Candidates wind down 1984 campaign

Mondale: GOP in for big surprise

LOS ANGELES (AP) — After 10 months in constant search of votes, Walter Mondale ends his quest for the presidency with boisterous crowds chanting his name and opinion polls casting him as a certain loser.

But one day before the nation's voters deliver their verdict, Mondale's refrain remains, "We're gonna win."

And supporters buoy his spirits as they tell him that after next Wednesday morning, President Reagan will be defeated and Mondale will be known as "the giant killer."

On Sunday afternoon, Mondale looked over thousands of cheering, stomping, sign-waving Texans jammed into a pair of grandstands at Buccaneer Stadium in Corpus Christi and declared: "I have never seen anything like this in my life."

"I can feel it, we're going to win it and put a people's president in the White House.

"The pollsters and the Republicans are in for the biggest surprise of their lives," Mondale shouted into his microphone. "You've heard from them, and on Tuesday, they are going to hear from you."

Over the last seven days, Mondale has marched his campaign from Seattle to Chicago to New York City and back across the nation to the Pacific. His strategy was to try to narrow the race by galvanizing the core of past Democratic coalitions.

Reagan ends with 'good luck charm'

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (AP) — President Reagan returned to California to end his 1984 re-election campaign with an election-eve tour of his home state, described by a spokesman as "a nostalgic trip — a good luck charm."

■ Polling places — Page 2C

The first event of Reagan's final day of campaigning was a rally with singer Frank Sinatra on the steps of the California Capitol at the same spot where Reagan took the oath of office as governor of California 18 years ago, his first elected public office.

Other speeches today were scheduled at a college football stadium in Los Angeles and a final rally at the same San Diego shopping center where he ended his 1980 presidential campaign.

"It's very simply a nostalgic trip — a good luck charm" to end the campaign by visiting sites of past successes, said Jim Dutra, press spokesman for the president's California campaign.

He said Reagan would also visit his old office, now occupied by Republican Gov. George Deukmejian, a longtime political ally and his California campaign chairman, and tour the 115-year-old state Capitol, which Reagan had not visited since a $68 million restoration project started after he left the governorship in 1975.

FBI arrests fugitive on Most Wanted List

CLEVELAND (AP) — Authorities arrested an alleged terrorist who had been on the FBI's 10 Most Wanted List since 1977 in a string of bank robberies and bombings, and continued searching for another most-wanted fugitive they narrowly missed, the FBI said.

Authorities on Sunday apprehended Raymond Luc Levasseur and Richard Charles Williams, who was not on the Most Wanted List but had been indicted in the 1981 highway shooting of a highly decorated New Jersey state trooper. Three others were also arrested.

The FBI said it had also been "very, very close" to capturing Thomas W. Manning, a most-wanted fugitive indicted with Williams in the slaying of the state trooper, Philip Lamonaco, which sparked a one of the most intense manhunts in New Jersey history.

Levasseur, 38, Manning and Manning's wife, Carol Ann, have been sought since 1976 for bank robberies and the bombings of government buildings in New England for which the Sam Melville-Jonathan Jackson Unit terrorist group claimed responsibility.

Levasseur's mother, Jeannette Levasseur, said in a telephone interview from her Sanford, Maine, home Sunday night that she had not seen her son for seven years, since hos name was placed on the 10 Most Wanted List.

"Every day I wonder if they're going to pick them up," she said. "He was always good to me. He never gave me a hard time."

Levasseur and his common-law wife, Patricia Gros, were arrested in rural Deerfield as they rode in a van with their three children, FBI Director William Webster said in a prepared statement released in Washington. Webster did not say how authorities located Levasseur.

About 30 minutes later, police and federal agents surrounded a house in west Cleveland and used bullhorns to coax Williams, 37, Jaan Karl Laaman, 36, and Barbara J. Curzi, 26, into surrendering, Webster said.

The five were being held at the Cuyahoga County Jail and were scheduled to be arraigned this afternoon before U.S. Magistrate David Perelman in Cleveland, authorities said.

Williams and Manning were indicted in New Jersey in the Lamonaco slaying in 1983. Manning was thought to be hiding in the Cleveland area but apparently eluded capture Sunday, authorities said.

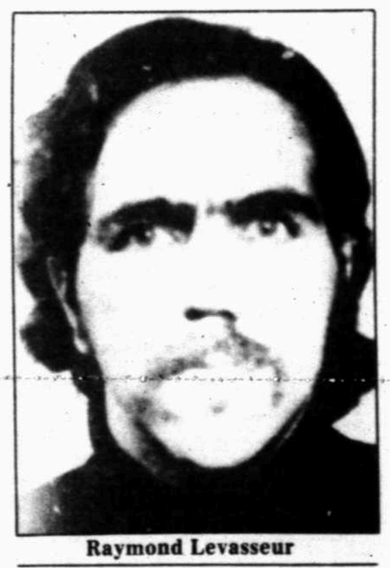

"We think we came very close to getting (Manning)," Dunn said.

The terrorist group to which Levasseur allegedly belonged is named for Jonathan Jackson, who was killed in 1970 at a San Rafael, Calif., courthouse in an attempted escape and kidnapping, and for Sam Melville, who bombed eight New York City corporate offices in the 1960s and was killed during the Attica prison uprising.

Levasseur was also wanted by the FBI on charges of bank robbery and unlawful flight to avoid prosecution for illegal possession of a weapon, authorities said.

Williams was wanted on a charge of unlawful flight to avoid prosecution in the killing of Lamonaco, officials said. Laaman was wanted by the FBI on charges of unlawful flight to avoid prosecution and assault with intent to murder and by Massachusetts state police in connection with a shootout with troopers in 1982, Webster said.

Sandinistas celebrate their victory even before polls close

MANAGUA, Nicaragua (AP) — Even before the polls closed in Nicaragua's general election, supporters of the leftist Sandinistas set off fireworks to celebrate their expected victory. An opposition leader called the election "a farce."

Supreme Electoral Council officials said the first returns from Sunday's voting would be made public today. But the council president, Mariano Fiallos, said final returns in the nation's first election since 1974 will not be known until at least Thursday.

"It is hard to say because we have very little experience with this," Fiallos said.

Victory for the ruling Sandinista National Liberation Front, faced with opposition only from five minor parties, was virtually assured. The main opposition coalition boycotted the election, complaining of harassment and restrictions.

If the Sandinistas win as expected, junta coordinator Daniel Ortega will become president; Sergio Ramirez will be vice president and the 90-member National Assembly will be controlled by Sandinistas. All offices have six-year terms.

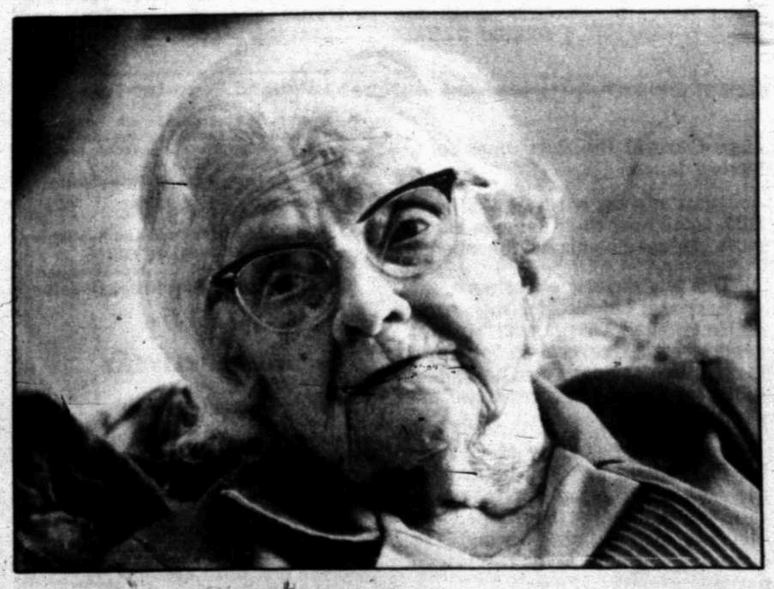

The vote came five years after the Sandinistas ousted rightist pro-U.S. strongman Anastasio Somoza in a 1979 revolution.

Fiallos said preliminary returns indicated voter turnout was even higher than the 80 percent of those registered who Sandinista officials had predicted would vote. More than 1.56 million people registered to vote as required by law, but they were not required to cast ballots.

Few problems were reported with voting at the 3,896 polling places. Fiallos said voting at 11 polling places in the north was disrupted by violence by anti-Sandinista rebels.

Eighty-seven-year-old Midland woman votes for first time

Dora Duncan

By LANA CUNNINGHAM
Assistant City Editor

Dora Duncan can faintly remember when women won the privilege to vote. But she was busy with life on the farm and didn't think about registering.

Today, at 87, she has registered for the first time and already cast her ballot by absentee.

"Back then, women weren't expected to vote. Women never had no say in anything," she says of her life on the family farm 16 miles outside Stephenville.

But she kept reading stories and hearing talk about reducing Social Security payments. And Ms. Duncan finally decided to voice her concern.

Her niece, Carolyn Malone, took Ms. Duncan to K-Mart one Saturday when the League of Women Voters was registering people. "I wanted to be part of the crowd," chuckles the white-haired woman.

And then the printed absentee ballot came in the mail. Ms. Duncan checked off her choices and mailed it back.

She based her selection on the news she gets from the newspaper and television. "I watch the morning news shows," she says, and cuts off the television until evening when the news comes on again. "Dan Rather is my favorite," she says of the major network's anchors.

Social Security is her only means of survival, her only lifeline to maintaining her independent lifestyle.

"It's all I get to live on," she says. "That's what keeps me going. It pays my medicine, my house rent, my eats, my electricity."

It's been a long road from the farm to Midland for Ms. Duncan. Her grandfather immigrated to Texas from Quincy, Ill., and traded three blacks for the 640-acre farm. Her father, she said, was born, raised, and died on the farm.

He died when Ms. Duncan was 5, and she helped to raise the younger children. Then she stayed on to take care of her mother until her death when Ms. Duncan was 45. The homestead was sold and Ms. Duncan moved to Fort Worth where she worked for the next 22 years.

There just never seemed to be time to register to vote, she recalls.

As a child on the farm, she had to walk 2½ miles each way to get to school. "I liked life back then. We had to milk cows, drive up the horses, make a garden in the spring, pick cotton, hoe the fields, feed the hogs and pick up pecans" from the 1,000 trees they had.

"It was a good life," she says with a soft smile. "I wish I could live it over."

But there's one thing she would change, and that's voting. She would have done it earlier, Ms. Duncan says, adding that she's going to keep exercising this privilege.

"Everything that comes up I'm going to vote. If I can help someone else, I'm going to do it."

'We will win!'

Democratic presidential candidate Walter Mondale raises his arms over his head after giving a speech in McAllen, Texas. Mondale, who said he is trying to win just as Harry Truman did in 1948, was on a two-city tour of Texas. The candidate is flanked by his son, William, right, and Gov. Mark White.

Perfect weather ticket expected for Election Day

Mother Nature should be putting together the perfect ticket for Election Day weather to entice voters to the polls.

The National Weather Service is calling for sunny skies and temperatures warming up to the high 70s on Tuesday.

Skies should be clear tonight with the mercury dropping to the lower 40s. Southeasterly winds at 5 to 10 mph will shift to the south to southwest at less than 20 mph and then become gusty by late Tuesday morning.

The record high for Monday set in 1934 was 15 degrees above the recorded high of 69. The record low of 27 set in 1936 was 11 degrees below this morning's low of 38.

With no rain in the forecast, the yearly total should stand at 13.31 inches.

STATE

A mass of polar air was located over Texas today, producing clear skies and mild, rain-free weather across all of the state.

And forecasters said the cool, dry air would remain over the state through at least Tuesday, meaning Texas voters will be able to go their polling places in pleasant, rain-free weather.

No rainfall was reported in the state early today and none was expected. Isolated showers were reported well out into the Gulf of Mexico, about 100 miles east of Corpus Christi. The storms were moving southeastward at dawn at about 20 mph.

Early morning temperatures were in the 40s and 50s over all but the immediate coast where readings were in the 60s. Extremes ranged from 38 at both San Angelo and Junction to 64 at Corpus Christi.

Other early morning readings around the state included 42 at Amarillo, 44 at Wichita Falls, 49 at Longview, 48 at Dallas-Fort Worth, 46 at Waco, 54 at San Antonio, 62 at Brownsville, 56 at Houston, 39 at Lubbock, 40 at Midland and 46 at El Paso.

Forecasts called for sunny, mild weather statewide. Highs were to be in the 60s and 70s. Lows tonight will again be mostly in the 40s and 50s. Highs Tuesday will likely be in the 60s and 70s.

NATION

Northeast Minnesota had scattered snow today, rain was widespread over the eastern third of the nation and early-morning fog covered much of the eastern Gulf of Mexico states.

Rainshowers were scattered from the lower Great Lakes and central New England south through the Tennessee Valley and the Carolinas.

The eastern third of the nation was under cloudy skies and the remainder was under partly cloudy skies.

Polls claim Reagan may sweep 50 states

By LEE BYRD
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — Quick, now. Which of these men won the largest landslide in presidential history?

Abraham Lincoln, Warren G. Harding, Franklin D. Roosevelt, Lyndon B. Johnson, Richard M. Nixon or Ronald Reagan.

If you said Lincoln or Reagan, you're very wrong — among the six, they are the also-rans.

If you said FDR or LBJ, you're half right on each. Roosevelt claimed the biggest electoral college majority, 523 of 531. Johnson had the largest percent of the raw vote, 61.1 percent.

Polls say Reagan may be able to claim a landslide on Tuesday night. His aides are talking up an unprecendented 50-state sweep, conceding only the nation's capital to Walter F. Mondale. If that happened, he'd get a record 535 of 538 electoral votes.

Mondale rejects such talk, saying the polls are missing a last-minute surge for him. "Polls don't vote," he says. "People do."

Actually, polls have been wrong at times. More often, they've understated the margin of victory, especially in landslide years.

Early last week, various polls put Reagan's lead for the popular vote in the 17-23 pereent range, suggesting he has a shot at the marks set by Roosevelt, Johnson, Nixon and Harding.

All four topped 60 percent of the popular vote. Roosevelt's second-term victory over Republican Alf Landon in 1936 was the biggest sweep of the states, with a smashing 98.5 percent of the electoral votes. Landon carried only Maine and Vermont.

Roosevelt collected 60.8 percent of the ballots cast that year, but Lyndon Johnson's 1964 thrashing of Sen. Barry Goldwater, R-Ariz., stands as the popular-vote record. Still, Goldwater carried Arizona and five Deep South states, for 52 electoral votes. Johnson got 486, or 90.3 percent.

It took the Republicans 10 ballots to nominate Ohio Sen. Warren G. Harding at their national convention in 1920. But Democrats were even more divided, naming another Ohioan, Gov. James M. Cox, on the 44th ballot. Harding won 60.3 percent of the popular vote, even though Cox swept the South for 127 of the 531 electoral votes.

Lincoln beat Stephen A. Douglas, John Breckinridge and John Bell with just 39.8 percent of the popular vote in 1860. He won the Civil War election of 1864 with 55 percent against Democrat George B. McClellan, but that still leaves Honest Abe an also-ran on the popularity front.

Reagan rolled up a stunning 91 percent of the electoral votes four years ago, 489 to 49. But he did so with a scant majority of the popular vote, 50.7 percent. Jimmy Carter got 41 percent but won the electoral votes of just six states and the District of Columbia.

The Roosevelt, Johnson and Harding landslides were all accompanied by dramatic gains elsewhere for their parties, including tightened control of the House and Senate. Republicans, for example, picked up 11 seats in the Senate and 63 in the House with Harding's election, bolstering what had been bare majorities.

Roosevelt returned the Democrats to control of Congress when he beat Herbert Hoover in 1932, and his landslide against Landon enhanced the margins by six in the Senate and 11 in the House. Similarly, Johnson's 1964 election saw the Democrats pick up one seat in the Senate for a 68-32 margin, and 37 in the House, for a whopping 295-140 lineup.

Republicans had no such luck when Nixon beat Sen. George S. McGovern in 1972 with 60.7 percent of the popular vote, and 97 percent, or 520, of the electoral votes. McGovern carried only Massachusetts and the District of Columbia, but fellow Democrats picked up two Senate seats and lost only 11 in the House to retain firm control in each chamber.

While Dwight D. Eisenhower was trouncing Adlai Stevenson for a second time in 1956, Democrats made marginal gains in their House and Senate majorities despite Ike's 457-73 electoral victory with 57.4 percent of the popular vote.

Some analysts suggest Reagan may find his coattails shorter Tuesday than in 1980, even if he wins by a record margin. Four years ago, the GOP won control of the Senate for the first time in over a quarter-century, taking seven of nine contests decided by less than 2 percent of the vote.

But most oddsmakers say the Democrats will hold their own — and perhaps pick up a few Senate seats.

REAGAN

Reagan and his wife Nancy plan to vote at Solvang near their Santa Ynez Mountains ranch before returning to Los Angeles Tuesday evening for a Republican Party celebration.

Reagan flew to California Sunday evening after rallies in St. Louis and Chicago and a brief, hastily scheduled stop in Minnesota — Reagan's only campaign visit to Democratic nominee Walter F. Mondale's home state this year.

Reagan campaign director Ed Rollins cited polls which reported Reagan and Mondale even in Minnesota, and said the campaign was making last-minute shifts "to try to win everything," in a potential 50-state sweep in Tuesday's voting.

"We just came from Milwaukee and felt that I just couldn't fly by Minnesota particularly when I know our opponent is spending so much time in California," Reagan told a crowd at the Rochester, Minn., airport.

A few hours after Reagan's brief stop in Minnesota, Mondale was on his way to Los Angeles for his sixth campaign visit to Reagan's home state since Labor Day.

But while Reagan's Minnesota appearance dramatized the president's rising hopes on the Democratic nominee's home turf, Mondale's final California visit was an attempt to stop Reagan's growing momentum in the biggest state on Mondale's must-win list.

In his final pre-election survey published Friday, pollster Mervin Field reported Reagan leading Mondale by 55 percent to 39 percent in California, a six-point increase in Reagan's margin since early October.

Field reported Reagan leading in every age group and in every region of the state except the heavily Democratic San Francisco Bay area.

The poll also reported three out of every 10 California Democrats supporting the Republican president, who has never lost an election in this heavily Democratic state, while only one Republican in 20 favored Mondale.

Campaigning earlier Sunday in the Midwest, Reagan softened his Saturday declaration that taxes would only be raised "over my dead body." And he said he shouldn't have made jokes before a radio broadcast last August about bombing the Soviet Union.

Reagan refused to flatly rule out the possibility of taxing unemployment benefits and workers compensation or eliminating deductions for state and local income taxes.

But, he said, "it would have to be proven to me that there is some excuse for doing such a thing," adding that he didn't see why the government "should go through the extensive process" of cutting taxes and then take the tax cut back.

"I have no idea...anything of that kind will be recommended to me," Reagan said, in reference to a tax simplification study now under way at the Treasury Department which could include eliminating major deductions.

Reagan said his controversial joke last summer about bombing the Soviets was "a satirical blast at those trying to paint me as a warmonger," but that "it was intended in private for a few people" and should not have been reported "worldwide in such a way that it could create an incident."

Before one of his weekly radio shows last summer, Reagan jokingly said before the broadcast aired, "...My fellow Americans. I'm pleased to tell you today that I've signed legislation that will outlaw Russia forever. We begin bombing in five minutes."

MONDALE

Now all that remains after hundreds of days on the road and countless speeches is a rally in Union Square in downtown Los Angeles and the flight home to vote in Minnesota. But in the last two weeks Mondale has had the chance he sought to deliver his "summation to the jury," and to underscore the bedrock theme of his campaign: "Government should be founded on justice and ruled by compassion and fairness."

From the pulpit of a black Baptist church in Memphis Sunday morning, Mondale said Reagan campaigns behind a false face of television commercials depicting America as a place solely of "puppy dogs and picket fences and jelly beans and pen pals."

"By their fruits ye shall know them," Mondale recited from the Bible. "And the fruits of this administration have been the grapes of wrath."

The Reagan administration has catered to the wealthy and giant corporations "but can't hear the cry of the hungry child in the streets," he said.

It has ignored or made worse, he said, the plight of "the broken, disappointed people who live in the shadows of life, the people who are just totally unable to care for themselves."

"The one thing we can't afford to be is brutal, unkind, uncaring, vicious to the poor in America," the Democratic candidate said.

In McAllen, Texas, Mondale told a largely Hispanic audience that filled a convention center and spilled outside to listen to his voice over a public address system that as president he would appoint the first Hispanic-American to the Cabinet.

At Corpus Christi, Mondale's campaign put together a spectacular political show tied to the memory of Harry S. Truman's upset victory in 1948.

An airplane circled over the crowd packed into face-to-face grandstands towing a banner reading: Truman 48 — Mondale 84.

A rainbow of colored signs filled the stands, balloons soared into the Texas sky, Mexican bands played and singer Jose Feliciano sang "Come on Mondale, light our fire," and chanted: "No more years."

FUGITIVE

Ms. Curzi, also known as Barbara Colombaro, and Ms. Gros, 30, were charged with harboring a fugitive, said Webster.

The New York Daily News reported today that Levasseur, Williams and Manning were also suspected by the FBI of leading a terrorist group called the United Freedom Front, which has claimed responsibility for as many as 17 bombings in New York City and Washington, D.C. The first bombing claimed by the organization, which among other things opposes U.S. involvement in Central America, occurred shortly after Lamonaco's slaying, the newspaper said.

Levasseur and his wife were arrested about 10:30 a.m. in Deerfield, a rural area in Portage County about 50 miles southeast of Cleveland. Their three children were turned over to local authorities.

Three children of Laaman and Ms. Curzi were also turned over to juvenile authorities.

The search for Williams and Manning cost well over $1 million, said Col. Clinton L. Pagano, New Jersey state police superintendent. Troopers followed leads into Canada in their most intense manhunt since the kidnapping of Charles A. Lindbergh's infant from his New Jersey home in 1932, Pagano said.

Pagano, who flew to Ohio after the arrests were made to continue searching for the Mannings, said the murder of Lamonaco, shot eight times beside Interstate 80 after he stopped a car for a routine traffic check, is the only unsolved killing of a New Jersey state trooper.

In one of the bombings linked to the Melville-Jackson group, at a Boston courthouse in 1976, 21 people were injured including a man who lost both his legs. Other explosions rocked a power company, National Guard trucks and an empty jetliner the same year.

Authorities allege the group also is responsible for the bank robberies in Maine, central New York and Vermont this year.

SANDINISTAS

"Up until now, we only have to be sorry for the death of one policeman," Fiallos said, referring to a policeman killed in northern Matagalpa province in a rebel mortar attack on a vehicle carrying electoral police.

The government radio, the Voice of Nicaragua, reported Sunday afternoon that anti-Sandinista rebels tried to surround La Dalia, a village 150 miles northwest of the capital, but were driven away by Sandinista troops. There were no reports of casualties, and no independent confirmation of the attack.

There also was no confirmation of a report by the Soviet news agency Tass that 400 anti-Sandinista rebels failed in an attack across the Honduran border before the voting began.

In Costa Rica, a bomb exploded Sunday night under the car of Nicaraguan rebel leader Alfonso Robelo Callejas, police said. He escaped with only a superficial wound but a 23-year-old woman riding with him was hospitalized for leg injuries, police said.

Nicaraguan voters began lining up before the polls opened at 7 a.m. Many wore T-shirts with Sandinista slogans such as "My vote is for the Front."

Anticipating victory, Sandinistas began exploding fireworks in Managua about an hour before polls closed at 6 p.m. and continued throughout the evening. Hundreds of Sandinistas gathered in Managua's Plaza of the Revolution for a victory dance.

Ortega and his wife, Rosario Murrillo, voted near their home in Managua's elegant Bolonia neighborhood.

"This is a historic experience, not only for me, but also for the people of Nicaragua," Ortega said. He told reporters that several members of local electoral councils had been killed by rebels in recent days, but gave no details.

Despite the certainty of victory, the Sandinistas may fail because of the lack of a strong opposition to gain the credibility they hoped the election would bring to counter declining support among Western nations.

MY FELLOW MIDLANDERS:

Last February, I began a long, tough campaign to become your next Sheriff. My commitment was tested when my right to have a position on the primary ballot was questioned. But I went all the way to the Texas Supreme Court to get that position to come before you as a candidate.

In May, I earned the opportunity to be the Republican candidate for Sheriff. I am proud of that strong vote of confidence, and have willingly accepted the responsibility of properly representing the Party during this campaign.

Today, I am even more committed to bringing new leadership to the Sheriff's office. The issues I have identified during my campaign are important. The goals I have outlined can and must be achieved. My approach will be simple, common sense management.

I will recruit and keep the best qualified, most highly motivated officers I can find. I will train them to do their jobs competently and confidently. I will give the proper direction, support, and respect to each individual officer so that they always strive to improve in serving you. You expect nothing less for your tax dollars.

There are three qualifications you should expect of your Sheriff. First is character. A Sheriff must be an example of integrity and professionalism to the officers who serve with him and the officers of other agencies. Second, your Sheriff must have excellent credentials developed by extensive experience and education. And he must have the common sense to make tough decisions at critical times. Third, he must be sincerely committed with all his heart to serve all the people.

I sincerely believe that I am the best candidate. I trust that I have provided you sufficient information and the reasons for you to draw the same conclusion. I only know that I have done my very best--just as I will do if you elect me to be your Sheriff.

My application for the job now rests with you.

Thank you.

Gary Painter

Gary Painter

The Gary Painter Family.

P.S. To the many, people who have supported me throughout this campaign, thank you. Your encouragement to me and my family has been felt deeply and will never be forgotten. Please join me to watch the election returns tomorrow night at the Holiday Inn Country Villa (Holidome), 4300 West Highway 80.

Doggett doesn't run from fight or Mondale

McALLEN (AP) — Lloyd Doggett says he doesn't run from a fight or Walter Mondale, even though Doggett needs Reagan voters to win his race for U.S. Senate.

Doggett appeared Sunday before an enthusiastic, mostly Hispanic crowd of 3,000 who turned out for an appearence by Mondale.

"All week long I've been asked if I'd show up with Walter Mondale. I don't know why they've asked that question, because I've never run from a fight," Doggett said.

After Doggett told the crowd that the Reagan administration has left the Valley in an econimic "twilight zone," Mondale promised a program to increase employment in the depressed region.

"The first thing I'm going to do when I get elected, Lloyd Bentsen and your new senator, Lloyd Doggett, and Gov. Mark White and my old friend (Rep.) Kika de la Garza, we're going to sit down and we're going to work out a program that starts out the day after the inaugural that puts the Valley back on its feet, to employ the people of this region and bring prosperity here once again," Mondale told the crowd.

Agriculture Commissioner Jim Hightower told the crowd to "get a wheelbarrow and take (friends) to the polls if you have to."

He accused Reagan of being in "dreamland."

"He thinks he's going to carry Texas," Hightower said. "You're going to be Ronnie Reagan's wake up call!"

State Treasurer Anne Richards drew cheers when she said the closest the Reagan administration had come to civil rights was "when Nancy Reagan sat on Mr. T's lap.

Gramm ends campaign as fervent Reagan ally

HOUSTON (AP) — After 14 months and some 2,500 public appearances, Republican U.S. Senate candidate Phil Gramm winds up his campaign today with stops in Texas' three largest cities and a climactic rally in his hometown of College Station.

And Gramm, who has campaigned as a fervent ally of the Reagan administration, was planning a final appearance tonight in Houston with Vice President George Bush, who returns to vote in Tuesday's election.

"I will be relieved if we win," Gramm said, before heading for Houston, Dallas, and San Antonio. "It's been a long campaign.

"I have campaigned hard and I could go on forever if the alternative was losing. But I don't think that's the alternative."

Gramm said he had no regrets about the campaign and would not change anything if he could.

"I think we've run a good campaign and I think we're right on the issues," he said.

Gramm leads Democrat Lloyd Doggett from anywhere from 10 to 20 percentage points in several statewide polls.

"I think we've presented to the people of Texas a philosphy and an approach to government that has worked and will work," Gramm said.

On Sunday, Gramm concentrated on agricultural issues in stops ranging across West Texas from milo fields in Plainview and Amarillo to a sheep farm in San Angelo.

Gramm, who advocates a free market, nonetheless said he backed price supports like the Wool Act because "a free market really doesn't exist."

His outdoor appearances on Sunday were staged for the benefit of television crews, even to the extent that supporters tried to orchestrate the movements of a sheep herd so the candidate could be photographed in front of the sheep.

The sheep, however, would not cooperate.

Gramm is proposing an overhaul of federal farm legislation and suggested a three-prong program generally based on supply management, aggressive marketing and the breaking down of foreign trade barriers.

"Effective supply management would allow farmers to make a living," he said, adding that agriculture "has not shared in the Reagan recovery."

Bush ends re-election bid with Texas campaign blitz

EL PASO (AP) — The day before the general election, Vice President George Bush is winding down his re-election bid with a Texas campaign blitz largely on behalf of Lone Star State candidates.

Bush told a crowd of about 1,000 Sunday night that the country needs four more years of Reagan administration policies and that it needs to bolster the Republican White House by electing GOP House and Senate candidates.

In El Paso, Bush campaigned for Republican congressional candidate Jack Hammond.

Today, the vice president was to travel to Denton to speak on behalf of Dick Armey, who is seeking the 26th Congressional District seat. Bush and his wife, Barbara, also were to visit Amarillo before flying to Houston, where the vice president will vote Tuesday.

At a high school gymnasium rally in El Paso, Bush said the election boils down to "the difference between optimism and pessimism, the difference between hope and stagnation."

"It really adds up to a team choice," the vice president said. He said that the Democratic team members are presidential and vice presidential challengers Walter Mondale and Geraldine Ferraro, along with House Speaker Thomas "Tip" O'Neill, U.S. Senate candidate Lloyd Doggett and U.S. Rep. Ron Coleman of El Paso.

Bush said the Republican team was made of up himself, President Reagan and Hammond and U.S. Senate candidate Phil Gramm.

FORMER DEPUTIES SPEAK OUT

As some of the former Employees-Captains, Deputies and Secretaries-of the Midland County Sheriff's Office, we strongly recommed that you as voters elect Gary Painter as our next sheriff.

We are among the almost 200 qualified professionals who have left the Sheriff's Office during the last eight years. We were dissatisfied with the management practices of the incumbent sheriff. We believe a change is necessary, and we believe Gary Painter to be the best man to give you the taxpayers this needed change.

Only our names are on record with the newspaper. But we know that we also speak for many more in the law enforcement community-officers of the Police Department, Constable's Office, and Department of Public Safety.

We strongly urge you to cast your ballot for new, common sense leadership

Shuttle Discovery countdown begins

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — The countdown began today for Wednesday's launch of space shuttle Discovery on a mission in which astronauts will release two communications satellites and recover two others that were sent into errant orbits.

"It's an exciting mission," commander Rick Hauck told reporters as he and his shuttle crew arrived here Sunday to make final preparations for launch.

Pointing in the direction of the launch pad, three miles away, Hauck added: "We're looking forward to climbing into that machine in a couple days, and I guarantee you we're going to have a lot of fun. We're very excited about taking two satellites into space...and bringing back two others that have been in wayward orbits."

The other crew members are pilot David Walker and mission specialists Anna Fisher, Joe Allen and Dale Gardner. Mrs. Fisher is the fourth American woman and the first mother named to a space flight. She and her astronaut husband Bill are parents of a year-old daughter.

The countdown started at 2 a.m. EST when test conductor Jerry Crute issued the traditional "call to stations" that summoned crews to the launch pad and the control center.

Liftoff for the 14th shuttle mission, the second for Discovery, is set for 8:18 a.m. Wednesday. The ship is to return to Earth eight days later, landing on a runway at this spaceport.

On the second and third days of the flight, the astronauts will release commercial communications satellites owned by Telesat of Canada and Hughes Communications Services Inc.

The deployments will empty the cargo bay, clearing the way for the retrieval of the Palapa B2 and Westar 6 satellites. These payloads were released successfully by a shuttle crew last February, but faulty booster rockets injected them into useless orbits.

Hauck and Walcovery through a series of complex maneuvers to within 35 feet of each satellite — Palapa on the fifth day and Westar on the seventh.

Allen and Gardner are to capture the satellites during two space walks expected to last six hours each.

Drug-fighting group moves into slum area

BOSTON (AP) — Members of a drug-fighting group who are taking turns living in a slum say they already see signs their presence might help the neighborhood.

For the next two weeks, the temporary tenants plan to expose drug dealers to police and reporters, counsel children against drugs and make the street a little safer, said Georgette Watson, a member of Drop-a-Dime, Report-Crime.

The program in Roxbury, a mostly black area, began Friday when a white suburban couple took the first turn in a one-bedroom apartment. Ms. Watson and two other group members moved in Saturday.

"I was leaning against the bedroom window when I saw two gentlemen outside, one saying, 'I got to keep low. With these people in the area, I don't even want them to see me with a can of beer in my hand,'" Ms. Watson said Sunday.

"It really felt good to hear that," she said.

The first nights passed without incident, but "everybody was waiting for us to get blown up, for something to happen," she said, laughing.

There have been no threats, but police have said dealers could harm the group. Patrolmen have orders to keep an eye on the drug-fighters while they stay in the apartment loaned them by the Boston Housing Authority.

Already the group has nagged one building owner to put locks on his project, which houses a "shooting gallery" frequented by drug addicts who "shoot" heroin and smoke marijuana, Ms. Watson said.

"There is no reason to pay that amount of rent and have no locks," she said. "The tenants doing drugs were evicted, but junkies are still coming there from force of habit."

The group visited the basement "gallery" with reporters Friday night, finding empty marijuana bags and liquor bottles, human waste and bloody rags, she said.

Sikh writer asks: After killings, can Sikh say 'I am an Indian?'

NEW DELHI, India (AP) — The brutal killings of hundreds of Sikhs by Hindu rioters following the assassination of Prime Minister Indira Gandhi appears to have convinced many Sikhs of the need for a separate homeland.

"Can a Sikh really say 'I am an Indian' after all this?" asked Khushwant Singh, India's best-known Sikh writer and legislator.

"What happened this week was genocide of Sikhs," he said in an interview. "We are like Jews in Nazi Germany."

A nationwide anti-Sikh rampage of arson, looting and rioting erupted after Mrs. Gandhi was shot dead Wednesday by two men identified as Sikh members of her security guard.

Mobs of Hindus burned and looted Sikh shops and homes, attacked them on trains and buses, beat up Sikh men and set them afire. The violence took more than 1,000 lives, most of them believed to be Sikhs.

"This is lunatic — for the innocent are being harmed," said Arun Shourie, a well-known Hindu political commentator. "It is short-sighted for what is done will be avenged in Punjab."

Most of India's 13 million Sikhs already were angry over the army assault last June on their holiest shrine, the Golden Temple in the city of Amritsar. Hundreds of Sikh militants were killed and the complex heavily damaged in the attack.

Mrs. Gandhi ordered the military action to crush Sikh extremists using the shrine as headquarters for a violent campaign for greater religious and political autonomy.

"We've had enough," said Singh, who contended that this week's slaughter had prompted "many, many" Sikhs to support the demand for Khalistan — a proposed independent homeland in Punjab for India's 13 million Sikhs, who comprise about 2 percent of the country's 730 million people.

Mrs. Nirmaljeet Kayr, a member of the Sikh community in New Delhi, weeps into her sari, Sunday, in a Sikh temple, where she and many other Sikhs took shelter from rioting Hindu mobs that have destroyed many Sikh houses in the past days.

Several other Sikhs said in interviews that they had not felt the need for a separate state until the rioting but now believed Khalistan was a valid concept.

Narender Singh, a Sikh mechanic who lost his home in Hindu attacks, said he wants to go to Punjab, "wipe out every Hindu" there and live in a place where Hindus could never threaten his life again.

"I am beginning to realize the meaning of Khalistan," he said.

Khushwant Singh, who took refuge in the Swedish Embassy for one night to avoid attacks by Hindus, said for the first time in his life he was seriously thinking about moving to Punjab from New Delhi "to live in security among my own people."

Prit Pal Singh, a Sikh truck driver whose home in a southern Delhi colony was burned down by Hindus, had the same idea.

"They took away everything I had," he said. "Now I am left with no alternatives but to go to Punjab where I would be protected."

Nearly 300 Sikhs in eastern India fled Sunday into Bangladesh to escape possible violence, the Bangladesh newspaper Ittefaq reported today.

Khushwant Singh said the Indian government had approached jailed leaders of the Sikhs' Akali Dal political party this week, asking them to make statements to pacify Sikhs who had suffered from Hindu attacks.

CIA insists abuses in Nicaragua 'rare'

WASHINGTON (AP) — The CIA is aware some Nicaraguan rebel soldiers have committed atrocities inside Nicaragua, but the spy agency insists abuses are rare and kept under tight control, administration and congressional officials say.

"You do have your My Lai's down there," said one administration official, referring the 1968 massacre in Vietnam carried out by U.S. troops. "They (the rebels) are a pretty tough bunch."

While arguing that "you can't fight a palatable war," the official, who spoke on condition he wouldn't be identified, added: "Did the agency find them doing some unacceptable things? I'd give you a resounding 'yes.'"

The best-known case involved a rebel leader, called Commander Suicide, who went on a rampage in mid-1983 after his wife, also a rebel, was killed, several officials said. They said Commander Suicide and some of his troops raped peasant women and murdered civilians.

When he returned to Honduras near the end of 1983, Commander Suicide was placed in a makeshift jail in eastern Honduras, court-martialed and executed, according to one U.S. official familiar with the case. Edgar Chamorro, propaganda chief for the Nicaraguan Democratic Force or FDN, the largest U.S.-backed rebel group, also confirmed the official's story.

In an interview, Chamorro said he protested the execution to a CIA officer who was advising the FDN but was told that the action was proper because the court-martial had found Commander Suicide "guilty of many abuses."

Administration officials knowledgeable about the Nicaraguan fighting said they have received numerous reports about other atrocities allegedly committed by FDN forces, but that only Commander Suicide's rampage has been fully corroborated.

Most of the other allegations come from Nicaragua's Sandinista government or from American missionaries living in Nicaragua who are opposed to Reagan administration policies. But some allegations also have come from conservative Nicaraguans who oppose the FDN, one official said.

The Nicaraguan government claims 854 civilians have been "assassinated" by rebel forces since fighting began in 1981.

Two weeks ago, Chamorro said it was the FDN's "practice" to execute government officials who are captured and deemed "criminals" by the rebel commander after consultation with the local populace. But Chamorro said he could not estimate how many such executions were carried out.

FDN president Adolfo Calero, however, has repeatedly denied such charges, claiming that "terrorism...is something we haven't done."

Alleged atrocities committed by the FDN have become one focus of congressional inquiries into the CIA's production of a rebel manual that recommends the "selective use of violence" to "neutralize" Nicaraguan officials.

In Winterset, Iowa, on Saturday, President Reagan was asked if that would imply using force or violence to remove people from office. "No, you just say to the fella who's sittin' there in the office, 'You're not in the office any more.'"

Reagan said public outcry over the manual was "all a great big scare." He contended "there was nothing in that manual that had anything to do with assassinations."

An Oct. 31 article in The Washington Post said CIA concerns over reports last year that FDN forces were indiscriminately killing civilians prompted production of the manual, which opposes "explicit terror" against the general population.

Administration officials interviewed by The Associated Press confirmed that the manual was partly intended to persuade FDN troops not to engage in indiscriminate killings, but they added that a larger goal was to make the rebels more politically adept in their dealings with the Nicaraguan people.

One official said that a year ago, when the manual was produced, the CIA was trying "to get control over what the FDN was doing" by increasing the number of U.S. advisers to about two dozen and providing tactical direction to military operations.

Another administration official said the rebel fighters are generally young peasants, not easily controlled by either CIA officers or FDN leaders, who remain back in Honduran base camps when the troops make forays into Nicaragua.

Priest probably beaten before his death

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — Church sources say pro-Solidarity priest Jerzy Popieluszko may have been severely beaten before his death, and an official who attended the autopsy said the priest's body was bound around the neck, hands and feet when it was dumped in a reservoir.

Priests at Popieluszko's St. Stanislaw Kostka Church said Sunday they had been told the slain cleric's hands were badly battered, as if he had tried to shield his face from blows.

One Roman Catholic source with close ties to the church hierarchy said participants in the autopsy had reported that the cause of death was strangulation. The government has blamed three secret police officers for the killing.

The official who observed the autopsy refused to give the cause of Popieluszko's death or say if the 37-year-old Roman Catholic priest was dead before he was thrown into the water following his Oct. 19 abduction. The body was recovered last Tuesday in a reservoir 80 miles north of Warsaw.

However, the official, who spoke on condition of anonymity, said he could confirm that Popieluszko's feet were bound with one rope and that another rope bound his hands and then ran up his back and around his neck, tied so the priest would choke if he struggled.

THIS IS THE RECORD

When I was sworn in as Sheriff January, 1977, the MCSO (Midland County Sheriff's Office) was authorized 32 officers and one secretary.

Today, MCSO is authorized 54 officers, eight secretaries and four civilian personnel in the Communications Division.

In January, 1977, the MCSO had six automobiles. Other than red lights mounted on the front bumpers, NOT ONE OF THEM WAS EQUIPPED WITH EMERGENCY EQUIPMENT, such as sirens, first aid kits, decals, top red lights or other identification as a police vehicle.

Today, we have 26 vehicles — all with necessary emergency equipment depending on assignment.

In January, 1977, there were two unmarked patrol units driven by three officers in civilian clothes.

Today, there are seven marked patrol units and 14 uniformed officers assigned to the Patrol Division. On emergency calls, our average response time is 7.2 minutes. For all types of calls our average response time is 17.4 minutes.

In January, 1977, the MCSO had no Narcotics Unit, no Crime Prevention Unit and no Juvenile Section. The record system was totally inadequate, and teletype equipment was antiquated. No officer training programs existed. Very few of the officers had a college education.

Today, we have a Narcotics/Intelligence Division, a Crime Prevention Unit, a Crime Stoppers Program and a Juvenile Section. Teletype and radio equipment are modern and up-to-date. Nineteen of our officers have bachelor or master degrees. Twelve have associate degrees. Five of our supervisors have completed the three month FBI Law Enforcement Academy course in Quantico, Virginia. Our officers have attended the DPS schools in Austin for inservice training in homicide investigation, crime scene photography, fingerprint classification, etc.

In 1976 the officer turnover rate was 69 percent.

In 1983 it was 27 percent.

During the recent boom, Midland County grew at a tremendous rate. Criminal activity increased also, peaking in mid 1983, in 1976 the MCSO made 34 felony arrests and cleared 40 cases. In 1983 the MCSO made 154 felony arrests, and cleared 287 felony cases. Burglaries have declined 14.2% in 1984 in rural Midland County.

Salaries have been increased to attract and keep better qualified officers. We have continuing education and training in crime detection and crime prevention, criminal investigation, and arrest. We have a physical fitness program.

This is the record and on the record I ask for your write-in vote in November.

Lutheran pastor defies court order by continuing to preach

Douglas Roth

CLAIRTON, Pa. (AP) — A Lutheran pastor who defied a court order to preach in his church says he'll remain in the building until Sunday.

"If they're going to arrest me, they'll arrest me from the altar," said the Rev. D. Douglas Roth after preaching Sunday. He was suspended from the ministry for his outspoken support of controversial pro-labor groups, then barred by an injunction from preaching at the Trinity Lutheran Church here.

A complaint from church authorities would be needed for a hearing on whether the injunction was violated and whether Roth should be fined or jailed, said Judge Emil E. Narick, who issued the temporary injunction Friday.

American reaches top of Everest

Phil Ershler

SEATTLE (AP) — The first American to reach the peak of Mount Everest via the Great Couloir says other mountaineers in his 12-member team were turned back by brutal winds and intense cold.

Phil Ershler, 33, of Bellevue, reached the 29,028-foot summit on Oct. 20, having climbed on a route beginning on the Chinese side of the mountain.

Team leader Lou Whitakker said conditions on the mountain included 100 mph winds and air so frigid it froze his right eyelid closed and partially closed his left eye.

University develops new blood test

WINSTON-SALEM, N.C. (AP) — Wake Forest University has applied for a patent for an inexpensive blood test that researchers say could help detect a parasite causing widespread health problems in the Third World, officials said.

Tests for the disease, called cysticercosis, cost about $300, but the new test would cost about 10 cents, making it useable in undeveloped countries, said Dr. Raymond E. Kuhn, a Wake Forest researcher who helped develop the test.

Cysticercosis, which occurs when a pork tapeworm invades the brain, is common in many nations in Central and South America, Africa and Asia, said Kuhn.

Corporate contributions increase

NEW YORK (AP) — A survey of 503 major U.S. companies shows they gave an estimated $3 billion to charity in 1983, about 7 percent more than they contributed in 1982.

Gaining a larger proportion of contributions were such programs as community improvement, housing, jobs, transportation and the environment, the study found.

The survey, released by the Conference Board, a private, nonprofit organization funded by businesses, indicates the share for health and human services dipped from 34 percent in 1980 to 28.7 percent in 1983.

Small labor pool hurting employers

BOSTON (AP) — It's an employment problem that has Massachusetts officials smiling — a glut of Christmas jobs and a paucity of workers to fill them.

But the state's 3.7 percent unemployment rate is frustrating for employers in the eastern section of the state who will need an estimated 7,000 retail jobs in the upcoming holiday season.

Faced with a smaller-than-normal labor pool, Bloomingdale's is offering a $25 bounty for new employees, Bradlee's has radio ads for Christmas workers and some employers are busing in workers from other sections of the state. Randy Bock has 75 openings at his three McDonald's restaurants. And Doug Whyte, manager of a nearby Wendy's restaurant, is looking for 15 workers.

In Framingham, a bedroom community west of Boston, a 2.3 percent unemployment rate has made it hard to fill low-paying jobs.

Governor decries temple vandalism

MANALAPAN, N.J. (AP) — Gov. Thomas H. Kean, U.S. Sen. Frank Lautenberg and other participants at a rally that drew 3,000 people here decried the vandalism of two synagogues and vowed that bigotry would not be tolerated.

Vandals used a bulldozer left on the property by a contractor to drive through a wall of Temple Beth Shalom last month, and a few months earlier, a Molotov cocktail was hurled in front of the Congregation Sons of Israel.

"We will not permit any individual or group to thwart the promise of individual freedom," Lautenberg said at the rally Sunday. "It cannot happen in this country."

Baby Fae to receive full-strength formula

LOMA LINDA, Calif. (AP) — Baby Fae, in her 10th day with a baboon's heart, was "right on target" and reaching the point where she could receive full-strength formula for the first time since her historic transplant, doctors said.

"She's still doing about the same, which is fine," Loma Linda University Medical Center spokeswoman Tammy Wood said Sunday. "The doctors hope to have her on full-strength formula. Her formula's been at three-fourths strength."

Ms. Wood said the 3-week-old infant, whose condition remains listed as serious but stable, weighed 2,200 grams, or about five pounds.

"She's right on target, according to her physicians," said hospital spokesman Richard Weismeyer.

Doctors said Baby Fae shows no signs of rejecting the organ that doctors implanted in a historic attempt to save her life Oct. 26. Meanwhile, the medical community continued to debate the necessity of the daring transplant performed to remedy Baby Fae's underdeveloped heart.

Some doctors say it's too early to declare the operation a success and ethics experts have wondered whether the infant was improperly drafted into science's war to save lives.

Doctors at Loma Linda have contended that Baby Fae, whose real name has been kept secret, was hours from death when Bailey's team conducted the operation and couldn't wait. The crucial tissue-matching with the baboon had already been completed.

The baby, now the longest-lived survivor of an animal-to-human heart transplant, suffered hypoplastic left heart syndrome, a normally lethal birth defect in which the left side of the heart is severely underdeveloped.

Stove better than fireplace

Airtight wood stoves and furnaces have efficiencies ranging around 50 percent to 60 percent, compared to a fireplace's only 5 percent. Thus, wood burned in such a stove or furnace provides 10 times as much usable heat from a cord of wood as a fireplace does.

Reagan's deficit should cost him his job.

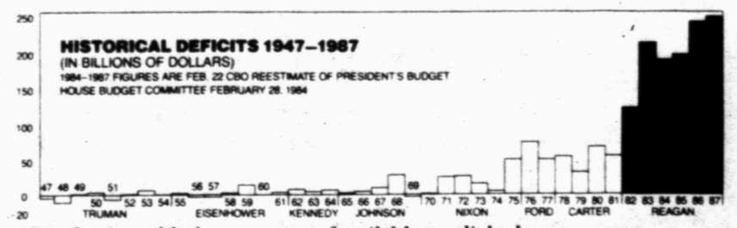

Would your business keep an executive who spent $4.00 for every $3.00 he brought in?

Well that's exactly what our Chief Executive has done during his four years in office. His economic policies will soon increase the national debt by $1 trillion. And while the Republicans would like you to believe the Democrats are to blame, the facts say otherwise.

Reagan's economic policies, all alone, will double the total national debt accumulated by every past President for the last 200 years. If President Reagan were in business for himself, he would have to be accountable for that. But unfortunately, the business he's running is ours. He's mortgaging our future and our children's future. Sooner or later we're going to have to pay for it. All of us.

Right now, just the interest owed on the national debt is the equivalent of $200 per family per month. To repay the national debt itself would cost more than $25,000 per family. And in just two years, that total burden per family will jump to $35,000. That's not a Democratic projection. That's a Republican projection. Yet the Republicans keep spending. And spending. And spending.

Instead of decreasing the federal budget, they've increased it. Sure, they've cut a lot of programs. Health programs. Social programs. Education and research programs. Small business programs. But they've added billions to defense programs riddled with wastefulness.

For example, the military paid $430 a piece for simple claw hammers. They spent $1,086.17 each for the small plastic caps that attach to the bottom of chair legs—that's over $4,000 per chair. And the list goes on.

Meanwhile, the deficit has driven real interest rates up to their highest point in history. Even during the late 70's, interest rates were still only 3% over the rate of inflation. During the Reagan administration, rates have gone up to 11% over the inflation rate. Most small businesses can't touch loans at those rates. And even those that can, are being squeezed out of available credit by heavy government borrowing.

President Reagan and the Republicans have not been honest with the American people. They keep bragging about a supposedly renewed economy, yet they offer no plan to balance the budget. In fact, the budgets they've requested are bigger than any Congress, Democrat or Republican, has ever passed. President Reagan's campaign talk about fiscal responsibility was apparently just that. Talk.

The Republicans want us to believe we can live on borrowed money forever. But any business person knows it doesn't work that way.

The future of America is your business. Isn't it time you fired Ronald Reagan?

Vote Democratic
A fair chance for small business.

Stars of peace

Over the past several months there has been a steady stream of concern regarding a potential nuclear exchange and what would follow. It all began about the time the television movie "The Day After" aired, depicting the results of a nuclear exchange, and has been around ever since.

Most recently this concern — which appropriately might be called the "nuclear horror" — was in evidence in the final debate between President Ronald Reagan and Democratic nominee Walter Mondale. The topic was the Strategic Defense Initiative, probably better known as the "Star Wars" missile defense.

Mr. Mondale understandably has attempted to pass himself off as the less likely of the two to cause a nuclear first strike. He staunchly opposes the proposed "Star Wars" defense, contending that would merely militarize space and make a nuclear exchange all the more likely. But would it?

In a recent edition, The Wall Street Journal, one of the nation's most respected newspapers, had this to say, in part, about the "Star Wars" missile defense:

"At this point the American people needed a few basic facts about the 'Star Wars' missile defense. The great communicator didn't give them much help. Someone ought to. So let's start with one little detail: None of the weapons being seriously studied would be armed with nuclear warheads. To repeat: No nuclear warheads...."

That's one revealing fact, but more is needed, and The Journal provided it:

"... The next president and next Congress will have a historic decision to make about strategic posture, and in this election the American voters have the chance to make their contribution. They deserve better from both candidates.

"The technological facts are these: With the improvement in missile accuracies, and particularly with the on-going Soviet deployment of more and more missiles, a first nuclear strike becomes militarily more attractive. By striking first, the Soviets could destroy most of our land-based retaliatory missiles and probably also most of our nuclear-armed aircraft. Missiles aboard submarines would be far more difficult to attack, but will not be invulnerable forever. A president conceivably might be faced with deciding to retaliate with a vastly crippled force, knowing that the Soviets retain more missiles to launch against civilian targets if they so choose.

"At the same time, technological advances make it possible to blunt the first strike by deploying missile defenses and without using nuclear weapons. Most concepts rely on a tiered defense. Space stations that detect missiles and throw steel nets or showers of rocks in their way (or in more advanced versions, destroy them with lasers), ground-guided missiles with super accuracies that can actually collide with missiles as they reenter, Swarmjet systems near our missile silos that shoot a shotgun blast of rockets in the way of a descending warhead."

The essential difference being talked here is between the "Star Wars" defense President Reagan has proposed, which appears to offer a means of self-defense protection for the United States without resorting to nuclear weapons, or Mr. Mondale's preferred reliance on the military strategy known as MAD.

Looking at the two, it's obvious that "Star Wars" offers the greatest chance for Americans in the event of a nuclear exchange. MAD stands for Mutual Assured Destruction, which isn't a particularly pleasant "defense" strategy when one thinks about it.

So if voters are planning to signify their concern for world safety through their votes next Tuesday, the choice appears clear to us. They ought to look to the stars.

CHARLEY REESE

Mondale a kind man, a dangerous

Walter Mondale is a kind man but would be a dangerous president.

That's the best I can say for a man who is part of the well-groomed, well-heeled flotsam in our modern society — the professional politician. Mondale has never in his life done anything but be a professional politician.

Charley Reese

What a professional politician spends his time doing are cultivating friends who can help him and bartering his public duties for votes. Mondale has never been controversial because he has spent his life trying to please people so they will vote for him.

Even Democrats admit that his campaign organization is a mess. And why is that? Because of the very traits which make Mondale unsuited for the job of president: Indecisiveness, lack of fortitude, bad judgment, and compulsion to please the last person he talks to.

It demonstrated poor judgment on Mondale's part to fire Charlie Manatt, the National Democratic Committee chairman, on the eve of the California convention. Manatt is a Californian. Anybody but Mondale would have known that California Democrats would go through the roof. But what did Mondale do? Did he stick by his decision, for which he must surely have had some reason? No. He reversed himself the next morning. Then he repeated the process with Bert Lance whom he appointed general campaign manager and later eased out.

I will give you a specific example of how this combination of bad judgment and timidity can be dangerous in a president. Both Ronald Reagan and Mondale have said that MiG jets in Nicaragua are unacceptable. Reagan has indicated that if the Sandinistas import MiGs, the U.S. will take them out. Mondale has said he would impose a quarantine.

Now consider the consequences of the two choices. A U.S. military strike against planes in Nicaragua would at worst involve a short war against a shaky regime. Nicaragua is not a vital interest of the Soviet Union. They see it as simply a freebie. If we allow a communist regime, fine; if we take it out, the Soviets will merely make good propaganda use of the affair. But with a military strike against Nicaragua, there is no world crisis.

Mondale seems confused as to what a quarantine is but if it were to be effective it would have to involve a naval blockade. A naval blockade puts the United States and the Soviet Union into a face-to-face confrontation. It's another Cuban missile crisis only this time the Soviets are enormously more powerful than they were in 1962.

Fifty MiGs in Nicaragua are not worth a nuclear war, not to us and not to the Soviets, but if you challenge Soviet ships on the high seas, you've got a different ballgame. Now you've given the Soviet Union no face-saving out. Now the stakes are not 50 planes or a two-bit regime in an unimportant country. Now the stakes are the prestige and credibility of the Soviet Union and the United States with the whole world watching.

That's why weakness is dangerous. For lack of the guts to blow up 50 airplanes, Mondale would blunder into a confrontation that could blow up the world.

I do not wish to be unfair to Mondale. I think he is a well-intentioned man, but I'm telling you sincerely he would be a dangerous president. He does not understand the Soviet Union. He said so himself as vice president. He does not understand force and when to use it, how to use it wisely, and when not to use it.

Reagan does. When he saw that his plan to restore unity to Lebanon wasn't working, he pulled out. That's a virtue. That's how you avoid Vietnams. Despite three terrorist bombings, Reagan has not let that and all the heat from partisan Democrats and too-hawkish Republicans goad him into attacking Syria or Iran.

A strong man like Reagan does not have to use force to prove that he is strong. He's strong enough to not fight when that's appropriate. A weak man like Mondale usually runs at the wrong time and fights at the wrong time just to prove he isn't weak. In today's world, that is not the kind of man you want in the White House.

Media driving away 'the best'

WASHINGTON — In the American tradition, the election campaign has been a period of limited anarchy, a time of frivolity and flummery, of hype and hypocrisy.

Jack Anderson

The beleaguered candidates have passed through the political gantlet, pummeled by the opposition and ragged by the press. The ordeal seems calculated to drive the best and the brightest out of public life. Fewer and fewer qualified people are willing to venture into the swamp.

The way the press pried into Geraldine Ferraro's family finances, I'm told, put her through great personal travail. Intimates say that her marriage was severely strained, that she sometimes wondered whether the prize was worth the price.

Sources close to President Reagan tell me he, too, is deeply aggrieved by the press treatment he has been getting.

Certainly, the coverage of the presidential campaign has been unrelenting. Networks and newspapers have presented the candidates alternately as bumbling dunces and political connivers.

George Washington University researchers, who have been monitoring the TV coverage, report that both candidates have been routinely belittled. Early in the campaign, an analysis of 60 news items showed that Walter Mondale got five more negative than positive references and that Ronald Reagan's ratio was an even more negative 12-to-1. The stories emphasized Mondale's "electoral weaknesses" and Reagan's "personal flaws."

Michael Robinson, who directed the study, suggested that as the campaign progressed, the networks practiced "compensatory journalism." The higher Reagan soared in the polls, the worse his TV coverage became. For Mondale, the trend was the reverse — "the worse the polls, the better the press."

By the last week in September, reported Robinson, Mondale "had a decidedly positive personal press image, something one almost never sees on network news." Robinson did not detect any partisan ideological bias, however, except for "a slightly partisan vocabulary." Conservatives were given ideological lables; liberals were not.

Although the researchers didn't analyze the print media, at least one source suggested that the same compensatory practices were evident. He cited only random evidence.

In side-by-side news accounts of the Reagan and Mondale campaigns, for example, The New York Times portrayed Reagan as a tinsel candidate without substance and Mondale as a gritty underdog battling for his convictions.

The Times described Reagan as "wrinkled with age," accused him of "documented factual lapses" and reported, "The Reagan bandwagon is no place for citizens who yearn to hear politicians talking in long paragraphs of issues."

In contrast, the Times described Mondale as "a man of the most decent political impulses" who "has doggedly sought to run an issues-oriented campaign."

Despite forebodings of defeat, reported the Times, "Mr. Mondale has come out swinging. ... His speeches became vivid, his delivery thumping and aggressive." Concluded the Times sadly: "But the irony for Mr. Mondale is that many of the people he cares so deeply about don't seem to be responding."

In my own reporting on politics, I have been as guilty as the next reporter of affronts and impertinences. I have spent the past 37 years in the skeptic's seat, viewing with contempt the politicians' capacity to manage the country.

Perhaps we in the media have been dumping on the government too much, having the effect of a bucket of sand on a grinding machine. We have felt compelled to drive shafts of gloom into the American dream.

STRICTLY PERSONAL: Several readers have expressed concern over economic trends in the expected Reagan second term:

Has inflation really been licked?

Even the president's own economic advisers disagree on this one. Here's what one internal report I've seen has to say: "The disagreements over the course of inflation in the next year remain significant. ... Based on monetary growth over the past year ... some predict that inflation could be considerably higher, perhaps in the range of 7 percent to 9 percent in late 1984 or early 1985."

Weren't the doomsayers predicting a slump in housing and business investment by now?

True, they were. The continued health of the housing and investment areas has baffled the experts. By now, according to an internal analysis, there should have been a transition to spending on plants and equipment. But the continued high interest rates are discouraging such expenditures, and they will also curtail housing and investment spending — but probably not until next year.

Isn't the drop in the prime rate a healthy sign?

The drop of nearly a full percentage point to 12 percent in a month is not to be sneezed at. But it may merely reflect the Federal Reserve Board's healthy respect for politics and the anticipated re-election of an incumbent administration.

Another View:

Callousness to poor

Once again, the Reagan administration is trying to undermine the Legal Services Corp., the federal program designed to safeguard the rights of the poor. On the last day of the fiscal year, under cover of procedural darkness, the corporation distributed more than $1 million in grants to groups interested not in representing the poor, but in advancing the policies of this administration.

One $337,000 grant went to a Virginia-based law center that opposes court decisions expanding civil liberties, calls for cutting back the jurisdiction of federal courts, urges state court judges to defy Supreme Court rulings on the Bill of Rights and advocates "demolition" of Legal Services.

A similarly substantial grant was awarded to an Indianapolis outfit that intervenes in litigation on behalf of severely handicapped infants. Though these Baby Doe cases raise profound issues, they are not primarily poor people's issues — and poor people are, by law, the Legal Services Corp.'s exclusive concern.

These Baby Does don't need additional legal help; they're already protected by the courts, which routinely appoint counsel to represent them. Providing legal assistance to the disabled indigent generally, not just to severely handicapped infants, would make sense — indeed, before the Reagan administration took office, plans for such special help were in the works — but that's not how this money will be spent.

This show of contempt is only the most recent assault on Legal Services. The administration has relied on a procession of board members, so partisan and so lacking in competence that not even the Republican-controlled Senate would approve them, to try to shut the program down, to slash its funds, and to deny lawyers in the field of authority to provide effective representation. For its follies, the corporation's board has been slapped down by Congress and scolded by the courts. Now it's squandering its budget by funding its friends on the right. What new callousness to the poor lies downs the road?

Democrats 'pulling' Ferraro

BALTIMORE — Just what has happened to Rep. Geraldine Ferraro's campaign over the past three months was summarized in the comment of a prominent Democrat as his eye roved over a ballroom at Martin's West Hall packed with Democrats who had paid $200,000 to hear her speak: "It's the organization that pulled this crowd, not so much love for Gerry."

Rowland Evans

Robert Novak

It was supposed to be the other way around: the first female nominee for vice president pulling the organization. The party's sense of disenchantment was reflected by Ferraro's remarkable revelation during the campaign's final week that she "probably would have said no"-to running for vice president on the Democratic ticket if she had known what lay in store for her.

That raised the question whether Walter Mondale would have asked her if he had known what was in store for him. High hopes in heady days last summer that "love for Gerry" would provide the political adrenalin Mondale needed against President Reagan have long since faded.

Even in her own state of New York, Democratic politicians say privately that at the very best Ferraro has been a slight plus for the ticket. That includes even Gov. Mario Cuomo, who pushed hard to get her on the ticket. Except for the Pacific Coast states, her net electoral impact appears to be imperceptible in the swamp of the Mondale campaign.

This condition is no sin for vice-presidential nominees. They are an easily-forgettable breed and seldom change an election beyond their own states. But because Ferraro is the first woman ever picked for a presidential ticket, she was supposed to be different. The fact that she was not does not mean she will be the last woman selected for vice president in the forseeable future. It suggests, however, that she could be the last nominee who will be selected solely because she is a woman.

The change in mood is reflected not merely in reaction to Ferraro but in her personal performance. When we traveled with her from New York to Cleveland in August she was feisty and dynamic. Here in Baltimore beginning the campaign's final week, her speech was pedestrian. Earlier in the day in Manhattan, a Democratic insider who heard her speak to the Kehilath Jeshruyn synagogue commented to us: "She's got no passion in her talk."

But the most melancholy aspect of Ferraro's final campaign days were her comments in an unprecedented appearance on the Phil Donahue program. The fact that she made a special trip to Chicago for that purpose reflects Ferraro's problems.

Her decision to offer Donahue a no-holds-barred hour of questions was designed to give her the widest possible exposure before the very group supposed to be turned on to the Democratic ticket by her place on it: homemakers without outside jobs. But polls show Ferraro slipping with middle-income housewives, stemming less from charges against her family than doubts about her capabilities for the vice presidency. Thus, going on the Donahue show was an act of desperation.

It failed. Democratic political operatives paying close attention to the program thought Ferraro looked drawn, poorly made up and ill at ease. Beyond cosmetics, her staff had not prepared her for the give and take with Phil.

There was Gerry Ferraro telling Donahue's millions of female followers in the perfect idiom of soap opera that "I'll make it up to my mother, I'll make it up to my kids." When Donahue persisted and asked whether she regretted her decision to run for vice president, she said that if she had known how much the campaign would "hurt the people I love" she "probably would have said no."

Whether or not Mondale himself would reciprocate those sentiments, some of his old friends told us they would. Mondale-Ferraro has not proved a marriage made in heaven. What came over as attractively feisty in August is regarded by the presidential candidate's staff as moving toward truculence by his independent running mate. There is little rapport between them as the campaign ends.

The perception that he chose a woman whose meager background on the large issues of national security raises doubts about her being first in line for presidential succession was underlined in her Manhattan synagogue speech. She praised Jimmy Carter for making "a peace between Egypt and Israel which had eluded those two nations for 20 centuries." In fact, there was no Israel between 70 A.D. and 1948.

That may be splitting hairs, but she has confused nuclear "first use" with "first strike" and mixed up testing nuclear wepaons in the atmosphere and in space. Presidential candidates of the future are not likely to be inhibited from selecting a female running mate as a result of Geraldine Ferraro, but they will fix an eagle key on her qualifications.

Rebels kill two officers, injure three in Chile

SANTIAGO, Chile (AP) — Five attackers riding in a van killed two paramilitary officers and injured three when they threw bombs and fired automatic weapons at a suburban Santiago police station, police report.

The attack Sunday was the second against the Carabineros, Chile's paramilitary police, in three days. On Friday, four riot police were killed and eight offerers were injured in Valparaiso when a bomb went off as a police bus passed. No one has claimed responsibility for either attack.

The Carabineros have been criticized by the political opposition in recent weeks for their harsh crackdown on demonstrators protesting the military regime of President Augusto Pinochet.

Afghan rebels executed

ISLAMABAD, Pakistan (AP) — Afghan radio says nine anti-Marxist rebels were executed in Afghanistan for an Aug. 21 bombing at Kabul airport, an attack which Western diplomats estimate killed as many as 30 people.

Reporting on the Aug. 21 attack, which wrecked the airport's international terminal, Radio Kabul said Sunday that the nine rebels had been condemned to death by a special military court that also sentenced a 10th man accused in the case to 18 years in prison.

Western diplomats have estimated that the airport bombing, which wrecked the airport's international terminal, injured more than 350 people. Western correspondents do not have regular access to Aghanistan.

The Afghan media said the blast killed 13 people, seriously wounded 47 and caused minor injuries to 160 others.

Anarchists stop U.S. train

BERLIN (AP) — A group described as anarchists stopped a U.S. Army train by placing burning car tires and concrete blocks on rail tracks in a West Berlin district, according to police.

The tires were fastened to the tracks with chains and padlocks, a police statement said. Officers in a patrol car saw the smoking tires Sunday and alerted firemen, it said.

The train was stopped near a bridge and U.S. personnel on board helped firemen put out the fires and cut the chains. The train moved slowly along the tracks to push the concrete blocks aside and continue its trip without sustaining any damage, authorities said.

The train leaves Frankfurt twice daily carrying U.S. military personnel and supplies to U.S. bases in West Berlin, which is 110 miles inside East Germany.

Students pull 'stupid joke'

ATHENS, Greece (AP) — Three American tourists were charged with indecency for posing for nude photographs in front of the Parthenon, a spokesman for the Athens district attorney says.

The three men, all students, were identified Sunday as William Mullen, 22, of Hartford, Conn., Herman Kindelan, 22, of San Mateo, Calif. and Willard Freitas, 23, of Santa Clara, Calif., said the spokesman, who declined to be identified.

He said the stripping took place just before the ancient site atop the Acropolis hill was closed at sunset Saturday.

Dallas getting better, lose this time by 12

Dallas Cowboys Ed Jones (72), Everson Walls (24), Eugene Lockhard (56), Steve DeOssie (55) and Jeff Rohrer (50) make sure New York's Joe Morris (20) doesn't get away.

IRVING — Don't be too hasty in writing off the Dallas Cowboys for the 1984 season. After all, Sunday's 19-7 loss to the Giants represents a marked improvement over the first meeting when New York won 28-7.

Whereas the first meeting was over in the first half, Sunday Dallas kept the fans in suspense until Haji-Sheikh kicked out the Cowboys' lights with a 23-yard field goal with 4:02 in the last period and applied the boot-de-grace from 27 yards away with 1:42 remaining in the game.

And another thing, the Giants didn't beat Dallas nearly as badly as they did Washington last week.

ONE THING Sunday's game should put to rest is The Quarterback controversy, a grossly overrated issue to begin with that has ripped the team asunder.

Coach Tom Landry used both Danny White and Gary Hogeboom and neither one could move the team. White and Hogeboom may be either pretty good or pretty bad, but whatever is wrong with the Cowboys goes much deeper than a mere quarterback.

Yet for all the Cowboys' problems, Dallas, 6-4, really isn't all that bad off. Everybody else in the NFC East is playing just like the Cowboys...everybody but Washington and Philadelphia are tied for first and the Redskins could join the crowd with a win tonight over Atlanta.

In fact, the Cowboys are in position to determine their own destiny, and who could ask for more?

ONE OTHER bright bit of encouragement: A year ago at this point in the season, Dallas was 9-1 and eventually reached the 12-2 plateau only to wind up empty-handed. It's a recurring nightmare, a Cowboy team peaking early and fading in the stretch.

The one disturbing flaw in that theory is that the Cowboys have no visible magic up their sleeveless shirts which could suddenly turn things around. Drew Pearson isn't coming out of retirement and neither is Preston Pearson nor Bob Hayes and Denver has no intention of sending back Butch Johnson.

HAJI-SHEIKH gave the Giants a 6-0 lead by kicking 40 and 38 yard field goals on New York's first two opening period possessions. White never got the offense moving and suffered a shoulder injury early in the second period, giving Hogey his chance.

Hogeboom's 30-yard pass to Tony Hill with 9:49 gone in the second period put Dallas up 7-6 at intermission. "I was feeling pretty good about things at half, but then in the second half poor field position and penalties hurt us," Landry reviewed.

The Cowboys were penalized seven times to the Giants' one. Four of the Cowboys penalties came in the third period, all on offense and two on kickoff returns.

Quarterback Phil Simms passed nine yards to Lionel Manuel to close out a six play, 63-yard drive with 2:49 gone in the third period for a 13-7 lead.

WHEN Haji-Sheikh's third field goal of the day early in the fourth period made it 16-7, Landry brought back White with 10:47 to play. "Danny had a bruised finger, but we thought he could get our short passing game going. Later, when we needed to go downfield, we brought Gary back."

The cheers which greeted Danny were premature. He couldn't move the team. On first down a tight end dropped a ball over the middle. Tony Dorsett, whose appearance in itself was a surprise in view of his father's massive stroke Friday, gained nine, but Ron Springs couldn't get the other yard.

White got one more shot at it, but again a ball over the middle that could have been caught wasn't, and then there was the sack etc.

ALTHOUGH he was put on the witness stand for an entirely different reason, Phil Pozderac, who has been confused for the entire right side of an offensive line, was asked if it was frustrating for an offensive lineman, playing for a couple of non-productive quarterbacks like White and Hogeboom. Of course, it was put more tactfully.

The 6-9, 275-pounder offered another view of Dallas' quarterback problems, refusing to blame Dallas' troubles on either.

"We've simply got to give Danny and Gary time to throw the ball. Today we didn't. It's hard to pin point one person," he went on, referring to the offensive line and not the quarterbacks.

"If everybody doesn't get his block, someone will get through and the defense will hurt you. You've got to get all the blocks."

Podzerac blamed the Giants for a lot of the Cowboys' problems in the offensive line. "You've got to give credit to their defense. They moved a lot of people in and out of the game. And the use of a lot of personnel causes problems. You use a different technique on every man and when they keep changing, you have to adjust and it causes mistakes."

Podzerac said the Giants didn't throw anything new at the Cowboys, "In fact they didn't use nearly as many things as they did against Washington last week."

"Frustrated? Let's just say I'm not very happy."

In the fourth period, Podzerac was tagged with a holding call and protested to the official. Actually, Phil claims he wasn't complaining, he was explaining. "The defensive linemen came up under me and hooked my arm. He wouldn't let go and I was trying to get loose and he wouldn't let go."

Spoken like a true Notre Dame man.

LOOKING AHEAD for the Cowboys, Dallas faces some of its easiest foes down the stretch...Buffalo, Philadelphia and maybe New England. They also face St. Louis, Washington and Miami.

'Hawks steal four TDs, win 45-0

Associated Press

Three Kansas City quarterbacks combined for a National Football League record-breaking performance. Unfortunately for the Chiefs, the records were racked up by the Seattle Seahawks' defense.

Six times Sunday the Seattle defenders picked off Kansas City passes, and they returned four for touchdowns — an NFL record — as the Seahawks routed the Chiefs 45-0.

Defensive backs Dave Brown, Keith Simpson and Ken Easley returned the interceptions for touchdowns as the Seahawks set another league record with 362 return yards.

Brown, one of four remaining original members of the Seahawks, who entered the league in 1976, picked off a Bill Kenney pass and streaked 95 yards for a score, then later returned a Todd Blackledge pass 58 yards for another TD. The two interception scores tied another record.

Elsewhere, Miami ran its perfect record to 10-0 with a 31-17 victory over the New York Jets, and a log-jam has evolved in the NFC East with the New York Giants, St. Louis and Dallas all tied with 6-4 records.

"We played team defense," Seattle Coach Chuck Knox said of his team's fourth consecutive victory and second straight shutout. "We hustled and put pressure on the quarterback. That's the way we've been playing.

"It was a great defensive performance. But I wasn't thinking about the shutout, I was just thinking about the win."

The defense scored more than enough to ensure Seattle's sixth victory in its last seven games.

"Kinney was throwing it away from me to (wide receiver Mike) Marshall," Brown said of his first interception. "But I was able to get to it and tip it."

Buffalo receiver Craig White (27) is upended by Cleveland cornerback Hanford Dixon (29) Sunday.

After that, it was a race, and nobody touched the Seattle back.

"As soon as you see all the green in front of you, you just relax and run as fast as you can," he said.

"My second interception was the result of a blitz. They put a lot of pressure on him (Blackledge), and he underthrew the ball. I got the ball and after that it was just a race.

"We feel we can stop anybody in this league," said Brown. "We feel we can beat anybody in the league. The goal of our defense is to try to get better every week and I don't think we've reached our peak."

Kenney, who watched the second half of the game in his street clothes from the sidelines, said he was disoriented in the Chiefs' huddle before throwing his two interceptions in the second quarter.

"I was having problems because I wasn't sure what was going on," the Kansas City quarterback said. "I had to ask my offense what the formation was. I wasn't sure how to call the play."

WASHINGTON CAN join that crowd tonight if the Redskins defeat Atlanta.

In other games Sunday, it was Cleveland 13, Buffalo 10; Green Bay 23, New Orleans 13; Pittsburgh 35, Houston 7; Chicago 17, Los Angeles Raiders 6; Giants 19, Dallas 7; San Diego 38, Indianapolis 10; Minnesota 27, Tampa Bay 24; Denver 26, New England 19; San Francisco 23, Cincinnati 17; and Los Angeles Rams 16, St. Louis 13. Philadelphia and Detroit battled to a 23-23 deadlock.

Broncos 26, Patriots 19

Safety Dennis Smith picked up a fumble and raced 64 yards with 1:45 remaining in the game to snap a 19-19 tie and give Denver a come-from-behind victory.

The Broncos, outplayed most of the day, had knotted the contest with 4:03 left on John Elway's third touchdown pass — a seven-yarder to Butch Johnson — and Rich Karlis' extra point. Karlis earlier had missed two extra-point attempts.

New England then drove to the Denver 37, but running back Mosi Tatupu was stripped of the ball by Denver linebacker Steve Busick. Smith scooped up the fumble and raced down the sideline for the TD.

"I was tired when I picked it up, but when I did, I ran as hard as I could," Smith said. "I knew my time would come."

Bears 17, Raiders 6

Walter Payton rushed for 111 yards and two touchdowns as Chicago defeated the defending Super Bowl champion Los Angeles Raiders in a bruising game that saw three quarterbacks knocked out of action at various times — Marc Wilson and David Humm of the Raiders and Jim McMahon of the Bears.

McMahon was hospitalized with a bruised kidney and was kept overnight for observation. He was listed in fair condition.

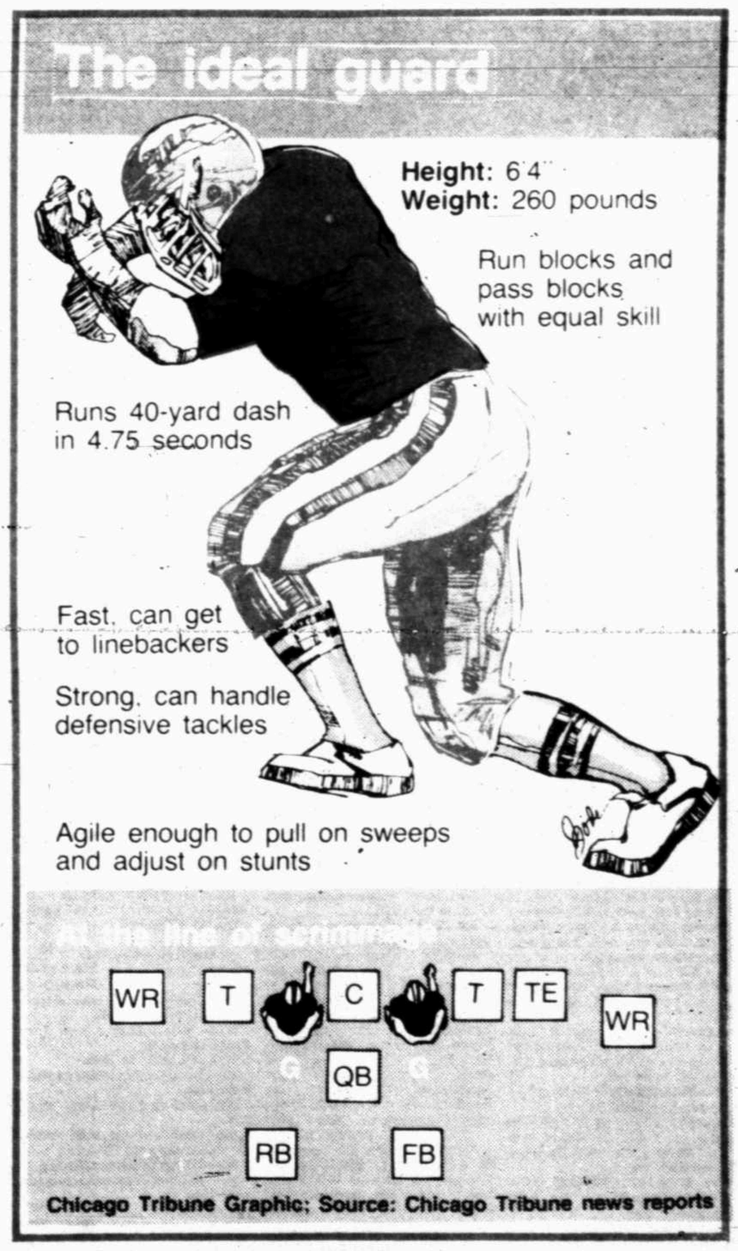

The Bears, who had 11 quarterback sacks against Minnesota a week earlier, registered nine this time for losses of 58 yards.

Walter Payton, rushing for 100 yards for the 61st time in his career, scored on an 18-yard run in the first quarter and on an 8-yard dash in the second to stake the Bears to a 14-0 lead that the Raiders could not overcome.

Packers 23, Saints 13

Quarterback Lynn Dickey and tight end Paul Coffman teamed up for two touchdowns and Al Del Greco booted three field goals to lead Green Bay over New Orleans. It

Stallworth of old rips Oilers, 35-7

PITTSBURGH (AP) — John Stallworth is playing like the Stallworth of old, not an old John Stallworth.

Stallworth, one of just five remaining veterans from the Pittsburgh Steelers' four Super Bowl champion teams, caught three touchdown passes from Mark Malone despite a driving rain to key a 35-7 rout Sunday of the winless Houston Oilers.

Stallworth, a question mark this season because of his age, 32, and an injury-filled 1983 season, has made five touchdown receptions in his last two games. His three-touchdown game was the first of his 11-season career, and he now has 51 career TDs, tying the team record set by Lynn Swann.

"I've never thought I was done," said Stallworth, who had four catches for 109 yards against Houston. "I can still run and still catch the ball. I knew I could still play."

Steelers Coach Chuck Noll said Stallworth "just keeps going and making the big plays."

The Steelers' suffocating defense forced four fumbles, set up one touchdown and scored another on Bryan Hinkle's 21-yard fumble return.

Noll said quarterback Mark Malone, who ran for one touchdown besides throwing the three scoring passes to Stallworth, "turned the big plays and directed our offense."

"Defensively, it was a team effort. Our young guys are coming along," the Steelers coach said.

The Oilers, 0-10, extended their National Football League record for consecutive road losses to 23.

"Losing hurts anytime, but physically this game hurt a lot," said first-year Houston Coach Hugh Campbell. "It was such a mismatch physically. They really took it to us. Today wasn't our best effort, but a lot of that can be attributed to the Steelers."

The Steelers, 6-4, needed only 3:17 to take a 7-0 lead. Malone rifled a 43-yard scoring pass to Stallworth two plays after Stan Edwards fumbled on the Oilers' second offensive play of the game and Hinkle recovered.

Malone, making only his third start at quarterback since 1981, extended the lead to 21-0 by halftime with a 13-yard touchdown run on a bootleg play and a 17-yard scoring toss to Stallworth with just over five minutes left in the second quarter.

Stallworth made a leaping catch in traffic of a hurriedly thrown Malone pass and dove into the end zone to complete a 39-yard scoring pass play midway through the third quarter to extend the Pittsburgh lead to 28-0.

Twenty seconds later, Hinkle's touchdown return of a fumble by Larry Moriarty made it 35-0.

That brought on reserve Houston quarterback Oliver Luck, who accounted for the Oilers' only score

Beaumont's Freddy Fryar is all smiles after winning Sunday's eight annual Texas Race of Champions.

Fryar edges Farmer for Texas RoC title

COLLEGE STATION (AP) — Freddy Fryar of Beaumont edged Leroy Farmer by a singe car length on the last turn of the last lap Sunday to win 8th annual Texas Race of Champions at Texas World Speedway.

Fryar, the pole-sitter, said before the race that he wanted to take an early lead and pull away from the pack of 39 drivers and avoid one-on-one confrontations but things didn't turn out that way.

Even though he got a trophy to match the one he won in the fifth annual event, overcoming Farmer was just the last of several obstacles.

Fryar took the lead on the first lap and appeared to be working his strategy.

By the third lap of the 31-lap, 100-kilometer race, Fryar had already built a two-second lead over Greg Davidson.

But Davidson closed the gap and on the eighth lap passed Fryar. The two drivers built a big lead over the field and stayed together for several laps.

Then, on the 17th lap, Fryar made a move in front of the grandstands and tried to pass Davidson, but was cut off going into the first turn.

"I had some real problems with the tires," Fryar said, "they were really getting soft on me. We just picked the wrong tires and almost paid for it."

On the next lap, Fryar's luck changed. Three spins on different parts of the course brought out the caution flag.

Although that helped the field catch up, in the long run the caution helped Fryar more than anybody.

"It's really what I needed at the time. It helped the tires cool down and get a little harder," he said.

Meanwhile, Farmer, who started at the number 33 spot, also came on after the caution flag. On lap 25, Farmer took over second place and set his sights on Fryar.

On lap 29 Farmer closed the gap but still trailed by four car lengths heading into the last lap.

In the first turn of the final lap, Farmer almost touched fenders with Fryar. Then on the weaving road-course portion of the speedway, Farmer took the lead and stretched it to two lengths heading into the final two turns.

Fryar pushed his car to the limit, drafted a bit, and then cut behind Farmer and raced to the checkered flag.

Third place in the race went to Davidson.

In the preliminary races Sunday, Austin's Jerry Grant won the Super Stock race with Pearland's Fred Ellis second; Bucky Hutchison, of Austin, won the Pony car race as Bryan's Kay Labarge finished second; Al Lamb, of Dallas, won the Formula Ford race and George Pharis won the Showroom stock car race.

NYSAC chairman recognizes Hagler, Holmes, Spinks

Branca would like New York to regain say about boxing champs

By THOMAS ROGERS and MICHAEL KATZ
N.Y. Times News Service

NEW YORK — John Branca, chairman of the New York State Athletic Commission, which regulates boxing in this state, has been telling anyone who will listen that the Empire State, unlike the World Boxing Council, still recognizes Marvelous Marvin Hagler as world middleweight champion. Branca also says New York recognizes Larry Holmes as heavyweight champion and Michael Spinks as the light-heavyweight titleholder.

That's where he stops. For now.

Branca acknowledges that his recognition of the three champions — there are no other middleweight or light-heavyweight world champions, but Holmes has competition from Pinklon Thomas of the WBC and Gerrie Coetzee of the World Boxing Association — constitute his "trial baloons."

The chairman is toying with the idea of returning New York to its leadership role in the sport. Before television helped make the WBC and WBA powerful seven years ago, New York State recognition was regarded as one of the most meaningful in the fractioned world of boxing. But in those days, Madison Square Garden was regarded as the sport's capital. With the Garden virtually running a club-fight operation, New York's stature has eroded, and in the vacuum, the casino states of Nevada and New Jersey have become the most important.

Upset with the confusing plethora of champions and weight classes, Branca said he hopes New York can help simplify matters.

"Or it might lead to more confusion, I don't know," he said.

Branca said that if he finds the sport is waiting for New York to take the lead, then the state might very well "go whole hog" — not only recognizing champions, but rating contenders.

JOHN STEARNS has declared for free agency, and a few days ago, the Mets released Ron Hodges. With those catchers gone, the chances for Clint Hurdle to play at Shea Stadium next season with a mask, chest protector and shin guards seem to have greatly improved.

"Strictly by numbers, there are now two less guys for Clint to compete with," said Al Harazin, a Met vice president, who works with Frank Cashen, the general manager and chief operating officer. "It will be in the context of how we shape our 40-man roster for next season."

Hurdle, a highly touted prospect when he reached the major leagues with Kansas City in 1977, played the outfield, first base and third base. Signed as a free agent by the Mets, Hurdle played last season at Tidewater. He was a catcher in 21 of the 128 games in which he played, batting .243 with 21 home runs and 64 runs batted in.

The departure of Hodges leaves Hurdle, whose career average is .273, as the only left-handed hitting catcher in the Mets' high echelon of receivers — Mike Fitzgerald, Junior Ortiz, John Gibbons and Ron Reynolds, none of whom has shown much power.

Hurdle spent the last three weeks at St. Petersburg, working with Vern Hoscheit on the mechanics of catching. "Clint is coming along fine," said Hoscheit, the Met bullpen coach. "He should be able to catch in the major leagues next season.

"He has a fine arm, in respect to accuracy and velocity, and has learned the mechanics of blocking low pitches. As for selection of pitches, his manager at Tidewater, Bob Schaefer, told me Clint called some excellent games. As an experienced hitter, he knows what batters aren't looking for.

"I think he has an excellent chance of being with the Mets next season."

PEOPLE IN University Park, Pa., have seen him everywhere in the last few weeks — outside bookstores, in department store windows, inside fraternity houses and at tailgate parties near Beaver Stadium, where Penn State plays its home football games. Coach Joe Paterno seems to have been cloned.

Wearing a dark blue shirt and khaki trousers, he stands with a football in his hands, as he does at many a practice.

Last month, Happy Valley Promotions put 2,500 life-size color cardboard cutout posters of Paterno, on sale for $19.95. More than 500 have been sold at campus bookstores, at Beaver Stadium and through mail orders. Greg Woodman, the company president, believes he may have to order another shipment of what he calls "the ultimate Penn State gift."

"I wanted to do something concerning the coach," said Woodman, a 1983 graduate of Penn State. "He is a very popular man around here. He thought it was a silly idea, but gave his permission if we agreed that 6 percent of the profits go to the Paterno Library Endowment Fund that he established this summer to acquire new materials for the university library. He contributed $20,000, and that was matched by the Richard King Mellon Foundation of Pittsburgh and Philip Greenberg, an alumnus in Bal Harbour, Fla.

"The coach said he only went along with our idea because it would assist and publicize the relatively new endowment."

Holmes fight may not be artistic

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — Larry Holmes, in his first fight in nearly a year, defends his third of the heavyweight crown Friday against an unheralded James "Bonecrusher" Smith in a bout even Holmes concedes probably won't be an artistic success.

Holmes, who turned 35 on Saturday, says advancing age and the long layoff since his first-round knockout of Marvis Frazier on Nov. 25, 1983, may result in a less-than-ideal performance on his part.

"I don't think I will be as sharp as I would have been if I kept on fighting," Holmes said. "But I think I may be stronger because of the long layoff."

Holmes has not lost in 45 professional fights and has been the dominant fighter in the heavyweight division since he won the World Boxing Council version of the title against Ken Norton in June 1978.

But all his fighting since last November has been out of the ring. In a series of hassles unique even in the normally turbulent world of professional boxing, Holmes managed to:

—Quit as WBC heavyweight champion in December and vow never to fight again for promoter Don King following a dispute over a proposed title defense against Greg Page.

—Get named heavyweight champion of the fledgling International Boxing Federation, the newest of the alphabet soup of boxing regulators.

—Announce a multimillion-dollar fight against World Boxing Association champion Gerrie Coetzee for June at Caesars Palace in Las Vegas.

—Try desperately but unsuccessfully to salvage the fight after Caesars Palace pulled out three weeks before the bout because the promoters, JPD Productions, could not come up with the money.

—Agree to fight former WBA champion John Tate, a bout that never came off.

—Reconcile with King for a Coetzee fight in November in Las Vegas.

—Lose the Coetzee fight again after a bitter week-long court battle with another promoter in Pennsylvania.

"In the end of your career it seems you run into things you don't need," Holmes said. "With all the postponements in the last year and trying out new things and promoters it's been very confusing."

Now back with King, who has promoted nearly all his fights, Holmes has set his sights on topping Rocky Marciano's record of 50-0 and also wants to fight light-heavyweight champion Michael Spinks.

Holmes has said several times before that he will ignore big money offers and retire if he feels he is beginning to slip, but is now ambiguous about his future plans.

"I feel I'm still able to perform; my record speaks for itself," he said. "Right now I feel good and I still want to train. I like what I'm doing and when I no longer have the desire I'll step down."

But Holmes says he realizes most fighters stay in the ring at least one fight too long and the same thing could happen to him.

"I know if I continue to stay in this game somebody's going to whip my butt. I know that," he said. "I want to get out with my faculties intact. I don't want my wife and kids ashamed of me."

Holmes has made some concessions to his advancing age; he has cut back his training from six to five days a week and only works out an hour a day instead of an hour and a half. But he says he doesn't feel 35 and thinks the long layoff may have actually helped him conserve some strength.

In Smith, Holmes faces an enigma, an Army veteran and college graduate who turned pro three years ago at the age of 27 and has only 15 fights, mostly against opponents of dubious quality.

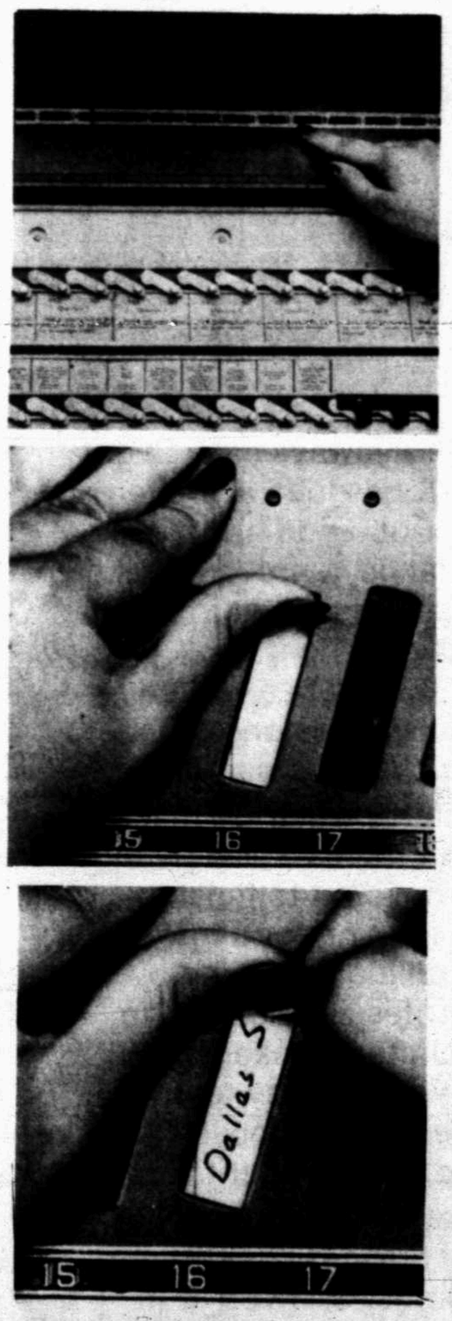

The 6-foot-4 Smith does have devastating power in his right hand, power he put to use in May when he knocked out British heavyweight Frank Bruno in the 10th round after being outclassed much of the fight. Smith has 12 knockouts in his 14 wins and his only loss was by a fourth-round knockout to James Broad in his first bout.

Oilers add on 2-1 victory to no-loss string

Associated Press

WINNIPEG, Alberta — Linemates Wayne Gretzky and Jari Kurri each had a goal and an assist as the Edmonton Oilers extended their National Hockey League unbeaten streak to 12 games by edging the Winnipeg Jets 2-1 Sunday night.

Dale Hawerchuk scored for the Jets in the close-checking contest.

Winnipeg managed to shut down the freewheeling Edmonton offense for much of the game but on the two occasions they tried to skate with Edmonton, the Oilers ended up scoring.

Gretzky maintained his personal points streak — at least one in each of Edmonton's 12 games, scoring 12 goals and adding 21 assists.

The Jets had several chances to tie the game as they applied the pressure during the last five minutes only to be frustrated by Edmonton goalie Andy Moog, who made 23 saves.

Marc Behrend was also solid in the Winnipeg net, turning aside 29 shots.

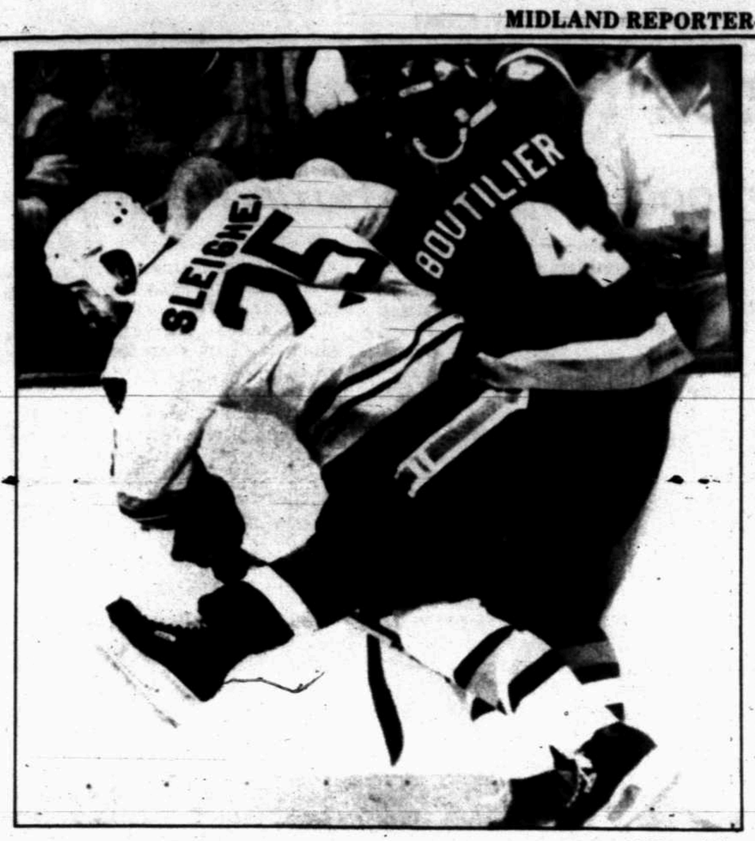

The win increased Edmonton's record to 10-0-2, while Winnipeg fell to 4-4-2.

The Montreal Canadiens of 1943-44 went 11-0-3 for the fastest start in NHL history.

Bruins 6, Islanders 2

BOSTON — Tom Fergus and Dave Silk scored two goals each, and the Boston Bruins extended their home-ice hex over the Islanders with a 6-2 victory over New York.

Defenseman Mike O'Connell had three assists, and Ray Bourque, also a defenseman, had two assists as the Bruins improved their record to 5-0-2 over New York since the Islanders' last victory in Boston Garden on Nov. 6, 1980.

Charlie Simmer and Geoff Courtnall were the other Boston scorers as the Bruins outshot the Islanders 38-23 in their fifth victory in the last six starts.

Boston goalie Doug Keans, making his 1984-85 season debut after suffering a pulled hamstring in an exhibition game last month, lost his shutout bid midway through the final period when Clark Gilles, left unguarded in front of the net, fired home his seventh goal of the season.

After Courtnall made the score 6-1 at 16:56, the Islanders Greg Gilbert completed the New York scoring by converting a rebound from just outside the crease at 17:10.

Fergus, who helped set up Courtnall, put Boston in front by tipping in a long slapshot for his sixth goal of the season at 7:22 of the first period.

Boston nailed down the victory in a 16-shot second period, beating New York goalie Roland Melanson for four goals.

Simmer tipped in a shot by Bourque for his fifth goal on a power play at 4:36, and Fergus converted a rebound of a shot by Louis Sleigher while Boston had a man advantage again at 10:44.

Rain postpones AJ 500

Foyt has to bow out of lineup

HAMPTON, Ga. (AP) — Rain spoiled everybody's day and added more tension to the already pressurized Winston Cup championship race as the Atlanta Journal 500 was postponed for a week.

An on-and-off drizzle Sunday finally forced officials to call off the day's activities 65 minutes after the scheduled 12:45 p.m. EST start of the 500-miler at Atlanta International Raceway.

The race was rescheduled for next Sunday at 1 p.m.

A.J. Foyt, who was scheduled to start 22nd in the lineup, withdrew following the postponement. The four-time Indianapolis 500 winner is scheduled to drive next Sunday at Las Vegas, Nev., in the Indy-car season-finale.

Bill Elliott, the record-setting pole-sitter here, said of the rain situation, "It doesn't make any difference. We're ready whenever they run it."

Season point leader Terry Labonte and second-place Harry Gant said much the same but admitted the delay adds to the tensions of the championship battle.

Gant, who trails Labonte by 49 points with only the Atlanta race and the season finale on Nov. 18 at Riverside, Calif., remaining on the schedule, said, "It is disappointing.

"But, in the racing business, you win races, you lose races, and some you get rained out, just like ballgames," he added.

"I'd like to get it over with, just like everybody else, but we're just going to have to wait like everybody else."

"Obviously, there's nothing you can do about the weather," Labonte said with a shrug. "But this just gives us and Harry's team another week to think about it. I think everybody would just like to get it over with."

On the other hand, Labonte noted he is looking forward to running at Riverside, which is the only road circuit that the Grand National drivers race on each season.

"I've always enjoyed road courses and I've done pretty well out there, so I don't feel desperate about this (Atlanta) race," Labonte added. "But it's going to be a long week."

Gant, who isn't known as a particularly effective road racer, obviously would prefer to end the season on an oval like Atlanta's 1.522-mile track.

"I figure if it rains next weekend, the last race of the season will be in Atlanta," Gant said. "I figure they'll have to postpone the (Atlanta) race until after Riverside. That wouldn't be so bad."

Spurs need two OTs to beat Knicks

Associated Press

SAN ANTONIO — Four points by Alvin Robertson and three by Artis Gilmore in the second overtime gave the San Antonio Spurs a 131-130 victory over the New York Knicks in the National Basketball Association Sunday night.

The win was the first for the Spurs, now 4-1, against the Knicks at home at two years.

Robertson scored 16 points and Gilmore had 24 points and 20 rebounds. George Gervin led the Spurs with 30 points.

New York's Bernard King, who scored 50 points against the Spurs on Jan 31. in San Antonio last season, led all scorers with 44.

But the 6-foot-7 forward missed all three attempts in both overtimes.

Ken Bannister was the second leading scorer for the 1-4 Knicks with 18 points.

New York's Butch Carter, who was scoreless in the first four periods of the game, pushed the game into its second overtime with a 3-point shot, a 25-foot jumper with one second left to make it 121-121. Carter, who fouled out in the second overtime, finished with 9 points.

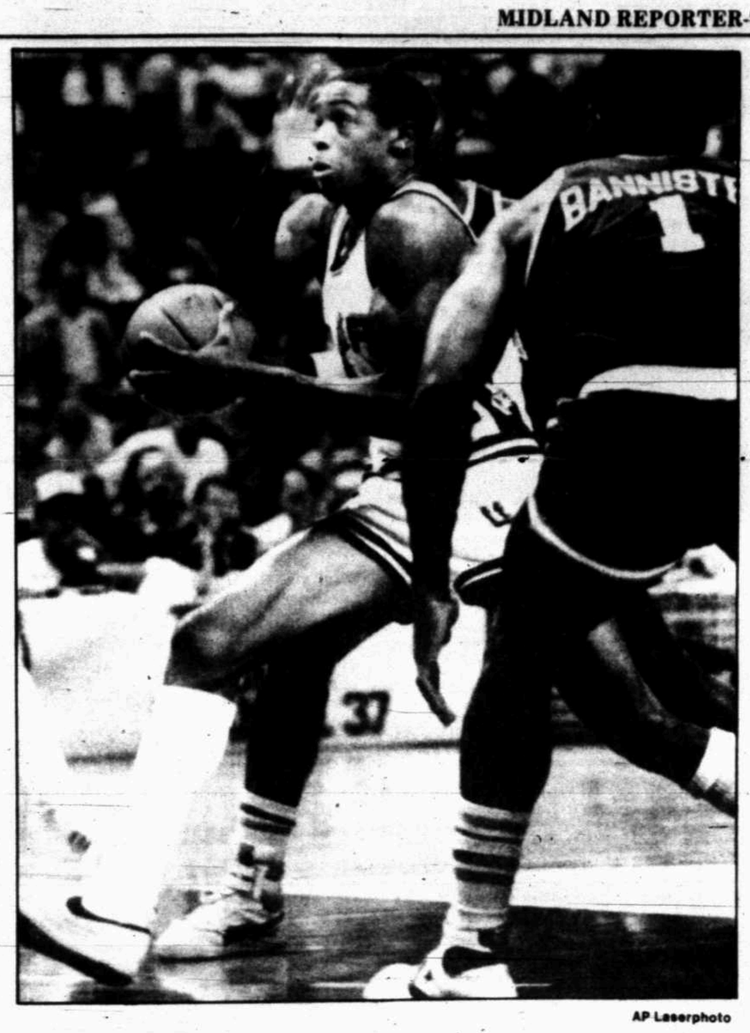

A free-throw by Mike Mitchell, who scored 24 points for the Spurs, forced the first overtime at 108-108.

King kept hammering away at the Spurs in the fourth period by scoring 12 points. He had scored 13 in the third and 15 in the second to keep San Antonio from running away with the game.

The Spurs had led by as many as 15 points in the second period, but a 14-7 spurt by the persistent Knicks closed the gap. It was 61-56 San Antonio at the half.

Lakers 124, Trail Blazers 116

INGLEWOOD, Calif. — Kareem Abdul-Jabbar scored 11 of his 23 points in the first quarter as the fast-breaking Los Angeles Lakers took a big early lead then held off a late Portland rally to take a 124-116 victory over the Trail Blazers.

NBA

Kiki Vandeweghe, who had just two points in the opening half, scored 17 in the final quarter as the Trail Blazers narrowed the gap to seven points, 110-103 with 3½ minutes remaining. The Lakers, however, were able to keep Portland at bay the rest of the way.

The Lakers reeled off an 11-0 string beginning midway through the opening period to take a 33-16 lead. Los Angeles was ahead 35-25 at the end of the first quarter and the Trail Blazers got no closer than seven points the rest of the way.

Earvin "Magic" Johnson scored two breakaway baskets during that first-period spurt, and Byron Scott had another fast-break layin.

Jamaal Wilkes scored 22 points for the winners, Johnson and James Worthy 21 each, and Scott had 20.

Los Angeles outscored Portland 28-19 in the third quarter to take a 94-74 edge into the final period.

Jim Paxson and Clyde Drexler led the Portland scoring with 23 points apiece, while Mychal Thompson had 22 and Vandeweghe 21.

McEnroe, Wilander in finals

'Brat' hit with $2,100 in fines

STOCKHOLM, Sweden (AP) — Top-seeded John McEnroe was fined $2,100 for three counts of misbehavior Sunday after a stormy 1-6, 7-6, 6-2 victory over Anders Jarryd of Sweden in a semifinal match of the $315,000 Stockholm Open-Scandinavian Tennis Championships.

McEnroe's outbursts in the second set — slamming a ball into the stands, calling the Swedish judge a "jerk," and hitting a soft drink can with his racket during a change-over — could push his fines over the $7,500 limit for the year.

McEnroe will face Mats Wilander of Sweden in Monday's final. Wilander, the No. 3 seed, defeated No. 2 seed Jimmy Connors 6-7, 6-3, 6-3 in the other semifinal.

Ken Farrar, the Grand Prix chief of supervisors, said McEnroe would be fined $350 for ball abuse, $750 for abuse of official and $1,000 for "unsportsmanlike conduct."

"But he has a 10-day appeal, so he will be able to play in London next week even if he exceeds the $7,500 limit," Farrar said.

Farrar said he did not know how much McEnroe's total fine was going into the tournament. But one tournament official said McEnroe was only a few hundred dollars away from the limit.

McEnroe was ahead 4-2 in the second set when he hit a first serve that was called out. He received a warning by the judge for hitting the ball into the stands. Then, after shouting to the judge, McEnroe was penalized one point — making the score 15-30 — for verbal abuse. McEnroe double-faulted to 15-40 and eventually dropped his serve. Moments later, McEnroe was penalized one game — making the score 4-4 — for equipment abuse.

McEnroe kept his cool the rest of the match, winning the second set tiebreaker 7-5 after trailing 3-5.

After trading early service breaks in the third set, McEnroe broke Jarryd's serve for a 3-2 edge. He never lost it. The victory improved the Wimbleon and U.S. Open champion's record for the year to 74-2. But McEnroe, who complained he was not concentrating well in earlier matches in this tournament, took his worst beating of the year in the first set when he sprayed his shoots outside the court. He won only seven points and Jarryd took four games to love, including one service break.

WILANDER SAID his victory over Connors was one of his best matches ever. "I thought he would get tired in the final set and I was surprised to see how he fought until the end," said Wilander.

Wilander, who never has lost to Connors, outlasted the American veteran in a 2 hour, 37 minute duel in reaching the final for the third straight time.

Wilander, the defending champion, and Connors played a tiebreaker for the third time in two matches and six sets.

Connors won this one 7-5. But Wilander took control midway through the second set.

Winner of a record 105 Grand Prix titles, Connors has failed six times to win this event, the world's oldest Grand Prix indoor tournament and the only official indoor championship recognized by the International Tennis Federation.

Wilander, ranked fourth in the world behind McEnroe, Connors and Ivan Lendl of Czechoslovakia, has worked on his first serves in recent months and they were a major weapon Sunday.

He slammed a half-dozen aces past Connors, who has an excellent service return although he quite did not show it Sunday, and picked up at least twice as many winners off his first delivery.

But Wilander's serves did not win the match, said Connors.

Redskins can make it four tied for first

WASHINGTON (AP) — The crowd atop the National Conference Eastern Division may have to make room for one more.

The Washington Redskins host the Atlanta Falcons tonight looking to join Dallas, St.Louis and the Giants in a four-way tie for first place in the division at 6-4.

"This could get real exciting," said Washington coach Joe Gibbs prior to Sunday's action which saw both front-running Dallas and St.Louis stumble.

"With these many teams believing they have a shot at first place anything can happen and probably will from week to week," Gibbs said.

Fortunately for Gibbs and the Redskins the one constant this season has been the running of John Riggins.

In his 13th season in the National Football League and already the fifth-leading rusher in the history of the league, the big Redskin fulback is off to best start ever, rambling for 854 yards and nine touchdowns.

Improving with age, the 35-year-old Riggins, the oldest running back in the league, has averaged 100.5 yards a game over his last 31 games. During the same span he has scored 43 touchdowns.

Virtually unbeatable when Riggins is on his game, the Redskins have are 18-2 when Riggins has rushed for 100 yards, including a perfect 10-0 at home.

"Riggins is in a class by himself," said Atlanta coach Dan Henning as his Falcons prepared to meet Riggins in Monday night's game. "They run him early to get a lead and then they hand the ball to him in the second half to eat up the clock."

Against an Atlanta team, 3-6, that is ranked next to last in the National Conference in defending against the run, Riggins will be seeking his fourth 100-yard game of the season.

"To beat Washington you have to get to them early," insisted Henning.

Tech linebacker dies from auto accident injuries

LUBBOCK (AP) — Kerry Bruno, a reserve linebacker on the Texas Tech football team, died Sunday after an early morning collision between two cars in the middle of a Lubbock intersection, authorities said.

Bruno, 22, of Houston suffered massive chest injuries in the crash shortly before 2:30 a.m. and died about eight hours later at Lubbock General Hospital, said nursing supervisor Margie Cannon.

Police said he was a passenger in a vehicle driven by teammate Gerald Bean, 22, of Houston. Bean and another Tech player, Roland Mitchell, 20, of Bay City, were treated and released from the hospital, Ms. Cannon said.

Lubbock police Sgt. Tommy Roberts said the accident was still under investigation.

The driver of the other car, whom Roberts identified as Bennie Cooper III, 27, of Lubbock, was listed in stable but serious condition Sunday night, Ms. Cannon said. Two passenger in Cooper's car, Michael Scott, 27, and Joe Burton, 21, both of Lubbock, were treated and released, she said.

California retains negotiating rights to three free agents

ANAHEIM, Calif. (AP) — The California Angels will retain negotiating rights to outfielder Fred Lynn, relief pitcher Don Aase and infielder Rob Wilfong in Thursday's free agent re-entry draft, according to a club executive.

Vice President Mike Port of the Angels said Sunday that the team would retain negotiating rights to the trio but there are no plans to pursue pitchers Bruce Kison, Craig Swan and John Curtis and infielder-outfielder Derrel Thomas.

Any player who had filed for free agency and was not re-signed by midnight Sunday now may not be signed until after the draft.

Permian Basin refs to meet Wednesday

From Staff Reports

The Permian Basin Basketball Officials Association will hold a special basketball rules meeting for all basketball officials and prospective officials in the area on Wednesday, Nov. 7, at 7 p.m. at San Jacinto Junior High School, 1400 North N St, according to Jim Scott, president of the PBBOA.

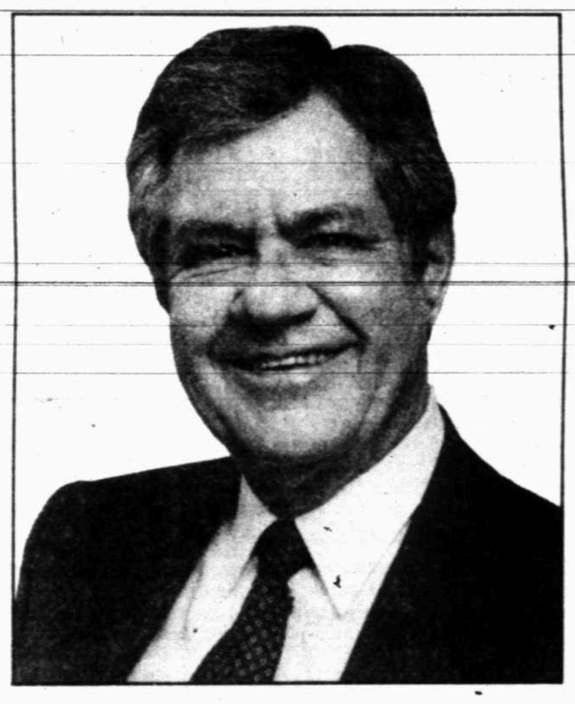

That meeting will be followed with a rules clinic at 6 p.m., Nov. 13, at the same site. The clinic will feature Dallas' Dotson Lewis, the executive secretary of the Southwest Basketball Officials Association.

Lewis will go over new rules and interpretation during the clinic.

Scott also pointed out that the SBOA and the PBBOA are urging that all coaches in the area attend the Nov. 13 meeting.

"This would be a good time for coaches to become famaliar with the new rule changes. If coaches attend this meeting, it might stop some of the confusion when the season starts," said Scott.

Marino closing in on NFL record

By HAL BOCK
AP Sports Writer

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. (AP) — No one appreciates Miami quarterback Dan Marino more than the men around him — the coach who sends in the plays and the receivers who are on the other end of his passes. They talk about him in reverent as if they were speaking about some sort of football diety.

And, in fact, they may be doing exactly that.

On a day when Marino was frequently forced by the New York Jets into passes he might not have ordinarily wanted to throw, he produced 422 yards — his second best pro game in yardage — and two touchdowns. That's 51 career TDs in 22 games, a highly impressive ratio.

He completed 23 passes against the Jets on Sunday, pushing his season's total to a club record 207. He has 29 TD passes — seven short of the single season record shared by a pair of Hall of Famers, Y.A. Tittle and George Blanda. And, he still has six games to play.

"He had a couple of tough things happen to him and a couple of other times, he wasn't on the money, but there were plenty of times he was," Coach Don Shula said. "Marino is a winner because he's not afraid to lose."

Then, with a twinkle in his eye, Shula revealed a little Dolphin strategy. "We're going to let Dan keep throwing," he said.

IF HE didn't, the Miami receivers might go on strike.

"He is phenomenal," decided Mark Clayton, who caught a 47-yard TD pass in the fourth quarter, putting the Dolphins ahead of the Jets for keeps in what developed into a 31-17 victory.

"He has a great field sense. He knows who's supposed to get the ball according to the coverage. He reads the coverages so well and he has that quick release. He gets the ball to you if he sees the slightest little crack and you're the open man and you're supposed to get the ball.

"It's got to be frustrating for defensive linemen. The ball is in his hands and then, poof, it's gone. He gets rid of it so quick. That extra moment allows me to break off the ball."

MARINO LED Mark Gastineau, the NFL leader in quarterback sacks, on a merry chase much of the day. The Jet defensive end nailed his man once and pressured him several other times, hurrying Marino's releases. "Ninety-nine (Gastineau's number) does that to you," Shula said. "You'd rush, too, if you were back there."

And, yet, despite being hurried, Marino still seemed able to get the ball where he wanted to and when he wanted to.

"Dan's biggest asset is that he has that quick release," said Nat Moore, who caught five passes for 105 yards including a 37-yard TD.

"He can hold the ball a little longer than most quarterbacks. He gets a lot of zip on the ball. He has the ability to throw all the different passes. He can throw the short pass. He can throw the long pass where he hangs it up. He can line it in. He's just a guy with a gun who also has touch."

Running back Tony Nathan, who caught five passes for 60 yards, knew Marino would break the Jets down eventually. 'It was just a matter of time," he said. "You've got to have confidence in the people you're playing with. Nobody can stop us right now, not all day."

Certainly not with Marino at the controls.

"He has the potential to be the best quarterback in the league," Nathan continued. "Once he gets to the point where he can sit back and control his own game, he'll really be something. What makes him so good is his ability to get rid of the football. It helps a great deal. It gives the receiver time to get open. Then he gets you the ball."

THE MEN around him were impressed, but Marino had criticism of his performance, particularly two interceptions.

"Sometimes, I force it in and I get intercepted," he said. "That's something I have to learn, not to force it."

And when that happens, the Dolphins, 10-0 after 10 weeks, could be unbeatable.

Ti-Cats gain East final; Bombers West

Canadian Football

HAMILTON, Ontario — Defensive back Paul Bennett returned a fumble 49 yards for the only Hamilton touchdown and kicker Bernie Ruoff added two field goals and four singles as the Hamilton Tiger-Cats defeated the Montreal Concordes 17-11 Sunday to advance to the Canadian Football League's Eastern final.

Hamilton will meet the defending Grey Cup champion Toronto Argonauts next Sunday in Toronto for the right to advance to the Grey Cup game — the CFL's Super Bowl — in Edmonton, Alberta, on Nov. 18.

Bennett, signed as a free agent with four games remaining in the regular season, led a solid Ticat defensive performance that forced six turnovers in the contest, which was played before 20,756 fans at Ivor Wynne Stadium — the second-largest home crowd of the year for the Ticats.

Ruoff, the league's top punter this year, booted the Ticats out of danger several times in the opening half when he averaged almost 55 yards a punt.

Montreal's defense also played a key role in the game, setting up the Montreal TD with just over two minutes remaining in the game when defensive back Pete Lavorato, the former Utah State star, recovered a blocked punt on the Hamilton six-yard line. Quarterback Gerry Dattilio of Northern Colorado scored on the next play.

Don Sweet, with a 29-yard field goal, and two punt singles by punter Gerry McGrath that covered 63 and 68 yards, respectively, accounted for the other Montreal points.

Bennett, released earlier in the year by both the Winnipeg Blue Bombers and Toronto, played an inspired game, especially in the first quarter when the Ticats opened a 9-1 lead. The 30-year-old Toronto native recovered two fumbles and deflected a pass by Montreal quarterback Turner Gill deep in the Hamilton end of the field that cornerback Mark Streeter intercepted.

Gill, the rookie from the University of Nebraska, was injured later in the first half when he was pushed into the Montreal bench and was replaced by Dattilio. Hamilton linebacker John Priestner was given a major roughing penalty for the incident that almost precipitated a melee.

Blue Bombers 55, Eskimos 20

WINNIPEG, Manitoba — Tom Clements threw four touchdown passes and Willard Reaves ran for two as the Winnipeg Blue Bombers blasted the Edmonton Eskimos 55-20 in the CFL Western Division semifinal Sunday.

Clements, the former Notre Dame quarterback, threw a pair of touchdown passes to wide receiver Jeff Boyd and one each to James Murphy and Rick House. He also ran for one touchdown himself to ignite the crowd of 27,711, who braved below-freezing temperatures and strong winds.

NFL

was the first time this season that the Packers, 3-7, have won two games in a row.

"When they've got four guys covering (James) Lofton and three guys covering (John) Jefferson, that leaves me wide open," Coffman said.

Packer safety Tom Flynn recovered a George Rogers fumble in the second quarter to set up a short march to Coffman's first touchdown. Flynn picked off one of Richard Todd's passes in the third quarter, his fourth interception in two games.

Chargers 38, Colts 10

Charlie Joiner grabbed nine passes, including one for a touchdown, and moved into second place in NFL career catches and reception yardage in San Diego's victory over Indianapolis.

Joiner moved past Raymond Berry and Don Maynard into second place in career receptions with 635. The all-time leader is Charley Taylor with 649. Joiner also totaled 119 yards to claim second place in career receiving yardage with 10,466.

The victory snapped the Chargers' three-game losing streak as San Diego's Dan Fouts passed for 283 yards and three touchdowns.

Lions 23, Eagles 23

Detroit kicker Eddie Murray hit the right upright on a 21-yard field goal attempt in overtime, leaving the Lions in a tie with Philadelphia.

The Eagles had knotted the game on a 40-yard field goal by Michael McFadden, his third successful three-pointer of the contest, with three seconds remaining in regulation. Earlier he had kicked field goals of 51 and 52 yards.

The Lions attempted the field goal on first down at 4:44 of the extra period, and neither team was able to mount a serious threat the remaining 10:16.

Browns 13, Bills 10

Running back Earnest Byner scooped up a fumble in the fourth quarter and raced 55 yards for a touchdown, giving Cleveland a come-from-behind victory over winless Buffalo.

Browns' quarterback Paul McDonald, passing on third-and-20, hit wide receiver Willis Adams, who dropped the ball when he was tackled by three Bills. But Byner, trailing the play, picked up the ball and rambled untouched for the winning score.

Earlier, Buffalo linebacker Darryl Talley forced a McDonald fumble and Chris Keating scooped it up and trudged 34 yards for a score and a 7-3 Buffalo lead.

Vikings 27, Buccaneers 24

Veteran kicker Jan Stenerud booted a 53-yard field goal with two seconds left to lift Minnesota over Tampa Bay. Stenerud's game-winner enabled the Vikings to end a five-game losing streak and hand the Bucs their ninth consecutive road loss.

49ers 23, Bengals 17

Joe Montana, who threw a career-high four interceptions early in the game, tossed a 4-yard touchdown pass to Freddie Solomon with 1:39 remaining to boost San Francisco over Cincinnati.

The 49ers, who trailed 17-7 at halftime, improved their record to 9-1. Cincinnati, 3-7, rolled up 263 yards on offense in the first half but was held to just five first downs in the second half.

Rams 16, Cardinals 13

Eric Dickerson ran for 208 yards on 21 carries, and Mike Lansford kicked field goals of 27 and 32 yards in the second half, lifting the Los Angeles Rams over St. Louis.

The Rams converted two St. Louis fumbles into their tying and winning points while rallying from a 13-3 deficit at halftime. Tackles Reggie Doss and Greg Meisner recovered the bobbles, both by quarterback Neil Lomax, who was sacked six times for losses of 48 yards.

Dolphins 31, Jets 17

Dan Marino passed for 422 yards and two touchdowns to lead the unbeaten Miami Dolphins.

Overcoming a mistake-prone first half in which he was intercepted twice and sacked twice, Marino put the Dolphins ahead to stay with 7:45 left in the game on his 29th TD pass of the year, a 47-yarder to Mark Clayton.

The Dolphins put the icing on their victory with a 30-yard field goal by Uwe Von Schamann and a two-yard run by Pete Johnson in the last four minutes.

JUICY GEMS

Text by David Lee Forrest

The Midland Gem and Mineral Society is putting the final polish on its 22nd Annual Gem and Mineral Show which will open this weekend.

Members of the organization, which was established here in 1957, will exhibit their work in jewelry, faceting, silversmithing, goldsmithing, cabochons (stones polished into a convex shape rather than cut into facets), minerals and fossils.

Demonstrations by club members will include basic lapidary skills by Harold Ervin, faceting by Lovell Linthicum and silversmithing by Mickey Taylor.

Other area gem and mineral clubs from Odessa, Big Spring and New Mexico are expected to have guest exhibits at the show.

One guest at the show will be making his first major public appearance in at least 200 million years. The partial skeleton of a phytosaur — a prehistoric crocodile-like reptile — will be on public display for the first time since it was found this spring on a ranch south of Coahoma in Howard County.

Phytosaurs, some of which are estimated to have been 30 feet in length, lived and hunted along ancient West Texas rivers before becoming extinct 200 million years ago. Dr. Carl Frailey of Midland College estimated that the phytosaur on display was about 10 feet long. Frailey has said "it ranks with the top three or four fossil discoveries of the Triassic Age in West Texas."

Another special exhibit by Jerry Savage will spotlight fluorescent minerals, which glow eerily in a wide range of colors when exposed to ultraviolet light. This display is a perennial favorite, according to the society's president, Frances Daniel.

"We have this every year. It's very popular. It's quite interesting to see the interaction with the ultraviolet light," she said.

Paula Edwards will also display her gold and silver replicas of long-stemmed roses and ships.

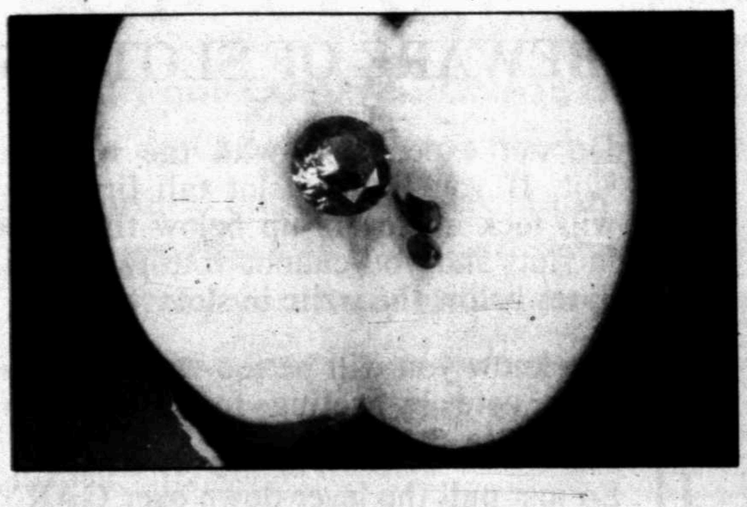

Gem and mineral dealers will demonstrate gold-wire wrapping, marble making, casting, gold and silversmithing. Thirteen dealers from eight states will be selling material from around the world, including gemstones, finished jewelry, rough stones, decorating pieces and lapidary supplies.

Children will have their own place to go rock hunting at the show. The Sandbox Mine, a swimming pool filled with sand, will contain "goodies" such as polished rocks and "little critters" made out of stones, Mrs. Daniel said.

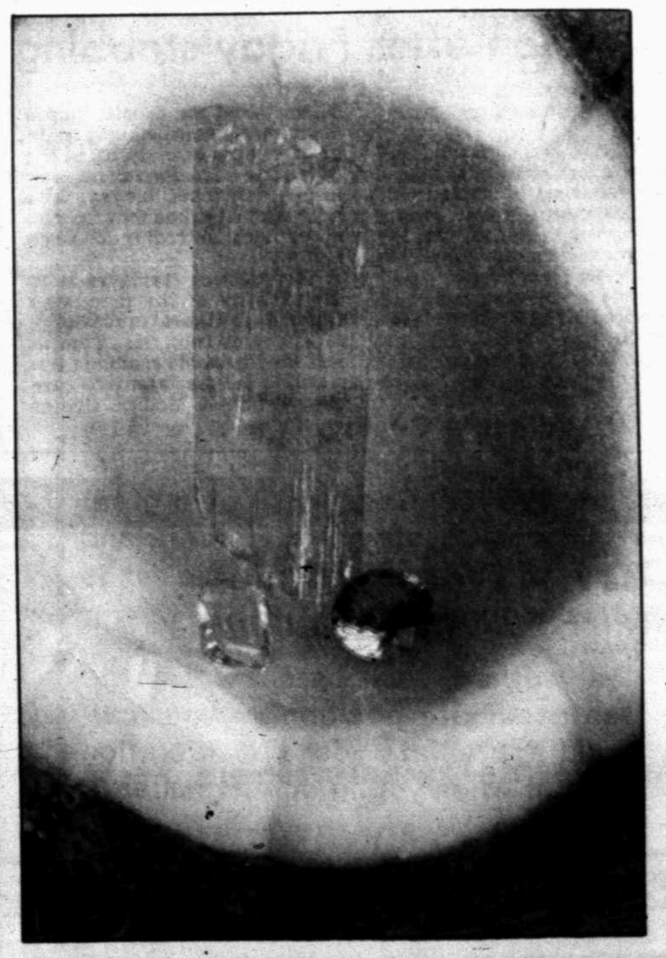

Children scoop out some of the sand and sift it through a wire screen to see if they can uncover their own buried treasure.

The show will be 9 a.m.-10 p.m. Saturday and 10 a.m.-6 p.m. Sunday in the Midland County Exhibit Building on East Highway 80. Tickets for adults are $1.50 in advance and $2 at the door. Admission for children ages 6-12 is 25¢. Advance tickets are available from club members or by calling 697-2369.

Injured Midlander found lying in street treated and released

From Staff Reports

A 41-year-old Midland man was treated and released from Midland Memorial Hospital this morning after police found him lying injured in the street at 5:30 a.m., about three blocks from his house.

Frank Russell of 303 Carrizo, No. 5., was spotted by a motorist at the corner of Carrizo and Ohio. Police had not determined if Russell had overturned his motorcycle or if he had been the victim of a hit-and-run accident.

In other police activity, a 79-year-old Midlander was arrested Saturday for possession of liquor and beer with intent to resale without a license. He remains in county jail awaiting formal charges.

Formal charges for the Class B misdemeanor are expected to be filed today.

The man, who gave police an address in the 300 block of South Carver, was arrested after a search warrant signed by Justice of the Peace Bob Pine Friday was executed about 10 p.m. Saturday at a garage at 1104 E. Illinois Ave.

Items confiscated included 16 bottles of whiskey, vodka, gin and wine and 15 12-ounce beers.

A 40-year-old man remained in city jail this morning after police were dispatched to 111 N. Lamesa about 5 p.m. Saturday after shots were fired. According to reports, police found Leon Lester, of the same address, with a shotgun that contained a spent cartridge.

The suspect, who gave police an address in the 1600 block of Pennsylvania, fired at Lester's house from the front yard before Lester took the shotgun away from him, police said.

Jackie Thompson, of 1503 Cimmaron, reported at noon Sunday the burglary of her house. Reports indicate the burglary took place Oct. 29 and a $400 18-karat gold arrowhead, a $100 16-inch gold chain and a $600 diamond horseshoe ring were taken. Also missing were $140 in cash and six cassette tapes, valued at about $50. Total loss was placed at $1,295.

Robert John Wegher, of 4415 Northcrest No. 817, reported his apartment was burglarized between 8 p.m. Saturday and 3 p.m. Sunday. Taken were a black and white television set, a camera, two lenses and $300 in cash. Total loss was placed at $1,100.

According to reports there were no signs of forced entry, but the victim found an apartment key that he said did not belong to him in a living room desk.

A money bag containing $900 in cash was reported missing from the Preston Milk Store at 438 Andrews Highway at 3 p.m. Sunday.

According to Rhonda Parsons, a well-dressed couple came into the store asking if they could make a phone call. The man went behind the counter, where the money bag was kept, and made a call. Ms. Parsons, who was waiting on other customers, did not see anyone take the bag, but noticed it was missing after the couple left.

The man was described as black, in his early 30s, about 6-foot-2 and weighing about 175 pounds. He had short hair and was wearing a light purple suit and a class ring with a dark background.

The woman was described as black, in her late 20s, about 5-foot-6 and weighing about 125 pounds. She was wearing a black short-sleeved dress, large black earrings with white circles and high heels. She had a scar on the right side of her face.

The couple told Ms. Parsons they were on their way to church, she said.

Mike Madrid, of 1214 E. Jax, reported at 7 a.m. Sunday the burglary of his automobile. According to reports, his 1983 Chevrolet Silverado was parked on the eastside of his residence about 10:30 p.m. Saturday. When he went to move it at 7 a.m. Sunday, he found the driver's side window, valued at $150, had been broken. Missing were a .22-caliber rifle and a box of shells, a mirror, cassette tape and a camera. Total loss was placed at $445.

Midlander reports robbery in holding cell

From Staff Reports

A 46-year-old old Midland man, taken to the city jail early Saturday, reported he was robbed in the holding cell by another misdemeanor suspect.

Jimmy A. Rodriguez, of 1400 S. Atlanta, told police he was in the cell about 3:30 a.m. with a 22-year-old man, who also was arrested for public intoxication at Red's Barbecue, 1807 E. Front. The men were sitting facing each other when, according to Rodriguez, the other man stood up, walked over to him and cursed at him.

Rodriguez was handcuffed with his hands behind him while the other man was handcuffed with his hands in front of him, according to police reports.

Rodriguez told police the suspect grabbed him by the coat collar, shoved him around to face the brick wall and struck his face into the wall. Rodriguez said he fell to the floor and the man rolled him over on his back and removed a $100 bill and "at least" one $20 bill from his right front trouser pocket.

Rodriguez, after making the complaint, was taken to the Midland Memorial Hospital Emergency Room for treatment of a cut to the left forehead, reports said.

When Rodriguez was brought back to the station, he was booked for public intoxication and property listed included $17.25. The other man was processed with $121.32, which included a $100 bill, a $10 bill and 10 $1 bills.

An investigation is continuing under Sgt. B.G. Johnson.

Ector County has record number of absentee votes

From Staff Reports

ODESSA — As in Midland County, record numbers were recorded during the two weeks of absentee voting which ended Friday at the Ector County Courthouse.

Chief Deputy County Clerk Margaret Molthan said the unofficial count of absentee ballots cast (not counting mail-ins which are accepted through election night) surpassed all previous elections.

Ms. Molthan said 5,852 ballots were cast absentee through Friday. Another 1,698 ballots were mailed out and can be returned through Tuesday.

In Midland County, there were 11,240 who voted absentee at the Elections Administrator's office, compared to 5,209 in 1980.

The 5,852 who ventured to the Ector County courthouse to vote before Nov. 6 were almost 900 more than 4,970 that voted early before the 1980 presidential election, said Ms. Molthan.

Almost double the number of absentee ballots were mailed out — 1,698 this year compared to 925 sent in 1980. On election day, another 36,866 exercised their right to vote in 1980, according to county records.

"We've never voted this many before," said Ms. Molthan, adding the county clerk's office was prepared for a 70 percent turnout Tuesday. This would mean more than 40,000 would go to vote on election day.

Rival cookoffs may end up in red

TERLINGUA (AP) — If two "original" Terlingua chili cookoffs don't reach harmony they might both wind up in the red, an official of one group says.

And chili cookers as well are left with a bad taste in their mouths because of the competing competitions.

Three Houston cookoff enthusiasts showed their contempt for separate cookoffs by setting up their gear near Texas Highway 170 last weekend and giving away sample chili.

"The cooks want one cookoff," Jim Graves said. "I've talked to a lot of cooks and most feel the same way."

"This split is costing both sides lots of money," said Dick Wright of Richardson, a food firm sales manager and official of the 18th Annual Original Terlingua International Frank X. Tolbert and Wick Fowler Chili Cookoff.

Wright said efforts are already under way between his group and the Chili Appreciation Society International Cookoff leaders to meet early next year and iron out their differences.

Former chief's wife in stable condition after Friday stabbing

From Staff Reports

ODESSA — The 60-year-old wife of a former Odessa chief of police remained in stable condition this morning following a beating and stabbing Friday night by a man who forced his way into her home.

Police are investigating as attempted capital murder the incident which occurred about 6:30 p.m. Friday at the residence of former police chief Jack Tomblin at 1634 E. Everglade.

His wife, Marion Lois Tomlin, 60, answered the door to find a black man described only as in his late teens or early 20s at the door. The man forced his way inside, demanded money, then beat and stabbed her in the upper back, according to police reports.

Investigation continues as to the identity of the man, who reports indicate must have escaped on foot. Ms. Tomlin remained in stable condition this morning in the intensive care unit of Odessa Medical Center Hospital.

Cooke County family honored for century on land

DEXTER, Texas (AP) — The crape myrtle is still alive, having grown several feet higher and wider through the decades. The remnants of the old well, now filled with rocks, have become a favorite hiding place for one sly rabbit often chased by the family dogs, and the storm cellar is still leaking after all these years.

Virgil and Louise Welch worried that last year's hard winter would at last kill off the almost century-old East Indian shrub, but the crape myrtle, like Louise's family homestead, has survived.

"I guess that's what makes it so interesting, that one piece of land has stayed so long in a family," Virgil said.

Virgil and Louise and their son, Walter Dee Welch, and his family are among 92 property-owning families in the state whose land will be honored by the State Department of Agriculture and Agriculture Commissioner Jim Hightower for "maintaining continuous agricultural production for a century or more."

The Welches are the only Cooke County family to be honored this year by the Texas Family Land Heritage Program. Since the program's beginning in 1974, the state has registered 1,821 farms and ranches. Cooke County communities have been home to about 20 of these farms and ranches.

The 169.77 acres of honored property belonging to the Welches has a history dating back to the 1800s. A major piece of the land, about 157 acres, was purchased by Louise's great-grandfather, Isham Lamb, from J.M. Lindsay Feb. 25, 1870. Great-grandfather Lamb purchased the remaining 12,77 acres from Lindsay on March 28, 1874.

Louise still remembers playing in one of the huge apple trees that was once a part of her great-grandfather's orchard. The orchard is now only remembered by Louise (and the four remaining pear trees that stand northwest of Virgil's and Louise's home, if they remember such things.)

Louise's grandfather, a corn farmer, is credited with holding the family farm together. After the land passed on to him and his brothers and sisters, he bought out his siblings and added another stretch of land just south of the original property. Grandfather Lamb's purchase brought the family acreage to 352 acres.

LOUISE AND HER sister were born in a house built by her grandparents, D. and Elizabeth Lamb. The home was made of hand-hewn oak logs that were held together with clay and wooden spikes.

An 1890 photograph of Louise's grandparents shows the family in the process of adding siding and a new roof to the home. Pictured in front of the logs is the same old crape myrtle bush, then in its infancy.

Virgil said the family spent years wondering before a professional photographer explained to them why the family dog appeared as twins in the picture.

The dog — or dogs as depicted in the photograph — were a product of 1890 technology. Everybody but the dog knew to stand still for the picture. While the shutter was standing open for the correct time exposure, "Spot" moved and a "ghost dog" or double image of the pooch appeared on the print.

Claude and Ola Lamb, Louise's parents, inherited the land and the log house from Grandfather and Grandmother Lamb.

Ola was a lover of flowers. The yard surrounding her log home was either filled with flowers or "swept clean" in the areas where flowers would not grow, Louise recalls.

For her father, it was his fields — corn, cotton, wheat, hay, oats and peanuts.

A BELIEVER in the tried-and-true methods of farming, her father at one time finally decided to trade his two mules, Kate and Jude, on a tractor, Louise said. He made the deal with Gainesville's Schad and Pulte, but after a worrisome night returned the next morning and traded back.

"He just wasn't convinced the tractor could do the job," Virgil said, adding that Lamb was eventually won over to farming with a tractor.

Much of the family house was torn down when Louise's sister, Jean, needed the timber to build a new home in Whitesboro, Texas. When Virgil and Louise returned to Dexter to make a home on the family property they tore down the remaining log walls that had been left to sway in the wind.

VIRGIL AND LOUISE had left Dexter in 1955 for El Paso. Between 1955 and 1976 they lived in El Paso and Hobbs, N.M., working as part-time cattle raisers and full-time teachers.

The couple retired in 1976 and made the decision to return.

"We didn't retire to rest, we retired to go to work," Virgil said.

And work they did. They moved back to the north corner of the family property that had become Louise's after the deaths of her mother and father and set about the task of building a home in what Virgil describes as a "jungle."

"It was just like homesteading new land," Virgil said.

They weaved in family heirlooms and pieces of family heritage into their home wherever possible.

Sand rocks taken from the old chimney have been made into the sidewalk that leads up to the Welch home and the chimney was transformed into a walkway to the cellar.

OAK LOGS from the original Lamb house can be seen in the beginnings of a fence in front of their home and in a windbreak wall put in the bull pasture to protect "Old Red" and friends, the Welches' three Brahman bulls.

Louise has put in two rows of grapes in about the same area her great-grandmother's vineyards grew, and she has created an overpopulation of walnut trees in her attempt to bring back the walnut trees that once grew in front of the log house and cellar.

Today the Lamb family farm has become more of a family ranch.

CRIME STOPPERS IS WORKING

Burglaries and narcotics are targets of a successful new program called Crime Stoppers. Dallas Smith began this new program in January, 1984.

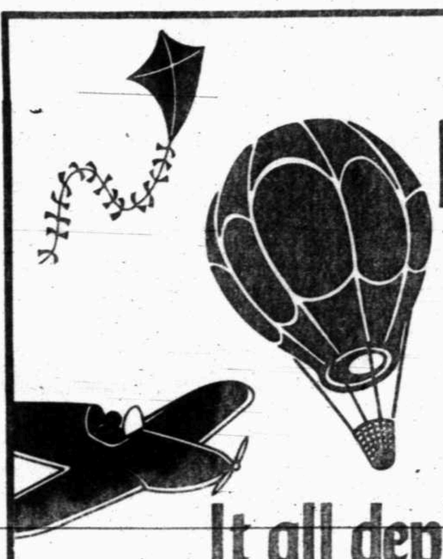

Crime Stoppers allows any person calling with information on crimes such as burglaries and narcotics to remain anonymous. This program has been responsible for the arrest of 42 felony offenders.

Burglaries have declined 14.2% in 1984 in rural Midland County as a result of good management by a proven professional.

Memories of massacre still haunt gunman's family

Copley News Service

CHULA VISTA, Calif. — These fall days are lonely days for Etna Huberty.

The widow of James Oliver Huberty, the gunman who killed 21 people at a San Ysidro restaurant last July, is in a new apartment in this South Bay community, just four freeway miles from where he met his death at the hands of a police sharpshooter.

Although urged to do-so by family members, she has changed her address but not her name. "I've never taken the easy way out," she said, explaining her reluctance.

For her daughters, it's different. The sisters, one 12, and the other 10, attend school under an assumed last name.

The older girl said she doesn't mind the new name too much even though it is one letter longer.

"If I forget, people will know (who she is) and then they will harass me. Besides, I don't want to get yelled at by my mother," she said.

"On my papers, sometimes I write Huberty," her sister said. It's hard to remember."

MRS. HUBERTY said her daughters wanted to stay in the San Ysidro schools where they were enrolled last spring, but school officials thought it best for all concerned if they went elsewhere.

Etna Huberty, 41, does not dwell on the events of July 18, but the memories come flooding back unbidden.

"It's rather a difficult thing to forget," she said.

Only a trick of fate kept her and her daughters from becoming her husband's victims instead of complete strangers.

The three carry no visible scars. They keep their pain hidden, with bravado a ready cover.

"I always figured there was a good possibility of him killing me one day," Etna Huberty admitted. Her husband once pointed a gun at her while he was less than an arm's length away.

As for her daughters, "I didn't become afraid for the girls until after February," she recalled, citing a disagreement between the older girl and her father.

"She went flying into her bedroom with an Uzi (an Israeli-made sub-machine gun) pointed at her."

Another time, when she spent $300 for work on the older girl's braces, Huberty asked her why she was putting "all that money" into her teeth "when she is not going to live or be around or alive or something like that."

MRS. HUBERTY said her husband, to her knowledge, never did anything to harm the girls physically although he "might have spanked them too hard sometimes."

Even though the girls were close enough to the McDonald's on July 18 to see what their father had done, they still love him, Mrs. Huberty said. The younger girl "doesn't hold grudges" and the older girl "realizes her father was ill," she explained.

The older girl remembers seeing the dead and wounded at the McDonald's when she and a friend went to get her sister who was at their old apartment in San Ysidro, just up the street from the restaurant.

"I was sort of numb. I didn't know what to think," she said.

She saw the body of "the little Flores boy who was flopped over his bicycle" and the wounded Joshua Coleman whose name she learned later.

"I didn't look very long," she said.

She recalled her father leaving the apartment with "a gun slung over his shoulder and a box so big with ammunition," she said, making a square with her hands. He had on fatigues and another gun wrapped in a blanket."

At first she thought he was going to the hills to shoot. "That's how he got rid of his anger."

BUT, SHE said, she "sort of knew what he was going to do. At the carousel at the zoo (earlier in the day), he said society had had its chance."

Etna Huberty is the widow of James Oliver Huberty, the gunman who killed 21 people at a McDonald's restaurant in San Ysidro, Calif., on July 18.

As for missing him, "sometimes I do and sometimes I don't."

She misses the walks, bike rides and shopping with him. "I don't miss him babbling on about people that were talking to him, those voices. I don't miss him fighting and carrying on.

"Part of me will remember him as a very nice person, loving, gentle and kind. Another part will remember him as a violent person."

She considers herself different from other children "because they'll never know what I saw. I thought I was in a nightmare, but I knew it was reality."

"To shoot people, little babies you know, that would be quite ill."

The younger girl puts it in the simple terms of a 10-year-old. "Everybody died and I felt sorry for my dad because he went cuckoo, but I feel more sorry for the dead people."

She watched the scene at McDonald's from a balcony of the apartment building on Averil Road.

"I saw my Dad's and Mom's car down there. I thought my dad was doing the crime ..."

SHE SAID she feels "sorry about Dad" and "sometimes a little bit sad." She and her sister echo their mother when they say that perhaps if the mental health clinic he called had returned his call or provided counseling, the killings might not have happened. They also blame an auto accident last year in which Huberty was slightly injured.

Etna Huberty was in Mexico at the time of the crash, she said. When she returned, she found her husband to be a different man.

Even though at times she wishes the gun she aimed at him in anger 13 years ago had not jammed and spared his life, Etna Huberty misses her husband. She does not subscribe to the love depicted in Hollywood movies, but she acknowledges she cared for him.

"Oct. 11 was his birthday," she said, almost wistfully."

There would have been walks on nippy October days in Massillon, Ohio.

"It smells good. We would hold hands, go home and have hot chocolate or go to the Red Barn and have hot chocolate. But times are so hard, even the Red Barn is closed," she said.

Instead, Mrs. Huberty sits in a two-bedroom apartment that she moved to Oct. 1, attempting to put her life together in much the same way she is attempting to assemble her bed frame, now in pieces in her bedroom. In the meanwhile, she sleeps on the hide-a-bed in the living room.

SHE SHARES her closet and dresser drawers with her husband's belongings. On her left wrist, she wears his watch. She explains herself, saying she becomes attached to people and things. She's kept toys that belonged to a dead dog, she said. And when one pet died, "I cried every day except for two for an entire year."

And has she cried as much for her husband? "I've cried enough."

Missing from his belongings are the weapons he loved. Police Chief Bill Kolender said the ones he used to kill 21 persons and seriously wound others at the restaurant probably will be dumped into the ocean.

Although some weapons used in crimes are sold to dealers and the money used to buy police weapons, this will not be the case with the Huberty guns. "We don't need them," he said, acknowledging the decision to destroy them is tied to the notoriety of the case.

But Mrs. Huberty hopes police will return to her his revolver, a Luger and a 2-shot Derringer.

From time to time, she regrets that she did not listen to her late mother who was opposed to her marriage.

"Mother was not keen on Jim from the beginning. She tried to talk me out of marrying him the night before we got married."

MRS. HUBERTY does not blame herself for what happened on July 18. But had she had a crystal ball, she would have not taken a gun away from him when he once tried to commit suicide.

Questions about her future bring the hint of tears.

"I have no plans other than taking the kids to Europe and Mexico City and getting them economically sound."

The plans for Europe are for perhaps next summer. And the chore of taking care of her children involves repossessing a house and other property which she sold and for which she has not been paid.

She has thought of suicide, she admitted, saying "I believe people have a right to choose when they'll die.

"There comes a time when you're not interested in surviving," she said.

Study: Mentally ill don't seek help

Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

When a major government study suggested last week that one in five American adults suffers from mental illness, it also reported an equally astonishing statistic: only 19 percent of people with psychological problems seek help.

"Even those who do receive treatment are more likely to see a general physician than a psychiatrist or other mental health specialist," says Dr. Darrel A. Regier, who headed the National Institute of Mental Health's landmark study.

Researchers are eager to pinpoint why so few people seek help. Preliminary findings suggest two major stumbling blocks. One is the stigma of having a mental illness.

"People really don't understand that getting help is a sign of strength, not a sign of weakness," says Stephen Goldston, Director, NIMH Office of Prevention.

THE OTHER is that medical doctors are able to diagnose correctly only about half of the patients who come to them with symptoms of psychiatric disorders, according to NIMH studies.

"Many primary care physicians are not yet well skilled in diagnosing and treating emotional disturbance problems and mental illness," says Dr. Larry Silver, Acting Director, NIMH.

Two new NIMH educational campaigns could help. One, Silver says, will teach medical students and physicians how better to recognize the signs and symptoms of emotional disturbance and mental illness.

The second campaign is designed to heighten public awareness of symptoms and to encourage treatment — similar to efforts combatting cancer and heart disease.

Lack of money is another major reason why people with problems don't seek help. Insurance coverage for mental disorders lags behind that for physical ailments, although 26 states have passed mental health benefit laws.

But even those who have insurance coverage sometimes fear the repercussions of using it. The parents of one pre-med student at Howard University opted to pay for their son's treatment at another hospital rather than have him treated at the university. They were afraid that the same doctors who treated their son might later deny him entrance to Howard's medical school.

Discrimination does occur at times against people who are open about their treatment. A woman who works for a private company with Defense Department contracts was denied a security clearance recently because she is seeing a psychologist.

Her company's security chief declared that any employee undergoing psychological or psychiatric treatment would not be eligible for security clearance, regardless of the reason for therapy, said the woman's psychologist, who requests anonymity.

Other employers, however, are more open to mental health treatment. The World Bank, the Secret Service and the Central Intelligence Agency are just some of the organizations that offer employee assistance programs.

Donors advised to investigate charities

NEW YORK (AP) — Studies show that a sense of depression often accompanies the holiday season, says Dr. Philip F. McKean, a cultural anthropologist, who suggests that putting the emphasis on giving rather than getting will avoid these feelings.

Many people have a deep desire to receive gifts at holiday time, based on childhood memories and expectations, notes McKean, director of Planned Giving for CARE, the international aid and development organization.

"But we're bound to be disappointed and depressed if that is the center of our holiday attention, because we never receive enough of the 'right' presents to fulfill our juvenile fantasies," he says.

"Grow up," he advises. "Learn to become a 'good giver' rather than a passive receiver. When we reach out by making gifts to others, we assert our maturity instead of our immaturity. Our culture emphasizes 'gimme and get' but each of us must learn to 'give and grow' for a deeper joy and satisfaction."

McKean has these suggestions for making gifts count:

— Make a holiday "gift list" to include at least one local, one national and one international cause that expresses your concern and compassion, and reaches beyond yourself.

— Examine the charity to be sure it is doing the bona fide work you want and expect it to do — whether in health care, education, religious leadership, the arts, social services or overseas development and relief.

— To be sure your funds are going to organizations that are publicly accountable, check with a Better Business Bureau.

DEAR ABBY

Jewish wraith arouses Catholic's wrath

By ABIGIAL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: I have a problem. A very big one.

For three years I was tormented by a Jewish ghost who thought I was his wife. I moved into the apartment where he and his wife once lived. They both died, but he kept coming back to the apartment to be near her.

After three years, I just couldn't take it anymore, so I moved. Well, he followed me, and now I am right back where I started.

Abby, how can I get rid of him? I am a widow, and I'm not even Jewish. I'm Catholic. — KATHLEEN IN THE BRONX

DEAR KATHLEEN: Have you told your priest about this? If not, please tell him at once. He may be able to arrange an exorcism to rid you of this "Jewish ghost."

DEAR ABBY: With regard to your column on fire prevention: Your closing sentence was, "It took less than three minutes to read this column. Was it worth it?"

While it was well-worth the three minutes, I would have gladly spent a few more minutes to find out why you felt compelled to compare Canada's comparatively low death and fire-damage figures to those of the United States. — HOT WITH CURIOSITY IN THE U.S.A.

DEAR HOT: Cool off. It was not my intention to make comparisons. I cited Canadian statistics as well as ours because my column is also published in Canada, and I think my Canadian readers are entitled to know their statistics, too.

And apropos that column on fire prevention, read on for one of many similar complaints:

DEAR ABBY: As a firefighter I appreciate your annual column on fire prevention, but I have a complaint. You said, "If you can afford smoke detectors, install them, etc. ..."

Abby, EVERYBODY can afford smoke detectors! They are not that expensive. One can be purchased for as little as $15.

If there is one single thing that saves lives in a fire, it's a smoke detector. It alerts people in time to let them get out of the house. Those few seconds can make the difference between life and death. Please print this. — FIREFIGHTER IN BABYLON, N.Y.

DEAR ABBY: I know this isn't your usual "Dear Abby" question, but I don't know anyone else to ask.

I moved to Harrington Park, N.J., five months ago, and started feeding the birds on my property. I had 20 or more birds every day. Some were beautiful.

Then one day they suddenly disappeared. I have several trees on my property, and not one bird in any of them! No pesticide was sprayed, and there are no cats or dogs around.

Can you please tell me what might have happened to those birds? — MRS. C.

DEAR MRS. C.: The birds probably went south for the winter. You don't say where you came from, but after one winter in New Jersey, you'll realize that those birds are not cuckoos.

Grocery prices hold steady

By COTTEN TIMBERLAKE
AP Business Writer

Grocery prices held steady in October, dipping less than one-tenth of 1 percent on lower meat and egg prices, the monthly AP Marketbasket survey found.

The tab for 14 commonly purchased items fell 1.7 percent during September.

The latest results showed that prices increased in eight cities an average of 2 percent. They decreased in five cities an average 3.4 percent.

Beef frankfurters fell 1.5 percent and chopped chuck slipped 0.04 percent. Eggs dropped 2.7 percent.

On the upside, butter rose 0.5 percent and peanut butter gained 1.1 percent. Pork chops, which had slid 9.4 percent in September, rose a slim 0.4 percent.

"There's a little up here, a little down there, but overall things are flat and that's a pretty nice impression. Really, that's the way you like to see prices," said David A. Wyss, an economist at Data Resources Inc. in Lexington, Mass.

"The marketbasket price index seems to bounce around enough that anything under 1 percent is pretty much rounding," Wyss said.

"If it keeps going in the same direction for a few months in a row then its time to get worried, or time to be happy, depending on which direction," he said.

But falling prices can cause as many problems as rising prices, he added, explaining: "One person's price is another person's income. If you have egg prices falling steadily, you have some very unhappy poultry farmers out there."

Bob Saathoff, director of commodity research at Prudential-Bache Securities Inc. in New York, attributed the recent declines in egg prices to continued increases in egg production.

"You're going to be looking at higher egg production throughout 1984 and mid-1985. That should hold your egg prices lower, except for the seasonal rallies at Thanksgiving and Christmas with everyone cooking and baking," he said.

Asked about the decline in beef prices, he said wholesale beef prices have been drifting lower the past three months because there have been near-record supplies of meats available.

A seasonal slackening in demand for chuck has pressured prices, too, he said.

"Chuck is a more popular item in the wintertime," he said, adding that consumers should expect the price of chopped chuck to rise in the next few months as demand rises and farmers cut back on slaughter.

Asked about the reversal in pork chop prices, he said, "You've seen about the low on the pork loins. That's going to drift higher, too."

A look at the overall number of items in the AP survey found more items fell during October than September. Here are the percentages of increases and decreases:

	Sept.	Oct.
Up	22	22
Down	23	28
Unchanged	53	47
Unavailable	2	3

The Associated Press drew up a random list of 15 commonly purchased food and non-food items, checked the price at one supermarket in each of 13 cities on March 1, 1973, and has rechecked on or about the start of each succeeding month. One item, chocolate chip cookies, was dropped from the list several years ago because the manufacturer discontinued the package size used in the survey.

No attempt was made to weight the AP survey results according to population density or in terms of what percent of a family's actual grocery outlay each item represents.

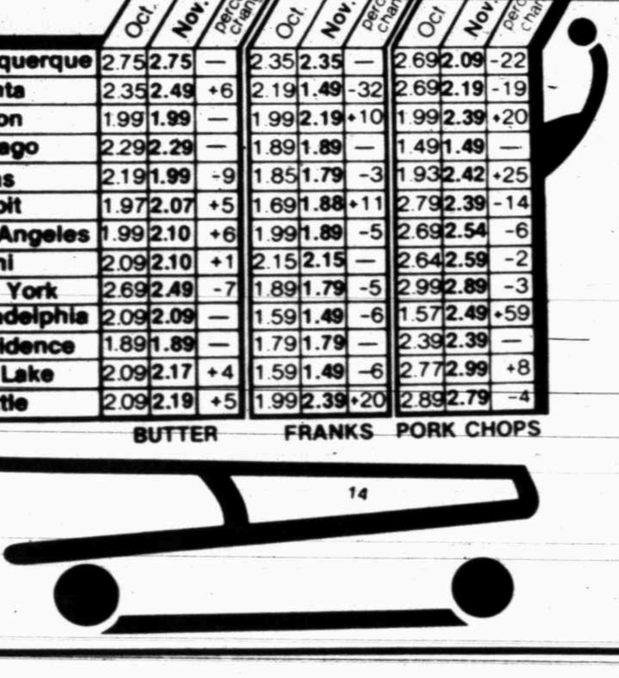

The day of the week on which the check was made varied depending on the month. Standard brands and sizes were used when available. If the requested size and brand was not available on March 1, 1973, a comparable substitute was selected. Items temporarily out of stock on one of the survey dates being compared were not included in the overall total.

The AP did not try to compare actual prices from city to city — to say, for example, that eggs cost more in one area than another. The only comparisons were made in terms of percentages of increase or decrease — saying, for example, a particular item went up 10 percent in one city and 6 percent in another.

The USDA marketbasket issued each month is based on a complex set of statistics. It is used to keep track of changes in the proportion of the food dollar received by the farmer, wholesaler and retailer and does not correspond to actual family spending.

Customers at the Handy Dan hardware store leave the store after purchasing items formerly prohibited under the state's 23-year-old blue law until the chain won their challenge in state district court three weeks ago.

Blue law controversy rages on

HOUSTON (AP) — The president of a group that favors Texas' blue law says he will do his best to see that merchants who opened for business both days this weekend will not get away with it.

Maury Aresty, president of the Retail Merchants Association of Houston Inc., said Sunday a shopper for his group made purchases in several stores in two malls both days of this weekend.

"We'll continue to file lawsuits until everybody is in compliance," he said. "We take great exception to retailers coming into this town and violating the law."

He said he "traveled the city pretty completely" and found that aside from stores in the two off-price malls, "the city was pretty much in compliance."

David Christensen, owner of five stores called Textile Outlets of Houston Inc., said he and other businessmen in the two recently opened malls decided to challenge the 23-year-old law after a state district judge ruled in favor of Handy Dan Do-It-Yourself Home Centers Oct. 9.

"If it's right for Handy Dan, why isn't it right for the merchants at the Buyers Market malls?" Christensen asked. Christensen was working at a west Houston store.

State District Judge Dee Brown Walker ruled Friday the blue law is unconstitutional, unenforceable and "out of joint with the times."

Christensen is the leader of merchants challenging the law in two Buyers Market malls in north and west Houston.

The blue law prohibits the sale of 42 types of merchandise on consecutive Saturdays and Sundays. Groups of local businessmen lobbied the law through the Texas Legislature when discount chain stores moved into the state.

The local groups argued that their small operations would be forced to work employees seven days a week to compete with the new stores.

"My rebuttal to that is, why not hire other employees?" Christensen said. "Put people to work to help with the unemployment around this area."

He said 16 percent of the population in Houston is employed by retail stores.

"Why not make it 17 percent, or whatever, and give people the right to shop at their chosen time?" Christensen said.

David Jacobs, manager of Bart's Menswear at the north Houston Buyers Market store, said "customer reaction has been very favorable" to the Sunday opening.

"Customer traffic in this mall and in my store is substantially better than it is the first half of the week," he said. Jacobs said he estimated his sales were 40 to 50 percent higher than on a normal Monday or Tuesday.

Jacobs said about three-quarters of the approximately 40 stores in his mall were open. He said his stores would remain open on Sundays permanently, "not just for the Christmas season."

Some Houston stores outside the malls were open Sunday, but many said they were not challenging the blue law.

Here's how the basket fared

Here is a city-by-city breakdown of what happened during October:

ALBUQUERQUE: The marketbasket tab fell 3.3 percent to $20.97 from $21.69. Pork chops, detergent, tomato sauce, milk and eggs were cheaper. Chopped chuck and coffee rose. The seven other items were unchanged.

ATLANTA: The bill rose 3.6 percent from $19.55 to $20.26, not including fabric softener, which was unavailable. Higher were chopped chuck, orange juice, coffee, paper towels, butter, peanut butter, detergent, tomato sauce, milk and sugar. Pork chops, eggs and franks were lower.

BOSTON: The total climbed 3.3 percent to $20.98 from $20.30. Chopped chuck, pork chops, coffee, peanut butter, fabric softener and franks cost more. Orange juice, paper towels, eggs and tomato sauce cost less. The other four items cost the same.

CHICAGO: Grocery prices edged up 0.5 percent to $19.84 from $19.75. Peanut butter, fabric softener and milk rose. Tomato sauce and sugar fell. The nine other items held steady.

DALLAS: The marketbasket tab retreated 1.4 percent. It was $21.03 vs. $21.32. Cheaper were chopped chuck, orange juice, coffee, butter, eggs, tomato sauce, milk and franks. More expensive were pork chops, detergent and peanut butter. Paper towels, fabric softener and sugar didn't move.

DETROIT: The bill came to $18.22 compared with $19.21. That was a 5.1 percent drop. Chopped chuck, pork chops, eggs and sugar dropped. Butter and franks moved up. Orange juice, coffee, peanut butter, detergent, tomato sauce and milk were unchanged. Paper towels and fabric softener were unavailable.

LOS ANGELES: Grocery prices sank 5 percent to $19.05 from $20.05. Chopped chuck, pork chops, orange juice, coffee, eggs, peanut butter, detergent, milk, franks and sugar declined. Only butter increased. Fabric softener and tomato sauce stayed the same. Paper towels weren't available.

MIAMI: The total edged up 0.6 percent from $20.26 to $20.38. More expensive were chopped chuck, butter, peanut butter and milk. Cheaper were pork chops, coffee, paper towels, detergent and tomato sauce. Unchanged were orange juice, eggs, fabric softener, franks and sugar.

NEW YORK: The bill edged up 0.4 percent to $24.06 from $23.96. Coffee, eggs and sugar cost more. Pork chops, butter and franks cost less. The other eight items cost the same.

PHILADELPHIA: Prices jumped 3.7 percent from $19.44 to $20.16 because pork chops spurted. Chopped chuck and franks fell. The 11 other items didn't move.

PROVIDENCE: The total retreated 2.2 percent, pulled down by much-cheaper peanut butter as the 13 other items held steady.

SALT LAKE CITY: The overall tab rose 3 percent to $19.98 from $19.40, not including paper towels, which were unavailable. Chopped chuck, pork chops, butter and peanut butter rose. Franks fell. The eight other items were unchanged.

SEATTLE: The total rose 1.2 percent to $22.54 from $22.28. Butter and franks pulled the total up. Chopped chuck, pork chops and eggs moved downward. The nine other items held steady.

Laid off Texaco workers get skills

BEAUMONT, Texas (AP) — Texaco workers to be laid off next week will be able to obtain help in learning new skills because of a $2 million state job retraining grant.

The largest share of money allocated Friday under the Job Training Partnership act went to Jefferson County, County Judge Richard LeBlanc said.

"It's a big plus for us. I'm real excited about it," LeBlanc told the Beaumont Enterprise.

The grant immediately will affect about 700 people — the first wave of the Texaco layoffs expected to begin next week, he said.

Texaco will contribute retraining money for each worker laid off to allow the county to qualify for the grant. To qualify, the county must show it can match the grant with private money, LeBlanc said.

"We have a good team here. We have excellent cooperation with Texaco; the Oil, Chemical and Atomic Workers; and other unions," said LeBlanc, who is chairman of the state Worker's Adjustment Committee, part of the Job Training Council.

The council replaced the old Comprehensive Employment Training Act.

Four different programs will be supported by the grant, and LeBlanc said a committee will work out funding levels for each next week. Laid-off workers will be shown how to prepare resumes and sharpen their job-seeking skills and also provided on-the-job or classroom training for new jobs.

A pilot project for entrepreneurial training at John Gray Institute of Lamar University will also be financed by the grant, LeBlanc said.

People interested in starting a small business will be given advice on marketing and advertising, how to file government reports, and how to keep books.

IBM computer victim files bankruptcy

N.Y. Times News Service

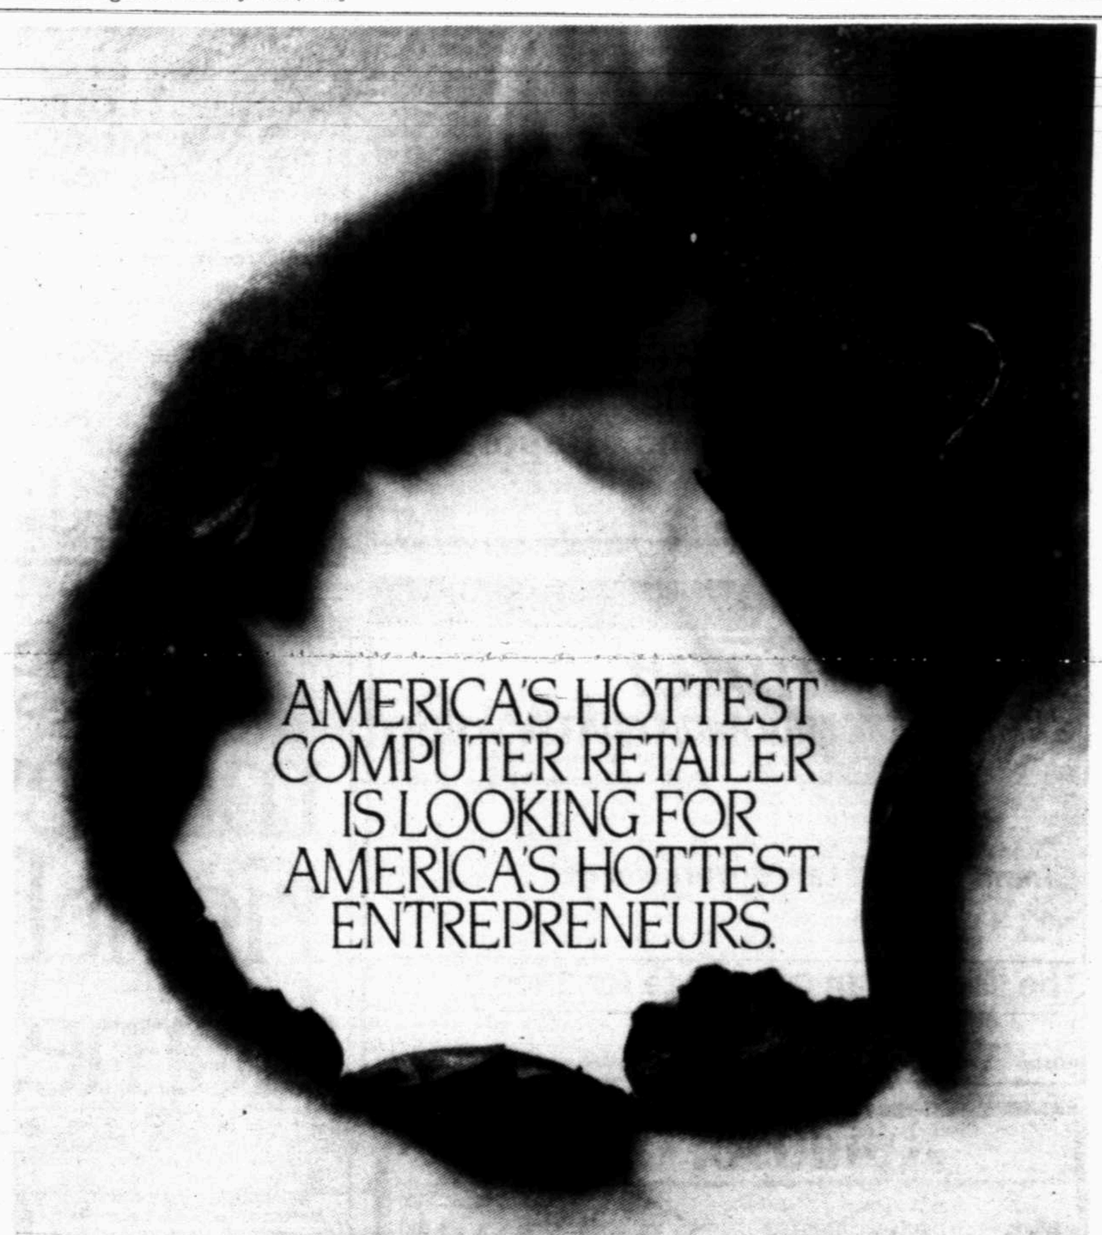

NEW YORK — The Storage Technology Corp., a one-time computer industry highflier, has filed for bankruptcy protection, the victim of increased aggressiveness by the International Business Machines Corp., and of its own mistakes.

The Louisville, Colo., manufacturer of data storage devices for large computers said it had decided that its "best alternative" was to seek reorganization under Chapter 11 of the Bankruptcy Code. In Chapter 11, Storage will be allowed to reorganize, with its creditors being held temporarily at bay.

The company has been renegotiating its credit agreement with its banks, and said it was seeking a "significant capital commitment" to fund continuing operations.

It also said that it now expects to report a loss of at least $60 million for the third quarter, and is considering additional write-offs.

The failure of Storage Technology — which once had annual sales of $1 billion — follows by one month the announcement by the Control Data Corp. that it was pulling out of the business of supplying disk data storage devices for IBM mainframe computers. That leaves only one American company, the Memorex division of the Burroughs Corp., still in the business, and that company has had production problems as well. Two Japanese companies, Fujitsu and Hitachi, also compete in the business, but their technology is said by analysts to lag.

There's a fire burning. And we hope it's inside you.

We're Entré Computer Centers. And we're America's most dynamic computer retailer—with more than 200 franchised Centers opened in just two years. So if you have an overwhelming desire to succeed, maybe it would pay to know more about owning an Entré Computer Center franchise.

Fatigue-clad machinists union members chant before calling to order a closed meeting Sunday. About 98 percent of the 5,500 union members in attendance voted in favor of a strike that began at midnight Sunday at the General Dynamics aviationplant in Fort Worth.

Union workers on strike because of pay dispute

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — Picket lines went up today at General Dynamics' Forth Worth Division as 6,400 union workers went on strike against the defense contractor in a pay dispute.

By a margin of 98 percent, members of District Lodge 776 of the International Association of Machinists and Aerospace Workers voted Sunday for the walkout, the first at the aircraft manufacturing plant since 1946.

The strike will halt a construction schedule of 15 F-16 jet fighter planes a month at the plant, which employs 15,000 workers, said lodge president Pat Lane.

"We are out and we have people out on the picket lines right now," union spokesman Larry Harmon said shortly after midnight.

Lane said the union had insisted on a 2½-year contract while General Dynamics wanted a 3-year pact.

Also, he said, the company had offered a 3 percent cash bonus in lieu of general wage increases, which the union wanted in increments of 8-percent, 5 percent and 5 percent over the life of the contract.

Lane said the average hourly wage scale at General Dynamics here is $12.01, about 85 cents an hour below the next lowest for his union's members in the industry.

Retirement pay and holiday time off also entered into the dispute, Lane said, adding that union members voted in favor of the strike 4,936 to 108 after turning down a proposed new three-year contract.

Lane said he expected some 1,200 office and clerical workers, whose contract also expired at midnight and who were to report to work this morning, to honor the picket lines.

General Dynamics spokesman Z. Joe Thornton said negotiations halted at noon Thursday when union representatives walked out, "preventing the parties from a full opportunity to avoid a strike."

"We are disappointed that apparently there will ba a strike by the IAM. The plant remains open and work will continue," Thornton said, reading from a prepared statement. "We are ready to return to the bargaining table and resume negotiations on a new labor contract."

Agents want insurance tables modified

AUSTIN—Insurance agents are hoping lawmakers agree with the recommendations of the House Insurance Committee, and modify the current treble damages provisions in the Insurance Code, provisions agents say are unnecessarily harsh.

Rep. Kae Patrick, R-San Antonio, who chaired a subcommittee studying changes inthe deceptive trade practices provisions of the code, told the full committee, during consideration of its recommendations, that similar provisions in the Business and Commerce Code were modified earlier, leaving the insurance industry "singled out" for mandatory triple damages.

Various insurer and agents groups testified for changing the provisions during hearings conducted by Patrick's subommittee-arguing the possibility of being assessed treble damages results in pressure on agents to settle unjustified complaints, rather than risk additional larger economic loss.

Texas Trial Lawyers Association opposed changing the provisions.

The recommended change would delete mandatory treble damages provisions, providing instead actual damages plus court costs and attorney's fees, and twice the first $1,000 of damages.

If it were found that the conduct was committed knowingly, three times actual damages over $1,000, plus court costs and attorney's fees, could be awarded.

The committee also recommends that before suit can be filed, a person must give 30 days written notice of the complaint, with the potential defendant having 30 days to attempt to settle the disagreement.

Another recommendation by the committee is that agents associations work on explaining to policyholders how their uninsured/underinsured motorists coverage on auto policies works, saying the coverage is often misunderstood.

Other recommendations include continued monitoring by the Legislature of the catastrophe property insurance plan for coastal areas, including consideration of stronger building codes and enforcement of those codes in areas served by the plan.

The Subcommittee on Rural Volunteer Fire Departments rejected calls made at its hearings by some rural fire departments for a surcharge on insurance premiums to provide for equipping and operating volunteer fire departments, calling instead for a constitutional amendment to allow rural fire prevention districts to increase tax rates from three to 10 cents per $100 valuation.

Other subcommittees, whose recommendations were adopted, called for continuing use of the fire record credit-debit systems - but that the State Board of Insurance review possible changes in it -and for control of use of mandated coverages in health insurance policies

Banking Section, State Finance Commission, met Oct. 19 at Department of Bankingoffices in Austin, and invited representatives of banking trade associates to met with the section regarding expansion of banks' powers.

The section earlier had agreed to discuss backing legislation in the 1985 session of the Legislature to provide additional real estate investment powers for banks.

The State Banking Board meets at 10 a.m. Oct. 27 at Department of Banking offices on items including the use of an automated teller machine owned by a Texas bank by customers of an Arkansas bank, a situation which is being investigated by Attorney General Jim Mattox's office to determine if it may violate Texas law.

State Treasury officials are reviewing possible legislative requests for the 1985 session, with decisions expected to be made in November.

Deputy Treasurer Mary Beth Rodger says matters under consideration include possible changes in depository and unclaimed property laws, but reports that "nothing is decided" at the moment.

Approval of the agency's budget request for the 1986-1987 biennium will be a top priority, she notes.

Prince concert draws 20,000 fans, 300 reporters

Prince

DETROIT (AP) — Pop singer Prince has made it far beyond the Minneapolis nightclubs where he struggled for recognition in his film "Purple Rain," judging from the reception he got as he kicked off an international tour.

The opening concert of his "Purple Rain World Tour" Sunday night drew not only a capacity crowd of more than 20,000, but also some 300 reporters — nearly half of them from Europe, Japan and Australia, where Prince will perform before concluding the tour June 7, his birthday.

Many fans at the Joe Louis Arena mimicked the Minneapolis-born Prince's eccentric dress style, sporting pompadour haircuts, ruffles and 1980s variations on Edwardian-style suits.

Tickets for the first four shows here sold out in four hours. About 150,000 tickets have been sold for the seven scheduled Detroit performances.

The soundtrack to "Purple Rain" has sold 8 million copies.

"If nothing else, anytime someone sells 8 million albums and it's not Michael Jackson, it's worth celebrating," said Warner Bros. Records publicist Bob Merlis.

Manilow

NEW YORK (AP) — Singer Barry Manilow failed to appear on NBC's Saturday Night Live program because of a case of "nerves," a spokeswoman for the network said.

Manilow, who appeared at two sold-out concerts at Radio City Music Hall on Saturday, was to have appeared the same night on the network's weekly comedy show as "an unannounced, surprise guest." But his publicist leaked the information to the press before the show, said NBC spokeswoman Kathy Graham.

"He chickened out," she said Sunday. "It was nerves."

Manilow was to have appeared in a skit with comedian Billy Crystal.

The singer was not available for comment Sunday night; someone who answered the telephone at his publicists' firm, Rogers and Cown, said no one was available for comment.

Radio City is across the street from the building where Saturday Night Live is produced.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — If the Jack Benny Commemorative Stamp Committee has its way, some day you may be mailing letters with stamps bearing the likeness of the famous comedian.

Comedian Norm Crosby got the idea to honor Benny, who died Dec. 26, 1976. He enlisted Benny's closest friend, comedian George Burns, and Benny's manager, Irving Fein, to serve on the committee.

Crosby said the group would solicit signatures from personalities and executives in the entertainment, business and political fields before submitting the request to the U.S. Postal Service.

Ex-intelligence officer testifies in libel trial

NEW YORK (AP) — A former Army intelligence officer, testifying in retired Gen. William C. Westmoreland's $120 million libel lawsuit against CBS, has said the unit he headed accurately counted enemy troop strength in Vietnam.

Estimates of enemy troop strength and how they were arrived at are central points to the trial, resuming today in federal court after a weekend recess.

Westmoreland, the commander of U.S. ground forces in Vietnam, has charged CBS with libeling him by asserting in a 1982 television documentary that he conspired to keep estimates of enemy strength low.

Retired Capt. Robert M. Leverone last week denied that troop counts were deliberately underestimated. He was to return to the witness stand today to be cross-examined by lawyers for the network.

Leverone testified Thursday that he knew of "no enemy units...which participated in the Tet offensive that did not exist in our order of battle (intelligence report) the day before the Tet offensive."

White socks, ponytails to be fashion in 1985

BOULDER, Colo. (AP) — White socks and ponytails will be the fad as President Reagan moves into his second term in 1985, two trend watchers predict in their new book, "The American Forecaster 1985."

And, as Americans also turn to minivans, scotch, wine coolers, porno movies and colored men's underwear, they will discard Cabbage Patch dolls and suntans as no longer "in," the forecasters say.

The 190-page book by Kim Long, 35, of Denver and Terry Reim, 40, of Boulder, expands on a one-page list of "what's in" and "what's passe" that appeared in the 1984 edition.

The "what's in" list also includes gourmet mustard, the game of squash and gourmet pizza.

What will be passe in '85?

Granola bars, Penthouse and Playboy magazines, vinyl roofs on cars, USA Today, romance novels, low-alcohol beers, beef and happy hours, say the authors.

The book contains sections on politics, the economy, the consumer, jobs and education, science and computers, leisure and entertainment, fashion, the consumer, vacations and travel, health and sports.

Long and Reim expect to sell about 20,000 volumes, the number sold during the Forecaster's first year, 1984.

In the Forecaster section on politics, readers may detect a biased view of Reagan's second term, with the authors predicting a massive nuclear arms buildup, emasculation of civil rights enforcement and a concerted attack on the news media led by James Watt.

"Politics was too ripe a subject. It was too much trouble to edit out what we felt," said Long. "We wore our hearts on our sleeve."

The book predicts Reagan is unlikely to survive a second term, but says that probably won't matter. His administration's legacy will include constitutional amendments outlawing abortion and allowing prayer in public schools; unleashing of U.S. law enforcement agencies, and reorganization of the cabinet, with John Tower the new secretary of Defense, James Baker heading up the Treasury Department and former Transportation Secretary Drew Lewis as Reagan's chief of staff.

"There is nothing wrong with being subjective," said Long. "We tried the generic approach at first, but there was no interest or excitement."

The year 1985 is seen by the authors as one of rising conservatism in the United States.

In fashion, the '50s look wil be popular among men — lapels and shoulders on men's jackets will be a little wider and tie widths will be narrower. Slicked-back hair, tropical-print shirts and white socks will return in a big way, according to the Forecaster.

"It's the rock 'n roll influence," said Long. "There even is a mellowing of the music. Boy George has taken off his makeup, and Wendy-O (formerly of the Plasmatics) is out."

For women, sashes, wide belts, cinched waists and bared midriffs will be the 1985 style. To maintain a figure that can wear this clothing women will try to stay fit.

Besides foretelling trends, the Forecaster can be specific, too.

Its predictions for the 1985 Academy Awards: best picture, "Places in the Heart;" best actor, Harry Dean Stanton, for "Paris, Texas;" best actress, Sally Field, "Places in the Heart."

Its sports predictions are equally nervy. The book says the 49ers will beat the Raiders in the 1985 Super Bowl, Georgetown will win the NCAA basketball title, Edmonton will claim professional hockey's Stanley Cup, the Chicago Cubs will win the World Series and the Boston Celtics will repeat as National Basketball Association champions.

How can Long and Reim make such forecasts?

They say their predictions are a mix of calculation and intuition.

Only occasionally — like when they are talking about politics — the authors are willing to take their predictions a step beyond what the evidence shows.

"Sometimes you have to be absurdists to expose absurd thinking in the real world," Long said.

ANSWERS TO WEEKLY BRIDGE QUIZ

Q.1—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠QJ6 ♡954 ◇A83 ♣Q982
The bidding has proceeded:

North	East	South
1 ◇	Dble	?

What action do you take?

A.—Your nine "soft" points are not quite good enough for a redouble, but you must take some action. Nothing other than one no trump should even come into consideration. Over a takeout double, that shows fair values.

Q.2—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠J10652 ♡Q5 ◇J82 ♣954
Partner opens the bidding with three no trump. What action do you take?

A.—Partner has shown a balanced hand of 25-27 points, so there is no reason to presume that you have enough for slam. Also, there are no grounds for you to decide that four spades will be a better contract. Your smattering of points should be more than enough to assure that partner will make his contract. Pass.

Q.3—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠Q872 ♡AQ83 ◇9 ♣AK105
The bidding has proceeded:

East	South	West	North
1 ◇	Dble	Pass	1 ♡
Pass	?

What action do you take?

A.—You have better than a minimum takeout double, and you should advise partner of this. However, no violent action is called for—a simple raise to two hearts serves the purpose.

Q.4—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠72 ♡KJ62 ◇AKJ73 ♣85
What is your opening bid?

A.—When you hold touching suits, it is sometimes right to open the higher-ranking, four-card suit in preference to the five-card suit, to facilitate a rebid. But this is not the hand for that—there is too big a discrepancy in quality between the suits. Open one diamond.

Q.5—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠K ♡10765432 ◇A6 ♣854
The bidding has proceeded:

North	East	South	West
1 ◇	Pass	1 ♡	Pass
1 ♠	Pass	2 ♡	Pass
2 NT	Pass	?

What do you bid now?

A.—Your hand has improved with every round of bidding. You have key honors in each of partner's suits, and partner has shown a good hand and at least two hearts with his bid of two no trump. Since we think you should have a good shot at four hearts, we would bid it.

Q.6—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠QJ1076432 ♡K7 ◇92 ♣6
Partner opens the bidding with one diamond. What do you respond?

McCartney charm, music not enough for full length movie

By YARDENA ARAR
Associated Press Writer

A Review

"GIVE MY REGARDS TO BROAD STREET," the new Paul McCartney film, has two main things going for it: The ever-charming McCartney presence and McCartney's music, old and new. But even together, they are not enough to carry a full length feature.

In fact, the project originated as a television show and might have worked better as a light entertainment of small screen length. Instead, it comes off more as a collection of rock videos padding the most anorexic of plots.

McCartney basically plays a caricature of himself — the rich, good natured rock star enjoying such toys as a custom designed car equipped with a computer that informs him of his agenda for the day.

While driving it to work one day, he gets a telephone call from his business chief: The master tapes to an album are missing, and as a result his entire financial empire faces a takeover by a malevolent looking financier calling in a loan. An employee with a shady past who has disappeared is blamed, but McCartney refuses to believe him guilty.

The film then follows McCartney through his various appointments, which are takeoff points for the music videos ranging from simple studio footage featuring fellow former Beatle Ringo Starr to a very elaborate fantasy with Victorian settings and costumes.

There are cameos by Starr and his wife, Barbara Bach; McCartney's wife Linda Eastman; rock songstress Tracey Ullman; producer George Martin; and the late Ralph Richardson as an aging pub owner. He is the only one who comes close to portraying a character in the normal sense of the word.

Finally, the expected happy ending materializes.

McCartney, who wrote the screenplay, and Peter Webb, who made his feature debut as director, can't be faulted for putting out a piece of fluff, but they could have made it more endearing, more witty, less ponderous.

Still, McCartney fans may want to catch the film — and they are strongly advised to do so in a theater with good stero sound. The old music still tugs at the heartstrings and some of the new songs are great too.

Cervantes Festival features universal language, feelings of all mankind

GUANAJUATO, Mexico (AP) — The Soviet Union sent the Bolshoi Ballet, the United States the Preservation Hall Jazz Band, and China its Acrobats of Guangdong.

With artists from 35 other countries, they gathered at the 12th International Cervantes Festival, filling the theaters, 18th century churches, museums and plazas of this picturesque mountainside town with music, dance, plays and paintings.

Many of the groups performed in their native tongues, but that did not stop Spanish-speaking audiences from having a good time.

While the Rabcio National Puppet Theater entertained in Polish, children in the audience chimed in with a black cat puppet's expressive meows. And when Medias Aetas performed Italian folk songs from Naples, the audience demanded encores.

"It's not necessary to know a foreign language to understand that man suffers, has pleasure, laughs," said Enrique Ruelas, who helped found the festival.

"That is why music is the universal language. In theater, also, ... many times the text isn't understood but the language of the feelings, of the emotions is, because man ... is the same in laughter and in tears."

Ruelas, a theater professor who travels from Mexico City every weekend, has been directing local presentations of Miguel de Cervantes' one-act farces in Guanajuato's Plaza of San Roque since 1953. It was those presentations that 20 years later gave rise to the festival. Mexico bills it as the biggest arts festival of its kind in Latin America. It ran this year from Oct. 18 to Nov. 3.

This year, rather than attempting to present the best of Mexico and the best of the world as it did in the past, the festival offered a broad spectrum of groups — many small and unknown.

They performed two or three days in this city of about 50,000 people northwest of Mexico City, and then moved on to make room for new performers.

Some events were free and in the plazas, and there were more attractions for children, especially the various puppet and marionette groups and the mime theater, O Sweet Clown, from Canada. The highest priced tickets were $3.

A holiday atmosphere prevailed in such plazas as the Jardin Union opposite the turn-of-the-century art nouveau Juarez Theater where those not in the festival performed for whatever they could collect.

A few local youngsters joined the festivities, tapping out rhythms on a one-man-band rig of inverted plastic jugs and a license plate.

On any given day there were at least 10 events to choose from, starting at noon. One could begin with a play by the Dramatic Society of Maracaibo, Venezuela, then catch a violin-piano duo from Cyprus and Mexico, see Finkwarder Speeldeel of Hamburg, West Germany, presenting music and folklore and finish with the Cuban National Opera Company's Cecilia Valdes, or music of the Bolivian Andes at 9 p.m.

Other performances included: Le Lierre Theater Company of France; the Siering Quartet from East Germany; the Opernstudio of Nuremberg, West Germany; the Moshe Efrati Kol Demama dance group from Israel; Susana Rinaldi, an actress and singer of tangos, with music from the Rio Plata area of Argentina; Indonesian folk dance; and Goeran Soellscher, a Swedish guitarist.

There also were pianists from Turkey, Austria, Yugoslavia and Norway.

While this former silver mining center is home for the annual festival, many of the artists, sponsored by their home countries and Mexico, also travel to Mexico City and many provincial cities.

Extinction threatens Bushman way of life

Children, goat herds and anything else can wander by the village water supply in Deception Pan, Botswana. The area of South Africa is home to the last of the ancient Bushmen.

Xakadio, far right in top and bottom photos, and an unidentified friend display two forms of dress favored by the last of the South African Bushmen who live around Deception Pan, Botswana. The Bushmen are down to a few surviving groups, and their old ways are nearly gone.

Text and photos by The Associated Press

DECEPTION PAN, Botswana (AP) - Xakadio the Bushman dressed carefully for work. First, a wool baseball jersey, and a black tuxedo over that. Then the piece de resistance: huge round sunglasses of the sort favored by aging movie queens.

He is one of the 1,000 or so Bushmen left in the harsh, dry reaches of the Central Kalahari Desert. They are the last of the nomadic hunters and gatherers who were catapulted from the Stone Age to the Jet Age with no stops in between, and whose way of life is threatened with extinction.

Altogether, fewer than 60,000 Bushmen survive in pockets of Southern Africa. Once numbering in the hundreds of thousands and occupying a third of the huge continent, they are but a shadow of populations dating back perhaps 23,000 years, among the most ancient of all the people who now live in southern Africa.

For 200 years after the Dutch settlers landed in South Africa in 1652, the dimunitive Bushmen were systematically decimated. Today, politics, ecological disaster and social change threaten the two last reserves — in Botswana and South-West Africa, or Namibia — where the Bushmen live free in places such as the Kalahari.

Strapped into a Cessna aircraft one recent morning, Xakadio performed the duties of "gyro-Bushie," navigating by sight as Bruce Williamson, his ecologist boss, flew over the trackless Kalahari.

Every few minutes, Xakadio giggled excitedly and identified in sign language the game below: an undulating fist for ostrich; two fingers curved backward for eland; contorted digits, dipping rhythmically, for giraffe.

"I am happy in the bush, I know it well, and I am not afraid," Xakadio said through an interpreter. But, asked if he would do without the trappings of encroaching modern civilization, he was equally emphatic: "No."

Xakadio is relatively well off, living at Williamson's research camp deep in the desert. But his case illustrates dramatically the Bushmen's plight.

Generally short with yellowish skin, beardless faces that wrinkle quickly, and tightly kinked hair, Bushmen are routinely scorned and mistreated by other Africans. Some tribes call them subhuman. But they are matchless hunters, using arrows tipped with a homemade poison so strong that they carry the antidote with them at all times.

Bushmen, known for their rollicking humor, mimmick each other, and strangers, and chat endlessly in a clicking, multi-toned language. But they take their plight seriously. In the Kalahari they call themselves, "the people of the short blanket."

As a young man, Xakadio went to Johannesburg to work in the mines. The city scared him, and the hard, regimented life depressed him. He shuns urban centers in Botswana where Bushmen face discrimination.

In the desert, he prefers his ragged running shoes, khakis and tuxedo to the traditional steenbok skin loincloth and bare feet.

Now in his 40s or 50s — "I was born before the war of Hitler" is the best he can do when asked his age — he is dependent on a job, not easy to find. Otherwise, the options are few.

The huge Central Kalahari Game Reserve was established in 1961, not so much for the animals as for the 5,000 Bushmen who lived by hunting them with bows, arrows and stealth.

During long dry months, Bushmen can live for months sucking up water from beneath the dried-up streambeds through straws and storing it in ostrich egg shells. They trap spring hare and chase down antelope. They can tell an animal's age by its tracks.

"I've seen Bushman trackers pick up two-day-old lion spoor and then follow it, jogging all day long at 12 miles an hour," said Mark Kyriakou, a veteran white hunter. "They are amazing."

But, pushed by drought and lured by an easier life, most Kalahari Bushmen have gravitated to "cattle posts," watering points outside the reserve where they tend herds for token pay and survival rations.

Those left in the reserve settle in villages where the government provides schools, clinics, wells and erratic food rations, but no work.

"We will go back to the bush when the rains come, and we can find game and water," declared Tuelo Skalabui, chief of Xade, a village of 500 Bushmen where pastimes range from drinking homemade beer to lounging.

But outsiders who study the Bushmen are not so sure.

In Xade, a young man in a leisure suit missing its buttons and a dirty orange polo shirt, pestered a rare visitor for handouts. He looked dubious when asked if he would go back to the bush. Others chuckled at the idea.

Professor Phillip Tobias of Johannesburg's Witwatersrand University has estimated that no Bushmen hunter-gatherers will be left in the next century.

"They are losing their customs, and following other people's cultures," says Gaolatlhe Thupe, a Botswanan teacher at Xade. "In 10 years time, they will be just like the other tribes in Botswana."

Worse, ecologists and sociologists fear, the intense pressure for more grazing land is tempting the government to open up to cattle vast stretches of reserve land the Bushmen no longer use.

Bushmen are encouraged to leave the land and take jobs or live as herders.

"That would be the end of the Kalahari, for the Bushmen, the wildlife, and then the cattle," says Williamson, a South African scientist working for the Frankfurt Zoological Society of West Germany.

"As it is, their way is going fast," he adds. "They are caught between the bush and the new way, educating their children. They want both. It's sad, really."

In Namibia, South African planners in charge want to make a game reserve of Eastern Bushmanland where 2,200 Ju-wasi Bushmen live a balanced life of hunting and farming and children attend school.

American scientists John Marshall and Olga Levinson, who have lived among the Bushmen for years, said in a report:

"...The death blow of a nature reserve is not a figure of speech. It is not a metaphor for social disintegration and collapsing values. Dispossession threatens their livelihood and therefore their lives."

Bushmen would be allowed bows and arrows but, the report says, most hunters can no longer use them, having been taught to rely on guns instead. The reserve would condemn some to "a kind of plasticized Stone Age" and others would join the other 20,000 Namibian Bushmen in "dire poverty on farms and in townships or homelands of more fortunate peoples."

Bushmen now suffer from South Africa's practice of recruiting them as scouts and soldiers to fight Namibian guerrillas, the scientists say. Military service changes values and makes communities dependent on pay checks that could stop any time, they argue.

Anthropologists say old Bushmen ways of life were still widespread a generation ago, often protected by governments which considered them little more than curiosities.

In 1941, South African Minister for Native Affairs Denys Reitz told Parliament:

"It would be a biological crime if we allowed such a peculiar race to die out, because it is a race which looks more like a baboon than a baboon itself does...We look upon them as part of the fauna of the country."

Now, say some experts on Bushmen, change is inevitable.

To Lease or Not To Lease

Reasons To Lease:

1985 Cougar

1. Leasing is convenient – you only pay for what you use and not for the full price of the car.
2. There is no used car to dispose of at lease end.
3. Leasing frees your cash and you can use your available bank line of credit for other purposes.
4. Lessee – leasing for business purposes will have the benefit of simplified tax records.
