Solons Open Work On Initiative Plan

House Okays Final Word For Voters

AUSTIN (AP) — In a decision that could wreck a legislative compromise and bring on a special session, the House voted Saturday to give citizens the final word in a complex initiative and referendum process.

An amendment, adopted 113-15, took away the ultimate authority that Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby wanted lawmakers to retain.

The House delayed its decision on the entire initiative and referendum proposal (HJR3) until Tuesday after it appeared many of its supporters had gone home.

Hobby, Speaker Bill Clayton and Gov. Bill Clements had negotiated for some time on a proposal that would meet Clements' demand for initiative and referendum but inject the Legislature into the process.

Clements says he will call a special legislative session if lawmakers fail to submit to the voters a constitutional amendment giving the people the right to initiate and repeal laws.

The measure before the House would enable the voters to direct the Legislature to enact or repeal a law. An initiative proposal would go on a general election ballot if 15 percent of the voters — including 15 percent in at least 50 counties — petitioned for it.

Legislators then would have to act, and the governor could not veto a bill passed as a result of an initiative.

Referendum would be a similar means for directing the Legislature to repeal a law.

The provision added by the House would let voters override a legislative decision to defeat a bill arising from an initiative election. A defeated bill would go on the next general election ballot. If the voters approved it, it would become law.

Legislative changes in a voter-initiated bill also would be submitted to the voters, and they would chose between the original and the revised bill.

Voters also would get a chance to override legislative decisions to kill bills arising from referenda to repeal existing laws.

"To make this bill meaningful, we must give the voters this right of confirmation," said Rep. Carlisle Smith, D-Grand Prairie.

Rep. Bill Sullivant, D-Gainesville, objected, however, that giving voters the final say "lends itself to legislation by hysteria."

"It lends itself to legislation geared toward special interests who have the money to publicize their positions and sell their point of view," Sullivant said.

Sullivant did succeed in putting a $250 limit on the amount of money individuals, corporations or other legal entities could spend to overcome or sustain legislative defeat of bills initiated by the people.

Saturday's long House session, which ran from 8:30 a.m. to past 2 p.m. without a lunch break, capped a busy week for both chambers.

Many of the session's most important or controversial bills, including school finance, appropriations, product liability, consumer remedies and interest rates, received action during the week.

Only two work weeks remain before the Legislature must adjourn its regular session on May 28.

In Saturday's floor session, the House passed and sent to the Senate bills that would:

— Give the Legislature authority to nullify rules adopted by state agencies.

— Create a 10,000-acre state park in the Franklin Mountains, near El Paso, at a location threatened by real estate development.

— Extend the life of the Texas Good Neighbor Commission — threatened with extinction this year by the "Sunset" process — for 12 more years.

— Transfer the Texas College of Osteopathic Medicine from North Texas State University to the University of Texas system.

— Allow cities to establish, on public property, small tourist trade centers whose merchants could sell on both Saturdays and Sundays despite the state's "blue law."

— Prohibit judges from issuing pol-

No Letup In Borrow-Buy Binge

INTEREST rates are bumping their legal limit and inflation is driving up the cost of life's necessities, but Lubbockites unhesitatingly are borrowing for consumer and home loans.

A majority of credit unions and savings and loan associations contacted by The Avalanche-Journal noted the volume of such loans is up at a time when mortgage loans have all but dried up.

What are people buying with their borrowings?

The consensus is that new automobiles top the list, followed by home improvements. And, several credit union managers noted, more people seem to be borrowing money to consolidate and pay off big bills.

"In talking to members, it (bills) seems to be a problem," said Dena Baker of Caprock Santa Fe Credit Union. "Everything is so expensive. We seem to have more people who need to pay bills. They let one bill go, then have to borrow to pay it."

Home improvement loans appear to be popular, lending institution spokesmen say, because people either can't afford to move to fancier houses or because they don't believe those on the market are worth the asking price.

"A lot of people make the statement they will improve what they have because it's too expensive to buy," noted Weldon Garrett of First Federal Savings and Loan Association.

Most of the spokesmen say the borrowers seem unconcerned about going into debt when inflation is approaching the double-digit mark.

"It has amazed me, I must admit," acknowledged Janice Owen of South Plains Federal Credit Union. "It just doesn't bother them — or seem to."

Her explanation is that "money has become unreal to people," especially because of big figures bandied about in government, such as millions of dollars deficit and billions of dollars allocated to programs.

"They don't care whether they owe $10 or $10,000 as long as they make the monthly payment," she added.

Charlotte Reine of T.I.M.E.-DC Credit Union echoed her. "It doesn't seem to bother them," she said.

Greg Wood, vice president of State Savings of Lubbock, also noted there "doesn't seem to be any reluctance" to borrow.

He said he believes, though, that "most people feel right now that by borrowing on a long-term deal, they will be paying back with cheaper money because of inflation."

"I feel people are not thinking of what tomorrow may bring," said Beverly Gollihugh of Hub Federal Credit Un-

Justice Department Says Probe Into Lozano Death 'Not Over'

By KAY BELL
Avalanche-Journal Staff

ODESSA — On Jan. 22, 1978, Larry Ortega Lozano died in his Ector County Jail cell here.

Two days later, Texas Rangers began an investigation into the 27-year-old Pecos man's death after receiving word he might have been fatally beaten by law officers. In less than a week, the FBI, state attorney general's office, Ector County District Attorney's office and the Justice Department had launched separate probes into the death.

Six months later, federal and state grand juries adjourned without returning any indictments in connection with Lozano's death, which a coroner's jury had ruled accidental.

But Justice Department officials say their investigation into the Lozano case is not over, and another pathologist now is reviewing the case. It is the fourth medical opinion sought in the controversial circumstances surrounding Lozano's death.

John Wilson, public information officer for the Justice Department in Washington, D.C., said the decision to seek another opinion was the agency's own idea.

"Because this is a complex matter, we want to make sure we have all the details," Wilson said.

The request for the new report is the first significant development in the case since Justice Department investigators Drew Days III, head of the department's civil rights division, and William Gardner, chief of the agency's criminal enforcement division, began reviewing transcripts of the July 1978, federal grand jury.

"They (investigators) decided they needed another opinion after reviewing the transcripts," Wilson said. "Once they get this report, they'll decide what further action needs to be taken. I wouldn't put any emphasis on the time element or the fact the grand jury took no action.

"It's just the normal way we procede. It takes a while but we have five years before the statute runs out. It's just been a little over a year since we got involved," he said.

Wilson declined to name a specific date when the fourth pathologist would turn his report over to Justice Department officials, but did say, "I wouldn't think it would be too long."

He also refused to identify the doctor or comment on whether he was reviewing the reports of the three previous medical examiners or had conducted another autopsy on Lozano's body.

However, a spokesman for Pecos Funeral Home, which handled burial arrangements for Lozano and whose permission would be needed before exhuming the body, said he had not been contacted by federal investigators and was unaware of the fourth medical opinion being sought.

The three earlier pathologist reports were key evidence in both grand juries and the April 1978 coroner's inquest that resulted in the accidental death ruling.

The first autopsy on Lozano's body was conducted by Dr. Kris Challipalli, an Odessa pathologist who at that time performed autopsies for Ector County on a retainer basis.

She originally said the cause of death was a sharp blow to the back of Lozano's head, but after a consultation with the other two doctors before the inquest revised her opinion.

At the inquest, all three pathologists agreed that the cause of death was suffocation due to a crushed larynx.

However, Harris County Medical Examiner Joseph A. Jachimzcyk and the

Some Cotton In; Others Await Rain

ALTHOUGH temperatures in the low 80s are expected today and the weather seems ideal for planting, a random survey Saturday indicated that most dryland South Plains farmers are waiting for more stable conditions to plant cotton.

Widely scattered showers across the northern sections of the South Plains Saturday teased cotton farmers who have been waiting on measureable moisture before planting.

Only traces of rain were reported in Abernathy, Anton, Hale Center, Muleshoe, Sudan and Tulia. Dimmit, in the northwestern portion of the South Plains, recorded the heaviest rainfall amount with .21 of an inch.

Hank Kimbriel, assistant County Agent in Dawson County, said a large number of farmers who irrigate their fields already have planted their cotton. But most dryland farmers are waiting on more stable weather condtitions with less winds and increasingly warmer weather, he said.

Ollie Liner, County Agent in Hale County, said he would estimate roughly 35 percent of the area farmers have planted. But he added that much of the soil is so dry that many farmers are waiting on moisture.

However, the chance for needed rainfall is slim this week.

Montford Hard Line Gets Jury Backing

By BOB CAMPBELL
Avalanche-Journal Staff

WITH ONE general exception, Lubbock County juries frequently have given the stern sentences that Criminal District Attorney John T. Montford and his assistants have asked for convicted criminals.

The 4 1/2 months that Montford has been in office have brought such maximum sentences as 10 years for sexual abuse of a child, 20 years for voluntary manslaughter and 20 years for possession of heroin.

But juries often balk at convicting high school-age defendants, either giving them probation or failing to reach a verdict on punishment.

Although he says persons under 20 years of age are responsible "for over 50 percent" of the serious crimes committed in Lubbock, Montford himself has no quarrel with what his assistants are calling "the 17-year-old syndrome."

"If a jury feels probation is justified under the circumstances, then we have no quarrel with that decision," he said. "We never chastise a jury. It's unprofessional."

Montford said his office is not always opposed to probation for young offenders charged with offenses less serious than first degree felonies; but it will continue to ask 35 years for first offenders accused of aggravated robbery, burglary of a habitation or aggravated rape, he said, and 99 years for those previously convicted of a felony — regardless of their age.

All defendants 17 years of age and older are tried as adults unless certified to stand trial as adults through a juvenile court process at an earlier age.

"Our policy is that if the law says they are liable for criminal conduct under the Texas Penal Code, then we're going to take a hard line with the minimum punishment recommendations," Montford said.

"I feel the key to deterrence is certainty that one will be punished for violating the law and uncertainty as to what he or she will receive.

"If they're going to get probation, they're going to have to earn it before a jury. We're not going to offer it to them."

In practice, even a 35-year sentence is not as harsh as it sounds. All Texas felons become eligible for parole — and usually are given it — on receiving credit for a third of their sentence.

If a deadly weapon wasn't involved in the offense, they are credited with 50 days for every 30 they serve; if a deadly weapon was used, they serve a calendar third of the sentence. Someone serving a

Kindergarten Cookbook Cuts Culinary Corners

By LISA PAIKOWSKI

THE KINDERGARTEN students at Jackson Elementary School may not know the intricacies of meal preparation, but they know what they like.

As a Mother's Day project, the youngsters gave the recipes for the favorite dish their mother cooks to teacher Linda Cundiff and her aide to be compiled into a cookbook for the students' mothers.

The catch to the project, however, was that each student had to recite the recipe from memory. The results are some slightly amended versions of Mom's home cooking:

From Wesley Spears, a recipe for chocolate cake: "She puts grease in a pan then mixes the cake mix in a bowl. She cooks the cake in the bowl for 20 minutes. Then she takes it out of the oven and puts the frosting on it. Then Wesley eats it."

From Arthur Escobedo, a recipe for pizza: "First she takes the pizza out of a carton and then she gets a round pan, then she puts the pizza in the oven. She cooks the pizza for 11 minutes at 500 degrees. Then we eat it."

Lea Badillo gave these directions for making peas: "She puts them in a pan. She puts salt on them. Then Lea eats them."

Melonie Johnson's favorite meal is Spaghetti-Os: "She gets a fork and stirs the Spaghetti-Os. She takes the spaghetti and puts it in a different pan. She lets these cool for about one hour. The she puts them in a plate to be eaten by Melonie."

Mary Alice Garcia gave a recipe for hamburgers: "She gets the bread and gets the meat and cooks the meat until burned."

From Mark Luna, a recipe for tortillas: "First she gets flour, hot water and mixes together. Then she rolls it out then she puts it in the pan to cook for two minutes. Then she takes it out and then she cooks more."

And directions for macaroni from Yvonne Aguilar: "First she puts it in a bowl, then she heats it up for 10 minutes. Then we eat it."

Mrs. Cundiff said she thought the students had remarkably good memories in general. "Some could tell us the recipe right off, but some had to think about it."

Probe Into Odessa Jail Death 'Still Continuing'

late Dr. Frederick Bornstein of El Paso differed on their rulings as to how the fatal injury occurred.

Jachimzcyk, who performed an autopsy on Joe Campos Torres after he died during a struggle with three Houston police officers, said Lozano's death was "accidental, unintentional." It was caused, he testified, by "some kind of physical force exerted to the throat."

However, Bornstein, who was retained by the Lozano family, said it was his opinion "the mode of death was homicide."

Bornstein said in his report that "microscopic examination of skin slides showed blunt violence repeatedly, almost immediately from the time of death and extending back about a week. The mode was homicide."

The El Paso pathologist's report seemed to bolster charges that he was beaten by officials the night he died.

Ector County Sheriff Elton Faught, however, told investigators Lozano died from self-inflicted wounds he sufferred when he beat his head against a one-inch thick pane of glass in the padded cell where he was being held.

At 2:15 p.m. Jan. 22, 1978, Lozano "went beserk," Faught said, and began battering his head against the window. He was taken to a local hospital and heavily sedated before being returned to his cell at 4:20 p.m.

However, Faught said, Lozano continued the commotion and jailer Jackie Perkins and seven other officers, including a Department of Public Safety trooper and a state game warden, rushed Lozano inside his cell.

After a scuffle, Lozano was handcuffed, taken outside the glass-littered cell and restrained on the floor, where he died in officers' arms.

Two days later the series of investigations began.

On April 28, 1978, the coroner's jury ruled Lozano's death accidental. In late July, the two grand juries hearing evidence in the case recessed without taking any action.

Ironically, in September 1978, Lozano's eldest son was awarded $6,000 from a life insurance policy Lozano had taken out. The $3,000 policy included a double indemnity claim for accidental death.

Although there was a brief court battle with the insurance company, American National Insurance Co. of Galveston, the legal problem arose not over how Lozano died, but who was the beneficiary, according to local attorney Michael McLeaish.

McLeaish, who represented Lozano's ex-wife Rufina in the case, said the policy had not been filled out properly and there was some question as to whom the money should be awarded.

"There never was any problem with the accidental death ruling," McLeaish said. "In fact, the coroner's jury ruling was vital to our civil case. If the grand juries had indicted someone on murder, we would have lost."

The insurance policy question, McLeaish admitted, was just one of a series of puzzling things about the Lozano incident.

But in Ector County District Attorney John Green's opinion, the Lozano puzzle is solved. Although Green said he is not surprised by the Justice Department's request for a fourth medical opinion, he maintains his stand that the federal grand jury will not return any indictments.

"I probably know more about the Lozano case than anyone else, except those who were there that night," Green said. "There's not enough there now to indict anyone. If there had been, we (state grand jury) would have done it.

"I don't see what good a fourth medical opinion will be. I called in who I think is one of the top people in the field: Jachimzyck. And I called him in, not only because of his medical expertise but also because he was involved in the Torres case.

"He built the case against the Houston police and I knew he wouldn't be afraid to do the same thing here if it was justified," Green said.

The district attorney, as well as numerous local attorneys, believe the Lozano case has been mishandled.

"When I heard about it (Lozano's death) that night, I immediately sent my investigators in to check out what had happened. It sounded like they had murdered the guy and that's what we were looking for, evidence of murder. That's our job as prosecutors, to build a case against someone.

"But after all the investigation, it (murder) just wasn't there," Green said. "Lozano was definitely mishandled. The man had a history of mental problems and violence and shouldn't have been in the jail in the first place.

"He probably was roughed up some during the struggle. It happens. But it wasn't intentional and you've got to have that intent to get a murder indictment."

Another attorney agrees with Green's assessment.

"I was on the periphery but I saw where the whole case got messed up," said the lawyer, who wished to remain anonymous.

"There was so little said about how he was to be transferred to (the state hospital in) Big Spring," the attorney said. "That's where he should have been, not held here for 12 days.

"But everybody just wants it black or white. Either Lozano was murdered or nothing at all happened in that jail cell. That's ridiculous. Of course something happened, but technically it wasn't criminal. It was just ignorant. And Larry's family is sufferring for that ignorance."

Green, too, says the case has been convoluted and adds that Lozano's family is being taken advantage of by "radicals who don't give a damn about their people."

"They (Mexican-American groups) came down here and marched for poor Larry Lozano, a man they never knew about and didn't bother to find out about," Green said. "He is just a cause for them.

"I also want justice and if anyone ever comes up with new evidence to prove Larry was murdered, we'll reopen the case. But right now it's over and I think the Justice Department knows that, too.

"They are just stalling to pacify the radical groups. This new pathologist is like a bone thrown to a dog. They are saying, 'Look, we're still investigating,' but they'll never indict anyone."

Even state Hispanic leaders also appear upset with the way the Lozano probe is going.

State Director of the League of United Latin American Citizens Ruben Bonilla Jr. accuses Washington officials of "dragging their feet."

"It appears they are trying to sweep the Lozano case under the rug," he said in a telephone interview from his Corpus Christi office.

"The Department of Justice is proud of its track record and is more concerned with that than with the more serious issue of returning indictments. They don't want to return any indictments unless they are sure they can win the case in court," Bonilla said.

"This has been under a cloud of secrecy long enough. Even if there is not enough evidence to win a case, we feel all the evidence they do have should be made public in a public trial," he said.

Ector DA John Green 'Likes What I Do'

ODESSA — For a man who never thought he would be a lawyer, John Green looks right at home in his cluttered office on the third floor of the Ector County Courthouse.

Leaning back in his chair and surveying one of two desks covered with files, memos and law books, the 40-year-old district attorney looks much younger than his years. Dressed in a knit sport shirt and gray slacks, he looks like he would be more at home on a golf course than sitting in what he calls one of the most powerful offices in the state.

A former all-state football player from Crane, Green originally had planned to be a high school coach.

Instead, he became Ector County's outspoken and often controversial district attorney.

During his 10 years in office, Green has piled up an impressive prosecution record, persuading juries to hand down some of the largest sentences in Texas legal history — including a 1,800-year term for one convicted heroin dealer.

More recently, Green was in the spotlight when he battled with state Attorney General John Hill over the handling of the Larry Lozano investigation.

Hill ordered his investigators to begin a separate probe of Lozano's Jan. 22 death in the Ector County Jail on Jan. 31. The next day, Green blasted the attorney general for "sticking his nose into county affairs where he has no authority and no knowledge of what's going on."

The skirmish between the two continued into July 1978, when Green accused one of Hill's investigators, Dan Maeso, of withholding evidence from the state grand jury and subpeonaed Hill, or a designated representative, to appear before the grand jury with the evidence.

Almost 10 months later, Green still is adamant about Hill's intervention in the case.

"He has no jurisdiction here and was using the case as a political stepping stone. But it didn't do him any good," Green said with a smile.

Leaning back in his chair again, he added, "The office of district attorney is probably one of the most powerful offices in the state, and John Hill learned that.

"It (the Lozano case) lost him the election (for governor)," Green said, pulling a sheet of legal paper from his overflowing desk.

"This," he said, waving the paper, "is a breakdown of how the 25,000 voters in this area voted. These are the voters that got constant coverage of the Lozano case and they went solidly for (Bill) Clements. Clements carried West Texas and West Texas did beat Hill."

The Lozano case also may have some effects on Ector County politics.

Green came under a lot of criticism during the Lozano investigations. He frequently was accused by Hispanics of covering up information incriminating the sheriff's office and was labeled a racist — both charges he dismisses as "ridiculous."

"I was just doing my job," Green said. "If Larry Lozano was murdered — which at first glance it appeared so and my investigators started out with the job of proving that — he deserved vindication.

"But as the evidence kept turning up, we had nothing to prove intent, which is crucial to returning a murder indictment. I was just trying to say that those deputies deserved as fair an investigation as Lozano and I caught a lot of heat for that."

As for the racist tag, Green simply laughs.

"If I couldn't prove Lozano was murdered, I was a racist. That's how the radicals trying to make this a cause saw it," Green said.

"Those damn' radicals were just taking advantage of the situation for publicity. They don't care about their people and then they call me a racist?"

Shaking his head and adding with a slight grin, "Boy, did it blow them out of the water when they found out my stepmother is a Chicana. I grew up around Chicanos and we've never had any trouble in Odessa. Those radicals are outsiders and just don't know what it's like here," he said.

But the Lozano case did prompt the promise from some Hispanic groups to run a candidate against Green in the 1980 election. If the promise is fulfilled, it will be the first time since Green was appointed district attorney in 1969 that he has faced any opposition for the office.

"Yeah, a 12-year term in office is a pretty long time," he said of the upcoming election. "But they said they were going to run someone against me and, well, it's just a matter of principle now."

After a moment's consideration, however, Green admits that his reasoning to run for re-election is a bit oversimplified.

"Basically, I like what I'm doing," he said. "I like the responsibility here. A district attorney is responsible for the attitudes of the community and I hope I'm helping shape that attitude against crime."

He paused for minute, leaned back and added soberly, "I don't know why, but public sentiment usually runs toward the guy who is charged with a crime. That's wrong. It's just wrong and I want to change that.

"I've dealt with a lot of criminals in my time and I know what they're like. They're crummy. I don't think I'll ever represent a criminal after I leave this office. I just can't stand 'em."

Suddenly, Green sat up on the edge of his chair and angrily declared, "What's never covered are the victims of a case. I see the opposite of what the public sees.

"I see the people who are beaten or raped or robbed or the families of murdered persons. Their agony and frustrations are real and the public just avoids it even when it is given to them.

"That's my philosophy," Green said pointing to a blue-and-white button attached to a pen set on his desk. The logo on the button states, "Victims are people, too."

Green said it was his belief in that statement that prompted him to establish a special child abuse investigatory unit in his office. It is that year-old division that Green sees as his most gratifying accomplishment during his tenure.

"Since we began this last year, we've cleared up 100 cases of child abuse," Green said proudly. "It was the only constructive thing I could think of to do in this case.

"You look at all those little children who are totally defenseless and all the terrible things that are done to them. You just want to beat the crap out of the people who hurt them but you can't.

"But we can stop them by finding out about the abuse and getting enough evidence to send them to the pen for the rest of their lives."

Pulling a letter from his desk, Green says, "Just read this letter Jerry (Davis, Green's chief investigator and head of the child abuse unit) got from this little 6-year-old girl and tell me that it isn't worth the time."

The carefully printed words on the piece of lined tablet paper tell Davis, "Now I feel better because I talked to you. An (sic) he was awful to me. I hope you keep him in the pin (sic), so he won't get us. I thank you for helping me. I Love you, Love, Tina May God be with you!"

The 'he' in the note, Green explained, is Tina's father, who had sexually abused the girl.

"A lot of people feel like it's terrible to send someone to the pen for the rest of their life," Green said.

"But they don't know about all the Tinas out there and all the others who have been hurt by criminals. I think what I do is worthwhile. It gets these people like Tina's father off the streets and I feel good about that.

"Yeah, I like what I do," Green added with a smile. "And if other people don't like how I do my job, well, it's just because they don't understand.

"I plan to keep doing it just like I am and if they don't like it, that's the breaks."

Pleated Silk Dress Sold For $3,500

NEW YORK (AP) — A pleated dress of lavender silk was auctioned for $3,500 as 200 bidders competed for 20th Century designer clothes.

A spokeswoman for Christie's Auction House East said Thursday a private collector bought the dress created by the late Italian designer Mariano Fortuny. Its price was attributed to Fortuny's "very special, secret method of pleating."

About 100 garments from such fashion houses as Liberty of London, Chanel and Dior went on the block. The spokeswoman said the bidders were "mostly women, but there were quite a few men ... trying to stop the women from going too high on the dresses."

Senator Sponsors Bill To Extend Coverage

WASHINGTON (AP) — Congress should be subject to the same laws on equal pay, employment, occupational safety and civil rights that apply to the rest of the country, says Sen. Patrick Leahy.

In the past legislative session, the Senate rejected a proposal for an independent board to monitor and act on discrimination complaints against senators. Those complaints are now handled by the Senate Ethics Committee.

Motorcycle Safety Topic Of Pamphlet Available By Mail

WASHINGTON (AP) — Motorcycles can be an exciting and inexpensive way to get around, but unless you use care they can also be hazardous.

The Department of Transportation reports that 80 percent of motorcycle accidents result in injuries or death, while the comparable figure for automobiles is only 10 percent.

To learn more about buying a cycle, what to wear and how to handle emergency situations, you can obtain the booklet "Motorcycle Safety" without charge from the Consumer Information Center, Dept. 508G, Pueblo, Colo., 81009.

The booklet urges persons considering buying a cycle to select one they can handle. You'll have to pick it up when it falls over and push it if it is disabled, so try out these things in the showroom.

On the other hand, be sure it has enough power for the kind of driving you want.

A helmet is the most important item of equipment, to protect your head in the event of a crash. Buy one with the symbol DOT or a certificate from the Snell Memorial Foundation or the Safety Helmet Council of America, and wear it whether or not your state requires you to do so.

Gasoline Shortages Plague Motorists During Weekend

By The Associated Press

The nuisance of scattered gasoline shortages and station closings put a crimp on Mother's Day weekend travel, with more West Coast mothers than usual getting a phone call or flowers instead of a visit.

The severity of shortages and weekend closings varied widely across the nation, with California having the most problems.

The Southern California Automobile Club predicted 92 percent of the stations in its region would be closed Sunday.

California prices also led the nation. A motorist found regular gasoline for $1.1999 a gallon at a self-service Mohawk station in La Conchita, near the coast about 15 miles north of Oxnard.

"You gotta make it while you can," said the owner, who refused to give his name.

Despite the price, there were 10 cars waiting in line.

In the Chicago area, a poll of stations showed that 51 percent would be open Sunday, compared to 57 percent two weeks ago.

About 60 percent of New Jersey's 5,000 stations were expected to be closed Sunday, according to Jerry Ferrara, spokesman for the New Jersey Gasoline Retailers Association.

AAA of Washington said 80 percent of that state's stations would be closed Sunday. In adjoining Oregon, about 95 percent of the stations in the Portland metropolitan area — with about 50 percent of the states's population — were to be closed Sunday.

The best area for weekend travel was the upper Midwest.

An Auto Club survey of 50 stations in South Dakota found no purchase limits, no reduction in hours, no long lines and that 74 percent planned to open Sunday. The North Dakota AAA said there would be no more weekend closings than normal.

And a check of 197 stations along major tourist routes in Michigan showed 139 would be open Sunday, the AAA said. In the Detroit area, however, it found that 46 out of 96 stations would close Sunday, two stations were closed all weekend, and three were limiting sales.

In California, Pacific Telephone Co. predicted 4 million more people would make calls on Mother's Day than did last year.

Demand for flower deliveries also was up, florists said.

"I'm sure that 90 percent of them are calling because they want us to use our gas, instead of them," said Sylvia Lewis, an employee of Windy's Discount Florist in San Diego.

Operators of public transportation reported a boost in business.

Amtrak spokesman James Bryant said the railroad received a record 219,000 calls to reservation centers across the country for this weekend.

Greyhound Bus Lines spokesman John Revelins said in Chicago that he could not cite statistics on ticket sales, but that the Chicago terminal was packed.

Cowboy Cheerleaders Pick Scholz Sisters

By RAYNIE HARDESTY
Avalanche-Journal Staff

Dallas Cowboy fans this season will see a sister team from Lubbock when they turn their attention to the sidelines to watch twoscore of the most watchable and well-known cheerleaders in the country.

Suzette and Stephanie Scholz, daughters of Dr. and Mrs. Kenneth Scholz of 4603 10th St., were selected as Dallas Cowboy cheerleaders May 5 after 12 hours of final tryouts.

"I really didn't think they'd want a sister team on the squad," Stephanie, 19, said. She is joining her 20-year-old sister, Suzette, on the squad this year. Suzette became a Dallas Cowboy cheerleader last season and was chosen again this year.

No other women from the South Plains area are cheerleaders for the Dallas team, although another pair of sisters from the Dallas area have been on the squad for five years.

Suzette and Stephanie now are in a rigid practice season, meeting with the squad for at least four hours, three to six times each week.

The 40-member squad is being flown to the team's first pre-season game in Canton, Ohio, July 28, and the women are undergoing stiff preparation for the event.

The cheerleaders usually only appear at regular season home games, the playoffs and the Super Bowl, according to Suzette, who said this will be the first time the cheerleaders will perform at a pre-season game.

More than 1,000 women from across the nation attended the first tryout for the 1979-1980 squad March 31. That group was pared down to 40 squad members after two more tryout sessions and the grueling final tryout.

The sisters, who share an apartment in Dallas, said Friday during a telephone interview that they believe so many women tried out for the squad this year because of the success of the Cowboy team the past two years and a movie released on national television about the cheerleading squad last year.

Suzette successfully tried out for the squad last year and later made the 12-member show group after her mother, who had been visiting Dallas, heard a radio announcement of the tryouts.

"I already was planning to go to nursing school and I thought trying out for be a good opportunity to meet people," Suzette said of her decision to try and make the squad.

This year Stephanie, also planning to attend the Baylor University School of Nursing in Dallas, heeded her sister's encouragement and became a Dallas cheerleader.

When the squad is selected, "they're looking for a package," Stephanie explained. Each woman is considered for what she has to offer to the squad.

Most squad members previously have been on drill teams or dance groups, "but you also need to be able to talk to people, express yourself and catch onto steps fast," she added.

While the women are expected to continuously maintain and uphold "the public cheerleader image," along with attending practices and making public appearances, "the sacrifices are definitely worth it," Suzette said. "The experiences of being a Dallas Cowboy cheerleader gives a very rewarding feeling. I'm very glad to be back on the squad again."

"All girls on the squad are encouraged to have jobs or be in school," as well as perform other cheerleading responsibilites, Stephanie said.

Both of the Scholz sisters were cheerleaders thoughout junior high school and at Coronado High School. Suzette was a freshman and junior varsity cheerleader at Texas Tech University during the two years she attended and Stephanie was selected as an alternate cheerleader the year she attended Texas Tech. Stephanie also has attended one semester at Southern Methodist University.

Businessman Sentenced For Gun-Running Scheme

CHICAGO (AP) — A Michigan businessman has been sentenced to two years in prison for illegally shipping guns to racially troubled South Africa.

U.S. District Judge Hurbert L. Will said Thursday that the sentence for Seymour G. Freilich of Oak Park, Mich., will run concurrently with an 18-month prison term he already is serving in connection with the gun-running scheme.

Freilich and his defunct firm, Concealable Body Armour of America, Inc., pleaded guilty last month to charges of violating federal arms export rules and to making false customs declarations.

Will fined the firm $35,000.

Canada paid the United States $108 million on taking over the Alaska Highway in 1946.

German Reactor Safe Despite 10-Hour Fire

MUNICH, West Germany (UPI) — A fire burned for more than 10 hours Saturday in a laboratory about 100 yards from West Germany's first nuclear reactor but neither damaged the reactor nor released any radioactivity, authorities said.

Firefighters at one point withdrew from the physics laboratory of the Research Institute in suburban Garching because they feared the heat would cause helium and nitrogen containers to explode.

A spokesman for a joint command established to fight the fire said special units measured for radioactivity throughout the area but could detect none.

A fire department spokesman said electrical apparatus left on overnight may have caused the blaze, discovered by a night watchman, although he did not rule out arson.

No Leads Found In Educator's Disappearance

By JOHNNY HOLMES
Avalanche-Journal Staff

PLAINVIEW — At 9:40 a.m. on Monday, April 16, Leon Harris boarded Braniff flight 165 in Lubbock for "a quick trip to Dallas."

No one has seen him since.

In the 27 days since his disappearance, law enforcement officials have turned up "absolutely no trace" of the 45-year-old dean of the Regional Occupational Center, a branch of Levelland's South Plains College here. Police say there is no evidence of foul play, and an internal audit currently being conducted on the ROC financial records indicates no misuse of funds.

The matter is complicated though, by the total lack of clues and the fact that Harris suffers from recurring attacks of spinal meningitis, an infection of the spinal fluid that, in his case, possibly could put him in a coma or even kill him if not properly handled.

"We haven't heard a word since the day he went to Dallas," Mrs. Harris said of her husband, who has headed the vocational-technical center since its inception in 1973. "No one has heard anything at all."

"We know absolutely zip," said Eddie Trice, dean of college relations at the SPC main campus in Levelland. "We're quite mystified."

The investigation by police in Plainview, Dallas and Fort Worth is not a criminal inquiry of any kind, but strictly a missing persons search. "We have no evidence of any wrongdoing by Mr. Harris, nor of any foul play," said Plainview police chief Alan Stewart. "His family filed a missing person report, and we're just following up on that."

Dallas and Fort Worth police both have been contacted but say they have no clues as to why Harris might have disappeared or where he possibly could have gone.

"There was nothing to be suspicious of" the morning Harris left, his wife said. "He didn't take any clothes or checks from the house, and he even opened up the school before he left."

It was first believed that Harris had taken a Southwest Airlines flight to Dallas' Love Field that morning because the arrival and departure times Mrs. Harris said her husband gave her coincided with a Southwest flight. However, The Avalanche-Journal has learned Harris had a reservation on the Braniff flight to Dallas-Fort Worth Airport.

A spokesman in Braniff's home office in Dallas confirmed Harris' reservation on the morning flight but said he could find no record of a return flight reservation booked in Harris' name. Southwest Airlines spokesmen say they have no record of Harris flying between Lubbock and Dallas that day.

Checks by telephone of car rental agencies at both Dallas airports turned up no signs, and no Dallas or Fort Worth hospitals listed a patient under Harris' name the early part of that week.

Mrs. Harris said her husband had taken several such one-and two-day trips to major Texas cities in recent years, but that "he's always returned, and there never had been any problems before."

She said she believed the trips were for business-related matters, but none of Harris' associates at either the Plainview or Levelland campuses contacted by the A-J knew of any business connections Harris might have had in Dallas.

Harris had been rehired for the 1979-80 school year with a raise in salary earlier in April. In the month since his disappearance though, an administrative assistant and three secretaries have been fired from the ROC, and the center's registrar has resigned. SPC officials say the wave of recent personnel changes are not directly connected to Harris.

Linda Cloude, Harris' assistant, said she was given no details about her abrupt dismissal only days after Harris' mysterious disappearance, saying only, "It's a very bad situation. But I wasn't too surprised about getting fired since I worked directly for Mr. Harris."

The trio of recently released secretaries got the axe because of cutbacks in the campus budget, Trice said. "They were on a CETA (Comprehensive Education and Training Act) contract, and everyone knew that when the contracts expired and the money was gone, the jobs would be over."

Eddie Anaya, the ROC registrar for 2 1/2 years, said he resigned his post because, "I felt it would be better for me to look for another job, what with a new man taking over."

That new man is Dan Shockey, who served as Harris' dean of special services. Harris officially was fired Thursday, and Shockey promoted into the deanship, but Shockey had filled in for Harris since his disappearance.

Of Harris' disappearance, Shockey said, "It was such a shock. I saw him the day before the trip (Sunday, April 15), and saw no indication anything was about to happen."

Mrs. Harris said her husband first contracted spinal meningitis six years ago, and in recent months had been stricken almost daily by "terrific" headaches. "I noticed his attitude changing some over the past year as the headaches increased," she said.

Shockey said Harris was an "extremely outgoing and immediately likeable" man, but that he was private, and "not one to share his personal problems."

"Not many people knew about the headaches or their severity," he said. "But they were something his doctor told him he was just going to have to live with."

Dr. Landria Smith of Plainview and Dr. Jack Dunn, a neurosurgeon at the Texas Tech University School of Medicine in Lubbock, both have treated Harris for meningitis. Smith told the A-J that several antibiotics, including one Mrs. Harris said her husband was taking, could be used to treat the disease, but stressed, "There is no major medical center anywhere that I know of where patients might go for better or more comprehensive treatment."

"Meningitis patients like this generally are treated by their own doctors or neurosurgeons," Dr. Dunn said. "As for the man going into a coma because of a new attack, it's possible but very unlikely, I would think."

Harris first came to Plainview to serve as ROC director in 1973 from Levelland. The center currently carries more than 500 students working toward associate degrees in vocational and technical fields ranging from auto repair and electronics to child development.

Police Seek Murder Info In Brooklyn

NEW YORK (UPI) — The posh, tree-shrouded estates along the rolling byways of suburban Bedford Hills, N.Y., Have been a world apart from Brooklyn's tenement-lined Park Slope section.

That was until this week when the "most vicious crime" in that town's history — the execution-style slayings of four Bedford Hills residents — sent police combing through Brooklyn for any information that could solve the crimes.

The most tangible evidence police pursued Saturday was the 1973 green BMW sports car the killers left in Brooklyn's Park Slope section after hauling away jewelry, credit cards, bank books and a lead-encased safe from the estates of former undersecretary of state Charles Frankel and Christopher Sperry, the 21-year-old son of a prominent Wall Street stockbroker.

Frankel, 62, a professor of philosophy at Columbia University, and his wife Helen, 61, were found shot to death late Thursday afternoon in separate bedrooms of their mansion.

Earlier, Sperry, the son of broker Corydon Sperry, and Nettie MacCormack, 82, his former nanny and family housekeeper for more than 50 years, were found shot in the head in their 2½-story frame home a quarter mile away. All had been killed while they slept.

Members of city, state and Bedford Hills police canvassed Brooklyn neighborhoods looking for anyone who may have seen the killers leave the car.

The police in Bedford Hills also fanned out through the Westchester County community 30 miles north of New York City hoping to find a witness who heard or saw the car leave the scene of the slayings.

They had earlier concentrated their search in a two-mile area around the estates.

City Police Continue Search For Knifer

Police were continuing their search Saturday for a man who stabbed and robbed a Lubbock woman late Friday.

Dawn Marie Putman, 20, of 3108 Vicksburg was in satisfactory condition late Saturday at Reese Air Force Base Hospital for a stab wound to the left chest.

The victim arrived at a house at 8000-block of Durham Street to visit friends Friday night and, although her friends were not home, the woman said she heard someone making noise in the house.

She said she entered the residence and surprised a black man in his early 30s who stabbed her with a butcher knife.

The man then fled on foot with $200 cash taken from the woman and a pistol valued at $275 from the house, according to reports.

In other criminal activity, a convenience store clerk received a bomb threat Saturday similar to a bomb threat that emptied the Lubbock Christian High School Friday.

Jo N. Hudson, 19, a sales clerk at the Kwik Stop at 19th Street and Elkhart Avenue told police she received the threatening call about 8:15 a.m. Saturday. The caller told her that "a bomb had been planted in the store, and to get everyone out by 11 a.m., or the store will blow up, also the whole town."

The clerk said the caller's voice was that of a young male, possibly a child.

Another bomb threat made by a young male caller was received Friday at Lubbock Christian High School at 26th Street and Dover Avenue.

Gary Goff, school principal, told police that a school secretary received a call at 9:55 a.m. Friday from a young male.

The caller said, "I couldn't live with myself, so I called to tell you there is a bomb in the building."

According to police reports, the caller spoke very clear and distinctly, as if it had been rehearsed, the secretary said.

Immediately after the threat, the building was emptied. Police searched the building, but found nothing. Students returned to their classes at 11:15 a.m. The secretary said she believed the call was not made from the school building and police are studying a list of students who did not attend school Friday.

Police have a suspect in the stabbing late Friday of Arthur Joe Hicks Jr., 24, of 603 Ave. E. When police responded to a call at Hicks' house, they were met by the stabbing suspect, who was "in a very angry mood," according to reports.

The suspect told the officers that he had "run Hicks off" and kicked the windshield out of his Cadillac automobile.

According to reports, the suspect told police he would "kill Hicks if he came back."

The officers found Hicks a block away from his house with a knife wound in his right shoulder. He told police that the suspect and he had argued, and then the suspect stabbed him.

Hicks was treated at the scene by Emergency Medical Services, and released.

Saturday afternoon police took into custody a 9-year-old Lubbock boy for criminal mischief. The child had been picked up by police for violations 10 times in past 12 months.

The child was taken into custody at 1:59 p.m. Saturday after he and two other male children were caught breaking windows out of an abandoned house.

In the last year, the 9-year-old has been taken into custody 11 times for six thefts, on a burglary, assault, unlawful carrying of a weapon, truancy, arson, theft of mail, violation of curfew and criminal mischief.

Because a child has to be 10 years old before the courts can take disciplinary action against him, the boy has been released to his parents after each incident, a juvenile officer said.

Heart Attack Kills Barbara Hutton

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Barbara Hutton, the "poor little rich girl" with beauty and a fortune built on the Woolworth dime store empire, spent most of her life trying to escape loneliness, seeking love in seven marriages.

MISS HUTTON

She never seemed to find a real home or true love, and became an ailing recluse who spent much of her time in hospitals.

Miss Hutton, 66, died of a heart attack Friday night in her penthouse suite at the Beverly Wilshire Hotel. A woman in her suite called paramedics, who arrived within three minutes but could not revive her. She was dead on arrival at Cedars-Sinai Hospital.

She was born in New York Nov. 14, 1912, daughter of Franklyn Laws Hutton and the former Edna Woolworth, whose father founded the Woolworth chain.

Blood Pressure and Hearing Tests Set For Lubbock Area

Free screening tests for high blood pressure and hearing loss will be given at the Beltone Hearing Aid Service, 2815 Avenue Q, Monday, May 14 and Wednesday, May 16 from 10:00 a.m. to 4:00 p.m.

High blood pressure, the leading cause of stroke, heart, and kidney failure, can usually be controlled through medical supervision. It has no symptoms, however, and because of this, periodic testing is advisable. Both tests will be performed by trained personnel using modern electronic equipment.

Everyone should have a hearing test at least once a year if there is any trouble at all hearing clearly. Even people now wearing a hearing aid or those who have been told nothing could be done for them should have a test to keep track of how their hearing is changing and to find out if they are one of the many a hearing aid can help.

The free tests will be given Monday and Wednesday from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. To avoid waiting, call for an appointment.

Da Vinci Work Loaned To National Art Gallery

WASHINGTON (AP) — A painting by Leonardo da Vinci, only the second by the Renaissance master ever loaned for exhibition in this country, goes on display Sunday at the National Gallery of Art.

It is titled "Madonna and Child," also known as the Benois madonna from the family that once owned it. It is one of 11 paintings by Renaissance masters being lent to this country by the Soviet Union's Hermitage Museum in Leningrad.

Art historians regard the Benois madonna as the most costly in the history of collecting. It was exhibited in Leningrad, then St. Petersburg, shortly before World War I.

When it was recognized as a Leonardo, Czar Nicholas II bought it in 1914 from the Benois family for $1.5 million — the equivalent of $10 million now. No other painting ever cost so much.

The loan exhibit was arranged by Dr. Armand Hammer, chairman of the Occidental Petroleum Corp., and supported by a foundation he heads. Hammer told a reporter he asked for the Leonardo about a year ago in a talk with Soviet leader Leonid Brezhnev. Hammer's relationship with the Soviet Union dates back to 1921. He deals with the Russians regularly on business and art matters.

The exhibition will remain in Washington through June 24.

Other artists included are Cima da Conegliano, Raphael, Andrea del Sarto and Titian.

Leonardo, one of the all-around geniuses in history, lived from 1452 to 1519. Only one other of his paintings has been loaned for showing in this country: The "Mona Lisa," shown in Washington and at the Metropolitan Museum of Art in New York City in 1963 on loan from the Louvre in Paris.

The only one of his paintings in a collection outside Europe is Leonardo's "Ginevra de Benici," owned by the National Gallery here.

The Benois madonna, only 19½ by 12⅜ inches in size, was originally painted on wood. But since wood tends to split, it was transferred to canvas. There is only one cryptic reference to paintings of the Virgin and Child in Leonardo's extensive journals. If this is the painting, he was only 26 when he started it.

The Hermitage ranks among the world's greatest museums, with collections of furniture, jewelry, textiles and the art of a score of cultures.

"The Benois madonna is not just another picture of the Madonna and Child. Never before this time had a painting of the human figure looked so positively lifelike. Through the genius of Leonardo, the Madonna and Child...have become three-dimensional beings who move in space," says the catalogue.

West Berliners Recall Airlift With Ceremony

BERLIN (AP) — West Berliners marked the 30th anniversary of the end of the Berlin Airlift Saturday by honoring 78 persons killed in round-the-clock supply flights that broke the Soviet blockade of the city.

In a ceremony at the Airlift Memorial outside Tempelhof U.S. airbase, Mayor Dietrich Stobbe said the 11 months of flights by American, British and French airmen in 1948-49 provided the foundation for West Berlin's free existence.

"Berlin was reborn then. The basis was established for friendship between West Germany and the Western Allies. The occupying powers became protective forces," Stobbe said.

Walter Stoessel, U.S. ambassador to West Germany, said the airlift was the turning point of relations between West Germany and the Western Allies.

"Without mutual determination, the airlift would not have succeeded in frustrating the intention of those who sought to choke this city," Stoessel said in an address at the memorial.

Allied pilots flew 277,246 missions, transporting 1.8 million tons of food, fuel and other supplies to West Berlin's 2.2 million residents during the blockade.

Thirty-nine Britons, 31 Americans and eight Germans died during the airlift which was organized by the late General Lucius D. Clay, U.S. commandant of Berlin in the postwar era.

The British and American dead were airmen. The Germans were airport workers or civilians killed on the ground by crashes.

U.S. military offices in West Berlin were renamed "Gen. Lucius D. Clay Headquarters" in another ceremony Saturday honoring the "Father of the Airlift." Clay died in 1978.

Jean-Pierre Brunet, French ambassador to West Germany, said the airlift was an obligation of the Western Allies to a Soviet challenge against West Berlin.

The Soviet Union launched the Berlin blockade on June 24, 1948, stopping Allied road traffic across occupied East Germany to protest introduction of the new West German Deutchmark in West Berlin.

The blockade was designed to starve residents of the war-ravaged city and force U.S., British and French forces to withdraw from their sectors.

But the Allies answered with the massive airlift of supplies over three flight corridors from West Germany, and on May 12, 1949, the Russians abandoned the blockade and reopened the autobahn links.

Stock Prices Slide Across Broad Front

By J.L. HUTCHESON
Schneider, Bernet & Hickman, Inc.

Stock prices slid across a broad front this week, led by the casino and energy issues. Some of the losses were trimmed toward the end of the week in some issues. Trading was active all week.

J.L. HUTCHESON

Several oil and rubber issues are prominent losers, as were such casino issues as Ceasars World, Bally Manufacturing and Resorts International. Some of the chemical, computer and auto stocks managed to post some gains.

Analysts attributed the market's recent sharp sell-off to investor realization that interest rates are probably going back up and the growing panic over the spectre of a nation-wide gasoline shortage.

A statement by presidential Press Secretary Jody Powell that stocks of oil are dangerously low helped contribute to the anxiety over gasoline supplies. There was also news of a survey that indicated the possibility of "rolling" blackouts this summer in Northern California.

Treasury Secretary Michael Blumenthal's statement that "it obviously isn't possible to hit the administration's original forecast of a 7.4 percent inflation rate for 1979" also hurt the stock market.

There is growing concern that interest rates may climb to new highs. Most analysts are currently wondering whether the move to higher rates is a new trend or a last move up prior to a reversal of the old trend.

One analyst likened the Carter administration to a small boy pouring gasoline on a fire and then being amazed that the flames shot up out of control. With the way in which the Carter administration allowed the money supply to increase during his first year in office, there could be little doubt that the inflation rate would increase this year, since any surge in the money supply is usually felt in the economy approximately one year later. This knowledge did not prevent the government from gunning the money supply, however, and now they are all wondering why they are unable to control inflation.

Permanent Oil Tax Planned

The Carter administration is planning to replace oil price controls with a permanent tax which will have the same effect as controlling prices — lower domestic production, and exploration. The only difference is that the federal government will be able to profit directly from any OPEC price boost.

The permanent tax applies to future oil yet to be discovered. It is not a "windfall" profits tax, but a tax on the market price of oil.

Under the plan, a benchmark price for U.S. oil is established in terms of constant dollars at roughly the world price at the time the proposal is enacted. That would be about $16, 1979 value. If the world price of oil rises above the benchmark price, the government takes half the difference. For example, say the benchmark price is $16 and the prices rises to $18, the government taxes $2 at 50 percent, which means tax revenues of $1 per barrel.

The higher the world price of oil rises above the U.S. benchmark price, the greater the tax bite. If the price of oil rises to $30 per barrel, the tax would be $7, or 23 percent of world price. It is not hard to understand that this tax makes the U.S. government a co-beneficiary of OPEC price increases. The higher the price goes, the greater the government's share.

The Carter administration has come up with a plan that will produce tax revenues for the government and increases the government's interest in seeing oil prices rise in the future while it discourages U.S. exploration and development. It will also make us more dependent than ever on imported oil.

Once again, the federal government has assumed authority where it has none, and the result will be more problems for the American people and a further erosion of our personal freedoms as government continues to invade the private lives of all Americans.

Exchange Merger Idea Shelved

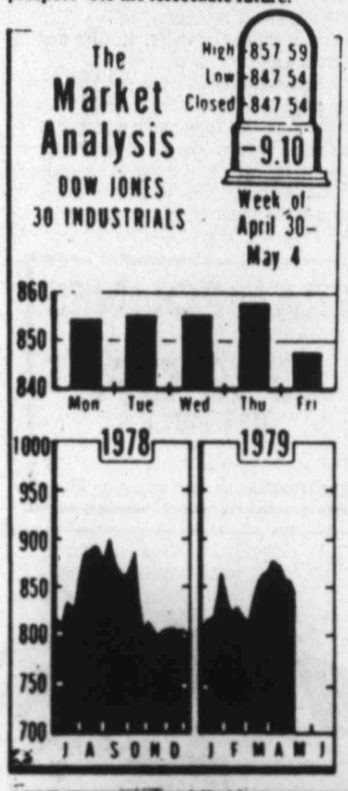
WHITE SULPHUR SPRINGS, W. Va. (AP) — Leading stock brokers, who have long been pushing for a merger of the New York and American Stock Exchanges, in effect conceded defeat this past week.

But while shelving their campaign for a full-scale merger of the two Wall Street institutions, they also voted to pursue a more modest goal.

It would involve combining a number of present and planned operations of the two exchanges, such as trading in stock options and financial futures contracts, as well as administrative facilities.

"It may be that the merger of the Amex and NYSE is an idea whose time has not yet come (or may have passed)," said a background memo prepared by the Securities Industry Association for the trade group's annual spring meeting here.

Edward I. O'Brien, the SIA's president, acknowledged in a interview that no outright NYSE-Amex merger was in prospect "for the forseeable future."



The association began advocating a merger in 1974, with the primary aim of cutting brokers' costs by eliminting parallel facilities.

"The exchanges' initial reaction to the merger suggestion was positive, if less than enthusiastic," the SIA memo said. "Each body appointed a committee to study and negiotiate the basic contours of a merger and extensive talks were held."

But the talks soon bogged down on antitrust issues and other problems as well.

For one thing, the idea evidently met with a chilly recption from a number of the blue chip companies listed on the Big Board. "An NYSE poll of its listed coompanies appeared to reveal a strong concern that merger with the Amex would dilute the value which those companies felt attached to their listings," as the memo put it.

While the Wall Street executives considered such matters in the isolation of this mountain resort community, the stock market itself was in a struggle of its own.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials dropped 16.98 to 830.56.

The NYSE composite index declined 1.28 to 55.48, and the Amex market value index was down 6.14 at 176.41.

Big Board volume averaged 28.02 million shares a day, against 29.89 million the week before.

The brokers' decision to lower their sights on an Amex-NYSE combination was no big surprise.

Robert C. Hall, executive vice president of the NYSE, said no formal merger talks have been held for some two years now. And there had been no change since then in any of the primary problems that sidetracked the idea, he said.

Industry leaders here said they doubted any sudden dramatic progress was likely toward their new goals either.

But they did note some favorable factors, particularly on the subject of trading in financial futures, which resemble futures contracts on farm and industrial commodities, but which call for delivery of such things as foreign currencies.

They noted that antitrust obstacles in this case should be far less formidable since the bulk of this business now is conducted at commodity exchanges in Chicago.

Options represent a more complicate situation since the Securities and Exchange Commission has imposed a moratorium on expansion of the options market pending a study of its regulation and impact.

Still another part of what SIA leaders envisioned is some sort of sharing of physical facilities by the two exchanges.

The Amex has sucessesfully sought help from New York State towards the construction of a new building. The NYSE, meanwhile, is considering its options for the future, including expansion and a possible outright move.

"If both exchanges are going to move, some sort of shared or at least contiguous facilities would seem to make sense," the SIA memo said, "from the point of view of minimizing relocation costs, enhanced operational efficiency and creating a financial 'mart' that could attract worldwide attention."

And in an illustration that the brokers' hopes die hard, the memo added: "Such facilities would also be fortuitous should a merger occur some time in the future."

Pressure Increasing On Carter To Use Wage-Price Controls

NEW YORK (AP) — The Carter administration continues to deny it has any plans to institute mandatory wage-price controls, but the pressure to do more about the inflation problem is clearly growing.

Top administration officials acknowleged this past week that inlation is expected to reach 8.5 percent this year — or 1¼ percentage points higher than the wage guideline they are asking workers to observe.

Others in the private sector are predicting even higher rates of inflation. The Business Council, a group of corporate executives, forecast, for example, that inflation will be 9.5 percent this year.

For the first three months of the year the consumer price inflation has been running at an annual rate of 13 percent. Even if inflation slows, as it is expected to, there is broad agreement that for the full year it will wind up well above the 7 percent wage guideline that is part of Carter's anti-inflation program.

So far, comments from Washington indicate that the short-term solution is simply to let workers take the inflation loss and hold to a 7 percent guideline. But there may be efforts to tightened guidelines for prices.

"This is not a problem that can be solved by trying to expand the rate of wage increases," said Barry Bosworth, a top inflation expert in the Carter administration.

"We have to accept attenuated real incomes because we are not achieving the productivity increases in the industrial sector to offset the rate of increase of food and fuel prices," he was quoted as saying this past week.

Charles L. Schultze, chairman of the Council of Economic Advisers, made a similar observation. Raising the pay standard would simply aggravate costs, he said. As a result, "you get a higher rate of inflation."

Some economists already are writing the obituary for the voluntary wage-price program unveiled last fall. At the time, government economists were predicting that the program could bring down this year's inflation rate to 6 or 6.5 percent.

"It does appear that the guidelines are falling apart," Herbert Neil, vice president and economist at Harris Bank of Chicago, recently commented.

In reaching that conclusion, Neil cited inflation indexing of Social Security benefits and the thrust of negotiations for several large unions, all of which indicate millions of people will be getting increases higher than the 7 percent voluntary standard.

For Social Security recipients, the pace of inflation means an average 9.9 percent increase for 35 million people in July.

But on the pricing side of the equation, Bosworth, the director of the Council of Wage and Price Stability, has told reporters he wants to revise the guidelines so that individual targets are set for every major industry. The program is being reviewed for possible changes in October when its goes into a second year.

Bosworth and others conceded that the current pricing guidelines are unwieldy. And Labor critics have long argued that price guidelines treat corporations better than the wage guidelines treat workers. While the case is open for debate, the pressure to do more is growing stronger.

Under the current price guidelines, which don't break out individual industries, Bosworth said the uniform guidelines were probably creating inequities among different industry segments, which operate with different profit margin and pricing systems.

The general guidelines call for all companies to keep their average price increases to half a percentage point below the average increases that occurred between 1976 and 1977.

But for companies that have had "uncontrollable" cost increases, a second formula may apply. Under that one, companies may comply by keeping their profit margins during the current year to the average profit rise in the best two of the three previous years.

While others are likely to see a move to specific industry targets as step closer to mandatory price controls, Bosworth argues that they would make the program more efficient, fair and easier to monitor.

Credit Union Starts Building

The Rural Telephone and Electric Federal Credit Union will hold groundbreaking ceremonies at 4 p.m. Monday at 2545 74th St. to initiate construction of a new building.

The board of directors approved final plans for the new structure in April, Treasurer-Manager Patsy Edwards said. Construction is scheduled to begin Tuesday and is expected to take 180 days.

Designed to be energy efficient as well as attractive, the new building will use such cost-saving features as a dirt berm around the north and east side of the building, high-energy effective mechanical units with economizers, insulation and double entry doors.

Architect for the new office building is Kennedy C. Whiteley Jr.

The credit union was chartered in May 1959 to serve the employees of all rural electric and telephone cooperatives in Texas, New Mexico and Arizona.

Directors include: Chairman Connie Gupton, Lynn Williams, Bert Stevens, J.T. Palmer, Joe Skidmore, Jimmie Zinn, Claude Weathersbee, Ronnie Christian, Leon Barham, L.C. Lovett, Wendall Patterson, David Westbrook and Patsy Edwards.

FIRST AID AGREEMENT

WASHINGTON (AP) — The American Red Cross says it has signed an agreement with American Telephone & Telegraph Co. providing for training Bell System employees in first aid, including emergency treatment of heart attack victims. The agreement, signed by Red Cross Chairman Jerome H. Holland and AT&T Chairman Charles L. Brown, marks a continuation of cooperative efforts dating from 1912, the Red Cross said.

California Gas Buyers Given Package Deals

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Some motorists have been illegally required to get their car washed in order to purchase gasoline during the current fuel crunch. But being forced to buy fertilizer?

Chris Sutton, a staff assistant in the district attorney's office, said the office has received "hundreds of complaints" from consumers about alleged violations of the odd-even-days rationing plan.

"We've probably received about one call a minute," Sutton said, adding that Friday was the "worst day" thus far.

Sutton said most complaints were being referred to local police. The district attorney's office, however, was handling stations using a so-called "tie-in" scheme — requiring motorists to purchase another service in order to receive gasoline.

"One station was even selling a brand of fertilizer," he said.

Many stations are built so that the only exit is through the car wash. "We're also getting complaints from people who call the police and find the police don't want to take complaints. One problem is that the governor's office did not send out enough copies of the regulations.

"We're trying to go through our office to inform the police that they do have this responsibility as soon as they can work up guidelines."

He said district attorney investigators have been making spot checks of gas stations, but since the governor's order went into effect so soon, they have not even had time to have forms printed up.

"When you create laws through an emergency situation, it's just impossible to gear up for it," Sutton said.

Guerrillas Set Agreement On Rhodesia

NAIROBI, Kenya (AP) — Black nationalist guerrilla leaders, Soviet-armed Joshua Nkomo and China-backed Robert Mugabe, have overcome a long-standing rift and decided to unify their effort to bring down Rhodesia's government, official Ethiopian Radio reported Saturday.

The broadcast, monitored in Nairobi, said the agreement was reached after three days of talks in the Addis Ababa, the Ethiopian capital. Nkomo, a capitalist despite his Soviet ties, and Marxist Mugabe, had been split on whether to unite first politically or militarily. Nkomo had wanted political unification first.

Under terms of the agreement, Nkomo's Zambia-based Zimbabwe People's Liberation Army, estimated at 15,000 men, and Mugabe's Mozambique-based Zimbabwe African Liberation Army, thought to be 24,000 strong, will coordinate military moves through a joint command structure. The two groups have been fighting their guerrilla war for seven years.

Both men reportedly agreed to establish coordination and defense committees and agreed to adopt a single proposed constitution for governing Rhodesia under their joint leadership, the radio said.

Further details of the accord were not disclosed. The report could not be confirmed independently.

Nkomo heads the Zimbabwe African People's Union, while Mugabe controls the Zimbabwe African National Union. The two men formed the Patriotic Alliance to topple the white minority regime of Prime Minister Ian Smith and have both condemned recent elections in Rhodesia.

However because of their differences and split tribal loyalties, the two groups have not worked together closely.

Mugabe, the radio reported, called the Muzorewa administration an "offshoot of Ian Smith."

Muzorewa is due to take over as head of the new government at the end of this month, after an election in which black voters voted for the first time. The United States and Britain failed to get the guerrilla groups to take part in the election.

Enter your own permanent numbers in the chart in the bottom right-hand corner. To figure your own permanent numbers, follow these three steps:

Step 1: From the year chart, find the numbers corresponding to your year of birth. For instance, if you were born in 1947, your number for Physical would be 21, Emotional 17, Intellectual 19. Note whether your numbers are preceded by an A or B; this will be used for Step 2.

Step 2: Now find the corresponding number for the month you were born. If your month is February, and your year numbers were preceded by a B, your month numbers would be 8 for Physical, 3 for Emotional and 31 for Intellectual. Enter your own numbers in the figure chart for Step 2.

Step 3: In the figure chart, enter your day of birth three times, one each for Physical (P), Emotional (E) and Intellectual (I). (If you were born on April 3, for instance, place a 3 in each column.)

Add the three columns to derive your permanent biorhythm numbers for your Physical, Emotional and Intellectual cycles. Now you can refer to today's rhythms.

Bad History Grade Disqualifies Trackster

By JOHNNY HOLMES
Avalanche-Journal Staff

High school athletes from across Texas are competing this weekend in the state track meet in Austin, but one of the state's brightest track stars won't be there.

Make no mistake, Robert Chambers, the defending Class A champion in the 440 yard dash, was planning on it. The Wellington High School senior had breezed through a spring of track meets across West Texas, and was fully counting on leading his powerful Skyrocket team in an all-out assault on the state championship.

Chambers began his charge at state in earnest on April 17 by winning the 440-yard dash and the long jump, and anchoring both the sprint and mile relay teams to victories in the District 2A meet in Shamrock. But when he returned home that night, he found that he had been disqualified, and that the Wellington school superintendent, his track coach and his history teacher had quit.

The brouhaha centered around what Wellington athletic director James Williams is calling "one of the biggest breakdowns in communication I've ever seen."

While Chambers was winning his four events in Shamrock and his teammates were compiling enough points to qualify for the defense of their Class A Regional track championship, Chambers was being disqualified by his Texas history teacher Jamie Larson.

Larson said Chambers had not turned in a required and "very much overdue" notebook, and therefore was failing his class.

Chambers is taking only four courses this spring and, according to Article 8, Section 15 of the University Interscholastic League (UIL) scholarship rules, "A student must be passing three one-credit courses at least seven days prior to a sporting event to be eligible for that event."

Chambers was failing his English course, but felt he was passing his other three, including Larson's history class.

"I told (track) Coach (Phil) Bailey the day of the district track meet that Robert hadn't turned in his notebook and was failing," Larson said. "I told him that if Robert could produce the notebook it would be okay, but only if he had already done the work. It was overdue, and I couldn't accept it if he went out and threw it together that morning."

While coaches and athletes scurried, and Chambers came up with the notebook, Larson spoke with Wellington school superintendent E.W. Clement, who asked if Larson could give Chambers more time to complete the book.

"Mr. Clement said he wouldn't order me to accept the notebook late," Larson said. "But he did ask if I could grant Robert some extra time."

After turning the notebook in, Chambers joined his track team and proceeded with his four-event sweep, only to return home to what Clement called "a mess like I've never seen."

During the day of the meet, Larson asked for and received a school board hearing, so the matter remained in limbo — and very much heated discussion — until the meeting the following Monday night, where it erupted in full force once again.

By the time the stormy session was over, Clement and all six high school coaches had turned in their resignations, as well as Larson, who said he felt he was under "intense pressure" to do what he felt was wrong, "just for the sake of winning."

At the end of the tumultuous meeting, the school board said it could not and would not order Larson to give Chambers a grade, either passing or failing. The final decision was Larson's, and he chose not to accept the notebook.

The board turned the matter over to the UIL, which officially stripped Chambers of his two individual victories in the district meet and disqualified the two relay teams on which he ran.

Despite speculation that Larson may have been pressured by some parents, the teacher said other factors did influence his decision but that the primary decision to fail Chambers was based on the youth's work in class.

"Robert slept a lot in my class, and he was late and absent many times, too," Larson said.

Chambers suffered from an abscess tooth, Williams explained, and many days was under medication which could have made him drowsy. That, combined with the number of days Chambers missed to run in meets, may have led to Larson's decision to fail him, Williams said.

"The medicine for his tooth could have caused some drowsiness, but not as many times as I had to wake him," Larson said. "He just got a little lazy.

"Robert is a capable student," he continued. "He passed government under me earlier this year, and that's harder than this history course. He even tested for Special Education, and was way above it."

"He's a good kid," Williams said. "He never gave us any discipline problems. We just thought he should have gotten a fair chance."

"I just didn't think it was fair to the other kids," Larson said. "Some of the other kids who got B's might could have made A's with more time, and maybe they could've gone on to get academic scholarships," Larson said. "It just wasn't fair."

At the school board meeting, Chambers was asked to give his opinion of the matter, to which he replied, "I thought I was doing enough in that class to get by."

Although the UIL committee has made its decision, residents of Wellington are still upset with the Chambers incident.

"The town's real split over it," Larson said. "People who were lifelong friends now aren't even speaking to each other."

"It was a real big blow to our program," Williams said. "We won Regionals last year and were really looking forward to a shot at winning the Big One in Austin this weekend."

Since the blowup, all the coaches except Bailey have agreed to return for the 1979-80 school year, but Larson and Clement will be employed elsewhere next year.

"Coach Bailey quit because he didn't want to be the focal point of any ongoing feud," Williams said. "He'd been here six years and didn't want to be a part of anything that could hurt the school, so he decided to move on."

Larson said "I already have my application in elsewhere, and have already received some job offers, so now its just a decision of where to go."

Clement, who also works in the Wellington tax office, refused to discuss his situation with The Avalanche-Journal, saying only that he was resigning from the superintendent's position.

Chambers was invited to participate in the State Qualifier's Track Meet at Texas Tech University last weekend, and won the 440-yard dash with little trouble. His 48.1 time in that race was the sixth fastest recorded in Texas by any quarter-miler in any classification in 1979, and many of his victims in that race were from AA, AAA, and AAAA schools.

He'll most likely finish the school year with enough credit to graduate, school officials say. He has been offered a full football and track scholarship from San Angelo State University, and has been approached by several other area colleges, including Wayland Baptist College in Plainview and South Plains College in Levelland.

"I doubt we'll forget this here for a while," Williams mused. "I've been coaching for a long time, and I've never seen anything get so out of hand as this."

Wounded Houston Pilot Faces Colombian Air Space Charges

RIOHACHA, Colombia (AP) — A Texas pilot said he was guided to an emergency landing by what he thought were friendly car lights, then robbed and wounded by a gang. A Colombian official said he had landed in one of Colombia's most notorious drug-smuggling areas.

Limbano Diaz, government secretary in the state of Guiajura, said William Spradley of Houston and a companion apparently were spotted by smugglers who were waiting for a plane to pick up a load of marijuana.

Diaz said Spradley is charged with violating Colombia's air space. He said the charge, scheduled to be heard in court next week, carries a maximum fine of $125,000. Spradley said he strayed into Colombia's air space by accident.

Spradley's lawyer, Manuel Ballesteros of Riohacha, said the fine probably would be about $25,000.

"I didn't realize how serious the situation is here in Colombia," Spradley said Friday in an interview conducted from his hospital bed. "This is sure no place for anyone if they know what's going on. If you screw up, you're in a big world of hurt."

Spradley, a 45-year-old Houston fireman, said he and a companion, Roy McLemore of Houston, developed engine trouble April 29 during a flight from Miami to Venezuela to pick up some oil-drilling bits. He said they were looking for a landing site in the torrid semi-desert area when they saw several cars on the beach shining their lights as if to indicate a safe spot.

The beach is on the Guajira peninsula, a favorite spot of drug traffickers that juts into the Caribbean, 500 miles north of Bogota, the capital.

"After we landed, three, maybe five pick-up, trucks pulled up next to the plane and we got out," Spradley said. "After that, someone held a pistol on us and told us to get in one of the the trucks. I was next to the window on the passenger side when I heard a gunshot and saw a flash."

Spradley was hit by a bullet that tore through his right forearm and lodged 1½ inches from his spine. He said he hopes to have the bullet removed when he returns to Houston.

"They all left and Roy and I were lying there on the beach," he said. "I knew I was bleeding a lot and I thought I probably was dying .... I laid there and thought about my mother." Spradley said he is single and lives with his mother and stepfather.

He said the names of the Venezuelan oil company and of the man he was supposed to pick up the drill bits from was written on a piece of paper in his stolen flight bag and he doesn't remember that information.

Diaz said McLemore apparently ran away when a second group of persons approached to help them. McLemore has not been found, he said. Spradley said he did not see McLemore injured during the attack.

Authorities said the plane still was at the landing site, 80 miles northeast of Riohacha, a town on the Caribbean coast.

U.S. Defends Use Of Radar For Speeders

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Federal officials say early research results indicate police radar is "a fine, accurate device" for catching speeders — despite private tests in which radar showed houses and trees zipping along smartly.

Questions about the accuracy of speed-measuring radar arose in February when Miami television station WTVJ reported it used the device to record buildings traveling at up to 80 miles an hour.

Advised of these findings, Judge Alfred Nesbitt of Dade County, Fla., sidetracked more than 1,000 traffic cases.

Last week, he dismissed speeding charges against 80 drivers on grounds radar's reliability "has not been established beyond and to the exclusion of every reasonable doubt."

His ruling could upset a U.S. Supreme Court decision that accepted police radar readings as proof positive of speeding.

At a minimum, it has set off a stir in the traffic safety arena. In Miami, one newspaper cartoon depicted a police officer arresting a tree. Legal challenges to once-routine traffic tickets are expected across the country. But a five-man research team of the U.S. Bureau of Standards has been studying the reliability of radar for about a year at a testing site in Boulder, Colo.

In a Washington interview, research supervisor Marshall Treadow said early test results indicate "police radars are accurate, in general ...

"If a patrolman uses a radar the way it was designed, it's a fine, accurate device."

Treadow said this tentative conclusion is based on testing of the first five of more than 30 radar devices on the market.

He questioned the operating skills of the testers involved in the TV station's experiment.

Most radar devices, he said, work on "the Doppler Principle — and that's a very tried and true method.

"They send a frequency out and they get a frequency back. You get a different frequency back for a moving object than for a stationary object like a house or something."

Treadow said the TV station was able to record stationary objects as moving because "there was no target out there."

"A policeman will know, in my opinion, when he's got a false reading." Ron Engle a safety management specialist with the U.S. Highway Traffic Safety Administration, said the Bureau of Standards was asked in 1976 to set minimum performance standards for radar, speedometers, odometers and other vehicle safety devices by studying them over a threeyear period.

When testing is complete, he said, highway safety officials will draft performance standards and federal funds may be used only to buy devices meeting those quality criteria.

Carter Ties SALT To Detente

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter says the United States' relationship with the Soviets will be severed "to a substantial degree" if the Senate fails to ratify the strategic arms limitation treaty.

"We have gotten the best deal we can," Carter said in an interview with visiting editors. "It is not perfect."

The president met with about 30 editors at the White House on Friday before leaving for Camp Hoover, Va., in the Shenandoah National Park for the weekend. The transcript was released Saturday.

Carter said the SALT treaty he will sign with Soviet President Leonid I. Brezhnev in Vienna during their summit June 15-18 "is to our great advantage and also to the Soviets' great advantage."

Clearly addressing his comments to fence-sitting senators who are unsure whether to approve the pact, the president said:

"Rejection of the treaty will have the most devastating consequences to our country and I think to world peace. It will sever, to a substantial degree, the workable relationship between ourselves and the Soviets."

He said failure of the Senate to approve the treaty also would "shake the confidence of our NATO allies" and would "make it almost impossible for us to pursue successfully the control of nuclear weapon development" in developing countries.

Returning to an alarm he sounded a day earlier, the president said Senate rejection would place the United States in the position of a "warmonger who refused even to participate in an equitable restraint on the most destructive weapons on earth."

Senate Majority Leader Robert Byrd said Saturday that Carter's claim that defeat of the treaty would make the United States look like a warmonger is "an argument that has no credibility" and was not likely to win any votes. Byrd has yet to announce whether he will support the treaty.

Sarah Weddington Addresses Tech Law School Graduates

By RUTHANNE BROCKWAY
Avalanche-Journal Staff

When Sarah Ragle was a child, she learned a lesson from her minister father which she carried with her to the White House in September of 1978.

She is now Sarah Weddington, a special assistant to President Carter, but the lesson has carried her through many experiences — as a practicing attorney, a Texas legislator, general counsel in the U.S. Department of Agriculture and now in the White House.

"I learned to disagree without being disagreeable." Addressing the tenth graduating class at the Texas Tech School of law, she attributed the lesson to her father, the Rev. H. Doyle Ragle who is a minister at Saint John United Methodist Church in Lubbock.

That trait of diplomacy helped earn her the position she now holds, which women's leaders Midge Constanza and Bella Abzug left, she said in an interview following her address to the Texas Tech University School of Law graduation ceremony Saturday.

Learning to listen to other people's viewpoints is an important part of her job, she said, and added, "I learned to reject an idea, but not the person."

Miss Weddington said her experience in the Texas House of Representative from 1973 to 1977 also helped prepare her for her present job.

As for her rapport with Carter, Miss Weddington said, "Our backgrounds are similar and being from the South helps."

"We (Southerners) are people who care about other people," she said.

She said she has a "good working relationship" with Carter and is more interested in that than in where her office in the White House is (a reference to Midge Constanza who pointed out the office is in the basement).

While other women who have held the job were designated in charge of "women's issues," Miss Weddington said she prefers the title simply to be "special assistant."

"I am concerned about a lot of issues other than women," she said. "My theory is that all in the White House have a concern for women's issues."

While the progress of women and minorities may not be as visible as it was in the days of rallies and marches, Miss Weddington said she feels the way Liz Carpenter (another Texan who who served as Mrs. Lyndon Johnson's press secretary) described the women's movement — "It's out of the streets and into the hearts and minds of people."

While only five of the 250 members of Miss Weddington's law school class were women, and in 1967 3 percent of U.S. attorneys were women, Miss Weddington pointed out that today 10 percent of the attorneys in the nation are women.

"The average law school enrollment is 30 percent women and that's very encouraging," she said.

As general counsel for the U.S. Department of Agriculture in 1977 and 1978, Miss Weddington said she hired 50 percent women and 30 percent minorities.

When asked about the fairness of giving job preference to women and minorities, she said employers should first make a list of all qualified applicants.

If women and minorities are qualified, she said, "It's appropriate then to consider them and at that point give them special consideration."

One of the frustrations of her job is that in Washington problems are usually dealt with in the abstract instead of on an individual basis — something she misses about being in private law practice.

"I know in the long run it helps people," she said of her current duties, but admitted she sometimes reminesces about her days as an attorney in family law.

She praised Carter's recent appointment of Lynda Bird Robb to chair the President's Advisory Committee for Women, saying that Mrs. Robb represents the significance of women who choose the role of wives and mothers.

"It's important that we begin to reaffirm the role of wife and mother," Miss Weddington said, adding that for too long only the women who worked outside the home have been recognized.

Although lawsuits are pending regarding the validity of extending the ratification deadline of the Equal Rights Amendment, Miss Weddington said she believes the extension will be ruled legal and that ERA isn't a dead issue.

"I think there is much misunderstanding of what it would do," she said of those who oppose the amendment.

While Carter has taken no position on women's groups which boycott conventions in unratified states, Miss Weddington said he is planning to sponsor a seminar at the White House this fall to discuss ERA with legislators from states which have not ratified the amendment.

Frank Elliot, dean of the school of law, allowed attorneys with sons and daughters in the class the honor of hooding the graduates.

THE REAL MOMMA — Mell Lazarus kisses his mother, Frances, 80, as they hold a picture of the cartoon character Lazarus patterned after her. (AP Laserphoto)

Real Life Subject Of Son's Cartoon Series Likes Role

WOODLAND HILLS, Calif. (AP) — Not every mother gets a laugh from thousands of strangers every day. But then, not every mother would call her 52-year-old son to remind him of her telephone number when he fails to call in two days.

Frances Lazarus actually made that call, and because of it she became the model for the 10-year-old syndicated comic strip "Momma" drawn by her son Mell.

"I love it. I think it's funny enough to make anyone laugh," says Mrs. Lazarus. But she doesn't really think the character is like her.

When she admitted in an interview that "every mother has some of the same characteristics" as "Momma," her son said that was quite an admission. "You used to say it was Aunt Helen," he said.

About 14 years ago, Lazarus said, he got a strange call. "The voice sounded familiar. She said, 'Mr. Lazarus? This is Frances Lazarus. I'm calling to tell you my phone number is still 505-7770.' Then she hung up."

"I realized this was material for a comic strip," he said. But he didn't get around to starting it for four years. He was already busy with the "Miss Peach" comic about children in a school.

Over the years, "Momma" has changed, said Lazarus. She's shorter. "At first she started out about half the height of her children. Now she's up to their kneecaps." He said he drew "Momma" short because she was so dynamic. "I needed something to mitigate it. Also, I thought it was kind of interesting to have this tiny, little woman dominating these big kids."

Unlike the "Momma" character, Mrs. Lazarus said she gets along very well with her daughters-in-law and she never tried to make her daughter, Esther, marry a doctor.

Lazarus said he wasn't afraid to show "Momma" to his mother. "I didn't think she'd be offended, and besides, my mother has a terrific sense of humor."

Mrs. Lazarus, born in Chernigov, Russsia, near the Polish border, raised her children in Brooklyn. Her husband, a glassblower, died in 1956, and she had to work when her children were teenagers. She moved to California 16 months ago and lives within a mile of both her sons. Her daughter died last October.

She asked Mell if his character, "Momma," will ever get married and he replied: "When you get married, she'll get married. I don't think 'Momma' will get married because she wants to be able to devote her time to taking care of her kids."

Ration Defeat Sets Stage For Next Move

WASHINGTON (AP) — Lack of a sense of urgency, parochial voting, too many last-minute changes and a strange, politically motivated 1975 law combined to kill President Carter's standby gasoline rationing plan in Congress.

That seemed to be the consensus of congressional and administration energy strategists Saturday as they performed a post-mortem on the rejected plan and tried to figure out ways to build support for another.

Even though Carter said Friday he would not submit another plan and challenged Congress to wrte its own within 90 days, top administration energy officials were meeting this weekend on the possbility of a new proposa.

New Plan Urged

Senate Majority Leader Robert C. Byrd, D-W.Va., disclosed Saturday he had phoned the president to urge him "not to close the door" on the possibilty of submitting a new rationing plan. The president, Byrd said, seemed "very receptive."

The administration is also considering a national odd-even form of rationing like that in California. But this would be to ease gasoline lines this summer, not for a major oil supply disruption.

The kind of new rationing plan the administration might support "at this point is still very uncertain, very formless," an administration official said Saturday.

However, the official, who asked not to be identified, said, "for a practical matter, international realities require that we have a plan."

Alternative Explored

Another possibility being explored on Capitol Hill is a bill by Sens. J. Bennett Johnston, D-La., and Pete V. Domenici, R-N.M., already progressing through Congress. It had been largely overlooked until now.

The bill, which gives the president rationing powers under certain circumstances, has already been approved by the Senate Energy Committee and is backed by chairman Henry M. Jackson, D-Wash. Floor action is possible sometime this week.

The measure would have the president set gasoline-saving goals for each state during national energy emergencies.

States would have to respond with their own plans to meet these goals. If they failed to produce plans acceptable to the federal government, the president could step in and put in place a variety of gasoline-saving steps — including rationing.

Good Chance Seen

Senate sources say the measure has a good chance of winning Senate approval and may be the vehicle that chamber selects to meet the president's challenge to write a new plan.

A new rationing bill from the White House could avoid one of the major pitfalls that caught the president's standby plan last week.

That plan was sen to Congress under a unique 1975 law requiring the president to submit a standby rationing plan and giving Congress two separate cracks at it during which no amendments were permitted.

"The 1975 law was written by a Democrat Congress to trap (President) Jerry Ford," said a White House aide who asked not to be identified. "They wanted him to send up a rationing plan they could easly shoot down."

Carter Fell In Trap

But Carter fell into the trap set for Ford.

Rep. Richard Bolling, D-Mo., chairman of the House Rules Committee, agreed, saying the 1975 law was written "if not with malice, with an excessive desire to protect the Congress from the president."

But, having complied with that law, Carter could now send up a regular bill containing a rationing plan — one that could follow the normal course through Congress.

A White House lobbyist said that, in looking back, so much effort went into winning Senate support that there wasn't time enough to sell the final version of the plan to the House.

And since no amendments were permitted, the president had to modify his own plan twice to get it passed the Senate. That gave the impression the president couldn't make up his mind, said the lobbyist, who asked not to be quoted by name.

Plus, while the changes favoring large rural states eased the plan through the Senate, they backfired, costing Carter needed urban votes in the House.

"The more we gave in one area the more we had to take from everybody else," the lobbyist said.

Rep. John Dingell, D-Mich., explained it thus: "It was like balancing peas on a knife. Every time you'd put another one on, another one would fall off."

But White House and House leaders said that, while they knew they had big troubles in the House, they didn't realize that defeat would be by so wide a margin.

Head counts up to minutes before the vote showed a much closer outcome, House aides said.

The fact that the plan was not to be used now and that there was no grave national emergency demanding rationing led to a last-minute avalanche of votes against the plan and caused members to vote based on parochial interests, House leaders now theorize.

The plan, killed by the House 246-159 after being approved by the Senate 58-39, would have given Carter power to order gasoline rationing in times of severe energy shortages.

Originally, the president wanted to allocate rationing coupons based just on the number of registered vehicles in a household, but he modified his plan in an bid to win votes.

Under the final plan, gasoline still would have been allocated based on the number of registered vehicles but coupons issued per vehicle would have depended on the past statewide average for gasoline use.

Average per-vehicle gasoline consumption among states ranges from 38 gallons a month to 67 gallons a month, with the average at about 64 gallons a month.

Montford Getting Jury Backing

35-year sentence for a home burglary in which no weapon was used probably would be released after seven years.

Another little-known facet of the Texas parole system is that 99-year or life sentences are the same as 60 year-sentences. No state prison inmate has to serve more than 20 years to become eligible for parole.

Montford thinks the policy on aggravated robbery sentence recommendations has been at least partially responsible for reducing the rate of aggravated robberies in Lubbock since it was announced in late January.

"Except for guys from out of town who don't get the word, there has been a substantial reduction in business robberies," he said.

While there were 20 store holdups in the first 25 days of his administration, Montford said, there have been only seven in the 3 1/2 months since the policy was announced.

The recommendations policy on burglaries of habitations and aggravated rape was announced two weeks ago.

"It's too early to tell on burglaries," he said, noting that almost 40 percent of the burglaries last year in Lubbock County were committed by juveniles or persons under 17.

Aggravated robbery is a crime that usually is planned, he said, and therefore more easily subject to reduction by an announced policy.

He said burglaries might be harder to decrease because many burglars are drug addicts who will do almost anything to support their habits.

"We have a long way to go," he said. "I guess the homicides are the most frustrating. They're so impulsive, there's not a whole lot you can do."

Montford added that a number of 18- to 21-year-old persons have been chosen as jurors since January and "have been good jurors.

"We've given 18-year-olds the right to vote," he said. "They've got to accept the responsibilities that the law imposes, and I think that by and large the majority of our young people do."

Mortgage Loans Still Available, Says Investments Firm Officer

Although mortgage loans reportedly are harder to come by these days, one local investment firm reports that its volume of loans has not decreased from the level set last year.

West Central Investment Corp., 7806 Indiana Ave., reports there is financing available for home purchases in Lubbock through FHA and VA insured loans.

Linda Hutchins, vice president of the firm, says the volume of money being loaned by West Central Investment is comparable to the same period of last year. However, 100 percent of the loans being made by the company are under the FHA and VA insured programs.

No conventional loans are available from the firm, and future availability is largely tied to the outcome of pending state legislation, which proposes to raise the usury ceiling above its present statutory limit of 10 percent.

The proposal has been passed by the House of Representatives, and is now before the Senate, where it reportedly faces opposition. If the measure should be passed, and subsequently signed into state law by Gov. Bill Clements, there would still be a waiting period of 90 days before higher interest rates could be charged.

Higher rates are expected to renew the availability of conventional loans, which apparently have dried up in Lubbock.

West Central Investment wrote $2.25 million in loans during March, indicating that loan money is available at least through the FHA and VA programs.

A spokesman for the company said, however, that interest rates in Lubbock now are 10 percent, and points varying from 5 to 6 percent of the loan amount are being charged the seller.

Commenting on fears that FHA and VA had cut off funds for loans to Texas buyers, the West Central vice president pointed out that FHA and VA do not actually loan money, but only insure loans handled by financial institutions. The term "FHA loan" is a misnomer, she said.

West Central Investment is owned by stockholders of Lubbock National Bank.

Initiative Plan Draws Debate

icemen warrants to search news media offices for "mere evidence" of crimes. Search warrants would be permitted if police were looking for the "fruits of the crime" or items used in committing a crime.

— Create a State Pension Review Board to analyze state and municipal pension systems and make recommendations for keeping them sound.

The House tentatively approved, 82-29, a bill making legal the State Insurance Board's long-standing method for computing insurance companies' gross premiums taxes.

The 3rd Court of Civil Appeals in Austin recently ruled the method does not conform to state law.

Rep. Bob Davis, R-Irving, said if the bill does not pass, the state would lose $25 million a year in revenue.

Lubbock Consumers Not Backing Off Borrowing Binge Despite Inflation

ion. "They're not worrying about what they're buying today. Maybe they're afraid things will be too high later.

"They don't even bat an eye" over borrowing, say, $10,000 for a new car, she added.

Fred Jewett of the City of Lubbock Employees' Federal Credit Union agrees, and predicts a day of reckoning and perhaps regret.

"I think it's going to hit us the latter part of the year," he said. "People are buying more because they think it will be cheaper to buy now than later. But they are not thinking about if inflation keeps going up.

"If necessities increase, then they're going to get in trouble," Jewett warned. "As normal living costs increase, there's less left to pay on the consumer debt."

Jewett added, "Savings are increasing also, but not as fast as loans are increasing proportionately."

If the money market tightens further, the temptation to borrow may be scotched for consumers. Money may not be readily available.

The A-J survey shows money still is to be had generally, but many institutions are limiting the types of loans they will — or can — make.

For example, the Lubbock Federal Employees' Credit Union no longer lends money for car purchases.

Marjorie Burch, treasurer of the institution, explained such loans have not been made since the first of the year because "they take too much money."

And the credit union believes it "needs to save it or keep it for emergencies," she added.

She said the union hopes to open the service "within a couple of months," when the money market may ease and when the National Credit Union Administration will open a Central Liquidity Facility to make loans to certain lending institutions.

First Federal Savings and Loan also has discontinued some types of loans and tightened general guidelines.

Garrett, a spokesman for the institution, explained the lending area has been reduced to Lubbock and Terry counties and that "some types of loans that we feel like are for non-essentials" have been cut out.

For example, the association no longer is financing swimming pools, nor improvements on rental property, Garrett said.

Mrs. Gollihugh of Hub Credit Union said that institution occasionally has had to limit new car loans. "We do have a hard time keeping money available," she said, adding the loans have been held up usually only a couple of weeks.

A.L. Mangum of First Texas Savings Association said that institution's policies have not changed, but Paul Bowie of the Lubbock Teachers Federal Credit Union said he is "limiting approval to those people who are not already 'way over their heads."

Bowie also noted the teachers credit union "a couple of times" has run out of money and has had to wait several days for funds. He said the union is "not borrowing in the market because the cost of borrowing is more than we charge (on interest)."

Other institutions, notably credit unions, acknowledged they have had to borrow money, usually at 11 1/2 percent. This, their spokesmen said, makes it difficult sometimes to lend money.

It also means high interest rates for borrowers, and most of the institutions polled have their rates as high as possible by law.

That is 12 percent annually, the maximum allowed for credit unions, and about 8 percent add-on (about 14.5 percent annual percentage rate) for other lending institutions.

Some of the credit unions still charge only 9 percent for share loans. As Mrs. Burch of the Federal Employees' Credit Union explained it, "It's because people are putting their own money up for collateral."

And, she added, if there were not a lower interest rates, "They'll withdraw their money and go elsewhere."

The largest increase in interest rates appears to have come since the first of the year.

Mrs. Gollihugh noted that at this time last year the interest rate at Hub Federal Credit Union for a new car was 9 percent. It now is 11.75 percent.

Jewett of the City of Lubbock credit union said that institution has had the high interest rates for some time and has "plenty of funds for loans."

At the other end of the spectrum are those lending institutions borrowing from others. And in between are those struggling to keep a ready cash flow.

And few are guessing what the money market and lending scene will be like in a few months.

No Sign Of Survivors Found On Drilling Rig

GALVESTON (AP) — Diving teams reached the wreckage of a sunken drilling rig Saturday but found no sign of eight men missing and feared trapped when the 13-ton platform collapsed with 34 workers aboard.

The divers — working with only three feet visibility and hampered by debris which snagged their air hoses — entered the wreckage late Saturday morning, and continued their efforts all day.

"We're going to work around the clock until we exhaust all evidence that someone might or might not be alive," a spokesman said.

The rescue effort was on the bottom of the Gulf of Mexico, 57 feet below the surface, 12 miles south of Galveston.

"We have gained entrance to the state room under the heli-pad and made a number of searches, but found nothing," said Steve Utthoff, vice president of Schaefer Diving Co. of Freeport.

The divers by the end of the day were expected to get into the various airtight compartments on the platform. It was in some of the compartments that officials feared bodies would be discovered.

The Ranger I rig collapsed Thursday night about 12 miles off Galveston and had been partially submerged until Friday night, when a storm caused the platform to sink.

"It's looking pretty grim," Coast Guard Lt. Gabe Kinney said of fading hopes to find survivors.

"These air pockets wouldn't sustain life for 40 hours," said Coast Guard spokesman Tommy Clemmons. "It doesn't look real good."

Coast Guard officials said the top of the rig was 29 feet below the surface and it was possible that the lower end rested on the Gulf's bottom.

Thirty-four men were on board the rig when it collapsed. Private boats and Coast Guard ships and helicopters pulled 26 to safety, and only four of those were seriously hurt. One of the four lost his arm.

Paul Fromberg, 28, was aboard the rig when it gave way. "I didn't hear any crash," he said. "There was a sensation of dropping. I was in the galley when it suddenly dropped and we were up in the air with the furniture flying."

The 13 civilian divers, using extra-long air hoses, made their first probe of the wreckage Saturday morning after storms subsided enough to allow them to work.

Kennedy Raps Energy Policy

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Edward Kennedy renewed his attack on the Carter administration's energy policy Saturday, accusing the president of resorting to "desperate measures" to deal with dwindling energy supplies.

Kennedy, D-Mass., said Carter's plan to decontrol oil prices would unduly burden poor and middle-income Americans, forcing them to pay up to one-third of their wages for energy. And he said Carter's proposed windfall profits tax was too lenient on major oil corporations.

In remarks to the graduating class at Howard University, Kennedy said: "We need not fear the actions of the OPEC (Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries). We need not fear the greed of the major oil companies. We need not resort to desperate measures like decontrol, or fight the dubious battle for a dubious windfall profits tax."

Double Accident Kills Two

CHESHIRE, Conn. (AP) — A chartered Continental Trailways bus carrying vacationers home from an ocean cruise spun off Interstate 84 in an attempt to avoid a crashed tractor truck Saturday. Two persons died in the two accidents, state police said.

Officials said at least 44 persons were injured and taken to two Waterbury hospitals. At least four were reported in serious condition.

A woman who saw the accident said it looked like people were being "shot from a cannon," as passengers were thrown through bus windows by the force of the bus accident.

"The driver hit the brakes and started sliding. He hit the guardrail. Six or eight people were thrown through the front windshield. It looked awful," said a bus passenger, who also asked not to be identified.

The bus crashed shortly before 2 p.m., moments after the truck cab — which was not hauling a trailer — had spun out of control, rolled several times and landed across both eastbound lanes of the highway.

The bus, traveling in the left lane with a flatbed trailer truck beside t in the right lane, approached the overturned truck from a curve and ws not able to swing around it, police said.

The flatbed truck drove around to the right, but the bus braked, smashed into a guardrail, spun around and ran off the wet roadway onto a grassy median strip, coming to rest about 300 yards west of the overturned truck.

Police said it was uncertain whether the bus and flatbed truck bumped slightly as they approached the overturned truck cab.

A passenger in the truck cab and a person aboard the bus were killed, officers said. Police earlier said two bus travelers had died.

Some passengers were temporarily trapped in the bus, police said. Witnesses said several were thrown through windows.

Jackson Fenstermaker, transportation supervisor of Continental Trailways in Boston, said the bus was en route from New York to Everett, Mass., just outside Boston, with a stop planned in Hartford, 20 miles northeast of Cheshire. He said 46 passengers were booked for the bus. The group had left May 5 for a cruise aboard the S.S. Oceanic out of New York, Fenstermaker said.

Police said they did not know what caused the tractor truck to crash. They said the driver had braked, possibly to avoid some trouble ahead, and went out of control.

Byrd Asks New Plan By Carter

WASHINGTON (AP) — Senate Majority Leader Robert C. Byrd urged President Carter on Saturday "not o close the door" on submitting a new standby gasoline rationing plan despite the resounding defeat of his first proposal.

"We ought to try to pick up the pieces now and try to find a solution to this problem that is not going to go away," the West Virginia Democrat told a news conference. "I would hope that President Carter would act as a catalyst."

On Friday, the president angrily accused the House of "political timidity" in rejecting his gasoline rationing plan and challenged Congress to come up with its own plan within 90 days. The Senate had passed the president's plan earlier.

Carter "Receptive"

Byrd said he talked with Carter by telephone Friday night and that the president seemed "very receptive" to suggestions that he continue to play a key role in winning approval of a rationing plan.

Byrd said the president should call a meeting of congressional leaders of both parties within the next few days to work out a "good solid, middle position" on the rationing issue.

"There will never be a plan that is 100 percent equitable, 100 percent fair and 100 percent acceptable to everybody," Byrd said. But he added: "Reasonable men can sit down and find a consensus approach."

The majority leader said enactment of a standby gasoline rationing plan was essential to national security and an "insurance policy against chaos."

In Extreme Shortage

Administration officials have said that rationing would be used only in an extreme gasoline shortage.

On another topic, Byrd criticized the president's claim that Senate defeat of the U.S.-Soviet strategic arms limitation treaty would make the United States look like a "warmonger" in the eyes of the world.

"That's an argument that has no credibility," Byrd remarked. "I don't think that argument is going to win any votes for the treaty."

Byrd, who has yet to announce whether he will support the arms control treaty, said the key questions in his mind are whether the treaty improves U.S. security and whether its terms can be adequately verified.

He also said he strongly supports the MX mobile missile, which the Pentagon says is needed to replace its older Minuteman missiles. Unlike the Minuteman, the MX can be moved to different firing sites and thus would be less vulnerable to Soviet attack.

Byrd added that congressional rejection of the MX missile would have "an adverse impact" on SALT.

Texas Tech Museum To Give Guided Tours Of Inner Workings

By RHONA SCHWARTZ
Avalanche-Journal Staff

Art and history enthusiasts will have a special treat in store May 18 when Texas Tech University's Museum unlocks the basement doors for specially guided tours of the inner workings of the museum.

As part of International Museum Day, tours will be led from 6 to 9 p.m. to give Lubbock area residents an opportunity to "see what we can do and how an exhibit is put together," museum director Dr. Leslie C. Drew said.

It is in the basement laboratories and work areas that exhibits are planned and executed, he said, adding that most people do not realize all that a museum does and can do.

After meeting in the main foyer, staff members will take groups of 20 to 25 persons east past the museum's shop, pointing out the planetarium, courtyard and assembly room, where children's groups meet for their school tours.

The groups then will make their way downstairs for a peek at the classrooms, where museum science students are trained, and over to the student library which "serves as a support function for the staff, volunteers and docents," Drew said.

Through brown double doors, visitors will see the conservation room, a laboratory in which staff members preserve artifacts, such as those in the extensive basket collection.

Across the hall is a storage area for paintings, some of which aren't on display in the galleries. "We want the people to know how rich and how poor we are," Drew explained.

"We will walk them (the groups) into the photo lab," he said, "to show them the museum has one.

"We have silkscreening capabilities, another function of the museum which people wouldn't think about," he said.

Around the corner is the carpenter shop, where viewers can see work in production and question the carpenters as to how they prepare exhibits.

"If we show people how these things are done, it might generate appreciation for the staff and their expertise," he said.

Next on the tour is a view in the archeological storage room, where the immense collection of pre-historic stone artifacts are kept, and the ethnology room, where displays from historic and existing tribes are kept.

"We will talk about the need for conservation, interpretation and registration," Drew said, pointing to the collections of pottery and brass objects.

In the room of historic furnishings, also a work area, displays of glassware, decorative boxes and saddles are in view. Workers in this area handle the objects with white gloves to keep from soiling and destroying them.

Next, in the room of historic clothing and textiles, visitors probably will be awed by the beautiful collections of antique dolls, clothing and shoes.

"Nobody can look at a pair of children's shoes without being moved," Drew said, pointing to a tiny pair of faded rose-colored shoes with long, matching laces.

Also in the room are collections of clothing, hung according to years, a collection of large and small spinning wheels and hat boxes which line shelves close to the ceiling.

The tours will take approximately 30 to 40 minutes, Drew said, adding that the staff will answer any questions along the way.

Afterwards, the groups will adjorn to the foyer for refreshments. The upstairs gallery also will be open to visitors where the Currier and Ives exhibit will be displayed.

"If we can show people what we do, how an exhibit is put together using the expertise of the curator, the exhibits people and the education people, we will show a museum that is a well-rounded, interrelated operation," Drew said.

Water Import Bill Delayed By Solons

By BILL KIDD
A-J Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — The House has postponed until Monday consideration of legislation to create a water import authority for the 46 counties overlying the Ogallala Aquifer.

HB 2205 by Rep. Bob Simpson of Amarillo, was taken up by the House Saturday afternoon, after members spent more than five hours in passing largely non-controversial matters and considering — and postponing — a proposed constitutional amendment on initiative and referendum.

Rep. Smith Gilley, Greenville, said he wasn't attempting to kill the bill, but felt other members should be present for the discussion.

Rep. Gary Benedict of Angleton said he would favor an amendment to restrict the eminent domain powers of the proposed authority to import water from within 250 miles.

Simpson said he has an amendment, drafted at the suggestion of Sierra Club attorney Stuart Henry to restrict the eminent domain powers of the authority within its area without approval of the Water Development Board.

Simpson told the House the Ogallala area is looking to water from Arkansas via Oklahoma as an import source.

Rep. Bob Bush of Sherman said he was aware of and sympathetic to the areas need for water, but felt the bill "puts the cart before the horse." He added he thought it would be better for Simpson to come to the House with a plan for bringing water so that lawmakers could determine what specific powers the proposed authority might need.

Voters To Decide Bond Issue

HOBBS (Special) — Voters here will decide a $6 million school bond issue and will determine whether to approve a two-mill levy to raise additional school funds in Tuesday's election.

The current school tax rate is $11.59 per $1,000 of assessed property valuation. But, if voters okay the bond issue and the two-mill levy, an additional $5.80 per $1,000 valuation school tax would be collected each year for the next seven years. The present school tax rate would jump from $11.59 to $17.39 per $1,000 valuation.

Although school officials say they do not like to think of one question passing and the other failing, they say that if voters okay only the bond, the current school tax rate would be hiked by about $4.50 per $1,000 valuation. And, if only the two-mill levy is passed, an additional $2 would be imposed on the current tax rate.

If voters okay the $6 million bond, funds would be used for building a new elementary school, constructing new additions to certain schools and for remodeling in all the schools. And, if they also approve the two-mill levy, the school system would impose a property tax of $2 per $1,000 valuation for 1979, 1980 and 1981 with funds to go for remodeling and towards purchasing instructional and maintenance equipment at all the schools.

If voters choose to pass the two-mill levy, the school district will be guaranteed $70 per student by the state. With the levy, the district will receive $1 from the state for every $3 that the district can raise. School officials say that the levy could bring about $500,000 a year to the system for the next three years.

"We would like to see both issues pass, so that we can meet the building needs of our students," said Supt. Ellis B. Scott.

Scott said the school system especially needed the new elementary school, which would be built on the north side of the city.

"All nine of our elementary schools are full," the superintendent said. "In fact, we have some classes which are meeting in hallways."

School officials are projecting a 400 student increase at the elementary level in about two years. "We'll be considerably overcrowded without the new elementary school which could handle those 400 students," Scott said.

The bond also will fund the construction of a vocational agriculture facility and four new classrooms at Hobbs High School; the addition of food service areas to the three junior high schools; the building of multi-purpose rooms at Sanger Elementary and Jefferson Elementary; and remodeling of buildings throughout the school system.

Approximately $1.02 million collected from the two-mill levy will be used for new roofing and insulation at many of the schools, with the rest of the money, about $80,000, going for instructional and maintenance equipment at all the schools.

The monetary breakdown on how the six million dollar bond will be spent throughout the system follows:

- $2,139,563, new elementary school;
- $27,065, Broadmoor Elementary;
- $8,199, Coronado Elementary;
- $27,435, Edison Elementary;
- $305,690, Jefferson Elementary;
- $17,037, Mills Elementary;
- $341,431, Sanger Elementary;
- $66,032, Southern Heights Elementary;
- $44,730, Taylor Elementary;
- $91,151, Washington Center;
- $9,944, Will Rogers Elementary;
- $405,301, Heizer Junior High;
- $365,082, Highland Junior High;
- $882,623, Houston Junior High;
- $888,713, Hobbs High School;
- and $380,000 for architect and engineering fees.

If voters approve the issues, Scott said that new construction and renovations would begin by late summer and added that the new elementary school would probably be completed by the fall of 1981.

The superintendent also said that renovations to the schools would include making all facilities accessible to the handicapped.

School officials reported that only 16 votes had been cast in absentee balloting and predicted that only a few thousand voters would turn out at the polls Tuesday. Voting is scheduled from 8 a.m. to 7 p.m. at the places where voters normally cast ballots in school board elections.

Perry Wins Second High Jump Medal

By JIM FERGUSON
Avalanche-Journal Sports Staff

AUSTIN — Chuck Perry looked as if he'd been slipped an unexpected wet willie.

A strange expression for someone who'd just won the Class AAAA high jump title for the second consecutive year? Not a bit, said the Monterey High School senior.

"My goal when I came here (the state track and field meet) wasn't really to win it," pointed out Perry. "What I wanted to do was improve on what I did last year.

"I didn't do that."

Perry captured the crown in '78 as a junior with a leap of 7-0. But on this hot Saturday afternoon in Memorial Stadium, he leaped ONLY 6-11. He later tried at 7-1, but all three attempts unsuccessful. Close, but still not enough.

(State Meet Summaries, Page 6, Sec. B)

"I really thought I could go 7-2," commented the high jumper. "I'd really had a great week of practice. I just missed 7-3 in practice. That's not too bad considering the kind of wheather we had, too."

Perry was the only jumper able to clear the 6-11 bar. And he did that on his first attempt, rather easily. Joe Konicki of Spring Klein was the surprising second-place finisher, while Ricky Thompson of Houston Jones was third — both schoolboys at 6-10.

Passing until the bar reached 6-8, Perry missed badly on his first attempt. But he came back moments later to clear the hight with ease. Then at 6-9, he hurled himself over the bar with room to spare. At 6-10, he dragged his foot over the bar on his first jump, but cleared on his second.

"That's been my problem all year," commented Perry. "I haven't been able to get my kick right. I've been hitting the bar with my feet."

Perry, who hasn't cleared 7 feet since last year's state meet, elected to move the bar to 7-1 after winning the competition. The height would have been a new state mark. On his first and third attempts it appeared things were going to click, but. . .not this time.

"I'm going to a meet in Fort Worth next week," said Perry. "Maybe I'll get it (7-0) then."

One young man who didn't go home disappointed Saturday was Michael Carter of Dallas Jefferson. The 6-3, 250-pounder who won the Class AAAA discus on Friday afternoon, pulled off a double by taking the shot put, in record fashion.

Carter, the finest high school weightman ever to come out of Texas, tossed the shot 75-9 on his first shot, breaking the national schoolboy record held by his personal coach, Sam Walker of Dallas.

Thousands of spectators lined the shot put area in hopes that Carter, who'd thrown the shot 77-0 at a meet in Abilene, would hit the 80-foot mark. But he never really came close.

"It (the shot put) kept slipping in my hand," said the SMU-bound gridder. "I don't know if 80 feet is out of reach, but I'll keep trying. The crowd was a help but I just couldn't do it."

The toss also broke his own AAAA record of 71-1¾ set last year. In all, Carter had throws of 75-9, 72-11, 73-8½, 75½, and 75-5½. He scratched on his final toss.

Tech football recruit Jeff McCowan of Midland Lee was a distant second with 62-¾. And the Rebels' mile relay ran second in a speedy 3:14.9 to Waltrip's 3:14.1.

Monterey halfmiler Curtis Conaway, who came into the meet with one of the top times in the state, finished sixth in the 800-meter dash.

Jerry Fuqua of Conroe fell at the tape to nip Houston Waltrip's Lynn Howe in a speedy 1:51.1. Waltrip was timed in 1:51.2.

Conaway ran 1:54.0.

In the team competition, Killeen won easily in the AAAA competition with 52 points. Snook won the B title with 58 points and Timpson the A championship with 40.

Al Gonzales of Roby turned in the best individual performance of the day, winning the Class B 100-yard dash, and the 400-meter dash. He also placed second in the 200-meter dash.

In all, the 5-5 sprinter placed fourth as a team with 28 points.

Meadow's Milton Sanchez brought home a gold medal, as he won the Class B mile in a time of 4:34.1, winning with room to spare over Joe Canales of Austwell-Tivoli.

Charleson Steinbock had one of the better days for South Plains athletes entered. The Lazbuddie senior placed second in the pole vault and sixth in the long jump.

Teammate Russell Windham had a third-place finish in the long jump.

Hereford's Paul Bell came in fourth in 21.3 in the Class AAAA 200-meter dash, an event won by Sherman's Kenneth Jackson in a record-setting 20.7.

Texas Claims Crown

AUSTIN — Rich Edwards had made no secret about how bad he wanted to beat Curtis Dickey in the finals of the 100-meter dash at the Southwest Conference track championships.

So he certainly didn't keep it to himself when he did.

Leading Dickey by a couple of steps and fastly approaching the finish line, Edwards raised his arms into the air and signaled to the crowd of 5,000 who the best sprinter in the SWC is — for now.

"It probably cost me some time," said the University of Houston sprinter. "I won't do it again. I was just so happy to win."

After his qualifying heat Friday night, Edwards had said if he could beat Curtis then "I can make a name for myself. I want to beat him because he's (Dickey) the sprinter who gets all the publicity."

Edwards captured the 100 in a time of 10.18, while Dickey was back at 10.26.

Not noted for a fast start, Edwards fell a couple of steps behind Dickey out of the blocks. But after the 30-yard marker, it was Edwards all the way.

"I had him about a half a step out of the blocks," recalled Dickey. "I didn't get a good start. I thought I was making up on him at the end but I ran out of room. But you can't take it away from him. He's a good athlete and he ran a good race."

Edwards came back capture the 200 meter dash for a double. But, according to the UH sprinter, the victory was not nearly as satisfying as beating Dickey.

Doc King of Rice in the first SWC performer since 1972 to win three consecutive individual career titles when he captured the 100-meter high hurdle in the time of 13.74.

Texas, however, which had qualified 13 individuals for the running event finals, took the team title over defending Texas A&M. The Longhorns scored 106 points while the Aggie had 96. They were followed by Houston 85½, Rice 55, Baylor 44½, Arkansas 34, SMU 31, TCU 29, and Tech 11.

Dickey and Edwards will go head-to-head again next week at a Tri-Conference meet in Memorial Stadium. And, according to Dickey, things will be different. "I think I can beat him then," said the defending 60-yard indoor national champion.

But Edwards doesn't see it that way. Oh no.

"I put pressure on him when I ran

Spurs Shoot For Eastern NBA Victory

LANDOVER, Md. (AP) — No team in the past decade has been able to repeat as National Basketball Association champion, and the Washington Bullets are precariously close to keeping that tradition alive.

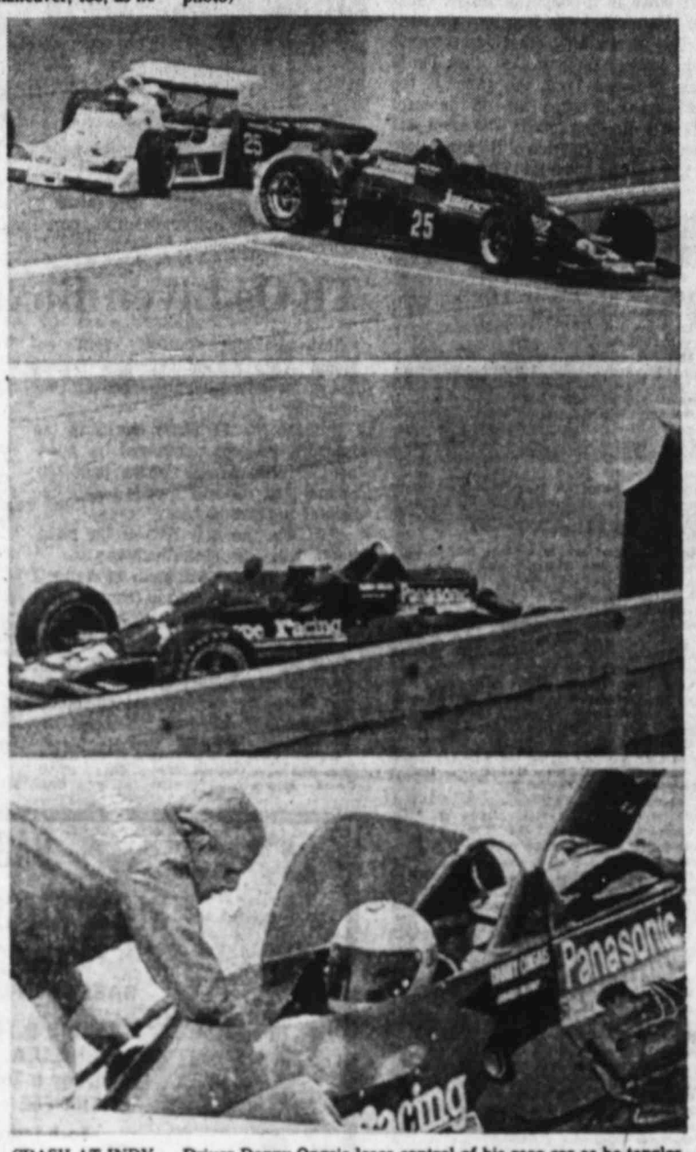
The Bullets, shellshocked by George Gervin's 42-point fusillade Friday that gave San Antonio a 3-1 lead in the best-of-seven Eastern Conference final, must beat the Spurs today or else be dethroned.

"This team isn't beat until you beat them four," cautioned Spurs Coach Doug Moe, hopeful of letting a sleeping dog lie. "I'm excited as anything, but I know we only won three. I feel very confident but I'm not overconfident. I know what can happen.

"It's not over by a long shot. We were up 3-1 with Philly with two games at home and we had to go to the seventh game, so we understand where we are."

Cautious words notwithstanding, the freewheeling Spurs are on the verge of knocking off the defending NBA champions and the team picked by most experts to win the playoffs again.

San Antonio won the series opener here, lost the second game but then built a 3-1 lead by winning both games in Texas.



CRASH AT INDY — Driver Danny Ongais loses control of his race car as he tangles with a car driven by rookie Billy Englehart, then crashes into the inside wall of turn 4 at Indianapolis Saturday. A fireman rushed to Ongais' aide, but the driver was trapped in the car 22 minutes before he could be removed to a hospital. (AP Laserphoto)

Ongais Injured; 500 Qualifying Trials Stopped

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Danny Ongais, trapped in his race car more than 20 minutes, was hospitalized with a mild concussion and whiplash Saturday in a jarring crash that wiped out the first day of qualifications for the Indianapolis 500.

A steady rain delayed the scheduled start of qualifications most of the day. Then, after Ongais' crash, time trials were rescheduled for today, when dry weather, partly sunny skies and temperatures in the 60s were forecast.

Ongais' injuries were not believed serious, and a team spokesman said he was expected back at the Speedway early next week in his backup car.

After the rain let up Saturday, nearly 40 cars were able to begin practice in hopes that the qualifications could get under way in the final hour.

Ongais apparently lost control after going low to avoid the slower moving car of rookie Billy Engelhart.

"He ducked down onto the pit apron," said Engelhart, who was going about 181 mph when Ongais came up behind him.

"I thought he was going into the pits. I saw him spinning in the mirror, but I don't know what happened because it was behind me."

Ongais, who was clocked at 191.205 mph on the lap just before the crash, spun coming out of the fouth turn. His Parnelli-Cosworth slid backward about 550 feet, struck the inside wall, did another half-spin and slid another 150 feet into the wall again.

He slid about 100 feet along the wall before coming to rest just north of the pit entrance. There was no fire.

Ongais was trapped inside the cockpit until a Speedway rescue crew cut the chassis from around him, lifted him onto a stretcher and took him to the infield hospital.

He later was taken to the downtown Methodist Hospital, where all x-rays were negative. He was to be kept overnight for observation.

Ongais, 37, Costa Mesa, Calif., had been regarded as one of the favorites for the pole position for the May 27 race. He was one of seven drivers who topped 190 mph during the week-long practice, with his best lap at 193.133.

The former motorcycle and drag-racing champion was seeking his third start in the Indy 500. He tied for the second-fastest qualification speed of 200.122 mph and started in the middle of the front row last year and led the race for 71 laps, but he wound up 18th after engine trouble knocked him out after 145 laps.

The lengthy rain delay, coupled with Ongais' crash and the required half-hour of practice before any qualifications may be attempted, wiped out the entire session of time trials.

By the time the track closed at 5 p.m. CDT, 42 cars had made practice runs. Ongais' 191.205 was the fastest lap, followed by defending champion Al Unser at 191.164.

Last yer, the first two days of qualifications were rained out before Tom Sneva captured the pole position with a record four-lap average at 202.156 mph. Sneva finished second to Unser last year and to four-time champion A.J. Foyt in 1977.

A U.S. Auto Club restriction on manifold pressure cut speeds dramatically this year, and the top practice lap of the week was 194.890 by Foyt.

The lower engine "boost" was one of the key points in the dispute between USAC and the breakaway Championship Auto Racing Teams. Ongais, whose Interscope Racing team was aligned with CART, was not one of the drivers whose cars were originally rejected by USAC.

A three-day hearing in federal court resulted in the reinstatement of 19 CART entries, including the Chaparral driven by Al Unser and the cars piloted byformer Indy champs Bobby Unser, Johnny Rutherford and Gordon Johncock.

Watson Grabs Nelson Lead; Pate Falters

DALLAS (AP) — Defending champion Tom Watson, overcoming his own personal disaster, took advantage of Jerry Pate's four-putt collapse on the final green Saturday to take a one-shot lead after 54 holes of the wind-blown $300,000 Byron Nelson Golf Classic.

Watson notched a one-under-par 69 for a three-round total of 5-under-par 205 over Preston Trail Golf Club's par-70, unforgiving 6,993 yards.

Pate only had to two-putt from 40 feet on the 18th green for a 5-under-par 65, but ran his first putt three feet past the hole. His second putt dove quickly to the right, and he had a four-foot comebacker which he missed.

The shocked Pate had to settle for a 3-under-par 67 and a 54-hole total of 206.

Larry Nelson, who started the day as the leader, seven under, staggered to a 4-over-par 74 to finish at 207. Nelson called a shot on himself when his ball moved on the par-five 15th hole.

Pate, the former U.S. Open champion who hasn't won in a year, said: "I've never four-putted in a tournament before, but I three-putted on the last green to lose the PGA."

His second putt "jumped as soon as I hit it. I thought I had hit a good putt, and I thought I hit the next one good, too. I four-putted just as easy as that.

"Putting is the only thing that has kept me from winning on the tour. I've been putting poorly," Pate said.

Watching closely in the 18th fairway during Pate's ordeal was Watson, who was a shot behind him when the 54th hole began.

"I saw it. I watched every putt. I've done that myself several times on the tour," Watson said. "He just kept running the ball by. The pin was in a tough position. I had a 15-foot uphill putt on that green and left it short. I think Jerry scared me."

Another notable blowup belonged to Lanny Wadkins, who started the day six under par, but had a horrific eight on the devilish par-3 225-yard 11th hole.

Watkins hit his tee shot in some weeds, knocked his next shot in a bunker, then tried to explode out. The ball stayed in the bunker and rolled back and hit Wadkins for a two-stroke penalty. He got on the green in five and three-putted.

Winds gusting out of the north to 17 mph made the course play difficult, although there was sunshine after two days of torrential rains which caused three delays.

Watson, who had eight one-putts and holed a 100-foot chip for a birdie, said: "It is going to take an eight-under-par to win. But this course is really playing tough."

LCC Gains Finals Of District Tourney

By RUSS PARSONS
Avalanche-Journal Sports Staff

ARLINGTON — All year long, the Lubbock Christian College baseball team and its coach Larry Hays have been waiting for some magical spark that would take the disparate element — elements — and, like the Big Bang theory of the origin of the universe, zap them into some kind of cosmic oneness.

That catalyst was found Saturday as LCC downed Dallas Baptist College 7-2 to advance into the finals of the NAIA District VIII baseball tournament here today at 3 p.m.

Surprisingly, the key wasn't a big home run or a spectacular fielding gem. In fact, the player who performed it spent Saturday on the bench.

He was Noel Delgado and Friday, in the cold drizzle of the Chaparrals' first-round game here, he came to the mound with the score tied and quieted troublesome University of Dallas with barely a whimper.

"That's the key," said a happy Hays after Saturday's win. "That Delgado. He came in and struck out five and really shut down on them. He didn't give them a thing."

Today, LCC will meet the winner of the University of Dallas-DBC game, to be played at noon. For history buffs, the team from the consolation bracket has never won the district tourney. Further, in five of the last six years, LCC has been the winner.

Hays also pointed out the winner of Saturday's game, freshman Kevin Burke, as one of LCC's keys. Burke's performance wasn't much of a success artistically, but he got the big "W" anyway. He threw 7 1/3 innings, allowed nine hits and walked four.

But DBC, like University of Dallas before them, was extremely cooperative. The Indians stranded 13 base runners, including a stretch of two each over the last four innings.

Batting star for the Chaps was light-hitting centerfielder Brady Brashear. A .289 hitter over the regular season, Brashear collected a pair of singles and 2 RBIs Saturday to spur an LCC offense that scored 7 runs on eight hits — none of them extra base.

That put Brashear at 3-for-7 for the tourney with 3hRBIs. He also made a beautiful running grab of a strong shot to center field in the ninth inning that appeared to be past him. Digging for all he was worth, he caught the ball in the tip of the webbing, basket style ala Willie Mays.

Steve Brigante and Tommy Inman each scored a pair of runs and Leslie, Toney, Inman and rightfielder Dave Hanna collected solo RBIs.

In earlier action Saturday, LCC scored another run in the top of the ninth to

Sundberg's Homer Sinks Jays

By The Associated Press

Jim Sundberg's home run in the eighth inning powered the Texas Rangers to a 3-1 victory over the host Toronto Blue Jays Saturday.

Steve Comer, 3-3, got the victory while Dave Lemanczyk, 2-2, took the loss. Last month Lemanczyk registered a one-hit shutout over the Rangers, with Comer again the opposing pitcher.

Toronto took a 1-0 lead in the fourth inning when Roy Howell singled home Bob Bailor, but Texas tied the score in the sixth Buddy Bell's sacrifice fly.

Sundberg blasted Lemanczyk's second pitch over the left field fence for his second home run of the season to put the Rangers ahead to stay. Texas got an insurance run in the ninth on a triple by Al Oliver and a single by Pat Putnam.

Comer left the game after walking Rico Carty with two out in the eighth inning. Rex Kern walked slugger John Mayberry, then Sparky Lyle came on and struck out Howell, who had barely missed a home run one pitch earlier when hisdrive over the right field fence curved foul by inches.

It was Lyle's fifth save of the season.

The Boston Red Sox pounded out 16 hits, five of them by Jerry Remy, and beat the Oakland A's 8-2 Saturday behind the five-hit pitching of Mike Torrez.

Remy beat out his fifth bunt single of the season in the first inning, added three more singles and then lined a double in a four-run seventh inning. He scored one run, drove in two and stole a base.

The Boston second baseman became only the third American League player to get five hits in a game this year. The others were Brian Downing of California and Rich Bosetti of Toronto.

The Houston Astros and the Chicago Cubs split a doubleheader. Terry Puhl smacked a two-run double to cap Houston's six-run rally in the first inning, and Craig Reynolds drove in three runs with three hits as the Astros whipped the Cubs 11-3 in the opener.

In the nightcap, Ken Holtzman scattered six hits for his first complete game since 1976 to beat Houston 2-0. Holtzman also had three hits and scored a run.

Monterey Set For 'Harvest'

By BOB BAJACKSON
Avalanche-Journal Sports Staff

The Harvesters are about as hot an item in Pampa as cards are on the day before Mother's Day.

A couple of firsts are causing all the talk in the Panhandle town: A first-year coach guiding Pampa and its first ever District 3-AAAA championship.

So it will be the Harvesters against the Monterey Plainsmen in the bidistrict playoffs, which open Tuesday with a single game in Pampa at 4 p.m. The best-of-three-game series will move to Lubbock and Lowrey Field Friday for a doubleheader, if two games are necessary.

Monterey won its 18th district championship for coach Bobby Moegle eight days ago. The thinking, however, that qualified the two teams for post season play is just about as far apart as Monterey's advantage in playoff action.

Although he feels there is quality hitting, Steve Scott believes that pitching was the dominant factor in getting Pampa this far.

"We were one of the best hitting teams in our district," said the Pampa coach. "We have five or six hitters, but in all honesty our pitching has probably carried us a little more."

Meanwhile, Monterey has been coming up with the key hits all season.

"The characteristic of our team is average pitching with good hitting," commented Moegle. "We don't have the pitcher that can overpower you. So, we've had to rely on our pitchers just being able to throw strikes."

Defensively, "The biggest problem we've had is with our outfield," said Scott. "When we've made mistakes it's been because our outfielders have bobbled hard grounders or liners allowing runners to move up."

The Plainsmen, on the other hand, have played solid defense in the outfield. Though the Plainsmen infield has been solid most of the time, when errors are posted on Monterey's side of the scoreboard, they have been because of some infield miscue.

"Anytime, the ball is hit on the ground, it gives an infielder two chanes to make a mistake," said Moegle. "He has to field it and throw it causing a lot of room for error."

According to Scott, don't expect to see the Harvesters trying to bunt runners into scoring situations.

"I don't believe in sacrificing an out," said the first-year Pampa coach. "I'd rather have the other team try and put us out. We like to move the runners along by stealing second and sometimes third and with the hit and run."

But since Moegle feels the Plainsmen don't possess a lot of speed, doesn't give the steal sign too often.

"We've never been overly blessed with speed," said the Plainsmen mentor. "But we do like to make things happen."

Thus, it is not an uncommon sight for Moegle to wave runners home from second base on singles hit into left field.

"The outfielder has to pick up the ball and throw it, which means there is room for error," said Moegle.

Both teams do have one trait in common, primarily junior lineups, but that's the similarity ends.

"Until we beat Amarillo High (for the district championship), our kids had never won in anything," said Scott. "So, now they are the loop champions our confidence has grown."

"We didn't have the talent when the season started," said Moegle. "But we have it now. This teams has proved itself.

"These kids learned what it was like to win last year when we went to the finals of the state tournament. That exposure has helped them to develop the attitude that they're not supposed to lose."

Chaps Triumph

finish a 6-3 win over UD that had been started and suspended Friday morning.

Dallas then went on to eliminate Paul Quinn 12-2 in seven innings in the first round of consolation play.

Throwing for LCC in today's championship will be John senior John Ross, the Chaps' No. 1 hurler all season with a 5-4 record and a 4.57 ERA.

Lubbock Chrisitan College placed three junior infielders on the all-district 8 team. Chaps selected included returnees Tim Leslie and Steve Brigante.

Leslie, a .393 hitting first baseman and Brigante, a .343 hitting second baseman, were joined by third baseman Kenny Toney, who hit .330 on the year.

Paul Quinn also placed three players, senior catcher Howard Edwards (.297), junior outfielder Marvin Hall (.378) and freshman pitcher Glen Mason (6-2 with a 2.10 ERA).

Looming large in the District VIII picture, although they didn't make it to the tournament, were LCC's Texas Athletic Conference rivals Texas Wesleyan and Midwestern. Both placed three players on the team.

Midwestern had freshman shrotstop Galen Guillot (.315), and outfielders Dave Conacher (Jr. .426), and Rick Loesch (Soph. .316). TWC placed senior designated hitter Rick Eberle (.335), sophomore utility infielder Kyle Sanford (.382) and senior pitcher Steve Daniels (10-3, 3.20 ERA).

Dallas put two players on the team, sophomore pitcher Bobby Newton (7-1, 1.91) and catcher Keith Whitely, junior who hit .276. DBC landed outfielder Kevin Smith, who had the highest batting average on the All-Star team .430.

Snyder Wins Over Lamesa

SNYDER (Special) — Armando Morales pitched a two-hitter as the Snyder Tigers concluded the 3-AAA baseball season by defeating Lamesa 2-0.

The win gives the Tigers a 20-8 overall record and a 10-2 district mark. Lamesa finishes with 9-11 and 4-8 records.

Snyder will now take a three-game winning streak into the bidistrict action against Burkburnett here Tuesday at 4 p.m. in the first game of the best-of-three series. The series will move to Burkburnett Friday for two games if a doubleheader is needed.

New Bowling Lanes Accepting Leagues

Team and individual registrations for league bowling now are being accepted at South Plains Bowl, the new Brunswick Recreation Center being constructed at 5150 69th St.

Completion of the complex is expected in August, and league bowling will begin Labor Day week, according to Gerry Wilson, manager.

Wilson urged early registration for individual or team bowling.

Mixed (four-person team) bowling will be conducted at 6:15 p.m. on Fridays, Saturdays and Sundays and at 9 p.m. Monday through Friday, beginning Sept. 7.

Women's bowling (four on team) will be at 9 p.m. on Mondays starting Sept. 10 and at 6:15 p.m. (five on team) at 6:15 p.m. on Thursdays, beginning Sept. 5.

Four-man team bowling will be held on Mondays and Thursdays at 9 p.m. starting Sept. 5. Junior bowling (four-member teams) will be at 9 a.m. and noon on Saturdays, starting Sept. 8.

"Club 55" (four-member teams) bowling will be at 1 p.m. on Mondays beginning Sept. 10.

Women's bowling also will be morning and afternoons, Monday through Friday. Junior bowling will be encouraged afternoons after school, Monday through Friday.

Beginners may learn to bowl free, including on-lane instruction, use of house balls and shoes, plus refreshments.

Junior leagues (Saturdays and weekdays) will feature a package price, including lineage, shoe rental, trophies, end-of-season tournament and awards presentations.

Wilson said interested persons may obtain further information by calling 793-8732. They will be contacted again by South Plains Bowl in August.

Lyle Decisions LeDoux

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — Ron Lyle survived a third-round knockdown to score a razor-thin split decision over Scott LeDoux Saturday and admitted, "as hungry as I am, my total existence was threatened."

Lyle was knocked into the ropes and the referee called it a knockdown and tolled off eight counts.

"Still, I felt even in that third round that I was winning and he just could not put me out," Lyle said.

The awkward LeDoux made the fight close all the way, but admitted, "I couldn't see in the last two rounds. I couldn't see the hooks because my eye was nearly closed."

Asked about Lyle punches after the bell had rung in some rounds, LeDoux answered, "What can you say about a guy who has lived his lifestyle?"

The 37-year-old Lyle came out of Colorado State Prison to become a top heavyweight and only recently was exonerated from a second-degree murder charge.

After the eight-count in the third round, LeDoux, 225, followed with a right cross that put the 218-pound Lyle into the ropes again.

on our finest steel belted radial
721™

Our previous steel cord used only five strands of steel. The new cord is stronger and more durable because it has ten filaments...seven wrapped around two with one more steel strand wrapping up the pack...the twist that gives our tire its name...721.

Tourney Entries At Premium

By CHUCK McDONALD
Avalanche-Journal Sports Staff

Well, there is some good news and some bad news on hand for South Plains golfing enthusiasts.

The good news is that there are plenty of area tournaments slated for the upcoming weekend — the bad news is that you'd better move fast about submitting applications, because most of them are just about filled.

And for women golfers the news is only bad: The one tournament slated this week, the Plainview Women's Invitational, is already filled, and there are plenty of names on the waiting list.

That women's affair at the Plainview Country is a one day tournament slated for Friday. On tap for the men is the Plainview Men's Partnership, the Farwell Partnership, the Morton Partnership and the Gaines County Partnership in Seminole.

All are scheduled for Saturday and Sunday, and all will feature a championship flight and flights one through five.

The Pan American Golf Association is also having a club partnership tournament at the Meadowbrook Municipal Course.

Plainview pro Terry LeGate says that golfer can submit their applications as late as 6 p.m. Friday to participate in the Plainview tourney.

"We'll try to take as many teams as we can," said LeGate, "and the teams will be seeded by the team member with the lower handicap."

The entry fee is $60 per team and interested golfers should contact Lerate at (806) 296-6148.

At Morton, only 13 spots in the 60-team tourney remain to be filled, and, according to LaMauna Klafka, those remaining openings are all slated for 9 a.m. tee-offs on Saturday.

"We're going to seed the teams into different flights by their first-day score," she said. "And the first-day tee times were given on a first-come, first-serve basis."

Only the Morton tourney is set up in this fashion; all the others will have the lower flights teeing off in the morning and the higher ones in the afternoon.

The Morton entry fee is $60 and interested persons can contact Miss Klafka at (806) 266-5941 or 266-5878.

Quite a few openings are still available for the Farwell tourney and the number there is (806) 481-9910 and the pro is Jim Berry. The entry fee is $60.

A limited number of slots are still available for the Gaines County Partnership in Seminole. Again, the entry fee is $60 and the man to call is Dale Newman at (915) 758-3808.

Closer at hand is a couple of pro-am tournaments scheduled for Monday. Pine Hills Country Club and Winkler County Country Club in Kermit will both host pro-am affairs tomorrow.

The Women's West Texas Golf Association also reports that applications for women interested in their annual tournament have already been put in the mail.

A field of 144 women golfers are expected from an area that stretches from El Paso to Fort Worth, Del Rio, and the Panhandle. The site of this year's tourney is the Hillcrest Country Club and the action is less than a month away — June 1-15.

HOLE-IN-ONE

Garrie Butler fired a hole-in-one at the Treasure Island Golf Course Saturday afternoon on the 18th hole (90 yards, par-3), using a 7-iron. Witnessing the shot were Richard Butler, Dewey Scott and Sandra Scott.

Husband, Wife Share Meet Ace Honors

PLEASANT HILLS, Calif. (AP) — An elderly man and his wife playing in a Mr. and Mrs. golf tournament each had holes-in-one, the Pleasant Hills Golf And Country Club reported Saturday.

David Sutch of Concord scored his ace on the par-3, 100-yard fourth hole on Friday. Hiw wife, Esther, playing later in a separate foursome, holed out her tee shot on the par-3, 160-yard seventh hole.

Club pro John Oderda, who certified the two aces, said the odds were 1,416,000 to 1 for such a double feat. The couple's ages were unavailable, but Oderda said both are eligible for Social Security.

Sutch has a handicap of 9. His wife's handicap is 23.

SOCCER FINALS

WEMBLEY, England (AP) — Liam Brady, Irish soccer star, set up three goals Saturday as Arsenal edged Manchester United 3-2 in the English Cup final at Wembley Stadium.

Mitchell Goes To Colorado

BOULDER, Colo. (AP) — Mike Mitchell, head basketball coach and athletic director at College of Southern Idaho, has been hired as an assistant basketball coach at the University of Colorado.

Mitchell replaces Kevin O'Connor, who resigned in April to accept a similar position at UCLA.

"Mike is one of the bright young coaches in the country," said Colorado head coach Bill Blair in making the announcement Saturday. "In addition to being an excellent coach, he's an outstanding recruiter."

Mitchell, 31, has a nine-year career coaching record of 234-69. In his two seasons at Southern Idaho, his teams posted records of 27-6 and 28-4, finishing as regional champion last season and runner-up in 1978.

He previously coached four seasons at Western Texas College at Snyder, where his teams compiled a 116-30 record and won the national junior college title in 1975.

Mitchell is expected to begin his duties at CU later this month, Blair said.

Matadors Sweep Rival

By BOB BAJACKSON
Avalanche-Journal Sports Staff

Just about the only error the Estacado Matadors made Saturday afternoon was when the thick-and-chewy-ordered pizza for the post-game party arrived thin and crispy.

Estacado first baseman Manuel Escamilla provided the offensive power and second sacker Tony Gutierrez gave a living example of how the Matadors dominated the action as Estacado swept a doubleheader from the Dunbar Panthers in the baseball-season finale for both schools.

The Matadors took the first game 12-0 in a game called after five innings because of the 10-run rule and won the second 9-1.

The sweep ended Estacado's record at 18-16 overall, and 7-8 in District 1-AAA play. Dunbar concluded at 0-15 and 3-29.

Escamilla went 4-for-6 in the twinbill, which included a homer and 6 RBIs. The Matador first baseman's round-tripper sailed about 380 feet as it cleared the fence and bounced on the road in the first inning of the second game as the Matadors built a 4-0 lead.

"I thought I had hit it straight up," said Escamilla. "I never saw it, but the ball didn't feel like it came off the bat very well."

In the fifth inning of the second game, the Matadors' Gutierrez could do nothing wrong as it appeared he was picked off first base.

"I got caught leaning the wrong way just after I got the steal sign," said the Matador second baseman. "There was nothing for me to do but run towards second."

Dunbar pitcher Daryl Green made a quick move and tossed the ball to first baseman Micky Bridgers. Bridgers held the ball until Gutierrez made the commitment to second and when there was no change for Gutierrez to put on the breaks, Bridgers lobbed the ball to shortstop James Dennis who was covering second.

But the throw was a little high and Gutierrez slid under the tag with a hook slide on the bag.

"I knew I was going to make it," said the Estacado senior. "The tag hit me pretty high."

When asked if they were glad that the season was over, Escamilla said, "Yesterday, after the senior workout, I was glad the season was ending. But now, I wish it weren't."

By the way, the senior workout consisted of extra laps around the bases and carrying equipment.

"I was trying a little extra hard to hit a home run today," said Escamilla. "It was the most satisfying homer I've hit this season, because it's the last one."

Escamilla's shot over the right field fence gave him seven home runs for the season.

Ending careers for Dunbar were Johnny Ceja, Daryl Green and Juan Mendoza.

Brett Parker was credited with the pitching victories in both games to raise his record to 15-5 and 6-3. Johnny Ceja (1-6, 0-2) was charged with the loss in the first contest, while Daryl Green (1-8, 0-5) took the loss in the second game.

It was probably fitting that Gutierrez hauled in the final out of the season for both teams.

The Matador second baseman caught a pop up just to the left of the right field foul line and when the ball hit his glove a little dance followed.

"My teammates were yelling at me to do a hot-dog play," smiled Gutierrez. "The coach can't make us run if it's the last play of the season."

Ex-Frog Bulaich Retiring

MIAMI (AP) — Norm Bulaich, a reliable fullback for three National Football League teams, Saturday announced his retirement.

Bulaich, 32, told the Miami Dolphins he had decided to concentrate on his business interests in Texas. In nine seasons with the Baltimore Colts, Philadelpha Eagles and Dolphins, Bulaich gained more than 5,000 yards in rushing and receiving.

The Dolphins' signing of free agent Larry Csonka left Bulaich as no better than third-string fullback. Ironically, it was Csonka's defection from Miami to the World Football League in 1975 that keyed Coach Don Shula's decision to acquire Bulaich from Philadelphia.

"It was very difficult last season leaving my family in Texas while I was playing football in Miami," said Bulaich, father of a 6½-year-old daughter and 4-month-old son.

He is involved in a freight distribution company and t-shirt sales in the Fort Worth area.

In four seasons with the Dolphins, Bulaich scored 20 touchdowns, gained 1,461 yards on 331 rushes and caught 101 passes for 698 yards.

"It was a bargain when I could get him for a fourth-round pick from the Eagles in 1975, and his performance proved what a bargain it was," Shula said. "He was one of the most versatile backs I've seen play in the NFL. He could do everything well.

"I hate to see people like Bulaich leave the game because their contribution has meant so much to make football what it is," Shula said.

Shula drafted Bulaich No. 1 for the Baltimore Colts in 1970, and the stocky TCU rookie scored two touchdowns in the 1970 playoffs against Oakland.

In his second year, he set the Colts' single-game rushing record of 198 yards on 22 carries — a record that still stands. He gained 741 yards on 152 carries that season.

He was traded to Philadelphia in 1973.

"I'm the only guy to be cheered with a boo!" he said. "But when I fumbled, you could always hear the "oo" a little longer."

Suns Seek Western Championship At Home

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) — Defense put the Seattle SuperSonics into the National Basketball Association's Western Conference championship series. It also could keep them from obtaining a shot at the 1978-79 NBA title.

The SuperSonics, the defending conference champions, will find their season come to an abrupt halt today unless they can figure out a way to crack the Phoenix Suns' hampering defensive effort.

Perserverance and tenacity were the terms used by Suns coach John MacLeod to describe his club's 99-93 victory Friday night over the SuperSonics before a stunned crowd of nearly 29,000 at Seattle's Kingdome.

It was the third straight triumph for the Suns over the SuperSonics and gave them a 3-2 edge going into Game 6 today in Phoenix. Tipoff for that game, which will be televised nationally by CBS, is set for 2:45 p.m. CDT before a sellout crowd of 12,660 at Veterans Memorial Coliseum. The Suns have won all seven playoff games staged on their home court.

Friday night's victory by Phoenix was keyed by a devastating full-court press at the end of the third quarter and an unnerving series of half-court traps in the fourth.

"We kept our composure — didn't get rattled," said MacLeod. "I thought Seattle played much better defense than in the last couple of games, and it took us a while to get untracked. But while we were waiting for things to come around, we played pretty sound basketball and didn't let them put us away."

Seattle coach Lenny Wilkens agreed.

"We had them on the verge, but we couldn't finish them off," he said. "They never should have been in a position to win."

Wilkens, meanwhile, continued to search for the key that would raise the SuperSonics out of the doldrums. At the same time, he continued to bemoan the fact that his club had not played well in the three losses to the Suns; that they stand around too much and don't maintain their intensity.

After Friday's game, Wilkens once again proclaimed that Seattle "didn't do what we should have done." He made the same assessment after Games 3 and 4.

"Right now we've got our backs to the wall," he added. "We've got to go down to Phoenix and win."

This is the second time the Suns and SuperSonics have met in the playoffs. Phoenix defeated Seattle 4-2 in the Western Conference semifinals two years ago.

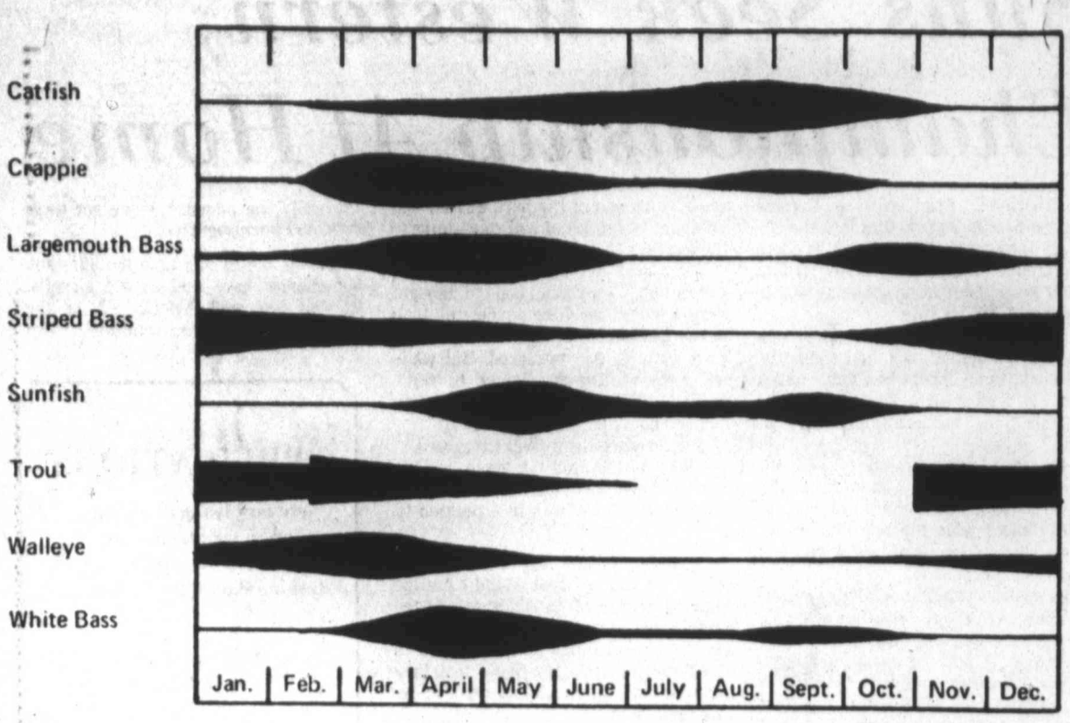
WHEN TO FISH



P&WD Compiles Fishing Calendar

Many freshwater fish are available to anglers throughout the year, although some months are more productive than others for catching particular species. The fishing calendar, compiled by biologists of the Parks & Wildlife Department, illustrates the availability of different species and periods when best catches can usually be made.

Fish such as striped bass and walleye are not native to Texas, but they are becoming more numerous as a result of the department's stocking efforts. These fish fill an ecological niche by utilizing open water forage fish — such as shad — for food. In addition, they provide anglers with excellent table fare.

Another popular stocking program is the rainbow trout fishery. These fish are stocked on a put-and-take basis to provide anglers with another game fish that is fun to catch and good to eat.

Peak months for catching native species like crappie, white bass and largemouth bass are during spawning periods in early spring. As the chart indicates, however, they can be caught throughout the year.

Deer Count Not Tied To Antlers

An inexperienced hunter was heard to say that there wasn't a buck in the whole herd of deep spotted on a West Texas ranch last week.

This person was using antlers to judge the population of bucks in the herd and as all Parks & Wildlife Department employees know, early spring is no time to try and count buck deer.

The white-tailed and mule deer of northwest Texas both lose their antlers during the winter following the mating season. With the elimination of the antler from the animal, it is hard to identify bucks unless a comparison can be made with nearby does. Normally, the bucks are larger than the does, and they can be spotted among the herd by the careful observer.

Following the loss of the antlers, the process of growing new antlers begins. Antler formation begins in most areas in April with the appearance of velvet-covered buds.

Within two weeks, the characteristic branched pattern has appeared. During this period, the buck deer is careful to avoid hard objects that might hit his new antlers.

By August, the antlers are mature. Growth has ceased and the velvet has begun to dry at the tips. When the bony materials of the antler has become fully hardened, the velvet dries and peels off in the shreds helped by the animal rubbing its antlers against brush and small trees.

These deer "rubs" are a sure sign of bucks to the alert deer hunter scouting hunting areas in early fall.

Animals like the antelope and aoudad have true horns and do not lose then annually like the deer. These horns can become broken or worn from fighting or old age.

Warm Water Furnishes Best Fishing In NM

SANTA FE, N.M. (Special) — The state's warm water lakes are where the most fishing action is, according to New Mexico Game and Fish Department reports from around the state.

Crappie and white bass fishing seem to be hottest, with heavy stringers being reported from Elephant Butte, Conchas and Ute lakes. Live minnows are good baits for both species, as are yellow and white jigs.

Catfishing with trotlines baited with cut baits or minnows is also good at the heads of most of the major warm-water reserviors, where the cats are concentrating to feed in the incoming flows.

Trout fishing is variable. Conditions, especially in the streams, are changing almost daily. Although catch rates remain good to very good in somewhat high and murky water, most anglers prefer not to fish the streams once the waters become too swift and muddy.

Lakes, although they will also be dark from runoff waters, will nevertheless continue to yield trout to bait fisherman and, unless extremely dark, to those using spinning and trolling gear as well.

Junior Track Meet

FLOYDADA (Special) — The Floydada Quarterback Club will be sponsori 01.9Junior Track Meet next Saturday at the Floydada High School track.

Registration in five divisions and five events will begin at 9 a.m.

Divisions are boys and girls age 5-6, 6-7, 8-9, 10-11 and 12-year-olds.

Registration fee for all five events is $2. Field events will be start at 10 a.m. and the finals will be be held at 1 p.m.

Where They're Biting

Buffalo Springs Lake — Bass and crappie continue to be found in the cattails and around the rocks. Spawning has not started as yet, because of the low temperature of the water. Perch are biting, with some weighing 1¼ pounds. Jerry Simmons, a lake resident, brought in a good string of channel catfish; hominy with a worm attracted one channel that weighed 2½ pounds. Most of the channels are being caught at night. Carp are providing consistant action. The lake is in good condition.

Lake Guerrero — Windy weather hasn't slowed the bass action on the lake in Northern Mexico. Most anglers are averaging 65 to 70 fish per boat per day. John Waggoner of Decatur used a chartreuse spinner to land a 4½ pounder.

Oak Creek Lake — Trolling has been successful for white bass weighing up to 3½ pounds. Some of the anglers have started using their trotlines. Terry Korthouer of Midland baited his lines and took six yellow catfish that ranged from 6-13½ pounds. The boat ramp at Sportsman's Lodge is in excellent shape and is being used by all sizes of boats.

Lake Stamford — The bass have joined the crappie in the cattails and around the stumps. The bass are starting to spawn and are hitting jigs; crappie are going for jigs or minnows. Channel cat action is very good on trot lines baited with minnows and goldfish. The lake is full and in good condition.

White River Lake — The walleye action continues to improve with most of the action being from the marina to the dam at a 20-foot depth. Reggie Johnson of Muleshoe had a good string of walleye with one fish tipping 3 pounds 14 ounces. Leo Bunch of Lubbock landed a 5-pound, 2-ounce bass. Crappie are small but numerous; one crappie weighed 1 pound, 5 ounces. Last week's best reported channel cat weighed in at 9 pounds, 4 ounces. The lake is in very good condition with all species biting.

Lake Whitney — Heavy rains last week caused a 6-foot rise and ruined weekend sports fishing. Fishing was good before the rise which helped only catfishing.

State Slates Feral Hog Hunt

AUSTIN (Special) — Hunters will have another chance to try to bag the sporty feral hog when the Parks & Wildlife Department conducts another series of public hunts on the Engeling Wildlife Mangement Area, 20 miles northwest of Palestine, during the last week in July.

Three two-day hunts will be held July 21-23, 24-26 and 27-29, and 150 permits will be issued. There will be no bag limit. Hunters will be chosen by public drawing in Austin on June 7, and applications must reach the Austin office by 5 p.m. on June 4.

Applications and information about the hunts may be obtained by writing the department at 4200 Smith School Road, Austin 78744.

George Veteto, supervisor of the Engeling area, said the hunts were begun in an attempt to reduce the hog population on the area since the animals were causing damage.

Veteto noted, "They are difficult to hunt because there is a lot of water and heavy brush."

Eliot Named AD On Temporary Basis

CHAMPAIGN, Ill. (AP) -Ray Eliot, a former University of Illinois football coach, was named interim athletic director Friday.

Eliot replaces Cecil Coleman, who was fired April 27 by Chancellor William Gerberding and the board of directors of the Illinois Athletic Association.

The board is looking for a permanent athletic director, but Eliot is expected to serve for several months.

Eliot, a 1932 graduate of Illinois, coached the Illini for 23 years and took them to the Rose Bowl in 1947 and 1952.

He retired from coaching in 1960 and served as associate athletic director until 1973.

Wildlife Commissioners Cut Mule-Deer Season

By J.D. PEER
Parks & Wildlife Department

The Texas Parks and Wildlife Commission has approved several changes in the fish and game regulations affecting sportsmen in northwest Texas this fall.

The Commission authorized reducing the mule deer season in the Panhandle from 16 days to nine days. A shortened season will reduce the buck harvest and increase the number of older age-class buck mule deer left in the population. The nine-day season will standardize the length of the season with the Trans-Pecos area.

The mule deer bag limit for the gun season will be the same as last season with a bag limit of two mule deer, no more than one buck, anterless by permit only. Archery season bag limit is one buck mule deer only.

The Commission established an expanded and split season for aoudad sheep in the Panhandle. The season will be the first Saturday in November for 14 days and from the first Saturday in January for 16 days.

This aoudad season rule will provide greater hunter opportunity as some landowners do not have sheep in November, but have them on their winter wheat fields in January.

Many counties in the Panhandle-South Plains-Permian Basin regions do not have huntable population of antelope, and the Commission approved closing the antelope season in these 24 counties for 1979.

The upland bird hunters will have a longer season to bag pheasants in the Panhandle as the Commission expanded the pheasant season from 16 to 30 days, from the second Saturday in December for 30 consecutive days.

The lengthening of the pheasant season will have no adverse affect on the pheasant population. Censuses indicate a steady increase in the population of birds in northwest Texas.

The Commission did add the restriction of prohibiting the use of cables, chains, ropes, or other devices attached between moving objects to flush pheasants as has been the practice of a few hunters in the past.

The fur-bearing regulation on possession has been modified by the Commission. The revision will prohibit the possession of fur-bearing animals on their pelts except during the open season as provided by law.

A few trappers-hunters have taken pelts before and after the season, storing them in a freezer until the legal season for selling.

The Commission authorized increasing the statewide bag limit on striped bass from three to five per day (except lakes Texoma and Toledo Bend). The rapidly expanding striped bass populations allow for a more liberal bag limit.

Also, all bag and possession limits on striped-white bass hybrids were removed statewide by the Commission. The hybrids of striped bass will not reproduce and should be managed for high harvest rates to reduce losses from high natural mortality.

Broncos Add Eight After Mini-Camp

DENVER (AP) — The Denver Broncos announced Saturday the signing of eight free agents, including wide receiver Steve Watson from Temple.

Watson, a 6-foot-3, 195-pounder, turned in the top time in the 40-yard dash of 4.56 seconds at Denver's mini-camp for rookies on Thursday.

Others signed were wide receiver Tony Stephens from Florida, tight end Mark Hodge from Georgia, linebacker James Harrell of Florida, linebacker Jim Ryan of William and Mary, defensive tackle Rich Tuten of Clemson, defensive end Ed McDonald of Cal State-San Luis Obispo, and safety Randy Harrison from Notre Dame.

The Broncos now have signed 38 free agents for the 1979 season.

Denver's mini-camp winds up with a workout this morning.

Trainer Takes 'Bid' Back Home

BALTIMORE (AP) — Spectacular Bid returns to Pimlico, where he began his sensational career with a victory about 10½ months ago, to try and continue his drive toward the Triple Crown with a win in the $150,000-added Preakness next Saturday.

"It doesn't make any difference what racetrack it is, but I'm glad to be going home," trainer Bud Delp, who thinks Bid is a cinch Triple Crown champion, said after the Kentucky Derby. Delp has been a leading trainer on the Maryland-Delaware-New Jersey circuit for many years.

Ronnie Franklin, the 19-year-old jockey who was kept on Spectacular Bid by the colt's owners despite much criticism, also is glad to be back in Maryland. Franklin lives with Delp in Laurel, Md., and began riding at Pimlico.

The Maryland ties to Spectacular Bid, a Kentucky-bred, are his owners — Harry Meyeroff, 50, a retired Baltimore home builder; his wife, Teresa, and his son, Tom.

Spectacular Bid last raced in Maryland when he won the Laurel Futurity to clinch the 1978 two-year-old championship. He closed his 2-year-old campaign by winning the Heritage at Keystone. He opened 1979 in Florida where he won four stakes, including the Florida Derby and Flamingo, then moved to Kentucky to win the Blue Grass and Derby and run his record to 13 wins in 15 starts and his earnings to $958,287.

From five to seven 3-year-old are expected to try to spoil Spectacular Bid's homecoming in the 1 3/16-mile Preakness and send him into the 1½-mile Belmont Stakes June 9 with a chance to become thoroughbred racing's third straight Triple Crown champion. Seattle Slew won the Triple Crown in 1977, four years after Secretariat had won it after a 25-year-old drought, and Affired won it last year.

The connections of three Derby starters said immediately after that race that they would try the Preakness. They are second-place General Assembly, owned by Bertram R. Firestone; third-place Golden Act, owned by Robert W. Phipps and William H. Oldknow, and sixth-place Screen King, owned by Flying Zee Stable.

Chic Lang, general manager of Pimlico, said he expected Flying Paster, the second choice in the Derby who finished fifth, to start in the Preakness. Trainer Gordon Campbell said the California star couldn't handle the Churchill Downs track and wanted to be sure the colt like the Pimlico surface before entering him.

Flying Paster galloped on the Pimlico track for the first time Wednesday, and before leaving for California Campbell said, "I'll see you next week," according to Lang.

MAINTENANCE ENGINEERS

Earn 40% more money and spend 40 days vacationing.

When you go to work for Aramco, the world's largest oil-producing company, you can make up to $10,000 a year more.

For example, if you are making $25,000 a year (before taxes) in the U.S., you can make another $10,000 (tax-protected) in Saudi Arabia. Sound good? Then compare what you're making now with what you could be making.

Annual U.S. Base Salary	U.S. Net After Taxes*	Saudi Arabia Net After Taxes*
$25,000	$20,377	$30,385†
$30,000	$24,169	$36,169†
$35,000	$27,805	$40,801†

*Based on approximate assumptions of married person filing joint return, with three exemptions. Calculations observe 1979 Federal income tax laws using a 20% deduction.

†Includes base salary and expatriate premium.

Besides more money, Aramco can offer you something most companies can't—a 40-day paid vacation. Plus, we pay round-trip vacation transportation and travel expenses for your entire family to the States every year. Add to this an average of 12 paid holidays and you're in for the time of your life. We also offer generous benefits—too many to explain here. So ask us for the whole story; we think you'll be impressed. We need these maintenance engineers:

Rotating Equipment
Computer Hardware
Turnaround Director of Steam Turbine, Compressors and CGTG Equipment
Planning and Scheduling
Contracting Engineer
Road/Equipment Engineer
Plant Maintenance
Industrial Engineers
Materials Forecasters and Engineers
Tankage Engineers

The requirements

You need an engineering degree and 5 years' experience in your area of specialization or in power generation, NGL and fractionation, crude stabilization and treatment, GOSP, or relining and terminaling plants.

Call us toll free.

If you are interested and would like our employee information package, call toll free, 1-800-231-7577, ext. 4177. In Texas, call collect, 713-651-4177.

Some ideas work and some won't! In 1978 over 2000 growers from California to Delaware and from Canada to Florida agreed that the Spray Sickle is one weed control idea that really works. The 1979 Spray Sickle is better than ever — (Over 35 New Improvements.) If you have Johnson Grass (or any other problem weed) the Spray Sickle is really the only sure way to eradicate it.

CHEVY CITATION

Citation goes a long way on a tank of gas. But that's just the start. Citation has the traction of front wheel drive, rack and pinion steering, front disc brakes, and a transverse mounted engine that's cradled in rubber cushioned mountings to reduce engine vibration. Sleek Citation is easy to park, yet big enough for five adults and lots of cargo. See Chevy Citation for yourself. And to really appreciate it, get behind the wheel.

EPA ESTIMATED MPG — CITY ESTIMATE 24
38 HIGHWAY ESTIMATE
With standard 4-cylinder engine and manual transmission.

Remember: Compare the estimated MPG to the "estimated MPG" of other cars. You may get different mileage depending on your speed, trip length, and weather. Your actual mileage will be lower in heavy city traffic, and your actual highway mileage will probably be less than the estimated highway fuel economy, the "estimated MPG" is more likely to reflect actual overall mileage than the "combined estimate".

Chevrolet cars are equipped with GM built engines produced by various divisions.

2-Year-Old Shares Day With 'Mother'

Mother's Day has special meaning for Emma Thompson, 71, of Ludlow, Ky. Mrs. Thompson and her husband are the legal guardians of their 2-year-old great-granddaughter, Angela, after the child's mother and grandmother were declared unfit. In the picture at left, Mrs. Thompson helps Angela blow out the candles on her second birthday cake. Above, Angela returns the love and attention her great-grandmother gives her with a hug. U.S. Experts Say Some Diet Pills Really Work

WASHINGTON (AP) — A panel of experts retained by the government has concluded that two ingredients used in several commonly available, non-prescription dietaids actually do help people lose weight.

The experts suggested further tests to determine the usefulness of five other drug products sold as diet aids, and they rejected dozens of ingredients for which they could find no evidence of effectiveness.

The items rejected included a list three pages long of various food additives, herbs, vitamins, minerals and nutrients.

The panel's report, a copy of which was obtained by The Associated Press, has been turned over to the Food and Drug Administration, which ordered the study and must decide eventually what drugs, if any, are both safe and effective for weight control.

But the experts' findings represent a breakthrough for the makers of several brands of over-the-counter diet pills, candies and chewing gums that were found to reduce appetite. The panel nonetheless was critical of some of the promotional claims made for the products.

The seven-member review panel, headed by Dr. John W. Norcross, was appointed by the commissioner of the Food and Drug Administration four years ago to examine a variety of over-the-counter drug products. Members include physicians and pharmacologists.

One of the ingredients endorsed by the panel is phenylpropanolamine, which is also used as a nasal decongestant.

The drug is similar to but safer than amphetamines, which are widely prescribed for weight reduction by some physicians but have come under increasing criticism in the medical community because they are often subject to abuse.

The other drug that won the experts' approval is benzocaine, a mild anesthetic sometimes used in lozenges to treat sore throat pain. It is sold in candy and chewing gum form to dieters.

The panel said, "One of the factors invoved in hunger and satiety is taste. Benzocaine is a topical anesthetic... which acts primarily on the nerve endings" and reduces a person's ability to detect different degrees of sweetness.

Reducing the sense of taste also seems to reduce the desire to eat, and the experts found the ingredient "safe for oral use as an anorexiant (appetite reducer)." The panel recommended 3 milligrams to 15 milligrams in gums or candy just prior to eating as a generally recognized safe and effective dose.

In discussing its findings regarding phenylpropanolamine, the panel said scientists do not understand how it or amphetamines work to help control weight. But data from several controlled studies were considered "sufficient to establish the effectiveness of phenylpropanolamine for weight reduction for time periods up to 12 weeks," the report said.

It added that a single dose of 25 to 50 milligrams taken a half hour before meals with the total daily dose not to exceed 100 milligrams "is generally recognized as safe and effective for weight control."

The largest producer of over-the-counter diet aids is Thompson Medical Co. of New York, which produces at least five brands of pills and capsules containing phenylpropanolamine and two benzocaine preparations, Slim-Mint gum and Slim-Line candy.

Dexatrim, Prolamine, Appredrine, Vita-Slim and a brand called "Coffee, Tea & A New Me" all contain phenylpropanolamine in varying dosages and combinations.

Trade publications list Perma-Thene, a similar product made by Allegheny Pharmaceutical Corp., as another major seller.

The review panel also found, after some debate, that combining phenylpropanolamine with the stimulant caffeine "is rational for use in weight control," despite the fact that caffeine doesn't directly help a person lose weight.

"The panel is aware that no study has been submitted showing statistically significant superiority between PPA (phenylpropanolamine) plus caffeine and PPA alone, but the panel concludes that such a combination is rational, since the caffeine acts only as a stimulant to relieve the well-known depressing effects of reducing diets," the report said.

A variety of diet aids now on the market contain one or more ingredients designed to produce bulk in the stomach and thus make a person feel "full," even without eating. But after examining the available studies, the panel found "the data are insufficient to demonstrate (their) effectiveness for use in weight control."

It suggested further studies could be conducted in the next two years to determine whether or not such products do work. If they don't, the FDA is required to ban them.

The ingredients included in the category of bulk agents are: alginic acid, methylcellulose, carboxymethylcellulose sodium, sodium bicarbonate (for use in combination with one of the other ingredients) and xanthan gum.

All over-the-counter drugs are required to list their ingredients and the amount of each on the label.

Teachers Win Salary Concession In Austin

AUSTIN (AP) — Teachers won a skirmish last week in their salary war with Gov. Bill Clements when both the House and Senate agreed to grant them 7 percent cost-of-living raises.

Clements wants teachers to be treated like state employees and given only 5.1 percent salary increases.

Legislators thought otherwise Friday when each house passed its own version of the $1 billion public school finance bill.

Representatives and senators agreed on little else beside teacher salaries. Differences between the complex bills will force appointment of a House-Senate conference committee to draft a compromise both chambers can live with.

The votes were 28-1 in the Senate and 125-8 in the House to approve the separate bills.

"I guess we'll just have to wait and see if a higher figure comes out on this, what he'll do," Sen. Oscar Mauzy, Senate Education Committee chairman, said of chances Clements would veto a bill containing the 7 percent pay raises. Republican representatives made no attempt to cut salary schedules in the bill, which was backed by the Texas State Teachers Association and school administrators.

Sen. Pete Snelson, D-Midland, led the Senate fight for 7 percent raises instead of the 5.1 percent increases proposed by Mauzy's committee.

Snelson said Clements had overlooked the fact that state employees enjoy better fringe benefits than teachers.

Teachers are at least as deserving as senators' secretaries, who make an average of $17,208 annually compared with average teacher pay of $11,800, said Sen. Roy Blake, D-Nacogdoches.

"Wouldn't you think that teachers who have our children in the schools are just as important as the secretaries to the members of the Senate?" Blake asked.

The big difference between the two bills is the Senate's inclusion of $452 million for covering school districts' revenue losses from the 1978 Tax Relief Amendment.

House members made reimbursement part of a separate bill implementing the amendment, resulting in far more money for school districts.

Rep. Hamp Atkinson, D-New Boston, chairman of the House Public Education Committee, said the Senate bill, gives no tax relief while the House bill does. Mauzy said the Senate bill does a better job of trying to equalize rich and poor districts.

The Senate bill totals $1.03 billion for 1980-81 while the House bill amounts to $1.1 billion. Atkinson said the House bill spends $25 million to $30 million more than is available.

Philadelphia Voters To Replace Rizzo

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Voters go to the polls Tuesday to nominate candidates to succeed Mayor Frank Rizzo, signaling the birth of a new era in Philadelphia politics.

Rizzo, a law-and-order mayor who has dominated the city's Democratic organization for nearly a decade, was barred by the City Charter from seeking a third consecutive term. And without the flamboyant former policeman barreling through the crowds, the election has been far tamer than in years past.

On the Republican ticket, former federal prosecutor David Marston is expected to have an easy time against three other candidates.

He has name recognition stemming from his dispute with the White House over the Joshua Eilberg case, and his subsequent bid for governor, plus the backing of the Republican National Committee, which contributed $25,000.

On the Democratic side, nine candidates are seeking the nomination for mayor of the nation's fourth largest city, with the race narrowing down to a two-man field.

Former Rep. Bill Green and Charles Bowser, a deputy to former Mayor James H.J. Tate, are the frontrunners, with Green appearing to enjoy a lead. Green's campaign, his 10th in 15 years, is blessed with money and his name has proven power at the polls.

In a narrow loss in 1976 to Republican John Heinz for Hugh Scott's Senate seat, Green carried Philadelphia by 300,000 votes, and came within 50,000 votes of beating Rizzo in the 1971 mayoral primary.

Green served in Congress 12 years, his first victory coming in 1964 when at age 25 he ran successfully for the House seat left vacant by the death of his father.

Bowser has the best chance of any black candidate ever to seek nomination for mayor.

In 1975 he ran for mayor under the banner of the Philadelphia Party, which he created. He finished a distant second to Rizzo, but beat the Republican candidate, Thomas Foglietta.

Since then he has widened his support, and on election day should enjoy the backing of nearly every important black politician in town. But a small turnout, especially among blacks who are 45 percent of the Democratic vote, could prove his undoing.

Two other Democrtic candidates, William Klenk II and Albert Gaudiosi, were considered to have a shot, but dropped out earlier this month citing lack of support.

Marston, 36, leaped into the race after receiving a phone call from Gov. Dick Thornburgh, who urged him to run and pledged support.

The former U.S. attorney for eastern Pennsylvania draws much of his political punch from the exposure gained from his spat with President Carter and Attorney General Griffin Bell.

Marston, who finished fourth in the GOP gubernatorial primary last spring, contends he was fired 16 months ago as federal prosecutor as a result of pressure applied by then-Rep. Joshua Eilberg.

A Democrat who was under investigation by Marston's office, Eilberg had phoned Carter in the fall of 1977 requesting that the Philadelphia prosecutor be replaced by a member of the ruling party.

Eilberg was indicted last fall and in February pleaded guilty to a conflict of interest charge in connection with the federal financing of a hospital here.

Also at stake are the offices of controller, sheriff, city commissioner, register of wills and clerk of court. All 17 council seats also are being contested.

In addition to the city primary, voters statewide will be choosing among 19 candidates for seven seats at stake on the state's three highest courts: the Supreme, Superior and Commonwealth courts.

MAYOR TO STEP DOWN

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — Albert Hofstede, mayor of Minneapolis for four of the past six years, announced Friday he will not seek another two-year term. Hofstede, member of the Democratic-Farmer-Labor party, said he still had the "burning desire" to serve as mayor but had come to realize he could not sustain the drive for two more years. "When that happens," he said, "it is time to step down... I plan to pursue a career in business and devote infinitely more time to my family," he said.

Executions Reported In Iran

TEHRAN, Iran (AP) — A soldier and two policmen were reported executed and an major independent newspaper suspended publication Saturday to protest criticism by Iran's revolutionary leader Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini.

State radio said an army officer was shot at dawn in the central city of Isfahan after a revolutionary court convicted him of killing one person during an anti-shah rally before the revolution. The broadcast also reported the Friday executions of two state policemen in the northern city of Gorgan for similar convictions.

Since Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi's government was toppled in February, 204 persons have died before Islamic firing squads.

The decision to close the Tehran daily Ayendegan coincided with a march by hundreds of Khomeini backers demanding that the paper and two others be shut down for carrying articles that displeased Khomeini.

But the revolutionary government has said it will not close the papers.

Ayendegan's Saturday edition carried one story in reply to Khomeini's attack on it, saying:

"With the present situation, work is impossible.

"The government must make clear its position with regard to freedom of the press. That is why we had a revolution in the first place. Until then, this newspaper will not be printed."

Marchers outside the newspaper's offices passed a resolution that included "we demand that any newspaper publishing attacks on any person should be capable of presenting solid proof in a court of law. Otherwise, they will beheld responsible as traitors to the revolution."

A membr of Ayandegan's staff said that during the shah's regime, "we had to confront direct censorship, now it is being done indirectly with the same suppressive results."

Mother's Day Observance Marks Start Of Family Awareness Week

This week, beginning with Mother's Day, has been designated "Family Awareness Week" by Mayor Dirk West with the support of the Family Service Association of Lubbock. It is designed to draw attention to the positive aspects of family life.

Although the traditional family of a father and mother with two or three children may be less common than a generation ago, it is still the preferred lifestyle for millions of people, and there are those who would defend it as the most satisfactory way of life.

Cathe and Darnell Elswick have an obvious enthusiasim for their family life that pervades everything they do, and they admit freely that their two little boys are "the joy of our lives."

Although Elswick is on the road a lot as a representative of a furniture manufacturer, the flexibility of his schedule when he is at home makes it possible for him to spend more time with his children than he ever had with a desk job, he says.

Elswick describes with pleasure a day spent with his sons: breakfast in a restaurant, a shopping expedition to buy a gift for Cathe's birthday, a trip to the corner grocery for a treat, pulling weeds in the yard.

Although they are both active church members, they feel that church activities should not interfere with family life.

"Last week," Elswick explained, "We didn't go to church because I had come in late the night before from out of town. We felt it was more important for us to spend the day together."

The Elswicks believe that the boys, young as they are, should have a voice in family decisions. "They take turns being 'first' each day," he says. "Perhaps I have said 'no' to something they wanted to do. We sit down and talk about it, and they give me their reasons. I may even change my mind."

The Elswicks enjoyed their family life even before they had children, they said. "Even when there were just the two of us, we had our holidays at home," Elswick said. "We wouldn't dream of being anywhere else for Christmas or Thanksgiving."

For another Lubbock family, the church forms a particularly strengthening effect on their family life. They belong to the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, and the Mormons have always been known for their emphasis on the family, based on the belief that the family is an eternal unit which will continue after this life.

One of the programs of the church is "Family Home Night," an event which the family of Lorum Stratton has adopted wholeheartedly, and to which they give much of the credit for the solidarity of their family.

Monday nights church meetings are not scheduled, and Mormons do not call each other. In fact, if the phone rings at the Strattons, one of the children is likely to answer with, "Good evening, this is family home night; how are you?"

The evening is for the family to be together, to enjoy each other's company and to discuss common problems and goals. According to Stratton, this practice, along with their daily devotions, keeps small problems from becoming larger.

The children take turns deciding what will be the program for the evening. Sometimes they will use a lesson from a booklet put out by the church; other evenings a child will choose a bicycle ride or a game of tennis.

With four active youngsters from two to fourteen, the Strattons are as busy as most families. He teaches at Texas Tech, while Karen is heavily involved in the educational program of the church. The whole structure of their church life, however, encourages the strengthening of the family unit.

Neither Cathe Elswick nor Karen Stratton work outside the home, but two other Lubbock families, where the mother does have outside employment, are able to maintain a lively and stable family life.

Walter and D'Ann Soehnge and their three sons, Bobby, Frank and Robert, are a particularly close-knit family which obviously enjoys being together.

For them, physical activity is the basis of much of their shared time. Soehnge, an elementary school teacher, coaches a soccer team on which Frank and Robert play. D'Ann and Robert are serious runners. Bobby plays tennis and soccer, and all the boys are involved in baseball and football. The family can often be found at the "Y," swimming, running or working out.

Although they are all busy, they try to dovetail their activities so that they can spend time together.

D'Ann says this was not always so. When they realized that they were rarely together, they decided to make the effort to participate in the same activities.

"Instead of playing 14 sports, we have zeroed in on soccer," Soehnge says.

In a nearly all-male household, Soehnge and the boys pitch in and help with the housework. Every member of the family has his own chores and responsibilities. Frank and Robert do the family laundry, while Bobby is in charge of the kitchen. But cooking is a chore shared, and enjoyed, by everyone.

One young couple, Jake and Mary Thiessen, made a conscious effort to become a family by adopting a little girl. Thiessen is a research assistant and graduate student at Texas Tech University, while Mary directs the local Contact office. They were married for seven years before adopting Rachel.

"After several years of marriage," Mary said, "life had settled into a routine for us. Now, every day is different."

The couple schedules their lives around the baby. Mary works mornings at Contact while Thiessen cares for the baby. His classes are in the afternoon, so Mary returns home to care for Rachel. If something comes up while either is "on duty" at home, they are responsible for finding child care.

After deciding to adopt a child, the Thiessens began proceedings in Los Angeles, where they lived, and had to begin again when they came to Lubbock. Unlike many couples, they had to wait only three months for a child, because Rachel is bi-racial.

Rachel is a delightfully warm and happy child, and her parents' pleasure in her is apparent. Thiessen says she "obviously knows how much she is wanted and loved."

Thiessen's parents found it difficult, at first, to accept the idea of a bi-racial child, but after meeting Rachel they were as charmed by her as her parents. Thiessen's mother said, "This is my grandchild, so why should I deprive myself of the joy?"

The couple plans to adopt at least one more child. "If I had the money," Mary said, "I'd adopt ten kids."

For each of these four families, although their lifestyles are different, the family is the source of satisfaction and strength to each member, and a positive aspect of life which is well worth the work it takes to keep it strong.

In My Corner

By FRANCES LOWE

"The trouble with life," my friend Caroline used to say, "is that it's so daily."

The family is the very essence of dailiness, with its comfort and warmth and maddening frustrations. It is the setting of our lives in which we function most and least well, in which we are at our best and our worst.

The rituals of family life — not so much the large, elaborate Christmas celebrations as the small, daily patterns which are repeated again and again, provide the setting against which our "important" endeavors are played out.

We are so far from the days when we foraged for food which we killed and ate so directly that we never doubted for what we were working, that we are prone to forget that it is the family which gives us reason to work, rather than the other way around.

Like the domesticated, well-fed cat who, having killed a mouse, wonders what to do with it, we have come to see our work as an end in itself, and our families as somewhat unimportant backdrop for the really important things in our lives.

Perhaps half of my women friends work and half do not. I find myself, sometimes, caught between their two worlds, trying to justify each to the other. The woman who stays at home feels the need to explain that she finds the work she does there worthwhile and satisfying, while the woman who "goes out" to work speaks of the quality of the time she spends with her children.

The issue is not whether to go or stay, but how you assign your priorities, and no one can make the decision for another. We all know mothers who stay at home but do not really give of themselves to their children; of fathers who play ball with their children but do not accept them; of working parents whose relationships with their children are warm and loving and accepting in spite of the limitations of time.

In a small group, designed to help newcomers get acquainted, we were asked what kind of heat we had in the homes of our childhood and what we considered to be the heart of the home. For some, the center of the home was either the source of heat itself or the table around which the family gathered. For some, the den and television set had been the center of the family life. Others, puzzled, revealed that they could not think of anyplace in the home that was its heart.

The way a family eats together (or does not) reveals much about the relationships of its members. It is no accident that in both Jewish and Christian theology, eating together is a religious act. Mealtime can be a battleground in which the family members vent their hostilities or a time of drawing together to exchange news of the day, a strengthening or an exhausting time.

The reaction of the family to a time of stress can also reveal the thin spots in the fabric of its life, or unexpected strengths can emerge. Many old-timers, looking back on the depression, remember those hard times with fondness although the day of their wedding may have been forgotten.

In another family, a period of suffering and grief so painful that it can hardly be spoken of in later years, draws from each of its members a feeling of strength, of solidarity, of kinship that they may have known in no other times.

An old friend spoke of a divorce which had come as a shock to all the couple's acquaintances. An accident, an unexpected illness and a business reverse had placed more pressure on the family structure than it could bear. "After 20 years of marriage, the time came when we really needed each other," she observed, "and when we looked at our marriage, we realized there was nothing there."

Is it the strength of the family which enables it to endure the hard times, or do the hard times give it its strength?

Perhaps, like children, once we have worked our way through this period of finding ourselves, (I am reminded of the old lady who said, "I never had to find myself; I never doubted for a minute who I was") we can turn our attention outward, to the needs of those around us, beginning with our families. Already, in our young people, we see an openness to new kinds of relationships and new ways of dealing with old ones. Young mothers find it easy to believe that they are free to explore their own potential while their husbands find joy in a close relationship with their children that their fathers never had.

Much of the change, if we can look at it without feeling threatened, has been good. Women are no longer considered the property of their fathers and husbands. We are learning not to speak of "having a right" to custody of a child. We are learning not to think of our older people in terms of their economic contributions. We are learning, perhaps, to look at people as individuals.

The pictures we cherish of the nuclear family supported by an extended family has never been available to great numbers of people (this country was settled by people who left their homes and families to begin new lives in strange lands). Staying at home to care for the children, supported by a husband, has always been a luxury available only to the wealthier among us; poorer women have always either worked with their husbands in the fields or gone out to work, leaving their children to fend for themselves.

We cannot begin to deal with the problems that confront us unless we are willing to face them realistically and openly. We are learning that healthy, whole people come out of healthy, whole families, and that to help such families survive and prosper is a worthy goal for our society.

There are good reasons for the anxiety with which people respond to changes in the form of the family....The family as a form is safe. But particular changes...cause hardships, especially for those who are the pioneers in a new family form. They cannot fall back on the past and they cannot foresee what the new style of living may lead to...

"Yet it remains the essential task of the family to rear children who can live out as adults a form of life they learned as children. Within the family children learn how, in their turn, to relate themselves to others, to work and play, make friends, marry, and rear children. Within the enveloping life of the family, each child learns who he is, what he is, and what he may become — what it is, in fact, to be a full human being."

DEAR ABBY

DEAR ABBY: I hope you will use my letter on Mother's Day as a tribute to all those brave, unselfish mothers who gave up their babies.

I am a new mother whose heart is overflowing with gratitude to a 15-year-old girl I have never seen. I understand that she is a beautiful, intelligent person who became pregnant accidentally and decided on her own that her baby should have a better life than she was able to provide for it, so she put it up for adoption.

As soon as our son is able to understand, I shall tell him about his "real" mother and what a courageous person she is.

In the meantime, I pray daily for her well-being and good fortune.

Sign me...

Blessed In New Jersey

Dear Blessed: Thank you for an appropriate letter for Mother's Day. I agree that giving up a child for its own good is the ultimate in unselfishness. God bless those mothers who did.

DEAR ABBY: My husband is a physician who has just passed his 50th birthday.

He tells all his male patients who reach 50 to slow down. If they smoke, he orders them to quit, but he's a three-pack-a-day man.

He puts all his overweight patients on diets, but he is considerably overweight himself and can't stay on a diet for two days. He insists that daily exercise is a must, but he doesn't exercise at all.

He says that an annual vacation is essential to good health, but he hasn't had a vacation in six years. And this will floor you: He wants all his patients to have a complete physical checkup every year, but he hasn't had one for 10 years.

What's wrong with him, and how can I get through to him?

Doctor's Wife

Dear Wife: He's human. He finds advice much easier to give than to take. You can get through to him (maybe) by insisting that he consult a colleague for a checkup. If he refuses, ask him to keep paying those life insurance premiums, so that you and your next husband can retire in comfort.

DEAR ABBY: I am an 11-year-old boy with a problem. My father died so long ago I don't even remember him, but Mom has a man living here at our house. He has been living here for about a year. Most all my friends know that my Mom is a widow, but what do I say when someone asks whose car is parked in our garage.

No Answer In Elgin

Dear No Answer: Don't lie. Tell them the car belongs to a friend of your mother's. It does, and he is.

DEAR ABBY: Since I read so much about mothers who can't get their teenagers to keep their rooms picked up, I must share this amusing incident with you:

My home is always neat — with the exception of my 15-year-old daughter's bedroom, which is a disaster. Drawers open, clothes thrown everywhere, bed unmade, etc.

I fussed, threatened, punished, but to no avail. Finally, I just gave up and kept her bedroom door closed so I wouldn't have to look at the mess.

Last week our house was robbed. For some strange reason, the burglars took only the television sets and cameras. The police came out to investigate. They asked me to accompany them while they checked every room in the house to find out if anything else was missing.

When they open the door to my daughter's bedroom, one gasped: "Good grief — they certainly ransacked this room!"

I calmly replied, "No. It always looks like this."

SUMMER MAINTENANCE

For regular summer maintenance, vacuum rugs and carpets weekly before the blown-in and tracked-in dirt gets ground in. Once grit gets embedded into the carpet fibers, it can cut and weaken them.

WARM WEATHER

Warm weather makes people more mobile. If friends are about to pop in on short notice, gather everything that's out of place and dump it into an empty basket you keep in the cleaning closet. Wipe ashtrays, stack newspapers, plump pillows. Give the bathroom and kitchen a once over. Wipe countertops clean. Close the doors of rooms you don't want on display. Relax.

Experts Offer Tips For Ladder Safety

CHICAGO (UPI) — If spring cleaning has you climbing the walls via a ladder, keep these safety tips in mind:

— Place the ladder on a firm, level surface.

— Use one that is long enough for the job. Many accidents are caused by someone trying to overreach from a too-short ladder, says a spokesman for Underwriters Laboratories Inc., an independent, non-profit product-testing company. UL says government figures show about 87,000 persons are hurt annually in falls from ladders.

— Before using a ladder, examine it for structural damage or deterioration, and never store it where it may become wet or damaged.

— Before climbing a stepladder, lock the spreader to keep it from folding.

— Remember that a straight ladder should extend at least three feet above the eave, gutter or roofline. The base should be a foot away from the wall for every four feet of length.

— If your ladder is metal, avoid contact with overhead electrical power lines or energized electrical circuits.

— Face the rungs and keep at least one hand on a ladder when you descend it.

Calling All Homemakers

By SYD MOORE, A.S.I.D

If someone were to ask, "What is the most important piece of furniture in a home?" in most cases the correct answer would be — the sofa, because it is generally the largest and major item in that room around which your entire home is planned — the living room.

Since it is the focal point in most living rooms, the selection of the right sofa is of utmost importance in planning the remainder of the room, and, in many cases, planning the rest of the house.

In selecting a sofa, the first thing to consider is the size of the sofa in proportion to the room and the place it is to be used. In some cases, manufacturers make the same sofa in several different sizes.

After the all-important matter of size has been settled, then you can consider such things as the shape, style, color, fabric and comfort.

For small living rooms, there is the love seat or two-seater sofa. In larger rooms, these "love seats" can be used in pairs. However, most people use regular sofas which vary in size from 60 to 100 inches in length and more. Convertible sofa-beds are also available in all styles of beautiful sofas.

ASSISTANCE ON THE WAY — Salvation Army staff social worker Evelyn Woods interviews client Margaret Duncan to determine what assistance is needed by her family. All potential clients of the Army are interviewed and their specific needs evaluated by staff members to determine what type of assistance can be most useful to the family.

STAFF MEETING — Lubbock Salvation Army unit commanding officer, Capt. Phil Murphy and Mrs. Capt. Murphy check daily activities with staff members, from left, Lanell Tates, secretary; Janie Ybarra, receptionist; and Elsa Romo, clothing room helper. Salvation Army Week is observed throughout the week. (Staff photos by Linn Scherwitz)

RECEIVING AND RECYCLING — Elsa Romo, clothing room helper, looks over newly received lots of clothing to determine condition and size. The Lubbock Salvation Army unit sent clothing and a canteen to tornado-stricken Wichita Falls.

CLOTHING PROJECT — Paula Contreras is the coordinator of the clothing room at the headquarters at 17th Street and Avenue K. Generous donations of used clothing by the community assure enough clothing for distribution to those who qualify.

ACCOUNTING TIME — Capt. Phil Murphy and bookkeeper Louise Stagner go over the financial records for the month. The Salvation Army work is supported by private contributions and by funds from the Lubbock United Way.

Salvation Army Provides Assistance, Hope To Needy

By CONNIE CHAPMAN
Family News Staff

Many persons think of the Salvation Army in terms of the services it provides in times of disaster or special need, such as the tornado which recently struck the Wichita Falls area. Assistance provided in the form of a food canteen and clothing at such times is invaluable in the recovery of such stricken areas.

In addition to such extraordinary services, however, the Salvation Army serves quietly and consistently throughout the year in the local community. During Salvation Army Week this week, the attention of the public is drawn to these less publicized but still valuable services.

While the staff working in the 17th Street and Avenue K headquarters tries to give needy persons whatever assistance is needed to see them through times of immediate crisis, the emphasis of the Army is on enabling persons to help themselves.

Persons approaching the Army for assistance are interviewed by a staff social worker or another staff member, who evaluates the needs of the family. The most common forms of assistance take the form of clothing grants or partial payment for food or housing costs.

Because funds which come from private donations and United Way allocations are limited, the interviewer will try to ascertain which, if any, of the existing public programs the client is eligible to apply for. If the client has already applied for such programs and been evaluated for eligibility and pressing needs still exist, the Salvation Army will try to close the gap.

One of the important programs of assistance is the clothing allotment. Generous community gifts of used clothing allow the Salvation Army to give eight items of clothing per person to those who qualify. This number may include shoes.

No money is given directly to clients. But the Army has an arrangment with some local grocery stores to honor food orders signed by a staff member.

Help with payment for housing rentals or utilities is handled in a similar manner.

Because costs in all of these areas have risen, the Salvation Army is trying especially hard to make the funds available to meet the needs of those who depend on them.

In addition to these services to families, another on-going service is for transients who need temporary help with meals, housing, and transportation-related expenses. The lodge accommodates a limited number of guests on a temporary basis. The organization also tries to find short-term employment for those who need it. Often persons stopping by to ask for help find those jobs right in the headquarters, doing jobs such as maintaining the facility and driving the clothing truck. Others may be referred to places like the Texas Employment Commission.

Many other ordinary activities — not related to crisis situations — make up a sizeable portion of the program of the Salvation Army, according to commanding officer Capt. Phil Murphy. Men's groups, two women's study groups and activities for boys and girls occur on a weekly basis and are an integral part of the program.

During the year, these groups send representatives to regional camps at the facility near Waxahatchie.

Capt. and Mrs. Murphy, who came to Lubbock this past fall, are in charge of the total program of the Lubbock unit.

PLUM GOOD

The best way to tell whether plums are ripe and ready to eat is to give them a very gentle squeeze. Ripe plums will yield to palm pressure and will have a slightly soft tip end. Store ripe plums in the refrigerator where they will remain fresh for several days. If your plums are not quite ripe, simply keep them at room temperature. In a few days they will be ready for plum-good feasting!

...When God Created Mothers...

When the good Lord was creating mothers He was into His sixth day of "overtime" when the angel appeared and said, "You're doing a lot of fiddling around on this one."

And the Lord said, "Have you read the specs on this order?"

She has to be completely washable, but not plastic;

Have 180 moveable parts ... all replaceable;

Run on black coffee and leftovers;

Have a lap that disappears when she stands up;

A kiss that can cure anything from a broken leg to a disappointed love affair;

And six pairs of hands;

The angel shook her head slowly and said, "Six pairs of hands ... no way."

"It's not the hands that are causing me problems," said the Lord. "It's the three pairs of eyes that mothers have to have."

"That's on the standard model?" asked the angel.

The Lord nodded. "One pair that sees through closed doors when she asks, 'What are you kids doing in there?' when she already knows. Another here in the back of her head that sees what she shouldn't but what she has to know, and of course the ones here in front that can look at a child when he goofs up and say, 'I understand and I love you' without so much as uttering a word."

"Lord," said the angel, touching His sleeve gently, "Come to bed. Tomorrow ..."

"I can't," said the Lord, "I'm so close to creating something so close to myself. Already I have one who heals herself when she is sick ... can feed a family of six on one pound of hamburger ... and can get a nine-year-old to stand under a shower."

The angel circled the model of a mother very slowly. "It's too soft," she sighed.

"But tough!" said the Lord excitedly. "You cannot imagine what this mother can do or endure."

"Can it think?"

"Not only think, but it can reason and compromise," said the Creator.

Finally, the angel bent over and ran her finger across the cheek. "There's a leak," she pronounced. "I told You You were trying to put too much into this model."

"It's not a leak," said the Lord, "it's a tear."

"What's it for?"

"It's for joy, sadness, disappointment, pain, loneliness and pride."

"You are a genius," said the angel.

The Lord looked somber. "I didn't put it there."

SAUCEPAN SOUFFLE

Butter
Grated Parmesan cheese
3 tbsps. butter
3 tbsps. flour
1 tbsp. instant minced onion
½ tsp. dry mustard
½ tsp. marjoram
1 cup milk
½ to ¾ cup (2 to 3 oz.) shredded Cheddar cheese
2 tbsps. grated Parmesan cheese, optional
4 eggs, separated
¼ tsp. cream of tartar

Butter bottom and sides of 1½-quart souffle dish, straight-sided deep casserole dish or ovenproof metal saucepan. Dust with Parmesan cheese.

In another saucepan melt butter. Blend in flour and seasonings. Cook, stirring constantly, over medium-high heat until mixture is smooth and bubbly. Stir in milk all at once. Cook, stirring constantly, until mixture boils and thickens. Remove from heat. Stir in cheeses until melted.

In small mixing bowl beat egg yolks at high speed until thick and lemon-colored, about five minutes. Blend small amount of cheese mixture into yolks. Stir yolk mixture into cheese mixture.

Wash and dry beaters. In large mixing bowl beat egg whites and cream of tartar at high speed, until stiff but not dry, just until whites no longer slip when bowl is tilted. Gently but thoroughly fold yolk mixture into whites. Carefully pour into prepared dish.

Bake in preheated 350 degree oven for dish or 375 degree oven for metal saucepan until puffy, delicately browned and souffle shakes slightly when oven rack is gently moved back and forth, 35 to 40 minutes. Serve immediately. Makes two servings.

SMOOTH SAILING — Joe Madden and Debbie Beck, Explorer Scouts, Post 806, take advantage of the sailing lessons at Maxey Park offered by the City Parks and Recreations Department. (Staff Photos by Milton Adams)

Sailing Provides Summer Entertainment

By LYNN HOHERTZ
Family News Staff

Sailing, once considered a rich man's sport, is rapidly becoming one of the most popular recreational pasttimes of people of all ages.

In response to local demand, the Lubbock Parks and Recreations Department offers sailing lessons.

The lessons, which are free to the public, are designed to familiarize the potential sailor with the boat and teach basic sailing concepts and safety rules.

Sailing involves controlling the power created by the wind on the sails to obtain as much forward momentum as possible. The wind on the sail exerts pressure, part of which acts to push the boat forward. The remainder of this pressure moves the boat sideways.

According to Ray Billingsley, sailing instructor, the first thing he teaches in the course is how to rig the sailboat. (Sunfish sailboats are used.) Rigging includes setting up the mast (the vertical piece of wood or metal on which the sails are set), running up the sail, setting the rudder (the board or plate attached to the stern and used for steering) and inserting the center board (a movable device similar to a keel that can be raised or lowered into the water from the center wall).

Once the basic parts of the sailboat are learned, Billingsley "talks the pupil through" sailing techniques. "It's a lot like teaching dancing," he said, "show and do."

The pupils then learn how to manipulate the boat around Maxey Lake, where the lessons are given. A successful maneuver includes making a triangle pattern around the lake and tacking (making headway against the wind), returning to the exact departure point.

Although this particular course doesn't heavily emphasize terminology, there are three basic sailing positions — beating, reaching and running.

Beating, pointing or sailing "on the wind" refers to the wind coming from ahead and to one side of the bow. A boat cannot sail directly into the wind.

Reaching or sailing off the wind is the fastest sailing position and involves tacking with the wind abeam (at right angles to the keel) or forward the beam (the width of the vessel).

Running or sailing before the wind takes place when the wind comes directly over the stern. This is the most difficult sailing position.

Billingsley said, however, that if a group desires a more technically geared session the Department will provide it.

"We try to teach enough basics so the pupils can practice," he said, "although it may take one to two years of sailing before becoming expert."

In sailing one is competing with the elements — the wind, weather and sea. Safety is of utmost importance.

"I don't allow horse play of any kind," he emphasized. Safety includes teaching students what to do if the boat capsizes. "If the boat turns over it is important not to panic and leave the side," he said. The course shows one how to "right" the boat by standing on the centerboard and pulling it over with body weight.

Using common sense concerning weather conditions is also important, he continued. One shouldn't attempt to sail when the wind is too brisk or not blowing at all.

Other safety suggestions include knowing the waters on which one sails, wearing life-jackets are all times and wearing proper clothing such as no-slip shoes.

Students are also taught responsibility for the care of the boat. After each use lines must be coiled, sails dried and wrapped and readied for the next sail.

For more information concerning sailing lessons, contact Maxine Mull, at Maxey Community Center, 762-6411.

Report Cards Show Education Progress

COLLEGE STATION (Special) — Report cards are important — but put them in perspective, says Dorothy Taylor, family life education specialist with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service.

A report card is a hint, a taste, a sample and an invitation to parents, she explains. Report cards are not a declaration of war between parents, children and teachers.

Daily encouragement — not a threat every six or nine weeks — motivates a child to learn, the specialist points out.

Tiny boxes on a report card cannot adequately express six or nine weeks of learning experiences, hundreds of activities and exercises, thousands of ideas and though exchanges.

Instead of heaping dismay upon a child for bad report card grades, assist him in learning the things he has evidently missed out on, Miss Taylor recommends.

School should provide an environment and a place for young children to learn skills that will help them on their way toward maturity

Report cards are indicators of progress, not a concrete report on how smart or dumb a child is, she adds.

BROKEN AND MENDED

AMSTERDAM (WNS) — Marie Friman was very considerate when she walked out of her fiance's life two years ago. Before leaving, she introduced him to her friend Anna Begeer, 26, and told him that she would make a perfect bride. Leo Veling has been married for one year to Anna, "and we have already been voted the ideal couple in our neighborhood," he said.

Surgeon Believes Stress Linked To Cancer Cause

NEW HAVEN, Conn. (AP) — Cancer sufferers who go to Dr. Bernard Siegal for treatment can expect to have meditation prescribed along with chemotherapy, radiation and other more common conventional treatments.

Siegal is a cancer surgeon who believes that a patient's mind can be one of the potent forces in curing the body's maladies.

Although there isn't clear proof, Siegal says he is convinced that unrelieved mental stress breaks down the body's ability to combat the cancer cells forming inside all the time.

Ulcers are a good example of the body telling the mind that "it's going in the wrong direction," he said. The same may be true of cancer, he added.

Many of the cancer patients he has treated during his 15-year medical practice have changed their lifestyle or had a traumatic experience within 18 months of the cancer's appearance, he said.

"Western society uses illness like Eastern society uses meditation. When we need a vacation from work, we have to get sick to get time off. We also get sympathy, which we don't when we are healthy. We learn to be sick instead of learning to be well," he said.

"Meditation, whether it be transcendental meditation or just sitting in a room relaxing for a half-hour twice a day, gets people back in touch with themselves and their inner guide, who can tell them what it is they should be doing," he said.

Siegal, who is associated with several other surgeons in New Haven, encourages his cancer patients to attend his weekly group therapy sessions, believing that through mental therapy patients help in their own treatment.

"If it all comes from outside you, if you feel that healing is done to you, then it will be harder to cure your cancer."

If that thinking is carried to the extreme, a patient may be beyond saving.

"Some people are just looking for a way out of their problems and getting cancer is one awful solution."

Siegal feels he is supported by findings of scientists who in recent years have linked stress with cancer. They also view meditation as one way to reduce the stress.

But the surgeon admits he is in a minority when he tells people that cancer is a psychosomatic illness and that only the patient can heal himself.

"I know I don't talk like a doctor," he said. "But I think that doctors have failed their patients. We've used everything to treat people except the patients themselves."

Olympics Mark Older Americans Month

Senior Citizens in the 15-county South Plains area will celebrate "Senior Round-up 1979" Tuesday and Wednesday at Lubbock Fair Park Coliseum. The activites will commemorate Older Americans Month, traditionally observed during May.

The Round-up will begin with registration at 1 p.m. Tuesday. A Health Fair will follow immediately and continue until 4:30 p.m. The fair will include health services and information. Participants may choose from many health-check stations, including sight, hearing, cardio-vascular and respiratory. A health film festival will also relate information on health items of interest to senior citizens.

The Outstanding Senior Citizens of 1979 will be honored at an awards banquet from 6-7:30 p.m. Tuesday. Following the banquet, area seniors will enjoy singing, kitchen band music and a "Swing-Your-Partner" dance.

The 1979 Senior Olympics will begin with registration at 8:30 a.m. Wednesday. A torch-lighting ceremony will follow at 10 a.m. Elder athletes may compete in the Walking Marathon, Hosreshoe Toss, Five-member Balloon Bust Relay, Bean Bag Throw, Softball Toss, Giant Tricycle Race and Wheelchair Race. Awards in the single-elimination competition will go to first, second and third places. The Olympic awards ceremony will be from 1-2 p.m.

Senior Round-up 1979 is coordinated by the South Plains Area Agency on Aging and by ACTION: RSVP and the Foster Grandparents.

State Savings and Loan is providing about $1500 worth of t-shirts for contestants in the event.

Tune In Tomorrow

By JON-MICHAEL REED

ALL MY CHILDREN: Frank learned from Caroline's letter that he is Carl's father. Tara was skeptical of Phil's Washington job offer. Brooke gave Dan the cold shoulder and zeroed in on Mark. Erica suddenly didn't approve of Brooke's intentions toward Mark. Ellen told Mark it's definitely over between them after she held a wedding reception for Devon and Wally. Myrtle ordered Eddie and Lettie Jean to steer clear of Kelly who grew closer to Linc after visiting Kitty's grave.

ANOTHER WORLD: Jamie told Ada that Blaine left him because he's a pauper, but Mac hired him. Buzz and Blaine put the bite on Iris for blackmail money. Rachel learned about Mac's affair with Janice. Vivien's new beau is Iris' doorman. Paul dined with Rose after having a blowup with Rita over Eileen and Joey. Dan broke off with Alice and reconciled with Susan. Phil camped out in Alice's backyard and he and Sally stole jewelry. Mike asked Karen to marry him. Morgan was smitten with Sally. Clarice and Larry were married. Angie threw away her birth control pills when she realized that Gwen has a chance of winning back Willis.

AS THE WORLD TURNS: Lisa found the Willows which was deserted except for strange-acting innkeeper Bennett Hadley, who brought in Dr. Bickford when she became ill. Ralph and Mary suspected that Joyce is secretly meeting a country-club chum, Bill Huntington, for afternoon tete-a-tetes. Ralph proposed to Mary. Valerie finally convinced Kate to stay at the farm. Melinda gave John the notes she stole of Bob's research project. Then she ran to Kim and confessed all. Kim ordered John to withdraw his project or she'll expose his blackmail. Dana reminisced with Bob about her years as a ballerina. Jay was turned down in his bid for a construction loan. Jane returned from Florida.

DAYS OF OUR LIVES: Neil was lovey-dovey with Kate. Julie was hospitalized for her burns. Marie nursed her. Laura insisted on helping her psychologically and Maggie blamed herself for the accident. Amanda postponed returning to Greg because her help is needed with Hope. Chris got his own apartment so that he and Amanda can be together privately. Donna returned with expensive gifts for Don and Marlena. Neil lied to Robert saying that Doug's artificial insemination donation didn't work out. Stephanie ingratiated herself further in Bob's life, much to Linda's dismay.

THE DOCTORS: Dr. Frankel agreed to be Nola's delivery doctor. Luke decided to stick by Missy, even though she admitted killing her stepfather who molested her years ago. Maggie considered having another child and her new patient, Laurie, reminded Colin of his dead daughter. M.J. doubted Colin's intentions toward her when she found him consoling Nola.

EDGE OF NIGHT: Cliff presented as evidence a video tape that showed a back view of a girl unmistakably Winter approaching Wade's body moments after he was shot. Winter denied being the woman. Elliott remodeled his new club with the help of Margo's lackey, Antoine. Deborah speculated that the robbery at Margo's apartment was an inside job. Upon examining closely the prosecutor's tape, Mike spotted the fact that the girl was wearing a different color coat collar than witnesses had testified seeing.

GENERAL HOSPITAL: Tracy swiped the signout sheets from the hospital which proved to Alan that Rick and Monica had been together. Alan walked out on Monica and later dated Susan. Mitch approved of Tracy's actions. Les continued tending Spence's boy, Matt, and Spence cast longing looks at her. Anne wants to adopt Jeremy but so do Jeff and Heather. Peter arranged further tests for Diana when she flipped after hearing a threatening call that Heather conned Larry Joe into taping. Laura figured that Scotty has changed his mind about the impending marriage. Bobbi worried that Luke's involved with syndicate dealings.

GUIDING LIGHT: Justin picked up the pieces when Mike split with Elizabeth for Phillip's sake. The Marler sister, Lanie, arrived to compete in a track meet. Eve was haunted by Lucille's hints that something happened between Ben and Amanda. Roger railed at Ross for not making Holly out to be a liar on the witness stand. Adam refused to give Roger loot to skip town and Roger reconsidered Mike's plea-bargaining offer if Roger squeals about Alan's involvement with Ramon. Diane goaded Ann about worshipping Mike from afar. Ed found Rita drinking after she heard Holly's rape testimony.

LOVE OF LIFE: Bambi is back in a catatonic state and only responds to Paul who agreed to escort her to her home in Prairie Falls. Van got a job working for a professor. Dr. Tucker spotted Tom and Liane wining and dining. Bruce advised Betsy that she shouldn't put Ben on a pedestal.

ONE LIFE TO LIVE: Pat learned about Adam's epilepsy, and he wants to call it quits with her. Edwina warned Herb that Dorian is using him as a pawn, after he was voted on to the hospital board. Danny was cool to Karen, who found a receptionist job. Tina cried to Mario when Greg announced he was leaving town after Talbot was sentenced to life in prison. A still-paralyzed Jack told Carla to get out of his life and return to Ed. Adam couldn't figure out who switched his medication for aspirin. Samantha doubted her wedding plans.

RYAN'S HOPE: Rae made lavish church wedding plans, but Frank must first get an annulment from Delia. The Feldmans and the Ryans advised Nancy and Pat that their relationship can't lead to a church-sanctioned marriage. Siobhan found herself drawn to Jack in a very non-sister-in-law manner, but thankfully her old beau Artie arrived. Seneca and Roger searched for Jill's pill supplier.

SEARCH FOR TOMORROW: Travis hired guards for Liza, then sent her back to Henderson. He reconciled with Martin and brought John into his confidence about fearing future murder attempts. Nick tailed Liza in order to catch Travis. Stephanie was counseled by a Reach For Recovery volunteer. Marc comforted Carolyn after she couldn't accept Gary's explanation that he loved both her and Laine for different reasons.

THE YOUNG AND THE RESTLESS: Suzanne survived the stab wound. Kay was sent to a shrink, but is catatonic. Jill refused to move out of Stu's. He offered her big bucks if she'll settle out of court. Nick pleaded honest intentions when Nikki learned he had interefered in dating plans with Greg. Lucas hesitated accepting Van's job offer, while Lance pushed him to join the company, unaware that Van plans to oust Lance.

Report Reveals Marriage Statistics

BY JEANNE LIVELY
Family News Staff

A recent Census Bureau report says that, despite reports to the contrary, marriage in this country has not gone out of style. Almost 95 percent of Americans get married at some point in their lives.

The report revealed some surprising statistics regarding marriages during the 1970s.

Most husbands and wives tended to marry those of the same race, age, religion and social class.

There were 421,000 biracial marriages (of 48 million U.S. couples getting married) in 1977.

Reported was a 92 percent increase of marriages between blacks and whites (132 percent in years 1970-77).

Approximately 762,000 marriages involved a mate of Spanish origin or of a different ethnic background.

In 1977, about half of all men had taken wives by age 21.6. Between 1970 and 1976, the median age rose by one year — to 22.7 for brides; by 1.4 years — to 25.0 for bridegrooms.

Marriage is popular in Lubbock County, according to the county clerk's office.

Licenses issued: 1974 — 2,588; 1975 — 2,551; 1976 — 2,622; 1977 — 2,749; 1978 — 2,664.

Kenneth R. Barnett (MSSW), a clinical social worker with the Associates for Family Development, says he is not surprised that marriage remains a favorite lifestyle among Americans.

"From my own practice," he commented, "I have noticed a reversal of the trend of the 60's when many couples decided merely to live together, rather than to marry. I think the trend is interesting because these people don't have to marry, since most of the social mores and standards that we used to have are just not there anymore.

"I think one of the most important reasons why people are choosing to marry involves security. Marriage, after all, is a stronger bond of commitment.

"Other people, I believe, are getting married because they want to have a family. Most of us still think identifying the baby by father and naming the baby are important considerations.

"Generally, most people desire a long-term relationship. There is just something about a kind of contract or agreement they are going to stay with each other for a long period of commitment, that makes a couple work harder at overcoming difficulties.

"I think it is a very positive thing that currently I am seeing so many couples who are trying to communicate better and in the process strengthening their marriages."

The small, diamond-shaped pane of glass used in lattice windows is called a quarrel.

Local Association Offers Facts On Speech, Hearing Problems

By CONNIE CHAPMAN
Family News Staff

During the month of May, designated both nationally and locally as Better Speech and Hearing Month, the public is becoming acquainted with the scope and intensity of the problems associated with speech and hearing difficulties.

In these closely related areas, as in so many others, statistics do not begin to tell the story in terms of human struggle and pain. However, some facts which the local professional association, the Texas South Plains Speech and Hearing Association, points out do give a "tip of the iceberg" picture of the magnitude of the problems.

•Hearing and Speech disorders constitute our nation's number one handicapping disorder.

•An estimated 22 million Americans suffer from communicative disorders, according to the Department of HEW.

•More than 93,000 Texas children are speech impaired, reports the TEA.

•Hearing and speech problems affect one out of every ten Americans.

•146,000 Texas school children have a language or learning disability.

•Most people with communications disorders could be helped medically, surgically, through hearing aids or with hearing rehabilitation.

•Direct federal expenditures for programs and services for those with speech language or hearing handicaps are an estimated $500,000,000 or more per year.

•One out of every 15 Americans suffer from uncorrected hearing handicaps.

•3.5 million youngsters between the ages of 4 and 7 years have a speech impairment

In recent years, an intensified effort has been made to locate and treat persons with these kinds of disorders. Special emphasis has been placed on locating such children through the Child Find programs. During these recent years, many more have been located and identified.

Early identification is the key to successful treatment and the reduction of frustration with learning experiences, according to Dr. Sharalee Pierce of the local association and director of the Texas Tech University Speech and Hearing Clinic.

How might a person recognize a speech or hearing problem, either in himself or in someone else? The national association gives four questions and says if the answer to any of them is a "yes," the person should receive a professional evaluation and possibly begin treatment. Thse questions are:

1. Is the individual's speech and/or language so different from others of the same age, sex, or ethnic group that it attracts unfavorable attention?

3. Does the individual appear to have difficulty with hearing or understanding speech?

4. Does the individual avoid communicating with others because he is self-conscious about his speech, hearing and/or language ability?

The Texas South Plains Speech and Hearing Association encourages persons to get in touch with the Tech clinic or any of the persons listed under the heading of speech therapist in the yellow pages of the phone book

Speech language and hearing disabilities are also dealt with in the special education programs of the Lubbock public schools. The next segment of this series will detail one such program.

'Care Companions' Cut Hospital Bills

By PATRICIA McCORMACK
UPI Health Editor

If a good friend or relative had a stroke or heart attack, would you be willing to move in and help care for him once he's out of danger and is recuperating?

You would be called a "care companion," and by being on the scene and pitching in you could cut the daily cost in this era of soaring hospital bills by 40 percent.

Moving in, by the way, wouldn't cost you a cent. You would have a nice twin bed in a room with the patient and take your meals with him in a cafeteria.

The charges for room and board for you and your friend or relative would total $204 a day and Blue Cross, Medicaid or Medicare or other third party payers would pick up the bill.

Even with the added expenses of your meals and bed, the bill will be only 60 percent of what it would be if the patient alone stayed in a regular hospital bed.

You would also attend health instruction programs prescribed for the dear friend or relative. You would learn, along with the patient, how a diet or lifestyle must be adapted to give one the greatest number of nearly trouble-free years.

There will be lectures on exercises, on limitations. Video casettes will help show you and the friend or relative how to cope. The casettes also will explain all about stroke or heart attack or ulcers or whatever.

You would need to know all those things. In theory, once the patient is discharged, the two of you would be living together. You would be helping to provide care and seeing that the doctor's, nutritionist's, and therapist's orders are followed.

This plan, aimed at holding back hospital cost rises and improving a patient's adjustment to life with a disability, goes into operation April 11 when the nation's only Cooperative Care Unit opens.

HEW Secretary Joseph Califano toured the place the other day, praised it, and said it's a demonstration for the country in this era of ever-rising hospital expenses.

The center, featuring hospital care of the future, is at the New York Medical Center. The medical center is so well managed, by the way, that its expenses last year went up only 6.6 percent, compared to the nine percent and more at hospitals nationwide.

The president of the university is economist Dr. John C. Sawhill, formerly head of the U.S. Energy Office. Dr. Ivan L. Bennett, provost and dean of the medical school, and Ivan G. Wilmot, university executive vice president, are at the helm of the medical center.

The cooperative care is part of a medical center innovative program to provide quality health care at more economical levels.

It is in the new $24.5 million Arnold and Marie Schwartz Health Care Center linked to the NYU hospital for acute medical and surgical conditions.

Another part of the University's plan to lower costs of medical services is a one-day surgery unit at the new Health Care Center.

Here, ambulatory surgery will be done. Patients will walk in in the morning, have any one of 135 procedures, including tonsillectomies or simplified surgical sterilizations, and walk out the same day.

The cost will be $155 per operation, even with a general anesthesia. This is much lower than if the patient had to check into the regular acute care hospital for the surgery.

For this would be added, for example, the cost of the hospital room, currently $215 a day!

Martin Begun, one of the administrators, said the day surgery center operations will include mild hernias, scraping the lining of the uterus, setting fractures, skin grafts.

Also there will be X-ray examinations of the bladder (cystoscopy) and bronchoscopy, giving doctors a look at the interior of the bronchial tree in the chest, a part of the respiratory system.

Initially, about 1,600 operations will be performed a year. The number could go up to 6,000 a year in the future, officials noted.

The rooms for patients and care companions look much like motel rooms. The beds, not the hospital kind, are low.

There are attractive drapes, bedspreads, carpets, lamps and pictures.

But the rooms include some patient aids: handrails and grab bars in the bathroom, an emergency call system, handheld shower heads, low windows and some special showers for wheelchair patients.

Patients will go to a therapeutic center for medicines and lab tests. They will be on the move as much as possible.

The cafeteria on the top floor of the 15-story unit has magnificent views of the East River and midtown Manhattan. It will give patients on special diets practice in making the proper selections, a dietician at his side to prompt when necessary.

Elevators, by the way, beep at each stop. Two beeps for the second floor. Three, the third and so forth. This is for blind patients.

Selected patients will enter Cooperative Care duing the acute but recuperative phase of an illness or following major surgery at any of the university hospitals. These will not be days added to the regular stay; they will just be days in a different place.

Sawhill and other officials are proud the new unit was built without one cent from tax funds. All the money is from private sources. There was no money available from federal government for this reason: Uncle Sam doesn't ear-mark funds for such innovative programs attacking hospital costs.

"We hope our efforts will ... be emulated by private university hospitals throughout the country," Sawhill said.

"For never before in our history has health been so important and sickness so expensive.

"Never before has the axiom 'I can't afford to be sick' meant literally that the cost of hospital care could be financially disastrous to an individual and his entire family.

"We are joining in the struggle to reduce hospital costs, to take the threat out of illness and its expense out of old age, to reduce its impact on the poor and those of moderate incomes, and to protect against lifelong savings being wiped out due to an extended illness."

Cooking Habits Show Lifestyle, Attitude

By ELIZABETH PRICE
American Library Assn.

When my 10th college reunion questionnaire came recently, it consisted of questions about political stance and sexual habits, with a sprinkling of queries on career commitment. The answers, presumably, would show how alumnae of a prestigious eastern women's college have changed — and, by extension, how society has changed in the tumultuous decade since 1968.

But I felt uncomfortable with the questionnaire. Why concentrate exclusively on politics and sex, I wondered. Wouldn't it be valuable to ask about our daily domestic routine as well? Why not ask us so-called liberated women how we managed the everyday chores once labelled "women's work?"

The questions I wanted to ask concerned cooking, that most essential and ancient of arts. How, why, when and for whom do you cook? Is it a pleasure or a chore?

California cooking teacher Joyce Goldstein also believes that cooking style reflects lifestyle. The way you relate to food, she writes, reflects the way you feel about life. And a healthy attitude about preparing and sharing food can enrich every aspect of your life.

"Feedback" contains lots of terrific recipes, but it's more than just a cookbook. It's a book about cooking. Trained as an artist, Goldstein writes beautifully about meditative cooking, the artistic, creative experience of getting to know yourself through preparing food.

She also discusses the communicative power of cooking, which is so great that Eastern gurus believe they can be poisoned by unlovingly prepared food. What Goldstein calls "high-energy cooking" is really a '70s way of saying what we like to think our grandmothers knew instinctively — that making meals and sharing them with others can be one of the most joyous of human social experiences.

Using personal anecdotes, Goldstein tells how her students "are revived by learning to enjoy cooking. A grief-struck widower, a lonely divorcee, a nervous bride whose mother and mother-in-law are both gourmet cooks — these are among the fledgling cooks nourished by her empathetic and infectious approach.

But looking to the 21st Century, what about predictions of world food shortages? "Future Food" is an extensive survey of all the alternative food sources scientists are now studying to keep the human race from starving to death — from the rather well-known soy meat analogs now being marketed, to a tasteless peanut product used to fortify baked goods, to cellulomonas, a single-celled bacterial protein some scientists think holds great nutritional promise.

Although veteran science writer Barbara Ford is a chatty and readable writer, she deals with some fairly technical material here, and this book may contain more information than the average food enthusiast wants to consume. But it's interesting reading all the way and the technical parts are punctuated by intriguing examples of once and future foods.

For instance, would you believe that "Eating With Insects" is a cookbook and not a treatise on socializing with uncouth humans? Or that if all the rice straw in the United States were used to produce high-protein, pleasant-tasting oyster mushrooms, each American could have 200 pounds of the fungus annually? Or that tremendous research has gone into ways to reduce the flatulence factor in beans? Or that termites are the world's second most popular insect food? They have to try harder because grasshoppers are number one.

In reviewing the history of dietary practices dissimilar from the modern American's, Mrs. Ford raises some particularly interesting points. For instance, if you've ever wondered why both beans and rice appear in a typical Mexican meal, you'll be interested to know there's a reason for the double-dose of starch. Beans and rice contain complementary proteins. If eaten at the same time, their amino acids provide the raw materials for your body to synthesize a complete protein.

Similarly, Middle Easterners combine chick peas and wheat, while Pakistanis and Indians mix lentils or other beans with rice, wheat or some other grain. When Mrs. Ford wondered aloud to an expert on ancient eating how early cultures knew that such combinations were good for them, he suggested "Maybe the ones that didn't figure it out died off."

Which brings us to Gary Null's "The New Vegetarian," a book that shares both practical and scientific information on an increasingly popular food alternative. Director of the Nutrition Institute of America and a New York radio and television personality, Null advocates vegetarianism, but his book will be useful to meat-eating readers, as well.

Unfortunately, the opening chapters on protein needs are rather technical and ponderous for someone who has not read extensively about nutrition. I say unfortunately, because after the first section, the book picks up in readability and relevance.

Null's graphic descriptions of meat, poultry and dairy production methods in the US today are almost enough to make one embrace vegetarianism. "The New Vegetarian" paints an extremely uncompliментary picture of agri-business, with its dependence on chemical additives for raising and processing livestock.

The book also discusses common methods of growing and processing vegetables and explains the best ways to select, prepare and combine ingredients for a healthful vegetarian menu. Null points out, for instance, that cooking methods can enhance or deplete nutrients, and that there's a lot to be gained from keeping the cooking stock to drink or use in other dishes.

"The New Vegetarian" is obviously written by a man who's committed to vegetarianism and so has a somewhat evangelistic tone. Still, it's a good place to start if you've had serious thoughts about shaking your typically American Meat-and-potatoes mentality.

PLANNING DRIVE — John Montford, center, honorary house-to-house chairman of the local MS society, discusses plans with Jay Wischkaemper, left, board chairman, and David Dea, board secretary. (Staff photos by Linn Scherwitz)

MS SOCIETY DRIVE — Steve Andres, left, MS board member, discusses plans for the annual fund drive with Coy Dean of Slaton, treasurer. The local campaign will continue until Father's Day in June and include a house-to-house campaign.

MS Society Begins Month-Long Drive

By FRANCES LOWE
Family News Editor

Mother's Day marks the beginning of the fund-raising campaign for the National Multiple Sclerosis Society.

Funds realized through the house-to-house campaign, the Read-a-thon in the schools, and other special events during the month-long drive between Mother's Day and Father's Day will be used to support research and patient services.

As part of the campaign, BPO Does and KLLL Radio will spnsor a benefit dance for Muscular Dystrophy from 9 p.m. to 1 a.m. Saturday at the Elks Lodge, 3045 Slide Road. Robie Landwell and Sweet Country will provide the entertainment. For more information, call 791-4821 or 799-5632.

Among the activities of the local MS chapter are a monthly clinic for victims and their families; health care courses; provision of wheelchairs and other equipment; home visits, group therapy and activities and educational programs designed to acquaint the public with the disease, its symptoms and management as well as with the work of the society.

Some 40 percent of the funds realized locally will support research through the national society; the other 60 percent will stay in the 23-county area to support MS patient services.

Multiple Sclerosis is a disease of the brain and spinal cord which interferes with the brain's ability to control such functions as seeing, walking and talking.

It is the most common central nervous system disease among young adults, striking usually between the ages of 20 and 40. Women are affected slightly more often than men, and the disease occurs more frequently in temperate zones and in areas with high standards of sanitation.

Early symptoms are usually slight and go away without treatment, but as time goes on they become more numerous and severe. A typical pattern is a short period of acute symptoms, followed by an easing or disappearance of symptoms for weeks, months or even years. Symptoms vary depending on the part of the nervous system affected.

The cause and cure are unknown and one of the goals of the MS fund drive is to provide research monies needed to conquer the disease.

The effects of MS can be minimized with proper management and support, and the patient services provided by the local society are an attempt to meet these needs. MS victims are able to lead full and productive lives with the support of service agencies and their families.

Baked Ham Remains Favorite Main Dish

COLLEGE STATION (Special) — Baked ham, juicy and flavorful, makes a big hit anytime of the season, says Marilyn Haggard, foods and nutrition specialist with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service.

Therefore, appearance, inspection marks and the number of people to be served are pertinent in the ham selection:

Look for the inspection marks that indicate that the meat was inspected and passed by the United States Department of Agriculture.

Choose hams with a higher proportion of lean to fat and bone.

Fresh hams should have a grayish-pink or red color — cured hams, a deep pink color.

Size — allow one-half pound per person for bone-in hams.

Ham, as well as other pork products, are high in nutritive value and can ease into any calorie-conscious diet.

It is rich in protein and thiamine, as well as the other B-vitamins and iron, too, the specialist continues.

Calorie-wise, a three-ounce serving of cured ham, fat trimmed off, contains about 160 calories.

Preparation-wise, hams are best when roasted in an open, shallow pan with no water added.

Some tips on cooking ham are:

It is easier to remove the rind from the ham when it is hot.

Follow cooking directions on the wrapper or container when available.

A shallow pan is better than a deep one for roasting.

A rack under the ham holds meat up from drippings and allows heat circulation.

A meat thermometer is the best guide to the doneness of ham.

For easier slicing, allow 15 to 20 minutes after removing it from the oven.

To eliminate the fuss of carving the ham at the last minute or even at the table, here is a recipe that calls for slicing the ham before putting it in the oven.

BAKED STUFFED HAM

1 2½-lb. canned ham
1/3 cup chopped onion
1/3 cup chopped celery
3 tbsps. butter
2¼ cups fresh bread cubes
½ cup chicken broth
1 tbsp. minced fresh parsley
1 egg

Cut ham into 10 slices (3/8-inch thick), and place on foil-lined jelly roll pan.

Saute onion and celery in melted butter in skillet until tender.

Combine bread cubes, broth, egg, parsley and sauteed vegetables in large bowl. Mix lightly but well.

Arrange stuffing between slices, leaving two slices between stuffing layers. Tie securely with string. Cover loosely with foil.

Bake at 350 degrees for one hour. Remove foil and continue baking one more hour or until stuffing registers 165 degrees on meat thermometer.

Remove from oven. Let stand 10 minutes. Makes six servings.

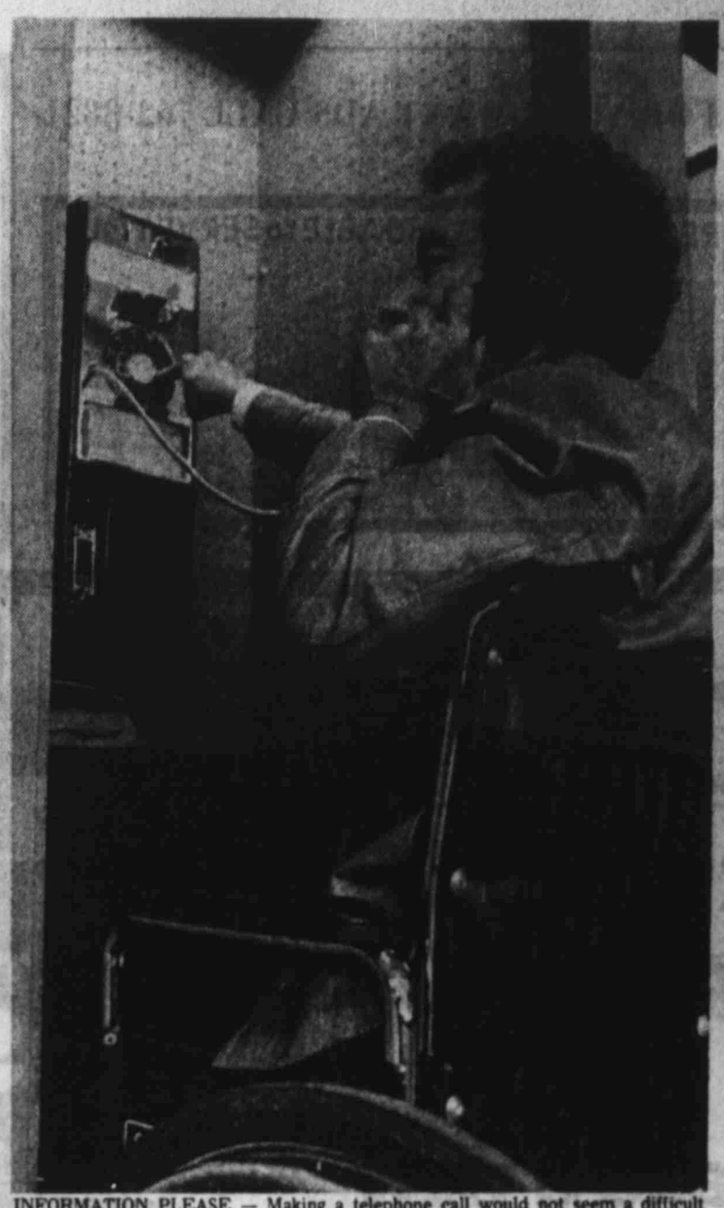
EASY ACCESS — Under law, public buildings must be totally accessible to handicapped persons. The Federal Building is one of the most accessible in Lubbock. David Miller, left, finds entrance to the building in a wheelchair simple by way of this graduated ramp. As the unidentified man illustrates, the only other way to reach the door is up two steps, something David could do only with help.



INFORMATION PLEASE — Making a telephone call would not seem a difficult task to most people. However, reaching the telephone would be impossible for David if there were folding doors in front of it or the position of the telephone were out of his reach. This telephone in the Federal Building is designed for people in wheelchairs. Without a door, the entrance is 30-inches wide; the coin-slot is 54 inches from the floor, making it within reach of someone in a wheelchair.

THE APPEARANCE OF EASE — David seems to have mastered the problem of entering this rest room. However, in the return trip, he found he could not leave without help. After he pulled the first door open, he found himself caught in the small foyer. The outside door opens into the foyer and David could not get close enough to the door to open it without entangling his wheelchair.

Structural Barriers Hinder Handicapped

By BEVERLY O'BRIANT
Family News Staff

Recently, President Carter established the third week of May as National Architectural Barrier Awareness Week.

He stated, "Architectural and other barriers often keep millions of Americans from participating in and contributing to our society. These barriers come in all shapes and sizes — from a six-inch curb and inaccessible bus to an unbrailled menu and uncaptioned news broadcast."

President Carter has long been a friend of the handicapped. Last year in his address to the White House Conference on Handicapped Individuals, he pointed out that eighteen percent of the U.S. population has some disability. In a recently published book on accessibility these statistics were given to indicate the magnitude of the problem.

"There are 332,000 veterans of World War II, Korea and Vietnam; 2 million children with orthopedic handicaps; 250,000 Americans of all ages use wheelchairs; 13.4 million are hearing impaired, 750,000 of them deaf; 6.5 million are vision impaired, 1 million of them blind; 6.5 million mentally retarded; 100,000 babies each year are born with congenital impairments; disabling injuries occur at the rate of 1.2 million a year. Every day, 1,000 Americans pass their 65th birthday, entering the sphere of geriatric diseases, arthritis, heart disease, problems with vision and hearing."

According to federal law, public buildings or buildings built with federal or state funds must be accessible to the handicapped. However, this is not required of privately-owned businesses or facilities. Therefore, many barriers still face people in the United States who are in some way disabled.

David Miller, in the photos above, illustrated some of the problems faced in Lubbock. In a recent interview, he and Rusty Thornton, a law student at Texas Tech University, discussed the difficulties they have encountered here.

The greatest problem the pair have found is in the floor plan of many restaurants and bars. The current trend in decor is multi-level seating. Aesthetically, this may be a good idea, but it essentially barricades people in wheelchairs from entrance. Rusty, who is in an electric wheelchair, cannot jump the 2-to 6-inch steps. The only way he is able to enter is with the help of four strong men.

Many buildings, both businesses and homes, have one or more steps leading to the door. Unless a ramp is also provided, access to the building is impossible in a wheelchair. Other features of an accessible entrance are doorways 32-inches wide beside revolving doors and elevators in multi-storied buildings. Rusty also noted that most buildings in Lubbock do not have accessible rest rooms, although he said, "it would be nice if we could just get into the door."

The most accessible shopping area in Lubbock is the South Plains Mall. Services established for the convenience of the public have also helped the handicapped. Electric doors and drive-up tellers at banks are valuable to persons who are disabled.

Another problem in Lubbock is the public transportation system. The buses are able to accommodate a person in a wheelchair, but the handicapped person must notify the bus line office 48 hours in advance and the buses do not run after 5 p.m. The only alternative to that is a van with a lift, which can be very expensive.

Those persons who are able to drive with or without use of hand controls may find non-handicapped people parked in the spaces reserved for the handicapped. Even if the space is available, in many cases the parking space is not large enough to accommodate a van or lacks room to unload a wheelchair.

The answer to these problems is a public awareness of the difficulties and the willingness of that public to make the necessary alterations to enable the handicapped to participate in whatever activities they choose.

THE IMPOSSIBLE TASK — David struggles to reach a drink on the top selection rack of this vending machine. From a seated position, depositing the proper change can be difficult, selecting a snack from one of the higher racks in this vending machine might easily be impossible. In this particular snack room, only the microwave oven and cigarette machine could be used easily by a person in a wheelchair.

ON THE OTHER HAND — This rest room entrance appears to cause difficulty for David with the warning to "Please Step Up." However, the sign is not for the benefit of the handicapped, but for others who might trip on the small ramp added to help a person in a wheelchair through the second door. The large foyer enabled David to easily open the doors, allowing space for the wheelchair on opening.

CANCER / ANSWER LINE

A garage mechanic explains: "I know that it takes time to tell whether or not a person is cured of cancer. I would like to know how long?"

ANSWERline: The decision as to when a patient may be considered cured of cancer is one that must be made by his or her physician after careful examination for any possible recurrence of the disease after treatment. For most forms of cancer, five years is the accepted time. While all cancer patients have to be followed medically for the rest of their lives, some may be considered cured after one year, others after three years. For some cancer patients, cure takes longer than five years. But in general, five years cancer-free after treatment is an important yardstick.

An airline steward writes: "I have relatives on the Danish island of Bornholm, and they tell me that their children are being taught, at a very early age not to smoke cigarettes. What kind of a program is that, and what are we doing here?"

ANSWERline: A very important study was done on Bornholm to see if new ways could be found to discourage smoking among children. An all-out campaign aimed at parents and children is being carried out through the schools and mass media. Among other findings, the survey showed that children under 11 are more receptive to information about tobacco than older children. Therefore, long-term educatinal efforts are necessary to keep the youngsters' anti-smoking motivation high as they grow older. A recent study also showed that it is important to begin the anti-smoking message in the early elementary grades. This will continue to be part of ACS efforts over the next five years when the ACS hopes to reduce smoking among young people by at least fifty percent.

A mother of two asks: "Just how effective is the Pap test in detecting cancer?"

ANSWERline: The Pap test involves studying samples of uterine cells on a glass slide under a microscope to detect abnormality. When this work is done by qualified laboratory technicians, the results are 95 percent accurate in diagnosing cancer of the neck of the uterus (called cerival cancer). High accuracy is not the only advantage: the Pap test can diagnose precancerous conditions and detect cancer itself even before the appearance of symptoms. When it is a matter of another common form of uterine cancer, cancer of the body of the womb (called endometrial cancer) the Pap test is only about 60 percent accurate, but still useful. For the best protection, women of all ages should have regular complete pelvic examinations and Pap tests and should be aware of the importance of checking with a physician if unusual or unexpected bleeding or discharge occurs. Contrary to what many women believe, one pelvic test is not enough. Both forms of uterine cancer can be successfully treated if they are detected in an early stage and routine examinations on a schedule your physician thinks best can help save your life. Cervical cancer was once the greatest cancer killer of American women, but thanks largely to the Pap test, the death rate has been cut by 65 percent since the 1930s.

Real To Reel

By William D. Kerns

A bit of this, a bit of that...

In 1968, writer-director George Romero created a cult classic, a black and white horror film called "Night Of The Living Dead" which terrified audiences and gave new meaning to that timeworn phrase "you are what you eat." But he wasn't satisfied. So now, 11 years later, he has come out with a sequel called "Dawn Of The Dead," and it may very well be the most gruesome, brutal, gory, scary — and yes, witty — horror film ever released. It is also a film about which the public should be warned.

Why? Well, because moviegoers never seem to really believe a movie can be as brutal as the descriptions pinned to it. Viewers were warned via reviews about the "vile language" in the recent Richard Pryor concert-film, and yet some still walked out telling Fox Theater manager Harold Lieck they had no idea the verbage could be so cruel. This is not to say the Pryor film was bad. It wasn't. But that does not eliminate the importance of warning viewers who might be offended by the subject material.

The same goes for "Dawn Of The Dead." I loved the movie, and will save the analysis for a more complete critique. However, even in advance, viewers should be warned that this is not your run of the mill violence. The dead return to life to chow down on the living, and this is depicted in graphic detail. The only way to kill one of the undead is to wipe out its brain — whether by bullet, machete or screwdriver — and this, too, is depicted in graphic detail. There is much more to the film: it's social satire and sense of humor, for example. But the scenes of gore are the ones which stay with the viewer.

For this reason, the film is being treated — and rightfully so — as an X-rated picture.

Romero did not submit the film for rating to the Motion Picture Association of America. That's why it carries no rating. And the only film rating which can be self-applied is an X. South Plains Cinema manager Robert Hurley noted before an advance screening that he was waiting to check out the picture's content before deciding whether it would be treated as an R or an X for ticket sales. Judging from radio ads stating that "no one under 17 will be admitted," it seems he's wisely opted for the latter.

It's not that a 17-year-old can handle this film any better than a 16-year-old. It's just that parents, too many of them anyway, have been lax to the point of taking their children with them when they want to see an R-rated movie — and those kids would be having nightmares for weeks if forced to view "Dawn Of The Dead."

Even our police reporter said she had nightmares for several nights after seeing the film — and she hasn't been a kid for quite a while.

But for those who love horror movies, those who love being shocked and scared and challenged, "Dawn Of The Dead" is definitely for you. It is both brutal and deserving of debate, and I suspect it will probably end up just like its predecessor five years from now — namely, a classic. The original "Night Of The Living Dead" is now part of the distinguished film collection at the Museum of Modern Art. "Dawn Of The Dead," which has been playing to overflow crowds the past few months in Europe under the title "Zombies," will not be forgotten, either.

And by 1988, Romero says he will complete his trilogy with a final film called "Day Of The Dead." I doubt if some viewers will be ready for him even then...

Been dreaming of writing screenplays? Now you can get a little help in the learning process.

A special course for film writers called "The Cinematic Approach" will be offered June 4-29 at Texas Tech University. The course, according to publicity, "is created for all persons interested in film writing from the amateur to the professional. The course will: develop and improve skills in analyzing and slecting stories and materials for script writing; provide practical experience in writing a film story; highlight important areas in which a script may be marketed; and provide an overview of the general film writers industry regulations."

The instructor will be Vera Culwell, director of the story department at Universal Studios from 1967 to 1979. She has worked with writers, employment agreements, purchase contracts, story analyzing and story editing. Throughout her more than 30 year career she has been employed by Regal Films, Desilu, Monogram and Republic Pictures, as well as several California universities.

Early enrollment is advaised, as the course is limited to 25 participants.

Those desiring prices, brochures or further information should contact Dennis A. Harp, head of the telecommunication division of the Department of Mass Communications at Tech, as soon as possible. Housing and academic credit can also be discussed at this time.

A recent Associated press story stated that Kevin McClory and Paradise Film Productions had been granted approval to use Sean Connery in a James Bond film titled "Warhead" (original title was "James Bond Of The Secret Service"). However, United Artists Pictures, which has held the rights to the Ian Fleming stories, immediately sent out the following notice to the nation's film critics: "United Artists announced today that press reports claiming the courts had given McClory a go-ahead and that the controversy with respect to his right to the use of James Bond: 007 in a film has been settled, were wholly untrue."

So the debate rages on — and the only thing we can be sure of is that the new Bond film with Roger Moore, titled "Moonraker," will open June 29 at the Winchester Theater in Lubbock.

The Universal Picture titled "Walk Proud" will no doubt be released. But when is anybody's guess.

"Walk Proud," which stars Robby Benson as a Puerto Rican gang member, was originally titled "Gang." It was pulled out of release after the furor arose over the violence reportedly inspired (but never proven) by such gang-related films as "The Warriors" and "Boulevard Nights." Booked to open at Showplace Six in Lubbock, manager Steve Richersen said recently that the film had been dropped from the theater's booking sheets.

Robert Redford has been having his problems of late. Though his picture "The Electric Horseman" should be out by the fall, many thought he'd quit movies entirely. After all, his last screen appearance was a controversial two-minute cameo in "A Bridge Too Far," and his last starring role was in "All The President's Men" in 1976. Now he's making a prison picture in Ohio called "Brubaker" and, three months into filming, director Bob Rafelson was fired.

So with Lord knows how much footage already shot, Stuart Rosenbeg was flown in to take over the directing chores.

Here's a film we can all look forward to with nervous anticipation: the live action version of "Popeye," with direction by Robert Altman and television's comedic sensation Robin Williams signed to play the spinach-chewing title character.

Another "Jaws" sequel? Well, sort of.

A new comedy titled "Jaws 3 — People 0" will be produced in the fall, a spoof of the enormously successful shark movies in the tradition of "Animal House." Publicity states it is "designed to combine the thrills of the one with the lunacy of the other." Richard D. Zanuck and David Brown, who produced "Jaws," will be executive producers and National Lampoon chief Matty Simmons, who co-produced "Animal House" with Ivan Reitman, will be the producer.

Simmons is expected to write tbe original storyline, a parody on the making of a movie about a killer shark, with three Lampoon editors to be named as screenwriters.

Belated congratulations go out to David Cagle, whose 16 millimeter film "Shoes On The Road" took first place at the recent Amateur Film Festival at Texas Tech University. Second place went to a witty Super 8 millimeter effort by Brian McLean called "Dream Machine."

Who says the critics and movie fans know everything about the Academy Awards? According to a report in the May 7 issue of Boxoffice Magazine, "Karen Sassman, a housewife, was the grand prize winner in the San Antonio Light's annual Academy Awards (prediction) contest. She didn't see even one of the nominated movies. Her prize was a season pass or its equivalent to every major theater chain in San Antonio."

A look at upcoming film bookings in Lubbock see the following not-so-new pictures making a comeback in the next few weeks: "Grease," "Coming Home," "101 Dalmations," "The Lord Of The Rings," "Jaws" and "Hooper." We'll also get a new James Bond chapter, "Moonraker," and the followiung sequels: "The Apple Dumpling Gang Rides Again," "Rocky II: Redemption" and "Beyond The Poseidon Adventure." Then there's the "prequel" called "Butch And Sundance: The Early Years."

And I still haven't been convinced that "Battlestar Galactica," opening Friday at the South Plains Cinema, is a new movie...

Sci-Fi 'Alien' To Arrive June 22

NEW SCI-FI FILM DUE — "Alien," a new science fiction film which looms as one of the biggest 1979 releases, will begin a long run at the South Plains Cinema in Lubbock on June 22. In the above scene from the film, three astronauts make their way across an uncharted planetoid.

NEW YORK (Special) — The fascinations of deep space provide a cinematic challenge which director Ridley Scott meets with astonishing results in Twentieth Century-Fox's futuristic suspense-thriller "Alien," opening on June 22 at the South Plains Cinema in Lubbock.

Produced with breathtaking imagination by Gordon Carroll, David Giler and Walter Hill and utilizing some of the most innovative and spectacular special effects ever filmed, "Alien" plunges the viewer into a maelstrom of terror and suspense.

The screenplay by Dan O'Bannon, based on a story by O'Bannon and executive producer Ronald Shusett, tells of seven astronauts — five men and two women — working on a battered commercial space-tug, far away in space and time, who encounter an awesome galactic horror. The surprising character revelations which occur during their desperate attempt to combat this mysterious force provides seven extraordinary performances from the film's seven stars — Tom Skerritt, Sigourney Weaver, Veronica Cartwright, Harry Dean Stanton, John Hurt, Ian Holm and Yaphet Kotto.

Director Scott worked closely with special effects director Brian Johnson and supervisor Nick Allder, as well as noted artists H.R. Giger and Ronald Cobb, to evolve a totally original concept of space, while Academy Award winner Jerry Goldsmith has contributed a brilliant and evocative score.

Work Set On 'Gigolo'

HOLLYWOOD (Special) — John Bailey has been signed on to serve as cinematographer on "American Gigolo," starring Richard Gere. Paul Schrader is set to direct from his own original screenplay. Lauren Hutton, Hector Elizondo and Nina Van Pallandt have also been announced for the film.

Bailey comes to "American Gigolo" having recently completed an assignment as director of photography on Tony Bill's production of Michael Pressman's "Boulevard Nights." He also recently picked up a credit completing the principal photography on "Winter Kills," starring Jeff Bridges, after that film had been on hiatus for nearly two years. Bailey only recently moved up to the ranks of cinematographer, after having already collected an impressive list of credits as a camera operator on Terrence Malick's "Days of Heaven," Robert Altman's "Three Women" and Robert Benton's "The Late Show."

Former Child Model Hits 'Jackpot' With Show

NEW YORK (Special) — The British television series, "Upstairs, Downstairs," about the lives of a titled English family in Edwardian times, may very well have catapulted the lovely young British actress, Lesley-Anne Down, to international fame. But the reviews of her recent starring effort in "The Great Train Robbery," as well as her image gracing the March 1979 cover of Life Magazine, definitely cinched the claim.

Suddenly the former child model and actress of small roles — in a number of what she describes as "forgettable" English films and plays in London suburban theatres — finds herself a hot new star...and her china doll looks and screen sexuality compared to such legendary beauties as Vivien Leigh, Marilyn Monroe, Elizabeth Taylor, and Sophia Loren.

Although "The Great Train Robbery" in which Sean Connery and Donald Sutherland also starred could not be deemed a critical success, the alluring Down, who portrayed Connery's cunning mistress and trusted accomplice in the recreation of the century old heist, garnered rave reviews by such leading critics as Franch Rich of Time Magazine, who unabashedly wrote:

"There are flashes of excitement in 'The Great Train Robbery' but the thrills have little to do with locomotives or crime. This film's heat is generated almost exclusively by Lesley-Anne Down...Yet this actress is not merely another talented comedienne: she also has the voluptuous figure and classic features of an oldtime movie star. When she strips down to black silk undies and slithers under the sheets with Connery, the audience gets a dizzying whiff of pure sex worthy of Loren or Monroe...The great train robbery may well have been the crime of its century, but it looks like petty theft compared with Down's ability to steal a scene."

Arthur Knight wrote in his Hollywood Rerporter review: Down "looking excitingly like Elizabeth Taylor in her prime."

A model since the age of 10, the 26-year-old brunette, whose delicate features and translucent skin resemble finely carved porcelain, has become a hot star property, with starring roles in three major motion pictures and a British television masterpiece in the last year alone.

Besides her portrayal of a British bed-hopping socialite among Detroit automobile magnates in Harold Robbins' "The Betsy" (her American film debut), and as a mistress of disguises in "The Great Train Robbery," Down also starred in the Thames 90-minute TV production of "The One and Only Phyllis Dixey" in which she portrays the late notorious stripper who remains in history as the Englishwoman most celebrated for taking off her clothes on stage. The biographical drama, which airs in Los Angeles in June 1979, was one of her most challenging roles yet as Down ages from 16 to 50 front of the cameras.

Down's usually impeccable upper-crust heroine has been spiked with a poignant sexuality in her starring role for Peter Hyams' "Hanover Street," slated to open Friday at the Fox Fourplex in Lubbock. A wartime love story, Down plays a married English nurse who meets and falls in love with Harrison Ford, an American bomber pilot who is stationed outside of London. She plays a woman who is caught between her long-abiding love for her husband, Christopher Plummer, and a compelling sexual attraction for her American lover. Not for years has there been a portrayal so reminiscent of the girl-next-door, yet so elegantly beguiling as Down's torn wife and mother in "Hanover Street."

Writer-director Peter Hyams was responsible for casting Down opposite Ford, whose maverick good-looks conjure up memories of gallant young men in uniform. Paul N. Lazarus II produced the Columbia Pictures release, which costars Alec McCowen, Richard Masur and Michael Sacks.

For all her charm and sophistication, Down was born to a fairly humble background on March 17, 1954. Formerly an interior decorator, her father, James Down, was caretaker of a sprawling Territorial Army center in the Putney district in London where Lesley-Anne was raised. Her mother, Elizabeth, had once dreamed of dancing and singing professionally.

Bright, intelligent and blessed with striking looks, the little girl seemed older than she was. When she was 10, her father remembers, she announced to him one day, "I'm bored, Dad." His reply was to pick up a newspaper and hunt through its advertisements. Twenty-four hours later, Lesley-Anne was signed to an international modeling agency, and was earning $50 a session by the time she was 12.

Once voted "Britain's Most Beautiful Teenager," Down left school at 15 to act professionally. One of her first cameo roles was with Olivia Hussey in "All the Right Noises" in 1963, followed by Michael Anderson's "Pope Joan" with Liv Ullman and "Scalawag," directed by and starring Kirk Douglas. She also toured in plays.

During the two years and 22 episodes of "Upstairs, Downstairs," she toured for 12 weeks as a singing and dancing Stella in "Great Expectations," a British musical fashioned from the Charles Dickens novel. She was a hooker in John Wayne's British film "Brannigan," and on British television she played Ellie Dunn in Bernard Shaw's "Heartbreak House" with John Gielgud.

Two film directors, Blake Edwards and Hal Prince, both cast her for widely different featured roles after viewing her performance in the same episode of "Upstairs, Downstairs." Edwards saw her as a Soviet seductress with Peter Sellers and Herbert Lom in "The Pink Panther Strikes Again," and Prince chose her for the blonde young virgin wife of Len Carriou in his film of the Stephen Sondheim musical, "A Little Night Music," which starred Elizabeth Taylor and Hermione Gingold.

If her recent reviews can be interpreted as an omen, Lesley Anne Down is one female star destined to become affectionally entrenched in the hearts and minds of filmgoers everywhere.

1943 London recreated for new wartime romance titled 'Hanover Street'

Street Scene Vividly Reconstructed For Filming Of Wartime Love Story

NEW YORK (Special) — A smartly-dressed mother wheels her pram across a crowded London street. A cab drops a fare and moves off in search of another. People throng the busy pavements.

But wait... Why are those sandbags piled high against those windows? And why are the windows themselves criss-crossed with protective sticky tape? And surely those two women in uniform on the right are carrying gas-masks and steel helmets...

It is 1943 London. A few days before the fifth Christmas of World War II. But this scene was staged on a Sunday in March 1978 — a brilliant reconstruction of a Belgravia Street for Peter Hyams' wartime love story, "Hanover Street," which stars Harrison Ford, Lesley-Anne Down and Christopher Plummer.

"Hanover Street" is booked to open Friday at the Fox Fourplex in Lubbock.

The vehicles are all authentic; so are many of the uniforms. Certainly the famous posters are ("Dig for Victory"..."Careless Talk Costs Lives")...and that air-raid shelter sign on the right: a welcome sight to Londoners when the chilling wail of the siren only just preceded the ominous beat of German aircraft engines.

Nearby a Salvation Army band plays Christmas hymns.

Luckily there were no tell-tale television aerials in evidence. In fact, the only give-away which the film-makers had to disguise with black plastic were the yellow 'no parking' lines, unknown to London in 1943.

A local resident who happened upon the scene while out for a morning walk, shook her head in bewilderment. "I've lived here nearly all my life. I remember what it was like during the war...and this is it. It's like stepping through a mirror into the past."

A Columbia Pictures release, "Hanover Street" was produced by Paul N. Lazarus III and directed by Peter Hyams from his own screenplay. The romantic drama costars Alec McCowen, Richard Masur and Michael Sacks.

Ontkean Joins Cast Of 'Willie & Phil'

NEW YORK (Special) — Michael Ontkean has replaced actor John Heard in the new 20th Century-Fox production, "Willie & Phil," slated to roll in New York City May 17, with Ray Sharkey and Margot Kidder also starring.

Ontkean, a long-time regular on the popular TV series, "The Rookies," has starred in recent times in "Slap Shot" and the current MGM production, "Voices."

Paul Mazursky is producing in association with Tony Ray and directing from his own original screenplay. He was honored recently by the Motion Picture Academy for his highly acclaimed Fox release, "An Unmarried Woman," starring Jill Clayburgh. The picture received three Oscar nominations: Best Picture, Best Actress (Miss Clayburgh) and Best Original Screenplay (Mazursky).

Paintings Shown At Garden Center

The Texas Fine Arts Association Circuit Show will remain on display through May 27, at the Garden & Arts Center, 4215 University. On exhibit are 19 paintings, all chosen by Washington, D.C. art professor Jack Perlmutter.

Each year 20 art regions throughout Texas hold competitions for members. The winners of these juried art shows are sent to Austin to compete on a state level. The winners become part of one of four circuits which are exhibited throughout Texas.

The Lubbock Art Association saw paintings by three of its artists chosen during the past year to receive Juror's Choice Awards, entitling the artists to exhibit their works as part of one of the four touring circuit shows.

ART WORK EXHIBITED

An exhibition of art work by Bob Moline, Jesus Carranza and Bill Leftwich is currently on display at the Frame Gallery, 3602 Slide Road. The artists will be present for a reception from 1 to 4 p.m. today.

ART TALK

By LA WANDA MURFEE

An artist in Georgia is a prolific producer. In her large studio she has several tables on which are sheets of plate glass. When she is ready to paint, she squeezes several colors onto each glass and smears them slightly. Water or turpentine, depending on the medium on the glass, is sprinkled over allowing the paint to further disperse.

Onto each glass is pressed a sheet of smooth hot press paper. After a few seconds soaking up color, the sheets are pulled off carefully, often changing direction of the pull. The sheets are laid aside to dry. More color is added to the glass, solvent distributed on it. The process of laying on, pulling off is repeated, either on fresh sheets or on the dry pulled sheets.

When the papers lay scattered around the room, the artist then walks among them and studies each from different angles. Every segment is carefully observed. Different size mats are placed around the sheets, cropping here and there until a choice is made. Out of these accidental, yet controlled color applications, come hundreds of ideas that are developed into a final painting.

After selections are made, subject is worked onto the color with brush and more color, pen and ink, stampings or any number of combinations. This artist calls her finished works "evocatives," subject having evolved out of patterns transferred from glass to paper.

This artist never knows how large or small one of her pieces will be nor what the subject might become. She has developed an imagination unbounded by conventional forms of drawing and painting. Most of the paintings turn out to be very whimsical, almost dreamlike. Logic is discarded, although subject is apparent. Her market is superb.

An Arizona artist does a similar rendering, using heavy watercolor paper. His finished paintings become seascapes, Indians among rocks, exaggerated figures in desert landscapes. As he lives in an area surrounded by huge boulders, he includes their large simple shapes in most paintings. For this particular artist, texture in color is his main message. It is only after careful study that figures emerge.

If you want to try this method, you could start using newsprint. Although it yellows quickly, it is a good material for experimentation. Rice paper is absorbant; the effect interesting. If subject cannot be imagined into one paper, lay it aside for a later time of dreaming. White market paper is smooth, non absorbant; on it many different patterns rise as it is pulled off the color plate. Watercolor, tempera or oil paints can be tried. Powdered charcoal makes unusual designs when used instead of color.

Filming Finished On 'Great Santini'

NEW YORK (Special) — Principal photography on "The Great Santini," starring Robert Duvall, has been completed, it was announced by Charles A. "Chuck" Pratt, president of Bing Crosby Productions.

The final week of filming at the Goldwyn Studios, was preceded by eight weeks of location-shooting in Beaufort, South Carolina, and two weeks of rehearsals and Phantom jet aerial photography at the Beaufort Marine Air Station.

"The Great Santini," an Orion Pictures release through Warner Bros., also stars Bylthe Danner, and was directed by Lewis John Carlino from his own screenplay.

Jerry Lee Lewis: Branded Unfairly By Once 'Scandalous' Act

By DOUG PULLEN
A-J Rock Correspondent

Jerry Lee Lewis.

The name alone inspires thoughts of outrage on the one hand and thoughts of praise on the other. Lewis' once "scandalous" behavior has meant the singer must bear such ill-intended labels as "dirty old man" throughout his career.

You see, Lewis once married a 13-year-old girl, a fact made unattractive to the people who lived in the morally conscious fifties, when the marriage took place. It is said that such marriages aren't uncommon in Lewis' native state of Louisiana, at least they weren't back when it happened.

Whether it is, or was, translates into something of little significance now. The reputation was born many years ago. And it's probably contributed to Lewis' fame as "The Killer" as much as it has hurt him.

Today, Lewis can be heard making rock'n'roll music as exciting and invigorating as that from his early sessions with Sun Records. His '70s excursion into country music doesn't go without notice on his new album, "Jerry Lee Lewis," (Elektra). But country is not the album's mainstay.

The new album is indication enough that "The Killer" is back among the rock'n'roll world. And why not? With the resurgence the genre has experienced the last few years, it is not surprising to see some of the masters like Lewis come back to the music they once helped form. Lewis' contributions are made all the more vital with the death of Elvis Presley, another representative of rock's more innocent, more outrageous era.

"Jerry Lee Lewis" is a refreshing album for two reasons. It offers traditional rock'n'roll, the kind a whole generation has missed, through a traditional type of treatment. But don't get the impression Lewis is falling back on his past work. He's not. That's where the second reason for the album's success comes in. The new album is fresh and vivacious, offering more than just music, it gives perspective on a long and illustrious career in a volatile, highly misunderstood business.

Lewis pulls out the stops with several straight ahead rockers. Songs such as "Don't Let Go," "I Like It Like That," "Rockin' My Life Away" and "Rocking Little Angel" reflect not only the spirit of Jerry Lee Lewis' musical experience, but his love for the genre as well.

The piano playing that made Lewis famous is very much an integral part of the new album's chemistry, though Lewis surrenders the limelight frequently to a talented guitar player named James Burton. Burton fuses a strong blues influence with subtle rock flavorings.

Lewis doesn't restrict the album to mere rock'n'roll. The country form which he successfully explored in the early seventies has a definite presence on the album. Not only does he employ country on a couple of songs, the best of which is "Who Will The Next Fool Be," but Lewis makes rock's country roots constantly evident in the handful of rockers which appear on the album.

Perhaps the most revealing portion of the album is a song called "I Wish I Was Eighteen Again." The song is a call to Lewis' younger, more flamboyant days. He speaks of an inability to understand today's youth, yet he laments that he is not of the same fabric as that youth. Lewis seems to be appealing to his memories, knowing and hoping that about half of his audience, his long-time fans, will appreciate what he's saying. At the same time, he doesn't make any cavalier remarks designed to lure new fans.

JERRY LEE LEWIS: "The Killer" is back with a new LP

Lewis seems to realize the rights and wrongs he has committed in his life, though he doesn't seem to concerned aboul having committed them, which is just fine, because Jerry Lee Lewis has been through a lot more hell than many of his listeners, or, at least, his hells have been amplified by his status as a personality.

It's a good thing that Jerry Lee Lewis has few regrets. There was a time when Jerry Lee Lewis was considered one of the most thrilling, one of the most daring rockers in the business. Sure, that reputation has tarnished and diminished over the years, but it hasn't withered into nothing and it's not being used to sell records in a cheap or overly unemotional manner.

"Jerry Lee Lewis" is simply a restatement of rock's essentials, a return to a world which exists only in spirit, if not in appeal.

"The Killer" is back indeed.

LINER NOTES: Jerry Lee Lewis: piano, lead vocals. James Burton: guitar, dobro. Tim May: guitar. Kenny Lovelace: guitar, violin. David Pariato: bass. Hal Blaine: drums, percussion. Backup vocals by The Ron Hicklin Singers. String arrangements by Bob Alcivar. Produced by Bones Howe.

FOOTNOTE: Swan Song Records has sent out a denial. That denial pertains to Jimmy Page, guitarist for Led Zeppelin, who was rumored to be appearing with Ron Wood's touring group, The New Barbarians. Mention of Page's supposed appearance, which had been confirmed earlier by a spokesperson for Atlantic Records, which distributes Swan Song, appeared in this column last Sunday. The New Barbarians, by the way, will appear tonight in Houston before heading to Arizona and California.

Country Notes

By Bob Campbell

Joey Allen, probably the most knowledgeable 24-year-old about Hank Williams music in the country, has been prospering in Flagstaff, Ariz., after five or six years of semi-starvation in Lubbock.

The little fellow with the big voice played for a small salary and tips at the Coppercreek Mine and the Koko Club through most of last year.

A clubowner from Flagstaff stopped in at the Koko one night several months ago, heard him and took him to the Arizona mountains to open a club there.

A Flagstaff newspaper advertising salesman and entertainment promoter named Terry Wooley started managing him, and, with a new group called Smokehouse, he has played Cold Water Country a couple of times since then and has been booking into other clubs around the Southwest and West.

Wooley, a former topnotch horseshoer who is a story by himself, was confident of bookings at the Palomino Club in Hollywood, Knott's Berry Farm and other important places.

Joey recorded "West Texas Waltz," the Butch Hancock song made famous by Joe Ely, at Caldwell Studios the last time he was here, and he and his manager plan a release soon to follow up his "Cold, Cold Heart" record of last year.

"Joey don't just sing the words like a lot of people do," Wooley said when they were here last month. "He performs the song. People can't just listen to it. They become involved."

Although not as good as Hank, Joey writes well himself and was thinking of putting a song of his own on the "B" side of the new record.

"I don't imitate Hank," he said. "I feel like I've gone down some of the same roads that he did, and I sing what I feel.

"You have to live it before you can write and get it over to the people."

Asked if he feels predestined to live the same kind of life Williams did, he said, "No, he let the bottle get to him, and I did at one time; but you have to find out where you're at."

Whether he will ever live in Lubbock again is an open question.

He wants to come back, his wife Angie likes Arizona, and Wooley wants the whole bunch to live in the San Fernando Valley, where it is a short distance "to Burbank and LA to anywhere in a few hours."

Stevie Vaughan, the magical blues-jazz guitar player from Austin who has played Stubb's Barbecue and Fat Dawg's several times, has been in Nashville this month with noted producer Jack Clement recording him for Big Wheel Records owners Joe Gracey and Bobby Earl Smith of Austin.

Stevie, who reminds me somewhat of an approriately named blues singer and guitarist named Mighty Joe Young, has been recognized in Texas Monthly and Guitar Player magazines, and he and his band, Double Trouble, featuring soulful singer Lou Ann Barton, recorded an album to promote themselves with and to sell off the bandstand here last winter at Fat Dawg's, where they played three days to packed houses this weekend.

A Big Wheels album on them is expected to be out soon.

One of the most impressive singers that I have heard yet in Lubbock is a schoolteacher named Carla Snell.

She sings on Sunday nights at the Stubb's jam, and, like a few of the instrumentalists around town, she can blow your mind if you listen too closely.

'Move' Changed Luck Of Jonathan Lee

By MARK SCHWED
United Press International

NASHVILLE, Tenn. — After getting arrested 17 times for vagrancy, sleeping in a closet and eating peanut butter and jelly sandwiches for two months, Jonathan Lee figures he's qualified to be a successful entertainer.

Lee had a good job six years ago in Washington as an aide to former Sen. Frank Moss, D-Utah, but gave up the "prestige" for the exciting life of a singer-songwriter.

"In 1973 I decided that being a fool was better than being bored," Lee says.

The Clinton, Tenn., native loaded up his car and drove straight through to Los Angeles.

"Having composed 10 variations of my Grammy acceptance speech during the long ride, there I was on the coast, bright-eyed, feeling a little stupid and plum scared to death," Lee recalls.

"I remembered hearing that in order to create, one has to know what it's like to suffer," Lee says.

Lee suffered by sleeping in a walk-in closet, in a park, under a grand piano, and in his car during his time out West. He ate peanut butter and jelly sandwiches and drank water for nearly a year.

"The highs in this business are incredibly high. When you're up, you are really up. But when you're down, there's nothing to compare with how far down you are," Lee says.

"It was disgraceful, lonely and uncomfortable. But in a strange way I'm proud for having done it."

Lee says he waited for a year to be discovered without any luck and "the excitement of learning how not to starve by crashing parties was beginning to wear off."

He said goodbye to Los Angeles and drove to Nashville where immediately his luck changed for the better.

"I started doing (commercial) jingles, signed with a major publishing company as a songwriter, did some TV shows around the country, had some songs on Captain Kangaroo, and signed with a major record label as an artist," Lee says.

Lee says at the time he believed his 20-year-struggle for success was over.

"I had done the impossible. I wanted everybody I had ever known to hear about it, and I tried to make sure they did," he says.

His pop single came within one radio station of making the national charts, but bad luck returned and he was dropped from the label.

"When I was released from the record company I got physically sick for three weeks. I could not believe it. My record was doing fantastic," he says.

"What you're doing is asking somebody to like you. You're exposing yourself saying, 'please like me.' When they don't, that just rips your heart out," Lee said.

George Burns, Brooke Shields In Hilarious 'Comedy Of Heart'

BURBANK, Calif. (Special) — "Just You And Me, Kid," a Columbia Pictures release now in production, is a hilarious comedy of the heart in which an elderly retired vaudevillian becomes involved in the problems of a 14-year-old girl. This somewhat startling concept becomes beautifully enchanting and instantly exciting with the casting of genial, unflappable George Burns as an 82-year-old gentleman and lovely Brooke Shields as the teenage orphan runaway.

("Just You And Me, Kid" is vaudeville jargon referring to an act's single performance at a theatre.)

Jerome M. Zeitman and Irving Fein are producing the comedy as a Frein-Zeitman Production. Leonard Stern directs, and also shares writing credit with Tom Lazarus, who wrote the original story, and Oliver Hailey. It is Stern's debut as a feature motion picture director. Ron Hobbs is productiondesigner and David Walsh is director of photography.

"Just You And Me, Kid" is being filmed entirely in Los Angeles, with exteriors in residential neighborhoods including the Pacific Palisades and the San Fernando Valley. Interiors will be shot at The Burbank Studios.

Comedy with heart has become George Burns' specialty since the famous comedian's sudden re-emergence in theatrical motion pictures as a superstar. His role in "The Sunshine Boys" won him an Academy Award, and his title role in "Oh, God!" was internationally hailed for its warmth and depth as well as its comedy.

Brooke Shields' fascinating beauty has taken the talented teenager from modeling through featured roles in movies, and into the top ranks of stardom with her title role in "Pretty Baby."

While mature adults and children have been teamed together in movies ever since Charles Chaplin and Jackie Coogan made "The Kid," the age spread between Brooke and Burns sets an all-time record. At the time Brooke was born, Burns had already been in show business for 69 years.

About The Story

Elderly, retired vaudevillian Bill Grant (George Burns), a widower whose placid life offers nothing more exciting than playing poker with old showbiz cronies or cheering up his depressed old pal Max, who has stopped speaking, happens to find a young girl in the trunk of his car. The stowaway, a 14-year-old orphan named Kate (Brooke Shields), has been in foster homes all of her short life, and is now hiding from a small-time crook.

Intrigued by Kate's insolent charm, Bill provides shelter, food and clothing, which Kate accepts, all the while planning to duck out quick. She tries just that, but severely sprains her ankle, and has to stick around. Bill's over-anxious grown daughter and some nosey neighbors call the cops, and he and his poker friends have to do some fancy maneuvering with his friend Max's old magic illusions to keep her out of sight.

Bill and Kate develop a mutual admiration and affection. Although she's still wary of him, Bill's genial kindness impresses Kate, and he greatly enjoys having her in the house — excitement and all. Also, acting on her advice, he manages to shock his long silent friend Max with an emotion-charged monologue that causes the ex-magician to start talking again.

Kate thinks twice about running away again and comes to Bill for help. Just when he has convinced her to go to the police, the crook who's chasing her shows up, and again it takes all Bill can do — using Max's hocus-pocus paraphernalia — to subdue him.

How Kate's final situation is resolved to everybody's complete satisfaction, including Bill's daughter and gossipy neighbors, is a delightfully surprising ending.

LIVING LEGEND VISITS LUBBOCK — Billed as a "living legend," Ray Charles will return to Lubbock to headline a concert at 8 p.m. May 27 in the Civic Center exhibition hall. Charles last appeared in Lubbock in November 1976, at which time A-J staff photographer Gary Davis took the above shot. Also scheduled to appear on the May 27 show are Neal Ford, left, and Rick Mensik. Not pictured is Gary Laramar and Delaware The Dog, slated to open the show. Tickets are now on sale at Furr's Family Center, Hemphill-Wells at South Plains Mall and both Flipside Records locations.

George Burns and Brooke Shields team up for laughs in JUST YOU AND ME, KID

Myrna Loy Inks Pact

NEW YORK — Myrna Loy has been signed to co-star in Warner Bros.' "Just Tell Me What You Want," the Jay Presson Allen-Sidney Lumet Production currently before the cameras in New York City.

The romantic comedy, which stars Ali MacGraw and Alan King, is being directed by Sidney Lumet from a screenplay by Jay Presson Allen, based on her novel of the same name.

In "Just Tell Me What You Want," Loy plays the devoted secretary of a self-made tycoon played by King. Loy last appeared in "The End" and is best known for her portrayal of Nora Charles in "The Thin Man" detective series of the 1930s in which she became the epitome of charm, cool elegance and sophistication starring opposite William Powell.

She has starred in over 50 films, including "The Best Years of Our Lives" ad "Mr. Blandings Builds His Dream House."

Also co-starring in "Just Tell Me What You Want" is Peter Weller, who plays the role of MacGraw's yound lover.

Goldie Hawn Signs For New Movie

NEW YORK (Special) — Goldie Hawn has signed a deal with Orion Pictures Company to star in a motion picture to be made under her own production banner.

The Academy Award-winning actress, who starred in the highly-successful summer hit, "Foul Play," recently completed a starring role opposite Giancarlo Giannini in "A Trip With Anita," filmed in Italy.

The new Hawn project, not yet finalized, may be ready to go before the cameras this year as an Orion Pictures release through Warner Bros.

NUSSBAUM REVIEWS CURRENT BOOKS

THE RHEINGOLD ROUTE. By Arthur Maling. 276 pages. Harper & Row. $9.95

Arthur Maling takes a vacation — only temporarily, one hopes — from that most unusual investment firm, Price, Potter, and Petacque, which is featured in his successful series. Instead, he gives us this time a laconic, understated look at middle-class crime in the Common Market area of the world.

There are few suspense novelists today who consistently deliver as satisfactory a plot-line as Maling, no matter what his subject. As much can be said for his characterization as well. No cardboard characters need apply.

"The Rheingold Route" begins a bit slowly, but once the skeleton is in place, the pages all but turn themselves. John Cochran flees from the U.S. to England with the young daughter taken from him after a bitter divorce. The girl dies from meaningities, and Cochran blames himself. Unable to return to the U.S., and unable to obtain work papers in England, he drifts into serving as a courier for a businessman illegally sending money to Switzerland to escape taxes.

Then Cochran is approached by a lawyer who has no business knowing Cochran's pursuits to take on the same job for a client of the lawyer. From then on very little is as it seems to be, and the story is off the running.

"The Rheingold Route" is a most satisfactory read.

— Albert F. Nussbaum

DAY OF JUDGMENT. By Jack Higgins. 264 pages. Holt, Rinehart and Winston. $8.95

Leon Uris, Frederick Forsythe, and Jack Higgins share two things in common. The first is an ability to construct compelling novels based upon historical situations. The second is that they force the reader to settle for story at the expense of style.

Given this limitation, Higgins in "Day of Judgement" accomplishes all thathe sets out to do. He sets his tale in the East and West Germanies of 1963 just prior to President Kennedy's trip to the Wall in which the charismatic Kennedy made the phrase "Ich bin ein Berliner" a rallying cry in two languagees.

The second major hinge of Higgins' novel is the death in that same month of Pope John XIII, the best-loved papal leader of modern times. From these two seemingly unmatched events Higgins fashions a cleverly interlocking set of political and religious necessities which dutifully coincide.

Aside from the historical personages, nons of Higgins' characters leap from the page, but in his usual manner the author projects them busily into the forward movement of the story. The characters serve themselves and their creator well.

Readers of "Storm Warning" and "The Eagle Has Landed" will not be disappointed.

Higgins is a master storyteller and he has proven it again.

FALSE FRONT. By Lawrence Meyer. 252 pages. Viking. $9.95

Lawrence Meyer, an investigative reporter for the Washington Post, poses a chillingly dangerous problem for his fictional counter-part, reporter Paul Silver of the fictional Washington Herald. It is Meyer's thesis that these days agencies in Washington are so deeply connected that whenever corruption appears each has a built-in interest in keeping the lid on.

"False Front" is a detailed step-by-step expose of an it-can-happen-here situation that leads to the unpeeling of layer after layer of governmental cover-up. The novel is a sharp depiction of the wheels-within-wheels mechinations of the intelligence community in Washington, D.C.

Along the way, a very perceptive look is taken at the extent of the efforts, legal and illegal, by ruthless officials to use the press — and any other conveniently pliable groups — for their own ends; for the author does not whitewash the newspaper empires. Quite the contrary.

The story is least effective in its attempt to portray the moral impact upon Paul Silver of the mess he is uncovering, but the nuts-and-bolts agency portrayals seerm flawless.

It's a cliche that bureaucracy is impenetrable, that the machinery runs itself. "False Front" remains us that a cliche becomes a cliche by the constant repetition of deeds as well as words, not because it lacks truth.

THE MOVIOLA MAN. By Bill and Colleen Mahan. 239 pages. Doubleday. $8.95

"The Moviola Man" is a story told against the background of Hollywood and the TV and film industries. What sets this book apart from others with the same background is its realism. The phony glamor and cliche characters are missing.

Sam Wilder is a film editor. A good one. His second marriage is flounderingand his stepson is becoming a problem. However, his career is on the up-swing. He is given the chance to direct a movie-of-the-week. Add film piracy and murder and you have some idea of the book's involved plot.

This brother-and-sister writing team shows the behind-the-scenes Hollywood as it really is and tell and interesting and entertaining story at the same time. They have produced a story with characters that are both human and likable. Once begun, the book will be hard to put down.

It's too good to miss.

LITHIUM FOR MEDEA. By Kate Braverman. 251 pages. Harper & Row. $9.95.

This is a first novel. But it doesn't read like one. Kate Braverman has had two volumes of her poetry, some short fiction, and a non-fiction book published. Far from being a beginner, she is a mature artist who is in full control of her craft.

"Lithium for Media" is the story of a young woman's struggle to gain control of her life. It is also the story of her friends, family, fears, loves, and lovers. The prose throbs with life. It is inevitable that "Lithium for Medea" will be compared favorably with "Fear of Flying," but comparison is unfair. "Lithium for Medea" is the BETTER book; it has a power all its own.

Miss Braverman has a style that is fresh and unique. No one, not even Graham Greene who is noted for his flashbacks, slides back and forth in time as effortlessly as she does. Because her flashbacks are usually brief and provide needed background and details, forward movement in the story does not slow.

"Lithium for Medea" is an absorbing novel that comes very close to being compulsive readings. Once begun, it is difficult to set the book aside. And once finished, readers will discover it is more than an entertainment.

"Lithium for Medea" is an emotional experience. It is much too good to miss.

LADIES OF THE VALLEY. By Herbert Kastle. 435 pages. Arbor House. $10.95.

If you want to learn how a movie gets made, this is your book. The author's fictional movie, "Galt's Island," involves a wondrous assortment of money hungry entrepreneurs, creative people, aspiring artists, and outright psychopaths.

Principals in the story include the novelist who wrote the book; his girl friend whom he steers into the leading feminine role; his agent, who also takes on some producing chores; and his ex-girl friend who acquires a minor but important part.

There is also the aging male star who will direct the movie; the script writer who will adapt the novel; the line producer who is a native-born American facist; the two money men who have come up with the idea of making the movie; and the agent's black butler-companion whose wry outlook on life steals scene after scene.

The money men's concept is to turn an essentially straignt and well-received novel into a pornographic film. It is to be the first made by a major studio, although the studio will be unaware of the type of film it is leading its name to until the film is completed.

The sex is explicit. Make that E-X-P-L-I-C-I-T. The violence is e-x-p-l-i-c-i-t. But Kastle holds up a candle to a scene with many, many dark corners. Readers are going to have a wonderful time. Of the many Hollywood novels, this is one is the best.

Hamilton Doubles As Producer, Actor In New Dracula Production

By FREDERICK M. WINSHIP

NEW YORK UPI — For his first venture into film production since "Evil Knievel" nine years ago, actor George Hamilton plays the most overworked character in entertainment today—Count Dracula.

The Transylvanian vampire created by novelist Bram Stoker in 1897 is driving audiences batty on Broadway, off-Broadway, on television, and now in movie theaters across the nation since Hamilton's "Love at First Bite" opened this month on, naturally, Friday the 13th. The Broadway version is being filmed and another TV series is slated for next season.

"I got the idea of a Dracula film quite independently before the Broadway hit ever opened," said the lean, tanned, truffle eyed veteran of 48 films. 300

"Love At First Bite" is currently playing at Showplace Six in Lubbock.

"It all started when I imitated an old Lenny Bruce Dracula routine for writer Bob Kaufman while we were vacationing in Mexico. We talked about doing a Dracula picture and after going onto another project we finally got around to it. I knew I wanted Kaufman to write the screenplay because we have a similar sense of humor."

In addition to being scenarist, Kaufman "Divorce, Italian Style" "Getting Straight" "I Love My Wife" is co-executive producer with Hamilton. The $3 million film was financed by Melvin Simon productions, a company formed only a few years ago by an Indiana-based shopping center tycoon and already the country's third largest independent producer.

"The business of producing a film is a killer, the toughest in the world," said Hamilton, relaxing between promotional appearances at the elegant Hotel Plaza where much of the movie was filmed. "You need a liaison between the business and the artistic side, and that's where we actors turned producer come in — a new breed. I admire Warren Beattie for what he is doing, and Michael Douglas, too."

Hamilton admits that a "sort of playboy image" clings to actors who turn to production, but the people who finance films are beginning to realize that the new breed can provide the sort of inside knowledge that can make the difference between success and failure. He said Simon, who has the reputation of a tough businessman, gave him total artistic freedom.

"I think 'Love at First Bite' will be as successful as 'Evil Knievel,' which had a fantastic ratio of return, a $15 million gross in the United States alone on an investment of $760,000," Hamilton said. "People boast about making $15 million on a $7 million film, but that sort of ratio is not a hit."

"Love at First Bite" is the story of Dracula in 1979, a sophisticated but romantic vampire who is tired of 700 years of one-bite stands. He falls in love with pictures of an American model Susan Saint James he sees in fashion magazines and flies to New York to court her. He is successful in spite of attempts at exorcism by the model's zany psychoanalyst-lover Richard Benjamin and the pair wing off to immortal bliss.

"My Dracula character is based more on Bela Lugosi, who made the first Dracula film in 1931," Hamilton said. "He had an inner fire and a fantasy that no one else who has done the role has caught. I saw Frank Langella in the current Broadway play and found it a mannered, stylized, tongue-in-cheek performance, but I knew I had a more difficult task because our movie is a Mel Brooks type of comedy."

Hamilton's Dracula has overtones of the '30s with a little Ronald Colman and Melvyn Douglas thrown in. The aristocratic vampire is an anachronism when he shows up in Manhattan and no one takes him seriously. At Studio 54 the patrons take his cape and tails as just another campy disco outfit.

"I actually appeared on 42nd Street in the costume and nobody even did a double take," Hamilton said.

He leaves for Australia and Europe to make personal appearances at "Love at First Bite" openings, then will stay a while with his son, Ashley, 4, at one of his two plantations in Natchez, Miss., where he is restoring an 1812 mansion. His real estate investments in Natchez include 600 rural acres, six historic buildings in town and a river site where he plans to build a restaurant.

"One side of me is an actor and I have been totally involved developing that, but the other side of me is a businessman. I keep the two quite separate. I've been vice president of the Sole Leather Council, an association of tanners and manufacturers, an adviser to the Imperial National Bank of California, and involved in several other businesses.

"Business is a matter of finding out what the other man's dream is, then selling it to him. Pictures are the best dream in the world."

His next project? Hamilton said he plans to film a new version of "The Mark of Zorro," which was a star vehicle for Tyrone Power. Before he gets to that, he will have passed the landmark age of 40 next August. The one time most eligible male star in Hollywood, escort of former first Daughter Lynda Bird Johnson, and ex-husband of glamorous Alana Hamilton said the birthday will make no difference because he still feels 18.

"These numbers...I think they must be talking about someone else," he said with a grin. "It's taken 40 years to get to my prime and the next 10 years are the most important. If I'm going to do comedy, this is the time."

Streisand, O'Neal Teamed In Romantic Comedy, 'Main Event'

BURBANK, Calif. (Special) — When the era of screwball comedy ended in the late '30s, a decline in the free-spirited "nuttiness" that had dominated this type of film comedy for a decade faded from sight. Now a new motion picture, "The Main Event," offers the same comedic battle of the sexes which audiences roared at and applauded in such films as "Bringing Up Baby," "It Happened One Night," "My Man Godfrey" and "His Girl Friday."

"The Main Event" is booked to open June 22 at the Fox Fourplex in Lubbock.

Significantly, by the early '70s screwball comedies had virtually disappeared from Hollywood, with only a few scattered films being produced to carry on this wild and zany tradition.

In 1972, however, "What's Up Doc?" teamed Barbra Streisand and Ryan O'Neal in a screwball comedy which brought to life this largely forgotten film form. Seven years later, these two stars have re-united in another screwball comedy, "The Main Event."

The new romantic comedy brings together an improbable couple, who, like their predecessors of the '30s, depend on one another for success — and even survival. Streisand portrays a successful perfume manufacturer who finds herself without any tangible assets except for a retired prize-fighter, played by O'Neal, who she decides — against his never-ending objections — to manage back into championship contention.

The sexually-charged chemistry that propelled the relationship between Carole Lombard and William Powell, or Katharine Hepburn and Cary Grant, surfaced again in 1972 when Streisand and O'Neal went up against each other in the boxoffice smash "What's Up Doc?" Now it happens again.

In the motion picture, Streisand, one of the most gifted screen comediennes, returns to the kind of comedy role that has won her legions of fans. This time around, she is pitted against the self-retired fighter in an odds-against situation that has hilarious moments both inside and outside the ring.

Well-trained for his on-screen confrontations, O'Neal, a former Golden Gloves boxer himself, has owned fighters and been involved in the sport for years. He comes to his role in the film with a finely-honed sense of his acting craft as well.

Preparations before the film's actual shooting included screening of several old films with similar themes.

"Before the screenplay was finished, Streisand showed the famous screwball comedies of the past to the screen writers," says producer Jon Peters. "She wanted them to see that we wanted more than just laughs. We wanted it to be funny and real."

"The Main Event" was produced by Jon Peters and Barbra Streisand, and directed by Howard Zieff from a screenplay by Gail Parent and Andrew Smith. Renee Missel and Howard Rosenman served as executive producers.

ONE—TWO SCREEN COMBINATION — Ryan O'Neal is an angry, confused and reluctant prize-fighter who doesn't want to come out for the next round, despite a shove from his concerned but pushy manager, portrayed by Barbra Streisand, in this scene from the romantic, screwball comedy, "The Main Event." Streisand portrays a big-time perfume manufacturer who refuses to let anything get in the way of the championship aspirations she stubbornly holds for her only remaining tangible asset, her on-again, off-again lover, in this film, which is slated to open June 22 at the Fox Fourplex in Lubbock.

Sian Phillips Signs For Role In 'Clash'

CULVER CITY, Calif. (Special) — Sian Phillips has been signed to star with Laurence Olivier and Burgess Meredith in Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's "Clash of the Titans."

Filming is planned early this summer in Malta, Spain, Italy and London. Desmond Davis will direct from an original screenplay by Beverly Cross.

Welsh-born Phillips won the British Academy of Film and Television Arts Award as best television actress of 1976 and the Royal Television Society Award for her role as Livia in the accalimed BBC production, "I, Claudius." Her films include "Becket," "Goodbye, Mr. Chips," and "Laughter in the Dark." She is currently filming "Crime and Punishment" and "Tinker, Tailor, Soldier, Spy" for BBC Television.

"Clash of the Titans," a spectacular blending of live action and special visual effects, will be filmed in Dynarama, a unique effects process developed by Ray Harryhausen. The film marks the most ambitious project ever undertaken by Schneer and Harryhausen.

"Clash of the Titans" will be released in the United States and Canada by United Artists, and throughout the rest of the world by Cinema International Corporation.

You Usually Get What You Pay For In Padlocks

By SGT. SIDNEY LYLE
Odessa Police Department

There are almost as many different kinds of padlocks as there are thoughts in the imagination of man. They range everywhere from the five cent padlocks you may have won in a carnival sideshow, to maximum security devices used to secure top secret government documents.

Some may require a cheap aluminum key that is in reality little more than a piece of steel wire. Still others are operated by heavy, hard metal keys. Some use no "key" at all but operate by a combination, or in one instance, the padlock is made to open by the placement along side the lock of a series of pre-arranged magnets.

Although the price you pay for a padlock does not always indicate quality, as some five dollar padlocks are of much higher quality than other padlocks selling for the same price, it is a reasonable rule to follow. When considering the purchase of a lock—any lock—we must be reminded of the rule of thumb used when shopping for a motorcycle helmet, "If you have a ten dollar head, buy a ten dollar helment".

In other words, if you buy a cheap lock, you have cheap security. Therefore, you should consider three things when purchasing a padlock:

(1) What is the existing crime rate in my neighborhood? That is, what are the chances of my property being stolen or damaged?

(2) Regardless of the local crime rate, we must consider the value of the items being protected. The higher the value, the more consideration we should give to the quality locking devices.

(3) We need to take into account a reasonable and realistic balance between maximum security and no security at all. It does little good to use a high security padlock on a rusty hasp that is about to fall of the door anyway. Security halfway applied is like, salt water to a thirsty man—it's wet enough, but doesn't quench the thirst.

MOVIE STARS, REAL PEOPLE AND ME. By Josh Logan. (Delacorte, $9.95)

Broadway and Hollywood producer Josh Logan is one of show biz' most delightful raconteurs. Recently he took his stories on the road in the form of a supper club revue. Now he has recorded for posterity some of the amusing and dismaying episodes in his four-decade career — a sort of dividend on his autobiography, "Josh."

This book is easy and absorbing reading, but is by no means all sweetness and light. Logan's bitter account of how Bette Davis let him down before he could bring her into New York in his last musical, "Miss Moffat," so angered Miss Davis that she has threatened to sue him.

Logan tends to bend over backwards to be fair to those who have sinned against him, but in this case he found Miss Davis' "a book I'm trying hard to close."

Logan takes his reader backstage and behind the camera to meet the stars as they really were — Marlon Brando, Marilyn Monroe, Sam Goldwyn, Kim Novak, Leland Hayward, Greta Garbo, Henry Fonda.

He recounts a party he and his wife, Nedda, gave for Princess Margaret and Lord Snowden with impromptu entertainment that no Broadway show could duplicate. On the flip side is a disastrous Hollywood dinner at which egomaniac Mike Todd did everything he could to insult Sam Behrman, only to get his comeuppance from the sharptongued playwright.

The author reveals himself as an extremely humane man who always expects the best of human nature. His message seems to be: "Never dwell on the dark side of life; things may turn out for the best."

A good example was Logan's despair over a miscalculation in the effectiveness of the atmospheric color effects in the film version of "South Pacific." Instead of a disaster, the film turned out to be the most financially successful of Logan's productions.

The unnatural color changes at the various high points of the drama gave the film flair and the audience a lift. It was an innovation that helped Logan get the job of directing the film version of "Camelot" — and to work with Alan Jay Lerner. But that's another horrendously funny story. Read the book!

THE DEATH FREAK. By John Luckless. Summit. 250 Pages. $8.95.

Writers Clifford Irving and Herbert Burkholz have teamed up under the pseudonym "John Luckless" to write a spoof of the thriller novel so much in evidence these days and with "The Death Freak" they have — to a large extent — succeeded.

Excess is the book's major flaw. In their desire to satirize the thriller genre they often go too far and instead of satire they serve up silliness. But "The Death Freak" does have enough good satire and enough substance to make it worth the reading.

The plot — and it's most wild — concerns two top intelligence agents. Both have been developing "Unusual Killing Devices" for 20 years and now they want to retire. The twist is that Eddie Mancuso works for American intelligence and Vasily Borgneff works for Russian intelligence. Both know that they will not be allowed to retire, that they will be killed instead. So they get together — an arrangement made by Chalice, a lovely woman who loves both men — and decide the only way they can get out is to work together at killing all the Russian and American agents who won't let them retire.

How they go about this makes up the bulk of the book. The methods and implements the two defectors use to get rid of their former comrades are often ingenious, sometimes amusing, and always quite bloody.

Most of the time the plot of "The Death Freak" clips along at a goodly pace — although some unneeded sex scenes tend to bog it down at times — and if the reader doesn't concern himself overly much with the lack of a sense of reality it's entertaining enough reading.

HOW I GOT TO BE PERFECT. By Jean Kerr. Doubleday. 264 Pages. $8.95.

There's something about "How I Got To Be Perfect" that seems to be dated, as if the writing style and topics are representative of an earlier time.

That's not a negative observation, rather it's a point of reference so that today's readers, weaned on television, may know what to expect.

The "other time" reflected in the writing of this collection of essays was a gentle and lovely time, when authors were wordsmiths crafting novels, short stories and essays that would provide readers with repeated pleasure.

Jean Kerr did this with her popular favorites, such as "Please Don't Eat The Daisies," and "The Snake Has All The Lines," and she has done it again with "How I Got To Be Perfect."

There are six new essays here and a choice sampling of over three dozen others, all enhanced by Mrs. Kerr's highly literate writing skill.

One of the funniest is about how Mrs. Kerr was named "Queen of the May" at her all-girl, parochial school, not because she was the prettiest — she was to deduce later — but because she was the tallest and could best get a garland of flowers atop a campus statue. But, at the crucial moment, she couldn't reach the top and solved the problem by flinging the wreath toward its target.

"For a brief moment it looked as though I had succeeded, for the wreath seemed be resting firmly on the prongs of the stone crown. But then, slowly and majestically, it slid down until it settled rakishly over one large stone eye."

Another essay should be of interest to millions. It's about how to break the soap opera habit. "Now I don't recommend just quitting cold turkey. In my experience, the only thing you can quit cold turkey is cold turkey."

There's not a dull essay in the lot.

FIRST AND LAST. By Walker Evans. (Harper & Row, $29.95)

This is the best book of photographs by perhaps the best American photographer of this century. It is art and history and America and you and me.

No book of photographs by an American has ever been better.

Evans died at 71 three years ago. This book contains 220 of his 200,000 photographs. The pictures run from the 1920s to the 1970s and the heart of the matter is the Great Depression.

During the poor years Walker strolled the land with his camera, not doing a sociological portrait of a down-at-theheel economy but picturing America as it was. America today is based on what is pictured here.

Evans photographed people. But people are also-rans in most of the photographs. Almost uniquely, he had the talent of describing people without picturing them. These are no dead leadscapes and still-life shots.

These are photographs of America. For example:

1929: the white woman in furs and cloche hat in the Fulton fish market; the black woman in furs on 42nd Street.

1933: a Copake, N.Y., bedroom; a water pump in Maine; a waterfront pool hall.

1936: Southern roadside signs, including one photo in South Carolina with a porch hung with fruit, vegetable, public stenographer, art school signs plus one saying, "General Lafayette spoke from this porch 1924." A picture of the Burroughs family of Hale County, Ala., and a landlord in Moundsville, Ala., not documents of poverty but of a real, as-it-was-and-is picture of America.

Evans' camera did not argue for a New Deal of social justice. Like the grand reporter he was, Evans used his great art to tell tomorrow what today was like yesterday.

And hooray for Harper & Row! The publisher, almost alone among photograph producers, did not load the handsome book with a witless, artsycraftsy essay; they let the pictures speak for themselves.

LAUREN BACALL BY MYSELF. By Lauren Bacall. Knopf. 377 Pages. $10.95.

"I have learned that I am a valuable person. I have made mistakes — so many mistakes. And will make more. Big ones. But I pay. They are my own. What was not real in Howard Hawks' version of me is not real now. I remain as vulnerable, romantic, and idealistic as I was at 15, sitting in a movie theater, watching, being, Bette Davis."

Most movie biographies titillate or amuse with meandering gossip, small notions about how the fabled live. Few are touching. This book is touching.

Some of us fell in love with Lauren Bacall, with the 19-year-old siren, the sultry charmer beckoning Humphrey Bogart in a hotel doorway in Key West. We whistled and she didn't come.

Still, like most glamorous objects, she was as flat as the movie screen. Now in her own words comes the woman, soft, courageous, gentle, loving, and somehow or other shoved around by circumstances, by her own dreams.

The distance between the teen-ager who fell on Hollywood and the wife and mother and Broadway actress seems longer than 377 pages. There's a lot of living here. By a lovely lady. By a somehow sad lady. But nevertheless by a proud lady.

Her book, which seems to be more tape-recorder than pen — at least that's the style — is full of the names of Hollywood, full of the fables come to life, full of anecdotes, but better than that. It is full of her life, her love of Bogie, her attachments to other men and women, Kate and Spence, Jason, her children from Steve to Sam.

She seemed to have a habit of holding people close, and one by one they would die and leave her a little lonelier. And through her book it leaves the reader a little lonelier too.

IN MEMORY YET GREEN: The Autobiography of Isaac Asimov 1920-1954. By Isaac Asimov. Doubleday. 732 Pages. $15.95.

Isaac Asimov says in an introduction that he resisted his publisher's insistence upon an autobiography because nothing of any real importance had ever happened to him. "It will take all of my writing skill to obscure the point," he said, adding that the book would be "monstrously long."

How unfortunately right he was. For his many devotees this 200th book by Asimov, one of the leading science fiction and fact writers, may appease their insatiable craving for every word he writes. Words they certainly get — a 700-page avalanche of them. The general reader, however, may find them overpoweringly boring, as well as devoted largely to trivial matters.

As Asimov himself indicated, there wasn't anything particularly special or interesting about his life except his eventual attainment of writing fame. He may have been unusually bright as a boy and adult — a point he repeatedly makes clear — but one is not tempted to equate him with, say, Einstein.

He grew up in Brooklyn. His parents were imbued with the work ethic, struggling to make a living during the Depression by running a series of candy stores. Asimov worked there every spare minute outside school. He never went anywhere, never took part in extracurricular school activities, never had a date. He did read books galore from the public library during slow store hours and while eating. And he got hooked on Astounding pulp magazine stories sold at the store. He began to try to write them himself.

His parents wanted him to be a doctor, but Asimov didn't. He did get a Ph.D. in chemistry. Later he taught it at the Boston University Medical School. Other notable events were that he once was drafted into the army, he got married, and had a son.

All the while he worked at writing science fiction, with the usual ups and downs of an author. Success eventually turned him to full-time writing.

There you have it, though in excruciating detail and only up to 1954, his first 34 years. Everybody brace for the sequel!

THE BRONX ZOO. By Sparky Lyle, (Crown, $8.75)

Sparky Lyle's "The Bronx Zoo" is not a great book — it may even be a poor one. But it can be good reading for a baseball fan.

Lyle, the 1977 Cy Young Award winner, doesn't like the way he was treated by New York Yankee owner George Steinbrenner and this book is his first revenge.

That's the No. 1 knock at the book. It sounds like sour grapes. And it may be. But Lyle and co-author Peter Golenbock decided on the book very early in the season and Lyle insists it would have been released "come hell or high water," whether he was traded or not. (Lyle is now pitching for the Texas Rangers).

The other problem with the book is the shoddy typesetting and editing job done by the Crown Publishing people. Yankee Coach Gene Michael is referred to throughout the book as Gene Michaels, and there are typographical errors which may or may not be the result of trying to get the book out early in the 1979 season.

All that aside, "The Bronx Zoo" is fun and it's a hit. People are putting it on the best-seller list perhaps because it's the first and only book written on the "Zoo-like" atmosphere that was (and may still be) the 1978 Yankees.

Lyle is kind when talking about most of his mates — often too kind. Even Reggie Jackson, whom Sparky refers to as "being from somewhere I've never been," doesn't get mowed down the way one might expect from a scorned Lyle. For the most part, however, he treats his teammates, coaches and managers with kid gloves.

Anyone expecting the kind of mud-slinging we saw from Jim Bouton's "Ball Four" will be disappointed. This book doesn't even begin to approach the crassness of Bouton's endeavor. If you like baseball, read this book. It's basically harmless (except for the treatment of Steinbrenner and selected others) and should be read by anyone even remotely interested in the world of baseball and especially in the zany world of the New York Yankees.

Inflation Claimed Related To Low Interest Rates

(EDITOR'S NOTE: The following is the 16th article in the continuing series entitled "The Business Indicator," written by John T. Sennetti of the College of Business Administration at Texas Tech University. These articles discuss statistics used in business forecasting and will be published on the second Sunday of every month. Dr. Sennetti also is a columnist for Texas Business Magazine.)

By JOHN T. SENNETTI

ITS TIME FOR THE Heimlich maneuver to be preformed on interest rates. The maneuver is a procedure used to prevent people from choking, usually from some nearly swallowed food particle. Standing behind the choking person, the rescuer grasps, with encircled hands, under the victim's diaphram and tightens up, forcing air against the block passage.

DR. JOHN T. SENNETTI

A tightening up of interest rates will eventually have similar benefits on monetary inflation.

Monetary inflation has us choking on high prices of gasoline, food, clothing and many of life's essentials. Certainly higher rates won't make mortgage rates any lower, but housing costs would slow their rapid pace. William Simon, the author of 'A Time for Truth' and past Secretary of the Treasury has argued that such inflation leads to loss of personal freedom. Obviously, the hardships of such inflation are not limited to loss of personal wealth. The loss of economic freedom is found in government's attempts to control prices, materials, and eventually how we spend our free time.

EVEN DIOCLETIAN, the Emperor of Rome in the late third century, after pricing 900 coMmodities and controlling 130 grades of labor, found in that the net result was shortages in materials necessary for life, and eventually collapse of social order. Money was worthless. No one wanted to trade it for any other commodity.

In a sense, the level of interest rates is the premium we have to pay for having our money worth anything at all.

Mr. William Miller, Chairman of the Federal Reserve, recently proclaimed that due to the real GNP's slow growth rate, he was opposed to higher interest rates. He argued that a tightening would send economy into the recession everybody has been forecasting.

Miller's policy is consistent with most positions taken by federal administrators, whose goal is to "fine tune" the employment rates through lower interest rates.

In defense of this policy, it can be shown that the United States has had the highest standard of living in the world since 1970, and has lost little ground in spite of the last recession. It is still relatively much cheaper to make a long distance telephone call within the United States than within any two points in West Germany.

SO LOW INTEREST rates may have raised our living standards. Even now with the prime rate near 12 per cent, national mortgage rates near 11, the current inflation rate of 13 percent makes the real rates so low that they are actually negative.

College of Business Administration
Texas Tech University

The Federal reserve has finally raised its federal funds rate (bank lending rates to other banks) to 10.19 percent, against the desires of it's board chairman, and the lower rates have made more money available to expand, produce, and generate goods and services for our high standard of living.

However, our recent national measure of such goods and services, adjusted for inflation was increased only 0.7 percent for the last quarter, due to an 8.7 percent rise in the GNP price deflator.

This price deflator was at the time used to adjust the financial statements of firms and also used to adjust such things as bank deposits to show real growth beyond inflation. Due to a recent proposal by the Financial Accounting Standards Board it seems that these numbers will be soon adjusted by the Consumer Price Index.

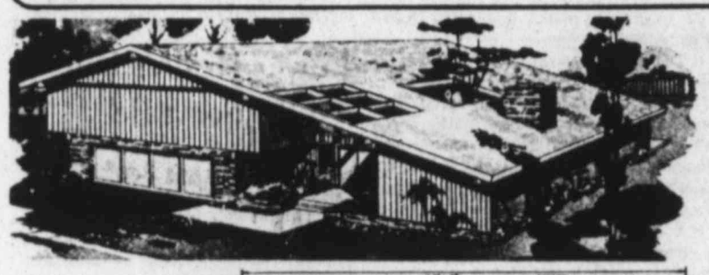
Accordingly, Consumer inflation rose 13 percent during the first quarter, much faster than the GNP price deflator. Lubbock bank deposits are actually declining according to 1972 (GNP deflated) dollars and will decline even faster after October 1, 1979, when adjusted for the Consumer Price Index.

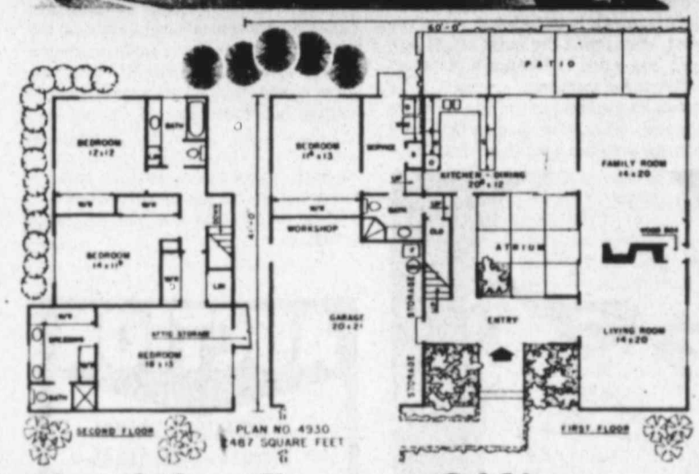
BANKERS ARE NOT the only group against high interest rates. A high rate means that retailers and manufacturers can borrow less to pay salaries, buildinventory even in the short term. Consumer credit also drops and demand follows this drop. So eventually unemployment rates rise. Now we can see why federal administrators prefer low rates and inflation to higher interest rates, because it is certainly more acceptable to have 15 percent inflation and a job, than to have five percent inflation and no job.

Nationally, the unemployment rate rose last month from 5.7 to 5.8 percent, but locally it fell from 3.6 to 3.1 percent. If the national trend in employment persists along with other indicators, like the leading index of twelve economic indicators, the next recession may occur this year. Eventually the local employment rate will also follow.

The positive percentage change in the local indicators, provided by the Lubbock Economics Council, was only at 63 percent last month, according to a chart constructed by Jim Eppler, Division Merchandise Manager of Hemphill Wells. This is still near the previous recession lows for this index which was announced at a recent Council meeting.

So independent of any choice of the Federal Reserve, soon to be dominated by low interest rate board members, Rice, Shultz, Teeters, Partee and Miller, given a recession this year, interest rates should have peaked within the next year. The alternatives are higher inflation, or price controls, shortages, and general social disorder.





Flexibility Feature Of New Home Plan Offered By Estes

By HIAWATHA ESTES

We believe this home is one of the most exciting and flexible designs that has ever been presented in this column. It offers numerous dramatic and outstanding features which are very seldom obtainable in a single plan.

The downstairs bedroom, service and bath are on the same floor level as the garage. Since this portion of the plan is immediately below the upstairs bedroom area, the entire left side of this home can be lowered to form a split level design for sloping lots. Large planting areas are on both sides of the walk leading to the distinctive entry. If preferred, reflecting pools—with or without fountains—could be substituted for the present planters. Double entry doors, flanked by wide stationary glass panels, combine to form a very glamorous entry. The spacious entry appears even larger due to the wide glass area overlooking the atrium. From the entry, one has direct access to the living room, garage, bath, kitchen and bedroom area upstairs.

The living and family rooms are separated by a double fireplace and wood box with book shelves above. If you prefer having one of these rooms larger than the other, the fireplaces could be easily moved in either direction. Glass doors open from the living room to the atrium and from the family room to the patio.

The huge kitchen-dining is accessible from many areas. Glass doors open from the dining to the atrium and patio. Windows could be substituted for one or both glass doors.

The luxurious master bedroom suite offers an unusual amount of storage including attic storage. From the open landing at the top of the stairs, there is a magnificent view through wide glass windows to the atrium.

Complete working drawings for plan 4930 can be purchased for only $19.95 for the first set and $10 for each additional set ordered at the same time. This plan will be available at these special prices until September 13, 1979. Please allow at least three weeks for delivery. Also available are six home plan books illustrating nearly 1,000 plans—a $13.00 value-for only $9.95 plus $1 for postage and handling. Send all orders to: Hiawatha Estes, P.O. Box 404-J. Firestone To Open New Tire Dealership

A new Firestone tire dealership specializing in the trucking and construction industry is scheduled to open in Lubbock on May 21.

Designated Tom Richardson Truck Tire Center, the new dealer is located at 1329 E. 19th St., just off Avenue A, overlooking the Canyon Lake. The 16,000-square-foot building is situated on a 2½-acre fenced and paved site. The property and building was purchased from Colquit Fitzgerald and the Del-Tex Candy Co. of San Angelo.

The new Firestone outlet is part of the GCR Group Inc., headquartered in Abilene and Austin. The GCR Group is the largest Firestone dealer group in the world with 48 stores in Texas. Located over a wide area, these outlets are in cities from Odessa to Dallas and Houston. The Lubbock store marks the initial entry of GCR into the South Plains market.

GCR President Harold Crawford of Abilene, in announcing the new store, said, "We are very optimistic about the potential in Lubbock and West Texas for our type of business. The trucking and heavy construction fields are experiencing tremendous growth and our Lubbock store can handle any of their needs. Agricultural and farm tire sales will also be an important segment of our business."

The Lubbock store will feature the latest in equipment and vehicles to service the heavy duty tire market. A mobile service fleet will be equipped to service customers on the job site or place of business.

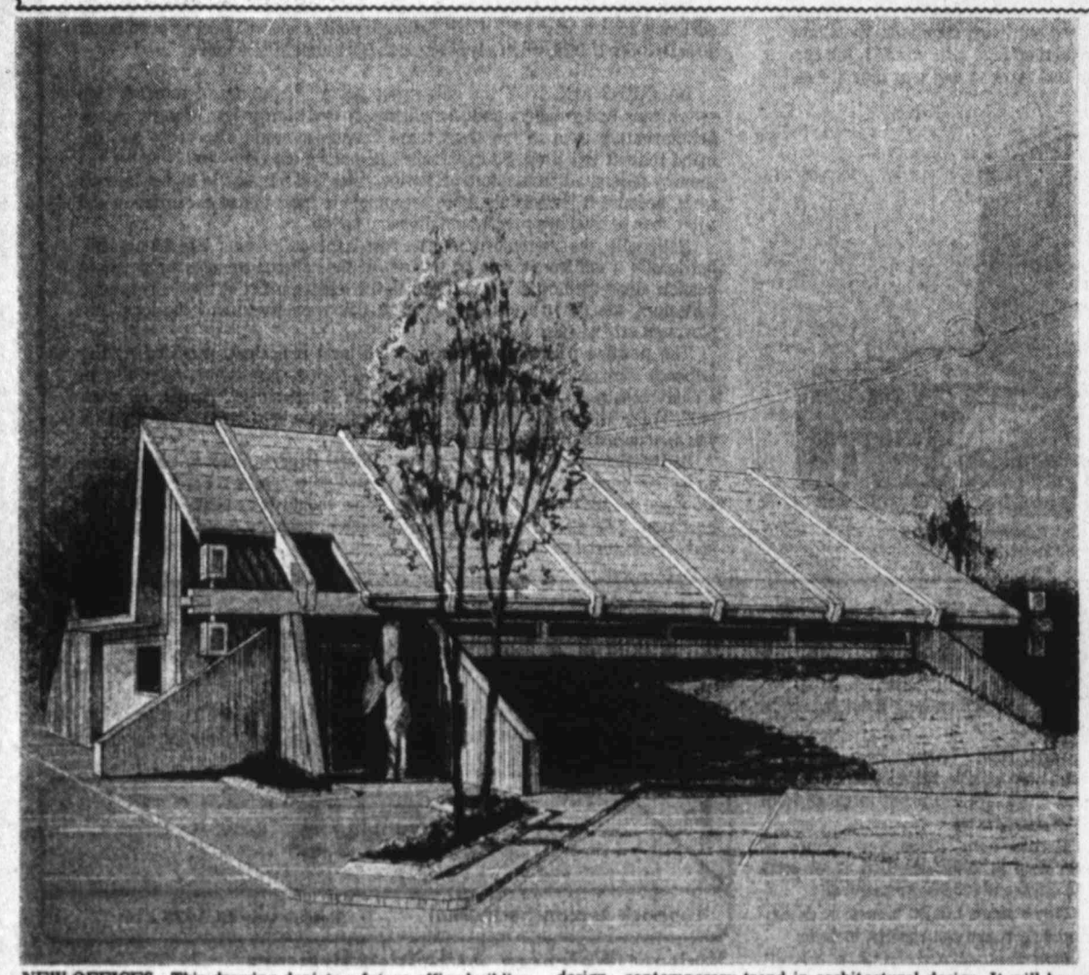
C. N. Harrison Construction Co. is currently remodeling the building and enlarging the office and service areas.

Tom J. Richardson, a Lubbock native, will be returning to the South Plains to head the operation. He attended Texas Tech University and has extensive experience in the automotive industry, including eight years with Chrysler Corp. public relations. Most recently, he has been with Harold Crawford Truck Tire Center in Abilene.

Pat Huggins, president of the Abilene store, is also a partner in the new Lubbock operation.

Richardson and his wife, Judy, are the parents of two children, Bradley, 12, and Paige, 5. They will be moving to Lubbock from Abilene.

The new Firestone store will employ approximately 12 persons, including sales, service and clerical personnel.



NEW OFFICES—This drawing depicts a future office building for Whitaker and Hall, Architects and Engineers. The facilities will combine energy efficiency technology and passive solar design—contemporary trend in architectural design. It will be located at 2517 74th St. Construction cost for the project is estimated at $115,000 for 4,338 square feet of space.

Women In Construction Name 'Boss Of Year'

The Lubbock Chapter of the National Association of Women in Construction held its annual Scholarship and Bosses Banquet recently at South Park Inn.

The Lubbock Chapter's scholarship this year, for $450, was awarded to Tim Quilliams, son of Mrs. Earnest Quilliams. He is a student at Lubbock High School, and plans to attend South Plains College in Levelland after graduation. Mrs. Quilliams is a teacher at Posey Elementary School.

The 1979 Boss of the Year award was presented to H. R. Bundock of H. R. Bundock Construction Co. Inc., which was established in Lubbock in 1936.

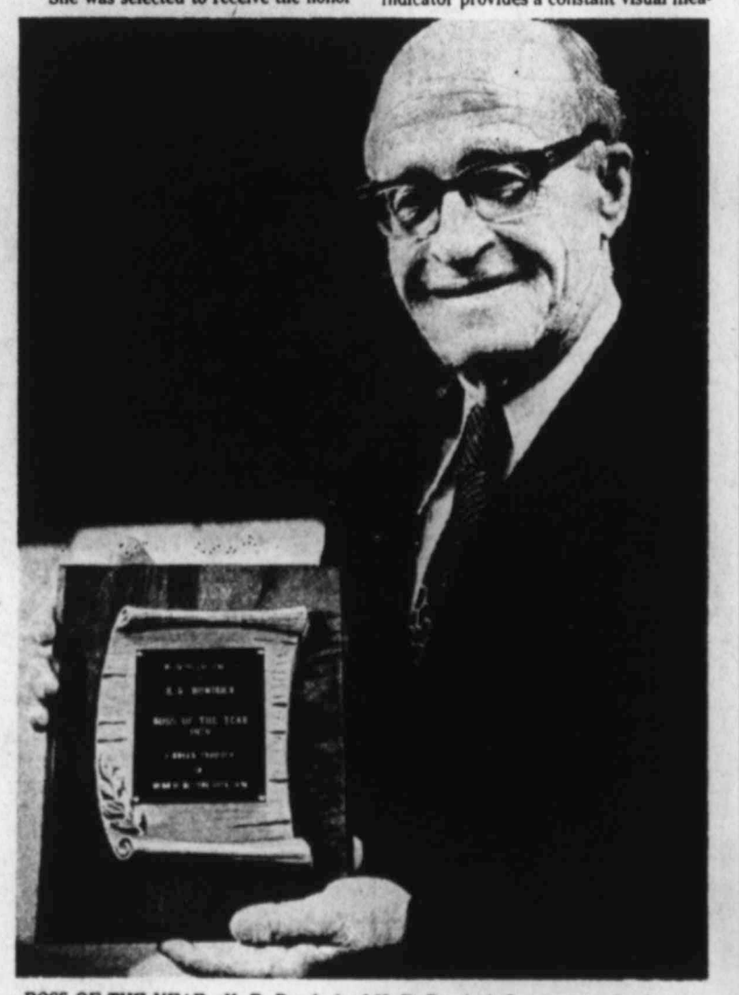
Bundock, who was born in Canada, attended Texas Christian University and Texas Tech University. He worked in Hawaii in the construction business during World War II. Bundock is a member of the West Texas Chapter of the Associated General Contractors of America, and received the Master Builder Award in 1978.

Bundock was active in the recent Lubbock Arts Festival, and is presently president of Southwest Lighthouse for the Blind.

Pam Tarver of Bill Tarver Electric was selected as Woman In Construction of the Year. She is secretary-treasurer of the firm, and is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Bill Tarver of Lubbock.

She was selected to receive the honor "because of her loyalty to the organization and diligent efforts in projects this year."

Speaker for the Women In Construction program was Bruce Lokey of Lokey's Farm & Ranch, United Coupon Clearing and United Marketing. He spoke on "Principles of Success."



BOSS OF THE YEAR—H. R. Bundock of H. R. Bundock Construction Co. Inc. has been selected Boss of the Year by the Lubbock Chapter of Women In Construction. The honor was conferred recently at the organization's annual banquet. Tim Quilliams of 2509 29th St., a student at Lubbock High School, was awarded a scholarship by the chapter. Deco Plants Firm Opens New Branch Store Here

Deco Plants Co., a division of Ralston Purina Co., has opened a branch office in Monterey Shopping Center, with Skip and Chris Easton of Amarillo as managers.

The firm specializes in a soil-free system of growing plants, designated Deco Plantsystem.

The system is a combination of ingredients in which soil has been replaced by "living stones," a specially prepared man-made dry clay aggregate. The stones provide clean, stable support and make it possible to maintain a balanced supply of air and moisture to the plant's root system.

A carefully balanced nutirent which contains all the substances needed for healthy growth is included in every watering, eliminating the questions of how much and when to fertilize a plant, according to the managers.

The final component of the system is a special container in which a fluid level indicator provides a constant visual measurement of the moisture remaining in the container.

The product is marketed through a home party plan, in which a hostess offers demonstrations of the plant system.

The firm has 112 warehouse and meeting facilities in 27 states.

Fewer Homes Due To Be For Sale

MILWAUKEE (UPI) — A Large private insurer of home mortgages does not expect a crunch in consumer credit this year but predicts fewer homes may be available for sale.

Max Karl, chairman of Mortgage Guaranty Insurance Corp., expects the 23-44-year-old age group to dominate the home buying market this year. He also expects non-traditional buyers, such as singles, nonrelated persons and widows to account for a growing number of them.

Karl credits this trend to a growing conviction on the part of Americans that a home is one of the best hedges against inflation.

Sixth School For Savings, Loan Associations To Open At Tech

Texas Tech University's sixth annual school for savings and loan associations will be held today through Friday on the Tech campus.

More than 120 savings and loan association officials and professional employees from six states are expected to attend.

The school, offered through the Center of Professional Development of the Texas Tech College of Business Administration, is directed by Prof. John Burnett. Curriculum includes intermediate and advanced programs.

The intermediate program is recommended for new or relatively inexperienced employees to become familiar with the general scope of the savings and loanindustry or for professionals whose experience has been limited to one segment of the industry. The program provides an overview of key aspects of the industry and operations of individual associations. Tuition fee is $325.

The advanced program will provide an in-depth analysis of salient facets of industry operations, with emphasis on how these relate to an association's total growth and profitability. Tuition is $350.

Both programs utilize case studies and small group discussions. Leading industry figures will serve as instructors and discussion leaders.

Information may be obtained from the Center for Professional Development, 742-3170.

THE U.S. AND YOU

William Steif

"IN CHILDHOOD," SAYS the little pamphlet, "anger and sadness are very close to one another and it is important to remember that much of what an adult experiences as sadness is expressed by a child as anger."

The pamphlet, entitled "Dealing with the Angry Child," is part of the Plain Talk series published by the National Institute of Mental Health. In simple language it sums up a lot of the wisdom that psychologists, psychiatrists and especially parents have been learning, sometimes painfully, for decades.

The pamphlet is no panacea for beleaguered parents. All of us know there are no panaceas. But this edition of Plain Talk does something few publications, especially federal publications, do. It gives reasonable explanations for children's anger, and solid, specific advice on how to "manage" childish outbursts.

First it tells us something about adults, about ouselves. It says we were led to believe, as children, that to be angry was to be bad.

Get rid of this notion, the pamphlet advises. "Our goal is not to repress or destroy angry feelings in children — or in ourselves — but to accept the feelings and to help channel and direct them to constructive ends."

NEXT, SAY THE EXPERTS, parents and teachers must allow children to feel ALL their feelings. Adults should show children acceptable ways to express feelings. Adults need ideas about what may have triggered an outburst in a child. Is the anger a defense to avoid painful feelings? Is it associated with failure, low self-esteem, feeling of isolation? Is it anxiety about situations over which the child has no control?

The adult must distinguish between anger and aggression: "Anger is a temporary emotional state caused by frustration; aggression is often an attempt to hurt a person or to destroy property."

So the experts address adults: "Our actions should be motivated by the need to protect and to teach, not by a desire to punish."

Plain Talk's editors, led by Hilda Fried, pick up helpful ideas from two outside experts, Fritz Redl and David Wineman. Here are some of those ideas:

— Tell the child what behavior pleases you; "catch the child being good."
— Ignore inappropriate behavior that can be tolerated.
— Provide physical outlets and other alternatives at home and in school.
— Plan surroundings to make angry outbursts less likely to happen.
— Use closeness and touching. Young children are often calmed by having an adult nearby.
— Express GENUINE interest in the child's activities.
— Ease tension though humor, but DON'T use sarcasm or ridicule.
— Say "NO!" Explain limits clearly and enforce them.
— Build a positive self-image, so the child sees himself as a valued and valuable person.

FOR THE PARENT who says his of her child is "driving me crazy," this rational pamphlet is worth reading and re-reading. It's free, by sending a postcard asking for "Dealing with the Angry Child," Consumer Information Center, Dept. 646G, Pueblo, Colo. 81009.

This pamphlet isn't the only free publication that the federal government puts out on parenting. Another is called "Families in Stress," published by the National Center on Child Abuse and Neglect. It offers some excellent tips. It can also direct you to private groups dealing with parent-child problems and gives the names, addresses and phone numbers of the federal government's 10 Child Abuse and Neglect Resource Centers around the nation. You can write for "Families in Stress," Consumer Information Center, Dept. 642G, Pueblo, Colo. 81009.

Another parenting manual of interest is called "Footsteps," developed by the U.S. Office of Education as a guide to accompany a public TV series. It contains considerable counsel and may be had by dropping a postcard to the Consumer Information Center, Dept. 648G, Pueblo, Colo. 81009.

Reynolds Module Systems Moves Quarters To City

Reynolds Module Systems Inc. has moved its corporate headquarters to Lubbock from Dallas, according to an announcement by Barry Reynolds, president.

Corporate headquarters and manufacturing facilities are located at 1705 North Nashville. Presently, the plant complex is comprised of two buildings totaling 16,000 square feet and is eauipped for fabricating and servicing module mover trucks for cotton gins.

"Our company began in 1966 and started manufacturing hay stack mover trucks in 1972. In 1974 we delivered the first Reynolds Module Mover especially designed for moving cotton modules from the field to the gin," Reynolds said. "We made the decision to move to Lubbock to be closer to our markets. Fortyunits were delivered last season and we are projecting a goal this season of 50 units."

Over 150 movers are currently in service in Texas, Oklahoma, New Mexico, Arizona and California.

Bluegrass Offers Best Lawn Value, Tests Show

MARYSVILLE, Ohio (UPI) — Bluegrass offers the best lawn value, says Dale Kern, president of an independent seed testing company.

Kern says that variety is attractive and tough "and the plants will spread and multiply for decades." He says bluegrass is usually the best buy because it provides more seeds per pound than you get, for example, from a ryegrass.

Depending on variety, a pound of bluegrass contains up to 2 million seeds, compared with only 250,000 for a pound of ryegrass. "So bluegrass, if it's $5 a pound, would be a much better seed value than 10 pounds of annual rye at the same price," says the Seed Technology, Inc. executive.

Donald St. Clair Elected Controller At City Bank

Donald R. St. Clair has been elected Controller by the board of directors of the Lubbock National Bank, according to an announcement by Wayne Finnell, president and chief executive officer.

Prior to joining the bank, St. Clair was an accountant with Arthur Young and Co. in Houston.

St. Clair is a 1977 graduate of the University of Houston with a B.S. degree in accounting.

SHORT BREAK

Drive Aimed At Illegal CBers

By MIKE WENDLAND

Two nationwide CB groups representing upward of 100,000 radio operators have launched separate and long-overdue campaigns to get illegal CBers off frequencies not allocated by the FCC to the Citizens Radio Service.

What is unique about the effort—besides the sheer size of the campaign—is that both clubs were started by the very airwave pirates they are now seeking to displace.

The groups are both nationwide. HF International, based in California, represents 80,000 members. The Whiskey Club, which is organized on state and regional lines, claims some 20,000 members. Both are sideband clubs only.

Up until just recently, the stalwart members of the organizations were, as often as not, the FCC's major troublemakers. They blatantly shot skip, or talked beyond the FCC's 150-mile CB limit; they used linear amplifiers or high-powered ham radio transceivers modified to work on the CB band; and, perhaps worse yet, they operated wherever they felt like, which usually was outside of the 40-channel CB band.

To be sure, not all of the violators have been ousted from both groups. A casual monitoring of the airwave space between the 27-MHz CB band and the ham's 10-meter band shows plenty of continuing illegal operation.

But for the first time, the groups are now trying to clean up their act.

We can't hide the fact that a lot of our members did operate illegally in the past, says Jean Muewler of HF International. But we can rectify our stand and strive toward improving the service.

Paul Robinson, a coordinator for the Whiskey Club, agrees. What some of our members did before has hurt us all. If we want more from CB, we've got to first show the FCC and the public that we can handle what we have.

With the change in emphasis have come efforts to encourage legal operation. While both groups continue to issue numbers, or special identifier codes to their members, the numbers are no longer meant to take the place of legal FCC callsigns. Indeed, prominently mentioned in the groups' operating procedures is the use of FCC callsigns.

The FCC callsign should come first, instructs the two groups, to be followed by the club numbers.

The groups also discourage the use of AM-style handles and slang, instead urging their members to talk like you would on the telephone, with the exception of giving a two-second pause between transmissions to allow waiting stations to indicate their desire to use the frequency.

But the biggest no-no is now the use of illegal frequencies, above CB Channel 40. Operation and use of club identifiers is only to be used on legal frequencies and then only on the channels used by sideband operators: 16, 35, 36, 37, 38, 39, 40.

It's still too early to tell how successful the clean-up efforts of the groups will be. But, judging by the revised rules and operating suggestions, both groups have made a good start.

We'll keep you informed of their progress.

Q. I use a magnetic mount antenna. Normally, my SWR match is good. But when the roof is wet, the SWR goes sky-high. What causes it?—D. D., Southfield, Mich.

A. It sounds like one of two things. Either you have a poor magnet that isn't making a good ground connection in wet weather, or water is somehow seeping into your coax or the antenna coil. For a complete discussion on antenna problems, see my book, THE WENDLAND CB GLOVE COMPARTMENT BIBLE, available for $3.95, 6700 Squibb Road, Mission, Kans. 66202.)

CB Static: Readers Air Gripes

Dear Mike: Public indignation is long overdue over the ethnic slurs many CB smut peddlers are using on the air. In particular, I'm referring to the truckers who call cattle-hauling trucks Polack (or Dago or whatever) school buses. It is unbelievable that America's people can be so defamed and disparaged. Such terms speak poorly of this country's social climate.—J. S., Detroit.

• • •

Dear Mr. Wendland: Tell your readers whose CB sets are overloaded by other signals to stop using power mikes. If every power mike in the country was tossed into the garbage, the CB airwaves would be usable again.—M. B., Dallas, Texas.

• • •

Dear CB STATIC: The FCC should have an emergency number for night calls. Recently, I heard somebody advertising linears over the air. He was meeting customers on a street corner and selling them out of the trunk of his car. I tried to alert our local FCC people but it was after 5 p. m., and no one answered the call. That's not good enforcement, to me.—F. B., Los Angeles!

(Got a CB gripe, compliment or suggestion? Write Mike Wendland, CB STATIC, P.O. Box 2218, Mission, Kan. 66201. And for a complete discussion of the world of CB, see THE WENDLAND CB GLOVE COMPARTMENT BIBLE, available postpaid for $3.95, 6700 Squibb Rd., Mission, Kans. 66202.)

The Voice of Business

By RICHARD L. LESHER
President, U.S. Chamber Of Commerce

WASHINGTON — Has it ever occurred to you that government seems willing to expose our children to everything—except work? Consider, for example, what recently happened in Fort Worth, Texas, where two teenage businessmen found themselves paralyzed by the protective clutches of Big Brother.

The two young entrepreneurs, Donald Woodward and his younger brother and an assistant, Blake, had been busily building their own business selling advertising for the (Ft. Worth) News Tribune. Donald classified himself as an independent advertising account executive. And; like so many of their compatriots, these two Texans were go-getters—talented, ambitious, hard-working, and very successful.

A bit too successful it seemed, for their activities caught the attention of a compliance officer from the Department of Labor stationed in the Fort Worth area. The officer, Joe Noriega, felt that the Woodward brothers' persistent self initiative meant the News Tribune was acting as an employer in violation of "Child Labor Requirements in Nonagricultural Occupations under the Fair Labor Standards Act."

But after amazing clarity, patience and grace, and with the help of a Webster's Dictionary which somehow triumphed over the Department of Labor booklet, younger Donald seemed to convince older Joe that he really was self-employed. Well, not quite. For apparently Joe believed he was on a mission of mercy, and he was determined to carry out his rescue. Here is a sprinkling of the ensuing conversation as reported by Madeleine Williams, who covered the story for the News Tribune.

JOE: "Now Donald, I am here to protect you..."

DON: "Against what?"

JOE: "...The government recognizes that certain classifications of employees need protection..."

DON: "I'm not an employee. And what do I need protection against?"

JOE: "H.O., what the Department of Labor calls 'hazardous occupation.'"

DON: "There's nothing hazardous about selling advertising unless you make a prospect so mad he throws you out of the office, and I don't."

JOE: "The government protects you as a salesman. It is conceivable you could work all day and not sell an ad and then you wouldn't get any money for your work."

DON: "It is not conceivable, sir."

JOE: "Nevertheless, the government wants to be sure you do not work for nothing...as an outside salesman, you are entitled to $4.35 an hour..."

DON: "I don't work by the hour."

JOE: "But that's what you are to be paid when you spend your time and don't make any sales."

DON: "Do you think I would accept money for something I didn't do? I wouldn't take it. That's an insult."

JOE: "Now, Donald, that's the law."

But Donald refused to believe that law applied to his own case. And he prevailed...sort of. After extensive consultations, Mr. Noriega returned to declare Donald an independent agent. But the government wanted everyone to be aware that both Donald and the citizens on the streets face hazards when the young man drives his car during work hours. And as for brother Blake, he was not to be permitted to work more than three hours a day, nor after 7 p.m.

Of course, the attitude of bureaucrats in Fort Worth merely reflects the larger problem nationwide. I was reminded of this while recently hosting the weekly Chamber public affairs radio program, "What's The Issue?" My guest was George Allen, the very successful NFL football coach for 12 seasons, and now national chairman of the Summer Jobs for Youth Program being run by the National Alliance for Business.

George got into this program when he saw how wasted summers were leading to the loss of careers, and even lives. And he's done a fantastic job. This year he's aiming for 270,000 jobs—jobs that will provide needed experience and the invaluable lesson that hard work and a good attitude can lead to success and transform drifters into achievers.

The problem is, every time the minimum wage increases, as it just has, the marginally profitable firms are compelled to lay off workers or stop hiring. Programs like Summer Jobs for Youth are hurt. To me, that's criminal, especially when you realize that young unemployment is running about 18 percent, and for minorities it's about 35 percent. At the very least we need a youth wage differential, a point on which most economists agree.

We must solve this problem and arrest the smothering of our traditional work ethic. Unfortunately, the solution will probably come in spite of, rather than in cooperation with, the federal government.

Firm Puts Corndog Fryer On Market

Automated Food Systems Inc., 1206 18th, has begun a nationwide marketing program for the PTL-400, an automated corndog fryer developed for the fast-food processing industry by Glenn Walser, a partner in the Lubbock firm.

The machine is believed by its manufacturers to be the only fully automated corndog system currently available to food manufacturers and processors, and, according to Walser, conserves time, plant floor space and labor.

Walser said the system's estimated production capacity of 450 dozen corndogs per hour can greatly increase industry productivity. Patent is pending on the machine.

Walser, an industrial engineer, received his degree from Texas Tech University in 1960. He has worked in and around the Lubbock area for the past 2(years, three of which have been with Automated Food Systems, Inc.

He joined Plains in 1970 as a part-time teller and has worked in the proof, vault and bookkeeping departments. On-Job Medical Tests Being Tried

NEW YORK (UPI) — Two states are testing an on-the-job high blood pressure control project developed by the Blue Cross and Blue Shield Associations.

The two-year study was started late last year by the Connecticut and Michigan health insurance plans under contract with the National Heart, Lung and Blood Institute. They are trying to determine the feasibility of programs to control hypertension by screening and treating people for the disease at their jobs.

The study is being done at work because screening, referral or treatment and long-term monitoring can be done conveniently and efficiently in such circumstances with minimal loss of work time.

OUR PLEDGE

We pledge allegiance to the Flag of the United States of America and to the Republic for which it stands, one Nation, under God, indivisible, with Liberty and Justice for all.

AN EDITORIAL:

Change--For Better Or Worse

SELDOM IN recent times have the American people faced such a mounting list of domestic problems. And all in the midst of "the land of plenty."

As the nation's energy crisis deepens, with the current spotlight on the growing gasoline shortage, millions are living day to day, but looking over their shoulders in the process.

While still enjoying the best of all worlds, in comparison with almost any other society, there is the nagging feeling that somewhere down the road the great American dream, if not the auto, is going to face a roadblock.

It doesn't have to be that way. Once before, during the 1973 Arab Oil Embargo, the American people, as well as the rest of the Western World, got a taste of what life with less energy might be like.

MOST SHOWED a willingness to buckle up and meet the challenge, by driving less, by wasting less, by sharing and cooperating.

Today, five years later, a sort of false security has lulled many into the belief that "there ain't really a gasoline shortage," and things will return to normal in the not distant future. Such thinking is a pipe dream which will turn into a nightmare.

The fact is that the American people must change their life-style. Not drastically, perhaps. But certainly in a material, noticeable manner.

Until we come up with viable alternatives for energy, workable and safe nuclear power, better use of coal and solar systems, the only alternative is to conserve what we have and buy in the way of crude oil and its by-products.

THIS WILL mean less driving, more fuel-saving cars and heating and cooling and cooking. It will mean higher prices, although it should not mean "price gouging." And it will mean a better informed public.

A better informed public? That's right. Had the American people been better informed, especially by the Carter administration and others, as to the full impact of our policy toward Iran, perhaps part of the fuel crunch would not be haunting us today.

As it turns out, and we warned of this fully a year ago, an event 8,000 miles away has quickly come home to roost as close as the neighborhood gas pump.

But, the issue is no longer who is to blame for the position we are in. The issue is to seek solutions which will assure the survival of the free enterprise system and a way of life which, even cut back, still is the best in the world.

AN EDITORIAL:

This One Is For You, Mom

SOMEWHERE around the end of the 1960s and early 1970s, it looked as though motherhood were going out of style.

Feminists were busy demythologizing the "mystique" of motherhood and trying to teach women that there were ways to lead a fulfilling life other than by having a houseful of children.

After a while, people began to think of ways in which women could avoid the ordeal of pregnancy and childbirth completely. Talk of test-tube babies became topical.

"Culturally, if the artificial womb catches on, it will mean that the 'awefulness' associated with pregnancy and childbirth will have nothing to feed on," wrote Edward Grossman in an Atlantic article titled "The Obsolescent Mother."

"IF IT CONTINUES to excite any awe at all, motherhood will not do so more than fatherhood. This will have its inevitable effect on the relation of women to men, women to their children, and the society or state to children..." Grossman predicted in 1971.

Now, however, motherhood appears to be making a comeback. Breast feeding and natural childbirth are becoming more and more popular, and accounts of assists by fathers in the delivery room no longer are novel.

"It is misleading and unfair to imply that an intelligent woman must 'rise above' her maternal instincts and return to work when many intelligent, sensitive women have found that the reverse is better for them," wrote Dr. Sally E. Shaywitz, a pediatrician and mother of three, in New York Times Magazine.

THE FIRST Mother's Day observance was held on May 10, 1908, in Grafton, W.Va. "The idea was born in the heart and mind of Miss Anna Jarvis in honor of her mother and all mothers of the day who were struggling to restore high standards of family and community life," said an historian.

It was Miss Jarvis' idea (at a time before there was a designated day for nearly everything) that once a year, "with the arrival of the first spring blossoms," that people of the community pause to pay their respects to their mothers.

On May 8, 1914, President Woodrow Wilson signed a proclamation setting aside the second Sunday in May to be observed annually in the nation as Mother's Day.

But this one is just for you, Mom, with all our love.

ART BUCHWALD:

Mom Sits And Waits For 'Him' To Return

WASHINGTON—It is only fitting as we celebrate Mother's Day that we honor those women who sit at home and wait. Some of them wait for the plumber, others for the electrician.

These are brave women, unsung, afraid to leave their houses for even a half hour because the person they are waiting for might show up the moment they are gone.

Mrs. Katherine Davenport has been chosen this year to represent all the mothers of America who sit in a lonely vigil waiting for a repairman or a delivery driver who never comes.

I VISITED HER home in Bethesda, Md., the other day to talk to her. She answered the door excitedly, but when I told her I was a journalist, her face dropped.

"I was hoping that you were the linoleum man," she said. "I've been waiting for him for three weeks."

"That's not a long time."

"It seems like an eternity," she said. "He promised me he'd be here to lay the linoleum in the kitchen on April 23rd at nine o'clock."

"Have you heard from him since?"

"No, but I received a postcard from the Red Cross a week ago telling me he was well and that he was thinking of me."

SHE SHOWED me the card which she apparently had read many times.

"Every morning I call the linoleum store and they say he's coming that day. I'm going out of my mind with worry. They get your spirits up and then by the end of the day they've sunk. Why do they say he's coming when they know he isn't?"

"I guess they don't want you to despair," I suggested. "We all need hope."

Mrs. Davenport twisted a handkerchief. "You don't know what it's like to just sit here waiting for the doorbell to ring. I don't sleep at nights because I have these nightmares that he took another job in Rockville.

"I keep wondering if he's getting enough to eat, or whether his truck has broken down, or even worse that the linoleum I ordered never arrived. If he would just call and tell me he is all right, I could get through the days. But the uncertainty of it is driving me crazy."

"I'M SURE HE'S all right or you would have heard from the Retail Linoleum Layers of America. Three weeks is not a long time to wait for a trademan who promised to come on a certain day."

"But when he measured the kitchen floor he said he'd be back in a week. Why would he say that if he didn't mean it?"

"They all say that," I told her. "We once called a sewer man who said he would be there in two hours. He showed up alive and well six months later.

"When he finally came my wife asked what had happened, and all he said was, 'I got here as fast as I could.' Just when you give up all hope they do arrive."

"You're just saying that to make me feel better. Many of my friends have called repairmen who said they would come, and they've never been heard from again," she said as tears clouded her eyes.

"HAVE YOU thought about getting another linoleum man?" I asked.

"Every woman thinks about it," she said, "but what guarantee do I have that the second linoleum man won't do the same thing to me that the first one did?

I didn't have an answer for her. I got up to leave.

She took me to the door. "Would you like to see the tape measure he left behind?" I said I would. She pulled open a drawer and with loving hands showed it to me.

"It's a beautiful tape measure," I said. "You were lucky to have even those few hours with him."

Lubbock Woman Takes Issue On State Pension Editorial

Editor, Avalanche-Journal:

In regard to your editorial of April 30, 1979, concerning state pensions, apparently you had done very little or no research on this matter.

My husband retired on Aug. 31, 1977, after having served 40 years in State employment. His monthly pension check after deducts for federal W.H. taxes and medical insurance, is exactly $669.42. He contributed approximately 6 percent of his gross income every month toward this retirement. Do you really think he is being overpaid?

I would suggest that you research material before writing editorials.

Mrs. Dixie Johnson, 4415 32nd St.

(EDITOR'S NOTE: The point of the editorial was that the Legislature is haphazardly abusing state pension plans, such as by granting generous benefits for early retirements, to the point that the high cost may jeopardize future payments to older and disabled retirees who have earned them.)

She Wonders Why Mexicans Buying 'Short' U.S. Gas

Editor, Avalanche-Journal:

I read recently that the U.S. is presently sending to Mexico "hundreds of thousands of gallons of gasoline each month and the amount is increasing."

If 216,552 gallons went through the San Diego border crossing in March 1979, what price did Mexico pay? How can Mexicans buy gasoline at half the price we presently pay?

A few days after this news was published, a newspaper contained a photo of Californians lined up at service stations with a variety of containers seeking just a little gasoline. They really looked like beggars!

Lubbockite Offers Opinion On Busing's 'Bad Points'

Editor, Avalanche-Journal:

I direct my opinion to all citizens of Lubbock. My opinion comes from living in the North, Midwest, Great Lakes area, and Southeast area.

I fail to see any gain in mass school busing for sake of integration.

To improve the schools and teaching, I offer the following points, for your thought:

1. Waste of childrens' traveling time to school.
2. Cost, purchase and operation of buses that could be better spent for better schools, better equipment and teachers.
3. Too much tax money used for other than learning.
4. Some buses are either overloaded or partially loaded.
5. Increased accident and injury rate. Some buses not regularly safety checked. Some drivers not used to coping with children.
6. Misbehavior on buses, boredom from long rides.
7. More bicycles or carpools. Even in a gas shortage, carpools would be an advantage.

Let's get together for the sake of the kids.

Washington Prayer Rally Vital To Nation, She Says

Editor, Avalanche-Journal:

On Tuesday, May 1st, over 10,000 Christians of all denominations gathered on the west steps of the nation's Capitol to pray for America. It was a very thrilling sight to see.

There were 15 of us from West Texas who attended the Prayer Rally. A pastor from California had organized the rally, but no names were ever mentioned from the speaker's stand because no person was to be honored. It was well organized and planned—very impressive.

We gathered at noon at the Washington Monument and walked in lines of 12 down Constitution Avenue to the steps of the Capitol, and the crowd was so big that when those of us at the front of the line reached the Capitol, the end of the line had not left the Washington Monument—a distance of over a mile. There was scripture read, prayers, and singing of patriotic songs and hymns. Flags representing every state were displayed. The President's Marine Band played. That evening we again met at the Lincoln Memorial for a candlelight service and prayer.

We as Christians must put feet to our prayers and get involved in our government as individuals, but prayer is the power behind our efforts.

There will be another rally held next year on April 27th before our elections.

Writers Defend Proper Use Of School Sex Education

Editor, Avalanche-Journal:

We are saddened that a writer of George Will's stature would furnish his readers with so little fact and so much prejudice as he did in his column in The A-J (May 2) on "Sex in the Schools."

He quotes at length an article critical of the sex education program in one city in California and from that generalizes about the poor quality of sex education in American public schools. As a matter of fact, there are numerous fine programs in sex education in public schools and in churches across the country. It is true that the program in the Lubbock schools is mainly a "plumbing" course, but that could be rectified.

We agree with him that sex can be badly, even coarsely, taught in our schools. Teachers with little training in any subject are likely to teach badly, and sex education is no exception. Human sexuality, an integral, natural part of human life, needs to be taught by the most skilled, best qualified teachers available who have particular sensitivity to the feelings and needs of their students.

Mr. Will, through half-truths and innuendo, pictures sex as dirty and unnatural, something better suppressed than brought out in the open and thoroughly explained. But, holding back from our children the best knowledge possible about sex will result, as it has in the past, in blind experimentation and the acquisition of sex misinformation from the worst school of all, their peers. This lack of understanding about their sexuality and their responsibility for it explains why teenage women account for half of the out-of-wedlock births and one third of the abortions.

Sex education, taught well and openly, provides an understanding of human sexuality; an awareness of, and sense of responsibility for, the sexual urges all normal teen-agers experience; a knowledge of the natural physical changes in developing from child to man or woman; and a sensitivity to the beauty and naturalness of human sexuality. In a word, thoughtful, skilled sex education provides an essential part of a young person's total education and preparation for a place in adult society.

VIRGINIA PAYETTE:

New Kids On Block

QUESTION: WHO, in these double-digit days of inflation, can possibly scrape up enough money to pay the outlandish prices people are asking—and getting—for their homes?

Answer: the young-marrieds, that's who.

And if that surprises you, join the club. Not only are couples in their 20s and 30s shelling out small fortunes, they're not wasting their time on small cottages. What they're after are the big old houses, and to heck with the size of the down payment.

It's us older folk, at the peak of our earning power (theoretically, anyway), who are buying up the little nests. We're paying skyhigh prices for those, too, but the difference in our case is that huge mortgages still scare us.

NOT THE younger folks. Toss them a six-figure price and they don't even blink.

We found this out last month when we crossed our fingers and put our old three-story Tudor on the market at a figure that made even our broker turn pale. We sold it in six days. Without washing a single window.

And not once, among all the dozens of "lookers," did we spot a husband or wife who was getting even close to a 40th birthday. Just kids, most of 'em. One couple wasn't even married yet, but after the honeymoon they wanted to come home to a five-bedroom house.

Most had babies and small toddlers in tow; we clocked three pregnant prospects; and a few of the husbands didn't look old enough to shave every day, let alone find their way to the loan officer's desk.

IT WAS DOWNRIGHT unsettling.

Where, we asked one of the real estate ladies, did people this young get that kind of money?

"They put the bite on their parents," she shrugged. "Or they've just sold a smaller house, which gives them enough for the down payment. Or they both have jobs. Or they know a real friendly banker."

One reason we put our house on early was to cash in quickly before the market began to cool off and before mortgage rates got too hot for anybody to handle.

Turns out we needn't have rushed.

True, the market does seem to be softening, but it's a spotty trend. Homes in our village are selling almost before the ink dries on the newspaper ads, and the story is the same in other big-city areas in the south and west.

THE AVERAGE new home in San Francisco is up to $105,000, and for that you don't get a town house on Nob Hill. Real estate brokers say they "can't believe the prices," but it's a rare house that isn't snapped up in a week or two.

There's some slowdown in places where lenders are getting stingy with mortgage money, but everybody expects that to be only temporary. What the bankers are waiting for is for interest rates to go up, and when that happens, they'll find the money.

Apparently, that has occured to the "lookers," too. They're so conditioned to the cost of everything going up more every day, they look upon a 10-or-12-percent rate as some kind of terrific bargain.

There's one school of investment thought that says the way to figure the "real" rate of interest is to deduct the inflation rate.

SO IF YOU'RE into double-digit territory as deep as 12 percent (which we are at the moment) and you've got a 12-percent mortgage rate, you have an interest-free mortgage.

That's what economists call "adjusting for inflation," which is a sure-enough bargain. And you can deduct the non-adjusted interest from your income tax, which makes it even better.

There are all kinds of statistics rattling around on what kind of family can afford a brand-new home, and they're almost identical to those who opt for older ones.

More than half, or 54.5 percent, are between 25 and 34. Their median household income is $24,730, and at least half are two-income families. For a lot of them, the mortgage payments eat up between 25 and 35 percent of their net income.

BUT THEY DON'T worry about heavy debt loads. Most young couples are counting on their rising incomes to cover it. And they look upon real estate as the best inflation hedge there is.

With that kind of attitude loose in the land, you can't blame realtors for predicting that last month's sales figures, when they are all added up, will probably hit new records, only to be topped by even higher totals when the spring buying fever becomes epidemic.

And why Old Dad is beginning to wonder what we'd have gotten if we'd washed the windows.

Q. GRASSHOPPERS DON'T bite people, do they?

A. It happens. They've been known to eat the paint off buildings, chew up clothes, even bite people with enough jaw strength to draw blood. Before they go that far, though, they usually wipe out the plant life.

Married Athletes: Their Trials, Tribulations

THE MARRIED COLLEGE students — they've become almost a stereotype.

Husband and wife, together they go to school, study and dream. That's the romantic part but there's also the realistic side. Usually both have to work— and even then it's hard to make ends meet.

But, as the story goes, when you're young nobody minds eating salmon patties three or four times a week. So the young couple survives, they cut corners, scrimp and save— somehow they get by.

Then, when middle age comes creeping up and the kids are nearly grown (and salmon patties only a memory) it becomes fashionable to reminisce about those exciting days of a lost youth.

"Your momma and I would buy some cheap wine and old cheese when we felt like having a little party," my father has told me time and again. "You could get cheese real cheap when it was old like that— of course you'd need to scrap off the green stuff.

"Anyway we'd spread a blanket on the living room floor," he'll always add. "Because we didn't have any furniture at the time— at least not in the living room."

ROUGH AS HE TRIED to make it sound, things could have been a lot worse for dear old dad. For one thing he wasn't an athlete. Oh sure, he was the manager of the high school basketball team— but even that taxed his athletic abilities. A trait which he also blessed upon his off-spring.

Anyhow, that leads us to a new twist in the familar sterotype of the married collegians—married college athletes.

There are actually more married college players in Lubbock than one would assume and if you think the typical married students have a rough go of it— consider the athlete. Long practice hours and road trips make a job nearly impossible. Thus the financial burden is placed squarely on the shoulders of the wife.

Even if she isn't in college, the pressures are still present. Just for spice, add the presence of a child and you're cutting the corners pretty close.

Forget the wine and cheese.

And The Wife Waits. . .

But, more so, than in other sports, baseball players seem more likely to marry than anyone else. This year there are eight married players on the Lubbock Christian College team and two played for the Red Raider diamondmen.

AND AT LEAST two returning Tech players plan to marry this summer and two returning Chaps also have plans for walking up the aisle.

But why baseball players?

"Baseball players tend to be a little more insecure, sometimes," offerred LCC Public Information Director and long-time Chap follower Walt McAlexander. "Baseball is that kind of sport, it helps to have some one behind you.

"We've always had a lot of married kids at LCC though," he added. "But this is the most we've ever had at one time."

Whatever the reasons, there are plenty of married athletes. But what is it like for the athletes, their wives and their coaches?

Does marriage have an effect on their school work, their ability to perform on the playing field or does it work the other way?

Does athletics put a strain on their marriages?

Wives' Spirits Remain High Despite Hardships

SOCIAL SCIENTISTS TODAY tell us that nearly one of every two marriages end in divorce. It's not a pretty statistic. In fact it's downright scary if you're fixing to get married.

But if you want to feel better about the whole institution of marriage talk to the wives of these baseball players.

Their comments are so syrupy that you'll think you're listening to 'The Newlywed Game.' But the women are sincere— and they all seemed determined that their marriages will succeed.

But before you dismiss their comments as merely the babblings of young newlyweds still naive about what they're into— listen to Mrs. Beverly Swann— Gary's wife.

THE WIVES' VIEWS

After four years and countless road trips, she is hardly a novice. And she is the only one of the women with a child. But through it all, her sqirits have remained high.

"IT'S NOT SO BAD all the time," said Mrs. Swann. "They kid me a lot at work, everybody calls me a 'baseball widow.'

But she laughed and recalled the early days of their marriage. Both Gary and Beverly went to high school in Lubbock, but after graduation and the wedding Gary got a scholarship to Midwestern and the new couple packed their bags.

"When we first got to Wichita Falls we didn't know anybody and it was pretty lonely," recalled Mrs. Swann. "I didn't think I'd ever see another girl in my life. The big thing was for all the guys to come over to Swann's house and watch TV— the house was always full of baseball players."

But Mrs. Swann got to see another girl when her daughter Shana was born. But by then Gary had earned a scholarship with LCC and the Swanns came home. And Shana is a whole 'nother story.

"Gary wanted her to be left-handed like he is," said Mrs. Swann. "So she could be a good pitcher. But I just kept sticking that spoon in her right hand, momma always said that was a sure way to make sure she would be right-handed. And it worked. Hopefully Shana won't ever play baseball. We can have a boy for that."

BASEBALL MAY NOT BE for Shana but as far as the wives are concerned it's awfully important to the players and that makes it important to them.

"If that (baseball) is what he wants to do then I'm all behind him," says Mrs. Teresa Toney. "Whatever is in the future I'll be ready for it. I knew what I was getting into when I married him.

"I think it would be great if Kenny got a chance to play professionally. That's what he wants, after all, we eat, sleep and breath baseball," added Mrs. Toney.

But then there's those road trips. Not to get repetitive — but they were a major consideration with the women.

"It gets lonely," said Mrs. Beverly Inman. "But it's pretty neat when you see their names in the paper the next day. We've talked a lot about playing after college and if that's what he wants, that's okay with me.

"It's hard, but I try to stand behind him . . ."

WHAT IT REALLY BOILS down to, according to the women involved, is pride— pride in their husband's athletic accomplishment's.

"I'm so proud of Johnny I just can't tell you," says Mrs. Kathy Keller. "I always tell my students about him (she's a teacher in Plainview) and I go to as many games as I can."

On Keller's birth day his wife presented him with a scrapbook of all his clippings and awards—most of us don't accumulate enough clippings in a lifetime to fill a match book.

And, like everybody else, Keller dreams of a shot at the big leagues.

"I'm not sitting around waiting for a call," he admits. "But if I get a chance I'm going to go for it."

Keller doesn't dream alone though, like the rest of the married players he's got a little help in that department.

Coach Thinks Married Athlete More Secure

LISTENING TO LCC BASEBALL and basketball coach Larry Hays talk about it, you'd almost think that he'd prefer to have all of his athletes married.

"I've found that marriage makes for a much more mature athlete," says Hays. "They seem to be more realistic about the value of an education — they have more purpose.

"Lot's of time your average, unmarried ballplayer forgets what he's really here for. Maybe they just want to play a little ball or get away from home and have a good time. But when they get married they realize how serious college is.

COACHES' VIEWS

"I haven't noticed that much difference in their ability on the field after they've been married but the change off the field is always for the best."

But Texas Tech Coach Kal Segrist views married athletes in a slightly different light. It's not that he's against it, but he does see the potential harmful effects that marriage can have on an athletic career.

"WHEN YOU GET INTO that area (marriage), it all depends on the individuals involved," said Segrist. "I'm not going to say it's a plus one way or the other.

"I've seen instances in the past where marriage has had a negative effect on a player's concentration. It's tough enough to compete, but when you're very fond of someone who'd rather you weren't always gone on the road... it can be tough.

"But I've seen other instances where it has been a real plus for the athletes," he was quick to add. "It's just that some young ladies become very attached and they don't want to be alone. Of course this just isn't with married players, this can happen all the time."

This year the Raiders had two players, first-baseman Craig Noonan and centerfielder John Keller, who were married last summer and both went through this season with flying colors.

"With both Craig and John, marriage was very good for them," said Segrist. "Both were fortunate to marry very mature young ladies and it helped them settle down. It was especially good for John because he needed some ties, it gave him something. He became the complete player this year— he became a leader."

"CRAIG HAS ALWAYS been a hard worker, but he did have a real good year after he got married. So in this particular instance— the marriages sure didn't hurt."

For LCC the married baseballers are centerfielder Brady Brashear, leftfielder Tommy Inman, third-baseman Kenny Toney, shortstop Glenn Wilken and pitchers Dick Battle, Gary Swann, Randy Vinson and Bob McNichol.

"Financially the boys are in somewhat of a squeeze," admitted Chap mentor Larry Hays. "But we've been fortunate and in the thirteen years I've been here only one kid has been forced to quit because of the financial pressures of a marriage."

The Chapparal players are quick to point out that a scholarship, especially at a private school, does a lot to help ease the burden.

TECH COACH SEGRIST has seen the issue from both sides, as a player and a coach. Segrist played in the minor and major leagues for over 10 years before retiring in 1961 with a leg injury.

"I've been on clubs where there were some homesick wives," he said. "I was married shortly after I signed a professional contract and overall it worked out real well. They're plenty of adjustments you have to make.

"But like every profession, if you're going to be a success, your wife plays a vital part in it."

A vital part, huh. Let's ask the players.

Maybe marriage isn't for everybody. Certainly with today's divorce rates it would be hard to argue that it is. But even if all these marriages don't last, it's obvious they served a purpose.

If nothing more they'll make for some great stories when these collegiate athletes put on about 30 years and even more pounds. Maybe they'll sit behind a desk somewhere and laugh about it... exaggerate it a little bit.

Heck, make that 12-day road trip a 22-day odessy. Nobody's going to know by then. And it'll sound better.

You don't really think my father ate green cheese, do you?

Players Like Support Supplied By Wives

CONSIDER CRAIG Noonan

In 1978 he hit a paltry .218 but when the season was over he got married. In 1979 his batting average soared to .360.

Now a batting average may not make a marriage— but for a baseball player it's a darn good foundation.

"I had a lot more support this year," said Noonan. "I don't know how much getting married had to do with me hitting the ball so much better— but it must have made some difference."

For Chapparal Kenny Toney the change was also obvious.

"I put on about 15 pounds," said Toney patting his stomach. "And I haven't even been married a year yet."

Teammate Tommy Inman wasn't so sure about marriage.

"I don't know," he said. "It may have brought me bad luck, I broke my ankle at the start of the season."

Inman laughed though.

"NO, DON'T PUT that, she'll kill me. Really it's probably improved my overall playing and my schoolwork has definitely gotten better."

The rest of the Chaps were in consensus —marriage it seemed agreed with them. Money was the only problem.

"The bucks are the big thing," said pitcher Swann.

And Swann should know. He's been married for four years and is the father of a three-year-old daughter, Shana.

"It probably settled me down," said Brady Brashear. "My wife doesn't like the road trips too much though."

All the Chapparal players nodded in agreement with the statement about their road trips— and it's no wonder. The Chaps have already logged 6,500 miles on the team bus this year and during one 12-day stretch spent only one night in Lubbock.

It doesn't make for much of a honeymoon.

Even Tech, which plays a much lighter schedule, spent nearly a month on the road this season since only 14 of the Raiders 46 games were played at home.

THE PLAYERS' VIEWS

"The thing is that when you finally get home they (the wives) want you to spend all the time at home with them," said Swann. "And you don't feel like sitting around the house after being cooped up for so long. You want to go out and play golf or tennis or anything."

BUT SWANN'S COMPLAINT was only a mild one— and other than that, "seldom was heard a discouraging word," from any of the athletes.

"My wife enjoys it," said McNichol who's a relief pitcher. "She doesn't get off work until five but I usually don't get into the game until then, so she gets to see me play."

All of the athletes said their wifes come to most of the home games and occasionally catch some of the action on the road.

"Heck, my wife's been watching me play baseball since I was 15 years old," said Randy Vinson. "It's nothing new for her."

MARRIAGE IS A PRETTY serious thing for Tech's John Keller though.

"I went through a little spell for awhile," he said. "It wasn't too serious but it could have been better. But once I got married, that changed everything."

Keller had hit seven home runs in his first three years at Tech. In his married year he doubled that output with seven more and raised his batting average nearly 100 points.

But batting averages can mean little when your pride is on the line and sometimes when the athletes biggest job is to play during the afternoon while the wife works...it can hurt.

"That bothers me," says LCC's McNichol. "I feel like I should be doing something."

To that, the wives unanimously replied: Bull.

'Feast Day' Ceremony Slated At Church Today

The parish of St. John Neumann Catholic Church, 22nd Street and Frankford Avenue, will celebrate the feast day of St. Isidore, patron of farmers, with a ceremony at 7 p.m. Tuesday.

Calling it a time to "recognize our community's dependence on the Lord for the harvest," officials of the church are urging all farmers to bring a container of some earth they plan to cultivate and also to bring a piece of equipment used in cultivation to be blessed.

Also, the ceremony will include a sharing of prayers for all aspects of farming and agribusiness.

Officiating will be Rev. Joe James, Rev. Bob Ibe, Deacon Leroy Behnke and Deacon Joe Richard.

According to history, St. Isidore was born a poor Spanish peasant in the 12th century. His lot in life was always to be a poor plowman and each day after attending mass he would go into the fields to work for his master, John de Vergas.

It is reported that St. Isidore married a girl as poor as himself, but also was as dedicated to Jesus Christ as he was and they had a very happy life.

Even though St. Isidore led a very poor life, he would never turn down a beggar or anyone with less than he had. One story tells that St. Isidore even gave a half sack of corn to some starving birds during winter.

St. Isidore died on May 15, 1130. He also is the patron saint of Madrid, Spain, and is a favorite with the people of Spain.

A covered-dish supper will follow the celebration. Participants are urged to bring enough food to feed their party and two other persons.

For further information call 799-4788.

WHAT HAS HAPPENED TO:

FAMILIES: Fragmented, disintegrated, even outmoded according to some. Frustrated fathers, discontented wives, rebellious and hostile children, divorces, runaways -But strong happy families have been the strength of our society. Which is normal-which do you want -is is possible today?

FRIENDS: Loneliness is one of the most serious problems of our day. Where are the old fashioned "true" friends who were there when you needed them? Do you have friends who will stick by you when others won't -a friend you can really share life with?

THE ECONOMY: Inflation ... the dollar ... the price of gold ... fuel costs ... recession ... depression. With everything so shaky around you, is there a way for you to be secure? Does financial crisis have to be a way of life?

MEN AND WOMEN: Sexual identity crisis in Texas, where now long ago "men were men and women were women:"...homosexu ality ... ERA ... abortion. Must we surrender to social forces which condemn clear maleness and femaleness?

COMMITMENT: In this transient society can you really afford to commit yourself to anything? But what about living with no one committed to you and to your values? Or will our efforts to protect our independence only drive us further into loneliness and insecurity? Do you have five people who are committed to stand by you come what may?

HONESTY: People stealing from employers and the government -and unscrupulous business and politicians stealing from the people. Do you ever wonder if you know anyone you can really trust? Can you be the kind of person that others would trust with all they have?

GOD: Is He the "force", karma, krishna, or is He dead? No, He is still the God of the Old and New Testament, the Creator and Sovereign, the Father of the only begotten Son, Jesus Christ, and a benevolent Father, who loves you and wants your life to be happy, full and productive. Is it possible for you to have a meaningful relationship with Him and with His family here in Lubbock?

IS THERE AN ANSWER?

YES, THERE IS AN ALTERNATIVE!!

Positive Thinking

By Norman Vincent Peale

A WOMAN SAYS, "I saw in the paper that so-and-so died of a heart attack."

She is asked, "What paper?"

She replies, "I don't rightly know what paper, but I saw it in the paper." She quotes the item verbatim.

A search of the files of newspapers discloses no such item. Inquiry establishes that the person in question has not had a heart attack. But, three days later, that person dies of heart failure and the newspaper story reads exactly as the woman had quoted it in advance.

Black magic? No — but could it be precognition?

A little four-year-old girl, during World War I, calls to her mother: Mommy, Daddy is choking to death! He is down a deep hole!"

Later investigation ascertains that the child's father, at that exact moment, had been down in a cellar under gas attack.

Witchcraft? No — but possible clairvoyance!

A middle-aged man is driving his car along a New Jersey highway when he feels a terrible pain in his chest. It is so excruciating that he stops his car, thinking he is suffering a heart attack, but eventully it passes.

A few hours later, he learns that his son, driving in Colorado, had been killed at that exact moment, his chest crushed by the wheel of his car.

Coincidence? Not necessarily — but maybe telepathy!

THIS IS THE KIND of story that was first investigated by Dr. J.B. Rhine of Duke University, who pioneered in the development of the science called parapsychology, the systematic study of the mental activity of man or other activity that must be perceived by means other than the physical senses. What are these things that he describes as precognition, clairvoyance, telepathy? What could thay prove? Well, Dr. Rhine believed that these are only some of the powers of human soul ranging the universe without obstruction of space and time.

Now, of course, there are always people who will respond to such a thought with the flat assertion, "It's impossible." Yet their only reason for saying it is impossible is that they have never heard of it before. I once met the man who developed the automobile radio. The banker he went to for the loan he needed in getting car radios into production told him: "I never heard of such a preposterous idea! The time will never come when they will have radios in automobiles!" That is how an unimaginative mind often responds to anything that is new.

I am a minister of religion and, as such, I believe that there is something in man beyond the physical, beyond the material. As Joseph Wood Krutch pointed out, if man is really the mere inevitable culmination of an improbable chemical reaction, then the fact that he has been able to trace himself back to it is indeed remarkable. The idea that a chemical can understand its own nature is actually staggering.

There is more to man than that — and it is always good news to know that science is confirming what religion has always known!

Sundown Baptist Church Revival To Start Today

SUNDOWN (Special)—First Baptist Church in Sundown is beginning a revival today and concluding Friday, with Dennis Sewell of Amarillo as the evangelist and Steve Brasher of Lubbock as singer.

The revival begins at 7 p.m. today and continues Monday through Friday with daily services at 10:30 a.m. and 7:30 p.m.

There will be a special emphasis each night of the revival, such as Sunday School Night, Monday; Youth Night with the world's largest pizza supper at 6 p.m., Tuesday; Family Night, Wednesday; Old Fashioned Night, Thursday; and Children's Night with the world's largest hot dog supper at 6 p.m., Friday.

Sewell is a native of Texarkana, Ark., where he was saved in 1970. In 1973 he responded to the ministry call and has served in two different Southern Baptist churches since that time as minister of evangelism and associate pastor.

Educated at East Texas Baptist College and East Texas State University, he now serves the San Jacinto Baptist Church in Amarillo as an associate pastor. Both churches served by Rev. Sewell have had remarkable growth and have been in the top churches of the Baptist General Convention of Texas in baptisms each year of his ministry. In the past five years, churches served by him have baptized more than 2,000 converts, registering a total of more than 3,000 professions of faith.

Last year, the San Jacinto Baptist Church led the Baptist General Covention of Texas in baptisms, baptizing a total of 662 converts. In the first six months of 1978-79 church year, there have already been 600 converts baptized by the Amarillo church.

Rev. Sewell has conducted numerous crusades and revivals in Texas, Arkansas, Oklahoma and Kansas.

The Lubbock Baptist Association will host a Regional Church Building/Finance Conference Thursday from 9 a.m. to 2:30 p.m. in the associational center, 27th Street and Salem Avenue.

The conference is conducted by the Church Extension Section, Church Stewardship Department, Baptist Church Loan Cooperation and the Baptist Sunday School Board.

Vaughn Manning, consultant for the Church Extension Section of the Baptist General Convention of Texas (BGCT) and formerly a member of the staff of theLubbock Baptist Association, will preside at the meeting.

Lunch will be served Thursday in the fellowship hall of the associational center.

Churches planning to build or remodel would benefit by attending the meeting, according to an association spokesman. Some topics of discussion at the meeting will be "How To Set Up Priorities for Programs and Buildings," "How To Organize for A Building Program," "How To Involve A Large Number of People in Planning and Paying for The Building," "How To Employ Leadership Principles and Insure A Successful Building Program," and "How To Finance A Building Program."

Persons interested in attending may make reservations by calling Doyle Holmes, director of missions for the Lubbock Baptist Association, at 792-2363.

Higher Humidity Fuel, Money Saver

ITHACA, N.Y. (UPI) — A 30-50 percent humidity level is comfortable for most people and, in winter, can keep people slightly more comfortable at a few degrees lower temperature, says the cooperative extension service of Cornell University.

Higher humidity also helps protect home furnishings, especially wood, from warping, cracking or coming unglued in a dry environment.

Day-to-day living adds some humidity to a home or apartment. By using exhaust fans sparingly during the heating season, water vapor from cooking and bathing will add moisture indoors.

The service also says an electric clothes dryer can be vented indoors during winter and outdoors in summer. It will need an extra lint trap, the service says. But indoor venting should be discontinued if condensation runs off windows or if a dust problem occurs.

Field Day Slated At Retreat

Girls in grades one through six from churches in the Lubbock Baptist Association will participate in a Field Day Saturday at the Plains Baptist Assembly near Floydada.

Girls will compete in seven different events during the day and winners will receive trophies at a closing inspiration service.

Registration for the Field Day will begin at 9 a.m. Saturday.

Mrs. Pat Stringer, the association's G.A. director, will direct the Field Day activities.

Further information may be obtained by contacting Mrs. Stringer at 402 W. Main, Post, Texas, or the Lubbock Baptist Association at 792-2363.

Southcrest Baptist Church Site Of Youth Leader Lab

Southcrest Baptist Church will be the site for a West Texas Youth Leader Lab for Baptist churches May 25-26.

Sponsors of the event are the Lubbock Baptist Association; Special Services Division of the Baptist General Convention of Texas; and Church Recreation Department, Baptist Sunday School Board.

The lab is designed to help laymen and church staff improve youth ministries in their churches.

Conferences and personnel will include Youth and the Family, Mike Horton, minister of family life at Lubbock's First Baptist Church; Creative BibleStudy, Phil Hall, director of Our Home Retreat Ministry in Austin; The Whys and Whats of Youth Ministry, Bailey Stone, pastor of First Baptist Church in Odessa; and other conference leaders.

The lab will begin at noon May 25 and conclude at noon May 26.

Participants may register for the event by writing the Lubbock Baptist Association, 2601 Salem Ave., Lubbock, Texas, or to Youth Leader Lab, 3601 50th St., Lubbock, Texas, 79413.

Cleaning Safety Tips Offered

CHICAGO (UPI) — If spring cleaning has you climbing the walls via a ladder, keep these safety tips in mind:

—Place the ladder on a firm, level surface.

—Use one that is long enough for the job. Many accidents are caused by someone trying to overreach from a too-short ladder, says a spokesman for Underwriters Laboratories Inc., an independent, non-profit product-testing company. UL says government figures show about 87,000 persons are hurt annually in falls from ladders.

—Before using a ladder, examine it for structural damage or deterioration, and never store it where it may become wet or damaged.

—Before climbing a stepladder, lock the spreader to keep it from folding.

—Remember that a straight ladder should extend at least three feet above the eave, gutter or roofline. The base should be a foot away from the wall for every four feet of length.

—If your ladder is metal, avoid contact with overhead electrical power lines or energized electrical circuits.

—Face the rungs and keep at least one hand on a ladder when you descend it.

Always grease both the bottom and sides of a loaf pan in which you are baking bread so the loaf can be turned out easily.

Nutritious Meals Possible In Fast-Food Restaurants

UNIVERSITY PARK, Pa. (UPI) — Nutritious meals and special diets can be obtained in fast food restaurants, says dietitian Louise W. Hamilton. You just have to choose carefully from the menu.

She recommends broiled instead of fried foods. If you must choose the latter, remove and discard the breaded or fried coatings. Choose fresh instead of canned fruits, and go easy on dressings at the salad bar or on low-calorie platters. Stay away also from creamed or buttered vegetables and anything that is oily, greasy or soggy.

Miss Hamilton is a professor of food science with Pennsylvania State University's cooperative extension service and president of the 36,000-member American Dietetic Association.

German Develops Artificial Breast

NEW YORK (UPI) — Breast cancer will strike more than 90,000 women in the U.S. this year, according to the American Cancer Society. Most of these women will have disfiguring and emotionally traumatic mastectomies.

Now a new prosthesis, an artificial breast, has been developed by a young West German, Bodo Knoche.

The Knoche Natural Breast Prosthesis, developed over a five-year period, has been selling to European women at the rate of 3,000 per month, according to the maker. Knoche now is making it available to women in the U.S.

The Knoche prosthesis is made of a skinlike material and contains no plastics. Knoche says it is natural in color, size and shape, and has a realistic nipple, which makes it undetectable even with a seethrough bra.

The new prosthesis is hollow, with only its outer edges touching the skin and making no contact with scar tissue, Knoche says. It's the same weight as a real breast and can be washed and dried with a woman's own body.

Black rolls 1-1. How should he play?

ANSWER TO BACKGAMMON PROBLEM

Black is far ahead in the race. Unfortunately, he has rolled a number that is far from his best, and no matter how he plays it, he cannot bring his man on the White bar-point to safety. So the question is simply: Should Black advance the man on the White bar-point and, if so, how far should he advance it? Should he bring it four points further up, or should he play part of this roll inside his home board?

To answer this question correctly, you need to know no more than the odds of hitting a blot. If you leave the blot where it is, it can be hit by one of 17 rolls, while 19 miss. By moving up to White's 11-point, you reduce the possibilities of being hit to 12 rolls, while 24 miss. Here is a table showing the odds:

Distance In Points	Odds Against Hitting
1	25 to 11	6	19 to 17	11	34 to 2 (17 to 1)
2	24 to 12	7	30 to 6 (5 to 1)	12	33 to 3 (11 to 1)
3	22 to 14 (11 to 7)	8	30 to 6 (5 to 1)	16	35 to 1
4	21 to 15 (7 to 5)	9	31 to 5	20	35 to 1
5	21 to 15 (7 to 5)	10	33 to 3 (11 to 1)	24	35 to 1

From this table, it is obvious that it is much easier to hit a blot when you have a direct shot (6 or lower) than when you have an indirect one (7 or higher).

TIP: Here's a simple rule of thumb: If you must leave a direct shot, the closer you are, the better; for an indirect shot, the further away, the less chance of getting hit.

GOOD SOIL BELOW — As rancher Kenneth Gibson, left, put it, "Any soil that will grow a mesquite tree this tall has got to be good." Gibson, the 1979 absentee conservation rancher for Area 1 of the Texas Soil and Water Conservation Districts, discussed strategy for the unimproved half section he has added to his five section cow-calf operation near Snyder with Scurry County soil conservationist Charles Anderson. (Staff Photo).

Conservation, Cattle Harmonize

By KATHLEEN HARRIS
Avalanche-Journal Farm Writer

SNYDER — Two or three times a week, Kenneth Gibson leaves the home ranch near Sidney to check on 120 head of Beefmaster cattle on his five sections north of here.

According to the portly man whose salt and pepper sideburns extend from a straw western hat into a wiry beard, the 80 head on the home place "don't get any more attention than the Snyder herd."

Gibson, the 1979 absentee conservation rancher for the 51-county Area 1 of the Texas Soil and Water Conservation Districts, attributes his carefree cow-calf operations to his methods of conservation and his breed of cattle.

About nine years ago, Gibson began a conservation program on the Snyder ranch he grew up on as a boy. With that program under the Upper Colorado Soil and Water Conservation District about 96 percent complete, Gibson has begun a long-term agreement with the Agriculture Stabilization and Conservation Service, administered by the Soil Conservation Service, on an additional half section he recently purchased.

The 47-year-old rancher uses a system of high intensity, low frequency grazing. He says a grazing system that puts the entire herd in one pasture at a time for short duration is the first priority when initiating a conservation program.

"Some argue that such a grazing system is hard to manage," Gibson said. "But I argue that a good system poorly managed is still better than a poor system poorly managed."

The system works especially well for Gibson because, as an absentee rancher, he only has to go to one pasture when he arrives to check the herd. It also eliminates selective grazing.

Crossfencing and the development of extra watering places are two of the first requirements of the grazing pattern. With these two items established, a plan for improving the land and grasses should be made, he said.

"A specialist could give a specific description of the improvements that have been made on my land," Gibson noted, "but what I see is a herd of cattle that have wintered on two sections of land that were considered hopeless two years ago. And without appreciable supplement, they are fat."

Gibson's father's family came to the Snyder area in 1910. The family bought the ranch for $6 an acre and paid $12 a head for the primarily Hereford stock that was already on the pastures.

Through the years, Gibson said, there was erosion along the creek beds. The land was not overgrazed, but some of the pastures were severely infested with brush.

"With the conservation program," he noted, "not only do I see an improved condition with the cattle, but I see a healing of erosion.

"The creek was square along the edges and the bottom was bare. Now, the edges are rounding and the sides and bottom are covered with vegetation. All we did was give it a chance to happen."

With the grazing system suggested in the conservation plan, it takes about 11 months to complete the rotation of all the pastures. According to Scurry County soil conservationist Charles Anderson, the system prohibits the herd from being on the same pasture during the same season of each year.

"The pastures are allowed to rest once during each season of the year before being regrazed," Anderson said. "If a pasture is grazed this spring, it will not be grazed next spring. All types of plants are favored in the system."

Evidence of the effectiveness of the system can be visualized by the presence of Black Samson, a purple, bristle-topped wild flower that appeared on the Gibson ranch after the conservation methods were initiated. The species is almost in danger of extinction, according to Anderson.

Turkey and white tail deer that were not present on the place when Gibson was growing up have also begun to inhabit the ranch.

Under the improvement schedule, the mesquite trees were grubbed, or removed individually, since they were not very dense.

"If the population of mesquite is very thick," he pointed out, "it would be more economical to root plow the acreage rather than pay someone by the hour to individually pull each tree."

On the half section that is currently being evaluated for improvement, Anderson suggested rootplowing about one-third of the acreage. Gibson said he will probably broadcast a mixture of sideoats and kleingrass seed on the land as he did on the rest of the ranch.

"You can spray or mechanically treat mesquite," the rancher said, "but it will come back if you don't follow-up with a management program.

"The regrowth of mesquite on the five improved sections can be eradicated with aerial spraying," he said, "but the trees have to get bigger before it will be economically feasible."

Anderson explained that the leaf area of the small trees is not sufficient for herbicide absorption. The rancher should wait five to seven years before spraying, he said.

Crossfencing that enabled the original sections to be managed properly will also be a part of the improvements on the half section. Gibson said the fencing will be necessary to separate the south and north halves of the land.

"Because of a difference in soil," he explained, "the cattle will eat anything that grows on one side and eat nothing on the other.

"If a fence would force the herd to utilize whatever is there on the south side, I will leave the lovegrass that is already there. Otherwise, I will probably plant the whole end in kleingrass."

Two ponds were constructed on the original sections. Gibson said the tanks are made very deep so that if it doesn't rain for a while, it will take longer to evaporate.

With these conservation methods in force, Gibson said his Beefmaster cattle complete the program.

From the ranch headquarters, a rambling structure made of hand-gathered, hand-laid stones from the nearby hills and somehow signifying the perseverance of the family's cattle business, Gibson contemplated the future of the cattle industry.

"Hair color and white eyelids, for example, are not important, "Gibson opined. "What is important is a cow that without any help brings you a calf every year."

Gibson said his father bought their first Beefmaster cattle in 1951 from Tom Lasater stock. Lasater, who developed the breed from Brahman, Shorthorns and Herefords, based the breed on hardiness, fertility, weight and milk production, Gibson said.

As former president of Foundation Beefmasters Association, Gibson said the group doesn't agree with placing enormous values on a breeding line. Therefore, there are no big shows or sales for the breed.

"The value of the cattle can't be seen with the eye," he said. "Our cattle have a certification program — to alleviate export problems — that simply says, 'The owner of this animal says it is a Beefmaster.'

"And if we avoid high price selling, we have no trouble with members trying to cheat," he said.

Gibson, a graduate of Texas A&M University with a degree in electrical engineering, said he frequently reflects on cattle cycles.

"I've been raising cattle for 25 years and I expect to do so for another 25 years," he said. "I don't see how I can afford to keep a $600 heifer now when it will be two years before she has a calf for the market.

"Even if inflation continues, I think we will see $100 calves again. I will probably keep half of my stock, but there is no doubt, I will cut back."

PLAINS AGRICULTURE

By DUANE HOWELL

COTTON PLANTING ON THE HIGH PLAINS, inhibited by persistent winds, was moving at a relatively slow pace through late last week.

Dr. James Supak, cotton specialist with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service at Lubbock, estimated that only about 10 percent of the region's cotton acreage had been planted by late in the week.

With favorable weather, the tempo would quicken rapidly. And farmers can cover a tremendous acreage in only a few days with modern machinery.

Supak said planting "will be going strong" this week if the weather is calm. The heaviest planting activity so far has been in the northern area.

FARMERS IN A FAIRLY BROAD AREA, concentrated mostly in the southern region, still need a planting rain.

Supak said virtually all the irrigated acreage can be planted but only about 25 percent of the dryland acreage has adequate planting moisture. He said planting moisture probably is sufficient on 60 to 70 percent of the overall acreage.

Hale County Agent Ollie Liner of Plainview said farmers in that heavily irrigated county were planting cotton in spite of the winds. He estimated that 50 percent of the acreage would be planted by the end of last week.

Some dry planting was underway in Dawson County, said county agent Joe Wise of Lamesa. He said not more than 25 percent of the county has moisture to get cotton up to a stand.

"We have good subsoil moisture, but we need a good 2-inch rain," Wise said.

Wise pointed out that Dawson County farmers, who have a long cotton growing season for the Plains, would plant cotton until mid-June if necessary, although they would prefer to have the crop in the ground in May.

HOCKLEY COUNTY AGENT BILL TAYLOR of Levelland estimated that less than 5 percent of the acreage there had been planted at midweek.

"Everybody is hoping for another shower," he said. He said moisture conditions are "pretty good" over about three-fourths of the county, with some dry spots in the southern sections.

While about one-half to two-thirds of Hockley County's acreage is bed-planted, Taylor said, farmers who use lister planters were particularly hesitant to open up the beds and expose moist soil to the drying winds.

Assistant Lynn County agent Billy Whitaker of Tahoka said planting there was "just getting started." He said moisture conditions "are real spotty."

Bryan Crook of Seminole, assistant Gaines County agent, said winds had "sure been hard on things," taking a toll on surface moisture and causing blowing problems on a large acreage.

COCHRAN COUNTY FARMERS GENERALLY have enough moisture to plant their entire cotton acreage, said county agent Roy Jones of Morton.

"We may have around 8-10 percent planted," he commented at midweek, "and could have 15-20 percent in the ground by the end of the week."

Jones said most of the county had 4 inches of rain last month and commented that one farmer had remarked that the April rains were "the best he had seen."

The optimum planting period for the Plains as a whole generally is considered to be May 5-20. Cotton can be planted beyond that in the dryland area to the south, however, and still retain good yield potential.

Tech Schedules 'Open-Gate' For New Deal Teaching Farm

Students at Texas Tech University have a new, fully operational 980-acre laboratory, and it will be shown off for public inspection from 1 to 5 p.m. Tuesday.

Sponsor for the open house is the Livestock Industry Committee of the Lubbock Chamber of Commerce in cooperation with the Texas Tech College of Agricultural Sciences.

There is no charge for the open house at the Lubbock County Laboratory of the Texas Tech College of Agricultural Sciences, five miles east of New Deal on Farm Road 1729. The farm road intersects U.S. Highway 87.

Bob Etheredge, manager of the Chamber of Commerce Agriculture Department, explained that the laboratory is designed to solve many problems which confront producers in the West Texas area.

"The work done there will benefit all public sectors directly or indirectly," he said, "and the Livestock Industry Committee arranged the open house so that the public could see some of what the future holds."

Visitors who want to know how their favorite dinner steak begins can learn some of the intricacies of beef production at the beef cattle center and feedlot. Faculty and graduate students will be the interpreters at all locations.

Most visitors will want to stop at the centerpiece of the laboratory, the feedmill, where there will be maps of the agricultural center and light refreshment.

The unique feedmill operation serves all research areas in the Department of Animal Science. Because many animal studies are related to nutrition, the mill — the only one of its kind — is built to handle small batches of meticulously formulated feeds. A flushing system permits complete cleaning between batches. Currently 32 different rations are formulated for various research projects.

In the building allocated as a research center, there are small animal, physiological and surgical laboratories. 36 metabolism stalls, four environmental chambers, animal holding areas, a classroom and two offices.

Four buildings serve swine research. The sow-bar building can hold 80 sows and four boars. A combination farrowing-nursery building has two farrowing and two nursery wings and can hold 32 sows and their litters up to nine weeks of age. Of special interest to swine producers are the modern features, slatted floors, flush tanks for manure disposal and a forced air ventilation system.

Texas Tech's horse program, under direction of Dr. James C. Heird, is gaining nationwide attention, and the horse center is expected to be a major attraction during the open house.

A vastly improved dairy facility, necropsy laboratory and sheep facility will be interpreted for visitors.

For crop farmers, faculty in the Department and Soil Sciences will explain their use of 80 acres set aside for field research. Their studies are both basic and applied and relate particularly to High Plains farming.

The irrigation system for the field laboratory is designed to use runoff water from livestock areas, and will be of special interest to producers concerned with the redesign of their own systems to take advantage of advances in water conservation methods.

Even the laboratory shop will be open to visitors. While it duplicates the operations found on almost every farm or ranch, it is designed and equipped to reduce downtime for machinery.

Dr. A. Max Lennon, assistant dean for research for Agricultural Sciences, has worked with the planning of the laboratory from its beginning.

"We hope that the public will learn much of what we are doing in this superb new facility," he said, "but we also hope to learn from the public as well. Some of our best ideas come from industry, and certainly producers are the only ones who can pinpoint some of the future problems researchers need to be studying."

New Mexico Agriculturist Gets Award

LAS CRUCES — A. W. "Bill" Langenegger, who served for 16 years as president of the New Mexico Farm and Livestock Bureau, is the 1979 recipient of the Philip J. Leyendecker Agriculturist of Distinction Award.

The award was presented by the New Mexico State University College of Agriculture and Home Economics during the college's annual Awards Day ceremony.

Dr. Gerald W. Thomas, NMSU president, and Dr. L. S. Pope, dean and director of the College of Agriculture and Home Economics, presented the award.

The award was created in 1962 by Dean Emeritus Leyendecker to honor outstanding contributors to New Mexico agriculture. Since that time, 14 individuals have been awarded the honor. The award is now given in the name of its creator, Dean Leyendecker.

Faculty, staff and students of the NMSU College of Agriculture and Home Economics witnessed presentation of the award to Langenegger. Also honored was Mary Blakely, Rogers, N. M., as recipient of the New Mexico Outstanding Leadership Award.

Langenegger was praised by Thomas for his dedication to the agricultural industry and for his leadership of the New Mexico Farm and Livestock Bureau.

The 1979 Agriculturist of Distinction operates a 15,000 head cattle feedyard and farms 2,000 acres in Chaves County. He was elected vice president of the Western Farm Bureau Mutual Insurance Co., Western Farm Bureau Loan Co., New Mexico Farm Bureau Marketing Corp. and Western Farm Insurance Agency. He has served on the board of directors of 16 organizations, including the National Livestock and Meat Board of the First National Bank of Artesia.

Langenegger has been or is chairman of the board of the Farmer's Co-op Association; Central Valley Electric, Inc., Artesia; Pecos Valley Cotton Oil, Inc., and Builders Block and Stone, Roswell; and Builders Block and Supply, Las Cruces. He was also a member of the Federal Judicial Selection Commission.

A native of Hagerman, Langennegger is married to the former Helen Goodwill of Roswell. They are the parents of three daughters, Helen Jeaneen Rogers, of Wheatridge, Colo; Lana Ruth Hartgrove of Denver; and Alice Kathleen Miles of Roswell.

MOMMA PIG

MOSCOW (AP) — A sow at a Moldavian swine-breeding farm gave birth to 28 piglets in two litters, eight days apart, the official news agency Tass reported. The Landras-breed sow had 11 piglets first and 17 more eight days later, Tass said. All the piglets are well, the agency reported, but some of them had to be turned over to another sow for feeding.

No Government Clearance Seen For Miticide For Plains Corn

By JIM STEIERT
A-J Correspondent

HEREFORD — Local agricultural representatives working to obtain a special clearance for the use the pesticide Azodrin on spider mites in corn have been notified that no such clearance will be granted for at least two years.

David A. Ivie, director of the Agricultural and Environmental Sciences Division of the Texas Department of Agriculture, notified Leland Shelton of Whiteface Aviation and Ray Frye of American Dusting Co. of Hereford the denial of an emergency clearance.

Ivie wrote, "In order for us to request an emergency exemption, we must have scientific data from the chemcial formulator that will support a temporary tolerance for pesticide residues in the crop.

"We have been in touch with Shell Chemical Co. to see if such data were available. Shell told us the company submitted a petition to the Environmental Protection agency requesting a tolerance for Azodrin on corn in November of 1976. The EPA has informed Shell that the information submitted did not answer all the question necessary to establish tolerance levels.

"Shell has initiated additional tests as required by EPA, but the final results will not be available for at least two years. We do not anticipate any expansion of Azodrin tolerances until these studies are completed."

In letters to the TDA, area corn growers cited the lack of sufficient control of spider mites afforded by other available pesticides, and the severe damage mites have inflicted on the corn production segment of the local agriculture industry in Castro and Deaf Smith counties during the past three growing seasons.

Growers and aerial applicators indicated in their letters that Azodrin represented the only effective miticide available, particularly in the immediate Hereford area.

The West Texas Chamber of Commerce later added its support to the effort to secure an Azodrin clearance, after representatives of the WTCC met in special session with the Agriculture Committee of the Deaf Smith Chamber of Commerce.

Ivie indicated in his letters to Shelton and Frye that the TDA will continue efforts to locate a suitable miticide for corn.

"We have been in contact with some companies that have products registered for banks grass mite control. They have indicated a willingness to work with producers and applicators so that better results may be obtained from the use of these registered alternatives. We have been told that the keys to good control are in proper timing of each application and adequate coverage of the chemical," Ivie indicated.

Michigan's Status As Producer Bolstered By Proven Reserves

By MAX B. SKELTON

HOUSTON (AP) — Michigan supplied the only bright spot in an industry report on domestic crude oil reserves.

By increasing its proved reserves 42.8 percent last year, Michigan now ranks among the nation's Top 10 oil states.

Michigan moved ahead of Mississippi, Florida, North Dakota, Utah, Montana, and Illinois while jumping from a No. 16 ranking to No. 10 by boosting its reserves from 133 million barrels to 190 million barrels.

Only seven of the 27 oil states recorded increases and the 57 million barrel gain by Michigan dwarfed the others. Runner-up North Dakota increased its reserves by 11 million barrels.

Total domestic reserves meanwhile were declining a seventh consecutive year, dropping to 27.803 billion barrels, some 28.7 percent below the all time high of 39 million reported at the end of 1970.

The 1978 decline by 1.682 billion barrels was the third largest drop to be recorded by the American Petroleum Institute since it began releasing the annual reports in 1946.

There were no spectacular changes among state rankings as the American Gas Association reported similar trends for natural gas reserves.

After eight consecutive years of decline, the new estimate of 200.3 trillion cubic feet for domestic gas reserves is 31.7 percent below the record 292.9 trillion recorded at the end of 1967.

Top ranked Texas, Louisiana, and Alaska were not among them but five of the Top 10 gas states increased their reserves, New Mexico, Kansas, Wyoming, West Virginia, and Pennsylvania.

By increasing its reserves by 209 billion cubic feet, Pennsylvania moved up a notch and edged Colorado out of the No. 10 ranking among gas states.

Gas reserves in Texas now have dropped to 54.6 trillion cubic feet compared with an all time high of 125.4 trillion at the end of 1967. Second ranked Louisiana has now dropped to 49.6 trillion as opposed to its record level of 88 trillion cubic feet in the 1967 report.

Third ranked Alaska saw its gas reserves drop from 31.8 to 31.6 trillion cubic feet but the bulk of its reserves, about 26 trillion cubic feet, still awaits a pipeline that will provide access to Lower 48 markets.

Domestic gas production last year declined a fifth consecutive year, totaling 19.3 trillion cubic feet compared with a record output of 22.6 trillion in 1973.

Alaska strengthened its position as the No. 1 state in crude oil reserves despite seeing its reserves drop from 9.6 billion to 9.2 billion barrels during the first full year of operations for the Trans-Alaska pipeline. No. 2 Texas meanwhile saw its reserves drop an eighth straight year, from 8.4 billion to 7.6 billion barrels.

Thanks to the Alaskan output, domestic crude production increased a second consecutive year after four years of decline, totaling 3.029 billion barrels compared with the record high of 3.319 billion in 1970.

With production that totaled 447 million barrels, Alaska edged ahead of California as the No. 3 oil producing states. Production in top ranked Texas totaled 1.097 billion barrels and was followed by 491 million for Louisiana. California was No. 4 at 352 million.

The top 10 crude oil states, with 1978 and 1977 reserves:

Alaska 9.247 and 9.616 billion barrels; Texas 7.689 and 8.467; California 3.471 and 3.831; Louisiana 2.893 and 3.113; Oklahoma 1.073 and 1.121; Wyoming 804 and 815 million barrels; New Mexico 485 and 490; Kansas 380 and 359; Colorado 198 and 241, and Michigan 190 and 133.

Company Announces Completion Of Gas Well In South Texas

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn. (Special) - Apache Corp. has announced the completion of a natural gas well in Matagorda County, approximately 60 miles southwest of Houston. The producer confirms a natural gas discovery reported in September, 1977.

The well, No. 2 Peterson (Block 38, C. R. Bostwick and R. Brotherton Survey A-6), flowed at the rate of 6.2 million cubic feet of gas and 403 barrels of condensate per day through an adjustable choke with flowing tubing pressure of 5,983 pounds per square inch.

Drilled to a depth of 13,315 feet, the well was perforated for testing in the Anomalina sand formation between 12,968 and 13,045 feet.

Apache and its 1977-I Oil and Gas Program hold a 31.2 percent working interest in the well. Natomas Co. holds an 18.8 percent interest. Prairie Producing Co., Houston, holds 46.88 percent working interest and operates the well.

Search Costly In Baltimore Canyon Trough

TULSA, Okla. (Special) -The petroleum industry isn't ready to throw in the towel in the Baltimore Canyon Trough off the U.S. East Coast.

Drilling in that area moved into its second year last month with few encouraging results and a huge price tag, according to the Oil and Gas Journal.

The mid-Atlantic exploration campaign has cost industry about $1.5 billion so far, according to estimates by the American Petroleum Institute's offshore subcommittee. That spending has given industry one gas strike, one dry confirmation attempt, eleven dry wildcats, and two stratigraphic tests.

Three wildcats and one delineation well are underway.

Although the canyon's prospects aren't as bright now as they were before drilling began, big stretches of the leased acreage remain to be evaluated. Some explorationists are optimistic that deeper targets and deeper waters may hold most of the basin's potential.

Interior Secretary Cecil Andrus postponed a quicker and more thorough evaluation, operators say, when he withdrew 27 deepwater tracts from the second mid-Atlantic lease sale. Most of the withdrawn acreage was northeast of a stratigraphic test which logged gas shows.

"I think industry still considers the Baltimore Canyon prospective," a spokesman for the API subcommittee said. "I think you'll see more drilling. While industry may be discouraged, it certainly hasn't given up and won't until it feels certain the area has been thoroughly evaluated.

"Most large basins like this undergo several cycles of exploration which can be separated by a number of years. Industry always comes back, rethinks the problem, and tries again.

"I expect this will happen here."

Although canyon drilling results have been poor so far, they haven't lessened industry's appetite for more Outer Continental Shelf (OCS) frontiers to drill. High on the operators' shopping lists are North Atlantic, California, and Alaska OCS acreage.

The only problem, they add, is Interior's recently proposed, five-year leasing schedule. They're concerned that it doesn't offer the frontier areas which might have the most potential soon enough.

In the expenditure arena, most of industry's mid-Atlantic budget has gone for lease bonuses. A great deal of the budget—more than $1 billion—was spent at OCS Sale 40 in August, 1976. The second canyon sale, conducted last February, garnered only $41.7 million in bonuses, reflecting industry's sagging estimate of the region's potential and Andrus's withdrawal of the deepwater tracts.

"We've spent over $1.1 billion on leases and about $120 million on drilling," the API spokesman pointed out. "In addition, industry has done lots of geophysical work in the area.

"A reasonable guess at this point is that industry has $1.5 billion in the mid-Atlantic, including the high bonuses on the last lease sale."

Marion D. Noble, president of Sunmark Exploration Co., estimates $84 million had been spent through 1976 on geophysics and stratigraphic tests.

"Probably in the history of exploration never had so much effort been expended prior to a sale and the general structural picture as well understood," Noble told the API's recent annual production department meeting.

Initial reconnaissance work began as early as 1960 in the canyon. The basin proper is centered about 75 miles east of Atlantic City, N.J.

THE ROUSTABOUT

By RAY WESTBROOK

THE RAILROAD COMMISSION'S recent decision to repeal its 1975 order restricting the use of natural gas as a boiler fuel, was made in an attempt to reduce an inequitable burden carried by Texas energy users, according to the state agency.

The new order, signed by Chairman John H. Poerner and Commissioners Mack Wallace and James E. Nugent, is scheduled to become effective May 20.

The ruling stated: "It is intended by this repeal that Texas energy users be allowed to make decisions on the use of energy without having sacrifices imposed upon them that are greater than those imposed upon energy users outside of Texas."

A motive for revising the earlier ruling was to "eliminate the preemption questions created by the passage of the federal Power Plant and Industrial Fuel Use Act of 1978."

Under provisions of the original order, boiler fuel users of more than 3,000 Mcf per day were required to reduce such usage of gas by 10 percent in 1981 and by another 15 percent in 1985.

The move to repeal the boiler fuel order was initiated by Commissioner Wallace early this year during a conference on gas utility matters.

THE COMMISSIONERS said, "Repeal of this rule will allow economic forces to govern allocation of natural gas and cause conversion of uneconomic applications of natural gas to other fuels in a more orderly and efficient manner than a conversion program prompted by administrative regulation."

Chairman Poerner spelled out his assenting opinion on the repeal: "I think any message going to Washington on this matter should include the statement that the Railroad Commission led the way in bringing to the attention of the rest of the nation that there is a problem.

"The problem still exists, but we are not going to penalize Texans more than the rest of the nation.

"This one commissioner is going to watch these matters very closely because if we do have shortages in Texas I would be the one to start investigations and hearings to be sure that Texans have enough gas to meet their needs."

IN A CONCURRING statement on the repeal motion, Wallace noted that the Railroad Commission's boiler fuel phasedown order has been sound policy for the state and nation.

"Unfortunately, neither other states nor the federal bureaucracy responded with a similar effective program," he said.

Wallace contended that Congress, in passing the power plant and industrial fuel act, or coal conversion bill, completely preempted the RRC policy except to the extent that the commission may impose more severe restrictions on the use of natural gas.

The federal act primarily mandates conversion to coal by a phaseout of gas or petroleum use in certain industrial applications by 1990, prohibits the construction of new power pints that use only natural gas, and disallows the use of only natural gas by certain industrial users without exemption.

Wallace said the federal Interstate Commerce Commission appears to be granting coal rate increases sought by railroads to enable them to financially rehabilitate their systems "at the expense of the Texas utilities and their electric consumers who are paying the price for fuel conversion."

He indicated that regulations under the federal Clean Air Act all but foreclose continued industrial expansion and overall economic growth along the Texas Gulf Coast.

According to Wallace, increased use of natural gas to eliminate a so-called temporary surplus, as urged by Energy Secretary James Schlesinger and others, is in conflict with the policy mandated by the coal conversion bill.

INCREASED DOMESTIC, comercial and industrial uses of natural gas in Texas could soften the consequences of future actions by the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countires (OPEC), the commissioners believe.

Barry Schneiderwind, Railroad Commission examiner, recommended repeal of the boiler fuel order. He reported that fuel supply uncertainties and rising costs have caused increasing conversions of industries long dependent upon natural gas.

Present supply-cost forces can be expected to continue the allocation process that will eliminate the least economically efficient use of natural gas, according to Schneiderwind.

"An order by this commission that would prevent the full utilization of the remaining useful life of the massive investment made by Texas utilities in gas-fired generation would only increase the federally-imposed burden on Texas ratepayers," he said.

"Schneiderwind added, "Further, any expenditures for conversion from gas to fuel oil that would be required to meet the 1985 phasedown, would be useless in 1990 when the federal prohibition becomes effective."

New Catalyst Distribution Center Built

MENLO PARK, N.J. (Special) -A bulk storage and distribution terminal for petroleum cracking catalysts has been established in Houston by Engelhard's Minerals & Chemicals Division.

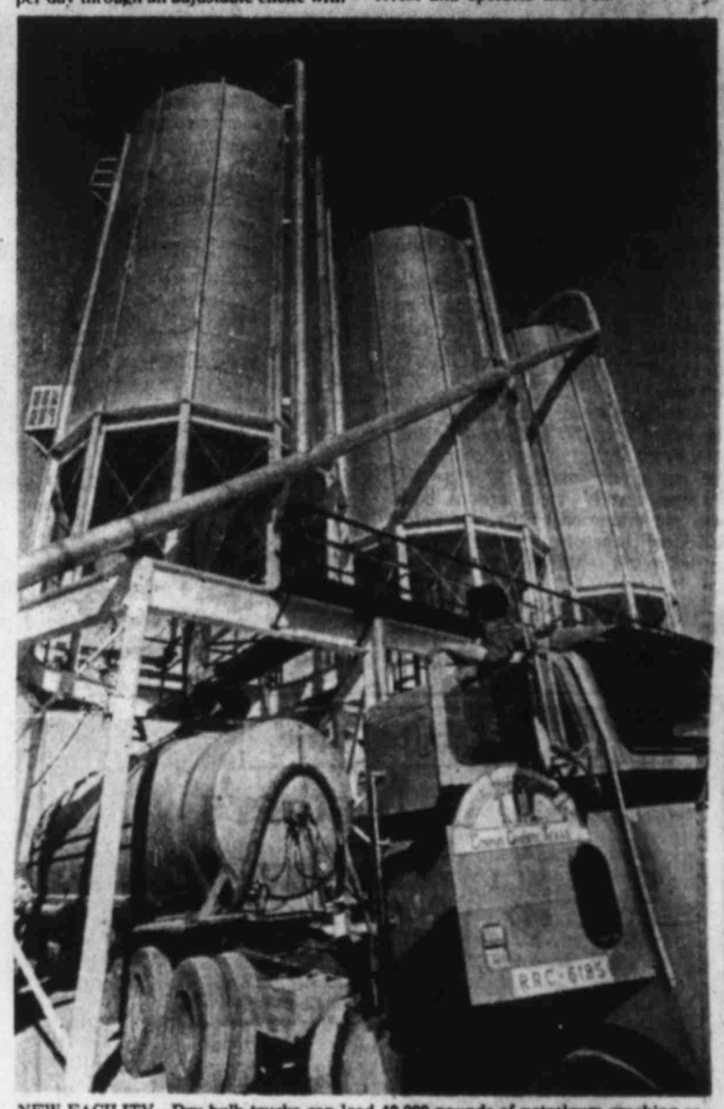
This new permanent installation is capable of providing Fluidized Catalytic Cracking (FCC) catalysts on an around-the-clock basis to petroleum refiners within a 600-mile radius of Houston, which includes centers in Louisiana and Oklahoma.

The terminal offers peak efficiency and cost savings to refiners in the service area, the company said. Using streamlined transfer systems, specified catalysts can be withdrawn from the large inventory without delay. Together with day or night dispatch capabilities, catalyst deliveries can be made to meet critical refinery needs.

Engelhard stocks the Houston facility directly from its catalyst production center at Attapulgus, Ga. Deliveries to Gulf Coast customers are made using pressure-differential trucks capable of discharging pneumatically into refinery storage facilities.

Sophisticated air pollution abatement controls have been incorporated in each of the terminal's three catalyst silos and at the catalyst transfer points.

Engelhard's facility is being operated by South Coast Terminals Inc.



NEW FACILITY—Dry bulk trucks can load 40,000 pounds of petroleum cracking catalyst in 15 minutes at Engelhard's new FCC catalyst terminal in Houston. The plant will supply catalysts to petroleum refiners within a 600-mile radius of Houston.

Unique Interdisciplinary Graduate Program Being Offered At Tech

Medical technicians, nurses, county agents, government workers, housewives and teachers have found common ground at Texas Tech University.

A total of 130 people in those and other fields have surprised the Texas Tech Graduate School both by their interest and their performance in an interdiciplinary master's degree program. In that program students have unusual freedom in selecting the courses they want.

The Master's program in Interdisciplinary Studies began at Texas Tech in 1975 as the first of its kind at a state-supported institution. Slim interest was expected.

The first year, however, 20 students enrolled and registration has beengrowing ever since. Close to 30 students will have completed the program and have earned either the master of arts or master of science degrees.

The program for each student is individually developed, according to the student's interests and background. The student chooses a stated theme or focus but must take courses in at least three different subject areas, with no more than 12 hours in any one area.

The first graduate, a government labor investigator, combined courses in management, political science and sociology. One woman, returned from the Peace Corps service, put together a program relating to international and multicultural education. She now is a foreign student adviser for another large state university.

Some enroll for career advancement, others only for the pleasure of learning.

Dr. Thomas A. Landford, associate dean of the Graduate School, writing in the Texas Tech "Journal of Education," said that some faculty members and administrators at first expressed concerned that the program might attract only weaker students, perhaps those who could not succeed in more specialized and exacting programs. Results have diminished this concern.

The program's students are at least as strong as the average, Langford's study showed. He attributed good Graduate Record Examination scores and good grades to two ideas which merit further study.

"It might be concluded," he suggested, "that it takes a better than average student to cross disciplinary lines, to venture into less familiar territory. Or it may be that the sort of intellectual curiosity that draws students into interdisciplinary studies is reflected in higher aptitude scores and grade averages."

Langford said he thought the university should not encourage movement away from highly structured master's programs in favor of more interdisciplinary, student-choice programs, however.

"There will always be the need for specialization and for training determined by faculty on the basis of the requirements of a discipline and fields of knowledge continually being deepened by ongoing research."

One of the program's advantages to the university, according to Landford, is that it is a weather vane for determining what educational needs at the master's level are not being met by existing programs.

"We have already discovered several trends of interest which may indicate some future direction for organized programs. This program allows us to observe the extent of interest, demand and need for programs before plunging in with a full-scale commitment."

Conversion Kit Reduces Gas Use By Using Four Cylinders

SUAMICO, Wis. (AP) — Carroll Lucia says he's found a way to trim the gas guzzling of some of those big V-8 autos.

Try running them on four cylinders.

Lucia plans to start selling kits soon for a do-it-yourself conversion from eight-cylinder to four-cylinder operation.

While it's not for every V-8 engine and it cuts acceleration capability considerably, Lucia expects the conversion to produce a gain of several miles per gallon.

"Above 35 miles per hour the car just sails along and you can't detect any appreciable change in noise or vibration," he said. But, "it's a dog getting across an intersection. You don't have that punch. It's like driving a loaded pickup truck.

"But we have 18,000 miles on the first car we converted," he added. "I never found one instance when I had to have more power."

The conversaion is accomplished by removing standard rocker arms and push rods from two cylinders on each bank of the engine. Replacement parts hold exhaust valves open so that compression pressure is relieved in each unused cylinder. A replacement carburetor stops the fuel supply to the extra four cylinders.

Lucia, 65, an automotive engineer for much of his life and a former Packard company worker, has operated Delta Dynamics at Suamico for 17 years. He plans to begin the mail-order marketing soon of about a dozen do-it-yourself conversion kits for some of the larger-engine models, at a cost of $250 each.

He said the conversion was not economical for smaller V-8 engines, and other factors affecting any mileage savings include front wheel alignment, weight, exterior design and engine wear.

"One thing I have to tell people all the time is you can't make a good V-4 from a poor V-8," he said.

In his research, he determined that the conversion idea was nothing new.

"We made a patent search and one of the V-4 conversions had a date of 1918," Lucia said. But most experimentation with the process was aimed at the factory level.

"What we're talking about is do-it-yourself," he said, adding that other possible mechanical refinements to boost mileage "would take it out of the hands of the do-it-yourselfer."

He said limited exposure of his idea had triggered widespread interest but he had gone slow in development of it, watching for changes in the energy situation and gasoline prices.

"No, you don't have the same power if you convert from V-8 to V-4, not half the power, but the individual will have to decide 'is it adequate for my use?'" he said. "Maybe it will become stylish to drive slow."

HAZARDSX GROWING

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Hazards from microwave radiation are increasing, says the General Accounting Office, which wants a performance standard set and enforced promptly for microwave medical diathermy machines to protect patients, operators and the public. In a recent report, the congressional investigative agency cited Food and Drug Administration estimates that 15,000 such machines are used in the United States anywhere from once a week to 12 times daily.

15.N-N5	Q-Q2
16.NxRP	R-B2

(a) A horrible mistake. P-QR3 or Q-N1 was needed.

HOW A WINNER CAN LOSE

Almost every player at one time or another reviews a game he has lost and suddenly realizes the sickening truth that another, obvious, line of continuation would have given him a win or, at worst, a draw. Sometimes the sad truth is stumbled upon by someone else. And most often, of course, it is never recognized at all. But if you're about to surrender, be sure there is no salvation for you. Remember the words of Xavier Tartakower: "You can never win a game you have resigned."

Now let's take a look at what can happen even to a Master when he sees the cloud but not the lining.

Play in Mannheim, Germany, 1914.

WHITE: Jacques Mieses: King on Q3; Rook on KR5; Bishop on Q1; pawn on QB4 (four pieces).

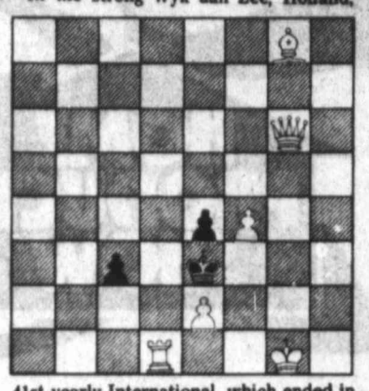
BLACK: Erhard Post: King on QN5; pawns on QR7, QN2 and QB4 (four pieces).

Mieses, famous for his combinations and winner of innumerable brilliancy prizes, resigned in the above position.

All that Mieses looked at was: 1.R-R7, K-R4; 2.RxP, K-R3; 3.R-N8, K-R2; and Black Queens his Rook's pawn. Soon after the game was published, it was found that 1.R-R7, K-R4; 2. R-R8, followed by 3.R-QR8 wins for White. In 1950, 36 years later, Laszlo Szabo, Hungarian Master, found that even after 1.R-R7, P-R8Q; 1.RxPch, K-R4; 3.R-R8ch, K-N5; 4.RxQ, leads to stalemate and so a draw. SO WHY RESIGN?

NONA'S WIN WHILE LOSING

In the strong Wyk aan Zee, Holland,



41st yearly International, which ended in February, Lev Polugaievsky, USSR scored an impressive 7q4 points out of 11 victory. Nona Gaprindashvili, the only other Russian, came in last tied with R. Nikolac of Yugoslavia with 3q4 points each. Here is their game from this event.

1.P-K4	P-QB3
2.P-Q4	P-Q4
3.N-Q2	PxP
4.NxP	B-B4
5.N-N3	B-N3
6.P-KR4	P-KR3
7.P-R5	B-R2
8.N-B3	N-Q2
9.B-Q3	BxB
10.QxB(a)	P-K3(b)
11.B-B4	Q-R4ch
12.P-B3	N1-B3
13.P-R4	P-B4
14.0-0	R-B1
15.KR-K1	P-B5
16.Q-B2	B-K2(c)
17.N-K5	0-0
18.N-B5	KR-K1
19.NxNP(d)	KxN
20.BxPch	KxB
21.NxPch	KxB
22.P-N4ch	K-R5
23.P-B3	NxP
24.R-K4	Resigns(e)

(a) An important position in the Caro-Kann Defense.

(b) 10 ... Q-B2 avoids 11.B-B4.

(c) If 16 ... NxP; 17.NxN, QxN; 18.Q-K4 or 18.P-Q5 gives Black trouble.

(d) Demolishes Black's position! And each move now is a link to a fine combination.

(e) After 24 ... N2-B3; 25.Q-R2 mate.

• • •

The solution to the problem above is: 1.R-Q4, KxR; 2.Q-N6 mate; or 1.R-Q4, KxBP; 2.RxP mate; or 1.R-Q4, KxKP; mate; etc.

the COIN Box

By NORMAN DAVIS

SOME COUNTRIES use a standard design on coinage. British coins almost always show the reigning monarch's portrait, Mexican ones feature the beautiful eagle-and-serpent design, and nearly every coin of the USSR shows a hammer and sickle.

That makes it easy to identify some coins, but it makes the country's coinage monotonous.

We don't follow the standard design practice, but we came close in the past.

If you take a Liberty Cap, or Capped Bust, dime and put it beside a quarter and half-dollar issued around the same time, you'll see that size is the only major difference.

These dimes were issued first in 1809. Like half-dollars and $5 gold pieces of 1807, $2½ gold coins of 1808, and quarters of 1815, they feature a left-facing head of Miss Liberty.

She wears a liberty cap with "Liberty" along the headband. We can see some long curls of hair and the top of Liberty's gown. The date is at the bottom and 13 stars line the sides.

The reverse, again, duplicates that of quarters and halves, except for the denomination, which is shown on the dime as "10 C." at the bottom.

At reverse center is the eagle which is our national emblem. This eagle faces the viewer, with its head stretching to our left and its wings held beside the body with wingtips pointing down.

A small U.S. shield is on the eagle's chest; the eagle's claws hold arrows and an olive branch.

These dimes are slightly larger than later dimes, with a diameter averaging 18.8 millimeters; the diameter was set at 17.9 mm beginning in 1837, a size change less than 5 percent.

Our early dimes are 89.24 percent silver (the rest is copper). U.S. silver coins' fineness was 90 percent from 1837 until clad coins went into use.

The Liberty Cap dimes were struck at Philadelphia. New mint equipment that went into use in 1828 produced the slightly smaller Type 2 dimes. A Type 1 dime's rim looks like inward-pointing gear teeth; a Type 2's is like a line of tiny dots.

Liberty Cap dimes were last made in 1837. Mintage totals varied widely, topping a million several times. A specimen in Good condition, with portrait and eagle outlined but all details worn away, may cost only $15 or so. One grading Fine, with plenty of wear but with full detail and all of "Liberty" readable, is likely to cost around $25.

Next week: "Coronet Half-Eagles"—Coins with a unique claim to fame.

Self-rising flour has leavening ingredients and salt added to it. It should never be used in making yeast breads.

The Almanac
TODAY IN HISTORY

By United Press International

Today is Sunday, May 13, the 133th day of 1979 with 232 to follow. Today is Mother's Day.

The moon is full.

The morning stars are Mercury, Venus and Mars.

The evening stars are Jupiter and Saturn.

Those born on this date are under the sign of Taurus.

British composer Sir Arthur Sullivan of Gilbert and Sullivan was born May 13, 1842.

On this day in history:

In 1607, English colonists landed near the James River in Virginia to establish their first permanent residence in the New World. It was called Jamestown.

In 1846, the United States declared war on Mexico.

In 1956, 73 Indonesians were drowned when a pleasure craft sank in the Java Sea.

In 1975, the United States regained possession of the "Mayaguez" in the Gulf of Siam after American planes destroyed three Cambodian gunboats that participated in capture of the cargo vessel.

A thought for the day: The French writer Voltaire said, "Common sense is not so common."

MUM KNOWS BEST

BARNSLEY, England (AP) — Shoplifter Albert Soloway, 64, put on probation for stealing groceries, promises to listen to his 84-year-old clairvoyant mother in the future. Mum, he told the court, warned him not to go out after she saw the outline of a bobby in her teacup.
