Pickens to give in

AUSTIN — After two years of wrangling for a seat on the board of Koito Manufacturing Co., Texas financier T. Boone Pickens said Monday he plans to give in and sell his 26.4 percent stake in the Japanese auto parts maker. "We've given up on ever getting on the board of Koito," said Pickens, who helped pioneer hostile takeover tactics in the United States. In an opinion page article for the Washington Post, Pickens wrote that he would sell his 42.4 million shares to Japanese stock speculator Kitaro Watanabe, who sold him the shares in 1989. The terms of the agreement had not been reached, he said during an appearance at the state Capitol Monday. /3B

'Restraint' trial

MIAMI — Jury selection began Monday in the trial of a man charged with vehicular homicide in his 3-year-old daughter's death because she wasn't in a seat restraint. A defense lawyer said 30-year-old Ramiro de Jesus Rodriguez was singled out for prosecution to teach other parents a lesson. A prosecutor said Rodriguez' driving was to blame for the fatal accident. Both sides said they believe the trial is the first in the United States for a parent held legally responsible for failing to restrain a child killed in an auto accident.

CBS, Turner talk

NEW YORK — CBS Inc. and Turner Broadcasting System Inc. are discussing the possibility of an alliance between CBS and Turner's Cable News Network in gathering news, officials of both companies confirmed Monday. The trade publication Electronic Media reported that top officials of both companies have agreed to meet in mid-May to discuss a possible agreement on sharing international and domestic news. CBS News spokeswoman Donna Dees said without elaboration that "CBS is exploring many options; CNN is just one possibility." In Atlanta, CNN spokesman Steve Haworth said there are exploratory talks, but "there's certainly no specific agenda we would be able to discuss."

Ashland Oil to purchase Houston's Permian Corp.

By John Paul Pitts
Business & Oil Editor

Ashland Oil Inc. announced Monday that it will purchase Permian Corp., a major crude-oil purchasing firm with operations in Midland.

Ashland will acquire Permian from National Intergroup Inc. for $75 million in cash and 2.2 million shares of Ashland common stock, valued at about $75 million, said Randy Geiselman, Permian's vice president of acquisitions in Midland.

He said Ashland Oil also will assume about $83 million of the company's debt, while Permian will forgive $14 million of indebtedness currently owed to it by National Intergroup Inc.

The purchase, which is expected to be completed within 90 days, is subject to government approval.

Permian Corp. was founded by Walter Davis of Midland in the 1950s and grew from a one-truck

Hale's attorney files poll to support trial's move

By David Morris
Staff Writer

Most people questioned in a recent survey have heard or seen media reports concerning Bryan Allen Hale, the Glenwood Psychiatric Hospital administrator arrested on child pornography charges.

Glen Aaron II, Hale's defense attorney, filed the poll Monday in U.S. District Court in support of a motion for a change of location in Hale's pending federal trial.

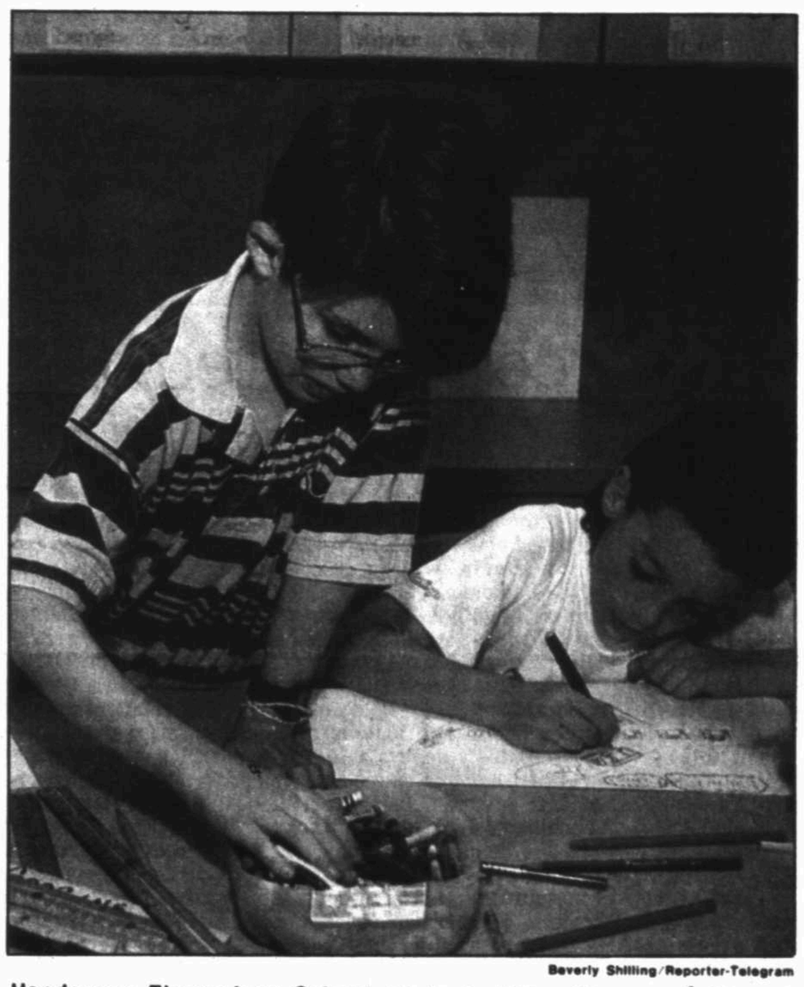

Aaron has said that media coverage of his client's case has made it impossible for Hale to get a fair trial locally.

Some 75.8 percent of Midland and Ector county residents who responded to the telephone survey conducted last week said they'd heard or seen radio or television reports about the Hale case.

Meanwhile, 56.8 percent said they'd read newspaper articles about the case, and 30.3 percent said they'd had conversations regarding the case.

Students create answers to serious family problems

By Myra Lee Salcedo
Staff Writer

A Pease Elementary School pupil took crayons to paper and made a picture of the sun rising over a mountain, a calm lake, a fishing pole stuck into the ground and a fisherman's cap resting on a rock.

The picture represented calmness, serenity and a message to adults to take time off from the hectic daily grind. The idyllic scene was the pupil's answer to a serious issue: preventing child abuse.

"It's surprising, but children come up with such simple solutions," said Charlotte Starr, a counselor at Henderson and Pease elementary schools.

Ms. Starr said some parents think spending quality time with their children is unobtainable.

"They say, 'We don't have the money. We can't afford a vacation,' " she said. "But sometimes, just flying a kite or setting some time aside for a child is all that child wants."

She said that reports of child abuse have been increasing in Midland.

"People lose their jobs, or get involved with alcohol abuse," Ms. Starr said. "Alcohol abuse is a serious problem here. Plus, there is added stress when both parents work."

"All parents love their children, but sometimes they have to be reminded of parenting skills," Ms. Starr said.

Taking time out from stress is an important coping skill for adults, she said..

Complaints and referrals about child abuse are increasing, said Sylvia Wilkinson, Child Protective Service supervisor for the Texas Department of Human Services.

"Our annual report for 1989 showed 645 complaints, while 1990 showed 860," she said. "From January 1991 to date we have had 242 complaints assigned for investigation.

Court takes child-abuse case issue

■ Supreme Court to consider children testifying against alleged abusers.

N.Y. Times News Service

WASHINGTON — Widely divided on how far states can go to shield young victims of sexual abuse from having to appear in court, the Supreme Court agreed Monday to decide an important constitutional issue in the prosecution of such cases.

The question is whether a statement that the child may have made to a doctor, police officer or other adult can be introduced as evidence against the person accused of abuse without the prosecution first demonstrating that the child is incapable of testifying in person.

The justices accepted an appeal by an Illinois man who is serving a 10-year sentence for sexually assaulting a 4-year-old girl. The child was in the courtroom during the man's trial but was not called by the prosecution to testify.

Instead, the state put the child's mother, babysitter and three other adults on the witness stand to tell the jury what the girl had said to them about the attack.

While rules against hearsay ordinarily bar such second-hand testimony, the Illinois courts found that the witnesses'

Ruling cracks down on filing frivolous suits

WASHINGTON (NYT) — In a procedural ruling that laid bare the bitter ideological split on the Supreme Court, the conservative majority of justices on Monday cracked down on poor people who file "frivolous" appeals.

In an unsigned order, the court amended its rules to prevent the hearing of "frivolous or malicious" appeals from people seeking to file free as paupers — what the legal system calls "in forma pauperis."

In a scathing dissent, Justice Thurgood Marshall noted that similar provisions for immediate dismissal of such appeals were not made for people able to pay the court's $300 filing fee and comply with its stringent printing requirements.

In the unsigned order, however, the court's conservative majority said the amendment is needed to stop people from abusing the right to file free as paupers.

GAO: Unregulated walk-in clinics pose 'deadly' risks

WASHINGTON (AP) — Outpatient surgical centers and walk-in clinics independent of hospitals are largely unregulated, leaving an unsuspecting public at risk of shoddy care, according to congressional investigators.

A General Accounting Office study of immediate-care facilities found "a deadly medical triangle" — untrained doctors performing high-risk procedures, misleading advertising and unlicensed, uninspected facilities, investigator Frank Papineau told a House subcommittee.

While outpatient centers can offer cheaper care and more convenience and privacy, "we have found that too often, procedures performed in these clinics are conducted in spartan settings with skeleton crews that are never inspected," Papineau said.

"Under such conditions, they are a refuge for the unqualified, the unscrupulous and the undertrained," he testified to the House Small Business subcommittee on regulation.

He called the currently unregulated landscape for ambulatory care facilities "an open invitation to bad medicine."

WEATHER SUMMARY

Sunny skies, 80s forecast

Today's forecast calls for sunny skies with a high in the upper 80s and winds from the west at 15 to 25 mph and gusty, according to the National Weather Service in Midland.

Tonight will be fair with a low in the upper 40s.

Wednesday is expected to be sunny with a high in the upper 80s.

After an overnight low of 38, which replaces the previous record of 41 in 1968, Monday's high was 76. The record high for that date was 95 in 1947. The record low for today's date was 41 set in 1960.

STATE

A weak ridge of high pressure covered North Texas on Monday, bringing drier air and mostly sunny skies after a night of record low temperatures.

Midland-Odessa's 38 degrees broke the 1968 record of 41 while El Paso had 33 degrees, eclipsing the 39-degree record set in 1984.

Much of the precipitation lingering in East Texas had moved into Louisiana by afternoon. However, some clouds remained in Southeast and South Texas and there was a fog advisory Monday morning for East Texas.

Westerly winds were common across the western two thirds of Texas, while breezes were northwesterly in East Texas. Wind speeds were generally less than 10 miles an hour however gusts to near 25 miles an hour were clocked in Abilene.

Temperatures were seasonally mild with afternoon highs in the 70s and 80s. Readings reached the 90s in the Lower Rio Grande Valley.

NATION

Rain and thunderstorms stretched across the South on Monday, bringing floods to Louisiana and Mississippi. Rain also was scattered from the Plains across the Great Lakes and Ohio Valley to the East Coast.

At midday, showers and thunderstorms extended over the upper Texas Gulf Coast, Louisiana, Mississippi, Alabama, northwestern Florida and the Panhandle, northwestern Georgia, Tennessee, and the North Carolina coast.

Flooding caused by as much as 10 inches of rain since Sunday forced evacuations Monday in parts of Mississippi and Louisiana. High wind caused power outages affecting thousands of people.

Heavier rainfall during the six hours up to 1 p.m. CDT included 2.98 inches at Baton Rouge, La.; 2.08 inches at Meridian, Miss.; 1.60 inches at McComb, Miss.; and 1.15 inches at New Orleans.

The Associated Press contributed to this report.

COURT: Question is of allowing child's testimony

ements were admissible under widely recognized exceptions to the hearsay rule.

In upholding the conviction, the Illinois Appellate Court said that as long as there was no prohibition under the hearsay rules against using the statements, it was "irrelevant" whether the girl could have testified herself.

The question for the Supreme Court is whether the prosecution should have been required to demonstrate that the girl herself was "unavailable" as a witness before the adults were permitted to testify.

In this context, "unavailable" does not mean physically unavailable, since the child was in the courtroom, but rather incapable of testifying because of age, mental state or some other factor.

The Illinois defendant, Randall D. White, is arguing that the prosecution's failure to have the child testify, without giving a reason, violated his Sixth Amendment right "to be confronted with the witnesses against him."

Recent rulings suggest that a majority of the justices might well agree, and if they do, they will presumably also fashion rules for determining when a child witness is legally "unavailable."

The court has had considerable difficulty in deciding how the confrontation guarantee should be applied to child abuse cases, where the trend in public policy has increasingly been toward protecting young victims from having to relive the trauma.

Several dozen states have authorized the use of closed-circuit television, so that children can testify and be questioned without being in the courtroom.

Last year, by a 5-to-4 vote in an opinion by Justice Sandra Day O'Connor, the court said that this procedure was adequate to comport with the confrontation guarantee because the elements of an adversarial proceeding, including cross examination by the defense, were retained.

CLINICS: 'An open invitation to bad medicine'

(From 1A)

Twenty years ago, few ambulatory care facilities existed. Today, there are an estimated 23,000 state-licensed ambulatory surgical, diagnostic and immediate-care facilities, according to subcommittee staff. Forty-one states have licensing programs, and their regulations vary.

Fewer than 7 percent of these state-licensed units are affiliated with a hospital. The rest are independent, for-profit enterprises.

Hospitals have to meet certain requirements to be accredited, including peer review committees that monitor conditions in the facility and can intervene if problems are found. Physicians have to present their credentials for review to get hospital privileges. Hospitals also can monitor physicians until they demonstrate competence.

Absent these requirements, ambulatory clinics are a "fertile environment" for unethical entrepreneurs, said Rep. Ron Wyden, D-Ore., subcommittee chairman.

"In the words of one anonymous physician interviewed by subcommittee staff, outpatient service is an area of care favored by the 'medical buccaneer,'" he said.

Wyden said he wants to find a way to adequately regulate these facilities, allow their continued growth and at the same time assure high quality care.

Raymond Portlock of Duncanville, Texas, told panel members about the death of his 4-year-old daughter, Erica, after being given an overdose of chloral hydrate as a sedative for a radiological test at a local diagnostic center.

"We never saw a doctor" at the Duncanville Diagnostic Center, he said.

Donna Fernandez of Chantilly, Va., said she never saw a doctor, or a nurse, at a walk-in clinic in Virginia where she brought her son, then 3, in 1988 after a candy ball lodged in his throat. The center billed itself as an "immediate care clinic," but when she arrived, one doctor had already left and his replacement had not yet arrived, she said.

Her son was saved by a policeman who happened by.

Polish).

Above all looms the familiar mug of magazine mascot Alfred E. Neuman, famous for his jug ears, freckle-faced grin and trademark philosophy of "What, Me Worry?"

Real estate agent Mark Cohen owns the artwork collection and wanted to share it. The show, "Humor in a Jugular Vein: The Art, Artists and Artifacts of Mad Magazine," is not affiliated with the New York-based magazine.

"Many collectors have wonderful collections, but they never let them out of their own possession. I think it's very important that people get to see things that they wouldn't ordinarily see," said Cohen.

Among the funnier pieces is a 1963 painting by Joe Orlando of "Reader's Disgust," a spoof of the staid Reader's Digest. On the cover, Alfred E.'s head sits sphinxlike atop a pyramid as a nearby camel smokes. The cover also promises titles ranging from "The Most Unforgettable Character I've Ever Wet" by "Your Baby," to "The Encyclopedia Brittanica" — listed on pages 142-43.

Then there are the political digs: "I Was a Sore Loser," by Adlai Stevenson, "So Was I," by Thomas E. Dewey and "Suddenly, It's 1960," by Richard M. Nixon.

Cohen remembers sneaking the "Reader's Disgust" issue into school, fooling teachers who had banned the unruly periodical.

"I still read it today. It comes in a plain brown wrapper addressed to a third party," he joked.

Still, there was a time, Cohen notes, when Mad's subversive status was anything but laughable.

Mad was created by publisher William M. Gaines after his Entertainment Comics came under attack, along with the rest of the comic industry, during the 1950s.

Under pressure from the Kefauver Senate Subcommittee on Crime who felt his horror, science-fiction and war comics were un-American, publisher Gaines decided to switch to magazine distribution. He turned the 10-cent comic, "Tales Calculated to Drive you Mad," into the 25-cent Mad Magazine in 1955.

"It was surprising the number of people that thought comic books contributed to juvenile delinquency," Cohen said.

iving child pornography. He now is undergoing a psychiatric evaluation at a federal prison in Springfield, Mo., to determine his competence to stand trial.

Hale's trial evidently is a moot issue in the minds of some local residents, however — about 29 percent of those polled in Midland and Ector counties already had formed opinions regarding Hale's guilt or innocence.

Of those, 89.8 percent in Midland and 96.4 percent in Odessa said Hale was guilty. The combined figures for Midland and Ector counties show 93 percent saying Hale was guilty.

However, it is unclear what crimes the respondents thought Hale was guilty of, since surveyors did not tell poll participants the charges against Hale.

The poll did ask respondents to say what they thought were the charges against Hale. Answers ranged from the correct (receipt of pornographic material and burglary, for example) to the incorrect (child abuse and child molesting, for example).

U.S. Customs agents arrested Hale on April 8 at his Glenwood office for receiving and possessing child pornography.

The arrest came after agents found a videotape in Hale's office entitled "Educating Valerie." The tape reportedly depicts a 10-year-old girl engaging in sexual activity with her father. A federal grand jury indicted Hale on April 11 for receiving child pornography.

During a three-month undercover investigation that preceded the arrest, a person believed to be Hale purchased the tape through the mail from Florida Customs agents. Investigators said Hale, using the pseudonym "Ready Man," contacted the agents through a computer bulletin-board system in response to a pornography advertisement.

If convicted on the federal charges, Hale could face up to 10 years in prison and a $250,000 fine.

Hale, who was suspended without pay from his Glenwood job the day after his arrest, also is charged with burglary in Odessa.

Marilee Kyler, Glenwood's community relations manager, filed a complaint against Hale on April 12 in which she alleged that Hale broke into her Odessa home while she was on vacation in March.

If convicted on the Ector County charges, Hale could face up to 99 years or life in prison and up to a $10,000 fine.

Assistant U.S. Attorney William W. Torrey, the prosecutor in the federal case, seemed unimpressed with the poll results filed Monday.

"Ho hum," he said, declining to comment further. He has said in the past that media coverage of a case does not warrant a change of location.

Aaron, who filed the motion for a location change in federal court April 22, could not be reached for comment Monday evening.

Court officials said Judge Lucius D. Bunton III is not expected to consider the poll and rule on the motion until the results of Hale's psychiatric evaluation are available — probably within 30 to 90 days.

Odessa's Media Concepts marketing firm, which conducted the poll on April 22 and 23, claims to have obtained 200 "usable" surveys from respondents in both Midland and Ector counties, for a total of 400.

"Usable" surveys are defined as those in which people claiming to be registered voters responded.

heavy," Ms. Wilkinson said. "I think that it is partly due to publicity. People are becoming more aware of child abuse and are reporting it more."

The supervisor said she attributed the growing number of Midland complaints from 1977 through 1990 to awareness, rather than to an increase in incidents of abuse.

While people are most likely to report physical abuse, Ms. Starr said that emotional abuse is often more devastating for children to deal with.

"It's very lasting," she said. "It's also a problem because parents themselves don't recognize it as readily."

Parents who need help can get counseling through Child Protective Services or Parents Anonymous, Ms. Wilkinson said.

She said children have been the main messengers in getting the word out about reporting child abuse.

"South Elementary School students have done a lot of work towards this," she said.

Barbara Yarbrough, a teacher at South and a member of the Midland County Child Welfare Board, said the hallways are covered with the youngsters' efforts at the elementary school.

"Students have written pieces," Ms. Yarbrough said. "There are also poems and raps about what children think a happy family is."

Many other Midland elementary school pupils also have worked at getting a well-family message across during April, in recognition of Child Abuse Prevention Month.

Ms. Starr said children have expressed desires to involve their families in ordinary pursuits. "They want to have picnics, get a hug or have their parents look at them when they talk to them," she said.

"What they want are just basic things, things they should have, things they are entitled to. But sometimes the home situation is so devastating, they can't get these things."

Ms. Starr said one child summed up his vision of a happy family as being one "where all live in the same house."

The annual month set aside to focus on family needs was themed "Build a Better Family, Together" this year.

Posters made by pupils will be on display in the Taco Villa at 307 N. Midland Drive for two more weeks.

NINTENDO: New deck makes old one obsolete

game cartridges.

After June 1, it's obsolete.

Super Nintendo, you see, is a new game deck to be produced by the leader in the home video game business. The new deck will be twice as powerful as the Nintendo machines now in 28 million homes across America.

Technically speaking, it will be a 16-bit deck, as opposed to the current 8-bit machines. "Bit" refers to the amount of information that can be stored in a video game. More bits mean more information, which translates into a better picture and sound and more complicated games.

"We've already got 15 or 20 games for the old machine," Blackmon says. "Justin and Ryan are going to want this new one, and I'm just not going to buy it for them. Not at first, anyway. I mean it."

Strong words. Fit for a battle between generations.

"If my parents won't get me the new deck," said her son Justin, "I'll probably sell my old deck and games to get the money to buy the new one."

Rumored to be on the way for almost 18 months, the 16-bit Super Nintendo Entertainment System — Super NES in kid lingo — will be priced at $190 for the basic game system. The old 8-bit game deck cost $99.

It's not yet known how much the game cartridges for the new deck will cost. But — you guessed it, didn't you — the cartridges from the old machine, which cost $35 to $50 apiece, won't work on the new one.

Since 1985, when it first introduced its 8-bit machine to America, Japan-based Nintendo has proved adroit at selling its products in the U.S. home video game market.

Estimates by toy industry trade journals indicate 50 percent of households with kids 18 or younger have become Nintendo territory.

This means a moral dilemma for Blackmon, who manages Fort Worth's two Century Bookstores. Currently, rentals of 8-bit Nintendo systems and games make up a healthy part of store income, and Blackmon is ready to replace that stock with its 16-bit successors.

"As a parent I may not be pleased, but if by December or so I see the (16-bit) is doing well, then we'll start offering some of the new products," Blackmon said. "We rent the decks and games for three days, and, say, for grandparents with grandchildren."

ACQUIRE: Ashland to assume $83 million of debt operation to become the first Midland company listed on the New York Stock Exchange.

Formerly based in Midland, Permian now is based in Houston, where it has its corporate headquarters.

It expects to have sales of about $2.5 billion for the fiscal year that ended March 31, according to National Intergroup.

Permian has more than 1,000 employees involved in transporting, trading and marketing crude oil in 15 states. It ope s 4,600 miles of active pipelines, numerous storage terminals and 450 trucks. It is the largest purchaser of crude oil in the U.S.

The Permian purchase makes Ashland Oil the major player in the crude oil purchasing business.

The company became prominent in crude-oil gathering and marketing in 1982, when it acquired Scurlock Oil, also based in Houston.

Sources say there probably will not be much restructuring of Permian and Scurlock, which have been competitors, and that Permian's employees and customers probably will be better off in the long run with a firm like Ashland in the owner's seat.

For Permian Corp. it marks the fourth time the company has been sold since it was founded. It was first sold to Occidental Petroleum in the mid-1960s, and in 1983 was sold to Westray, a holding company headed by former Secretary of the Treasury William Simon.

In August 1985, Permian Corp. was sold to National Intergroup, based in the Dallas suburb of Carrollton.

Following the sale, National Intergroup Inc. became engaged in internal struggles that included a proxy battle and Permian was put on the sale block.

National Intergroup announced last month that it was considering financial details of a number of bids and would announce the winner of the bidding at a later date. About five firms were reported to be in the bidding for Permian.

National Intergroup said the sale of Permian was "a solid step forward" in its program to maximize value for shareholders and to focus the attention of management on FoxMeyer Drug, the nation's third largest drug distributor.

Ashland Oil is engaged in petroleum refining, transportation and marketing, retail gasoline and motor-oil marketing, chemicals, coal, highway construction and oil and gas exploration and production.

"The combination of Scurlock and Permian significantly improves our ability to serve our customers and to secure additional volumes of domestic crude oil for our refining operations," said John Hall, Ashland Oil's chairman and chief executive.

Ashland will get about 400,000 barrels of oil a day through Scurlock and Permian, Hall said.

Ashland and Koch Oil were reported to be the leading bidders for Permian and many thought that Kansas-based Koch, which is also a major crude-oil purchaser, would be the eventual winner.

"We are pleased with the purchase," said Harry Spannaus, executive vice president of the Permian Basin Petroleum Association.

"From the reports we get, Ashland is a reliable company with good relations with independent producers, but we would have also been pleased if Koch had made the purchase," he said. "Both are fine companies."

Home to offer children refuge

By Pamela Ward
Austin American-Statesman

AUSTIN — The children will spend but a few hours at this place. For many of the little ones, though, this two-story Victorian house may be the safest, most comfortable home they've seen in a long time.

Home isn't always a happy place for an abused child.

When the house with the fancy name "Travis County Children's Advocacy Center" opens this fall, the county's littlest victims will walk into playrooms stocked with rocking horses and doll houses. Friendly adults will stand by to read stories, help solve puzzles, or wipe away tears. And in the kitchen, cookies will be baking.

Sure, there will be questions. The adults will want to know, did someone hurt you? What happened? And who did it?

But they'll only ask once or twice. And for the kids who must recount bad memories, that may be the biggest kindness of all.

Until now, in Travis County, young victims of emotional, physical or sexual abuse have been hauled from office to office where adults asked those questions, over and over. The police wanted details, and so did the doctors, the psychologists, the investigators with the state Department of Human Services, and the district attorneys.

Subjecting one child to 10 or 12 interviews wasn't uncommon. "Revictimization of the child" is what District Attorney Ronnie Earle calls it.

"The criminal and civil justice systems were not designed for children," he said. "It was never conceived that we would have to deal with such an onslaught of child abuse."

It was a little more than a year ago when Earle called upon officials who deal with the county's child abuse victims and suggested creating the center. In quick order, the Austin police, Travis County sheriff's department, the medical community and the DHS office in Travis County signed on. A non-profit organization was formed and a board of directors recruited. Volunteers offered assistance to raise money and prepare for the center's opening.

A search for a free or low-cost home that could function as the center's headquarters ended when St. George's Episcopal Church offered a 123-year-old Victorian house in its complex to the group for $1 a year.

Nestled among tall oaks east of Interstate 35, the attractive yellow and white house will need some repairs and remodeling. The center's new executive director, Shannon Smith, says initial commitments for construction money have been made by two philanthropic foundations.

Remodeling permits are being sought, and work should be completed by early fall. There will be two conference rooms, a kitchen, an upstairs office for investigators and waiting rooms for infants and toddlers, adolescents and teen-agers.

The home will be open 24 hours and staffed with child abuse professionals and volunteers who will comfort the children, help with clerical chores, or even whip up a few batches of cookies.

"We'll need lots of older, warm mommies and daddies with big, wide open arms," said Smith. Recruiting of volunteers will begin in earnest a month or so before the center's opening. They will be assigned to a child and make follow-up visits until the case goes to court and the judge appoints an advocate.

Parents or relatives of the children also will be interviewed at the center and referred to counseling and advocacy services. No suspected child abusers will be allowed on premises.

Interviews with children will be videotaped for reference by agencies involved in the case.

Volunteers now are looking for donated furnishings and decor that will appeal to children. But organizers aren't waiting for fresh paint and pictures on the wall before putting the new strategy in force.

This month, the police department's child abuse unit and DHS investigators moved into new offices at the DHS building on Cameron Road. A sheriff's representative and lawyer from the district attorney's office are expected to join them soon.

One floor is devoted to the coordinated investigation of reported child abuse in Travis County. Twelve police investigators and two senior sergeants, as well as three victim-witness services specialists are stationed across the hall from 30 DHS investigators and the child abuse hot line room.

Travis County Children's Advocacy Center executive director Shannon Smith steps through the door of the 123-year-old home that will serve as an abused-children's shelter.

Last year, a record 3,880 reports of suspected child abuse were made in Travis County. The number of cases confirmed — 266 a month — was double that of just two years before. Each day, an average of 10 cases of child abuse was confirmed, and four of those were deemed life-threatening.

In cities where advocacy centers are in operation, authorities have reported astonishing increases in successful prosecution of child abusers, Smith said. Officials also expect that a child's stay in the state foster care system will be cut in half from the current one to three years. The reasons: better cooperation among agencies, quicker and more complete information on the family and a consensus on the best approach to help the family.

Water conservation district opposes Pantex expansion

AMARILLO (AP) — City leaders are working overtime to persuade the Department of Energy to expand the Pantex nuclear weapons assembly plant near this Panhandle city in hopes of winning thousands of new jobs.

But the Panhandle Groundwater Conservation District says it fears expansion could contaminate one of the area's largest drinking water sources four miles from the plant.

"My real concern for the city of Amarillo is that (the plant) is in such close proximity to the well," said C.E. Williams, manager of the conservation district.

"The well drains from right under Pantex. If anything happened, Amarillo would be immediately affected."

Pantex is one of five sites under consideration to take over the plutonium-processing duties of the Rocky Flats plant near Denver, which would be dismantled, the DOE said.

City officials estimate the move would create between 2,500 and 10,000 new jobs and double Pantex's payroll of $115.6 million.

Jerome Johnson, co-chairman of the Pantex Expansion Task Force, said "the economic impact would be considerably greater than the super collider," a giant atom-smasher to be built near Dallas to study the origin of matter.

FORMULA FOR THE FUTURE
Vision + Planning + Effort = Success
I see Midland as a city on the grow, with plenty of good jobs for anyone who wants to work. This won't happen overnight, but with planning, strong leadership, and efficient, business-like management of our city's resources, it will happen in time.
A first class city deserves a first class airport. I believe expanding airport facilities, attracting new airlines, and extending control tower operations to 24 hours a day crucial to improving our economic future.
We need strong leadership to hasten an economic turn-around, leadership with vision. I would deeply appreciate your vote on May 4th.

Allies tell Kurdish rebels to stop blocking refugees' return

ZAKHO, Iraq (AP) — Allied forces have demanded that Iraqi Kurdish guerrillas stop extorting money from Kurdish refugees and allow them to return to their homes, senior U.S. officers said Monday.

Since allied forces entered northern Iraq, some of the Kurdish guerrillas, known as pesh merga, have blocked the refugees' return out of fear for their safety. Others have used the opportunity to charge tolls, stopping the refugees at checkpoints and demanding payment for passing through.

Col. Jim Jones, the highest-ranking U.S. Marine Corps officer in northern Iraq, said U.S. patrols have been sent to some of the more notorious checkpoints "to tell them to knock that stuff off."

"It's immoral and it's got to stop," said Jones. "They're straight-out bandits."

The Kurdish rebels agreed to the demands, U.S. officials said.

In southern Iraq, meanwhile, the U.S. Army airlifted more refugees to Saudi Arabia, in an operation that is a prelude to the U.S. troops' own departure. The airlift is expected to take about a week.

In wide-ranging interviews on the huge allied effort in the north to aid the Kurds, senior American commanders also said the military hopes to clear the Turkish border of primitive refugee camps by June 1. By then, water will be in short supply in the hills.

About 800,000 Kurds arrived at the Turkish border this month, fleeing Saddam Hussein's postwar crackdown on their rebellion. Allied military officials are building camps for them in northern Iraq.

The first Kurdish family arrived Monday in the camp built outside Zakho. They joined 576 Kurdish men already there.

U.S. Army Major Gen. Jay Garner, who commands the military operation in northern Iraq, said he expected refugees to start arriving in large numbers in the next few days.

U.S., French, Dutch and British officials met Monday with about a dozen Iraqi Kurdish rebel leaders to tell them to stop preventing the refugees from returning home.

The United Nations said Monday it was sending a convoy carrying personnel and supplies to Zakho on Tuesday.

AP

MOSCOW (AP) — A strong earthquake hit Soviet Georgia on Monday, setting off rockslides in mountain villages and killing at least 40 people, authorities said.

The quake also was felt in neighboring Armenia, which was devastated by a 1988 earthquake that killed 25,000 people. There were no reports of damage or injuries in Armenia.

Police spokesman Zurab Kadzhaya in the Georgian town of Kutaisi, near the epicenter, said Monday night about 40 people were killed and buildings in five mountain towns suffered widespread damage. The official Tass news agency earlier reported 30 people killed. It was not immediately known how many people were injured.

There were fears the death toll could rise as rescuers searched collapsed buildings in villages isolated by severed communications.

An aftershock as powerful as the initial quake struck the region at 9:33 p.m. (1:33 p.m. CDT), Tass said. U.S. Geological Survey spokeswoman Pat Jorgenson in Menlo Park, Calif., said the aftershock registered 6.2 on the Richter Scale.

Soviet Interior Ministry troops already in the region to quell ethnic unrest were ordered to the disaster area to aid in rescue efforts.

The initial quake struck at 12:13 p.m. (4:13 a.m. CDT) in north-central Georgia among the sparsely populated villages and towns in the Caucasus Mountains. It measured 7.1 on the Richter scale, according to the Soviet Union's Central Seismic Station.

The epicenter was near Dzhava, a town of 11,000 people about 60 miles northwest of the Georgian capital of Tbilisi.

In a report from Dzhava, Soviet TV showed collapsed buildings and others with gaping holes. Rescuers standing atop a mound of rubble dug frantically with their hands to remove large stones in search of further victims.

The independent Interfax news agency said a kindergarten, a high school, a hospital and a printing house were among buildings destroyed there.

Don Finley of the U.S. Geological Survey in Reston, Va., put the Richter reading at 7.2 and said the quake released about four times as much energy as the 1988 Armenian quake.

Pollution worsens, but Kuwait lacks clean-up plan

KUWAIT CITY (AP) — Oil and raw sewage are still spilling into the Persian Gulf. A river of crude a mile long runs through the desert. Smoke from oil well fires chokes Kuwait City on 100-degree days.

The unprecedented environmental disaster is worsening, and the government still lacks a comprehensive cleanup plan. Kuwaiti authorities are relying almost entirely on volunteer efforts by foreigners.

In addition, the government has issued no substantive information on the potential long-term dangers of carcinogens in the blanket of black smoke that often covers Kuwait City.

"In the short term, we think it is safe for normal people living in residential areas," Ibrahim Hadi, head of the Environment Protection Council, said in an interview Sunday. "In the long term, we don't know the effects."

The council, the government agency overseeing all environmental operations, has no budget or emergency supplies to conduct cleanup work. Most of the 30 staff members are office workers.

Environmentalists have become increasingly frustrated with the Kuwaiti government's handling of the ecological injury inflicted by Iraqi occupation forces.

"We thought these disasters would focus attention on the environment at last," said Rick Thorpe of Earthtrust, a Honolulu-based environmental group. "But it hasn't. There is very little we see being done."

In Kuwait City, black flakes of burned oil fall from the sky, leaving distinctive speckles on car windshields and the white robes of Kuwaiti men.

Many scientists and doctors consider the particulates the greatest danger to human health from the burning oil. Scientists say the visible particulates are probably too big to be inhaled. But if smaller ones are present, they may not be filtered out by nostrils and could be inhaled.

The U.S. Environmental Protection Agency and the United Nations Environment Program are among several groups that have tested the air and said they found no evidence of immediate danger to healthy people.

Environmentalists have expressed concern that the summer heat — temperatures already are reaching 100 degrees — will cause oil fire emissions to climb toward the upper atmosphere, thereby spreading pollution on a wider scale.

Already, there has been black rain in Turkey and Iran and black snow in the Himalayas.

Kuwait City has experienced four temperature inversions in recent weeks — more than it normally has in a year. During inversions, hot air is trapped below the cooler cloud of smoke, which gradually sinks onto the city.

Sami al-Yakoob, a Kuwaiti with a doctorate in environmental chemistry, says that until the government knows the full extent of the potential dangers it should evacuate towns near the oil fields, distribute protective masks and issue warnings on days when the smoke is bad.

Hadi said the government has no plans to take any of these steps.

Defense concludes its case in Winnie Mandela assault trial

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — Winnie Mandela's defense against assault and kidnapping charges ended Monday with her lawyers showing a videotape that showed the alleged victims smiling, dancing and eating in her company.

Prosecutors claim Mrs. Mandela and two co-defendants abducted four young men from a Methodist Church home in December 1988 and beat them at Mrs. Mandela's home in the black township of Soweto.

The case against Mrs. Mandela is expected to go to the judge within days after the prosecution and the defense make final statements. South Africa does not have jury trials.

AT&T INTRODUCES A NEW CALLING PLAN: AT&T'S ALL PRO℠ WATS IN TEXAS

AT&T Communications of the Southwest, Inc. ("AT&T") is pleased to offer its new service, AT&T ALL PRO℠ WATS in Texas (ALL PRO in Texas). This calling plan is an add-on to AT&T's PRO℠ WATS Interstate Optional Calling Plan, and when combined with AT&T's interstate PRO℠ WATS plan, provides the AT&T customer with the added benefit of savings on intrastate direct dialed calls. In addition to providing savings on intrastate calls to new customers, existing PRO℠ WATS Texas customers will have the option of switching to ALL PRO in Texas.

Key features of ALL PRO in Texas include:

- Discounts on in-state calls that range from 24% to 30%.
- New volume discounts for in-state calls so the more you use, the more you save.
- Subminute timing for in-state calling. After a 30-second minimum, billing for your calls will be rounded to the next 6-second increment.
- One rate for calls no matter where you call within the state.

For more information about ALL PRO in Texas, please call your AT&T Account Executive or AT&T's business consultants toll-free at 1-800-222-0400. They can answer your questions about ALL PRO in Texas and how it can be of benefit to you.

The offering of ALL PRO in Texas is expected to generate approximately $6.135 million in first-year revenue, which is 0.59% of AT&T's annual revenues for all Texas intrastate service.

AT&T will file its tariff to offer this service with the Public Utility Commission of Texas on May 17, 1991, with an effective date of June 15, 1991. This service will be available to customers in territories served by Southwestern Bell and GTE on the effective date of June 15, 1991. For customers served by other local exchange companies, availability dates for the service will vary. AT&T's goal is to provide service throughout the state by December 31, 1991. Persons who have questions regarding this tariff filing may contact the Public Utility Commission Public Information Division (after the tariff is filed) at (512) 458-0256 or (512) 458-0221 teletypewriter for the deaf.

Roughing it: Town swears off television for a week

By Denise Lavoie
Associated Press writer

ANDOVER, Conn. — Life without television can be tough: Just ask 11-year-old Heath Carlson.

It rained all weekend and he missed the last game of the regular season between the Chicago Bulls and the Detroit Pistons. He was reduced to watching his mother make Sunday breakfast, all because his family was one of 300 in town that swore off television for the week.

"I thought it was stupid," he said. His 9-year-old sister, Elke, had an even better word for it: "It was a horrible idea."

"NTV," standing for No Television, was the brainchild of community activist Dianne Grenier. Her intention was to rouse the couch potatoes, encourage children to be more conscientious about their homework and get families to spend more time together.

The Carlsons certainly did that, and although they admit they caved in and watched the news, a sitcom and a movie on cable before the deadline.

"Since we could not play Nintendo or watch TV, we watched my mom make pancakes, and now we may never eat them again!" Heath wrote in a diary the family kept during the TV-less week, which ended at midnight Friday.

Two hundred families signed up for a week of unplugged TV, but Grenier estimated that 100 other families tuned out as word spread.

The town of 2,500 people, 20 miles east of Hartford, planned dozens of activities to fill up the time, including volleyball, a puppet show, wine tasting and advice from horseshoe enthusiasts on how to throw a ringer.

The TV world seemed fascinated by a town turning its back on the electronic age's equivalent of the living room hearth. CNN, NBC and a French TV company sent camera crews.

The three Carlson children were not alone in their grief. Their mother, Ivy, found the prospect of folding a mountain of laundry grim without her favorite morning talk show.

"I'll sure miss Phil (Donahue) this morning — my folding partner! I listened to some CDs instead . . . it was OK," read her diary entry for Monday.

The family discovered they had time for other pursuits.

On Sunday, "I woke up, did my homework, cleaned my hamster cage," Elke wrote. "After that I played with my friends. I got home and instead of watching 'Charles in Charge,' I read and went to bed."

Like his older brother, 6-year-old Ian sorely missed "MacGyver." They watch the show Mondays nights and the reruns on weekday afternoons. Ian spent his free time pretending he was G.I. Joe in war games with a friend.

Mrs. Carlson, 32, and her husband, Gary, took in a wine tasting Sunday afternoon. A couple of nights the family sat around a backyard campfire and toasted marshmallows.

Carlson, a 35-year-old carpenter, said he didn't think his family's habit of watching two or three hours of television a day was anything to worry about.

"I don't mind if they watch TV, but I'd rather they go out and throw a ball or do something else," he said.

Grenier said she doesn't consider the experiment a failure even for those who sneaked inside for a few minutes of television.

"We had some who decided they could not live without the news for one day, so they would watch one show, and we had children who forgot," she said.

"We really wanted people to just evaluate their viewing habits."

Former DA awarded largest libel judgment can wait for money

By Barry Shlachter
N.Y. Times News Service

WACO — There's the piano, the flower-patterned furniture and the painting of Texas bluebonnets.

But what sets the living room of former McLennan County District Attorney Vic Feazell apart from his neighbors' are 25 cardboard boxes of files scattered about and scores of folders spread on a long table. Then there's the copy machine on the piano stool.

The room was Feazell's command bunker during the six weeks when he took on Dallas' WFAA/Channel 8 and its former investigative reporter, Charles Duncan, in a successful libel action that might make judicial history.

"I've always wanted new towels," said Feazell's second wife, Berni, a tall, red-haired woman. Berni Feazell can crack a joke as well as a stand-up comic, but this day she insists that's actually what she'd buy first with the $58 million judgment, the biggest in U.S. history. "You know, the matching kind — bath towels the same color as the washrag."

As for himself, Vic Feazell said, he'd take what's left after paying his lawyer and move his family to Tulsa, Okla., or Austin, Texas — "somewhere near an airport" — and be more selective in the work he'd handle, perhaps civil-rights cases, national civil-rights cases.

The award, decided by a jury April 19, must be approved by the judge, who can reduce or even set aside the verdict. If he doesn't, it may face as many as three appeals by the 180-lawyer Dallas firm, Locke Purnell Rain Harrell, that represented the Belo Broadcasting Corp. TV station.

Somewhere along the line, there could be an out-of-court settlement for somewhat less than $58 million. Feazell says he's willing to talk turkey. He's also prepared to be patient ("I've got the staying power to wait five years"), knowing that the award will be earning 10-percent compound interest.

Neither Feazell nor his Tulsa-based lawyer, Gary Richardson, had any libel case experience, Feazell said. "This little ragtag team took on Locke Purnell. A real-life David-Goliath story."

There is no mistaking that Victor Fred Feazell — a Louisiana preacher's son and onetime Baptist preacher himself who became a police trainee, a lawyer, a populist politician and then a private attorney again — is on a roll.

In 1986, he won re-election as district attorney despite a federal racketeering indictment accusing him of taking bribes for dismissal or leniency on drunken-driving cases. Playing on a now-familiar David vs. Goliath theme, he handed out bumper stickers picturing the kind of handcuffs he wore when arrested — only those on the stickers were depicted being snapped in half.

He was acquitted of all charges in a highly publicized 1987 Austin trial.

Feazell said he stayed on as district attorney for 18 months only at his wife's insistence, then became a corporate lawyer until he decided to return to private practice.

Perhaps it was the threatening gray skies or the $12,000 due on his credit cards, but a week after the libel case ended, Waco's most colorful resident was pensive, almost dour in demeanor.

Feazell — who might soon join the ranks of newly made millionaires along with Publishers Clearing House sweepstakes winners and Cowboys defensive tackle Russell Maryland — showed a world-weariness that belied not only his good fortune and his 39 years but also the public flamboyance for which he was once known.

Or maybe he was just wary of out-of-town reporters.

The domed McLennan County Courthouse is clearly visible from Feazell's ninth-floor law office. Binoculars, placed on a windowsill, enable him to spot opposing attorneys so he'll know when to show up in court, he explained.

Next to the window is a picture of an old country church — gold on black glass — and a bookshelf containing a biography of Huey Long, the Louisiana populist-demagogue. Feazell lists Long as one of his heroes, along with Moses, David, Thomas Jefferson, Abraham Lincoln and Lyndon Baines Johnson.

In person, he exudes open-faced candor, though possibly the sort of familiar, practiced sincerity honed by those of his pulpit-and-prosecutorial background.

This morning, he is the consummate Texas criminal lawyer: starched white shirt, red paisley tie, the suit pin-striped and double-breasted, his boots western and covered by ostrich skin. The look is completed by a Texas-shaped golden nugget ring.

Many lag in basic literacy, Oregon survey discovers

SALEM, Ore. (NYT) — In what is being called the nation's first comprehensive statewide survey of adult literacy, Oregon has found that 97 percent of adults can read at some level, but only a small percentage can interpret a poem, use a bus schedule or determine correct change from a lunch bill.

The survey results, announced recently by Gov. Barbara Roberts of Oregon, offer the first preview of what a national adult literacy survey to be conducted next year may show.

The national survey will use the same test as was used here, one administered by the Education Testing Service of Princeton, N.J. The test used a random sampling of 2,000 people.

Some Oregon educators and government leaders were surprised at the large number of people who could not perform basic tasks.

"I didn't realize that a bus schedule could be so difficult to read," Gov. Roberts said.

The survey broke the reading test down into three basic categories: prose literacy, or understanding information in a basic text; document literacy, or the comprehension of maps or technical information; and quantitative literacy, the ability to follow and apply simple mathematics.

In the prose category, 78 percent of those surveyed were classified as reading at the basic, or lowest level, 41 percent were intermediate, and 8.7 percent were classified as master.

In testing for document literacy, the survey found that 95 percent could determine the due date for payment of a bill; 84 percent could find the year-to-date gross pay on a payroll stub; 35 percent could determine the correct dosage of medicine using a chart of a child's age and weight; 18 percent could use a bus schedule to find the time of departure, and only 4 percent could read a bar graph well enough to determine economic recovery.

The quantitative section found that 96 percent of adults could tabulate two entries on a bank deposit slip; 60 percent could use an advertisement to determine the least costly product; only 37 percent could determine the correct change from $3 after purchasing two items from a lunch menu.

Those tested ranged from 16 to 65 years of age, and were selected as a scientific sample of the adult population.

The president has song in his heart

When George Bush was running for president, critics jumped on the popular bandwagon of those complaining that Bush "wasn't really a Texan." They pointed to his Yale education and his East Coast roots as foolproof evidence that here was an Eastern Establishment wolf in a Texas sheep rancher's — er, oilman's — clothing. The critics obviously wanted to rob Bush of Texas and Southern support.

Midland residents knew of Bush's Eastern upbringing, but they also recognized that Bush spent decades in Texas and that it's almost impossible for anyone to spend that much time in the Lone Star State without it rubbing off on them to some extent.

That fact was in strong evidence Saturday evening when ABC televised "Celebration of Country," the country music tribute to President Bush and the troops who served in Operation Desert Storm. It was a gala affair, which featured performances by Clint Black, Alabama, Tammy Wynette and numerous other country & western music stars.

The strongly patriotic theme and traditional values expressed through the songs made it a particularly apropos event. It was a fitting celebration that again noted the upsurge of patriotism in this country as a result of the Persian Gulf War. And the program's title — "Celebration of Country" — was particularly well-suited to the event since the affair truly was both a celebration of country music and a celebration of this country's response to the war effort in the Persian Gulf.

Of course one has to wonder whether people serving in such high political office as president of the United States are moved by the inspirational quality of country music. It's been obvious that President and Mrs. Bush sincerely like country music; Loretta Lynn and other country & western stars have been invited to perform at White House functions throughout Bush's first term.

But one doesn't expect to see the president of the United States tapping his foot in time with the music or breaking out singing to the lyrics of a popular song. Yet that's exactly what happened Friday night.

As the television cameras focused in on George and Barbara Bush sitting in the crowd at the Ford Theater where country singer Randy Travis was belting out his tremendously popular hit, "Forever and Ever, Amen," viewers got the opportunity to see Bush singing along with the lyrics.

Who says George Bush isn't a Texan at heart and a little bit country?

Don't forget our soldiers in the gulf

The flood of spirituality and patriotism Midlanders displayed during the Persian Gulf war was positive, heartwarming and contagious. The comparatively small number of flags and yellow ribbons Midlanders wear and display now, however, is distressing.

I welcome enthusiastically all of our service men and women from Midland who have come back home. There are, however, some 200,000 young Americans still in the gulf. When they come home, perhaps months from now, what will they see? Will they come home to a hero's welcome, as their fellow service members are doing? Will they see the same flags and yellow ribbons our presently-returning men and women are seeing? It appears to me that, judging by the small number of flags and yellow ribbons we, at least to some extent, have forgotten about them. Are they less important than those who have come home? Are they less heroic?

No, we must not rest until every one of our men and women are home on American soil with their families. Please keep flying your flags, wearing and displaying your yellow ribbons and writing letters to them until they all come home, for they are serving for us.

Willis can serve well in MISD's District 6

On May 4th the voters of District 6 will vote to elect a new member to the Midland School Board. We are writing to encourage voters within that district to cast their ballots for Gary Willis.

Having known Gary and his family for several years we have had many occasions to visit with him and have come to know him as a fair and conscientious person. While balancing his time as a devoted family member, Gary has still found time to attend school board meetings and speak out on issues that were of a concern to him.

Because Gary has been a public school teacher, his empathy for teachers is evident. While, at the same time, his experience as an accountant will be a valuable asset to the Midland School Board.

The children and youth of District 6, as well as those of all Midland, will be well served by Gary Willis.

Constancy deserves something, doesn't it?

The Midland Reporter-Telegram is usually not shy about sharing news of awards it has won, but sometimes exceptional staff efforts are never adequately recognized. I therefore proclaim staff writer David Morris the winner of this month's "Stik to Yor Gunz" award for constancy of spelling in the face of overwhelming computer "spell-checker" interference.

In a recent Sunday major article on optometry versus ophthalmology, David (and a headline writer) managed to avoid spelling "ophthalmology" (and its derivatives) correctly a truly astounding 13 out of 13 times!

VA agency is inefficient, wasteful

WASHINGTON — The Department of Veterans Affairs is no paragon of efficiency. VA medical facilities are notoriously inept and wasteful. Now it appears the VA can't even get it right when it comes to one of its basic missions — artificial limbs, wheelchairs and other prosthetic devices for handicapped veterans.

Anderson

In a report still under wraps, the VA inspector general has recommended that a $2.4 million-a-year VA office in Baltimore that coordinates research on prosthetic devices for veterans be shut down — not just improved or reorganized or revived, but completely given up for dead.

In five years, the prosthetics experts at the agency evaluated only five new devices for possible use by veterans. To publish its findings in research journals, the agency was spending three times as much as comparable private research journals cost to-print. And in one three-month stretch last year, two technicians in the office had enough work to keep them busy only two and a half hours a day.

The agency is called the Prosthetic Research and Development Center, and its mission is to put the VA in the forefront of research into wheelchairs, lift devices, artificial limbs, corrective shoes and other things to make life easier for handicapped veterans.

The PRDC has been the subject of internal reviews every year since it opened in 1986, but recommendations for improvement were rarely put into action.

Our reporter Cindy Gerner has obtained a copy of a draft report prepared by the inspector general recommending that the VA give up on the PRDC. That draft is now in the hands of the VA, which would only tell us that it is "actively" working on a response. That response will have to be pretty convincing to counteract the damning evidence in the audit.

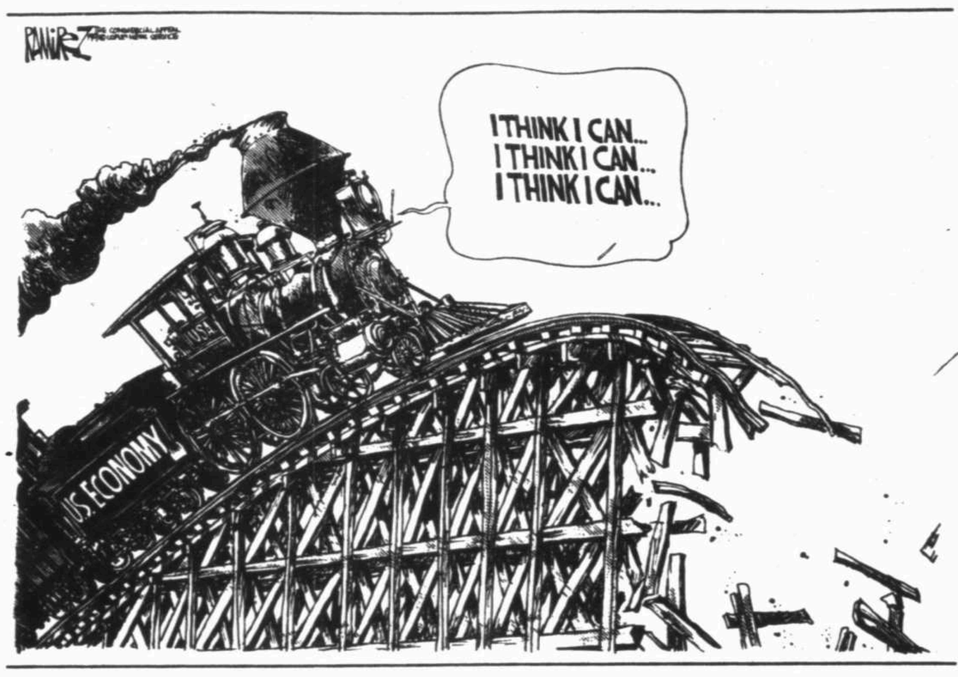

If the PRDC, with its 55 employees, closes, it would not be a first for the VA. The predecessor of the PRDC was closed in 1982 after the inspector general found gross inefficiencies and poor organization. The research and development work was resurrected as the PRDC in 1986, but it seems the VA is doomed to failure.

The inspector general's report outlines mismanagement, waste of money and lack of work. The arm of the PRDC that evaluates new technology has done only five such evaluations, while spending millions of dollars on salaries, travel and equipment. The branch of the PRDC that tests the safety of prosthetics that are on the market is practically useless. It only tests devices that are voluntarily offered by the manufacturers, it has no regulatory power to approve or reject those devices and it duplicates work done better by the Food and Drug Administration.

The Senate Committee of Veterans Affairs has been aware of problems at the PRDC since last June, but there has been no tough prodding from the committee chairman, Sen. Alan Cranston, D-Calif.

CORRECTION — In a recent column, we incorrectly reported the results of an ethics survey given to Internal Revenue Service managers. We reported on how many of them said they would keep quiet about wrongdoing when they saw it, would use their positions to intimidate personal enemies and would lie to protect themselves. Those answers were given when the IRS managers were asked how often they thought that kind of conduct occurred among IRS employees in general, not whether they themselves admitted to engaging in it regularly.

CHARLEY REESE

We're all just a bunch of contented cows

Idealists, political reformers both of the left and the right and in between, pundits and other assorted malcontents should recognize that what they are really upset about is the American people.

It's common to make excuses, to find scapegoats in order to avoid facing the truth. Some people say it's the Eastern Establishment which manipulates the American people. Some people blame investment bankers. Some people blame the media. Some people blame the politicians. Some blame special interests.

Reese

The excuse, regardless of the choice of scapegoat, goes like this: gee, if only the American people actually knew the truth, then they would agree with me that...(substitute your own panacea).

This assumption, that things are the way they are because the American people don't know any better, is incorrect. The American people are not stupid. When they are interested in a subject, they can find out a lot about it. There is, in fact, very little truly hidden information in this country and it is mostly technological and military-related.

A person who really wishes to do so can find out an awful lot about almost anything. What some people think is secret is lying around in public libraries or public data bases. The notion that secret forces are raining on our parade is so strong that a fellow once sent me a clipping from the New York Times, which was a long story about the Trilateral Commission, with a complaint that the "establishment press" is keeping the existence of the commission a secret. Dearly beloved, if the New York Times ain't the establishment press, then I'm the Duke of Kent.

The Trilateral Commission, which was started by David Rockefeller, is not a secret organization. Its address is 345 East 46th St., New York, NY 10017, and if you write them, they will be glad to sell you copies of all their publications. It's a group of bigwigs from North America, Europe and Japan who study issues relevant to the industrial nations. It's influential, but it's not secret and it never has been.

What a lot of people don't want to face is that many, perhaps most, Americans are reasonably content with the government they have. Certainly we must cite elections as evidence of that. Most incumbents are routinely re-elected. They are re-elected because a majority who vote think either they are doing a good job or the people running against them would be even worse.

In 30 or so years of observation, I have yet to find any vast number of Americans hungering for laissez faire government. I think you could put the Libertarian Party presidential candidate on the ballots of 50 states and give him 17 hours of national television campaign time and he'd still lose by a huge margin. People don't ignore Libertarians out of ignorance of their positions; they ignore them because they don't agree with them.

How many Americans want to abolish Social Security, Medicare and Medicaid? Not many. Face it. If vast numbers of Americans were really discontented, they'd change things. Much of the existing discontent is not discontent with the faults of government but discontent with the ratio of cost and benefits.

In the real world, people do not burn the midnight oil reading political philosophy and wake up early in the morning to meditate on the question of what would be the most ideal form of government or what would be the best policies for the U.S. government to follow.

The Age of Revolution in America is dead from the clogged arteries of prosperity and successful government. Many Americans today couldn't tell you what the Bill of Rights is because they're not interested; many more, if you put the Bill of Rights to them in the form of questions, would vote against them.

Wannabe revolutionaries of the left and the right will have to wait for conditions to get far more unpleasant before they will find an audience larger than two volley ball teams.

The majority is content, and you can't sell radical change to contented people.

WILLIAM MURCHISON

Why support a public-education monopoly?

Let me come back to this matter of school choice and how we get there.

President Bush is receiving raps over the knuckles for his proposal that state governments pay a student's way at whatever school, public or private, best meets his educational needs. Private schools, it is said, have no business receiving public funds.

Murchison

Bologna! The right to free choice of public schools is better than nothing; as an act of overdue justice and prudence, it falls far short.

Incorporating the private schools into a choice system has its dicey aspects, but the present state of education invites a certain level of risk-taking.

Why not public funds for private schools? Because, comes the answering chorus, healthy, well-funded private schools would undermine the market for public education.

What a confession — that, on a level playing field, public schools couldn't compete successfully with private ones. This is tantamount to admitting that millions of public school students are held captive in a system they wouldn't patronize, given their druthers.

I am myself a product of the public schools (from a happier time, educationally speaking, than this); my children attend public schools. The public schools are not all bad by any means, but it is unfair — and undemocratic — to turn them into prisons.

A commitment to private education for many middle-income earners, not to mention the outright poor, resembles a commitment to Christian martyrdom. You suffer gladly for the higher principle and the greater good.

Parents of private school children are afflicted with double-taxation — first for the public schools they don't use, second for the private schools they do use.

A system of choice would liberate these families. They'd henceforth be subsidizing not two school systems but one.

This is where the fun starts. Choice is based on competition — schools vying with each other for pupils: publics against other publics, privates against other privates, and, not least, privates against publics. The wares offered at individual schools would be tailored more nearly to the customers' needs than at present. The result should be something for everybody.

If, in this bracing competition, more private than public schools won out, what would that signify? Only that the private schools, as a group, were doing a superior job of satisfying customer needs. To argue against such a marketplace verdict, you have to argue that public schools are good, no matter how bad they are.

Further objections? One is that the public schools would become a dumping ground for the poor, especially minorities. This does not follow. Scores of thousands of poor families — right now — make financial sacrifices to enroll their children in Catholic parochial schools.

What's that? We shouldn't permit more whites to flee from integration? In the first place, who says they'd be fleeing integration rather than the chaos of inner-city schools? In the second place, what's to stop minorities from following right along — to whatever place best serves their needs?

The most substantive argument against vouchers for private schools is that they would subject church-related schools to state regulation. The right of church schools to teach religion (presently a major attraction for pupils subjected to public school secularism) would have to be protected. My personal preference is for giving such schools total freedom. Let Catholic parochial school students pray the rosary and students at Southern Baptist academies study I Corinthians every morning — so long as everybody's doing what he freely chooses to do.

True, in this life there are no panaceas, no perfect solutions. That doesn't exempt school choice — or furnish arguments against it. Public school monopolists need to explain why the right to choose one's school is noxious and un-American. From the look of today's educational mess, they'd better talk fast.

■ South Florida faces rolling blackouts

MIAMI — Florida residents heeded calls to use less electricity and the state avoided rolling blackouts Monday after a plant shutdown coupled with unseasonably hot weather stretched the power supply to the breaking point.

"We're into a very serious situation," said Bill Swank, a spokesman for Florida Power & Light Co. "We've been in very hot weather and the outage has put us in a bind."

The utility asked its 3 million customers in south Florida and along the state's Atlantic coast to raise thermostats, turn off electrical appliances and stock up on batteries for use in blackouts.

By late Monday, customer cooperation had reduced demand by about 700 megawatts — roughly the equivalent of the downed power plant, Swank said.

■ Motorist's toddler-restraint trial begins

MIAMI — Jury selection began Monday in the trial of a man charged with vehicular homicide in his 3-year-old daughter's death because she wasn't in a seat restraint.

A defense lawyer said 30-year-old Ramiro de Jesus Rodriguez was singled out for prosecution to teach other parents a lesson. A prosecutor said Rodriguez' driving was to blame for the fatal accident.

It's rare for a parent to be held legally responsible for failing to restrain a child killed in an auto accident. In 1983, a Cincinnati man was acquitted of vehicular homicide in the death of his 2-year-old son in a crash five days after an Ohio law took effect requiring child restraints.

■ Jury selection begins in asbestos trial

BALTIMORE — The biggest asbestos personal-injury trial in U.S. history went to trial Monday in a consolidation of more than 9,000 cases that is being watched closely by the nation's legal community.

"This isn't going to be all that thrilling, but it's important, very important," Baltimore Circuit Court Judge Marshall A. Levin said.

The trial of 9,032 cases from Baltimore and four surrounding counties could set a precedent for helping to speed resolution of asbestos cases. Judges in other jurisdictions have attempted similar steps to reduce the caseload.

Levin consolidated the cases after a plan to have four judges work full-time on them was deemed too slow. Claimants, mostly former steel and shipyard workers, rejected his suggestion to file a class-action suit.

■ Robb: Past denials 'factual and accurate'

WASHINGTON — Sen. Charles Robb said Monday he watched part of an NBC report on allegations concerning his personal conduct but would have little to say beyond reiterating previous denials.

"I have said everything that I wanted to say. Everything that I've said in the past remains absolutely factual and accurate. There's nothing more appropriate to say right now," Robb said.

Allegations have circulated for some time that on several occasions between 1982 to 1986, when Robb was governor of Virginia, he was a guest at parties where drugs were present.

More recently, an allegation has surfaced that Robb had sexual relations with Tai Collins, a former Miss Virginia-USA.

■ Police bill radio station for investigation

BURBANK, Calif. — A Burbank radio station will be billed $12,170.98 by the Los Angeles County Sheriff's Department for its investigation of an on-air murder confession that later was revealed as a hoax, an official said.

The bill to KROQ-FM (106.7) includes a $9,789.30 charge for the 149 hours homicide Sgt. John Yarborough spent on the case, which was opened after an anonymous caller to the "Kevin and Bean" morning show on June 13 said he had fatally beaten his girlfriend, said Sgt. Lynda Edmonds said Monday.

"But it's not the dollar amount that's so critical," Edmonds said. "It's that we will never have the opportunity to recoup the time we spent away from legitimate, unsolved cases."

■ Judge orders reprieve to district's schools

RICHMOND, Calif. — In an 11th-hour reprieve, a judge ordered the state to keep Richmond schools open for the rest of the school year, preventing the district from becoming the first in recent California history to shut down for lack of funds.

The 31,000-student district had been scheduled to close today — six weeks before the normal June 14 start of summer vacation — because it lacks $29 million needed to pay district bills and teacher salaries. The state rejected requests to bail out the district.

Crew conducts 'Star Wars' tests

■ Recorder trouble cancels others.

Associated Press

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. — The astronauts aboard Discovery observed eerie waves of light above the horizon in a "Star Wars" experiment Monday, and ground controllers struggled to fix data recorders needed for other tests.

Six experiments were canceled as a result of the recorder trouble, and the Defense Department expected to lose more data if the problem is not resolved by the end of the eight-day flight.

NASA flight directors and Pentagon officials insisted the mission would not be harmed by the loss of what they termed "secondary experiments." Nonetheless, there was disappointment.

"From our view, everything is obviously important," said Air Force Capt. Marty Hauser, a Pentagon spokesman.

The seven astronauts tried four times to activate the two recorders before turning their attention to instruments unaffected by the failure. Engineers on the ground continued to work on the problem.

Three of five scientific instruments that constitute one of Discovery's primary payloads — valued altogether at $160 million — are hampered by the recorder problem. The instrument considered most important by the military has its own recorders, which successfully collected data Monday on atmospheric light, or aurora.

At one point, the astronauts beamed down black-and-white television images of light rippling off the atmosphere as they flew over the Pacific near Australia. Later, they sent back a videotaped scene of a halo shimmering for thousands of miles along the horizon with the constellation Orion in the background. "Pretty spectacular," said Mission Control's Kathy Thornton.

Judge questions Exxon pact impact on villagers

WASHINGTON (NYT) — A U.S. district judge said Monday that he was not satisfied that the rights of 5,000 native Alaskan villagers were protected in the $1 billion civil settlement the government reached last month with Exxon Corp. and the state of Alaska.

Over objections by the Department of Justice, Judge Stanley Sporkin directed the villagers' lawyers to interview Exxon executives to determine what the company believed the settlement provided the Alaskan villagers and whether Exxon thought the agreement protected it from claims by the villagers.

Sporkin's directive could further undermine the government's efforts to hold Exxon responsible for the nation's worst oil spill on March 24, 1989, in Alaska's Prince William Sound.

Under terms of a novel settlement that the United States and Alaska reached with Exxon on March 12, the company agreed to pay up to $1 billion over the next 15 years to settle civil claims by the federal and state governments, and $100 million in fines to settle criminal violations of U.S. law.

If changes are made in either agreement, Exxon has the right to withdraw from the settlements.

Last week, a U.S. district judge in Alaska, H. Russel Holland, rejected the $100 million fine as too small to adequately penalize the nation's largest oil company.

Because of that rejection, Exxon has until May 4 to withdraw from the civil settlement.

Judge Sporkin's rulings in the civil portion of the agreement could leave Exxon open to lawsuits seeking greater damage awards, giving Exxon even more cause to withdraw.

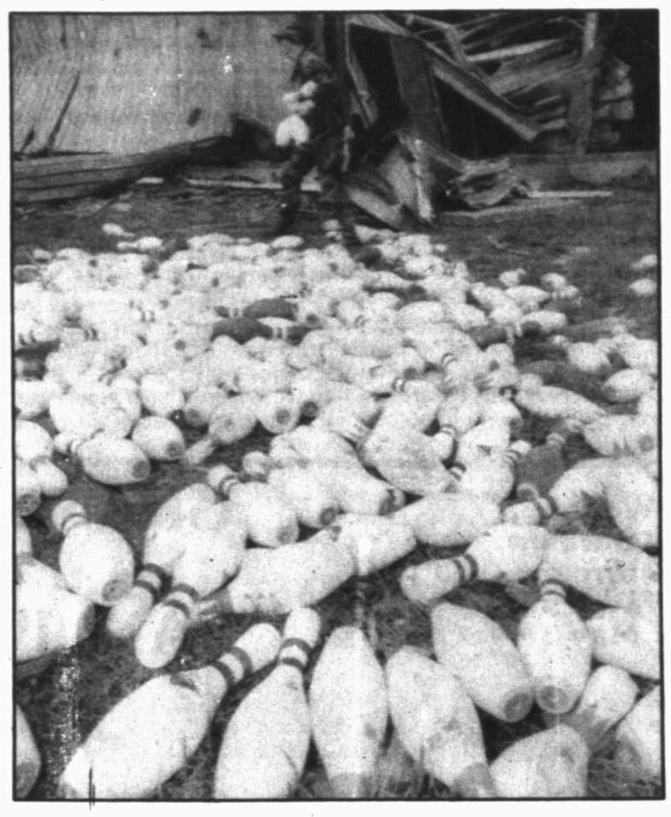

A spokesman for Exxon in Irving, Texas, said the company would have no comment Monday.

Sporkin has jurisdiction in the case because of a lawsuit brought in the U.S. District Court here in February by 15 native Alaskan villages.

The suit seeks to prevent the settlement because of concerns that the agreement barred their right to sue Exxon and other companies linked to the oil spill.

The issue in the case before Sporkin is who has the right to recover money for harm the spill caused to the natural resources of Prince William Sound.

Exxon has made it known to the government and the native villagers that it intends to pay for damages to natural resources just once.

Heavy rain causes flooding across Mississippi Valley

Associated Press

Flooding caused by as much as 10 inches of rain forced evacuations Monday in parts of Mississippi, Arkansas and Louisiana, and high wind caused power outages affecting thousands of people. Two deaths were reported.

"In north Louisiana . . . you can't get there unless you have a boat," said State Police Capt. Ronnie Jones.

He said at least 65 roads were closed in the region. Monroe police ran out of barricades to close flooded roads, and Ouachita Parish ran out of sandbags.

Mississippi Power & Light Co. said storms since Saturday had triggered temporary power outages to 30,000 customers.

A woman in Shreveport, La., was crushed to death late Sunday when wind gusting to 70 mph blew a 50-foot-tall oak tree onto her home.

Floodwaters from swollen Snake Creek swept a car off a highway in Bradley County in southeastern Arkansas on Sunday, killing a 24-year-old woman and injuring her companion.

In neighboring Union County, 75 people were evacuated from homes in flooded areas along Calion Lake, authorities said. The heaviest rain was in Arkansas City, where 10.60 inches were reported for Saturday and Sunday.

The National Weather Service said the stormy weather that began last week was due to a combination of a strong jet stream in the lower atmosphere that pumped massive amounts of moist, unstable air across the region from the south and a series of disturbances sweeping across in the upper atmosphere.

The worst flooding was in Louisiana, where about 1,000 houses were flooded and schools were closed in nine northern and central parishes. And high tide in the southern part of the state caused erosion at Grand Isle and closed schools in Lafitte.

In Mississippi, flooding caused evacuations in Grenada and some people sought shelter in City Hall. Grenada's public schools were closed Monday because of street flooding.

"We've got some real problems here with the water," said Jack Simmer of the Grenada County Sheriff's Department. "We have evacuations Sunday night and people are still being evacuated from low areas."

The heaviest rain was at Monroe, La., where 9.42 inches of rain fell Sunday and Monday.

As we begin to age the changes in our appearance are very subtle. We think it is stress or fatigue, too many suntans, or from having worked outdoors for many years. Our skin begins to shown these subtle changes around age thirty, but there is a wide variation in how fast and when people age. It is a combination of genetic and environmental factors that determine this for us. Cosmetic surgery does not turn back the clock and make our skin and facial features younger, but it can help someone "look good for his or her age". A consultation with a qualified physician is the first step if you are considering cosmetic surgery.
Emotional stability is one of the most important factors to have well established prior to undertaking any aesthetic surgery. Facial cosmetic surgery can enhance your appearance but improvement in self-confidence and much of the "success" of the surgery is up to the patient. Lastly, when contemplating facial cosmetic surgery one should candidly discuss their expectations prior to undergoing any procedures.

MIT professor finds Legos help children learn

By Tony Rogers
Associated Press writer

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. — You might look upon Legos as rather low concept, just a jumble of multicolored building blocks that kids snap together to fashion cars and houses and monsters.

You might also see them as those irksome plastic pieces — 11 billion are produced a year — forever showing up under chair cushions or clogging the vacuum cleaner long after the kids have lost interest in them.

But if you were Seymour Papert, education researcher at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, you would see them as no less than the tools of the Thomas Edisons and Frank Lloyd Wrights of the future.

And he is no longer alone. Papert has sold schools across the nation on the notion that Legos in the classroom can help build scientists.

"Part of the power of this is many kids are comfortable with Lego, they see it as a part of their world," said Mitchel Resnick, an MIT researcher and Papert coworker. "When we go into classrooms, kids are surprised that this is legitimate. They have a mindset that things in school shouldn't be enjoyable."

Papert notes many scientists tinkered as children with cars or pried open vacuum tube radios to explore the mysterious glowing insides. Edison was a young tinkerer and Wright, in his autobiography, said he learned about forms and shapes from playing with building blocks his mother gave him as a child.

But the inquisitive child who takes a screwdriver to a radio today will likely find just a tiny microchip and a few transistors. Legos, he insists, are one of the few toys left that allow children to use their hands to invent and build objects straight out of their imaginations.

"Technology is becoming opaque," Papert said. "You can't open up a microchip and see how it works. Even cars have become too complicated to tinker with.

"All this takes people away from seeing the inner workings of things, and impoverishes the learning environment," Papert added. "So you have people growing up not knowing how things work. It's disturbing."

'Technology is becoming opaque. You can't open up a microchip and see how it works....All this takes people away from seeing the inner workings of things, and impoverishes the learning environment. It's disturbing.'

— Seymour Papert, MIT education researcher

Papert was already known for creating Logo, a computer programming language for children that is used in about a third of the country's elementary schools. But he wanted to create a hands-on system that would let children use their creativity the way Wright did. He found the solution in Lego.

Lego worked well because it was a versatile toy that both boys and girls enjoyed, Papert said. And the Lego company was interested in Papert's work.

The Lego company was founded in Denmark in 1932 by Ole Kirk Christiansen. The name was a contraction of "leg godt" — "play well" in Danish.

The first Lego toys were handpainted wooden cars, animals and pull-toys. Lego bricks came on the market in 1949 but did not reach the United States until 1961. The company says 300 million kids have played with Lego bricks.

Working in MIT's Media Lab, Papert combined Logo with Lego and threw in additional gears, motors and sensors. Then he let Boston area schoolchildren — mostly in the third, fourth and fifth grades — loose with those raw materials. The system allows children to make things out of Legos, use the gears and motors to make them perform various functions, and program those functions with the computer.

For instance, George, a third-grader, built a car out of Legos. He connected it to a battery box and watched it roll forward. Then he connected the motor to the computer and used Logo commands to make the car move in different directions.

Papert watched as children built trucks that moved, robots that walked and houses with lights that turned on in the dark.

"The number of ways the children could make something walk was mind-boggling," Papert said. "It was an explosion of invention."

The Lego company began marketing Lego-Logo to schools in 1988, and it is now used in thousands of schools around the country. Resnick said Lego-Logo may be especially helpful for children who don't do well with abstract concepts.

"Some children might not have succeeded with typical types of tests, but they might be very gifted visually and mechanically," Resnick said. "They might have seen themselves as failures in schools. This helps them see themselves differently."

Even teachers got into the act. One teacher built a sensor to monitor the movements of her pet hamster.

Given a chance to invent and build things, students learn planning, design and technical skills as well as broader scientific concepts, said Papert.

Make no mistake, Papert is quick to add, Lego-Logo doesn't make learning easy, and it's not an extension of recess. Teachers must provide guidance and structure for students using it.

"But kids don't want it to be made easy," Papert said. "They call this, 'hard fun.' I've heard them say that many times."

State GOP unveils redistricting plan

AP Laserphoto

Jim Duncan, a member of the state Republican Party's Fair Redistricting Committee, on Monday points out to House Redistricting Committee members how districts would be set up under the GOP's plan.

■ House Speaker says lawmakers will try to pass congressional redistricting plan by the end of this legislative session.

Associated Press

AUSTIN — The Texas Republican Party on Monday unveiled its proposed state House district map that could send many Democrats off the political charts.

"We believe this meets the test of fairness," state GOP Chairman Fred Meyer told the House Redistricting Committee.

Ed Martin, executive director of the state Democratic Party, responded: "The only people that the plan treats fairly is the Republican Party of Texas."

The Republican plan would redraw current district boundaries in a way that could force 26 incumbent House members to face one another in the 1992 elections. Of those, 23 are Democrats.

Redistricting Committee Chairman Tom Uher, D-Bay City, noted that since only three Republican incumbents could be affected by the plan, the pairings do not reflect the Democrat-Republican ratio in the House. There are 93 Democrats and 57 Republicans.

Meyer said party affiliation had nothing to do with how the Republican plan was drawn up.

However, he said, more GOP districts should be created because most of the high-growth areas in the state over the past 10 years have been in Republican districts.

"There are just too many Republicans. You can't bury them, you've got to put them someplace when you redraw those lines," Meyer said.

The Legislature approves new districts after each census to adjust for population changes.

Meyer said the GOP plan would create six more minority districts, but Martin said the proposed districts are devised in a way that it would hurt the voting strength of blacks and Hispanics.

'We believe this meets the test of fairness.'

— Fred Meyer, state GOP chairman

"For all the rhetoric about fair redistricting, it turns out the Republican plan shortchanges minorities, shortchanges rural Texans. I'm absolutely flabbergasted," Martin said.

Uher said he hoped the committee would send a redistricting plan to the House within the next two weeks.

With the session in its last month, Uher said state lawmakers will not take up redrawing the state's congressional district lines until this summer in a special session.

But later, House Speaker Gib Lewis, D-Fort Worth, said lawmakers will try to pass a congressional redistricting plan before the end of the session.

Frailey finds a need for natural history museum

By Erin Blair
Associate City Editor

Dr. Carl Frailey makes no bones about it: He wants a natural history museum for Midland.

Frailey, a geology instructor in the Scientific Studies Division at Midland College, believes the museum would be a real natural for the Permian Basin because of the area's rich geologic history.

Add to that the strong roots of the oil industry in the community and the well-established Petroleum Museum and you've got built-in interest and support for the venture, he said.

He is excited about the vast amount of unexplored land in West Texas. Sure, there are oil rigs, but because the land is private, no one has gone digging for fossils in what was formerly the Permian Sea.

"I've been here (at Midland College) ten years and taught courses out in the field — fossil hunting and identification," Frailey said. "But I am continually amazed at how few people go out and look for them in the midst of all this."

Frailey said that in the mid-1850s, the government sent out military expeditions to explore the west. "And they'd bring back fossils no one had ever seen before.

"This area's like that — no one's ever seen these fossils before."

Most of those early dinosaur bones and other ancient curiosities went to prestigious museums back east, rather than staying near the places where they were found.

"A museum here would form a focus, a point for people to use to get associated with fossils," he said.

Frailey calls the Permian Basin an unmined treasure trove.

"The limestone around here is full of fossils," he said.

From the 1920s to the 1940s, paleontologists from the University of Texas, the University of Oklahoma and Harvard scoured the area, uncovering significant finds at Big Spring, Big Lake and Iraan, as well as the Big Bend region. Although UT and Louisiana State University continue digging in Big Bend, most of West Texas lost its allure by WWII.

Testimony gets under way in Brodnex trial

By David Morris
Staff Writer

There is no physical evidence linking the defendant to the crime in a shooting last fall that left a Midland man in critical condition, an investigator testified Monday in 238th District Court.

Midland Police Department Detective John Ingram told a seven-man, five-woman jury that officers never recovered a weapon from defendant Joshua Matthew Brodnex, 26. Police also found no fingerprint or footprint evidence to connect Brodnex with the shooting, Ingram said.

Ingram was the sole witness to testify before jurors Monday, the first day of Brodnex's trial on attempted murder and aggravated assault charges. Testimony is scheduled to resume today before Judge John Hyde.

The shooting, which occurred around 2:20 a.m. on Oct. 27, 1990, left 31-year-old David Posey with bullet wounds to the spine, chest and face, according to hospital reports.

Witnesses told police they saw Brodnex shoot Posey with what appeared to be a .22-caliber rifle in front of Posey's residence at 405 W. Nobles Ave. Police arrived shortly after the shooting to find Posey lying in a pool of blood in his yard, according to reports.

Initial attempts to track a suspect with a dog from the MPD canine unit were unsuccessful, according to reports. However, police arrested Brodnex later on

3 council candidates lead pack in spending

■ The District 1 candidate outspends six others who are campaigning for Midland City Council.

By Brian Pearson
Staff Writer

Three candidates for the Midland City Council have plunged well into four-digit spending for their campaigns, while three others have spent nothing.

District 1 candidate James Devenport, who listed only $100 in contributions and no expenditures in his first report, was well ahead of his fellow council contenders in the second report.

During a period from March 26 through last Friday, Devenport received $6,200 in contributions — including $5,000 of his own money — and spent $5,016.48.

At-large candidate John Castro and District 2 candidate Jose Alfredo Zertuche followed Devenport in contributions and expenditures.

Castro received $1,879.89 in contributions during the second period, bringing his contribution total to $3,523.23. His expenditures have totaled $2,340.78, including $1,180.63 from the most recent report.

Dallas City Council cancels vote on 10-4-1 plan

Associated Press

DALLAS — A City Council vote to decide whether to save or kill a controversial redistricting plan was cancelled suddenly by Mayor Annette Strauss Monday night.

The vote, on a new redistricting map that would give Hispanics a greater chance to be elected, was cancelled because the 11-member panel did not have the majority needed to approve the plan, said council member Jim Buerger.

The plan, known as 10-4-1, would provide for the election of 10 members from single-member districts, four from quadrants and the mayor at large.

"It's real simple, 10-4-1 couldn't cut the mustard," said Buerger, who supports a rival 14-1 plan under which all council members would be elected from single-member districts and the mayor at large.

"I think it is a defeat for 10-4-1 tonight," Buerger said.

Several council members and Mrs. Strauss spent part of the afternoon trying to sway council

Art festival volunteers keep eyes on sky

By Georgia Todd Temple
Staff Writer

Volunteers are watching the West Texas skies as the countdown nears for the eighth annual Celebration of the Arts, set for Thursday through Sunday in downtown Midland

"According to the company that sets up our tents, unless the wind exceeds about 70 miles per hour, they will remain secure," said Kathy Schorr, director of the Arts Assembly of Midland, which is the overall sponsor of COA.

Mrs. Schorr remembered how bad weather during 1985's festival blew down tents and the community rallied to set them back up.

"I think even if we were to experience something like that, we'd still come out okay because of Midland's great volunteer spirit," she said.

About 600 volunteers are involved in the project this year, she said.

"We are always delighted at the willingness and interest of so many people in getting involved with this event."

This year's Arts Assembly-sponsored events begin with a free concert at 8 p.m. Thursday at Theatre Midland, 2000 W. Wadley Ave. The concert features Scartaglen, a four-member vocal group that uses more than a dozen instruments including fiddles, uilleann pipes, a tin whistle and keyboards.

'According to the company that sets up our tents, unless the wind exceeds about 70 miles per hour, they will remain secure.'

— Kathy Schorr, Arts Assembly of Midland director

"It isn't often that we get to experience this kind of music in this part of the country," Mrs. Schorr said. "They perform interpretations of traditional Irish music so they kind of blend Celtic traditions with modern arrangements."

The next official COA event is Friday afternoon, when the Assembly sponsors a media run through the Human Maze, set up on the courthouse lawn. The run begins at 1 p.m.

The COA Preview Party is 6:30 to 9:30 p.m. Friday at Midland Center and Centennial Plaza. Admission is $25 and includes a cocktail buffet.

The festival will be in full swing from 10 a.m. to 8 p.m. Saturday and noon to 6 p.m. Sunday. Admission to the arts and crafts show and the street dance is $2 for adults, $1 for children and free for those under 5.

Out of the 70 artists participating this year, 29 have never exhibited work in COA before, Mrs. Schorr said. Tony Saladino, a painter from Hurst, juried the works accepted into the show.

The Cinco de Mayo Parade, which begins at Nobles and Lamesa roads at 11 a.m. Saturday, ends near the festival gates downtown. Khenany, a group from Obregon, Mexico that performs Andean music on native instruments, plays at 1:30, 4:30 and 6:30 p.m. Saturday.

New to the Celebration this year is Canyon, a country band performing for Saturday's 8 p.m. to midnight street dance, which will move indoors to the Hilton ballroom in the event of rain.

SPEND: Devenport outspends 6 candidates

(From 1B)

Zertuche's campaign pot has grown to $2,554.75 in contributions and $2,301.40 in expenditures. There were $1,518.75 in contributions and $1,671.02 in expenditures during the second period for Zertuche.

At-large candidate J.D. Faircloth, who listed no contributions or expenditures after the first period, listed $1,000 in contributions and no expenditures in the newest report.

The Rev. Michael Richard De Vaughn, a District 2 candidate, had $697.10 in contributions and $453.69 in expenditures after the second period.

At-large candidate Hugh White III and District 1 hopeful Steve Scott have listed no contributions or expenditures after the first and second periods.

A final report will be filed following Saturday's election. The first report covered a period ending April 4.

Meanwhile, absentee voting at the Elections Administration Office, 709 W. Washington, will end at 5 p.m. today.

As of late Monday, 2,262 had voted absentee, with another 1,000 expected to vote today, said Bettye Calvert, election administrator for the county.

"It's a very good absentee turnout for a local election," Ms. Calvert said.

Registered voters wanting to cast their ballots absentee still can vote between 8 a.m. and 5 p.m. today at the Midland County Elections Adminstration building, 709 W. Washington Ave.

Here is a list of the candidates and their contributors and expenditures during the second period:

Devenport's contributors: himself, $5,000; Byron H. Greaves, $100; Mr. and Mrs. Harvey Langston, $100; and Earle M. Craig Jr., $1,000. He also received $50 in contributions of less than $50 each.

Devenport's expenditures: voting lists, $249.90; posters, $506.63; television advertising, $2,506; television and newspaper advertising, $1,398.25; gluing for posters, $200; fund-raiser invitations, $155,70.

Castro's contributors: Bob Stevens, $50; Larry Carrasco, $50; Jose Cuevas, $500; Torres and Torres, $200; A. Wayne Peters, $100; Julia I. Merla, $25; Richard Saldana, $15; and Jess Ann Thomason, $250.

Also: James V. Humphrey, $20; R.K. Belcher, $200; Ciro Sanchez, $100; Adela Quiroz, $30; Lydia Massey, $5; Farias Tax Consultant, $50; Joe Amezcua, $100; Felipe Morales, $100, and Corrales Insurance, $25.

Also: himself, 59.89; Dallas Smith, $60; and $329.89 in other contributions of $329.89 or less.

Castro's expenditures: food for fund-raiser, $125; billboards, $384.30; plywood, $35.53; yard signs and T-shirts, $344.80; and more yard signs, $291.

Zertuche's contributors: Angel Diaz Nunez, $55; Jose Cuevas Jr., $200; Victor Torres, $100; Steve Beggs, $50; Ruben Vargas, $100; Bob Stevens, $55; Joe Amezcua, $100; Enrique Farias, $50; and Associated Arts, $51. Zertuche also listed $813.75 in contributions of less than $50 each.

Zertuche's expenditures: yard signs, $224.75; rally costs, $75; stamps and supplies, $130; lumber, $71.05; billboards; $384.30; business cards, $140; postage, $36; T-shirts, $80.81; radio spots, $495; and checks, $34.11.

De Vaughn's contributors: Tall City Lions Club, $30; William Merritt, $25; City Federation Club, $100; Tom's Pharmacy, $25; Mrs. Singleton, $50; Alma Marshall, $25; J.W. Cooper, $50; and Mt. Calvary Church, $100.

Also: Aquilla Watson, $25; Beatrice Hurd, $119.42; and material contributions totaling $47.68.

De Vaughn's expenditures: $453.69 for advertising.

Faircloth's contributors: Ciro Sanchez, $100; Jose Cuevas Jr., $500; Donald A. Harvey, $100; and C.H. Priddy, $100.

TRIAL: Physical evidence to link Brodnex lacking the day of the shooting on the strength of witness' statements, reports show.

Ingram told prosecutor Ralph Petty that investigators found two empty .22-caliber shell casings at the shooting scene along with two live .22-caliber rounds. Police also found footprints at the scene, but added that they did not match prints made by the shoes Brodnex was wearing when he was arrested.

Under cross-examination by defense attorney Tom Morgan, Ingram said police did not search Brodnex's home for shoes that might have linked him to the crime scene.

He also said police did not find a .22-caliber rifle in Brodnex's possession.

Brodnex, whom court records show is a parolee with past forgery and sexual assault convictions, has been in the Midland County Central Detention Facility since his arrest.

If convicted, he faces up to 20 years in prison and a $10,000 fine for attempted murder, a second-degree felony. If convicted of aggravated assault, a third-degree felony, he faces a maximum of 10 years in prison and a fine up to $5,000.

MUSEUM: Area's rich with geologic artifacts

(From 1B)

The dinosaur craze in the preteen set has sparked new interest in fossils, Frailey said. But now universities don't have the funds for digs and there are few paleontologists about, so fossil hunters must work on a smaller scale.

"We could get some nice stuff here without a great deal of effort," he said, showing off a phytosaur skull found by Bob Kahle near Big Spring.

"Here's a former denizen of West Texas. He lived here right after the Permian Sea receded, when we had low swamps like Louisiana.

"He'd be lying on the banks, living like alligators and crocodiles, but he's only distantly related to them."

While the phytosaur's basic biography is known, many other creatures that were his contemporaries remain mysteries, Frailey said.

"The natural history of West Texas has been pretty much neglected. We don't even know what kinds of beetles and birds lived here — that's basic natural history."

Jack Barton, an exploration technician with Harrison Interests, Ltd. and a former Frailey student, is keen to get started on the museum.

A self-described "fossil head," Barton has been making inquiries about the feasibility of the project and said what he's heard has been encouraging.

Both men stress that they have no interest in "infringing" on the donor pools that fund the Petroleum Museum, the Midland County Historical Museum and the Museum of the Southwest.

Barton said there are more than enough individuals, companies and collectors as yet untapped in the area to provide for all the museum's needs.

A major resource is Frailey himself, Barton said.

"If we don't utilize his background, he'll be snapped up by someplace else," he said. "Without his credentials, we can't make this fly."

"Our main interest is in natural history," said Frailey. "We're asking, are we going to include archaeology and history too?

"We'd like to work with those people (with related interests)."

"But no stuffed birds," Barton said.

Barton said the museum, besides providing an introduction to geology for the general public, also could facilitate greater access for fossil hunting on private lands.

"There are geologists here who collect fossils and have access to petroleum leases for excavation on working well sites," Barton said, explaining that their connections and the museum's credibility could open up previously unexplored sites.

"Otherwise you have to go to each friendly rancher to grant permission to dig."

In June, Frailey will lead Midland College students on an 11-day field trip to explore the geology and fossils of Colorado, Utah and Wyoming.

Later in the summer, he'll spend six weeks exploring the Amazon Basin with his associate Dr. Kenneth Campbell of the Natural History Museum of Los Angeles, as he has done for the past 11 years. This time a grant from the National Geographic will fund their research in western Brazil.

Frailey said the Amazon Basin, like the Permian Basin, has a rich and as-yet unexplored fossil trove.

Frailey and Campbell found the skull of a giant crocodilian, Purussaurus, along the Rio Acre in 1988. They hope to uncover more treasures from the past this summer.

PLAN: Cancellation may spell end of 10-4-1 member Dr. Charles Tandy to support 10-4-1, said council member Glenn Box.

(From 1B)

Tandy, who represents Oak Cliff, was the swing vote needed to support the plan.

Box, a supporter of 10-4-1, said he was "extremely disappointed" that the meeting was cancelled.

But it does not spell defeat for the 10-4-1 plan, he said.

"Well I don't think it's a good day for 10-4-1, it never is when the voice of the people is thwarted," Box said.

The vote was predicted to be a close one with Mrs. Strauss perhaps casting the deciding vote.

"We were under the impression all weekend ... there were six votes for the plan," Box said.

The council is being asked to change a redistricting plan in a way that increases the percentage of Hispanics in three voting districts, thereby raising the likelihood of a Hispanic being elected to the council from those districts.

The Justice Department questioned whether a previous plan would provide adequate Hispanic representation.

Pressed by a court order, Dallas residents in 1989 voted to change the composition of the council from eight district members and three at-large members, including the mayor, to the 10-4-1 plan.

In early February, U.S. District Judge Jerry Buchmeyer ordered a city council election Saturday under a plan with 14 single member districts and the mayor elected at large.

MC hosts 2 free concerts

Staff Report

The Midland College Community Band, directed by Walter Osadchuk, will present its spring concert tonight at 8 p.m. in the Allison Fine Arts Building auditorium. Admission is free and the public is invited to attend.

The concert program will include works by Vincent Persichetti, a synthesized arrangement of Ernst van Dohnany's Suite for Orchestra, an arrangement of Ukranian folk songs by Halsey Stevens, the Feast of Trumpets by W. Francis McBeth, a concert march by Eric Osterling and a number of show tunes.

Osadchuk currently is recruiting musicians from the school and community for the 1991-92 band. For more information, call 685-4640.

On Thursday the Commercial Music Department at Midland College will present its spring concert at 8 p.m.

The free concert is being presented in Chaparral Center, complete with professional light and sound equipment. Student-performers will present several different ensembles for various styles of music.

LOCAL/AREA REPORTS

Court hearing

By Staff Reports

Three men are scheduled for a detention hearing in federal court today following their arrest Friday on charges of conspiracy to manufacture methamphetamines, federal officials said.

Charles Edward Farmer, 27, of Leander; Glenn Edward Perry, 40, of Big Spring; and Delbert Elgene Scroggins, 51, of Big Spring, were arrested in Midland following an undercover investigation by the Drug Enforcement Agency, according to federal officials and jail records.

All are being held without bond pending a detention hearing at 2:30 p.m.

Shooting

ODESSA — Three people injured by shotgun blasts were treated and released from Medical Center Hospital Sunday evening, police said.

Tony Lopez Pineda, 27, Darlene Pineda, 27, and Manuel Rivera, 20, all of Odessa, sustained minor injuries while in the back yard of 1204 N. Tom Green Ave. about 9:45 p.m. Sunday.

No one had been arrested in connection with the incident, police said Monday afternoon.

According to police reports, Tony Pineda had argued with the unnamed assailant the day of the shooting. That evening, the man returned and the two became involved in a fist fight that led to the assailant firing a sawed-off shotgun into the air.

The fight resumed and the man then fired more shots in the direction of those injured.

Police found four 12-gauge spent shotgun shells at the scene.

Fire

A garage at 4401 Boulder Drive sustained light fire and smoke damage when a pickup truck caught fire about 8:30 p.m. Monday, fire officials said.

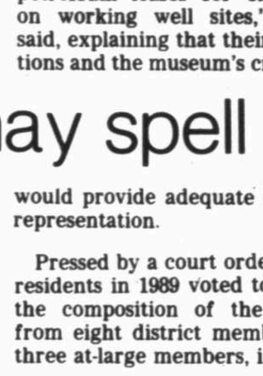

The truck, a 1957 Chevrolet, was damaged moderately as a result of the fire which was caused by an engine backfire, officials said.

Accident

A 49-year-old woman remained in critical condition at Memorial Hospital and Medical Center Monday night following a car accident that happened about 6:44 p.m. at Andrews Highway and Godfrey Court, officials said.

Betty McWilliams was in critical condition and her son, Hutch McWilliams, 12, was in satisfactory condition, suffering from lacerations.

A police accident report was not available late Monday evening.

CELEBRATION: Festival begins on Thursday

from California, who plays Celtic harp and tells Irish stories to adults as well as children, performs Sunday at 12:45, 1:30 and 3:30 p.m.

About 15,000 attended the 1990 festival. The organizers are hoping for an attendance this year of 20,000 to 25,000.

"Last year's attendance tripled the year before," Mrs. Schorr said, attributing the increase to "increased marketing efforts, beautiful weather and more offerings in terms of art and performers.

"And I think the word is just getting out. We had just never really marketed the celebration outside of Midland itself like we did last year."

Successful festival celebrations reflect the communities that host them, Mrs. Schorr said.

"I think the Celebration of the Arts is beginning to do that through its volunteerism, through the diversity of people that it's able to draw.

"I think the power of an event like ours and the beauty of it lies in the fact that it's accessible to everyone. It's not an exclusive event. Its location is reflective of the fact that we hope it represents the heart of Midland and how Midland feels about its cultural life."

Prices slip

NEW YORK (AP) — The price of natural gas was hammered Monday in an otherwise quiet energy futures market.

Natural gas has been depressed lately, as the warmish winter combined with an oversupply to push the price down. The cheap prices have even prompted some gas producers around the country to cap wells.

The futures price of gas fell by as much as 5 cents per 1,000 cubic feet for delivery next winter, when gas prices can be expected to hit their seasonal highs. Natural gas settled at $1.705, down 4.6 cents for delivery in November; $1.980, down 5.0 cents for delivery in December; and at $2.120, down 4.0 cents for delivery in January; at the New York Mercantile Exchange.

Gas for delivery in June settled Monday at $1.374, up .7 cent.

Petroleum futures showed little change in lackluster trading Monday.

West Texas Intermediate for delivery in June settled at $21.26 per barrel, down 2 cents.

Stocks tumble

NEW YORK (AP) — Stock prices tumbled Monday, depressed by economic worries and doubts about the durability of the market's early-1991 rally.

Trading was relatively quiet.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials fell 35.40 to 2,876.98, on top of last week's 53.21-point drop.

Dollar mixed

NEW YORK (AP) — The dollar was narrowly mixed Monday as traders sold the currency following lack of agreement between the world's seven richest countries to lower interest rates. Gold finished lower.

The dollar opened higher against the German mark in New York, but traders began selling the currency when it exceeded 1.7700 German marks, said Michael Kahn, senior foreign exchange trader at Credit Suisse. The dollar finished at 1.7510 marks, unchanged from Late Friday.

The Tokyo currency markets were closed because of a national holiday in Japan, Greenery Day.

In London, the British pound fell to $1.6765 from $1.6860 late Friday.

Other late dollar rates in New York, compared with late Friday's rates, included: 1.4730 Swiss francs, down from 1.4766; 5.9095 French francs, down from 5.9110 French francs; 1,294 Italian lire, unchanged; and 1.15325 Canadian dollars, up from 1.1523.

On New York's Commodity Exchange, gold bullion for current delivery settled at $352.10 a troy ounce.

'Fannies,' 'Freddies' draw concern

Officials to recommend tighter supervision of government lenders

WASHINGTON (NYT) — Administration officials will recommend a sharp increase this week in the supervision of the government-sponsored companies that help to finance home purchases, higher education and agriculture.

Senior White House and Treasury Department officials say they are concerned that the enterprises have grown so large so quickly that their potential liabilities to taxpayers total more than $1 trillion and that the government is unable to exert any control over them.

The three agencies say there is no immediate threat to the federal budget from these companies, the largest and best known of which are the Federal National Mortgage Association, popularly known as Fannie Mae, and the Federal Home Loan Mortgage Corp., known as Freddie Mac.

Indeed, executives at the companies say they are not taking any improper risks and that significant regulatory changes are not only unnecessary but may prove counterproductive.

"The bottom line is you start out with the fact that this company is financially sound," said Leland C. Brendsel, chairman and chief executive of Freddie Mac, "so you don't need financial requirements substantially different from what they are now."

What is more, the executives note that their companies are owned by stockholders, and they say they are responsible to them, like officers of other corporations.

The companies have an odd provenance, blending elements from the worlds of corporations and government.

They were created by Congress. They have been granted implicit and explicit federal guarantees and subsidies to achieve certain public policy objectives, like increasing affordable housing, expanding education and promoting and protecting farming.

Within the next few days the Treasury; the General Accounting Office, which is the investigative arm of Congress, and the Congressional Budget Office are expected to release reports concluding that the government lacks the ability to control these enterprises.

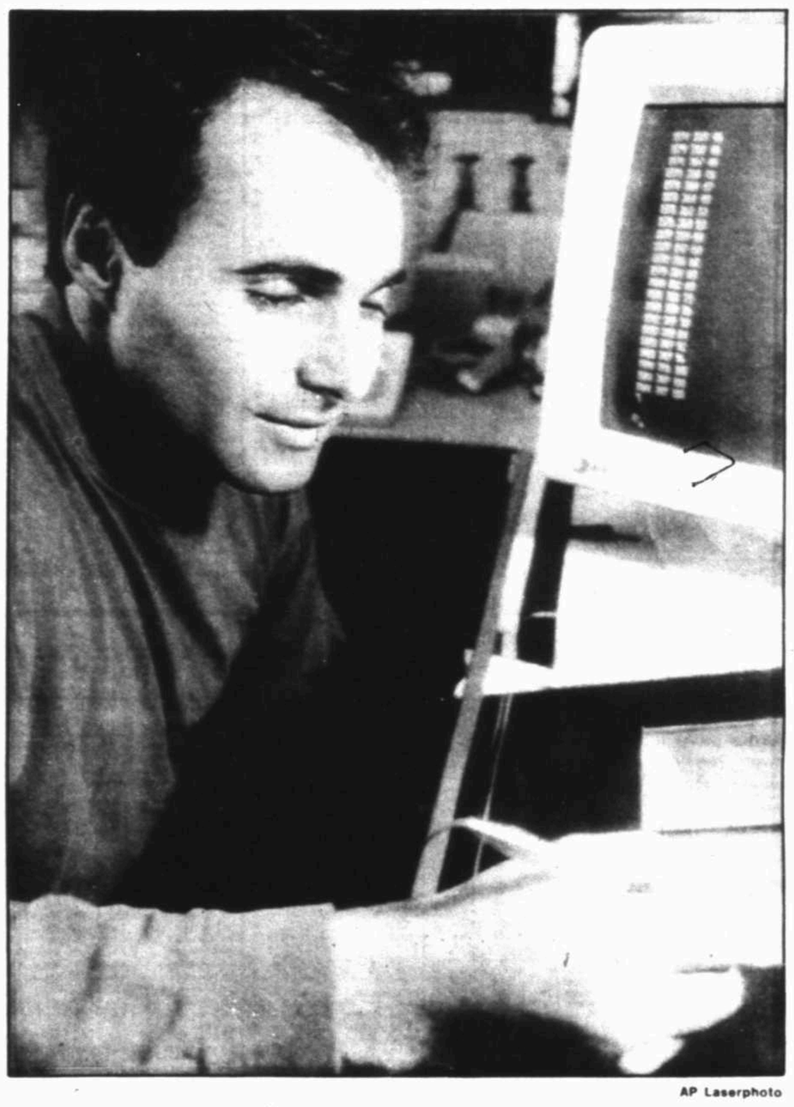

"We don't say there's an immediate and imminent danger," said a Treasury official who worked on one report and asked not to be identified. "We will say there is a lack of protection for the taxpayer."

And Charles A. Bowsher, the comptroller general and head of the GAO, said in a recent interview: "Congress and the regulators just aren't watching the situation closely enough. Potential problems can develop."

But it will not be easy to change the law governing the enterprises, which have millions of dollars to finance an extensive marketing campaign and employ an array of politically well-connected advisers — including former presidential aides like Clark M. Clifford and Leonard Garment.

Fannie Mae has a political action committee that has contributed more than $102,000 in recent years to lawmakers, and tens of thousands of dollars of other contributions have been made by its senior executives.

Gung-ho consumers outspend income gain; home sales rise

WASHINGTON (AP) — Consumers increased their spending by 0.6 percent in March, the government reported Monday. Analysts said the second monthly advance in that critical sector could mean that the end of the recession is near.

But they also noted that the Commerce Department report included a relatively weak 0.2 percent increase in personal incomes, which could strain pocket books and dampen a recovery.

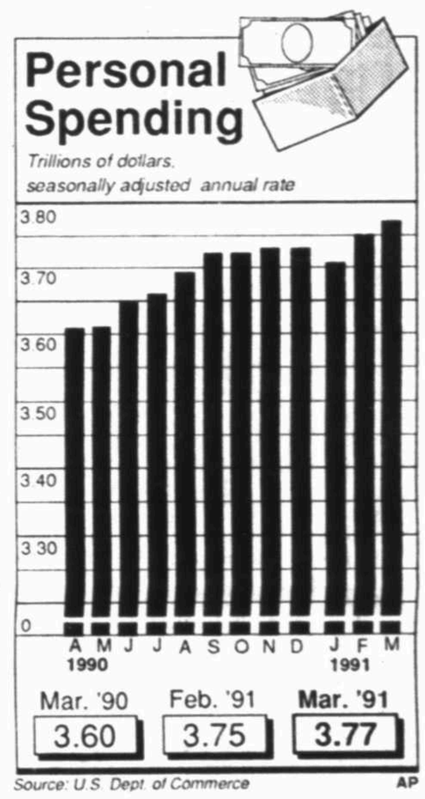

A second government report Monday said sales of new homes rose 1.0 percent, also the second monthly advance, which reinforced many analysts' view that the slump in that industry already had reached bottom.

Personal consumption spending rose to a seasonally adjusted annual rate of $3.77 trillion, up from $3.75 trillion the previous month, the department said.

And it revised the February rate from a 0.6 percent advance to an even larger 1.0 percent, the biggest gain since a 1.2 percent increase last June. It followed a 0.5 percent tumble in January.

Economists were encouraged by the back-to-back growth in consumer spending, which represents two-thirds of the nation's economic activity and is vital to any economic revival.

Skinner: Kerkorian should 'put up or shut up' on TWA

WASHINGTON (AP) — Transportation Secretary Samuel K. Skinner said Monday that if billionaire investor Kirk Kerkorian wants to buy financially troubled Trans World Airways it is time to "put up or shut up."

Skinner commented as he defended his decision last week to authorize the sale to American Airlines of three of six TWA routes to London.

Skinner said he decided to require TWA to keep the remaining three routes in addition to its other overseas runs to help it stay in business as a viable competitor while receiving much needed cash.

Skinner said the deal gave Kerkorian the chance to negotiate the purchase of TWA from its owner, Carl Icahn, if that is what Kerkorian wants to do.

"Mr. Kerkorian can either put up or shut up," Skinner said as he fielded questions from a group of business writers here. "He can either put a deal together or not."

"We believe that if Mr. Kerkorian wants to make an offer, he now has an opportunity to do so and the free market will decide whether it goes forward or not," Skinner said.

Skinner commented in an appearance before the Society of American Business Editors and Writers.

Kerkorian's Tracinda Corp., forging an alliance with TWA's pilots', flight attendants' and engineers' unions, has said it is ready to revive TWA with $250 million in cash and an unspecified larger amount for the purchase of modern aircraft.

Skinner said the infusion of cash from the route sale to American is essential to keep TWA flying.

"If they file for bankruptcy, there will be nothing for Mr. Kerkorian to buy," Skinner said.

Fort Worth-based American says its contract with TWA bars any third party becoming involved in ways that would affect the sale of TWA's routes.

Pickens to sell Koito interest

AUSTIN (AP) — After two years of wrangling for a seat on the board of Koito Manufacturing Co., Texas financier T. Boone Pickens said Monday he plans to give in and sell his 26.4 percent stake in the Japanese auto parts maker.

"We've given up on ever getting on the board of Koito," said Pickens, who helped pioneer hostile takeover tactics in the United States.

In an opinion page article for the Washington Post, Pickens wrote that he would sell his 42.4 million shares to Japanese stock speculator Kitaro Watanabe, who sold him the shares in 1989.

The terms of the agreement had not been reached, he said during an appearance at the state Capitol Monday.

"We haven't concluded any transaction or anything else, but we're going to sometime here in the next few days or certainly weeks or so," Pickens said.

Koito has contended that Watanabe actually controlled Pickens' shares and

INVESTORS' GUIDE

Reserve charge is not tax but requirement

By Bill Doyle

Q. A notice arrived with my bank statement, saying my bank "will pay interest on the collected balance in your super now account, less the 12 percent reserves required to be maintained with the Federal Reserve."

Doyle

What is this 12 percent the bank is talking about? It appears to be an additional tax, on top of all the other taxes we pay. I asked at another bank and was told it is not a tax but is levied because of the savings and loan and bank bailout now under way. To me, this bite is a tax.

Now, 12 percent is a substantial bite out of my interest. If this is the law, then to heck with interest from money in a bank. Where can I put my little money to escape this?

A. If you want your money protected by federal deposit insurance, you'll have to keep it in a bank, S&L or credit union, assuming the latter is a member of the National Credit Union Administration.

Although this may not soothe your feelings, that 12 percent is not a tax. It is a "reserve requirement." Since 1980, all depository institutions in this nation — banks, S&Ls, CUs, etc. — have been required to set part of their deposits aside in the form of cash in their vaults or deposits at Federal Reserve Banks. For simplicity sake, we'll call them all "banks."

The amounts of reserve requirements vary depending on the size of the bank and the type of account. Those requirements have changed from time to time, most recently last December. Yes, that is tied to the S&L and bank bailout.

The highest reserve requirement is on "transaction accounts," which include demand deposits and interest-bearing accounts with unlimited checking privileges, such as your super now account. Every bank with transaction accounts topping $41.1 million must set aside 12 percent of that money as a reserve requirement.

Reserve requirements are "sterile," meaning banks don't earn any money on them. So, an increasing number of banks stopped paying interest on part or all of those reserves. It should be noted, however, that not all banks are doing this. By shopping around, you should be able to find a bank paying interest on all the money in your account.

Q. It occurs to me that, rather than stop paying interest on the 12 percent of transaction accounts tied up in reserve requirements, a bank would be more forthright by simply reducing interest on the accounts by 12 percent. Do you agree?

A. Absolutely. All banks have been required to set aside reserves for more than a decade, but only recently have some stopped paying interest on part of each account by citing the reserve requirement.

Let's say your bank pays 6 percent simple interest on your $1,000 account. That's $60 a year, if interest is paid on the entire $1,000. However, if the bank does not pay interest on 12 percent of the account, because of the reserve requirement, only $880 of your money will earn interest. And 6 percent on $880 works out to $52.80.

Things would be much simpler if the bank cut the interest rate to 5.28 percent and paid it on the entire $1,000.

ANALYSIS

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market was mixed today, getting off to a sluggish start on a new week.

Trading was light.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, down 53.21 points last week, rose 5.19 to 2,917.57 by 2 p.m. on Wall Street.

But losers slightly outnumbered gainers in nationwide trading of New York Stock Exchange-listed issues, with 708 up, 729 down and 537 unchanged.

Analysts said investors were still looking for evidence of whether interest rates might decline further in the weeks ahead.

In recent days neither the Federal Reserve Board nor monetary officials in the nation's major foreign trade partners have shown much readiness to push interest rates lower.

But many observers that resolve could soften if the economic news remains weak.

Interest rates declined a bit in the credit markets this morning. Yields on long-term Treasury bonds slipped to around 8.20 percent.

Gainers among the blue chips included Merck, up 1⅛ at 110⅛; General Electric, up ⅜ at 72⅛; Exxon, up ⅜ at 59⅞; Philip Morris, up ¼ at 67⅞, and Sears Roebuck, up ⅜ at 38.

Compaq Computer gained ⅜ to 51¼. The stock fell 9¾ points last week as the company warned of a likely decline in its earnings for the second quarter.

The NYSE's composite index of all its listed common stocks rose .02 to 207.29. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was down .15 at 363.72.

ACTIVITY HIGHLIGHTS

Atoka discovery flows 4.6 Mmcfd

Staff Report

An Atoka gas discovery has been completed in Lea County, N.M.

POGO PRODUCING CO. tested the No. 1 Federal "31" for a calculated absolute open flow of 4.6 Mmcfd through various chokes with flowing tubing pressure of 4,093 psi. The well flowed from perforations 13,971 to 13,979 ft.

Drilled to 14,833 ft., the well was plugged back to 14,730 ft. A 5 inch liner was hung from 12,255 to 14,832 ft.

Formation tops, on ground elevation of 3,633 ft. include the Delaware Lime at 4,533 ft., Bell Canyon at 4,634, Cherry Canyon at 5,480, Brushy Canyon at 6,821, Bone Spring at 8,572, Wolfcamp at 11,602, Strawn at 12,117, Atoka at 13,250 and Morrow Clastics at 14,274 ft. Pay was topped at 13,971 ft.

Location is 2,310 ft. from south and 660 ft. from east lines of Section 31, T21s, R32e.

Yates reports two Abo gas strikes in Chaves

YATES PETROLEUM CORP. has completed two rank wildcats, both Abo discoveries, in Chaves County, several miles southwest of production in the Pecos Slope West field.

The No. 2 Salt Creek Unit has finaled to flow 580 Mcfd on a half-inch choke from perforations 3,357 to 3,437 ft. Flowing tubing pressure was 180 psi and the producing interval was acidized with 2,500 gallons of 7.5 percent NeFe acid and fractured with 27,000 gallons of gel and 59,000 lbs. 20/40 sand.

Drilled to 3,770 ft., where 5 1/2 inch casing was set, the well was plugged back to 3,729 ft.

On ground elevation of 4,283.5 ft., formation tops include the Glorieta at 511 ft., Yeso at 656, Tubb at 1,872, Abo at 2,514, Granite Wash at 3,646, and Granite at 3,672 ft. Pay was topped at 3,357 ft.

Location is 1,980 ft. from north and east lines of Section 1, T8s, R21e.

On potential test, the No. 1 Blackwater Unit flowed 771 Mcfd from perforations 3,331 to 3,441.5 ft. The well flowed on a half-inch choke with flowing tubing pressure of 110 psi. The interval was acidized with 3,000 gallons of 7.5 percent NeFe and fractured with 30,000 gallons of gel and 75,000 lbs. 20/40 sand.

Drilled to 3,650 ft., where 5 1/2 inch casing was set, the well was plugged back to 3,600 ft.

Formation tops, on ground elevation of 4,309 ft., include the Glorieta at 538 ft., Yeso at 701, Tubb at 1,884, Abo at 2,566, Granite Wash at 3,468, and Granite at 3,514 ft. Pay was topped at 3,331 ft.

Location is 660 ft. from north and west lines of Section 19, T9s, R22e.

CONCERN: Executives at the companies deny risks

(From 3B)

Between them, Fannie Mae and Freddie Mac provide financing for one in four homes in the United States, and each has grown larger than the nation's largest financial services companies.

Not only have the companies been able to blunt previous attempts to put them under tighter control, but they have also won changes in the rules that have allowed them to expand into new kinds of businesses.

The profitability of the enterprises, which is largely passed on to their shareholders, was illustrated by the recent compensation and severance package for David O. Maxwell, who stepped down in February as chairman and chief executive of Fannie Mae.

He received $27 million, and Fannie Mae officials say 75 percent of that amount was tied to the performance of the company, which last year posted profits of $1.2 billion.

Some government officials say they do not have adequate controls to monitor Fannie Mae, Freddie Mac and the other enterprises for safety and soundness or to prevent them from engaging in risky activities.

SPENDING: End of recession might be near, analysts say

(From 3B)

"It suggests we came out of the first quarter with at least some spark in economic activity, suggesting that perhaps the downturn is coming to an end," said economist David Jones of Aubrey G. Lanston & Co., a New York securities firm.

"But with personal income coming in at such a slow pace, it may be some time before consumers can sustain a strong pick up in spending," he added.

Economist Sung won Sohn of the Norwest Corp. in Minneapolis concurred: "The conclusion seems to be that the rate of (economic) decline is diminishing and the worst is behind us."

"But it's too early to have an economic upturn anytime soon," he added. "In order to come to a conclusion, we will have to have employment rising for at least a couple of months, which will lead to more income and consumption."

Incomes totaled $4.75 trillion, up from $4.73 trillion a month earlier, Commerce said. It was the second consecutive 0.2 percent monthly gain, wiping out a 0.4 percent loss in January.

PICKENS: Financier says he plans to sell his stake was attempting greenmail, an attempt to have the company to buy back shares at above-market prices to avoid a takeover.

Pickens maintained that he had a genuine interest in Koito and was entitled to board representation as the company's largest stockholder.

Pickens was visiting the Capitol to complain to legislators about a state auditor's report that criticized the way West Texas State University handled offers of matching grants made by him and Mesa Limited Partnership, the Dallas oil and gas producer he controls.

Pickens was chairman of the university's board of regents when the grants were offered in 1987.

As he campaigned for two years to join Koito's 20-seat board, Pickens sought to make his fight a political cause.

He took his battle to Capitol Hill many times, the latest on Wednesday, when he told the House subcommittee on commerce and competitiveness that his problems illustrated the closed doors many Americans hit when they try to do business with the Japanese.

He first indicated he would sell the stake in Sunday's article for the Washington Post.

In it, Pickens blamed "keiretsu," the Japanese name for anti-competitive collusion among companies, which he said is gaining ground in the United States.

Rebels move up

Midland Lee moved up one place in this week's high school baseball poll, conducted by the Texas High School Baseball Coaches Association and the Houston Post.

Previsouly ranked ninth in the state, the Rebels moved up to the No. 8 Class 5A spot after finishing the regular season with an 18-8 record and the District 4-5A championship. Lee and Midland High, the second playoff seed from 4-5A, are both waiting for the final results from District 3-5A, which will produce the local schools' bi-district opponents.

Lubbock Coronado and Lubbock Monterey are tied for the 3-5A lead, with Amarillo High ½-game back as the district enters its final regular-season date today.

Big Spring is also state ranked, with the Steers standing at No. 9 in Class 4A. Big Spring also moved up one place, from a No. 10 ranking last week.

Fan sees red

CINCINNATI (AP) — A woman claiming she was injured by a ball Cincinnati pitcher Rob Dibble threw into the stands after a game said Monday she has filed a complaint with the Reds.

Dibble hurled the ball into the center field stands at Riverfront Stadium in an outburst Sunday after giving up two runs to the Chicago Cubs. The Reds beat Chicago 4-3.

Meg Porter, 27, said she was packing to leave the stadium when she was hit. She said she never saw the ball.

"I couldn't feel anything from the shoulder down. I couldn't talk," said Porter, whose left arm is bruised and in a splint. "He's known for his fastballs, and he could have really hurt somebody a lot worse than he hurt me."

The first-grade teacher from Batavia, Ohio, said she had to miss work Monday.

Reds spokesman Jon Braude would not say whether the team received her complaint.

"We are looking into the situation," Braude said.

Dibble refused to discuss the incident after the game.

He also faces a three-day suspension and $1,000 fine for throwing a fastball behind Houston's Eric Yelding.

Divac neutralizes Hakeem

■ Laker center Vlade Divac has never been accused of being another Abdul-Jabbar, but he has played like Kareem against the Rockets.

Associated Press

Vlade Divac's play in the middle for the Los Angeles Lakers no longer is irritating to teammate Magic Johnson.

Divac, the 23-year-old Yugoslavian center, neutralized Houston center Hakeem Olajuwon as the Lakers took a 2-0 lead in their first-round series against the Rockets.

In the Lakers' 109-98 victory Saturday, Divac had a career playoff-high 23 points, 10 rebounds and three blocked shots, while Olajuwon had 23 points, 11 rebounds and one blocked shot. In Game 1, Divac had 17 points, 11 rebounds and five blocks, while Olajuwon had 22 points, 16 rebounds and three blocks.

Johnson said he's been waiting for two years for Divac to play this well.

"I always wanted to see and dreamed about this, because I always knew we were only going to go as far as he can take us," said Johnson, who had 13 points and 21 assists for the Lakers in Game 2. "This inconsistency, we couldn't have, and right now, he isn't being inconsistent.

"He's never been this aggressive. He'd play lackadaisical. Now, he's all over, blocking shots. He's in on every play."

Divac said his first playoff experience a year ago taught him a lot.

"You know, playoff and regular season is something different," he said. "Regular season, you can lose one, two games, five, 10, doesn't matter. Playoffs, losing is no good, like last year at Phoenix. We have to make big concentration in the playoffs."

No NBA playoff games were scheduled Monday night. Postseason play resumes Tuesday night with six games.

In addition to Los Angeles at Houston, it's Detroit at Atlanta, Chicago at New York, Milwaukee at Philadelphia, Portland at Seattle and Phoenix at Utah.

Wednesday night, Boston is at Indiana and San Antonio at Golden State.

Top seeds Portland and Chicago, plus the Lakers and Philadelphia, are leading 2-0. The other best-of-5 series are 1-1.

Olajuwon said he isn't surprised by Divac's performance against Houston.

"I do not think that you give him the credit he should be given as a player," Olajuwon said. "You should be giving him the credit where the credit is due."

But as Johnson said of Divac, "He usually takes 10 minutes off and plays 10 minutes."

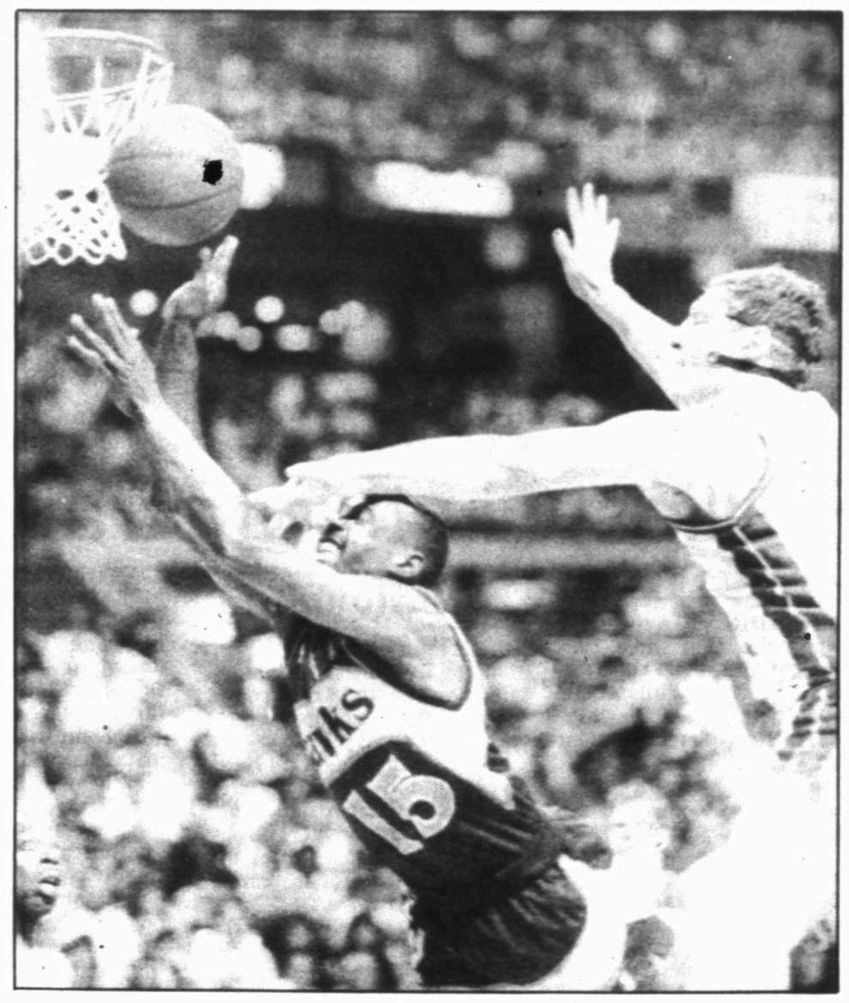

Philadelphia is in a strong position because no NBA team has ever lost the first two games at home — as Milwaukee has — and then won a best-of-5 series.

"It's ours to lose," said the Sixers' Charles Barkley, who had 22 points, 13 rebounds and 10 assists in Saturday night's 116-112 overtime victory over the Bucks. "If we lose this series, it will be our own fault. If we blow this, if we don't wrap it up at home in three or four, it will be a travesty."

The Bucks were seeded fourth in the Eastern Conference, while the 76ers were seeded No. 5. The teams split four regular-season games, each winning once on the other's home floor.

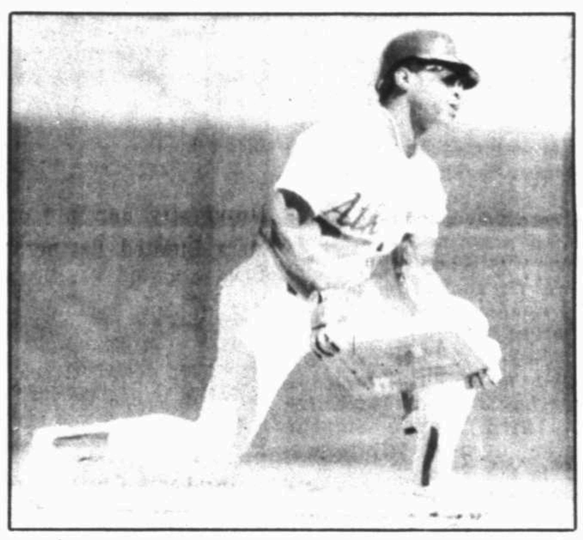

But Milwaukee, 33-8 at the Bradley Center during the regular season, did

Rickey Henderson takes 'the' bag for posterity.

Yanks next on Rick's steal list

Associated Press

OAKLAND, Calif. — Slumping, sore and kind of sour about getting hit by a pitch, Rickey Henderson pulled even with Lou Brock.

But Oakland's Henderson gets warm all over knowing his first chance to eclipse Brock's all-time record comes against the New York Yankees, the only other team he's played for.

"The thought of getting the steal against New York is a dream to me," Henderson said after tying Brock's record with his 938th career steal in Oakland's 7-3 victory over California on Sunday. "I thought about that after I was taken out of the game."

Henderson, in his 13th season, played for the Yankees from 1985-89 and owns the club record for career stolen bases at 326.

Angels' hard luck ends in come-from-behind win

■ Midland halts a nine-game losing skid by breaking a 9-9 tie in the bottom of the ninth inning against San Antonio.

By Terry Williamson
Sports Editor

The Midland Angels found an unlikely hero Monday night at Angels Stadium to produce an unlikely two-out, bottom of the ninth single to lay to rest two impressive Texas League streaks.

Midland catcher Larry Gonzales, who came into the game with only two hits in 24 at-bats and a lonely RBI for a paltry .083 batting average, delivered his second hit of the night to halt the Angels' nine-game losing streak and San Antonio's six-game winning streak as the Angels won by a nip-and-tuck 10-9 margin.

With two outs in the ninth, Midland's Damion Easley singled and stole second base before Gonzales singled to left-center for the game winner off of James Wray (0-1). With Gonzales off to a slow start at the plate this year and the Angels having a tough time finding the win column, the hit was like taking a double load off the shoulders of the California native.

"I've struggled to start the season, but things are beginning to fall into place," was the way Gonzales put it. "I just wanted to hit a strike and I got a fastball and went with it.

"I've just been trying to do the things that got me to Double-A ball, and hopefully, things are beginning to fall into place."

Gonzales hit .306 at Quad Cities last year.

Mission catcher Bryan Baar was unhappy with the fact that Easley was in scoring position. Just before the game winning hit, Gonzales swung at a pitch from Wray when Easley stole second base. Baar asked for batter's interference when Gonzales fell across the plate.

"San Antonio wanted the interference call, but there was no contact on the play and no interfer-

MC sports feats recognized

By Jimmy Patterson

For what is believed to be the first time in National Junior College Athletic Association history, a single college has three No. 1 ranked teams.

It is known for a fact that it's the first time in Midland College's 17 year sports history that has occurred.

MC's men's and women's tennis teams, and men's golf team are all ranked No. 1 in the latest coaches' polls. In addition, they all three stand a good chance of ending their seasons with national championships when their tournaments are held in May and June.

These achievements, as well as those by the Chaparral basketball team, cheerleaders and trainers, were recognized and rewarded Monday night at the annual Chaparral Awards Banquet.

"The legacy that has been recognized here tonight is a legacy that has been continuing for 17 years," MC public relations director H.A. Tuck said.

Sophomore basketball sensation Carroll Boudreaux was awarded the team's best defensive player and Most Valuable

Best Pal hopes to snap gelding no-win trend

Associated Press

LOUISVILLE, Ky. — Best Pal could be just that to horseplayers who believe in the law of averages.

He is a gelding.

No gelding has won the Kentucky Derby since Clyde Van Dusen became the seventh to do it in 1929.

He is a California-bred.

No California-bred has won the Derby since Decidedly became the third to do it in 1962.

And, volunteered trainer Ian Jory, "an Englisman has never won it."

There has never been an English owner or trainer of a Derby winner. The late American jockey Johnny Longden, who won the Derby as a rider aboard Count Fleet in 1943 and as a trainer with Majestic Prince in 1969, was born in England.

Jory came to the United States from England eight years ago and for three years served as an assistant trainer to John Gosden, also an Englishman.

"If he wins, they might give me my citizenship," joked the 33-year-old Jory.

Two English-bred colts have won the race — Omar Khayyam in 1917 and Tomy Lee in 1959.

Jory didn't bring Best Pal to Churchill Downs, however, because of the law of averages.

The gelding earned his way here by finishing second, a length behind Dinard, in the Santa Anita Derby on April 6. He also finished third, a half-length behind winner Dinard in the San Rafael on March 3 in his only other start this year.

Dinard, also a gelding, probably would have been the favorite in Saturday's Derby but is out with a pulled tendon in his leg.

Before the Santa Anita Derby, owner John C. Mabee said Best Pal would have to win to get to Kentucky.

Best Pal's performance, while not a winning one, was an impressive one.

"He was going easy, just loping along," Jory said. "He wasn't blowing when he pulled up.'"

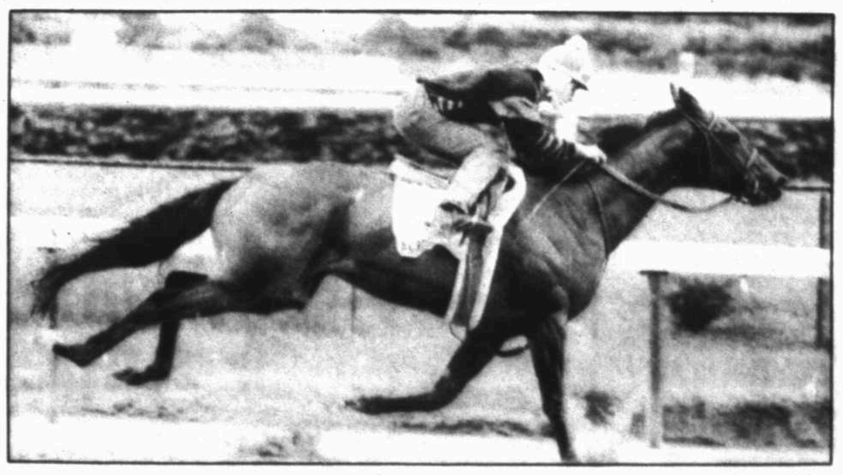

Suddenly, the gelding was in the Derby picture.

"It wasn't my decision, it was Mr. Mabee's," said Jory, who obviously agreed with it.

Churchill Downs also agrees with Best Pal.

"He takes to this track just like a duck to water," Jory said Monday after Best Pal worked a half mile under exercise rider Felipe Guerrera in 47 seconds and galloped out five-eighths in :59 on a muddy track. He went the first three-eighths in 34 4-5 seconds.

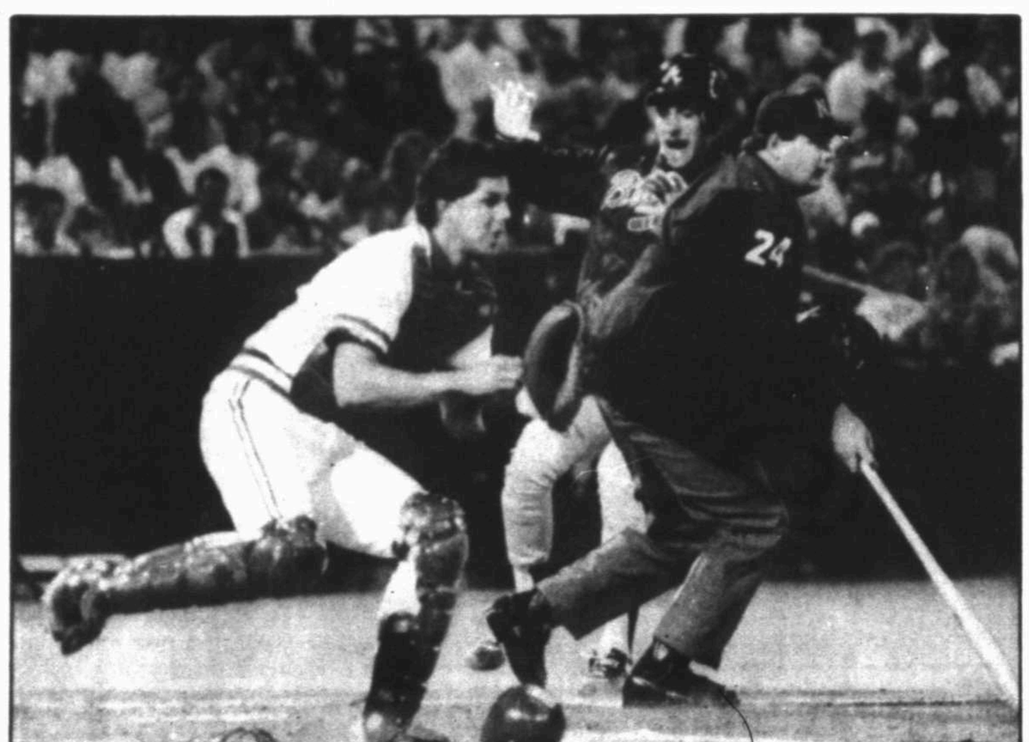

Last Wednesday, Best Pal worked a mile at Churchill Downs in 1:39 and galloped out 1⅛ miles in 1:53.

Phillies win third straight

PHILADELPHIA — Dale Murphy drove in three runs with a two-run homer and a sacrifice fly as the Philadelphia Phillies beat the San Diego Padres 7-2 Monday night for their third straight victory.

Murphy hit a sacrifice fly in the first inning to give Philadelphia a 1-0 lead and broke a 1-1 tie with a two-run homer in the third.

Terry Mulholland (2-2) allowed six hits in eight innings, struck out three and walked one. Mitch Williams pitched a perfect ninth.

Ed Whitson (1-3) lost his third consecutive start, allowing 11 hits and five runs in six innings. He has given up 13 runs and 26 hits in 20 1-3 innings over his last three starts.

After San Diego tied the score in the third on Garry Templeton's triple and Whitson's RBI groundout, Murphy hit his third home run of the season, the 59th of his career against the Padres.

San Diego closed to 3-2 in the fourth on Fred McGriff's RBI single, but Mulholland got out of the inning on Templeton's double-play grounder with the bases loaded.

Cardinals 4, Braves 3

ST. LOUIS — Ozzie Smith tied the game in the seventh inning and won it with a bases-loaded sacrifice fly in the 11th as the St. Louis Cardinals beat the Atlanta Braves.

St. Louis has won four games in its final at-bat and has rallied to win in half its 12 victories. The Cardinals trailed 3-0 before tying the score in the seventh on Smith's two-run infield single.

Lee Smith (2-0), the fourth St. Louis pitcher, pitched two perfect innings. Smith has two wins and seven saves in nine appearances for the Cardinals, who are 8-3 during a 13-game homestand.

BALTIMORE — Having ended their most recent slide, the streaky Seattle Mariners are eager to extend their newest string.

Not that one win in a row is cuase for celebration. But the way Seattle is playing this year, it could be the start of something big.

The Mariners snapped a five-game losing streak Monday night, getting 15 hits and routing the slumping Baltimore Orioles 10-1.

Every starter got at least one hit for the Mariners, who opened the season with a six-game losing streak, then won eight in a row before losing five straight.

"It's a funny thing. Lose six, win eight, lose five," manager Jim Lefebvre said. "Obviously, we're hoping this doesn't happen too often. We'd like to be a little more consistent."

The Orioles, on the other hand, have been consistently bad. Baltimore has lost eight of 11 and is 4-9 since its only winning streak — two games.

"The most disturbing thing is how inconsistent we've been," manager Frank Robinson said. "We probably played with less intensity and enthusiasm tonight than any game this year."

Rich DeLucia (2-2) allowed seven hits in 7 2-3 innings, struck out three and walked three. Seattle made four double plays, three behind DeLucia.

"When people got on, he somehow got the double play," Lefebvre said. "That was the key."

Sam Horn homered for the Orioles, whose starters have a 7.45 ERA in the first four games of the current homestand.

Dave Johnson (1-3) gave up six runs and nine hits in four innings, but he said he deserved a better fate.

"It was real frustrating because I thought I threw well," Johnson said. "I was getting ahead in the count, doing what I wanted to do, but it seemed everything they hit found a hole."

Seattle got five singles in the second inning and took a 4-0 lead. Edgar Martinez led off with an infield hit to extend his hitting streak to 14 games, took second on Pete O'Brien's single and scored when Greg Briley singled off the glove of third baseman Craig Worthington.

Omar Vizquel's single made it 2-0 and Harold Reynolds bounced a two-run single up the middle.

Dave Valle homered in the sixth off Paul Kilgus and Henry Cotto hit a two-run homer in the eighth. Briley hit an RBI groundout in the ninth.

Tigers 3, Royals 1

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — Emergency starter Steve Searcy combined with Paul Gibson to shut down Kansas City and the Detroit Tigers beat the Royals behind two run-scoring singles by Alan Trammell.

Searcy (1-1), who failed to get out of the second inning in his previous start, pitched 5 1-3 innings in place of Dan Petry, who was scratched with lower back pain.

Gibson relieved Searcy with one out and two on in the sixth, loaded the bases with an intentional walk and then threw called third strikes past Kurt Stillwell and Gary Thurman. Gibson finished with two-hit relief for his first save.

Bret Saberhagen (1-3), winless since opening day, has had only one run scored for him while he was in the game during his last three starts. Saberhagen allowed seven hits in seven innings and struck out five before Steve Crawford relieved.

Bruins break seventh-game jinx

NHL

BOSTON — The Boston Bruins advanced to the Stanley Cup semifinals for the third time in four years Monday night, beating the Montreal Canadiens 2-1 behind the goaltending of Andy Moog and goals by Dave Christian and Cam Neely.

Boston won the Adams Division final 4-3, the first time in four attempts it has beaten Montreal in a seventh game.

Moog, the only goalie used by the Bruins in their 13 playoff games, stopped 35 shots. Christian scored at 6:30 of the second period and Neely connected on a power play at 1:59 of the third.

Moog had a shutout until Stephan Lebeau scored a controversial goal with one minute remaining. Lebeau backhanded the puck over the goal line during a scramble after Moog had knocked the net off its moorings.

Boston will be home Wednesday night for the start of the best-of-7 Wales Conference final against Pittsburgh. Both finished first in their divisions in the regular season. The Campbell Conference final matches Edmonton, which finished third in the Smythe Division, against Minnesota, fourth in the Norris.

In the last three seasons, the winner of the Adams final — Boston in 1988 and 1990 and Montreal in 1989 — advanced to the Stanley Cup final but lost.

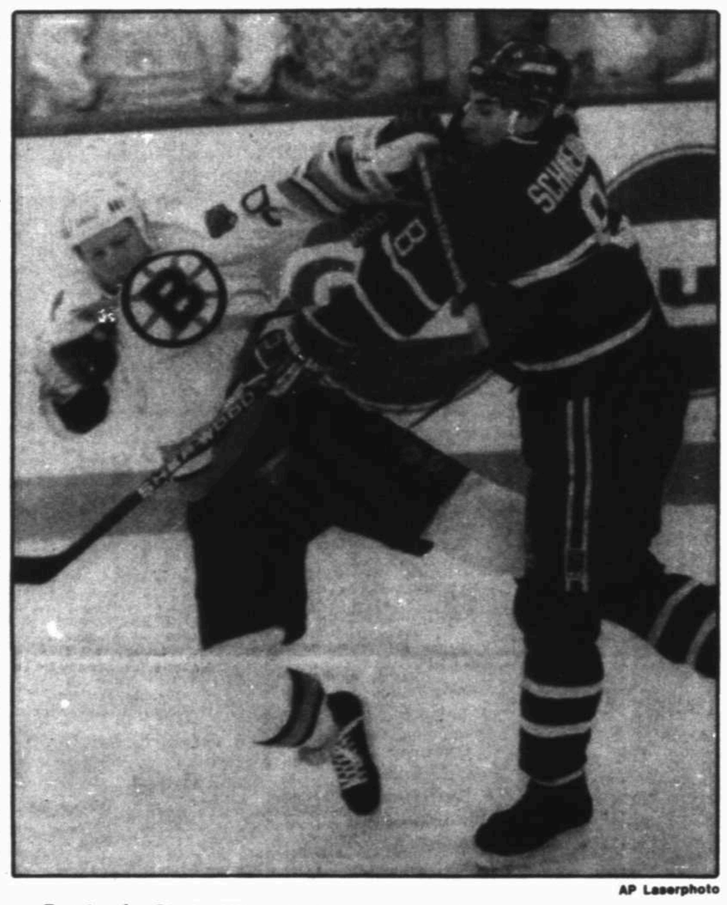

Before winning three of the last four matchups, the Bruins were 2-20 in playoff series against Montreal.

Both teams played cautiously, emphasizing defense, in the scoreless first period. The Bruins got the first break when Christian scored on a 30-foot wrist shot from the left circle. He carried the puck through center ice and into the Montreal zone, then fired it between the legs of defenseman Alain Cote and under the right arm of goalie Patrick Roy.

Neely got his 12th goal, tying Los Angeles' Luc Robitaille for the playoff lead, 14 seconds after Brian Skrudland was penalized for interfering with defenseman Ken Hammond. It was Skrudland's third minor penalty of the game.

Neely took a hard, but seemingly harmless shot from the right side, five feet behind the Montreal blue line. Roy stuck out his catching glove, but the puck deflected off it and went in the net.

The Bruins nearly got the first goal of the game at 12:18 of the first period, but Ray Bourque's slap shot from the right point hit the right post.

Bo healing, but a long way from well

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. (AP) — A sports medicine specialist who examined Bo Jackson for about four hours on Monday said the two-sport star is making significant recovery from a hip injury but shouldn't get rid of his crutches yet.

"We did not expect him to heal this injury during this period," said Dr. Jim Andrews, an orthopedic surgeon at the Alabama Sports Medicine and Orthopedic Center.

Jackson returned to Birmingham for his first in-depth examination in six weeks.

Jackson, 28, was released by the Kansas City Royals in March after the team's doctor determined that Jackson's football-related hip injury would not allow him to play baseball this year. He signed a contract with the Chicago White Sox earlier this month.

"I passed my exam with flying colors," Jackson said at a news conference. "I'll be back on the playing field soon."

But Andrews said Jackson should continue using crutches "for a safety factor" as the physical-therapy program accelerates.

"Bo's hip continues to be normal," Andrews said. "Basically, we have seen normal range of motion." He said there was no evidence of any "popping" that would indicate loose bone fragments in the hip joint.

Jackson will be examined again in about four weeks.

Andrews said Monday's exam included producing a three-dimensional image of the athlete's hip on a computer.

"The bone appears to be undergoing a healing process," Andrews said. "This was the real positive aspect of the examination today. You can see reformation of bone injured when he was tackled."

Jackson sustained the injury, which doctors have described as a fracture-dislocation, in the Los Angeles Raiders' playoff game against the Cincinnati Bengals on Jan. 13.

Doctors have differed on whether Jackson, the only man to win football's Heisman Trophy and baseball's All-Star MVP award, will ever play sports again. The Royals waived Jackson after their team doctor, Steve Joyce, told them Jackson should not play baseball this season.

Fire cools Riders off in 16-12 win

Associated Press

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. — Steve Avery caught two touchdown passes of 11 and 32 yards from Brent Pease as the Birmingham Fire held on to defeat the San Antonio Riders 16-12 Monday in a World League of American Football game.

The Fire (3-3) scored all of its points in a 3½-minute period in the second quarter and withstood a fourth-quarter rally by the Riders (3-3). An estimated crowd of 8,000 watched the game in a persistent rain.

Pease hit Avery with an 11-yard scoring pass for a 7-0 lead at 5:04 in the first half. Then on the Riders' next possession, Eddie Grant snapped the ball over the head of punter Kent Sullivan out of the end zone for a safety, making it 9-0 Fire.

Avery caught a short pass from Pease and scored on a 32-yard run at 1:22 in the half to make it 16-0.

Jim Gallery's 35-yard field goal put the Riders on the board in the fourth, then quarterback Mike Johnson hit Lee Morris for a 73-yard touchdown to cut the lead to 16-10.

The Fire's John Holland picked off a pass by Johnson with 1:30 left. Birmingham punter Kirk Maggio ran out of the end zone for a safety with 22 seconds remaining, making it 16-12.

The Fire's Arthur Hunter intercepted a last-second long pass by Johnson at the 2-yard line as time ran out.

The Riders, which led the WLAF with an average 166 rushing yards, were held to 71 yards.

YOUR HOROSCOPE

By Jeane Dixon

TUESDAY, APRIL 30, 1991

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: Put your busines talents to work. You need to bring all of your creative abilities to bear if you are to triumph in a tricky economy! Move ahead vigorously in the financial arena in August. Intellectual harmony makes a romantic relationship especially rewarding in November. Look for ways to simplify your lifestyle next January. February and March of 1992 will be full of transitional activities.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: actresses Jill Clayburgh and Cloris Leachman, TV host Gary Collins, singer Willie Nelson.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Give new ideas time to develop. Jealousy may crop up at an unexpected moment. Your fears are groundless! Relieve tension by working on a favorite hobby or artistic project.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): You cannot afford to invest in unexplored projects proposed by your associates. Stop daydreaming but stay upbeat. Make a greater effort to live within your means. Buy fewer items on credit.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Romance could take on greater significance now. Follow your intuition where a financial offer is concerned. Someone may be trying to test your loyalty. Immerse yourself in creative endeavors.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): An element of luck works in your favor. You handle a tricky situation with dispatch. Someone influential is impressed by your performance. Unexpected expenses could make a dent in your savings.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Be fair but firm when mediating a dispute involving your associates. Invest extra cash wisely. Seek a professional opinion regarding a personal matter. Take no chances where your health is concerned.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Plan more and talk less. A change in appearance or employment may be your best option now. A hobby could become a source of extra income if you decide to advertise your talents.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Your tenacity will be rewarded where your career is concerned. Profits rise — and so does your self-esteem. Take more interest in the ambitions of your offspring. Avoid sounding critical.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Keep your feet firmly planted on the ground when it comes to financial issues. Do not allow partnership difficulties to upset you. Gather up those unwanted household items and donate them to charity.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Expect the unexpected! Someone's behavior may upset your schedule. Concentrate on projects you can handle on your own. Home life is more appealing than in the recent past.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Personal relationships are full of peaks and valleys. If your energy is low, curtail your schedule. Be more patient with an older relative. A forgiving attitude can work miracles.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): A careless comment or act could incite a loved one. Try to be more considerate of those who love you. A promotion is in the works. Resist the temptation to scatter your energies.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Romantic relationships enjoy highly favorable influences today. A change of residence or employment is a distinct possibility. Now is an excellent time to sell property and extra possessions.

TODAY'S CHILDREN are strong-willed, industrious and optimistic. Although strangers sometimes find these Taureans brusque, inside they are soft as marshmallows. They will do almost anything to help a friend or promote a just cause. In fact, these hard workers often push themselves too far. Affectionate and loyal, they will grow up to be wonderful spouses and parents. They bask in the warmth of family life.

The bidding:

3 ◇	4 ♡	4 ♠	Pass
Pass

Opening lead: King of ♠

Preemptive bidding is a two-edged sword. It often goads the opponents into overbidding, but it also paints a picture of the defenders' holdings which allows an astute declarer to take advantage of the distribution. This hand, from a rubber-bridge game, illustrates both aspects.

South's bid of five hearts is unforgivable. Having already shown a good hand with a long heart suit, he should simply have doubled and collected at least 500 points, and remained a 3-to-1 favorite to win the rubber. North could always raise if his hand was better suited for offense. It seemed that, at five hearts, declarer must lose three diamond tricks, but excellent card-reading, superb technique and a lucky, if normal, opening lead allowed South to prevail.

The opening lead of the king of spades was won in the closed hand, and the opposing distribution was pretty much an open book. East's preempt and West's failure to lead a diamond made it a certainty that West was void in diamonds, so South unearthed a line that would land the contract if trumps split evenly and West held the queen of clubs.

Declarer cashed the ace of clubs and ace and king of hearts, and was delighted when both defenders followed. Next came the ten of spades, on which declarer discarded the king of clubs!

West saw that winning the queen of spades would not help the defenders' cause. A spade return would give declarer two tricks in that suit, and queen of clubs and another would give declarer two discards on the jack of clubs and nine of spades (declarer simply discards a diamond on the queen of clubs). So the defender allowed the ten of spades to hold, but declarer was ready with a counter. Dummy's jack of clubs came next as declarer discarded a diamond from hand, and the best West could do was win and lead the queen of spades. South discarded another diamond and the next forced black-suit lead delivered the fulfilling trick.

Kelley: I'm not the story, my book about Nancy is

LOS ANGELES — Some reporters call her a "journalistic sociopath." Others denounce her as "America's premiere slash biographer," "petty and vindictive" and a "gossip monger."

Kelley

Lashed with such invective, Kitty Kelley, the controversial author of "Nancy Reagan: The Unauthorized Biography," recently was asked how she would describe herself.

"Beleaguered," she said with a sigh. "I'm stunned that they're making me the story. Of course, it's unpleasant.

"I am not the story. The book is the story."

Soon after her book's debut, Kelley canceled her nationwide publicity tour because of an alleged tip that someone had ordered a Mafia "hit" on her. Instead, she did a 30-city "satellite tour" from a New York studio with a bodyguard standing by, who had been hired by her publisher.

Nancy Reagan

"This book has exposed a lot of raw nerves," says the author.

The biography, portraying the former first lady as sexually promiscuous, manipulative and power hungry was ridiculed by one tabloid as "Kitty Litter." Friends of Nancy Reagan called it "trash."

TARRYTOWN, N.Y. (AP) — Grammy-winning singer Bonnie Raitt and actor Michael O'Keefe got married before relatives and a few close friends.

Raitt

The two wed Sunday in an interdenominational ceremony in Union Church, said Raitt's publicist, Joan Myers.

The bride, 41, wore an ivory gown and was given away by her father, Broadway musical star John Raitt, who wore a dress kilt.

O'Keefe, 36, stars in the television series "Against the Law." He was nominated for a supporting actor Oscar in 1978 for "The Great Santini."

Raitt's 1989 platinum album "Nick of Time" revived her career and won her four Grammy Awards.

Dale Evans

The singer and wife of Roy Rogers said her brief, first marriage ended in divorce and her first child with Rogers was born with Down's syndrome and died at age 2.

Two youngsters Evans and Rogers later adopted also died.

"If I had not been a Christian, it would have destroyed me," said Evans, 77. "I don't know how people make it without faith."

Evans, who married Rogers in 1947, spoke Saturday night to several hundred people at North Parkersburg Baptist Church.

She said her parents tried to head her off at the pass when she dreamed of becoming a star. "My family had a dim view of show business."

MALIBU, Calif. (AP) — Actor-director Emilio Estevez shelled out $2.2 million for a spread to call his own on Malibu's celebrity-soaked Broad Beach.

The 4,000-square-foot, four-bedroom house is the first for Estevez.

The exclusive beach, known as Malibu Colony West, counts among its residents Sylvester Stallone, Eddie Van Halen, Jack Lemmon and Carroll O'Connor. Steven Spielberg and Frank Sinatra are building homes there.

Estevez, 28, who is the son of actor Martin Sheen, wrote and directed the comedy "Men at Work," in which he co-starred with brother Charlie Sheen, and is filming the movie "Freejack," co-starring Mick Jagger.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Actress Lee Remick, Oscar-nominated star of "Days of Wine and Roses," was honored Monday with a sidewalk star in the Hollywood Walk of Fame.

More than 100 friends and fans gathered on Hollywood Boulevard for the unveiling of the 1,933rd star along the walkway. Miss Remick, who has cancer, walked to the star slowly with the aid of a cane.

Jack Lemmon, her "Days of Wine and Roses" co-star, also showed up to praise the actress.

Miss Remick, 55, has appeared in more than 20 motion pictures, including "A Face in the Crowd," "The Long Hot Summer," "Anatomy of a Murder," "Tribute" and "The Omen."

Sponsors pay $4,800 for the cost of a cement star. Recipients are selected by a Hollywood Chamber of Commerce committee.

Drug rehabilitation program lets abusers work their way clean

By Victor Inzunza
N.Y. Times News Service

FORT WORTH — He was drinking by 10, doing heroin by 12 and addicted at 13.

On the streets, Chris Friar was known as Crazy Chris. He was the guy doing $150 of cocaine a week, carrying a gun and crazy enough to use it.

"I was one sick puppy, man," said Friar, now 38.

He tried to stop, first through volunteer drug treatment programs, then a series of court-mandated county, state and federal programs. He also tried psychoanalysis and aversion therapy.

All failed.

By the time he reached his late 20s, Friar had had enough. One night in a motel room in Fort Lauderdale, Fla., with his body full of cocaine, he put a gun to his mouth and thought long and hard about pulling the trigger.

He didn't. Instead, he made his way the next morning to what he decided would be his last chance at beating his addiction — the Salvation Army's Adult Rehabilitation Center.

"I really didn't know what the heck they were," Friar said. "The Salvation Army to me was some guy ringing a bell at Christmas. It was a place for winos, and I wasn't a wino. I was a dope fiend."

But what he found at the center — first in Florida and then in Fort Worth — was a way to overcome his craving for drugs.

The 92-bed Fort Worth center at 2901 N.E. 28th St. is one of the few places in Tarrant County where men — from street people to professionals — can seek free treatment for their dependencies.

The center will take anyone who wants help, no questions asked. The men, however, must commit to a minimum stay of 90 days and work in the various jobs at the center, because work is the basis of the program.

It is not a medical or psychiatric program. The men who come into the center with a severe addiction are sent to a medically supervised outside detoxification program.

"We just don't have those types of facilities here," said Maj. Charles McClure, who heads the center. "The basis of our program here is work therapy. If we tried to confine people who were heavily addicted, they would probably try to kill themselves."

After completing the 7- to 10-day detoxification program, the men are returned to the center, where they are provided room and board and are assigned a job. The work may include cooking in the center's kitchen or helping in one of the three Tarrant County thrift stores.

"It's a good program," said Paddy O'Connor of the Tarrant County Council on Drug Abuse and Alcoholism. "I believe it meets a need in the community that otherwise would not be met.

"There is a tremendous need for inpatient or residential treatment for people that don't have $10,000 to $25,000 for treatment."

The council — a non-profit agency that handles mostly chemical-dependent clients — often refers people to the rehabilitation program for treatment, O'Connor said.

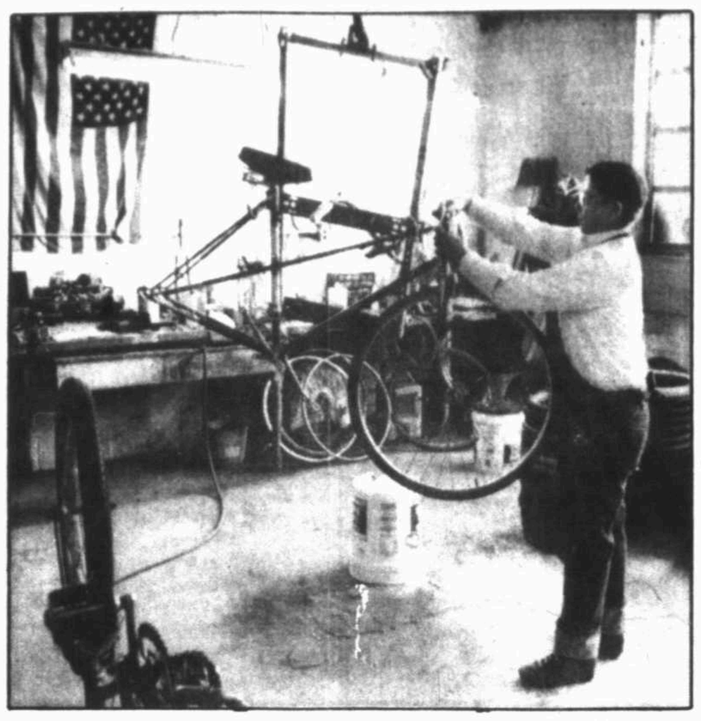

The program is separate from the disaster, homeless and family services the Salvation Army also provides and is financed by revenue from the thrift stores. The 117 centers throughout the country report directly to the Salvation Army's Atlanta headquarters.

Although the center treats only men, the Salvation Army also runs a separate Tarrant County program for chemically dependent women with children called First Choice, funded by the Texas Commission on Alcohol and Drug Abuse.

The Fort Worth drug rehab center has a chaplain and two counselors. Narcotics Anonymous and Alcoholics Anonymous meet regularly at the center.

"You have everything here, but you have to go out and seek it," Friar said. "You get out of this place what you put into it.

"Probably the reason why some people fail is that they come here, and they think something magical is suddenly going to happen."

N.M. judge collects vast array of assorted stuff

By Richard Benke
Associated Press writer

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. — Burt Cosgrove is a hanging judge — he hangs vintage U.S. flags, presidential campaign buttons and antique Christmas Seals on the walls of his courtroom and offices.

About a dozen flags fly in Cosgrove's third-floor courtroom at the Bernalillo County Courthouse. It's just a small sampling. He has about 300 flags, some dating from the 1850s.

Cosgrove says relatives from Kansas to California have provided many of them.

And he keeps an eye out for flags at flea markets and swap meets.

He shows the flags to Boy Scouts and Albuquerque Public Schools students regularly. Some 6th and 7th graders were the latest batch. The judge gives a talk and hands out fact sheets.

The judge also has amassed collections of classic model airplanes and fruit crate labels.

Cosgrove, 44, became interested in planes at a very early age, thanks to his father, a retired Air Force colonel.

"I don't have my first dime, but I have the plastic model plane I bought with it," he says. "I was about 5."

His father, Burt Cosgrove Jr., helped him build his first models — always planes, never cars.

"He was very insistent that my first collection be not only planes but Air Force planes," the judge says. "Not Navy or Army."

Cosgrove also gives those who tour his collection a fact sheet on the model aircraft he acquired from the estate of the late Jim Breitenbach, who worked at Sandia National Laboratories, later taught music in Albuquerque schools and then ran a hobby store until he died in September 1989.

The planes are displayed in a glass case in the jury room adjoining Cosgrove's 2nd Judicial District courtroom in downtown Albuquerque.

Breitenbach began building the collection in 1937. It includes about 90 quarter-inch-to-one-foot scale models of such vintage World War I planes as the German Albatross D-III, the Sopwith "Baby" seaplane, Bristol Monoplane and F2-B, Westland Wagtail, Vickers Gun Bus and many others.

Cosgrove also displays a few planes of his own making.

He's now building a model of a B-17 bomber to present at a June reunion of his father's old unit — the 19th Bombardment Group, which flew from Albuquerque to the Philippines just before the start of World War II.

The model will be presented to retired Maj. Gen. Eugene Eubank, founder of Kirtland Air Force Base and the man for whom Albuquerque's Eubank Boulevard is named. Eubank, 99, of San Antonio, Texas, began his military flying career in World War I.

"If you know the general, don't tell him the judge is making a B-17 for him," Cosgrove says.

Cosgrove's oldest political button was issued by the 1896 William McKinley campaign. The most recent is a 1972 McGovern-Shriver button. He stopped collecting them after 1972, he says, because people seemed to stop wearing them.

He has sheets of Christmas Seals for every year since 1907, and his friends sometimes get the Tuberculosis Association stickers for the year in which they were born, neatly mounted on a small greeting card.

In addition, he has a small collection of commemorative coins of his own design. He had a commercial mint make about 100 per edition at a cost of $1,000, or $10 apiece, and distributed them to friends.

Cosgrove likes citrus labels for their colorful artwork — especially lemon labels. He says he has about 30 to 40 at home.

Cosgrove is a fourth-generation New Mexican whose great-grandfather founded one of the territory's first stage coach lines and whose great-great uncle knew Billy the Kid.

He grew up in Albuquerque, attending Highland High School. He obtained his bachelor's and law degrees from the University of Arizona. He also has a master's from the University of New Mexico.

He says he's still a bachelor — but not a confirmed one.

"I'm still looking for the right woman, someone who can put up with all my collections," he says.

Consultant missed out on patent, helps others

By Jana Collier
Associated Press writer

WACO — If P.D. "Pat" Holiday had used a resource like Waco's Product Development & Marketing Co., he might be known today as the father of the electronic thermometer.

Instead, he's helping others turn their ideas into reality.

In the mid-1960s when Holiday's wife was pregnant, he invented an electronic thermometer. He figured the gadget would sell for about $39 to $49.

When he presented the idea to his wife's doctor, the doctor told Holiday he could buy a gross of regular thermometers for that amount.

"It took the wind out of my sail," Holiday said. "I just lost interest in it."

About a year later, an electronic thermometer popped up on the market. The retail price was $49.95.

"That's the reality of inventing," Holiday said.

Holiday missed the chance to patent and market his electronic thermometer, but he's found a way to help other inventors.

Holiday started Product Development & Marketing Co. in May 1989 at the Business Resource Center at McLennan Community College.

A 1965 graduate of the University of Minnesota with a degree in electrical engineering, Holiday came to Waco in 1973 as plant manager of Economic Laboratories. In 1979, he and other employees bought the company and sold it in 1989.

Holiday's company helps inventors get protection for their products — either through an inventors' journal or a disclosure document.

He conducts patent searches and helps inventors get their patents and then conducts "a simple, inexpensive market study" to see if there's a market for their products at the estimated prices, Holiday said.

Holiday presents the patented inventions to firms that might produce the products, and once a company agrees to produce it, he helps his clients negotiate their licensing agreements.

"Most of my clients just don't pursue the details and marketability of their products," he said.

The product "really has to be practical — it can't just be a better idea — not just a better mousetrap," he said.

One of Holiday's newest geniuses is Thaddeus Kowalczyk, a Michigan inventor who's come up with a way to purify the air that people breath inside their automobiles.

"The air that goes to the engine is actually cleaner than the air that goes into the automobile," Holiday said.

Air filters are becoming more and more popular in homes, and "it just makes sense" to put them in cars, he said.

Kowalczyk's air purifier, which was patented April 2, filters and purifies air entering a motor vehicle and the air recirculating within a motor vehicle. It cleanses the air of pollutants like pollens, dust and noxious exhaust fumes, Holiday said.

It also can clean the recirculating air inside the vehicle of cigarette smoke.

Holiday said this product is important "because it is our understanding that the pollution level inside the car is often up to four times greater than it is outside the car."

Holiday has contacted air filter companies and automobile companies and also companies that make agricultural equipment.

Some companies are looking at the product, although some of the major companies — Ford, General Motors, Chrysler and Mazda — didn't seem very interested, Holiday said.

Some of the other inventions that Holiday has helped get patented include an extra-large laptop desk, a leg elevator and a toilet-seat lock that keeps children and animals out of the toilet bowls — all created by Waco residents.

"Most inventors, when they have an idea, they just can't stop thinking about it," he said. "They just keep waking up with ideas. It's really a gift."

Pain & Stress Acupuncture Clinic treats many conditions

Dr. Amy Jon of the Pain and Stress Acupuncture Clinic, helps Rillie Brewer with neck and shoulder treatments. For an appointment, please call 683-6533.

Traditional Chinese medicine — one of the oldest form of healings known — is a great treasure house. It embodies the fine achievements accumulated over the millennia in the course of medical practice of Chinese physicians.

Midland is fortunate to have Dr. Amy Jon of the Pain and Stress Acupuncture Clinic at 2109 West Texas, Suite F. Dr. Jon received her training from sun Yat-Sen University, a highly selective Chinese university, and she brings more than 15 years of experience to the clinic. Following are some points she would like you to understand about acupunture.

The special methods of acupuncture, with its multiple advantages, have been handed down from ancient times and improved through the generations. They are still widely used in many Asian and European countries.

Today, more and more Western doctors and scientists agree that these kinds of treatments do work. There has been an increasing awareness of the usefulness of acupuncture in treating many medical conditions.

In California, acupuncture has even been recognized as a primary health care profession and it is ever increasing in its popularity, especially in the San Francisco Bay area.

Acupuncture treats disease by inserting thin needles into certain designated points in the body and thereby inducing stimulation through various manipulative methods. Once the needle is properly in place, the patient will feel a characteristic tingling. Sometimes, an electric apparatus may be used to maintain a constant stimulation.

According to the classical doctrines of Chinese medicine, there is an unceasing flow of "life energy" throughout the human body. This vital energy originates from the major organs, and flows along the continuous circulatory channels called meridians. When the energy flow is smooth and in balance, one is healthy; if the balance is disturbed, then one will feel ill or pain.

There are some specific points along the meridians called acupuncture points where the energy flow can be stimulated and the function of related organs can be regulated, thus restoring the delicate balance; then the beneficial healing can occur.

At the Pain and Stress Acupuncture Clinic, only disposable, presterilized needles are used.

Most patients fins the treatment very relaxing, which brings on a feeling of well-being. The beneficial reaction usually starts during the first four or five visits. Of course, just like any other medical treatment, not all cases can be cured. However, added Dr. Jon, there is no harmful effect from the therapy in common practice.

Therefore, people who suffer from lingering or chronic diseases and do not respond well to orthdox medicine are particularly encouraged to try this promising Chinese art of healing.

That is exactly what Midland postal carrier Jerry Pearce did, after suffering from heel spurs off and on for 15 years. Doctors X-rayed his heel, and prescribed drugs which brought some relief, but in the end, Pearce was left with a painful limp.

"After three visits with Dr. Jon," he recalled, "the pain went away. It got me over the bad pain, which is completely gone now. I would recommend acupuncture for certain types of pain, especially sore tendons."

Rillie Brewer also reported relief for her neck and shoulder pain after her first treatment. After three visits, Dr. Jon said, the pain is almost completely gone.

Discuss your problems with Dr. Jon for an honest evaluation. Call her at the Pain and Stress Acupuncture Clinic at 683-6533. The clinic is located at 2109 W. Texas, Suite F.

John and Pam Gibson associate with Permian Brace & Limb

New to West Texas and to Permian Brace and Limb are managers John and Pam Gibson. John, a board eligible prosthetist, and Pam, a certified prosthetist and board eligible orthotist, are pleased to meet and work with clients from Midland, Odessa and surrounding cities.

The Gibsons, along with their two and one-half year old daughter, Jewel, moved to Odessa December 1, 1990, from Thermopolis, Wyoming. They served as department heads at Gottsche Rehab Center, the oldest of the two rehabilitation centers in the state.

Pam earned an Associates of Applied Science degree from Shelby State College in Memphis, Tennessee, and has a long term certificate in orthotics and prosthetics. She "grew up" in the business, since her father operates an orthotics and prosthetics facility in California. Pam, who is fluent in Spanish, has nine years experience in her profession.

John, born and raised in San Diego, California, has six years of experience. He also attended Shelby State College and has a long term certificate in prosthetics.

Both served as instructors at the first Central American Prosthetic Conference in Guatemala City, Guatemala.

Pam, as a certified prosthetist and a board eligible orthotist, and John, as a board eligible prosthetist, are qualified to measure, fit and fabricate artificial limbs. Pam, as a certified orthotist, is also qualified to fabricate and fit braces. This covers everything from arch supports to body jackets.

They report that they are pleased with their decision to move to West Texas. "People are very friendly here," explained Pam. "They have made us feel right at home."

The Gibsons take a personal and caring interest in each of their clients. "There's nothing like that look on a person's face when we get them standing up," he added. "That's what makes it all worthwhile."

Pam and John also take their responsiblity seriously and have earned the respect of their clients quickly. "One of our clients recently commented that we are just a step below her spouse. We truly think of our clients as friends."

Pam, John and the staff of Permian Brace and Limb have established a growing clientele in Midland. Pam attends a clinic at the Cerebral Palsy Center at least one day a week.

Midland callers are invited to call Permian Brace and Limb collect at 332-1921. The Gibsons are on call 24 hours a day, seven days a week. "We will gladly accommodate our clients by scheduling appointments on the weekends," noted Pam.

Permian Brace and Limb offers complimentary evaluations and follow up visits. It is a Medicare participant and accepts most insurance cases. The management and staff also works closely with an amputee support group which meets monthly in Odessa.

Cynthia Stout is office manager. She is happy to file insurance and Medicare claims. Cynthia also sets up no interest payment plans to fit a client's budget. Martin Mungia is Permian Brace and Limb's chief orthotic/prosthetic technician.

John and Pam Gibson are the new managers of Permian Brace and Limb. They are qualified to serve clients' needs and are looking forward to meeting clients from Midland, Odessa and surrounding cities. For an appointment, please call collect 332-1921.

Permian Brace and Limb is located at 508 N. Sam Houston, in the professional medical district near Medical Center Hospital. For information, or to set up an appointment, please call 332-1921.

Shop Graham's Pharmacy for Mother's Day, graduation gifts

Shop for someone special at Graham's Pharmacy, 319 Dodson Street. Nell Moore of Graham's displays a big selection of candy, cards, gifts and novelties for Mother's Day, graduation and spring and summer weddings.

You'll be amazed at how easy it is to find a special gift for a loved one during this special time of year at Graham's Pharmacy, located at 319 Dodson Street. Shop now for Mother's Day, Father's Day, graduation and spring and summer weddings at this centrally located full-service Family Value Drug Center.

For starters, a lasting gift for a special graduate or for Mom is a Hummel figurine. Known for years for their increasing value and the joy they give, Hummel figurines are terrific ways to say, "Great job!" "Good luck!" or whatever sentiment you desire.

If you find it too hard to choose from Graham's Hummel collection, another gift idea is a membership in the M.I. Hummel Collectors Club. As a member, you or your Mom or grad will find the club to be an organization which not only gives expert information on collecting and purchasing opportunities for the hand-painted art so many people cherish.

New members will receive the M.I. Hummel figurine I Brought You a Gift, valued at $55, along with other incentives such as a quarterly magazine, purchase rights on exclusive figurines, services and more. The price is just $30. Ask a salesperson for information and an order form.

New to Graham's Pharmacy are beautiful, long-stemmed parchment roses in such decorator colors as mauve and sea green. And always in the store is a variety of silk flowers, including gorgeous hanging airplane plants, rosebushes, ivy vines, daisy bushes and camelia bushes.

Also for graduation and Mother's Day, select a graduation coffee mug, sugar free Millionaires and assorted chocolates, a thoughtful card from Ambassador, Kinka or Helen Steiner Rice, a cute bear with a cap and tassle from Russ, coin banks, teacher mugs, and T-shirts, which say "Super Grad" and "I'm Outta Here."

Other gift ideas include perfume gift sets by Coty, such as the popular scent L'Effleur, with Victorian packaging, porcelain gift sets of trinket boxes and photo frames, drawstring satin jewelry bags and pretty tapestry jewelry boxes.

Memories of Yesterday figurines are also a thoughtful gift. Of particular interest is two children embraced in a good bye hug.

Vitabath products are on sale at Graham's Pharmacy, and you can select from a variety of gels, lotions, soaps and gift sets. Hanpainted Fentonware is in stock in vases, baskets, bells, candy dishes, perfume bottles and more. Colors included sea mint green, Vining Garden, Salem blue and dusty rose. Really pretty musical teapots are functional and delightful. They play a tune as you pour your tea.

While you are shopping for a gift, be sure to take a break and have a cup of coffee, a soft drink or a thick milkshake at the fountain. Fresh sandwiches, chili, frito pie and soup are served daily for a lunch that is sure to be a change of pace. Ice cream tables and chairs are a delightful recent addition.

Graham's pharmacy department keeps computerized prescription records for your tax and insurance purposes. They honor PCS and Blue Cross/Blue Shield along with other prescription insurance cards and VISA, Mastercard, Discover and American Express cards are welcomed. Delivery is free within the Midland city limits.

Store hours are from 8:00 a.m. to 6:00 p.m. Monday through Friday and Saturday 9:00 a.m. to 5:00 p.m. and the phone number is 684-0569.

Chaparral Wash & Lube: Enjoy free car wash with oil change

Choose Chaparral Wash and Lube Center for the convenient combination of a free car wash with the purchase of a quality quick oil change and preventive maintenance check. Midlanders trust their cars on the inside and out to Chaparral Wash and Lube Center, located at the corner of Big Spring and Scharbauer.

Since opening in 1984, Chaparral Wash and Lube Center has enjoyed a well-earned reputation for the best car wash and oil change service in Midland. A strong commitment to meticulous attention and detail from long-time employees are Chaparral trademarks.

Measure the difference at Chaparral Wash and Lube Center, located in the center of the downtown—Claydesta business zone. It is owned by Leon Jeffcoat, a Texas Tech graduate and Midland businessman.

You'll see the difference right away.

The Chaparral Lube Center carries major brands of oil, including Pennzoil, Quaker State and Havoline. Prices for the oil change and lube range from $18.50 to $23.50. For those who prefer using Mobil One, the price is $36.50. A free car wash is included with each oil change. If you are in a rush or if the clouds are threatening, you'll receive a car wash rain check voucher.

Also included with the oil change is a thorough examination under the hood. Your technician will check your battery, tires, belts and hoses. Your vehicle is also checked for important proper fluid levels, including brake, power steering, transmission and windshield washer fluids.

As a part of this service, these fluids are replenished, if needed. For an additional charge, your technician will install transmission oil, freon, light bulbs and windshield wiper refills.

Checking your car on a regular maintenance schedule at Chaparral Wash and Lube Center is good insurance against expensive trouble in the future. Owner Jeffcoat recommends a minimum maintenance schedule of every 3,000 miles or every three months. A reminder sticker will be placed on the inside of your windshield.

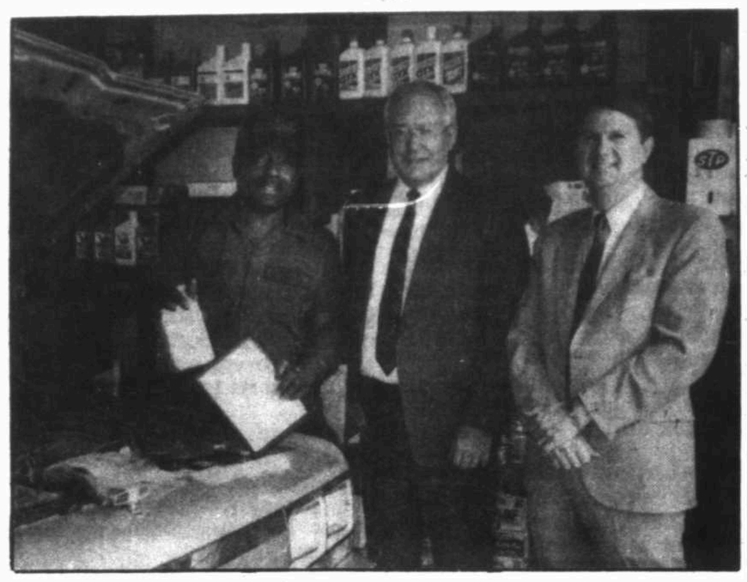

When you visit Chaparral Wash and Lube Center, not only do you get professional service, but you get personal service from people who care about you and your car. Among them are manager Steve Thompson, lube center technician C.C. Banks, car wash detail supervisor Guillermo Portillo and detail specialist Gilbert Guiterrez. These men, who take pride in their work, have a combination of more that 26 years of experience with Chaparral Wash and Lube Center.

A full service car wash, which includes a wash by gentle cleansers, chamois brushes and soft water is just $7.95. Add wax for just $2.00. Washes for standard vans and Suburbans are $2.00 extra. Vacuuming, hand drying and window cleaning are included in the low price.

Save time while getting your car washed and have your car filled with Texaco gasoline and receive a discount toward the wash. Fill up with more than 18 gallons and your wash is free.

Discover the advantages of a professionally administered detail job from Chaparral Wash and Lube Center. A detail job includes spraying the engine to remove oil and grime, a thorough cleaning under the hood, hand waxing, carpet and upholstery shampooing, interior dash and door treatment and tire treatment. Prices for this service start at $59.00.

For your convenience, Chaparral Wash and Lube Center welcomes Texaco, Visa, MasterCard, American Express and Discover credit cards. Hours are 8 a.m. to 6:30 p.m. Monday through Friday, and 8 a.m. to 6 p.m. Saturdays. Call 682-8013 for more information.

Supreme Water Treatment services all reverse osmosis equipment

Make an important investment in your family's good health with quality reverse osmosis drinking water from your own faucet and a system from Supreme Water Treatment. Enjoy the convenience of conditioned water, certified equipment and professional service from a company which has served Midland homes and businesses since 1981.

Choose Supreme Water Treatment for your reverse osmosis system for improved taste because it removes up to 95 percent of minerals and hazardous contaminants which give water a bad taste. Dissolved mineral salts, dead bacteria, chlorine and foreign material all contribute to bad taste. All are removed by the Reo-Pure 10 system, which is sold and serviced by Supreme Water Treatment.

This system also protects your family's health by providing water appropriate for low sodium diets. It saves money as it replaces expensive bottled water and it is energy efficient since it uses only water line pressure. Reo-Pure 10 is the most economical system available at a reasonable price.

The company does not have to pay a franchise fee, therefore it can offer the highest quality products to you and can save you hundreds of dollars on the purchase of new water equipment.

A Supreme Water Treatment reverse osmosis system gives you finger tip convenience by eliminating waiting for deliveries, lifting heavy bottles, storing bottles and the worry and the inconvenience of running out. Just turn to the faucet and you have clean, clear, healthy water for the entire family. Other benefits include: Computerized technology, Spring fresh flavor, More flavorful beverages,* More flavorful foods — cooked in water, Water for low sodium diets, Better tasting, clearer ice cubes, Mineral free water for steam irons, car batteries, humidifiers and other home appliances.

Supreme Water Treatment technicians are qualified to install or repair reverse osmosis systems in Midland homes and businesses. From left are J.D. White, Cara Rice, Danny Carroll, Duane St. Clair and Brad Hamilton.

Brad Hamilton, a spokesman for Supreme Water Treatment, explained how his company's system can make a difference for you. "Midland water contains 1800 to 3000 parts per million of total dissolved solids. With our system, it drops the solids to 200 parts per million. Some other systems water, after treatment, contains 1200 parts per million. Texas requirements for bottled water are under 500 parts per million, so our system drops it well under state standards."

"We also use an auto shut off valve on our reverse osmosis systems. When the tank is full, the system shuts down. Most systems on the market use a check valve system that allows good and bad water to pass down the drain when the tank is full. Our system saves about 1000 gallons of water a month."

Supreme Water Treatment specializes in service. In fact, the factory trained, qualified technicians service all brands of water equipment. This company, a member of the Water Quality Association, services 90 percent of the restaurants in the Midland/Odessa area which have reverse osmosis systems. It has this market because of the company's emphasis on service.

Furr's, Cattleman's, Taco Villa, Fuddruckers and approximately 40 other businesses are serviced by Supreme Water Treatment. Reverse osmosis water from Supreme Water Treatment is coming soon to Texas Burger, Dairy Queen, Mr. Gatti's and Short Stop.

If you are tired of dry skin, spotty or white glassware, clothes that turn yellow after one washing, higher energy costs because of scaling in your water heater or heavy bottles, choose the easy solution of having reverse osmosis water at your finger tips.

Supreme Water Treatment, in addition to water system sales and service, sells parts, filters and salt. Feel free to stop by the shop at 1207 S. Garfield. You can also benefit from a salt delivery service. For the price of buying salt for your water softener at a grocery store, Supreme Water Treatment will deliver and install it.

Supreme Water Treatment offers free estimates, a 24-hour answering service and honest, dependable service.

Be sure to clip the coupon in today's Business and Industry ad for a $5.00 savings on a filter change. This special applies to any reverse osmosis system. DEAR ABBY

Ex-smoker's loss cannot silence warning

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: May this 80-year-old Abby fan thank you for your column urging smokers to quit smoking? That column was more powerful than all the anti-smoking campaigns put together. I am a former golf pro who had my vocal cords surgically removed many years ago due to a three-pack-a-day habit.

Van Buren

As a "laryngectomee" myself, I am submitting a poem that I hope you will think worthy of printing.

A LARYNGECTOMEE'S LAMENT

"Your life or your 'voice,' sir — you must make a choice, sir."
"My life," I said, feeling quite bitter.
They then cut the larynx, the organs and pharynx
Connecting my lungs, snout and "spitter."
So now, I'm unspoken, silence unbroken, except when I pound, stomp or swallow.
My nose is a coma, I breathe through a stoma, a path no aroma can follow.
How came I to be, a voice amputee?
"An electronic aid is your answer,"
The doctor did preach in his neat little speech
"Self-pity is much worse than cancer."

— DEAN P. BLUM, PRESIDENT, TRI-COUNTY NEW VOICE CLUB, DENVILLE, N.J.

DEAR ABBY: How come you never say anything negative about cigar smokers? Numerous articles have been written about how bad cigarettes are, but very few people mention cigars.

My husband smokes one or two cigars a day and claims it isn't harmful to his health because he doesn't inhale. He also insists that the secondhand cigar smoke is not harmful to the people around him. Our house and car reek from the awful smell. What's the story, Abby? — IRENE IN EL CAJON

DEAR IRENE: Cigar smoke is no less damaging than cigarette smoke, but you are right — there are fewer complaints about secondhand cigar smoke. (Perhaps it's because women identify cigar smoke with their kindly old grandfathers. Or they are too overcome to speak.)

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I recently lost our cat that we raised from a tiny kitten. We had "Sadie" for 15 years, and because we never had any children, Sadie was our "baby." If we knew how old in human years Sadie would be, perhaps we could deal with her death much better. Please help us. We are both finding this loss hard to get over. — MISSING SADIE

DEAR MISSING: The first six months of a cat's life equal 13 years; the second six months equal eight years — therefore, the first cat year equals 21 human years. The second cat year equals 10 human years, and each subsequent year equals three human years. Thus, Sadie's 15 years of life are equivalent to threescore and 10 for a human.

Since you are having a difficult time dealing with the loss of your beloved pet, which by no means is unusual, ask your veterinarian to recommend a support group. There is much comfort in sharing your feelings with others who have lived through a similar experience.

Please accept my sincere sympathy.

Aerobic drills set the teeth on edge

By Erma Bombeck

EDITORS Note: Erma Bombeck is on vacation. This column originally appeared in March 1982.

Our aerobics instructor told us the other morning that the highest suicide rate in the country was among dentists. She explained this was because of people's basic fear and general rejection of them. Despite the fact that these public servants are here to help mankind, they are shunned and associated only with pain.

Bombeck

She added that the second-highest suicide rate was among aerobics instructors. The reasons were the same.

It makes me feel rotten that neither group understands how the human mind functions.

They have to realize they're dealing with people who are basically weak, cowardly and unappreciative, especially when they're bleeding or have a cramp in their legs. Sometimes, recipients of their services don't even pretend they're having a good time.

A lot of it comes down to communication. Aerobics instructors get off to a bad start just by covering the walls with mirrors. They shouldn't do that. It makes the aerobees surly and say things they're sorry for.

Then, they have you touch your knee to your chin. Right off, we question why we're doing that. We don't get a lot of requests for it. And just when you think your entire body is on fire, the instructor will say, "I don't see anyone smiling," and, "You're not breathing."

When the student hears this, she becomes quite despondent, and the instructor feels this and feels responsible for it.

Dentists are no better. Seeing that tray full of sharp instruments and the hanging drills at eye level takes away the party atmosphere. Most patients are so terrified that even a simple crack like, "How have you been?" is construed as probing.

Sometimes dentists are not realistic. When they ask, "Does this hurt?" or when they tap your filling with a metal hammer, what do they think you're going to say, "No"?

It's a fact that cavities and cellulite will always be with us. We know it isn't personal, but you just can't be grateful for some things.

Incidentally, know which group has the third-highest suicide rate in the country? It's a tie between dental patients and aerobics students.

Erma Bombeck's column is distributed by Universal Press Syndicate.

Chinese fossils point to rapid evolution

N.Y. Times News Service

New fossil discoveries in China, hailed as among the most spectacular in this century, show that the dramatic transformation of life from primeval single-cell organisms to the complex multicellular precursors of modern fauna was more sudden, swift and widespread than scientists had thought.

From cream-colored sediments of what was a sea floor 570 million years ago, paleontologists have extracted specimens of 70 species of trilobites, worms, sponges and various ancestors of crustaceans, spiders and insects.

They are not only the oldest such fossils ever found but, more remarkably, their soft-body parts as well as skeletal and shell remains are unusually well-preserved.

The fossils give scientists their first glimpse of the strange creatures that populated the seas in the early stage of what is known as the Cambrian explosion.

The Cambrian geological period, from 570 million to 500 million years ago, saw the appearance of increasingly complex marine animals in a riot of shapes and anatomical designs anticipating much of life as it is today.

SCIENTISTS ARE not sure what touched off this riotous proliferation of more advanced life forms after three billion years in which life never rose above the rudimentary level of bacteria, algae and some primitive worms. Life did not begin appearing on land until after the Cambrian period.

Dr. Jan Bergstrom, a paleontologist at the Swedish Museum of Natural History in Stockholm who analyzed the Chinese fossils, said they suggested that the Cambrian transition was "a revolution perhaps more than evolution."

Most of the Chinese fossils, Bergstrom said, resemble species identified in the Burgess Shale, the 530-million-year-old fossil beds in the Canadian Rockies that have been the main source of knowledge of that crucial period.

The similarities are the basis for the conclusion that the diversification and proliferation of new life forms must have occurred rapidly at the outset of the Cambrian period.

"Evolution of these creatures seems to have been a sudden and widespread phenomenon," Bergstrom and colleagues wrote in the current issue of Research and Exploration, a scholarly journal of the National Geographic Society.

THE CHINESE fossils were discovered in 1984 at Chengjiang, in the southern province of Yunnan, by Dr. Hou Xianguang of the Nanjing Institute of Geology and Paleontology. Dr. Chen Junyuan, also of the institute, is continuing excavations at the site.

But the first descriptions of the fossils were largely confined to Chinese publications and received little attention from scientists elsewhere.

This is changing, though, with the new analysis led by Bergstrom, an authority on trilobites, ubiquitous creatures of that period that have long been extinct.

His collaborators include Mauritis Lindstrom, a geologist at Stockholm University, and Chen and Hou.

"All eyes are on Stockholm," said Gregory D. Edgecombe, a paleontologist at the American Museum of Natural History in New York. He said the preservation of the Chinese fossils was even better than in the Burgess material.

DR. ANDREW KNOLL, a Harvard University expert on early life, said: "We knew from the Burgess that there was a tremendous diversity of life in the Cambrian. Most of everything that was going to happen, all the ways of making invertebrate animals, had already happened by the mid-Cambrian. Now, it seems the new life forms were invented within the first few million years of the Cambrian."

A few million years is but a blink of the eye in the geological and evolutionary time scale. And Bergstrom said it was quite possible that at this time "you could have the formation of an entirely new type of animal within thousands of years."

Calling the Chinese fossils "fascinating and important," Dr. Steven M. Stanley, a paleontologist at Case Western Reserve University in Cleveland and author of "The New Evolutionary Timetable," said he was not surprised that they resembled the Burgess specimens.

"We've known there had to be rapid diversification of life at that time," he said.

The Chengjiang fauna lived on the sea bottom or just below or above it, along a broad continental shelf beneath fairly shallow waters.

Even some of the animals without hard skeletons or shells were preserved intact, which is extremely rare. Skeletonized animals make up more than 99 percent of the fossil record.

BERGSTROM COULD only speculate on the conditions leading to such deposits of ancient invertebrate life.

"A violent storm probably stirred up the sea bottom and the mud settled over a large area, cutting off the animals' oxygen and preserving them," he said. "You can go 30 miles in one direction and 12 in another and still come up with fossils."

Despite their great age, a majority of the fossil species at Chengjiang belong to animal groups that still exist, including sponges, certain worms, bivalves of the brachiopod group and arthropods. Indeed, arthropods dominate the fossil bed with at least 30 species.

These include three species of trilobites and several creatures with long tails that looked like shrimp. The arthropods' descendants are crustaceans, insects and spiders, and the family resemblances can be seen that far back.

For example, the Alalcomenaeus, also found in the Burgess Shale, has distinctive large appendages on its head. Similarly, Jianfengia looks like a small shrimp, and though it lacks typical antennas, it does have "great appendages" on the head.

T-Shirt tree dispute disrupts Santa Fe

SANTA FE, N.M. (AP) — Spring has arrived in the City Different, and with it the fixtures of the season: budding trees, blooming flowers and raging controversy.

This year the fuss is about the T-shirt tree.

Kitty-corner from Santa Fe's historic downtown Plaza, across from a 381-year-old adobe building that houses a museum, a dozen brightly colored T-shirts flap in the breeze.

They're hung in a linden tree in front of the Ski, Tennis & Sports Shop. Owner John Kinsolving says he's been doing it for years to attract customers to his small store.

But this year it revived a debate about whether this historic tourist town is being regulated into what some critics call an "adobe Disneyland."

Some downtown business owners view the T-shirt tree and its relatives — rugs displayed on adobe walls and clothing hung on the sides of buildings — as signs of creeping tackiness.

The sixth grade at Hillander School has enjoyed using and reading the Midland Reporter-Telegram this year. During the Persian Gulf War the children loved keeping up with the events in the Middle East. After reading many of the articles, questions were raised that enabled the students to form their own opinions and attitudes about the war. Sixth grade geography consists of the study of the Eastern Hemisphere.

Pupils were able to locate articles on the countries being studied and thus relate current events to textbook studies. Also the comics as well as the classified ads were a big hit. Thank you Douglas and Karen Scharbauer for allowing us the opportunity to have this hands-on experience.

Environmental illness has its non-believers

By Rodd Aubrey

WILLISTON, N.D. (AP) — Cindy Duehring never leaves her sterilized prairie home in northwestern North Dakota, worried she'll die.

Her windows are sealed. Her house has no carpet or wallpaper. Sunlight and fumes can bring on severe seizures. If pesticides manage to get inside, Duehring retreats to a bedroom lined in steel and aluminum foil.

Duehring, 28, is one of hundreds of people who say they suffer from environmental illness. Some scientists believe it is the result of the proliferation of chemicals in our world. Others are skeptical.

Dr. Michael Kaliner, head of allergic diseases at the National Institutes of Health, says typical symptoms such as headaches and nausea reported by most patients are too subjective to study. He needs more physical evidence like tissue or blood disorders.

"I think they have a real problem," he says. "I'm not sure what it is.

"They describe everything from chronic fatigue to joint problems. You name it and someone will be complaining about it and calling it chemical sensitivity."

Dr. John Yunginger, a consultant at the Mayo Clinic in Rochester, Minn., says people who claim to have environmental illness generally behave like robots programmed to believe they're overly sensitive.

"They can't have fun, they can't work, they can't go to school. They are not productive human beings in the usual sense of the word," he said.

Yunginger, who has never met Duehring and would not comment on her case, also said the problem may not be unique to the 20th century.

"People with these kinds of complaints I'm sure existed when we were all running around in leopard skins with tigers," he says. "People were stressed back then, too. And when nothing else was found to explain their symptoms, there was something there to write on the chart."

Most people on both sides of the issue agree that more research is needed.

Congressional committees are considering proposals to identify environmental illness as a problem and provide money to help solve it. Some states are creating chemical registries to list companies that use pesticides. Some require businesses to post signs telling customers they've used certain chemicals.

Some people with environmental illness go to work or school, though they need to be more careful than most, Duehring said. Her case is extreme, she said.

Her life isn't without fun. She said she and her husband Jim, a Lutheran pastor, chase each other around the house, play board games and "cuddle and talk a lot." They have been married two years.

But environmental illness is all too real to Jim Duehring.

"I have seen the boils that form on her body. I saw in front of my very eyes her gut area expand out," he said, sitting in his church office. "I've seen her alternate between a cold and hot sweat."

Before greeting his wife after work, Duehring must take one shower, sometimes two, to get rid of chemicals he unwittingly may have brought home. If crop dusting planes pass over his car, he can't go home that day at all.

Visitors must plan at least a week ahead to avoid colognes, detergents and shampoos that could set off seizures.

Mrs. Duehring said the trouble began in 1984, during her last year as a pre-med student in Seattle, soon after an exterminator sprayed pesticides on her clothes. She began getting headaches, nausea, diarrhea, fatigue, blurred vision and a low fever.

Duehring first went to a counselor seeking help for stress, then to several other doctors, and finally to David Buscher, a family practitioner in Bellevue, Wash., who specializes in environmental medicine. Tests showed pesticides damaged Duehring's immune system as they built up in her body.

"She's a very chemically sensitive individual," Buscher says. "One of the worst I've seen — and I've seen hundreds."

In the last four years, Duehring's condition has worsened. She keeps an oxygen tank in her bedroom. Even simple blood or neurological tests turn violent.

"It's like her respiratory tract just shuts down and she's just gasping for air," says Jackie Stenehjem, a neighbor and lab technician who takes the blood.

"The prognosis is very poor," Buscher said. "But one good thing about Cindy is she's very optimistic. She's not letting it get her down."

James Watt breaks his silence

By Julia Prodis

JACKSON, Wyo. (AP) — It has been seven years since James Watt saddled up and headed West, driven out of Washington by enraged environmentalists and by his own maladroit tongue.

But he could hold that tongue just so long. And now, after watching what he says are the abuses of a rogue environmental movement, he's sounding off — in newspaper columns, at cattlemen's meetings and political banquets.

"Somebody's got to scream back," he says.

"After 11 years of reflection ... I say to you, all my fears are more justified today than when I first voiced them."

If not curtailed, he said, movements like Earth First! will convince the "cowards of Congress" to ban all hunting, eliminate all logging and livestock grazing on public lands and further jeopardize the minerals industries.

"I feel that our states may be ravaged as a result of the actions of environmentalists — the greatest threat to the ecology of the West," Watt said in a November newspaper column.

These are not surprising sentiments from the man who, as secretary of the interior under Ronald Reagan, was regarded as "public enemy No. 1" by the Sierra Club, according to President Susan Merrow.

In 1981, her group collected more than 1 million signatures seeking Watt's ouster: "His fundamental philosophy of exploitation was intolerable."

In particular, she blamed Watt for clear cutting federal lands in the Pacific Northwest, weakening environmental regulations for strip mining and hampering efforts to curtail air pollution in California's Yosemite Valley.

"He had played a role in trashing a plan that would have taken vehicles off the valley floor," she said.

To that Watt responds, "the only way to eliminate pollution is to eliminate people and I'm opposed to that."

AP Laserphoto

After years out of the limelight, former Secretary of the Interior James Watt is stepping forward again to blast environmentalists.

It is Watt's contention that land should not be preserved for preservation's sake, but should be used wisely for man's benefit. "The environmental movement is preservation vs. people," he said.

Watt implemented an offshore leasing program that offered virtually the entire U.S. coastline — 1 billion acres — for oil and gas drilling and held the largest coal lease sale in history, auctioning off 1.1 billion tons of coal in the Powder River Basin of Montana and Wyoming.

Watt tripled the amount of onshore land being leased for oil and gas exploration and doubled the acreage leased for geothermal resources.

Watt did spend $1 billion to restore and improve national parks and added 1.8 million acres to the nation's wilderness system. And his efforts to exploit natural resources made America stronger, he wrote Reagan in October 1983.

"Our excellent record for managing the natural resources of this land is unequalled — because we put people in the environmental equation," Watt wrote.

But eight days after writing Reagan, he rode horseback into a cow pasture down the road from Reagan's California ranch to announce his resignation.

Not only had his policies created an uproar, but so had his mouth — he had banned the Beach Boys from performing on the Mall and characterized members of a coal advisory panel as "a black .. . a woman, two Jews and a cripple."

"I had outworn my usefulness," Watt said of his decision to resign. "I had made that faux pas about the cripple and they wouldn't get off my case."

Living with his wife in a ranch house 100 yards from the boundary of Grand Teton National Park, the 53-year-old Wyoming native has spent the last seven years riding horses, hunting and rafting the Snake River.

He has passed his days in a log-lined office with a wood-burning stove and a view of the majestic Tetons. Daily, he drives past the National Elk Refuge to pick up his mail at the Jackson post office. He visits with his grandchildren, and occasionally lectures at a college campus.

Watt hasn't been a complete recluse. In 1985 he turned heads when he agreed to represent Indian tribes in oil operations and hotel developments after previously labeling Indian reservations "the failure of socialism."

And in 1989 Watt's name surfaced amid the scandals of the Department of Housing and Urban Development. He had accepted $300,000 in consulting fees to represent developers of a federally subsidized housing project.

Today, he makes his living as a legal consultant and keynote speaker, not as a politician. Surprising many, he has not run for governor of Wyoming. He remains vague about his political aspirations.

"There are no openings," he said.

Perry Pendley, executive director of the Mountain States Legal Foundation, a Denver-based organization charged with protecting private property rights and development of public land, says Watt could give his cause the spark it needs.

He says Westerners are "non-joiners, they're cattlemen, miners, oil and gas, timber. But what is happening is we're being outmaneuvered by organizations that have appealed to a huge constituency and bankrolled themselves to an incredible degree. If we want to preserve our rights and liberties we are going to have to be similarly active and aggressive.

"We have not been properly energized that our very way of life is in jeopardy," Pendley said. "When a man like Jim Watt gets quoted, I think he gives a leg to this effort."

What does the Sierra Club, which doubled its membership during Watt's tenure, think of a Watt comeback?

"I hope he keeps it up because he sometimes works to our advantage — the more outrageous he gets, the more people we'll rally around," Merrow said.

Watt still has scars from his short-lived Washington adventure, begrudging the media for "intentionally misrepresenting" him, and resenting national environmental groups for accusing him of "raping Mother Earth."

Had he to do it again, "I wouldn't have dealt with the press at all."

Watt said he did what he could to carry the torch — and take the heat — for the Reagan revolution.

"I told the president I wouldn't last 18 months if we wanted to accomplish everything he wanted to accomplish — with the special interest groups and the media agreeing with those special interests," he said. "If you're an effective guy, you use yourself up."

Barbara Bush: Child abuse is nation's most disturbing woe

WASHINGTON (AP) — Barbara Bush said Monday that child abuse is the nation's most disturbing social problem.

"It shouldn't hurt to be a child," the first lady said Monday at a White House reception marking April as Child Abuse Prevention Month.

Health and Human Services Secretary Louis W. Sullivan is launching an effort to draw more attention to the problem. His department says 1,200 to 5,000 American children die each year from abuse.

Advocates for children said they welcome the attention, but more federal aid is needed as well.

Anne Cohn, of the Chicago-based National Committee for the Prevention of Child Abuse, said, "There's a tremendous need for more money."

Dr. Richard Krugman, professor of pediatrics and acting dean at the University of Colorado Medical School who chaired a federal advisory panel on the problem, said, "Hundreds of thousands of children are still being beaten and sodomized and raped. .... It is an emergency."

Krugman said he told Sullivan:

"This initiative is a little like maple syrup. It's sweet but slow. We need to turn up the heat."

Mrs. Bush, addressing more than 100 children's advocates in the East Room, called child abuse "a horror that's been with us for centuries, even in this, the best of all possible countries."

She said it was "so much more disturbing than any of our other social problems ... because its root causes run so deep."

Sullivan said that "the federal government alone cannot solve this problem." He is planning to hold meetings across the country to encourage leaders from business, social services, churches and other government agencies to step up their involvement in fighting abuse.

The government spends about $40 million a year on preventing abuse and treating its victims.

Maverick exterminators abandon chemicals

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Jay and Joe Tallon, operators of a family owned California pest control business, took a risky and uncertain gamble.

After killing termites and other household pests with an assortment of toxic chemicals for nearly a quarter-century, the Tallon family abandoned pesticides four years ago for more environmentally safe methods.

Since the greening of Tallon Termite & Pest Control Co., in 1987, the company has expanded and prospered.

But Jay Tallon, president of the Long Beach, Calif., company, said the shift has had its cost.

Others in the pest control business have reacted coolly, at times even with hostility. Tallon once was a director of the state pest control association and his father once the trade group's man of the year. He says relations with the group are now strained, although he remains a member.

"They haven't welcomed us with open arms," admits Tallon, 32.

He recalls the response when he demonstrated how the company used liquid nitrogen to freeze termites to death. "They called it a Popsicle machine and said it would never work," he said.

He said other pest control operators "tried to put roadblocks in front of us."

Exterminating pests is a $3.5 billion a year industry.

Companies increasingly are offering alternative methods of pest control, but most firms still use the traditional pesticides, although at reduced concentrations from years ago, says Joel Paul, a spokesman for the 14,000-member National Pest Control Association.

The Tallon company's "Blizzard System" for getting rid of drywood termites found in the Sun Belt was developed in the mid-1980s by Joe Tallon Jr., who has a degree in environmental research. The pests are located in walls using fiber optics and then killed by pouring liquid nitrogen at 20 degrees below zero into walls and infested areas.

Later the brothers developed the "HeatWave" system where localized areas are heated to as much as 200 degrees. Wood catches fire at over 400 degrees, so there's margin to spare, says Tallon.

For other bugs, the Tallons use dry steam, birth regulators and methods other than toxic chemicals. The company prefers microscopic organisms or salt solutions for subterranean termites which are found outside the Sun Belt.

When the Tallons first proposed using liquid nitrogen in a process to which they now hold a patent, the California Department of Agriculture maintained that because it killed insects, it had to be registered as a form of poison.

"They made me register air, cold air," recalls Jay Tallon, who received the registration in 1987. Federal approval by the Environmental Protection Agency was hastened only after inquiries from then Sen. Pete Wilson, now California governor.

Tallon said the timing for abandoning toxic chemicals was right.

"If we tried to do this 10 years ago we would have been ahead of our times. Today people are more aware of what is being used (to kill pests)."

In 1987 the company had 20 employees, compared to 140 workers today. Gross revenue then was about $70,000 a month. "Now we're running between $600,000 and $700,000 a month although it trailed off because of the economy," says Tallon.

The firm recently expanded from Southern California to the San Francisco area and Tallon, who now runs the business with his brother, Joe Jr., has ambitious plans to franchise the business nationwide.

PART-TIME INCOME AVAILABLE

The Midland Reporter-Telegram has several distributorships which need to be filled with qualified, responsible individuals.

OFTEN ASKED QUESTIONS:

Is it worthwhile for adults also?

Yes! Our current carrier force is already 90% adult and 10% youth. Morning newspaper routes are attractive for:

- ADULTS who have full-time jobs, yet want to supplement their income with a steady part-time job.
- MOTHERS who can't justify a small job and daycare, because as a carrier, you do not need daycare!
- COLLEGE STUDENTS needing a part-time job which will work with classes!
- SENIOR CITIZENS wanting regular exercise, added income, or just want to work with people, neighbors, and friends.

How much money can I make as a carrier?

Depending on the size of the distributorship from $300 to $700 monthly! Some make even more!

How long does it take?

The actually delivery takes 1 - 2 hours Monday - Saturday, and 2 - 3 hours on Sunday, again depending on the size of the distributorship. Also, a few hours a month are needed to collect from subscribers. Many carrier's choose to handle some of this by putting envelopes in subscribers' papers. Collecting in person will be necessary though!

When do papers have to be delivered by?

6 a.m. Monday - Friday and 7 a.m. on Saturday, Sunday and holidays.

Do I ever get a day off?

The job requires a 7-day a week commitment. However, carriers do take days off by finding a friend or family member to substitute for them!

ENGINEERS,
GEOLOGISTS, GEOPHYSICISTS,
DRILLING SUPERVISORS

FINA OIL AND CHEMICAL COMPANY'S Exploration and Production Departments have more than doubled in size during the last three years. Future growth strategies involve a balanced approach of exploration, development, acquisition and enhanced oil recovery projects. As this growth continues, Fina is seeking experienced professionals who have demonstrated the technical and leadership skills that have earned them exceptional ratings in their current employ. The working environment, capital strength and flat organizations at Fina compliments those who are highly motivated by action and results as "red tape" is minimized and responsibility and decisions are pushed down to the working level.

Engineers, Drilling Supervisors, Geologists, and Geophysicists interested in learning more about opportunities at Fina or feel that their current career path is limited or unclear are urged to send a confidential resume' to:
