Nebraskan's Charges Move Hoover To Pledge Inquiry Into Liquor Violations

PRESIDENT TO MAKE CAPITAL NATION'S MODEL

Senator Howell Brings Executive Action With Statement

NO SPECIFIC CASES

Transportation of Embassy Liquor Principal Item Under Fire

WASHINGTON, Sept. 22. (UP)—President Hoover pledged himself in a formal statement issued at the White House tonight to a vigorous investigation of prohibition law violations in the national capital, with the aim of securing "the fullest enforcement possible" and of making the capital a model for the country.

The statement was in reply to charges of law violations here made in the senate yesterday by Senator Howell, Republican, Nebraska, who said that Washington could be made dry if the president is all-powerful in the District of Columbia and could call the commissioners before him and threaten to dismiss them if they did not enforce the law.

Charges Unmentioned

The president did not mention specifically Howell's contention that ships and trucks were bringing in liquor for diplomats here, in violation of the law and that this could be stopped by confiscating ships which bring the liquor into Baltimore and trucks which brings it here from Baltimore.

The president asked that Howell submit specific information, with definite facts as to time and place, to which the Nebraska senator replied tonight that the treasury department had information about the liquor ships and trucks and that local police should have information about the bootlegging which he said is going on here.

President's Statement

The president's statement follows:

"Senator Howell's statement that the prohibition law is not being enforced in the District of Columbia seriously impugns the good faith and capacity on Commissioner Dougherty, in charge of police, Superintendent of Police Pratt, District Attorney Rover, and Prohibition Agent William Blandford.

"The president is glad the senator would not make these charges unless they were based upon facts with time and place, and if he will lay any such information before the department of justice, the president will have the matters vigorously in-

Five Injured In Auto Accident

Five persons were injured and the automobile in which they were riding wrecked when it ran off a bridge into a stream about 25 miles southwest of Wichita Falls shortly before 8 o'clock Sunday night.

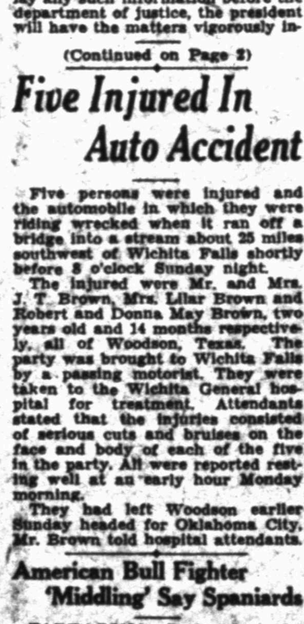

The injured were Mr. and Mrs. J. T. Brown, Mrs. Lilar Brown and Robert and Donna May Brown, two years old and 14 months respectively, all of Woodson, Texas. The party was brought to Wichita Falls by a passing motorist. They were taken to the Wichita General hospital for treatment. Attendants stated that the injuries consisted of serious cuts and bruises on the face and body of each of the five in the party. All were reported resting well at an early hour Monday morning.

They had left Woodson earlier Sunday headed for Oklahoma City. Mr. Brown told hospital attendants.

Five Texans Reported Lost in Plane Are Safe In Tiny Mexican Town

BROWNSVILLE, Texas, Sept. 22. (UP)—Five persons reported as lost late yesterday when their airplane, a unit of the Fort Worth aerocade, became lost while flying from Corpus Christi to Brownsville, are uninjured following a forced landing near Soto la Marina, a small fishing village on the Mexican coast, according to telegraphic advices received by airport officials here today.

The telegram, signed by Bert Pidock, pilot of the plane stated that the party had battled a severe storm for several hours. When damage to their plane necessitated a landing they found they had been blown 150 miles off their course.

PLANE REPORTED BADLY DAMAGED

HOUSTON, Sept. 22. (AP)—Forced southward by a storm which prevented its landing at Brownsville a Lockheed Vega monoplane owned by the Texas company and carrying four prominent Texas business men as passengers made a forced landing late last night in heavy jungles near Soto la Marina, Mexico. The plane was badly damaged but none of the occupants was injured.

First news of the ship which had been missing more than 24 hours and for which searching parties had been sent out was contained in a telegram from Soto la Marina to Burt Hull, president of the Texas Pipeline company here. The message was signed by Jack Hott, manager of the Fort Worth Association of Commerce.

PLANES AT LAREDO

LAREDO, Texas, Sept. 22. (AP)—One plane of the Fort Worth good will aerocade was down in Mexico tonight and the remaining 16 of the 20 that started rested here planning to attempt the last scheduled hop to Monterrey, Mexico, tomorrow only in the event of clearing weather and better landing conditions there.

which is touring South Texas. It was piloted by Bert Pidcoke.

Besides Mr. Hott the passengers were James D'Arcy, manager of the Clover Land company; A. L. Ford of the Cooke-Teague Motor company and Frost Lynn, chairman of service for the Texas company.

The telegram received by Mr. Hull stated that the only way out of the jungle was by burro and the trip would require approximately four days.

Later, however, advice from Brownsville said a rescue plane had been sent from the airport there to return the stranded pilot and passengers.

REFORM

Modified Bible Deletes References to Sexual Questions

LONDON, Sept. 22. (UP)—The National Sunday School union issued today a special edition of the Bible omitting all references to sexual matters and incidents connected with illicit relations.

The new version is especially strict with the Biblical story of Potiphar's wife and Joseph. In one passage the union substituted "his master's wife cast eyes upon Joseph and tempted him to do evil."

The new version also omits part of the description of Potiphar's wife's persistence.

In the story of Samson, the modified bible eliminates references to the type of woman with whom the strong man associated.

LINDY REACHES PORT OF SPAIN

Air Mail Trail Blazer on British Island

PORT OF SPAIN, Trindad, Sept. 22. (UP)—Col. Charles A. Lindbergh completed the conquest of the Caribbean today on a new airmail blazing tour from Miami, Fla., to Dutch Guiana.

He reached this British island off the northeast tip of South America at 4:52 p. m. (E.S.T.), after making four island stops en route from San Juan, Porto Rico, during the day.

Lindbergh and his wife and others of his party will spend the night here, 2,009 miles from Miami which they left Friday morning. At 6 a. m. tomorrow (E.S.T.) they will cross the Gulf of Paria to the South American mainland, stopping at Georgetown, British Guiana, at noon and reaching Paramaribo, Dutch Guiana, their goal, at 1:45 p. m.

The next day they will return here, Wednesday they will swing northwestward along the Caribbean by easy stages to Mexico, Cuba and Miami—a total flight of 7,000 miles.

Lindbergh's 764-mile schedule included:

San Juan, Porto Rico, left at 6:20 p. m. St. Thomas, Virgin Islands, arrived 6:52 a. m., left 7:19 a. m. Basse Terre, St. Kitts Island, landed 9:19 a. m., left 9:48 a. m. St. John, Antigua, landed 10:35, a. m., left 11:46 a. m. Port Castries, St. Lucia, arrived 1:59 p. m., left 2:45 p. m.

As he prepared to leave San Juan, where he had stayed last night, Lindbergh found 342 pounds of mail awaiting him. Rather than carry such a load, in addition to his passengers, he ordered a second plane to pick up the mail. This was done, and so inhabitants of the Caribbean archipelago witnessed the unique sight of two great flying machines winging their way through clear skies overhead.

AMARILLO, Texas, Sept. 22. (AP)—C. S. Williams, convicted of murder in the knife slaying of O. C. Hill Jr., Ashtola farmer, was sentenced to three and one-half years in prison by a jury in district court here this afternoon.

The jury deliberated since yesterday afternoon.

Williams and Hill fought to the death after an argument at a July 4 rodeo here, said to have been occasioned by Williams' stepping on Hill's toe.

The prosecution contended the slayer "waylaid" Hill at the rodeo park entrance after their argument. Williams pleaded that he used a knife only in self defense. Defense testimony was that he was much the smaller of the two principals.

FLEEING MAN WOUNDED BY POLICE BULLET

DICE GAME RAIDED

Hospital Attendants Deny Knowledge of Man Seriously Hurt

Perry Cowan, who lives about thre and one-half miles from Wichita Falls on route six, was shot in the right arm shortly after midnight Saturday during a raid by police on an alleged dice game near the site of the construction work at the Scott avenue bridge over the Wichita river.

The injured man was taken to the Wichita General hospital. Hospital attendants refused to give any information concerning the case, but it was learned from attending physicians that the bullet had entered the muscular part of the right arm and had gone through, fracturing the bone above the elbow. His condition was considered serious but he was resting well Sunday.

Officials of the hospital, which is jointly operated by the city and county, gave no reason for attempting to conceal Cowan's condition, replying to all inquiries that they "knew nothing about the case." The supervisor refused to confirm or deny that Cowan had been given treatment there.

Chief of Police Frank Burns said Sunday night that he had personally interviewed Cowan at the General hospital around 8 o'clock in the evening. He said that the police department had made no request to the hospital to conceal the fact that Cowan had been injured.

Chief Burns added that he had already started an investigation of the circumstances of the shooting and that he would, Monday morning, talk to city, county, and district officials. He did not learn of the affair until Sunday afternoon, the chief said, but declared that he expected to consult the city manager, city, county, and district attorneys before his inquiries were complete.

The wounding of Cowan followed a report to police headquarters that a game was in progress near the new bridge. Detectives Tom Poe and Elmer Thornton went to the spot and found several men gathered around the "galloping dominoes." As the officers approached, one man attempted to flee, and it was then that Officer Thornton brought his gun into play. The officer said he had intended to frighten the fleeing man, but that his shot had gone too low, taking effect in the arm.

Cowan was taken to the hospital in the police car for medical attention. No charges were filed against the officer.

Harry Sinclair Asks Publication Of Full Record on Pardon Plea

WASHINGTON, Sept. 22. (US)—Harry F. Sinclair, from his cell in the District of Columbia jail, today issued a statement calling upon Attorney General Mitchell to make public all of the record in the multi-millionaire oil magnate's plea for commutation of sentence.

That appeal has been denied by President Hoover, upon the recommendation of the attorney general.

Breaking a long silence, Sinclair charged that the attorney general in deciding against his plea for freedom had "substituted his judgment in place of the jury's verdict."

He declared that all of the affidavits and reports in connection with his application should be bared to the public and that he was confident in the end of vindication.

H. Mason Day, business associate of Sinclair, and also serving a sentence for contempt of court, issued a statement at the same time. He revealed that the basis of his petition for freedom was that jury surveillance, for which Sinclair and he had been sentenced, had never before been construed as contempt.

Both Sinclair and Day revealed that they had furnished the attorney general with affidavits of former government secret service officials. These affidavits, including one from a former chief of the service, according to Sinclair, declared that jury surveillance was a common practice by U. S. district attorneys throughout the land, with the approval of the attorney general himself.

"Observation of a jury only became contempt of court when I engaged in it," he declared.

FLAG CHAMP GOES UP TODAY

Benny Razzes Acients or Old Time Feats

Two thousand years ago a long-distance swimming record was set when Leander swam the Hellespont, but going back farther than that, from the time of the Neanderthal man until 2 o'clock Monday afternoon no man has sat atop a flag pole for more consecutive hours than Benny Fox, world's champion flag pole sitter, who will attempt to stay on the pole on top of the Marchman hotel for four days, four nights and four hours.

Benny will start his climb exactly at 2 o'clock and will not leave his perch for 100 consecutive hours. In a short message to The Record News Sunday afternoon, while Benny was in his room resting for the feat, he pointed out that water existed on the earth for thousands of years before it was found to be good for something besides drink-

Summer Is Over! Autumn Arrives Officially as Earth 'Straightens Up'

Despite the undecided type of weather in Wichita Falls for the past month, autumn is at last officially here. Monday, Sept. 23, marks the autumnal equinox when the axis of the earth is exactly at right angles to the direction of the sun and the day is approximately equal to the night the world over.

The sun will rise at 6:15 a. m. Monday and will set at 6:28 o'clock Monday evening. It will rise at 6:16 Tuesday morning and will set at 6:12 Tuesday evening, indicating a difference of about six minutes in the duration of the day and night. The difference will become smaller each 24 hours until Friday when the sun will rise at 6:18 a. m. and set at 6:18 p. m., exactly 12 hours later.

From that time on into the autumn and winter, the days will gradually become shorter and the nights longer, the sun rising earlier and setting later until around the first of the year when the days will begin to lengthen and the nights to shorten. Then in March, 1930, the vernal equinox, beginning of spring, will finds the nights equal again.

FRAZIER WINS SECOND GAME BY 2-1 SCORE

SPUDDER BATS SILENT

Andy Messenger Hurls Good Brand of Ball But His Mates Fail

By AL PARKER
Staff Correspondent

STEER STADIUM, Dallas, Sept. 22.—Wichita Falls' Texas league championship and Dixie series hopes passed into the realm of things that might have been today when the Dallas Steers won their third victory, 2 to 1.

With a few minor exceptions, it was much the same as the opening game in Wichita Falls. A pitching duel between Vic Frasier and Andy Messenger. In their former meeting Frasier's team won for him. Today he won in spite of his team. He allowed the Spudders five hits and fanned all of 10. He won in the face of miserable fielding support and mighty little of it in an offensive way.

Messenger matched his previous game, allowing only one earned run, but it was the same old story for the submarine artist. His team wouldn't give him any runs.

Spudders Get Breaks

Where the breaks of the game decided the three previous games, the element of luck had little to do with today's results. The Spudders had their share of breaks but couldn't take advantage of them. They left the bases all clogged up with runs in the early innings as the result of the Steers poor fielding and in the eighth round they left the bases full when a hit would have meant a ball game, possibly a championship.

Frasier was the whole show today. He pitched an even better game than the figures indicate. Only two of the Spudders' five hits were real wallops. In his 3 to 2 victory at Wichita Falls, the young righthander was soaked good and hard, but was saved by sensational support. None of that was required today, even the one run the Spudders negotiated for should never have been scored. In the eighth inning, after Sullivan, hitting for Messenger, had walked, Benton singled. Fitzgerald drove a hot grounder to Ward Davis, but the big first sacker failed to go low enough and it rolled through for a double scoring Sullivan and sending Benton to third. Frasier pitched his way out of that hole by forcing Guillie into a ground ball, walking Bennett and fanning Turgeon.

Error Costly

Messenger was almost as good. In the fifth Dallas scored on successive doubles by Davis and Bischoff. The combined weakness at third and first proved costly in the extreme in this final game, giving the Steers their winning margin in the sixth.

Hermann heaved low to Bettencourt and Larry failed to make the difficult play, enabling a runner to score from third with the run that won a perfectly good pennant. There was little of the spectacular fielding today that had marked all the previous battles. Jeffries had another big day at third and helped Frasier no little. Aside from the chances he handled on slow taps, the Dallas defense was never called upon for the extraordinary.

The series victory sends Dallas into the Dixie series starting Wednesday, while it winds up the campaign for the Spudders.

Vic's Luck Sticks

Vic Frasier's luck that stayed with him so faithfully through the first game still was present, at least on the first Spudder hitter. Frasier's first offering was in the dirt, his second a called strike and

BIBLE CLASS HEARS DANIEL

Teacher Pays Tribute to Constitution

Prefacing his address before the Kay Bible class at the First Methodist church Sunday morning with a brief history of the framing of the American constitution, Roy J. Daniel took from the lesson for the day two quotations which he declared marked the "fundamental procedure to be followed for the preservation of that constitution."

Daniel

The theme of the address grew out of observance of "Constitution week," sponsored by the American Bar association, and brought to a close Sunday. The speaker told his hearers that the nation must "stop robbing God and must test the promises of God" if it is to realize the full promise of the American constitution.

Traces History

Mr. Daniel traced the historical background both of the constitution and of the story of Malachi, about whom the scriptural lesson centered. His address is quoted below:

"The past week has been observed throughout the United States as Constitution Week, and in programs in the public schools and through the press efforts have been made by the American Bar association to call the attention of the American people to our federal constitution—especially to its historical origin and significance.

"Cornwallis surrendered to Washington at Yorktown in 1783. During the intervening four years until 1787 conditions in our country were in a state of chaos and confusion. The soldiers who had fought the war were unpaid. Under the weak Articles of Confederation the Continental congress had the power to pass laws but no power to enforce them. Washington and Alexander Hamilton and others who saw the imperative need of a stronger central government succeeded in having delegates elected and assembled at a constitutional convention in Philadelphia. Madison of Virginia and Benjamin Franklin of Pennsylvania were two other outstanding members and leaders of the constitutional convention over which Washington presided. The meetings were held in secret, and the members swore that they would not reveal the proceedings of the convention as long as any other member should live. They worked for four months, and the result of their labors was the series of compromises making up our present constitution. It was finally adopted by the required nine states and went into effect as the supreme law of our land. The constitution provides for a representative form of government, and a government of delegated powers only. Congress can pass laws concerning only matters enumerated in the constitution. It provides for a government unique and new in world history by division of powers into three equal and coordinate branches—the legislative branch to make the laws, the executive branch to enforce the laws, and the judicial branch to interpret the laws. John Adams was ambassador to England and Thomas Jefferson was ambassador to France while the constitutional convention was in session but both were greatly interested in its proceedings. The new government provided for in the constitution was formally begun when Washington was inaugurated first president in 1789. For 140 years that constitution has been the anchor of our liberty and freedom, and the copy for many constitutions since adopted in other countries. The preamble of the constitution should be engraved upon our hearts and memories: 'We the people of the United States in order to form a more prefect union, establish justice, insure domestic tranquility, provide for the common defense, promote the general welfare, and secure the blessings of liberty to ourselves and our posterity do ordain and establish this constitution for the United States of America.'

"Malichi in our lesson today proclaimed two fundamental courses of procedure we must follow if we would preserve our constitution and hand it on down to our posterity unsullied. We must stop robbing God, and we must test the promises of God. The time of this lesson was between 450 B. C. and 425 B. C. Athens was experiencing the Age of Pericles. At that same time, or about the same time, in Greece Athens and Sparta were contending for supremacy. After 10 years of fighting Athens had won the first round. While resting for the second round it was Alcibiades, a smooth-tongued city slicker, who persuaded the Athenians to undertake the expedition against Syracuse in Sicily. The expedition failed and Athens became so weak on account of it that in the renewal of the war with Sparta she was overcome by Sparta and lost her glory.

Rome's Conquest

"It was about that same time that Socrates in Athens drank the cup of hemlock because he had been declared guilty of corrupting the youth of Athens. Socrates left no written records but he made his impression, and a lasting one, upon the lives of his pupils. He believed in the the immortality of the human soul, and he taught the immortality of the soul and ever sought to obey the voice within his breast called conscience. He would not work at his trade of sculptor but spent his time in animated conversation on intellectual subjects with anyone who would talk with him.

"At about this time Rome on the banks of the Tiber was a republic, and had her consuls to look after the interest of her well-to-do and her tribunes to protect her common people. She was just beginning to reach out and to conquer all the peninsular north and south for herself—mistress she was sat upon her Seven Hills. Rome had placed upon tablets of bronze in the forum of her laws and begun the Corpus Juris Civilis—her gift to the world.

"So while in Greece Greek was meeting Greek and while in the Italian peninsula Rome was beginning her career of conquest, among the Hebrews Malachi gave the formulae to secure for individuals and for nations the blessings of God. The Hebrews were failing to tithe. They were bringing to the altars of God and to the sacrifices their sick and lame animals. They were not giving their best to God. Malachi asked the stern question: 'Will a man rob God?' When we fail to give God a tenth of what He gives us do we rob Him? When we fail to give God the best we have in service and devotion do we rob God? Malachi called upon the people to test the promises of God. He told them to place into the treasury a tenth of all they received from God, and a blessing would come down to them so great that their houses would be unable to hold it.

"Malachi made a prophecy of the coming of the Savior. He foretold the coming of the forerunner of the Master. He said that the face of God was never turned away from man, but that man must turn his face toward God. Let us stop robbing God and let us be courageous enough to stand upon the promises of God, and then the blesings that shall come to us will be greater than anything we have yet dreamed of.

"Let us remember the words of that old song:

"'Standing on the promises of Christ my Savior, Standing on the promises of God.'"

Big Bingo to Lead Circus and Wild West Show to City

Big Bingo is coming to Wichita Falls on Thursday, Oct. 3, with the Robbins Bros. four-ring circus and the Buck Jones' Wild West and Motion Picture company.

Bingo is the giant of jungleland. He is the captain of all of the elephants of the world. He can trumpet louder, eat more hay, drink more water and keep more peanut roasters busy than any pachyderm that has yet traveled in America—and he is still growing. When taken from winter quarters this spring it was found that he had outgrown his car. He grew three inches taller during the winter and now tops the heap of the 30 elephants and camels of the Robbins Bros. circus as well as all other wild beasts known to man.

Bingo does not appear in the street parade to be given in Wichita Falls during the noon hour of Thursday, Oct. 3. The street parade given by the Robbins Bros. is the first circus parade to be given in Wichita Falls for many years. It is the only circus parade to be given this season. Other circuses have quit giving a street parade owing to the heavy cost—the expense is $800 a day. But farmers according to the viewpoint of the Robbins Bros., want a parade, and will visit the city of exhibition provided the parade is given. Thus it is that merchants also want the parade feature because it gives them an opportunity to furnish the farmer supplies on circus day.

In times gone by Bingo used to be in the street parade but of late years after attaining his growth he invariably stopped the line of march whenever he came to a culvert or a bridge. He would back up look the bridge over, test it with his foot and sometimes it would be as long as 10 minutes before he would consent to cross it. He simply wanted to be sure of his safety. The delay caused his withdrawal from the march.

Buck Jones who comes to Wichita Falls on Oct. 3 is probably the best known man to the film world. His pictures are always found in more motion picture houses than any other star. There is a constant demand in the houses of the smaller towns, and the foreign sales of his productions have been especially large. Russia and China, strange as it may seem, are constant buyers and in large quantities. Argentina of South America is another good field.

Since joining the Robbins Bros. circus with all of his motion picture horses such as Silver, White Eagle, Major and others, as well as entire motion picture company of performers, Buck Jones has taken a great liking to Bingo. He has been, in private of course, trying to learn to ride Bing. Naturally Bingo is slow in making acquaintances but it is fair to say that Buck is gaining the good will of the big beast and will be permitted—by Bingo of course—to straddle his back and speed around the big track in the big top in a short time. Buck has always said there is nothing he cannot ride and he proposes to prove the fact to his associates in the circus business by straddling Bingo.

The Robbins Bros. circus employ 1,000 people. The wild west directed by Buck Jones has 50 Sioux Indians right off the reservation. They appear in the street parade and give a mighty good account of themselves in the circus for all are skillful bareback riders and appear exactly as their fathers appeared upon the Sioux reservation for the past century. They are what is known as blanket Indians.

The circus gives two performances. Buck Jones makes a personal appearance at both.

"ALL QUIET on the WESTERN FRONT" BY Erich Maria Remarque

(Paul Baumer and his soldier comrades are at rest behind the front when they are ordered on a wiring party. It is black night; a thundering enemy bombardment forces them to take cover in a cemetery. Paul dives into a hole. He feels wood and cloth. It is an occupied coffin, ripped open by the shelling. Wounded, he loses consciousness. Katenstinsky shakes him, crying: "Gas!")

CHAPTER VIII

I grab for my gas-mask. Some distance from me there lies someone. I think of nothing but this: That fellow there must know: Gaas—Gaaas—

I call, I lean toward him, I swipe at him with the satchel, he doesn't see—once again, again—he merely ducks—it's a recruit—I look at Kat desperately, he has his mask ready—I pull out mine too, my helmet falls to one side, it slips over my face, I reach the man, his satchel is on the side nearest me, I seize the mask, pull it over his head, he understands, I let go and with a jump drop back into the shell-hole.

The dull thud of the gas-shells mingles with the crashes of the high explosives. A bell sounds between the explosions, gongs and metal clappers warning everyone—Gas—Gas—Gaas.

Someone plumps down behind me, another. I wipe the goggles of my mask clear of the moist breath. It is Kat, Kropp and someone else. All four of us lie there in heavy, watchful suspense and breathe as lightly as possible.

These first minutes with the mask decided between life and death: is it tightly woven? I remember the awful sights in the hospital: the gas patients who in day-long, suffocation cough their burnt lungs up in clots.

Cautiously, the mouth applied to the valve, I breathe. The gas still creeps over the ground and sinks into all hollows. Like a big, soft jelly-fish it floats into our shell-hole and lolls there obscenely. I nudge Kat, it is better to crawl out and lie on top than to stay here where the gas collects most. But we don't get as far as that; a second bombardment begins. It is no longer as though the shells roared; it is the earth itself raging.

With a crash something black bears down on us. It lands close beside us: a coffin thrown up.

I see Kat move and I crawl across. The coffin has hit the fourth man in our hole on his outstretched arm. He tries to tear off his gas mask with the other hand. Kropp seizes him just in time, twists the hand sharply behind his back and holds it fast.

Kat and I proceed to free the wounded arm. The coffin lid is loose and bursts open, we are easily able to pull it off, we toss the corpse out, it slides down to the bottom of the shell-hole, then we try to loosen the under part.

Fortunately the man swoons and Kropp is able to help us. We no longer have to be careful, but work away till the coffin gives with a sigh before the spade that we have dug in under it.

It has grown lighter. Kat takes a piece of the lid, places it under the shattered arm, and we wrap all our bandages round it. For the moment we can do no more.

Inside the gas-mask my head booms and roars—it is nigh bursting. My lungs are tight, they breathe always the same hot, used-up air, the veins on my temples are swollen, I feel I am suffocating.

A gray light filters through to us. I climb out over the edge of the shell-hole. In the dirty twilight lies a leg torn clean off; the boot is quite whole, I take that all in at a glance. Now someone stands up a few yards distant. I polish the windows, in my excitement they are immediately dimmed again, I peer through them, the man there no longer wears his mask.

I wait some seconds—he has not collapsed—he looks around and makes a few paces—rattling in my throat I tear my mask off too, and fall down, the air streams into me like cold water, my eyes are bursting, the wave sweeps over me and extinguishes me.

Kat looked around and whispers, "Shouldn't we just take a revolver and put an end to it?"

The shelling has ceased. I drag myself to the crater and tell the others. They take off their masks. We lift up the wounded man, one taking his splintered arm. And so we stumble off hastily.

The graveyard is a mass of wreckage. Coffins and corpses lie strewn about. They have been killed once again; but each of them that was flung up saved one of us.

The hedge is destroyed, the rails of the light railway are torn up and rise stiffly in the air in great arches. Someone lies in front of us. We stop; Kropp goes on alone with the wounded man.

The man on the ground is a recruit. His hip is covered with blood; he is so exhausted that I feel for my water bottle where I have rum and tea. Kat restrains my hand and stoops over him.

"Where's it got you, comrade?"

His eyes move. He is too weak to answer.

We cut off his trousers carefully. He groans. "Gently, gently, it is much better—"

If he has been hit in the stomach he oughn't to drink anything. There's no vomiting, that's a good sign. We lay the hip bare. It is one mass of mincemeat and bone splinters. The joint has been hit. This lad won't walk any more.

I wet his temples with a moistened finger and give him a swig. His eyes move again. We see now that the right arm is bleeding as well.

Kat spreads out two wads of dressing as wide as possible so that they will cover the wound. I look for something to bind loosely round it. We have nothing more, so I slit up the wounded man's trouser leg still farther in order to use a piece of his underpants as a bandage. But he is waring none. I now look at him closely. He is the fair-headed boy of a little while ago.

In the meantime Kat has taken a bandage from a dead man's pocket and we carefully bind the wound. I say to the youngster who looks at us fixedly: "We're going for a stretcher now—"

Then he opens his mouth and whispers: "Stay here—"

"We'll be back again soon," says Kat. "We are only going to get a stretcher for you."

We don't know if he understands. He whimpers like a child and plucks at us: "Don't go away—"

Kat looks around and whispers: "Shouldn't we just take a revolver and put an end to it?"

The youngster will hardly survive the carrying, and at the most he will only last a few days. What he has gone through so far is nothing to what he's in for till he dies. Now he is numb and feels nothing. In an hour he will become one screaming bundle of intolerable pain. Every day that he can live will be a howling torture. And to whom does it matter whether he has them or not—

I nod. "Yes, Kat, we ought to put him out of his misery."

He stands still a moment. He has made up his mind. We look around—but we are no longer alone. A little group is gathering, from the shell-holes and the trenches appear heads.

We get a stretcher.

Kat shakes his head. "Such a kid—" He repeats it: "Young innocents—"

Our losses are less than was to be expected—five killed and eight wounded. It was, in fact, quite a short bombardment. Two of our dead lie in the upturned graves. We had merely to throw the earth in on them.

We go back. We trot off silently in single file, one behind the other. The wounded are taken to the dressing station. The morning is cloudy. The bearers make a fuss about numbers and tickets, the wounded whimper, it begins to rain.

An hour later we reach our lorries and climb in. There is more room now than there was.

The rain becomes heavier. We take out waterproof sheets and spread them over our heads. The rain rattles down and flows off at the sides in streams. The lorries bump through the holes, and we rock to and fro in a half-sleep.

Two men in front of the lorry have long forked poles. They watch for telephone wires, which hang crosswise over the road so densely that they might easily pull our heads off. The two fellows take them at the right moment on their poles and lift them over behind them. We hear their call. "Mind—wide—" dip the knee in a half-sleep and straighten up again.

Monotonously the lorries sway, monotonously come the calls, monotonously falls the rain. It falls on our heads and on the heads of the dead up in the line, on the body of the little recruit with the wound that is so much too big for his hip; it falls on Kemmerich's grave; it falls in our hearts.

An explosion sounds somewhere, we wince, our eyes become tense, our hands are ready to vault over the side of the lorry into the ditch by the road.

It goes no farther—only the monotonous cry: "Mind—wire—" our knees bend—we are again half asleep.

'Small Change' Rewards Yeggs When They Tap Bottling Firm's Safe

At attempt to break into the safe in the office of the Coca Cola Bottling company, 412-418 Ohio avenue, late Saturday night resulted in failure after the safe crackers had knocked off two of the knobs and were unable to open the third knob on the inner door.

Only a small amount of change in an envelope was taken from the outer portion of the safe behind the second door, the larger amount of the company's money having been locked in the small compartment behind the third knob. The robbers took only one of two envelopes of small change which were in the outer portion of the safe.

Entrance into the building was effected through a window in the rear of the place, which had been prized open. The appearance of the work in removing the knobs from the safe and the lack of definite clues indicates that the job was done by professionals, according to Chief of Police Frank Burns.

vestigated, for it is the intention not only to secure the fullest enforcement agencies as provided by law, but to make it a model in the country.

Give Officials Chance

"Moreover, it is only fair to give the district officials an opportunity to meet such charges."

Commissioner Dougherty announced tonight that he would lay the matter before the commissioners at a meeting tomorrow.

Howell said tonight that he had no specific charges, explaining that he had discovered prohibition violations in the District of Columbia briefly yesterday in connection with another matter.

He knows, and everyone else knows, he said, that there is bootlegging going on in Washington. He said he could cite no specific instances, but that the local police should be able to supply the information.

He said that he did have the name of a vessel that took liquor for the Japanese embassy to Baltimore, and he had the name of a trucking corporation that is bringing liquor to embassies from Baltimore.

Howell has advanced a new argument regarding diplomatic liquor, which is brought in under the immunity of diplomats. He contends that a ship bringing liquor for diplomats should be seized like any other ship transporting liquor as they are violating law. Likewise, a truck bringing diplomatic liquor to Washington from Baltimore, he holds, is violating the law, unless the embassy owns the truck.

The only way for a diplomat to secure liquor legally, he argues, is to bring it in himself and to transport it here, himself. Recently, the justice department held that diplomats could not hire trucks for bringing liquor here, but must bring liquor from Baltimore here in their own vehicles, with a diplomat accompanying the load.

ing, but flag poles were known only a comparatively short time before man discovered they were good for more than flags.

He further pointed out that several American girls swam the Hellespont a few weeks ago and their feat hardly made a ripple on the ever changing "page one" of the American newspaper. Benny's mind seemed occupied with the past.

"What songs Homer could have sung if he had seen the world's best flag pole sitter in action!" he added, wistfully.

For the doubtful who may think there is a trick to the feat, Benny has invited any who wish to climb the pole and touch him and see that he is not a robot, if any are that much interested or have the nerve to try it. And for those who failed to take prizes in the greased pole climb at the country fair, Benny has installed a telephone so that anyone may call him at any time of day or night to ask the correct time or to inquire about him and his other flag pole sitting feats. His number will be 8174.

"I won't be asleep," he said, "and I'll have plenty of light at night, plenty to eat, read and hear through the courtesy of Wichita Falls merchants. Give me a ring while I'm up there and just watch me catch up on that sleep in the window of the Star Furniture company after I come down."

Blaze Sweeps Gorgeous Club

Loss Estimated at $200,000 In New York

NEW YORK, Sept. 22. (US)—Among the colorful splendors of the newly-furnished Club Richman, in West Fifty-Sixth street, where midnight gayety was to have reigned two weeks hence, flames held carnival early today.

They left ashes of silk, powder of gold leaf. The club and two elaborately furnished apartments above were burned out.

The loss was estimated at more than $200,000. Harry Richman and his partner, Louis Schwartz, said they just spent $100,000 in new decorations for the night club alone. The opening was set for Oct. 5.

A passerby discovered smoke issuing from the club shortly after 2 o'clock.

The origin of the fire was not determined. The club was empty and the decorators had departed hours before the fire broke out.

NEGRO STABS, SHOOTS MAN

J. P. Clayton Injured Here In Altercation

A man who gave his name as J. P. Clayton, employe of the Lone Star Gas company at Bowie, was shot in the shoulder and stabbed in the back in a fight on Lake street about 8 o'clock Sunday night.

The man was taken to the Wichita General hospital in an Albert's company ambulance. His wounds were not considered serious and he was brought back to the city jail after treatment and lodged there for questioning. Officers said that Clayton had become involved in a fight with a negro man who fled after wounding him.

A search of the negro section of town was being conducted Sunday night in an effort to locate the negro, according to Frank Burns, chief of police. The shot in Clayton's back entered the flesh of the shoulder and the stab, evidently made with a small knife, entered between the shoulders, it was said.

Clayton is employed as a worker on pipelines of the Lone Star company, according to a fellow employe.

Borger Death Probe Goes On

Special Prosecutor Continues Work

BORGER, Texas, Sept. 22. (AP)—Though all clues to the slayer of District Attorney John A. Holmes, shot to death from ambush more than a week ago, have been investigated without tangible result, Clem Calhoun, special state prosecutor, had not given up hope, he said today.

Calhoun declared he was uncovering new evidence, through the aid of the four Texas rangers here.

He conferred today with Judge E. J. Pickens of the 84th district but did not say whether he learned anything "new."

Meanwhile, the failure of Ranger Captain Frank Hamer, in charge of the rangers, to return on the morning train as expected seemed to puzzle special investigators. They had not heard, they said, whether Captain Hamer was to return to Borger or go to Brownsville where he had been subpoenaed as a witness. Calhoun declared that unless Hamer had returned by noon Monday he would communicate with Governor Moody, who assigned the lawyer his present task.

City officers had not commented on Hamer's statement to the governor that Borger presented "the worst bit of organized crime" he had seen in 23 years of service. They seemed elated over the fact that Mr. Moody had made no comment.

PROFESSOR GETS AN EARFUL

NEW YORK, Sept. 20.—One way to improve college educations would be to have the professors dodge classes with the students.

Either that or do not give the professors any vacations in the summer time.

That's when they seem to do all their heavy thinking.

One eminent brewer of thought and a scientific bender of twigs seems to have spent June, July and August pondering on the growing use of profanity by flappers, debutantes and women.

What's that got to do with algebra?

The Prof. says that exhaustive studies indicate that women are cussing more than ever.

Looks like it's the proxy's own fault for getting them mad.

As for ladies using cuss words, professor, that's something we know nothing about.

The Prof. must have gleaned his information in a higher stratum of society than that to which we cling by virtue of hard labor and ever-blooming installments.

We do not know the name of the lady who educated the professor in modern and ancient billingsgate.

We do not know what she said.

We do not even know what the professor did.

If he was trying to do a cartwheel in a canoe, if he bounded his heavy brogans off her little tootsies in a barn dance, if he forgot to drive with one arm, then the lady was very correct in her choice of spoiled syntax.

If she chose to blister him with corrosive rhetoric, that's her business.

But, just because the professor is a punkola at a party, is no reason why he can make a national issue of it.

If the Prof. wants to learn some bad language why doesn't he compile a thesaurus of the flippo epigrams stenciled on those yellow slickers worn by sophomores?

Then, the Prof. would realize that insults are co-education.

Profanity is almost a share of the curriculum at many of our high-geared universities. The boys and girls matriculate in advanced English and graduate in hog Latin.

If the Prof. has been stung at a spelling bee, it is an indication that this is no longer a masculine universe.

It is a man's world only up until the second the gin is served.

There's lots of things I'd like to do
When I'm a grown-up man.
I know that I could do them, too,
'Cause other people can.

I want to be a steeple-jack
And go up on a steeple,
Or climb a great high chimney stack
And wave at all the people.

And then some day I want to try
To drive an engine, too.
I'd make my train go thund-ring by
Like engine drivers do.

I sometimes think I'd like to be
A teacher in the schools:
Then everybody'd mind for me—
'Cause I'd make all the rules.

And then I've always thought I'd like
To be a circus clown.
I'd be the one who rides a bike
Who's always falling down.

But when I think that most of all
I'd like some day to fly.
D'you really think that I'm too small,
Too small to even try?

PEEPS AT PEOPLE

By MRS L. N. CASON

It used to be that 13 people would not sit down at a dinner table. It was considered an unlucky number; but at the fashion promenade put on last Wednesday at the Woman's Forum clubhouse, Miss Myrt Stevens, who so capably selected and gowned her models, said that she had selected her lucky number, 13, to promenade in P. B. M.'s fashions. And her audience approved her choice.

There are not many men or women today who will acknowledge their superstitions. But not many fail to have one.

Friday has almost escaped the shadow that used to hang over it. People start now on that day on journeys without expecting wreck or ruin.

But women will not walk under ladders. Watch them on the downtown streets of Wichita Falls. They will detour into the street rather than be liable to the bad luck that follows walking beneath a ladder.

And women are superstitious in cards. They must have a red or a blue deck, if they would have luck. Or, they say, cards run north and south or east and west.

We have heard of a man who put his shirt on wrong side out and, after changing it, went to the races. To this day, he believes it was the wrong side out shirt that made him lose on the races.

Breaking a mirror is still bad luck. We were assured of that when one was broken in a home where we called, last week. The one who broke it is still gloomy over seven years of bad luck facing her.

Shakespeare wrote, "Look how the world's poor people are amazed at apparitions, signs, prodigies!"

In the twentieth century, they are still amazed. More times than one in recent years, the end of the world has been looked for because of portents urged upon an uneducated people.

And educated people see the new crescent moon turned one way or the other and foretell the month's rainfall or its drouth.

And we have heard educated people venture to prophesy the first frost from the first tree frog's clamor.

U. T. Gifts Increase, Says Alcalde Editor

Special to The Record News.

AUSTIN, Sept. 22.—According to statistics compiled by the American Alumni council, the University of Texas is outstanding in the matter of gifts received from friends of public education, James L. McCamy, editor of the Alcalde, University of Texas ex-students' magazine, has announced.

The university leads in the southwest in the total number of gifts from private individuals to state universities, McCamy said. For buildings alone, the university is the recipient of $2,650,000, in addition to one of the largest gifts ever presented by one person to an institution of learning. This is the building fund for the John Sealy hospital at the university school of medicine at Galveston, estimated to be in excess of $12,000,000.

Oh, These Women

By LEOLA ALLARD

NEW YORK, Spet. 22. (US)—"You make me decidedly weary, taking the attitude that people should tell you only pleasant things," writes a lady who understood me perfectly. "How would you improve yourself if there were no critics?"

What's the matter with that? Why should people tell you unpleasant things? Can you imagine a more luxurious state of mind than being full of the consciousness that you are exactly what the doctor ordered?

Boy!

Why does the lady think that women flock to fortune tellers and pay from $10 to $45 to hear a smart woman talk for one half hour about nothing but them? Not because they believe all they hear, but because they like to hear about themselves.

And what do the future-painters tell you? That you have a great power over men, that all your troubles will be cleared away in the year 1929, that you will have money, that somebody you don't like is going to pass out, and that someone is going to fall in love with you.

If your friends did a little more of that, and your families—by all means your families (I hope mine reads this), you wouldn't have to pay $20, and everybody would be happier.

Anything that makes people happier is good. Things that aren't good don't make you happy. They merely lead you to a wailing wall. Saying nice things to people when they are downcast—and when they aren't—makes life a gala sort of thing with a flame colored ribbon around its neck.

A crepe hanger is the devil's direst invention.

"If you do this you will die in the poor house. You shouldn't give money away, you should start a savings account. You wouldn't have to buy a new hat if you'd clean and reshape the old one. You buy too many shoes, it's extravagant. You shouldn't eat sweets, they make you fat. You should eliminate uncooked fruit, it makes acid. The tooth is dead, you should have it out, even if it isn't giving you any trouble." (A dentist I know wore one of those not expecting it to give him trouble and got 25 years wear out of it.)

The lady says you can't improve yourself without criticism.

Criticism doesn't improve you, it merely ruins your disposition. It makes you self-conscious, and unhappy. If people are pleasant and say nice things, you strive to be like them. That's what improves you.

Oh, don't mention it!

Dorothy Lectures Business Woman On Wife's Duties

Purblind Wives Who Fail to See The Dignity in Housework—The Only Interesting Job Is the One That Is Well Done—Prodigal Husband.

Dear Miss Dix—Why should the wife's relationship in the home of her husband be of the same status as that of some hireling in his office? If I ever marry I expect to be my husband's partner in the business of life. This is impossible when a wife is nothing better than a household servant. Why teach men that their wives should peel potatoes and wash dishes while they have plenty of hirelings in their offices to do their dirty work? A man usually has more self-respect than to want his business partner to act as janitor and do the work around the building, yet when he gets home from the office he wants a nice hot meal with his wife waiting on him as if she were some inferior. I believe that the business of running a home should be put on a par with the business of running an office.—An Independent Business Woman.

Answer—You are quite right in asserting that when you marry you expect to be your husband's partner in the business of life. That is the ideal relationship between a married couple.

But your end of the partnership will be running the home, providing your husband with good, nourishing, well-cooked food, keeping his clothes in order, giving him a clean, comfortable place in which to rest after his day's work is over. And, unless you are luckier than most women are and marry a rich man, you will yourself have to do the labor this requires. Statistics show that more than three-fourths of the homes in this country are servantless.

So, unless the wives do the peeling of the potatoes and the washing of the dishes they would remain undone, and humble as you esteem these tasks you will perceive that they have a very important place in the scheme of things. Even genius has to be nourished on spuds and the most puissant demand a clean plate upon which to eat them.

Of course, when a woman is at the head of a big establishment her position in it is similar to that of her husband in his office. She becomes an executive who transmits her orders through her butler and housekeeper to her staff of servants. She doesn't haggle with the butcher over soup meat or bake the bread or polish up the handle of the big front door with her own hands any more than her husband sweeps out his office or runs his own errands.

But unless you marry a millionaire you will not find yourself at the head of a big establishment. You will find that you have a bungalow or a three or four-room apartment. You will not have many servants to do your bidding. You will be your own maid. And so the sooner you get over the idea that there is anything degrading to a woman in doing her own housework the better for you.

I have never been able to understand why women consider their work in the home less honorable than their husband's work in office or store or factory. Why should it be a master's work for a man to make flour but a slave's work for a woman to bake bread out of that flour? Why should a woman esteem herself any more of a servant when she works in her kitchen than she did when she worked in an office?

As a matter of fact, she is freer and more independent in the kitchen because she doesn't have to punch any time clock, she has no boss over her, nobody to reprimand her if she stops to gossip with a neighbor or puts on her hat in the midst of her morning's work to run out and get a bargain she has seen advertised in the morning paper.

Also, in these days there are very few homes that are not equipped with all sorts of labor-saving electrical devices so that the woman who works from sun to sun and whose labor is never done merely shows herself inefficient and a bad manager. Therefore, women's domestic slavery is simply an attitude of mind. It does not exist in reality unless the individual woman so ordains it.

Inasmuch as the predestined career of the vast majority of women is to be home-makers, it is nothing short of tragical that they have this same distorted viewpoint on their work that you have. They think of their work with contempt, as menial labor, as sordid drudgery. Something that it is not worth while even to learn how to do well. That is why women will make coffee and boil egg for 40 years without ever learning how to get a breakfast that is fit to eat.

And it is because women have no pride in their work that they have no joy in it and why they complain of the monotony of housework. All work is monotonous. You go through the same motions every time you sell a bill of goods or type a letter or build a locomotive and you can put just as much variety into making soup and experimenting with new effects in sauces that you can in painting a picture or pulling off a big business deal.

So, my dear young lady, try to get this point of view on domestic work before you get married. Then you won't find housework slavery but a gay adventure. We get out of any kind of work just the sort of kick that we put into it.

—DOROTHY DIX.

Dear Miss Dix—I am a graduate from a commercial school and have been working for four months as a stenographer for a fairly good salary for a beginner, but I am very dissatisfied. I feel that I would like to do something besides sitting in an office all day. I have often thought of studying art or of doing newspaper work. Can you tell me what sort of work there is in the editorial department for a girl of 17?—DISSATISFIED.

Answer—Better stick to your stenography for which you have prepared yourself. You will find that all work is a grind once you get into it and the novelty has worn off.

Nearly all young people—and a lot of old ones—are always looking for some job that is full of thrills and excitement and good pay and light work and that you can do on the days when you happen to feel like it and nothing more interesting presents itself. So they are always throwing up the thing they are doing and changing to something else, and the result is that they never learn how to do anything well and they never get anywhere.

So my earnest advice to you is to make up your mind to stick to the occupation you have chosen and to concentrate all of your thoughts and energy on making yourself the best possible stenographer. If you do, you will get a lot of kick out of it because you will get interested in your work, and you will find the joy of craftsmanship, which is one of the most satisfying emotions in the world.

As for your thinking of studying art, that is foolish unless you have some strongly marked talent. Only those to whom God has given the eye and the hand of the artist can hope to succeed in that precarious calling. Nor is there any overwhelming demand for 17-year-old girls as editors. You might aspire to become one about 30 years hence if you have a talent for writing, good judgment and executive abil-

Dear Miss Dix—My husband and I have been married a number of years and have always gotten along well together, but a few weeks ago he decided that he was getting young again and craved some wild parties. So he left me. But his parties have not satisfied him, so now he wants to come back. Says that after living with me for more than 20 years he finds he can't live without me, and that he has tried to get interested in others, but can't. Must I take him back or not?—WORRIED.

Answer—Surely. He has had his lesson and he will be the most housebroken in the world when once he gets back to his own fireside. A lot of men who think they have gotten too young for their wives find out their mistake when they try stepping out with the flappers and jellybeans and are glad enough to come back to their old wives.—DOROTHY DIX.

Florence Trumbull Considers Marriage Today To John Coolidge As 'Local Event'

By PEARL CROSS
Universal Service Writer

PLAINVILLE, Conn., Sept. 22.—After all, Florence Trumbull is glad her wedding to John Coolidge did not take place in the White House.

The tall, slender daughter of Governor John H. Trumbull admitted this today when she attended Sunday services in the century-old village church where she will be married tomorrow afternoon.

"There's enough excitement and upset as it is. I am happy that our wedding, however, will be a simple, homey affair because I'd dread the prospect of a big wedding such as we would have had if we were married last year in the White House."

Just "Local Event"

This was her first interview this week with newspaper reporters who stormed the governor's mansion in great numbers all day long until Miss Trumbull smilingly gave in. She declared that she was mystified that her wedding should have become a national event. She desired simplicity, and quietness, she said, and considered the affair was just a "local event."

Nevertheless, presents from all parts of the country poured into the Trumbull home. Invited guests to the church and reception afterwards are flocking into town. An added guard of policemen protect the gifts displayed on the second floor of the bride's house, which now resembles a brilliant bazaar of antiques, gorgeous silverware and beautiful furniture. All this paraphernalia the young couple expect to move into their small four-room apartment in Westville, Conn., when they return from their honeymoon Oct. 5.

John took his bride-to-be for a brief motor ride this afternoon.

The governor and his wife entertained the bridal party at a country club later.

Ministers Entertained

The Trumbulls are entertaining the two officiating ministers tonight at a buffet supper.

Instead of a grand caterer from the city, the bride has appointed a local dealer who has catered at all of Miss Trumbull's "little girl parties." After much knitting of her brows, young Coolidge's lovely fiancee decided on these goodies for the reception on the Trumbull lawn, following the ceremony at the church:

Bouillion, chicken salad, moulded salmon, sweetbread patties, sandwiches, French roses filled with mousse, punch and pineapple frape.

The Trumbulls verified the fact that Mrs. Coolidge has presented to the young couple a solid mahogany bedroom suite of colonial design. Governor and Mrs. Trumbull gave them a mahogany dining room set and a breakfast set for the dining-alcove. The china which the bride has received is Lenox and Wedgewood, in golden yellow and brown, to harmonize with the other colonial furnishings.

To handle the mob of press people and cameramen here to view the wedding, Governor Trumbull was obliged to set up press headquarters for them in the Plainville freight house tonight.

Attendance Marks May Fall at W. T. C. C. Meet

Special to The Record News.

EL PASO, Texas, Sept. 22.—The largest delegation from any city in Texas to the annual convention of the West Texas Chamber of Commerce will likely be from Fort Worth. Announcement was made today that the city will send a special train of at least 300 people. It will be accompanied by a band and will arrive in El Paso early on the morning of Oct. 24.

Numerous points have also announced delegations of at least 100 and more. Already, a month in advance of the convention, the hotels are being swamped with reservations and it would not be surprising if the attendance is greater than that at Fort Worth or Wichita Falls, where the convention was held during the last two years. El Paso is well equipped to handle the throngs and the housing committee announces there will be no difficulty in entertaining them.

Guiding Your Child

By MRS. AGNES LYNE

SIDE STEPPING

Bad tempers grow with exercise. Ugly dispositions feed on unpleasant scenes. Jealousy watches every opportunity to absorb the poison on which it thrives. Every unhappy quality in the unfolding character of your child develops through emphasis on its existence.

Don't give your child a chance to realize the worst in himself. If temper tantrums are his weakness, study the apparent causes. Don't let the situation arise that brings on the emotional storm. If being reminded of certain things tends to irritate him, find some indirect way of making your point. If you know your child to be of a jealous disposition, spare him as much as possible the scenes which make him jealous.

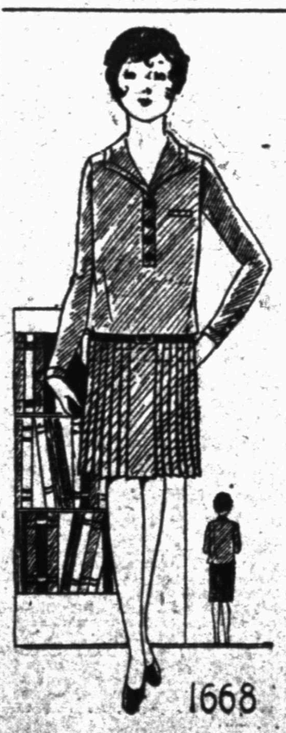

Don't let things come to a crisis, for in a crisis you must win, lest you jeopardize your very necessary in a contest of wills is won at a heavy cost. It is better to avoid the battle.

For once the policy of evasion is wise. A little tact at a crucial moment is worth more than all the argument, coercion and punishment you have at your command.

If one morning Johnny hates particularly to do the school work which his teacher has assigned in order that he may pass into the next grade in the fall, don't make an issue of the matter across the breakfast table. Suggest instead that as soon as he has worked his six problems you will take him and his friends down to the lake for a swim.

Learn the technique of side stepping your child's undesirable responses. Don't give them a chance to develop. Crowd them out with all the pleasant ones that you can discover.

QUANAH, Texas, Sept. 22.—A group of about 30 farmers, with County Agent L. T. Hunter and County Agent H. M. Cantrell of Cottle county, and Mrs. Cantrell, made an inspection trip to the Chillicothe experiment farm this week, and studied seed propagation, especially of the grain sorghums and feed products.

This is the first of a series of similar trips planned by County Agent Hunter, taking about 30 men each trip. Intense interest in the development of more and better feed crops in the county is exhibited by the farmers, and the opportunity to study the handling and propagation of the type best suited to this section of Texas as given by the Chillicothe station is beginning to be realized by Hardeman county farmers. Mr. Hunter expects to have the full quota in each trip made.

Those attending this first tour were: J. D. Mahoney, Quanah; D. L. Wardlaw, Quanah; E. L. Lewis, Quanah, route three; Henry Minchew, Goodlett, route one; R. S. Reed, Quanah, county commissioner; E. HENRY, THE EIGHTH WONDER

Daily Editorial

MATTHEW WOLL complains that Henry Ford's foreign ventures are taking an immeasurable pay-roll out of the country—and labor's pocket.

But, if he doesn't make cars for Europe, Europe will make 'em for herself, enter into mass production and dump the surplus everywhere.

Mr. Ford's move will tend to prevent that. He's protecting his present export trade by straddling the Atlantic and gathering profits yonder to invest at home.

Mr. Ford is a phenomenon. His performance is entirely original. He has built the greatest individual business and private fortune of the century, without obligation to precedent or capital.

Rule of thumb philosophers, who detect waning ability in gray hairs, are herewith reminded that Henry's head didnt emerge above crowd level until it began to whiten.

He wasnt a child prodigy. His precocity waited 40 years before it showed samples.

Early neighbors weren't aware, by any evidence of shrewdness or talent, that they were rubbing yard fences with the most unique figure of his time.

EDISON'S imagination was already clucking over new-laid eggs in its pin-feather stages. And Carnegie was well on his way to personal affluence and industrial influence, at an age which found Ford still an inconspicuous wage earner in whom no associate or employer had sensed a single unaverage quality.

Up to the launching of his car, he had never climbed higher than an engine room or earned more than a superintendent's meager salary.

During that period, he did no important reading, and made no contacts to which his subsequent rise may be even partially attributed.

Utterly inexperienced in the processes of management, and finance—a total stranger to factory efficiency, distribution methods and sales promotion—and without trained aides or cash resources—he created a distinct manufacturing technique, evolved an unparalleled shop system, established his own fiscal controls, and developed a marketing strategy against which competition has yet to hurl an effective counter-offensive.

All other pioneer automobile units have passed under Wall street domination.

But, the interlocked directorates, commanding rival groups and serving them with their combined resources and expertness, haven't halted Ford's march any more than Allied Europe could frustrate Napoleon's forward thrusts.

Ford still plays the lone hand—still follows inspiration instead of tradition, continues to expend and expand on Gargantuan scales—and without set-backs.

His wake is littered with upset theories and professional discomfiture—his career, a map of shortcuts, simplified procedures and waste eliminations.

He consults nobody, delivers instructions and fires the executives who deviate from them.

He operates railroads, glass mills, steel plants, freight fleets, chemical works and a hundred subsidiary concerns—is in the way of being the world's largest aeroplane builder and, doubtless, will die richer than Rockefeller.

Fortune's tides have no set turning times.

Today in Texas History

SEPTEMBER 23

1835—Stephen F. Austin sent out a call for every man in Texas to seize arms in the defense of his country and his rights.

1860—A union mass meeting at Austin was addressed by Sam Houston in a strong plea against secession.

1876—Arrived at Houston the Clinton, first ocean steamer to navigate Buffalo Bayou.

A writer urges that farmers give up automobiles as an economy measure. But how would they ever get to town to buy their butter and eggs?

A man was fined for kissing a girl in a New York subway. He certainly got away lucky.

The girls have a lot of latitude in the matter of dress, but don't seem to employ much longitude.

The City's Airport Program

THE AIRPORT situation in Wichita Falls, especially as concerns the city government's participation therein, remains to some extent incomprehensible to this newspaper. We have two airports, both of which are owned by private corporations, but one of which is leased to and operated by the city as the Municipal airport. Neither of the fields rates as highly as a city the size of Wichita Falls deserves, yet the amount of money expended on both would provide Wichita Falls with one very good port.

In such a situation, now comes the city council and proposes to spend $10,000 for the construction of a ticket office, waiting room, board walk and other things at the municipally leased field. If this city were totally without airport facilities, this expenditure of funds from the public treasury might be condoned as a necessity, but coming on the heels of the expenditure of a similar amount of money at the other field, to secure the self-same facilities which the privately operated field is already providing, it appears to The Record News the city council should make some effort to avoid the expenditure of public money in improvements which might prove needless.

This newspaper has previously said that it believes the air interests of Wichita Falls might be served better by one airport, which should be a well-equipped field under municipal protection and sponsorship, but not necessarily municipally operated and maintained. It has been unofficially said that efforts to bring about a merger have been made and have proved futile. This may be true, but no such effort ever has been made where the public could hear and know the facts. The Record News believes the citizens of Wichita Falls are entitled to know the truth about the airport situation here before the city council proceeds in the spending of $10,000 for its proposed improvements.

We see no reason why the city council should not invite the owners of Staley field to state in public meeting under what conditions, if any, they would assume the burden of a municipal airport of the first class. We see no reason why the city council should not ask the owners of Kell field under what conditions, if any, they would surrender their rights in the interest of economy and concerted effort. By all means, it seems to The Record News, we should make a sincere effort to have one good airport here before we set the precedent of competitive building with public funds.

No Logic in This

OUR LEVEL-HEADED and businesslike civilization does some strangely irrational things, now and then. In New York's Sing Sing prison the other day a convict was taken ill with acute appendicitis. He was rushed to the prison hospital and an operation was performed. Unusual care was taken to see that his life was saved and that he had a speedy recovery. The state, it is only fair to say, took far more pains to prevent his death than would have been the case if he had been a law-abiding but penniless citizen on the outside.

And why? Well, the man was under sentence of death—and it was deemed extremely important that medical science keep him alive until the day when he should be strapped into the electric chair and killed in an orderly manner.

There is something supremely illogical about that episode. Perhaps you can figure out for yourself what is wrong.

Promoting Communism

IF THE leaders of the North Carolina mobs that have been attacking the textile strikers are really trying to promote the cause of Communism and social unrest in this country they are doing a magnificent job, and should receive the instant congratulations of Moscow.

If, on the other hand, they are trying to preserve our established political and economic order, they are fearful bunglers and should be called off the job without delay.

You can think as you please about the rights and wrongs of the Carolina textile strike. Certainly there are two sides to it. But for the flogging of the strike leaders and the killing of a defenseless woman there is not a shadow of a defense.

What is more important is the fact that this mob violence will do more to win converts to the Communists' banner than anything else that could have happened. The ignorant fanatics who are responsible are playing directly into the hands of the strikers.

New Rapid Transit Facilities

THE GRAND TRUNK RAILWAY, announcing plans for a combination rail and auto speed highway from Detroit to Pontiac, Mich., takes a step that may be very widely copie din other parts of the country in the near future.

Under this plan, the railway will have a four-track line between the two cities. Trains will be pulled by electric locomotives, which will get their power from overhead wires, held up by steel trusses. These trusses will be made just a little larger and stronger than usual, and will be covered over with a 40-foot auto highway which will have no hills, curves and no busy intersections.

Every city in the land needs rapid transit facilities badly. The Grand Trunk's proposal provides two kinds of rapid transit—by rail and by auto. It is a plan that deserves to be adopted in many other places.

Charlotte Chatterton, nicknamed Chatty, is a born gossip. Her mother, a widowed dressmaker, through Mrs. Van Nuys, a wealthy customer and old friend of the family, gets Chatty a position as switchboard operator at the Van Nuys offices. Chatty meets Billie Langenau, a file clerk, and Agnes Herford, private secretary to Mr. Van Nuys. Chatty falls in love with a young bond salesman, David Jordan, but when she gossips and causes Agnes to resign her position David drops Chatty. Chatty has dates with Bryant Dunning, a new salesman, who is married but says he has left his wife. Chatty has many parties at Winnie Talcott's house. Winnie is Mr. Van's new secretary.

One day Chatty overhears David talking on the phone about taking a new position at the Midas bank. Later she sees him copying names. Wishing to get even with him, and believing him stealing the bond buyers lists, Chatty tattles to Mr. Van. Mr. Van is very angry, as he has given David permission to copy the lists. Chatty has to apologize to David or leave. She leaves, and is unsuccessful in getting another position. She continues to have dates with Bryant Dunning, although her mother urges her not to do so.

Now Go on With the Story

CHAPTER LIX

Nothing happened for a week. The flowers remained a wonder, a teaser to curosity.

Her mother still smiled at intervals.

Billie still looked at her oddly.

Her work was absorbing, interesting—and yet Chatty found the days long, long.

The nights were long, too. Chatty lay for hours awake; a single image filled her mind; a single hope her heart, a single desire her soul—David.

Then Billie's voice over the wire: "Billie talking, Chatty. Can you come up to the apartment this evening? For just a minute? I want you to do me a favor!"

Chatty would, and could, and did. Anything that Billie wanted was like the laws of the Medes and the Persians to Chatty. She held herself utterly at her friend's disposal. Had she not nearly wrecked her life, her beauty?

"Oh, Chat, I'm so glad to see you!" cried Billie, as Chatty came in. "George, here's the cat's off hind whisker, herself—"

"Tell Chat I'll be there in a minute!" sang out George's words. "How can I kiss her with my face full of lather?"

"You don't have to kiss her, do you!" retorted Billie.

"Chatty, don't I have to kiss you!" demanded George, appearing momentarily from the bath room, his face white with soap. "How can I make my wife properly appreciate me, except by kissing every female that comes in sight?"

"I am not a kissee for indigent bridegrooms!" retorted Chatty, then gasped, as George rubbed his lathered face against hers and gave her a soapy kiss. "Oh, you big bear! Billie, how can you stand him?"

"You'd be surprised!" answered Billie, grinning at her infectiously. "Chatty, old darling, you have to do something for me!"

"Anything, to the half of my kingdom—or the whole of it for that matter!" answered Chatty. "Spill it."

"Deep, dark and mysterious mysteries!" responded Billie, vivaciously. "Gloomy, peculiar and grand secrets! You have to buy a pig in a poke, kiss sight unseen, do as you are told, ask no questions and be a good sport!"

"If the 'he' I've got to kiss has soap on his lips, I decline!" answered Chatty. "What for and how come and why?"

"Never mind! What we want to know, George and I, is, are you a game little sport?"

"Be yourself!" responded Chatty. "What do you want me to do? I'll kill him, if you want; murder and battle and sudden death are nothing to me! I'll do most anything you want, but spill it!"

"A'right!" agreed Billie laughing. "Good sport, I always knew you were. Well, in the first place, agree to come to my party. Tomorrow night."

"Sure I will!" answered Chatty.

"Agree to ask no questions."

"That, too. What's it all about?" demanded Chatty.

"Didn't you just agree to ask no questions? You will be called for."

"Who by?"

"No questions! A certain 'he' will call for you. Friend of ours we want you to meet. He will honk outside your door at eight, precisely. You will go down and jump in his car, really—and come here. And who you will meet and what you will do and what faces you will kiss—they are nobody's business!"

Chatty was curious—but the mere fact that she was curious made her chary of asking too many questions. Billie was throwing a party. A man was to call for her. Doubtless some friend of George's from out of town. Well, she was game. A way of spending an evening. Billie's parties were always nice—

Oddly enough, Chatty thought little of it the next day; she was very busy. Thoughts of David, even, had to be hurried into the background, lest they interfere with business. The day passed—quickly—quicker than most days.

Chatty dressed without particular care; she would look nice for Billie's party and Billie's strange man, but—what difference did it make? He wasn't Dave—

A honk on a horn outside. Chatty called goodbye to her mother and descended the stairs. Pretty car, anyway. Closed car. Shiney. He had money, evidently.

A door swung open. Chatty stood beside the car. Then—

"David!" she cried. "Why—what—where—how—"

"Good evening! Seems like old times!" David's voice shook a little. "Jump in, won't you?"

Chatty crawled, rather than jumped, into David's car. Her head revolved like a pinwheel. Her mind was a blank, utter amazement, surprise, consternation mixing in her thoughts.

"Please—please tell me—I don't—I don't understand!"

"Of course you don't! But—I wanted to take you to Billie's party. And—and I was afraid to ask you!" stammered David.

Afraid—afraid to ask her! How utterly impossible!

"You—afraid—of me?" gasped Chatty.

"Absolutely! I recalled that I told you—oh, several horrible lies!" pleaded David. "Like saying I didn't want to see you again. And so I was—scared!"

"You didn't need to be—frightened!" answered Chatty.

It wasn't true. Of course it was all a dream. She'd wake up pretty soon and find she was at work, or in a hospital, or an insane asylum. She wasn't really sitting beside David Jordon, going to a party—

"So I asked your mother—and she said I'd better wait a little!" explained David. "And I asked Agnes, and she said—to wait a little! And then I couldn't wait any more and I asked Billie, and she what you needed and—and so here what you needed and—an deo here you are. And here I am! And—and what are you going to do?"

It was simply impossible! But it was true. Well, what was she going to do?

Chatty answered before she thought.

"Why, I guess I'm going to a party with you, Dave," she whispered.

"Atta girl!" responded Dave.

That was all, then. Her head in a whirl, Chatty went tot Billie's party with David Jordon. And although Billie had other surprises, they fell flat on Chatty's ears—she was already surprised out of further exhibitions of wonder.

Winnie was there, and Jim! And Agnes and Mr. Ellerby. They played cards and made fudge and danced, and had a wonderful time, not a single word of which did Chatty remember after it was all over.

Her evening was just a blank. She made the proper answers, kidded with the rest, laughed and talked, acted, apparently, normally, and yet, inside she was just an automaton going through the motions of being a girl at a party.

David—taking her out. David, afraid to ask her! David, for whom she longed with all her heart—actually speaking to her—aye, looking at her as if he liked to—David! It was impossible, unbelievable, weird, mysterious—but it was so!

Winnie was very happy—the same old Winnie, and yet softened, more human, than before. Jim, too, had done something to himself; he seemed more manly, more straight and sure of himself. They were back just on a flying visit.

Agnes was the life of the party. Her Mr. Ellery was very simple and human, not a bit like a rich banker—just one of them all, making rarebit, playing cards, dancing with everyone, as if he was only a bank clerk instead of a rich man, a banker.

The evening went to Chatty's head as no cocktail had ever gone. She felt dizzy, but it was a delightful dizziness, a heady dizziness which promised no awful headache on the morrow.

Then came midnight and the party gave no signs of breaking up. David excused himself a moment and went to the telephone. Chatty half overheard his message "Temple garage—the other—at once." Then Billie's apartment number.

She didn't understand. She didn't care. She only knew that David had taken her to a party—and was going to take her home again—

There were hearty "good nights" on the landing, cries of "Come again" and "Such a good time." Then Winnie and Jim disappeared and Agnes and Mr. Ellerby got into a handsome limousine with a liveried chauffeur.

David and Chatty were left standing alone on the street.

"Where—where is your car?" asked Chatty.

"Come!" said David.

He led her across the street. "I thought you'd like to ride home in this," he said simply.

Chatty gasped. Before her, leaning against the curb, was the "Pride of America."

Graham Phone Service To Be Greatly Improved

GRAHAM, Texas, Sept. 22—By the end of the coming three or four months, according to D. E. Daniel, district manager of the Southwestern Bell Telephone company, Graham will enjoy service comparable to that of any city in Texas. The new building which was recently completed, was erected at a cost of $17,700. Besides this initial expenditure, $5,000 was invested in furniture, fixtures and a garage. The building in design is more modern and similar to those in larger exchanges and the design adopted for the Graham office building will be generally used in Texas for new buildings in cities the size of Graham. Approximately $100,000 worth of improvements in central office equipment, buildings and outside plant will be spent by the company to complete the building and all equipment.

The Once Over

By H. I. PHILLIPS

"HOLD 'EM, WHOOZIZ!"

PHILLIPS

Here is the football season right under our noses again and it has come upon us so suddenly we have scarcely had time to dismantle the outboard motor, pack away the bathing suit and cease tuning in on the baseball scores.

Football teams, it seems, are always practicing, the newspapers are showing the annual pictures of beefy juniors struggling with sacks of sawdust, Knute Rockne is making his seasonal forecast and on every side one hears revived the question of "What's wrong with Yale and Harvard?"

Raccoon coats are being dragged forth, overhauled, renovated, rewired and inspected for the removal of broken glass in the lining, radio announcers are working themselves into shape for the October outburst of hysteria, and from coast to coast the populace eagerly awaits the stirring spectacle of eleven Grade X students kicking eleven other future bond salesmen in the face.

Preparedness is complete except for an understanding of the rules under which the game will be played this year. The following list of changes will help the spectator out of the fog:

1—The Deflated Ball: This year no player will be allowed to deflate the ball before or after passing. Last year the practice of letting the air out of the pigskin and stuffing it (the ball, not the air) under the shirt was carried to extremes. The public tired of seeing touchdowns made with what appeared to be hot-water bottles; hence the change.

2—Goat-Posts: Two years ago the goal-posts were moved back 10 yards, and last year they were moved forward, or vice versa. There is no sense going on like this forever, so this year the goal-posts will not be on the field at all. They will be kept under the stands and brought forth only when a player is in doubt whether he has scored a touchdown or not. All touchdowns will be made over an invisible line. Neither team will know where this line is. This information will be held only by a committee of six old grads representing each university. When a player thinks he has sensed the location of the invisible line and crossed it he will yell "Goal-Posts! Goal-Posts!" and the committee will bring them on and put them where they belong. If the player has guessed right, the touchdown goes. If he has made a mistake, his team is penalized 40 yards for bum guessing. This is all calculated to provide good fun.

3—Fumbles: This season will be the best year fumbling has ever had. In the past there has been a disposition to discourage it as bad football, but this fall it will be practically encouraged. Up to now when a player fumbled a football it could be scooped up by a rival player who would rush 60 yards down the field for a touchdown while the crowds went gaga.

This was always one of the great moments of history, but too many old grads got so excited they dropped their half-pints with a loud crash on the concrete floors, causing humiliation, anger and what have you. It was consequently thought best to spare the thrills and save the flasks. This season no player may recover a fumble and run with it. He must return it to the loser at once, no question asked. The team fumbling the ball loses the ball, but doesn't have to chase it. At the end of each game the student making the most fumbles is given a prize of some kind.

4—Forward Pass: No forward passes may be made this year without the passer shouting the name and number of the player to whom he is passing it. Last year a good many forward passes went wrong because either the passer didn't know to whom he was to pass the ball or the receiver didn't know he was to receive it, or both. The new rule will make mistakes impossible.

Banishing Asthma

In the past few years I have written many articles on the subject of asthma and although thousands have written to me about their cures, I still find that there are plenty of "wheezers" if I am to judge by the number of letters I receive from asthma sufferers alone.

It is remarkable what a high percentage of cures of this distressing ailment can be accomplished through home treatment. The number cured really depends upon the number who follow instructions explicitly. Many asthmatics who read this statement for the first time may doubt its truth, owing to the fact that they have been told that their trouble is incurable. I do not blame some asthmatics for believing that their case is hopeless after they have tried so many different remedies, with pills, vaccines, serums, smoking powders and unsuccessful changes of climates. However, I wish to assure my readers that asthma is curable through the methods I advocate, and that the treatment is simple enough to be understood by any schoolboy.

There are several different types of asthma, but the fundamental causes are essentially the same. There is always some restriction interfering with the diaphragm and other breathing muscles, and there is also usually a formation of excessive quantities of mucus in the lungs. The feeling of suffocation and tightness in the chest is because something is interfering with the function of inspiration. The diaphragmatic muscle is always too tight, either because of lack of development or because of the pressure of excessive amounts of stomach or intestinal gas.

A distended stomach from overeating can of course produce a temporary pressure, but in the chronic cases there is always a tendency to flatulence which still further retards the action of a poorly functioning diaphragm.

There are many contributing causes which may precipitate an attack. The patient's sensitiveness to certain kinds of foods, the breathing of an irritating odor from flowers, horsehair, etc., the retarding influence of moist climates upon skin elimination, local nose and throat infections—these must all be considered contributary causes, and always secondary to the restricted diaphragm and the excessive mucus.

During an acute attack, the difficult breathing may be relieved through injections of adrenalin, or the use of some smoking powder containing opiates. Such remedies, of course, do not produce a cure, and in fact, make the chronic condition worse.

The type of sensitive asthmatic who cannot eat eggs or shellfish can always be cured so that these foods may be eaten without bringing on an attack. The reason for such sensitiveness will be found in a kind of acidosis which is removed as soon as the patient's blood stream is more thoroughly alkalinized through living on a carefully planned, well balanced diet. This is also true with the one who cannot smell certain flowers or come near an animal with certain kind of fur or hair.

More about asthma tomorrow.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS
Sodium Iodid

Question—H. H. asks: "Is sodium iodid poison? Can it be taken internally, and in what amount? What will it take care of?"

Answer—Sodium iodid is a colorless crystal used in the treatment of syphilis, rheumatism, hepatic diseases, etc. It is taken in dosages of from 5 to 15 grains, but may act as a poison if too much is used. I do not recommend remedies in this column, but if I did I would never advise the use of sodium iodid, as it has no virtue in curing diseases compared to the good which comes from the proper application of scientific dietetics and hygiene.

Diabetes

Question—I. S. asks: "Will you please tell me if grapefruit, oranges or melons are good to give a person who has diabetes and is taking insulin?"

Answer—All fruits are good foods for the diabetic to use, even though they do contain a certain amount of fruit sugar. A fast on any of these fruits is the best treatment to use in overcoming the faulty metabolism which causes diabetes.

Reducing

Question—J. K. writes: "I weigh 190 pounds and should weigh 150. If I take off my surplus flesh at the rate of 10 pounds per month, would that be too much? If I walk five or six miles per day will that help me very much in taking off flesh?"

Answer—It is all right for you to take off surplus flesh at the slow rate of 10 pounds a month, but you can lose much faster than that if you will first take a short fast and then follow it with a limited diet, free from carbohydrates. There is no danger in reducing rapidly if you will follow the plan I have so often suggested in this column. It is essential for you to walk at least five miles daily if you wish to reduce the weight around your hips and buttocks.

Red River Bridge Project Approved

VERNON, Texas, Sept. 22.—Tentative approval of plans for construction of a bridge across Red river north of Vernon has been given by Jackson county, Oklahoma, officials, and by the highway commissions of Texas and Oklahoma, County Judge J. V. Townsend announced. The Texas Highway commission has made a provisional allotment for grading, drainage and bridge work on Highway No. 23 north from Vernon to the proposed bridge, to connect with an Oklahoma highway.

Judge Townsend and Commissioner J. M. Reynolds have made a number of trips to Altus recently in the interest of the proposed bridge and the Jackson county officials have agreed to pay their share of the costs, and the Texas commission has agreed to take the matter up with the Oklahoma highway body in the near future, it is announced.

The tentative allotment made by the Texas commission is not to become available until more definite plans for the bridge are made, it was stipulated.

SPUDDERS GET 'BREAKS' BUT STEERS TAKE TEXAS PENNANT

PITCHING EDGE DECIDES ISSUE

Messenger Hurls Well But Frazier Is Better

on the third Benton socked it into left field, but it was straight for Randy Moore and an easy out. Frasier's fast ball pitching provided quite a contrast with the slow curving of Glazner yesterday. It wasn't a fast ball that fanned Gullic though. After fouling off four he swung at a slow curve. Incidentally, there wasn't much luck attached to the feat of fanning both Fitzgerald and Gullic in the opening round.

Messenger failed to get his first one over to Flaskamper, but the second was a called strike and the next three were fouled off before the hitter finally rolled to Bettencourt. Andy then disposed of Rosenthal and Moore on soft flies without throwing a ball.

It didn't seem the thing for this fourth game to be another pitchers' battle, after three straight in which the chunkers have held the upper hand by a wide margin, but that's just the way it started in the first inning. Benton's line drive to Moore, after which Fitzgerald and Gullic fanned, was the only hard hit ball of the inning. For the Steers, Flaskamper bounded to Bettencourt and Rosenthal and Moore hoisted to Bennett and Fitzgerald, respectively. Some more of the same was dispensed in the second. Bennett grounded out, short to first, Flaskamper coming up with a neat play on a slow, mean bounder. Turgeon fouled to first and Bettencourt rolled out, third to first. In the last half Hermann gobbled up Harvel's grounder and Benton did the same to Davis.

Bischoff Singles

Bischoff broke the monotony with a single to center, but something went wrong with the Steers' base running machinery and Bischoff was out at second, Fitzgerald to Benton.

It was suicide.

The old hit in the pinch was absent for the Spudders in the third and as usual they found their pitcher up when a hit was most needed. The opening was provided when Harvel muffed Lapan's long fly in the shadow of the center field screen. It was a two-base error. Flaskamper saved a run with a great stop of Hermann's hit, holding Lapan to third. Benton grounded to third and it turned out to be a double play when Lapan broke for the plate as Jeffries tossed to Morse. The latter made a beautiful throw to the plate and the play wasn't close.

Again in the third the Spudders failed to take advantage of the chance the Steers presented them on a silver platter. Fitzgerald reached first on Flaskamper's boot and Gullic reached first when Davis watched his bunt roll fair after starting in foul territory. Bennett failed in his sacrificial effort and then popped to second. Turgeon flied to Rosenthal and Bettencourt swung at a third one.

Big Opportunities

Those were great opportunities the Spudders turned their deaf ears to in the third and fourth.

Messenger himself opened the door for the Bovines when he failed to field Rosenthal's easy tap to the box after Flaskamper had hoisted to Fitzgerald. Moore also sent up a fly to Fitzgerald and Harvel took his cut at a third one.

Dallas refused to kick 'em in the next round and Frasier made short work of three of Mr. Galloway's ambitious young men. He hung up his fifth and sixth strike outs, with Lapan and Messenger as the victims.

Two doubles usually score a run and they did in the Dallas half. Davis lined his into left field and Bischoff dropped one in between Gullic and Fitzgerald to register Davis. Jeffries, attempting to sacrifice, fouled to Lapan. Morse lined to Bennett and Bischoff, who had turned third, was doubled off second.

Jeffries Shines

Jeffries made nice plays in the sixth to retire Benton and Fitzgerald on slow bounders and almost robbed Gullic of a hit with a phenomenal stop, but with no chance for a play. Bennett crashed one to the box that ricocheted off Frasier's shins and into Jeffries' hands for a simple out at first.

The Steers added their second run in this inning after two were out. Rosenthal singled and Moore repeated, sending the front runner to third. Moore took second on Lapan's passed ball. Harvel hit to Hermann and was safe on a low throw to the bag. Rosenthal scored and Moore was out at the plate, Bettencourt to Lapan.

Three Spudders and as many Steers went out in rapid fire order in the seventh. The only blemish in the pitching was a pass to Bettencourt that was erased when Lapan hit into a double play. Turgeon fanned to open the inning. For the Steers, Davis and Jeffries rolled to Turgeon and Bischoff fanned.

Spudders Count One

The Spudders left the bases full in the eighth after scoring a lone run. With one out, Sullivan batted for Messenger and walked. Benton kept it going with a single to center. Fitzgerald drove a double through Davis, scoring Sullivan and sending Benton to third. Gullic grounded out, third to first, with no advance, and Bennett was purposely walked, filling the bases. Turgeon fanned.

George Payne went back in the eighth and pitched out of a deep hole. Morse singled to right and was forced at second on Frasier's attempted sacrifice. Flaskamper beat out a bunt to Hermann. Rosenthal rolled to Bettencourt and Moore popped to Turgeon.

The Spudders' last gasp failed to produce even a hard foul ball. Frasier fanned Nos. 9 and 10, when Bettencourt watched a third one go by and Lapan swung. Bischoff made a phenomenal catch of Hermann's pop foul falling into the dugout but clinging to the ball.

Lions Aren't So Much

JUAREZ, Mexico.—Well, the lion is no longer the king of beasts. A bull and a lion were put into an arena here recently to fight for the pleasure of the people. Much betting was done on the lion, but that beast's backers were given a surprise when the bull put the lion to flight.

GIANTS BEAT CUBS, 5 TO 4

Hartnett Back at Catching Place for Champs

CHICAGO, Sept. 22. (AP)—Gabby Hartnett, star catcher of the champion Chicago club, caught his first game of the year for his team but his efforts went to waste as the Cubs lost a 5 to 4 decision to New York in the final game of the series between the two clubs.

Hartnett injured his arm in spring training and caught only a few innings in an exhibition game this year. Today was the first time he appeared behind the plate in a championship contest. He has been used as a pinch hitter several times.

Guy Bush, leading pitcher of the National league, tried to stop the Giants today and earn a starting job in the world's series but he didn't have the stuff that won him 18 games earlier in the year. New York pasted him for 10 hits, putting two of them, a base on balls and an error together to score three runs in the seventh to forge ahead.

Fred Fitzsimmons started for the Giants but gave way to a pinch hitter in the seventh and Jack Scott pitched the last three innings. Scott allowed only one hit in that time and fanned five. He retired the Cubs on strikes in the eighth.

Rogers Hornsby hit his 38th home run in the seventh. Bill Terry clouted one for the Giants. Kiki Cuyler stole a base to boost his total to 40.

Even though the pennant race is over a capacity crowd of 40,000 watched the game. Score:

YANKS SPLIT TWO

NEW YORK, Sept. 22. (AP)—The final appearance of a western team in the Yankee stadium for the year, the Yankees and the Chicago White Sox divided a double-header today. Chicago won the first game, 7 to 4, but the Yankees evened the day's count by taking the second, 3 to 1.

The Sox batted Herb Pennock at opportune moments to win the first game. A homer by Reynolds gave them a tie in the fifth inning while Johnnie Kerr's double in the eighth drove in the winning run. They added two more in the ninth. Faber improved after the second inning and Durst's homer was the only run scored off him after that frame.

Roy Sherid had the better of Al Thomas in the second game, he held the Sox to five hits and drove in two of his team's runs. Score:

TIGERS BLANK BROWNS

DETROIT, Sept. 22. (AP)—Elon Hogsett, left-hander from Montreal blanked the St. Louis Browns, 5 to 0, today in his first start for Detroit on Navin field. Hogsett was aided by four fast double plays, all of which were started by Bill Akers, recruit shortstop from the Texas league.

The Browns obtained seven hits off Hogsett's delivery, but only three of these were out of the infield, Akers' brilliant fielding stopped the visitors when they threatened to score. Score:

DIAMOND FLASHES

Odds and Ends From the Camp of the Victorious Enemy

By AL PARKER
Staff Correspondent

STEER STADIUM, Dallas, Sept. 22.—This Sunday crowd looked quite different from that of opening day.

The Saturday gathering was a distinct disappointment. Fred McJunkin, Dallas president, attributes the comparatively small attendance to the opposition offered in the Southern Methodist university opening football game.

The count was something like 8,500, though several newspaper accounts of the game gave one crowd as more than 10,000.

The Dallas opening day gathering was just a few hundred more than turned out for Wichita Falls opener last Wednesday.

Considering the difference in the size of the cities, Wichita Falls' turnout is quite a tribute to the loyalty of the old home town fans, or maybe the Dallas crowd is a "rapatis" fandom. Undoubtedly Wichita Falls has the greatest representation here ever to support a Spudder conquest on foreign fields.

A steady stream of fans has flowed into Dallas for the last 48 hours. Spudder Secretary Guy Airey sold more than 400 tickets to Wichita Falls fans Saturday and that number has been more than doubled today—that is, the number of those who would have liked to have tickets was doubled. It was impossible to obtain choice seats at any time today and after 11 a. m. none could be had at any price.

Those who bought early for two days were fortunate enough to get seats in the Wichita Falls section, and they are good ones, just to the right of the plate and half-way up in the stands.

However, those who did not arrive on the scene until today were fortunate to get any kind of seats.

Expectation of a crowd of 20,000 for today appears likely of fulfillment, 30 minutes before game time. Left field and right field bleachers, that were practically unoccupied yesterday, were filling speedily and the S. R. O. sign was out before game time.

Standing room was plentiful, however, and there is little doubt but that this park can accommodate a few more than 20,000 customers without the necessity of packing them on the field and making ground rules necessary.

Skipper Jim Galloway had quite a problem today in selecting his pitcher. The possibilities, of course were limited to Wiltse and Messenger, the former with two days rest and the latter with three.

Both have done their best work during the season with lots of rest. Consequently, neither could be termed an ideal selection. Messenger is at his best every fifth day and Wiltse every fourth. As far as anybody knew, Jeemes had not made up his mind 20 minutes before the start.

Both Messenger and Wiltse participated in batting practice. Both flippers registered great games at Wichita Falls.

Wiltse would add more batting punch, but Messenger had the advantage of an extra days rest.

To a fellow on the outside looking in, it looked like a tossup. Maybe Jim did flip a nickel to decide which it would be before he sent Andy out to warm up.

One thing was certain on the pitching score. The ox already was in the ditch, and it seemed assured that Dallas wouldn't make many runs off any Wichita Falls pitcher.

It was a last trench stand for the Spudders and thoughts of tomorrow had no place in the picture.

It was simply a question of winning today, and Galloway could well afford to use every pitcher he has in stock and let tomorrow take care of itself.

The umpires reverted back to their order of the opener last Wednesday with George Barr behind the plate, Charley Donnelly at first and Harry Kane at third. So far, there has been little complaint on the officiating. All three arbiters have hustled and done their work in nice style.

Some think the umpires booted one in not allowing Gullic's catch of Glazner's fly yesterday, but it was a ticklish play. He held the ball momentarily, but he was running with his back to the umpires and most of the stands, so it was not easy to determine just what happened.

No player has been a more important factor in the series than the former Spudder, George Bischoff. He drove in the winning run the first day, started the winning run yesterday and drove in the Steers first tally today. Besides that, he has handled the defensive duties in great shape. Today he was thrown out twice on the bases on plays that looked foolish, but who knows but that the coaches were to blame?

Vols' Small Squad No Worry to Coach

KNOXVILLE, Sept. 22. (AP)—The University of Tennessee's football squad this year probably will be the smallest in the Southern conference.

Only 30 men reported for fall practice, but Coach Bob Neyland says he is not worried.

His winning teams of the last three years all were recruited from remarkably low numbers of men.

And then his famous Hack and Mack combination would help to make any coach happy. Buddy Hackman and Eugene McEver, who did big things at half positions last year, are back this year.

14-Year-Old Tank Star Sets New Mark in Japan

TOKYO, Sept. 22. (AP)—Young Japan continues to paddle its way to recognition in the world of swimming competition, building up a challenge to American aquatic supremacy.

Now it is a 14-year-old schoolboy from Shizukoa, Shozo Makino, making a bid for a place on the Olympic swimming team.

"WATCH CHARM" GUARD

SOUTH BEND, Ind., Sept. 22. (AP)—John Law, who captains Notre Dame's football team, is what Knute Rockne calls a "watch charm" guard. Law weighs only 163 pounds. He fought his way to the captaincy from an unstable place on the fourth frosh team.

England is enjoying a scarcity of mosquitos due to the long drought.

STRANGE CASE GOES UNSOLVED

Dismissal of Charge at Frederick Frees Suspect

Special to The Record News.

FREDERICK, Okla., Sept. 22.—With the dismissal of the case in district court against Charles G. Wrigley, charged with the murder of his father, James M. Wrigley, 10 miles east of Frederick April 26, 1926, the last chapter is written in the most baffling criminal case that has probably ever been tried in this county. Both Mrs. Wrigley and her son, Charles, were arrested, after officers had been called to the scene of the slaying and the body of the elder Wrigley was found lying in his bed, apparently having been killed while asleep.

An examination revealed he was killed with a discharge from a shotgun fired from a door between the living room where Mrs. Wrigley slept and where her husband lay. Only other occupant of the house at the time was Charles, in a room in the second story.

Herman S. Davis, then county attorney, thought the evidence against Mrs. Wrigley was the most convincing and she was tried first. The case was tried in the January term of district court in 1927 and after being out 60 hours the jury was discharged, as the members could not agree. In the second trial held in September, 1927, she was acquitted.

The other two sons, Brent and Chilton, then students of the A. & M. college, came home from Norman and helped their mother all they could; they were present at both trials. As soon as Mrs. Wrigley and son were able to furnish bond they left, as did the two sons.

Failing to procure any more evidence against Charles Wrigley, who still stood charged with first-degree murder, the case was dismissed Friday upon motion of P. V. Ruch, county attorney. Charles, now past 21, is attending college in Los Angeles. His mother lives at Los Angeles. Robert works for an airport corporation at Los Angeles. Brent is employed as a draftsman at Tulsa.

Mounts & Chamberlin were the Wrigleys' attorneys.

FAIR WINNERS AWARDED TRIP

16 to Go to Dallas Fete From Wellington

Special to The Record News.

WELLINGTON, Texas, Sept. 22.—Sixteen boys and girls of Collingsworth county have won trips to the state fair of Texas through their club work, according to Miss Veda Swafford and C. C. Stinson, county agents.

Girls who won trips to Dallas are Nola Capps, first year club girl; Truia Morrow, second year girl; Hazel McClure, fourth year; Florence Pepper, fourth year; Ines Aikens, and Sadie Maxwell, who won second in fourth year work respectively.

Collingsworth county has always sent six girls to the Dallas fair, four besides the scholarship girls, but because of a lack of funds, all girls competed for the trip in the third and fourth year work and as a result Sadie Maxwell and Ines Aikens have agreed to pay their own expenses to the state fair so the county will still have six girls to attend.

Ten boys won first prizes at the Collingsworth fair, and consequently their number are entitled to make the free trip. Several of that number won two first prizes, including prizes on both groups of crops and livestock projects.

The boys who are in line to make the trip are Edward Mitchell of Salt Fort, E. C. Puryer of Brown, Francis Leach of Cross Roads, Thomas Harwell of Fresno, Monty Mitchell of Salt Fork, Berteoff Gladney of Lillie, Kenneth Cass of Cross Roads, John H. Williams of Cross Roads, Jack Wells of Wellington and Theodore Wischkaemper of Salt Fork.

LOS ANGELES HAPPIEST CITY

While New York Is Most Unhappy

By SAM LOVE

NEW YORK, Sept. 22. (UP)—New York is the unhappiest, Los Angeles probably the happiest of American cities—and it isn't because of the climate, either, according to Prof. Walter B. Pitkin of Columbia university whose eleventh published scientific treatise, "The Psychology of Happiness" has but recently been completed.

To hear Professor Pitkin discuss it, it is a tossup whether New Yorkers are chronically unhappy because they are dumber than Los Angelians, or whether Los Angelians are happier because they are dumber than New Yorkers.

Professor Pitkin himself leans heavily towards the residents of Los Angeles as being preferable.

"New York is a peculiar town. There is too great a gap between the New Yorker's cravings and the probability of fulfilling them. Everybody in New York is out to improve himself. That's why they come here, from the immigrant to the corn-fed boy from the West. They want to improve themselves as quickly as possible. That's why they are unhappy."

A New Yorker, it appeared, works and schemes his shirt off to get something he wants. And once he clutches it, he immediately wants something else. Thus he is not happy even when he gets it.

Professor Pitkin defines happiness—and what a job that was—in one of his books as follows:

"Happiness is the emotional tone accompanying the self realization of a personality. And just as each personality develops its own wish pattern, so does it develop its own emotional tone."

That's where New Yorkers fall down and where Los Angeles residents struggle to their feet. Out in Los Angeles, said Professor Pitkin, you will find any number of static emotional tones.

"Climate has a lot to do with people's happiness," said Professor Pitkin, "but New Yorkers have an ideal climate to be happy in."

Professor Pitkin hazarded that New York's was a better happiness climate than California's. But added that New Yorkers booted their pleasantly variable climate while Californians wrung their "too hot" atmospheric conditions dry of every possible joy.

"But it is true that California, as claimed, is the seat of happiness," he said. "I should say that Los Angeles is the exact opposite of New York. It is the precise reverse of the whole human pattern. The people out there don't require much to make them happy, and the little they require they can get quite readily. Hence they're happy."

WICHITA MAN WANTS OTHERS TO SHARE THE BENEFITS

Declares He Is Now on the Road to Perfect Health. "I Sure Am Glad That I Found Orgatone When I Did," Says Bodin.

"At last I am on the road to perfect health, again, after I had suffered a good many years and tried everything I could hear of to get relief from my troubles.

"I got to the place where I was very nervous and could not sleep at night and gas would form in my stomach that would cause me trouble because it would get up around my chest and depress my heart. No matter what I tried in the way of medicine nothing helped me a bit; it seemed as if there was no relief for me.

"When a man has been in the shape I have, it sure seems wonderful to be able to eat anything he wants and have no trouble from it, but that's just what I can do since Orgatone has relieved my suffering. I begun to pick up in a hurry after I started taking it and have been getting better ever since. I am practically a well man now and have not only gained several pounds in weight but am feeling stronger and better every day I live.

"I'm sure glad I got hold of Orgatone when I did and there's nothing I could say for it that would be too much. I hope my case will be the cause of others who have the same trouble finding the same relief I did by taking Orgatone."

The above statement, signed and witnessed, was made on Jan. 9, 1929 by Henry Bodin, one of the best known head waiters in this entire section of Texas and who has held that official capacity in Wichita Falls for the past eight years at the Veros Cafe, 811 Indiana avenue, where he is personally known to hundreds of patrons of this popular restaurant.

HOBBS TRIAL OPENS MONDAY

Special Venire of 100 Called In Assault Case

Trial of Art Hobbs, indicted on criminal assault charges by the July grand jury, will be called in the 89th district court Monday morning. A special venire of 100 men has been summoned for duty and both the state and the defense counsel have announced that they will be ready to go to trial at once. Almost half a hundred witnesses have been subpoenaed by both sides and the taking of testimony is expected to fill at least three days of the week, George Anderson, assistant district attorney, said Sunday.

The complaint against Hobbs was brought by a 17-year-old Wichita Falls girl. The indictment charges that the offense was committed near the city on July 23.

The state will announce ready for the second trial of Hugh D. Butler, charged with burglary in connection with the loss of $700 from the Silver store here last June as soon as the Hobbs trial is completed, Mr. Anderson said. Butler was acquitted two weeks ago of a robbery charge growing out of the same affair.

Judge Allan D. Montgomery will preside in the 89th district court during the week, Judge P. A. Martin having arranged an exchange of benches for the trial of civil suits in Graham in which Judge Montgomery has announced himself disqualified.

Today { At the Theaters }

By W. L. UNDERWOOD

MAJESTIC: "The Greene Murder Case." William Powell and Eugene Pallette driving a fiend from the musty house. Vitaphone vaudeville act. Paramount news.

STRAND: "Fashions in Love," with Adolphe Menjou. Comedy. Vitaphone vaudeville. Movietone news.

OLYMPIC: "Stolen Kisses," with May McAvoy. Comedy. Pathe news. Lillian Murry company on stage.

GEM: "Court Martial," with Jack Holt. Chapter Eight of "The Tiger's Shadow." Comedy.

Thoughts gleaned from the Movietone News at the Strand: It appears quite conclusive that the Graf Zeppelin did mark a path round the world in 21 days; a path densely thicketed on either side by sound-news reel photogarphers. The baseball park at Tokyo had all the features of a holiday game at Spudder park except the resounding musical call "Goo-bers!" Maybe they can't yodel in Japanese. But they do use the lively ball. When company drops in unexpectedly on folks in Rome for a day in the city, they may be taken up to St. Marks at noon to see the thousands of pigeons fed by crowds which gather daily for the spectacle.

Another picture with colored personnel before the sound-recording camera, and this one not built on Birmingham darktown characters. Milton and Lyles they're called, doing a real "hoe-down" such as we waited for in the old minstrel. This skit is taken from "Shuffle Along" which has taken most of New York in tow during the past two years. In the helter-skelter buck and wing dancing, and the wild, syncopated, noisome quartet renditions of typical present day jazz melodies, the darkies recognize their element and establish a sovereignty which should not be envied.

Adolphe Menjou need not have left America if the talkies are to be continued. On the basis of his performance in "Fashions in Love," now showing at the Strand, Adolphe doubtless would have found entertainment factories in which they gladly would have given him a number on the time clock. If we were to be highly technical, of course, it might be observed that the little song which Mr. Menjou lightly intoned for Delphine doesn't seem to be just the type which might spring in an inspired moment from the heart of a great classic pianist. It aroused a vague suspicion, even before the director intended us to feel it, that maybe Adolphe wasn't so entirely handcuffed in the matter of love.

And now comes Welford Beaton of Hollywood, in the Saturday Evening Post, with the statement that prophecies in that and other publications recently consigning silent pictures to an early death have compelled him to do a little prophesying on his own. There is something about the manner in which he handles his tools that conveys strongly the idea that Mr. Beaton is quite familiar with patient on the table. The following is one of his most poignant observations:

"The silent screen is not dead. Talking pictures never had the remotest chance of supplanting the silent variety. Within a year the studio will have swung back to their silent programs, with here and there a talkie mixed in to supply the exceedingly small market that will be available to it."

Anent the prevalence in Hollywood of the idea that the public will be made to like talkies because they won't be supplied anything else, the critique remarks: "The public is no more apt to patronize pictures it does not like than it is to wear shoes that it does not like." Summing up his case, Mr. Beaton says: "Talking doesn't belong. It it an affront to the fundamentals of screen art. Nothing fundamentally unsound can continue permanently to exist in something that is fundamentally sound."

The Reader's Opinion

The columns of The Record News are open to its readers for the discussion of questions of current interest or import. Letters should be not more than 300 words in length, preferably shorter, and should be signed with the name and address of the writer. Initials or pen-name, will be substituted upon request. Letters must be free of personal abuse or libel, and the editor reserves the right to reject parts or all of letters.

Editor, The Record News:

There are not any leaders or generals of either side of the war between the states now living. But a lot of non-commissioned officers and privates of the Yankee army, most of them now living never were in battle or smelled powder as it is a known fact that many men were conscripted near the close of the war in Northern states that never had uniforms or guns issued to them because the war closed and I think that they are the ones who made the most objection to the joint reunion.

Thomas J. Smith of Nebraska says that he would not march under any other flag but the Stars and Stripes. We would not ask him to do so for a man who will say such is not fit to march under any flag.

Frank O. Cole of New Jersey says that when we will fold up our flags and put them in museums and admit that we were wrong in 1861 he says what I do not believe an honest man would say. We do not intend to do anything of the kind and consequently there will not be any reunion.

To judge by such remarks as these shows that animosities yet exist in the North. There is not existing any such feeling among the soldiers of the South. We meet together once a year at reunions but never do you hear one word against the Northern soldiers. I know this to be true for I have attended 39 reunions of the U. C. V.

Two wars since 1865 have occurred and the boys of the North and boys of the South have answered the call to arms and have eaten and slept together in the same camps. This should have showed to such Yankees as were at the G. A. R. encampment at Portland, Maine, that good feeling should exist all over the United States of America.

The reunion had the endorsement of the best men in the country, such men as the president and the governors of 31 states and our Commander-in-Chief R. A. Sneed. I cannot see why such pettifoggers as common privates of the Yankee army should go against the voice of such men.

We are by rights one people and the North needs the South and the South needs the North. There is no more Mason and Dixon line but one God is over all.

In our city here we have several Confederates and also several Federals. We are at peace with each other and we get together as citizens of a common country and love each other. And we bear no animosities.

DEEP DRILLING PLAN APPROVED

Business Leaders Favor Oil Exploration

Further endorsement of an extensive campaign of drilling for deep oil in the Wichita Falls area as a community enterprise, with the opening of such activity being predicted on the definite guarantee of sufficient funds to complete it, was given Saturday by different local business men in statements to a representative of The Record News.

That this city "is sleeping on its rights" if it does not prosecute an early and thorough development of deep oil strata in this territory was the opinion expressed by J. T. Harrell, president of the City National bank. A strongly organized concern composed of local oil men, with headquarters in this city, and devoted to the more intensive cultivating of this community's oil resources was declared by Mr. Harrell to be one of Wichita Falls' greatest needs. His statement follows:

"There is no question but that deep deposits of oil constitute one of Wichita Falls' brightest prospects for continued and improved prosperity. I believe we are sleeping on our rights if we do not go after it. The conversation among practically all oil men reveals that they are in agreement on the theory that deep oil-bearing strata underlie the fields in this district. We probably should have begun development of those levels some time ago.

"Under present conditions, it is apparent that local citizens must assume the responsibility for establishing at least the first wells in the lower strata; but it is equally apparent that such a program, well organized, will soon stimulate drilling activity on the part of interests which now are content to leave such levels untouched."

T. B. Noble declared that there is much foundation now for the motto, "The City That Faith Built," as at any time in its history, and that this foundation consists not only of assured deep oil resources, but of poultry and dairy industries which will in time be equal to that of oil in importance. Mr. Noble said:

"The proposal calling for at least 10 deep wells in this section is a splendid one—one we could have afforded to adopt before this time. One successful deep well would bring about an extensive renewal of drilling all around us. This community can realize its due returns from deep oil levels only through the aggressive leadership of local citizens.

"The citizenship of Wichita Falls is as much justified now as ever in having faith in this city. True, there has been much criticism in the last three years of the irrigation board, and of the city water supply. But close investigation will show that the board made perhaps as few mistakes as others would have made, and that we have managed to live in some measure of comfort with the only water supply available. We ought to provide for its softening as quickly as possible, but in the meantime we have industrial possibilities to which we may devote ourselves enthusiastically.

"We have the best poultry raising conditions in this part of the country, and equally good opportunities in dairying. These resources will develop more slowly, but just as surely, as the development of deep oil."

John Hirshi, banker and land owner, expressed confidence in the existence of deep oil in paying quantities, but declared that a campaign for its development can hope to be successful only if there is abundant funds behind it to guarantee not only the beginning of test wells, but their completion. He also urged that the greatest care should be exercised in selecting the location for such tests, and in their drilling.

"Because of the cost of drilling to deep levels," Mr. Hirshi said, "the project is ordinarily a 'big company' proposition. With existing conditions in the oil market, such concerns probably would not undertake deep development here for some time. I do think they would 'dip in' freely enough if deep tests were started with sufficient backing to guarantee that the wells will be finished.

"I think every possible help should be given by local citizens to a plan which provides for development of whatever paying sands we have, and which guarantees maximum economy and care in sinking such tests.

"All indications point to the existence of deep oil in this section. The justification of this community's investment of sufficient funds to drill a number of wells to 5,000 feet or deeper would be found in its occasioning a general development by the major companies."

NEW MISSION

Historic Bell Replaced In Chapel Dedicated Sunday

Special to The Record News.

LAWTON, Okla., Sept. 22.—Dedication services for the new Deyo Memorial chapel, southwest of Lawton, were held Sunday. The principal speaker of the day was Pres. B. D. Weeks of the Bacone Indian college. Services were held in the morning, afternoon and evening.

The old historic bell, which bears the inscription "Jesus Says Come" was rung every hour from 7 a. m. to 7 p. m. White friends presented the bell to the Indians more than a score of years ago for the Mission, but it was stolen last summer and later recovered from a junk dealer. It was given a special re-dedication Sunday.

David Poafpybitty, the first Comanche to be converted to the Christian religion led the sunrise prayer service at 7 a. m. Much ceremony by the Indians marked the placing of the memorial slab. Timbo, first Indian member of the old Deyo Mission, led the ceremony.
