Yankees in 1977-78 were the last team to win two straight titles.

Minnesota was 60-38 on July 26 and held a three-game lead over Oakland. But the Twins went through a 9-19 slump, fell out of first place for good on Aug. 5 and steadily fell out of contention.

The Twins never were closer than 4½ games to Oakland in September. They were mathematically eliminated Monday night in the Metrodome, the noisy site of last year's 10-inning, 1-0 victory over Atlanta in Game 7 of the World Series.

A subdued crowd of 16,329 watched as Chicago dispatched the Twins. Tim Raines homered and tied a career-high with five RBIs and George Bell homered and drove in three runs.

The White Sox hit a season-high six doubles and moved a game behind Minnesota in the race for second place. Only about 3,000 fans were left by the time the game ended.

Indians 6, Yankees 4

CLEVELAND — Reggie Jefferson went for 4 for 4 and set up the tiebreaking run in the eighth inning as Cleveland beat New York.

Sam Militello (3-3) retired the first two batters in the eighth before Jefferson singled. After a wild pitch, Wayne Kirby pinch-ran for Jefferson and scored when Carlos Martinez singled for a 5-4 lead.

Russ Springer relieved and walked Mark Whiten. Infield singles by Junior Ortiz and Thomas Howard scored Martinez.

Orioles 7, Red Sox 3

BALTIMORE — Brady Anderson hit two homers, becoming the eighth player in major-league history to hit 20 home runs and steal 50 bases in a season, and the Orioles beat the Red Sox.

Injury may keep Canseco out of 1st game back in Oakland

N.Y. Times News Service

OAKLAND, Calif. — When the A's open their final homestand of the season, they will see a familiar face in the opposing dugout.

And in the opposing dugout is where it might stay.

Jose Canseco, who was last seen on the Coliseum field leaving the on-deck circle the night of August 31, returns at 7:05 tonight with the Texas Rangers for the first game of a three-game series.

But after playing 16 innings Friday night against Seattle, Canseco complained of soreness in his back and was rested Saturday. On Sunday, he was scheduled to start but was scratched when he said his shoulder was bothering him, and his condition now is day-to-day.

Four weeks ago, Canseco was tapped on the shoulder while waiting to bat against the Baltimore Orioles and was told he had been traded to the Rangers, for pitchers Bobby Witt and Jeff Russell and outfielder Ruben Sierra.

Although the departure of Canseco and the prospect of facing him were hot topics immediately after the trade, the A's have been too preoccupied with winning the American League West title to give much thought to his homecoming.

"That's so secondary now," said A's reliever Dennis Eckersley.

"Sure. I would like to face him. It will be exciting. But we've been trying to get this wrapped up."

Outfielder Willie Wilson added: "He is not even on my mind. Not that I don't like him, but I haven't thought about him very much."

And third baseman Carney Lansford said, "It will be a little strange seeing him out there with another team."

Shortstop Walt Weiss concurred. "It will be different," Weiss said. "It will be a little strange at first.

"But that's baseball; people move around all the time. I am sure he's feeling a lot more comfortable with the new team now."

Comfortable, perhaps, but also in some pain.

This is the second time in five games Canseco was did not play after originally being listed in the starting lineup.

If those two ailments sound familiar, it's because they have dogged Canseco for most of the season. He even spent two weeks on the disabled list just before the All-Star break.

The Rangers have contemplated resting Canseco for the rest of the season rather than risking further injury.

After starting well with the Rangers, Canseco, bothered by his injuries, has seen his production diminish. He is just 4 for his last 31 with 12 strikeouts.

The Treasury Department sold $10.2 billion in three-month bills at an average discount rate of 2.73 percent, down from 2.91 percent last week. An additional $10.3 billion was sold in six-month bills at an average discount rate of 2.85 percent, down from 2.93 percent last week.

The three-month bill rate was the lowest since they sold for 2.686 percent on Oct. 29, 1962. The six-month bill rate was the lowest since they averaged 2.846 percent on Nov. 9, 1962.

Dollar falls

NEW YORK — The dollar fell Monday as currency traders grew increasingly concerned about the U.S. economy and the presidential race.

In New York, the dollar fell to 119.65 yen from 120.75 yen late Friday.

In New York, the British pound traded at $1.7295, more expensive than $1.7150 Friday.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, down 76.73 points last week, recovered 25.94 points to 3,276.26.

Advancing issues outnumbered declines by about 7 to 6 on the New York Stock Exchange.

Activity was curtailed by the observance of Rosh Hashana, the Jewish new year.

Southwestern Bell moves to Texas

■ Company relocates headquarters from St. Louis to San Antonio.

By Kelley Shannon
Associated Press writer

SAN ANTONIO — Southwestern Bell Corp. said Monday it is moving its corporate headquarters here from St. Louis, partly to be closer to its telephone business in Mexico.

"Today we win the economic Super Bowl, the Oscar and the gold medal," Gov. Ann Richards said in a news conference announcing the move.

Southwestern Bell Corp. Chairman Edward E. Whitacre Jr. said the relocation is intended to position the $9.3 billion company for increased growth and new business opportunities.

"This move will put us closer to more of our major growth markets and customers," Whitacre said in the announcement. "Another consideration is our work with Telmex, the Mexican telephone company. That's an important market for us, and San Antonio serves as the gateway to Mexico."

Southwestern Bell and partners Grupo Carso of Mexico and France Telecom in 1990 bought controlling interest in Telefonos de Mexico, or Telmex. The partnership has said it will spend $2.5 billion a year for the next five or six years rebuilding Mexico's phone system.

Moving the Southwestern Bell corporate headquarters to San Antonio will bring about 500 jobs here, Whitacre said.

About 400 jobs will be filled by employees moving from St. Louis. The remaining positions — vacated by workers who didn't want to relocate — will be filled locally, he said. Employees who leave the company will receive a severance package.

The move will begin in late December and be completed in March.

More than 10,100 Bell employees will remain in the St. Louis area, as will the headquarters for Southwestern Bell Telephone, Southwestern Bell Services, Southwestern Bell Yellow Pages, Southwestern Bell Technology Resources Inc., Southwestern Bell Telecom and the telephone company's Missouri division.

The jobs coming to Texas will be "high-skill jobs of the future," said Richards, noting that Southwestern Bell Corp. is the 29th-largest firm in the United States and the 63rd-largest in the world.

"Southwestern Bell is now connected," Richards said as a banner reading "There's no place like our new home" was unfurled at the 13-story Bell building in downtown. The International Bank of Commerce purchased the building last week for the relocation.

"It's nice to bag the big one," said Mario Hernandez, president of the San Antonio Economic Development Foundation.

Hernandez attributed Southwestern Bell's decision partly to the recent location of several telephone-intensive businesses in San Antonio, including an American Airlines reservations center, Citicorp and QVC, a telemarketing firm. He also stressed Southwestern Bell's Mexico connection.

"It'll be one of the biggest investors in Mexico," he said.

San Antonio Mayor Nelson Wolff praised the move.

"This is a tremendous vote of confidence for San Antonio's business climate and economic future," he said.

On the other hand, St. Louis Mayor Vince Schoemehl said he was sorry to hear that the headquarters would be leaving the city.

"Hearing that Southwestern Bell is transferring just about 5 percent of its employees from St. Louis to San Antonio is like learning some of our favorite neighbors are moving away," Schoemehl said. "Fortunately, many more of our neighbors at Southwestern Bell are remaining in St. Louis than are going.

Whitacre said the decision to move began almost a year ago. He said a formal study was conducted to determine the best path for the company's future.

"The answer was conclusive: a move to Texas would best position our corporation for increased growth and for new business opportunities," he said.

Machine-tool orders plunge

N.Y. Times News Service

Orders for American-made machine tools plunged 23.3 percent in August from the previous month's level, according to a monthly survey by the industry's trade association.

The level of machine tools orders gyrates wildly from one month to the next, analysts said, but they added that the August numbers indicated signs of sluggishness remaining in the nation's manufacturing industries, which appear reluctant to spend money to upgrade their plants and equipment.

Machine tool orders were 33.1 percent lower than they were in August of last year. But for the first eight months of the year, orders rose 1.9 percent, compared with the similar period last year.

"The year-ago comparison is cause for concern, because it suggests that the overall economic trends are not strong," said John Jacobson, president of Jacobson & Associates, a Philadelphia consulting firm. "The issue is one of confidence in the economy. Businesses are questioning whether they have enough confidence in the economy to invest in new machinery and in upgrading their plants."

Hard Rock Cafe chain plans casino

LOS ANGELES — Hoping that its musical motif proves as alluring to gamblers as it does to diners, the Hard Rock Cafe America will break ground on a 325-room Las Vegas rock 'n' roll hotel/casino in the spring, the company announced.

"It will be similar in feel and tone to a Hard Rock Cafe," Hard Rock spokeswoman Valerie Van Galder said Monday.

The 12-story complex, with a 130-foot smashed guitar protruding from the roof, is the restaurant chain's first venture beyond the food business, said Van Galder. The complex will be built next to the Las Vegas Hard Rock Cafe.

"We think it will be a huge hit," Van Galder said. "We've done a lot of market research. There are a lot of people in our target age group who like to gamble."

Northwest Airlines doubles its reticketing fee

NEW YORK (AP) — Northwest Airlines on Monday doubled the fee it charges leisure passengers to change flights or switch their tickets to get a better discount, but its competitors didn't go along.

The industry tried last month to raise the $25 fee to $50, but failed when some airlines refused to adopt broader fare increases.

Northwest's increase, effective last Friday, applies only to advance purchace non-refundable tickets, most commonly used by tourists.

Delta Air Lines spokesman Neil Monroe said the airline has no plans to match the increase. Other airlines, including American and United, said they were studying it.

Northwest also increased the amount it pays to travel agents for reissuing tickets from $5 to $15.

Aside from the administrative costs, changes by leisure travelers foul airlines' complicated system of keeping precisely the correct number of seats available for expected last-minute ticket purchases at full price.

When a tourist changes flights, it makes one seat available that the airline might not be able to sell and takes up a seat that might have been filled by a business traveler.

Airlines first gave travelers the right to make changes to non-refundable tickets this spring. It started when American tried to set up a simplier fare structure and others followed suit.

During the summer, when each week seemed to bring a new fare promotion, many tourists paid the $25 to switch to a lower fare.

Friend's advice sound; loan might not be

By Bill Doyle

Q: Two years ago, a good friend of mine purchased some furniture on a store's credit plan at 19.5 percent interest. Because of large and unexpected medical expenses, she is usually two months behind in payments and sometimes pays only the minimum amount, thereby accruing large finance charges.

Doyle

She has approximately $1,500 in a savings account and about 20 $50 U.S. savings bonds purchased through a payroll savings plan during the past 10 years. I plan to help her with a loan, but she won't be able to pay off the whole furniture debt.

When she asked me what she should do, I said she should cash the bonds and use that money and her savings account money to pay off the balance of the furniture debt, then get on some kind of a budget.

Am I correct?

A: You are, in advising your friend to redeem her bonds and apply the proceeds and her savings account money toward paying off the high-interest furniture loan.

With savings accounts now paying about 3 percent and her savings bonds accruing interest at either 7.5 or 6 percent, depending on when each was issued, it stands to reason she will come out ahead by getting out from under that 19.5 percent debt load. That's basic.

Whether or not you'd do the right thing by making a personal loan is problematical. Your friend might be just as late or even downright negligent repaying you as she has been meeting her debt to that store.

Many friendships have gone on the rocks over money matters. If you do make that loan, make sure she signs a promissory note and, if possible, get some kind of collateral.

Q: I have a $20,000, six-month certificate of deposit with daily compounding. Some banks offer CDs with continuous compounding. Is that better than daily compounding?

A: Not really. Compounding is the process by which interest earns more interest. So it stands to reason that the more frequently interest is compounding, the more interest you get.

Semiannual compounding is better than annual compounding, quarterly compounding better than semiannual, monthly better than quarterly, daily better than monthly. But there is virtually no difference between daily compounding and continuous compounding. Assuming the same stated rate of interest, the difference between daily and continuous compounding is infinitesimal.

The thing to watch for on CDs and other interest-paying investments is the "annual effective yield," which tells you exactly what your money earns, and which increases with the frequency of compounding — until daily and continuous compounding makes the choice between those two a toss-up.

Q: I'm a conservative investor, 35 years old with no dependents. My largest asset is rental property generating more than $1,000 monthly income. I also have around $25,000 in mutual funds.

My tax preparer tells me I do not have enough tax deductions, so I'm considering borrowing $10,000 against my rental income, writing off the interest annually and investing the $10,000.

Should I get that loan or remain debt-free?

A: Stay out of hock, unless you can invest the $10,000 where it will earn more than the interest you would pay on the loan. And that's unlikely.

Tax deductions reduce the income tax you pay. But a deduction for interest payments does not cut your tax by an amount equal to — or even close to — your interest cost.

There now are three federal income tax brackets — 15, 28 and 31 percent. Let's say you obtain the loan and pay $1,000 annual interest. Depending on your tax bracket, that would cut your income tax by either $150, $280 or $310. You would be out of pocket either $850, $720 or $690.

Win or lose, Cowboys expect ugly an game

N.Y. Times News Service

IRVING — Last December, Dallas Cowboys offensive coaches picked apart films of the 1991 Philadelphia Eagles, rummaging through the rubble created by one of the National Football League's all-time great defenses, searching for a hint of hope.

They found one.

"We made a big point of looking at how the teams that beat them went about it," center Mark Stepnoski recalled. "Quarterbacks didn't worry about completing 50 percent of their passes. Teams didn't worry about throwing for more than 200-220 yards. Running backs didn't worry about getting 100. And they focused on avoiding turnovers, at all costs."

Added quarterback Steve Beuerlein: "The teams that beat the Eagles didn't worry about looking pretty."

In their six 1991 losses, the Eagles allowed an average of 110 yards passing on an average nine completions. Along with the average of 84 yards rushing on a 3.1 yards-per-carry average, those numbers make up an unorthodox way to win a football game.

The Cowboys managed to give the Eagles one of those losses in 1991 by adopting a rather homely — and humbling — offensive philosophy. In Dallas' 25-13 victory Dec. 15 at Veterans Stadium, a victory that ensured that the Cowboys, and not the Eagles, would qualify for the playoffs, coach Jimmy Johnson's team won ugly.

Beuerlein, playing that day in place of injured starter Troy Aikman, couldn't have opened any uglier. He completed two of his 17 first-half passes for 17 yards. The performance caused observers to wonder about Beuerlein's arm; it caused Johnson to congratulate Beuerlein on his head, and on his execution of the game plan.

"Avoid the big negative plays," Johnson said. "Sacks. Turnovers. When they get one, they go into a feeding frenzy."

Beuerlein went on to complete just nine of his 31 passes, for 145 yards. But many of his incompletions were of the safety-first variety. His errant throws were intentional, sort of, for they kept the Eagles from intercepting any passes and they prevented the Philly line from recording more than one sack.

"It's not a game plan that says, 'Don't make plays,'" offensive coordinator Norv Turner said. "It just says, 'Don't force something when it isn't there.' We threw 31 passes overall, so it certainly wasn't a so-called 'conservative' approach."

But the Cowboys concede that even with their offense — which is averaging 29 points per game and ranked third in the NFC — a scoring explosion cannot be counted on against the Eagles. On Monday, when these two 3-0 rivals from the NFC East collide in Philadelphia, the visitors are not counting on large individual days.

"We still expect our offense to be successful," Beuerlein said. "The more Norv watches the Eagles, the more he understands. And the more comfortable he gets. But he's also a realist."

Can Aikman get 300 yards passing? It hasn't been accomplished against the Eagles since December 1990, when Timm Rosenbach of the Phoenix Cardinals did it.

"What we do depends on how the game is going," Aikman said. "The score will determine whether we can afford to say, 'Let's do everything we can to avoid the bad play.'"

Can Emmitt Smith get 100 yards rushing? It hasn't been done against Philadelphia since September 1989, when Washington's Gerald Riggs reached that plateau.

"There are some games, honestly, when you do think about 100 yards," Smith said. "Against the Eagles, you don't worry about the pride thing. If a running back thinks he's going to have a big day against them, he's kidding himself. This isn't the kind of game where we're going to be moving the ball up and down the field against them."

Field position, then, is key. And "field position" will be a Cowboys catch phrase this week. Don't cost yourself 10 yards by allowing a sack. Don't give up the ball in Eagles territory, thus allowing them a "short" field.

"Those are the same themes we talk about every week," said Turner, whose offense through three games this season has given up just two sacks, thrown just two interceptions and has not lost a fumble. "But when you look at film of the Eagles, you see their defense giving them the ball in great field position. Or you see the defense scoring touchdowns themselves. Last year, that's how they won."

In 1991, the Eagles offense used that kind of help as a crutch. The Philadelphia offense scored 25 touchdowns, just five more than the Eagles defense allowed. That factor has been altered this season, of course. In 1991, the Eagles didn't have quarterback Randall Cunningham, who was injured and in a cast. They didn't have running back Herschel Walker, who was in Minnesota and in a funk.

interest."

Dallas and Detroit had expressed interest in Jackson while the Washington Redskins earlier had pulled out of the bidding.

The ruling that gave the four players their freedom had come in the aftermath of a federal court striking down the NFL's Plan B system.

Jackson went to court last week, along with Veris, wide receiver Webster Slaughter and running back D.J. Dozier. A federal judge declared them unrestricted free agents and barred interference from their former teams, which had claimed exclusive negotiating rights with the four even though their contracts had lapsed.

"It was just about what I considered a basic freedom," Veris said. "I just felt they (the Patriots) had a grasp on me and that I couldn't go any where. The court was the only way I could win my free agency.

"It's about time more players have that opportunity."

Carmen Policy, the 49ers president, said he didn't necessarily see the signing of Veris as a harbinger of true free agency.

"We view Garin's situation as unique," he said. "It was a window of opportunity for both of us and we took advantage of it. From a legal standpoint, we don't see the Keith Jackson situation as being (a precedent) as far as anything that's going to happen in the future."

Veris' agent, Ray Anderson, said Green Bay, Cleveland, and Buffalo also had expressed interest but that his client didn't pursue those possibilities because he wanted to play for a team close to his home in Menlo Park, Calif.

"Those clubs, frankly, didn't have an opportunity to present an offer because we didn't give them one," Anderson said. "Garin wasn't driven by the dollar ... and it wasn't fair to anyone to string out the process. Freedom of choice is about freedom of choice and Garin had a chance to say, 'I want to go here and if I get what I want, then I'm free not to choose to talk to anyone else.' That's the decision we made."

Veris will receive a pro-rated salary of $650,000 for this season and $730,000 in the second year, plus incentives. Patriots spokesman Pat Hanlon said the team's last offer was a 1992 base salary of $575,000 with incentives pushing that potentially as high as $650,000, and a 1993 base salary of $625,000.

San Francisco coach George Seifert said Veris is projected as a replacement for injured defensive end Larry Roberts, who is on injured reserve after tearing ligaments in his right knee.

To make room for Veris on their roster, the 49ers waived wide receiver Troy Kyles.

Slaughter and Dozier were still trying to hook on with teams. Slaughter had been with the Cleveland Browns and Dozier with the Detroit Lions, although he is currently playing baseball for the New York Mets.

In a ruling last week in Minneapolis, U.S. District Judge David Doty told the four players they could have five days to sign with a team of their choosing and that their former teams could do nothing to prevent it.

Doty said he granted the players free agency because they were still being harmed by the NFL's Plan B system, which was outlawed by a Sept. 10 court decision.

Under Plan B, NFL teams could protect 37 players on their roster and retain their rights, even if their contract had lapsed. A jury determined the system was illegal because it was overly restrictive.

onds left. And Detroit's Brett Perriman was tackled at the 3-yard line as time ran out in Tampa Bay's 27-23 win over the Lions.

Moreover, Dennis Green's Vikings re-established the form of their 4-0 preseason with a 42-7 rout of Cincinnati as Rich Gannon solved the blitzing defenses of Ron Lynn, the Bengals defensive coordinator.

Gannon, playing with a slight break in his throwing hand, was 25 of 32 for 318 yards and Boomer Esiason was benched for Donald Hollas.

"That's a hell of a receiving corps," Lynn said of Minnesota's Cris Carter (11 catches, 124 yards), Anthony Carter, Steve Jordan and Hassan Jones.

Pittsburgh's bubble burst with a 17-3 loss in Green Bay as Rod Woodson, one of the few name players on Bill Cowher's upstart team, made three major mistakes that led to both of the Packers' TDs. And Brett Favre continued to upstage the injured Don Majkowski.

Tampa Bay's 27-23 win over Detroit showed the Lions how tough it is to stay at the top after going from 6-10 to 12-4 in one year.

Now it's Tampa Bay with all the expectations.

The reason is Sam Wyche, who has taken the talent the Bucs got with so many high first-rounders and gotten it to play. On the winning TD pass to Ron Hall with 49 seconds left, Wyche sent in two plays, then let Vinny Testaverde choose one. Now, Testaverde is playing with confidence for the first time in his career.

"Sam called that play, then called another one," Testaverde said. "I said, 'Let's go with the first one.'"

But Wyche is also aware that the Bucs, tied for first with the Vikings in a weak division, aren't ready yet for total prime time.

"This demonstrates some of the things we've been trying to convince ourselves about," he said. "That is: That we are good enough to beat a good football team, the divisional champion, in their house."

REPLAY ANYONE? The San Francisco-New Orleans game Sunday night was a seminar for anyone interested in restoring instant replay.

First, the 49ers lost a touchdown when head linesman Aaron Pointer (brother of the singing Pointer Sisters) ruled that Jerry Rice had fumbled before hitting the goal line. The Saints recovered in the end zone and went on for a TD of their own.

Later, the Saints lost two fumbles when the fumbler appeared "down by contact." And another play was ruled down when it appeared clear that it was a fumble.

"Terrible," Rice said.

But Sam Mills of the Saints was more philosophical.

"We got one that probably would have been reversed with Jerry Rice on the goal line," he said. "We got some and they got some. It all evens out."

VERSATILE TABLE/BENCH

Here's an authentic reproduction of those table-benches used by our forefathers. Flip up the table top and you've got a seat for 2; pull it down and you've got a game table or study desk. The table shown was made of knotty pine, but any fancy plywood will do. Trace the full-size pattern onto wood, saw out the parts and assemble. The plan includes a materials list and easy-to-follow directions.
