That's my son!

MEDIA, Pa. (AP) — A woman was excused from jury duty because she knew the defendant. From birth, in fact.

Fannie DiMarco filed into a Delaware County courtroom Thursday with 43 other potential jurors only to find that her 34-year-old son, Ronald Bull, was the defendant.

"When she came into the courtroom she immediately panicked and reported to a court officer that she was his mother," Assistant District Attorney James Mattera said. She was excused.

The jury that was selected convicted Bull of possession with intent to distribute 29 grams of phencyclidine, or PCP.

Moving dirt?

ARNOLD, Md. (AP) — William Merica doesn't want to make a mountain out of a molehill, but he did discover what a Harvard researcher says is one of the nation's largest anthills.

Merica was walking down a road last month in this small town south of Baltimore when he saw what appeared to a moving mound of dirt.

"At first I thought the whole hill was moving, but then I looked up close and, my God, it was just solid ants! It was unbelievable!"

About 500,000 Allegheny ants constructed the 3-foot high, 8-by-15-foot oval mound.

Poor districts to fight school finance system

■ A MALDEF attorney says recent school finance legislation represents no real change and poorer school districts will take the issue back to court.

By Peggy Fikac
Associated Press Writer

AUSTIN — Poor school districts that won a Texas Supreme Court order for a fairer public education finance system will go back to court to challenge the brand-new law designed to meet that ruling, a lawyer for the schools said Friday.

"I don't think there's any real change in the system," said Al Kauffman of the Mexican American Legal Defense and Educational Fund.

Kauffman represents the 13 school districts — led by the Edgewood district in San Antonio — that originally sued the state over its $13.5 billion-a-year school finance system. The system relies on state aid, local property taxes and some federal funds.

Rick Gray, an attorney for 55 other poor school districts that joined the lawsuit against the state, was planning a meeting with his clients and said he thought it likely that they also would want to challenge the new law.

The Supreme Court in October 1989 ruled unanimously that the current system is unconstitutional after finding "glaring disparities" in funding available to the state's rich and poor school districts.

Democratic gubernatorial nominee Ann Richards signs autographs during her party's state convention.

Richards shrugs off 'gender gap'

FORT WORTH (AP) — Ann Richards, saying it is wrong to consider gender an issue in the governor's race, Friday predicted victory in the race because of her qualifications for the job.

"I cannot believe that here it is 1990 — 10 years from the 21st century — and we are still reading newspaper articles about wl er the people are ready to vote for a woman for governor. Give me a break, will ya?" Ms. Richards told cheering supporters at an abortion rights rally.

Promising to support a pro-choice issue on abortion, Ms. Richards told the group that gathered at the state Democratic convention that as governor she would "stand up and stand up vociferously in a pro-choice position."

But most important, she said, are her abilities and experience as a civil rights advocate, county official and state treasurer, and the background of Republican nominee Clayton Williams, who is making his first bid for public office.

"The the best part about it is that I am the most qualified candidate to be governor of this state. You don't hear anybody say in this race that you're voting for a woman just because she is a woman. You're voting for me because I am the best qualified candidate in this race," she said.

On another issue, Ms. Richards described as inappropriate jokes made Thursday by two top Democratic Party officials.

Party Chairman Bob Slagle and executive director Ed Martin each sparked criticism from some party colleagues by joking about sex, prostitutes and Mexico as they tried to ridicule comments made earlier by Williams.

"I don't think any of those jokes are appropriate," Ms. Richards said.

Greenpeace won't report on water wells

By David Morris
Staff Writer

They may risk their lives to save endangered whales, but Greenpeace officials apparently fell short when it came to protecting jars of water.

A representative of the environmental group visited in March and took samples of four south Midland County wells to test for toxic substances. There has been no word on test results, and apparently never will be.

John Liebman, Greenpeace toxics coordinator, said Friday from New Orleans that the Midland water samples he took were never tested because they were exposed to high temperatures en route to a Boston lab.

"They got on an airline and were in limbo for about 20 hours," Liebman said. "Those basically (were) invalid samples because they got too hot."

He said the frozen packing in which the water was shipped from Dallas to Boston melted and the samples were rendered untestable.

Johnnie Thomas, a south county resident whose well was tested by the Texas Water Commission this spring, said she suspected Greenpeace of deliberately scuttling the test.

Ms. Thomas, who said she called Liebman on Thursday to ask about the samples, suggested that the water had tested clean and that Greenpeace did not want to make the information public.

Liebman said the accusation is "absolutely not true."

"If we had found a clean test, we would have been absolutely glad to present that," he said. "We hope that we won't find anything, but I wasn't opti-

Clouds of smoke

Clouds of colorful smoke pour from the site of a chemical plant fire in Pearland Friday, carrying a drum of solvent aloft. Six persons were injured in the blaze.

Several injured in Pearland fire

PEARLAND, Texas (AP) — Explosions rocked a chemical packaging plant Friday, sending up bright orange flames and clouds of black smoke visible from downtown Houston 12 miles away. Two employees were hurt.

Firefighters say the blaze at the Solvents & Chemicals Inc. plant in an industrial area south of Houston could burn for days. Authorities called for an evacuation of a four-mile area as the fire raged, but some people stayed behind.

Authorities lifted the evacuation order about six hours after the blaze erupted.

The most seriously injured person was Eloy Salazar, a 26-year-old employee who told his doctor that a spark from a forklift touched off the explosion at about 11 a.m.

"They were apparently depressurizing some 55-gallon drums and there was a spark, I believe from a fork lift, and that set off the fire," said Dr. Jeff Britton, a Houston Hermann Hospital doctor who treated the man.

The worker suffered second- and third-degree burns on his chest, face and back.

Another employee, Alexander Jacky, 49, was being treated at Southeast Memorial Hospital in Pearland for minor burns to his forearm. Six firefighters and emergency workers were treated for heat exhaustion or smoke inhalation at Southeast, officials said.

Dr. Paul Pepe, Houston Emergency Medical Service director, said the fire apparently occurred outside the main building when a vapor cloud that escaped from a container ignited.

The two men were injured as they tried to flee the fire.

Round up of drug suspects continues

■ Separate arrests in Midland and Odessa round up 38 persons believed connected with illegal drug trade.

By Erin Blair
Staff Writer

Law enforcement officers Friday continued their round up of drug suspects in Odessa and Midland.

During the past two days, the Permian Basin Drug Task Force arrested 32 people believed to be Ector County drug dealers in a wrap up of a four-month undercover investigation, said Task Force Commander Tom Finley.

And in an unrelated bust, Midland Police narcotics officers arrested six people in the Best Western parking lot, 9506 La Force Blvd., near the airport at 1:46 p.m. Thursday, Lt. Hank Norton confirmed.

"We just got six of them at the same time. It didn't have anything to do with the task force, just part of the day's routine," Norton said.

The six men were charged with aggravated possession of marijuana, a felony. They were caught with more than 50 pounds of pot, according to the police report.

Arrested were Gilbert Garcia Olvio, 42, of Mesquite; Gilbert Olivio, Jr., 23, address not given; Johnny Felipe Munoz, 29; Felipe Ramos, 28; David Louis Craig, 32; and Ricky Moreno, 32, all of Dallas.

Meanwhile, task force officers started their "bust out" at 7 p.m. Thursday equipped with 92 warrants for 55 individuals indicted by the grand jury Monday. By 1 a.m. they had arrested 27 people. An additional five were arrested Friday morning, Finley said.

The arrests are the greatest number the task force has made in one town, Finley said.

He said the team had actually caught 29 of the 55 people wanted. "While we were working we made three more cases and took them in," Finley said.

One woman solicited an officer and was picked up for prostitution, he said. Another woman was arrested after she tried to sell the officers cocaine and a man was arrested for attempting to hinder the apprehension of one of the suspects, Finley said.

Bacteria may help clean up groundwater

COLLEGE STATION (AP) — Researchers say groundwater contaminated by toxic waste can be removed by using aquatic bacteria developed in Texas laboratories.

"Under the right conditions, it can completely remove the toxic chemical," said Richard Egg, an agricultural engineer and co-investigator at the Texas Agricultural Experiment Station. "For a lot of contaminated groundwater, this could be one tool in the clean-up."

In a $178,000 study funded by the Environmental Protection Agency, Egg and three other researchers are seeking a formula for purging the unseen pollution.

Researchers are trying to remove trichloroethylene (TCE), the most common pollutant, and other chlorinated hydrocarbons that don't degrade easily, with the naturally occurring bacteria — a cleansing method known as bioremediation.

"One concept of bioremediation is to create a treatment zone, rather than try to clean up everything," Egg said. "As water flows through the zone, it cleans up the pollution like a filter."

Using a simulated groundwater aquifer built in a stainless steel tub filled with brick sand and flowing water, Egg and Charles Coble, Don Reddell and Don Lewis are introducing a common bacteria to break down TCE in four concentrations.

Because the filtering bacterium must be stimulated with gases to begin the process, Egg said oxygen and methane were added to water withdrawn from and returned through the well, or opening on top.

"Oxygen and methane are the nutrients which stimulate the bacteria to grow and produce the enzyme that works to break down TCE," Egg said.

TCE is an industrial solvent used to degrease tools or equipment that also is used in dry cleaning processes, refrigerants, fumigants and most septic tank cleaning fluids.

The President's Council on Environmental Quality reported 14 percent of nearly 3,000 water well samples taken in 18 states contained measurable levels of TCE.

While the EPA has not established a safe drinking water standard on TCE for humans, the National Research Council's Safe Drinking Water Committee has found the chemical affects the central nervous system and heart in experimental animals.

In the experiment, dormant bacteria in the brick sand grew in the aquifer and began to break down the chemical as the water flowed through the treatment zone, Egg said. The researchers now will determine the formula for adequate treatment, he said.

Bioremediation is better than other treatments because the method destroys the chemical.

Tech researcher encouraged by official remarks

LUBBOCK (AP) — A Texas Tech researcher whose lab animals were stolen said Friday he's encouraged by a leading government official's recent denouncement of animal rights extremists.

But Dr. John Orem says a protest scheduled by activists in Washington this weekend will show how "forceful they really are."

Orem, a sleep researcher at Texas Tech whose lab was ransacked by animal rights extremists 11 months ago, said Friday, "It is encouraging to see at last our high governmental offices are recognizing the animal rights protesters are disruptive to research."

During a press conference Thursday Louis Sullivan, the secretary of health and human services, condemned extremists for initiating terroristic activity and defended animal research as "an integral part of mankind's striving for the betterment of humanity."

"Terrorists is certainly an appropriate term from what we have seen here," Orem said.

Members of the underground Animal Liberation Front, considered a terrorist group by the federal government, claimed responsibility for the break-in at Orem's lab July 4, 1989. Five cats were stolen and damages exceeded $70,000.

Rabies claims first Texan since 1985

HARLINGEN (AP) — Rabies from a bat bite claimed the life of a South Texas man, who this week became the first person known to die of the disease in Texas since 1985.

His deal also was the first case since 1984 of a human being dying from rabies in the United States after contracting the infection in this country, according to the Centers for Disease Control in Atlanta.

Authorities believe a rabid bat bit 22-year-old Manuel Riojas Jr. of Mercedes as he sat in a bar in that Lower Rio Grande Valley City on April 13, officials said.

"The bat was in the bar and landed on this man's arm," said Dr. David Flory, medical director of the Cameron County Health Department. "He took hold of it with his other hand and it bit him."

Riojas began suffering symptoms last week, according to the Cameron County Health Department. He was admitted to Valley Baptist Medical Center in Harlingen Sunday and died Tuesday.

Superintendent named

SANTA FE, N.M. (AP) — Larry Henderson, a 27-year veteran of the National Park Service, has been appointed superintendent of Guadalupe Mountains National Park in West Texas.

Henderson replaces Karen Wade, who transferred to Wrangell-St. Elias National Park in Alaska.

Henderson had been superintendent of Wupatki and Sunset Crater National monuments in Arizona since 1987.

Prior to that, he had been park manager of Carlsbad Caverns National Park since 1981.

Ex-bank director targeted

HARLINGEN (AP) — A man whose $2 million bank account was seized this week by federal drug agents is a former director of the bank where he kept the money.

Agents with the FBI and the U.S. Drug Enforcement Administration said they had evidence the money was derived from illegal dealings with one of the largest drug-smuggling organizations in northeastern Mexico.

Expressway expansion unearths freed slaves' graves

DALLAS (AP) — The expansion work on Dallas' Central Expressway has inspired archaeologists to arm themselves with shovels and trowels as they start mapping the graves of freed slaves and their descendants that sit next to the project.

The archaeologists are marking the graves with twine, creating a map of string on soil near downtown Dallas.

So far, their work has revealed the outlines of dozens of burial places in Freedmen's Park, which was a cemetery from 1861 to 1925.

Although the freedman's cemetery was never formally undedicated, as far as Dallas Park Board member Vivian Johnson can tell, it was designated a city park in 1965.

Ms. Johnson is among a group of blacks eager to see that the atmosphere of a cemetery is restored and that markers are placed to let people know its significance.

"There will be no playground equipment on the site," she said. "It must have some dignity."

Ms. Johnson said the effort to preserve the cemetery has gone smoothly.

"This could have been an explosive situation," she said. "We feel real good about what is happening."

The next step will be to move remains from the path of the expressway expansion project to the vacant spaces between the old graves. The graveyard then will be backfilled and landscaped.

The city, the Dallas Historical Society, Black Dallas Remembered, the Dallas Landmark Commission and the highway department have participated in the effort.

So far, the dig has revealed about 110 graves, said Jerry Henderson, the archaeologist overseeing the project for the Texas Department of Highways and Transportation.

The group has struck a few shallow caskets and come in contact with one body. Those remains will be exhumed and reburied, said Mark Denson, staff archaeologist for the Texas Historical Commission.

The commission has designated the site a historical landmark. Work is scheduled to be completed by fall.

Houston area hit by mishaps

WEATHER SUMMARY
High in upper 90s expected

Staff Report

Friday offered little relief from the blazing temperatures, with a high that reached 101, according to the National Weather Service in Midland.

Today's forecast calls for fair morning skies and a less than 20 percent chance of late afternoon thunderstorms. The high will be in the upper 90s, with 10 to 20 mph winds from the southeast.

Tonight is expected to be partly cloudy with a 20 percent chance of thunderstorms and a low in the 70s, NWS said. Sunday's forecast is similar to today's: partly cloudy with a 20 percent chance of mainly late afternoon thunderstorms and a high in the upper 90s.

Today's record record high of 104 was set in 1964 and the record low of 57 was set in 1949, NWS said.

Widely scattered showers and thundershowers Friday brought a change from the hot, dry summer weather pattern over parts of Southeast Texas and the lower Rio Grande Valley.

Phillips plant site of minor fire on Friday

PASADENA (AP) — Officials evacuated a portion of the Phillips Petroleum Complex Friday after a small fire ignited in a production unit.

Jim Worsham, human resources specialist, said there were no serious injuries reported and that all employees had been located.

Eight people were treated for smoke inhalation and heat exhaustion after the fire, he said. One person was taken to Pasadena General Hospital, three to Southmore Hospital. Four others were treated at the scene, officials said.

"About 2:30 p.m., a small fire occurred in our K-resin unit," Worsham said. "If caused minor, if not minimal, damage. Operations were curtailed in the K-resin unit, but the fire is under control."

Most employees had returned to the building by 3:30 p.m.

Phillips produces a plastic resin in the unit that is used in container bottles, Worsham said.

Much of the plant remains under reconstruction since last October's plant explosion at another portion of the plant, where 23 people were killed and more than 130 others were injured.

PEARLAND: Evacuation order lifted

(From 1A)

Forty other employees were evacuated safely, said company spokesman Jordi Baizan. "All of our people are out."

Baizan said the company packages paint and lacquer thinners, windshield washing products and charcoal starters. "We're a solvent distributor. The bulk of what we handle are mineral spirits," Baizan said. "They're not toxic.

The first explosion touched off other storage tanks and sent chemical drums hurling. "You could see 55-gallon barrels going up in the air on fire," said Richard Lee, who lives near the company.

The company has handled acetone, methyl ethyl ketones (paint thinner), and methanol in the past, Baizan said, but he did not know what employees were handling at the time.

Hawkins said multiple types of solvents, such as WD-40 and paint thinner, were burning at the facility Friday afternoon.

Emergency officials were keeping a close eye on the remaining storage tanks Friday afternoon.

"There are several storage tanks nearby the fire and that's our biggest concern right now," said Richard Hawkins, division manager for the City of Houston Emergency Medical Service. Firefighters were trying to prevent the tanks from exploding by pouring water on them, he said.

Howard Manning, director of operations for the Chemical Transportation Emergency Center of the Chemical Manufacturers Association in Washington, D.C., said his office warned Pearland firefighters to stay away from the area.

"My only advice to the fire department was evacuate, and don't fight the fire at this time," Manning said. "It's too dangerous."

Manning said there is no way of knowing how long it will take to bring the situation under control.

By 2 p.m., billowing black smoke had begun dissipating to a lighter gray, but officials were concerned about an underground 16-inch Enron Corp. natural gas pipeline about 150 yards from the burning facility.

WATER: Samples got too hot

(From 1A)

mistic that there wasn't anything in that water."

Liebman said he learned only this week that the samples had been ruined.

Lillian Smith, a south county resident who has led the effort to have area wells tested for poisons, said she was "very disappointed" that Greenpeace tests were inconclusive.

However, she said a privately financed testing effort organized by PACE — People Against a Contaminated Environment — will make up for the Greenpeace effort.

About 23 wells in Midland and Ector County will be tested next week, she said. Some water samples, which will be tested at the National Toxics Campaign lab in Boston, will be "split" with the TWC for testing in Austin, she said. State lab results and Boston results will be compared.

Jack Meldrum, a county resident whose well showed chloride levels of more than 1,300 parts per million in TWC tests, said he didn't need Greenpeace results to know his water is unfit to drink.

"If they can help get the chloride out of my water, then I'm all for it," he said. "I can't bathe in it, I can't drink it."

The state-recommended maximum chloride level is 300 parts per million.

Chloride in 20 of 36 county wells tested by the TWC this spring exceeded the maximum, TWC documents show. Three of these wells exceeded 1,000 parts per million of chlorides — ranging from 1,315 to 1,762 to 2,351 parts per million.

TWC officials say oil field activities may be responsible for high chloride levels, and the Texas Railroad Commission is investigating area wells.

100 Katy residents flee vapor cloud

HOUSTON (AP) — Officials evacuated about 100 Katy residents from their homes for about three hours Friday when a storage tank filled with hydrochloric acid sprung a leak and formed a vapor cloud.

The pipe ruptured about 7:15 a.m. as the chemical was being loaded into a tank truck at Trans Chem Inc., a chemical transport firm, said Joe Dillon of the Katy Volunteer Fire Department.

Katy is about 10 miles west of the Houston city limits.

Dillon said acid in a 36 percent solution gushed through a 4-inch hole and some vaporized, causing a cloud more than 30 feet high that slowly drifted north toward populated areas.

Officials evacuated a six-block area that included two day care centers and an apartment complex.

Residents were allowed to move back into their homes by 11 a.m.

About 7,000 gallons of the chemical inside the tank leaked into an earthen dike surrounding the tank, Dillon said. About 90 percent was pumped into an adjoining tank by plant employees wearing protective gear, he said.

Two Trans Chem employees were taken to Katy Memorial Center after complaining of difficulty breathing, Dillon said. They were not seriously injured, he said.

SCHOOLS: MALDEF sees no change

leaders broke a deadlock on how to address the court order.

Clements on Thursday signed the resulting legislation, which would send schools an additional $528 million in state money in the 1990-91 school year. He also signed the tax and fee increases that the bill relies on — including a quarter-cent sales tax increase.

The reform measure also makes changes backers say will improve education performance and accountability. For example, it allows the governor to appoint the state education commissioner, who currently is named by the State Board of Education, and it increases student testing.

Clements, House Speaker Gib Lewis and Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby have said they think their plan will meet court muster.

"I think it's a bill that the courts will sign off on quickly," said Lewis, D-Fort Worth.

The Texas State Teachers Association also hailed the legislation as "an important step toward equity," saying in a statement that the measure holds promise for "fundamental improvement" in Texas schools.

One item in the legislation praised by the group provides for involvement of classroom teachers in educational decisions at schools.

State District Judge Scott McCown, who is overseeing the school finance reform case, has scheduled a June 25 hearing at which Kauffman said he plans to present his objections to the new law.

"I don't think they've met their burden to show it is" constitutional, Kauffman said of state officials. "I know it's not."

Among other items, Kauffman said, the measure does not allocate money to build school facilities, nor does it limit how much districts with high property wealth can spend in locally raised money.

"Rich districts can basically spend whatever they want, and poor school districts cannot," Kauffman said. "It (the law) didn't put enough money into the system to counteract those differences."

Fire still under investigation

Staff Report

The 3 p.m. fire that destroyed a backyard guest house at 201 E. Pecan Ave. Thursday is still under investigation, said Midland Fire Marshall Jerry Petrie.

The fire, which burned furniture, clothing and a television set belonging to Linda Jasso, apparently started while she was shopping at a convenience store. Ms. Jasso said she had been away from her home only about 15 minutes.

The guest house was owned by Ms. Jasso's parents. The fire also caused severe damage to three fences, a power line and a storage building in an adjacent backyard.

Assistant Midland Fire Marshal Lon Dominguez said foul play and arson were not suspected causes of the fire.

Men impersonate officers in kidnap attempt

Staff Report

Three men were arrested Friday morning after an alleged attempted kidnapping with a novel twist failed, according to the Midland Police report.

The report said the suspects approached a 19-year-old Midland woman in a parking lot in the 400 block of N. Midland Drive at 2 a.m. One man showed her some type of badge and identified himself and his companions as police officers, the report said.

The victim told police officers that the men tried to get her to enter their vehicle, but she was able to break away and go for help. The men then drove away, the report said.

Officers arrested Brooks Edward Dampier, 21, 4512 Roosevelt; John Andrews Kernaghan, 20, 3004 Meadowbrook; and Charles Bradley Goings, 20, 10 Meta Dr. at 3:46 a.m. at the intersection of W. Illinois Ave. and Andrews Highway after matching their car with a description given by the would-be kidnapping victim.

The three have been charged with impersonating police officers and attempted kidnapping, both felonies, the report said.

Colorful hot air balloon flight to benefit MARC

Staff Report

At least 10 hot air balloons will bob about in the breeze over Midland and Odessa this afternoon.

The exhibition, sponsored by the Midland Association for Retarded Citizens, will feature the Lubbock Balloon Club's brightly colored crafts.

The balloons will take off from the Petroleum Museum at 7 a.m. and float around the area until 4 p.m., when they're scheduled to land at Tiger Charter at Midland International Airport.

The public is invited to watch the balloons from the airport and enjoy refreshments, barbecue and the music of "Bad Breaks" from 4 p.m. on through the evening.

"This promises to be a real uplifting event for the whole family as the hot air balloons light up our West Texas sunset," said Mike Grella, the exhibition's chairman and a member of MARC's board of directors.

Previously announced tethered balloon rides will not be available because of liability problems, a spokeswoman for Grella said.

ODESSA: Arrests conclude four-month probe

(From 1A)

He said no one was injured in the raids. "It went smoothly — they weren't happy but they cooperated," he said.

Most of the warrants were for felony drug delivery, with 61 issued for cocaine, 11 for marijuana, five for heroin, five for "Ecstacy," three for simulated controlled substances, one for unspecified dangerous drugs and one for amphetamines. Five misdemeanor warrants were also issued; four for theft and one for delivery of marijuana.

"A lot of our dealers will deal in marijuana and coke or coke and heroin. Ecstacy dealers deal mostly designer drugs and speed dealers stick with speed," Finley said.

He said the task force hadn't seen many heroin warrants this time because a similar round-up in Ector County six to eight months ago had put a large number of heroin-dealing prostitutes in jail.

The Permian Basin Drug Task Force began undercover investigations in February 1988. It operates in 19 counties.

Officers will continue their sweep throughout the weekend, tracking down some suspects they believe may have relocated to other West Texas towns, Finley said.

Apartment fire burns two units

Staff Report

A late night fire at the Sierra Paseo Apartments Friday caused heavy damage to two apartment units, according to a Midland Fire Department report.

The blaze at the 3417 N. Midland Dr. complex was called in at 12:39 a.m. and fire fighters had it extinguished by 2:40 a.m., the report said.

The fire apparently began in a patio area and remained confined to a fairly small area, the report said.

Its cause is still under investigation.

Cool spring fuels drop in water sales

Staff Report

Unseasonably cool late spring weather contributed to a 4.8 percent decline in water deliveries in May compared with last year, Colorado River Municipal Water District officials said.

Cool, damp weather during the first 10 days of May resulted in that period being 41 percent of the rate for the last 10 days of the month.

For instance, Big Spring used 59 percent less in the first 10 days than in the last period; Odessa used 57 percent less; Snyder 67 percent; and Midland, which used a relative fixed amount, used 12 percent less.

Total deliveries of 1.7 billion gallons for May was down 85.9 million gallons. Of this, 1.6 billion gallons was to municipalities, down 4.5 percent; and 115 million gallons to oiland industrial customers, down 9.5 percent,

By cities, the picture showed: Big Spring, 254 million gallons, down 11.2 percent; Midland, 2.5 million, up 6 percent; Odessa, 758 million gallons, down 5.34 percent; Snyder, 102 million, down 18.2 percent; Stanton, 12.5 million gallons, down 10.9 percent.

Newly incorporated town to vote on local option

MOBILE CITY (AP) — There are some who say that Mobile City became its own town just so there'd be a place to buy beer.

That theory will be put to the test June 23, when residents of the 90-home mobile home park cast ballots on whether to allow beer sales at a new convenience store that's being built at the entrance of the park.

There's little doubt where resident Dale Salyers stands on the issue.

"I say, 'Put it here!'" said Salyers, who has lived at the mobile home complex for two years. "I like beer. I probably drink more beer than anyone in the complex.

Most residents aren't quite as enthusiastic, but few expressed displeasure about the prospect of beer sales at the mobile home park just off I-30 in Rockwall County, about 25 miles east of Dallas.

Beer sales had been forbidden in the area around the park. Critics say liquor was the only reason the park's owners launched the drive to incorporate the park into its own city.

Not true, park co-owner Paul M. Easley has said. He helped lead the incorporation drive because he was concerned that the nearby towns of Fate and Rockwell would try to annex his park and raise taxes, he said. Easley also led the petition drive for the local option election.

Joe Hewitt, pastor of First Baptist Church in neighboring Fate, says he and his Concerned Citizens of Rockwall intend to fight the local option. They unsuccessfully fought the incorporation.

"I warned people that...(the incorporation) was the first step toward legalizing alcoholic beverages," Hewitt told The Dallas Morning News. "Mr. Easley told everyone that he didn't drink and he was not incorporating to put in a liquor store."

Hewitt may have difficulty recruiting Mobile City residents for his group. Easley evicted four of the more vocal opponents of the incorporation shortly after the election Jan. 20. He said he evicted them because they owed him money. They said they were kicked out because of their opposition to the incorporation.

"I'm going to have to start from scratch," Hewitt said.

Residents of the mobile home park seem unperturbed by the prospects of beer sales nearby.

"I see no problem with it," said Tim Hoey. "My attitude is to let them do what they want. It doesn't matter to me."

"Most people I've talked to said they like it," Salyers said.

Ancient, new form contrast in Damascus

DAMASCUS, Syria (AP) — A boxy apartment-office building on concrete stilts surmounts ruins of the 2,000-year-old Roman Temple of Jupiter, dramatizing the clash of old and new in this teeming, ancient city.

A modern, marble-clad temple of commerce with jewelry shops and clothing boutiques is next door, opposite the ancient Islamic Medressah, or School of Nur ed-Din.

"It's a bad integration of the old and the new," said Nazih Kawakibi, a professor of architecture at Damascus University who serves on several restoration committees. "They could have done it much better."

Like many cities in the Middle East, Damascus is bulging at the seams, trying to provide housing and services to a population estimated at 2 million.

DAMASCUS IS considered one of the world's oldest continuously inhabited cities. The Arameans, nomads from the Arabian peninsula, settled here in 1200 B.C., eventually building a city that became an important commercial center.

Greeks, Romans, Byzantines, Arabs and Ottomans have occupied Damascus. A treasure trove of monuments reflect the cultural tides that have swept over the city.

Some ancient sites, like the famed Ummayyad Mosque, were venerated by all the occupiers.

The mosque site originally was a temple to Haddad, the Aramean god of thunder and lightning.

It later became the Roman Temple of Jupiter. The Byzantines built a cathedral there, but the Arabs transformed it into the mosque, named for the Islamic dynasty.

ONLY LIMITED resources are available to preserve the ancient sites.

Kawakibi pointed to the Medressah, just on the edge of a straight, European-style avenue cut through the city by French colonizers in the 1930s.

"They stopped here; they didn't go further, thanks be to God," said the architect, who has devoted his life to preserving Old Damascus.

A 14th century tomb of the Mamelukes has been rented to a cloth merchant, who destroyed the original lintel and cut a door through an ancient wall to allow access to his shop.

"Unless we propose a solution to blend those monuments with the commercial life of the Old City of Damascus, this is the way it all will go," Kawakibi said.

"These buildings shouldn't function as commercial buildings, but as museums or cultural centers. They're all registered as historical monuments, but the law hasn't been able to prevent them from being transgressed."

IN ONE old mosque, the antique wooden minbar, or preacher's stand, was ripped out and left in the entrance, to be replaced by a concrete one.

An architectural gem, the 11th century Nur ed-Din hospital, is sandwiched between a modern shop selling shwarma, thinly sliced meat wrapped in Arabic bread, and a jewelry store. It was restored in the late 1970s.

"Parasitic buildings accumulated around it, but they're now just part of the ambience," said Kawakibi, who was instrumental in the renovation.

Only one of the original stone-lattice windows, carved in intricate geometric designs, had survived. Master craftsment copied it faithfully.

A few painted Koranic inscriptions remained on the domed ceilings. Instead of repainting them, restorers gently penciled in missing portions of the holy book's text.

In a display case are ancient herbal medicines, including one called "aphrodisiac radish, diuretic, activates the functions of the genital glands."

THE HOSPITAL and dozens of other old buildings are tranquil havens in a bustling, noisy city, as are the 11th century baths, reached through a small door in the midst of the bazaar.

The baths saw hard times, even becoming a soap factory at one point.

Now, men swaddled in towels sip at glasses of boiling-hot tea after a searing bath and massage. They read their newspapers beneath a dome painted with complicated flowery designs.

Renovation is not always popular.

"When you're trying to renovate these buildings, there's a lot of protest because they don't understand what is meant by renovation," Kawakibi said. "They think you mean destroying the old buildings and putting up new ones."

Russian state OKs priority of its laws over national ones

MOSCOW (AP) — In a move reminiscent of the Baltic republics' first steps toward secession, lawmakers of the vast Russian Federation approved a draft proclamation that would give their laws priority over national legislation.

The Russian Congress, led by radical reformer Boris N. Yeltsin, approved the article in a draft "Declaration of Sovereignty" by a 544-271 vote, the Tass news agency reported. The final version of the document must still be voted on.

Most laws on the books in the 15 Soviet republics mirror national laws, but sovereignty allows the republics to push ahead with legislation that might contradict Kremlin wishes. The Russian Federation is the largest and most populous of the Soviet republics.

The Russian Federation, with its capital in Moscow, comprises two-thirds of the country's territory and contains more than half its population.

The vote appeared to set the stage for a confrontation between Yeltsin and Soviet President Mikhail S. Gorbachev, who has warned that the Kremlin cannot carry out its reforms if the Russian heartland is not firmly behind it.

Gorbachev strongly opposed Yeltsin's election last month as president of the Russian Federation, saying his plans could lead to the breakup of the country. But he expressed no concern about Friday's measure.

"The Russian Congress has not passed anything that would contradict the Soviet Constitution," he told a news conference after he met with Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher of Britain, who was visiting Moscow.

"And I'm sure — if you ask what percent, 100 percent sure — that neither the Congress of People's Deputies of Russia nor the future Supreme Soviet will pass laws that would damage the development of the federation or complicate its reformation," he said.

"The Russian people will not stand for being pushed to pit themselves against other people, for breaking up the union," he added.

The Baltic republics of Latvia, Lithuania and Estonia began their drive for independence by proclaiming the priority of their laws over national laws. The Kremlin rejected their declarations of sovereignty, and it has imposed a partial economic blockade against Lithuania.

Gorbachev indicated Friday he would seek a reconciliation with Yeltsin

"What would disturb me more than anything at this stage is a split in the democratic forces," he said.

Boris Yeltsin

Despite opposition from Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev, radical reformer Boris Yeltsin won the presidency of Russia, the largest Soviet republic on Tuesday, May 29.

Mobs spread panic in Soviet Asian city

MOSCOW (AP) — Mobs armed with hoes and pitchforks spread "tension, terror and panic" in and around the Central Asian city of Osh, where nearly a week of ethnic rioting has left 78 people dead, it was reported Friday.

The bloodshed continued in the western part of the republic of Kirghizia, near the border with Uzbekistan, despite thousands of troop reinforcements dispatched to the region by the Defense Ministry.

The president of Uzbekistan declared a state of emergency in border districts in the republic because of what the Tass news agency called "a sharp aggravation of the situation."

No new unrest was reported in the region Friday, the Moslem sabbath, but the situation was said to be tense. Thousands of mourners knelt in the central square of Frunze, the capital of Kirghizia, and listened as a mullah prayed for victims of the rioting.

Clashes between ethnic Kirghiz and Uzbeks — both Sunni Moslems — began June 2, and the fighting intensified Monday, Soviet officials said. In dispute is the allocation of plots of land for housing in the densely populated, poverty-stricken region.

A state of emergency was in effect in the Kirghiz border city of Osh, where troops patrolled the streets, and in Frunze.

In addition to the 78 dead, 397 people have been wounded, Tass reported.

Kirghiz Radio said the situation in Osh deteriorated Thursday, when six people were wounded in new outbreaks of gunfire.

"Extremist-inclined groups of people continued to whip up tension, terror and panic," said the broadcast, monitored in London.

Disturbances were reported Thursday in nearby areas, including the Karasusky district, where a mob wielding sticks, hoes and pitchforks attacked a Communist Party building, a hospital and an Internal Ministry building before being stopped by Soviet troops, the report said. The unofficial Interfax news service reported that the party building was burned.

In a district near the town of Uzgen, 36 miles from Osh, 123 houses were burned Thursday night, but there was no word on whether anyone was killed, the Interfax news agency said. In Osh, about 15,000 Uzbeks tried to cross into Kirghizia but were stopped by army troops, it said.

The Interior Ministry said 1,500 soldiers, 900 police and ministry troops and 450 border guards were in Kirghizia to try to quell the fighting.

A state of emergency was declared Thursday in Frunze after clashes broke out, cars were destroyed and thousands of people surrounded Communist Party and government buildings.

Uzbek President Islam Karimov declared a state of emergency on his side of the border Friday and sent an urgent telegram to President Mikhail S. Gorbachev asking the Kremlin to help end the strife.

"There is a real danger of the events in the Osh region degenerating into a conflict between the two republics," Karimov said.

Author Chingiz Aitmatov, who is a member of Gorbachev's advisory body, the Presidential Council, and two Uzbek writers appealed for calm over regional television, the Soviet TV newscast "Vremya" reported Friday night. They asked the population to show "wisdom and tolerance, and do everything to stop the tragedy."

It also reported that the presidents of Kirghizia and Uzbekistan would meet to work out ways to stabilize the situation.

"Vremya" said it was unable to provide a report from Andijan, on the Uzbek side of the border, because its cameraman was beaten and his equipment smashed.

WORLD IN BRIEF

Bulgarians demand Danube plant's closure

GIURGIU, Romania (AP) — More than 6,000 Bulgarians rallied Friday at the Friendship Bridge spanning the Danube River at the border with Romania to demand the closure of a Romanian chlorine factory.

Chanting "Close the Factory!" "We Want Clean Air!" and "Assassins!" the flag-waving demonstrators, most from the Bulgarian border city of Russe, accused the Romanian government of refusing to deal seriously with chemical pollution that drifts across the Danube.

Romanian officials have said the 15-year-old factory in Giurgiu, 37 miles south of Bucharest, will not be closed, but will be equipped with anti-pollution devices in the near future.

While more than 6,000 Bulgarians turned out, only 30 Romanians showed up for the protest. The two sides joined hands in the middle of the bridge.

Carrying a banner saying "Purity everywhere and in everything," 58-year-old Maria Koleva from Russe, which has a population of 200,000, complained about the sooty, black, thick air that local residents breathe.

Recent killings strain IRA

BELFAST, Northern Ireland (AP) — The staunchest public defender of the Irish Republican Army said Friday the IRA killing of a reserve police officer and his wife this week was wrong.

"You don't expect me to say that it was a good operation when it patently was not," said Gerry Adams, the president of Sinn Fein, the IRA's political wing.

Last week, Adams criticized the mistaken killing of two Australian tourists in the Dutch town of Roermond on May 27 as "inexcusable and unjustifiable."

However, Adams also told reporters in London earlier this week that he regards the IRA as "freedom fighters." Friday he said the killing of soldiers is justified.

UN force's stay extended

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — The Security Council on Friday extended the mandate of the U.N. Observer Group in Central America for 19 days to complete the lagging demobilization of Nicaragua's Contra guerrillas.

Disbanding of more than 13,000 rebel fighters and support personnel was to have been completed by June 10, but only about half have been disarmed.

The observer group has 995 military personnel in six border zones, but it ran into trouble when some Contra leaders insisted on parallel dismantling of some forces of the former Sandinista army under the new U.S.-backed government.

The council's unanimous decision Friday forestalled a confrontation between the United States, which has backed the Contras, and Cuba, which supported the former Sandinista government.

Guatemala sets elections

GUATEMALA CITY (AP) — Guatemala on Friday announced national elections for Nov. 11, opening the way for a crowded field of presidential contenders that is expected to include former military ruler Jose Efrain Rios Montt.

The winner will succeed civilian President Vinicio Cerezo.

New Israeli coalition stakes out hard line

JERUSALEM (AP) — Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir formed a right-wing government Friday that drew immediate criticism for its hard-line policies on the Palestinian uprising and on Jewish settlements in occupied territories.

The formation of the new coalition broke a political deadlock that began March 15, when the government collapsed after Shamir failed to endorse U.S. proposals for peace talks with the Palestinians.

The new government, which still needs parliamentary approval, said it would expand settlement in the occupied lands and indicated it was prepared to use harsh measures to quell the 30-month-old Palestinian uprising against Israeli rule of the West Bank and Gaza Strip.

Both those positions were likely to further strain Israel's relations with the United States, which has urged a more conciliatory stance toward the Palestinians.

In addition, the new government's policy guidelines rule out any talks with the Palestine Liberation Organization — which Israel views as a terrorist group — and any negotiations concerning the status of Jerusalem, which it considers "Israel's eternal capital."

Washington has pressed for Israeli-Palestinian talks and does not recognize Israel's annexation of Arab east Jerusalem.

Faisal Husseini, a leading pro-PLO activist in the occupied territories, said the new government will create "more obstacles in the way of peace."

"I believe this government will try to crush the uprising, and the uprising will prove there is no way to crush it," he said. "But the price will be high."

The rival Labor Party called the new coalition "a government whose principles and policies deviate from the interests of Israel and its citizens, the most anti-Israeli government that ever arose."

Labor leader Shimon Peres predicted the coalition would be plagued by infighting, saying: "Most of its time and energy will be spent in holding it together."

Shamir telephoned President Chaim Herzog to report the formation of the government just hours before his 42-day mandate expired at sundown.

Czechoslovakians revel in free elections

PRAGUE, Czechoslovakia (AP) — Voters cast ballots Friday in Czechoslovakia's first free elections following four decades of Communist rule, bringing democracy to their country only months after the overthrow of their hard-line rulers.

President Vaclav Havel, the former dissident playwright elected by Parliament in December after a peaceful revolution, was loudly cheered as he walked with his wife Olga from his central Prague home to vote.

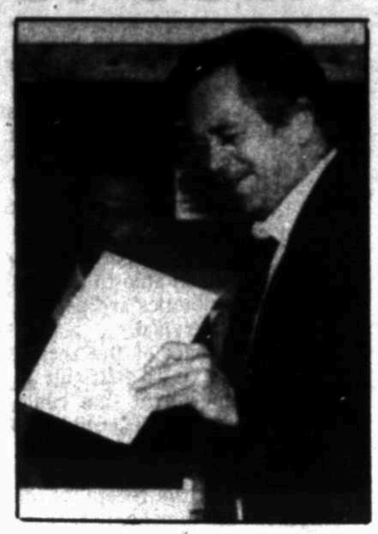
Jostled by the crowd of about 200 people as the couple emerged from the polling station minutes later, Olga was asked how it felt to vote freely.

"Beautiful," she said.

Voters dressed in their Sunday best turned out in moderate numbers across Prague for the two-day election to choose the 300 deputies that will sit in a new federal Parliament. Also at stake were seats for the regional Parliaments in the Czech and Slovak republics.

The new Parliament will choose a president, and it is expected to elect Havel. Parliament's chief task during its two-year term is to rewrite the constitution.

That will mean dealing with rising separatist sentiment in Slovakia, where many would like to see a looser alliance replace the federation of Czech and Slovak republics set up by the Communists in 1968.



President Vaclav Havel

The first of the 11.2 million registered voters to cast their ballots were the coal miners of Ostrava, a mining and industrial center on the Polish border long known as a bastion of Stalinism.

Their polling stations opened two hours ahead of the 2 p.m. (7 a.m. CDT) start of voting so their mining shifts would not be disrupted.

Polls close at 2 p.m. today, with initial returns expected later in the afternoon. Final results are not expected until Sunday.

Civic Forum, the movement founded by Havel to lead last winter's revolution, and its Slovak partner, Public Against Violence, were heavily favored to emerge strongest from the voting.

"Civic Forum will do well, I'm sure," said Havel's spokesman, Michael Zantovsky, after voting in a Prague suburb.

Echoing the latest pre-election opinon polls, Zantovsky predicted that Civic Forum would get about 40 percent of the vote, with the alliance of Christian Democrats polling about 20 percent nationwide but doing better in rural Slovakia.

Asked about the Communists, Zantovsky made a thumbs-down gesture. "Less than 10 percent," he said.

All the 21 parties contesting the election alongside the Communists campaigned on a heavily anti-Communist platform.

The fairly subdued campaign turned acrimonious and even violent in its final week. A bomb planted by unknown terrorists injured 19 people in Prague Saturday.

On Wednesday, a fierce row broke out between the Civic Forum and the Christian Democrats over the alleged links of a top Christian Democrat, Josef Bartoncik, with the hated Communist secret police.

Havel, 53, who before last winter's revolution was a reluctant candidate for office, has clearly grown into his post and enjoyed both guiding his country toward democracy and helping to reshape the order of a changing Europe.

"I liked him as a dissident, and I like him even more as a president," said Havel's neighbor, Zdenek Zadnik, 64, one of the crowd waiting to see Havel vote.

During the voting, authorities banned the sale of alcohol except beer.

Scientists seek clues to antibiotics' natural role

N.Y. Times News Service

Fifty years ago, on the morning of May 25, 1940, Howard Florey and his colleagues carried out some experiments on mice that demonstrated the antibiotic effects of penicillin. Since then, penicillin and other antibiotics have helped to save innumerable lives.

Yet even today nobody is sure how antibiotics first came to exist in the microbes that produce them.

Scientists want to find out, because this knowledge might help them to track down new antibiotics, which are becoming rapidly harder to find.

Two papers, soon to be published, by Dr.Dudley Williams and his colleagues at the University of Cambridge, and Dr. Julian Davies, of the Institut Pasteur in Paris, proffer different answers to the question.

Nobody knows what (if anything) antibiotics do in the natural world outside the laboratory. But in the laboratory, antibiotics attack organisms that are harmful to the organisms that produce them. They work against their targets in precise ways, almost as if they had been specifically designed to combat them, blocking the synthesis of big molecules, such as DNA, proteins or the molecules that are used to build cell walls.

Williams supports an intuitively appealing view: that antibiotics evolved as weapons to be used in fights with rival microbes. The soil harbors a teeming zoo of microorganisms. One gram contains over a million bacteria, a million actinomycetes (fungus-like bacteria), just under a million protozoa, almost a million fungi and up to 10,000 algae, each struggling to survive.

Antibiotics could give organisms an advantage over their rivals, and thus they could have become fine-tuned for their destructive task by the competitive pressures of evolution.

Williams argues that the fact that microbes have evolved in all sorts of environments can help to explain the huge variety of antibiotics. He assumes antibiotics have some present-day function because it would be ineffficient for an organism to waste energy making chemicals it did not need.

But the weapons theory is not air-tight. Although the world of the soil is highly competitive, nobody has yet been able to demonstrate that antibiotics are used in the fight for survival.

Admittedly, part of the reason for this is that it is diffficult to design an experiment that could prove it. However, if antibiotics have evolved just to combat rivals in their own environmental niches, why are the receptors for them (i.e., the biochemical keyholes they slot into) spread so diffusely? Some are found in mammals. Even the organisms that produce antibiotics have receptors for them.

This is why Davies has developed an alternative — and more speculative — theory to explain the emergence of antibiotics. He thinks they are molecular fossils, first synthesized four billion years ago at the time when amino acids (the building blocks of proteins) and nucleic acids (the building blocks of DNA and its relative, RNA) were first made.

Davies believes that antibiotics once helped to make other cell chemicals, acting perhaps as templates, until they were replaced by larger, more efficient molecules that evolved later on. These primordial antibiotics eventually changed their roles to become fighters.

Support for his theory comes from the study of tetracycline and other antibiotics that work by interfering with the way proteins are made. Such antibiotics bind tightly to ribosomes, the bits of the cell which churn out proteins.

Binding sites for these antibiotics have been identified in the RNA found in ribosomes. This RNA is thought to have been part of the earliest forms of life — it may well pre-date DNA.

So the binding-sites, like the antibiotics themselves, could be remnants of a primordial past; According to this theory, modern antibiotics work via interactions at these ancient but well-conserved binding sites.

Work involving thiostrepton and other antibiotics has shown that these substances do not merely inhibit the making of proteins. In some conditions (for example, at low concentrations) they can also help it along.

Bacterial mutants that depend on antibiotics for protein-synthesis have been isolated; they could be evolutionary throwbacks.

Antibiotic-like chemicals have been identified in meteorite dust, which carries clues to the organic molecules known to have existed in the primitive days of the earth.

Again, this evidence is far from conclusive. If, however, Davies is correct, there might be novel ways to find new antibiotics. Instead of screening bugs for inhibitory reactions, ways might be found to detect their ability to promote protein synthesis, and to do other jobs.

Whichever theory is correct, other organisms, apart from the traditional simple microbes, could be an abundant new source of antibiotics.

Future doubtful for pari-mutuel racing in Texas

FREDERICKSBURG, Texas (AP) — Shirley Breitschopf was happy to be racing her thoroughbreds in Texas over the Memorial Day weekend instead of distant tracks in Louisiana, Oklahoma or New Mexico.

But like others who competed at the Gillespie County Fair Grounds, Texas' lone pari-mutuel race track now in operation, the Gonzales horse owner knows she faces an uncertain professional future in her home state.

"There's definitely a future in Texas for horse racing," she said, "But making a living at it? I'll tell you next year."

For most horse owners, next year signifies more Texas tracks open and a legislative battle to reduce the state's share of track revenues. Currently, the state levies a 5 percent tax on each dollar wagered.

Texas Racing Commissioners and state Sen. O.H. "Ike" Harris, R-Dallas, say lowering the state's take and the successful opening of a few more tracks will make pari-mutuel horse racing in Texas the tradition that it is in surrounding states.

Their optimism contrasts sharply with current reality.

Pari-mutuel wagering became legal in Texas three years ago. But so far, the state can boast only the Class III track at Fredericksburg, and that only 12 days a year. That track is running, in part, because local residents donated about $300,000 of the $500,000 needed to bring the track up to betting standards.

The track's success also depends on racing tradition. Although pari-mutuel betting has just begun, horses have been racing in Fredericksburg since 1881.

The revenue that a small, Class III track can produce for the state is also limited, since state law permits a maximum of only 16 days' racing per year.

Three days of racing at Fredericksburg generated $805,881 in wagers, of which the state received $40,294 and the Gillespie County Fair and Festival Association received $64,470, according to Racing Commission figures.

A larger, Class II track opened last October in Brady. But G. Rollie White Downs closed in December after losing more than $1 million during its single fall racing season.

The Racing Commission reported that financing is not yet secure for six other proposed Class II tracks.

Class I tracks, Kentucky Derby-style facilities which can cost $60 million to $75 million to build, have been even more difficult to finance in Texas.

None have been licensed. The Racing Commission recently granted permission to potential Class I track operators in both Dallas-Ft. Worth and San Antonio to extend their license application periods so they could look for additional construction financing.

Various racing specialists have also expressed concern that Texas has too few good-quality race horses and too few racing fans.

But when someone suggested to quarterhorse owner Shawn Cover of San Antonio that racing had no future in Texas, he gestured to the spectator section of the Fredericksburg track on one of its opening days. "Look right there, the grandstand is full."

Harris, who sponsored the state's pari-mutuel legislation, and Hugh Fitzsimons, chairman of the Racing Commission, believe they can overcome current problems with fiscal incentives to track operators that would follow a lowering of the state wagering tax.

"I'm an eternal optimist," Fitzsimons said shortly before the Fredericksburg track opening. "It's a new beginning. I'm convinced we're going to get this legislation improved."

But owners are reluctant to train their horses for racing at a cost of $25 to $60 per day when they can only gain small purses, said Jeff Hooper of the Texas Thoroughbred Breeders' Association.

"Wherever the big purses are, that is what's going to draw people," quarterhorse owner Cover said.

Harris said he is offering a new bill that would reduce the state's take from a flat 5 percent of track revenue to a percentage based on a sliding scale.

Study shows FHA faces more loses

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Federal Housing Administration, which suffered massive losses in 1988, will continue to have financial problems unless changes are made, Housing Secretary Jack Kemp said recently.

The FHA's mutual mortgage fund, which insures low downpayment mortgages on single-family homes, "has not been operated on a sound basis," Kemp told the housing subcommittee of the Senate Banking Committee.

"The situation is manageable, if Congress adopts the changes we are recommending," he said.

The accounting firm of Price Waterhouse began studying the fund at the request of the Department of Housing and Urban Development after last fall's disclosure that FHA suffered a $4.2 billion loss in 1988.

The study concluded that the fund "is not currently sound," and could lose $200 million to $667 million this year depending on economic conditions.

The fund's net worth, the study said, declined from $8 billion in 1979 to $2.6 billion last year as claim payments exceeded premiums every year for the last decade.

Kemp blamed the losses on "past mismanagement and neglect."

"It is clear to us that FHA faces financial problems unless we make changes," he said.

Kemp's proposals for improving the fund include:

—Establishing a minimum capital standard of 1.25 percent of total insurance, with a goal of reaching 2 percent in the 1990s.

—A premium structure related to the risk of the loan, with higher premiums for loans with lower downpayments.

—Ending the practice of allowing borrowers to finance their closing costs.

—Discontinue paying distributive shares for future business but continue them on past loans.

James A. Waddell, partner at Price Waterhouse, said FHA failed to tighten underwriting practices as private mortgage insurance companies did in response to increasing loan defaults in the 1980s.

He said future losses would depend on economic conditions, including the average home appreciation rate, with larger increases in home values increasing the fund's financial health.

"Under the consensus economic scenario, the 1990 business is expected to generate losses of $208 million," Waddell said. "Under a less favorable but reasonably possible scenario, the business will lose $667 million."

John M. Ols Jr., director of housing and community development issues for the General Accounting Office, an investigative arm of Congress, said a 5 percent to 9 percent appreciation rate for homes would be sufficient to cover anticipated losses over the next decade.

But a rate of less than 4 percent, he said, would require infusions of taxpayer money.

ROME — Lowly thought of Cameroon, rated a 500-1 shot by British oddsmakers, turned the World Cup soccer tournament upside down at the outset with a 1-0 victory Friday over defending champion Argentina. It was a well-deserved triumph, ranking with the 1-0 decision the United States registered over England in 1950.

"I think both teams played on the same level, and we had more luck," Valeri Nepomniachi, Cameroon's coach, said.

They also had Francois Omam Biyik who, on this day, before 73,780 in Milan's Meazza Stadium, outplayed the great Diego Maradona.

Seles eyes French title

Associated Press

PARIS — The last time they played, Steffi Graf had the long winning streak and Monica Seles broke it.

Going into Saturday's women's final of the French Open, it's Seles who is on a roll.

Seles, the 16-year-old Yugoslav, takes a 31-match winning streak into the championship meeting. If she beats Graf, it will be her sixth consecutive tournament title.

But Graf has the experience to stop Seles' streak and derail her title hopes.

She has been in the last 13 Grand Slam finals starting with the 1987 French Open, where she won the first of her two titles at Paris. She lost in last year's final to ■Agassi, Gomez advance to men's finals/2B.

Arantxa Sanchez-Vicario.

Overall, the West German has won eight of the last nine Grand Slams events and nine of 12.

"Everybody is very motivated for Grand Slam tournaments," Graf said.

This is Seles' first Grand Slam final. If she wins, she will be the youngest French Open women's champion, supplanting Sanchez-Vicario, who won as a 17-year-old.

"I won't think about it when I go onto the court because I know I won't play well and I'll get scared and my strokes will go bad," Seles said. "Saturday is going to be a totally new match against Steffi with new conditions. I am not going to think about the fact that I beat her three weeks ago."

At the German Open on May 20, Seles beat Graf 6-4, 6-3, ending Graf's 66-match winning streak. A week earlier, Seles defeated Martina Navratilova 6-1, 6-1 in the Italian Open final.

Midland team dominates distance events

By Joe Wyatt
Staff Writer

City of Midland Swim Team members captured nine of 10 long distance events Friday as the West Texas Invitational Swim Meet got its 43rd annual session going at the Doug Russell Pool.

COM 14-year-old Clay Brown had the most impressive outing during the three-day meet's initial day, winning both the 13-14 boys 400 intermediate medley and the 1,500-meter freestyle.

"I was real tired at the end of the 1,500," Brown described his second event, an event he led easily from start to finish.

"I just tried to keep my stroke long and keep a steady pace," he said. I think I took my butterfly out a little fast in the 400, but I was pretty pleased with the way things went."

Brown finished the 400 medley at 5:23.04, outdistancing teammate How-

Chaps finish in third

■ Behind Dean Robertson's 70-stroke round, Midland College's golf team surprised the field at the national junior college tournament.

Staff Report

SCOTTSDALE, Ariz. — Midland College, who got into the National Junior College national golf tournament here by an at-large bid, surprised the field with an amazing third place finish behind the hot gun of Dean Robertson.

The Chaparrals, a major dark horse in this national event, shot a team score of 296 Friday for a final team score of 1192, seven strokes behind host Scottsdale, the two-time defending national champions.

Central, Ala., unseated Scottsdale as champion with a final round 292 for an 1176 total, an overall winner by nine strokes.

"I can't say enough about these guys," said MC golf coach and athletic director Delnor Poss. "To do what we did with just five players is awesome. They didn't have anyone behind them pushing, but they all performed so well under some trying circumstances."

And trying the circumstances were with another day in 112 degree weather. It was over 110 degrees every day of the tournament.

Robertson, the MC sophomore from Glasglow, Scotland, made a daring run

Portending playoffs prod Paterno

Romanticists would have us believe that Jean Laffite was acting out some long concealed patriotic fervor when he threw his lot in with the Americans down around New Orleans. But historians might argue that the man simply knew which way the wind was blowing.

Wyatt

It's a known fact that the battle of New Orleans was fought — and easily won with minimal American casulties — after the peace had already been made far to the north and east of the fracas. Whether the previously independent Laffite knew the war was over or just had good horse-sense is unimportant. What is important is that he made a strong America stronger while turning a potential nemesis into a cautious ally before it was too late.

Now then, is Joe Paterno acting out some long-standing desire to rub shoulders with the elite of the Big 10, perhaps lend them a hand in their time of need, or has he tossed Penn State's lot in with the Bigger 10 because he knows which way the wind is blowing?

Put your money on the latter.

Penn State has long played its other sports under the auspicies of the Atlantic 10 Conference. But never has its football program had to answer to anything this side of the NCAA, which in turn has never had to wag so much as a recriminatory finger in Joe Paterno's direction.

Old Joe can seemingly do whatever he chooses to do, both at State College and as one of the very few favored members of the NCAA. Joe wanted to join the Big 10, so he did. But why?

No, Penn State will never again be compelled to fill out its schedule with Rutgers while more appealing foes are embroiled in conference play. Penn State will instead face the powerhouse known as Northwestern on a regular basis. Yes, Michigan and Ohio State. Notre Dame, Miami or Pittsburgh? Probably not.

Most certainly the Big 10 takes care of its own. Conference members all take home a share of postseason money made by a successful team therein. But Penn State football has consistently hauled in big postseason money and never had to share the loot with anyone.

Paterno, perhaps weary from his steady diet of Oranges, Sugar and Cotton, feels it's time to smell the Roses. Maybe one of college football's grandaddys wants to play in the Grandaddy of Them All, the only high-dollar darling from which he's been barred since joining the Lion's staff.

No. The most obvious reason for Penn State's sudden maneauver is the very real possibility of a playoff for a national championship. That's what has kindled Joe's interest in conference play. It's coming, Joe knows it and so he's joined the Big 10 so as not to miss it. Period.

That is not to say he likes it. But even Paterno cannot change the course that has long since been laid.

Public sentiment has long favored a national playoff system for college football. And with who but their beloved Joe Paterno would the NCAA share tidings of what looms ahead?

Argetina's Diego Maradona is prone as Benjamin Massing (4) and Stephen Eta Tataw of Camaroon leap over him.

Argentina falls in Cup opener

Associated Press

ROME — Often called the world's greatest sporting event, the World Cup began with perhaps its greatest upset.

Cameroon, rated a 500-1 shot by British oddsmakers, turned the tournament upside down at the outset with a 1-0 victory Friday over defending champion Argentina. It was a well-deserved triumph, ranking with the 1-0 decision the United States registered over England in 1950.

"I think both teams played on the same level, and we had more luck," Valeri Nepomniachi, Cameroon's coach, said.

They also had Francois Omam Biyik who, on this day, before 73,780 in Milan's Meazza Stadium, outplayed the great Diego Maradona.

While Maradona was being guarded tightly and fouled often — he was victimized on 12 of Cameroon's 30 fouls — Biyik often broke free. He got the only goal with his team shorthanded.

Four minutes after teammate Andrea Kana Bayik was ejected for a brutal tackle, Omam Biyik put his head on a free kick from Thomas Makanaky and sent it bouncing toward the net. It slithered off the hands of goalie Nery Pumpido and into the goal.

"It was my dream coming here to score the first goal of the tournament, and now it's come true," said the 24-year-old striker who connected for five goals in qualifying games, including the one that got Cameroon into the World Cup for the second time. "I still can't believe it."

Maradona, whose magic led Argentina to the 1986 title, doesn't believe his team is out of it, even though it almost certainly needs a victory and a tie to have a chance to advance. Argentina plays the Soviet Union and Romania.

"We can still win it," Maradona said. "But we have to beat the Soviets and Romania. We can't afford to lose again.

"Now we want revenge."

The stunning upset followed a spectacular 25-minute pregame extravaganza featured 160 models wearing the creations of four noted Italian designers, 200 gymnasts, three singers, 24 giant soccer balls and one giant helium balloon that looked like a soccer ball.

Four heads of state — presidents Francesco Cossiga of Italy, Carlos Menem of Argentina, Paul Biya of Cameroon and Fernando Collor De Mello of Brazil — watched the ceremony from the stands.

The game-day alcohol ban already instituted in Cagliari and Milan spread to Rome, Turin, Bari and Palermo, Sicily. In Rome, the prohibition on liquor sales is restricted to airports, train and bus stations, ports and along roads leading to the city where Italy plays Austria Saturday night.

World Cup

Interior Minister Antonio Gava had recommended such bans in all 12 World Cup cities as a way to prevent violence.

Two Britons were arrested Friday shortly after their charter flight arrived at Cagliari, Sardinia, and were charged with illegal possession of cocaine, hashish and amphetamines.

In the past week, three Britons were jailed for 20 days for damaging their Cagliari hotel room, and another received a suspended sentence after attacking an off-duty policeman.

In Genoa, meanwhile, two Britons were arrested Friday while waiting to board a ferry for Cagliari when police found they were carrying knives and chains.

After the wild beginning, the month-long tournament continues Saturday when the Soviet Union plays Romania at Bari, while the United Arab Emirates takes on Colombia at Bologna — where the stadium was given a waiver by the Interior Ministry just one day after its fire exits were found unfit for emergency evacuation.

The ministry granted the waiver because sufficient security forces will be in the stadium to ensure order and help evacuation during any emergency.

The United States begins its first World Cup finals action in 40 years on Sunday with a game against Czechoslovakia at Florence. The Americans, considered even longer shots than Cameroon, have to be buoyed by Friday's result.

"This is it. We've worked two years now for this," American goaltender Tony Meola said. "It's something that we deserve. We want to go out and prove we can play."

The Italians, of course, must prove themselves every day under the pressure of heavy scrutiny. Host teams often are favored to win the World Cup and the Italian public expects nothing less.

"Our temperature is up to the right point, and I don't want to overstress my players. ... I'd say we're at a medium-high level right now," Coach Azeglio Vicini said Friday.

"We know we're one of the favorites, but there are five or six other teams that have players who are just as talented. To be favored to the degree that we have been perhaps is not good."

Franz Beckenbauer's mood was not too good. The West German coach complained about an International Football Federation (FIFA) decision to allow the two game subsitutes to be chosen from a list of five players.

French final features Agassi, Gomez

Associated Press

PARIS — Andre Agassi and Andres Gomez made it to the final of the French Open Friday, setting up a battle of brashness versus desire.

Agassi, the No. 3 seed, beat unseeded Jonas Svensson of Sweden, 6-1, 6-4, 3-6, 6-3, in a match delayed at the start and interrupted briefly by rain in the second game.

Gomez of Ecuador, ignited by a run of seven games, blew past Austria's Thomas Muster, 7-5, 6-1, 7-5 in the other semifinal.

It will be the first Grand Slam final for the 20-year-old Agassi and the 30-year-old Gomez, who is seeded fourth. They have split four previous matches with Agassi winning the most recent in the third round at Key Biscayne, Fla., in March in three sets.

Agassi had no trouble with Svensson at the start, racing to a 3-0 lead with brutal forehands and precise passing shots.

Svensson held his serve for the only time in the first set in the fourth game then Agassi finished out the set, 6-3. He raced to a 4-0 lead in the second with overpowering ease.

Svensson closed to 5-4 but Agassi still had too much and went up two sets with a 6-4 win.

In the third set, Agassi went up a break and appeared to be headed to an easy victory. But Svensson refused to fold and took five of the next seven games to force the match into a fourth set.

But Agassi came back and went up 3-0. Svensson again came back to close to 4-3.

However in the eighth game , Svensson made a pair of backhand errors to give Agassi a chance to break.

Svensson attempted a serve-and-volley but popped the ball long to have Agassi serve for the match.

Agassi

Gomez

Agassi controlled the game, getting a match point when Svensson hit a service return long.

The match ended when Agassi came in behind his serve and drilled a forehand into the corner that Svensson couldn't handle.

Gomez has won two clay-court titles this spring, in Barcelona and Madrid. Muster had captured three tournaments, including the Italian Open, where he beat Gomez in the semifinals.

"When we came off the court in Rome, I knew I hadn't played my game," Gomez said. "I wasn't going to lose twice to the same guy. I just put pressure on him all the time."

In this Grand Slam semifinal, the tables were turned after Gomez had a hot run that swung the match in his favor after 5-5 in the first set.

Gomez went ahead, 6-5, taking his service at love. Then he quickly took three points on Muster's service behind two deep approach shots in the corner that Muster couldn't handle.

After Muster fought off one set point, another deep forehand in the corner handcuffed Muster again. The Austrian sent it long to give Gomez the set, 7-5.

Gomez continued his blitz, rocketing to a 5-0 lead as he took 24 of 28 points. Muster was making errors and Gomez was using his 6-foot-4 frame to make some good returns.

Muster finally held his serve to make it 5-1 but Gomez closed out the second set with Gomez lining a forehand winner that Muster could only look at. Muster scored just 11 points in the set.

In the third set Gomez broke Muster in the third game to go up 2-1 then held for 3-1.

But Muster came back to even the set at 4-4 then it was 5 -5.

"I didn't want to go to a fourth set," Gomez said. "I wasn't tired but I didn't want him to get back in the match."

Gomez then took the next two games to close out the match.

First he broke Muster with a backhand down the line to set up a break point. Muster sent a forehand long to let Gomez serve for the match at 6-5.

With the chance for a Grand Slam final on his racket, Gomez didn't miss the opportunity. He used a good backhand volley placement to set up match point then had a backhand passing shot to advance.

Gomez had an easy time in the tournament until he met Muster. In the first five rounds he didn't meet a seeded player and had a walkover in the fourth round when his opponent, Magnus Gustafssson, had to drop out of the tournament with an injured knee.

Rangers ink six draftees

ARLINGTON (AP) — The Texas Rangers on Friday announced the signings of six players selected in this week's amateur free agent draft.

The signees are Todd Guggiana, third baseman from Long Beach State, 19th round; Mathew Whiteside, Arkansas State right-handed pitcher, 25th round; Lee Hodge, University of Mississippi second baseman, 36th round; Timothy Cain, University of Connecticut right-handed pitcher, 39th round; Timothy Stafford, McNeese State right-handed pitcher, 41st round; and George Evangelista, Merrimac College shortstop-second baseman, 47th round.

Texas now has 22 of its 60 draft selections under contract.

SWTSU quarterback seeks another school

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Kevin Smith, a freshman quarterback for Southwest Texas State University last season, has left the school in hopes of playing football elsewhere, said the team's coach and the player's father.

Smith decided to attend another school after learning the Bobcats would use a run-oriented offense this year, head coach Dennis Franchione said Thursday.

Franchione is in his first year as SWT head coach. He replaced John O'Hara, who was fired at the end of last season.

Smith, who started six games at quarterback for the Bobcats last season, loves the school but wants to play where he can do more passing, said his father, Don Smith.

"He has aspirations to go beyond college ball, and he thought it would be better to play for a team that would pass more," Don Smith told the San Antonio Express-News.

In eight games last season as a freshman, Kevin Smith completed 47 of 96 passes for 647 yards and three touchdowns. The 6-foot, 200-pound quarterback threw seven interceptions.

Marshall University in Huntington, W.Va., has offered Kevin Smith a scholarship.

San Antonio drops Angels in 12-9 game

By Bill Grimes
Staff Writer

It was more of the same for the Midland Angels in the opener of a six-game series with the San Antonio Missions Friday at Angels Stadium.

As has been the case for most of this Texas League season, the Angels' ample offensive output wasn't enough to offset mediocre pitching in a 12-9 Mission win.

The Haloes, who have lost four of their last five, staked starter Carl Hamilton to a 5-0 lead in the first inning on a two-run double by the departing Steve DeAngelis (see related story), and RBI singles by Jim Aylward, Mike Knapp and Scott Cerny.

But the on-again, off-again Hamilton was way off Friday, allowing six earned runs on five hits and three walks in 1⅓ innings. The veteran lefthander departed after surrendering a three-run homer to Lorenzo "Henry" Rodriguez to cap the Missions' comeback. Eric Karros greeted reliever Luis Merejo with the second of his five hits, but designated hitter Adam Brown bounced into a 4-6-3 double play to retire the side.

The Angels scratched across a run in their half of the second on a single and stolen base by Wiley Lee, and consecutive groundouts by Ruben Amaro and DeAngelis.

But the Missions pummeled Merejo, 0-3, with three runs in the third with the help of back-to-back doubles by Steve Finken and Homar Rojas. The Angels committed both their errors that inning, but all three runs off Merejo were earned.

Ironically, Merejo had recorded a 1.69 in his previous 11 outings after a rocky start.

Karros scored the last three runs for San Antonio after singling in the fourth, tripling in the sixth and crushing his seventh homer of the season in the eighth. The big first baseman has been among TL batting leaders early this season, despite a recent 6-for-60 slump that dropped his batting average 70 points in the last three weeks.

"I was just due to have a decent night," Karros said.

San Antonio skipper John Shoemaker feels that his team has had a lot of decent nights recently to maintain a slim chance at the TL West first-half crown. The Missions gained a game on first-place Wichita, which lost 5-3 to El Paso on Friday.

El Paso is sandwiched in second place a game behind Wichita, while Midland remains 11½ games out.

"We had a good series with El Paso (winning four of six), and we're looking forward to a good series here," Shoemaker said.

The teams square off again tonight with Glenn Carter, 1-3, set to take the mound for Midland.

Midland trio called to Canada

By Bill Grimes
Staff Writer

For Ruben Amaro, it's another step toward his ultimate dream.

For Steve DeAngelis and Tim Meeks, it's yet another chance.

Amaro, DeAngelis and Meeks, without whom the Midland Angels would be God-knows-where in the Texas League standings, were called up to the California Angels Class AAA affiliate at Edmonton after putting up some dynamite numbers for the M-Angels.

In return, Midland will receive the services of outfielders Reed Peters and John Skurla from Edmonton and pitcher Brandy Vann from Palm Springs.

The M-Angels are way, way out of the Texas League West first-half race, but it's not fault of Amaro, DeAngelis and Meeks. Amaro, 25, leaves Midland as the second-leading batter in the Texas League with a .357 mark. The son of former big league shortstop Ruben Amaro Sr. has also contributed four home runs, 38 RBI and errorless outfield play. Friday's move will be his first shot at Triple-A in his fourth year of pro ball.

"I basically set my goals to be in Triple-A sometime this season, and in the big leagues by the end of the year," Amaro said.

DeAngelis, 26, was running away with the TL RBI race at the time of his promotion. In addition to his league-leading 53 RBI, the burly slugger was tied for the league lead in homers with nine and was third in batting at .336 despite a recent slump.

This marks DeAngelis' fourth trip to Class AAA. He spent most of the 1986 season at Portland in the Pacific Coast League.

Three tied for Texas Amateur Tournament lead

MCKINNEY, Texas (AP) — Defending champion Larry Seligmann of Houston and former champion Richard Ellis of Plano shared the lead Friday with Australian Richard Blackwell after the second round of the Texas Amateur Golf Tournament.

Seligmann and Ellis each scored a 74, and Blackwell posted a tournament-low 71, for a three-way tie at two-day total of 150. Fifty-five players made the cut with scores of 162 or better. The 72-hole event winds up Sunday at Stonebridge Country Club.

Blackwell, 26, jumped to a three under par start through the first four holes Friday, but fell back after three-putt bogeys on the ninth and thirteenth holes.

Can Unbridled win Belmont sans Lasix?

N.Y. Times News Service

NEW YORK — Can Unbridled win the Belmont Stakes without Lasix? And what will be proved if he does?

Unbridled, the Kentucky Derby winner and Preakness runner-up, is by far the best of the nine 3-year-olds who are to race Saturday in the final leg of the Triple Crown. Saturday, though, he is running in New York, which means he must race without Lasix, the controversial perfomance-enhancing diuretic he used in the Derby and the Preakness.

If he runs a race anything like his last two efforts, he should win by daylight. Even an easy victory, though, would mean little: It would neither stamp him the country's best 3-year-old nor answer the question of Lasix's effect on performance or its efficacy as a treatment for bleeders.

Summer Squall, the Derby runner-up and Preakness winner, is passing the Belmont because he bled severely after a February workout and his owners do not want to run him without Lasix after a tough spring campaign.

That decision has stripped this Belmont of most of its meaning and significance and has guaranteed that Unbridled will win the $1 million Triple Crown bonus if he starts and finishes the race Saturday.

Unbridled, who had a minor bleeding incident after a race in Florida last November, will try running without Lasix, and his handlers say they expect him to perform just as well as he has before. But some Lasix users run perfectly well without the drug and others run much slower than usual.

Just 12 days ago, Criminal Type ran without Lasix in the Metropolitan Handicap at Belmont after winning the Pimlico Special on May 12 with the use of the drug.

In the Met, he ran the best race of his career, beating Housebuster and Easy Goer.

Three years ago, on the other hand, Alysheba came to New York for the Belmont Stakes afte soundly beating Bet Twice in both the Derby and the Preakness.

Without Lasix, Alysheba was beaten nearly 15 lengths. A year later, though, Alysheba returned to New York, ran without Lasix, and won one of the best Woodward Handicaps of the decade.

As if the race needed another variable, weather handicappers are forecasting some rain. Unbridled ran indifferently in his only start on a muddy track, but his pedigree suggests he should have no trouble handling one.

None of his rivals show past performances suggesting wet footing would provide either salvation or calamity, but it would inevitably provide excuses for all the losers.

Win or lose, Unbridled will get a summer vacation and then be pointed for the Breeders' Cup Classic at Belmont on Oct. 27, potentially a dream race if Summer Squall shows up and the two kings of American racing, the 4-year-olds Sunday Silence and Easy Goer, renew their rivalry as well.

Two other prominent 3-year-olds will be racing Saturday at Belmont in supporting stakes races. Rhythm, last year's champion 2-year-old, is the favorite in the Colin Stakes, and Adjudicating, who won last year's Cowdin and Champagne, goes in the Riva Ridge.

Six 3-year-old fillies were entered for Sunday's Mother Goose Stakes, the second leg of the New York filly triple crown.

Stella Madrid, winner of the first leg, the Acorn on May 26, may go off as only the third choice behind two fillies who skipped that race: Go for Wand, last year's champion 2-year-old filly, and Charon, an impressive winner of the Black-Eyed Susan at Pimlico on May 18. Danzig's Beauty, Bright Candles and Dance Colony complete the field.

Rudd heats up qualifying time

NASCAR

SONOMA, Calif. (AP) — Ricky Rudd topped a record-breaking session of qualifying Friday by winning the pole position for Sunday's Banquet Frozen Foods 300 kilometer NASCAR stock car race at Sears Point International Raceway.

Rudd, who won the inaugural Winston Cup event here last year, was one of six drivers to break the track qualifying mark of 1 minute, 40.754 seconds — 90.041 mph — set by Rusty Wallace in winning the pole last June.

Mark Martin was the first to top it, lapping the 2.52-mile, 12-turn road circuit in 1:40.658, or 90.134 mph.

Dale Earnhardt lowered it to 1:40.247, 90.496, before Rudd drove his Chevrolet Lumina around the hilly Northern California circuit in a blazing 1:39.743, 90.954.

Others faster than the old record were Ernie Irvan, who earned the outside position on the front row with a lap of 1:40.084, 90.644; Bill Elliott at 1:40.646, 90.138, and Tommy Kendall, 1:40.715, 90.076.

Kendall, a former IMSA GTO road racing champion, is entered in only his second Winston Cup event. Last August, on the road course at Watkins Glen, N.Y., he led late in the race before crashing and finishing 27th.

The temperature matched the sizzling speed, approaching 100 degrees in the air and 115 on the track during the qualifying session.

That was a big change from last year's opening session, when temperatures were in the 70s and the wind was gusting.

"The speeds were right at a second quicker than last year," Rudd said. "If it had been cool like last year, they probably would have been another second and a half faster."

Rounding out the top 10 were Ken Schrader at 1:40.853, 89.953; Winston Cup point leader Morgan Shepherd, 1:41.343, 89.953; Terry Labonte, 1:41.362, 89.501, and Dale Jarrett 1:41.423, 89.447.

Wallace was a disappointing 11th, turning a lap of 1:41.431, 89.440.

The top 25 positions were filled in Friday's qualifications, with the rest of the 42-car field to be set in another round of time trials Saturday.

Among the drivers failing to qualify Friday were Richard Petty, Harry Gant, Dick Trickle and Geoff Bodine.

Rudd, who has won two poles this season and 18 in his career, said, "We were probably the only Winston Cup team to test here this year.

"I think it will make more difference in the race than it did in qualifying. We didn't work so hard on running one fast lap. We were working on the best setup.

"The biggest thing about winning the pole is for the guys back at the shop," Rudd said. "It gives them the boost they deserve. We haven't had a solid, positive morale booster in about three weeks."

As for Friday's quick lap, Rudd said, "It was a pretty good lap, but it was pretty wild.

"In the Olympics, when you watch those guys ski through those gates, if you miss one gate it throws you off through the next three or four. That's the way this is.

"To attack the track like you have to do in qualifying, you take a chance of missing one of those gates. I'm happy I was able to clip every one of them like I wanted to. I didn't miss any gates today."

Maradona hopeful

MILAN, Italy (AP) — Diego Maradona, disappointed about his performance in the World Cup opener, believes Argentina is still a favorite for soccer's top prize.

"We can still win it, but we have to beat the Soviets and Romania," Maradona said after the defending World Cup champions lost 1-0 to the "Indomitable Lions" of Cameroon in Group B on Friday night.

"We can't afford to lose again. Now we want revenge," the star striker said.

Maradona said Argentina could have beaten Cameroon "had we not made so many mistakes in the first half."

Maradona seldom looked dangerous as Argentina was beaten by a 66th-minute header by Francois Omam Biyick.

"But I felt comfortable up to their goal," said Maradona, who didn't take a single shot against goalkeeper Thomas N'Kono in the match. "Then, after their goal, the situation changed."

Maradona said he didn't think Cameroon was fouling him intentionally.

Geddes rides nervousness to lead

LPGA

WILMINGTON, Del. (AP) — Jane Geddes overcame a case of nerves and apprehension Friday to shoot a 3-under-par 68 for a one-stroke lead in the $650,000 LPGA McDonald's Championship.

Geddes, 30, who hasn't won since capturing five of her seven tour titles in 1987, had nines of 33 and 35 over the 6,366-yard DuPont Country Club course to complete 36 holes at 136, six shots under par.

One stroke behind was Patty Sheehan, the tour's No. 4 money winner, who shot 67 on Friday for a two-day total of 137.

At 138 was unheralded Laurie Rinker, the first-round leader. She bogeyed three of the last four holes to fall out of the lead, settling for a round of 71.

Geddes, starting on the back nine, parred the first five holes and then chipped in from 35 feet for birdie on No. 14. She eagled No. 16 by putting a 4-wood appraoch within 20 feet of the pin and sinking the putt. From there, she strung together 11 consecutive pars.

Steinbrenner bashing in vogue around New York

NEW YORK (AP) — Firing the manager is nothing new for George Steinbrenner, who made Bucky Dent the 18th victim in the 17 years he's owned the New York Yankees.

But it has touched a nerve in New York, where just about everyone wants to have Steinbrenner fired. Even the team's media outlets have joined the bandwagon.

While Commissioner Fay Vincent was studying a report on Steinbrenner's ownership of the Yankees, a man-bites dog situation was developing, as the radio and television stations that carry the team's games attacked the man under whose stewardship the team has become the worst in baseball.

Steinbrenner-bashing is hardly new in New York, but the dismissal of the popular Dent on Wednesday and the team's 18-33 record going into Friday's game seemed to have turned it into a new art form.

While it was nothing new that nearly every columnist within 1,000 miles took off on him Thursday, the outbursts from the team's broadcast outlets, normally hesitant to bite the hand that feeds them, demonstrated the strength of the anti-Steinbrenner feeling.

"He's an easy target," said Tony Kubek, the ex-Yankee who attacked Steinbrenner on the air as the lead-in to the team's telecast from Boston Wednesday night.

"It's so easy it's boring. It was something I wanted to get off my chest. I felt badly for Bucky. They say a manager is hired to be fired, but that phrase is meaningless around here."

Still, the latest critic is hardly a likely one — Fred Weinhaus, general manager of WABC radio, the Yankees' flagship station.

"We're tired of what we have and we deserve better," said Weinhaus, who has run editorials demanding that Steinbrenner either sell the team or bring in a knowledgeable baseball man and give him full power to run it.

"We paid a lot of money for the rights. We think the New York fan deserves a better product and we want our money's worth. I want more than Yankee tradition. I want a competitive team."

Kubek and other commentators, both in print and on the air, were most critical of Steinbrenner.

Georgia second baseman Joey Alfonso (center) and Stanford's Jeff Hammonds (right) check safe call of umpire Bob Hernandez in Friday's 5-1 Bulldog win that eliminated Stanford from the College World Series.

Dogs deny Stanford CWS

OMAHA, Neb. (AP) — Mike Rebhan proved better than top-seeded Stanford for the second time in the College World Series as the Georgia right-hander beat the Cardinal 5-1 Friday night to put Georgia in the championship game for the first time ever.

Fourth-seeded Georgia (51-19) will meet third-seeded Oklahoma State (56-16) in the final at noon on Saturday.

The Bulldogs are only the third Southeastern Conference team to make the championship game. Tennessee did it in 1951 and Alabama in 1983, but neither won the title.

Rebhan (13-5) denied Stanford (59-11) a chance to play in a third CWS title game. The Cardinal won their other two tries, in 1987 and 1988. Rebhan beat Stanford 16-2 with a five-hitter on Sunday and allowed just six on Friday.

After Stanford took a 1-0 lead on Troy Tallman's 10th home run of the year in the second inning, Georgia jumped on Stanford starter Mike Mussina (14-5) for four runs in the top of the fourth.

Mussina, who was the starting pitcher in the Bulldogs' 16-2 shelling of Stanford on Sunday, gave up a one-out double to J.R. Showalter and, one out later, a run-scoring single to Bruce Chick. Doug Radziewicz followed with another single and Ray Suplee doubled in two runs.

Terry Childers followed with a first-pitch double down the third-base line to score Suplee for a 4-1 Georgia lead.

Mussina gave up six runs and 10 hits in 5 1-3 innings in Georgia's record-tying, 11-run sixth inning Sunday. The junior All-American didn't make it into the fifth on Friday, giving way to Scott Weiss.

Weiss had the distinction of striking out four batters in his first inning of work. One of the strikeout victims, McKay Smith, reached when catcher Tallman failed to catch the third strike.

A crowd of 15,919 turned out on the still, warm night. It was a record for the eighth session of a World Series.

WYATT: Lion move just the beginning

From 1B

And if he's not been informed, he just knows. An old general himself, he knows the way of the blowing winds, and he's making a strong conference stronger to his own school's benefit. Kind of turning a potential nemesis into a cautious ally.

Now, just watch the clamor among other independents to follow suit. There has already been talk of West Virginia jumping in to make it the Big 12. That would allow the conference to use the NCAA-okayed divisional format.

South Carolina, Florida State and Miami are often mentioned in the same breath with conferences that are still on the drawing board. And why not? When the national playoff gets started - and it will - folks without a conference will be looking for at-large bids. Few will be extended.

Notre Dame can probably rest on its laurels. It will be one of very few exceptions. Most independents will have to join confernces to ensure a long football life.

Penn State's was a move that will be hurridly repeated by many.

As a canny young waiter once remarked as he gathered some coins off a table where Zsa Zsa Gabor had just dined: "It's only the tip of the iceberg."

Clemens wins 10th, Boston stays on top

Associated Press

Roger Clemens became the first 10-game winner in the majors and Boston beat Cleveland 4-3 Friday night without incident in their first meeting since last weekend's brushback battles.

The Red Sox extended their longest winning streak of the season to six. Cleveland's worst skid of the year reached six straight losses.

Last Sunday in Cleveland, a day after the teams exchanged angry words following a knockdown pitch, a bench-clearing brawl broke out when Clemens hit leadoff batter Stanley Jefferson with a pitch. Jefferson has not played since being struck in the elbow.

This time, there were no brushbacks or problems as Boston won for the ninth time in 11 games.

Clemens (10-2) won his sixth straight decision, his longest success streak since starting the 1986 season at 14-0. He gave up nine hits, including a two-run homer by rookie Beau Allred, walked three and struck out eight in seven innings. Clemens improved to 13-2 lifetime against Cleveland.

Jeff Reardon pitched two innings for his eighth save, allowing Chris James' run-scoring single in the ninth. James' fourth hit of the game put runners on first and third with one out, but Candy Maldonado struck out and Dion James flied out.

Mariners 5, Tigers 2
Tigers 6, Mariners 3

Seattle reliever Billy Swift hit pinch-hitter Gary Ward with a pitch to force home the go-ahead run in the eighth inning, and Detroit beat the Mariners 6-3 to split a twi-night doubleheader.

The Mariners won the opener 5-2. Jay Buhner homered in each game and drove in five runs and Ken Griffey got a total of five hits for Seattle.

In the second game, Tony Phillips walked with one out in the eighth, Alan Trammell doubled and Cecil Fielder drew an intentional walk from Keith Comstock (1-2). After Lloyd Moseby popped up, Swift came on and hit Ward on the right arm with the first pitch.

Chet Lemon followed with a two-run single for insurance. Mike Henneman (2-4) pitched the last 1⅓ innings for the victory.

Jeff Robinson had allowed only an infield single through the first six innings of the second game. But Griffey and Edgar Martinez each singled to start the seventh and Buhner's third home run of the season made it 3-3.

The Tigers took a 3-0 lead in the second. With two outs, Larry Sheets hit his fourth homer off Brent Knackert.

White Sox 3, Twins 2

Ron Kittle hit a solo home run, a 442-foot shot that broke an eighth-inning tie Friday night and sent Chicago over Minnesota.

Kittle, who struck out twice earlier in the game, connected against Juan Berenguer for his ninth home run of the season.

Scott Radinsky (5-0) got two outs for the victory and Bobby Thigpen pitched 1⅔ innings for his 18th save in 21 opportunities. Berenguer (4-1) relieved David West to start the eighth.

The Twins scored twice in the second off Jack McDowell. Jim Dwyer drew a leadoff walk, Brian Harper hit an RBI double and Dan Gladden singled with two outs.

Ozzie Guillen drove in both of Chicago's first two runs. He singled after a double by Scott Fletcher in the fifth, and the White Sox tied it at 2 in the seventh when Ron Karkovice bunted for a single and scored on Guillen's double.

AL Roundup

Blue Jays 11, Brewers 5

George Bell homered twice and drove in six runs, rallying Toronto over slumping Milwaukee.

Bell's fourth home run in five games, a three-run shot in the eighth inning, put Toronto ahead 7-5. He hit a two-run homer in the first and added an RBI grounder in the ninth.

The Brewers, who took a 5-4 lead with three runs in the seventh, lost for the 12th time in 16 games. Reliever Tom Gilles won his first major-league decision and Tom Henke went two innings for his eighth save.

Bell rallied the Blue Jays with his 12th home run, connecting off Chuck Crim (2-2) after a double by Junior Felix and an intentional walk to Kelly Gruber. Toronto scored four times in the ninth on Glenallen Hill's two-run single and an RBI single by Tony Fernandez.

Milwaukee, held to two runs on four hits for six innings by John Cerutti rallied as Duane Ward blew his fifth straight save opportunity.

Orioles 5, Yankees 4

Jim Leyritz, playing his first big-league game, singled home the tying run with two outs in the ninth inning, but made a throwing error in the 10th and Baltimore handed New York its seventh straight loss.

New York owner George Steinbrenner promised this week he would try young players, and Leyritz was promoted from Triple-A Columbus earlier in the day. Leyritz helped the Yankees with a pinch-single off Gregg Olson in his first major-league at-bat, but hurt them with his bases-loaded, one-out error at third base.

The Yankees, with the worst record in the majors at 18-34, fell to 0-3 under new manager Stump Merrill.

Scott returns to form

Wilson secures win with 10th inning home run

Associated Press

NL Roundup

Astros 3, Reds 1

Glenn Wilson's three-run pinch-hit homer in the 10th inning preserved Mike Scott's three-hit, 15-strikeout performance and rallied Houston to a 3-1 victory over Cincinnati on Friday night, snapping the Astros' seven-game losing streak.

The Reds, limited to one hit by Scott (3-6) over the first nine innings, took the lead in the 10th when Barry Larkin singled with one out, went to second on a groundout, stole third and scored on Benzinger's single to right.

But Eric Anthony drew a one-out walk off Randy Myers (1-1). Pinch-runner Louie Meadows went to second on a single by Rafeal Ramirez and took third on Alex Trevino's fly to center field. Wilson then homered over the right-field fence, just beyond Paul O'Neill's leap.

Scott had retired 18 straight batters before Larkin singled, extending his hitting streak to nine games. After Eric Davis grounded out, Larkin stole third and O'Neill walked before Benzinger's hit broke the tie. Scott then made Mariano Duncan his 15th strikeout victim, setting a career high.

Tom Browning continued to pitch without support. He allowed five hits, walked three and struck out seven in nine innings, extending his shutout string to 23 1-3 innings. It was the second time this season Browning has pitched nine scoreless innings without getting a decision.

Scott struck out five of the first six batters he faced and surpassed his previous season-high strikeout total of five in the third inning.

Billy Hatcher beat out a chopper to third baseman Ken Caminiti with one out in the fourth for the first hit off Scott and went to second on a balk, but was stranded.

Bill Doran singled with one out in the first inning for the first hit off Browning, who then struck out the side.

Giants 23, Braves 8

Rookie Rick Parker drove in seven runs and Will Clark hit two three-run homers as San Francisco set team records for runs and hits in a 23-8 blitz of Atlanta.

Parker, who entered the game with three RBIs in 16 games, had a three-run homer, a two-run single and a two-run double as the Giants extended their winning streak to seven games and set major league season-highs for runs and hits. Clark capped a seven-run sixth inning with his 11th homer of the season and added another three-run shot in the eighth.

Jose Uribe had four of the Giants' 27 hits, scored four runs and drove in three as the Giants won for the ninth time in 10 games in front of 32,154 fans, the largest crowd of the season at Fulton County Stadium.

The 23 runs were two more than the San Francisco team record set against St. Louis on July 9, 1988, and the 27 hits were one more than the Giants had against Los Angeles on May 13, 1958. The Giants scored 26 runs in a game in 1944 and had 31 hits in 1901, both while they were based in New York.

The victory went to reliever Trevor Wilson (1-0), who allowed two runs in two innings. Mark Thurmond pitched the final four innings for his first save, allowing solo homers to Jeff Treadway in the sixth and Lonnie Smith in the eighth.

Derek Lilliquist (2-8), the first of seven Atlanta pitchers, lost his fourth straight decision, allowing six runs in 3⅓ innings.

The Braves took a quick 3-0 lead off Bob Knepper in the first inning when Dale Murphy hit a three-run homer, his ninth of the year.

The Giants tied it in the second on Uribe's RBI single and a two-run single by Knepper. But Treadway singled in a run in the bottom of the second, giving the Braves a 4-3 lead.

Parker's homer and an RBI single by Matt Williams in the fourth made it 7-4 and Parker's two-run single in the fifth gave the Giants a five-run lead.

Jeff Blauser and Greg Olson had RBI singles for Atlanta in the fifth, but Uribe's two-run triple and Clark's first homer keyed the seven-run sixth inning.

Clark hit his second homer in the eighth and Parker had a two-run double in a four-run ninth inning.

Cubs 15, Phillies 2

Shawon Dunston's grand slam highlighted a nine-run third inning as the Cubs broke a five-game losing streak by routing Philadelphia 15-2.

Besides his slam, which followed an intentional walk to Ryne Sandberg, Dunston had an RBI grounder and walked twice as the Cubs got 16 hits and 10 walks. Sandberg had begun the inning with a homer and Hector Villanueva also homered for the Cubs.

Jeff Pico (2-0) gave up a run and six hits, while striking out two and walking two in seven innings after entering the game with a 6.64 ERA. He also was 2-for-3, plus a walk.

Major-league batting leader Len Dykstra of Philadelphia extended his hitting streak to 21 games with a single in the seventh.

Chicago went ahead 2-0 in the first. Jerome Walton scored on a wild pitch by Terry Mulholland (3-3) and Sandberg scored on Dunston's grounder that Dickie Thon juggled for an error.

Philadelphia got one run back in the second when Pico missed first base on Mulholland's grounder to Mark Grace.

But the Cubs broke it open in the third when the Cubs had their biggest inning since since they got nine in the first inning against Houston on June 3, 1987.

Expos 18, Cardinals 2

Nelson Santovenia drove in a career-high six runs, four in the first two innings, as Montreal demolished St. Louis.

Santovenia hit a three-run homer to cap a six-run first inning against former teammate Bryn Smith (6-5) and added an RBI single in the second, when the Expos scored six times against Ricky Horton. The Montreal catcher added a two-run single in the eighth.

Tim Wallach, who has at least one extra-base hit in 13 of his last 20 games, had a two-run single in the first and doubled home two runs in the second. Wallach's double was the Expos' fifth consecutive hit and followed RBI singles by Tim Raines and Andres Galarraga.

The Expos' 18 runs was one short of the franchise record and matched the major league high for the season, set by Milwaukee in an 18-0 victory over Boston on April 16.

Dennis Martinez (4-4), who had a pair of hits and three RBIs, allowed two runs and six hits in six innings to pick up his first victory since May 10. Bob Molloy and Bill Sampen finished up.

Smith who pitched nine seasons for the Expos, was making his first Olympic Stadium appearance since signing as a free agent with the Cardinals last winter.

But the right-hander lasted only one-third of an inning, allowing six runs on four hits, two walks and a hit batsman before being relieved by Horton, who got Dennis Martinez to hit into an inning-ending double play.

Carthage wins 4A title

Associated Press

Class 4A
Carthage 9, Robstown 3

Stephen Alexander and Krishna Wall pounded out two hits each as Carthage used a six-run fifth inning to surge past Robstown for the Class 4A state baseball championship.

In their first trip to the tournament, Carthage, 30-5, knocked off No. 1-ranked Robstown, which made its third trip to state in four years without winning a baseball title.

Right-handed pitcher Daniel Hodges (3-1) went the distance for Carthage, allowing seven hits and five walks while striking out four.

"We were nervous, we knew we had to get four innings out of Daniel," Carthage Coach Scott Lee said. "We got a lot more than that, and we played great defense behind him."

With the score tied at 2-2 in the fifth, Carthage struck for six runs on four hits and two errors while chasing Robstown starter J.J. Velasquez, 13-4, the losing pitcher.

Velasquez was the winner in Robstown's semifinal victory a day earlier, pitching just two outs in relief.

UIL Playoffs

Class 5A
Duncanville 6, Deer Park 5

Duncanville's Todd Ritchie capped one of the great performances at the state schoolboy baseball tournament Friday night by hitting a 2-run home run in the bottom of the seventh inning to give his team a 6-5 victory over Deer Park for the Class 5A championship.

Ritchie, whom Minnesota made the 12th pick of the amateur free agent draft earlier in the week, hit the first pitch 365 feet.

Class 3A
Freer 13, Southlake Carroll 11

Freer erupted for four runs after two outs in the sixth inning and arm-weary Junior Espinoza gave up only one run after a rocky third inning as Freer defeated Southlake Carroll for the Class 3A state baseball championship.

It is Freer's first state championship in any sport.

Espinoza, who had pitched a no-hitter only one day earlier in Freer's 2-0 semifinal victory over Abilene Wylie, went to the mound Friday in relief with Freer leading 6-5 in the third inning.

Class 2A
Gilmer Harmony 8, Holliday 3

Richard Morris held heavy-hitting Holliday to only one run for six innings and teammate Chris Shirley rapped three hits as Gilmer Harmony won its first state baseball championship.

Patrick Schrum and Wayne Howard each had two hits as Harmony built an 8-1 lead before Holliday scored two unearned runs in the seventh and last inning, following an error by Howard at shortstop.

Class A
Colmesneil 5, D'Hanis 1

Senior righthander Alex Davis picked up his second win in as many days and 17th of the year without a loss as Colmesneil won its fourth state baseball championship with a victory over D'Hanis.

In two state tournament victories, Davis logged two complete games, allowed two runs, seven hits, nine walks, while striking out 24.

Western Open

OAK BROOK, Ill. (AP) — Payne Stewart, riding the emotional high of recent successes, shot a 67 and established a one-stroke lead Friday at the halfway point of the Western Open golf tournament.

"I'm playing with a lot of confidence now and it's showing up in the scores," said Stewart, who has two victories and a second among his last five starts.

"This is fun," the current PGA champion said.

"Here I am in contention again," Stewart said after completing two trips over the Butler National Golf Club course in 135, nine under par.

"If I can take care of Payne Stewart's business the next couple of days, I might walk away a winner again."

Wayne Levi, who won at Atlanta last month, and Mark Brooks shared second at 136.

Levi shot 66 on a course softened by overnight rains and, he said, "was considerably easier."

Brooks highlighted a near-flawless 65 with a 60-foot chip-in for an eagle-3. He did not miss a green and did not make a bogey on the course considered one of the more difficult the touring pros encounter all season.

Ray Stewart, the 36-year-old Canadian who is looking for his first American title, was two strokes back at 138. Stewart, who was tied for the first-round lead, went to a 73.

"Three back with two rounds to go," mused Stewart. "Not bad. Maybe my best position this year."

Jose-Maria Olazabal of Spain and Steve Pate each had 68's and were tied at 139.

The group at 140, four under par and five off the lead, included Greg Norman, Tom Watson, Chip Beck and Loren Roberts.

Roberts, who shared the first-round lead with Ray Stewart, went to a 75. Watson, seeking an end to a three-year non-winning string, shot 71 on the course that provided him with his first professional victory in 1974. Norman, winner of two titles this year, and Beck each shot 69.

Mark Calcavecchia, the British Open champion still hobbling from a toe injury, had a 71 and a 143 total.

Curtis Strange, who will try for a third consecutive U.S. Open championship next week at nearby Medinah, was one stroke higher after a 71.

Three European stars — Masters champ Nick Faldo of England, Sandy Lyle of Scotland and Seve Ballesteros of Spain — were grouped at 147, a distant 12 strokes off the pace.

Ballesteros had a second-round 70, Faldo a 75 and Lyle a 76.

Payne Stewart played the front in 34 despite some continued trouble with his irons.

"I just didn't feel I was hitting it the way I should be," he said.

He birdied the 12th from eight feet, then, "on the last four holes, I kind of figured something out."

And he immediately moved to the lead with an 8-iron shot to eight feet for birdie on the 15th and a 9-iron approach that left him a 30-inch putt.

Nicklaus retains lead

Senior TPC

DEARBORN, Mich. (AP) — Jack Nicklaus bogeyed the final two holes Friday, but kept a one-shot lead over Lee Trevino and Terry Dill after the second round of the $1 million Senior Tournament Players Championship.

Nicklaus shot 4-under-par 68 for a two-day total of 11-under 133 at the 6,665-yard Dearborn Country Club. Trevino also shot 68 for 36-hole total of 134, while Dill posted his second straight 67.

Gary Player and Ben Smith, the first-round co-leader with Nicklaus, were two shots back at 9-under, 135.

Nicklaus birdied the 15th to go 13-under, but bogeyed the 17th to create a tie with Trevino at 12-under. But both got into trouble on 18.

Trevino, the leading money winner on the Senior Tour, found a water hazard and took a double bogey six. Nicklaus, playing in the group behind Trevino, bogeyed 18 to stay one ahead.

Play was delayed four hours at the start because of heavy rain, but the soggy conditions did not stop the scores from staying down.

For the second day, 48 of the 78 players were under par. Another nine were even.

Padre investor group grows

SAN DIEGO (AP) — The group awaiting finalization of a deal to buy the San Diego Padres for $75 million reportedly has been expanded to 15 members from the original 10 partners involved in the transaction.

Tom Werner, the Los Angeles television producer who will be the managing general partner, is expected to introduce the five new partners publicly this weekend, it was reported Friday.

"Confirmation of that would have to come on Sunday morning when Mr. Werner appears at a meeting of the San Diego Press Club," said Chuck Gillman, the club's vice president of communications. "That's for Mr. Werner to confirm."

Werner's group signed the letter of intent to purchase the franchise from owner Joan Kroc on April 2.

Werner, 40, co-producer of the "Cosby Show" and other highly rated TV series, is the largest single investor, though his share is less than the approximately 35 percent represented by 10 San Diego partners. Werner will be chairman and president of the Padres.

The three vice chairman, who have the next-largest shares, are Los Angeles partner Russell Goldsmith, chairman and chief executive officer of Republic Pictures and a director of City National Bank in Beverly Hills; Arthur Engel, president of Southwest Marine Inc.; and Arthur Rivkin, former president of Coca-Cola Bottling of San Diego.

All the partners have been approved by the committee of major-league baseball owners that screens prospective franchise transfers.

Piston motor running rough with powerless Microwave

NBA Finals

The Detroit Pistons could be on the verge of a world of hurt.

Victimized by the Portland Trail Blazers' 106-105, overtime victory Thursday night in Auburn Hills, the Pistons, defending world champions, have lost their home-court advantage and left for Oregon with their NBA Finals tied 1-1. That's bad enough, but they also have two injured starters, guard Joe Dumars (groin) and forward Dennis Rodman (sprained ankle), and, perhaps most important of all, they suddenly are missing one key player altogether.

Oh, Vinnie Johnson is there in body, all right. He's a little hard to miss, to tell you the truth, being approximately as wide as he is tall.

What's missing is the "Microwave" — Johnson's alter ego, who has traditionally shouldered the outside scoring burden for the Pistons' bench.

The fact is, the Microwave appears to have been unplugged.

In the Finals, Johnson is just 1-for-10 from the field, going 0-for-6 in Detroit's Game 1 victory Tuesday night and 1-for-4 in Game 2. But this isn't just a two-game glitch.

Last Sunday, in the seventh game of the Eastern Conference finals against the Chicago Bulls, Vinnie made just two of five shots, and in a Game 6 rout at Chicago Stadium, he was a woeful, Uwe Blab-like 0-for-10.

That adds up to a 3-for-25 slump over his last four games — a shockingly bad 12 percent.

"I can't figure him out," said a distressed Detroit coach Chuck Daly, whose team boarded a plane for Oregon late Friday afternoon and will practice Saturday in preparation for Sunday afternoon's Game 3.

"I don't know what the problem is," Daly said. "He's not aggressive offensively. It's hard to figure at this point."

What makes the Microwave's blackout so devastating for Detroit is that it takes away the Pistons' outside shooting when the reserves are in the game.

Traditionally, Johnson has lived on the perimeter, zapping opponents with that trademark, lean-in jumper from 15 to 18 feet. In the regular season, that was good for 10 points a game, not bad on a Detroit team that averaged just 104.3 points a game.

Lately, though, Johnson's jumper is lucky to hit air.

Johnson himself has had little to say about his stupefying shooting slump, in part because it has happened so suddenly, and because it has been so dramatic.

Just two weeks ago, Johnson, an 11-year veteran who will become a free agent following the Finals, was riding a wave of security. He averaged 10.3 points a game in a series against Indiana and 11.2 points a game against New York.

After two games of the Eastern Conference finals, Johnson was averaging 11.3 points a game, was sinking about 45 percent of his shots and looked to have a new contract just about clinched.

"He'll be back here next season," said Pistons general manager Jack McCloskey at the time. "I don't see any problems we'll have negotiating a contract. He wants to be back, and we want him back."

But McCloskey has been silent about the issue lately, and no wonder.

In his final five games against the Bulls, Johnson averaged just six points a game, and he has not scored in double figures in any of his last six games.

The void created by Johnson's disappearance was of obvious importance in Game 2. A Portland bench of Drazen Petrovic, Wayne Cooper, Cliff Robinson and Danny Young outscored, outrebounded and outhustled Detroit's vaunted reserves, mostly because Johnson was nowhere to be found.

Johnson, at 33 a veteran of 95 playoff games, is finishing a contract that pays him $630,000 a year. That's a lot of cash for a scorer who can't score when the NBA title is on the line.

Before he and his team left for a flight West, Daly ripped the team for playing without emotion.

"We've been that way for a couple of games," he said. "It's very hard to understand how we've come all this way and lose our emotion for winning. They (the players) may disagree with me, but that's what I see. Maybe it's too many games in too many years. It might be fatigue, or whatever. But I just don't see the emotion in wanting to win at this point."

Buck didn't stop after Jersey

By Howard Ulman
AP Sports Writer

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — It was a perfect match.

Buck Williams, New Jersey's one solid player and leader was the one Portland needed. Both were tired of losing. Then they got together.

Now they are winners and soon, maybe, champions.

The transformation took just one year for a player and a team frustrated for so long.

Portland hasn't won the NBA title in 13 years and was eliminated in the first playoff round in the last four. In Williams' eight seasons with the Nets, they won five playoff games.

"Fate dealt me a hand, and I had to play that hand," said Williams, who endured it with few complaints. "Over the years, it has made me a much stronger and better person and now, playing for the Portland Trail Blazers, I know it was a godsend."

He led the Nets in rebounding in all eight seasons, was NBA rookie of the year in 1982 and made the all-star team three times. The polite, hard-working Williams would have made many all-class teams.

Despite his gifts, he couldn't make the Nets a winner. They reached the playoffs in each of his first five seasons, but got past the first round only once. They averaged 59 losses the past three years. It was too painful for him to watch the playoffs on television.

The Blazers had their own problems. They needed a leader and a fifth strong starter.

With Bill Walton, they won their last NBA title in 1977. They made the playoffs in 11 of the next 12 seasons but were knocked out in the first round nine times and second round twice. Last year's 39-43 record was their worst in nine seasons.

On June 24, Portland got Williams from the Nets for oft-injured center Sam Bowie and a first-round draft choice, which they used for Mookie Blaylock.

The Blazers had their leader to take scorers Clyde Drexler, Jerome Kersey, Terry Porter and Kevin Duckworth to the top. They ended up at 59-23, a 20-game turnaround, and in the NBA Finals against defending champion Detroit.

"My rebounding and defense and my ability to play on the low box was complementary to Clyde Drexler's and Terry Porter's and Kevin Duckworth's game," he said. "I don't know whether any other player probably could have fit the kind of mold that I play."

"He does give them the feeling that they can beat anybody because that's his attitude," Portland coach Rick Adelman said. "They have the ability to come back a little quicker and not dwell on being down or negative and he's really done that."

"All the guys like him, all the guys respect him and all the guys listen to him," backup center Wayne Cooper said.

"On the court, he's going to bring 110 percent all the time," Kersey said. "If you see Buck going that hard, it kind of motivates you to go a little harder, too."

Without Williams' effort late in the sixth game of the Western Conference Finals, the Blazers might not be in the title round.

In the last minute of the clinching 112-109 win, he blocked a Phoenix shot, leading to Kersey's basket that made the score 110-109, then stole the ball with eight seconds left and the Suns one point behind.

Williams averaged 13.6 points per game this season, second lowest of his career.

"I had to sacrifice a great deal of my game playing here with so many scorers," he said. "But my unselfish play and my ability to play defense and rebound the basketball were primarily the elements that the Portland Trail Blazers needed."

Although he is surrounded by a more talented team than the Nets, the 6-foot-8 Williams still led the Blazers with 9.8 rebounds per game.

Despite being a newcomer, Williams was eager to lead. The coaches encouraged him.

"Leadership quality is something I've had for a while now, and I knew most of the players are younger than I and they really have respected me, even from a distance," he said.

Portland led the opener of the Finals 90-80 with seven minutes left. Victory seemed certain. But Detroit won 105-99.

Krzyzewski turns Celts down

DURHAM, N.C. (AP) — Mike Krzyzewski turned down the Boston Celtics coaching job Friday, but the club's president said a published report that a power struggle had erupted during negotiations was absurd.

"That is stupid," Celtics president Red Auerbach said in reference to a reported power struggle between himself and Dave Gavitt, the team's new director of basketball operations. "It just shows the stupidity of some reporters. It's absolutely stupid. There is no credence to it at all.

"What we did was go into a lengthy discussion about the job, what it entailed, so on and so forth," Auerbach said in a telephone interview. "We never got down to the nitty gritty. He (Krzyzewski) said he was going back to think about it. And if he had the interest, we were interested."

Gavitt joked about the reported rift.

"I do have two complaints after a week with Red," Gavitt said. "He doesn't watch the road while talking to me while driving and he wants to eat Chinese food every meal."

Krzyzewski, who has led Duke to the NCAA tournament's Final Four in four of the past five seasons, turned down the job Friday morning after a week of talks with head officials of the Celtics.

"I have withdrawn my name from consideration for the Boston Celtics coaching position," Krzyzewski said in a two-paragraph statement released through the school's sports information department.

"I appreciate the opportunity to talk to the Celtics about the job and I appreciate Duke University allowing me to do so. I have made the decision to remain at Duke."

Krzyzewski, Duke's coach for the past 10 years, informed the Celtics and Duke athletics director Tom Butters of his decision late Thursday evening.

"It wasn't anything to do with money or personalities," Krzyzewski told Raleigh radio station WRAL. "It (college coaching) is what I like doing and what I'm best suited to do.

"There was no formal contract offer," he added. "I think there was extreme interest on their part and on my part.

"If you are going to leave college coaching for the pros, the Celtics job has to be one of the best situations you can go into," Krzyzewski said. "I think going through this process was healthy for me and I won't be messing around with things for awhile."

"Obviously I'm pleased he's staying here but I'm more pleased that he's made a decision that he's comfortable with," Butters said Friday.

The News and Observer of Raleigh reported in Friday's editions that a source close to the Celtics told the newspaper a power struggle between Auerbach and Gavitt played a significant role in Krzyzewski's decision.

Gavitt, hired by the Celtics less than two weeks ago, wanted Krzyzewski for the job. But Auerbach, the most successful coach in NBA history, vigorously opposed plans to hire a coach with no professional playing or coaching experience, the source said.

Krzyzewski met for most of Wednesday with Auerbach in Washington and left the talks convinced that he could not accept a job offer from Gavitt, the newspaper reported.

"No one has been offered the job," Gavitt said Friday

Lakers' West ready if Riley walks away

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Los Angeles Lakers general manager Jerry West says he is ready with a "very short" list of candidates should Coach Pat Riley step down.

One of the candidates is Milwaukee Bucks assistant coach Mike Dunleavy, West said.

"We would want to talk to him, yes, and we would talk to other people," said West, whose comments were reported in Friday's editions of the Los Angeles Daily News. "But we would not talk to a lot of people. We would move very quickly to try to do something."

Riley, named the NBA coach of the year, is reported to be talking with NBC about a television analyst job. The Lakers posted the league's best regular-season record, 63-19, but were eliminated in the Western Conference semifinals by the Phoenix Suns.

Riley was in a meeting Friday afternoon and could not be reached for comment, according to a woman who answered the telephone at his home. West, in Chicago scouting players at the league's pre-draft combine, could not be reached for additional comment Friday.

West told the Daily News that he is waiting to hear from Lakers owner Jerry Buss or Riley on whether Riley, who coached the Lakers to four NBA championships in the 1980s, will return.

Riley said during a television interview Tuesday night that he would decide in about a week whether to return for a 10th season with the Lakers. He said Buss had granted him the week to make a decision.

West confirmed that the Lakers had sought and received permission to talk with Dunleavy, who is still under contract with the Bucks. But West emphasized that asking permission to talk to the Bucks assistant was only a precautionary measure.

"Until Pat makes a decision, I'm not going to say anything (further)," West said. "It's up to Pat. I can't speculate, but I don't think it'll be too much longer."

"If there is a change, we'll name a new guy fast," he said.

Dunleavy, 36, has been an assistant the past three seasons in Milwaukee under Del Harris. He was twice activated as a player last season and played in five games for the Bucks. His contract with the Bucks expires July 1.

The Los Angeles Times reported Friday that in addition to Dunleavy, the Lakers are interested in former Chicago Bulls coach Doug Collins and Lakers assistant Randy Pfund, and said a Lakers source reported Collins was the leading candidate.

Pfund told the Times he requested a meeting with West earlier this week to discuss his status, and said: "The general flavor of the meeting was that adaptability is the key. If (the Lakers) think bringing in an outside person is better for the team, I am adaptable to that. I am loyal to this organization. I would want to stay."

Another Lakers assistant, Bill Bertka, 62, said he has talked to Riley and thinks the Lakers will have a new coach next season. Bertka said he has ruled himself out as a head coach candidate.

"I have a strong feeling Pat's not coming back. Only a miracle will make Pat change his mind now. His decision will be not to come back. I think he wants to take a sabbatical from coaching."

U.S. team ready for Sunday's Cup match

TIRRENIA, Italy (AP) — It's showtime for the United States soccer team: Sunday, the Americans make their first appearance in the World Cup since July 2, 1950.

At 5 p.m. in Italy, the Americans will walk onto the field at Florence's Stadio Comunale to play Czechoslovakia. The team's goal is to win and show the world that U.S. soccer isn't to be taken lightly.

"We just want that first whistle to blow and get on with it," U.S. coach Bob Gansler said.

Later Friday, Gansler denied a French news agency report that he had said in Florence he was quitting after the tournament.

Gansler was not even in Florence on Friday. He spent the entire day at the United States' training camp in Tirrenia, a seaside town about 50 miles away.

"There's absolutely no truth to it," Gansler said in a statement released by team spokesman John Polis. "We're busy preparing for our match with Czechoslovakia on Sunday. My thoughts are totally on being coach of the United States team through this World Cup and beyond."

Gansler said at a news conference in Florence on Thursday that he intends to remain as national team coach at least through the 1994 tournament, which will be played in the United States.

The Americans, the youngest team in the tournament with an average age of 24.2, are 20-1 underdogs to advance to the second round, and anywhere from 500-1 to 2,000-1 to win the cup.

The players are confident, but tense.

"I've got no more nails to chew," goalkeeper Tony Meola said Friday, "and I'm working on this pocketful of toothpicks I've got here. I've gone through about a thousand toothpicks the last day."

Almost all the work is done. The team spent Friday practicing minor things. Now it has to perform.

"I've seen the tapes of all the games," said Meola, who hopes a strong showing will lead to a contract to play in one of the European leagues. "I think we'll be prepared for Czechoslovakia."

Seventy-two security cameras will monitor the stands in an attempt to avoid the violence that has swept through soccer stadiums in past matches. Not many Americans traveled to Italy for the tournament, but there are some — Meola expects to have 40 family and friends at the game.

"This is it," Meola said. "We've worked two years for this. It's something that we deserve. We want to go out and prove we can play."

Czechoslovakia, 5-1-2 in World Cup qualifying, has been unimpressive in exhibition games, losing 1-0 to Spain, Egypt and West Germany and 4-2 to England.

"They seem to be in a little rut now with the changes and unsureness about lineups," Meola said. "But everyone's going to be excited about the World Cup and I'm sure they're going to play a lot better."

Gansler said he doesn't take recent results too seriously, figuring the turmoil during Czechoslovakia's revolution and its aftermath was a big distraction.

The United States, on the other hand, went 6-7 in exhbitions following the 1-0 victory over Trinidad and Tobago on Nov. 19 that put the Americans into the 24-team tournament.

"Exam time is Sunday," Gansler said of his team's chances against Czechoslovakia. "We feel we've got them prepared. But they're the ones who are going to have to take the exam."

Kimiko Matsuzaka is one of the many X-rated actresses who have made the transition into mainstream entertainment.

Japan turned off with 'turn-on' TV

By Eric Talmadge

TOKYO (AP) — The sex business has been a fast track to success for Kimiko Matsuzaka, queen of porno videos, but Japanese social values are changing and someday that road may close.

Ms. Matsuzaka earns more than five times the average for a working woman of her age, 21, and now is moving into more conventional entertainment. She recently completed a series of appearances, fully dressed, in a prime-time television drama and is a regular on a television talk show.

"I see myself as a success story," she said in an interview at the offices of Diamond Visual, Inc., one of Japan's most prolific makers of adult videos. "I'm happy doing what I'm doing."

Other porno stars have moved smoothly into mainstream entertainment before Ms. Matsuzaka, who made 15 videos last year, and many more may want to follow.

Opposition is growing to Japan's anything-goes "pink world," which ranges from geisha liaisons with politicians to neon-lit strip joints and bathhouses that sell sex.

"It is abnormal for a society to nurture the sex business the way Japan's does," said Mizuho Matsuda, director of HELP, a shelter for women. "Major TV networks and magazines praise it without the awareness that this just isn't right."

Critics of sex on television won a major victory in April with the cancellation of a talk-variety program that had pushed the limits of discretion for 25 years. It mixed trendy themes with nudity, scenes from porno videos and reviews of sex shops.

"A few years ago, programming was such that the networks were even criticized in Parliament," said an official of the National Association of Commercial Broadcasters, to which all five major private networks belong.

No legislation was enacted and each network made changes voluntarily, said the official, who spoke on condition of anonymity.

Ms. Matsuda of HELP said social values are changing, but she believes the main reason for less sex on television is that it has become less profitable.

"Sex stopped boosting TV ratings because of the increasing abundance of porno videos, books and other materials," she said. "People who want to watch that kind of thing no longer look for it on television."

There are other signs of changing values.

A scandal arising from allegations that Prime Minister Sousuke Uno had kept a paid mistress helped drive him from office last summer, and a Tokyo district packed with high-profile sex businesses is in decline.

The notorious Kabukicho was noted for bars, glitzy massage parlors and streets of "love hotels" with special rates for stays of an hour or so.

Norio Iwabuchi, chairman of an association of sex business owners in the district, said Kabukicho peaked about five years ago with about 200 businesses. Tougher rules were enforced in 1985 and the number has declined by two-thirds, he said.

Iwabuchi said he believed authorities imposed stricter zoning and restrictions on operating hours because the industry became too gaudy.

"The police look at prostitution this way: Don't get rid of it all; leave some and close your eyes so long as it stays in its place and there isn't any trouble," he said. "We stood out too much.

"It used to be possible for a woman to start in a peep show and go on to become a star, but those days are gone," Iwabuchi said, as a seminude Filipina danced before oneway mirrors at one of the Kabukicho peep shows he owns.

He attributed much of the change to Japan's growing wealth and greater opportunity for women to earn good pay in other work.

"Money used to justify just about anything, but Japan now can afford to look down on people who make it the way we do," he said.

Not many years ago, travel agencies helped organize sex tours to Asian countries, where more than 1 million Japanese men sought the services of prostitutes in the early 1980s.

Criticism from Southeast Asian countries helped cool that fad, but at about the same time, tens of thousands of Asian women began arriving in Japan each year.

Since 1986, Ms. Matsuda's center has helped nearly 1,000 women escape exploitation in the sex business, most of them from Thailand or the Philippines.

The women are called "Japayuki," meaning those who go to Japan. Ironically, the word comes from "Kara-yuki," for Japanese women who went abroad as maids or prostitutes early in the century.

Many Kara-yuki were sold by their families as a way to escape poverty. Sending a daughter into prostitution was never honorable, but in those days Japanese authorities licensed brothels and they were an accepted aspect of society.

Japan's long history of sexual freedom for men lives on in a multibillion-dollar sex industry.

Telephone booths near railroad stations are plastered with stickers advertising clubs where prostitutes can be contacted. Young businessmen paging through sexually explicit comic books are a common sight.

Pornographic magazines are on the racks in neighborhood convenience stores and campaigners against sex-for-sale find it a tough target.

'Impact' theory of dinosaur death favored

N.Y. Times News Service

KERRRRRRRRRRR-BOOOOOOOOMMMM, only more so. That, in a nutshell, is the popular version of the death of the dinosaurs.

A vast explosion, caused by a comet or asteroid hitting the earth 65 million years ago, is supposed to have upset the earth sufficiently to prompt a spate of extinctions.

The last few species of dinosaurs — they had been in decline for tens of millions of years at the time — were among those to succumb.

There are some who doubt this story, preferring less flashy tales. One criticism is that there is no direct evidence for an impact; there is no crater. Without such a smoking gun, there can be no definitive verdict on the dinosaurs' death.

That hole in the theory may now be filled by a hole in the ground. Evidence is accumulating that the impact was in the Caribbean. In a recent issue of Science, two planetary scientists suggest they may have found the crater.

The circumstantial evidence for an impact can be found in the geological strata corresponding to the end of the Cretaceous (K) period of the earth's history and the beginning of the Tertiary (T) period. This so-called K-T boundary layer marks the time of the mass extinction: the rocks below carry fossils of many species missing in the rocks above.

It also bears the signs of an impact: particles of quartz that have been flawed by immense shock waves, and microtektites, small droplets of glass found around impact craters.

Most telling, perhaps, is the relative abundance of iridium — a metal rare on earth but common in meteorites. Although such evidence is found all around the world, it is not evenly spread.

In America two separate layers can be seen. One, the "fireball" layer, is thought to be fallout from the world-girdling pall of smoke and dust thrown high into the atmosphere by the impact, which would have slowly settled over a period of months or years.

Below it — and thus pre-dating it — there is a thicker "ejecta" layer: stuff thrown up by the impact that fell straight back down again. The fireball layer may be of a standard thickness all the world over; the ejecta layer should be thicker closer to the site of the impact.

So where is it thickest? Alan Hildebrand and Dr. William Boynton, from the University of Arizona, have been studying a layer of clay at the K-T boundary in Haiti which was, until recently, thought to have come from a volcanic eruption. It contains iridium, and also some unusual pellets which appear to be the remnants of tektites, the drop-shaped splashes of glass made when splashes of molten rock solidify while flying through the air. The clay layer is about 25 times thicker than any other known ejecta layer.

A half-meter layer of ejecta must mean that Haiti was quite close to the center of any impact.

Other evidence strengthens the case. Samples from holes bored into the ocean floor show that the floor was scoured clean at that time. The scouring might have been due to waves. The impact would have produced waves higher than the highest peaks of the Alps, and these could have caused erosion on the sea floor — but only within 1,000 kilometers of the crater.

Farther away, when some of their energy had been spent, they would not have been able to affect the abyssal depths — though they were still capable of causing havoc when they hit land. The Haitian clays and the deep-sea drilling seemed to point to the Colombian basin.

After studying seismic surveys of the region Hildebrand thinks he has, indeed, found the remnants of a crater. North of Colombia, covered by 2 to 3 kilometers of sediment from the Magdalena river, there is a depression, about 250 kilometers across, in the underlying crust. On its northwest side it is edged by faults in the crust, arranged as concentric arcs.

If the structure turns out not to be a crater, then geologists may give up looking. The Colombian basin is not, after all, what it used to be. At the end of the Cretaceous period it was part of a larger sea that linked the Pacific and the Atlantic.

"The Whole World In HIS Hands"

When we are infants, we instinctively clutch the finger of our mother or father, holding tightly, knowing that we must cling to our parents for mere survival. As toddlers and young children, we are taught values and rules by which to live, based on our parents' wisdom and beliefs.

As the pre-teen and teen years ensue, we experience a new influence — peer pressure. As we are influenced by our friends, we may feel that our parents' beliefs are outdated, and may go astray. As a result, we enter into situations which can be difficult to resolve alone.

Even though we may not feel we deserve it, our parents are still there. All is not lost. This is unconditional love.

God, our heavenly Father, is the supreme example of unconditional love, ever present in time of need. It is available to all who will accept it.

Receive God's love. All is not lost.

More than 80 Methodist pastors moved

DALLAS (AP) — Eighty new pastoral appointments — some of which transfer women and blacks into ground-breaking roles — have been announced by officials of the North Texas Conference of the United Methodist Church.

Bishop Bruce Blake said that the new appointments will include the naming of Rev. Joan Gray LaBarr to the bishop's cabinet, making her the first woman to hold such a post.

Rev. LaBarr, pastor of the First United Methodist Church of Gainesville, will be named superintendent of the Wichita Falls district, Blake said.

Other moves will highlight the decision, announced by the bishop earlier, to match ministers' skills with the conference's needs regardless of race. The traditional action has been to pair black pastors with predominantly black congregations.

The appointments will include the Rev. Joe Washington, a black district superintendent, who will be named an associate pastor at Highland Park United Methodist Church.

The Rev. Roger Woods, pastor of the black congregation at Warren Avenue United Methodist Church, will be named to the conference's council of ministries.

In a column in the United Methodist Reporter newspaper, Blake decried sexism, ageism and racism as the three "isms" that the Christian church must overcome.

One of the moves expected to stir controversy is the transfer of the Rev. Jackie Ponder, who has served eight years in the campus ministry at Texas Woman's University in Denton. Rev. Ponder will become minister of the 140-member Centenary Church in southeast Dallas.

At TWU, Ms. Ponder performed lesbian union "blessings," which she admitted are illegal in the church. She said those ceremonies might have brought about her new position.

Bishop Blake, however, denied that, saying the appointment "was handled like every other appointment."

"I'm excited about her being a local pastor," he said. "She's been in the campus ministry for several years, and the local church needs her."

Methodist clergy are not "called" by a congregation. They are appointed by a conference bishop and staff for a 1-year term in a pastorate or office. Each year they are either moved or reappointed.

This year's roster of changes includes more than 80 appointments among 358 qualified United Methodist clergy under Bishop Blake.

YOUR HOROSCOPE

By Jeane Dixon

SATURDAY, JUNE 9, 1990

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: Strike out on your own. Those who follow the crowd will get left behind! Guard against prematurely abandoning troublesome projects. Travel will be very much a part of your plan in November. Your professional prestige is on the rise. Be less domineering at home and romance will become more rewarding. Family life holds several surprises in early 1991. Welcome a newcomer with open arms.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: actor Michael J. Fox, cartoon character Donald Duck, actor Johnny Depp, jazz guitarist Les Paul.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Begin a long journey that will help you gain specialized knowledge. Some professional advice you received recently is more to the point than you realized. Hold onto your investments.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Be subtle about your intentions or an insecure higher-up may feel threatened. Someone who should know better becomes involved in office intrigue. Steer clear. Plan a romantic evening.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): An idealistic approach could prove very practical in the long run. New methods hold more appeal than the tried-and-true today. Take no one into your confidence; silence is golden now.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Follow your intuition where an important business matter is concerned. An associate may have to be coaxed into putting forth greater effort. Limit money spent on entertainment; dine at home.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): You can expect an extra busy day! Keep in shape by taking a walk as often as possible. A conversation with a new friend raises the chance of a romantic alliance. Go slow!

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Family may not understand your dedication to work. Refuse to be talked into putting pleasure before business. A luxury purchase may suddenly become possible. Show your appreciation for loved one's help.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Think about ambition and what place it should have in your life. Your family must come first. Mate could provide extra income through free-lance work. Encourage loved ones to develop their talents.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Someone's financial schemes deserve careful scrutiny. An old grievance is settled in your favor, but others may still pressure you to take sides. An exciting new romance is part of the picture.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Let others set the pace at work today. You need to take a long-range view of what you hope to accomplish. Do not press influential people to accept ideas they have already rejected.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Read contracts carefully, seeking legal advice if necessary. Try not to be the kind of person who fails to realize something is slipping away until it is gone. Give loved one a second chance.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Your work schedule is subject to change and interruption. Fiscal affairs require careful handling. Rearrange family priorities, taking everyone's ideas into account. A surprising discovery will give you more financial flexibility. Romance sparkles.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Real estate transactions can be highly profitable. Good timing is the key. Use discretion when dealing with strangers. Be patient with someone who acts erratically. Travel and romance go hand-in-hand.

TODAY'S CHILDREN are energetic, sensible and eager to try new things. Details bore these Geminis; they think big and keep several irons in the fire at one time. They make tireless researchers, intent on probing beneath the surface. Many of these youngsters will seek a career in journalism or law. Sparkling conversationalists, they are the life of any party. They rarely tell the same story twice and are able to laugh at their own foibles. The ideal mate will share this Gemini's zany sense of humor.

Makarova takes ballet post

NEW YORK (AP) — Natalia Makarova will be the American Ballet Theatre's new artistic adviser.

Makarova

In a statement Thursday, Miss Makarova said: "I have considered American Ballet Theatre my home since I left Russia in 1970. ... I am happy to now be re-associated with ABT and look forward to passing on my knowledge and artistic experience."

The dancer, who made her ABT debut in 1970 in "Giselle," spent 15 years as a ballerina in the company. She replaces Mikhail Baryshnikov, who resigned in September, and will consult on repertory and planning and advise on casting, coaching and stagings.

She is married to businessman Edward Karkar. They have a son, Andre Michael, and live in San Francisco.

TORONTO (AP) — Who killed Laura Palmer? The actress who plays the late but pivotal "Twin Peaks" character suggests fans stop worrying about it and just enjoy the gothic-surreal television melodrama.

"The point is not who killed Laura Palmer," actress Sheryl Lee said during a recent visit to promote the nighttime soap that returns to ABC-TV this fall.

"The murder was just to get the ball rolling," said Lee, a 23-year-old native of Boulder, Colo., who was working in Seattle theater when she was cast for the show.

"People are so overly concerned with who killed Laura. I hope they're not missing all the wonderful things that are happening along the way."

The series set in the mythical timber town of Twin Peaks began with the discovery of Palmer's nude, plastic-wrapped body.

The show, orchestrated by "Blue Velvet" filmmaker David Lynch and co-creator Mark Frost, tracks the investigative efforts to find Palmer's killer.

The first eight episodes, which ended in May, featured oddities such as a mynah witness slain while in police custody and a bizarre dream sequence, with subtitles, in which an enigmatic dancing midget offers obscure clues.

Jagger

LONDON (AP) — Rolling Stones' lead singer Mick Jagger denied on Friday that he was romantically involved with a blond German model who he said was trying to capitalize on a brief association with him by giving interviews to reporters.

British tabloids had a field day with pictures of Jagger and 24-year-old model Christina Haack and Jerry Hall, the Texas model and mother of his two children.

Several of the newspapers on Friday also showed a woman attempting to deliver a huge bouquet of flowers at Miss Hall's London home, claiming they were the 47-year-old rock star's attempt to apologize.

Miss Haack told reporters she dated Jagger for three days while the Rolling Stones were on tour in Munich. She said they dined, he came home to her apartment and that they are "very, very good friends."

Jagger said he only spoke with Miss Haack in a club for a few minutes and did not visit her apartment.

Miss Haack, who resembles Miss Hall, was "obviously making the most of a few minutes with me," Jagger said.

NEW YORK (AP) — Even in 1969, Madonna longed to be noticed.

During talent night at a Detroit area school, then fifth-grader Madonna Louise Veronica Ciccone went on stage in a barely there bikini, covered with green fluorescent body paint.

"I was practically naked," the singer said in an interview to appear in Sunday's USA Weekend magazine, "but the talent show was my one night a year to show them who I really was and what I could really be and I just wanted to do totally outrageous stuff."

Since that night 21 years ago, Madonna has had 18 Top 10 hits; appeared in Playboy and Penthouse spreads; and outraged many with lascivious videos with religious references.

Madonna said her need to be noticed stemmed in part from her mother's death when she was 6 and her father's subsequent remarriage.

"I hated my father for a long, long time. And I made a promise to myself that no one was going to hurt me again. I was going to be somebody, I was going to rise above it."

As for the talent show, she said her mortified, straitlaced father grounded her for two weeks and all the girls in the class refused to talk to her.

But it wasn't all bad.

"Boys chased me after that," she said.

NEW YORK (AP) — Imogene Coca, a queen of comedy in television's early days, says she doesn't know the work of a current crown contender, Roseanne Barr.

"I've never seen the Roseanne Barr show," she said in Sunday's issue of Parade magazine. "That must be on a night where they have a terribly good movie."

Coca, 81, and Sid Caesar, stars of the 1950s "Your Show of Shows" variety program, have revived their act in a New York nightclub. Otherwise, Coca said, she is "practicing to be a recluse."

She said she often hunts for old movies on television to beat insomnia and watches soap operas from 11:30 a.m. to 4 p.m.

"I could have killed Dan Rather one day during a crisis when he came on and I couldn't see the soaps," Coca said. "And it wasn't even that great a crisis, either."

Bush may break off PLO talks

Foiled Palestinian attack on Israeli beach called 'sheer terror'

OMAHA, Neb. (AP) — President Bush said Friday he is considering breaking off talks with the Palestine Liberation Organization after the "sheer terror" of a thwarted Palestinian attack on an Israeli beach.

In Washington, a senior administration official said he expected a 30-day suspension of the talks, though he said no final decision had been made and outright termination of contacts also was possible.

Bush called on PLO leader Yasser Arafat to publicly renounce the attack and suggested the continuation of U.S.-PLO contacts depended on Arafat's response.

"Our dialogue is predicated on a renunciation of terror. In my view, this was sheer terror," Bush said.

Asked if, as several news reports have suggested, he were considering breaking off the talks begun in December 1988, Bush said "We are discussing all of that. No decision has been made. ... I'm not prepared to make an announcement on policy at this point."

In his first public comments on the matter, Bush criticized Arafat for refusing to condemn last week's attack on the Israeli coastline by the Palestine Liberation Front, one the PLO's constituent groups. Arafat has said the PLO was not involved in the attack but has not condemned it outright.

Israeli forces intercepted two speedboats filled with Palestinian fighters near Tel Aviv. Four of the Palestinians were killed and 12 captured. The attack followed the slaying 10 days earlier of seven Palestinian laborers by an Israeli the government described as deranged.

Bush commented aboard Air Force One as he neared the end of a political fund-raising trip to Midwestern states.

Shortly before he spoke, Secretary of State James A. Baker III, in Scotland for a NATO meeting, said the attempted raid "has to be taken very seriously." But he also said that "some perspective and responsibility is required in dealing with the issue" and that the Bush administration was seeking more information before deciding on possible action.

In Washington, an administration official said the United States has held at least four meetings with PLO representatives since the raid to discuss the organization's views on it. The official, speaking only on condition of anonymity, said no decision on breaking off talks was likely for a number of days.

Another senior official said he expects the administration to suspend the dialogue with the PLO for about 30 days. But he did not rule out outright termination if the administration concludes that such a message to the PLO is necessary. He, too, said no decision had been made.

Earlier, diplomatic sources in Washington said the United States would announce suspension of the talks next week. The sources, speaking on condition of anonymity, said the administration would cite the attack and the PLO's decision not to condemn the action.

Bush said the attempted attack "was horrendous."

"There was no rationale for it other than, in my view, terror," he said.

Bush said that he had discussed the Middle East peace process earlier in the day in a telephone conversation with Egyptian President Hosni Mubarak. "Both of us are still committed to getting the peace talks going forward," he sid.

"I've expressed my outrage about the attack" last week, he said. "Maybe I can take this opportunity to express my outrage about all the violence in the Middle East."

He expressed some pessimism about the progress of peace efforts. "Every time you get something started, there seems to be some outbreak," Bush said.

"I'm still outraged by the holding of U.S. hostages. I have this on my mind all the time. All of those things have a way of coming together."

On efforts by Yitzhak Shamir, the caretaker prime minister of Israel, to form a right-wing government, Bush said it was "an internal matter for Israel."

"I'll work with whomever that country puts forth as its government," he said.

Asked if such a government would hamper peace efforts, Bush said that Israel "knows the policy of the United States" in wanting to get peace talks going between Israel and the Palestinians.

"The world is crying out for negotiations on this question," he said.

U.S. talks with the PLO have been going on intermittently in Tunis since December 1988 when Arafat renounced terrorism.

An 18-story U.S. Air Force Titan 4 rocket blazed a fiery trail in the night sky leaving a reflection across the waters of Port Canaveral after launch at 1:21 a.m. Friday. The rocket was carrying a secret military stellite.

Titan launched Friday carries secret payload

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — A giant Titan 4 rocket thundered into orbit Friday with what's believed to be a military surveillance satellite. Air Force officials said the early morning launch went smoothly.

It was the second launch of the nation's most powerful unmanned space rocket and one of three planned for this year.

"Everything went very well. It was a beautiful sight to behold," said Air Force Col. Frank Stirling, director of the Titan program. "It was a great step for us in the Air Force to get the second Titan 4 launched on time as planned."

The $173 million rocket blasted off at 1:22 a.m. from Cape Canaveral Air Force Station. It resembled a large ball of fire as it cut through clouds on its way toward an undisclosed orbit.

The Air Force refused to discuss or even acknowledge the flight until it issued a statement about 20 minutes after liftoff. The payload was not revealed, but civilian experts believe it is an electronic eavesdropping satellite or a missile-warning spacecraft.

A Titan 4 successfully boosted a missile-warning satellite into orbit in June 1989, even though an engine nozzle malfunctioned. Stirling said the problem was corrected and did not occur in Friday's launch.

Martin Marietta Space Launch Systems has a $7.1 billion contract with the Air Force to supply 41 Titan 4 rockets, with an option for eight more. The goal is to have 75 by the end of 1997, which would put the cost of the program at $17 billion, Stirling said.

The Air Force ordered the rocket in 1985 to serve as a complimentary launch vehicle to NASA's manned space shuttle, the most powerful cargo carrier used by the United States.

The shuttle is capable of putting a 52,000-pound payload into orbit. The Titan 4, which stands 20 stories tall, can lift a 39,000-pound cargo into low Earth orbit or carry 10,000 pounds to stationary orbit 22,300 miles high.

After the 1986 Challenger explosion, the Air Force revamped the program and targeted the Titan 4 as its primary booster for heavy Pentagon payloads.

Pizza firm has quit hiring teens, official says

Hearst News Service

WASHINGTON — The president of Domino's pizza told a congressional hearing on the nation's child labor laws Friday that the company has stopped hiring teenagers since a youth was killed last summer trying to meet the firm's 30-minute delivery guarantee.

But the official, P. David Black, resisted congressional pressure to withdraw the company's delivery guarantee in the wake of the death of Jesse Colson, 17, of Mooresville, Ind., who was killed last June when the pickup truck he was driving skidded on a rain-slickened road.

Federal law requires that drivers for a company such as Domino's be at least 18. The store owner was fined $1,000 for violating child labor laws.

Short delivery guarantees such as the one offered by Domino's came under fire from Rep. Tom Lantos, D-Calif., chairman of the House subcommittee on employment and housing, which is conducting hearings on protecting children in the workplace.

Lantos said the guarantee has "the effect of encouraging drivers to speed."

'Since June 1989, we've gone from having over 3,000 minors employed by Domino to 305 at present, all of whom had been working for the company before the policy was instituted, and who must work inside the store only,'

— P. David Black, president of Domino's pizza

"It's noteworthy that two weeks ago the Domino's car won the Indy 500 race," Lantos said. "They probably told their Indy 500 driver, 'just pretend that you're delivering a pizza.'"

Lantos repeatedly pressed Black to withdraw the guarantee. Black said the topic had been discussed internally but would not make any commitment.

Lantos snapped: Soviet leader "Mikhail Gorbachev entered into perestroika (economic restructuring) with less soul searching than you have spent on this decision."

Black said the company was "deeply affected by Colson's death" and that it no longer hires "anyone under the age of 18 for any job in a pizza store."

"Since June 1989, we've gone from having over 3,000 minors employed by Domino to 305 at present, all of whom had been working for the company before the policy was instituted, and who must work inside the store only," he said.

Black said Domino has warned its subsidiaries that if they allow employees under 18 to deliver pizzas the company will terminate their franchise agreement.

"We developed a system by which we track the driving records of all our drivers and have made eight hours of safety class a condition of employment," he added.

But Rep. Matthew Martinez, D-Calif., a member of the panel, said he would not purchase a Domino's pizza as long as the chain retains the 30-minute guarantee.

Emotional testimony also was given by a father and a couple who detailed the deaths of their children who were killed on the job.

Joseph Curley of West Pittstown, Pa., said his 15-year-old son, Kevin, died in 1986 while working in a local bakery, cleaning a dough mixing machine.

Holding back tears, Curley said Kevin was "employed in violation of Pennsylvania state child labor laws, working after permitted hours, without working papers, and compensated in cash 'under the table.'"

Curley said bakery owners were fined $200 for violating the law and the family was denied the right to file civil suit against the employer.

Claude Hucorne of East Stroudsburg, Pa., who was accompanied by his wife, Jackie, said his 16-year-old son, Michael, was crushed to death in the fall of 1988 while working for a supermarket chain, crushing boxes. The chain was fined $250 for violating the law.

Curley and Hucorne called for stricter child labor laws.

Under federal law, youngsters may only work restricted hours and are prohibited from working at dangerous machines.

Badly burned boy leaves hospital

NEW YORK (AP) — Twelve-year-old David Opont rose from his wheelchair, smiled shyly and said he felt fine as he left a hospital Friday, three months after a bully allegedly set him on fire.

Opont

With the spirit that marked his remarkable recovery, he faced dozens of television cameras and reporters on the lawn of The New York Hospital-Cornell Medical Center and said, "I have to thank God, my doctors and nurses."

"The first thing I want to do is go to school," he said.

Asked how he felt, the boy said in a soft voice: "Fine."

David then was wheeled to an ambulance that took him to a helicopter for transit to the Margaret T. Palomino Rehabilitation Center at Jamaica Hospital.

There he will undergo physical therapy and reconstructive surgery, mostly cosmetic, and receive counseling for the next three to four weeks, doctors said. At that point he will be ready to go home and to school, though he will need continued treatment and doctors say the scars almost certainly will bring taunts from other youngsters.

David was on his way to school on March 7 when a bully forced him into a building, tied him to a railing and set him afire, police said. David allegedly had been robbed by the same 13-year-old boy a day earlier.

The other boy was arrested hours after the attack and has been jailed at a juvenile center.

The attack left David with burns over 55 percent of his body. At first, doctors gave him only a 50-50 chance of survival.

David's plight attracted international sympathy. He received hundreds of letters from practically every state and from as far away as France and his native Haiti. More than $280,000 poured into a fund to help cover his medical expenses.

His hospital visitors included actor Bill Cosby, former President Reagan, Vice President Dan Quayle and Mayor David Dinkins.

"The gifts, cards and letters ... all of that contributed to bringing David back to life," said Guito Lavoile, a cousin and family spokesman.

Cheers erupted as David was wheeled out of the hospital.

"This is a happy day for David's family and the burn center," said Dr. Cleon Goodwin, director of the burn ward. "It's sad, too. We're going to miss him."

When he left the hospital, David wore a dark suit with a pink shirt and black bow tie. His right hand was covered with a glove bandage and he had bald spots on his head, but looked fit otherwise. Most of his burns are on his abdomen, chest and back.

"Beneath his nice shirt, he has his compression garments on which he will have to wear for the next two to three years," Goodwin said. The special garments put pressure on the burn scars, reduce their size and help the color return to normal, he said.

"He has accomplished a lot, but he has a long way to go," Goodwin said.

David, who underwent six skin grafts at the burn ward, will now be counseled on how to deal with the reactions other children may have to his scars.

"The main focus is ... making sure he is ready emotionally as well as physically to go back into his home environment," said Dr. Craig Rosenberg, chairman of rehabilitation medicine at Jamaica Hospital.

"Kids don't have tact and kids usually don't know what to say. Kids are honest."

His rehabilitation began quickly at Jamaica. On Friday afternoon he was in occupational therapy to improve the range of his right hand, which was severely burned; there also were schoolwork and games.

"His favorite game is Nintendo," said Rosenberg. By playing the home video game, "he can work on hand-eye coordination."

Some of stolen paintings found 2 years after theft

NEW YORK (AP) — Some of the $6 million worth of paintings stolen in what police called the city's largest art theft have been recovered, the gallery director said Friday.

Nicholas Hall, director of Colnaghi USA Ltd. on Manhattan's wealthy Upper East Side, confirmed that some of the 19 Old Masters paintings and eight drawings swiped have been found. A police department spokesman, Officer Fred Weiner, couldn't immediately confirm the recovery.

Hall said no one had been arrested yet in the theft. He would not say which works were recovered and refused to provide further details, citing an ongoing police investigation.

The most valuable pieces stolen were two 15-by-7 inch wood panels by the 15th century Italian Renaissance master, Fra Angelico. The panels, depicting saints, were worth a combined $4 million.

Works by Lodovico Carracci, Pacino Da Bonaguida, Paolo Catamara, Gasper Duguet and Jean-Baptiste-Simeon Chardin were also stolen.

In 1988, thieves broke in through a skylight in the brownstone where the gallery was located and shinnied down a rope.

Ransom raised; Family now waits

PEORIA, Ill. (AP) — Roy and Marge Heimdal marched into a Peoria bank Friday, clutching coffee cans stuffed with money as they concluded a fund-raising campaign to ransom their son held in South America.

In less than four days, the Heimdals raised $60,000 demanded as ransom by Maoist guerrillas who ambushed 27-year-old Scott Heimdal in a jungle in Ecuador on April 28.

Mrs. Heimdal, 47, said the kidnappers, reportedly members of a Colombian group known as the Popular Liberation Army, have threatened to "show us where his body is."

The attack left one man dead and another seriously injured.

"A shiver went down my spine when they told me we had $60,000," Roy Heimdal said Friday, about 80 hours after the financially strapped family went on TV to seek public help in raising money.

"I'm stunned," said Heimdal, who sells cabinets. "If there had been any other way to handle this, we would have. But a public appeal was the only avenue we had."

Even as the Heimdals fought their way through a herd of reporters into the bank, strangers approached with dollar bills for their overflowing coffee cans and words of encouragement.

"For the first few weeks, we felt so helpless," Mrs. Heimdal said. "At least these past few days we've felt like we were helping Scott. We were doing something and that felt good."

The $60,000 was wired to a bank in Ecuador where it will be taken by an intermediary into the jungle along the Ecuador-Colombia border this weekend to meet the kidnappers.

"The funds will be handled by a professional negotiators who have been handling this situation for us. It'll be their responsibility to get some of the funds to the kidnappers," though probably not all of the money at first "and make a deal to get him out of there," Heimdal said late Friday.

He said he didn't expect any further major developments until sometime next week.

In Quito, a U.S. Embassy official who spoke on condition of anonymity said U.S. diplomats weren't involved in negotiations with the guerrillas. "The negotiations are between the police and the terrorists," the official said.

FBI agent says security breach serious

TAMPA, Fla. (AP) — A former U.S. Army sergeant with a brilliant "criminal mind" has admitted selling secret NATO plans for the nuclear defense of Europe that were passed to the Soviet Union, an FBI agent testified Friday.

"It's one of the most serious breaches ever — it's unprecedented what went over to the other side," said Joe Navarro, who led the FBI's investigation. "The ability to defend ourselves is neutralized because they have all our plans."

Roderick James Ramsay, 28, made his initial court appearance Friday on the charge of conspiracy to gather or deliver defense information to aid a foreign government. U.S. Magistrate Elizabeth Jenkins ordered him held until a bond hearing Tuesday.

Ramsay's attorney, Mark Pizzo, did not enter any plea on his client's behalf. Ramsay faces a maximum penalty of life imprisonment if convicted of espionage conspiracy.

RAMSAY WAS arrested Thursday night on a downtown street following a two-year investigation.

The FBI said Ramsay worked in West Germany from 1983 to 1985 directly under Clyde Lee Conrad, 43, a retired U.S. Army sergeant convicted of treason by a West German court and given a life sentence earlier this week.

When the FBI began collecting information on Conrad in mid-1988, agents conducted the first of some 40 interviews with the cooperative Ramsay, authorities said.

"Ramsay has acknowledged that he was in fact recruited by Conrad in mid-to-late 1983 and participated in espionage activity with him," Navarro testified.

Ramsay had a high IQ, speaks fluent Japanese, Spanish and German, and has the ability to recall minute details, facts and figures from hundreds of volumes of documents, Navarro testified.

Those included sensitive documents on the use of tactical nuclear weapons by U.S. forces and NATO allies, and plans for the defense of Central Europe, the Justice Department said. Ramsay also leaked technical manuals on military communications technology and material about the coordination of NATO forces.

"He had the unique privilege of being posted where a lot of highly sensitive information came through his hands," Navarro said. He mentioned other examples such as the sites of nuclear storage areas and contingency plans in the event of a nuclear attack by the Soviet bloc or a Third World nation.

THE MATERIAL was passed to Hungarian and Czechoslovakian agents and eventually fell into the hands of the Soviet KGB, according to FBI and Justice Department officials.

"It involves an extensive amount of information provided to the Soviet intelligence service through Eastern European surrogates," said Justice spokesman Doug Tillett in Washington.

Navarro testified that Ramsay began by photographing documents and later discovered he could record more information with a video recorder. In December 1985, the agent said, Ramsay spent a week recording some 45 hours of documents he had either stolen or copied.

Although Ramsay told the FBI he received only $20,000 for his efforts, Navarro estimated the East bloc agents paid between $2.2 million and $5 million for the information from the ring.

Authorities believe some of the money is stashed in foreign bank accounts, said law enforcement sources speaking on condition of anonymity. Investigators are trying to trace the money.

Conrad controlled the money and Ramsay wanted very much to obtain it, especially since recent financial problems forced him to live at his mother's home in Tampa or sleep in his car, Navarro said.

FBI agents would not discuss why they investigated Ramsay and kept him under surveillance for two years before making an arrest, but Navarro said agents hoped his cooperation would lead to other suspects.

RAMSAY'S LAST known contact with Conrad came in January 1986 in Boston, when his former boss gave him a small cow bell and told him that anyone displaying a similar bell was involved in the spy ring, the agent testified.

While the FBI has no evidence that Ramsay participated in espionage since 1986, his vast knowlege of NATO secrets made him a "highly marketable commodity" to hostile governments, Navarro said.

During the investigation, agents learned Ramsay had stashed top secret documents at his mother's house and later destroyed them, Navarro said. The agent added that Ramsay still claims to have a tape with highly sensitive defense information.

Agents searched the home and Ramsay's car following his arrest, but have not revealed what was found.

The FBI agent described the mustachioed, bespectacled suspect as having a "criminal mind" and no remorse for his actions.

Before joining the Army, Ramsay is believed to have participated in a 1981 bank robbery in Vermont and then fled to Hawaii, Navarro said.

HE ADDED that Ramsay said he tried "every drug under the sun" and in fact was forced out of the Army in 1985 after traces of hashish showed up in a urine test.

Ramsay was a man who had no fear of going to jail, telling FBI agents as recently as a month ago he would be able to read, get a law degree and obtain a criminal education, Navarro said.

"'Look out when I get out,'" Navarro quoted Ramsay as saying, "'because I'm going to be an educated criminal.'"

Noriega receives 2 setbacks

MIAMI (AP) — Manuel Noriega's legal defense suffered two setbacks Friday — a Miami federal judge rejected his challenges to U.S. jurisdiction, and in Tampa a co-defendant agreed to testify against the deposed Panamanian leader.

In Miami, U.S. District Judge William Hoeveler dismissed defense motions that argued Noriega should be freed because the United States had no right to prosecute him on drug-trafficking charges.

The defense claimed that Noriega, as a head of state, had immunity for his actions, and that in any case, couldn't be prosecuted for activities outside the United States.

They had also argued the U.S. invasion of Panama was so bloody it should "shock the conscience," one possible reason for dismissing an indictment, according to an appeals court ruling.

On Friday, Hoeveler rejected all those arguments.

"Given the serious nature of the drug epidemic in this country, certainly the efforts of the U.S. to combat the problem by prosecuting conduct directed against itself cannot be subject to the protest of a foreign nation profiting at U.S. expense," the judge said.

The judge said the argument that Noriega had "sovereign immunity" as head of state failed because the United States never recognized him in that role.

And he sidestepped the invasion issue, saying the defense was asking the court to second-guess political leaders.

"Noriega's complaint is a challenge to the very morality of war itself," said the judge. "This is a political question."

Noriega defense attorney Jon May said the defense had been prepared for the rulings.

"I'm disappointed, but I'm not surprised," May said. "I'm hopeful there is some opportunity to present further evidence on some of these issues ... but for now we move on to other issues."

The issues cannot be appealed to a higher court until after the trial, May said. He noted than in any case, the defense is paralyzed while awaiting a decision on whether Noriega's assets can be released to pay his mounting legal bills.

Noriega, in prison outside of Miami, is accused of taking bribes from Colombia's Medellin drug cartel to turn Panama into a way station for U.S.-bound drugs.

Meanwhile, in Tampa, the lone co-defendant in Noriega's parallel Tampa drug indictment pleaded guilty Friday and agreed to testify that the general was his "silent partner" in a trafficking ring.

Panamanian businessman Enrique A. "Kiki" Pretelt admitted to conspiring with Noriega to take bribes from Tampa-based drug smugglers to help ferry $300 million worth of Colombian marijuana through Panama and hide the profits.

Defense attorney George Tragos said Pretelt wound up with a "great deal" because prosecutors in Noriega's drug racketeering case in Miami want his cooperation.

"I think the biggest single incentive the government had for the plea agreement is the testimony about General Manuel Noriega," Tragos said.

Confrontation squad

A newly organized all-female confrontation squad is shown during drills at River Junction Correctional in Chattahoochee, Fla. The state has four women's prisons and a fifth near compeltion. In Florida, one in every 10 prisoners is now a woman, a statistic that has doubled in the last three years according to reporting sources.

NATION in brief

Suit challenges FBI's gay policy

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — A veteran FBI agent sued the agency Friday, contending it irrationally bans homosexuals from employment, and plans to fire him because he disclosed in 1988 that he is a homosexual.

The agent is identified as John Doe in the U.S. District Court suit — not because he is embarrassed by his openly declared sexual orientation, but because he has done sensitive counterintelligence work for the FBI and wants to resume if he wins the suit, his lawyer said.

"The FBI has a policy and practice of denying security clearances and employment to gay persons only because of their sexual orientation, association with other gay people, and speculation about their sexual conduct," the suit said.

It said the policy was based on sexual orientation, not conduct, and that no such policy covered heterosexual conduct such as extra-marital affairs.

The policy is irrational as applied to Doe, who has an excellent work record, has received several special commendations, and isn't susceptible to blackmail, the suit said. Doe is based in San Diego.

In Washington, FBI spokesman Carlos Fernandez denied that such a policy exists.

Arsenic traces found

BOSTON (AP) — Arsenic was found in freed hostage Frank Reed's system shortly after his return to the United States, hospital officials announced Friday.

Reed, 57, has been undergoing treatment at the Malcolm Grow Medical Center at Andrews Air Force Base in Maryland since soon after his release from 44 months in captivity in Lebanon April 30.

In a statement, the hospital said screening for heavy metals such as arsenic, lead and mercury was normal procedure for returning hostages or prisoners.

"These tests were performed on Mr. Reed's arrival. The initial test for arsenic was positive. Subsequent tests confirmed this exposure to arsenic and its elimination to a non-toxic level," the hospital said.

Hospital officials were unavailable to say how much arsenic was found, how it affected his health or how it might have gotten in Reed's system.

Mating crabs tagged

LITTLE CREEK, Del. (AP) — A full moon and high tides brought horseshoe crabs to the shores of the Delaware Bay on Friday for their yearly mating game.

The females dug into beaches along the bay, laying millions of green, shotgun pellet-sized eggs. Many of them had males hooked onto their tails and each would drag the male over the eggs so he could fertilize the batch.

Horseshoe crabs, with long, spiked tails, are known to completely cover beaches, laying shell-to-shell while shore birds and seagulls hover around eating the eggs.

On Friday, there was also a human factor in the scenario.

Volunteers hit the beaches in Delaware and New Jersey, counting and tagging the menacing-looking creatures.

The work is part of research being conducted in both states to learn about their migration patterns and lifespans.

Soviet's Tetris game appeals to obsessives worldwide

By Robert Dvorchak

NEW YORK (AP) — Video game junkies now have an alternative to the zapping, blasting and pulverizing of the shoot-'em-up adventures popular on the fantasy screen.

Tetris, an addictive brain-twisting game, has no combat, no karate chops, no chases and no characters, not even a story line like the Super Mario Brothers.

This video cerebral challenge features building blocks — Soviet blocks, that is. Created by a Soviet scientist, Tetris is the first communist bloc video game to hit it big in the free market.

"It's a moving puzzle," said Richard Epstein, 43, of Parsippany, N.J. "When I can't sleep, instead of reading a book, I play Tetris."

"I like the action games, but this is the first real strategy game," said David Rodriguez, 16, of New York City. "You just can't stop."

Since its introduction to the world two years ago, Tetris sales have sizzled.

About 4 million copies are in use in homes, offices and arcades, mostly in the United States and Japan. The U.S. Software Publishers Association gave it four awards last year, including best original game and best entertainment program.

Its creator is chain-smoking Alexey Pazhitnov, 35, a researcher at the Academy of Sciences in Moscow who developed it in his spare time on his home computer, which is as rare as well-stocked food shelves in his homeland.

"When people started to play, they couldn't stop," Pazhitnov told an interviewer on a tour of the United States earlier this year. "The game was like a fire."

Tetris is somewhat of an electronic Rubik's Cube, and its creator prefers wizardry to war.

"I don't like the violent games. I hate shooting games," Pazhitnov said. "My idea is to make constructive games, not one where you destroy things."

Tetris features seven geometric figures — rods, squares, zigzags, L-shapes and a squat T — each made up of four blocks. The name is derived from the Greek word "tetra," which means four.

A shape selected at random falls on the screen, and the player can turn it on its side, steer where it goes and control how fast it falls. The object is to arrange the falling blocks in solid rows across the width of the screen, something that appeals to obsessive-compulsives and problem-solvers.

Filling in all the blanks does two things: It scores points and also makes the line disappear to allow room for more shapes.

If the blanks aren't filled in, the blocks pile up like bricks in a wall. The game goes on until the screen fills up, which can take minutes or hours, depending on skill levels.

The game was adapted to personal computer software by a comrade, a teen-age "khaker," or Russian for hacker. It spread to Eastern Europe and then to England, where an enterprising London capitalist scooped up the rights and peddled it to Spectrum HoloByte of Alameda, Calif., which marketed the game for personal computers.

Since 1988, Spectrum has sold 150,000 copies at $39.95 each.

But the real action came last fall when Tetris became available on the Nintendo Entertainment System, which controls 80 percent of the U.S. home video market and has been the hottest selling Christmas toy three years in a row.

About 1.5 million Tetris games at $34.95 each were sold in the past six months, the company said.

Nintendo also put the puzzle on its Game Boy, an $89 hand-held unit about the size of a paperback book. Two million copies of Tetris now belong to Game Boy owners.

Another video power, Sega, adapted Tetris for video arcades.

But compulsion hasn't meant riches for Pazhitnov. The game is marketed through ELORG, the Soviet Foreign Trade Association, and all profits go to the Academy of Sciences.

Pazhitnov already has made a sequel called Welltris.

New Zealand a paradise for hikers

TE ANAU, New Zealand (AP) — Rain has poured down all morning, but as the trail dips into rain forest, any thoughts of discomfort vanish amid the lush undergrowth.

There is almost a sense of entering a sanctuary as the damp ground cover muffles the thud of boots. The only sounds are water dripping from the canopy of branches onto huge ferns, the gurgle of a distant brook and the occasional trill or shriek of an unseen bird.

The fresh scent of rain mingles with the smells of the verdant forest.

Sunlight begins to break through the low-hanging trees, vibrantly highlighting every possible shade of green. Rocks and limbs are covered with moss so thick it seems possible to take a nap and wake up covered with it.

After a few hours, the trail climbs above the tree line to reveal stunning views of deep blue lakes below and craggy mountains still covered with snow in late summer. Clouds begin to move back in, obscuring the sheer cliffs of distant fjords in mist.

This is hiking in New Zealand, which attracts nature lovers from thousands of miles away. Even the main industries help create an idyllic landscape: rolling green hills of rich farmland and pasture dotted with millions of sheep.

Hiking and bicycling seem a way of life for the hardy residents, who protect and enjoy their environment. They have built thousands of miles of hiking trails that are virtually free of debris.

In most places, the water remains clean enough to drink from the streams. At night, the sky is so clear the bright stars barely twinkle; only a sliver of moon is needed to see clearly without a flashlight.

For those tired of carrying and pitching tents, many trails have the added advantage of communal wooden huts that provide warmth and shelter. They also offer a welcome bit of camaraderie for people of various nationalities, who range from couples carrying infants to people in their early 70s.

A few huts are near hot springs, where a long soak can ease the aches of a day's hiking. Shelters on the most popular trails fill quickly, especially in peak seasons, so early arrivals get the bunks and latecomers sleep on the floor.

It's lovely to fall asleep with rain drumming on the roof, but there are some inherent problems with communal living. Not the least of them are people who snore and others who like late parties.

Many of the trails, known here as tracks, are far from easy. New Zealanders don't seem fond of switchbacks, preferring instead to challenge their legs and lungs with more direct routes up and down the rough terrain.

One particularly tough track rises to a ridge 3,569 feet above the valley in a series of steps carved from the hillside, through a boulder field and over an ankle-wrenching stretch of loose rock called scree.

Whatever the difficulties, there's nothing like the isolation of hiking down a mountain as the early morning fog rises, blanketing everything in a shroud of white. Only the sound of your footsteps and the trickle of distant, glacier-fed waterfalls break the silence.

It is like visiting an alien planet to trek across the desolate crater of an inactive volcano, where lakes of startling green contrast with gray volcanic dust.

New Zealand offers numerous coves and rushing rivers that are ideal for canoeing or white-water rafting. There are streams and lakes rich in trout, black sand beaches for those who want a rest.

Wildlife includes albatrosses with 10-foot wingspans, colonies of seals and penguins, mischievous mountain parrots called keas and the reticent, flightless kiwi bird that has become the national symbol.

Utah experiments not affected by A&M reports

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Reports that the palladium used in "cold fusion" experiments in Texas might have been contaminated have no bearing on the work under way at Utah's National Cold Fusion Institute, an official said Friday.

Kevin Wolf, a physicist at Texas A&M University's Cyclotron Laboratory, has said the palladium rods used in his nuclear fusion experiments might have been contaminated with tritium, a byproduct of fusion.

If so, experiments that produced what many researchers believe is a signature of a nuclear process could be cast into serious doubt.

HOWEVER, NCFI researchers have only recently begun focusing on the production of tritium in addition to analyzing the source of excess heat produced by their experiments, said Institute Director Fritz Will.

And in any case, he said, the palladium rods used at the institute are purchased from a different supplier than Wolf's.

"My impression is that people would be well-advised to analyze thoroughly the palladium they've used in their experiments," Will said.

But Ronald Parker, director of the Plasma Fusion Center at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, said skeptical scientists long have speculated that contamination might be responsible for the evidence of tritium in such experiments.

"The thing that does astonish me is that something like this wasn't detected earlier," he said. "Tritium is the thing that would still pique the interest of many scientists. Now that there seems to be a logical explanation; maybe it is the last nail."

THE COLD fusion experiments first unveiled by Utah electrochemist B. Stanley Pons and British colleague Martin Fleischmann involved a palladium electrode wrapped in platinum wire, then immersed in deuterium oxide, or heavy water.

In a March 29, 1989, announcement that sparked a furious scientific controversy, Pons and Fleischmann said that when they applied electricity to the room-temperature device, more energy was released in the form of heat than they put into it.

The pair have said the cells also produced tritium, a radioactive product of the fusion of two deuterium atoms, although they have not published any scientific reports explaining their findings, nor have they or other researchers pinpointed the reason for the excess heat.

Researchers long have sought a way to produce nuclear fusion, the force that lights the stars, as a cheap and virtually inexhaustible energy source.

Will, who joined the state-funded institute in February, said he could not speak for Pons and Fleischmann, who conduct separate experiments in their chemistry department laboratories in addition to those at the institute.

Telephone messages to Pons went unanswered.

But Will said that most, if not all, of the palladium rods used at the institute were purchased from Johnson Matthey, a British scientific supplier, and that specifications called for them to be 99.99 percent pure.

WOLF HAS said his palladium rods were purchased from Hoover & Strong, a metals processor in Richmond, Va. An official there has said the company refines and processes palladium primarily for the jewelry trade, and thus isn't as concerned about purity as scientists might be.

Wolf was not immediately available for comment.

Other evidence of tritium has been reported by Carol Talcott and Edmund Storms of Los Alamos National Laboratory in New Mexico. Storms said one of the positive results had been obtained with palladium provided by Texas A&M from the same supplier, and he planned to analyze other rods.

Will said that when palladium is melted and cooled in the preparation process, any dissolved hydrogen, deuterium and tritium diffuse rapidly through the palladium.

"So that it is not proper to think of palladium, once it is fully processed, to contain the concentrations of tritium that have been found in cold fusion types of experiments," he said.

Will also emphasized that Wolf's research efforts are among three at Texas A&M — the others in the Center for Electrochemical and Energy Research and under the direction of John Bockris of the chemistry department — and that only Bockris and Wolf had reported seeing evidence of tritium.

"AMONG THESE two groups, Bockris continues to hold on to his reported findings of very high tritium levels in his cold-fusion type of experiments," Will said. Bockris has said about two-thirds of his work used palladium from Hoover & Strong, although not from the batch that Wolf analyzed.

The first rounds of experiments at the NCFI, which opened last August with a $5 million state appropriation, focused on the generation of excess heat. But in recent months, researchers also have begun searching for evidence of tritium, neutrons, X-rays and gamma rays, all considered potential signatures of a nuclear process.

First, National cars are backed by the industry's first "Buy Back Guarantee." If for any reason you are not completely satisfied with a car you buy from us, bring it back within 30 days or 1000 miles and we'll exchange it or buy it back."
Second, we sell only late model cars. And because we display the price on the window of each car, there's none of the usual haggling over price.
Third, we have a wide variety of cars to choose from. National currently has cars available to sell that were manufactured by General Motors, Ford, Chrysler, Nissan, Honda and Toyota.
Additionally as an added convenience National accepts trade-ins and can arrange financing. *Some Restrictions Apply

To prevent crime in Tucson, police use sensitive, highly sophisticated surveillance equipment: Tim, Rose, Gert, Anthony, Yvonne, and Ramon.

Citizen participation is critical to police effectiveness. Do you care about your neighborhood enough to help protect it?

The Case of The Tucson Tip-off.

In a particular neighborhood in Tucson, Arizona, folks were having a real problem with burglaries and break-ins.

They started talking to each other about what they could do. They got fed up. About 400 people went to the police for advice. They learned about surveillance. They got to know their beat officers. Citizens and police became partners in crime prevention. In just three weeks, 17 arrests were made and burglaries went down 30%. And Tucson is only one case where people successfully worked to beat crime. To find out more, write: The McGruff Files, 1 Prevention Way, Washington, D.C. 20539-0001. You can make a difference. You can help...
