Oil Firms Cited For Gouging

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Energy Department accused seven major oil refiners today of overcharging customers nearly $1.7 billion for crude oil during a 5½-year period, in what could be the biggest such government case ever against the oil industry.

Paul Bloom, special department counsel for compliance, said proposed orders were issued to the companies which would require refunds of overcharges upheld after review.

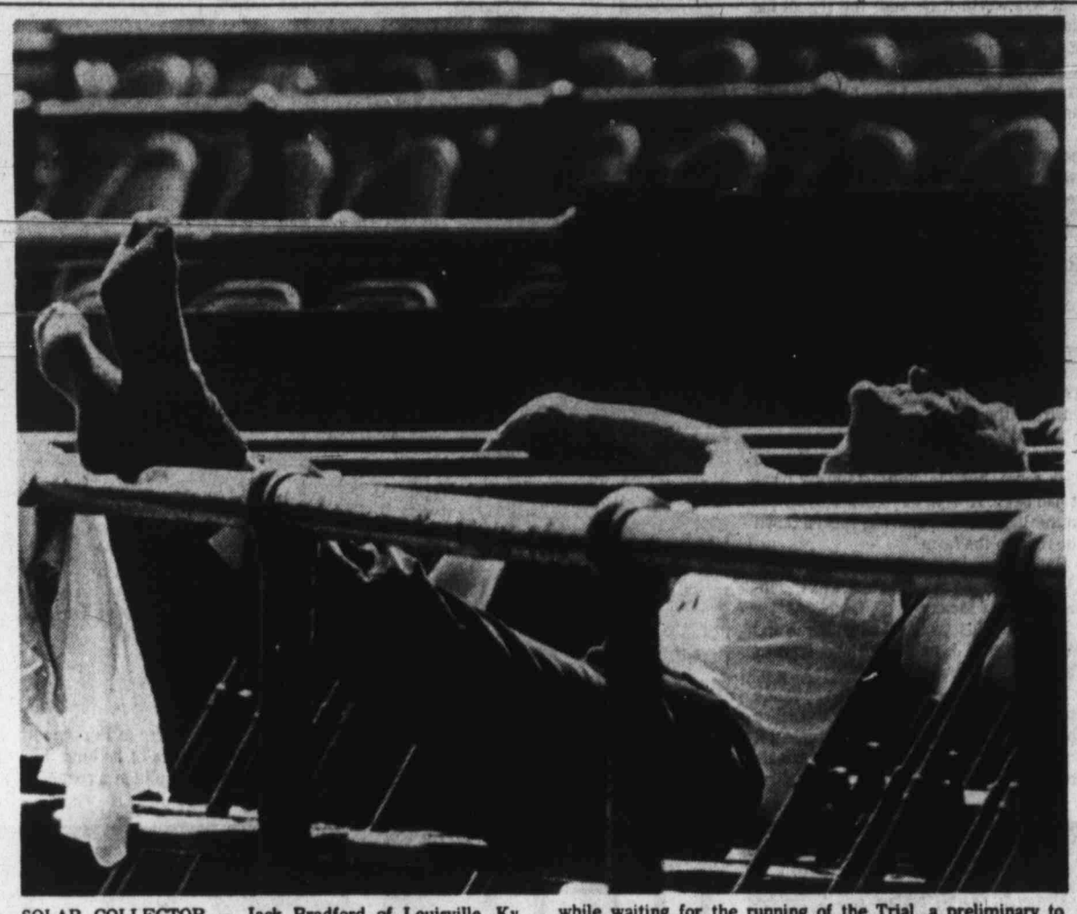

Bloom said Texaco Inc., was accused of $888.3 million in overcharges, and Gulf Oil Co. was alleged to have overcharged $578 million.

The other alleged overcharges were $101.6 million by Standard Oil of California, $42 million by Atlantic Richfield Co., $29.1 million by Marathon Oil, $24.1 million by Standard Oil of Indiana and $1.7 million by Standard Oil of Ohio.

There was no immediate comment from the refiners.

Bloom said the charges stemmed from audits of the refiners' compliance with federal crude oil pricing regulations from August 1973 through March 1979.

Bloom said most of the alleged violations involved incorrect designation of oil-producing properties.

Jail Uprising Breaks Out In Tehran

TEHRAN, Iran (AP) — Inmates seized a jail in downtown Tehran and heavy gunfire broke out today as they held off revolutionary militiamen.

Bystanders dived into drainage ditches near the jail compound and militiamen blocked off streets in the area, located behind the capital's central police station.

Officials said the prisoners seized control of the jail Tuesday afternoon and held some guards as hostages before releasing them unharmed. The source of the gunfire was not clear, but police said they believed prisoners had seized the guards' weapons.

Guards said there were 200 to 300 inmates in the jail. Some reportedly were members of the notorious secret police organization SAVAK, arrested following the February revolution that overthrew Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi's regime.

A reporter saw a bus loaded with prisoners leave the jail at high speed, preceded by guards on motorcycles armed with automatic rifles. A guardsman said the inmates in the bus were being moved to a more secure prison.

Iran's provisional government said Thursday would be a day of national mourning for Ayatollah Morteza Motahari, a member of the revolutionary regime's secret ruling politburo and the second prominent member of the regime to be assassinated within nine days.

Motahari, reputed to be among the 20 most influential of Iran's approximately 100 Shiite Moslem ayatollahs, was shot in the head Tuesday night as he left a dinner party in Tehran and died early today, officials at Torfeh Hospital reported.

The assassin apparently escaped.

Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini described Motahari as his "dear son and disciple" and said the killing would make him more determined to reach the goals of his Islamic revolution, the state radio reported.

"You (terrorists) have to assassinate the whole nation of Iran," Khomeini was quoted as saying. "The nation is not going to turn back from its march forward because of such desperate actions."

The radio said shops and businesses were closed today in the holy city of Qom and thousands of people mourning Motahari's death marched to Khomeini's residence there.

An anonymous telephone caller told the newspaper Ayendegan that the assassination was the work of Forghan, the secret organization that claimed to have killed Gen. Mohammad Vali Gharani, the first post-revolution army chief of staff, on April 23.

Radio Tehran said the slaying was the work of "counter-revolutionaries" and the funeral would be held Thursday morning.

The telephone caller said Motahari was head of the Islamic Revolutionary Council which Khomeini, the leader of the revolution, set up as the supreme power in the country. The official Pars news agency said only that he was a member of the council, whose membership has been a closely guarded secret, and did not explain how he ranked in the revolutionary hierarchy.

The council supervises the Islamic revolutionary courts that have ordered the executions of 164 persons after speedy trials in which the rights of the defendants have been minimal.

Kidnapping Victim Dies

CLEVELAND (UPI) — Food chain tycoon Julius Kravitz, who along with his wife was kidnapped and shot in an unsuccessful $1.5 million ransom plot, died today as law enforcement authorities searched the Cleveland area for the two kidnappers.

One of the suspected kidnappers is a Cleveland Heights auxiliary police officer.

Two clues, police said, apparently linking the auxilialry officer to the kidnapping are a Cleveland Heights police uniform and a credit card the suspect allegedly used for a motel room where the Kravitzes were held.

Police identified the two men as Michael G. Levine, about 35, of Lyndhurst and John A. File, about 25, of Cleveland. Officers said Levine at one time was a Cleveland Heights auxiliary policeman.

The two were being sought on charges of aggravated murder, attempted aggravated murder and two counts of kidnapping, according to Paul R. Donaldson, law director of Shaker Heights.

Kravitz, 67, chairman of the board of First National Supermarkets, Inc., and his wife, Georgina, 56, were abducted Tuesday morning from their apartment in the fashionable Fairmount Circle section of Shaker Heights.

Mrs. Kravitz opened her front door Tuesday to two men she thought were young police officers, beginning hours of terror for herself and her husband.

"As I answered the door, they forced their way in with guns," Mrs. Kravitz told police.

The gunmen stayed in the apartment from 7:30 a.m. to about 9 a.m., police said, before they ordered the couple into the back seat of Kravitz' car and drove around eastern Cleveland suburbs.

Kravitz was shot three times in the chest and once in the back. He underwent surgery Tuesday but died about 7:15 a.m. CST today. Mrs. Kravitz was shot in both arms and was in satisfactory condition at Hillcrest Hospital.

"They (the suspects) were dressed like police officers," said Police Lt. Joseph Gardner. "They forced their way into the home and demanded ransom money."

The kidnappers took the couple from their home and drove in Kravitz' car to a Howard Johnson's motel in suburban North Randall, Gardner said.

During the time at Kravitz' apartment and at the motel, the kidnappers allowed the businessman to make several telephone calls in an unsuccessful attempt to arrange for payment of the ransom, police said.

Later, they left the motel and while again driving around, "for no apparent reason, one of them turned and shot Mr. Kravitz," Gardner said. Mrs. Kravitz also was shot.

"At that time, she jumped out of the car and they (the kidnappers) kept on going," Gardner said.

Minutes later, Police Sgt. Jesse Vatty saw the speeding car carrying Kravitz and his abductors. He then was flagged down by a motorist who told him of Mrs. Kravitz.

"I've been shot. They've killed my husband," Vatty said the wounded woman told him as he waited with her for the rescue squad.

Kravitz was found in the parking lot of an appliance store across from the sprawling Randall Park Mall in North Randall. His car was found in a field near the appliance store's parking lot.

Shaker Heights Police Chief George Lamboy said he did not know if any money was exchanged because his men had since been unable to question Kravitz and his wife. He said he had some "good evidence," in the case, but would not be more specific.

First National Supermarkets operates 287 supermarkets in Ohio, New York, Massachusetts, Connecticut, Rhode Island, Vermont, New Hampshire and Maine. It employs 20,000 people and has annual sales of $965.9 million.

After the death of his father, Kravitz, then 11, worked in neighborhood grocery stores after school and on Saturdays. By the time he was 20 in 1932, he had saved $400 and used it to open his first store in Cleveland, Julie's Grocery.

A long-time leader of Cleveland's Jewish community, Kravitz has been very active in organizing fund-raising efforts for Israel. He is a close personal friend of U.S. Sen. Howard Metzenbaum, D-Ohio.

First National operates food stores under the Finast chain in New York and New England and as Pick n' Pay in Ohio. Kravitz bought the Pick 'n Pay chain in 1972 from Cook United, then merged with First National last October.

Woman Dies In One-Car Mishap Here

By JACK DOUGLAS
Avalanche-Journal Staff

With today only eight minutes old, Lubbock recorded its sixth traffic fatality of the year, after getting through Tuesday without suffering any deaths on city streets despite a flurry of accidents.

Margaret H. DeHart, 39, of Dallas suffered fatal injuries at 12:08 a.m. today in a one-car accident in the 4600-block of North Quirt Avenue.

Her death was the second traffic fatality on city streets since Thursday, when a 22-year-old Lubbock man died after a pickup truck struck his motorcycle at East Fourth Street and Olive Avenue.

While major traffic accidents have been a common occurrence in Lubbock the past week, the city's traffic death toll for the year is five under the 11 deaths recorded at this time last year.

Mrs. DeHart was killed when the car in which she was a passenger ran off the road into a muddy shoulder, causing the driver to lose control of the late-model vehicle, which skidded back across the road, jumped a median and wrapped around a light pole, reports show.

The driver and only other occupant in the vehicle, James Everett Payne, 41, of Boston, Tex., was in satisfactory condition this morning at Health Sciences Center Hospital.

Mrs. DeHart was pinned in the passenger's side of the 1979 Ford Granada for almost an hour before Lubbock firemen freed her.

The woman was pronounced dead at the scene by Justice of the Peace L.J. Blalack. Blalack had not made a ruling in the death early today.

In one of many traffic mishaps Tuesday, a 16-year-old Belen, N.M., boy suffered critical injuries, including a possi-

City Manager Criticizes Bill On Electric Rates

By SYLVIA TEAGUE
Avalanche-Journal Staff

Texans will pay higher electric rates if a bill tentatively approved Monday by the Texas House becomes law, and that's the reason electric companies are pushing so hard for the legislation, says Lubbock City Manager Larry Cunningham.

The bill, approved by a 70-66 vote in the House, would take away city councils' power to set electric rates for investor-owned utility companies and give that right to the Texas Public Utility Commission.

Currently the PUC hears electric rate cases on appeal from city councils.

The utility companies' support for the bill "can't mean anything but they want higher rates," Cunningham said.

"What other reason would there be? It's surely not for better rate regulation," he said.

"If they didn't have good rate regulation at the local level, they wouldn't be asking for this," he said. "If they were being granted the rates they wanted, they wouldn't need this."

The electric companies want rate cases heard by a body more removed from the ratepayers and a body which is "not as politically sensitive" as locally elected officials, Cunningham said, so "they can get good returns."

"If not, they would not want it (the bill)."

The legislation will have the effect of "discouraging" cities from participating in rate cases and prevent local citizens from having input in rate cases, he said.

Amendments to the bill which would allow cities to intervene in rate cases before the PUC, with their costs of hiring experts and attorneys paid by the electric companies, "sounds real good and sounds good politically," Cunningham said.

"However, it's not a practical way — it's not rate regulation by local jurisdictions."

"It would be hard to have direct contact with these people until after something has taken place," he said, "because cities would be coming in after something already happened."

Also, cities generally are "guilty until proven innocent" when they appear before the PUC, he said.

"We'll be having to do everything 400 miles away, instead of talking to the people who know about the situation," he said.

"It's going to be awfully hard to gener-

LP&L Opens Talks With Competitor

City of Lubbock officials began negotiations this morning with Southwestern Public Service Co. about a possible interconnect between municipally owned Lubbock Power & Light and SPS.

Although the meeting was closed to the news media, the negotiators were expected to discuss the possibility of SPS supplying 50 megawatts of power to LP &L.

They also were expected to discuss whether LP&L could hook into SPS's system near city-owned Holly Avenue Plant or would have to run lines to Southwestern's Jones Station, about six miles away.

Carroll McDonald, LP&L director of sales and service, has estimated it would cost about $1.4 million for the city to interconnect with SPS near Holly Avenue and about $3.5 million if the connection is made near Jones Station.

Because of the cost, the negotiators are expected to discuss a possible repayment plan for the interconnect.

The LP&L Study Committee recommended the city-owned utility be interconnected with another power company at the "earliest possible date," and the Electric Utilities Board concurred, albeit reluctantly.

The Lubbock City Council formally authorized the start of negotiations at its April 12 meeting.

Studies have indicated LP&L needs an additional source of power before 1982 to meet demands for electricity.

The LP&L Study Committee recommended the interconnect pending construction of another generating plant.

WTSU Faculty Council Sidesteps Reviews

CANYON (UPI) — A move fizzled Tuesday to repeal a Faculty Council resolution that would provide for annual reviews of all instructors — tenured or not — at financially troubled West Texas State University when the council voted to adjourn without taking any action.

Some College of Arts and Sciences staff members voted recently to seek repeal of the resolution which carries only the weight of a recommendation to the administration.

One WTSU administrator, however, already has stated the university cannot disregard tenure.

Opponents of the resolution say it is an attack on tenure, the practice of virtually guaranteeing a professor's job security. Faculty Council members deny the charge.

The authors of the resolution, mindful of a shortage of funds and the prospect of layoffs or frozen salaries, say no instructor should be retained simply because he is tenured.

Many council members themselves are tenured.

History professor Charles Townsend, an opponent of the resolution, said it "would inhibit good teachers, stifle their creativeness, produce the worst kind of infighting and pettiness and open doors to all manner of restrictions on one's academic freedom and effectiveness."

Dr. Roy Martin, Faculty Council chairman, explained why the university is caught in a financial pinch.

"The problem is not the enrollment but credit hours generated by the university. The head count here has grown between 1972 and 1979, but the number of credit hours taken has dropped. This is the result of fewer fulltime and more part-time students,' he said.

As presented, the resolution recommends that deans or department heads review a faculty member's "commitment" to the university annually. If the report is unsatisfactory, the instructor would be placed on probation and his salary frozen for a year. At the end of a year he would be fired if improvement were not shown.

The Faculty Council maintains that an annual review for everyone is more equitable than laying off those who are untenured or freezing everyone's salaries.

Townsend conceded some faculty members have abused tenure, which is awarded to some professors after they have taught continously for a prescribed number of years and met other requirements.

But, Townsend observed, "Many abuse democracy, the judicial system and the press. But will we throw out self-government, the court system and the freedom of the press?"

Ten of 12 council members present were asked to restate their feelings about the resolution. All, except one who abstained, said they had no wish to modify their support.

The only motion presented was to adjourn.

One-Room Schoolhouse Still Standing In Rhode Island

By JULES LOH

PORTSMOUTH, R.I. (AP) — Are you dismayed by governmental red tape, budgets gone haywire, bureaucracy so cumbersome it seems to take forever to get anything done?

Take heart, citizen. Apparently, alas, it was ever thus.

"The townspeople wanted a simple, one-room schoolhouse," Herbert Hall said. "It was decided on at the most fundamental level of American government, a New England town meeting. Yet," he said, palms upturned, "look how it was handled."

By luck, and also by the concern of Herbert Hall and others like him who care about their heritage, the simple schoolhouse is still standing, surely one of the oldest relics of its kind.

It was ordered built at the town meeting of Aug. 31, 1716, and was named with Yankee simplicity, "the Southermost School."

A conscientious citizen, one William Sanford, donated three quarters of an acre of land and 10 days later the selectmen voted an appropriation for the building: 20 pounds.

The value of the British pound has changed since those times, and there was, of course, no American dollar then. Had there been, the approriation would translate to roughly $100.

"Nine years later — nine years!" Hall said, "the carpenter submitted his bill. It took that long to get the school built." Hall has the document framed. It is brittle and faded, but the tidy script of the contractor, Adam Lawton, remains legible. The cost of the Southermost School came to 23 pounds, 12 shillings, 7 pence. That would be, roughly, just over $118. In today's jargon, an 18 percent cost overrun.

Well, it was worth it.

It was worth it because the school has survived, complete with part of its original schoolmaster's desk, the lift-up part, with one of its original pupil's desks, from which others have been copied, and, best of all, with its original graffiti.

Thus, in the flowing lines of long lost penmanship, there remain the names and initials of long lost generations who attended the Southermost School: "Sarah Coggeshall," "F.H.J.", "Mary Spooner."

"I found the names of some Almys," Hall said. "They were the people who raised my grandfather after he was orphaned."

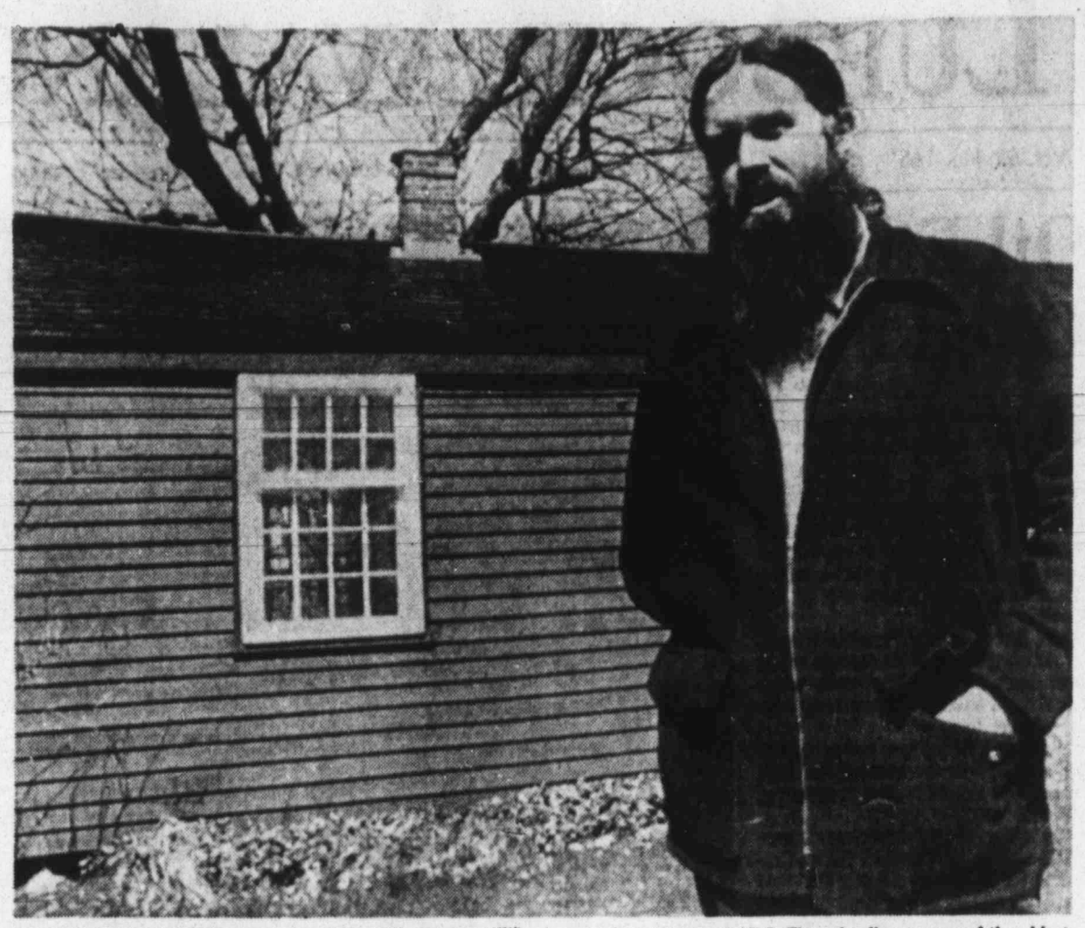

Herbert Hall is a 6-foot-3 Rhode Islander, the northermost one foot of whom is covered with black hair. He was born in 1942 on the farm his grandfather inherited from the Almys and as a boy used to play in the old schoolhouse.

"It was a farm building in those days, a tack room, but the oldtimers knew what it had been. It went out of use as a school in the 1860s or '70s and was moved down the road to the farm."

Hall restored the little building — it is 14-by-26 feet — and donated it to the local historical society.

It appears just as it did when Sarah and Mary and F.H.J. and the Almys learned their three-Rs there.

And, standing within its venerable walls, it is somehow reassuring to realize that not even a stick-swinging colonial schoolmaster could keep the little rascals from writing on the walls.

DONATES SCHOOLHOUSE — Herbert Hall III stands in front of a one-room schoolhouse he played in as a child and which he has recently renovated and donated to the historical society in Porstmouth, R.I. The schoolhouse, one of the oldest relics of its kind, took the original carpenter nearly nine years to build at a cost of $118. (AP Laserphoto)

Federal Workers Fill Airways

By HUGH A. MULLIGAN
Associated Press Writer

OVER ATLANTA — Sen. Jim Sasser, a Democrat from Tennessee who would like to cut half a billion dollars from the Carter administration's request for $7.9 billion in travel expenses, says at any given time an average 22,000 federal bureaucrats are in the air.

Mulligan's Stew

Well, I never would have guessed the figure, but I knew there were a lot of them up here.

Why, right now this wide-bodied jumbo flying down to Atlanta from New York is more than half full of Carter civil servants heading some place, although not all of them can be blamed on his administration. Some have been flying around since the invention of the prop jet and the no-fault expense account back in Franklin D. Roosevelt's second administration.

You can always tell the male of the species. They all wear the standard three-piece business suit with an American flag in the label, carry an imitation cowhide attache case with pop-out accordian file compartments and use their swizzle sticks to follow the fine print on whatever government publications they have spread out on the pull-down food tray.

The female version comes in a slit-skirt two piece business suit, favors long yellow legal pads, drums her teeth with the swizzle stick while fingering a pocket calculator and wears her rhinestone rimmed tri-focals on a slender black cord.

Flying feds from the Surgeon General's Office and the Department of Health, Education and Welfare tend to monopolize the non-smoking section. Those from the Federal Bureau of Investigation are often handcuffed to another passenger and it is not always easy to tell which is which.

There was a hassle this morning at the check-in counter when travellers from the Federal Railroad Administration, the Department of Transportation and Amtrak all insisted on having window seats. They said they wanted to get the overall view of roadbed conditions in the northeast corridor. But the window seats were all occupied by representatives from the National Park Service, the Bureau of Land Management and the Forest Service all doing an in depth survey of development potential in the New Jersey pine barrens.

Two fellows across the aisle from me right now have an interesting job. They're from the Federal Aviation Administration and they tell me they're in the air almost all the time now. Part of a new project to have inspectors on board when a plane crashes instead of hurrying to get there after it happens. "No luck so far," sighed Burstand Haskins, the senior of the two, "but we've seen a lot of the country." They liked these martinis, too, but stopped after two out of respect for the president.

The lady in the window seat next to me is a research coordinator for the Labor Department's Occupational Safety and Health Administration. She is en route to the New Orleans opera house to study the incidence of Dutch Elm Disease and Fungus Wort in the wooden legs of handicapped viola da gamba players. During the in-flight movie, she changed seats and played scrabble with a lawyer from the Office of Inspection and Enforcement, Region One, of the Nuclear Regulatory Commission, who had a radium-treated set that glowed in the dark. From the coy conversation they carried on about the reproductive cycle of the snail darter, I got the impression those two managed to get their agendas together pretty often.

It was no fun at cocktail time listening to the horn-rimmd type fom the Food and Drug Administration discuss the frequency of botulism in frozen shrimp puffs at over 40,000 feet, but it was better than contemplating the look of eagerness that came into the eyes of the FAA kamikaze team when we encountered line squalls and warm air turbulence over the Carolinas.

Also aboard our flight this morning, besides the two Internal Revenue agents doing a spot check in the first-class section on travel deductions claimed by tax-paying passengers, is a rather dedicated auditor from the General Accounting Office.

It seems his job is to find out where all the other government employes are flying to and why and how long have they been in the air this month.

The problem is he hasn't a chance to talk to the other passengers because his time has been monopolized by two congressional aides from Senator Sasser's office who are trying to find out where he's going and why.

Nice crowd, though, those flying feds. Not a white knuckle flyer among them until some snoop pops the question: "Is this trip necessary?"

TODAY'S EDITORIAL:

The 'Realities' Of Draft

THE REALITIES of politics as opposed to the national need came to the forefront again this week as Congress took up the business of resuming the draft or some sort of draft registration.

In the early going, political reality won.

The issue was an effort by Rep. G. V. Montgomery, D-Miss., to push through a proposal to draft up to 200,000 young men a year into the Individual Ready Reserve. The proposal was voted down by the House Military Personnel Subcommittee by one vote.

Instead, the committee, which will send its recommendation on to the powerful House Armed Services Committee, opted for a proposed renewal of draft registration.

THE CANDID comments of two of those involved in the first salvo on "doing something" about the draft pretty well sum up what the battle lines are...

Rep. Montgomery, in arguing for the limited draft, said the present reserves have only 200,000 of the 700,000 people they want. "There is a need, and if there is a need, the time is to do it now," he argued.

Rep. Lucien Nedzi, D-Mich., had another viewpoint: "I don't see that as much of a political reality, so I think it would be futile to vote for it. The fact of the matter is that I think the volunteer force is in trouble, and I do believe down the road there is going to be a need for a draft. But I'm prepared to wait awhile."

WHAT THE two gentlemen are saying is that on the one hand, almost everyone recognizes that the peacetime volunteer army hasn't worked, for any of the services.

And what they are adding is that they think the American people aren't ready to step in and say that they or, more precisely, their sons and perhaps daughters, should be trained to fight as of this point.

We, no more than the rawest recruit, like the idea of training for a war. But, then neither did millions of young men and women in the past. Had they not done it, we wonder where today's generation, of over and under 30, would be.

It is no secret that Russia is building the most powerful military machine ever devised by man. The main reason it hasn't been used thus far is that there has not been a necessity for it and the U.S. is not yet weak enough. Somehow, it is a subject which has not been discussed when the "realities" of national defense and the draft are brought up.

PLAYING TO THE gallery, President Carter called up the head of Sears, Roebuck the other day and pressured him into lowering some prices.

The impression thus conveyed was that the President is busily holding down inflation against the forces of evil that dominate the business community.

It so happens that Sears' annual report is just out. It shows that the stockholders took $409 million out of the business last year. That's $1.27 per share.

Government, meanwhile, took $764 million out of the business in the form of direct taxes. That's $2.36 per share.

The owner of 100 shares of Sears stock got a dividend of $127 last year; government got $236 off those same shares. If he's in the 30 percent tax bracket, the owner then paid $38 in income taxes on his dividend.

Thus, the owner wound up with $89 and the government with $274.

Now, Mr. President, who did you say is the cause of inflation?

IF YOU'RE LIKE me and have been driving an older-model gas guzzler while waiting for inflation to catch up with the autoworkers' pay, you may be about to run out of gas. Literally.

More and more service stations are dropping premium grade leaded gasoline because newer-model cars require unleaded fuel to meet Guv'ment standards.

As our numbers dwindle, we who are about to become an Oppressed Minority will either have to find enough credit to buy a new car (or a later-model used car) or hear our engines play knock-knock.

Oil companies say the demand for premium leaded, once the top seller in many stations, has dropped "down to nothing."

The final indignity! To be regarded as nothing!

AS SHE WAS preparing to decorate for a "gala" in the Memorial Civic Center last week, Mrs. Bob Norris was driving down the street when she spotted just what she needed.

Workmen were pruning trees in a yard near her home. The limbs would be perfect for hanging decorative birds being made for the event.

Stopping, Mrs. Norris asked a somewhat startled gardener if she could have the limbs.

He looked puzzled but agreed.

Would he mind, she asked, dropping the limbs off in her yard, just a couple of blocks away?

No, he replied, he wouldn't mind at all—"but, uh, lady, I can promise you: They won't grow."

Holmes Alexander:

Young Idealists Never Grow Up

WASHINGTON—"Those were the days all the country needed (was) a good five cent cigar," said Woodrow Wilson's vice president, Thomas Riley Marshall.

I couldn't help thinking—and not liking myself very well for it—that Marshall's flip and idiotic crack was too much like the panacea which Allen Drury offers in his new book "Mark Coffin, U.S.S."

Allen is saying here, if I understand him, that what the country needs to save it from extinction as a great nation—or any nation at all—is a Young Idealist in the Senate.

Just 20 years ago, 1959, Allen was my associate in the Senate Press Gallery, and he electrified us all, as he did the entire capitol city and country, with his runaway success "Advise and Consent."

IT WAS more than a novel about the Senate and its little-used power over Presidential appointments and international treaties.

Like all imaginative literature, it carries not just a narrative, a struggle of some sort, a corps of intelligent men and seductive women.

A major piece of art (think I'm quoting first Conrad and then Galsworthy) must also give us "that glimpse of truth for which we had forgotten to ask."

It also requires "a spire of meaning," such as might surmount a noble cathedral.

Well, "Advise and Consent" had both the glimpse and the spire. Allen Drury was telling us that the Senate should expose and reject unworthy Cabinet members and ambassadors, no matter how chummy with the President.

THE SENATE should mount the spire of its deliberative grandeur and turn aside any pact such as SALT II which demeans our national duty or weakens our military power to defend it. In our century this means, "Take no sass off the Soviet Union."

It is on this note that "Advise and Consent" ends. An American delegation flies off to a Geneva peace conference to meet Russian officials who have been roughly told off from Washington that there will be no knee-bending on our part.

But Drury's new book lacks that toughness, and more's the pity. Mark Coffin of California, barely of age to qualify as Senator, immediately takes the soft line against the domestic and foreign bully-boys.

It is as if the past 20 years have proved to the author, a red-white-and-blue man if I ever knew one, that the best of all policies is one that turneth away wrath.

It may be a good enough philosophy with which to confront reasonable men, both in the Land of the Free and beyond the Iron Curtain. But for the enemies of the American Republic, let us reach for the big stick.

In foreign policy, Young Coffin is more the softliner. His amendment to the Defense Department bill would "drastically" cut armaments and rely on the Soviet Union's fondness for "human rights."

What bothers me most in this book by a man of sound mind and sane patriotism, my friend Allen Drury, is this passage toward the end of the novel:

"The decades passed for young Mark Coffin, who all too soon became middle-aged Mark Coffin, and then elderly Mark Coffin—fought his battle, won his elections—and found in the course of time (that he remained) the newest, the youngest, freshest...most naive member of the U.S. Senate."

In a word, Young Coffin never grew up. If there are any more at home like Mark, I tremble for my country.

Sylvia Porter:

Don't Be The Loser In Confidence Game

(First in a series)

PROBABLY THE biggest unreported crime in the U.S. is the so-called confidence game. It also is among the most difficult to control because you, the victim, usually become an unwitting but willing accomplice and you, the victim, often are at an older age when you eagerly are seeking "bargains."

Although the variations of the confidence game are limited only by the con man's imagination, and he belongs to a notoriously inventive breed, the following three scenarios will help alert you:

(1) A favorite scam involves the selling of "bargain" merchandise. A stranger approaches you and offers to sell you a brand-new color TV set for $50. When you ask where it came from, the man just winks—a lure in itself.

You pay him the $50 and he tells you to meet him at a local warehouse. You wait for him, but he never shows up.

WHAT RECOURSE do you have now? If you go to the police with a tale of being robbed by a man who offered to sell you a new color TV at one-tenth its retail value, you're in for some embarrassing questions. Most victims do nothing.

(2) The most common confidence game probably is the bank examiner swindle—which works often enough (if not all the time) to make it worth the con man's effort.

A phone caller identifies himself as a federal bank examiner investigating a local bank. Usually he will have enough information about your account to impress you. Then comes the trap.

The "investigator" tells you the bank is suspected of fraud and that the "United States Banking Service" (non-existent) asks your cooperation in the investigation. The swindler suggests you withdraw a hefty sum from your savings so he, the "federal agent," can mark the money when it is redeposited.

YOU WITHDRAW your money and the "agent" meets you at your home after banking hours and "marks" the bills. Because of the late hour, the "agent" suggests you put the money in the federal vault for safekeeping until the bank opens the next day. You agree and that's the last you see of your savings.

(3) Finally, a passerby strikes up an idle conversation with you and suddenly an out-of-breath young woman runs up to you clutching a paper bag.

"Look what I found lying on the sidewalk," she exclaims, and reaches into the bag filled with new $20 bills. This is Act One of an everyday drama that deprives uncounted victims of their savings.

ACT TWO in this game—known as the "bag" or "Pocketbook drop"—is for the woman to offer to split the money, "because we all know about it." The passerby interrupts, "We don't know who that belongs to. We could get into trouble." He suggests that the safest move is to take the money to his attorney for advice.

The woman questions the man's integrity, at which point the passerby looks at you and says, "Why don't we let you take the money to the attorney?"

But, to show your good faith they ask that you give them $2,000 of your money to hold while you go to the attorney's office. Convinced, you go to your bank, withdraw $2,000 and give it to the two.

They give you the bag and the attorney's card. You find the attorney's address is a laundromat. And when you open the bag in full, you find it's loaded with newspaper clippings.

You have just become another victim of one of the oldest confidence games in the book.

How can you protect yourself from confidence men? Follow these simple, commonsense rules, urges George King, chairman of Burns Intl. Security Services, Inc.:

* IF A STRANGER offers you something valuable at a ridiculously low price, be suspicious. If the person requests money as "a sign of good faith," notify the police.

* If you're approached by any person who apparently has had the luck to find a large sum of money or other valuables, insist on notifying the police. The con man usually will disappear fast.

* If you think someone is trying to involve you in a confidence game, ask for advice from an expert in "the bunco squad" which most police departments maintain just to deal with these crimes.

Tomorrow: Ten ways to thwart a mugger.

James J. Kilpatrick:

Who Are We To Sass Rhodesia?

WASHINGTON—Comparisons, they say, are odious. Very well. Let us contemplate the elections in Rhodesia, and let us be odious.

It now appears that somewhere between 60 and 65 percent of the eligible electorate made it to the polls. The voters were black men and women over the age of 18.

Though a number of Rhodesian blacks had voted in the old days of the "A" and "B" lists, this was the first time for virtually all of the 1.8 million who cast their ballots.

It may be useful to insert a word on literacy and education. A tiny percentage of the voters had experienced some education. A much larger fraction had enjoyed elementary and some secondary schooling.

The largest portion, embracing most of the older voters, had received only the limited instruction that missionaries could provide.

MUCH OF Rhodesia remains a primitive land not far removed from the stone age—no roads, no electric power, no modern plumbing or housing, no amenities of civilization. These are tribal people, speaking ancient tongues, still observing tribal customs.

Something should be said of the circumstances under which the voting took place. The terrorist forces of Robert Mugabe and Joshua Nkomo in recent months have added new horrors to the meaning of "atrocity."

The two Marxist leaders have done everything in their power to intimidate the native people through murder, arson, rape, and mutilation.

Throughout the elections, terrorist raiders sought to keep voters from the polls. Villagers were threatened with bloody retaliation if they voted.

DESPITE ALL this, the natives organized themselves into five competing political parties. They campaigned vigorously for candidates.

They refused to be intimidated. And between 60 and 65 percent of them actually voted.

Let us compare. Oh, my brother, let us compare! Last November Americans went to the polls to choose governors, senators, state legislators, and members of the House of Representatives.

The American electorate is well educated; our illiteracy rate is under one percent. Our people have excellent roads, fine transportation, splendid facilities for voting.

We have generations of electoral experience. There were no guerrillas, no terrorists, no threats, no warnings of reprisal or vengeance to keep our enlightened people from the polls.

AND WE voted 37.9 percent. That was all: 37.9 percent. It was the poorest turnout since 1942. More than 90 million eligible persons failed to cast ballots.

Some other comparisons also are odious. Our forefathers, North and South alike, trafficked in slavery. Our Constitution of 1787 treated the black man as only three-fifths of a human being.

It was not until the Voting Rights Act of 1965 that American Negroes began to vote in significant numbers in Carter's old Confederacy.

Taken all in all, recent events in Rhodesia present an embarrassing, insistent, humiliating question: Who in the hell are we of America to complain about the Rhodesian elections?

IN THE FACE of every conceivable handicap, the Rhodesians brought it off.

If the President now persists in denying recognition to the new government of the new Zimbabwe, he will have forfeited every claim he has made in the name of justice, fair play, and straight dealing in the matter of Rhodesia.

Leaders of the transitional government have met every condition imposed upon them: They have agreed to multi-party talks; they have conducted a full and free election. It would now be a matter of monstrous hypocrisy for Carter to insist that more is required.

What's the record in his own state of Georgia? Why, sir, Georgia voted only 28.8 percent of her people in 1974, 37.8 pecent in 1976, and a miserable 18.7 percent—worst in the nation—in 1978.

Tell us about democracy, Jimmy, and get off Rhodesia's back.

American Companies Slowly Returning To Iran

TEHRAN, Iran (AP) — Americans are tiptoeing back into Iran and despite the anti-U.S. outbursts of the February revolution finding to their surprise that many Iranians are glad to see them back.

Such American companies as Exxon, B.F. Goodrich and Kodak are cautiously resuming operations, often with U.S. employees who spend just a few days at a time in the country.

Many businessmen say their work still is being slowed because their own companies are undecided about their policy toward Iran. And the country's economy is still severely disrupted. But while anti-American sloganeering is still common in public, U.S. visitors say overt discrimination against American firms is rare.

Much of the sloganeering associates the United States with the repressive policies of ousted Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi.

"I don't believe there's as much anti-American feeling as we've been led to believe," says Franklin T. Burroughs, executive director of the Iran-American Chamber of Commerce.

Businessmen and bankers express the belief that American companies will have no difficulty participating in an anticipated import boom in the next three to six months. Imports may include substantial quantities of rice and wheat, commodities the United States has for export in abundance.

About 40,000 Americans were living in Iran 18 months ago at the height of U.S. commercial and political involvement in the country. The number slipped precipitously as revolutionary violence overtook the country, dropping to 7,000 on the eve of the revolutionary victory Feb. 11.

Some 4,000 Americans were evacuated in an emergency airlift in the days immediately after Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini's forces took over, and the U.S. community now is down to about 1,500.

In the last months of the revolution, unidentified gunmen shot and wounded two Americans in the central city of Isfahan. Soon after the revolutionary takeover, guerrillas attacked the U.S. Embassy in Tehran. But U.S. officials and businessmen reported no recent cases of harassment of Americans.

"The Americans who have been here previously find the atmosphere much more relaxed now," said Mehdy Shalfrooshan, an officer of the Bank of America in Tehran who deals with many U.S. businessmen. "There was a more hostile attitude before. Now people think foreigners are here because we need them. In May, I think we will see many foreigners coming back for good."

Of the 300 or so American businesses that operated here before the revolution, only a "small minority" has brought back U.S. staff on a permanent basis, according to the Iran-American Chamber of Commerce.

Few of the Americans have brought their wives and children.

About 10 American children are enrolled at the International Community School in Tehran in contrast to 250 before the revolution. But headmaster John J. Magagna said he has received inquiries from parents of about 50 more American children.

Life is austere for foreigners. Few restaurants are open after 10:30 p.m., alcohol is scarce, and the small foreign community provides little social activity of its own.

Businessmen say even though anti-American incidents are down, they still worry about the comparatively large number of armed guerrillas on the streets of the city.

Returning businessmen have found many of their old contacts in companies and government ministries replaced by new people, some of them unfamiliar with the Americans' projects. But the expected import boom and a general revitalization of the Iranian economy could open the way for a substantial American return.

U.S.-Iranian trade reached $2.84 billion last year.

"People still have faith in high technology from the United States, and a lot of Iranians in high technology have been trained in America," Burroughs said. "The whole oil industry here has been set up on the American standard."

U.S. sources say the Ministry of Education continues to facilitate the study of Iranian students and specialists in the United States.

Mailer's Wife Seeks Kennedy's Help

BARNSTABLE, Mass. (AP) — Norman Mailer's fourth wife has turned to Sen. Edward M. Kennedy to try to stop the Internal Revenue Service from auctioning off the beachfront house she wants as part of her divorce settlement from Mailer.

MRS. MAILER

"That house was my settlement," said Beverly Mailer after her husband spent most of Tuesday testifying in Barnstable Probate Court in the final stages of their divorce hearing.

Mailer said he didn't think he could produce $80,000 owed to the IRS and redeem the $135,000 Provincetown home because he already was in debt for more than $300,000.

Mrs. Mailer told reporters after the hearing that she had requested the Massachusetts Democrat to intercede with the IRS.

A California firm, Cape Cod See, bought the house at auction two weeks ago for $65,000.

According to the IRS, Mailer has 120 days to pay his $80,000 income tax debt and get back the title to the house, where his wife and their two children now are living.

Mrs. Mailer is suing the novelist for divorce and is seeking a settlement including the house, $1,000 a week to help her restart her acting career and tuition for their sons.

Roberta Flack Recovering

NEW YORK (AP) — Roberta Flack is recovering from a whiplash injury she suffered in a minor accident in lower Manhattan, the singer's secretary said.

MISS FLACK

The secretary, Marilyn Atlas, said the accident occurred Sunday night, and Miss Flack is wearing a neckbrace while convalescing at her Manhattan apartment. She said Miss Flack will miss an engagement at the Kentucky Derby because of her injuries.

"She's not tap dancing, but she's not in much pain," Miss Atlas said Tuesday.

Record Firm Files Large Lawsuit

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Apple Records, Inc., the recording company founded by the Beatles, has filed a $16.5 million breach-of-contract suit against Capitol Records and its parent company, E.M.I. Records.

The Superior Court suit filed Monday claims Capitol failed to pay Apple full royalties on records and tapes made between 1962 and 1976 by the now-defunct rock group and its individual members — John Lennon, Paul McCartney, George Harrison and Ringo Starr.

Under its agreement with Apple Records, Capitol was authorized to manufacture and distribute recordings in the United States, Canada and Mexico.

"It's basically an accounting matter," said Howard Friedman, attorney for Apple. He said the suit alleges a number of inaccuracies in Capitol's accounting procedures that resulted in underpayment of royalties.

The suit also demands compensation for records that were allegedly discarded by Capitol when they should not have been scrapped.

Russians See Brezhnev Documentary

MOSCOW (AP) — The first of a three-part documentary film based on Soviet President Leonid I. Brezhnev's book of World War II reminiscences, "Malaya Zemlya," has been broadcast on Soviet television.

The book is one of three volumes of Brezhnev memoirs that this year was awarded the Lenin Prize for Literature, the Soviet Union's equivalent of the Pulitzer Prize.

Malaya Zemlya is the name given to a small piece of land near Novorossisk which was seized by a small band of Soviet troops during World War II and held for 225 days against the Germans.

Tuesday night's episode interspersed a TV announcer reading from Brezhnev's book, authentic World War II news clips, modern day shots of Novorossisk and wartime Soviet songs.

One clip shows Brezhnev himself in the trenches during his days as chief of the 18th Army's political department.

Termites Fight City Hall — Win

COLFAX, Calif. (AP) — The termites literally ran the city government out of the City Hall of this former Sierra mining camp.

The Lighter Side Of Today's News

After secretaries reported termites coming out of the walls of the old frame structure, a termite inspector declared it unsafe Tuesday and ordered immediate evacuation.

A member of the Placer County Board of Supervisors, Jim Henry, requested permission for city government to move into a county building occupied by the American Legion Memorial Hall.

Henry said the termite damage was so extensive that the building could fall down.

Colfax, with a two-block main street, is on Interstate 80 between Sacramento and Reno, Nev.

Solzhenitsyn, Ginzburg Meet After Five Years

CAVENDISH, Vt. (AP) — Alexander Solzhenitsyn and Alexander Ginzburg, Soviet dissidents whose fight for human rights led to imprisonment, are once again behind a wire fence. But now the gate provides a welcome seclusion for the two exiles, reunited after five years separation.

Ginzburg arrived late Tuesday at Solzhenitsyn's fenced-in compound in Cavendish, where the Nobel Prize-winning author has lived as a near-recluse since coming to the United States in 1976.

Ginzburg was greeted by Solzhenitsyn's wife, Natalya, at the tall gate of wire mesh strung on a heavy frame leading to the 51-acre southeastern Vermont estate.

The two embraced, and Mrs. Solzhenistyn told Ginzburg that he and his family, who are expected to join Ginzburg soon, should "think of this as if it were your home."

Ginzburg, who was released last week from a Soviet prison, looked gaunt and pale after a day of interviews in New York City and the long drive to Vermont.

But he bounded out of the car before it had stopped rolling to throw his arms around Mrs. Solzhenitsyn, her mother and Solzhenitsyn's 18-year-old son, Dimitri.

Solzhenitsyn, who is rarely seen by the 1,260 residents here, did not come to the gate to welcome his guest.

Mrs. Solzhenitsyn, speaking through a translator, said that Ginzburg was "very, very tired and very much in need of rest."

The 42-year-old Soviet physicist is suffering from an ulcer that he said Monday was "aggravated extremely" by his latest confinement in a Soviet prison camp.

Ginzburg, along with four other dissidents, was released Friday by the Soviet Union in exchange for two Soviets convicted of espionage in the United States.

Solzhenitsyn and Ginzburg are close friends and leaders of the Soviet dissident movement.

Mrs. Solzhenitsyn said the two men had not seen each other for five years and plan to devote themselves to the Russian Social Fund, which Solzhenitsyn created to help imprisoned Russian dissidents.

Ginzburg served as director of the fund in the Soviet Union before he was imprisoned in 1977.

The physicist, who has served three separate terms in Soviet prison camps, was again imprisoned last year after his conviction on charges of "anti-Soviet propaganda" for his work monitoring human rights provisions in the Helsinki accords.

Solzhenitsyn, who has spent a decade in Soviet prison camps, is the author of the three-volume "Gulag Archipelago," an indictment of the Soviet Union's prison camp system. Solzhenitsyn, who holds the Nobel Prize for Literature, was exiled from the Soviet Union in 1974.

Late Mayor's Secretary Takes Witness Stand

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — The late Mayor George Moscone's appointments secretary, testifying during the first day of the murder trial of former city supervisor Dan White, told a jury how her boss was shot to death in his office.

When White, 32, accused of killing Moscone and Supervisor Harvey Milk, entered the mayor's office, "he (White) seemed nervous, pale," Cyr Copertini said Tuesday. She said White chatted with her a few minutes before entering the mayor's office.

Five minutes later, she said, White's raised voice was heard through the door, and "there were dull thuds. I thought maybe like an automobile door someone tried to shut — and finally succeeding.

"As I stood there, I thought I ought to remember that pattern in case it is something important," she said, sobbing during the testimony.

Deputy District Attorney Thomas F. Norman, in his opening statement, said the state was seeking the death penalty against White, accusing him under the "special circumstances" section of state law which provides for capital punishment in cases involving multiple deaths or where a public official has been killed to prevent him from carrying out his official duties.

The killings, Norman said, "were in retaliation for and to prevent the performance of (their) official duties."

White, Norman said, shot both Moscone and Milk in the body, then administered the "coup de grace" to the politicians by shooting them in the head as they lay wounded and helpless on the floor.

Defense lawyer Douglas Schmidt argued that White had slid into a profound manic depression.

Man Swaps Goods For Coins

LEXINGTON, Ky. (AP) — The price is right at Gomer Clemmons' service station — if you've got silver coins. A gallon of gas can be had for less than two bits, a soft drink for a dime.

Clemmons also sells at today's prices — if you offer today's currency. But if you want his bargains, the purchase must be made in silver coins.

"I'd trade anything I've got" for the shiny, no-copper-added coins minted before 1965, said Clemmons, who adds with a laugh, "I'd trade my wife for it."

Clemmons' abiding passion for silver coins lured him to begin trading merchandise and gasoline for them in 1973. Besides his Lexington service station, he owns wholesale auto-parts businesses in Lexington, Frankfort and Louisville.

"We'll take silver for anything," he said. "I sold one man a set of radial tires. I think I took $60 in silver for a $270 set of tires. He paid me in Washington quarters. He had piles of (silver). But he died."

Clemmons estimates he has swapped about $1,700 in merchandise for silver coins worth about $9,000.

The coins are worth about five times their original value. But Clemmons vows his motives are pure.

"I'm not trying to make money on 'em," he said of his coins. "I just like old coins. That's true."

However, he said, "if they weren't going up in value, I probably wouldn't like old coins."

"I never sell 'em," said Clemmons. "I wouldn't sell 'em unless I absolutely had to for food. I wouldn't even pay a hospital bill with 'em, I don't believe."

Clemmons said he began his coin collecting 25 years ago. That's how he spends his money, although "my wife doesn't always approve," he said.

But it's getting tough to find people who have silver and are willing to swap for gasoline valued at 17.6 cents a gallon in silver, especially when folks can save 10 cents in today's currency by pumping it themselves, he said.

"People don't have silver anymore," he said. "These coin dealers and others have it snapped up.

'You wouldn't get a silver coin out of $1,000 in change," said Clemmons. "You can spot one a mile away."

OCCUPATION: CRAZY

MADISON, Wis. (AP) — "Being a full-time crazy person is becoming an occupation" for a certain segment of our society, says Sue Estroff, a University of Wisconsin anthropologist. Living in a system that supports people who acknowledge their disabilities, she says, many chronically disturbed people "earn their living by being different."

Water Shuts Down Telephone Service

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — About 26,000 telephones in the downtown area went dead for more than 16 hours after water drenched three frames of circuit processing equipment.

A Bell Laboratories troubleshooter squad from Chicago restored phone service at 4 a.m. Tuesday to hundreds of businesses, both Salt Lake newspapers, KSL television and radio, two hospitals, Utah Power & Light Co. and to Mountain Bell's downtown office, where the trouble began a half hour before noon Monday. A water pipe burst on the sixth floor sending 2,000 gallons filtering to ground level at the phone company, drenching the circuit processing equipment. The phones went dead immediately.

THERE OUGHTA BE A LAW by Whipple and Borth

Flood Of Refugees Threatens Hong Kong's Housing Plans

HONG KONG (UPI) — A flood of illegal refugees from China is threatening Hong Kong's ambitious public housing program, which already serves as landord for almost half the colony's 5 million people.

Public housing — ranging from cramped and dark tin-roofed shacks to soaring high-rise complexes featuring such amenities as supermarkets and libraries — is the only hope of decent accommodation for most people in land-short Hong Kong.

At the end of 1978, nearly 2 million people — about 45 percent of Hong Kong's population — lived in 372,000 apartments built by the housing department in 69 projects.

They pay rents starting from $5 a month for an apartment in one of the 86 high-rise buildings of a 20-year-old complex that houses nearly 50,000 people.

"At the rate of about 35,000 new housing units per year in the public sector, by the mid-1980s we should be able to break the back of the (housing) problem if there is no large influx of refugees," said Donald Liao, director of housing.

But a recent surge of refugees from China, combined with uncertainty about Peking's future plans for this last bastion of the British Empire in Asia, makes all planning problematical.

The number of illegal immigrants from China arrested in Hong Kong in the first three months of 1979 was 20 times greater than during the same period last year.

Through March, 10,872 illegal refugees from China — more than the total number of such arrests for all of 1978 — were picked up and returned to the mainland. Last year during the same period the number was only 539.

The generally accepted figure for the number of Chinese refugees who safely make it to Hong Kong and escape detection is four for every one taken into custody.

At the current rate, the illegal immigrants, who eventually would become eligible for public housing, threaten to overwhelm careful government planning for public services, especially accommodations.

To a great extent, Peking can control the number of refugees who flee to Hong Kong through stepped-up land and marine patrols.

But for reasons not immediately clear, the Communist government has chosen not to do so and hundreds of people a day stream into Hong Kong, often finding a temporary home with relatives already living in the colony.

Many others end up in illegal squatter camps — often without electricity or sanitary facilities — clustered like festering sores on unused hillsides.

Unscrupulous speculators frequently sell barely habitable tin and bamboo shacks in the squatter camps to unwitting illegal refugees, falsely promising them they will be immediately eligible for public housing when the area is razed by the government in one of its periodic sweeps.

Another problem is the New Territories, a 370-square-mile area on the border with China, whose 99-year lease expires in 1999.

The Peking government's plans for the New Territories when the lease expires are not known, but the Housing Department is developing a number of "new towns" in the area in an attempt to spread out Hong Kong's teeming population.

The towns, built around high-rise apartment complexes, are self-contained with swimming pools, movie theaters and factories where many residents are employed.

The almost rural nature of the "new towns" is designed to take the pressure off Hong Kong island and the Kowloon peninsula across the harbor, where more than 2 million people live.

Despite the uncertainty over Peking's policies toward the highly industrialized leased territories and the refugee problem, Hong Kong is committed to continuing its massive public housing program.

U.S., Russia Have Big Interest In Yemens

By DAVID D. PEARCE

BEIRUT, Lebanon (UPI) — Yemen, the mountainous southwest heel of the Arabian peninsula, was important 2,000 years ago as a vital link in the spice trade between East and West.

In recent decades South Yemen's capital, then the crown colony of Aden, served Britain as a major fueling port and key political post in the Persian Gulf.

It is important now — especially following the overthrow of the Shah of Iran — because it overlooks the oil lanes between East and West and because its intermittent warfare between North Yemen and South Yemen has drawn both U.S. and Soviet naval power in the form of aircraft carriers, support vessels and jet fighters.

Political activity in North and South Yemen often is better explained by tribal loyalty than modern political allegiance.

There is no well-defined border between North and South Yemen, and North Yemen has no defined border at all with its wealthy northeast neighbor, Saudi Arabia.

Ethnically, the mostly poor 5 million people of the north and the 1.8 million people of the south are one nation.

The Americans and the Saudis are trying to wield influence in the north. The Soviets, Cubans and East Germans are attempting to do the same in the south.

Fearful of a superpower confrontation, Arab states such as Syria, Iraq and Kuwait have urged the two Yemens to shelve their differences, a tall order indeed.

To appease their Arab brethren the two Yemens have agreed for the second time in seven years to unite, although almost no one expects they will do so.

The United States is funneling $400 million in U.S. arms and aid — partly paid for by Saudi Arabia — into North Yemen, supposedly to shore up the regime of North Yemeni President Ali Abdullah Saleh against encroachments from the Marxist South.

Analysis

Yet American intelligence analysts reportedly have concluded Saleh's shaky grip on power may not last six months.

Given Saleh's unpopularity, strong domestic opposition, poor relations with the South and the traditionally frailty of North Yemeni governments — the two men who preceded him both were assassinated — that conclusion seems warranted.

The Southerners meanwhile have kept the peninsula on edge by supporting insurgents in both North Yemen and Oman.

But many analysts argue that recent fighting in Yemen wasn't really a war between North and South Yemen at all, and that shoring up the North Yemen regime will do no good, either for Saleh or the United States.

Arab diplomats say the war began because Saleh's opponents got together in remote mountainous areas along the border and formed a National Democratic Front in hopes of toppling him.

The left-leaning grouping of political factions — ranging from Marxists to North Yemeni army defectors and disgruntled tribesmen — is supplied mainly by from South Yemen.

Arab diplomats insist it was this group — not the South Yemenis — who did most of the fighting in the recent war, although the South Yemen government provided artillery and logistic support and limited air cover.

Analysts agree it was North Yemen that attacked first in February — portraying the fighting as aggression from the South — while South Yemen's Foreign Minister Saleh Mutih was off trying to improve relations with Saudi Arabia.

It was a clever move that postponed the inevitable upheaval, they say.

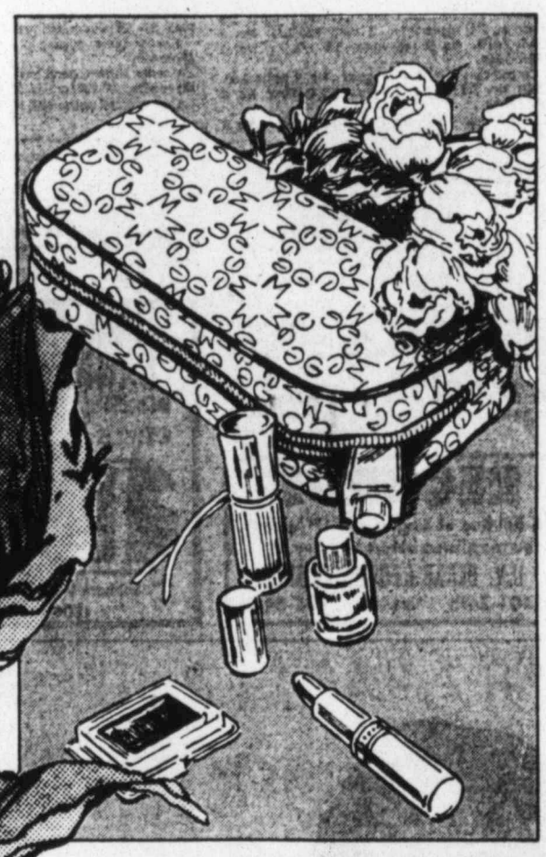

Researchers Find Brain Disorders

CHICAGO (AP) — Yale University researchers say most violent delinquents studied in a Connecticut reform school have brain or neurologic disorders or psychiatric problems.

Dr. Jonathan H. Pincus, a neurologist on the research team, said 96 percent of those studied had neurologic abnormalities, compared to 22 percent of a nonviolent group in the same institution. This suggests factors other than socio-economic conditions may contribute to violent behavior in delinquents, Pincus reported at the annual meeting of the American Academy of Neurology.

Profits Tax Controversy Becomes Three-Sided

By WALTER R. MEARS

WASHINGTON (AP) — What's happening, as President Carter tells it, is a classic confrontation over a bonanza of unearned profits, as oil industry lobbyists try to hoodwink Congress into permitting a massive ripoff of the consumer.

Carter has used those terms and more in what he calls a strong and fervent campaign to get Congress to approve his proposed windfall oil profits tax.

Carter wants the tax imposed on profits that flow from his order to phase out controls on the price of U.S. oil beginning on June 1.

His problem now is that the tax looks rather tame when compared with the rhetoric. While Carter gave the impression that his new tax would reclaim half the profits the oil industry gains from decontrol, the administration's own figures put it at about 13 percent during the first three years.

That is no small bite. And between the windfall tax proposal and the existing federal income tax, the companies will indeed be paying about half the profits of decontrol in federal taxes.

Nonetheless, Carter's tax proposal is not as tough as he made it sound. The advertising took the edge off the product.

And if Carter has strong words for the oil industry, Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., has equally strong words for the president.

Kennedy told the American Society of Newspaper Editors Monday that the oil lobby intimidated the administration into "throwing in the towel" by ordering decontrol. He also said industry intimidation led the president to submit "a token windfall tax that is no more than a transparent fig leaf over the vast new profits the industry will reap."

Carter's retort:

"That is just a lot of baloney."

The president said he couldn't believe Kennedy said that. So Kennedy said it again.

Proposing the profits tax on April 25, Carter said, "The congressional battle ... will be a classic confrontation pitting the common and public good against the enormous power of a well-organized special interest."

Perhaps it will, but the confrontation turns out to be three-sided.

Carter criticizes oil companies he says are "awash with their greatest profits since the OPEC oil embargo" and grabbing for more.

Congressional liberals also criticize the oil industry.

But they also are bearing down on Carter who, after all, issued the order that will permit the price of domestically produced oil to begin rising toward world market prices next month.

They're trying to push through legislation that would block the decontrol order. Kennedy is among the sponsors of that move. It doesn't stand much chance.

Carter and his advisers had to know in advance they would face sharp congressional criticism when the decontrol order was issued.

The president's strategy seemed to be to defuse that by going after the oil industry on the windfall profits issue.

"The oil lobby is going to be all over Capitol Hill like a chicken on a June bug," Carter said in Richmond, Va. "... We are being told by them that we should just turn all the money over to them."

And in Manchester, N.H.: "There is no excuse for permitting any such massive ripoff. We must and we will have a good windfall profits tax."

The idea, it appeared, was to move the debate past the question of decontrol and on to the issue of a windfall profits tax.

For all Carter's warnings, the industry doesn't appear to be putting up much of a fight at the tax terms he proposed. And there still is plenty of controversy about the decontrol decision.

Carter told his Monday news conference that the windfall profits tax could not be confiscatory, or the oil industry wouldn't have money to achieve one of his objectives, an increase in domestic oil production. He said if Congress wants to impose a tax more stringent than his, that's all right with him so long as it is fair.

He also said decontrol of oil prices is mandated by law, and Kennedy knows it along with everyone else in Congress.

The law leaves controls to the discretion of the president beginning June 1, and would have the optional controls expire entirely on Oct. 1, 1981.

"This is not a decision that I made," Carter said Monday. "I am complying with an existing law. In order to minimize the impact of decontrol, we are carefully and slowly phasing out controls over roughly a 28-month period."

That's not quite the way he described his role at an April 10 news conference, early in his public campaign on the issue.

He said then the controls question had paralyzed energy policy for years but that he had cut the knot "and put that decision behind us ...

"I have taken that responsibility on my own shoulders, as mandated by the Congress ..." Carter said.

State Plans To Continue Excavation

AUGUSTA, Maine (AP) — For 23 years Ed Runge and Guy Mellgren picked through dirt pilings on the coast of Blue Hill Bay.

Now the state of Maine plans to continue the pair's archeological digs in hopes of finding another example of their greatest discovery — an 11th century Viking penny that is the oldest European artifact ever discovered in America.

When the two amateur archeologists found the coin in 1957, they were surprised it was silver, not copper. But they didn't know they discovered an old Norse coin and Mellgren just added it to his arrowhead collection in Hingham, Mass., where it remained until he donated it to the Maine State Museum.

"When we first found it, it was in much better condition," said Runge in a telephone interview Monday from his home in Riverdale, Ga. "When we cut it out of the ground, it was perfectly round. While we were handling it, a chip broke away."

Archeologists at the State Museum say the discovery by Runge and Mellgren adds weight to the theory that the Vikings, who were known explorers and navigators, traveled further south than has been documented.

Mellgren died last fall, but state officials said the meticulous records he kept have been turned over to the state to aid archeologists in their excavation of the site this summer.

Mellgren, usually accompanied by Runge, traveled to the site at Blue Hill every summer for the past 23 years to dig for Indian artifacts.

Runge said the pair stumbled across the site, located on a tip of land jutting into Blue Hill Bay, by accident, on their way home from a dig in Canada.

"We took out a shovelful to look, and it was the most revealing piece of Indian property I've ever seen in my life," he said.

The Norse coin was one of tens of thousands of tools, ceremonial artifacts and coins and jewelry the pair uncovered at the site.

The exact site at Blue Hill is being kept secret by State Museum officials who fear that it will be destroyed by arrowhead hunters and vandals before excavation can start in June.

So far, state archeologist Dr. Bruce Bourque, who visited the area a few weeks ago, said no one has disturbed it.

The Maine Legislature has approved $24,000 in state funds to go along with a federal Historic Preservation Commission grant for the archeological work.

Colleges Will Set All-Time Record

NEW YORK (AP) — U.S. chemical-engineering colleges will award degrees in June to an all-time record number of engineers, notes Chemical Engineering magazine.

Bachelor degrees in chemical engineering will be awarded to 5,500 students, eclipsing last year's all-time high of 4,621.

The publication says demand for chemical engineers will continue strong for the next three years. Growth, however, will not keep pace with the "onslaught of graduates."

Construction Nears End On Adriatic Pipeline

By STEPHEN H. MILLER

KRK, Yugoslavia (AP) — Grazing sheep have given way to American earth-movers and Soviet trucks.

Rocky, overgrown pastures on this Adriatic island have been replaced by steel tanks, concrete, bare earth and gravel.

Completion is finally near, Yugoslavs say, on a pipeline that will be Eastern Europe's first direct link to Arab oil supplies.

"All work is now in final phases," says project director Zvonko Petrinovic, taking shelter from gusty coastal winds in the lee of construction shacks near what will be an Adriatic Sea terminal capable of holding two 400,000-ton supertankers.

"There are no major delays," he says. "Oil will begin to flow this year."

The 450-mile pipeline, delayed a year by cash and construction problems, will carry 24 million tons — the equivalent of 168 million barrels — of Arab and Persian Gulf oil a year from Krk, a Croatian coastal island, through a string of refineries extending all the way to Belgrade, Yugoslavia's capital.

But what has drawn more interest among Western analysts are two branches which will carry an additional 10 million tons (70 million barrels) to the neighboring communist countres of Hungary and Czechoslovakia.

There are plans to extend the pipeline to neighboring Romania, where President Nicolae Ceausescu conceded this year that Europe's second biggest oil producer had become a major petroleum importer.

Yugoslav officials say Austria, another neighbor, has also asked about being hooked into the line.

There has been speculaton that the line will eventually find links to the Soviet "Friendship" pipeline system which for years has supplied all of Eastern Europe's oil.

The Soviets have warned East Europe nations they will hold exports to 490 million barrels this year, and will boost the level by only 42 million barrels next year.

Russian oil is expected to cover only 75 percent of Eastern Europe's needs by next year. It is expected to cover even less by 1990.

Much of Eastern Europe must rely on either Soviet oil, Soviet natural gas or its own low-quality soft coal, unsuitable for some industrial uses and the cause of widespread pollution, health and environmental problems.

The area had a winter that brought damaging power shortages and cutbacks in Poland, Czechoslovakia and East Germany. Frozen strip mines and low water levels in hydroelectric stations brought into the open widespread and growing energy problems.

Yugoslavs were lining recently up for gasoline for the second time in six months. Last November, they were trying to beat price increases that left gasoline costing the equivalent of about $2 a gallon. This time, officials said, there was a shortage of ingredients for high-octane gasoline.

Oil was a prime topic of President Josip Broz Tito's late winter trip to the Middle East.

Energy needs have long forced East European governments to ignore some of their own political arguments, especially in dealings with Iran.

The Shah of Iran had visited each East European capital at least once. As their government was praising the new Iranian government, Czechoslovia officials conceded privately that Czech small arms had been sold to the shah.

East Germany was dusting off its red carpet with great fanfare last fall when the shah canceled a Berlin trip because the turmoil was starting that eventually forced him out of the country.

Money for the pipeline includes funds from Yugoslavia, Hungary, Czechoslovakia, Kuwait, Libya and a consortium of 18 American, British and French banks.

Next to the tanker terminal, wide expanses of bare earth and concrete mark the start of a $971 million petrochemical plant being put up by a Yugoslav oil company and Dow Chemical Co., of the United States.

It is the biggest joint venture in Yugoslavia. The plant's production of some chemicals will exceed current production levels of all existing Yugoslav factories combined.

Cost of the pipeline has almost doubled since plans were drawn up. There are hints that the price may go beyond even the last publicly cited figure of $650 million. Yugoslav officials now say the first phase will cost $600 million, and the links to Hungary and Czechoslovakia will cost "less than $100 million" more.

The Krk island site was picked, planners say, because it lies at a point where the Adriatic pushes deepest into the European continent.

"It links the producers of oil with consumers in a very rational way," says Petrinovic.

"There is much interest in this, especially among Arab countries, because it's such a rational plan."

Gasoline Woes Cause Drop In RV Sales

DETROIT (AP) — Sales of motor homes are down because people who are not sure they are going to have enough gasoline for their cars are not likely to buy a recreational vehicle, industry officials say.

Sales fell 13.9 percent in the first three months of the year from 54,300 in the same period last year, the Recreation Vehicle Industry Association reported this week.

"Buyers are confused and scared off by all the talk about weekend gasoline station closings, rationing, or whatever," association spokesman William Gampo said in Fairfax, Va.

"We expect sales to snap back to normal as soon as the government decides what it's going to do," Gampo added.

A majority of the association's 220 members are reporting layoffs and slowdowns in production, Gampo said.

Winnebago Industries, one of the largest manufacturers of motor homes, announced in Iowa last week that it is cutting production to 275 a week from the present 320, and will lay off 270 employees.

In Michigan, Xplorer Motor in Brown City laid off all 140 production workers last week. Champion Motor Homes in Dryden laid off 100 in two Imlay Township plants, but said they were to be called back this week.

Normally, production is in high gear at this time of year.

Ironically, the present slowing of production may lead to shortages if an expected summer turnaround in sales materializes, Campo said.

James Summers of the Recreation Vehicle Dealers Association in Chantilly, Va., said the slowdown in the $7-billion-a-year industry is "not nearly as bad as during the oil embargo of 1973, but it's bad enough.

"This really didn't have to happen. The association feels that the public has been subjected to a lot of unnecessary confusion and doubt about the gasoline issue," he said.

NRC Says Staff Made Mistake

WASHINGTON (AP) — An official of the Nuclear Regulatory Commission says the agency staff "fouled up" when it reported — incorrectly — that there was a risk of hydrogen explosion inside the damaged Three Mile Island nuclear reactor.

Roger Mattson, director of the NRC division of systems safety, said in an interview Tuesday the agency issued "misinformation" that a hydrogen bubble in the reactor might become explosive.

He said no such danger existed, but the NRC did not figure that out until 36 hours later. By that time officials were reporting the bubble was disappearing.

Last March 31, three days after an accident severely damaged the Three Mile Island nuclear powerplant near Harrisburg, Pa., NRC spokesman Frank Ingram told The Associated Press that oxygen appeared to be joining a hydrogen bubble inside the reactor vessel and might eventually form an explosive mixture.

Such a blast could blow the reactor open, shatter its fuel, and increase the chance of large releases of radioactivity to the environment, Ingram said.

Based on that NRC assessment, the AP reported that the hydrogen bubble "is showing signs of becoming potentially explosive." It also reported that there was disagreement among the NRC staff over how long such a development might take.

That description was confirmed and reconfirmed in telephone calls from Ingram and Edson Case, NRC deputy director of reactor regulation.

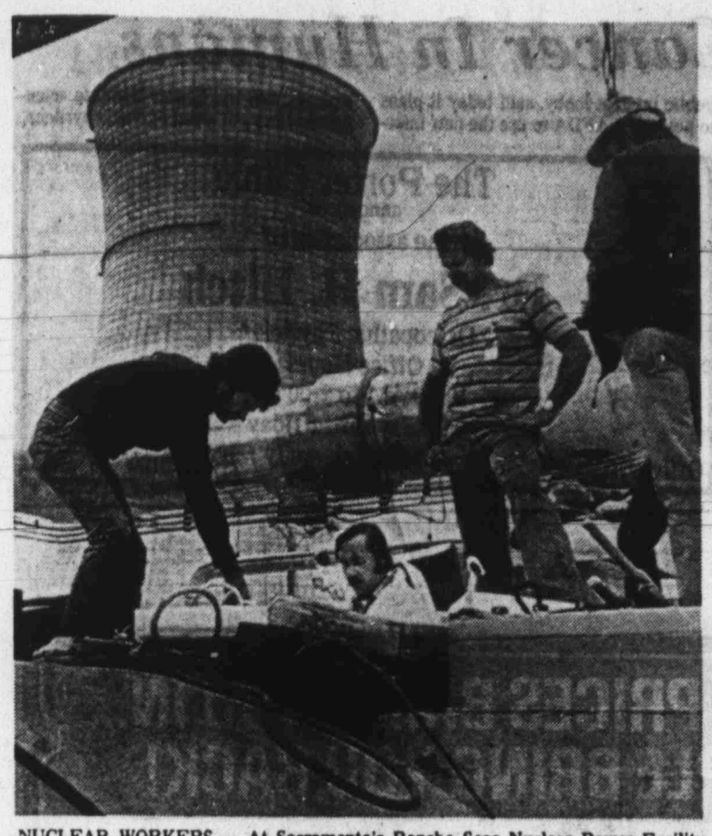

Transcripts made public later showed the five-member NRC stayed in session all day March 31 awaiting expert estimates of the explosion risk and wondering whether it might have to recommend a precautionary evacuation of the Harrisburg area.

The commissioners disbanded for the night only after receiving estimates that an explosion was unlikely for at least the next few days.

On April 10, NRC chairman Joseph M. Hendrie told a Senate subcommittee the agency took a couple of days to realize there was no real danger of explosion.

Explaining the mistake Tuesday to a subcommittee of the Advisory Committee on Reactor Safeguards, Mattson said, "We fouled up."

"The amount of concern was entirely undeserved," Mattson said.

NUCLEAR WORKERS — At Sacramento's Rancho Seco Nuclear Power Facility Tuesday workmen entered the top of a nuclear-powered generator to do routine checking in preparation for new safety standards ordered by the Nuclear Regulatory Agency. Commission Expected To Reach Decision On Zoning Of Property

The Planning and Zoning Commission is expected to reach a verdict Thursday on whether light commercial development should be permitted east of Slide Road between 54th and 62nd Street, or whether the property should remain zoned for single family residences.

Homeowners in the area want no changes in the zoning or the Land Use Plan regarding the neighborhood, but other property owners have asked the commission to consider some other uses for the property.

Because of the property's proximity to South Plains Mall across Slide Road, speculative buying has been rampant in anticipation that the land eventually will be zoned for commercial development.

However, requests for zone changes on the property repeatedly have been denied by the commission.

Commissioners are expected to examine two alternatives at their meeting.

First, to leave the zoning and Land Use Plan as it is or, to consider allowing light commercial and/or offices along Slide Road, buffered from the single family dwellings by duplexes.

Also at the commission meeting at 7 p.m. in city council chambers, the panel is expected to consider allowing grocery stores of any size in local retail (C-2) zoning districts. Currently only grocery stores up to 35,000 square feet in size are permitted in C-2 districts.

The commission also will consider amending the zoning ordinance to require Zoning Board of Adjustment approval for garden centers in a general retail (C-3) zoning district and to require alley paving any time there is alley access to a home or development.

Zone requests to be decided by the commission are:

—C.A. Henson to change property north of 37th Street and west of Avenue P from multi-family (R-3) to commercial (C-4) to allow a wholesale furniture and office building.

—Superior Steel Buildings for Bob Montgomery to change property east of Avenue H and south of 22nd Street from C-4 to C-4 Specific Use to permit mini-warehouses.

—Danny D. McLarty, for B.R. Griffin, to change property south of 48th Stteet and east of Avenue A from two family (R-2) to light manufacturing (M-1).

—Dennis Olson for Hollis Cogburn to change property north of 50th Street and east of Avenue A from R-2 to M-1.

—Maxine Bray for C.B. Bray Estate to change property north of Harvard Street and west of Clovis Road from C-3 to C-4 to allow construction of an automobile repair shop.

—Frank H. Jones, for Robert Welch and Jim Sowell to change property north of 82nd Street and west of Slide Road from C-2 to C-3 to allow construction of a 40,000-square-foot Safeway grocery store.

Department Not Told Of Agency Findings

Lubbock Fire Department officials said this morning they still had not heard from a federal agency which tested the breathing apparatus used by three city firefighters when they were killed March 25 while fighting a 34th Street structure fire.

The National Institute for Occupational Safety and Health (NIOSH), in its Morgantown, W.Va., laboratory, found defects in the safety gear worn by Kenneth Haggard, Eddie Swafford and Larry Tucker when they were fatally overcome by smoke inhalation and carbon monoxide, The Avalanche-Journal learned.

Additional tests done by the federal government researcher on idential gear indicated "at least 10 percent" of the air packs, manufactured by Scott Aviation of Lancaster, N.Y., to have the same defect — splits or punctures in the air regulator diaphragm.

Dr. John Froines, deputy director of NIOSH, told The A-J Tuesday that the findings have prompted the agency to launch a nationwide alert of the problem, and the danger resulting from it.

A NIOSH spokesman said it was the deaths of the three Lubbock firemen which sparked the agency's investigation into the Scott-Airpak equipment. However, Lubbock Deputy Fire Chief Horace Anglin said today the department had not heard from NIOSH, set up by the Department of Health, Education and Welfare.

"We felt we should be first in line to hear from them, but I guess not," Anglin said.

Fire Chief Tom Foster, upon learning indirectly of the agency's findings, said his department had no other choice but to use the same breathing gear if the situation arises.

Foster said his department would take no action until "I have the alert in my hand."

The chief said city firemen will continue to use the same equipment. "We would send the boys in (with the air packs)," he said. "That's all we've got. We don't have any other choice than to use what we've got."

Froines said NIOSH has asked Scott Aviation to stop the sale of the respirators until it is determined what causes the rupture.

Because of NIOSH's findings, Scott Aviation Tuesday stopped shipment of the equipment of the equipment, according to the firm's manager of corporate communications, Mike Kusner.

Paper Reports Panelist Opposed Pollution Suit

HOUSTON (UPI) — A Texas Air Control Board member once tried to halt a pollution suit arising from a hydrogen sulfide leak that killed nine persons saying "I fail to see how the state of Texas has been damaged," a newspaper reported today.

The Houston Post said Joe C. Bridgefarmer of Dallas made the comments in a letter April 3, 1975, to Charles Barden, then director of the air board staff that planned to sue Atlantic Richfield Co. for the Denver City oil well leak.

"I realize that they were probably in violation of some regulations of ours," the letter read, "but I fail to see how the state of Texas has been damaged."

Bridgefarmer was referring to an incident a month earlier in which hydrogen sulfide gas leaked from an experimental oil well and killed an Atlantic Richfield employee sitting in his pickup truck, a family of three living nearby and their five house guests.

Bridgefarmer's letter said the lawsuit against Atlantic Richfield "should be tabled.".

"If we start this type of action we would, before long, be issuing citations to practically every citizen of the state of Texas because in one way or another we have all violated some regulation," Bridgefarmer wrote.

The board eventually filed suit against Atlantic Richfield in the Denver City case and a judgment in July 1977 resulted in a $5,000 civil penalty.

The Texas attorney general's office currently is looking into Bridgefarmer's serving on the board while an employee of a firm that received $59 million worth of work from Texas Utilities.

Third Maxey Trial Planned

The Texas Supreme Court has denied a rehearing of applications for writs of error in the case of Homer G. Maxey, a former Lubbock millionaire now living in Dallas, against a Lubbock bank.

The effect of the ruling is that the case definitely will be retried in a Lubbock County district court.

The high court in March upheld an appellate court reversal of the $2 million judgment Maxey won against the old Citizens National Bank (CNB) and remanded the case back for trial at the district court level.

Both parties had filed applications — Maxey for the Supreme Court to award a judgment of about $5 million, including interest since the case was filed in 1966, and the bank for a judgment that no damages be awarded against it.

Maxey attorney Harold Hammett of Fort Worth said today that the case probably will be retried — for the third time — in 72nd District Court this September.

The case turns on whether or not CNB disposed of Maxey's properties for an adequate price after a Feb. 16, 1966, foreclosure.

Federal Grand Jury Ponders Charge

A delivery of cocaine charge against a Lubbock man is among several cases being considered by a federal grand jury in U.S. District Court.

Assistant U. S. Attorney David Bass said the charge was filed as the result of a lengthy investigation by Department of Public Safety and Drug Enforcement Administration agents in Texas and New Mexico.

The grand jury, which began meeting Tuesday, is expected to report sometime this week.

State Board To Hold CPA Examination

The Texas State Board of Public Accountancy will hold Certified Public Accountant examinations at the Memorial Civic Center here May 2-4.

Approximately 500 persons are scheduled to take the exam here. Board members Brooks Wilson and Charlie S. Williams will conduct the tests in Lubbock.

The uniform CPA examination is given on the same dates and hours in each state in the nation.

Tests Show Widely Used Drugs May Cause Cancer In Humans

WASHINGTON (AP) — Government scientists are reporting that tests show two widely used drugs — one to treat high blood pressure and the other a common ingredient of nonprescription sleep-aids — cause cancer in animals and may do so in humans.

Reserpine, which combats high blood pressure, is used by millions of people under a wide variety of trade names. The other drug, methypyrilene, is an active ingredient in such over-the-counter nonprescription products as Compoz, Cope, Excedrin P.M., Nervine, Nytol, Quiet World and Sominex.

National Cancer Institute scientists were presenting their findings on the two drugs today to a subcommittee of the Clearinghouse on Environmental Carcinogenesis.

The subcommittee can accept the findings and order them published, or, after hearing manufacturers' objections, return the cases for further scientific review.

Despite the tests results, the cancer institute warned Saturday against persons discontinuing use of reserpine, often sold in combination with diuretics and other anti-hypertensive drugs that reduce body fluids.

"The risk to life from untreated high blood pressure, which causes stroke, heart disease and kidney failure, far exceeds the potential risk of cancer," said Paul Van Nevel, the institute's associate director.

Sources told The Associated Press last week tests for the NCI showed that reserpine caused cancer in male and female mice and male rats.

But Donald J. Storch, a spokesman for CIBA-GEIGY Corp., the company with the largest market share of reserpine products, rejected the tests as flawed. He said government scientists' conclusions are not backed up by their own data.

The company's experts were expected to present their own interpretation of the tests to the Clearinghouse, a panel of outside experts that oversees such studies.

Almost a year ago, the Food and Drug Administration proposed to ban methypyrilene, a common antihistamine, from nonprescription sleep aids.

The Environmental Defense Fund, a public interest lobby, said today it plans to petition the FDA to use the new information from the Cancer Institute scientists to carry out a ban on methypyrilene.

Snake Venom Ineffective In Treatment Of Lou Gehrig's Disease

CHICAGO (AP) — Snake venom is ineffective in treating amyotrophic lateral sclerosis — also known as Lou Gehrig's disease, researchers have found in a Texas study.

The researchers reported their findings last week at a meeting in Chicago of the American Academy of Neurology. They studied 75 patients suffering from the disease at Houston's Methodist Hospital.

Dr. Victor M. Rivera of the Baylor College of Medicine said the detoxified venom of cobras and kraits used in the study was obtained from the Sanders Medical Research Foundation at Boca Raton, Fla., where the treatment originated.

The disease is popularly named for professional baseball player Lou Gehrig, who died of the disease in 1941.

It almost always is fatal after running a course of three to eight years, Rivera said. The cause is unknown and there is no known cure or palliative treatment for it.

It is marked by progressive weakness, wasting away and atrophy, with the patients ultimately being unable to swallow. They die usually of respiratory complications.

The patients came from 15 states and Mexico. Rivera and his associates divided them into two groups, one group received the detoxified venom and the other received a placebo, an inactive medication, for a period of three months.

After the first three months, "for humane reasons," all patients were given the detoxified veom in the event that the placebo group might benefit from it if it worked.

The researchers and patients did not know who was receiving the venom injections and who was receiving the placebo, which came in coded vials from Florida.

Sixty-four patients completed the study. The others either dropped out because they were too weak to continue or died.

Rivera said both groups continued to get progressively worse, but, ironically, those on placebo performed better in certain areas. The reason for this was not determined.

JOHN WAYNE
Hospitalized Again

Actor John Wayne Hospitalized Again

A-J News Services

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Actor John Wayne is back in UCLA Medical Center, occupying the same room he had when he underwent cancer surgery in January, hospital spokesman Al Hicks said today.

Hicks said Wayne was admitted to the hospital Tuesday night, but added he did not know what his symptoms were.

"I don't have any statement from his doctor, but I understand his son issued a statement saying it was abdominal pain," Hicks said.

It marked the third time this year Wayne has been hospitalized.

Wayne was released from Hoag Memorial Hospital in Newport Beach, Calif., only six days previously, after treatment for what was described as a mild bronchial infection.

Wayne, who will be 72 May 26, checked into UCLA Medical Center Tuesday night.

Wayne was taken to the Hoag hospital, near his oceanfront home in Newport Beach, at noon Tuesday with "abdominal discomfort and pain" and was later transferred to UCLA, his son, Michael, told a television station.

The actor "has a pocket of air that is causing some pain and doctors thought he would be more comfortable staying at UCLA," Michael Wayne said.

The younger Wayne added that doctors assured him the "Duke's" condition was "not seen as serious."

UCLA Nursing Supervisor Barbara Stone said early today Wayne's admission to the medical center was part of a "normal follow-up procedure" for surgery patients. She said, "I don't know if they plan any tests — just a follow-up physical (examination)."

Wayne was released from UCLA Feb. 10 after doctors conducting what was billed as a routine gall bladder operation Jan. 13 said they discovered cancerous tissue and removed his stomach and lymph glands.

He was hospitalized for six days in April for treatment of bronchitis blamed on a case of the flu.

One of Wayne's lungs was removed because of cancer 15 years ago and he underwent open-heart surgery last April in Boston.

Wayne has made more than 200 movies in his career, chiefly playing westerners and men of action, becoming virtually a national institution as an embodiment of straightforward American virtues.

His most recent film was "The Shootist," in which he played a gunfighter dying of cancer.

New Storm Heads For South Plains

By TOM GRIESS

Springtime Texas-style continues to be a rousing show, with powerful thunderstorms reported late Tuesday and early this morning over north central and eastern portions of the state, and a new storm system expected to sweep into the South Plains later today.

Forecasts showed a developing low pressure system this morning in western New Mexico and a series of upper level disturbances to the west that are expected to push to the Texas border by tonight, ushering in thunderstorms and a brisk southerly wind.

In the Lubbock area, a chance of thunderstorms through Thursday was predicted by the National Weather Service, with the possibility of severe storms this afternoon and tonight.

The probability of rain in the Hub City was listed at 20 percent today and tonight.

A rash of severe thunderstorm warnings and some flash flood warnings were issued throughout the night in North Central Texas and the northeastern portion of the state with downpours of up to 4 inches and hail and strong winds reported.

Street flooding was reported in parts of Dallas and Denton, with weather reports indicating up to 4 inches of rain in the northwest sections of Dallas County and also in northwestern Collin County.

Heavy rain also reportedly caused the Trinity River to overflow between portions of Wise County and Eagle Mountain Lake, stranding motorists on FM 30.

Hailstorms occurred at Arlington, Carrollton and Bartonville, but there were no reports of the extent of damage.

Similar weather of a more violent nature besieged the central U.S. Tuesday.

Heavy rains reportedly caused flash flooding in rural areas of northwestern Kansas and road and street flooding in central Nebraska and southeastern Colorado.

Accompanying the rain showers, hail chunks ranging from marble-size to baseball-size and at least one tornado battered the Kansas region. Damage from the twister reportedly was confined to a barn and water tank.

Two tornadoes also were reported in Colorado, but the NWS termed the damage minor.

A near panic was prompted in Spokane, Wash., by a first-ever tornado warning issued Tuesday for eastern Washington.

According to reports, a funnel cloud was sighted to the west of Spokane, causing the evacuation of several office buildings and an overloading of telephone circuits. The warning was canceled 2½ hours after its issuance, following unconfirmed reports that the funnel cloud may have touched down in a wheat field 35 miles west of the city.

Early this morning, most of the Texas thunderstorm activity was centered in the eastern sections, reports said. A few thunderstorms also developed in the eastern Panhandle, but the NWS said they moved into Oklahoma before dawn.

Heaviest rainfall across the state during the 24-hour period ending at 7 a.m. today was reported at Victoria, with 1.27 inches; Austin, 1.09 inches; Waco, .78 of an inch; and Fort Worth, .71 of an inch.

Dallas, despite the drenching of its northwest sections, reported only .29 of an inch.

On the South Plains only Jayton, with .35 of an inch, received more than .10 of an inch of precipitation. Lubbock reported .05 of an inch Tuesday, giving the city 5.35 inches in 1979 compared to 4.08 at the same date last year.

Temperature forecasts for the Lubbock area showed a high this afternoon in the mid-70s, a low tonight in the mid-50s and a high Thursday near 70 degrees.

Winds were expected to blow in a southerly direction at 15 to 20 mph with gusting this afternoon before shifting to a northwesterly flow tonight at 10 to 15 mph.

Winds Thursday will continue in a northwesterly direction, reaching speeds of 15 to 25 mph with gusts, according to the NWS. Wind warnings have been issued for area lakes through Thursday.

The extended South Plains forecast for Friday through Sunday shows partly cloudy skies, with temperatures remaining in the recent pattern of highs in the 70s and lows in the 50s.

Utility Measure Wins Approval

AUSTIN (UPI) — Legislation taking away cities' authority to regulate electric utility rates within their boundaries barely has won preliminary approval in the House despite warnings it would amount to "rape, pillage and plunder" by utility companies.

The bill giving the Public Utility Commission exclusive jurisdiction over all electric rate cases except those involving municipally owned electric utilities faces one additional House vote after surviving almost five hours of debate and parliamentary roadblocks Tuesday.

"I'd like to entitle this bill the electric utility rape, pillage and plunder bill of 1979," said Rep. Bob Davis, R-Irving, who argued utility companies wanted the jurisdiction over rates moved to the Public Utility Commission because cities too often were rejecting or reducing their requests for higher rates.

"The problem was too many people were getting too nosy, so they said 'let's take jurisdiction down to Austin,'" Davis said.

Rep. Jerry Donaldson, D-Gatesville, the chief sponsor of the proposal, argued the PUC already decides most rate cases on appeals, and omitting the hearings before cities could save the cities and the utility companies time and money.

"What our bill is going to do is originate the game in the ball park where it is going to end. What we're doing when we pass this bill is being honest with the people. We will eliminate one step that we all know is a sham right now," Donaldson said.

Under terms of the bill, cities could conduct public hearings on requests for rate increase requests and send the testimony to the PUC. House members also approved an amendment requiring the PUC to hold one public hearing in the service area of the utility seeking the higher rates.

But opponents of the plan argued it effectively deprives Texans of their right to appear at public hearings in their cities to oppose increases in rates, and instead would require them to travel to Austin for the rate hearings.

"If this bill passes, the utility companies will not even have to advise your communities that there is going to be a rate increase," said Rep. Bob McFarland, R-Arlington.

The House rejected an amendment by Rep. Don Cartwright, D-San Antonio, to make municipally owned utilities such as those in Austin and San Antonio subject to PUC rate-making authority.

"If it's fair for Houston, El Paso and Dallas, it's fair for Austin and San Antonio," Cartwright said.

The House also tentatively approved Tuesday a bill by Rep. Gene Green, D-Houston, requiring Texas auto owners to purchase minimum liability insurance before they are allowed to drive.

Representatives also gave preliminary approval to a bill by Rep. Gerald Geistweidt, R-Mason, abolishing a public advocate position in the Department of Water Resources.

Geistweidt argued the position was useless, and said a law requiring the public advocate to represent the public at all hearings conducted by the water agency had cast legal doubts on the validity of meetings he did not attend.

Short's Bill Advances In Senate

AUSTIN (UPI) — The Senate Education Committee voted today to give college and university regents power to expel foreign students convicted of rioting or causing an illegal disturbance.

Sen. E. L. Short, D-Tahoka, said he was concerned at the conduct of Iranian students in Beverly Hills, Calif., and the threatened demonstrations by Iranian students in Lubbock when the son of the shah of Iran was in school there.

"These continuous threats to people and property by foreign students who are in our country to acquire an education can no longer be tolerated in our society," Short said.

The bill, which now goes to the full Senate, would authorize governing boards of colleges and universities to expel any foreign student who is finally convicted of certain criminal offenses.

"Expulsion of any foreign student from our institutions would result as a matter of course following final conviction of disorderly conduct, rioting, obstructing highways or other passageways, disrupting a meeting or procession, desecretation of a venerated object or intentional and reckless destruction of property," Short said.

Short's staff said colleges and universities already have authority to expel resident students convicted of such offense but because of a quirk in the law did not have power to expel foreign students.

ate interest to go 400 miles away to fight rate cases," he said. "There's not any way cities can spend that kind of time and cities don't have that kind of staff," he said.

The legislation "penalizes" cities which did a good job on regulating rates because some cities have "not done the job adequately," Cunningham said.

Currently, cities which don't have the desire or expertise to regulate rates can turn that authority over to the PUC, he said.

"We feel very strongly it will do nothing but increase costs, not decrease costs," he said.

Electric companies supporting the legislation have claimed going directly to the PUC with rate cases will eliminate a step and some expense incurred from rate cases.

The bill, which Irving Rep. Bob Davis called "the electric utility rape, pillage and plunder act of 1979," should come up for a final House vote Thursday or Friday.

The bill's sponsor, Rep. Jerry "Nub" Donaldson of Gatesville, said it was logical to cut cities out of the rate-setting process since the commission usually makes the final decision anyway. He also said some mayors and city council members have used electric rates as a campaign issue.

Expert Stresses Drug Education

By LISA PAIKOWSKI
Avalanche-Journal Staff

In order to battle the effect on children of the "tremendous commercialization of the drug culture" in this country, school counselors and parents must confront their kids with hard-hitting, relevant information, according to a Georgia drug education expert.

Dr. Marsha Keith Schuchard told Lubbock public school counselors today that they must inform youngsters about areas of marijuana and drug research that "kids can relate to in their own experience.

"You must have a good peg to hang an argument on," said Dr. Schuchard, who has participated in several university and federal drug education programs.

She said that parents and educators have been fighting a losing battle against marijuana use by their children "because we don't know enough about it. And when we lose it on marijuana, we lose it on drinking and smoking too."

Marijuana smoking "has been such a normalized behavior for kids," she said, "and this situation has developed rapidly in the last few years, particularly in the junior highs.

"Parents and counselors need to recognize that from the sixth grade on, there is pressure to smoke pot as well as drink and smoke cigarettes," she said.

The drug educator said that a large part of the problem of fighting drug abuse by school children is that the introduction of drugs in their lives "comes in a form that's not frightening." Pushers are no longer the dirty old men in raincoats. Children can get it (drugs) from their friends and parents who are users too. They can get involved in a fun, non-frightening manner," she said.

Dr. Schuchard said that children enter the drug scene often "in complete innocence."

She displayed various advertising gimmicks and pot smoking paraphernalia sold in stores that she said glamorize the use of drugs. Included were a Christmas stocking filled with pot and hashish-smoking paraphernalia, a plastic space gun that releases smoke in large puffs and a game that she said "shows children how to be school-yard dealers."

She said that the rock music so popular with children is "increasingly oriented toward blatant drug propaganda. The message is coming all the time to the children. It becomes a fun, attractive kind of culture for kids."

She said that statistics released by the National Institute on Drug Abuse reveal that six out of 10 high school seniors have tried pot by their senior year. She added that one of nine are smoking every day.

"This means that one of nine are stoned 365 days a year," said Dr. Schuchard.

She encouraged parents and schools to "set up a cooperative relationship to work together" to fight drug abuse in schools.

"Counselors must diffuse the hostility and defensiveness of kids by letting them know we care about them," she said.

Dr. Schuchard said that findings by different research labs in the nation that may make children listen to parents and counselors include:

— Marijuana smoke causes damage to lungs. She said that it's been found that one joint "does as much damage as a pack of cigarettes." The active chemicals in marijuana are absorbed into the lung cells and subsequently lead to respiratory problems.

— Regular use of marijuana leads to the depression of some hormones, especially testosterone, which is a male hormone. She said that research labs have issued warnings to adolescent boys concerning the dangers of regular marijuana usage.

She said the possible damage to testosterone, "the strengthening and energizing hormone" can be frightening to young boys "because of the overriding sexual vanity of senior high and junior high boys."

— Dr. Schuchard said the most damage from marijuana usage may be to adolescent girls, and that labs have warned young girls about usage because of possible damage to their reproductive systems.

The reproductive system of the adolescent girl is fragile and delicate, said Dr. Schuchard.

She added that because marijuana usage has not been frequent in women and children in any society in the past, children must realize that they are types of "guinea pigs" when they smoke because the effects on them are relatively unknown.

Dr. Schuchard will give a presentation that will be open to the public free of charge at 7:30 p.m. Thursday in the Lubbock High School auditorium.

Oil Proposal Survives House Vote

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter's decision to lift federal price controls on domestic crude oil narrowly survived its first major challenge in Congress today.

By a 21-21 vote, the House Commerce Committee rejected efforts by Rep. Toby Moffett, D-Conn., and other committee liberals to block the president's move, starting June 1, to remove oil price controls gradually until they are eliminated Sept. 30, 1981.

Energy Secretary James R. Schlesinger had predicted beforehand that the administration had the votes to defeat Moffett's bill, proposed as an amendment to legislation authorizing a variety of Energy Department programs.

But Moffett said today's vote was closer than he had expected, and that his supporters would arrange other votes challenging decontrol.

Schlesinger meanwhile told Republican congressmen that Carter's call for voluntary conservation "has been a partial failure" in curbing gasoline consumption.

But Schlesinger said stiffer actions by the government to save motor fuel do not appear warranted at this time.

He also promised farm-state Republicans that the administration would "use whatever powers we have to make sure there is enough diesel fuel" so crops can be harvested.

Iowa, Nebraska and other Midwestern farm states are beset by svere shortages of diesel fuel needed for tractors and other farm equipent. Schlesinger said the administration would order diesel fuel allocated into these states if necessary to ease the shortage.

He made the comments in an hour-long, free-wheeling discussion of energy issues with GOP House members.

At the GOP meeting, Schlesinger was asked by Rep. John Anderson, R-Ill, whether Americans were responding to the president's recent appeal that they drive 15 miles less each week.

And if the voluntary program is not working, Anderson asked, "how long do we have to wait" for the administration to impose mandatory restrictions on gasoline use.

"The president's call for voluntary conservation has been a partial failure," Schlesinger said.

He said difficulty in obtaining gasoline — forced by "spontaneous weekend closings" of service stations short on supplies — appeared to be having more of an effect on U.S. driving habits than Carter's plea, although he acknowledged there was really no way to tell.

In any event, Schlesinger said, the administration has no immediate plans to use mandatory steps to save gasoline.

Meanwhile, backers of Carter's standby plan for gasoline rationing say they have a fighting chance of seeing it enacted despite the fence-straddling vote of a key House panel.

"We'll try. It will be a hard fight," said Rep. John D. Dingell, D-Mich., the plan's leading House supporter.

Dingell said the plan would come before the full House for a final vote sometime within the next few days. A Senate vote is expected Thursday.

The Senate today was taking up a related standby administration energy conservation plan — one setting mandatory thermostat controls for public buildings.

Dingell said failure of the panel to vote its support of the standby gas rationing plan makes the job of selling the measure to the full House that much harder. But he added: "I think it has a good chance."

The "no-recommendation" vote came after supporters of the plan failed for the second time within a week to win committee approval.

Summary Of Legislature's Actions

AUSTIN (UPI) — Happenings in the Texas Legislaure Tuesday:

Texas House members approved legislation requiring every driver in the state to acquire minimum liability insurance.

Under the tentatively approved version of the bill, drivers would be required to obtain minimum liability coverage or post a $25,000 bond with the Department of Public Safety before being allowed to drive.

The mandatory liability bill by Rep. Gene Green, D-Houston, won preliminary approval on a voice vote, and requires one additional House vote before being sent to the Senate.

House members voted 70-66 to take electric rate-making authority away from most Texas cities and give the Public Utility Commission sole jurisdiction to determine the rates utility companies can charge most customers in the state.

Opponents of the measure, which was debated almost five hours, contend it will result in higher electric rates and will deprive many Texas consumers of the opportunity to air their gripes before an agency which acts to set their utility rates.

But its supporters argued city rate decisions already are almost automatically appealed to the PUC, where the final decision on electric rates is made, and the legislation would remove one costly step in the rate-making process.

Rep. Jerry Donaldson, D-Gatesville, sponsored the bill which would give the PUC original jursidiction over all electric utility rates, removing from the cities any decision-making authority.

A bill to allow police officers to wiretap phones of people suspected of possessing or selling drugs, except for small amounts of marijuana, passed the Senate Jurisprudence Committee.

The bill, sponsored by Sens. Walter Mengden, R-Houston and Ed Howard, D-Texarkana, allows the state's attorney general or prosecuting attorneys to apply to a court for a permit to wiretap when there is evidence of a felony under the state's controlled substances act — with a noted exception for felony possession of marijuana.

Howard said the bill provides adequate safeguards to ensure it will not be misused by officials invading citizens' privacy, but Sen. A.R. Schwartz, D-Galveston, strongly objected to the bill and pledged to continue fighting it on the Senate floor.

A bill that would set legal standards for determining when death occurs passed the Senate Jurisprudence Committee.

The bill provides a person would be pronounced dead when there is no spontaneous breathing and heartbeat, and the condition is determined to be irreversible. If artificial life support systems are used that prevent determining if a person is breathing and has a heartbeat on his own, the person would be considered dead if he suffered an irreversible cessation of brain function.

The bill, sponsored by Sen. Ray Farabee, D-Wichita Falls, also provides that the person must be pronounced dead before artificial means of supporting heartbeat and respiration are stopped.

Legislation giving Texans limited power to overturn excessive tax increases voted by local school baords and other taxing agencies easily cleared the House, but its sponsor said it needs a boost from Lt. Gov. Bil Hobby to pass in the Senate.

Rep. Bill Clark, D-Tyler, also conceded there is little prospect voters would be able to meet the stringent requirements of the bill to call an election to overturn excessive tax increases, but indicated he was happy the House had agreed to any referendum proposal at all.

Woman Dies In Mishap

bie broken neck, when his car collided with a tractor-trailer rig about 2:40 p.m. at Clovis Road and Gary Avenue.

Randy Harris, the lone occupant of the car when it wedged under the truck, remained in critical condition today at Health Sciences Center Hospital.

The youth was traveling west on Clovis Road and the truck was eastbound on Clovis Road when the two vehicles collided.

The collision reportedly occurred when the driver of the rig, who was not hurt in the mishap, was attempting a left turn onto Gary Avenue.

In other traffic-related accidents on city streets, four persons remained in serious condition at Methodist Hospital after being injured Monday night in a head-on collision on South Loop 289.

An 85-year-old Lubbock woman was in serious condition today at Methodist Hospital with injuries she sustained Sunday in a one-car accident on Southeast Drive south of Loop 289.

Leaders Hope Trade Conflict Can Be Resolved

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter welcomed Japanese Prime Minister Masayoshi Ohira to the White House today and expressed confidence that the two nations will be able to overcome their growing dispute over Japan's trade surplus.

Ohira, opening a two-day official visit here, called the trade conflict "serious" and said he was "determined to do his utmost" to resolve it.

The two leaders spoke during a 20-minute welcoming ceremony on the White House south lawn, then went inside for private discussions.

Both underlined the importance each attaches to maintaining a strong U.S.-Japanese partnership. Carter called the American relationship with Japan "the cornerstone of the implementation of United States policy throughout Asia."

Ohira expressed hope that the two countries could join "in a closer partnership than ever before."

The two governments wanted to resolve the trade conflict last week so Carter and the 69-year-old Japanese leader could concentrate on global security and energy questions during their meetings today.

Instead, negotiations for a trade pact ended in disagreement with officials of the two countries blaming each other for the breakdown.

It was not clear how hard Carter would press Ohira on the main issue in dispute — the refusal of Japan to open its doors fully to foreign bids on government contracts worth some $7.5 billion a year.

Ohira, making his first trip abroad since becoming prime minister five months ago, said before his arrival here Monday he preferred not to discuss the issue during his visit.

In their unofficial comments, American and Japanese officials seem to agree that the wisest course would be for the two countries to settle their differences amicably in order not to jeopardize their overall relationship.

For example, a State Department official who asked not to be named said Tuesday the administration will oppose any proposal in Congress to erect barriers to Japanese imports. This would only lead to counter-measures by Japan, he said.

The Carter administration has said repeatedly it regards friendship with Japan as an essential ingredient for peace and stability in Asia. Japan, in turn, is heavily dependent on the United States as an export market and for military support.

But Carter is under pressure from Congress to persuade Japan to make the necessary concessions for achieving a more balanced trade relationship. Japan's trade surplus with the U.S. for the year ending March 31 totaled $12 billion, although Japanese sources say the gap has been narrowed substantially over the past six months.

American officials reply that any narrowing of the gap is largely attributable to recent increases in the price of U.S. farm exports to Japan. There is no assurance these prices won't drop over the long term, the officials say.

Japanese officials have maintained, in effect, that the United States has not negotiated in good faith. Instead of trying to narrow differences through mutual concessions, the United States adopted a take-it-or-leave attitude in the talks, they say.

Japan offered last week to permit foreign bidding on almost $7 billion of the $7.5 billion worth of government procurement contracts. Japanese officials said Japan believed the United States would see this as a generous offer.

But Ambassador Robert Strauss, Carter's trade envoy, rejected the proposal as insufficient. The battle lines were drawn when Ohira said there would be "no more compromises."

At issue is about $600 million worth of highly sophisticated equipment purchased annually by Nippon Telephone and Telegraph. It is the type of equipment for which U.S. suppliers would be competitive, American trade experts said.

Sentiment in the Congress following the breakdown in the talks appears to be running high against Japan. Senate Majority Leader Robert Byrd told reporters last Saturday he believes the Japanese restrictions are "most unfair."

And Rep. Charles Vanik, D-Ohio, head of a House Trade subcommittee, said Monday the consensus of the panel is that the United States should retaliate by excluding Japanese producers from competing for some $10 billion in annual U.S. government purchases.

Ohira will meet with House and Senate leaders Thursday, hoping to forestall the adoption of protectionist measures while the two countries continue their negotiations.

Fed Chief Wants To Speed Up Rate Of Business Write-Offs

WASHINGTON (AP) — Federal Reserve Board Chairman G. William Miller is calling the plays for a pet economic policy he hopes will help beat inflation by giving businesses more incentive to raise capital.

Miller wants the government to speed up the rate at which businesses write off capital expenditures "to give them every incentive to modernize their facilities and expand their (production) capacity."

The modernization, he said Tuesday night, would lead ultimately to more products made more efficiently. And, as the theory goes, that would temper rapid price increases.

Miller suggested that Congress begin studying such a plan now "so that in 1980 we can put in place this powerful policy weapon of investment to bring us back in the next growth pattern."

Not only did Miller explain his plan to a dinner gathering of the Advertising Council. He illustrated it, ad-man fashion.

At the close of the speech, the usually reserved central banker laughingly presented his hosts with red and yellow footballs, each inscribed with the numbers 1, 5 and 10.

"You now have the ball," he told them. "I hope you will run with it." The council sponsors public service ads on topics from Savings Bonds to forest fires.

Miller explained that the numbers on the footballs were meant to illustrate his proposal. The policy he is pushing would allow businesses to write off their investments for government-mandated environmental, safety and health expenses in one year; for equipment and processing machinery in five years; and for structures and other permanent facilities in 10 years.

The policy, he said, would compliment Carter administration efforts to stem inflation, which has been at an annual rate above 10 percent so far this year.

In a speech earlier in the day, Miller warned that no one should be surprised if the Federal Reserve pushed interst rates up further to slow inflation.

He did not, however, confirm market experts' analyses that the Fed, which does not reveal its actions until a month after they are taken, had acted Friday to raise rates. Higher rates discourage borrowing and takes pressure off the prices of business and consumer goods.

In other economic developments Tuesday:

—Several government indicators reflected continued strong business activity. The Commerce Department said new construction rose 3 percent in March to an annual rate of $211.6 billion and that new orders placed with the nation's factories rose 1.8 percent in March to $147.5 billion. It also reported that shipments of manufactured products showed a record increase durig the month, .8 percent.

—A House banking subcommittee endorsed an increase in Federal Housing Administration loan limits for single-family dwellings from $60,000 to $65,500.

—Spokesmen for four consumer groups told a Capitol rally that they would fight legislation aimed at raising the limits on raw sugar prices. If approved, higher sugar prices likely will start appearing in supermarkets later this year.

—Agriculture Secretary Bob Bergland told the House Small Business Committee competition within the meatpacking industry has decreased sharply since 1970 and that the trend is likely to continue.

—Rep. Frank Annunzio, D-Ill., chairman of a House Banking subcommittee on consumers, recommended that Americans destroy the plastic cards they have for the deposit and withdrawal of money from electronic banking machines.

Begin Criticizes United States For Granting Visa Extension

JERUSALEM (AP) — Prime Minister Menachem Begin blasted the United States today for granting a visa to a PLO guerrilla and said "if one day the Americans open negotiations with that organization of murderers, it will be a black day for free mankind."

He also said in an independence day broadcast he was optimistic about reaching agreement with Egypt on Palestinian autonomy in occupied Arab territory, but that Israel will insist on the right of continued Jewish settlement.

As he spoke, Israeli nationalists marched through the occupied West Bank of the Jordan River to protest government reluctance to speed up settlement activity, and Saudi Arabia and Yasser Arafat's Palestine Liberation Organization lashed out at Egyptian President Anwar Sadat.

Begin, in a wide-ranging 55-minute interview on Israel Radio, said he sent a sharp protest note to Secretary of State Cyrus Vance demanding prior consultation with Israel before Washington makes any contact with officials of the PLO.

The note was prompted by the granting of a visa to Shafik el-Hout, head of the PLO's Beirut office, for a speaking tour on U.S. college campuses. Begin did not say when the note was sent, and it was not clear if it influenced the U.S. decision two weeks ago to deny el-Hout an extension of his visa.

"I asked the secretary to take note that this shocks public opinion in Israel, all our people," Begin said. "In the future I asked him to consult us before such things are done. That is the duty of the United States."

Referring to the issue of Palestinian autonomy, Begin said outstanding problems, presumably including the settlement issue, could be resolved. "I believe we will reach an understanding with Egypt. Why should we assume there will be no agreement?"

He admitted, however, the negotiations would be "serious, perhaps even difficult."

Asked the general direction of his position on autonomy, Begin said: no border dividing any part of the West Bank from Israel, full autonomy for the Palestinians, security for Israelis, settlement, and that "the Jews and Arabs of Eretz Israel will live together in peace, prosperity and justice ...

"It is completely obvious that we have the right to settle in Eretz Israel." Eretz Israel is the Hebrew term referrring to the mandatory borders of Palestine that include the West Bank.

Meanwhile, the Saudi radio blasted Sadat, calling him a "liar even about the dead," and the PLO pledged to undermine Sadat's autonomy negotiations with the United States and Israel for the Palestinian-populated West Bank and Gaza Strip.

Saudi Arabia and the PLO were reacting to Sadat's May Day speech in which he accused the world's largest oil-exporting nation of "paying off" other Arab countries to break diplomatic relations with Egypt.

Sadat charged that Saudi leaders departed from the traditional policy of having a "special relationship" with Egypt that was charted by the late King Faisal.

Sadat said Faisal, who was assassinated in 1975, advised the Egyptian leader before the 1973 Middle East war not to trust Syrian President Hafez Assad.

"Sadat is a liar," the Saudi radio said today. "He even lies about the dead."

The broadcast accused Sadat of trying to drive a wedge between Saudi Arabia and Syria, Israel's most militant Arab neighbor.

Syria, Egypt's main Arab ally in the 1973 war bankrolled by Faisal, heads the hardline Arab front that opposes Sadat's peace treaty with Israel.

Solon's Aide Asked About Transaction

WASHINGTON (AP) — After having had a night to refresh her memory, Sen. Herman Talmadge's personal secretary is trying to recall for the Senate Ethics Committee why $80,000 was transferred from the senator's office account to his personal account.

Rita Hubler, who handled financial affairs for the Georgia Democrat in 1975, told the committee Tuesday she could not remember the transaction and could not give any details about it.

She also was unable to remember several other transactions in which the committee expressed an interest.

The committee has not alleged that the 1975 transfer was improper. Questions about the transfer came out Tuesday only during a discussion about general accounting practices in Talmadge's office.

But the panel appeared interested in why Mrs. Hubler could not remember the transaction.

"That's a lot of money," remarked Sen. Quentin Burdick, D-N.D. "There should be some association with that."

When asked if the committee was surprised at Mrs. Hubler's memory, Committee Chairman Adlai Stevenson, D-Ill., replied "I'd be surprised if any of us wouldn't be suprised."

Sen. Mark O. Hatfield, R-Ore., asked the witness at one point if she had been instructed not to review key documents covering the senator's financial affairs. She replied that she had not been so instructed and told the committee "I wish I could be more helpful ... but I really can't remember."

The $80,000 was speaking fees Talmadge received for appearances before various groups, according to Carl Eardley, the committee's special counsel. The fees would be considered a senator's personal funds.

Mrs. Hubler testified that money from a variety of sources often was placed in the office account and personal funds occasionally were pulled out and transferred to Talmadge's personal account.

South Africa Accepts Labor Suggestions

CAPE TOWN, South Africa (AP) — The white minority government today accepted "in principle" far-ranging recommendations that would dismantle three decades of job discrimination because of race.

The plan to scrap South Africa's discriminatory labor laws is the first major official attack on a cornerstone of apartheid.

Parliament was almost certain to go along with the government decision, since the ruling National Party controls 135 of the legislative body's 165 seats.

The recommendations were contained in a 60-page report made public Tuesday after two years of study by the 14-member Wiehahn Commission, headed by Nic Wiehahn, a white South African professor and labor expert.

Labor Minister Fanie Botha said the administration approved the concept of "free association," which would allow black unions to participate for the first time ever in collective bargaining in South Africa.

He said the government also accepted, among other proposals submitted by the commission, an end to the system of reserving skilled jobs for whites only.

Bowing to the economic realities of a manpower shortage, the government-appointed commission headed by labor expert Wiehahn urged that Parliament give black workers equal pay for equal work, the right to join unions and training for skilled jobs previously held by whites only.

A spokesman for the white business community, the executive director of the Associated Chambers of Commerce, praised the report for its "positive picture," and a black labor leader said it was a "very great victory for our struggle."

But a spokesman for the white workers, Attie Niuwoudt of the Confederation of Labor, warned the Minister of Labor "to be very careful before he decides to take the rights away from our white labor organizations in South Africa." Nieuwodt was a dissenting member of the 14-man commission.

The recommendations said nothing about giving South Africa's 19 million blacks equal political rights with the 4.4 million whites, including citizenship and the vote. But if put into law by Parliament, they would have far-reaching implications for the future. Organized black labor, obtaining a form of political and economic power through unions, could become the country's most potent force for change in the apartheid system of racial segregation.

Changes in petty apartheid, the rules and regulation that separate blacks and whites in day-to-day living, have been occurring throughout South Africa over the past few years.

Black and whites sometimes can be found sitting side by side in restaurants, in theaters and on buses, swimming at the same beaches, attending schools and participating in sports together.

Chinese Fear Vietnam Will Form Federation

PEKING (AP) — The Chinese government fears Vietnam will soon form an Indochina federation with Laos and the Cambodian government it installed four months ago, and "war will spread to other neighboring countries," Senior Vice Premier Deng Xiaoping told U.N. Secretary General Kurt Waldheim.

Waldheim told reporters after meetings Tuesday with Deng and Premier Hua Guofeng that Deng "said he did not believe the statements of Vietnam that it does not have aggressive future designs on its neighbors."

The Chinese leaders "explained that what happened in Indochina and Cambodia was not seen as an isolated development but in a worldwide context," Waldheim continued.

"It goes back to an enormous crisis in confidence," he said. "The Chinese are complaining bitterly about Vietnam turning against them after all the Chinese help in recent years."

The U.N. chief said Deng charged that "the Vietnamese are preparing for massive attacks" in the Chinese-Vietnamese border area where the two neighboring communist nations fought a month-long border war in February and March.

"If Vietnam resumes its provocative acts, we reserve the right to act again," Deng declared, according to Waldheim. But other sources said Deng used tougher language, saying the Chinese "reserve the right to teach the Vietnamese another lesson."

Chinese forces invaded Vietnam in mid-February after months of attacks along the border and after the Vietnamese invasion of Cambodia overthrew the pro-Chinese government of Premier Pol Pot and installed a pro-Vietnamese government headed by Heng Samrin.

The Chinese withdrew after extensive damage to towns, roads and railways in the border area. The two governments are now negotiatng in Hanoi to restore normal relations but are deadlocked over a Chinese demand that Vietnam withdraw all its forces from Cambodia.

Dallas Firm Decides To Make Loans

DALLAS (AP) — One of the large Dallas mortgage firms that announced earlier this week it would not make any more VA or FHA home loans has changed its mind.

The Murray Financial Corp. said Tuesday that after studying the situation it has decided it can charge certain closing fees at a 10 percent interest rate and still have the loans accepted by the Federal National Mortgage Association, or Fannie Mae.

Murray and the Lomas & Nettleton Financial Corp. annnounced they would stop accepting the VA and FHA loans after Fannie Mae said it would not take any 10 percent loans if additional fees were charged to the seller.

Fannie Mae is a quasi-governmental corporation that buys mortgages from the lending institutions so they, in turn, have more money to make more loans.

The problem arises from Texas' usury law which does not permit loans greater than 10 percent. Fannie Mae, fearing it might be breaking the law, issued new guidelines last week that limits the fees charged for processing a loan.

Ross Anderson, senior vice president of Murray Financial Corp. said his firm has decided it can still charge the seller "points," which is a loan-handling fee, and still sell the loan to Fannie Mae.

"We researched it, and we're convinced that Fannie Mae will buy the 10 percent loans if we do certain things," Anderson said. "We are not able to charge all the closing costs to the buyer; it has to be picked up by the seller."

Lomas & Nettleton still remain out of the VA and FHA market, and its chairman, Jess Hay, said his firm was hoping a request would be made the Attorney General Mark White to clarify the legality of seller points on 10 percent loans.

A White aide in Austin said no request has been made yet.

Along with most mortgage bankers, Lomas & Nettleton and Murray, the third largest mortgage bank in Dallas, have stopped financing conventional loans in Texas.

Many bankers are hoping Gov. Bill Clements will sign a bill raising the interest ceiling to 12 percent. Clements, at first opposed to the measure, now says he is reconsidering and may announce a decision this week.

Company To Publish Esquire Monthly

NEW YORK (AP) — The Tennessee company that acquired Esquire has decided to return the 45-year-old magazine to monthly publication starting this summer and raise the single-copy newsstand price.

But officials of 13-30 Corp. of Knoxville said at a news conference Monday that the magazine will continue as "the classic magazine for men."

An agreement to purchase more than two-thirds of equity in Esquire from Associated Newspapers Ltd., the British conglomerate that has published Esquire since 1977, was completed here Saturday after five months of negotiation.

Clay Felker, Esquire's editor and publisher since 1977, will depart, as will art director Milton Glaser, according to 13-30 owners Christopher Whittle and Phillip Moffit.

The 13-30 firm, a publisher of college and high school magazines, has acquired more than two-thirds interest in Esquire, with the remainder retained by Associated, according to Whittle and Moffit.

A 50 pecent interest in the Tennessee company is held by The Bonnie Magazine Grop, a Sweden-based conglomerate.

But Whittle and Moffitt, who control the other 50 percent and will each hold dual titles at Esquire, said Bonnier was "not putting up any money whatsoever."

Whittle will become chairman and publisher, and Moffitt president snd editor of the publication, which has a 650,000 circulation.

"Esquire has a very special place in the hearts of the American public," said Moffitt. "We want to continue the tradition of literary excellence. Chris and I look at ourselves as the caretakers of this institution ... It's like this sacred relic."

Esquire's new owners declared it was "editorially in good shape" and its regular departments and columnists would remain.

Felker switched Esquire from a monthly to a bi-weekly.

Volunteers Lend To Project Days

By LISA PAIKOWSKI
Avalanche-Journal Staff

Their works may never be featured in the Metropolitan Museum of Art, but a team of creative volunteers in one city elementary school has found enthusiastic patrons in the teachers and students they serve.

These community volunteers participate in monthly Special Projects Day sessions at Parsons Elementary School where they assist teachers and counselors in completing arts and crafts projects for use in the classrooms.

The volunteers, made up mostly of parents of school-age children, drop in anytime during the loosely structured 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. workshop once a month to tackle the ample supply of projects that have been collected for the day's work.

Since November, when the special day was initiated, some six to eight volunteers per session have completed more than 90 projects. Assistants — some with formal art training and some without — perform tasks from the simplest cutting and pasting to the more difficult drawing.

According to Beverly Moreland, coordinator of the Parsons School Volunteer Program, the demand for the artistic assistants by school personnel will probably necessitate two workshops each month during the next school year.

The projects day is just one of the services of Lubbock's School Volunteer Program which serves 13 of the city's 38 elementary schools. The program has established eight job categories in which any citizen may aid a teachers who has requested assistance.

About 300 volunteers currently assist teachers as clerical, arts and crafts, classroom, library and supervision assistants; as language arts, reading and mathematics tutors; and as special course instructors.

The Special Projects Day, which is unique to Parsons, was initiated as an alternative to having arts and crafts assistants for various teachers. According to Mrs. Moreland, the supply of volunteers willing to work specific hours as arts and crafts aides did not meet the demand at the school and so a more flexible program was established in that area.

The projects day allows anyone who cannot volunteer on a regular basis to drop in on the session at their convenience. The special day has especially been a boon to working parents who can come in when their schedule permits. Many of the volunteers even give up all or part of their off days to assist in the projects.

Sally Ramirez is one such career parent who works every morning in a daycare center and then shifts her attention to the projects day in the afternoon. She is, in fact, coordinator of the special day and is responsible for gathering the games, posters and teaching aids to be cut, pasted, drawn and laminated.

Yet Mrs. Ramirez insists she has plenty of time to get everything done in the different areas of her life. "It doesn't bother me because I enjoy it," she said. "I was also new here last year and it was a good way to get involved."

An added attraction of the flexible program for Mrs. Ramirez and other parents is that they can bring along their pres-

TEACHERS' PET — Parsons Elementary School volunteer Dick Kilroy shows Superintendent Ed Irons one of the 11 types of wooden trucks he makes for the school's teachers. Woodworking Keeps Kilroy Busy

Last year, because of simple boredom and an ad in a school newspaper, Dick Kilroy awakened a dormant talent that has kept him busy ever since.

The advertisement was for school volunteers and Kilroy turned to woodworking to answer that request.

He is now a member of the School Volunteer Program at Parsons Elementary School whose teachers keep him constantly busy with orders for custom-made wooden toys and puzzles.

The popularity of his simple clean designs has grown through word of mouth mostly, and he currently fills orders for several city daycare centers as well.

Kilroy's newfound occupation was born of boredom because of his inability to pursue a regular daily job. His work on a rescue squad in Potsdam, N.Y., where he "lifted too many stretchers," resulted in total disability from an injured back.

After moving to Lubbock last summer, he noticed an advertisement for community volunteers in the public schools, and dug out his woodworking tools to create samples he would later show to the teachers at Parsons. The orders for his work have never stopped since.

Kilroy said that other than shop class in school, he has never had formal woodworking training. He is from a family of carpenters, but his education was in accounting. In fact, he has pursued several occupations throughout his life.

The popular woodworker makes 11 different types of wooden trucks and a number of wooden puzzles. He either designs his creations himself or copies them from patterns in magazines. His wife Carol adds a finishing touch to some of the puzzles with her painting talents.

Although the cost of his toys in time alone might normally be high — he can work only three to four hours at a time due to his disability — Kilroy charges the schools only the expense of his supplies.

But even the cost of the furniture and toys he sells at retail are reasonable. They range from $5 for most of his trucks to $2.50 for his puzzles.

But the greater part of his time he devotes to the schools, and for a very simple reason — he enjoys it.

Symposium May Offer Answers

Lubbock area businessmen looking for ways to minimize their chances of being victimized by white-collar crime may get some answers if they attend the Business Crimes Symposium Thursday in the Lubbock Memorial Civic Center.

The event, which will be held in separate morning and afternoon sessions, coincides with the kickoff this week of Operation Identification, a countywide effort planned by the Lubbock County Crime Prevention Council to reduce home burglaries.

The symposium is being co-sponsored by the LCCPC, the Better Business Bureau of the South Plains, the Chamber of Commerce and the Retail Merchants Association.

The morning session is scheduled from 9 a.m. to 1 p.m. and the afternoon session from 1:30 p.m. to 5:30 p.m. Tickets are $10 for each session.

Interested persons may obtain tickets today by calling the Better Business Bureau at 763-0459 or by stopping by the office at 1015 15th St.

Mal Cleland, BBB director and president of the LCCPC, said there will be plenty of tickets available at the door.

Frank Abagnale Jr., a former con artist and master forger who passed $2.5 million in bad checks in six countries before being caught, will be the guest speaker.

Abagnale now assists vulnerable businesses, both big and small, in halting white-collar crime.

A bad checks seminar featuring experts from the Lubbock County Criminal District Attorney's office will follow Abagnale's presentation.

Seminars on counterfeit and forgeries, shoplifting, deceptive trade practices, internal security, employee theft and Operation Identification will round out the day's activities.

Hal Hensley, chief administrator for the District Attorney's office, said he is still waiting for 10,000 brochures he ordered from the Texas Crime Prevention Institute in San Marcos before volunteers can begin distributing materials in neighborhoods as part of Operation Identification.

Meanwhile, Mayor Dirk West today formally declared May as Crime Prevention Month.

Dear Charlie:

You are right. Duplicate bridge certainly helps you improve your declarer play, for you must struggle for every trick. I played this hand at the annual Marbella festival.

The auction was normal. Over my no trump opening partner probed for a 4-4 major fit, then raised me to game when I showed a spade suit.

West led a low club, and I had to make a decision at trick one. Since West was leading into the strong hand, I thought it was unlikely that he was leading away from the king, especially since there was nothing in the auction to suggest than an attacking lead was called for. So I put in the ten and captured East's king with the ace.

I could now afford a trump safety play (and I might have done so at rubber bridge), but the chance of a 4-0 trump break was slight, whereas there was a 40 percent chance that they would split 2-2. So I cashed the ace and king of trumps, on the second of which East discarded a low heart. The rest was easy.

I cashed the queen of clubs, entered my hand with the ace of hearts and ruffed a club. Now I simply ran the hearts. Since it would not have helped West to ruff, he discarded two diamonds and a club. But he was simply postponing the inevitable.

I discarded a diamond on the fourth heart, then exited with a trump. West won, but he was in an unenviable position. If he led a club, I would ruff in one hand while discarding my diamond loser from the other. So West was forced to lead a diamond away from his king. Luckily, I had no guess in this suit. I called for dummy's queen, and when that held, I made two overtricks. That was good enough for almost all of the points on the board.

Note that I did nothing brilliant — all I had to do to achieve an excellent result was to make the right play at trick one.

As ever
Omar

At Wit's End...

By ERMA BOMBECK

I really get ticked off at all this flap over the '40s being nostalgic.

How can they be nostalgic when I remember them?

As for the fashions of the '40s coming back, if I were asked to pick an era of clothes to bring back, the '40s would be my LAST choice.

We all dressed like we were going to a war. Our jackets looked like they hung from curtain rods, our skirts were pencil slim, and our shoes reflected our shortage of leather and good sense. Not necessarily in that order.

If there is anything I must protest, it is the resurrection of the hat. Some fashions are better off left buried. They make as much sense as Bette Midler when she appeared at an Emmy ceremony wearing a 45 r.p.m. tacked to the side of her head.

For those of you who have never endured a Millinery age, allow me to fill you in.

The choice of hats of the '40s narrowed down to (a) pillbox, (b) pillbox with a veil. The (a) pillbox defied gravity and was attached to the back of your head by a large hatpin which hooked into your scalp. Any hair left under it turned brown and died.

The hat matched your gloves, purse and shoes. If it didn't your mother made you go back into the house and change.

The (b) pillbox with a veil set yet another tone. If you had good skin, the veil covered it. If you had a bad skin, the veil called attention to it.

The veil was not conducive to sneezing, smiling, scratching, yawning, talking, kissing or picking something out of your teeth with your tongue. The least movement set it off. Once when I took a deep breath of boredom, I nearly inhaled my hat.

The hat is not in the interests of most women. Most of us need all the help from hair we can get. I only remember one instance when I was wearing my pillbox that I got a whistle from anyone. A tall, dark Marine whistled at me and asked me to store his bag. He thought I was a bellhop.

That's really all I can remember about the '40s. After all, I was only a toddler at the time.

DEAR ABBY

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I live in a very respectable neighborhood and, although our children are still toddlers, we are deeply concerned about the rise of juvenile delinquency among youngsters from "better" homes.

All around us, minors — some as young as 10 — have been convicted of violent crimes. They include armed robbery, beating up the elderly and handicapped, knifing and even rape.

Abby, these kids have never known hunger, poverty or discrimination. They come from respectable homes and have gone to the best schools. Yet more and more children from the so-called privileged class are turning to crime and violence.

Why?

Concerned

Dear Concerned: Basically, it's lack of discipline. (Discipline, meaning "to teach" — not necessarily "to punish.")

For a better understanding of this growing social problem, get the May issue of PARENTS' magaazine and read "Bad Kids," by Lori N. Andrews, a Chicago lawyer. It will open your eyes!

She says, "Unfortunately, only after a child has committed a violent crime are the roots of his behavior explored. A peek inside the middle-class home will reveal a child who lives with two adults — but has no real parents."

DEAR ABBY: I have a relative who loves to play gin rummy. When HE wins he says it's 90 percent skill and 10 percent luck. When the other fellow wins he says it's 90 percent luck and 10 percent skill.

When he loses he always wants to play one more hand-double or nothing. I get uptight and usually lose that hand. How can I get out of going along with his double-or-nothing challenge without looking like a poor sport?

Hy

Dear Hy: Tell him you can't afford to play for such high stakes.

DEAR ABBY: I have a 14-month-old nephew whose feet turn outward when he walks. So severely, in fact, that the child walks sideways. My sister knows it and keeps talking about asking her pediatrician to put the child in corrective shoes. But that's as far as it goes.

I've mentioned this to her several times. I don't want to bring it up again for fear she'll think I'm putting my nose where it doesn't belong.

Please don't say that if my sister wants her child to grow up with turned-out feet, it's her business, because it isn't my sister who will have to stumble through life on deformed feet. I see her pediatrician quite often. Would it be unethical of me to say something to him about it?

Concerned

Dear Concerned: You may not have all the facts, but on the chance that your sister is either unable or unwilling to deal with this problem, mention it to the doctor.

The Slim Gourmet

By Barbara Gibbons

Broiled fish and chicken are standard fare for figure-conscious cooks. If you'd like to add a new dimension to these low-calorie foods, try cooking them in the Portuguese manner ... under the broiler or over the coals with a savory baste that's scented with garlic and bay leaves. In our translations from the Portuguese we've omitted the large amounts of olive oil usually called for. (At 1,909 calories a cupful, olive oil outweighs the calories in fish or chicken!)

In Portuguese restaurants, foods are frequently barbecued over a bed of charcoal, adding a delightful smoky flavor. So, you might like to try these recipes on your hibachi or outdoor grill. For indoor cooking under the broiler, try adding a few drops of liquid smoke seasoning to the marinade (or use smoke-flavored salt).

PORTUGUESE MARINATED FISH STEAKS

1 lb. cod (or other fish steaks), fresh or frozen
¼ cup white vinegar
½ cup dry white wine
1 or 2 cloves garlic, minced
pinch of red cayenne pepper (or a dash of Tabasco)
optional: pinch of ground cumin
optional: few drops liquid smoke seasoning
2 tsps. olive oil
salt and pepper to taste

Spread the mixed pickling spices on the bottom of a shallow non-metallic plate and arrange the fresh or frozen fish steaks on top of the spices in a single layer. Combine the vinegar, wine, garlic, red pepper, cumin and smoke seasoning, if desired; pour over the fish. Cover and allow the fish to defrost in the marinade several hours, turning the fish occasionally. If fish is fresh, cover and marinate in the refrigerator an hour. Drain fish and spread lightly with olive oil. Broil or barbecue, turning once, just until fish flakes easily. Salt and pepper to taste. Makes four servings, 115 calories each.

PORTUGUESE CHICKEN PIRI-PIRI

1 or 2 cloves garlic, minced
juice of 2 lemons
¼ cup olive juice (from a jar of olives)
3 or 4 bay leaves, broken up pinch of red cayenne pepper or dash of red pepper sauce optional: few drops liquid smoke seasoning
salt and pepper to taste
paprika
optional: lemon slices and sliced green olives

Put chicken pieces in a plastic bag with garlic, lemon and olive juice, bay leaves, cayenne and smoke seasoning, if desired. Shake bag to mix well. Refrigerate several hours. Shake the bag occasionally to distribute seasonings evenly. Remove chicken from bag and sprinkle with salt, pepper and paprika. Broil or barbecue about 20 to 25 minutes on each side, until cooked through. (Garnish with fresh lemon and sliced olives, if desired.) Makes four servings, about 185 calories each.

PORTUGUESE PORK

4 or 5 bay leaves, broken up
½ cup port wine
¼ cup cider vinegar
1 or 2 cloves garlic, minced
optional: pinch of ground cumin
optional: few drops liquid smoke seasoning

Spread the broken-up bay leaves in a shallow dish. Trim fringe fat from pork. Cut pork in serving pieces and arrange on top of the bay leaves.

Combine remaining ingredients and pour over pork. Cover and refrigerate several hours. Turn occasionally. Remove pork from the marinade and broil or barbecue until cooked through. Turn frequently and baste occasionally with reserved marinade. Makes four servings, 180 calories each.

DR. LAMB

Find Cause Of Heartburn

By LAWRENCE E. LAMB, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB — I seem to have the same trouble as the man I heard you talking to Tab Hunter about on your TV show. It began when I was first pregnant. I seemed to notice having heartburn and I felt as though I was ruptured around my diaphragm where it joins the stomach.

The only way I could get some relief was to straighten my arms up and stretch. Then something would go back in place, but I still get lots of heartburn. Sometimes I'm afraid to eat. I feel as if there is a hole and it's very disturbing. I'd like to learn more about this. Why is a hiatal hernia operation so risky? I am 64 years old and can't seem to lose weight. I'm 167 pounds and am 5 feet 3 inches tall. Can you help me?

DEAR READER — It's important to know why you have heartburn before you start treating it. This pain or burning in the pit of the stomach or just under the breast bone can be associated with irritation of the lower part of the esophagus, usually from the acid digestive juices leaking out of the stomach into the lower esophagus.

The leak occurs because of a faulty closure mechanism where the esophagus and stomach join. This can be associated with a hiatal hernia. Such hernias do commonly occur in women during pregnancy. The increased pressure inside the abdomen forces the stomach through the normal hole in the diaphragm. The hole is stretched.

As a result, part of the stomach that joins the esophagus where it comes through the diaphragm may slide through the enlarged hole or herniate.

It follows that pressure inside the abdomen is a bad thing for anyone who has a hiatal hernia. That pressure can be caused from the accumulation of fat inside the abdomen. Because of your weight problem this could well be a contributing factor to your recurrent heartburn.

Also you don't want to wear anything tight or constricting around the abdomen. This outside pressure will squeeze part of the stomach and tend to push it through any enlarged hole in the diaphragm.

I am sending you The Health Letter number 4-8, Hiatal Hernia, Esophageal Reflux. Other readers who want this issue can send 50 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it. Send your request to me in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, N.Y. 10019. It will give you more specific information on things you can do to help control such problems.

I'd like to say again that you'll need to know for sure that you do have a hiatal hernia before you start treating yourself. That means you should see your doctor and have a medical examination.

To give you some help with your weight control program. I am also sending you The Health Letter number 4-7, Weight Losing Diet. (Other readers can order it for 50 cents, from the above address.)

There are two problems with an operation for hiatal hernia. This first is that they don't always relieve the symptoms. Correcting the hernia doesn't necessarily mean what you correct the leaky valve problem. In fact, a person can have the reflux into the lower esophagus without having a hiatal hernia at all.

The other problem is the risk of a major operation. How big a risk that is often depends on the overall medical status of the individual.

Old Age May Be Relatively New To Genes, Researcher Believes

Science Today

By ROBERT MUSEL

LONDON (UPI) — Somewhere along the line, in obedience to the dictates of natural selection, our genes traded the possibility of eternal youth for cheaper, disposable bodies.

And that, says biometrician Tom Kirkwood of the National Institute for Biological Standards and Control is why the extreme limit of human life is only about 110 years.

Kirkwood evolved his theory after considering why our genes, which have been working to improve the human body for millions of years, should have been unable to devise a better way of ending life than the generalized process of aging and disintegration that we call senescence.

As he explained it in the magazine New Scientist, it is possible that one reason for the "botched job" that is death may be that very old age is a comparatively new phenomenon to our genes since over the eons the heavy mortality of life in the wild would have permitted few to live beyond the reproductive era — the so-called normal lifespan.

Natural selection cannot operate on only a few samples of a race and events happening after the normal life span would be so infrequent in a population that did not live to senescence as to be beyond its influence, Kirkwood said. But, he added, this does not explain why we all age in a similar way, why there is the 110 year limit on life and why after the almost miraculous feat of creating a formed body from a mass of dividing cells, the body should be unable to perform the much simpler task of maintaining it.

There have been a number of elegant theories to explain this but Kirkwood puts it in blunter terms.

"Could it be that the answer to our problem is that their (the genes) interests and yours do not exactly coincide? I believe so. In it lies the true explanation of senescence."

Kirkwood discards the Weismann Theory that there is a "death mechanism" that terminates life at a more or less fixed age. If this were true, he said, natural selection would have found individuals who were immune and hence immortal.

But the starting point of his own theory is another suggestion by August Weismann, a 19th century evolutionist, which makes a distinction between germ cells and somatic cells in multi-celled organisms.

Soma cells control the body's growth and chemistry but the transmission of genetic information is through the germ line. All cells contain within themselves the potential for their own undoing by committing an increasing number of errors as they divide. This leads ultimately to what is known as "the error catastrophe" — death.

Laboratory experiments have shown that it would be costly to the body in time and resources to reduce the risk of error catastrophe. It might be worth it in germ cells because of the overriding need to pass on accurately the genetic message, but as far as the somatic cells are concerned — and they are the vast majority — all that is needed is to keep the body alive long enough to reproduce effectively.

"Whether we can do anything in the future to bring about increased longevity or whether it will happen of its own accord is debatable," Kirkwood said. "The fundamental answer to the perennial question of why we grow old may simply be that to do otherwise, to stay forever young, would require us to invest resources in somatic maintenance that from our genes' selfish point of view are better spent on reproduction."

Some 200,000 foreign students are enrolled in American colleges and universities.

LT. GEN. EDWARD MEYER

Subcommittee Probes Printing Office

WASHINGTON (UPI) — While the value of the American dollar has been going down in recent years, the cost of printing it has more than doubled.

The Senate Permanent Subcommittee on Investigations began a second day of hearings today, tying the rising costs in the Bureau of Engraving and Printing to alleged mismanagement and conflict of interest involving its former director, James A. Conlon.

Conlon, who headed the bureau from 1967 until mid-1977, attended the day-long hearing Tuesday but declined to comment. He was to testify today.

Since 1971 the cost of printing currency has risen from $7.05 per thousand bills to $18.80.

Treasury Undersecretary Bette Anderson testified today that Conlon and his associates of 30 years rose through the production ranks with little management expertise, and ran the agency virtually as a private fiefdom.

She backed up allegations made by subcommittee staff members Tuesday that rising costs were caused in part by questionable contracts awarded to the American Bank Note Co., the world's largest supplier of currency and the machines to make it.

Conlon resigned from the bureau after 10 years in mid-1977 and immediately became president of a subsidiary of that company, at $85,000 a year.

The subcommittee is investigating whether Conlon illegally failed to report offers from the company during his tenure, improperly aided the firm's attempt to win a $19 million contract for an anti-counterfeiting device of questionable merit, and lined up office space for the company eight months before he retired from the government.

The anti-counterfeit device has not been purchased, but is still under consideration.

"One of the apparent causes of the rising costs of currency related to an expensive lease-to-purchase agreements that had been made with the American Bank Note Company for four high-speed ... presses" between 1974 and 1978, Mrs. Anderson testified.

"They failed to function much of the time, produced a high spoilage rate, forced the use of additional overtime and required substantial corrective maintenance," she said.

The four presses cost a total of $4.7 million, more per unit than two different presses that produced two and a half times more bills at 59 cents per thousand less than the bank note presses.

Mrs. Anderson testified that no records were found from Conlon's tenure indicating the bureau ever studied the need for the bank note companyproduced device to detect counterfeits. A subcommittee source suggested it may not have been as useful an invention as it backers, including Conlon, claimed.

A grand jury investigation is under way into the past operations of the agency, which prints U.S. currency, food stamps and gasoline rationing coupons and attracts 600,000 tourists a year to be tantalized by the sight of money rolling off the presses.

"If the very people who are in charge of printing our money are at the same time squandering those greenbacks, we must put a stop to that right now," said Sen. Charles Percy, R-Ill.

Staff investigators said Tuesday American Bank Note Co. made "abnormally high profits" — 23 and 38 percent of sales, in some cases — on $130 million worth of food stamp contracts.

Conlon's former deputy, Kenneth DeHart, said Conlon handpicked his own successor, under whose term business with the company increased, threatened to withdraw his retirement to keep DeHart from becoming director and in 1975 told him "in substance that ABN is a private company in business to make a profit and that the bureau should not be concerned about what profit it makes."

President Nominates Gen. Meyer

WASHINGTON (AP) — In a surprise move, President Carter has brushed aside military seniority tradition to pick Lt. Gen. Edward C. Meyer to become the Army's next chief of staff.

Administration sources, declining to be identified, said Carter planned to announce today his nomination of Meyer, 50, one of the Army's youngest senior generals, to replace Gen. Bernard Rogers.

Rogers has been named to succeed Gen. Alexander Haig as NATO supreme commander in Europe.

Carter passed over 15 four-star and three-star generals to choose Meyer, reputedly a brilliant strategist and planner who is now the Army's deputy chief of staff for operations.

This is the first time in 15 years a president has reached far down on the seniority list to choose an army chief.

An unusual atmosphere of secrecy preceding the announcement heightened a suspicion that Meyer's selection culminated another in a series of disputes between Rogers and Army Secretary Clifford Alexander.

But administration sources said their information indicated there was no conflict between Rogers and Alexander in this case and that both Army leaders probably backed Gen. John Vessey, a U.S. commander in Korea.

The sources said Meyer's selection followed an interview he had with Carter last Saturday.

Defense Secretary Harold Brown, following a request from Carter, sent the president a memo listing about five generals Brown felt were highly qualified to succeed Rogers as chief of staff.

Conservatives, Liberals Claim Budget Victories

WASHINGTON (AP) — House conservatives and liberals, clashing over defense and social spending, can both claim victories in the opening rounds of floor debate on the government's budget priorities.

Tuesday, the House effectively killed President Carter's revenue sharing program to aid depressed cities when it knocked out $250 million, all the money proposed for the plan in this fiscal year's supplemental budget.

The aid proposal, designed to help cities and towns with high unemployment rates, was strongly backed by liberal lawmakers from urban areas, but opposed by fiscal conservatives as wasteful. The vote was 212-198.

However, House liberals were able to beat back, 229-183, a proposal to add $800 million in authorization and $210 million in spending for advanced development of the mobile MX missile and other military hardware.

Liberals won another skirmish when they succeesfully added $75 million in authorization and $30 million in spending for the elderly nutrition program.

Authorization covers spending for a project beyond the immediate budget year.

Although the floor fights Tuesday involved only spending for fiscal 1979, which ends Sept. 30, the skirmishes were seen as a prelude to the upcoming battle over next year's budget which the House will consider later this week.

The House Budget Committee is recommending a $532.7 billion budget with a $24.9 billion federal deficit for fiscal 1980, which starts Oct. 1.

The president has proposed $532.3 billion in spending and a $28.4 billion deficit in fiscal 1980.

Last week, the Senate approved $532.6 billion in spending with a $29 billion deficit.

However, the Senate said because of its economic assumptions, its spending and deficit figures are actually below those of the House committee and president.

In a related development, the House Republican leadership said Tuesday because of the nation's high inflation rate, Congress could cut the 1980 deficit to $15.2 billion and enact a $15 billion tax cut.

The GOP leaders said the administration's projection of a 7.4 percent inflation rate is unrealistic and that a more likely 9.4 percent figure would provide the government with additional revenue to pay for the tax cut.

The additional revenue would come because inflation pushes up incomes which are then taxed at higher rates.

Prisoner Release Considered

By United Press International

The Justice Department has confirmed it is considering freeing four Puerto Rican nationalists, including one who tried to kill President Truman, apparently in the hope Havana will free four Americans jailed in Cuba.

Although most parties involved have been carefully staying away from applying the word "swap" to the situation, Cuban Premier Fidel Castro has said he may release the Americans if the Puerto Ricans go free.

The jailed nationalists, regarded as heroes by leftists in Latin America, are Lolita Lebron, Irving Flores Rodrigues and Rafael Cancel Miranda, who shot up the House of Representatives in 1954, and Oscar Collazo, who tried to kill Truman Nov. 1, 1950.

The Americans jailed in Cuba — all but one on espionage-related charges — are Lawrence Lunt, a former U.S. Air Force man, Juan Tur, Claudio Rodriguez Morales and Everett Jackson, a former U.S. paratrooper.

"We are considering clemency for the four Puerto Ricans," Justice Department pardon attorney John Stanish said Tuesday in Washington in commenting on reports of negotiations involving release of the Puerto Ricans and Americans.

However Rep. Robert Garcia, D-N.Y., who began moves in December for release of the Puerto Ricans, said "inaccurate" reports a swap is imminent could delay the Puerto Ricans's release by putting unwanted pressure on the White House.

"The White House totally rejected a petition by (New York Republican Rep. Benjamin) Gilman and others for a swap," an aide to Garcia said. "There has been no agreement at any time between the U.S. and Cuban governments."

A White House official denied a statement by a supporter of the Puerto Ricans that a petition for clemency was "on Carter's desk" and stressed it was the Justice Department that was considering the petition.

"The Justice Department will consider it on its merits," the official said. "Castro has said if we release them ... he might release several Americans. We have no interest in a swap."

Miss Lebron was sentenced to 16 to 50 years in prison for her role on the congressional attack. Flores Rodrigues and Cancel Miranda were each given 25 to 75 years.

Collazo was given the death sentence for his part in the attack on Blair House that resulted in the deaths of a fellow nationalist and a White House guard. Truman commuted it to life in prison.

A fifth Puerto Rican sentenced for the House attack, Andres Figueroa Cordero, was released last year because he had terminal cancer. He died two months ago in Puerto Rico.

Lunt has served 14 years of a 30-year sentence on a charge of spying on Cuba for the CIA. Tur is serving a 20-year sentence for espionage.

Congress Studies Plan To Reduce Service

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter's plan to reduce Amtrak rail service by 12,000 miles is being scrutinized on Capitol Hill.

New guidelines for deciding whether a passenger train should be dropped from the federally subsidized system were proposed Tuesday by the House Interstate and Foreign Commerce Committee's transportation subcommittee.

In the Senate, the Commerce Committee refused to send to the full Senate a resolution that would have vetoed Carter's cutback plan.

The president's proposal calls for dropping 43 percent of the current rail service. The plan will go into effect Oct. 1 unless either the House or the Senate votes against it by May 22.

The House subcommittee's proposal would bar Amtrak from dropping any train that had an average of 150 passengers over its entire run, based on prjected riership in 1980.

The guidelines also would limit train losses to no more than seven cents per passenger mile. And, states would not have to spend as much initially to keep service on threatened lines.

Rep. James Florio, D-N.J., subcommittee chairman, said he could not predict how many trains would be saved under the guidelines.

Stock Mart Virtually Unchanged

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market was mixed today, unable to break out of the neutral trend of the past month.

Gainers and losers were evenly balanced in the mid-day tally of New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials slipped .61 to 854.90 by noontime.

Analysts said the sideways movement of the market since the start of April had tended to dampen trading interest.

They also noted uncertainty over how much further interest rates will rise. Short-term rates have been climbing in recent days as the Federal Reserve has sought to tighten credit a bit.

This week Wall Street moved into what investment adviser Yale Hirsch of Old Tappan, N.J., calls "The May-June disaster area."

Whatever the reason, Hirsch noted in his monthly letter "Smart Money," only twice in the last 14 years has the market managed a net gain between the end of April and the end of June.

Squibb Corp. topped the active list, off 1⅞ at 31. A 150,000-square block traded at 32.

The NYSE's composite index lost .05 to 57.29. On the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was up .20 at 184.39.

Volume on the Big Board totaled 13.02 million shares at noontime, against 12.85 million at the same point Tuesday.

Public Debate Erupts Over Cattle Futures Pact

By SONJA HILLGREN

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Rep. Neal Smith, D-Iowa, and Clayton Yeutter, president of the Chicago Mercantile Exchange, are engaged in a public fight over Smith's contention that the exchange's cattle futures contract should be restricted.

Smith wrote Yeutter a letter earlier this month outlining his objections and went public with them at an appearance this week befoe an annual meeting of farm editors.

Smith told the editors that until the Commodity Futures Trading Commission takes some action to police the contract, "we ought to suspend this contract or limit it at least as far as packers are concerned."

He said meat packers, who are major users of the contract, should be prohibited from using it to cover more than a few days slaughter.

The purpose of the contract is for feeders to hedge cattle, Smith said. However, during 11 out of the past 15 months they could not use it because the spread between feeder cattle and fed cattle was too narrow to cover costs, he said.

Yet packers could make more money out of futures trading than from their slaughter operations, he said.

Following news stories on his comments, live cattle futures on the Chicago Mercantile Exchange fell by as much as the daily trading limit. Analysts said the market was ready to fall and Smith's remarks triggered the decline.

On Thursday, Yeutter sent a letter to Smith in which he said suspension of cattle futures "would have a devastating effect on our cattle industry."

He told Smith, in a letter delivered to Smith's Washington office and released in Chicago, that risks in ranching and cattle feeding have never been higher "and the need for a hedging mechanism to shift some of that risk has never been greater."

He predicted that without a futures market, many cattlemen would face reduced credit and would have to cut back or get out of the business.

Smith said the cattle futures should be policed better. He said an Agriculture Department study found that a few meat packing companies are buying large numbers of futures contracts.

These companies are responsible for most of the beef price quotations that go to the Yellow Sheet, a private Chicago-based guide to wholesale pricing. In turn, Yellow Sheet quotations affect the price of futures contracts.

Yeutter said the Agriculture Department study made no reference to policing of trading and he has "complete confidence" in the compliance programs at the exchange.

"We believe that we have the strongest compliance programs of any exchange in the world, and that users of those contracts are totally protected," Yeutter said.

Limiting or prohibiting meat packers — the largest potential buyers of contracts — would be counterproductive, Yeutter said.

"To restrict or eliminate their participation would be price-depressing, a most undesirable outcome for cattle producers," Yeutter said.

Smith is taking a broad look at meat pricing. Last year, his Small Business Committee focused on the Yellow Sheet and found that its price quotations were based on a tiny number of transactions during a survey period and that some quotations were not backed up by records.

He will push a bill to require accurate reporting to the Yellow Sheet and study of replacing the Yellow Sheet with electronic marketing of beef, for which technology is now available.

The committee will study beef market domination by a few packers. Agriculture Secretary Bob Bergland will be the first witness when hearings begin next week.

Meanwhile, an Agriculture Department task force is holding hearings on beef pricing to fashion a department response to Smith's proposals.

TODAY IN HISTORY

By United Press International

Today is Wednesday, May 2, the 122nd day of 1979 with 243 to follow.

The moon is approaching its first quarter.

The morning stars are Mercury, Venus and Mars.

The evening stars are Jupiter and Saturn.

Those born on this date are under the sign of Taurus.

Singer-actor Bing Crosby was born May 2, 1904.

On this day in history:

In 1863, Gen. Thomas Jonathan "Stonewall" Jackson was mistakenly shot by his own Confederate soldiers. He died eight days later.

In 1941, the Federal Communications Commission approved the regular scheduling of commercial television broadcasts.

In 1972, FBI Director J. Edgar Hoover died at the age of 77. Also that day, 91 persons were killed in a mine fire at Kellogg, Idaho.

In 1973, Democrat John Connally, former governor of Texas and Treasury Secretary in the first Nixon administration, joined the Republican party.

A thought for the day:

Irish poet Oscar Wilde said, "We are all in the gutter, but some of us are looking at the stars."

FEWER BLACKS MARRYING

PITTSBURGH (AP) — A West Coast sociologist says the number of blacks who prefer not to marry is increasing. They say college-educated black females with high expectations are partly responsible for the trend. Dr. Robert Staples, of the University of California at San Francisco, made the observation Saturday at the African Heritage Studies Association's 11th annual conference here.

Accountant Maintains Inflation Not Problem

By JOHN CUNNIFF

NEW YORK (AP) — The big problem these days, says Harvey Kapnick, is not inflation, even if President Carter has declared it to be No. 1.

As an accountant — chairman of Arthur Anderson & Co., one of the top accounting firms — Kapnick is aware of the current 13 percent rise in prices. Still, he maintains, "inflation is not the problem."

Instead, he says, it is a result of problems: deficit spending, a week trade position, discouragement of savings, a failure to develop domestic energy, uncoordinated regulation, and lagging productivity.

We attack the symptom, inflation, even while growing aware that the real problems can be dealt with. The real problems, however, are easy to avoid; in every instance they involve painful political decisions.

So often, it seems, accountants limit their function to reviewing the documents, verifying the numbers, analyzing procedures, and applying or withholding their imprimatur. Sometimes they comment on management, but management is their employer; it doesn't happen often.

When Kapnick spoke recently at Indiana University he felt constrained to advise his audience that his words would sound harsh, "all the more 29 coming from an accountant accustomed to calm, precise expression."

He proceeded to criticize the nation's economic management. We risk disaster, he said. "We need a coordinated economic policy as much as we need a coordinated defense policy." We don't have it, he said.

We discourage thrift, the basis of capital needed to make jobs and raise productivity, he said. Our regulators regulate narrow-mindedly. Our energy program concentrates on price instead of self-sufficiency.

Analysis

We don't even stop to identify the overriding issues that cause inflation and that must be dealt with in developing a coordinated, long-term national policy, Kapnick said, adding these observations:

—The federal budget deficit is probably bigger than what the numbers tells us. He should know; his job is peering behind the numbers. Using other accounting methods, accumulated federal deficits for 1975 through 1977 were 50 percent greater than shown.

"We need sound data at all levels of government to identify problems before they become crises. We can no longer have deficits of $30-$50 billion and unrecorded future liabilities of the magnitude shown in the unofficial accrual statements."

—We must have a national program to export more. Our trade position is deteriorating, and it isn't because of oil. "Both West Germany and Japan import greater percentages of their oil than we do, and both have strong economies, sound currencies and favorable trade balances."

The problem is on the sell side. U.S. competitors use tax and other financial incentives to stimulate exports. We do not. We must change our policy.

—We have chosen to wage the energy battle with one hand tied. Nuclear power is still the cheapest and most abundant form of energy. "It is a crime that our vast coal resources have not been mobilized."

We must gain control of energy availability. "In business, a company that loses control over its ability to gain access to necessary raw materials usually goes out of business."

—Last year U.S. productivity rose less than one percent; Japan's rose 10 times faster. The obvious reason is that our industrial plant has grown old, a consequence of a tax policy that discourages investment.

—In 1978 the United States invested 15 percent of gross national product in such things as plant and equipment. Japan invested 29 percent, West Germany 23, Canada 23 and the United Kingdom 18 percent.

Government taxing discourages savings. Last year Americans saved less than 5 percent of income, one-third that of some nations. At the same time, government borrowing took $1 of every $5 of capital available.

What's the answer? Coordination, better management, for one thing. Kapnick proposed specific legislative changes, but one comment (about regulation) seemed to cover everything.

The way things operate, he said, "is like 50 people writing checks from the same checkbook without anyone worrying about who put the money in to cover the checks written."

City Withdraws Legal Challenge To Sale

BOSTON (AP) — The city has withdrawn its legal challenge to the sale by a private library of portraits of George and Martha Washington.

The library which owns the paintings, including the original of the picture of George Washington that appears on the dollar bill, has agreed not to sell the paintings without informing the state.

The Boston Athenaeum has been trying to sell the Gilbert Stuart portraits to the National Portrait Gallery of the Smithsonian Institution in Washington, but Boston has contended the library could not sell the pictures because part of the money used to buy them was raised by public subscription. The Athenaeum denies the argument.

SURVIVE SNIPER ATTACK — Armando Hernandez, 20, visits Tuesday with his wounded wife and new infant daughter, Isabel, at a San Antonio hospital. Wounded Fiesta Parade Victim Gives Birth To Healthy Infant

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Isabel Hernandez has no idea how close she came to a sniper's bullet. But her mother, wounded in the upper right thigh Friday in the Fiesta parade attack, is saving the newspaper clippings and someday she'll show her newborn daughter.

Irene Hernandez, 20, gave birth to the healthy, 9-pound girl early Tuesday morning — less than four days after the pregnant woman crumpled to a downtown street, wounded by a heavily armed sniper firing wildly into the thousands of parade spectators.

Two spectators were killed and at least 50 were injured, most by gunshots. The sniper, 64-year-old Ira Attebery, killed himself after a furious exchange of gunfire with police.

Mrs. Hernandez was nearly a week overdue on the day of the parade and her 20-year-old husband, Armando, remembers seating her near the parade starting point at the corner of Broadway and Grayson to be near their car.

Across the intersection, Attebery had parked his green-and-white motor home in a tire store parking lot. Inside the camper he had stockpiled three shotguns, eight rifles, four pistols and hundreds of rounds of ammunition.

Then the shooting started. Six police officers only a few feet away from the Hernandezes were the first to be hit.

"I didn't realize at first what was happening," said Hernandez. "I thought they (the shots) were fireworks. Then we saw the cop go down."

"I didn't want my wife or the baby hurt. She couldn't run because of her condition, so I put her down in the road and got on top of her and covered her," he added.

"I was hoping he would take two or three shots and run. I thought maybe he was on the roof or something," he continued. "Then one shot almost hit us, so I pulled her up and tried to run for cover. That's when a shot hit her in the leg."

The bullet from a powerful AR-15 semi-automatic carbine, a civilian version of the military M-16, hit Mrs. Hernandez a scant 12-15 inches from the baby. The AR-15 was the weapon Attebery used to kill his two victims, officials said.

Hernandez somehow pulled his wounded wife behind a nearby police car, but it was nearly an hour before the shooting stopped and emergency workers could rescue the pinned-down couple. "I just remember the gunshots being real, real loud," said Hernandez.

"I didn't know what was going on," said Mrs. Hernandez from her hospital bed. "I didn't really know what was going on until I got shot. I was all scared about losing the baby. I kept asking everybody if the baby was all right, but they couldn't tell me until I got to the hospital."

She was treated for the gunshot wound at Bexar County Medical Center and then moved to the maternity section at the Robert B. Green Hospital. The baby showed no ill effects from the ordeal, said Green spokesman Jeff Duffield.

"I'm just happy we're all okay. I'm very sorry for those who had it worse. It will all take some time to heal," said Mrs. Hernandez. "We're saving all the newspaper clippings and everything to show Isabel when she's old enough to understand."

Powerful Tranquilizer Used To Treat Attebery

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Fiesta parade sniper Ira Attebery, who fired Friday on a crowd of spectators, was once prescribed a powerful tranquilizer a Texas Pharmaceutical Association official says is used in the treatment of "anxiety, aggression and tension."

Attebery, armed with 15 guns and firing from a parked motor home, killed two spectators Friday. At least another 50 were wounded or injured.

A police search of Attebery's small motor home turned up several bottles of prescription medicine, including an Aug. 3, 1972 prescription for the tranquilizer Thorazine.

The prescription was issued by Dr. Frank Boyle of the Veterans Administration hospital in Poplar Bluff, Mo. It called for Attebery to take three 25 milligram tablets per day.

Tim Vordenbaumen, president of the pharmaceutical association, said that dose was "about average for the treatment of anxiety, aggression and tension."

Dr. Boyle is no longer with the hospital in the town where Attebery was buried Tuesday and could not be reached for comment.

Gary Harrod, assistant chief medical administrator, would not discuss the specifics of Attebery's treatment, but confirmed only that Attebery had been a patient "for a number of years."

His last visit, said Harrod, was in June 1978.

The Physicians Desk Reference, a reference book on drugs and their effects, says Thorazine is "used to control manic-depresive illnesses."

"It is used to control moderate to severe agitation, hyperactivity or aggression," the book said.

Although larger doses are given in mental hospitals, the book said, "maintenance doses" are also given to others. Those range from 30 miligrams per day to Attebery's dose of 75 miligrams per day.

Vordenbaumen said Attebery's dose "could be considered a maintenance dose."

Services Held For Sniper, Spectator

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Amalia Castillo, a 47-year-old widowed mother of 13 and victim of Friday's Fiesta parade sniper attack, was buried here Tuesday. The sniper was buried the same day in Missouri.

More than 350 persons jammed a small Mormon church here to pay last respects to Mrs. Castillo and 250 attended a graveside service at the Ft. Sam Houston National Cemetery.

In Poplar Bluff, Mo., on Tuesday, sniper Ira Attebery was buried in a brief, private graveside service.

Attebery, armed with 15 guns, cut up a crowd of thousands of spectators waiting for the Battle of Flowers Parade to begin. Mrs. Castillo and 27-year-old Ida Dollard were killed and at least 50 were injured.

Attebery killed himself inside the parked motor home from which he fired.

Mrs. Dollard's funeral was here today.

Two of Mrs. Castillo's children, 8-year-old Cecilia and 10-year-old Cordelia, remained hospitalized for gunshot wounds suffered in the shooting and were unable to attend their mother's funeral.

Mrs. Castillo's granddaughter, Joanna Campos, 6, was released from the hospital on Monday, but was not in the crowd Tuesday. She received lung injuries when her grandmother fell on her, shielding her from the bullets.

"We ask that they be given strength and understanding. She would want us to love and forgive," prayed Bishop Dan Dreher.

Mrs. Castillo was buried with her husband, Joe Castillo, a World War II veteran who died three years ago of cancer.

"This has been a terrible thing to happn to this family," said Dreher.

UT COMMENCEMENT

AUSTIN (AP) — The University of Texas will observe its 96th Commencement May 19 by awarding degrees to about 4,500 students. Dr. Robert Nisbet, nationally known sociologist, will give the address. Nisbet retired last year from Columbia University.

Lawyer Says President Has Not Kept Promise

WASHINGTON (AP) -The president of La Raza National Bar Association says President Carter has not kept a promise to increase minority appointments to the federal judiciary.

"It seems to me that the president wasn't really thinking minority," Benjamin Aranda III said Tuesday.

Congress last year added 117 federal judgeships and 35 positions on circuit courts of appeal.

Aranda said eight Hispanics have been listed so far by the commissions that submit names to President Carter for his consideration. The ratio is one Hispanic lawyer to 23 white males named, he said at a news conference.

"The net result, simply, is that the president is insincere in his statements that he is going to appoint more Hispanics," Aranda, of Marina del Rey, Calif., said. "We're telling the president that judges are important for Hispanics."

James DeAnda, a lawyer from McAllen, will be the first Hispanic to appear before the Senate Judiciary Committee in the current round of confirmations. The public hearing on his nomination as federal judge in the Southern District of Texas is scheduled today.

Carter's nominations for federal judgeships must be confirmed by the Senate.

U.S. District Judge Reynaldo Garza of Brownsville, chief of the Southern District, was nominated Friday to a position on the 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in New Orleans.

The public hearing on Garza's nomination has not been scheduled.

Rick Hernandez, White House aide, said an affirmative action program is working for minority appointments to the judiciary.

"The president has expressed and is expressing his determination to make sure that the judicial appointments ae going to be truly representative of the communities that they are serving."

Aranda, who met with Hernandez last week, said he was not satisfied by the response.

"The president can say to his commissions, 'I would like to have a wider selection," Aranda sai.

Associate Attorney General Michael J. Egan told the judiciary committee last month minorities and women make up a fair share of the nominees.

"Of all the judicial candidates nominated by the president since he took office, or curently processed for nomination, 27 percent are minority or female lawyers," Egan said.

National Airlines Asks Court To Halt Review

MIAMI (AP) — National Airlines, which repeatedly has stated its objections to merger efforts by Texas International Airlines, is asking a federal court to halt the Civil Aeronautics Board's review of the Houston-based carrier's merger proposal.

The action filed with U.S. District Court in Washington says in effect that the CAB's method of undertaking the review may have introduced prejudice into the case.

"What we're saying is that the board is going to undertake this decision in a way that's prejudicial to National," said attorney Bert Rein. "We want to stop the board from going ahead until it cleans up its act."

Texas International spokesman Jim O'Donnell's only comment was "National's been worried about us."

Texas International triggered a three-way rush to merge with National when it revealed last July that it was buying up National stock. Pan American World Airways then began buying National stock, and Eastern Airlines later made a merger proposal of $50 a share.

chool children and thus eliminate the need for a babysitter.

Another ardent supporter of the projects program is Parsons parent Carolyn Harding who is able, through the program set-up to give her time as it is available. She is especially thrilled with the opportunity to get a grasp of what's happening in her child's life at school.

"We learn a great deal about what's going on," said Mrs. Harding. "The school is so large, but by helping in this way, it makes it seem smaller. It makes us feel a part of the school."

Both she and volunteer Jennifer Burdette said that in their children's eyes, they are a welcome addition to their schoolday.

Energy Experts Eye Waste Use

By RUTHANNE BROCKWAY
Avalanche-Journal Staff

Although wasting energy is a prime concern for most budget-conscious Americans, energy waste may help solve the nation's fuel shortages, say experts at a Texas Tech conference which concludes today.

Several speakers illustrated this statement by relating how cattle manure, grain sorghum, cotton gin trash and other 'wastes' may be part of the answer to tomorrow's energy solutions.

Tuesday afternoon's portion of "Coping with the West Texas Energy Crisis," covered a regional energy conservation program, comparison of conventional and alternative energy sources, solar energy, biomass energy and gasohol.

Although speakers discussed different energy sources, all agreed that the energy problem is complex and requires many options, not simply one solution.

Alleviation of the energy problem also will take time — between 10 and 25 years is the time necessary to implement new solutions, Dr. Harry Parker of Tech's chemical engineering department predicted.

One of the alternatives touted at the conference was the use of fermented biomass, popularly known as gasohol — a mixture of 80 or 90 percent gasoline and 10 or 20 percent ethanol.

"It fits our area," C. Ralph Blodgett said of gasohol. Blodgett, mayor of Spearman, said that at current gasoline prices, even cutting 10 percent of the nation's gasoline needs means it is feasible to produce gasohol.

Blodgett praised the state House of Representatives which this week approved a $15 million gasohol development program. Other gasohol legislation in Austin this session included a bill passed by the Senate to build a state demonstration plant for the production of gasohol.

While Texas is just beginning to think about gasohol, Blodgett said Brazil, which has an abundant supply of sugar cane to ferment, has sold some of its gasohol to U.S. customers and is considering expanding its exports.

And while U.S. production of gasohol has been considered at 90-10 or 80-20 ratios of gasoline to ethanol, Blodgett said Brazil uses 60 percent ethanol and 40 percent fossil fuel.

The Panhandle and West Texas area is a natural location for gasohol production, Blodgett said, because of its feedlots and grain supply.

And the beauty of products used in gasohol production is that even damaged grain (such as grain condemned for human consumption because of fire damage) can be used in gasohol, he said.

He estimated that a bushel of corn could produce 2.5 to 2.6 gallons of alcohol.

Dr. John Reichert, director of the solar energy project at Crosbyton, said the project will provide the city with solar-generated electrcity in daylight hours and fossil fueled electricity at night.

Dr. Ernst Kiesling of Tech's civil engineering department, discussed solar energy in residential use.

Kiesling said 55 percent of energy consumption in a typical home is for space heating and 15 percent is for water heating.

Proper insulation and some use of solar energy can cut the costs of space heating, but solar makes an excellent water heating source, he said.

Other home uses of solar energy and energy conservation include sheltering homes with earth. Homes can be built with three sides buried in the soil and the fourth side collecting solar energy.

Dr. William Marcy, director of the solar Trans-Pecos Project, explained how farmers might someday benefit from the system designed by Tech to use solar energy to irrigate Pecos from deep water wells.

It could give farmers a break in electricity costs and give farmers some control over source and supply of energy.

But because it is an experimental project and not a mass-produced system, Marcy noted, "It is also very very expensive."

Finding the most suitable energy sources to adapt to the this area is a goal of the regional energy conservation program of the South Plains Association of Governments.

But right now the program consists only of ideas on paper because there is no money for implementation of the program, Kenneth Leggett of SPAG, said.

One project SPAG has completed is an aerial infrared thermogram of a 15-county area to determine the amount of heat loss in individual homes and businesses.

While interpretation of individual homes is a must because of such factors as nearby trees (which absorb some heat) Tim Hogsett of SPAG said in general the thermogram showed roofs, windows and vents are common areas of heat loss.

Roof heat loss can be cut by proper insulation and window heat loss can be aided by the use of protective film over the glass or covering windows with blinds or draperies, he said.

Harry Parker of Tech's chemical engineering department, stressed that the energy problem is not only not only involves technology, but also has economic and social considerations.

In comparing bulk energy in cents per kilowatt hour, Parker said current sources of electricity costs between 2 and 4 cents per kilowatt hour, while combustion of electricity produced by combustion of biomass could be had for 7 or 8 cents per kilowatt hour. He estimated the cost of solar electricity at 22 cents per kilowatt hour. The costs of coal and nuclear power are more difficult to estimate, he said.

But with conventional energy prices rising, 7 or 8 cents for biomass electricity "is a reasonable price" for those industries which can readily use such a system, Parker said, naming a paper plant as an example.

He warned against over optimism in the cost and development of alternate energy sources, saying that a 1967 estimate of today's oil shale and oil production costs was over optimistic. Prices are 10 times higher now than what was predicted.

But whatever the source, Parker said much energy is required for a reasonable standard of living and that conservation alone is not enough.

"We're strongly hooked on energy," he said.

Fines, Terms Assessed In Fraud Cases

Fines, penitentiary sentences and probated sentences Tuesday were levied against 10 defendants in a final disposition of their tax fraud cases in U. S. District Court.

J. W. Brown of Big Spring received the harshest sentence — five years in federal prison, five years' probation after that and a $5,000 fine — while several other defendants also were sent to prison and ordered to pay restitution.

Judge Halbert O. Woodward passed sentence in a full day of hearings.

The defendants, all from Big Spring, were among two dozen persons indicted here in January for filing false income tax returns and claiming fraudulent refunds.

Most of the other cases had previously been disposed of.

Jennie Nix got three years' probation; Norman McNew six months to serve of a three-year sentence, the rest probated, and $1,196 in restitution; Kenneth Skinner two years' probation and $1,200 in restitution; Lou Ann Hatfield six months to serve of a three-year sentence, the rest probated, and $908 in restitution; Terri McCartney two years' probation and $470 in restitution; Brenda Sanders three years' probation and $906 in restitution; Della Audine Compton two years in prison; Dolly McNew six months to serve of a two-year sentence, the rest probated; and Kenneth Clement three years' probation and $912 in restitution.

Another defendant, Eugene Shipman of Big Spring, pleaded guilty Tuesday and will be sentenced at a later date, Assistant U. S. Attorney Roger McRoberts said.

Company Files Suit Against AT&T

WASHINGTON (AP) — A Washington communications company wants a federal court to break up the giant American Telephone & Telegraph Co.

MCI Communications Corp. filed suit Monday, accusing AT&T of monopolizing the long-distance telephone market and asking for $3 billion in damages for alleged antitrust violations. The suit charges that AT&T and its companies have captured 95 percent of all revenues in the long-distance market. AT&T spokesman Pic Wagner denied the company had violated antitrust laws. MCI provides long-distance phone service, primarily for businesses.

You and the Law

Presented by the State Bar of Texas

Q: I filed on my ex-husband a year ago for back child support. He learned of the order and skipped town. Even now the papers haven't been served because the authorities can't locate him. Can you tell me what can be done to have him located?

A: In Texas there are two agencies that will search for your ex-husband. If there is a domestic relations office in your county, this office will often have an investigator who can search for the missing individual.

The Texas Dept. of Human Resources also provides child support enforement services for a nominal fee. If such an individual goes into hiding the local child support unit can draw on statewide as well as local and occasionally national resources to try to locate the delinquent spouse and have the warrant issued for his arrest.

Q: I live in a condominium. My neighbor has fenced in property beyond his boundary. My air conditioning unit is inside his fence and he has all sorts of building materials stacked up against it. He won't allow anyone inside the fence. Would I be breaking the law if I knocked down part of the fence, making an entrance to my air conditioning unit so I can clean around it and have it serviced?

A: If your neighbor has fenced in your property or the property of the condominium developer, you or the developer should take steps to make the neighbor move the fence or buy the right to use the enclosed property. If that is not done, after 10 years the neighbor may come to own the enclosed property by what is known as "adverse possession." But you should not knock down the fence. To do so would make you liable to your neighbor for damage to the fence, and perhaps be a violation of criminal law as well.

Q: If a car pulls in front of me to switch lanes and I'm unable to avoid hitting the car from behind, who is at fault? After an accident, is it necessary to leave the cars where they stopped? What can you do if the police report on an accident is incorrect?

A: State law requires that any change of traffic lanes must be accompanied by a signal and must be done safely. After an accident, the cars involved should be moved out of traffic to avoid creating a hazard. A copy of the official accident report may be obtained from the Department of Public Safety in Austin for a fee of $2; both drivers also may file reports, and you may challenge the investigating officer's version by appealing your traffic citation in court, where the officer is subject to cross-examination.

Send your questions to "You and the Law," State Bar of Texas, P.O. Box 12487, Austin, 78711. Answers may appear in columns in hypothetical terms; personal answers not possible.

Law School Has Older Students

CONCORD, N.H. (AP) — Penny Cournoyer is a nurse, Matt Epstein a legislator. Zillee McFee was a college administrator, Tom Saturley an auctioneer, Caroline Greenleaf a criminal investigator.

The youngest is 26, the eldest 53. Their common bond is New Hampshire's only law school — Franklin Pierce Law Center, which caters to older, life-tempered students.

Most of them wouldn't have applied to other law schools, but chose Franklin Pierce because it seeks out more experienced applicants — and because of its teaching methods. The school tries to dispel the cutthroat competition often found in larger law schools.

"There is an amazing diversity here, and it's not by accident," says Linda Bisson, the school's admissions officer.

The students also include physicists, an orthopedic surgeon, a steelworker, a carpenter, an anthropologist, engineers, a botanist, a biologist, a computer expert.

"We have sought to get people who have done something else" after college, says Robert Viles, the school's dean. "If you're going to have an adult approach to studying law, it helps to start with more adult people."

Among the 340 students, one of three is older than 30. About a third of the students are female, another third have advanced degrees, particularly in science-related fields.

With law and science in mind, Viles and Robert Rines, the school's president and a lawyer and engineer, founded the school in 1973. Rines heads the Academy of Applied Science, which is searching for the Loch Ness monster in Scotland.

The school catalogue says the science connection represents "a commitment toward applying legal skills to the resolution of complex technological issues that promise to become increasingly important." Those issues range from invention and innovation to specialized legal problems related to energy.

Technology and the law and the school's location attracted Mrs. Cournoyer, 39, a pediatric nurse from Manchester with a master's degree in social science and four children.

She is interested in patient and nursing advocacy. Part of her study has included what amounts to the school's on-the-job training program — serving as a legal intern with the New Hampshire Hospital Association.

"This way it's possible to get into your field early," she says.

Mrs. Bisson says, "We are looking for people who perhaps don't fit the blind objective criteria" of law school entrance examination scores and college grades.

Scores and grades are important, she says, but "someone could hand in a perfect transcript full of fluff courses."

Each application is read by a committee of six, including students, and three additional staff members. "We do a lot of agonizing," she says. Nine of 10 applicants are rejected.

In addition to the on-the-job or "clinical" programs, the school has small classes.

In large classes, says Viles, "you tend to have a master-servant relationship with the teacher up front broadcasting to the students, who regurgitate it at the end of the semester.

"Well, that's a hell of a preparation to practice law ... where you are going to have to exercise some judgment concerning a client's affairs."

Epstein, 30, a Democratic member of the New Hampshire House of Representatives from Concord, extols the "good, equal, respectful relationship between the faculty and students.

"The most important aspect of the school is that it is aimed toward older students," Epstein says. "There's a big difference between someone who has just graduated from college and someone who's been out a few years."

Ford Recalls 1979 Autos

DETROIT (AP) — A defect that was found during assembly line testing has prompted Ford Motor Co. to recall about 4,750 1979-model Ford Mustangs and Mercury Capris.

A spokesman for the automaker said Monday the recall was for possible repair of a plastic guard which protects the engine fan.

The fan guard could come in contact with the fan if the engine is raced with the hood up, said John P. King, manager of the Ford service engineering office. No problems have been reported by owners of the cars, he said.

Cars affected by the recall are equipped with 200-cubic-inch, 6-cylinder engines without air conditioning, King said.

Ford and Mercury dealers will install additional supports and fasteners without charge. Owners will be notified by mail, King said.

Daring Thief Takes Gasoline Supply

TUCSON, Ariz. (UPI) — Gasoline shortages and weekend closings of service stations won't be a worry for a daring thief who now has a 4,241-gallon personal supply.

Gasoline valued at $2,800 apparently was pumped from an underground tank at an Exxon station at a major intersection during hours when the station was closed, police said Sunday. The theft occured sometime between last Thursday and Saturday, officers said.

The storage tank was not forced open, police said, theorizing the theft could have been the work of somebody "in an official-looking truck."

Wild Animals Make Bad Pets

By SHARI LEWIS

As she reached into the black box for her pet ocelot, she said, "He's so tame and loving that he eats out of my hands." Suddenly I heard snarling and spitting, as though the wild ocelot were eating off her hands! After a struggle, she held the beautiful creature out to me — but all I could see were the bloody scratches on her arm and I kept my distance.

I've seen this scene repeated dozens of times, and I've come to the conclusion that people who take wild animals as pets generally fall into two categories: either they bring them home as babies (and don't know what they're in for as the animals grow and assert their "wild" natures), or they're the kind of folks who need to believe that they have a special magic. Perhaps being loved by a savage beast makes these people feel more lovable.

The sad fact is that in the long run, wild animals make rotten household pets. "So," you might say, "I'll enjoy it until it gets too big or mean, and then I'll get rid of it!" Unfortunately, that's what generally happens, and these wild creatures have no place to go.

Zoos can't put defanged, declawed wild pets in cages with genuinely wild creature because they aren't able to hold their own. In America, we have dog and cat shelters that are supported by various government agencies, but until recently unwanted, ill-treated, sick, injured wild animal pets had no place to go.

That's why Martine Collette founded the Wildlife Waystation. This California shelter is on a 160-acre ranch surrounded by the Angeles National Forest.

Last week in Southern California there was a radiothon (like a telethon, except just on the radio) for the shelter, and Californians pledged almost $24,000 to keep the WW going.

Doctors Describe 'Burnout Syndrome'

By AL ROSSITER JR.

WASHINGTON (UPI) — One of the hazards executives and professionals face after years of hard work to reach the top is the burnout syndrome.

Suddenly, after years of training and experience, a person seems unable to perform his job as well as in the past. His initiative dampens, he loses interest in his work and he is less able to work efficiently, especially in times of stress.

"We believe this syndrome occurs frequently in medical personnel, corporate executives, lawyers, researchers and individuals later diagnosed as alcohol or drug abusers," said Dr. Richard C.W. Hall, associate professor of psychiatry at the University of Texas Medical School in Houston.

Hall and four co-workers said in a report in the medical journal Psychiatric Opinion that typical symptoms of burnout include feelings of exhaustion and a sensation of being physically run down, frequent headaches and digestive system problems, weight loss, sleeplessness, depression and a shortness of breath.

The report said people suffering from burnout syndrome may have changing moods, have feelings of helplessness, become increasingly irritable, have a diminished frustration tolerance, exhibit a suspiciousness which at times may border on paranoia and display increased levels of risk taking.

In addition, Hall and colleagues said their experience indicates that increased rigidity occurs.

"The individual becomes closed in his thinking and inflexible in his attitude," the report noted. "A negativistic attitude is frequently associated with the syndrome, with individuals becoming cynical about their work or role in an organization.

"As the syndrome progresses, characteristically, they question not only their own ability to perform, but the abilities of their co-workers, and of the organization as a whole, to accomplish stated tasks. These individuals spend increasing amounts of time to complete a fixed amount of work, but the quality of the time spent and productivity decline dramatically.

"Individuals at this stage of burnout, when off the job, are unable to relax. Among the things they report are abandonment or constriction of recreational activities and social contacts, feelings of isolation and marital discord."

The report said most burnout victims receive psychiatric help only after long periods of poor family relationships or at the time of physical illness, impending divorce or drug or alcohol abuse.

When these people are finally seen by medical workers, the burnout victims frequently express suicidal ideas, feelings of impotence, an inability to cope and total personal and professional frustration.

To deal with burnout among health care professionals, Hall and his colleagues hold staff meetings to explain the problem and note that it is more of an institutional situation than one unique to the individuals involved.

Work priorities are reorganized, action is taken to increase personal satisfaction from the job and the more frustrating tasks are distributed more evenly. The report said a team approach is developed so no individual is made indispensible.

In addition, action is taken to limit the number of hours that employees spend at their work and time off is made sacrosanct.

CHEVY CITATION

Citation goes a long way on a tank of gas. But that's just the start. Citation has the traction of front wheel drive, rack and pinion steering, front disc brakes, and a transverse mounted engine that's cradled in rubber cushioned mountings to reduce engine vibration. Sleek Citation is easy to park, yet big enough for five adults and lots of cargo. See Chevy Citation for yourself. And to really appreciate it, get behind the wheel!

Woman Reports Assault By Former Boyfriend

A 22-year-old Lubbock woman told police she was confronted Tuesday night by a former boyfriend, who grabbed her in front of her apartment and began tearing at her clothes.

She said she had returned home about 9:45 p.m. when the man grabbed her from behind while she was attempting to open her door. The man allegedly hit the woman in the eye after she pushed him away.

The victim said she managed to open her door, back into her residence and close the door. But reports indicate the man kicked the door open, entered and began tearing the woman's clothes off.

After ripping her clothing, the man reportedly fled the apartment. The victim notified police, as well as her boyfriend and father.

In other activity, Martin L. Tamez, 24, of 2620 Auburn St. was hospitalized after an assault by three Mexican-American men about 1:45 a.m. today at Auburn and Boston Avenue, according to police.

Tamez was listed in satisfactory condition today at Health Sciences Center Hospital. He told police he was walking near the intersection when three Mexican-Americans, in their late teens or early 20s, drove up, jumped out of their car and began hitting and kicking him.

Tamez said one of his attackers also cut him on the right side with an unknown object. After the beating, the suspects got into a brown Chevrolet and drove off.

Two 17-year-old males were arrested about 8:20 p.m. Tuesday after an off-duty policeman reportedly spotted them betting on a pool game in a game room at the South Plains Mall, 6200 Slide Road.

The officer, working as a security guard at the mall, reported that he witnessed one of the teen-agers lose the game and throw a $1 bill on top of the pool table.

The officer escorted the two youths into an office and informed them they were under arrest. However, reports indicate one of the youths was more concerned about money he said his companion owed him.

Danny Rather of 4431 76th St. told police that about 2:30 a.m. today someone shot out several windows at his residence, causing about $400 damage. He said he had received a phone call about an hour earlier in which the caller threatened to damage his house.

In a recent break-in, Deborah Irene Griffin of 2311 Fifth St. said she suffered a $1,200 loss when house burglars stole jewelry, a typewriter, portable television and $100 cash.

Police this morning continued to seek four men in connection with the Tuesday morning shooting of a 20-year-old Lubbock man in front of a supermarket.

Albert Marmolejo of 2911 Dartmouth St. remained in serious condition today at Methodist Hospital with a bullet wound.

Marmolejo was shot once with a small-caliber revolver about 10 a.m. Tuesday after an altercation with four Mexican-American men in front of Furr's Supermarket in the Town and Country Shopping Center at Fourth Street and University Avenue.

In other activity Tuesday, a shopper told a used car salesman he wanted to take a car for a test drive to his bank to see about a loan. The man took the car and never returned.

The auto theft was reported to police by Travis Lee Bryant, 41, owner of City Auto, 2501 Texas Ave.

Bryant said one of his employees let a man drive away in a 1976 Chevrolet Monte Carlo, valued at $3,650. The employee said he did not get the driver's name because he told the salesman he was a car dealer and the salesman said the man showed him papers from other car lots where he had bought cars.

A house burglary was reported by Louise Sims, 20, of 2634 E. Cornell St. She told police that someone broke a window in her house, climbed in, ransacked the house and took jewelry, clothes, cameras and a tape player, all valued at about $638.

The burglary occurred between 8:45 and 9:40 a.m. Tuesday.

The director of the local Young Women's Christian Association told police that someone broke into the building either late Monday or early Tuesday and stole two electric typewriters, valued at $1,000.

Board Recommends Increase In City Swimming Pool Fees

By SYLVIA TEAGUE
Avalanche-Journal Staff

It will cost more to use city swimming pools this summer if a rate increase recommended by the Parks and Recreation Board is approved by the city council.

All admission fees for city pools would be increased 15 cents under the recommended fee structure, the first rate increase for the pools in about five years.

Parks director John Alford said the increase was necessary because "operating expenses have gone up" and so the parks department can begin paying lifeguards more money.

The below minimum wage salary paid lifeguards, as well as other factors, have led to serious difficulties for the city in securing lifeguards for this year's pool season.

The pools lost money last year, Alford said. Although Maxey and Clapp pools operated at a profit, Rodgers pool broke even and the Simmons and Woods pools were "money losers," he said.

The rate increase "is not going to make us any money," Alford said, "it's going to lose us less."

With the increased rates, Alford said, the city pools would "still be considerably cheaper than private pools."

Also at the meeting, board members denied a request by Laurie A. Walker to use the Municipal Tennis Center at no charge to raise funds for the Lubbock Chapter of the American Diabetes Association.

"Nobody gets to use the tennis center for free," Alford said, and the Parks Board has a policy against allowing any person or organization to reserve all 12 tennis courts at once.

The board approved the recommendation of the Senior Citizen Title VII Nutrition Council that Mae Simmons Senior Citizens Center be enlarged to become a central senior citizens facility for East Lubbock.

Parks Department staff members were instructed to seek out funds for such a facility, probably from Community Development Block Grant funds.

Board members elected Phil Hoel chairman, succeeding Henry Huneke, who asked not to be renamed to the board. Robert Sweazy was elected to succeed Hoel as vice chairman.

Board members recommended an athletic complex under construction north of Loop 289 and west of Texas Instruments be named the Yellowhouse Canyon Athletic Park.

A house being remodeled for a party house in the Buddy Holly area of the Canyon Lakes, commonly known as the Manicapelli House after its last residents, should be called the Landwer Party House after its original builders, the board decided.

Judge Turns Down Motion For Vester

Judge Robert C. Wright Tuesday denied a new trial motion for convicted murderer Gary Lynn Vester after hearing testimony in 137th District Court by two prosecutors and former Criminal District Attorney Alton Griffin.

Defense attorneys Grady Terrill and Mackey Hancock based their motion in the hour-long Tuesday afternoon hearing on mention of a pistol in the trial as a possible murder weapon. They claim neither they nor the jury were told that ballistics tests conducted last year indicated the pistol was not the death weapon.

Griffin testified that a positive identification of Vester was never made by the 23-year-old woman companion of victim Robert Rios Rivera before she identified Vester in three hypnosis sessions later.

Rivera was killed April 1, 1978, in a field east of Lubbock.

Griffin said a capital murder charge would have been filed then if a positive identification had been made.

Prosecutors argued that how and when identification was made is an important issue. Judge Wright, however, ruled in a pre-trial hearing that Vester was identified before the woman was hypnotized, and hypnosis therefore was not a crucial factor in the case.

Former Deputy Sheriff Ed Barclay testified during the trial that Vester was previously identified but that hypnosis was used to seek a calmer identification for use in trial.

Prosecutors Rick Howell and Mark McBride testified in the hearing that they did not know during the trial that the pistol taken by deputies from the Vester home had been tested and found not to be the murder weapon.

Howell said he understood that the tested pistol was one taken from another suspect in the case.

Vester was found guilty of the slaying in early April and sentenced to 50 years in the penitentiary by a 137th District Court jury.

Terrill said after the hearing that the conviction is being appealed.

Judge Wright formally passed sentence on Vester after the hearing was finished.

Ray Fitzgerald To Make Stop

Ray V. Fitzgerald, administrator of the Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service in Washington D.C., will keynote the annual meeting of American Cotton Growers at 2:30 p.m. Thursday in the board room here of Farmers Cooperative Compress.

ACG is the farmer cooperative whose 3,000 members own and operate a denim mill at Littlefield that manufactures more than 20-million linear yards of heavyweight, indigo-dyed, finished denim annually. The cooperative's principal customer is Levi Strauss & Co.

Fitzgerald is head of the government agency in the U.S. Department of Agriculture that administers federal programs covering various commodities including cotton.

The cooperative is in the midst of its most successful financial year, said L. C. Unfred of New Home, president.

Members recently received $3¼-million in cash payouts as progress payments covering the past two seasons. To date, members already have received nine cents per pound above Commodity Credit Corp. loan values on the 1978 crop. Additional cash payments on the 1978 crop are anticipated.

Feathers Bill Questioned

COLUMBUS, Ohio (UPI) — A bill passed by the Ohio House and now in the Senate would allow American Indians to obtain bird feathers for cultural and religious ceremonies, but some lawmakers have reservations about the bill.

Rep. Edward J. Orlett, D-Dayton, said 6,500 American Indians living in Ohio cannot, because of a legal technicality, obtain feathers and other parts of certain non-game birds, such as hawks, for their ceremonies.

"If any of you want to make sport of this, I caution you...two Indians and this paleface are going to deal with you," said Orlett. He referred to Reps. Harry Malott, D-Mt. Orab, and Clifton Skeen, D-Akron, each one-quarter Indian.

Rep. Alan E. Norris, R-Westerville, ridiculed the bureaucracy accompanying the feather permit.

After furnishing proof he is at least one-quarter American Indian or a member of a recognized tribe, an applicant would have to await processing for 30 days.

City Receives $58,020 In Liquor Tax

In this quarter's mixed drink tax remittance, the City of Lubbock will receive $58,020, part of $5.2 million being rebated statewide.

The $58,020 is 15 percent of the $386,806 in total tax revenue the city collected from mixed drink sales from January through March.

The county took in $391,175, and its remittance will total $58,676. The City of Slaton, also in Lubbock County, collected $1,116 in mixed drink tax revenues, and it will receive back $167.

Texas cities and counties receive a 15 percent rebate of the tax collected on mixed drinks sold within their boundaries. The tax is collected by the Alcoholic Beverage Commission and the rebate is issued by the state comptroller's office.

Mixed drink sales statewide for this year's first quarter totaled more than $180 million. A total of $5.2 million will be rebated to 200 counties and 354 cities.

The balance of the tax money collected, $12.8 million, will go to the state's general revenue fund.

South Plains counties that received rebates include Andrews, $746; Bailey, $312; Castro, $837; Cochran, $95; Cottle, $64; Crosby, $80; Dawson, $170; Floyd, $198; Hale, $4,713; Hockley, $1,148; Howard, $3,715; Lamb, $1,095; Midland, $24,602; Mitchell, $235; Scurry, $1,805; and Terry, $2,230.

Remittances also will go to these South Plains cities: Andrews, $746; Dimmitt, $129; Nazareth, $134; Plainview, $3,361; Levelland, $692; Big Spring, $3,302; Littlefield, $678; Midland, $21,681; Colorado City, $192; Snyder, $1,588; and Brownfield, $1,317.

Reverend's Charges Rejected By Council

SALISBURY, Rhodesia (AP) — The Executive Council has rejected the Rev. Ndabaningi Sithole's charge of "gross irregularities" in Rhodesia's national elections.

Sithole, whose party won only 12 of the 72 seats reserved for blacks in Parliament, had demanded a review of the five-day election that ended April 21.

But Prime Minister Ian Smith and the two other Council members, Bishop Abel Muzorewa and Chief Jeremiah Chirau, told Sithole to submit his case to the Electoral Advisory Commission and then the High Court.

Muzorewa's party won 51 seats in Parliament and he is slated to be Rhodesia's first black prime minister. Smith's party got the 28 seats reserved for whites, and Chief Kayisa Ndweni's party got nine.

Latin Unrest Just 'Another Problem'?

Second Of A Three-Part Series

EDITORS' NOTE — Two of the major complaints of Latin baseball players is that they are not treated fairly by management and that there are no Latins in high managment positions. Part II of a three part series examines the relationship of baseball management with Latin players.

By DAN SEWELL
AP Sports Writer

Between the white lines of major league baseball diamonds, there are more Latin-born players than ever before. But the Latinization of baseball does not extend to the executive suites.

To most of what could be called the Lords of Baseball — the executives and the managers — the apparent increased sensitivity of Latin players is merely another manifestation of an era of general player militancy.

"I don't think players are qualified to talk about what the front office does," Montreal Manager Dick Williams said. "A team takes ballplayers who are black, brown, white, green, purple or yellow. You get the best talent you can get."

"It's absolutely erroneous to say that Latin players are treated any more fairly or less fairly than any other players," said Dodger Vice President Al Campanis. "There aren't any teams screening players on the basis of whether they're Latin or Spanish. We certainly don't."

"I'm sure there are a lot of Polish players who are unhappy today. There seem to be a lot of unhappy players today," said Chicago White Sox President Bill Veeck. "It's not wise to generalize about players. Take a player like Minnie Minoso, who I don't think was unhappy a day in his life.

"I will say this," Veeck added. "Whenever you have such an abrupt change in culture, I think the possibility of a player being unhappy is increased."

Sometimes they are so unhappy that they look at a set of circumstances and see things that aren't there, according to baseball's hierarchy.

For example, charges that some teams have Latin quotas or that Latin players don't get the same chances as American players, can be explained, the baseball officials say.

"It's a matter of policy. Some clubs just don't scout that much in Latin America. They feel they can get sufficient talent here," Campanis said. "Clubs

SuperSonics Run Suns Off First-Game Court

SEATTLE (AP) — Running with the basketball is what the Phoenix Suns do best.

On Tuesday night, however, the Suns found themselves romping up and down the court not only without the ball, but on the heels of the Seattle players who had it.

When the opening game of the National Basketball Association's Western Conference championship series was over, the Sonics had beaten the Suns at their own game, running Phoenix off the Coliseum court 108-93.

It was a tenacious Seattle defense, led by the two Johnsons, Dennis and John, and control of the boards that denied Phoenix the lightning quick pace it prefers.

John Johnson harassed Walter Davis and limited the smooth shooting 6-foot-6 forward to just 13 points, nine below his team-leading playoff average.

Dennis Johnson played guard Paul Westphal belly-to-belly and the Suns' leading overall scorer wasn't a factor in the end, either. Westphal had 13 points on five-of-13 sooting. "I can't stop Paul every night," said Dennis Johnson, named earlier in the week to the NBA's all-defensive team. "My main objective isn't to stop Paul, it's to stop Phoenix."

Seattle's objective is to stop the Suns in Game 2 of the best-of-seven series Friday night in the Kingdome.

"One game don't make a series," reasoned John Johnson, who dished out a game-high nine assists, pulled down eight rebounds and scored seven points. "I'm sure they'll come much better prepared and play better Friday."

Phoenix Coach John MacLeod conceded the game was lost on the boards, where Seattle outrebounded the Suns 56-45, including a 20-12 edge on the offensive end.

"You can't let anyone have a lot of second shots," MacLeod said. "They are physical and got to the boards well. They got a lot of offensive boards. They're just strong."

He said Davis and Westphal simply had poor games.

"Everything's fine with Walter. He didn't have a particularly good game, but he isn't the only one," MacLeod said. "Paul may have pushed his shots a little bit. He's a much better shot than that.

"I think we'll bounce back."

Lonnie Shelton scored 15 points and Gus Williams added 14 as Seattle raced to a 52-44 first-half lead. Jack Sikma's 10 third-period points broke the game open and Williams pumped in 11 of his game-high 27 points in the fourth quarter as the Sonics won going away before a sellout crowd of 14,098.

"I thought it was a very consistent game for us," said Sikma, who finished with 16 points and 11 rebounds. "The whole team did a good job defensively."

The Suns shot 41 percent for the game to Seattle's 46 percent.

Mittys Rejoice! Freed Homers

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Somewhere, a smile creases the face of Walter Mitty. His alter ego in the major leagues, Roger Freed, has struck again.

Freed, a 32-year-old baseball vagabond, recorded another blow for the armchair athlete when he pounded a dramatic grand slam home run Tuesday night.

It wasn't a wallop to be unexpected of today's highly paid, abundantly talented and sometimes blase player. This one was theatrics for the blue-collar fan.

Suggested Freed, the favorite of bleachers denizens among St. Louis Cardinals partisans, "I guess it's because they identify with me.

'I think they know how hard I have to work. They know it's not all just a game of talent. They see me out there — far from perfect — and in me they see a little bit of themselves."

To Freed, the Bunyanesque son of a carnival worker, the impact of his swing against the Houston Astros also carried redemption.

Five times the part-time player had been called on to pinch-hit during the early season. Each time he had returned to the bench hitless. And his doubts were beginning to multiply.

"It's impossible to explain the feeling," he said following his two-out blast in the 11th inning off Houston left-hander Joe Sambito. "I'd begun to feel like I was dead wood."

The odyssey of Freed's baseball career started in 1966, his first of five successive minor league seasons. He was rewarded by a brief stint with the Baltimore Orioles at the end of 1970 but was traded to the Philadelphia Phillies before the start of the next year.

He played 191 seldom-spectacular games for the Phillies in 1971 and 1972. Then he became the chattel of the Cincinnati Reds, for whom he played six games in 1974.

He sought his release and was granted it rather than return to the minors in 1975, a year he spent with Monterrey of the Mexican League. A season later, he was rediscovered when he slugged 42 American Association home runs at Denver.

Vern Rapp, a former Denver pilot deposed a year ago as St. Louis' manager, was an avid Freed booster. Used part time by Rapp in 1977, Freed responded by hitting .398 in 83 official at-bats.

Last year he belted two April home runs, then skidded to .239 as a hitter although maintaining a productive .379 mark in pinch-hit roles. This spring, clearly, his job was in jeopardy.

By homering Tuesday night, Freed resurrected his faith in his own ability and rekindled his dream of being able to contribute in a major league uniform.

"I like it in St. Louis. I want to stay here," he said later. "I like my job. It might not be the greatest in baseball, but I want to do it well."

Braves Ace Phil Niekro Gets 200th Career Win

By The Associated Press

A lot of Phil Niekro's knucklers have danced around home plate since he signed his first professional baseball contract in 1959. Ah, yes, he remembers it well.

"My biggest thrill was when I first signed at the age of 19," says the ace right-hander of the Atlanta Braves. "That was the biggest thrill I ever had in my life — just getting the chance to play major league ball."

Niekro has played major league ball extremely well and Tuesday night hit the lofty 200-victory plateau with a 5-2 decision over the Pittsburgh Pirates.

"I feel great out there," noted the 40-year-old pitcher who has posted a lifetime 200-175 mark with the Braves. "I still like to pitch."

Ironically, Niekro's 200th triumph came in the city of Pittsburgh where he won his first major league game, in May of 1965. Among the 5,122 spectators at Three Rivers Stadium was his mother, Ivy, from nearby Lansing, Ohio.

"When your mother is sitting in the stands and she brought you up and cared for you for some 20 years, it's a good feeling to do it in front of her," said the 40-year-old right-hander, who tossed a seven-hitter.

In the other National League games, the San Francisco Giants beat the Philadelphia Phillies 7-0; the St. Louis Cardinals edged the Houston Astros 7-6 in 11 innings; the Chicago Cubs whipped the Cincinnati Reds 5-1; the San Diego Padres outscored the New York Mets 10-5 and the Montreal Expos stopped the Los Angeles Dodgers 7-3.

Niekro's historic victory was fashioned with the help of two home runs by Gary Matthews. His second homer, an inside-the-park shot leading off the ninth, broke a 2-2 tie and the Braves added two insurance runs on a sacrifice fly by Mike Lum and an RBI single by Glenn Hubbard.

Niekro managed to pitch a complete game despite numbness in the main pitching knuckle on his right index finger.

"I had a cramp and I couldn't straighten out my knuckleball finger," he said. "It just froze up on me."

Niekro said the stiffness extended into the palm of his hand and down into his forearm.

"That's the first time that ever happened to me," he said. "Maybe it was because I wasn't wearing a long sweatshirt and it was pretty cool out there."

Giants 7, Phillies 0

Terry Whitfield hit an inside-the-park home run, singled and drove in three runs, while Bob Knepper pitched a five-hitter to lead San Francisco over Philadelphia.

It was the first victory in the last game of a frustrating road trip for the Giants, who for the third time since they moved from New York to the West Coast city had lost eight straight games.

"I didn't hit the ball well," said Whitfield of his two-run homer in the third. "He (Phillies starter Nino Espinosa) got the pitch in on me. I never looked at the ball. I was watching coach Dave Bristol at third all the way. When I got to the dugout they told me what happened."

Cardinals 7, Astros 6

Pinch-hitter Roger Freed slugged a bases-loaded home run with two out in the bottom of the 11th inning, powering St. Louis over Houston. The dramatic hit wiped out a three-run rally by Houston in the top of the 11th that had given the Astros a 6-3 lead.

Freed's homer, his first career grand slam, was his first hit of the year in six pinch-hit appearances. It pinned the loss on Astros left-hander Joe Sambito, who earlier worked out of a bases-loaded jam in the 10th.

Cubs 5, Cardinals 1

Bill Buckner smashed home runs his first two times at bat and Ivan DeJesus drove in two runs with a second-inning single as Chicago beat Cincinnati.

Buckner got both homers off Cincinnati strter Fred Norman, a first-inning shot that just cleared the right-fiel wall and a longer bal in the third inning that bounced off the second-level facade at Riverfront Stadium.

Padres 10, Mets 5

Gene Tenace and Barry Evans drove in two runs apiece with a pair of bases-loaded singles, leading San Diego over New York.

Gaylord Perry worked six innings to earn his 270th major league victory. He surrendered nine hits, including a three-run homer by Doug Flynn, but struck out 10 Mets.

Expos 7, Dodgers 3

Run-scoring singles by Rodney Scott and Warren Cromartie in the fifth inning helped Montreal beat Los Angeles for the Expos' seventh straight victory. The rally gave the Expos a 4-2 lead and eventually proved to be their winning runs.

The winner was Bill Lee, who won his third game without a defeat this season with late-inning relief help from Elias Sosa.

Koosman Wins Another

By The Associated Press

Jerry Koosman has left Losersville, N.Y., behind him and is now a resident of (a) Victoria, Minn., and (b) the victory column for the Minnesota Twins.

The veteran left-hander, who managed only a 3-15 record with the punchless last-place New York Mets in 1978, notched his fifth consecutive victory with seventh-inning help from Mike Marshall Tuesday night as the Twins nipped the Toronto Blue Jays 3-2 and climbed into first place in the American League West.

Ironically, the Twins edged past California when the Angels were beaten 12-8 in 11 innings by the New York Yankees, who had to bring Tommy John in to bail out a shellshocked bullpen. John joined Koosman as 5-0 pitchers with some clutch relief.

The red-hot Baltimore Orioles, meanwhile, took over first place in the AL East with a 3-1 victory over the Seattle Mariners while the Boston Red Sox were stranding 18 runners and losing to the Oakland A's 7-5.

Ken Landreaux, who singled home a second-inning Minnesota run, hit a tie-breaking homer in the sixth. Koosman went six innings-plus, scattering nine hits and striking out five before giving way to Marshall.

Despite his unbeaten record, Koosman was far from satisfied.

"There are times like tonight when I didn't have my control and didn't know where the ball was going," said the 35-year-old southpaw, who forced the Mets to trade him to his native Minnesota.

"I'm not throwing the ball where I want to. When I reach my peak, or when I reach the point where I am satisfied, is when I'm going out there and throwing the ball where I want to. The record is just the end result of what these guys are really doing. These guys are doing a great job behind me."

Yankees 12, Angels 8

Bucky Dent, Juan Beniquez, Thurman Munson, Lou Piniella and Graig Nettles delivered run-scoring singles with two out in the 11th inning as the Yankees snapped a five-game losing streak. Piniella and Beniquez homered as the Yankees kayoed Frank Tanana in the first inning and built a 7-0 lead after three. The Angels finally tied it 7-7 with four runs in the bottom of the ninth against three relievers before John, normally a starter, came on and struck out Rod Carew and Don Baylor to leave two runners stranded.

"I can pitch out of the bullpen here and there," said John, who volunteered to do double duty when relief ace Rich Gossage went on the disabled list. "I have talked to Bob Lemon about it. I've had to throw every day since my tendon transplant in 1975. I wasn't expecting to throw tonight. I threw 50 pitches before the game."

Orioles 3, Mariners 1

Ken Singleton homered in the first inning and Rich Dauer and Eddie Murray drilled RBI singles in the sixth as the streaking Orioles posted their 12th victory in the last 13 games behind the six-hit pitching of Dennis Martinez. Loser Byron McLaughlin had retired 14 batters in a row until Dave Skaggs walked with one out in the sixth and Al Bumbry doubled to set up the RBI hits by Dauer and Murray.

A's 7, Red Sox 5

Jeff Newman delivered a pinch two-run double and Dave Revering sent Oakland ahead with a two-run single during a five-run seventh-inning rally. The Red Sox outhit the A's 17-11 but left 18 runners on base — two short of the AL record — and dropped one-half game behind Baltimore in the AL East. They left the bases loaded four times, including the ninth inning, while the A's stranded only four baserunners.

Royals 9, Rangers 3

Darrell Porter and Frank White homered to back the combined seven-hit pitching of Paul Splittorff and Marty Pattin. Splittorff yielded only a two-out double to Bill Sample in the third inning. Pattin took over at the start of the sixth when Splittorff developed a sore back.

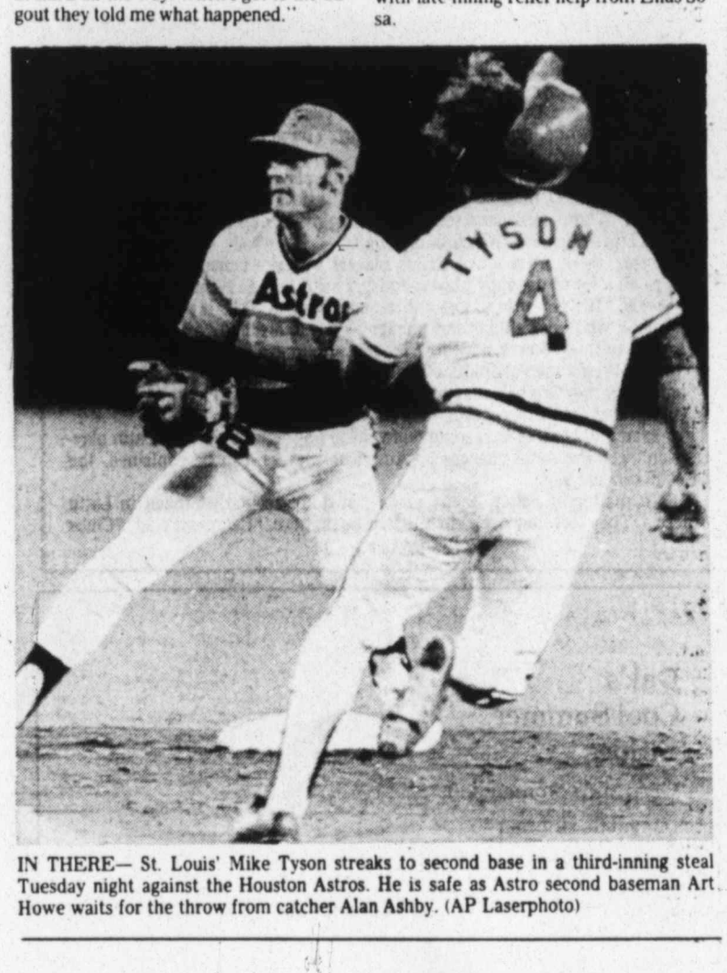

White led off the bottom of the first with a homer off Jon Matlack, who was jolted for five hits and six runs while lasting only 21-3 innings in his first appearance of the season after coming off the disabled list.

Indians 3, Brewers 1

Rick Manning drove in all the Cleveland runs with a single and a homer while Mike Paxton gained the victory with seventh-inning help from Sid Monge. Manning's first home run of the season followed a single by Jim Norris in the third inning off Lary Sorensen.

Tigers 5, White Sox 2

Lance Parrish and Jerry Morales hit successive home runs off Ken Kravec in the eighth inning to seal Detroit's victory. Steve Baker was the winner with seventh-inning relief from Jack Billingham. The Tigers jumped to a 3-0 lead in the third inning when Lou Whitaker drove in a run with a sacrifice fly, Steve Kemp singled a run home and scored on a double by Jason Thompson.

Few Latins Allowed In Top Positions

like us. Baltimore and Pittsburgh have been forerunners in this area.

"But other clubs don't approach it. It costs you money to send the scouts; for the transportation, the motels. Let's say a team like St. Louis or California might decide it's too expensive for the returns," he said.

"You can compare them with the California or Arizona players here," said Yankees Manager Bob Lemon. "A lot of these boys play baseball the year-round, and they reach their peak earlier than a boy from up North.

"When they say that a lot of young players don't get a chance and get cut, they're not taking this into consideration," Lemon said.

At any rate, as Reggie Jackson, a black of Latin ancestry, pointed out, "Latins and some black players believe there are quotas. But that would be very, very difficult to document. Look at Pittsburgh, where almost the whole team is black or Latin. And when I played at Oakland, sometimes our entire lineup was black or Latin."

Latin players look in the front offices and see no Latins in crucial positions, and they look in the dugouts and see no Latin managers.

Again, explainable:

"There hasn't been a great number of people with a long enough duration since the influx began in the last 18 or 20 years," Veeck said. "There aren't enough jobs for everyone who wants one."

"I think as you see the people build up coaching experience, you'll see Latin managers," Astros' Manager Bill Virdon said. "I think they're very capable of managing, but they can't expect jobs just because they were players."

But Veeck admitted, "The language barrier does create certain problems."

The increase in Latin-born players (11 percent of the total this year, compared to 7 percent in 1974) has resulted in more Latin coaches and even a handful of front-office middle-management figures, such as Ruben Amaro, the Phillies' Latin America coordinator.

"The Latin coaches are very important. Felipe Alou has done an outstanding job for us. The Latin coaches can communicate with both the blacks and Latin players well," Williams said.

So far, Preston Gomez, one-time manager at San Francisco, is the first Latin to become a fulltime manager. Cuban Mike Gonzalez served as an interim manager. "We don't have many coaches on the major league level, but I think that is changing. I didn't have any problems when I managed because I am Cuban," Gomez said.

There are several Latin-born players who have gone into coaching and their names are often tossed around as major league managerial prospects. They include Felipe Alou, who managed Montreal's Class A club to a pennant and AA team to second place, in addition to managing in the winter leagues; Ozzie Virgil, in his 10th year of major league coaching and with six seasons of winter league managing, and Jose Pagan, beginning his first season as managing in Puerto Rico.

"I know how to handle the players. Some day I would like to manage in the big leagues," Pagan said. "If I didn't think they would give me a chance, I wouldn't be here."

The faith in baseball exhibited by people such as Gomez, Pagan and Virgil contrasts with that of most current Latin-born players. Baseball's officials insist that there is little reason for Latin resentments, and that apparent inconsistencies all exist for logical reasons.

But regardless of the reasons, today's Latin players fervently believe that few baseball clubs have done anything to ease any of their special problems; things such as the language and culture gap, and the disparity between the salaries, endorsement contracts and publicity of Latins and that of the American players.

Tomorrow: The Latins' future

Derby Trainer Believes Flying Paster Peaking

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — Trainer Gordon Campbell firmly believes Flying Paster is just approaching his peak. He's also hoping Kentucky Derby favorite Spectacular Bid may have peaked too soon.

"Flying Paster definitely is the best horse I've ever trained," said the 60-year-old Campbell of the California-bred who figures to go off as the second choice in Saturday's 105th Derby for 3-year-olds. "And he's going to get better."

Unlike his counterpart, trainer Bud Delp of Spectacular Bid, Campbell is a man of few words. But he fumes a little when the subject of California horses' poor showings at Churchill Downs in recent years is raised. Decidedly in 1962 was the last California-bred to win here while Majestic Prince in 1969 and Affirmed last year campaigned in California before coming East to win the Derby.

"California horses have done it before and California horses will do it again," said Campbell, a native of Canada. "There's no reason why horses from anywhere can't win the Derby. The reason some California horses didn't do well in the past was that they weren't good enough. This colt is good enough."

The son of Gummo has won 10 of 14 career starts, including the Santa Anita and Hollywood derbies. Don Pierce, who has ridden Flying Paster in all his outings, has been riding for 28 years and will be trying for his first Kentucky Derby win in four starts.

Campbell feels Pierce's experience could help his colt beat Spectacular Bid, who will have oft-criticized Ronnie Franklin up. Franklin, 19, has been riding only since early last year.

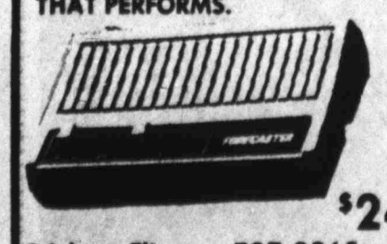

"I think I have an edge with Don riding because he's going to know how the race is going to be run in the first eighth of a mile. It makes no difference to Flying Paster how the race is run. He's capable of adapting to any situation."

Spectacular Bid, a Kentucky-bred coming off a solid winter in Florida and a Blue Grass Stakes victory last week, has won 12 of 14 starts and figures to go for the lead at the start of Saturday's 1¼-mile race, worth $200,000-added.

"If we set the pace," Delp said, "we'll stay there all the way. I'm confident, but I'm prepared to lose. Don't worry about it."

Spectacular Bid worked five furlongs Tuesday in 1:00 2-5. "This was a little quicker than his work before the Blue Grass, that was 1:02 2-5, so that means he is 10 lengths better than he was at Keeneland," said Delp.

Sixers Hope Spurs Blow Playoff Lead

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Philadelphia Coach Billy Cunningham knows what it's like to be a part of a team that blows a 3-1 lead in a best-of-seven NBA playoff series. He sincerely hopes the San Antonio Spurs get a chance to experience that feeling tonight.

The Spurs, who have frittered away a 3-1 lead in the Eastern Conference semifinal series, host the 76ers tonight for the decisive seventh game.

Cunningham was a member of the 1968 76ers, who went ahead of Boston 3-1, but then lost three consecutive games, including the seventh game in Philadelphia. That was one of only two times that has happened in the 33-year history of the NBA.

He was asked Tuesday what it feels like.

"There's no question you start feeling a little doubt in yourselves," he said. "You think about the comfortable lead and how things were going to be so nice and easy.

"A big key is the way they (the Spurs) get started in the game (tonight). They have to get a good start to regain their confidence," he added.

The Spurs won three of the first four games, including one in Philadelphia, and returned home last Thursday, appearing to be a cinch to wrap up the series in five games.

But the 76ers thrashed the lethargic Spurs 120-97 that night and won 92-90 on Sunday in Philadelphia.

"We can't look back," said San Antonio Coach Doug Moe. "It doesn't do you any good. At this point, we just have to go after it. I think we're still pretty confident."

The Spurs practiced Tuesday without starting center Billy Paultz, who has a pulled hamstring, and forward Allan Bristow, who was at the hospital with his pregnant wife.

The 6-foot-11, 240-pound Paultz is "doubtful" for tonight's game and Moe said he'll start pencil-thin Mike Green, 6-10 and barely 200 pounds, against Philadelphia's massive 6-11, 260-pound Darryl Dawkins. Bristow is expected to play.

It's a key game in another way for the Spurs, who have yet to win an ABA or NBA playoff series since moving to San Antonio from Dallas in 1973. In fact, the Dallas-San Antonio franchise has qualified for the playoffs 11 of its 12 years, but has won only one series, the first one in 1968.

"We can't deny the past. It's staring us right in the face," said guard James Silas, the Spurs captain. "The pressure's on. We have to respond to it. If we lose, people will say the same things about how we get in the playoffs and choke."

The winner of the series advances to meet Washington in a best-of-seven series for the Eastern Conference title.

Tech Netters Gain Midland Prep Star

By CHUCK McDONALD
Avalanche-Journal Sports Staff

Midland's Jeff Bramlett says that he always considered Lubbock "almost a second home," and on Tuesday Bramlett began plans to move to here on a more permanent basis.

Bramlett signed a national letter-of-intent with Texas Tech tennis coach Mark Hamilton in an affair that made both Bramlett and Hamilton very happy.

"I talked to all the other Southwest conference schools," said Bramlett. "But my family has always lived in West Texas, my sister went to school at Tech and I've always liked Lubbock."

In fact, Bramlett was in Lubbock over the weekend as he teamed with Pierre De Chaud to capture the Class AAAA regional doubles crown. Currently he is the sixth-ranked player in the state but he has beaten every one of the top players except Paul Crozier — ranked No. 1.

"He (Bramlett) could turn out to be real good," said Hamilton. "He'll definitely play for us next year. There's no question about that — it's just a matter of where (in the lineup)."

The Raiders lose two players, David Crissey and Harrison Bowes, from this spring's 10-14 squad. And Hamilton has said that they will sign at least two more players besides Bramlett this year.

Hamilton is currently talking to another Midland netter, Jose Rivera, who played for Midland College this spring. According to Hamilton, Rivera may be one of the best juco players in the nation.

"I'm real impressed with Rivera," said Hamilton. "He could step in here and help us right away."

Bramlett didn't play tennis last summer, and according to Hamilton, that hurt him during the fall season and kept him from being ranked even higher.

"But he's going to play a lot this summer," he added. "He'll definitely be ready to play for us."

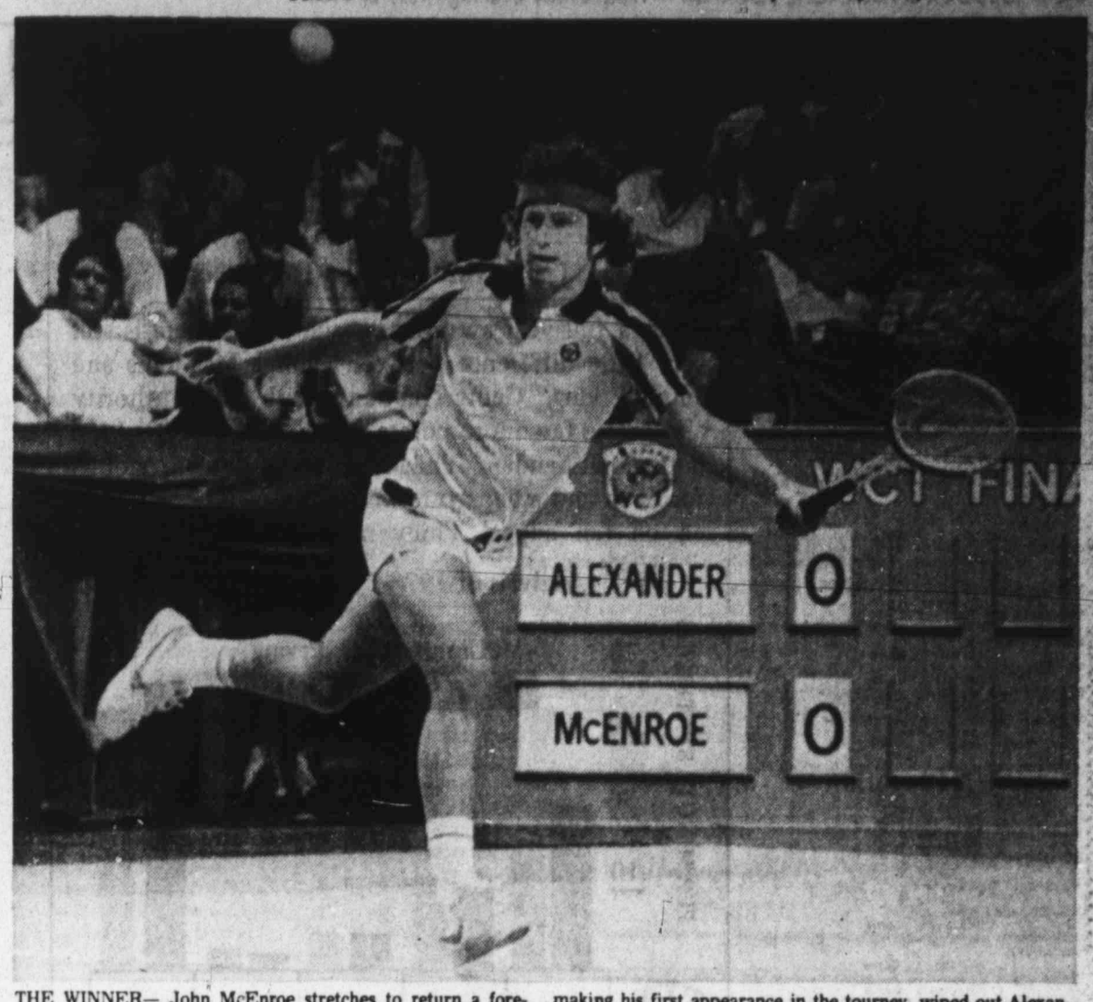

The Tech netters were 1-8 in SWC play this spring and 10-14 overall. But that record actually shows a marked improvement for the Raiders who hadn't won a SWC dual match since 1977, until they whipped Baylor 9-0 last week.

And in the SWC point standings the Raiders finished with 16 points — they had only 2 last year.

"We did exactly eight times better this year than last year," said Hamilton. "With some good recruiting we can do even better next year."

And at least one Raider netter (Bramlett) has high hopes.

"I think the team will really be good next year," said Bramlett. "I've talked to Coach Hamilton about it, and I consider Tech to have one of the best teams in the state. They could be in the top three in the Southwest Conference. Tech is improving."

THE WINNER— John McEnroe stretches to return a forehand during his Tuesday match with John Alexander in the quarterfinals of the WCT tournament in Dallas. McEnroe, making his first appearance in the tourney, wiped out Alexander, 6-4, 6-0, 6-2. (AP Laserphoto)

Fired-Up McEnroe Takes Win

DALLAS (AP) — John McEnroe Jr., equal to the best in the tennis world?

Australian John Alexander thinks so after the lesson he received Tuesday night in the opening quarterfinal match of the World Championship of Tennis Finals.

"John played tremendous tennis — equal to the best I've ever played against and that includes (Rod) Laver, (Ken) Rosewall, (Bjorn) Borg and (Jimmy) Connors," said Alexander after a straight set 6-4, 6-0, 6-2 whipping. "McEnroe certainly is in that category the way he played."

The saucy 20-year-old McEnroe, simmering because officials moved his match up a day when Connors requested an extra 24-hours' injury rest, soaked up Alexander's powerful serve with crackling backhand winners.

McEnroe, the youngest player in WCT history, never lost serve. The only thing he lost was the crowd when he exchanged words with a linesman in the third game of the first set.

"I wasn't happy that the crowd was against me but I'll try every point anyway," said McEnroe.

'Mrs. Lloyd' In Game

MADRID (AP) — Two weeks after marrying British Davis Cup player John Lloyd, Chris Evert checks back into the world of tennis seeking her 119th consecutive win on clay and the United States' fourth straight Federation Cup victory.

But the 24-year-old Miss Evert, who flew to Madrid Tuesday after spending her honeymoon in husband John's London apartment, tennis out of sight and out of mind, will not be playing for the United States, top-seeded in the 32-nation cup, until the semifinals.

"She hasn't thought about the game since her wedding," said Vicki Berner, the U.S. captain. "She's got to concentrate again and get back down to her game."

When the newlywed does make her tennis debut as Mrs. Lloyd, she will be facing the winner of a second-round match between France and Italy. France, seeded seventh in the tournament, is expected to be a relatively easy winner.

Ranked second in the world behind Martina Navratilova, the Fort Lauderdale, Fla. woman has not lost a match on a clay court since bowing to Australia's Evonne Goolagong in Cincinnati in August, 1973.

Although she has been slightly off form in recent months, having won all the titles there are to be won and having met her new husband at last year's Wimbledon, she is not expected to see her record of 118 matches broken in Madrid.

"Chris and Tracy Austin," the 16-year-old girl from Rolling Hills, Calif, who will also play singles in the crucial final rounds, "are so steady on clay, I don't think there is anyone who can beat them," said Canadian Coach Josef Brabenec just before his team was wiped out of the tournament by second-seeded Australia Tuesday.

Qualifiers Meet Held Here

Curtis Conaway and Chuck Perry, both winners at last week's Region I-AAAA track competition, will compete in the state qualifiers' meet Saturday at Texas Tech.

The meet, which gets under way at 1 p.m. with the first field events, is sponsored by the Lubbock Independent School District, and according to meet director Pete Ragus, some of the top high school runners in the Panhandle and West Texas are expected to compete in the afternoon affair.

Running events will begin at 2:30 p.m. There will be no prelims and the athletes will be heated according to the times recorded at the regional meets, Ragus said.

Along with Conaway and Perry, state qualifiers in the 880-yard dash and high jump, respectively, other entrants include Estacado sprinter Robert Humphrey and speedster Jerry Isaacs of Dunbar.

Coaches interested in entering athletes can contact Ragus at the LISD office, 747-2641.

LCC Cancels MSU Series, Adds Cowboys

This weekend's scheduled Texas Athletic Conference baseball games between Lubbock Christian and Midwestern State have been cancelled, according to LCC coach Larry Hays.

However, Hays has arranged two warmup games for the Chaparrals to get them prepared for the District VIII tournament, which begins a three-day run in Arlington May 11.

LCC will host the Hardin-Simmons Cowboys at Chaparral Field at 12:30 p.m. Saturday in a doubleheader Saturday. The Chaps, currently ranked 10th in the nation, will bring a 37-20 record into the twinbill.

Rains Stop City Teams

Inclement weather conditions forced the cancellation of three local high school baseball games Tuesday afternoon.

Teams with scheduled makeup games today are Lubbock High's District 4-AAA game at Plainview and Estacado's 1-AAA bout at Levelland. The Westerners and Bulldogs will battle in a doubleheader.

Dunbar, scheduled to play Canyon here Tuesday, will host the Eagles in a single contest Thursday at 4 p.m.

Tech Sends Netters To TAIAW Action

DALLAS (Special) — Three women netters will represent Texas Tech at the state AIAW large college individual tennis tournament here today.

Debbie Donley, Karen Schuchard and Peggy O'Neil will compete in singles play, with Miss Donley and Miss Schuchard teaming in doubles.

For Miss Donley, a senior from St. Louis, it could be the last tournament as a Raider unless she advances to regional action. The tournament will follow a single-consolation format and will continue through Saturday.

Miss Donley posts a 25-19 singles record. Miss Schuchard stands 22-20 for the year in singles competition, while Miss Donley and Miss Schuchard hold an 18-10 doubles record. Miss O'Neil, who has played No. 3 singles, has an 18-21 record.

Palomino Loop Set

The Palomino League, a new baseball group for 17-18-year-old athletes, is currently being formed.

Registration for individuals wishing to compete in the new league will be tonight from 7-9 p.m. at Evans Junior High cafeteria.

Interested individuals should contact Jerry Burgess for more information.

Dr. J, McGinnis Still a Dead Heat

After a full year away from each other, there is still very little difference between George McGinnis and Julius Erving. George rebounds with more authority and gets a few more points per minute, but Dr. J is a better ball handler. Philadelphia was not big enough for both and a departure was nearly mandatory. Based on fan appeal, Philly made the right decision.

Who'll Go First? Draft Starts Thursday

By GARY MYERS
AP Sports Writer

"Basically, there are two positions that it's hardest for a rookie to start at — quarterback and offensive line," says Ray Perkins, himself a rookie of sorts. "I don't think you can win with a rookie quarterback. It's never been done."

Perkins is in his first season as head coach of the New York Giants, a team in almost desperate need of a quarterback. None of the three they have — Joe Pisarcik, Jerry Golsteyn and Randy Dean — has shown the intangible quality that makes a quarterback and the team he plays for into a big winner.

Thus, when the time comes for the Giants to make their first pick in Thursday's National Football League draft, Perkins and new General Manager George Young are likely to go for the "Throwin' Samoan," Jack Thompson of Washington State.

He's the biggest name among available college quarterbacks, one of the glamour positions in the game. Thompson is a 6-foot-3, 215-pounder and basically is a drop-back quarterback, the kind most pro teams look for. He has had a series of shoulder problems in his college career, but that doesn't figure to keep him from being the first quarterback drafted.

There is, however, something else that might make him only No. 2 at his position — Steve Fuller from Clemson. He's 6-4 and 205 pounds and the two-time Atlantic Coast Conference Player of the Year. But he's not as well known. And he's not the classic drop-back passer since his job was to direct an option-oriented offense.

But, then, there are a few other quarterbacks drifting around the NFL who weren't classic drop-back types in college — namely Richard Todd, Roger Staubach, Fran Tarkenton, Billy Kilmer and Steve Grogan among others.

Furthermore, a number of insiders and experts — Gil Brandt, the master builder of the Dallas Cowboys, among them — believes Fuller will be better sooner. Brandt cites leadership and other intangibles.

Whether the Giants get a shot at Thompson or Fuller — or Phil Simms of Morehead State, Jeff Rutledge of Alabama, Rick Leach of Michigan State, Chuck Fusina of Penn State or any other quarterback, for that matter — depends on the Buffalo Bills and a few other teams.

Buffalo, with the No. 1 pick obtained in the trade that sent O.J. Simpson to San Francisco, is expected to choose Ohio State linebacker Tom Cousineau.

The Kansas City Chiefs have eyed Thompson, but they're expected to try and shore up the other end of the passing (and pass-blocking) game by taking tight end Kellen Winslow of Missouri.

Cincinnati is next, followed by Chicago, Buffalo again and Baltimore. It's unlikely any of these teams will use the pick on a quarterback.

With the seventh pick in the draft, the Giants are in a position to select a player who can step in and start. Whether Perkins is willing to make a selection for the future is questionable. The Giants, 6-10 last season, feel they are only a couple of players away from contention.

If the Giants pick Thompson, it may be an indication that Perkins and Young are looking to rebuild the team, rather than making an immediate push for the playoffs. Despite pressure from at least a few fans (who burned season tickets in the parking lot), Perkins and Young feel no pressure to win right away. They have long-term contracts.

Young, while not conceding that the Giants will take Thompson, all but admitted the choice will be used to pick either a running back, receiver or quarterback.

Should the Giants pass on Thompson, the top running backs are Charles Alexander of LSU, O.J. Anderson of Miami, Ted Brown of North Carolina State and Theotis Brown of UCLA. Jerry Butler of Clemson is the top receiver around, but he might be picked before the Giants' turn comes.

Grid Star Narrows Selections

JACKSONVILLE, Fla. (AP) — University of Miami star Ottis Anderson has a message that certain National Football League clubs should take under advisement before choosing in Thursday's draft.

"There are some teams I will not play for," Anderson said, specifying St. Louis and Cincinnati and adding that there are a few others that "probably know who they are right now. If they don't they'll find out when they try to sign me."

Anderson is widely expected to be a first-round draft choice.

The explosive, 6-foot-2, 210-pounder rushed for 1,268 yards in 1978, and finished his career with 3,333 yards, more than 1,500 yards ahead of the next-leading rusher in UM history.

He said, "Take Cincinnati and St. Louis. I don't want to play for them. They just don't pay enough money for me.

"I know my price (he didn't reveal it), and I'm awfully expensive. That's why teams like St. Louis and Cincinnati shouldn't even bother to draft me," he said in Florida Times-Union interview.

He said the Cardinals "lost Ike Harris, Terry Metcalf and Conrad Dobler because of money." Harris and Dobler were traded to New Orleans two years ago and Metcalf jumped to the Canadian Football League.

Louisiana State's Charles Alexander and North Carolina State's Ted Brown are the other top-rated running backs available in the draft.

"Let Cincinnati and St. Louis go ahead and take Alexander before me. I hope they take Alexander. Let them play for those teams," he said.

Anderson said he's been contacted by all 28 NFL clubs, and that St. Louis, Baltimore and the New York Giants seem to be the most interested.

An older brother, Marvin "Smoke" Anderson, played at Arkansas A&M and was said to have pro potential as a runner. He died of injures suffered when he dove into shallow water in a lake after the 1969 football season.

Coronado '9' Takes Sweep

HEREFORD — The Coronado Mustangs, behind the pitching of Gene Segrist and Russell Johnson, swept a high school doubleheader from Hereford Tuesday afternoon, winning the first game 7-4 and taking the nightcap 9-5.

The win kept the Ponies in the District 4-AAAA title chase with a 6-2 second-half mark. Coronado is now 19-8 for the year.

Meanwhile, the Herd splipped to 0-6 in loop play and 7-20 overall.

Segrist, who upped his mark to 7-3 on the year, went the distance in the first half as the Coronado offense backed him with five hits. The Herd, however, tagged Segrist with six hits.

Kevin Bunch, who was relieved by Norman Hill in the seventh inning, was saddled with the loss.

Donald Ewing had the only big blow of the game, collecting a home run off Bunch.

In the nightcap, Johnson limited Hereford to only four hits as he went the distance. Norman hill was the loser after giving up four CHS runs in the first inning.

Mahaffey Makes Trip

HOUSTON (AP) — John Mahaffey will be playing in pain this week when he tries a comeback in the $300,000 Houston Open Golf Tournament.

"Sure it hurts, it hurts like hell," the current PGA national champion said of a damaged left hand that has kept him out of action for the last three months. "But I'm going to play this week even if I shoot 100.

"I'm just going to tough it out. I'll play for a week or so and see what happens. I'm sick and tired of sitting at home."

Mahaffey won the Ben Hogan award last year for his dramatic comebackfrom injuies. He won the PGA, won again the following week, capped off the season with a victory in the World Cup, then opened the 1979 campaign with a triumph in the first tournament of the year, the Bob Hope.

A couple of weeks later, however, he injured the hand coming out of a bunker in the Bing Crosby tournament and hasn't played since. He attempted a comeback two weeks ago in the Tournament of Champions, tried a practice round at La Costa and found the hand was still too painful.

And it remained painful.

After hitting a shot from the practice range at the Woodlands Country Club Tuesday, Mahaffey gasped and bent over in pain.

Unable to practice for months, his hands have become soft. Despite the use of a golf glove, it was only a matter of minutes before he'd developed a bleeding blister on the palm of the left hand. Mahaffey taped a bandage across it and continued practice.

"I've just got to tough it out," he said again. "It's either that or put it in a cast for 6-8 weeks and I don't want to do that."

There's Never Been A Better Time, Or A Better Reason, To Change To Gas-Saving Goodyear Radials.

The energy crisis is here. We all have to start saving gas in every possible way.

One good way to begin is by changing to Goodyear radials. For it's a fact that radials do help save gas.

Belted radial construction stiffens the Goodyear tread. This enables our tires to roll like a hoop — with a significant reduction in rolling resistance when compared with bias or even bias-belted tires.

By making Goodyear radials easier rolling, we've also made them fuel efficient. The result — fuel savings that extend over the entire life of the tread.

But saving gas isn't the only advantage. Goodyear radials are also efficient in terms of wear, for the belts add muscle that inhibit tire-wasting squirm. This reinforcing action of the belts also helps keep the entire tread face in contact with the road, for effective traction and handling on your car.

Goodyear gives you a choice of six gas-savers. For an extra good reason for going Goodyear, now, see the offer in the adjacent box. It's a winner!

Firm Promotes Products In 'Paperless Office'

By ELAINE S. POVICH

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The first thing visible in the "paperless office" is paper — a guest book accompanied by an old-fashioned pencil — but beyond the entrance, a sheet of plain old scratch is tough to find.

The large, rectangular office in Washington's Watergate complex, filled with the latest in computer office equipment, is a working demonstration of the products promoted by Micronet, Inc.

"We create paper for the outside world and we take paper in from the outside world, but once it becomes internal to this office, there's no paper," said Larry Stockett, 32, president and super-salesman for Micronet.

Computer and office equipment companies lease the equipment to Micronet for a nominal fee, Stockett said, in return for their display in the "paperless office" which handles all of Micronet's business, from salesmen's schedules and appointments to billing.

It's a $600,000 office workers' wonder land.

On each desk, where the typewriter should be, sits a video screen with keyboard, the worker's link to information stored in the computer.

Incoming material is handled by a telephone recording system. A caller is informed he is talking to a machine and then asked to dictate his information.

That way, a salesman can dictate a letter over the telephone. If the field representative wants to hear what he has said, a push of a touch-tone phone button will rewind the tape.

Once the letter has been recorded, it can be transcribed via dictaphone by a human working at a video display terminal.

The letter then can be printed for mailing. If it is to remain in the office a while, it is recorded on a "floppy disk," which resembles a flexible 45 rpm record. The floppy disk holds about 150 pages of material. Much more material — up to 250,000 pages — can be held on a larger "hard disk," which is about the size of a long-playing album.

Once in the computer system, the letter can be called up on any screen.

Incoming paper is handled differently.

Each piece is photographed and reduced in size, the image placed on "microfiche" — a 4-by-6 inch piece of plastic that can hold up to 100 pages.

Once numbered and placed in a sheath with a strip of magnetic tape, the microfiche is stored in a "smart" filing cabinet. When the proper buttons are punched, the machine will deliver the specified microfiche to a worker.

There can be no misfiling with this system, according to Stockett. Any microfiche can be placed in the filing cabinet in any order. The machine always knows where it is and can retrieve it, and the machine holds "enough information to fill up the Pentagon," Stockett said.

Another machine makes copies of microfiche, at five cents a copy, and still another can make paper copies of microfiche images, he explained.

Stockett's $150 briefcase is equipped with a small projector and under-the-top screen for microfiche viewing.

"I get several hundred percent more productivity on my business trips because I can carry all my information," he said, noting he has hundreds of microfiche in the case, each with hundreds of pages on it.

Stockett maintains an office system like that in the "paperless office" can save a company hundreds of thousands of dollars, or even millions, depending on how much paperwork the firm does ordinarily.

The weakest link in the system is the human connection, Stockett said.

"It makes the workers more productive, but you have to train the workers," he said. "Many, many companies have tried to run 'business as usual' after the equipment was installed. That doesn't work."

Screening Rids Water Of Weeds

By LEROY POPE

NEW YORK (UPI) — A unique method has been developed to destroy the noxious weeds that clog lakes, ponds and streams and ruin fishing, boating and swimming.

The method was developed by Menardi-Southern Corp., of Houston, a subsidiary of United States Filter Corp. The new process employs a specially fabricated fiberglass screen to eliminate weeds rather than the usual chemical poisoning or mechanical harvesting.

Used in areas of up to an acre at a time, the screen is laid over the weed beds to press them to the bottom and filter out 60 percent of the sunlight on which their growth depends.

"In an average of 21 days the weeds not only have died but have decomposed and broken up into harmless waste," said Charles W. Noxon, director of marketing for Menardi-Southern.

The screen may either be left in place to suppress weeds permanently or it may be moved elsewhere, depending on the nature of the local problem.

Although the screening, called Aquascreen and woven for Menardi-Southern by J.P. Stevens & Co., is not cheap, Noxon said it is much less expensive in the long run and gives longer lasting results than either poisoning or mechanical harvesting.

"The method is completely harmless to people and to fish and it can be supplied selectively enough so that it is harmless to beneficial vegetation in the water on which fish feed," Noxon said.

"It also can be used as a preventive simply by laying it on the bottom in areas less than 12 feet deep. Areas deeper than that are not attacked as a rule by the most pestiferous waterweeds, millfoil, curly leaf pondweed, eel grass, common waterweed, coontail, wild celery, water plaintain, water hyacinths and Richardson's pondweed.

"These weeds are rapidly filling up most of the manmade and smaller natural lakes in the United States," Noxon said. "The problem has been recognized for years. Choking of lakes with weeds and weed slime has made boating, fishing and swimming virtually impossible in some resort areas. People buy waterfront homes then discover the water is choked with weeds.

"The weeds breed so rapidly that in many areas mechanical harvesting requires several cuts a year. Chemical weed killers are toxic to fish and to the fish food supply and may result in quarantining of the waters afterwards. New herbicide-resisting weed strains may develop after poisoning," Noxon said.

The Aquascreen method was invented by Prof. J. Richard Mayer of the State University College at Fredonia, N.Y. in 1973. He began experimenting with fiberglass screens to suppress weeds in Lake Chautauqua, N.Y. Other researchers had tried polyethylene films with limited success. Mayer got good results from the start and gradually expanded and refined his efforts, employing Scuba divers to plant the screens and check the results.

"I met Professor Mayer almost by accident," said Noxon, whose company makes many kinds of industrial fabric filters. "I became fascinated with his experiments and decided there would be a huge world market for such an effective and economical way of controlling water weeds."

BETTER DRESSED

DETROIT (AP) — Waitresses at the Innkeeper Hotel airport restaurant protested having to wear a low-cut uniform which resembled a tutu — and which they complained revealed too much. On Monday the 26 waitresses wore new uniforms: high-buttoned, long-sleeved blouses and long black skirts. "It presents a better image," said Connie Harwood, who campaigned against the old uniform for 11 years. "(It says) 'You're a lady.'"

HY GARDNER HAS THE ANSWER:

Glad You Asked That!

Q: I've got to admit it. Though married I'm in love with another fellow — and so is my husband: He's the cutest, brightest, most cuddlesome male star on TV today. His name is Gary Coleman of "Diff'rent Strokes." Though his publicity claims he is a nine or 10-year-old, most of our friends insist he's really a midget. What is he — really? — Mrs. T.N., Pittsburgh.

A: We kid you not. As advertised, Gary is a kid. Small in size but mentally a giant. His parents, Sue and Willie Coleman, of Zion, Ill., attribute his mitey stature to a congenital kidney defect. Before he reached the age of five he underwent three operations. "The last one," TV Guide writer Marcia Seligson reports, "was a dangerous kidney transplant." The puffy cheeks are a by-product of the steroid medications on which he thrives. His mother agrees that while Gary will never have the normal physical size or strength of other youngsters his age, "His gifts are God's way of compensating him for his other deficiences."

Q: I think those televised golf tournaments for man-sized prizes are not only fun to watch but also exciting. But I wish they'd do one thing — insert close-ups of the golfers' faces so they'd be almost as readily recognized as the Tom Watsons and Arnold Palmers are. How about it? — Tony Sweet, Miami.

A: We think you've got a fine idea there. Now let's see what the producers of the tournaments think.

Q: Was this one-liner by Henny Youngman on the Mary Tyler Moore show the other Sunday night new? "I took my wife to a wife swapping party. I had to throw in some cash!" — Jay Levy, Forest Hills, N.Y.

A: Yes.

Q: I see where one of my favorite movie stars, Joan Blondell, is in a new film, "The Champ." How many pictures has she made? And wasn't she once married to Dick Powell? — Mary Freeman, Las Vegas.

A: Yes. Joan married Dick in 1936 and divorced him in 1944, marrying producer Mike Todd before he even met Elizzabeth Taylor. Joan allegedly loaned Mike a good deal of money and asked him to sign a letter promising to be home by 7:30 every evening and stay there. Miss Blondell will be 70 this August and has made just about that many movies. Incidentally, Dick Powell's next and last wife was June Allyson.

Q: We were impressed with the performance and the sincerity of actor Stan Shaw in "Roots: The Next Generations." Playing Will Palmer, he seemed to be living the part. Was he? — Mrs. B.Ross, Richmond, Va.

A: Shaw was very affected by the script. So much so he says he phoned his grandfather to find out where in Africa they were from. "Africa?" his grandfather said. "I don't know anything about Africa, we're Indians." "Now," concludes Shaw, "I'm in the process of finding more about how the blacks and Indians got together."

Flashback: The near disaster at The Three Mile Island nuclear reactor recalls this story. When Albert Einstein was a professor at Princeton, a student approached him after class and breathlessly announced that he'd made a historic discovery. "I've concocted a solution," he said, "that instantly melts anything it touches!" Einstein gently asked, "Son, if it melts everything — tell me, what do you keep it in?"

Send your questions to Hy Gardner, "Glad You Asked That,' care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 11748, Chicago, Ill. 60611. Marilyn and Hy Gardner will answer as many questions as they can in their column, but the volume of mail makes personal replies impossible.

Acid May Have Been Deliberately Dumped

BATTLE CREEK, Mich. (AP) — Poisonous chromic acid which has hampered sewage treatment and has threatened damage to the Kalamazoo River may have been deliberately dumped into the sewer system, police said.

"Not only was the chromic acid throughout the system, it killed off the entire supply of bacteria" that absorb solids from sludge, Larry Osborn, city public utilities engineer, said Monday. State Department of Natural Resources officials said there was little danger to humans because the city is still providing sewage treatment with chlorine.

BLOCKADE FAILS

LONDON (AP) — The Times of London said this week it has managed to produce a European edition despite a blockade by German leftists of a Frankfurt printing plant where it had planned to print it.

Castaways On 'Gilligan's Island' Finally Escape

By PETER J. BOYER

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Those unfortunate castaways on "Gilligan's Island" have finally made an escape, although it's not exactly the sort of rescue they had in mind. NBC has decided not to include a planned renewal of the series in its fall schedule.

Well, at least the castaways can finally go home.

Actually, this is the second time NBC has gotten Gilligan, the Skipper and the five passengers of the ill-fated "Minnow" off of that uncharted desert isle. As you may (or may not) recall, the "Minnow" washed ashore on "Gilligan's Island" 15 years ago, a happy mishap for CBS. The goofy doings of Gilligan and his pals were amusing enough to keep the show on CBS' schedule for five seasons.

But TV is a rough business, even in the middle of the ocean. When CBS canceled "Gilligan" in 1967, the network didn't have the decency to get the castaways off of that stinking island. I guess it was the old, "What have you done for me lately?" routine.

Anyway, while Gilligan (Bob Denver) and the others rotted away on that tiny piece of earth, curiosity and nostalgia were building on the mainland. The show's original viewers might have idly wondered what happened to the castaways, then tucked the matter into mental trivia files.

But the original viewers had kids, and the kids knew all about Gilligan from reruns. They, too, wanted to know what happened to the castaways.

It struck the folks at NBC that this was instant audience, and they were right. NBC did a rescue movie, "Rescue From Gilligan's Island," which scored very well in the ratings. Well enough, in fact, to prompt talk about "Gilligan's Island" returning as a series.

And a series was possible, since someone at NBC had the foresight to arrange another shipwreck at the end of the rescue movie.

A series pilot was made. "The Castaways on Gilligan's Island," Thursday night, begins with the familiar scene of our familiar friends trying to get off of that familiar island set. Gilligan just happens to stumble on to a pair of World War II airplanes, from which the professor promptly fashions an excape craft.

They make it back to civilization, but without an island, there is no series. Another shipwreck would be ridiculous, even for this cauldron of nonsense, so the millionaire (Jim Backus) buys the island and turns it into a hideaway resort. It is staffed, of course, by the castaways.

Sort of a bumbling "Fantasy Island."

Bob Denver, who in real life has spent the past few years working dinner theaters with his wife, had mixed feelings about picking up again as a middle-aged Gilligan. "But I saw it coming," he said. "So many generations of kids asking their mothers whatever happened to Gilligan.

"But I wouldn't mind going back into it. It's easy comedy, very simple."

NBC Plans New Hour-Long Fall Shows

By JOAN HANAUER

NEW YORK (UPI) — The most remarkable programing news to come out of the NBC fall schedule may be what isn't there — new half-hour sitcoms.

The network with the biggest ratings drain will offer a half dozen new hour-long shows starting Sept. 17 — and not a standard situation comedy in the six-pack.

To the surprise of no one, NBC dumped "Supertrain" and "Cliffhangers." More surprising, the network held onto five shows that were introduced mid-season of this year — shows NBC chief Fred Silverman obviously believes will catch on.

These include one genuine hit — "Diff'rent Strokes" — and four with more wobbly Nielsen ratings, "Real People," "Hello, Larry," "Kate Columbo" (formerly "Mrs. Columbo") and "B.J. and the Bear."

"Little House on the Prairie," "CHiPs," "Rockford Files," "Quincy" and "Disney" all will return, and "Weekend" will be replaced in June by a new magazine news show, "Prime Time" with Tom Snyder.

Silverman & Company are aiming for "breakthrough" programing. That doesn't mean the television equivalent of the discovery of penicillin. It just means programing that will break through viewer habit patterns.

What better way than by copying past success, as you can see from this breakdown of new shows:

"From Here to Eternity: The War Years" stars William Devane as Sgt. Warden, a role he played in the NBC miniseries based on the James Jones novel. The new series picks up where Jones left off.

"Buck Rogers in the 25th Century" stars Gil Gerard in a series based on the current movie, in which Rogers is a 20th century astronaut, accidentally frozen alive and cryogenically revived five centuries later, in the nick of time to protect Earth from aliens and space pirates.

"The Force" stars Joe Don Baker of "Walking Tall" fame as New York City chief of detectives Earl Eischied, a role he created in the high-rated television movie based on the book by Robert Daley. Daley will serve as story adviser for the series.

"The Man Called Sloane," starring a yet-to-be-announced suavely handsome man as a James Bond-type secret agent surrounded by lush scenery (some of it female) as he fights the arch-villains of KARTEL, described as "a coalition of ruthless business magnates intent on world domination." The executive producer is Phil Saltzman, who gave us "Barnaby Jones," "Cannon" and "The FBI."

"The Misadventures of Sheriff Lobo" is a comedy starring Claude Akins as a sheriff with a touch of larceny.

"Shirley," a family-style comedy drama, stars Shirley Jones as a recent widow who moves her three kids to Lake Tahoe, where her suitors include banker Adam West and ski instructor Patrick Wayne. "Shirley" is co-produced by Procter & Gamble, which answered Silverman's call last year for advertisers to take a more active role in television production.
