Lebanon plan seeks stable ceasefire

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Syria and Israel have endorsed a proposed security plan to separate Lebanon's civil war combatants and establish a stable cease-fire, Lebanese officials disclosed today.

However, the officials said President Amin Gemayel would ask that the United States, France, Italy and Britain keep their peacekeeping forces in Lebanon in support of the new plan, which would extend authority of the government over much of the territory not under Syrian or Israeli control.

Reagan administration officials have voiced optimism that the proposed plan will eventually mean U.S. Marines stationed in Beirut can be removed.

But one Lebanese official, who spoke on condition he would not be named, said, "It is wrong to assume that the plan, even if thoroughly implemented, will make it possible for the multinational force to leave at any forseeable future date."

"The security plan is aimed at extending government authority from Beirut to less than one-third of Lebanon's territory," said the official. He said the presence of the multinational force "is essential to see this step through."

Lebanese Prime Minister Shafik Wazzan reported Tuesday that his government and leaders of the principal warring factions were near agreement on the plan expected to be announced by this weekend.

It calls for establishment of buffer zones in Beirut's embattled southern outskirts and the neighboring Chouf mountains. The government plans to seek 800 observers from Italy and Greece to police these zones.

"We are still far away from the ultimate objective of extending state authority to northern, eastern and southern Lebanon," the official said. "So the notion that the forthcoming security plan could mean an early MNF departure isn't valid."

Lebanon's northern and eastern regions are held by the Syrian army, and Israel occupies the south and southeast.

The Israeli occupation forces have been coming under escalating guerrilla attacks, and on Wednesday Israeli jets pounded pro-Iranian guerrilla bases in the Bekaa Valley.

Lebanese state radio reported nearly 100 people were killed and 400 wounded.

It was the second Israeli attack in two days on the guerrilla bases in the Syrian-controlled valley.

Coach salary is item

Coaching salaries will be the topic of discussion at a special noon meeting Friday of the Snyder school board — an indication that efforts to hire a new Snyder High School head football coach may be concluding soon.

Superintendent Bill J. Hood said Wednesday that the salary-setting discussion was scheduled prior to the regular board meeting to pave the way for "serious negotiations" with new coach candidates.

Athletic Director David Noble is expected to meet with the board during the noon meeting, slated to be conducted at K-Bob's Restaurant.

The school board will be back in session next Thursday, Jan. 12, for its regular January meeting.

In addition, Hood did not discount the possibility that new coach candidates might be considered "for employment" at the January meeting.

'Murphy's Law' delays new industry

By DONNY L. BROWN
SDN Managing Editor

A bad run of "Murphy's Law" has postponed a full production schedule for Snyder's newest industry almost three months, according to officials with King's Highway Mobile Industries.

The old maxim that if bad luck can happen it will happen has proven true since the newly located industry took possession of the Industrial Foundation-maintained building in North Snyder.

"Although it's been our bad luck, I'd like to apologize to all those people who have been contacting us about jobs," said Howard Stensland, the president of King's Highway Inc. who relocated to Snyder from California this past summer.

"We're 60 to 90 days behind where we anticipated being. We will be hiring during January in limited numbers and hopefully we'll reach decent production sometime in February."

By the end of next month, he said, the hiring at King's Highway could add another 150-200 jobs to the county work force. Applications for these are being handled through the Snyder Texas Employment Commission office.

King's Highway's latest example of unexpected accidents happened Sunday as a 2-inch valve on a main overhead sprinkler line blew off. The water was undetected until it was spotted flowing from underneath the outside doors.

By this time, however, much of the suspended ceiling panels in the office

The feller on Deep Creek says, "Thanks to television, old movies never die--no matter how long ago they were shot."

Don Osborn, a Snyder city councilman and partner in I&R Industries, brought us the following tongue-in-cheek letter on paying marijuana producers not to produce. The letter was sent to the Washington Post by Dub Waldrip, a South Plains cattleman.

"Since I'm not sure whether to send this suggestion to the USDA or the Justice Department, I am writing to you in the hope that you might encourage them to cooperate in implementing the suggested program.

"It is my understanding that our government has difficulty in controlling marijuana production. They tell me it is the leading cash crop even in as rich an agricultural state as California, and I believe we have a great amount produced here in Texas. If this is true and if our government truly wishes to reduce production, I wonder why they don't utilize programs that have been successful with other commodities. We need to pay these folks not to grow marijuana...

"There will be objections, particularly from free-enterprise-oriented folks. However, I fail to see why the less efficient marijuana producers shouldn't be helped to stay in business...Why should only particular commodities be favored?

"I realize that the fount of all knowledge is located there on the banks of the Potomac, and we folks out here in the country should be thankful that all our needs are met and our problems are solved by our protectors there, because we just don't understand the situation.

"For that reason, I am surprised that such a simple solution to a great problem has not been proposed before now. I finally decided that it was because folks are so busy there they don't have time to think. Out here in the pasture, among a bunch of old cows, we sometimes have too much time to think."

Centennial Footnote: In January, 1934 the Scurry County Times reported that bank deposits jumped from $600,000 to $923,000 and that loans dropped $105,000 to $421,000.

Commission to urge $1 billion for C. America

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Kissinger Commission on Central America is expected to recommend that the United States spend $1 billion in economic and military aid over the next several years to help resolve development and security problems in the region, U.S. officials say.

The officials, who asked not to be identified, said the recommendation will be included in a report the commission will submit to President Reagan next week.

They said the panel, known formally as the National Bipartisan Commission on Central America, is not expected to call for significant departures from the present administration policy toward the region.

The commission, which has a Jan. 10 deadline for completing the report, will suggest that the bulk of the suggested aid package be earmarked for economic assistance, consistent with current policy.

Alluding to the $1 billion aid recommendation, one official said that figure is comparable to what the United States has spent in the region over the past several years.

Headed by former Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger, the 12-member commission encompasses a wide range of political opinion. Its members include the former Republican governor of Texas, William P. Clements; San Antonio Mayor Henry Cisneros, a Democrat; former Democratic National Committee chairman Robert Strauss; and AFL-CIO President Lane Kirkland.

In gathering information for the report, the panel made two trips to the region and heard testimony from dozens of expert witnesses, including all former presidents and secretaries of state still living.

U.S. officials said that at the insistence of its more liberal members, the panel will urge that continued military aid to El Salvador be linked to improved human rights performance. It will call for maximum U.S. pressure on Salvadoran authorities to end politically-motivated killings.

At the same time, the panel also is expected to recommend an increase in military aid to El Salvador on grounds that the Salvadoran Army cannot win the four-year old civil war there if current assistance levels are maintained, the officials said.

On Wednesday, State Department spokesman John Hughes described the present aid level of $65.8 million as insufficient and asserted that the Salvadoran government recently has demonstrated a clear determination to take action against human rights violators.

The commission also will recommend that Nicaragua not take part in American economic assistance programs, the officials said.

Ask Us

Q. — Can a "conference call" be made over a home telephone?

A. — Yes. Southwestern Bell officials say several individuals in different cities can be connected into a long distance conference call. To do this, the operator should be notified of the persons to be called and the phone numbers. She will then contact each party and place them on hold until all individuals are on the line.

In Brief

Riots resume in Tunisia

TUNIS, Tunisia (AP) — Army troops and police opened fire on rioters in Tunis today as a crowd tried to set fire to one of the city's largest stores. At least three people were wounded.

It was the first report of major violence in Tunisia since Tuesday. Rioting erupted in the southern part of the north African country Dec. 29 after the government announced it was doubling the price of bread and increasing the cost of other basic staples. The violence spread to Tunis on Monday.

Unofficial reports put the death toll from the violence at about 25. The government confirmed four deaths.

The shooting erupted today around the Magasin General, located at the entrance to the old city of Tunis, a labyrinth of narrow streets and stalls that starts at the end of the capital's main street, Avenue Habib Bourguiba.

Ex-leader is to be detained

LAGOS, Nigeria (AP) — Nigeria's new military ruler said today that deposed civilian President Alhaji Shehu Shagari and his top aides will be detained until the new regime determines whether they are responsible for the country's economic problems.

"We still believe you are innocent until proven guilty, but our technique may prove a bit more unorthodox," Maj. Gen. Mohammed Buhari said at his first news conference since seizing control in the Saturday coup in black Africa's most populous nation.

Wearing an olive green military uniform and flanked by six officers of the new Federal Supreme Military Council, the 41-year-old Buhari addressed some 100 reporters at State House, the government center, against a background of the Nigerian national and army flags.

Life in the bustling city appeared normal, with few signs of military presence apart from a half-dozen roadblocks along the main route from the airport.

Cardinal, leader to meet

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — Cardinal Jozef Glemp and Premier Wojciech Jaruzelski met today in their first face-to-face encounter since Pope John Paul II's pilgrimage to Poland in June, sources said.

The Communist Party chief and the nation's Roman Catholic primate met at a government villa in Natolin, outside Warsaw, said sources who spoke on condition they not be identified. Church and government officials refused to officially confirm the meeting.

Church sources said Wednesday that Glemp and Jaruzelski were planning to discuss the release of four prominent dissidents and seven leaders of the outlawed Solidarity trade union who are being held pending trial on sedition charges.

They also planned to discuss a church-backed fund private aid fund for agriculture and the general status of the church in Poland, the sources said.

Woman sets fire on plane

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A woman who set fire to a lavatory aboard a Delta Air Lines flight as it approached Los Angeles was arrested by two U.S. marshals aboard the jet, and the blaze was quickly extinguished, the FBI said.

Audrey Jean Taylor, 31, of Las Vegas, Nev., was booked for investigation of destroying an aircraft, said FBI spokesman John Hoos.

The incident occurred Wednesday aboard Delta Flight 331, which was carrying 148 passengers — including the marshals — about 35 miles east of Los Angeles International Airport, en route from Dallas.

"During the course of the flight, Taylor set fire to a lavatory on the aircraft which was extinguished by the crew," Hoos said.

Eviction papers filed against seven families

HOUSTON (AP) — Houston Housing Authority officials have filed eviction documents against seven Vietnamese families allowed to live in a public housing project by an official accused of accepting bribes.

Papers filed with Harris County Justice of the Peace Laurence H. Wayne Wednesday seek the removal of seven families living in crumbling Allen Parkway Village.

Housing authority spokesperson Esther de Ipolyi said it will take about a month to force the families out of their apartments. She said eviction papers may be filed against three other families.

The 10 are the last of an original group of 24 Vietnamese-speaking families who were installed in the public housing complex by Steve Phuc, a former housing assistant with the authority.

Phuc was fired last August after several families alleged in affidavits that he accepted money to provide the housing.

Miss de Ipolyi said the families were permitted to move in without having to wait their turn on a waiting list of about 3,000 names.

She said that even though the families may qualify for the housing, they must move because they are living there without authorization and proper processing.

"It would be unfair to others on the waiting list" to permit the families to stay, said Miss de Ipolyi.

The families were sent letters last September asking them to vacate the apartments by Dec. 31.

by erma bombeck

For months now, weather forecasters have been saying this is going to be a record-breaking winter for snow ... 5,149 inches of it, to be exact.

On what do they base these predictions? Caterpillars. They have thin brown bands across their middles and are moving fast. Squirrels. They're laying in an extra supply of acorns. Onions. They have thick skins and anyone knows thick-skinned onions can mean only one thing. Snow.

I could have told you long before this that the winter was going to be a bruiser. Only my premises are more scientific.

Car batteries with a warranty that has run out. Nothing heralds the arrival of a fierce winter like a tempermental battery. The colder it gets, the more independent it becomes. On a blustery morning when you are running late, it will groan and sputter and then go dead. It is only a matter of time before it will demand an audience before it performs ... like a man from AAA three or four times a week.

Shortage of firewood. Count on record-breaking snows when you see a few branches of twigs at the supermarket being sold for $20 a bundle.

Snow shovel. You know you're in for at least 130 inches of snow when you discover your wife has loaned your snow shovel to the Binghams who took it with them when they moved to Florida last April.

Dogs' kidneys. There is a strong correlation between snowy winters and dogs' resistance to go out of doors to relieve themselves. Some dogs start as early as September to avoid any traffic patterns around doors leading to the outside. Even owners who stand with the door wide open in the winter and who beg, plead and grovel are faced with dogs with better sense than they have.

People can control their thermal destiny, if they want to. Mild winers can be calculated and planned like everything else. You want sunshine in January, February and March? Buy a new pair of skis. Get a pair of new boots for each one of the kids. Get your furnace cleaned. Stockpile food and supplies. Have rock salt in a handy container outside your front door. And then sit back and watch the sun shine.

I read somewhere where the coldest temperature ever registered on the planet earth was at a Soviet Union Antarctic station at Vostok. The temperature was 128 degrees below zero on July 21 of last year.

They probably asked for it. Some husband probably said, "Look, Anna, I know 200 people are a lot to invite for a party, but we'll cook out and keep the mess outside!"

South looked at his 100 honors, 11 high-card points and five-card major suit. He didn't play transfers and saw no reason not to go right to four hearts.

South was a typical hand-hog. He wanted to play the dummy irrespective of whether or not he could play it correctly.

Three no-trump was a typical safe contract. Against the normal spade lead, North would have no trouble collecting 10 tricks and might well get to 11 if the defense slipped a trifle.

What North would have done is unimportant. South had 100 honors and was going to play the hand.

He played it rapidly and with conspicuous lack of success. He won the club in dummy, drew trumps with three leads and led a diamond toward dummy. The queen fell to East's ace. The jack came back, and since the defense played well from that point on, South wound up with just nine tricks.

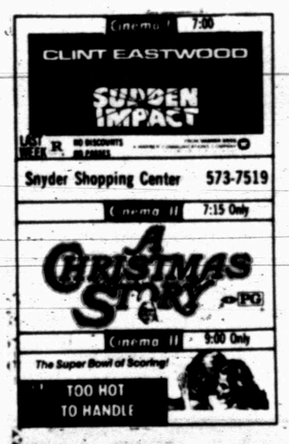

Careful play would have brought home the contract. South should leave trumps strictly alone and lead a diamond at trick two. This way he would be able to ruff his fourth diamond and score game and rubber plus his 100 honors.

BOOK REVIEW

THE MONEY MESSIAHS. By Norman King. Coward-McCann. 221 Pages. $15.95.

Those looking to hit the mother lode in the stock market would do well to heed the advice of John M. Templeton.

Says the highly successful mutual fund manager, "The only thing I know for certain about bull and bear markets is that both will occur."

In other words, the market goes up, and it goes down, and an investor can get badly burned if he puts his money down and then calls the wrong turn. Which is why many investors turn for advice to people who are supposed to be experts in the financial field.

Seventeen of these men are profiled in Norman King's "The Money Messiahs."

Five of them are profiled in depth. The remainder are given only a few pages of comment, but the comment is to the point and reveals in most interesting fashion the investment philosophies of such as Martin Zweig, Stanley Weinstein and William Donoghue.

The five who get the full treatment are Eliot Janeway, Joseph Granville, John M. Templeton, James Dines and Howard Ruff. They are, according to King, "a conservative forecaster, a showman turned technician, an astute mutual fund manager, a goldbug, and a doom-and-gloom soothsayer."

In addition to neatly encapsulating the business philosophies of these men, King also draws them — in well-chosen words — as people working in a marketplace which is alien to most but which wields tremendous influence on everyone's life.

Some cheeses I can take or leave, others turn me off. But the one I like with meals, drinks or at virtually any time is the British-American classic called cheddar.

Ranging from cream yellow to deep orange in color, this cheese starts out mild and makes a tasty sandwich. Then it gradually ages to a sharpness that some find too acute, but I love it then as an accompaniment to apple pie or beer.

This cheese, which originated in the English village of Cheddar many years ago, is made from the whole milk of cows. It isn't good until it has ripened for three or four months and is still too mild for some cheese buffs. It takes one or two years to become truly sharp.

Cheddar was exported to the United States during the 18th century, and thereby hangs a tale. About a century and a half ago, a woman named Clarissa Steele moved from New England to California, taking with her, among other things, a dogeared cookbook that had belonged to her grandmother.

Leafing through it in her new home one day, Mrs. Steele came upon a recipe for cheddar that stirred pangs of nostalgia.

Enlisting the aid of a friendly Indian, she corralled several cows, milked them and proceeded to make the cheese. It turned out so well that her husband and several cousins began shipping it to San Francisco. Soon they had set up a thriving business that marked the birth of California's cheese industry, which today brings in $140 million a year.

Today the Steeles are no longer cheese makers, but they are still remembered. Recently, the ranch of one of Clarissa Steele's cousins, Isaac, was dedicated as a historical monument.

Californians consume about 29 pounds of cheese per capita a year, compared with the national average of 18, but the state produces only 20 percent of the cheese its inhabitants eat. California's Milk Advisory Board's cheese coordinating committee is seeking to increase cheese production in the state.

Cheddar is good in cooking, as in this recipe for ham and noodles.

2 cups medium noodles, cooked (about 1 cup dry)
2 tablespoons butter
2 tablespoons all-purpose flour
½ teaspoon salt
Dash of pepper
2 cups milk
1 cup diced, cooked ham
1 cup diced cheddar cheese

Cook noodles according to directions on package until tender. Drain and set aside. Melt butter in pot. Remove from heat. Blend flour and seasonings with butter. Gradually add milk, mixing until well blended. Cook over low heat, stirring constantly until thick and smooth. Remove from heat. Add ham and cheese. Add noodles. Pour into greased 2-quart casserole and bake in preheated 350-degree oven for about 25 minutes, until the top is bubbly and slightly brown. Serves 4 to 6 persons. Good with a chilled rose wine.

Arrested veterans haunted by combat memories

GREENFIELD, Mass. (AP) — One of three Vietnam veterans accused of torching a Buddhist shrine "cried for seven years" after returning from the war and once pointed a gun at his ex-wife, thinking she was Vietnamese, the woman said.

The 33-year-old veteran, Roland F. Voudren, of Turners Falls, was returned to a Veterans Administration hospital in Leeds today, along with the two other men, Richard A. Papineau, 35, of Hartford, Conn. and Donald E. Taylor, 37, of Charlemont.

Innocent pleas to "willful and malicious burning of a building" were entered Wednesday in Greenfield District Court on behalf of all three by attorney Robert Carlsen, head of the local chapter of Vietnam Veterans of America.

Judge Allan McGuane set $10,000 bond apiece before ordering them to remain at the hospital pending a pretrial conference Jan. 27. The three had entered the hospital voluntarily for undisclosed treatment prior to their arrests at the facility Wednesday.

District Attorney W. Michael Ryan said one of the men happened upon the shrine in the isolated town of Hawley in the Berkshire Hills sometime before the New Year's Eve fire, "freaked out" at the sight of the Oriental architecture and planned the fire with the two other men.

Voudren's former wife described the ex-Marine as haunted by nightmarish memories of Vietnam. She said he never got over seeing his best friend die in combat and was dogged by his belief that he was guilty of killing enemy children.

"He always used to say to me, 'I was in the war. I had to kill people. Nobody understands,'" said Linda Albino, who said Voudren's drinking and Vietnam "flashbacks" led to divorce.

"He cried all the time. He cried for seven years," she said.

Voudren decided to discuss Vietnam with Taylor and both men frequently took their weekend passes from the VA hospital together, according to Mrs. Albino.

Voudren said he once threw her on their living room floor and pointed a gun at her.

"He thought I was a [illegible] (Vietnamese). He was confused," she said.

Psychological counseling at the VA center never seemed to help, his family said.

Norman Crews, assistant director of the VA, said Papineau entered the facility Dec. 15, Voudren Sept. 18 and Taylor July 25. He refused to say what sort of treatment the men were receiving or whether they were in the hospital's 19-bed ward for Vietnam veterans suffering from post-combat stress.

Veterans in the ward said Wednesday that wartime memories are no excuse for peacetime violence.

"When we have a flashback, we run to the woods or our room," said Steve Piscitelli, an ex-Marine recipient of two purple hearts. "We would first commit suicide or seek help before planning to hurt someone or cause any danger."

"We've seen too much hurt to hurt someone else," said Dan Staples, 36, of Northampton.

Deputy defense secretary resigns

WASHINGTON (AP) — A year after he took the job, Paul Thayer has resigned as the deputy secretary of defense because of a Securities and Exchange Commission investigation into allegations he was involved in insider stock trading before he came to the Pentagon.

Thayer, proclaiming the allegations "entirely without merit," quit Wednesday in a letter to President Reagan. He said his resignation will take effect Jan. 12, exactly one year after he left the presidency of LTV Corp., a major defense contractor, to become the No. 2 official at the Pentagon.

The SEC investigation focuses on allegations that Thayer, in his role as a member of the board of LTV and two other companies, gave private information about potential mergers or acquisitions to associates, permitting them to buy or sell stocks and thus make money as prices rose or fell after the information was publicly announced.

The practice is banned by federal securities laws. In recent years, the SEC has made illegal insider trading a high priority.

No replacement was immediately announced for the 64-year-old Thayer, who informed Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger late Wednesday morning about his decision.

In recent years, the deputy secretary of defense has traditionally come from the business world. But Thayer may be replaced by someone already at the Pentagon because top business officials might be reluctant to take the job with only a year left in Reagan's term, according to Pentagon sources who declined to be named.

In his letter to Reagan, Thayer said he had been told that the SEC "intends to file a civil complaint against me alleging that I improperly divulged insider information concerning certain securities" before joining the Pentagon.

"This allegation against me is entirely without merit. I intend to vigorously defend this matter in the courts with every confidence that I will ultimately be exonerated," Thayer said.

But he noted the defense "will require a substantial amount of my time and attention" and said he didn't want to stay at the Pentagon unless he would do so without distraction. He told the president he was leaving "with the deepest regret."

In addition to the civil complaint, government sources who declined to be identified said, there is also a criminal investigation focusing on whether false statements were made to the SEC.

In his reply, Reagan praised Thayer for "a major program to modernize every element of our military forces and prepare them to meet the challenges of the coming decade and beyond."

Thayer is a former test pilot and World War II flying ace who rose through the ranks to the top of the defense industry. He has spent much of the past year as a referee among the combatants during inter-service fights over how to spend billions of dollars for new weapons that are part of the administration's record military build-up.

The three companies involved in the investigation are LTV, Allied and Anheuser-Busch. Thayer sat on the boards of all three before joining the Pentagon.

Thayer, in a statement released at the Pentagon, said there is no claim that he received any "financial profit from the questioned transactions."

In the past year, Thayer has been involved in the fights over the budget and has publicly battled with Navy Secretary John Lehman, one of the strongest advocates of building the Navy to 600 ships from the 450 in service when Reagan took office.

Thayer has questioned whether the Navy should get as much money as Lehman wanted. Last fall, Lehman said he was "sick and tired of spending 98 percent of my time up on the (Capitol) Hill undoing the damage that senior Defense officials are doing to the president's budget."

That official was known to be Thayer.

Thayer is the son of an Oklahoma oilfield contractor. He enlisted in the Navy and spent World War II as a carrier-based fighter pilot, shooting down six Japanese planes.

Judge okays injunction order against church

PAMPA, Texas (AP) — A Baptist pastor says that his congregation does not intend to follow a judge's order to either license the church's day care center or shut it down.

State District Judge John Cain gave the state the permanent injunction against the Pampa Baptist Temple Wednesday, saying that the government had a "compelling interest" in licensing day care centers.

But the church's pastor, Rev. Jerry West, later warned that the ruling could prompt a confrontation at his church, which will continue to operate the day care center. He said the ruling would be appealed.

"We will not close ... right now, we are continuing to operate," West said.

The Pampa Baptist Temple contends state licensing and inspection of its day care center violates the First Amendment.

A special assistant attorney general, C. Ed Davis, said Wednesday that he was pleased with the ruling, which he said would let the state take action against several other Texas church groups, which also have refused to license their child-care facilities.

Davis said he hoped the state could avoid the confrontation with the West, but doubted that it could.

"Rev. West made it clear he would not be inclined to shut down the facilities," Davis said. "We don't want a situation where we have to go in there with armed guards and do something drastic ... what we want to do is to get them to accept the liucense," he said.

West said the church would take the case to the U.S. Supreme Court, if it had to.

The day care center has about 40 to 50 children.

Muscle spasms in back

DEAR DR. LAMB — About a month ago I helped a friend split and stack firewood. The next morning I had muscles spasms in my lower back. It even hurt when I breathed. But the pain slacked off throughout the day and gradually disappeared.

I felt I had recovered and I did some construction work that involved lifting and digging. I felt great, but the next day I bent over to pick up a light stepladder and the spasms started again. Is this a simple matter of muscle conditioning or is it possible that I have a serious problem with my back?

DEAR READER — Whenever a person uses muscles he hasn't used in a while, he is apt to develop muscles spasms or cramps. Most disc problems involve the lower spine, may affect nerves in the hip and leg and are not associated with breathing problems.

Whenever muscles are fatigued, even lifting a light stepladder may put the muscles in the proper position to cramp or spasm. People need to train different sets of muscles when they are going to engage in some new form of activity.

For example, a skier needs to train his leg muscles properly for the kind of work he will be doing while skiing.

The types of exercises used to prevent most backaches are outlined in the Health Letter 13-10, Backache and What to Do About It, which I am sending you. Others who would like this issue can send 75 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it to me, in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019.

You should stretch the muscles before you do the work, and again when you are through. Most cramps or spasms indicate the muscles are over-contracted and need to be stretched. Once you have the spasm, a good physical therapist often can do wonders in relieving the discomfort.

DEAR DR. LAMB — My gums bleed constantly. They bleed when I brush my teeth (I use the softest bristles available) and even when I'm just talking or chewing gum.

This is giving me bad breath. I've visited a periodontist but he didn't help. I take vitamin C daily, brush with baking soda and rinse with salt water and hydrogen peroxide. I've also tried swabbing my teeth and using floss, hoping that my gums might heal.

DEAR READER — You need to go back to the periodontist, or to another one. You probably have irritated gums, which may require surgery. You certainly need to be on a program that includes proper brushing, cleaning and flossing. If you smoke, stop. But go back and get some professional attention or you may lose your teeth from loss of bone tissue.

Government sends 2 officers abroad

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (AP) — Two former Salvadoran intelligence chiefs linked with death squads have been reassigned abroad following U.S. demands for the exile of officers suspected of involvement with the right-wing terrorist groups.

A government official, who asked not to be identified, said Wednesday night that Lt. Col. Aristides Alfonso Marquez, former National Police intelligence chief, and Maj. Jose Ricardo Pozo, former Treasury Police intelligence chief, were transferred out of the country.

In another development, U.S. special envoy Richard Stone arrived in San Salvador on Wednesday to meet with President Alvaro Magana and other government officials. Stone was to travel today to Nicaragua to meet officials of the leftist Sandinista government.

As Stone continued his peace-seeking mission, Salvadoran air force planes Wednesday bombed guerrillas positions in northern El Salvador and CIA-backed anti-Sandinista rebels pressed attacks in northern Nicaragua.

The Salvadoran official said Pozo was ordered to Paraguay, but he was not sure whether Pozo was assigned as a military attache at the Salvadoran Embassy or was given a scholarship to study counterinsurgency. He said he did not know Marquez' destination.

Diplomatic sources quoted in published reports in the United States in November identified Pozo and Marquez as being involved in the death squads, blamed for the deaths of most of the 39,000 civilians killed in the four-year civil war between leftist rebels and the U.S.-backed government.

U.S. officials say the squads are composed in part of off-duty or retired military members and financed by wealthy Salvadorans living in Miami and elsewhere abroad.

The Reagan administration has said those connected with death squads ought to be exiled and Vice President George Bush warned during his December visit here that the government would lose U.S. support if action was not taken against the death squads.

Stone, in Honduras earlier Wednesday, said he was hopeful a high-level diplomatic meeting beginning Saturday in Panama may produce concrete steps toward peace in Central America. He praised year-old peace efforts by foreign ministers of the Contadora group — made up of Mexico, Venezuela, Colombia and Panama.

In fighting, civilian sources in Suchitoto, 27 miles north of San Salvador, reported bombing runs Wednesday after a clash between guerrillas and government troops.

In northern Nicaragua, rebels pressed attacks against Sandinista troops near Jalapa, 11 miles from the Honduran border.

"We are sure their objective is to attack from these hills and seize San Fernando and Santa Clara, with the intention of seizing Jalapa, an important coffee and tobacco trading center," army officer Felix Gonzalez said.

The Sandinistas have been moving troops into the San Fernando area to reinforce the 2,000 soldiers defending Jalapa.

Ford prefers to drive BMW

MELBOURNE, Australia (AP) — Alfred Ford, great-grandson of Henry Ford, says it's nothing personal, but he prefers to drive a BMW.

Ford, visiting Australia as a member of the Hare Krishna movement, was asked Wednesday by reporters what kind of car he drives.

"I should drive a Ford I suppose, but I like BMWs because they're a good car," he said.

Ford was less definite when asked how much he is worth.

"It's millions ... A few," was all he would say.

Dressed in traditional Indian clothing with a flower garland and the painted head markings of the movement, Ford praised the Krishna movement and said it is attracting members worldwide.

"The priests of Hare Krishna do live a very austere life," Ford said.

Dear Abby

Wife Is 'Other Woman' For Straying Husband

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1984 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: A year ago, my husband of 23 years (we're both in our mid-40s) left me to move in with a 23-year-old girl he picked up in a bar. Until then we had a good and loving relationship. Then his business failed, which was more than he could handle, so he left.

He didn't leave completely. He keeps many of his personal belongings here, still pays all the household expenses and comes to see me two or three nights a week. (We usually end up in bed.) Of course, we can't see any of our old friends anymore or go out in public because he doesn't want his girlfriend to know about our continuing relationship.

My question: Am I doing the right thing by continuing to see my husband? I think he needs all the love and support I can give him. I'm sure that when he gets things figured out he will want to come back home again. But until then, what about the girl?

I don't want to hurt anyone, but I still love my husband and don't want to let him down when he needs me. What do you advise?

THE OTHER WOMAN

DEAR WOMAN: You are to be commended for your loyalty, devotion, understanding and support of a husband who left you to live with another woman. But what kind of man would live with one woman and sneak out to be with another two or three times a week? Take a closer look at this deceitful and mixed-up character. What assurance have you that he will return and be a decent husband again? You are being more a forgiving mother to him than a wife, but if you are happy in that role, 'tis folly to be wise.

DEAR ABBY: I recently announced my engagement, so everywhere I go people congratulate me, then they say, "I'm looking for my invitation." Or they ask the wedding date, and when I tell them, they say, "Oh, great, I can make it!"

I am furious at myself for not saying something on the spot to let them know I had not planned on inviting them. These people who are not my close friends try to bribe me by saying, "If you invite me, I'll bring a nice present." That is not the point. I can't invite the whole blasted community to my wedding!

My parents are retired and can't afford to pay for my wedding, so my fiance and I are footing the bill, and we are limited because of the cost.

How should I handle these people who invite themselves? I hate to hurt their feelings, but I need to let them know they shouldn't expect an invitation.

SPEECHLESS AND FUMING

DEAR S. AND F.: What's wrong with the truth? Tell them you are planning to have a very small wedding because that's all you can afford.

DEAR ABBY: A New York reader wrote that a relative who had died on a trip to Poland was buried there because it would have been too expensive ($7,500) to have his body flown back to the United States for burial. I wondered why cremation wasn't considered. It would have cost much less to have his remains (ashes) flown home.

I had always wondered why, with Europe's long history, some of those countries weren't crowded with cemeteries. On my first visit there I learned that as long as someone pays rent on a burial plot, the remains are left undisturbed. But if payments cease, the grave is emptied in preparation for the next occupant.

Owners of homes fight court battle

AUSTIN (AP) — Robert Matcha, accused by the state of violating the open beaches law, says he kept trying to repair his hurricane-damaged beach house on West Galveston Island to protect the interior from repeated rains.

"Every time it rained I had a quarter of an inch of rain in the house and I had to get a roof on it," the University of Houston chemistry professor testified Wednesday, explaining why he worked on the dwelling after Attorney General Jim Mattox filed suit to stop him.

Matcha was one of three witnesses called Wednesday by the attorney general as the state and West Galveston home owners began a battle in state district court to determine the power of Mattox in enforcing Texas' open beach laws. The court fight continues today.

No defense witnesses were heard Wednesday.

Mattox has filed suit against about 15 owners of West Galveston beach houses damaged by Hurricane Alicia, claiming the structures cannot be rebuilt because the storm shifted landmarks to put them on beach areas reserved for the public.

Assistant Attorney General Ken Cross argued that a temporary injunction should be issued against Matcha.

"The Galveston beach has been a public way for many years," Cross said. "We will prove Mr. Matcha's house is now on the seaward side of the vegetation line, which marks the public beach. Furthermore, we will prove Mr. Matcha's property was on the seaward side after Hurricane Carla in 1961, before he brought the property."

But a lawyer for Matcha, Rice Aston, said, "Under state law, a man does not lose title to his land by boundary changes caused by hurricanes and cyclones.

"What the state is trying to do is take private property and apply it to public use without compensation. They just want Mr. Matcha to tear down his damaged house and remove it at his own cost," Aston said.

The Matcha case is the first of those filed by Mattox. Four other cases are scheduled for a hearing in Austin Jan. 27.

In Galveston, 82 home owners have filed a class action suit against the attorney general and his attempt to stop rebuilding. No trial date has been set.

Under the Texas Open Beaches Act, passed by the Legislature in 1959, the area between the line of mean low tide and the line of continuous vegetation must be open to the public.

Attorneys on both sides agreed Wednesday that Matcha's beach house was inland of the vegetation line when it was constructed in June 1982.

Matcha testified Wednesday he bought the West Galveston Island lot in June 1982 and built a two-bedroom, one-bath cottage on it for use as rental property. The upper part of the house was on pilings 13 feet above the beach, with a concrete slab and garage at ground level.

Hurricane Alicia ripped off the roof, tore out three walls of the large living room and washed about three feet of sand from beneath the concrete slab, which collapsed and broke.

Matcha said he first got approval from the attorney general's department to make temporary repairs, then got a building permit from the city of Galveston. He admitted some of the work was done after Mattox filed the suit.

"It was my estimation I was working in a legal framework because I had asked the attorney general (permission) to make temporary repairs and I got the city building permit," Matcha said.

Matcha said he first heard of the suit by reading a newspaper.

The state's first witness was Dr. Robert Morton of Austin, an expert in coastal geology.

He said wave and wind action in Hurricane Alicia swept large amounts of sand off the regular beach area on Galveston Island and deposited it inland on and past the vegetation line.

Morton showed a series of aerial photographs, taken from the attorney general's official plane, and said they showed many beach houses, including Matcha's, are now in the public beach area.

The beach beneath Matcha's beach house was lowered more than 27 inches, he said.

"This sand will not come back to the beach area. It is lost to the beach system," Morton testified.

Morton showed diagrams of vegetation lines after Hurricane Carla, before Alicia and after Alicia. All were different.

"All are true vegetation lines, but none is more permanent than any other," he said.

Morton said, in his opinion, the vegetation line on West Galveston Island would move back seaward due to accretion of sand from the gulf, but never as far as it was before Alicia.

"There is no certainty it will ever be seaward of the Matcha property," Morton said, "because of the long-term beach erosion pattern on the island."

Dutch filmmaker makes Texas film

SWEETWATER, Texas (AP) — The cavalry approaches from the east, thundering over hills and flatlands to aid a Sweetwater monument in distress. But instead of toting weapons and supplies, this cavalry comes burdened with cameras, lights and a screenplay specifically adapted for this West Texas city.

Dutch filmmaker George Sluizer, in Sweetwater completing talent research for "The Red Desert Penitentiary," said "a reasonable percentage" of the movie's box office profits will go toward the restoration of the Municipal Auditorium.

Co-producing the satirical comedy with Sluizer is The Sweetwater Little Theater Group and interested local residents.

A unique aspect of the project, with shooting scheduled to begin in July, is that Sluizer wants to utilize as much local talent as possible in making a professional film.

"We want to see how much creative talent we could get here and how far we have to go for others," he said. "We're trying to get most of the actors from the community and trying to limit the outside input."

But, he added, "We're not trying to make a home movie."

Sluizer admitted, however, that some of the characters might be hired from larger cities such as Abilene, Houston or Dallas.

"One character I know I'll have to bring in from New York because he must have a New York accent," he said.

The 50-year-old filmmaker, originally from Amsterdam, The Netherlands, described how this idea was born, referring back to his first visit to Sweetwater four years ago during the famous Rattlesnake Round-up.

Sluizer said that while vacationing in Big Bend, he met an Abilenian who suggested the filmmaker visit the snake event to get a taste of the real Texas. His visit to the round-up resulted in "Sweetwater Junction," a 36-minute documentary, produced originally for television.

PUBLIC NOTICE

In proceedings pending before the Public Utility Commission of Texas (PUC), local exchange telephone companies are requesting authority to charge AT&T Communications of the Southwest, Inc., for use of their facilities. These proposed charges are higher than AT&T Communications can pay at current Texas long distance rate levels. To position itself to be able to implement rates that are sufficient to produce revenues that will recover the costs facing the company, AT&T Communications must now file for rate relief to be able to implement rates that reflect the costs of access that are ultimately imposed on the company.

While AT&T Communications does not want to increase its Texas rates, an increase would be required to recover the increased access charges AT&T Communications will have to pay to the local exchange telephone companies under several proposals pending before the Commission. These access charges at the proposed increased levels represent more than 80 percent of AT&T Communications' operating expense in Texas.

Accordingly, AT&T Communications, in accordance with the Public Utility Regulatory Act and the rules of the PUC, hereby gives notice of the company's intent to implement a new schedule of rates for long distance calls within Texas. The proposed rates will be effective January 28, 1984, unless otherwise determined by the Commission. All customers and classes of customers would be affected by AT&T Communications' proposed rates.

If higher access charges are ordered, AT&T Communications has no recourse but to pay these charges and recover the costs from its customers as a cost of providing long distance service within Texas. AT&T Communications has filed rates which would mean a maximum overall increase in adjusted test period revenues of $301.4 million, or 27.85 percent. This amount would help recover cost increases due to the proposed level of access charges now pending before the PUC.

A complete copy of all tariffs and rate schedules is on file with the Texas Public Utility Commission at Austin, Texas, and with every municipality in Texas.

Persons who wish to intervene or otherwise participate in these proceedings should notify the Commission as soon as possible. A request to intervene or participate or for further information should be mailed to the Public Utility Commission of Texas, 7800 Shoal Creek Boulevard, Suite 400N, Austin, Texas 78757. Further information also may be obtained by calling the Public Utility Commission Consumer Affairs Division at (512) 458-0223 or (512) 458-0227 or (512) 458-0221 teletypewriter for the deaf.

Redskins showing concern over Forty-niners' Montana

WASHINGTON (AP) - The Washington Redskins are worried, worried about San Francisco 49er quarterback Joe Montana and the miracles he performs on the football field.

The Montana-led 49ers invade Robert F. Kennedy Stadium on Sunday for the National Conference championship game. If the Redskins win, they will become the first National Football League team to advance to back-to-back Super Bowls since the Pittsburgh Steelers turned the trick in 1979 and 1980.

Montana, who can throw from in the pocket or on the run, completed 65 percent of his passes (332 of 515) for 3,910 yards, 26 touchdowns and 12 interceptions, in leading the 49ers to a 10-6 regular-season record.

In last week's 24-23 playoff victory over Detroit, Montana completed 18 of 31 for 281 yards and a touchdown. He also was instrumental in driving the 49ers 70 yards in the waning moments of the game for the winning touchdown.

"Montana is the man who makes the 49ers tick," said Redskin assistant head coach Richie Petitbon. "Offensively the 49ers will be the best team we have faced all year and Montana the best quarterback."

"Containing Montana will be the key to our success," said linebacker Mel Kaufman.

The Redskin front four - Todd Liebenstein, Dave Butz, Darryl Grant and Dexter Manley - are No.1 in the league in defending against the rush, holding opponents to 80.1 yards a game.

The 49ers, who average 140 yards a game on the ground, are led by Wendell Tyler (4.9 yards a carry), Montana (4.7 yards) and Roger Craig (4.1).

A handicap for Montana will be the absence of wide receiver Dwight Clark. The 49ers leading ballhawk with 60 receptions and eight touchdowns, Clark has been sidelined for the playoffs with a knee injury.

Did refs boo-boo?

AUSTIN (AP) - What appeared in television film sequences to be a flagrant holding violation by Georgia tackle Guy McIntyre may have cost Texas the national college football championship.

TV sequences shown on two Austin stations Tuesday night showed McIntyre apparently reaching out and grabbing Texas linebacker Mark Lang by the left ankle, causing Lang to fall on the seat of his pants.

No penalty was called.

With Lang on the ground, Georgia quarterback John Lastinger raced past him for 17 yards and the winning touchdown with 3:22 to play in Georgia's 10-9 victory over the Longhorns.

The loss destroyed Texas' chances for a national title. The Longhorns were ranked No. 2 and top-ranked Nebraska lost to Miami 31-30, with Miami jumping to first. Texas finished fifth.

Lang, reached at his home in Iraan, Texas, said, "I was reading the tackle (McIntyre), and I was going to scrape off to the outside and the tackle grabbed ahold of my leg and I fell down and failed to get outside."

Lang said, however, "You can't make excuses. It is one of those things. They didn't see it and it isn't holding if they don't see it."

Texas defensive coordinator David McWilliams said the TV replay he saw showed that McIntyre grabbed Lang's ankle, which would have been a holding infraction.

IMPORTANT VICTORY -- Snyder's varsity girls took a key, 44-37 win in Lamesa earlier this week, their fourth straight win since returning from the holiday break. The girls, 1-2 in District 2-4A play, will take on the Loboettes in Monahans at 6:15 Friday. Above, Karlene Thompson scores on the fast break as Becky Gray holds up traffic. SWC roundup...

Hogs, Red Raiders win

by The Associated Press

The Southwest Conference's first major battle doesn't tip off until tonight, but some challengers to the league throne have made quick starts.

Both Arkansas and Texas Tech, two teams that fared well in non-conference action, won games Wednesday as the league race opened for six schools.

Arkansas defeated Baylor 57-50 behind center Joe Kleine's 18 points and Texas Tech routed Texas Christian 79-60. In other action, Texas A&M held off Rice 52-47 and Texas lost a non-conference game to Kansas State 64-54.

Tonight in Dallas, the two league's leaders in non-conference play, defending champion Houston and Southern Methodist, open play. SMU brings a 12-2 record into the game. Houston, 10-2, is a 5½-point favorite.

In Lubbock, Tech, 7-5, broke open a tight contest with a 20-7 surge midway through the second half.

Junior forward Vince Taylor, who led the Red Raiders with 10 points, 12 rebounds and four blocked shots, was at the center of the rally, scoring 4 points, hauling in four rebounds, swatting away a pair of TCU shots and dishing out two assists.

Texas Tech coach Gerald Myers credited the surge and several transition goals for his team's success against the Frogs.

"The success that we have had this year has come as a result of team effort," Myers said. "I thought the turning point was when we got a couple of transition baskets that opened an eight-point lead to 12."

TCU, 7-5, played without freshman standout Carven Holcombe, who fractured a foot last week.

"Obviously, our not having Carven was a big difference. Still, we've got to learn to play with the people we have available," Killingsworth said.

Razorback coach Eddie Sutton, whose team raised its season record to 10-2 Wednesday night, was just happy to get out of Waco's Heart O' Texas Coliseum with the win over Baylor, 4-8.

"As long as I've been at Arkansas, it seems we've never played very well here," Sutton said.

"It's something about this place that brings out the worst in us. We've had trouble winning here in the past and about the only good thing you can say tonight is that we came away with a victory. But we didn't look very good doing it."

Dusters test Cowley at 6

TONKAWA, Okla. -- Western Texas College's Dusters resume what is shaping up to be a fine basketball season for them here tonight as they take on Cowley County Community College in the first round of the Tournament of Champions.

The Dusters, 14-3 for the season, have been idle since a Dec. 8 victory over WJCAC foe Howard College which left the team 2-0 in conference play.

Western is slated to face Cowley at 6 this evening. Loser of the game will play again Friday at 2 against the loser of a game between Northern Oklahoma College and Bacone College while the winner plays at 8 p.m. Friday against the NOC-Bacone winner.

Also in the tournament are Amarillo, Rogers State, Hutchinson CC and Crowder College.

Finals are scheduled for 8 p.m. Saturday.

The Dusters will return home to entertain Tyler Junior College on the 12th before picking up Western Junior College Athletic Conference play. They host No. 1 ranked Odessa on Jan. 16.

WTC's men return to action Jan. 13-14 in the South Plains Classic.

Cats play

Snyder varsity and junior varsity teams don't play again until Friday, but there are plenty of underclassmen games going on tonight which involve local cagers.

Action begins at 4 in the junior high school gym as the seventh grade girls entertain Lamesa for back-to-back games. The eighth graders also host Lamesa in two games, beginning at 6. In addition, Snyder freshmen girls host Big Spring in the high school gym at 6:30.

The boys begin play at 4:30 as the eighth grade Gold team plays Lamesa at the Lamesa Middle School. The eighth Black and seventh grade Black and Gold teams will also play at the Middle School, beginning at 5:30. Snyder freshmen boys will play Lamesa in the Lamesa High School Gym at 5:30 and 7.

Snyder's varsity and junior varsity teams play in Monahans on Friday.

'Big push' for pro grid talent is on

USFL hoping to land key players

NEW YORK (AP) - Now the waiting begins - for undrafted players and drafting teams.

For some players, the wait could be over at the completion today of the United States Football League's second college draft.

For some teams, the wait could run weeks or months, perhaps halfway into the USFL season, into May, when the National Football League conducts its draft - when some potentially high-priced rookies do some comparison shopping.

Mike Rozier, Nebraska's Heisman Trophy-winning running back, and Steve Young, the record breaking quarterback from Brigham Young, are certain to be among those playing the waiting game.

Each is considered to be a guaranteed high first-round pick in the NFL draft.

Each was a first-round pick Wednesday, when the USFL conducted 11 of its 19 scheduled rounds and also announced its teams' territorial selections.

Some of Rozier's Cornhusker teammates, who fell a two-point conversion short of a national championship last Monday night in the Orange Bowl, had to wait a while before being selected.

Irving Fryar, the wide receiver whose last-minute dropped pass surely gained him as much national attention as any reception he ever made, was the No. 3 pick in the first round, by the Chicago Blitz.

"That'll cost him a couple of million bucks," Dr. James Hoffman, the owner of the Blitz, said of the drop. Presumably, it was a joke.

Nebraska tackle Raridon Scott was picked 17th in the opening round, by the Philadelphia Stars; running back Mark Schellen went to the New Orleans Breakers in the third round, wide receiver Ricky Simmons was selected by the Washington Federals in the fourth, quarterback Turner Gill was picked by the Houston Gamblers in the fifth, guard Dean Steinkuhler, the Outland and Lombardi Trophy winner, was chosen in the sixth round by the Arizona Wranglers, and defensive tackle Doug Herrmann by the Memphis Showboats.

Rozier, advised during a stopover in Lincoln, Neb., that he was the top choice, said he wouldn't give much thought to his pro career until he'd played in the East-West Shrine Game in Stanford, Calif., next Saturday and the Japan Bowl on Jan. 15.

But he made it clear he knows his worth.

"It's going to take some money," he said. "I think I'm worth something. I gave a lot. They're going to have to give a little bit."

If nothing else, he gave Pittsburgh's pro football fans something to talk about besides Terry Bradshaw and the Steelers. The Maulers reported that after the announcement they had drafted him, there were ticket lines, a first for the club.

George Heddleston, the Maulers' general manager, called Rozier "the most talented college athlete in the country. We're confident and optimistic we can sign him ... We picked him because we think we have a legitimate chance of signing him."

The Chicago Blitz spent some of its draft choices on NFL bloodlines, selecting in the third round Missouri linebacker Bobby Bell, the son of the Kansas City Chiefs' great linebacker, and taking in the territorial phase Illinois defensive tackle Mark Butkus, nephew of the Chicago Bears' super linebacker, Dick Butkus. Oklahoma, too, went for a branch of a family tree, selecting Miami running back Keith Griffin, Archie's brother, in the 11th round.

In addition to the 19 "open" rounds, the league also announced those "territorial" selections, 20 for the 12 original teams, 30 for the six new ones. Those picks were made before the start of the draft.

Other players picked in that phase of the auction included quarterbacks Jeff Hostetler of West Virginia (by Pittsburgh), Ben Bennett of Duke (by Jacksonville), Walter Lewis of Alabama (by Birmingham), Blair Keil of Notre Dame (by Chicago) and Boomer Esiason of Maryland (by Washington); linebackers Keith Browner of Southern Cal (by Los Angeles) and Carl Banks of Michigan State (by Michigan), wide receiver Thad Jemison of Ohio State (by New Jersey), defensive end Robert Smith of Grambling (by New Orleans), and defensive tackle Rick Bryan of Oklahoma (by Oklahoma).

NFL steps up recruiting

PALO ALTO, Calif. (AP) - The party is over and the "big rush" is on for National Football League teams recruiting college players.

Some 320 representatives of the NFL - scouts, general managers, assistants and coaches from every team - have beseiged the 66 players gathered for the Shrine East-West All-Star Game at Stanford Stadium on Saturday.

In years past, NFL officials mingled casually with the players, watched them at practice, tried to get a sense of who might fit in with their rosters. This year, it's different.

Stung by criticism that some of the top players last year signed with the rival United States Football League because the NFL didn't pay enough attention to them, the NFL has mounted a vigorous recruitment campaign.

"It's like a big rush of fraternities," Art Rooney, Jr., the Pittsburgh Steelers vice president, said Wednesday night. "There are more scouts than there are players. These games have been getting like social events. We used to just scout the players before the USFL. Now it's taken on a different dimension. It's more serious."

The NFL showed off a propaganda film of game highlights to the players on Tuesday night, then introduced them to some of the team officials in an informal setting. On Wednesday night, there was a talk by a league representative about drugs. The players have received a book "The NFL and You," describing the advantages and fringe benefits of playing in the league.

"I loved it," said Southern Mississippi center Steve Carmody. "I felt the film was talking to me."

It's the kind of scene that also goes on at the Hula Bowl, Blue-Gray Game and the Senior Bowl. But during the week of the USFL draft, held Wednesday in New York, the recruitment is a little more intense.

"We got a complaint last year," said Francis "Bucko" Kilroy, general manager of the New England Patriots. "We did a survey to find out why we lost seven of the people that went to the USFL. One of the reasons was they were completely ignored by the scouting groups."

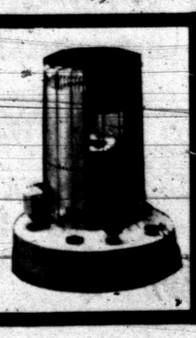

"This year, we won't be caught standing still," he said. "We're here to sell the NFL on merit."

Kilroy said he and his team officials have talked with 42 players since Sunday.

Government sends 2 officers abroad

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (AP) — Two former Salvadoran intelligence chiefs linked with death squads have been reassigned abroad following U.S. demands for the exile of officers suspected of involvement with the right-wing terrorist groups.

A government official, who asked not to be identified, said Wednesday night that Lt. Col. Aristides Alfonso Marquez, former National Police intelligence chief, and Maj. Jose Ricardo Pozo, former Treasury Police intelligence chief, were transferred out of the country.

In another development, U.S. special envoy Richard Stone arrived in San Salvador on Wednesday to meet with President Alvaro Magana and other government officials. Stone was to travel today to Nicaragua to meet officials of the leftist Sandinista government.

As Stone continued his peace-seeking mission, Salvadoran air force planes Wednesday bombed guerrillas positions in northern El Salvador and CIA-backed anti-Sandinista rebels pressed attacks in northern Nicaragua.

The Salvadoran official said Pozo was ordered to Paraguay, but he was not sure whether Pozo was assigned as a military attache at the Salvadoran Embassy or was given a scholarship to study counterinsurgency. He said he did not know Marquez' destination.

Diplomatic sources quoted in published reports in the United States in November identified Pozo and Marquez as being involved in the death squads, blamed for the deaths of most of the 39,000 civilians killed in the four-year civil war between leftist rebels and the U.S.-backed government.

U.S. officials say the squads are composed in part of off-duty or retired military members and financed by wealthy Salvadorans living in Miami and elsewhere abroad.

The Reagan administration has said those connected with death squads ought to be exiled and Vice President George Bush warned during his December visit here that the government would lose U.S. support if action was not taken against the death squads.

Stone, in Honduras earlier Wednesday, said he was hopeful a high-level diplomatic meeting beginning Saturday in Panama may produce concrete steps toward peace in Central America. He praised year-old peace efforts by foreign ministers of the Contadora group — made up of Mexico, Venezuela, Colombia and Panama.

In fighting, civilian sources in Suchitoto, 27 miles north of San Salvador, reported bombing runs Wednesday after a clash between guerrillas and government troops.

In northern Nicaragua, rebels pressed attacks against Sandinista troops near Jalapa, 11 miles from the Honduran border.

"We are sure their objective is to attack from these hills and seize San Fernando and Santa Clara, with the intention of seizing Jalapa, an important coffee and tobacco trading center," army officer Felix Gonzalez said.

The Sandinistas have been moving troops into the San Fernando area to reinforce the 2,000 soldiers defending Jalapa.

Ford prefers to drive BMW

MELBOURNE, Australia (AP) — Alfred Ford, great-grandson of Henry Ford, says it's nothing personal, but he prefers to drive a BMW.

Ford, visiting Australia as a member of the Hare Krishna movement, was asked Wednesday by reporters what kind of car he drives.

"I should drive a Ford I suppose, but I like BMWs because they're a good car," he said.

Ford was less definite when asked how much he is worth.

"It's millions ... A few," was all he would say.

Dressed in traditional Indian clothing with a flower garland and the painted head markings of the movement, Ford praised the Krishna movement and said it is attracting members worldwide.

"The priests of Hare Krishna do live a very austere life," Ford said.

Dear Abby

Wife Is 'Other Woman' For Straying Husband

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1984 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: A year ago, my husband of 23 years (we're both in our mid-40s) left me to move in with a 23-year-old girl he picked up in a bar. Until then we had a good and loving relationship. Then his business failed, which was more than he could handle, so he left.

He didn't leave completely. He keeps many of his personal belongings here, still pays all the household expenses and comes to see me two or three nights a week. (We usually end up in bed.) Of course, we can't see any of our old friends anymore or go out in public because he doesn't want his girlfriend to know about our continuing relationship.

My question: Am I doing the right thing by continuing to see my husband? I think he needs all the love and support I can give him. I'm sure that when he gets things figured out he will want to come back home again. But until then, what about the girl?

I don't want to hurt anyone, but I still love my husband and don't want to let him down when he needs me. What do you advise?

THE OTHER WOMAN

DEAR WOMAN: You are to be commended for your loyalty, devotion, understanding and support of a husband who left you to live with another woman. But what kind of man would live with one woman and sneak out to be with another two or three times a week? Take a closer look at this deceitful and mixed-up character. What assurance have you that he will return and be a decent husband again? You are being more a forgiving mother to him than a wife, but if you are happy in that role, 'tis folly to be wise.

DEAR ABBY: I recently announced my engagement, so everywhere I go people congratulate me, then they say, "I'm looking for my invitation." Or they ask the wedding date, and when I tell them, they say, "Oh, great, I can make it!"

I am furious at myself for not saying something on the spot to let them know I had not planned on inviting them. These people who are not my close friends try to bribe me by saying, "If you invite me, I'll bring a nice present." That is not the point. I can't invite the whole blasted community to my wedding!

My parents are retired and can't afford to pay for my wedding, so my fiance and I are footing the bill, and we are limited because of the cost.

How should I handle these people who invite themselves? I hate to hurt their feelings, but I need to let them know they shouldn't expect an invitation.

SPEECHLESS AND FUMING

DEAR S. AND F.: What's wrong with the truth? Tell them you are planning to have a very small wedding because that's all you can afford.

DEAR ABBY: A New York reader wrote that a relative who had died on a trip to Poland was buried there because it would have been too expensive ($7,500) to have his body flown back to the United States for burial. I wondered why cremation wasn't considered. It would have cost much less to have his remains (ashes) flown home.

I had always wondered why, with Europe's long history, some of these countries weren't crowded with cemeteries. On my first visit there I learned that as long as someone pays rent on a burial plot, the remains are left undisturbed. But if payments cease, the grave is emptied in preparation for the next occupant.

Owners of homes fight court battle

AUSTIN (AP) — Robert Matcha, accused by the state of violating the open beaches law, says he kept trying to repair his hurricane-damaged beach house on West Galveston Island to protect the interior from repeated rains.

"Every time it rained I had a quarter of an inch of rain in the house and I had to get a roof on it," the University of Houston chemistry professor testified Wednesday, explaining why he worked on the dwelling after Attorney General Jim Mattox filed suit to stop him.

Matcha was one of three witnesses called Wednesday by the attorney general as the state and West Galveston home owners began a battle in state district court to determine the power of Mattox in enforcing Texas' open beach laws. The court fight continues today.

No defense witnesses were heard Wednesday.

Mattox has filed suit against about 15 owners of West Galveston beach houses damaged by Hurricane Alicia, claiming the structures cannot be rebuilt because the storm shifted landmarks to put them on beach areas reserved for the public.

Assistant Attorney General Ken Cross argued that a temporary injunction should be issued against Matcha.

"The Galveston beach has been a public way for many years," Cross said. "We will prove Mr. Matcha's house is now on the seaward side of the vegetation line, which marks the public beach. Furthermore, we will prove Mr. Matcha's property was on the seaward side after Hurricane Carla in 1961, before he brought the property."

But a lawyer for Matcha, Rice Aston, said, "Under state law, a man does not lose title to his land by boundary changes caused by hurricanes and cyclones.

"What the state is trying to do is take private property and apply it to public use without compensation. They just want Mr. Matcha to tear down his damaged house and remove it at his own cost," Aston said.

The Matcha case is the first of those filed by Mattox. Four other cases are scheduled for a hearing in Austin Jan. 27.

In Galveston, 82 home owners have filed a class action suit against the attorney general and his attempt to stop rebuilding. No trial date has been set.

Under the Texas Open Beaches Act, passed by the Legislature in 1959, the area between the line of mean low tide and the line of continuous vegetation must be open to the public.

Attorneys on both sides agreed Wednesday that Matcha's beach house was inland of the vegetation line when it was constructed in June 1982.

Matcha testified Wednesday he bought the West Galveston Island lot in June 1982 and built a two-bedroom, one-bath cottage on it for use as rental property. The upper part of the house was on pilings 13 feet above the beach, with a concrete slab and garage at ground level.

Hurricane Alicia ripped off the roof, tore out three walls of the large living room and washed about three feet of sand from beneath the concrete slab, which collapsed and broke.

Matcha said he first got approval from the attorney general's department to make temporary repairs, then got a building permit from the city of Galveston. He admitted some of the work was done after Mattox filed the suit.

"It was my estimation I was working in a legal framework because I had asked the attorney general (permission) to make temporary repairs and I got the city building permit," Matcha said.

Matcha said he first heard of the suit by reading a newspaper.

The state's first witness was Dr. Robert Morton of Austin, an expert in coastal geology.

He said wave and wind action in Hurricane Alicia swept large amounts of sand off the regular beach area on Galveston Island and deposited it inland on and past the vegetation line.

Morton showed a series of aerial photographs, taken from the attorney general's official plane, and said they showed many beach houses, including Matcha's, are now in the public beach area.

The beach beneath Matcha's beach house was lowered more than 27 inches, he said.

"This sand will not come back to the beach area. It is lost to the beach system," Morton testified.

Morton showed diagrams of vegetation lines after Hurricane Carla, before Alicia and after Alicia. All were different.

"All are true vegetation lines, but none is more permanent than any other," he said.

Morton said, in his opinion, the vegetation line on West Galveston Island would move back seaward due to accretion of sand from the gulf, but never as far as it was before Alicia.

"There is no certainty it will ever be seaward of the Matcha property," Morton said, "because of the long-term beach erosion pattern on the island."

SWEETWATER, Texas (AP) — The cavalry approaches from the east, thundering over hills and flatlands to aid a Sweetwater monument in distress. But instead of toting weapons and supplies, this cavalry comes burdened with cameras, lights and a screenplay specifically adapted for this West Texas city.

Sluizer admitted, however, that some of the characters might be hired from larger cities such as Abilene, Houston or Dallas.

"One character I know I'll have to bring in from New York because he must have a New York accent," he said.

The 50-year-old filmmaker, originally from Amsterdam, The Netherlands, described how this idea was born, referring back to his first visit to Sweetwater four years ago during the famous Rattlesnake Round-up.

Sluizer said that while vacationing in Big Bend, he met an Abilenian who suggested the filmmaker visit the snake event to get a taste of the real Texas. His visit to the round-up resulted in "Sweetwater Junction," a 36-minute documentary, produced originally for television.

PUBLIC NOTICE

In proceedings pending before the Public Utility Commission of Texas (PUC), local exchange telephone companies are requesting authority to charge AT&T Communications of the Southwest, Inc., for use of their facilities. These proposed charges are higher than AT&T Communications can pay at current Texas long distance rate levels. To position itself to be able to implement rates that are sufficient to produce revenues that will recover the costs facing the company, AT&T Communications must now file for rate relief to be able to implement rates that reflect the costs of access that are ultimately imposed on the company.

While AT&T Communications does not want to increase its Texas rates, an increase would be required to recover the increased access charges AT&T Communications will have to pay to the local exchange telephone companies under several proposals pending before the Commission. These access charges at the proposed increased levels represent more than 80 percent of AT&T Communications' operating expense in Texas.

Accordingly, AT&T Communications, in accordance with the Public Utility Regulatory Act and the rules of the PUC, hereby gives notice of the company's intent to implement a new schedule of rates for long distance calls within Texas. The proposed rates will be effective January 28, 1984, unless otherwise determined by the Commission. All customers and classes of customers would be affected by AT&T Communications' proposed rates.

If higher access charges are ordered, AT&T Communications has no recourse but to pay these charges and recover the costs from its customers as a cost of providing long distance service within Texas. AT&T Communications has filed rates which would mean a maximum overall increase in adjusted test period revenues of $301.4 million, or 27.85 percent. This amount would help recover cost increases due to the proposed level of access charges now pending before the PUC.

A complete copy of all tariffs and rate schedules is on file with the Texas Public Utility Commission at Austin, Texas, and with every municipality in Texas.

Persons who wish to intervene or otherwise participate in these proceedings should notify the Commission as soon as possible. A request to intervene or participate or for further information should be mailed to the Public Utility Commission of Texas, 7800 Shoal Creek Boulevard, Suite 400N, Austin, Texas 78757. Further information also may be obtained by calling the Public Utility Commission Consumer Affairs Division at (512) 458-0223 or (512) 458-0227 or (512) 458-0221 teletypewriter for the deaf.

Redskins showing concern over Forty-niners' Montana

The Washington Redskins are worried, worried about San Francisco 49er quarterback Joe Montana and the miracles he performs on the football field.

The Montana-led 49ers invade Robert F. Kennedy Stadium on Sunday for the National Conference championship game. If the Redskins win, they will become the first National Football League team to advance to back-to-back Super Bowls since the Pittsburgh Steelers turned the trick in 1979 and 1980.

Montana, who can throw from in the pocket or on the run, completed 65 percent of his passes (332 of 515) for 3,910 yards, 26 touchdowns and 12 interceptions, in leading the 49ers to a 10-6 regular-season record.

In last week's 24-23 playoff victory over Detroit, Montana completed 18 of 31 for 201 yards and a touchdown. He also was instrumental in driving the 49ers 70 yards in the waning moments of the game for the winning touchdown.

"Montana is the man who makes the 49ers tick," said Redskin assistant head coach Richie Petitbon. "Offensively the 49ers will be the best team we have faced all year and Montana the best quarterback."

"Containing Montana will be the key to our success," said linebacker Mel Kaufman.

The Redskin front four - Todd Liebenstein, Dave Butz, Darryl Grant and Dexter Manley - are No.1 in the league in defending against the rush, holding opponents to 80.1 yards a game.

The 49ers, who average 140 yards a game on the ground, are led by Wendell Tyler (4.9 yards a carry), Montana (.47 yards) and Roger Craig (4.1).

A handicap for Montana will be the absence of wide receiver Dwight Clark. The 49ers leading ballhawk with 60 receptions and eight touchdowns, Clark has been sidelined for the playoffs with a knee injury.

SWC roundup...

Hogs, Red Raiders win

The Associated Press

The Southwest Conference's first major battle doesn't tip off until tonight, but some challengers to the league throne have made quick starts.

Both Arkansas and Texas Tech, two teams that fared well in non-conference action, won games Wednesday as the league race opened for six schools.

Arkansas defeated Baylor 57-50 behind center Joe Kleine's 18 points and Texas Tech routed Texas Christian 79-60. In other action, Texas A&M held off Rice 52-47 and Texas lost a non-conference game to Kansas State 64-54.

Tonight in Dallas, the two league's leaders in non-conference play, defending champion Houston and Southern Methodist, open play. SMU brings a 12-2 record into the game. Houston, 10-2, is a 5½-point favorite.

In Lubbock, Tech, 7-5, broke open a tight contest with a 20-7 surge midway through the second half.

Junior forward Vince Taylor, who led the Red Raiders with 10 points, 12 rebounds and four blocked shots, was at the center of the rally, scoring 4 points, hauling in four rebounds, swatting away a pair of TCU shots and dishing out two assists.

Texas Tech coach Gerald Myers credited the surge and several transition goals for his team's success against the Frogs.

"The success that we have had this year has come as a result of team effort," Myers said. "I thought the turning point was when we got a couple of transition baskets that opened an eight-point lead to 12."

TCU, 7-5, played without freshman standout Carven Holcombe, who fractured a foot last week.

"Obviously, our not having Carven was a big difference. Still, we've got to learn to play with the people we have available," Killingsworth said.

Razorback coach Eddie Sutton, whose team raised its season record to 10-2 Wednesday night, was just happy to get out of Waco's Heart O' Texas Coliseum with the win over Baylor, 4-8.

"As long as I've been at Arkansas, it seems we've never played very well here," Sutton said.

"It's something about this place that brings out the worst in us. We've had trouble winning here in the past and about the only good thing you can say tonight is that we came away with a victory. But we didn't look very good doing it."

IMPORTANT VICTORY – Snyder's varsity girls took a key, 44-37 win in Lamesa earlier this week, their fourth straight win since returning from the holiday break. The girls, 1-2 in District 2-4A play, will take on the Loboettes in Monahans at 6:15 Friday. Above, Karlene Thompson scores on the fast break as Becky Gray holds up traffic. Did refs boo-boo?

AUSTIN (AP) - What appeared in television film sequences to be a flagrant holding violation by Georgia tackle Guy McIntyre may have cost Texas the national college football championship.

TV sequences shown on two Austin stations Tuesday night showed McIntyre apparently reaching out and grabbing Texas linebacker Mark Lang by the left ankle, causing Lang to fall on the seat of his pants.

No penalty was called.

With Lang on the ground, Georgia quarterback John Lastinger raced past him for 17 yards and the winning touchdown with 3:22 to play in Georgia's 10-9 victory over the Longhorns.

The loss destroyed Texas' chances for a national title. The Longhorns were ranked No. 2 and top-ranked Nebraska lost to Miami 31-30, with Miami jumping to first. Texas finished fifth.

Lang, reached at his home in Iraan, Texas, said, "I was reading the tackle (McIntyre), and I was going to scrape off to the outside and the tackle grabbed ahold of my leg and I fell down and failed to get outside."

Lang said, however, "You can't make excuses. It is one of those things. They didn't see it and it isn't holding if they don't see it."

Texas defensive coordinator David McWilliams said the TV replay he saw showed that McIntyre grabbed Lang's ankle, which would have been a holding infraction.

Dusters test Cowley at 6

TONKAWA, Okla. -- Western Texas College's Dusters resume what is shaping up to be a fine basketball season for them here tonight as they take on Cowley County Community College in the first round of the Tournament of Champions.

The Dusters, 14-3 for the season, have been idle since a Dec. 8 victory over WJCAC foe Howard College which left the team 2-0 in conference play.

Western is slated to face Cowley at 6 this evening. Loser of the game will play again Friday at 2 against the loser of a game between Northern Oklahoma College and Bacone College while the winner plays at 8 p.m. Friday against the NOC-Bacone winner.

Also in the tournament are Amarillo, Rogers State, Hutchinson CC and Crowder College.

Finals are scheduled for 8 p.m. Saturday.

The Dusters will return home to entertain Tyler Junior College on the 12th before picking up Western Junior College Athletic Conference play. They host No. 1 ranked Odessa on Jan. 16.

WTC's men return to action Jan. 13-14 in the South Plains Classic.

Cats play

Snyder varsity and junior varsity teams don't play again until Friday, but there are plenty of underclassmen games going on tonight which involve local cagers.

Action begins at 4 in the junior high school gym as the seventh grade girls entertain Lamesa for back-to-back games. The eighth graders also host Lamesa in two games, beginning at 6. In addition, Snyder freshmen girls host Big Spring in the high school gym at 6:30.

The boys begin play at 4:30 as the eighth grade Gold team plays Lamesa at the Lamesa Middle School. The eighth Black and seventh grade Black and Gold teams will also play at the Middle School, beginning at 5:30. Snyder freshmen boys will play Lamesa in the Lamesa High School Gym at 5:30 and 7.

Snyder's varsity and junior varsity teams play in Monahans on Friday.

'Big push' for pro grid talent is on

USFL hoping to land key players

NEW YORK (AP) - Now the waiting begins - for undrafted players and drafting teams.

For some players, the wait could be over at the completion today of the United States Football League's second college draft.

For some teams, the wait could run weeks or months, perhaps halfway into the USFL season, into May, when the National Football League conducts its draft - when some potentially high-priced rookies do some comparison shopping.

Mike Rozier, Nebraska's Heisman Trophy-winning running back, and Steve Young, the record breaking quarterback from Brigham Young, are certain to be among those playing the waiting game.

Each is considered to be a guaranteed high first-round pick in the NFL draft.

Each was a first-round pick Wednesday, when the USFL conducted 11 of its 19 scheduled rounds and also announced its teams' territorial selections.

Some of Rozier's Cornhusker teammates, who fell a two-point conversion short of a national championship last Monday night in the Orange Bowl, had to wait a while before being selected.

Irving Fryar, the wide receiver whose last-minute dropped pass surely gained him as much national attention as any reception he ever made, was the No. 3 pick in the first round, by the Chicago Blitz.

"That'll cost him a couple of million bucks," Dr. James Hoffman, the owner of the Blitz, said of the drop. Presumably, it was a joke.

Nebraska tackle Raridon Scott was picked 17th in the opening round, by the Philadelphia Stars; running back Mark Schellen went to the New Orleans Breakers in the third round, wide receiver Ricky Simmons was selected by the Washington Federals in the fourth, quarterback Turner Gill was picked by the Houston Gamblers in the fifth, guard Dean Steinkuhler, the Outland and Lombardi Trophy winner, was chosen in the sixth round by the Arizona Wranglers, and defensive tackle Doug Herrmann by the Memphis Showboats.

Rozier, advised during a stopover in Lincoln, Neb., that he was the top choice, said he wouldn't give much thought to his pro career until he'd played in the East-West Shrine Game in Stanford, Calif., next Saturday and the Japan Bowl on Jan. 15.

But he made it clear he knows his worth.

"It's going to take some money," he said. "I think I'm worth something. I gave a lot. They're going to have to give a little bit."

If nothing else, he gave Pittsburgh's pro football fans something to talk about besides Terry Bradshaw and the Steelers. The Maulers reported that after the announcement they had drafted him, there were ticket lines, a first for the club.

George Heddleston, the Maulers' general manager, called Rozier "the most talented college athlete in the country. We're confident and optimistic we can sign him ... We picked him because we think we have a legitimate chance of signing him."

The Chicago Blitz spent some of its draft choices on NFL bloodlines, selecting in the third round Missouri linebacker Bobby Bell, the son of the Kansas City Chiefs' great linebacker, and taking in the territorial phase Illinois defensive tackle Mark Butkus, nephew of the Chicago Bears' super linebacker, Dick Butkus. Oklahoma, too, went for a branch of a family tree, selecting Miami running back Keith Griffin, Archie's brother, in the 11th round.

In addition to the 19 "open" rounds, the league also announced those "territorial" selections, 20 for the 12 original teams, 30 for the six new ones. Those picks were made before the start of the draft.

Other players picked in that phase of the auction included quarterbacks Jeff Hostetler of West Virginia (by Pittsburgh), Ben Bennett of Duke (by Jacksonville), Walter Lewis of Alabama (by Birmingham), Blair Keil of Notre Dame (by Chicago) and Boomer Esiason of Maryland (by Washington); linebackers Keith Browner of Southern Cal (by Los Angeles) and Carl Banks of Michigan State (by Michigan), wide receiver Thad Jemison of Ohio State (by New Jersey), defensive end Robert Smith of Grambling (by New Orleans), and defensive tackle Rick Bryan of Oklahoma (by Oklahoma).

NFL steps up recruiting

PALO ALTO, Calif. (AP) - The party is over and the "big rush" is on for National Football League teams recruiting college players.

Some 320 representatives of the NFL - scouts, general managers, assistants and coaches from every team - have beseiged the 66 players gathered for the Shrine East-West All-Star Game at Stanford Stadium on Saturday.

In years past, NFL officials mingled casually with the players, watched them at practice, tried to get a sense of who might fit in with their rosters. This year, it's different.

Stung by criticism that some of the top players last year signed with the rival United States Football League because the NFL didn't pay enough attention to them, the NFL has mounted a vigorous recruitment campaign.

"It's like a big rush of fraternities," Art Rooney, Jr., the Pittsburgh Steelers vice president, said Wednesday night. "There are more scouts than there are players. These games have been getting like social events. We used to just scout the players before the USFL. Now it's taken on a different dimension. It's more serious."

The NFL showed off a propaganda film of game highlights to the players on Tuesday night, then introduced them to some of the team officials in an informal setting. On Wednesday night, there was a talk by a league representative about drugs. The players have received a book "The NFL and You," describing the advantages and fringe benefits of playing in the league.

"I loved it," said Southern Mississippi center Steve Carmody. "I felt the film was talking to me."

It's the kind of scene that also goes on at the Hula Bowl, Blue-Gray Game and the Senior Bowl. But during the week of the USFL draft, held Wednesday in New York, the recruitment is a little more intense.

"We got a complaint last year," said Francis "Bucko" Kilroy, general manager of the New England Patriots. "We did a survey to find out why we lost seven of the people that went to the USFL. One of the reasons was they were completely ignored by the scouting groups."

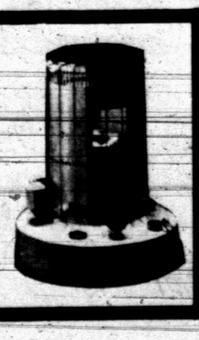

"This year, we won't be caught standing still," he said. "We're here to sell the NFL on merit."

Kilroy said he and his team officials have talked with 42 players since Sunday.

Police holding suspected thief

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — Until the FBI arrested him a few days ago, his neighbors either didn't know him at all or thought he was Shamus McKillip, a mobile home salesman.

But the FBI says he is James William Barrett, 45, whom they identified as a suspect in the 1975 robbery of a Maine bank and a member of a radical group responsible for several bombings in Boston and New York in the 1960s and 1970s.

U.S. Magistrate Alex McGlinchey on Wednesday denied bond for Barrett and ordered him to remain in federal custody in the Tarrant County Jail until an extradition hearing Jan. 11.

Assistant U.S. Attorney Michael Sheehan said he asked the magistrate to deny bail because of Barrett's eight-year history of eluding authorities.

Barrett, along with Raymond Luc Levasseur and Thomas William Manning, who also have been linked to the same radical group were indicted in 1972 on charges of robbing Northeast Bank of Westbrook in Portland, Maine, on Oct. 4, 1975, said James W. Greenleaf, FBI agent in charge of the bureau's Boston division.

Levasseur and Manning are on the FBI's 10 most-wanted list and also are suspects in the robbery of an Augusta, Maine, bank on Dec. 12, 1975.

Greenleaf said Manning has been indicted in the Dec. 21, 1981, killing of a New Jersey state trooper, and Levasseur is wanted for questioning in the killing.

Barrett was arrested Sunday without incident as he walked his dog near his apartment. LaDonna Hughes, manager of the apartment complex where Barrett was living, said the FBI had asked her not to comment about her tenant.

When questioned, the neighbors said they did not know either McKillip or Barrett.

Problems stall new industry area of the building were ruined.

This was the second occurrence of breaking overhead water lines in as many weeks. The spell of pre-Christmas winter weather also took its toll as a frozen water pipe burst and spilled water into the facility.

Shortly after moving in last September, workers discovered also there were leaking water pipes under the concrete foundation of the building. To repair these, jackhammers were required to rip into the concrete.

Problems have been encountered with broken gas lines also in addition to the building's burglar alarm system.

And the water-related problems have caused erosion to the base of the facility's outside parking lot — a situation which Stensland said will require a new asphalt project there.

The building is being leased by King's Highway through the Industrial Foundation, but maintenance of the facility is the responsibility of the industry.

Insurance will provide damage coverage, but Stensland noted every new complication brings with it a new deductable payment. He estimated King's Highway is already out some $35,000 in "unexpected expenses" related to relocating in Snyder.

"We certainly haven't given up," he said, "and we still look for a good future here. But the fact is I want to be in production bad."

Since the move from California, no King's Highway recreational vehicle coaches have been completed, although five chassis are now in Snyder for completion.

The result is a rapidly approaching "backorder situation," Stensland said.

Theft noted, screen cut

Police officers were called to investigate a misdemeanor theft and a criminal mischief incident late Wednesday night.

Howard Loveall, manager of the Bunkhouse in the 2600 Block of Ave. F, called police at 11:43 p.m. to report the theft of a small amount of money from a Coke machine. Money had been noticed missing from the machine both Tuesday and Wednesday evening but there was no sign of forced entry.

Ivory Greer of the Eastridge Apartments reported a criminal mischief incident at 1:35 a.m. Thursday. Investigators say a window screen at the Greer apartment had apparently been cut. It was undetermined if entry had been gained to the residence.

Nothing was found missing from the apartment and the case has been listed as misdemeanor criminal mischief.

City officers also arrested five suspects for public intoxication Wednesday evening.

Waterbed said found

City police detectives report clearing a recent theft with the arrest of two men, one age 25 and the other 19, Wednesday evening.

Along with the arrests, investigators say they recovered a waterbed reported stolen Dec. 13 from the Margaret Arriega residence at 2800 Ave. D.

Both suspects, charged with misdemeanor theft, were released on bond Wednesday night.
