Great Men, Great Mothers

"Great men have great mothers." From time to time during many years this thought has been expressed. A sincere and understanding public has accepted it at truth. And now come some of the educators, who must weigh and measure all things in life—and often deny all those which they do not understand. They have taken mother into the laboratory and put her in a test tube.

As a result of his minute examination into the family history of exceptionally gifted men, Galton, in his "Heredity of Genius," finds that among judges, statesmen, commanders, literary and scientific men, poets and artists the male influence to the female is seventy to thirty, and that among divines alone the female influence is preponderant, where it is to the male as seventy-three to twenty-seven.

A San Francisco teacher quotes a passage from him: "There is a common opinion that great men have remarkable mothers. No doubt they are largely indebted to material influences, but the popular belief ascribes an undue and incredible share to them. I account for the belief by the fact that great men have usually high moral natures, and are affectionate and reverent inasmuch as mere brain without heart is insufficient to achieve eminence. Such men are naturally disposed to show extreme filial regard and to publish the good qualities of their mothers with exaggerated praise."

What is a great mother, or even an able mother? By what scale is she to be tested? We can weigh special gifts and mental keenness, but who has been appointed to measure the true qualities of mothers?

These men of science have been confusing the terms mother and great woman.

Few great women are successful mothers. The public prevents it. When a woman becomes great or notable, society makes its selfish and absorbing demands. An ego is apt to develop. Outside interests encroach more and more on the days. Work, talents, attentions become walls between the soul of the child and the mind of the mother.

I have seen great women who are rare intellectual companions for their children. But even here that divine spark which keeps the human race from utter darkness was frequently missing. I have also seen great mothers who could not soar to the heights with their gifted sons and daughters—whose clean ideals, never-failing faith and simple wisdom shaped the characters which made gifted men great men.

Being a great mother is a life work. It is early morning labor and late night praying. It begins before the child is born, it endures until the mind is gone. It dreams by the cradle and through the years builds hopes upon the dead dreams. It may be crushed, but it never surrenders.

Great mothers every day take broken pieces of life and build new temples.

They can love better than life and yet stand at the foot of the cross.

This is not sentimentality. There are great mothers

Behind the Scenes in Washington

BY RODNEY DUTCHER

WASHINGTON — The sooner Governor Landon—or whoever the nominee is—gets to Washington to take over Republican national headquarters, the better it will be for the Grand Old Party and all concerned with its immediate future.

An almost incredible series of publicity blunders within the space of a few days has made the present national committee management a laughing stock among the newspaper correspondents—not to mention the glibful Democrats.

Partisan Republican newspapers in the East already are commenting in tones denoting great pain. If you hear further repercussions, here are some of the reasons:

1—After many months of panning the "brain trust" of the New Deal—with choice sarcasms for Prof. Felix Frankfurter of Harvard Law School and his numerous pupils employed by the administration—the national committee suddenly hired nine professors with a large staff, at the head of whom it placed a former pupil of Dr. Frankfurter, Prof. Olin Glenn Saxon.

2—Mr. Theodore Huntley, boss press agent of the national committee, broadcast a notice to newspaper editors that he was prepared to furnish news stories and propaganda in accordance with whatever was wanted. He stood ready to arrange a weekly or daily Washington letter if there were sufficient demand, but suggested that most editors would prefer to run the syndicated columns of—and then he named four Washington correspondents with anti-New Deal leanings.

This official endorsement did those columnists no good and the reaction wasn't so good for Mr. Huntley, either, especially when Democratic Press Agent Charlie Michelson dwelt upon the implen-tion that the G. O. P. had taken the four correspondents over. —Either two or three young men claiming to represent certain newspapers or news agencies called around at Dr. Tugwell's Resettlement Administration to pick up information. It was discovered that they were employed or commissioned by the Republican national committee.

Whatever you may think this made the national committee look like, you may be sure that it made the newspapers and agencies whose names had been used good and sore.

4—One of the national committee's most ambitious recent publicity blunts purported to expose the fact that the New Deal would fall short a billion dollars or two of spending its $4,000,000,000 work relief appropriation. The G. O. P. publicists explained that all the money must be spent by the end of the fiscal year, June 30, 1936. Next day they had to apologize, having learned the money was available until June 30, 1937.

5—A sequence of stupidities as these and others has never been observed in Washington before in a campaign year and may be a contributing factor in the strong belief around the national capital that the Republicans aren't going places in 1936.

The city of it is that there are some smart, keen fellows in the Landon camp—perhaps in ranks of other candidates as well—under whom you can't imagine that sort of thing occurring.

Roy Roberts of the Kansas City Star, a chief Landon strategist; Oscar S. Stauffer, Arkansas City, Kan., editor, and General Counsel John Hamilton of the national committee, head of the Landon organizing campaign, are about as smart as they come in the political business. all around us like the stars in the encircling universe which we cannot accurately measure or weigh, nor yet understand.

UNDER THE DOME AT AUSTIN

By GORDON K. SHEARER
United Press Staff Correspondent
AUSTIN, April 25 — (AP) — Former Governor Pat M. Neff was Texas' most-traveled executive. Gov. James Stephen Hogg started the out-of-state boosting trips. Other governors have made interstate and international excursions. These facts were found in the records when Candidate Tom F. Hunter assailed the trips of Governor Alford. Gov. Hogg headed a party of Texas business men in a journey to New York, Providence, Boston, Philadelphia, Washington and St. Louis to spread word of the State's resources and invite capital to develop them.

Governor W. H. Hobby's principal trip was a good will gesture to Mexico. He was one of an official party that attended the inauguration of President Alvaro Obregon in Mexico City.

Governor Neff's itinerary included Cuba, Panama, Seattle, Chicago, New York and Washington. Governor Dan Moody headed an "All-Texas Special" in June following his inauguration. It went to St. Louis, Chicago, New York, Boston, Washington and many Southwestern and Southern cities.

Governors generally have left the state to attend Democratic national conventions held within their terms. Governor Moody did not. While he was Governor the Democratic national convention came to Texas and was held at Houston.

State founders apparently contemplated absences of Governors. Specific provision was made for the lieutenant-governor to take up the reins of government the instant a governor crossed the state boundary. If both are absent, the President protem of the Senate is authorized to act as Governor.

Homer B. Miller, Austin composer, has been invited to submit his 1936 campaign song to the Democratic National Committee. The song eulegizes the Democratic mule. Its chorus runs like this:

"The Democratic Mule
"He isn't any fool
"Though kicking and braying every day;
"Fer this little jack-ass
"Has brought things to pass
"And we'll put him in the White House to stay."

Miller has not limited his work to jingles. He is composer of an elaborate oratorio which has received the attention of noted musicians. The leader of the Philadelphia Symphony Orchestra after scanning it invited Miller to meet him in Dallas when he conducts there—and sent tickets to the concert as a good will gesture.

Miller has the artist's disregard for conventions. At times he goes unshaven for months; wears overalls and brogans. A true patron, he contributes his income with anyone he finds in need.

Miss Anna Lou Bond gets a state salary for working jig saw puzzles. The puzzles, however, are unusual ones. Millions of dollars may depend on her being able to fit all the pieces together. She fixes and preserves the disintegrating ancient maps of the State Land Office. Recent oil discoveries made it important to consult the early maps. Age and part use had broken it into more than 400 pieces. Patiently and carefully, Miss Bond, fitted, patched and pasted until the map was legibly restored. Special cloth, special paste and chemicals are used with both knowledge and skill.

Mrs. Mary Rugeley, Journal clerk of the Texas Senate, who died recently, was another state employe who had to be good at solving puzzles. Frequently she was asked how she managed to keep an accurate report of the proceedings of the Senate in its sometimes heated and tumultuous sessions.

"I can keep track of their motions all right," responded Mrs. Rugeley, "but not always of their notions."

Frequently her Journal had to be consulted before a Senator was cured of the notion that something different had happened at a previous meeting.

Conferences to speed the building of the $200,000 state hospital for tubercular negroes have led to the discovery that the act authorizing the institution proved that the architect shall be put under bond, but has no provision for bonding the contractor. It directs that the hospital shall be located by and built under supervision of a board consisting of the State Health officer, the chairman of the State Board of Control and the Superintendent of the State Tuberculosis Sanatorium. Whether it is better to place the hospital in the dry areas of West Texas or in a section nearer the center of negro population is puzzling the board. The problem is whether rapidity of recovery will offset the cost of transportation of patients.

As elections approach local officials become most urgent that the highway department "do something" in their particular dilemmas. They plead to be able to go home and tell the folks this going to be improved or the extended. Unfortunately allotment of aid funds will not be until June. Until that is the state department cannot any promises.

Only 16 Texans have shown much interest in its folklore. Sandburgh, Harbert, Mich. contributed $50 to the Texas Folk Society and became a patron life member. Texans who have so are Mr. and Mrs. J. R. R. L. Blaffer, John E. Green, C. A. Hill, Jr., Clarence R. W. and Miss Ina Hogg Houston, R. J. Doble and James R. Doble, Beeville, H. S. Stanley, W. A. Philbott, Jr., C. C. Walker, Mrs. W. S. Randall, Dallas, Thomas O'Connor, Victoria, Miller, Corpus Christi and Farrell, Fort Worth.

Cupid Engine Hostess Switc

Cupid dealt the Texas Central a staggering blow by lovely Irene Caldwell, but the show's "Bluebonnet Girl" disqualified herself by making. But the Lone Star exhibition staged a magnificent recovery, and chose Frances Nalle, 21, above, to as official hostess when Centennial opens June 6.

FOLLY and FAREWELL

BEGIN HERE TODAY
LINDA BOURNE, 20 years old, pretty and socially prominent in the little middlewestern town of Newtown, meets PETER TARDNER, political reporter, when she goes to the Blaise office with no announcement about a charity bazaar.

The same day Linda's father, in financial difficulties, kills himself. Peter goes to the Bourne home to break the news to Linda. Misunderstanding, she treats him rudely. Later she apologizes, finds that her father's money is gone and she must find a job. She tells Peter about a scenario she has written and he asks to read it.

Linda promises to come to his home Sunday to meet his mother. In the meantime, DIX TARDNER, with whom Linda is in love, telephones and Linda forgets her date with Peter.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY
CHAPTER IV
A DATE was a date, and it had to be kept in Linda's code, but when Pete Gardiner's call reminded her of their date for Sunday afternoon she thought of Dix and did something she had never done in her life before. She lied to him.

"I'm terribly sorry," Linda said, "but I'm afraid I can't keep our date. Something unexpected, something about the estate has come up—and I've got to see someone at 4 o'clock."

There was the briefest of silences. Linda couldn't know that it was bitter disappointment. Then Pete tried again:

"It isn't going to keep you late, couldn't I pick you up for supper?"

It was Linda's turn to hesitate. Dix hadn't said anything about supper. He had said he would come by around 4. Hoping that he would stay, she had already prepared a little supper for them.

"I'm afraid it will be too late. And... I'm... I'm really sorry," she said almost truthfully.

"Okay, well try another time," Pete said with a lightness he didn't feel. And when he had rung off, his lips tightened as he had when he was a little boy. Perhaps Miss Bourne didn't care for the idea of going across the tracks to the Gardiner home for supper.

Linda didn't think of that or of Pete's mother until much later that day. Dix was coming!

Dix wouldn't have tea, he said, glancing at his watch. He had to "pick up some people."

could find each other as they had been? Dix would not allow her. He wouldn't have tea, he said, glancing once more at his watch. He had to "pick up some people."

In her imagination, Linda saw Jane Wyatt's laughing face held up to his, and she propped her chin up mentally.

"Tell me about the Glee Club concert," she said.

He did. Precisely the way he would have told his mother. Carefully he reviewed the program. After that, Linda gave up. When he rose she got his hat and, summoning a smile she did not feel, she said, "I'm not very gay now, Dix, or very good company, but I hope you'll come again."

"You bet," he answered heartily, and she tried not to see his relief. "We'll have to do something one of these nights. Something quiet."

Very calmly Linda took the teatray to the kitchen. Very calmly she wrapped the untouched sandwiches in a damp cloth, put the cream back in the bottle, rinsed the dishes. Calmly she emptied the ash trays. Then she took all the flowers out and dumped them in the rubbish basket. She went upstairs and squeezed her eyes tightly shut so that the tears would not come through.

But they did come, and when she had cried until her nose was red, her lip swollen and her eyes burned back in her head and she was as disgusted with herself as she was hurt, she took off the velvet gown and got out her old reeds, the worn riding hat, and her brogues.

Linda felt the need of fresh air and sympathy. When she set out, with small hands clenched in the pockets of her coat, she sought only the fresh air, but when her mind had cleared itself of the afternoon she remembered Pete Gardiner. She remembered the tone of his voice. She remembered how he had looked when he spoke about his mother and, to her own shame, she remembered how lightly she had dismissed his invitation—from his mother, he had said—to have supper with them at his home.

And then Linda knew there was only one thing in the world she wanted at that moment and that was to see Pete's mother. She was ashamed of her behavior, but her desire was stronger than that and she hastened her steps until she came to a drug store. Quickly, she turned the pages of the telephone directory until she came to his name and found the address.

It was a little house, but it wasn't quite the kind of a little house Linda had expected to find. It was freshly painted and evergreens hid the worn foundations.

A wave of anticipation ran through her as she passed, hand poised above the old-fashioned knocker. She knew that the little house would smell of spices and good things. She closed her eyes for a moment and opened them when the door opened in answer to her ring.

"No, it can't be true!" she said to herself before she spoke. Mrs. Gardiner was entirely too much like something out of a book. Look as she would, Linda couldn't find a flaw. Little, sweet-faced, her soft skin a network of the wrinkles of the aged (for all that she was not truly old), Mrs. Gardiner was Linda's idea of A Mother.

In that quick second, Linda wondered what her own mother like. Like the pretty, frivolous girl who had run away from her little daughter.

"I'm Linda Bourne, Mrs. Gardiner," she said.

"Well, now this is a pleasant surprise!" Mrs. Gardiner had drawn her into the small hall. It did smell of spice and... and tobacco, Linda thought approvingly.

"We were afraid you weren't going to be able to come, after all. I told Peter to call you and see if that gentleman might have left by now, but he said maybe you'd come anyway. And I see you have."

Linda was slightly swept off her feet. She had planned to confess that she was suddenly ashamed and had come to apologize, but now Mrs. Gardiner had given her a graceful way out so that none of them need be hurt and she seized it.

"Mr. Gardiner said he would call for me, but I wasn't sure what time I would be free. I took a chance, breaking in on you this way, because I wanted to meet you. Pete... Mr. Gardiner told me such lovely things about you."

"You mustn't mind him, Miss Bourne. He says lovely things about everybody, and very lovely things about you."

Suddenly Linda felt her back go a little straighter. She didn't want Pete Gardiner to say lovely things about her. She didn't want him to think of her. She resented any implication that there might be anything but the most casual relationship between them, as a woman does when she is in love with another man.

"I sent him to a little shop down the street for cream. We're going to have strawberry shortcake. He'll be back in just a minute. Make yourself comfortable, I've got to see about my biscuit."

"Hello," Linda said to Pete before he had time to recover from his surprise. "My caller left earlier than I expected and I came to surprise you."

"That's... why that's fine." Pete had to readjust his thoughts about Linda. Disappointment had given way to hot anger after he had talked to her on the telephone, but now all that had disappeared. He liked her for coming. He liked her for the old tweeds she wore and the easy way she had greeted him. He liked her.

"Want to hear the news?" She nodded. "The Blade needs a gal to write society news. I was talking to Barrett about you. If you'd had a job like that, drop in and see him tomorrow morning." (To Be Continued)

WAR GAMES OFF PANAMA NEXT WEEK TEST VULNERABILITY CANAL'S WESTERN DEFENSES

By DUANE WILSON
 Press Staff Correspondent
 WASHINGTON, April 25 — (AP)—The United States fleet will play the Panama Canal war games off the coast of Panama next week. The maneuvers will mark an important phase of the high command's plan for protection of this country and its western defenses.

The movements of the fleet after it leaves California will be only Admiral Joseph B. ...

Line of the maneuvers, it will be to Reeves to work out the details of the problems.

Smaller Area Marked
 It is understood that in general the maneuvers will be a test of the all-around efficiency of the nation's first line of defense. In contrast to the far-flung movements of the fleet last year when it worked out the difficult Problem 16 for the defense of the west coast, the 1936 games will be held over a comparatively small area.

Last year the maneuvers extended from Panama to Hawaii and thence to Alaska in the form of a huge triangle with its apex at Hawaii and its base at the Panama Canal. Navy air forces played an important part in the games last year. In fact, squadrons of planes cruised long distances from the main fleet, simulating actual wartime conditions when the air force would be called upon to provide the fleet with advance information as to the movements of the enemy.

Although officials of the Navy Department decline to comment on the general plan of the maneuvers this year, it is believed that the waspish pursuit and huge bombers attached to the fleet will play an important part in the games. It is a possibility that aerial defense of the west entrance of the Panama Canal from an attack by a fleet of hostile planes will be one of the most important features.

Some unofficial observers believe that there is a possibility that Problem 17 is a continuation of Problem 16, the theory being that an enemy force has compelled the fleet to abandon its base in Hawaii and it is making a stand off the west coast of the canal in an effort to protect that passage and the eastern coast of the U. S. from an attack.

Few Vessels Missing
 Virtually the entire fleet will participate in the games this year. Only a few vessels which have been detached on special missions, such as training cruises for reservists or midshipmen, will be absent.

After the maneuvers have been completed, a force of 10 cruisers and six destroyers will visit west coast ports of South America. The purpose of this cruise, according to the Navy Department is to further stimulate friendly relations.

The heavy cruisers Chicago and Houston, commanded by Rear Admiral Thomas C. Hart, and the cruisers Chester and Salt Lake City, commanded by Rear Admiral Henry L. Brinser, will visit Valparaiso from May 28 to June 2.

Several other vessels of the fleet will visit ports on the eastern coast after the games, and the remainder will return to the California bases.

TEXAS CENTENNIAL IS FIRST AIR COOLED WORLD'S EXPOSITION

DALLAS, April 25 — The Texas Centennial Exposition will be the first air-cooled World's Fair in history.

"For the first time an exposition has been designed and is being built with the comfort of its visitors primarily in mind," said William A. Webb, general manager of the $25,000,000 show which opens in Dallas June 6.

"More than $1,000,000 is being spent to provide fresh, cool air throughout every major building. The temperature and humidity of the atmosphere will be kept constant over more than ten acres of floor space in twenty-nine buildings. This is 60 per cent of our floor space. The air over all other floor space will be changed completely every eight minutes or less, thus lowering the temperature ten degrees or more and insuring fresh, clean air at all times.

"With two exceptions, our exhibit buildings have been erected without windows. This makes it much easier to control the temperature.

"There were a few air-conditioned spots at the Century of Progress in Chicago," Mr. Webb continued, "but this is the first time an entire world's fair has been air-conditioned. We feel sure, however, that in future all big expositions will be equipped in this way."

Air-conditioning engineers said 6,000,000 gallons of water will be used daily in cooling the atmosphere at the Dallas exposition. As an economy measure, this water will be used over and over again, only enough being added to take care of evaporation.

"This volume of water, of course, does not include that used in the many fountains, reflecting basins and the lagoon," Mr. Webb explained, "although they also will help cool the air. Indeed, engineers tell us they will take a considerable load off the air-conditioning equipment."

UNSAFE TIRES!

They Gambled on BLOW-OUTS and lost . . . Play Safe!

Thousands are killed or injured every year when blow-outs throw cars out of control

WHY YOU SHOULD ENLIST NOW IN THIS GREAT WAR

36,100 people were killed in traffic accidents in 1935. 895,280 were injured. Many of these tragedies occurred because motorists "took a chance" on worn or unsafe tires.

What if YOU had a blow-out speeding along with your family in the car? Would you be among the "lucky ones" who came out alive? Don't take that awful chance.

FREE INSPECTION

Here's what we do for your protection:

1. Inspect your tires for signs of failure.
2. Remove puncturing objects that might cause serious trouble.
3. Check air pressure of all tires including spare.
4. Check for dangerous weak spots that might mean a blow-out when you least expect it.

And if you need extra safety, extra blow-out protection for carefree driving this spring and summer, we want to show you the new Goodrich Safety Silver-brown—the only tire in the world that gives you Gold-Ply Blow-out Protection.

Join this war on unsafe tires. Just drive in. We'll give you our expert FREE TIRE INSPECTION. And what's more, we will be glad to get for you the famous Silver-town Safety League emblem with the red Safety Reflector. It's absolutely free.

MORTGAGE SALES DELAYED
 MONTEREY, Cal. — (AP)—Monterey county residents whose property has been foreclosed are jubilant. The law provides that the sale of all such property must be made from the "steps of the courthouse." Monterey county is building a new courthouse and it will probably be six months before there will be any "court house steps" for foreclosure sales.

INTUITION FOILS HOLDUP
 TOLEDO — (AP)—Melvin Gilbert didn't believe that the bandit's hand thrust deep into his pocket, held a gun. So while others in the restaurant raised their hands as commanded, Gilbert dashed out and summoned aid. Police captured the bandit, and found him unarmed.

GIRL, 3, IS HEROINE
 FOCAHNTAS, Ia. — (AP)—Janet Lou Bouma is only 3, but she is a heroine because she rescued a playmate, Charles Carmichael, also 3, from drowning in 10 feet of water. Charles toppled into a cess-pool, and Janet Lou clung to him until help came.

NEW STATION WILL BE READY BY MAY 10TH

The new service station, being rebuilt from the Norvell and Miller brick store at the corner of East Eighth and Main, by Ed Huestis, owner, will be equipped with the latest and most approved electric pumps, said Mr. Huestis Saturday in discussing the equipment for the new station. Will likely open around May 10.

Concrete driveways are being constructed now, plumbing laid and the sides and back plastered with concrete. The front will retain the natural brick finish. Mr. Huestis said, unless present plans are changed, which might be probable, since announcement has not yet been made as to what products are to be sold in the new station.

The electric lighted and electric driven pumps, and two visible pumps will be installed, subject as stated above to change of plans. Three large plate glass display windows will afford ample display room for tires and service station accessories. The back will be used as a drive-in washing and lubrication department and will afford weather protected service on automobiles at any hour. This space is of easy access from East Eighth street and may be reached from Main street by simply driving the space of the station.

B of A Convention At Colorado, May 28

The first state convention of the Broadway of America, coast-to-coast route on which Ranger, Eastland and Cisco are located, will be held in Colorado, Thursday, May 28. H. W. Stanley, president, announced Saturday from Dallas.

CISCO MEMBERS P-T. A. RETURN FROM M. WELLS

Mrs. D. Ball, just back from Mineral Wells where she attended the Texas Congress of Parents and Texas Congress of Parents and the outstanding thing in the session was the music of the Mineral Wells school children and the address of Dr. Moore, of Denton.

Dr. Moore said in his address on "Home Index to National Life," a look into the home and we know the kind of National life existing in America." He gave an inspiring address, keeping his audience laughing by telling humorous experiences of his boyhood days and days with his children.

"In many foreign countries, the National life is not reflected from the home. Germany is encouraging the rearing of many children. The Hebrews are the most successful home makers in all history. The one thing in the life of a woman was to marry a Hebrew man and rear Hebrew boys. We are too busy going to have home life. Women want a career but do not consider a housewife as a career."

Thursday afternoon was devoted to conference reports from Locals and Councils with the talk on "Motion Pictures" by Mrs. C. E. Madocks, of Ranger, and "Endowment Fund" by Mrs. Rushing Wells, Coleman, as features of the afternoon program.

Mrs. W. W. Wilkinson of Fort Worth, first vice president, presided in the absence of Mrs. J. S. Reynolds. Mrs. Ball, of Cisco, reported on Rules and Regulations.

The next meeting will be in Brownwood, April 1937.

Others from Cisco were Mrs. Fred Steffy, Mrs. Squalgia and Mrs. Tom Smith.
