Shula ties mark

MIAMI — It was Bryan Cox's best hit of Miami's 30-10 win over Kansas City on Sunday — a perfect dunk of a pail of ice water on Don Shula's head as the Dolphins coach tied George Halas' career record for coaching wins. The win made Shula's career record 324-152-6 in 30 years with the Dolphins and Baltimore Colts, very similar to Halas' 324-151-31 in 40 seasons, all with the Chicago Bears. 1C

Officials: Some in Haiti's military regime were paid CIA informers

By Tim Weiner
N.Y. Times News Service

WASHINGTON — Key members of the military regime controlling Haiti and blocking the return of President Jean-Bertrand Aristide were paid by the CIA for information from the mid-1980s at least until the 1991 coup that forced Aristide from power, according to American officials.

As part of its normal intelligence-gathering operations, the CIA cultivated, recruited and paid generals and politicians for information about everything from cocaine smuggling to political ferment in Haiti, they said.

Without naming names, a government official familiar with the payments said that "several of the principal players in the present situation were compensated by the U.S. government." It was not clear when

2 oil majors to open new China waters

By Joshua Mills
N.Y. Times News Service

Chevron, Texaco and two foreign oil companies have signed contracts with the Chinese government to begin exploration in the East China Sea, opening another front in China's search for oil for its booming economy.

In a contract signed Sunday in Beijing, Chevron Overseas Petroleum Ltd., a subsidiary of Chevron Corp., was granted a seven-year contract to explore for crude oil and natural gas in a 700-square-mile area southeast of Shanghai. Terms were not disclosed, and a Chevron Overseas spokeswoman, Pam Low, declined to place a dollar value on Chevron's commitment.

On Thursday, Texaco Inc., Agip Petroli Ltd. of Italy and Maersk Oil China A.S. of Denmark signed a contract to explore an area about four times as large as the Chevron region.

Telephone calls to Texaco's headquarters were not answered Sunday; a news release handed out at the signing in Beijing estimated that exploration would cost at least $100 million in the first three years.

Pumping oil from its own land and waters, China has become the fifth-largest producer in the world. It is expected to agree soon to additional exploration by other foreign companies.

For years China has licensed foreign companies to develop oil fields in the South China Sea, off its coast between Hong Kong and Vietnam, in return for a share of the profits. But the search for oil in the East China Sea, while discussed for years, is only now beginning.

'We are favorably impressed with the geological prospects of the area.'

— Richard Matzke, Chevron Overseas

The East China Sea is ringed by South Korea, Japan, Okinawa and Taiwan. China has asserted for years that the continental shelf under the sea is an extension of the Chinese mainland, while other governments in the region have continued to insist that they have rights in the areas closest to them.

In recent years China has been able to meet its own energy needs. But oil consumption has been growing faster in much of East Asia than in other parts of the world and by next year, China — whose economy has been growing about 12 percent a year — is widely expected to need imports.

That gives it a heightened incentive to find more oil. Earlier this year, it agreed to allow foreign companies to explore for oil in its Tarim Basin, in the far west.

Chevron, based in San Francisco, has been one of the most active American companies in China, with numerous operations in the South China Sea through its participation in a partnership with Texaco, Agip and the Chinese National Offshore Oil Corp.

The partnership drilled its first wells in October 1984, near the mouth of the Pearl River in the South China Sea, and brought its first oilfield into production. Please see WATERS/2A

Border area settles into new routines after 6 weeks of stepped-up vigilance

CIUDAD JUAREZ, Mexico (AP) — A handful of men fishing quietly are the only regulars these days on a stretch of the Rio Grande that once saw hundreds gather to await their chance to slip into the United States.

Alfredo Hernandez and Jose Gonzalez Herrera watch them from the river levy. They lean on a fence, chat and sometimes look across the border into El Paso, where a green U.S. Border Patrol truck sits motionless.

Hernandez said he's been coming out for weeks to see if Border Patrol agents have relaxed the stepped-up vigilance that began Sept. 19 as "Operation Blockade" — a show of force designed to discourage illegal immigration.

"From what I can see," he said, "the border is all closed."

Before the blockade, on a 20-mile section of the Rio Grande, Hernandez said he would cross with little effort to his job as a farmworker. He made about $25 a day.

With city approval, police seek federal funds to add 4 officers

By Katherine Poteet
Staff writer

Despite increasing budget constraints, the Midland Police Department could have four new patrol officers added to its ranks by the end of next January.

The department received approval from the city on Oct. 12 to apply for funds under the federal government's new Police Hiring Supplement Program, operated under the Department of Justice.

"We lost a number of officers in 1988 through budget cuts," said Chief Richard Czech. "Since that time, we have embarked on Problem-Oriented Policing and additional officers would help enhance programs we have set up under that philosophy."

The federal grant would fund 75 percent of the cost to hire the officers, who are required to be on patrol, and the local entity

WEATHER WATCH

Temperature to peak at 70

Staff report

Today's forecast calls for partly sunny skies with a high near 70 and southwest winds at 10-20 mph. Tonight should be mostly cloudy with a low in the lower to mid-40s, according to the National Weather Service in Midland.

Tuesday should be cloudy with a 30 percent chance of rain and a high in the mid- to upper 50s.

After overnight record-breaking low of 25, which beat the record set in 1991 by four degrees, Sunday's high reached 69, compared to the record high of 89 set in 1934.

STATE

More weather records were shattered across Texas on Sunday as a high-pressure dome of arctic air kept its grip on the state.

A 35-degree low in Brownsville smashed several records, including the date's coldest, the lowest for so early in the season and coldest ever recorded for October, the National Weather Service said.

The weather service also reported record lows for Houston, with 29 degrees at Intercontinental Airport that broke a 35-degree milestone set in 1980; for Austin, with 30 degrees; San Antonio, 27; Victoria, 31; and Bryan-College Station, 29.

Victoria's old record for the date was 32 degrees in 1917, while Austin's was 37 degrees in 1980. The old Bryan-College Station record of 30 was set in 1917, with San Antonio's lowest previous reading of 33 in 1980.

But clear skies and abundant sunshine allowed afternoon temperatures Sunday to climb. Abilene, which had tied its record low for October with 23 degrees, warmed into the 50s. Other highs ranged from the upper 40s to low 60s.

Winds were mostly southerly and southwesterly at 5 to 20 mph on the western side of the high, and northerly and northwesterly on the eastern side at 5 to 10 mph.

A warming trend was expected across the state for the beginning of the week, with highs through Tuesday ranging from 60 to 70, with a few 80s in the deep south, and overnight lows from the 20s to the 50s both days.

The weather service predicted increasing clouds Tuesday with a chance of showers and thunderstorms in North Texas and rain in the Trans-Pecos and Permian Basin northward, with rain possibly mixed with or changing to snow in the north.

A low-pressure area was moving into West Texas.

NATION

Halloween weather came dressed up as Old Man Winter as low temperature records were smashed like so many pumpkins across the nation.

Under the influence of cold-surface high pressure, record lows for the date fell from parts of the Rockies and the northern Plains into the Gulf coastal region. More than 40 cities broke or tied their records.

The low of 28 degrees at Corpus Christi not only shattered its previous mark for the date, but also established a new low for the month of October. The previous record low for the month was 39 set Oct. 20, 1989.

It also was lower than any temperature ever recorded there for November.

As the ridge of high pressure drifted slowly eastward Sunday night, temperatures dipped to freezing levels across much of the Deep South, and the National Weather Service expected more record low temperatures.

Snow fell Sunday afternoon across parts of the Great Lakes, Ohio Valley and the Appalachians, with flurries as far south as Atlanta.

The Associated Press contributed to this report.

■ Peruvians approve new constitution

LIMA, Peru — Amid heavy security to guard against terrorists, Peruvians on Sunday approved a constitutional referendum seen as a vote of confidence in President Alberto Fujimori, according to exit polls.

"Now we have the tools for progress, I have no doubt that Peru is going to become the center of development in Latin America," Fujimori said at a victory news conference.

Preliminary exit polls by the country's most respected polling firm, Apoyo, showed 55.3 percent in favor of the constitution and 44.7 percent against.

■ Russians scramble to fill parliament

MOSCOW — A cluster of campaign workers sit under the whimsical domes of St. Basil's with hand-lettered signs reading "Russia's Choice," "Movement for Democratic Reform" and "New Russia." They try to shield their clipboards from the wet snow and patiently explain to a steady stream of people how to fill out petition forms.

Communists and nationalists migrate toward their usual meeting place on the other end of Red Square, under the portico of the Lenin Museum. There, amid steady invective against President Boris N. Yeltsin and "democrats" in general, representatives of the Russian Communist Party and their allies fill their lists.

It is a scene repeated in underpasses, at bus stations and at other public places all across Russia, as political blocs and parties scramble to gather the 100,000 signatures needed to enter the race for the Dec. 12 elections for a new Parliament.

■ Third kidnapped French consular freed

ALGIERS, Algeria (AP) — The third kidnapped French consular worker was freed Sunday, a day after security forces rescued her husband and another man. At least seven kidnappers died in the rescue operation, sources said.

The three were abducted on Oct. 24 from their house in central Algiers. Last week hooded police officers sealed off entire neighborhoods and searched house-to-house for them.

Jean-Claude Thevenot and Alain Freyssier were rescued Saturday night by soldiers and police, who killed at least seven of the kidnappers, according to well-informed sources.

The two men were flown to Paris on Sunday. They were met at a military airport by French Foreign Minister Alain Juppe, who announced that Michele Thevenot had been freed.

She was at the French Embassy in Algiers, he said. No details about her release were immediately available.

■ French cafes survive no-smoking law

PARIS — When France imposed strict anti-smoking rules a year ago, battle lines were hazy. Huffing "Liberte!" many smokers and even some non-smokers demanded the government leave their lungs alone.

On the law's first anniversary Monday, both sides can claim victory. While the France of smoke-filled cafes remains largely unchanged, there is a greater awareness of non-smokers' rights.

By neglecting to enforce the ban on smoking in enclosed public places, the government has avoided treading on sensitive French egos.

"The French don't like laws to tell them what to do," said Maxine Clement, a spokeswoman for SEITA, the state-owned factory that produces pungent Gaullois cigarettes. "Look on the street. You don't see a lot of people crossing at the crosswalks."

Gunmen's shadow chills Belfast's troubled heart

BELFAST, Northern Ireland (AP) — The fast-food delivery man stepped out of his car, saw a man walking toward him and cowered on the cold pavement.

"I thought sure you were going to shoot me," the man said, after realizing his customer, an Associated Press reporter, was holding a wallet, not a gun.

Belfast has become a city of empty midnight streets where a strange face or a sudden movement can trigger fear.

Outsiders, buoyed by positive words from politicians in Dublin and London, talk of peace between the Roman Catholic and Protestant communities. But in Northern Ireland, the reality is relentless killing.

The past eight days have been among the bloodiest in a quarter-century years of political and sectarian violence. Twenty-three people were killed, including seven gunned down Saturday night as they celebrated Halloween.

The province's Roman Catholic minority in particular fears the surge in indiscriminate killings by pro-British Protestant gunmen, who have killed more people this year than the outlawed Irish Republican Army. The tally so far is Protestant paramilitaries 38, IRA 28.

"If you're Catholic in this stinking city you're a target, simple as that," said Paul Bready, 24, a Belfast student who was packing his bags to flee the British-ruled province.

"I'm off to Donegal" in the Republic of Ireland, Bready said. "There's no jobs there, but there's no Prods (Protestants) to shoot me while I'm drinking my pint either."

Many Catholic parents are keeping their children indoors after dark, forbidding them to go door to door for Halloween. Some popular bars are half-empty. Many people avoid shopping malls, fearful they could be shot.

Public events frequented by Catholics have been canceled, like the Irish dancing competition in west Belfast and the Halloween costume ball at Queen's University. Catholics have refused to go to work in Protestant areas.

Commanders of the Royal Ulster Constabulary, Northern Ireland's mostly Protestant police force, admit they can't guard every public place and roadway, and appealed to citizens to keep their eyes open. "People know the routine patterns of behavior and activity in their areas, so therefore they also know departures from that routine," said Assistant Chief Constable Ronnie Flanagan.

"They must see strangers driving about in cars. ... Please ring us so we can put that information to good effect," he urged on Northern Ireland television.

Before the violence intensified, many Catholics were cautiously optimistic that peace was in the offing.

'A frightening case': 2 boys go on trial for killing toddler

LIVERPOOL, England (AP) — Two 11-year-old boys go on trial today for allegedly kidnapping and murdering a toddler whose abduction from a shopping center was caught on videotape. They are the youngest ever to be charged with murder in Britain.

"It is a frightening case," acknowledged defense lawyer Laurence Lee, who is representing one of the boys.

Frightening for people who saw the crime unfold when the videotape was broadcast around the world; for Denise and Ralph Bulger, who lost their only child; and for the accused boys, who were 10 at the time of the crime and marked their 11th birthdays in custody.

Ten is the youngest age at which a child can face criminal charges in Britain, but prosecutors must prove that the child understood the consequences of his or her actions.

"The child has got to know that what he did was seriously wrong, not just naughty," Lee told The Associated Press.

On Feb. 12, 2-year-old James Bulger strayed from his mother's side at a shopping center. Within minutes, a security camera recorded an older boy taking his hand and following a friend onto a busy street.

James' battered body was found two days later several miles away.

The two boys are charged with abducting and murdering James, and attempting to abduct another 2-year-old boy earlier the same day. They pleaded innocent to all three charges at a preliminary hearing in May.

Under British law, the accused boys cannot be identified, nor can any information be revealed that would identify them.

But their neighbors know the children well, and their families have left their homes for their own safety.

Hail of bullets on Sarajevo runway wounds one; U.N. halts aid flights

SARAJEVO, Bosnia-Herzegovina (AP) — Aid flights to Sarajevo were suspended Sunday after a French officer was wounded in a hail of bullets across the airport runway, a U.N. official said.

It was not immediately clear who fired the shots because both government and Serb positions front the runway, located on the southwest side of the Bosnian capital. But with most land supplies cut off, the airlift is crucial to feed and care for Sarajevo's citizens.

U.N. spokesman Lt. Col. Bill Aikman said the French officer and others were getting ready to board a routine U.N. flight to Zagreb, the Croatian capital, when the shots rang out.

The officer, who was not identified, was wounded in the arm and evacuated, he said.

Flights were canceled for the rest of the day, Aikman said. The status of Monday flights was unclear. "We'll address that in the morning," he said.

Aikman reported Sunday on advances by the Bosnian army and Croat forces in different theaters of the central Bosnian battlefield in fighting a day earlier. New warnings came of abuse of civilians and impending suffering through the coming winter.

Aikman said U.N. monitors reported Croats advanced over a mile toward Travnik, northwest of Sarajevo. Fighting was among the heaviest in a corridor normally used for aid convoys.

Court to decide on gender-based jury selection

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. (AP) — An Alabama man fighting a child support order has the backing of feminists and the Clinton administration as he asks the U.S. Supreme Court to overturn a paternity ruling decided by an all-woman jury.

James E. Bowman claims a state court order to pay $415 a month to support a 4-year-old son is unfair because no men served on the jury.

The Justice Department and 17 women's and civil rights groups have filed papers siding with Bowman. They seek an even broader ruling from the court, one that would forbid disqualification of potential jurors solely because of their sex.

Kim Gandy, executive vice president of the National Organization for Women in Washington, concedes it is an unlikely alliance that is backing Bowman, who is married and has denied fathering the baby.

"Cases like this have to be argued on the principle rather than the facts," Ms. Gandy said in an interview. "What's at issue here is whether gender-based discrimination is permissible in our legal system for any reason."

The Supreme Court in 1986 said potential jurors cannot be eliminated because of their race. In May, the court said it would use Bowman's case to decide whether to extend that ruling to include sex. Arguments are set for Tuesday.

Bowman, who lives in northeastern Alabama, admitted having an affair with Teresa Bible beginning in February 1988, according to court documents, and the two spent five days together at a motel that August.

Ms. Bible testified that no contraception was used and that she had no other sexual partners until after her son was born in May 1989.

A blood test established a 99.92 percent probability that Bowman was the father. But he denied impregnating Ms. Bible.

Bowman's attorney, John F. Porter III, declined to provide Bowman's hometown and said his client would not comment on the suit. Ms. Bible could not be located for comment.

The jury pool for the 1991 trial included 24 women and 12 men. The judge excused two men and one woman.

Attorneys hired by Jackson County to file the paternity claim for Ms. Bible removed nine men from the pool through peremptory challenges, which allow dismissal of potential jurors without explanation. The law firm has since declined to comment on the exclusions.

Bowman's attorney used his peremptory strikes to remove 10 women and the last man.

Porter argued that an all-female jury should not hear the case, but the trial went ahead. Jurors decided Bowman was the father, and a judge ordered him to pay child support.

The 9th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in San Francisco has already barred lawyers from using peremptory challenges to remove jurors because of their sex. The Clinton administration contends a broader ban would not harm the nation's trial system.

The state of Alabama, however, claims outlawing jury selection based on sex could encourage bans on other legal challenges to jurors, such as national origin, age and religion, all factors that could bear on decisions in specific cases.

"The court has made it clear that nobody has a right to have any particular makeup of a jury," said Lois Brasfield, an assistant state attorney general.

Deborah Brake, an attorney with the Washington-based National Women's Law Center, said Bowman's case represents the best chance since the early 1980s for women to get more legal protection from sexual discrimination.

"This is the first equal protection case taken by the court in many years," said Ms. Brake. "We think it would be a very bad precedent to not extend this rule to gender."

Airlines to pay $20,000 fine for promising discount fares

WASHINGTON (AP) — Continental Airlines was fined $20,000 for misleading ads that promised discount fares to Europe when few seats were available at the cheap rate, the Transportation Department said Sunday.

The department said the fine — while not particularly severe — signals a new federal activism to help consumers combat so-called "low-fare, no-fair" practices.

"Low fares are good for consumers, but only when there are seats available," Transportation Secretary Federico Pena said. "Deceptive ads inconvenience the consumer and undermine the credibility of the entire airline industry."

A vigorous campaign against deceptive airline ads could prove significant, particularly in light of a Supreme Court ruling last year that barred states from regulating airline fare advertising.

The high court said it's the federal government's job to make sure consumers are not duped, ruling the federal Airline Deregulation Act of 1978 preempts states from enforcing laws to protect consumers against false or misleading ads.

The Transportation Department said Continental cooperated in the investigation and agreed not to advertise deceptively again.

"While Continental felt there were sufficient seats, the department disagreed," said Continental spokesman Ned Walker. "To avoid costly litigation, we chose to pay the fine."

The agency issued similar orders earlier this year. In one case, USAir was fined $5,000, and in the other Icelandair was ordered to stop running deceptive ads but was not fined.

In the Continental case, the carrier's newspaper ads in February offered discount fares from Newark International Airport to various European cities.

For example, a one-way seat from Newark to Paris was offered for $274 during the spring and fall and $324 during the summer. The figures represent approximately a 25 percent discount.

When Transportation Department investigators called Continental for seats, they found that few if any were available at the special rates.

Also, Continental did not mention in the ads that the low fares were not available during significant periods — from July 28 to Aug. 31 heading toward Europe and from July 14 to Aug. 14 to the United States.

When airlines advertise low fares, the department said, they must make a reasonable number of seats available at that rate throughout the entire sales period.

A department official who requested anonymity said what is reasonable depends on the circumstances of the sale. But typi-

Astronauts get final jab in orbit as mission nears end

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — Columbia's science astronauts were jabbed with needles for the last time in space Sunday as NASA's longest shuttle flight drew to a close.

Researchers were thrilled with the data collected during the 14-day medical mission. The astronauts worked 18-hour days for much of the flight and volunteered for extra tests, some of them dizzying, so scientists could better understand how the body changes in weightlessness.

They stared at dots in a rotating dome and were dropped by bungee cords and spun in a chair, just to name a few.

"You guys have set a new standard for productive space life sciences research," ground controller Laurence Young told the seven astronauts.

Scientists expect the mission — only the second U.S. space flight devoted solely to medical research — to help them better understand the side effects of space travel. The more common ailments include motion sickness, anemia, weakened muscles and bones, and lightheaded-ness upon return to Earth.

Doctors hope to also reap benefits for earth-bound patients, particularly the elderly and those bedridden.

Columbia's journey was due to end with a 10:06 a.m. EST Monday landing at Edwards Air Force Base in California — 14 days and 13 minutes after it began and nearly five hours beyond the longest shuttle flight to date. Columbia set that record last year.

Before shutting down Columbia's laboratory, the two physicians, one veterinarian and one biochemist squeezed in more heart measurements and drew blood from one another to gauge calcium and protein levels.

The biochemist, Shannon Lucid, noted over the weekend that the only good thing about getting poked so much was that her crewmates were getting better at inserting the needles.

Lucid and Dr. Rhea Seddon also took blood samples from 10 of Columbia's 42 surviving rats. Six rodents were killed and dissected Saturday — a space first — and the body parts preserved for postflight study.

There was more testing to come on Earth for both the humans and rats.

The 42 rats were to be killed for dissection anywhere from a few hours to 14 days after touchdown.

As for the five men and two women, NASA planned to remove them from Columbia on stretchers to slow the effects of gravity. For two weeks, they will undergo the same experiments as they did in orbit so scientists can see how long it takes for their bodies to fully readapt to gravity.

NASA program scientist Frank Sulzman expects the astronauts to be "completely normal" by the end of the week.

Less rigorous, follow-up checks will continue for another month, longer if the astronauts volunteer for a NASA study that follows the health of past and present astronauts throughout their lives.

Many banks increase penalty fees for bounced checks

NEW YORK (AP) — Banks are taking in good money from bad checks.

Major U.S. metropolitan area banks are hiking penalty fees for a bounced check to as high as $30, a financial newsletter reported Sunday. It said some banks even see rubber checks as an attractive and growing profit source.

The average bank fee for a bounced check is $19.35, according to Bank Rate Monitor's survey of the 120 largest banks and thrifts in the 12 largest U.S. metropolitan areas.

In contrast, the average fee was $18.58 a year ago and about $15 in 1987, the newsletter said.

"No doubt about it, banks make money off bounced checks," said Robert Heady, publisher of Bank Rate Monitor, a weekly that tracks interest-rate trends.

Heady said banks realized in the early 1980s that bounced checks were becoming "profit centers." Consumers are often too embarrassed about bouncing a check to complain about the fee, he said.

A spokesman for the American Bankers Association, John Hall, denied the charge.

"It's certainly not a profit center for an institution. It's strictly a deterrent" to people writing bad checks, he said. In addition, he said, the number of bounced checks has risen in recent years, costing banks more money.

The survey found average fees ranged from $28.90 in Philadelphia to $11.05 in Los Angeles. It said fees tended to be lower in California because of lawsuits against financial institutions by incensed consumers.

In Miami, fees averaged $25.20; Washington, $24; Atlanta, $20.90; Houston, $20.25; Dallas, $20; Chicago, $19.20; Boston, $18.30; Detroit, $17.45; New York, $15.60; and San Francisco, $11.35.

"This is not a reasonable price. It's not cheap," admitted Pat James, vice-president of retail banking at PNC Bank. "We don't want to make this (check-bouncing) attractive."

Official: RTC to monitor Dallas employees' calls

WASHINGTON (AP) — Some employees in the Resolution Trust Corp.'s Dallas office have been told that their telephone calls will be monitored, a move that Justice Department and privacy experts say would violate federal wiretapping laws.

RTC legal division director Duane Curtis told workers in his division the monitoring is intended to eliminate leaks of agency information to the media and congressional fact-finders, according to several employees, speaking on condition of anonymity.

Curtis told a staff meeting last Monday that employees shouldn't be surprised if they heard clicks on their phone lines because the RTC was planning to monitor their phone calls, said the employees. The legal division workers were also told that a log would be kept of their outgoing telephone calls. Curtis did not use the word wiretap.

Word of what Curtis said spread rapidly through the Dallas RTC office. Since then, five Dallas employees, including two lawyers, have told The Associated Press that for the first time since they began working for the agency, they have heard clicking sounds on their office telephone lines. All spoke on condition that they not be identified by name.

Curtis denied that he had told any agency employees that their telephone calls would be monitored.

"I know nothing in the way of wiretaps," Curtis said Friday. "I have taken no steps personally. I have not done anything, requested anything, or even approached it as a subject."

RTC officials in Washington also said they knew nothing of the situation.

"If someone is doing that, they have really crossed the line," said agency spokesman Steve Katsanos. "We are here to follow the laws of the United States."

These developments come a month after a former Dallas RTC attorney and 12 other whistle blowers criticized the office in a Senate Banking Committee hearing on waste, fraud and abuse inside the agency.

A Justice Department spokesman and civil rights experts expressed concern.

"There has to be probable cause of criminality, and they need a court warrant," said John Russell, a Justice Department spokesman. "Leaking to the press is not a criminal activity."

"It's illegal and unethical," said Lew Maltby, director of the American Civil Liberties Union's workplace rights section. "Federal law allows employers to monitor calls for a legitimate business purpose. Hiding their mistakes from the public is not a legitimate business purpose."

In a Sept. 28 memo to the legal staff obtained by the AP, Curtis made his concerns about leaking clear.

"It has been painfully demonstrated recently that people outside (the division) and outside the agency are being furnished confidential information and documents concerning our work and cases," Curtis wrote.

According to other RTC documents, top officials in Washington have expressed concern in recent weeks over leaks.

"Recent newspaper articles have discussed RTC internal operations in some detail and leave the reader with the impression the RTC division of legal service employees were the source of that information," Glion Curtis, the agency's top attorney, wrote in an Oct. 18 memo to RTC employees. "If true, that conduct should be of serious concern to us all."

Glion Curtis asked that employees with complaints speak directly to him or other management officials.

Duane Curtis acknowledged writing the electronic mail message, but said he knew nothing about telephone surveillance.

"My E-mails were concerned only about the sharing of privileged and confidential information," he said.

Federal law prohibits even consensual wiretapping of government employees, except under a limited number of exceptions.

Those include wiretaps for the purpose of gathering evidence in law-enforcement, counter-intelligence and public safety matters. The Watergate-era Electronic Communications Privacy Act further states that in the "public safety" instance, wiretapping is only allowed

"When performed ... with the consent of all parties for each specific instance."

Airline imposes contract as union prepares to strike

By Charles Richards
Associated Press writer

DALLAS (AP) — As the Association of Professional Flight Attendants prepared for its first ever strike ever against American Airlines, the carrier announced Sunday it will implement raises and several other elements of the contract the union rejected.

Contract talks broke off Saturday after the parties failed to reach a tentative agreement at the end of a 30-day cooling-off period.

The Fort Worth-based airline said Sunday it is implementing pay raises averaging 35 percent over four years, 23.5 percent of which are longevity step increases that were guaranteed under the old contract.

"Flight attendants have been waiting a year for their raises, and at the same time we've remained uncompetitive for a year. It makes sense to move forward, meeting the goal of improving flight attendants' pay," American spokesman Al Comeaux said.

But the union said the raises equal less than 2 percent a year.

"What they really offered us was a 7.5 percent increase spread over four years," union spokesman Ray Abernathy said Sunday.

"We're encouraging our members to put the money in the bank to help them get through the strike we have scheduled on or before November 22nd."

That week is the week of Thanksgiving, one of the most heavily traveled periods of the year.

American's flight attendants currently start at $14,988 a year for new employees on domestic flights and peak at $38,420 for international attendants with 14 years of experience or more.

Under the implemented pact, the beginning salary will increase to $15,902 for a first-year flight attendant and rise to $40,487.

After four years, top scale would rise to $43,840. First-year scale will remain at $15,902.

By breaking off contract talks on Saturday, the union walked away from a 4 percent signing bonus the company had offered, Comeaux said. "They also walked away from an early-out package" offering monthly salaries beginning at $700 to flight attendants with 10 years service who leave before age 55.

The implemented contract does not include changes American sought in vacation scheduling or a preferential bidding system that would have changed the process by which flight attendants select their work schedule, said George L. Mueller, vice president of customer services at American.

"It's curious that the company did not implement two of the most onerous concession demands they had proposed, and that is cuts in vacations and the preferential bidding system," Abernathy said.

"If they had, our people would be walking out as of tomorrow without us even telling them to," Abernathy said.

Other contract proposals that American Airlines is imposing on Monday for flight attendants include:

- increased per diem pay for time away from base;
- increased training pay;
- increased vacation for flight attendants hired since 1983; and
- greater opportunities for flight attendants to earn more by flying more.

American also will change its staffing procedures to be more in line with those of its major competitors and will change the flight attendant medical benefits plan to be more consistent with what is offered to other employees of the company, Mueller said.

The union represents 20,748 American Airlines flight attendants.

American increased its pay offer on the last day of talks, and the union lowered its demands.

The union reduced its pay request to an increase of 6 percent the first year, followed by 5 percent in following years. It originally sought increases of 9 percent in year one, 7 percent in year two and 6 percent in years three and beyond.

Under the Railway Labor Act, the airline's contracts with unions do not expire, but the pact with the flight attendants became amendable last Dec. 31.

The APFA announced Saturday it is launching a nationwide boycott of American Airlines "to start drying up their business before we go on strike."

Flight attendants will be calling travel agents to advise them against booking people on American Airlines flights, Abernathy said.

Some residents want to dump 'show of hands' elections

SPOFFORD — Choosing the elected leaders in the tiny town of Spofford has always been an informal affair — usually a friendly get-together at a neighbor's home.

Spofford incorporated in 1944, and the first "elections" were in 1946. Twenty-two people raised their hands in favor of making Joe York Sr. mayor that year.

Ballots and polling places have been unnecessary. Since then, the mayor and City Council have been picked by a show of hands.

"When I was appointed mayor, it was 34 people there, and all of them agreed for me to be mayor," said 81-year-old J.B. Herndon, who won the show of hands in 1984.

"We gathered down at one of the neighbor's places in town. I think it was L.S. Johnson before me. He got sick and I took his place," Herndon said.

Until recently, no one complained about the process. But disgruntlement over an unreliable water system has created dissension among Spofford's 72 residents, including 35 registered voters. And critics of the folksy arrangement have called for a new election system in this town 140 miles west of San Antonio in Kinney County.

"It's a self-proclaimed monarchy," said Pamela McClure, an 18-year resident who's leading the fight for legal elections.

About six years ago, Texcor Industries proposed building a commercial dump on this ranching community to store radioactive and toxic waste. The proposal galvanized residents in Spofford and other Kinney County communities, who came together in their efforts to keep Texcor out.

In July, the former Texas Water Commission denied the company a permit and the town celebrated. Since then the Texas Natural Resource Conservation Commission has refused to rehear the issue.

"We worked hard five years to keep Texcor out. I feel we sacrificed but it's worth it," said Jesse "Tootsie" Herndon, the mayor's wife and one of four city aldermen.

But even though the dump never came, the controversy changed Spofford, some say.

"Some of these little young people that just blowed into town, that don't have no property, they're saying that we haven't done our job, but everyone knows we did our job," Jesse Herndon said.

Those calling for elections have questioned the council's use of city tax money, about 31 cents per $100 valuation. They've accused the council of violating open records and meetings laws. They want an accounting of money raised for the battle against Texcor.

"What we have is five people acting as impostors, collecting our money and using us," said McClure, whose husband is a Kinney County commissioner.

Jesse Herndon said she and her husband have used their own money to pay for long-distance telephone calls to pursue grants for a water system. They've also paid for gasoline for city business trips. They supplied food for council meetings at their home.

Some residents believe that Texcor is somehow behind the conflict, or perhaps it's American Ecology of Houston, a company that is considering forming a partnership with Texcor to open the dump that state regulators rejected.

They say the allegations and the resulting bickering may be a tactic to divert Spofford's attention so the companies can slip the dump into town.

Austin Bray, a staff attorney for the secretary of state's election law division, said he's not surprised by Spofford's election system. He often fields questions from the public about election law via a toll-free hot line.

"Believe it or not, I've heard such tales ... They think because they've been doing it for 40 to 50 years, it's OK," Bray said.

Once, he had to inform a caller that the law requires ballot boxes to have tamper-proof features.

"He said to me, 'You mean we can't put the ballots in a shoe box?'" Bray said.

If the Spofford City Council were taken to court, a judge probably would order the city to hold legal elections, Bray said. But the court probably wouldn't rule any of the council's previous actions illegal, he added.

Ukraine should relinquish arms

It's two down and one to go among the republics that inherited nuclear arms when the Soviet Union broke up. Kazakhstan is about to follow Belarus's lead and get rid of its nuclear legacy. That leaves a lone holdout: stubborn Ukraine.

Ukraine has turned its tactical nuclear arms over to Russia for dismantling. And it's removing the warheads from aging SS-19 missiles.

But President Leonid Kravchuk, who last year pledged to give up all of Ukraine's arms, now wants to keep some. The ones he has in mind, 46 intercontinental-range SS-24 missiles, were designed to target the U.S., and fly too far to strike most of Russia.

Ostensibly, Kravchuk is driving a hard bargain in an effort to win financial aid from the West. But his eagerness to appease Ukrainian nationalists could be a deal-stopper.

The nationalists see nuclear arms as a symbol of power and don't want to give them up. But nuclear weapons won't put food on the table. They're an expensive distraction from the true threat: the social unrest that's sure to follow if Ukraine's economy collapses.

Unless Ukraine is prepared to spend billions it can't afford to pay for the infrastructure to control, re-target and maintain the warheads, they are a wasting asset.

Belarus and Kazakhstan understood that and knew the time had come to cut a deal. Belarus has begun to send its nuclear missiles back to Russia for dismantling. Washington has already provided financial inducements.

The U.S. could also help things along by supporting Belarus's bid for a seat on the United Nations Security Council. That would provide an important reminder to Ukraine and others that nuclear arms do not assure a seat at the head table.

Kazakhstan has agreed to sign the Nuclear Nonproliferation Treaty by year's end. For its troubles it will get $140 million in economic aid and much, much more, like investment to develop its oil and natural gas, $85 million to help dismantle its nuclear arsenal and millions more to clean up the nuclear test site at Semipalatinsk.

Kazakhstan's president, Nursultan Nazarbayev, wants a face-to-face meeting with President Clinton to clinch the deal. Kravchuk of Ukraine also wants a summit soiree in Washington before facing the electorate back home.

But why give him one now? Rewarding Nazarbayev with a photo opportunity while denying one to Kravchuk would allow Clinton to show that the way to win Washington's favors is to disarm.

Advice on school choice goes unheeded

SACRAMENTO, Calif. — Failed behind-the-scenes negotiations between Gov. Pete Wilson and pro-school choice politicians best tell why Proposition 174 is doomed to failure this week.

If supporters of the proposition, which would give approximately $2,600 per child for parents to spend at the private school of their choice, had listened carefully to Wilson's confidential advice, they would have had a much better chance at passage this week.

Proponents of the measure, like Joseph Alibrandi, chairman of Excel (the group sponsoring the initiative), are normally allies with the Republican governor. The GOP has pushed the voucher system as its answer to failing public schools.

That's why it was such a telling and devastating blow to have Wilson come out against Prop. 174 last month. Wilson's late-breaking opposition could have been avoided if proponents like Alibrandi had heeded his advice.

Sources here told us that Wilson spent more than a year urging school choice advocates to rewrite the language of their proposition.

The last straw for Wilson may have come when proponents made a secret admission to him. A source in the governor's office told us that Wilson pressed them repeatedly on how they thought private schools could possibly handle a potentially massive transfer of some of California's 5.3 million schoolchildren from public to private schools.

Finally, the answer came: The proposition's organizers acknowledged that private schools couldn't handle a large influx. "We asked the people at Excel — and we haven't used this publicly — and they said they think the maximum transferring that could possibly be handled is 9 percent over the next three to five years," the source said.

Nationwide support for school choice has been growing by leaps and bounds in the last decade. By the end of last year, legislation proposing some sort of school choice was introduced or pending in 34 states. Twenty-nine governors have indicated support for choice, up from 20 in 1991.

Wilson himself was on record repeatedly favoring school choice. But he held out his support until extracting the secret admission from supporters that private schools couldn't handle the load.

What finally clinched his opposition was a California Department of Finance estimate of the short-term economic impact on schools and the budget. The study concluded that the cumulative cost would be at least $1 billion over the first three years.

In an interview with us, Wilson hinted at his frustration with friends and allies pushing this measure.

"The great vulnerability is that it's front-loaded with costs," Wilson said. "If the state of California were not a government operating under the constraints of a balanced budget provision in its constitution — a business might be able to say, 'We will structure this offering knowing that we're going to lose money in the first five years. We'll take the risk so we can profit in the next 15.'"

Wilson's opposition proved a devastating loss to the "Yes on 174" people. It added to the widespread perception that anyone getting 25 or more children together and calling, for instance, a witch's coven a school, could qualify for money from the state. All in all, the result in the country's most populous state is not a representative test of the national issue of school choice. But then, Wilson was telling the organizers that all along.

CHARLEY REESE

We live with eternal danger of nuclear power

I have finally been convinced we should abandon the idea of generating electricity with nuclear power. It was one of the pioneers of developing nuclear power who convinced me.

Alvin Weinberg, long-time director of the Oak Ridge National Laboratory and active in nuclear development, wrote this in 1972, after enthusing over the benefits of nuclear power:

"The price that we must pay for this great boon is a vigilance that in many ways transcends what we have ever had to maintain: vigilance and care in operating these devices, and creation, and continuation into ETERNITY (emphasis mine) of a cadre or priesthood who understand the nuclear systems and who are prepared to guard the wastes. To those of us whose business it is to supply power here and now, such speculation about 100,000-year priesthoods must strike an eerie and unreal sound."

You better believe it does, doc. American industry is not too swift on quality control when it comes to manufacturing something simple like a lawn mower or an automobile. Furthermore, I have noticed the same worship of profits at utility companies one finds in other corporations, a worship that often calls for sacrifices not only of quality control but quality labor.

And you're saying this stuff is so dangerous we've got to develop a priesthood of superhuman, conscientious people who, for 100,000 years, will operate the systems safely and guard the wastes. And do this in an unstable country only 217 years old in an unstable world where no country or empire ever broke a thousand with revolutions and upheavals.

Hey, man, shut those suckers down now.

This nugget of information on eternal dangers of nuclear power comes from one of the most interesting books I've read in many years. It's called, "Living within Limits," and it's by Garrett Hardin, professor emeritus of human ecology at the University of California. (The publisher is Oxford University Press.)

Hardin has long been one of the favorite bugaboos of well-intentioned but not well-informed people on both the left and the right who depict him as a heartless scientist.

Hardin isn't heartless but he also isn't mindless and he addresses squarely questions many people simply would rather avoid. As Mark Twain observed a long time ago, truth is not always popular. Hardin, as a true scientist, knows that if we don't deal with truth rationally, truth will deal with us in a harsh and brutal manner.

The thrust of the book is to demolish the arguments of all the people opposed to population control. Among those are the science worshippers who have blind faith that technology can conquer all problems. Hardin cites some delightful examples of how wrong people have been in this belief.

Aside from the knowledge, there is great pleasure in the book, watching Hardin's mind with the exacting sharpness of a scalpel slice through the political, sociological and sentimentality that encrusts the subject of population control like barnacles on a Spanish doubloon. He has the numbers, the facts, and the logic and he throws them against his foes like Caesar threw his legions against the Gauls.

But the knowledge is also exciting, though not always cheerful. Did you know, for example, that in 1981 a committee of the Council on Environmental Quality concluded that "about 225 million acres of land in the United States are undergoing severe desertification — an area roughly the size of the 13 original states"?

Did you know there was a time when a man could walk from the Atlantic to the Indian Ocean across North Africa and never leave the shade of the trees?

For brave people who want to deal with reality, Hardin's book is a stimulating and much-needed tonic.

Using Guard as police would be big mistake

The National Guard should not be used to augment crime control efforts in the nation's capital.

Calling up the National Guard for anti-crime street duty is ill-advised because it is the wrong tool for the job. The National Guard is not trained in criminal investigation, routine traffic control or other jobs performed by trained police officers. The guard is trained for military operations, riot duty and crowd control without much regard to civil rights.

The precedent of using the Guard for extended periods on routine police work should be avoided. It would leave a strong impression that local police have lost control of crime in the nation's capital. There is no quick fix to criminal activity.

Rather than asking President Clinton call up the Guard, the may or should first fill 300 vacancies on the police force. If there isn't enough money in the city's budget for additional police, Congress should make the necessary appropriation.

The nation's capital should be safe for everyone, resident, members of Congress, government workers and the 19 million people who visit Washington each year. Putting National Guardsmen on the streets to fight crime would do great harm to this nation's democratic image. The world is all too familiar with the image of armed soldiers patrolling the streets of strife-torn nations around the world. Don't let it happen here.

In 1765, the Stamp Act went into effect, prompting stiff resistance from American colonists.

In 1861, Gen. George B. McClellan was made general-in-chief of the Union armies.

In 1870, the United States Weather Bureau made its first meteorological observations, using reports gathered by telegraph from 24 locations.

In 1954, the western African nation of Algeria began its rebellion against French rule.

LEWIS GRIZZARD

Finding crossword puzzle becomes paper chase

I would like to thank those who make such decisions at the newspaper I read every day, for making it possible to find the crossword puzzle again.

Somebody had decided to hide the crossword puzzle from the readers.

I don't know who that somebody is, but he or she must have been thinking, "Crossword puzzle workers like a challenge, so I'll give them another one. They will have to find the puzzle before they can attempt to solve it."

The crossword puzzle, for what seemed the longest time, had been located somewhere in classified. One day it was on page P-8. The next on page K-12. Once the newspaper didn't even have P and K sections. They had an A section for the hard news, a B for the soft news, like what's on television, C for the business news, and D for the sports news.

Now newspapers have sections out the wazoo. There are food sections, and automobile sections, and home and garden sections, and sections that don't have any names. They're just sections.

To get to sections P or K to find the crossword puzzle meant an ultimate paper chase. You had to go through all the previous sections, which meant littering the den floor with enough paper to choke a large hog.

And there's something else I've noticed about today's newspapers: Just because there's a P section, it doesn't necessarily mean it will follow the O section. It could follow the F section or even the J section, which is the bungee-jumping section.

I don't know why that is. I majored in journalism in college, but they never mentioned anything about how one day newspaper sections might not always appear in alphabetical order.

So there we were spending more time trying to locate the puzzle than to solve it.

But no more.

It was announced recently that the crossword puzzle of my newspaper will appear each day on page 2 of the Living Section, which, incidentally, often carries stories about what will kill you.

I began working crossword puzzles about three years ago. I would have started earlier, but that was before I became an early riser and had plenty of time on my hands.

Before I was a night person and often didn't arise until afternoon. Anybody who works crossword puzzles after noon is either a lounge lizard or a dope dealer.

Now that the crossword puzzle can be located again, it might mean there'll be more people taking up what I consider to be an intellectually rewarding hobby.

So, a few pointers for beginners:

In order to be a successful crossword puzzle solver you have got to know a lot about fowl. If the clue mentions a duck, and the word is made up of four letters, try teal.

The answer to the clue "quod — demonstrandum" is "erat." If the clue is a dash followed by "facto," the answer is "ipso." You should have known that already.

A French cleric is an "abbe"; hardens is "sets"; courage can be "sand" (as in "grit") and the clue "shortly" usually is "anon."

The way you learn all these answers is to keep the puzzle you did today and look at tomorrow's answers to fill in the spaces you didn't know.

Soon, you'll come to know the clue "plot" is "cabal."

And you will also know a lot of names of islands, Zola heroines, tenors, composers, Irish poets, state nicknames (New Mexico's is "Land of Enchantment," or "Sunshine"), ports, sailing terms, fish, and the answer to baseball's Slaughter, is "Enos." And don't forget "Ava," as in Ava Gardner, who will live forever in puzzleland.

That's about as far as I can go. Good luck and welcome to the crossword puzzle club. You'll be as addicted as the rest of us very soon and none of us will ever face looking for a puzzle in a paperstack again.

Skinhead faces 2nd trial in Arlington hate-slaying

FORT WORTH (AP) — A north Dallas skinhead whose probation sentence for a hate slaying rocked Tarrant County goes back to court Monday in a case some say parallels the notorious Rodney King beating in Los Angeles.

Like the acquittal of the police officers accused of beating King that prompted rioting in southern California, the probation sentence given Christopher Brosky in March drew intense, immediate reaction in Fort Worth.

Unlike the LA case, the Tarrant County reaction was peaceful. African-American leaders organized a protest march of 10,000 people through downtown, and state lawmakers passed a hate crime law.

Tarrant County District Attorney Tim Curry, whose office was criticized for its handling of the case, is taking Brosky to trial on a second set of charges. Because of publicity, the case has been moved to Galveston, where jury selection begins Monday.

Brosky, a 19-year-old avowed white supremacist, in March was found guilty of being an accomplice to the June 1991 murder of Donald Thomas, an Arlington man who prosecutors say was gunned down because he was black.

But he received only probation on the conviction, a sentence some jurors blamed on unclear sentencing instructions.

Black leaders are equating the new trial, to the King case, which went to trial a second time. Like that case, black leaders perceive Brosky's second trial as a chance to right a perceived miscarriage of justice.

"A lot is hanging in the balance," said the Rev. LeRoy Haynes of the African American Summit for Peace, Justice and Equality, a group planning to travel to Galveston to picket and draw local attention to the case.

"Probation for the murder of this man was a great injustice. It must be corrected."

Brosky can't be tried again on the same charges, since that would constitute double jeopardy. Instead, Brosky faces charges of organized crime, a first-degree felony punishable by up to life in prison, and conspiracy to commit murder, a second-degree felony with a maximum sentence of 20 years.

Christian haunted house depicts drugs, suicide, abortion

NEDERLAND (AP) — A Christian church says it doesn't need goblins and ghosts to scare local residents.

The way they see it, reality is spooky enough and if their version of a haunted house doesn't scare visitors straight into the arms of God, nothing will.

Take abortion for instance. Triumph Church's alternative haunted house has actors depicting 10 scenes of horror, including abortion, drug use, suicide, satanism. There's also the church's view of heaven and hell.

Visitors go through Hellhouse in sets of four, with a masked demon as their guide. In the abortion scene, a nurse assures a pregnant teen-ager that the fetus isn't really a baby.

Afterward, the nurse shows the girl a metal tray holding a baby doll with fake blood poured over it.

"One person said he didn't enjoy it," said O.J. Olivier, Triumph's youth minister. "Everybody else said they did. A lot of people came out crying their eyes out and said they wanted somebody to pray with them."

Olivier said about 1,000 people have gone

'This is real life ...
Overdosing. Suicide.
Alcoholism. Abortion.'

— Sylvia Olivier, church member through Hellhouse and about 60 actors are involved in the project.

Another room depicts a cocaine-addicted high school athlete who points a gun at his chest as the demonic tour guide eggs him on.

Then he shoots himself as visitors watch. "I don't want to comment about the suicide room," Olivier said when asked what reaction it had on people who saw it.

Olivier's wife, Sylvia, also has worked on the youth group project. "This is real life," Mrs. Olivier said. "Overdosing. Suicide. Alcoholism. Abortion. Do you know how many babies are killed every day? It's a controversial subject."

Parental supervision is advised, and children younger than 14 may attend only with parents or guardians, Mrs. Olivier said.

"If you turn on the TV, you can see a lot more horror," she said. "A 6-year-old can see sex acts or violence on television. What we want to do is prevent things from happening to our young people."

Visitors enter the seventh room through a coffin standing on end, which is latched shut for a moment. Each person is closed in their coffin, which leads to hell. There, Satan orders souls to kneel before him.

Scenes eight, nine and 10 show Christ being beaten by a Roman soldier, the crucifixion and finally an angelic Christ who tells visitors it's time to change their lives and accept him as their savior.

When visitors exit, they meet Triumph members waiting to talk with them.

"We are not doing counseling," Mrs. Olivier said. "We pray with them and show them the word of God." The idea of Hellhouse started with a Dallas pastor who developed a similar project, she said.

Nederland, just south of Beaumont, is about 90 miles east of Houston.

State has no formal rehab programs for convicted rapists

HOUSTON (AP) — Although one in six inmates is a sex offender, the Texas prison system has no formal treatment programs designed for rapists, officials say.

Of the 7,966 inmates now doing time for sex offenses, half are convicted rapists. But the only two treatment programs for sex offenders in the entire prison system are targeted nearly exclusively for men who molest children.

Paroled rapist Lowell D. Howell, whom police have named a suspect in a string of sexual assaults in eastern Harris County, apparently never got sex-offender counseling while in prison.

Officials say that's not surprising.

No one forced Howell to get therapy while he was in prison on a pair of sexual assault convictions. The 34-year-old Harris County resident was released from the penitentiary 15 months ago.

He had served about eight years of a 23-year sentence for two 1984 crimes, an aggravated sexual assault with a deadly weapon and breaking into a home with the intent to commit a sexual assault, said parole spokesman Dan

Guerra, in Austin.

After his release, Howell was ordered to undergo psychiatric treatment and report to his parole officer at least four times a month, Guerra said.

County sheriff's detectives have said Howell may be responsible for attacks on six other women in the Crosby and Baytown areas. At least one victim in those attacks has positively identified him as the man who attacked her, they said.

The only way for adults who rape other adults to get help for their problems is to voluntarily seek sessions with some of the prison system's 214 psychologists and psychiatrists, said prisons spokesman Charles Brown, in Huntsville.

The state's Sex Offender Treatment Program, which gives intensive therapy to 200 inmates at three Southeast Texas prison units, is composed entirely of child molesters, said program coordinator Judy O'Brien, in Sugar Land.

Mitzi Vorachek, who often sees the ravages of rape as director of community education for the Houston Area Women's Center, said her organization supports intensive therapy for inmates who attack women.

She says those who sexually attack women are among the most frequent to return to prison for the same crime.

"A rapist doesn't rape once and stop," Ms. Vorachek said. "Sending them to prison doesn't deter it. And paroling them early certainly doesn't deter it."

"Clearly, without any therapy, if they are released, they're going to repeat," she said. "It's a lose-lose situation."

To be cured, rapists must learn to feel remorse, empathize with victims, learn to control their violent natures and manage their sexual fantasies, said Robert J. McLaughlin, a Houston psychologist who works with youth sex offenders.

"In an ideal world, we would provide a whole therapeutic milieu for people with this degree of pathology and propensity for violent attacks," McLaughlin said. "That would require an extremely extensive and long-term process for adults."

While some observers say convicted rapists like Howell should be forced to undergo treatment while behind bars, McLaughlin said it is unclear whether such a captive audience would be receptive to treatment.

"It's not very likely you'll get definitive answers from anyone who really knows anything about it," McLaughlin said.

Debate heats up over Richardson sex education curriculum

RICHARDSON (AP) — When the Richardson school board has its regular meeting Monday night, sex will be the topic of conversation.

More than 400 people are expected to attend the meeting to vote on a controversial sex education curriculum.

A heated debate has raged in Richardson's school district for weeks. One side supports the administration's proposed "abstinence-based" policy. Others prefer "directive abstinence-based" sex education.

Both policies, one written by administrators and the other by trustee Jim Herblin, stress abstinence as the only safe means to prevent pregnancy and sexually transmitted diseases.

But the administration's policy also allows discussions of "risk-reduction methods" such as contraceptives. Herblin says the administration's policy is "too loose," so he "felt it was imperative to draft a policy as an alternative to look at."

Herblin said his main complaint is that the administration's policy makes abstinence a choice.

"With my policy, abstinence is

U.S. Senate's first female chef wins sexual harassment case

AUSTIN (AP) — For advocates of women in the workplace, Susan Ochoa of Austin is an unsung hero.

Ms. Ochoa, the U.S. Senate's first female chef, endured years of sexual innuendo and unwanted physical contact from a male supervisor before she won an undisclosed monetary settlement, a written formal apology and a promise that she will not face retaliation from her male colleagues.

Hers was the first sexual harassment case to be settled under the Office of Senate Fair Employment Practices. The office was created after complaints that civil rights legislation relating to women and other minorities did not extend to employees of Congress.

According to an unsolicited survey conducted by the Washington Post survey after allegations of sexual harassment dominated Supreme Court Justice Clarence Thomas' confirmation hearings, one of every three women on Capitol Hill has been sexually harassed.

Ms. Ochoa was hired to help prepare meals for the U.S. Senate and its guests in February 1990. Soon, she was sent to culinary school in New York City.

Ms. Ochoa said the sexual harassment began after her promotion to chef. Ella Bennett, a kitchen worker and friend, endured the same treatment and sued with Ms. Ochoa. Ms. Bennett was part of the settlement.

"It started off simple enough, like, 'Oh, lets go have a drink,' or, 'Oh, you're pretty,'" Ms. Ochoa said. "Then, he just started getting mean."

Racial slurs and sexual innuendo followed. Then the harassment turned physical.

One night, Ms. Ochoa recalls, the man had been drinking. "He's a big guy. He just picked (Ella) up by the waist. She was wearing a dress. He picked her up, turned her upside down and put her in an industrial-sized trash can.

"We would huddle up in the bathroom and cry, because I was so proud of being the first woman chef and I was so proud to work there. And here was this man and he wanted to take it all away."

Ms. Ochoa and Ms. Bennett complained to the restaurant managers, who, like the Senate chefs and the rest of the kitchen workers, are employees of the architect of the Capitol.

The managers suggested that the women behave differently. So they decided to find a lawyer. Sharon Cummings, whose firm specializes in employment issues, including sexual harassment, took their case.

"They were both hard-working, dedicated, committed workers who loved working for the U.S. Senate restaurant and were committed to their jobs and their families," Ms. Cummings said of the two women.

Sniper kills 2, injures 5 before home burns

EL CAJON, Calif. (AP) — A sniper shooting from a second-floor apartment Saturday killed a woman and a child and wounded five other people, including a 2-year-old, before his apartment went up in flames.

Police identified the gunman as Gordon Newman, 62, a long-time resident who neighbors said despised children. His body was found inside the apartment after the fire. His cause of death was not known.

"We know that he was a reclusive-type individual who didn't like noise, didn't like people around him," police Lt. Bill McClurg said.

Shots rang out in the working-class neighborhood intermittently for about an hour as the gunman fired on people below. Those killed were a woman whose body was found in a church parking lot below the sniper's window, and a 9-year-old girl, whose mother was wounded.

As the gunman was shooting, neighbors and firefighters furiously attended to a wounded child who lay in the street with a bullet wound.

The shootings occurred in the same city where two weeks ago James M. Buquet, 19, shot up a crowded health club, killing three women. Buquet also shot a man outside the health club before killing himself.

"Lightning usually doesn't strike twice, but this time it did," said Jack Smith, chief of police in the city 15 miles north-east of San Diego. "You think this can't happen in your community, but it can happen in any community."

Two victims were being treated at Children's Hospital. Lana Nguyen, 12, was in fair condition with a gunshot wound to the back. Daniel Imbimbo, 2, was in critical condition after being shot in the right eye. The two other wounded victims were treated at hospitals and released.

Authorities couldn't immediately say what caused the fire that ended the siege.

River Phoenix collapses, dies at 23

LOS ANGELES (AP) — River Phoenix, whose natural intensity as a teen-age actor in the 1986 film "Stand by Me" launched his career, collapsed outside a nightclub early Sunday and died. He was 23.

Phoenix

Friends reported that Phoenix was "acting strange" as he left the Viper Room in West Hollywood about 1 a.m., said sheriff's Deputy Diane Hecht. She didn't elaborate.

Paramedics were called when the actor collapsed and he was rushed to Cedars Sinai Medical Center. He was pronounced dead shortly before 2 a.m.

"At this time the cause of death is under investigation. The exact cause will be determined at autopsy by the coroner," Hecht said.

The autopsy will probably be performed Monday, she said. Sheriff's detectives were handling the case, as a matter of routine, but "it's not a homicide investigation at this time," Hecht said.

Phoenix came from an unusual family and spent much of his childhood on the move, living in Oregon, Mexico, Puerto Rico, South America and Florida.

His parents had met while hitchhiking and named their son "River" after the river of life in Herman Hesse's "Siddhartha."

Born in Madras, Ore., on Aug. 24, 1970, Phoenix spent most of his childhood in Venezuela with his siblings, Rain, Leaf, Liberty and Summer, while his parents, John and Arlynn Phoenix, became missionaries for Children of God.

Study: Extract could conquer alcohol craving

WASHINGTON (AP) — Kudzu, an imported nuisance weed that often chokes trees in Southern forests, may contain extracts that conquer the craving for alcohol, a study shows.

Researchers at Harvard Medical School, intrigued by the ancient Chinese use of the kudzu roots to treat alcoholism, tested compounds from the plant on a group of hard-drinking hamsters and found that the rodents voluntarily went on the wagon.

Dr. Bert L. Vallee of the Harvard Medical School said the kudzu extract "has been used widely in China and Japan for centuries to treat alcoholism. You can buy the stuff in pill form over the counter in Japan and China."

Vallee and his colleague, Wing-Ming Keung, collected information about the use of kudzu from doctors in Asia and found that since about 200 A.D. it has been a treatment to suppress alcohol consumption.

"They make a concoction of it and drink it as tea," said Vallee.

To test its effect on alcohol craving, the researchers used an unusual animal called the Syrian golden hamsters. Vallee said this animal has the unique characteristic of having a huge appetite and capacity for alcohol.

"These hamsters will drink alcohol in preference to water," he said. "It had not been previously appreciated that it prefers alcohol as much as it does."

In a study to be published Monday in the Proceedings of the National Academy of Sciences, Vallee and Keung report that if given the choice, the golden hamster will develop an alcohol consumption rate that, if scaled up to human size, would be about 40 times greater than the capacity of the typical human drunk.

This was established by giving caged hamsters the side-by-side choice of drinking from a dish of pure water or from a dish that contained a 15 percent solution of alcohol and water. The hamsters preferred the cocktail and eventually would choose to ignore the plain water.

Vallee said the researchers identified the active ingredient in kudzu as a compound called daidzin. This was synthesized and then injected into 71 of the hamsters.

The rodents immediately cut back on their alcohol consumption.

"The effect was that it reduced the alcohol intake by more than 50 percent," said Vallee.

Another extract from kudzu, called daidzein, had a similar effect.

Control animals received injections of other extracts. Their alcohol craving was undiminished.

The kudzu compounds also were tested against approved drugs now commonly used to blunt the appetite for drink in human alcoholics. Vallee said the kudzu products worked better.

Flattery works

HOUSTON — Not getting enough raises or good assignments at work? Maybe you're not kissing up to your boss enough.

A professor scientifically studied the art of brown-nosing and discovered what most of us had pretty much figured anyway — it works.

"It's the Eddie Haskell Syndrome," said Ron Deluga, professor of psychology at Bryant College in Rhode Island.

Haskell, the character on the old television show Leave It to Beaver, was the ultimate bootlicker. Constantly getting the Cleaver boys in trouble, Haskell was relentlessly trying to curry favor with Mrs. Cleaver, complimenting her outfits and cooking.

Mrs. Cleaver saw right through Eddie's big, phony smile but she did invite him to dinner — to sample that good home cooking he raved about.

Use a little less oil with your boss and you have a better chance at winning promotions or getting the inside track on juicy gossip. As part of his study, Deluga queried 152 pairs of subordinates and bosses to gauge whether the underlings were part of the "in" group (the teacher's pets) or "out" crowd (those who just do their jobs).

Child support withholdings

On Jan. 1, 1994, a quiet revolution will be won in the way Americans pay child support. On that day, federal law will require virtually all new child-support awards to be withheld from the paychecks of absent parents.

It is a momentous change, at least on the face of it. From that day on, Americans can regard child support in the same light as taxes and health insurance — hidden payments that don't come out of anyone's wallet because they never make it that far.

But like a lot of momentous changes, especially those dreamed up in Washington, this one is neither as simple nor as straightforward as it might seem.

To begin with, there won't be any change in some states because they've required withholding of child-support payments for years. Other states will probably miss the federal deadline, which has been lurking in the statute books since the Family Support Act was enacted in 1988.

"It's a very fluid situation right now," said Craig Hathaway, a senior policy specialist at the federal Office of Child Support Enforcement. Translation: States are still scrambling to try to comply with the federal rules, and some don't have a prayer of making it on time.

Raider myth

Despite claims to the contrary, corporate takeover strategists do little to weed out ineffective managers of companies they acquire, a new study shows. The findings in the current issue of the Academy of Management Journal also suggest that, in many cases, takeover artists are attracted to companies that already have eliminated inefficient management.

Study authors James P. Walsh of the University of Michigan and Rita D. Kosnik of Trinity University based these conclusions on an analysis of management turnover at 59 corporations challenged between 1979 and 1983 by a number of high-profile corporate raiders, ranging from Carl Icahn to Victor Posner.

Shopping for a doctor

Consumers are baffled by health-care changes

By Vivian Marino
AP Business Writer

NEW YORK — Millions of Americans now are confronting a decision that could carry profound emotional and financial consequences: They must enroll in an employer-sponsored health plan.

For some, it will merely mean reaffirming their current choice of doctors. But for others, it will mean deciding on a network of unfamiliar physicians from a list provided by their boss, learning a new and restrictive set of rules and terminology, and venturing outside the system at enormous added expense.

"It's not going to be easy," said Ron Pollack, executive director of Families USA, a health-care reform lobby group. "There is no systematic process that exists today for figuring out which are good plans or bad plans. People have to rely on word of mouth."

An increasing number of people are faced with this predicament as corporate America shifts more of the financial burden for spiraling medical care costs to its workers.

Even well-insured employees of large companies are getting notified that more money will be drained from their pockets. Many, for example, must now pay higher deductibles, or the amount of money an insured person pays first before the insurance company will start picking up the balance.

Perhaps most significant is that a growing number of companies are embracing Health Maintenance Organizations, or HMOs, which provide patients a limited number of medical services at a fixed fee, emphasize preventive care, cut paperwork and contain costs. About 600 HMOs now do business around the country.

"The whole premise of health-care reform is that there will be a movement toward HMOs," said Tom Beauregard, a health-care consultant with Hewitt Associates, which advises companies on employee benefits.

Managed-care plans already outnumber the traditional fee-for-service, or indemnity plans, which allow individuals to see any doctor they choose, pay for the service and receive at least partial reimbursement.

A recent survey by Foster Higgins, another employee-benefits consultant, found 77 percent of the 2,500 employers it questioned offered at least one managed care option last year. Thirty percent did away with the indemnity plans, while 23 percent provided indemnity plans only, down from 27 percent in 1991, the survey showed.

John Erb, a consultant in the New York office of Foster Higgins, says a number of employers are selecting hybrid HMOs that also retain limited out-of-network benefits, known as preferred provider organizations, or PPOs, and point-of-service, or POS, plans. The tradeoff, though, is that employees must pick up more of the tab for going outside the system.

While it's important to understand how managed care plans work, only a limited amount of information is available right now to consumers. Even if they don't like what they hear, most people have little recourse since buying coverage on their own can be prohibitively expensive.

Staying afloat in the sea of mutual funds

By Sarah Mahoney

Picking a mutual fund keeps getting more complicated. As funds multiply, so do the publications and services rating them. Investors navigating the sea of stars, arrows and letter grades can quickly lose their bearings.

Say you've decided on a balanced fund and want to check out Pax World. It rated three upward arrows from Business Week earlier this year — the magazine's highest accolade. Sounds good so far. Kiplinger's gave the same fund an "A" for its performance in down markets, but slapped a distressing "F" on its performance in up markets.

Not confused yet? Forbes hit Pax with a "C" for down-market performance and a "D" for up.

And this only scratches the surface. Data companies, on-line services and newsletters galore rank funds. As with

Zero-coupon bond fees

Q. Can zero-coupon bonds be purchased privately without cost or must they be purchased through a broker?

—Edward Carolan, Yonkers

A. To buy zero-coupon bonds, whether you choose corporates, municipals or Treasury bonds stripped of coupons, you have to use the services of a brokerage firm or bank. Commissions are usually no more than $50, with some brokers charging no fee at all on transactions of more than 10 bonds.

"An alternative to zero-coupon bonds is a mutual fund that has a portfolio structured to mimic a zero-coupon bond," said John Markese, president of the American Association of Individual Investors. As one example, he said, "the Benham Target Maturities Trusts with different maturities — five-year intervals out to the year 2020 — offer, in effect, a government zero-coupon bond as a mutual fund."

A widow's rights

Q. I recently found out about a Social Security provision under which a widow can collect at age 60 if her husband was collecting benefits, if she is unemployed. Are the benefits I lost retroactive?

—Alice Murray, Manhattan

A. A widow is eligible for survivor benefits on the Social Security record of her deceased husband, as long as he was fully insured under Social Security at the time of his death and she was married to him for at least nine months. This duration-of-marriage requirement is waived if the death was accidental or occurred while the deceased was serving on active duty in the armed forces.

However, an application for a widow's benefits has no retroactivity. The rule is that it becomes effective in the month it is received by the Social Security Administration.

INVESTORS' GUIDE

Annual reporting of accrued bond interest

By Bill Doyle

Q: My husband and I purchased several $10,000 face value Series EE U.S. savings bonds in February. Rather than defer income tax on the interest building up on the bonds until we cash them, we intend to report that interest on our annual income tax returns.

Doyle

Where can we learn the correct amount of accrued interest each year?

A: There are two handy sources.

The first is a sheet of redemption tables for Series E bonds and Series EE bonds. It's available free from district savings bond offices and the Bureau of the Public Debt, Parkersburg, WV 26106-1328. Many banks give that sheet to customers.

You can find more detailed information in table of redemption value booklets, each covering six months, sold by the Superintendent of Documents, U.S. Government Printing Office, Washington, DC 20402. The E bond booklet now costs $2.25; the EE version $1. The price is subject to change.

Although the vast majority of savings bond owners much prefer to put off paying federal income tax on E and EE bond interest until the bonds are redeemed, no rule prevents you from reporting that interest on your annual returns and paying tax as you go along.

If you go ahead with your annual reporting plan, hang on to the returns on which you report accrued savings bond interest, just in case the Internal Revenue Service questions whether you previously paid tax on that interest.

When you redeem an E or EE bond, you receive a Form 1099-INT listing the interest you collected. A copy goes to the IRS.

On the tax return you file for that year, report the full amount on the 1099 as interest. On a separate line, subtract the previously reported savings bond interest.

That should keep the revenue officers off your back. But the 1099 might cause your return to be flagged, so that you will need those previous returns.

Q: A big selling point for Series E and EE bonds has always been the ability to defer paying income tax on the interest building up on them.

Why would anyone in his right mind want to pay tax on that interest before he absolutely has to? It would take an awfully dumb man to do that.

A: There are a number of situations in which it is advantageous to report and pay federal income tax on E and EE bond interest.

When the owner of savings bonds expects his or her income -- and income tax bracket -- to be higher in the years ahead, he or she can save tax dollars by reporting E and EE bond interest on annual returns.

Here are a few examples: The bond owner could be out of work. The bonds might be owned by a child. Medical expenses and other deductions might reduce or even eliminate "taxable" income, even though the family has sufficient money coming in.

Q: How do I change from deferral to annual reporting of accrued E and EE bond interest?

A: On your 1993 federal income tax return, report all the interest that has built up on all your Es and EEs through the end of this year. In each future year, report the interest accruing that year -- including interest on any newly purchased bonds.

Things get more complicated if you switch from annual reporting to the deferral method. In that case, you must fill out IRS Form 3115 and attach it to the return filed for the year in which the change is made. On the top of Form 3115, write "Filed Under Rev. Proc. 89-46." On that form, you must identify the bonds by serial number.

Also, when you switch from annual reporting to the deferral method, you are required to continue using the deferral method for at least five years.

HEALTH: Plan won't reveal doctors' pasts

left with two choices essentially: Take what's given you or pay for it yourself," said Pollack.

Still, each plan is only as good as its participating doctors. The selection of physicians within a network is one area where consumers do have some control, since a number of plans require members to pick primary-care physicians who act as "gatekeepers" in managing overall care.

The selection process boils down to convenience and credentials. It's important to know, for instance, if a doctor is based nearby, if office hours are compatible to your schedule, how long it takes to get an appointment, or if there are accessible backup physicians.

Your employer's health care plan can answer many of these questions. It also can tell you where doctors were trained and educated, the hospitals where they can work, and whether they are board certified, which means they

ABCs of HMOs, PPOs

HEALTH MAINTENANCE ORGANIZATIONS, or HMOs: A partnership of doctors, hospitals and insurers that supply medical care to members at a fixed price.

PREFERRED PROVIDER ORGANIZATIONS, or PPOs: A network of health-care providers created by employers and insurers who negotiate prices. The plan pays more if a patient goes to a "preferred" doctor or hospital, less if the patient goes outside the network.

POINT OF SERVICE, or POS: A managed care plan in which a participant's access to a network of doctors is controlled by a primary-care physician. Like a PPO, participants retain the option to seek care outside the network but at reduced coverage levels.

FREE FOR SERVICE: Also known as an indemnity plan, the traditional system in which patients or insurers are billed by physicians and hospitals for each service rendered.

have undergone extra training in specialized fields.

What the plan won't usually tell you is how doctors are compensated for services -- are they receiving set monthly payments per patient regardless of whether they see someone, known as "capitation," or are they receiving a percentage of their usual fee.

The plan also won't disclose whether participating doctors have any black marks on their records. Medical boards in every state except Arkansas and South Dakota do provide the names of the doctors who have been sanctioned.

Susan Pisano, a spokeswoman for the Group Health Association of America, a trade group for the managed-care industry, says health plan operators already have done all the investigating.

"If you join an HMO, the doctors that are part of the network have gone through extensive background checks," she said. "People also need to understand one really important thing: If you don't like the doctor you can switch."

But for some people it's not always easy, especially for those who have developed a longstanding relationship with a particular doctor.

Vince Passaro, 36, an employee of Adelphi University in Garden City, N.Y., was elated to learn that his family doctor, children's pediatrician and local pharmacy were participating in his wife Beth's new company health plan.

But when each dropped out following contractual changes in the plan and after a nightmarish experience with the HMO he joined at his job as a backup, Passaro decided to switch back to his old doctors and work outside the network.

"What's happening is more lower-quality care is being made available," Passaro said. For him, the result was a leap in out-of-pocket medical expenses, straining the family's budget.

"One of our kids told us at dinner time that he had a pain in his tooth. My wife and I just looked at each other and said, 'Uh oh.'"

Doctors have had to make their own adjustments, too. Many feel the shift toward managed care demeans their role and places more medical decision-making in the hands of accountants while adding paperwork.

FUNDS: Never try to time the market

(From 1D)

Pax, the data may vary greatly, paralyzing novice investors.

It's not that the information is unreliable. Each source just filters funds through a different data screen. Some factor risk into their ratings; others take sales loads and expenses into consideration.

For the Pax ratings, Business Week looked at performance over 5 years, Kiplinger's over 3 years and Forbes over 13 years. All took risk into account in some form, and Forbes included expense ratios in its calculation.

"Just as there's no one best fund, there's no one best rating service," said L. Erick Kanter, vice president of the Investment Co. Institute in Washington, a trade group for the mutual fund industry.

So what's an investor to do? First, don't place too much emphasis on the latest grades for short-term performance, like one quarter or even one year. Ratings that look at long-term track records are more useful.

Then decide on an approach to investing, and spend accordingly. If you're among the millions of mutual fund investors bored senseless by financial topics, don't torture yourself.

Many people pay hundreds of dollars for professional advice they don't need and don't use. "If you have a $10,000 portfolio, and buy a subscription for $100, you have to ask yourself, will that newsletter improve your return by 1 percent?" said Brian Mattes, a vice president of the Vanguard Group of Valley Forge, Pa.

Some of the best information can be obtained at no cost. Public and university libraries are a good source, and will certainly have the latest rankings from magazines and newspapers. If your library's offerings are skimpy, ask it to buy or borrow an exhaustive guide, like Morningstar's Mutual Fund Values or CDA/Weisenberger's Investment Companies Service, both $395 a year, or the just introduced Value Line Mutual Fund Survey, priced at $295.

Other options for determined cheapskates are the discount broker Charles Schwab and the fund behemoth Fidelity Investments. Schwab publishes a quarterly Mutual Funds Performance Guide, based on Morningstar data, available for the asking at any of its offices. Fidelity offers free of charge The Performance Directory, which ranks 200 funds in its no-fee program, using data from Lipper Analytical Services.

If you would like to follow the market more closely, a newsletter may help. "Just because Money writes up the fund now doesn't mean it'll run an article in six months telling you it's time to sell that fund," said Sheldon Jacobs, editor of The No-Load Fund Investor and a veteran of the data wars. "I see newsletters as being between ad hoc advice from magazines and a personal adviser, which would cost heavy fees."

After amassing some fund rankings, look beyond the letter grades and stars. Experts offered these pointers for sorting out the most useful information.

Focus on five-year numbers. Any fund can be hot for a year or two. But if you're planning on holding a fund for any length of time, make sure you're using a rank based on the far more meaningful three- and five-year data. Ten-year performance records can also be informative, but if you ignore everything else, "you'll exclude 60 percent of the funds out there," Jacobs said.

Don't try to time the market. Letter grades for performance in up and down markets are often used by people who think they have an inkling about what lies ahead. "Market timers rarely, in my estimation, make a lot of money," said Luther E. Tyson, president of Pax World Fund.

Check up on the managers. Many guides tell you how long a fund's manager has been in place, but none factor that into their rankings. "Make sure that the person has been there for at least five years so you have a good feel for his or her track record," said Jeffrey Dunham, president of Dunham & Associates Investment Counsel, San Diego. "Maybe once a year, check to see if the same person is managing -- if not, the performance is going to change."

Use a guide that evaluates risk. Almost everyone understands that certain types of funds -- precious metals, for example, or aggressive growth funds -- are by definition riskier than others. But even funds in "safer" categories may carry relatively high risk, and vice versa. "Often, the funds that are the most volatile can get the best ranking," said Kanter of the trade group.

Finally, remember the standard Wall Street disclaimer: past performance does not necessarily indicate future results. The exception tends to be the worst funds, which seldom rise from the cellar.

Returns shrink on passbook savings

Associated Press

NEW YORK — While yields on just about all types of investments have declined drastically in the 1990s, few have gone to the extremes reached by the lowly passbook savings account.

At some banks in the Northeast these days, rates paid on passbook savings have fallen to as little as 1.4 percent. At that level, $1,000 in savings earns $1.17 a month, before taxes.

The national average passbook yield, according to Bank Rate Monitor, has dwindled to 2.29 percent, compared to 2.46 percent last spring and more than 5 percent as recently as 1986.

Statement savings accounts, which operate along the same lines but without the traditional passbook to record transactions, stand at 2.36 percent.

Returns on money-market deposit accounts, which were introduced in the early 1980s to give banks a means of competing more directly with money-market mutual funds, are down to 2.37 percent.

"If you still have money in a passbook account, it's time to move it," asserts the newsletter 100 Highest Yields, based in North Palm Beach, Fla.

But many small savers show no inclination to budge. The Federal Reserve reports upwards of $1.2 trillion in savings deposits -- about $50 billion more than at this same time a year ago.

Part of this is plainly the result of inertia, or the one-of-these-days-we've-got-to-get-organized school of money management. Perhaps it also reflects what professional financial planners lament as "financial illiteracy."

Yet it also seems evident that a lot of money remains in savings accounts by choice. Passbook savers may care much less about what their money earns than they do about convenience, safety and a sense of familiarity.

Newest closed-end fund angle: Rights

By Chet Currier

AP Business Writer

NEW YORK — If you venture into the world of closed-end investment funds these days, chances are good that you will encounter a proposition known as a rights offering.

In the last two years these deals, which have a long history in Europe but have seldom been employed in the United States, have suddenly become popular in at least this one corner of American finance.

"Rights offerings by closed-end funds have evolved like frequent flier programs in the airline industry," observe Mariana Bush and Lisa Wei, analysts at Kemper Securities Inc. in Chicago.

"As soon as some funds started offering rights, many other funds jumped on the bandwagon. Now that managers have seen the benefits of additional assets, we see no end in sight to rights offerings."

By their reckoning, 29 rights offerings were launched by closed-end funds in the first nine months of this year, up from 18 in 1992 and just three in 1991.

Rights are documents issued to the shareholders of a fund inviting them to buy additional shares, usually at a discount to the prevailing market price.

They wouldn't make sense for a standard open-ended mutual fund, since such a fund already stands ready at all times to sell new shares to investors at a price determined by the current net asset value.

But it's a different story at closed-end funds, which operate with a set number of shares that trade in the open market just like the stock of an industrial company.

Navy releases reports on sinking of U.S. subs

WASHINGTON (AP) — Buried deep in a once-secret Navy report is this chilling account of how the end came for a U.S. submarine and its 99 men:

"The torpedo was released from the tube, became fully armed, and sought its nearest target, Scorpion."

The newly declassified report says the nuclear-powered submarine USS Scorpion, which sank mysteriously in May 1968, probably went down after the torpedo's propulsion motor started up inadvertently while in a dry tube.

The report said that while the exact cause of the accident may never be known for certain, the most likely scenario went something like this:

The crew decided to jettison the torpedo apparently because the crew had done so successfully in a similar situation a year earlier. But once in the sea, the torpedo turned on the sub.

The result was an enormous explosion that tore the Scorpion into two sections.

The torpedo was armed with a non-nuclear high explosive.

The forward hull section, including the torpedo room and most of the operations compartment, is situated in a trench on the Atlantic Ocean floor about 10,000 feet below the surface about 400 miles southwest of the Azores off the coast of Portugal.

The rear hull section, including the nuclear reactor compartment and engine room, is in a separate trench that was formed by the impact of the hull with the ocean floor.

The Scorpion is one of only two nuclear-powered submarines ever lost by the Navy. The other was the USS Thresher, which sank in 1963 off the U.S. East Coast, killing 129 men on board.

A separate Navy report released this week said that a faulty "silver-braze" piping joint is one of the prime suspects in the Thresher's sinking.

The faulty joints had nearly caused two other submarines to sink and therefore, there should have been a thorough investigation beforehand by all responsible for Thresher's safety, the report said.

Despite that finding, the report said the loss of the Thresher was not caused by the "intent, fault, negligence or inefficiency" of anyone in the Navy or at the Portsmouth Naval Shipyard, where Thresher was built and serviced just before her final voyage.

Thresher, described by one admiral as "without question the most advanced operational attack submarine in the world," was launched from the yard, which is in Kittery, Maine, in 1960. Next came tests, an extended "shakedown" cruise, and nine months back at the yard for refitting and repairs.

Navy reports on the circumstances and probable causes of both accidents were prepared in the months following each accident, but were classified secret and withheld from the public.

The Navy also declassified photographs and videotape taken during 1986 expeditions to the Scorpion and Thresher accident sites by submersibles of the Woods Hole Oceanographic Institute.

The declassified documents were first reported Monday by the Chicago Tribune.

The Navy said its studies indicated that little radioactive material had leaked from the reactors on the Thresher or the Scorpion or from the Scorpion's nuclear-armed torpedoes.

The Navy investigators concluded that the Thresher sank as a result of a piping failure.

The Scorpion investigation considered a wide variety of possible causes, including sabotage, fire, collision with a surface ship or submarine. Each was considered improbable. It also determined that there were no known Soviet or East Bloc surface warships, submarines or aircraft within 200 miles of Scorpion's last reported position.

The report said "there is still no incontrovertible proof of the exact cause" of the accident, but that the torpedo scenario was the most plausible.

Parody video rocks police department

By Phillip Matier
Andrew Ross

N.Y. Times News Service

SAN FRANCISCO — The Police Department, still reeling from its year-long sexual soap opera, has been hit with another whammy: a "Lifestyles of the Poor and Lazy" video that was jokingly shown as a training film at Potrero Station.

The video, which is now under lock and key at police headquarters, is described by those who have seen it as a police officer's crude takeoff on the TV show "Lifestyles of the Rich and Famous."

Instead of yachts and mansions, the homemade video features shots of the city's crime-ridden housing projects.

The five-minute video reportedly contains a narrative poking fun at both the project dwellers and the cops — parodying the style of Robin Leach, the "Lifestyles" gush-gush British host.

Black police officers and black politicians are disturbed about the film.

"I've been a cop for 15 years and I had never seen anything like it, and I've seen a lot," said Billy Smith, a black officer who complained after seeing the video May 28 at Potrero Station.

Potrero Station Captain Tim Hetrich said the video was made by a veteran Asian officer with a good record and a reputation as the station house cut-up.

"He wasn't being Cecil B. DeMille, he was making a little joke for the guys at work," said Hetrich.

The five-minute video reportedly contains a narrative poking fun at both the project dwellers and the cops — parodying the style of Robin Leach, the "Lifestyles" gush-gush British host.

The officer told him the "lazy" reference was to the officers in his station, Hetrich said. Apparently, a portion of the video was spoofing a Potrero officer who showed up late for work the day of the Rodney King riots in April last year.

According to Hetrich, the video's maker previewed the film before a pair of black officers, who "thought it was funny."

But when the film was shown at roll call early the next morning, the trouble began.

An officer complained, and the video was seized and whisked to Deputy Chief Frank Reed, who in turn handed it over to the unit that investigates racial and sexual harassment cases within the department.

After viewing the video, the unit determined that although it was in bad taste, the film was not racially demeaning.

Nevertheless, departmental charges are being drawn up against the officer who shot the video from his police car and the sergeant who allowed it to be shown at the station.

"There was no intention on anyone's part to be disrespectful or malicious. It was just one of those things that shouldn't have happened in the first place, but it did," Hetrich said.

Others disagree. "It was definitely degrading, and it was definitely a slap in the face," said Smith, who saw the video.

The real shock for Smith, however, was his fellow officers' reaction to the video as it played at the Potrero station.

"They were laughing," Smith said.

Con Johnson, president of the predominantly black Officers for Justice, said he was amazed that such a film would be shown in this day and age — even as a joke.

"This is just an indication of how far we still have to go both with the Police Department and with the community," Johnson said.

Supervisor Willie Kennedy, the lone black member of the Board of Supervisors, is also upset. She heard about the video from black officers who recently met with her to discuss the fact that no black officers passed the lieutenant promotions exam.

"This is ridiculous; (the department) ought to be disgusted," said Kennedy, who on Monday requested that the board be shown the video.

Deputy Chief Reed said there is little chance that Kennedy will get her wish anytime soon, because charges are about to be filed in the case.

The nature of those charges has yet to be determined, but Chief Tony Ribera's office said the video's maker will probably be charged with improper use of an officer's time.

The "Lifestyles of the Poor and Lazy" video is the latest chapter for a police department that has become increasingly notorious for its antics, dating back to the 1984 firing of two cops for hiring a prostitute to perform at a police graduation party in the basement of the Rathskeller Restaurant in Polk Gulch.

Earlier this month, police officer Joanne Welsh filed a federal lawsuit charging that her boss, Ribera, tried to kiss and grab her when they worked together — charges that Ribera denies. Her charges were investigated earlier this year by the Police Commission and dismissed.

As for why it took nearly five months to consider bringing charges over the "Poor and Lazy" video, Ribera spokesman David Ambrose said: "Management control spent a lot of its time with the 101 California (massacre) case, and this appeared to be a one-time incident and not an ongoing pattern of misconduct that needed urgent and immediate attention."

$200 phone lets consumers bank, shop from home

N.Y. Times News Service

The telephone industry, in its fever pitch to build the information superhighway, is hoping to get more mileage from the phone itself.

Last Wednesday, U S Order of Herndon, Va., in partnership with companies including Bell Atlantic Corp. and Knight-Ridder Inc., is introducing a telephone intended to let consumers bank and shop from home. It is a desktop set with a miniature screen, whose controls resemble those of a bank automated teller machine.

Carriers like Bell Atlantic, which will provide marketing as well as premium phone services like call-waiting, would benefit from the increased network traffic from such phones.

And information suppliers like Knight-Ridder, the newspaper chain that is also an equity partner in U S Order, could experiment with electronically delivered classified advertisements.

At $200, the new phone, called Phone Plus, is priced much lower than similar phones, like the now discontinued $500 Smart Phone from AT&T and the $650 Enhanced Telephone from Philips Electronics.

For an $11.95 monthly payment to U S Order, which in turn shares fees with Bell Atlantic, Knight-Ridder and others, a Phone Plus customer will be able to pay as many as 30 bills electronically and gain access to other financial services, including transactions in savings and checking accounts.

A built-in credit-card "swipe" slot allows the same type of credit-card transactions now found in most retail stores.

DEAR ABBY

Holiday cheer to reach troops overseas

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: In the past you have been so successful in getting your readers to respond to good causes, I hope you will consider doing another Operation Dear Abby this year. We have troops stationed in strategic places all over the world who would dearly love to receive some mail — and perhaps some homemade cookies.

I participated in Operation Dear Abby in 1992 and received heartwarming letters of gratitude from men (and women, too) in the armed services. And a number of schoolteachers made it a class project, which resulted in correspondence between enthusiastic young people and men and women in all branches of the service.

One word from you and it could lift the spirits of countless thousands of men and women who will be spending Thanksgiving, Christmas and Hanukkah far from home and loved ones. Thanking you in advance ... J.W.G. IN BALTIMORE

DEAR J.W.G.: Hallelujah! The addresses have arrived. Unlike previous years, specific military units are not being targeted. Rather, we are targeting the major U.S. mail centers of the world. The mail centers will receive the mail and distribute it on a fair share basis across the board — which will provide better coverage for our service members without overburdening military transportation, or inundating any base or ship. The Military Postal Service Agency has asked that my readers send only first class or priority mail.

If a reader wants to send mail to a specific area, address it to the closest geographic center, which will distribute the mail to all branches of the service in the area that it supports. These addresses will be open only for the holiday period from Nov. 15, 1993, to Jan. 15, 1994. (After that, the APO/FPO will close.)

1. Operation Dear Abby, APO AE 09135 — serves Europe.
2. Operation Dear Abby, FPO AE 09685 — serves the Mediterranean Basin.
3. Operation Dear Abby, APO AA 34085 — serves South and Central America.
4. Operation Dear Abby, APO AP 96285 — serves Korea.
5. Operation Dear Abby, FPO AP 96385 — serves the Pacific Basin.

Dear Abby readers are the kindest and most warmhearted people in the world. Let's make this holiday season one our troops so far from home will remember!

DEAR ABBY: After 60 years, the poem sent to you by Samuel Thorpe finally caught up with me! I refer to: "Where can a man buy a cap for his knee ..." etc.

I grew up in a small Oregon town. When I was a schoolgirl, the whole town turned out to attend the programs put on by the kids.

I was asked to recite the poem you mentioned. I was doing very well until I came to the line, "Can you sit in the shade of the palm of your hand?" Well, I slipped on the "sit" word and nearly brought the roof down! Of course the adults did not laugh out loud, but believe me, it did not go unnoticed. I swore I never wanted to hear that poem again — and then it showed up in your column! Thanks for the memories. — MARJORIE Y. CONVERSE, FAIR OAKS, CALIF.

Landowner's vision of stock pond yields mammoth discovery

By David Matustik
Associated Press Writer

ROGERS — It's a discovery of mammoth proportion unearthed by a dream.

Jayne Stout's nighttime vision to build a stock pond on her north Milam County property has revealed a 20,000-year-old watering hole for an Ice Age elephant.

Like the ballpark in a cornfield in the movie "Field of Dreams", Stout believed that if she built her pond in the pasture, the animals would come.

Little did she know they had been there thousands of years ago.

The discovery of the Mammothus columbi, or Columbian Mammoth, is significant because rarely is this type of prehistoric specimen found so intact, said Billy Davidson, a University of Texas paleontologist.

"You just don't find mammoths like this so complete, especially around here," Davidson said. "The more we dug, the more we found."

The treasure trove includes a 14-foot tusk, both lower jaws, about two-thirds of the backbone, almost all the rib cage and sundry other bones. The search for the skull continues.

"Mammoths are fairly common animals in this area," Davidson said, but "most reports represent one tooth, one leg bone. We're coming up on two-thirds of this animal."

Great herds are believed to have roamed Texas and the United States.

The mammoths, about the size of the modern-day African elephant, weighed several tons and stood 12-14 feet tall at the shoulders. A single tooth weighed 8-12 pounds.

Though brittle, these Milam County bones probably survived because they were wrapped in sediment, topped by clay, in the old stream channel, Davidson said.

The remains were found Oct. 15, about 6 feet underground by a bulldozer operator who noticed a solid white object, later determined to be a tusk. As each part was removed, a plaster cast was formed over the bone to protect it.

In upcoming months, UT researchers will break open the casts, clean the bones and strengthen them with liquid plastics and steel rods. For every day at the site (in this case about a week), a corresponding month of lab time is needed for the tedious cleaning process.

"We need to treat them like they were made of solid gold," Davidson said.

A carbon 14 test will be done on a fragment to date the specimen within a few hundred years. The mammoth could have lived 11,000 to 40,000 years ago.

Oh, Baby!

SAN FRANCISCO — Los Angeles Rams defensive end Fred Stokes missed Sunday's game against the San Francisco 49ers after his pregnant wife went into labor earlier in the day.

But his decision did not cause the stir with Rams management that Houston lineman David Williams did when a similar situation occurred two weeks ago. Williams ended up being docked his game check of $111,000 for missing the Houston-New England game.

Rams coach Chuck Knox said Stokes called him Sunday morning, before the team left its hotel for Candlestick Park, and said he had to fly back to Los Angeles to be at the hospital with his wife, Regina.

"He indicated he would be back for the game but he didn't make it," Knox said. "It's a decision he made. I have no problem with it, though it obviously had an impact."

Barrier falls

LYNNWOOD, Wash. — Another gender barrier in sports has fallen. And Dallas Malloy, a 16-year-old high school dropout, was the big winner.

"It was a victory for me and it was a victory for civil rights," Malloy said. "It was just a huge victory."

For the first time in the history of amateur boxing in the United States, women were allowed to fight Saturday night. The 5-foot-4, 144-pound Malloy proved too strong and too aggressive for Heather Poyner, 143, a former high school cheerleader.

A sellout crowd of 1,189 in the Edmonds Community College gymnasium was treated to six exciting minutes — three 2-minute rounds.

By Ralph Bernstein

PHILADELPHIA — Emmitt Smith simply defies the defense to stop him. The Philadelphia Eagles planned all week to key on Smith. Nothing worked. Smith powered for a team-record 237 yards, including a 62-yard touchdown run, and Eddie Murray kicked three field goals as the Dallas Cowboys beat the Eagles 23-10 Sunday.

"Gang tackle him, put four hats on him, and the rest come in and strip the ball," Eagles linebacker Seth Joyner preached all week.

But the Eagles had trouble putting a single "hat" on Smith, whose total in the driving rain tied for the sixth highest in NFL history.

"I didn't expect to have such a great day against the Eagles, because they play such tremendous defense," said Smith.

He must have thinking of the days or Reggie White and the late Jerome Brown. This isn't the same defense.

"I had great running shoes on today," added Smith, not losing the opportunity for a shoe commercial.

The resilient Eagles, an 11-point underdog, played the Cowboys to a standstill in a driving rain until Smith broke his big run with 3:45 left in the game.

Dallas (5-2) won its fifth straight since losing its first two games and tied the New York Giants for first place in the NFC East.

Smith, who missed the two defeats while holding out, erased the mark of 206 by Tony Dorsett against the Eagles in 1977. He gained 65 yards in the first period, 64 in the second, just 14 in the third and 94 in the final period.

"I don't know if this was his best performance since I've seen him have so many great games," Aikman said. "But I don't know if I've seen him run any harder than he did today. He was phenomenal."

"Fabulous" was the word used by Dallas coach Jimmy Johnson, who said Philadelphia's defense was unable to swarm and make plays.

The crippled Eagles (4-3) weren't given much chance against the powerful Cowboys. Because of the injuries, they played with a makeshift defensive line, third-string quarterback Ken O'Brien, and 37-year-old James Lofton at receiver.

Shula ties Halas at 324

■ Don Shula's 324th NFL coaching victory is rewarded with a pail of ice water.

By Barry Wilner

AP Football Writer

Don Shula got part of a record and a full soaking Sunday.

Shula tied George Halas with 324 victories, most in NFL history, when Scott Mitchell threw three touchdown passes in a 30-10 rout of Kansas City. It has taken the 63-year-old Shula 30 years to compile a 324-152-6 mark with the Dolphins and Baltimore Colts. Halas was 324-151-31 in 40 seasons with the Chicago Bears.

Shula's reward? Linebacker Bryan Cox dunked a pail of ice water on Shula's head.

How did Shula react?

"I told him I loved him," Shula replied.

He goes for the record next week at the New York Jets, the only team to beat the Dolphins (6-1) this season.

"I'm very happy to tie a record by a guy who's meant so much to the National Football League," Shula said. "I never even thought when I first started coaching that there would be a day like this."

Victory celebration turns out as fight for survival

■ Wisconsin's upset over Michigan finds Badger players playing a more important role in the aftermath.

By Richard Eggleston

Associated Press Writer

MADISON, Wis. — The scene seemed natural: thousands of students euphoric after Wisconsin's victory over Michigan, spilling out of the stands and driving relentlessly toward the nearest goalpost.

Some realized immediately that something was dreadfully wrong, including football players who rushed to a pile of people at the north end of the stadium. But most others partied on, happy at having pushed past barriers and security guards to reach the artificial turf of Camp Randall Stadium.

Nearby, Aimee Jansen was fighting for her life, pinned with dozens of others near the stands.

"People were screaming for their lives, 'Oh my God! Oh my God!'" said Jansen, a 19-year-old sophomore.

At least 80 were injured, seven critically, on Saturday when a railing collapsed at the edge of the student section, sending fans tumbling into a 10-foot-wide gap between the stands and a 4-foot chain-link fence.

Others, pressing down from the top of the stadium, swarmed over those who had fallen en route to the wild on-field celebration.

One person remained in critical condition Sunday.

University of Wisconsin Chancellor David Ward said the school would immediately review what, if any, changes are needed before Saturday's home game against Ohio State.

Some students said players or other fans saved their lives.

Pinned with dozens of others in the narrow gap between the stands and the chain-link fence, Jansen was ready to pass out when a Wisconsin player came to her aid.

"He grabbed me by my pants and whipped me over," she said. "I know this football player was No. 3, and I know there are two No. 3's. I want to get hold of him because I do believe he saved my life."

The Badgers' numerical roster lists both defensive back Kenny Gales and redshirt freshman quarterback Michael Brin as No. 3.

Jansen was treated at a hospital for an arm injury.

NFL: Rubley, Rams fall; Saints rally past Cards

(From 1C)

It was another short day's work for Joe Montana. The Chiefs quarterback left in the second quarter after re-aggravating a hamstring injury.

Dolphins 30, Chiefs 10
At Miami, Mitchell, making his second start in place of injured Dan Marino, threw for 344 yards and three touchdowns. He hit Irving Fryar for 27 yards, Keith Byars for 8 and Mark Ingram for 77 yards.

"I'm not even the starting quarterback, and we're still winning," Mitchell said. "So we must have a pretty good team."

Maybe good enough to get Shula back to the Super Bowl for the first time since the 1984 season.

"We really dedicated ourselves to getting to the Super Bowl," tight end Keith Jackson said, "because we think that would be a great way to cap off the year for coach Shula. If he is going to break a record, we'd like him to do it in a year that we go all the way."

Kansas City (5-2) also lost running back Harvey Williams with a concussion. Williams was taken from the field on a stretcher.

49ers 40, Rams 17
At San Francisco, John Johnson intercepted a pass and had a sack to force a fumble, setting up two touchdowns. Michael McGrudder returned an interception 32 yards for a touchdown.

The Niners (5-3) also had seven sacks of T.J. Rubley, including three by rookie Troy Wilson. Rubley, making his first NFL start in place of Jim Everett, was harried all day.

The victory was the 49ers' sixth straight against the Rams (2-6).

Saints 20, Cardinals 17
The Saints defense got stingy again as Renaldo Turnbull had three of six sacks and Phoenix was held to 143 total yards. When Gene Atkins sacked Steve Beuerlein early in the second quarter, it knocked the quarterback out of the game with a sore knee.

Morten Andersen gave New Orleans (6-2) the winning points with a 38-yard field goal with 7:34 remaining to complete a comeback from a 17-7 halftime deficit.

Cornerback Aeneas Williams got both TDs for Phoenix (2-6). He scooped up Quinn Early's fumble and returned it 20 yards for his first score, then made an interception and went 46 yards for a touchdown.

Broncos 28, Seahawks 17
John Elway had TD passes of 20 yards to Vance Johnson and 5 yards to Shannon Sharpe and Robert Delpino ran for two scores for host Denver (4-3). Elway completed 23 of 36 passes for 255 yards in outplaying heralded rookie Rick Mirer, who was 16 of 30 for 201 yards with two interceptions.

Seattle (4-4) surrendered four sacks and had 11 penalties for 94 yards.

Chargers 30, Raiders 23
Donald Frank's 102-yard interception return for a score led the Chargers (3-4), who had lost their last three. San Diego overcame Jeff Hostetler's 424 yards passing for the host Raiders (4-3).

The Chargers hadn't scored more than 18 points in any game this season. They were tied 17-17 late in the third quarter when Frank stepped in front of a pass intended for Tim Brown and was so far ahead of his pursuers, he began high-stepping 20 yards from the end zone.

Jets 10, Giants 6
The road was kind to the Jets, even if they were playing at home.

Brad Baxter scored on a 2-yard run to cap an 18-play, 79-yard drive that took up 11:15 of the third quarter. Then the Jets (3-4) prevented touchdowns on three Giants drives inside the 10-yard line to snap a three-game losing streak.

The Giants, who were the home team for the Battle of New York, have lost both games right after bye weeks, while winning their other five.

Packers 17, Bears 3
At Green Bay, Reggie White became the all-time sacks leader

Atlanta's Roger Harper (47) and Scott Case (25) try to contain Tampa Bay running back Reggie Cobb on a first down run Sunday at the Georgia Dome.

with 130%, getting two of the Packers' seven traps of Jim Harbaugh. He moved one ahead of Lawrence Taylor.

Leading 10-3, the Packers clinched it with a 91-yard, 12-play drive that lasted more than six minutes, capped by Darrell Thompson's 17-yard TD run. The defense did the rest, leaving the Bears with only 112 points in seven games, 47 coming in one game.

It was the Packers' third straight win after starting the season 1-3. Chicago is 3-4.

Buccaners 31, Falcons 14
At Atlanta, Craig Erickson had a career day, passing for 318 yards and four touchdowns as the Bucs (2-5) built a 31-3 lead. Then they held on, stopping the Falcons on downs at the Tampa Bay 9 with 50 seconds left.

Erickson's scoring passes covered 42 yards to Vince Workman, 5 yards to Reggie Cobb — who later left with a sprained knee — and 60 and 44 yards to Horace Copeland, whose last four receptions have gone for touchdowns.

But Atlanta (2-6) rallied. Bobby Hebert hit a wide open Andre Rison for a 53-yard TD. Tony Smith's 51-yard punt return set up a 9-yard scoring pass to Rison. Then Hebert hit Mike Pritchard for a 5-yard touchdown.

Colts 9, Patriots 6
At Indianapolis, Dean Biasucci's 37-yard field goal with 2:42 remaining won the kicking duel. It was the second straight meeting in which the Colts beat the Patriots with nothing but field goals. Indianapolis won 6-0 last December.

Biasucci also connected from 38 and 27 yards, while Scott Sisson was good from 40 and 26.

Both quarterbacks had decent statistics, despite the lack of scoring. Jeff George was 18-for-26 for 200 yards for Indianapolis (3-4), while Scott Secules hit 23 of 37 for 279 yards for New England (1-7).

Lions 30, Vikings 27
MINNEAPOLIS — Defense carried Minnesota to the NFC Central title last season. Sunday night, a defensive mistake kept the Vikings from overtaking the division-leading Detroit Lions.

Anthony Parker interfered with Brett Perriman at the 1-yard line with 42 seconds to go. On the next play, Derrick Moore scored to give the Lions a 30-27 victory.

Chris Spielman intercepted Sean Salisbury's pass with 28 seconds left, clinching the win for Detroit (6-2). Minnesota fell to 4-3.

The Lions' winning drive began on their 39-yard line with 3:26 remaining. Rodney Peete threw passes of 18 yards to Aubrey Matthews, 11 yards to Willie Green, 11 to Rodney Holman and 4 to Barry Sanders, giving Detroit a fourth-and-8 at the 12-yard line.

Injuries get scary

Associated Press

Two scary scenes saw running backs Harvey Williams and Reggie Cobb carried off the field on stretchers Sunday, although neither injury appeared serious.

The Chiefs' Williams was hurt when he was hit in the shoulder by Bryan Cox. Williams folded over onto his back and fumbled on the play. A neck brace was applied and he was taped to a board before being taken from the field after he was examined for 15 minutes.

His injury was diagnosed as a concussion, said Chiefs spokesman Jim Carr, who added Williams would be kept overnight at a hospital and was "otherwise all right."

"Neurologically, everything appears to be fine," Chiefs coach Marty Schottenheimer said.

"All he could do was roll his eyes," Cox said after Miami's 30-10 win over the Chiefs at Joe Robbie Stadium. "He couldn't move, so I was concerned at that point."

Cobb, Tampa Bay's leading rusher, sprained his left knee late in the first half of the Bucs' 31-24 win over Atlanta. Cobb left on a stretcher following his 16-yard run and did not return.

Kansas City's Joe Montana also was injured again, straining his left hamstring in the second quarter. The star quarterback's status for next Monday night's game against Green Bay is questionable, according to Carr.

Montana, who first injured the hamstring on Oct. 3 against the Raiders, has played in only 14 of the 28 quarters this season.

Other quarterbacks injured were Phoenix's Steve Beuerlein (knee) and Chicago's Jim Harbaugh (ankle). Beuerlein was replaced by Chris Chandler in the second quarter of the Cardinals' 20-17 loss to New Orleans, while Harbaugh made it through seven sacks in the Bears' 17-3 loss to Green Bay.

Stich polishes off great week at net

Associated Press

STOCKHOLM, Sweden — Michael Stich tamed Goran Ivanisevic in a serve-and-volley shootout featuring tennis' two biggest servers in the singles final Sunday of the $1.65 million Stockholm Open.

Stich won 4-6, 7-6 (8-6), 7-6 (7-3), 6-2 on the fast Green Set carpet at the Globe Arena for his second big success in Sweden in five weeks.

He won three matches — two singles and a doubles — as Germany routed Sweden 5-0 in the Davis Cup semifinals at Borlange, Sweden, in September.

And Stich started this tournament by beating three Swedes, including former world No. 1 Stefan Edberg in the quarterfinals.

"This was a great week. I'm really feeling good about this," said Stich, who will advance from fourth to third when the new ATP Tour rankings are released Monday.

"Stockholm is a city I really like. It's a big tournament. It hasn't been an easy week for me, beating three Swedes, and not being the crowd favorite."

Stich hit 15 aces — many surpassing the 120 mph mark — in addition to scores of other service winners during the match. Stich, who hit the fastest serve of the year at nearly 127 mph in the Australian Open in January, could have had a higher total.

"But my strategy was not to go for the first serve too much," he said. "I tried to play an 80 percent first serve in. I tried to place the serve really well instead."

Stich fired an ace to lead the second-set tie-breaker 7-6 after the defending champion's cross-court shot went just wide at 6-5.

"That tie-break probably decided the match," Ivanisevic said. "If I had won that set and taken a 2-0 sets lead I think the third set would have been pretty easy for me."

It was the fifth singles title of the year for the 25-year-old Stich, who has proved he's one of the most versatile players on the tour.

He has won on four surfaces: carpet (Stuttgart and Stockholm), clay (Hamburg), grass (Queens) and hardcourt (Basle).

The victory was worth $229,000, boosting Stich's earnings this year to more than $1.6 million. Ivanisevic, who won the final in Vienna, Austria, last weekend, pocketed $123,000.

Paris Open
PARIS — Boris Becker won the lucrative Paris Open three times. He probably needs another victory to qualify for the year-end ATP Tour World Championship, where he is also defending champion.

The $2.1 million tennis tournament begins Monday with a top field. Nineteen of the world's top 20 players are entered in the 48-man draw. Thomas Muster, currently No. 9 in the rankings, is the only Top 20 player missing.

Wimbledon and U.S. Open winner Pete Sampras and Australian Open champion Jim Courier are the top two seeds. Becker is third-seeded and Michael Stich fourth.

French Open titlist Sergi Bruguera, Stefan Edberg, Michael

Chang and Andrei Medvedev are seeded five to eight. The top 16 players have first-round byes.

The tough field has possible quarterfinal matchups of Sampras vs. Chang, Stich vs. Edberg, Bruguera vs. Becker and Medvedev vs. Courier.

Baylor's Geis wins title

Brian Keim of Baylor won the men's competition. But Texas prevented the Bears from defending their team crown.

Geis and Mardrea Hyman of Texas pulled away from the pack early on in the women's race. Geis finished in 17:11.

to place third and Baylor had two other runners in the top eight.

Rice amassed a score of 47, just 16 points behind Baylor.

In men's competition, Danny Castro finished second and Josh Funder placed sixth to lead the Longhorns to victory with a score of 62.

Baylor men followed at 69, led by Keim, who pulled away very late to finish in 24:44, eight seconds ahead of Castro.

Woman goalie gets win

TOLEDO, Ohio (AP) — Erin Whitten of the Toledo Storm says it's nice to have a place in the record books.

Whitten became the first woman goaltender to be credited with a professional victory as the Storm beat the Dayton Bombers 6-5 Saturday in the East Coast Hockey League.

"It's nice to be in the record books, but it's just another win," Whitten said. "Hopefully there will be a few more. Being in the record books is great, but it's not what I'm concerned about. I'm doing what I love to do. Whether that makes history or not, it doesn't really matter to me. I just want to play hockey."

Whitten is the second woman goaltender in the sport. Manon Rheume played for the Atlanta Knights of the International Hockey League last season and currently is with the ECHL's Knoxville Cherokees.

Whitten said she thought Rheume had won a game and was surprised when she found out her victory was the first by a woman.

"Nobody can top that, so it's a great feeling," she said.

Whitten relieved the injured Alain Harvey to start the second period with the score tied 1-1. She made 15 saves on 19 shots in the final two periods, including two power-play opportunities. Toledo led 6-3 for most of the third period, but the Bombers scored twice in the final four minutes.

She has 4.85 goals against average in two appearances this year.

Harvey was back in goal for the Storm's game Sunday at Wheeling.

Whitten, who tuned 22 four days before her victory, is from Glens Falls, N.Y., and played last season on the women's hockey team at New Hampshire.

Only thing Dolphins messed up was Don Shula's dousing

By Charlie Nobles
N.Y. Times News Service

MIAMI — Until late in Sunday's game, Miami Dolphin players planned to defer the celebratory dousing of Don Shula until next Sunday against the Jets, when he hopes to break George Halas' National Football League coaching record for career victories, not just tie it.

"But then the guys started saying, 'We have to do something,'" said Dolphins offensive tackle Jeff Dellenbach. Linebacker Bryan Cox didn't need much prodding. "It couldn't have been more of a direct hit," Cox said of his watering of Shula.

Shula spun, smiled and immediately hugged Cox, saying, "I love you."

Miami's 30-10 victory over the Kansas City Chiefs before a crowd of 67,765 at Joe Robbie Stadium was the 324th of Shula's 31-year

NFL career, tying him with Halas, and raised the team's record this year to 6-1.

It was an emotional occasion. Safety Louis Oliver and tight end Keith Jackson removed a banner that said "Shula (NU)324" from a stadium wall and paraded with it. Shula blew kisses to the crowd and held his arms high in appreciation as he left the field.

Then he came close to breaking down in front of his players in the locker room.

"You could hear a crack in his voice," Oliver said. "He said he didn't want to get too corny about it. Then he said, 'Let's just keep doing things right,' and cut it off."

Shula said later: "I never thought when I started that I'd be standing here in this situation now. I've had a lot of great players and a lot of great coaches who've helped me do whatever job I've been able to do."

Cox, the linebacker, said Shula's pending achievement seemed to be played down by everybody before the game.

"Everybody was talking about Joe the Great," Cox said, meaning Joe Montana, the celebrated Kansas City quarterback. "Meanwhile, we knew we have our own legend here."

The Chiefs (5-2) lost Montana with a reinjured left hamstring with 4 minutes 46 seconds left in the first half, and the visitors limped home, badly from there, getting their lone touchdown after the issue was settled.

But for a while in the second quarter, the fates of Shula and Montana took a distant back seat. The game was delayed for 17 minutes while medics worked on Harvey Williams, the Kansas City running back. On a run up the middle, Williams had been hit on the right shoulder and head by Cox.

"It was one of the hardest hits I've ever made," said Cox, who tried to offer encouraging words to the prone Williams. Williams felt weakness in his arms, so precautions were taken against a serious neck injury.

He was taken to a nearby hospital, where he was found to have a concussion. "Neurologically, everything appears to be fine," said Marty Schottenheimer, the Chiefs' coach. Williams was to be kept overnight for observation.

This was a spirited game for the Dolphins. Typical snapshot: When Miami wide receiver Mark Ingram leveled linebacker Lonnie Marts with a bone-rattling third-quarter block, Ingram leaped up to pump a celebratory fist. And Oliver ran onto the field to congratulate Doug Terry to complete a 77-yard touchdown play.

Montana originally was injured against the Raiders on Oct. 3.

ino's replacement. Mitchell became the first Miami quarterback other than Marino to pass for three touchdowns since David Woodley did it on Oct. 25, 1981.

"Early on, they had eight people on the line of scrimmage," said Mitchell, who completed 22 of 33 passes for 344 yards. "That makes you throw the ball. When I saw it, I said, 'That's fine.' We'll do whatever it takes to win."

Mitchell had touchdown passes of 27 yards to wide receiver Irving Fryar and 8 yards to fullback Keith Byars, who scored his first touchdown as a Dolphin. And Mitchell then helped bury Kansas City on the second play of the third quarter when he found Ingram in a zone-coverage crease at the Kansas City 43 and raced around safety Doug Terry to complete a 77-yard touchdown play.

Montana originally was injured against the Raiders on Oct. 3.

Miami Dolphins head coach Don Shula acknowledges cheers from the crowd after taking career win No. 324.

ANSWERS TO WEEKLY BRIDGE QUIZ

Q.1—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
 ♠6 ♣AQJ ♠AJ984 ♠A1097
 The bidding has proceeded:
 South West North East
 1 ♠ 1 ♠ Pass 3 ♦♦

—Preemptive
 What action do you take?
 A.—The auction has climbed to an uncomfortably high level, but partner doesn't need much to give you play for game. The problem is that you only have three hearts. Nevertheless, we would double—since partner hasn't bid, that's for take-out—and take our chances despite the fact we could be headed for a catastrophe.

Q.2—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
 ♠KJ10976 ♠K ♠AQ6 ♠Q95
 The bidding has proceeded:
 South West North East
 1 ♠ Pass 2 ♠ Pass

What do you bid now?
 A.—While the club fit has improved your hand, you can't be sure the king of hearts is a working value. It's a choice between three clubs and two spades and the sixth spade tilts us to the latter. Bid two spades.

Q.3—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
 ♠A4 ♠A6 ♠93 ♠KQJ9752
 Partner opens the bidding with one heart. What do you respond?
 A.—Suppose you were to bid two clubs and partner rebids two hearts. Without telling a whopping lie about your distribution, you have no good rebid! To avoid that problem, jump to three clubs—your suit is self-sustaining. Then you can simply rebid clubs to convey the picture of a powerful one-suited hand.

Q.4—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
 ♠AK109 ♠J ♠AKJ1083 ♠72
 Your right-hand opponent opens the bidding with one heart. What action do you take?
 A.—Normally, we don't recommend a takeout double on a two-suited hand. Here, however, any other choice runs the risk of losing a possible spade fit. The hand has enough playing strength to double and correct any number of clubs partner may bid to diamonds.

Q.5—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
 ♠KJ97 ♠KQ1086 ♠4 ♠A95
 The bidding has proceeded:
 South West North East
 1 ♠ Pass 2 ♠ Pass
 2 ♠ Pass 2 ♠ Pass

What do you bid now?
 A.—We would jump to four spades if partner's bid guaranteed a four-card suit. However, there are hands where partner might have to bid a three-card fragment, so the more prudent course is to raise only to three spades. Naturally, a raise of responder's second suit after a two-over-one response is forcing and confirms four-card support.

Q.6—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
 ♠K10 ♠5 ♠A98652 ♠J982
 The bidding has proceeded:
 North East South West
 1 ♥ Pass 1 NT Pass
 3 ♠ Pass ?

What do you bid now?
 A.—This is a similar case to the previous problem. There are times when partner might jump shift in a three-card holding, so you should avoid raising with poor four-card support if there is an alternative. Instead of bidding four clubs, bid three diamonds. That still leaves three no trump open as a possible contract.

Actor Matt Dillion admits he dislikes tooting his own horn

NEW YORK — Matt Dillion admits he isn't fond of tooting his own horn. "I find talking about myself really boring," the actor told The New York Times in an interview published Sunday.

In some newspaper stories, critics have questioned his intelligence and his humility. He blames his own awkwardness when faced with personal questions.

"I do get bottled up in interviews," he said. "You're thinking about what you're saying, and suddenly you get tangled."

"So people think I'm sullen, or that I don't have much to say. But my friends will tell you: A lot of times I talk too much."

Dillion, 29, remains a solid Hollywood commodity. He is the star of "Mr. Wonderful," a romantic comedy in theaters nationwide. "The Saint of Fort Washington," in which he plays a homeless man, opens Nov. 17.

His film credits include "Drugstore Cowboy," "The Outsiders," "The Flamingo Kid," "A Kiss Before Dying" and "Tex."

RIO DE JANEIRO, Brazil — Pop music fans weren't the only ones waiting for Madonna to get here.

Religious fundamentalists planned protests against what they called Madonna's "sado-masochistic garbage."

The pop star's risqué "Girly Show" world tour includes Brazil performances in Sao Paulo on Wednesday and in Rio on Saturday. The singer and her entourage were to arrive today.

Protests have accompanied various tour stops. In Brazil, a Gospel Power Festival was scheduled for Saturday to compete with Madonna's show in Rio.

But Rosângela Lemos, one of hundreds waiting in line this weekend for the few remaining tickets, said the often scantily clad star should feel at home in Rio, the city that gave the world the bikini.

NEW YORK — For Oscar-winners Anthony Hopkins and Emma Thompson, playing unlikely screen lovers is getting to be old hat.

Last seen together in "Howards End," the British actors play lead roles in "The Remains of the Day," a drama about repressed love between a housekeeper and a butler that opens Friday.

"The film is about the bone-aching loneliness of life, the tedium of going on and on: Is that all there is? That's very heartbreaking," Hopkins told the New York Daily News in a story published Sunday.

Thompson, 33, who won her best acting Academy Award for "Howards End," challenged any simple description of the conflicting emotions in the film.

"How do we know what love really is? Love is a deeply abused word," she said. "I think an attraction of sorts is eminently there between the two of them."

Hopkins, 55, an Oscar winner for "The Silence of the Lambs," says his character's stuffiness is just a mask.

NEW YORK — Meredith Baxter, who played a TV mom on "Family Ties," is enjoying real-life parenting these days.

Baxter, 46, says she's reluctant to tackle another series because she wants to spend as much time as she can with her 8-year-old twins.

"I want to be there to tuck them in at night," Baxter said in an interview in the Nov. 22 issue of For Women First. "I love my kids to distraction and feel a sense of anguish when I'm not home for them."

She recently took them on location while filming an upcoming movie for CBS, "For the Love of Aaron."

NEW YORK — Meet Maggie and Joel. Not the characters whose love-hate relationship fuels "Northern Exposure," but the horses actress Janine Turner named after them.

Maggie is a 9-year-old mare Turner named after the bush pilot she plays on the quirky CBS series. Joel is a 9-month-old roan named after Joel Fleischman, the misplaced New York doctor played by series co-star Rob Morrow.

"A typical horse day for me lasts about five hours," Turner says in the December issue of InStyle magazine. "If it's beautiful I want Maggie to go out and play and then I bring her in and brush her, clean her nose with baby wipes, brush her tail, spray her down with fly spray, which makes her shine, and then I put a bridle on and ride her for an hour."

"I come home soaked, with horse hair all over me."

LOS ANGELES — Olivia Hussey, star of the 1968 film version of "Romeo and Juliet," became a mother for the third time at age 42, giving birth to a daughter.

"Olivia is thrilled to death," said Michael Houbick, her agent. "After two boys, it's great to have a girl."

Hussey, who is married to musician David Easley, gave birth to India Joy Easley on Friday. The infant weighed 6 pounds, 12 ounces.

Compiled from Reporter-Telegram wire services.

Strange year! Texas Tech now talking bowl

By Arnie Stapleton
AP Sports Writer

DALLAS — This is what kind of year it's been in the Southwest Conference: Texas Tech loses five of its first six games, the student newspaper calls for coach Spike Dykes' job — and now the Red Raiders are talking about going to a bowl game!

"We've got a real good chance. If we do the same thing in the last three games, we'll be in a bowl game," quarterback Robert Hall said after beating Texas 31-22 at Memorial Stadium. "I think this was our best offensive game of the year."

For Texas Tech to get a bowl bid, the Raiders would have to beat Texas Christian, which has won three in a row; Southern Methodist at O'Connell Stadium; and Houston at the Alamodome.

Rice, Baylor and TCU — all of them are 4-4 — each still have bowl hopes, but the Raiders have the best shot at joining Texas A&M in the postseason party. The Aggies (7-1, 5-0) have won 20 straight SWC games and are almost a lock for their third straight Cotton Bowl.

■ SWC Notebook

Tech could save face for the league by also getting to a bowl game, and that would most assuredly preserve Dykes' job.

The Raiders showed against Texas that they are playing the right kind of ball to get to a bowl.

"This is our best showing all year," said free safety Marcus Coleman, who had seven tackles, a pass breakup and a key interception. "Texas is supposed to have a high-powered offense. We came in and shut them down. I give us an A."

So does the SWC.

BYE WEEK BLUES: Bye weeks not only give the NFL the blues, but also the SWC. The league's marquee team sits the week out as Texas A&M prepares for a stretch run against Louisville, TCU and Texas.

The Aggies' absence means no ranked SWC teams will play this week, although Texas visits Houston for a Thursday night game on ESPN.

The Aggies also had an off day on Sept. 25, but back then, Baylor, Texas Tech and Texas still fancied themselves contenders for the rankings. Not anymore.

Now, here's the matchups:

—Texas (2-4-1) at Houston (1-5-1) on Thursday night. Three victories between them. The Longhorns haven't recovered from their worst start in more than half a century and the Cougars still haven't gotten untracked under a new coach trying to de-emphasize the failed run-and-shoot system of John Jenkins.

—Baylor (4-4) at Georgia Tech (3-5). The Bears vastly underestimated TCU and Houston, teams with less talent but more heart, and find themselves scrambling for a bowl bid. The Bears can afford to lose to the Yellow Jackets, but then would have to beat Rice and Texas to qualify for a bowl, either the John Hancock Bowl or the inaugural Alamo Bowl.

—Rice (4-4) at SMU (1-5-2). The Owls have only three victories over NCAA Division I competition — half of what's needed for a bowl bid. Scheduling Division II Sam Houston State (and barely winning, 14-13) leaves Rice in the position of HAVING to beat the scrappy Mustangs AND Baylor AND Houston to get their first bowl bid since 1961.

—TCU (4-4) at TEXAS TECH (3-5). This is, surprisingly, the best of the bunch. The Frogs, inexplicably to coach Pat Sullivan, have won three straight and Texas Tech is coming off an inspired 31-22 victory over Texas at Memorial Stadium. Both teams have eyes on the bowls.

TCU is a LOOOOONG shot, however. The Horned Frogs would have to beat the Red Raiders on the road, Texas at Austin and Texas A&M, which has beaten 20 straight SWC foes.

The Raiders have a little easier road, but in this strange season, nothing is a surety.

The only sure shot is Texas A&M (7-1, 5-0) — likely for the Cotton Bowl. And even that hasn't been good for the SWC. The Aggies have scored less than a touchdown total in their last two Cotton Bowl visits — a 10-2 loss to Florida State in 1992 and a 28-3 loss to Notre Dame in 1993.

The league also has contracts with the John Hancock Bowl in El Paso and the new Alamo Bowl in San Antonio.

Norman blunder saves Gallagher

Associated Press

SAN FRANCISCO — Jim Gallagher, donning a clown's mask, joked as he watched nervously Sunday while Greg Norman blundered away the $3 million Tour Championship by a stroke with bogeys on two of the final three holes.

Some may say Norman choked badly on the last hole. He wouldn't disagree much, bluntly calling it "a pathetic mental performance."

All the tricks of the Olympic Club's past, the graveyard of champions like Ben Hogan, Arnold Palmer and Tom Watson, came back to haunt Norman on Halloween as he wasted a two-stroke lead with seven holes to play.

With those two bogeys, Norman lost the tournament, the chance for the money title and, perhaps, the vote of his peers for PGA Tour Player of the Year.

"I made two mental errors and it cost me the championship," the drained and stony-faced Norman said.

Nick Price, despite his tie for 18th, secured the money title with $1,478,557 and may also win the PGA's top player award. Paul Azinger, farther back in a tie for 21, finished second in the money race with nearly $100,000 more than Norman's $1,359,653.

Gallagher was happy just doubling his year's earnings with the $540,000 winner's check.

"I guess I had a great year in one week," said Gallagher, who credited his Ryder Cup triumph over Seve Ballesteros with giving him the confidence to win against the top PGA players. "It was (Norman's) tournament to win. I'd run out of holes. It turned out I was lucky."

He was more than lucky. Gallagher, who set a course record 8-under, 63 in the first round before unraveling with 73 and 72 in the next two rounds, was already in the clubhouse with a gutsy 69 for 277 while Norman was still thrashing on No. 16.

Norman hit his third shot on 16 into a bunker on the left, leaving himself a long putt for par. He ran that by the hole by about four feet and made that for bogey to drop into a tie with Gallagher at 7-under.

As Gallagher watched the dramatic finish unfold on TV, he slipped on the clown's mask at one point for his toddler, Mary Landon, back home in Greenwood, Miss., who had been a clown for Halloween. Gallagher broke the tension a little by fooling around, then he got up to prepare for a playoff that never came.

Norman parred 17, then hit his second shot, an 8-iron, on 18 from the fairway through the green for a bad lie in the rough, chipped out and two-putted for a fatal bogey that left him tied with Scott Simpson, David Frost and John Huston at 278.

"I got a little ahead of it and I blocked it," Norman said of the 8-iron he felt was his second crucial mistake. "It was a pathetic mental performance."

It was a loss reminiscent of Norman's second-place to Azinger in the PGA Championship, though this time Norman gave the title away more than he had it grabbed from him in Toledo.

Norman, trailing playing partner and third-round leader Frost by two strokes at the start of the day, surged to a three-stroke lead over Frost by the turn and was two ahead of Gallagher up on No. 12.

Norman seemed to have all the luck going his way. On 10, his drive was heading toward the woods when it struck an Irishman from Dublin, Owen O'Malley, in the foot and caromed back onto the fairway to help Norman gain a par.

Kaanapali Seniors

KAANAPALI, Hawaii — George Archer didn't think much of his chances when he teed off Sunday in the final round of the $550,000 Kaanapali Classic.

Archer trailed leader Dave Stockton by four shots, 10 other golfers were either ahead or tied with him, and the absence of the usual blustery trade winds guaranteed low scores. But as Archer would say later, "When you shoot a 63, you have a chance go do something."

Archer's 8-under-par 63 at the Kaanapali North course on Maui propelled him into a three-way playoff with Stockton and Lee Trevino. When Archer made a 25-foot birdie putt on the first extra hole, he won $82,500.

Each player finished the regulation 54 holes at 14-under-par 199, Stockton closing with a 67 and Trevino a 64. Trevino, who never held or shared the lead until the final hole, snuck into the playoff by making a 20-foot birdie putt from the collar of the 18th green.

Kloster Seniors

SAMUT PRAKAN, Thailand — Ray Floyd overcame gusting winds and inconsistent putting Sunday to win the Kloster World Seniors Golf Challenge outside Bangkok.

Isao Aoki of Japan was second, followed by Taiwan's Lu Liang-Huan.

Arnold Palmer, who designed the 6,691-yard, par-72 Bangpoo Country Club course in suburban Samut Prakan, was fourth.

Floyd shot a course-record 5-under-par 67 Friday in a pro-am event. On Saturday, he broke it with 66.

Floyd, who finished with a 10-under-par 134 after two rounds of play, took home $13,000 in prize money.

LPGA-Nichirei

AMI, Japan — The U.S. LPGA team, led by Laura Davies' 67, padded a big lead by winning 12 of Sunday's 16 matches and scored its ninth consecutive triumph in the Nichirei International Japan-U.S. LPGA golf tournament.

"One stroke costs 10 to 15 places in our tour. We usually try our best on the last nine, and that may be the reason for the victory," U.S. captain Helen Alfredsson said.

After two rounds of four-ball stroke play, the Americans had an 11-5 lead. They finished with a 23-9 victory — their 13th triumph against only two losses since the tournament began in 1979.

"I had expected to narrow the U.S. team's lead on the final day but, I was disappointed," said Japanese captain Mayumi Hirase, who lost 67-76 to Davies, a British golfer playing on the U.S. tour.

Hirase, 24, was the Japanese team's youngest player but is this season's Japan LPGA leading money winner.

Alfredsson beat Japan's Fusako Nagata 72-76 on the 6,337-yard, par-72 Ami Golf Club course northeast of Tokyo.

Earnhardt wins sixth Winston Cup crown

PHOENIX (AP) — A broken sway bar in Rusty Wallace's Pontiac all but gave Dale Earnhardt his sixth Winston Cup championship Sunday as Mark Martin ran off with the Slick 50 500 at Phoenix International Raceway.

Earnhardt, who came into the race leading Wallace by 72 points, took advantage of his pursuer's misfortune by finishing fourth. The 42-year-old Earnhardt will carry a 126-point lead into the season-finales on Nov. 14 at Atlanta Motor Speedway.

He can earn the $1.25 million stock car championship on Atlanta's 1.522-mile oval by finishing no worse than 34th in what is expected to be a 42-car field.

Martin was the class of the field at Phoenix throughout the 312-lap race on the one-mile oval, leading seven times for 254 laps including the final 23, as he held off a late challenge from Ernie Irvan to win for the fifth time this season and the 12th of his career.

The winner earned $67,034 after crossing the finish line 0.19-seconds ahead of Irvan in the battle of Ford Thunderbirds. Martin averaged 100.375 mph in a race slowed by nine caution flags for 44 laps.

Wallace, who came into the event with eight straight top-five finishes, was strong in the early going, earning the five-point bonus for leading a lap when he passed Martin on lap 20. He lost the lead the next time around, but remained near the front most of the way.

■ Slick 50 500

The 1989 series champion appeared dodged trouble on lap 191 when his right front tire went flat and he had to make his way slowly around most of the one-mile oval before pitting. But the leaders were due for stops after a long green flag period and Martin came on pit road just as Wallace coasted in.

Wallace was still seventh, just behind Earnhardt, on lap 228 when he slowed suddenly, the broken sway bar apparently part of the same problem that caused the flat tire.

Again he got a break when the eighth caution flag of the day came out as his crew was preparing to bring Wallace onto pit road. He was penalized for coming in with the leaders instead of waiting to come in with the cars that were a lap or more down, but was able to stop three times under yellow without losing much more ground.

As with all newspaper distributorships this opportunity requires a 7 day a week commitment (when you go out of town you must arrange a substitute for yourself) and it is early morning work.
