Clinton begins 2nd presidential term

President promises a government that 'does more with less'

By Terence Hunt
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — William Jefferson Clinton began his second term as president Monday, promising to lead the nation into the 21st century with a government that "does more with less." In a day of inaugural fanfare and political reflection, he urged an end to Washington's "petty bickering and extreme partisanship."

The nation's 53rd inauguration stretched from a rousing morning prayer service to all-night revelry at 15 black-tie balls. The president and first lady Hillary Rodham Clinton headed out for the parties more than an hour late, stopping first at a gala honoring America's veterans.

Reviving a theme from his inaugural speech, Clinton said, "I ask you to pray and insist that we here in charge of the affairs of this country ... keep our eyes on the prize."

Five minutes after noon, as a warming sun shone down on the chilled Capitol audience, Clinton put his left hand on the family Bible held by his wife and raised his right hand to recite the 35 words spoken by every president since George Washington.

"Good luck," Chief Justice William Rehnquist said when the president finished the oath before an audience of 250,000 people.

The crowd broke the silence with a roar of cheers. The president turned and swept up Hillary Rodham Clinton and their daughter, Chelsea, in a two-armed hug. Cannons fired a military salute.

Clinton will be the first president of the 21st century and the approach of a new millennium was very much on his mind at the rebirth of his presidency. Clinton's vision of his second term was one of practicality.

"As times change, so government must change," Clinton said. "We need a new government for a new century — humble enough not to try to solve all our problems for us, but strong enough to give us the tools to solve our problems for ourselves; a government that is smaller, lives within its means, and does more with less."

"Our land of new promise will be a nation that meets its obligations, a nation that balances its budget but never loses the balance of its values; a nation where our grandparents have secure retirement and health care."

MURSHIDABAD, India — In this desperately poor corner of India, villagers with handicapped children were among the few people making any money. Now, Indian officials are investigating the export of beggar children to wealthy Arab nations.

Somber week for GOP with inauguration, Gingrich woes

■ Republican Party closes down for the day as members begin second term out of presidency, prepare to punish House Speaker Newt Gingrich.

By Tom Raum
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — For Republicans, there was little celebration, just the start of a somber week. They had to sit back Monday and watch the beginning of their second term of exile from the White House while preparing to punish their leader at the Capitol.

Except for GOP lawmakers involved in the inauguration itself, the Grand Old Party basically closed down for the day.

A tape recording answered the phone at the Republican National Committee headquarters. Most GOP congressional offices were closed while many Democratic offices were open, even though it was a federal holiday.

The party's 1996 standard-bearer, Bob Dole, did not attend the inauguration.

Shut out of the many balls and celebrations around town, one group of young Republicans even planned a "Mourning in America: We Feel Your Pain" alternative ball.

It was also the eve of the day House Republicans must swallow hard and vote to discipline their first speaker in four decades. The House votes Tuesday on a resolution to reprimand Newt Gingrich for ethical misconduct and to assess him $300,000.

Republicans tried to be good sports, but sometimes there was an edge to their comments.

"Republicans join in congratulating President Clinton and in extending a hand of cooperation," said the new Republican National Committee chairman, Jim Nicholson.

"At the same time, Republicans look forward to four years from today when we plan to celebrate the inauguration of a Republican president to work with a Republican Congress entering the next

Second term offers Clinton chance at niche in history

By John King
Associated Press

■ News analysis

WASHINGTON — It had been 60 years since a Democratic president last celebrated an inaugural sequel, so Bill Clinton placed his hand on the family Bible on Monday assured of at least that niche in history. But his legacy remains as uncertain at the dawn of his second term as it was when he took the oath four years ago.

Putting that first term of inconsistency behind him, Clinton spoke in awe of the historic threshold that will frame his presidency — the dawn of the 21st Century.

"A moment that will define our course — and our character — for decades to come," he called it. But what of a defining

Slain woman's family wants parole board to keep man in prison

By Gary Shanks
Staff Writer

The family of murder victim Elaine Ornelas wants parole board members to know that their loss still hurts, even as the 19-year-old's murderer is approaching his first parole hearing.

Steven Ray Williams of Monahans was sentenced to 20 years in prison for the murder of his girlfriend, Ms. Ornelas, outside a local convenience store.

Williams was a Midland College student at the time of the Aug. 10, 1991, shooting.

Current Texas law requires those committing aggravated offenses such as this murder remain in prison for at least half of their sentence.

But because Williams committed the offense prior to that change, he will have his first parole hearing on April 7, 1998, after serving only five years of his 20-year sentence, according to Lenore Hunt, sister of the deceased.

Officials with the Victim Assistance program in Austin will begin their review of this case six months prior to the hearing and have suggested that the Ornelas family have all of their letters and statements in Austin by October of this year, Ms. Hunt said.

In April of 1993, when Williams, 23 at the time, was found guilty, the Ornelas family was outraged at the 20-year sentence, hoping for a much stiffer penalty.

And the thought of Williams being released after only five years angers the Ornelases. "I just don't think that's right," Ms. Hunt said.

"When he's served five years, she will have been dead for seven years and about eight months," she said.

"It's not enough punishment. I don't think 20 years is enough — for anybody who kills anybody," she said.

Desert Shores construction to begin soon, official says

By Mella McEwen
Staff Writer

The pace is slow but officials with the Montana Band say their planned Desert Shores development is near the start of construction.

"We hope to do something this spring," said Darrell Currie, who is overseeing the project for the Cree Indian band.

He explained that they are still awaiting finalization of bonding requirements needed to build the development's infrastructure, a process that has taken longer than they expected.

"It's not progressing as fast as we'd like but it is progressing," he said.

Once ground has been broken, excavation for the 64-acre lake that is the centerpiece of the development should take about eight months, Currie said.

Desert Shores is to be located on 657 acres in north Midland off Midland Drive and across from Greentree Country Club. Plans call for the development to be surrounded by a wall and landscaped walkway that is expected to include exercise stations.

The Mixed Teams at the recent World Bridge Olympiad was won by a combined Iceland/Britain team. In the final, they defeated a U.S. team in a close contest. This was the crucial deal from that match.

The U.S. team reached six spades, a contract that sailed home in comfort after a trump lead. For the combined team, Liz McGowan of Britain bid to a grand slam at no trump on the auction shown. The five-club response by agreement showed either one ace or four.

West led the ten of diamonds and, with no entry to the hearts outside of the king of diamonds, declarer was not thrilled with her prospects. There were only 12 tricks, and it did not seem possible to execute a squeeze for the fulfilling trick.

However, the defenders did not know the distribution, so South elected to try a touch of deception.

The opening lead was taken in the closed hand and the spades were cashed out, declarer discarding three clubs and two hearts from the board. East had no trouble parting with two hearts and a club. When declarer crossed to dummy with the king of diamonds, East had a problem.

Placing declarer with one heart and partner therefore, with only two, East chose to sluff another club. Declarer now cashed the high hearts for two diamond discards, and three clubs in hand brought her total to 13!

Shirelles honored by renaming of auditorium in which career began

SANTA FE, N.M. — Shirley MacLaine's neighbors say they would love to have something in common with the movie star — her modest property tax assessment.

Neighbors complain about MacLaine's property tax-assessment.

Records show Ms. MacLaine paid at least $1.15 million for her 36 mountaintop acres in 1992, but it is assessed at $107,643. She paid $589 in property taxes last year.

Bill Donahue, who pays more than twice as much on 6.2 acres of property, said he thinks Ms. MacLaine is getting an "outrageous" tax break.

Frank Novelli, a police sergeant who paid just $15 less than Ms. MacLaine, also believes his land must be worth far less than hers. "I will trade her straight up any time she wishes," Novelli said.

Ms. MacLaine would not comment Monday.

Benito Martinez of the county tax assessor's office said that in New Mexico, real estate agents are not required to report sales figures.

"That's what makes our jobs difficult, determining property values half-blindfolded," Martinez said.

NEW YORK — The sex scandal that brought down Dick Morris may not have ended his 20-year-marriage after all.

"Life is complicated and I'm old enough to never say never," Eileen McGann told Time magazine when asked whether she would consider taking her husband back.

Ms. McGann, a trial lawyer, stood by Morris when he resigned in August after reports that he had let a prostitute listen in on his phone conversations with President Clinton. She was harshly criticized at the time.

"I didn't know that feminists had decreed what the politically correct rules were for personal relationships," she said. "I did what was right for us."

Ms. McGann decided to end the marriage earlier this month. Morris, during TV appearances to plug his book about the Clinton White House, is pledging to win back the love of his wife.

NEW YORK — Richard Howard, the Pulitzer Prize-winning poet and translator, feels more than the routine admiration of one writer for another, in this case for Jules Verne. The French 19th-century science-fiction novelist provided Howard with an escape hatch from a troubled family situation during his youth.

So, he will make the opening remarks Friday at a screening of a newly restored version of "Michel Strogoff," a 1926 silent film based on a Verne novel. The screening is part of a four-day Verne film festival by the French Institute-Alliance Francaise at Florence Gould Hall, 55 East 59th St., Manhattan.

Howard was the translator of Verne's "Paris in the 20th Century," which was discovered in 1989 in an attic by Verne's great-grandson and was recently published by Random House. The book was rejected for publication when it was written 130 years ago, and it is not exactly garnering rave reviews now.

The Shirelles got their start through a high school talent show.

PASSAIC, N.J. — It was just a student talent show, but the 1957 performance helped launch a rock 'n' roll foursome into stardom. So 40 years later, the site of the show has been renamed Shirelle Auditorium.

Two of the Shirelles, Shirley Alston Reeves and Doris Jackson, attended the ceremony Sunday along with 400 fans and well-wishers.

They and Beverly Lee and the late Micki Harris were juniors at Passaic High School when they sang a song they wrote, "I Met Him on a Sunday." An impressed classmate, Mary Jane Goff, had them repeat the performance for her mother, a record producer.

"I have chills just talking about it. It was such a momentous day," Ms. Goff told the audience.

The Shirelles went on to record a string of Top 40 hits in the early '60s, including "Will You Still Love Me Tomorrow" and "Dedicated to the One I Love."

"I've heard of people naming their daughters 'Shirelle,' but never an auditorium. Isn't that beautiful?" Ms. Reeves said.

CLINTON: GOP leaders praise speech

(From 1A)

ical division, it was a bright day of unity and reconciliation. Republicans and Democrats tipped hats. Clinton was ushered to the podium by Republican nemeses, House Speaker Newt Gingrich among them.

Sen. Connie Mack, R-Fla., praised the tone and the substance of Clinton's speech. "It was clearly one given with an outreached hand, I believe, to all of us to work together. I thought the inaugural was very positive, almost spiritual ... and hopefully a healing event as well."

Bob Dole, the defeated Republican presidential nominee, was in Washington but kept out of the public eye and issued no statements. He was remembered at Clinton's inauguration in comments by Sen. John Warner, R-Va., and the Rev. Billy Graham.

In the spirit of the day, Gingrich presented Clinton and Vice President Al Gore with flags that had flown over the capital that morning. At a lunch in Statuary Hall, Gingrich said the flags were a reminder that "while we may disagree about some things, here you're among friends."

Gingrich would benefit from political reconciliation. On Tuesday, the House was to vote on penalties for Gingrich over ethics violations.

Clinton's first official act was to sign a proclamation declaring Monday a national day of hope and renewal.

Madeline Albright, meanwhile, won unanimous approval from the Senate Foreign Relations Committee to be secretary of state. She is the first of Clinton's new Cabinet nominees to pass committee scrutiny, and the full Senate is expected to confirm her quickly.

The inaugural parade route was a wall of patriotic bunting, and thousands of people lined the streets. There were 116 bands and marching units from around town and across the nation.

The Clintons rode most of the way in their limousine but then delighted the crowd by walking the last two blocks to the White House. The president and Chelsea stripped off their coats despite the cold.

"A lot of excitement is hitting us all at once," gushed Samuel Montoya, who played a guitar in a mariachi band sponsored by New Mexico's Highland University.

Madelyn Sheets, a fourth-grade teacher from San Diego, said Clinton's inaugural address "really showed a vision." "It's about history. It's about continuity. It's the time for the country to stop and ask where do we want to go?"

Clinton was the first Democrat in 60 years elected to a second term.

Unli[illegible] his first term, when Democrats ruled Congress as well as the White House, the president began this time facing a partisan Republican majority in the House and Senate. Clinton, in his inaugural address, said Americans did not elect a divided government "to advance the politics of petty bickering and extreme partisanship they plainly deplore."

"No, they call all us instead to be repairers of the breach and to move on with America's mission." The passage drew the loudest applause of his speech. "America demands and deserves big things from us, and nothing big ever came from being small," Clinton declared

Historically, second terms are worse than the first for presidents, and they have often been marred by political scandal. Clinton already faces difficult legal and ethics investigations.

The promises and challenges of a new century — and a new millennium — were woven throughout the president's speech from the west steps of the Capitol.

"At the dawn of the 21st century, a free people must now choose to shape the forces of the Information Age and the global society, to unleash the potential of all our people and, yes, to form a more perfect union," Clinton said.

He promised a cleaner environment and more educational opportunities so that "the doors of higher education will be open to all."

And, he promised political reforms, as he did in his inaugural address four years ago. The system should be changed, Clinton said, "so that the voice of the people will always speak louder than the din of narrow interest."

Clinton will come forth with specific proposals Tuesday when he addresses the Democratic National Committee as it installs a new chairman, Colorado Gov. Roy Romer. He also is expected to open his battle against a balanced budget amendment to the Constitution.

Republicans generally praised Clinton's speech, though some questioned his sincerity.

Sen. Orrin Hatch, R-Utah, said it was "a tight, well-drawn, optimistic, uplifting speech that I felt did him and his administration a lot of good."

Rep. Bob Livingston, R-La., chairman of the House Appropriations Committee, was more measured in his reaction. "I think he certainly gave a Republican-oriented speech but time will tell whether or not he means it or it was rhetoric," he said.

Clinton, asked by a reporter about the prospect for an end to partisan battles, replied, "Pretty good chance."

HISTORY: Second term brings chance at achievement

(From 1A)

moment for him, America's youthful leader of so many seeming contradictions? Given a second chance, but with a Republican Congress as his chaperone, where will Clinton's search for history lead the nation?

The possibilities are many; the path to achieve uncertain.

Perhaps a balanced budget and, as a result, a redefined Democratic Party, freed of its tax-and-spend label. Maybe Middle East peace or some other landmark success abroad. Steps to put Social Security and Medicare on firmer financial footing are being discussed.

Or, perhaps, it will be a distinction less coveted, some blemish or scar from investigations into questionable Democratic fund-raising or past dealings in Arkansas.

His own thoughts squarely on earning a place in history, Clinton called for an end to "the politics of petty bickering and extreme partisanship."

The prospect of bipartisan cooperation will be sorely tested in the weeks ahead, as Clinton unveils his budget and seeks a fresh start with Republican congressional leaders he cast as callous and mean spirited in his re-election campaign.

The target for many such barbs was House Speaker Newt Gingrich, like Clinton both a student of history and a man whose foibles often overshadow his considerable talents. Eager for a fresh start of his own, the speaker was in a forgiving mood on Inauguration Day.

"While we may disagree on some things, here you are among friends," Gingrich told Clinton and Vice President Al Gore at the traditional Capitol luncheon.

Such a cooperative tone is likely to echo through Feb. 4, when Clinton delivers his State of the Union address. But there already are myriad signs of the conflict that will follow Clinton's budget submission two days later.

Throughout late 1995 and 1996, Clinton pummelled Republicans for their plan to significantly control Medicare spending as part of a blueprint for balancing the budget. In 1997, Republicans want Clinton to take the lead in proposing significant Medicare reforms, but Clinton has decided to push more modest savings. Republicans are in no mood for another major fight on the issue, but already are accusing Clinton of budgetary gimmicks.

Clinton, in turn, says Republicans are opening the new year with a gimmick of their own — a constitutional amendment requiring a balanced budget. Senate Majority Leader Trent Lott warned over the weekend that Clinton's team was putting the bipartisan spirit at risk with "hysterical" attacks on this GOP priority.

Clinton and Republicans also are at odds over the administration's plan to cut defense spending, money that Clinton needs to pay for tax cuts promised in last year's campaign as well as a bigger education budget and other Democratic domestic priorities.

Still, Lott and Gingrich said they were optimistic of reaching an agreement, and Clinton sounded more like a Republican than a Democrat at times in his speech, promising a leaner government that "lives within its means, and does more with less."

But as Clinton labors to resolve his differences with the Republicans, there will be pressures from Democrats as well, beginning with demands for major changes to the welfare law Clinton signed last year. Clinton has pledged to restore $16 billion in cut welfare funding, but Republicans are in no mood for major changes.

"You were elected by the poor and the humble people," Jesse Jackson reminded Clinton at a prayer service Monday morning.

Several lawmakers concerned about Social Security's solvency had hoped Clinton would use the national stage of his inauguration to push specific solutions, including changes in the way the government calculates inflation. But the president, chastened by failure to deliver the biggest promise of his first term — health care for all — would not go along, only promising vaguely to be part of the reform effort.

He was vague as well on the issue of campaign finance reform, an area of considerable disagreement between the political parties and an issue Clinton pushed in his 1992 campaign but largely ignored as president until his party's fund-raising came under scrutiny last year.

All this uncertainty, however, did not deter Clinton from grand thoughts of how he might be one day be remembered and he wished aloud near the end of his speech, "Let us shape the hope of this day into the noblest chapter of our history."

PROJECT: Desert Shores to include public facilities

(From 1A)

The development will contain 1,500 residences surrounding the lake, which will have several "fingers" to allow for approximately 267 lakefront estates. Residences will be both single family residences and lakefront lots to multi-family units including apartments, condominiums and townhomes. Prices are expected to cover a wide range of pocketbooks, Montana Band officials say.

A portion of the development will be open to the public, with public docks for boating and swimming and boat rental facilities. Commercial development is expected to include restaurants, boutiques and an arts and crafts village.

Another centerpiece of the development is a 2,500-seat amphitheater for concerts and other entertainment.

The wealthy Montana Band, from Alberta, Canada, took possession of the site after a Canadian company defaulted on a real estate loan after the "oil bust" of the 1980s and waited for the right time and project to develop the land, the officials said.

PAROLE: Family wants convicted murderer to stay in prison

(From 1A)

"I can say that I'm not as angry as I used to be. There's not anything to do besides deal with it," Ms. Hunt said. "But the anger is always going to be there."

Family members now are starting a letter-writing campaign in hopes of keeping Williams behind bars for a greater percentage of his sentence.

"We have a lot of friends and relatives writing letters and we're starting a petition," Ms. Hunt said.

The Ornelases have established a post office box for anyone who feels the need to write the Texas Department of Criminal Justice's Parole Board regarding this issue. The address is P.O. Box 743, Monahans, Texas, 79756.

Ms. Hunt is trying to convince the parole board not only to keep Williams imprisoned beyond the five years, but to hold up the next review for a further three years.

Unless this hold is put on his file, Williams will be up for parole every April until the board decides to release him.

Williams was sentenced on a plea agreement, which allowed him to avoid harsher punishment.

Prosecutors at the time were leery of having a jury decide punishment on Williams, because of extenuating circumstances surrounding the murder.

A physician examined Williams and determined that he was suffering from a mood disorder from anabolic steroid use and was unable to control his temper.

While that made no difference on guilt or innocence, it could have led to a suspended sentence for Williams if the case had gone to trial, prosecutors said.

Williams did not have a criminal background, made good grades in high school and college, and was viewed as a good citizen by those around him, according to prosecutors.

GOP: Republicans find Clinton's tone encouraging

millennium."

Gingrich himself tried to be upbeat, proclaiming in a toast at a lunch for Clinton in the Capitol, "This is a joyous occasion." But it was a reference more to the peaceful workings of democracy than to the GOP psyche.

"It's been a very difficult time for Newt and for his wife, but in a strange way it's kind of pulled the Republicans closer together," suggested Rep. John Kasich, R-Ohio, chairman of the House Budget Committee and one of the GOP's rising stars.

Republicans could still console themselves, of course, with the fact that they remain in control of Congress — a point Gingrich joked about in his luncheon remarks.

And at least one Republican, Sen. John Warner of Virginia, had the second-most prominent role on the inaugural podium, after Clinton, as chairman of the inaugural committee.

"You'd much rather win the White House. But for the long-term good for the country and the party, I think we'd rather have Congress," suggested longtime GOP operative Charles Black, a former acting RNC chairman.

Black, like many other leading Republicans, found encouragement in Clinton's conciliatory tone. "We have a great opportunity here, if he's serious, to pass some Republican legislation," Black said.

Rep. Susan Molinari, R-N.Y., last summer's GOP convention keynoter, agreed. "Smaller government, personal responsibility ... he was talking about those themes that bring us together," she said.

"Well, I had something else in mind, obviously, until the election," said Sen. Frank Murkowski, R-Alaska, who attended the inauguration. "But that's the way America goes."

Rep. Bob Livingston, R-La., chairman of the House Appropriations Committee, said he was "just honored to be out there on the porch (of the Capitol) ... This was a time to put aside partisan differences and start thinking about how we can work together toward getting a better future."

Hong Kong worried about future of civil rights under Chinese rule

■ Residents are concerned as Chinese panel seeks to reduce the power of the colony's 1991 Bill of Rights.

Associated Press

HONG KONG — Fueling worries about the future of civil rights in Hong Kong, a China-appointed panel on Monday approved a rollback of some of the colony's liberties when it returns to Chinese rule July 1.

Long ruled by Britain, Hong Kong has built up a phalanx of civil and democratic rights legislation in the last five years. China clearly wants to reverse at least some of these laws, arguing that they were passed without its consent.

In particular, it seeks to curb the power of Hong Kong's 1991 Bill of Rights in favor of the Basic Law, the constitution Beijing has written for Hong Kong.

If the Chinese government approves the panel's decision, several amendments to the Bill of Rights will be repealed. That means China would: give the police power to ban peaceful demonstrations, tighten controls on links with foreign organizations, and weaken rights to privacy for citizens' personal data.

On the other hand, the panel agreed to keep Hong Kong's liberalized broadcasting laws intact, along with the legislature's power to summon officials to testify at hearings.

The proposed changes were met with strong protest in Hong Kong when the Chinese unveiled them in October 1995. According to Xinhua, the official Chinese news agency, the changes were approved in Beijing over the weekend by the legal subgroup of the Preparatory Committee, which is preparing the July 1 change of sovereignty.

The Hong Kong government called them "misguided recommendations" that would "send a most worrying signal to the people of Hong Kong and the international community."

Speaking on Hong Kong radio, legislator and democracy campaigner Emily Lau said the public "will feel very oppressed because they fear that the new regime would be very intolerant."

Still, University of Hong Kong law professor Raymond Wacks said it was "mildly encouraging" that the committee didn't rubber-stamp all the recommended changes.

The committee also recommended repealing electoral reforms which in 1995 brought about Hong Kong's first wholly elected, all-Chinese legislature. Saying the reforms were enacted without its approval, China plans to disband the legislature and hold fresh elections next year.

Before the changes are enacted, they must be approved by the full Preparatory Committee of 150 Chinese and Hong Kong notables and then by China's parliament.

The Basic Law embodies China's promises to uphold Hong Kong's freedoms and capitalist system after the July 1 handover. It grants the legislature a say in the choice of Supreme Court judges, and the right to impeach the governor — powers the colonial legislature doesn't have.

Many of its clauses, however, mirror several in China's own constitution that the Communist regime guarantees on paper but severely curtails in practice. Free speech is one example.

China argues that Britain managed fine without a Bill of Rights for most of its 156 years in Hong Kong, and only introduced civil liberties laws as it was about to leave.

But Nihal Jayawickrama, another Hong Kong University law professor, said the past system worked because colonial authorities were answerable to an elected government in Britain.

"In the future," he told Hong Kong radio, "the government of Hong Kong is going to be responsible to an authoritarian, non-elected government."

Indians send children to beg in Arab nations

■ Villagers in north east India are being investigated for selling their deformed children to Saudi Arabia.

Associated Press

MURSHIDABAD, India — In this desperately poor corner of India, villagers with handicapped children were among the few people making any money. For years, they sent their children — deformed by burns or birth defects — to Saudi Arabia to beg.

The practice was little known, until Saudi Arabia deported 76 Indian girls last week. Now, Indian officials are investigating the export of beggar children to wealthy Arab nations, and the girls are coming home to families less than happy to see them.

"We will have to starve now as we do not have any other source of income," said Altaf Hossain, who described how he sold his 16-year-old daughter to a trafficking ring for beggars.

Hossain, who lives in Murshidabad, a farming district 120 miles north of Calcutta, said his daughter, Begum Khatun, was among the girls flown from Jeddah, Saudi Arabia, to Bombay on Jan 12.

At first, police and social workers in Bombay were baffled by the arrival of the girls, some as young as 6 years old and many with physical handicaps or deformities. They were being cared for at four children's homes in Bombay while authorities traced their parents and tried to arrange to send them home.

Hossain said his daughter's feet were damaged during her birth. She could not walk properly and therefore could not work. In fact, there is little work to be had in Murshidabad. There are no factories or other large-scale businesses. Most people farm, but seasonal droughts and floods prevent farming for most of the year.

So Hossain sold his daughter for $800 to traffickers who arrange passports and transportation for children to go beg in rich Arab nations. Disabled children are prized as beggars because they elicit sympathy. The trips are considered especially lucrative now, during the holy month of Ramadan, when Muslims are known to be most generous.

The West Bengal government has ordered an investigation, with plans to question the girls once they return to the state. But those involved say the traffic in beggars has been going on for about two decades, and that children are taken from villages across West Bengal and other Indian states.

Traffickers accompany the children on the flights to Arab nations, posing as relatives. Abdus Samad, a local government leader, said the practice was common and that his own son had worked for the ring, escorting a disabled girl and her mother to Saudi Arabia a year ago.

One man, who spoke on condition of anonymity, said he has invested in the racket, supplying money to pay parents and buy forged passports, visas and plane tickets. He said an investment of about $3,000 could be doubled in three months from what is collected by the children in Arab nations.

Villagers in Murshidabad said "investors" included school teachers, government office workers and local politicians.

It was not immediately clear how long the girls had been in the Persian Gulf. Apparently, they lived and begged around mosques.

Social workers in Bombay said there were tattoos of flowers and fish skeletons on the hands of most of the girls — perhaps branding them as belonging to a particular boss in Saudi Arabia.

Social worker Anil Gite said one of the girls sent home from Saudi Arabia told him she made about $100 a day and turned all of it over to her "uncles."

The girl, Abdul Sanjana, was about 7 years old and had burn marks on her legs. She said she was burned in West Bengal before leaving, but it was not clear if traffickers deliberately disfigured her for the trip.

Greek court convicts pair for grave robbery

ATHENS, Greece (AP) — The parents of a Greek medical student have been sentenced to four months in prison for stealing bones from a cemetery to aid their son's study of the human anatomy.

Philip and Evangelia Danglis were found guilty of "disrespect of the dead" and sentenced by a three-member tribunal on Friday, Zissis said.

The move came two years after the wife of the deceased filed charges against the parents, accusing them of sneaking into a local cemetery, stealing her spouse's bones and mailing them to Bulgaria where the Danglis' son was attending medical school.

Rodman penalty was right move

Chicago Bulls forward Dennis Rodman, long known for his erratic behavior and violent or profane outbursts, has been handed the second longest suspension ever ordered by the NBA and fined $25,000 after a kicking incident that injured a courtside photographer.

The penalty is entirely justified because of Rodman's violent actions and should be a signal to other professional athletes — as well as the younger interscholastic athletes who emulate them — that uncivilized conduct and attacks will not be condoned.

In addition to his fine, Rodman was suspended for at least 11 games and will be required to meet with a counselor designated by the NBA. The NBA's leading rebounder could return to action with the Bulls following the All-Star Game on Feb. 9.

This is an important step, however, to convince professional athletes that their celebrity status and huge salaries do not relieve them of the responsibility to conduct themselves responsibly both on and off the field or court.

Rodman contends he did not see the photographer and was kicking at the camera rather than cameraman Eugene Amos, who was treated at a hospital following the incident. His injuries were not considered serious.

But past actions by Rodman argue against the incident having been accidental in nature. Last month he was suspended by the Bulls for two games without pay for a profane tirade on television after a game.

It's time for such assaults and outbursts by professional athletes to end — and hopefully the penalty assessed against Rodman will be a step in that direction.

Immunity question needs close scrutiny

The last-minute intervention of the Republic of Georgia's President Eduard Shevardnadze has prevented one of his diplomats from evading a probe into a car crash that resulted in the death of a 16-year-old girl. While the president's willingness to waive the immunity of the second-ranking embassy official is encouraging, the incident underlines the need to end widespread abuse of the system.

It appeared the official would not be called to account until President Shevardnadze was made aware of the outrage in Washington. ...

Immunity has long been abused. ... Recently, two Russian diplomats scuffled with New York traffic officers who tried to ticket them.

President Shevardnadze has set a good example, acting "on moral and ethical grounds." Had his conscience not been his guide, there was talk of the loss of $30 million in foreign aid.

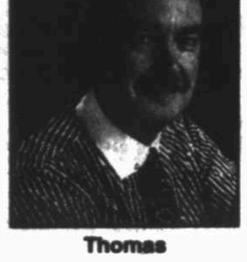
Evolution furor based on poor translation

Last fall, Pope John Paul II delivered a speech in French on evolution to the Pontifical Academy of Science. The Catholic News Service and Vatican Information Service wrote stories quoting the Pope as saying that evolution is "more than a hypothesis." The implication was that the church's historic teaching that man was uniquely created by God is itself evolving toward a scientific, non-creation model. That was the spin put on the Pope's remarks by The New York Times, which carried a front-page story on this "new" teaching, and by other newspapers, the wire services and this column.



Thomas

I was critical of the Pope's "remarks" and suggested he was moving in the direction of a materialistic worldview that is at the heart of communism, a system this Pope has consistently opposed and worked to ensure its collapse in the Soviet Union and Eastern Europe.

The problem was that the initial English translation of the Pope's remarks was incorrect.

L'Osservatore Romano, the official publication of the Holy See, provided this translation of the key phrase in the Pope's address: "Today, almost half a century after the publication of the encyclical (Humani Generis), new knowledge has led to the recognition of more than one hypothesis in the theory of evolution" — emphasis mine.

Acting independently of L'Osservatore Romano, the Catholic World News service posted its own translation from the Pope's original French text. The critical passage read: "Today, more than a half-century after the appearance of that encyclical, some new findings lead us toward the recognition of more than one hypothesis within the theory of evolution."

In both of these translations, it is clear that the Pope was not watering down or liberalizing the church's view that the origin of man remained open to debate. He said that there are several theories of origin within the scientific community. Many Catholics who wrote me to complain about the mistranslation said that the Catholic catechism teaches the possibility of dual origins — possible evolution of the body, but divine creation of the soul, a view that could weaken claims to the authenticity of other miraculous events later in Scripture.

The correct translation is a long way, indeed, from U.S. News & World Report's statement that "the Pope declared that evolution is 'more than just a theory,' " and Time magazine's twist, claiming the Pope said, "new knowledge leads us to recognize that the theory of evolution is more than a hypothesis."

Not only the secular press was confused. Writing in The Catholic World Report, Rick DeLano of West Covina, Calif., said, "My own diocesan newspaper, the Tidings of Los Angeles, in a Catholic News Service article entitled 'Blessing Evolution' ran the statement: 'The Pontiff said it was time to recognize evolution as more than a hypothesis. Pope John Paul went a step further (than Pius XII).' "

While secularists may have been initially thrilled by the Pope's apparent move toward the thinking of the "kingdom of this world," they and the Pope are back to where they started. John Paul II seemed to be saying that science can explain only what exists, and it frequently must revise its conclusions. Occasionally, science can explain how some things came to be, again, sometimes having to correct itself. But science cannot explain who made what is and, in most cases, cannot explain how it came to be. As God said to Job, "Where were you when I laid the foundations of the universe?"

It is the ultimate question, and the Pope did not budge from the source of the ultimate answer. It was the translator, not the Pope, who proved fallible on this one. It is said that truth rarely catches up to error. Maybe, but the effort must be made.

Gingrich's behavior brazen but not surprising

BOSTON — The brazen character of Newt Gingrich's conduct glares out from the measured legal prose of the House ethics committee counsel's report. Even by the standards of today's money-driven politics in this country, it is stunning.

The speaker of the House used tax-deductible contributions to a foundation, one set up to help inner-city youth, to finance televised ideological workshops. The purpose, stated to Republican leaders, was to build a conservative Republican majority.

Gingrich's political-action committee, GOPAC, helped to organize the operation, finance it and market it. But Gingrich, when under investigation, had his lawyers tell the ethics committee that GOPAC was not involved.

Brazen, but not surprising. For all along Newt Gingrich has been a Leninist: a man consumed by the desire for power and utterly unconcerned about how he got it. The end justified the means.

"The violation does not represent only a single instance of reckless conduct," the ethics committee counsel, James Cole, said. "Rather, over a number of years and in a number of situations, Mr. Gingrich showed a disregard and lack of respect for the standards of conduct that applied to his activities."

The bipartisan ethics subcommittee at first supported Cole in wanting to charge that the speaker "knew or should have known" he was giving it false information. But after Gingrich plea-bargained to admit his guilt in slightly less stark terms, the subcommittee made it just "should have known."

Cole concluded that the speaker had violated the tax laws and lied to the committee. While not prepared to go that far, the members of the subcommittee said that his political use of tax-exempt funds and his submission of misleading information "was intentional or it was reckless."

When he admitted the violation of ethical standards, Gingrich said he had been "naive." It would be hard to find a more inappropriate adjective for what the ethics report found he had done over the years.

In 1990 Gingrich set up what he called the American Opportunities Workshops, a series of televised workshops that took place at 600 places around the country. He kept out references to the Republican Party, but he told Republican officials that the purpose of the workshops was "winning seats from the most local office to the White House."

GOPAC spent $500,000 on the first televised workshop. Then, because it was so expensive, Gingrich transferred the operation to a tax-exempt youth support organization called the Abraham Lincoln Opportunity Foundation. GOPAC suggested that rich conservatives give money to it, and the foundation spent $260,000 in tax-deductible contributions for the broadcast workshops. GOPAC continued to run the operation.

Next there was Gingrich's televised college course. It, too, had a tax-exempt sponsor — which spent $1.4 million.

Cole's report said that both ventures offered "a partisan political message for the purpose of building the Republican Party." For that purpose, then, the Treasury was denied taxes on $1,660,000. In effect, the public — you and I — paid for the Gingrich operations.

Brazenness was the Gingrich style on the way up the ladder, and it remained his style when he won a Republican majority in the House in 1994. Lawyers for polluting industries went into House committee rooms to write bills undoing environmental laws. One of his lieutenants, Rep. John Boehner, distributed checks from a tobacco Pac on the floor of the House.

But the attempt to brazen his way through the ethics investigation failed. And that leaves honorable House Republicans with a bitter problem. They must feel they were taken by the leaders who said the speaker's violation was a mere jaywalking offense. But abandoning him now would look like capitulation.

The result is that the speaker of the House will be a man regarded by much of the public as a lawless bully. Some people will be glad to have a wounded Newt Gingrich in the chair. Most Americans think it is time for more honor and more civility in our politics.

U.S. would be better off with original constitution

Some people confuse economic issues with constitutional issues. The Constitution of the United States does not speak to economic systems.

Reese

The Constitution, if you just read it, is clearly about the division of powers between the federal and state governments. It limits the federal government to certain specified duties. It forbids state governments to do a few things. It spells out certain but not all, rights of the people. And that's it.

So far as the Constitution is concerned, if a state or states wish to enact cradle-to-the-grave welfare systems, it's perfectly OK. If states wish to have public education or no public education, it's OK.

The men who wrote the Constitution and the people who ratified it clearly understood that 95 percent of all governing would be done by the states.

The Constitution says that a citizen of one state must be afforded the rights of a citizen by other states. In other words, reciprocity. It does not say, however, that a person is a citizen of all the states. As originally written and understood, a person was a citizen of the state in which he was born.

The 13 colonies were created separately, and when they broke with England they considered themselves separate nations. They formed a confederation to fight the war with England. Then they saw the obvious: that there are advantages — principally in dealing with foreign nations — in maintaining some kind of confederation or union.

At no time, however, did the majority intend that the federal government would govern in such domestic matters as economic systems, welfare, education, health care and so forth. Those were all subject matters everyone assumed would be handled by the states, and they were.

The government we live under is quite different from the original constitutional republic. Our government began with the War Between the States, which was really about constitutional issues, not slavery, and Reconstruction.

From that beginning, which we could call the second American republic, we have evolved into the present centralized national government, which views states as little more than administrative units. In the present government, using rubbery interpretation, the national government does pretty much anything it wants to do.

Most Americans seem satisfied with the present situation. I think the first republic is a better system. I think our present system suffers from two major defects:

1. There is now no effective barrier to unlimited expansion of government powers.

2. Our centralized government suffers from the same inefficiencies that the Soviet centralized government suffered from. A few central bureaucrats trying to micromanage a large and diverse country are trying to do the impossible and will inevitably mess things up.

But when I argue that the federal government should get out of welfare and education, I'm not arguing against welfare and education. I'm merely arguing that state governments, being smaller and closer to the people, can much more effectively design and operate a system that will satisfy people's needs.

But it's an old, old debate. Even at the original constitutional convention, there were a few who wanted a national, centralized government. They didn't have the votes then, and the issue was finally taken to the battlefields in the 1860s. After the South lost, the centralized national system was imposed. Now we traditionalists are in the minority.

Do not, however, confuse conservatives with traditionalists. Most people who claim to be conservatives today are as devoted to centralized national government as any liberal.

Their difference with the liberals is just a squabble over who runs the big government choo-choo.

Du Pont murder trial set for today

MEDIA, Pa. (AP) — One of the richest murder defendants in U.S. history goes on trial Tuesday in a case that will determine not whether John E. du Pont shot wrestler David Schultz, but whether he was sane when he did it.

"If he's insane, he should not be punished," said Thomas Bergstrom, attorney for the 58-year-old du Pont.

But legal insanity goes much further than proving du Pont suffered from delusions of being the Dalai Lama and Jesus Christ. The defense must convince the jury that his mental illness — paranoid schizophrenia — made du Pont unable to recognize that pulling the trigger was wrong.

Instead of forcing prosecutors to prove the defendant guilty, the burden of proof rests on the defense, and the burden is so heavy few attorneys choose the insanity argument.

"Most people are uncomfortable with the insanity defense because they have a hard time believing if someone's telling the truth," said Amiram Elwork, director of the law-psychology graduate program at Widener University. "The typical response that people have is, 'What do you mean he didn't do it? We saw him do it.'"

Last Jan. 26, du Pont and his bodyguard drove to a home on the edge of du Pont's 800-acre Foxcatcher estate where Schultz, his wife Nancy, and their two children had been living for years.

Schultz, 36, one of du Pont's few close friends, was training at du Pont's elaborate amateur wrestling facilities in hopes of repeating his gold-medal-winning 1984 performance at the Atlanta Olympics.

Schultz, working on his car, met du Pont with, "Hey, coach." Du Pont replied, "You got a problem with me?" He then shot Schultz once in the arm and twice in the chest. Mrs. Schultz watched in horror as the last bullet was fired.

Du Pont retreated to his mansion and stayed inside with his gun collection for two days while SWAT team negotiators tried to coax him out. He was captured while trying to fix a boiler system that police had shut off outside the mansion.

Delaware County Common Pleas Judge Patricia Jenkins initially found him incompetent to stand trial. Then after a two-month stay in Norristown State Hospital, where he was treated with the anti-pychotic drug Haldol, he was ruled competent to aid his attorneys in his defense.

Two arrested in Cosby extortion attempt

NEW YORK (AP) — Two days after Bill Cosby's only son was slain, a woman claiming to be the entertainer's illegitimate daughter was arrested in an unrelated attempt to extort $40 million, federal prosecutors said Monday.

Autumn Jackson, 22, demanded the money to keep from going to a tabloid with the story. She and Jose Medina, 54, were arrested Saturday at a New York law firm representing Cosby after they went to pick up a purported $24 million settlement to "end everything," said U.S. Attorney Mary White.

According to an FBI affidavit, the family of Bill Cosby apparently had made payments to Autumn Jackson for educational purposes for several years. A family spokesman confirmed the details of the arrangement to ABC News and said Cosby categorically denied that this woman is his daughter and has a birth certificate proving she is not his daughter.

Cosby spokesman David Brokaw did not immediately return calls Monday.

Jackson and Medina were scheduled to appear at hearing Tuesday in federal court. If convicted of extortion, they each face up to five years in prison and a $250,000 fine.

Even though both suspects in the extortion case were identified as being from Southern California, authorities say it appears unrelated to last Thursday's shooting death of 27-year-old Ennis Cosby in Los Angeles.

"There is no evidence that extortion scheme is connected with the death of Ennis Cosby," White said.

A rerun of Bill Cosby's CBS television show "Cosby" went on as scheduled Monday night, with a notification to viewers that he wanted his show to go on. A tribute at the end showed a picture of Ennis Cosby and the words: "My Hero. My Son."

Meantime, Cosby's encouragement to tabloids to offer rewards in his son's killing led to a bidding war, with The Globe announcing a $200,000 reward to top the National Enquirer's $100,000 offer for information leading to an arrest and conviction.

Already, more than 200 calls have come in to a police hot line following the release of a sketch of a suspect in the slaying of Cosby, a Columbia University graduate student gunned down as he changed a flat tire.

Stan Goldman, a Loyola University law professor, cautioned that — just as in the O.J. Simpson murder case — the tabloids could do more harm than good.

He pointed out that a witness testified before a grand jury that she saw Simpson driving away from the crime scene at the time of the killings of his ex-wife and her friend. But because she sold her story to a tabloid, the prosecution feared she was tainted and never called her.

"The jury is going to look skeptically at information that came in solely as a result of a reward being offered," added Myrna Raeder, a professor at Southwestern School of Law. "The real question is what is the information and is it believable?"

Also Monday, police were saying little about a key woman witness and her relationship to Cosby, or about circumstances surrounding the killing on an interstate offramp.

The New York Daily News reported that Cosby had a blue pack of cigarettes in his hand and may have offered his killer a cigarette, believing the stranger who approached him was a homeless man.

The suspect in the Cosby killing was described as a white man, 25 to 32 years old, of average height and weight and wearing a light-colored cap.

Police spokesman Cmdr. Tim McBride said investigators were unsure whether there may be more than one suspect and whether anything was taken from Cosby's car, although robbery remains the likely motive.

Service projects, protests mark Dr. King's holiday

ATLANTA (AP) — Across the city where the Rev. Martin Luther King Jr. was born, volunteers honored him with deeds and not just words Monday, sprucing up dilapidated schools, helping out at food banks and cleaning up poor neighborhoods.

"I don't think Dr. King wanted us to praise him, but he wanted us to serve others in need," said Sherman Lofton, principal of Atlanta's Crim High School, one of the cleanup sites.

Mashunte Glass had off from school and could have spent the day on her new roller skates. Instead, the sixth-grader went to her middle school — named for King — to paint murals of him for a service project.

"I don't know the full story of Mr. King, but I am trying to learn through his books," the 12-year-old said. "I watched a movie about him yesterday, and I can't believe he's dead. He seems so alive. I wish he was."

It was one of many ways in which the nation celebrated the legacy of King on the federal holiday in his honor.

In New Hampshire, which adopted a Civil Rights Day instead of a state King holiday, organizers held a food drive, then piled empty food cartons on the steps of the Statehouse in Concord.

"We want to show our lawmakers that there is support from their constituents for this holiday," said 17-year-old organizer Dan Kruk, a student from Lake Forest, Ill., attending Brewster Academy in Wolfeboro.

King was born Jan. 15, 1929, and shot to death on April 4, 1968, in Memphis, Tenn., where he had gone in support of a sanitation workers' strike.

Admirers gathered in Memphis at the Mason Temple, where King gave his last speech the night before he was killed, for a concert by a choir of youngsters.

Tajuan Stout-Mitchell, then 15, was in the audience when King gave that speech. Her 15-year-old daughter, Cathryn, sang in the choir Monday.

Stout-Mitchell said her parents had brought her to hear King but refused to let her march in the sanitation strike protests.

"They said, 'No, your time will come. We brought you here to learn from this so you can teach your children,'" she said. "That's why I'm so glad my 15-year-old is singing and still celebrating the life and work of Dr. King."

In Atlanta, about 900 people attended the annual service at Ebenezer Baptist Church, where King once preached.

"The King holiday has become a remarkable day of humanitarian service across the nation, a day of reaching across racial and cultural lines in a spirit of unconditional love to help our disadvantaged brothers and sisters," said King's widow, Coretta Scott King.

Across town, Joseph Daniels, an eighth-grader at Martin Luther King Jr. Middle School, said his family would watch a tape of King's 1963 "I Have a Dream" speech, as they do every year.

"My mother shares her birthday with him so we really like to celebrate this day," said Daniels, who wore a black and white sticker that said "A day ON, Not a day OFF."

In Arizona, which lost millions of tourist dollars and the 1991 Super Bowl after voters twice rejected a state holiday, community leaders dropped the party-like flavor of recent King day observations in favor of more somber marches.

Committee: Madeline Albright nomination to get confirmation

WASHINGTON (AP) — Madeline Albright won unanimous approval Monday from the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, which sent her nomination as secretary of state to the full Senate where quick confirmation is expected.

Albright, the first of President Clinton's new Cabinet nominees to pass Senate committee scrutiny, will become the nation's first female secretary of state. The Senate is to take up her nomination Wednesday.

During a Jan. 8 confirmation hearing, the committee, chaired by Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., questioned Albright for almost eight hours. On Friday, she submitted the answers to 215 additional written questions asked by members of the panel after the hearing.

Although much of the questioning was amicable, Albright appeared to antagonize Helms by insisting that Congress increase the foreign operations budget and pay the $1.4 billion the United States owes the United Nations.

Helms, a leading budget-cutter who has conditioned payments to the world body on sweeping reforms in its organization, responded by saying he believed Albright was "sincerely wrong."

Still, the spat did not seem to affect Albright's chances for confirmation by the Republican-controlled Congress. The former ambassador to the United Nations earned support from many Republicans by advocating punitive measures against Cuba and blocking re-nomination of U.N. Secretary-General Boutros Boutros-Ghali late in Clinton's first term.

Monday's committee meeting, held in the panel's ornate Capitol meeting room just two hours before Clinton's inauguration, lasted less than 10 minutes. The dozen senators present — out of the panel's full complement of 18 — voted unanimously to endorse the nomination and send it on to the Senate floor.

Sen. Joseph Biden, D-Del., the committee's ranking Democrat, said he expected "it to sail through the Senate as it did through the committee."

"This is the first and most visible example of bipartisanship," Biden said. "It kind of worries me," he joked.

U.S. balloonist falls short of goal, lands in India

■ Steve Fossett crash-lands after breaking world distance, endurance records.

N.Y. Times Service

An American balloonist made a rough but safe landing in northern India on Monday, breaking world records for distance and duration, but failing in his attempt to fly nonstop around the world.

Harried by thunderstorms and only about 100 miles from the Himalayas, the solo balloonist, Steve Fossett, put his big balloon down at 2:35 a.m. EST on Monday in a dangerous 15-mile-an-hour wind near Sultanpur. The silvery balloon landed in a tree and was ripped apart, but Fossett was unhurt.

The support team for Fossett's Solo Spirit calculated that from the time he launched his balloon from St. Louis on Jan. 13, his flight covered 9,672 miles and lasted 146 hours and 54 minutes, slightly over six days. Fossett shattered his own world record for distance, 5,438 miles, but barely eclipsed the old duration mark, 144 hours and 14 minutes.

Fossett lost radio contact with his team in Chicago for several hours before he landed, and the first word that he was safe reached the team and Fossett's wife, Peggy, two hours after the landing. The balloonist made his way to a rural police station where he was able to call Chicago from a pay telephone.

"For a while last night when we lost touch with him, Peggy and the rest of us were very worried," said Timothy Kemper, the balloonist's spokesman. "We knew that Steve was being battered by storms and he was only about 700 feet off the ground. Earlier, the three balloonists on our support team had recommended that Steve land right away, but he insisted on staying up long enough to break the duration record."

Fossett told his team that remaining in constant communication with the ground controllers of the many nations over which he passed had robbed him of sleep and that he was often dangerously tired.

Cold was another problem. Although two heaters warmed the thin air in his capsule somewhat, the capsule temperature fell to minus 16 degrees Fahrenheit during the final high-altitude part of his trip. While flying above 24,000 feet he was compelled to breathe bottled oxygen continuously in his unpressurized capsule.

Kemper said Fossett, a 52-year-old securities broker who lives in Beaver Creek, Colo., had not decided whether he would try again next year to circle the world. If he does, he will need a larger balloon.

There was still sufficient fuel for Fossett to continue flying for another three days, but not nearly enough to get him across the Pacific and to the central United States. The balloonist used up propane fuel much faster than anticipated, and experts in his support group, including several long-distance balloonists, were unable to guess why.

The Solo Spirit, like two other balloons that attempted round-the-world trips this month, derived most of its lift from helium gas, but also needed hot air when rising or maintaining altitude in extreme cold. The hot air was generated by three burners fueled from compressed propane tanks.

It was apparent that any future effort by Fossett would require substantially more propane than the 3,320 pounds with which the Solo Spirit started out. But this presents a predicament: to lift more propane and the heavy steel tanks in which it is carried would require a larger balloon than the Solo Spirit, and this in turn would add to the propane requirement.

Fossett's philosophy in ballooning and in championship sailing has always been to travel alone with as few technological frills as possible. This has lightened his balloons and added to the duration of his flights.

Still, it remains to be seen whether a manned round-the-world balloon flight is feasible. Every year since 1991, balloonists from various countries have tried but failed.

Further round-the-world attempts will have to wait until the next Northern Hemisphere winter, when winds are most favorable.

Richard Branson of Britain and Dr. Bertrand Piccard of Switzerland, both of whom commanded abortive attempts two weeks ago, have announced plans to try again next year.

A new team, two Americans and an Australian, have announced plans to try for a circumnavigation in a balloon that, unlike the others, would get its lift from helium alone without hot air.

Returning astronaut to get long vacation

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — His four-month space odyssey almost over, astronaut John Blaha took one last treadmill run in orbit Monday as the home office promised him a long vacation when he gets back.

Space shuttle Atlantis is scheduled to bring Blaha home from the Russian space station Mir on Wednesday morning after 128 days in space for the American.

"If we wants a vacation, he certainly deserves it," said Frank Culbertson, director of NASA's shuttle-Mir docking program.

NASA had considered keeping the shuttle aloft an extra day to salvage a failed experiment with a vibration-free treadmill. But Blaha and two of his five U.S. crewmates successfully tested the machine Monday.

City to fill vacancy next month

Officials narrow administrator search to list of nine

By Michael Kashgarian
Staff Writer

The city's search for a health department and senior services administrator should be completed next month.

The application deadline was last week. "We received 31 applications and we have narrowed it down to nine," Assistant Director of Community Services Monette Burke said.

Assessment tests and interviews — by a five-person panel — for the finalists is scheduled for Monday, said Ms. Burke, who previously held the position to be filled.

"Hopefully by the end of that day, the panel will have a person to be recommended to (director of community services) Chuck Swallow," she said.

The new administrator is expected to begin work by mid to late February, Ms. Burke said. The advertised salary range for the position was $36,408 to $40,044 annually.

The city's health department administrator is responsible for a budget of about $1 million and supervises a staff of 17. In addition, the administrator oversees a contract with Community and Senior Services for the management of the two city-owned senior centers.

The health department is made up of three sections: medical, environmental and laboratory.

The medical section does immunizations, tuberculosis testing and testing/counseling for sexually transmitted diseases. The environmental section inspects and issues permits for food establishments, day care centers, public pools and septic tanks. And the laboratory section provides support services for the medical section and performs bacterial tests of water supplies for a 25-county area.

In addition to selecting a health department/senior services administrator, the city's community services division will begin looking to fill a newly created position.

City officials plan to hire a youth services coordinator to work with local sports associations that use public facilities, help meet recreational needs of Midlanders, assist in special events and oversee the city-sponsored youth basketball program.

The coordinator is one of eight new positions budgeted at the beginning of the fiscal year but hiring postponed until after the start of the new year to offset city expenses. The other positions are: three firefighters, three police officers and a plumbing inspector.

Energy needs

HOUSTON— The number of offshore drilling rigs needed to hunt for oil and gas is meager while the world's appetite for energy is growing, a major offshore oil drilling supplier said Monday. The dilemma facing the energy industry is that most of the easily found oil and gas around the world already is being tapped, C. Russell Luigs, chairman of Houston-based Global Marine Inc. said. "By our analysis, the market is getting tighter and tighter and tighter on a worldwide basis," Luigs said. "The easy stuff that was shut in has been brought back. Now, we're going to have to go out and drill for it.

A Day in the Life of Enid Davis

Woman is jack of all trades for local museum

By Georgia Temple
Staff Writer

A ready smile and an even quicker laugh are as common to Enid Davis as art is to a museum. For the past decade, Ms. Davis's job at the Museum of the Southwest has allowed her to combine her interest in people, in art and her training as a journalist.

"It's certainly not monotonous," Ms. Davis said of her position as administrative assistant. "Sometimes it's fast paced. Sometimes it's on the slow side. But, it's a wide variety of things to do. I've met some wonderful people, seen a lot of wonderful art, traveled some to places I probably wouldn't have gone otherwise."

Ms. Davis's current job developed from her original position at the museum. "When I first came to the museum, it was as membership secretary, which meant I kept track of the memberships and everything that involved plus doing other duties.

"When I got my first job description, which was probably a couple of years later, it had about three lines on it that had something to do with doing the publicity for the museum, being the liaison between the board and the staff, taking care of the central files, and then the last line was — 'Any other duties or assignments the director may give you.' And, of course, it's that last line that covers everything."

Everything includes, among other responsibilities, public relations, maintaining board records, correspondence, and some public programming.

"I take care of public programs such as Summer Sundays Lawn Concerts and the decorated Christmas

Superintendent earns $165,000 plus other perks

EL PASO (AP) — Although he heads one of the state's poorest districts, a border superintendent is one of Texas' best-paid school administrators and has access to an expense account that has cost taxpayers more than $50,000 over three years, the El Paso Herald-Post reported.

Anthony Trujillo, superintendent of the Ysleta Independent School District since 1992, now makes $165,000 annually and is the sole owner of a $1 million life insurance policy paid for by taxpayers.

The policy and a $20,000 raise were included in a new contract Trujillo accepted last year and which angered some school board trustees and parents throughout the district, the second-largest in El Paso County.

But in a copyright story in Saturday's Herald-Post, Trujillo said he hasn't asked for a raise since his original 1992 contract nor has he requested any perks.

"The board presented me with a contract. I felt it was a reasonable contract. I don't see anything in the contract that's out of line," Trujillo said.

Not everyone agrees.

"What's wrong here is that Mr. Trujillo is making a salary neither the public, parents, students or teachers had a say in," said Ysleta parent and activist Pam Harder. "It's too much money and should never have been given him.

"It's also about him having an exorbitant life-insurance policy, incredible health benefits, and still he's spending the taxpayers' money to buy lunch for friends and gifts for anybody he wants."

Trujillo spent thousands during a three-year period on meals, entertainment and travel, including stays at the Ritz Carlton in San Francisco and the Grand Hyatt in New York, according to school records reviewed by the newspaper.

Among the records are credit card statements and personal checks describing transactions that had nothing to do with school business and under state education codes could be considered illegal loans and misuse of funds.

According to an October 1994 Visa statement, Trujillo spent $162 for Broadway theater tickets while he was in New York attending a conference.

Forensic analyst testifies about shirt, window screen, bloody sock in alley

KERRVILLE (AP) — Darlie Routier's shirt had four bloody punctures in the right shoulder, but her body had no corresponding wounds, a prosecution witness testified Monday.

Charles Linch, a trace evidence analyst from the Southwest Institute of Forensic Sciences, said fiberglass slivers and rubber dust that seemed to match a window screen from the Routiers' home were found on a knife in a kitchen butcher block.

Linch's testimony opened the third week of Mrs. Routier's capital murder trial, which was moved to Kerrville because of publicity in North Texas.

Mrs. Routier, 27, is accused of fatally stabbing her sons, 5-year-old Damon and 6-year-old Devon, on June 6. Prosecutors say she also slashed herself and staged a crime scene to fool investigators.

Mrs. Routier says an intruder dressed in dark clothing and a baseball cap attacked her and the boys before fleeing through a cut screen in the garage of their Rowlett home.

It's frustrating when someone doesn't leave a message

More rambling thoughts ...

— Frustrating feeling: Hearing the telephone ring while you are in the shower first thing in the morning and then having the caller NOT leave a message, thus causing you to spend the next hour or so trying to figure out who in the heck it was that called.

— Is it really possible to "die laughing"?

— Unfortunately, there are very few people in today's society who can truly be called "inspirational."

TRIAL: Forensic expert testifies about evidence found at scene

(From 1B)

Mrs. Routier's shirt was punctured and if it could have been pulled away from the body when it was cut, Linch answered:

"That's the only way I know of that those punctures could occur without involving the skin," he said.

Linch also said debris taken from a knife in a kitchen butcher block yielded traces of rubber dust and fiberglass. He noted that the screen in the Routiers' home in the Dallas suburb was standard fiberglass.

Conducting tests on another screen cut with a similar serrated knife yielded the same debris, he said. Linch also said one finding indicated the Routiers' screen had been punctured from the outside.

Under cross-examination by defense attorney Richard Mosty, Linch said Mrs. Routier and her husband, Darin, were cooperative when they voluntarily provided hair and blood samples June 11.

Mosty also asked Linch whether an assailant could have committed the killings without getting blood on his body.

"That's variable," Linch replied. "It could possibly be done with no blood getting on the assailant."

Linch testified under prosecution questioning that he found fibers matching Damon's T-shirt and Mrs. Routier's shirt on a different knife.

Two hairs found inside a baseball cap on the Routiers' utility room floor were microscopically similar to those on Devon's head, he said.

Linch also testified about a male, adult, white tube sock found in an alley near the Routiers' home.

He said he found Caucasian limb hairs from either a leg or arm; hair from an animal in the deer family, such as deer, elk or antelope; and synthetic fiber that he later identified as microscopically similar to Reebok tennis shoes inside the utility room.

Mrs. Routier's relatives have cited the bloody sock as evidence that someone else committed the murders.

Linch also testified he found blood evidence in the kitchen sink, on its faucet and on the inside of the door of the cabinet, and a blood stain on a comforter on the lower bunk bed in the boys' room.

A large red stain on the garage floor turned out to be a syrupy material, like soda or a popsicle, he said.

trees that we have at Christmas," said Ms. Davis.

For the Summer Sunday Lawn Concerts, Ms. Davis contacts the performers, makes arrangements for their dates, handles the publicity and ensures the needs of the performers are met.

A native of Merkel, Ms. Davis moved to Odessa as a child. She graduated from Odessa High School and from Texas Christian University.

"I had several job offers in the journalism field, but my fiance was working out here, and so I came out here and applied around for newspaper jobs, of which there were none, so I did what everybody else did, I went to work in the oil business."

Her first position in the oil industry was with NL Baroid.

"I was there for ... I don't know how long, a long time," Ms. Davis said. "I changed jobs a couple of times, and then the bust came and I was without a job, and a friend who was working at the Museum (of the Southwest) called me one day, and said they had an opening. 'Would I like to apply for it?' I was offered the job and took it. I've been here 11 years this year."

At that time, Ms. Davis had worked as a volunteer with Las Manos, the museum's auxiliary organization, in the facility's shop. "I was familiar with the museum. It turned out to be a wonderful job. I love it."

The museum staff is, Ms. Davis said, "A good group of people because everybody has a different interest, and it makes for a really interesting mix of people."

Ms. Davis, whose husband died in 1989, is the mother of two grown daughters — Cynthia Belden, a librarian at the Carnegie Library in Ballinger, and Cecile Mear, an art conservator at the Cincinnati Art Museum. Mrs. Belden's husband, Matt, is a veterinarian, and Mrs. Mear's husband, John, is a researcher at the Children's Hospital in Cincinnati.

She has three grandchildren in Ballinger — "Martha, who is almost 16, I can't believe it. Joe, who is going on 14 soon, and Shannon, who is almost 9."

She also has Hildie, a 12-year-old dachshund, and "numerous outdoor cats."

A member of the West Texas Writers, the University Graduate Women, formerly AAUW, and the Permian Basin TCU Alumni Group, Ms. Davis also is active at her church, First Christian. In addition to the writing skills she uses at work, she writes meditations for use at church and for her own enjoyment.

Happiness is, Ms. Davis said, "Being content with what you have and what you are, having friends and family, a job you like and adequate income to cover necessary expenses, which I believe is different for each person."

Among her goals is encouraging all Midlanders to visit the Museum of the Southwest, 1705 W. Missouri Ave., at least once.

"Most museums are really fun and interesting places to be, to come to visit," said Ms. Davis. "One of the problems we have is convincing people who have never been here that we're not elitist, that you don't have to know anything about art to come and enjoy what we have, that art is a way of seeing, and you don't have to like it to have it mean something.

"We would just love for everybody in Midland and West Texas to come see what is here for them. We will welcome you with open arms."

At a Glance: Enid Davis

Birthplace: Merkel, Texas.

Hobbies: Do I have any? I love to read although I don't have enough time to do it. I like to work in my yard although it certainly doesn't look like it. I'm all thumbs so I can't do crafts although I love to try. I used to have hobbies, but I don't think I have hobbies anymore.

Favorite movie: I have two — "Lawrence of Arabia" and "Dr. Zhivago," which need to be seen on the big screen. They're wonderful, panoramic movies — the epic type.

Favorite food: Oh, gee. You shouldn't ask me that. I like Mexican, Italian, Chinese, German. Good plain American comfort food — fried chicken, mashed potatoes and gravy. Oh, dear, I shouldn't even talk about that.

Favorite vacation spot: That'll take some thinking. It used to be Rocky Mountain National Park in Colorado, but I haven't been up there in years. Santa Fe second and Hillsboro — the Hill Country area.

If I could visit any place in the world: I'd like to go to Germany where my father's family came from.

If I won the lottery: Oh, that would be fun. I don't play the lottery, but I play the Reader's Digest, but if I were so lucky I would fix up my house and yard, hire that gardener, give my children money, and fund my grandchildren's college education And then I would give scholarship money to the TCU Journalism Department and to the endowment at my church, First Christian Church. And I would like to have money for a housekeeper, a standing appointment at the beauty shop because I hate doing my own hair, and money to take people out to lunch and buy gifts for when I wanted to. That's all I need money for beyond normal expenses.

If I could change anything about me: If we're being facetious, I'd love to be six feet tall with red hair and green eyes and be able to sing in public without being embarrassed. When you're short, you can't see over people and you can't reach the top of the cabinets. Seems to me there's advantages to being tall.

EARN: One of state's poorest districts employs highest paid superintendent

(From 1B)

Trujillo's wife, Aimee, signed a personal check for the amount to reimburse the district, but under state law the cost of the tickets can still be considered an illegal loan and misuse of taxpayer money.

Trujillo's salary and spending is a contentious issue within a district that has been wracked by allegations of wrongdoing and bribery attempts, while being plagued by a high dropout rate.

Some school board members have alleged that they have been offered bribes in exchange for votes and have been harassed and intimidated. They blame Trujillo and fellow board members.

"I don't know what's happened to education, the students and the parents in all this," said trustee Ronda Scrivner, one of three board members who have complained. "There seems to be no end to how low they will go. It's like the Mafia or something."

Board president Adrienne "Tex" Pannell called the claims ludicrous.

Trujillo denied knowledge of the allegations or connection to any wrongdoing.

Meeting world's energy needs gets more difficult

By Michael Graczyk
Associated Press

HOUSTON— The number of offshore drilling rigs needed to hunt for oil and gas is meager while the world's appetite for energy is growing, a major offshore oil drilling supplier said Monday.

The dilemma facing the energy industry is that most of the easily found oil and gas around the world already is being tapped, C. Russell Luigs, chairman of Houston-based Global Marine Inc. said.

"By our analysis, the market is getting tighter and tighter and tighter on a worldwide basis," Luigs said. "The easy stuff that was shut in has been brought back. Now, we're going to have to go out and drill for it.

"The excess capacity is gone, and the demand continues to accelerate."

Global Marine's 2,400-person workforce and fleet of 26 rigs drilling worldwide for major, independent and government-owned energy companies makes it one of the largest such operations in the nation.

Luigs noted that at the depths of the oil industry depression in 1986, the worldwide drilling fleet had 340 offshore rigs sitting idle. His company now counts 65 idle, but only nine of those are capable of going to work quickly.

None of those nine, for example, is available for the Gulf of Mexico, the world's most active natural gas producer and an increasingly busy site for deep-water drilling.

"We have a standing offer to take any rig that comes available in the Gulf of Mexico, and we are standing in line for months to get them," he said. "There's nothing left that really qualifies as a decent drilling rig."

Another problem is not enough trained workers, he said.

"This industry essentially has lost a whole generation of skilled people," Luigs said of the losses of hundreds of thousands of people in the 1980s and the subsequent reluctance of young workers to enter the field.

"Today the shortages of engineers and supervisory people, also shortages of electricians, mechanics and welders, are going to limit the rate at which we are going to be able to pursue this recovery."

But over the past decade, worldwide demand for oil steadily has grown from 60 million barrels a day to about 72 million, a gain of some 20 percent.

At that rate, the industry must find another 20 million barrels a day in the next 10 years.

"That is a phenomenal statistic," he said. "This thing has essentially blown through everything that is available, and it's continuing to accelerate."

The higher demand until now has been met "by just turning on the tap, primarily in the Middle East," Luigs said. "Going forward, that's going to change. Everything that you could get at easily has been brought on stream. What we believe is that about 10 percent (of the acceleration) is going to come from existing reserves. ... The rest of it is going to have to come from new drilling.

"The news is good for the oil service industry. It's about to get a lot better for places like Houston and Aberdeen (in Scotland) and other oil centers around the world."

Luigs said his company does not expect much change in oil prices from the $19-per-barrel range.

"The fact is oil is a bargain," he said. "When you say that to a lot of consumers, they don't find that to be intuitively correct. But one way to look at it is to make a list of all the things you can buy for $1.50 a gallon.

"People are buying Suburbans, Jeeps and other vehicles of that nature because gasoline is cheap."

Martin Luther King Jr. remembered in ceremonies

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — The dream of slain civil rights leader Martin Luther King Jr. lived across Texas on Monday with prayers, parades and calls to end persisting racial discrimination.

Sunny skies prevailed in Dallas-Fort Worth, but even drizzly weather didn't deter thousands of people in San Antonio and Houston who turned out to commemorate King's birthday.

"I love it — beautiful," said Mary Martin, who took part in a two-mile march on San Antonio's predominantly black east side.

A red fire truck led the San Antonio procession, and moments before the march a group of firefighters decried what they say is bias against blacks in hiring and promotions in the San Antonio Fire Department.

"It hurts," said firefighter Johnny George, a captain with more than 22 years of experience. "You would like to think that you have a fair and equal chance."

Donald Fields, a spokesman for the Fire Fighters Equality Coalition, said the group was speaking out on the King holiday because is dream of racial equality is not a reality in the Fire Department.

"For these firefighters, that dream is a nightmare," Fields said.

Some firefighters have filed claims with the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission and are seeking "right to sue" permission from the federal agency so a class-action lawsuit can be filed, said Larry Green, the group's attorney.

Later, Fire Chief Robert Ojeda said hiring and promotions are carried out according to state regulations and the firefighters' collective bargaining agreement with the city.

"It is not the policy or the practice of the San Antonio Fire Department to discriminate against any individual or group of individuals," he said.

In addition to seeking legal relief, the firefighters called for state and federal investigations and a convention boycott of the city.

Of about 1,250 firefighters in San Antonio, approximately 85 are black.

Homeowners upset with H.E.B.

AUSTIN (AP) — Adele Plauche bought her first house last April with a "lovely, little quiet back yard."

Within months, the back yard became as tranquil as a high school football field on a fall Friday night.

The culprit, Plauche and her neighbors say, is an H.E.B. store undergoing an $8 million expansion. In April, as part of the expansion, H.E.B. knocked down a strip of retail stores that backed up to the neighboring homes.

"Welcome to our H.E.B. hell," said Plauche's boyfriend, Carol Howell.

With the shops gone, residents say they've lost the giant wall that was a buffer from the commercial hustle and bustle. In its place, the revamped H.E.B. has a loading dock, a trash compactor and a parking lot illuminated by rows of 40-foot-high, 1,000-watt lights.

City officials say the lights, which went up after Thanksgiving, violate city codes, H.E.B. admits it made mistakes and says it will reduce the lights' height and intensity.

Residents of the otherwise peaceful neighborhood say the lights, coupled with the noise from the construction and delivery trucks, have ruined their quality of life.

"You practically need sunglasses," said Plauche, 36. "You could read The New York Times cover to cover in my yard at midnight."

Another resident, Stacey Cox, whose bedroom window faces the parking lot, had so much trouble sleeping she bought a night mask.

"It's like daylight out there," Cox said. "I tried to sleep with the pillow over my head, but the bright lights kept waking me."

DEAR ABBY

Reading enriches needy kids in ways money can't

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: The letter from "D.W. in Reno, Nev." about giving needy children books for the holidays caught my attention. I would like to tell D.W. about Rolling Readers, California's largest nonprofit children's literacy organization. It was started in 1961 by a father, who — after noticing the profound effects of reading aloud to his sons — volunteered to read to kids at a homeless shelter. The experience was very rewarding (as I can attest, because I am a Rolling Reader volunteer), and it took only an hour per week. And after that, he began recruiting others with a love of books, reading and children.

VanBuren

We volunteers go to our assigned schools (or other locations, such as homeless shelters) once a week and read aloud to one or more classes. Three times a year we have a Book Give-Away when each child gets his or her own new book.

We hope that by reading aloud to children, we will help them to learn to read; and that, by giving them books of their own, they will learn to love reading. I always tell my "story children" that education is one of the most important gifts of life, and the key to a good education is reading. Besides, it's fun!

Children love to hear stories, but they are thrilled to have their own books. "I don't have to bring it back, Miss Mary Ann? You mean I can keep it?" I am often asked by children who never before owned a book. It's been four years since my first Book Give-Away, and kids stop me on the playground and tell me they still have the first book I gave them.

Abby, I hope you will let your readers know about Rolling Readers. – MISS MARY ANN, VOLUNTEER, BRADDOCK DRIVE ELEMENTARY SCHOOL, SANTA MONICA, CALIF.

DEAR MISS MARY ANN: I'm pleased to inform my readers about this worthwhile project. Your letter reminds me of the poem:

"Richer than I you will never be,

"For I had a mother who read to me."

Although Rolling Readers is a California project –it's the largest nonprofit children's literacy organization in the state – there is no reason why it can't be replicated in every community where there are concerned adults willing to give their time. Rolling Readers represents a most noble form of diversity: They are black, white, yellow and brown; college students and retirees; executives and actors; homemakers and cab drivers; Republicans and Democrats.

For more information about this worthwhile effort, contact: Rolling Readers, P.O. Box 927315, San Diego, Calif. 92192-7315, or call 1-800-390-READ or 619-738-7243. They will help you volunteer, start a volunteer team or start a local chapter.

DEAR ABBY: Recently you printed a letter from a hospital volunteer who asked that mail for patients be addressed with their legal (first, middle and last) names, not nicknames.

Perhaps this hint will also help your readers when they address cards to people who are hospitalized: Instead of your own return address, use the patient's home address.

If the person is discharged before the mail arrives at the hospital (which is often the case), the card will be delivered to his/her home, rather than coming back to you. – ELSIE PRIBULA, BETHLEHEM, PA.

DEAR ELSIE: Several readers offered this tip, which I think is excellent. I'm pleased to share it.

To order "How to Write Letters for All Occasions," send a business-sized, self-addressed envelope, plus check or money order for $3.95 ($4.50 in Canada) to: Dear Abby, Letter Booklet, P.O. Box 447, Mount Morris, Ill. 61054-0447. (Postage is included.)

Testing confirms chimp not missing link

SAN ANTONIO — Ending decades of speculation that he represents some kind of missing link, genetic testing has shown that Oliver the chimp is just that — a chimp.

Oliver, now a resident of the Primarily Primates sanctuary in Boerne, walks upright like a human. He was put on display throughout the world in the 1970s, touted as a mysterious man-ape perhaps the missing link.

But it turns out the freak-show attraction is no freak, at least genetically.

"He's not a human-chimp hybrid. His chromosome number is 48, which is a normal chimp karyotype," said Dr. David Ledbetter, a geneticist at the University of Chicago who analyzed Oliver's chromosomes.

Human beings have 46 chromosomes. For years, rumors circulated that Oliver had 47 and represented a biological amalgam between man and ape.

But, Ledbetter said, a re-examination of the chromosome studies done two decades ago in Japan has only confirmed his conclusions.

"That data was fairly clear. So the report of 47 chromosomes was either a misinterpretation or a purposeful misrepresentation. The chimp-human question was settled 20 years ago," he said.

One need only look at Oliver's popularity years ago as an attraction in the United States and abroad to find ample financial motive not to dispel that enticing rumor.

Newspaper reports said 26 million people paid to view him during a tour of Japan in the 1970s. For years after that he was a top draw at several animal theme parks in Southern California.

More recently, television tabloid show reporters have flocked to Boerne to report breathlessly on the mysterious man-ape.

And now that the human-chimp hybrid issue has been put to rest, additional genetic testing will be done in Chicago and San Antonio to determine Oliver's exact pedigree.

Oliver was acquired as a baby in the early 1970s by trainers Frank and Janet Burger. Their other chimps avoided Oliver, but his intelligence and personality stood out.

"This guy, Oliver, he enjoyed sitting down at night and having a drink, and watching television," Mrs. Burger recalled.

'One time he was out of coffee. I never trained him to do this, but maybe he knew it from the past. He got up from the table, walked into the kitchen, picked up the coffee pot, poured coffee into my cup, then into his, and then took the pot back into the kitchen.'

—Ken DeCroo, anthropologist and trainer

The Burgers sold Oliver to New York attorney Michael Miller, who took him on the road, hinting that he might be an ape-human hybrid. In press accounts of the time, Miller said he intended for Oliver to undergo a full battery of scientific tests. The results, if any, were never made public.

Oliver later was owned by a series of West Coast animal trainers who exhibited him as a freak, and put him in television shows and commercials.

"It was very hard to predict what was happening in that brain and generally he acted more human than chimp in a lot of settings," said Ken DeCroo, an anthropologist and animal trainer who owned Oliver.

"One time he was out of coffee. I never trained him to do this, but maybe he knew it from the past. He got up from the table, walked into the kitchen, picked up the coffee pot, poured coffee into my cup, then into his, and then took the pot back into the kitchen," DeCroo said. "But here's the chimp part. He's making a terrible mess. His brain is telling him what to do, but his body isn't quite doing it. But he had the awareness. He understood where all the elements fit and that I was out of coffee. It was shocking."

All that is certain about Oliver, who arrived at the Primarily Primates sanctuary in Boerne last summer after seven years in a research laboratory, is that he is not a normal chimp in either appearance or temperament.

Prices retreat

NEW YORK — Energy prices fell Monday for a third consecutive session as winter temperatures moderated across much of the United States and Europe.

The National Weather Service predicted temperatures much above normal across the country through the end of the month — reinforcing ideas that supplies will be ample to meet demand through the winter.

February heating oil fell 1.50 cents to 66.94 cents a gallon, while February natural gas fell 18.7 cents to $3.07 for each 1,00 cubic feet.

West Texas Intermediate for delivery in February settled at $25.23 per barrel, down 18 cents on the New York Mercantile Exchange.

Dollar rallies

NEW YORK — The dollar surpassed 118 yen Monday for the first time in nearly four years and hit new 2 1/2-year highs against the mark and Swiss franc after Japanese and German officials implied the U.S. currency could rise further.

In intraday dealings the dollar hit 118.21 yen, the highest since mid-March 1993, before settling in New York at 118.06 yen, up from 117.38 Friday.

The dollar traded as high as 1.6313 marks in European trading, the highest since mid-June 1994, before settling in New York at 1.6264 marks, up from 1.6174 Friday. The dollar reached 1.4205 Swiss francs in Europe, the highest since early June 1994, before finishing in New York at 1.4159, up from 1.3989.

The British pound weakened to $1.6822, down from $1.6674 Friday.

Other late dollar rates in New York compared with late Friday: 5.8445 French francs, up from 5.4525; 1,574.00 Italian lire, up from 1,569.00; 1.3385 Canadian dollars, down from 1.3395.

Markets move up

NEW YORK — Stocks edged to more new highs Monday, shaking off some early profit-taking on this month's rally, with investors remaining confident about earnings, particularly in the technology sector.

The Dow Jones industrial average rose 10.77 to 6,843.87 for its third straight record close and ninth in 11 sessions.

Broader measures also meandered to new highs after some early weakness. But with the bond market closed for Martin Luther King Jr. Day and investors growing concerned about pricey conditions, there was little conviction to the day's advance.

The technology-rich Nasdaq market produced the day's biggest gains amid enthusiasm about late Friday's earnings report from Microsoft, the latest in a series of better-than-expected results from technology bellwethers such as Intel and Sun Microsystems.

Advancing issues barely outnumbered decliners on the New York Stock Exchange, where volume totaled 440.38 million shares, down sharply from Friday's busy pace.

Padding Friday's record highs were the Standard & Poor's 500 list, up 0.53 to 776.70; the Nasdaq composite index, up 15.23 to 1,364.28; and the Russell 2000 list of smaller companies, up 1.47 to 369.35.

The NYSE's composite index was unchanged at Friday's record of 409.31, and the American Stock Exchange composite index fell 1.01 to 588.94.

Banc One makes $7.3 billion merger

■ Acquisition of First USA Inc. creates third-largest credit card operation in the nation.

Associated Press

COLUMBUS, Ohio — After watching AT&T, General Motors and independent credit card companies capture a growing share of the consumer credit business, Banc One Corp. made its own move Monday with a $7.3 billion acquisition of First USA Inc.

The deal would create the nation's third-largest credit card operation with a combined 32 million cardholders, marrying the nation's 10th largest bank with one of the nation's fastest-growing credit card companies.

If the deal is completed, Columbus-based Banc One would trail only Citicorp and AT&T Corp. in the number of credit cards issued. First USA offers both Visa cards and Mastercards.

The combined operation would have assets of $35 billion, though Dallas-based First USA is expected to continue operating under its current name.

Officials did not expect layoffs to result from the deal.

"First USA will add a powerful new dimension to our competitive arsenal and significantly change the way Banc One can compete in the consumer financial services business," John B. McCoy, Banc One's chairman and chief executive, said in a statement.

He said specialized credit-card issuers have developed economies of scale over the last decade. "First USA is well known for its low-cost structure, its marketing savvy and its cutting-edge technology."

McCoy foreshadowed the deal in a 1993 letter to shareholders in the company's annual report. The letter cited the growing influence of non-banking corporations, most notably AT&T, GM and Shell Oil, in the credit card business.

"This activity will continue to drive small bank card programs out of the market, and Banc One will continue to have an opportunity to look at a range of possible portfolio acquisitions during the next few years," he wrote.

On Monday, McCoy said Banc One is interested in further acquisitions. "We want to be a national banking company," he said.

Stock analyst Lawrence Vitale said the deal is a good one.

"They're buying growth," he said. "They saw the independents run away with the business and they're trying to catch up."

Vitale, who covers Banc One for Bear Stearns & Co. in New York, said Banc One was showing healthy growth in its credit card business, but First USA reported even faster growth and had lower losses from delinquencies.

Banc One Corp. buying First USA Inc.

Banc One, the 10th largest U.S. bank, is acquiring one of the nation's fastest-growing credit card companies. First USA. Combined credit card operations would be the nation's third-largest in terms of debt outstanding.

Banc One and First USA said they expect the all-stock deal to be completed by May 31.

Terms of the transaction call for First USA's shareholders to receive 1.1659 shares of Banc One stock for each of their own shares. That works out to $52.61 a share based on Friday's market close, or a premium of about 43 percent.

New York won't tax shoppers this week

Associated Press

NEW YORK — In New York City, it's Bloomies, Macy's and Saks without the tax.

This week and this week only, both the city and state are dropping their sales taxes on clothing to keep shoppers from fleeing to New Jersey and other neighboring tax-free states.

In the Big Apple, that amounts to a hefty 8.25 percent savings, and shoppers are crowding the stores to grab it while they can.

"I usually buy five pairs of new pants a year — but this week, I'm buying 10," Zillur Rahaman said as he grabbed from a pile at Bloomingdale's.

"If I want something, I just buy it. Life is short!" Arnetha Curry said as she slipped on a pair of $139 Bruno Magli pumps at Saks Fifth Avenue. It was one of four pairs she ended up buying.

So far, it seems, people are spending, spending, spending — in the name of saving.

They were only following Mayor Rudolph Giuliani's order to "shop till they drop the tax" — until state legislators, that is, vote to get rid of the tax now sending many New Yorkers out of state to buy.

The mayor rang in the week of no taxes on clothing and shoes under $500 by walloping a giant gong at the Manhattan Mall. The multi-story complex serves many buyers with working-class budgets, for whom saving $8 on a $100 purchase is real money.

New York's sales tax usually is 4 percent plus whatever additional taxes municipalities choose to add. In New York City, where the tax adds up to 8.25 percent, stores feel the bite even more because shoppers can easily dash to New Jersey and Pennsylvania, where anything worn isn't taxed. In Connecticut, too, clothing under $50 is exempt.

New York state expects to lose $20 million in revenue in its week-long moratorium. Giuliani hopes increased sales this week will offset the lost sales tax revenue.

But Giuliani said the city "lost over $700 million in retail sales last year because New York State taxes clothing and shoes."

Cutting the tax "forever," the mayor added, would mean "an average of $200 per family every year — and a lot more jobs for New York City."

Gov. George Pataki said one very encouraging sign came Saturday while he shopped at Macy's in Manhattan — he ran into two women who came over from New Jersey. "I would be very surprised if we didn't expand the program."

The sales-tax moratorium is causing some confusion, however. The experiment makes most everyday shoes tax-free, for example — but golf or bowling shoes still carry the 8.25 percent tax.

Those who sew their own clothes can also save — selectively. Thread is exempt, but not needles and straight pins.

West of the Hudson River, retailers didn't seem too worried. After all, New Yorkers were already in the habit of buying in New Jersey, and they expect them to be back no matter what.

"Prices will still be lower here anyway despite the tax cut," said Marty Rosenbaum, who owns a men's clothing store in Jersey City. "Rent is cheaper here than for stores in the city, and that gets passed on in the pricing."

NASDAQ trades under new system

Associated Press

ROCKVILLE, Md. — Nasdaq Stock Market president Al Berkeley smiled and crossed his fingers.

That cautious optimism summed up the feelings of Nasdaq officials, regulators and traders Monday as new rules aimed at improving competition on the electronic stock market began for the 50 active Nasdaq stocks.

"I think, bottom line is, everybody is amazed it went as successful as it did," Berkeley said. He spoke in Nasdaq's main data center, located in a suburban office park near Washington, where the market set up a "war room" of experts to analyze how the nation's second-largest stock market was handling the changes.

Nearby, a team of Nasdaq attorneys hunched over telephones, fielding questions from Wall Street firms and Securities and Exchange Commission officials about the new trading rules that could save investors millions.

The rules are a landmark change for Nasdaq, because they enable customers to place orders for stocks at prices better than the buy and sell prices posted by professional traders.

The changes evolved from government investigations last summer into collusion by Nasdaq dealers to fatten their profits by keeping stock price quotes artificially wide.

The SEC rules seek to prevent such collusion by allowing investors' limit orders to compete directly with quotes from professional dealers. With a limit order, a customer instructs a broker at what price to buy or sell shares. In the past, Nasdaq dealers were not required to disclose a customer's limit order to other dealers.

Academics and regulators hope customer limit orders will narrow the "spread," or the gap between the best offer to buy and best offer to sell a particular stock.

The change required extensive computer programming at major Wall Street firms. During the past four Saturdays, Nasdaq held practice trading sessions so firms could fine-tune their computerized trading systems and train their staffs.

The rules didn't trigger any major system problems on the first day. Indeed, trading was busier than normal for Nasdaq, with trading volume of 592.4 million shares. Earnings announcements and other corporate activity, not the onset of the new rules, pushed the volume higher, officials said.

The trading rules will be phased in over the next eight months.

Mutual fund of mutual funds simple way to diversify

By Eric Tyson

Q: I am interested in investing in "funds of funds," but am getting conflicting advice on the merits of doing so. Some have warned that such funds carry lots of extra fees and tend to have mediocre performance.

What do you think of these funds, and which are best?

Tyson

A: Increasing numbers of mutual fund companies and distributors are responding to overwhelmed investors and offering a simplified way to construct a diverse portfolio: mutual funds that invest in numerous other mutual funds.

While the better funds of funds appear to deliver a high-quality, diversified portfolio of funds in one fell swoop, as with any other type of mutual fund, funds of funds are not all created equal.

When a fund of funds is done well, it helps focus investors on the important "big picture" issue of asset allocation — how much of your investment money will you put into bonds and how much in stocks?

The fund of funds concept has been around for many years. High fees are what gave early funds of funds, run by the late Bernie Cornfeld in the 1950s, a bad name. Cornfeld established a fund of funds offshore and added on many layers of fees. While the operation was profitable for his enterprise, duped investors suffered a continual drain on their money from the high fees.

The Cornfeld episode is an important reason why the U.S. Securities and Exchange Commission has been cautious in approving new funds of funds.

Mutual fund giants Vanguard and T. Rowe Price have enjoyed rapid growth in their funds of funds, which were introduced in the 1990s.

The newer funds of funds developed by large fund companies seem to be done with the customer's interest in mind.

Both Vanguard's and T. Rowe Price's funds of funds do not add on any extra fees for the packaging of the individual funds. The annual operating fees on the underlying funds at Vanguard is a razor-thin one-third of 1 percent.

Each of Vanguard's LifeStrategy funds parcels money out to eight other Vanguard mutual funds. Three of the funds invest solely in stocks: Total Stock Market (U.S. stocks), European and Pacific. Four are bond funds: Short-Term, Intermediate-Term and Long-Term Corporate as well as a GNMA fund. And the Asset Allocation fund rounds out the eight funds.

Each of the four LifeStrategy funds divides the money up a little differently among the eight funds so as to achieve a different asset allocation. The LifeStrategy Income portfolio ends up having 80 percent in bonds and 20 percent in stocks, whereas the LifeStrategy Growth portfolio is at the other end of the risk spectrum, with 80 percent in stocks and 20 percent in bonds.

Discount broker Charles Schwab offers three OneSource funds of funds: Growth, International and Balanced. The main difference between these and Vanguard's or T. Rowe Price's funds is that Schwab's are multifamily funds of funds. Each Schwab fund of funds invests in mutual funds from more than one fund family. The Schwab funds also tack on an additional 0.5 percent packaging fee.

Funds of funds being done by other outside parties merit a much more skeptical look. For example the Fund-Manager, Merriman and API family funds of funds charge annual operating expenses ranging from more than 1.5 percent to nearly 3 percent on top of the fees for the mutual funds in which they invest . When you add it all up, investing in such funds can siphon a whopping 3 percent to 4 percent annually off your investment balances.

After years like 1995 and 1996, when the U.S. stock market rocketed ahead more than 20 percent each year, paying fees of several percent might not seem like a lot. Remember, however, that stocks' historic annual returns average close to 10 percent.

Not surprisingly, in terms of performance, the high-fee funds of funds have lagged behind the stock market indexes.

Parcells' job status at center of distraction for Patriots

By Howard Ulman
AP Sports Writer

NEW ORLEANS — A contentious Bill Parcells said Monday "nothing's changed" despite a report that Sunday's Super Bowl would be his last game as coach of the New England Patriots.

Yet one of his players wondered about his motives, and his boss, team owner Robert Kraft, criticized Parcells' agent for his role in the Boston Globe story.

"This is old news," Parcells said at an evening news conference. "I'm not going to discuss this, gentlemen. Nothing's changed just because there's another report out."

Part of Monday's report by Will McDonough was based on comments by Robert Fraley, Parcells' agent. At first, Parcells denied that Fraley had talked about the situation, then asked reporters, "did you see a quote?"

There were none, although Parcells faced a barrage of questions from New England reporters who cover the team on a regular basis.

When asked whether he works for Fraley or Fraley works for him, Parcells responded, "It's America, you can say what you want."

Parcells and Kraft reverted Monday to their consistent response that the focus should be on the Super Bowl and that they would adhere to their agreement to discuss Parcells' future after the season. Their relationship has been strained, in part because of Parcells' desire to have more control over personnel decisions.

With the Super Bowl coming up against the Green Bay Packers, guard William Roberts suggested Par-

Rebels need win as MHS' Lemons MIA

By Terry Williamson
Sports Editor

Desperation meets up with the flat tire at 7:30 p.m. today at Chaparral Center.

That is a good way to describe what will take place when the boys of Midland Lee and Midland High meet for the fourth and final time this season in regular season basketball play.

■ 4-5A Boys

The Rebels have worked themselves into the desperation mode in District 4-5A play, carrying a meager 2-4 record after the completion of the first half of the loop race.

Midland High, on the other hand, owns the District 4-5A basketball world after one half of play with a perfect 6-0 record. The Bulldogs have also won 10 games in a row, and are, quite frankly, on a roll.

In fact, if the Bulldogs win tonight and Abilene High falls to second place Abilene Cooper as expected, MHS would need only one more victory to clinch a state playoff berth for the fifth consecutive season.

"Well, I hope that is the case," MHS coach Jack Stephenson said Monday. "I feel like we can win one more game somewhere in the second half."

But MHS is coming into the contest with a flat tire, so to speak. Leading scorer and top rebounder Kirby Lemons, a junior, will have to sit out this contest after an arrest as a minor in possession of alcohol last week. This is the second of a three-game suspension that the super talent will miss.

But the Bulldogs have played four games without Lemons this year and have won all of them.

"We haven't lost yet without Kirby and we're playing pretty well right now. We didn't have Kirby against Odessa High and some players like Jerome (Eldridge), Lee (Dunn), Jay (Christian), Chuck (Charles Tatum) Russell (Gard-

Lady Dawgs to fight for playoff lives with Lee

By Lee Passmore
Sports Writer

Regardless of what happens on the court, tonight's matchup between the Midland Lee and Midland High girls basketball teams, set for 6 p.m. at Chaparral Center, could be of landmark proportions.

■ 4-5A Girls

For Lee, fresh off handing San Angelo Central its first District 4-5A loss of the season, beating Midland High would complete a season sweep of the Lady Dawgs, who had won 21 straight district games before Lee broke that streak with a 78-77 overtime win on Dec. 19. The Lady Rebels would also be in solid position to clinch a playoff spot with only three district games remaining.

Midland High, meanwhile, will have to fight for its playoff life if it loses to the Lady Rebels. A loss, while it wouldn't mathematically eliminate the Lady Dawgs from contention, would put them in the likely position of having to win all of their final four district games just to make the playoffs.

And while Midland High could still on paper rally to win the district, it appears likely that its string of four straight district titles has come to an end.

"We're going to play them one game at a time and on Feb. 4 (Midland High's final district game against Abilene Cooper) we'll see where we stand," Midland High coach Jim Raughton said. "We're not viewing (losing to Lee) as being out of it."

With a bye Friday, the Lady Dawgs (18-7 overall, 4-3 in district) have had a full week to prepare for Lee. The bye also helped them recover from losing to Odessa High 51-47, which gave MHS as many district losses this season as it had suffered in the previous four combined.

While the Lady Dawgs were taking it easy Friday night, Lee (11-11, 6-2) got perhaps its biggest win of the season so far, beating league-leading San Angelo

Lady Chaps recover by pouncing on FPC

By Oscar LeRoy

The Lady Plainsmen of Frank Phillips College never even had a chance the minute they walked into Chaparral Center Monday night.

This was the scenario.

The Midland College Lady Chaparrals were coming off a stunning 96-73 loss at Howard College and the Lady Plainsmen simply were struggling. The result was a 101-53 shellacking of Frank Phillips by the Lady Chaps.

The Lady Plainsmen proved to be the perfect aspirin to take after last Thursday night's headache in Big Spring.

"I think the thing I'm most pleased about is that we played with some energy and we took pride in our defense," said MC coach Ron Jones.

The Lady Chap defense accounted for 35 turnovers, most of which came in the second half when Frank Phillips decided to play hot potato with the basketball.

"Defense, nothing but defense was the thinking coming into this game," said sophomore guard Kellina Bradshaw, who finished with 13 points and four steals on the night. "That game (against Howard) proved to be a wake-up call for us. We know

Chaparrals continue slide

■ Frank Phillips hands Midland College men second straight WJCAC loss, 67-64.

By Stewart Doreen

For the first time in his three seasons at Midland College, there are obvious questions in his backcourt, and those questions were exploited in the 67-64 Western Junior College Athletic Conference loss to Frank Phillips College Monday at Chaparral Center.

"We didn't defend the perimeter well and didn't shoot well at the line. That was the difference in the game," said Rafferty, of his team who shot 13-of-23 from the free-throw line. "Maybe, we need to shake it up."

Rafferty's lack of affection for his perimeter players and the overall play of his team came after a game that saw his team lead twice at 4-0 and 30-28 near the end of the first half. Take those brief moments away, and the Chaps played the rest of the game in catch-up mode. It didn't suit well for Rafferty's club. His outside shooters didn't complement the interior players well. While Ceedric Goodwyn hit for a game-high 29 points and 10 rebounds and Silvester Kainga threw in eight points and 11 boards, the perimeter players were 1-14 from the 3-point line.

"We got good play out of Ceedric and Silvester," said Rafferty frustated that the interior played so well and his team did not win.

The Chaps resembled the mythological character, Sisyphus, who pushes the rock up the hill just to see it roll back down.

In the first half, the Chaps defense allowed Frank Phillips to do what they wanted and get the early 10-4 lead. The Chaps, 12-8 for the season and 1-2 in the WJCAC, fought back to even it up thanks to the 16 first-half points from Goodwyn.

"I don't know if we held him in check or if anyone in the conference can do that," FPC coach Blake Brown said. "He's hard for us to matchup with."

The Plainsmen, 12-6 and 1-1, however, opened the second half again with 3-point shots from all around the perimeter. After Jeff McCall, who had a team-high 16 for FPC, and Leo Saucedo were done, MC trailed by 12 with four minutes gone in the second half.

Again, the Chaps fought back. Goodwin's three baskets and Edward Kirk's five straight points paced a 19-7 run where the Chaps dominated offensively and defensively.

But then, the boulder again rolled down. The Chaps paused to take a breath, and the Plainsmen's Demetrius McCampbell made Rafferty's team pay for it. He made not one, not two, but three straight 3-point shots. In the process, took the life out of the Chaps.

"Those (shots) were the daggers in the heart," Goodwyn said.

Rafferty expressed his frustration a different way.

"We don't have the urgency that we wanted. We tried to ease into the second half, and they go up by five one minute into the second (half)," Rafferty said. "They (Plainsmen) deserve credit. They stepped up and made the big shot. But we just watched them do it. We just didn't play smart and didn't defend the perimeter well."

Brown, the first-year Frank Phillips' coach, knows what the shots mean for his club. That is a win on the road in the WJCAC. Wins like that don't come easy and have to be earned. His team did that.

"We had timely three's," Brown said. "We try to stress that we have to contribute when you

Odessa High at Midland Lee

When: 4:30 p.m.

Where: Lee Soccer Field.

Records: Lee is 7-2 overall and 0-1 in District 7. Odessa is 4-3 and 1-0.

Coaches: Lee — Mike Simpson; Odessa — Larry Richardson.

Opponent: Odessa is coming into the game on two-game losing streak. The Lady Bronchos, however, are 1-0 in District 7 after defeating Permian for the first time in school history. OHS had a three-game winning streak snapped last weekend and is led by senior forward Debra Smith (eight goals and two assists on the season).

Last action: Midland Lee went to the finals of the Temple tournament before falling 3-2 in a shootout to Kilgore. The Lady Rebs held a 2-0 lead in the final but allowed two goals in the last 10 minutes.

Notes, quotes: Getting the first goal on the Lady Bronchos will also be key for Simpson's Lady Rebs. OHS puts all their players back on defense to try to shutdown the other team's offense. That strategy paid off in the 1-0 shootout win over Permian. In that game Permian outshot OHS, 27-10. OHS, however, will have to stop Ritha Belizaire, who leads the district in scoring with 18 goals in just nine games...This game is critical for us," Simpson said. "We come off of a pretty good road trip and have to make up ground in district. We need to get this one going." Simpson also spoke on getting that first goal against OHS. "Getting that first goal is critical in setting the pace in the game," he said. "If they (goals) come earlier, it takes pressure off you."...This game is also unique as Simpson will coach against the school where he served as boys' coach....

Next game: Midland Lee travels to Abilene on Saturday for a 2 p.m. matchup with another of last year's tri-champion's Abilene Cooper. The game will take place at the Lee Athletic Complex.

When: 4:30 p.m.

Where: Midland High Soccer Field.

Records: Midland High is 4-3 overall and 0-1 in District 7. Odessa Permian is 6-2 and 1-0.

Coaches: Midland High — Tom Esikhati; Permian — Greg Reece.

Opponent: Permian had a strong performance for fourth place at the ECISD Invitational last weekend. The Panthers started the season with six straight wins, including a 3-0 win over OHS last Wednesday. Leading the offense is Michael Couch (seven goals and two assists) and Jimmy White (six goals and two assists).

Last action: Midland High lost two games last weekend at the Duncanville Tournament (Arlington Martin 2-0; North Garland 4-2).

Notes, quotes: The Bulldogs have their work cut out for themselves against Mojo. The Panthers have five shutouts and that concerns Esikhati, whose team has had problems scoring (only eight goals in seven games). Finishing has been the big problem for MHS. In MHS' only other district game, the Dogs outshot Lee 20-7 but none of those shots turned into scores... "I expect a close game," Esikhati said. "Permian is a strong club with a good defense and good strikers. We can't underestimate their strengths. I also expect our players to do a better job finishing. This (going 0-2 in district) would be a big hole. We will have to be careful."... A big player for the Bulldogs is senior forward Scott Kamis, who leads MHS in Scoring with two goals and three assists... Eskihati said the last time MHS lost two straight district games was four years ago, the last time Midland High did not win the district title...

Records: Midland High is 4-2-1 overall and 1-0 in District 7. Odessa Permian is 3-5 and 0-1.

Coaches: Midland High — Scott Hodkinson; Permian— Becky Stanford.

Opponent: Permian is coming into today's game off a 1-0 shootout loss to Odessa High last Tuesday. Redemption of sorts, came this past weekend when the Lady Panthers defeated OHS 5-1 in non-district action.

Injuries: MHS — Sweeper Meg Bennett (pulled quadricep), Ann Smith (leg injury) and Sarah Duran (pulled quadricep) are questionable. Other members of the team are battling the flu bug.

Last action: Midland High went 2-2 in the Lubbock tournament last weekend. The Lady Bulldogs downed El Paso Andress, the team that eliminated Hodkinson's team in the region quarterfinals in 1996. They lost to Lubbock High and Coronado. "This weekend, we were Dr. Jeckyll and Mr. Hyde," Hodkinson said.

Notes, quotes: Today's game serves as a chance for the Lady Bulldogs to again refocus on a big game. The Lady Bulldogs are 1-0 in district, and with two wins this week, could place themselves in great position in the district standings. Hodkinson looks at this game as the most important... "The rest of the way is district, and we can't take any of the games lightly," Hodkinson said. "Permian is scoring goals which is something that we have had trouble with. I hope we aren't looking past this game. Permian always plays us tough." ... PHS is rebuilding this season with losses of players like Staci Gares and Summer Watkins. Permian has had 14 players either score a goal or get an assist this season and is led by Audrey Gutierrez (three goals and two assists).

Coaches: Lee — John McColloch; OHS — Alex Figert.

Opponent: OHS has lost three of its past four games, including a 3-0 loss to Permian last Wednesday. OHS is in its first year under coach Alex Figert and led by Evan Ibarra and Danny Lopez, who have scored three goals each.

Last action: Midland Lee went 1-2 at the Governor's Cup in Austin last weekend. The Rebs defeated Killeen 3-0, lost to Clear Lake 2-0 and lost to Round Rock Westwood 2-1.

Notes, quotes: Midland Lee is led by senior all-district midfielder Adrian Castresana, who has three goals. Four Rebs have a goal each... Both of Midland Lee's wins came thanks to the shutouts from the defense and keeper Phillip Smith.... McColloch said that despite the 1-2 record the tournament was beneficial.

"We have to get our minds set back on district play and forget about the tournament. We'll take what we learned from the tournament and win district games," McColloch said. "We needed to play a lot of games to get into game shape. That is what we worried about in the Midland High game. Now that we have games under our belt, we are better prepared for district play." About OHS, McColloch expects a close game, "I think they will be a good team, like every team in district. Who ever plays the best game that day will win."

Next game: Midland Lee will return to the Midland Lee Soccer Complex on Saturday where they will host Abilene Cooper at 2 p.m.

are in the game.

"This win is huge. It is like having two for one when you win on the road. We are lucky that we made our breaks. When you win a close game that is important."

Rafferty agreed about the value of not winning at home.

"Shoot yeah. There is no question about it," Rafferty said.

Rafferty's team now goes 1-for-3 in conference and heads to New Mexico Junior College Thursday to attempt to get one back. But right now, there is too much confusion on the team and too many questions that must be answered before the team gets on the bus to Hobbs, N.M.

"I don't know (what the problem is)," Goodwyn said. "We play one good game, and then bad in the next. Or we play one good half and bad in the next. We have to stay positive. We let one slip away and that is something we can't do anything about. We just have to concentrate on NMJC."

that we have to play good defense. Offense wins games but defense wins championships."

The loss against the Lady Hawks proved not only a wake-up call for the Lady Chaps but for Jones as well and what adjustments needed to be made if they want to go far into post-season play.

"Coming off that loss, the team made me realize some things we weren't doing defensively," Jones said. "We've got six weeks to play the way we need to play. We know we're going to the playoffs, we just have to work toward being ready to go. We feel good about where we're at, but we still have a lot of work to do."

Sophomore post Ndiasse Ndiaye said her team was in for a good defensive game after a tough loss.

"We knew that we had to play good defense because that's what beat us in the second half against Howard. Hopefully we can do it for the rest of the season," Ndiaye said. "Tonight we just wanted to play different than we did against Howard. It was one of those nights."

The Lady Plainsmen (2-16, 0-7 Western Junior College Athletic Conference) took the first lead of the game with a 3-pointer by Melanie Friemel. But that lead evaporated quickly as the Lady Chaps raced out to a 16-6 lead, thanks in part to Bradshaw's eight points in that run.

The 17 Lady Plainsmen turnovers in the first half started to prove costly as the Lady Chaps grabbed a 43-25 lead at the half.

Things just went from bad to worse for Frank Phillips at the start of the second half as the Lady Plainsmen turned the ball over four straight times and the rout was officially on.

Fatou Cisse led the onslaught with 21 points and Mamie Ndoye added 14 as every Lady Chap got into the scoring column with five scoring in double figures.

Midland College goes back on the road Thursday to face stubborn New Mexico Junior College, a team that's been playing well lately.

"Anytime you go into Hobbs (N.M.), you know it's going to be a tough game," Jones said.

In other action around the WJCAC, Howard cruised past Odessa College, 103-51, and South Plains was a 65-46 winner over Western Texas College.

cells might deliberately be trying to divert the spotlight from his players.

"You have to wonder," said Roberts, a member of Parcells' two Super Bowl champion teams with the New York Giants. "Sometimes he does things and you wonder why he does them."

Patriots running back David Meggett, who played on one of those teams, said that the team isn't distracted by the controversy and that Parcells hasn't discussed it with the players.

"I can't emphasize this enough," he said. "We really are not worried about what he's going to do because of the fact that we have something to do now" in preparing for the Super Bowl.

After last season, Kraft agreed to Parcells' request that the final year of his five-year contract be dropped, making its new expiration date Feb. 1.

Parcells has said the outcome of the Super Bowl won't affect his decision. Kraft said Monday he doesn't think his players will be distracted.

"Bill and I chatted today and we both feel the same way," Kraft said. "This will be discussed at the end of the season."

Stanton's big third beats MC

An emotional first half carried the Midland Christian boys basketball team to a big lead, but Stanton showed why it is ranked No. 5 in the state's Class 2A poll with a big third quarter rally to win a local non-district game 81-72.

Behind John Koss, who scored 22 of his 31 points in the first half, Midland Christian (15-7) took a 47-36 halftime lead. However, the Mustangs scored only six points in the third quarter and couldn't recover from their slump.

Leo McCalister, who had a game-high 39 points, scored 11 in the third quarter to help lift Stanton (23-1). Marcus Washington added 14 points for Stanton while Jerod Womack and Andrew Hufford had 11 each for the Mustangs.

GIRLS: Lady Rebels can sweep Lady Dawgs in 4-5A

(From 1C)

Central 63-61 to put the only blemish on Central's district record. Roles for Lee and Midland High have now officially reversed compared to years past when the Lady Rebels were shooting to knock off the front-running Lady Dawgs.

"(The Lady Dawgs) are coming into this game the way we went into Central," said Lee coach Elise Kail in assessing her opponent's hunger factor. "We're playing real good ball right now. We're in it a lot more mentally and playing a lot stronger."

Much of that is due to Lee's quartet of starting seniors, Jamie Rhoads, Nisha Washington, Angie Seibold and Kendra Albus. Rhoads is particularly living up to preseason potential in her last two games, scoring 21 against Central and 23 against Odessa Permian and now leads the team not only in scoring (14.3 points a game), but in three-point goals with 31.

With Rhoads and Maurion Strambler and their ability to stretch the defense from the perimeter, as well as the formidable inside trio of Washington, Seibold and Tamika Thurman, the Lady Rebels can seriously test opposing defenses.

"Those Lee seniors came in with the idea they were going to win it," Raughton said. "I don't see how we could possibly have an advantage."

The results of the two teams' most recent games would seem to bear out Raughton's words. Midland High had a dismal night shooting from the field and especially from the free throw line against Odessa High, making just five of 20 shots from the stripe.

In a rivalry which has been as intense as MHS-Lee, though, recent performances can be thrown out the window.

"Any time you have this rivalry the kids are going to be pumped up and ready to play," Kail said. "I'm sure this game's going to come down to rebounding and free throws."

The free throw line also could have tripped up the Lady Rebels in the last 30 seconds against Central. Albus twice missed the front ends of one-and-one opportunities — including one shot which rolled in and out of the basket — which could have made life easier for the Lady Rebels after seeing a 14-point lead melt to two. Lee survived when Central's Kanesha Randle missed a last-second three-point shot.

Such a finish wouldn't be surprising tonight, and it would have huge implications.

"A win does give us a lot of momentum," said Raughton, whose squad would be only a half-game out of a playoff spot with a win. "Win lose or draw, I'm not worried about this group getting out there and getting after it."

For Lee, it merely wants to maintain its position.

"As a team we hope we don't give them the opportunity to knock us off," Kail said. "It's been in our hands since we've had two losses. Every game we've had to fight tooth and nail."

ner) and Ross (Nobles) have stepped up their games. We're still a pretty good team without Kirby, but we are better with him in there."

Lee, meanwhile, is coming off the low point of the season, a loss to San Angelo Central, who didn't have a win in the first half of the league race until beating the Rebels Friday at home.

The Bobcats fell to Midland High by a 110-60 margin in the first half.

"All the games we have left are big now," said Lee coach Jon House. "If we come out of the first half at 3-3, we're in pretty good shape. Now we have to win out, or 5-1 at the worst if we're going to keep our playoff string alive.

"After losing to San Angelo, that was the most emotion I've ever seen in a locker room after the game. I think they finally realized the urgency of the situation. We're going to have to see what we are made of. Our backs are up against the wall."

Lee's current swoon started about the same time that four footballers (John Norman, Antwan Alexander, Cory Pertile and Ricky Green) left the team. Norman and Alexander are in the midst of the college recruiting wars.

"The loss of the footballers did hurt us," House says. "I think our kids had trouble recovering from that. But Matt Meyer is now back from his injury. He's only about 75 percent, but he should get a lot of playing time. He played some against San Angelo."

But even with Lee's recent woes, Stephenson doesn't feel tonight's matchup is one of those you can lock up in the win column.

"I know some people are comparing scores between what we did to San Angelo and what Lee did," Stephenson said, "but you can't compare scores like that. I talked with (SA coach) Kevin Pope after the Lee game and he told me that they couldn't have played better, and Lee probably couldn't have played worse. Besides, when San Angelo played us, it was that early snow game, and they had to get off the bus and play the game. That makes a lot of difference."

And even with Lemons off the court, House doesn't feel that makes his job much easier tonight.

"I actually think that the loss of Lemons will inspire them," House said. "They've won a couple of games without him and know they can win without them. I think it makes them play harder, if anything."

Stephenson said, "I've seen too many of these games with Lee. I've come to realize that if we play well, we'll win. If Lee plays well, they'll win. Our kids know their kids and they know us. In fact, I told my players that I sometimes think I know them better than I do us. Jon (House) knows us, too. I think we both know what it takes to win a game like this."

Midland High will also have Treg Manning back. Manning lost his mother to cancer last week and missed the Odessa High game even though he came to the game as a spectator.

If nothing else, this game appears to have an emotional edge for just about everyone concerned.

Red Raiders avoid upset, 70-64, in OT

Associated Press

LUBBOCK — Rayford Young's five straight points late in overtime and Tony Battie's dominance throughout the game Monday night sparked No. 20 Texas Tech's 70-64 comeback victory over Oklahoma State.

The Cowboys (9-7, 1-4 Big 12) took the early lead in overtime on Maurice Robinson's three-point play. As they did for most of the game, the Red Raiders (13-3, 5-1) trailed until Young's heroics.

The freshman guard followed two missed free throws by Joe Adkins of Oklahoma State with a 3-pointer that gave Texas Tech a 66-64 lead with 1:31 left. A minute later, Young missed a driving layup, snared his own rebound and put it back for the final blow.

Marlon Dorsey of the Cpwboys missed a 3-pointer in the waning moments, and Battie capped his 28-point, 10-rebound performance with an emphatic block of Brett Robisch's shot with the rebound.

The Red Raiders went 10:41 over the end of the first half and the beginning of the second without a field goal and Oklahoma State took a 43-30 lead until Battie ended the Cowboys' 16-1 run.

After a timeout, the Red Raiders looked unstoppable, storming back over the next 10 minutes to tie the game at 53 when Cory Carr converted a four-point play after Chianti Roberts hacked him on a made 3-pointer.

Carr, who scored 15 points, had a chance to give Texas Tech a one-point lead with 27 seconds left in regulation, but he made one of two free throws to tie the game at 59.

The Cowboys' Adrian Peterson missed a wild 3-point attempt at the buzzer.

Roberts had been Oklahoma State's leading scorer with 10 points when he fouled out on the play with 6:28 left.

Robisch led the Cowboys with 14 points.

Syracuse 62, No. 12 Villanova 60

PHILADELPHIA — Marius Janulis scored all 15 of his points on 3-pointers and Todd Burgan had 10 points in his return from a seven-game suspension as Syracuse beat Villanova.

The Orangemen (11-7, 2-5 Big East) held the Wildcats (14-4, 5-3) without a field goal over the final seven minutes.

Otis Hill's basket with 2:37 remaining gave the Orangemen a 62-57 lead and they were able to hold off a final rally by the Wildcats.

Villanova freshman Tim Thomas, who finished with 23 points, missed a running jumper with five seconds left. The Wildcats got the rebound, but a desperation shot by Alvin Williams missed at the buzzer.

Jason Cipolla added 15 points for Syracuse, which welcomed back Burgan after his suspension for violating university rules.

Williams made two free throws with 2:22 left to pull the Wildcats within 62-59. Jason Lawson stole a Syracuse pass a minute later and Howard Brown was fouled by Hill. He made one of two free throws to make it 62-60. Villanova got the ball back when Burgan missed a 3-pointer as the shot clock expired with 25 seconds left.

Cruise into an unforgettable vacation

The frozen majesty of Alaskan glaciers. Balmy breezes on a lush tropical evening. The exotic adventure of the Amazon or Nile rivers. These and countless more locations are accessible by cruise ships whose final destination is the vacation of your dreams. Linda Deaver and Peggy Brown of Great Destinations say cruise destinations, lengths, ship sizes and themes are as varied as the ends of the earth.

From an hour on the Pecos River viewing Christmas lights in Carlsbad to a six-month tour of the world, cruises can be scheduled to fit your time frame.

Destinations are as varied as the sand on the seashore. Hawaii, European ports, South America, Australia and the islands of the South Pacific are exciting possibilities, along with fall foliage tours to New England and on the Mississippi. "The Delta Queen on the Mississippi is a refurbished Mark Twain-era stern wheel paddle boat, one of only two moving national landmarks in America," says Linda.

While many larger ships carry over 2500 cruisers and displace as much water as an aircraft carrier, there are plenty of smaller varieties (including sailing ships) with more intimate surroundings. There are cruises tailored to seniors, families, scuba divers and many other interests.

What better way to travel than on a cruise ship, where there are usually at least five meals per day, round-the-clock entertainment and interesting people? Many cruises provide all this for approximately the same daily cost as for a good hotel alone. Shopping, hairdressers and other amenities are available on a cost basis. "While there are exclusively priced luxury offerings, many cruises cost no more than a typical landlocked vacation," Peggy points out.

You can get discounts for booking early, and some lines offer travelers 40 percent off just for being from Texas. Air fare to the port city often comes at a bargain price when purchased as part of the cruise package.

Great Destinations is a full service travel agency owned by Linda Deaver and Peggy Brown. They are members of the American Society of Travel Agents, Cruise Lines International Association and GEM – Worldwide Preferred Supplier Consortium. Located downtown at 400 W. Texas, on the corner of Texas and Big Spring, the phone number is 682-8645.

How to Plan for the Rising Cost of Education

By Daniel Watts

Funding a program for a child's education is harder than ever today, given higher taxes and rising education costs. According to the Conference Board, college costs are rising about 9% annually,* far higher than the general inflation rate of about 3%. A moderately priced private college costs about $22,000 per year. At the current education inflation rate, a six-year-old bound for that same college in 12 years can expect to pay $61,878 for the first year alone.

Daniel Watts

Meeting Education Expenses: Four Funding Sources

Your child's education will likely come from a combination of these four sources:

Out-of-pocket: You pay tuition, room, board, books and other expenses from your current cash.

Student loans and grants: College loans are still available to some families, although the government has made eligibility based on financial need more restrictive. If your child is in good academic standing, private scholarships and grants may be within reach. When looking for any kind of aid, apply early and often.

Direct Financial Aid: Don't automatically assume your family makes too much money to qualify for aid; work with your child's high school guidance counselor to contact each institution's financial aid office, carefully research their programs and apply early.

Lump Sum or Annual Funding: The best way to make sure you have a large sum when your child is ready for college is to contribute to a college investment program. You could invest a lump sum and/or contribute to your plan on a regular basis.

How to Set Up a Funding Program: Which Investments Should I Choose?

First, estimate the amount of money you will need. Find the current cost of the type of school you want your child to attend (private or public, local or out of town) and use the 9% inflation factor to gauge how much it will cost when your child reaches college age. Smith Barney can help through our complimentary Education Funding Analysis, a financial planning service that will tell you how much you'll need to provide your children or grandchildren with the education they deserve. The Education Funding Analysis analyzes your current investments along with projected education costs for the years you expect each child to attend school.

In selecting investment vehicles, consider the child's age, tax considerations and your tolerance for investment risk. Generally, the younger the child, the more you should consider growth stocks. Over time they outperform bonds and cash-equivalent vehicles. As the child gets closer to college age, you should shift assets into bonds, money market funds and other investments that offer greater safety and liquidity.

Types of Investments

Stocks: Because they outperform most other investments over time, stocks are excellent for a college investment program, especially if you start early.

Bonds: If you are too conservative to invest in stocks, or your child is only a few years from starting college, consider bonds. A quality bond maturing in five years provides a higher yield than short-term instruments (those that mature in a year or less). Choose bonds with different maturity rates. Having portions of your investments mature as you need money for each year's tuition can make planning easier. Staggering your bond maturities, a strategy called laddering, also helps you take advantage of higher yields on longer-term issues.

Tax-free municipal bonds give you income free from federal taxes (and in some cases state and local taxes). Some investors, however may be subject to the alternative minimum tax (AMT). Speak with your tax advisor about how this tax may affect you.

You can invest in stocks and bonds individually or through mutual funds or unit investment trusts. These products are available at low minimum investments, and are convenient for systematic investing.

Life Insurance: Some life policies that invest your net premiums in stocks or bonds can be excellent for college funding programs. You may be able to keep the policy in force and borrow against the cash value without tax liability for college. Of course, withdrawals reduce the amount of your insurance.

Custodial accounts: Placing assets in the child's name in a custodial account can help you reduce taxes on your college investment program. For a child under age 14, the first $650 in annual investment income is tax-free. The next $650 is taxed at the child's rate (usually 15%). Income beyond $1,300 is taxed at your tax bracket. At age 14, all income above $650 is taxed at the child's rate. Remember: All gifts to children are irrevocable. Also, when the child reaches legal age (between 18 and 21 in most states), he or she gains control of the custodial account. Creating a trust will give you more control over the money, but setting one up can involve attorney's fees.

Whatever decisions you make, remember: when it comes to education funding, there's no substitute for careful planning.

Experience the best networking solutions for your office

The management team at Signature Data Systems combines for years of experience in all types of computer and networking solutions. They are, from left: Jonny Pylant, Ed Hall, owners Shawn and Laura Jantzen and Gary Farr.

As more and more companies put a pc or workstation at every desk, questions of how to network these machines for maximum productivity becomes overwhelming. Analyzing the relative benefits of network software by reading a brochure or a magazine review is not the same as seeing it in action.

This is why a Midland company, Signature Data Solutions, is offering a free seminar comparing Novell's IntranetWare and Microsoft's NT Server. At this seminar on January 28 from 8:30 to 11:30 a.m. in the Midland Center, you'll see each of these systems in operation on a big screen.

"We expect from 400 to 700 professionals to attend," says S.D.S. Sales Team Supervisor Jonny Pylant. While there is no charge, reservations are requested.

The afternoon session, from 1:30 to 4:30, will involve demonstrations of Novell's GroupWise 5 messaging system and their ManageWise 2.1 network managing software.

The seminar's sponsor, S.D.S. is a full service computer and communication solution company providing hardware, software, technical service, internet, intranet, telephony and networking solutions for all types and sizes of companies.

Signature Data Solutions is locally owned by Shawn and Laura Jantzen. They are located on the 11th floor of Wall Towers West. The phone number is 570-6200.

A letter home from a Yankee in Texas

Jib's farm-raised catfish offers the flavor to savor

Hi Gang,

I'm still getting acclimated to Texas, although the snow and sleet lately have made me feel right at home. Yes, it does snow in Texas, although they close school here with just enough snow to dust your feet. And, here, they make "snow ice cream" out of it, they get it so rarely.

Speaking of food, I learned about another Texas tradition at Jib's yesterday. I was eager to use what I've learned in my Texas citizenship class, so I took a client to Jib's to show him I knew how to enjoy chicken fried steak. Let me see if I can remember how the conversation went.

My Client (Buster): Heyyyyy, Benny-dict. What're yew havin' fer lunch?

Me: Oh, I thought I would have my favorite—chicken fried steak.

Buster: Wal, now, that's a mighty fine choice. I think I'll have me some catfish.

Me: (after a long pause). What kinda...I mean kind of fish?

Buster: *Cat*fish. The gen-u-wine farm raised kind.

Me: They have farms for these things? I knew youse guys...I mean ya'll...had cow boys—do you have fish boys too?

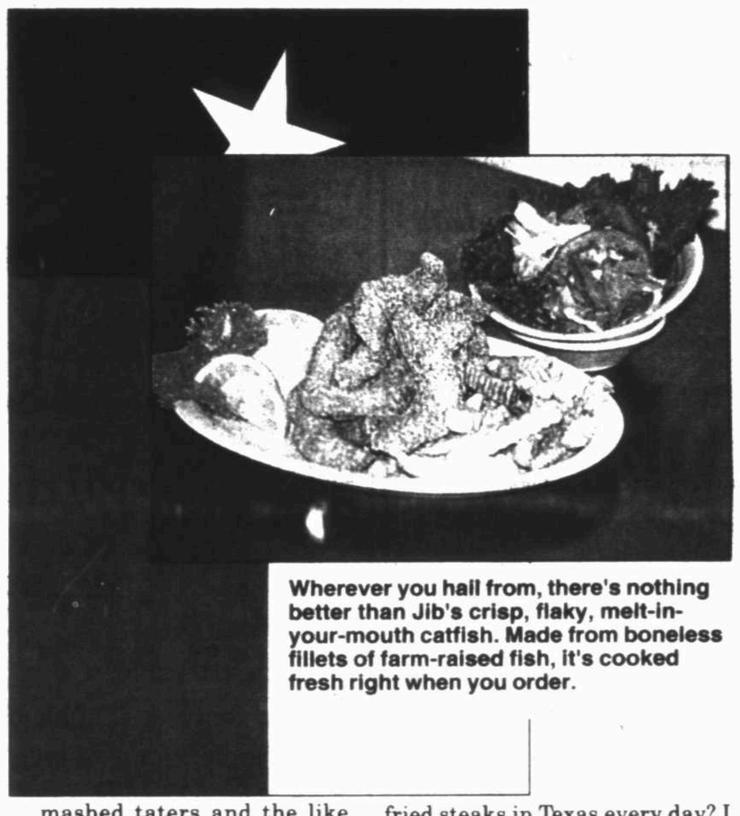
Buster: Wal, to tell the truth, I don't know how a fish farm operates. But I do know how Jib's operates. They take those farm-raised catfish, slap a corn meal batter on 'em, deep fry 'em and serve 'em up steaming hot and tender. My wife sez they're real good and flaky (the fish, not Joe and Johnnie Harper, the owners).

Me: Hmm. Sounds sort of like fish and chips back home.

Buster: Chips! You talkin' potato or poker?

Me: Actually, neither. It's like French fries..

Buster: Wal, sure, podnuh, you kin git French fries or any other two side dishes, like corn, green beans, pinto beans, fried okry, fried broccoli, mashed taters and the like. 'Course, all platters come with Texas toast and a fresh, do-it-yerself salad.



Wherever you hail from, there's nothing better than Jib's crisp, flaky, melt-in-your-mouth catfish. Made from boneless fillets of farm-raised fish, it's cooked fresh right when you order.

Wal (I mean Well), he talked me into it. Believe me, guys, I know we don't eat much catfish back home, but maybe we should rethink. Jib's serves some of the tenderest, flakiest and crunchiest fish I've ever had. The flavor just blows away any fish and chips. (When it comes to seafood, though, don't worry, Mom. I still think your clam chowder is tops).

By the way, we rode to Jib's and back in his pickup—my first ride in one. Remember last time I said they sell 800,000 chicken fried steaks in Texas every day? I think it's the same with pickups. I didn't know there was that much hay to haul around out here.

Oh, I almost forgot. Tomorrow, Sally Sue at the office is going to help me pick out my first pair of cowboy boots. Will write about that next time.

Benedict

Jib's is located at 3316 W. Illinois, across from Dunlap's. They feature steak fingers, chicken fried steak, chicken strips and more Texas fare. They are open 11 a.m. to 8 p.m. Monday through Saturday, closed Sunday. Call ahead for carryout orders at 699-3008.

Buying a used car?

Put the squeeze on

Have you ever bought a used car only to learn it had major problems a few days later? "That doesn't mean the seller was dishonest," says Sean Kendrick, co-owner of Classic Automotive. "Some things do go wrong with no warning."

To decrease your chances of an unpleasant surprise, let Classic Automotive inspect any used vehicle you're considering before you buy. "If we find a problem, that gives you negotiating power," says Sean's partner, Tex Stoner. "You can ask the owner to reduce the price or have them do the repair before you buy."

Having Classic Automotive inspect your prospective purchase is like buying an insurance policy; you can reduce your chances of buying a lemon.

The inspection includes such items as belts and hoses, compression, brakes, electrical components, climate control and a test drive to listen for noises that may indicate problems. "If you've already noticed something unusual, call it to our attention and we'll check it out," says Tex.

While Classic Automotive specializes in European autos such as Porsches, Mercedes BMWs and others, they offer this service on any car.

Rodman to pay $200,000 to cameraman

Associated Press

MINNEAPOLIS — Chicago Bulls star Dennis Rodman has agreed to pay $200,000 to the cameraman he kicked during a game against the Minnesota Timberwolves, The Associated Press learned Monday night.

■ Sports Briefs

Cameraman Eugene Amos was kicked in the groin by Rodman during a game at the Target Center last Wednesday. Amos declined comment Monday night, referring all questions to his attorney, Gale Pearson.

Neither Pearson nor Rodman's attorney, Dwight Manley, returned telephone messages left at their offices after business hours Monday.

WCCO-TV also reported a six-figure out-of-court settlement had been reached. A source told The Associated Press the settlement was $200,000.

The Bulls were playing the Timberwolves when Rodman stumbled out of bounds over a photographer. Rodman kicked Amos, who was sitting nearby, after Amos turned his camera on him. The game was delayed for seven minutes before Amos was carried off on a stretcher and treated briefly at a local hospital.

The NBA suspended Rodman for at least 11 games, the second-longest suspension in league history. It also fined Rodman $25,000. The suspension is without pay and will cost Rodman more than $1 million.

Amos filed an assault report the night of the game and said he intended to pursue charges. Police said if charges were filed, it would not be before Tuesday.

Amos, an in-house cameraman at the Target Center, said last Friday that he already had been to two doctors. He has not worked at either of the Timberwolves' two home games since he was kicked.

UConn suspensions

STORRS, Conn. — Connecticut point guard Ricky Moore and center Kirk King cannot travel with the Huskies until their suspensions are lifted, leaving some doubt about whether they'll play against Miami on Wednesday.

There's little chance the two players would be on the team flight to Miami, since the plane was scheduled to leave at 8:30 a.m. EST Tuesday and the NCAA offices were closed Monday for the Martin Luther King Jr. holiday.

But if the NCAA restored their eligibility soon enough for Wednesday night's game, special arrangements could be made to get them on a commercial flight to Miami, school officials said Monday.

Moore, a sophomore, and King, a senior captain, were declared ineligible last week pending an NCAA ruling on whether they should be further penalized for accepting improper gifts — reportedly airline tickets.

Kentucky's Anderson injured

LEXINGTON, Ky. — Kentucky guard Derek Anderson, the leading scorer in the Southeastern Conference, will miss the rest of the season with an injury to his right knee, coach Rick Pitino announced.

Anderson completely tore the anterior cruciate ligament in the knee and will undergo surgery. Anderson is a fifth-year senior, which means his collegiate career is over.

"We're extremely disappointed for Derek Anderson," Pitino said in a statement. "He was having a fantastic senior season. Right now, we'll just turn our attention to his rehabilitation. We expect him to make a full recovery in time for the NBA draft in June and we will do everything we can to make his dream of playing professional basketball a reality."

Anderson injured the knee in the second half of the third-ranked Wildcats' game against Auburn last Saturday. Immediately after the game, the injury was diagnosed as a contusion by team physician David Caborn.

Wynalda honored

LOS ANGELES — U.S. National Team forward Eric Wynalda became the first two-time winner of the 1996 Honda Player of the Year award Monday when he was honored as the top soccer player in the United States in 1996. Wynalda, 27, is the all-time leading scorer for the National Team with 27 goals. He also plays for the San Jose Clash of Major League Soccer.

Ronaldo wins FIFA award

LISBON, Portugal — Barcelona's Brazilian striker Ronaldo on Monday was named FIFA's player of the year, edging out AC Milan's Liberian star George Weah and Newcastle's Alan Shearer. In his first year with FC Barcelona, the 20-year-old Brazilian with the distinctive shaven head and powerful build showed talents that impressed the 120 national soccer officials who choose the winner. His goal-getting skills — he is top Spanish league scorer with 15 goals from 20 matches — have drawn frequent comparisons to soccer greats Pele, Diego Maradona and Johan Cruyff.

Junior coaches to be screened

TORONTO — Shaken by the jailing of a top coach for sex abuse of players, Canada's junior hockey league is drafting new guidelines for screening coaches and protecting players. David Branch, commissioner of the Canadian Hockey League, said Monday the guidelines to be implemented by next season are likely to call for use of police checks and psychological testing in screening coaches.

Branch said the CHL, which oversees three regional leagues that attract many of Canada's best teen-age players, was "horrified" by the case of Graham James. An admired coach in the Western Hockey League, James was sentenced earlier this month to 3 1/2 years in jail for repeated abuse of two of his players, including Sheldon Kennedy, now a forward for the Boston Bruins.

Miami basketball fire

CORAL GABLES, Fla. — A suspicious fire caused at least $100,000 damage to Miami's basketball office before dawn Monday, and water damage left locker rooms and a weight room unusable.

Men's and women's practices were moved into a campus building where intramurals games are normally played, and men's team coaches moved into football team meeting rooms. The fire hit as the men's team sits atop the Big East 7 division for the first time since the university joined the conference in 1991. Their next game is Wednesday against Connecticut.

StockQuote HotLine

WHAT IS STOCKQUOTE HOTLINE?

Stockquote Hotline gives you the latest stock prices direct from the wires of the Associated Press. Over 9,000 stocks are listed from NYSE, AmEx, and OTC sources; all are available 24 hours a day. You can receive up to 10 quotes with one easy call.

HOW TO USE STOCKQUOTE HOTLINE:

1) Call the Stockquote Hotline at 560-2400; enter the category number which is 9988.

2) You will be asked to enter your stock ticker number. These are based in industry standard symbols, which can be found in a Standard & Poor's Ticker guide, or by calling your local stock broker.

3) Once you've entered the numerical code for the ticker symbol, press the Star Key (*) and you will hear the current price and net change from the last Associated Press update, which is a few minutes behind market activity.

4) After the stock is quoted, you will be asked to enter another ticker symbol. You now have 2 options:
- You may request a quote for another stock by repeating steps 2 & 3.
- You may request additional information on the stock just quoted by once more pressing the Star Key (*).

Now the volume, high and low will be given, and then you will be asked to enter another ticker code.

- You may enter up to 10 ticker symbols per call.

5) To exit Stockquote Hotline, simply hang up the phone.

Rangers sign Palmer for one year

ARLINGTON (AP) — The Texas Rangers are discovering the high price of winning championships.

They won the first division title in their 25-year history last year. Now their bank balance is feeling the pinch.

The Rangers signed third-baseman Dean Palmer to a one-year contract worth $4.8 million Monday, a day after signing catcher Ivan Rodriguez to a record one-year, $6.65 million deal. Palmer made $1.92 million last year.

The signing gives the AL western division champions 11 millionaires under contract for the season. Six players will earn at least $4 million. Texas' payroll now stands at $48.2 million and is edging ever closer to the $51 million major-league luxury tax mark. Teams that exceed the mark must pay a 35-percent tax on any portion above $51 million.

Rangers executives aren't promising they'll be able to keep the current team intact — even for the upcoming season. Recent reports have indicated they might try to trade Palmer or other big-money players.

"Obviously we have creeped up well above where we intended to be," general manager Doug Melvin told radio station KRLD. "We'll do our best to try and keep this ball club together. At this point, I'm not signing the players to trade them. We'll sit down and review that."

One more millionaire could be on the 1997 team as the Rangers worked Monday to sign pitcher Roger Pavlik, who made $1.1 million last season, and keep him away from arbitration. Melvin said he expected to sign Pavlik to a one-year deal by Tuesday.

Signing All-Star Rodriguez to the richest one-year deal in baseball history was a good-faith measure as the Rangers hope to smooth the way for a longer pact later in the season. The 25-year-old Gold Glove catcher is a free agent after the 1997 season and has agent Jeff Moorad working with Texas club president Tom Schieffer on a multiyear deal.

"Now, I can come to spring training feeling good," Rodriguez said. "After this year we'll see what happens. We'd like to stay with the Rangers."

Palmer also is a free agent after the 1997 season. The 28-year-old batted .280 with 38 homers and 107 RBIs in 154 games last season. His home run total tied Cleveland's Jim Thome for most homers by an American League third baseman.

Aussie's put roof on sunny Open

■ Australian Open

MELBOURNE, Australia (AP) — Goodbye sun, hello air conditioning.

Protected from the searing sun and dry, desert-like winds, Carlos Moya surged into the semifinals of the Australian Open in the first match ever played with the roof closed because of heat.

Moya, conqueror of defending champion Boris Becker in the first round, beat Spanish compatriot Felix Mantilla 7-5, 6-2, 6-7 (7-5), 6-2 Tuesday in the mid-70s comfort beneath the retractable roof.

"I'm going to be playing anyway. If it's snowing, raining, 60 degrees (Celsius), I don't care," Moya said.

Indoor play continued with South African Amanda Coetzer, a victor over Steffi Graf, moving into the semis with a 6-4, 6-1 romp past American Kimberly Po.

In Moya's first journey through Grand Slam tournaments last year, he departed in the first rounds of the Australian Open and Wimbledon, and the second rounds of the French and U.S. Opens.

Now, fresh from a run to the final in the tuneup in Sydney, the 20-year-old Moya has emerged as one of the new stars of the game with an aggressive all-court style that could pose a threat on any surface.

Moya ventured to the net 42 times, twice as often as the No. 14 Mantilla, and won two-thirds of those approaches. He also smacked 12 aces, twice as many as Mantilla, in the 2 1/2-hour match.

"I had to play my best tennis," Moya said. "For the first time I had to take more risks."

One of the keys to beating Becker, he said, was that Becker tired in the heat.

"I tired also, but maybe with the roof closed he wouldn't be so tired," Moya said. "In Paris, I beat him with the roof closed and on a faster surface. So why not here?"

With the temperature outside soaring past 100 degrees in the shade for the third straight day, and temperatures on the rubberized hard courts likely to top 140 degrees again, referee Peter Bellenger ordered the switch flicked to shut the roof.

Players in the boys and girls singles and the men's and women's doubles on the outside courts had no choice but to play in the sun.

The Australian Open moved from the grass courts at Kooyong to the National Tennis Center in 1988, and the retractable roof has been closed since then only for rain.

Bellenger was prevented from closing the roof for heat during the first eight days of the tournament, but the rules allowed him to do it afterward if temperatures exceeded 95 degrees in the shade. On the ninth day Tuesday, with quarterfinal play starting for the men and women, Bellenger looked at the morning forecast of 104 degrees and gave the order to shut out the sun and turn on the air conditioning.

"I thought it was better for the players and better for the public to be able to view the game in relative comfort," Bellenger said.

Some players objected to the roof-closing, he said, because they "trained for these conditions" and felt "it gives them an advantage to have the roof open."

One of those complaining was Michael Chang's brother and coach, Carl, who wanted the roof open for Moya-Mantilla match. Chang, of course, would have liked to see them sweat it out in the broiling heat since he's seeded to play the winner. Chang, No. 2, was scheduled to play at night against No. 9 Marcelo Rios.

"No matter what decision I make, there will be some that are unhappy and some that will be happy," he said. "It changes the conditions; it doesn't change the rules."

When the weather was nearly as hot during the 1993 final between Jim Courier and Stefan Edberg, Courier threatened to boycott the match if the roof were closed. It stayed open and he won.

Rams reverse themselves, hire Vermeil

Associated Press

■ NFL Coaches

ST. LOUIS — Dick Vermeil, who stopped coaching 15 years ago because of "burnout," is returning as coach of the St. Louis Rams.

The surprise selection was confirmed by Rams president John Shaw on Monday following several broadcast reports that Vermeil would be hired. The official announcement will come at a news conference on Tuesday.

"I'm quite pleased with the candidate," Shaw said. "He's an excellent coach, high energy, smart."

Vermeil, who led the Philadelphia Eagles to the 1981 Super Bowl, will be given total control of the team. Shaw said he wasn't concerned about Vermeil's lengthy absence from the game.

"Not in the least," Shaw said. "I have every belief in the world that he has as much energy as anybody we interviewed and he is a much better leader than, I think, all of the other candidates."

Contacted by CNN-SI, Vermeil said, "I feel like I've woken up in a dream."

Vermeil was never on the Rams' public list of candidates to replace Rich Brooks, who was fired following a 6-10 season. Among those interviewed by the Rams were Jim Mora, Bobby Ross, Kevin Gilbride, Pete Carroll and Emmitt Thomas.

Minority owner Stan Kroenke said Vermeil was never on the public list because the Rams didn't think they had a chance to hire him. Shaw has offered Vermeil the job every time it's come open this decade and he was the first man contacted this time, too.

Falcons hire Reeves

ATLANTA — Having made the playoffs only five times in their 31 years, the Atlanta Falcons on Monday turned to Dan Reeves, the NFL's winningest active coach.

Reeves, who was fired by the New York Giants after the season, signed a five-year deal as coach and head of football operations. He succeeds June Jones and will be introduced at a news conference Tuesday.

The Atlanta Journal-Constitution said Reeves' contract is worth $7.5 million to $8 million — almost double what any previous Falcons coach has earned.

Moeller becomes Detroit assistant

PONTIAC, Mich. — Gary Moeller, fired from the University of Michigan two years ago after his disorderly conduct arrest at a restaurant, was named the running backs coach for the Detroit Lions on Monday.

Moeller, who had been the tight ends coach for the Cincinnati Bengals the past two seasons, was hired Monday by new Lions coach Bobby Ross, along with linebackers coach Joe Pascale and secondary coach Richard Selcer.

Flood, opponent of baseball's reserve system, dies of cancer at 59

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Curt Flood, the star center fielder of the St. Louis Cardinals who challenged baseball's reserve system all the way to the U.S. Supreme Court, died Monday of throat cancer. He was 59.

Flood

Flood died at the UCLA Medical Center. He had been ill for an extended period.

A three-time All-Star and a seven-time Gold Glove winner, Flood was an elegant fielder and a key member of Cardinals teams that won the World Series in 1964 and 1967. He hit over .300 six times and batted .293 in a career from 1956-71.

But it was his defiance of baseball's long-standing reserve clause — rules that prohibited players from choosing which teams they wished to play for — that defined his place in the game's history.

"Baseball players have lost a true champion," players' union head Donald Fehr said. "A man of quiet dignity, Curt Flood conducted his life in a way that set an example for all who had the privilege to know him."

Flood's fight began after the 1969 season, when he was traded along with Tim McCarver from St. Louis to Philadelphia for Dick Allen in a seven-player deal. Flood, however, refused to report to the Phillies.

He asked then-commissioner Bowie Kuhn to declare a free agent, but was turned down. He then filed a lawsuit, claiming that baseball had violated anti-trust laws.

He sat out the 1970 season, continuing his fight against baseball, while the Phillies and Cardinals worked out their trade.

After the 1970 season, a deal was made to send Flood to the Washington Senators. His comeback at age 33 did not go well, and he played only 13 games for Washington in 1971 before retiring.

The Supreme Court ruled against Flood in 1972. But in 1975, an arbitrator granted free agency to Andy Messersmith and Dave McNally, in effect ending the reserve system and clearing the way for today's free agent system.

A few years ago, Flood reflected on what his battle had wrought.

"All the groundwork was laid for the people who came after me. The Supreme Court decided not to give it to me, so they gave it to two white guys," Flood said. "I think that's what they were waiting for."
