43,862 Pounds Scrap Paper Turned In; Citizens Asked To Continue Paper Saving

A check on the Waste Paper Campaign which was conducted in this county, and which culminated Saturday, May 6, shows that a total of 43,862 pounds of paper were gathered and delivered to the freight car. Goal for the drive was to collect a minimum of 36,000 pounds or 44,000 pounds.

Officials of the campaign report that a total of 24,000 pounds of this paper was delivered by Friday, May 6 and the remainder 19,862 pounds was brought in Saturday.

They state that they received good co-operation from the local schools and schools throughout the county, and are glad to report that the county did so well with their paper gathering.

Plans are being made to make the paper campaign a permanent event, and to collect it regularly, because paper is so vital to the war effort. Every citizen of Dawson County is asked to keep saving all their waste paper for the next paper drive, which will probably be conducted early in July.

Donald Nelson, the Director and driving force behind the War Production Board's accomplishments, has declared waste paper our No. 1 war material shortage. Millions of tons are needed to keep our fighting forces on all fronts supplied with the materials and implements of war now and for the coming invasion.

Waste paper is converted into light, waterproof containers for food, medicines, ammunition, blood plasma, Red Cross kits and hundreds of other vital supplies. It is also used to make parachutes for dropping many of these sorely needed supplies to hard-pressed troops in isolated and harried positions.

In this war, waste paper has assumed an importance never before dreamed of or imagined. In addition, it has many secret uses of the gravest importance to victory. Many plants making these materials are closing down or operating on part-time schedules for want of the necessary waste paper. This holds up shipments of badly needed supplies to our Armed Forces.

Save your paper and give it to the war. It is needed to bring the day of victory closer.

Co. Schools May Receive An Extra Rate For Expense

P. K. Humes, county superintendent, received a notice from the State Department of Education concerning the recent ruling of the Attorney General stating that expenditures allowances for expenses other than teachers salary will be allowed in the current budgets school budgets.

The allowance may be increased over the original allowance of $160 of $180 a year in unaccredited and credited schools respectively.

Results of the recent ruling will increase the aid for many schools in this county, depending upon the actual expenditures schools have made for the current year. However, schools which have not exceeded the original maximum set up in state budget will receive no additional aid. The additional amount each school will receive, according to available information, will be that amount extended in excess to the original allowance.

Expenditures will be terminated July 1. The supplementary budget must be sent in by that time, if additional aid is received. Maximum amount that each school may receive has not yet been determined by the Department of Education.

New Engines For The Flying Wing

(AP) Features

NEW YORK — Propellerless "flying wing" airplanes enclosing high-speed gas-turbines, much faster than those now employed in jet-propulsion planes, are visualized as the air liners of the future by G. Geoffrey Smith, British aeronautical expert and managing editor of Flight and Aircraft Production in London.

Smooth-running high-speed turbines will revolutionize aircraft design, and bring about a basic change in its structure, Smith believes.

His book, "Gas Turbines and Jet-propulsion For Aircraft," just issued in New York, partly explains the new aviation development recently announced jointly by the Royal Air Force and the United States Army Air Forces.

Smith summarizes the advantages of jet-propulsion:

1. More efficient flight at higher speeds in the sub-stratosphere.

2. Paraffins, diesel oils, or tar oils can be substituted for gasoline, extending our present oil reserves.

3. There is an eventual limit to propeller power. Jet-propulsion eliminates the propeller, avoiding this potential handicap.

4. Better location for the pilot, with unrestricted vision. No obstructions for guns mounted on military aircraft.

Future airplanes will be designed around turbine-compressor engines, rather than by adapting present-days planes to fit them, Smith believes.

"The flying wing idea is as old as the industry itself," he says, "but only in recent years have advances in aerodynamic and structural knowledge brought the thick-section wing to practical realization.

"It has been estimated that a 'flying wing' has from one-third to one-half less air drag than the conventional monoplane, so that considerably less horse power is needed to attain the same speed.

"Since jet-propulsion engines are considerably lighter in weight than the conventional powerplant with its many auxiliaries, a double advantage is suggested by marrying the gas-turbine to the 'flying wing'."

NEWS FROM The Home Demonstration Agent

MYRTLE DICKIE NEGY

Since plans have been started by the Home Demonstration Council to order pineapple, this office is swamped with calls about canning pineapple. The two "Sixty-Four" dollar questions are, "How many pints can you get out of a dozen pineapple?" and "How do you can it?"

The first question is the harder to answer. Some people peel fruit thin and others thick. Some have lots of waste, others very little. But it is fairly safe to estimate 2 1-2 pints from a good four pound pineapple.

The canning directions read like this: select ripe orange colored fruit from which the spines slip easily. Cut off stem end and twist out the top. Slice crosswise and peel each slice. Cut out core and shape slices with a sharp round cutter or cut in pieces of any desired shape.

Juice or sirup for canning the fruit is best made by cooking the outer trimmings of the meat of the fruit. Add the cores and enough water to make desired sirup. For a light sirup use 1-3 cup sugar to 1 cup fruit juice. Other consistencies of sirup are 1-2 cup sugar, 3-4 cup sugar, 1 1-4 cup sugar, and 1 1-2 cup sugar—each to 1 cup of the fruit juice. For salads, the agent prefers pineapple canned in the light sirup.

Pack raw fruit into jars very tightly. Fill jar about 1-3 full of hot sirup. Place jars without lids in hot water on rack in water bath canner or pressure cooker. The water should be about 2 inches below the top of the jar. Cover water bath canner with a lid. If pressure cooker is used, leave pet cock open and fasten two opposite lugs. Steam 5 to 10 minutes. Count steaming time as soon as steam accumulates above the jar.

Remove jars from cooker. Release air bubbles and press food down. If container is not full use fruit from one jar to fill others. Be sure fruit is well covered with liquid. Seal jars. Leave 1-4 inch headspace for jars and 1-8 inch for cans. Work fast as it is important that food be sealed hot. Replace jars in cooker. Cover with boiling water 1 or 2 inches above tops of jars.

Boil quarts and pint jars 20 minutes.

Pineapple is not canned in a pressure cooker for two reasons: first it is an acid food and will keep without being subjected to the high temperatures reached in pressure cookers. Second, it is an important source of vitamin C in food and more vitamin C is saved by the water bath canning methods. The only foods that should be canned by the water bath method are

Truck Replaces Pony Express

SOMBRERO BUTTE, Ariz. (AP)—Arizona's last "pony express" mail service—between here and Copper Creep—has been supplanted by a motor vehicle that crawls over a four-mile mountain road.

A burro used to be the "pony express" because it was difficult for a horse to negotiate the winding trail linking the mining camps.

FSA Farmers In State Increased Production In '43

The 22,789 Texas farm families co-operating with the Farm Security Administration program increased production of meat, milk and eggs in 1943 over 1942 by enough to feed an additional 100,000 fighting men. This information is included in figures on 1943 production by FSA farmers released for the first time today by Orville W. Richardson, FSA Supervisor, in Dawson County.

Texas FSA families sent to the markets 52 per cent more meat in 1943 than in the previous year, as compared with the national increase by all FSA families of 49 per cent. These same Texas farmers increased milk production by 21 per cent compared with a national figure of 18 per cent and eggs 41 per cent compared with a national FSA average increase of 32 per cent.

Additional figures show that FSA farmers in this State now operate a total of 3,871,090, an increase of 14 per cent over 1942. On these farms FSA families increased production of vital war crops by 240.00 acres, or a 26 per cent increase.

These family-type farms increased production of soybeans by 359 per cent in a single year. They produced 57 per cent more dry beans and blackeyed peas, 7 per cent more sweet potatoes, and 23 per cent more wheat.

Mr. Richardson attributed these big increases to four things: Better farm management practices, increased livestock numbers, increased food production and farm enlargement.

"All of these factors were aided by managerial counsel and financial assistance provided to operators of family-type farms through Farm Security, an agency of the United States Department of Agriculture," Mr. Richardson said.

These figures include only those families who were on the FSA program both in 1942 and in 1943, so as to make the comparative figures accurate. Not included are several thousand additional small farmers with FSA loans and 2,489 families buying their places through FSA's farm ownership division. Families in the later categories would account for considerable boosts in the figures given above.

Mr. Richardson quoted FSA Administrator Frank C. Hancock as declaring that the high percentage increases in war food production by FSA families, particularly their expanded production for commercial markets, are of great value not only

Rabbits Are Good For Extending Ration Points

Two or three female rabbits of the large, domestic species in a backyard hutch should supply the meat needs of an average family for one year. According to R. E. Callender, game management specialist for the A. and M. College Extension Service, one doe under good management should produce 35 to 40 pounds of tender, white meat yearly. More breeding stock is available this spring, and limited space and little time are needed to make backyard raising practical. Callender says that the landmarks of successful rabbit production are vigorous, healthy breeding stock, proper housing, sanitation, and correct feeding. Sanitation should be observed carefully since attempts to produce rabbits sometimes fail because of neglect in this respect.

Proper feeding for health and production occasions no difficulty because rabbits readily eat a variety of whole grains and green feed. Callender lists whole oats as their preference of the grains, with wheat, grain sorghums (milo, kafir and feterita), barley and rye in order. Whole corn is not satisfactory because rabbits eat out the kernels and waste the remainder.

The specialist suggests as a suitable ration a mixture of 100 pounds of oats, 100 pounds of wheat or milo, 100 pounds of soybean pellets, and 300 pounds of alfalfa or peanut hay. Plenty of salt and fresh, clean water should be kept in the hutches regularly. Rabbits relish garden vegetables and root crops, lawn clippings and other green feed, but do best when these are provided along with regular rations. Feed greens sparingly at first and then in amounts which will be cleaned up in three to five minutes. Too much green feed to growing litters, however, will reduce the amount of grain consumed and retard quick and maximum development. A doe and litter should be fed with grain and protein mixture regularly before them. Dry does and males should be hand fed at intervals in amount to keep them in good condition. Over weight sometimes results from access to self feeders. A supply of good legum hay should be kept in the hutch manger at all times. Extension Service bulletin B-128, "Raising rabbits for meat," may be obtained from county extension agents.

A large crowd attended and enjoyed the operetta, "Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs" which was presented Friday, May 5, by approximately 100 pupils of the sixth and seventh grades of the local elementary school. The program was under the direction of Miss Marie Seeliger and Mrs. Leta Ashlock, with Mrs. J. E. Mabry Brothers Met In London, England, Mar. 30

Although their parting words were "I'll see you in London," the Mabry brothers little dreamed this would actually happen three months later. On March 30, Sgt. Robert E. Mabry and Pfc. Earskin D. Mabry met while standing on a street corner in London, England, while waiting for a bus. Three months before, the boys were visiting together in the United States—and neither suspected that the next time they would meet would be in London.

Robert and Earskin made their home in Memphis, and their mother is Mrs. Bessie Mabry, who resides at 502 South Katherine in this city.

Sgt. Mabry, 32, who volunteered for the army, had been a member of the armed service five years before he went across. He is a member of the Medical Detachment.

Pfc. Mabry, 33, entered the service on March 13, 1940. He is a member of the Infantry.

Mr. and Mrs. Tommy Pomroy and son, Douglas, have returned to Fort Worth after a visit with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Peterson and other relatives.

More Pineapple Orders Needed To Get A Load Here

Mrs. C. F. Gowen, Chairman of the Marketing Committee of the Home Demonstration Council, reports that up to date there have been only 40 dozen pineapples ordered. The minimum amount that can be sent in a truck is 300 dozen. So we lack a lot having reached a load. The Council is not in a position financially to order the pineapple unless an entire load can be disposed of at one time. Mrs. Gowen urges that people who expect to get pineapples to put up send in their orders early this week. Pineapples are coming into the market fast at Laredo now and it is usually the early fruit that is best. The price will be $3.60 per dozen. Get a
