MAINLY ABOUT PEOPLE

By H. N. F.

Colonel Luke F. Wilson and H. L. Bull are in the city. There is nothing spectacular about this announcement; they are here most of the time. Colonel and Mr. Bull divide their time between Missouri and Texas but Texas gets easily eighty per cent of it. They came in yesterday from Archer county to get the latest strike news as they plan to leave for Kansas City on October 17. Down on the ranch there is a Ford car that has had hard usage and a two seated buggy of the vintage of 1877. These vehicles were offered to the colonel and his business associate if the strike caught them in Texas. Colonel Wilson figured that it would take seven days to make the trip if he used the Ford and seventeen if he conscripted the buggy so he planned to leave for Kansas City a day or two in advance of the date set for the general strike of the railway employes of America. He had a busy week in Archer City. He "quieted the title" to sixteen hundred lots in the town once known as Geraldine. It was necessary to give notice of publication four consecutive weeks in a newspaper. Captain Charles Martin is the publisher of the Archer City News and the captain was awarded the job of printing the citation. It was about the longest legal notice ever printed in Texas but the colonel paid the bill cheerfully and now Captain Martin is a plutocrat—not a bloated plutocrat of the type of Deacon John D. Rockefeller or Colonel A. E. Humphreys, but a miniature plutocrat. They are often found among the sons of the fourth estate. Geraldine had five hundred inhabitants at one time; now it is a memory. Strong for modern highways is the colonel and his friend H. H. Bull. Having visited the Baylor county fair, Colonel Wilson got a glimpse of the concrete culvert and he has a very exalted opinion of the citizens of Baylor county responsible for the concrete culvert. "We need them in Archer county," he said, "and we need modern highways. Those we have are not appealing. Some day engineers who are scientists will superintend the construction of roads and not laymen who are novices. Then we will get a dollar's worth of material or labor or road bed for every hundred cents the property owner pays into the treasury for road purposes." But Geraldine has gone where the woodbine twineth; the sixteen hundred titles to lots have been quieted; the colonel owns the land and Captain Charles Martin, a militaristic editor, has pocketed the swag for the legal printing which was necessary to keep the record and the abstract straight. Flowers for the living, except the Hoosier chap who planned the colony and then permitted it to blow up.

"Some handsome buildings are planned for the Methodist College at Clarendon during the next year as the Northwest Methodist conference voted eight thousand dollars to be used for building purposes," writes the Hon. Choctow Garner in his Chillicothe Valley News. "Clarendon College is one of the leading junior colleges in the south, as its work is recognized by the leading senior schools of the country. Dr. George S. Slover was returned as president of the college, and Rev. J. T. Griswold of Lubbock has been sent there as pastor of the Methodist church at that place." Hon. Choctow Garner is a Bible interpreter of high repute and when he isn't editing he is preaching. This makes him a valuable citizen for any community.

Buscom M. Timmons says there are 533 illiterates in Wichita Falls, including 58 native whites, 308 foreign born white and 104 negroes. Here is how the ten cities in Texas of more than 25,000 population ranks in percentage of illiteracy: Wichita Falls, 1.6; Dallas, 3.2; Fort Worth, 2.9; Waco, 4.3; Galveston, 5.3; Houston, 5.4; Austin, 5.7; El Paso, 8.5; Beaumont, 8.7, and San Antonio, 11.4. Wichita Falls may be short on quantity but it is long when it comes to quality. Here illiteracy has been sandbagged to a minimum.

Editor John Grundy of the Byers Herald was one of the progressives defeated in the Clay county $2,000,000 road bond issue election but he may be happy yet. This is what he says in the current number of the Herald: "In a conversation with the foreman of the surveying party now at Byers it was learned that the prospects for an extension of the railroad across to Waurika is now very promising. The present survey is following practically the same route as all the other surveys; that is almost a direct line to Red River and Waurika. There is no question as to the fact that this line will be finally built and that it will be a

OFFICIALS WILL PROBE HIGHWAY WORK MONDAY

Road matters of the county are to have another airing at the regular meeting of the commissioners' court Monday morning.

Announcement to that effect was made Saturday morning following the publication of a statement obtained by The Record News from T. B. Noble, president of the Chamber of Commerce, that in his opinion the concrete road completed several months ago between this city and Iowa Park was already showing signs of rapid deterioation.

Mr. Noble's statement was made after an inspection Friday in which he was accompanied by I. H. Roberts, widely known local contractors and other local residents. They are said to have agreed with the opinion expressed by Mr. Noble regarding the road.

Mr. Noble told county officials Saturday that he would appear before the commissioners' court Monday to protest allowing the construction work to continue until a better grade of pavement was assured. It is understood that other residents will attend the meeting to voice their protests. State and federal engineers are expected to be in attendance.

Call on Noble

Several county officials called on Mr. Noble Saturday morning, after the publication of his statement by The Record News. Among the number was Commissioner J. P. Jackson of this precinct, who in the past has questioned the character of the construction on a number of occasions, and who on occasions when the road matters have been before the commissioners' court has criticized the work of J. M. Isbell, county highway engineer.

Although the attitude of all the county officials concerned could not be obtained Saturday, the opinion expressed by those at the courthouse was to the effect that the criticism was uncalled for and that the grade of construction in the paved roads was satisfactory. Others brought out the fact the work had never been criticised by the numerous state and federal engineers who have inspected the completed pavement.

The county, they say, has always received its promised state and federal aid and this would not have been the case unless their engineers had been satisfied that the pavement came up to the requirements established by the state and federal highway departments.

Judge Satisfied

"I do not profess to be an expert on concrete roads," declared Judge J. P. Jones of the county court, "as I have little more technical knowledge along that line than the average citizen, but I have taken pains from time to time to obtain the opinion of engineers in whom I have confidence and I have yet to find one who did not praise the grade of work we are receiving from Potts and Prentice."

Judge Jones said that a federal engineer who had charge of the supervision for four states including Texas recently told him following an inspection that Wichita county was getting the best grade of concrete road constructed in the entire four states.

"Both the lake and Iowa Park roads were built according to the specifications furnished by the state highway department, which are the standard for the entire state," declared W. H. Prentice of the firm of Potts and Prentice which have charge of the contract for the construction of the county concrete road work.

"Our work is also done under the supervision of the county engineer's department which from the beginning has had inspectors at the mixers to see that the concrete was mixed and laid down according to the requirements of the state highway department.

"In addition from time to time the roads have been inspected by state and federal engineers and they have on all occasions approved the grade of work which are being done for the county.

"Although we are doing the work as requested by the county, state, and federal officials and have no direct responsibility other than doing the work as we are instructed, still I can say aside from that I am personally satisfied that the county is getting substantial concrete paving."

INDEPENDENT OIL FOR NAVY IS PROPOSED

Oklahoma Senator Preparing Bill Which He Declares Would Serve to Stabilize Oil Prices.

By B. N. TIMMONS.
Special to the Record News.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 22.—An oil pipe line from the rich Oklahoma oil fields to a point on the Texas Gulf Coast, either Galveston or Houston, Port Arthur or Beaumont, is under contemplation, it became known here today. Senator John W. Harreld of Oklahoma, member of the Indian Affairs committee and expected soon to be its chairman, is preparing the bill and has the sanction of the Interior department.

Senator Harreld today declined to discuss the matter in detail, but admitted that the bill has been drawn and will be introduced and pushed if the independent oil men desire.

It would tap all the oil fields located on Indian lands, but would start from the Osage fields. Harreld said that his purpose is to provide an adequate supply of oil for the navy at all times, and to stabilize the oil industry by giving it a storage place near a seaport. He believes that the city to which the lines run will become the fueling place of the Atlantic fleet.

"If there had been a storage place outside of the fields, the great drop in oil prices never would have come," Harreld said today. "If the pipe line is authorized it will, of course, mean that a great tank farm will have to be constructed at the gulf port chosen. When business is slack it can be stored there. Operators dare not store oil in the fields in slack times."

Harreld, who is regarded as the spokesman of the independent oil men in the senate, recently charged that pipe lines of the Standard oil and its subsidiaries refused to take oil during the recent depression for the purpose of beating down prices. He is known to be of the opinion that the Federal government will be remiss in its obligations to its Indian wards unless it provides them with insurance against a similar contingency in the future. He also holds it is important as a matter of national defense that such a line be provided to care for the navies need.

Harreld denies that the plan is either populistic or socialistic. He has made inquiry into its costs and feels sure that it would pay. It also became known today that Harreld has been in conference with Secretary of the Navy Denby in an effort to have the navy test modified.

Requirements for the American navy are higher than that of any other navy, and the Standard Oil Company is the only American company that now has the facilities to meet it. Harreld feels sure he can get the modifications so that independents may compete for these government contracts.

SAN ANTONIO, Oct. 22.—The six hundred striking trainmen on the International & Great Northern railroad of Texas, who went out at noon today are being replaced by experienced men, according to an announcement tonight at the office of Superintendent J. R. Jones. J. M. Landis, chief clerk to the superintendent, said the road is able to get all the experienced men it wanted and at the same time it was announced advertisements had been ordered inserted in Sunday's newspapers of San Antonio calling for experienced switchmen and brakemen.

At 7 o'clock tonight passenger train No. 7 pulled out of the terminal carrying two guards armed with pump guns. The train, in charge of Conductor E. M. Lewis, was without a brakeman. It was announced early in the day at the office of Superintendent Jones that the porter would do the work of the brakeman on all trains.

Strike at Noon.

The strike of the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen started when the whistle blew at noon today and the sixteen switchmen and yardmen then on duty left the yards. There are a total of about 68 switchmen and yardmen employed in the local yards, the men working in shifts and about 147 brakemen.

F. H. Frame, general chairman of the I. & G. N. trainmen, said the strike would be 100 per cent tomorrow morning by which time the last brakeman starting on a run before noon today will have reached a terminal.

Armed guards with shotguns were stationed about the International & Great Northern depot and about the yards today in charge of J. L. King, special agent of the company, and it was said they were there not as a protection against the striking trainmen, but against any lawless element that might take advantage of the situation.

Everything was perfectly quiet and orderly at the noon hour at the depot and yards of the International & Great Northern where 215 men were employed. Superintendent Jones went out into the yards at the noon hour and assisted the work of making up trains and doing necessary switching, he having had many years of experience in the yards. The yardmaster and trainmaster did the same. By the middle of the afternoon, however, Mr. Jones was in his office.

Officials at the division declined to state what per cent of a full force was on duty and what per cent of service could be given. It was said however, that by tomorrow figures could probably be given out on that point.

Estimate 1,000 Guards.

It was estimated there are 1,000 armed guards on the line.

In spite of press dispatches from Laredo and other points that freight schedules were being cancelled for the present and only passenger trains would be moved, officials at the superintendent's office in San Antonio said no trains had been or would be cancelled at the city freight office patrons were told the road was receiving freight.

Crews leaving shortly before noon today will have reached a terminal by tomorrow morning and being off duty will not be entitled to return by passes. Automobiles will be sent for them, it being arranged tonight by

FORT WORTH GAINS AS LIVE STOCK CENTER

Definite Upward Trend in Southwestern Cattle Industry Indicated by Government Report.

Special to the Record News.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 22.—Cattle receipts at the Fort Worth market in September amounted to 120,804 head as compared with 104,151 head in September of last year, the Department of Agriculture today announced. Cattle slaughtered in the Fort Worth packing houses amounted to 77,246 head in September just passed, as compared with 63,173 head in September of last year.

This increase in receipts and slaughter was gratifying to department officials who believe that a definite upward trend may have started in the southwestern cattle industry. For the 67 principal stock markets of the country receipts in September were 392,919 less than for the same month last year, and slaughter was 189,699 head less than for the same month last year.

Chicago had a falling off of 53,000 head, Denver 8,000; East St. Louis 36,000; Kansas City, 23,000; Milwaukee, 2,000; Oklahoma City, 8,000; San Antonio, 8,000; and Indianapolis, 14,000 in receipts.

Hogs slaughtered at Fort Worth in September were 17,658, a falling off from September, 1920, when 25,704 were butchered. For the nation at large, there was an increase of 245,582 in hogs slaughtered in September of this year, as compared with September of last year. Some of the principal markets to gain were Baltimore, Chicago, Cincinnati, Cleveland, Indianapolis, Milwaukee, New York, Omaha, Pittsburgh, St. Paul and Sioux City.

Some of the ones showing losses were Detroit, East St. Louis, Fort Worth, Jersey City, Oklahoma City and St. Joseph.

LABOR BOARD WILL ALLOW OPEN SHOP ON TREMONT & GULF

By Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Oct. 22.—The United States railway labor board announced tonight that it had received word that the employes on the Tremont & Gulf Railroad Company, a 67 mile line in Louisiana, had accepted the open shop and that consequently, as there was no dispute, the board would relinquish the jurisdiction it yesterday announced it had assumed over the road.

HALF NATION'S WORKERS WILL STAY ON JOB

Decision Made Despite Fact That Men Involved Voted Overwhelmingly Not to Accept Wage Cut.

Announcement Considered Most Serious Anti-Strike Blow Yet Given Big Five Unions.

By Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Oct. 22.—Officials of unions with more than half of the rail employes of the nation in their membership tonight announced that their men will not be authorized to join the "big five" organizations in the strike called for October 30 in protest of wage cuts.

Announcements that they would not join in a walkout came from eight of the eleven "standard" rail unions, which for a week had been withholding their final strike decisions, although in most of them, the members had voted overwhelmingly to quit work rather than accept a recent 12 1-2 per cent wage reduction authorized by the United States railroad labor board. Only one of these eleven groups now is determined to stand by the "big five" it was announced, but two others have not yet taken final action.

Following announcement by the heads of the six shop crafts organizations controlling 600,000 men that they would not sanction a walkout, the leaders of the 370,000 maintenance of way employes and of the 25,000 stationary firemen at an executive meeting voted to withdraw their authorization of a walkout, leaving only the 75,000 railroad telegraphers positively with the "big five." Chieftains of the 350,000 clerks will make their decision tomorrow and the signalmen, 35,000 strong, also are yet to act.

Blow to "Big Five."

The action of these organizations was said by labor leaders to be the most serious anti-strike blow yet given the "big five" unions, which have called a strike. It came with bomb-like intensity at a time when it had been believed that eleven groups would follow in with the "big four" brotherhoods and the switchmen, although several of the leaders were counseling delay.

The maintenance of way union and the stationary firemen's organization took action following the announcement by the shop crafts. Timothy Healy, president of the stationary

KNOCKOUT FOR ALKALI MORE OF VERNON

He Asked for Light and the Net Earnings of an Irrigated Farm Are Spread Before Him.

By H. N. F.

Hon. Alkalinity R. E. More of Vernon is a circular writer and circular distributor. As the agent of a gentleman holding 600,000 acres of land under one fence he has taken it upon himself to show the property waers and tax payers of the proposed irrigation district that the flood waters of the big Wichita river are fit only for the purpose of flushing sewers.

The writer takes it upon himself to assure the Hon. Alkalinity More that he does not know what he is talking about and that "More on Water" is a valueless as well as a misleading publication.

Irrigation has been tested and the waters of Lake Wichita (which is the flood water from the great shed which feeds the Big Wichita river,) has been subjected to the acid test and the results have not only been gratifying but wealth making for those who made the test.

Object lessons should be convincing lessons and the Record News is going to convince the Hon. Alkalinity More that he did not know what he was talking about when he circularized the people of this territory.

A Model Farm.

J. B. Nicholson owns fourteen acres of land just beyond the eastern boundary line of Wichita Falls. J. M. Nicholson, his son, works it on shares, or on a fifty-fifty basis.

It it unnecessary to go to the Chicago stockyards for an acid test. It is not necessary to go to a dweller on the banks of the Trinity river, between the cities of Fort Worth and Dallas, for an acid test.

Fort Worth dumps its sewage into the Trinity and seweage is said to poison even water exposed to the sunlight or the More circular light.

J. M. Nicholson has an irrigated farm. That is, he irrigates when there isn't a scarcity of water furnished him by those in charge of the irrigation ditches and plant.

This has been a droughty year and water has been scarce and yet J. M. Nicholson has made a showing that should make the Hon. Alkalinity More as dumb as an oyster and as speechless as a clam when it comes to the discussion of water for irrigation purposes in all the years to come.

His Peach Crop.

Mr. Nicholson has a peach orchard of six acres. There are 500 young trees, all producing trees. From this orchard he gathered 1,000 bushels of peaches and sold the same at average price of $1.50 per bushel. His Albertas, sold at wholesale turned into his treasury $1,500.

He planted two acres of cantaloupes and the cantaloupes netted him $500. After the cantaloupes had been gathed he planted the two acres to onions and the onions netted him $200.

He planted an acre of stringless beans and sold the beans at wholesale for $125. For a second crop he planted black eyed peas and the black eyed peas netted him $90.

He planted an acre to spinach and sold the spinach for $125 and as a second crop he planted tomatoes and to date he has sold $300 worth of tomatoes and the entire crops hasn't been gathered.

He planted an acre to mustard and netted $100 and as a second crop on the same acre he planted peppers and received $130 for his second crop.

Gathering in the Coin.

He planted one and one-quarter acres to potatoes and this patch produced 300 bushels which he sold for $360 and this mind you represents turnips and gathered and sold 200

Surprising all except those directly connected with the operations, the North American Oil and Refining Company's No. 1 B. F. Scott, in the Ruidoso survey, a short distance southwest of the town of South Bend, Young county, started flowing Saturday, after being partially cleaned out from a 90 quart shot given the sand at 4040 feet on Friday, and Saturday evening was flowing at the rate of 300 barrels of oil and making from five to eight million feet of gas.

The "come back" of the North American's old wildcat, after two years drilling, with the usual vicissitudes, and some unusual, has provided the whole of South Young county with a sensation.

For several reasons the new well is of exceptional interest.

The oil tests 42 gravity, according to information received in Wichita Falls Saturday night from official sources, and it is coming from a true oil sand.

Less than 25 feet of sand was drilled, it was reported, when it was decided to take no chances, and to shoot and complete at this depth. Saurday night's flow stands good chances of being further increased, according to reports, showing the gas pressure decreasing, and the oil flow improving.

The new well is an offset to the North American's original Young county test the Goode No. 1, which was abandoned right around 4020 feet, or just on top of the oil sand, as the new well proves.

In addition to giving the South Bend pool it's seventh producing sand, the new Scott well goes a long way to proving up the original contention of C. F. Colcord, the president of the North American company, and C. N. Gould, the geologist, who with Mr. Colcord went over the entire South Bend field several years before any development was started. The survey showed the leases surrounding the Goode and Scott wells as the center of the deep producing sand, and it has been the end to which the North American has worked throughout the time it has been developing it's leases in the South Bend district.

Another valuable item in connection with the new strike is the fact that it is a real oil sand. All of Young county's production, except the deep wells of the Texas company has been from true sand, thus distinguishing this field from the lime producing areas to the south.

None of the tests on the edge of the Clear Fork pool of South Bend, or the intervening territory between South Bend proper and the new Bunger district, have been drilled to this great depth. Consequently the new discovery holds promise to the operators who have had dry holes in the shallower sands.

Panhandle Completes Well

The Panhandle Refinery company has completed it's No. 16 McCluskey, the best completion of the week in the Clear Fork pool this week, according to Saturday reports. The well is reported flowing 300 barrels, from the 2100 foot sand.

The Russell Petroleum company's No. 1 Grimshaw got the 1900 foot Bunger sand on Saturday, it is reported. The company's No. 1, B. Owens is reported still making around 300 barrels.

FOURTH PRODUCER IN 1600 FT. SAND COMPLETE

With an initial production around 200 barrels, the No. 28 Burnett on the Gladiolus lease has been completed. This well is in the 1600 foot sand.

The No. 29 same lease, was reported Saturday as drilling around 1500 feet.

The No. 28 is the fourth producer reported from the South Electra shallow field in the new 1600 foot sand opened up a few weeks ago by the Planet Petroleum company. The discovery company has three producers in the new sand, and is reported about ready to complete its fourth.

RAILROAD TELEGRAPHERS PREPARE TO JOIN STRIKE

By Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Oct. 22.—The United States railroad labor board at 2 p. m. was without official advices that the trainmen on the International and Great Northern railroad of Texas had quit their places.

The board, however, went into session on receipt of newspaper reports to discuss what action shall be taken for the violation of yesterday's order to the unions to preserve the status quo.

Just as the board went into session word came from the hotel where the Order of Railway Telegraphers is in session that the union has decided to join the brotherhoods and quit work if the strike becomes effective.

"The grand officers and general committee of the Order of Railroad Telegraphers have decided that the order will participate in the strike with other railroad employes for the purpose of compelling a restoration of the wage decreases made effective on the railroads of the United States, July 1, 1921.

"Our general chairmen have concluded their deliberations and are returning to their respective headquarters to complete their preparations for making the strike effective on the same railroads and dates named in the strike order of the other transportation organizations."

ADMINISTRATION NOT TO USE WAR TIME POWERS

By Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 22.—Decision against the present use of any of the war-time powers still available to the government, was reached by the administration late yesterday. The attitude of the president, it was learned, was that which he had expressed in connection with the strike repeatedly since the crisis first arose—that the labor board was the agency constituted by law to handle the affair, and moreover, the country being now at "peace" the use of war emergency powers would be impolitic.

ANNOUNCE I. & G. N. FREIGHT SERVICE WITHIN 48 HOURS

By Associated Press.

HOUSTON, Oct. 21.—Within 48 hours freight service will be resumed over the lines of the International & Great Northern railway.

This was the announcement today of E. G. Goforth, general manager of the road, following the walkout at noon of approximately 600 I. & G. N. union brakemen and switchers, members of the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen. Of these, Mr. Goforth said, 104 struck in Houston and 23 at Sellers. Union leaders said upwards of 170 men had obeyed the strike order in Houston alone. Both sides declared the trainmen went out to the man, making the walkout 100 per cent effective.

Passenger service over the I. & G. N. will be maintained despite the strike, General Manager Goforth declared, adding that he expected these trains to keep up their schedules.

Small element of the dramatic atout. The first move in what has been described as a nationwide progressive strike was made with clocklike despatch and minus disturbance. As the hands of their watches pointed to the noon hour, the union trainmen quietly gathered personal effects and made their way off the company's property. As they departed armed guards took station, armed with shotguns and pistols and commanded by an expolice of Houston, Captain Searcy Maker. Twenty special officers now walk beats at strategic points along the company's right of way. In addition to these Superintendent of Police Murphy has assigned eight officers to strike duty.

Freight Embargo

During the afternoon L. A. Gregory, assistant general manager of the road, clamped on a rigid freight embargo. The order went out to all agents of the line and to connecting roads, designed, it was explained, to give shippers opportunity to have their freight diverted via other lines.

While General Manager Goforth earlier in the day had denied that his company intended to employ strikebreakers, his later statement said that a large number of "applications from experienced men all over the country were on file."

"From these," Mr. Goforth declared, "we expect rapidly to get together a normal force. As fast as officials of the road can acquaint these men with the different yards, terminals and company property, operation of trains will be begun."

Anxiety over activities at the port of Houston was betrayed today by Mayor Holcomb and members of the city council. A special meeting of the council was held at 2:30 o'clock Saturday afternoon, it being called to receive any information officials of the I. & G. N. cared to place before it, relative to operation of the city's belt line. This stretch of rack, which serves he municipal wharves at the turning basin, is operated under contract by the I. & G. N. Failing to receive any word as to the possible effect of the strike on this line, the mayor and Commissioners Anderson and Waugh, together with Business Manager C. E. Belk, motored to the Congress avenue and Dowling street yards. There they were assured by General Manager Goforth that his company would place one switching engine and crew on the municipal road by Monday.

Would Protect Port

"With other ports of the country open," Mayor Holcombe explained, "we are going to do our best to keep Port Houston from being closed during the strike."

SHOPS CRAFT MEMBERS VOTE TO REMAIN AT WORK

By Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Oct. 22.—One fourth of the railroad workers of America, the 600,000 members of the federated shop crafts, today went on record against a strike and voted to remain at work pending decision by the United States railroad labor board in the rules and working conditions case.

The shop crafts were first of all the unions to vote on a strike, 435,000 votes being cast for a walkout with 40,000 opposed to a strike. After the vote was canvassed President Jewell announced they would wait to see what action the board took on the rules case.

By their decision they dealt the most serious blow yet recorded against the big four brotherhoods and the switchmen's union which have ordered a walkout October 30. The shop crafts, known as the railway employes department of the American federation of labor, are said to control more railroad workers than any individual union. Their action also is declared to bind the American federation of labor against any active support of a railroad walkout.

The six unions involved are the Brotherhood of Railway Carmen of America; the International Brotherhood of Blacksmiths, Drop Forgers and Helpers; the Amalgamated Sheet Metal Workers International Alliance; the International Brohterhood of Boilermakers, Iron Shipbuilders and Helpers of America.

HOUSTON, Oct. 22.—Manning of freight and passenger trains by non-union trainmen will start Monday morning, E. G. Goforth, general manager of the International & Great Northern Railway, stated Saturday night. More than 300 applications for jobs already have been received, Mr. Goforth, added, among which are volunteers among business men and employes of firms of Fort Worth, San Antonio, Wichita Falls, Houston and Little Rock, Ark.

"The service cannot be started full biast, however," Mr. Goforth added, "for these applicants are unfamiliar with the physical properties of the roads.

"They will have to be piloted through yards and terminals and taught many peculiarities of the roads over which they will run. For a time these newcomers will be under the guidance of officials and old employes of the I. & G. N."

Every department of the railroad, the general manager said, is represented among the men volunteering to take out mail and passenger trains.

System Prepared.

The entire system, according to General Manager Goforth, has been placed in readiness for any emergency. All carlots of freight that it was possible to deliver to connecting lines prior to 12 o'clock Saturday noon had been shunted to those roads, the official stated, and yards and terminals throughout the length of the railway had been cleared of their miscellaneous congestion. Those cars which it was found impossible to hasten through to their destination had been "made up" into trains ready for resumption of operations following the walkout.

"The strike of switchmen and brakemen was made effective at noon today.

"At Houston, where 104 men were employed, all are members of the Brotherhood of Railway Trainmen, and all quit work.

"A great many of these men, who have been with the railroad company for a number of years, express regret to the terminal officials that the union to which they belong was forcing them to leave their jobs, and it was known that some of them telegraphed heads of the brotherhood yesterday, protesting against the action of the local union chairmen, forcing them to quit their positions. It is understood that the reply was that the matter was in the hands of the chairmen of the local unions. Statements of the leaders of the local unions are to the effect that they were acting under instructions of the heads of the brotherhood.

"A large number of applications for positions have been received from experienced men all over the country and it is expected that a normal force can be gotten together as fast as the officials of the railroad can acquaint them with the different yards, terminals and company property, sufficiently to insure safe operations.

"Passenger trains are moving on time without interruption and employes in other classes of service have volunteered in sufficient numbers to keep all passenger trains and mail trains moving on schedule time. Within the next 36 or 48 hours, sufficient crews will be provided to operate freight trains."

Predict Tieup

Union leaders Saturday night declared that the strike was a complete tieup of the I. & G. N. freight service and asserted that the road would not be able to man crews sufficient to handle more than a mere fraction of the road's trains. They also declared it would be found that passenger service would not be kept up.

The make-up of I. & G. N. passenger trains is done by the Houston belt and terminal company under contract, according to officials of the former road, hence they are not worried over that phase of the question. At the union station, I. H. Burrus, superintendent of the terminal company, would not discuss the question other than to say passenger trains belonging to the I. & G. N. would be handled by his line as heretofore.

DIRECTORS MAY MEET MONDAY

Directors of the Chamber of Commerce and members of the Highways bureau are expected to meet tomorrow morning, according to information Saturday.

In addition to action on the railway strike, which information from members earlier in the week indicated would be taken, action on the highway construction is looked for.

The meeting was originally scheduled for Saturday, but so many members of both the directorate and the Highways bureau were out of the city the meeting was posponed in the interest of a full attendance.

Union Chiefs Await Result Of Conference

By Associated Press.

CLEVELAND, Oct. 22—Following a practical all day session of four of the "big five" railroad brotherhood leaders here, which adjourned late today, Warren S. Stone, president of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, said:

"There is no question in my mind that the men will go through, no matter what instructions they get."

W. G. Lee, president of the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen, who also attended the conference, said:

"As per the orders of the railroad labor board, the strike situation as far as I am concerned, is status quo. I am obeying the board's instructions and issuing no further orders for the men to leave the service."

REDUCTION ON GRAIN FREIGHT RATES ORDERED

Western Producers Discouraged by High Rail Charges, Asserts Interstate Commerce Commission.

By Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 22.—Freight rates on wheat and hay throughout the middle west and west were ordered reduced by the interstate commerce commission today, the reduction amounting to one-half of the increase given the railroads in 1920.

The commission also found the present rates on coarse grain, including, oats, rye, corn and millet to be unjust and unreasonable and ordered them to be fixed generally at 10 per cent less than the tariff prescribed for wheat.

"The fact that many railroad charges are still levied at the war-time peak," the commission declared, "are a cause of discouragement to the producer who has been unable to maintain his prices and to the employe who has experienced a reduction of wages. The really vital concern of the carriers in this situation is to promote the return of what may be deemed normal traffic and anything which will help toward this end is greatly to their benefit."

The membership of the commission was unanimous as to the action taken though three did not join in the majority opinion.

Black Pepper An Effective Tobacco Cure

HAGERSTOWN, Md., Oct. 22.—Chalk up another point for the modern-day school teacher's ingenuity in maintaining discipline in her classroom.

Mrs. W. H. Horning, teacher in the Mont Alto school here, accused twelve-year-old Oliver Read of smoking Boy-like, he stoutly denied it. But Mrs. Horning was convinced otherwise and discovered proof of Oliver's crime. When Mrs. Horning confronted Oliver with the proof he admitted that he had told an untruth.

Then the fun began. Mrs. Horning sent one of the girls in the class to purchase ten cents' worth of black pepper. She poured part of the pepper on the boy's tongue, evidently with the intention of curing little Oliver's desire for the "weed." Oliver's nose was held shut, causing him to swallow some of the hot "tobacco cure" resulting in his mouth and throat being badly burned. Oliver's mother indignantly haled Mrs. Horning into court on a charge of unnecessary and cruel punishment to which she pleaded guilty, but said she had no intention of being cruel.

Oliver has sworn off cigarettes for life.

After the potatoes had been picked and sold he planted this land to bushels of turnips at $1.25 a bushel wholesale or a total of $250.

His first planting of the season was an acre of land given over to early turnip greens, sweet corn and squash. His squash netted him $100; his sweet corn $80; his early turnip greens, $75.

As a second venture of the season he planted a miscellaneous crop on the same land consisting of pumpkins, June corn, radishes, etc. There was a ready sale for the second harvest.

J. M. Nicholson did not overlook the lucious watermelon. He had a large patch covered with the spreading vines of the toothsome delicasy and the harvest was large.

J. M. knows what the people want and he does his best to appease their appetites and to please their wants.

Speaking of Grapes.

There is a small vinyard on the place—not a vineyard, but three rows of vines which will be large producers of grapes when they are full bearing. Regardless of the youthfulness of the grape vines he gathered and sold $35 worth of grapes this season.

J. M. Nicholson has cows and pigs and chickens on the place and all the feed is grown on the place. He has a wife and four children and J. M. Nicholson never buys eggs or butter or cream or milk or spring fryers or fat hens. He supplies his own table.

As H. N. F. has said this has been a droughty season. There has been a scarcity of water for irrigation but J. M. has managed to hustle along very well. "I thank you" and to make a showing demonstrating just what can be done in this country by a little water from the Wichita river for irrigation purposes and the ability and willingness to work on the part of the man who owns or rents the land.

Profit for the Worker.

After all the living expenses of his family had been paid, and this included clothing and shoes and all the incidentals, J. M. has $1,200 in cash as his share of the profits of the year from fourteen acres of land irrigated by water which the Hon. Alkalinity More says is fit only for flushing sewers.

There is another item of expense that hasn't been included in the above. J. M. isn't a slow-going chap. He believes in rapid transit. He owns and runs a big Paige car and the cost of maintenance of the car is included in his living expenses for the year.

J. B. Nicholson, owner of the fourteen acres, and father of J. M. Nicholson, should be able to make a very respectable showing and prove a valuable witness as to the crop producing virtues of the flood waters from the Big Wichita river which the Hon. Alkalinity More, via the circular route, has assured thousands of citizens should be used solely for the purpose of flushing sewers in communities where there are sewers to flush.

Father Gets His.

J. B. Nicholson, owner of the small irrigated farm, takes down $2,000 net as his share of the returns for a single season on this small irrigated farm on the fringe of the eastern border or boundary line of Wichita Falls.

Let there be light. Turn on the searchlight. The writer is for acid tests and as the Hon. Alkalinity More has jumped into the arena as an educator of the people and a guardian and protector of their posessions and their purses, it is a genuine pleasure to introduce him to the Nicholsons, father and son, and the showing made by them in a single year on a fourteen-acre irrigated farm notwithstanding a scorching drought and scarcity of water for irrigation purposes. Come to judgment, Daniel!

SQUIRRELS TAKE UP GOLF.

According to a story by a golfer who has just returned from Canada the golfers of Ontario are driving squirrels away from the golf links. The reason of the move is that the golfers discovered that some squirrels thought golf balls a new and choice kind of nut and were storing them away for the winter. More than one hundred lost golf balls were found in two caches made by the squirrels.

MASTER MINDS OF CONGRESS SIT UPSTAIRS

By DAVID M. CHURCH.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 22.—The most clever men about congress are those who have their seats in the galleries.

The galleryites are the regulars who are on hand to observe. Most of them are paid for their observations and are professionals at it.

The "lobbyist" has long since been deceased in Washington. In this day of advancement in things political we have "legislative agents." They are perfectly legitimate workers and can not be said to be the successors of the old-time lobbyists, but at least they are the outgrowth of the demised gentleman lobbyist.

Legislative agents work in the open. They appear before committees to plead the cause of their various interests, and they do "missionary" work with the various members, but they are very circumspect in their transactions and most careful not to cross the line of demarcation between propriety and impropriety in influencing legislation.

These legislative agents are "master minds." They are clever men, most of them conceded to be more clever than the men with whom they are working.

Wheeler Foremost

Foremost in the ranks of the legislative agents at the present time is Wayne B. Wheeler, general counsel for the Anti-Saloon League. So far as congress is concerned, Wheeler is the Anti-Saloon League.

Wheeler has come into the limelight recently because of denouements against him on the floor of the senate, after he was invited to sit with members of the house and senate on the conference report on the anti-beer bill.

Despite the cartoonists, Wheeler is an affable and likeable man personally, who never deals with the question of prohibition as a sin, but who attacks it as a scientific problem. Once a janitor of a Middle Western college, he has risen to the ranks of great attorneys and probably has had more influence upon vital legislation in the last two years than any other private citizen. It is generally admitted that Wheeler had much to do with the writing of the prohibition law and that the Volstead act is pretty nearly his own child.

When a question concerning prohibition pops up in congress Wheeler is on the job. He doesn't preach, but he gets down to cold, hard legal argument, and thus far he has succeeded in winning every fight he has entered upon in the cause of prohibition, although this anti-beer bill may come along to spoil his record.

Congress is just waking up to the fact that Wheeler wields a great power, and congress is striving to assert its independence. Wheeler's steel-blue eyes snap as he sits in the gallery and listens to bitter attacks made upon him.

Represents Railroads

Alfred P. Thom, a lawyer of note, represents the cause of the railroads before congress, as a rule. Thom is the Washington representative of the American Association of Railway Executives, and he turns up everywhere that matters affecting the railroads are being discussed. Short in stature and given to much avoirdupois, Thom is not impressive in appearance, but when he speaks he generally gets attention. Thom is not a hand-shaker. He does not gush. He meets members of congress and government officials on a strictly business basis and expects to win his point by legal argument, and his measure of success is fairly full. Unlike Wheeler, Thom does not have corridor conferences and makes his most frequent appearances before committees, where he shows up and presents legal arguments that sometimes win by their sheer length.

Farmers' Representative

Benjamin C. Marsh gives an entirely different angle on the legislative agent. Marsh carries the title of legislative agent for the National Farmers' Council and sundry kindred organizations. He is a most active agent and resorts to the buttonhole method of persuasion. Marsh is perhaps the most frequent congressional witness, and he appears before every and any committee that will hear him.

Charles Lyman, secretary of the American Board of Farm Organizations, gives still another slant on the sort of men who keep their finger on the pulse of congress. A college man, who looks like a college man, and a student, Lyman appears before congressional committee with a rapid-fire line of argument that sweeps most of the members of congress, dozing in their chairs, into action. Lyman always livens things up by his snappy assertions and his snappy replies to cross-examination.

Labor's legislative agents are of still another stamp. Edgar Wallace, the little Welshman, who bears the title of legislative agent for he American Federation of Labor, is a retiring individual who speaks with hesitation and who seems half afraid. This may be a pose and it may not; at any rate, his looks and his votes are belying, for Wallace is a belligerent of no mean powers when he is aroused. When labor's cause needs some good, strong oration, Frank Morrison is sent to do the job, and he cuts loose with some verbal pyrotechnics that arouse furious envies among those members of congress who are given to orations. When labor needs cool, collected legal argument, Jackson Ralston comes up on the hill and does the job.

These are but a few of the men who work with and on congress. There are a hundred or more of them in Washington. Looking them over as a whole and counting the results of their work, it is easy to admit that the cleverest men of congress are the men in the gallery.

The state of Washington maintains the only game farm in the world which is operated by convicts, says Popular Mechanics Magazine. Great numbers of pheasants are raised by trusties on the penitentiary grounds for distribution throughout the state. The men work as freely as though they were not under confinement.

SENATE VOTES SURTAX RATE COMPROMISE

WASHINGTON, Oct. 22.—One of the big tax revision issues in the senate was settled today with the adoption by 54 to 13, of the republican compromise income surtax rates with the maximum at fifty per cent. All those voting against the compromise were republicans.

The senate previously had voted down an amendment by Senator Hitchcock, democrat, Nebraska, proposing retention of existing rates on incomes in excess of $100,000 and another by Senator Calder, republican, New York, to make the maximum rate 32 per cent on that part of incomes in excess of $68,000.

BOY DIES AS RESULT OF EXPLOSION

Succumbing to burns incurred Wednesday night when a kerosene lantern exploded, firing gasoline which had overflowed from the tank of a motorcycle, astride of which he was sitting, Robert McConnell, 16 years of age, died Saturday at 12:15 o'clock at the Wichita General hospital where he had been receiving attention since the accident.

Witnesses were unable to explain just how the accident occurred. The lantern it was reported, was thought to have been swung too near to the gasoline tank, causing the volatile gas to become ignited which exploded gas lantern. The motorcycle was then thought to have been overturned causing gasoline to be spilled on the clothing of the boy to which the flames leaped, causing his clothing to become almost instaneously a mass of flames.

Funeral services will be conducted Sunday afternoon at 3 o'clock at the residence of the mother and the deceased, Mrs. J. H. Woodhouse, 1647 Collins street. The services will be conducted by the Rev. H. D. Knickerbocker, pastor of the First Methodist church. Besides the mother, the deceased is survived by one brother, Edgar McConnell and a sister, Miss Buna McConnell, both residing here.

Burial will be at Rosemont cemetery.

HOLMGREN IS GUEST LOCAL ROTARY CLUB

Members of the Rotary Club of Wichita Falls heard an earnest, forceful and inspiring talk from George Homgren of San Antonio, their district governor, on the meaning of Rotary and their responsibilities as Rotarians at the Kemp hotel Saturday noon. The luncheon took the place of the usual Thursday luncheon in order that the visiting official could be with them.

Reminding them that the Rotary club is the oldest organization of its type in the United States, he urged his hearers by every word and deed to strive to keep the organization in the forefront.

Word toward the spread and maintenance of a high ethical code in every line of business represented in the club was recommended to the members as one of the most important directions for their endeavor.

He spoke of the work of the club, with which he became acquainted while having breakfast with the officers and directors, in terms of praise. He urged the local club to even better their good attendance record, citing the example of his home club, San Antonio, which for 14 consecutive months has been in the high ten of its division in International Rotary.

"During the past month, the flood month, when the largest part of its membership was hard hit by the damage, the attendance record in San Antonio topped that of all the highest division of all clubs in International Rotary," he declared amid the applause of his hearers.

An invitation on the part of the Rotary club of Fort Worth to all Texas Rotarians to be their guests on Tuesday evening when they formally open the new Texas hotel was announced.

About 15 of the local Rotarians will make the trip, according to indications at the luncheon. The party will leave Tuesday afternoon, returning on the sleeper which will put them into Wichita Falls on the following morning. Rotarians intending to make the trip were told to notify John Gould, the secretary, not later than Monday noon. The invitation included the wives and friends of the Rotarians, it was announced.

DENIES HAS ORDERS FOR STRIKE HERE

Report that orders for local members of the four rail brotherhoods strike at 6:00 p. m., on November obtained by the Record News from the head of one of the locals involved, are denied by Sam France, chairman of the general grievance and adjustment board of the Fort Worth and Denver. Mr. Francis returned Saturday from a business trip.

He also denied that he is a local strike chairman, or has any jurisdiction or any part in the notification of the men in such a matter.

He further declares that no local representative has any authority to make any public statement in connection with the strike, and declares that any statement so made, is unofficial and unauthorized.

Girl Is Refused At Postoffice As Parcel Post

LOS ANGELES, Oct. 22.—A thirty Hollander's attempt to send his daughter from Los Angeles to Holland by parcel post failed when the Los Angeles post office authorities informed him the regulations would not permit them to accept the girl for transmission through the mails.

A. van Hagelund, a rancher, was the man who visited the post office and the novel mission and Frieda Gretchen van Hagelund, eight years old and weighed sixty-nine pounds, was the "parcel" he hoped to send to Holland.

Van Hagelund told A. B. Foster, assistant postmaster, that he was too busy to return to Holland himself and that he had no relatives who could go with the child. Nevertheless, he wanted to send her to her grandparents in Amsterdam.

firemen, met with E. F. Grable, maintenance of way president, and B. Jewell, shop crafts head, and informed Mr. Jewell that they would hold back their men pending the labor board rules decision.

The action was said by the chiefs to have been almost a personal victory for Mr. Jewell, who has been fighting a walkout for a week. It also was said to preclude the possibility of the American Federation of Labor taking any serious part in the proposed strike, the "standard" unions belonging to the federation while the brotherhoods are independent.

In the shop crafts decision, which admittedly was instrumental in bringing about the action of the two other groups, was reached after turbulent sessions of the conference committee of 100 lasting several days. Representatives from distant sections fired by the brotherhoods pronouncements, protested against further delay in calling a strike, which was authorized by a vote last July. The vote was taken however, only on the wage reduction of July and leaders of the shop unions did not deem it advisable to walkout on that issue alone.

By last night however, the missionary work done by Mr. Jewell and others since the brotherhoods strike call, had shown its effect and the committee of 100 had been brought into line with a no-strike policy.

Officials of the clerks said tonight that they probably would not authorize a strike at their meeting, scheduled for tomorrow, thus indicating union leaders said, that a strike if materalized, would affect less than one-fourth of the country's railroad employes, being confined to the switchmen, the conductors, the firemen, the engineers, the trainmen and the telegraphers.

"Judge and Mrs. A. H. King of the judge paid a business trip to the Banner office." is the way Ed Throckmorton were in Seymour and tor Cedric Harrison tells the story in his Baylor County Banner. "We learned with regret that he is not intending to be a candidate for the legislature next year. He feels that if he had a patriotic duty to perform in this particular that he has performed it and he thinks he will not again offer for the lower house. He might be a candidate for the senate though he is not certain just when. A bill was passed at the last called session providing for senatorial redistricting, but this law does not become effective until 1924. When it does go into effect Baylor and Throckmorton counties will be in different districts. Judge King was one of the "trenchers" as they were called, in regard to matters of expenditure, and he was on the appropriation committee. His work perhaps saved a few cents on the state tax rate. He thinks the University of Texas is very well provided for. Professors who receive $5,000 per year will not get only $4,500, but the cost of living has been reduced, and those receiving salaries below that figure are still less. The permanent fund has been reserved for building purposes where it rightfully belongs. Mr. King says there is a tendency on the part of those who have access to the public treasury to "bleed" it for all they can. For instance, there is a proposal to establish a state park in the Davis mountains. The price of this land has been mentioned as $20 per acre, but Judge King says if the state should pay more than $2 or $3 per acre for it they would be paying too much."

Clara Jones, arrested late Wednesday afternoon at the Kemp hotel by the house detective and who was taken to the police station only after her resistance to the arrest had attracted a large crowd in the downtown district, Saturday filed suit in the 30th District court against the owners of the hotel for $20,000 damages. The plaintiff is joined in her suit by Z. B. Jones her husband.

According to the plaintiff's petition she was arrested by the house detective, Johnson, in a room of the hotel where she had registered a few hourse before and was assigned to a room on the seventh floor. She alleges that when she registered in the hotel which the petition says advertises itself as the "most beautiful hotel in the southwest" she paid $3.50 in advance for her room.

She further alleges that when she resisted the unlawful arrest, she was beaten and dragged by Johnson to the ground floor was here with the aid of policemen she was taken to the police station in the patrol. CAN YOU BEAT THIS FOR DISPOSING OF SURPLUS BEET CROP?

SHARPSBURG, Md., Oct 22.—This may be a small town but the residents are full of big ideas.

Sharpsburg is famous for its beets. This year the beet crop was so great that the residents were completely overstocked with the vegetable. They were in a quandry as to how they could usefully dispose of the large surplus.

While this momentous question was being pondered over by Sharpsburgers, one of the residents came to the front with the announcement that he was going to make wine out of his surplus stock of beets.

But another obstacle presented itself in the carrying out of this plan in using the beets. His surplus stock of beets was so enormous that there was nothing available to hold the huge amount of wine the beets would produce.

Then another bright idea struck him.

He is now digging a cistern in which the wine will be stored.

Say Czechs Mobilizing

It is rumored here that the Czechs are mobilizing.

The Austrian government announced this forenoon that all precautions had been taken to deal with the situation. The entire police force and the city guards, including the reserves, were called out, and extra ammunition was despatched to the frontier forces.

Political observers believe that the Austrian supporters of the ex-emperor will suspend any action in his behalf on Austrian territory, pending a decisive outcome of his venture into Hungary.

The Oestenburg forces immediately went over to Charles upon his arrival at Oedenburg and he was proclaimed king, according to the message.

The ex-emperor's reception at Oedenburg as he landed from his airplane is reported to have been hearty on the part of the garrison. As he landed from the airplane he was greeted with cheers of "Long live the king!"

Major Oestenburg announced that he had been charged with the command of the troops. The men signified their willingness to serve under him, cheering him and taking the oath of allegiance to Charles.

The district of Burgenland is disputed territory lying along the frontier between Austria and Hungary. It was awarded to Austria, but was occupied some months ago by Hungarian irregular troops, the situation there being similar to that in Fiume when that city was under the control of Captain Gabriele D'Annunzio. At a conference held in Venice last week it was decided that Burgenland should be turned over to Austria, but that Oedenburg and its surrounding district should hold a plebiscite which would decide the future status of that immediate territory. Hungarian leaders, particularly former Premier Friedrich, declared they would not withdraw the Hungarian troops in the district.

Behind the attempt of the Hungarians to retain possession of Burgenland there has been the threat of a return to west Hungary of former Emperor Charles. After he returned to Switzerland late last March he was given until September 1 to decide upon a permanent place of residence outside of Switzerland. This time was later extended indefinitely, but it was known the Swiss government was anxious for him to leave the country as it feared anarchist conspiracies which might involve Switzerland in a controversy with the allies.

When Charles attempted to regain power in Hungary there was a threat on the part of the little entente—consisting of Czecho-Slovakia, Jugo-Slavia and Rumania—to take military action against Hungary if Charles was not forced to leave the country. The allied governments also made representation to Admiral Horthy, the Hungarian regent, in an endeavor to secure the expulsion of Charles.

POPULAR BLUFF, Mo., Oct. 22.—W. T. Brock is seeking some "cents." Following his arrest by Dr. J. R. Longhorns Unable to Withstand Vanderbilt Attack

COMMODORES' AERIAL WORK AND FURIOUS LINE ATTACK DEFEAT TEXANS 20 TO 0

By Associated Press.

DALLAS, Oct. 22.—Vanderbilt made its first appearance on a Texas gridiron in 18 years today and celebrated by defeating the Texas University Longhorns, 20 to 0. The Commodore touchdowns were due to intercepted passes, Bewar and Wade making spectacular runs for the scores. Smith kicked goal in both instances. The last two touchdowns came in the last period when the Texas defense weakened.

The first score came near the end of the second period after a continual interchange of line bucks and punts, freely interspersed with fumbles on both sides, in which neither team seemed to have the advantage. Texas took a spurt and gained ten yards by directing their offensive against each end of the Vanderbilt line. In two more downs, however, they failed to gain and in an effort to make their first down, Robertson attempted a forward pass which was intercepted by Vanderbilt's captain, Wade, who raced 50 yards through a clear field for a touchdown. Smith kicked goal.

Vandy Holds

Several times during the next two periods Texas threatened the Commodores' goal posts through a series of smashing line plunges and forward passing, but each time the Vanderbilt line held.

Early in the fourth period, Bomar duplicated Wade's feat by snatching Robertson's pass and making a beautiful 60-yard run to the gold and white goal posts. Smith booted his second goal.

The third score came soon after when Texas was penalized half the distance of the field for slugging by Penn, who was put out of the game, a penalty which set the Longhorns back to their 20-yard line. From this point, Vandy began a series of determined line bucks and after the Texas team again had been penalized to their first yard line, Godchaux plunged through right tackle and landed safely behind the Texas goal.

From the kickoff Texas passed and bucked in a fast march to the Vanderbilt goal posts and made a first down on the two-yard line. The ball was snapped into play and Stacy had covered half the distance to a touchdown when time was called, ending the game.

HASSELL SAYS DALLAS CLUB WON'T BE SOLD

Part Owner of Marines Defies Attempts to Oust Him From Ranks of Texas League Magnates.

By Associated Press.

DALLAS, Oct. 22.—The Dallas club of the Texas League will not be sold, Jesse Hassell, part owner, declared here late today, simultaneously with announcement that he had purchased Gardner park from the Gardner Amusement company for $60,000. Doak Roberts, president of the league, has approved Hassell's action, the announcement said.

A legal fight is expected, as Ike Sabolosky of Weatherford, announced recently he had contracted with Hassell and Hamilton Patterson, owners of the Dallas club, to purchase the club for $150,000. The matter is expected to be taken up by league magnates, who are to meet here tonight.

PRINCETON DROPS GAME TO CHICAGO

By Associated Press.

PRINCETON, N. J., Oct. 22.—Chicago scored an impressive victory over Princeton's eleven here this afternoon by a score of 9 to 0. Romney kicked a field goal in the second period and in the final quarter received a forward pass from Cole on the Tiger's five-yard line and scampered back of the goal posts for the solitary touchdown of the game. Captain McGuire of the Western eleven failed to convert the touchdown into a goal, leaving the final score 9 to 0.

The game failed to develop any play of sensational character, the outstanding features of the victors' work being their consistent line plunges which Princeton's forward appeared to be unable to check. But seven forward passes were attempted and the one which resulted in Chicago's touchdown was the only one completed.

Chicago's victory over Princeton today was the first defeat ever administered to one of the so-called Big Three college teams of the east by a western university eleven.

NOTRE DAME, Ind., Oct. 22.—After a slow start the Notre Dame grid team, one of the most formidable elevens in the west last year, seems set for another good year. The team following its 10 to 7 defeat at the hands of Iowa with a 33 to 0 victory over Purdue.

With Johnny Mohardt showing everything that made George Gipp the star of last season, with Gus Desch handling the pigskin in the speedy fashion he shows at the hurdles in track, and Coughlin and Lieb playing consistent, classy football, the Notre Dame backfield is everything that anybody has a right to ask for. Wynne and Castner hammer away at full like sledges, and besides, Castner is one of the best punters in the country. The line, with two tackles and a brace of ends that are hard to beat, is heavy and fast enough to suit any critic. Shaw, Garvey, Mehre, Anderson, Kiley and Carberry are regular track or basketball men as well as powers on the grid. So far the weakness of the team has lain in the quarterback position, but improvements are looked for here and upon their being made may depend the success of the season. The famous Notre Dame forward pass is not any less formidable than it used to be, but improved defense against it must be given much consideration. All of these things are going to be tested to the utmost in the struggle with Army on November 3. This annual battle has a reputation for being both classic and classy; with the Army in better shape than ever and favored by great opportunities for scouting, the Polo grounds ought to see a mix-up worth remembering. Nebraska and Indiana are also expected to call out everything that Coach Rockne has.

WISDOM and WORSE

By C. F. C.

Those red and black battlers sure looked like different lads, didn't they? Full of life and fight and snap and ginger, using a varied attack in bewildering fashion, they slipped the harpoon into Graham high in most gorgeous fashion. It's a truism to state that all that is necessary to produce high school football success is the possession of a squad of husky pliable youngsters and an experienced coach who has the knack of imparting his knowledge and a personality that makes a pal out of every boy.

Strange as it may sound, dear friends, the United States government has just issued a bulletin entitled, "How to Keep the Cellar Dry." To some folks, but to few, we fear, that bulletin will be more interesting than that one of Mrs. E. D. E. N. Southworth's novels. Is it not so, Hettie?

Champion Jack Dempsey has taken a headlong flop into vaudeville, accepting a contract that will keep him busy for twenty weeks. He had to choose between the footlights and idleness, and Manager Jack Kearns is a strong believer in a steady, regular income. Dempsey's actions indicate that he does not expect to defend his title before late winter or early spring. There's no one waiting for him, anyway, except Jess Willard.

Edouard Horemans, the Belgian wizard of the cue, set a new and freakish billiard record recently in his match with Koji Iamada, Japanese champion. The match was a 2400-point affair being played in blocks of 400. When the third block started, Horemans seized his trusty billiard cue—and ran 400 straight. Yamada never got a chance to shoot, and it was said afterward tht this was the first time in the history of professional billiards that such a run had been made.

London newspapers indicate the British are taking seriously the coming bout between Georges Carpentier and George Cook for December 2. Cook is said to be a tough fellow who can take a lot of beating, but is classed as a light hitter for a heavyweight. With the present dissatisfaction with Joe Beckett as England's heavyweight champion, British favor has continued to follow George's ring career, and London's greatest crowd is expected to see the December 2 bout.

Of course Georges cannot afford to take much of a chance, for he is booked to meet Tommy Gibbons in the United States, probably in January, and Gibbons is some shucks when it comes to fighting. If Cook should chance to defeat Carpentier of course the Gibbons engagement would be cancelled. If Cook makes a fairly good showing Carpentier will not be considered the same drawing attraction he is now.

"I know I'm in the right in this matter," says Babe Ruth, "and I guess the baseball public feels so too." But it isn't a question of how the baseball public feels; it's a question of enforcing the rules of organized baseball to the end that the American public may not be spectators later of DISORGANIZED baseball. Pour it on 'im, Judge Landis! The game is bigger than the player.

The eleventh anniversary of the death of Stanley Ketchel occurred recently. It brought to mind the fact that since Stanley's day no worth while fighter has arisen to replace him or one who can be mentioned along with Nonpareil Jack Dempsey, Bob Fitzsimmons, Tommy Ryan, Kid McCoy and Billy Smith, real middleweights and real champions.

Old timers say that Frank Klaus was only fair, George Chip not so good, Al McCoy anything but a champion, Mike O'Dowd who, it is said, won his title in a suspicious looking bout, are hailed as the limit.

Tex Rickard, fight impresario extraordinary, brands Wilson publicly as a disgrace to the sport and states emphatically that Johnny can never appear in a match he promotes. Those who know Downey best give him credit for little save his willingness to battle.

Bryan, they assert, has some ability to take punishment, hits only fair, and knows nothing of ring generalship, the type of generalship that wins titles and pins the prefix great to a fighter.

What lovers of the sport now hope for is the rise of several ambitious lads who will shelve the "cheese champions" in a dark closet, give the patrons their money's worth, restore the prestige of the class, and give boxing a boost by a championship match that will leave nothing to wish for.

It is believed the country has such boys needing only development to make them masters of their craft, boys whom the name fighter fits, boys who will elevate the old game as it has never been hoisted in the public estimation before.

WICHITA HIGH DEFEATS GRAHAM BY ONE TOUCHDOWN IN GAME FILLED WITH BRILLIANT PLAY

Pulling one spectacular play after another, the Wichita Falls high school eleven played rings around their heavier Graham high opponents yesterday at Athletic park and won out 6 to 0. Throughout the game, the locals' goal line was never in danger, while the Graham line was threatened repeatedly. Coach Viner had introduced into the Wichita backfield's offense several new plays that were bewildering to Graham, one in particular calling for comment. It was a fake punt formation on which Springer tore through the center of the Graham line and broke clear for a brilliant 30-yard gain.

First Quarter

Graham defends south goal with wind in her favor. Kenley carried the ball back 15 yards. Line smash by Kenley made first down. W. F. again made first down on line plunges. Graham held and took the ball. Graham made first down on line plays. Hembree intercepted a forward pass and made 20 yards. Braesher went around end for 5 yards. Chewning made first down. On Graham's 5-yard line Graham held again and kicked out of danger. Chewning returned 5 yards. Hembree kicked. Graham signaled for fair catch but Red Johnson tackled causing Wichita Falls to be penalized 15 yards. Graham 8 yards on forward—forced to kick—W. F. was held, kicked over goal and ball was put in play on 20-yard line.

Second Quarter

Johnson broke through and caused a 10-yard loss, downing E. Stewart, Graham's captain. Graham kicked. Springer through center in false punt formation for 30 yards. Hembree attempted drop kick, failed. On double pass, Graham gained 8 yards. Then a forward pass netted Graham 20 yards. W. F. held on on fourth down but lost ball on fumble. Graham's first down. Haney intercepted pass and made 10 yards. Moore went in for Brashear, Hembree tossed forward pass to Anderson for 30 yards. Again Graham was a solid wall and Hembree booted the oval across the line. Ball going into play on the 20-yard line. Graham kicked. On next play, Chewning forward passed to Kenley for 18 yards. Chewning fumbled but Springer recovered the ball. On another forward pass Kenley made 15 yards. On next play Moore brought the ball to half yard line where Kenley plunged across for a touchdown. Hembree failed to kick goal.

During the second half, both sides used the aerial attack repeatedly, Wichita Falls completing four pretty passes. The ball was repeatedly in Graham's territory, but the locals failed to score again. Spectators were more than pleased, however, by the life and ginger shown by the Wichita red and black and Coach Viner came in for a great deal of praise for his work with the high school backfield.

The line-up follows:

WICHITA FALLS		GRAHAM
Anderson		Dickenson
Wagner		Bachelor
Walker		Mays
Haney, (captain)		Johnson
Johnson		R. Stewart
Coffey		Morrison
Hembree		Price
Chewning		Matthews
Springer		E. Stewart
Brashear		W. Price
Kennelly		Williams

By Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Oct. 22.—It is 30 odd years from the day that Coach Amos Alonzo Stagg played football against Princeton until today when he sent his University of Chicago eleven against his old rivals. The intervening years have made him the oldest football coach in the country. In all this time his first aim on the gridiron has been to "make men."

"With the right sort of coaching you can make men faster on the football field than in any other sport," said Coach Stagg in looking back over his three decades of coaching just before taking his team east.

"Football is a glorious game. It calls for the highest in courage and sacrifice, for the good of the school and to win. It is a vigorous game and in a certain sense it is to the glory of football that men will play the game in spite of injuries that quite often do come.

"One of the chief developments of the past 30 years is a recognition of the worth of football and of athletics. The war also has helped to make people see that they are worth while in developing our boys physically, mentally and morally.

"Football coaches have greatly improved in ideals. There are many more of them today who see the real value of the sport. Some still are to be found who reverse its benefits by trying to win at any cost—who play the game crookedly, who set false ideals before their players, who encourage foul tactics and bad sportsmanship.

"We shall never get the best grade of coaches, in my judgment, until the coach is made a member of the faculty. He needs to be set above the necessity of immediate winning of games. He needs to have the ideals of an educator. He should not have his job depend solely on winning teams. I think this has been the cause of much of the poor tactics some coaches have employed."

Is Faculty Member

Coach Stagg himself strikingly illustrates the revolution that has taken place in the coach's position in the college world, for he was the first coach to be made a member of the faculty of his institution. When he was invited to come to the University of Chicago at its opening in the fall of 1892, he was made, at his own request, head of its department of physical culture and athletics. Up to that time college athletics were entirely separate from physical education and the University of Chicago was the first college to combine the two under a department. This department also took over the management and coaching of the university's athletic teams. Until then all collegiate sports had been managed and controlled by the students.

Stagg was Yale's great pitching star from 1886 to 1890, the winner of five baseball championships. He was also selected on Camp's All-American football team of 1889. Entering the Springfield, Mass., Y. M. C. A. College in the autumn of 1890, he really started his coaching there.

The college had never before had a football team and Stagg started to build one, succeeding so well that at the end of the season it was able to schedule games with Yale and Harvard for the next year. He played football there these two years, and also organized the college's first baseball team. This makes Stagg's actual coaching record 32 years long, and in continuous service. This year makes his 30th football season at the University of Chicago—a record unique in length and continunity at the same institution.

Coming west in 1892, Stagg arrived in Chicago after the western football season had opened. Only fifteen men answered his call for the team, and he had to play a backfield position himself. His position at Yale was end.

The first games of the University of Chicago, which today perhaps arrived at its highest pinnacle of football recognition in being the first western team to break into the eastern trio of Yale, Harvard and Princeton for a home and home series, were played against Chicago high school teams.

Stagg recalled with a smile that Chicago's second football game was played in a public park where a mounted policeman kept the crowd from the field and that in scoring a touchdown he had been charged with using the policeman and his horse for interference.

Basicly Same Game

"The game has grown immensely more complicated since those days," he observed. "I suppose the forward pass has added 33 1-3 per cent to its intricacies. Yet it is basicly the same game as when I started to play. One notable change from early days that I well remember is that the center used to snap the ball back with his foot. He stood straight up with one foot on the ball which he caused to hop back by a downward and backward pressure of his foot. Centers and quarterbacks used to practice and practice because this was difficult to do without frequent fumbles. A good center and a good quarterback were especially valuable for that reason.

"Developments in the complications of the game has been a thousand-fold. Football today is the most highly scientific game there is. Spectators do not see a hundredth part of what is going on. They are able to follow the ball on many plays, but on the masked plays where the formations are close—plays for instance where the quarterback may feint a pass to one player and then pass to another—it is impossible for persons not conversant with the game to follow the different moves, much less to understand the blocking mehods employed by the linemen and backs to checkmate the opponents.

"Attack has advanced wonderfully in the past 30 years. Progress has resulted from long, hard thinking and the most carefully worked out campaigns. At the same time the defense has kept pace with the offense. Otherwise you would see the result in absurdly large scores.

The Scouting System

"I wish that it were possible for team to meet team without having heard much of one another. That of course is impossible. The scouting system has come to stay.

"But with no scouts, the coach with inventiveness and original plans of campaign would have full opportunity to prove himself. His new ideas, his tactics, would have their best chance. As it is, it is almost impossible to keep a new idea of your own. Your team is constantly watched and here in the Western Conference every game counts so heavily for position that you can take few chances. Something new in no time becomes common property and your opposition is drilled to meet it. Under the scouting system with two teams equally matched, the inventiveness and broad grasp of he game held by one coach may be entirely offset by another coach not possessed of these qualities but warned beforehand."

Originality, it might be added, is generally regarded in the football world as one of Coach Stagg's chief characteristics, because it is well known that he has had to offset his lack of material by unique methods.

"I do not think the inventive possibilities of the game are nearly exhausted,' Stagg observed, 'and yet, there are not likely to be any startling developments of new systems of attack and defense.

"The game itself I believe is established. I think there will be no important changes in it. I do not myself see any ahead."

Dempsey, Rickard said, has agreed to accept 35 per cent of the gross receipts and Willard 20 per cent.

Brownsville No Place for Hooch Hounds

SAN ANTONIO, Oct. 22.—Down on the Mexican border, within a stone's throw of Brownsville, is a prosperous little village with a population running into the thousands that had its start on a borrowed $10 bill. There are no traffic cops on the streets and Sunday is just as good as any other day in this unusual little municipality.

Another unusual feature of this peculiar little town is the fact that there are only a few human being counted among its population of thousands and that very few of these speak English.

Snakville, Texas, is the town and the man who founded it, William A. King, is popularly known as the Snake King.

Time to Settle Down

Twenty years ago William King, having wandered three times around the globe in various capacities from able seaman and stevedore to common laborer, decided that it was time to settle down and take a more serious outlook upon life.

Being more or less of a naturalist by instinct, and his world wanderings having further developed this tendency, he decided on the job of supplying circuses and zoos with wild animals as a profession.

With ten cents in his pocket he borrowed a $10 bill for one month at the rate of $1 interest and began his career. With the borrowed money in his pocket he sauntered down the sleepy main street of Brownesville and purchased a fine specimen of a bull snake from a Mexican peon who had just captured it in the foothills back of Matamoras, Mexico. He sold it almost immediately to an Eastern zoo and the snake king was launched upon his business career.

18,000 Reptiles

From the bull snake purchased from the Mexican peon King's collection has grown until now the town of Snakeville boasts of a population of 18,000 reptiles, to say nothing of the various species of parrots, monkeys, lizards, lions and other beasts. Sooner or later every known species become inhabitants of Snakeville and remain residents of the various concrete houses and runways until sold.

At the present time the business has grown so that King has seventeen animal-buying stations throughout Mexico and South America.

BOND FOR NEGRO SET AT $7,000

With four charges of theft filed against him, Thomas Bruse, negro, arrested by police officers Friday in connection with several local theft cases in the city recently, was held under $7,000 bond Saturday by Justice of the Peace Maxwell after the negro had waived preliminary hearings. The bond was fixed at $2,000 for three of the charges and $1,000 for the final charge.

Bruse was arrested by officers at his home on Sullivan street. According to the officers, part of the goods stolen from the local residences was found in his possession. Among the alleged victims of the negro were C. P. Priebe, 1001 Seventh street; A. L. Kirkland, 1611 Bluff street; H. E. Crane, 1305 Bluff street and T. A. Key, 1513 Twelfth street.

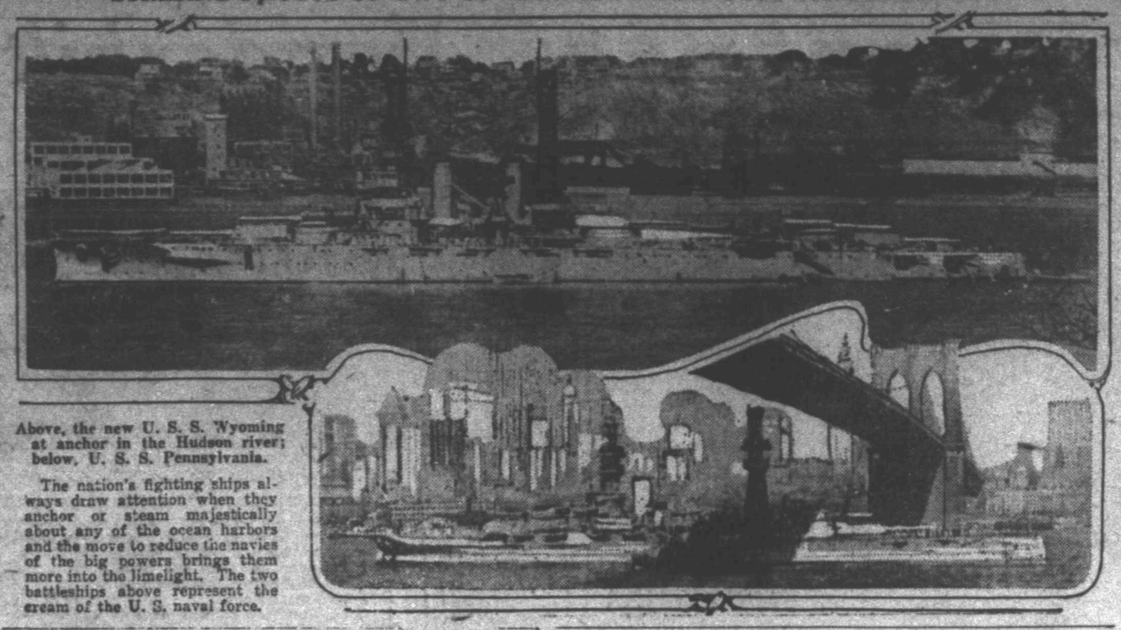

CATHERINE LOVED MONEY AND SO SHE MARRIED FOR "LOVE"

JOLIET, Ill., Oct. 22—Miss Catherine Preston, 19 years old, who several months ago offered to marry any qualified man who would give her $3,000 for an education was married here today to John Edward Miller of Shreveport, La. Her offer drew scores of replies from all sections of the country. In the beginning of her campaign, Mr. Miller, who is a wealthy oil man of Louisiana, wrote to her and offered to lend the money to her with no restrictions. Her refusal interested him and ten days ago he came to Joliet and took up lodging in a hotel.

Upon meeting her he fell in love immediately, he said, and the marriage was purely a "love match."

The nation's fighting ships always draw attention when they anchor or steam majestically about any of the ocean harbors and the move to reduce the navies of the big powers brings them more into the limelight. The two battleships above represent the cream of the U. S. naval force.

The purpose of the great rail strike which has been called for October 30 is to prevent if possible a reduction in wages. The fight will be engineered by the heads of the great brotherhoods, three of whom are shown in the above group. William G. Lee is president of the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen; Warren S. Stone heads the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, and W. S. Carter is president of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen and Enginemen.

Tag Day Is Planned to Enable Local Library to Keep Pace With Those in Other Cities

"Public institutions of Wichita Falls must keep pace with her population," will be the slogan of a tag day campaign next Saturday to raise funds for buying books for the Kemp Public Library, according to announcements issued following a meeting of the board of directors.

According to figures prepared by Miss Vera Dodge, librarian, Wichita Falls with a population of over 40,000 has only 7,500 books, while at Waco, with a population of some 38,000 a library of 20,000 volumes is found none too large to supply the needs of the public.

Towns with libraries of the size boasted by Wichita Falls are shown to be Bryan, with a population of 6,307; Cleburne with a population of 12,800; Waxahachie with a population of 7,958 and Greenville with a population of 12,384.

This, according to Miss Dodge, shows that Wichita Falls has hardly one book to every five residents when statistics show that in a city of this size, one to every two is none too high a percentage.

The local library intends as soon as it is possible to establish branch stations where books will be available for students at the different ward schools. This it is pointed out is expected to place the best books of the world and the most exhaustive sources of information at the very elbow of every boy and girl in the city, regardless of their wealth or poverty, and give every one an opportunity to profit from the circulating volumes.

It is also shown in Miss Dodge's report that less than twelve and one-half per cent of the population of Wichita Falls have library cards and yet an average of 150 books are issued daily to different people. During the month of August the number of books issued reached the total of 5,000 and on many days it was said 200 and more books were issued.

In addition to this there is hardly a time that books, periodicals or pamphlets are not being used by those who visit the library rooms for study and do not take a single volume away.

STATESMEN OF WORLD FACE HUGE TASK IN CUTTING DOWN ARMS

WASHINGTON, Oct. 22.—Statesmen and naval experts meeting to arrange for curtailing the world's navies would have had a much easier time if they had staged their conference back in John Paul Jones' day, or even in Farragut's. It wasn't so complicated then. Just look what they have to know about today:

Battle cruisers, battle ships, light cruisers, destroyers, submarines, airplane carriers, sixteen to twenty-inch guns, and nearly a million lesser details, all different.

John Paul Jones or Farragut didn't need a card index and a flotilla of yeomen clerks to keep track of the different kinds of fighting ships he had to depend on. John and the admirals of his day had only three major classes of ships.

Three Major Classes

These were: The ship of the line, which was the equivalent to our battleship of today; the frigate, or what would be a modern cruiser, and the sloop of war, or corvette, which was a light cruising vessel. These three classes made up the navies of the world up to Farragut's day, in the Civil War.

To further simplify matters, ships were ranked according to their guns, the guns being arranged in tiers in the ship's sides. Ships of the line carried from 74 guns to 120 and were known as "74's" or "120's" although they always carried more guns than they were credited with. As a further guide the gun tiers were marked by broad white bars around the ship lengthwise. The most ignorant lookout man in the tops could tell instantly whether a vessel "in the offing" was a formidable line ship or merely a light scout by the number of bands. Today it takes a naval officer and perhaps a book of silhouetted shapes of vessels to identify another fighting ship on the horizon.

Guns All Simple

The guns of those days were likewise simple. Instead of the 16-inch and perhaps 20-inch monsters of today, arranged in hooded turrets along the deck, the guns of 100 years ago and less were mostly either the "long gun" or the "carronade." The former was used for heavy work while carronades were for short range and had something of the effect of a large shotgun. Where today the gun-pointer has to do most of his aiming by abstruse mathematical calculations the gunnery of the old days was remarkable for its simplicity.

Let 'er Go!

The "pigtail-haired" gunner merely pointed his gun at the enemy point-blank and let fly. He moved the gun up, down, right or left, with a crowbar arrangement or ropes. The usual way of finishing a naval battle was to run alongside the enemy, grapple your ship to his and fight it out on the decks.

In those days the dignified fathers would have decreed that the navies were to limit their armament to a certain number of "longs" and "carronades," and the Angel of Peace would have been safe. Today they don't yet know what will have to be limited or how it will be done.

Marines Won't Sing for Harding When Band Leader Throws 'Er in High and Plays the Music Fast

WASHINGTON, Oct. 22.—Uncle Sam's "leathernecks" refuse to be awed by the president of the United States.

President Harding likes the Marines and the Marines like the president, but fear, trembling and silence have no place in the make-up of the Marine Corps, so they accept and respect him as their commander-in-chief, and let it go at that.

The Marines have had other commanders-in-chief, but now for the first time in their momentous and glorious history they have lived in the same bivouac and breathed the smoke of the same campfires with the man who controls their destiny.

They expressed their regard for the president as they stood, trim and straight, with rifles at "present arms," when his big dust-covered touring car whirled into their camp at Wilderness Run, Va., recently and again when they passed in review before him burdened with full marching equipment.

No "Camp Sing" Stuff

But, president or no president, the Marines refused to take part in a "camp sing" for the commander-in-chief and the First Lady of the Land until things were adjusted to their liking.

"Will you sing?" shouted the drum-major above the din of the band, as the president and his party walked into the natural amphitheatre, where 4,000 "leathernecks" were assembled.

"No!" crashed back the reply, though there were a few scattered affirmatives.

The band droned on. The president crossed Wilderness Run so that he could face the Marines on the surrounding hills. He arrived at the appointed place and waited expectantly. Shouts were going up from the multitude. The drum-major strove to make his band heard above the tumult. A husky song-leader, in shirt-sleeves, waved his arms like an animated windmill. Company commanders and other officers dashed madly about.

Singing was on the programme. The president was waiting for the singing. But the Marines had decided they wouldn't sing, and having made that decision they stuck to it with the grim tenacity that distinguished the corps on many a bloody field.

General Butler, commanding officer of the recalcitrant veterans, dispatched a staff officer to ascertain the cause of the hitch in the programme.

The president puffed on a cigarette and gazed straight ahead. Mrs. Harding chatted with a military aid. General Sawyer, always solicitous for his chief's well-being, sniffed the atmosphere and wondered if the cold night air would hurt the president's health. The rest of the presidential party just stood around and stamped their feet to keep warm.

All but Secretary of the Navy Denby. He didn't do any puffing, wondering or stamping. He just stood and grinned. He'd been a "leatherneck" himself, and, though he could not diagnose the trouble that had messed up the festivities, he didn't do any worrying.

Band All Hopped Up

Presently the staff officer sped back across the creek, saluted General Butler and the president and rendered his report.

"They think the band's playing too fast, and they won't sing until the drum-major slows down.

As he spoke the desire of the Marines was granted. The drum-major gave the signal to throw 'er into second gear, and then the Marines burst into song.

And they sang so loudly and so splendidly, and with such warmth and feeling, that Mrs. Harding joined in on the chorus, and the commander-in-chief was heard to hum a few bars, too.

ARKANSAS LOSES TO OKLAHOMA AGGIES AFTER HARD BATTLE

STILLWATER, Okla., Oct. 22.—A touchdown in the last three minutes of play, the result of an intercepted forward pass and a 50-yard run by Nicholson, left end, gave Oklahoma A. and M. college a hard earned 7 to 0 victory over the University of Arkansas here today. Wilson kicked goal.

The game was a battle of short gains followed by punts.

The Arkansas defense was stubborn.

POISON VICTIM IMPROVES

The condition of Mrs. Lillian Blair, who was reported late Friday night to be in a critical condition as a result of swallowing a number of bichloride of mercury tablets, was reported Saturday night to be showing some improvement.

The poison was taken about 5:30 o'clock Friday afternoon according to the report.

LILLIAN HAYDEN HIESTON

WONDROUS land of Provence, radiant with sunshine, with song and dance and joyousness of life. Hail to thee, Avignon, fairest of her cities! High upon thy towering rocks, protected by the broad, encircling Rhone, thou hast bid defiance through the ages to thy foes. Barbaric tribes possessed and loved thee—who can say how long!—then the Phoenicians came and found thee fair, and Greeks and Romans. Thou hast charmed and held them all and bloody were the fights for thy possession. Poets have raved over thy glories. Daudet has immortalized thy charm. Grave Carlyle forgot his gloom and called thee "beautifulest of towns, amid thy purple vines and golden orange groves."

Bridge Now A Ruin

Alas, the gentle pope of Alphonse Daudet no longer rides his loved and pampered mule, gay with bells and ribbons over the dream-inspired bridge of young Saint Benedict. The bridge ends in mid-stream today, its ruined chapel desolate, but on the shore still smile the vineyards, the heavy grapes hang luscious, the perfumed air still lulls to slumber. The Rhone no more is gay with bannered boats bearing great lords and ladies to the papal court, the silken flags are furled, the music mute, but nature smiles, the distant line of Alps still stands out white against the deep blue sky, the icy waters of the snow-fed Rhone still flow towards the sea, the olives ripen on the sunny slopes.

Rich In Legends

A vast temple to Hercules, built many centuries before the birth of Christ, once stood where now loom grand and desolate the ruins of the mighty fortress—palace of the popes. The land is rich in legends. One story tells us how busy Martha, the sister of the risen Lazarus, during a persecution of Christians, was condemned to death and cast adrift on the Mediterranean in a tiny boat. Wind and wave, more merciful than man, cast her safely upon the coast of France. She came through all the land of Provence, giving the message of the Christ and took up her abode at Avignon, where she made many converts. It is said a spring of clear water gushed forth to quench her thirst near the cave where she dwelt upon the high cliff. Another legend is in regard to Saint Benedict, or Benezet, as he was then called. It was a sorrow to the people of Avignon that every bridge was washed away by the tremendous current of the Rhone when swollen by the melting Alpine snows. In the 12th century a shepherd-boy of fourteen, inspired by visions as was Joan of Arc, burst into the church one Sunday and proclaimed that he was sent by God to build a bridge. The people were [illegible] interruption to the service and when he insisted laughed at him. They told him sarcastically that he might begin his bridge with a huge block of stone lying near by, that if he could lift that they would believe him. It is said that he at once lifted it upon his shoulder, all its vast weight disappearing, and carrying it to the stream laid it in place. The people then aided him in the construction of the bridge, which was three thousand feet long with immense stone arches, and with a "chatelet" or fortified gate at each end. The boy was afterwards canonized and a chapel erected in his honor at the middle of the bridge. When he died he was buried in this chapel. During the early part of the 17th century many important meetings to determine questions of church and state were held in this same little building. Saint Benedict's bridge defied the swirling torrent of the Rhone for many hundred years and we can still walk out beyond mid-stream upon it.

A Brilliant Period

The seventy years of the popes' sojourn at Avignon formed one of the most brilliant periods of the middle ages. The greatest scholars and artists came to their court, which was resplendent with all that immense wealth and culture could bestow. Sovereigns came and great nobles from all countries. The wonderful southern climate made possible magnificent outdoor fetes and history says that the natural highway of the river, at most seasons of the year calm and tranquil, was gorgeous with decorated boats coming and going from the court. Daudet says: "Who has not seen Avignon in the time of the popes has seen nothing! Never in all the world was such gaiety, such gladness, such wealth of flags and silken banners, such music, such dancing, such radiance of joyous life." There was constant interchange of visits between the Court of Naples, whose sovereigns were also lords of Provence and the Papal Court. The famous College of Jesuits at Avignon attracted many students and the youth of Avignon went to the Court of Naples to be trained in the etiquette of court life.

Rome became jealous of Avignon and sent the eloquent Rienzi, statesman and diplomat, to persuade the popes to come back to Rome, but he himself was induced to remain at Avignon and was given high position and many honors by the pope. The immortal friendship between Petrarch and his beloved Laura sprang into existence and grew deep and tender in the sunny fields about Avignon. It was here she was born and lived her life, holding Petrarch through all his years a willing slave.

John Stuart Mills was devoted to Avignon and rests there now, buried in the same grave with that adored wife whose loss he declared "irreparable" and could not long survive.

Declared French Property By Revolution

Merry old King Rene, the last king of Provence, in dying bequeathed it not to the French king, Louis XI, as was expected, but to the popes. Avignon they bought from impoverished Jeanne Queen of Naples, to whom it had descended from her ancestors who had been Counts of Provence, but had retained only Avignon. Jeanne was summoned to the Papal Court to answer to the charge of connivance in the murder of her husband. She was finally acquitted by the pope but was persuaded to part with Avignon for the sum of 720,000 francs. She needed the money to return to Naples and to protect Naples against her enemies. The actual residence of the popes at Avignon lasted from 1309 when Clement V took up his abode there till 1376 when Gregory XI was persuaded by Catherine of Sienna to remove to Rome. The popes retained their temporal power over Provence for nearly five hundred years more, with the exception of two very brief periods during the reigns of Louis XIV and Louis XV, when it was claimed by them. Pope Pius VI renounced all claim to Avignon in 1797, but it had been in 1791 formally declared by the "National Assembly" of the French Revolution the property of France.

The Palace

The popes' palace, which outwardly was the strongest kind of a fortress, took more than thirty years to build. It is practically intact today but in the time of Napoleon was used as a barracks for soldiers and the magnificent hall as a stable for horses. The gorgeous frescoes and carvings were plastered over and forgotten. Today they are being carefully uncovered. There are hidden doors and series of secret passages, rooms and stairways entirely hidden in the vast thickness of the walls, there are wonderful old carvings and paintings and vaulted ceilings and dark dungeons. The palace consists of seven groups of buildings and covers an area of more than 30,000 square yards; there are seven gigantic towers. The high walls around the town are more than three miles in length and have 39 tremendously large towers and seven gates.

The history of Avignon is intensely interesting. About 600, B. C., the Phoenicians came and liked Provence so well that many decided to remain there. Their leader married the daughter of the native chieftain at Avignon. Later the Romans came and took complete possession and built fortifications and palaces. Then the Saracens gained power and took the town. Charles Martel fought them and conquered and completely destroyed the place.

Constantine, Charlemagne, and other famous men came there and were all interested in it and in their time helped it.

TOM MOORE AND HAZEL DALY IN "BEATING THE GAME"

"Beating the Game"—"Cappy Ricks"—"Miracle of Manhattan"—"To a Finish"—"Mother O' Dreams"—Herbert Rawlinson.

TOM MOORE is not only Tom of the golden smile in "Beating the Game," but he is also Tom of the strong arm and Tom of the fraternity of crooks. In this powerful story by the famous American playwright, Charles Kenyon, the dramatic theme is supplied by a ruse perpetrated on a clumsy crook by a United States senator, whose hobby is criminology. Mistaken by the crook (Tom Moore) for a master thief, the former obeys the latter's instruction to "go it straight" for a short time. Believing that this is part of a plan to make a great haul, the thief complies with the request, only to discover that his honesty has won the heart of a wonderful girl and the respect of the community.

"Cappy Ricks"

Matt Peasely (Thomas Meighan), descendant of New England seamen, lands in San Francisco after a voyage, and, eventually ships as a mate on one of the freighters of the Blue Star Line. The brain and soul of the company is Cappy Ricks, former sea dog and present financier. Cappy's love for his ships is transcended only by that for his daughter, Florrie, a young lady who has a penchant for getting what she wants when she wants it.

Florrie and a friend are selling tags in San Francisco for the purpose of getting money for Sailor's Snug Harbor, a seamen's retreat. She accosts Peasley and his pal, one Murphy, who buy tags and are about to leave when a sneak thief seizes Florrie's purse and runs. He is overtaken by Peasley who returns the purse after besting the crook.

Peasley and Murphy sail for the South Seas on one of Cappy's ships. The captain is slain by savages. Matt takes command, as first mate, and brings his craft back to 'Frisco. Florrie decides she loves Matt and will marry him. Cappy had hoped his daughter would marry Skiner, an official of the navigation company, and to throw the two into closer proximity takes them on a cruise up the Pacific Coast.

Word that their boat is floundering off the rocks, its rudder gone, comes by wireless, and Matt, Murphy and "All Hands and Feet" set out to rescue them in a harbor tug. The rescue is effected, and brings Cappy to a better understanding of Matt Peasley's ability. He sighs with satisfaction when Matt and Florrie announce their engagement.

"Miracle Of Manhattan"

How long can a young woman exist in New York on $13.00? This is one of several interesting questions that arise in Elaine Hammerstein's latest picture "The Miracle of Manhattan."

Miss Hammerstein takes the part of Evelyn Whitney, a young society debutante who thinks it would be an easy matter for a girl to "get by." That is she thinks so until she tries it. Then her opinions suffer a radical change. But a change of opinion is not the only inconvenience she experiences.

After several harrowing experiences which include an attempt upon her life by a jealous woman, she settles down to a new routine of life, no longer the gilded butterfly of society but a woman who has drunk deeply from the cup of life.

"To A Finish"

"To a Finish" is a story of the western plains, in which a young ranchman (Buck Jones), in defense of his father and himself, undertakes to run down a villain who seeks, by surreptitiously placing rebranded cattle among their herds, to stamp upon these men the infamy of cattle rustling. The young man succeeds, of course; but before he succeeds he undergoes some thrilling experiences and hair-breadth escapes from death. And in the prosecution of his task he is assisted more than once by a very charming girl—played by Helen Ferguson—who at the close finds a permanent haven in the arms of the intrepid ranchman.

"Mother O' Dreams"

In this picture Santschi is a rancher living alone and brooding over memories of his dead mother. He is an amateur artist, and while at work on his mother's portrait wins the sympathy of a young girl—Ruth Stonehouse—and her grandmother who own and occupy a neighboring valuable ranch.

The action of the picture swiftly develops a plot by a pair of ruffians to intimidate the heroine into deeding away her property. The hero, witnessing an instance of the brutal methods of the conspirators in coercing the grandmother, for whom he has a feeling akin to those evoked by his memories, becomes her active champion. The abduction of the young heroine starts the hero on the warpath in dead earnest. In his successful effort to rescue the girl and restore the papers wrung from the grandmother, the hero kills the principal villain, whose partner convinces a party of vigilantes that the victim had not fired a shot. The heroine aids in the hero's escape from unjust punishment, and as he rides away both realize the fact of their mutual love and that he some day, when she is "grown up," will return.

Herbert Rawlinson

Nine years ago, Herbert Rawlinson received virtually his first picture training in leading roles after having played in stock. He developed so rapidly that he was soon featured in James Fenimore Cooper's "The Spy," and in the first big, nationally known picture, "Damon and Pythias."

Some of his recent pictures are "Charge It," wherein he appeared as Clara Kimball Young's leading man; "Playthings of Destiny," "The Wakefield Case," "You Find It Everywhere," "Passersby," and "Man and His Woman."

He has just finished "Conflict," in which he supported Priscilla Dean.

Richard And Rover

During the filming of "The Child Thou Gavest Me," Rover, a beautiful collie was used as a pet companion for little Richard Headrick, who plays one of the principal parts.

COFFEE

NEW YORK, Oct. 22—The market for coffee futures was very quiet today with fluctuations narrow and irregular. The opening was three points lower to three points higher, but there was some buying of December, presumably against spot sales and the market did a little better during the morning with that delivery selling up from 7.37 to 7.46. The close was at a net advance of two to seven points. Sales were estimated at about 6000 bags. December 7.46; January 7.52; March 7.64; May 7.69; July 7.81; September 7.81.

The spot market was steady and unchanged at 7¾ for Rio 7s and 11¼ to 12¼ for Santos 4s.

HE ROUNDS OUT BOOK OF RULER SIGNATURES

LONDON, Oct. 22.—Undoubtedly the super-hunter of autographs is Joseph K. Milkulec, a Jugo-Slav, who has arrived in London to get the signatures of English royalty and famous British men and women, and incidentally to complete his collection.

This already numbers 50,000 messages and signatures of kings, presidents, princes and great men of twenty-six nations, which are all contained in a ledger-like bookweighing thirty pounds.

It is his boast that the collection does not include a single German signature, not even the ex-kaiser's.

Of the thousands of Roumanians in the United States, all except a comparatively small number have come from Russia.

The size and importance of the City National Bank of Commerce require that it shall maintain a service which will meet the demands of big business. At the same time, the institution welcomes and appreciates small accounts, whether Checking or Savings, and gives such accounts the same protection and consideration as the largest depositor receives (Adv.

Stocks

NEW YORK, Oct. 22.—Trading in stocks today was active but professional involving much short covering. Rails were not perceptibly influenced by further efforts of the administration to avert a strike, that phase of the situation evidently being neutralized by the cut in western freight rates.

Steel also moved in an uncertain manner, the cut in rails by the United States Steel corporation being accepted as another indication of the keen competition now prevailing in that industry, coupled with the relatively high cost of production.

Oils and equipments guided the general list to a higher level, Mexican Petroleum, Houston, Haskell and Barker, Pullman and Harvester making extreme gains of two to five points. In the case of Mexican Petroleum, however, a sharp reversal occurred before the close. Sales amounted to 400,000 shares.

Dealings in bonds were light at narrow price changes, a majority of the liberty issues easing. Total sales, par value, $6,150,000.

Grain

CHICAGO, Oct. 22.—Liquidation was in order on the board of trade today and with wheat leading all grains closed weak and lower. Wheat registered net losses of 1⅜ to 2¼c. Corn was off ¾ to ⅝c and oats were ⅝@⅞ to ½@⅝c lower. Provisions were generally higher with lard in the van.

Trade in coarse grains was light and mainly local. Cash houses bought some December corn early, but shipping sales were not impressive and in view of the general situation corn turned weak and followed in the trail of wheat, dragging oats with it.

Provisions averaged higher under lessened pressure. October lard closed 25c higher, the other options being 7½ to 12½ cents higher, ribs unchanged to 10c higher and pork unchanged.

Cotton

NEW YORK, Oct. 22.—An early advance in cotton met scattering offerings after selling up to 18.63 December eased off to 18.25, closing at 18.30 compared with 18.48 yesterday. The general market closed steady at a net decline of 4 to 18 points. The feature in the late trading was selling of December against purchases of March by brokers who were supposed to be operating for large trade interests, and whose offerings of December had an unsettling effect on the general list.

The market opened barely steady at a decline of four to 9 points under overnight selling orders, but they were in very small volumes and prices soon rallied. The better opening tone of the stock market promoted covering, particularly by Wall street and local operators, while there was also bullish comment on the week end figures showing an increasing distribution of cotton into consumption, and there appeared to be a growing feeling around the ring that heavy ginning returns had been pretty well discounted.

There was no aggressive buying, however, owing to the restricting influence of the railroad uncertainty, and apprehensions that advances would meet increased spot offerings, and after selling about 12 to 18 points net higher, the market eased off under selling of near against purchases of later deliveries and scattering liquidation. Business was quiet, during the entire morning and attributed chiefly to evening up of accounts for over the week end. Predictions for frost in the belt seemed to attract very little attention. Traders evidently believed that the crop was beyond the probability of any damage from that source. According to New Orleans advices southern congressmen are being urged to request the census bureau for a report on the percentage of the crop ginned to November 1 to be published in connection with the ginning figures on November 8.

COTTONSEED OIL

NEW YORK, Oct. 22.—Owing to strength in lard and crude, the cottonseed oil market was firm all day with an active trade, closing eight to thirteen points net higher. Prime crude 7.00@7.25; prime summer yellow spot 8.40@8.70; December 8.85; March 9.10; May 9.25; all bid.

Livestock

FORT WORTH, Oct. 22.—Excessive receipts of cattle and calves arrived today, around 900 head of cattle and 600 calves being offered. With a market glut in prospect for next week, buyers were not anxious to accumulate supplies on a week-end market to be carried over from Monday's slaughter, and they did not go out until late in the day. Bids on all kinds were weak to unevenly lower, and much stuff had to be held over.

Hog receipts were close to 300 head, the supply selling at fairly satisfactory prices. The market was quoted steady to 10c higher. One car sold at $8.25 and other deals were within a general range of $8.00 to $8.15. Pig prices were steady to higher, sales being made at $7.75 to $8.25.

Nothing was received in the sheep division. Quotations:

Cattle—Beeves $3.00@8.25; stockers $3.00@4.50; cows $2.00@4.00; canners $1.25; heifers $3.00@6.00; yearlings $3.50@6.50; bulls $1.50@3.00; calves $2.00@7.25.

ASK BIDS ON PARK WORK

Bids for the construction of concrete curbs in the walks of Bellevue Park will be asked for as soon as the city engineer's department draws up specifications, according to information Saturday from Dr. J. F. Reed, city commissioner in charge of parks. In addition to the construction of the curbs, additional gravel will be placed on the walks, Dr. Reed said.

During the last summer, according to Dr. Reed, the Bellevue park was used more than any other park in the city and the construction of the curbs will add to its attractiveness.

Commissioner Reed also said that the planting of shrubbery and trees in the tourist park on Jalonick street part of the improvement to be made to make the park available for tourists another year will begin soon. A thick hedge will be planted around three sides with numerous trees.

A SCOUT IS BRAVE

By Rev. J. W. Loving

Scout Law Number Ten: "A Scout is brave. He has the courage to face danger in spite of fear, and to stand up for the right against the coaxing of friends or the jeers or threats of enemies, and defeat does not down him."

During my college days the question came up in the reading of some of the Greek plays as to what it is in man that woman most admires.

"No," said the great teacher, "she dispises the fool that offers it."

Then answering his own question, he said it is courage.

Then he went on to speak of false ideas of courage current among women and men too. It is quite common to mistake bluff for courage, when the two things are the poles apart.

Recklessness, foolishness and such are some times mistaken for courage. General Grant one day illustrated the true spirit of bravery by an incident in his own life. Before he came to the position of commander in chief he was one day ordered by his superior to go on some hazardous mission. Some one asked him if he was scared. "Yes," said he, "almost scared to death, but I obeyed the command, I executed the order." That is courage. Not the total absence of fear, but an obedience in spite of fear. The brave man never courts danger, or seeks a fight for its own sake. He prefers to avoid either. But if duty commands him to fight he does his best. He takes the side of right no matter who or what is on the other side. Popularity, gain, self-advancement, all give way with him before the high command of honor and duty.

When a principle is at stake and duty points his way, he walks in it, not that he feels no fear, but that he hears a call that is so imperious, so compelling that fear cannot deter him or danger affright him. He does not court ease or choose the line of least resistance. His honor is at stake and it is ever to be trustworthy. His loyalty knows no wavering, his obedience accepts no subterfuge. He desires and appreciates friends, he does not court unpopularity or aloofness. He loves the approval of others, but to fail in the face of danger or yield to the promptings of fear, is too dear a price to pay for such things. He prefers to stand alone on the side of honor and duty rather than enjoy the plaudits and society of those who shrink from danger and fail through fear.

He stands up for the right, even though friends coax him to yield. This does not mean that he loves his friends less, but honor and duty more. While he does not stop in such premises to philosophize on the Scout to ask seriously the question, is any one who would coax one to shun duty because it is dangerous, a real friend? Will a real friend try to persuade one to disregard the mandate of duty? Yet in actual life it is true that those who call themselves friends and who really want to be such, do sometimes try to dissuade one from doing duty just because there is danger in it. A Scout is brave, therefore he must disregard all such coaxings and face the danger.

Moreover a Scout has the courage to face danger in spite of the jeers or threats of enemies. This does not mean that he is insensible to such jeers or threats. He keenly feels them and would greatly prefer the approval of such men. It does mean that such jeers and threats must not deter him from the post of duty. His own self-respect, the approval of his own conscience, the post of duty, are to him unmeasurably more than all such threats. If you please, he is afraid to do wrong rather than of anything that the world of men can do to him.

"Defeat does not down him." Here is the real test of a man. I read these items from the experience of Abraham Lincoln, one of the world's really great men. When he was a young man he ran for the legislature in Illinois, and was badly defeated. He next entered business, failed, and spent seventeen years of his life paying up the debts of a worthless partner. He was in love with a beautiful young woman to whom he became engaged, and she died. Later he married a woman who was a constant burden to him. He entered politics again, ran for congress and was badly defeated. Then he tried to get an appointment to the U. S. Land Office but failed. He then became a candidate for the U. S. Senate and was badly defeated. In 1856 he was a candidate for the vice-presidency and was again defeated.

In 1858 he was defeated by Douglas. In the face of all these failures, he refused to yield and at last reached the highest office in the gift of his nation, filled it grandly and died honored and respected by the world. He had the spirit of the Scout, he could not be downed by defeat. Any man may seem great in victory only a really great man can show his greatness in defeat.

Many military chieftains have loomed large in the hour of victory when the world applauded and contestants bowed in defeat. Names of such come to mind now. I turn from these to point you to another who was confessedly great in defeat. I am thinking of that superb gentleman, that knightly Christian soldier, that illustrious citizen, that great educator, that princely man, Robert E. Lee. Overcome by numbers and resources he yielded to the superior forces, but never in all his stainless life did he seem greater than in the act and hour of his surrender. Did he yield to defeat? Was he downed by it? Go to Lexington, Virginia, look into the archives of the great school over which he presided, get the names of men whose characters he helped to mould, learn from them the story of that great educator and college president, see what these pupils have done, hear their testimony as to the source of their inspiration for life's stern duties, then you will not need to ask if defeat downed the matchless Lee. Let me apply some laconic words of him who was yet greater than Lee or Solomon or any and all of earth's heroes, as he said to the lawyer who wanted to know who was his neighbor and confessed that the man who showed mercy to the one in need was the neighbor—let me say those words to you, "Go then and do likewise."

ALL STAR SCOUT FOOTBALL TEAM TO BE PICKED.

When the Scouts of this city first began talking of a football schedule for the various Scouts troop teams, mention was made of the selection of two all-star Scout football teams. Since the schedule ends on the first Saturday of November, it is highly possible that two all-star teams could be selected and that a game between these two teams could be arranged. The logical date for such a game would be on Thanksgiving Day when, in all probability, the local high school team will play here.

Having the Scout game as a matinee to the high school game should add an attraction which should draw a good crowd. Whether or not such could be arranged has not been determined. The matter will be taken up with the school authorities at a later time. Nevertheless, a game between the two teams can be arranged. Usually when all-star teams are picked they are mythical, but this time we will break away from precedents and these teams can play.

The matter of selecting the teams presents a most intricate problem. For one man to select the teams would give opportunity for a number of "would-be Scouts" to holler crooked. So, we will allow the Scouts of the city to select the teams. Every Scout can submit his selection of a first and second all-star elevens, picking the players from only those teams who have complied with the schedule. The Scout is then to mail or bring his selection to Scout headquarters addressed to the Ranger Scout and a committee composed of the Scout Executive, J. Chester Powell and Jess McLary will compile the reports.

The Scout receiving the largest number of votes for a position will be awarded it, and the one receiving the next in number of votes will receive the position on the second eleven. No reports will be considered unless signed by the Scout making the selection. Selections can be made at once, and no reports will be received after 3 p. m. Saturday, November 6. Closing the contest on that date will enable the two teams to get two weeks practice before the game.

If, in the opinion of the judges, any report is prejudiced to any extent, such reports will not receive consideration. Scouts, make your selections from the men who in your opinion are the best players, and do not put a fellow on the all-star team simply because he is on your own troop team. Give the other fellows a chance. No Scout who has played in less than three games should be placed on either of the all-star teams.

The writer sincerely hopes that every Scout in Wichita Falls will submit his selection for the all-star teams. By so doing, we will be assured that the positions will be awarded to the deserving fellows. Let's see some selections come pouring in during the next week. Remember! Mail or bring them to Scout headquarters, 812 1-2 Ohio avenue, on or before November 6.

IOWA PARK WALLOPS TROOP 6

Troop six football team met their first defeat of the season at Junior High grounds last Saturday, morning when the heavy Iowa Park High school eleven ran over them to the tune of 6 to 0. Troop six was outweighed fifteen pounds to the man but their superior generalship should have carried them to victory.

Loss of Fullback Claude Harris and Halfback Raymond Smith severely handicapped the work of the backfield. Dudly Skeen, substituting fullback, played an excellent game, but not understanding the plays worked a hardship on his playing. The backfield just lacked the machine movements with which they are in the habit of working with Harris and Smith in there.

The Iowa Park boys averaged about 175 pounds in the backfield and 145 pounds on the line against the scouts' 125 pounds backfield and 130 pound line. The scouts are to be complimented upon their ability to hold the score so low for it looked like murder when the Park boys walked out on the field. Their slow working backfield left them at a disadvantage. However, the Sixth troopers held the line on two occasions when their goal was threatened. The only touchdown came near the end of the third quarter after a series of line plunges and end runs had brought the ball from the forty yard line.

Park Machecknev, Troop 6 quarter, confined his plays to line plunges with a few variations to the end run and forward pass route. Of four trials the Sixers failed to complete a forward pass and end runs gained them little. Only once did they threaten to score and a twenty-five yard penalty killed heir chances.

Credit is due the good work of George Bolin, Troop 1; John Ray, Troop 3; John Keevil, Troop 4, all outsiders from the troops, but good scouts. They were all substituted at various stages of the game. George Bolin at end proved to be an excellent tackler. The entire troop line held fairly good in the face of an overwhelming attack.

The scouts have no excuses to offer for the defeat. They were simply beaten by a bigger team.

Scoutmasters No Meet.

The famous or infamous Scoutmasters' troops failed to meet at headquarters last Tuesday evening as per schedule. The Legion was in use and only four Scoutmasters showed up for the meeting.

For Heaven's sake, Scouts! don't take your Scoutmasters for an example and come to meetings about as regular as they. It is a fine thing that the success of scouting in Wichita Falls doesn't depend upon the Scoutmasters. (The writer says that with all candidness as he was just as guilty as the rest. He came, but didn't stay.)

Those in charge of the Scoutmasters' training course announce an effort to interest thirty men in the meetings by the next meeting, October 25. Every Scout can help us to attain our aim by urging your Scoutmasters to come to the meetings. The Scoutmasters, Assistant Scoutmasters, troop committeemen, and Sunday school teachers are eligible for the course.

Things that should interest every Scoutmaster has been planned for the meetings and a series of lectures by Superintendent Lee Clark of the Wichita Falls public schools on the "Psychological Method of Handling the Boy" offers an inducement for every man interested in scouting or boy work. In addition, Scout games, songs, yells, etc., are scheduled on the program.

CHILDRESS ELEVEN GAINS PRESTIGE BY BEATINK PLAINVIEW

Special to the Record News.

CHILDRESS, Texas, Oct. 22.—In one of the greatest games ever played in the Panhandle, Childress drug Plainview down to a 24 to 14 defeat this afternoon. The game practically cinched the Northwest Texas championship for Childress as all the authorities had agreed that these two clubs were the best.

Although outweighed fifteen pounds to the man, the Childress line literally tore their opponents to shreds and the back field shot through for long gains time after time. This, coupled with Dowis' and Coffey's long sweeping runs, was too much for Plainview and they went down to their first defeat at the hands of a Panhandle team in three years.

Several critics who witnessed the game stated that Coffey was by far the most brilliant high school quarter back they had ever seen. Plainview's only means of gaining was the forward pass. Yates, the giant Plainview fullback, gave a wonderful exhibition of passing, while Bryant made a thrilling 85 yard run for a touchdown after grabbing one of Yates' passes.

FAMILY FAILINGS ARE BUTT OF MANY FRIENDLY THRUSTS

Herbert Leon Cope appeared at the First M. E. Church, South, Tenth and Lamar in his famous lecture, "The Religion of Laughter," and for an hour or more kept the good sized audience roaring with laughter.

The lecturer mocked the grouch, the pessimist, the family fuss and all the little vices of their lives that drive people to unhappiness and gave his hearers some of the deepest philosophy of life and happiness and kept the audience holding their sides while they listened to his ramblings over the habits of all people. Mr. Cope was named by the army and navy as "Kill the Blues Cope." He is the second number of a lyceum course that is being held at this church. Next number will also be a humorist, Boothe Lawery by name.

And to the Winner Belongs the Spoils

—To all the contestants we extend our warmest congraulations. And to those who do not get just the prize they coveted and thought they "ought to have," we say in all friendliness, votes alone will win, the most votes, of course, getting the big prize. If you don't get the "big fellow," no one is to blame but you yourself, you didn't turn in the largest volume of votes and the winners did. So that's all there is to it, and we hope there are no welchers or cry babies, and that in good grace and due thanks take the prize you did win and determine next time to work harder. Remember after this date we will know more about how many votes anyone has than you do.

—The above count of votes is the last that will be made by the campaign department of The Record News and shows the votes each contestant counts Friday, October 21st.

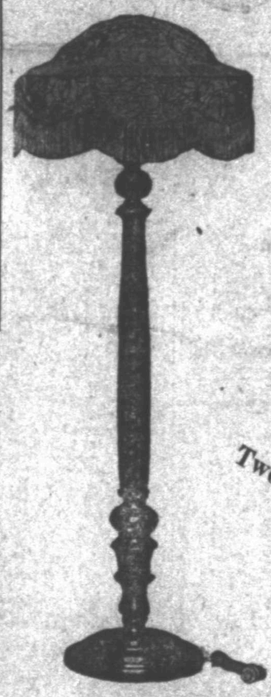

—All the contestants still competing for the valuable prizes so soon to be given away are striving with all their might to secure every available subscription they can, for they realize that the much-looked for time is close at hand. Only a few days more and the contest will be a matter of history. Seven more days and the prizes will be awarded and the contest will be over.

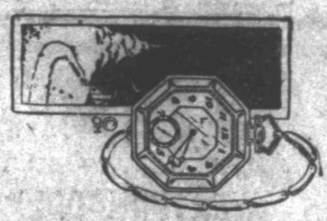

—Mr. B. F. Johnson, Curlee & Johnson, real estate; Mr. F. C. Barron, City National Bank of Commerce; Mr. Myron A. Ellis, Assistant Cashier Security National; Pat H. Simmons, Vice President Wichita State, and Mr. W. U. McCutchen, Assistant Cashier First National Bank, who will act as judges of the contest and will count all the votes of all the contestants and award the prizes. These gentlemen have all signified their intentions and willingness to appear at The Record News office at 7:30 o'clock p. m. Saturday, October 29th.

—The judges will come to the office at exactly 7 p. m. on October 29th, which will be 30 minutes before the contest will be announced closed. These gentlemen will close the contest on the stroke of 7:30 p. m., October 29th, and will then make a complete count of votes found in the ballot box, and then a recount of all votes turned in to the contest department at the installing of the ballot box, thus reaching the grand total of all votes each contestant has.

IN MEMORY OF MRS. LEE PRESCOTT

Mrs. Lee Prescott, wife of Lee Prescott of the Cashion neighborhood passed away October 11th, 1921, at 9 p. m., after several months illness.

She was a consecrated member of the Cashion Baptist church and a teacher in the Sunday school at the time of her death.

The funeral was conducted by the Rev. W. C. Ashford of the First Baptist church of this city, after which all that remained on earth of this dear wife, mother and friend was laid to rest in the Riverside cemetery. The silver cord is loosed, the golden bowl is broken, the dust is returned to the earth as it was, the spirit has returned to the God who gave it. It is said by all who knew this sister that her sweet face made sunshine in shady places.

If all felt the charms of her rare courtesy and joyous sunny nature, how much more to the members of her own family upon whom she lavished all the sweet earnestness of her mind and nature. In the presence of such sorrow, we extend our greatest sympathy to the husband and grief stricken children to whom she was so dear. How double deep would be the grief over the grave, did not such bright lives inspire the belief that there is a better world beyond, while free from sorrow and pain, the good and true are reunited after this life of toil and care is over.

Oh dearest friend so true
How much we loved, you never knew,
How pierced our hearts no one can tell
But Jesus doth all things well.

—Mrs. H. Willis.

Ambition to Improve Chances in Life Still Strong, Free Night School Here Proves Conclusively

By A. B. GRIFFING

Ambition is not dead.

The same spirit that urged Abraham Lincoln to climb from the obscurity and ignorance of a back woods cabin to the highest plane of political power and to exhibit one of the highest orders of trained mentality still reign supreme with the American men and women of today.

Such is the belief expressed by teachers of the free night schools being conducted three evenings each week at the Senior High school and this the teachers declare is the largest reward gained by the instructors who spend their evenings instructing working men and women from the city who come to take advantage of opportunities, for self development that are theirs for the asking.

Some of them come to grasp opportunities that have never before been theirs. And some of them come to grasp opportunities which were once theirs and were thrown away in the madness of youth and a failure to realize the necessity for preparation to meet and successfully master the responsibilities and problems of life.

They range in ages from the early teens to well into the years of middle age, but all are alike in a quiet determination to accomplish something worth while, and the teachers are unanimous in the declaration that never was a more studious and ambitious collection of men and women gathered together to receive instruction.

The student body includes clerks from banks, from the postoffice, mail carriers, stenographers, men skilled in various trades, mothers of families and fathers of families, all alike seeking some mental development that will fit them for better places in life.

In the class of Americanization there is taught the rudimentary principles of the English language along with the principles of Americanism is included Germans, Mexicans, Poles, Greeks and a former resident of Switzerland.

In the large class studying stenography, bookkeeping and business in general is a former resident of Hungary, Joe Tooth. Last year he was a student in the class of Americanism. In the two years of his membership in the night schools teachers declare he has not missed a class and his advancement and gain is reported accordingly gratifying and successful.

The school is under the charge of D. K. Presson, who has general supervision of all classes and the assignment of students. The total enrollment this year was reported by Mr. Presson to be 281 at the end of the second month of this year's classes, while last year the total enrollment during the entire year was given at 320. This is taken by teachers to be an evidence of spreading appreciation for the work given as the school was instituted only last year.

The courses in typewriting, bookkeeping and commercial law are reported to seem the most popular, having maintained during both years a much greater number of pupils than the other classes. This class is under the instruction of J. N. Hall, member of the high school faculty and courses.

Other instructors in the classes include: R. O. Jones, instructor of advanced English; O. J. Dudzin, instructor of business English; J. T. Tindill, instructor of business arithmetic; C. J. Lamy, native of Spain, and instructor of Spanish, and Miss Marie Hall, instructor of advanced Spanish.

At least ten students are desired by the teachers before a class is formed for instructoin in any one course and classes will be organized at any time sufficient students can be enrolled. The courses are entirely free to any resident of Wichita Falls who is above the age of fourteen years and employed in the day time and full credits for high school work, recognized at the University of Texas, awarded for work accomplished in each subject, according to the announcement of teachers.

WAR AGAINST ANTHRAX.

British officials are seeking to have all horsehair imported into England from China, Siberia and Asiatic countries disinfected before being admitted. Shaving brushes are made from this hair and anthrax may be communicated to humans from them. Total prohibition of horsehair from countries mentioned is also being considered, as medical authorities state there may be danger of an anthrax epidemic.

ECZEMA

Also called Tetter, Salt Rheum, Pruritus, Milk-Crust, Weeping Skin, etc.

ECZEMA CAN BE CURED TO STAY, and when I say cured, I mean just what I say—C-U-R-E-D, and not merely patched up for awhile, to return worse than before. Remember, I make this broad statement after putting ten years of my time on this one disease and handling in the meantime a quarter of a million cases of this dreadful disease. Now, I do not care what all you have used, for how many doctors have told you that you could not be cured—all I ask is just a chance to show you that I know what I am talking about. If you will write me TODAY, I will send you a FREE TRIAL of my mild soothing, guaranteed cure that will convince you more in a day than I or anyone else could in a month's time. If you are disgusted and discouraged, I dare you to give me a chance to prove my claims. By writing me today you will enjoy more real comfort than you had ever thought this world holds for you. Just try it and you will see. I am telling you the truth.

"BIBLE IS NOT TEXTBOOK ON THEOLOGY; THE BIBLE IS A RECORD OF EXPERIENCE"

DALLAS, Oct. 22.—"The Bible is not a text book on theology, not even a treatest on religion; it is a record of experience, the experience of the life of God in the souls of men, of men scattered over thousands of years, in some instances distanced from each other by a thousand miles," declared Rev. Dr. John A. Rice in a sermon at the Highland Park Methodist Church which was crowded to overflowing. "The real battle has never been between science and religion, but between science and thology, often between psendo-science and pseudo-theology, both forsaking their proper fields to fight on grounds alien to both," was his summing up of the oft discussed "conflict between science and religion." Dr. Rice is one of the distinguished pulpit orators and theologicians of the Methodist Church, professor of the Old Testament in the school of Theology, Southern Methodist University, but has filed his resignation, which followed criticism of his book, "The Old Testament in the Life of Today." His sermon is understood to be based largely on passages from the book most sharply criticized. It follows in part.

Great Body of Literature.

"That the Old Testament is a great body of literature, subject to the canons of literary criticism, has now been generally conceded among vital scholars. What those canons are it is impossible to discuss at length, but a brief survey of some of the underlying principles might not be without profit.

"An important question in the study of any literature is he practical one, What is its subject, what is it talking about?

"This question would seem to be superflous in the study of the Bible, and yet wrong answers to it have tracked the course of the Church through history in blood and tears, and until recently was a menace to freedom of inquiry, even in Protestantism.

"It's theme was once supposed to be all truth, and every aspect of truth was predetermined by its pronouncements. It taught geography and he sacred map radiated every part of the known world from Jerusalem, the center. It taught meteorology and falling stars, wandering comets, rumbling thunders, flashing lightning, devastating floods, blighting drouths, earthquakes, cyclones,—indeed anything unusual in nature expressed divine moods to be changed by Bible prescriptions.

Taught Many Things.

"It taught chemistry and physics and its supposed magic passed for science. It taught hygience and medicine. Only a few years ago a friend of mine in Alabama was called out at midnight to find the passage of Scripture that would, if read aloud, stop the blood for a woman whose tooth had been extracted the day before.

"It taught philosophy, the origin of language and languages. It taught astronomy and geology, and the processes by which the heavens above and the earth below came into being, as well as their structure, could be determined only by revelation.

"It taught chronology, and the hour of creation was actually fixed as 9 o'clock in the morning on the 23rd of October, 4004 B. C.—at least 1,000 years after the developing of two great civilizations, whose annals have now come out of their ancient graves to help confricate our little systems that have had their day.

"It taugh biology, and the genesis of all life was supposed to be described in detail. It taught anthropology and the exact method of creation and was read into the sacred page.

"It taught history, and every item of the infallible record was understood to have been dictated verbally —even in English, according to many —by Omniscience to inerrant scribes.

Wesley on Witchcraft.

"At every stage of this tragic story the whole truth of revelation and redemption was made to depend upon the absolute infallibility of each and every one of these interpretations. 'Falsus in uno, falsus in omnibus' was the slogan. Even so great a scholar as Mr. Wesley thought that we had as well give up the Bible as to give up witchcraft.

"But the growth of the historic and scientific spirit has routed the church, at the point of the bayonet, from one after another of these positions and forced a mere vital approach to the Scriptures.

"Has that spirit helped us to find such an approach or are we to go on henceforth, as hitherto, changing from position to position with the advance of knowledge? Is there no stable principle that will hold in spite of all variations in the current world view and the time spirit?

"Suppose we empty our minds of all preconceptions and read, as we would any other literature, the first few chapters of Genesis. What would we understand these chapters to be talking about? What would appear to be their character and purpose? Would it not be that God is here described poetically as preparing the universe for man and man for the universe; that each man is intimately related to God and his fellow-man? Is not the central theme of these stories morals and religion? It not everything else secondary and unimportant? Would that not appear also to be the central theme of every other section of this library? Have we not here then the key to the real purpose and meaning of the Old Testament?

Size of Mustard Seeds.

"Take an illustration from Jesus. He called the mustard seed less than all seeds and yet anybody knows that there are scores of seeds much smaller. Is his statement, therefore, untrue? If he was teaching botany, yes. If he was illustrating the growth of the Kingdom from a small beginning to world proportions, no.

"Can there be any serious conflict between religion and science? The real battle has never been between science and religion, but between science and theology, often between a pseudo-science and a pseudo-theology, both forsaking their proper fields to fight on grounds alien to both. It has never been Gods word versus his works, but an interpretation of the one against the interpretation of the other. The point of adjustment lie along the border of the physic world, where science is only now beginning to achieve established results. It is possible for theology and science to clash here, but the Christian spirit will at once compel such an attitude on both sides that each will welcome help from the other.

"There need be no bitter antagonism, for how can the Ten Commandments conflict with the multiplication table? Geology with the Lord's What has the age of the world to do prayer? The psalms with Boyle's law with the parable of the prodigal son? What has evolution to do with the sermon on the mount? How can a comet clash with the cross?

Science and the Bible.

"Nor are we particularly concerned about the agreements between science and the Bible. How can astrophysics agree with justification of faith? How can the bluominal theorem agree with the beatitudes? The laws of optics with the love of God? Physiology with the witness of the spirit? We may distrust alike the worth of the harmonist ad the disharmonish.

"Morals and religion, then, are the peculiar and exclusive theme of the Bible, but this does not imply that the Bible is a system even of morals and religion. It is the record of revelations made by God of himself to the Hebrew people, setting forth the meaning and value of existence, the providential purposes and redeeming efforts of God. These revelations were not primarily of truths, or even of truth, but of himself, of a person to persons.

"The Bible is, therefore, not a text book on theology, not even a treatise on religion. It is a record of experience, the experience of the life of God in the souls of men; of men scattered over a thousand years, in some instances distanced from each other by a thousand miles. And yet they are bound together by a common spirit, a common attitude toward the fundamentals of life common realistic touch with God. And God always takes the initiative, always moves upon man, father than man upon him, as in all other sacred books. He is searching for men rather than men for him. He descends to their levels to lift them to his own supernal heights.

Form of Literature.

"Not less important for the correct understanding of any piece of literature is an appreciation of its form. Is it prose or poetry? Is is a ballad, a lyric, a drama, an ore, an idyll, an elegy? Is it history, biography or fiction? Is it an oration an essay, a short story, a letter?

"Nowhere do we need a keener literary sense than in some parts of the Bible. Even the Lords prayer, which is beautiful poetry beginning in heaven, running the scale of human need and winding up in hell, is not without its literary difficulties. The first paragraph may be read:

" 'Our father, who are in heaven,
Hallowed be thy name,
Thy kingdom come,
Thy will be done,
As in heaven, so in earth.'

"Or:

" 'Our father, who are in heaven,
Hallowed be thy name.
Thy kingdom come.
Thy will be done,
As in heaven, so on earth.'

"The question, of course, is whether the last line must be read with the three preceeding or only with the one immediately before; whether we name, the coming of his kingdom and the doing of his will, all as in heaven so on earth, or only for the doing of his will as in heaven so on earth.

"There is also a larger unity in every book that must be grasped. A friend of mine has put the habits of some of us rather graphically, when he charges that we know the Bible as the hog knows the pasture. The hog knows where to go to find acorns, we where to find texts. It is impossible fully to feel the majesty and power of this glorious library without being able to think through its several parts and appreciate the devices of literary are so freely and so finely employed. * * *

Sources of Information.

"Luke, in his preface, tells us that he exhausted every source of information, oral and written, in preparing his gospel. The same is clearly true of Matthew and partially true probably of Mark and John also. This fact now accepted among schollars does not in the least invalidate any part of the gospel story. We should not, therefore, be surprised to find sources back of the Old Testament, Bibles back of and within our, whose outlines and characteristics are traceable.

"T't is easy to discover at least four distinct strata here, each betraying special peculiarities, each moving in its own circle of ideas and interests, each bearing distinctive marks of its origin and history. Nobody familiar with ancient Semitic traditions can escape the feeling that we have here kindred materials purified and made the medium of a spiritual message sounding in many cases the universal note. The noble aspirations, the far-off dreams, the heroic experiences of ancient peoples, passed from sire to son, entered the very blood of these children of Providence, till, recorded by inspired pens and colected and combined by inspired hands, they took their places in the book, by which God was to draw all the world toward that far-off divine event to which all creation moves."

Men are judged in the business world chiefly by two standards—initiative and dependability. A growing Savings Account with the City National Bank of Commerce reflects both. The bank welcomes deposits of any amount, small or large and pays 4 per cent compound interest. (Adv.)

SUDDENLY GALVENIZED INTO ACTION DEMOCRATIC SENATORS AGAIN ASSUME ACTIVE ROLE

By BASCOM N. TIMMONS

WASHINGTON, Oct. 22.—What has happened to the Democrats in the senate?

That is the question that visitors to the galleries were asking today. From the lifeless, unorganized, rather discordant mass it has been since March 4, the Democrats today have their heads and are galvanized into action.

From Senator Charles A. Culberson of Texas, who has sat on the Democratic side from the time that the mind of man runneth not to the contrary down to Caraway of Arkansas, the baby in point of service, the Democrats are smiling today.

For within a week the Democratic minority has routed Imperial Wizard Penrose, discomfited High Kleagle Lodge and caused much woe to Grand Goblin Watson. The result is that the tax revision bill which Penrose brought out is in the discard and the bill soon to be voted on more nearly conforms to the ideas of Senator Simmons, the Democratic Hercules on the finance committee than to the ideas of any of the Republican members of that committee.

Can't Tell

"One can never tell how long the Democrats will stay together, but that they have played the Republicans off their feet on the biggest issue that has faced congress—that of taxation, any Republican members themselves admit.

Whether or not the Democrats may be gleeful because they see a chance for victory in the congressional elections next year is unimportant in the view of the country. But if they have forced a better tax bill than the Penrose bill that is important. The Democrats and the progressive Republicans say this is just what has happened.

Sudden Cohesion

But what was the reason for the sudden cohesion in the Democratic ranks? Will sudden solidarity in the Democratic ranks also stiffen up the wabbling Republicans who have been causing President Harding sleepless nights? Have the Democrats been badly led by Senator Underwood, who is now preparing to take his place in the disarmament conference and is paying little attention to Democratic leadership?

Senator Charles A. Culberson of Texas, is given a large share of the credit for the Democratic solidarity. Culberson himself was the Democratic leader for many years, voluntarily retiring from the place almost a decade ago. In point of service he far outranks any other Democrat.

Culberson, who sits quietly on the Democratic side of the chamber day after day, is the man to whom the Democrats have been going for advice lately. It is understood in effect that Senator Culberson told them that there should be no play for partisan advantage by the Democrats. The veteran Texas solon said that he believed the Penhore bill thoroughly bad, but the Democrats must offer something better and not simply blindly oppose the majority bill.

Preceding the bringing out of the Simmons amendments it became known that Senator Culberson had said that "the Democrats have something constructive in mind."

When the Simmons amendments did come out the Democrats immediately got behind them. A surprising part of the arrangement was that Senators Reed of Missouri and Walsh of Massachusetts emerged as the two biggest siege guns on the Democratic side. Reed was the original League of Nations irreconcilable and Walsh was his chief lieutenant. The feeling between Reed and Walsh on the one hand and the League Democrats on the other has been none too friendly since the league fight began.

But when Reed and Walsh swung into action on the taxation bill they found behind them Hitchcock, Robinson, Williams and the others of the old crowd to whom the names of Reed and Walsh had been anathema.

The Simmons-Reed-Walsh attacks on the Penrose bill so riddled it that middle-of-the-road progressives such as Lenroot, Kenyon, Capper, et al, made it very plain that unless the Republican "old guard" offered something vastly better than the Penrose bill they would form a coalition with the Democrats.

The Republican leadership surrendered to the progressives, the surrender being signed by no less a personagie than Senator Lodge himself, who preferred this to seeing the various Republican factions go off on a tangent.

Varying Opinions

There are varying opinions as to what the final effect of the old guard surrender will be on the future of the Republican party. Some pretend to believe that it presages coalition of the liberal Republicans and it will serve to bring about a native matters. Others believe that the Democrats in many other legislative cohesion—born of self defense—in the Republican ranks.

On all hands it is conceded that congress is likely from now on to be a more representative body. It has majority in the house and the comfortable G. O. P. margin in the senate can be quickly made non-effective whenever the liberal Republicans act in concert with the Democrats.

A weakness of the present congress has been its lop-sidedness. With a Republican majority in the house greater than the Democratic membership there has been no incentive for the G. O. P. to stand together. The best legislation has always been accomplished when there was a close division between the parties.

But in this congress the Republican majority has been so enormous that it has fallen apart and there has been no party program. The senate leadership of Senator Lodge has been atrocious. The Massachusetts senator has been rather "too highbrow" to suit his G. O. P. brethren. He is going away now for the disarmament conference and the tryout of Watson of Indiana for leader is underway.

Senator Penrose, too, is shorn of his once great power. There was a time when the dictum of Penrose was law in the senate. There was a time when newspaper correspondents took Penrose's word as final on any tax or tariff matter. But the insurgency of the liberal Republicans have upset the announced plans of Penrose so often lately that correspondents no longer take Penrose seriously. The doughty Pennsylvanian is no longer his old self. Sickness has emaciated his once powerful body and when an old lion is shorn of his claws, it can always be depended upon that someone is going to take advantage of his infirmities.

So the taxation debate has brought out one thing very clearly and that is that a great change is under way in both parties. Solidarity is coming to the Democrats. The bold western senators of a liberal turn of mind such as McNary of Oregon, Lenroot of Wisconsin, Capper of Kansas, Borah of Idaho, and Kenyon of Iowa, are coming into the picture which Lodge, Penrose, Smoot, Warren and others of the old guard have hogged since the Republicans gained control of the senate.

And on the Democratic side with Senator James A. Reed, long bitter Wilson antagonist and on outs with his Democratic brethren using the word "we" in talking of his fellow Democrats, and with the same Reed praising Wilson for attempting to get the Republican congress to revise war taxes three years ago—certainly a great change is going on in the United States senate.

FAMILY HAS CLOSE CALL; HOME BURNS

Waking to find their home in flames, Mrs. W. H. West and two children barely had time to escape early Saturday morning when fire of undetermined origin burned away the roof and interior and destroyed practically all furniture and furnishings of the West residence at 1319 Eighteenth street, according to report of firemen. The damage to the house and contents was estimated by firemen to be approximately $2500.

The interior walls, a portion of the floors and the furniture was destroyed by the flames and the outer walls left standing, firemen said. Mr. West, at the time of the blaze was absent from home, working in the oil fields near Cigra, but was expected to return sometime Saturday.

Three other calls were answered by firemen during Saturday, none of which resulted in any appreciable damage, the first of these being when a blaze mysteriously broke out on the roof of a house in Scotland addition. Linemen were reported laying electric wires nearby and to have been unable to explain any cause of the blaze breaking out, as there was no current on the wires and no other cause came before their attention.

About 11 o'clock another blaze broke out at 808 Second street, when an outhouse was destroyed by fire and the third and last call during the day was occasioned by burning grass at Eighth and Lamar streets.

MRS. CROZIER PRESENTS HER RESIGNATION

Announcement was made Saturday from the office of Mayor Cline of the resignation of Mrs. S. B. Crozier, who has been employed as a member of the police force in the capacity of night travelers aid-secretary at the union station, for the last eighteen months. The resignation which was presented the middle of the week will take effect November 1.

Although no official announcement was made it is understood from semi official sources that in accepting the resignation the city council as a compromise measure will offer to pay half the salary of the day secertary all of which at the present time is paid by the Y. W. C. A. under whose direction the night aid work is also carried on. The council it is understood in making the offer will also ask that the hours of the day secretary be changed so that she will be on duty part of the night and thus take over part of the work that has been done by the night secretary.

This plan according to statements Saturday has the conditional approval of some of the Y. W. C. A. officials and will be presented to the council by one of its members when it meets Monday night.

The resignation of Mrs. Crozier came as a surprise to those who thought that the matter of continuing her posiion had been settled several weeks ago when the city by unanimous action refused to act favorably on the request of Police Commissioner J. E. Fitts that she be dropped from the pay roll of the police department. The request was made as one of the commissioner's economy measures.

At that time representatives of the Salvation Army, Welfare Council and Y. W. C. A. appeared before the council and asked that Mrs. Crozier be retained in her present capacity. They and members of the council spoke highly of her work.

Since that time Commissioner Fitts has suggested that her services were not needed but no action was taken. It is known that a majority of the members favored her retention and had she not presented her resignation the action taken several weeks ag would have remained final.

Her resignation was as follows: Mayor W. D. Cline and Councilmen:

"In view of the effort that the city is making to maintain the different departments and realizing what a great effort it is at this time and with deep appreciation for the noble manner in which they stood by me as an individual and the organization which I represent, I present my resignation as night travelers aid secretary effective November 1, 1921.

MRS. S. B. CROZIER."

FOUNTAIN IS PROPOSED AS MEMORIAL

Some months ago a movement was started to erect an ornamental drinking fountain on the grounds of the Alamo school and to name the fountain "The Kate Haynes Fountain" in honor of Miss Kate Haynes who has more to do with the education of the children of our city than any other individual.

A committee consisting of Mrs. W. S. Curlee, chairman; Mrs. L. R. Buchanan, Mrs. J. W. Culbertson, Mrs. Bernard Martin, Mr. J. E. Park and the Rev. N. F. Grafton was formed with Superintendent Lee Clark as advisory member at a meeting of the committee held in the home of Mrs. Curlee Friday morning it was decided to send out the following letter and to ask the general public to take advantage of the privilege of doing honor to a noble woman.

J. E. Park, principal of the Alamo school was made custodian of the fund and every member of this committee was authorized to receive subscriptions in order to make it easy for folks to subscribe. Mrs. Bernard Martin was selected to distribute the letter. The committee will have submitted to it in the near futuer bids with blue prints of drinking fountains and will select one that will be a credit to our schools and city if the funds justify. Pictures of the fountains will be published later.

The letter: The spirit of the personage is to give honor to whom honor is due when it is due. To recognize merit and service while brain and hand is still busy rendering service rather than to wait and give "post mortem" praise.

Recognizing the unusual and long time service of Miss Kate Haynes, both as a teacher in our public schools and in the Sunday school, her many friends are desirous of showing to her their appreciation by erecting an ornamental drinking fountain on the grounds of the Alamo school and naming that fountain "The Kate Haynes Fountain." As its sparkling, refreshing waters gush forth it will be a constant reminder of "The friend of little children." You counted it your privilege to "sit at her feet" and drink deep of the fountain of her knowledge and went away refreshed You received to your self a part of her personality. It is now your opportunity to take part in this testimonial of love. The Alamo Home and School club of the Alamo school proopses to raise the necessary fund to purchase and ecect this fountain. You are asked to hand or send your contribution to J. E. Park, Alamo school.

Often we say: "Yes, I'll do that" and straightway forget. Do it now—today.

Very cordially,
Mrs. W. S. Curlee, Chairman,
Rev. N. F. Grafton,
J. E. Park,
Mrs. L. R. Buchanan,
Mrs. J. W. Culbertson,
Mrs. Bernard Martin,
Committee.

PERSHING PAYS HIGHEST TRIBUTE TO MEMORY OF "UNKNOWN POILU"

While in France early this month General Pershing, acting for his government, pinned the congressional medal of honor on the cushion over the grave of the "unknown soldier of France," beneath the Arc de Triomphe, in Paris. The impressive ceremony took place in the presence of six marshals of France and the allied diplomatic corps of Paris.

"WHITE MULE" STILL KICKING FOR MANY

SPRINGFIELD, Oct. 22.—Drunkenness in Springfield has been slightly on the wane during the last few months, since Federal agents made wholesale raids on saloons that were openly dispensing intoxicants across the bars. Police records, however, still show that booze is far from extinct here, but "white mule" and various forms of home brew liquors are responsible for most cases of inebriety.

Wants Divorce Second Time

POPLAR BLUFF, Mo., Oct. 22.—What matters a few divorces, anyway? Following their first legal separation Joe May, sixty-seven, and his wife, sixty-five, were remarried. The "hatchet" was dug up again, though, and the marital troubles of the elderly couple are by no means settled. Alleging desertion and treatment which made amicable domestic relations impossible, the husband has petitioned the Chancery court here to again sever the marriage knot.

Extent of Remarkable Gain In Texas Panhandle Farming Shown by Government Report

By BASCOM N. TIMMONS.
Special to the Record News.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 22.—The department o fagriculture today gave out figures on farming in six additional Texas Panhandle counties, having a total of 2,206 farms. The counties were Swisher, Lynn, Garza, Parmer, Yoakum and Terry.

Previously figures had been given out for 36 counties, having 17,821 farms. The figures today complete the 42 Panhandle counties, showing a total of 20,087 farms.

A previous statement showed that this is the only considerable farming section in the nation where there was an increase in farming in the last ten years. It was also described as the purest Caucasian section of the nation. Out of the 20 087 farms, only 17 are operated by negroes.

Four of the counties for which figures were announced today showed remarkable gains in farming. These four were Lynn, Swisher, Garza and Parmer.

Lynn county farms increased from 200 in 1910 to 674 in 1920.—Farm values increased from $3,175,690 in 1910 to $10,818,722 in 1920, a percentage tof 240.7.

Swisher county farms increased from 510 in 1910 to 572 in 1920 and values increased from $6,811,180 to $14,494,945 or 111.28 per cent.

Garza county farms increased from 81, with a value of $2,188,596 in 1910 to 425 with a value of $6,076,703 in 1920.

Parmer Breaks Records.

For percentage increase in farm values, Parmer county sent all records, not only of Texas, but of the nation crashing. This county showed a percentage gain in values of 351.6 per cent, although the number of farms increased only from 161 to 212. Its values in 1910 were $1,837,364 and in 1920, $6,461,003.

Terry county farms increased from 235 in 1910 to 274 in 1920, while values went up from $3,621,055 to $9,461,262, or 161.3 per cent. Yoakum county had only two more farms than in 1920, yet values went up $825,900.

Swisher county, according to the new figures displaces Randall for seventh place as a Panhandle wheat growing county, showing a production in 1919 of 791,271 bushels, as compared with 19,158 in 1909.

Swisher also replaced Floyd, which was fourth in oat raising on previous figures, raising 439,484 bushels in 1919 as against 16,010 in 1910. Swisher milo and kafir in 1920 amounted to 727,006 bushels as compared with 80,361 in 1910. Cattle in Swisher increased from 12,517 head in 1910 to 26,264 in 1920.

Lynn county raised 1,017,968 bushels of kafir and milo in 1920, compared with 10,492 in 1910; 111,724 bushels of corn as compared with 4,320 in 1910 and 9,969 bales of cotton as compared with 101 in 1910. Cattle increased from 11,182 to 17,509.

Garza's principal gain was in cotton, which jumped from 124 bales in 1910 to 8,706 in 1920. It also showed increases in kafir, milo, corn and wheat. It showed a decrease in cattle, sharing 26,852 in 1910 and 19,545 in 1920. Parmer county gained in kafir, milo, wheat, corn and oats. Its cattle increased from 2,004 in 1910 to 19,810 in 1920.

IMPORTS ANT BEARS.

Fruit and vegetable growers of the State of Washington are interested in the importation of three ant bears a male and two females. From Mexico. These ant bears were brought into the country recently and an attempt will be made to acclimate them. Their food is potato bugs, locusts and other insects injurious to plant life. They are gluttons and seemingly eat all the time. The ant bear does not hibernate and the three brought to this country will spend the winter in a greenhouse, keeping down the insect population indoors.

LARGE CROWD OPENS MEET ENDEAVORERS

One of the largest crowds that has ever assembled for the opening of a convention since the organization of the Wichita district, was present Friday night at the Wichita Fall District Christian Endeavor convention which opened for a three-day session at Henrietta.

Out-of-town delegates were present from many towns ranging for more than 100 miles distance, eleven coming from Graham.

The welcome address was made by Judge Lofton, and the response was given from four of the other cities represented.

The speaker for the evening was E. F. (Jack) Hupperts, state field secretary.

The Sunday services will be largely in charge of the Endeavors and a good attendance is urged from Wichita Falls, especially for Sunday afternoon and evening.

Those who cannot arrange to go in cars can get there on the afternoon and evening trains and can return home after services are over in the evening.

The train service being exceptionally good and leaving at three periods during the day, one at 8 a. m. for Henrietta.

JAY WALKERS BLAMED WHEN AUTOS HIT 'EM

COLORADO SPRINGS, Colo., Oct. 22.—"Jay walkers" who are run over by automobiles should be brought into court and fined, according to a resolution presented to the annual meeting of the National Association of Municipal Electricians, recently held here.

The resolution declared, among other things, that "two-thirds of the automobile accidents that occur on the streets are the fault of pedestrians themselves who wilfully disregard traffic rules, cutting across corners and not observing signals of traffic policemen."

Precious stones were classed a male and female by the Romans, according to the darkness or lightness of their color.

ENDURANCE IS FIRST DEMAND

Car Owners Base Choice on Lasting Qualities and Consistent Performance.

Dodge Brothers Dealer Comments on N. A. C. C. Survey Showing Twelve Leading Preferences.

The fact that the majority of automobile owners regard the quality of endurance as the most important factor in the choice of a car is not surprising to McFall Bros., local Dodge Brothers dealer. He was commenting on the survey just completed by the National Automobile Chamber of Commerce, which shows that endurance ranks first among 20,000 car owners to whom the questionnaire was sent, with comfort second and price third.

In the middle price group, which takes in the range from $500 to $3,000, 18 per cent of the total agree on endurance as the first essential, 11 per cent mention comfort first, and 10 per cent admit that they give first thought to the purchase price. Following is the complete list of preferences as disclosed by the survey:

Middle Priced Cars.

1. Endurance	18 per cent
2. Comfort	11 per cent
3. Price	10 per cent
4. Appearance	9 per cent
5. Economy	8 per cent
6. Service	8 per cent
7. Flexibility	7 per cent
8. Hill Climbing	6 per cent
9. Endorsements	6 per cent
10. Specifications	6 per cent
11. Speed	5 1-2 per cent
12. Appointments	5 1-2 per cent

"In a man or a motor car," said the dealer, "it is this endurance, or ability to deliver the goods consistently, that wins out every time. The owner whose car sticks by him like a faithful friend is almost sure to reward it with his lasting affection and loyalty. More than anything else, probably, it is this ruggedness which has already made Dodge Brothers motor car the choice of over 600,000 people. In the world war, 20,000 of them stood up gamely under the cruelest tests, and today in the oil fields thousands more are giving faithful service under conditions that are fully as bad.

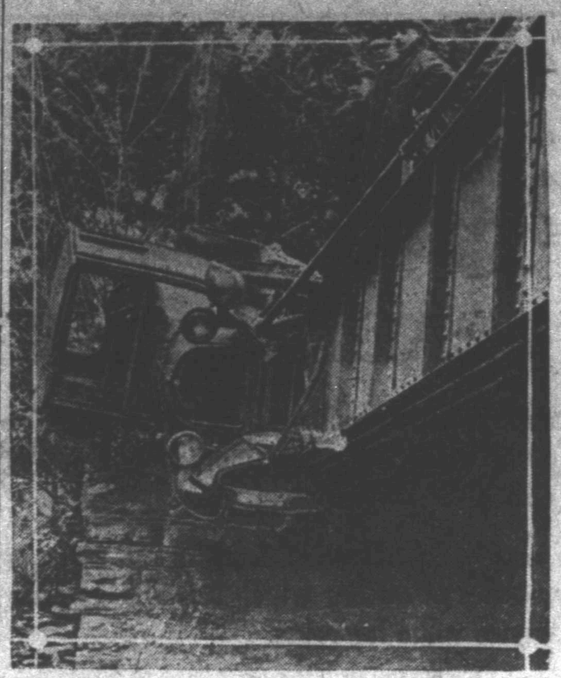

"But it is not alone in the quality of endurance that Dodge Brothers car excels. Important refinements added during the last few years, have made for increased comfort and you will notice that comfort stands second on the N. A. C. C. list. As for the pupchase price, Dodge Brothers proved by comparative charts that their price was fair even before the reduction. Nobody can deny that it is an exceptional value now.

"Particular attention has been given by Dodge Brothers to every feature which will enhance the refined and substantial appearance of the car. To give only one illustration, the improved Sedan, with its disc wheels, cord tires, and the latest custom windows, brings credit to the taste and judgment of every owner. On the score of economy and service, which 8 per cent of owners demand, it is only necessary to cite the Dodge Brothers car's long and consistent reputation for low gasoline consumption, high tire mileage and freedom from the necessity of repairs.

"To continue on down the list, Dodge Brothers car has proved itself flexible enough for every use from traveling across desert sands to attendance at society functions; it has the endorsement of more than 600,000 owners; its specifications show that it has abundant power and speed, which is the eleventh requirement on the list; and its appointments are all that a careful insistence on the best materials man make it.

"In short, we feel that Dodge Brothers car not only comes up to all the requirements of those who give first consideration to endurance, comfort or price, but that it will sell itself, on its merits, to the majority of the people in the entire twelve classifications."

SNATCHED FROM DEATH

How the auto hung by two wheels after the accident.

An accident which might have proved fatal to the occupants, had the car left the bridge, occurred in Wesleyville, Pa., about four miles east of Erie, Pa. The only thing that held the car from falling twenty feet, was a small two-inch railing flange which hooked under one of the front wheels.

FRANKLIN CO. PROMOTED TO FULL AGENCY

Announcement comes this week that the Franklin Sales Co. of this city had been elevated to the position of directory factory dealers rather than working under a contract through Dallas. This places the local concern on exactly the same basis as that enjoyed by dealers in all the large cities of America and marks a very important step forward in the history of the Franklin Sales Co.

Carl Waelder, the manager of the local sales company is well and favorably known in the automobile and business worlds of this city. He is a man of broad experience in the business of selling automobiles, having devoted the last fourteen years of his life to this work. While with the Houston branch of the Overland Motor Co., with which Mr. Waelder spent seven years, he was awarded a gold watch as a prize in the all-star contest staged by the Willys-Overland company at that time.

When first coming to Wichita Falls, Mr. Waelder came connected with the local Overland agency, remaining with them for four years. He severed his conection with this company in order to take the agency of the Franklin car in this territory.

During the last two years, Mr. Waelder, as manager of the Franklin Sales Co., has made a splendid record with the Franklin car. During this period eighty-two cars have been sold by his organization in this territory.

M. T. Birch is the manager of the service department, which is located just in the rear of the salesroom at 911 Lamar street. Prospect for the future are reported as being particularly bright and everything will be done to advance the interest of the Franklin cars in this territory.

JORDAN HEAD PREDICTS NEW BUSINESS ERA

"We are about to enter a new business cycle," says Edward S. Jordan, president of the Jordan Motor Car company.

"The most far-sighted business men know, however," says Mr. Jordan, "that it will require possibly six months of further favorable readjustment before the mass of people realize what has happened.

"Business in all lines will gradually improve as the public come to realize the extent to which production has been curtailed, and the extent to which price cutting has been carried in many lines.

"Some prices will be further readjusted and all prices will level out in such a way that merchandise can be exchanged on a fair basis.

"Already certain prices are showing a tendency to rise. Keen business men know that nothing will start a buying movement so quickly as rising prices.

"Yet, it will take some months for the mass of people to realise what is going on.

"Therefore, the experience in the great cotton industry will in a measure be repeated in every industry producing a great necessity.

"The silk men felt the change first. Production was curtailed. The depression was critical. Now their millstre running at capacity. Next, the woolen men felt it. And now, cotton has come back. The south is already feeling the effect of rising prices of its great staple.

"These things happen because one hundred and ten million people in the foreign countries need certain things. When curtailment of production a certain point the demand turns the other way. Then the buying movement starts.

"Pessimism will still prevail, especially with smoking room oracles, until after the first of January. Only the most far-sighted will realize that it is desirable to accumulate low priced materials. Only the minority during the next few months will have the foresight to prepare.

"In short, if everybody had foresight there would never be any depression, never be any bottom—just a normal progress all the time. The very fact that this pessimism will continue in a measure through the winter will justify the prediction which is being made in every letter which goes out from the Jordan company.

"And that prediction is—That a shortage of good motor cars will exist before March 15, 1922.'

"If I thought that everyone would act upon this prediction, it would not be justified. The very fact that many will consider it ill-times and not justified will create the very condition which we anticipate."

VOLUME OF PRODUCTION CUTS COST

"In selling batteries, as in selling any other commodity, the volume of business secured depends very largely upon the value which is given the public. It is true that if Willard batteries were made singly they would cost more per battery than almost any other battery on the market. But they are not made that way. Everything at the Willard factory is done on a huge production basis, and with the idea in mind of giving the public the most for its money," says A. J. Tobey, president of the Western Auto Electric Corporation, distributors of Willard storage batteries.

"When you take into consideration the fact that the Willard battery is standard equipment on 196 makes of cars and trucks, it is plain that there must be some reason for its popularity. The engineering experts who have decided upon the Willard battery for the company they represent have made exhaustive tests and know the superior qualities offered in the Willard battery.

"So in giving service and in repairing batteries we are following the example of the Willard factory and are doing business in a volume that has never before been attempted in the battery business. When you figure that between 400 and 500 cars pass through our battery service station each day, you will more fully realize that it takes an enormous amount of system to give this service without delay to a single motorist. No time is lost in any detail. Every man is prepared to render one particular service. Whether it be testing, filling of the battery, or inspection of the electrical system of the car, there are men for each job—all experts in their lines.

"By doing business on a volume and by establishing a system which has never before been equalled in the battery business, we are able to give motorists the quickest service and the finest repair work that is possible to give and at a cost of about 20 per cent less than is ordinarily paid."

HAND BRAKE RATTLE.

When rattles develop in the hand brake there is only one sure cure, to have the brake relined and drawn up tight. If it is not possible to do this at the moment it is possible to help matters by the use of small coil springs, hooked in such a way as to take up the play. The springs should be light, so that they will not cause friction, but strong enough to support the weight and hold down the hand, which has been jumping and causing the clattering.

BOOKKEEPER IS EFFECTIVE AS SALESMAN

The dark unfathomed caves of ocean bear
Full many a flower is born to flush unseen
And waste its sweetness on the desert air."

So wrote the great poet Grey in his elegy many years ago. And this very week right here in Wichita Falls the truth of the above statement was verified.

It happened this way. D. Frits drove over to Mineral Wells the first part of the week to visit his mother, who is there taking the baths, leaving R. G. Sharpe, his office manager, in charge of the salesroom.

With a keen eye Sharpe picks out C. H. Foley, of the Foley Construction Co., now engaged in the laying of sewers in this city, and decides that he is a logical prospect to whom to sell a Marmon Bookstown Speedster, which had just arrived from the factory.

After a half an hour of sales effort, Mr. Foley climbs into the speedster and departs, leaving behind him a check for the amount in full.

If Frits is as smart as we believe him to be, he will put someone else in keeping the books and let Sharpe employ his time and talent in the selling end of the game from now on.

MOUNTAINEER GASPS WHEN MAXWELL CAR CLIMBS STEEP HILL

Their road took them over the mountains of Huntingdon county, Pa., a long haul of ten miles to the top.

At the top, they met a mountaineer who stated that he had lived up there six years and had never seen an automobile go over that road.

The fact that the good Maxwell made the climb with six passengers was almost beyond comprehension to him.

So steep was the pitch of the road that second gear was used as a brake in going down.

Mr. McNoldy states that the good Maxwell covered the entire trip of 104 miles with one pint of oil, no water, and a little less than 5 gallons of gasoline, despite the fact that it was overloaded.

The Franklin CAR

ANNOUNCEMENT

It is a pleasure to announce that we have been appointed direct dealers in Franklin Motor Cars in Wichita Falls and vicinity and that we are equipped to render the highest possible service to motorists. Heretofore, we have been a sub-dealer under the Dallas dealership.

THE present and future motoring public, we are confident, will agree that the sale of such fine cars as the Franklin, under our new and ideal connection, will prove rich in consequent good will for our organization.

The present period of careful, thoughtful buying has been marked, in the Franklin organization, by steadily increasing sales. Sales this year have been 82 per cent of last year's high record, and some months, June, for instance, when ten hundred and thirty-eight cars were shipped from the factory at Syracuse, N. Y., have made new high records. For the past nine months the Franklin has been selling two and one-half times faster than the average of all other cars in the industry.

The uninterrupted and constant growth of Franklin sales is the result of the company's faithful adherence to the original Franklin principles of light weight, flexibility and direct air cooling. The striking advantages of the car built on these three fundamental principles are known to Franklin owners in these economy terms:

20 miles to the gallon of gasoline
12,500 miles to the set of tires
50% slower yearly depreciation

LET AUTOS PASS WHEN THEY WISH

LOS ANGELES, Oct. 21—(Special)—When you are driving along a road and some one approaching from behind sounds his horn to pass, let him do so.

"Many times when driving along the highway you may have noticed drivers give the signal to the car ahead and try to pass only to have the car on the right hand speed up," states E. E. Caister, manager of sales for the Standard Steel Automobile Corporation, distributors of the Standard Eight.

"It certainly jangles a driver's nerves when he finds the car ahead speeding up when he attempts to go by. There is no excuse for this sort of thing. If you want to pass, why should the man on the right step on the throttle and attempt to block you?

"There is plenty of courtesy to be observed on the road besides mere theory. If we were more thoughful of the other fellow, motoring would be a lot more pleasant.

"The other day a motortist reported that he was coming down from Sacramento and was crossing the railroad tracks in Dixon. There is a right hand turn there, and it is dangerous, unless low speed is maintained. Coming around the turn a boy was observed driving a delivery wagon. He was taking about all the room to be had on the highway and when this motorist looked at him he found the chap was busily engaged in reading a letter and was not watching the road at all.

"It is just such things as this instance that makes motor traveling hard and troublesome. If motorists would drive sanely there would be fewer disasters on the highways of the state."

PLANS COMPLETED FOR WITHDRAWAL OF TROOPS FROM RHINE

By Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 22.—Formal written notification that the United States has completed ratification of the peace treaties wih Germnan and with Austria has been forwarded to Berlin and Austria and the formalities of certifying to the completion of the treaties are expected to be completed with the former enemy powers in about ten days.

As soon as the exchanges have been completed it is the intention of the administration to begin the gradual withdrawal of the 15,000 American troops on the Rhine and to set up diplomatic machinery by appointing ambassadors and other members of the staffs at the embassies in the capitals of the former enemy powers.

Details of plans for the withdrawal were made public today following a conference between Secretaries Weeks and Hughes. The forces to be withdrawn consist of 126 officers and 7,873 men of the total of 498 officers and 13,000 men. Two army transports, the Cantigny and the Cambrai, will be used, the first troops starting for this country about the middle of November. The men whose enlistments in the army are nearing expiration will be the first returned.

The 50th Infantry has been placed on the inactive list and will be disbanded together with all provisional organizations except the headquarters troops and the head quarters staff of the aramy of occupation.

The organizations which remain will be reduced to a status sufficient only to compose a headquarters troop, one brigade of infantry and necessary auxiliary troops. They are the Fifth Infantry, Eight Infantry, First brigade headquarters, Sixth Field artillery battalion, companies A, B and D, 58th engineers; company railroad engineers, air service detachment; Signal company Quartermaster Corps Medical detachment, Ordnance department; Finance Department headquarters troop; headquarters army of occupation, totaling 372 officers and 5,217 enlisted men.

HINTS FOR MOTORISTS

A valuable practice of automobile owners is to keep careful records on mileage traveled by each tire and the quantity of gasoline and oil consumed. These records will show which make of tire is giving the best service, and any repairs or adjustments necessary when the car begins to fall off in its mileage per gallon of gas or oil.

When painting a car amateur painters should oil the floor of the paint room so that the dust will have a tendency to stick to the floor instead of rising to the body finish. If it is not possible to use oil, sprinkle the floor with water from time to time during the operation of painting.

The engine of an automobile performs better and has more power at night than in the daytime. A recent explanation of this technical mystery is that in the daytime heat expands the air so that it is lighter in weight than at night. Therefore at night an engine gets more air and consequently produces more powerful impulses. Also, the water keeps cooler and circulates more efficiently.

Rear seat drivers are the most dangerous kind of passengers. They constantly keep their feet working an imaginary pedal and give verbal direction to the operation of the car. They are nervous individuals who do not realise that they rear seat driving gets the real driver nervous.

A new car, after making its first 1,000 miles, should be carefully inspected. The engine parts should be given special attention, for the slightest defect will result in trouble. Make your inspections frquently until the car has worn to operate in perfect order.

Answers to Queries

Would a car equipped with 32x4 wheels, in place of 34x3 1-2, climb hills better and reduce speed on the level? Which tires would wear longer under a five-passenger 2,500 pound car. READER.

Answer—the difference in hill-climbing ability would not be noticeable. The larger size tire would wear longer.

The four cylinders on my engine are in blocks of two. The water jacket in each block is badly cracked from water freezing. The engine is 25 horse power. Can the water jackets be welded satisfactorily; What would you estimate the expense? What welding concern would you recommend. W. L.

Answer—It is not a difficult matter to weld the cylinders. The cost of repair will depend upon the amount of work required. Most any garage man can advise you of a responsible welding company which will do this work.

In your questions and answers column, please tell me what the "torque" on an automobile is. R. J. P.

Answer—When a charge of gas explodes within a cylinder, pressure is exerted on the piston, driving it outward. This force is delivered to the crankshaft, causing it to rotate. In a multi-cylinder motor the power impulses are staggered in a manner to give the crankshaft a continuous pull. This pulling power of the shaft is called "torque."

The rear wheels of my car still have a cracking sound after having ben tightened and kept in water. How could this be removed. B. K.

Answer—Any wheelwright should be able to remedy this trouble. The cracking sound is an indication of looseness or play in some part of the wheel. This looseness may be in the spokes or it may be in the felloe. Putting the wheel in water will tighten up the spokes for one or two days, and they will then dry out and be looser than they ever were. The only thing you can do is to take the wheel to a good wheelwright and have a permanent job made.

Will appreciate information regarding the following: I have a car and it runs all right when not in gear, but while running slow, or more so on a hill, it misses on one or two cylinders. How often would you advise me to pour kerosene in the cylinders and how much to each cylinder? When the gas is advanced quick the engine stops running. Is it too much gas or too much air? Is lighting from the magneto advisable? Haw can I tell if valves need grinding or piston rings not good; car has been run 5,000 miles How can I keep engine from back firing? C. J. R.

Answer—The miss seems to be due to poor carburetion. A readjustment of the carburetor should help to reduce this. Also clean and test spark plugs.

A tablespoonful of kerosene in each cylinder about every hundred miles will prove to advantage.

When the throttle is opened quickly and motor stops, it usually indicates too much air. Too much air is also indicated by back firing into the carburetor.

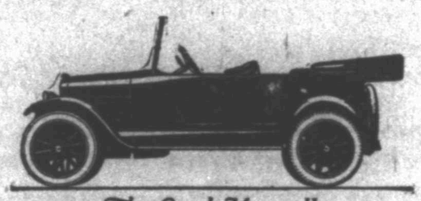

The magneto is used for ignition purposes, and unless specially designed for other purposes should not be so used.

Valves should be ground frequently. If not they will put and leak. Some motors are better than others in this respect. Usually the exhaust valves need grinding about every 2,000 miles. Loss of compression and loss of power indicate poor condition of valves and perhaps the rings.

As stated previously back firing in carburetor is caused by using too much air and having too lean a mixture. Would suggest cutting down on the air adjustment slightly.

Much interest has been aroused by the discovery of the Washington arms in a window in the north aisle of Ripon Minster, England, commemorating the Yorkshire family of the Grantleys of Markenfield, and indicating some association between the two families. Of the fifteen quarterlings the seventh—the one occupying the second place in the middle row—shows the three red five-pointed stars, below which are two red bars. This is the coat of arms borne by George Washington and his English ancestors.

Distinction That Is More Than Body-Deep

An ideal long sought—a luxurious eight-cylinder car, moderate in size, at a truly moderate price—brought forth the Model "47."

Its distinction and restrained good taste are such as you would expect only from the shops of exclusive coachmakers. And underneath this surface-smartness you will find rugged qualities that have famed this car for enduring performance, as well as fine appearance.

Its eight-cylinder motor converts energy into instant, smooth-flowing power, with a notable lack of engine vibration. Its flexibility and its quick responsiveness to every touch of the throttle are a delight in every ordeal of road travel.

Both in looks and in performance the Model "47" carries the unmistakable stamp of artistic and mechanical superiority. To the physical pleasure of perfect motoring will be added a pride in its possession that cannot be measured by its price.

If you will allow yourself to put our statements to the test of your own judgment, we will gladly place one of these cars at your disposal. Come in tomorrow.

THINK REFINED PRODUCTS WILL SOON GO HIGHER

With the usual October slump in gasoline price, with the coming of colder weather, and the consequent drop in demand from the north and east, failing to materialise, and the tank wagon quotations still somewhat up in the air, the annual convention of the Independent Oil Mens' Association, held last week in Chicago, was featured by a lack of trading among jobbers and refiners, instead of the usual brisk business, according to V. E. Jackson, the sales manager for the Texhoma Oil and Refining company, one of the local representatives of independent interests attending the meeting.

The conferences of jobbers from various parts of the country brought out the fact that the tank wagon prices had advanced only 1 or 2 cents throughout the country while the tank car quotations had advanced three to four cents since the raise in the price of oil and that, on prevailing quotations of 17 cents tank wagon, there was little or no margin of profit to the jobber, consequently the jobber is being forced to hold off on the present market, hoping that the Standard Oil and its subsidiaries and satellites in the various parts of the country will soon put up the tank wagon price to correspond with the raise in the car lot shipments.

Behind Crude Advances.

None of the advances, however, have been commensurate with the advance crude oil has experienced.

With a few exceptions, Wichita Falls refineries and plants in other parts of the county, are reported running considerably under capacity reflecting the apathy of the market.

The local market as well as points further from refining centers, is governed by the price fixed by the Standard, the refined prices being posted but, as the crude prices are posted.

The first raise in the price of gasoline, to the retail trade, and the only one so far, was first posted by the Magnolia, which marked up gasoline to 20 cents at its local filling stations, and posted corresponding advances in tank wagon quotations. This raise was immediately followed by all retailers, both the big companies and independents, but the predicted further raises in the gasoline and other refined oils has so far failed to materialize.

Expect Advance.

This is very easily explained on the part of the big companies by large stocks on hand of dollar crude, it is pointed out. Many of the independent refineries have not fared so well, but there are indications that the adjustment that is necessary will be forthcoming in a short time, to relieve the situation.

Fuel oil continues draggy in demand, with the price still around $1.25, according to week-end reports.

Inquiries are reported scarce. A further curtailment of the fuel oil market locally would result if the recent offer of natural gas companies of gas again to industrial users, but no report has yet been made on the decision of several of the largest industrial users. Some of the local factories are erecting 55,000-barrel storage tanks, to lay in a supply months in advance, and have gone to considerable expense to equip their plants for burning oil, so it is doubtful whether the return to gas as a fuel will be universal.

THE "PLANETARY" FORD.

There's a question that puzzles the whole world I know;
It's surely a mystery, you'll hear people say,
While we're turning out over four thousand per day.

But I know and I won't keep them long in suspense,
They must purchase the cheapest and best car on earth.

Perhaps some day when all earthly folks are supplied,
Ford sales will reach out to the universe wide,
We'll be shipping by airplane Ford tractors and cars,
To fill orders taken by agents on Mars.

It might prove too cold for gas cars on the moon,
But sales should be fine on the plan- et Neptune,
Will make a speedway of the broad rings of Saturn.

I know folks who read this will say I'm a nut,
And that brainstorms are raging in my occiput,
Maybe so, but just take it from a fellow who knows,

COSMOPOLITAN RACE OF 1896 UNIQUE AFFAIR

BY ALBERT ATKINSON.

Few people realize what a recent development the automobile is. Compared to the steam engine, the cotton gin and other inventions, it is hardly more than an infant. This will be very well brought out if we hark back to the Cosmopolitan road of 1896, if I am not mistaken.

John Brisben Walker offered some $3,000 in prizes to the first three cars, which would reach the offices of the Cosmopolitan at Irvington-on-the Hudson. The start was to be in City Hall Park, New York City, and bright and early one summer morning quite a fleet set sail, filled with hope, gasoline and other stimulants. Late that afternoon one lone Duryea limped out there and claimed the first prize. An hour later two other Duryea cars crossed the finish line and claimed the remaining prizes. These were the only ones to finish, the rest of the Armada having gone ashore or run on the rocks, either because the engines were not powerful enough or because they shook themselves to pieces, for it had been found that after enough parts had dropped off, the engine would stop.

By comparing past with present performances, we see what enormous gains have been made in twenty-five years. Irvington is only a short distance up the Hudson, and a New Yorker with a powerful car might run up there for breakfast and get down town to business in the early forenoon. The difference is partly due to improvements in ignition, carburetion and transmission, but it is mainly a matter of horse power.

The horse power of an engine is largely a mater of piston area and speed, although length of stroke, quality of the gasoline, amount of air present and several other factors enter into the equation. For convenience of figuring, automobile engineers use a simplified formula, which is found to work out very closely in practice. The number of the cylinders and the diameter or bore are all that must be known. The bore is multiplied by itself, this by the number of cylinders and the product divided by two and a half. This may be expressed more briefly: bore times bore, times the number of cylinders, divided by 2 1-2, and the result will be correct to a very small fraction.

In the days of the Cosmopolitan road race the engines were all single-cylinder, unbalanced, and it is small wonder that they shook themselves to pieces. They were underpowered, and when they struck too steep a grade they ignominously died. All these defects have been remedied and we take our present cars as a matter of course, but compared with progress in other industries the improvements in the automobile in the past twenty or thirty years have been little short of phenomenal.

In this day of "Shoot twenty scenes today" from the efficiency e' ', and "this picture must be on its wa to New York by Saturday" from the general manager and "You enter through this door crying" from the program director, it is a distinct relief to find a director who realizes that actors have souls and that it is too much to expect to simply ask for tears and get them. True, there are directors who tell us that they can get tears by this curt method but there is no doubt but what the tears produced by music—and in consequence real emotion—are an infinitely better brand.

Irvin V. Willat, the well-known director who is now producing "on his own" and whose second independent production, "Partners of the Tide" will be released through the W. W. Hodkinson Corporation and shown at the Gem theater next Friday thoroughly believing in using music with his emotional scenes in order to place his players in the proper mood for the scene. In carrying out his theories along this line, Mr. Willat has secured one of the best musician on the coast, Carlo Fessia, whose sole occupation is to sit beside the director-producer and play his piano accordion.

Mr. Fessia has the happy faculty of being able to watch the scene and follow the players with the proper selections in order to work their emotions up to the high pitch required. He is now one of Irvin V. Willat's personal staff.

COLLEGE INDUSTRIAL ARTS GETS STUDENTS FROM PANAMA ZONE

DENTON, Texas, Oct. 22.—The College of Industrial Arts is fast becoming known even in countries outside the United States. This year girls from the Far East and Far South have been enrolled. Misses Ruth and Annie Boyd, daughters of the general foreman of municipal engineering division, Pedro Miguel, Panama canal zone; Miss Lucie Heald, daughter of the superintendent of Panama railroads and Panama steamship line of Ancon, Canal zone; and Mrs. Marie Barker of Hong Kong, China, are among the new students at the college.

The Misses Boyd were graduated from Balboa high school, a government public school, on June 17, 1921. At present Miss Ruth is classified as a special student, while her sister and Miss Heald are taking a course in secretarial studies. They are to remain in colleg at least for two years before returning to the Canal zone. The two former are natives of Cleburne, Texas, but have made their home in Panama for the past thirteen years. Miss Heald was formerly of Clinton, Iowa, and this is her first trip to Texas. Since there are no colleges in the canal zone, in choosing a school for advanced work numerous colleges throughout the country were considered, but the type of work offered at the College of Industrial Arts, of Denton, Texas, was found to be preferable.

Mrs. Marie Andree Barker, wife of the American vice consul to Haiphon, a French colony near Hong Kong, came to this country about seven months ago to enroll for the summer session at the college. She is now continuing her work as a student of fine arts. Her husband is a Texas man, formerly of Waco; and Mrs. Barker was a student of English before coming to this country, and she is therefore fast becoming adjusted to American ways.

NORTHWESTERN IS WITHOUT ACCIDENT FOR FIVE DAYS

A record of five days without an accident, following to a letter the hopes of the railroad in the No-Accident Drive put on by the M. K. & T. lines from October 18-31, was reported Saturday by the local office of the Wichita Falls & Northwestern Railroad. With such a good record for the first five days of the drive, local railroad employes are hoping the entire period can be passed with a record of 100 per cent.

The Wichita Falls & Northwestern railroad has always been at the top of the Katy lines in the matter of operating efficiency and the local office is congratulating the employes in the continuation spirit of cooperation shown in the No-Accident drive.

SNAP THEM ROLLED DOWN.

The bobbed hair fad and the style of rolling down the stockings to a point below the knee have helped the photographers, who make a specialty of developing and printing pictures for the amateur photographer, according to one of them. Every girl, who has had her hair bobbed wants a record of it and the result is a close-up (as they say in the Movie) of her smiling countenance showing the bobbed-ness of the bobbing. Also the new style of being photographed showing an ample expanse of horse—generally rolled down—has helped keep the developer busy.

FITTS WANTS CITY READER OF GAS METERS

An inspector who shall be employed by the city to make regular inspections of the gas meters, will be sought in an ordinance which J. B. Fitts, fire and police commissioner, says he will submit to the city council at the next meeting.

The object in the creation of this proposed office, Mr. Fitts says, is to give the consumer some protection during the coming winter by having a regularly appointed inspector who shall have jurisdiction over this public utility and who shall hear all complaints of overcharges, and investigate any matters which may be called to the attention of the city of Wichita Falls.

YOKOHAMA'S GROWTH.

"When Yokohama was first opened to trade in 1850," according to Torsotita, Passenger Traffic Manager of the Department of Railways of Japan, visiting in this country, "it was a fishing village of 100 huts. Today it has a population of more than 400,000 and two-fifths of Japan's foreign trade passes through it. It has as many natural qualifications for a port as New York city."

COMPLETIONS FEW THROUGHOUT DISTRICT; PRAIRIE WELL IS FEATURE; SCARCITY OF WATER

The No. 1 Martin of Ramsey, et al, which started flowing 100 barrels when drilling in the top of the lime, is reported completed for a 350 barrel producer, after a shot, top of the lime 3,150 feet.

The No. 1 Langford of the Union League Oil Company, formerly reported as the Pacific Union Oil Company is reported flowing 100 barrels of oil, and making 16,000,000 feet of gas, from the lime at 3,150 feet.

The Mid-Kansas Oil and Gas Company's No. 1 Smith is reported making 100 barrels, 3,370 feet.

South Stephens Few Completions.

The best well reported for the week here is the No. 2 Henderson of the Sinclair Oil and Gas, which after a shot at 3,260 feet increased its flow to 300 barrels.

Shackleford County.

Wichita County.

Due to water shortage in both the Electra and Burkburnett shallow fields, where the drilling operations are bulked in this county, there have been no completions to report during the past week. Wells due for completion have been delayed by lack of water, and it has been impossible to start new ones. The situation is particularly bad in the South Electra field, where there are a half dozen wells due to be drilled down to the new 1,900 and 1,800-foot sands, from the shallower producing sands, some of the half dozen being at sand depth at present, but unable to proceed further until water is secured.

In the Archer county-Texhoma pool one new well is reported on the sand, the Texhoma's No. 10 Gose, due to drill in the first of next week.

The Texhoma is rigging up on its No 2 Coffman, Yates, and preparations are reported under way to drill the J. J. Perkins No. 3 Coffman, a half mile south of the most recent completion, the No. 2 now flowing and swabbing 150 barrels daily, while rigging up to pump. A thrid new rig to start in a short time is the No. 3 Taylor of Harper and Jones.

BUNGER POOL GETS ITS BIGGEST COMPLETION TO DATE; ALSO ITS THIRD LINE WITH FOURTH LIKELY

The Bunger pool had its fourth producer completed this week, the Ross and Tyrell or Rosell Petroleum Company, No. 1 Owens, B, being drilled in Thursday night, and responding with the biggest production yet recorded by the wells of the new pool. The well had an initial flow, by heads of 300 barrels, according to the latest reports, this coming from four feet of sand. The sand was drilled at 1,900 feet, total depth when the flow was started being 1,904 feet.

This new well is 600 feet north of the discovery well of the pool, the Ross and Tyrell No. 1 Owens. These operations are now carried on under the name of the Roscell Petroleum Company.

After several weeks shut down for water, and waiting on connections, the Union Oil Company's No. 1 Askew, the first of the Bunger tests to get the 1,900-foot oil sand, though the third to successfully drill in, is reported on the pump, and making around fifty barrels. The production is not as large as previous estimates have been given. The well is about two and a half miles from the other three producers in the neighborhood, and appears to be on the edge of the pool, from all present indications.

The Ross and Tyrell No. 1 Askew, just east of the Union Askew well is reported drilling around 1,950 feet.

Bunger Wildcat.

The East Bunger wildcat, the Jackson and Cathcart on the Lisle, not far from the old Lisle gasser, drilled several years ago by the Empire Oil and Gas Company, has been finally abandoned, an order to plug having been issued by the oil and gas supervision, following the company's application, according to reports from the field. The operators planned to plug the well some weeks ago, finally reconsidering and drilling deeper. A few feet of sand was encountered at 2,985 feet, and after a shot showed up for only ten or fifteen barrels production. It was then drilled down below 3,100 feet, with no change in the prospects.

The Parson's wildcat of the Barnes Production Company is reported drilling again, after a several weeks shut-down for water. It is drilling around 2,250 feet now.

Exceet Early Completion.

The Hedrick and Spoonts, No. 3 Driver will probably be completed some time this coming week, being drilling around 1,780 feet the latter part of the week. The No. 2 same lease is reported drilling around 1,160 feet.

The No. 2 Owens of the Sims Oil Company is reported drilling around 1,800 feet and the No. 1 down around 780 feet.

The Chaney, et al, No. 1 Grimshaw is drilling around 1,250 feet. The Chaney test on the Askew is still a location, and the No. 2 Grimshaw is a rig.

Has Third Line.

The Bunger District has its third pipeline, a four-inch of the Humble Pipeline Company, completed this past week. The pipe has been strung, but no connections have been made, presumably because there is not enough oil yet being produced by the four wells, to go around.

There are rumors of a fourth pipeline to be built to this new pool, the Pierce Oil Corporation being reported preparing to entr the field. Operators can not but feel that the pipeline companies must be very optimistic over the prospects in the new pool, though present developments have failed of sensations. The South Bend pool, along the Clear Fork, was without pipeline connections for some time, and after the first line was in, was still without adequate facilities for caring for the production, for some time, but this difficulty will probably not be suffered by the new Bunger pool. It seems likely, however, that there will be material increases to the production within a short time, as the close in tests are nearing the sand depth.

Picking up the 2,500-foot sand of the South Bend pool to the west, is also considered a possibility, by some who has studied the logs of wells in the two pools. The Paragon No. 1 on the Vick is drilling for this sand, as is the Barnes Production Company on the Persons. The Union Oil Company's No. 1 State Lands is also nearing this deeper sand level.

In the 2,100-foot sand W. E. Connor, et al, have a 175-barrel well reported for their No. 4 McCluskey. On the west side of the river the Godley Oil Company's No. 17 Graham is reported making 150 barrels from the sand at 2,100 feet. A third completion is due, the Panhandle Refinery Company's No. 16 McCluskey being reported drilling in, on the 2,100 foot sand.

The No. 5 McCluskey of Conner, et al, is reported drilling around 2,070 feet, and will probably be a completion of next week.

The Eureka Production Company has a new rig reported on the McCluskey, its No. 6 and the No. 11 Graham is a new location.

The Hemphill No. 4 Keller is still a rig and the No. 5 a location.

The Petrol Oil Company is reported spudding in its No. 7 McCluskey.

The North American Oil and Refining Company is reported reaming at 2,960 feet in its No. 1 B. F. Scott, and its No. 3 Burgess still a rig.

Reports from the Stovall plantation, north of the producing pool shows the Konowa Oil and Gas Company's No. 1 still shut down around 2,900 feet, and the No. 1 of A Bevarqua shut down around 1,500 feet, waiting on pipe.

Elissville Wildcats.

The test of the A. B. and F. Oil Company in the river bed, Section 1019, T. & E. L., is reported shut down around 3,000 feet.

The Prairie Oil and Gas Company' No. 2-B Akers, North Stephens, reported flowing 600 barrels, while cleaning out after a shot in the grey lime at 3,200 feet, is one of the features of an unusually slow week of operations in the entire North and Central Texas district. The Prairie well is reported not yet completed, and it is thought that its production will probably improve still more, when cleaning out is completed. This same company's No. 1 Langston, same pool, is reported flowing at the rate of 300 barrels and cleaning put after an 80-quart shot. Top of the lime is reported 3,200 feet.

South Stephens Few Completions.

In South Stephens county the completions are few, and lacking in any unusual interest, according to reports.

The Petrol Oil Company is reported spudding in its No. 7 McCluskey.

The North American Oil and Refining Company is reported reaming at 2,900 feet in its No. 1 B. F. Scott, and its No. 3 Burgess still a rig.

Eliasville Wildcats.

The test of the A. B. and P. Oil Company in the river bed, Section 1019, T. & E. L., is reported shut down around 3,000 feet.

BY H. N. F.

"Do you want to encumber your property to secure a bond issue of $4,500,000 to procure a water supply which cannot be used for any purpose except to flush sewers?"

This is the question propounded to the tax payers of Wichita Improvement District Number 1, through the medium of a circular sent by the circular route, by one Mr. R. L. More of Vernon, Wilbarger county, Texas. H. N. F. hasn't been a resident of Wichita Improvement District Number 1 for many months but he received one of the circulars.

Now who is Mr. R. L. More? According to representative and reputable citizens he is the business agent of and for Mr. W. T. Waggoner, the owner of a six hundred thousand acre tract of land in one enclosure some of the land in the proposed irrigated district.

It appears that this gentleman, not Mr. Waggoner but his agent, sent a jug of water to a Chicago chemist with instructions to analyze the same and according to the aforesaid Mr. More the water in the big Wichita river and the rain water which floods the immense water shed cannot be used for any purpose except to flush sewers.

Speaking as an authority on water, a theoretical chemist and, which is more important than all else, as the agent of Mr. W. T. Waggoner, the aforesaid Mr. More is of the opinion that the water flowing in the Big Wichita river is "unfit for irrigation, industrial or domestic use."

To all the taxpayers who are the recipients of his circular and his wholly disinterested advice, and moved wholly by his spirit of philanthropy and his love for his fellowmen and their dollars and their future, Mr. More suggests that they make for themselves "an independent investigation."

Age of Philanthropy.

This is the age of philanthropy and philanthropists are everywhere in evidence. It is a pleasure to introduce to the public as Exhibit A, Mr. W. T. Waggoner, as Exhibit B, the agile and indefatigable amateur chemist and guardian of the rights of the people, Mr. More, and if Exhibit A should be necessary the writer would be willing to draw upon twelve of the sixteen land barons of Clay county who defeated the two million road bond issue giving as an excuse that the poor people of the county, the small farmer and the stock raisers could not afford to vote a tax upon themselves even to remove the stigma that Clay county carries of having the most miserable public highways in all Texas.

"Love thy neighbor as thyself" has ever been the Christian slogan of Mr. Waggoner, Mr. More and no doubt the twelve land barons who bled inwardly during the campaign for good roads for fear that the people in the towns and farming communities of Clay county would be taxed to death.

Of course sixteen men own two hundred thousand acres of land in Clay county and the balance of the population own the remaining four hundred thousand acres. Four of the sixteen were champions of the bond issue. Twelve of the sixteen preferred no roads for travel and traffic if their little neighbors in city and county were asked to pay for the construction of highways.

Of course these philanthropists on rendition day place a taxable value of six dollars per acre on their holdings while the "other people" are compelled to render their land at twelve dollars per acre. But why disgress. Back to Mr. R. L. More and his particular jug of water.

Medicine for Mr. More.

There is an average annual rainfall at Wichita Falls of approximately 27 inches and the drainage area of the Big Wichita river above Wichita Falls is approximately 3540 square miles. This isn't guess work. Flood waters of the Big Wichita river have been analyzed by the foremost chemists of the country for alkalinity. These chemists are men of national reputation and high repute. They reported that the chemical content of alkalinity is apparently 592 parts per million.

Moreover the experts' report submitted after this analysis had been made declared emphatically the flood water is very excellent irrigation water. Mark you the Rio Grande in South Texas has an alkali of about the same per cent and the lower Rio Grande Valley since irrigation came has become one of the wonders of America in richness of soil and productivity and bearing of crops. There are found truck gardens second to none in America; orchards that rival those of Calfiornia and Florida; gardens that yield prolificly the year round.

This Vernon amateur chemist and agent of the owner of a six hundred thousand acre tract in or on the fringe of the proposed irrigated district should journey to the lower Rio Grande Valley and supply his already marvelous mental store house with information relative to the flood waters of the Rio Grande in the lower country and then he should journey to the upper Rio Grande Valley near The Pass to the North, that noble city perched on the Texas side of the Rio Grande, and see what irrigation has done for the valley dwellers and the citizens of El Paso who own alfalfa farms or stock farms or truck farms in the section irrigated by water from the Rio Grande river, which has an alkali content of about the same per cent as the flood waters of the Big Wichita river.

Of Course He Has.

Of course Mr. More has heard of the Pecos country. He has heard of the irrigation districts of the Pecos country if he is a reading man, and he is, he must know that an irrigated acre planted in cotton has been known to produce three bales where the fleecy staple plant refused to grow before the coming of the irrigation ditch. That his mind might be well stored H. N. F. tells him on the authority of eminent engineers that the Pecos waters successfully used for irrigation purposes contains a much greater percentage of alkali than the Big Wichita river waters and must be used with care. Waving this aside, the irrigated lands of the Pecos are highly productive and wealth making and one acre of irrigated soil will produce larger returns than ten unirrigated acres.

Everywhere in the Laredo section of Texas the champion of irrigation and reclamation is in evidence and yet the Rio Grande in south Texas and the Rio Grande in Laredo, has about fifty per cent greater alkali content than the Big Wichita river flood waters.

In addition to this the Brazos at Waco according to the eminent engineers, fortified by the reports of reputable and experienced chemists, contains about twice as much alkali as the water branded by the Vernon philanthropist as "fit only for the purpose of flushing sewers."

Expert testimony is as conclusive testimony or direct evidence as can be obtained by the investigator in quest of knowledge or an ardent seeker on the trail of truth. These eminent engineers referred to in their report on the irrigation project under discussion and the source of the water supply and the quality of the supply itself return this scientific finding:

"We believe that no difficulty will be encountered from such alkali as indicated in the Wichita river unless the soil is allowed to become waterlogged. This should not occur in this district because the drainage outlets are from fair to excellent and because the district is located in a region where frequent and repeated irrigations will not be necessary AND WHERE THERE IS SUFFICIENT RAINFALL TO ASSIST IN REMOVING ANY ALKALI THAT MAY ACCUMULATE."

Site of Storage Reservoir.

Again the reader is reminded that the Wichita irrigation plan provides for the construction of a dam across Wichita river and valley, about fifty miles above Wichita Falls, for the purpose of collecting and storing the flood waters of the river; a diversion dam about thirty miles above Wichita Falls to divert water from the river into the irrigation canals and the construction of a system of canals to supply water to each tract of land in the area to be irrigated.

It is interesting to note that the storage reservoir lies in Baylor county; that 17,800 acres of land will be submerged at the spillway level and that the capacity with the water at that elevation will be 444,000 acre feet. Mr. More, agent and amteur chemist and philanthropist, is familiar with the Baylor county reservoir site selected and if he will study the history of irrigation in ancient and modern times, he will be in a position to tell his client that the latter's land values will be appreciated or advanced many millions of dollars by the coming of irrigation to this section of Texas.

"Considered from the standpoint of colonization alone this is the most favorable irrigation project that we have ever examined," is the conclusion or verdict of the noted Morgan Engineering Company.

Why attempt to hamstring or handicap men who would see this section of Texas, all sections of Texas, become populous and wealth producing and some day in the near future at the head of the procession of states in people and wealth and enterprise and intelligence and patriotism.

Place for His Focus.

Mr. R. L. More should focus his eagle orbs upon the Imperial Valley of California, the Salt River Valley, or other places on the map where land that was not worth one cent a square mile before irrigation came is now worth a thousand dollars per acre and will produce on that valuation.

He is reminded that the state of Iowa is the premier agricultural state of the union; that its products are the most valuable; that there is more land tilled in proportion to the acreage of the state than any other state in the union; that its total area is something like 36,000,000 of acres.

He is reminded that the total area of the irrigated lands in the United States do not total one-third of thirty-six million acres, and yet the value of the products of the irrigated land is over twice the value of the products of the entire state of Iowa—or in the simple language of the people (words if you please) an acre of irrigated land is worth six times the best average of unirrigated land.

Mr. More claims to have an analytical mind, and acting as agent for the proprietor of a six hundred thousand acre tract of land, he says he engaged the services of another analytical mind to make a chemical analysis of the waters of the big Wichita river.

Why Should He?

Why should he have gone away from home?

Why should he have sent his jug to the city of stockyards and political stench?

Why didn't he pay a visit to some of the small farms subject to irrigation in the county of Wichita?

Why didn't he interview the farmers who know the value of impounded flood waters for irrigation purposes?

Why didn't he go to the lower Rio Grande Valley?

Why didn't he go to the upper Rio Grande Valley?

In the not distant future, there will be a hundred irrigation projects launched in Texas and millions of acres of idle or non-productive land will be transformed into farms and orchards and gardens. Every year thousands of wealth makers will be added to the population of the commonwealth and millions of dollars to its taxable wealth and all this by the magical flow as the flood waters are caught and conserved in storage reservoirs by the progressive builders and developers of the state.

Of course, Mr. More, agent for the gentleman who holds six hundred thousand acres in one enclosure, would use this stored fluid which gives life to all living things, to "flush sewers" and for no other purpose.

This is his American privilege. It is the American privilege of his client or employer but the vast bulk of the people of Texas intend to make use of impounded flood waters for a higher and a nobler and a more developing purpose.

They are going to do their part to make Texas the most productive of all the states, the most advanced, the most civilized, the most humane and the most inviting to investment seekers and home seekers of other states and other countries.

Senator Oscar W. Underwood Possesses Rare Faculty of Making Friends of Enemies

WASHINGTON, Oct. 22.—The rare faculty of making warm friendships among even those who differ with him politically or otherwise is one of the happy characteristics of Senator Oscar W. Underwood, the only democrat on the American "Big Four."

Aside from his recognition of the unusual mental attainments of the democratic minority leader of the senate, President Harding is believed to have been actuated by a deep personal regard for the Alabama senator in designating him as one of the American "Big Four" at the Washington conference.

In the long, rancorous senatorial fight over the treaty of Versailles and the League of Nations covenant Harding, then a senator, and Underwood entertained and expressed widely divergent opinions. They were on different sides of the political fence. But however they differed they became and remained fast friends.

In some ways the two men possess strikingly similar characteristics. Both are large men—physically. Both have an infectious smile, a countenance given to fullness and to beaming tolerance and good nature, a girth inclined to embonpoint—the Falstaffian disposition to seek from life that which is pleasant rather than unpleasant.

And yet both can be very serious, deadly in earnest, when they find themselves in disagreement with others, when things do not "break" for them as they would like them to.

Uses Irony Dexterously

Underwood is slow to enter a senate debate. He will sit hour after hour in his seat, usually motionless, his face expressionless, while democratic orators storm about him, or one of his democratic colleagues delivers a long-winded speech. Even an oratorical outburst on the republican side will apparently leave him unmoved. He is a "good listener."

Then suddenly he will pull himself together, and no member of the senate commands closer or more interested attention from both sides than when he begins to speak. Born at Louisville, Kentucky, May 6, 1862, and an Alabamian by adoption, his utterances reflect the soft, caressing accents of the Southerner. His delivery is forcible, he is a keen debater, deliberate but skillful in parrying the thrust of an opponent. Irony is a weapon he employs with dexterity. His clearly stated utterances never leave any doubt as to where he stands on a public question.

Underwood has a pleasing, gracious manner even in defeat. He may criticize his opponents, he may even "ride" them hard, but he invariably commands their respect, and, in many instances, their friendship. Personally he is well liked by both his republican and democratic colleagues.

Underwood has never quite lost the hope he first placed in the League of Nations. He was never, however, a side-bound adherent of the Wilson administration, a mirror of the views and wishes of former President Woodrow Wilson.

Foresaw Treaty Trouble

"The Treaty of Versailles, a pact growing out of the compromises of twenty-six nations, did not entirely meet my views," he said when addressing the senate on one occasion, "but I thought, in the main, it first led to immediate peace, and finally, through the League of Nations covenant, it led to conditions that in the future would secure the peace of the world. I was willing to take and to try it."

It was Underwood who saw, long before most democratic senators and when Woodrow Wilson refused to believe it, that ratification of the Versailles pact without reservations was impossible. It was then he renewed his efforts to save the treaty from ultimate defeat—by conciliation and compromise. He unsuccessfully sought to secure the appointment of a nonpartisian committee of ten senators "to consider ways and means of securing at the earliest possible moment" its ratification.

Underwood is a lawyer, and, if unhindered by the partisanship of some of his democratic colleagues, he might have succeeded where others failed in effecting an agreement with "counsel for the other side" in the celebrated case of the republican majority versus Woodrow Wilson.

Even as late as May 27 last Underwood sought to have the republican majority of the senate accept a democratic resolution requesting the president to express to the council of the League of Nations the desire of the American government to co-operate with it in plans "looking toward a general reduction of armament."

Underwood said on that occasion: "If there is one great question that confronts the world today and which the world must decide affirmatively in order to save itself, it is the question of abandoning the great armies and navies of the past and agreeing on a policy of disarmament that will settle national difficulties and dangers by the rule of reason and not by the rule of the sword."

Regrets Non-Ratification

"I realize the position of the majority party," Underwood continued. "They determined on the policy that this country should not join the League of Nations. They claimed that that determination was ratified at the polls last year. I do not say it was not one of the great questions involved in the last campaign, but as to how far it went in the determination of the last election no man at this time can say. In my judgment the reaction against war conditions that took place in every nation of the world had more to do with the enormous majority given to President Harding than any other question.

"But I recognize that it would be idle to propose that the majority party should reverse its position and affirmatively become a member of the League of Nations. I would not waste the time of the senate in contending for such a proposition notwithstanding that I believe the great mistake of this generation was that the senate did not promptly ratify the Versailles Treaty.

"But that is not the question. It is a condition that confronts us and not a theory. No man can deny that the nations of Europe and the world, except ourselves and one or two other countries, are in a League of Nations. How far it may be effective is not the question. It is an organization that has proclaimed to the world that it is prepared to stand for disarmament throughout the world. It seems to me that when it declares for disarmament it is an effective declaration.

"I do not see that the majority party would cross its own record when, on the invitation of the League of Nations, not to join it but to consult with its members about disarmament, we were to send representatives to meet an organized body of the nations of the world looking to the consummation of a great ideal. If we believe in the disarmament of the world I consider it our duty now to accept every offer that may bring about the consummation of that ideal.

Not a Pacifist

"I believe that this nation should officially inform those who belong to an organization seeking disarmament that they will have our hearty concurrence and approval in any efforts that may be made looking to lifting the burdens of war from the backs of the people of the world."

That speech of Underwood's was typical of his oft-expressed desire for a limitation of armaments, for world peace, of his willingness "to take and to try" the Treaty of Versailles and the League of Nations covenant, or any other means offering any hope at all of relieving the peoples of the world from the crushing, grinding weight of warfare and the weapons of warfare.

And yet Underwood cannot be called a "Little Navy" man, nor a pacifist. His record in the senate clearly shows that he believes in preparedness. He was found on June 1 last voting with Senator Henry Cabot Lodge and other republican senators against a move to recommit the then pending Navy Appropriations bill to the Senate Naval Affairs committee, with instructions to deduct $200,000,000 from its general total.

The move was blocked by a vote of 43 nays, 25 yeas. Senator Borah, of Idaho, then fighting to have his original disarmament proposal adopted as an amendment to the bill, supported the move. Other republican senators, like Capper, of Kansas; La Follette, of Wisconsin, and Norris, of Nebraska, did likewise. A number of democratic senators joined them, but Underwood, without uttering a word during the debate that ensued, swung, with a few other democratic senators, to the side of Senators Lodge, Poindexter and other republican members of the senate naval affairs committee in helping to prevent a "Bigger Navy" appropriations bill from being "killed."

Underwood fought the adoption of the Knox peace resolution which brought about the present German-American peace treaty. He accused the republican majority of saying to Germany, "Without our ratifying the Treaty of Versailles, without our becoming a party to it, you must accept its terms and its burdens."

Tilt With Harding

He charged the republicans with "building a wall of paper," of "resorting to camouflage," in seeking to make a separate peace with Germany by Congressional resolution.

"Republican senators must believe the American people very, very blind if they think the smoke clouds of this resolution are going to fool the American people," he added.

That was on May 15, 1920, and Underwood's utterances brought from Harding, then a senator, the following response: "The significance of the Knox resolution lies in its reestablishment of the Constitutional powers of the American congress. It not only does that but it particularly emphasizes the powers of the senate as a co-ordinate body in the making of treaties. I like to think the Knox resolution is going to do for America what the World War did for the autocrat of Germany. The World War demonstrated that no one man and that no one power can rule the world, and the Knox resolution is going to be a formal demonstration that no one man can run the United States of America!"

Is Presidential Timber

This from Harding less than a year before he entered the White House. Underwood's reply was that the Knox resolution was "merely a political play." Harding's contention was that it was the restoration to the senate of its constitutional prerogatives in the making of a treaty which Woodrow Wilson had attempted to deny it.

Underwood is as ripe as Lodge in Congressional experience, as adroit in parliamentary maneuvers, as gifted in reading the minds and motives of men and in impressing them with his viewpoint. He is perhaps more tolerant of opposition than Lodge, more given to compromise and conciliation, better satisfied with half a loaf than none.

Underwood served as a member of the house from the Fifty-fourth to the Sixty-third congresses, inclusive, and as chairman of the house ways and means committee his name became a household one as the author of the present Underwood Tariff law, which a republican majority is now vainly trying to successfully revise.

Underwood did not enter the senate until March 4, 1915, but long before that he had become as commanding a figure in the highest councils of the democratic party as Lodge, for years a senator, had become one of the foremost men of the republican party.

At the historic Baltimore convention of the democrats which sent Woodrow Wilson on his way to the White House Underwood was among those who narrowly missed the democratic nomination for president. He has been considered of presidential timber ever since, and he may yet live to see the time when he will be called upon to lead his party to the polls, if not to the White House. He is as seasoned and as wise in the national political game as Lodge, and like the Massachusetts senator, he will bring to the Washington conference a thorough knowledge of men and affairs that ought to stand him in good stead with foreign statesmen and diplomats versed in the intricacies of international politics.

BY JOE BUCKINGHAM.

AUSTIN, Texas, Oct. 23.—Declaring that "it is easier for a camel to pass through the eye of a needle than for a European to get an American passport vised by an American consul in Europe, Prof. Max S. Handman criticised the whole foreign consular service, in the midst of an address before the government seminary meeting at the University of Texas recently. Dr. Handman, professor of sociology in the University, was speaking from his experiences in European countries, where he made an extended tour during the summer.

Professor Handman exonerated his country's immigration law from blame for the faculty conditions handicapping travel there, but charged American consuls with inefficiency and deliberate attempts to delay Europeans endeavoring legitimately to travel to American shores, every possible excuse, he asserted, is given to avoid serving the European traveler.

Discussing general transportation facilities throughout Europe, Professor Handman declared that the express purpose of every government on the continent is to delay passage from one country to another of both persons and freight. He related in a vivid manner his own experiences with governmental officials—how one had waked him in the middle of the night to see if his face matched the picture on his passport; how another had carefully gone through his clothing, expressing a curiosity for all his luggage that was "most complimentary but most annoying."

The speaker decried existing moral conditions in Europe, saying in his whimsical manner, "I didn't see any morals around in Europe." Denying that there has been af avorable moral reaction from the world war, Professor Handman asserted that family life is completely ruined in those countries directly affected by the war.

No Respect for Decencies.

There is no respect, he stated for the common decencies of pre-war days. "If anybody wants any proof that war is good, he'd better not go to Europe to get it," said Professor Handman.

He commented on the enormous amount of spending which goes on daily in all European countries, saying that in cities where people are starving in great numbers seats for the opera are unobtainable, the demand is so heavy. Gorgeously dressed persons fill the cafes and theaters, while the decent populace remains at home wearing old clothes.

The spenders, he declared, are all profiteers. When asked why their excess wealth was not taken from that class of citizens by their governments, Professor Handman explained by saying, "You can't keep up with the profiteer, you know. You take some, he takes more."

Professor Handman recurred often during his talk to the inadequacy of transportation facilities and the utter lack of transportation system, evils he declared prevalent in all European countries. He explained the difficulty of getting seats in the first class coaches, the insufferable conditions in second and third class coaches—which he said he "looked at, but dared not ride in,"—and the long waits at border towns which lengthen all railroad trips to an inexcusable extent, according to the speaker.

Explaining the necessity for always having a passport at hand, Professor Handman told how he secured a permit to leave Paris by accidentally having learned the active value of a sizable tip in the hands of the municipal authorities of that city. In another European city, he was asked by the chief of police "why didn't you let me know you were here" when he asked for a transportation permit to take him to another country. Thereupon, Professor Handman averred, he determined that before his next visit there the magistrate should have a telegram notifying him of the American traveler's approach.

Tip Evil a Science.

The tip evil Professor Handman depicted as a perfected science. He found in all of Europe, he said, one man who would not take a tip. "I think he must have been wounded in the war—there was surely something wrong with him," vouched the speaker. He asserted that such a vital portion of European commerce as freight transportation is controlled and corrupted by the practice of tipping.

Often a deficiency is found in a car carrying a load of goods, he said, and the official warns the shipper that a change of conveyances is necessary before the load can proceed. A tip under such circumstances, the speaker added, brings about a marvelous transformation, and a perfectly wonderful car has contained the goods all the while. Such a wonderful one, in fact, that no change is necessary and the delay is entirely avoided—by the tip.

As an example of the delay in sending telegraph messages, Professor Handman told of having sent a telegram from Barcelona to Roumania which required fourteen days to reach while he made the trip by rail in six days.

"The rest details," he said, were too unpleasant to relate, and so Professor Handman gave his hearers what he characterized as a "little cross-section of European peace." "Nobody knows what it's all about," he avowed, "although military occupation continues and misunderstandings between the nations are deplorable common."

Explaining that no effort is being made to remedy existing conditions, physical or moral, Professor Handman said that the common people do not care what happens next and cannot get excited about any emergency. They are [illegible] and no longer jump at the sight of a fountain pen or an airplane. "The peasants of Europe are blase," said the speaker, "and all of the want to get out of the country at once or stay there and get infamously rich."

The desire to have a good time exists among all classes, and the Europeans are having a good time in their usual way. There is opportunity for a dictator now, Professor Handman believes, for the people are in such a mental state that they will follow any leader, good or bad.

Don't Care Attitude Dangerous.

As an example of the treachery of indifference Professor Handman cited Greece and Turkey, fighting again although worn to threads by the world war at its worst. He also spoke of "Spain in Morocco carrying the torch of civilization to the moors." There, he said, the unexpected happened, for the Moors did not want the torch and instead started shooting up the Spaniards. This attitude on their part, he declared, was "very rude and not what was intended."

Denying that the newspapers of Europe present a true picture of conditions on the continent, Professor Handman said that an observer of the press of Europe would believe that everybody there has some expressed animosity against everybody else. The root of the appalling unrest, he declared, was wholly indifference.

Europe lost its opportunity to have a leader capable of re-establishing respect for right or moral order when America failed to respond to its needs, Handman concluded. He quoted the apt remark of a European peasant, who summed up the existing disorderly situation by saying "What we need is a master." "Do not be surprised," he said forcefully, "at anything that happens in Epurope. The entire population there is demoralized, and there is a general uncertainty as to what will happen tomorrow."

Leaders Greedy Self-Seekers.

Stigmatizing the governmental leaders as greedy self-seekers, Professor Handman said succession occurred in the principal offices only when one man had made enough money to retire on and he decided to give another fellow a chance. The governmental authorities are striving to find a mysterious cause for the depreciation of foreign exchange, he insisted, and are like "blind men in a dark cellar looking for a black cat that isn't there."

"They are anxious to get hold of the American dollar there, too," the speaker remarked by way of parenthesis. His characteristic humor pervaded the entire address, and his poignant description gave his hearers a vivid back ground for hi convictions.

Professor Handman lamented the European disorder, which he admitted affected countires not actually participants in the war, but said that he could only warn against lethargy. The whole situation he considered too uncertain for philosophic conjecture.

"What will happen," he said in conclusion, "I leave to those of you who are writing the history of the present."

And still most of the possibilities of motion pictures remain unexplored! What with the films supplanting books in surgery, history, physics, geography and other sciences, one of its most profound students is sponsor for an amazing prediction for the world of art. It is no less an authority than John P. McCarthy for years one of the mainstays of D. W. Griffith's organization, who has pioneered with "the great master of the cinema" as an artistic executive. When Mr. McCarthy stepped out as the head of his own producing organization, it was to make real a theory of art's evolution long cherished. Now that his first production, "Out of the Dust" is on the screen, he speaks as one who has proven his case, instead of theorizing.

Mr. McCarthy believes that a Rubens or a Rembrandt or a Whistler would, in his time, have looked upon the cinema camera as method of expression had it been perfected in that day. He says that to visualize an emotion or idea with the dumb figures of the painters' or sculptors' art is but one of the steps toward ideal expression. The very fact that great artists will occasionally fail in conveying the full intention of a work, proves that art is still struggling with form of delineation not completely satisfactory, and it is science which has come to the rescue in the form of motion pictures, says Mr. McCarthy, the films being a combination of science and art.

In the very first attempt to prove his theory, Mr. McCarthy has achieved signal success. He selected Frederic Remington for his experiment, and the choice was a fortunate one. With a published book of Remingtons by way of introduction, the story of "Out of the Dust" unfolds group after group of living Remington counterparts. No action is "held" for any instant, not a still pose is used throughout, yet the spectator who has ever seen the unforgettable Remingtons, will immediately recognize their living prototypes in "Out of the Dust." Such well-known subjects as "Caught in the Circle," "The Sentinel," "The Advance," "The Christmas Carol," "The Night Attack," "Latest News," and others are preserved in all of their atmosphere. While it is impossible, of course, to reproduce the artists' original colorings, light effects are used which give all the interpretation of a tinted print.

Mr. McCarthy tells, interestingly, how the idea came to him: "To me my mentor, Griffith, has always been firstly an artist, then a stage director, then a builder. His work is based on a mixture of elements, like a painter who places certain colors in readiness to draw with, only that Griffith's palette holds the colors of life itself. He draws its pictures in all their various lights and shadows—tragedy, comedy, joy and despair are his to conjure with, and the deeds of his actors are but the implements of the artisan who uses them for interpretations through his chosen method of expression.

"A Rubens, a Rafael or a Michelangelo would quickly concede me my point—that the film school of expression is a scientific evolution in the art of interpretation, and already its advantages are recommending themselves to students. When it is remembered that motion pictures are responsible for the diffused focus school of photography—that vague, shimmery effect which the public has learned to like, it will be all the more expected that the screen should open new vistas of artistic possibilities.

"While it may sound revolutionary at this time, I expect to see two developments of the motion pictures influence: One is that men of renown in painting, sculpture and decorating will adopt the motion picture as their field; the other is that motion pictures will eventually be exhibited as gallery material for audiences other than those of the theater, because artists will mould in cinemaphotography."

It is in order to carry out completely the Remington idea that the Empress theater is endeavoring to arrange for an exhibition of the Remington paintings in this city.

An interesting pose of Claire Windsor.

Now comes Dame Rumor, who, being duly sworn, deposeth and sayeth that Claire Windsor, movie queen, and not Mae Collins, is to become Mrs. Charlie Chaplin on the return of the funny-footed comedian. Neither Claire nor Mae will say aye, yes or nix, so there the matter rests.

Twelve stellar players and a supporting cast of unrivalled quility—that's the record set by Cecil B. DeMille's latest Paramount masterpiece "The Affairs of Anatol" which will be shown for one week at the Palace theater opening Monday. The ros reads like screendom's who's who. The phrase "all-star cast" is a much abused one but it adequately describes a cast that includes Wallace Reid, famous Paramount star; Gloria Swanson, Elliott Dexter, Bebe Daniels, Monte Blue, Wanda Hawley, Theodore Roberts, Agnes Ayres, Theodore Kosloff, Polly Moran, Raymond Hatton and Julia Faye.

Nothing like this cast in the way of aggregate talent has ever been assembled before. The drawing power of almost any of the names on the roll has been sufficient to awaken the interest of the discriminating public. Here, for the first time, they appearing in a single production under the direction of a master producer—Cecil B. DeMille.

"The Affairs of Anatol" was written by Jeanie Macpherson, author of many notable Cecil B. DeMille productions. Her story was suggested by Arthur Schnitzler's scintillating comedy of the same name.

The same quality that is featured in the cast of principals and in the authorship has been carried through every phrase of production work. The supporting cast includes such capable actors as Guy Oliver, Charles Ogle, Clarence Geldart, Maude Wayne, Ruth Miller, William Boyd, Lucien Littlefield, and others. The beautiful settings are the work of Paul Iribe, famous French artist, designer and decorator.

SCREEN VERSION OF RIP VAN WINKLE AT STRAND THIS WEEK

This is the screen version of "Joe" Jefferson's famous stage play and the title role is in the hands of Thomas Jefferson, his no-less-gifted son. And in Mr. Jefferson's supporting cast are included of the screen's most popular players, among them Francis Carpenter, Gertrude Messinger, Mary Anderson, Daisy Robinson, Milla Davenport, Max Asher, Pietro Bosso and Ted Billings.

The story tells of the adventures that befell "Rip," that lovable old rascal who originally found his being in the fertile brain of Washington Irving—during his rambles in the Catskills and what transpires in his native village, while he lies in a deep and dreamless sleep after having quaffed on the dwarf's magic liquor. It is said to move at a fast pace and to be replete with humorous and dramatic incidents.

Ward Lascelle, who directed the production, claims that it represents his greatest work thus far, and when one takes into consideration the fact that Mr. Lascelle has, either by himself or in association with others, wielded the megaphone for some of the biggest productions the screen has ever known, this statement carries with it considerable weight.

"The Journey's End" is the name name of the attraction at the Strand the first half of this week.

A Wife in the Making

CHERRY DECIDES TO ENTER BUSINESS

In spite of her resolution to go back to work, Cherry bedtated about apply to her old employer for her former position. It seemed too dreadful for her to have to walk back among the girls and be catechized by them, maybe laughed at. They would know in a minute what was wrong. That she had failed as a wife. No, anything but that.

Accordingly she set about finding herself a place in some other smart shop. Several places in which she was known offered her flattering salaries to join their forces, but Cherry did not jump at any of them quickly, nor show too great an engerness. She was feeling her way, so to speak, for the new job would undoubtedly be a life sentence. Being married, she could not hope to marry again. Being without any visible means of support she would have to support herself forever.

"I'll show him," was her one thought as she trudged from place to place interviewing and being interviewed, and wondering why it was that she suddenly felt as though she had been thrust out into the cold.

"Better to make ten a week than to be tied to a man who played fast and loose with a woman's heart. Anything, rather than that. The very thought of Ned and his perfidy made Cherry clinch her teeth at times. Well, there was one satisfaction, he would never be able to find her. She would be as one dead to him.

Just before she engaged herself to Mabel et Compagnie one cold day in December, Cherry explained to Jane that she was thinking of going on a long visit and that it might be better for her to go back to Wellsburg.

"Course I'll go back, you blessedest. I've had the most wonderful time possible, and I just love you all to death, but d'you know, Cherry, dear, I'm hungry for a sight of that old Wellsburg drug store, and the courthouse, too. Who'd have believed it possible a couple of months ago?"

At Jane's words Cherry felt a longing surge up through her, a longing that was in every way equal to her sister-in-law's and for the same inanimate objects. She would have given all the hats in the world then to be sitting in Douglas's soda palace eating ice cream or drinking hot chocolate with Ned. Dreadful confession this, though no one but herself gussed it.

Accordingly Jane was packed and duly ticketed, then pointed Wellsburgward. It was a noisily happy girl that climbed up on the observation platform and waved to the little group gathered to see her off some few days later.

Cherry went back to her room and had a long "weep" all to herself.

CHERRY RESUMES HER OLD LIFE.

The middle of December found Cherry established in the Marcy designing rooms, queen of all she surveyed. In the feverish activity of the first few days she had little time to think about her own affairs. Monsieur Marcy was highly delighted to have secured the valuable services of a competent designer like Cherry and spent most of his time the first three days in standing over her and watching her work.

"It is merveilleuse how you arrange the bright ideas for these hats of ours, Mademoiselle Lawrence," Cherry had taken back her own name. "And I am so madly happy that we could get you to come to us. How could you possibly have wasted so many months in the country, as you tell me you did? It is a loss to the artistic world when ou do this."

"Ah! But there are times when one must retire if only a fleeting hour, Mr. Marcy. And I knew the call when it came," answered Cherry with a serious look.

"Bon, bon. You understand best what to do for yourself, Mademoiselle, but please don't get to feeling restless again. Stay with us now that we have captured you."

Cherry enjoyed her work thoroughly. It seemed like old times again to be sitting surrounded by a bevy of hand-maidens, all watching with eager eyes the dexterity of her pen and needle. Conditions at Marcy's were most congenial, and there was always a throng of interesting people to talk to during the day, customers and otherwise. The shop's clientele was the creme de la creme of Chicago's society.

As the days went by the sparkle came back to Cherry's eyes and the wild rose bloom to her cheeks. She even learned to hum again as she worked. There were several awfully nice girls who chummed with her, and all in all life was fast becoming possible.

Her family was moving out into the suburbs when Cherry secured her position and although this change would mean an extra long trip each day she refused to hear of their giving up their plans for her sake.

"I should say not, mother, dear. Don't you think I know that it has been the dream of your whole life to get out into the country and have a little garden patch of your own? And for me, the likes of me, you'd be willing to stay on, dreaming and longing and puttering around this old house? It shows me what a darling mother you are. But Madam, off you go to Painesville, as scheduled. I'll not take no for an answer ,either," said she, shaking a finger at her smiling mother.

"I hate to think that you'll have to commute every pay day, dear," was the tender retort. "You get so tired after a day's work and it's just that much more strain on your system to have to catch a train."

"Never worry about me, mother. I can stand the strain. If I could live through what I did a few months ago and still be able to laugh, why I guess I'll survive the commuting stunt, too."

"You're the bravest girl in all the world," answered her mother, putting her arms tenderly round her. "And I'd like to shake that Ned of yours for hurting you as he has, so there," and she wiped away a tear.

Gene Lewis-Olga Worth and their company will open an engagement at the Wichita Theater tomorrow night when they will offer for the first time in this city, Smith and Golden's wonderfully successful American comedy-drama, "Turn to the Right."

The story of "Turn to the Right," which is told in a prologue and three acts, deals with the happy generation of three wayward youths through the love of a whitehaired saintly old lady, the mother of one of them. Though it bristles with good fun, it's lesson goes straight to the heart and places the play on a plane with "The Old Homestead," "Way Down East," "The Music Master," and others of the rugged type.

In it's comedy lines and situations it bears a resemblance to "Lightning" and "The Fortune Hunter," and there is enough religious spirit to entitle it to a niche with "Ben Hur."

Joe Bascom returns to his old home after seven years' absence to find that the place is about to be seized for debt by the village skin-flint. With empty pockets he is powerless to satisfy the debt. As the clouds are lowering about the little farm house, two former prison pals of Joe's appear at the kitchen door to ask for food. Muggs and Gilly have stopped off in the town when their box car is shunted into a siding and they have been attracted to the Bascom cottage by the aroma of a kettle of peach jam, placed in the window ledge to cool. They quickly grasp the situation and before the Bascom's realize what is happening the skin-flint is out-tricked and the farm is saved. The raising of the money provides one of the most ingenious comedy situations ever devised.

Muggs and Gilly remain to help harvest the peach crop, which brings rich returns when converted into Mother Bascom's celebrated jam. They are taken into the family circle and by the influence of Joe's mother are restored to lives of honesty and usefulness.

For one season Mr. Lewis, appeared as "Joe" on Broadway and when the comedy was sent to the coast he was selected for the part so his only two seasons out of stock company were spent with "Turn to the Right."

Mr. Lewis has built a production for this play that will equal the original New York showing. The peach orchard scene will show several thousand peaches all ripe and ready to harvest.

The engagement of this company in Wichita Falls is for eight weeks with a change of play each week. The seats are now selling for the opening week which starts tomorrow night.

"WE PRESENT CHRIST IN THINGS THAT CAN BE DONE"--WAR CRY

SAN ANTONIO, Texas, Otc. 22.—Sixty-eight babies have been born in the Salvation Army Rescue and Maternity home in San Antonio this year. This year more than 100 girls, fallen by the wayside, have been given a place of refuge there, taught the spirit of forgiveness and sent on their way again, to marry, to earn their own living in respected society, while 51 others returned to the family heartstones, wiser, but perhaps after all happier in the understanding which is born with mother-love.

Of the 68 girls who gave birth to children in the home this year, five of them are married happily to men who have learned the blessing of forgiveness in the birth of love. Thirty-one others, taught the responsibility they must assume with their violation of the constituted laws of society, have been prepared to earn their own living.

The educated girl—and many of them are—has been trained to hold an office position which enables her to care for herself as well as the child. It is cared for in the day nursery which the Salvationists conduct at the home. When the mother returns from a day's work at the office, she holds the little bit of humanity to her breast and tired, becomes rested.

Then there is the girl from the rural districts who has never had the advantages of education—both in the theory of books and in the practicality of life. She, too, is taught the self-respect which comes with making her own way in place of the parasitical wanderings of the underworld. For the Salvation Army has found, in 41 years of this work, that 87 per cent of the girls who inhabit the underworld originate in the smaller towns and rural districts.

The reason, Salvationists will tell you is obvious. Obstracised by her friends, shunned even by the members of her own family, she migrated to the city. Without friends or money, there is but one course she may take.

And so, the Salvation Army Advisory board plan was inaugurated less than two years ago and from 150 counties in Texas last year these girls were enfolded in the tender arms of those whose creed, which hangs on its wall down there on River avenue, reads, "Go and Sin No More."

Whether the girl goes to work in San Antonio, or another city, the helping hand of the army is extended to her at all times. When she leaves the familiar scenes which remind her of things she would like to forget, the Salvation Army officer in the town nearest that in which she takes up her abode is notified. And hardly is she settled but there is a caller, who exemplifies the little placard which hung at the foot of her bed while she passed through the valley." It reads "not for ourselves, but for others."

A Friend Who Understands

And so, wherever she is, she knows that nearby there is a friend who understands to whom she may go whenever she is troubled.

These are the reasons the Salvation Army has never had a girl to bear her second fatherless child in one of its maternity homes, of which there are many in these United States. In the Central territory alone last year, of which Texas is a part, 1028 babies were born.

There was for instance, the case of "Little Eva" who was only 12 years old when one afternoon she came to the door of the home swinging school books on a strap suspended from her hand.

"Yes," was the reply.

"Well, my mamma said that you would take care of me," remarked the little girl, to the consternation of the matron.

"You must want to go to the children's home," she observed.

"No," the child replied. "My mamma said that I'd been bad and that you'd take care of me."

Little Eva's Great adventure was to come to her on Christmas morning. On the eve before, she asked for a "big doll" from Santa Claus. Those attending her, as she went down in the valley of death, writhed in anguish for not until the morning after when she had her wish for "a baby doll" answered did the child realize the gravity of her position.

And it was only after repeated entreaty on the part of the Salvationists who had learned to love her that her parents came—they believed as did those around her, to see her before she died—for her slight form was torn in the agony through which she had passed.

"She has disgraced us," the parents told the matron. "We no longer consider her our daughter." But at the bed side that Christmas morning the little family was reunited.

"Little Eva" is now happily married and living in a distant city, the mother of several children. The man who was responsible for her early misery is serving a prison sentence which was given him at the instance of the army.

There are hundreds of stories which the matrons and nurses in these homes could tell. But the exceptional to them has become the rule.

Preventive Work of Army.

The preventive work of the Army has taken the form of boarding homes for girls in the larger cities. Here the girl, coming to the city to earn her living, frequently has not the training which enables her to provide the little luxuries which so go to make up her happiness. The boarding home is a refuge for her. She has all the comforts of a real home at a price she can afford to pay. She has the parental advice of the Salvationists who are especially selected for this work because of their experience in dealing with young girls, probably of their own. She has a parlor in which to entertain her friends rather than the park bench.

Primarily, the Salvation Army is a religious organization. But there's a practical Christainity. When they are accepted for officership they consecrate themselves to the work of helping to relieve the suffering of those about them without thought of themselves.

"Not for ourselves but for others" is a daily practice with them. It was this spirit which recently was witnessed when six young girls, two of them daughters of British nobility, sailed from New York to the Leper Islands, there to take the place of six other Salvationists who, in serving the unfortunates there, contracted the disease and died. But a real and close illustration of this can be obtained from any Salvationists, probably in his or her own life, if they would but speak.

The work of the Army is divided into sixteen major activities. The first, of course, is the preaching of the gospel to all mankind. Next comes the work among girls and then the little children—the future citizens of our great America.

In the El Paso Children's home are gathered the parentless children of the slums, and half-orphans from rural communities, and children whose mothers have died in the Rescue homes—all kinds of children are not eligible for church institutions and many who are saved from state institutions, who are learning the self-respect which comes with making their own way and shown that there are those who love them. In the California children's home, which was established many years ago, there were 163 stars in the service flag which adorned the chapel during the World War.

The Army is planning to establish a new children's home in Hillsboro, Texas, where 180 acres of land and an initial endowment has been presented it. Here the children will be given the privilege of attending school and at the same time the boys will be taught a trade in a manual training shop, agriculture on the model farm to be established, while the girls will be taught practical domestic science as well as prepared to earn their own living through clerical training. For each specific duty performed, they will be paid—maybe just a few cents—but the lesson of self-respect which comes with money earned will be stressed. When they leave the home they will be prepared to make their own way and at the same time will have a small "stake."

Since Prohibition Came

With the introduction of prohibition in the United States, the Army's work among drunkards has been lessened. This time, as well as that formerly spent in tambourine collections, is now devoted to the work of relief in its various angles, with particular references to women and children.

Still there are working men's hotels where board is provided at nominal rates and healthful influences take the place of lives; industrial homes where men broken in body and spirit are shown that they "are never out"; anti-suicide bureaus; Christmas dinners for the poor; summer outings for mothers and children of the slums and other varied measures intended to give relief to suffering humanity and reduce the hazard of bolshevism which is born when men have not some pleasures and relaxations.

Organized by General William Booth in London in 1865 the Army has grown from two officers and one mission, operating in one country, to a gigantic world-wide idea, in which there are 13,000 posts in 72 countries and colonies, where 40 languages are spoken. To carry on this work are 96,000 commissioned officers, thousands of student officers and hundreds of thousands of "soldiers"—those who are members of the Army but hold civil positions.

As National Commander Evangeline Booth expressed it, "Ours is a practical Christianity. We present Christ in things that can be done." And they are doing it.

TWO ACTRESSES OF SAME TYPE ON OLYMPIC FILM PROGRAM THIS WEEK

Manager Ford says he has two pictures this week, that present a pecularity in that two of the same type actresses, appear at the same house the same week, while the pictures are just as different as a William S. Hart picture is from a Mary Pickford drama. Still both these stars appearing at Olympic this week are playing that same Good Little Bad Girl part that has made Conny Talmadge so popular, and for awhile she had this whole field to herself.

Then came Bebe Daniels, and in a very short period of time, took her position in popularity right alongside of Conny, and today in Wichita Falls, as well as all other cities, its a toss up between the two, as to which the audience really likes the better.

Now comes the daintly, little star of "23 1-2 Hours Leave," fame, who has made such a hit playing opposite Douglas McLean; cute, young and beautiful little Doris May who will be seen the last three days this week at the Olympic in "Her Foolish Age," which is her very first starring picture.

She is given full honors of being the real star of the play, and all advance notices on this picture proclaim it to be a real hit and the honor goes to Wichita Falls for being the first city in Texas to play Miss May's starring picture.

Patrons of the Olympic are assured a real treat any day this week, for with these two popular stars, there is not a doubt but what you will be pleasingly entertained, for an hour and forty-five minutes any day you may visit the Olympic with Bebe Daniels in the Speed Girl, the first of the week and Doris May in "The Foolish Age" the last of the week.

RODEO AT A. & M. TO SEND TEAM TO CHICAGO CONTEST

COLLEGE STANTON, Texas, Oct 22.—Committees of students at the A. & M. College of Texas are busily engaged in preparing arrangements for the annual rodeo given by the junior class every year to collect funds for defraying the expense of the senior livestock judging team that is sent to compete in the international college students judging contest at the International Exposition and Livestock Show at Chicago in November.

The show is in every sense a rodeo, comparing well with the cities and towns through the country. Outlaw horses are procured from the vicinity of the college and are ridden by the cadets of the cavalry unit of the R. O. T. C. whose equitation classes in cavalry drill make them good riders. Plenty wild bulls, pigs for greasing and wild goats and butting sheep are available from the college herds. Then to climax these exciting stunts a troop of mounted cavalry and a battery of mounted artillerymen exhibit a tug of war. Riding bareback, they rush into the arena of the livestock judging pavilion directly at each other and contest to unhorse the opposing side.

The opening of the event is a society show which is a big attraction to Bryan people as well as college residents.

EDITORIAL REVIEW OF EVENTS.

Federal Commissioner Haynes has launched a crusade against all places where beer utensils and malt and hops are sold to the home brewers of the United States. Federal Commissioner Haynes is an Ohio man, an appointee of President Harding and Dr. Atticus Webb placed his o. k. mark on Haynes when he was named for the job. Of course the home brewers are certain to be very angry but this time it will be impossible for them to damn the Democrats and the Democratic party. If there is any damning to be done, then hand the wallops to the Harding administration. Of course the Democrats while in power made life miserable for moonshiners and home brewers and a couple of million wets voted the Republican presidential ticket in 1920 to obtain sweet revenge. They are getting it. Malt and hops are banned. Beer utensils are banned. Private hootch mills are banned. Recipes are banned. Preparations are banned. Directions are banned. Advertising of recipes is banned. Is a man's home his castle? It is but he mustn't run a private hootch mill. This is the dictum of the administration. Dr. Atticus is on the firing line in Texas and hundreds of the honest yomanery are holding enforcement law commissions. Just now the hootch maker appears to be between the devil and the deep blue sea with the Dean law beckoning him on toward the penitentiary. And the Dean law carries with it stripes and long terms of penal servitude.

No man who owns his own home will be found at the head of a column with the red flag. A man who does not own his own home and is making no effort to do so is not a good citizen. Statistics show that ninety per cent of the convicts do not own property and seventy-five per cent of them never owned their own homes.—Hon. Rhodes S. Baker of Dallas. Mr. Baker addressed his remarks to the delegates to the Texas League of Building and Loan Associations. The purpose of the organization is to stimulate building and owning of homes in the state of Texas and to promote the general interest of local building and loan companies. J. W. Tolbert of Wichita Falls is one of the directors of the state league which was organized by the officials of eighteen building and loan companies. Rhodes S. Baker reiterated another important truth. He declared that the housing situation is a national menace and one that should receive not only municipal attention but attention from county and state and nation as well. There is a pressing demand for two million homes in the United States. Now who is going to build them?

There is a show down coming in the railroad world. Wage cuts ranging from ten to twenty-five per cent will be put into effect by the railroads against practically two million employes on November first. It is said that the Interstate Commerce Commission has a plan for readjusting freight rates downward and that this may come before November first. President Harding is having his own troubles. Elihu Root is in private life. Philander C. Knox is dead. Senator Lodge is a member of the arms conference. Republican senators from the west are demanding sweeping tariff and tax concessions. Leading Republicans of America are fighting the proposition of tariffs on oil importations. A labor crisis is dangerously near. Woodrow Wilson had his face to the grindstone for eight years and he was vociferously damned by the petulent the country over. His critics were neither charitable nor consistent. Now there is another man carrying the load and the load may break him before the end of his term. He has a tremendous load to carry. He has perplexing problems to solve. and the petulent and the faultfinding are beginning to bark.

General George W. Goethals built the Panama canal for the American people. They paid the bill. General Goethals is a vigorous opponent of the Panama canal toll bill pending in the senate to exempt coastwise shipping from paying toll. General Goethals is of the opinion that such action would be in direct violation of our treaty with Great Britain and he is of the opinion that the advocates of the free toll bill are playing fast and lose with the moral obligations of the United States. As an American he declared his opposition to any such purposed violation of a treaty which provides that tolls for all vessels of whatever nationality shall be on an equal basis. Woodrow Wilson as president forced the government to recognize the so-called treaty and its alleged mortal obligation. President Harding if for free tolls for vessels engaged in coastwise shipping. It appears that the American people constructed the canal for all nations and then Americans paid for its construction in order that foreigners should enjoy equal advantages with American merchantment. Uncle Sam is the most generous of all the samaritans in the history of the world and its civilizations. He appears to be the Great Father of the universe.

A recall election will not be ordered in the city of Fort Worth. Petitioners have failed to get a sufficient number of names on their petition. Mayor E. R. Cockrell and Police and Fire Commissioner John Alderman appear to be ready for the battle. They would be returned to their respective offices if a recall election was held. Of course the old machine politicians of Fort Worth and their allies would oppose their return. This should be expected. When the people smashed the Hon. W. D. Davis and his machine and his public library annex they smashed a prominent editor, several eminent divines, and a great number of chronic office holders and their little pets. Police Commissioner John Alderman has banished the crooks from his city, ran the parasites of the underworld out of town, made all sections a safe place to live, put the kibosh on the motor speed maniac and hasn't taken orders from the dismantled or disgruntled political bosses of yesteryear. Of course the Outs would like to get the scalps of the Ins and above all others the scalps of Mayor E. R. Cockrell and Police Commissioner Alderman. There is a reason why.

General George W. Goethals who came to Texas to pass upon the proposal to dam the Trinity river and form a mammouth city lake to be known as Lake Dallas returned to New York city with the announcement that his report will be ready in three weeks, after which he will sail for Russia to work in connection with the Near East Relief Association. General Goethals says there are more opportunities for young men today than ever before. This is his admonition: "There is the great opportunity for the young man to make himself felt in all branches of industry. The men who sacrifice at this time to devote their energy in this gigantic task will be the men who will be recognized and sought after in later years." Of course the rugged old warrior and scientist was not speaking of pawn broking or its many devices.

Congressman Dyer of Missouri has introduced an anti-lynching bill. This bill imposes heavy penalties on persons involved in mob action resulting in the taking of life. It has been favorable reported by the house judiciary committee. Federal district courts would have jurisdiction. Republicans control the congress; they control the supreme court; they control the executive branch of the government. It is believed that the Dyer bill will be enacted by congress. This is what the Imperial Wizard of Atlanta has brought upon the American people. Mob law is to be throttled by the federal government. Of course democrats from the south may enter violent opposition, but the republicans are in the saddle and directing affairs of government.

Collin is a rich black land county. Collin made a display in the agricultural display at the State Fair. W. C. Dysart, of Collin county, grew 98 per cent of the articles on display. In the exhibit included in the display are more than two hundred different kinds of products. He owns an 180 acre farm and he and his wife furnish most of the material for the Collin county booth and arranged and prepared it with their own hands without assistance from anyone. He put in a county exhibit at the Fair at his own expense and all from his own farm. At the 1919 Fair he did the same thing. Flowers for the living. Dysart is among the living as well as the deserving.

Hon. Andrew W. Mellon may resign the treasury portfolio. Having been overridden by congress at least twice this fall and his recommendations ignored, why should Mellon continue to carry the treasury load? He is one of the ablest of American financiars but he would not shine as a pussy-footing politician. Mellon isn't built that way. He has convictions of his own, he is an eminently successful business man; he has a contempt for jelly-fish statesmen who are ever listening for the rumblings of Vox Populi and if he had been sent to the senate he would have resigned in disgust before he had warmed his seat. There is a vast difference between a successful business man and a professional politician either in or out of office.

It is gratifying to be told that the Wichita Motors Company is commencing to receive actual orders from foreign fields that have not purchased for months. It is more than gratifying to be told that these orders in many cases are from very remote and distant countries. It should be a source of pride as well as a gratification to know that an American corporation, a Texas corporation, a Wichita Falls enterprise and industry, is able to compete with the foreign manufacturer in spite of a discount in exchange which at this time is very detrimental to American manufacturers. Flowers for the deserving.

Knox county is one of the West Texas counties winning prizes for county exhibits at the state fair and the Dallas newspapers bestowed praise upon the exhibit and the exhibitors. Hunt county won first money this year for the reason that the people organized a year ago and made an exhibit worth while. They had the money, the special agent, the leading farmers and the progressive men of Hunt county behind the movement. There is a way to take down the prizes and the Hunt county exhibitors knew the way.

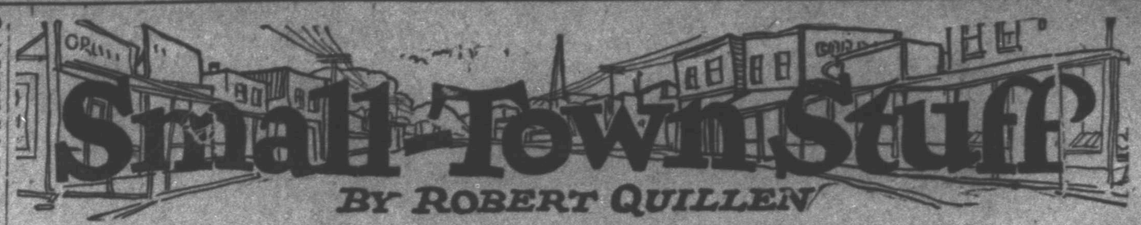

Senator Charles A. Culberson voted against treaty ratification. After the result had been announced Senator Charles A. Culberson "left his seat in a huff" and strode out of the senate chamber. Senator Charles A. Culberson has given his private secretary a vacation, the first Colonel Journay has enjoyed in eight years. And yet there are men away down here in Texas who say that the senator is not a candidate for re-election. Well, they dont' know the political methods of the senator; that's all.

Dr. E. M. Sellars, economic geologist and agrologist from the University of Texas, says the present value of Red river along the Texas hills is at least 529 years old. Then the valley came into existence a few years earlier than the arrival in Texas of Major Patricio O'Keefe, Celtic jig dancer and noted political geologist and agrologist whom maintains headquarters in the city at the head of Trinity river navigation. This is a bit tough on Patricio but he must be satisfied with second place.

Attorney General Price Freeling of Oklahoma asserts that the Red River is a navigable stream, that it was navigable in 1819 when the Spanish treaty was made and that it is now navigable for the greater part of its course between Texas and Oklahoma. Navigable for what? A flat bottomed row boat or a hastily improved skiff. Attorney General Freeling may be an able lawyer but he is a very punk navigator.

President Harding backed the foreign loan fundnig bill which clothed Secretary Mellon with extraordinary power. Congressional opposition forecasted the defeat of the bill. President Harding switched. Now the funding operation will be placed under the jurisdiction of a special commission to be named by the president. Who won? The president or the congress.

It is announced that the Standard Oil Company of New Jersey is to quit paying bonuses at its refineries but will endeavor to create as much additional work as possible to increase the hours of employment for men now working part time or laying off entirely. Normalcy appears to be returning.

PLAYING GROWN-UPS

When small girls are left to their own devices and have access to ancient garments and bits of lace, they array themselves in a fearful and wonderful manner and play at being fine ladies. They strut and simper and pose as fine ladies never have and never will. It is commonly assumed that they are endeavoring to impersonate their elders, but the assumption is not entirely correct. Their strutting and their simpering is not interpretative. They are endeavoring to translate into action the feeling of importance with which their childish minds have endowed fine ladies. They overdo it of course; nearly all posers exaggerate.

So with social climbers who have but recently acquired money. They do not ape those they envy. They merely interpret, as best they can, the quality of superiority they imagine the elect to possess. A social leader keeps three servants in knee breeches, possesses five evening gowns, and is frankly uninterested in climbers. Very well; the climber will clutter up the premises with seventeen he-servants in knee pants, buy a wagon load of evening gowns, and snub everybody a foot high—for thus and thus only, can she feel as important as the social leader seems.

So, also, with the man who yearns to be an important citizen. Your great man is simple, unaffected, perhaps a little retiring, certainly devoid of airs. But these qualities are held in common with countless other men who are not great. Therefore, the man who wishes to appear great does not impersonate those who are great in fact. Rather he affects the degree of hauteur necessary to give him a feeling of importance, and by speech and manner endeavors to interpret his own conception of what a great man should be.

A poor man who wished to impress his neighbors went shopping for an imitation diamond. If he had purchased a small one, the neighbors might have thought it genuine. But his eagerness to impress overcame his little store of judgment, and he bought a piece of glass somewhat large proportion. It was not difficult to tell the difference.

SQUARE PEGS IN ROUND HOLES

I know a man who runs a grocery store and dreams of running a locomotive. He says he would rather be an engineer on a fast passenger run than governor of the state. In his youth he had some experience of railroading, and his yearning for the old life is an ever-present nostalgia, but he lacks the courage to cut loose from his present environment and go back.

I know another, a mail clerk, who is a mechanical genius. Machinery thrills him. He is happy only when he has a wrench in his hand, and yet he continues to sort letters because he lacks the courage to climb out of the unhappy rut into which chance has thrust him.

I cannot believe that a man is justified in devoting his life to a trade or profession that offers him no chance of happiness in his work, even though the money reward is greater than he could hope to win in the calling that offers him contentment. For money and the things that are bought with money have worth only in proportion to the happiness they afford, and no one will contend that an unhappy millionaire is more to be envied than a contented hod carrier.

It may be argued that a man's duty to his family requires him to choose the way that promises the most money, even though it promises discontent as well. But my observation has been that the woman who lives in a great house and has many servants is no happier than the woman who lives in a five-room bungalow and does her own house work, and that the sons and daughters of the rich do not develop into better or happier citizens than the children of the poor.

If life cannot afford happiness, it can afford nothing else worth while. And if the task by which one earns his bread affords only grief and baleful discontent there is no other source from which he may hope to draw contentment. Useful work is noble if it is free; it is but a hateful form of slavery if it affords no other reward than the money gained.

UNCLE GUS

The smoke and cobwebs of many years had conspired to darken the ceiling of the grocery store and cast a haze of gloom upon the whole interior, and now a painter balanced precariously upon a step-ladder, after the manner of his kind, and swung a desultory brush freighted with white lead.

"He's workin' by the day," said he. "An' he's takin' it easy so's not to git his brush hot an set the ceilin' afire. He likes the job. I reckon. Means to make it last all winter. I watched him fo' a spell, an' dang nigh went to sleep. I've heard o' folks what was slower'n the seven-year itch, but this feller is slower'n the wrath o' God. A small afflicted with gout an' lumbago would run off an' leave 'im.

"Folks ain't like they used to be. When I was a young feller I worked out a right smart, and I was a purty good back-leg carpenter. Done all sorts o' old jobs, blcksmithin' an' things like that. We didn't knock off two hours by sun in them days; we worked until it was too dark to work, an' we didn't loaf none on the job.

"I'm in favor o' short hours an' high wages, an' I like to see workin' folks havin a good time an' enjoyin' life; but I aint got a damned bit o use fo' a man who loafs when he's supposed to be workin'. And I've got a notion in me big as a mule that a man what works faster by the job than he does by the day ain't ever goin' to be jerked up to Heaven on account o' bein' too honest fo' this wicked world.

"Workin' folks is like ever'body else. They got a notion ever'body is tryin' to do 'em wrong, but they don't never study about doin 'other folks wrong.

"If I was to cuss out that feller in there fo' loafin' on me, he'd git plumb insulted an' quit. But if he come to me fo' a dozen sigs, an' I only put ten in the sack, the' wouldn't be no way o' convincing him that I ain't a schemin' ol' crook.

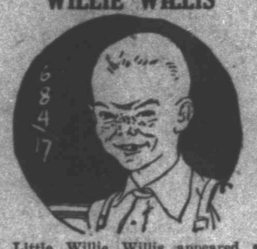

"It's all right for a man to work eight hours a way; but if he sells me eight hours o' work, it don't please me none whatever to see i'm loafin' fo' of 'em. I know some folks is slow by nature an' drage along like they was half dead; but it ain't nature what makes 'em slow up when they're workin' by the job. It ain't nature; it's a slight case o' the human disorder what made it necessary fo' folks to build jails."

AUNT HET

"Nobody else ever feels so plumb helpless an' lost an' forsaken as a woman when she first begins to realize that she's got more sense than the man she married."

WILLIE WILLIS

DEACON HARDTOP

MARCELETTE.

Aladdin is the son of a poor tailor and is considered a "scatter brained" child. He plays on the streets with ragamuffins and only comes home to meals. He is careless, selfish and thoughtless. At the age of fifteen he steals a lamp from the pushcart peddler. Being of a mechanical turn of mind, he invents a device which perfects the lamp. This he manages to get patented and a company is formed. Aladdin becomes rich and happy.

The story of the Forty Thieves deals with the men who helped Aladdin organize the company and float the stock.—Marcel Steinbrugge.

WHO WANTS A SHINING NOSE?

It used to be something like this: "What'll you have, gentlemen?" Then, by way of showing he was a regular fellow, the candidate would put his foot up on the bar rail and have the same. But it isn't done that way any more.

To meet changed conditions Joseph M. Levine, coalition candidate for president of the Bronx, hit on the idea of passing out in place of the forbidden "three star" and cigars dainty mirrors which are fashioned to slip into vanity cases.

"Why not?" he inquired. "To women they're a necessity and you would be amazed how often they come in handy for men.

"Then, for the women, I think their minds work better if they're satisfied about their appearance. They even worry about it at times, so if they can take a look at their noses before entering the voting booths they are likely to be calm."

The rumor that Lloyd George is going to have their hair bobbed is believed to be greatly exaggerated.

Breakfast Stories

In a London club, when the Chinese minister happened to be present, a rather tactless speaker referred to the position of women in China and how they were debarred from so many of the privileges of men. He meant no ill, but what he said was indiscreet and led to a moment's embarrassing silence after which the conversation was resumed on other subjects.

The minister did not speak for a while, but presently, during a pause, he turned to the man who had made the critical remark:

"Yes, I believe it is the finest."

"Much finer than your ordinary private houses?"

"Certainly. None of our private houses is as large and beautiful as this," was the response.

"I suppose you have your women here—your mothers and sisters and wives and daughters. Of course, you must have them here to enjoy your beautiful house with you."

"Why, no. It is against the rules. They are not allowed here at all."

"Why not?" said the minister.

A salesmanlike looking inspector dropped over night at a small town Kansas hotel and was surprised to find a dirty roller towel in the washroom. Indignantly he said to the landlord. "Don't you know that it has been against the law for years to put up a roller towel in this state" "Sure, I know it," replied the proprietor, "but no ex post facto law goes in Kansas, and that there towel was put up before the law was passed."

Who's Who

BASIL MILES

Basil Miles, who has been named as secretary to the American delegation to the conference on the limitation of armaments, has been active in the state department in making preparations for the conference and has had considerable experience in statesmanship.

BASIL MILES

Mr. Miles was born in Philadelphia in 1877 and is a graduate of the University of Pennsylvania and of Oxford University. In 1905 he was appointed private secretary to the American ambassador to Russia and three years later was appointed third secretary to the embassy there.

He left the diplomatic service in 1908, but re-entered it in 1916, when he was appointed special assistant to the ambassador to Russia, receiving in 1917 the rank of minister plenipotentiary. He was secretary to the Root mission to Russia and until lately chief of the Russian division of the state department. He was also for a time attached to the American embassy at Berlin and once held an appointment in the postoffice department.

Youthful Song Company Finds Art Profitable

HELENA, Mont., Oct. 17.—Lots of folks say that art can't be made to pay.

On the other hand, if it does pay there's always somebody waiting around the corner to strangle the infant industry in its cradle, so to speak.

If you don't believe it, ask any producer of opera, and then if you're still skeptical, ask Arthur Seiler or Theodore Johnson, or Myrtle Tuohy, each thirteen years old, and all of Helena, Montana.

Youthful Calvalcade.

Not long after the departure of the parents of the trio neighbors were surprised to see a youthful calvalcade draw up before their front gate. It consisted of a wagon, in which was seated Arthur Seiler, and before him a drum. Theodore walked beside the wagon carrying the tools of his craft, an armful of music, while Myrtle bore the cash register and pulled the wagon. On each side of the wagon were signs, lettered in black on white cardboard and somewhat downhill as to continuity of spacing, the one reading, "Three songs, 5c; "The Boy Contralto, by Theodare Johnson," and the other, "Three songs, 5c. Your Choice of Songs. Satisfaction Guaranteed."

Drums Up Business.

Theodore lifted his hat politely and assumed the bored air of the great artist about to entertain the hoi polloi, while Arthur, being the business manager and press agent, drummed up business, both literally and figuratively, while Myrtle solemnly produced a long list of songs and offered it for selection.

Theodore delivered the goods, be it said, and their first stop netted them fifteen cents.

But listen to Arthur's version of it: "Well, you see, we offered to sing for 'em, and Theodore can sing, too. And then we asked if they were satisfied, and they said they were and paid us 15 cents. Then we went on to the next house. If they didn't have a whole five cents Theodore sang one song for two cents, and one place he sang three times and only got three cents; but we decided not to do that again, because it wasn't fair to the ones that paid five cents.

"We made one dollar and seven cents that evening. We thought we were going to have a nice business.

"But, gosh!" he sighed, then our folks came home, and say, you'd a thought we'd robbed a bank, the fuss they made. They said it was like begging. I can't see it. But, anyhow, we can't do it any more. We divided up the money. Myrtle and I each got 32 cents and Ted got 43 cents, because he did the singing.
