

Reagan seeks concessions from Saudis

By JIM ADAMS
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan, losing ground in the last week of his battle to sell AWACS radar planes to Saudi Arabia, must win new concessions from the Saudis at the summit meeting in Mexico to save the deal, opponents and uncommitted senators say.

Reagan's uphill fight suffered its biggest setback yet Wednesday when Senate Democratic leader Robert C. Byrd of West Virginia, considered an influential swing vote, announced that he will oppose the $8.5 billion arms package.

Sen. Alan Cranston of California called Byrd's decision "a crucial turning point," and Senate Republican leader Howard H. Baker Jr., Reagan's chief ally, acknowledged that "it still may be lost."

Cranston, the Senate Democratic whip, said the sale of five Airborne Warning and Control system planes and

F-15 jet weaponry now is almost certain to be blocked when the Senate votes next Wednesday.

He conceded, however, that Reagan could yet salvage it if he obtains new agreements from Saudi Prince Fahd during their meeting Friday at the 22-nation economic summit in Cancun, Mexico.

Sen. John Glenn, D-Ohio, like Cranston a leader of the opposition, also appealed to Reagan to seek more guarantees from Fahd on operation of the Airborne Warning and Control System planes.

"I would hope that even at this late date, the president would bring this up with Prince Fahd and talk about joint crewing... so that we could have perhaps some agreement and work our way out of this," Glenn said in a Senate speech.

The House already has rejected the sale, and the Senate lineup according to the latest Associated Press count is 53-37 against it.

That put Reagan at least 16 votes behind in his effort to avoid the first congressional veto of a U.S. arms sale, and Byrd's opposition was widely regarded as influential among wavering Democrats.

Sen. David L. Boren, D-Okla., one of 10 uncommitted senators, said Wednesday that he "would like to vote for it, but it has to be based on absolute assurance that the (AWACS) technology will be safeguarded."

"I just feel that it's imperative that he talk to Fahd about it and realize that he is short a few votes if he doesn't," Boren said.

White House officials have discouraged speculation that Reagan's meeting with Fahd will produce any new concessions from the Saudis.

Sen. Mark Andrews, R-N.D., one of several Republican opponents whom Reagan hoped to convert, said that "on a scale of 10, I'd say I'm 9½ against it."

Sen. Warren Rudman, R-N.H., leaning for the sale, said he would announce his decision today, and Sen. Dale Bumpers, D-Ark., leaning against the sale, said he might announce also.

Baker, who said only a week ago that momentum was with Reagan, was noticeably less optimistic Wednesday that the president would win this battle — his first major foreign policy test on Capitol Hill.

"It still may be lost," Baker said. "But it's not beyond being winnable."

Reagan pushed ahead with his personal lobbying campaign, calling Boren from Air Force One as he flew to Mexico for the economic summit.

Sen. Walter D. Huddleston, D-Ky., who also is uncommitted, said a new agreement from Fahd for some sort of joint U.S.-Saudi operation of the planes might help save the sale.

"Joint operation would certainly make it a lot easier," Huddleston said.

The sale is intended to help the Saudis defend their oil fields.

Torres and his three passengers, Francisca Torres, 22; Rachel Torres, 2; and Ramiro were treated and released from Midland Memorial Hospital. Isher was not injured.

'Some consensus' foreseen at summit

By GEORGE GEDDA
Associated Press Writer

CANCUN, Mexico (AP) — Despite signs of sharp discord between rich and poor countries, U.S. and Mexican officials are predicting that "some consensus" will be reached at the unprecedented 22-nation economic summit.

The North-South summit was opening today amid mounting demands that President Reagan back away from his conservative economic doctrines and demonstrate more flexibility in his approach to the world's poor.

Nevertheless, Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig Jr. predicted that the two-day conference would yield positive results.

Haig told a news conference Wednesday night that he is increasingly confident the meeting "will achieve some consensus in a number of important areas."

Haig gave no further details, but Mexico's Foreign Secretary Jorge Castaneda told reporters he expects summit participants to agree on ways that industrialized countries can help poor countries in two key areas: food and energy production.

Even before the summit began, there were few expectations that any significant agreements would result. Neither a final communique nor a followup conference is planned.

In a newspaper interview on the eve of the conference, Mexican President Jose Lopez Portillo said it would be "futile, Utopian and demagogic to expect immediate and spectacular results" from the summit. But he expressed hope that the meeting would end the longstanding stalemate in North-South deliberations.

Mexican government spokesman Horacio Flores de la Pena said Reagan told Lopez Portillo on Wednesday that the success of the summit "depends on the cooperation of all its participants... especially on that of the industrialized countries."

Reagan appeared relaxed as he prepared for perhaps the most challenging diplomatic assignment in his nine-month-old administration.

Shortly after his arrival from Washington on Wednesday, he slipped into sports clothes and then held separate meetings with five other leaders assembled here, including Lopez Portillo, China's Prime Minister Zhao Ziyang and India's Prime Minister Indira Gandhi. Reagan also took time out for a Caribbean swim.

The format for the summit called for an unstructured give-and-take by the delegates, and Reagan was to be one of the early speakers at today's opening session.

Reagan, faced with a groundswell of complaints about his policies toward poor nations, appeared to be pursuing a lonely course with his insistence that free enterprise, foreign investment and expanded global trade are the keys to Third World prosperity.

Austrian Foreign Minister Willibald Pahr issued a call Wednesday for a "Marshall Plan," such as that provided Europe after World War II, of massive assistance to developing nations.

But a senior U.S. official, who asked not to be identified, said the Reagan administration opposes that idea, favoring instead private investment to promote growth.

The crescendo of opposition to Reagan's formulas prompted Brazilian officials here to warn that isolation of the United States could cast a pall over the prospects for a constructive North-South dialogue.

Castaneda conceded to reporters that there was little hope for any summit consensus on expanded financial assistance to poorer countries and a restructuring of the international monetary system.

Odessa school superintendent testifies

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

U.S. District Judge Fred Shannon played the role of the advocate Wednesday, when he sought answers from Odessa Schools Superintendent Bill Holm on why the predominantly black-Hispanic Ector High School has fewer teachers with master's degrees and less experienced teachers than do the white-dominated Permian High School and the white-Hispanic Odessa High School.

"I don't know," said Holm, who has been superintendent of the Ector County Independent School District since 1972.

"How did it come about?" the judge asked.

Holm tendered an answer.

"It might have to do with teacher preference, your honor," Holm said.

"Does teacher preference cause this to happen?" the judge asked tersely.

"Could have," the superintendent said. "We have a bigger turnover (at Ector); that may have something to do with it."

THE JUDGE briefly took over lawyer Norma Solis' role in examining Holm in the 10-year-old federal lawsuit to determine if Odessa school officials have purposely operated a dual (separate but supposedly equal) system of education to sidestep integration by not bringing black and Hispanic students into the white-ruled system.

Ector County ISD officials have offered students a "freedom of choice" to attend the schools of their preference if they provide their own transportation. Odessa, which in large measure adopts the neighborhood-school concept, does not bus students across town to mix students of various ethnic and racial origins in the schools.

Ms. Solis, an attorney for CRUCIAL, a citizens' action group which has joined the federal government in the civil-rights suit against the Ector County ISD, had asked Holm to review certain statistics on the faculty members in the three high schools in Odessa.

Ms. Solis' line of questioning was a card-stacking technique to emphasize that the "black" Ector High School has far fewer students, far fewer teachers with master's degrees and far few teachers with 10 years or more instructing experience than do Permian or Odessa High schools.

Ector has a current enrollment of 771 students, which is about half of what it had in 1968, while Permian has 1,900 and Odessa has 2,100. Twenty-seven percent of Ector's teachers hold master's degrees, which, Holm said, is considerably less than the 46 percent who hold master's degrees at Odessa and with the 47 percent who hold master's degrees at Permian. At Ector, 27 percent of the teachers have at least 10 years' teaching experience, while 41 percent of Odessa's teachers and almost 49.5 percent of Permian's teachers have 10 years or more teaching time.

HOLM ACKNOWLEDGED the disparity, but drew no conclusions other than Ector students are afforded comparable education and facilities equal to those at Permian and Odessa.

However, he did admit that, unlike Permian and Odessa, Ector's programs for the gifted and talented students are offered "on a very limited basis." Ector is on Odessa's south side.

Ms. Solis tried in vain to pin Holm down on his concept of "optimum" enrollment for a high school.

"I think it has to do with the education," he said.

Midlanders seek funds for Loop 250 project

Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Midland officials Wednesday asked the State Highway and Public Transportation Commission to speed up funding and construction of the proposed Loop 250 around the north side of Midland.

Midland Mayor G. Thane Akins, County Commissioner Durward Wright and Eugene Abbott, chairman of the Highway Committee of the Midland Chamber of Commerce, told the highway commission that construction of nine miles of Loop 250 between U.S. Highway 80 and State Highway 349 is vital if the city is to deal with problems of growth and traffic in the area.

Abbott said the area inside the proposed loop already is fully developed or under development, with 6,483 housing units under construction or in the development stage at this time. An additional 880 housing units also are under way outside the loop, he said.

Construction of at least parts of the proposed facility, which is estimated to cost $21.7 million, already is included in the highway commission's 20-year plan for highway construction, but Abbott said that most construction isn't scheduled to begin until 1985 and the main lanes of the loop are not in the plan at all.

"Midland is the largest city in Texas without a loop road," said Akins. "We simply cannot wait 20 years for completion of this loop around the north side of our city."

Abbott said local leaders are willing to finance immediate construction of the project with local funds if the highway commission can guarantee state funding would eventually be available.

Commission Chairman Robert Dedman said it might take legislative action to authorize the highway department to proceed with a project on that basis. He also pointed out that the commission is experiencing its own funding problems and does not have funds to finance all of the projects requested by local officials.

The commission took no action on the request, but turned the matter over to the highway department staff for further consideration.

"The NAA has taken a strong stand against some forms of HUD housing because of all the failures in the past 10 years. The problems have been caused by inadequate management and maintenance."

Interest, inflation hampering health of housing industry, speaker says

By LANA CUNNINGHAM
Staff Writer

High interest rates stand as a monolithic stumbling block in the way of the country's housing industry, a national apartment association representative said Wednesday.

Wesley Schreiber of Waco, a regional vice president of the National Apartment Association, looked at the prospects for the housing industry over the next few years in light of high interest rates and surging inflation. He was guest speaker for the Midland Apartment Association which met in Ranchland Hills Country Club.

The local group is affiliated with the NAA and is composed of apartment owners, managers, suppliers and service companies.

"The interest rates are unbelievable now," he said of the 18 percent price for borrowing money. And for some builders who took a chance about a year ago to build apartments, such as he, Schreiber explained they are losing money on the finished complexes today.

At that time, money could be had for about 12 percent, and he agreed to pay on long-term financing prime rate plus 1 percent. Right after that, the prime rate soared.

LOOKING AT A new complex he owns in Fort Worth as part of Schreiber Investments, Inc., the regional vice president said, "It's costing me $22,000 a month to own it." The cause is not high-enough rents or increasing city taxes. "It's the high money," Schreiber said.

Interest rates shouldn't begin to drop until the end of this year or early 1982, and even then it will be at the pace of a snail, he said. Taking his information from Dr. Joseph Burns, a senior vice president of the Federal Reserve Bank in Dallas who spoke recently to the Texas Association of Builders in Waco, Schreiber said interest rates could sink to 15 percent.

Homebuilders at that meeting advocated calling for the Federal Reserve to drop the interest rate soon to boost the homebuilding industry. Schreiber related that Burns "reminded us we had taken advantage of all the cheap money."

While President Reagan and Fed Chairman Paul Volcker were blamed for the housing industry's ills, Schreiber said Burns explained a drop in the interest rates would fuel inflation, jumping it up to 30 to 40 percent.

Currently, the inflation rate stands at 9 percent and the interest rate at 18 percent, he said.

THE FEDERAL RESERVE sees the only way "we can get the nation back in the proper perspective" is by keeping a tight hold on the money, related Schreiber. He added that Burns expects to see a slight release of money in December since that is "a heavy consumer month."

Schreiber predicted the housing industry will "see difficult times over the next five years." In the past few years, the industry has grown so large that it has overtaken and passed the automobile industry as being one of the major groups in the country.

IN ANOTHER ASSAULT on the superintendent, Ms. Solis asked Holm if he would be concerned were a child of his enrolled in a school similar to Ector, where teachers are less experienced and have fewer overall advanced degrees than comparable schools.

At that juncture, Judge Shannon preempted Ms. Solis, took on the role of the advocate, and asked the superintendent the pointed and succinct questions.

Dr. Gordon Foster, a professor of education at the University of Miami, initially was to be examined by U.S. Department of Justice attorney Joseph Rich.

Woman is fighting to keep husband alive on respirator

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Before he slipped into a coma, William J. Foster was fighting for the right to be disconnected from a respirator and die with dignity. Now his wife is fighting to keep him alive.

But Janet Foster, who objects to her husband's suit on religious grounds, has been rebuffed in her attempt to become her husband's legal guardian in order to keep the respirator on.

U.S. District Judge Robert M. Takasugi on Monday denied Mrs. Foster's motion to become guardian of her husband, who had filed suit to be allowed to die after being paralyzed from the neck down by amyotrophic lateral sclerosis or Lou Gehrig's Disease.

The 67-year-old former city bus mechanic suffered a cardiac arrest Wednesday after his suit was filed, and has been in a coma since. Mrs. Foster's lawyer said that had she been named guardian, she would have dropped the suit and directed Wadsworth Veterans Administration Hospital officials to keep him on the respirator.

Mrs. Foster, who attended Monday's court hearing, refused to comment on Takasugi's decision and her husband's condition.

ALS, often called Lou Gehrig's Disease after the baseball player stricken with the illness, is an incurable neurological disorder that results in progressive muscle decay.

Mrs. Foster's motion came at a hearing on her husband's plea for a preliminary injunction to bar further medical treatment by the VA without his consent. The VA has refused to turn off Foster's respirator without his wife's permission, and she has refused to sign a waiver of claims against the VA if they disconnect the machine.

Takasugi, citing the change in Foster's medical condition, postponed further hearings on the preliminary injunction until Friday and ordered a further examination of Foster by Dr. Saul J. Faerstein.

George Baltaxe, Mrs. Foster's lawyer, argued that with Foster now comatose, a guardian should be appointed to protect his interests.

"He is now, for want of better words, feeling no pain," Baltaxe said. "He is unconscious; he has no more views to express. He has never told us what he would want to do in this situation."

Baltaxe said that although Foster's pain was over, his wife's anguish was not.

Foster's lawyers, Baltaxe charged, were people with "axes to grind," seeking to create legal precedents for other cases involving the state's so-called "right-to-death" law. Naming Mrs. Foster as guardian would get the case out of court so "the circus can stop," he said.

Takasugi rejected the argument.

"Mr. Foster's interests are adequately represented without the appointment of a guardian ad litem (for purposes of litigation)," the judge said.

"This case, which never should have gone to court, has been further delayed," extending Foster's pain, Richard Stanley Scott, Foster's attorney, said after the hearing. He accused the VA of hoping the case would be rendered moot by Foster's death.

"This is a man who is simply trying to exercise his right to privacy," Scott said. He argued that further medical treatment against Foster's will would constitute a "battery" against him.

Foster also is suing the government for damages of $5,000 a day for every day he received medical care without his consent after Nov. 28, 1980, when he first sought to be taken off the respirator.

Beauchamp died Monday in a Houston hospital.

He was born Aug. 6, 1914, in Weatherford. He moved to Odessa in 1944. He married Louie Elaine Keith on July 23, 1924, in Weatherford.

Other survivors include three sons, a sister, another brother, eight grandchildren and four great-grandchildren.

Tower: no time for more hearings on proposed cuts

By W. DALE NELSON
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The chairman of the Senate Armed Services Committee says there is not enough time to hold hearings on additional budget cuts that some Democrats say could hurt military preparedness.

Sens. Carl Levin, D-Mich., and Henry M. Jackson, D-Wash., expressed "deep concern" about proposed budget amendments in a letter to Sen. Gordon J. Humphrey, R-N.H., chairman of the preparedness subcommittee of Armed Services.

"We feel very strongly that we should not act on these amendments... without hearing from Defense Department witnesses concerning the impact of these amendments on the capabilities of our forces," they said.

In a separate letter to Sen. John Tower, R-Tex., chairman of the Armed Services Committee, Levin said he assumed other subcommittees might have "similar problems" with the cuts.

Linda Hill, Tower's press secretary, said Humphrey and Tower met and agreed that there was not time to hold hearings.

A conference committee has nearly finished settling the differences between House and Senate bills, both authorizing about $136.4 billion in military spending.

Since the passage of the bills, however, President Reagan has proposed budget changes that would reduce this amount by approximately $6.2 billion.

They specifically questioned proposals to: —Reduce the carrier battle group strength in the Indian Ocean by 25 percent from the level approved by both the House and the Senate.

—Retire about 60 of the oldest of the Air Force's B-52 bombers in the current fiscal year, instead of keeping them in service until 1987 as originally proposed.

—Cut back the proposed increase in Army strength by one combat brigade.

—Reduce the number of steaming days for the Navy and flying hours for the Air Force, or the amount of time units can train at sea or in the air.

—Postpone fleet modernization, such as reinforcing the superstructure of destroyers to protect them from shrapnel.

"Some of the reductions proposed by the president clearly will have impact on the readiness of our forces and even on our operational commitments," the Democratic senators said.

Honda president regrets Japan's auto export curb

TOKYO (AP) — The president of Honda Motors today criticized the Japanese government for its voluntary agreement to limit auto exports to the United States, Canada and Western Europe.

"It is a matter for regret that the Japanese government, out of political considerations, decided to voluntarily restrain car exports," Kiyoshi Kawashima said.

The decision earlier was denounced bitterly by the "Big Two" Japanese automakers, Toyota Motor Co. and Nissan, which makes Datsun vehicles.

Kawashima said the government's May 1 agreement to limit auto exports for two years, with a possible extension for a third year, to the United States "is no more than a temporary emergency measure."

Foreign governments pressured Japan to curb auto exports to give their own industries a chance to recover from economic hard times.

Kawashima, speaking to the Foreign Correspondents Club, said his company has managed to compensate for losses caused by the export curbs by increasing sales to Africa, the Middle East and Latin America.

He said those markets have yet to reach their peak but warned they will "reach a saturation point in the near future."

American scales Mt. Everest

KATMANDU, Nepal (AP) — A member of an American Himalayan expedition has reached the top of Mount Everest, the world's highest peak, Nepal's Ministry of Tourism announced today.

The ministry said Christopher Kocpzyński, a 33-year-old contractor from Spokane, Wash., and a Sherpa guide, identified only as Sundare, scaled the 29,000-foot peak on Wednesday.

The two men used the traditional Southeast Ridge approach to the peak, the announcement said.

Kocpzyński is a member of the American Medical Research Everest Expedition's third assault party attempting to reach the peak. Two other parties earlier abandoned their summit bids because of high winds.

The two climbers stayed at the summit for 90 minutes during "clear and not windy weather and conducted several high altitude medical experiments," a member of the support team reported by radio from the base camp.

The radio message said the men were in "excellent" condition.

The final stage of their climb was launched from Camp Five at an elevation of 26,350 feet.

The radio message said the other guide and three other Americans in the third assault party — Jeff Lowe, 32, and Michael Weiss 33, of Eldorado, Colo., and Dr. Stephen Boyer, 36, of Boulder, Colo. — had not been able to reach Camp Five for unspecified reasons.

"It has not been decided whether the other men would make another attempt later or not," the message said, adding that all members of the party had descended safely below Camp Four by today.
