Bank deposits reflect continued recovery

By RON GILMORE
Business-Oil Writer

Although many Midland bankers experienced a "soft loan" market, both loan and deposit totals increased in third quarter 1984, continuing a recovery trend from the downward slide of 1983.

Total deposits reached $1.5 billion by third quarter's end on September 30. That is an increase of more than $13 million from the second quarter's $1.48 billion. Total loans rose $14.4 million from $787 million in second quarter to $801 million, third quarter.

The increase continues a growing confidence in local economy following the bank failures of 1983, in which a recessive economy coupled with a crippled oil industry forced the bankruptcies of several area banks.

Reactions to the third quarter figures were mixed, but most Midland bankers were pleased with the quarter's activity.

"It was a good quarter for us," said Tom Wageman, president of RepublicBank First National Bank. "We made a lot of progress."

David Jones, president of Clay-Desta National Bank agreed.

"We did well," he said. "Our earnings continued to go up." Jones attributed the growth to an increase in total market share.

"Hard work" is the reason Ed Jones, president of Texas Commerce gives for that bank's successful first quarter in business. "Business has been great and we expect it to keep growing," he said. "We worked hard," said Jones. "This town was built on hard work and we plan to apply that same principle to the bank."

Texas Commerce opened its doors July 23, more than three weeks into the third quarter.

Another area banker also attributed its growth to hard work.

"It was definately hard work," said Bob Craig, comptroller for Western State Bank. "It was a pretty even growth — around 25 to 30 percent," he said. "We're satisfied."

While bankers were encouraged over the increase in deposits there was still some dissatisfaction with loan activity in third quarter.

"Business has been pretty flat," said Bill Franklin, president of First City National Bank. "It was a soft loan market and there was not much activity in the oil industry."

Franklin was optimistic, however about the fourth quarter.

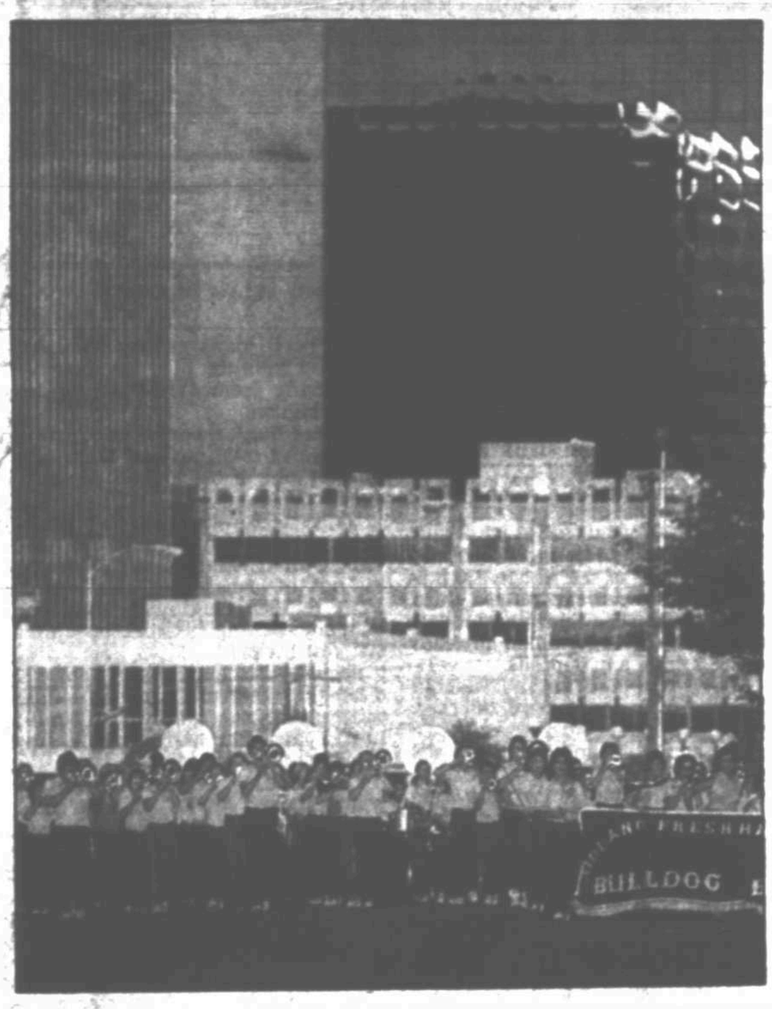

"It should pick up," he said. "It's the end of the year and there is generally more activity then."

Ray Moudy, chairman of the board for Security National Bank was also displeased with loan activity.

"It's been a little softer than in prior years," said Moudy. "We've been trying to decrease deposit-loan ratios to increase liquidity."

Security National is principally a consumer loans bank, said Moudy.

Midland's 'Black Friday' more shock than surprise

By LANA CUNNINGHAM
Assistant City Editor

It was a year ago. In mid-October. On a Friday. The bottom finally fell out of the world known as Midland, Texas.

The Eagle that had flown over this city for 93 years had fallen.

The proud bird represented the corporate entity that had played a major role in building Midland. It had supported every facet of this community since its beginnings in 1890. The First National Bank had left its Eagle symbol stamped indelibly upon the people, the business, the cultural, the recreational, the social components of Midland.

On Oct. 14, 1983, the world of FNB ended and the people whose lives were so closely attached to it — like marionettes — hit the ground.

A year later, Midlanders look back and still call it Black Friday.

By the time the announcement came at 6:15 p.m. that day, the death of FNB should have come as no surprise. But in a city whose optimism had flowed more freely than the oil during the boom years, it still was a shock.

Looking back through news files, it was easy to see the chain of events that led to the bank's slow death. At the time, however, the facts became entwined with the community's emotions and the people's refusal to face up to the the approaching reality. It was like watching a close friend or relative slowly die and yet hoping for a miracle. But the bank, which had pulled so many people and companies from the edge of the grave, had run out of miracles.

FNB had basked in the warm sun of the oil boom and, as analysts now say, tried to get too big too fast. The first public sign that everything wasn't okay was the report that the bank building had been sold.

Then came a story in the Feb. 25, 1983, edition of Wall Street Journal that FNB had boosted its loan-loss reserves. Prior to that, in September 1982 there had been a run on the bank with $300 million in deposits withdrawn.

Bank officials voiced numerous denials. But in April 1983, Chairman Charles Fraser resigned. Suddenly. Unexpectedly. With no future plans.

Vice presidential debate: Neither comes in second

By DONALD M. ROTHBERG
AP Political Writer

PHILADELPHIA — George Bush contended he'd "turned it around" for the Republican ticket, while Geraldine Ferraro claimed "Two out of two ain't bad" after the vice presidential candidates engaged in a sharp duel for campaign momentum that drew favorable reviews from the tops of their tickets.

The vice presidential debate covered both domestic and foreign policy, and the two candidates sparred over issues ranging from taxes and abortion to terrorism and the depth of their experience. It was their only debate of the campaign.

An Associated Press panel of seven debate judges scored Bush the winner. Four of the debate experts called him the winner outright, one called it a close victory for Ms. Ferraro, and two scored it a tie. The same panel called Walter F. Mondale a clear winner over President Reagan in their debate last Sunday.

The first hint of public reaction to their 90-minute debate at the Philadelphia Civic Center came from an ABC News poll that said Bush was named the winner by 42 percent and Ms. Ferraro by 33 percent, while 25 percent called it a tie. A total of 681 people were contacted in the hour after the debate, and the poll had a margin of error of plus or minus 4.5 points.

Another poll, commissioned by USA Today, also showed a plurality of those surveyed thought Bush had bested Ms. Ferraro.

Bush and Ms. Ferraro each stepped on the stage with a clear mission as they debated four days after Mondale's strong showing against Reagan in the first of two debates. Reagan and Mondale will debate again Oct. 21.

Bush, seeking to reverse the momentum gained by Mondale, took an aggressive stance, often aiming his attacks at the presidential nominee rather than Ms. Ferraro.

In the aftermath of the Mondale-Reagan debate, the Democratic ticket had gained a few points in polls and Mondale's leadership ratings in surveys rose dramatically.

Using a more subdued style, the New York congresswoman sought to demonstrate she was qualified for the nation's second highest office and could assume the presidency if necessary.

"I will be a leader," she said when asked whether she thought the Soviets might try to take advantage of the fact she is a woman. "If the Soviet were to ever believe they could challenge the United States with any sort of nuclear forces, or otherwise, if I were in a position of leadership in this country they would be assured that they would be met with swift, concise and certain retaliation."

Bush said the Democrats were offering only "weakness, despair, disrespect" while Reagan had "brought America back".

After the debate, Reagan telephoned his vice president and a White House spokesman, Marlin Fitzwater, said of the president, "I'm sure he's delighted with the vice president's performance."

Mondale and Ms. Ferraro also talked by phone. The Democratic presidential nominee said his running mate was "strong, intelligent, dignified and powerful."

Mondale and Ms. Ferraro will appear together later today at a rally in Madison, Wis.

Bush's schedule called for campaign appearances in New Jersey and Florida, while Reagan was leaving on a whistlestop train trip across Ohio.

British officials among 24 injured in bombing

Two guests killed in IRA-claimed attack on Brighton hotel

Associated Press Writer

BRIGHTON, England — A bomb claimed by the IRA exploded early today at a hotel where Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher was staying, killing two people and injuring 24, including a Cabinet minister and a member of Parliament. Mrs. Thatcher was not hurt.

The Irish Republican Army issued a statement in Dublin saying the bombing, which tore a gaping hole in the seafront Grand Hotel, was an attempt "against the British Cabinet and the Tory warmongers."

IRA guerrillas are fighting to force British soldiers out of Northern Ireland. The statement said: "Thatcher will now realize that Britain cannot occupy our country, torture our prisoners and shoot our people in their own streets and get away with it."

"Today we were unlucky, but remember, we have only to be lucky once: You will have to be lucky always. Give Ireland peace and there will be no war," the statement said.

The statement was signed by P. O'Neill, a pseudonym often used by Sinn Fein, the political wing of the IRA. It was distributed through Press Association, the British domestic news service.

Mrs. Thatcher, at the Grand Hotel along with most of her 22-member Cabinet for Conservative Party's annual conference, said the explosion blew out the windows of her second-floor room. She was taken to a police station in this English Channel resort and told reporters: "I'm very well, thank you."

The injured included Mrs. Thatcher's trade minister, Norman Tebbit; the Australian ambassador to Britain, Alf Parsons; and the Conservatives' whip in the House of Commons, John Wakeham.

Brighton police said there were two confirmed fatalities, but did not release the names of the dead.

Queen Elizabeth II, in Kentucky on a tour of American horse breeding farms, was "shocked and horrified" at the bombing and sent a message "of sympathy and deep concern" to Mrs. Thatcher, royal spokesman Michael Shea said in Lexington.

Mrs. Thatcher said she was still awake when the blast occurred at 3:10 a.m., working on a speech she planned to deliver to the conference today. Her husband Denis was in bed. "All the windows went, and the bathroom was extremely badly damaged. We were very lucky," Mrs. Thatcher said.

Six hours after the blast, Mrs. Thatcher kept her eyes firmly closed as the conference convened on schedule with a prayer for the dead and injured.

"We intend to continue with our conference ... because those who wish to intimidate democracy must be shown that whatever means they use, those means will in fact fail," party chairman John Selwyn Gummer said.

The delegates then went on to the scheduled debate on strife-torn Northern Ireland.

Home Secretary Leon Brittan told a news conference that police officials determined the explosion was caused by a bomb containing 15-20 pounds of explosives.

'Slim' Congress rejects debt bill

By TOM RAUM
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — The Senate, its ranks thinned by the early departure of senators expecting a congressional adjournment, rejected vital legislation to raise the national debt limit early today, prompting a new government financial squeeze and further delaying the end of the 98th Congress.

Military aircraft were dispatched at the request of Majority Leader Howard H. Baker Jr. to bring back the missing senators for another vote on the debt limit today.

The Senate rejected the measure 45-14.

High absenteeism, combined with a Democratic gesture of political defiance to protest spiraling federal deficits under the Reagan administration, provided the margin of negative votes that torpedoed the bill.

The bill would raise federal borrowing authority by $251 billion, to $1.824 trillion. The Treasury Department has been blocked from borrowing money because its debts have reached the limit allowed by current law: $1.573 trillion.

Soon after the vote, Baker abruptly recessed the Senate until 11 a.m. today. He said he would keep the Senate in session until the debt limit increase passes.

"As soon as I have the votes to win, we'll try it again," Baker said. He said he was fairly optimistic about obtaining the votes.

"The Democrats always play this game, it's a ritual and drill," Baker said. "It always produces a level of brinksmanship. This time we fell off the edge of the bluff."

Democrats said they wanted to force majority Republicans to come up with the support to raise the debt ceiling.

"Republicans have to accept the responsibilities for the deficits," Sen. Donald W. Riegle Jr., D-Mich., said. "Democrats aren't going to take them off the hook."

Many conservative Republicans traditionally vote against moves to increase the nation's borrowing limits. This time they were joined by enough Democrats to make the vote stick.

The vote came as both houses of Congress were the on the verge of adjourning for the year so members could go home and campaign.

Earlier Thursday, Congress had sent to President Reagan an omnibus spending bill needed to keep most of the government operating.

That cleared the decks for adjournment, and the outcome of the debt limit vote, which had been scheduled as the last business of the current Congress, clearly caught leaders of both the House and the Senate by surprise.

In fact, top House leaders had already left the city when the vote came, after making the traditional end-of-session phone call earlier in the evening to the president to tell him Congress' work was just about wrapped up.

Baker said he chose to recess the Senate immediately rather than to try another vote early this morning because of the margin of defeat.

Voting against the debt limit increase were 28 Democrats and 18 Republicans. Forty senators were absent.

"We'll get most of them back," Baker said.

The actual margin of defeat of the debt limit increase was less than reflected in the final vote, since a number of GOP senators, following the lead of Baker, switched their votes from yes to no at the last minute.

Baker switched his votes for tactical reasons. Under Senate rules, only a senator who votes on the prevailing side can move for a vote to be reconsidered. Baker made such a motion as soon as the vote tally was announced.

"Once he changed his vote, it was the signal for the others to change," a Baker aide said.

If Congress fails to finish its work by midnight tonight, then it would take a presidential decree to keep lawmakers working, since Congress had already voted to adjourn the 1984 session of Congress by Friday at the latest.

Baker said he will seek such a presidential order if necessary.

Sen. Bob Dole, R-Kan., chairman of the Senate Finance Committee, said the Democrats "were just playing games" in opposing the debt limit increase.

He said a number of Democrats would switch their votes and support the increase once they saw that a majority of Republicans were going along — a likelihood also suggested by several Democrats.

Some Democratic votes will be needed to pass the measure. Republican control of the Senate is by a relatively thin 55-45 margin.

Wholesale prices fall third month

WASHINGTON (AP) — Wholesale prices, down two months running, fell 0.2 percent in September, the government said today. The drop was the sharpest since January 1983 and marked the first time in eight years that prices fell for two straight months.

Today's good news meant that, for the first nine months of the year, prices at the wholesale level rose a minuscule 1.9 percent, surprising economists who had forecast an inflation rate approaching 5 percent for all of 1984.

Much of the credit for last month's performance went to lower food and gasoline prices.

Food prices fell 0.4 percent, the fifth time in the last six months that those prices have dropped. Prices for pork and eggs continued their sharp declines while the costs of fresh vegetables and fish were also off.

Gasoline prices declined for the fourth month running, although the 0.5 percent decline was off sharply from the previous month's 4.2 percent drop.

White House spokesman Larry Speakes noted a separate report today that said retail sales rose in September after two monthly declines and called the two reports "a winning team."

The good news on inflation, he added, "provides a new foundation for consumers to be confident that their salaries won't be eaten up by inflation."

Today's inflation report took many analysts by surprise. While most are forecasting only moderate price increases for the balance of the year, none had foreseen the decline, which doubled August's 0.1 percent drop in the wholesale inflation rate.

The persistently docile inflation is much the product of the overall economic slowdown. Also aiding in the fight is the strength of the dollar, which keeps pressure on domestic producers to hold down prices in the face of cheaper foreign goods.

"Higher inflation is still nowhere on the horizon," private economist Michael Evans said in advance of today's report. "It is just the wrong time to raise prices. Firms would be wiped out by imports."

In its new report on the Producer Price Index for finished goods, the Labor Department gave these details:

—Pork prices fell 5.9 percent while the cost of eggs dropped 5.7 percent. Fresh vegetable prices were off 9.3 percent following two sharp monthly increases. Fish prices declined 4.8 percent. Smaller declines were posted for beef and veal.

Fresh fruit prices rose 17.8 percent while dairy products rose slighty.

—Prices fell for natural gas, off 2 percent, and fuel oil, down 1.9 percent.

—New car prices dropped 0.4 percent; light truck prices were up 0.5 percent.

—Capital equipment costs were unchanged.

Today's energy price calculations were actually for August. That component of the wholesale price measure lags a month because energy companies report their prices too late for inclusion in the most recent index.

Indeed, since Labor Day, there have been indications that gasoline prices are on the way up following apparently successful efforts by Arab oil producers to cut back on production.

1. RepublicBank First National Midland succeeded United First National Bank after the fourth quarter began, taking over that bank's deposits but not its loans. Republic has since purchased a small portion of FNB's loans and has begun making new loans of its own, as indicated in the table. As Republic First is a new bank, its condition cannot be accurately compared to that of its predecessor.

2. UnitedBank, formerly Mid-Cities National Bank, is successor to failed Metro Bank. It took over the old bank's deposits but not its loans, during the third quarter. It has since purchased some of the old bank's loans and began making new loans of its own, as indicated in the table. However, UnitedBank's present condition cannot be accurately compared to that of its predecessor.

3. Community National Bank opened Jan. 3, 1984.

4. Texas Commerce Bank opened July 23, 1984.

DEPOSITS

While total loans increased from second quarter to third quarter, not all banks saw a growth. United Bank more than doubled its loans from the previous quarter while some banks decreased in loans.

David Jones was enthusiastic over ClayDesta's loan figures.

"Our loans have not been soft," he said. "They have continued to go up."

Jones attributed the growth to oil and gas lending.

"Oil and gas lending is a growth area," said Jones. "There is still a very strong independent producer base and we are aggresively seeking that market."

Deposits were down from second quarter for four Midland banks and up for the others. ClayDesta, Western State, United, Security National, Community National and Midland American saw increases. Showing a drop in deposits for third quarter were RepublicBank First National, RepublicBank Midland, First City and Texas American.

Total loans decreased this quarter for RepublicBank First National, First City and Texas American. The others showed an increase in loans from the second quarter.

RepublicBank First National led the other banks with total deposits of $627 million and total loans of $252 million. This was a decrease of more than $10 million in loans and $7.7 million in deposits.

First City National was second with $394 million in deposits, an decrease from $400 million in the second quarter. Loans totaled $264 million, down $629,525 from the previous quarter. The bank saw an decrease in deposits of $28.7 million and $14.3 million from second quarter 1983.

With deposits totaling $137.6 million and loans of more than $86 million, Texas American ranked third in both areas. The third quarter saw a decrease of $1.1 million in loans and $6.2 million in deposits.

ClayDesta had an increase in deposits over the second quarter. Total deposits for ClayDesta increased to $112 million while loans were up $4.9 million.

That figure has more than doubled from this time last year, when total reported loans were $30.7 million.

Western State Bank reached total deposits of $86.9 million and total loans of $71.5 million third quarter. That compares to a second quarter report of $68 million in loans and $64.6 million in deposits.

Western, like ClayDesta has seen dramatic increase in total deposits and loans since third quarter 1983. At this time last year, Western reported $50 million in loans and $64 million in deposits.

RepublicBank Midland had $56.8 million in deposits, a decrease of $624,000 from the second quarter and $1.9 million from third quarter 1983. Total loans net of discount were up from the previous quarter, increasing from $11.84 million to $11.89 million.

United Bank reported an $8.1 million rise in total deposits from last quarter, one of the highest percentage increases.

Deposits for this quarter were $14.6 million with loans of $26 million. United assumed the deposits but not the loans of the failed Metro Bank in 1983, making deposit and loan comparisons between now and last year invalid.

Security National Bank showed a healthier increase in deposits this quarter with deposits rising $1.9 million. Loans increased slightly, up 623,997 from the previous quarter.

Community National Bank, which opened January 3, 1984 continued to show increases in loans and deposits. The bank reached $15.1 million in total deposits and $6.4 million in loans.

Midland American Bank also saw an increase in both deposits and loans this quarter. With a $8.1 million in deposits, the bank jumped $1.3 million from last quarter and more than $3.4 million from this time last year. Loans increased $1 million from the second quarter and $4.1 million from 1983.

Texas Commeree Bank has no comparative loan and deposit figures. It's third quarter figures from the time it opened on July 23 are: Loans, $2,688,376 and deposits, $9,817,691.

FRIDAY

Stories about the bank's business stepped up from one a month to one a week and even more often. Each became the next chapter in a mystery — who did it and when was it going to happen?

The final month brought constant turmoil. RepublicBank was going to buy FNB. No, it wasn't. FNB was insolvent. No, it wasn't. FNB gets bailed out by the Federal Reserve. Then, in stark chilling black and white came the proxy statement which confirmed the fears — that FNB was in serious financial trouble and had been seeking a buyer.

Another run on the bank began. It was the Friday before a Columbus Day holiday and the bank's lobby was packed; most people wanting to take money out, some wanting to deposit a paycheck.

A stockbroker leaving the bank chuckled that he had seen vice presidents and officers from all other Midland banks inside FNB. "No one has ever seen a run on a bank so they were all sent over to see it what looks like," he said.

The community tried to rally, gathering money to deposit. But it was too little too late.

The death knell had sounded. The bank's stockholders were waiting for the last gasp.

The media knew it was coming, too. And like vultures they waited.

It came at 6 p.m. when FNB shut its doors. Employees who had been called back for a 6:15 p.m. meeting to hear about the bank's condition had laughingly walked inside. A few minutes later, somber-faced, dark-suited FDIC employees began arriving.

They had been instructed well. The FDIC staff members looked straight ahead with their lips pursed shut and said nothing to the media.

Stockholders and longtime friends of the bank stood on the sidewalk and in the street, trying to find out any shred of news.

The employees poured out the doors, some openly sobbing. Again, no comment.

Even without the terse Associated Press announcement that FNB had been declared insolvent, the community knew.

The Eagle had died.

Sixth teen suicide reported

HOUSTON (AP) — Even as psychologists counseled high school students about a wave of a suicides, a 14-year-old boy became the sixth teen-ager to kill himself in a quiet middle-class suburb of Houston since August — and the fourth in a week.

Darren Thibodeaux stuffed towels under a garage door on Thursday and turned on the car engine, police said. School officials and authorities, meanwhile, were still investigating an unsubstantiated rumor of a suicide pact said to involve up to 30 young people.

Psychologists and school officials were to meet with reporters today to discuss the deaths in Clear Lake, an area south of Houston that includes the Johnson Space Center.

Jimmy Larrabee, deputy superintendent of the Clear Creek Independent School District, said that psychologists met with students in groups of 800 to 900 Thursday.

Dr. Rion Hart told Clear Lake students it was "OK to cry, OK to feel badly, OK to feel guilty if they knew the person who had committed suicide and felt they didn't do enough to help."

Larrabee said he was thinking shortly before Thibodeaux's death that "a suicide at Clear Creek (High School) would be about the worst thing that could happen right now."

Verdict in trial could come before nightfall

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — A verdict could come as early as tonight in the case of a 12-year-old Benbrook girl who says she accidentally killed her best friend and hid the body so she wouldn't go to jail, attorneys say.

Appearing tiny and tearful in the witness chair, Patricia Dempsey recounted Thursday how she killed 11-year-old Kerry Thomas and why she told no one about the shooting.

The juvenile court jury of six men and six women was expected to get the case today and perhaps reach a verdict before nightfall, attorneys say.

The jury must determine if the Sept. 8 shotgun slaying was accidental, as Patricia says, or intentional, as prosecutors contend.

The case took an unusual turn late Thursday when Judge Scott Moore cleared the courtroom of reporters and spectators and listened behind closed doors to the testimony of two state rebuttal witnesses.

He did not determine at once if their testimony was admissible but both sides rested pending today's jury deliberations.

The jurors' decision will not focus directly on guilt or innocence; instead it will "yes" or "no" to the question of whether Patricia "engaged in delinquent conduct."

Should the jury rule that she committed the juvenile equivalent of murder, the trial judge could order her confined to a state reform school until age 18.

The panel likewise could render a decision on a lesser charge, the juvenile equivalent of involuntary manslaughter, and Moore could put Patricia on probation.

In a courtroom overflowing with spectators, the young defendant testified Thursday she did not intend to kill her longtime friend and that she hid the body because she was afraid she "might get put in jail."

As she twisted her hands nervously, Patricia told the court she could recall neither pointing the shotgun at her friend nor pulling the trigger that discharged the fatal shot.

"At the time the gun went off and killed Kerry, were you mad at her?" her attorney asked.

"No," she answered.

Patricia did admit to a brief spat with Kerry the day of the shooting because, she said, her friend was paying less attention to her than to her cousin, 18-year-old Wayne Dempsey.

But she said they quickly made up.

She said she got the gun from a bedroom closet at her home and showed it to Kerry "because she might be interested."

"...Did she jump or run when you brought the gun out?" the lawyer asked.

"No," she answered.

With tears welling in her eyes, Patricia said she sat down and loaded the gun and that it was sitting "half on my lap and half on the ground."

"Did you think the safety was on?" defense lawyer Harold Ray asked.

"Yes," she replied.

"Do you remember putting your finger on the trigger?"

"No."

"Do you remember pulling the trigger?"

"No."

"Do you remember the gun going off?"

"Yes."

Governor does not favor wagering, lottery

AUSTIN (AP) — Although the state may need extra tax revenue next year to make ends meet, Gov. Mark White says he doesn't want the Legislature to legalize parimutuel betting to help do it.

Besides, he told his weekly news conference Thursday, he is not among those who think any tax increase will be needed.

"I think there are ways in which we can meet the service needs of the people of our state, hopefully without any additional tax," White said.

The governor says a number of moves are being taken to avoid another tax increase, which would come on the heels of a $4.6 billion, three-year hike approved during a special legislative session this summer.

The state is facing a potential budget shortfall, and on Wednesday a top lawmaker predicted that the Legislature will approve parimutuel wagering on horse racing next year rather than vote for more taxes.

"It's obvious that we're getting ready to face a serious situation in this state," said Rep. George Pierce, R-San Antonio. "The revenue has got to come from some place."

But White said he believes any decision about legalizing horse race gambling should be made separate from budget considerations.

"I think that's a judgment that ought to be made kind of in isolation. Certainly that would be one of the considerations, but I don't think it should be the primary one," White said.

He also voiced strong opposition to establishing a state-run lottery, which a number of other states use to help fund their governments.

"I like lotteries probably least of all," White said, adding that he doesn't think other states are being fair with people in sponsoring million-dollar games where winners are not paid in a lump sum but over a period of years.

"One of the confusions in the lottery, and one of the really consumer frauds that is sponsored by a state, is when you see these so-called $20 million winners.

Doggett: Presidential race getting closer

EL PASO (AP) — Democratic U.S. Senate candidate Lloyd Doggett says he sees the gap in the presidential race narrowing despite contentions from his Republican opponent that President Reagan still holds a commanding lead over Walter Mondale in Texas.

Doggett said the latest poll he has seen for the presidential contest was conducted more than a week ago and showed Reagan with a 27-point lead over Democrat Mondale.

"But that was before the debate," Doggett said Thursday at an El Paso news conference. "Across the state, I see the race drawing closer."

Doggett's assessment of the battle for the presidency was in sharp contrast to that of his opponent's, U.S. Rep. Phil Gramm.

Gramm said in Houston Thursday that poll data he received indicated Texan voters had not changed their minds after Sunday's Reagan-Mondale debate and still favored the president over Mondale.

Gramm declined to reveal who conducted the poll and Doggett questioned whether it really was taken after the debate.

The Austin legislator said that while the Democratic ticket still "has a lot of work to do, I think the race is becoming much closer."

Also on Thursday, Doggett continued to defend his use of a television advertisement that quotes Gramm as saying he doesn't feel sorry for old people.

"I know a lot of harsh words have been said in this campaign, (but) they're not our comments — they're comments of my Republican opponent, Mr. Gramm," Doggett said.

The commercial on Social Security features a quote from Gramm about the elderly and shows an older couple.

In the latest flap over the ad, a San Antonio Republican has complained that two of his relatives — his sister and his deceased father — were pictured in the ad even though they did not authorize the use of the photo.

Gramm said Thursday Doggett should apologize to Ralph Pennington, 73, of San Antonio, for using the photograph of his family.

But Doggett said in El Paso he would not issue a public apology.

Mexican population rate reflects attitude changes

By CHRIS ANGELO
Associated Press Writer

MEXICO CITY — Sara Lopez says she had her first baby when she was 20 and another one "every year and a month" until she had 12 children. Now, she tells her daughters four children is enough.

Mrs. Lopez, 53, reflects changing attitudes that have helped to slow population growth dramatically in Mexico.

An economic crisis, Mexico's worst in 50 years, and an extensive government family planning program also have figured in dropping the annual population growth rate from 3.5 percent in 1970 to 2.4 percent, according to government figures.

Although Mexico was a late starter in promoting family planning, its rapid progress in controlling the birth rate is one of the reasons it was chosen to host the 1984 U.N. International Conference on Population, said Joop Alberts, deputy representative of the U.N. Fund for Population Activities office here.

The week-long conference, the first in 10 years, begins Monday in Mexico City.

Mexico's official goal is a population growth rate of 1 percent in the year 2000, what it was at the start of this century. Average growth for industrialized countries is less than 1 percent.

If the projections hold, today's population of 77 million Mexicans will grow to 100 million in 2000. If the population continued to grow at the 1970 rate, the figure would have been 140 million, almost double the current population.

"At the family level there is an improvement in health, in the maternal and infant mortality rates" when the growth rate in controlled, said Sergio Correu, a family planning official with the Social Security Institute.

"When we reach 1 percent the impact will be felt in better distribution of the population, jobs, enough school space, social security, health services," he said.

The steady current of migrants to the cities is perhaps the most visible evidence of population growth.

In Mexico City, buses and subways are jammed, water supplies are short in many areas, shantytowns line ravines and there are not enough jobs for the metropolitan area's 17 million people.

Projections indicate Mexico City area's population will be 31 million by the end of the century.

Monterrey and Guadalajara, Mexico's two other largest cities, and many middle-sized cities also suffer from the demands of so many people.

Adolescents are among the hardest hit as they try to find jobs. More than half the population is under 20; 43 percent, under 15. Boys hop onto cars at stoplights to wash windshields for a driver's small change. Little girls peddle flowers among the traffic. Youngsters sell chewing gum.

Correu, a pioneer in family planning in Mexico, said most women who seek contraceptives or sterilization do so for economic reasons.

Sara Lopez, a grandchild at each hand, walks near her small photo shop in a densely populated poor neighborhood and says money is one reason she favors family planning for her children.

One daughter who was sterilized after four children is married to a school teacher who earns little. "She makes empanadas (meat pies) and doesn't get home to the children until she sells them all," she said.

Mrs. Lopez began taking birth control pills after her 11th child was born in 1964. The sale and advertising of contraceptives was illegal in Mexico until 1973. But despite the law against them, birth control pills and other contraceptives were easy to obtain in pharmacies.

Roman Catholicism is the predominant religion in Mexico. But although the Vatican urges Catholics not to use artificial means of birth control, the church in Mexico does not heavily push its teaching on contraceptives.

Since 1977, the government has strongly promoted smaller families and provided free contraceptives and sterilization.

"Anyone who comes to the clinic must talk with a social worker," said Maria Sara Leon Perez, a social worker in a Health Ministry clinic in a poor neighborhood. "We ask if they are controlling (their fertility). There are cases in which the husband is opposed. If we can get the husband to come in for a chat, we do. If not, we go to the home to visit, if the wife agrees."

Diplomatic attention span narrows

By SOLL SUSSMAN
Associated Press Writer

MEXICO CITY — Instead of the spectacular worldwide globetrotting his predecessors favored, President Miguel de la Madrid has placed his foreign policy emphasis on his Latin American neighbors.

The quiet approach now is gaining Mexico praise on the international diplomatic scene.

No example shows it better than the U.S.-Nicaraguan talks, which started in June after a long refusal for the two nations to talk about their strained relations. The third in a series of meetings between Harry Shlaudeman, U.S. special envoy to Central America, and Nicaraguan Deputy Foreign Minister Victor Hugo Tinoco ended Wednesday night in Mexico's Pacific resort of Manzanillo.

The talks at the exclusive Villa Santiago Club, 524 miles northwest of Mexico City, are taking place under tight security and in complete silence about their progress.

The first session was held in Manzanillo June 25-26 and the second in Atlanta, Georgia, July 16. The latest was held Tuesday and Wednesday.

Mexico describes its host role as taking place "in order to lead to a bilateral understanding contributing effectively to regional peace."

Although Mexican officials doubt that the meetings will lead to any solutions in the tense relations between the United States and Nicaragua, there is some satisfaction that at least the two sides are talking again.

The U.S. State Department said last month that Mexico is playing an "active and positive role" in the diplomatic effort to bring peace to Central America.

The statement by deputy spokesman Alan Romberg was prompted by a published account noting Mexico recently backed away from its strong support for Nicaragua and the Salvadoran insurgents.

De la Madrid, in a recent interview with the major Mexico City newspaper Excelsior, issued a rare criticism of Nicaragua's leftist Sandinista government by saying it should diversify its international contacts.

He also referred to the East-West conflict as playing a part in Central America, a variation from the usual Mexican insistence that violence there is due to social and economic inequality. The Reagan administration maintains Soviet and Cuban influence is the main cause.

Yet Mexican officials strongly resist any attempt to categorize their actions as any fundamental change in foreign policy, that they say always will emphasis self-determination and non-intervention.

Although cynics suggest the government's global diplomacy can be a usefulindistraction from domestic problems, what one analyst described as its independent "homegrown nationalism" has deep roots in Mexican history.

Mexico takes pride in its international role. De la Madrid has spoken, for example, of the country's "distinguished and effective" international presence.

The Latin American emphasis, which de la Madrid announced from the start of his term, was certified last spring when he made his first trip abroad since taking office in December 1982.

It was a trip to Brazil, Argentina, Colombia, Venezuela and Panama. The last three are the countries that along with Mexico formed the Contadora group in January 1983 in an attempt to find a peaceful solution to Central American tensions.

De la Madrid followed that with trips to Canada and the United States.

During their six-year presidential terms, Luis Echeverria and Jose Lopez Portillo sought leadership positions in the Third World and often made strong statements that irritated Washington.

Under Lopez Portillo, Mexico took an often outspoken role linked to its newfound oil wealth. Most notably, a joint Mexican-France declaration issued in 1981 recognized as a political force the leftist guerrillas fighting the U.S.-supported government in El Salvador.

A Western political analyst, who did not want to be identified, said de la Madrid's administration is in contrast "activist ...but in a way that's more subdued. It's not flamboyant."

During de la Madrid's May meetings in Washington with President Reagan, according to U.S. officials, the idea was planted for Secretary of State George P. Shultz's surprise June 1 visit to Managua, Nicaragua.

In the 18 months since he opened Mustang Motors, J.L. Smith has sold about 100 of the refurbished Fords.

Texas tinkerer says, 'Make mine a Mustang'

By MICHAEL L. GRACZYK
Associated Press Writer

YOAKUM, Texas — J.L. Smith is doing a modern-day takeoff on auto pioneer Henry Ford's idea that you could have a Model T Ford in any color — as long as it was black.

Smith will fix and sell any car as long as it's a Ford Mustang, and particularly those mid- to late-1960s Mustangs that established Lee Iacocca, now Chrysler Corp. chairman, as a rising star at Ford Motor Co.

In just about a year and a half, Smith, 63, a retired oil company construction supervisor, has sold about 100 of the refurbished Mustangs from an unlikely setting — the front yard of his rural home along Texas Highway 111 about 125 miles southwest of Houston.

He calls the place "Mustang Motors." Despite no advertising and only word of mouth, Smith has attracted buyers and lookers from as far away as California, plus Ford Motor Co. people who have been "snooping around" to see his work.

"I told my wife I should close this big gate, put in a small one and charge admission," he says, standing in the driveway in front of his home. "At two bits a head, I'd make all kinds of money."

People "really like looking at them," he says, adding that many visitors get sentimental in recalling their younger days and experiences with the car.

Smith ai i his wife bought "one of the first Mustangs in Houston" back in 1964 and drove it for seven or eight years. He was hooked.

"It was a wonderful little car," he says. "We had no problems with it."

After he retired from the construction business, he did some woodworking, but grew weary of that. So he bought a couple of battered Mustangs and his "hobby turned into a business."

About 20 cars now grace the front yard of his house. Another 50 in various states of disrepair sit out back.

"If somebody told me five years ago I'd clutter up my yard with all this stuff, I'd tell them they were crazy," he says.

Recently, a man in a big Lincoln Continental pulled in, got out of his car and just stood there, staring at the lot, Smith recalls.

"I worked for Ford Motor Co. all my life and I've never seen this many Mustangs in all my life," Smith says the man told him.

Smith has no formal training in auto mechanics.

"We learned back during the T-model days," he says. "If we didn't fix it ourselves, we didn't go."

Although the different models closely resemble each other, Smith can tell you the little things that separate one year's Mustang from another.

The first cars, for example, which went on the market as 1964½ models, used generators instead of alternators. Later, the instrument cluster was changed from round dials to horizontal dials.

One of the early editions, which sold for around $1,700 in 1964, is now on his lot for $3,000.

Parts are easy to come by — Ford is still making them — although they are getting expensive, he says. But the biggest problem is getting a good paint job.

Interest in limit slowed

WASHINGTON — Whatever happened to the Republican Party campaign to lift the 55-mile-per-hour speed limit?

Four years ago, lifting the speed limit commanded more debate at party platform hearings than such other issues as abortion and the proposed equal rights amendment to the Constitution.

Despite warnings of political repercussions, delegates overwhelmingly adopted language for the platform that attacked the 55-mile-per-hour speed limit as a "counterproductive" restraint that contributed to rising costs of goods and services. The speed limit, the party said, should be set by the states.

The tough talk, implying swift action if the party won the national elections, was sweet music to the ears of thousands of motorists of all political persuasions who had long resented the speed limit. Congress, as part of a fuel conservation drive brought on by the Arab oil embargo of 1973, acted in 1974 to reduce the speed limit to 55 miles per hour from varying limits as high as 80 on any highway built or maintained with federal aid.

But neither the party nor President Reagan has done anything directly to raise the speed limit, despite a fairly large constituency for doing so, including states rights' advocates, Western states, truckers and car buffs.

If the outcome of last summer's party platform meetings was any indication, the Republicans are not likely to raise the issue again. Not one of the 108 platform committee delegates even proposed language on the speed limit.

Political reality dictated that Reagan stay away from the issue, say some of his political intimates and adversaries. The safety lobby had convinced Congress that the lower speed limit had saved lives as well as energy. Highway-related fatalities had decreased annually since 1974, according to safety studies. Last year there were 43,000 such deaths, as against 55,000 in 1973. To favor raising the limit could be construed as being against saving lives.

Drew Lewis, the first secretary of Transportation in the Reagan administration, took a straw poll of a House committee and found minimal support for taking on the speed limit issue in Congress.

Lewis subsequently took the position that while the administration did not favor repeal of the limit, the president would sign such legislation on a states' rights basis if it made it through Congress. By the same token, it was the Administration's hope that if Congress yielded to the states on setting the speed limit, none of the states would raise it above 55 miles per hour.

"There's no area that you can find where there's been more fudging and finagling," said Clarence Ditlow of the Washington-based Center for Auto Safety.

Ditlow said a number of states unhappy with the law had undercut its intent by weakening the penalties for exceeding the speed limit.

In an argument voiced by speed limit opponents as well, Ditlow said tests for measuring compliance with the law were subject to considerable interpretation.

A state stands to lose 10 percent of some highway funds if more than 50 percent of the vehicles using 55-mile-per-hour highways exceed the limit. To test compliance, speed monitoring equipment is placed at random on various highways and results are assigned values based on use of the roads and are further adjusted for speedometer variability and equipment error.

"Opponents of the speed limit call that juggling, but I call it statistical adjustments required by law," said Harold Butz, director of the office of enforcement and emergency services of the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration, which enforces the speed limit law.

Ditlow said only one state, Massachusetts, has ever been found to be in noncompliance. That was in 1982, but the state was able to avert loss of funds by being in compliance the next year.

Regardless of who wins in November, there will be drumbeats from the countryside for lifting the speed limit, says David E. Davis, editor and publisher of Car and Driver magazine. Last year, the magazine collected 60,000 postcards from readers urging Reagan to remember the 1980 promise. Davis said he still had the postcards.

They could end up in Washington.

Clean 'n green

Clean Midland, the organization that's concerned with getting the Tall City clean and seeing that it stays that way, is throwing an extravaganza Saturday near the intersection of Loop 250 and Midkiff Drive that's intended to garner support for making the city "clean 'n green."

The event will attempt to accomplish its goals in a number of ways. For one thing, a number of Midland Lions Clubs will lend their talents to the clean-up effort by picking up trash in the railroad right-of-way along Front Avenue. A Brownie troop will conduct a similar clean-up along a section of Scharbauer Drive. Both clean-up efforts kick off at 8 a.m. Saturday.

Beginning at 2 p.m., various nurseries will begin selling outdoor plants in the parking lot west of Gardski's at Loop 250 and Midkiff Drive. Thus comes the idea of splashing plants throughout Midland which, next spring, will give the city a measure of greenery.

That isn't all. Throughout the afternoon and evening Midlanders will find plenty of entertainment in the way of an awards ceremony for an art contest conducted among pre-school through sixth graders, magicians, breakdancers, country and western dancers, and even a live band.

The event truly will offer something for everyone and will go a long way toward the goal of making Midland cleaner, greener and, all-in-all, a more enjoyable community for the residents.

Clean Midland Executive Coordinator Jane Leslie says, "We want people to walk away with a better idea of what we're all about."

With the stated purpose of cleaning up the city, making it greener and more beautiful — and of encouraging the citizenry to help keep it that way — we don't see how Clean Midland can fail!

Every Midlander should get involved in making the Tall City "clean 'n green."

Quotable quotes

Quotable quotations in recent days included a comment about relations with the Soviet Union and a dramatic proposal for peace talks by the president of El Salvador.

President Reagan spoke as follows about his meeting with Soviet Foreign Minister Gromyko: "We made it very plain: We don't like their system; they don't like ours. We're not out to change their system, and they better not try to change ours."

El Salvador's President Jose Napoleon Duarte issued this historic invitation to the rebels fighting his regime:

"Without arms and in the presence of the world press, representatives of the church and the population of La Palma, at 10 a.m. on Oct. 15, the anniversary of the insurrection of 1979, I invite the heads of the guerrilla movement who are now in the mountains to discuss the scope and details of a proposal for their incorportion in the process of democracy in the atmosphere of freedom with the hope that we may have another popular election."

As the world knows, the guerrillas accepted. The meeting next week is sure to produce some more quotable quotations, and we trust they will reflect positive steps toward peace and stability in Central America.

Another View:

Offer in El Salvador

It's not just his political neck that President Jose Napoleon Duarte risks with the offer to talk to El Salvador's leftist guerrillas. The violent right has slaughtered many Salvadoran democrats for entertaining the same idea. Yet Duarte, from the forum of the United Nations, says that unconditional discussions can begin next week in La Palma, a town in guerrilla-held territory near the Honduran border. The guerrillas instantly accepted, if a neutral observer attends.

What is going on here? The honest answer is that Duarte's calculations are not obvious. He may well agree with the Pentagon's assessment that the tide of battle is shifting to his government's side. Or, less securely, he may be trying to use diplomacy to ward off an expected guerrilla offensive in the autumn dry season. He might even be moving ahead of his American allies, figuring that they will restrain him less during the U.S. election campaign.

In any case, the State Department says it had no advance warning that Duarte was going to abandon his recent skepticism about wide-ranging talks with guerrillas.

In a bid to end a civil war that has taken 50,000 lives since 1979, he now offers leftists a new chance not only in local elections, which they've rejected, but perhaps in a national plebiscite. To the leftists' demand for guarantees of safety and participation in the interim, pre-election regime, Duarte responds with a promise of "safety and security of a political place within a pluralistic, democratic constitutional system" — or a possible role in the government plus a general amnesty.

Until this speech, Duarte had been saying he was ready to talk but not yet to negotiate. His new proposals surely sound like an agenda for negotiation. And he has shown some authority over the right-wing death squads.

Duarte's approach certainly accords with the spirit of the regional peace treaty that has been proposed by the Contadora countries — Mexico, Venezuela, Colombia and Panama — and encouraged by Europeans whose support he has gained in recent months. Nicaragua's acceptance of that treaty may also become a factor in the calculations of Salvadorans.

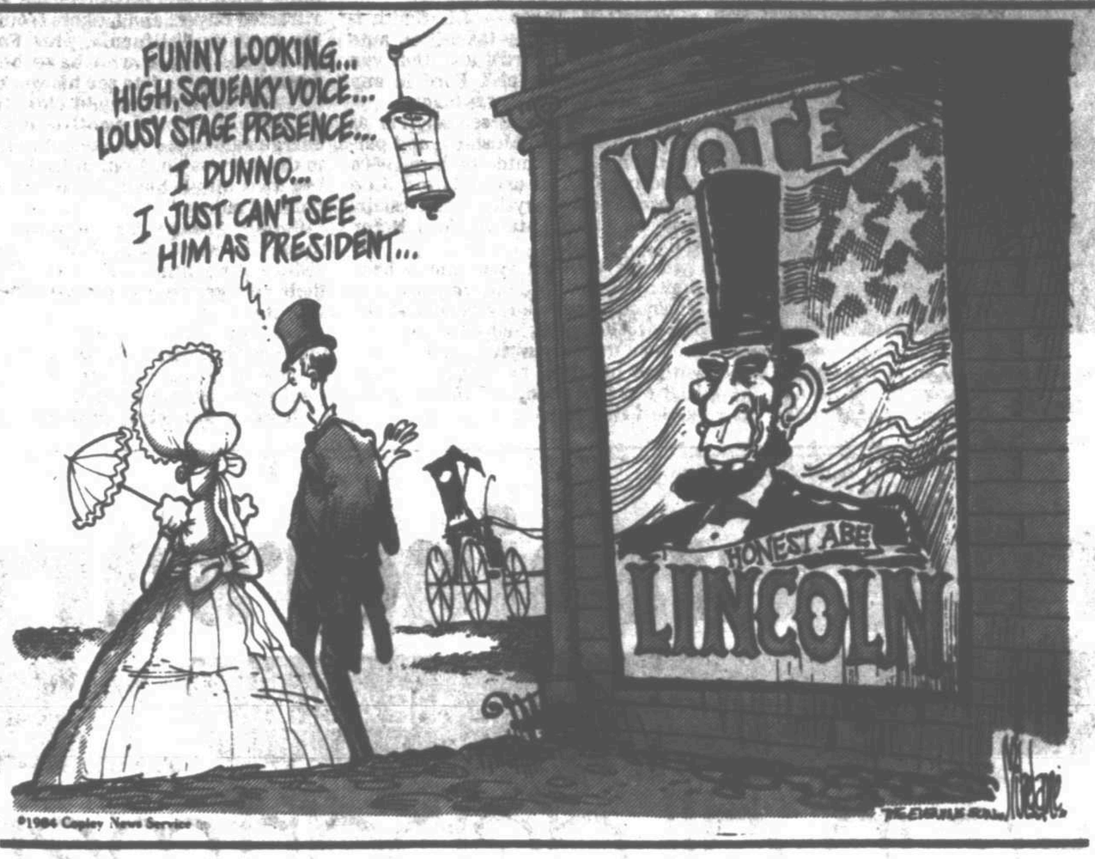

The obstacles, of course, are awesome. Hard-liners in the Salvadoran armed forces, thirsting for victory over the guerrillas, may still be strong enough to thwart Duarte. Whether the leftist insurgents can settle for much less than their vision of victory also remains to be seen. It's only a small space that has opened in this bramble, but Duarte deserves applause for venturing forth with an offer to find a way to end a bitter yet deadlocked war.

TODAY IN HISTORY

In 1942, during World War II, American naval forces defeated the Japanese in the Battle of Cape Esperance.

In 1945, Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower told reporters in Frankfurt, Germany, that Nazis would not be allowed to participate in the country's upcoming elections.

Young 'spook' spied on students

WASHINGTON — The CIA is apparently back in business on American college campuses, less than a decade after it was slapped down by Congress for covertly financing student groups and paying youthful undercover agents to spy on campus "radicals."

Jack Anderson

This time the CIA's infiltration of academia may actually be legal, under a 1981 executive order signed by President Reagan. It allows the spy agency to collect "significant" intelligence secretly within the United States as long as the espionage isn't aimed at the domestic activities of American citizens or corporations.

An investigation by my associates Dale Van Atta and Indy Badhwar indicates that from September 1982 to May 1983, the CIA paid a Hawaiian student to spy on foreigners at two colleges and a Mormon tourist attraction on Oahu.

If the student spy's information was indeed "significant," the CIA got a bargain: He was paid $100 a month for his eight-month undercover mission, he said.

The young spook is Jim Rewald, who was 19 when the CIA recruited him for campus cloak-and-dagger work in July 1982. He had just been accepted for the fall term at Brigham Young University (Hawaii) in Laie, Oahu.

Young Rewald also had impressive family credentials: His father, Ronald Ray Rewald, had earned $6,000 by spying on students for the CIA at the University of Wisconsin in the early 1960s. (It was this sort of domestic espionage activity on college campuses that led to the congressional crackdown on the CIA a decade or so later.)

The elder Rewald is now facing multiple counts of fraud for his involvement in an investment operation he claims was a CIA front.

In an exclusive interview, Jim Rewald said he set out to follow his father's footsteps one night at dinner in the Rewald home. A guest, a CIA agent known as Richard Cavannaugh, asked him, "Would you be interested in collecting information on students?"

Young Rewald accepted on the spot. "It was my chance to start with the CIA before I left college," he explained. "They had known I wanted to join the agency for a couple of years."

Young Rewald signed a contract. His "control" was a Chinese-American agent. For some CIA reason, the case officer was posing as a Japanese named Tadao Suzuki — in the one state where such an ethnic masquerade would likely be spotted by the large Japanese-American population.

For his $100 a month, Rewald was assigned to keep close watch on six visiting students from the People's Republic of China. The CIA wanted information and current photographs.

Rewald diligently clipped articles on the Chinese students from the college newspaper, surreptitiously snapped their pictures, and tailed them to the Polynesian Cultural Center, a tourist attraction next to Brigham Young University-Hawaii.

He also obtained college computer lists with details on the Chinese students' activities by telling the registration office he was working on an English paper. Once, he said, he rifled the office for further information.

After one semester at BYU, Rewald transferred to Chaminade, a Catholic university in Honolulu. Suzuki was delighted by his recruit's ecumenical enthusiasm. The CIA had about all it needed on the Chinese students at BYU-Hawaii, and the agency had never had a man in place at the Catholic school.

The pickings proved to be slim, though, and Rewald's interest flagged. "I thought it was important work," he said. "But after a while it seemed sort of ridiculous."

Still, when he decided to pursue his studies at a university in London, England, in the fall of 1983, he dutifully notified Suzuki. The London school had an internship program in Parliament, and Rewald's handlers evidently foresaw a bonanza in House of Commons gossip from their young spy.

Alas! It was not to be. His father's CIA-connected investment business collapsed at that inopportune time, and young Rewald's CIA career came crashing down with it.

STRICTLY PERSONAL: I'm astonished at how many experts there are on food stamp fraud. A startling number of readers called or wrote to protest the answer I gave in a recent Taxpayers' Quiz. I claimed the food stamp program lost a billion dollars a year from fraud.

It has now been impressed on me that I was wrong. Although the government "overissues" a billion dollars a year in food-stamp benefits, not all of this can be called fraud. Much of the waste is caused by human and computer error.

My critics make another point: While the Agriculture Department overissues a billion dollars worth of food stamps with its right hand, it underissues $250,000 with its left. So the total amount of the waste is $999,750,000.

Cautious tactics set debate fall

LOUISVILLE, Ky. — The most one-sided presidential debate since they began in 1960 was produced partly by a late backstage change in Walter F. Mondale's tactics but mainly by super-cautious tactics from Ronald Reagan's campaign managers.

Rowland Evans

Robert Novak

Intensive debate rehearsals brought to Louisville a president confused by notebooks full of statistics and short of any vision. But long before that, the antiseptic strategy of relying wholly on Reagan's first-term record and ignoring the future had set the stage for his debacle here.

Thoughtful Republicans have brooded for months on the nightmarish prospect of a 73-year-old candidate running without articulating a vision of the future. Nightmare became reality Sunday night when Mondale, following outside advice that penetrated his cocoon, emerged from the gloom.

That hardly seemed the likely outcome as the political world gathered in Louisville Sunday afternoon. While hordes of Republicans prepared the Hyatt Hotel for a monster rally to follow the debate, dour Democrats down the street stalked the Seelbach lobby, expressing fear that Fritz Mondale had given up. In both hotels, talk of a realignment election was in the air.

It had vanished less than 12 hours later. Democratic euphoria over improved prospects for fund-raising and congressional races and a dramatically tightened presidential contest was genuine. While presidential staffers insisted that the debate was a wash, other Republicans mourned diminished prospects for realignment in 1984.

Accordingly, Mondale managers thank their lucky stars for what they never really thought would happen: agreement to debates by James A. Baker III, acting for the president. "Jim Baker may be a terrific White House chief of staff," one Mondale adviser told us, "but he's always been a lousy politician."

However, the damaging advice to Reagan from Baker was not accepting the debate challenge but refusing to discuss his agenda for 1985. He consequently could not embrace politically attractive elements of the 1984 Republican platform — a flat tax and a doubled personal tax exemption. When a congressman in September told a senior Reagan adviser that the president should start talking impromptu about his vision of America, the reply was that they never could trust Reagan to depart from the sanitized script.

It was such a lack of confidence in Reagan that led to the debate debacle. The president's performance was tipped by campaign aides a week earlier when they predicted Reagan would not be stumped on the facts. At rehearsals, Reagan was crammed with statistics and informed he would not be in trouble if he simply made no mistakes.

The result was a Ronald Reagan pathetically searching for the right numbers. His frequent hints of the future in speeches — tax rates and a new-opportunity society — were forgotten on the stage in Louisville. The only mention of his enterprise zones proposal came from Mondale. Instead, the president was lured into a politically self-defeating squabble about Social Security — the subject most poisonous for Republicans.

Expecting a vicious frontal assault from Fighting Fritz, Reagan encountered a gracious antagonist who shed much of the leaden image of the past two years. Mondale campaign manager Bob Beckel, in private conversation with associates after the debate, credited the strategy to an unlikely source: political consultant Pat Caddell, who had launched successive maneuvers to block Mondale's nomination.

After dry-run debate sessions less than a week before the debate proved unsatisfactory, Mondale read one of Caddell's famous memos on debate strategy prepared for him and then asked to see his former antagonist. What followed were two long walks in which Caddell spelled out his game plan.

Beckel and Caddell were less successful in trying to tone down the emphasis on the deficit, insisted on by chief media adviser Richard Leone. Although it only reinforces the Democratic notoriety for increasing taxes, Mondale stubbornly pressed deficits at the beginning of the debate. He survived when a Reagan seemingly benumbed by seeking to remember all those numbers did not stigmatize Mondale as Mr. Super-Taxer.

Reagan's experience on the defensive must give pause to Vice President George Bush, who on Thursday night tries to take on feisty Rep. Geraldine Ferraro's parries without an agenda for the future. Panicky Republican politicians are pouring advice into the Oval Office that Reagan get off the defensive for the foreign policy debate Oct. 21. Not even the White House would seem capable of blowing so massive a lead, but the texture of the 1984 campaign has been transformed by Louisville.

Painter given nod

As a native Midlander, I am very proud to work for the County of Midland. I have worked for several county departments since 1975, one of which was the sheriff's office.

Having the utmost respect for law enforcement, I was sincerely proud to have had the opportunity to work for Dallas Smith. However, during the time I worked for Mr. Smith, I slowly but surely learned to disrespect the sheriff. If it had not been for my immediate supervisors and fellow employees (which by the way, are the people who really make the department) I would not have remained as long as I did (22 months).

I finally decided to resign at the time that Dallas interrogated me concerning the "rumor" about his ex-wife, insisting I tell him exactly where it was I had heard it. During this interrogation, I took the opportunity to state my opinions and ask some questions myself. Because of the answers I received, I realized I had to resign as I could not remain employed by a person I could not respect and whom I believe has no regard for individuals (inmate or employee).

Maybe I was expecting too much from a professional person like Dallas Smith; I can only say that I feel deeply for the persons that have to remain working for an administrator that cares only about his "political powers." An administrator that has forgotten that the people of Midland County elected him to serve the people and not his ego.

What? That opponents of Dallas Smith think the voters are too dumb to master the simple procedures to a write-in vote, how absolutely absurd. I believe, we the voters are too smart to become involved in a write-in vote.

The "professional" should realize that the voters of this county have spoken! They have made their choice. If Dallas Smith had had some consideration for the voters at the time of the primary elections, he would have spoken up and addressed the issues at that time. He chose not to — he was so sure of himself that he took the voters for granted.

I read Gary Painter's background investigation at the time he was hired. Everyone was impressed by his law enforcement experience and overall background. Gary remained in the Jail Division for a very short time, transferred to the Patrol Division and shortly thereafter was promoted to lieutenant and remained in that position until he resigned to run against Dallas.

Gary did an excellent job for Dallas, just like some of the persons still in his employ, but this job excellence is due to those individuals' dedication to their profession — they deserve the credit.

Gary also deserves this credit. He has done an excellent job as a lieutenant and will do an even better job as our (the people's) sheriff.

Young people are 'the future'

After reading the article printed in your Sunday, Sept. 30th issue concerning youth involvement in politics, I felt compelled to write this letter in rebuttal to some of the opinions voiced by Ms. Joanne DeWitt of Young Democrats of Midland.

I can tell you right now why the Democratic Party in Midland is having a difficult time involving the youth of this area. The problems with youth recruitment are self-explanatory and will never be resolved as long as quotes such as the following one from Ms. DeWitt circulate:

"I grew up in the Vietnam era and we were all extremely active. The young people today think of going to the mall and going shopping. And when they go to college all they want to do is business administration. There's no interest in the humanities, in learning about what happened in the past to see how it affects today. They don't think about the impact of the policies we're setting today."

What young person wants to work for a party with the basic view that all youth are self-centered and unconcerned with the vital views of today? The fact is the youth are concerned with our government and our world. But the sensible, well-educated youth of today are finding the conservative Republican way a much better alternative to the rowdy, rambunctious and ineffective methods of the liberal youth of the 1960s.

The youth of today do not blindly follow their beliefs. We are a productive intelligent generation of people, this country's future, and we demand to be given the respect we deserve. If the Democratic Party wants a future, then they must begin to respect the youth, for we are the future.

CBS attorney: Network had 'no incentive' to distort story

NEW YORK (AP) — A rising young producer and a top network correspondent for CBS News had no incentive to distort the truth when they accused America's commander in Vietnam of misleading his superiors about the progress of the war, an attorney for the network says.

But a lawyer for retired Gen. William C. Westmoreland said the CBS broadcast of "The Uncounted Enemy: A Vietnam Deception" distorted facts because the producer "needed a story, a big story."

The clash came in opening arguments Thursday in Westmoreland's $120 million libel suit against CBS, "60 Minutes" correspondent Mike Wallace, producer George Crile and Sam Adams, an ex-CIA analyst who was a CBS consultant for the program.

Spectators, lawyers and reporters packed the Manhattan courtroom of U.S. District Judge Pierre N. Leval and spilled into the corridor as the trial began.

Dan M. Burt, Westmoreland's attorney, charged Crile used dishonest editing, selective interviewing and other techniques to "fabricate" a case against Westmoreland.

Burt said the broadcast on Jan. 23, 1982, depicted the general at the center of a "conspiracy" to tell top Washington officials — including President Lyndon Johnson — that enemy strength in late 1967 was less than 300,000 troops, when the CIA actually believed it was close to twice that level.

Defense lawyer David Boies said the broadcast's premise was true — and that more importantly, CBS and its employees believed it was true at the time. To win a libel verdict, Westmoreland and other public figures must prove someone knowingly broadcast a defamatory falsehood about them or broadcast it in "reckless disregard" of the truth.

Boies was to complete his opening arguments today.

Burt charged that by failing to interview key figures, dropping interviews that contradicted the show's thesis and using improper editing techniques, CBS wrongly accused Westmoreland of misleading the president and the Joint Chiefs of Staff.

"George Crile distorted the interviews he did use to fabricate a conspiracy that never occurred," said Burt, depicting the producer as a novice who "had never produced a show on his own" and "needed a story, a big story, a sensational story he could do himself."

"Crile was charging the general with a crime punishable by 20 years in prison," Burt said.

But Boies contended the show's creators had no reason to fabricate a story.

"Here is a man at the pinnacle of his profession with every broadcast award, more than 10 Emmys," Boies said of Wallace, a correspondent on the popular "60 Minutes" program. "What is his incentive? And George Crile had no reason, either. He was a producer with a bright future at CBS."

Each lawyer used videotape in his argument.

Boies showed the late Sen. Robert F. Kennedy, then running for president, complaining after the communists' 1968 Tet Offensive that the intelligence estimates of enemy strength had been misleading.

"We are told the entire enemy force has been put out of action," Kennedy said. "Then who is doing the fighting?"

Burt showed excerpts of an interview by Wallace with Walt Rostow, Johnson's national security adviser, in which Rostow told the correspondent, "The president was totally informed at the time of the nature of the debate."

As the nine screens installed in the courtroom went blank, Burt told the jurors, "You just saw the president's national security adviser tell Mr. Wallace that the show's thesis was wrong."

But Boies showed other parts of the interview — none of which was included in the broadcast — which he said showed that Rostow did not really know whether Johnson was kept informed.

Burt said he will call Rostow as the first witness when testimony begins Monday. Other high-level Johnson administration officials are expected to testify later, among them former Secretary of State Dean Rusk, Secretary of Defense Robert McNamara and CIA Director Richard Helms.

Boies says he will call former military and intelligence officials who will support the story.

On the day the Westmoreland trial was getting started, U.S. District Judge Charles S. Haight Jr. ruled in Manhattan that another libel suit against CBS and Wallace should go to trial.

Leaving federal court at Foley Square in Manhattan Thursday are George Crile, left, and Sam Adams, defendants in the $120 million libel suit bought by retired General William C. Westmoreland against CBS. Crile produced the 1982 piece, "The Uncounted Enemy: A Vietnam Deception" about Westmoreland. Adams is an ex-CIA analyst who became a CBS consultant for the show. An attorney for the defendants said they had "no incentive to lie" and that the broadcast was accurate.

Subway fires force evacuation of commuters

NEW YORK (AP) — A half-dozen fires ignited in the city's subway system in a single day, slightly injuring 10 passengers and nine firefighters and forcing the evacuation of 13,000 commuters from smoky tunnels.

Officials said service, disrupted by the fires Thursday in Manhattan and Brooklyn, had returned to normal throughout the 230-mile system by 7:30 p.m. Fire and transit officials blamed a switchbox underneath a 22-year-old subway car for the most serious fire, which ignited about 5 p.m. as a train pulled into a station in Brooklyn.

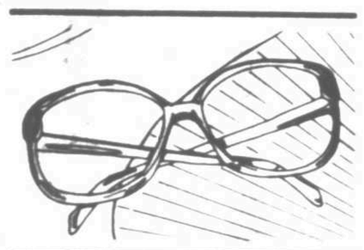

About 120 firefighters were sent into the smoke-filled subway stop, and nine of them later were treated for smoke inhalation and exhaustion, said fire department spokesman John Mulligan.

An estimated 4,000 passengers in the station and on another train which arrived there about the same time were evacuated, officials said. About 4,000 passengers on two other trains were discharged at another stop while the smoky station was unusable.

Ten passengers were treated for smoke inhalation in the incident, said Ellen Weiman, an emergency services worker.

Another fire about 5:20 p.m. forced the evacuation of about 2,000 passengers in Harlem.Shortly afterward, trains on three lines had to be diverted as track fires were reported in Brooklyn, forcing the evacuation of about 2,000 riders.

Political newcomer says it with donations of land

Associated Press

AUSTIN — As the helicopter swung in a slow, low arc through the Lost Creek subdivision southwest of Austin, James C. Moore pointed down to his two-story brown house.

"I love doing this," said Moore, as the machine slowed to hover about 150 feet above the rooftops. "It makes my neighbors wonder."

If the aerobatics caused any puzzlement below, it would not be the first time that Moore, 35, has brought on a case of head-scratching.

Seemingly out of nowhere, Moore emerged recently as a new player on the field of Texas politics. By the end of the year, his political contributions probably will eclipse the $1 million given to candidates in 1982 by South Texas rancher Clinton Manges.

Unlike Manges, who has been involved in Texas politics more than two decades, Moore at first had trouble getting anyone to take him seriously.

THAT WAS BEFORE he started giving land to political causes.

Nobody can remember that ever happening before in Texas.

"It's sure an innovative way to make a contribution," said state Agriculture Commissioner Jim Hightower, one of Moore's beneficiaries.

To Moore, giving away real estate seemed the natural thing to do. "I've got more land than I've got money," said Moore, who struck it rich in the past five years putting together real estate deals in Houston.

TEN MONTHS AGO, the lawyer-developer moved to Austin and began buying up undeveloped land in the Hill Country. He owns more than 500 acres 25 miles west of Austin, and he is negotiating for 380 acres nearby.

Most of the land lies along a bend in the Pedernales River where Burnet, Hays, and Travis counties come together. Land prices there already range from $5,000 to $50,000 an acre.

Within a few years, Moore plans to sell or give away all but about 80 acres.

Moore's first big move in state politics came in May, when he and his wife, Linda, wrote a $1,500 check to Lloyd Doggett's campaign for the U.S. Senate. Moore volunteered to do more, but he was told he had reached the financial limit imposed by federal law.

Undaunted, he formed two political action committees, gave them about $70,000, and produced television commercials aimed at selling Doggett to Democratic voters in East Texas. Later, he helped pay for mailing 300,000 letters from U.S. Sen. Ted Kennedy, D-Mass., to Hispanic voters in South Texas.

"He did all that on his own," said Robert Roller, an Austin lawyer who heads Doggett's campaign finance committee. "He hired his own public relations firm and said he wanted to run his own campaign. We had no contact with that effort at all."

Moore said he helped Doggett "because I want the kind of people he represents, the little folks like you and me, to have a voice in government."

"He's got all the powerful interest groups against him, and I just wanted to help make it a fair fight."

Hightower described Moore as "a guy who hit a big one and didn't forget where he came from."

"He didn't lose his politics when he got a bigger bank account.

"He's an unconventional, idea-a-minute kind of guy," Hightower said. "Back in the old days, folks were getting rich off oil. Today it's land. In 1920, Jim Moore would have been a wildcatter."

HOUSTON LAWYER Jim Boone, one of Moore's law school classmates, described him as "a highly motivated sort of fellow." Boone said Moore "always had a lot of self-confidence and was definitely a leader type, a doer."

"You could always count on him to keep his word. When he told you he would do something, you knew he would."

Twelve years ago, Moore was a student at Stephen F. Austin State University in Nacogdoches. He supplemented his benefits under the G.I. Bill by working as a collections officer for First Bank & Trust in Lufkin. He drove a 1965 Chevrolet that "soaked up Turtle Wax."

Born in Lubbock, Moore was 5 years old when his father, a minister, moved the family to Lufkin. Until he was 15, his mother, who held a job and kept house, made clothes for him and his three sisters.

"His daddy didn't make much money," said Moore's mother, Helen Bollier. "Talent for making money doesn't run on either side of our family. So Jim has come on this by his own strength."

Mrs. Bollier, who remarried after Moore's father died in 1971, said her son "surged" his way through school. "He did real well until about the second grade when he discovered playing was more fun," she said. "Then if he decided he was going to do real well, then he made straight As."

At 15, Moore began buying his own clothes and helping pay for the family automobile when he landed a job at Massengill's Meat Market in Lufkin.

AFTER GRADUATION from Lufkin High School, Moore enlisted in the Air Force. He returned to Lufkin in 1972 and worked as a volunteer on Frances Farenthold's campaign for governor before enrolling in college. He was a delegate for George McGovern at the state Democratic convention.

"When Jim was living here, he wasn't dirt poor, but he sure wasn't wealthy," recalled John Henry Tatum, a Lufkin lawyer who previously served as Democratic Party chairman in Angelina County. "I'm not surprised, now that he's got some money, that he's willing to share it with politicians and political causes he believes in."

A 1977 graduate of the University of Texas law school, Moore worked less than a year at Phillips, Neal & Woods, an Austin law firm that guaranteed him a $500-a-month salary. He parlayed it into a $1,400-a-month job, but he wanted more.

He moved to Houston, where he worked a short time with Ross, Griggs & Harrison before joining Walter Scarborough Holding Co. as a junior partner putting together large real estate deals.

"If you're going to make money, you go where the money is changing hands a lot," Moore said. "In the late 1970s, that was Houston. Now it's happening in Austin. And that's one of the reasons I came back."

AMONG MOORE'S Houston projects were:

— Parkway: a multimillion dollar development along Eldridge Road between Buffalo Bayou and Westheimer.

— Kingwood Arabian Farms: a horse training center north of Houston.

— Northpark Plaza: a 106-acre development near Kingwood on U.S. 59.

— Jetero Plaza: a 33-acre office park at the U.S. 59 exit to the Houston Intercontinental Airport.

"Jim made millions for himself and for others involved in those projects with him," said Joe Crofts, a real estate agent who helped Moore buy his first 298 acres on the Pedernales in late 1983. He recalls that Moore paid cash.

"He's a very generous person, and he's concerned with people," said Crofts, explaining that Moore's generosity extends beyond political circles.

"Jim gives a lot of things to a lot of causes, mainly non-political," Crofts said. "He's very charitable, and he does it anonymously. He doesn't like to be the focus of attention."

Among Austin-area developers, Moore was virtually unknown until two weeks ago when he began giving away land. He's still a curiosity.

"People always look askance at you when you're an outsider," he said. "You have to understand, I don't do the developer type things. I don't intend to become part of what's loosely called the development community."

LAST WEEK, he moved his wife, Linda, and his 2½-year-old son, Kelly, from the brown Lost Creek house to a three-bedroom trailer on a parched, 20-acre plot near Hamilton Pool. It sits in the middle of several similar trailers that make up the headquarters of Warrior Show Horses.

Moore is wary of strangers, and a security guard has been hired to keep watch over the complex and the two dozen horses — most of them Arabians — that Moore estimates are worth $1.4 million.

Moore's compound will be sandwiched between a 27-acre tract he is giving to the Democratic Party and several hundred acres owned by James Hurlbut and his brother, Republican financier Bert Hurlbut.

Nearby, if Moore's plans fall in place, will be a community of homes and office buildings on lots ranging in size from 3 to 5 acres. One of those lots — 4 acres along a ridgetop a half-mile south of the Pedernales — already has been platted and is being deeded to Hightower's campaign committee.

Next to Hightower's plot is a 10-acre tract Moore is giving to a rural voter education project and another 10 acres earmarked for the Democratic Small Business Council, a group organized by Dallas financier Jess Hay.

Bronchos need win over 'Dogs

By BOB BRUNDAGE
Sports Writer

No longer unbeaten, the Midland High Bulldogs are looking to regroup and return to their winning ways tonight when they host the Odessa High Bronchos in a District 4-5A battle at 8 p.m. at Memorial Stadium.

With a 4-1 overall record and a 1-1 mark in 4-5A play, the Bulldogs need a victory to move into a tie for a crowded second place. Going into tonight's action, MHS is tied for third with San Angelo, Abilene Cooper and Abilene High at 1-1.

All four are trailing unbeatens Midland Lee and Odessa Permian, one of which will drop into second as the two meet tonight at Ratliff Stadium. Odessa High, with a 2-3 overall and 0-2 district record, needs a win badly to have any hope in the 4-5A hunt.

"We've said all along that one loss was not going to keep anybody out of the playoffs this year," said MHS coach Doug McCutchen. "History has proven that even two losses, with the two team system, hasn't kept anybody out of the race. We have to take it one week at a time, do our business against Odessa High."

HISTORY ALSO shows the Midland High-Odessa High matchup can be very intense. Over the years, the two have met 58 times with the Bronchos holding a 33-25 edge, including last year's 34-14 victory.

"I think any time you put an Odessa team and a Midland team together on the same field you'll have a tough contest," said McCutchen. "Odessa is looking for its first win and it's a big challenge for them. It's a big challenge for us, coming off our first loss. I think that will make for a big ball game."

New Lemieux, old Penguins lose

NHL opens regular season

By BARRY WILNER
AP Sports Writer

It took Mario Lemieux less than three minutes to score his first National Hockey League goal. Still, not even the super rookie could alter the losing ways of the Pittsburgh Penguins.

Lemieux, the first pick in the NHL draft last June after breaking virtually every junior hockey scoring record in Canada, beat Bruins goalie Pete Peeters on a breakaway 2:59 into the Penguins' season opener in Boston Thursday night. He also assisted on a goal by Warren Young, who scored twice.

But the Bruins rallied from a 3-1 deficit and edged the Penguins — the NHL's worst team the past two seasons — 4-3 on defenseman Ray Bourque's slapshot at 14:28 of the third period.

"I wanted to score as early as possible to keep the pressure away from me," said the 19-year-old Lemieux. "I was a little bit nervous in warmups."

The Bruins were nervous after one period, trailing 2-0.

"After the first period, it was an excellent game for us," said Bourque.

"We were somewhat overanxious in the first period," said Bruins Coach Gerry Cheevers. "We're sort of fortunate it wasn't 3-0 or 4-0. They messed up some 2-on-1s and 3-on-1s."

Boston came back thanks to goals by Tom Fergus, Ken Linseman and Mike O'Connell.

Chicago's Behn Wilson (23) takes down Detroit Red Wing Tiger Williams in NHL openers Thursday nigt. The Hawks beat Detroit 7-3.

"If we learned anything from tonight it's that you have to play 60 minutes," said Pittsburgh Coach Bob Berry, whose team had 12 shots in the opening period and only 13 the rest of the way. "We led 2-0, and I'm sure Boston got a little bit better after the first period, but we just failed to keep up the pace."

Maple Leafs 1, North Stars 0

Toronto surprised Minnesota behind the sparkling goaltending of Allan Bester, who stopped 23 shots for his first NHL shutout. The only goal came by Miro Frycer at 2:51 of overtime on a pass from Peter Ihnacak.

It was the first season-opening loss in six years for the host North Stars.

"I can't tell you how I feel, I'm too high and I'm still on Cloud 9," said Bester, who assumed the Leafs' netminding chores in the second half of last season. "Minesota was the team that knocked us out of the playoffs last year, so it was a little sweet revenge to get my first shutout against them."

Greenwood opens district play

By BRUCE CASTLEBERRY
Sports Writer

My how the mighty have fallen.

A year ago, Wall won the District 8-AA championship. This year they haven't won a game.

A year ago, Greenwood wasn't even playing football on the AA level, but were winning their class A district. Naturally, the Rangers weren't going to do anything like that by jumping up a level.

Except the district standings say Greenwood, 5-0, four shutouts, three stars in the backfield.

With the Longley duo of coach Joe Longley and quarterback Chad, plus All-West Texas returnee Roger Smith at fullback and speedy newcomer Terruy O'Steen at tailback, the Rangers have done well.

This week, they'll do Wall, 22-14.

McCamey at Reagan County: Even though the 3-2 Owls are much improved from a year ago, the Badgers (5-0) are still the team to beat in District 8-AA. Last year the Badgers won a narrow victory over the Owls en route to a runner-up finish and an 11-4 year.

The Badgers also are tough on defense, and the Owls aren't a high-scoring team. Looks like another heartbreak for the Owls, 20-6.

Eldorado at Stanton: This one looks like a toss-up, and Stanton has the home field. But Eldorado has been very strong of late.

Neither unit has had remarkable consistency this year, but Eldorado has been active on offense recently.

A hot offense is better than a hot defense, so Eldorado rates the edge by a 27-7.

Andrews at Pecos: Pecos beat Andrews 17-0 last year in a similar situation. The Eagles are good, but Andrews has the ability to get the job done. The biggest problem thus far facing the Mustangs is attitude. Coach David Visentine has a young squad and they haven't fully performed up to snuff. If the edged Pecos, it would help the cause and right the ship that sank a year ago in the same position. Andrews 6-0.

Monahans at Lamesa: The Tors are 4-0 for the first time since anyone can recall, but with Monahans they have one of the best 4A schools in the state. The Loboes were a surprise playoff team a year ago, but nobody is surprised they are the team to beat this year.

Lamesa has a mean defense, but if the Tors' small size were ever to evidence itself, tonight will be the night. Against all odds, Lamesa will probably again be amazing tonight, but reality will probably catch up to them. Rate Monahans with the edge on experience alone, 15-6.

Sonora at Crane: It's been a long hard year for the Cranes, because thus far the offense has been anemic in scoring only twice in five outings. As a result the Cranes are 1-4 and face a tough task in Sonora, 4-1.

Coach Rickey White's young players have had no luck finding a dependable backfield threat to replace the heroics of last year's Vasquez twins, who led Crane to an 11-1-1 season. Sonora, meanwhile, has shown signs of being the only District 7-AAA challenger to Ballinger and powerful Colorado City. The Cranes could rise to the occasion, but we're betting they won't, 21-14.

TERRY WILLIAMSON

One solution to ticket snafu

After the "Great Ticket Snafu of 1984," I think it is reasonable that a change in ticket selling policy be considered for the future, and no one should complain if an alternate plan isn't presented.

I've bounced a new plan off two Midland Lee Booster Club members, who got tickets for the Lee-Permian game tonight and two season ticket holders, who didn't get reserved seats. All four agreed this plan will work.

The practice now in effect has been a long standing tradition. Booster club members at both MHS and Lee have gotten first crack at tickets on Tuesday night during regular club meetings. It has never been a problem before because we have never experienced anything like what happened this week when some 600 Lee boosters gobbled up all the adult reserved seats (around 5,300) that were alloted to Midland.

The most tickets Midland has ever sold for a Lee-Permian game in Odessa is 3,800. No one dreamed that Midland's adult allotment would not be enough. Of course, that was not the case this week when an estimated 40,000 tickets could have been sold when you consider both Odessa and Midland fans.

The new plan I have in mind would consider all groups who want tickets for a possible sellout — boosters, season ticket holders and the general public. For any game that is a possible sellout — and you can usually tell if there is a remote chance of a sellout — booster club members and season ticket holders would be allowed to buy one ticket per membership and one ticket per season ticket holder on Tuesday prior to the Wednesday general sale to the public.

For instance, if a person has two booster memberships (wife and husband) and three season tickets, he would be allowed to purchase five tickets on Tuesday. If the person only had one booster membership and no season tickets, he would be able to purchase only one ticket on Tuesday.

All tickets left over will then go on sale at 8 a.m. Wednesday morning as usual to the general public. Under this plan, booster club members, season ticket holders and the general public would have an equal chance at the remaining tickets. A limit of five or six tickets per person should be instituted for the Wednesday sale. I very seldom see 10 people going together to a game.

If tickets are still left over after Wednesday's sale, tickets could then be purchased on an unlimited basis on Thursday.

For games when you know a sellout is not remotely possible, the old ticket policy could remain with booster club members getting all the tickets they want on Tuesday. The booster clubs would still get a break under both plans, but you would give everyone a chance at tickets for any possible sellouts.

I understand that a new ticket policy for the future is being considered, and I would like to throw this one into the pot. It may be a little more trouble than the current policy, but an equitable solution, with all factions in mind, needs to be found and implemented.

The bottom line is that regardless of what plan you use there is not enough tickets to go around for all who want them in a game like this. However, there has to be a plan that will alert people on what to expect. Those waiting until Wednesday this week did so in good faith, thinking there would be at least some reserved tickets available on Wednesday morning. Some got left out without a fair chance.

That was not the wish of Midland Athletic Director Gil Bartosh and his staff. They were shocked at the response this game generated. But a firm ticket policy that considers all groups in the future could eliminate many problems.

And now back to football. This week's picks.

Midland Lee 28, Odessa Permian 24: This is "Rematch '84." But it's really a prelude to the "Rematch of the Rematch" around Dec. 7. I really don't think it makes much difference who wins this matchup, but it will make a difference when the playoffs roll around. Lee gets the edge here because the Rebels have three tough games under their belts this year while Permian hasn't played a real opponent yet. However, this game will make both teams better.

Midland High 21, Odessa High 8: The Bulldogs will make only one turnover while the Bronchos get acquainted with the likes of Darrell Davis, Brad Edgar and Willie Hernandez. This is a game where both teams are coming off losses and fan interest is in Odessa. That makes it a game where defenses can unleash all kinds of frustrations.

San Angelo 35, Abilene Cooper 27: This game may end Saturday morning. There may be 1,000 yards in total offense, but the Bobcats will keep playoff hopes alive.

Abilene High 18, Big Spring 13: Abilene High seems to have some great individual talent, but haven't molded together as a team yet. Still, the Eagles are too much for the Steers.

And if District 4-5A isn't enough for you on this Friday night, try Houston Yates vs. Houston Memorial or Bryan vs. Temple. You can bet there will be a new set of state rankings after this weekend.

It's also a game of similarities. Unfortunately, not all of them are positive. Take turnovers for example. The Bulldogs and Bronchos are one-two in that category with MHS far better/worse than OHS, 24-15. However, both teams do manage to play good defense and it helps make up for the mistakes.

"We're two very similar teams," said McCutchen. "Both defenses have played very well all year and both special teams units. Offensively, both teams have sputtered."

Even with the offensive problems, McCutchen isn't ready to throw in the towel. After all, the MHS offense did manage to score enough points to win four of five ball games.

"We're still very confident in our offense," said McCutchen. "We've covered a lot of yards and picked up some points. We've just got to cut out some mistakes. I think Odessa feels the same way. We have to cut out the mistakes."

Offensively, the Bulldogs rank fifth in the 4-5A, accumulating 1,401 yards — 862 on the ground and 539 through the air — and have scored 82 points.

Odessa High has picked up 1,195 yards and scored 115 points so far this season but has relied heavily on the run which accounted for 904 of the yardage. The pass has been good for 291.

While the Bronchos have outscored the Bulldogs this season by 33 points, the Midland High defense has done a far better job in keeping opponents from notching numbers on the scoreboard: 42 compared to Odessa's 105. With all the turnovers, the MHS defense has had few choices. It's been rise to the occasion or get blown out. They've risen admirably.

LEADING THE Midland High attack this season has been junior quarterback Matt Marcum. However, due to a bruised hip sustained in the Big Spring game an then reinjured against Abilene High, Marcum is listed as doubtful tonight. In his place, Midland High is going with senior back-up Jeff Alsup.

"The big thing about Jeff is he hasn't been in there much this year," said McCutchen. "But, he is a senior with experience as a back-up last year and we have all the confidence in the world in him. We still feel the offense will execute with him at quarterback."

SMU recruit claims alumni offered cash

DALLAS (AP) — A blue chip football recruit says that a Southern Methodist University alumni offered him $3,000 in cash and the car of his choice to sign with the school four years ago.

Keith Stanberry, a defensive back from Mount Pleasant, Texas, who signed with the University of Oklahoma instead, says he described SMU recruiting tactics to an investigator from the NCAA in the summer of 1983, the Dallas Times Herald reported today.

The NCAA has been investigating SMU's athletic program for 20 months. The focus of the inquiry has the role of alumni in recruiting.

Odessans top youngsters

"If we could have eliminated the first quarter, we could have won the game," said Midland High junior varsity coach Randy Quisenberry Thursday night after his Bullpups suffered a 21-6 defeat to Odessa High.

The first three times the Bronchos touched the football, they took it into the end zone. "They won the first quarter and we won the next three," said Quisenberry. "They just won the first quarter by a bigger margin.

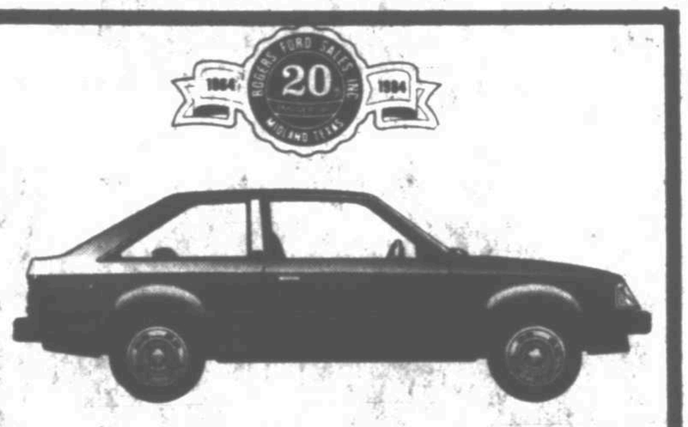

Midland High's lone touchdown came from long-range in the fourth quarter when Johnny Taylor hauled in a Tim Madonna pass and took in 80 yards for the score. The pass for two points fell incomplete.

Next Thursday, the Bullpup JVs will travel to San Angelo to take on the Bobkitties at 7 p.m. while the MHS sophs host San Angelo at 5 p.m.

For Lee, things weren't much better as Odessa Permian posted wins over both the sophomores and the junior varsity squad.

The sophomore team was stampeded by the Panthers 34-20, but the two teams had played previously with Mojo winning 42-8. Losses are losses but the sophs showed improvement.

It was even tougher for the JVs, who lost a heartbreaking 14-13 decision when a two-point conversion attempt went awry in the closing moments.

Denise Lanz of Midland High lunges to return a shot in District 4-5A volleyball action against Odessa High at MHS Thursday night.

Lee, MHS drop volleyball tilts

By BOB BRUNDAGE
Sports Writer

Tall City volleyball hopes suffered a severe setback when both the Midland High Bulldogs and Midland Lee Rebels, tied for second place with Abilene Cooper, were upset Thursday night by Odessa High and Odessa Permian.

Cooper, a 18-8, 15-12 winner over Big Spring, is now in sole possession of District 4-5A second place at 7-3, trailing the undefeated San Angelo Bobcats. One more San Angelo victory or Cooper loss clinches no worse than a tie for first place for the Bobcats.

Midland High dropped its match against Odessa High, 15-7, 15-13 while Lee was held at bay, 15-9, 10-15, 17-15.

FOR THE MHS Bulldogs, it was a case of never getting things untracked. In both games, the Bronchos jumped out to early leads and kept increasing the margin until the Bulldogs were forced into a desperation situation.

In the first game, OHS reached game-point before Midland High was able to score seven in the 15-7 win. The second game was at the start and at the finish, but was controled by OHS during the middle for the 15-13 win. The Bulldogs were able to overcome a 13-8 Broncho lead to tie at 13, but gave up the final two points to take the loss.

"We played a great game," said OHS coach Margie Ephriam, whose Bronchos improved to 2-8 in 4-5A play. "We played like a team. We put it together, finally."

The Bulldogs can still remain in control of their own destiny this season, but the path is a rough one with San Angelo, Cooper, Permian and Lee left on their schedule. The Bulldogs host the Bobcats Tuesday at 7 p.m. and need to play the game of their lives to come out on top.

"We have a lot of tough games left," said MHS coach Sonja Pittman. "Our offense was not running well tonight. A lot of passes came down on top of the net and our setter had all she could do to handle them. If we can't make the pass, we can't run our offense and I think that is the strongest part of our game. Our serves were also off. Odessa High did an outstanding job of hitting the ball."

Detroit happy to 'be back home

WORLD SERIES 1984

DETROIT (AP) — The Detroit Tigers say they have the San Diego Padres right where they want them — and the Padres would like the chance to drag the Tigers back to San Diego.

"We'll go back and get 'em in our ballpark," Detroit right fielder Kirk Gibson said, looking forward to the next three games in Tiger Stadium, starting tonight.

"It might go seven games; it might go five," added Tigers catcher Lance Parrish. "Who cares? We're going back to our park now and we've got a good ballclub. I still like our chances."

"Obviously they're tough when they're at home," chipped in John Grubb, a former Padre. "Now we'll see how they play at our ballpark."

For a while, at least one of the Tigers was beginning to believe it might go only the minimum four. Detroit won the opener 3-2 and before the Padres even came to bat in the second game, the Tigers led 3-0.

"We were naturally thinking 'sweep,' said Darrell Evans, Detroit's cornerman (first base on Tuesday night, third base on Wednesday night). The Padres rallied on Kurt Bevacqua' three-run homer in the fifth inning to win 5-3 and tie the Series at one victory apiece.

"They came back and won it with some of the best relief pitching I've ever seen," Evans said.

Andy Hawkins, a converted starter, has been the star reliever so far with 2 2-3 shutout innings Tuesday night and 5 1-3 more the next night, allowing only one hit each time.

"In all my years in baseball, I've never seen a relief pitcher come in and dominate a game the way Andy did," said Ed Whitson, the second-game starter who lasted just two-thirds of an inning before Hawkins rescued him.

Neither Whitson nor first-game starter Mark Thurmond showed much. Tonight, Tim Lollar (11-13, a 3.91 earned-run average and only three complete games among 31 starts) goes for the Padres.

Dick Williams, the San Diego manager, was asked if he was concerned that the lack of effective starters might ultimately catch up with the Padres — particularly with the bullpen.

"I have to be," he said. "I was hoping to get at least six innings out of Whitson. He was the only guy to go five in the playoffs.

"Then again, we only have a maximum of five games left, with two off-days."

A five-game Series would end matters on Sunday night. The Padres, seemingly discounting the likelihood of their sweeping Detroit in its stadium, are hoping to stretch things out a bit.

"Our main concern right now is just taking it one game at a time," said Tony Gwynn, the Padres' right fielder and National League batting champion. "But we'd like to get the Series back to San Diego. That's our overall goal."

Gwynn will be in right again when the Padres take the field Friday night — which pleases him greatly.

There had been some speculation, fueled by Williams, that he might shift Gwynn (batting .400 in two games) to center field, install Bevacqua (.571), the designated hitter in the first two games, in right field, bench center fielder Bobby Brown (.000), and turn the DH job over to former Tiger Champ Summers, a left-handed batter who could shoot for Tiger Stadium's short right-field fence.

Williams also said he'd never thought seriously about allowing Lollar, a .221 hitter with three home runs during the season, to bat for himself, although he'd floated that rumor before the Series began.

Elder, Barber lead PGA Suntree Seniors

MELBOURNE, Fla. (AP) — Lee Elder and Jerry Barber shot 4-under-par 68s Thursday in the first round of the $150,000 Suntree Senior PGA Tour Classic.

The opening round individual scores did not count for 52 Seniors competing in the Professional Golfers' Association event on the 7,022-yard Suntree Country Club course.

But scores on Friday and Saturday will go down in the books for the 54-hole tourney featuring a $22,500 first prize.

Also posting sub-par rounds were Miller Barber, a two-time Suntree winner, Bob Goalby and Jack Fleck with 69s.

Sam Snead, Howie Johnson and Jim King were another stroke back at 70, while Arnold Palmer, Gene Littler, Dan Sikes, Al Balding and Gay Brewer had 1-under-par 71s.

San Diego Chicken finally backs winner

SAN DIEGO (AP) — The San Diego Padres are in the World Series for the first time. So where does that leave the San Diego Chicken?

"The crazy stuff on the field has been curtailed," Ted Giannoulas, a.k.a. The Famous Chicken, said. "I'm really limited as to what I can do."

Giannoulas, in his 11th year as the zany chararcter in the yellow-and-orange costume, understands his new role of roaming the stands here. No longer can he go on the field, where his antics gained him his greatest fame.

"They've never won before like this and I guess they want to make sure everything goes just right. This is serious business," he said. "I can accept that. Besides, I'm tickled to death for their success."

He did not make the trip to Detroit where the Series resumes Friday night because of a prior commitment in Washington..

The 29-year-old entertainer, often named along with Racquel Welch as San Diego's most famous citizens, performed at about one-quarter of the Padres' home games this season.

"Their success this year has been a boon to my career," he said. "It's a lot easier to make people laugh when the team is winning. And this is the first year I haven't had to compete with the team for laughs."

In real life, he's modest. Inside his outfit, anything goes.

And, in late June, following a wild routine, the Padres' management limited his activity.

The incident took place during the 10th anniversary celebration of the plucky mascot — who began as the KGB Chicken, working for a radio station with those call letters, then was the San Diego Chicken and now is The Famous Chicken. A sellout crowd was on hand at San Diego Jack Murphy Stadium as the Padres played the St. Louis Cardinals.

Going into the bottom of the eighth inning, he launched into a "Indiana Chicken and the Ballpark of Doom" act. The shenanigans culminated with Giannoulas, surrounded by actors dressed as Cardinals pitchers in the bullpen, jumping on a white horse and riding across the field to the safety of the San Diego bullpen.

"The fans were absolutely going crazy," Giannoulas said. "I've never seen anything like it."

At the time, St. Louis pitcher Ricky Horton had a no-hitter going.

"There was a delay of 30 to 45 seconds while I finished up the routine," Giannoulas said.

Three batters later, a double ended Horton's no-hit bid after 7 2-3 innings.

"Right away, I was concerned that I had broken his concentration," Giannoulas said. "I felt terrible. My goal is to entertain without impeding the game."

"Later, he told me it hadn't bothered him."

But the Padres' brass wanted to make sure it wouldn't happen again.

"They told me to refrain from on-the-field antics," he said. "They said they wanted to carry the pennant drive through and not to do anything like that.

"They chose to take a more serious posture. They've never had a winner here like that and I can understand their decision. They're taking a more conservative approach."

This is all new to the Padres, and to the Chicken.

He was hired by a local radio station in March 1974 to dress up in a paper-mache chicken for a one-week promotion in March to get people to go to the zoo. He was paid $2 an hour.

About a week later, the baseball season began, and Giannoulas, a baseball fan, "was looking for a way to get into the Padres games for free."

So, he called the team, which had never been out of last place in the National League West and was doing just as poorly at the gate.

"They said sure, come on over," Giannoulas said. "They were willing to try anything.

"I remember there was one guy with a tuba and his band and they walked around playing. There were lots of characters then. It was like a free-for-all."

Over the years, he said, he grew into the character and "grew out of my shell." His astronomical success took him all over the country - and later to foreign countries - for all different kinds of events.

And in his hometown, "they used to say it wasn't an event unless the Chicken was there."

His extensive travel forced him to start cutting back on Padres performances in 1982, although he remained popular at home.

"Attendance has always been higher for games when they would announce that I would be there," he said, modestly.

That all leads up to now, with the Padres playing the Detroit Tigers in the World Series and the Chicken roaming the stands.

"At the playoffs and World Series, I wouldn't want to do my full show," he said. "The games are too important."

Giannoulas says he hasn't talked with the Padres about performing next year. They'll probably discuss it sometime around Thanksgiving.

"They've started winning and are saying it's a new era," he said. "If they choose to go in another direction, I can respect that."

Teltscher advances

From Wire Reports

TENNIS — American Eliot Teltscher, still battling to recover from a painful back injury, took less than an hour today to reach the semifinals of the Custom Credit Australian indoor tennis tournament.

Teltscher, the No. 4 seed and winner of last week's Mazda GWA classic in Brisbane, crushed 26-year-old Australians lefthander Brad Drewett 6-3, 6-0.

Teltscher now faces a probable semifinal meeting with top seed Ivan Lendl of Czechoslovakia. Lendl faces sixth-seeded American Peter Fleming tonight in the quarterfinals...

HORSE RACING — Sintra, from Seth Hancock's Cherry Valley Farm, won the Queen Elizabeth II Challenge Cup, but the crowd favorite at Keeneland Race Course seemed to be the queen herself who presented the winning trophy for the race named in her honor.

Sintra edged Solar Halo by a nose Thursday to win the Georgian silver cup especially commissioned by the British monarch for her only public appearance during her Kentucky vacation.

The queen presented the chalice made by a leading London jeweler to Hancock in the winner's circle before 12,666 cheering spectators. She also gave commemorative silver julep cups to jockey Keith Allen and trainer Steven Penrod.

Mr. T's Tune, a 25-1 shot, finished third in the field of a dozen 3-year-old fillies remaining after Marcyette was scratched.

Sintra covered the 1 1-16 miles in 1:43 2-5 and paid $3.20...

Mavericks welcome Perkins; call game

DALLAS (AP) — Olympic basketball star Sam Perkins was treated to a thunderous welcoming ovation from an exuberant Dallas Mavericks crowd Thursday night, but saw only 66 seconds of action in an exhibition with the Philadelphia 76ers before play was called off because of a slick floor.

Asked jokingly if he thought his play demonstrated he will be able to play center in the National Basketball Association, Perkins said, "I don't think I could impress anyone with one pass."

The 76ers were leading 22-14 when play was stopped after less than nine minutes of play. Julius Erving had seven points, including a swooping, crowd-pleasing dunk. Dallas scored the game's first goal on a tip-in by rookie guard Tom Sluby only six seconds into the game, but Philadelphia scored the next 13 points.

Dallas started second-year center Mark West, forwards Mark Aguirre and Kurt Nimphius and guards Derek Harper and second-round draft pick Tom Sluby.

Perkins, a 6-10, 235-pound forward-center from North Carolina, the Mavericks' No. 4 pick in this year's National Basketball Association draft, got the night's biggest cheer in pre-game introductions.

Another big cheer went up when Perkins entered the game with 4:25 remaining in the first quarter, along with guards Rolando Blackman and Brad Davis and forwards Jay Vincent and Charlie Sitton, a second-round draft pick from Oregon State.

But by that time, the crowd had already waited through 52 minutes of delays over two spans — 15 minutes before the start of the game and another 37 minutes after play was stopped 1:56 into the first quarter — as more than two dozen workers tried to un-slick a floor that had been waxed.

With 3:19 left in the first quarter, just over a minute after Perkins went in, Blackman slipped and came down hard under the 76ers goal. Time was called, coaches Dick Motta of Dallas and Billy Cunningham of Philadelphia conferred, and a decision was quickly reached to call it quits. Blackman suffered a bruised left hip that team doctors said wasn't serious.

Walter Davis of Phoenix is sidelined from three to four weeks because of an injury he suffered Tuesday night in a fall on a slick court.

Terence Stansbury, a 6-5, 175-pound guard from Temple and also a first-round Dallas draft pick, also got a rousing cheer in pre-game introductions. But Stansbury was in a third fivesome slated for action, and never got into the game at all.

Both Perkins and Stansbury signed only this week after missing the first two weeks of two-a-day workouts while their contracts were being negotiated.

Motta declared after watching Perkins' first practice Wednesday morning that he would be Dallas' starting center when the Mavericks open the season against the Houston Rockets on Oct. 27 in Reunion Arena.

"Sam is going to start. He is going to be a starter for us, I really believe that. Just looking at him today, I can tell. All you need to do is watch him to tell how good a player he is," Motta said.

Stansbury is battling Sluby and second-year player Howard Carter — a former No. 1 pick the Mavericks obtained recently from the Denver Nuggets — to be Blackman's backup. Only one of the three is expected to make the club.

Having played for Temple, which is in Philadelphia, Stansbury is acquainted with most of the 76ers and expressed disappointment he didn't have the chance to play against them Thursday night. But he, like Perkins, said he was warmed by the cheers.

"It was very exciting. It gave me chills," said Stansbury, who added that he was aware of how enthusiastic the crowd could be because he had watched the Mavericks' highlight film of the 1983-84 season.

Texas-OU tickets in hot demand

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — In the "Special Notices" section of the classified ads, just below an item announcing wigs of all colors for sale, is an advertisement that reads as follows:

"Family wants 4 OU-Tx tickets, No scalpers."

The week before the Oklahoma-Texas football game is a scalper's delight. They know that, for the most part, they'll have no problem getting what they ask for their tickets.

This year is no exception. In fact, it's a scalper's dream. Both teams are unbeaten. Texas, 3-0, is ranked No. 1 in the country. OU, 4-0, is ranked third.

The game is going to be nationally televised. But the tube can't compare to the real thing. The bands, the color, the excitement. It's a happening, and the scalpers know it.

"Generally you don't dicker with 'em, they're very determined to get what they want" said a stockbroker who has been buying tickets for his clients. "We've paid from $60 to $150 apiece and the phone is ringing off the wall.

"It seems like if people would just wait until Friday, we could own half the stadium at a reasonable price," he said. "But everyone wants their tickets now so they can get out of here Thursday night."

Oklahoma City police Lt. Dave McBride said scalping in Oklahoma City is illegal. But he said cracking down on scalpers isn't top priority.

"We do respond to people who have complained, but there's no way in the world we'd ever be able to stop all of it," he said.

One advertisement shows two 30-yard-line tickets for sale. A cool $400 and they're yours. At that rate, what's a pair of 50-yard-line tickets worth?

"I got about $450 for mine," said one man who sold two on the 50. "I felt that was a pretty good offer. It took me about three hours to sell them."

The man wanting to sell his 30-yard-line seats says he's an OU medical student with a wife to help support.

"So far I haven't had any real serious offers," he said.

Otherwise, he said, he'll be in the Cotton Bowl on Saturday.

A call to another number assures you that, although one of the tickets is for a student, "we can get you an I.D., that's no problem." Ticket takers at the Cotton Bowl gates may ask to see a student identification card.

Governors wager on Texas-OU

AUSTIN (AP) — The nationally televised Texas-Oklahoma game on Saturday will attract more viewers than the political debate between Vice President George Bush and challenger Geraldine Ferraro, Gov. Mark White predicts.

"Being No. 1 with a quarterback who's not going at full speed creates the underdog advantage that we have," White said Thursday. "I think you're going to find Texas is going to rise to the occasion."

White, questioned at a news conference about the game between top-ranked Texas and No. 3 Oklahoma at the Cotton Bowl in Dallas, said, "I'm really pulling for Texas. If I lose, I'm in trouble."

White was referring to his bet with Oklahoma Gov. George Nigh. The two have agreed that the governor whose team loses will cross the field and direct the victorious university's band in the playing of its school song.

"I haven't (any experience leading bands), and I don't intend to start on Saturday either," White said. "With the help of our good fine coach and good fine University of Texas football team, I won't have to worry about it."

Texas quarterback Todd Dodge suffered a hyperextended right knee last Saturday against Rice, but it appears from what Coach Fred Akers has said that he will start.

Akers says Dodge, a 5-foot-11 junior, has been "very significant" in Texas' 3-0 season.

Texas has averaged 181 yards rushing and 190 yards passing per game in defeating Auburn, Penn State and Rice. But offensive coordinator Ron Toman says, "It's (offense that is) still to be proven."

Oklahoma — second in the nation in rushing defense, allowing only 38 points in a 4-0 season — has had two weeks to prepare for the Longhorns.

Wee Willie tied for Open lead

COLUMBUS, Ga. (AP) — Rookie Willie Wood's golf future appears bright. Bill Calfee, who is tied for the lead with Wood in the $300,000 Southern Open golf tournament, is making plans for a future off the pro golf Tour.

Wood, a 24-year-old from Oklahoma State, and Calfee, a non-winner in nine years on the Tour, shot 6-under-par 64s in Thursday's opening round over the narrow, hilly, par 70, 6,791-yard Green Island Country Club course.

Veterans Hubert Green, a winner of 17 tour events but a non-winner in more than three years, Gary Hallberg and Larry Ziegler were one shot off the pace at 65.

Wood, the smallest player on the tour at 5-foot-7, 135 pounds, had a near-perfect round with seven birdies and no bogeys until the par 5, 585-yard 18th hole, when he three-putted for a bogey.

"I played good, hit it excellently from tee to green," said the 24-year-old, who has earned more than $105,000 as a rookie, including a second in the Anheuser-Busch event.

"I'm very pleased with my first year — I've had my ups and downs, but it's been a good year for me," said Wood, who led the Busch tourney for three rounds before losing by a stroke to Ronnie Black, who shot a 63 on the final day.

"I don't feel like I lost that tournament. Ronnie won it. It was a good experience for me. I got a lot of exposure and it was good to get the feeling of being in position to win," said Wood.

Calfee, a nine-year pro who was making only his tenth start this year, has earned less than $24,000 in 1984 and only $178,000 in his career.

His best finish was a fifth in the Bay Hill Classic in 1980, the same year he enjoyed his best money winnings, earning $33,000.

But, on Thursday, the 35-year-old Calfee had eight birdies and two bogeys after hitting "it really close all day and got about all I could out of the round," he said.

As for his future in golf, Calfee wasn't sure.

"I've played better ths year than in several years, but haven't played much. I've been getting involved in other things, got my securities license and wasn't able to get in any tournaments early," he said.

Calfee finished 149th on the money list last year and failed to make the top 125 which automatically qualifies players for the weekly tourneys.

Reb swimmers split

From Staff Reports

Midland Lee's swim team split a dual meet with Big Spring at Lee High Thursday night, with the girls outpointing the Steers 46-26 while the boys lost 53-30.

Six different individuals and two relay teams took first places for the Lee girls. Kelcey Cheska (200 free), Caroline Reed (200 I.M.), Kristi Burton (100 fly), Carolyn Deal (500 free), Tammi Casey (100 back) and Janet Faulkner (100 breast) all nabbed top finishes for the Rebs, and combinations of the above with Jami Bernard as anchor took relay wins in the 400 free and the 200 medley.

Lee's only losses to the Steers in the girls' competition came in the 50 and 100 freestyle.

Kelly Simmons, a returnee from last years' Rebels, as unavailable due to a volleyball game, so Lee can improve on its 1-1 showing thus far in the young season. Among the boys, only newcomer Alan Reed was able to take victories for the Rebs. Reed had an easy win in the 500 free and a not as easy win in the 100 fly to pace Lee.

Second place finishes in the 200 medley and 400 free relays helped Lee's point totals, along with seconds by Randy Sperry in the 200 I.M., Nick Hopper in the 50 free, Kenneth Holt in diving and returnee Frank Yarborough in the 100 breast.

Coach Charles Guthrie's teams resume action next Tuesday at Odessa High.

Blues 4, Flames 2

St. Louis grabbed defenseman Craig Levie from Minnesota in the waiver draft earlier this week. That move paid off for the visiting Blues when Levie broke a 1-1 deadlock in the first period on a power-play shot from the point.

Brian Sutter, Pat Hickey and Perry Anderson also scored for St. Louis.

Oilers 2, Kings 2

In a surprisingly low-scoring game, the visiting Stanley Cup champions had to rally for the tie on Charlie Huddy's 40-foot slapshot with 6:45 left in the third session. Paul Coffey also scored for Edmonton and the league's perennial scoring king, Wayne Gretzky, managed one assist.

Los Angeles received goals from Dave Taylor and Phil Sykes.

"They (the Kings) played with a lot of heart and enthusiasm," said Gretzky."They have an intelligent coach and some good young talent. We were happy with the tie tonight.

"Teams will be coming at us a little harder this year. But then teams didn't like us much before either."

Whalers 4, Rangers 4

Hartford broke a five-year string of defeats on opening nights behind a sensational performance by Sylvain Turgeon, who scored twice. New York needed a goal by Swedish rookie Tomas Sandstrom with 1:09 remaining to salvage the tie.

Reijo Ruotsalainen, who was moved from defense to right wing this season, scored twice for the host Rangers.

"It's a good start," said Turgeon, the leading goal-scorer among rookies last season with 40. "As a team, we're improved. We're starting the season with a good attitude."

Sabres 4, Canadiens 3

Buffalo notched its 10th straight victory over the Canadiens when Mal Davis poked in a rebound with 2:11 left. Dave Andreychuk and Gil Perreault both had a goal and an assist for the host Sabres.

Canadiens rookie defenseman Petr Svoboda, a defector from Czechoslovakia, had two assists.

"Because the score was close," Davis said, "I think it brought us together tonight."

Black Hawks 7, Red Wings 3

Chicago broke open a tight game when defenseman Bob Murray set up goals by Rick Paterson and Bill Gardner 12 seconds apart in the second period. Murray, who also assisted on the Hawks' first goal, by Troy Murray, saw Paterson tip in his long slapshot. Then Gardner poked the rebound of Murray's shot past goalie Greg Stefan.

Troy Murray had a pair of assists for host Chicago.

Nordiques 5, Canucks 2

Visiting Quebec scored on its first two power play attempts of the season, by Anton Stastny and Michel Goulet. But the game was tied 2-2 when poor checking by the Canucks enabled Bo Berglund to score early in the third period. Wilf Paiement and Jean-Francois Sauve also scored insurance for the Nordiques, who now have won four consecutive season openers.

Capitals 2, Flyers 2

Tim Kerr, a 54-goal scorer last season, connected from 10 feet with 1:39 remaining in the third period to produce the tie for hometown Philadelphia. Ilkka Sinisalo scored the other Flyers' goal during a two-man advantage.

Alan Haworth and Bobby Carpenter got Washington's goals.

Religious leaders agree to disagree

NEW ROCHELLE, N.Y. (AP) — Roman Catholic Archbishop John J. O'Connor and the Dalai Lama, the exiled leader of Tibet, have agreed to disagree about their religious philosophies.

"We see the way to happiness in Christ while in Buddhism, the way is less clearly defined, but it would not be a person," O'Connor, head of the New York diocese, said Thursday before the two men received honorary doctorates of divinity from Iona College. "That may be the critical distinction between East and West."

The Dalai Lama, the temporal and spiritual leader of Tibet, said the "basic messages of all religious tradition" were love, compassion and forgiveness and that religions differ only in philosophy.

Pflug

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Actresses JoAnn Pflug and Patti Davis, President Reagan's daughter, are walking off the television soap opera "Rituals" for very different reasons.

Miss Pflug said Thursday she quit her role rather than play scenes in which she would appear in bed with different men.

Meanwhile, Telepictures Corp., the show's producer, said Ms. Davis was leaving the show because of scheduling problems.

"They said I had to play the role the way they wanted it or leave the show," said Miss Pflug, who played Taylor Chapin Van Platen in the show, which made its debut Sept. 10.

"I took the role because I was told she would be different from other soap opera characters," said Ms. Pflug. "She would not jump from bed to bed.... Then they decided to change the character because they said the audience wanted more sex.

"They wanted to put her in bed not only with her boyfriend but with her daughter's boyfriend."

"I am very sorry that she couldn't continue," said Larry Sanitsky, Telepictures vice president for creative affairs. "But I also feel there was nothing outside the realm of any other television show that we asked her to do."

HOUSTON (AP) — Michael Jackson and his singing brothers reportedly will try to extend the winning streak of their Victory Tour with two or three concerts at the Astrodome next month.

Sales of the $30 tickets will go on sale Saturday for the Nov. 9 and Nov. 10 performances, according to unnamed sources quoted Thursday by the Houston Post.

After the original 13-city tour concluded, national tour promoter Charles Sullivan said three more cities could be included in the tour.

Houston Mayor Kathy Whitmire earlier this year invited the entertainers to bring the tour to Houston.

Kelly

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Gene Kelly, who danced his way into the hearts of millions of Americans on the silver screen, will receive the American Film Institute's 13th annual Life Achievement Award on March 7.

Kelly, 72, will join previous winners of the award such as James Cagney, Orson Welles, Bette Davis, Henry Fonda, Alfred Hitchcock, James Stewart and Fred Astaire, the AFI said Thursday.

AFI Co-Chairman George Stevens Jr. cited Kelly as "one of the premier dancers, choreographers and directors in the history of world cinema."

Kelly began his career in dance and made his Broadway stage debut in 1938 in "Leave It to Me." He shifted to films in 1942 with "For Me and My Gal."

"Since then he has been one of the most creative figures in American filmmaking," the AFI said.

Kelly's films include "Cover Girl," "Anchors Aweigh," "The Pirate," "Ziegfeld Follies," "On the Town," "Singin' in the Rain," "An American in Paris," "Invitation to the Dance" and "Hello, Dolly!"

He received a special Academy Award in 1951 and an Emmy in 1967 for "Jack and the Beanstalk."

Carnegie fund honors heroes

By EARL BOHN
Associated Press Writer

PITTSBURGH — A coal miner who drowned saving a 3-year-old boy and a mechanic who lost his life saving his boss from an attacking gang were among 15 people honored by the Carnegie Hero Fund Commission for acts of bravery.

"It shows that someone out there thinks about him," said Rita Francoeur, 32, whose husband, Roger J. Francoeur, drowned April 25, 1982, after delivering Luc R. Scalabrini to a shallow area in the cold, swift Mattagami River in Ontario, Canada.

Luc, his father and brother were struggling to reach shore after their truck landed in the river. Francoeur, 36, had arrived at the river to fish when he heard their calls for help.

"He was taking his fishing rods and all that out of the car and he heard them and he went right away," Mrs. Francoeur said in a telephone interview Tuesday from her home in Timmins, Ontario.

Francoeur drowned after handing the boy over to others in the shallow water. Luc's father and brother reached land safely.

"It makes me feel a little ligher in my heart," Joann Dougherty of Colwyn, Pa., said about the commission's recognition of her late husband, Thomas F. Dougherty.

The 24-year-old mechanic died Feb. 10.

"Believe it or not, the fight had something to do with a truck clutch. Tom went to help. He would do anything for anybody," said Mrs. Dougherty, who was 4½ months pregnant when Dougherty was killed.

Dougherty's boss at Brind Trucking Co., Paul M. Gula, 33, escaped while Dougherty struggled with two members of the gang. Gula recovered from severe head and internal injuries.

The 15 people named by the commission last Friday or their survivors shared awards totaling $37,500. Since being founded 80 years ago by industrialist and philanthropist Andrew Carnegie, the commission has distributed more than $15.3 million in one-time grants and continuing support in 6,856 cases of heroism in the United States and Canada.

The other 13 recipients survived.

Glen P. Angus, 30, a service station manager from Hatboro, Pa., saved two children, ages 7 and 5, who had fallen through thin ice.

Arturo Aragaon, 58, a porter from New York City, responded to screams and rushed into an apartment lobby to help a woman being threatened by a man with a knife.

R. Stephen Collins, 33, a salesman from Toronto, Canada, jumped into Lake Ontario and pulled a woman 300 feet to shore after the woman had been thrown off a moving motorboat during a fight with a man.

Paul Wayne DuPerre, 30, a meter reader from Portland, Maine, saved a 5-year-old boy who fell into the Presumpscot River.

Robert George Lawton, 25, a dance instructor from North Smithfield, R.I., used his fist to break a window in a burning car to rescue a dazed man after an accident.

James A. McKinnon, 28, a municipal employee in Manitoba, Canada, dived into the Souris River and hauled to safety a man whose truck had skidded into the river.

In a dual rescue, Michael Martin Meserve, 16, a high school student from Sherwood, Ore., and Porter H. Watson III, 38, a carpenter from Friday Harbor, Wash., pulled two young boys from the Pacific Ocean.

Arthur J. Palestini, 39, of Vineland, N.J., was delivering newspapers in Philadelphia when he heard gunshots at a grocery, rushed in, struck the gunman and subdued him until police arrived.

Brian T. Szyndlar, 24, a logger, was fishing at Buzzards Bay near Fairhaven, Mass., when he saw a man struggling near his capsized fishing boat and swam with his fishing pole past the overturned boat and used the pole to tow the man to shore.

In the same incident, Mark Arnold Brito, 20, a college student from Fairhaven, swam to the overturned boat and supported a 66-year-old man until help arrived.

Mark Augustus Tobin, 33, of Nova Scotia, Canada, who is nearly blind, entered the Sydney River when he heard a man apparently intent on suicide splashing in the water. Tobin was submerged when water filled his rubber waders. He removed them under water, swam to the man and pulled him 100 feet to shore.

Francis H. Williams, 35, a painter from Mays Landing, N.J., jumped into Great Egg Harbor River to save a 5-year-old boy.

Longshoreman wins $1.5 million

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. (AP) — A longshoreman who parlayed $20 and a half-hour of gambling into a $1.5 million slot machine jackpot says he is having "the best time of my life."

Odell Chisolm, 41, on a one-week vacation from his job, had come to the resort for the day.

"Some days, it pays to play," Chisolm told officials at Caesars Hotel Casino, where he hit the jackpot shortly after noon Tuesday.

A California man holds the record for winning a slot jackpot. He won $2.5 million last New Year's Eve at Harrah's Tahoe in Stateline, Nev.

Chisolm said it took several minutes before he realized he "hit the big one. It didn't really dawn on me right away," he said.

"But I feel good," said Chisolm as he prepared to dine. "We're getting ready to eat in millionaire fashion."

Chisolm said he plans to buy a bigger house than the 2½-story frame home he currently has in Newark. He also will pay for the education of his sons, Lamont, 21, and Troy, 17.

"Right now, I'm having the best time of my life," he said, noting that he normally dislikes playing slot machines, but considers himself an "avid crapshooter."

He said that for a time he plans to continue working as a crane operator loading containers onto cargo ships, but that he may decline overtime, which he has often worked recently.

"When the sun goes down at work now, I'll go down," he said.

"After my week's vacation is up, I will report back to my normal job," he said, joking that he planned to aggravate his supervisors.

"When a guy's got a million and half, you just don't take orders from anybody," he said with a smile.

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 NT	Pass	3 NT	Pass
Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Jack of ♡.

Obviously, you stand a better chance of being right if you play a defender for one of two cards rather than one specific card. That was the sad lesson South learned on this deal.

North's bidding gets no plaudits from this department. With a ruffing value in clubs, he should have checked on the possibility of a 4-4 spade fit. The spade game would have presented few problems.

Against three no trump West led the jack of hearts. Declarer won in hand, crossed to the king of spades and finessed the jack. West won the queen and made a fine defensive play — a low heart.

Declarer had to decide whether West was leading from the A-J-10 of hearts or whether his suit was headed by the jack. After much agonizing, he chose to play East for the ace and ducked in dummy in an effort to block the suit — down one.

We can't fault declarer for going wrong in hearts — we, too, have gone wrong on occasion. His mistake was in the way he managed the spade suit.

Had declarer needed four tricks from the suit, his line of play would have been above criticism; but three were sufficient for the contract. Declarer could afford to lose a spade trick to East, since then the queen of hearts would have been safe from attack. As long as East held one of the missing honors, that could be accomplished.

At trick two declarer should cash the ace of spades, then lead toward the king and simply cover any card West plays. Unless West has both missing spade honors, the contract is a certainty.

Incidentally, note that declarer has a problem in the heart suit only because the opponents were using standard leads. Had the defenders been playing that the lead of the jack denies a higher honor and that the 10 promises none or two higher, the position would have been crystal clear.

Gideon responds to Dallas Smith's allegations, ads

By HALLYE JORDAN
Staff Writer

Claiming he is tired of his office being slandered, Midland Police Chief Wayne Gideon responded Thursday to political advertisements and public allegations made by Midland County Sheriff Dallas Smith.

Smith, who is seeking re-election as a write-in candidate after being defeated in the Republican primary by Gary Painter, recently has run a campaign spot which condemns Gideon's performance in areas such as the shutting down of an alleged gambling house and prostitution ring and Gideon's refusal to further investigate a charge of official misconduct against one of the city police officers.

"Contrary to beliefs in some circles, I am not a candidate for sheriff," Gideon said. "I do not choose to be involved in political rhetoric. However, I do abhor the unfounded and untrue innuendos leveled toward the dedicated professional men and women of the police department."

Smith, who has filed a $4 million slander suit against Gideon, claiming Gideon spurred rumors of Smith beating his wife which Smith blames for his defeat, said his remarks have only been aimed at the police chief — not police officers.

"I sued Wayne Gideon," Smith said, "not any other police officer."

Smith charged that Gideon "tolerated" the sale and rental of allegedly pornographic video tapes and that the chief looked the other way when Smith questioned him about prostitution and gambling in Midland.

The sheriff said Gideon's "explanation was if we know where they're at we can control them. I didn't agree with that."

The sheriff said he, with the cooperation of other law enforcement agencies, closed the gambling operation of R.J.'s and the "organized prostitution" at the Belair Courts on Wall Avenue in 1977, shortly after taking office.

Gideon, who previously had declined to comment on the allegations, said Thursday: "This department has never turned our head to any criminal violations and never will. Our committed goals to this community are and remain the fair and impartial enforcement of the law."

In response to being asked why Smith's new political push is aimed at the police chief instead of his opponents Painter and Democratic candidate Joe Carr, Smith said: "Simply, Painter and Carr both are taking the position that they're going to work with the police department. Their message is Dallas Smith can't work with local law enforcement.

"We've had no problem working with the FBI, the DEA (Drug Enforcement Agency), DPS (Department of Public Safety), the liquor control board and no problem with working with the city," Smith said. "But on several occasions, Gideon has refused to work with me."

According to Smith, he asked the chief to assign a police officer to work on a team investigating allegedly official misconduct by a police officer who was charged with forcing a couple to perform sexually for him and in a case involving a police brutality charge.

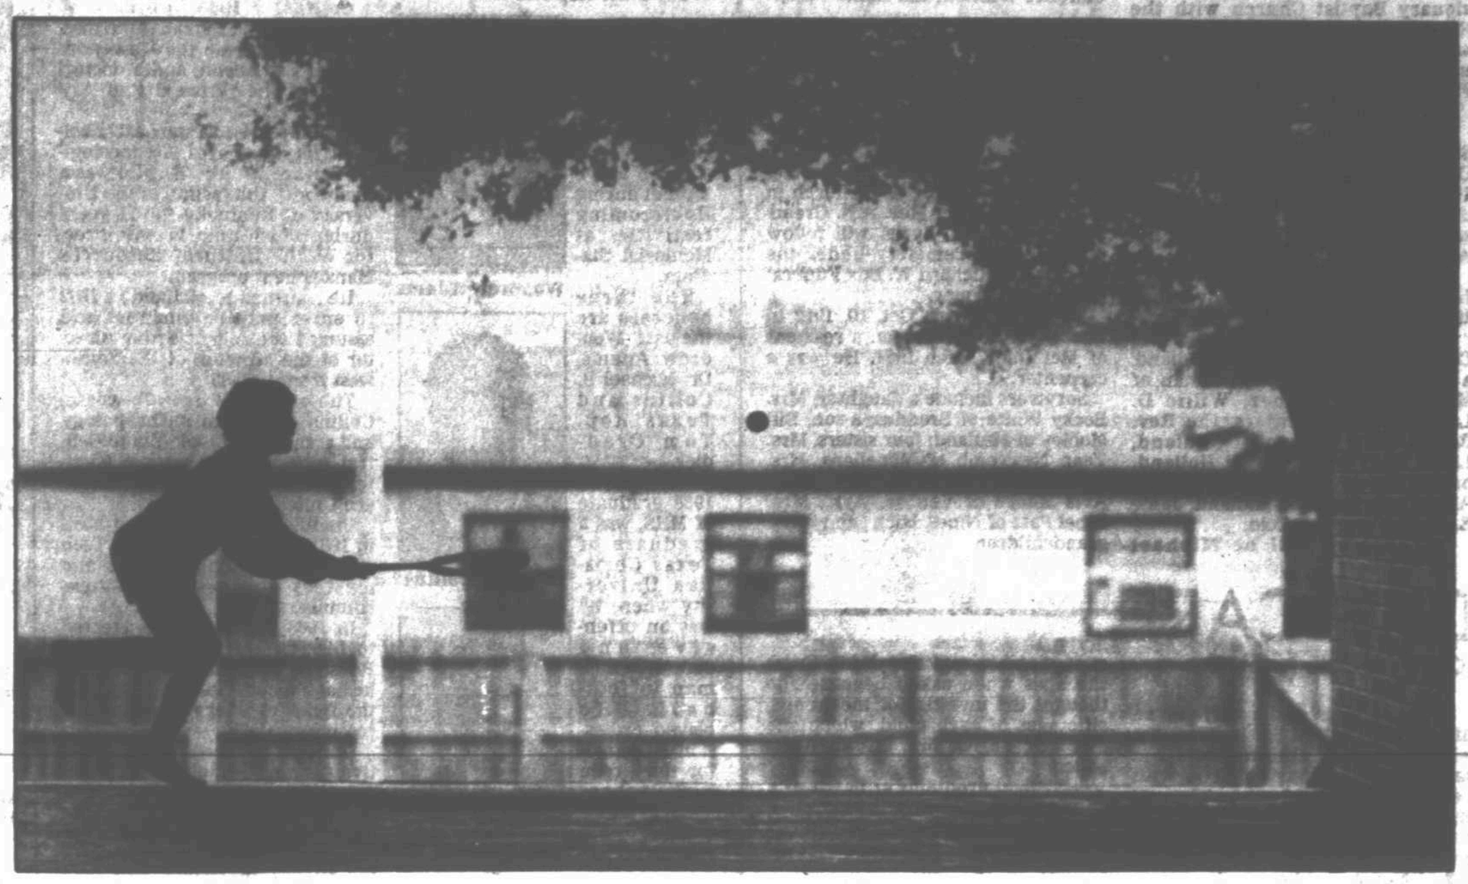

An inner-office memo from Police Maj. Sid Corley to Gideon stated the case against the officer charged with making the couple perform for his amusement was unfounded and the internal investigation was closed.

But Smith said his office and the Texas Rangers worked the case, which resulted in the officer's conviction, although he received a probated sentence.

Smith, however, did not contact the police chief about the search and seizure of allegedy obscene video tapes, which the sheriff's office and the Midland County Attorney's Office conducted.

An inquiry to the Attorney General's Office which was made by police investigators four months prior to the sheriff's raid, indicated prosecution would be difficult and a not-guilty verdict could be more detrimental to the community than monitoring the discreet rental of the tapes, Gideon said.

"I have always believed that the proper place for the resolution of disputes is in a court of law, and not in the media," Gideon said. "Dallas has filed a slander suit against me, and I wholeheartedly look forward to my day in court

Stanton woman expected to be arraigned

By HALLYE JORDAN
Staff Writer

A 24-year-old Stanton woman is expected to be arraigned this morning by U.S. Magistrate Darrell F. Smith on six counts of embezzlement stemming from an incident in which she allegedly misapplied about $200,000 from a Stanton savings association.

Smith today also is expected to arraign a Midland man on four counts of embezzlement and two Chicago men on three counts of conspiracy and transporting illegal aliens, according to federal district clerk's office records. All four indictments were issued Thursday.

Vickie Sue Madison is charged with embezzling $201,000 while working at the Heart of Texas Savings Association. She is expected to surrender to the magistrate this morning and be released on a $10,000 unsecured bond.

According to the indictment, Ms. Madison "wilfully and knowingly, and with intent to injure and defraud the association, did embezzle, abstract, purloin and willfully misapply," the funds while an employee.

She is charged with embezzling $57,000 from the association between Nov. 17, 1982, and April 2; $37,000 between Dec. 2, 1982, and Sept. 27, 1983; $32,000 between June 6, 1983, and Jan. 3; $20,000 between April 14, 1983, and Feb. 27; $48,000 between Feb. 14, 1983, and May 21; and $7,000 between June 1 and June 11.

The felony charges each carry a maximum sentence of $5,000 and/or five years in prison.

William Scott Wilder, 21, of 3104 Preston, also is expected to voluntarily surrender for arraignment on felony charges of embezzlement and be released on a $10,000 unsecured bond.

According to the four-count indictment, Wilder is charged with embezzling $400 from Security National Bank while an employee there. He allegedly embezzled $100 from the bank June 15, June 16, June 21, and June 23.

Maximum sentence for each count is five years in prison and/or a $5,000 fine.

Two Chicago men are in Midland City Jail awaiting formal arraignment on three counts of conspiracy and transporting illegal aliens.

Victor Rivera, 25, and Giovanni Gonzalez-Salazar, 30, were arrested Sept. 25, for transporting illegal aliens from Odessa to Chicago.

The indictment states Rivera met with Isabel Huerta Sept. 14, in Chicago, and arranged to transport illegal aliens from Odessa to Chicago. Both defendants were arrested after allegedly picking up five illegal aliens Sept 25, in Odessa for transportation.

The two are charged with the unlawful transportation and attempt to move Carlos Ortiz-Perez and Jesusita Fernandez-Leyva Sept. 25.

The two illegal aliens are being held in city jail as material witnesses, said U.S. District Clerk Larry Bick.

Political leaders have predictable reactions to Ferraro-Bush debate

By MARK LEWIS
Staff Writer

Thursday night's debate between vice-presidential candidates George Bush and Geraldine Ferraro evoked predictably partisan reactions today from local political figures.

"I think Vice President Bush did an excellent job," said David Godfrey, chairman of the Reagan/Bush campaign in Midland County.

"I thought Ferraro was outstanding," said Michael Higgins, Godfrey's counterpart for the Mondale/Ferraro campaign.

Godfrey said Bush seemed more comfortable than Ms. Ferraro, especially on international issues, and that this reflected his greater experience in public affairs.

"He's Mr. Resume of the Republican Party — he's done it all," Godfrey said.

Midland County Republican Chairman Kelly Fish also thought Bush was more at ease in the debate format.

"She relied heavily on notes, and spoke in a monotone. She wasn't bad, but I noticed that Bush had more control — he knew how to handle the foreign issues."

But Higgins thought Ms. Ferraro acquitted herself well.

"She was convincing and well-posed, and answered the questions directly. Mr. Bush seemed to avoid the questions."

Some television commentators thought the Democratic candidate stumbled a bit on the Central America issue, but Higgins disagreed.

"She made the the point clearly that the CIA should not be out trying to subvert governments."

Joanne DeWitt said Ms. Ferraro enhanced her leadership image with her performance in the debate.

"I thought Ferraro showed she was definitely capable of being vice president of the United States," said Ms. DeWitt, who is active in local Democratic politics. "Bush came across as being defensive (about President Reagan's performance in Sunday night's debate). He defended Reagan more than he debated Ferraro."

The local Democrats thought their candidate's performance, following Mondale's impressive appearance last Sunday, would help them close the gap in the polls.

"Sunday and Thursday showed that the Democrats have a good chance," said Ms. DeWitt.

"I think our momentum will continue to grow," added Higgins.

But the Republicans didn't agree.

"I think (Bush's performance) has blunted the momentum they gained in Sunday night's debate," said Fish, and in any case, the debates "don't seem to be affecting the voters."

Department searching for dog

From Staff Reports

Midland Animal Control Department officers are searching for a dog that bit a boy Wednesday morning in southeast Midland.

According to Public Relations Officer Rice Freeman-Zachery, the 12-year-old boy was on his way to school when the encounter took place shortly before 8 a.m. at the intersection of Dakota Avenue and Florida Avenue.

The child suffered a bite to the left wrist, which did break the skin, Ms. Freeman-Zachery said.

Described as a medium-sized black and white Beagle mix, the dog ran off when a group of children tried to catch him.

Anyone who has knowledge of a dog matching this description is urged to contact the Animal Control Department at 683-2941. Department officers urge persons to not attempt to catch the dog themselves.

Phil Gramm: President Reagan 'solid as ever' in Texas

HOUSTON (AP) — Democratic presidential candidate Walter Mondale did a good job in his debate against President Reagan, but a new poll shows he failed to persuade Texas voters to change their minds, U.S. Rep. Phil Gramm says.

The poll, which is expected to be released in a few days, showed Reagan leading Mondale by more than 30 points, Gramm told a news conference Thursday.

Gramm conceded that the president's performance in Sunday's debate was not outstanding. But the Republican congressman said poll data he received Wednesday night indicated voters in Texas, as well as California, would not switch.

"I think that while most poeple think Walter Mondale did a good job of presenting his viewpoint, the people of America do not agree with that viewpoint. So therefore it didn't change any votes. It certainly didn't change any votes in Texas," Gramm said.

"All evidence suggests Reagan is as solid as ever," said Gramm, declining to reveal who conducted the poll.

Letter outlining violations of day care center released

By HALLYE JORDAN
Staff Writer

A letter outlining violations of the minimum standards for day care centers, which resulted in the revocation of the Day Star Day Care license, was released Thursday by the Texas Department of Human Resources.

Although rumors of child sexual abuse, believed to have prompted the investigation, were not confirmed, the center was cited for 10 non-compliances, including spanking children with a plastic toy baseball bat and a yard stick.

"I didn't want to start in slinging dirt but if that's the way it's going to be," Phyllis Richardson, director of the day care center, said. "Why are they (DHR) releasing all these things to the media that haven't been proven? To me that's libel."

Ann Bradford, DHR area operations manager, did not give a reason for releasing the letter of license revocation. The DHR's typical policy is to not comment on an investigation until the case is closed except to confirm a probe is being conducted.

Day Star has 30 days to appeal the DHR's decision Oct. 5, to revoke the license.

According to the letter, addressed to Ms. Richardson, and signed by DHR Regional Administrator James B. Harvey in El Paso, the investigation began after the DHR received a complaint July 3.

The investigation, initiated by Licensing Representative Valyncia Kirby and Child Protective Services Worker Sylvia Wilkinson, resulted in violations of the following Minimum Standards for Day Care Center:

— Persons whose behavior or health status appears to endanger the health, safety and well being of children shall not be allowed at the facility.

According to the report, three children stated a man who reportedly is the husband of one of the day care workers, hits children with a toy plastic baseball bat. Although staff members interviewed by the DHR said only staff members are allowed to stay around the facility, "numerous children reported" the man "is frequently in the facility and has accompanied children on field trips to various places," the letter stated. One child told DHR investigators she was "afraid" of the man.

"All those violations are blown out of proportion," Ms. Richardson said. "That bat thing was a game with the children. I had no complaints from parents about it until after the investigation."

According to Ms. Richardson, the children play the game by running around a staff person who bops them on the head with the plastic bat, which "is so soft you could hit real hard with it and it wouldn't hurt...They were having fun, they were laughing. The reason I went down there (and saw the incident) was because they wee being too loud," said Ms. Richardson.

— Children shall be supervised at all times.

Both investigators, according to the letter, reported there was no staff member supervising 2-3-year-olds during a visit Aug. 3. The investigators determined the staff member responsible for that room was in the office using the telephone, but the woman said "she was in the office coloring and was away from the room about 15 minutes," according to the letter.

One parent stated she found a small child alone in a crib with no staff person in the room; another parent said a 10-month-old infant followed her out to her car and she had to take the child back into the facility and "find a staff person to care for the child," the letter stated.

"Teachers being out of the nap room was correted long ago," Ms. Richardson said. "But no one's bothered to come back and check."

— There shall be no cruel, harsh or unusual punishment...No child of any age shall ever be shaken or hit, and no child under 5 years old shall ever be spanked.

Three children said a staff person hit children with a toy baseball bat while six other children said the same person spanks children with her hand or a yard stick. "Several children stated that (the staff person) told them not to tell anyone about the spankings or bad things would happen to them or their parents," the report said. "All of the children reported to be spanked were pre-school age children."

"That's just a repeat of things that were said in California," Ms. Richardson replied. "That is a flat-out lie. If they'd tell me who said it, I'd go to them and make them tell the truth. But I'm in the dark (about the anonymous complaints)."

— Infant or toddler feeding bottles shall be clearly marked with the child's name.

The investigators found Sept. 7, bottles were not marked with chilren's names in the 5-month to 1-year-old room or in the 12-month to 2-year-old room.

"The bottles have always been marked. If she found one that wasn't, it was a fluke," Ms. Richardson said. "You don't know how many rolls of masking tape I've gone through."

— Soiled or wet diapers and other clothing shall be changed promptly, in a sanitary and safe manner.

Five infants were found by an investigator Aug. 13, "wet" and believed "to have been wet for some time judging by the soaked condition of their diapers," the report said. On Sept. 7, four of five infants observed by the investigator were found to be wet.

Ms. Richardson said the caseworker only checked diapers while the children were asleep. When one has a baby, one knows "you don't wake a baby up to change their diapers. You wait till they wake up."

— Each child shall have a staff member who is responsible for him or her and who is aware of details about the child's habits, interests and any special problems.

A staff member, who said she had just started to work at the facility, did not know any details of habits, interests or special problems of children she was supervising when questioned by an investigator Aug. 8, the report said. In addition, the staff member did not know the ages of the children.

According to Ms. Richardson, the staff member was new, but she knew "important information" such as special problems or allergies. The woman also knew the children were 3-5 years old but was confused when questioned by the case worker. The staff member said she didn't know the ages when asked because she thought the investigator meant specific ages of each child, which she did not know, Ms. Richardson added.

— Special problems or needs of a child as indicated by the parents, including allergy, and a statement that the special problems or occurrences in the day care center affecting the child will be brought to the attention of the parents. This includes serious communicable diseases.

A parent reported her son was hurt at the facility and no one notified her. She said she was told of the incident by her child after she had picked him up.

"That's true," Ms. Richardson said. "Kids get bumps and scrapes all the time but in this case, the child didn't tell his teacher and he did not cry or complain to her." The child apparently went home and the mother saw the bump and he told her he'd been hurt, she said.

In addition the investigation indicated the center was in violation of standards that mandate varying ages of children who are grouped together, adequate heating and cooling systems and adequate administration "particularly in the areas of supervision and discipline" by the director.

Ms. Richardson said the heating and cooling system has been replaced since the caseworker's last visit and that the children are grouped together.

The letter also stated a parent said her 10-year-old child, who was enrolled in the facility, "was told by a staff member to tell the complaint investigator, if asked, that she is 9 years old." The center is licensed to care for children from birth through 8 years.

Ms. Richardson said she didn't believe any of her teachers would say that.

She said she wanted to go to Austin immediately to appeal the revocation so that if the DHR does close the facility, the parents of the children wouldn't be left up in the air. Already, 25 letters of support have been sent to her to take to Austin.

"I had to write them (in Austin) and you have to go through a mile-long of red tape," Ms. Richardson said of the delay.

She claimed the DHR "does a few things" such as visiting the children when they're napping and waking them up.

"They interviewed a little boy and made him cry and would't allow anybody in there," she said. "His mother is very upset. The law states either she or I should be in there.

"I've made a few mistakes but not enough to warrant all of this," Ms. Richardson said. "I'm innocent and it's just not fair and it's not right."

Three Midland High alumni to be honored

Woodrow Adams

Michael Collins

Tom Craddick

Three Midland High School alumni will be inducted to the MHS Alumni Hall of Fame tonight during Homecoming festivities at Memorial Stadium.

The three honorees are the late Woodrow Adams, Dr. Michael B. Collins and Texas Rep. Tom Craddick.

Adams, a 1936 graduate of MHS, was a graduate of Texas Christian University where he was an offensive and defensive lineman in football. He played professional football for the Green Bay Packers until 1942 when he enlisted in the Marine Corps.

Among his civic activities, Adams was president of the Midland Exchange Club, president of TCU exes, and was instrumental in creating an annual $10,000 scholarship for deserving MHS graduates attending TCU.

Accepting the award on behalf of Adams will be his wife, Jean and son, Dr. Sam Adams of Forth Worth.

Collins, a 1960 graduate of MHS, earned bachelor and masters degrees from the University of Texas at Austin; and a doctorate from the University of Arizona.

Collins served as staff archaeologist for the Texas Archaeological Salvage Project. He also was a member of the faculty at the University of Kentucky for 11 years during which time, he was director of the Cultural Resources Management program.

He returned to Midland in 1982 to enter private business and assumed the role of acting director of the Museum of the Southwest from 1982-83.

The author of over 70 works, Collins' career in anthropology and archaeology took him to Central America, the eastern Mediterranean and the entire southern United States.

Craddick graduated from MHS in 1961 and attended Texas Tech University earning bachelor and masters degrees in business administration.

In 1968, Craddick was elected to his first term in the Texas House of Representatives where he has concentrated his efforts in the fields of energy and natural resources.

During the recent 68th legislative session, Craddick was chairman of the Natural Resources Committee, vice chairman of the Joint Committee on Water Resources and was a member of the Energy Resources and Calender committees.

Craddick is the recipient of various awards including the Outstanding Distinguished Service Award from the Texas Water Conservation Association, the Texas Industrial Commission Outstanding Service Award and was named one of the Ten Outstanding Representative Legislators for 1984.

Family still searches for clues of missing son

ANDREWS, Texas (AP) — Judy Harvey sat in her comfortable living room flipping through the pages of a green spiral notebook.

The pages, filled with handwritten names and dates, outlined the steps Mrs. Harvey and her husband, Jim, have taken since their only son, Chris, disappeared July 11 from the family's summer home near Pagosa Springs, Colo.

Despite the ordeal, Mrs. Harvey said she wants to present the family's plight in a positive manner — possibly helping other parents who may someday be in a similar situation.

"We've had an enormous amount of people who care," she said.

The Harveys' search has taken them not only into the Colorado mountains, but into a congressman's office. And their ordeal has placed them in contact with people around the country.

TWO WEEKS AGO, the Andrews couple believed they had met with success, only to learn that the beaten young man they thought was their 15-year-old is the 18-year-old son of a New York minister and his wife.

The Harveys' travail began July 11, when Chris didn't return to the summer home. A check with neighbors in the small mobile home park where they were staying showed Chris had visited a friend about 3 p.m. to talk about a band camp he planned to attend later in the summer.

By 11 p.m., the Harveys had called the Archuleta County Sheriff's Office.

Although their summer home is in Hinsdale County, that county has an agreement with neighboring Archuleta County to provide law enforcement services, Hinsdale County Sheriff Burt Smith says.

Mrs. Harvey said the Archuleta County Sheriff's Department began its search about noon the following day — a Thursday — and continued until 4 p.m. Friday.

THE NEXT WEEKEND, Archuleta County organized a search involving five rescue teams, helicopters and dogs, Smith said. After using $150,000 in manpower and equipment, searchers finally concluded that there was a 95 percent probability that Chris was not in the county, the sheriff said.

In the meantime, the Harveys, with the help of family and friends, had begun to distribute posters of their son across the state.

At the encouragement of friends, they also began to make other inquiries. One of their first calls went to Rep. Kent Hance, D-Lubbock.

"His office has been extremely supportive," Mrs. Harvey said.

Aides in Hance's office encouraged the family to call the National Center for Missing and Exploited Children. The private organization, which has received federal funding, was only starting its work to deal with the safety and protection of children at that time.

THE HARVEYS were assigned a technical adviser, who has remained in touch with the family during the search. In addition, the family began listing Chris with other organizations that deal with missing children.

Last month, law enforcement officers in Colorado called the Harveys — who had returned to Andrews, where they both teach school — to say they thought Chris had been located.

A badly beaten boy had been found by the roadside in Eagle County, Colo., and was taken to a hospital in Grand Junction, Colo., where he had undergone surgery.

The boy's physical characteristics matched Chris'. His face was partially hidden with a respirator and bandages.

A day after the Harveys arrived at the hospital, doctors checked the young man's teeth during surgery and found they didn't match Chris's records. Instead, the young man was identified as Scott Yoos, who was hitchhiking across the country taking photographs.

His parents, the Rev. Fred and Lorrie Yoos, flew to Grand Junction, where they met the Harveys — a relationship Mrs. Harvey said is a special one.

"WE NEEDED someone, and so did he," she said.

Yoos calls the Harveys daily with reports on his son, who recently started walking again.

For the Harveys, who returned to Andrews about 10 days ago, it was back to square one, Mrs. Harvey said they have continued spreading the word about their missing son.

"One of the things that have been a problem for the law enforcement is that there have been no clues," she said, noting that he disappeared with only the clothes he was wearing. The family doesn't know if he was abducted, ran away or met another fate. "I can tell you 100 different theories."

Morticians board set for meeting on rules

AUSTIN (AP) — The state Board of Morticians has called a November meeting to decide if Texas' undertaking business needs more regulations to improve its funeral pricing practices.

The board unanimously approved that rule-making session Thursday after a stormy public hearing where both consumers and funeral directors criticized the state board for not keeping them properly informed.

"We're law abiding people," said Tommy Metcalf of Conroe, president of the Texas Funeral Directors Association. "We just need to know what the law is."

"You passed a law in 1983 and didn't tell us about it," Metcalf told the board. "I am tired of funeral directors getting lambasted. All we need is better information from the board. You tell us what we should do and we will do it."

Board chairman Aubrey Fife of Junction broke in to say the board did inform funeral homes by sending out a pamphlet on the 1983 laws with each license renewal.

"Well, I never got one," Metcalf said, "and you should have done more than send out a pamphlet."

Wearing the proper shoes for the activity is a necessary part of keeping feet healthy.

Hearst News Service

Breakdancing, aerobic dancing and cowboy boots — like the faddish platform shoe of yore — can wreak havoc on your feet.

"You're trying to squeeze seven inches of foot into something three inches wide," says podiatrist Paul Sheitel about the latest urban-cowboy vogue that can result in hammertoes, bunions, callouses and nail problems. "It's like women in pointed toe shoes. The toes are actually overlapping."

Athletes, too, have run into trouble when they try to switch from their boots to running shoes. Runners and joggers run the risk of shin splints from shortened calf muscles that cause the foot not to meet the ground solidly.

"Unless you have a narrow, flexible foot — which a minority of men have — select boots larger than your normal shoe size and wear them only on special occasions. If you wear them all the time, you're going to see a lot of long-term problems." Sheitel, who notes that serious-minded Texans spend $800 or $900 or more on their ostrich- and armadillo-hide boots, also advises buying good boots that fit well across the instep.

Fortunately, the remedy for "breakdancer's foot" — petroleum jelly — is not so expensive and is found in most home medicine cabinets.

INCREASINGLY, SHEITEL is treating well-conditioned youngsters for breakdancing injuries. The extreme position of the feet and the jumps that are an integral part of a repertoire put tremendous torque on the bones and ligaments of young feet, often causing slipped growth plates on the outside of ankles, which can later cause chronic pain.

Sheitel, who does a lot of running, suggests breakdancers take a hint from serious marathoners who coat their feet with petroleum jelly to reduce friction and ward off blisters. Cushioned socks also help. Leather shoes, which are cooler than synthetics and reduce abrasions, minimize injury.

"You must wear the proper shoe for the proper sport," says Dr. Lanny Rubin, president of the Maryland Podiatric Medical Association. "Years ago, you just bought a pair of tennis shoes, but now the shoe industry is more sophisticated. If you wear jogging shoes to play tennis, you get ankle twists. They're not for aerobic dancing, either."

For aerobics, tennis shoes or court shoes are fine, Sheitel says. Or you can try the new shoes specially designed for aerobic dancing. But, he warns, "any shoe is better than none." Stress fractures and achilles tendonitis, as well as other injuries, are reported by 65 percent of barefoot exercisers.

A good aerobic shoe should give lateral support through the arch and midfoot and have toe guards, a light midsole-and-gum rubber soles. Nylon mesh shoes are light and cool.

IT'S BEST TO SHOP for shoes late in the day, according to the American Podiatry Association, as feet are larger then. Try the shoe with the socks or leotard you usually wear to exercise class and be sure the shoe provides a thumb's width at the end and a pinch over the toe area.

If you're out of shape, take it slow with aerobics, warns Rubin, or you'll fall victim to "overuse syndrome." He recommends a conservative approach: Start with a walking program coupled with stretching exercises — say, a yoga class for three months or so. Then graduate to mild aerobics. Hold off for a couple of years before you start a Jane Fonda routine.

Here are some other tips from podiatrists for the sports-minded.

— Runners should wear only one pair of cotton socks. Additional socks are too bulky and may make shoes too tight.

— Runners' toenails should be angled, not cut in squares. Any painful corns and calluses should be treated. Pain in the arch of the foot is usually a sign of strain. Heel pain, however, often signals a general medical problem. Runners who sustain an injury should promptly apply ice — never heat — and get professional help immediately.

Fit shoes properly for health, comfort

Hearst News Service

Look no further than a woman's closet to uncover the cause of her foot pain, says Dr. Lanny Rubin, president of the Maryland Podiatric Medical Association. You'll find dresses in sizes 8, 10 and 12, but if her "10 pairs of shoes are all size 9A, they probably don't fit."

"Shoes are like dresses, blouses. All have style, are cut differently. You may need a size larger or two sizes wider in a particular shoe. It's very tough to communicate this."

Here are some pointers for selecting shoes to make your feet smile:

— Find an experienced shoe-fitter. This is no easy chore, Rubin readily admits. While orthopedic shoe stores are a natural, they are not a gold mine of stylish shoes. In other better-grade shoe stores, a few salespeople may know how to measure feet and select shoes for your particular foot. Others may only know where the 8-1/2-AA shoes with the open toes are shelved. As a rule-of-thumb, he says, choose a store where personnel take the time to measure each foot and show you different styles. But, ultimately, "It's your responsibility to see that you get fitted properly."

— When was the last time you really looked at your foot? Before you slip it into any shoe, take a good gander. Do you have a long vamp (the distance from your instep to the tip of your toe)? Do you have long toes or short stubby ones? If you cramp your toes in a toe box or vamp that is too short, you run the risk of hammertoes, bunions, corns, callouses or irritated nerves.

— If the shoe doesn't fit in the store, it won't at home. "There's no such thing as breaking in a shoe. It may be a bit stiff, but if it pinches, bites, cuts or rubs, it won't improve once you leave the store."

— For everyday wear, choose a leather shoe with a thicker sole, full, roomy toe box and a one-inch heel.

— If you haven't put together a fitness program, get your feet in shape and start walking, but watch out for corns and fungus infections. They can sidetrack you from the sidewalks and put you back in the rocking chair.

— Walking is great exercise for the elderly, but they should get clearance from their doctors before trekking out. Well-fitted walking shoes that support and cushion the heel and arch are vital. It's also a good idea for the elderly to check their feet regularly and care for them properly, seeking medical attention when necessary. Foot checkups can play a key role in early diagnosis of many illnesses, including diabetes.

Modest swimwear is still available

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR READERS: "Mad in Madison" wrote: "If you know where a woman can buy a modest one-piece bathing suit, please let me know. I am a senior citizen whose doctor has recommended swimming as a healthful exercise, but I am no Venus in a bathing suit," etc.

I told "Mad" I would have to search far. Hundreds of readers sent pages from the catalogs of Sears-Roebuck, Montgomery Ward, J.C. Penney and National, all featuring beautifully styled, modest bathing suits such as I have not seen in many years. There were one-piece (some skirted), not-too-revealing swimsuits, available in all sizes for women of all ages. And the prices were right, too.

Another surprise: The Lane Bryant stores, known for dressing the larger woman, carry stylish, conservative bathing suits from size 14 and up.

Many readers suggested shopping at medical supply shops. They said the bathing suits designed especially for women who have had mastectomies are good-looking, have built-in bras, and were purchased by many women who have not had mastectomies. (Look under "Prosthetic Appliances" in the Yellow Pages of your telephone directory.)

All maternity shops feature modest, non-revealing swimwear, some with matching cover-up jackets, suitable for non-pregnant women.

Another idea: Leotards, now popular for exercise and dancing classes, can double for swimwear. They're comfortable, good-looking, modest and reasonably priced.

And last but not least, make your own. Stretch-and-sew fabrics and patterns are available in shops and department stores.

So, women, we need not be slaves to fashion. The abbreviated bikini is only for the lean, the young, the hairless and the brave. But fortunately, we do have some choices — when we know where to look.

DEAR ABBY: My wife and I were going to take our grandchildren, ages 8 and 10, to the movies last Saturday, and we ended up having ice cream and going home without seeing a movie.

Do you know why? I will tell you why. There were nine movies playing, and not one was a family movie. They were all rated PG, PG-13 and R.

Abby, the movies used to be a family pleasure. Why doesn't the movie industry make family entertainment anymore? We have to see reruns of "Snow White" and "Bambi" until we have them memorized.

We need some good, funny, clean, old-fashioned movies. Abby, whatever happened to Laurel and Hardy? — GRANDPA IN APPLE VALLEY, CALIF.

DEAR GRANDPA: The same thing that happened to Abbott and Costello. (They died.)

Movie moguls, are you listening?

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I want to start a family. Twelve years ago, when I was 17, I had an abortion in the early stages of pregnancy. There were no complications.

I do not want it on my medical record. My husband does not know about it, and if he were to find out, the consequences could be devastating.

Can my gynecologist tell if I've had an abortion? — NO NAME, PLEASE

DEAR NO NAME: No. If yours was a routine, complete abortion with no complications, there is no way a gynecologist can detect it.

(Every teen-ager should know the truth about drugs, sex and how to be happy. For Abby's booklet, send your name and address clearly printed with a check or money order for $2.50 (this includes postage) to: Abby, Teen Booklet, P.O. Box 38923, Hollywood, Calif. 90038.)

Safe Halloween requires planning

NEW YORK (AP) — Halloween, a custom of carefree fun and fantasy, has become an observance that stresses caution, notes Alexandra Eames, representative of PAAS,a firm that produces Halloween makeup kits. She listed basic precautions for Halloween:

— An adult should accompany children going trick-or-treating and they should go only to homes of people that you know.

— Wear hypoallergenic makeup instead of masks, which can obstruct vision.

— Put reflecting tape on costumes, and carry a flashlight.

— Make sure the costumes and goody bags won't trip trick-or-treaters.

— Give and accept only store-wrapped goods as treats.

— Leave and return home from trick-or-treating before dark.

By ERMA BOMBECK

If there's one thing I can't stand, it's being accused of being sexist . . . especially when the accuser has a point.

A few columns back, I pointed out the need for a greeting card inviting dawdling husbands to dinner. I think I said there is something Pavlovian about the words, "DIIIN-AAAAAAH!" that sends men scurrying to clean out the medicine chest, trim their toenails and set the garbage cans out at the curb.

It has now been pointed out that a specialized greeting card should also be sent by men who are in a hot/cold car with all the kids waiting for the woman of the house who is inside doing God knows what.

Okay, okay! But you have to understand the way a woman's mind works. A woman is the last one out of the house because when she leaves it, it is always with the possibility it will be the last time she will ever see it. The next one to view it could be strangers.

That's why the faucets have to be turned off, all the toys picked up off the floor, the garbage from the sink wrapped and put in a bag, water from the floor mopped up and 15 lights extinguished. (There are more at night.)

The beds that someone sat on to answer the phone have to be smoothed out, the towels hung up from the floor, the soap retrieved from the shower drain, the top put on the shampoo tube, water for the dog set out, the sliding doors locked, the water spigots turned off for the washer, magazines stacked neatly on the coffee table, and a note written for the cleaner in case you get home late.

The thermostat has to be adjusted, the draft in the fireplace closed, the garden hose coiled neatly so no one will trip over it, and the iron unplugged.

Extra nose tissue has to be packed and any medication, tickets, picnic supplies, sunglasses, eyeglasses or anything else that's forgotten. Extra car keys are packed and maybe rain gear in case it looks cloudy.

The hall carpet has to be smoothed out, the pictures straightened, dead leaves removed from all the plants, the kitchen chairs shoved under the table and a last-minute check to see if the hamster cage is secure.

The second to the last thing she must do is FLUSH!

As a husband sits in the car, honking on the horn, racing the motor and shouting, "What are you doing in there?" a woman performs her last ritual — calling whoever they are going to visit and telling them they're going to be late.

El Paso refinery kicks out union

EL PASO, Texas (AP) — After 15 months of an often bitter strike against Phelps Dodge Corp., non-striking workers at the company's El Paso refinery have voted to oust the United Steelworkers of America as their bargaining representative.

That move, announced Thursday, surprised neither union officials nor the non-striking employees, and was termed a "relief" by at least one worker.

Phelps Dodge, the second largest copper producer in the nation behind Kennecott Corp., has used new hires and non-striking employees to continue operating in Arizona and El Paso since a corsortium of 13 unions struck on July 1, 1983.

A union decertification election was held in El Paso last month, after National Labor Relations Board regional director Milo Price ruled that striking employees had been permanently replaced, making them eligible to participate in the voting process.

On Thursday, the September-cast ballots were unsealed and counted, revealing a 372-4 decision against the union.

Decertification elections currently are being held at Phelps Dodge's Arizona facilities.

Approximately 400 people — three-fourths of them new hires — were eligible to vote in the El Paso election, said Larry Medrano, NLRB officer in El Paso.

He said voters cast 378 ballots, which asked the question "Do you wish to be represented for purposes of collective bargaining by United Steelworkers of America?"

Of the 378 ballots, 372 were against the Steelworkers, four were in favor of the union and two were invalidated because they were unmarked.

After Thursday's 90-minute ballot-counting session, Phelps Dodge employee Ed Myhand said he was relieved the battle was over.

"I've never been a union person," said Myhand, who was hired by the company after it was struck. "The people who went out on strike really didn't know what was going on — they didn't look at the economy. It's a relief to have it over."

Medrano said that if the election results are certified, no attempt to re-organize can be made at the El Paso refinery for a year.

"You can have only one union election a year," he said.

Ed Myhand, a laborer at El Paso Phelps Dodge Refinery looks on as Larry Medrano of the National Labor Relations Board counts secret decertification votes from an election at the plant. The United Steelworkers local 501 was voted out by a 372-4 margin.

And Myhand and a fellow employee predicted Phelps Dodge employees would not be wanting union representation next year.

"What for?" asked Myhand when questioned about whether he thought company employees would re-organize at a later date.

And Rick Nieto, who has been with Phelps Dodge for seven years and did not strike, said, "I've been on both sides. I'm happy with the results today."

Gabriel Cedillo, Steelworkers business agent in El Paso, said the union was expecting the ousting.

"We were under no hallucinations," Cedillo said. "We expected this. What can you expect from the new workers? They were brainwashed."

But current employees of the refinery said Phelps Dodge officials did nothing to influence their voting.

Medrano said objections to the election results, which were tallied in the presence of union officials, Phelps Dodge representatives and current employees, can be filed during the next week. He said that if no objections are filed, Thursday's results would be certified.

Cedillo said a decision on whether to object to the election would be made by the union's attorneys.

World Court rules in U.S. offshore dispute

THE HAGUE, Netherlands (AP) — The World Court today drew an ocean boundary between New England and Nova Scotia, leaving part of the resource-rich Georges Bank under Canadian jurisdiction but awarding the larger part of the area to the United States.

The ruling was read by Judge Roberto Ago of Italy, the president of the special chamber handling the boundary dispute. It drew a line through the Gulf of Maine, roughly in the middle of the 30,000-square-nautical-mile area in dispute.

It took four hours for the judge to read excerpts from the ruling, which may end the dispute that started in 1976 when the United States and Canada both extended their eastern coastal boundaries. The Court, judicial arm of the United Nations, has no enforcement powers and depends on voluntary adherence to its rulings.

Four members of the five-judge special chamber voted in favor of the ruling, while French Judge Andre Gros voted against it.

The main focus of the conflict has been Georges Bank, the traditional rich fishing grounds for American and Canadian fishermen which, according to a recent Canadian Geological Survey study, is believed to contain energy reserves estimated at a billion barrels of undersea oil and natural gas.

The survey finding was revealed by a source close to the Canadian delegation, who spoke on the condition of anonymity.

During hearings before the five-member special chamber last April, the United States claimed all of Georges Bank, while under the Canadian claim, the area would be roughly split between the two countries.

The emphasis in the proceedings has been on subtle points of international law, history and economic considerations since the case opened at the World Court in the Hague on April 2.

American representative Davis R. Robinson last April based the U.S. claim on a 1945 proclamation issued by then-President Harry Truman claiming jurisdiction — including fishing and mineral resource rights — over the coastal continental shelf up to 600 feet deep.

Arco announces three offshore discoveries

HOUSTON(SWN)–ARCO Exploration Company has announced three significant gas discoveries in the northern High Island area, offshore Texas, 45 miles southeast of Galveston.

The company is currently drilling other exploratory tests and delineation wells in the area and plans to continue drilling activity through the end of the year.

The discoveries were made on 100 percent ARCO-owned leases bought at the Federal OCS Sale 74 in August 1983. At this sale ARCO paid $32.5 million for nine full interest blocks.

FERC approves gas transportation rate

MINNEAPOLIS(SWN)–A recent Federal Energy Regulatory Commission (FERC) decision approved a transportation rate which allows the Northern Boarder Pipeline (NBPL) to transport Williston Basin natural gas from North Dakota to a Sioux City, Iowa, industrial plant on a short-term basis. The decision benefits both NBPL gas shippers and their customers in addition to making the closure of the industrial plant less likely.

The Northern Border Pipeline is a contract carrier pipeline which is currently authorized to transport up to 975 MMcf per day of Canadian natural gas from Port of Morgan, Mont., to Ventura, Iowa. Northern Plains Natural Gas Company, an InterNorth subsidiary, is the managing partner and operator of the line.

Ralph Daniel, President of Partners Oil Company, have announced that its Plan of Reorganization had been confirmed by the United States Bankruptcy Court for the Southern District of Texas, on Friday, October 5, 1984. The Plan provides for the refinancing of a substanital amount of secured debt to institutional lenders and the satisfation of all pre-bankruptcy unsecured claims with a combination of cash, common stock and long term notes. The Company filed its Petition for reorganization on April 12, 1983.

The Plan was overwhelmingly approved by all creditor and share-holders classes. The Company intends to commence implementation of the Plan on November 1, 1984. The Court will retain jurisdiction for limited purposes, such as the liquidation of pending claims which have been disputed.

Railroad executives sued in slurry fight

BEAUMONT, Texas (AP) — Executives of two of five railroads named in a $2.8 billion federal lawsuit deny they conspired to defeat a coal slurry pipeline project that lobbyists say would have put the railroads out of business.

Investors canceled the project in July, citing difficulties in obtaining financing and rights of way.

In the suit filed Wednesday here, Burlington Northern, Union Pacific, Missouri Pacific, Kansas City Southern and Chicago North Western railroads were charged with conspiring to defeat the project.

But Burlington Northern spokesman Mike Wenninger says the charges are "baseless."

"Our railroad company is certain that everything we did regarding any of the slurry pipeline projects was all done properly and aboveboard," he said.

The pipeline project, planned by Energy Transportation Systems Inc., would have transported coal slurry from the coal-rich Powder River Basin in Wyoming and Montana to Texas and other Midwest states — a route currently served only by the railroads.

The Texas Railroad Association publicly opposed the pipeline in 1976, when the Texas Legislature considered a bill that would have given pipeline developers the power of eminent domain.

Lobbyists said pipelines would mean economic ruin for railroads, which earn more than 25 percent of their revenues by transporting coal, and would cause environmental hazards because of leaks and spills.

"Although we have not had an opportunity to study the ETSI complaint, we are generally familiar with ETSI's claim of unlawful anti-competitive action by western railroads," said Joe McCartney, a spokesman for Union Pacific, which includes Missouri Pacific. "We are confident that the anti-trust suit against the Union Pacific System will not be sucessful."

Spokesmen for other railroads could not be reached for comment Thursday.

The suit contends the railroads conspired in violation of the Sherman Anti-Trust Act to refuse permits for the pipeline to cross the railroads' rights of way, encouraged land owners not to grant rights of way and threatened rate increases to rail customers who negotiated with the pipeline company.

"Railroads entered into an agreement to delay and destroy the substantial competitive threat presented by ETSI's coal slurry pipeline project," the suit charged. "Constant attacks from the railroads on all fronts created serious doubts about when, and even whether, the project would become a reality."

ETSI "would be engaged in the same business but for the acts of defendants," the suit contends. ETSI owners said they invested more than $140 million in the project but suffered $940 million in damages.

Coal slurry pipelines move water and coal in granulated form through 28-or 38-inch underground pipes.

McCartney said Thursday that "ETSI has tried and repeatedly failed in the Congress to obtain private pipeline eminent domain legislation. Moreover, ETSI has bid against the railroad industry in the marketplace and lost. It has now apparently decided to turn to the courts in an attempt to recoup its losses."

MONEY FUND TABLE COMMENTARY. Assets of the 256 taxable money funds reported by Donoghue's MONEY FUND REPORT (R) of Holliston, Mass. 01746 increased $4.1 billion to $178.5 billion during the week ended Oct. 9, 1984. The taxable funds' 7-day average yield decreased to 10.36 percent from 10.49 percent. The taxable funds' 30-day average yield decreased to 10.54 percent from 10.61 percent. The taxable funds' average maturity increased one day to 41 days.

William E. Donoghue says, "Led by institutional investors who poured $2.8 billion into taxable money funds this week, the assets of all taxable money funds rose a record $4.1 billion. Despite lower average yields, the money fund yields remained higher than rates available to investors who went directly into the money market. The money funds also are being used as a parking place for consumers' investments while they wait for more encouraging signs from the stock market. The taxable money fund average of 41 days is the first average maturity to exceed 40 days since Oct. 1, 1980."

National Institute marks first anniversary

BARTLESVILLE, OKLA. — On October 1, the National Institute for Petroleum and Energy Research (NIPER), celebrated its first anniversary, marking the switchover from the Department of Energy's (DOE) Bartlesville Energy Technology Center to private operation as NIPER.

The changes that have taken place at the research laboratory result from a five-year cooperative agreement between DOE and IIT Research Institute of Chicago, which operates NIPER. The agreement broadened the research scope of the facility through the three research programs outlined in the agreement: a base program of long term research to be fully financed by DOE at $5 million per year; a cooperative program to be cost-shared by NIPER and DOE with DOE providing a decreasing share and NIPER providing an increasing share to total $5 million per year; and an industrial program allowing NIPER for the first time, to perform work for industry as well as government.

Labor calls Nader black lung benefit cut charge 'nonsense'

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration doesn't contemplate cuts in black lung benefits, despite an internal study that suggests the program be tightened, says Undersecretary of Labor Ford B. Ford.

Ford on Thursday characterized as "total nonsense" an accusation by consumer activist Ralph Nader that the administration plans a "December surprise" in connection with payment of black lung benefits.

The undersecretary said the administration saved the entitlement program from catastrophe in 1981, with the help of the coal miners union, employers and outside experts.

Ford also said "the administration has no plans to ask for any cutbacks in black lung benefits and Nader's accusations smack of pure fiction and crass political motives."

Joe Corcoran, a spokesman for the United Mine Workers union, said his organization knows of no attempts by the administration to slash black lung benefits.

Black lung is a generic term used to describe pneumoconiosis and various forms of bronchitis and emphysema and other respiratory ailments afflicting people who inhale coal dust. Some 342,000 miners, their dependents and widows currently receive black lung benefit payments totaling around $1.8 billion annually.

Nader and Davitt McAteer, director of the Occupational Safety and Health Law Center, based their accusation on an internal Labor Department study, prepared by an independent consulting firm, which they obtained.

Nader said the $100,000 study, prepared by the Franklin Institute of Philadelphia for Labor's Employment Standards Administration, attacks the congressional definition of pneumoconiosis — or black lung — as too broad and vague and suggests a stricter definition.

The study was commissioned by the Labor Department under a congressional amendment requiring the agency to assess changes in the qualifications for black lung benefits.

"This report, which the Reagan administration refuses to release to the public, despite several Freedom of Information Act requests during the past year, constitutes an unconscionable attack on crippled miners and widows," Nader said.

If Congress adopted a more restrictive definition of what constitutes black lung disease, he said, "this would mean that coal miners suffering from coal dust-induced diseases such as some types of industrial bronchitis and emphysema would no longer be covered by the act."

Ford said the Labor Department internal study will be sent to appropriate congressional committees after it has been reviewed by the Department of Health and Human Services.

ABC's 'Call to Glory' may have missed its 'calling'

Craig T. Nelson (in uniform) stars as a U.S. Air Force jet pilot whose family (clockwise from right), played by Cindy Pickett, Elisabeth Shue, Garbriel Damon and David Hollander, share with him the turbulent events of the early 1960s in "Call to Glory."

New York Times News Service

NEW YORK — It was the new prime time series with everything going for it: an unusually extensive promotional campaign during the Olympic Games, a large audience for its opening episode and critical acclaim.

Yet "Call to Glory," ABC's nostalgic view of a military family caught up in the events of the 1960s, has dramatically declined in the audience ratings, and ABC officials are trying to determine why.

Monday, ABC will pre-empt "Call to Glory" with a special program, "Mysteries of the World." But the network says it stands by the show. "We are totally behind it 100 percent," said Lewis H. Erlicht, president of ABC Entertainment, the programming arm of ABC.

Nevertheless, if "Call to Glory" does not begin to build an audience, its future on the network is doubtful, network officials say.

"I wish I had the reverse story to tell, that it started with a 21 share and built to a 27 or 28," said Marvin Mord, vice president of marketing and research services for ABC. The show, seen on Monday at 7 p.m., attracted 44 percent of the viewing audience when it began on Aug. 13, but it has drawn only 21 percent with its two most recent episodes.

ABC officials said that "Call to Glory" premiered in August because it is a "soft show" with a "slow build," a serial melodrama with characters that an audience must get to know and to like, that needed to be protected from the competitive fray of the fall season.

Television analysts who have followed "Call to Glory" say that it offers a good illustration of the risks inherent in a network's prime time strategies, both in how it advertises its programs and how it places new shows in the schedule.

ABC gambled first by using 130 30-second spots — more than half of its promotional time — during the Olympics to advertise just one show, allocating the remainder of the time to ABC's seven other new shows.

According to an estimate by CBS, the amount of promotional time devoted to "Call to Glory" was greater than the amount of time purchased by Coca-Cola, ABC's largest Olympics advertiser, which paid an estimated $35 million for its advertising time.

ABC's promotional campaign featured images from the opening episode of "Call to Glory," snapshots evoking patriotism, bravery and family unity — values that were underscored by the Olympic Games themselves.

"It was clever to realize the emotional association with the Olympics. It was natural and well conceived," said Larry Sullivan, the owner of a Los Angeles production company, Sullivan and Associates, who produced ABC's program promotions for seven years. "It went right down the middle in appealing to men and women," he said. The promotional campaign worked. It drew people to the show."

According to one analysis conducted by NBC, 67 percent of the television audience was aware of "Call to Glory" after the Olympics had ended. An awareness level of 40 percent is considered adequate for a new prime time show.

Keith Carradine talk of 'club'

By David ElliottCopley News Service

HOLLYWOOD — "I've done some major pictures," says Keith Carradine, "but I've never felt a member of the club. So to have everyone in the club talking about your work is very nice."

The club is the Hollywood Establishment, and the picture is Alan Rudolph's "Choose Me," in which Carradine does his best film acting so far. After a smash premiere in Seattle, it's become "the talk of the town" in Los Angeles. Carradine doesn't hide his delight that the editor of L.A. Weekly was so upset over his paper's negative review (which Carradine calls "a personal attack on Alan") that he sent other critics to second-guess the reviewer.

Made for only $800,000, but looking far plusher, "Choose Me" is a highly original comedy. Genevieve Bujold and Lesley Ann Warren play the women nonplussed by Carradine's Mickey, a hardboiled urban buccaneer with a soft, romantic center. The elegant, unnerving movie is often very funny, in a sneak-up-and-pounce way.

Star notes, "There are no accidental laughs in the film, which is a tribute to Alan's direction and writing. Yet there are parts that, when we filmed them, I had no idea would be so funny on screen. At one point on the set, Alan said, 'All I know is if I handle this right, when it's over the characters will be crying and the audience laughing.'"

THE FILM starts quietly and Carradine believes "it shows you don't have to grab people in the first five minutes or lose them. We've had minimal walkouts. As I said to a guy who criticized the pace of the opening at Cannes, 'It's like lovemaking — slow, gradual buildup makes it better.'"

Now 33, still rangy if no longer bone-thin, Carradine didn't have a slow buildup. He exploded into acclaim with Robert Altman's "Nashville" (1975), winning an Oscar for his love song, "I'm Easy." A music career beckoned, but after some recording and touring he opted instead for acting:

"I guess I didn't have the killer instinct you need for the music business. It's even more cut-throat than movies. I thought something as pure as music would attract fine people, but it's about money, fast money, and it attracts too many of those people. I still love playing my guitar, or piano, and I even took up bagpipes. And I have some pretty good songs, but I don't ever want to dive into trying for pop stardom again."

"Choose Me" began with a song by Teddy Pendergrass. Alan Rudolph was approached by Chris Blackwell of Island Alive, a company with both music interests and a desire, says Carradine, "to distribute films like this. The major studios seem unable to handle them." Blackwell offered Rudolph $800,000 and carte blanche to make a film of his choice, on condition it use music by Pendergrass, a Blackwell client who had suffered a terrible accident that left him quadriplegic. With the title song as start, Rudolph wrote a script that won over Carradine immediately.

"WE HAD WORKED on his first feature, 'Welcome to L.A.,' and Alan knew me. He tailored Mickey to fit my needs as an actor....Listen, on some level, I've probably played every scene in this movie in life, if not word for word. I've felt all these emotions. And for an actor that's essential. Alan has seen me go through heavy changes, and he fed that into the part."

Carradine's Mickey is a compulsive lover and perhaps liar who keeps offering to marry his lovers. Carradine grins, recalling "the heated discussion I had with Lesley Ann and Genevieve one day. They started talking about Mickey in a jerky way. Alan walked away and said, 'You're on your own, pal.' Genevieve said Mickey just uses women and doesn't want to marry them. I told her, 'You just don't understand. He means it!' An actor has to believe his character. As Jimmy Cagney said about acting, 'You plant your feet on the ground and tell the truth.'"

"Choose Me" is emotionally intuitive, and Carradine thinks Rudolph "has a rare perception of how the world works for women. My wife said, 'Alan is really a woman's director.' But we're also getting some flak from feminists. I know that (New York critic) Molly Haskell hates it. Maybe she just doesn't have a sense of humor! Most women love it."

After "some lean years" and too many film flops ("Old Boyfriends," "Southern Comfort"), along with TV money jobs ("Chiefs") and Broadway acclaim (in "Foxfire"), Carradine is thrilled to have a promising hit movie. He and Rudolph went to a public showing in L.A. "just to see the crowd, to see if it was true! We'd never had people lined up to see a movie with our names on top. People we don't even know, paying money!"

Lionized

A replica of the lion-flanked, cast-bronze cannon from the Mary Rose, a 110-foot ship which sank off Portsmouth, England, in 1545, is on display at Explorers Hall of the National Geographic Society in Washington. The lions' mouths form rings for ropes to lift the cannon.

Weinberger: More Soviet missiles aimed at Europe

By ROBERT BURNS
Associated Press Writer

WORLD

STRESA, Italy — U.S. Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger says the Soviet Union has installed "substantial numbers" of additional SS-20 nuclear missiles capable of striking Western Europe.

Weinberger told reporters that he briefed his NATO counterparts on the Soviet missile buildup during a nuclear strategy meeting Thursday in this resort village in the Italian Alps.

Today is the second and final day of the NATO meeting, which was expected to produce a declaration expressing solidarity within the alliance and willingness to engage in arms limitation talks with the Soviets as soon as possible.

Weinberger said he had seen intelligence data showing that the number of SS-20 medium-range nuclear missiles trained on Western Europe had increased beyond the 378 counted by NATO last December. But he would not say exactly how many.

"There are more than 378 SS-20s," Weinberger told reporters. He said intelligence data showed there were "substantial numbers" more.

Weinberger also said the Soviets were continuing to build missile-launching bases.

West Germany's ambassador to NATO, Hans-Georg Wieck, told reporters that the Soviets were building 11 bases from which medium-range as well as intercontinental missiles could be launched.It was the first time a Western alliance official had provided a precise figure on the number of Soviet bases under construction.

Weinberger's disclosure of additional SS-20s may have important political implications in the Netherlands.

The Dutch government had said in June that it might not accept all 48 U.S.-made medium-range cruise missiles that NATO wants installed in the Netherlands as part of a five-nation NATO missile deployment plan. The Dutch government also said it was delaying the installation of any missiles by two years, until 1988.

But it insisted that if the Soviets deployed even one additional SS-20, the Netherlands would install all 48 of the cruise missiles.

Job de Ruiter, the Dutch defense minister, told Weinberger and his other NATO counterparts on Thursday that his government hesitated about deploying the missiles to create the proper "climate" for resumption of U.S.-Soviet negotiations on limiting nuclear arms.

Dutch officials told reporters prior to Weinberger's disclosure on Thursday there was no evidence that additional SS-20s had been deployed.

The Soviets broke off talks with the Americans last fall after NATO decided to go ahead with deployment of 572 U.S.-built cruise and Pershing 2 nuclear missiles in West Germany, Britain and Italy. NATO plans to install the rest of the arsenal later in the Netherlands and Belgium.

Conference sources in Stresa said the defense ministers discussed the meeting President Reagan held on Sept. 28 with Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei A. Gromyko in Washington as well as talking about general prospects for arms control.

Submarine missile capability growing

LONDON (AP) — The United States and the Soviet Union are building up their submarine missile capability, and weapons tests indicate both superpowers are planning to increase their nuclear arsenals, the International Institute for Strategic Studies said today.

International economic troubles and the rising costs of high-tech hardware have forced a "significant slowing down of the arms race on a global scale," the authoritative London-based research center said in a summary of its 1984-85 Military Balance report.

Nevertheless, it said, the pattern of new weapons systems testing indicates the United States and the Soviet Union plan "further expansion later in the 1980s."

Noting the emergence of weapons with improved accuracy, mobility and concealment, the institute said: "It is a trend that will make it very difficult to negotiate verifiable constraints in future years" and that "will undoubtedly complicate future arms-control negotiations."

The institute, founded in 1958, is widely respected for its studies of international security issues. Its analysts come from the United States, Europe and Asia.

The report said NATO has, for the most part, lost the technological edge it had over the Warsaw Pact, while the Soviet bloc has boosted its numerical superiority and its arsenal of ew fighter-bombers.

The report said in an analysis of the conventional-weapons balance in Europe: "The West has largely lost the technological edge in conventional equipment which allowed NATO to believe that quality could substitute for number." It noted that major Warsaw Pact reorganization at the operational level has given the Eastern bloc "more firepower, flexibility and mobility."

The report said the Soviet submarine force now has about 40 operational SSN-20s, which are naval versions of the land-based medium-range SS-20 missiles. The report also said the Soviets have the first multi-warhead, or MIRV, weapons deployed in their boats.

These weapons, replacing older SSN-5 and SSN-6 systems, are carried by two Typhoon-class subs, the biggest submarines ever built. The institute said the Soviet navy is planning to build three or four more of the 25,000-ton vessels.

The Soviets' submarine-launched megatonnage "has increased significantly," the Military Balance report said. "It's interesting that the Soviets see this as an area where they should put increasing emphasis," institute director Robert O'Neill said.

He noted that the Soviet increase in submarine-launched missiles means Moscow is "getting close to their SALT-1 limits," under the Strategic Arms Limitation Treaty while the Americans still have some way to go.

British coal mine board accepts strike proposal

LONDON (AP) — Ian MacGregor, chairman of the state-run National Coal Board, said today that the board has accepted a mediator's proposal for ending Britain's seven-month coal strike.

The proposal was accepted by miners' leader Arthur Scargill on Thursday "as a basis for negotiation."

In what appeared to be the first real breakthrough in the bitter dispute, MacGregor told reporters that the board accepted "as presented" a plan by the independent Advisory, Conciliation and Arbitration Service.

Duarte rejects envoy

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (AP) — President Jose Napoleon Duarte, preparing to meet a team of leftist rebels that includes a former running mate of his, has rejected their choice of a go-between and their demand that the military command attend the meeting.

The guerrilas had requested that the president of Colombia, Belisario Betancur, act as an intermediary in arranging the meeting Monday. They also demanded that the entire Salvadoran military high command accompany Duarte to the mountain town of La Palma.

Duarte said Thursday he might bring some military leaders but not the entire command. He also said he wanted a Salvadoran bishop to act as intermediary.

In Mexico City, U.S. Secretary of State George P. Shultz said Thursday there is widespread agreement among Central American countries that a proposed regional peace treaty supported by Nicaragua will not end the turmoil in the area.

Shultz flew to Mexico from Panama, where he attended the inauguration of President Nicolas Ardito Barletta. The new president, in his speech, pledged to "scrupulously" respect the Panama Canal treaties with the United States.

Pontiff rejects Marxism

SANTO DOMINGO, Dominican Republic (AP) — Pope John Paul II, visiting the city where evangelists introduced Christianity to the New World almost 500 years ago, rejected both Marxism and Western materialism, and called for "social liberation" of the poor.

The pontiff, speaking Thursday to tens of thousands of people gathered at Santo Domingo's muddy race track, urged clergy to work for the "dispossessed poor."

Freighter attacked

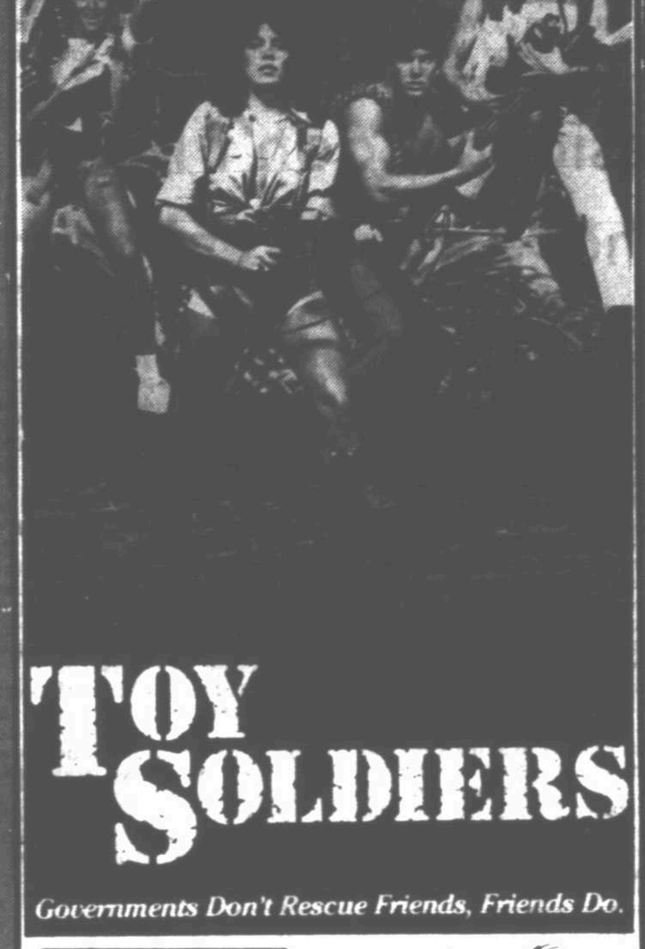

MANAMA, Bahrain (AP) — Iranian warplanes attacked and slightly damaged an Indian oil tanker in neutral waters of the Persian Gulf south of the Iraq-Iran war zone, shipping officials in Bahrain and London said today.

The officials said one crewman aboard the 20,911-ton Jag Pari was injured by shrapnel in the bombing attack Thursday afternoon. The damaged ship steamed to Bahrain and anchored offshore early today.

Roger Lowes, spokesman for Lloyd's Shipping Intelligence in London, said the ship was owned by Great Eastern Shipping Co. Ltd. of Bombay, India.

Rebecca Parr of Morrison, Colo. has launched a crusade to find out was has caused the deaths of 12 children — eight had cancer — in the last five years.

Residents don't know what's killing children

DENVER (AP) — The hazy foothills of the Rockies stretch along the horizon behind the neat rows of brick homes, surrounded by green fields and splashes of golden aspen.

It's Colorado's version of the American dream. But something is wrong in a subdivision 10 miles southwest of here.

Twelve children have died within the past five years, eight of cancer — a rate two to three times the national average. Others have been plagued by illness, according to some residents.

Nobody knows why.

"A lot of people feel there's something wrong, but they don't know what it is," said resident Rebecca Parr.

This week, Mrs. Parr and some neighbors are conducting a door-to-door survey to determine the full extent of the health problems that have befallen their 10-year-old, middle-class subdivision in an unincorporated area of Jefferson County at the edge of the Colorado Rockies.

The Jefferson County Health Department did some tests but didn't find anything abnormal. The federal Environmental Protection Agency has taken soil, air and water samples, but results won't be known for a few weeks.

"These people have brought us some symptoms," said Dean Gillam of the EPA in Denver. "These symptoms did not point to one direction. We would be the first to jump if we can find a direction to go. If it comes up negative we don't know where to jump next."

The EPA launched its study after getting a letter from a group of neighbors frightened by an inordinately high number of cancers, tumors, persistent infections and allergies.

Yvonne Peterson lost her 4-year-old son Jesse to cancer of the nervous system in 1982. That same summer another child living a few blocks away died of leukemia, she said.

"He was healthy when we came into the area," Mrs. Peterson said of her son. "They don't feel he had it at the time of birth."

The Peterson home is about 50 feet north of Bergen Ditch, which flows through the neighborhood.

"The kids have played in the ditch ever since we moved in there," Mrs. Peterson said. "I just have a gut feeling it's probably related to the ditch."

Other residents have other ideas. Could the neighborhood's proximity to defunct uranium mines be the problem? Or to the Rocky Flats nuclear weapons plant north of Denver? Or to suspected illegal chemical waste dumps?

So far, there are more questions than answers.

When Debbie McClintock's neighbor suffered a miscarriage, she decided she would not stay in her house while pregnant. So she moved out until her baby was born recently.

"Knowing there were problems here and finding out I was pregnant, I was concerned about whether I would be all right," Mrs. McClintock said. "If we could move we would — in a flash."

Mrs. Parr said she began collecting data in 1982, but said she has run into a roadblock with county health officials.

Dr. Tom Vernon, head of the Colorado Health Department, said his office has been responding in a "methodical way to deal with the known facts."

Of Mrs. Parr and her backers, he said, "I think they're driving themselves to distraction with information that's been gathered in a haphazard, unmethodical way."

But Lou Johnson of the EPA disagrees. "I don't think the citizens of that neighborhood are overreacting," he said. "I would want to know whether there's any possibility there are any environmental factors involved."

Not everybody in the neighborhood is pleased by the publicity.

"We are unable to sell our homes. I am not convinced that there is anything wrong...Give us some facts," Karen Price said during a community meeting last month.

Republican Party 'going to the dogs'

COLLEGE PARK, Ga. (AP) — The National Republican Congressional Committee was barking up the wrong tree when it asked Brandy Sargent to contribute to President Reagan's re-election campaign.

Brandy, a Yorkshire terrier, received a four-page letter saying Reagan "requests the honor of your support" and asking for a contribution of at least $25.

The letter said Brandy's name turned up on a "carefully prepared" list of "supporters and friends who have shown a serious interest in national policy."

The only place Brandy is registered is with the American Kennel Club.

"I knew the Republicans were going to the dogs," said Nancy Sargent, a Democrat who owns Brandy. "But I didn't know they were requesting their support, as well.

"I told him he had a letter here from the president," Mrs. Sargent said, noting the Brandy didn't even wag his tail. "He just kind of walked away."

Llamas better pack animal than mules, owners of packing service say

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — A llama carries more gear than a man, sounds better than a mule, preserves the trail better than a horse and smells better than all three, says a woman who operates a llama hiking service in the North Carolina mountains.

"They're well suited for their jobs because of their ability to negotiate terrain other pack animals would not dream of covering," said Penny Alsop, who opened Noah Llama Treks Inc. this year with partner Judy Fee in Boone, about 10 miles northwest of Charlotte.

Llamas have been used as pack animals for 3,000 years in South America and for several years in the U.S. West, but this is the first commercial llama packing service east of the Rockies, said Ms. Alsop.

"The llamas carry everything and we provide everything...food, tents and sleeping bags," she said. "You provide the raingear, toothbrush and change of underwear."

Noah Llama Treks (named after the women's favorite llama) offers trips of two to six days each for about $85 per day per person.

The outfit has eight llamas, although only five usually go out on each trip. Each animal carries about 75 pounds, including its own feed — about one or two pounds of grain per animal per day.

Llamas are not only more cooperative than mules, they are also easier to listen to, communicating with each other in soft hums, she said. When they're alarmed, they sound like a cross between a horse whinny and a dog bark.

"They're much like cats," said Ms. Alsop. "They're very independent — if you approach one, he might turn away. But as soon as you turn around, he's following you around to see what you're doing.

"They often spot wildlife along the trail that we humans are too busy to see," she said. "They'll turn their heads. Sometimes we'll be unable to identify the source of their curiosity, but sometimes it'll be a deer or a bear.

"They're very attached to one another. If you move one of them away, the others will be upset and stand there until the llama returns. They recognize human companionship but don't seek it like a dog."

Because llamas are lighter than horses — about 400 pounds — and because they have padded feet rather than hooves, they don't tear up the trails as horses often do.

"Unless the soil is extremely moist, you can't even tell if they've been on the trail," Ms. Alsop said.

Ms. Alsop and Ms. Fee, both Florida natives, moved to North Carolina three years ago and started a farm. They became interested in the possibilities of llamas after carrying their own packs along the Appalachian Trail.

After a year of guiding paperwork along rocky bureaucratic trails, they obtained their llamas from northern California, Colorado and New Mexico and began training them and scouting out trails.

Training takes from three to six months, and the most crucial part is letting the animal get used to having its head and legs touched, said Ms. Alsop.

China stuck in time warp

By MORT ROSENBLUM
Associated Press
Special Correspondent

MAOWEN, China (AP) — On a precipitous mountain road that crumbled away like cake, 50 trucks and buses waited hours in facing lines. No one knew why but, in timeless China, waiting is the safest course.

Probing revealed an explanation: A truck had clipped a roadworker. Someone took the victim to town, leaving a pole across the road as a marker. No one dared touch it until a passing policeman casually pitched it aside.

In 35 years since the Communists took over Oct. 1, 1949, China has lurched forward toward a mixed industrialized economy that now extends to a Maxim's restaurant in Peking and U.S. commercials on television.

But down the back roads, where 800 million of China's 1 billion inhabitants live among fields and mountain terraces, ancient, entrenched patterns resist the pull of innovation.

On a weeklong, 500-mile jeep trip through parts of Sichuan Province normally closed to foreigners, this correspondent saw rural life that seemed hardly changed from how it was before the Christian era.

Workers and cadres, as opposed to peasants, seem adapted to a new China, and many have learned to bend the system to help them make ends meet.

In northern Sichuan, farmers still rely on a 2,000-year-old irrigation system that splits a river to avert flood and drought. Many plow and lug loads by hand. Fertilizer is scooped from outdoor latrines.

Mountainscapes remain as depicted on ancient scrolls: tightly clustered villages, towers and temple roofs nestled high on forested slopes, splashed with the yellow of drying corn and the red of peppers.

Mostly, peasants seem prosperous by developing world standards, even in areas populated by ethnic minorities. Under a new free market system, farmers can amass profits from hard work.

But in wide areas, the historic crushing poverty eludes slogans and five-year plans. "The masses in some places do not even have enough to eat and wear," a frank radio report noted recently in Yunnan Province.

Generalized statistics can translate to severe individual hardship. "Most peasants now have medical facilities within walking distance," the China Daily reported recently, outlining advances in health care.

Near Songpan, however, an aged Tibetan woman begged a ride from passersby, too weak to stay on her daughter's horse after a day's trek to find a paramedical worker.

Ethnic minorities cling tightly to customs that separate them from the majority Han Chinese, but tides of time seem against them. Cloth is scarce now; drab blue and khaki dilutes richly colorful traditional garb. Temples and prayer wheels destroyed in the Mao's Cultural Revolution of 1966-76 have not been restored.

In the scenic fantasyland of Juizhaighou, near the border of Gansu Province, old women spend hours on end wailing mantras, walking in pace to a water-driven prayer wheel.

But their grandchildren seem more fascinated by the Japanese cameras of the Hong Kong Chinese tourists beginning to arrive by the hundreds.

Nonetheless, much remains. In the Songpan mosque, with the multicolored scrolled roof and ornate walls of a Chinese temple, up to a thousand Moslems gather five times daily to pray toward Mecca.

"We have been here many, many centuries," commented one elder in a tone suggesting they had no plans to change.

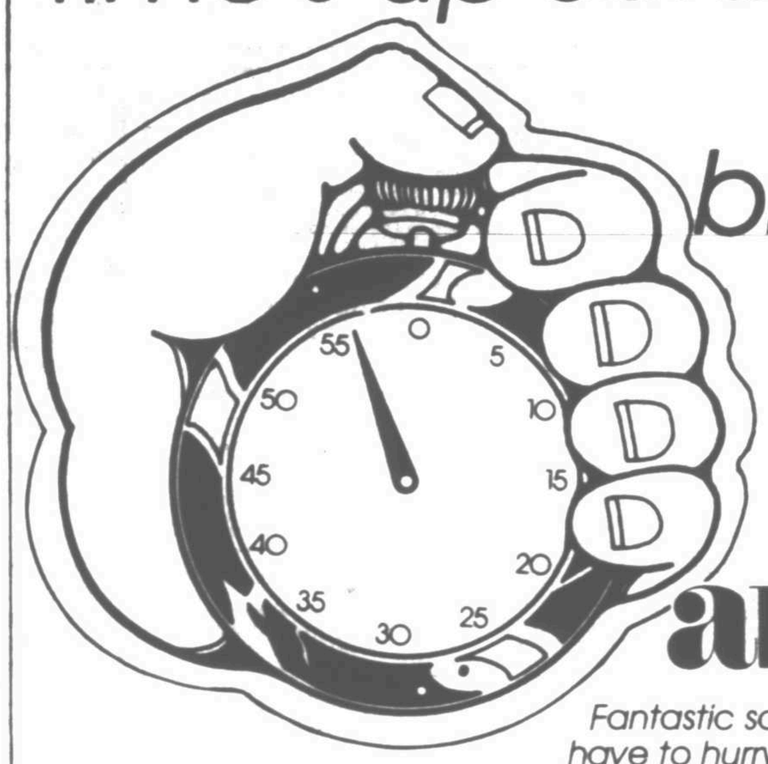

Within a generation, central planners say, old attitudes will alter, bringing China to a goal of a unified, modernized society that reaches deep into its vast interior.

Others, including some senior Chinese cadres, are not convinced.

"How can they modernize people who have always survived by keeping their heads down?" a veteran Western diplomat commented in Peking. "When in doubt people do nothing."

Provincial capitals, like Chengdu in Sichuan, dangle within a time warp. At the Jin Jiang Hotel, Western tourists are met by a well-coiffed young woman in a crushed velvet bordeaux sheath, slit to the thigh. Former Red Guards of the Cultural Revolution listen to imported disco on stereo headsets.

To Lease or Not To Lease

Reasons To Lease:
1. Leasing is convenient -- you only pay for what you use and not for the full price of the car.
2. There is no used car to dispose of at lease end.
3. Leasing frees your cash and you can use your available bank line of credit for other purposes.
4. Leasees -- leasing for business purposes will have the benefit of simplified tax records.
