T-O Fair Prospects—Down In Hidalgo—What Hijackers Need—Money In Insurance—

FIRST entries in the livestock division of the Texas-Oklahoma fair should be followed by many other exhibits in all divisions.

Fair time is drawing near, and the displays offered here this year should exceed all others in attractiveness, variety and value.

The crop season and the livestock season have been most favorable in Northwest Texas and Southern Oklahoma. This fact should be reflected in the greatest exhibits and the greatest attendance in the fair's history.

CITIZENS of Hidalgo county, down in the magic irrigated valley, voted a $6,000,000 bond issue for the purpose of providing a complete system of feeder roads over the county to connect with the present highway system.

It will be recalled that the tax values in Hidalgo county jumped $12,000,000 in a single year. It is predicted there will be another jump of $12,000,000 when the feeders are completed. Citizens of Hidalgo county know the secret of progress and prosperity.

NOEL COPELAND of Wichita Falls, fine young man and once captain of the Wichita Falls high school football team, is shot down by hijackers at McCamey, and his slayers apparently escape free. At least there has been nothing said of any successful effort to apprehend the slayers.

Time was in Texas when by general consent, if not by law, the horse thief was tied by his neck to the most convenient tree. The same medicine might be of benefit to bandits and hijackers. Perhaps the law does provide the death penalty for such criminals but the "general consent" of juries seems to be lacking in the matter of inflicting the extreme penalty.

The man who sets forth with a gun as a modern bandit or hijacker is a murderer at heart, and becomes so in fact with the slightest break on the part of his victim.

And there are those who claim there is no need for rangers and more law enforcement officers in some of Texas' oil fields.

DURING 1926 Texas citizens paid $127,545,018 for insurance of all kinds and received in losses $53,117,340. Figures on the books of the commissioner of insurance show that all companies did an excellent business in that year.

The insurance commissioner's figures also show that $2,427,254,685 in life insurance was in force in 1926.

There must be money in the insurance business. There is money and satisfaction in insurance for those who insure their property and their lives. They guard against personal fire losses, accident losses and poverty for their dependents.

U. S. TO WARN BRITAIN NAVY MUST BE CUT

Coolidge to Stand Fast On Opposition To Bigger Navy

HE BLAMES LONDON

Fiasco in Geneva Arms Parley Is Credited To England

By Universal Service.

RAPID CITY, July 29.—President Coolidge has served a solemn warning upon Great Britain that she must recede from her arbitrary demands to control the sea or accept full responsibility before the world for the collapse of the Geneva national conference, it was learned officially today.

Great Britain's insistent demand for a great fleet of modern cruisers that would give her world supremacy is regarded by President Coolidge as preposterous.

He has no intention of yielding to it. Great Britain must assent to the reasonable limitation proposals of the United States or President Coolidge will permit the conference to collapse at once.

To Blame Britain

It is very likely that with the collapse of the conference he will allow the state department and the American delegates at Geneva to publish to the world a statement of what he regards as Great Britain's complete blame for the failure of the conference to produce a program of naval limitation in the interest of world peace.

Resentful of the British attitude, President Coolidge's complete views of the Geneva fiasco were permitted to be published from here today for the first time since Uncle Sam put his legs under the table with Great Britain and Japan.

Great Britain, accordingly, will find in President Coolidge today an international poker player who is ready to call her alleged bluff.

Coolidge Wants Peace

The attitude of President Coolidge is this:

He insists that Great Britain is demanding a navy incompatible with the peace of the world. He believes that her demands ar more provocative of war than of peace. Under no circumstances, will he permit the United States to agree to them.

The breaking point between the United States and Great Britain is the English proposal for from 600,000 to 750,000 tons of modern cruisers. That is in excess of 200,000 tons of what Great Britain now has, the president is informed. Consequently, he believes that her alleged requirements would produce a naval construction rather than a naval limitation program.

For the United States to build her cruiser fleet to a par with the alleged requirements of Great Britain would require an expenditure of nearly two billion dollars, the president is informed.

Burden on Nations

Great Britain's cruiser requirements would place another enormous military burden upon the backs of all the nations that would be forced for their own protection to keep pace with her, the president believes.

It was permitted to be made known that President Coolidge called the Geneva conference for the primary purpose of promoting peace, good-will and friendly understanding by limiting the naval arms of warfare.

With peace and good understanding firmly established by a naval limitations agreement among the major seapowers, he confidently believed that great economic benefits would flow to the entire world. Not only would the money formerly spent for war-like enterprises be freed for investment in commercial and industrial pursuits, but the trade of the world would be pushed forward in the knowledge that no war-like spirit existed to threaten its destruction, the president believed.

British Are Insistent

Great Britain's desire to regulate the size of guns and the tonnage of individual ships of the United States while she would be left free to build light cruisers on a quantity basis were regarded by President Coolidge as merely incidental to her desire to sustain a vast fleet.

If she would yield to the latter, the former divergences could easily be adjusted by compromise, he is convinced.

AUSTIN HEARS $50,000 ROAD FRAUD RUMOR

Former State Official To Be Asked to Explain Deal He "Pulled"

MORE INDICTMENTS

State Attorney Promises Startling Revelation At Early Date

By Universal Service.

AUSTIN, July 29.—At least six more men may be indicted in connection with an alleged "padded" payroll in the highway department in 1926, when the Travis county grand jury reconvenes August 8, Assistant Attorney General Galloway Calhoun declared today.

Three men, L. J. Nachtrab, former highway division Engineer, S. C. Tompkins and H. Joschke, are already under indictment on various charges, ranging from diversion of state funds to forgery and the passing of forged instruments. Yesterday 11 additional indictments were returned against Nachtrab, making a total of 16 counts against him.

Calhoun said he had uncovered an apparent "endless chain" of men whom he said cashed bogus highway warrants amounting to $16,000.

"Within the next three months, startling information will be brought to light involving a former high state official and a $50,000 deal he 'pulled' in the highway department. This man is slated to go to the penitentiary unless he can explain things," Calhoun declared.

Tompkins and Joshke are now at liberty under $2500 bonds each. Nachtrab, whose bond before the additional indictments were returned against him was $2500, is now in jail in default of $500 bond on each of the 11 indictments.

5500 Barrels Daily Flow Recorded By Deep Producer In Young County

A spectacular increase in the flow of Panhandle Refining company's No. 7 McCluskey, a deep producer in Young county, appeared Friday to rank that well as the heaviest producer in North Texas and one of the largest in West Texas during the present year, oil men declared.

Coming in several days ago with an initial production of 120 barrels of high grade oil per hour, the flow has increased until Friday it amounted to more than 200 barrels each hour and the day's yield was expected to be between 5000 to 5500 barrels.

In the 24-hour period ending Friday morning the well gauged 4225 barrels, its peak up to this time. The increase Friday was attributed by officials to the hole being drilled deeper into the rich lime pay by its own gas pressure.

The No. 7 McCluskey, located in the South Bend field of the southern part of Young county, is a well with a history. First completed in 1922 during the South Bend excitement when the play was for the 2000-foot sand, it produced from that strata for several years. When C. C. Stovall discovered the 3800-foot lime late in 1926, Panhandle deepened its No. 7 but the old well failed to respond in the Stovall pay and was carried to a depth of 4220 feet from which the present flow is coming.

Its ultimate total production, which officials say cannot now even be estimated, will undoubtedly be a record figure in oil annals. Since striking the present production less than two weeks ago the well has produced nearly 40,000 barrels of oil worth approximately $50,000.

On the same lease the Panhandle Refining company has another well which is threatening to mount to a high production figure. It is No. 20 which was drilled with a rotary rig. Its last 24-hour figure was 400 barrels, representing a healthy increase and on Friday its flow was reported to be climbing correspondingly with that of No. 7.

Lives at Stake

BODY OF SLAIN MAN IDENTIFIED

Evidence Opens in Brutal Louisiana Murder

FRANKLIN, La., July 29. (AP)—A peculiarity of the thumbs of a body removed from Lake Palourde on July 7 established its identity as that of James J. Lebouef, Morgan City public utilities man, witnesses testified here today in the trial of his widow and her alleged lover for murder.

Charles Burgess, who identified the body at the coroner's inquest, testifying in the trial of Mrs. Ada Bonner Lebouef, Dr. Thomas E. Dreher and James Beadle, declared that the body was that of Lebouef.

He had known Lebouef for 20 years, he said. He declared he had never seen a man with thumbs shaped like those of Lebouef, which he said, looked as if they had been cut off and sewed back on.

Some Not Positive

Other witnesses were less positive in their identification. One man said that the dead man had false teeth and so did Lebouef, but added "I couldn't swear the body was Lebouef." Another said rubber heels on the shoes of the dead man appeared to be the same as those worn by the utilities man, but he, likewise, "couldn't swear" to the identity.

Louis R. Blakeman, Morgan City chief of police and brother-in-law of Mrs. Lebouef, was positive that the body was that of Lebouef. The thumbs were short and thick, he said, and the general appearance of the body showed it to be Lebouef.

J. A. THORNTON JAILED AFTER OFFICER SHOT

Jake Thornton, 42, Brother of Prisoner, Slain In Battle

OFFICER WOUNDED

R. G. Watson, Clay County Deputy, Gets Bullet In His Hip

John Asher Thornton, brother of Jake Thornton, 42, who was instantly killed in a gun battle with deputy sheriffs three miles east of Charlie Thursday night, was lodged in the Wichita county jail Friday morning by George Cunningham, sheriff of Clay county, acting on authority of a charge of assault to murder in the justice court of Judge Clay Coleman, Henrietta.

Thornton was charged in connection with the shooting of R. G. Watson, Clay county deputy, who was shot through the hip as he and another officer called at the Thornton home to arrest the two brothers for alleged violation of the liquor laws, it is said.

20 Shots Fired

According to County Attorney Will Glasgow and the version presented by officers, the two deputies stopped at the Thornton home and asked for watermelon. The brothers asked them if they preferred beer, and later produced three bottles, officers said. Watson told Jake Thornton he was under arrest. At this uncture the firing began and the officers returned the fire. In the exchange of shots Jake Thornton fell with four bullet wounds in his body, and Deputy Sheriff Watson was wounded in the hip.

John Asher Thornton is said to have assisted his brother in the fight, in which about 20 shots were fired.

Arrested in Woods.

After the battle that ensued, John Thornton fled to nearby woods, in which he was arrested early Friday morning by a party of officers led by Sheriff Cunningham. He was brought to Wichita Falls for safe keeping while the Henrietta jail is undergoing repairs.

Following his arrest early Friday morning by Sheriff Cunningham, Thornton was brought to the Wichita Falls county jail shortly after 11 o'clock.

In the absence of demand for examining trial, action in the case will be left to the Clay county grand jury, which convenes September 5, Will Glasgow, county attorney, said.

The charge against Thornton was filed by Constable H. M. Simpson, of Thornberry, who assisted Watson of Charlie after the latter had been injured in the fight.

Inquest Conducted.

Arriving there, the two officers notified Clay county officials, who went immediately to the scene of the shooting to hold an inquest. Physicians who attended Watson in Charlie said his wounds were not serious.

Thornton's body was taken to the home of Mrs. W. L. Thornton, where he has lived for the last few years. Funeral arrangements have not been announced.

He is survived by his mother, two sisters, Mrs. Mary Denton of Wichita Falls, and a second who lives in Arkansas, and one brother, now under arrest.

INDIANAPOLIS, July 29.—A friend of mine in Indianapolis gave me a sniff of gin that he had shuffled together in the sanctity of his closet the night before and I went away walking hard on my heels and muttering "By jiminy crickets" to see the Rev. E. S. Shumaker, D. D., about the liquor situation in Indiana.

It really is terrible. I mean the gin. The liquor situation in Indiana is not so good either. The local leggers ask $75 per case for cut Scotch that you can buy in New York for $45 per case. It shows you how they take advantage of people. Do you wonder that the lads are publishing their own gin?

Big Shot of Show

The Rev. E. S. Shumaker, D. D., is state superintendent of the Indiana Anti-Saloon League, which the local politicians tell me is the most powerful organization in all Hoosierland in the matter of politics, with the Rev. E. S. Shumaker, D. D., as the big shot of the outfit.

At this time the Rev. E. S. Shumaker, D. D., is in a tangle with old John Law, as represented by the supreme court of Indiana. He has been pronounced in contempt of that court on the allegation that he falsely and maliciously misrepresented the court in some of its decisions on liquor cases and along about next Tuesday it is expected that the court will decide what shall be done with the Rev. E. S. Shumaker, D. D.

It can fine him, or send him to jail at its discretion. No one seems to care to venture a guess as to the probable fate of the Rev. E. S. Shumaker, D. D., not even the Rev. E. S. Shumaker, D. D., himself. I doubt if he would enjoy jail in this weather. He is fat and it is hot. Still, some folks think it would be water on his wheel if the court sent him to jail.

Contempt Is Charged

The false and malicious misrepresentation of the supreme court by the Rev. E. S. Shumaker, D. D., is alleged to have been made by him in his annual report as superintendent of the Indiana Anti-Saloon League. An information charging the contempt was filed against him by Arthur L. Gillom, the attorney general of the state and this information, which I read today, sets forth some astonishing allegations.

The Rev. E. S. Shumaker, D. D., and his associates are accused of a purpose to intimidate the judges of the supreme court so as to influence them in their decisions on liquor cases. To quote from the information:

Intimidation Claimed

"That plan to intimidate them is to report falsely certain decisions and to state falsely the personal attitude of judges of the court and to impute to them false and dishonest motives for the purpose of misleading the people of Indiana and causing them to view the judges in disparagement and to cause them to vote against such judges as may stand for re-election."

The supreme court itself did not say the Rev. E. S. Shumaker, DD., was guilty of contempt. The court itself did not pass on the proposition at all. It submitted the statements of the Rev. E. S. Shumaker, DD., to a committee of six lawyers of Indiana, rather an extraordinary procedure when you come to think of it, and these lawyers, by a vote of five to one, said the Rev. E. S. Shumaker, DD., was plenty contemptous.

Lawyers Defend Him

"My lawyers tell me if it was contempt at all it was indirect contempt," said the Rev. E. S. Shumaker, DD., to me when I called on him in his office in the Roosevelt building.

He is a heavy set man, probably in his mid-fifties, who looks not unlike old three fingered Jack Dougherty, the fight manager, which is by no means an uncomplimentary crack. The Rev. E. S. Shumaker, DD., wears square toed high black shoes and is a square toed looking individual generally.

He had on an alpaca coat, with a lodge emblem in the button hole of the lapel and a large gold ring with a lodge insignia on it on one of his fat fingers. He has several chins, is slightly bald and his thinning hair has the good old badger trim of the great southwest in the back. He affects both suspenders and a belt which gives his black pants ample support and horn rimmed cheaters ride his nose.

His face is large and round and smooth, and he addressed me in a large round smooth tone. He picked up the telephone while I was talking with him and fairly cooed a "hello." Then suddenly he barked "What's that?" like an old time top sergeant, so I judged the Rev. E. S. Shumaker, DD., is not altogether oil.

This man that the politicians of Indiana say carries a wicked political punch behind his organization and who is charged with trying to scare the daylights out of a supreme court was once a Methodist preacher. He was born in Ohio, raised in Illinois, and has been with the anti-saloon league for 24 years. He graduated from De Pauw university.

$5000 Yearly Salary

He gets $5000 per year salary, which is not so much money, at that, unless he also has perquisities. I did not ask him about that. He started out with the league at $100 a month and his salary was increased slowly and at long intervals. It was $4000 per year up to comparatively recently.

His enemies say he is a fanatic on the liquor question, that he will not yield the sixteenth of an inch on the law even in the interests of common sense. I must say he did not impress me that way, however. I told him I heard he was the political boss of Indiana and he smiled broadly.

"Do I look like a boss?" he asked.

I said I wouldn't say that, but then you never can tell a political boss at first glance and they do not all look alike. I asked him about the Anti-Saloon League's interest in politics.

"Our interest is in maintaining the law," he said. "We do nothing more or less. But we are interested in officials having to do with the enforcement of the law."

Fear Political Club

Which, in a general way, is what the information charging the contempt also says. It alleges that the Rev. E. S. Shumaker, D. D., and his fellow defendants "seek to hold the judges in fear of political defeat unless they render decisions to suit the defendants."

Furthermore: "The defendants maliciously and falsely state that the liquor interests have gained control of this court, that at least a majority of the judges of the court are liberal in their sentiments respecting liquor and that one is bitterly hostile to prohibition."

You see, the state of Indiana has in addition to the Volstead act, common to us all, what is known as the Wright bone dry law passed at the last session of the Indiana legislature, which is a most drastic instrument.

Don't Look Thirsty

It prohibits the very possession of liquor for beverage purposes. In fact, a citizen who wishes to keep within the Indiana law shouldn't even look as if he might desire a dram. It also provides for search and seizure on nothing more than information and belief, but a decision of the supreme court makes it necessary to have some definite proof on which to base a search warrant and rather cramps the style of the Anti-Saloon League.

The league, by the way, does not seem to connect up in any way with D. C. Stephenson, the former grand dragon of the ku kluxers, who is now a lifetimer in the state penitentiary, and who seems to connect up with about everything else under discussion in these parts just now. I asked the Rev. E. S. Shumakre, D. D., about Stephenson, but he said he knew the ex-grand dragon only by slight.

It is said the Anti-Saloon League and the klan bowed up in at least one campaign in Indiana, however, though it is not apparent that they are affiliated now. The klan seems to be pretty feeble politically in Indiana anyway.

Committee Convicts Him

I asked the Rev. E. S. Shumaker, D. D., about the committee that decided he was guilty of contempt in his statements in his annual report about the supreme court and he listed the members thereof for me with a few remarks on each.

"One is Fred C. Gauss, a former judge of the supreme court, joining in one of the decisions complained of," he said. "Another was Moses B. Lairy, now dead, also a former judge of the supreme court. Then there is Evan B. Stotzenberg of New Albany, Dan Dix, president of the state bar association, and C. C. Shirley of Indianapolis. They all agreed that my attorneys were not in contempt but five thought I was."

Boy King Partial to Hot Cakes

Tiny Ruler Keeps Mother Busy in Kitchen

BUCHAREST, Rumania, July 29 (AP)—A small unpretentious house in Calle Victoria, Bucharest's main street, has suddenly thrust into its shadow the golden palaces of the king and queen on the lower part of the same street. It is the home of Princess Helen, mother of the five-year-old boy whom fate virtually has made ruler over 16 million people.

The little house is just like any American brick and plaster home in Kokomo, Ind., or any other town. Inside, in the kitchen is the beautiful Helen, "a slim, gray princess," wearing a checked white apron. She is bending over the coal stove, cooking a new dish from a recipe given her by Mrs. William Culbertson, wife of the American minister.

Tugging at the apron strings of the princess, or sitting in his high chair is the baby king, Michael, begging her in perfect English for another helping of oatmeal. He is monarch not only of all he surveys in the kitchen, but of millions of Rumanians, but he seems bent only on getting enough bread, jam, cookies, and other sweet things dear to every childs heart.

Today the tiny soverign became acquainted with American buckwheat cakes and molasses through his American playmates, the children of Mr. and Mrs. Culbertson. He ate so many he could only wabble.

COOLIDGE FOR DAWES AGAIN

Cal Wants "Hell Maria" As Running Mate

By Universal Service.

WASHINGTON, July 29.—Coolidge and Dawes again!

That is the ticket President Coolidge wishes the Republican party to put in the field once more next year, if he decides to make the race, according to those who claim to know the executive mind.

In other words, Charles G. Dawes will have the refusal of the vice-presidential nomination just as his own nomination for president rests entirely upon the decision of Calvin Coolidge.

For some time there have been rumors at the capital of a lack of warmth between Mr. Coolidge and Mr. Dawes and that the president is casting about for a new running mate if he accepts the nomination that will be thrust upon him, unless he rejects it beforehand.

The president's attitude toward Dawes is expected to dispel these rumors and deflate a number of vice-presidential booms which have sprung up in consequence of it. Booms have been launched for the vice-presidential job for Senator McNary of Oregon, co-sponsor of the McNary-Haugen bill, Senator Norbeck of South Dakota and former Gov. Arthur M. Hyde of Missouri.

All of the vice-presidential booms are based upon the supposition that Mr. Coolidge would need a running mate who was strong with the farmers. In that connection, it was pointed out that Dawes had as much to do in framing the McNary-Haugen bill as any other man.

It was Dawes' participation in guiding the farm relief bill through the senate that gave rise to the reports of a rift between him and Mr. Coolidge, who vetoed the measure with a tart attack on its economic soundness.

Kiwanis Committee Visits Youthful Pig Raisers; Barbecue Picnic Served

A party of 14 Kiwanians Friday visited eight of the 17 boys and girls to whom pigs were presented by the Kiwanis club several months ago and were prevented visiting all of the pig raisers because of the rain. The boys and girls visited were in the Charlie, Thornberry and Cashion districts.

The Kiwanians were treated to a barbecue picnic by the mothers of several of the children at McFarland Springs, on the Lee Truscott place.

All of the boys and girls visited have raised their pigs thus far with success, according to J. L. Jackson Jr., who was a member of the party. Litters were found at three of the farms. Great interest is being manifested by the young pig raisers, Mr. Jackson stated.

The following boys and girls were visited Friday: Grace Garner, Lester Howard, John N. Bryan, Jack Pepper, Mildred Baber, Lester McNeil, Virgil Evans and Jack Marrs.

Another tour to complete the visit will be made within a short time by the party which was composed of J. L. Jackson, Paul Colvert, Ell Morgan, W. R. Couch, J. W. Akin, Dave Paul, Dr. O. W. Wilson, J. N. Sherrill, Leonard Noble, Hank Wolff, Howard Renfro, Homer Sanderford, A. R. Watland and Jim Baber.

Accompanying the Kiwanians were Dr. James, veterinary, and Mr. Filo of the Maricle Feed company.

HOG RAISERS GIVEN ADVICE

Good Housing Facilities Is Important Factor

Special to The Record News.

COLLEGE STATION, July 29.—Proper housing is an important factor in the successful raising of hogs, E. R. Eudaly, swine husbandman, Extension service, said in a discussion on "hog lot equipment and sanitation" before the livestock group of the farmers' short course, A. & M. college of Texas.

"In a great many cases where houses are provided, they are not constructed in a manner that will permit the best results," Mr. Eudaly said. "This is especially true in regard to the farrowing house. In the majority of cases the farrowing house is too small. This does not permit the sow to approach the bed as she wants to and hence the pigs are often killed.

"Some farmers do not provide a pig guard rail in the farrowing house and the majority that do make such provision place the rail six inches from the floor and six inches from the wall. This is too close. When placed six inches from the floor or ground the bedding very often comes within an inch or two of the guard rail and as a result the pig does not have enough room to go under the guard rail. Since a young pig is unable to jump the guard rail, it often gets mashed in the head or against the rail. The guard rail should be at least 12 inches from the floor and 12 inches from the wall.

FARMER SELLS ROASTING EARS

Record Yield Brings Big Profit at Clarendon

Special to The Record News.

CLARENDON, July 29.—M. G. Cottingham, a Donley county farmer living just east of Lelia Lake has produced a remarkable yield of corn for Texas. Cottingham planted seven acres of corn on bottom sandy loam soil and is gathering it now and marketing as roasting ears on the Amarillo market. From the seven acres he is receiving an average of 45 bushels to the acre, and says he will market off the patch at least 3000 dozen ears. He is receiving 20 cents a dozen for his corn and trucking it to Amarillo. From these figures it can be seen that he will take in at least $500 from the seven acres.

Mr. Cottingham believes in diversification, and not only grows corn, but has alfalfa, cotton, watermelons and other crops growing on his place, as well as running a good bunch of hogs, and having a good flock of chickens.

WHAT IS A KISS?

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Have the Moderns Given It a New Definition?

By Beatrice Fairfax.
An Authority on the Problems of Love and Marriage.

WHAT is a kiss?

Can it be that the kiss is changed in meaning these days?

Is it likely the time will come when the kiss as a caress of affection will be as unknown among us as it is now among native tribes of New Zealand and various other regions of the earth?

Certainly the following letter from "Bachelor" expresses a modern view, quite foreign to the old-fashioned, accepted idea of a kiss as a symbol of affection and love:

"Dear Miss Fairfax:

"If I asked a girl to kiss me and she refused, I would lose all desire to kiss her again. The way I figure is expressed in the following phrase: 'Once refused, always refused.'

"From what I have read, and from what fellows and girls have told me, I have come to the conclusion that all girls are willing to go out with men and let men treat them and pay them compliments. But when a girl is asked for a kiss, why everything is different.

"According to the papers a man thinks more of a girl who refuses to kiss him. But I don't. I respect the girl who returns my kisses a great deal more than I do the girl who refuses to kiss me. You may conclude from this that my friendship for girls I go out with is not true. But I can safely say that there is not a girl who can put a single mark against me.

"I do not think much of a girl who lets a man kiss her, but does not return the kiss. There is no pleasure in a kiss of this nature. I wonder whether you will print this letter, which conflicts with the ideas of so many who write to you."

"A BACHELOR."

Your letter is entitled to a hearing, Mr. Bachelor, because it sincerely expresses the attitude of many thousands of young men on the subject of the kiss.

"Make me immortal with a kiss," her lover begged Helen of Troy, according to the dramatist. There is a thrill in a kiss, with depths and heights of ecstatic love back of it. The world might well be lost for such a kiss.

"You owe me your kisses, for I have spent fifty cents on you," demands the modern sheik. And modern Helen may have to climb out of her escort's car and walk home unless she pays her debt promptly and enthusiastically, regardless of her personal feelings.

There is neither friendship nor love, neither beauty nor inspiration in this type of modern kiss, but only the most sordid, tawdry form of self-indulgence, a selfish, material pleasure.

Try to look ahead, Mr. Bachelor, to the time when you may have a daughter of your own, growing into womanhood. I wonder whether you will lay down for her the code you demand of girls today.

Will you assure your daughter that if she hopes to hold the respect and liking of men she must cheerfully give her lips to every man she knows who does her the honor of asking a kiss, regardless of whether she likes, loves or shrinks from him? Will you instruct her always to kiss enthusiastically the man who spends a few cents or dollars on attentions to her, or even devotes a few moments of his time as her escort? Will you care to have your daughter mauled by every acquaintance?

All the girls who eagerly kiss you in payment for your attentions, Mr. Bachelor, kiss also Tom, Dick and Harry with equal enthusiasm. That is the spirit of the promiscuous kiss. Will you choose such a girl as head of your home, as your helpmate, the mother of your children? Will you care to have your wife generous with her kisses to all comers?

Do girls really want this promiscuous petting? Do young men actually want them to have it—the girls they love and marry? Perhaps the custom fits well with the hip-flask and the noisy, thrill-chasing spirit that turns girls at a party into public property, as it were.

It is hard to take a stand that may mean social ostracism. Yet I advise every girl with the instinctive desire of a good girl, to give her love and kisses to just one man—the man she loves—to be independent—unyielding in her refusal of kisses to the casual friend, the chance escort, to any and every new acquaintance who claims a kiss as payment due for attentions—so much for so much. Do not compromise with the ideals that give meaning and value to life.

The Eyes of Youth

Who Can Resist Their Charm?

Drawn by Dorothy Flack

LIMPID BLUE, transparent hazel, mellow brown—eyes that gaze and are gazed upon. Eyes that sparkle with the brilliance of youthful exuberance and delight all upon whom they alight!

For such is the influence of youth. These same eyes, set in a background of wrinkles and graying hair, would lose their charm and fail to enchant. But what mortal can resist the twinkle from shiny orbs of ebony blackness, when their owner tosses a mass of jet curls in his direction? What man is proof against tears that drop like crystals from eyes of heavenly azure?

Then, when all the love dreams are mirrored in the dazzling depths of the beloved eyes, and one reads the hopes and fears, the trust and wistfulness that lie embedded there could ever the wildest imagination conjure a picture more beautiful?

And so it ever goes! The eyes of youth to which Love lends a splendor that never fades, are the eyes that one ever seeks, and when the dancing love light first springs to the eyes of the beloved, whether they're blue or brown or hazel—then you know that you've found the One and Only, and your mission in life is ever and always to keep the lovelight shining in the dear eyes that will ever, to you, be the Eyes of Youth!

The Present Is All That You Have of Life

By Lucy Lowell

TOO many of us waste our lives and ruin our natural heritage of happiness by ignoring that mighty thing, the present.

We try to pick up existence—a day-to-day thing after all—and swing it over to the future.

"Next year I am going to do this and that, so I don't mind the way things are now."

And we start right in living for next year; for the golden thing way up somewhere. And all of the rich brightness that is everywhere about at all times escapes us; we pass it over without so much as a glance for the shadow of a hope that may never come true.

For the future never comes. It is always today; when tomorrow reaches us, that, too, is today. We never catch up with time.

"Boast not thyself of tomorrow," counsels an ancient book. "For who knoweth what a day may bring forth?"

And Omar, the poet, sang:

"Tomorrow! Why, tomorrow
I may be
Myself with yesterday's seven thousand years!"

Nor is there more to be gained by living in the past. "That was my happy time; if only I could go back and enjoy it again. No days as good as the old ones."

But all days are good; nothing so wonderful ever has happened as what may happen again. It is when one moves through life with his face backward that he misses all the fine things of today.

Besides what we wish to retain of our yesterdays is included in our todays.

"And all the good the past hath had
Remains to make our own time glad."

Thus wrote Emerson. We do not lose and throw away unless we wish to do so.

And there will be nothing we wish to drop from our lives, ever, if we take care to give our best to the wonderful present.

Worry and Bunk About Blood Pressure

By Chas. A. L. Reed, M. D.,
Former President of the American Medical Association.

THERE is such a thing as high blood pressure, and high blood pressure is important, but there is a lot of bunk about it. It is a fashionable ailment. Sometimes it is even an obsession. Some people go about constantly speaking and thinking of their blood pressure and blame it for symptoms really due to other things. Many cultivate worry about their blood pressure. Worry actually has the effect of raising it, in that way forming a vicious circle. It is not a disease in itself, but a symptom of some underlying disorder, which may be serious, but which is not necessarily so.

Those who come of a family with high blood pressure need not be over-anxious, and if they will have themselves overhauled by their family doctor once or twice a year they will insure themselves against chronic disease. There is nothing so good as moderation in all things. The hard-working and hard-living man of affairs must relax the strain of his life. He should learn to play, to take real holidays and frequent days or week-ends off, to follow a hobby and to avoid over-eating, especially of meat. It is a good if not a popular rule to stop eating before the appetite is completely satisfied. Regular exercise within one's powers is to be encourgaed.

It is a mistake to get scared and to cut down the diet too severely.

A sample of the bunk peddled out to high pressure victims is the advice that it is better to avoid clear soups, meat extracts, sweetbreads and strong tea or coffee and not to eat too much starch or sugar. This means practically nothing left to eat. Vegetables and fresh fruit confessedly are good, but sometimes they don't agree. The suggestion that table salt raises the pressure is doubtful.

On the whole, the thing to aim at is a simple diet sufficiently varied, satisfying, but not excessive. There is no evidence that alcohol directly raises the blood pressure, but since it has a generally depressing and degenerative influence on tissues it should only be used in strict moderation.

Tobacco causes an immediate though transient rise in blood pressure, followed by a fall to normal or below, and is usually regarded as undesirable. The blood pressure of regular healthy smokers tends, however, to be low, and as tobacco smoking has a soothing influence, the man with high blood pressure need not deprive himself of it unless it causes ill effects such as pain in the heart or irregularity of the pulse.

Hot baths have been criticised for increasing the work of the heart, and cold baths, since they tend to raise the blood pressure, are undesirable, therefore only tepid baths may be safely used.

Some people advise those with high pressure not to drink too much water, on the ground that to increase the volume of the blood, imposes more work on the heart and raises the blood pressure. On the other hand, free drinking of waters, not necessarily at spas, sometimes brings the blood pressure down. Perhaps both may be true of different individuals.

If moderation is observed the large majority of persons with high blood pressure need not worry. Very many people live quite normal lives with a blood pressure which theoretically is very bad.

All this jumble of advice only tends to establish the fact that each case of high blood pressure is a problem unto itself, to be solved from time to time by the advice of a judicious physician.

Our Rhyming OPTIMIST

By Aline Michaelis

SOMETIMES I marvel at the intricate and careful pattern the lantana shows, a loveliness so ordered and sedate, and yet as pleasing as the perfect rose. These patterns! Like an artist's rare design we find them etched on petal and on leaf, in artful fashioning of flower and vine; no pains too great, although their day be brief. In all we see the same vast skill prevails, in weed and tree, in grain and fruit and grass; the maker of the patterns never fails in birds or beasts that, silent-footed, pass. This much we see and from this much I glean a perfect pattern through the whole scheme runs, a perfect pattern though unguessed, unseen, from these lantana blossoms to the suns.

Folly's Daughter

A Thrilling New Mystery of New York Night Life

By Ann Lisle

Sam Deserts Folly.

"YOU'RE too terribly young!" Folly Duane gasped. "You don't know anything about life yet. I can't let you go away from home feeling like this. I can't have you—turning to some man who'd only throw you over and laugh when you went on to the next—as if you'd have anywhere else to go but to another man—and another! I've got to look out for you. I promised——"

ANN LISLE

"I know, you promised my mother," Jill sneered, her young heart bitter, her young lips twisting in scorn. "But you didn't promise her to bring me up—like this. What chance have I if you don't—live right? I'm nobody because you're nobody. This hotel room isn't a home."

"I'll marry Sam Kerby. I don't care what they drag out. He's mad about me. I love him. Don't quit me, Jill. I want to look out for you. If you stick by me now, I can get him to stand by you later. I'll get Sam to give you your chance. He's rich. If he adopts you, you can hold up your head with the best of them."

"I'm going," Jill said dully. "I don't want anything I can get this way, Folly."

"I can't have you go! Listen—and you won't go——"

Something in Folly's tone arrested Jill's attention, compelled her respect and with it her frozen terror. She turned to the little blue-eyed fluttering blonde with rapt eagerness as if she was compelled by something big and terrifying.

"What have you to tell me?" she asked. She felt suddenly close to the heart of her own mystery.

"Nothing! Nothing! Don't look at me like that. I've nothing to tell you." Folly mumbled it, mouthed it nervously, her face twitching, her eyes avoiding Jill's wide young gaze.

Then the phone rang. Folly leaped to answer. Jill stood still and quiet, not intending to listen, not conscious that she couldn't take her eyes off Folly Duane and that every gesture, every tone, every twitch of that nervous body, were stamped on her mind.

"Yes—yes, it's me. Yes, darling; I know. Jill told me," Folly said, Then a silence. "Oh, how terrible. Of course, it was an enemy. Why should Bonnie? Jealous." A raucous laugh. And then: "Of course, I'll hold the line. Never mind. I'll wait."

She turned to Jill. "It's Sam. His stupid wife went to him with that letter. He's wild. Oh, Jill, I love him so. You've got to remember that I've been through hell and I love him. And now I guess he loves me all right. He'll be over soon. He'll be good to you if you stand by me."

"You don't need me," said Jill. "I'm going."

"I can't let you go. Wait . . . Wait till I'm through with him. I want you to stay. I'll help you get up in the world. I've got Sam to help me now. See how quick he called me. She hardly had a chance to go there and tell him her story and he's turned from his wife to me. Jill, you wait."

"You don't need me," Jill said dully. "I'm going."

"You need me."

"No—I don't," the girl said. "I know a lot about life now. A lot about myself. It isn't rats deserting a sinking ship now. You've got your Sam—and I want to go."

"Wait!" Folly commanded. She took her hand off the telephone mouthpiece and turned away from Jill, intent again on what was coming to her over the wire.

Again Jill listened without wanting to, and yet feeling powerless to help doing it. And Folly said:

"No. Of course I didn't write it. Jill was right when she said I didn't, I wouldn't want to ruin you. . . .What? I have not!. . . . Oh, Sam, how can you say that? You can't mean it. . . .You're not. Not really. . . .You can't mean it. You don't love her. You do love me. . . .What of it? You could live it down. It wouldn't spoil your career. She doesn't mean it. . . .No, no. Sam you can't. I won't let you go. She has no claim. Let her. Let her name me! I'll go down in the dirt for you. I don't care. I don't mind anything so I have you in the end. What? You don't? Sam, Sam, SAM!"

Her voice rose in a terrible shriek. She rattled the telephone hook up and down. She began shouting frantically to Central that she had been cut off. No, he had called her. Yes, she would hang up. Of course he had not cut off——

Then a long wait. Folly didn't turn to Jill, didn't speak. She stood facing the telephone, her hands clawing at the wall, fluttering, tearing at the telephone. At last it rang. Folly listened a minute. Then she turned to Jill. Her face was old, staring and haggard. Her eyes were darker than Jill had ever seen them. She swayed where she stood. And after a moment she began to laugh.

"You can go now," she said. "Run along. I'm through—with you. You'd better clear out."

"What's the matter?" Jill asked. She was afraid of this laughing, staring Folly, with her voice high a-1 strident. There was no tinkle in Folly's voice now—but a rasp as of tearing silk.

"Sam's through with me. He's going up to Maine with his wife," Folly screamed. "You get out of here. Get out before I make you wish you had!"

When Manners Are Correct

By Mrs. Cornelius Beeckman

A Hospitable Gesture.

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN: I am a high school girl and have a boy friend coming from a great distance to see me on his vacation. We live in a tiny apartment. Is it correct to suggest eating out or should I prepare what is possible at home? I do not know him very well, and he is of a very wealthy family—these are the reasons why I ask. VERNA.

DON'T be self-conscious about your home, dear girl, and make up your mind that you will "put your best foot forward" and emphasize its spirit of hospitality. Since this boy will if he is wealthy, probably have the things that make for comfort, you cannot emphasize these; therefore let your home give him what it can give him, its warm-hearted welcome. Now you won't be showing this to him if you suggest that you go to a restaurant for your meals. This would indeed make him wonder at the sparseness of your welcome and imagination that cannot contrive meals at home.

A Chaperone Necessary.

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN: J and C had an argument about girls going to a bungalow owned by a club of six boys. J says there is no harm in a number of girls coming down to the bungalow Sunday morning and leaving that night. C says it is not at all proper.

J AND C.

C IS certainly right in her social judgment, although J will undoubtedly accuse her and me of being "prissy" for saying so. There should be a chaperone at the bungalow, for if these girls go to the bungalow in this free and easy way, unchaperoned, they will certainly be most severely and justly criticised. There must be some friendly and companionable man and his wife who would be just the people to go with these young people for the day. Isn't there? And the right kind of chaperone, you know, doesn't "cramp the style" of a party, but instead, by her friendliness and understanding, gives it an added lustre and fun.

There is life and liberty in Indiana. Public opinion is more powerful than political bosses or their henchmen. George R. Dale of Indiana has been paroled. He is the publisher of a newspaper. He is one of the fighting editors of the old school. Muncie is his home. Not many years ago he declared Muncie was controlled by a lawless ring of politicians, backed by the invisible head of an invisible government. He declared and he printed it, that bootleggers were protected and rumrunners were everywhere in evidence. He let the world know that vice flaunted itself with impunity and that the decent people of his town and county were overawed or terrorized by the local courts and the local agents of the law.

Editor Dale had a rocky road to travel. Libel suits were piled up against him. Merchants who advertised in his newspaper were boycotted until they withdrew their patronage. He was assaulted by thugs of the underworld as well as polished thugs of the upperworld. He was broken in purse and broken in health but not broken in spirit at the finish. He was sent to jail for 90 days by a judge. He appealed to the press in Indiana and the press of the United States. He won a place in the national picture gallery. Champions of fair play in Indiana lined up on the side of the fighting editor. They contributed money to hire a lawyer. They appealed to the state supreme court and they appealed to the supreme court of the United States. There is a political revolution on in Indiana. "Big Ed" Jackson is governor of the state. "Big Ed" is a politician. He is able to read the political signs of the times.

In Hoosierland the political tide is said to be running the other way from Big Ed and his followers. He planned a master stroke. He did pardon the fighting editor. He paroled him for 90 days and at the end of the 90 days there will be another parole or a full pardon.

Editor Dale is said to be a very blunt man, a very fearless man and at times a very tactless man, but he has vindicated the freedom of the press in Indiana and he has taught at least one judge that an American commonwealth is a mighty poor place for an imitation of that English Jeffreys of infamous memory.

Don Mellett was murdered in an Ohio town. His slayers are on the way to the penitentiary where they will remain for life. Editor Dale's persecutors are not on the way to the gallows or the penitentiary but they have been taught a wholesome lesson. Public opinion, well directed, is the smasher of political bosses, despotic judges and malefactors of the upper or the lower world. 'Tis well that it is so.

Why a Tax Amendment?

THERE is a tax amendment proposal. It will be passed on by the qualified voters Monday, August 1. It provides for changing the taxation system so that the state may derive its income, in whole or in part, from other sources than the ad valorem tax. It provides that the legislature may separate the objects of taxation for state purposes from the objects of taxation for the support of the counties, district and political subdivisions of the state and counties; that it may provide for the levy of an ad valorem or other tax on certain classes of property for state purposes only, or for county or local purposes only, including state school purposes; that the legislature may provide for classification of objects of taxation which shall be equal and uniform.

IT IS PROVIDED THAT THE RATE OF SUCH TAXES SHALL NOT EXCEED THE LIMITS NOW SET FORTH IN THE CONSTITUTION. Really, the effect of the amendment would be to allow the state to secure all or part of its revenue from corporations or occupational taxes instead of from land taxes. Politics is a queer game. Opponents of this amendment are urging farmers who are land owners to vote against the amendment or be prepared to be taxed off the earth; they are urging the landless tenants to vote against it to keep from being taxed to death; they are urging renters in the cities, those who are not home owners, to vote against it in order to prevent the constitutional demand "that taxation shall be equal and uniform."

Politicians are queer creatures; politics is a queer game. For ways that are dark and tricks that are vain, the heathen Chinese of Bret Harte literature would be voted a piker if he were numbered among the people now on earth.

Bernstein Mounts the Wagon

HENRY FORD has apologized to Henry Bernstein. Bernstein has withdrawn his libel suit, Henry Ford agrees to pay half the costs of the suit. He agrees to do all in his power to destroy the evil influence of the "International Jewish publications."

Editor Cameron of the Dearborn Independent, on the witness stand in the Sapiro suit, admitted all responsibility for the anti-Jewish articles which appeared from time to time in the Independent and for the publication and distribution of pamphlets which were broadcast. Their contents were uncomplimentary to say the least of the international Jews and many of the leading American Jews.

Henry Ford is a very spectacular man. He has apologized to the Jewish people. He has apologized to Sapiro. He has apologized to Bernstein. And now his most recent confidential adviser and publicity agent, Arthur Brisbane, is telling it to the world that it is costing Henry a million dollars a day to change from an old model to a new one.

What was the cost of changing from an old model weekly newspaper to a new model, a newspaper pledged to the policy of printing reading matter that will never give offense to an individual or a collection of individuals?

Loan Sharks and Veterans

ARTHUR ALLEN, publisher of the Texas Legionaire, is on the trail of loan sharks who robbed veterans of the world war. Two hundred vets turned their certificates over to the sharks for collection and were only taxed 70 per cent interest and charges. Is business business?

The Day Book of a New Yorker

By BURTON RASCOE.

NEW YORK, July 29.—At 7 o'clock the other night the thermometer on the Pulitzer building was well over 90 degrees. As I rode uptown on the Third avenue elevated line, I observed a number of very active corroborations of the report that the heat wave had struck the city. I saw a naked baby struggling in its cradle near a window. Windows were wide open in the tenements and curtains thrown back to let in whatever air was stirring. Men and women clad only in their underwear, could be seen sitting down at dinner. From innumerable windows, stripped figures of men and women, completely nude, walking about near the windows, completely indifferent to the passing stares of passengers in the elevated trains.

In the streets, the fire departments had generously turned on the fire hydrants and boys and girls in bathing suits and underwear were cooling off in the flow of cool water. The fire department, in some instances, had fixed a shower by attaching a length of pipe to the hydrant.

Living in a tenement in New York in hot weather is not a pleasant existence.

An intelligence test that is going the rounds of New York parties just now seldom fails to bewilder the person taking it. The examiner tells this story:

A stranger one Sunday wandered into a church and, seeing the congregation at prayer, knelt down in a pew and bowed his head. In a short time he fell asleep and dreamed that he was embroiled in the French revolution. He was accused of treason and sentenced to death. On the day of the execution he was led to the guillotine and his head placed in the block. The executioner released the catch of the knife, the man heard the swish of the falling blade, and just at that moment a person sitting nearby tapped him on the back to wake him up. With that the man fell dead.

Then the narrator asks the subject what is the physiologically impossible feature of the story.

Few persons, indeed, hit upon the answer, which is that a death occuring in the manner described could never be accounted for as described. In other words, the man died before he woke up, therefore, how could anyone know what he was dreaming about?

The curious thing about the trick test is that nearly everyone looks for a defect in the account of the dream, or in the possibility of the death itself.

I remember a somewhat similar test nearly 20 years ago. In that test it was related of a common soldier that he was in a group of veterans lined up for examination by a famous general under whom he had lost his right arm. The famous general said something to the one-armed veteran about the loss of that arm, and the general's words were so marvelously complimentary that the soldier drew his sword and cut his other arm off.

The subject of the test was asked what was wrong with that story. Almost invariably the answer had something to do with the words addressed by the general to the soldier or some other technical matter. Few thought fast enough to realize that it is physically impossible for a one-armed man to draw a sword and cut his other arm off.

All Mexico now has daylight saving time.

Sally's Shoulders

READ THIS FIRST:

Sally Jerome, 20, and clever and pretty, is the prop and mainstay of her family in the absence of her father, who has been separated from her mother for nine years.

The family consists of Mrs. Jerome, the twins, Beau, a son, and Millie, a daughter, and Sally, herself. Mrs. Jerome is a semi-invalid, so Sally does the housework mornings and office work for Mr. Peevey downtown afternoons.

In the flat below the Jeromes lives young Ted Sloan, who is in love with Sally. Mrs. Jerome is afraid that Sally will marry him, but the girl has no interest in any man with the exception of John Nye, a real estate operator whose office is opposite Mr. Peevey's. John Nye hires Millie as his stenographer on Sally's recommendation, but is immediately called out of town. Millie decides to take a little rest while he is gone and borrows some money from Sally to "tide her over."

Millie is a siren. She has a dozen men in love with her, but rarely brings them to the flat. She says she loses all her jobs because her employers want to make love to her always.

Beau, her twin, is good looking and shiftless. He seldom pays any board, borrows all the money he can from Sally for the entertainment of his girl, Mabel Wilmot, and quarrels with Sally when she scolds him for buying too many things on the installment plan—things that she has to pay for in the end.

One night after the pair of them have quarreled over the purchase of a guitar that Beau wants and can't pay for, Ted Sloan corners Sally on the back porch of the flat and starts talking marriage to her.

She tells him that she must go in. For she realy has some work to do. Her mother must be helped into bed and Milly must be given some first aid in the bedroom, where she is drying her hair, which has just been shampooed.

(Now go on with the story.)

CHAPTER X.

Sally saw that the only thing was to stay there and listen to what Ted Sloan had to say to her. She had known it for a long time.

For months she had seen that this moment was bound to come sooner or later. This moment when Ted would set their friendship aside and insist upon making love to her. "Making a perfect fool of himself" was the way Sally put it to herself.

Now that the moment was actually upon her, she was nervous and uncertain.

"Well, what do you want?" she asked him sharply. "Tell me what's on your mind, only make it snappy. And you might take your hands off my shoulders, too, if you don't mind. Because I do."

"You do what?" asked Ted, whose brain did not begin to work as fast as hers.

"I mind having your hands on my shoulders," she told him again, and she shook them off with a sudden twist of her whole body.

She leaned back against the railing and looked up at him, waiting for him to begin. After a minute or two he did.

"You make it mighty hard for me, Sally," he said dolefully. "I was going to ask you to marry me, and you tell me you hate to have my hands on your shoulders." His voice sounded hurt, and she was sorry for him all at once. After all he was a nice boy, even if she didn't want to marry him. She didn't want to marry anyone. She started to say so, and changed her mind.

"I never have liked to have anybody touch me," she said steadily. "It's not because I don't like you, Teddy, because I do. Don't do that!" For he had put his arms around her and was turning her towards him with the strong pressure of his hands on her waist.

"Don't do that!" she cried out again, and tried to push him away from her. She put her hands up against his face as it came down close to her own. It seemed like the face of a stranger—an enemy—in the starry darkness. And he was going to kiss her. This stranger.

"Don't—please—" said Sally, and something of her confused agony must have been in her voice, for the man suddenly let her go. She sank back against the porch railing, with her hand up to her mouth as if he actually had kissed it.

"I'm sorry," Ted apologized after a second. "I didn't know you felt this way about me. . . . I thought you like me all this time while we've been dancing together, going to shows—"

"Oh, but I do" Sally told him solemnly. "I like you fine, Ted Sloan. And I'd rather dance with you than do anything I can think of. But I hate this"

She spread out her arms as if to show him that what she meant by "this" was the warm darkness, the solitude, the romance of the summer night.

"I guess I'm sort of hard-hearted and cold," she finished with a little laugh.

"Cold as Greenland's icy mountains," Ted agreed with her. "You sure are, and no mistake about it" But whether he really thought her cold or not, he was not willing to leave her right away. He stood there beside her, puffing at the pipe that he picked up from the porch rail, and went on talking in a low tone, almost as if he were talking to himself.

"You see, all along I've thought you were as keen about me as I was about you," he said. "I knew I wasn't making much money, but I knew I'd be making more pretty soon. And I thought you could keep on working for a while after we were married—and look after house nights and mornings, like you do now for your mother. It wouldn't be so hard."

No, it wouldn't be so hard, said Sally to herself, her eyes on the dark roofs of the houses on the next street. . . . But somehow the picture that Ted was painting for her with his words wasn't the way she had always pictured her married life, when love and marriage should come to her.

She had always thought of herself as a home-maker as well as a wife and a lover. . . . She had imagined herself working all day long in a little house with a little garden somewhere. Getting together a nice little supper that wouldn't cost much but would be deliciously cooked. Rushing upstairs at the end of the day to powder her nose and fluff up her hair for the return of a husband—a husband who was certainly not Ted Sloan in her wildest dreams.

That was Sally's idea of marriage, and it had no part-time office job in it. . . . Why, getting married to Ted and working at two jobs would be almost like life as it was now. Never enough time to do anything well. Never enough money to do anything as it should be done.

"But even that wouldn't be so bad if I loved him," thought Sally.

She turned and put her strong, capable little hands on his shoulders for just an instant.

"Ted, we're such very good friends — can't we stay friends and forget all this love stuff?" she asked him. "You don't really care for me. I'm sure of it. You just think you do."

He shook his head silently. She didn't know what the little negative movement meant, and while she was wondering he turned and went paddling down the steps to the porch below.

"Oh, you poor paluka?" Sally called after him cheerfully. She felt more cheerful, somehow, now that he was going. "Oh, you poor paluka, why don't you let well enough alone?"

In the little bedroom with its two beds set close to each other, Millie was waiting for her.

She was sitting beside the open window, letting the warm night breeze blow in upon her half-dry hair, and she was peacefully ripping up Sally's black satin dress with an old safety-razor blade.

"Christopher Colombo! What are you doing to my dress?" asked Sally, her eyes wide.

Millie lifted her head. "Can't you see, Dumb Dolly?" she asked in her slow, slippery little voice. "Rippin' up this dress you threw away."

"I threw away! Why, I never did any such thing!" declared Sally. "And you know it! I told you it wasn't any good the way it was, and I—"

"And you said you were through with it!" broke in Millie. She placidly ripped a few more inches of seam with her blade.

"I'm going to make a bathing suit out of it," she added. "It's no good for anything else. You can have what's left for your scrap bag—"

"I can have what's left for my scrap bag! Well, that's good, isn't it?" asked Sally. She was scarlet with indignation. She had been counting on wearing that dress for another two months—until it was cold enough to buy a cloth dress for the winter.

She rushed across the room and pulled the shining black stuff from her sister's hands, rolled it up and laid it at the foot of her bed.

"My stars!" she cried, her eyes blazing. "If that isn't just like you—cutting up a good dress! What do you thing I'm going to wear to work? Tar paper? Here! If you want to do any sewing you might get busy on these!" She had opened one of Millie's dresser drawers, and was flinging pair after pair of holey stockings at her. "Mend those, if you're so full do you think I'm going to wear to do!"

"Children! Children!" came Mrs. Jerome's voice from the open doorway. "Birds in their little nests agree!"

Every now and then she seemed to forget that her children were grown, and talked to them as if they still were the tiny things they had been years before.

In the hall behind her the telephone trilled, and Millie bounded out to answer it. The one and only time when Millie moved quickly was when she thought one of her "sweeties" might be calling her.

"He-e-llo!" she said now, in the honey-sweet drawl that made men think what a nice, good-natured little thing she was. "O-o-oh, it's you Mr. Davison? O-o-oh, I'm just fi-i-ine—"

Sally set her lips and shook her head in honest wrath.

"Look at that!" she said to her mother in a low intense tone. "Cut up the only between-seasons dress I own to make a bathing suit out of it! Ever hear of such a thing? Now I've got to sew it all together again!"

When Millie came back to the bedroom she had evidently decided not to be on speaking terms with her sister. She pretended not to hear when Sally spoke to her. She dried her own hair, and Sally let her do it.

In silence they got ready for bed. In silence they lay down and went to sleep a few feet away from each other. Sisters.

The next night Beau came home with the new guitar that he had craved. And not only with the guitar, but with a new and remarkable sports sweater that resembled Joseph's coat of many colors.

"I can play it, too," he said.

"The sweater?" asked Sally, wickedly.

"No, the guitar, you simp," answered Beau, who had very little sense of humor.

He could play it, too. That is, he could play one tune on it, and that was an old one, called "Miami Shore."

It was a lovely, lilting sort of tune, however, and the sound of it brought Sally from the kitchen, where she was hurrying with the supper.

"Play it in double time, and I'll show you a new dance that Ted and I made up," she said, her night-blue eyes dancing. "Play it in double time—" And, as he did, she started to dance.

To see Sally dance was a joy. For she loved to dance, and anyone who looked at her could see that she loved it. She frolicked like a happy child on a breezy day. She whirled lightly as a leaf in the wind. Dancers are born, not made, and Sally was a born dancer.

"Atta girl!" she head a deep voice behind her say, and she stopped dead in the middle of the living room floor. Against the and looked bored. "He's not half stood a man she never had seen before. A good-looking blond man in a gray suit and a necktie striped like a candy cane. The kind of man who knows everything there is to know about some things. A man about town is what we usually call such a man.

"Oh, you must be Millie's Mr. Davidson!" said Sally, all out of breath. And then she saw that Ted had come up the stairs—drawn by the sound of music and dancing feet, no doubt—and was standing just behind him.

"Come in, both of you," she said, and left Beau to introduce them.

She rushed back to the bedroom where Millie was making herself beautiful before the mirror.

"Your Mr. Davidson's here!" she told her. "And oh, isn't he good looking!" It was the first time Millie and she had spoken in a whole day.

Millie shrugged her shoulders and looked bored. He's not half so good looking as that John Nye man," she remarked in a matter of fact way. "And I can hardly wait until I start working for him. This Davidson is just a once-in-a-while for me."

Sally felt as if a sudden wind had chilled her to the marrow.

"Go on in there and talk to him," Millie went on peevishly. "If you don't, Ted will try to sell him a car, and Beau's just as likely as not to ask him for a loan. You know it, don't you?"

She opened a paste-board box that was lying on her bed and took a dress from it. A pale blue flannel dress that Sally never had seen before.

"Why, where did you get that?" she asked, as Millie shook it out and flipped it over her head. "I never saw it before. Is it new?"

Her sister nodded. "It's as new as it ever was," she answered dryly. "And it was pretty new once upon a time."

Sally went back to the living room with a troubling question in her mind. . . . Yesterday morning Beau and Millie had both been penniless, or almost penniless. Now each of them seemed to have plenty of money. Where had it come from?

This Influence of Family History Called Plain Piffle By Expert

Can a Girl Who Comes From a Family Noted for Its Beautiful But Faithless Women Escape The Family Jinx?

DEAR DOROTHY DIX—I am engaged to a man who loves me very much and whom I love. He is a splendid man—everything that any girl could desire in a husband. But my trouble is this: My family is noted for its beautiful and faithless women. They seem incapable of being true to the men they marry. They love passionately for a while, then without any reason their fickle fancies change and they tire of the men to whom they have been devoted. My fiance knows the history of my family, and sometimes when he looks at me I can see doubt in his eyes and he wonders if I will be true to him. I believe that my love will never change, but I would rather die than bring sorrow on this good man. What must I do?

WANDA.

ANSWER: Oh, piffle! Forget your family history. If there is any excuse on earth that is overworked it is heredity.

Every weakling what wants an alibi for his or her shortcomings lays it on heredity. The drunkard goes out and gets tanked up because his great-grandfather was a souse. The philanderer chases petticoats because his Uncle Ned had an eye for pretty women. The lazy, shiftless woman doesn't sweep under the bed because her grandmother was a poor housekeeper. The virago goes into tantrums because temper runs in her family.

It makes any sensible person tired to listen to those poor jellyfish laying all their sins at other people's doors and explaining that the reason they do what they do or leave undone the things that they should do is because somebody else did it or didn't do it generations before they were born.

If you will notice you will observe that the people who talk most about heredity are those who wish to justify themselves in self-indulgence. You don't hear the men and women who are upright and sober and industrious boasting about having inherited those qualities. It's the drunkards and the weaklings who put the loud pedal on inheritance, and it makes you wonder why, it they believe in it so thoroughly, they didn't let their faith in it be a warning to them.

Why doesn't the man who believes that he was born with a thirst for liquor avoid touching a drop? Why doesn't the man who thinks that there is a lack of ginger in his blood force himself to form habits of industry? Why doesn't the woman who knows that she has a natural high temper make an extra effort to control it?

The answer is easy. It's pleasanter to lay it all on poor old grandma and grandpa.

As for your theory about the women in your family being predestined to faithlessness on account of their heredity, that's utter nonsense. The only way it could do harm would be for you to let your mind dwell upon it so much that you would watch your every symptom and put undue stress upon it, and so fancy that you had ceased to care for your husband and that the family curse was upon you.

In reality there is no more danger of your getting tired of your husband than there is of any other woman getting tired of hers. Every wife does at times and has seasons of thinking that she married the wrong man and that she doesn't care for the one she has. But if she has any sense she recognizes this as a passing mood and keeps silent about it and no harm is done.

But for Heaven sake don't mary a man and keep him always suspicious of you. You will wreck both of your lives if you do.

Faith isn't a matter heredity. It's a matter of principle.

Widow of Murder Victim Asks Clemenc

BOSTON, July 29 (AP)—The widow of one of the victims of the South Braintree payroll shooting in 1920, the crime for which Nicola Sacco and Bartolomeo Vanzetti, internationally known radicals, were condemned to death, tonight telegraphed Gov. Alvan T. Fuller asking that the men be set free.

The request was made by Mrs. Sarah Berardelli, widow of Alessandro Berardelli, who was shot and killed when an armed band held up a shoe company paymaster. Berardelli was acting as guard for Frederick Parmenter, the paymaster, who was also killed.

TRISCUIT—Is of the same composition as shredded wheat biscuit, and is simply pressed flat. It should be toasted in the oven the same way as the Melba toast and makes a very delicious toast. Packages of this triscuit may be taken on travels and camping trips, and retoasted just before being used. It has a different flavor than Melba toast on account of being made from shredded wholewheat, and will be relished by those who do not care particularly for the latter.

MODISH MITZI — Mitzi's So Sorry She Forgot — By JAY V. JAY

The charity bazaar that every one has been talking about has arrived. The Goofer got on the end of the line for palmistry because he though he could watch the door better to see when Mitzi arrives. He fails to appreciate the frock in front of him with the fringe swinging from the shoulder suggesting a Spanish shawl. He completely overlooks the one with the bolero blouse and the up-in-front movement made by crystal beads. He hardly glances at the printed chiffon frock with the cape collar—the girl is blonde, and despite being a gentleman the Goofer doesn't prefer them. The girl next to the palmistry sign wears a bouffant frock with the top three-quarters collars.

Finally the Goofer goes before the Veiled Prophetess of the east and submits his hand. How's his heart line. "Good." How is his life line? "Long." "Success in love," suggests the asistant Veiled Prophetess of the east in a familiar tone. "Will he win his heart's desire?" he asks eagerly. Polly really needn't have put Mitzi's evening bag of satin and brilliants on the table for a clue. The Goofer knew it was Mitzi all thet ime. Mitzi, however, is find fortunes for him. They are really there she she says. Because she knows—after taking lessons in palmistry all week and reading up on it she ought to. So that's where she's been! Now if Mitzi will only begin to hold his hand all over again!

BY MRS. P. A. MARTIN

Fried Chicken String Beans
Fruit Salad

Whole Wheat Muffins Iced Tea
Angel Food Cake
Ice Cream

Recipe for Fried Chicken

Have chicken cut up ready to fry and beat one egg and 3-4 cup of milk. Place chicken in mixture, roll and then roll generously in flour. Drop in hot grease and fry. This forms a crust around chicken and browns nicely.

Fruit Salad

For each plate place a lettuce leaf with pineapple and apricots on it, one tablespoonful of salad dressing and a little sprinkle of cheese grated and lastly a dash of paprika.

Candied Sweet Potatoes

Boil till tender and place in baking dish with syrup made of 2-4 cup of sugar and 1-2 cup of butter with a little cinnamon. Brown in oven.

Angel Food Cake

Whites of 13 eggs. Do not beat too stiff as makes the cake tough. While beating add 1 heaping teaspoonful of cream tarter, then sift 1 1-2 cubs of sugar five times, add slowly, beat with egg beater. Sift flour 4 1-2 cups 5 times, add with 1-2 teaspoonful of salt. Bake 50 minutes in slow oven.

Meat Loaf (Steamed)
Whole Wheat or Rye Bread
Creamed Potatoes Mixed Salad
Pineapple Jello Vanilla Wafers
Iced Tea, Coffee or Lemonade.

Recipe for the Meat Loaf (To Be Prepared Saturday).

Take one pound lean beef, 1-2-pound lean pork, cut in food chopper with a slice or two of fat pork or suet, salt, pepper and "herbs" to the taste. Grease a bread pan and press the meat in it. Cover with a greased paper and steam an hour. Serve cold in slices, with garnishment of green onions or rings of bell peppers.

For the creamed potatoes: Bil about four medium sized potatoes with their skins on the day before, then on Sunday peel and cut in cubes. Heat milk, using canned milk if one wishes, and put in the potatoes and heat for a little while, then thicken with a little flour and season with salt, pepper and butter.

For the mixed salad, I use about two good sized tomatoes, one onion cut fine, one good sized cucumber. All cut up and served with French dressing on a lettuce leaf.

Pineapple Jello

One small can crushed pineapple, one box lemon jello; dissolve jello in one pint boiling water and while it begins to jello put in pineapple and place in ice box ready for Sunday. Serve with a thin custard dressing or whipped cream.

RICE CROQUETTES

To two cupfuls of boiled rice add one pint of standard croquette sauce in which one-half cupful of crumbled cheese has been melted; or, add one pint of tomato sauce made according to the same proportions as the standard sauce. Cook, shape and fry as directions suggest. Serve with chicken, turkey, or lamb, preferably, or with any cold meat.

APPRECIATIVE GUESTS

Suggested by Mrs. A. T. S., Rochester, N. Y.

Guests do not need to praise my skill
In cooking, or my bounty.
It's flattery rank to call my cake
"The finest in the County."

I never feel a hurt chargin
Nor yet an anger hasty,
If folks devour without remark
My puddings and my pastry.

But when they pass their plates for more,
And empty all the dishes,
Why, I would trot the live-long day
To gratify their wishes!

Requests for second helpings come
As honest commendation,
And when folks ask for three or four—
That's real appreciation!

Wide Variety Shown In Plans Of Prize Menus for Sunday Dinner

Prize winners of the weekly menu contest of The Record News show infinite variety, and some difference of opinion, in the menus selected for publication today.

The Record News each week awards prizes to housewives for the best menus selected for Sunday dinner, and so far the number of excellent menus submitted has far exceeded the number of prizes.

Mrs. P. A. Martin, 2509 Ninth street, receives the $5 prize this week for an appetizing and wholesome meal.

Mrs. C. R. Troxel of Electra, box 67, wins the $1 special prize with an excellent and simple menu, which she points out has the advantage of being easily and quickly prepared. This is one of the most important qualifications of a good Sunday dinner, said Mrs. Troxel, and the menu editor agrees.

A picnic menu submitted by Mrs. Charles Greene, 1902 Pearl, was awarded the $2.50 prize, it sounded so good. Mrs. Greene's menu reached The Record News office too late for consideration last week, when all menus were of the picnic variety, but is published this week as one of the best submitted.

Prizes in the weekly contest of $5, $2.50 and $1 are awarded on a basis of timeliness, appeal, cost and ease of prepartion, so far as the menu editor is capable of determining these qualities.

Housewives of Wichita Falls and Northwest Texas are asked to send in their menus before Thursday noon of each week, in order that careful consideration may be given to each suggestion. Menus received after Thursday noon will be considered the following week.

Baltimore Chicken
Picnic Salad Date Sandwiches
Pickled Sweet Peaches
Potato Chips
Jello Sandwiches Root Beer
Frozen Pears Pineapple Cake
Apple Sauce.

Baltimore Chicken.

Cut chicken in pieces for serving, sprinkle with salt and pepper, dip in egg and crumbs, arrange in baking dish. Baste with melted butter and cook in hot oven 30 minutes; garnish with thin slices of crisp bacon.

Date Salad Sandwiches.

Finely chop celery, walnut meats and dates. Use 1-2 cup dates to a 1-4 cup each of celery and walnuts. Moisten well with mayonnaise and spread on buttered slices of bread. Place a crisp lettuce leaf in each sandwich.

Picnic Salad.

Two cups chopped cabbage, one small onion minced, one tart apple chopped, half cup cheese cut in cubes, one tsp. celery seed, half cup sweet pickles chopped. One green pepper minced, one cup cooked potatoes cubed, one can baked beans, one cup salad dressing. Boiled preferred. Wash and drain the beans, add the other ingredients, place in bowl, sprinkle two tablespoons chopped parsley over top. Also a few slices stuffed olives to add color to it.

Pineapple Cake.

Take a No. 1 can of sliced pineapple, drain the juice off several hours before using. One cup brown sugar, 1-4 pound saltless butter, three eggs, one cup granulated sugar, one cup flour, two level teaspoons baking powder, three tablespoons pineapple juice. Melt brown sugar and butter in pan that cake is to be made in. When thoroughly melted take from fire and arrange pineapple on top of this mixture, then let this cool.

Make cake batter as follows: Beat the yolks of the eggs until lemon colored, add sugar gradually. Add flour (sifted with baking powder), pineapple juice and last fold in the stiffly beaten whites. Pour this batter on top of pineapple and bake 40 minutes. When it is cold invert on a cake board, pineapple side up, and garnish with cherries in every center of pineapple. It is already iced and ready for the picnic. If preferred a ring of sweetened whipped cream around the cake makes a delicious cake.

Frozen Pears.

Take a No. 2 1-2 can of pears, pack in ice and salt for four hours. When ready to serve take out of can and slice. I use an ordinary galvanized bucket and when ready to leave on picnic pour off water, put a layer of fresh cracked ice on top of ice in pail. If you have fireless cooker equipment you can use the three pails on top of this ice in pail. Chicken in one, deviled eggs in second, sandwiches in third one.

A large newspaper wrapped around the bucket of course lengthens the time the ice will last. Dr. McCoy says pack your picnic lunches in such a way that the food will be surrounded with ice.

WAFFLE POTATOES

Pare potatoes and slice with a waffle or lattice cutter. Let stand half an hour in cold water, drain, dry and fry in deep hot fat (395 degrees Fahrenheit). A few potatoes should be friend at a time, and the fat should be allowed to reheat between the different lots. The crispness of the potatoes depends upon this. When brown, drain on brown paper and sprinkle with salt.

SARATOGA POTATOES

Cut potatoes across as thin as possible and follow directions for waffle potatoes.

Decorations Make Cookies Attractive

Cookies may roughly be divided into two classes, the cut variety and the drop cookies. The cut variety is subdivided into two classes, those rolled and cut, and the ice box cookies which are chilled and sliced just before baking.

One difficulty in the past has been that not enough care has been given in the proportions used. Now we know that the amount of flour and liquid used is just as important in the making of cookies as in any other baked product.

If a good basic recipe is used many very dressed up cookies may be made by adding raisins, currants, cherries, nuts, frostings, chocolate, caraway and anise seeds.

When making different flavors from the same recipe it is wise and attractive to shape each flavor differently. Diamonds, squares, bars cut to a greater advantage than the shapes made by the different cooky cutters, but they all give variety.

By means of a pastry tube, beautiful decorations may be made. Care should be taken though not to over decorate the cookies and cause them to look too heavy.

Many bars can be improved in appearance by dusting them with powdered sugar. The colored sugars look very pretty sprinkled on plain sugar cookies.

Snowballs are quite attractive and very delicious. Mix the batter just like when baking an angel food cake, then bake it in shallow tins. Cut the cake into small squares, ice all over and roll in cocoanut.

Inexpensive every day cakes may be made very attractive by cutting them in fancy shapes, dipping in frosting and rolling them in chopped nuts or cocoanut. They may also be decorated with crystalized fruits, jelly, or whole nut meats.

Speed Important In Canning Vegetables

Many of us fail to realize it but, "One hour from the field to the can' is a very fine slogan for canners either home or commercial.

When the products are taken care of with such rapidity there is a much greater possibility of keeping the fast growing vegetables as corn, peas, and asparagus. They also have a much better flavor for the same enzyme, which causes them to ripen when growing, is active after they are picked for use. We can all recognize a difference in flavor between the very young fresh peas and those which are older.

If these vegetables are permitted to stand packed in containers for several hours before they are taken care of, the bruised places and heat may lead to bacterial decomposition. Should some of these live bacteria be included in the canned product the per cent of spoilage is high. This is not only an economic waste, but a detriment to health.

BODY NEEDS LEAFY FOODS

Green Vegetables Necessary To Good Health

By MARION JANE PARKER

Much experimental work has been done in the last year or two concerning the per cent which should be given to each class of foods in the diet. This per cent has been taken of the total number of calories in the diet. Now to be sure that you are perfectly clear as to what I mean by calories I will say that it is the amount of heat required to raise one kilogram or 2.2 pounds water one degree centrigrade or one pound of water four degrees Fahrenheit. Or expressing it in terms of work, it represents that required to lift one pound from the distance of 3087 feet.

Green vegetables should be included in the diet because they contain high per cent of ash, vitamins and water. This ash constituent is very essential in the regulation of the body processes, as the neutrality of the blood, the acidity or alkalinity of the digestive juices; the solvent powder and the osmatic pressure of different body fluids, and the elasticity and irritability of nerve and muscle. Each of these things is very important to keep the body in the best condition. Besides these the ash constituents form combinations which protect the body against harmful substances when they are present and too, aid in their elimination.

Besides the ash constituents vegetables are rich in vitamins which are essential to growth in the young and the good health of both the young and adults. So far their chemical composition is not known, but they can be extracted by suitable chemical methods. The amount and kind of vitamin found in any food can best be determined by experiments in feeding animals.

Water is an important item in the food, but it can be supplied by any food, except a few pure fats, sugars and starches. A sufficient supply may be drank each day, if the individual is careful enough to do it. Fan too many of us are too careless and thoughtless to drink the eight glasses of water which would be so beneficial to our health.

Besides the ash constituents, vitmin and water content of green vegetables we must consider the bulk which they give to the diet. Vegetables contain a high per cent of cellulose which is very important in adding bulk to the diet, which in turn increases peristalsis, thus causing a quicker and more thorough elimination of waste material from the body.

Pineapple Valueable In Reducing Diet

While the natural fruit sugar in pineapple is not fattening, it provides energy and satisfies the craving for sugar. It also supplies the system with vitamins, mineral salts, carbohydrates, and an enzyme "bromelin," which is a direct aid to digestion. In a no-fat, no-starch, no-sweet diet, which, if strictly followed, is capable of removing one pound a day, pineapple is most valuable. A representative day's menu on this diet would be as follows: Breakfast: Pineapple juice, thin slice of whole wheat bread, unbuttered and toasted very dry, poached egg, coffee without sugar or cream. Luncheon: Beef bouillon, sauerkraut, lamb chop, hard-cooked egg on lettuce, pineapple slices. Dinner: Clear tomato bouillon, spinach, beef steak, asparagus, grapefruit and pineapple dessert.

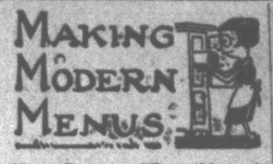
MAKING MODERN MENUS



Mrs. Brown—"Everything is standardized nowadays. Look at this—Rules for Meals."

Mrs. Jones—"Let me see, I may learn something."

1. Never serve a meal that is colorless. Each course at dinner should have some color about it, either in the garnish or in itself.

2. Never have a meat with a sauce and a vegetable with a sauce or two vegetables in the same course. A plate that looks "funny" is not very appetizing.

3. Never serve a dinner without a relish, such as pickles, jelly, olives, spiced fruits, etc.

4. Each meal should have some protein, some starch, but let its bulk be the leafy or the succulent vegetables.

5. Incorporate milk in some form into every meal that you serve.

It will not be long before all these things are matters of habit. Most of us know by some sort or inherited instinct when a meal is well planned and well arranged for our welfare, but in what particulars this is so we are not always able to say without a little consideration of the problem of meal planning.

JULIENNE POTATOES

Peel and wash potatoes and cut carefully into match-like strips. Let soak in cold water about half an hour. Drain well and dry in towels. Place in frying basket and fry until a golden brown (390 degrees Fahrenheit-. Lift up, drain on paper and sprinkle with salt.

RUNYON SAYS

Now, That's Strange—
Sharkey Foul Claimer—
Man Who Did It—
Shark Might Have Won—

Strange it is that the great majority of those who say that Dempsey struck the terrible Sharkey man a foul punch are those who picked the terrible Sharkey man to win.

Eagerly they hopped aboard that alleged foul and gallantly will they gallop it down to the day of their death, firm in the belief that their eyes are more to be trusted than the eyes of anyone who saw it as a fair punch, or the cameras that fail to disclose it foul.

Firm, too, in the belief that their judgment is better than that of the referee who stood within a hand's breadth of the fighting men, and better than that of the doctor who examined the terrible Sharkey man immediately after he quit the ring and reported he could find no evidence of a foul punch.

I thought Dempsey was displaying his old characteristic carelessness in letting his body punches fly throughtout the bout, but I would not presume to call a foul from a seat 20 feet away from the action against the judgment of a capable referee, and the evidence of the cameras and the doctors.

The latter says that not only did Sharkey's body show no sign of a foul punch, but that it would be impossible for a man to remain standing as Sharkey stood until he got that left hook to the whiskers if he had been fouled as he claims. I believe there is no argument as to the fairness of the punch that knocked the terrible Sharkey man bow-legged. He could have had his waistline where he wears his collar, and that punch would still have been 100 per cent fair.

And against the terrible Sharkey man's claim that he was fouled Thursday night stands his record of having won three other fights on a claim of foul, one of them over Edward James Muloney and one over Bud Gorman, both of whom afterward asserted that they had really belted the terrible Sharkey man over with fair body blows.

I find in Dempsey's record no mark of a foul for or against him, nor have I ever heard of Dempsey even claiming a foul, whereas the terrible Sharkey man is given to reporting fouls to the referee. He complained the night he fought old Harry Wills, and in other battles, and among many of his own townspeople of Boston was given consideration to such matters is an impression that he "can't take 'em" in the body.

I thought if the terrible Sharkey man had really been slugged way low down by Dempsey in that seventh round Thursday, the smart thing would have been to drop to the floor while he filed his claim and regained whatever breath had been knocked out of him. Then if the referee denied his claim, he could get up and proceed.

But the terrible Sharkey man remained standing, and unwisely dropped his hands and turned his head to squawk to the referee and Dempsey, the old noodle working perfectly even when the muscles were not functioning any too smoothly, whacked him on his chin.

And that's that.

The man who won the fight for Dempsey was not Mr. Lee Pizen Flynn, his new manager, but Mr. William Duffy, commonly known as Bill, who was subpoenaed at the last moment by Flynn to assist in the corner.

Mr. William Duffy is a well known New York manager of fighters and one of the coolest, fastest thinking gents I have ever seen behind a gladiator. It was Duffy who was doing most of the work in Dempsey's niche, and doing it without any fuss.

"Get this ready, get that ready," you could hear him saying quietly as the bell approached, giving his orders to Jerry the Greek, Gus Wilson and even to Mr. Lee Pizen Flynn himself. And he grabbed the victory for Dempsey when the terrible Sharkey man slipped to the floor.

The count was on from the counting out timekeeper at the ringside, but the referee, Jack O'Sullivan, seemed to be hesitating over so little, yet enough to make one wonder vaguely what he intended to do. I recall a fleeting thought that he was about to call a foul on Dempsey, in which I was probably wrong, when the voice of Duffy barked across the ring:

"Count that man! Count him!"

Then O'Sullivan picked up the count several seconds, it seemed to me, behind the counting-out timekeeper. He could have gone to 20 over the terrible Sharkey man.

I would not have you infer that the referee counted only on Duffy's suggestion, or that O'Sullivan had any other intention than of counting the terrible Sharkey man out, but there is no doubt that the dangerous delay and confusion that has marked the high spots of Dempsey's fighting career was averted by Duffy's sharp thinking.

O'Sullivan is one of the best of the New York referees, but the coolest referee that ever lived would have felt some flurry at that moment. It is conceivable that a Duffy behind the terrible Sharkey man might have snatched the victory for Sharkey where a Duffy grabbed it for Dempsey.

It is possible that the terrible Sharkey man might have out-galloped Dempsey if he had simply stepped around on his two rubbery legs for eight or ten rounds and let Dempsey lumber after him, for old Manassa Man Maulor wasn't the man he used to be and pace might have worn him down.

But against that theory is the fact that the terrible Sharkey man couldn't punch hard enough to hold Dempsey off, and that after he hit Dempsey with everything he could think of, without effect, there was really nothing left for the terrible Sharkey man to do.

Still, it would have been better for him to try speed against the vanity, or over-confidence, or whatever it was that prompted him to try to out-slug Dempsey. The man never walked on two feet who could do that.

WACO WINS IN NINTH, 1 TO 0

Swenson Hits But "Steeny" Drops Mean Battle

WACO, July 29. — Steengrafe, the Spudders' ace, and Ray Benge, the local's leading hurler, hooked up in real pitching duel here today that went eight innings without a score. Waco put over the winning run in the ninth, taking the odd game of the series, 1 to 0. Vigare led off in the ninth with a single, took second on Wolgamot's sacrifice and after Benge popped out to third, scored on Windle's fourth hit of the game.

Benge was pretty skimpy with base hits, but Steengrafe gave up a total of 10. The Wichita Falls hurler was in warm water on several occasions, but came out of trouble time and again with brilliant pitching.

Benge displayed top form against the Spudders who have been in a batting slump for more than a week outside of an occasional uprising. Benge struck out only one batter and kept the league leaders either popping up or grounding out to the infield. Most of the Wichita Falls blows were in the air. Steengrafe fanned two batters and kept his infielders busy. Griffin the Spudder first baseman, accepted 15 chances. LaFayette, regular first sacker, was out with a lame ankle.

Swenson Slugs

Wichita Falls, although getting ony five safeties, played in tough luck with Benge dealing the misery. Swenson opened the third inning for Wichita Falls with a two base hit to center and Tobin singled at shortstop, sending Swenson to third. But here the league leaders were turned back cold by great pinch pitching on the part of Benge who caused Steengrafe to pop out to Pratt and hurled Benton into hitting into a double play. Swenson opened the eighth inning with a two-bagger to center, also, but his mates couldn't score him. Tobin struck out. Steengrafe grounded out to Shires unassisted an dBenton flied out to left.

Waco filled the bases in the first inning after there were two out when West Walked and Pratt and Blackerby singled, but Shires unassisted and Benton flied out to left.

Many Menaces

Windle opened the Waco half of the third with a single to left but Moore hit into a double play, Turgeon to Benton to Griffin.

West led off the Waco half of the sixth inning, but Pratt this time hit into a double play, Griffin to Benton to Griffin.

Shires opened the Waco half of the seventh with a single but couldn't score after being sacrificed to second by Vigare. Wolgamot grounded out to short and Benge flied out to left.

The Cubs threatened again in the eighth but couldn't score. Windle started with a single through the box. Moore beat out a hit down the third base line, sending Windle to second. West bunted to the box, sacrificing. The two runners each advanced one base. Steengrafe purposely walked Pratt, filling the bases. Edington batted for Blackerby and popped out to Turgeon. Shires grounded out to second. Great pitching had saved Steengrafe again, but he succumbed in the ninth.

BUFFS WIN IN NINTH

HOUSTON, July 29. (AP)—Gene Valla, subbing for the injured Bill Sweeney at first base, tossed the ball over the head of third baseman Richardson, and Pepper Martin, running from second, scored in the ninth inning here today, which gave the Houston Buffs the third game of the series, of four with Fort Worth, 1 to 0. It also was the eighteenth victory of the season for Pitcher Fred Frankhouse. Through no fault of his own, Denny Burns, Panther right hander, went down to defeat. The score:

Lazzeri And Paul Waner On Road To Replace The Collins And Cobbs

By ROY GROVE

Lazzeri at 22 and Waner at 24 must be credited with showing enough form in their second season among the elite of their profession to worry some of the old-timers, whose real kick in life, now that their days as active performers are done, or nearly so, is the watching of the records they have hung up. Tony and Paul have a long way to go before their string is run out and most anything might be expected from a pair of young, husky lads who have begun their mad dash for fame in the sensational fashion they have.

Both lads are only a year and a half old in major league experience an yet they come close to being the greatest in the game at their positions. Lazzeri already is hailed as the best second baseman in the American circuit, while it's going to be a mighty sweet outer gardner who takes the honor of being the best all-around outfielded in the National league away from Waner. He can field, run, hit and throw with the best already and if there is anything else a great outfielder must do Waner probably can do that, too.

Lazzeri is one of the most certain infielders the American league has discovered in years on ground balls hit both to his left or right. He is equipped with a powerful pair of hands, probably the most essential requirement of greatness as an infielder, is loose-jointed, quick on his feet and can rap the ball just about as often, and at the same time much longer distances than most infielders.

Lazzeri is not another Lajoie, Collins, or Hornsby yet. But he is well on his way to assault some of the records this trio of famous second sackers has hung up. The odds are all against any one man developing into another Cobb, too, but if any youngster now in either big league has the earmarks of the all-around ability of Tyrus Raymond in his palmy days, that individual is Paul Waner.

Cobb at 24 was leading his league in hitting. Waner at the same age is doing the same thing. Collins at 22 was just beginning to show his greatness. Lazzeri, also 22, is doing the same. Whether Tony and Paul have the stamina and the competitive spirit that kept Cobb and Collins traveling at record-breaking speed for 22 and 21 years, respectively, is something only time will tell. They at least are started in the right direction.

One thing that is changing in regards to this game of baseball is that the fans are beginning to stage special "days" for their heroes much sooner than they did in the long ago. Collins and Cobb were in the game many years before you heard of "Collins Day" or "Cobb Day." But "Poosh 'Em Up Tony," at 22, and a year and a half on his job, is to be honored by "Lazzeri Day" within a few short weeks.

And just to prove that he is just as versatile as the scribes would have you believe, he is going to play every position on the diamond, a new position every inning. Unless the old memory has failed us for the moment it will be the first time any athlete has ever tried this act. And it should be an interesting one to watch.

There may be two better "second-year" ball players in the major league than Tony Lazzeri of the New York Yankees and Paul Waner of the Pittsburgh Pirates, but if there are, they are hiding their lights under somebody's bushel basket. It is hard to tell how much of the fame that has been pretty well hogged by the Lajoies, Collinses, Hornsbys, Speakers, Cobbs, Ruths and Roushes for years will go to this pair before they trip on their whiskers and make their graceful exit into the class of "has-beens."

DEL BREAKS RECORD

MASSAPEQUA, N. Y., July 29. (AP)—Adelaide Lambert, one of the mermaids of the women's swimming association of New York, broke one world's record and equalled another Friday in successfully defending her title in the 220-yard back stroke event of the National Women's A. A. U. aquatic championships.

Miss Lambert, winning by inches from a club mate, Elaine Delaney, was clocked in three minutes, 11 seconds, equalling the world's long course record at Detroit in 1925 by the late Sybil Bauer of Chicago.

Jupe Pluve Stalls Friday Grapple Show

Rain frustrated the wrestlers Friday, so the grapple program billed last eve for the Ross stadium was postponed to Tuesday night.

Intermittent showers through the early Tuesday afternoon supplemented by a regular downpour late in the day killed all idea of staging the show in the open air arena.

All the athletes were on hand ready for battle. The same card will be carried Tuesday night, said Matchmaker Ross. Ali Hassen will take on Yaqui Joe in the feature event and Jack Gorman will go after Mike Reed in a grudge one-hour fracas. Kid Pancho, San Angelo lightweight boxer, will fight some local lightweight, probably Jim O'Dare, Ross said.

The Gorman-Reed match draws the spotlight, because Reed is cocky and self-confident to the point of being overbearing while Gorman is angrier than a wet setting hen. Jack declares he will "knock Reed's knob off."

BOSTON 8, BROWNS 2.

BOSTON, July 29. (AP)—Behind Ruffing's six-hit pitching, Boston today won its first game of the season from St. Louis. The score was 8 to 2. The Browns before today had won 16 straight from the Red Sox. Ruffing's hitting was as spectacular as his pitching. In the seventh the Sox bunched hits off Crowder for six runs. The feature of the big inning was a triple steal headed by Rothrock. The score:

The world's next record holder in the 440-yard dash will be Charles Borah, according to Dean B. Cromwell, Borah's coach at southern California. Cromwell declared Borah will also establish a new 220-yard mark before he ends his collegiate career.

On June 4 at the Pacific coast intercollegiates, Borah ran the last lap in the relay, Cromwell permitting him to run after the Trojan flyer had begged all year for a chance at this distance. Borah had to stop to take the baton after a bad pass and then ran around the oval in 47 4-5 seconds, slowing down at the end with a 100-yard lead over the closest rival.

This feat was after Borah had traveled to Philadelphia where he ran six races at the I. C. 4A. and had come home immediately to turn in four races at the P. I. C. The Trojan star complained that his legs were "dead" before the coast meet had started and, under orders, "loafed" to a 9.8 seconds hundred and a 21 seconds 220 with a new record in the latter race. He made an I. C. 4A. record of 20.9 seconds at Philadelphia.

Cromwell figures Borah can jog his first 220 in 22 seconds and easily do 25 seconds in the second furlong for a world's mark of 47 seconds. Ted Meredith's present record is 47 2-5 seconds, made around only one curve. Next year Borah will be given a chance at the record in a meet where the Trojans do not need his sprint points and he can run only the 440, Cromwell says.

The Trojan coach says Borah has never run as fast as he can in the 220 and that he will do the furlong in 20 2-5 seconds before he leaves Southern California.

There has been a sort of epidemic in the major leagues of catchers dropping thrown balls after tagging out runners sliding into home plate.

To the spectators these misplays appear like inexcusable errors and the catchers have, in several instances, been severely censured.

There is something about the dropped balls that the spectator is not aware of and that is the action of the muscles when the runner, coming into the plate, strikes the catcher between wrist and elbow. Striking him in this section forces the fingers to open, due to nervous reaction.

Struck on the forearm the catcher is powerless to hold the ball. I remember two successive games last season that were lost because the same catcher twice dropped thrown balls. But, in each game, it happened that the runner struck him on the forearm. I asked the catcher about the misplays after the second occurrence and he explained to me how, when struck by the flying feet of the base runner, he experienced a reaction which he could not control. The fingers suddenly straightened out and the ball dropped to the ground.

When you see a catcher drop a thrown ball immediately after, or while tagging the runner, you will notice, if you look carefully at the play, that nine times out of ten the catcher has been hit on the forearm.

No great golfer was ever so lacking in form than Ted Ray.

No one can deny that Ray was one of the very best in golf. His record proves it.

But Ray carried more faults than any other player of the first rank.

Ray lunged at the ball, he swayed, he had a bad follow through. He carried other faults.

The day before the opening of the national open at Oakmont, Al Watrous said:

"If it rains, Ray will have a good score; but if there is a high wind, Ray will do badly."

It rained on the first day of play and there was a strong wind on the second day. Watrous' prediction was correct.

For years Ray wore long trousers on the links. This year he is wearing knickers. "My Concession to the younger generation," says Ray.

He still constantly carries his pipe between lips that often smile. Walter Hagen was asked why Roy always smoked a pipe and he replied:

"When Ray was just a novice, trying to get started in golf, his pro. told him to keep his head down and he couldn't keep it down. The pro. thought up a swell idea. He handed him a pipe. It was so heavy that Ray couldn't get his head up if he wanted to. He got so used to the pipe that he is never without it now while playing golf."

Ray is getting stouter, gradually but surely. "I'm not as lithesome as I once was," he admits. "The eyes don't see so well now."

Undoubtedly Ray has considerable faults as to form, judging him according to the accepted standard of golfing form. He may do this wrong and he may do that wrong, but nevertheless he has been a remarkable success as a tournament player.

In baseball I have always held that if a man can do something exceptionally well in a certain way then that is the way he should do it in, regardless of whether the way is considered right or wrong, judging it from the basis of form.

If Ray tried to play golf according to perfect form he would undoubtedly be a perfect failure and a large number of novices who lack form can get a great deal of encouragement from the story of Ted Ray, an international figure in golf.

BUCS RETAIN LEAGUE LEAD

Ninth-Inning Rush Wins Game Off Robins

PITTSBURGH, July 29. (AP)—The Pirates continued to hold undisputed sway in the National by staging a timely rally in the ninth today to down Brooklyn by 4 to 3. Trailing by two runs in the last frame, Lloyd Waner led off with a single and after Grantham was retired, came home on a double by his brother, Paul. On top of that came Traynor's triple, driving in the tying run and Piitt out of the box. Clark replaced Plitt and walked Cuyler and Harris to take a chance on Wright who lined a hit off the right field stands to decide the game.

Kremer was lifted for a pinch hitter in the eighth and his successor, Dawson was credited with the victory. The score:

SAN ANTONIO, July 29. Two Feared Lost In Lake Sinking Disaster

CHICAGO, July 29. (AP)—Fear that Mrs. Evelyn M. Kelly, 23, and her nephew, Jack Koshow, one year old, had perished on the Favorite was held by the child's mother, Mrs. Marie Koepke, who had walked the streets and the beaches all night. Although she had no knowledge that her sister, Mrs. Kelly, was on the Favorite, she said Mrs. Kelly had planned first to greet her estranged husband and then take the baby on a boat trip. The authorities had no reports of any missing persons.

Even Champions Get In Traps

Here is a picture for those who think that Bobby Jones, in winning the British open championship with a remarkable score of 286, was consistent on the fairway. Our illustration is that even a champion must be a real champion to get into a trap and get out of the same trouble with effectiveness. The photo shows Bobby Jones as he played out of a trap on the second hole on the first round of the tournament in which he tied the course record with a 68.

SANDLOT SLANTS

There is one fan at the Twilight league park who has been a strong rooter for a long time and stands out as one of the most familiar faces there. Sam Turner is an employee of the Panhandle Refinery and a staunch backer of Wild Bill Hoehn's warriors.

Turner claims the Longhorns can beat the Spudders and not half try. The Panhandle rooter visited the Gardner stadium during the recent Shreveport series and didn't seem to be very well pleased. It was the question of the different spirit of the game according to Turner.

Turner also is a loud and sarcastic rooter. He used to pair up with Mrs. Rawls and help pull the Longhorns over with cheers that could be heard from both near and far.

One of the things that has made the crowd look so small at Katy Park of late in the absence of Riley Rawls' mother. Without her the Panhandle baseball team is never on the field in full strength.

Another pair of fans who are great pullers for the Panhandle nine is Mr. and Mrs. McMahon, father and mother of Johnny McMahon, Panhandle star outfielder. This pair is another of the old pioneer fans that have been with the league through another summer.

Mrs. Francis and her daughter, Mildred, are others who have been with the leading fans in the league for a good many years.

There is still another who might be listed with the loyal fans at the games and that is G. N. Cox, the Arbuckle coffee expert. He's an old head at the game and a steady rooter for the Electrics. Cox is a traveling man who works the Panhandle regions a lot and he staunchly claims that the Wichita Falls Twilight league has three teams that can beat the famous Metros from Amarillo with ease. He has reference to the Panhandle, Conocos and Texas Electric company.

One of the outstanding lights in the old city league seems to have faded out of the picture of late and will fade still further now. Jack Kneisel will leave some time over this week-end for his home in Dallas for a short visit. Jack is figuring on slugging them out of the lots with some of the teams in Dallas later on.

This kid Lefty Robertson looks like he has the makings of a real pitcher with a future ahead of him. Robertson had a great day out of it in the Electric company game Wednesday when he fanned 13 men in six innings. Everette Blue still claims that he hasn't solved him at all since swinging three straight times for the third strike.

Jud Waller still doubts that hooking downer that looped over the plate on him for the third strike Wednesday. The ball took a perfect break and went over percently but it completely fooled hard-hitting Waller.

One of the most surprising upsets of the present games has been the hitting slump of Bun Melear with the Longhorns. This hasn't bothered Wild Bill Hoehn. With Melear setting them all on their collective ears with base blows, Hubert Waddox was in a slump and they just changed places at the same time. Hubert came out with a bang and is still banging.

AROUND THE BIG LEAGUE CIRCUITS

When Lou Gehrig poled his thirtieth home run of the season he nipped his rival, Babe Ruth, in one interesting race. It came at St. Louis and gave Larruptin' Lou a circuit smash in each park in the league.

Miller Huggins took exception to a recent interview by Ray Schalk in which the White Sox manager said the "small Yankee stadium was helping the Yankees to their home runs."

When the Yanks had a gross of 96 wallops they had an equal division at home and on the road. "My boys just crash 'em," remarked Huggins, "regardless of the location. I simply want to put Mr. Schalk right on this subject."

The biggest upset in the National league race came July 16 when the pirates were beaten in a double-header by the lowly Phillies and the Giants took the Cubs for a twin bill.

Baseball has its reverses. Imagine the Pirates getting 19 runs in a double-header and failing to win against the Quakers. But that happened 10-9 and 11-10 triumphs for Stuffy McInnis.

Brickell turned in quite a day for the Pirates as a pinch hitter on two occasions when he poled a home run and returned with a double. Webb and Tolson of the Cubs and Ike and Boone of the Red Sox are the only other pinch hitters who have hit homers this season.

Milton Gaston of the Browns promises to be one of those pichers to change to other employment on account of his hitting. In four straight games he poled three singles, seven doubles and two home runs.

Marty McManus, riding the Tigers' bench for two months, was placed at shortstop by George Moriarity in a game with the Athletics and not only fielded perfectly but won a 5-4 game with a double and triple.

They haven't taken all of the inside stuff out of the game. Midget Deviveros was a pinch hitter for the Tigers with a 4-4 score, runner on third in the ninth and one out. With a call of two strikes and no balls, Deviveros dumped a bunt down the third base line scoring the winning run. That's the way they played the game before home run hitting became the rage.

Trade rumors are starting earlier than usual. It is reported George Uhle and Joe Shaute will be among those to go on the block when the Indians start rebuilding next winter.

Among other things during the past fortnight the Indians lost six in a row in a series to the Senators. That wasn't so bad but along came the misfit Red Sox to win two games in one afternoon.

The Red Sox have a record of 15 successive defeats and failing to win a game from the Browns in 10 starts. No wonder the cash customers want a change in scenery in Cleveland.

SPUDDERS GO TO BEARVILLE

Kiefer Looks Like Carl's Mound Selection

Your bouncing Spudders invade San Antonio Saturday afternoon for a quartet with the Bears after losing that heart-breaker at Waco yesterday. The Brazos village nudged over in the ninth for a one-run victory. So did Houston on Fort Worth, so the Buffville entry is ten and a half games behind our boys this morning. Dallas wanted to make sure it had Beaumont down, so it licked those Shippers by a football score, 20 to 7.

Joe Kiefer is the logical choice to chunk today's melee for the Spuds in Tamaleville. The Spudders have booked one game this afternoon and two Sunday.

Shipments To East Threaten To Deplete California Oil Supply

By Universal Service.

DEL MONTE, Calif., July 29.—Shipment of huge quantities of petroleum from California to the east is threatening the future supply of oil in the west, according to E. W. Marland, president of the Marland Oil companies, here for a vacation. "Sale of California oil in the east and abroad at a price below cost of production and at greatly lower prices than in California, cannot help but react against the future of this great California industry," he said. "The time has come to find a way to prevent the shortage of a committee of five operators, which within a few years is bound to come as a result of the present mad race for volume production."

"While I am here in California for a rest," said Marland, "I have been devoting some time to study of oil conditions here. With its usual lavish generosity California is furnishing the world with one of its greatest resources without a thought for the day when it must ask other parts of the world to be equally generous in the distribution of oil products."

"Fruits and grains and meat can be developed as we clear land and get water upon it, but oil is a natural commodity of a limited amount and not replaceable by human efforts.

COPLIN TALKS ON AIR METHOD

Deputy Supervisor Says Air Lift Success

AUSTIN, July 29. (AP) — Use of compressed air down abandoned oil wells to reinflate the sands and stimulate flow in nearby producing wells is proving very successful in the Wichita Falls oil territory, the first in Texas to try the system, T. L. Coplin, deputy oil and gas supervisor for the Texas railroad commission, told his 15 colleagues at the first session of their annual two-day meeting here today.

Correct aplication of the air pressure is the main thing essential to success, he said, showing how too much pressure would force a narrow channel through the sands and blow out through another well, instead of reinflating the same and strengthening the oil flow.

Omar Burkett, deputy supervisor stationed at Cisco, told how operations in the Brownwood shallow field is hampered by three troublesome water flows above the 1600-foot sand.

R. D. Parker, chief supervisor of the oil and gas division of the railroad commission, presided at the meeting.

C. W. Tilley, deputy supervisor at Olney, declared that too liberal use of the vacuum or "suction" system of pulling oil to the surface frequently injures a field more than it benefits by increased production.

Other deputy supervisors speakers included John Hoffer, San Angelo and R. C. Lomax, Beaumont.

One of the main items of the program was a discussion of "potash deposits in Texas" at the afternoon session by Dr. E. M. Sellards of the bureau of economic geology, University of Texas.

NEW YORK COTTON.

NEW YORK, July 29. (AP)—An early advance in the cotton market was followed by reactions today. December selling off from 19.19 to 18.95 and closing at that figure. The general market closed steady at net declines of 15 to 17 points.

The opening was steady at an advance of 2 to 5 points on covering by recent sellers who appeared to be influenced by continued talk of showery weather in the south and boll weevil reports. Liverpool was slightly lower than due, but offerings here were comparatively light at the start, the market soon showing net gains of five to eight points. October sold up to 18.95 and January to 19.27, while March advanced to 19.14. Failure of the offcial forecast for showers virtually over the entire belt to resta a more aggressive demand, seemed to disappoint early buyers. Selling became a little more active as the March price approached the 19½-cent level, sufficient to check the advance, and prices eased off during the afternoon under a renewal of realizing or liquidation which may have been combined with local and southern selling for a reaction.

The lowest prices of the day were touched in late trading, October selling off to 18.70, January to 19.06, and March to 19.26. Closing prices were approximately the lowest.

Three of the private end-July crop reports were issued, one of them making the condition 70.7, without giving any figures on the indicated yield; another made the condition 71.1 and the indicated crop 14,418,000 bales and the third made the condition 73.0 with a crop indication of 14,578,000 bales. These figures seemed to have no apparent influence on the immediate market, which was commented upon in some quarters as suggesting that the present condition of the crop had been pretty well discounted.

Reiterated reports of rain damage to the Indian crop were received, and private cables said Bombay had been a buyer in Liverpool during the earlier trading, but that demand had been supplied by local and continental liquidation.

Exports today 5518 bales, making 11,182,852 so far this season. Port receipts 7191, U. S. port stocks 983,998.

NE WORLEANS COTTON.

NEW ORLEANS, July 29. (AP)—The cotton market although quiet during most of today's session developed a fair degree of activity in the afternoon. The general trend of prices was reactionary due to a renewal of liquidation and fears of bearish private crop reports. October after trading up to 18.84 in the early trading eased off to 18.62 in the afternoon and closed at 18.62. The general market closed steady at net losses for the day of 11 to 15 points.

The opening was steady with first trades showing gains of five points due mainly to relatively steady Liverpool advices. This gain was lost near the end of the first hour but the market rallied 9 to 10 points later on showery forecast. October traded to 18.84 and December 19.08.

Near mid-session the market turned reactionary on three bearish private crop reports with conditions averages ranging from 70.7 to 73.1 and indicated yield from 14,418,000 to 14,578,000 bales. Prices were on the downgrade for the remainder of the session, making new lows right at the close with October at 18.62 and acember 18.85, 22 to 23 points below the highs. The close was a shade above the lowest.

Exports for the day 575 bales and for the week 66,246 bales.

Rich Men's Stocks Forge To Front Friday In Trading On New York Exchange; Highest Records Made

By BROADAN WALL

NEW YORK, July 29.—Rich men's stocks forged to the front today on a steady buying movement. Allied Chemical, U. S. Steel, General Electric, DuPont sold at the highest prices on record. Reduction in the Kansas City reserve bank rediscount rate during the crop moving season was regarded as an indication of favorable money market conditions ahead. Reduction in bankers' acceptances to the lowest rate since May of last year was another development of importance.

The reduction in the bill market was due to the easier rates prevailing for time money. The call rate was advanced from 3 3-4 per cent to 4 per cent for renewals. Reactionary tendencies developed in commodities. Quiet prevailed in foreign exchange. Despite the lower cotton quotations bulls on the white commodity have not changed their market position. Weather is understood to be ideal for the weevil.

Sulphur stocks were strong under leadership of Texas Gulf. A survey has just been completed of the Boling pool on the Texas Gulf Oil property and adjoining land and is said to disclose one of the biggest sulphur ore bodies known. Interests identified with the Gulf Oil and Allied Chemical are said to be adding to their holdings. Those acquiring the stock look for higher prices in it and in Freeport, Texas.

Allied Chemical was the star performer. The stock rose about six dollars from a previous rise of nearly four. Developments in Allied Chemical in relation to the Koppers Coke contract will have far reaching effect, it is said, in the chemical business and will place the corporation in the premier position in the chemical trade of the world.

Steel sold at the best price since the stock dividend. The stock is now discounting the steady absorption of American investors. It has been in demand since it was learned that the DuPonts had purchased a block of it. DuPont shares soared 15 points. The stock will receive big dividends from General Motors. In addition the DuPonts have far-reaching plans in acquiring securities of other companies—leaders in their resective lines.

Action of the Kansas City federal reserve bank in reducing its rate from 4 to 3 1-2 per cent is looked upon in Washington as the beginning of a Coolidge policy of farm relief. It is said that similar action is likely to be taken by other western federal reserve banks as the crops mature.

Stocks figuring in the New Whelan-Schulte deal were strong. Union-United soared eight points in over-the-counter trading. The new interests behind the company have been long in the business and expect to expand it in this country and abroad.

Some attention is being paid to the gas stocks. People's Gas which pays $8 a share and is said to be earning $16, is one of the favorites. The company is under the Insull management. It recently reduced gas rates in Chicago and is reporting increasing earnings. The stock is believed to be selling out of line as an investment issue.

Atchison continued its rise; reaching a new high record price. The stock is going up on the accumulation of rich estates. Union Pacific is another issue meeting the same kind of buying. Union is being bought by the same interests that became interested in Atchison at $140. They believe it is selling out of line when consideration is given to the large investments held and the $10 dividend.

Pittsburgh Terminal Coal jumped six points. Buying is based on prospects of higher earnings in connection with new coal contracts. Other specialties rested.

FORT WORTH CASH GRAIN.

FORT WORTH, July 29. (AP)—Pressure of wheat at northern markets caused another sharp recession in prices on the Fort Worth cash market Friday and exporters reduced their bids to eight cents over Chicago September or $1.44½ basis No. 1 hard wheat delivered at Texas gulf ports. Demand was reported slow at the reduced prices. Corn as well as grain sorghums were slightly lower while oats were unchanged.

CHICAGO GRAIN REVIEW.

CHICAGO, July 29. (AP)—Big deliveries here on July contracts had a decided bearish effect in the wheat market today. Extreme weakness of the July delivery early also acted as a depressing factor and so likewise did fading away of fears of crop damage by black rust.

Closing quotations on wheat were heavy, 1¼ to 2¾c net lower, with July 1¾c down, corn 5c to 1¼c off, oats showing ½ to 1½c decline, and provisions unchanged to a setback of 15 cents.

Beneficial rains tended to east the corn market and the forecast pointed to additional showers. In July corn there was no selling pressure of consequence, but July oats were liquidated freely. The movement of new oats is expected to increase from time on. Provisions went lower, with grain, despite an upward trend in hog values.

KANSAS CASH GRAIN.

KANSAS CITY, July 29. (AP)—Wheat: No. 2 dark hard $1.29@1.34½; No. 2 hard $1.28½@1.35½; No. 2 red $1.33½@1.36; July $1.27¾; Sept. $1.28½; Dec. $1.32¾.

Oats: No. 2 white 46@51c.

KANSAS CASH GRAIN.

CHICAGO, July 29. (AP)—Wheat: No. 2 red $1.36½@1.37½; No. 2 mixed $1.03½; No. 2 yellow $1.04½.

Oats: No. 2 white 45¾@47c.

COTTON GOODS.

NEW YORK, July 29. (AP)—Cotton goods sold in moderate lots today in finished lines. Wool goods showed slow and steady improvement in price and more activity was reported in the garment industry using wool products. Silks sold moderately for fall. Burlaps continued high with trading light.

Livestock

TEXAS LIVESTOCK.

FORT WORTH, July 29. (AP)—With receipts estimated at 1300 grown cattle, 400 calves, 350 hogs and 800 sheep a decrease in all classes save for cattle as compared with receipts a week ago, the livestock market in the early rounds here today was active and fully steady.

About a half dozen cars of beef cattle including two cars of cake steers slated to sell around $10.00 and four cars of part fed and well finished cattle which were selling from $8.40 to $9.00 were before the trade.

Beef cows landed up to $6.50, butcher cows were taken at $5.25 to $5.75; cutters at $4.50 to $4.75 and canners $2.50 to $4.25. She stock moved slowly.

With few young slaughter stock appearing, a droopy market resulted on which heifers made $8.00 to $8.50 and calves $10.00 for light veals and $8.00 for desirable heavies.

Bulls were steady at the usual spread of $4.25 for canners to $5.75 for a decent grade of butchers.

The hog market opened early with an advance of 15 cents, choice hogs there taking a top of $10.00 which equalled the best figure of the summer. Heavies moved at $9.75 and packing sows at $8.00 to $8.50. Truck top was $10.65.

DUN'S REVIEW.

NEW YORK, July 29. (AP)—Dun's tomorrow will say:

July is closing with more activity in some quarters, and with more firmness in commodity prices than appeared when the month opened. Mid-summer gains in business have a special interest, for they are rather unusual, in that they are stimulated by purely seasonal influences. The expansion now is mainly moderate and is by no means widespread, yet the progressive upward trend in certain of the principal trades is a constructive development. Increased dealings in textile, especially in the cotton goods division, indicate that some buyers' stocks are running low, while the improvement in leather conditions is reflected both in a larger demand and advanced prices.

Weekly bank clearings $8,756,846,000, an increase of 12.3 per cent.

WOOL MARKET.

BOSTON, July 29. (AP)—The Commercial Bulletin tomorrow will say:

The wool market is progressing steadily with prices favoring the seller, although quotations are hardly changed for the week. Almost all descriptions are in demand. Western operations are now on a small scale.

The foreign markets are very buoyant and business can be done more readily at firm prices both in England and on the continent.

Interest in the goods market is centering on the opening of staple lightweights by the American Woolen company on Monday. A slight advance in prices over a year ago is the logical expectation.

Mohair is slightly more active and very firm. Quotations:

Texas fine 12 months (selected) $1.07@1.10; fine 8 months 90@92c.

Mohairs: Good original bag fall Texas 58@59c; Texas kid 68@70c.

N. Y. Stocks

NEW YORK, July 29. (AP)—Overcoming the resistance created by heavy week-end realizing and selling for both accounts inspired by the marking up of call money rates and the federal trade commission's decision to investigate the recent purchase of a large block of United States Steel common stock by DuPont interests, the stock market plodded forward again today under the leadership of the high grade industrials and rails. DuPont soared more than 16 points to a new record top at 231½ and closed near the top, while dozens of other issues showed net gains of 1 to 7 points.

Pools paid little attention to the increase of $80,219,000 in brokers' loans, making the total the second largest on record, but found encouragement in the decrease from 4 to 3½ per cent in the re-discount rate of the Kansas City federal reserve bank. There was a sharp division of opinion in Wall street as to whether similar action would be taken by the New York bank in the near future, conservative bankers holding to the theory that no immediate decrease was likely because of the danger that it would be followed by a further inflation in securities prices.

Call money renewed at 5% per cent, and then advanced to 4 as banks called about $250,000,000 in loans to prepare for the heavy month-end demand for funds. There was no change in time money and commercial paper r

It Was Some Surprise When Iowa Man Returned Here After 32 Years

"I like this new city, which however, is nothing like the town I left 32 years ago," E. E. Moore of Danville, Iowa, who is the guest of his brother, W. Lee Moore of the Moore-Richolt Lumber company, said when speaking of his visit in Wichita Falls. Mr. Moore left this city 32 years ago, after residing here three years, and returned to his childhood home in Iowa. He expressed himself as being very much surprised in the wonderful development of the city.

Together with a cousin, J. R. Moore also of Danville, he is spending a few days with his brother here and will next visit another brother in California, who he has not seen in 42 years. The couple will also visit relatives in Idaho and Oregon before retuning home.

Beer Case On Court Docket 15 Years Shows Need of Reform, Says Writer

Editor, The Record News: We discovered today in the Southwestern Reporter of July 6, 1927, a case which illustrates the course of justice as administered in Texas. The case is styled F. W. Cook company vs Page et al, 294 Southwestern Reporter. As disclosed by the opinion, it was a suit by a brewing company upon an open account presumably for beer furnished when the business of furnishing beer was legitimate. We call your attention to this decision for the reason that the pending amendments to the constitution are inntended, and we believe will have some tendency to prevent the recurrence of cases of this character. We quote the following from the opinion of Chief Justice Fly of the court of civil appeals at San Antonio, which we think is very interesting reading:

"This case was filed in 1912, and has, for some reason, been on the docket for 15 years. It comes as a voice from the past, a long drawn out, prolonged echo from the days when King Gambrinus sat upon his throne, before the time of the eighteenth amendment to the constitution, and before the Volstead act had become so prolific a subject of discussion in America.

"Since this case was filed, the curtain has gone up on some of the most tragic and terrible scenes ever enacted in the drama of the world's history. A world war, involving the civilization of the ages, and destructive of more treasure and human life than any was known in the annals of time; a war between the nations of the earth has been waged; systems have passed away; crowns have been torn from the brow of tyrants; Germany has been transformed from a great military camp, organized for the benefit of the kaisers, into a peaceful republic; the throne of the Hapsburgs has toppled and been ground into the dust; Russia has destroyed the czars and built up a worse tyranny, the soviet government; Turkey has been dismembered and modernized; and Mussolini in Italy, dictates to the occupants of the throne of the Ceasars. Yet, amid all these mighty changes, this suit for beer has maintained its place in the courts of the country. It furnishes food for complaint to those who denounce the law's delay, and gives a hint of Jarndyce V. Jarndyce, made famous by Charles Dickens in the romance of Bleak House, which work did so much to break down the technicalities in the chancery courts of England and cause a reformation that has made justice in that home of our forefathers no longer a dream, but a grand reality. We will endeavor to end the litigation.

"The judgment is affirmed."

J. T. Montgomery and Kilgore, Rogers and Montgomery.

The 200 local guardsmen comprise four units of the 36th Division, three of which are infantry companies and one of which is an artillery battery. They are as follows:

Units to Attend

Battery D, 131st field artillery, Captain Otis Nelson, commanding, and Lieutenants Winthrop H. ogers, Erwin D. Stone and Raymond Tollett. There are about 80 enlisted men in the battery.

Company M, 142nd infantry, in command of Captain Tom B. Martin.

A medical detachment of the 142nd infantry is stationed at Burkburnett in command of Captain Wallace Martin. It contains 25 men.

Camp Improvements

Captain Nelson said that word received from the camp is to the effect that many improvements have been made, including installation of electric lights, construction of a club house and a building for free movies.

The schedule for enlisted men allows devotion of the afternoon to recreation and amusement, which includes fishing, swimming and athletics, Captain Nelson stated.

The local units have received a number of new recruits recently to fill vacancies caused by expirations of enlistment terms. No recruits will be accepted after Friday, August 5, it was announced.

Heavy Rains Aid West Texas Crops

inch and a half, according to reports received by the local dispatcher of the M. K. and T. railroad.

The rain Friday afternoon was preceded by another one possibly heavier which fell at points on the Fort Worth and Denver north and west of Wichita Falls Thursday night and Friday morning, say reports received from correspondents of The Record News.

Hall county was visited by a general rain ranging from one to two inches which was the first general rain of the year. This rain will prove very beneficial to crops and insures a good yield of feed on most farms and will carry cotton for several weeks.

Drouth Is Broken.

Th enorthern and western sections of Donley county, which were experiencing a prolonged drouth, received 2.5 inches of rain which was general over the entire county.

The sale and movement of many head of cattle that were being sold and moved from that section to water and grass was stopped by the rain, which was the first of a general nature since last fall.

HEAVY DOWNPOUR IN MEMPHIS AREA.

Special to The Record News.

MEMPHIS, Texas, July 29.—A general rain ranging from one to two inches fell over Hall county last night and this morning the first general rain this year. This rain will prove very beneficial to all growing crops and insures a good yield of feed on most farms and will carry cotton for several weeks and makes crop prospects in Hall county look much brighter.

Special to The Record News.

CLARENDON, July 29.— The longest drouth known to the northern and western sections of Donley county was broken here last night by a rain amounting to 2.5 inches.

The rain covered the county and will be worth thousands of dollars to growing crops and will enable farmers in the dry sections to make plenty of feed. The rain will stop the sale and movement of many head of cattle that were being sold and moved to water and grass.

This is the first general rain to cover this county since last fall.

Two Sentenced In 30th District Court

Sentences on R. H. Taylor, recently convicted on five charges of forgery and John Roberts, alias Jack Hardy, convicted of automobile theft, were imposed Friday by Judge E. G. Thornton in the 30th district court.

The jury penalty in Taylor's case was two years in each of the five forgery cases. Judge Thornton ran two of the sentences cumulatively and the other three concurrently, making the total time that Taylor will have to serve in the penitentiary, four years.

Bebe Daniels is not the only exemplification of versatility in "Senorita," her latest Paramount comedy-drama which comes to the Majestic theater today and in which the star appears first as a North American girl, next as a dashing caballero of the South American pampas and finally as a charming Spanish senorita.

Appearing in support of Miss Daniels in this colorful and romantic story of adventure and fun in South America is Raoul Paoli, all around European athlete and popular leading man of the French cinema. Paoli is a newcomer in the United States and this is his first American made picture. He first appeared in Paramount productions, however, as a member of the European company supporting Gloria Swanson in "Madame Sans Gene."

Paoli still holds the European championship for the shot put and as athlete and screen player is known everywhere on the continent. He first attracted attention on the screen in his characterization as Ursus in "Quo Vadis."

In "Senorita" Paoli plays the role of foreman of the Hernandez rancho and is Miss Daniels' staunch supporter in upholding the honor of the Hernandez name.

James Hall again appears opposite Miss Daniels in the heroic role, and William Powell is the villain—the swaggering bully of the pampas. Joan Standing is "the other girl" and Josef Swickard is Don Ernacisco Hernandez the grandfather whom the "Senorita" visits from her northern home.

Bebe Daniels in "Senorita," coming to the Majestic theater today for four days.

Clarence Badger directed "Senorita" from the original screen story by John McDermott.

REEVES CASE TO BE RESET

Jury Discharged After Deadlock On Verdict

Divided seven to five, and hopelessly deadlocked, the jury in the case of Claude Reeves, arraigned on a charge of robbing the Monroe Street Pharmacy, was discharged at 11 a. m. Friday by Judge E. G. Thornton, in the 30th district court.

When discharged the case had been in the jurors' hands for approximately 24 hours. It was given to them at 11 a. m. Thursday.

Following the discharge of the jury, E. F. Fruechte, assistant district attorny, announced that the case against Reeves would be reset for trial within the near future.

Judge Thornton was informed by the jurors at 5 p. m. Thursday that they could not arrive at a verdict, however the court instructed them to return to the jury room and resume deliberations.

The state presented circumstantial evidence against Reeves. The defense attorneys contend that the evidence was not conclusive of the guilt of Reeves, even though it had been proved that he had been in the vicinity of the pharmacy.
